Welfare Spending Cut Asked

President Says Drop In Rolls Prompted Action

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — Reporting progress in "solving the welfare mess," President Nixon asked Congress Saturday to trim federal welfare spending immediately by $800 million.

He said he was acting because of "the first major drop in the nation's welfare rolls in a number of years" — a decline of 225,000 people last year in the program to aid families with dependent children.

The cut in welfare spending can be made without reducing benefits to any eligible recipients, Nixon said in a statement issued Saturday.

"In recent years," the President said, "Americans have had to live with a continuing upward spiral in both the size of the welfare roll and the cost of the welfare program.

"The tale has been a tragic one and because the welfare system is marred with inequities, it has also been an outrageous one to both recipients and taxpayers."

Now, however, the AFDC rolls have dipped to 10.8 million, Nixon said, calling this "encouraging evidence that we

Education Record Of Nixon Hit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The record of the Nixon administration in education was attacked Saturday by spokesmen for the Democratic leadership in Congress.

Responding to an address on education delivered by President Nixon last week, Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., and Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., said the President's role has been one of opposition to programs put forward by Congress.

"With only a few exceptions, President Nixon has shown no willingness to work together with Congress to strengthen our schools and colleges and improve our system of education," said Brademas, the chief deputy Democratic whip, in a nationwide radio broadcast.

Pell, chairman of the Senate Education subcommittee, said in a separate radio address that the five years of the Nixon administration have been marked by "constant struggle with the administration as the Congress has sought to give greater priority to education."

IF PACE IN CITY CONTINUES

Cost Of Vandalism May Hit $1 Million

By D'EVA LUTHRINGER

The cost of vandalism in Midland this year could hit between $750,000 and $1 million if it continues at the increased pace recorded so far this year.

The number of offenses has increased from 160 reported in 1969 to 320 last year.

Police were told of 36 acts of vandalism last January, which is 12 more than in that month a year ago. Thirty-seven were reported during February, 25 more than in February 1973.

And of course, the cost of the crimes rises with the number, so that police listed $5,200 in property damages due to vandalism during February and through March 23.

Costs of damages are based on the value of the property, not on the price charged to replace it. Using police figures, it is estimated that damages could amount to half a million dollars this year. This includes only the reported incidents.

It is unlikely that a "vandalism ring" is operating in Midland, Lt. Clyde Spaulding, head of the police juvenile division, said.

Instead, it appears that groups of youths get together and decide to tear up some property "just for fun."

In very few of the cases, he said, is there evidence that the vandals committed the acts for spite against the owner or even that the vandals knew the people who are their victims.

Capt. Sid Corley, head of the police detective division, said it seems that the [illegible] dals who have been apprehended who have been [illegible] juveniles that [illegible] or under.

However, he and Spaulding agreed, many also are older young people — people in their late teens and early 20's.

The weekend are the worst Friday nights especially, Corley said.

One family reported damage at its West Midland home four weekends in a row. Another had vandalisms on two successive weekends.

Police set up surveillance on one home which had had

Official 'Optimistic' On Efforts To Free Five Oilmen

ASMARA, Ethiopia (AP) — A U.S. oil company official said he was "optimistic" Saturday about negotiating the release of three Americans and two Canadians reported captured four days ago by rebels in northern Ethiopia.

But he refused to say whether he had actually been in contact with the Eritrean Liberation Front (ELF) or comment on what demands, if any, the guerrillas had made.

"All I can say is I'm optimistic for an early release," said Edward Burchall, chief of Ethiopian operations for the Tenneco Oil Co. of Houston, Tex. "I've been advised not to divulge anything because it might harm negotiations."

A U.S. consular spokesman said, "We're leaving everything up to Tenneco. If it's a political demands are made relating to U.S. interests in Ethiopia they will be relayed to the embassy in Addis Ababa."

The five missing men were on an oil exploration trip in the rugged canyon country of northern Eritrea province when their helicopter was forced down on Tuesday by a severe storm.

Villagers in the area said they were captured by the ELF guerrillas who set fire to the helicopter on the ground. An army patrol found the charred wreckage Thursday about 40 miles northwest of Massawa, Ethiopia's main Red Sea port.

Villagers in another area said the guerrillas and their captives had spent the night and eaten a meal in their village, a large south of the wreckage site.

A military search was called off to permit negotiations, and Edward Burchall, chief of Tenneco Oil Co. in Ethiopia, refused to comment on the negotiations until after the five were freed, informants said.

In Houston, Tex., Tenneco said the captured men included Motta Pauela, an American consultant to the Ethiopian Ministry of Mines, and "two geologists."

Grievance Drainage

Did you ever hear of grievance drainage?

I came across this phrase in the office of a man who sells a protein concentrate used in feeding livestock. This man declares that American farmers are the greatest individualists in the world. He says you have to use psychology in dealing with them if you expect to make headway with these fine individualists.

It seems this salesman goes direct to the farm, opens up his kit and sells the product to the farmer right on his own place. He does not expect the farmer to come to the store; he takes the store to the farmer.

Also, the manufacturer has learned that it is good business to make certain the customer is absolutely satisfied with the product. So after the farmer has had ample time to use the protein concentrate, a representative is sent to the farm to inquire if everything goes well. The farmer is never allowed to remain dissatisfied or disgruntled. If anything is wrong the representative wants to know about it, so he gets the farmer to talking and thereby draws off his grievance, if any exists. In this way complaints are quickly adjusted and bad feelings are avoided. The sales manager says it is a matter of company policy never to allow a grievance to harden into hostility. So this procedure is followed and is called "grievance drainage."

This is a policy everyone could profitably employ in relationships with other people. The breakup of many friendships would be forestalled, the number of divorces reduced, if people would learn to practice "grievance drainage."

My mother used to say, "Never let the sun go down on your wrath." That is good advice. If you sleep on your wrath, it only sinks deeper into consciousness and can easily become a permanent part of your mental attitude. When you have been hurt, the best policy is to drain off the resentment just as quickly as you can. The word "resent" means to feel again.

So when we realize that we have hurt the feelings of someone, the thing to do is go at once to that individual and in a sincere and kindly manner make amends or give explanation and show that you are friendly and concerned.

In this way you will be practicing grievance drainage. It is an important factor in maintaining good personal relations.

Grievance drainage can be a help in married life also. Couples will find strains and irritations beginning to arise from time to time. Unkind words are said; hurt and anger follow. Over many years of personal counseling I have advised couples to forgive and forget before retiring for the night. To do this simply say you're sorry, ask forgiveness, and express love for the other. And if a couple prays together, asking God's blessing upon their marriage and their home not only will they sleep better, but they will become happier people.

Grievance drainage! What an exciting technique for effective living!

What is the purpose of our school system's bilingual education program? Shouldn't we be encouraging Mexican-American children to speak English rather than continue in their own language?—B. W.

Romeo Canales, principal of DeZavala Elementary School, explains the program for migrant children this way.

"Bilingual education is a method of teaching the school's curricula to children of limited English backgrounds. The goals of bilingual education are the same as those of any other educational program. That is, to give students experiences that will better prepare them to be successful contributing citizens of our communities. This method utilizes the children's own native language as a vehicle for instruction.

"Educational research tells us it takes approximately three years for a person to learn a foreign language to the point where he could effectively rationalize and conceptualize in such a language. It would be, therefore, educationally unsound to wait for a child to reach this stage of language development before he could intellectually benefit from the experiences offered at school, especially when all this learning could be easily accomplished if instruction was done in the child's own language.

"Bilingual education also prepares children for better job opportunities in the future. By instructing a child in both his native and English language the product undoubtedly will be a truly fluent bilingual child capable of functioning in two languages, a skill highly sought by many in our society. The child's selfconcept, his image and his culture are also integral parts of a bilingual program, all designed to produce a successful well-rounded individual."

Isn't there a city ordinance or some local law concerning the permanent parking of campers and pickup campers in driveways here in Midland? Three families on our block do this regularly and the block is being ruined as far as the appearance is concerned by these campers.—A. C. N.

According to city ordinance, vacation travel trailers and pickup campers less than 20 feet in length may be parked on the front half of the lot. Travel trailers and pickup campers between 20 feet and 31 feet in length may be parked on the rear half of the lot.

Trailers and campers between 20 feet and 31 feet may be parked on the front half of the lot for periods up to 48 hours so owners may load them and prepare them for trips.

The trailers and campers may not be occupied, according to Assistant City Manager Fred Poe.

Trailers longer than 31 feet must be in a mobile home park or on storage lots.

Travel trailers and campers also may not be left on city streets more than four hours, Poe stated.

City Inspection Department handles complaints about travel trailer and camper violations.

Poe added campers fitting on the back of standard pickup trucks will be below the 20 foot requirement and can therefore be kept in owners' driveways.

Judge Refuses To Halt Coyote Killer Tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge has denied a request by the Humane Society of the United States to put a halt to experimental use by the Environmental Protection Agency of a special "coyote killer" in 44 Texas counties.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Flannery said in his decision Friday that "an injunction of the program ... will severely damage the EPA's interest in obtaining pertinent data concerning the safety and efficacy of use by the public of sodium cyanide in the M44 device during the current lambing season, the time when predator losses allegedly occur."

The device used by the EPA consists of a spring operated trap which when pulled with a certain strength by a coyote ejects sodium cyanide or another poison into the coyote's mouth. The devices are baited to attract the predators.

Murdaugh Stewart Madden, lawyer for the Humane Society, said it was not known whether the decision would be appealed.

The society argued that use of the M44 could endanger other species of wildlife and that alternate means of controlling coyotes were available.

Flannery noted that the approved program "provides that the use of the device will not be permitted in a county designated as inhabited by endangered or threatened species which may be attracted to the device, such as the red wolf."

"The effect of an additional delay in obtaining the information sought by this federal experimental program possibly would be to increase losses of sheep in experimental areas this season," Flannery said.

The judge said an injunction also might "continue for at least another year the doubts which presently exist as to the efficacy of the device, the scope of losses of sheep with or without its use, and the environmental effects of its use."

He said sheepmen could suffer "severe financial losses" from a delay in availability of the M44 if it is ultimately found to be effective and environmental sound.

"There is only speculative evidence of injury to non-target or endangered species," he said.

The EPA issued an experimental use permit for the Texas program Feb. 8, 1974. The permit extends through June 1, 1975, and permits use of 3,900 M44 ejectors.

The agency contends it needs more information on the effects of the device, and whether it can safely be used by ranchers on private land, in order to determine whether its widespread use should be permitted.

West Texans Welcome Ruling, Wish It Had Occurred Sooner

ABILENE, Tex. (AP) — West Texas ranchers welcomed a federal court decision okaying the use of the M44 coyote killer Friday but wished it had come sooner.

"We have come to the crossroads. It is the time now when we must be able to protect our sheep from predators or lose the sheep industry," said Mort Mertz of Eldorado, president of the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association.

Mertz said the delay in permitting use of the killing device means greater problems in stemming rising coyote populations.

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas Flannery Friday denied a permanent injunction request against use of the device sought by the Humane Society.

The suit was directed at the Environmental Protection Agency, which wants to use the M44 device on an experimental basis.

The device shoots a spring-loaded dose of sodium cyanide into a coyote's mouth.

The injunction proceeding resulted in cancellation of special classes earlier this year to train ranchers how to use the device, and many of the ranchers became angry at the delay.

"It's hard to say precisely what the time lapse meant in dollars and cents," said A.C. Stanley, a county agent. "It would be very large."

One sheep rancher, Bob Northcutt of Mitchell County, said approval of the device is too late for his 125,000 acre ranch. He said the device is only effective in cold weather.

Greg Gerngross, a Callahan County agent, also complained of delays in coyote controls.

"It's put Callahan County out of the sheep business," he said. "When I came here five years ago, there were around 10,000 sheep and 10,000 goats. Now I doubt if there are over 1,500 sheep or 1,000 goats left."

The permit will allow sheep, cattle and other livestock ranchers in the following West Texas counties to use a limited amount of sodium cyanide for coyote control:

Eight Guardsmen Indicted For Kent State Shootings

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — The father of a Kent State University student slain in a 1970 campus demonstration says the indictment of eight National Guardsmen is to him a "mixture of sorrow and relief."

"There is no happiness in this matter," Arthur Krause of Pittsburgh, Pa., said. His daughter, Allison, was among the four shot to death in the May 4, 1970, confrontation of guardsmen and demonstrating students. Nine students were wounded.

Sarah Scheuer of Youngstown, Ohio, mother of 20-year-old Sandy Lee Scheuer, who also was shot to death, said it was heartening "that there is some chance that the system works. I'm pleased that at long last there will be an accounting before the law."

Others killed when guardsmen broke up the protest against U.S. involvement in Cambodia were Jeffrey Miller, 20, Plainview, N.J., and William Schroeder, 19, Lorain, Ohio.

Maj. John E. Martin of Wooster, commander of A Company, 145th Infantry, cautioned that "these young men (those indicted) have civil rights, too. I'm wondering if anybody is looking after them." His unit was one of those from which the fatal shots were fired.

The indictment was returned in U.S. District Court by a federal grand jury on Friday. It charged the eight, one of whom is still in the Guard, with willfully assaulting and intimidating the students by firing in their direction and depriving them of their constitutional rights.

Those named in the three-count indictment were Sgt. Mathew J. McManus, 28, West Salem, Ohio, presently a member of the National Guard, and former guardsmen Lawrence A. Shafer, 28, Ravenna, Ohio; James D. McGee, 27, Ravenna; William E. Perkins, 28, Canton, Ohio; James E. Pierce, 29, Amelia Island, Fla.; Ralph W. Zoller, 27, Mantua, Ohio; Barry W. Morris, 29, Kent, Ohio, and Leon H. Smith, Beach City, Ohio.

A Justice Department spokesman said the defendants would be summoned for arraignment, scheduled for April 10, but would not be arrested.

Conviction could bring penalties ranging from a year's imprisonment and a $1,000 fine up to life in prison in those instances in which death resulted.

The 590-word indictment capped 39 days of jury work that included three days of secret deliberations.

Guardsmen Fenced In

During the May 1970 incident, guardsmen firing volleys of tear gas and shouting demonstrators hurling rocks had ebbed and flowed on the campus. The guardsmen once found themselves fenced into a dead end.

At one point, members of some guard units advancing up a hill toward the crowd fired, and the 13 students fell.

All the defendants were members of those units at the time.

The indictment charged that Shafer, McGee, Perkins, Pierce and Zoller, "aiding and abetting each other," fired 30-caliber M1 rifles "at, over, into and in the direction of" 12 of the victims. The five were the only ones charged under two federal laws and the only ones against whom the aiding and abetting charge was leveled.

Morris Charged

Morris was charged with firing a 45-caliber automatic pistol at or near demonstrators, and McManus and Smith were charged with firing 12-gauge shotguns.

McGee, one of those indicted, said he would have "plenty to say, and I will say it," but only after consulting an attorney.

Several other defendants declined comment.

Richardson Requested Probe

Atty. Gen. Elliott Richardson had requested the grand jury probe, reversing a 1971 decision by then-Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell.

A presidential commission which studied the Kent State and similar protests called the shootings inexcusable and unnecessary.

An Ohio grand jury, however, found the guardsmen blameless and indicted 25 others, mostly students. Of these indictments, three led to guilty pleas or verdicts, one was dismissed, one found innocent, and the rest were dropped by the state for lack of evidence.

Nixon Lawyers Want To Argue Tax Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional staffers have concluded that President Nixon owes substantially more than the $78,651 tax he paid during his first term, sources close to the inquiry say.

The sources also said Nixon has decided against paying additional tax voluntarily. Such a suggestion was made publicly by Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., vice chairman of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, which is looking into the President's taxes.

Instead, White House lawyers have asked to argue the President's case before the committee, a request expected to be granted, the sources said.

The Nixon tax lawyers contend that legal authorities can legitimately differ and that they should be heard in opposition to any adverse conclusions, sources said.

The staff anticipates submitting its report on Nixon's taxes for the years 1969 through 1972 to the committee within a week. The President had income totaling more than $1 million during those years.

Whether the committee calls witnesses and holds public hearings on questions of fact has not been determined, the sources said.

The biggest single item in the controversy on Nixon's taxes is his deduction for a gift of papers valued at $576,000. A key question is whether the gift was made before a July 25, 1969, deadline for making such tax-deductable gifts.

A new appraisal of the papers has put a much lower value on them so that Nixon might owe some tax even if the donation is ruled valid, the sources said.

However, one source said that nothing he had seen convinced him that the donation qualifies under the law.

Rankin School Hours Reverting To Normal Monday

RANKIN — The Rankin public schools will go back to their original opening and closing hours Monday.

The schools began opening an hour later than usual when the country went on Daylight Saving Time. However, on Monday the regular opening of 8:20 a.m. will be in effect again.

Easter holidays for the schools here begin at 2:30 p.m. Thursday and will end April 15.

At a recent school board meeting, contracts for all professional employees of the system were extended, with the regular state increment pay increases. All auxiliary personnel of the system will receive an 8 per cent salary increase effective on Sept. 1.

Crane High School Group's Secretary

CRANE — Crane High School was elected secretary of the District VIII, Texas Association of Student Councils, at the Spring Forum in Big Spring Saturday. The office is for a three-year term.

The Crane student group is presently serving as president of District VIII, and Crane vice president Margaret Holland presided at the Spring Forum. Debby Overstreet led the Crane discussion group, and Bobby Hogan made the nomination speech for Alpine as the new president.

Applications Being Accepted For Ted Kruger Scholarship

Midland College will begin administering the "Ted Kruger Scholarship" this spring, and is accepting applications through the office of the dean of students, or through local high school counselors. The first scholarships will be presented for the fall semester of this year, and will continue to be offered through the spring semester of 1976.

Funds on hand are sufficient to provide four two-year scholarships covering tuition and books. They have been invested in interest-bearing accounts by the business manager at Midland College, and the interest will be added to the scholarships.

Selection of recipients will be based primarily on financial need rather than scholastic achievements, and will be available to either full time or part time students. The scholarships are limited to Midland Junior College students, and are not transferable to other institutions. They are also limited to residents of the State of Texas.

Common Sense!

That's all Midland needs! Just a little ordinary common sense on our City Council. Promises and plans are great for a growing city, but a little common sense can help a city to grow just as fast and a lot more inexpensively!

Philosopher Mumford Says World In New Dark Age

By JEFFREY D. ALDERMAN
And JOSH FITZHUGH

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — More than half a century of reflection has convinced social philosopher Lewis Mumford that the world has entered a new Dark Age.

Hailed as a leader in both urban planning and ecology, Mumford has written over 30 books and essays that have made him a venerable — if controversial — force in American letters.

The energy crisis has given Mumford new grist for his mill. In a recent interview at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he is a visiting lecturer, Mumford said if man is to survive he must develop a new reliance on solar energy, green plants and manual work.

"I think the Dark Age is already here, only we don't know it," the 78-year-old Mumford said. He said economists who doubt we are heading for a depression "are talking through their hats."

A product of New York City who now goes back "reluctantly," Mumford's books include "Culture of Cities," "The Human Prospect," "The Pentagon of Power," and "The Myth of the Machine." His "City in History" won the National Book Award in 1962. In 1972 he was awarded the National Medal for Literature. His first book "The Story of Utopias," appeared in 1922.

Q. What about this energy crisis? Is it a long-term factor that has to be taken into account?

A. People who think it's a minor thing and should soon be over are living in a dreamland, really. The crisis is bound to get worse if we don't change our habits of life, because we're consuming too much energy. Not merely are we consuming too much energy, we're consuming our capital. We're living on the capital accumulations of a carboniferous age when our coal deposits, our fossil fuels were first produced. There's nothing left when they're gone.

Q. Will people now begin to change the way they live just because, say, 30 years from now some experts say we may run out?

A. It will probably be a shorter term than 30 years from now. It will affect everything. It's already affecting people's habits. And who knows whether the whole system may not go kaput in 30 years.

Q. Can you give an example of how people have already changed their habits because of it?

A. People who think it's a minor thing and should soon be over are living in a dreamland, really. Q. Can you give an example of how people have already changed their habits because of it?

A. I have no doubt about that. Look at their (oil companies') behavior. Absolutely irresponsible. No sense of public obligation at all. A big conglomerate is unassailable. No body is really in authority. The system is in authority.

Q. You think giant corporations should be moral entities?

A. It has moral responsibilities which we have to impose on the corporations and see that they accept them.

Q. Then it's the government's responsibility?

A. Yes, provided it's a moral government. That's one of those questions that you have to keep pushing back. Our government is not a moral government and is irresponsible and has allowed the economy to go to pieces.

This is going to get worse, not better. It will get worse until we have more local food production. That brings me to the second solution. The first solution to the energy problem is to use solar energy on a vast scale, by plant growth. The second is to grow food wherever it's possible to grow food, not just where it's most profitable. Now then, there's the third answer, you see, manual work. Doing more of the work that's done by machine by human beings. Instead of taking a car everywhere, we'll walk or ride a bicycle. This doesn't mean to say that we abandon machines. We abandon our dependence on machines.

Q. But won't it take some sort of external, economic impact to make people change?

A. First it will be changed by inflation. This inflation cycle isn't illimitable. There comes a point of bankruptcy where the thing goes to pieces. I think we are very close to that. I never take our present day economists very seriously when they say everything will recover soon and there will be no depression. They are talking through their hats. I expect there to be a depression quite as severe as that in the 30s, because we have all sorts of social security measures that weren't even thought of at that time.

Q. When will it come?

A. It's occurring now, and it probably will get worse.

Q. What should the government be doing about the energy crisis?

A. It can begin by saving where it has a wonderful opportunity to save. We're spending money on the wrong things. Enormous amounts of money on armaments, on so-called scientific research. We live in a population that is becoming increasingly psychotic, violent, dangerous to their fellow men, and we're trying to find out whether we can find a few germs on Mars.

Miracles Still Possible—Food Prices Might Come Down

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

It's all laid out. The farmland is furrowed and the even squares and rectangles burgeon with the promise of plenty again. America's heartland is awakening to spring, and there is new hope to end the nation's dining table troubles.

Barring a cataclysmic act of God or government, most experts agree that the national menu and prices should stabilize before the end of the year. And prices might even drop.

These experts are not only in government, but the men who harvest and sell the nation's crops.

But they also warn that between now and September, food prices will get worse before they get better.

At the base of the long-term optimism is the expectation of record grain crops, from wheat to corn, from Kansas to Nebraska.

"I propose to you that winter wheat is already in the ground 18 per cent over last year," says Clarence G. Adamy, president of the National Association of Food Chains.

"I propose to you, you won't find a lawn between the Allegheny Mountains and the Rockies. They'll plow up the goddamn driveways this year. Why wouldn't they?"

"You never saw prices like this before. You know the last time cotton was this high was in the Civil War. They never have had a wheat price like this in the history of the world."

And at the same time economists see some respite from the heavy foreign drain of U.S. crops as other nations contend with the high price of petroleum.

So, they say, it must follow as the night the day, that food prices attract record crops, and record crops beget lower prices, and lower cost feed grain produces lower priced beef, pork and chicken.

One trouble spot, now brewing, seems likely to linger into 1975. Canned vegetables and fruits.

Some grocery items will probably disappear periodically from shelves in the coming months, the experts say. Canned peas, green and wax beans, tomato products, corn, pumpkin, squash, and canned applesauce, peaches, plums, fruit cocktail and apricots.

And when the wage price freeze expires April 30, these items will cost more, markedly more, their manufacturers say.

For nearly three years now the nation has been locked in a three-way fight between food producers, government and consumers. It has endured dollar devaluations, price and wage controls, massive exports of grain at bargain prices, consumer boycotts. If 1973 offers any lessons, it is that food production, distribution and consumption is a more complicated chain reaction than a nuclear pile.

What has happened to this year's canned vegetables is a case in point.

First, the American shopper turned to canned goods in 1973 to stretch her food dollar, and to embellish meat substitutes such as spaghetti and beans. Growers and canners say the demand for tomato products alone was up 25 per cent over the year before.

Reflecting demand, shipments of canned vegetables were reported up 5 per cent, canned fruit up 7 per cent.

The 1972 canning year was poor. Bad weather hit crops all over the world. Carry-over inventories of canned goods, like a widow's capital, went down. People were eating out of the warehouse, and usually heavy warehouse stocks were slimmer.

Now, says Charles J. Carey, president of the National Canners Association, "although we had a good year in 1973, that carry-over inventory has gone down to the vanishing point."

Suppliers say they are already allocating some items to supermarkets, allowing only a percentage of what they bought last year.

To make matters worse, men who produce the field crops found trouble in still another area — competition for the land itself.

Field crops like tomatoes or peas are seasonal. All of the nation's year-long supply of tomatoes for everything from catsup to tomato paste must be grown within a 120-day period. What isn't sold fresh is canned. Canners contract with growers at the beginning of the year, agreeing to pay a certain price per ton for a certain acreage.

"So, the competitive situation," muses one canning official, "Land may be available. But it has other uses than just growing green beans, for example. If it is to be used for that, it must push aside another crop that could be grown on that land."

The increased demand escalates everything. It would take 100,000 acres or more to satisfy the increased demand for tomatoes, for instance, and even then the demand may not be fully estimated.

The net result is that California tomatoes which last year sold at $35 a ton to canners are being sold this year at $55 a ton and more. It is much the same for other field crop vegetables, as this letter from a modest-sized canner in the Northwest suggests:

"Peas — last year our average price per ton was $91. This year our offering was $160 a ton.

"Beans — last year our average price was $71. This year our offering is $121. We are attempting to contract peas and beans now. However, our growers are not standing in line to sign up.

"As for corn and potatoes, it's getting a little messy. No pricing set as yet.

"Corn — our average price last year was $30.64 a ton. The farmers have turned down $55. They want $65. Just a mere 112 per cent increase.

"To make matters worse . . . potatoes—so far this year our average price is $32 a ton. It is reported they want $80 a ton . . . or they plant wheat."

Just what that will do to the cost per can of vegetables isn't clear. But the rule of thumb is that the raw product is one-quarter to one-half the final cost of a can of food. So the new contract prices this year could raise a 40-cent can of vegetables 10 to 20 cents a can if the grower's price doubles.

Thus does the price of tomatoes and peas tie itself to the prices of corn and wheat, and the prices of feed grains and meat. Competition for the land, plus new consumer demand for canned goods drives the price of canned goods upward. Not until the grain demand is satiated and grain prices begin to fall will the competition for land diminish.

And not until livestock feeders can buy feed grain at lower prices will they produce enough livestock to meet demand at lower prices.

At the heart of the price of tomatoes then is the price of wheat or soybeans or cotton. And now there are signs that these prices will decline, perhaps this summer.

'(Two-dollar corn) would do all the things the consumer has a rational right to want. And if I were God, I would ordain it.'

The history of corn supplies over the last few years helps explain why. Corn blight gave the United States a bad crop in 1970, but the slack was taken up by storage corn. The year 1971 was neither good nor bad, but 1972 was called "a real disaster." Furthermore, bad weather damaged crops worldwide, and placed even greater demands on already depleted U.S. stocks.

Last year produced the largest corn crop in U.S. history, partly because of the release of soil-banked land.

"And we didn't have as great a crop as we might have," says Adamy. "Looking at the basic crop, we expected to get 97 bushels per acre last year. We got 91. But we still got 5.7 billion bushels of corn. We didn't do all that bad."

This year, the Department of Agriculture says, optimum conditions could produce a crop of 6.7 billion bushels. The department's' wheat crop forecast is 2.1 billion bushels, nearly three times domestic consumption. The 1973 harvest was 1.7 billion.

The Agriculture Department figures that a 6.7 billion bushel corn crop would be ample for projected needs and permit some recovery in stocks by next year.

March prices for wheat were still running around $5.80 a bushel, compared with $1.30 in mid-1972. Corn was over $3, and soybeans were at $6.

Wheat represents to one degree or another 1,800 items among the 12,000 on supermarket shelves. Corn is the prime livestock feed. What is a reasonable price?

"Three dollar corn?" asks Adamy. "I would be truly elated at $2. I think it would accomplish everything you want. The farmer would be well protected. The customer at a 30 per cent decline in price has got to be happy. It would sharply decline the price of meats. It would sharply increase the supply of meats. It would do all the things the consumer has a rational right to want. And if I were God, I would ordain it."

There are a lot of beef calves out there by most indications. Lower priced feed will bring them to market.

One supermarket chain provided executives with a terse headline summary of 1973's ups and downs: "Abnormal rains in growing areas . . . coffee up 4 cents a pound, then three cents more . . . oils continue upward, sugar moves up again, advertised brands of paper move up . . . sugar up again, fourth time in six weeks . . . eggs 32 cents higher than a year ago . . . 48-ounce oil up another dollar a case, raw sugar up $1.35 over May . . . consumer demand continues unabated . . . dried vegetables out of sight . . . paper scarce."

As of Jan. 11 this year — out of a sample list of 25 grocery items — wholesale prices of 16 were up over 10 per cent, and seven were up over 20 per cent. Cooking oil was up 59 per cent over a year ago, applesauce up 49 per cent.

Only two items held steady — dishwater detergent and frozen orange juice.

Almost every government program that influences personal spending power affects food supply and demand, and prices.

Take the federal food stamp program. While all Americans were spending $139 billion on food in 1973, the food stamp program for the needy was approaching $6 billion, according to government statistics. It was only $280 million in 1969. Today the amount of food stamps allotted is tied to the cost of living. As the cost goes up, so does the value of the food stamps allotted each family.

"It's all very simple in my mind," says Adamy, "that when you take a situation as complicated as the agribusiness complex, with literally millions of decision points, it is impossible for any one man, or any group of men to oversee it . . ."

Delegates Taking Month Off For 'Political Season'

By GARTH JONES

AUSTIN (AP) — Constitutional Convention delegates, obviously unhappy recently in their work, have decided to take a month off for the political season.

After a couple of weeks of rumors and speculation, the 180 legislator - delegates decided Thursday to quit from next Saturday until May 6.

They also extended the life of the convention up to 60 days, closing out July 30 at the latest.

Three of the most important and controversial articles of the state policy document—legislative, judiciary and the general provisions—remain to be considered. Two are still in committee.

Throughout the weeklong debate on the finance article, during which 98 amendments were offered and only nine approved, a number of delegates made it apparent they, and their constituents, were unhappy with the progress of the convention.

The dissatisfaction showed again in the three-hour debate over the recess and extension.

"The last few days are evidence that we should go home and reflect on what we have done and talk to the home folks about what we have done," said Sen. Don Adams, D-Jasper, in debate.

"We have reached a point in deliberations when we definitely need to take a few weeks off and talk to our constitutents," said Rep. DeWitt Hale, D-Corpus Christi, author of the recess resolution which was sponsored by Speaker Price Daniel Jr., convention president.

"This product is in trouble and we are going to have a tremendous selling job to the voters," said Rep. Bill Blythe, R-Houston.

Time and time again the senators and representatives tried to write minute details of lawmaking into the state's next constitution instead of stating broad policy and leaving the legislating and administration to future legislatures, governors and judges.

Friday, there was one successful amendment that would require each county to have at least one constable. This apparently will require the 65 counties that now have no constables to put out the "Help Wanted" sign if voters finally approve.

The signs of unrest revived talk that the legislators should never have been picked as the only delegates to write a new constitution because of their political interests and ambitions.

"There is no doubt we have been more political the last few days," said Rep. Lane Denton, D-Waco. "It was obvious that some of the amendments (to the finance article) were offered by those thinking of elections just ahead and not of 10 and 20 years from now."

At a recent meeting of newspaper editors, former State Supreme Court Chief Justice Robert Calvert said he was afraid at the time the convention was called that it was "unfortunate" that all the delegates were to be legislators. "I still think it is unfortunate," he said, "it gets a little unbalanced. . . . I'm afraid that is one of its weak points, but I must say at this point I don't yet think it fatal."

Others who have been involved in the drive to rewrite the constitution have expressed hope the legislators will act more like delegates after the primary campaigns are over.

Daniel, who first confidently predicted the legislator-delegates could finish their job in 90 days, remains confident. He strongly opposes any idea the legislators will not write a new constitution the voters will accept.

"That notion has been totally destroyed in nearly every way," he said Friday.

INCLUDING WOMEN—

More Texas Workers Wearing White Collars

AUSTIN (AP) — More and more Texas workers, including women, are wearing white collars, a University of Texas researcher reported Saturday.

Charles Wood of the Population Research Center cited a "radical" decline in farm workers since 1940 and a "significant" increase in medical, educational and engineering jobs and added.

"The result has been a general upgrading of the labor force over the years as more people are employed in positions that are less physically demanding, cleaner, and more remunerative, and require higher educational attainment and on-the-job training."

Between 1960 and 1970, Wood said, the percentage of men in the labor force has declined and there has been a "dramatic increase in the proportion of women holding jobs."

By 1970, he said, almost three of four Anglo women workers had white collar jobs, and Mexican-American and black women were making "significant inroads into higher-status jobs."

Wood said he thought it was noteworthy that Anglos apparently have a much greater chance to become independent businessmen than blacks or Mexican Americans.

Among Anglo males, the ratio of the wage earners and government employes to the self employed is about 6 to 1, Wood said. The ratio for Mexican Americans is 14 to 1 and the ratio for blacks is about 18 to 1.

Peace Is Sought As Tribute To Vietnam Veterans

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

President Nixon, speaking on the first Vietnam Veterans Day, said the biggest tribute to those who served and those who died in Southeast Asia would be to build world peace.

Nixon spoke Friday at Ft. McNair in Washington, D.C. Several hundred angry veterans jammed a Senate hearing room the same day to demand substantial increases in their education benefits.

The President told a gathering of military and civilian leaders at the Army base: "If we had failed in our commitments, our allies would have lost confidence in us throughout the world, not just in Asia."

Those protesting the veterans' benefits booed in the Senate hearing at the mention of Nixon and booed Veterans Administration officials who testified. They shouted "Lies, lies, lies" when senators on the Veterans Committee promised to push for higher benefits.

VA officials said the Nixon administration would support an increase up to 8.2 per cent in the educational payments. This would mean a boost from the present $220 to $242 a month check to an unmarried veteran.

Oil Firms Ordered To Reduce Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three oil companies have been ordered to roll back prices to compensate for alleged overcharges on their products totalling about $44 million, the Federal Energy Office has announced.

The companies were identified as Continental Oil Co., Ashland Oil Inc. and Koch Industries, Inc., operator of a refinery at St. Paul, Minn.

A fourth company has been notified of a probable price violation, an Energy Office spokesman said.

The overcharges result from premature price increases by the companies, the Federal Energy Office said. Energy Office regulations require that increases wait 30 days after petroleum products have been purchased at higher prices.

More Banks Join Prime Rate Hikes

NEW YORK (AP) — Money market analysts say loan demand and federal anti-inflation measures prompted some of the nation's largest commercial banks to raise their prime lending rates this week.

On Friday, the prime was boosted from 9¾ to 10 per cent by three of the four largest commercial banks — Bank of America and New York's First National City and Manufacturers Hanover Trust.

The same move also was taken by Pittsburgh's Mellon Bank, 13th largest nationally. New York's Irving Trust, 14th, and Philadelphia National Bank, 28th.

The 98 Trinity Towers residents represent 14 states and 22 Texas cities. Forty-one Midland residents live at the Towers. Among states represented with large populations are Missouri, California, New York, Arizona, Florida and New Mexico.

On display in the lobby is a large map of the United States pinpointing the birthplace of each resident.

Trinity Towers was started by First Presbyterian Church, but it soon became a community project. Almost all faiths are represented on the board of directors. Average age of the residents is 81, while the oldest person is 98 and the youngest, 66.

Miss Annie Kate Gilbert and Miss Mary Sims lived in New York City 34 years, where they were on the national staff of Young Women's Christian Association. About four years ago, the two women were guests in Midland of Mrs. Richard L. Hughston, niece of Miss Gilbert. While in Midland, the women decided to retire to a smaller city they recalled the friendliness of the people of Midland, the climate and the Towers, and they decided to make Midland their home.

Mrs. Zola Detterick, a former president of the New Mexico Federation of Women's Clubs, recently moved to the Towers from Las Vegas, N.M. She wanted to be near her daughter, Mrs. Robert Morgan, and the Morgan family.

Another Towers resident, Miss Lucy Lanktree, moved to Midland to be near her nephew, W. L. Tinslar, and his family. Miss Lanktree was a Congregational missionary in Ingtai, China 29 years. Originally from Illinois, Miss Lanktree proudly displays a painting of the school in China where she taught. The painting was presented to her when she left China.

First person to move to the Towers, Mrs. Mabel Whiting, still maintains her apartment there.

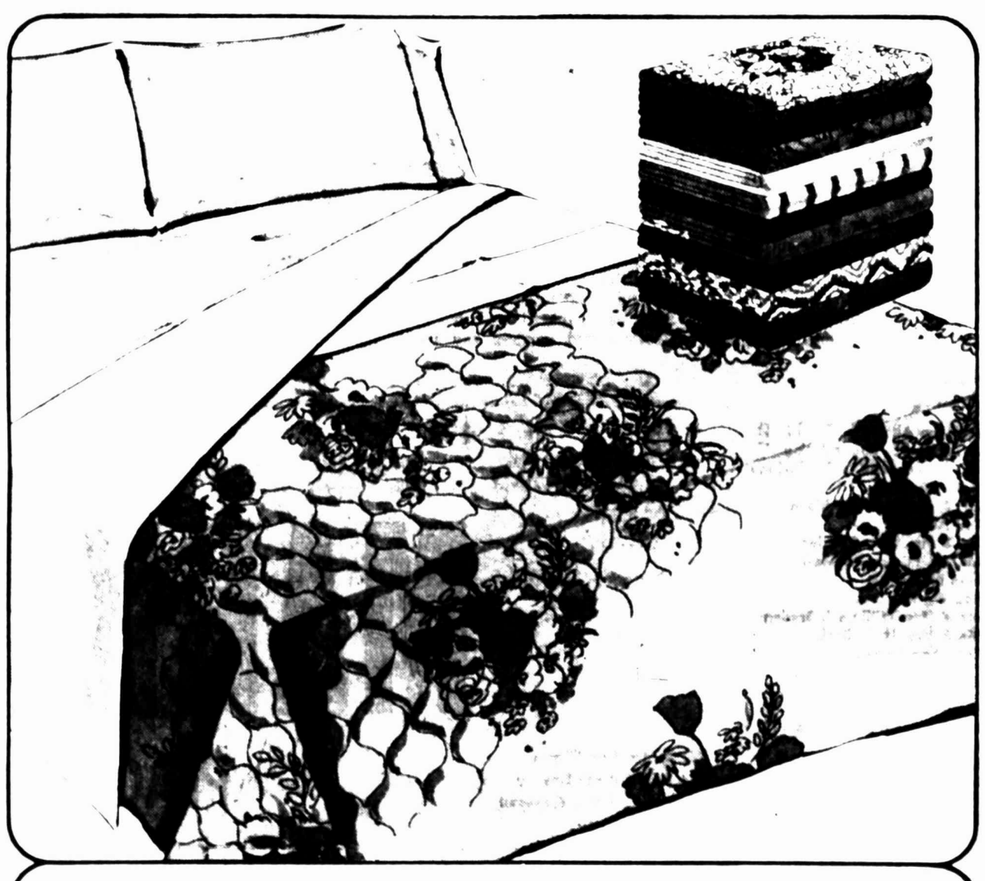

A fulltime staff of 31, headed by administrator Clyde Haden, operates the Towers. Other staff members include Mrs. Haden, food service director; Mrs. Jim Coleman, secretary; Miss Maxine Ramey and Mrs. Juanita Ricker, nursing services; and A. J. Hayes, maintenance engineer.

Father Convicted In Torture Slaying Of Young Children

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) —A circuit court jury Saturday recommended life imprisonment for Ernest John Dobbert Jr., convicted Friday night for the deaths of his 9-year-old daughter and 7-year-old son.

The jury, after deliberating for about half an hour, voted 10 to 2 in favor of a life sentence rather than death in the electric chair.

Judge Hudson Olliff set April 12 for sentencing. He is not required to follow the jury's recommendation.

Dobbert was also convicted of torture and child abuse in the mistreatment of two surviving children.

Dobbert, 36, watched without visible emotion as the court clerk read the verdicts on each of four counts in the indictment.

Three times during the seven and a half hours of deliberations, jurors returned to the courtroom to request a rereading of part of the testimony and to ask the difference between first and second degree murder.

After hearing a court reporter read the testimony which blind and battered Ernest John Dobbert III, 13, gave Wednesday, the jury took only half an hour more to complete its verdict.

The first degree murder conviction was based on the death of Kelley Dobbert. Young John said it occurred Dec. 31, 1971, after his father choked the girl. One day earlier, the boy said, Dobbert had kicked her repeatedly in the stomach.

John testified that his brother Ryder died a few weeks later, after his father beat Ryder and held his head under water. That was the basis of the second degree murder conviction.

Dobbert was found guilty of torturing John and abusing his youngest child, Honore, now 7. Both are wards of the court and in Wisconsin child care institutions.

Fund Is Set Up To Assist Family

Friends here have set up a special fund to assist the family of Dickie Ham, who is suffering from leukemia.

Ham, a native Midlander who graduated last year from Midland High School, is in M. D. Anderson Hospital in Houston undergoing treatment for the disease.

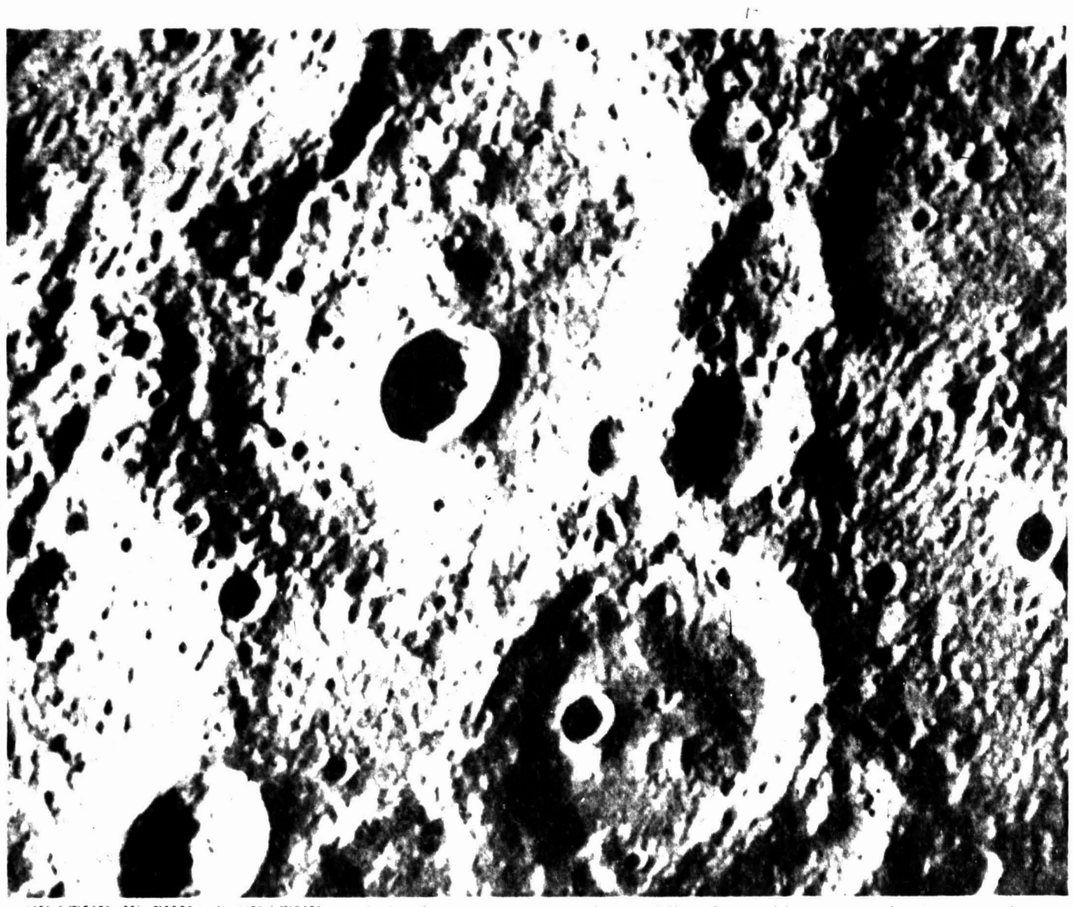

The Dickie Ham Leukemia Fund has been established in The First National Bank to receive contributions to help the family with expenses which will be incurred from the fact that the young man will have to undergo at least 90 days of treatment in Houston.

Chuck Johnston, one of those instrumental in setting up the special fund, said several Midland organizations and clubs were assisting in the effort to help the Ham family.

Ham is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Ham.

CRATER WITHIN A CRATER — A fresh new crater in the middle of an older crater basin was photographed by Mariner 10 when it streaked within 12,800 miles of Mercury Friday. The picture, released Saturday by the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, covers an area measuring 90 by 105 miles. The small crater is about seven and one-half miles in diameter. (AP Wirephoto)

Mariner 10 Takes Close Look At Mercury

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Mariner 10 sped away from Mercury Saturday after revealing the tiny planet to be a desolate moonlike world of craters surrounded by a thin atmosphere of poisonous gases.

Man's first close-up views of the mysterious planet were relayed 92 million miles to earth Friday in a series of television pictures. One scientist said the pictures were "spectacular beyond my wildest expectations."

Hundreds of pictures streamed across television monitors at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, leaving scientists as puzzled as they were excited. The flow of pictures was halted only briefly as Mariner skimmed past the planet's dark side just 430 miles above the surface Friday.

Television team leader Dr. Bruce Murray said Mercury seems "to be like the moon" pitted by thousands of craters, ancient marks of meteorites exploding against the surface.

Like the moon, Mercury is dry and rugged, scientists said, but chances of it supporting life seem virtually nil. It is the solar system's closest planet to the sun and is scorched near 700 degrees.

But Mercury's craters — some as large as 70 miles across, others mere tiny pockmarks — were unrelieved by any visible mountains, valleys or plains similar to the vast diversity of the moon.

Geologists were at a loss to find immediate explanations for several features. There was a large depression that looked like a crater but lacked the usual raised rim of surface debris. Instead, a jagged ring of raised ridges encircled the crater.

There were also wonderful about a magnetic field detected near Mercury. It is stronger than that observed near the moon, which is about one per cent of the earth's field.

Temperatures varied tremendously on Mercury, from about 900 degrees Fahrenheit to 300 degrees below zero.

The stars-sighted spacecraft continued to photograph Mercury as it streaked away at 24,000 miles per hour. The photo session will last until April 11. Then Mariner will go into an orbit around the sun.

Farm Price Drops Could Bring Spring Bargains In Foods

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 4 per cent drop in raw farm product prices in late winter may mean some springtime bargains for food shoppers, but choices may be limited.

The decline, reported Friday by the Agriculture Department, covered all farm products and included many items which do not go directly into groceries, such as corn, soybeans and hay.

But meat animals, one of the most important consumer categories, showed a price drop of 8 per cent from Feb. 15 to March 15. Some of those products, especially beef, already have shown up as lower priced specials at retail counters.

Frequently Volatile

Even so, farm prices frequently are volatile. They gyrated wildly last summer after the Nixon administration eased store price curbs, and then declined for three months before starting another round of increases that lasted most of the winter.

However, the report Friday included a hint that retail food price increases may be slowing. As of March 15, it said food prices paid by farm families were up 1.5 per cent from a month earlier.

Although USDA economists say the report's food price figure is not as reliable as other government statistics gathered specially for that purpose, it did give some idea that consumers saw supermarket price gains slow a bit in March.

Store Prices Still Rising

Here is why a month ago, a similar farm price report said food prices went up 4.0 per cent from Jan. 15 to Feb. 15. When the Bureau of Labor Statistics issued its February prices for store bought food, those were shown to have risen 3.0 per cent.

In addition to the downturn in commercial vegetables, the farm price report Friday also showed consumers might expect some other breaks.

Commercial vegetables were priced 12 per cent less as a group in March, including substantial reductions for fresh tomatoes, onions, lettuce and cabbage. But farm prices for sweet corn and cabbage went up during the month.

Also, the report showed, farm prices of poultry and eggs declined 9 per cent from Feb. 15. Eggs at the farm were down 7.5 cents per dozen to 56.6 cents and broiler prices dropped 1.2 cents to 22.5 cents per pound.

But those are all farm prices, and consumers will not gain any benefits unless middlemen who process and sell the products pass along the savings to retail customers.

UTPB Designated Resource Center By Aviation Group

ODESSA — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, where a unique aviation management degree program is offered, has been singled out as a resource center by the General Aviation Manufacturers Association.

An an Aviation Education Resource Center, UT Permian will assist in answering requests and providing local consultation to other educators developing aviation education programs, said Dr. Robert H. McIntire, director of the aviation management program.

UT Permian's aviation management degree program is the only one of its kind in the state, approved by the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System.

The university joins 60 other colleges and education institutions in 26 states providing information centers for air age and animal prices, the farm education programs. The center at UT Permian is the only one between Texarkana and Albuquerque.

Oil Giants Eye Spongy Black Athabasca Tar Sands

By PETER ARNETT

ATHABASCA TAR SANDS, Canada (AP) — For a century it was labeled a "fuel of the future." Only trappers and the fleet-footed animals they hunted ventured into the wilderness of stunted pines and bog that covers the Athabasca tar sands.

That has all been changed by the bruising international petropolitics of an energy-hungry world. Now the multinational oil giants are focusing their attention on these oil-bearing, black spongy sands centered in the Canadian wilderness 500 miles above the U.S. border.

Huge machines have started ripping at the earth as the curtain rises on what petroleum industry officials, U.S. experts and Canadian politicians believe will be Athabasca's entry into the world of major energy suppliers.

One of the world's biggest known oil reserves — estimates range upward from 300 billion barrels of crude, as much as the known recoverable reserves in the Middle East — is trapped in sand and water at Athabasca.

So far the oil industry has scratched at only a tiny corner of the 19,000 square miles of tar deposits, a region the size of New Hampshire and Massachusetts combined. A solitary extraction plant, owned by Sun Oil of Philadelphia, is producing 52,000 barrels of crude a day.

But a target date of 1978 has been set for a new billion-dollar plant to be on stream. The most conservative industry executives estimate that a million barrels of crude a day will be flowing from Athabasca by the end of the 1980s. That's just a little less than the amount the United States got from Saudi Arabia before the embargo.

Those experts willing to look ahead further see 20 to 30 extraction plants producing three million barrels a day from Athabasca by the turn of the century. That represents almost a sixth of what the United States currently consumes daily.

"That will be much more than Canada needs," a senior Canadian official in Ottawa told this reporter. "I presume the United States will get the surplus."

America may also benefit from the technological development of the tar sands. Vast reserves of crude oil are held in the generally similar shale oil and coal formations of the United States.

"As we meet these problems at Athabasca then the day will be brought closer when the United States can economically develop coal and shale oil crude and win true independence from non-North American fuel sources," said Carl O. Nickle, a leading Canadian authority on energy and former publisher of the Daily Oil Bulletin in Calgary.

Athabasca was ignored in the past by the oil giants because crude was much easier to get elsewhere.

Winning a barrelful at Athabasca costs $4 from tar sands near the surface.

At Athabasca, men and machines must move and process three tons of peat bog and sand to win just one barrel of crude in temperatures that hover at 30 below zero in winter and 100 above in summer.

Capital expenditures at Athabasca will be astronomical. Plans for three new mining-operation plants to be completed by the early 1980s call for cash outlays totaling $3 billion.

The first of these, scheduled to go on stream in 1978, is planned by Syncrude Canada Ltd., a company formed by four U.S. firms, Exxon Corp., Cities Service Co., Atlantic Richfield Co., and Gulf Oil Corp., in partnership with the government of Alberta, which owns the tar sands.

The Syncrude project, with an extraction plant bigger than most refineries and a power plant large enough to fuel a small city, is the most expensive planned to date, at a cost of $1.2 billion.

Two companies of the Royal Dutch Shell group, Shell Canada Ltd. and Shell Explorer Ltd. plan a $1-billion plant to produce 100,000 barrels a day.

The third projected plant will be built by Petrofina Canada Ltd., at a cost of $850 million to produce 122,500 barrels a day.

"What makes investments this size worthwhile for the oil giants is that the economics are finally coming right," said a senior Canadian government energy official.

The Middle East crude that comes out of the ground at 10 cents a barrel costs refineries $7 because of royalties and taxes.

Experts point out that 26.5 billion barrels of crude can be won at Athabasca by conventional strip mining methods at a cost of a little over $4 a barrel.

More sophisticated methods will be required to tap the oil in tar sands below 150 feet of surface earth.

The rapid price increase of crude is welcome news to the Great Canada Oil Sands Ltd. (GCOS), a company owned 96 per cent by Philadelphia's Sun Oil Co., that has pioneered tar sands development.

"We're the proud owners of a $90 million loss," the president of the company, Kenneth K. Heddon, tells reporters. Heddon can begin to smile now because a stretch of seven years straight of being in the red may finally be ending because of the higher crude prices.

The company officially opened its plant on the banks of the Athabasca river near Fort McMurry northeast of Edmonton in 1967.

The technology — a hot water flotation process that mixes the sands with water and steam in an extraction plant to liberate bitumen — has been known for years. A refinery breaks the bitumen into gas, oil, kerosene and naptha which is piped to border refineries.

Vandalism On Rise Here; Cost May Hit $1 Million

repeated damage. The undercover officer was called away from his vantage point for 45 minutes and the house was vandalized during that period.

Vandals are hard to catch because they usually employ the "hit and run" method, police said.

They often stay in their cars as they drive slowly by a home and throw rocks through house windows, car windows and outside lighting fixtures, fire air rifles at property, or knock over curbside mail boxes.

Sometimes they stop long enough to kick car doors and fenders or beat vehicles with pipes, chains and other instruments.

Several weekends in a row a rash of slashed vehicle tires was reported, and one night approximately 40 mail boxes were damaged. In some cases the mail in the boxes was rifled.

Schools particularly are hit by vandals who break out windows and or paint on walls and sidewalks.

In one instance last month, someone squirted water through a mail drop in the door of a house and caused $400 damage to the carpet.

One residence had $750 damage to windows. The amount of damage was not estimated when vandals tore up some construction equipment.

Usually, when the culprits are caught by police, the victims only want restitution and do not wish to prosecute.

Lecture Often Enough

Spaulding said that each case must be considered on its own merits. Sometimes a child has not been in trouble before and a stern lecture from officers and parents is all that is needed.

But other times, he said, complaints should be filed, especially in instances where children have been brought in again and again for similar acts.

Police patrol the city on a 24-hour basis and are alert to suspicious persons and vehicles. But there cannot be a policeman in each neighborhood at all times.

Information Needed By Police

Because of this, Corley recommended that citizens also be aware of suspicious persons and vehicles in their neighborhoods, reporting them to the police.

If the police had knowledge that "something funny was going on" in a neighborhood, they could investigate and possibly curb the amount of vandalism occurring.

He especially asked that citizens get the license numbers of suspicious vehicles so that police will have something to go on other than "a red car" or "a bunch of kids in a car."

Huge Grass Fire Spreads Across Three Counties

COLORADO CITY — More than 15 sections of grass and brush burned in a Saturday fire which began on the Powell Ranch in the Southwest portion of Mitchell County.

Department of Public Safety spokesmen said the fire spread to portions of Howard and Sterling counties.

The fire began about 3:50 p.m. and was still burning at 10:30 p.m. Units from the Big Spring, Colorado City, Sterling City, Loraine and Westbrook fire departments fought the blaze.

At one time the fire was about five miles long, DPS officials said. Fire fighters also reported trouble getting fuel for their equipment.

No injuries were reported.

SLA Urged To Begin Negotiation

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (AP) — A convict who claims to be a comrade of the Symbionese Liberation Army urged the terrorist group on Saturday to begin immediate negotiations for the release of Patricia Hearst.

Newspaper executive Randolph A. Hearst, father of the 20-year-old coed who was kidnaped 56 days ago, issued a statement from the convict identified as Clifford "Death Row Jeff" Jefferson.

Hearst said he, an attorney, a minister, FBI agent in charge Charles Bates and state prison director Raymond Procunier had met with Jefferson four times during the past 10 days at the California Medical Facility at Vacaville where Jefferson is imprisoned.

"It would be for the best interest of the poor and oppressed people to start negotiations as soon as possible with Randolph Hearst to release the prisoner of war Patricia Hearst," the statement from Jefferson said.

Of his talks with Jefferson, who has been in prison 28 of his 48 years, Hearst said: "What we discussed basically centered around the possible release of Patricia and what negotiations and promises could bring about. Mr. Jefferson decided to issue a statement that in effect requests the SLA to start meaningful negotiations for the release of Patty."

Jefferson's statement, which was turned over to Hearst at Vacaville on Friday morning, said to the SLA: "You brothers and sisters are truly soldiers of the people and are more beautiful than life itself to me."

Texas Gasoline Supply Improves

HOUSTON (AP) — The American Automobile Association says its latest survey of Texas gasoline stations is the most promising of the year with only 14 per cent of the stations reporting they are out of fuel.

The survey showed that Sunday openings will be higher this weekend than any other time this year with 21 per cent remaining open. It also showed that only 20 per cent of the stations are limiting purchases.

are beginning to make some progress in solving the welfare mess."

He said Caspar W. Weinberger, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, reported at a Cabinet meeting Thursday that "we are starting, at last, to turn back the ever-increasing welfare rolls which had become a tragic way of life for far too many Americans."

Weinberger had used those precise words in Los Angeles Friday when he jumped the gun on the President's statement and disclosed the decline in AFDC rolls.

Both Nixon and Weinberger cited tighter HEW management as a reason for the drop. The secretary said states showing the largest decline in their rolls were West Virginia, 14.8 per cent; Idaho, 13.6 per cent; Nevada, 10.9 per cent; and Oklahoma, 10.4 per cent.

Declines also were reported by the two states with the largest AFDC programs: California, 8 per cent; and New York, 7.2 per cent.

Odessan Charged In Assault Case

Jerry Claude Ferguson, 23, of Odessa remains in Midland City Jail on charges of assault on a police officer.

Ferguson is charged with the Friday assault on Patrolman John Anastasio. Officers said Anastasio was arresting the man on charges of drunk and disorderly conduct shortly after 1:50 a.m. Friday when the assault occurred.

Soda Bottle, Freight Train Destroy Auto

SUNBURY, Pa. (AP) — Gilbert Clark's car has been wrecked by a soda bottle, with a little help from a slow but steady freight train.

The bottle rolled under the car's brake pedal as Clark, 49, of Mifflinburg, Pa., approached a Reading Railroad crossing and he could not stop the car, police reported Friday.

The auto was hit broadside, but Clark escaped injury.

Alien Smuggler Draws 10-Year Term

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — A Pharr man accused of collecting $64,400 to haul 182 Mexican aliens to Chicago was sentenced to 10 years in federal prison Friday.

U.S. District Court Judge Reynaldo Garza sentenced Mario Martinez Mendez, 41, named in three indictments. The judge also placed Martinez Mendez on five years probation at the end of the prison term.

Sen. Talmadge Welcomed To Butz 'I'll Get You' Club

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Herman Talmadge was welcomed to the "I'll Get You" Club Saturday and informed that he is now entitled to one streak by Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz through a supermarket in Georgia.

The "club's" founder, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said Talmadge gained membership by incurring the wrath of the secretary.

"It is my pleasure to inform you that as a result of Mr. Butz' threat to campaign against you in your race for re-election . . . you are now a full-fledged member of this select group of senators to be rewarded by Mr. Butz' opposition," Cranston said in a letter to the Georgia Democrat.

Last week Butz accused Talmadge, who is chairman of the Senate agriculture committee, of opposing administration farm policies because this is an election year.

In his tongue-in-cheek congratulatory letter, Cranston said the rewards are rich of belonging to the Earl Butz "I'll-Get-You" Club.

Besides the streak, Cranston said benefits include:

— Ten framed copies of Butz press releases predicting a decline in beef prices in 1969, 1970, 1971, 1972, 1973 and 1974.

— Ten shares in the "Russian Trading Corp." That, said Cranston, is the "government corporation which bought U.S. wheat in 1972 from Butz for $1.60 a bushel."

Cranston said Talmadge's 10 shares in the Russian company will entitle him to buy back 10 bushels of the U.S. wheat at the current $5 a bushel.

WILL GO ON TRIAL — Dwight L. Chapin, former White House aide, will go on trial Monday before a jury in U.S. District Court in Washington. (AP Wirephoto.)

CHAPIN CHARGED WITH FALSE STATEMENTS—

'Superloyalist' To Go On Trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Around the White House Dwight L. Chapin was known as a superloyalist, a man of absolute devotion to Richard Nixon.

His reputation was that of a nice guy who did the unpleasant and unquestioned bidding of his boss and patron, H.R. Haldeman. When Chapin gave orders, the bark was really Haldeman's.

Daniel Moynihan once tagged Chapin as a "perfect neutral executor" who never aspired to become a policy maker "like others who had held his job appointments secretary to the President.

He and Gordon Strachan, another Haldeman lieutenant, thought ahead in 1971 to the general election a year away and contacted an old chum from their days at the University of Southern California, Donald Segretti.

Segretti said they offered him a job to perform certain political functions for the re-election of President Nixon."

The job, it turned out, was to pull dirty tricks, or as Segretti said, "similar to college pranks at USC." He understood it to be "nothing improper or illegal."

But Chapin went before a federal grand jury a year ago and said he never gave Segretti any instructions about targeting on particular Democrats; that he didn't know Segretti had distributed campaign literature; that he advised his buddy to go to the FBI, and that he didn't know what Segretti was paid.

A grand jury determined Chapin was lying in each instance and indicted him on four counts of making false statements, each punishable by a maximum fine of $10,000 and 5 years in prison.

Chapin goes on trial Monday before a jury in the courtroom of U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell.

The government's two major witnesses against him will be John W. Dean III, the ousted White House counsel, and Segretti, fresh from prison where he served 4½ months of a six months sentence for violating campaign laws.

"While the Segretti matter was not directly related to the Watergate, the cover-up of the facts surrounding Mr. Segretti's activities was consistent with other parts of the general White House cover-up which followed the Watergate incident," Dean testified last year.

Segretti told the Senate Watergate Committee that Chapin sent him to President Nixon's personal lawyer, Herbert W. Kalmbach, to discuss salary — $16,000 a year plus expenses. He said he received $667 biweekly from Kalmbach from the beginning of September 1971 to Jan. 15, 1972, plus $40,000 for expenses from Kalmbach.

His activities during the Florida primary, distributing fake literature, prompted the charges against Segretti.

When stories about Segretti surfaced in newspapers after Watergate, Dean said, the White House became worried about Chapin's involvement and he was advised to leave. He did and obtained a job with United Air Lines in Chicago as director of market planning. He went on leave from that position after his indictment last Nov. 29.

Teen-Aged Girl, Brother Killed By Shotgun Blasts

BEDFORD, Tex. (AP) — A 16-year-old boy used a shotgun to kill a 17-year-old girl and her 14-year-old brother late Friday night while their parents were out of town, Bedford police said Saturday.

The slayings occurred in a comfortable brick residence where police found Kimberly Diane Corbin, 17, shot in both arms and the back, and her brother, Jeff Corbin, 14, shot once in the chest.

The two children of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Corbin, were dead on arrival at a hospital around midnight.

Bedford Police Sgt. Charlie Stewart said officers met the 16-year-old boy walking out of the front door about 11:30 p.m. He was drunk and also under the influence of a large dose of aspirin, police said.

Admitted Shootings

"He said he had just shot the two," Stewart reported.

The parents had gone to Temple, the sergeant said.

Sgt. Stewart said the killings had their origin in a party held at the house earlier in the evening.

The sergeant said the youth in custody told police he shot the two because they threatened to tell about the party at which he drank a quantity of beer.

"It made him extremely mad after already being extremely drunk," Stewart said. "He . . . got a shotgun and shot both of them in the big living room. He said he shot the boy first."

The arrested youth was taken to a Bedford hospital, transferred to a Fort Worth hospital and then to the juvenile detention home.

No Charges Filed

He is being treated as a juvenile. No charges were filed at once.

The sergeant said the boy was shot first. Then, Stewart related, "The girl made an attempt to get the shotgun away from him. He shot her in the arm . . . She made a movement to run out the door and he shot again."

Police said they recovered three spent shells from a 16-gauge shotgun. Stewart said the girl apparently died at the scene.

Jeff "lived for about 15 minutes after he was shot," Stewart said police believe.

The wounded youth managed to answer the telephone when it rang about 11:30 p.m.

The caller was Kimberly's fiance, Jerrell Jackson Morgan, A 19, of Hurst, who had called to talk to Kimberly.

Morgan evidently had been worried about her since he brought her home from work, Stewart said.

Police said Morgan thought he recognized Jeff's voice but was not certain how much if any conversation took place before Jeff apparently "dropped the phone and slumped down."

Stewart said Bedford police were notified by a neighbor, Ronnie J. Freitag, 14, who had planned to spend the night with Jeff.

"The boys intended to camp outside in the yard, Stewart said.

Freitag was outside the house when the shooting began.

"He heard the shots and the screaming and ran and called the police," Stewart recounted.

The arrested youth told police he swallowed about three quarters of a family-sized bottle of aspirin.

Crane Woman, 25, Dies In Mysterious Accident

CRANE — A woman died and a man remained in guarded condition at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa Saturday night following a mysterious accident involving poison gas early Saturday.

Dead is Mrs. Corina Deanda Rivas, 25, of Crane, whose husband Felipe Leal Rivas Jr., was killed in a Crane oil field accident May 28, 1973.

Unconscious and in guarded condition is Luja Carrasco, 20, a resident of Crane about two months.

The two were found by a pumper for Gulf Oil Co. about 8:30 a.m. Saturday in a car one mile north of town, Sheriff Raymond Weatherby said death was apparently due to a poison gas, which escaped from a flow pipe after the pipe was hit by a pickup truck occupied by four juveniles.

The four juveniles remained in custody Saturday night in connection with the incident, Sheriff Weatherby said, no charges have been filed.

Justice of the Peace Clara Crowmer ruled death due to gas poisoning following an autopsy.

Born July 8, 1948, in Fort Stockton, Mrs. Rivas married her husband in 1962 in Rankin.

Services for Mrs. Rivas will be 2 p.m. Tuesday in Iraan High School auditorium with interment in Restland Cemetery in Crane under direction of Larry D. Sheppard Funeral Home.

Survivors include her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Toribio Deanda of Crane; five children, all of the home, Sylvia Rivas, Norma Rivas, Nora Rivas, Felipe Leal Rivas IV and Danny Rivas; a brother, Toribio Deanda Jr. of Crane; and two sisters.

KISSINGER—

the same response when the question was put to him on a flight home from the Middle East last month.

The 12 newsmen would not be put off with a quip. Kissinger, growing serious, promised solemnly that he would see to it that they had four or five hours' advance notice.

There was none.

The ceremony was performed at about 2:30 p.m. and Kissinger and his wife left directly afterward for National Airport where they boarded a private airplane for a 10-day honeymoon in a rented house in Acapulco, Mexico, the first vacation the globe-trotting Kissinger has taken in a year.

Kissinger, 50, and Miss Maginnes, 39, met about eight years ago when they were both working for former Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York. She currently supervises international studies with Rockefeller's Commission on Critical Choices.

Kissinger appeared to be in a buoyant mood when he concluded his discussion with Dayan about 11 a.m. He told reporters he expects to be able to work out a separation of Israeli and Syrian forces in the Golan Heights.

Five relatives and friends as well as Kissinger's two children, Elizabeth, 15, and David, 12, were present. Kissinger is a Jew and his wife an Episcopalian. His first marriage ended in a divorce.

Attempt To Break Shower Mark Puts Youth In Hospital

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP) — A Binghamton State University student has been hospitalized for treatment for exposure after failing to break a world record for most hours spent in a shower.

"My hands and my feet were swollen and wrinkled," Preston Stockman said at Wilson Hospital Friday after spending 4½ days under a dormitory shower.

"Then my ear became plugged and I tried to unplug it. Everything I did was futile. It just got worse and worse. It got to the point where I was just standing there in absolute agony," he said.

The Guinness Book of World Records which Stockman consulted listed the shower record at more than seven days.

White House Sends Subpoenaed Data To Leon Jaworski

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House has avoided a new legal confrontation with the Watergate prosecution by turning over a package of subpoenaed evidence.

The evidence was delivered Friday afternoon by a White House messenger after the White House announced earlier in the day that it would comply with the subpoena.

Neither the office of special prosecutor Leon Jaworski nor White House spokesmen would disclose what was included, but there were indications that no tape recordings were involved. Rather, it appeared that the material included documents and data from presidential files.

A question remains, however, on the status of a request from the House Judiciary Committee for tape recordings of presidential conversations.

The committee has sought tapes of 42 conversations for its impeachment inquiry.

However, some of the conversations, including five meetings between President Nixon and top aides last April 15, may not have been taped.

Meredith was from Dale. Guerra lives in Bastrop and the fireman, Buck, at Del Valle, all near Austin.

Fishermen's Wives Lose Out To Boats

NARRAGANSETT, R.I. (AP) — Point Judith fishermen value their boats more than wives, according to a study by two social scientists from the University of Rhode Island.

In a study comparing fishermen and mill workers, the scientists asked, "What is the worst thing that could happen to you?"

The most frequent response for both groups was the individual's own death or serious illness. The second most frequent response was "loss of boat" among fishermen and "loss of wife" among mill workers. Fishermen put loss of wife third.

LOSE A POUND A DAY AND MORE

Vitamin 'E' Discovery Offers Fast Weight Loss

HOLLYWOOD (Special) — New scientific discoveries have produced a Vitamin E diet that quickly works wonders on overweight people, and reportedly is gaining great popularity across the country with glowing reports of easy weight loss "while still eating almost as much as you want."

Those who follow the simple Vitamin E diet report an average loss of at least a pound a day and even more without exercise or starvation. Nutritionists' files are bulging with happy testimonials from formerly overweight people who are now trim and slim again. Best of all, you can still eat almost as much as you want of the "forbidden foods" like steak, chicken, fish, sauces, gravies, bacon and eggs and still lose weight.

Chewable (candy-like) vitamin E tablets, as used in the diet plan, contain a new scientific combination of ingredients that quickly curbs and controls the appetite, while also giving the wonderous benefits of Vitamin E which is so essential to good health.

The use of the new Vitamin E Diet tablets and foods prescribed in the plan will, through natural action, act to help your body use up excess fat. According to recent clinical tests, a person who is deficient in Vitamin E or Protein "will double the speed of fat utilization" with the use of Vitamin E.

E-DIET AVAILABLE

To get a copy of this highly successful diet and E Tablets, send $5.00 for 10 day supply (or $7.00 for 20 day supply or $10.00 for 30 day supply) to: Vita-E Diet, Dept. J-2 11526 Burbank Bl., North Hollywood, Cal. 91601 (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not satisfied.)

Cost Of Newsprint Causes Some Papers To Up Price

By DEIRDRE DONNELLY

NEW YORK (AP) — If the cost of your newspaper has gone up lately, you can probably blame most of it on rising paper costs.

Within the last two weeks, several of the nation's largest daily newspapers have increased their newsstand prices 5 cents a copy.

"Practically every major newspaper will be doing the same thing soon because of newsprint costs," says an official of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Newspaper executives say higher postal rates and wages also are contributing rising costs. But one of the biggest increases in their budget has been the cost of paper.

In Chicago, the Chicago Tribune, the Chicago Sun-Times and the Chicago Daily News plan to raise their newsstand prices to 15 cents per copy from 10 cents effective Monday.

"Our largest single increase in recent months has been the rise in newsprint," says J.G. Trezevant, executive vice president of the News and the Sun-Times. "In our case it's been an increase of $5 million a year.

The Chicago News and the Sun-Times consume about 160,000 tons of newsprint a year.

Dorothy Schiff, publisher of the New York Post, which raised its prices from 15 cents to 20 cents a copy a week ago, says her paper has seen a 33 per cent increase in paper and ink costs in the past year.

Edward Cony, executive vice president of The Wall Street Journal says, "We face a $3 million increase in newsprint and a $5 million increase in postal rates. These are our two biggest cost increases this year."

The Wall Street Journal will cost 20 cents a copy effective Monday, up from 15 cents a copy.

The American Newspaper Publishers Association, whose members include most of the nation's daily newspapers, says the number of papers increasing their prices to 15 cents a copy or more has risen noticeably since the beginning of the year. Newsprint costs have been cited as one of the major cost factors by their membership, the ANPA says.

A year ago a ton of heavyweight newsprint delivered to New York City cost an average of $164.58. In 1970 the price was about $152 a ton.

Some newspapers use as much as 350,000 tons of newsprint per year.

In 1973 the settlement of a labor dispute at the largest Canadian mills, increasing wages 17 per cent to 23 per cent over three-year contracts, sent newsprint prices up $25 a ton in one shot, the largest single increase ever.

But mills also blamed rising freight, wood pulp and chemical costs as well as increases on fuel to run their machines.

Midland Memorial Increasing Service Charge By $3 Per Day

Midland Memorial Hospital is increasing its service charge $3 per day, effective Monday.

The hike is to cover increasing costs of operation and salaries, hospital administrator Wayne E. Ulrich said.

"Food, supplies, equipment — it has all increased and with the projected April 30 end of cost controls for every business except health and construction, we anticipate continued cost increases in our operation," he said.

No Position To Wait

"While the President has yet to sign or to veto the bill increasing minimum wage, we are not in a position to wait for the outcome of this federal legislation," he continued.

"We are operating with numerous vacancies in several departments because we are not competitive in our beginning salaries, particularly those affecting nurse aides, orderlies, maids and porters.

"Before we can compete with local and area industry — commercial and health care — in obtaining these individuals for our staff, we feel it absolutely necessary to implement pay adjustments, which means we must increase our service charges accordingly."

Hospital president Marshall S. McCrea Jr. said Midland Memorial trustees were faced with increasing the rate or "the possibility of sacrificing either services or equipment necessary for patient care," adding, "there really was no decision but to move foward on the course we have taken."

$7 Increase Approved

"Last summer," he said, "Blue Cross approved a $7 rate increase allowed by the price control program.

"We chose at that time to use only $4 of the allowable, hoping that in time the economy would stabilize and we would not have to increase rates for the additional $3.

"When it became evident this was not the situation, our only alternative was to impose this additional increase rather than jeopardize patient care at Midland Memorial," McCrea said.

In only one area is the increase different, that for the intensive care unit, which will go up $2, from $89 to $91 per day.

Other changes, reflecting the $3 increase, are: 4-bed wards from $35 to $38; average semi-private rooms from $38.50 to $41.50; average private rooms from $47.50 to $50.50; suites from $61 to $64; coronary care unit from $117 to $120, and nursery from $27 to $30.

Brazil Starting To Count Deaths, Loss In Floods

TUBARAO, Brazil (AP) — Soldiers patrolled for looting and doctors watched for possible typhoid outbreaks as this coastal city began counting its losses from devastating floods that have swept nine Brazilian states.

There were no official nationwide estimates of the death toll, but the mayor of Tubarao said as many as 1,000 were dead in his city alone. Civil defense officials gave the known toll as 42.

Newspapers estimated nationwide damage to crops and livestock at up to $400 million. Thousands were left homeless.

Tubarao, a city of 100,000 in southern Santa Catarina province, suffered more damage than any other area in the two weeks of torrential rains that loosened mud and swelled rivers from northwest Brazil to the southern coast. The city is 600 miles south of Rio de Janeiro.

The rains stopped Friday and authorities were confident the flooding was over in most of the country. But panic was reported in Boqueirao in the northeastern Brazilian state of Ceara' where a dam broke and sent water cascading into the center of town. Twenty thousand residents were left homeless.

In Tubarao, Mayor Irmoto Feuerschuette, a physician, ordered mass innoculations against typhoid fever and said the disease could reach the end of its incubation period and break out this weekend.

The only drinking water in the city was from the muddy Tubarao River, and officials feared it had been contaminated by rotting carcases of drowned cattle and sewage from broken pipes. Feuerschuette estimated that some 15,000 cattle had been killed.

A special military command was set up to enforce a curfew from 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. "We had a lot of shooting during the night by the patrols," the mayor said, but he did not say whether any looters were hit.

Lounge Shooting

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Trinidad Gomez, 26, of San Antonio, was shot to death early Saturday morning at a lounge here. Two other persons were wounded during a gunfight, but not seriously.

COM Cops Commanding Swim Lead

The sheer numbers of competitors hitting the water for the City of Midland Swim Team is making the Senior National Qualifying Meet here no contest at all.

Through the first 16 events Friday and Saturday, the COM swimmers amassed 1,927 points to second place Odessa Aquatic Club's 256. And the nightmare of it all, the meet has another slate of events scheduled today.

Resting in third is the Dallas Swim Club with 240 points. Next, going into today's events is the Amarillo Athletic Club with 143. FAST, a team from Fort Worth, picked up 121 points Saturday and the Lubbock Swim Club scored 43.

Most of the visiting teams brought only a handful of swimmers. The purpose of the meet, being held in COM's Mabee Memorial Swim Center, is to give senior swimmers a chance to qualify for the upcoming National AAU Swimming & Diving Meet at Dallas.

Through the first two days, not a single swimmer made a national qualifying time, however, COM's Mary Dowdle came close in the 200-yard freestyle. She turned in a 1:59.0, just short of the required 1:58.26. Miss Dowdle's time did set a new West Texas and a new pool record. The WT record was a 2:00.12 which she owned.

Miss Dowdle's Mabee Memorial pool record breaks the mark set by 1972 Olympic star Debbie Palmer of Australia.

Miss Dowdle also set a pool record in the 200-yard individual medley with a 2:20.5, breaking her own record of 2:21.98.

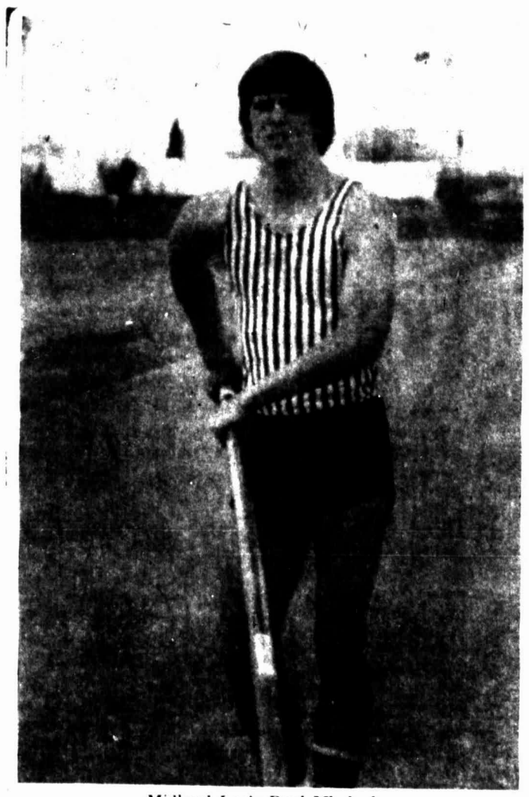

The only other pool record set Saturday was in the boys 400-yard freestyle relay in which the COM "A" team did a 3:26.7. The record was 3:29.44. The team included Kerry Freedman, Tim Dowdle, Mike Butler and Tommy Hart.

Today's preliminaries get under way at 10 a.m. and the finals are scheduled for 4 p.m.

Volpe's Rebs Capture First In Amarillo

AMARILLO — Coach Sam Volpe's Midland Lee Rebels edged out powerful Vernon, 72-69, Saturday to win the Amarillo Relays track crown in ideal weather in Dick Bivins Stadium.

It is the second first place trophy for the Rebs, who have had to fight injuries and sickness this spring. Lee won the Comanche Relays title in the first meet of the season. "I am extremely proud of the kids, they did a tremendous job," said an elated Volpe. "It came down to the mile relay and we needed at least a third and that's how we came out and almost finished second."

Paul Mladenka won the pole vault with a height of 13-0 while Milton Jones won the shot put with 54-9½ for Lee's only firsts, but the Rebs made up for it in other events.

Behind Lee and Vernon were Amarillo Tascosa, Amarillo, Caprock, Amarillo High, Pampa, Dumas, El Paso Irvin and El Paso Jefferson along with Plainview.

The meet was in preparation for the District 5-4A meet which will be in W. T. Barrett Stadium Friday in Odessa with prelims in the afternoon and the finals under the lights.

Odessa Permian, San Angelo and Lee are expected to battle it out for the 5-4A crown with the Bobcats favored to win their third straight title.

Cubs Topple Wichita In Exhibition, 9-7

By ED PRELL

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — The Midland Cubs rounded out the first week of their exhibition season Saturday by whipping their supposedly superiors, the Wichita Aeros of the AAA American Association, 9-7.

Because the parent Chicago Cubs were playing Milwaukee, the two top affiliates put on their slugging show in Scottsdale's Satdium on a sunny though windy afternoon.

The triumph was powered by right fielder Al Carvalho and was the second in sixth games played on the way to 23 scheduled exhibitions.

On Friday the Cubs lost to Birmingham of the Southern League 10-3.

Carvalho, a 20-year-old 5-11, 185-pounder, who swings and throws from the left side, knocked two triples, a homer, and a double for 12 total bases and four runs batted across against Wichita. Al, a native of Fall River, Mass., wasted a triple in the opening inning against Gary Junge who last year pitched for Midland. Al led with a triple in the one-run third inning against Paul Reuschel, also a Midland graduate.

In the next inning, Carvalho measured Reuschel for a two-run homer that tagged big Paul with the defeat, since it gave Midland a 6-4 lead.

Carvalho reached base on a fumble of his hot smash in the seventh and dropped a run scoring double down the left field line in the two-run eighth.

These two were vital runs because lefty Bud Schultz after two strong rounds yielded two runs and four hits in the Wichita ninth.

Little Billy Huisman and large Greg Collins each contributed three hits towards Midland's 15, highest in the six games. Joe Wallis, who has been Midland's most productive hitter, was held to a single in five trips.

Bob Weismore, who kept the Aeros scoreless in the fifth and sixth innings, was the winner.

Julio Gonzalez is laid up with a lame back and manager Walt Dixon borrowed Ken Szotkiewicz last year's shortstop who now is on the Wichita roster.

Birmingham faded three victories in three meetings in beating Midland Friday in Scottsdale, 10-3. The Southern Leaguers scored seven times in the first inning on eight hits off Tim Lee, a lefty who pitched for Knoxville in the Southern League last year. For the Cubs Ken Kral had three singles. Collins hit a homer and a double.

Lee's Speed Pays Off, 6-1

By BOB DILLON

The Midland Lee Rebels had on their hitting shoes Saturday while blending timely hitting with some daring base running to topple the Big Spring Steers, 6-1, on the Lee diamond in a District 5-4A baseball game.

Lee pounded out 10 hits with five of them for extra bases and swiped five bases in bringing its season record to 13-3 but more important, a loop reading of 3-1.

Javier Torres, Bobby Stevens and Brett Blackwell all smacked triples while David Clingman and Steve Hankinson added doubles to the hitting attack.

Senior righthander Phil Anderson and junior righthander, Jay Frazier combined to halt the Steers with only four hits. Anderson, in working five innings, picked up the win and was relieved by Frazier in the sixth with the Rebs on top 3-1. Lee added three insurance runs off ace Earl Reynolds to nail down the victory.

While Lee was disposing of Big Spring, Odessa Permian was remaining undefeated in 5-4A play with a narrow 6-5 victory over Abilene Cooper in Abilene, thus setting up a big showdown battle in Odessa Tuesday between the Rebels and Panthers.

Anderson was especially sharp in the first three innings as he struck out seven of the first 10 batters he faced.

Lee had taken a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the second inning when Torres tripled and scored on a sacrifice fly off the bat of second baseman Steve Koch. Two more runs scored for the Rebels in the third inning for a 3-0 advantage. Walks to Blain Murray and Larry Tidwell along with stolen bases by Murray and Tidwell, coupled with two errors and a run-scoring single by Torres.

After two were out in the fourth, the Steers scored their only run of the game. Morelion walked, went to second on a passed ball and scored on a solid double by John Thomas Smith.

Lee put the icing on the cake in the bottom of the sixth inning when Hankinson's high fly dropped in for a double as it hit the foul line and kicked up chalk. Frazier, now pitching for Lee, laid down a sacrifice bunt moving Hankinson to third. Murray followed with a lone single along with stolen bases by Murray and Tidwell, coupled with two errors and a run-scoring single by Torres.

Trevino, Cole Share Lead In New Orleans Open Golf

South African Seeks 1st Win In 6 Years

By BOB GREEN

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Lee Trevino, winless for more than a year, flashed to a five-under-par 67 and tied South African Bobby Cole for the third-round lead Saturday in the $150,000 Greater New Orleans Open Golf Tournament.

Cole, the South African Open champion who is seeking his first victory in six years on the American tour, had a 68 in the bright, warm sunshine and matched Trevino's 54-hole total of 202, a distant 14-under-par on the 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course.

Australian David Graham, with a sparkling 65, and Larry Hinson, 69, were two strokes off the pace at 204.

Rookie sensation Ben Crenshaw moved into contention on the strength of a course record-matching 64 that included two strings of four consecutive birdies. The 22-year-old Texan was just three strokes out in the chase for the $30,000 first prize. He had a 205 total.

"It certainly feels good," Crenshaw said. "I've played some bad golf ever since Hawaii. It's probably the longest slump I've ever been in. For a while, it seemed like I'd never play good again.

"But this is my first year. I'm still learning abolute things. I have to take my lumps, too."

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus couldn't get it going and had to settle for a 70, two under par, but far from exceptional in the remarkably low scoring give up by the long, flat course.

He was tied at 207 with six others, including South African Gary Player, who also had a 70. Also at that figure were Frank Beard and Barney Thompson. Each with a 68, and Gay Brewer and Rod Curl, each with 69.

UTEP Star Clocks 9.1 In Dallas

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS (AP)—Chris Garpenborg, a native of Sweden running for The University of Texas at El Paso, blazed to wind-aided 9.1 in the 100-yard dash Saturday to highlight the Dallas Invitational Track Meet.

Garpenborg's time will not go down in the record books because he had a 7.2 mile per hour wind at his back. Six competitors own the world record of 9.1 in the century.

Even if Garpenborg's time had not been wind-aided, there might have been a furor because the electric timer—apparently on the blink—caught him in 9.3 seconds. However, three manual timers clocked him at 9.1 and that was the time that stood.

William Blessing of Hillcrest High School, Dallas, set a national record in the 330 yard intermediate hurdles with a 35.9 second effort. It erased the old standard of 36.3 seconds by Harold Schwab of Centereach, N.Y., at Sacramento, Calif., in 1972.

It was a day for excellent times in 90-degree heat on the tartan track at Loos Stadium before a crowd of some 6,000 fans.

Southern Methodist's excellent sprint relay team sped to a 40.1 second clocking—best in Texas this year. Joe Pouncy of SMU bolted to a 20.6 clocking in the 220-yard dash, another low for the state.

Nate Robinson of Texas was a surprise winner in the 120-yard high hurdles with a fine time of 13.8 seconds and the Longhorns' Don Sturgal outlasted a classy field to win the quarter mile run in 46.7.

Southern California's James Baxter ran a strong 1:50.1 in the 880 while Tom Andrews of the Trojans clipped the 440 hurdles in 51.4 seconds.

Baylor Dominates Duel Track Meet With TCU Frogs

WACO, Tex. (AP) — Sprinter Bill Collins was the sole Texas Christian University athlete to break Baylor's domination Saturday as the Bears beat the Frogs 106-29 in a dual track meet.

Collins won the only TCU firsts with a 9.5 clocking in the 100 yard dash and a 20.5 in the 200.

Hurdler Jimmy Gailey paced Coach Clyde Hart's Bears, running a fast 51.9 in the intermediate hurdles, the best time in the Southwest Conference this year. Distance ace Walker Lea swept his specialties, winning the mile in 4:18.3 and the 880 in 1:55.3.

High jumper Kevin DeLorey, a freshman from St. Louis, established a Baylor stadium record of 6 feet 10, ½ inch in the high jump, and another Baylor freshman, Mike Greathouse, won the pole vault with 15-10 effort.

Smith Happy With Ponies

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University football Coach Dave Smith expressed pleasure at what he called consistency Saturday in the first spring scrimmage.

"All of our fullbacks . . . ran hard and you can tell we have some experience in the offensive line. They did a good job blocking," said Smith.

"There was nothing spectacular. Just a lot of good consistency from both the offense and defense," said the coach.

Larry Crawford, who quarterbacked the freshman team last season completed five of seven passes for 99 yards and ran for a one-yard touchdown against the No. 2 defense.

Darrell McCullough, a second team fullback from Dodge City, Kan., ripped off 85 yards on 17 carries. Freshman David Bostick, who started last fall at fullback, gained 79 yards on 16 carries, and frosh halfback Rex Garner added 70 on nine carries.

NFL Players See Strike

LAKE HAVASU CITY, Ariz. (AP) — Most National Football League players here for a tennis tournament think there will be a strike against NFL owners this season.

And, unlike the rivalry that once marked the American Football League's entry onto the sports fields in competition with the NFL, 21 of the 22 NFL players polled here said they will welcome the new World Football League.

The players, here for the Pro Football Tennis Championships, also said in The Associated Press poll that they think the WFL will benefit pro football.

More than half of the players indicated they believe a strike by NFL players is imminent. Twelve said they believe there will be a strike, two said there will not be and eight were undecided.

The same number of players, a dozen, admitted they believe a strike would have an adverse affect on the league's image with the public. Seven said it would not and three were undecided.

Reddell, Munson Win Firsts

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
R-T Sports Writer

SAN ANGELO — The San Angelo Relays proved to be an instant replay of last year with all five division winners repeating as champions with Angelo State, San Angelo, Odessa Ector, Hamlin and Sonora winning top honors.

In the Division I field, the Bobcats of San Angelo scored 134 points to easily win top honors, but Midland High was edged by Killeen for second place. Killeen had 89 1-3 points while the Bulldogs were close behind with 85 markers.

(See Results, 3-B)

It was by far the best showing of the season for Coach Edwin Nixon's Pack. Larry Munson and Steve Reddell paced the Bulldog attack with two first place finishes, and that is the first time this year that the Dogs have brought home two blue ribbons from same meet.

Reddell stepped off a fine 14-5 in the 120 highs to take an easy victory. Munson was second with a 14.8 as the two Bulldogs were not challenged in the event.

Munson later blazed to a 39.7 in the 330 intermediate hurdles for another blue ribbon. Munson has now clipped the 40 second barrier two weeks in a row.

The Bulldogs also did well in the mile run with Ken Woody getting a second with a 4:40.2 and Allen Parks was third with a 4:40.7. Mike Darden was fifth with a 4:41.1. Big Spring's Ricky McCormick easily won the race, however, with a very respectable 4:28.4.

Rufus Johnson had a sixth in the long jump and Derrick Michael a fifth in a fast 880. Paul Garrett had a fourth in the 100 and Carl Thomas managed a third in the 440 dash with a 51.0.

Hamlin won Division III honors with 149 points, but Reagan County's Monte Barnes set a new meet record in the 880 with a sizzling 2:02.7 and McCamey's all-state footballer James Taylor won the discus with a toss of 138-5.

Sonora scored 100 points to win the Division IV competition, while Odessa Ector had a big day against a weak field for 233 markers. Ector swept the first three places in five events.

Angelo State was never challenged in the College Division with 162 points. Angelo even held out a couple of runners, but it didn't even out the field.

District track meets in all classes will highlight next week's action. Midland and Lee will be in the District 5-4A meet in Odessa's W. T. Barrett Stadium Friday. Finals are slated to run under the lights.

Other two-tournament totals, the latest tournament figures second, are Stephen F. Austin 897-889—1,786, East Texas 939-886—1,825, Texas A&I 955-876—1,831, Tarleton 955-882—1,837, Howard Payne 938-907—1,845, Abilene Christian 957-890—1,847, Southwest Texas 958-897—1,855, and Sul Ross 961-899—1,860.

Tech, Houston Split Twin Bill In SWC Action

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — Jim Horton set down a perfect bunt to score Ronnie Matson on a squeeze play in the bottom of the seventh inning and give Texas Tech a 5-4 southwest Conference baseball victory over Houston Saturday.

Houston came back to take the second game of the doubleheader 12-6 behind the power hitting of Steve Reeves and Dave Vinson.

Randy Prince was the winner of the first game, going the distance and yielding four hits to even his record at 3-3. Steve Boren, a Houston relief pitcher, was charged with the loss, his fourth against one victory.

Reeves smacked a two-run homer for Houston in the second inning and Vinson banged another three-run blast in the sixth to pace the Cougars' 13-hit night cap attack.

Pat Foster hit drove in three runs for Tech with an inside-the-park home run.

Houston is now 9-17 for the year. Tech's record is 5-16.

Both teams are 3-9 in conference play.

Sykes Stars For Owls

HOUSTON (AP) — James Sykes scored three touchdowns, one on a 60-yard run, to highlight a Rice University football spring scrimmage Saturday.

Sykes also scored on a 33-yard run and caught a seven-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Tommy Kramer.

Zahn Captures Bowling Title In Winning 12th PBA Crown

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Wayne Zahn, a 33-year-old from Tempe, Ariz., who hasn't won a tour title in five years, bowled steadily Saturday to win the $80,000 Professional Bowlers Association tourney here.

Zahn, in capturing his 12th PBA crown, earned $10,000 when he defeated Norm Meyers of St. Louis 199-170.

The loss was a bitter one for Myers, a 40-year-old veteran whose only PBA championship came 11 years ago.

This marked the third time in the last four years that Meyers has been the runner-up here at Imperial Lanes. In both 1971 and 1973, Meyers lost the crown to his brother-in-law, Dick Weber, also of St. Louis.

The payoff match was close for three frames, with neither bowler able to post a double. When Meyers left the almost impossible 8-10 split in the fourth frame, the door was open for Zahn, who was to mark in every frame, although he never put two strikes in a row.

After four frames, Zahn's lead was 13 and after seven it was 15. Then, when Meyers, who won $6,000 for his runner-up placing, failed to pick up the 6-10 spare, the lead widened to 26 and Zahn coasted the rest of the way to his first victory since he won the Greater Los Angeles Open early in 1969.

Stockton Defeats Case In Semifinals

ATLANTA (AP) — Dickie Stockton overcame fifth-seeded Ross Case 6-3, 6-7, 6-2 and a charging Jiri Hrebec swept past Geoff Masters 2-6, 6-4, 6-4 in semifinal play of a $50,000 World Championship Tennis tournament Saturday.

Hrebec, who came to prominence last fall when he toppled Newcombe for his country's only Davis Cup victory, started slowly against Masters and looked out of it when he trailed 1-4 in the third set.

But the 5-foot-11, 165-pounder did a complete turnabout and reeled off five consecutive games for the victories and a berth in the finals Sunday at Alexander Memorial Coliseum in Atlanta.

Stockton also made it into the doubles finals, teaming with Brian Gottfried for a 6-3, 6-7, 63 semifinal victory over Raz Reid and Sherwood Stewart. They will face Stan Smith and Bob Lutz in the finals Sunday.

Reutemann Takes Grand Prix Win

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Carlos Reutemann of Argentina took the lead in the ninth lap and raced to a convincing victory in the South African Grand Prix Saturday.

In his Brabham BT44, Reutemann never was farther back than seventh in the 27-car field, starting behind the pole-positioned Ferrari 312B of Austria's Niki Lauda.

Lauda chased Reutemann through most of the race but finally went dead on the 75th of 78 laps when his Formula One racer ran out of gas.

Reutemann finished the race in 1 hour 42 minutes 40.96 seconds for an average speed of 116.2 miles an hour.

After Lauda's Ferrari sputtered to a halt, Jean-Pierre Beltoise of France moved his brand-new BRM into second, where he stayed. He was timed in 1:43:14.90 for an average of 115.6 m.p.h.

Reutemann dedicated his victory to his family and to the family of American race driver Peter Revson, who was killed March 15 during practice for this race. There were no serious mishaps Saturday.

Baylor Bears Show Offense

WACO, Tex. (AP)—Tailback Steve Beaird and Cleveland Franklin combined for 298 yards Saturday as the Baylor Greens notched a 28-21 victory over the Whites in the team's first game condition scrimmage of spring football training.

Beaird, playing only the first half, gained 157 yards on 22 carries and scored two touchdowns for the winners. Franklin, playing the first half for the Whites and the second for the Greens had 141 yards on 22 carries.

Robert Armstrong, shifted from quarterback to tailback, had 45 yards on 10 trips and wingback Philip Kent had 79 yards on only three carries and scored once.

Wuarterback Neal Jeffrey paced the Greens with seven of nine passes for 104 yards, playing only the first half.

Mark Jackson hit three of eight passes for 43 yards for the Whites.

Coach Grant Teaff said that there was a lack of hitting in the first half, but expressed satisfaction with the overall scrimmage.

Prove Out Upset In Westchester

By TED MEIER

NEW YORK (AP) — Prove Out, surprise conquerer of Secretariat and Riva Ridge last year, was surprised himself by Dundee Marmalade in the $54,900 Westchester Handicap at sloppy Aqueduct on Saturday.

Dundee Marmalade charged down the stretch under the whipping of jockey Mike Hole and got his nose in front of Infuriator in the very last stride. Prove Out, making his first start of the year, was 1½ lengths back in third place.

Torsion, the 7-5 favorite over Prove Out, finished fifth in the six-horse field.

Dundee Marmalade, a 6-year-old Maryland-bred son of Sword Dancer, went off at 5-1 and paid $13.20, $5.20 and $3.40 after running the mile under 113 pounds in 1:36. Owner Alfred Vanderbilt's North Sea also won the Westchester last year.

Infuriator, also carrying 113 pounds, took the lead away from the pacesetting Dancer's Verde at the head of the stretch and appeared to be the winner until Dundee Marmalade charged up on the outside. Infuriator paid $5.60 and $3.80.

Aggie Coach Likes Drills

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. — "Very well pleased," said head Coach Emory Bellard as Texas A&M finished its first week of spring football practice Saturday.

"Everything came along real well this week," Bellard said. "We got our basics taught and now we're in position to start some heavy contact work next week."

The Aggies did not scrimmage the first week and will not have a full-scale battle until next Saturday although there will be some contact work in small drills.

Bellard said that nearly all the basic offense was put in the first week although some phases of the passing game will be added next week.

"I'm pleased with a lot of things and there were no disappointments the first week," Bellard said, adding it was too early to evaluate individuals.

Sweep Pair From TCU

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — Texas A&M raised its Southwest Conference lead by sweeping a doubleheader from Texas Christian Saturday, winning the seven-inning first game 5-4 and the nightcap 16-8.

The Aggies are now 12-0 in league play and 25-5 for the season. TCU dropped to 8-8 in the conference and 20-11 overall.

The first game went to the bottom of the seventh inning before the Aggies pushed across the winning run to break a 4-4 tie. Leftfielder Paul Miller led off the inning with a triple and scored the clincher on a single by John Woods.

Mike Schraeder's solo homer had tied the score for A&M in the sixth.

Jim Juhl was the winning pitcher in relief while TCU ace Frank Johnstone was tagged with the loss, also in relief.

The Aggies broke open the second game with eight runs in the third inning to take an 8-2 lead.

Miller was four-for-four for A&M in the night cap while Schraeder had a three-run homer and drove in five runs.

Broyles Likes Grid Workout

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Coach Frank Broyles described Saturday's football scrimmage of his Arkansas Razorbacks as the best first scrimmage Arkansas has had in a long time.

"It was very pleasing because the defense had the advantage during the week, but today the offense did," Broyles said. "We are making some improvement working against each other. I was really pleased with the passing until right at the end. The completion average was good and the yardage was good."

Broyles said of offensive halfback Ike Forte, a junior college transfer from Tyler, Tex.: "It's obvious that the reputation that proceeded him is correct."

Broyles also said he thought fullback Marvin Daily ran well.

The scrimmage lasted about 30 minutes.

Springs Phenoms Of Last Year Are Gone

Battle Scene

By Ted Battles

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — A year ago the Salt River lapped from bank-to-bank as a result of spring rains and thawing deep snows in the rugged mountains to the north. And an outfielder named Randy Gettman was the sensation of the Midland Cubs' spring training camp.

Coming back to Scottsdale via the Tempe-Phoenix bridge over the Salt after a game with Birmingham in Mesa, a big crowd had gathered on the banks of the river to watch some guy doing acrobatics on a high-wire structure out in the middle of the river.

One wondered why so many people had stopped to watch. The next day in the paper, it was learned the gymnast had been stranded out there all day after his boat had overturned. The Salt was that vicious.

With a bat in his hands, Gettman was just as vicious.

A year later, both the whitecaps in the Salt and Gettman are gone, which we suppose is typical of spring's delightful and, unfortunately, perishable fanatsies.

Gettman was still hitting the cover off the ball when they sent him down to Quincy of the Midwest League out here last year. Midland Manager Al Spangler explaining Randy could hit only one type pitch and still had a lot of learning to do.

"Randy got off to a great start for us," recalled Manager Walt Dixon, "He hit six or eight homers in the first two or three weeks, but then just one or two the rest of the season. I don't know whether we kept him in the organization or released him after the season."

Of course, they all don't turn out that way. Another hot bat last spring belonged to Bill Droege, a rookie from St. Louis. Droege's bat continued to smoke right into the Texas League season and by mid-year it had earned him a ticket to Class AAA Wichita of the American Association.

Of the players at Quincy last year, Walt feels an infielder named Gonzales could be the best bet to make it with Midland. Mike Weiss, an 11-4 pitcher, is the best hill prospect on the basis of last year's performance.

"Jeff had arm trouble," explains Dixon, "And his dad (former major league pitcher Herman Wehmeier) died and Jeff never really got his feet on the ground."

Dixon went on, "Pete had arm trouble and would look great one game and would be wild the next."

Dresser, who was up with Midland briefly two year ago, has a deceptive move to first on pickoff throws, one that some umpires feel is illegal.

"Pete doesn't cheat on his move to first, he steals," is the way Walt describes it.

While the Midland Cubs have a week of exhibitions behind, the club will begin to take definite shape this week as the parent Chicago Cubs prepare to break camp for the National League opening.

Already, it looks as though the Cubs will benefit from one cut down that sent Pete LaCock to Wichita to become a first baseman. That means Jerry Tabb, the All-America from Tulsa University, still on the Wichita roster, may be sent to the Texas League for another year.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Baseball's 1974 season gets underway this week with the initial attention glued to Atlanta's Hank Aaron, who is one swing away from Babe Ruth's prestigious 714 home run record.

Aaron is expected to be in the Braves' opening day lineup at Cincinnati Thursday, courtesy of Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, who strongly suggested that Atlanta use the veteran slugger in at least two of the opening three games against the Reds.

The Braves would have preferred to hold Aaron out of that series and save his record-tying 714th homer and No. 715 as well for the home fans.

The Reds, 5-2 choices to win the National League title, will open with ace Jack Billingham against Aaron and the Braves with a sellout crowd of more than 50,000 expected at Riverfront Stadium. Atlanta's pitcher was not certain but chances are that Manager Eddie Mathews will hand the baseball to Phil Niekro, the knuckleballing ace of his staff.

If Niekro goes, he'll be one of three no-hit pitchers working on opening day. The others are flame-thrower Jim Bibby, who'll open for Texas, and steady Jim "Catfish" Hunter, who will pitch for Oakland. Bibby threw a no-hitter against Oakland last year and Hunter hurled a perfect game against Minnesota in 1968.

A crowd of 20,000 is expected for the Oakland-Texas game, matching the World Champion A's and the Rangers, who finished last in the American League's Western Division last season. The A's are rated even money choices to win the AL West again and rate as 5-2 favorites with Baltimore to win a third straight pennant.

The Orioles, even money in the AL East, open at home Friday with a crowd of 35,000 expected to see Jim Palmer duel Detroit's Mickey Lolich.

Pittsburgh, an 8-5 favorite to win the NL East crown, swings into action Friday at St. Louis with Dock Ellis starting for the Pirates against the Cardinals' Bob Gibson. A crowd of 25,000 is expected for the night game.

There are two other NL openers Friday with San Diego at Los Angeles for a night game and Houston at San Francisco in an afternoon contest. It will probably be Steve Arlin for San Diego against Dodgers' Don Sutton and newly-acquired Claude Osteen for Houston against the Giants' Tom Bradley.

Besides Detroit at Baltimore, Friday's AL openers send Minnesota at Kansas City for a night game and California at Chicago and Boston at Milwaukee in day games. All three will matchup 20-game winners.

Paul Splittorf will open for KC against the Twins' Bert Blyleven. California will use strikeout king Nolan Ryan against Wilbur Wood and his knuckleball for Chicago. Luis Tiant of the Red Sox faces Milwaukee's Jim Colborn in the other game.

All 24 major league teams will go to work on Saturday with the last three openers sending the Chicago Cubs and Rick Reuschel against the Expos' Steve Renko in Montreal, Tom Seaver of the New York Mets against Philadelphia's Steve Carlton, and Cleveland's Gaylord Perry facing the New York Yankees' Mel Stottlemyre.

Several new managers will be making their debuts. In the American League, Alvin Dark inherits the champion Oakland A's, Ralph Houk moves to the Detroit Tigers, Bill Virdon to the New York Yankees and Darrell Johnsoh to the Boston Red Sox. Billy Martin begins his first full season with Texas.

New on the job in the NL is John McNamara in San diego will Preston Gomez starting his first full year in Houston.

The April 4 opening day is the earliest in baseball history and weather problems could postpone some of the starts.

Norte Dame Star To Pros

By STEVE HERMAN

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame's John Shumate, who admits his decision to leave school took "a lot of pressure off," now turns his attention to the rigors of professional basketball, a prospect he is sure will be "devastating."

Shumate, the 6-foot-9 All-American center, decided after much thought to pass up his final year of eligibility at Notre Dame in order to join the pro ranks.

"I think it's going to be a hard life, but I think it's going to be a very enjoyable life," Shumate said.

He gained an extra year of eligibility after a serious illness kept him out of athletics in his sophomore year. Academically, however, he is a senior and will graduate in May.

Shumate, from Elizabeth, N.J., averaged 24.2 points and 11 rebounds a game this year, in which Notre Dame finished with a 26-3 record and a No. 5 national ranking in The Associated Press' final poll.

A year ago Shumate led the Irish to a second-place finish in the National Invitational Tournament in New York's Madison Square Garden and was named the NIT's Most Valuable Player. He also set a Notre Dame record for season field goal percentage at .592 that year.

He announced his decision to bypass next year's collegiate wars Friday, admitting "a lot of pressure's off now. I'm just glad that I've come to a decision that I'm glad I made.

"There wasn't pressure that was put forth by other people," he said. "It was just on myself. I was so intent on making the right decision I was just weighing so many things...and it was self-pressure I was applying to myself."

Shumate said Irish Coach Digger Phelps "told me the advantages of coming back and how I could benefit, and everything. But he really never put any pressure on me. I assume that if it was up to him that he probably would want me to come back."

Blacks Boycott UNM Grid Team

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Most of the University of New Mexico football team's black players were sidelined this weekend, out of uniform, and new head Coach Bill Mondt said that's where they would stay.

Of 19 black players on the squad, 14 boycotted Friday's practice session in support of a protest against the dropping of a black freshman, Paul Shelton, from the school's baseball team.

"As of now, they are no longer on the football team," Mondt said Saturday. "We only have so many days in which to complete our spring drills and there is no way we can make up missed days.

"The people that show up for practice will do the playing next fall. It wouldn't be fair any other way. Besides, you can't win with people that don't want to play anyway."

The UNM athletic council had asked Charles Becknell and Harold Bailey of the Afro-American Studies program on campus to intervene and ask the black players to drop their boycott while the council tried to solve the problem.

WORLD'S GREATEST—

Lenglen Named Best Net Player

NEW YORK (AP) — Suzanne Lenglen of France, who won six Wimbledon singles titles between 1919 and 1925, has been selected by an international panel of sports writers as the world's greatest woman tennis player.

Miss Lenglen, who died in 1938, received six first-place votes and 163½ points to finish ahead of Helen Wills Moody Roark, an American contemporary who won eight Wimbledon crowns and seven U.S. titles. Mrs. Roark, of Del Monte, Calif., was favored by three voters and received 149 points.

The top two players in the world today, Margaret Court of Australia and Billie Jean King of the Hilton Head, S.C., were third and fourth with 145 and 140 points respectively. The late Maureen Connolly Brinker finished fifth with 109.

Voters included 14 tennis writers from the United States, two each from England and France and one each from Italy and Australia.

United States players dominated the second 10. Alice Marble was sixth and Maria Bueno of Brazil seventh, followed by Althea Gibson, Helen Jacobs and Louise Brough Clapp who tied for ninth.

TCU's Cook Stands Out

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Junior quarterback Lee Cook was the star Saturday as Texas Christian University went through its first full scale scrimmage of spring training.

Cook, who started the final three games of the 1973 season after regular Kent Marshall was sidelined with an injury, connected on 10 of 16 passes for 142 yards and one touchdown.

"Both Lee and our other quarterback, Jim Gillespie, had good days," said new head Coach Jim Shofner. "We feel they are getting the grasp of our new offense. I'm pleased with the progress we've made to date."

Bears, Rice Split SWC Twin Bill

WACO, Tex. (AP) — Mike Macha hit a homer and drove in two runs Saturday to lead the Rice Owls to a 5-2 victory over the Baylor Bears after the Bears had taken the first game of a Southwest Conference baseball doubleheader 4-3.

The split left the two teams with identical 9-6 records in conference play. The Bears are 20-12 for the year and the Owls are 19-10.

Red Rum Captures Big Steeplechase

AINTREE, England (AP) — Red Rum won the Grand National Steeplechase for an historic second consecutive year Saturday, the first time since Reynoldstown's 1935-36 repeat that any horse has dominated the prestigious event.

Ridden by top English steeplechase jockey Brian Fletcher, Red Rum, going off with odds of 11-1, out jumped 41 rivals over Aintree's fearsome 30 fences and four miles, 856 yards to win at a canter.

HUNTING and FISHING

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department fishery biologists are currently engaged in a striped bass 'hunting' expedition at Lake Spence.

Each year, striped bass at Lake Spence are caught and striped of eggs during the spawning period. The eggs are hatched under hatchery conditions and the young fish are then made available to many lakes over the state.

Bill Follis, biologist in charge of the striped bass program at Spence, said last week that the largest female striper caught in nets so far was an 18-pounder.

Last spawning season, fishery men at Spence hatched over 2-million young striped bass. Follis hopes this year's haul will amount to around 3-million.

Sport fishermen have been enjoying good success with striped bass at Spence. The fish have been seen schooling near the main body of the Coke County Lake.

Good crappie fishing is reported at Possum Kingdom for the venturesome weekend traveler. . . . Falcon on the Rio Grande reports sandies and crappie are active while guide Wick Dalton brought in a haul of 34 black bass to four pounds. . . .

At Fort Phantom Hill, live bait is catching crappie, one delirious report claiming a two-pounder. . . .

Midlanders A. J. Tisdale, Mark Cecil and M. C. Cecil caught 60 white bass last weekend up the Pecos River from "High Bridge on the Pecos" west of Comstock. The fish were taken by casting with silver spoons . . .

Ralph Jones, John Howard, Dwight Fleming, Roland Day, Gaylord Vaughan and Joe Hathaway recently came back with yellow catfish of 33, 21 and 32 pounds after a trip to Cuchello Pasado, about 70 miles south of Ojinaga, Chihuahua, Mexico. The yellows were caught on small carp and stinkbait on trot lines and jugs.

Unsettled weather at Oak Creek Lake has driven bass from the mossy shallows to eight to 10 feet depths, but the size of the bass taken is about half of what it was before the weather turned.

New Mexico bass seem to be running earlier than usual, and early spring warm-water fishing is generally good for this time of year. Reports to the NM 6FD from officers and marina operators at Elephant Butte, Caballo, Ute and Conchas Lakes indicate that bass fishing — both for large-mouths and small-mouths — is the best warm-water fishing available. Good catches of northern pike are being made in the Rio Grande below Elephant Butte. Crappie are hitting, but are small; catfishing is fair to good, and a few walleyes are being taken.

But Bobcats Retain Firm Golf Grip

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

The streaking Bobcats of San Angelo continued to dominate District 5-4A golf action here Friday on the beautifully groomed Hogan Park golf course by firing a team score 297 to increase their lead by nine strokes with a 1205 four round total.

The Midland High linksters proved to be the hottest five on the course with a sizzling 295, but could only gain two strokes on the Bobcats and remained in fourth place with a 1230.

Abilene Cooper ballooned to a 301 Friday to lose sole possession of second place as Permian fired a 297 to tie the Cougars for the number two position. Both stand at 1214 with the Bulldogs 16 strokes out of second.

Lee's linksters managed a 309 on the home course to take over fifth place with a four round score of 1272, six strokes in front of Big Spring.

Final round play will be held next Friday at the Odessa Country Club and the scores could change quite a bit since the teams can drop their worst round after play is concluded. That could make a big difference in the team standings, and will probably decide the medalist chase since several players appear to be tightly bunched.

San Angelo's Danny Cantu, who started a golf race on the Bobcats' second team, fired a 73 Friday to move into sole possession of the lead in the medalist race. Cantu was tied with teammate Grant Collyns for top honors after last week's action, but Collyns managed only a 77 Friday to fall off the pace. Cantu now owns a 297 in four rounds while Collyns fell to a 301.

Midland's Doug Hughston also managed a 73 at Hogan for a 298 total, and remained only two strokes off the lead, but did capture sole possession of second place. Permian's David Gage is third with a 299 along with Big Spring's Jimmy Stewart. Midland's Price Courter fired a 74 for an even 300 score, and is still very much in the medalist picture.

Stewart and Permian's Bobby Smith led all golfers Friday with a one over par 72. Many of the district linksters were close behind with 73s.

Coach Robert Young was pleased with the performance of his Bulldogs. "We had a good round today, but we only managed to stay even with the top three. We were hoping to pick up a little more ground," Young said.

Coach Dale Biggs said that his Rebels were improving each week, but could not get the big break. Montie Watson led the Rebel attack Friday with a 74 and leads the team with a four round total of 310.

High winds probably kept most of the scores higher than usual, but the Hogan course played well and overall scores were lower than on the courses at San Angelo, Abilene and Big Spring.

Final round action at the Odessa Country Club will begin at 9 a.m. Friday. The top two teams will advance to the regional tournament later in April as will the top two medalist players.

FOR BRUCE AND ME

Crampton's Lake . . . Drowned Hopes

By TED BATTLES

We see where Bruce Crampton, the poker-faced Australian who now plays out of Dallas, is coming back to Fort Worth's Colonial (May 13-19) for the fourteenth time and it's little wonder.

After all, when a guy has a lake named after him on the course, he's got to feel a certain affection for the layout, although "frustration" might have been the more appropriate term at the time that body of water along and behind the 18th green was christened in curses.

It was there in 1962 that Bruce twice lost his ball in the drink and it cost him the championship by a stroke. Crampton won the Colonial in 1965, but again in 1973 the treacherous 18th mortally wounded his title hopes. This time it was a double bogey that enabled Tom Weiskopf to edge Bruce by a stroke.

Somehow this correspondent feels a special closeness to Colonial and empathy for Crampton. In a way, we know how he feels. If it hadn't been for his lake, we probably would have shot our best round of golf ever a few years back.

It was three years ago that we for some reason decided to play in the Colonial Wide-Open, a one-day pre-tournament laugher for the news media.

To make the tournament and first round ever at Colonial on Monday, we drove from Albuquerque, N.M., to Midland to Fort Worth on Sunday. It was well worth it.

Except for a seven on the first hole and a seven on the last one, it was a round to remember. Probably we scored well, because the thrill of playing the exacting course kept us from thinking about score. Anyway the pars began to pile up.

Then, on 18, it was apparent that a score in the low 80s was within reach, something undreamed of on a course like Colonial.

Playing down the right side, our drive hooked into the rough on the left. It was behind a tree, but for once we were thingink like a golfer instead of a lumberpack. A little distance sacrificing tap put the ball back on the fairway. Now an eight iron right on the pin made it a cinch five. Oops, little long, perhaps, but the pin was deep on the green and a little chip from the frog hair was no problem.

Upon arrival at the green, it was discovered that there was a sheer drop off the back edge of the green into Crampton's Lake . . . You can guess the rest.

So whenever Crampton and Colonial are mentioned in the same breath, it causes a trickle to run down the cheek.

Midland's Craig Adams shot a blazing seven-under-par 65 to tie the Hobbs Municipal course record a couple of weeks ago in a Pro-Am Tournament.

STILL 'THE' HOME RUN HITTER TO JIMMY—

Roomie Reese Recalls Babe Ruth

By JACK STEVENSON

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Jimmie Reese roomed with Babe Ruth during two spring training camps of the New York Yankees and still considers him "THE" home run hitter.

"He was the greatest to play the game," declared the 68-year-old coach of the California Angels.

"And he was great with the kids, the fans and the young ball players. I remember waiting for him in his car outside Yankee Stadium for two hours while he signed autographs, sitting on the fender."

Roger Maris hit 61 home runs in 1961 and Hank Aaron early this coming season should break the other Ruth record of 714 homers in a career.

"Babe would have accepted it," said Reese. "He might not have liked it but he would have accepted it and congratulated both."

Jimmie still loves the Babe, the man who hit a record 60 home runs in 1927.

"There was pressure on him then, too," said Jimmie. "He would tell me that the people put the pressure on him. He didn't want to disappoint anybody.

"The kids liked him and he wanted to be friends with the kids. Instinctively he liked them.

"The pressure to hit 60 in 1927 wasn't as great as it might have been because the Babe had hit 59 in 1921 and nobody was coming close to that.

"Still there always was the pressure from the people and I think Babe loved it. Everyone in New York would recognize the face. He'd walk with his camel hair coat, and sometimes the matching hat, and people would stop him.

"I'd go out to dinner with him and it was hard to eat because of the interruptions."

Noted for his tremendous appetites, Ruth would breakfast often on six to eight eggs and one or two steaks—beef or ham," recalled Jimmie, who roomed with him the springs of 1930 and '31 but not during the regular season when Ruth wasn't assigned a roomie.

"We talked a lot and he was smart," says Jimmie. "He knew baseball and he could teach a lot."

To the arguments that the short right field set-up in Yankee Stadium helped Ruth, Reese points out, "Yes, true, but don't forget he hit a lot of 500-foot drives to center field that were easy outs because opponents played him so far back.

Reese says, "Babe was outstanding at many aspects of baseball, but people didn't notice because he was No. 1 a home run hitter.

"I remember the Philadelphia A's would be pitching Lefty Grove (now a Hall of Famer) and Babe would look out and say 'I'm going to hit one today.' And he would."

FRIDAY'S PRO BASKETBALL PLAYOFFS—

Buck Reserve Stings Lakers

By ANDY LIPPMAN
AP Sports Writer

but pro basketball's "new season" introduced a new hero—Milwaukee Buck reserve forward Ron Williams.

Williams scored six of his 10 points in the last five minutes Friday night, rallying the Bucks for a 99-95 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers in the first game of their National Basketball Association Western Conference playoff semifinal series.

Williams, starting in place of the injured Lucius Allen, came back after being benched after he was unable to blanket Gail Goodrich who ended with 31 points.

The New York Knicks beat the Capital Bullets in the opening game of their best-of-7 NBA Eastern Conference semifinal series.

In the first game of the American Basketball Association playoffs, the New York Nets beat the Virginia Squires 108-96, while the San Diego Conquistadores earned fourth place in the ABA West with a 131-111 victory over the Denver Rockets.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led the Bucks in scoring with 35 and Bob Dandridge added 22, 14 in the second half.

Julius Erving scored 24 and Mike Gale and Brian Taylor paced a 19-9 second quarter Net spurt.

Hayes set a Bullets scoring record, hitting 40 points, but his production was offset by Monroe and his backcourt mate Walt Frazier who combined to give New York a total of 46.

"In the beginning, Hayes looked like he had radar," said Frazier, "but he slowed down a little. They couldn't run as much as they like because we were putting our shots in."

The Squires stayed close despite the ejection of their playmaker Fatty Taylor in the first period as the result of a punching incident with Net John Williamson. Virginia Coach Al Bianchi was thrown out for arguing with the referee in the third period.

Rookie Dwight Lamar scored 40 points as San Diego hit nearly 60 per cent of their shots. The Q's, connecting on 15 of their first 20 shots from the floor, rushed to a 37-29 first period lead and were never headed.

However, his best was reserved for the tough Oil Stars competition where Lacy uncorked a near triplicate 223-225-225 for a 673 series.

Doc Tibbetts had the high single game in the Oil Stars with a 264 which led to a 626 series. Claude Roper had a sparkling 663 series in the Mobil Mixed with games of 211-256.

Mayor, Council Candidates Discuss Important Issues

Midland voters will go to the polls Tuesday to elect a mayor and two city councilmen, following a campaign that can only be described as less than lively.

Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. and Place 4 Councilman Frank Kell Cahoon are both unopposed in their bids for second terms.

Four persons are seeking the Place 5 seat being vacated by Mayor Pro Tempore John S. Pike, who is not running again. Mrs. Pat Griffith, Warren Faller, Mark S. Martin and Raymond E. Howard are running for Place 5. All of them are political novices.

By the end of absentee balloting Friday, 170 persons had voted absentee. Last year, a total of 5,104 votes were cast in elections for Places 1, 2 and 3 on the council.

The Reporter-Telegram asked each of the six candidates three questions. The candidates' answers follow. Candidates appear in the order in which they appear on the ballot.

Questions

1. After extensive public opposition, the city council recently denied several zone change requests, including one for a large shopping center. Do you think the council's action on zone changes should always be regulated by the amount of public protest?

2. Would you support another drive for a civic center, designed to attract conventions and tourists to Midland?

3. Do you favor a municipally-owned or a city-subsidized privately owned ambulance service (as Midland is now contemplating)?

Ernest Angelo Jr.

Mayor Favors Idea Of Regional Shopping Center

1. The Council's action on a zone change or any other matter should not be regulated solely by the amount of public protest, but rather by the merits of the opposition presented. The Council is clearly obligated to represent all of the people of Midland through an exercise of each councilman's best judgment on each issue. This is the basis of a representative form of government.

As to particular zoning matters, I am strongly in favor of the establishment of a truly first class, regional shopping center in Midland. I believe the Council will approve this concept when it is presented with adequate planning and an acceptable location.

2. Subject to confirmation that the community wants and can afford it, I would support construction of a center designed to meet the community's needs for meetings and entertainment events. Justification cannot be made on the basis of drawing conventions or tourists, but it can be made on the basis of service to community organizations and individual citizens. Two separate facilities with one designed solely for sports events and associated with Midland College appears to me to be the best approach.

3. We have a need for improvement in our emergency ambulance service. I will support on a trial basis an upgrading of the privately owned service through a city-county subsidy. If private enterprise cannot meet the high standards our community demands, then I will support a municipally operated emergency service.

Councilman, Place 4
Frank Kell Cahoon

DON'T FORGET TO VOTE TUESDAY

Mrs. Pat Griffith

Mrs. Griffith Proposes Balloting On Zoning Changes

1. I believe that zone changes should be made only with the knowledgable approval of at least two-thirds of the adjacent land owners who have developed their property in accordance with current zoning requirements. Further, I feel that when a zone change is requested, the city secretary should send letter ballots outlining the proposal to the affected property owners, and the decision be made based on the vote from those ballots which are returned. Public protest is usually both emotional and inaccurate, and should not be equated with public opinion. To use the former as a gauge to regulate the Council's action on zone changes would be to subjugate the rights of all property owners.

2. I believe that certain aspects of that concept called a civic center could be of benefit to Midland, but I would not support a drive for a civic center designed expressly "to attract conventions and tourists to Midland."

3. One of the primary responsibilities of government is to provide necessary services to citizens that cannot be obtained from any other source. Therefore, I am in favor of a privately owned, non-subsidized ambulance service. If this service cannot be provided as a sound and reasonable business venture, then I would favor a municipally operated ambulance service rather than to subsidize a private operation.

Warren Faller

Faller Believes Free Enterprise Ambulance Answer

1. We must never stand in the way of orderly protest. City Hall is one place John Q. Citizen can be heard. In this question, the key word is "always." The Council represents Midland. It must act for the good of the whole city. If zone change affects only a small area, the opinions of neighbors carry added weight. We do not need a Council, however, if it decides only by the number and noisiness of people present at a Council meeting.

2. I am for things which improve business in Midland or add to the city's growth. I oppose things which cost the taxpayer more than he gets in return. If it is shown (1) such a civic center will carry itself, or (2) the taxpayer will profit from it, I will favor such a center.

3. Wagner Thomas has given Midland a much needed service for many years, and has taken his chances on profit. Free enterprise can do the best job, if it gets a fair price. Running an ambulance is a risky business when you cannot check the credit before you pick up the patient. Midland deserves the best, least expensive service available. The Council must find the way that gives Midland what it wants.

About The Candidates

CAHOON, unopposed in his bid for a second term, is the chairman of the board of Research Fuels, Inc. He is a former Texas State Representative from Midland.

MRS. GRIFFITH is a housewife, mother and president of a small corporation.

FALLER is a Realtor and appraiser. He has served on the Planning and Zoning Commission and the Board of Equalization.

Mark S. Martin

Martin Thinks City Should Take Over Emergency Service

1. Always? — No. To say that the City Council is not affected by public protest or support in a given situation would be ridiculous. However, the City Council is elected by all the people of Midland and they are elected to use their judgment of what is best for the greatest number of people in the city. We have a competent Planning and Zoning Commission and I feel that their findings should, in most instances, be respected by the City Council. A regional shopping center is needed if Midland is to grow and to remain a leading city in West Texas. As to where it should be located — this is a matter to be decided as each site is proposed. As to other re-zoning matters — illegal spot zoning, of course, cannot be permitted and the present city plan and city zoning should be maintained unless and until the conditions and situations involved in a specific zone change proposal is shown to be a better use for the land that for which it was zoned and the change meets all legal requirements.

2. Yes — providing it is a realistic proposal in light of Midland's population, projected growth, and tax base and is located where it would be easily accessible with adequate parking so as to draw from surrounding communities.

3. I would favor a municipally operated emergency ambulance service operated by thoroughly trained attendants under the jurisdiction of the Fire Department. We have to realize, however, that this would cost all of us as taxpayers more than the present system. The question is then, how important are the lives that might be saved and are Midland taxpayers willing to pay the small extra cost for a well-trained and efficient emergency service for our city. I stress emergency since a municipally owned service would not be involved in patient transfers which would still be handled by privately owned ambulance services. There are plenty of examples of other cities that have been successful in operating a municipally owned emergency service (see the last issue of Reader's Digest), and I see no reason why Midland schould not have such a service.

Raymond E. Howard

Howard Would Support Drive For Civic Center

1. No, I do not think zone changes should be regulated solely by the amount of public protest, and I do not think the Council has done this in the past. The City Council should make changes in zoning ordiances when the change would promote the general welfare of the city, would promote the welfare of citizens located close to the change, would constitute good city planning, and would be a legal act on the part of the Council.

2. Yes, I would support another drive for a civic center. If the proper facilities can be located in the proper place and erected and maintained in a good fiscal manner, it would be a great addition to the city. From past experience, we know it will take very careful planning, selling and execution.

3. I favor a privately owned ambulance service as long as it is economically viable and the service is satisfactory. If either of these conditions fail, then the city should assist or take over as careful studies show to be necessary. Most larger cities are turning this function over to their fire or police departments with apparently good results. I prefer the plan that will give our citizens the best service for their tax dollar. I've been fortunate in not needing this service in all my years in Midland so I can not speak directly to whether or not the service is satisfactory.

Gerald Ford Stays On Sidelines In Impeachment Battle

BY CARL P. LEUBSDORF

WASHINGTON (AP) — "The Vice President of the United States," intoned press secretary Paul Miltich, as his boss, Gerald Ford, walked into the Senate committee room to hold his first vice presidential news conference.

"It sounds awfully important, doesn't it?" Ford asked, with his all-American boy grin. "I'm not used to that yet."

Two weeks earlier, on Dec. 6, 1973, Gerald Rudolph Ford Jr. had become the first vice president in history to take office in the middle of a presidential term.

Confirmed by the House and Senate with only a handful of dissenting votes, Ford was expected to be the down-the-line supporter of Richard Nixon he had been as House Republican leader.

Nearly four months later, Ford is loyal to Nixon. But because of Watergate, the impeachment issue and the indictments of Nixon's former top aides, the vice president has begun to put distance between himself and the President.

He speaks in behalf of Nixon policies, but not often in behalf of the man.

In Cincinnati last month, Ford addressed 400 Republicans attending a fund-raising dinner to promote a GOP congressional candidate; a candidate who later lost because of the Watergate issue.

"It is time to turn this tide and end this stampede, and tell the American people we have a good policy at home and abroad," pleaded Ford, never mentioning the President's name.

Two days earlier, Ford's own congressional district in Michigan had elected a Democrat to Congress for the first time in 64 years.

Several days after the Cincinnati trip, Ford spoke to a fund-raising luncheon of Nixon's most fervent defenders, 400 members of the Committee for Fairness to the Presidency.

Unlike the pro-Nixon luncheon speeches of Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz, his message was broader, a plea for "fairness to the institutions of government under which we live."

"I say we need to encourage fairness clear across the board," Ford said.

Later that day, a reporter who "seem bent" on stretching out the ordeal of Watergate for their own purposes."

Though Ford won't admit it, he received a lot of criticism for that comment, and he eased off.

"I think he realized that speech was a mistake," says one of Ford's oldest congressional friends. "I think he can be loyal to the President without being the defender of everything that's happened."

The next week, when Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott

> 'Ford has confined most of his Watergate comment to general tactics and procedure, rather than substance.'

told a Ford intimate he found the nuances of the speech interesting. His face lit up. "You noticed," he said.

Ford's aides say the vice president has managed to maintain a good relationship with the President, yet Republican congressmen involved in the impeachment battle still consider Ford one of them.

To achieve this, the 60-year-old Ford has confined most of his Watergate comment to general tactics and procedure, rather than substance.

He cites the President's assurances of his innocence, says he believes Nixon has committed no impeachable acts, of which he Ford knows, but adds that "time will tell."

Early in his tenure, Ford discovered the dangers of being too loyal to his old friend in the White House.

Discovery came after his now famous Jan. 15 speech in Atlantic City, N.J. Ford, using a text partly the work of White House speechwriters, said the impeachment drive was the work of "a few extreme partisans" started talking about what he said was "proof" of Nixon's innocence, Ford decided against examining Scott's evidence.

He said he wanted to avoid any suggestion that he might use the evidence to take over Nixon's job, implying that the material might not be as pro-Nixon as Scott had said.

Ford hasn't criticized Nixon directly, but sometimes he comes close. When asked about the President's recent performance at Nixon's first news conference since November, Ford replied: "I thought he did well in some areas, but I thought he did poorly in others."

Although thrust into the role of chief GOP cheerleader, Ford tries to operate in a low key typical of many of the nation's vice presidents.

Besides speeches at party fund-raising dinners and in behalf of the unsuccessful GOP candidates in two recent congressional elections, Ford's engagements have included a high school assembly in a Chicago suburb, an Israeli bond dinner in New York, a hospital dedication in Little Rock, Ark., and the Harvard College Republican Club.

As in the case of the Fairness to the Presidency luncheon, Ford's message isn't always what his audience expects.

When Ford spoke to the mid-winter National Governors Conference in early March, Watergate, energy and the economy were the subjects on everyone's minds.

After the traditional pledge that "my door is always open to you," however, Ford spoke of his plans to keep partisanship out of the new Commission on Personal Privacy which he heads.

"I know what they wanted us to talk about," an aide said. "But we talk about what we want to talk about, not what the audience wants to hear."

In contrast to the entourage that surrounded his predecessor, Spiro T. Agnew, Ford travels with a small staff and few bodyguards.

On most of his travels, Ford has been using a twin-engine Air Force Convair, smaller and less luxurious than the jets used by Agnew.

Ford's relations with the press have always been good.

"Jerry Ford will never attack the press," says Miltich. "He genuinely likes newsmen."

Both Miltich and Ford's top aide, 56-year-old Bob Hartman, are former reporters.

Shortly after he was named, Ford outlined his views on the press at a Philadelphia dinner honoring Scott.

Referring to the investigative reporters digging into his background, he said, "That is their job, and they should do it the best they know how.

"They are seekers after the truth," Ford said. "They are motivated by the same emotions that inspire the rest of us — love of country and dedication to what's right."

When the Washington papers reported that he had berated his wife Betty for being late to a diplomatic reception, his reaction was that he had apologized to her. He didn't complain about the story.

As vice president, Ford has become neither a deputy president and domestic chief, as proposed by his old friend Melvin P. Laird, nor a fulltime presidential liaison with Congress.

Nixon appears uninterested in turning many specific functions over to the vice president, and there appear the opening signs of staff-level tension as the vice president tries to build a staff within White House budget restraints.

Ford has spent a lot of time at the Capitol. He frequently presides over the Senate, his chief constitutional duty. Unlike Agnew, he keeps in touch with Scott to see if he is needed.

He has been careful not to encroach on congressional sensitivities, an attitude his aides thinks Ford will have to maintain as the impeachment crunch nears.

"If anyone represents integrity in the government of the United States today, it is Vice President Gerald R. Ford," GOP congressional candidate Willis Gradison Jr. said, as he introduced Ford in Cincinnati last month.

Even Democrats opposed to Ford's conservative voting record rarely criticize him.

"He's not evil," said a Democratic congressional aide. "But it's a pretty sad day when that's considered an asset." Some who would like to have Ford in the White House today worry what kind of President he would make.

"I think he would probably operate well on a day-to-day basis. But in the contemplation of long-range problems, I truly wonder if he has that kind of depth perception," says one Republican congressman.

The lawmaker cited Ford's refusal to support the use of highway funds for mass transit, his longtime opposition to election campaign reforms, and what many consider lukewarm support for civil rights.

Ford has little doubt about his ability to perform in the Presidency. "It doesn't worry me," he said recently. "I'm as prepared for this job as anyone. Besides, I assume it's not going to happen."

Whatever happens, Ford says: "I have promised my wife Betty that I would leave public life in 1976, and I believe I can do a better job as vice president if I'm not under suspicion of being a potential candidate."

What if the polls keep running as they are now, he was asked.

"We'll analyze that situation as we go along," he said.

Can Ford stay out of the 1976 race?

"Of course, he can," says an aide. "I don't know anybody who was ever really drafted to run."

Then, a pause. "He's really in a very good position."

Hugh Downs Becomes Movie Producer In Flying Scarf

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Hugh Downs has become a producer in a flying scarf. A broadcaster by vocation and pilot by avocation, he recently roared off into the movie and barnstorming business — simultaneously.

It's resulted in a documentary film called "Nothing by Chance," based on a wonderful 1969 book of the same name that pilot-author Richard Bach wrote before his best-selling "Jonathan Livingston Seagull."

The movie, which Downs says will be released for theaters but not television late this spring, is sort of a pilot's answer to "The Endless Summer," a popular surfing documentary of a few years ago.

Bach, who co-produced the film, "assembled all the pilots and got a marvelous crew," Downs said. The aviators ranged from a genuine old-time barnstormer to a jetliner captain from California.

The movie was filmed last summer with a fleet of five biplanes built in the 1920s when barnstorming — taking adventurous citizens for a quick hop around the pea patch — was in full and glorious bloom.

The jet-age barnstormers did the same thing, starting in Weeping Water, Neb., and ending a month later in Rio, Wis. They were surprised to find then they'd even turned a small profit.

"The great thing about it was that we could avoid airports altogether if we wanted to," said Downs, who didn't take cash customers aloft and concentrated on producing and subsequent narrating chores.

"If you can find a level field that a farmer will let you land in — if it's not too far from a little town — then you fly the fleet over," he said of the modern recreation of flying's good old days.

Publicizing the flights was done as in the early days, he said. Parachutists tumbled from planes, mock dogfights raged and aerobatics ran rampant as curious crowds trooped to the landing field.

Those who would be among the eagles and had $3 in cash were taken aloft for a short ride, Downs said, "and the funny thing is that we were claiming to be the only anti-inflationary force in America.

"When Glenn Curtiss started barnstorming after World War I, he charged $15 and Charles Lindberg, in the 1920s, charged $6."

The barnstormers, Bach among them, weren't on salary.

"Bach felt that would have destroyed the spirit of it, so they all took one per cent of the movie," Downs said, referring to a percentage of the film's potential earnings.

"Then they had to live off of what they made. The theory was that if you didn't get people up in the air, paying for rides, you couldn't buy your hamburgers. You went to bed hungry under your wing."

That didn't happen, he said, "so Bach really proved that he was right — that barnstorming, which died in the 1930s when the banks closed, could be revived."

Downs thinks the movie will make money. But he isn't putting all his eggs in one cockpit. He's hosting a one-hour ABC special today that's based on "Variety," the show-biz bible, and hopes it'll become a regular weekly series next season.

He's also serving as executive producer on a new television talk-variety show, starring Lena Horne, that will be syndicated soon.

FW Opera Slates Double Bill

FORT WORTH — Opera's most popular double bill, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci," will be the fourth presentation of the Fort Worth Opera Association's current season. Performances will be Friday night and next Sunday afternoon in the Tarrant County Convention Center theater in downtown Fort Worth.

Then, just two weeks later, the opera association will present Humperdinck's charming opera, "Hansel and Gretel," in English, in one public performance at 2:30 p.m. on Sunday, April 21, and two student performances in cooperation with the Fort Worth public schools on April 23 and 24.

The plots of both "Cavalleria" and "Pagliacci" revolve around the same figure, a husband whose wife is unfaithful. The desperate stories have several other parallels and are like "wood chopped off the same block," according to Maestro Fausto Cleva, famous opera conductor who has conducted the two works on many occasions. They are an ideal pair for tandem presentation — both full of melody, action and intense human feeling.

"Cavalleria" was first performed in 1890, while "Pagliacci" came on the scene two years later. Both were successful from the start.

For "Cavalleria," Rudolf Kruger, general manager-artistic director of the Fort Worth Opera, has engaged Metropolitan Opera tenor Enrico di Giuseppe for the role of Turiddu, while New York City Opera soprano Marisa Galvany, a beautiful young singer making her Fort Worth debut in this role, will sing Santuzza. Met baritone Louis Quilico will be Alfio and mezzo-soprano Carol Mayo will sing Mama Lucia.

"Pagliacci" will have Met tenor William Lewis, a former TCU student and Opera Guild of Fort Worth scholarship winner, in the role of Canio. Quilico will sing the role of Tonio, Canadian and New York City Opera soprano Heather Thomson will portray the earthy Nedda, and New York City Opera baritone John Darrenkamp will be heard as Silvio.

The productions are being staged by James Lucas with Kruger conducting. Sets are by Peter Wolf and costumes are by Suzanne Mess.

Casting for "Hansel and Gretel" includes New York City Opera mezzo Susanne Marsee as Hansel, soprano Eileen Shelle as Gretel, and Metropolitan Opera mezzo Elaine Bonazzi as the witch.

The production is made possible through a grant of $28,000 from the J. Ralph Corbett Foundation of Cincinnati, Ohio. James de Blassis will stage the opera, Marina Svetlova is the choreographer, and Kruger will conduct.

Tickets for the upcoming performances of "Cavalleria" and "Pagliacci" will be on sale this week at the Central Ticket Office in the lobby of the Sheraton-Fort Worth Hotel downtown, and at the box office of the Scott Theater of the Fort Worth Art Center, 3505 W. Lancaster Ave. Single tickets range in price from $3 to $8.50. They also will be available at the Convention Center theater before each performance.

Chorale Concert Tuesday

Wide Array Of Vocal Music Programmed For Event

A wide array of vocal music, much of it particularly appropriate to Lent and the approaching Easter season, will be offered by the Chorale of the Midland-Odessa Symphony in its pair of concerts this week.

The selections programmed range from early Latin motets and works by such Baroque masters as Heinrich Schutz, to folksongs and 20th Century vocal works by Benjamin Britten, Bela Bartok and Zimmermann.

The subscription concerts are scheduled for 8 p.m. today in Odessa's Bonham Junior High School auditorium, and 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Lee High School auditorium here.

The dual programs will open with the "Verbum caro factum est" by Hasler and continue with the "Crucifixus" of Lotti, the "Cantate Domino" of Schutz and Johannes Brahms' "O Savior, Throw the Heavens Wide," Op. 74, No. 2.

The Zimmermann "Psalmkonzert" will feature baritone Marvin Waltz of Midland, joined by girls of the Goddard Junior High School choir.

Following intermission, the chorale will present the choral dances from Benjamin Britten's opera, "Gloriana," written to commemorate the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II in 1953, and four Slovanik folk songs by Bela Bartok.

Two works, "Walkin' on the Green Grass" by Hennagin and the "Solov'yem Zalyetnym" of Aliabiev will feature tenor Robert Benn Chambers as soloist. Two Macedonian folk songs by Srebotnjak and "Goin' Home on a Cloud" will have mezzo-soprano Jo Ann Steel and soprano Suzanne Medlen as featured soloists. The program will close with tenor Carroll Kyser as soloist for Burleigh's "My Lord, What a Morning" and DeCormier's "Ride On King Jesus."

The concerts will be under direction of Lawrence B. Marsh, associate chorale conductor.

CELEBRANTS — Helping celebrate the recent third birthday of the Shop of the Southwest inside the Museum of the Southwest were Mrs. Harry Russel, right, one of the original volunteer workers in the shop, and Mrs. Edd Gibson, a new shop volunteer, and a resident of Midland only since late 1973. More than 75 volunteers staffed the shop during the past year.

Shop Of Southwest Marks Anniversary

The Shop of the Southwest draws its patronage from visitors to the Museum of the Southwest. That patronage, in turn, helps support the shows and exhibitions which the visitors come to the museum to see in the first place.

The shop marked its third birthday last week, and the volunteer personnel there took time out to review the little shop's achievements during the last 36 months.

The shop, located inside the museum's Turner Memorial Galleries at 1705 W. Missouri St., opened in March, 1971 following months of planning by Las Manos — "The Hands" — volunteer service organization of the museum. The shop received its original funding through a $4,000 grant from the Beal Foundation of Midland.

During the first year of operation, sales totaled slightly more than $5,000. The second year's operation had sales in excess of $10,000, and during the third year, sales volume reached almost $16,000.

Since the shop operates with volunteer sales and administrative personnel, all profits are used either to purchase new stock or to benefit the museum and its program of exhibitions and special projects. Mrs. Edgar Keefe, a member of Las Manos and a museum trustee, has served as chairman of the Shop of the Southwest since its inception. Various members of Las Manos have doubled as buyers for the shop when on out-of-town trips. Mrs. Ben Johnson, current president of Las Manos, has handled the bookkeeping for the shop during much of the time since its opening.

Seventy-five volunteers, men as well as women, worked in the shop during the year just past, Mrs. Keefe reported.

Organ Recital Set By Sheryl Bristol

FORT WORTH — Sheryl Bristol of Midland, a senior student at Texas Christian University, will present an organ recital Friday night in Ed Landreth auditorium on the TCU campus.

Miss Bristol, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ray Bristol of Midland, has programed works by Henry Purcell, J. S. Bach, Cesar Franck, Maurice Duruflé, Elmore and Ducasse for the upcoming recital. A graduate of Midland High School, she is president of Alpha Lambda Delta honor society at TCU, and a member of Mortar Board, an honor society for senior women. She is an organ student of Prof. Emmet Smith of the TCU music faculty.

Good news for Midland and area residents who have been out-of-town or else have forgotten to send in their membership renewals was Midland Community Concerts Association's announcement on Saturday that it will extend its current membership drive for another week.

The drive for members for MCCA's 1974-75 season, which begins next September, originally was scheduled to close Saturday afternoon. In keeping with national Community Concerts policy, when the local organization's annual campaign closes, no additional memberships can be accepted from persons presently residing in the city and surrounding area.

Membership dues are $12 for adults and $6 for students. The fee entitles a member to attend the four entertainment events scheduled here during the coming season, as well as events booked by concert associations in Lubbock, Odessa, Big Spring and Hobbs, Roswell and Carlsbad, N.M. The MCCA has reciprocal attendance agreements with the associations of these six cities.

MCCA's campaign headquarters is at 105 N. Pecos St., between Wall and Texas Sts. The headquarters telephone numbers are 682-5718 and 682-6779.

Persons wishing to renew memberships for another year, or to join the association for the first time, may bring their checks to the campaign headquarters any weekday this week. Or they may mail checks to Midland Community Concerts Association at P.O. Box 4901, Midland 79701.

Dual Programs End Civic Ballet Season

Midland Ballet Guild's recent "Put A Feather in Your Hat" campaign, conducted during the recent Civic Ballet Week here, brought in more than $1,000 through contributions to Permian Civic Ballet's maintenance fund and sale of tickets to Civic Ballet's "Spring Gala" concert presented here Saturday night.

The spring Gala, featuring portions of the famous "Swan Lake" ballet, had an initial presentation in Odessa Friday night, followed by the performance in Lee High School auditorium here Saturday. The dual programs closed Permian Civic Ballet's 1973-74 performing season.

Members of the senior and junior performing companies of Permian Civic Ballet joined the Midland Ballet Guild in conducting the recent fund drive and ticket sales campaign.

Scoring high in the combined effort were three Permian dancers, Holly Hartwell and Kathleen Dean, both senior company members, and Elizabeth Mashburn, a member of the junior company.

Miss Hartwell sold the most tickets for the Spring Gala, and Miss Dean was second in volume of sales. Miss Mashburn was third.

The young ladies received swan mementoes, in keeping with the "Swan Lake" presentation in the two Spring Gala performances.

Midland Ballet Guild Saturday expressed thanks to Midland and area residents for their support of the Permian Civic Ballet and its two spring performances, and reminded the public that the dance organization's financial drive is continuing. Persons wishing to contribute to the ballet maintenance fund may send checks to Permian Civic Ballet Association at P.O. Box 5261, Midland 79701.

The American profit system offers many opportunities.

Failure, for one.

You've heard it. "In America, you can go as far as your ability and ambition will take you." However, they don't say in what direction.

Opportunity has its ups and downs.

That's the way it should be. It is the possibility of failure that makes success smell so sweet.

It is the consumer who really benefits from this fragrance. Because in most cases, it is he who represents the opportunity. It is only by catering to his whims, satisfying his needs, meeting his price and winning him over that a business in the free enterprise system can be successful.

Petroleum Short Course Set At Tech Next Month

LUBBOCK — An approach to understanding the national energy situation will launch a two-day meeting of members of the southwestern petroleum industry at Texas Tech University April 18 and 19.

The meeting will be the 21st annual gathering for the Southwestern Petroleum Short Course sponsored by Texas Tech through the Department of Petroleum Engineering.

Registration for the short course is set for 8 a.m. to 12 noon April 18 in the Texas Tech University Center.

Technical papers will be presented at various sites on the Texas Tech campus.

E. D. Dorchester of Texas Electric Service Co. in Midland will deliver one of the first discussions of the short course, "Understanding the National Energy Situation," at 10:05 a.m. April 18 in Electrical Engineering Room 211.

Dorchester's discussion will present a comprehensive overview of the total energy consumption demand and reserves of the nation. He will outline some immediate options and look at future sources of energy. The energy plans of the electric utility industry will be discussed with a particular look for fuel diversification programs.

The Southwestern Petroleum Short Course is a technical conference devoted to problems concerning the lifting of petroleum from the ground. Some 30 technical presentations will be made during this year's short course in categories including drilling and well completions, logging and formation evaluation, well stimulation and workover techniques, fracturing, reservoir operations and reservoir engineering, and artificial lift.

Officers of the administrative committee of the short course include General Chairman Joe A. Morris, production engineering supervisor, Mobil Oil Corp., Midland; Program Chairman John Ed Smith, associate engineer, Mobil Oil Corp., Midland, and Secretary-Treasurer D. A. Crawford, associate professor of petroleum engineering at Texas Tech. Philip Johnson, Texas Tech professor of petroleum engineering, is chairman of the board of directors for the short course.

The two-day meeting will be highlighted by an opening day luncheon and the presentation of the J. C. Slonneger Award to two individuals for outstanding contributions to the technology of petroleum production. The luncheon will be held at 12:05 in the Grand Ballroom of the Texas Tech University Center.

Registration fee for the short course is $30.

CONTRIVED SHORTAGES, WINDFALL PROFITS—

Oil Executives Answer Charges

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP) — The charges of contrived energy shortages and windfall profits are drawing attention from oil executives in their annual financial reports to stockholders.

Most of the reports released so far make either direct or indirect reference to the charges.

Harry Bridges, president, and G. A. Wanger, chairman of Shell Oil Co., said that now, as never before, there is a need for a careful, patient, cooperative and statesmanlike approach to the problems which face the nation and industry in trying to adapt to energy problems.

"All we ask is that the government and the public consider the subject with reasonable objectivity and keep in mind that the only way to meet the ever-growing demand for energy is to provide an ever-growing supply of it," they said.

Fred L. Hartley, president of Union Oil Co. of California, said there has been an "unrestrained and unwarranted attack upon the oil industry by politicians and much of the media who have accused the industry of acts ranging from 'manufacturing' the oil crisis to realizing inordinate profits from it.

"To any reasonable person who will listen and judge fairly, there is no justification for such accusations," Hartley said. "They are divisive and counterproductive and the facts belie them."

Three Phillips Petroleum Co. officials said many people still question whether there is a real shortage of energy and many more who accept the fact of a shortage believe it was contrived by the big oil companies.

"Phillips has not participated in any contrivance to create the energy shortage," said John M. Houchin, retired chairman, W. F. Martin, chairman, and William C. Douce, president.

"With all the allegations and investigations, no evidence has appeared that any other company has participated in a conspiracy."

They added that there appears to be "concerted action among some people who would undermine the oil industry in favor of more government controls and even outright nationalization.

"They are pursuing these goals either unwittingly for political ends or knowingly toward an aim of destroying or severely crippling private free enterprise," the Phillips officials said.

"Doubts about the reality of the shortage have been planted and nurtured among the public by many influential people in the government, media, consumer groups, and academic circles, who should be in position to know better. The shortages are real, and only a milder than normal 1973-74 winter delayed their full impact."

Maurice F. Granville, Texaco Inc. chairman, said continued federal efforts to define a national energy policy and provide a legislative base and administrative structure that would lead to solution of the nation's energy problems have been complicated by various efforts to place the blame for the shortages and difficulties on the industry.

"The major thrusts seem to call for more government regulation and punitive taxation of the industry," Granville said.

"What is really needed is for the government to remove the obstacles and establish a more favorable economic climate for the production of indigenous fuels. It would indeed be tragic for the nation if, instead, hasty action were taken which would further impair its ability to help solve its energy problems."

Granville also rejected the charges of conniving and contriving, saying nothing could be further from the truth insofar as Texaco is concerned.

Charles E. Spahr, chairman, and Alton W. Whitehouse Jr., president of Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, said the Arab embargo "simply precipitated and made immediate a shortage toward which the nation was heading."

They said SOHIO'S capital expenditures aimed at helping make the nation more self-sufficient in energy are expected to total from $2 billion to $2½ billion in the next five years.

"All energy companies have similar ventures under way," they said.

"Yet proposals have been made in Congress for special taxes to limit oil company profits at the very time they are most needed to finance energy development ventures. It is easy for Congress and the public to become frustrated at the complexity of the problems of the energy shortage, but we appeal to everyone to take a rational and dispassionate look at this issues."

WASHINGTON, SANTA FE, AUSTIN—

Thompson Surveys Different Approaches To Energy Crisis

By ED THOMPSON
Executive Vice President, Permian Basin Petroleum Association

Two things no one has emphasized enough about the energy problem are (1) that this country never again will see cheap energy prices from any source; (2) the U.S. will not be energy sufficient on oil and gas supplies alone.

We must do everything possible to increase those supplies (and complete de-regulation is the best way), but we also must do even more to develop other energy for the long haul, such sources as oil shale, tar sand, nuclear power (both fission and fusion), coal gasification, solar and hydro energy.

The main ingredient in bringing the other energy sources to market is economic feasibility. Unless crude oil and natural gas are allowed to reach their true market value, this never will take place, and the nation will face, not just a continuing energy shortage, but a worsening one. At $7.50 per barrel crude oil equivalent, other energy becomes competitive, but not at $5.25. The punitive legislation being fostered in both the House and Senate very well could close the door on Project Independence, and on this country as a first class nation.

It seems strange that the men who supported a no win policy in Korea and Vietnam are, in most cases, the same men leading the fight against the domestic petroleum industry. They say they want to help the independent operator, then they call for elimination of percentage depletion, windfall and-or excess profits taxes, price controls and price rollbacks on crude oil and natural gas. You find them supporting more controls on industry and advocating government take-over. They are calling for total control of the domestic oil industry. Which industry will be next?

Too frequently, these days, we hear such comments as, "with $10 per barrel oil, all oilmen will get rich!" Would that such were true. First, however, we must set the price picture straight. All oil is not $10 per barrel. Only so-called new and released oil and stripper-well production. The other 75 per cent is frozen at $5.25 per barrel. Put these two groups together and the average price of domestic crude oil is roughly $6.30 per barrel (only 15 cents per gallon). What else can you buy for 15 cents per gallon? Compare this with most foreign crude at $14 per barrel (33 cents per gallon).

On the other point, ". . ., all oil men will get rich." Even if this were true, which it patently is not, what is wrong with someone getting rich in America? It happens every day to presidents of many companies, and to many individuals as well, few of whom are faced with the risk of being wiped out on each new venture, as are the domestic independent oil producers, in their efforts to find new reserves of oil and gas.

In Santa Fe, N.M., the legislature has folded its tent and silently faded away without doing too much damage to the oil and gas industry, although the serverance tax was increased from 2.5 per cent to 3.75 per cent. The original proposal was 5 per cent to 7.5 per cent, so holding the change to only 1.25 per cent can't be considered too bad. The environmentalists also were shooting from the hip, asking for impact statements on every oil and gas project and on all land. This was defeated!

In Austin, the Texas Constitutional Convention continues to tear up what those good advisers had presented in the form of recommended changes. Among other things, the convention rejected a proposal to make the Railroad Commission, recognized as one of the nation's outstanding regulatory bodies, a constitutionally protected agency. Legislative Committee members voted themselves (both House and Senate members) four-year terms.

WASHINGTON OIL—

Indusy's Plans To Expand Wait On Government

By CLYDE LA MOTTE
Reporter-Telegram Washington Oil Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The pace of domestic energy development, especially for oil and gas exploration and development, in the weeks and months ahead, will depend to a large extent on decisions now pending in Washington.

There is little question that the industry is astir with plans for expanding activities all along the line, but how fast and how extensive these plans materialize will be directly affected by governmental action — or lack of action.

But there is no question, either, that momentum already under way will be slowed or halted if adverse governmental plans and policies are adopted which would remove or reduce incentive.

Until clear-cut government policies emerge on such key issues as price controls on oil and natural gas, excessive profits taxes, percentage depletion and credits for reinvestments, confusion and uncertainty will continue, and in this climate there is likely to be little forward progress in accelerating the nation's energy resources.

What the situation will be if there is no improvement was clearly indicated by crude oil reserves estimates published last week by the American Petroleum Institute.

The API report shows that at the end of 1973 proved reserves of crude oil were 1 billion barrels below the level at the end of 1972. Some scant consolation can be taken from the fact that the decline in 1972 was even greater, 1.8 billion barrels.

The API estimates did not take into account the factor of rising prices for oil during 1973. Obviously, higher prices will encourage increases in supply but the API statisticians said there was no way they could take this into account in view of the uncertainities involving the over-all economic situation and the threat of price rollbacks.

The continuing decline in proved reserves — a downturn extending back to 1966 — quite obviously shapes the future productive ability of the domestic

Eddy Sector Gets Third Morrow Well

Morrow production has been extended 1⅛ mile southwest in the Russell multipay field of Eddy County, N.M., with completion of Cities Service Oil Co. No. 1-U Government, the third well from that pay zone for the field.

It gauged a calculated, absolute open flow of 11,721 million cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations at 11,413-11,429 and 11,271-11,280 feet, which had been acidized with 3,000 gallons.

Drilled to 11,490 feet, where 5½-inch production casing was seated, it is plugged back to 11,431 feet.

No hydrocarbon liquid was reported on potential gauge, however, during production tests, it made a small mount of 52.5-gravity distillate.

Wildcats Planned In Irion, Edwards

Exploration has been scheduled in Irion and Edwards counties.

R. L. Burns Corp. of Dallas accounted for the scheduled 8,500-foot explorer in southeast Irion. It is No. 1-1160 Baker.

It is located ¾ mile southwest of the depleted Ellenburger opener and the same distance southeast of Canyon oil production in the Kingsley pool.

Drillsite spots 660 feet from north and east lines of J. D. Ogle survey 1160 (shows GC&SF survey 1160 on some maps), and 12 miles southwest of Mertzon.

Moore Exploration Co. completed No. 1 W. M. Noelke in October, 1951, to open Ellenburger production in the area, for 250 barrels of oil daily, from open hole at 7,806-7,838 feet.

C. A. & L. Pecan Co. Completes Harvest

Charles and Lucille Semple, owners, have employed a double crew and are working nine to 17 people in two shifts, hoping to complete the shelling and have the pecans in cold storage before warm weather. The cold storage is in operation and presently contains 25,000 to 30,000 pounds of pecans.

Located 3½ miles south of Interstate 20 on the Rankin Highway at Semple Farms, C. A. & L. Pecan Co. is operating the processing plant for the first time.

C. A. & L. Pecan Co. started selling pecans in 1969 to Midlanders. In 1972 shelled pecans were sold with the processing done in Lubbock and this year Semple has his own processing plant.

The first irrigated pecan orchard in the area, it was started by his father with 400 trees. Later his father planted 1,000 more, all because he believed that the soil was right; it just needed water.

When the venture looked successful, Semple moved from Hobbs, N.M., to take over the operation of the pecan orchard. They planted 1,000 more trees, then a year later 1,400 and two years later another 1,400. At the time, Semple said, the return per acre was better than cotton.

Now 120 acres are planted in pecan trees. There are 2,800 new trees, crosses released through the U.S. Department of Agriculture Experimental Station at Brownwood that will yield a limited production at the end of four years. In seven years they will yield about five pounds per tree. The old type trees, in comparison, didn't reach commercial production until 10 or 12 years old.

Harvesting is done with about forty workers and takes approximately two weeks.

When ready for processing, the pecans are cracked. Each cracker unit in the processing plant cracks a pound and a half a minute and four cracker units are used. The shellers shell 2,500 pounds in eight hours.

The tiny bits are salvaged by vacuum tanks. By using an air compressor to remove all the air, the hulls fall to the bottom in the water tank and the fine pieces can be skimmed off the top and then placed on an air blast drying table. To Mrs. Semple this is the most interesting phase of the pecan processing.

A pleasant by-product of pecan processing is the birds in the orchard. Waste containing tiny bits of pecans are emptied into the fields and all sorts of birds flock to eat.

"But no hunting is allowed," the Semples stressed.

Spring preparation of the orchard has started and the pecan trees are being irrigated. As they expect the process to take until about the first of June, this is a busy season.

C. A. & L. Pecan Co. is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 until 5:30 and closed during the lunch hour.

Semple expressed regret that they are unable at present to shell pecans for the public, but they hope to do custom shelling in the future.

In addition to tuxedos, the Boutonniere stocks black business suits for rent, ladies formals, dinner jackets and strollers, as well as all extras such as vest, canes, gloves, capes and top hats. If requested, they will deliver and pickup the tuxedos at your home.

Cartright, owner, and Diane Miller, manager, are well qualified by experience and training to advise you in the proper garment for each occasion and are willing to assist you in every detail of your wedding.

Either one will be happy to explain to you how a beautiful wedding need not be elaborate or costly. Their stock includes over twenty styles of tuxedos and a rainbow of colors in ruffled shirts.

To insure that every garment is carefully cleaned, sterlized and pressed before each use, the Boutonniere has their own dry cleaning shop, with complete alteration and tailoring departments on the premises to insure that "just right" fit.

Stop by and discuss your occasion with them and, if planning a wedding, pick up the helpful booklet "For the Marrying Kind," a guide for brides and grooms prepared by the editors of Esquire and Brides magazines in cooperation with After Six Formals.

Marathon Plans Commercial Uses Of Tertiary Process

FINDLAY, Ohio — Marathon Oil Co. has announced it is initiating plans for commercial application of its patented tertiary oil recovery process in Southeast Illinois.

In the first phase of commercial development, the Maraflood oil recovery process will be applied to a 120-acre portion of the Robinson field in Crawford County, Ill., to recover oil remaining in place following completion of more conventional production methods.

The company also said it will construct a processing unit at its Robinson refinery to manufacture the micellar solution required by its Maraflood process. During the one-year construction period, Marathon will prepare wells and injection facilities and lay pipelines.

Injection of fluids into the reservoir is expected to begin in the latter half of 1975.

industry to meet increasing demand.

API estimated total productive capacity of crude oil in the U.S. (which could be made available within 90 days on a crash basis) was 9.7 million barrels daily at the end of 1973, a decrease of 600,000 barrels a day from 1972.

Nevertheless, there has been a distinct upturn in exploration and drilling especially for natural gas, and if higher prices for domestic crude oil continue, it can be anticipated that activity in this area will increase about as sharply as available drillpipe and other facilities are available.

One evidence of the hunger of the industry for drilling opportunities was in the federal offshore lease sale last week when oil and gas companies offered a record $2.16 billion in high bids for tracts offshore Louisiana. (The previous record for total high bids was $1.67 billion). In last week's sale, one group bid $168.9 million for one tract alone.

There has been quickening interest, too, in offshore drilling opportunities and in reworking old fields to squeeze out any remaining oil which heretofore was not economical to recover.

Meanwhile, in Washington and in Congress in particular, the prevailing attitude has been one of suspicion that the petroleum industry had somehow contrived shortages to boost prices and increase profits.

This attitude led to proposals for price rollbacks, elimination of percentage depletion and heavy taxes on "windfall" profits. Only a veto by President Nixon prevented one such bill from becoming law.

There has been some easing of that attitude in recent weeks. For instance, the proposed oil-related tax changes being drafted by the House Ways and Means Committee have been revised considerably and are now much more acceptable to producers. And a new energy bill introduced last week contained no price rollback provision.

It seems, therefore, that Congress may now be more clearly aware of the energy picture and the fact that a choice has to be made between spurring domestic efforts or rapidly increasing U.S. dependence on uncertain overseas supplies at uncertain prices.

It appears possible now — although still not strongly probable — that Congress and the administration may agree on plans aimed at stimulating domestic energy supply development, both short-range and long-range.

Tectonics Symposium Begins Here Thursday

The Permian Basin Graduate Center's Third Annual Symposium on Global Tectonics and Its Relationship to The Exploration for Oil and Gas Thursday through Saturday will have its emphasis on deformation of the craton.

As such, the symposium will be of vital importance to companies exploring for oil and gas structures in the Permian Basin.

Dr. John Dewey of the State University of New York at Albany, who provided the missing link for those attempting to understand the tectonics of this area, again will take part in the symposium.

Dr. Dewey will greatly expand on the new "aulacogen" concept. Dr. Jack G. Elam, president of the graduate center, will apply this concept to the Delaware-Val Verde-Marfa Basin area.

Persons who have not registered for the symposium, which will be held in the Midland Community Theatre, can do so by contacting the graduate center office, 104 Gulf Building, Midland.

Sessions will begin at 8:30 a.m. Thursday and will conclude at 12:30 p.m. Saturday.

Dr. Elam said late arrivals can register at the symposium site.

Dr. John Sales of the State University of New York at Oneonta will offer contrasting ideas involving shear couples and strike slip faulting.

Dr. William Dickinson of Stanford University, Dr. Clark Burchfiel of Rice University and Dr. Richard Lee Armstrong of the University of British Columbia will provide an in-depth synthesis of the tectonic evolution of the western craton of North America.

Dr. Elam stresses that all phases of the symposium have a direct hearing on the activities of the Permian Basin exploratorist.

When You Go Out To Fight A Lost-Circulation Job, Take The Difference Along With You.

It's what's in the lost-circulation formation that seals the formation ... not what's out in the pits, or what is running up and down the drill pipe.

Why spend all the money it takes to saturate 100 per cent of a circulating system with mud and lost-circulation material when only a very small percent of the system ever gets into the act of sealing the lost-circulation zone? Why waste so much money?

Most all of the money wasted on sealing a lost-circulation zone can be saved by using a COOPER BOMB as a carrier to deliver a mass of dry material to the bottom of a well where it is released to follow the flow of fluid back into the losing zone to plug it. The idea is to get a mass of plugging material that is bigger than the hole to be plugged ahead of the bit so the material can plug the hole.

Simply pull out of the hole when returns are lost, drop a loaded bomb, then go back in and drill the bomb up with light bit weight and full pump. As the bomb is drilled up the load and bomb shell fragments are released to follow the flow of fluid and do the sealing job. Only water need be used as a pumping fluid. No mud is needed.

A few old crumpled up newspapers in the formation will ball up and do more sealing than 100 sacks of ground paper running up and down the hole or circulating around out in the pits.

Two or three old cut up cardboard boxes in the right place will plug more formation than all the fiber you can stack on a truck if the fiber has to be dispersed enough to go through a pump and a bit before it ever gets to the formation. The fibers are simply too small and too dispersed to plug anything but the smallest crack.

A few sacks of dry gel or cement turned loose at the bottom of a hole will do a lot better job of plugging than a truckload of the same material mixed into a pumpable solution. The sacks themselves would probably seal more than the material that came in them.

There is no telling how big a leak a few sheets of canvas will choke up.

Some chemicals such as liquid rubber and resin that glob up when they come in contact with water make good sealers. A COOPER BOMB will carry 10 gallons of liquid to the bottom of the hole.

There are a lot of things that work better than spending money and hoping.

What the bombs are loaded with is a matter of your choice. The bombs are supplied by us only as the carrier to get the sealing material down the hole through fluid.

Consider the cost of mud, water hauling and rig time, then compare with the cost of a COOPER BOMB.

COOPER BOMBS are made of drillable pipe. They are equipped with a weighted nose cone to pull them down the hole through fluid. They have pressure equalization ports to prevent collapse. They are equipped with a shooting tube so they can be threaded with primer cord, run on a wire line in strings of 1, 2 or 3 and exploded, if desired, at a specific depth by a shooting truck.

COOPER BOMBS are 7"O.D. x 10' long (special sizes made on order). They are loaded with sheets of canvas and bamboo unless otherwise specified. They are covered by U.S. Patent Number 3,129,762. They will hold 5 sacks of dry cement or 10 gallons of liquid. They weigh 130 pounds each unloaded. They cost $148.00 each fob Midland, Texas or Carlsbad, New Mexico. There is a $200.00 per day and 15 cents per mile both ways service charge when an engineer is requested to run the bombs. Mileage is from Midland or Carlsbad, whichever is closest.

When the bombs are to be loaded with liquid or dry, heavy material, like gel, they should be suspended from the elevators by a haf inch high-test rope run through the shooting tube. Do not use the catline or slips. The bomb to be filled on the floor should be lowered through the rotary table to put the breech at a convenient filling level for the floormen. Cut the rope when you are ready to release the bomb.

Excess material and fragments will come to the surface soon after returns are restored and must be fished out of the pits with a rake or chicken wire or they may be taken out by going across the shaker.

Call us on your next lost-circulation job and let us do our thing to save you a lot of money. Save mud! Save water hauling! Save rig time! Let us do your lost-circulation worrying for you. A COOPER BOMB will let you know right quick and real cheap whether a formation is pluggable. If the formation can be sealed your problem is solved. If it can't you'll know to try to cement through the zone. By this you will eliminate all the cost of mixing pit after pit of mud and hoping and pumping and pumping and hoping. Why keep on keeping on when you don't know whether you are doing any good? We'll do something positive, we'll either seal the zone, quickly with bombs, or we'll suggest you go to cement. We don't spend 2 or 3 days and 6 or 8 thousand dollars of your money, pumping mud away and then give up.

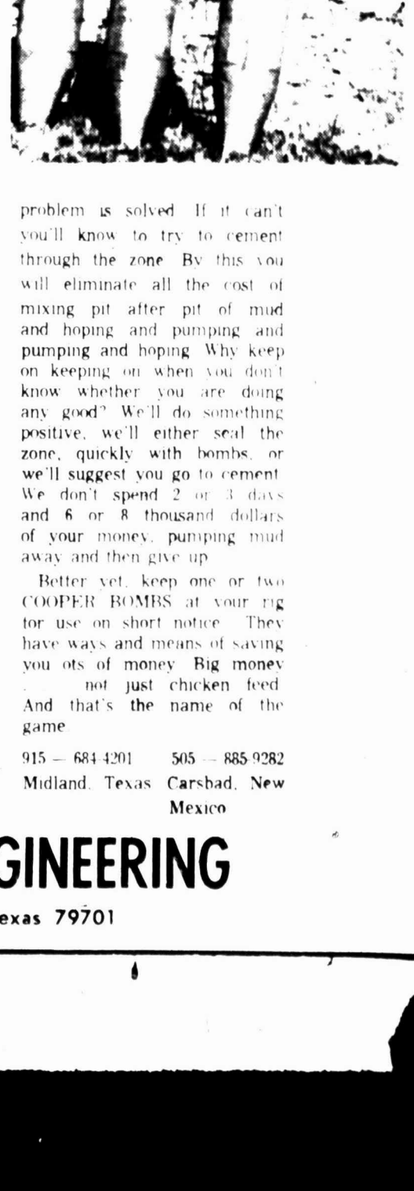

Better yet, keep one or two COOPER BOMBS at your rig for use on short notice. They have ways and means of saving you ots of money. Big money ... not just chicken feed. And that's the name of the game.

Youth Center Concept 30 Years Old

Organization Now Engaged In Struggle For Continued Existence

Monday marks the 30th anniversary of the birth of an idea — a youth center for the teen-agers of Midland.

According to the late Mrs. L. G. Byerly's history of the first five years of plans and operations, it was on April 1, 1944, that a "small group of interested citizens met in the old Presbyterian Church with high hopes and sincere purpose." Unfortunately, the names of the people in this "small group" were not recorded.

It was not until June 1946 that the Midland Junior Canteen, as it was then known, was able to obtain the old U.S.O. building on Main Street as its headquarters. Mrs. Byerly said, "During the summer months this was the most popular place in town. Large crowds were to be found there day and night."

In September of that year, the lease expired on the building. The furnishings were stored until another location could be found. Parties and fund-raising activities, however, continued at various places such as the City Auditorium, the American Legion Hall and the Midland High School gymnasium on Saturday afternoons and evenings, with parents acting as hosts.

No resolution to the problems confronting the Midland Junior Canteen came in 1947. Again quoting from Mrs. Byerly's history, "With no funds on hand, no immediate outlook for a building or a lot to put it on, the Adult Advisory Board continued to function and still had high hopes and faith that something could still be done for our Midland youth."

The high hopes and faith finally paid off. In February 1948, the city council, which had purchased the buildings from Midland Army Air Force Base, leased at no cost for five years the Cadet Club Building now known as the Midland Youth Center Inc. They also obtained from the First Presbyterian Church a five-year lease, at no cost, on the property on the corner of B and Illinois streets. The building and lot were the results of much hard work on the part of the late E. W. Anguish, Albert Kelly and Dr. H. A. Ireland.

On April 19, 1948, the Adult Advisory Board met for the first time in the new Midland Youth Center and on June 3 the formal opening was held. The first director was William Ingel of Washington, D.C. Membership cards cost $1. Parents still helped out on occasion as hosts.

It had been estimated that $12,000 would be necessary to remodel the building. Various clubs, organizations and individuals donated $3,000. The remaining $9,000 was borrowed. In December 1948, the first note of $5,000 was paid off by the following: Dr. L. W. Leggett, Anguish, Tom Sloan, L. G. Byerly, W. A. Yeager, A. L. Attaway, J. C. Williamson, Walter Cremin, J. G. McMillian, W. D. Henderson, Barney Grafa, Clarence Scharbauer, B. R. Greathouse and R. R. Herrell. John Y. Francis paid off the remaining note of $4,000, leaving the Midland Youth Center free of debt for a time.

This building served its purpose well for almost five years. During this time, however, the population grew so much that the building became inadequate. In May 1953, Anguish and Francis donated the land at Illinois and C streets and formed a fund-raising committee composed of the late J. P. "Bum" Gibbins, Roy A. Minear, Paul L. Davis, the late Harvey Conger and George McIntyre. In three weeks this committee raised about $50,000, with the committee itself donating a substantial portion of that sum, to build a new youth center which was opened in October 1954 and still serves Midland High School students.

In April 1962, a building campaign, headed by Henry Meadows, was started to build a youth center at the newly opened Robert E. Lee High School. The youth center board, the student bodies of both high schools and scores of adult volunteers raised $86,000 with the students raising $10,000 themselves. Construction was begun in the summer of 1963 and the doors were formally opened on Dec. 8 of that year.

Today, 30 years after that first small meeting, Midland-Lee Youth Centers Inc. owns two buildings equipped with recreational facilities and snack bars. Its membership numbers almost 1,600 students. Each youth center has its own administrator: Henry Schreiner at Midland, Bill Collins at Lee. Each youth center has its own 100 Club and Junior Council. The entire operation is under the supervision of the Midland-Lee Youth Centers Inc. board, composed of 18 parents of high school students.

But the financial problems which have beset the youth center since its inception 30 years ago still exist today. Set up as non-profit organizations, the centers were able to pay their own way, with help from the United Fund, revenue from snack bar and various fund-raising projects manned by the students and the board.

However, since the "open-campus" policy started at the two high schools (allowing seniors with no afternoon classes to leave at noon), the revenue from the snack bars has dropped drastically. The United Way allocation is not sufficient to make up the difference. The result has been that the students, administrators and board spend more and more of their time and energies trying to raise funds which are desperately needed to keep the centers open.

Everyone, from students to school administrators, agrees that the centers are still a vital necessity for the two high schools. But too few are willing to donate money to see that the doors are kept open. The board is, at this time, trying to find new ways of funding the gap between income and expenses, which is considerable, in order to carry on the work started 30 years ago by "a small group of people."

Davis Mountains Area One Of Most Beautiful In Texas

The residents of Fort Davis in far West Texas have acquired a certain patience over the years after hearing this same inquiry from startled flatlanders.

Yes, there are mountains in Texas — the Davis Mountains, and they make up some of the state's most beautiful country.

High, cool and uncluttered, the Davis range juts up in the middle of the arid Trans-Pecos to catch moisture-bearing winds and rain.

Tucked away in the middle of the range is the Davis Mountains State Scenic Park operated by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Urbanites in the Midland Odessa area to the northeast have found Davis Mountains State Park well within cruising range and, wonder of wonders, with ample gas on Sundays.

Plenty Of Gas

A spokesman for retail gas dealers in Fort Davis said there is plenty of gas in town and that the dealers have agreed to keep one station open each Sunday on a rotational basis.

Davis Mountains State Park has one other drawing card which should appeal to those weary of the city but hesitant to camp: a 39-room lodge complete with heated swimming pool, dining room, central heat and airconditioning and a view which will distract even the most callous of television addicts.

According to lodge manager Carl Lawson, a double room with two beds is $13 a night plus tax.

"Over in the dining room," said Lawson, "the usual breakfast of eggs, bacon or ham costs about $1.55. A 14-ounce T-bone steak is still only $5.25. A New York cut is $5.75 and a K.C. club only $4.75."

Even in July, when the rest of the Trans-Pecos is sweltering, the average high temperature in the Davis Mountains is a tolerable 82 degrees. January lows average 31 degrees.

From Indian Lodge the weekend visitor or vacationer can strike out over four miles of trails in the park which link up Fort Davis National Historic Site, a partially restored military post established in 1854 to protect travelers on the Old San Antonio-El Paso Road.

Take to the car and drive the 74-mile scenic loop from the park entrance through the mountains. Touted as the "highest road east of the Rockies," Texas 118 winds through stands of ponderosa and pinon pines past Mt. Livermore. At 8,323 feet, it is the second tallest peak in the state.

The University of Texas McDonald Observatory is perched atop Mt. Locke and its telescope is open to the public on the last Wednesday night of each month. Advance written arrangements are advised.

The rest of the observatory may be toured at dates and times which are available at the lodge.

Some of the rooms are still furnished with heavy, handmade cedar furniture constructed by the CCC workers.

There are also trailer sites in the park with water, electricity and sewage hookups and tent camping sites along the well-shaded Keesey Creek.

From either the lodge or campground, Davis Mountains State Park is a good place to watch the world go by, comforted by the knowledge that gas is nearby for the return trip.

For more information or reservations, call the park at 915-426-3337 or Indian Lodge at 915-426-3254 or write to Davis Mountains State Park, Box 786, or Fort Davis 79734.

Frog Leg Business Croaking In Mideast

By JOHN VINOCUR

PARIS (AP) — "...O to be a frog, my dad... and live aloof from care." Theocritus, 3rd Century B.C.

Bad news from the bullrushes. A world crisis in frog production that croaked the business in France is now eddying eastward from Kopnik to Baghdad to Al Fayyum.

Blame it all on pollution and cutbacks de grenouille proven cale.

The Greeks like Theocritus who envied the easy life in the bog never knew about pesticides, insecticides or hordes full of tourists who tank frogs' legs on their doing France list just after the Eiffel Tower and Place Pigalle.

The demand keeps going up. 400 million frogs were eaten in France last year... but the importers who pass for the figures say they have to hunt farther and farther away to get them. Thus the frog push eastward and through ponds in Albania (Koplik), Romania (Babadag) and Egypt (Al Fayyum).

Unlike last year's Swiss cheese shortage in which it was whispered that a possible way out lay in making the holes larger, there is no interest in breeding up the species because fat frog thighs mean toughness under tooth.

But the frog scarcity in Europe is a genuinely ugly squiggle on a global graph of ecological atrocities. France now accounts for only one or two per cent of the frogs it consumes. Over a 20-year period, the ponds in Burgundy and the swamps in the Vendee region of western France have become so fouled with chemicals that neither the frogs nor the insects they live on can survive. And attempts to raise frogs industrially here have proven impossibly expensive.

Raymond Arbona, a director of Codagro, the biggest French frog importing group, said that the same process was taking place outside France.

Asked if in a pinch he would ever consider importing big American bullfrogs, Arbona replied coolly, "For my clients that would be like eating horse meat after the heart of the filet."

BSP Chapter Has Aviation Program

Gene Holmes, assistant chief at the Midland Air Traffic Control Tower, gave a program on aviation and showed the Federal Aviation Administration film, "Airports Mean Business."

It was stated that not only do cities build airports, but airports build cities because of the importance of air transportation to major companies and industry. An all-weather airport was stressed as one of the main factors considered by companies in selecting a new location when decentralizing.

The Federal Government helps communities to finance construction and expansion projects and will pay 50 per cent of the cost. The Airport and Airways Development Act of 1970 provides a total of 2.8 billion dollars in federal and local money over a five year period to build and improve airports across the country. This is half a billion more than the total generated during the entire 23 year life span of the former Federal Aid to Airports program.

Administered by the Federal Aviation Administration, the program is called Airport Development Aid Program (ADAP). A prime feature of the program is a concern for environment. Planning must include a detailed, professional study of the environmental factors and steps must be included to protect the environment and to separate aircraft noise from residential areas.

It was emphasized that airports can live compatibly with the environment and be places of beauty where community planning takes this into account.

Mrs. Ansel Brown Hostess To Group Of Parish Workers

GRAMMER-MURPHEY

HOW TO IMPROVE THE APPEARANCE OF YOUR SKIN

THE FIVE GOLDEN RULES FOR A YOUNGER CLEARER SKIN

1. Make-up is made of powder. When you use a bar of ordinary soap the make-up is pushed into the pores, thus making the pores larger and deeper. Instead, a high quality cleanser should be used. A Cleanser will dissolve the make-up out of the pores thereby allowing them to constrict to normal size.
2. A Toner is the only product that will remove a cleanser. A toner (skin freshener or astringent as it is sometimes called) is effective and removes the traces of cleanser from your face.
3. Alkali or detergent soap sold in grocery stores are drying. It is only good for your body. It can make the skin on your face and hands rough. You should be using a non-alkali soap. It will remove the bacteria without disturbing the normal balance of the skin. Now you are ready to use Peel O Matique.
4. Peel O Matique is the first safe and gentle process to shed the dead skin cells. Peel O Matique was created to help overcome crepey skin on the neck, lines over the lips, pitting and blackheads, blotching and discoloration. Notice a man's face. Where he shaves you will not see any of these unsightly skin problems. By shaving, the man is removing the dead skin cells daily. And remember, that when using Peel O Matique always use: Cleanser to dissolve the make-up, Toner to dissolve the cleanser, Non-Alkali Soap to remove bacteria, then use Peel O Matique's phase 1, 2, 3.
5. Now is the time to use a moisturizer from our cosmetic department. Stay away from home lubricants such as mayonnaise, crisco, baby oils as they tend to dry your skin.

If your skin is extremely rough, we suggest you use another, more abrasive peel once a week. They are also sold in our cosmetic department. In case of prior skin problems, consult your physician, he knows best. 100 Applications — $20.00

Mrs. David Thomas Leonard

David Thomas Leonards' Honeymoon In Hawaii

Mr. and Mrs. David Thomas Leonard, she is the former Marylyn Elizabeth Godwin, are honeymooning in Hawaii, following their marriage here Saturday.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. John Franklin Godwin, 1306 Upland St., and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Charles Leonard, 3204 Boyd St.

The candles were lighted by Paul Godwin, brother of the bride, who also served as junior groomsman, and Steven Godwin of Nashville, Tenn., nephew of the bride.

Music was provided by Doris Bruce organist, and soloists, Bob Jones of Odessa and Mrs. John Hyde. The ushers were Larry Godwin of Nashville, nephew of the bride, and Jimmy Johnson of Odessa.

The best man was Randy Mathews of Odessa. The groomsmen were Bill Godwin, Dallas, brother of the bride; Guy Leonard, Lincoln, Neb., brother of the bridegroom; Martin Rose, Odessa, and Dr. Steve Betton.

Mr. Godwin presented his daughter in marriage. Her long formal gown of white organza in A-line silhouette had an overlay of sheer organza forming a narrow floor-length jacket flowing in back to a chapel-length train. The Empire bodice featured a yoke of sheer organza with appliques of peau d' ange and Chantilly laces enhanced by seed pearls. The long fitted sleeves were fastened at the wrists with small covered buttons. Chantilly lace covered the sleeves above the wrists. A Julliette cap of matching laces, organza flowers and seed pearls held the chapel-length veil. She carried a cascade of bridal pink roses, stephanotis and gypsophila.

Marriage Vows Exchanged By Couple In Stanton

STANTON — Spring flowers in pink, green, yellow, blue and lilac, spiral and arched candelabra decorated the bridal scene for the exchange of marriage vows Saturday by LaWanda Jean Glaspie and Milton Craig Lawhorn.

The double ring ceremony was performed at 7:30 p.m. in the First Baptist Church by the Rev. J. R. Williams of the First Baptist Church, Rule.

Music was provided by Mrs. Warren Hall, organist, and Cheryl Curry of Lubbock, soloist.

Mr. and Mrs. Claud Glaspie Jr., Route 1, Stanton, and Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Lawhorn of Temple are the parents of the couple.

The Twentieth Century Study Club met recently in the Midland Woman's Club for a program on public affairs. Mrs. Richard Hinkle and Mrs. Joseph H. Mims were the hostesses.

Smith Ray, attorney, spoke on "New Legislation Concerning Women in Texas." He said all laws pertaining strictly to men or women have been changed since an amendment to the Constitution was voted on in 1972. The first change for women, he said, was in 1954 when they were allowed to serve on juries. Child custody, division of property and divorce laws have been revised and are dealt with on the basis of the individual as a person, not as man or woman, the speaker said.

Mrs. Richard Story led a discussion on "The Pros and Cons of Women's Liberation."

Presiding was Mrs. W. S. Dill, president. Committee reports were given, and two new members elected were Mrs. Tommy Henderson and Mrs. Bill Eddins.

Mrs. Dill received the special prize.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. C. E. S. Bellows III of 1505 Seaboard St. and Mr. and Mrs. Merle R. Crockard of Houston.

Beth Bellows of Boston, Mass., sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Susan W. Nading of Charlottesville, Va., Patricia J. Reardon of Plattsburgh, N.Y., Jean E. A massive arrangement of blue iris, valeria gladiolus, yellow spider chrysanthemums and white Majestic daisies centered the altar. Tiered seven-branched candelabra holding white prism candles and enhanced with woodwardia fern illuminated the scene.

Mr. Bellows presented his daughter in marriage. She wore a white silk organza gown fashioned with a scoop neckline and short cap sleeves. Tiny Venise lace patterns encircled the neckline and sleeves. The Empress bodice was scattered with flowers of lace which continued in similar patterns toward the end of the organza skirt. The skirt and train were edged with Venise lace flowers and lace border which formed a garland effect on the skirt. A short mantilla of matching lace fell from a Juliet headdress to elbow length. She carried a cascade of white daisies and yellow roses accented with gypsophila.

Attendants to the bride wore white pique gowns accented with spring flowers in bright colors. The gowns featured a small ruffle at the high necklines. From the waists, the gathered skirts fell to an instep-length ruffle. Yellow ribbon encircled the waistlines. They carried cluster bouquets of yellow daffodils and gypsophila. The junior bridesmaid had a bouquet of red tulips and gypsophila.

Dear Abby

Gisela Made German Verboten For Her

—By Abigail van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Paul and I decided not to get married until after he had his Army duty behind him, so he enlisted and ended up in Germany for a year.

When he came back he told me that while he was in Germany he had fallen in love with a girl named Gisela, but the minute he saw me again he realized that I was the one he loved, so we took up where we left off and made plans to marry.

Later I found out that up until a month before Paul and I got married, he was still hearing from Gisela. He called her long distance a few times and even sent her money and tried to arrange for her to come over here.

After we were married he broke off all contact with Gisela, so everything turned out fine, but it left me with a problem. Now every time I hear the name Gisela I go into a violent rage. Also I hate everything German. I won't let my husband watch anything German on tv and I won't even have a German chocolate cake in the house! If I hear the word "German" on the tv, I turn off the program.

I'm afraid if I don't get over this hating everthing German I'll drive my husband crazy, and ruin my marriage. Any advice?

HURT IN CHICAGO

DEAR HURT: You're lucky you don't live in Germantown, Pa. You'd have to move. Your jealousy is understandable, but its become obsessive. Further, your prejudice against an entire nation is unfair and childish, so put aside your anti-German attitude. If you don't, your marriage will be kaput.

DEAR ABBY: I am almost ashamed to be writing this, but you are my last hope.

I am a 44-year-old businessman who has to take a plane occasionally, and my problem is my terrible fear of flying. I have to take about three real stiff drinks before I can get on a plane.

I don't like to arrive at my destination half-plastered, but I usually do. I am not ordinarily a drinking man, but it's the only way I can face a flight.

Do the airlines have any program or course for people like me? If they don't, they should. She wrote a note because I can't be there payment.

NO BIRD

DEAR NO: I inquired of several major airlines, and there's no such program in existence. But if you will tell the stewardess about your problem when you board, she'll give you special attention. It's worth a try. She's trained to provide the passengers with more than coffee, tea or milk.

DEAR ABBY: Is it true that you had a Jewish father?

NOSEY

DEAR NOSEY: Yup. And a Jewish MOTHER, too!

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY in care of this newspaper. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Cake filling won't soak into the cake if you sprinkle the top of each layer with powdered sugar before frosting or filling.

Feminine Influence Being Felt In Executive Field

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)— The feminine influence is exerting — and asserting — itself more and more in the executive job market.

So says Paul Ray, president of a management consulting firm that specializes in executive search. Ray says corporations are seeking women with business school bachelor or master's degrees and one or two years of corporate experience.

"At first they were very particular," Ray says of corporations, "but now they've dropped their sights a bit. For example, originally the degree in business administration had to be from one of the country's prestigious colleges. Now it can be from any well-regarded college."

Ray says only a small number of women can fill the requirements for business executives today but that in a few years this situation will change as more women go into business school courses.

"When women realize corporations are fighting one another to pay $25,000 a year for promising female executives with a few years of demonstrated ability in the business world, women will forget about courses in pie baking and develop an interest in marketing," Ray says.

He adds that the wife of an executive is now exerting strong pressure on job decisions as well.

In the later stages of a search for a new executive, wives frequently accompany the candidates to look over a town where they will be living if husband and wife decide to make a change.

"Corporations anxious to obtain a top-notch executive should provide a well-organized program of house hunting," the executive recruiter advises. "Everything should be handled in advance and channeled at a price level the prospective executive can afford."

Ray says it is no longer true that when a man turns down a job promotion to another town, no further advancement in the company is possible. The middle management man is not stymied if he doesn't want to move to a better job in the New York area. And, Ray adds, many don't, possibly because they have an erroneous impression of living conditions there.

Ray notes that many young executives are ski enthusiasts and don't want to avoid winter weather. The South, he adds, has an attraction for others because of its mild climate.

"The basic change," Ray says, "is that today's family is much closer than was the case only a short time ago. Executives have more sensitivity to the problems of their families."

'Backward Party' Held By Chapter

The Beta Omega Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha met Wednesday for a "Backward Party" in the home of Mrs. Ben Strickland, 3208 Cimmaron St.

Mrs. Ralph Jones was the co-hostess.

Parish Workers Hear Counselor

Craig Brestrup of the Family Counseling Service was the guest speaker for a recent meeting of the Grace Guild of Grace Lutheran Church in the Fellowship Hall. Presiding was Mrs. Paul Stueckler.

Mrs. Dearl Gunter gave the devotional.

It was reported cards and gifts had been sent to Ralph Koch, Mrs. Walter Crockett, Mrs. Robert Mayhall and Mrs. W. J. Schindler. Flowers and meals had been taken to Mrs. Edward Boerger.

Mrs. Don Sparks and Mrs. Crockett were named to be in charge of the church kitchen and nursery in April.

A dinner honoring high school graduates of the church and their parents was planned for May 5 in the church.

The hostesses were Mrs. A. C. Teinert and Mrs. Ray Teinert.

Pays Bills

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — Mrs. John Moore of Coldwater, Mich., always pays her bills as Phyllis McDonald, Municipal Court clerk here, found the other day. Mrs. Moore, while visiting in Pueblo Sept. 26, 1960, was ticketed for overtime parking. She put the ticket away when she returned home and forgot about it until she ran across me? If they don't, they should it recently. She wrote a note of apology and enclosed $1 for payment.

RACQUET CLUB SHOW— Candy Stoltz, Julie Stoltz and Amy Davenport, from the left, were among models for a showing of tennis fashions for the Racquet Club of Midland Ladies' Association tournament, luncheon and style show Thursday. Other models were Mrs. Howard Parker, Dawn Dickson and Mrs. Allen Lindsey. Fashions were furnished by The Shop for Pappagallo and the Racquet Club Pro Shop.

Indiana Family Retires Together

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — A local drug firm lost 151 combined years of experiences as four Hensleys retired together recently.

They were Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hensley, Hensley's brother, Howard, and their sister, Emily.

"We didn't plan it this way at all," said Mrs. Hensley. "In fact, Howard didn't make up his mind until just three weeks ago."

Oregon Woman Coaches Team

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Six years ago, Carol Kahn, 28, didn't know a basketball from a melon. Today, Mrs. Kahn is the hard-driving coach of one of the winningest boys' teams in the city's Goldenball basketball circuit.

"I got interested in the kids five years ago when I was a student teacher and later a primary teacher at Woodlawn School. I didn't know anything about basketball, but started learning about it because that's what the kids wanted to play," she said.

Mrs. Kahn and her 5th graders learned their lessons well. During the past four years her teams have been consistent winners, and been trophy winners each year.

Texas Teen-Ager Sharpshooter

WEATHERFORD, Tex. (AP) — At 15, Schuyler Helbing is a top-ranking marksman.

The high school sophomore began shooting at the age of 11. The first year she was the second highest junior sharpshooter in the nation, won or placed in several national matches, and was a member of the first place junior team.

She won the national women's all bore prone championship at the National Rifle Association's 1973 championship matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, when she was 14, the youngest ever to win.

In addition to the championship the young woman was named for the second year in a row a member of the Randle Trophy team composed of the nation's top 10 women shooters.

The Randle team shoots in an international postal match with other teams from English-speaking countries and the Weatherford student shot the highest score on the Squad — a perfect score. Also at the NRA matches, she tied a women's and junior record.

Retired Executive Museum Promoter

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Morgus Treiman, a 75-year-old retired business executive, is the first male to seek and attain admission to the museum's sacrosanct membership of the Docents of the Los Angeles County Museum.

Now Treiman attends docent classes at the museum, studying in the museum's library, researching art papers, observing other docents leading art tours for children and adults.

Mrs. Clarence Waterman, the Docent chairman, said, "He is the most popular member of first man. Not because he's 75, but because of his enthusiasm and dedication."

School Equalizes Admission Cost

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio (AP) — One advantage of being a woman at Bowling Green State University — cheaper admission to campus events — has fallen victim to "men's lib."

Because of an Ohio law prohibiting sex discrimination in pricing, women will no longer get a price break on campus functions.

A directive explaining the change was issued by the office of residence programs after a complaint was received about prices charged at a recent campus beer party.

Admission to the party was $1 for men and 75 cents for women.

Couple Parents Of Seven Sons

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — With the recent arrival of baby Jonathan, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Albright have had seven consecutive sons.

"It's interesting our having seven sons," Mrs. Albright said. "When our fourth was born, my sister-in-law reminded me that years ago I said I hoped I'd have six sons, and warned me I just might get my wish.

"I had three brothers and no sisters and I feel very comfortable with boys."

Longer Lasting

Sheets and pillowcases actually last longer when washed frequently. Soil and perspiration wear them out faster than laundering.

Woman Named Scout Executive

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — For the first time, a lady Boy Scout executive has been appointed by the Rocky Mountain Council.

Sarah Lois Thalacker has assumed her duties as Explorer Scout Executive, working in the development of Vocational Specialty Explorer Posts for young men and women of high school age in the Pueblo and Canon City area. There are presently 56 Explorer Posts in the area. She will also coordinate Explorer activities in the 19 counties served by the RMC.

Burned Potatoes

When potatoes burn, don't snatch off the lid to see how badly burned they are. Steam escapes in this way, drying out the potatoes and causing them to stick. Instead, leave the lid on, fill a second larger pan with cool water, and place the pan containing the potatoes in it. The steam is condensed, the burned taste disappears, and the potatoes can be lifted out easily. The black part can be cut off and the potatoes are usuable.

Life Summed Up In Patchwork

ELM GROVE, Wis. (AP) — Dan Lorenz Jr., a 21-year-old college senior, has his life so far summed up neatly in a patchwork quilt.

His mother, Mrs. Dan Lorenz, has made him a quilt with fabric from garments he wore from babyhood through high school years.

It's all there, from his first receiving blanket to the faded blue jeans he wore in high school, the Cub Scout uniform pocket, the first baby sweater with buttons, the grade school T shirt, pieces of the bright red shirts he received every Christmas and a section of the karate suit he wore when he was 12.

The quilt is 8 by 9 feet and has 72 squares and 586 pieces. Mrs. Lorenz is planning to make quilts for her five other children also.

Convention Takes Break For Weekend

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Constitutional Convention delegates, who have already voted themselves a 30-day political campaign recess beginning April 6, took another long weekend break Saturday.

The 180 legislator-delegates return at 2 p.m. Monday to continue work on the Local Government article of the proposed new constitution.

Pending on the agenda Monday will be a number of complex and controversial proposals on tax rates and debt limitation for cities, counties and special districts.

In Friday action the convention agreed 90-53 to write in the proposed new constitution a guarantee that county judges and commissioners should serve four-year terms. The amendment was contrary to recommendations of the Constitutional Revision Commission and of the convention's Local Government Committee.

Several delegates referred to pressure from their hometown county officials.

Delegates also agreed by an 84-71 vote to require that each Texas county hire at least one constable. The amendment was adopted in place of a proposal backed by statewide justices of peace and constables association which requested a constable for each justice court and four-year terms.

Another amendment made Friday would require that cities have only 1,500 population before voters could adopt a charter for more self government powers. Currently only cities with 5,000 or more population can adopt home rule charters.

TRIAL IN RECESS—

Carr Charges Novotny Reneged On Every Deal

DALLAS (AP) — The fraud conspiracy trial of former Texas Atty. Gen. Waggoner Carr recessed at noon Friday after Carr told the federal court jury he bought a Dallas-based conglomerate after a Houston banker backed out of the deal.

The lengthy trial is to continue Monday.

Carr, former Texas Insurance Commissioner John Osorio, and Dallas businessman David Hoover are accused by the government of trying to plunder Texas banks by getting loans using unregistered RIC International stock as collateral.

Under cross-examination Friday, Carr told how he, Osorio and Joseph Novotny, former president of Houston's Sharpstown State Bank, agreed to buy RIC by borrowing $3 million.

Carr said each man was liable for $1 million more if either of the others failed to meet their obligation.

Carr said he and Osorio signed the note at separate times but when it came time for Novotny to sign, "he backed out. He's reneged on every deal we've been involved in."

Carr said Novotny was a man of "bad faith" but he and Osorio went ahead and stayed in the deal.

Unable to get direct answers, prosecutor Richard Stephens often pressed Carr for elaboration but was restrained by defense objections that Stephens was being argumentative.

EPA Warns Public On Weed-Killer Use

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is cautioning the public to use extreme care in handling weed-killers containing a chemical that resembles a soft drink but is so toxic that a single accidental sip can cause death.

The EPA said its warning Friday was prompted by the death of one teen-aged boy in Hawaii and critical illness of another in California who apparently drank liquid weed-killer from unmarked containers.

The chemical, paraquat, can look like a cola drink or apple juice in its liquid form, an EPA spokesman said, but "at 19 per cent strength, a fairly dilute solution, three-quarters of a teaspoon is enough to kill a person." There is no known antidote.

Paraquat was identified by the EPA as an ingredient in six agricultural and gardening products: Chevron Industrial Weed and Grass Killer, Ortho-Gramoxone Dual, Ortho-Spot Weed and Grass Killer, Ortho-Gramoxone C.L., M7212 and Paraquat DCL 2-Lb. LC.

The agency urged users of the products to observe label precautions, never to transfer them to food or drink containers and never store or apply them in places frequented by children or pets.

Aerospace Industry Controls Removed; Newspapers Next

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Cost of Living Council has lifted wage and price controls from the huge aerospace industry and says it plans to take the lid off newspaper salaries in about a week.

Friday's exemption of the aerospace industry, a $21-billion-a-year business employing more than 600,000 persons in 1200 companies, was the third major action of its kind by the council in three days.

The aluminum and coal industries were exempted earlier as the council continued its gradual lifting of controls before the controls program expires April 30.

Addressing a meeting of the National Newspaper Association, Council Director John T. Dunlop disclosed intentions to remove the wages of newspaper employes from controls. The council exempted the industry from price controls earlier this month.

$300 In Tools Stolen

A tool box and tools worth a reported $300 were taken from the garage at Sam W. Owens' home at 3113 Auburn St. Friday, police were told.

Official Of Milk Cooperative Reports $1,000 Gift To Teaver, Preston Smith

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — A dairymen's cooperative official says he complied in 1971 when a former aide to Texas Gov. Preston Smith told him, "We need $1,000 cash. Can you help us out?"

Bob A. Lilly, legislative director of the San Antonio-based Associated Milk Producers, Inc., is quoted in an investigative report of AMPI activities. His attorney confirmed the statements Friday.

In the 157-page report, Lilly is quoted as saying he borrowed $1,000 from Citizens National Bank of Austin, Tex., on Sept. 10, 1971, and gave the money to Teaver after Teaver called him with the $1,000 request.

"I just don't have any idea what kind of reference he (Lilly) is making," said Teaver in a telephone inverview from his home in Lubbock, Tex.

When Smith was contacted in Lubbock, his reply was, "This is the first time I ever heard of this."

Teaver said he didn't solicit contributions while he was on the governor's staff and "certainly not" while he was on the insurance board. He said he was not Smith's "No. 1 lieutenant" at that time, although Lilly gave that description.

Lilly is quoted in a report compiled by the Little Rock, Ark., law firm of Wright, Lindsey and Jennings after the firm investigated AMPI.

Lilly's attorney, Anthony Nicholas, stood by the Lilly account which was disputed by Teaver. "Whatever Lilly says, he is telling the truth. He has been checked, double checked and rechecked and he has been the most accurate ...," said Nicholas.

Lilly has been granted immunity by the Senate Watergate Committee and a judge in connection with his testimony before a Watergate grand jury looking into AMPI political activities.

Nicholas said Lilly was reimbursed by corporate funds of AMPI through a complicated payback arrangement, similar to the manner in which $100,000 was contributed to President Nixon in 1969. That raises the question of whether the $1,000 Lilly says was sent to Teaver would have been a political contribution.

Corporate political contributions are prohibited by law.

Smith said if "we" were asking for money in an off-election year, "It was not for political purposes." He said such money would be used for statewide telecasts or mailings.

Teaver recalled the milk producers sending him a $2,500 check in late 1971 or early 1972 for the 1972 National Governors Conference in Houston. He said the Internal Revenue Service has ruled such contributions are not political.

Asked if he ever asked Lilly for $1,000 cash and then received the sum, Teaver said, "No, that's incorrect."

Paul Mackey Keynotes Management Graduation

Paul Mackey, 14-state regional manager for Dale Carnegie & Associates International, urged 18 area managers recently to "discover the joy of implementing the principles of managing in our blood stream and nervous system."

Mackey spoke during the graduation meeting of a four-day management seminar at Ramada Inn.

The speaker said there is "no foolproof approach or method to problem solving. When we delegate for desired results, we need to accept the element of risk and failure on the part of the person to whom we delegate. The day of the one-man company has long since past."

He also said, "Letting go and delegating is hard but necessary."

James Whitley, vice president of Ruthco Inc., said image is really the personality of a company both inside and outside.

Mackey noted, "We should start developing and maintaining a spirit of original creativity in our company. Encourage others to become involved."

In concluding, Mackey said, "You must practice putting the 'notes' of planning, organizing, directing, coordinating and controlling on your managerial scale, over and over, again and again. When you do that, you start behaving and acting like a manager."

A Blow To 'Old Glory'

Disrespect for the flag of the United States of America is just that — disrespect — regardless of when and where the act occurs.

Yet, this is not the way the United States Supreme Court views it.

The court has struck down a Massachusetts law which made it a crifne to treat Old Glory "contemptuously." Whatever happened to patriotism as we once knew it?

The case resulted from the arrest of a young man who had an American flag sewn to the seat of his blue jeans.

The court, on a 6-3 vote, said that the state's law on flag misuse was too vague. It said the statute failed to spell out exactly what kind of flag misuse was banned.

It undoubtedly was the intent, and rightly so, of the Massachusetts lawmakers to ban any and all kinds of flag misuse.

But because the law did not specify the kinds of misuse, the statute violated the due process clause of the 14th Amendment, the majority said in the decision.

The Massachusetts law provided that anyone who "treats contemptuously the flag of the United States, whether such flag is public or private property," shall be punished by up to a year in jail and a fine of up to $100.

The case involved the prosecution of a young man who was arrested in 1970 and given a six-month jail term for wearing a U.S. flag on the seat of his trousers.

Associate Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., in the majority opinion, said the young man's behavior "can hardly be described as art. Immaturity or 'silly conduct' probably comes closer to the mark."

He noted that "flag wearing in a day of relaxed clothing styles may be simply for adornment or a ploy to attract attention."

"It and many other current, careless uses of the flag nevertheless constitute unceremonial treatment that many people may view as contemptuous," Powell wrote.

"Yet in a time of widely varying attitudes and tastes for displaying something as ubiquitous as the United States flag or representations of it, could hardly be the purpose of the Massachusetts legislature to make criminal every informal use of the flag."

This is where the big difference of opinion occurs. The court, however, did not preclude the drafting of a new statute barring flag desecration which would meet constitutional standards.

It cannot be denied, however, that the Supreme Court action stands as an open invitation for contemptuous treatment of the flag by those persons who would destroy it and the country which it represents. It was an unfortunate decision.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON — The documents which Judge John Sirica delivered to the House Judiciary Committee focus on President Nixon's Watergate role during late March and early April a year ago.

Sources familiar with the grand jury evidence say the President made suspicious moves, which the committee could interpret as obstruction of justice.

He doesn't deny that on March 21, 1973, he learned about the Watergate cover-up from his counsel John Dean. Our sources have seen the secret transcript of this crucial meeting.

"This is going to take you by surprise," Dean began. He reported that Jeb Magruder had committed perjury at the Watergate trial, that bribes had been paid to Watergate defendants to keep their mouths shut, that E. Howard Hunt was attempting to extort another $120,000 and that the President's most trusted aides had conspired to cover up the crimes.

Dean confessed that he, too, had participated in the obstruction of justice. "Oh John, you have no problem," said the President. But Dean insisted: "Yes I have."

The President wanted to know whether his staff chief, H. R. Haldeman, was implicated. "Is Bob involved?" asked Nixon. Dean shied away from making a direct accusation against the powerful Haldeman.

The President asked how they could be sure Hunt's demands for money would stop. Dean estimated the payments and expenses could run $1 million.

"That will be no problem," said the President. Dean told the prosecutors that the President then turned to Haldeman, who had joined the huddle, and repeated meaningfully: "That will be no problem."

The question also came up of offering the Watergate defendants not only hush money but executive clemency. "That's out," our sources quote the President as saying. "We can't offer clemency to anybody." He now maintains that he meant to reject both hush payments and executive clemency as "wrong."

The prosecutors have developed damning evidence, however, that the President's subordinates got the opposite impression. For, less than half an hour after the meeting, Haldeman allegedly spoke to former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell on the telephone.

This was followed by a Mitchell telephone call to campaign deputy Fred LaRue, who kept a secret stash of campaign cash in his apartment. The money — an astonishing $350,000 in $20, $50, and $100 bills — was under Haldeman's control, according to the sworn testimony.

Mitchell directed LaRue to pay out $75,000 to Hunt. Obediently, LaRue stuffed the cash in a plain white envelope and later asked a friend to deliver the envelope to Hunt's attorney, William O. Bittman. The prosecutors have established that the envelope was handed over to Bittman at his home about 10 o'clock that night.

The next morning, according to sworn testimony, Mitchell reported at a White House meeting that Hunt was no longer a "problem."

The President's own account of his moves after hearing the Dean revelations differs from the sworn record. He "personally ordered those conducting the investigations," he claims, "to get all the facts and report them directly to me."

But "those conducting the investigations" — FBI chief Pat Gray, Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst and Assistant Atty. Gen. Henry Petersen — have testified under oath that the President never told them about Dean's confession.

The prosecutors had to get their information the hard way. Watergate wiretapper James McCord, facing a stiff sentence, finally confessed, say our sources, because of a "psychotic fear of prison." The prosecutors then called in ringleader G. Gordon Liddy and kept him inside the grand jury room until his White House superiors mistakenly thought he also was talking.

This unnerved John Dean, who confessed his role in the conspiracy. Jeb Magruder was the next to break. The lid was off.

By April 14, the prosecutors had enough evidence to lay out the case to their superiors. They reported first to Petersen that the evidence implicated three of the President's closest advisers — H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and John Mitchell. The prosecutors told Petersen who the witnesses were, what they had testified and how the case should be prosecuted.

Petersen agreed the evidence should be presented to the President at once. Petersen tried to reach his superior, Kleindienst, who was attending a White House correspondents' banquet.

Not until midnight was Petersen able to call upon Kleindienst at his home. Chief prosecutor Earl Silbert and U.S. Atty. Harold Titus also attended the midnight meeting. They agonized over the evidence until 5:30 in the morning.

After a couple of hours of fitful sleep, Kleindienst called the President at 8:30 a.m. on Sunday, April 15. The call was returned at 9 a.m. and the President invited Kleindienst to attend church services at the White House. Afterward, the two men talked.

The attorney general spelled out the prosecutors' findings. He concluded by stating that he would have to withdraw from the Watergate case because of his past association with the chief suspects. He recommended that Petersen be given full authority over the investigation.

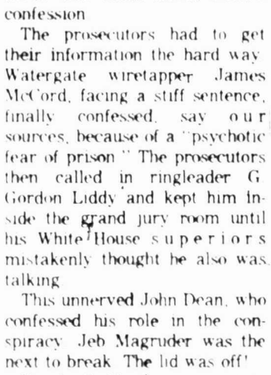

Nixon agreed and put through a call to Petersen who was working on his boat. He hurried over the White House and repeated to the President the details of the case and recommended that Haldeman and Ehrlichman be fired at once.

Petersen urged the President not to fire Dean. "Here is the first man who has come in to cooperate with us," said Petersen.

Nixon wanted to know whether Dean had been granted immunity and was answered in the negative. But Petersen emphasized "in the interests of the prosecution that it might be necessary to immunize some high echelon person." This decision, it was agreed, would be left to Petersen.

Yet the next day, the President summoned Dean to the oval office. The President tried to get Dean to sign a letter of resignation. When Dean refused, Nixon next day issued a public statement declaring that "no individual holding, in the past or present, a position of major importance in the administration should be given immunity from prosecution."

Lutherans Score Again With 'Easter Is' Story

NEW YORK (NEA) — Countless religious groups have stumbled in the broad and dangerous currents of mass-media. In the last 20 years various denominations have been dazzled by the awesome audience promised by radio — and further fascinated by the television-movie kingdom. Millions of dollars have been spent, and alas, many boards and agencies broken over the failure to make a real dent with a mass audience. Ditto with most church publications.

A sparkling exception to this sober account is the track record and national awards belonging to Lutheran Television. Since 1952, the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, has produced "This Is the Life." The half-hour dramatic series now reaches some 250 stations in North America and another 400 worldwide.

Prepared and staged in Hollywood, the average episode (shot in color) costs around $35,000 and is seen by a weekly audience of more than three million, sometimes running as high as five million. Those who are regular viewers can attest to the Gospel message portrayed in the vivid encounters of life: adultery, alcoholism, death, divorce, drugs, gambling and the generation gap.

Under the leadership of two Lutheran clergymen, Dr. Martin J. Neeb Jr. and the Rev. Ardon Albrecht of St. Louis, a large new success is being carved out in the competitive children's tv market. Taking the animated color, half-hour holiday format, "Easter Is!" offers the suspense story of a 10-year-old boy, Benji and his shaggy dog, Waldo in pursuit of the Christian message of Easter.

Benji and Waldo were the earlier success of "Christmas Is!" and responded to the treatment that Dr. Neeb sought for the classical story of Easter. "We wanted a children's story that made the point that Jesus gave up all he had to give for man and was resurrected, thus giving true joy at Easter," explained the producer. "We overcame this difficulty by finding a script that simply and warmly makes this point without going into the crucifixion, the crown of thorns or Pontius Pilate."

If "Easter Is!" is anything like the first program on Christmas, more than 20-million adults and youngsters will tune in during April.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

By OSWALD And JAMES JACOBY

(Newspaper Enterprise Association)

Ely Culbertson invented the four notrump ace request bid. Unfortunately his convention required that the four notrump bidder hold either three aces or two aces and a king of bid suit so his rather peculiar four-spade bid was designed to give Jo a chance to use his convention.

She did and after his five notrump response showed two aces she merely bid six because she knew that Ely did not hold the king of hearts.

Hal Sims opened a heart. Ely went up with dummy's ace. Dorothy Sims ruffed and returned a trump. Ely struggled along, but eventually had to go down one trick.

Sims promptly pointed out that the Sims system would have led to an unbeatable six notrump, but no one at the table noticed that if Ely had played the queen of hearts at trick one he could have made the slam in spite of the ruff.

We aren't going to say that the queen was the right play, but would like to show the whole line after that start.

Ely wins the trump return in dummy and ruffs a low heart. He enters dummy with a trump and ruffs another low heart. Back to dummy with the king of spades to ruff the last low heart.

Back to dummy once more with the ace of diamonds.

East has had to discard three diamonds on the low hearts and follow when the ace of diamonds is led. Now the last trump forces her to chuck the jack of diamonds and the ace of hearts finds her caught in a hopeless squeeze.

Japan's Urban Sprawl Chokes Lotus Blossoms

OSAKA (NEA) — As elsewhere in the industrial world, here in Japan the kinds of pollution causing official worry and leading to restricting law are those deemed injurious to health. But the Japanese have another variety. It is visual.

I have traveled the country from Tokyo to its most southerly point at Kagoshima and find much of the man-made scene appallingly cluttered and chaotic. Since a good portion of this chaos is demonstrably not new, one could almost imagine that the Japanese invented the "urban sprawl" which Americans profess to deplore in their own often ugly conglomerate cities.

If there are any zoning laws at work in Japan, their effect is not apparent. Get off the main avenues in the big cities, or travel even through smaller cities and towns, and you'll see a side-by-side jumble of houses, tiny stores, warehouses, gasoline stations, littered yards and even factories.

The scene is made still less bearable to the eye by the incredible profusion of signs everywhere — on the sides and rooftops of buildings, over stores, on posts. You get a feeling of being swamped out, engulfed by things put together on a practical but makeshift basis, without regard to total effect.

Nor can it be said that the Japanese, celebrated properly for their cleanliness and their fundamental sense of order, are free from the careless habits of the litterer. I saw paper cups and waste tissues drifting across the black volcanic ash on a furious, high-altitude wind on a mountaintop. Roadside ditches have some of the discarded trash so familiar to the American traveling at home. Empty urban spaces often are piled with junk, and the ugly automobile graveyard is a common sight here.

For some of this unattractive clutter there may be excuse. Some 80 per cent of Japan's total area is mountainous, and most of that unfit for even the crudest farming and dotted only with occasional isolated hamlets. The Japanese jammed into limited flat space on four main islands may long ago have concluded that fancy urban planning is a luxury beyond their practical needs.

Furthermore, their cities were devastated in 1945 U.S. fire-bombing raids that burned the hearts out of some 60 major centers. Obviously, their first, hasty rebuilding was elemental and utilitarian — even though the wipe-out gave them a golden opportunity to lay out "new cities" with spacious imagination.

In fact, there are few wide, handsome, tree-lined avenues anywhere. Here in Osaka there is one such boulevard, lined with well-designed modern office buildings. Not far away is another attractive cluster erected alongside two parallel canals. Nagoya has some wide streets similarly appealing to the eye.

The spaciousness and beauty built into some of the newer hotels in Japanese cities is firm proof that the Japanese really have lost none of their fabled artistic sense in the tidal wave of headlong economic growth. Even Tokyo, a postwar utilitarian mishmash, is developing a new artistic gloss in its commercial structures of more recent vintage.

Yet these flossy buildings are a supermodern overlay on a Japanese scene which in too many places looks like a city of the Western world in the early 1920s or earlier.

Japan, to be sure, retains its spectacular castles, shrines, temples and other historic places bespeaking its almost mystical past. Often these carefully are guarded by surrounding, well-kept park areas which are like oases of peace in the bustling welter of the pragmatic Japan of 1974. Yet a quick eye-scan across a big city may not pick out these charming reminders of Japanese antiquity. An old castle may loom high, but much else of traditional beauty is tucked away amid the clutter.

Japanese government and business leaders acknowledge that "housing" has not kept pace with economic growth as measured by GNP and export-import levels. But the job, to be properly done, may be bigger than even they can acknowledge. For much of the new housing I have seen does not ease the visual pain of clutter, but only fills empty spaces amid the chaos. And the badly needed superhighways, resembling America's, hardly help the scene. A beautiful land is marred by a people maybe too much in a hurry.

The Optimist Lawman of the Year Committee will consider the comments and recommendations of the panel as well as remarks made by the nominators and will make the final selection. The honoree will not be announced until the night of the banquet.

Members of the Optinists' committee are Richard D. Monroe of Downtown Optimist Club, Chairman Richard Brewer, West Side Optimists; Thane Akins, Evening Optimists; and Don Huxman, Breakfast Optimists.

The award is given "for the purpose of recognizing outstanding individuals for distinguished and dedicated service advancing the Respect for Law objectives of Optimist International," Monroe said.

Those objectives are to:

—"Combat public apathy and indifference toward crime and criminals and rekindle proper respect for and moral responsibility under the law.

—"Encourage, promote and recognize the participation of the public in the dispensation of justice, through service as witnesses and on juries, and cooperation with law enforcement officers in the discharge of their duties.

—"Better acquaint the public with the duties, responsibilities and needs of law enforcement officers and to recognize and honor unusual, outstanding services rendered by citizens, including law enforcement officers."

Gloves Symbolic

In the Middle Ages, the giving of a glove was a ceremony of investitute in bestowing lands and dignities. Likewise, during the reign of Edward II of England, the deprivation of gloves was a ceremony of degradation.

Great Quotes: "We cannot live alone in the modern world. As much as we seek self-sufficiency, we must at the same time cooperate in a world of people who are very much like ourselves, with all the loves, the hates, the prejudices and the aspirations we claim . . . Let's make sure we have what we need and want, but be generous and neighborly with others around the world." From the Cherokee County Banner (Rusk, Tex.)

Our thanks go to KMOM-Tv for an invitation to attend a special program in the Permian Basin honoring black contributors to our nation's history. We were on sick call, out of state but hear tell it was a grand affair, which reminds me that a bellringer in Oklahoma writes that an Emmy award went to WKY-Tv (Oklahoma City) for a documentary: "Through the Looking Glass Darkly."

500,000 Jobs Lost During Fuel Crunch

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fuel shortages have cost almost 500,000 Americans their jobs, Labor Secretary Peter J. Brennan has told Congress.

However, unemployment will be reduced substantially once petroleum supplies return to normal, Brennan said Friday in a report.

Between 125,000 and 200,000 workers, most of them employed at service stations or by the airlines, lost their jobs during the five-month Arab oil embargo as a direct result of U.S. energy shortages, he said.

Another 300,000 workers were thrown out of work in industries affected indirectly by the energy crisis, as consumer demand declined for such products as automobiles, boats, aircraft and recreational vehicles and such services as hotels and amusements, he said.

The nation's unemployment rate was 4.6 per cent of the work force in October but rose steadily to 5.2 per cent in January as the oil embargo took hold. It remained steady in February, surprising economists who had predicted a further increase.

Brennan said the impact of energy shortages should ease in the coming months and that any negative impact will be due mainly to higher fuel prices rather than scarcities.

The search for alternative energy sources and increased dependence on domestic fuels is expected to spur the creation of new jobs, the secretary added.

However, Ford Motor Co. announced Friday that it will furlough 14,200 workers at nine plants for a week or two next month in a new round of production cutbacks.

Texas Chief Will Not Change Route

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amtrak has decided that its Texas Chief passenger train will not be rerouted through Dallas but will continue its Chicago-Houston run through Fort Worth.

Amtrak officials said Friday Dallas is now being served by a a run between St. Louis and Laredo.

Amtrak decided last year to reroute the train to provide direct service to Dallas on the assumption the change would result in a "modest reduction in the train's deficit."

But Amtrak says it has now concluded the route change could not be justified in view of the necessary capital expenditures and other costs which would increase the deficit.

DISCLOSURE RAISES DISTURBING QUESTIONS—

Tiny Brace May Be Culprit In Worst Air Disaster

By BILL NEIKIRK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The thin, shiny aluminum brace is no bigger than a credit card, a seemingly insignificant piece of metal among a DC10 jumbo jet's vast array of intricate parts.

But in history's worst air crash, just four weeks ago today, the slender brace is turning out to be perhaps the most important part, safety experts believe.

Part Never Installed

For some still unexplained reason, it was never installed by McDonnell-Douglas Corp. on the DC10 delivered to Turkish Air Lines in December 1972. It was this jet that crashed March 3 after taking off from Paris, killing 346 persons.

The brace was designed by the company as part of a fail-safe mechanism to make sure that a rear cargo door was securely locked.

Testimony before Congress last week revealed that, in the Paris crash, the cargo door blew off in flight, apparently setting off a chain of events that resulted in the pilot losing control of the aircraft.

The official verdict on the cause of the crash has not been pronounced by French authorities. But U.S. safety experts say the evidence strongly suggests the rear cargo door was the culprit.

Disturbing Questions

To some members of Congress, the disclosures raised disturbing questions about the way the Federal Aviation Administration, airplane manufacturers and the airlines go about insuring the safety of commercial jets.

Why, for instance, was a McDonnell-Douglas service bulletin calling for installation of the critical brace in mid-1972 issued in such a routine fashion?

Why didn't the FAA step in and see to it that all the recommended safety corrections were in fact made? Why wasn't a fail-safe locking system on the door made mandatory?

Frenchman's Role Critical

How did the DC10 in question slip through the factory without the brace being installed, even though the company had stamped it as being included?

And why was a Frenchman, who apparently couldn't read the English instructions on how to close the cargo door properly, permitted to handle the job in Paris four weeks ago?

According to testimony at the hearings, the Frenchman's role may have been critical, especially when compared with what happened in a previous case.

On June 12, 1972, an American Airlines DC10 took off from Detroit. Over Windsor, Ontario, the rear cargo door blew off.

The plane depressurized explosively, buckling the cabin floor above the cargo compartment. Despite jammed controls, the pilot was able to make an emergency landing without loss of life.

The door operates electrically, sliding into place if a switch is held down. A small vent door on the large cargo door was added, designed so that it was not supposed to close if the cargo door itself was not securely locked, with all the locking pins in place.

In the Detroit crash the agent apparently did not get the big cargo door entirely closed by operating the switch. He thus had trouble closing the vent door. He put his knee on it and forced it shut. Even though the big cargo door was not securely locked, the plane could pressurize.

This apparently was enough to make an indicator light go out in the pilot's cabin. The light is supposed to remain on if the door isn't securely closed.

The rear cargo door was found 10 miles away from the point of impact.

If it turns out to be the cargo door that caused the Paris tragedy, it might have been averted, according to testimony before a Senate aviation subcommittee.

After the June 12 incident at Detroit, the FAA and McDonnell-Douglas came up with their answer to the cargo-door problem.

It was to cut a small viewing window into the cargo door, so that the person responsible for closing it could tell if the lock pins were firmly in place.

The FAA's western regional director Arvin Basnight, unhappy with the way the directive for the viewing window was carried out, wrote a memo at the time. He disclosed that McDonnell-Douglas that about 100 complaints had been received from airlines about mechanical problems in locking the cargo door.

In mid-June 1972, the DC10 eventually delivered to the Turkish firm was still in custody of McDonnell-Douglas, although it had been test flown. It had to be brought back to the factory for corrections.

On June 27, 1972, the National Transportation Safety Board sent its report on the Detroit accident to the FAA. It pinpointed the cause of the incident as the small vent door's lock mechanism.

When the agent put his knee on the door and forced it shut, he exerted enough pressure to bend a small rod, or torque tube, on the locking mechanism. This could have been done with 120 pounds pressure, the board said.

The safety board recommended a modification "to make it physically impossible" to close the vent door unless the big cargo door was fully shut.

This was where the slender aluminum brace came in.

McDonnell-Douglas then issued a service bulletin on July 3, 1972. It called for installation of the brace, which was to slide under the rod to make it impossible to bend. It also called for other improvements on the locking mechanism.

If all these improvements had been made, it would have taken 440 pounds of pressure to close the vent door if the cargo door weren't locked tightly. It was the fool-proof way of preventing another cargo door accident, according to the safety board.

Yet, the service bulletin was issued routinely, on white paper, not the blue usually associated with safety bulletins. The FAA did not pressure for it. It was thought that the viewing windows were much more urgent.

"It was not considered to be as urgent," said John Brizendine, president of McDonnell-Douglas, of the service bulletin. "The viewing window had been provided."

The company contended that had the door been closed properly in France, the accident would never have occurred. So did Shaffer in his testimony.

FARM, DAIRY AND RANCH NEWS

Temperatures dipped down well below the freezing mark recently in Midland County and took out some of the fruit crop for the third year in a row. However, it does appear that some trees may still have a partial crop, barring further freezes, according to Charles Green, county extension agent. He notes weather records show that around April 10 is the date for last expected occurrence of 32-degree temperatures for Midland. Dry weather continues to hang on. Land preparation and herbicide applications are the principal agricultural activities on area farms.

Stockmen who have sandy soils infested with sand shin oak should be on the alert for oak poisoning in their livestock. Sand shin oak is toxic to livestock when the plant first buds in the spring. And, with the plant beginning to bud, stockmen should keep livestock out of pastures where the plant is abundant, or they should take other steps to reduce losses from possible poisoning.

One such measure is to provide a good supplementary feed. A feed containing calcium hydroxide is more effective. Studies have shown that a feed containing 10 per cent calcium hydroxide (by weight) protects calves fed post oak free-choice. Post oak has toxins similar to shin oak.

The Texas Agricultural Experiment Station has developed a ration that has proved effective in warding off sand oak poisoning. It contains 600 pounds of ground alfalfa, 1,080 pounds of 41 per cent cottonseed meal, 120 pounds of vegetable oil and 200 pounds of calcium hydroxide. The ration should be creep fed to calves, and cows should receive about four pounds a day. Sand shin oak poisoning can be very serious in livestock if left uncontrolled. Annual losses in Texas have been estimated at more than $10 million. And, with grazing conditions short in many counties this spring, livestock will be more prone to graze the toxic sand shin oak. So, be on the alert.

The trend toward bigness in the cattle feeding industry continued in Texas during 1973, reports Dr. Ed Uvacek, livestock marketing specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Cattle feeding has become even more concentrated in the larger feedlots lately. Of the 1,533 feeders in the state last year, only 233 had a one-time capacity of 1,000 or more, and these accounted for 98 per cent of all the cattle fed in Texas.

According to Uvacek, only those feedlots with one time capacities of 8,000 to 16,000 head and those that could handle more than 32,000 head increased in numbers from a year ago. Six feedlots were added to the first group while seven joined the ranks of the 32,000 head or better group.

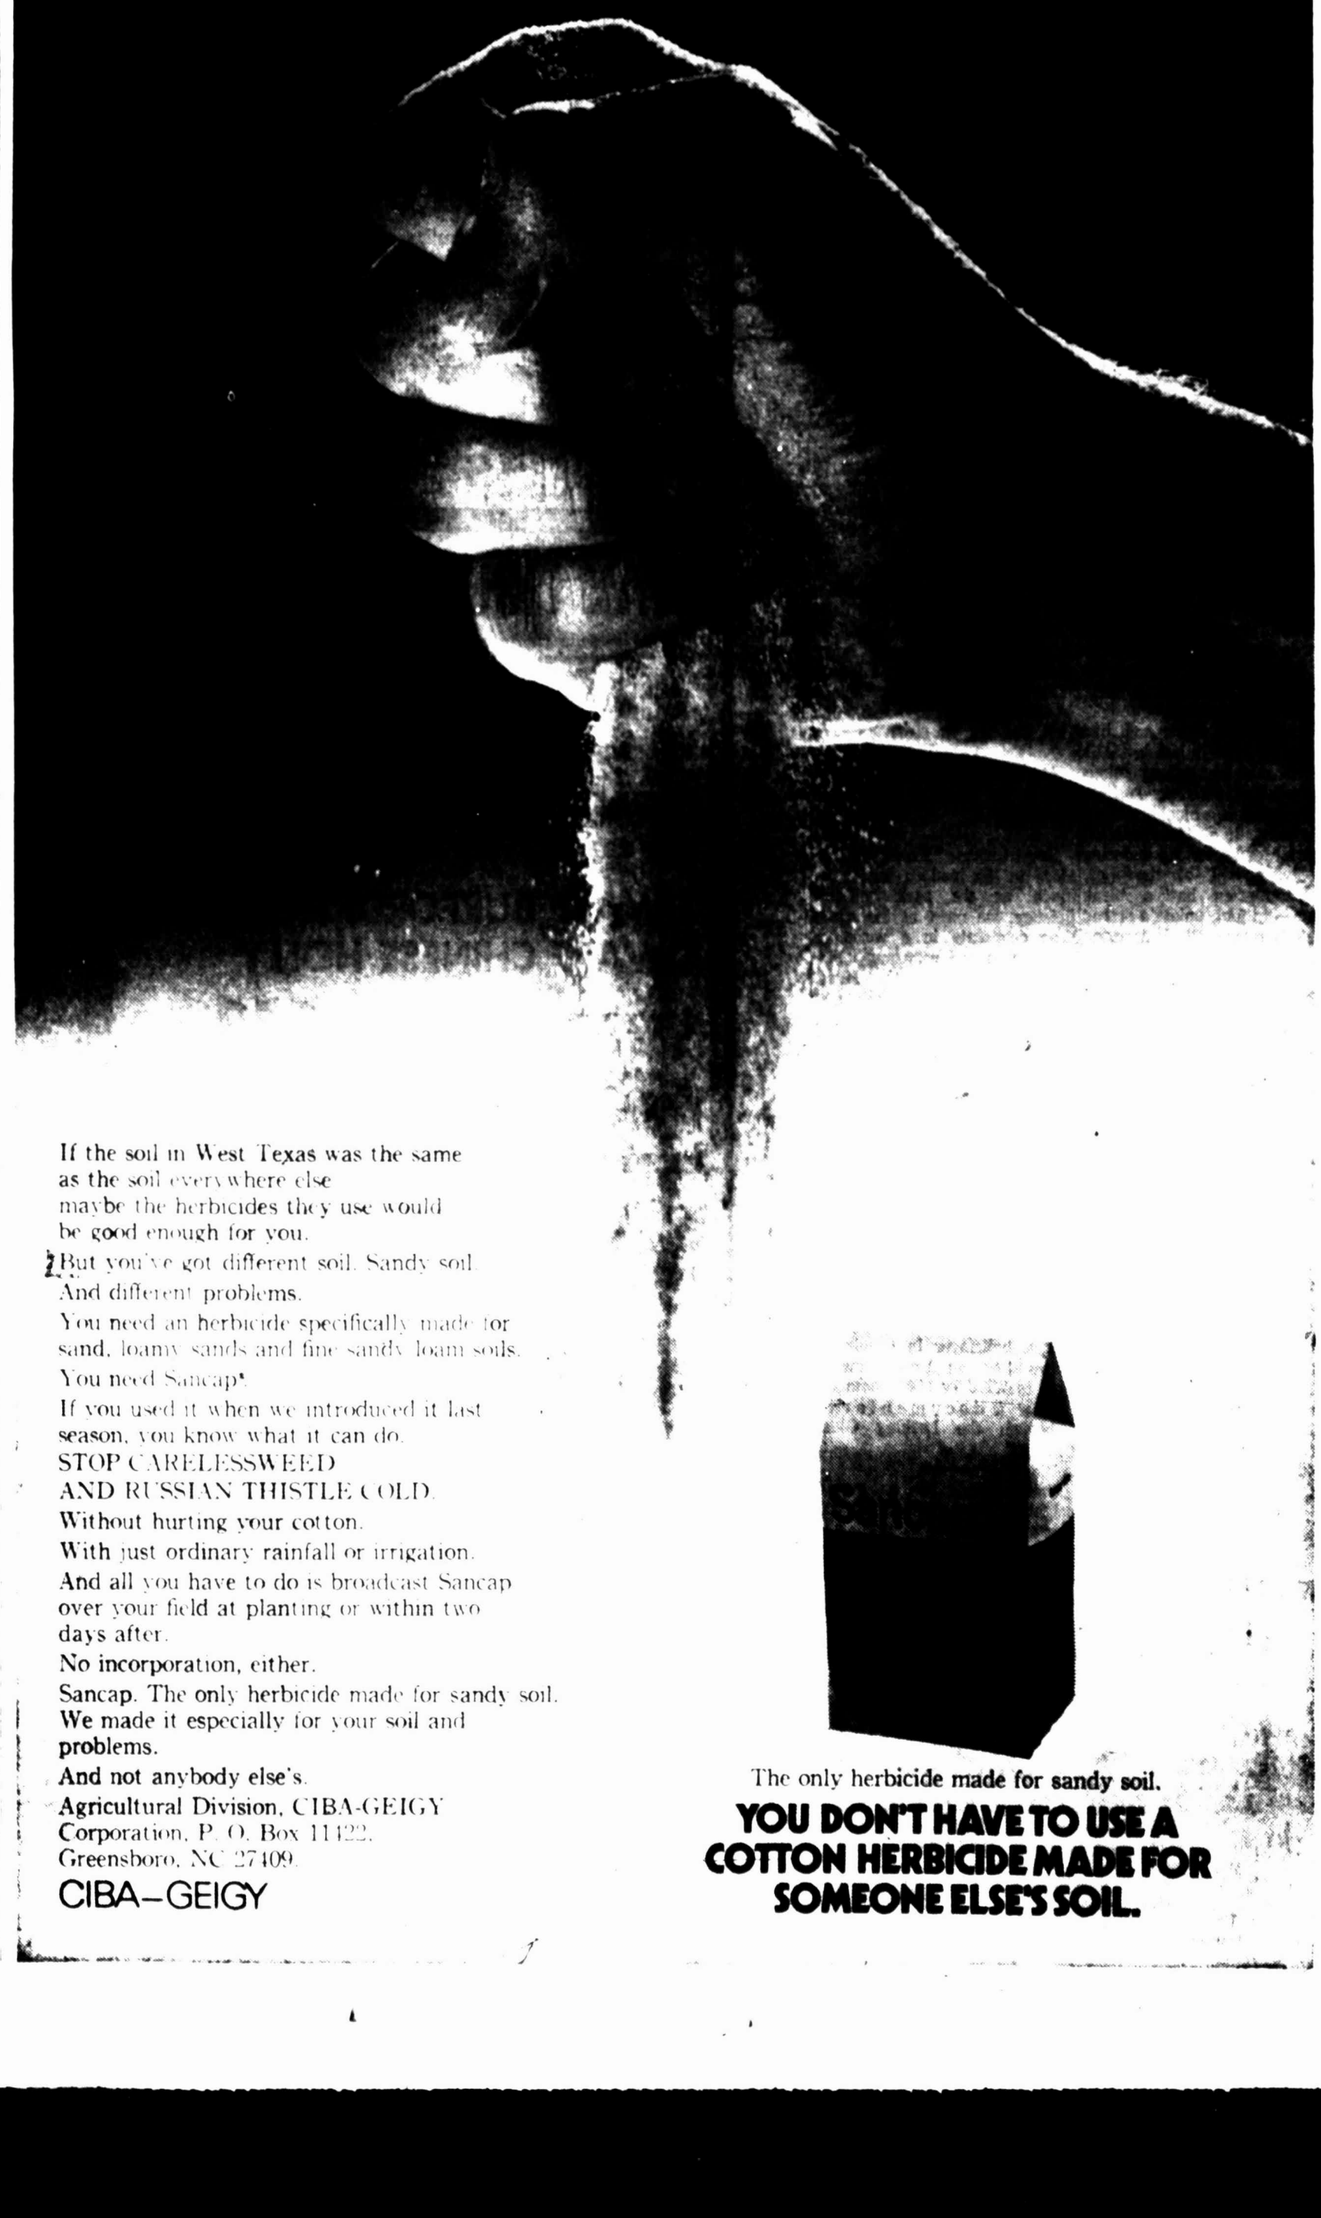

The super-large feedlots, those with a capacity of 16,000 head or more, totaled 66 in 1973 and accounted for 76 per cent of all the cattle fed in the state. This also represents 13 per cent of all the cattle fed in the nation. With the continued trend toward large feedlots, Texas should have little difficulty holding on to it top-ranking position among cattle feeding states.

The garden calendar for Southwestern Texas for April lists the following planting schedule. Vegetables: Direct seed to garden row snapbean and sweet corn. Near middle to last of month, direct seed to garden row: Lima bean, cucumber, okra, peas, squash and transplant plants of tomato, pepper, and eggplant. Annual flowers: Transplant phlox, shasta daisy, hollyhock, playcodom, Iris and day lilies.

Other garden practices to be done is April include fertilizing bulbs after blooming with a complete fertilizer, superphosphate or bonemeal. Leave foliage until it dies to the ground. Fertilize crape myrtle with ½ cup of fertilizer per square yard under the drip line for good flowers. Apply first zinc spray to pecan leaves when young leaves are 1-3 grown. Mix ½ ounce zinc sulfate per gallon of water (1 tablespoon per gallon).

The Renault 12 five-door wagon. You can get a lot more into it because we put a lot more into it.

Five doors for easy getting in and easy getting out. A feature not found on many wagons in its class. A full 58 cubic feet of cargo space, with the backseat folded down.

Front-wheel drive and steel-belted radial tires for better traction. Rack-and-pinion steering so our station wagon would have sports car steering. Disc brakes for surer stopping. A 4-cylinder engine for economy car economy.

A large capacity gas tank so you have to fill it up less often. Luxurious seats so it would have luxury car comfort. Even an optional exceptionally smooth, fully automatic transmission.

And then we built one more thing into the Renault 12 station wagon. Performance and handling so noticeable that once we get you to drive any of our surprising new Renaults, we know we can get you to buy one. The Renault 12 five-door wagon. The more you put into it, the more you'll realize how much more we put into it.

If we can get you to drive one, we can get you to buy one.

Kissinger Faces Toughest Job With Soviets

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Raising his champagne glass in a toast, Henry A. Kissinger assured the Russians that the first goal of the Nixon administration is to make detente "irreversible."

Since he was talking about the next three years, Kissinger's toast in Moscow was laced with implications: The President does not expect to be impeached and Watergate is no reason to slow down detente.

Still, Kissinger appeared to lose momentum during the three days he spent with Kremlin leaders.

There was no evident breakthrough toward a new treaty limiting nuclear weapons.

He is having his hands full trying to keep the Soviets from mucking up negotiations for a troop separation between Israel and Syria.

And while the Soviets apparently offered some undisclosed concession to alleviate the plight of Russian Jews barred from emigrating, the question remains whether it will be enough to win over the members of Congress who want to block credits and concessions for Soviet trade.

The fault may be neither Kissinger's nor Watergate's.

It was one thing to arrange cultural exchanges and oceanographic studies during the dawning of detente. And without denigrating the hard work that went into the 1972 treaty limiting nuclear defensive systems, it is quite another matter to put permanent limits on offensive missiles.

As a senior official told newspersons flying home with Kissinger, the problem is "murderous" for the military on both sides. They do not dare to miscalculate in what is a deadly serious business.

But without what the secretary of State has called a "conceptual breakthrough," the prospects were "reasonably good." There was no mention of his needing to go to Moscow again in advance of the President.

It is highly unlikely one will be ready for President Nixon to sign when he ascends to the summit for the third time this summer in Moscow with Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Before his trip, Kissinger said he hoped for an agreement this year and that he thought technical negotiations that have sputtered along in Geneva since November 1972 will not produce a treaty.

Kissinger returned with Soviet proposals that he considers to be "unacceptable." After 10 days in Acapulco, Mexico, his first vacation in a year, he will confer in New York with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and collect the appraisals of the Pentagon and the National Security Council.

By May 1, he intends to decide whether to make another stab at the Kremlin.

FIRST JETFOIL—The Boeing Co., which is known for its aircraft, has rolled out its first passenger-carrying hydrofoil at its Renton, Wash., plant. Jetfoil No. 1 is the forerunner of a fleet of high-speed commuter-tourist vessels. It is propelled by a waterjet system and can cruise at 45 knots (51.8 miles per hour) above waves up to 12 feet high. The first ships will go to the Hawaiian and Hong Kong areas. (AP Wirephoto)

J. M. McDonald, Former Manager Of KCRS, Dies

MISSION — J. M. McDonald, former manager of KCRS Radio Station in Midland and first president of Texas Association of Broadcasters, died here Friday at age 69.

Funeral services were held at First Presbyterian Church here Saturday afternoon and interment followed with Masonic rites at Laurel Hill Cemetery under direction of Virgil Wilson Funeral Home.

Services were conducted by the Rev. Butty Owen of Rio Grande Children's Home, of which McDonald was a director.

McDonald was manager of KCRS in Midland when the Texas Association of Broadcasters was formed and served as the organization's first president in 1950.

He moved from Midland to Edinburgh in 1955 and was manager of KURV Radio Station there until 1960 when he moved to Mission to become station manager for KIRT.

He served in that position for several years and then became executive director of the Mission Chamber of Commerce.

He retired last year.

Survivors include the widow, Mrs. Ina McDonald; a son, Jerry McDonald of Fort Worth; two brothers; a sister; and three grandchildren.

Memorials may be made to Rio Grande Children's Home.

Infants' Kidney Cancer Soon May Be Wiped Out

HOUSTON (AP) — A kidney cancer which usually strikes babies by the age of 2 is on the verge of being wiped out, a New York specialist says.

Survival of children with Wilms' tumor is now up to 90 per cent compared to 10 to 20 per cent in the early 1960s, Dr. G. D'Angio of Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center said at the American Association for Cancer Research meeting which closed Saturday.

Doctors must now determine whether treatment for the tumor produces complications later, he said, D'Angio said.

A cooperative study of children treated at 68 U.S. institutions is now underway, he said, sponsored by the American Academy of Pediatric.

D'Angio said surgery, followed by anticancer drugs and x-ray, has produced the impressive results.

"We are interested not just that children survive, but that they survive in normal health," he said.

Preliminary information from the study indicates that it may no longer be necessary to treat every child with x-rays.

Nothing disastrous happened to children who did not get the x-ray treatment when the tumor was confined to one kidney, he said.

A combination of two drugs, actinomycin D and vincristine, is more effective in stopping undetected spread of the disease than either drug used alone, he added.

The study shows that persons who had the tumor must have regular checkups because belated complications sometimes occur, D'Angio said.

Doctors hope to assure such patients as another survivors have an increased risk of developing a second tumor and whether present treatment affects childbearing ability of the survivors, he added.

Flames Rip Unit In Texaco Plant At Port Arthur

PORT ARTHUR, Tex. (AP) — A fire which erupted at the huge Texaco plant about 11 p.m. Friday was extinguished about 1:30 a.m. Saturday.

No one was injured and only one still was affected.

Texaco officials said the cause of the fire and extent of damage to the automated unit could not be determined immediately.

Workmen were allowing the still to cool before starting repairs.

A Texaco spokesman said there will be no loss of gasoline production because of the blaze.

Although the fire was intense, no explosions occurred, said Texaco spokesmen. However, loud roars could be heard as pockets of petroleum caught fire.

Research Project On Birth Defects Sent To Conference

GIDDINGS — Becky Lieberman of Giddings sent a pioneering birth defects research project to the Westwold Conference on Man, His Energies and the Cosmos, held last week in London, England.

Mrs. Lieberman is the former Betty Gerald and daughter of Mrs. Rox Thompson of Midland.

Mrs. Lieberman, coordinator for the Birth Defect Research Project, was invited to participate in the conference by the Health For the New Age organization which is investigating unconventional medicine. The group is scientifically studying what happens in psychic healing, acupuncture, osteopathy, homeopathy and other relatively unknown techniques.

The Birth Defects Research Project group is gathering data on mothers of children with diagnosed Mongolism, Sudden Infant Death, Stillborns and other causes of infant mortality during the first year of life. The objectives of the group are to evaluate theories of the causes of these infant disabilities and to provide prevention methods.

In Czechoslovakia, these theories have proven valid in preventing birth defects and also as a natural method of birth control with no side effects and church approval.
