Economist: Local economy in record territory, rising

■ No other area is as closely tied to a singular industry as Midland is to oil and gas, Ingham says

By Mella McEwen
mmcewen@mrt.com

Having studied the Midland-Odessa economy for going on 20 years, Amarillo economist Karr Ingham said it's the most interesting economy he studies.

Addressing the Midland Chamber of Commerce State of the Economy luncheon, Ingham told the gathering that "growth is now in record territory and doesn't appear to be slowing."

He said the Midland metropolitan economy has undergone five cycles since he began studying it. During these cycles, there was:

- a 53 percent increase from February 2003 to December 2008,
- an 18 percent decline from December 2008 to February 2010,
- a 70 percent increase from February 2010 to January 2015,
- a 19 percent decline from January 2015 to October 201 and
- a 33 percent increase from October 2016 "and counting."

He said there is no other metropolitan area that has experienced the 20 to 30 percent growth in taxable spending that Midland and Odessa has.

But there is also no other metropolitan area as closely tied to a singular industry as Midland is to the energy industry.

The upstream oil and gas industry comprises a 10 percent share of the overall Texas economy, down from 14.4 percent in the triple-digit oil price heyday of 2014 and up from a low of 6.8 percent in the valley of the oil price decline in 2016.

In Houston, the industry comprises 12 percent of the city's economy, down from 18.6 percent in 2014 and up from 8.6 percent in 2016.

But in Midland, its share is 69.3 percent, down slightly from 70.6 percent in 2014 and up from 58.3 percent in 2016.

The share of upstream oil and gas employment is 2 percent statewide, 2.5 percent in Houston, 27.9 percent in Midland and 22.8 percent in Midland-Odessa, Ingham said.

Bobby Burns, president and chief executive officer of the chamber, said, "Midland is simply an oil and gas town. That number is unusually high, (but) it's part of our city, part of our culture, part of who we are. We've learned to ride with oil and gas. We have an amazingly strong economy because of oil

Texas Gov. Greg Abbott made a campaign stop at Mac's Bar-B-Q Thursday morning to talk to local supporters.

Abbott makes pitch for Republican turnout

■ At breakfast event, Conaway, Craddick tout governor's leadership

By Stewart Doreen
sdoreen@mrt.com

Not even the chill of the latest front could cool enthusiasm Thursday as Republican Gov. Greg Abbott made his last Midland appearance before Tuesday's general election.

Over at Mac's on Indiana Street, supporters and local dignitaries ate breakfast burritos and drank coffee, enjoying the type of fellowship that a lower-key Abbott appearance could offer.

In contrast to a rowdy crowd at Wednesday's Ted Cruz event, Thursday's affair was more laid back. And why not? Abbott, by most polls, is an easy double-digit leader over his opponent, former Dallas County Sheriff Lupe Valdez. Unlike the other higher-profile Republicans, Abbott walked away with endorsements from Texas' largest newspapers (including the Dallas Morning News), and his war chest offers him something that Cruz could only dream of at this point — total domination over his opponent. He also holds an electoral advantage that would serve him well if he can repeat it next week. Four years ago, the governor received 44 percent of the Hispanic vote statewide. His other stops Thursday were El Paso and Harlingen.

Other Republican leaders from the area — Congressman Mike Conaway, state Reps. Tom Craddick and Brooks Landgraf — told those in attendance about Abbott's conservative values.

Conaway, in particular, mentioned Abbott's leadership during responses to Hurricane Harvey and the recent flooding in Central Texas. He said Abbott's leadership and the execution of the governor's plan helped prevent the failures seen when Hurricane Katrina hit Louisiana and the

MISD: Family to press charges against SJ teacher

From staff reports

The family of the San Jacinto Junior High student involved in an altercation with an eighth-grade science teacher is pressing charges against the teacher, according to Midland ISD.

The district reported Thursday that the charge against the teacher is "assault by threat," a class C misdemeanor.

The teacher and student were involved in back-and-forth after the student admittedly violated rules regarding the use of headphones. In audio recorded during the altercation, the San Jacinto Junior High teacher told the student to "get out of my classroom before I kill you. You piece of crap. Get out." Television station KOSA reported earlier this week on the incident that allegedly involved eighth-grade science teacher Jeffrey Laing.

Midland ISD officials told the Reporter-Telegram this week that campus administration "disciplined" the teacher, although the nature of the punishment was not disclosed.

When asked about the incident Wednesday, Midland ISD Executive Director of Communications Lacy Sperry told the Reporter-Telegram in an email that while the teacher was not on campus Wednesday, he "is still employed at San Jacinto Junior High." Sperry also wrote that "based on the details of the full investigation, this is not constituting as a fireable offense. . . . However, if this type of behavior occurs again, then yes, it could constitute as a fireable offense."

This is not the first altercation this calendar year between a student and teacher that resulted in the district having to discipline or punish a teacher. Last spring, a teacher at Midland Freshman High School was placed on administrative leave and then resigned after a physical and verbal altercation with a male student in class.

"The behavior displayed by the teacher is unacceptable and is not tolerated in our district," according to a statement MISD released after that incident.

FINAL DAY FOR EARLY VOTING

Hurd is among Trump's harshest critics, could help save him

By Paul J. Weber
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Few Republicans in Congress have publicly criticized President Donald Trump like Will Hurd of Texas, who didn't vote for him in 2016 and won't say if he will in 2020. But next week on Election Day, Hurd could end up helping save him.

One of just three black Republicans in Congress, Hurd drew national attention this summer for accusing Trump of "standing idle on the world stage" and being manipulated by Russian President Vladimir Putin. He represents a Hispanic-majority district won by Hillary Clinton in 2016, which, in this deeply divisive election year, should point to him being toast.

But back home along the U.S.-Mexico border, Hurd hangs on by a thread in his bid for a third term, potentially depriving the Democrats of one of the 23 additional seats it needs to retake the House.

Hurd, who squeaked out his last two elections by 5,500 votes combined, has figured out how to survive in Texas' only swing district by being the rare swing candidate.

Some signs of that are even literal: Steve Armstrong waved a yard sign for Beto O'Rourke, the surprising Democratic U.S. Senate challenger, outside a polling station in a San Antonio neighborhood last week as Hurd greeted early voters in the rain. But when Armstrong spotted the congressman and approached, it wasn't to lay into him.

"I gotta tell you I'm a Beto guy, but I'm all for people working across the aisle and getting some common-sense stuff done,"

Eric Gay/AP

U.S. Rep. Will Hurd waits to talk to students Tuesday at Texas A&M University-San Antonio.

Armstrong told Hurd, "Right-wing, left-wing, it's killing this country."

The race is a rare and striking example of a vocal Trump critic in the GOP proving durable at a time when other vulnerable Republicans are moving closer — not away — from the combative president. In Florida, Republican congressman Carlos Curbelo is another moderate and Trump critic also trying to defy the political forces working to polarize.

If they win, Hurd and Curbelo will likely spotlight a survival strategy for Republicans in places where Democrats otherwise prosper.

Hurd has kept a distance from Trump both politically and in proximity: He skipped the president's rally in Houston this month and wasn't mentioned by the president.

"The people that I care about mentioning me are the folks walking by here," Hurd said, adding, "I have an independent relationship with people."

Hurd grew up in San Antonio with conservative parents and went to Texas A&M University, becoming student body president. After graduating he went to the CIA, where he worked as an intelligence officer in India, Pakistan and Afghanistan, where he says he managed undercover operations. He jokes that his campaign team wants pictures from his time at the agency but says that "folks in West Texas don't want to see me looking like a Taliban."

His sprawling 800-mile district, which spans two time zones and is larger than 26 states, ping-ponged between being held by Republicans and Democrats before Hurd pulled off a slim re-election victory in 2016. The heart of the district is San Antonio, where a heavy military presence lends a conservative tilt.

But it's also 70 percent Hispanic with more than half of families speaking a language other than English at home — a Democrat-friendly trait.

Hurd has handled the balance by being a Republican known for his dissent within the party. He mocks Trump's proposed border wall, acknowledges man-made climate change as real and supports a path to citizenship for so-called "Dreamers" who weren't born in the U.S. but brought to the country as children by their immigrant parents.

His opponent, Democrat Gina Ortiz Jones, calls him a phony whose record in Congress shows a Republican nearly in lockstep with his party, including Hurd voting in favor of a spending bill that included border wall funding. Hurd has said he was voting for provisions, including a military pay raise.

To be sure, Hurd walks a fine line in the fights he picks with Trump. He demurred when asked whether he believed Trump was trying to stoke racial anxieties before Election Day by issuing dark warnings about a caravan of Central American migrants heading toward the U.S. border.

Jones, an Air Force veteran making her first run for office, would make history as Texas' first openly gay and Filipina-American member of Congress. She has outlasted Hurd, and the congressional Republicans' fundraising arm recently went back on TV attacking her.

His pitch doesn't matter, she said. "You don't need to hear the words. You just have to watch the votes."

Jim Randall, 55, has watched the votes, and after casting his ballot for Hurd, he swung by on his way out to give the congressman a piece of his mind over supporting young immigrants.

"I'm sorry man, but they gotta go. I've always voted for you, and I sure as hell wouldn't vote for Ortiz," Randall told Hurd. "But I'm pretty disappointed in you."

Hurd said he appreciated the feedback, and they parted with a hand shake.

Midland's gas price drop lags behind rest of state

■ Average in Midland is 51 cents higher than state average

Midland stores on average weren't as receptive to lowering the price of gas this week as others around the state, according to AAA Texas.

The organization reported the average drop across the city was 3 cents, which was half the average decline across Texas and the lowest average decline of any of the 27 major metropolitan areas AAA Texas surveyed.

Around the region, Midland was surrounded by lower average drops during the past seven days

— 6 cents in Abilene and San Angelo, 7 cents in El Paso, 8 cents in Lubbock and 10 cents in Amarillo.

Even in Odessa, the average decline was 5 cents.

Odessa's average price for regular unleaded dipped below $3 a gallon, making Midland the lone larger market in the state where the average price for a gallon is $3 or above.

The average price in Midland this week was $3.03, which is 51 cents higher than the state average and 69 cents higher than the average price found in Sherman-Denison, which is located north of Dallas.

Around the region, average prices were $2.41 in Amarillo, $2.46 in San Angelo, $2.49 in Lubbock, $2.66 in El Paso, $2.68 in Abilene and $2.97 in Odessa.

Distributors have told the Reporter-Telegram there are many complexities in the fuel business that impact pricing.

They pointed to the high cost of transportation from Gulf Coast refineries and Midland's distance from pipelines.

There are also issues with the high cost of living, at least in Midland and Odessa, where rents are climbing at rates incomparable around the nation.

There's also the supply-and-demand factor. There is a great demand in Midland and Odessa relative to the amount of supply.

AAA Texas reports that the average price of gas in Midland dropped by 8 cents in the past two weeks.

The organization also states that the lower prices across the state and nation are "not likely to be a long-term trend. Market analysts indicate that gas prices could begin to rise within the next week, as the Iran sanctions announcement is expected just ahead of the mid-term elections on Nov. 6."

"Gas prices are falling for now, but that could change soon as market analysts indicate global supply for crude oil could be impacted by the U.S. sanctions against Iran scheduled to take effect in the next week," said Daniel Armbruster, AAA Texas/AAA New Mexico spokesman. "How expensive gas prices will be depends on how the market reacts to the early November events."

The average price of gas in Midland one year ago was $2.45 — 58 cents lower than this week's average. The state average one year ago was $2.24 — 28 cents lower than this week.

Since crude prices fell from a high of $104 in the summer of 2014 to below $27 in February 2016, Texas producers, and especially Permian Basin producers, have managed to produce record volumes despite lower oil prices, a lower rig count, fewer drilling permits from the Railroad Commission and fewer employees, Ingham said.

"The Permian Basin has a very important role in the Teenager who fired pellet gun fatally shot by deputies

A teenager has been shot and killed after he led Houston-area sheriff's deputies on a car chase and then fired a pellet gun at them.

Assistant Chief Tim Navarre with the Harris County Sheriff's Office says after the chase ended Wednesday, the teen was told to show his hands but instead reached into the car, grabbed the weapon and started firing. Five deputies returned fire, striking the teen multiple times.

Gulf Coast.

"Being a chief executive is all about leadership, and we have a leader in Austin," Conaway said. "He has earned a second term."

And not surprisingly, Abbott's appearance wasn't about pumping up his own credentials. His message was about getting out the vote from the top of the ticket to the bottom. He said Midlanders, Texans and Americans can't afford a U.S. House led by Democrat Maxine Waters. He said outcomes of the state Senate and state House races will help determine the policies pursued in the upcoming legislative session.

Abbott addressed the top-of-the-ticket U.S. Senate race between Republican Ted Cruz and Democrat Beto O'Rourke. Abbott said O'Rourke is "hostile to the values of the state of Texas."

"We need to send a message that all the gold in California will not buy Beto a Senate seat from the Lone Star State," Abbott said.

The governor also said Cruz versus O'Rourke is more than a race for Senate. He said it represents an opportunity for Democrats to break through the Republican red firewall that has been in place in Texas politics for more than two decades. The last time a Democrat won statewide was 1994. Abbott said if Democrats ever add Texas to their Electoral College voting totals, a Republican would never win the presidency again.

"A future between Bernie Sanders and Elizabeth Warren," is how he described that scenario.

The governor provided some red meat for the morning audience. He talked about how kneeling for the national anthem is wrong and that our elected leaders must stand up and preserve and protect what the nation's military men and women have done.

Abbott hit the political high notes one would expect. He also mentioned that the 2019 legislative session provides opportunity to help West Texas — whether it is providing more money for better roads, fixing the broken "Robin Hood" school finance system or giving teachers a well-deserved raise.

He did just about everything — except mention his opponent by name. It has been that type of a campaign for arguably the strongest statewide candidate on the ballot.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

Note: Bigar's Stars is based on the degree of your sun at birth. The sign name is simply a label astrologers put on a set of degrees for convenience.
For best results, readers should refer to the dates following each sign.

A baby born today has a Sun in Scorpio and a Moon in Leo if born before 1:43 a.m.
(ET). Afterward, the Moon
will be in Virgo.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Nov. 2, 2018:

This year you break past set patterns, which encourages you to make some significant changes. You will feel as if you've suddenly opened a door and caught a whiff of fresh air.
If you are single, the type of person you choose to relate to is likely to support your transformation. Give yourself time to see if this bond really works for you. If you are attached, the two of you become more comfortable together than ever.
Plan a much-desired trip as a couple. VIRGO is a trusted friend.

ARIES
(March 21-April 19)

★★★★ You might opt to let go of pressure and judgments. Flow with the moment, and attempt to clean up after an unexpected event that might have thrown some of your life structure into chaos.
A respected friend or family member could be unusually stem. Tonight: Christen the weekend.

TAURUS
(April 20-May 20)

★★★★ Your creativity emerges, causing you to change direction. You might want to slow down some, as you likely don't have all the facts. Seeking out someone with more expertise could set you back, as this person might not be readily available.

Tonight: Be as naughty as you want!

GEMINI
(May 21-June 20)

★★★★ You could be unusually quiet and withdrawn. A partner or loved one might be misreading the source of a situation as well as your attitude.
As a result, you might not be particularly forthcoming. Your closeness does not support clearing up an issue. Tonight:
Head home early.

CANCER
(June 21-July 22)

★★★★ You want to get past a problem and understand what is happening with various people surrounding you. You might feel as if someone is misreading you. Attempt to stay open and have a discussion to help others be in the same mental space as you.
Tonight: Have an important chat.

LEO
(July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ Get past a misunderstanding. Prevent a hassle
by confirming a meeting place and time when making plans.
Extra effort on your part could make all the difference in all facets of your life. You might want to make it an early night.
Tonight: Accept that you are not the Energizer Bunny.

VIRGO
(Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ You are coming from a different mental space than many of the people around you. You also communicate in a very different way. Verify that you are on the same page as a partner. In the long run, events and discussions will run more smoothly.
Tonight: Get together with a friend.

LIBRA

(Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You might be mulling over an ongoing issue as you seek out answers. You also might decide not to share as much as usual, at least until you've sorted through all the facts. Remain sensitive to an older person who seems a bit
off or closed down. Tonight:
Do what works best for you.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ Zero in on a work-related matter. You smile, and another person responds, perhaps with the exception of a grouchy roommate or family member. Maintain a levelheaded perspective, and understand where others'
energy is stemming from.
Tonight: Meet up with loved ones.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ You often are flamboyant, but right now you are efficient and serious. You might not have your normal tolerance for chitchat and sharing news. Clear out your responsibilities and mandatory to-dos. You have more to share than others thought possible.
Tonight: Out late.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ Reach out to a friend or loved one who lives at a distance. You could feel confused by everything you are hearing. Be clear about your choices. You might get together with a favorite person in the near future. You could be moodier than you realize.
Tonight: Say yes to an offer.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ You could be exhausted from doing what a partner requests. You like relating to this person in general, but you might sense a demanding attitude that could revolve around time-sensitive issues.

Question less and just clear out what you must. Tonight:
Make it a party.

PISCES
(Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ Defer to a partner or loved one. Often you miss a detail or two, especially when it comes to making plans. The other party involved might feel as though he or she can take the lead, so hand this person
the reins. Appreciate the lightening of pressure. Tonight: Do what makes you smile!

Mexican agents nibble at edges of migrant caravans

By Sonia Perez D.
Associated Press

JUCHITAN, Mexico — Thousands of Central American migrants resumed their slow trek through southern Mexico on Thursday, as immigration agents and police nibbled at the edges of the two caravans currently in the country.

Mexican authorities haven't directly targeted the main caravan of about 4,000 migrants, and activists aiding that group said they were shifting their route toward the Gulf coast, a path closer to the Texas border. But a second, smaller caravan about 200 miles behind the first group appeared to be more leaderless, get less press attention and be more vulnerable.

A federal official who was not authorized to be quoted by name said 153 migrants in the second caravan were detained Wednesday during highway inspections in the southern state of Chiapas, a short distance from the Guatemalan border. While the precise size of the second caravan is unclear, that could be equivalent to about 10 percent of those participating.

And there was also pressure on the first caravan, which set out before dawn Thursday from Juchitan, Oaxaca, seeking to reach the town of Matias Romero, about 40 miles ahead.

They had tried to arrange bus transport from Juchitan, but failed, leaving them once again on foot, hitchhiking and looking for rides where they can find them. But federal police began pulling freight trucks over and forcing migrants off, saying their habit of clinging to the tops or sides of the trucks was dangerous.

"Get off! Get off!" police officer Benjamin Grayda shouted to a group of migrants clinging to the side of a truck outside Juchitan. "You can ride inside, but not on the outside."

At other points along the route, police have forced overloaded pickups to disgorge migrants. On previous days, they have ordered passenger vans to stop transporting migrants.

The migrants have not said what route they intend to take northward or where on the U.S. border they planned to reach.

While Matias Romero would carry them toward the Gulf coast city of Veracruz and a route toward the Texas border, another large caravan early this year passed through Veracruz and then veered back toward Mexico City and eventually tried to head to Tijuana in the far northwest. Few made it.

White House press secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders on Wednesday praised Mexico for stopping the migrants from getting rides. "Mexico has stepped up in an unprecedented way," Sanders told Fox News. "They have helped stop a lot of the transportation means of these individuals in these caravans, forcing them walking. They have helped us in new ways to slow this down, to break this up and keep it from moving as aggressively toward the United States."

But U.S. President Donald Trump ramped up his pre-election focus on the caravan and others behind it, talking of creating a U.S. military force on the border that would outnumber the migrants, many of them women and children.

"As far as the caravan is concerned, our military is out," Trump said. "We have about 5,800. We'll go up to anywhere between 10,000 and 15,000 military personnel on top of Border Patrol, ICE and everybody else at the border."

Later Wednesday, Trump told ABC News, "We have to have a wall of people." A third band of about 500 from El Salvador made it to Guatemala, and a fourth group of about 700 set out from the Salvadoran capital Wednesday.

Altogether, the four caravans represent just a few days' worth of the average flow of migrants to the United States in recent years.

Similar caravans have occurred regularly over the years and passed largely unnoticed, but Trump has focused on the latest marchers seeking to make border security a hot-button issue in next week's midterm elections.

Worn down by days of long walks, many migrants have dropped out and returned home or applied for protected status in Mexico.

The initial caravan has shrunk significantly from its estimated peak of more than 7,000 migrants. A caravan last the spring ultimately fizzled to just about 200 people who reached the U.S. border at San Diego.

Mexican Interior Secretary Alfonso Navarrete Prida said about 2,300 migrants have applied to stay in Mexico under a government plan, and hundreds more have accepted assisted repatriation.

Also Wednesday, a Guatemalan woman gave birth to the first known caravan baby at a hospital in Juchitan. Mexico's governmental National Human Rights Commission said it had arranged for medical attention for the woman, who was 28 weeks pregnant, and the girl was healthy.

Trump eyes asylum limits for caravans; would they be legal?

By Jill Colvin and Colleen Long
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump was expected to announce on Thursday his plans to deny asylum to migrants who try to enter the U.S. between ports of entry — a legally questionable move that was part of his election-season barrage of actions aimed at caravans heading toward the border.

It was unclear whether the restrictions Trump was expected to propose would apply only to those traveling in the caravans or extend to all people trying to enter the country. And it also was questionable whether Trump has the legal authority. The asylum clause of the Immigration and Nationality Act says that anyone who arrives to the U.S. may apply for asylum. And any change would almost certainly be immediately challenged in court.

Trump was to make his announcement during brief remarks Thursday afternoon, according to three people familiar with the plans. They spoke only on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to speak publicly by name.

The administration has been discussing various options to address the caravans for days and it was possible that things could change before Trump's 4:15 p.m. remarks "on the illegal immigration crisis" before he departs the White House for a campaign rally in Missouri.

The announcement would be Trump's latest attempt to keep the issue of immigration front-and-center as he tries to drum up GOP enthusiasm in the final stretch before next Tuesday's elections, which will determine whether the GOP retains control of Congress. Trump and his aides have long believed immigration is key to turning out his base, and he has seized on the caravans of Central American migrants slowly making their way through Mexico toward the U.S.

The president announced on Wednesday that he was considering deploying up to 15,000 troops to the U.S.-Mexico border in response to the still far-off caravans — roughly double the number the Pentagon said it currently plans for a mission whose dimensions are shifting daily. And he has threatened that those who do enter will be housed in "tent cities" he plans to build while their cases are processed.

Trump and other administration officials have long encouraged those seeking asylum to come through legal ports of entry. But many migrants are unaware of that guidance, and official border crossings have grown increasingly clogged. Immigration officials have turned away asylum-seekers at ports of entry because of overcrowding, telling them to return at a later date. Backlogs have grown especially bad in recent months at crossings in California, Arizona and Texas, with people generally waiting five weeks to claim asylum at San Diego's main crossing and sleeping out in the open for days at a time.

The administration has also been ramping up security at ports of entry this week. In McAllen, in the Rio Grande Valley, workers were seen installing additional gates and fences along a walkway on a bridge between the U.S. and Mexico, according to The Monitor paper of McAllen.

Migrants who cross illegally are generally arrested and often seek asylum or some other form of protection. Claims have spiked in recent years, and there is currently a backlog of more than 800,000 cases pending in immigration court. Administration officials have railed against what they say are loopholes designed to encourage people, especially from Central America, to come to the U.S. and claim asylum. Generally, only about 20 percent of applicants are approved.

The U.S. fielded more than 330,000 asylum claims in 2017, nearly double the number two years earlier and surpassing Germany as highest in the world. A U.N. Refugee Agency report doesn't break out exactly where and how they claimed asylum.

There are currently four caravans making their way toward the U.S. The main group of about 4,000 migrants — down from its estimated peak of more than 7,000 — remains in southern Mexico, on foot and hundreds of miles from the border. A second, smaller group of 1,000 or so migrants is more than 200 miles behind the first caravan. A third band of about 500 from El Salvador has made it to Guatemala, and a fourth group of about 700 set out from the Salvadoran capital Wednesday.

Video of cop killer tweeted by Trump denounced as racist

By Jonathan Lemire
and Zeke Miller
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The video shows a Latino man in court, smiling menacingly. And his words are clear: He's killed cops and he's "gonna kill more cops soon."

The man in the video, Luis Bracamontes, is an immigrant in the country illegally who was convicted this year of murdering two law enforcement officials. His image — complete with shaved head, long chin hair and accented English — is now the centerpiece of a video tweeted out by President Donald Trump as part of his closing argument on immigration less than a week before midterm elections that could alter the path of his presidency.

The expletive-filled video was immediately denounced by some Democrats and Republicans alike as racist. It comes amid a frenzy of hardline immigration proposals pushed out by Trump in the final stages of the campaign, including sending troops to the border and revoking birthright citizenship.

The video, which Trump tweeted late Wednesday, alleges without evidence that Democrats were responsible for allowing Bracamontes into the U.S.

Bracamontes, a twice-deported immigrant from Mexico, was sentenced to death in California for the 2014 killings. The 53-second spot includes expletives uttered by Bracamontes during his trial as he professed regret at not killing more officers.

"Illegal immigrant, Luis Bracamontes, killed our people!" the video states, adding, "Democrats let him into our country ... Democrats let him stay." It includes scenes of a migrant caravan moving toward the U.S., warning ominously, "Who else would Democrats let in?"

The ad was reminiscent of the infamous "Willie Horton" ad used against Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis in 1988 and condemned as racist. Horton, who was black, raped a woman while out of prison on a weekend furlough. As Massachusetts governor, Dukakis supported the furlough program. Dukakis went on to lose to Republican George H.W. Bush.

The video tweeted by Trump did not immediately appear to be running on television, although it received extensive coverage on cable news networks. As of Thursday morning, it had received 2.65 million views in less than 24 hours and was the "pinned" tweet atop Trump's profile, meaning it is the first thing any visitor to his Twitter page would see.

OPINION

Midland Reporter-Telegram | mrt.com | Friday, November 2, 2018 | Page 6A

Our descent into vitriol began before Trump

After a deranged Democrat living in his van nearly assassinated Rep. Steve Scalise, R-La., firing more than 70 rounds at House Republicans practicing for the Congressional Baseball Game, House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., declared it "outrageous" that anyone would blame Democrats' rhetoric for inspiring the shooter. "How dare they say such a thing!" Pelosi thundered. Never mind that the shooter echoed Democratic vitriol against the president, ranting on Facebook that "Trump is Guilty & Should Go to Prison for Treason" and that "Trump Has Destroyed Our Democracy. It's Time to Destroy Trump & Co."

Now Democrats are doing exactly what they condemned, blaming President Trump's divisive rhetoric for the recent spate of mail bomb attacks and the massacre at a Pittsburgh synagogue. The truth is, they ceded the moral high ground years ago. Our descent into vitriol began long before Trump — and Democrats and their allies are as culpable as the president.

Recall that in 2000, the NAACP spent millions on ugly ads accusing George W. Bush of moral equivalence with white supremacists who brutally lynched James Byrd in 1998. "My father was ... beaten, chained, and then dragged 3 miles to his death, all because he was black," said Byrd's daughter, as the screen flashed grainy images of a chain dragging a body behind a pickup. "So, when Governor George W. Bush refused to support hate-crime legislation, it was like my father was killed all over again."

MARC THIESSEN
Washington Post Writers Group

Barack Obama set the tone for his 2008 campaign against John McCain when he declared, "If they bring a knife to the fight, we bring a gun." Rep. John Lewis, D-Ga., answered that call when he compared McCain to segregationist Alabama Gov. George Wallace and declared that McCain was replicating the climate of "hatred and division" that led to attacks on civil rights workers. Four years later, a pro-Obama super PAC ran ads showing GOP vice-presidential nominee Paul Ryan pushing an old lady in a wheelchair over the side of a cliff, while another ran false ads blaming Mitt Romney for a woman's death from cancer.

During the 2016 campaign, Hillary Clinton compared Republicans to Nazis, saying in regard to illegal immigrants they wanted to "round them up" and put them in "boxcars." She also compared the GOP to terrorists, declaring, "Now, extreme views on women, we expect that from some of the terrorist groups, we expect that from people who don't want to live in the modern world, but it's a little hard to take from Republicans." And she listed Republicans alongside the Iranians among the "enemies" she was most proud of making.

When Trump took office, Democrats abandoned their role as the "opposition" and declared themselves "the resistance." Look up "resistance" in the Oxford dictionary and you'll see the definition "the use of force or violence to oppose someone or something." William E. Scheuerman, professor of political science at Indiana University, notes the word resistance "first surfaces in debates about tyrannicide, the violent removal from power of misbehaving kings who usurp authority not properly belonging to them." Scalise would have been forgiven for pointing out that his would-be assassin took Democrats' calls to "resistance" literally.

More recently, some Democrats were peddling unfounded accusations that Brett M. Kavanaugh participated in gang rapes in an effort to destroy the Supreme Court nominee. Clinton defended smash-mouth tactics, declaring that "you cannot be civil with a political party that wants to destroy what you stand for."

None of this excuses Trump's rhetoric, but it does make his Democratic accusers hypocrites. When you traffic for decades in hateful, violent political rhetoric, you have lost the moral authority to effectively condemn others for doing so. Indeed, Democrats arguably bear much of the blame for creating Trump. One of the reasons voters rallied behind Trump is precisely because, after years of seeing their standard-bearers act like punching bags, Trump presented himself as a counterpuncher who isn't afraid to fight back and gives as good as he gets. The results are ugly. Trump is wrong to call the media the "enemy of the people" and to celebrate a congressman body-slaming a reporter, and the host of other terrible things he has said. But Democrats were dragging us into the political gutter long before Trump came along. If they think Americans elected a Frankenstein's monster, they are Dr. Frankenstein.

OUR VIEW

Bobby Trimble, thank you for serving those less fortunate

Laurels

■ For Midland Classical volleyball. The No. 1-ranked Lady Knights had no problems winning its district title, but also steam-rolled Dallas Lutheran in a TAPPS 3A area round match. Congrats to Midland Classical, and good luck chasing that state title, which would go well with the No. 1 ranking.

■ For Bobby Trimble. After 46 years of being there for Midland's less fortunate, Trimble is retiring from Christmas in Action, which in partnership with the community, preserves and revitalizes houses and communities assuring that low-income elderly and disabled homeowners live in warmth, safety and independence. The organization's mission says the service is all part of God's teachings. We appreciate that and hope Trimble's retirement is everything he wants it to be. He surely deserves that.

Arrow

■ For Midland County Republican Women. Last week, the organization, one of the more reputable women's political organizations in the state, tried to have fun with its social media, sharing an item that stated, "Hey Honduras invaders. If you get across the border, I just want you to know there is a place for you to stay at any of the houses with a Beto sign in the front yard. Don't worry about knocking, just walk right in. They're OK with illegal entry. Watch out for the Ted Cruz signs. Those people will defend their property to the death. Most likely your death."

We understand the open-borders point the post attempts to make, but the item goes off the rails when it mentions killing people. We expect more of MCRW, which has been among the best organizations in our community when it comes to getting people involved in the process and involved with what's happening in Midland County. There are better ways to keep Midland and Texas "red."

Neither

■ For Midland ISD. We are disappointed that we have not seen more information having to do with the investigation of the San Jacinto Junior High teacher who was caught this week yelling at a student to "get out of my classroom before I kill you. You piece of crap. Get out." Anyone who has heard the audio can tell you the impact of the teacher's comments are lost in print. There is no defense for the comments, and we believe anyone who sends their students to Midland ISD schools, and specifically San Jacinto, needs to know why this teacher is allowed to keep his job. Providing more information about the incident, which by virtue of a televised report is already public, could also provide more context about the situation and why it makes sense to allow the teacher to continue to be an educator of young people.

We understand that because this is a personnel issue, the district doesn't have to disclose its decisions. But it seems that for everyone involved — including the teacher — the community deserves to know more than what it has been told.

TRUMP GETS HIS MILITARY PARADE

Trump can rewrite the Constitution

It was always told to me that you needed a constitutional amendment. Guess what? You don't. ... Now they're saying I can do it just with an executive order.

— President Trump, explaining this week that he could unilaterally end the Constitution's protection of birthright citizenship

DANA MILBANK

Washington Post Writers Group

Jan. 1, 2019 (BREITBART) — President Trump, under his newly discovered authority to rewrite the citizenship requirements of the Constitution's 14th Amendment, today issued an order restricting U.S. citizenship to the following individuals and groups:

"My family"
"Kellyanne Conway (but not George!)"
"Sarah Sanders (dad OK, too)"
"Kanye West"
"Russians living at Trump properties"
"Residents of Trump Tower"
"Lou Dobbs"
"Sean Hannity"
"Tucker Carlson"
"Steve Doocy"
"Steve King"
"Stephen Miller"

After signing the order, the president told reporters: "It was always told to me that you needed a constitutional amendment to restrict citizenship to friends and family. Guess what? You don't. Now they're saying I can do it just with an executive order."

Jan. 8, 2019 (BREITBART) — A federal district court judge struck down President Trump's orders today awarding citizenship only to friends and family, saying, "You can't run the country like it's a Manhattan co-op."

Trump, saying the ruling was invalid because one of the judge's ancestors came from Mexico, responded by issuing a new executive order eliminating Article III of the Constitution and replacing the federal judiciary with Judge Jeanine Pirro.

"Guess what?" Trump told reporters after the signing. "I can do it just with an executive order." Jan. 15, 2019 (BREITBART) — President Trump, using his expanding authority to revise the Constitution by executive action, ordered the summary deportation of all 11 million illegal immigrants by next week — just in time to keep his promise to have them out of the country within two years of taking office.

After the American Civil Liberties Union filed suit to stop without-cause searches of every American home, business and vehicle, Trump issued a second order requiring the imprisonment without charges of all ACLU lawyers, as well as Robert S. Mueller III, Michael Avenatti, Michael Cohen, Omarosa Manigault Newman and "NFL players who present a risk of kneeling."

"It was always told to me that you needed a constitutional amendment to do unreasonable searches and seizures and to eliminate due process," Trump told reporters as he boarded Marine One for a campaign event. "Guess what? You don't."

Jan. 22, 2019 (BREITBART) — President Trump issued a new executive memorandum today ordering the Justice Department to immediately end all civil and criminal prosecutions, "particularly any that mention 'collusion,' 'taxes' and 'emoluments.'" The order redirects 100 percent of Justice Department resources toward investigating Hillary Clinton's emails.

Top department officials resigned, saying the order violated the constitutional requirement that the president "take care that the laws be faithfully executed." But acting attorney general Lindsey O. Graham said Trump's order overrode Article II, Section III of the Constitution.

"Guess what?" Graham said. "He can do it."

Jan. 29, 2019 (BREITBART) — President Trump, responding to media criticism of his recent executive orders, issued a memorandum revising the First Amendment to abolish all media, allowing only: Fox News, Breitbart, Daily Caller, Alex Jones, Gab and QAnon.

Dean Baquet, executive editor of the Failing New York Times, responded by saying, "[CENSORED]."

Feb. 12, 2019 (BREITBART) — Defense Secretary Jim Mattis and the Joint Chiefs of Staff have not been seen in public since criticizing President Trump's expanding use of executive orders to revise the Constitution.

The disappearances are possibly related to the president's latest executive order decreeing that anybody who criticizes his executive orders is no longer covered by the Eighth Amendment's protections against "cruel and unusual" punishment.

Tom Cotton, who identified himself as "acting defense secretary," said Mattis and the chiefs were on "an extended visit" to Guantanamo Bay.

Feb. 19, 2019 (BREITBART) — Lady Liberty herself, in a rare Oval Office appearance, made an emotional appeal to President Trump to stop "rewriting the Constitution by fiat."

Lady Liberty, known widely from French romantic paintings and a statue in New York Harbor, made little progress. Trump, according to two people familiar with the meeting, told her: "It must be a pretty picture, you dropping to your knees."

"Guess what?" Trump told Fox News shortly after a tearful Lady Liberty departed the West Wing. "When you're a star, they let you do that."

Federal health care website up and running after slow start

By Ricardo Alonso-Zaldívar
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The federal website where consumers can get health insurance under the Affordable Care Act was up and running Thursday after a slow start as sign-up season for 2019 opened days before the midterm elections.

During early morning hours, people accessing the site were directed to a screen that said work was underway. A recording at the HealthCare.gov call center conveyed a similar message. Things seemed to be running normally by about 8 a.m.

With health care a major issue in Tuesday's elections, this sign-up season under the Trump administration is getting close scrutiny.

In earlier years, technical problems with the site created major headaches for the Obama administration. Some Democrats cited HealthCare.gov's meltdown after its 2013 debut as one of the reasons they lost control of the Senate the following year.

Since those initial problems were fixed, the website serving people in 39 states has worked fairly smoothly, first under President Barack Obama and now under Donald Trump. The rest of the states and the District of Columbia run their own sign-ups.

A spokesperson for the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services said Thursday morning that HealthCare.gov was open for business.

Before the site went live for sign-ups at the start of a new coverage year, technicians had to load up details on thousands of changes in plans and premiums.

"Prior to every open enrollment, final preparations must take place ahead of the start of the open enrollment period to ensure the website runs smoothly for consumers," said a statement from the agency. The statement said the agency's commitment had been that the site would be ready "in the morning."

The health law's sixth sign-up season began with stabilizing premiums and more choices for consumers.

Nationally, average premiums are going up only by low single-digit percentages for 2019. In some states, and for some types of plans, premiums will decline. Fewer areas will see increases. Insurers also are expanding their participation.

But Republicans have not backed off their pledge to fully repeal the health law, despite failing to do so in Trump's first year. Still, other changes by the GOP-run Congress and the administration for next year may result in fewer people signing up.

Congress did get rid of the unpopular requirement that most people carry health insurance or risk fines, starting Jan. 1.

The administration has opened the way for insurers to offer alternatives to the law's comprehensive coverage, including plans that don't have to cover pre-existing conditions.

Democrats have made maintaining protections for pre-existing conditions a major issue in the elections, forcing Republicans on the defensive. They also accuse Trump of trying to "sabotage" the health law, and a core group of former Obama administration officials has kept close tabs on sign-up season.

Despite all the political drama, enrollment has remained remarkably stable.

About 10 million people have private policies through HealthCare.gov and state-run insurance markets, with roughly 9 in 10 getting taxpayer-financed help to pay their premiums. An estimated 12 million more are covered through the law's Medicaid expansion, aimed at low-income adults.

Income-based subsidies that protect consumers from high premiums remain available for next year, as has been the case since the overhaul went into effect. Open enrollment ends Dec. 15 for coverage starting Jan. 1.

Synagogue suspect pleads not guilty as more funerals planned

By Maryclaire Dale
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — With two more funerals set for Thursday, the anti-Semitic truck driver accused of gunning down 11 people at a Pittsburgh synagogue pleaded not guilty to federal charges that could put him on death row.

Robert Bowers, 46, was arraigned one day after a grand jury issued a 44-count indictment that charges him with murder, hate crimes, obstructing the practice of religion and other crimes. It was his second brief appearance in a federal courtroom since the weekend massacre at Tree of Life synagogue in Pittsburgh's Squirrel Hill neighborhood.

"Yes!" Bowers said in a loud voice when asked if he understood the charges.

Authorities say Bowers raged against Jews during and after the deadliest anti-Semitic attack in American history. He remains jailed without bail.

Bowers, who was shot and wounded during a gun battle that injured four police officers, walked into court under his own power, his left arm heavily bandaged. He was in a wheelchair at his first court appearance on Monday.

Bowers, who is stocky and square-faced with salt-and-pepper, closely cropped hair, frowned as the charges were read but did not appear to have a reaction as a federal prosecutor announced he could face a death sentence. He told a prosecutor he had read the indictment.

One of his federal public defenders, Michael Novara, said Bowers pleaded not guilty, "as is typical at this stage of the proceedings."

Bowers had been set for a preliminary hearing on the evidence, but federal prosecutors instead took the case to a grand jury.

The panel issued the indictment as funerals continued for the victims.

Jared Younger of Los Angeles told mourners that he waited for hours Saturday for his father to pick up his phone or let them know he was all right. The dread built all day until his sister learned their father, Irving Younger, had indeed been shot and killed.

"That waiting stage was just unbearable," Jared Younger said at his father's funeral Wednesday. "Saturday was the most lonely day of my life."

Funerals were being held Thursday for Bernice and Sylvan Simon, husband and wife, and Dr. Richard Gottfried, a dentist who worked part-time at a clinic treating refugees and immigrants. The oldest victim, 97-year-old Rose Mallinger, will be honored at the last service Friday. Her daughter was injured in the attack.

Friends recalled Irving Younger, 69, as a "kibbitzing, people-loving" man. He was one of the first people Rabbi Jeffrey Myers met when he came to town last year from New Jersey to lead Tree of Life.

Myers, who survived the massacre, is presiding over five funerals for seven congregants this week. He ran a few minutes late to Younger's service because he was still at the burial for another victim, Joyce Fienberg.

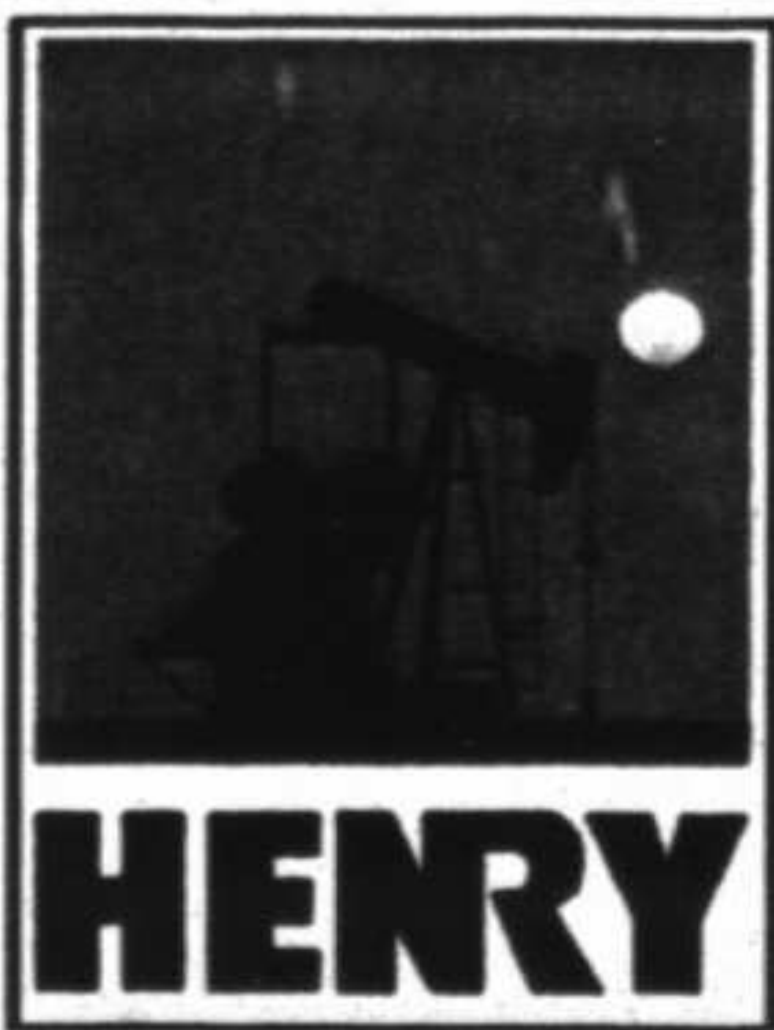

"I can't imagine the stress he's under," said his predecessor, Rabbi Charles "Chuck" Diamond.

As Younger's service was wrapping up, Myers momentarily forgot to read a letter to the family that another rabbi had sent.

"After preparing for five funerals, you get a little verklempt," Myers said.

Tree of Life remains a crime scene. Rabbis and other volunteers have been cleaning the temple to remove all bodily traces from the 11 victims, following Jewish law regarding death and burial.

With Halloween just passed and a community Thanksgiving meal today, it's fair to say the holiday season is upon us. H-E-B's 16th annual Feast of Sharing begins this month's slate of nonprofit special events and fundraisers. The November Datebook offers a quick look at these upcoming events.

Today | H-E-B Feast of Sharing is a free community event and the culmination of H-E-B's commitment to fight hunger. More than 7,500 guests are expected for the Thanksgiving dinner — turkey, dressing, potatoes and pumpkin pie. The supermarket chain got a head start by delivering meals Wednesday to more than 500 homebound seniors in a partnership with Senior Link of Midland. Today's event will include live music, holiday activities and entertainment for all ages. 4-8 p.m. at the Horseshoe Pavilion, 2514 Arena Trail. heb.com.

Saturday | Arts Council of Midland hosts its Artist Community Market featuring more than 30 visual artists, art demonstrations, live performances and informational booths on area nonprofits. 10 a.m.-5 p.m. at 1506 W. Illinois Ave. Free. acmidland.org.

Tuesday | The Shining Hope Luncheon is Buckner International's annual fundraiser.

Fasken's Norbert Dickman to be honored by Boy Scouts

By Rich Lopez

jrlopez@mrt.com

Midlander Norbert Dickman admits to a meandering road throughout life. Born in Chicago, he went to seminary in Rome, practiced law in San Francisco and now serves as Fasken Oil and Ranch's general manager. In his tenure with Fasken, as well as with the family's charitable organization the Prairie Foundation, his contributions to the community have been many.

The Boy Scouts of America Buffalo Trail Council is presenting Dickman with its 2018 Distinguished Citizen Award. He will be honored at a dinner and reception beginning 6:30 p.m. Thursday at the Petroleum Club.

Previous recipients of the Distinguished Citizen Award include Don Evans, retired Gen. Tommy Franks, Laura Bush, Gov. Greg Abbott and Congressman Mike Conaway. Before the dinner event, Dickman spoke being added to that list of names and what it means to be a distinguished citizen.

MRT: How are you feeling with an announcement like this?

Dickman: When you look at the names on that list of previous recipients, it's quite an honor to be selected and join that group. I'm very honored and humbled for the nomination and award.

MRT: What does "distinguished citizen" mean to you?

Dickman: To me it means someone who stands out in the community who contributes. And there are many ways to do that. You can do it philanthropically and civically, but also in business. We are a good sized operation which employs 250 people. And Fasken is developing a multi-use park, we've donated land for Fasken Elementary. I've been blessed to work with wonderful people here, so it's not just me. It's the Fasken organization and we have a desire to continue servicing the community.

MRT: You've had quite a path getting to Midland.

Dickman: (Laughs) Well, yes. After high school, I went to seminary in California and then to Catholic seminary in Rome where I got the equivalent of a master's degree, called a Licentiate. When I returned, I took a change in direction and went to law school.

As a very young lawyer out of law school in San Francisco, our firm's major client was David Fasken. I worked for them on their personal legal affairs. When he passed in 1988 he left everything to his wife. I moved to Midland to take over management of (Barbara Fasken's) affairs. So, I've been in Midland 30 years now.

MRT: What's a fact people may not know about you?

Dickman: Italy is still very much with me and my wife, and I try to go back often. We have a place there. And we speak some Italian.

Philanthropists to be recognized at annual luncheon

'People want to help': How Parkland families are creating nonprofits for social change

By Alex Harris
Miami Herald

PARKLAND, Fla. — When you lose someone, how do you make sure their memory lives on?

For the loved ones of the 17 victims of the Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School shooting, a constellation of scholarships, memorial funds and activist organizations now exist in honor of the students and teachers slain on Feb. 14.

In the next couple months, workers will break ground on "Princess Meadow's Playground" — a subset of Betti Stradling Park in Coral Springs built to honor Parkland victim Meadow Pollack, who used to play there as a child.

Her father, Andrew Pollack, said he wanted to build a cheerful, beautiful place to remember his daughter, his princess. He also plans to include a memorial for all the lives lost that day.

"A place for the community to go to remember all the victims," he said.

Pollack said his organization raised more than $500,000 in the "Meadow's Movement" effort, enough to also fund a new playground at the Chabad of Coral Springs.

Most families have chosen to direct donations — which have poured in from around the world — to charities and causes their loved ones were passionate about during their lives.

When it came time to close out Carmen Schentrup's bank account, her parents took her $5,000 in savings to jumpstart Carmen's Dream Fund, a research fund with the ALS Foundation. ALS, also known as Lou Gehrig's disease, is a degenerative illness Carmen wanted to dedicate her life to curing. So far, April Schentrup said, the fund has raised more than $159,000.

"We want to have a way to honor her dream. And people want to help. People always ask what they can do to help," she said.

Carmen's music teacher also helped spearhead a music scholarship for high-achieving soloists in her honor — the Carmen Schentrup Memorial Award.

Chris Hixon, the athletic director at the school killed in the shooting, now has an athletic scholarship in his name. His wife, Debra Hixon, said the Chris Hixon Athletic Scholarship supports student athletes with good grades and volunteer hours at each of the three schools where Hixon served as an athletic director. They plan to fund-raise with charity 5Ks, including one Feb. 16 on Hollywood Beach.

"We want the memorial to be something positive, for his life and what he stood for," she said. "I don't want people to define him by how he died, because that was just a moment in his life."

The Montalto family decided "to keep Gina's light shining" with the Gina Rose Montalto Memorial Foundation, which will begin awarding merit-based scholarships in early 2019 to students who plan to pursue higher education in art, STEM and mental health. They'd also like to offer grants to high-achieving Girl Scouts one day soon.

"We're hopeful it'll be perpetual. It's our goal to pass this on to our son so he could" — Tony Montalto's voice quavered — "remember his sister."

This work — no matter how impactful — can only go so far in alleviating grief. Fred Guttenberg, who lost his 14-year-old daughter Jaime, said it makes him feel "inspired and depressed."

"Inspired by the energy we see from people when they hear what we're doing and the change we're making, but just so depressed that we're doing this for the memory of my daughter because she's gone," he said.

He, like a few other parents, has thrown himself into activism in addition to philanthropy.

His foundation is Orange Ribbons for Jaime (her favorite color and the color of the national gun safety movement). It donates to charities that were important to Jaime, including the Broward County Humane Society, where she volunteered; the dance company Jacob's Pillow and the Paley Institute, where she one day dreamed of being a physical therapist.

Through the nonprofit, Guttenberg also advocates for policies and politicians supporting gun control and safe schools.

He's part of a cohort of families who have decided the best way to honor their dead loved ones is making sure this type of tragedy can never happen again.

In addition to a soccer scholarship, Lori Alhadeff, who lost her daughter Alyssa, started Make Our Schools Safe (MOSS) to encourage school safety initiatives. She visits schools and starts "dream team clubs" where students become activists for safety at their own schools.

The organization pays for "Stop the Bleed" trainings, which trains students and teachers how to keep injured peers from dying until help arrives, and suicide-prevention trainings.

On the MOSS website, there's a large ad on the bottom of the page that offers a discount on a bullet-resistant backpack with 15 percent of profits donated to the charity.

"I like to talk about layers of safety," said Alhadeff, who was elected to the Broward School Board in August. "But if all else fails, the student has a bulletproof backpack that could help save their life."

Max Schachter has thrown himself into a school safety campaign that has gone international. After losing his son, Alex, when the killer shot through the window of a classroom, Schachter decided the nation needed a national clearinghouse for best practices in school safety, as well as a central authority to enforce them.

His mission — Safe Schools For Alex — has taken him to the White House, to "the safest school in America" and even to Israel.

He now has the bipartisan support of 34 congressmen and senators, including Sen. Marco Rubio (R-Florida), and a letter outlining his goals on the desk of Secretary of Education Betsy DeVos.

"Most days I don't want to leave my bed. I miss Alex so much. But I know that Alex would want me to help other children," Schachter said. "I know he's with me on this journey. I'm going to keep pushing until all the children in schools are safe across the U.S."

That same drive pushes Manuel Oliver, who lost his son and best friend Joaquin. He expresses his pain and desire for change through art, including a statue of a child cowering under a school desk, which he's featured at South Florida events rallying for gun safety laws.

Through his Walls of Demand project — part of his broader gun advocacy group Change the Ref — Oliver has painted more than a dozen murals across the country calling for change. Most notably, he painted a wall directly across from the National Rifle Association headquarters in Fairfax, Virginia, on Joaquin's birthday, where Oliver said 1,500 people gathered and sang "Happy Birthday" to his son.

Joaquin is also immortalized in a project from Area 23 in New York that uses software to handwrite social media posts to letters to legislators. Thanks to Oliver's involvement, all those letters are written in Joaquin's handwriting.

"Any other handwriting wouldn't have the same effect," he said.

Oliver and several other parents have hit the campaign trail to advocate for their favorite politicians

Catholic dioceses planning 'Border Mass' near Ciudad Juarez

Associated Press

SUNLAND PARK, N.M. — A group of Catholic dioceses is planning a Mass along the U.S.-Mexico border in the city of Sunland Park amid rising political tensions around immigration.

Dioceses of El Paso, Las Cruces and Ciudad Juarez are scheduled Saturday to hold their annual "Border Mass" at the wall near of the Ciudad Juarez neighborhood of Anapra.

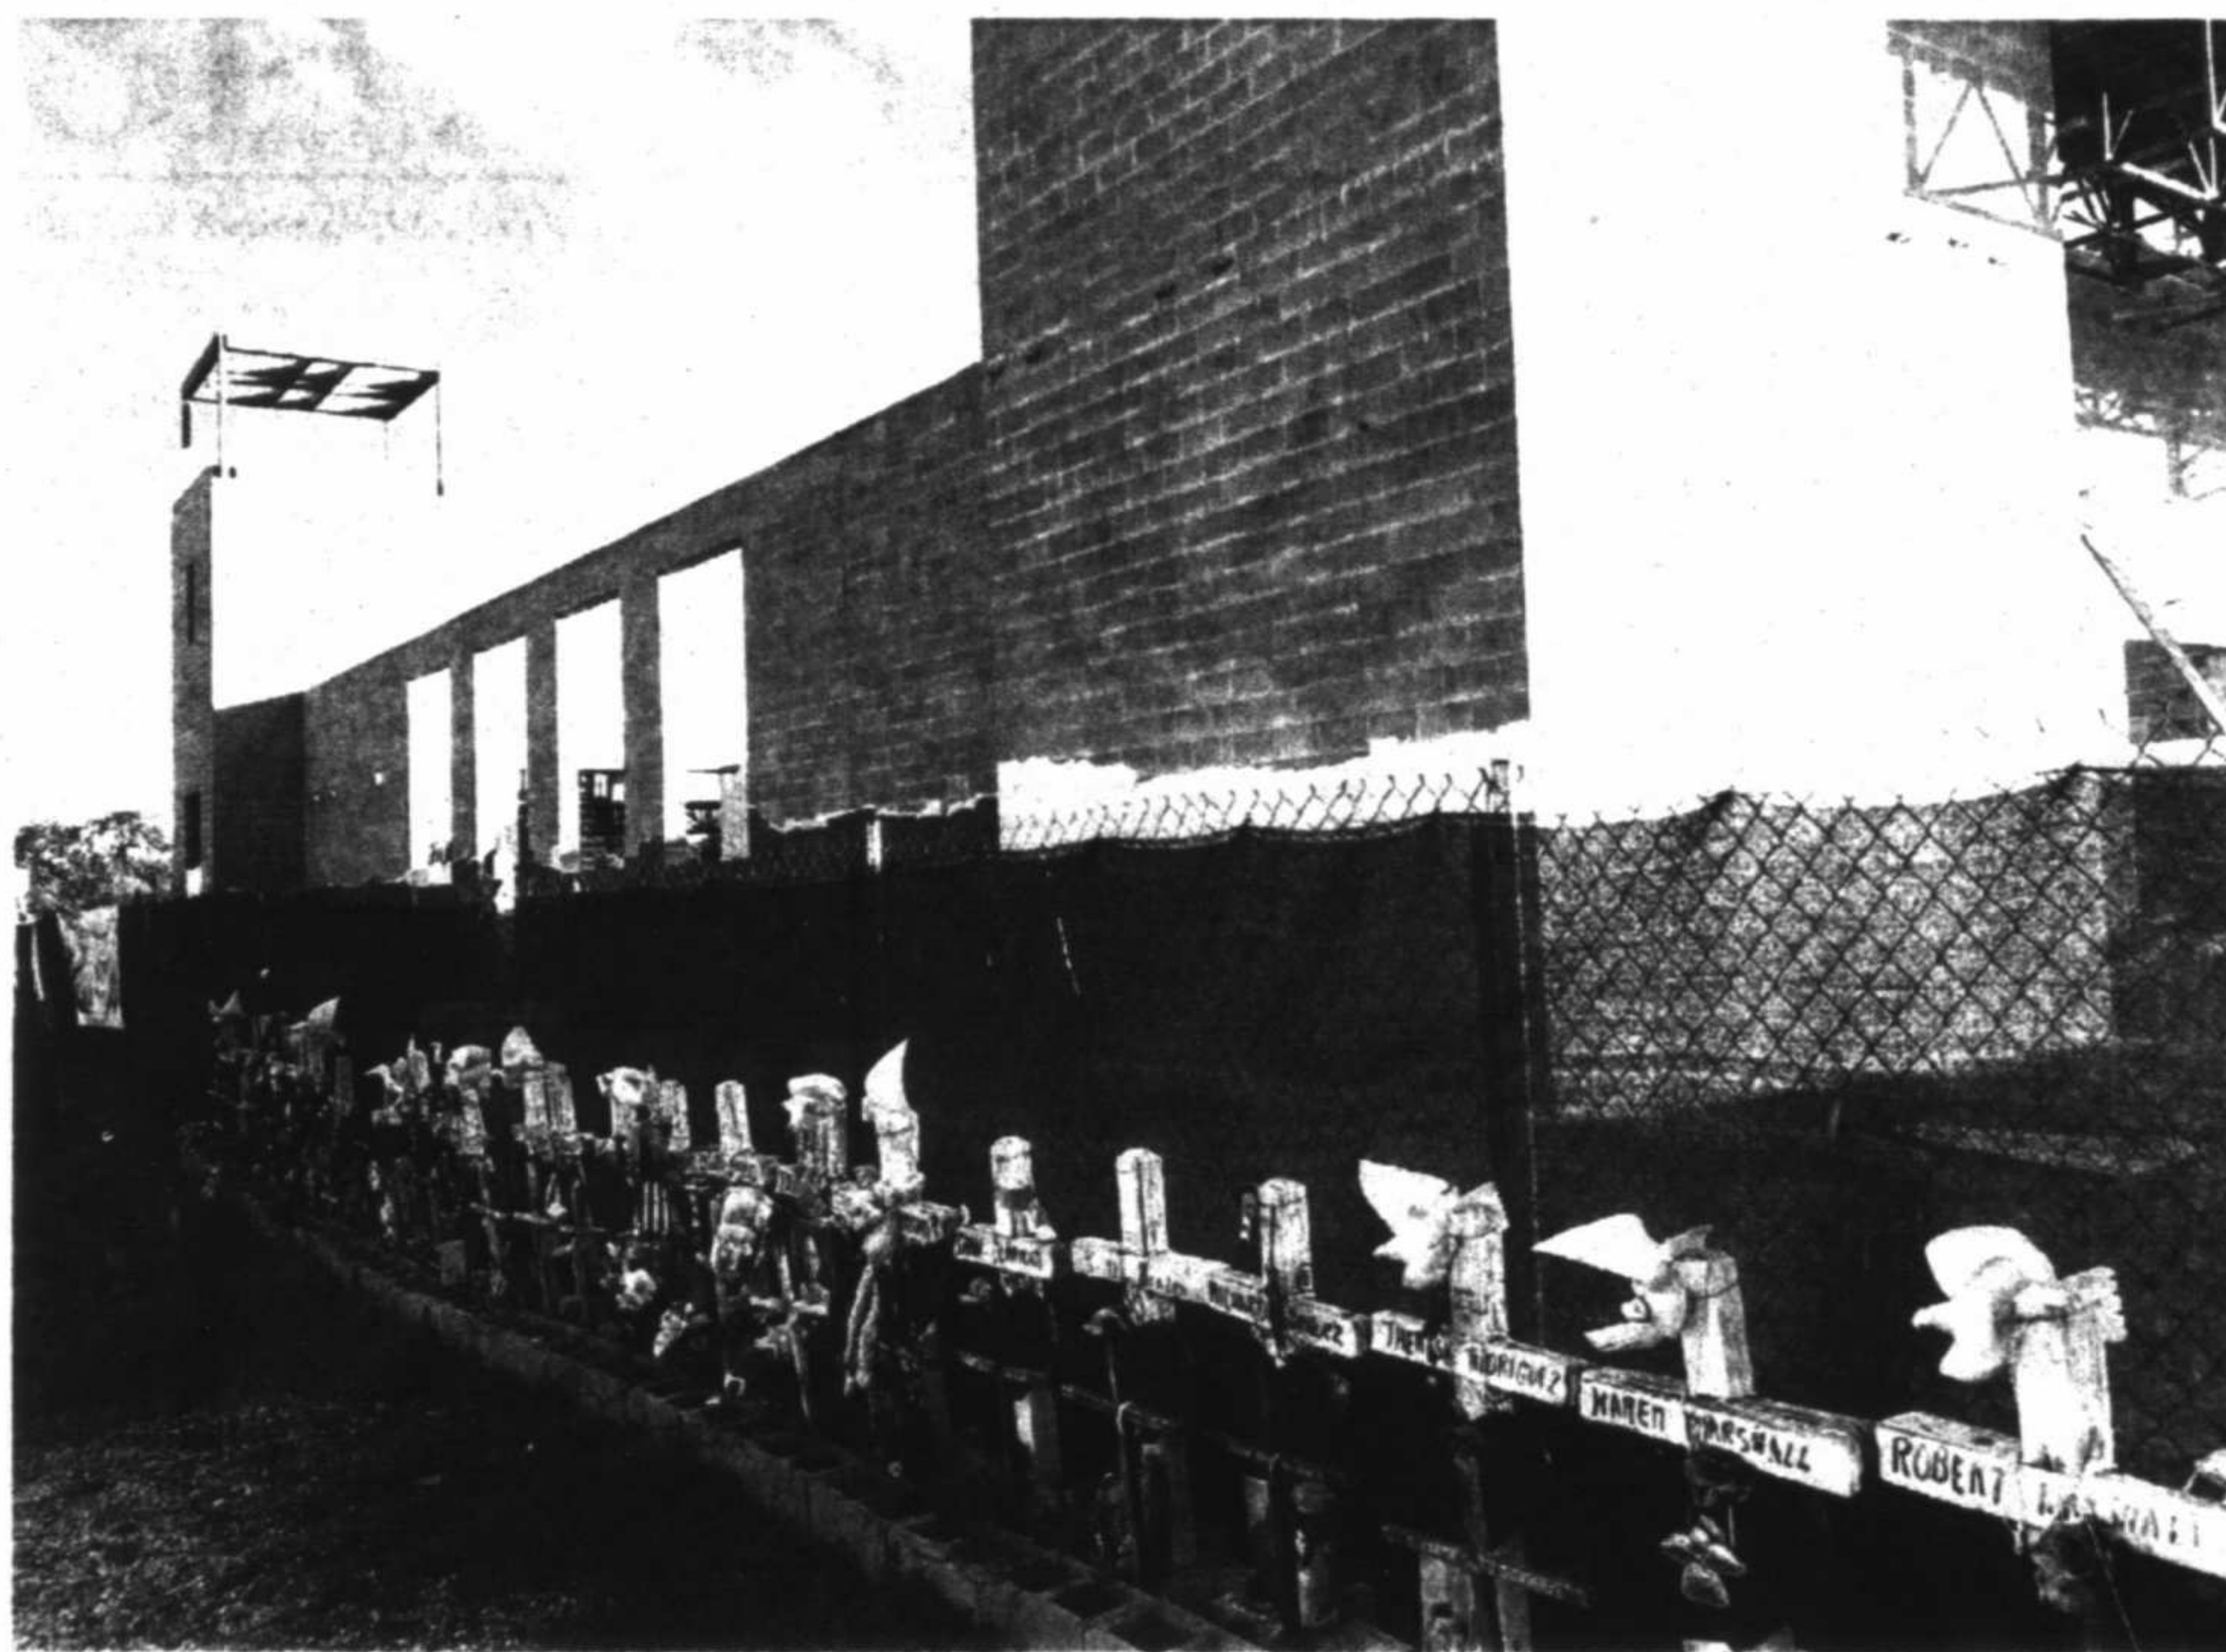

The site of the Mass is near Mount Cristo Rey — 29-foot tall limestone statue of Jesus on top of a hill in Sunland Park.

The Mass comes as President Donald Trump is sending more than 5,200 active-duty troops to the U.S.-Mexico border in response to a caravan of Central American migrants traveling to the U.S. through Mexico.

Participants in the Day of the Dead Mass gather Nov. 2, 2003, on either side of a fence which marks the border between the U.S., left, and Mexico at Sunland Park, N.M., and Anapra, Mexico.

Beside a new church building under construction in Sutherland Springs, 26 crosses commemorate the worshippers who died in last year's mass shooting.

Sutherland Springs church congregants say 'Not again'

By Silvia Foster-Frau
San Antonio Express-News

SUTHERLAND SPRINGS — Julie Workman was watching Disney movies with her 3-year-old granddaughter, Eevee, when she saw the news blaring on her television: 11 shot and killed at the Tree of Life synagogue in Pittsburgh. "I just froze, stared at the TV in disbelief. And going through my head was 'Not again, not again, not again,'" Workman said, standing outside the First Baptist Church after Sunday services.

Workman is a survivor of the First Baptist church shooting here, which killed 26 people and wounded 20 others at First Baptist on Nov. 5, 2017. She was injured by shrapnel and flying glass.

It was the deadliest shooting at a church in the United States. "Your heart sinks knowing some people are going through the same thing you've been through. Your body aches from the pain that they're feeling," said Michelle Shields, a church congregant and the mother-in-law of the gunman, Devin Kelley, 26.

As they've struggled to come to terms with the deaths of so many loved ones, the Sutherland Springs community has also had to grapple with the trauma of watching similar mass shootings play out, again and again, in the nearly one year since their own.

Congregants were overwhelmed with heartbreak in February, when they learned of the shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Fla., in which 17 students and staff members were killed.

In May, a gunman killed eight students and two teachers at Sante Fe High School near Houston, and the survivors of Sutherland Springs had flashbacks to their own tragedy.

Now, they feel it again: the re-traumatization, the secondhand grief, the pain in knowing that more people in the world will have to go through the kind of suffering they've experienced.

"Every time I hear about one of these shootings, it's like a punch in the gut," said Stephen Willeford, a congregant who confronted and shot at the gunman as he fled the First Baptist Church last November.

"(Church) is a place where you don't expect something like this to happen. And then it keeps happening more and more often," he said.

When Willeford heard the news Saturday, he said he issued a quiet prayer for the people of Pittsburgh. The shooting at the Tree of Life synagogue comes nearly a week before the one-year anniversary of the Sutherland Springs massacre, and Sunday's services at First Baptist included prayers for the Pittsburgh congregation.

"May your compassion, your grace and your mercy be in Pittsburgh with that synagogue and those folks there as well. Father, I thank you that you ... can be both here and there. I pray a hedge of protection for all of those families," Pastor Frank Pomeroy said in the opening prayer at the Sunday services.

San Antonio Mayor Ron Nirenberg said the city stands in solidarity with the people of Pittsburgh.

"Our hearts go out to the families who are suffering because of this act. We mourn their loss with them," he said in a statement Sunday. "People of all faiths must be able to worship without fear of violence, and we must resolve to ensure their security."

"Our communities and the nation as a whole must stand strong against intolerance and strive toward a path of compassion and understanding that heals the deep animosities that are plaguing our society."

Rabbi Jeffrey Abraham, of the Congregation Agudas Achim in San Antonio, will be hosting a public memorial service at 7 p.m. Tuesday at Temple Beth-El to show that "we will not give into the hatred and anti-Semitism in our world," he said in a statement.

The Tree of Life synagogue victims ranged in age from mid-50s to a 97-year-old woman. As the gunman was taken into custody, a criminal complaint said he "wanted all Jews to die."

"How dare a human being shoot another human being when it's not for defense?" said Tambria Read, the local historian for Sutherland Springs and chair of the town's museum. She knew almost everyone who died in the First Baptist shooting.

Read said the news of similar shootings affects her on a deeper level than it did before she experienced it in her community.

"It brings the quiver in my voice a lot quicker than it used to," she said.

Workman said she had just been talking on Thursday about the inevitability of another shooting. To see her foreboding confirmed so quickly "made me sick," she said.

"The heartache and everything we have gone through, is going to be in their lives too," she said. "When something horrible happens to you, you hope it stops with you. And it's not."

Shields had advice for the Tree of Life community: "Stay strong in your faith, and stay strong as a family. Take it day by day. Don't let anybody tell you how you should heal."

She said she hopes they know that the Sutherland Springs church is thinking of them and praying for them; and "if they reach out to us, we're more than happy to be there for them, in any way we can."

before the Nov. 6 election, some through their non-profits.

Pollack's other organization in his daughter's memory, Children's Lives and School Safety, has an eight-point plan to up school security, including better mental health resources, district school safety specialists and a school safety hotline.

Some of the funds his group raised helped hire more armed school guards in Polk County as part of the Coach Aaron Feis Guardian Program, one of the facets of the Marjory Stoneman Douglas School Safety Law passed in Florida less than a month after the shooting. Feis was killed in the Stoneman Douglas shooting.

The bill also enacted a three-day waiting period for all gun purchases, raised the legal age to buy a rifle from 18 to 21 and gives police greater authority to confiscate guns from people who threaten themselves or others.

This major legislative achievement led the families to band together and form Stand With Parkland, a group that has helped lobby for more gun-related laws, including the FIX NICS act, which penalizes government agencies for not reporting to the federal background check system, and STOP School Violence, which would establish a grant program for school security.

Tony Montalto, who lost his daughter Gina, is president of the group. He called their wins incremental steps on the road to real change.

"We've been unfortunately given a voice, and we want to use it to bring people together to start conversations in the ideological middle, to people who can have respectful conversations with each other," he said. "And then take that position and take it to our leaders and lawmakers and pass policies and laws that keep our teachers and students safe at school."

The nonprofit advocates for enhanced school security, responsible firearms ownership and better mental health screening and support programs. The strategy, Montalto said, is to convince legislators that "compromise isn't a dirty word."

"I'd rather the kids be 10 percent safer now than 90 percent safer never because we couldn't reach an agreement," he said.

Gomez sets tone for Lady Rebels' success

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@mrt.com

The Lee volleyball team's hitters are very thankful that they have senior Allie Gomez.

The 5-foot-4 setter has played a key role in providing hittable balls for the likes of Yali Flores, Emily Hillman, Kelsey Harrington, Jensen Letcher, McKenzie Gibson and Loredana Founji this season.

"One of the things that we talked to our hitters about doing is when you get a good hit, it's not just because of you, it's because you got a good delivery from your setter," Lee head coach Robert Blakley said. "Allie is the prototype of what you want. She has good hands. She is smart."

Gomez had a team-high 19 assists and notched three aces in the Lady Rebels' 25-20, 25-14, 25-15 win over El Paso Americas in a Class 6A bi-district playoff match, Monday in Alpine. It was a banner victory being Lee's first playoff win in 19 years.

Gomez and the Lady Rebels (29-10) hope to extend their 11-match win streak when they meet Fort Worth Trimble Tech (28-5) in today's 6:30 p.m. area playoff match at Cooper High in Abilene. Lee is seeking its first trip to the regional quarterfinal round since 1999.

"I think we just came out with a common goal," Gomez said of the Lady Rebels' breakthrough season, which included their first district title in 19 years. "Everyone knew what we wanted to do this year. We wanted to be better than last year and go further in playoffs than last year. I think that kind of motivated us to work hard. It's showing."

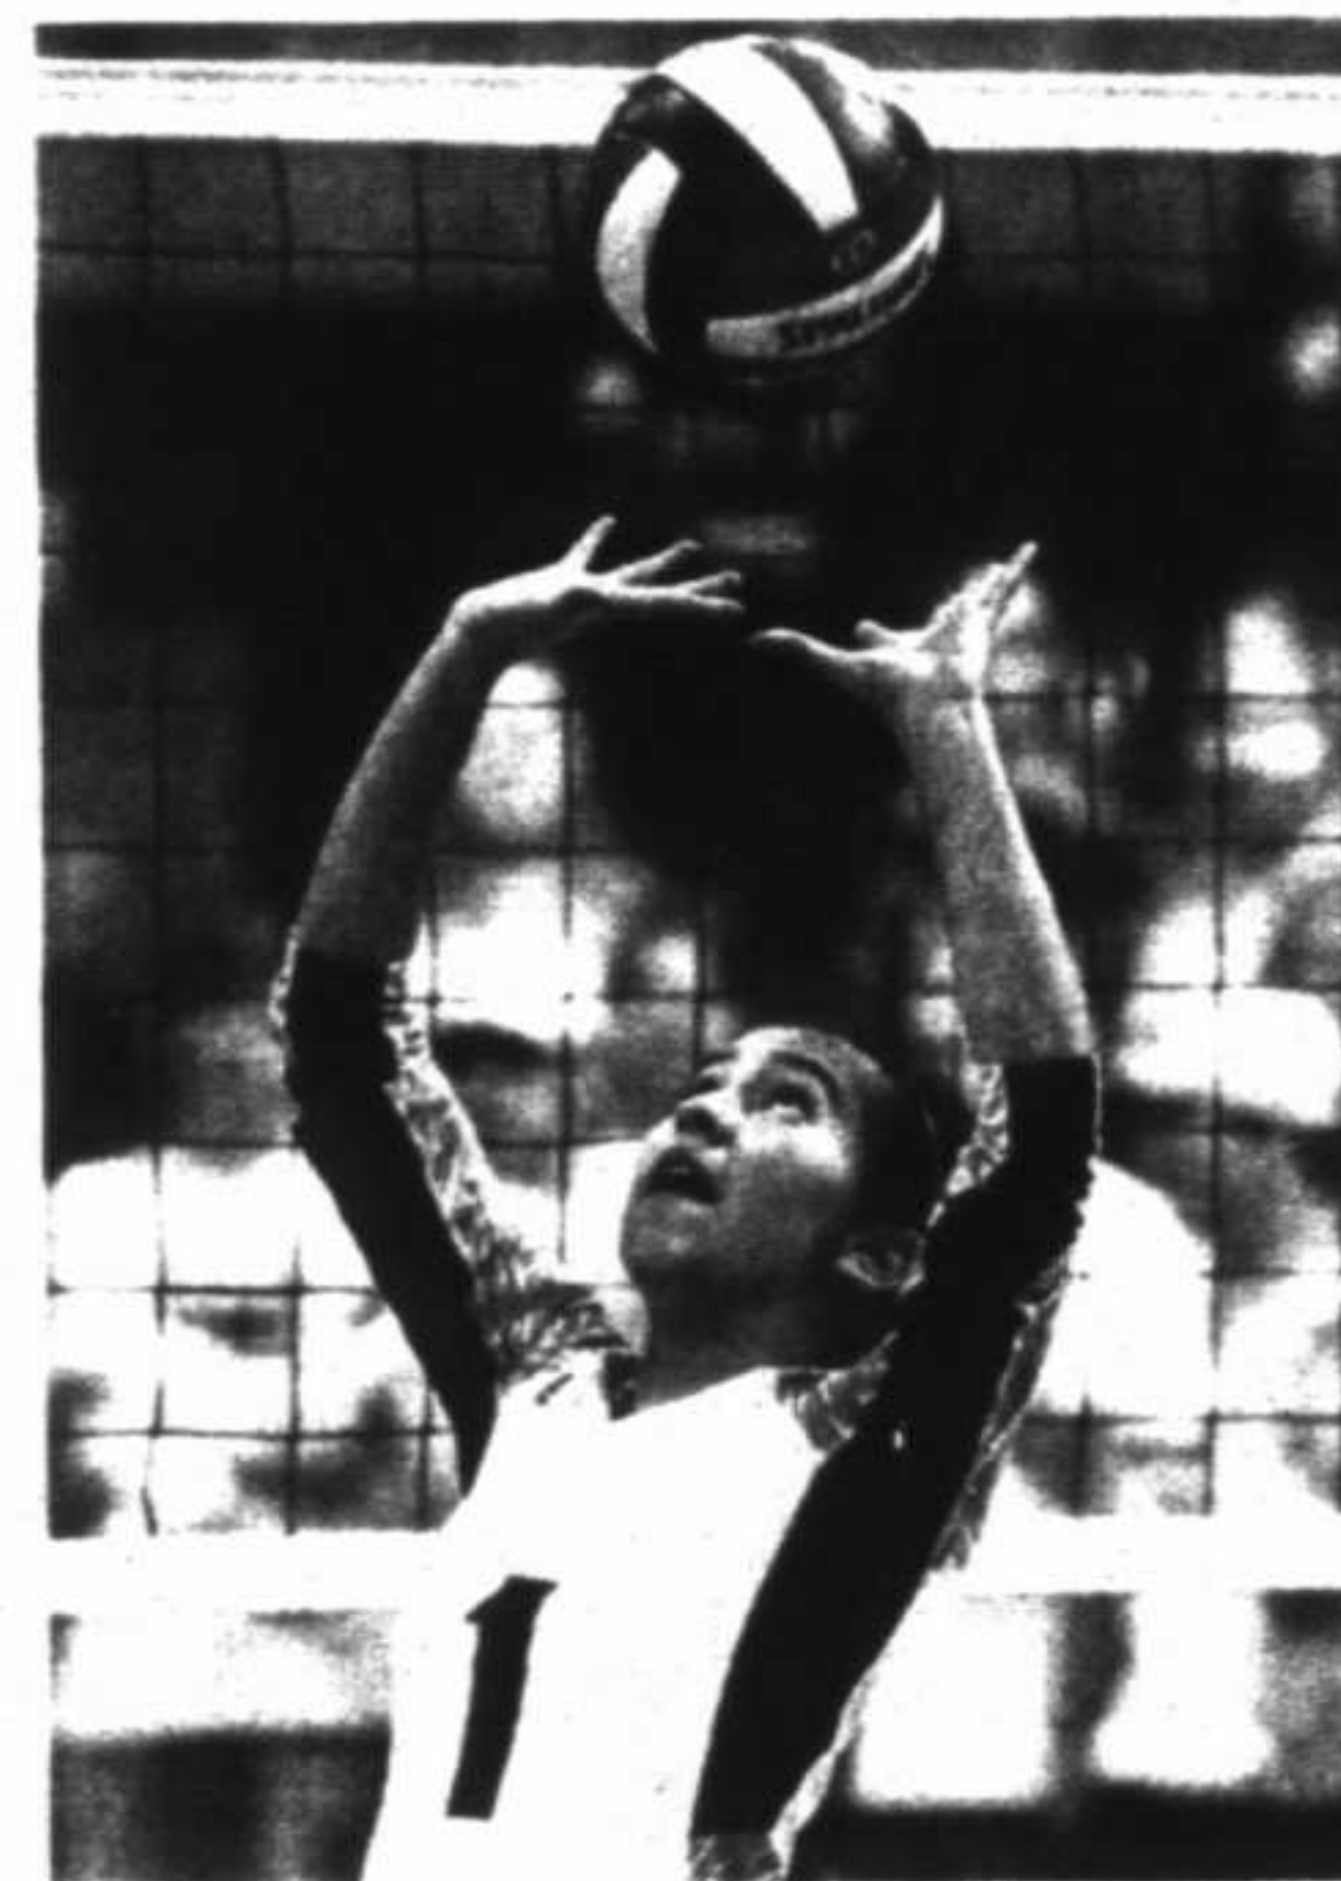

Although Gomez has been playing volleyball since her elementary school years, she picked up setting as a freshman, and has since progressed into a standout. Gomez does a lot of thinking as a setter because all her hitters have different preferences on how they like the ball delivered to them. Gomez has to react on the fly in real time to give them a good set.

"Each of them have a different set, and it's easier to know what kind of set they want to be successful," Gomez said. "I usually kind of look at the hitters before the ball is served and I think about what kind of set and if they need it higher, lower, faster, slower — things like that."

In addition to setting, Gomez might be Lee's best server too. She is typically the first person to serve for the Lady Rebels in each set. Gomez has recorded aces on roughly 20 percent of her serves this season.

Gomez honed her serving craft through persistence. "I practiced a new serve every day," Gomez said. "I kept working on it. Even when we had to serve under pressure, I did well under pressure and it helped trained me to become a better server."

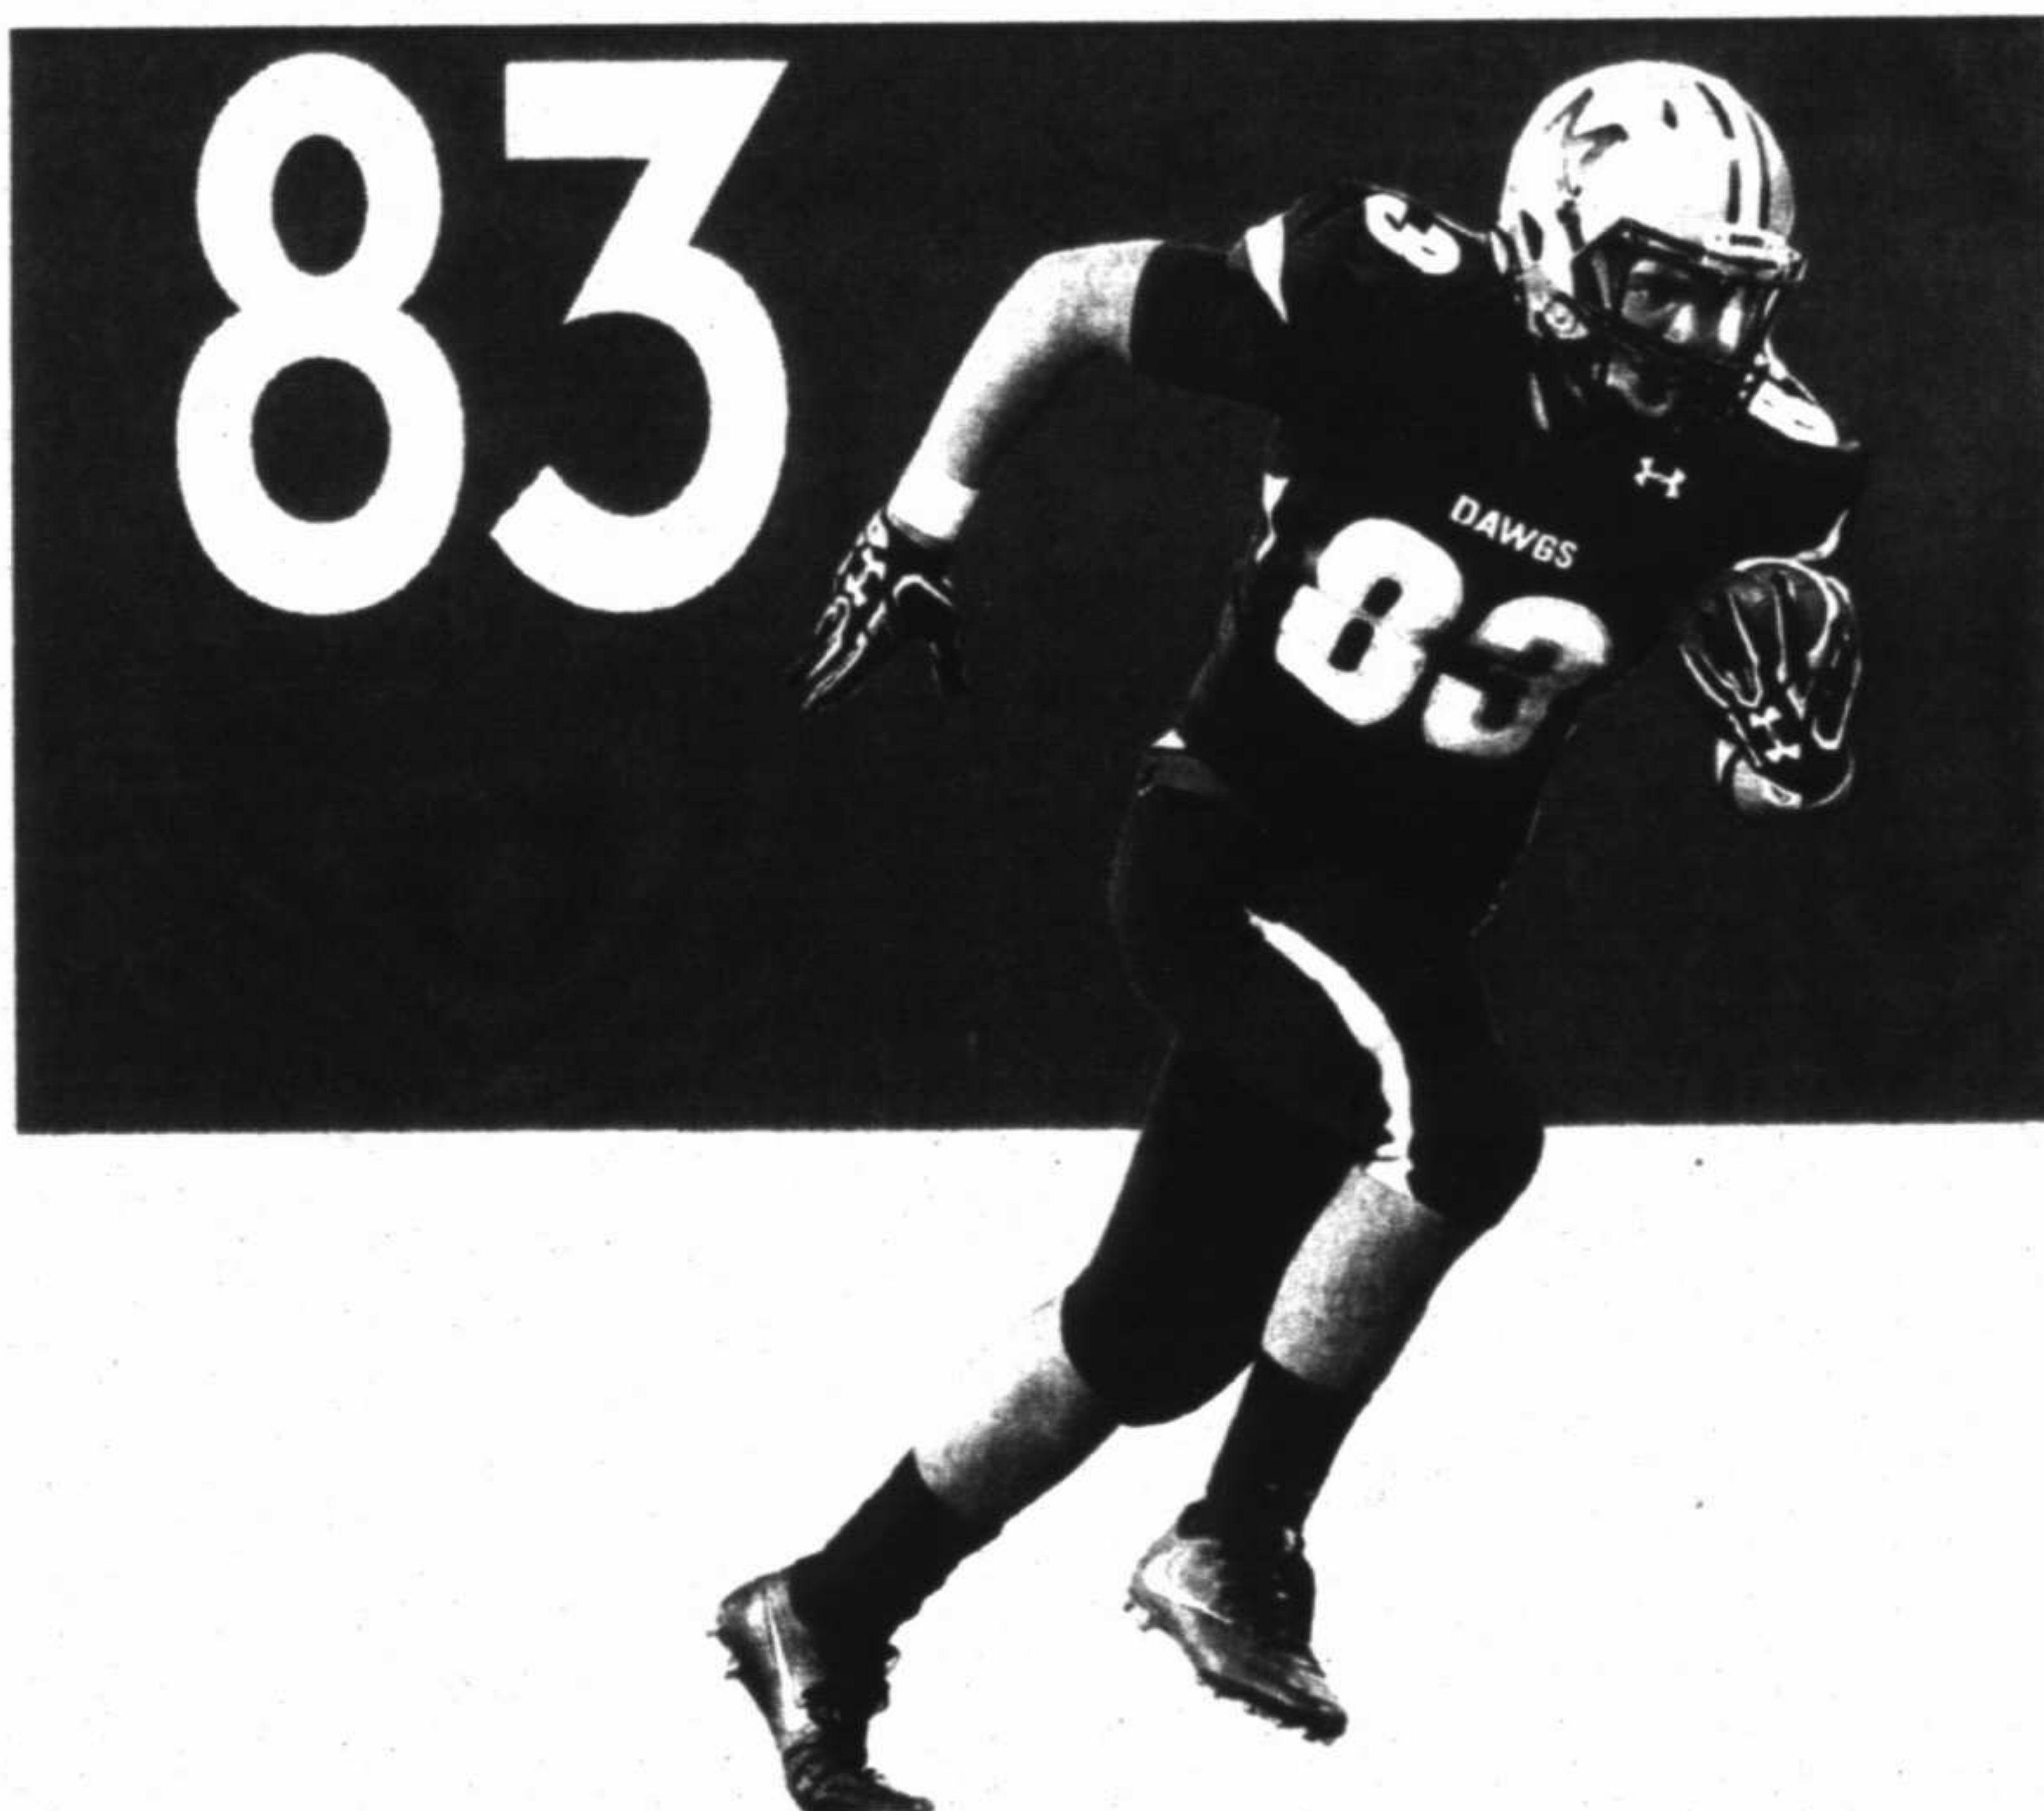

Lee's Allie Gomez (1) sets against Midland High on Oct. 23 at Lee High School.

Keithley provides big target for Bulldogs

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@mrt.com

Campbell Keithley is a valuable piece to the Midland High offense.

The 6-foot-2, 210-pound junior can line up in a multitude of spots and create matchup problems for opposing teams.

Despite his tight end build, Keithley has been primarily used as an inside slot receiver and outside wide receiver for the Bulldogs this season due to need and injuries. But Keithley can also line up in the tight end position with his hand on the ground in a 3-point stance and be an extra blocker.

"I feel like I have a pretty big part," Keithley said. "I just do whatever they ask me to and try and help out as much as I can, whether that's at tight end, inside/outside receiver or special teams. Whatever I can do."

Keithley has been quarterback Suddin Sapien's favorite target this season, leading MHS with 29 receptions to go along with 367 receiving yards and three touchdowns. Keithley figures to play a key role when the playoff-hungry Bulldogs (3-5, 1-2 in District 2-6A) meet crosstown rival Lee (6-2, 2-1) in today's 7:30 p.m. District 2-6A game at Grande Communications Stadium.

Keithley and the Dawgs are currently tied with Odessa High for the fourth and final playoff spot with two games

Lee's Gonzales leaves impression with versatility

By Christopher Hadorn

Lee junior Charlie Gonzales left quite the first impression on head coach Clint Hartman.

In 2016, Gonzales returned punts on the Lee freshman team even though he played defensive end.

"Who is the big guy returning punts?" Hartman exclaimed at the time.

Gonzales said the opportunity arose out of a willingness to return punts.

"It was actually really shocking because I just randomly asked my coach," Gonzales said. "He said, 'Sure, go for it.' I started doing well in the game and I eventually got a spot returning punts."

Gonzales shined in the punt return role, scoring a touchdown that season.

Gonzales' punt return past speaks volumes of his athleticism. The 6-foot-2, 235-pound inside linebacker has been a force for the Rebel defense, as he leads Team 58 with 70 total tackles, 53 solo tackles and 24 tackles for loss.

Gonzales and Lee (6-2, 2-1 in District 2-6A) can clinch a playoff spot today when they face rival Midland High (3-5, 1-2) in a 7:30 p.m. District 2-6A contest at Grande Communications Stadium. Gonzales and the Rebels' ferocious 3-4 defense are looking to get back on track after an uncharacteristic performance in a 49-26 loss to Amarillo Tascosa last week.

"We're going to bounce back pretty hard," Gonzales

Rodie emerges as leader on young Lady Chaps

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroymrt.com

Aleksandra "Anja" Rodie is usually a reserved person who tends to go about her business as a member of the Midland College volleyball team.

But this year, she was asked to be much more than just another player.

As only one of two sophomores on a team full of freshmen, head coach Tammie Jimenez wanted the 5-foot-11 outside hitter from Belgrade, Serbia, to be more of a leader along with fellow sophomore Desiree Marmolejo.

"She's a quiet leader, not an outspoken kid," Jimenez said. "There was a hesitancy for her to be more of a leader because she's an introvert so it's harder for her to get comfortable speaking in public or demanding more of her teammates. It's not natural for her but she's had to get out of her comfort zone a bit this year."

Rodie admitted that it wasn't all that easy for her to step into that leadership role on a team that will be heading into this weekend's NJCAA Region V West Tournament at the No. 3 seed. The Lady Chaparrals (18-10) will open tournament play against No. 6 seed Clarendon College (8-21) at 8 p.m. CDT in Roswell, New Mexico.

"It's a bigger responsibility for me and it was hard having a lot of freshmen and everything," she said. "This year, Desi and I were having to push a lot of freshmen. Coming from high school, it's different, it's more serious. We were just having to show them and push them to do better every day."

As a freshman on a team

loaded with sophomores last year, Rodie was more of a role player who came off the bench.

This season, along with being more of a leader, Rodie has done well on the court. She is fifth on the team with 162 kills and is one of five players on the team who averages at least 2 points per set.

"She's been a kid who's grown tremendously from her freshman season," Jimenez said. "Last year she was hesitant and unsure of her abilities because she was in a new place. And because she was surrounded by some incredible sophomores last year, she kind of took a backseat to some of those skills. In the spring, she really worked hard to improve her fundamentals and skills."

Rodie believes that this season she took another step as a player.

"I feel I'm more prepared to move on now," she said.

Like she did when she was coming out of high school, Rodie has begun to email college coaches to find a place to play for next season.

In Bulgaria, there are no organized sports in the high school or college level, so the only way to play a particular sport is through club teams. That's what Rodie did and made it a goal to get to a college in the United States and play volleyball.

"I was ready to come," she said when asked if there was any hesitation to come to the U.S.

Rodie's love for the sport began when she was 8 years old. She said she also was into karate and swimming but volleyball was the sport she enjoyed the most.

"We didn't have sports at my high school, so I would just go in the evenings to practice," she said. "It was helpful to get over any stress and I would forget about everything."

Now Rodie hopes to lead MC to a great run at the regional tournament and maybe the national tournament.

"I think we have our ups and downs, but if we stay focused we could do really well," she said. "I believe in our team."

CLASS 4A AREA PLAYOFF VOLLEYBALL

Greenwood vs. Decatur

When/where: 5 p.m. today.

Records/seeds: Greenwood 24-13, No. 1 seed in District 5-4A; Decatur 32-11, No. 2 in District 8-4A

Last match: Greenwood 3, Burk Burnett 0; Decatur 3, Godley 0

Notes
The Rangerettes are playing in the area round for the second straight year. Greenwood is seeking its first trip to the regional quarterfinals since 2011.

Kaylee Cheek had nine kills, three blocks and two aces in Greenwood's 25-23, 25-23, 25-21 win over Burk Burnett in Tuesday's bi-district match. Rangerettes head coach Callie Stewart said Burk Burnett was much better than she expected. "In set two, we struggled and we kind of fell back," Stewart said. "We kind of put ourselves in a hole. I was really proud of how we just kept trying to close the gap and work our way out of it and get within reach of the point. We took the second set away. I was really proud of that. I thought that was a huge mental win for us, so going into the third set, we had a lot of momentum. We sealed the deal. We didn't mess around and I was really proud of them."

The Rangerettes have won nine in a row heading into today's match with Decatur. "I know they've got power hitters," Stewart said. "I know they've got big girls and they're athletic. Facing some solid hitters with Burk Burnett, I thought that was a really solid game to lead into this match. I know they're going to use their middles a lot. They'll be physical. But our goal is to force them out of system as much as possible, play tough and play hard."

Lee MATCHING UP MHS

QUARTERBACK

Felix Hinojosa has been outstanding for the Rebels in his first year starting, thriving as a dual-threat QB. Hinojosa did not play last week due to an undisclosed injury, but is expected to return today. If Hinojosa is unavailable, sophomore Mikey Serrano would fill in and he's a capable runner. Suddin Sapien is the most important player to the Bulldogs, as he has accounted for 72.5 percent of the team's offense this year. The U.T.-San Antonio commit has carried the MHS offense on his back at times this year with his power running style and big league arm.

Advantage: MHS

RUNNING BACK

DQ Harris enhances the Dawg rushing attack with his north-south running style. Behind him, sophomore Daniel Garcia has emerged as an all-purpose threat that can help as a runner, pass catcher and return man. Lee senior Josh Traylor is one of the all-time great players to suit up in this rivalry with 3,751 career rushing yards, and 39 career touchdowns. After a slow start, Traylor has been on a roll in the last five games running behind a Rebel offensive line that has gelled and found its way.

Advantage: Lee

RECEIVERS

Lee wide outs Loic Fouonji and Sheldon Bass Jr. complement each other well with their size and ability to score from anywhere on the field. Fouonji leads the Rebels with 36 catches, 596 receiving yards and nine receiving TDs, while Bass isn't far behind with 33 receptions for 457 yards and six TDs. The Bulldogs' receiving corps has improved as the season has progressed with the emergence of former Midland Christian standout Randall Blancett and the development of junior Campbell Keithley. This less experienced group is still trying to find chemistry with Sapien in the passing game.

Advantage: Lee

OFFENSIVE LINE

The Bulldogs' O-line has a good blend of size and athleticism, anchored by two-year starter Joshua Ramos at center. MHS is so deep here that Brett Canis, a 6-8, 275-pound sophomore, comes off the bench to give the Dawgs a sixth blocker at the tight end spot. This unit's success typically plays a big hand in the Bulldogs' victories. The Lee O-line, which was starting five new faces this year, has overcome a slow start to blossom into a unit that is opening holes for a running attack that is averaging 8.1 yards per carry. The Rebel O-line took up its performance another notch when nose guard Jaiven White was moved to left tackle at the start of district. Eric Cisneros at center and Ian Ordorica at right tackle are two others to watch on this Lee O-line.

Advantage: MHS

DEFENSIVE LINE

The Rebels had so much depth here that head coach Clint Hartman moved starting nose guard Jaiven White to shore up a need spot at left offensive tackle. Lee senior defensive end Tracy Mackey is a disruptive force, registering 17 tackles for loss this season. Daedrian Madrid, Romeo Martinez, Joseph Hart and Larry West round out the rotation the Rebels use in their front three. The Bulldogs' front four is led by defensive tackles Ethan Ruiz and Isaiah Hernandez, who bring experience, athleticism and high motors to the middle of their defense.

Advantage: Lee

LINEBACKERS

MHS senior Smith Essman has put up eye-popping numbers for the third straight year, registering a remarkable 155 total tackles, 103 solo tackles and 19 tackles for loss this season. He has 395 tackles for his career. Alongside Essman, Marshall Mayfield has flourished at MHS' other linebacker spot. The Rebels' group of inside linebackers Charlie Gonzales and Michael Hinojosa and outside linebackers Trent Low and Isaiah Harvey have been a constant nuisance in opposing backfields against the run. Low leads Lee with seven sacks. This is a tough comparison because MHS employs two linebackers in its 4-2 scheme, while the Rebels carry four in their 3-4 alignment.

Advantage: Push

SECONDARY

Rebels free safety Karl Taylor is a game changer, as he leads the team with five interceptions. He had a 37-yard interception return for a TD two weeks ago against Odessa High. Despite shuffling around players in the secondary, Lee's backline defense has held up pretty well with the exception of a few big plays allowed. Like Taylor is for Lee, Midland High's secondary is led by free safety Sean Porter, who brings a physical presence to the middle of their defense. Josh Acree is the Bulldogs' most experienced player as a two-year starter at cornerback.

Advantage: Lee

SPECIAL TEAMS

In the kicking game, there is not much that separates these teams. The Bulldogs have both a capable kicker with junior Ivan Campos and punter with Suddin Sapien, while the Rebels have the same with kicker John Thompson and punter Loic Fouonji. The difference is the return game, as Karl Taylor has returned two kickoffs for TDs, while Fouonji returned a kickoff for a score last week. However, MHS can make up for deficiencies in its units because head coach Tim Anuskiewicz has a reputation for being a special teams guru.

Advantage: Lee

to play.

"(Our thinking is) just win these next two games, get into the playoffs and just try and make a deep run hopefully," Keithley said. "We need to do as much as we can, just work every day as hard as possible. We need to give effort, whether it's on the practice field or game field."

Keithley provides the MHS offense a bunch of options to utilize him in.

Bulldogs head coach Tim Anuskiewicz says Keithley is a good route runner on the outside at receiver, which allows him to separate from defensive backs. The MHS coach also praises Keithley's hands and says he's adept at using his body to box out pass defenders. What Keithley enjoys the most is using his 6-2 frame to his advantage against smaller frame cornerbacks that he typically faces when lined up at receiver.

"That's a lot of fun whenever you are able to do that," Keithley said of going up against smaller cornerbacks. "You just have to be able to get in front of them and use your body and position yourself correctly. You get the feel for it after being out there for so long."

With his tight end capabilities, Keithley sometimes practices with the Bulldog offensive linemen at Memorial Stadium where he works on his blocking techniques.

"It's always fun to be with some of the bigger guys," Keithley said. "They always mess with me since I am kind of the bigger guy as far as the receivers but I don't mind it. They call me one of the slower ones (at receiver) and things like that. It doesn't bother me."

Anuskiewicz says Keithley has the ability to set an edge and seal off a side with his run blocking.

The Bulldogs have also used him in the backfield as an H-back, giving him an added dimension.

"He will stay in some protection too, so he's a good pass protector," Anuskiewicz said. "He's just a real coachable kid. He's an intelligent football player. He definitely does everything we ask him to do. He is a good deep snapper. He has a lot of tools he can add to the football team."

Moving around is nothing new for Keithley, who has been playing football since his early elementary school days.

"I've been playing tackle football forever," Keithley said. "I've played offensive line, running back, fullback, tight end, wide receiver, defensive end and defensive tackle. I'm down to help the team wherever I can."

Keithley and MHS are gunning for their fifth consecutive playoff appearance, which has never happened before in program history. Keithley said his goal is to help the Bulldogs achieve that historic feat, and be recognized at Memorial Stadium with a banner.

"For me, I would like to have that banner up in that weight room someday," Keithley said. "That would be really nice."

LEE

said.

Gonzales' hair style resembles a rock band musician, as his locks dip beyond his shoulders. It's a fitting hair style for the Rebel linebacker, who enjoys strumming Eric Clapton's "Tears in Heaven", Kansas' "Dust in the Wind", and Metallica's "Nothing Else Matters" on his guitar in his free time.

Gonzales' hairdo even applies to a common Hartman saying: "Play like your hair is on fire."

"Sometimes he will say, 'Just let your hair down and play,'" Gonzales said of Hartman. "I think that's pretty funny."

On the gridiron, Gonzales has been a versatile contributor to the Rebels' defense, as he also plays up front in a 3-point stance at defensive end. Gonzales still takes reps at defensive end each week and has the flexibility to move back there if the Rebels need him. Hartman raves about Gonzales' physicality.

But this year, Gonzales has spent the majority of the season at inside linebacker, a new position for him where he feels more comfortable.

"You have to be a lot tougher when your hand is on the ground because every play you're expecting to get double-teamed or blindsided," Gonzales said of playing defensive end. "At linebacker, you're a little bit more free and open."

The change to linebacker has been prosperous for Gonzales, who has been Lee's highest graded defender in four games, including four of the last six contests. Gonzales particularly enjoys playing against the run at linebacker.

"When they run an outside zone to my side, that's my favorite play," Gonzales said. "It pretty much puts me and the running back one-on-one and I blow him up. I love that play."

Hartman says Gonzales always has a smile on his face and is a fun player to coach.

"He just loves playing football and running around and hitting people," Hartman said. "But he's a good kid in the hallways. He doesn't get in trouble. He doesn't talk back to teachers. He's very respectful. He's a good young man and he's a good football player."

Gonzales says at Lee that he feels the obligation to live up to the program's storied reputation. He values what Hartman brings to the Larry Fall Fieldhouse every day to hold the players accountable as both football players and people.

"Coach Hartman is a great coach," Gonzales said. "He's very serious and takes pride in how he coaches us. Because he doesn't just focus on football, he knows about our everyday life. I think we can look at him as a coach and then a friend. I think that's why people respond to him very well."

Series record: Lee leads 36-19-2

Key matchups to watch

MHS offensive line vs. Lee run defense

The Bulldogs' offensive line has paved the way for a running game that is averaging 223.6 yards on the ground this season. QB Suddin Sapien is the Dawgs' top ball carrier, closing in on a 1,000-yard campaign with 902 rushing yards. The Rebel defense had been suffocating against the run until last week when Tascosa amassed 497 rushing yards. Given that Tascosa runs a rarely seen triple-option offense, there is reason to believe that Lee's setback was a blip.

Both the MHS offensive line and the Lee front seven has their share of size and athleticism. This could be an entertaining battle.

Rebel WRs against the MHS secondary

There are not many teams in the state that would match up well against Lee wide receivers Sheldon Bass Jr. and Loic Fouonji. Fouonji stands at 6-foot-4 and Bass measures at 6-3. Both receivers have breakout ability. The Bulldog secondary has experienced its growing pains this season because of injuries. With the lack of continuity in the secondary, the MHS defense has been vulnerable to giving up the big plays at times.

Bulldogs head coach Tim Anuskiewicz reiterated this week that tackling in the open field is still an area where he would like to see improvement.

The MHS defensive backs have to limit the run after catch to have a chance in this game.

The special teams battle is a wild card

Lee head coach Clint Hartman has a great deal of respect for the way Bulldogs head coach Tim Anuskiewicz coaches special teams. Earlier this season, MHS scored on a fake punt in a Sept. 29 game against Harlingen when Suddin Sapien threw a 36-yard TD pass to Campbell Keithley. In the 2017 meeting, the Bulldogs attempted both a fake punt that was converted for a first down and a fake field goal against Lee.

On the flip side of it, the Rebels have returned three kickoffs for TDs this season, so they have the ability to break open a game with an explosive play on special teams.

 Last meeting/series: Colorado City defeated Coahoma, 42-6, last year and leads the all-time series 25-13-2

Notes
 Coahoma snapped a five-game losing streak last week as it got a big performance from junior QB Zack Schneider, who rushed for 218 yards and three TDs to go with 171 yards passing and two TDs. Senior WR Gage Clark added three receptions for 133 yards and two TDs. ... A second straight win for the Bulldogs will put them in good shape to make the playoffs.

... Coahoma coach Chris Joslin said he expects the Wolves to come out hungry after losing last week. He said it's going to be important for his team to match the Wolves' intensity. He added that they have speed and have a big defensive front.

Last game: Winters 32, Forsan 7; Hawley 56, Stamford 42
 Last meeting/series: Hawley defeated Forsan, 40-21, last year but Forsan leads the all-time series 7-4-1

Notes
 Forsan looks to keep its playoff hopes alive with a win. ... Forsan coach Jason Phillips is looking for his team to put a complete game together as the young team has shown glimpses of good play.

It won't help that RB Dylan Kilgore and WR Zane Riffe are out for the season with injuries. ... Last week, Kobe Richardson led Forsan with 181 yards passing but the Buffaloes were held to just 29 yards rushing. ... Phillips said Hawley is a big up front and very physical, and because of that, the Bearcats like to run the football. Last week, they rushed for 290 yards, led by Dylan Frazier who had 123 yards rushing and a TD.

Owens to get Hall of Fame ring during 49ers game

By Josh Dubow
 Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Terrell Owens came back to his roots to get his Hall of Fame ring.

Owens was set to be presented with the ring during a halftime ceremony during Thursday night's game between the San Francisco 49ers and the Oakland Raiders.

Owens spent the first eight seasons with the 49ers, establishing himself as one of the best players in the game during his tenure in San Francisco.

"This is awesome," Owens said before the game, while wearing his gold Hall of Fame jacket. "This is an opportunity to give something to the fans. Ever since I left in 2003 and went on and did some great things, but this is where it started my first eight years of my career."

Owens was voted into the Hall of Fame earlier this year but skipped the induction ceremony in Canton, Ohio, to hold his own celebration at his college in Chattanooga, Tennessee.

Owens said he was upset at the voters who made him wait three years for the honor, saying he believed they brought in off-field issues into their deliberations instead of focusing solely on what Owens did as a player.

"No regrets at all," Owens said about his decision to skip the ceremony. "If anybody knows who Terrell Owens is outside the media portrayal of me throughout the course of my career. They know what I did. I stand by what I did. ... When they tried to bring other things outside my body of work and my accomplishments, that was an issue for me. My stats spoke loudly. They spoke for themselves."

Owens had a mostly sensational 15-year career playing for San Francisco, Philadelphia, Dallas, Buffalo and Cincinnati. He played eight years with the 49ers before bouncing around the league as he frequently wore out his welcome at all of his stops along the way.

But he always produced, ranking second all-time to Jerry Rice in yards receiving (15,934) and third to Rice and Randy Moss with 153 touchdown catches. He was a five-time All-Pro, a six-time Pro Bowl pick and one of the most entertaining players of his generation.

"I can't look back and say I would have done anything differently," he said. "I wanted to be a 49er for the rest of my career if that could happen. But not many people start and finish where they started. Look at Jerry (Rice), look at Joe Montana."

Owens was part of eight playoff teams but only reached the Super Bowl once after joining the Eagles in 2004. He gave a heroic performance in Philadelphia's 24-21 loss to New England, catching nine passes for 122 yards after defying doctor's orders and returning to play on his surgically repaired ankle 6½ weeks after an operation.

Owens had many memorable moments in his career, but the one that stands out most for him from his time with the 49ers came in a playoff game Jan. 3, 1999, against Green Bay.

After dropping several passes early in the game, Owens caught the game-winning 25-yard touchdown in the final seconds in a play dubbed "The Catch 2," as the sequel to Dwight Clark's game-winning in the 1981 NFC title game against Dallas.

Owens then was selected an All-Pro for the first time the following season.

"That was a big catalyst for my career," he said. "For me to come up with a big play at that particular time was monumental, very key for the development of me. It helped my confidence."

Rivalry reborn: Mahomes, Mayfield meet for first time in NFL

By Tom Withers
 Associated Press

BEREA, Ohio — Back when their chances of playing quarterback in the NFL were still in the dream stages, Patrick Mahomes and Baker Mayfield sat in an apartment near Texas Tech's campus and played video games.

It was 2013. Three years later, they appeared to do the same thing on the field.

"It was a basketball score," Mayfield recalled. "That game was crazy."

Mahomes said, remembering the October night in 2016 when he and Mayfield re-wrote the NCAA record book.

The quarterbacks and friends will renew their old rivalry — and perhaps embark on a new one as pros — Sunday when Mahomes leads Kansas City and the Chiefs' high-flying, high-octane offense, into Cleveland to play Mayfield and the Browns, who are again in disarray following the firings this week of coach Hue Jackson and coordinator Todd Haley.

The previous time they met between the hash marks, Mahomes and Mayfield put on a stunning statistical show unlike anything college football had seen before.

They combined for 12 touchdown passes, 1,279 yards passing and broke the total yardage mark with 1,708 yards — 854 for each school.

Looking back, Mayfield, who threw seven TD passes to Mahomes' five and led the Sooners to a 66-59 win, still can't fathom what happened.

"That was my 'Welcome back to Lubbock' moment," said Mayfield, who began his college career as a walk-on at Texas Tech before transferring.

"Weird things happen in Lubbock, Texas, on Saturday nights. It is pretty funny, Oklahoma goes back to Lubbock this weekend and then I am playing Pat on Sunday."

Browns defensive coordinator Gregg Williams, who has replaced Jackson as Cleveland's interim coach, shook his head in disbelief when given details of the Mahomes-Mayfield shootout.

"Oh, my gosh," he said. "Setting defenses back a thousand years."

No one — not even the quarterbacks themselves — could have envisioned their first meeting five years ago when Mayfield hosted Mahomes on his recruiting trip to Texas Tech would blossom into a friendship and maybe the NFL's next great QB duel.

Mayfield was aware of Mahomes' background and talent — son of a major league baseball player, bazooka-like arm — but then got to know him personally during that weekend visit. What Mayfield quickly learned was that, like him, Mahomes is a natural leader.

"Patrick has always been an easygoing guy," Mayfield said. "That is why those teammates he has always had play for him so hard. He gets their respect not just based on talent — that's easy to respect — but based on who he is as a person. He just has that presence about him that you want to be around. You gravitate towards that so it is fun to see him grow."

And my, has Mahomes grown.

The 22-year-old leads the league with 26 TD passes and 2,526 yards. He threw six TD passes in Week 2 against Pittsburgh, and Mahomes has made as many jaw-dropping, highlight-reel worthy plays this season as many QBs have in a career.

Mahomes' arm strength has drawn rave reviews. Ask any coach, player, scout or reporter who has seen him play about him, and there's usually a tale about one of his throws.

Mayfield said he's "absolutely" jealous of Mahomes' rocket right arm.

"There was a play in that college game, he was rolling to his left, flicked it and it went about 65 in the air for a touchdown back of the end zone," Mayfield said, remembering the OU-Texas Tech classic in '16.

"He does stuff that you can't even think of even being possible."

Mayfield was surprised Mahomes wasn't taken in 2017 with the No. 1 pick, which ended up being Browns defensive end Myles Garrett.

"Talent-wise, I thought he should have been. I love Myles but," Mayfield said with a smile.

"Coming from the Texas Tech system, there are always your skeptics about people doubting the fact that all he did was sit back there and throw the ball. He threw it 88 times in our game, but when it comes down to it, throwing the ball is throwing the ball, and he is really good at it."

So is Mayfield.

While Mahomes only started one game as a rookie last season, Mayfield was thrust into the lineup in Week 3 when Tyrod Taylor was hurt.

Mayfield doesn't have nearly the same supporting cast as Mahomes, but he's put up respectable numbers and feels he's learning with every snap.

"His talent is through the roof," Mahomes said of Mayfield. "He is going to keep getting better every single week. He has already had a lot of success. The sky is the limit for him."

On Sunday, they'll go at it again — pass for pass, play for play — in what appears to be a mismatch with the Chiefs rolling and the Browns reeling.

But beyond the score, the NFL could get its first glimpse at a budding QB rivalry. It's not Tom Brady vs. Peyton Manning, but that one started somewhere too.

"I would absolutely not say that it going to be Brady-Manning right now, but it is humbling to be in that conversation," Mayfield said.

"If he keeps playing that way, there is no reason why it would not be on his side of things. Now, I just have to pick up my side and play better."

Anton Khudobin makes 30 saves, Stars beat Maple Leafs

Associated Press

TORONTO — Dallas backup goalie Anton Khudobin made 30 saves to help the Stars beat the Toronto Maple Leafs 2-1 on Thursday night.

Jamie Benn and Devin Shore scored, and Tyler Seguin added two assists.

Patrick Marleau scored for Toronto, and Frederik Andersen made 16 saves.

Coming off a 4-1 victory in Montreal on Tuesday night, the Stars opened the scoring midway through the second period just as a Toronto penalty expired. Seguin fired a shot from the top of the left faceoff circle that Benn tipped past Andersen for his fifth goal of the season.

The Stars made it 2-0 at 4:43 third on Shore's goal off a feed from Mattias Janmark.

Marleau scored on a power play with 3:09 to go.

NOTES: Toronto defenseman Ron Hainsey played his 1,000th game. The 37-year-old was joined at center ice by his wife and three children for a ceremony before the opening faceoff. ... Roman Polak and Connor Carrick, a pair of former Toronto defensemen now with the Stars, were honored with a video tribute during the first TV timeout. Carrick missed his second straight game with a foot injury.

Mom's peaceful death leads to sibling war over her house

DEAR ABBY: My mom recently passed away at 91. She had a great life and went peacefully at home in bed during the night. I took charge of her medical care and finances after Dad died 10 years ago.

After Mom's funeral, my brother insisted he would move into her house while he remodeled it, which could tie up the house for a year. It made no sense to me. I am Mom's executor, and I felt it was unfair to me and my other brother. When I said no, he got really angry, accused me of many mean, untrue things and announced that he disowned me. I responded that I love him and he will always be my brother, but it was his choice.

The pain of losing my mom AND my brother has been awful. Now I'm working to sell the house, and he interferes and is mean every step of the way. But I have to move ahead and do my job. I don't respond to anything negative he writes. Have you some advice on how to repair our relationship? Maybe if he saw it in print he would realize we are family and none of this is helpful to any of us. — DOUBLE LOSS IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR DOUBLE LOSS: Please accept my sympathy for the loss of your mother. If it's any comfort, estate problems like you're experiencing aren't all that unusual. Not knowing your brother or the degree to which he is self-centered, I'm having trouble understanding his overreaction. Was he desperate for a place to stay for a year?

I wish you had mentioned what your other brother thinks about this regrettable situation and whether he, too, was disowned. If he and your angry sibling are on speaking terms, perhaps he can help to mend fences. And hold a good thought. Sometimes time heals these kinds of wounds, once grief lessens and people regain their perspective.

DEAR ABBY: "Addicted in Kansas City" (Aug. 24) asked you for secular alternatives to Alcoholics Anonymous. There are parts of your response that I feel need clarification. First of all, AA doesn't require lifetime attendance at meetings. AA doesn't "require" anything. (The third tradition states the only requirement for membership is a desire to stop drinking.) Regular attendance at meetings is encouraged but certainly not a requirement. Many people continue to go to meetings one or more times a week, while others stop or go only occasionally after a period of time. The other point is tougher — and perhaps more subtle. AA encourages individuals trying to get sober to find a "God of their own understanding," a Higher Power, SOMETHING bigger than themselves. Many agnostics and atheists get and stay sober in AA.

AA is a spiritual program, not a religious one. This can be a difficult concept for people who are just coming in (and a great reason not to stay). That's one of the reasons AA encourages anyone new to attend different meetings, if possible, and check out other groups. In many cities there are meetings expressly for atheists and other nonbelievers. — SOBER AND HAPPY IN ATLANTA

DEAR SOBER: Thank you for writing to clarify this. However, there are different programs (different strokes for different folks), which is why I also encourage anyone trying to achieve sobriety to research and explore the alternatives.

The bidding:
EAST SOUTH WEST NORTH
10 8M 20 30
Pm 3P Pm ?

How do you respond to partner's takeout double? The traditional scheme is that you bid your best suit without jumping with 0-8 points, jump in your best suit with 9-11 points (might be a four-card suit), and jump to game in your best suit with 12 or more points. You will sometimes not know the correct game to bid and so you will cue bid the opponent's suit. This allows the partnership to proceed slowly until a good fit is found or you settle on playing in no-trump. A player will sometimes cue bid with less than game-forcing values and length in both majors. Does that relieve him of responsibility to bid again? We don't think so. South could not have done anything to show his extra values over the cue bid as he couldn't be sure that hearts was the right strain for his side. However, he would happily go on to game after a raise by North.

Today's deal is from a team game. At the other table, South overcalled one no-trump and reached game in hearts, making easily. At this table, South doubled — the action that most experts would prefer. He missed game when partner passed his two-heart bid. We agree with North's cue bid, but he owed his partner another bid. Three hearts would have been perfect.
