Nicaragua claims survivor U.S. adviser

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist government claimed a survivor from a downed rebel supply plane identified himself as a U.S. military adviser based in El Salvador and said the three dead crew members were Americans.

There was no U.S. confirmation of the crew members' identities, and U.S. embassies in Central America refused to comment.

The Sandinista newspaper Barricada today said the plane was "proof of the open participation of the United States in the war of aggression against Nicaragua."

"We now have Americans dying in Mr. Reagan's dirty war being waged against Nicaragua," Alejandro Bendana, secretary-general of the Foreign Ministry, claimed in an interview from Managua broadcast today on ABC's "Nightline."

"This brings us closer to a direct Nicaragua-United States confrontation," Bendana said.

"Nightline" reported that Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams denied the plane could have been a U.S. military aircraft because Congress has prohibited such aid to the Nicaraguan rebels, known as Contras. The United States supports the Contras and a bill authorizing $100 million in aid is pending in Congress.

Bendana later told ABC's "Good Morning America" "When we're talking about a U.S. plane, we're not saying it's a U.S. Army plane, but it's obviously a CIA operation with CIA operatives."

The United States stations 55 military advisers in nearby El Salvador to train its forces in putting down leftist rebels, but these advisers are banned from going into combat there. El Salvador is north of Nicaragua.

The Nicaraguan Defense Ministry said the plane, believed to have been a C-123 tactical transport, was shot down with a Soviet-made surface-to-air missile at 12:45 p.m. Sunday.

In a statement, the ministry said the plane carried at least 50,000 rounds of ammunition for AK-47 automatic rifles, dozens of rifles, an unspecified number of rocket-propelled grenades and other equipment for the Contras.

The statement said the surviving crew member identified himself as Eugene Hafenfuf, 35, and said he was a U.S. military adviser in El Salvador.

It said the survivor had identified the other crew members as Americans, but gave no further details about Hafenfuf, his whereabouts or about the three dead.

Presidential press secretary Manuel Espinoza said in a phone interview today that poor visibility prevented helicopters from reaching the crash site in heavy jungle about 35 miles north of Costa Rica and 91 miles southeast of Managua.

He said the survivor still was at the crash scene but would be brought to Managua as soon as possible.

In Washington, Maj. Eugenia Thornton, a Pentagon spokeswoman, said she had no report on the plane incident, no confirmation that it had occurred, and no identification of any individuals who might have been aboard such a flight.

Campaign 'bug' prompts probe

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — An electronic "bug" reportedly found in Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements' chief campaign strategist's office has prompted an investigation by state and federal law enforcement authorities.

"We have received a complaint and sent some of our people to investigate," Mike Cox, spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety, said Monday. "It was an operable, clandestine listening device."

"We're going to have a joint investigation," said Byron Sage, agent in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation's Austin office.

Karl Rove, a consultant who directs advertising, polling and campaign strategy for Clements' race against Democratic Gov. Mark White, said a Fort Worth firm found the bug during an electronic sweep of his Austin office around 7:45 p.m. Sunday. Rove and campaign manager George Bayoud "emphatically" denied that the Clements campaign had placed the bug and said they knew of no suspects.

"I do know for a fact certain who benefits most from the kind of knowledge that you'd get from listening in to my phone conversations and that's our political opposition," Rove said. "I'm not accusing anybody. I'm simply offering the very strong observation that our political opposition would benefit from hearing phone conversations that they would hear by having that bug four feet away from my desk."

White campaign spokesman Mark McKinnon denied any links to the listening device.

OPEC anticipating renewal of controls

GENEVA (AP) — Several OPEC leaders predicted Monday that the cartel would renew a temporary agreement on production controls that has pushed oil prices up by 50 percent since August.

On the opening day of a special conference to review the accord, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries also exhorted non-OPEC producers to shoulder some of the burden of pushing prices higher.

Industry analysts say an extension of the cartel's 2-month-old, temporary accord probably would mean stable, or possibly slightly higher, oil prices through the end of the year.

Oil prices rose in reaction to the OPEC developments. On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the November-delivery price for the benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude increased 11 cents to $14.98 per standard 42-gallon barrel.

The oil ministers met twice for a total of about two and a half hours and said they would resume deliberations Tuesday.

James Audu, a cartel spokesman, told reporters after Monday's evening session that the ministers had heard a report on individual members' production levels.

He said there were a few violations of production quotas, but violators had "pledged to work within their quotas" in the future. He refused to identify the violators.

United Express to offer area three daily flights to Denver

By ED TODD

A new airline — United Express — to fly into Midland on Nov. 24 will offer three daily flights to Denver, Colo., and nationwide connections through its marketing partner, United Airlines.

"We've looked at this market for quite a period of time," United Express President Gerald B. Hickman of Denver said Monday at Midland Regional Airport. "This is an opportune time for us to provide service... and a good market. We want all you Texans to come up (to Colorado) and see the snow."

Currently, no direct commercial flights between Midland and Denver are in operation here since Frontier Airlines ceased flights in August.

Debate focuses on cuts

HOUSTON (AP) — Gov. Mark White accused challenger Bill Clements of hiding and Clements accused White of showboating as the pair concentrated on Texas' ailing economy in an hour-long debate.

The two squared off Monday for their first and perhaps only face-to-face confrontation before the Nov. 4 election.

They broke little new ground while answering questions about taxes and budget cuts, prisons, college tuition and utility rates. Most of their responses to questions from a three-member panel of reporters, however, returned to the theme of economic woes.

"He's a show horse and I'm a work horse," Clements said. "I have a proven record. My only purpose is to help guide Texas through this difficult period. Mark White is the candidate who will say and do whatever it takes to get a vote."

White, meanwhile, said Clements had no plan to deal with the state's budget deficit and was not present when he and the Legislature hammered out a tax boost and budget cut program to culminate a second special legislative session.

"He hid out, he dropped out," White said. "Frankly, he wasn't there to debate the issue."

"Bill Clements, I don't know where you were when we needed you."

Both candidates said afterward they believed they performed well in the session, broadcast around the state from Houston television station KPRC.

"Overall, I wanted to stay with the facts," Clements said. "I did very good, fine. I'm delighted."

White said he wished he had more time but also said was pleased.

While Clements' aides hustled the candidate away from reporters following the debate, White answered several questions and continued to defend his record.

"Nobody likes to raise taxes, but the fact is we either did that or we'd cut into education, cut highways. He attacks me for building revenues that go into highways and improving our schools. The reverse is to take revenues out of those. The guy talks around the issues and never gets down to how you get to balancing the budget."

White, the Democratic incumbent, insisted the state's economic problems were triggered by plunging oil prices.

Local reaction to debate predictable

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Supporters of Gov. Mark White and challenger Bill Clements today were praising the performance of their respective candidates and criticizing the opposition after an hour-long debate Monday that concentrated on Texas' ailing economy.

The two squared off for their first and perhaps only face-to-face confrontation before the Nov. 4 election.

"I found (White) to be rather on the defensive and not very optimistic about the future of Texas," Midland County Republican Party chairman Dean Rucker said.

"He blamed the shortcomings of his administration on the price of oil when, in fact, it is clearly a lack of his leadership."

Janet Massey, Midland County Democratic Party Chairman, said Clements "insulted the voters in West Texas when he said the price of oil is not the issue" in triggering the state's economic problems.

"Everyone in Midland knows what the price of oil is and state of the economy and what it was prior to that," Ms. Massey said.

Rucker said White "stumbled and appeared to be taken very much off guard" after being asked by one of the three media panelists why he was unable to persuade the Legislature to pass deep spending cuts to alleviate the state's budget deficit.

"Bill Clements, on the other hand, showed us that he is the type of leader that Texas desparately needs," Rucker said.

He emphasized his strong business background, his excellent record as former governor and his ties with Washington as tools he would use in leading Texas to a strong and optimistic future."

Rucker said the debate will be "most helpful for people who had been indecisive in what direction they wanted to take this November and helped the undecided make up their minds in favor of Clements."

Regan sees Iceland talks as preparation for arms summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States could be prepared for a full-scale summit with the Soviet Union next month, especially if this weekend's arms-reduction talks between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev go well, presidential Chief of Staff Donald Regan said today.

Regan, interviewed on NBC-TV's "Today" show, said he expected Reagan and Gorbachev to meet face-to-face for several hours this Saturday and Sunday in Iceland, just as they did last year in Geneva.

The administration views the Reykjavik meetings as a preparation for a full-scale summit. Regan said it was possible — But not certain — that a date for the broader summit would be set at the Iceland meetings.

"That's possible but it could be that we would just say, well, let's see how our negotiators in Geneva get along with new instructions and, if they can come to some conclusions rather quickly, the date will be sooner rather than later," Regan said.

Asked if he anticipated a full-scale summit by the end of the year, Regan replied, "I would say that there will be a summit in the United States. When .... I don't know. We could be prepared for it as early as November or December, but the date itself is not important. The idea is can we actually get arms reduction."

President Regan has warned against "false hopes" of an arms control pact at the Iceland summit, while pledging no let-up in efforts to get the Soviets to grant human rights and stop their involvement in conflicts around the world.

"It would be simply unthinkable for world leaders to meet in splendid isolation even as the people of Afghanistan, Central America, Africa and Southeast Asia undergo terrible suffering as a result of Soviet intervention," Reagan told a business group at the White House on Monday.

The president called the Iceland meetings "a base camp before the summit" and not the occasion for "treaty signing and publicity."

"I expect these talks to be useful and successful, but only as preparation for future summit conferences," he said.

There were other U.S. developments on the road to the summit.

—In keeping with the U.S. view that the summit will be all work and no socializing, Nancy Reagan said she won't go to Iceland, even though Gorbachev's wife, Raisa, will be there.

—Leaders of the anti-nuclear group SANE and other Western peace activists said they will fly to Iceland to try to press their case with both delegations, but acknowledged that the short notice and the complicated logistics would keep their numbers small.

—Secretary of State George P. Shultz made plans to go directly from the summit to brief North Atlantic Treaty Organization representatives on what happens at Reagan-Gorbachev meetings.

—House Democrats heeded Reagan's plea and said they would soften budget restrictions on his arms buildup to show Gorbachev that the entire U.S. government is united behind the president.

"I believe we will be able to find a way to compromise," House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said. "We do not want to make his task more difficult. We want to make it easier."

The restrictions would limit spending for "Star Wars" anti-missile research; ban production of chemical weapons; halt U.S. nuclear tests as long as the Soviets continue their test moratorium; continue a ban on anti-satellite (ASAT) tests as long as the Soviets maintain their ASAT test ban; and require continued U.S. adherence to the unratified SALT II nuclear arms treaty, if the Soviets did likewise.

With three days left before his departure for Reykjavik on Thursday, Reagan appeared eager to play down reports from Washington and Moscow that only a narrow gulf separates the two sides from agreement to reduce medium range missiles in Europe — one of the major arms control issues of the 1980s.

When U.S.-Soviet negotiations began in 1981, the United States insisted on forging ahead with deployment of 572 Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Europe unless the Soviet withdrew its entire force of hundreds of roughly comparable SS-20 missiles.

In response, not only did the Soviets say they would keep their SS-20s, but said French and British missiles would have to be part of any eventual reduction deal.

At least seven persons injured in Houston Ship Channel fire

HOUSTON (AP) — A fire and two explosions at the Houston Ship Channel early today injured at least seven people and forced the U.S. Coast Guard to close a mile-long stretch of the facility.

The fire started at the Barge Hollywood 3003, which was carrying methyl tertiary butyl ether, a gasoline additive that creates an intense flame, said Coast Guard Ensign Lia Debettencourt.

"The fire is still going on at this time but appears to be contained," said Steven Miles, president of the Intercontinental Terminals Co., where the blaze began.

A crew member was critically injured and taken to Hermann Hospital, said Ms. Debettencourt. Paul Simpson, 22, sustained burns over 75 percent of his body; said a hospital clerk who declined to give her name.

Four firefighters from Intercontinental Terminals who fought the blaze also were injured but not as seriously, Ms. Debettencourt said. They suffered first-and second-degree burns and are in satisfactory condition at Humana Hospital Southmore, hospital spokesman Walter Leleux said.

Two other workers were retreated and released, he said.

A worker on another barge jumped into the water when the fire started and was rescued uninjured, the Coast Guard spokeswoman said.

Witnesses said the explosions occurred just before 4 a.m. and then at 5 a.m. during the fire.

Workers were loading the barge when the fire began, officials said.

Audu said the ministers on Tuesday would begin detailed discussion of whether to extend the temporary production controls or try to agree on a permanent system with new quotas for each member.

Since the 13-nation cartel agreed on Aug. 5 to pull about 4 million barrels a day off the world market, to a total of 16.8 million barrels, prices have risen from less than $10 a barrel to more than $14 in recent weeks. OPEC's stated objective is to drive prices to a range of $17-$19 a barrel.

The production accord, engineered by Iran, is due to expire Oct. 31.

But Iranian Oil Minister Gholamreza Aghazadeh told reporters at the largely ceremonial opening session he believed OPEC would agree to extend the temporary controls.

U.S. won't try to recover submarine

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has no plans to attempt the recovery of a Russian nuclear submarine lying 3½ miles beneath the Atlantic and doesn't believe the Soviet Union could raise the vessel either, Pentagon officials say.

Moreover, because of the age of the vessel, there is little of any military significance to be learned by raising it, the officials added.

"It would be quite a feat (to raise it)," Vice. Adm. Powell F. Carter Jr., the staff director for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said in a briefing Monday. "I don't think you could."

Carter and Lt. Gen. Richard A. Burpee, director of operations for the joint staff, discussed the fate of the Yankee-class submarine after the Pentagon announced it had sunk more than 1,000 miles east of North Carolina before dawn Monday.

Its crew having abandoned ship for a nearby Soviet merchant vessel, the sub sank to "a fairly rocky area" about 18,000 feet below the ocean's surface, Carter said.

The sub was believed to have carried 16 nuclear-tipped missiles and was powered by two nuclear reactors. The warheads atop one of those missiles could very well have been blown into the sea and sank when the submarine experienced a fire and explosion while submerged on Friday, Carter said.

Asked if the sunken submarine posed a threat to the environment, Carter responded: "Really, if you're talking about radioactivity or a nuclear explosion, none."

Burpee said the United States had already conducted some sampling in the vicinity of the sunken submarine "and the initial or preliminary results of the air sampling and the water sampling have proved negative results."

Brian Gorman, a spokesman for the National Marine Fisheries Service in the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said the possible effects on marine life are minimal at that distance and depth.

"Even if there were some damage to the reactor containment vessel, you've got such an enormous volume of water compared with a relatively miniscule amount of potential radioactivity, there would be almost no effect on the environment," Gorman said.

The sinking was observed by a U.S. Navy P-3 Orion reconnaissance plane and later confirmed by the Soviet news agency Tass. Three men were killed in the initial fire Friday but the remainder of the ship's crew escaped, Tass said.

Carter said the submarine was believed to have carried a crew of 120. He said the Pentagon had no reason to doubt the Soviet casualty count.

Asked Monday if the United States might attempt to retrieve the submarine, Burpee replied: "No, that's a Soviet responsibility if they want to recover it."

"Although I'm not an expert in international law or law of salvage, my basic understanding is unless you abandon a site of a wreck it still belongs to whoever owned it originally," Carter added.

"It hasn't been abandoned yet. Their (merchant) ships are still in sight. What happens from now on will be up to the Soviet government."

The admiral said that the Yankee submarines were first introduced by the Soviets in the mid-1960s, and there would be little reason to attempt to raise the one that sank.

"As you know, the Yankee-class submarine is an old class of submarine. They have been slowly cutting them up to comply with the SALT agreements. It's not a setback for the Soviet navy (to lose it)."

Asked then if the United States had learned anything of value in monitoring the circumstances surrounding the sub's loss, Carter concluded: "No, I don't think anything of any military significance."

Carter noted Monday the United States and Soviet Union both possess small submersible vessels capable of diving to such depths.

A Pentagon official who requested anonymity added, though, the Soviets are not thought to possess a boat capable of lifting something as large as a submarine from 18,000 feet.

The United States owns a vessel that has attempted such deep recoveries in the past. The Glomar Explorer, built in secret in 1972, was used in 1974 to recover pieces of another Soviet submarine that sank in the Pacific not far from Hawaii.

Although the Glomar Explorer reportedly has operated at depths up to 18,000 feet, that ship is now in mothballs on the West Coast.

Carter and Burpee said a Soviet merchant ship had given up trying to tow the stricken submarine shortly after midnight.

"The ship that was towing it was a Soviet merchant ship which is clearly not designed for a towing operation," Burpee said. "So they stopped the towing at about 12:20 a.m. (EDT) and about 1:30 our P-3 notified us that the sub was getting lower in the water.

"Obviously it was starting to fill with water, and then about 3:30, we had a notice from the airplane that the life boats were out and survivors were coming out of the sub and being transferred in life boats. And then at 4 o'clock the submarine sank," Burpee said.

Observers believe debate had little swaying power

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White kept his natural constituency happy, as did his Republican challenger Bill Clements, and political observers turned off Monday's televised debate thinking neither candidates had swayed many voters.

"I've seen better performances by the governer, I've seen better performances by Clements," said Richard Murray, a political scientist at the University of Houston who specializes in polling and Texas campaigns. "I think both candidates were a little less effective than they could have been and let some opportunities go by.

"I don't think it was a decisive event one way or the other," Murray said after the debate.

Robert Jeffrey, dean of the University of Texas' School of Communications, also called the debate a near-draw, with White narrowly beating Clements by his superior oration.

"I think White stated his position a little better than Clements stated his position, but I really didn't hear anything positive," said Jeffrey, an expert in speech communication.

Jeffrey agreed with Murray that the debate would cause little if any shift in public opinion. White played up his advocacy of poor, hadicapped and elderly people, while former Gov. Clements keyed on his business accomplishments and his fiscal initiatives, Murray and Jeffrey said. Clements already had the support of most no-new-taxes fiscal conservatives, they said, and White already had support from those concerned about deep budget cuts and the effects on the poor.

"It may be an underlying strategy that, in this off-year election, each candidate went back to their basic constituency," Murray said. "I saw nothing from Clements that was intended to reach out to lower-income voters or traditional Democratic constituencies.

"White, conversly, didn't do much on education-reform issues that play well with upper-income voters but talked a lot about human needs," he said. "Neither candidate dealt well with their weaknesses."

Jeffrey said the uneventful debate would not help either candidate woo undecided voters. "I'm not sure either one made any inroads into the other's campaign," he said. "It's a colorless race in many ways, and this debate didn't change that perception much."

DEBATE

Clements, the Republican who lost to White four years ago, insisted the role of oil was minor and instead accused White of having a tax-and-spend mentality.

Numerous polls gave Clements a wide lead over the incumbent earlier this year. White, however, has closed the gap, with one recent poll showing the race virtually a dead heat.

"The fact of the matter, tax revenues are down today," White said. "You've seen the price of oil. It's down, not up. He (Clements) shouldn't mislead the people of this state. Bill, you know it, too."

"The price of oil is not really not the issue at all," Clements retorted. "Let's talk about the slice of the pie in the budget. Oil tax revenues represent only 8 cents of every tax dollar."

Clements attacked White for increasing taxes and allowing utility rates to increase, saying the Democrat four years ago had promised not to do so.

"He promised to not raise taxes and he did — the largest in history," Clements said. "He promised not to raise taxes. It's up 400 percent. He promised not to raise utility bills, not to raise the gasoline tax. This just goes on and on and on."

White said if taxes weren't raised, meals would be cut out for children and senior citizens, and health care for senior citizens would have been slashed, along with teacher salaries and school hours.

Asked where he would make cuts, Clements said they would come from luxury items in various state agencies.

"There's a full menu that tells you spending is totally out of control," Clements said. "What we need to do is get back to basics."

Other questions dealt with utility rates, prisons and Clements ties to Schlumberger, an oil firm that does business in Libya.

"I can't believe this has become in an issue in this campaign," Clements said.

White said the prison crowding problem was a direct result of Clements' veto of a prison construction plan during the Republican's term in office. Clements said White's statements about increasing prison bed space was a result of programs implemented during his own administration.

White insisted utilty bills are down and challenged Clements to check his personal electric bills. Clements said he did and found them more than 23 percent higher than 1983.

On the tuition question, White defended increases in rates at state colleges, saying anyone who wanted a college education could get one because grants remained available to assist students.

In his closing statement, White repeated his efforts to improve education and highways, water resources and care of the elderly.

"Everything we've done has been designed to save vital programs. Even in tough times, living in Texas is better than living anywhere else in good times," he said.

Clements, in his final remarks, described himself as a poor boy who started out in the oil fields and White as a professional politician who has all the rhetoric down.

Ms. Massey said both candidates broke little new ground while answering questions about taxes and budget cuts, prisons, college tuition and utility rates.

She said she was most impressed with White's response to the state's economic woes.

"I am, after the debate, proud of Gov. White and what he stands for and I believe after seeing the debate, the citzens will be proud like I am," she said.

"I think Gov. White came through as a governor should. I admire him for taking the unpopular stand of having to raise taxes.

"I believe that the people of Texas agree that money is not everything and that they'll be able to hold up their heads up knowing they've helped" the aged, handicapped and other fellow Texans, she said.

BUG

"If they found a bug, it's a serious matter, but if they're blaming us, it's a bunch of bull," McKinnon said. "It's absolutely outrageous to insinuate that the Mark White campaign had anything to do with it."

Rove and Bayoud said they arranged for the electronic sweep because of "bouts of paranoia" over "a disturbing number of instances in which closely held, privately held information was becoming a matter of public record."

At first, Rove said, he suspected "we had a problem with somebody inside the campaign simply overhearing things and talking out of school." He and Bayoud decided to order the search after details of a private phone conversation "were out in the street as public discussion."

Rove pointed to two specific topics — the possible hiring of Washington political consultant Lee Atwater and an increase in media purchases — discussed only in a phone conversation he had with Bayoud on Sept. 29. The next day, Rove said, campaign press secretary Reggie Bashur told him "an individual in Austin" asked him to verify those two facts.

"The information that I received from that individual, I was asked by that individual not to go into any kind of detail as to who it was, to what profession he or she was in or anything," Bashur said Monday. "I have to fullfill that request."

Rove said he turned that individual's name over to the DPS and FBI.

A receptionist at Knight Diversified Services, the firm that conducted the search, said the company would not comment on what it found. Rove said the FBI had the bug, and he distributed photographs of the device.

Rove said the search crew found the bug — "It looks like a black matchbook, then it has a wire off of it, which is the antenna" — attached to the back of a small needlepoint picture of a Republican elephant on a wall near his desk. He said he did not notice the bug on the picture when he temporarily removed it for possible replacement in early August.

Bayoud said investigators told him the device could transmit up to a half mile. Rove said the battery on the bug was low and had a minimum operating of life of three to four days. He said his West Austin office had had no recent break-ins and that a cleaning crew and his 13-person staff had access to his private office.

The two men said Knight found no bugs in the main Clements headquarters in downtown Austin.

Rove also provides direct-mail consultation work for several museums and conservation groups, for U.S. Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, for Republican congressional candidate Lamar Smith of San Antonio and for three out-of-state Republican senatorial candidates.

"We're talking about a difference in degree of information," Rove said when asked if the bug could be connected to those other campaigns.

"For Lamar Smith or Joe Barton, you would know how many pieces of mail we dropped," he said. "But for Bill Clements you would know the results of his latest poll or the amount of advertising he was placing or what the content or nature of the next spot would be. I would find it hard to believe that this was aimed at collecting information for candidates outside of this gubernatorial" race.

Rove said the FBI and DPS took the picture and the bug and dusted his office for fingerprints. Bayoud said he expects progress within "the next few weeks."

FBI and DPS officials would provide no details other than to confirm that they were investigating the matter.

The federal "interception of communications" statute gives the FBI jurisidiction in the case, FBI agent Sage said. That statute provides a maximum penalty of five years in prison and/or a $10,000 fine for someone convicted of intercepting or attempting to intercept a converation with an electronic listening device.

AIRLINE

"We are really proud and happy to be here today," Hickman said. "We think we can provide a good product for you."

Hickman projected between 1,500 and 2,000 monthly Midland-to-Denver boardings on its 86-passenger wide-bodied British Aerospace 146 jet airliner. The airliner has six-abreast seating.

"There's a ready-made market out there," said Victor White, director of airports for the city of Midland. "People are hungry for Denver."

The four-engine jet, which is billed as the "world's quietest airplane," is the "only jet capable" of flying into and out of the airport at Aspen, a ski resort frequented by Midlanders.

"We would love to provide nonstop service from Midland to Aspen," said Patricia A. Lee, United Express vice president of marketing.

The airline currently serves Denver from Aspen, Colorado Springs, Durango, Gunnison and Montrose, Colo.; Farmington, N.M.; Amarillo and Lubbock; and Sheridan, Cody, Cheyenne and Gillette, Wyo.

The Midland-Denver flights will include stopovers at Lubbock and Amarillo.

United Express flights from Midland are to depart at 6:44 a.m., 10:25 a.m. and 3:20 p.m. From Denver, flights are to leave at 7 a.m., 11:55 a.m. and 6:45 p.m.

Fares between Midland and Denver are as low at $109 one way.

Midland city and Chamber of Commerce officials expressed enthusiasm over the inauguration of United Express Midland-to-Denver flights.

"I'm thrilled that they are here," Joe Kloesel, the chamber's executive vice president, said of United Express. "We need that service (to Denver), and I think they will be successful."

Ed Vogler, chairman of the Midland Airport Board, said that the service is "definitely needed." In 1983, Midland lost direct flights to Denver when Continental Airlines pulled out of Midland. However, Frontier Airlines that year filled the Midland-to-Denver void.

Vogler, who said that the British Aerospace 146 "is one of the best airplanes flying," said he has flown the aircraft in Europe.

Midland Councilwoman Katie Heck, who recently returned to Midland, said that she had seen the aircraft in Washington, D.C., and "admired the configuration."

"It's such marvelous news," she said of United Express flights to Midland. Ms. Heck said United Express was "too big and too smart to come into a market when they would lose money."

City Manager Jim Brown said he was "very happy" over the Midland-to-Denver service. "This gives us different avenues of travel."

United Express, which is operated by the Denver-based and family-owned Aspen Airways, has a marketing agreement with United Airlines.

"It's a better alternative for your travelers, especially those Westbound," said Ann P. Ward, United Airlines senior sales representative. United Airlines serves the 50 U.S. states.

United Express aircraft will be painted in colors similar to that of United Airlines and will offer Mileage Plus, United Airlines' frequent-flier program. United Express passengers will be afforded advance check-in and advance seat assignments.

United Express, through Aspen Airways, operates three BAe-146 airliners as well as the 50-passenger Convair 580 turboprop aircraft.

The BAe-146 is a high-wing aircraft which is powered by four Avco Lycoming turbofans and has a cruising speed of 425 knots and a maximum speed of Mach 0.7. Hickman said the aircraft is fuel efficient and has quiet, non-polluting engines.

Aspen Airways was launched in 1953 as an air taxi and became an air carrier in 1967.

Military advisors in El Salvador 'training selves out of job'

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — An unofficial motto of U.S. military advisers in El Salvador has come to be, "Train ourselves out of a job." They think they are succeeding.

"I can remember when this place was considered a lost cause," said one of the 55 U.S. military advisers training El Salvador's soldiers, sailors and airmen.

The government forces now hold the upper hand in the battlefield against leftist guerrillas. It wasn't like that five years ago when the Americans began arriving amid cries that their presence was the first step toward direct U.S. troop intervention in this Central American nation.

"There was a lot of concern there would be another Vietnam," said an officer of the U.S. Southern Command based in Panama.

"So we set a limit of 55 trainers, and as it turns out it's been an excellent success, with the Salvadorans becoming really self-sufficient."

The Americans say their job is to "train the trainers" and in doing so "train ourselves out of a job." They say the progress they have made is indicated by the progress of the Salvadoran armed forces in holding the edge in the guerrilla war that now is nearing its seventh year.

When U.S. military advisers first arrived the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front guerrillas posed a serious threat to the country and a government military force accustomed to fighting only on a 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. basis.

The Associated Press conducted about 25 interviews with U.S. military personnel in El Salvador, Honduras and Panama on the status of the American training mission here. Because of the sensitive nature of their work and the security threats here, they insisted they not be identified.

Salvadoran authorities praise the relationship with the Americans.

"The American advisers are quite good," said the former head of the recruit training school, Col. Joaquin Cerna Flores. "Without them, we wouldn't be at the level we are now. And we're going to get better."

Three-man U.S. teams are assigned to each of El Salvador's six military bases. Other Americans work with the navy, the air force and the joint chiefs of staff.

Activist says officials accept proposal allowing Jewish campaigners in summit

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — An American Jewish activist said today that Icelandic officials accepted his compromise proposal that would allow 10 U.S. Jewish campaigners into the country for the weekend superpower summit.

Jerry Strober, spokesman for the National Conference on Soviet Jewry, said the government informed him that it agreed to a proposal whereby the group's size was scaled down and would mount no public demonstrations. Instead, they would hold a news conference about the plight of Soviet Jewry.

This followed what Strober called "a most constructive conversation" with Thorsteinn Geirsson, secretary of state at the Icelandic Justice Ministry.

On Monday, Strober said he had been refused permission to fly in a chartered plane carrying 50 U.S. Jewish leaders who wanted to hold a silent vigil on Friday at the place where President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev will have talks Saturday and Sunday.

But Strober today said his group, trimmed to 10 members, would arrive Friday and leave the same day. He told The Associated Press he would have talks with Icelandic officials later to work out the details.

"We believe that the proposal would satisfy what we would like to accomplish here, and at the same time would allow the government of Iceland to accomplish its mission, which obviously is to provide security and a peaceful setting for this meeting," said Strober, standing with Geirsson and talking to reporters.

"Here in Iceland we have a very small police force," Geirsson said, without commenting directly on Strober's proposal.

Geirsson said Iceland could cope with the meeting and the leaders security "but if we have to cope with a lot of meetings by foreigners whom the police don't know, all about town, anyone can see that the police will have difficulties in accomplishing the task," he said.

Several protest groups from Europe and the United States are known to be seeking to enter Iceland for the summit, including the Greenpeace environmental organization, which has dispatched a ship from Amsterdam to Iceland, and anti-nuclear activists.

However, the number of groups seeking to come to Iceland is not as great as might be because the summit was only announced last week and there is a shortage of accommodations here.

Steingrimur Hermannsson, Iceland's prime minister, appealed to the protest groups to stay away during the summit meetings Saturday and Sunday, saying Reagan and Gorbachev need peace and quiet for their talks.

Iceland has issued emergency regulations requiring non-scheduled flights to obtain landing rights 24 hours in advance, and foreigners to have accommodation booked in advance — a difficult task because hotels are swamped with summit officials and journalists.

Hermannsson said in an interview with the AP that if visitors fulfilled the requirements, "I don't see how we can stop them. This is a free country." He was interviewed before Strober's mission became public knowledge.

The prime minister said U.S. and Soviet officials scouting Reykjavik, Iceland's capital, for suitable meeting places had indicated to him they wanted demonstrators kept away. But neither side had made any demands, he said.

"They stressed they would appreciate that no outside disturbance be allowed," he said.

Many of Iceland's 240,000 citizens rankle at what they see as their government compromising cherished civil liberties to suit the superpowers.

Morgunbladid, the country's most prestigious newspaper, commented Sunday: "Obstructions like these have been like poison to Icelanders and hopefully they still are."

On last of four-day visit, Pope urges priests, nuns to keep firm

ANNECY, France (AP) — Pope John Paul II today hammered home his urgent call to Roman Catholic priests and nuns to remain firm in their religious beliefs, saying the church "counts on your loyalty."

The leader of the world's 800 million Catholics arrived in this lakeside city in the Alps on the last day of his four-day visit to France.

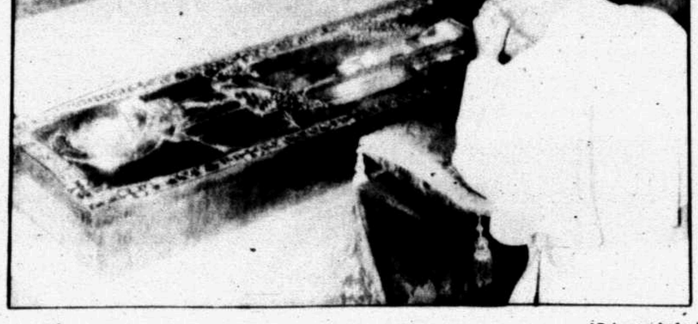

Once again he invoked the example of a French saint, St. Francis de Sales, as a means to inspire a French church that is weakening steadily and losing its clergy.

"I would like to say again how much all of the church counts on your loyalty to the praise of God...and on your constant action," the 66-year-old pontiff told an early morning gathering of nuns and priests at the Basilica of the Visitation in Annecy, where St. Francis de Sales was bishop in the 16th century.

Mass was said in an open park on the lake before an estimated 80,000 people.

Most of Monday's activities also were devoted to what the pontiff said was the urgent need for a revival of the faith in France.

"In a world where bad morals are justified by pretexts that serve certain causes, the Christian must continue to call evil that which is evil, never accepting that the end justifies immoral or terrorist means," the pontiff told religious and lay officials at a seminary outside Lyon Monday night.

WORLD in brief

Second TV station will serve three largest cities

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Turkey inaugurated a second television channel this week that will initially serve the three largest cities of the country.

Officials of the state-run Turkish Radio and Television Corporation, which controls both channels, said the channel that went on the air Monday will broadcast programs with emphasis on cultural events.

They said it will also broadcast, for the first time in Turkey, an English-language nightly news bulletin.

The second channel's programs are being developed by Istanbul television studios and have an initial target audience of 12 million people in Turkey's three largest cities, Istanbul, Ankara and Izmir.

Television broadcasting began in Turkey in 1968.

In 1983 the first channel went to color, and Turkey now has 2.6 million color and 6.7 million black-and-white sets for a population of 52 million, according to official figures.

Weekly Dutch Pravda folds

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The Dutch-language edition of the Soviet newspaper Pravda has folded after only five issues because of a dramatic drop in circulation, its publisher said.

The Dutch Pravda, a weekly edition that hit newsstands for the first time on Sept. 4, was published for the last time last week, said Vincent Steinmetz, the Dutch partner in a joint venture with the British publishing house Arromail.

The press run of the last issue numbered only 30,000, compared to 150,000 for the first, Steinmetz said Monday, refusing to reveal sales figures.

The Dutch-language Pravda, which was also sold in Belgium, was a compilation of news, feature stories and photographs from the Soviet Communist Party daily.

It was translated from a similarly edited English-language edition produced in Britain. Local-language editions of Pravda also appear regularly in Spain and the United States.

Italians freed during night

ROME (AP) — Libya freed four Italians during the night in exchange for three Libyans convicted of killing or trying to kill fellow Libyans in Italy, the Foreign Ministry announced today.

An International Red Cross plane flew the Italians to Rome, the Foreign Ministry said.

The Libyans left Italy late Monday, but it was not immediately clear whether they also were flown home aboard a Red Cross plane.

Two of the Italians had been held since 1980 and sentenced to life on charges of plotting against Libya. The other two were serving 10-year sentences for drug possession.

The Foreign Ministry identified the freed Italians as Bruno Castelli and Edoardo Seliciato, who were arrested in August 1980 on charges of participating in a plot against the security of Libya, and Mauro Piccin and Massimo Caporali, held on drug charges.

In exchange for their freedom, Italy granted pardons to Jussef Uhida, sentenced to 26 years imprisonment for killing a fellow Libyan in 1980, and to Mohammed Sidki Sajed Dous and Juma Mohammed Ali Mezdawi, sentenced to 14 years and 11 months each for trying to kill a Libyan government opponent in 1983.

The Foreign Ministry said Castelli and Seliciato were both in poor health and that their families had been appealing to Libya for some time to release them on humanitarian grounds.

Bermuda assured they're not threatened by radioactivity

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — The government assured Bermuda's residents Monday that they are not threatened by radioactive pollution from the crippled Soviet nuclear-powered submarine that sank about 600 miles offshore.

John Swan, premier of this British colony, said: "We have been in touch with British authorities and have been assured that there is absolutely no danger of a radioactive leak.

"In addition, a spokesman from the Defense Department in Washington says the U.S. has been monitoring the area near the submarine and has detected no radiation at all," he said in a statement.

The official Soviet news agency Tass reported that the submarine sank to a great depth in the Atlantic on Monday, three days after a devastating fire killed three of its crew.

The agency also said the nuclear reactor powering the vessel was shut down and that specialists determined no danger existed of a nuclear blast or radioactive contamination of the environment.

Swan rejected demands from opposition leaders that a task force be created to counteract adverse publicity surrounding the sinking.

The opposition politicians had claimed that Bermuda's fragile tourism industry would suffer because the Atlantic island colony's name was being used to pinpoint the last known postion of the submarine.

But Swan said: "It would be premature to counter such fears when they do not exist."

Sub sinking 'not likely' to weaken Soviet hand

By BRYAN BRUMLEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sinking of a Soviet submarine may cause Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev slight embarrassment when he meets in Iceland with President Reagan, but is not likely to weaken the Soviet hand in arms talks, U.S. observers say.

"It was an accident," said one State Department official. "There was no malicious intent here."

"It does not compare with the Korean airliner or Chernobyl," he said, referring to the downing by the Soviets of a civilian plane with 269 aboard on Sept. 1, 1983, or the nuclear reactor accident which claimed 31 lives and spewed radiation over Europe five months ago.

By Saturday, when Reagan and Gorbachev open their talks, "it will probably be forgotten, as long as there is no radiation leak," said the official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Pentagon officials said radiation was unlikely to leak from the Yankee-class submarine, which sank Monday in 18,000 feet of water 1,040 nautical miles off North Carolina. Submarines of that class can carry 16 nuclear-tipped missiles and are driven by atomic reactors.

Reagan is carrying some embarrassing baggage of his own to Reykjavik, including last week's vote by Congress to tighten sanctions against South Africa, overriding his veto. Secretary of State George P. Shultz had pleaded with the Senate to sustain the veto to avoid just such a pre-summit defeat on a foreign policy issue.

And in a speech Saturday, Reagan accused the Democrat-dominated House of giving away U.S. bargaining chips by freezing research funds for the "Star Wars" anti-missile program; requiring compliance with the unratified SALT II arms accord; and ordering moratoriums on tests of nuclear and anti-satellite weapons and production of chemical weapons.

"Every single one of these issues is under discussion with the Soviets," Reagan said in his weekly radio address on Saturday.

"The Soviets must not think that delay could work to their advantage by gaining from Congress what they cannot win at the negotiating table," he said.

The Soviets have been dragging their feet in setting a date for a full-scale summit in the United States, as Gorbachev and Reagan agreed at their first meeting in Geneva last November.

Gorbachev has insisted that a major arms control agreement must come out of a summit in the United States, and he proposed the Reykjavik meeting to nudge that process along.

Facing criticism from Reagan and other Republicans, House Democrats groped for a compromise on Monday to remove the restrictions they placed on the Pentagon spending bill.

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., who pushed for the arms restrictions, said, "We don't want to do anything which would get us blamed for anything that happens in Iceland."

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said, "I believe we will be able to find a way to compromise. We do not want to make his task more difficult. We want to make it easier."

The Soviets appear to have made some compromises themselves to reduce the international impact of the submarine disaster.

The official Tass news agency carried the first dispatches Saturday on the accident and quickly reported the sinking Monday.

In contrast, Soviet officials waited three days to report the Chernobyl explosion and delayed their response to Western accusations that they shot down the Korean airliner without provocation. The Soviets claimed the United States sent the airliner over Soviet territory to gather intelligence.

Reagan administration officials lashed the Soviets publicly over the Chernobyl and the Korean incidents, and the Soviets responded that the United States was making propaganda out of misfortune.

The administration has been more circumspect in commenting on the submarine sinking, in part because Gorbachev notified Reagan through diplomatic channels soon after the initial accident, and in part because of the impending session in Reykjavik.

"I can't see it coming up at the meeting, except as a bad joke," said James P. Rubin, a spokesman for the Arms Control Association, a private group which has criticized Reagan for not reaching an arms accord with Moscow.

"If anything, the sinking sort of diminishes the Soviet threat, which has been stressed by the administration," Rubin said. "And Gorbachev will have 16 fewer missiles in his arsenal."

Congress pressing hard for arms control truce

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders are pressing hard for an arms control truce with President Reagan that would let him go to his U.S.-Soviet summit with the full backing of Congress — and put lawmakers on the road to adjournment.

The White House and Capitol Hill Republicans say House Democrats should agree to drop from a catchall spending bill a series of restrictions on Reagan's defense programs. They include limiting work on the "Star Wars" anti-missile system, a moratorium on nuclear weapons tests, a chemical weapons ban, and a requirement that the U.S. obey the unratified SALT II treaty.

The administration on Monday reiterated its position that the House provisions and approval of less Pentagon spending than the president wants would make the spending bill totally unacceptable.

But House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said Democrats were willing to soften their stance in light of Reagan's summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev beginning Saturday in Iceland.

"We do not want to make his task more difficult. We want to make it easier," Wright said.

He said some of the issues could be settled now and others postponed, perhaps until next spring.

The arms restrictions were attached by the House to a record $562 billion spending bill for fiscal 1987. The Senate's $556 billion version did not include those provisions.

Resolving the arms control disputes would remove a big hurdle in the race to approve the spending package and adjourn the 99th Congress. However, the administration had dozens of other objections which it repeated along with some new ones in a letter to Congress on Monday.

The spending package is needed for federal agencies to operate in the fiscal year that began Oct. 1. A government shutdown was averted last week only when Congress approved an emergency, stopgap spending bill.

However, the interim measure is due to expire at midnight Wednesday. Unless the final package is ready — which lawmakers said was unlikely — another stopgap bill will be required.

A House-Senate conference committee met formally Monday to begin resolving the differences between the two chambers.

Meanwhile, the Congressional Budget Office and the president's Office of Management and Budget reported Monday that the spending bill — although the largest on record — wouldn't keep Congress from meeting the limits of the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law.

However, Congress also must approve a companion deficit-reduction package which also is before a House-Senate conference committee.

Senate to decide Perkins' nomination to South Africa

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee is ready to recommend the Senate confirm Edward J. Perkins as the first black U.S. ambassador to South Africa.

Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., chairman of the panel's African subcommittee, said the Senate could act as early as Wednesday on the Perkins nomination.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., said he anticipated no serious opposition from the Democratic side, and Perkins said if confirmed he would take up his new post in Pretoria in November.

During testimony Monday, Perkins was asked whether he supports the sanctions approved by Congress and enacted into law over President Reagan's veto.

"It's not a question of whether I support the sanctions," he replied. "I support the law."

"The president himself has said the sanctions bill is now the law of the land," Perkins said.

Perkins, 58, said he will drop the use of the controversial phrase "constructive engagement" to describe Reagan administration policy toward South Africa.

He said he will expand contacts with all elements of South African society, black and white.

And he said he will, soon after his arrival, seek to meet with jailed black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela, whom Perkins called "a player" in South African politics.

Perkins, who most recently has served as U.S. ambassador to Liberia, said he hopes the fact he is black will serve "as a small example to South Africans of how a nation's strength may rest on its diversity."

And he appeared to suggest that his race may help open doors to South African blacks, saying in his opening statement that he intends to "listen carefully to the views of South Africans inside and outside the government."

"I think the United States ought to be a facilitator in the dismantling of the apartheid process if the South Africans want us," Perkins said.

DeLorean on trial for fraud, racketeering

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DETROIT — More than two years after he was acquitted in his celebrated drug-smuggling case in Los Angeles, former automaker John Z. DeLorean was back in federal court Monday, again confronting the prospect of a long and complex criminal trial and the threat of years behind bars.

After months of delays, jury selection began Monday in DeLorean's trial on fraud and racketeering charges stemming from his days as the flamboyant founder of a luxury sports car company. Jury selection in U.S. District Court here is expected to take two weeks, and potential jurors have been told that the trial itself could last up to two months.

More than a year ago, DeLorean, 61, was indicted by a federal grand jury on 15 counts of racketeering, fraud and tax violations for allegedly scheming to swindle about $8.9 million from the private investors in his defunct auto company in Northern Ireland. His trial was initially scheduled to open last April but was repeatedly delayed to give government prosecutors time to interview potential witnesses in Europe.

As he entered the courthouse in downtown Detroit Monday, DeLorean, who has pleaded not guilty to all the charges, complained that "they framed me in California and they're trying to do it here." Later in the day, however, he honored a gag order imposed by Judge Julian A. Cooke Jr., and refused to discuss the case with reporters as he left the court during an afternoon recess.

But Los Angeles attorney Howard Weitzman, who is again defending DeLorean after gaining his acquittal in the cocaine case, said that he was disappointed that the judge did not let attorneys for either the defense or the prosecution question potential jurors directly during Monday's initial screening process.

Government attorneys charge that, while he ran the DeLorean Motor Co., DeLorean set up a complex maze of corporate shells through which to embezzle millions of dollars of investors' funds. He raised about $18.8 million in research and development money from private investors, including entertainers like Sammy Davis Jr., and Roy Clark. However, prosecutors claim that about $8.9 million of those funds remain unaccounted for. The prosecution alleges that DeLorean used much of the money to purchase a profitable Utah company that manufactures snow-blowing equipment, while also spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on personal expenses.

Government attorneys charge that about $17.75 million earmarked for DeLorean's Michigan-based research and development subsidiary was channeled through a Panamanian company, called GPD Services, which supposedly had offices in Switzerland. GPD was supposed to turn the funds over to Lotus Cars Ltd. of England for engineering and development work on DeLorean's gull-winged sports cars. However, only about $137,000 ever stayed with Lotus. DeLorean, the government charges, instead siphoned much of the money out of GPD through other corporations in Europe. He used $8,375,000 to buy Logan Manufacturing Co., the Utah snow-grooming equipment maker, and another $534,000 for personal investments, the government's indictment charges.

A self-professed born-again Christian who is divorced from his wife, Los Angeles television talk show host Christina Ferrare, DeLorean has repeatedly insisted that the government's charges are false.

Society's problem

Babies having babies is the way the Rev. Jesse Jackson describes it, and for too many American teen-agers, it's an all too familiar phenomenon.

According to a new report from the Washington-based Children's Defense Fund, American teen-agers who are poor and who lack basic academic skills are almost six times more likely to become pregnant than their more affluent peers, regardless of race. Teens with similar family incomes and basic skills in reading and mathematics — whether white, black or Hispanic — have nearly identical rates of teen-age childbearing.

The report, "Preventing Adolescent Pregnancy: What Schools Can Do," also points out that:

— One in five poor teens with lower than average basic skills is a mother.

— Teens with poor basic skills are five times as likely to become mothers before age 16 as those with average basic skills.

— Eighteen- and 19-year-old women with poor basic skills are 2.5 times as likely to be mothers as are those with average basic skills.

— Eighteen- and 19-year-old men with poor basic skills are three times as likely to be fathers as are those with average basic skills.

It is not enough to decry the situation, nor is it enough to counsel caution. These teen-agers — these children — need basic skills, knowledge, increased self-esteem. They need exposure to a variety of adult roles and role models. They need basic opportunities for education, community participation and employment.

Though the schools can't do everything, they do have opportunities to give "at-risk youths" a better chance of delaying pregnancy, escaping poverty and becoming self-sufficient adults. The CDF report cites several key pregnancy prevention activities that schools can undertake.

A school, for example, can initiate early identification of at-risk youths, an effort that must begin before high school; build links with parents and community institutions; open school doors to resources young people need — health clinics, for example, or vocational-training programs; incorporate life planning and decision-making into school curricula; courses would include decision-making about sexuality and parenthood.

Addressing the problem of teen-age pregnancy is not easy. And, as the CDF report points out, providing teen-agers with better options goes beyond what happens at school.

A realistic approach to the problem means investing in health care — from prenatal care through birth and childhood. It means laying a strong foundation through early childhood development and then keeping children in school, learning and at grade level. Finally, it means preparing our young people for the world of work and making sure jobs are there for them.

Teen-age pregnancy effects all people in one way or another. It's a problem that demands our attention.

Strength from unity

It seems that rallies seeking support for one or another type of activity are becoming evermore popular. So it comes as no surprise that the "God and Country Rally" to be held this evening at Chaparral Center has been drawing enthusiastic support from a wide spectrum of Midlanders.

To a degree, that support was to be expected because, as is commonly known, the community is populated by people of strong patriotic views who will support without question any event seeking to garner that spirit.

But support for this rally is exceedingly good, we believe, because circumstances have molded enthusiasm for drawing together to seek strength as a means of overcoming forces that are seemingly uncontrollable. That's entirely good and appropriate because it is at times such as these that the residents of Midland or any community need to seek that which is good and the strengthening it gives.

Most Americans will agree that two of the most fundamental binding forces in their lives are their religion and their country. It is because of those forces in their lives that they are unified. The "God and Country Rally" is intended to garner the strength of that unity and to give the community the additional willpower that unity provides.

Perhaps it is trite to some but the "God and Country Rally" will help show that Midlanders believe they can overcome even forces that appear beyond their control. We believe we can.

Are drug rules wise?

I think it is about time that we took a long hard look at what our government and social leaders are doing. It seems we are in a training program for our children to be under a socialist government. I thought this was the land of the free!

I agree that we have a drug problem on and off our school campuses. I respect the fact that there should be no tobacco, drugs, etc. on school campus. But come on people, let's get real. Should the government or school board be allowed to dictate what we are allowed to do off campus?

I am upset with this proposal to punish our extracurricular students. Why single out the extracurricular students? If this proposal is to be fair, it should be for all students. Then let's go one step further to include teachers, administrators, cafeteria workers, janitors, and the school board members. Aren't they in our school system and the ones setting examples for our students?

I do not agree with the off campus and chosen few portion of this proposal. Let's face it. These children are our future leaders and what we dictate to them will come back to us.

Let buyers determine!

Some people are boycotting 7-Eleven because they've removed so-called pornographic magazines from their shelves. And others won't do business with Kent Oil because they won't remove them.

What a marvelous adversary situation! Come on, Midland, everybody ought to take a stand on this issue. And the buyers' plebescite will be obvious: the loser is the one who goes out of business first.

Vote with your dollars. Let's show that Midlanders have some cents!

White House pushing more U.N. waste

WASHINGTON — In a bizarre twist of policy that has outraged Ronald Reagan's most conservative fans, the White House is fighting to persuade Congress to give more money to the United Nations than it wants to.

Jack Anderson

The Reagan administration has long been at least a rhetorical repository of criticism aimed at the United Nations for its frequent anti-Americanism and its extravagant spending. So it is particularly discomfiting to hard-line Reagan supporters that the United States has actually been defending the U.N. wastrels against drastic budget cuts proposed by the Soviet Union. The main reason U.S. conservatives detest the United Nations is they believe that it is a Kremlin puppet.

All the partisan budgetary bickering has tended to obscure the incontestable fact that the United Nations is as irresponsible in its spending as in some of its political policies. The U.N. bureaucracy is dominated by representatives of small nations that contribute only a tiny share of the U.N. budget; the biggest chunk is provided by the United States, so the U.N. bureaucracy has little incentive to trim its costs.

Our associate Lucette Lagnado has interviewed current and former officials of the U.S. mission at the United Nations, and compiled a long list of the organization's most outrageous extravagances. Here are a few of them:

— The U.N. Secretariat began life in 1946 with 1,546 employees; today, the number is close to 13,000, parceled out among a dizzying array of departments, offices and divisions. The number of member nations has grown in 40 years, of course. But no part of the U.N. bureaucracy ever seems to die, even if its reason for living has long since vanished. There is an entire department to oversee "decolonization," for example. More than half the world was under colonial rule in 1946, but there is a bare handful of such dependencies in the world today. Yet the department lingers on.

— The United Nations is extraordinarily top-heavy, boasting 28 undersecretaries-general and 29 assistant secretaries-general. All of these super-diplomats are handsomely paid, even by the U.N.'s heady standards, and their pensions make retirement truly the Golden Years. An undersecretary-general, for example, gets a lump sum of $350,000 when he totters away from the U.N. trough after 30 years.

— A huge, overlapping structure of informal or ad hoc U.N. bodies has grown up over the years, like some incredible bureaucratic monster. At last count, there were more than 150 committees, commissions, subcommittees, subcommissions and "working groups" drawing U.N. salaries and expenses, with new subsidiary organs" springing up almost daily.

— Like seasoned bureaucrats anywhere, the U.N.'s time-servers are adept at creating mountains of paperwork to justify their jobs. But the United Nations has a built-in cost escalator that other bureaucracies are spared. Documents deemed worthy of printing and distribution to the general membership must be translated into the six official U.N. languages. One knowledgeable source estimated that, by the time it has been translated and printed, a single page of U.N. wisdom costs $558.

— Bloated as it is, the U.N. bureaucracy still needs outside help to accomplish its job. The result is that $8 million a year is paid in consulting fees.

— In the gigantic U.N. bureaucracy, duplication is the rule, coordination the exception. Informational and public affairs operations are conducted by at least three departments and one office, with predictable overlapping. No attempt has been made to consolidate these competing mini-empires.

CARTER-REAGAN CONNECTIONS: When ex-President Jimmy Carter needed an architect for his presidential library, he flew to Hawaii to consult hotel developer Chris Hemmeter — a friend of Ronald Reagan's. Carter named Hemmeter and his wife to the library board, and hired a Hemmeter associate, Herb Lawton, to design the library. On the other hand, Warren M. Christopher is on the Reagan library board and is board chairman of Stanford University, where the Reagan presidential library will go. Christopher was a deputy secretary of state under Carter.

WATCH ON WASTE: Joseph S. Ochounek, who grew up in Blandburg, Pa., wrote in to call the bluff of Rep. Bud Shuster, R-Pa., who said a four-lane, federally funded highway in his district would improve safety in a mountainous area. Nonsense, says Ochounek, the stretch in question is about as mountainous as the gently rolling land between Washington and Baltimore. "A four-lane highway there is needed as much as one in my back yard," he wrote, adding that if pork is the object, "a more sensible approach would be to buy it on the hoof and distribute it to the nation's needy. My deep freezer could use some, too."

Wirth testing Colorado's GOP avalanche

DENVER — Rep. Timothy Wirth moves into the final month of his campaign to keep Sen. Gary Hart's seat Democratic using television commercials that signify his failure to demolish Rep. Ken Kramer as a "fringe" right-winger as an easy way of bucking the Republican tide in the Rockies.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

His spots include a five-minute "biography" with his wife revealing how hard he works — of the kind that usually runs early in a campaign. But Wirth's heavy media artillery zeroes in on a time-tested Democratic favorite: three Kramer votes (two in 1981, one in 1985) to limit Social Security boosts. That's because instead of the expected Wirth romp into the Senate, here is Kramer making a battle of it. He drew even last month and trails by four or five points after the latest Wirth media blast.

This close race is due less to Kramer's virtuosity than to hard facts of political life in the West. Though less than other Mountain states, Colorado is trending Republican and conservative. If tall, handsome, articulate Tim Wirth defeats short, awkward, fuzzy-haired Ken Kramer, it won't be because of ideology. Wirth's 70 percent liberal and 10 percent conservative voting records are well to the left of this state's consensus.

But Kramer (15 percent liberal, 80 percent conservative) until now has avoided ideological confrontation. Nor, in a state where Ronald Reagan is immensely popular, has Kramer made the appeal heard across the land to keep the Senate Republican for the Gipper's last quarter. In this year of issue-less politics, Kramer's strategy has been to assert that Tim Wirth is just too slick for the voters of Colorado. But Washington-based operatives now tell Kramer he must paint Wirth as a liberal in order to win.

The Democratic Party of Colorado, supposedly the most liberal state in the Rockies, is a facade with little muscle below governor and senator. Outgoing Gov. Richard Lamm has survived by taking increasingly conservative positions not shared by many Democrats. The national ambitions of the more conventionally liberal Wirth, like those of Gary Hart, lack a dependable political base here.

Those ambitions are clearer in Denver than Washington. There is some feeling here that if a Colorado Democrat ever becomes president, it will be Wirth, not Hart. Wirth is considered the state's most complete politician, so adept at fund-raising that he has a bigger war chest than Kramer. He was viewed as an easier winner over Kramer than Hart would ever have been.

Kramer in the '70s was one of the "House Crazies" (along with future federal environmental chief Anne Burford) in the Colorado Legislature. Wirth's campaign literature painted him as "clearly on the fringe." Wirth even collected Republican endorsers (including ex-Rep. Jim Johnson and son of the late Sen. Peter Dominick).

But the strategy failed. "Kramer has slipped the punch," one Democratic insider confided to us. The basic reason was Kramer's unexpected capture of the nomination without a primary, in which he would have been labled extremist. He also coined a clever advertising slogan: "I'm not slick, just good." Wirth, a member of "the Boulder elite" from the tony university town, was made to look very slick indeed by his own glossy commercials, seemingly straight from a Hollywood sound stage.

With Kramer pulling even in the polls, Wirth's strategy changed. The glossy TV spots were pulled, replaced by the five-minute biography portraying humble origins of the Harvard/Stanford-educated Wirth — and the Social Security attacks. "This Ken Kramer who's running for the U.S. Senate is spending millions to tell us that he's not slick," says a woman. "But what is he?" Another voice then says Kramer, while vowing in Colorado not to cut Social Security, did so in Washington. Kramer responded quickly with commercials defending his Social Security record and suggesting Wirth should take a polygraph test.

Here is the sterility of 1986 campaign debate. Kramer three times voted for slowing cost-of-living hikes, and Wirth himself in 1981 said he favored the same thing. But the issue has no relevance to mainline ideological issues that starkly separate the two and are ignored in the campaign. As measured by his climb in the latest polls, Wirth got the better of the long-distance debate.

That may induce Kramer, at the risk of being branded a right-winger, to finally indict Wirth as a liberal. At this writing, for example, he has not mentioned some $85,000 raised for Wirth in Los Angeles last month by Jane Fonda and Barbra Streisand — a political association used effectively in South Dakota against the Democratic Senate candidate, Rep. Tom Daschle.

Here, as elsewhere, the debate is not joined on real differences between the candidates on tax policy, arms control and aid to the Nicaraguan contras. Instead, puerile talk of who voted how on Social Security and who's telling the truth about it reduces the campaign to an irrelevancy: Can Tim Wirth's charisma overcome Colorado's Republican trend.

CHARLEY REESE

Debt spinning United States into depression

The United States is sliding into a depression. Since I am not an economist burdened with either academic theories or employers with a vested interest in maintaining myths, I can see what's happening.

Charley Reese

It's simple, really. A monetary system that injects money into the economy in the form of debt at interest ultimately collapses because the law of compound interest will cause debt and interest owed to accumulate faster than people can earn the money to pay it.

For a while, the collapse can be postponed by people taking on new debt to pay the interest on the old debt but ultimately that remedy fails as the accumulated debt becomes just impossible to pay.

Another delaying effect is war. Our collapse was postponed by World War II but that delaying effect has run out. A war, in economic terms, is in part a liquidation of debt, in part the creation of new economic opportunity.

The losers of wars not only have their economies destroyed but also have their debts liquidated. The winners enjoy an economic boom for a while. They get the markets they can no longer serve. They also get to supply the machines and buildings they just got through destroying. That is why we prospered in the 1950s despite our debt money system.

But the markets are now served by the rebuilt economies and there is no longer any vast market for new machines and buildings. Moreover, the debt with which both the war and the post-war rebuilding were financed is now exacting its toll.

One paragraph from a Leonard Silk article in The New York Times a year ago tells the whole story. Silk reported:

Total outstanding debt in the United States has more than doubled in the past seven years, increasing from $3.3 trillion at the end of 1977 to $7.1 trillion at the end of 1984. While the Federal debt was rising by $754 billion during that period, private debt was climbing by $2.3 trillion.

Apply the rule of 72 and you can see how, after a certain point, debt accumulates at an exponential rate. The rule of 72 says that if you divide the interest rate into 72, the answer is the number of years it takes for interest to equal the principal. If, to make it simple, the average interest rate on the $7.1 trillion debt were 10 percent, then in 7.2 years interest owed would equal $7.1 trillion for a total debt of $14.2 trillion.

A depression is just a liquidation of debt. As in the 1920s, it began in the Farm Belt and is now moving into the cities. Our debt-money system is powerless to stop it. The Federal Reserve can ease interest rates or make more money available, as it is doing, but that cannot overcome the damage already done by debt. Because of the way our monetary system is designed, it cannot inject money into the economy — it can only inject more debt.

It doesn't do any good, for example, for a car company to offer me a $10,000 car financed at zero interest rate, if I am already so indebted that I can neither come up with a down payment nor make the monthly payments.

It doesn't do any good, for example, for a bank to offer me a $50,000 loan to set up a business, if there are no customers for the business because they are all so indebted they can't afford to buy my products.

Brazil, for example, can't buy American products and pay its debts, too. The Brazilian president told our president that but I don't think Ronald Reagan understood it.

We have reached the point where the cost of interest makes almost all endeavors economically infeasible. If the government printed its own money, as many Americans mistakenly think ours does, it could inflate its way out of debt. It would just print more money and we would have runaway inflation.

Our monetary system, however, is controlled by a central bank that creates money primarily in the form of loans. If no one will borrow, it can't create new money. That's why we are having a depression instead of runaway inflation.

NATION IN BRIEF

Reagan says drug tests will be fair, protect rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan acknowledges that his plan of drug tests for some federal employees "has caused some concern," but promised that any testing program will be fair and protect their rights.

Reagan, in a speech Monday marking National Drug Abuse Education and Prevention Week, said his administration's campaign for a drug-free America "is gaining a powerful momentum."

First Lady Nancy Reagan, who has been involved in the fight against drug abuse among children, stood beside Reagan as he made his remarks in a Rose Garden ceremony.

"The expansive efforts by all levels of government, by the business community, by civic and social organizations and most importantly, by concerned individuals, are making a difference," Reagan said. "After five years of aggressive enforcement, and a massive public awareness campaign, public attitudes are clearly against the use of illegal drugs, and drug awareness is at an all-time high."

Women's status questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Census Bureau researcher has questioned another analyst's report that college-educated women who aren't married by age 30 stand little chance of ever being wed.

A single, 30-year-old college woman has a 66 percent chance of eventual marriage, Jean Moorman of the Census Bureau's population division said Monday.

That estimate is sharply higher than the 20 percent chance of marriage given the same group of women in a study earlier this year by Neil Bennett of Yale University.

Both studies are based on figures from the 1980 Census, but the researchers differ about the meaning of those numbers.

"We have a disagreement" about whether young women are merely postponing marriage, or deciding to forgo it entirely, Moorman said in a telephone interview.

EPA protecting wetlands

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is setting up a new office to educate the public about the value of protecting the nation's wetlands.

"Many of us have thought of wetlands as wastelands," said Lawrence J. Jensen, EPA assistant administrator. "Far from being wastelands, they are among the most fertile and productive ecosystems on the earth."

Jensen, who spoke Monday in Los Angeles at a conference on water pollution, said about 300,000 acres a year of swamps and other wetlands are giving way to farms, shopping centers and subdivisions.

An EPA announcement said the office would report to Jensen, who is in charge of the EPA's water office. Wetlands, which includes 95 million acres of inland marshes and swamps and low-lying coastal areas, are the home to many of the nation's endangered species of plants, animals and fish.

Gray market' autos eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has approved a bill to regulate the retrofitting of foreign-made automobiles imported on the so-called "gray market" so they comply with U.S. emission and safety standards.

The bill, which also authorizes $106 million to operate the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration over the next two years, would require direct importers to register with the Transportation Department.

Nine-year-old eats crack, goes into convulsions

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 9-year-old boy went into convulsions after eating crack that had been brought to school by a fourth-grade classmate, authorities said.

The youngster, who ate the drug Monday, was released after being treated at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, said Los Angeles Unified School District spokeswoman Eva Hain. The boy was not identified.

Several other children who handled the crystalized cocaine at Martin Luther King Jr. Elementary School were examined, but none had been harmed, Ms. Hain said.

Rory Heidelberg, 22, was booked for investigation of furnishing narcotics to a minor, said police Cmdr. William Booth. Heidelberg lives with the mother of the child who brought the drug to school, Booth said.

The child's mother was questioned and released, according to a police officer who refused to give his name. The woman's two children were turned over to juvenile authorities, the officer said.

Booth said Heidelberg gave his girlfriend's son a plastic bag containing about 20 "rocks," or crystalized pieces of cocaine, and asked him to hide it. The boy took the drug, worth an estimated $500, to school.

School principal L.M. Jenkins said she was told the boy passed the bag among about 10 pupils while the teacher was occupied. The teacher noticed the bag and confiscated it, but one pupil already had ingested some, Ms. Jenkins said.

School officials suggested to the parents of the boy who swallowed the drug that they take him to a hospital, but they declined, Ms. Hain said.

At home, he went into convulsions and was treated at the hospital for a cocaine overdose, she said.

Crack, a highly potent form of cocaine, usually is smoked.

FBI: Bombs diversion to bank holdups

By S.J. GUFFEY

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (AP) — Three white supremacists set off bombs in this resort community as diversions to planned holdups at two banks and a National Guard armory, an FBI agent says.

One of the men, who has offered to cooperate with authorities, told the FBI that he and his two co-conspirators planned the robberies because they needed money for food and vehicles, and weapons to wage war against the government.

But last week's blasts started 30 minutes late, and only three of the four bombs detonated. Federal and local law enforcement officers responded within minutes.

"They immediately realized the bombs had created a very large response," FBI Special Agent Donald Wofford told a Kootenai County magistrate Monday evening during a hearing for a man charged in the bombings.

"They did not feel secure in their plans to do the robberies" in Coeur d'Alene and nearby Rathdrum.

Still, Wofford said the three drove to the armory in Post Falls and one of the targeted banks.

"They decided there were too many (customers in the bank) and there was highway construction next to it. They went home," Wofford said.

Robert Elliott Pires was charged with three counts of felony bombing and one count of attempted bombing. Magistrate John Luster set bond at $500,000.

Pires, 22, contacted federal agents last week and offered to testify about the bombings in exchange for protection, the FBI said.

But county Prosecutor Glen Walker said, "We have made absolutely no deals of any kind." Pires is being held at an undisclosed location.

On Sept. 29, Pires and one of two co-conspirators drove into Coeur d'Alene to watch the explosions of four bombs they'd planted the night before, Wofford said.

The main target was the Federal Building, because it houses the FBI, and the others sites were chosen at random, Pires told federal officials.

Wofford said the one bomb that didn't explode apparently was thrown too hard, causing wiring to dislodge.

Wofford said the three men were motivated by white supremacist, racist-type beliefs.

An earlier pipe bombing at a priest's home was meant as retaliation for the cleric's outspoken stand against racism, authorities said.

The names of the co-conspirators were not given in court, but a description of the activities and places involved in verifying Pires' stories matched what few details are known about the investigation surrounding two men arrested Thursday on counterfeiting charges.

Arrested were David Dorr, who has been security chief for the Church of Jesus Christ Christian (Aryan Nations) and Edward Hawley. Hawley's wife, Olive, also was arrested.

The U.S. Secret Service arrested Dorr for alleged counterfeiting violations and the Hawleys for allegedly violating terms of a release on a recent counterfeiting arrest in Spokane, Wash.

Several automatic and semi-automatic weapons were seized at Dorr's home, said Dennis McCallister, chief of the Spokane office of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Asked if Pires was a member of the Aryan Nations, Walker said police knew "he has been out there," referring to the group's compound in nearby Hayden Lake.

An Aryan Nations official who refused to give his name said he had seen Pires at the compound a few times.

Aryan Nations was the springboard for the militant group The Order, whose members were accused of bank and armored car robberies, murders, bombings and counterfeiting in late 1983 and 1984.

Ten Order members were convicted, of racketeering last year, and 12 others pleaded guilty.

Walker said Monday that he expected more state and federal charges to be filed in the case.

TORNADO or THUNDERSTORM

WATCH
(Conditions are right for a tornado or severe thunderstorm to form.)

WARNING
(A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)

In North Texas, Tuesday partly cloudy north with isolated thundershowers and mostly cloudy south with a chance of thunderstorms. Highs Tuesday 70 to 78.

In South Texas, chance of drizzle or showers tonight and Wednesday. A little warmer Wednesday. Lows tonight low and mid 60s northwest to near 70 along the lower coast. Highs Wednesday upper 70s and low 80s north to the upper 80s south.

In West Texas, tonight fair north and generally partly cloudy. Fair most sections Wednesday. Warmer afternoons. Lows tonight 50s but upper 40s mountains and mid 60s extreme south. High wednesday 70s except upper 80s along the river from Presidio to the Big Bend.

Slight warming trend expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

A slight warming trend will be experienced in the Midland area on Wednesday, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The NWS is calling for a high in the upper 70s and fair skies for mid-week.

Overnight temperatures will remain cool, however, according to the service. Midland-area residents may expect a low tonight in the middle 50s. Under partly cloudy skies, a light southeasterly wind will blow. Winds will shift to the south at five to 10 mph on Wednesday.

Monday's high of 57 was 39 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1937. Today's low was 17 degrees above the record low of 38 set for this date in 1976.

STATE

A cold front moved off the Texas coast allowing clear skies and cool temperatures in the Texas Panhandle and parts of North Texas.

But in South and Southeast Texas showers and cloudy skies prevailed because unstable moist air from the Gulf of Mexico was flowing over the cooler air.

Wind was from the south or southeast over the Panhandle and parts of North Texas at speeds of less than 10 mph. Most of the rest of the state had wind from the north or northeast in the 5 mph to 10 mph range.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 50s and 60s with some readings in the 40s in the higher elevations and 70s along the Gulf Coast. The 4 a.m. state temperature extremes were a low of 49 at Guadalupe Pass and Amarillo and a high of 76 in Brownsville.

There's a chance of showers or drizzle in South Texas tonight and Wednesday with temperatures a little warmer on Wednesday. Lows tonight should be in the low and mid 60s in the northwest and near 70 along the lower coast. Highs Wednesday should be in the upper 70s and low 80s north to upper 80s south.

NATION

A blast of Canadian air frosted much of the upper Midwest and pushed Eastern temperatures down as a high pressure system kept most of the nation under fair skies today.

Temperatures early today were mostly in the 30s from southern Michigan and eastern sections of the Ohio Valley across the northern and central Appalachians.

A high pressure system dominated weather across most of the nation, causing mostly dry conditions.

Rain was widespread across southeastern Texas and was scattered from northern Georgia into the western Carolinas, while thunderstorms ranged across northern and central Florida.

In weather more suited to football, Boston's Jim Rice takes the snap from Red Sox coach Rene Lachemann as the Sox and the California Angels prepare to do battle in Fenway Park today.

Angels, Bosox rattle Fenway

By Mark Kreidler
Copley News Service

BOSTON — It is a playoff series so caked with emotion, so haunted by history and so difficult to predict that, California catcher Bob Boone says, "Maybe someday people will look back and say it was a classic match-up."

And Monday, New England lent its own distinctive touch to the American League Championship Series between Boston and California: winds gusting to 40 mph and temperatures that dropped into the 30s overnight, painting a frosty October backdrop to baseball's center stage.

When Roger Clemens (24-4) of the Red Sox throws the first pitch tonight at 7:27 p.m., he will initiate a series that works on many competitive levels: pitcher against pitcher; manager against manager; teams against their pasts; and Mr. October, California's Reggie Jackson, against the inevitability of time and age and wear and tear.

"It's what I've always dreamed about my whole life," said Boston's Wade Boggs, at .357 the major league batting champion.

"It should go down to the wire," said Boone, the 38-year-old veteran whose encyclopedic knowledge of opposing hitters and steadying influence behind the plate played a large part in the Angels' getting here. "We've all prepared to get to this point."

Clemens, a cocky Texan whose 2.48 earned run average and 238 strikeouts have assured him of the AL Cy Young Award, has been handed the task of giving the Red Sox a one-game advantage, working with a pitching elbow still slightly sore from having been struck by a line drive last week.

"My arm's 100 percent. I don't see any problem with that," said Clemens, who, in the absence of Tom Seaver (knee, not on roster) may be asked to pitch Game 4 in Anaheim and Game 7 if necessary, in Fenway. "It's sore to touch — when you press against it, it's sore. But my frame of mind is fine. I've always been ready to go out there and pitch, and (this) is no exception."

WHILE CLEMENS is the best of a staff that also includes the volatile Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd and resurgent left-hander Bruce Hurst, the Angels will lead tonight with their ace, Mike Witt, whose 18-10 record, 2.84 ERA and 208 strikeouts made his a season that playoff-tested Jackson called the best he'd seen since the days of Catfish Hunter with Oakland and Ron Guidry with the New York Yankees in the 1970s.

Roger Clemens

Clemens was 3-0 with a 2.42 ERA in three starts against the Angels this year, while Witt went 1-2 with a 2.76 ERA in three tries against the Red Sox.

"My thought in that area is that I'm not facing Roger Clemens. My teammates are — and I'm facing the Boston hitters," Witt said. "So as far as the Clemens-versus-Witt thing, I don't think that's important."

The pitching match-up may not be as compelling as the managerial confrontation between Boston's John McNamara and California's Gene Mauch. Two years ago, McNamara was the Angels leader, both succeeding and preceding Mauch, who returned from a self-imposed retirement last season to take a team held in low esteem and guide it to a surprising second-place finish, losing out to eventual World Series champion Kansas City.

Much has been made of Mauch's desire to win a pennant, for his 25 years of managing without one is a major league record. But McNamara hasn't won a league championship in 14 seasons with five teams.

FOR MAUCH, the emotion runs deep. He ended his retirement from managing after his wife died in 1984, and his players often have said they'd like to bring him the pennant he has doggedly pursued.

"I want this team to win this championship. I'd rather they do that than to eat when I'm hungry," Mauch said, "but not because I haven't been there simply because it's the thing to do.

"Years ago, when a lot of people used to say I was pretty hot stuff, I might have had a tendency to believe them, a tendency to take a lot of credit. It doesn't take long to find out that players carry managers to championships. This would be the highlight of my baseball life."

Both teams are shadowed by ghosts of baseball past. Boston's fans are notoriously suspicious of any Red Sox team and well aware of the franchise's storied history of coming up short, the last example was 1978, when the team blew a 14-game lead and then lost to the New York Yankees in a one-game playoff for the division title. Before that, the Red Sox lost the 1975 World Series in seven games to Cincinnati. The Angels and cowboy owner Gene Autry, meanwhile, have not hoisted a pennant in 25 previous years of existence.

BOTH TEAMS have capable offenses, though Boston's led by Boggs and RBI mongers Jim Rice, Bill Buckner, Dwight Evans and Don Baylor, is the more explosive. Both have good pitching staffs, though California's, with starters Witt, Kirk McCaskill, Don Sutton and John Candelaria, is more solid.

California's players have their own motivation: 19 of them are in the final year of their contracts. Included among those is Jackson, who at 40 can only hope that there is some magic left in a bat that has grown quieter by the season.

"October has always been special, and I hope it will again," Jackson said.

Bats could decide pitching strong series

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston reliever Dave Smith thinks the Astros' National League playoff series with the New York Mets will come down to hitting.

The Astros and Mets enter Wednesday night's first game of the best-of-7 series with the top pitching staffs in the NL, ranking 1-2 in earned run average.

New York's Dwight Gooden, the 1985 Cy Young Award winner, will oppose Mike Scott, who pitched a no-hitter last week to clinch the division title for Houston, in the opener.

The firepower doesn't drop off in the second game when Houston's Nolan Ryan is to face New York's Bob Ojeda.

"When you have pitching staffs like ours and the Mets, they kind of balance each other out," Smith, a member of Houston's 1980 NL West champions, said.

"I think our pitching staffs are both outstanding so it will come down to the difference being hitting."

The Mets have higher batting averages in their lineup, including Wally Backman, Len Dykstra, Keith Hernandez, Ray Knight and Mookie Wilson, all of whom finished above .289 and were among the league leaders in hitting.

The Astros counter with Glenn Davis, Denny Walling, Kevin Bass and Jose Cruz, who overcame a slow start this season to lead the Astros' charge to the division title.

"They have to contain the top of our order," Mets catcher Gary Carter said, referring to Dykstra, Backman and Hernandez. "If those three guys are kept off the basepaths, it will be tough for Darryl (Strawberry) and I to drive in runs."

Krieg works on hapless Chargers

Copley News Service

SEATTLE — The opportunistic Seattle Seahawks, pouncing on a pair of second half Lionel James' fumbles and scoring back-to-back touchdowns in 13 seconds, cruised to a 33-7 victory Monday night over the San Diego Chargers behind a trio of touchdown passes from Dave Krieg.

The win, which included record-setting catches by Seattle receiver Steve Largent and Chargers receiver Charlie Joiner, kept the 4-1 Seahawks within a game of division-leading and undefeated Denver. The Chargers, losers of their last nine games on the road, dropped to 1-4 and "crawl home to tangle with the Broncos."

Largent's record-breaking catch, at least one reception in 128-straight games, came with 10:42 to play in the half and prompted a two-minute celebration by the 63,207 fans, while Joiner's magic moment, setting the all-time reception yardage mark, came on a 20-yard toss with 9:49 left in the third quarter.

Fans who return to San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium this week to watch the Chargers will not recognize their favorite team. This is no longer the best offensive show in football; the biggest question facing the Chargers these days is not whether their defense is going to stop the other team, but whether the Chargers' offense is going to appear on the field after halftime.

Is Rankin using mirrors?

After watching Rankin play for a couple of seasons, you start to wonder how Dwayne Turner does it.

Year-in and year-out, the Rankin coach probably does more with less than any coach around. But to pull off his next trick, Turner may need help from more than just his Red Devils.

For the first time in his 18 years as head coach in Rankin, Turner is leading his team into District play at the 2A level. For the undermanned Devils this means going head-to-head with Reagan County, Stanton, Forsan, Ozona and Eldorado week after week.

Last spring, it looked like Turner might have the firepower to take the step up in class and make a run at a title. But after a summer of layoffs and slowdowns in the oil industry, Turner came back to summer drill minus eight varsity players, including three starters. Rankin's high school enrollment also dropped back below the cutoff from 1A to 2A.

Junior quarterback Mic McCravey and family moved on down the road to Iraan, taking his younger twin brothers with him. Sophomore backup QB Shane McCutcheon decided to attend Reagan County and Turner was left with a lot of question marks.

BUT THE Devils seem to have found the answers, rolling to a 4-1 start as they prepare to host Reagan County Friday night in the District 6-2A opener for both teams.

"We've got a lot of enthusiasm but no depth," Turner says. "We've got 10 kids that go both ways and one sub on the line and one in the backfield that wouldn't hurt us too much.

"These kids just realize that they're the ones that are going to have to win or lose. They're going to have to rise to the occasion and do the job."

So far the Red Devils have, earning lopsided wins over Sterling City, Roscoe, Granfalls and Fort Davis — all Class A schools — after opening with a 13-7 loss to Iraan.

Now Turner takes on the 4-0 Owls, favorites to take the 6-2A crown, in their first real test since the opener. "On paper they should beat us bad," he says.

But Turner knows Friday nights shred the paper all the pregame prognostications are figured on.

SO DOES Owl coach Ronnie Reeger.

"They've always played us tough in the past and I don't see any reason why they would change now," Reeger said. "I think they'll be out there every week busting their tails to try and prove they can beat anybody in any classification."

If Rankin is going to make its mark in Class 2A, it sure picked a tough nut for its debut.

Reagan County put its claim on West Texas' strongest Class 2A team with a 27-7 win over McCamey last week and they're not planning on slowing down against the Red Devils in their own backyard.

AREA RUMBLINGS: Lack of offense finally took its toll on the Andrews Mustangs against Pecos. The Eagles forced the Mustangs to lose five fumbles as they could only manage 101 yards in offense.

This week, Andrews heads to Monahans, 2-0, 4-0, where the Loboes have been untouchable. Coach David Visentine says two losses could still qualify as a playoff team in competitive District 2-4A...

Lamesa is also in a tough scheduling stretch as they come home to tangle with Big Spring Friday. The Tors took a 28-7 beating by a determined Sweetwater last week but played better than it looked, according to coach Clyde Noonkester.

"We'll have to play a perfect-type game for us to beat a team like Big Spring — but we know it can be done," Noonkester said...

Stanton has come back down to earth after a 38-0 whipping by Crane last week, but coach Dale Ruth has the Buffs itching to bounce back as District 6-2A play begins.

"Our kids understand, they're the type that knows what's going on and what they have to do in district," Ruth said. "Maybe our schedule is to our advantage in getting everything back together after last week."

Stanton, 4-1, is at Eldorado, 1-4, for the opener then returns home to face Rankin Oct. 17...

McCamey came out of Friday's 27-7 loss at Reagan County with a barrage of injuries. Both tailbacks, Rodney Terry and Emmit Brown are hurting. Terry, out with an ankle problem again, is out for this week's Presidio game, and Brown's back injury makes him doubtful. Also, quarterback Rob Adams is out for the year after breaking his collarbone.

The schedule-maker may have given the Badgers the only good break they've gotten lately in opening District 5-2A play against Presidio (1-3 and outscored 124-14) then an open date...

Greenwood earned its first win with a 30-6 lashing of Ozona. Now the Rangers are pointing toward District 4-3A play and Alpine on Friday night. Maurelce Hodges' club was slow to come around, but a thorough whipping of the Lions shows they're ready to make a run in district...

Floyd weathers rain to conduct golf clinic

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Ray Floyd didn't like the weather, he's an outdoors person.

Somehow, that's not surprising for the 44-year old reigning U.S. Open golf champion, the No. 4 leading money-winner of all-time on the Professional Golf Association.

But Floyd, who came to the Permian Basin as a guest of the Southwestern Bell Yellow Pages, didn't let the rain dampen his enthusiasm in preaching his gospel at a golf clinic Monday for 50 intent observers at Mission Country Club.

Floyd's gospel is golf, has been through 24 years and 20 tournament championships on the PGA tour.

Only now, after becoming the oldest player to ever capture the world's most prestigious golfing event, is Floyd beginning to be recognized for what he is — one of the best ever in a truly outdoors game.

"All the media attention has been fun, there's no denying that, I enjoy it," Floyd said. "I feel that if I hadn't won a U.S. Open when my career was over, I would've felt like I had not fulfilled my career."

WINNING ON Father's day; coming from out of the pack on the final round and becoming the oldest winner all made the U.S. Open win — his fourth Major — even more special for Floyd.

"I always felt that having won Majors before I thought they were all fairly equal. But after talking with Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus, I think I perceived wrong. The golfing world sees the U.S. Open as the most important tournament in the world."

Floyd is one of the few golfers of his day that survived to compete in two eras. As a young tour player, Floyd scrambled for a living, always looking for a way to squeeze extra income from his game and complement the meager winnings from the PGA Tour.

But in the coming years, Floyd reaped the benefits of the burgeoning popularity of golf and the PGA in particular as prize purses swelled to astronomic heights. But it's something he has never really gotten used to.

"Nowadays in practice rounds with some of the younger guys we'll say 'OK we're going to play for $25 a hole.' They'll shy away. They don't know how to play that way, they've never had to," Floyd said. "We always put up money, that was our way of schooling."

HE RECALLS a day from the not too distant past while living in Dallas when he received a challenge through a third party from a young Mexican golfer out of El Paso. It seems the Mexican had a backer who was willing to put up a lot of money.

"He had a name I never heard of so I said, 'I'll play anyone I've never heard of.' But we had to go to his course in El Paso.

"We played three rounds and the first two Lee Trevino beat me and I could see he was a very competitive golfer. The final round I doubled the money and shot a very low score and got lucky to get out of there in good shape."

But his age continues to be an advantage, especially in the Majors, but it has its disadvantages, too.

"It's a disadvantage in strength, length, stamina and endurance," Floyd said. "But I also know how to handle situations and the pressure of a Major tournament. It's an advantage in experience."

With that experience, Floyd would like to make one last run at a title he's never won — the British Open.

"It's a goal I've had in mind for years — if I could win it I would be one of only five players to ever have won all four Majors," Floyd said. "It's certainly something I'll be shooting for in the next two or three years."

Tie bumps Estacado to fourth

Associated Press

Levelland caused a shakeup in Class 4A of The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll this week by playing Class 4A leader Lubbock Estacado to a 14-14 tie.

The tie paved the way for McKinney, ranked No. 2 last week, to move into the No. 1 spot with 16 first place votes and a 230-198 point lead over the new runnerup, Corsicana. Estacado dropped to fourth.

San Antonio Holmes in 5A, Daingerfield in 3A, Refugio in 2A and Valley View in 1A all retained their No. 1 rankings from a week ago.

Odessa Permian remained in the No. 2 slot, while San Angelo Central moved up a notch to seventh. Undefeated Midland Lee remains out of the AP rankings.

West Orange-Stark, the preseason 4A favorite, moved into the No. 3 position and Estacado fell to fourth.

No. 6 Carthage and No. 9 Wharton also were losers among the 4A ranks and they were replaced by No. 9 New Braunfels, 5-0, and No. 10 Uvalde, 5-0.

Holmes and runnerup Odessa Permian scored lopsided victories and remained 1-2 on the 5A list, but Cypress-Fairbanks, rated third last week, was upset by Klein Oak, 24-23 and dropped to No. 9.

Port Arthur Jefferson, which broke into the top 10 last week, dropped out after a 30-23 loss to Aldine.

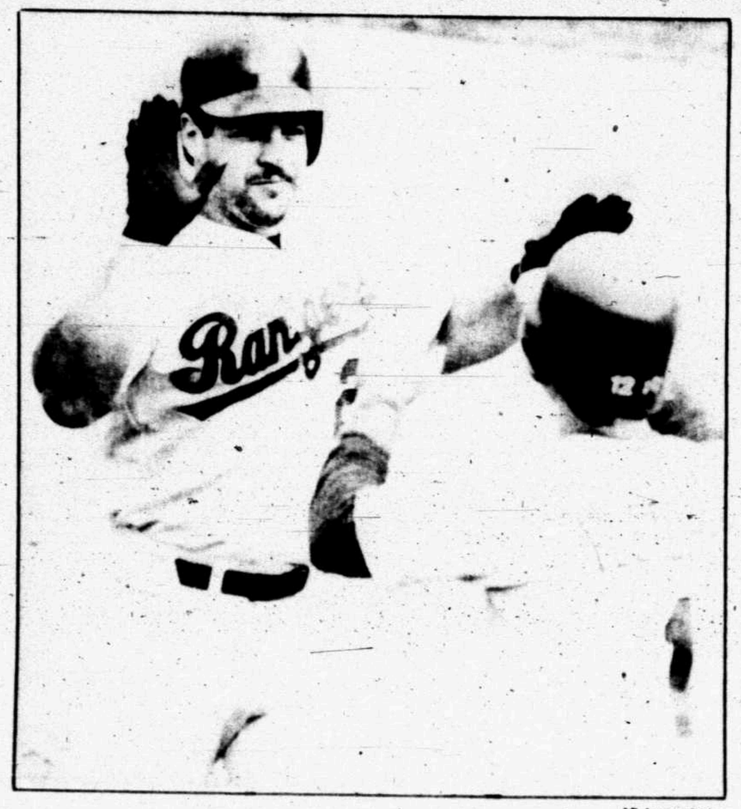

Amarillo Palo Duro, 5-0, which has yielded only six points this season, moved in as the No. 10 team.

There was only one change in 3A, with No. 9 Tulia dropping out of the top 10 after a 30-23 loss to Dalhart. Pittsburg is the newcomer at No. 10.

Danigerfield, which beat 4A Carthage 27-6, was the unanimous 3A No. 1 team for the second straight week.

Refugio maintained domination over 2A wih a 65-6 victory over previously unbeaten Three Rivers, and Eastland remained the runnerup with a 35-7 victory over Early. There were no losses among 2A ranked teams.

Seymour, the No. 9 ranked team in 2A, edged Munday, ranked second last week in 1A, 18-17, dropping the Moguls to No. 4 on the 1A list this week.

Cowboys nurse pride, wounds

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys had more than their pride bruised in Sunday's 29-14 NFL loss to the Denver Broncos.

Defensive back Victor Scott underwent surgery on Monday to repair a dislocated right wrist and will be lost 8-10 weeks and defensive tackle Randy White has a hamstring pull that could bother him for weeks.

The Cowboys are in their worst condition of the season as they prepare for their biggest game against the unbeaten NFC Eastern Division-leading Washington Redskins in Texas Stadium on Sunday.

Strong safety Bill Bates was limping around on a sprained ankle suffered in the Denver game. He already is playing with a fractured finger.

There was also concern over the conditions of quarterback Danny White and running back Tony Dorsett.

White, who missed the Denver game with a pulled thigh muscle, and Dorsett, who has a sprained ankle and knee on the same left leg, are also questionable.

Scott was injured in a collision with teammate Ron Fellows in the third quarter.

Scott said after the Denver game he was determined to play with a cast on but doctors nixed that idea.

The Cowboys will have to make a roster move to get another defensive back. They only recently released rookie Cornell Gowdy, who could be brought back since he wasn't claimed.

THE COWBOYS were so short in the defensive line that they put up only a three-man rush against Denver quarterback John Elway.

Mark Tuinei, who had moved to the offensive line in the off-season, played in White's defensive right tackle spot although he hadn't practiced at the position.

"I had a lot of pain and we'll just have to see how it goes," said All-Pro Randy White. "I hope to play against Washington but you can't tell with a pulled hamstring. They are tricky."

Dallas could be forced to activate Don Smerek this week. Smerek has been out a month with a severely sprained ankle.

Defensive tackle Kevin Brooks, who had arthroscopic surgery in August for ligament and cartilage damage, is not expected to be ready for at least two more weeks.

The Dallas offense sputtered under second-string quarterback Steve Pelluer, particularly on the ground.

The Cowboys had their second lowest rushing day in club history against Denver without Danny White and Dorsett. Dallas gained 41 yards on an average of 1.9 yards per attempt.

"I was very disappointed," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "I thought we would give Denver a better game. We couldn't do anything offensively or defensively and the injuries didn't help."

Dallas dropped to 3-2 with the loss while Washington is sitting pretty with a 5-0 record.

Oddsmakers rated the game against Washington as even.

McMahon considers shoulder surgery

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Chicago Bears quarterback Jim McMahon, bothered by an aching right shoulder, is hinting that he might opt for arthroscopic surgery.

The flamboyant McMahon, who won his last 20 starts and 29 of 33, says he is getting tired of playing injured.

"It hurts. I don't like waking up the following day and having it hurt all the time," McMahon said Monday.

McMahon suffered a first-degree, or mild, separation of his shoulder in the fourth quarter of the season opener against Cleveland.

McMahon missed the next two games but returned to guide the undefeated Super Bowl champions to victories over Cincinnati and Minnesota.

Rangers earn crown: Most improved team

By ALAN SAYRE

ARLINGTON (AP) — Before the season began, Texas Rangers Manager Bobby Valentine and General Manager Tom Grieve stated a simple goal — to be the most improved team in baseball.

Long the doormat of the American League West, the Rangers succeeded beyond the wildest dreams of most fans. To Grieve, the unexpected second-place finish was satisfying, not surprising.

"The talent is there," he said. "It's no real shock that we won 87 games."

Emphasizing youthful players, the Rangers won 25 more games than 1985's last-place team that finished at 62-99. The fans responded to the winning ways as home attendance hit a record of 1,629,021.

BUT BOTH Valentine and Grieve said the club still has a long way to go.

"We've got guys who've only gotten their feet wet," Valentine said after his first full year as manager. "We haven't touched the tip of the iceberg."

"I think everybody is upbeat and positive," Grieve said. "I think they (the team) realize this was a stepping stone and we have a lot of work ahead."

Pete Incaviglia, who made the Rangers' roster in spring training straight out of Oklahoma State, became the 11th rookie in AL history to hit 30 homers and the 16th in major league history.

For Incaviglia, the season was more than just a personal triumph.

"We all pulled together after a lot of people said we had nothing," he said. "But we played together and proved them wrong."

Incaviglia also finished the season with 185 strikeouts, an AL record and just four shy of the major league record set by Bobby Bonds in 1970.

RUBEN SIERRA, another rookie, cut himself a place in the Rangers' outfield with 16 homers and 10 triples — a club record. Sierra's performance has cast a shadow on outfielder Gary Ward, who missed the last month following abdominal surgery after leaving the team several times for personal reasons.

Ward, who hit .316 in 105 games, is slated to become a free agent. He makes an estimated $850,000 annually.

"Gary's been my guy," Valentine said. "It's been tough. He did a great job for me."

After suffering from a lack of a regular offensive punch for several years, Texas set new seasonal club records with 184 home runs, 725 RBIs and 771 runs.

Outfielder Oddibe McDowell, despite a slump in the final weeks, finished with 18 home runs. Scott Fletcher, obtained over the winter from the Chicago White Sox, came through at shortstop, hitting an even .300 in 146 games.

Larry Parrish finished with 28 homers and 94 RBIs while Pete O'Brien had 23 homers and 90s RBIs.

THE YOUTHFUL Texas pitching staff, anchored by veteran knuckleballer Charlie Hough who led the club with 17 wins, had its ups and downs, mostly due to control problems.

Rookie Bobby Witt finished at 11-9 after losing on July 21. The Rangers were 12-0 during Witt's final dozen starts. Witt set an AL record by uncorking 22 wild pitches. He struck out 174 batters and fellow rookie Edwin Correa fanned 189 while posting a 12-14 record.

The Texas staff was charged with 94 wild pitches, which broke a 16-year-old major league record set by the Houston Astros.

The bullpen worked overtime for the Rangers in 1986. Dave Mohorcic, a 30-year-old rookie, tied a major league record by appearing in 13 consecutive games as a reliever from Aug. 6 through Aug. 20. Greg Harris led the club with 20 saves in 73 games, while rookie Mitch Williams made 80 appearances.

The future of three other veterans — backup catcher Darrell Porter, utilityman Tom Paciorek, infielder Toby Harrah — also is uncertain.

Davis Cup hopes end

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — The United States' slide in international tennis prominence continued with their Davis Cup semifinal loss to Australia Monday, making it the second major setback in as many months.

"It doesn't make us very happy," U.S. Tennis Association President J. Randolph Gregson said from his New Orleans office Monday. "I've been pushing for a national tennis training center for years. It wouldn't necessarily overturn the results immediately; but it would be taking steps in that direction."

Last month, the Europeans, particularly the Czechoslovakians, dominated the U.S. Open Championships at New York.

Monday, Pat Cash defeated Brad Gilbert 3-6, 6-2, 6-3, 6-4, giving Australia a 3-1 victory over the United States and a place in the Davis Cup final. The final match in the best-of-five series was canceled by rain.

The Australians do not have a player ranked in the top 40 in the world, yet they earned a berth against defending champion Sweden at Melbourne, Dec. 19-21.

Australia swept the first two singles matches against the U.S. as Paul McNamee defeated Gilbert and Cash beat Tim Mayotte. The United States staved off elimination with a five-set doubles victory by Ken Flach and Paul Annacone Sunday.

But Cash, a one-time Wimbledon and U.S. Open semifinalist, who has been plagued by back injuries, clinched Australia its first place in the final since 1983, when it beat Sweden.

With Gilbert and Mayotte, the U.S. team was considered largely inexperienced, with John McEnroe's absence a point of controvery.

Dollar climbs

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose against most foreign currencies in early European trading today. Gold bullion gained $5 in London and $4.50 in Zurich.

Currency traders in Frankfurt said market intervention by West Germany's Bundesbank appeared to be holding the dollar steady.

They said the central bank intervened twice during the initial hours of trading after the dollar opened weaker. The scale of its purchases was not known.

Bundesbank has bought dollars on the open market several times in recent weeks, but many dealers have played down the importance of the operations because the purchases were said to have been small.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Monday:

—1.9970 West German marks, up from 1.9890

—1.6260 Swiss francs, up from 1.6208

—6.5350 French francs, up from 6.5270

—2.2450 Dutch guilders, down from 2.2510

—1,379.50 Italian lire, up from 1,378.25

—1.38495 Canadian dollars, up from 1.38450

The British pound eased to $1.4380 from $1.4388.

The dollar fell against the Japanese currency, closing in Tokyo at 153.77 yen, down from 154.08 yen Monday. Later today, the dollar was quoted at 153.75 yen in London.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $442 a troy ounce, up from $437 late Monday. A trader said gold jumped to a bid of $444 at one stage, but met resistance and fell back.

In Zurich, gold was bid at $442.50, up from $438.

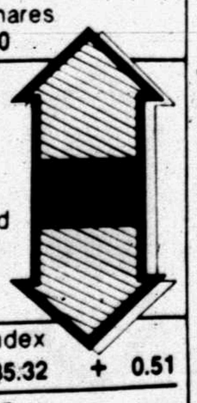

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold closed at a bid of $440.73, up from $432.97.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $5.77 an ounce, up 1 cent from late Monday.

Energy stocks subject of debate on Wall Street

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Energy stocks, bolstered by the prospect of continued crude oil price stability, appear ready for a further move up, according to several analysts who follow the industry. Other experts, however, contend that oil issues are overvalued and that any improvement in the price of crude oil has already been discounted.

The bulls on oils are quick to point to the improvement in stock prices since the Organization Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries met in early August and agreed to limit production in an effort to support prices.

Since Aug. 8, Mobil has risen to 37⅜ from 32½; Exxon to 66⅞ from 62⅝; Texaco to 33¾ from 30⅞; Standard Oil to 47⅜ from 45⅛; Atlantic Richfield to 58⅛ from 52¼, and Phillips Petroleum to 10⅝ from 9¾. Despite these gains, many analysts say these stocks still have a way to go.

They note that institutions that would not have looked at oil and gas issues a few months ago are now adding these holdings. The bullish analysts agree on such majors as Mobil, Phillips Petroleum and Exxon, while more speculative portfolios are including Diamond Shamrock and Kerr McGee.

Bruce Lazier, the energy analyst at Prescott, Ball & Turben in Cleveland, said that big money was now coming into energy issues and gold, partly because of the flight from the dollar. "The downside risk for energy issues is practically nil compared to what it was not too long ago," Lazier said.

And William Brunet, energy analyst at Advest Inc. in Hartford, said, "Energy stocks look better now than they have in a long time." He said he likes Mobil and Exxon best.

Brian Luedtke, a technical analyst at Piper, Jaffray & Hopwood in Minneapolis, said his firm's research indicates that prices should remain fairly constant at $12.50 to $17 a barrel over the next few months. His current favorites are Chevron, because of its high yield, and Royal Dutch Petroleum as a "quality play."

At least one analyst believes that domestic production of natural gas will dwindle over the next few years, creating a tightening supply situtation by the end of the decade that should benefit reserve-rich producers.

"Related to the reduced supply of natural gas will be a diminishing supply of natural gas liquids," said Jay Harris of Goldsmith & Harris. As a result, he said he likes National Distillers and Chemical, the largest retailer of propane in the nation.

Barry Sahgal, an oil industry analyst at Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., said that voluntary or involuntary restructuring efforts were under way to narrow the gap between share prices and their underlying value.

"The high yields afforded by the shares of the international majors should continue to provide support for oil stock prices," Sahgal said. "The OPEC deliberations appear to be providing some near-term stability."

Characterizing himself as neutral on oil issues as a whole, he said that his favorite segment of the energy group included natural gas distribution companies, such as Piedmont Natural Gas and the Brooklyn Union Gas Co. As a special situtation, he said he likes Tenneco because it is "an undervalued larger oil and gas stock that has a high dividend yield and offers some restructuring possibilitiies."

Among the less optimistic oil industry analysts is Chuck Strain, senior vice president of Lovett, Mitchell, Webb & Garrison Inc. in Houston.

"Any moves in oil stock prices currently are premature because we will experience at least one more downward tick in crude oil prices, probably in the spring of 1987 following the winter fuel season," Strain said.

Icahn makes formal bid for USX

USX

NEW YORK (AP) — USX Corp., the troubled steel-energy giant, is facing a $7.97 billion cash purchase offer from Carl C. Icahn, the takeover specialist who purchased TWA earlier this year.

The offer, disclosed Monday, is among the biggest acquisition proposals in U.S. history and the largest attempted leveraged buyout, a transaction financed largely by borrowed money that is repaid with the target company's earnings or sale of assets.

The $31-a-share offer for USX's 257.3 million shares outstanding came amid widespread speculation that the Pittsburgh-based company might be subject to a takeover attempt.

The offer also came against a background of intensifying problems for USX, formerly known as U.S. Steel Corp., parent of the country's biggest steelmaker. The company lost $235 million in the first six months of this year.

In a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, Icahn said he and the companies he controls own 25.34 million shares of USX stock, or nearly 10 percent. By law, an investor who acquires more than 5 percent of a company must inform the SEC within 10 days of the purchase.

In the filing, Icahn said he made the proposal in a letter Monday to USX's chairman, David M. Roderick, and its board of directors.

If USX accepted the offer, Icahn wrote, he would attempt to win contract concessions from its steelworkers in exchange for part ownership of the company or profit sharing. Icahn made a similar arrangement when he acquired Trans World Airlines.

United Steelworkers spokesman Russ Gibbons said the union would have no problem discussing a profit-sharing plan with Icahn. The union's recent contract agreements with four other steelmakers — LTV, Inland, National and Bethlehem — involve profit sharing or givebacks for employees, he said.

USX stock was the most active issue in nationwide trading Monday, rising 37½ cents a share to close at $26.50. More than 12.65 million shares were traded.

Icahn told USX it had until Oct. 22 to respond to what he said was a friendly buyout offer.

Saudi Arabia wants to restore price structure

New York Times News Service

GENEVA, Switzerland — Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani said at the start of OPEC's fifth meeting this year that the group should restore a production and pricing arrangement based on a marker price of $17 to $19 for a barrel of crude oil.

The system existed until last December, when OPEC abandoned the idea of a firm price structure in favor of price cutting as a way to gain a larger market share. The Saudi Arabian oil minister's suggestion would replace the temporary price support plan that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries adopted in August. It expires Oct. 31.

The new Saudi proposal gives an indication of what OPEC hopes to do next. With the temporary plan working well, the organization's members would like to achieve a permanent production and pricing agreement. But the oil market's present weakness reflects skepticism that OPEC could establish a tough program.

Sheik Yamani seemed evasive when asked whether the present pact, which helped lift prices to $14 from about $9 a barrel by limiting OPEC's output to 16.8 million barrels a day, might be extended two months. Some delegates have proposed an extension if no permanent accord is reached.

"Now that's a very big if," Yamani said. "I do not want to say anything that will put an end to the conference."

Such an arrangement would require deep changes in the Saudi pricing system, which is based on so-called netback sales. Under this method, the price of crude oil is based on the price of refined products.

Black chamber plans Jubilee

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

The Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs is sponsoring a Jubilee, and James Fuller, vice president for education and small business operation incubators, said at Monday's meeting he hopes it will be an annual event.

"The first Jubilee will celebrate the contributions of black cowboys and pioneers to settling the West, and helping make Texas what it is today," Fuller said. The Chamber is bringing in Project Replica, a collection of black cowboys and pioneers made by Lubbock artist Eddie Dixon. The Jubilee is scheduled to open at Midland Center at 9:30 a.m. on Nov. 7, followed by a 5:30 p.m. reception for the artist, and a western fashion show at 7 p.m.

On Nov. 8, there will be a parade at 9 a.m., leaving from Midland Center and going west on Wall to the Holiday Inn Convention Center. According to Fuller, six junior high bands from Odessa have committed to the parade, as have bands from Midland. He urged local organizations and businesses to get involved. "This may be sponsored by the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, but we want to involve the Permian Basin and as many Basin communities as possible" in this, he said. The event is sanctioned by the Texas Sesquicentennial Commission.

There will also be artists from Los Angeles, Houston and Odessa with displays at the Jubilee. Fuller urged area artists, and organizations interested in having entries in the parade to contact the Chamber's task force.

Following the parade, the exhibit will be at the Convention Center until 7 p.m., when the Chamber will hold its inauguration dinner and dance.

In other business, the members discussed the upcoming Permian Basin Black Chamber Ebony Bar Awards banquet at the Odessa Hilton on Oct. 25. President Robbyne Fuller urged members to attend, pointing out that there around 12 Midlanders nominated for the award, and that the Basin chamber had been very supportive of the Midland group's efforts.

Also, she told members that the Chamber is planning a seminar for either Nov. 17 or Nov. 18, or perhaps both days, and asked members for comments on what topics most interested them so she could make arrangements. The seminar will begin at 7:30 p.m. at Community National Bank.

Oil Show pre-registration set

The Desk & Derrick Club of Midland is preparing to help pre-register guests for the 1986 Permian Basin Oil Show, and this year there are some new locations.

Pre-registration is scheduled for Oct. 13 and 14 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the following locations: Entrance to the Permian Basin Oil SHow, 42nd Street and Andrews Highway, Odessa; Midland Center, Midland; Old COuntry Club Building, Andrews; Petco, Monahans; ARCO Oil & Gas Co., Crane; ARCO, Denver City; ARCO, Coahoma; Petroleum Information Center, Abilene; Reed Tire Co., San Angelo; and Hobbs Chamber of Commerce, Hobbs.

The oil patch may be going through tough times, but organizers of the world's largest petroleum trade show say the Permian Basin Oil Show will have the most exhibitors in its 46-year history.

The biennial show to be held Oct. 14-18 will be important because there are so many new people in the oil business, said Woody Gregory, an Odessa rig service operator and president of the non-profit organization which puts on the show.

"I don't think that this year will be so much showing off of new technology, but showing off to new people in the industry," said Gregory. "There have been so many changes in the last year, so many early retirements, particularly within the major producing companies. The people that will be here are not going to be that well acquainted with what's available."

The show was 98 percent sold out on Oct. 1, the latest that space has ever been available, Gregory said. However, 530 exhibitors have committed to attend, compared with 521 in 1984. The show actually was sold out last November, but cancellations forced oil show organizers to actively recruit companies to fill the spaces.

BankAmerica considers offer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Directors of ailing BankAmerica Corp. say they are reviewing a $2.7 billion merger offer from First Interstate Bancorp.

The approximately $18-a-share proposal, unveiled late Monday, would join the nation's second- and ninth-largest bank companies.

BankAmerica, plagued by problem loans that have contributed to nearly $1 billion in losses during the past year, had $118.5 billion in assets at the start of the year, while Los Angeles-based First Interstate has used an aggressive expansion program to build its assets to $49 billion.

The announcement came on a day in which BankAmerica's board of directors appointed Frank N. Newman vice chairman and chief financial officer to replace John Poelker, who resigned last summer.

Newman had been executive vice president and chief financial officer of Wells Fargo & Co. in San Francisco.

San Francisco-based BankAmerica also announced that lucrative severance packages have been approved for president Samuel Armacost and 10 other top executives. The undisclosed "golden parachute" payments would be triggered in the event of a hostile takeover, but not in a friendly merger.

Under the buyout proposal, each of BankAmerica's 154-million shares of common stock would be exchanged for 0.22 of a share of First Interstate common stock and one share of preferred stock with a value estimated by First Interstate's investment banker, Goldman Sachs & Co., at $6 per share.

BankAmerica stock closed up 87½ cents to $12.25 a share Monday on the New York Stock Exchange before the announcement. First Interstate fell 37½ cents to $54.75.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Occidental strikes oil in Peruvian Amazon

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Armand Hammer, chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corp., announced the first well drilled in the Peruvian Amazon jungle under the company's new contract tested oil at the rate of 11,200 barrels a day.

Occidental said the test rate for the Schviyacu No. 20, which was drilled in Block 1-AB, was the highest the company had ever achieved in Peru.

The well, located a one-third of a mile from the nearest producing well, extends the northern limits of the Shiviyacu field that was discovered in 1973.

Occidental said it will conduct further drilling to determine the size of the new extension to the field.

Hammer said additional opportunities exist on Block 1-AB to increase both reserves and production.

A Belcher unit will operate the facility, which also includes 1.25 million barrels of storage capacity and two terminals with loading docks and facilities for truck, rail and water transportation.

Belcher said the added asphalt production, storage and terminal facilities enable it to better service its growing southeast markets.

HOUSTON (SWN) — The directors of Kaneb Services, Inc. announced the election of John R. Barnes as president and CEO. He also has been elected a director of the company. James R. Whatley, interim president and CEO, continues as chairman of the board of directors.

Barnes, 42, has been president of Stanton Oil Co., a privately held exploration and production company based in Dallas, since 1984. From 1980 to 1984 he was president of Dallas-based Dorchester Gas Corp.

In commenting on the announcement Whatley said, "The nominating committee conducted an intensive search and evaluated a number of candidates qualified for consideration for this position. We believe that Barnes' background and experience in many aspects of the oil and gas industry uniquely qualify him to lead the company at this important point in Kaneb's history."

Pengo announces effective date of stock split

FORT WORTH (SWN) — Pengo Industries, Inc., Fort Worth, announced that the one for ten reverse common stock split recently approved by its shareholders became effective on October 3.

The exchange of shares will be handled by the company's transfer agent, InterFirst Bank Fort Worth, N.A. The company stated that fractional shares will not be issued, but will be cashed out at the closing price of Pengo Common Stock on the New York Stock Exchange as of October 2, 1986.

Alaskan plant targets Asian countries for refined exports

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — A proposed refinery at the terminus of the 800-mile trans-Alaska oil pipeline will make high quality jet and diesel fuel for export to Asian countries, officials from the new company and the state of Alaska announced.

They said that the federal law prohibiting export of North Slope Alaskan crude oil does not prohibit the export of refined petroleum products and company officials have targeted Japan, South Korea, Taiwan and Thailand as the markets.

Export of refined Alaska petroleum products can contribute to the improvement in the nation's trade imbalance," Alaska Gov. Bill Sheffield told a news conference to announce plans for the 100,000 barrel-a-day refinery.

Sheffield and others have been seeking federal permission to export Alaska's North Slope crude to the Orient, and Japan has expressed interest in buying it. But the mood in Congress has been against changing the law and allowing Alaskan oil to flow to Asia.

Plans by Alaska Pacific Refinery Inc. call for shipping the highly refined oil products to Pacific Rim markets when the refinery is completed between October 1988 and January 1989.

J. Timothy Campbell, president of the Santa Barbara, Calif.-based company, said the refinery will be built with $750 million in private investments during the next 30 months.

Before construction can begin, the Alaska Department of Conservation must approve the firm's air quality permit.

Area's retail sales drop in first quarter

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

Figures compiled by the state comptroller's offices show retail sales in Midland and Odessa were down significantly in the first quarter of this year.

Sales tax payments to the two cities, as of the close of the 1986 fiscal year Sept. 30, show Midland's payments 9.4 percent less than in 1985, according to Midland Finance Director Troy Gifford.

Odessa's receipts for the 1986 fiscal year, according to figures provided by Fiscal Services Director Frank Muser, were off 5.4 percent from last year. Muser termed the decrease "significant," since the one cent sales tax represents "a little over a quarter of the city's revenue sources."

Midland received slightly more than $7.9 million in 1986, while Odessa got nearly $7.3 million.

Gifford said preliminary estimates indicate Midland should receive about $7 million in 1987, while Muser said he expected Odessa to receive about $7.3 million.

In 1985, Midland received nearly $8.8 million, compared to Odessa's nearly $7.7 million. In 1984, Midland's total sales tax payments were slightly more than $7.7 million and Odessa's nearly $7.3.

The downturn in 1983 saw Midland's sales tax receipts drop to slightly more than $7.3 million and Odessa's were slightly less than $7.3 million. In 1982, with the bust not having caught up the boom, Midland's sales tax receipts totaled nearly $9.6 million, while Odessa stood at an all time high of slightly more than $10.6 million.

Sales tax payments to cities by the state comptroller's office represent the addition of one cent to the state's .04125 cents on the dollar.

Reports from the state comptroller's office show Midland's sales tax payments from July to August of this year decreased by nearly 58.6 percent. However, the dramatic decrease was due, in part, to an adjustment by the comptroller's office because sales receipts that should have been credited to Odessa from a business were credited earlier to Midland. However, even with the adjustment, Odessa receipts in August were only up 16.1 percent from July.

Midland received $942,753 in July, but only $390,558 in August. Odessa got $587,495 in July and $682,301 in August, according to the state comptroller's office.

Midland's gross sales in the first quarter of calendar year 1986 were off 11.9 percent from the same period in 1985, while Odessa's gross sales showed a decrease of 15.3 percent.

In the first quarter, Midland retail sales only were down 6.4 percent, while Odessa showed a decrease of 7.9 percent. Building material sales in Midland were down 24.2 percent, while Odessa's sales in the same quarter were off only 5.6 percent from the previous year.

General merchandise sales in Midland in the first quarter of 1986 were off only three percent from the same quarter in 1985, while Odessa was down a whopping 35.4 percent in the same period.

Food store sales in Midland slipped two percent during the first quarter of this year. In Odessa, food sales dropped 31.3 percent. Midland's automotive sales in this period dropped 10.9 percent, while Odessa's declined 11.4 percent.

Midland clothing sales, from the first quarter of 1985 to the same period in 1986, increased 5.2 percent. Odessa clothing sales in this same period rose 19.2 percent.

Home furnishing sales in Midland decreased 19.2 percent in this period, while Odessa saw a decline of only 13.3 percent.

Restaurants in Midland saw sales increase 3.2 percent, while comparable sales in Odessa rose 12.1 percent.

Midland drug stores showed a sales loss in this period of 4.5 percent, while Odessa drug stores recorded an increase of 3.2 percent.

Retail liquor sales in Odessa took the biggest beating of any category from first quarter 1985 to first quarter 1986 with a sales loss of 46.3 percent. Midland's liquor sales in this period decreased only 3.2 percent.

In the category of agriculture/forestry during this period, Midland showed an increase of 33 percent, while Odessa recorded an increase of 134.6 percent.

Mining activity in Midland recorded a sales loss of 23.6 percent, while Odessa showed a loss of only 3.1 percent.

Odessa's construction sales showed an increase from the first quarter of 1985 to first quarter 1986 of 4.6 percent compared to only 1.5 percent in Midland. Midland manufacturing sales lost only 7.9 percent in this period, while Odessa showed a decrease in manufacturing sales of 23.8 percent.

In the first quarter of 1986, sales related to transportation and utilities in Odessa showed a loss of 20.6 percent, while Midland gained 29 percent in this category.

Two lawsuits filed so far in wake of shigellosis outbreak

By JANE MARLER-DEES
Staff Writer

No new litigation has surfaced this week, so the count stands at two lawsuits having been filed as a result of the shigellosis outbreak that affected some 300 Permian Basin residents.

A class action suit was filed Wednesday against Creative Food n' Co. and Comark, the registered owners of Taco Villa restaurants, although a Comark spokeswoman said this morning the company had not been served with either suit.

Taco Villas in Odessa were one of three alleged purveyors of a tainted batch of shredded lettuce thought to have been the culprit in a recent shigellosis outbreak which struck over 300 Permian Basin victims.

The original petition in the second suit, filed by Fernando Rodriguez of Odessa, is filed "on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated."

David Greenhaw, attorney for Rodriguez, said a class action suit was the only way to tend to this problem.

"It's gonna be expensive to prove this case...individually the damages aren't high," Greenhaw said, adding that he was also representing other persons in the case, although he would not give the additional names.

"It's now up to the court to certify the class.

"After the defendants respond, we'll file a motion to certify the class and then it's up to the court's discretion," Greenhaw said.

If the court doesn't certify the class action suit, Greenhaw said it would continue nonetheless as an individual suit.

The suit states it is attempting to find the defendants negligent in selling contaminated food, negligent for possessing a "conscious disregard for the plaintiffs," liable in neglecting to provide "food that isn't contaminated with bacteria" and in violation of the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Act.

The suit claims the food purchased from a restaurant owned by Creative Food n' Fun Co. caused Rodriguez and many others to get shigellosis which resulted in pain and discomfort and required medical attention.

Rodriguez's suit asks for an unspecific amount of general and punitive damages and attorneys fees.

The first suit, filed Friday, Sept. 26, by Sherman Cox and Gary Cox, seeks damages from Creative Food n' Fun Co. and Comark on causes stemming from breach of fiduciary duty to corporate negligence.

The Coxes, owners of Texas Burger restaurants and Taco Villa franchises, claim Comark didn't notify them of the tainted lettuce, but did notify 19 other Taco Villa stores which were wholly owned by Comark.

Gary Riley, attorney for the Coxes, is out of town and could not be reached for comment, an office spokeswoman said.

Daniel family donates East Texas village replica to Baylor University

RYE (AP) — An entire private village — a replica of an early settlement — is being moved 210 miles from its East Texas location to Waco.

The first of 100 vehicles carrying 23 buildings of the Plantation Ranch Village began their two-day journey Monday morning.

The Bill and Vara Daniel family are donating the village, which they value at $3 million, to Baylor University. The Daniels, who live in Liberty, also gave the university $300,000 to help maintain and operate the village and to employ a full-time curator.

Baylor and the American Association of Museums officials say the move is the largest of a single village in U.S. history. Over the last three months, more than 8,000 artifacts from the 23 buildings were moved to Baylor as part of the donation.

The Daniels purchased the site in 1948. They restored a complete town and furnished it with thousands of antiques, spending more than $2 million.

Gonzalez: Cargo plane on CIA mission

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Texas congressman is claiming a cargo plane that crashed Saturday at Kelly Air Force Base near San Antonio killing three people was on a CIA mission carrying weapons to Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Democratic Rep. Henry Gonzalez first made the accusation on the House floor Monday and repeated it in a telephone interview, following claims by the Sandinista government in Nicaragua that its troops had shot down a Contra rebel cargo plane, killing three Americans on board and capturing a fourth.

The Nicaraguan defense ministry in Managua said the surviving American identified himself and the dead men as U.S. military advisers based in El Salvador.

Jazz musicians could complete 'Unbroken Circle'

As has mentioned here on numerous occasions, country-western music is a subject close to my heart.

When I die I want Willie Nelson to sing "Precious Memories" at my funeral.

That will be followed by John Anderson doing, "I Like Hanging Around in a Honky Tonk Crowd" and Hank Williams Jr. singing, "All My Rowdy Friends Have Settled Down."

Waylon Jennings will be expected to add a couple of his favorites, as will George Jones, Merle Haggard, Jerry Jeff Walker and Tom T. Hall.

Others, if they promise to keep it strictly country, will be allowed to perform, as well. First time they cross over and doing anything even remotely resembling hard rock, however, they will be forcibly removed from the stage by David Allen Coe, Johnny Paycheck and any other country star who has spent time in prison.

They will, for this occasion, be doubling as bodyguards and pallbearers.

Once all the musicians have finished their solo acts, they will reunite on stage and conclude the festivities with a rousing rendition of "Will the Circle be Unbroken."

When a person turns his own funeral into a giant country-western music bash — calling on some of the biggest names in the business to entertain — you know he's a big fan.

After all, these guys don't play for free, you know.

This past Sunday, however, I found myself listening to a different kind of music.

Jazz.

It was at the final performance of this year's Midland Jazz Festival, a class act that annually draws 20 of the best musicians from the world of jazz.

Still, those who entertained here last week were not exactly household names, at least not for most of us.

Carl Fontana, Ralph Sutton, Gus Johnson, Jake Hanna and Milt Hinton.

Recognize any of them?

I didn't think so. Neither did I.

But, as one aficionado who was seated next to me Sunday said, "Them cats can flat out play."

That's a big difference in jazz and country music. Country stars are good ol' boys. In jazz, they are dudes and cats.

Another difference is the way jazz musicians dress. You won't see any Porter Waggoner type get-ups — glittery suits that resemble a cheap movie marquee and multicolored cowboy boots — on their stage.

No, indeed. Jazzmen dress like normal human beings. They wear dress slacks, open-collared shirts and sports coats. One trumpet player had on a bright red shirt with a matching handkerchief, but that's as wild as it got.

And, here's another thing that impressed me: the musicians are judged on their abilities and not the color of their skins. Blacks and whites shared the stage Sunday and the only thing that seemed to matter was the music.

A black trumpet player would finish a hard-charging solo and the white saxophonist standing next to him would pat his shoulder and the two would share a laugh.

It was enough to make the rowdiest Southern truck-stop redneck put a Jesse Jackson bumper sticker on his pickup.

It was also enough to make this hard-core Bob Wills disciple acknowledge that there are indeed other forms of music. I still want Willie, Waylon and the boys to perform at my funeral, but I might be willing to add a brass section to "Will the Circle be Unbroken."

And, I just happen to know the "dudes" who can handle it.

Gonzalez said both crashes indicate the depth and danger of Reagan administration military involvement in Central America.

"It's just tragic," Gonzalez said. "I have been predicting that sooner or later we're going to have American soldiers shot at or killed. This administration is on an irreversible course of intervention."

Gonzalez said he had no independent confirmation of the crash in Nicaragua.

But he said the plane that crashed in San Antonio before dawn Saturday was owned by Southern Air Transport Co., which he said has a history of CIA involvement.

Gonzalez said there have been other incidents of U.S. personnel killed or captured by forces of the leftist Sandinista government.

"All of this is covered up and there is no follow-through," he said.

The congressman has long been critical of the military's use of civilian aircraft to carry soldiers. He said regular military personnel often are "hostage to twilight operations" of the CIA.

The military spends $455 million a year on private transportation of military personnel, Gonzalez said.

Gonzalez said the crash in Texas did $2 million damage to the air base.

CIA officials have refused comment on the allegations about the Texas crash.

"Our policy is that we don't confirm or deny allegations of intelligence activities," CIA spokeswoman Sharon Foster said.

Congress has approved supplying the Contras with $100 million in military and non-military aid. Gonzalez claimed on the House floor that the administration already is using part of the money.

New York woman testifies she paid $14,000 for baby

DALLAS (AP) — A New York woman says she paid $14,000 in what she believed was a legal adoption through Dallas attorney Robert I. Kingsley, convicted last week of felony child purchasing charges.

Virginia Dauler-Phinney, who adopted a 7-month-old Grand Prairie girl, testified Monday that she and her husband have since spent more than $42,000 in attorney's fees and travel expenses to make the adoption legal.

In addition, she says she was shocked to learn that the baby's natural mother had an IQ of 57, which means she is mentally retarded.

Dauler-Phinney and other witnesses testified during the punishment phase of the 61-year-old attorney's case. Authorities contend that Kingsley handled 26 illegal adoptions.

She said that she gave the attorney a blank check for $9,000 that he assured her would be placed in a trust fund to help pay the mother's medical expenses. But when the check returned from the bank she discovered that it had been written to a stock brokerage, she said.

She realized something was amiss when Kingsley called her from jail to say adoption records had been seized by investigators, she said.

Larry Blanton, who along with his wife Donna have been indicted on charges of selling the baby the Dauler-Phinney's eventually adopted, testified Monday that Kingsley gave them $3,700 to leave town after authorities began investigating the adoption.

VILLAGE

The ranch, on the banks of the Trinity River south of Rye, for years was the site where the Daniels entertained thousands of handicapped children and underprivileged children. It also served as the location for Boy Scout Jamborees and other church, civic and holiday activities.

As volunteers from the Texas Association of Structural Movers slowly worked their way from the ranch's airstrip to the makeshift exit, Daniel thanked each crew member for their long hours of labor.

"We're gonna be a part of Texas history," one rig driver said as he started his trek to Waco. "That's why I'm here. Besides, this'll let folks know home movers ain't such a bad lot."

Calvin Smith, director of Baylor's Strecker Musueum, said the village will offer a living history to students and the general population.

"This village is a typical plantation village," Smith said, as the final building prepared to leave the ranch nearly seven hours after the first group of buildings pulled out. "Prior to World War II, there were about 800 people living here and it was a self-sustaining village."

"People will actually be able to see how the state's founders and forefathers lived and that's what makes this gift so important," he said.

Daniel said donating the village to Baylor will ensure its preservation.

"It's a day of mixed emotions. We're sad that it's leaving, but we're happy knowing that it will become an important part of Baylor and Texas history," he said.

Sky Chefs make sure not all plane food is plain

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Plane food just doesn't seem so plain anymore, at least not for many first-class passengers flying out of Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

While coach passengers receive frozen, reheated dinners and snacks, those lucky few flying first class on international flights dine on lobster, truffles and canapes that could grace any ambassador's table.

"This is not exactly what people refer to as airline catering," said Charles Boley, an executive chef with Sky Chefs, the firm that services American, Lufthansa and Midwest Express airlines.

Although the first-class meals are just a small portion of the 30,000 meals prepared by Sky Chefs each day, nearly half of the 1,300 Sky Chefs employees work on some facet of their preparation, Personnel Director Bob Peluse said.

"It's very labor intensive," he said. Duties at the facility range from washing and slicing the fresh produce that is flown in daily to creating intricate vegetable flower arrangements in a pineapple carved like a peacock.

"One must also be an artist as well as a chef," Peluse said.

"You have to have a flair," Boley agreed.

New employees start out with simple tasks and the workers that seem to have a "flair" are given progressively more difficult jobs, Peluse said.

"Those who show promise and skill are promoted to this area," he said, standing in the large kitchen where exquisitely detailed hors d'oeuvres are created.

"It really takes a very knowledgeable person," Peluse said. Even relatively plain meat dishes, like veal slices, must be carefully prepared according to the airlines' wishes.

"We have to cut it and cook it to very exacting specifications," Peluse said.

Despite the often delicate skill necessary for some dishes, most of the meals are prepared on an assembly line with one person putting lettuce in a bowl, another adding tomatoes and a third carrots to make a salad.

"It's a factory environment," Peluse said. And even in first class, the desserts are usually purchased from another company and delivered frozen to Sky Chefs' facility at the airport.

Besides giving real meaning to the word "class" in first class, the fancy fare also helps alleviate boredom on the lengthy flights, Peluse said.

"The main reason for eating on an airplane is to divert your attention from flying," he explained. "We're in the diversion business."

Purpose of 'handicapped week' to increase awareness

From Staff Reports

This week has been proclaimed "National Employ the Handicapped Week," according to Linda Ragsdale, vocational counselor of the Texas Rehabilitation Commission.

Since 1944, when President Roosevelt declared the first "National Employ the Handicapped Week," time has been set aside each October to increase the public's awareness of disabled people and their strengths and abilities.

"There are disabled people living in every community in the country," Ms. Ragsdale said. "There are disabled people right here in Midland. Our job at the Texas Rehabilitation Commission is to help these people find jobs, improve the quality of their lives and allow them to contribute to society as taxpaying, productive citizens."

The TRC, with field offices across the state, helps disabled people to find and keep good jobs, Ms. Ragsdale said.

The services provided through the Vocational Rehabilitation Division include counseling and guidance, medical, psychological and vocational evaluation, job training, medical treatment, job placement and offering devices such as artificial limbs, hearing aids and wheelchairs.

The Extended Rehabilitation Services program offers work and residential living to people considered too severely disabled for regular vocational rehabilitation services.

Also, Texas' five independent living centers receive major financial support from TRC, which allows the center to help disabled people overcome obstacles preventing them from living independently as possible.

For additional information, contact the TRC office in Midland at 684-5791.

White, Clements file expenditure reports

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White has raised more money and has more left to spend in the final month of his campaign for reelection, aides say.

Monday was a filing deadline for state-required campaign expenditure reports.

Former Gov. Bill Clements, White's GOP challenger, has about $152,000 on hand in his campaign accounts, while the incumbent Democrat has close to $2 million, spokesmen for the campaigns said.

White's finances were reported in a series of documents related to several campaign committees. Shannon Ratliff of Austin, White's campaign treasurer, said the bottom line shows White has raised about $8 million and spent $6 million.

"I think it's gone very well. You are correct to perceive that this has not been an ideal year for raising money," Ratliff said.

"I'm sure we are still going to be trying to raise more. It seems like, based on (Clements') media, he's buying everything he can buy. He's apparently relying on paid media," he said.

John Weaver, Clements' deputy press secretary, said the GOP candidate and ex-governor has raised $6,260,000 and spent $6,110,000.

"Our fund-raising is ongoing and it's strong. With the economy as it is, it is a little bit harder to raise money than it has been in the past. We're pleased with how much we've raised. We need to raise more," Weaver said.

"We're going to spend what we need to," he said.

The Clements campaign has borrowed about $1.3 million, according to Weaver.

Ratliff said the White campaign has borrowed "very little."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby reported raising $120,000 and spending $249,000 in his bid for reelection. The Republican challenger, David Davison, listed donations of $47,000 and expenditures of $40,000.

Docudrama on custody battle 'fictionalized'

BRYAN (AP) — An NBC docudrama about a former Bryan resident's custody fight for his daughter was a "highly, highly fictionalized" movie, the father's lawyer said.

"It brushed up against the truth in a couple of instances, but mostly it was just fiction," said Bryan attorney John Hawtrey. "I think my wife said it best. It was tinselized."

The docudrama "A Fight for Jenny" revolved around the still ongoing custody fight between Linda Palmore and her ex-husband, Anthony Sidoti.

When the two divorced in Florida in 1980, Mrs. Palmore was awarded custody of their only child Melanie.

Mrs. Palmore, who is white, was remarried to Clarence Palmore, who is black.

Two years after the divorce Sidoti tried to get custody of his daughter, saying his wife was neglecting Melanie and having relations with a number of men.

A Tampa circuit judge awarded Sidoti custody of the child saying in an opinion, "despite the strides that have been made in bettering relations between the races in this country, it is inevitable that Melanie, if allowed to remain in her present situation, will become more vulnerable to peer pressures (and) suffer from the social stigmatization that is sure to come."

But the Supreme Court ruled the argument invalid in April 1984, declaring, "The Constitution cannot control such prejudices, but neither can it tolerate them."

Shortly after the verdict, Sidoti moved to Bryan, where he worked as an air conditioning repairman. He also had his lawyers pursue custody again.

Hawtrey said the NBC movie had several inaccuracies.

The time of Mrs. Palmore's marriage to Palmore was wrong as was the portrayal of Palmore as a "hard-working, energetic man," Hawtrey told the Bryan-College Station Eagle.

Mrs. Palmore and her attorney were in Florida and unavailable for comment.

Hawtrey criticized the movie for emphasizing the racial issue in the case.

"That was the whole movie," he said.

Hawtrey said he expects Mrs. Palmore to sign papers within the next month giving custody of Melanie to Anthony Sidoti, but leaving her with visitation rights.

Sarah Ryan, a Bryan attorney appointed to represent Melanie, said she had not seen the drama, but said the last time she had spoken to Sidoti's daughter, Melanie had indicated she wanted to live with her father.

Murdered woman 'a very nice person'

EL PASO (AP) — A woman who allegedly was shot to death by her husband in front of her two young daughters was friendly but mostly stayed inside her home, a neighor of the family said.

Anna Flores said Consuelo Lucero, the maiden name she used in checking into an apartment, had told her she was unemployed and divorced and that a brother lived with her.

"She was a very nice person," Ms. Flores said Monday, the day after authorities found the two small children in the room with two dead bodies. "With me, she was friendly all the time. I saw her Wednesday or Thursday.

"She stayed all day in the house except when she went out and picked up her little girl."

The sisters, Annette, 2, and Alicia, 4, were temporarily placed with relatives Monday after their father shot their mother and himself to death in a motel room, police said.

Alfredo C. Antunez, 36, and his wife Consuelo, were found dead in the motel Sunday by a family friend, said Sgt. Jimmy Apodaca.

Police said Antunez apparently shot his wife in the chest and himself in the head with a small caliber pistol Saturday, police said.

Ruben Rodriguez, a friend of the Antunez family said Sunday that he stopped by the motel room Saturday and the two girls said their parents were asleep. Rodriguez called police after the girls told him again their parents were sleeping when he returned Sunday afternoon, he said.

He said the couple recently separated and Antunez was upset about a brain tumor he had.

"He was trying to make up to her, but I don't know. It didn't work out," Rodriguez said. "He mentioned something about killing himself last week."

Rodriguez and his family and a neighboring family were to have joined the Antunezes for a Sunday picnic.

Apartment office manager Teresa Rico, who reported she saw Ms. Lucero on Friday, said the woman had used her maiden name and was renting the apartment for $270 per month.

Records showed Ms. Lucero had reported to the government rent-subsidized apartment complex that she was receiving $284 per month from Aid for Families with Dependent Children and $211 a month in food stamps.

Manager Rico said the oldest child had been at a pre-kindergarten.

Ms. Flores said Ms. Lucero would take the children out to play in the little playground just a few steps outside the door of their unit.

Judge allows change of venue for McFadden trial

GILMER (AP) — The central Texas city of Belton has been designated as the site for a Nov. 3 trial for Jerry Walter McFadden, charged in the strangulation slaying of a Hawkins teenager.

State District Judge Virgil Mulanax agreed to allow the change of venue in light of intense publicity surrounding the case.

McFadden's attorney, Vernard Solomon, said Monday the change wouldn't be completely established until he questions potential jurors in Belton. If Solomon's voir dire proceedings turn up prejudiced candidates he will ask for another change of venue.

"I would say that half the state of Texas knows my client escaped from jail," he said. "Regardless of whether he was guilty or not they think they know he did it. That obviously prejudices their opinion."

Solomon has said he doubts if the trial will be held in 1986. He says there is too much evidence, scattered between Dallas and Gilmer by lawmen, that still has to be viewed. He predicts the case will go to trial early next year.

Solomon said moving farther away from the Hawkins community will help his client but the change of venue can be a hindrance, also.

"I know how the people of East Texas think and feel," Solomon said.

McFadden is charged in the strangulation death of Suzanne Harrison, 18, who disappeared along with three friends while returning from Lake Hawkins May 4.

State judge orders arrest of unrepentant preacher

AUSTIN (AP) — Sheriff's deputies have been ordered to arrest the Rev. W.N. Otwell, a Tarrant County preacher who has denied court orders to obtain a state license for his church-run boys home.

State District Judge Paul Davis of Austin issued the arrest order Monday after Otwell left the courtroom prior to a contempt hearing.

"If they are going to arrest him, they are going to have to find him," said Pastor Aubrey Vaughan of Houston, an Otwell backer.

Otwell conducted a rally near the Travis County courthouse and was in the courtroom shortly before the hearing, but was not on hand when Davis convened the proceeding.

Davis instructed deputies to find Otwell and bring him to the courtroom. Travis County authorities said late Monday night that he had not been apprehended and that Tarrant County authorities had been notified to arrest him.

Davis ordered a continuation of the $100-a-day fine against Otwell for violating the state law requiring youth homes to get state licenses.

He also ordered Otwell to allow the state to survey his Community Baptist Church in Tarrant County. Assistant Attorney General Sue Berkel said the state wants to sell a portion of the property to cover the civil penalties.

The state also wants Davis to assess a $500-a-day fine against Otwell for defying the March order to get a license or close the boys' home. A hearing on that request will be conducted when Otwell is taken into custody, Davis said.

Otwell has said he is resisting the order because he sees it as improper state regulation of a church facility. Vaughan said the preacher chose not to attend the Monday hearing for the same reason.

"He says the court does not have any jurisdiction over the church," said Vaughan, pastor of the Grace Baptist Church of Houston.

Asked where Otwell had gone, Vaughan told reporters, "He's just not around. He's unavailable right now."

At the pre-hearing rally near the courthouse, Otwell announced a "sack cloth tour." Many of the Otwell supporters who packed Davis' courtroom wore sack cloths.

The tour is an effort to call God's people to account for the terrible condition of this state and to repent of it and work to get some good men back in Austin to help solve the mounting moral and social problems of our day," said a flyer announcing the event.

Tour organizers called on supporters to vote against Gov. Mark White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Attorney General Jim Mattox in November.

Several Otwell supporters stood up and tried to talk to Davis during the hearing, but the judge said they were not parties in the case and could not speak.

Backers of the Tarrant County church and boys home sang hymns in the courtroom halls while the hearing continued.

For women concerned about their health and appearance, Pennyrich carries a complete line of Nutri-Metics cosmetics, the first line of cosmetics designed with only natural organic ingredients.

This line was developed in 1961 by Mulford J. Nobbs, president of Con-Star Industries, Inc. Nobbs had visited a community high in the Himilayan Mountains where a population appeared to have found the fountain of youth. In Hunza, women who were 80 had skin that looked as if they were only 30. Nobbs learned that the golden apricot played a big part in their lives. In addition to eating the fruit, the women used an oil from the apricot kernel as their only form of skin care.

This enlightening experience convinced Nobbs that he should design a line of cosmetics which would be comprised solely of natural organic ingredients. Consequently, his Nutri-metics line has a list of ingredients which looks good enough to eat. Along with apricot oil are honey, almond, mint, oranges, lemons, limes papaya extract, special herbs, soy bean and avocado. The Nutri-Metics line at The Pennyrich shop is truly natural, organic, dermagenic, pH balanced, and hypoallergenic. Considering the fact that your bloodstream absorbs what you put on your skin, the Nutri-Metics line of cosmetics made with all natural ingredients makes sense.

While you are in the shop be sure to browse through the beautiful lingerie. Pennyrich has lingerie for all occasions, nursing gowns, French style bras and panties, along with Jezebel strapless bras and merry widows. Double C Stable has fun and exercise for the entire family Learning to ride can be a fun experience for the entire family and Double C boasts some of the finest riding facilities in West Texas. These include a large indoor arena, a permanent dressage ring, round pen, wash racks, hot walkers, hacking, galloping area and a full set of jumps.

Training cutting horses is just one of the many services Double C Stables offers to their clientele. Gary Combs, a member of the National Cutting Horse Association, is available for training both horse and ridder in the intricate art of the cutting horse.

"Cutting is a sport that came off the ranches," Combs explained. "Just like the rodeo. In cutting competition the rider and horse separate one particular cow from the herd and then keep him from rejoining the rest." Combs added that originally this technique was used to separate sick cows from the herd for vacinatingor other medical treatments.

"It usually takes about one full year of training for a horse and rider to learn cutting," Combs said. "Most of it is up to the cow sense and athletic ability of the horse. Once a cow is separated from the herd, its all up to the horse and the rider is really along for the ride."

Combs, who learned to ride cutting horses from his father, has trained several prize winners, including the Double C's Doc Gray Bar. He is currently leading the $10,000 Non-Professional Competition in the West Texas Cutting Horse Association (WTCHA) with Cowden Oliver, owner of the Double C Stabel, riding. Doc Gray Bar has already won more than $20,000 in NCHA competition and is available for siring services. Several of his offspring are already competing in NCHA contests.

Doc Gray Lady was a finalist in the G. Newman Memorials Cutting Contest in Abilene recently. Doc Blue Doll was a finalist in the four-year-old futurity in Las Vegas, Nevada. She was also a finalist in the Non-Professional competition held in Amarillo.

Doc Blue Boy is cuttently leading the Gelding Open and the Open in the WTCHA.

Sun She Wolf, another Double C horse, ridden by B.J. Carpenter, Doube C owner, is currently leading the 3,000 Novice in the WTCHA.

"I trained all of these horses and keep them in condition for competition," Combs explained. "We also accept outside horses for training and provide transportation to and from competition. Also we supply coaching at all levels of competition."

Training a cutting horse can be an expensive hobby for an individual, but Double C Stables keeps about 100 head of cattle on the grounds strictly for training purposes.

Riders at all experience levels will find individualized care and service at Double C, where private riding lessons can be scheduled using your horse or Double C's. Beginning riders will be taught how to care for their horse and equipment, as well as riding. More advanced riders can learn new skills and full coaching for competition is available.

Do you have an unbroken horse, or perhaps a horse that hasn't been ridden for awhile? Double C will train your horse for you!

Complete boarding facilities are available, Double C will stable and train all types of horses.

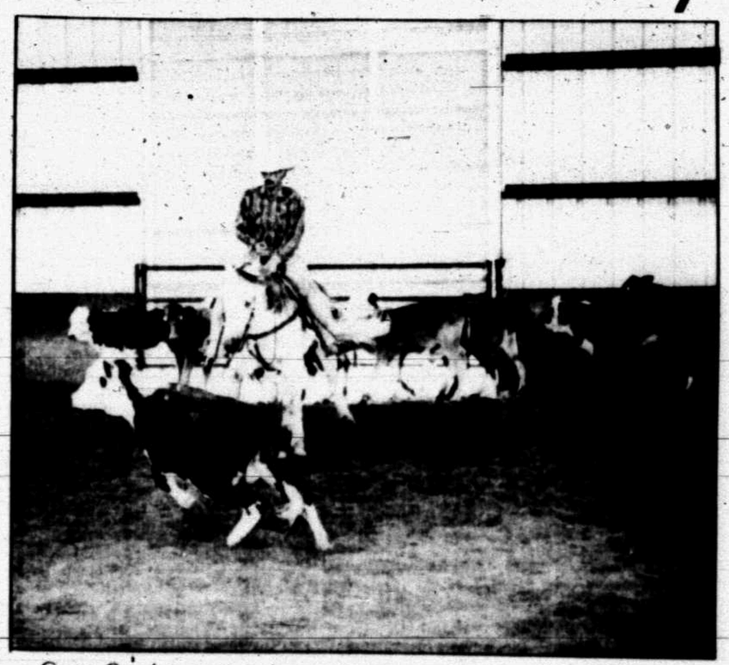

Constant, on-grounds supervision ensures safety and quality care at Double C Stables.

Thanks to their outstanding facilities Double C will be hosting several shows during the year, including a Hunter/Jumper Schooling Show Saturday, Oct. 11. The public is invited and a large crowd of local riders are expected to compete in this show. Entry blanks will be available at the show for anyone interesting in participating.

A Trophy and six ribbons will be awarded to each class. Additional cash prizes will be awarded to first through third place in all stake classes. Champion and Reserve awarded in each division.

Located on Cloverdale Road, two miles east of Florida Avenue, Double C is surrounded by areas suitable for trail riding. New staff member Peggy Trousdale is available to teach English or Western riding. For more information about any of the programs at Double C Stables call 687-6442.

"We do urge anyone who is interested to come out and view our facilities," Combs said. "It's very exciting to watch cutting horses and visitors are always welcome to come out and watch us work the horses."

Yes, just as natural oils in your hands can cause the arms of your favorite sofa or chair to appear greasy and dirty, the natural oils from your bare feet can hasten the soiling of your carpet. If you like to go barefoot, try wearing some comfortable, loose sport socks made of acrylic and/or cotton. You'll find the barefoot comfort is almost there, and your carpet will look prettier longer! Revitalize your old, tired patio with Super-Stone and save

Now is the time to beautify your patio for those lovely Indian summer weekends ahead with Super-Stone.

Super-Stone is a native aggregate stone for covering sidewalks, driveways, patios and pool decks. A 100 percent epoxy system, Super-Stone is unaffected by heat, freeze and thaw, chemicals and petroleum products and resistant to wear and chipping. It is also used on indoor areas in stores, lobbies, restaurants, banks or offices where its slip-proof qualities are especially important. It can even be applied vertically on walls.

This continuous durable surface is applied over concrete — what a beautiful way to rid your concrete of those unsightly cracks and stains. Super-Stone is composed entirely of beautiful natural stone, pebbles, or crushed marble, granite and quartz — and is available in over 30 different colors which can even be custom mixed.

Super-Stone is also available in two sizes, the smaller size being used mostly on patios and pool decks, the larger for sidewalks, porches, entryways and driveways.

Take advantage of our new, low fall prices now and add an exciting new look to that faded, cracked or freeze damaged patio with beautiful Super-Stone.

Want to add on to your existing patio or change its shape? Adding walkways can be useful as well as adding a new look to your backyard. Both old and new concrete can be covered with Super-Stone to create a new look.

Super-Stone is ideal for enclosed porches and sunrooms. Redwood expansion joints can be used to form patterns or designs. And since Super-Stone is unaffected by heat, it is perfect for your jacuzzi or sauna room, where temperatures may reach 200 F degrees. High temperatures have no effect on Super-Stone, which is guaranteed not to get tacky or soft. And another plus; the stone and epoxy surface is fire proof.

No surface is totally maintenance free, but Super-Stone is about as close as you can get. Outdoors (or indoors with proper drains) just hose it down.

Super-Stone of the Permian Basin, Inc. give you a beautiful and natural surface resistent to cracking, chipping and staining for years. Call the Super-Stone experts at 683-6063 or 333-6198 and let them show you how this remarkable surface can enhance the beauty of your home.

Beautify your patio with Super-Stone. Fall prices are now in effect so call 683-6063 or 333-6198 for your free estimate today. This beautiful patio, located in northwest Midland, was revitalized with Super-Stone.

The Hawaiian islands, like tiny tropical jewels in a linkless chain, stretch some 2,000 miles across the vast Pacific Ocean.

Oahu, known as the "Gathering Place," is the capital of Hawaii's five peaceful and principal neighboring islands. Stretching eastward lie the islands of Molokai — the "Friendly Isle" — and Maui — The "Valley Isle". Then there's the biggest island of them all, the big "Big Island" of Hawaii with its spectacular white-ruffled coastline and grumbling volcanoes. And a scant few mile to Oahu's west, suspended in a warm sapphire sea, is the multiflowered "Garden Isle," the island of Kauai.

Each island is unique with its own geography, climate, history and amenities. Isn't it time you visited "The Islands" today?

Mexico, the land of Caribbean sunrises and golden Pacific sunsets, where a rich Indian past and centuries of colonial life form a colorful contrast with sparkling, modern cities.

Mexico offers visitors an attractive choice of accommodations, from Colonial baroque to sweeping contemporary, at prices ranging from economy to luxury. Mexico has something for every taste and preference.

Mexico City has some of the most delicious international cuisine in the world, served in the elegance of the finest restaurants. Mexican cuisine is an adventure in itself!

Sports in Mexico include water skiing, parasailing, scuba and skin diving, excellent hunting in the mountains, golf and tennis at resorts and many major hotels.

A trip to Mexico could be the escape you need to make it through the winter.

And last, but certainly not least, let us tempt you with the Enchanting Island, Barbados. Barbados is the tiny, most easterly island in the Caribbean, which some say that God placed strategically on the border of the Atlantic Ocean and Caribbean Sea.

There are uncrowded satin white beaches, crystal-clear waters for the exploring diver, lilting sounds of caribbean music, culture, sports of every kind, both on land and sea. The duty-free shopping is comparable to the best in the world. Barbados is that fantasy paradise island many dream of, where you can go back to nature or experience the exotic without being cut off from the outside world.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Follow your hunches and you can triumph in business. You find your pockets filled with extra dollars. Travel brings important new contacts and exciting romantic opportunities. Luck will play a role in your reaching a special goal. Guard against careless errors which could prove costly. You need to put speculative ventures on hold while you seek family support.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: WWI aviator-hero Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, St. Louis Cardinals pitcher Jeff Lahti, coronary care pioneer Dr. Christiaan Barnard, comedian-actor Chevy Chase, Hollywood journalist Rona Barrett, statesman John Hay, Pittsburgh Pirates manager-player Danny Murtaugh, football coach Pepper Rodgers.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A positive attitude is your greatest asset now. A conversation with a trusted friend helps you put past mistakes in proper perspective.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not let your loved ones convince you to spend more than your budget allows. Even if you make an incorrect start or two, success is assured.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Domestic concerns may weigh heavily today. A discussion about finances will only make a difficult situation worse. Keep a promise made to a young child.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An old mystery may soon be solved. A loved one is the recipient of good news. Personal relationships flourish when financial pressures ease.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A newcomer makes you feel better about yourself and your life in general. Do not lose sight of your obligations at work. Be diligent.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A major change in your outlook could mean happier times for the entire family. Past experiences helps you make the right decision about a financial problem.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your independent nature wins you many admirers. Some of them will want more of your time and attention than you can give. Be gentle.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Unusual challenges arise in business now, but you meet them successfully. Show more confidence in your abilities and decisions. Tackle those small tasks you have been postponing. Keep all promises you make.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): For the best results, look at the larger picture. A short-sighted decision could mean deep regrets later on. Your sense of humor attracts the attention of an interesting person of the opposite sex.

We've said it before and we'll say it again: "Bill Root is acknowledged as the country's best bridge teacher." If we had any lingering doubts, they were dispelled by his new book, "Commonsense Bidding" (Crown Publishers, 216 pp., hard cover, $19.95; paperback, $9.95). In clear, easy-to-follow prose he has set out a simple system that is sure to bring many points to those who elect to use it.

Many players believe that any two tricks justify a double of a slam. This tale of what happened to one of the world's best players should quickly disillusion them.

"He was on lead against 6 NT and could win the first two tricks with the ace and king of hearts. His opponents were two young men he had never seen before, so he took a chance and doubled. His left-hand opponent realized the expert must have the first two tricks to double 6 NT (probably A-K in a suit), so he bid seven clubs. Our expert doubled again, but now his partner had the opening lead and had to choose between leading a diamond, heart, or spade. He chose to lead a diamond...

"As you can see, with a diamond lead South could win all thirteen tricks and score up 2,330 for making seven clubs doubled. If our unlucky expert had passed 6 NT he would have won 100 points, so his double cost him 2,430 points. Incidentally, the South player's choice to bid 6 NT was a pretty good one; that contract should succeed most of the time."

We like the lesson—and the book!

Will Maddie, Crockett be twosome?

NEW YORK (AP) — Forget all this speculation about when Maddie and Addison are going to get together on the television series "Moonlighting." When are Maddie and Crockett of "Miami Vice" going to be a twosome?

Us magazine, in its Oct. 20 issue, reports that 2,500 readers who answered a survey say Cybill Shepherd of "Moonlighting" and Don Johnson of "Miami Vice" are the sexiest things going.

Miss Shepherd's co-star, Bruce Willis, also made the 10 sexiest list.

After Miss Shepherd, the women named were Linda Evans, Jaclyn Smith, Kathleen Turner, Donna Mills, Joan Collins, Heather Locklear, Elizabeth Taylor, Christie Brinkley and Madonna.

Following Johnson were Tom Cruise, Tom Selleck, Willis, Mark Harmon, Robert Redford, Mel Gibson, Richard Gere, Bruce Springsteen and Pierce Brosnan.

Runners-up included Jane Seymour and Rob Lowe, while Ivan Lendl and Ruth Westheimer were among those who drew mentions.

• • •

PIGEON FORGE, Tenn. (AP) — They're bringing some of Hollywood to Dollywood as part of a $6 million expansion of Dolly Parton's theme park.

The east Tennessee amusement park, near Miss Parton's Sevier County birthplace, will get new crafts shops and a new restaurant.

Also included in the plans are sets from the ABC television movie "A Christmas Angel," which starred Miss Parton and Lee Majors.

The sets, to be transported from Hollywood this week, will be incorporated in a new children's playground, park officials said Monday.

• • •

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Grateful Dead guitarist Jerry Garcia performed at a sold-out concert in his first appearance since he fell critically ill with diabetes three months ago.

Dozens of "Deadheads" cheered Garcia when he arrived Sunday night at the Stone Club. A capacity crowd inside showered affection and appreciation on the guitarist, who was appearing with the Jerry Garcia Band.

Garcia and the Grateful Dead had performed regularly for more than two decades until he fell into a coma in July at his Marin County home.

Thousands of fans deluged Marin General Hospital and a special Grateful Dead hotline with calls, queries and gifts during Garcia's illness.

Rather

NEW YORK (AP) — Dan Rather has told his nationwide audience he is a bit stiff from being mugged but otherwise all right.

At the close of Monday's "CBS Evening News," Rather said he was "assaulted with violence on a Manhattan street."

"Why and exactly by whom remains unclear, and it may never be determined," the 54-year-old Rather said.

"I do know that I was luckier than many other Americans who have been victims of violent crime, and for that I'm very thankful," he said. "Aside from a little stiffness and some bumps and bruises, I'm feeling fine."

He also thanked those who came to his aid and those who expressed their concern.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert Duvall says he was making a character study when he watched the trial of eight men accused of serving on or working for the mob "commission."

Duvall, who portrayed the consigliere, or counselor, to the Corleone crime family in "The Godfather" movies, watched as reputed mob boss Carmine Persico on Monday acted as his own attorney in the federal court trial.

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor watched herself on television during the weekend and remained hospitalized because of dental problems that may require removal of two teeth.

The 54-year-old Miss Taylor, who was admitted Sept. 25 to the Hospital of the Good Samaritan, was urged by her doctor not to travel for about a week, publicist Chen Sam said Monday.

"Miss Taylor remains in a satisfactory condition but is still experiencing considerable pain in the left maxilla (upper jaw)," the publicist said.

"If the pain now present is not reduced to a tolerable level, surgical excision of the involved tooth and the adjacent impacted wisdom tooth is contemplated," she said.

Miss Taylor watched herself Sunday in the ABC-TV movie "There Must Be a Pony," said hospital spokeswoman Betty Schuller.

Miss Taylor portrayed a faded film star trying to make a comeback with the help of a lover, played by Robert Wagner.

Six

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Robert F. Six, an airline pioneer who built Continental Airlines into a major carrier, died Monday. He was 79.

Six began his career by buying a stake in the Southwest Division of Varney Speed Lines of El Paso, Texas, which at the time had only one route between El Paso and Pueblo, Colo. He became general manager in 1936 and president two years later. In 1937, Six renamed the company Continental Airlines and moved it to Denver, where it remained headquartered until it was moved to Los Angeles in 1963. Six relinquished his post as chief executive in 1980.

• • •

ASHBURNHAM, Mass. (AP) — Edmund F. Kressy, who co-created the Lone Ranger comic strip with his wife in 1937, died Sunday. He was 84.

Kressy attended the Cleveland School of Art and worked in the art department of The Plain Dealer. Kressy and his wife, Maryland, derived the Lone Ranger comic strip from radio scripts. The strip was syndicated by King Features Syndicate Inc. He worked for the State Department as art director of its magazine "America," which is circulated in the Soviet Union, the art department of The Associated Press and the Elliot Service Co., a poster company in Mount Vernon, N.Y., from 1955 until his retirement in 1973. He also illustrated the book "How to Grow Your Own Vegetables," written by his son, Michael.

• • •

DOBBS FERRY, N.Y. (AP) — Rudolf Flesch, an authority on literacy and writing, died Sunday. He was 75.

Early in his career, Flesch became known for his advocacy of a plain, easy-to-read writing style, which was the subject of his first book, "The Art of Plain Talk," in 1946. He argued that reading should be taught by the sounds of letters. His writings on the subject included "Why Johnny Can't Read."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For all its cultural diversity, the nation's second-largest city has had one big void: a permanent opera company. Tonight, that's going to change.

Civic leaders and arts patrons hope the city's standing in the cultural world will rise with the curtain as the Los Angeles Music Center Opera opens its inaugural season with "Otello," starring Placido Domingo.

The opera company's executive director is Peter Hemmings, the London Symphony Orchestra's manager until two years ago, when he came to Los Angeles to help organize the company.

Fall coats designed for warmth, beauty

Copley News Service

"The north wind doth blow, and we shall have snow. And what will poor robin do then, poor thing?"

Well-to-do robins head South for the warm country ... all the others just bundle up.

Fortunately, bundling up can be enjoyable when a woman slips into some of the voluminous coats making headlines for fall '86.

Coats are so big this season, designers like Ralph Lauren are layering one on top of the other.

But big doesn't mean bulky ... the fabrics are light so the coats fall in soft folds around the body, yet are generous enough to cover any number of sweaters and jackets worn together.

Hemlines vary, but the ⅞ or ankle-length seems to be the most popular with designers. Materials are rich ... wool, leather and cashmere in neutral tones.

Fur is a popular accent rather than the major focus of many coats for women this season — circles of fox at the wrists of jackets, mink overlays on the lapels of coats or fox boleros that are slipped over tailored jackets. Designer Carolina Herrera trimmed her wool twill coats with fox on the shoulder yokes and sleeves.

Leather might be combined with fur or wool for an opulent casual look.

For men, dress outerwear restates the themes of modern sportswear dressing — classic, sophisticated gaberdines, tailored traditional tweeds and vivid color-enhanced patterns, according to the Men's Fashion Association. Single and double-breasted models are sleekly styled with a minimum of extraneous detail.

Casual outerwear for men takes a cue from the vibrant color palette of casual sportswear. This season's pieces are often used as a finishing complement. Shocking clear brights and primary colors like red, kelly green, canary yellow, royal blue and purple update all-time favorite outerwear fabrics — meltons, leathers, poplin shells, oilcloth and sweater knits — often layered for contrasting "color-clash."

CNS Graphic

Vintage shapes such as ¾-length car coats, hunting jackets and duster coats return, outfitted with an array of added extras like hoods, printed brushed linings, toggle closures, drawstring waists and oversized zip-off collars which offer function as well as fashion.

Bright colors are strong in men's sports outerwear, but there are also plenty of the more familiar colors — brown, grey, olive, black and indigo blue. Weekend wear looks especially good in fabric and texture mixes: a fleecy coat with suede slacks, a leather jacket with tweed slacks, blue denim trimmed in shearling or corduroy or even a long cardigan worn over a sport jacket. There is town or country weekend wear for every man.

This fall's a serious season where fashion is concerned. The focus is on class, not fun.

But if a person lives in an area with lots of winter rain, she can have fun with outerwear and still look fashionable.

The forecast in rain gear is bright and shiny. Try chasing the blues away in a cobalt blue, fire engine red, fuchsia or yellow slicker. While smooth is slick, embossed lizard print adds a fresh touch to coats.

Slickers are an upbeat alternative to the traditional black, tan or khaki trench coats. And designers like Calvin Klein, Anne Klien and Evan Picone are lending their touches in rain wear.

Turn heads by donning several colors — say a red slicker and blue umbrella — for a fresh look, according to syndicated fashion writer Barbara DeWitt of Torrance, Calif.

Men can indulge in functional raincoats featuring longer lengths, iridescent finishes and rubberized fabrics.

It's easy to for women to get their hands on the hottest cold weather accessory. The New York Times says gloves are big fall fashion news. Claude Montana shows them gauntlet style with fringe; Azzedine Alaia laces fur-lined leather up the arm for gloves that are bulky but warm and Valentino outlines the seams of satin gloves in rhinestones for evening.

Try gloves of pigskin or leather for an understated, but elegant look.

Belts are a close second to gloves as important fashion purchases. Take a cue from Karl Lagerfeld, who showed a black leather belt with a fan-shaped arrangement of gold bars in front with everything from suits to evening dresses. Alligator or snakeskin belts say richness, no matter what the color.

For an instant splash of color, women can tie big, bright scarves around their necks. Wear scarves in front, sweep to the side or tie them around the head a la '50s.

Hope diamond mailed

The famous Hope Diamond, worth more than a million dollars, arrived at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., from New York City by parcel post. The cost, including insurance, was $145.29. — CNS

DEAR ABBY

Grandma wants courtesy

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When I didn't even get a phone call (except one wrong number) by 10 p.m. on Grandparents' Day, I called my son's house. His wife answered and I said, "How come nobody called to wish me a happy Grandparents' Day?"

She said, "I didn't even know there WAS a Grandparents' Day. When was it?" (She is generally up on those things, so I'm wondering why all those retailers are so anxious to push their merchandise months ahead of time for other holidays, but they slipped up on this one.)

Grandparents give more in a lifetime than anyone else, and they certainly deserve more acknowledgment of their day. Please print this with some comment. It's time teenage children woke up to the fact that you don't just take — you learn to give, too. If it's only a phone call to someone who's old and lonesome. — DISGRUNTLED GRANDMOTHER

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: Children shouldn't need an act of Congress or an ad in the newspaper to remind them to honor their grandparents on a special day every year.

A gift or impromptu telephone call to say, "Hi, Grandma and Grandpa, I love you," would seem far more sincere and meaningful. But for others who did not know, Grandparents' Day falls on the first Sunday after Labor Day.

DEAR ABBY: I wish to express my concern and dismay about two phrases that I hear and read more and more often in the media. I refer to the words used to inform the public about terrorist activity: "takes responsibility for," and even worse, "claims credit for." These phrases denote respectability for despicable acts.

In my opinion, such phrases as these are changing our feelings and attitudes toward terrorism in a very subtle but frightening manner.

The Random House Dictionary defines terrorism as "the use of violence and threats to intimidate or coerce, especially for political purposes." To imply that the aforementioned is honorable, or something to be proud of, or claim credit for is, at best, ludicrous and, at worst, a form of insidious brainwashing.

It would be far more factual and accurate to state that a specific group or organization is "to blame" for acts of terrorism. One of the meanings of the verb "to blame" (Random House Dictionary, again) is "to censure or condemn."

This seems a more fitting description of terrorists and acts of terrorism. I would urge that people in the media give this serious thought, and make the appropriate changes when reporting terrorist activities to the public. — JUNEAL REITAN, EDINBURG, TEXAS

DEAR J.R.: Thank you for pointing this out. I immodestly accept full credit for passing this on to media reporters.

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Also Concerned in Vermont," who suggests that I lobby — I have. I have written many lobbying letters in the state of California. I have also testified before Rep. Claude D. Pepper's Committee on Aging. Rep. Pepper, Sen. John Heinz and Sen. John Glenn all have legislation pending before Congress regarding nursing home care. They are members of the Campaign for Quality Care, a nationwide organization headquartered in Washington. I am the chairman. If you want to join our crusade, please contact us at 1424 16th St. N.W., Suite L2, Washington, D.C. 20036. The telephone is (202) 797-0657.

I particularly urge those caring people who work in good nursing homes to unite with us in fighting against the abuse of the elderly that exists in other homes. There are many concerned people. I am only one. — KIRK DOUGLAS

Matrimonial meccas show 'real' mate

By ERMA BOMBECK

I suppose most of you saw the story about singles who would like to be married, but who are looking for love in all the wrong places.

There's something to that. Bars aren't the place. Everyone's happy in a bar, and why shouldn't they be? It's too dark to see runs in the pantyhose, gray roots or lines in the face that would hold three days of rain.

Same thing in a health club which is a popular place to shop. Everyone holds in their stomachs and looks healthy when they're overheated.

There are few matrimonial meccas that bring out the "real" personality — the one that emerges after the wedding dress has been cleaned and stored and the canape forks have been exchanged for two plastic garbage cans.

You want to shop for a mate? Try the local laundromat. This is a real test of what you're getting.

Somehow even the hardest veneer of pretension will crack when an aggressive woman ties up three dryers and feels nothing.

And what kind of a husband do you think a man would make who goes to a bar for four hours and leaves a sleeping bag in a soak cycle? Life can't get any more real than that!

This may come as a surprise, but a dentist's office may reveal vital information about a future mate.

Check out the single men in the reception room. Are they able to tolerate pain or do they request Novocain and take off from work for three days when they have their teeth cleaned?

And look closely at the single women. Are they meeting their financial needs or are they putting off major root canals, bonding and braces until they're married and have group insurance?

Spend at least one Mother's Day with your respective mothers before you decide on marriage. The man will have a glimpse at his future by looking at his prospective mother-in-law and if a man gives his mother a gift certificate for a flu shot, the prospective wife can figure out this is as good as it gets.

I always felt divorce could be minimized if you visited a car showroom together at least once before you made the big commitment.

Watch the face of the man when he is surrounded by new cars. Does he forget your name? Does he look at a foreign car the same way he used to look at you the first time he saw you in a bikini? Does he offer to trade you in for a foreign model he can't pronounce? Do you get the feeling the payments will last longer than your marriage and he will enjoy them more?

People shop for a bathing suit with more care than they do a husband or a wife. The rules are basically the same. Look for something you'll feel comfortable wearing for a long time. Allow for room to grow. And don't panic!

'Great coat' fashionable

By BARBARA HUSTON
Hearst News Service

Last year, women kept saying they wanted long coats. This year, they get a second — and better — chance.

The ankle-grazing great coat is stronger than ever. This year, the shoulders are less aggressive. From Calvin Klein to Ellen Tracy, designers are making sure a big swing coat is available.

When you belt this coat, it develops the circle-skirt look. And that's just for starters. Perry Ellis, Ralph Lauren, Giorgio Armani and Calvin Klein made classic camel's hair polo coats, single or double-breasted, belted or straight.

One of the nicest things about coats this year is their power to give warmth without weight.

Many credit Italian lightweight wools and skilled construction with this lightening of the load. Another reason is the prevalence of what Simonton calls "precious fibers" coats in cashmere, alpaca and llama cloth. These, though lighter in weight, are heavier in price. A Calvin Klein or Ellis coat can cost $1,000 to $1,500.

If you feel overpowered in a great coat, look for the kneelength coat that covers short skirts, the shorter seven-eighths coat that doesn't, and the even shorter swing jacket. When they're belted, the skirt of the coat becomes a standout peplum.

For those who prefer basic classics, this is a vintage year for traditional styles. They're more comfortable than ever before because they are lighter weight, and they are far less likely to go out of style. Most are cut big enough to go over jackets, though some are meant to fit more snugly. All these reasons make their higher price justifiable in the minds of many women.

Young 'E.T.' actor finds out one hard truth of Tinseltown

By ALAN SAYRE

Thomas

DALLAS (AP) — Henry Thomas, who played the leading role in "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial," is attending public school in San Antonio and trying to decide whether to make Hollywood his career.

Thomas, who turned 15 on Sept. 9, already understands one of the hard truths of Tinseltown.

"It's an unstable career," he said in a recent telephone interview from his home in San Antonio. "It's hard to tell. You might be working one year and not the next."

In fact, Thomas hasn't made a film in two years. His latest movie, "The Quest," was filmed in Australia two years ago and only recently made its debut in the United States.

Thomas won his first role when he was 9 as one of Sissy Spacek's sons in "Raggedy Man," which was filmed in South Texas. After a role in the made-for-television movie "The Steeler and the Pittsburgh Kid," he was cast as the alien's youthful friend in "E.T."

He also appeared in "Misunderstood" with Gene Hackman and "Cloak and Dagger" with Dabney Coleman.

Thomas said he has had plenty of offers since "E.T.," many of which he has turned down.

"I'm not sure how many, but there've been a lot," he said. "Everything I wanted to do, I chose to do it. No regrets."

He wouldn't say if another film role is forthcoming.

"I'm looking into one right now, but I can't say anything about it," he said.

Thomas said typecasting into "little boy roles" hasn't been much of a problem, but "I don't get the 'Alien' role."

Filming "The Quest" was fun, Thomas said, although he didn't get to see as much of the continent as he would have liked.

"It's nice to see it, but you don't get to look around much. You're always working. I like working in the states better."

Thomas, now a freshman in high school, declined to reveal which school he attends. Leading a typical teen-ager's life isn't much of a problem, he said.

"They (his classmates) know who I am," he said.

Development of Davis estate delayed

FORT WORTH (AP) — An impressive entry to the former T. Cullen Davis estate has been built, but construction of the rest of the posh development of luxury homes, offices, shops and apartments is far behind schedule.

Developers planned to build the complex in 10 years, but economic hard times have delayed its completion date by several years.

The 1983 sale of the 189-acre spread, owned by Cullen Davis and his brother Kenneth, was a surprise to many. But now the brothers and their Kendavis Industries oil services conglomerate are deep in bankruptcy.

The millionaire businessman's mansion was the scene of a widely publicized shooting spree in which Davis was accused but later aquitted.

Their mansion and acreage is now owned by Cambridge Companies, which borrowed $64 million to buy and develop it as the Stonegate development.

So far, the most visible signs of Cambridge's impact on the property is the entry, a 200-unit apartment project, a vacant office building and a new road.

On one edge of the land are 10 luxury homes, most still owned by the builders who are asking about $500,000 each for them.

Cambridge is negotiating with its lender and partner on Stonegate, Vernon Savings and Loan Association of Dallas. Vernon has loaned $39.1 million to Cambridge in the deal and also has a claim on 37.5 percent of future earnings on the project.

"We don't have a problem talking to them" about repayment, said Bill Parsons, one of the two founding partners of Cambridge. "But we have a limited ability to do that. Real estate is a debt-driven game.

"With slower development, the actual cash flow is down. It puts stress on everybody in this industry," he said.

Hard times and planning mistakes have added several years to Stonegate's original 10-year development plan, the newspaper said.

The developers have leased only 6,000 square feet of office space, home sales have lagged and an aerobics center, which was to be a magnet for other tenants, has been scaled back to a modest medical office building.

Stonegate has sold only 16 of its 65 single-family lots where prices start at $100,000.

"Cambridge is an excellent developer," said John Donnally, chairman of Vernon Savings. But he said the company is having to change to deal with the Texas economy and a falling real estate market.

High court throws out betting law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court left intact a ruling that threw out a Texas law imposing stiff penalties for professional bookmakers while treating the betting more leniently.

A state court had said the law was unconstitutionally vague and the high court, without comment, refused Monday to reinstate the law.

Texas officials said six other states have similar or nearly identical laws. They are Georgia, Kansas, Minnesota, New Mexico, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

Prosecutors said the ruling would cripple, at least temporarily, efforts in Texas to crack down on the multibillion-dollar annual business of betting on sporting events.

"Texas will be helpless against the onslaught of professional gambling" at least until the Texas Legislature drafts a new law, lawyers in the Dallas County district attorney's office said.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in 1985 threw out the gambling conviction of Ronald Gerald Adley. He had been given a three-year suspended prison sentence for "receiving a bet."

The state appeals court said the state anti-gambling law failed to explain adequately the difference between making and receiving a bet.

The appeals court acknowledged the purpose of the law was to punish professional gamblers more severely by making it a felony to receive a bet while it was only a misdemeanor to make a bet.

The law replaced one that had made no distinction between the social and commercial gambler, the appeals court noted.

But the state court said the language in the new law was "so vague that men of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning."

It said a literal reading of the law would mean two friends who made a bet on a football game could be treated differently. The one who proposed the wager would be making a bet while the other by accepting the offer would be receiving the bet, the state court said.

"We find that the Legislature has painted with too broad a brush," the state court said.

WHAT DOES 2.9% ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE GMAC FINANCING REALLY MEAN TO YOU?

FIRST
This is the lowest set of finance rates ever offered by GMAC.

SECOND
Probably the most important thing is that there is no dealer financial participation that will affect your cost. As matter of fact we still have units at the old price (units built before April 11, 1986) that can be bought at prices below invoice prices.

THIRD
Even though we have sold over 125 new units on this program we still have over 50 new units left to choose from.

FOURTH
We will post special sale prices on all of our '86 GMC inventory to show we mean business!

Here is an example:
