Iran intercepts Soviet ship in Persian Gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iranian gunboats intercepted a Soviet ship in the Persian Gulf northwest of Dubai and Iranian marines boarded the freighter, gulf-based shipping executives reported today.

The 11,750-ton freighter, the Pyotr Yemtsov, was heading from a Black Sea port to Kuwait when it was intercepted Tuesday off the United Arab Emirates, said the executives, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The vessel first put out a mayday signal that it had been hit by a missile at 25.40 degrees latitude north and 55.40 degrees longitude east, but later "corrected" the signal, reporting that it was boarded by Iranian marines, the executives said.

"Afterward, nothing was heard from the vessel," said one Bahrain-based shipping agent. There was no indication of the ship's whereabouts today.

Kuwait-based shipping executives said today they believed the Pyotr Yemtsov probably was taken to the Iranian port of Bandar Abbas to be searched. Bandar Abbas is about 120 miles east of the United Arab Emirates.

Iran and Iraq have targeted each other's marine interests in their 6-year-old war, and Iran has said it would interdict any ship carrying cargo destined for Iraqi ports. In January, the Iranians intercepted and boarded the American-owned freighter President Taylor.

This was the first reported seizure of a Soviet ship since Iran began inspecting commercial vessels for Iraqi-bound goods, the executives said. There was no immediate comment from the Soviet Union or Iran.

In Tokyo, The Japanese Shipowners Labor Relations Agency said today Japanese tankers in the gulf monitored an emergency call on Tuesday from the ship and identified it as a Soviet-flag vessel because of its call sign "UOGS."

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, declined to identify the Japanese ships for security reasons.

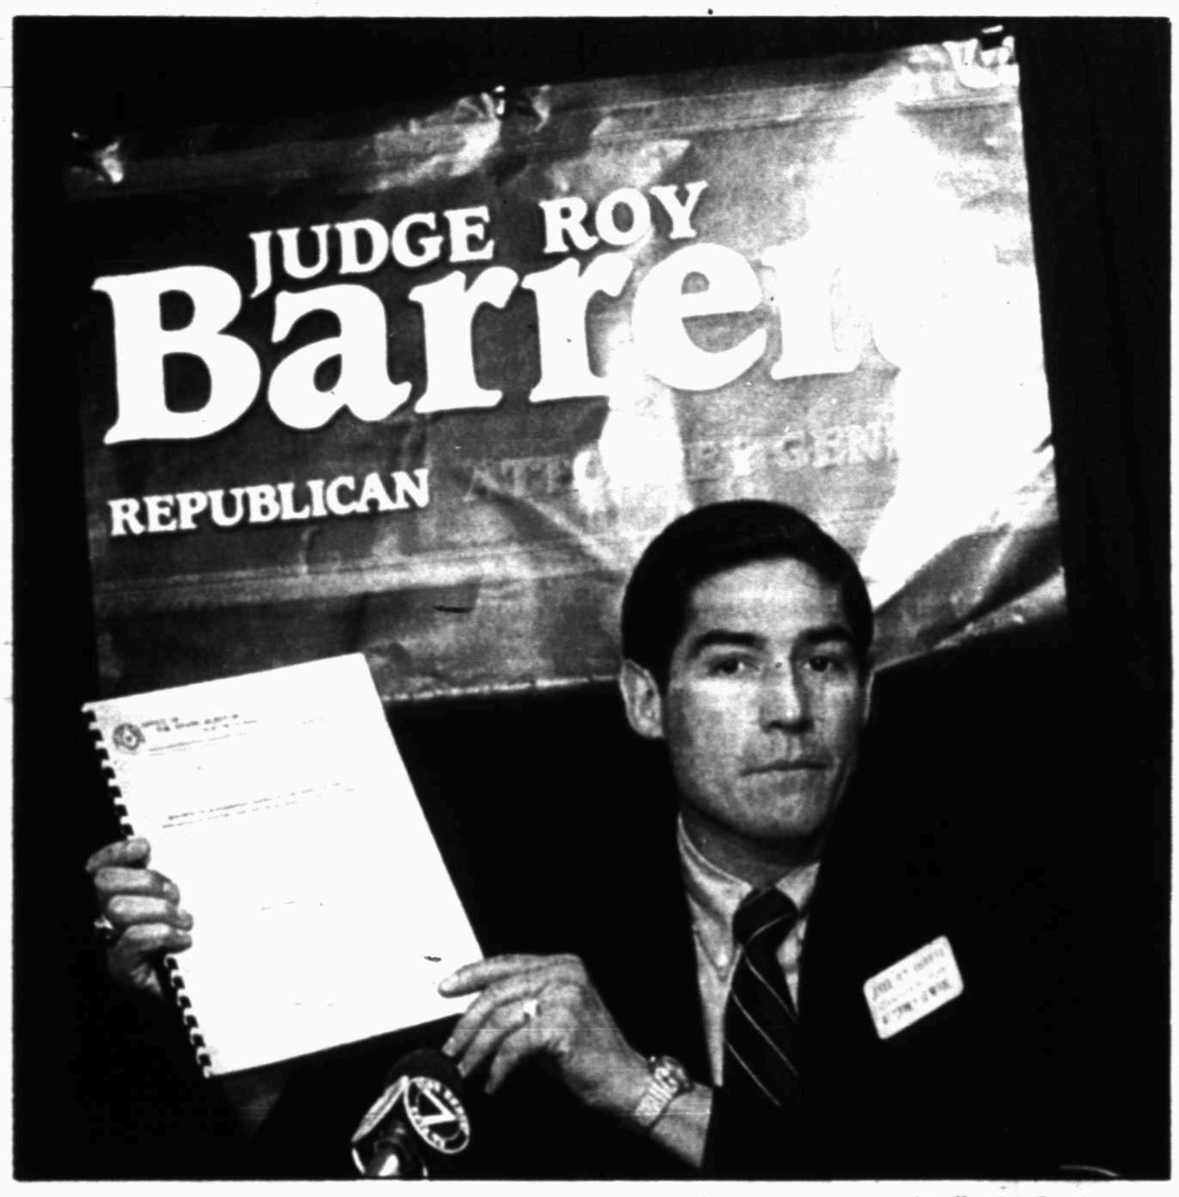

The Shipowner Labor Relations Agency official quoted the message monitored by the tankers as saying: "Piotr Emtsov UOGS is seized by Iranian navy vessel in open sea at second September 1400GMT in position of 25.39 north and 54.29 east," or about 45 miles northwest of Dubai, United Arab Emirates.

That time would correspond to 10 a.m. EDT Tuesday.

The Iranian navy commander, Capt. Mohammed Hussein Malekzadegan was quoted earlier this week as saying Iranian warships intercept between 15 and 20 commercial vessels a day in the gulf to make sure they are not carrying cargos that will help Iraq's war effort.

Iranian gunboats and helicopter-borne troops usually carry out the interceptions. The vessels are searched and the vessels often are allowed to continue their voyages.

An specified number of vessels have been seized and forced to sail to Bandar Abbas, where their cargoes were unloaded and confiscated.

State District Judge Roy Barrera Jr. of San Antonio unveils evidence he says documents "flagrant mismanagement" of the Attorney General's office by incumbent Jim Mattox. The Republican candidate was in Midland Tuesday to kick off a five-day, 21-city campaign tour of Texas.

Barrera reports 'mismanagement;' Mattox spokesman refutes charges

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A July 28 state auditor's report documents "flagrant mismanagement" of the Attorney General's office by incumbent Jim Mattox, State District Judge Roy Barrera Jr. said Tuesday.

But a spokesperson for Mattox today refuted the charges, contending Barrera knows little about how to run the Attorney General's office.

Barrera, the San Antonio Republican nominee for Attorney General, kicked off a five-day, 21-city campaign tour Tuesday in Midland charging Mattox with "mismanagement" and "misappropriating" funds for Child Support Enforcement and Medicaid Fraud investigation.

The audit — which examined a sample of the agency's efficiency — cited two "material weaknesses" including improper control of fixed asset inventories.

"Mattox claims to know from experience the ins and outs of the Attorney General's office yet the State Auditor says he doesn't even know where 38 percent of his office is located," Barrera said during a news conference at GOP headquarters.

The audit also showed the agency transferred $1.3 million in federal funds from the Child Support Enforcement and Medicaid cost centers to two Administrative program cost centers.

That resulted in a $403,000 reduction in funds for those programs while money for Administrative programs was increased beyond the amount appropriated by the Legislature.

Sharon W. Leggett, spokeswoman with the State Auditor's office in Austin, said the report was designed to find shortcomings in financial statements, but wouldn't necessarily disclose all material weaknesses in the system.

While the agency lacks efficiency in some areas, Ms. Leggett said it has made "tremendous improvements" since Mattox took office.

Mattox's public information officer, Elna Christopher, said today: "Barrera knows absolutely nothing" about the operation of the Attorney General's office.

"If Roy Barrera wants to run for this job, he'd better learn what this job is about," she said.

Ms. Christopher said State Comptroller Bob Bullock has concluded, after reviewing the circumstances, the state auditors contention that the transfers of child support funds were not authorized is not consistent with the Appropriations bill's provisions.

More rain hits area; Flash flood watch continuing

From Staff and Wire Reports

Rain fell most of the night over the Permian Basin area as a flash flood watch continues until tonight.

Variations of a .25 of an inch to 1.75 inches of rain were reported today throughout Midland, said National Weather Service spokesman Constantine Pashos.

The rain, which began around midnight, is expected to continue into the night with a 70 percent chance predicted, Pashos said.

About .16 of an inch of rain was reported officially by the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Airport.

In the Permian Basin rainfall ranged from .50 of an inch to 2.25 inches in Kermit.

The moisture over the past three days is not unusual for September, which is the rainiest month of the year for Midland, Pashos said.

The chance for rain will decrease Thursday to a 30 percent chance with a high in the mid 80s.

However, another movement of moisture heading toward West Texas from Mexico and from Central Texas will bring rain back to Midland Thursday night and Friday, Pashos said.

"It's more or less converging over the central Texas and spreading across the Permian Basin and the south plains this evening and tonight," he said.

No accidents were reported by Midland law enforcement officials by mid-morning today. Midland police said they had no reports of stalled cars by mid-morning today.

The Texas Electric Service Company said about 54 customers off Farm Market 1788 and County Road 150 were without power from 9 p.m. to 10 p.m. Tuesday after a fuse was blown by lighting, said spokesman Stan Garrison.

Hobby offers compromise for next special session

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Offering a compromise for the next special legislative session, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby Tuesday backed away from his position that lawmakers should balance the state budget before they leave town for good.

Also Tuesday, the third-most-senior member of the House said he will carry Gov. Mark White's plan for a temporary sales tax increase during the next session.

Speaking candidly to reporters for the second time in two days, Hobby outlined a plan he said could help break the House-Senate impasse over how to deal with the $3.5 billion state deficit.

The current 30-day special session ends at midnight Thursday, and Gov. Mark White said he will call another session soon after.

The stalemate came about because the Senate rejected the House's no-new-taxes stance and the House would not accept the Senate's desire to erase the entire deficit.

Comptroller Bob Bullock reported Tuesday the 1986 fiscal year ended Sunday with the general revenue fund, the state's main checking account, $231 million in the red.

Hobby outlined his new proposal to White and House Speaker Gib Lewis over a fish luncheon at the Governor's Mansion Tuesday afternoon.

Speaking to reporters afterward, neither man endorsed it.

The lieutenant governor's program includes:

— About $600 million in cuts from the fiscal 1987 state budget;

— About $300 million in "accounting tricks," such as delaying the pay day for state workers;

— A 1.125-percent increase in the sales tax rate, as White has proposed;

— Increasing the gasoline tax 5 cents a gallon to 15 cents; and — Delaying the first four month's worth of $62-million-a-month transfers into the teachers' and state employees' pension funds.

"It would be a very temporary measure," Hobby, presiding officer of the state Senate, said. "It would not balance the budget."

White expected to veto controversial gambling bill

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White will probably veto a bill legalizing gambling on horse and dog racing, the measure's chief sponsor said Wednesday morning.

House Speaker Pro Tem Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, said he met with White for about an hour before he broke the news to reporters.

"He just said that he was not pleased with the posture that he found himself in, and there was a very good possibility we would veto it based on the fact that the Legislature had not done its work," Berlanga said.

"Right now it's a good possibility, I think, it's dead, and we're just going to have to come back in January."

He said he expects the governor to make a decision "within the next few days."

Enrollment figures increase

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland public school officials are reporting higher enrollment figures this fall despite rumors that the Permian Basin's sagging economy would force families to flock from the Midland-Odessa area.

Private school enrollments also maintained or were on the increase, officials said.

Midland Independent School District officials said enrollment increased by 137 students when fall semester classes began Tuesday.

By 10 a.m., officials said 17,917 students in kindergarten through 12th grade were attending classes compared to the 17,780 students who had enrolled on the first day of school in 1985.

At Bonham Elementary School, officials said 531 students had enrolled by the attendance deadline. That compares to the 518 students on the first day of school last year.

Enrollment dropped by 40 students at Bowie Elementary School. Officials there reported 479 students were enrolled compared to the 519 students in 1985.

At Bunche Elementary School, officials said 195 students had enrolled in classes compared to the 177 students who started school last year.

Burnett Elementary School enrollment increased by 17 students as 481 showed up for classes.

New York Times News Service

WAYNESBORO, Ga. — Donald Trump, a New York real estate tycoon who has built office towers and bought football teams, Tuesday came to the aid of a Burke County farm family that was about to lose its land.

Trump intervened with a $20,000 gift and a pledge to help the family of Lenard Hill, who committed suicide Feb. 4, keep part of its 705-acre farm, which had been scheduled for foreclosure Tuesday.

Trump got involved after seeing Hill's widow, Annabell, on a network news program last Wednesday. Mrs. Hill, with her son Leonard and daughter-in-law Patty Hill, had appeared at a press conference in Atlanta that day to plead for help in saving part of their land.

"I've seen what's happened to farmers," Trump said Tuesday in a telephone interview from his office in New York, "but I was particularly interested in a lovely woman I saw, Annabell Hill."

Hill committed suicide hoping the insurance would pay off loans and allow his family to keep the farm, but the policy wasn't enough to satisfy the debts.

Atlanta businessman Frank Argenbright, who coordinated last week's news conference for the Hills, signed a 30-day option Tuesday to buy their land. But he said he has "no intention of doing that. It was based totally on Donald Trump's word to me."

The family hopes to use the 30-day option period to sell part of the land and keep 326 acres. Mrs. Hill also has some money she received from her husband's life insurance policy.

Trump said Tuesday that he had given Mrs. Hill $20,000. Beyond that, he said he wasn't familiar with the arrangement Argenbright had made with the Federal Land Bank. "I don't even know what he's signed. I haven't seen it," Trump said.

But the 40-year- old developer of Manhattan's Trump Tower and owner of the New Jersey Generals football team was adamant that the situation would be resolved in Mrs. Hill's favor. "It's going to be fine for her," he said.

He added that the money involved was "not a vast sum of money by some standards."

Mrs. Hill and her son's family will appear with Trump at a news conference Thursday in New York. Trump said he had received about 100 telephone calls from reporters Tuesday, and that he had been surprised by the interest in the story.

"I thought I could just send in a check," he said. "I didn't expect this at all."

He said he considered the Hills' problem "a personal tragedy," but acknowledged that could serve as a "catalyst" to draw attention to the financial burdens of other farmers.

"A lot of people could relate to it. It's pretty sad when a man has to go out and commit suicide."

Although Hill's suicide called attention to his family's plight, and although Trump and Argenbright acted in their behalf, other farmers in Burke County still face foreclosure.

A one-acre lot and house owned by Ray Delaigle was foreclosed on the courthouse steps Tuesday. Nobody bid on the property, so the lender claimed it for $16,000.

Fear of AIDS prompts suit over bite

CHICAGO (AP) — A Chicago woman fearful of catching AIDS has filed a $12 million lawsuit claiming she was bitten during a scuffle with an American Airlines employee who later tested positive for exposure to the deadly disease.

An American Airlines spokesman acknowleged the incident occurred but said the company has tried to make amends by transferring the ticket agent, apologizing to the woman and even paying for her to be tested for AIDS-virus antibodies.

"We feel the demands these people are making are unreasonable and inordinate," airline spokesman Al Becker said. "American feels it has been most equitable in dealing with the young lady."

He said the ticket agent acted in self-defense and has been transferred to a job that does not involve contact with the public.

The woman, identified as Jane Doe in the lawsuit filed Tuesday, tested negative for exposure to the AIDs virus but fears she may contract the disease, her lawyer said.

"There isn't a day that goes by that she doesn't think about whether she's going to contract AIDS or if she will die," said Chicago attorney Enrico Mirabelli.

Becker said the ticket agent, identified as John Q. Smith in the lawsuit, tested positive for AIDS-virus antibodies but does not have AIDS.

The presence of AIDS-virus antibodies in the bloodstream indicates a person was exposed to the AIDS virus, but does not necessarily mean a person will develop the disease, medical authorities say.

Mirabelli said his client, who is about 25 years old, will be re-tested periodically.

"It could show up in five months or it could show up in five years," he said.

The lawsuit says Smith tried to stop the woman from boarding a Feb. 10 flight from O'Hare International Airport to Denver because she did not have a boarding pass.

An argument and scuffle ensued in which the woman grabbed Smith's wrist and he bit her left hand, drawing blood, the lawsuit says.

American Airlines had Smith tested for exposure to the AIDS virus at the woman's request.

"My client simply had a hunch that this person should be given an AIDS test," Mirabelli said. "You are bitten and you believe this is something that should be done as a precaution."

The lawsuit, which names as plaintiffs Smith, American Airlines and its parent company, AMR Corp. of Fort Worth, Texas, seeks $25,000 for battery, $1 million for mental distress, $1 million for negigent hiring and $10 million in punitive damages.

Guards misinterpreted, didn't aid rape victim

POTSDAM, N.Y. (AP) — Two university security guards who saw the brutal rape that led to a sophomore's death did nothing because they thought she was willingly having sex, authorities said.

Katherine Hawelka, 19, of Syracuse, who was beaten unconscious and raped on the Clarkson University campus, died Monday at a Watertown hospital after doctors disconnected life-support systems.

University security guard Donald Shanty told police he saw the attack on Miss Hawelka early Friday on the campus in upstate New York near the Canadian border, but did not realize what was happening.

Shanty said he saw what he believed to be a consenting couple having sexual intercourse as he drove his patrol car, according to police records. "When the lights hit the subject he looked up at me and then turned his head back down," Shanty is quoted in police records.

"I didn't think too much of the guy and the girl being there because in the 2½ years that I've been working as a security guard for Clarkson, I have seen students having sex in unusual places before, and therefore I really didn't think too much of this at the time."

Another guard, Kim Avadikian, who was on foot, also saw Miss Hawelka being raped, police records show.

The two guards discussed whether they should intervene and, according to Shanty, "decided to go back and park with our headlights on them so they would get up and leave," the records show.

SESSION

Asked if he was giving up his hope of solving the entire deficit during a special session, Hobby said, "If the alternative is the state going broke and the checks starting to bounce in November or December, yes."

Lewis and White said they want to wait for a House-Senate conference committee to finish negotiations on proposed budget cuts before they consider Hobby's plan.

White favors fewer taxes and deeper cuts. Lewis wants no taxes and more "accounting tricks" to keep the Treasury solvent through next spring.

"We are getting very close to finding out what the bottom line (on cuts) is," Lewis said. "Until we find out what the bottom line is, it would be improper to lay out any revenue proposals."

White would not say when he will call the next special session but remained optimistic that a solution to the budget crisis would emerge.

"It's going to take obviously a combination of cuts and revenues, and the question of exactly how much of which is the controversy that we still face," the governor said.

The conference committee adjourned late Tuesday afternoon, still hung up on differences in financing for higher education, prisons, human services and on the Senate's requirement for a balanced budget.

Both House and Senate conferees showed little optimism for completing the process before the session ends Thursday.

Earlier Tuesday, Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, said he will introduce White's self-destructing, 1.125-percent sales tax increase during the next session.

The tax rate would revert to the current 4.125 percent on Aug. 31, 1987.

"It's the only thing you can do in a 30-day session," said Uher, third in seniority in the 150-member House. "But I don't know that it'll fly."

John Odam, White's special legislative counsel, said the governor had not asked Uher to carry the bill.

VETO

Legislative leaders defied White's requests early on in the special session when they permitted the parimutuel wagering bill to work its way through the process.

White called the session to deal with the state's $3.5 billion deficit.

Although the governor controls the session's agenda, House and Senate leaders interpreted his call for a sales tax hike as broad enough to include all revenue raising measures — such as horse and dog racing.

The Senate passed the racing bill Aug. 26, and the House approved it with some minor amendments three days later.

The Senate accepted the House changes on Monday, sending the bill to White's desk.

"He wants us to deal with the issues at hand, and that is the budget cuts and some additional cash flow and revenues for the state to get us out of the depressing bind we find ourselves in," Berlanga said.

Berlanga said he asked White "to reserve judgement ... for a few days" to see if House and Senate negotiators can work out a compromise on budget cuts.

The special session ends Thursday, and the negotiators are still several hundred million dollars apart.

If White calls another session, as expected, to address the deficit, Berlanga said he will not re-introduce the racing bill.

He said he "sympathizes with" the governor's position and concern about the Legislature's inaction on the state's fiscal crisis.

"It's more important for me that Mark White get re-elected," he said. "If it means this being vetoed, so be it."

Berlanga said the governor accepted most of the content of the racing bill.

"He was satisfied with the anti-crime provisions," he said. "It's just a matter of time."

If racing supporters can move the bill through the Legislature during next year's regular session, the veto will not slow the pace for racing in Texas.

The bill could not become law without voters' approval at a referendum, and the bill the governor will probably veto sets that referendum on the November 1987 ballot.

Sinking of Soviet ship reported with rare speed, unusual detail

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin publicity machine, criticized for sluggishness after the Chernobyl nuclear disaster, reported the sinking of the passenger ship Admiral Nakhimov with surprising speed and rare detail.

Official media announced the Black Sea disaster less than 17 hours after it happened, a contrast to the usual handling of accidents by a government to which secrecy is a reflex. Chernobyl was not reported until nearly three days later, when Sweden detected high radiation levels and demanded an explanation.

After the loss of the Admiral Nakhimov was reported, an official spokesman accepted questions from the foreign press, giving international telephone interviews in English. Local officials in Black Sea ports also provided some early information.

On Tuesday evening, less than 48 hours after the ship went down, authorities convened a news conference at which a top maritime official answered questions quickly and professionally.

Leonid P. Nedyak, the deputy merchant marine minister, told reporters without flinching that a Soviet freighter rammed the cruise liner, which was carrying 1,234 people, and it sank before lifeboats could be freed.

Thanksgiving masses mark relic's return

SUYAPA, Honduras (AP) — Masses of thanksgiving were planned today to celebrate the recovery of the Virgin of Suyapa, a statue stolen but later found in a restaurant bathroom stripped of its silk clothes and jewels.

A nationwide search was launched Tuesday after the tiny cedarwood likeness of Honduras' patron saint was discovered missing from its shrine in the chapel of Suyapa, a town on the eastern edge of the Tegucigalpa metropolitan area.

Monsignor Hector Enrique Santos, Roman Catholic archbishop of Tegucigalpa, said police found the 400-year-old statue, which is less than 3 inches tall, wrapped in newspaper in the downtown restaurant Tuesday night.

"We will have to repair it because it is completely nude ... without the silk dresses and precious stones, also without the parts covered with gold," he told The Associated Press.

The statue rested on a wooden base covered with gold. It was surrounded by bands of silver representing light rays descending from a silver halo encrusted with precious stones in the figure 8, symbol of the Sacred Apostolic College.

There was no security for the statue.

"The thieves committed a horrible sacrilege...and tomorrow there will be Masses of thanks in all the (Catholic) churchs of Honduras, and processions and a series of religious activities," Santos said late Tuesday.

"Tonight, Hondurans will sleep peacefully becasue Our Lady of Suyapa again is with us," he said.

BARRERA

"The State Auditor was wrong. We weren't," she said.

Barrera said it's not fair for state agencies to be asked to tighten their belts during this budget crisis "when the present Attorney General doesn't even know where the funds are that his office has been allocated by the Legislature."

Barrera said "Mattox has touted his Child Support Program as his star achievement and yet the State Auditor says he has drained the fund to promote his administrative programs, whatever those are."

He said "Texas moms and their children can't afford another Mattox raid on child support funds to buy his office supplies."

Elementary schools 'in pretty good shape?'

By LEE MITGANG

NEW YORK (AP) — Elementary education in the United States is "in pretty good shape," concludes a much-awaited report by Education Secretary William J. Bennett.

Pretty good, except that children typically leave grade school preferring "Charlie's Angels" to "Charlotte's Web."

Pretty good, says the report, except that youngsters often enter high school believing science is a bore, history is a laundry list of unconnected dates and dry facts, and art is finger-painting and kazoos.

Bennett's conclusion in "First Lessons: A Report on Elementary Education in America" that grade school education in the United States is "in pretty good shape" seems curiously at odds with much of the rest of his 83-page monograph released at a Washington news conference Tuesday.

The report is the first in a series of expected studies on the state of American elementary education. Since 1983, school reformers had aimed their criticisms at high schools and, to a lesser extent, colleges.

On the bright side, the Bennett report says American grade schoolers are getting better at basic skills. It points to test scores that on the surface show students age 9-13 reading better than their peers in the early 1970s.

Pretty good, except that children typically leave grade school preferring "Charlie's Angels" to "Charlotte's Web."

— William J. Bennett

And it cites several grade schools that capture the attention and imagination of their young charges.

But somewhere around fourth grade, about the time when youngsters should be moving beyond basic reading and computation skills to critical thinking, many children begin to falter. The seeds of boredom and failure are sown.

The explanation for this may lie between the lines of this report: many grade schools are sending children the message that learning is as flat, gray and boring as a chalkboard.

Elementary schools, the report says, have taken the "story" out of history, the joy of discovery out of science. Art and music have been trivialized. Geography has been so neglected that children literally don't know where in the world they are.

"Many of today's schools make paper turkeys at Thanksgiving and do reports on Columbus," it says. "But an elementary history curriculum in the late 20th century should consist of more than commemoration; it should develop rigorous knowledge based in a celebration of our own heritage.

"All year long," it continues, "children should experience legends such as Paul Bunyan and Johnny Appleseed, should hear true stories of Revolutionary era heroes like Benjamin Banneker and Nathan Hale, should learn how women like Harriet Beecher Stowe and Emily Dickinson shaped the sensibilities of our young republic. Having acquired a clear sense of our own national traditions, students will possess the knowledge with which to compare our progress as a nation with that of other societies."

Grade schools too often neglect the teaching of American civics, Bennett's report says. By the time they reach high school, children should know a good deal about the Constitution and the Magna Carta. They should have some idea what the American economic and political system is about.

But perhaps nowhere have elementary schools failed so badly as in the teaching of science.

"There is probably no other subject whose teaching is so at odds with its true nature," says the report.

Instead of a "hands-on adventure guided by a knowledgeable teacher," the report says elementary science is typically frog guts, periodic tables, and the study of arcane material gleaned from textbooks.

The report cites this damning statistic: fourth graders get an average of 28 minutes a day devoted to science, if they're lucky.

How can we expect grade schools to suddenly squeeze genuine history, art, science and civics into an already crammed school day?

Spend the day more profitably, for starters.

According to one study cited by Bennett, American fifth graders spend an average of 64.5 percent of their school time on academic activities. By contrast, Chinese youngsters spent 91.5 percent of their school day on academics, while Japanese spent 87.4 percent.

Quite a few flaws, then, in these schools that are "in pretty good shape."

Tanker truck breakup traps thousands of LA commuters

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Tens of thousands of commuters were caught in a horrendous traffic jam, an estimated 1,000 residents were evacuated and 10 people were treated for breathing difficulties early Tuesday after a tanker truck broke apart on a Los Angeles freeway.

The truck spewed out 25 tons of hot, molten sulfur that set off a series of small fires and sent an evil-smelling cloud of fumes into the air.

The accident closed all northbound lanes of the busy freeway San Diego Freeway in suburban Culver city at 4:18 a.m. and the California Highway Patrol said they remained closed through the evening rush hour. At one point, the CHP estimated that traffic was backed up a distance of about 21 miles.

Surface streets, pressed into service as alternate routes, also became jammed with traffic.

The evacuation of the 1,000 Culver City residents was launched on the basis of an erroneous initial report from the truck driver that the cylindrical tank might have contained deadly sulfur tetrafluoride, Culver City Fire Marshal Russ Mathewson said.

The sulfur was heated to about 290 degrees Fahrenheit. When struck by water it turns into toxic sulfuric acid, he said.

Although sparks showering from the skidding, ruptured tanker apparently touched off several minor fires on the freeway's surface, they were quickly extinguished by Culver City and Los Angeles City firefighters using "light water," a foam created by injecting special chemicals into the water sprayed on the flames.

Radar carried many planes when disaster occurred

By GEORGE GARTIES

CERRITOS, Calif. (AP) — Controllers were tracking up to 10 small planes when an Aeromexico DC-9 collided with a single-engine aircraft, and the jetliner's pilot was warned about one of them shortly before the crash, investigators said.

The Piper PA-28 Archer that smashed into the jetliner on Sunday was among the planes on radar screens about the time of the crash but was not the subject of the warning, John Lauber, head of the National Transportation Safety Board investigation, said Tuesday.

The 10 also included a Grumman Yankee whose pilot held a series of conversations with the controller just before the jetliner and the Piper plummeted into this suburban Los Angeles neighborhood, Lauber said at a news conference. All 67 people on the two planes were killed as well as up to 24 on the ground.

A controller had warned the DC-9 pilot about 75 seconds before the crash about a third small plane investigators discovered Tuesday by examining radar records, he said.

That third plane wasn't in radio contact with the controller, and because it had no position-indicating transponder, the controller couldn't tell the DC-9 pilot the small plane's altitude, Lauber said.

The Aeromexico pilot acknowledged receiving the transmission, but the crew never responded that they saw the aircraft in question, he said.

The Grumman's pilot talked on radio for a minute with the controller just before the collision, possibly distracting the controller's attention as the paths of the DC-9 and Piper converged, Lauber said.

Wreckage from the crash, which occurred as the Aeromexico jet was descending towards Los Angeles International Airport, plunged into a Cerritos neighborhood. The resulting fire destroyed 11 homes.

The confirmed dead included 58 passengers and six crew members aboard Flight 498 and the three people in the Piper. Numbers from various sources indicated that up to 24 others on the ground also died, which could bring the total death toll to 91.

Garry Oversby, of the Los Angeles County Fire Department, said a man and two of his teen-age children died in one house, but he said that he had been misquoted in earlier reports that 15 had been found dead at another house.

Los Angeles County coroner's spokesman Bill Gold refused Tuesday to estimate the number of fatalities among those on the ground.

NTSB investigators hope to wrap up their work in the devastated neighborhood today, Lauber said. Pieces of wreckage have been moved to Long Beach Airport for further study.

Investigators trying to reconstruct the events leading to the crash, which occurred in clear skies shortly before noon, have determined that the Piper was in the airport terminal control area without permission.

Results of a routine urine test for drugs in the system of the controller handling the airliner aren't expected for several days, Lauber said.

Investigators trying to reconstruct the events leading to the crash, which occurred in clear skies shortly before noon, have determined that the Piper was in the airport terminal control area without permission, Lauber said.

Its pilot wasn't in radio contact with controllers, he said.

Lauber said he was unable to say if the warning about the other plane may have drawn the attention of the Aeromexico crew from the approaching Piper. No rules require controllers to notify pilots of approaching planes that aren't under the controllers' direct supervision.

The Los Angeles County coroner's office identified the Piper pilot as William Kramer, 53, a Rancho Palos Verdes resident, who had been flying his wife, Kathleen, 51, and daughter, Caroline, 27, from Torrance to the Big Bear mountain resort for the Labor Day holiday.

The coroner's office previously announced that Kramer suffered a non-fatal heart attack of unknown seriousness minutes before the collision.

Lauber said Tuesday that it hadn't been determined if the heart attack contributed to the crash. Tissue samples will be sent to the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology near Washington, D.C., to confirm the local autopsy conclusions, he said.

Interviews with 13 people who saw the crash from the ground have produced a slightly different picture of it than previously pieced together by investigators.

Most of the witnesses recall seeing the Piper hit the DC-9 at or near the tail, Lauber said, adding that they hadn't seen either plane turn from its course. Earlier interviews had suggested the light plane struck the airliner's wing first, and that both planes had banked to avoid each other.

Damage to 'black box' may hinder investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investigators examining the collision of a jetliner and small plane over a Los Angeles suburb say that because of damage to the "black box" devices on the airliner, there are no guarantees the recorders will reveal clues to the cause of the crash.

The jet's flight data recorder "incurred considerable damage" and the cockpit voice recorder "appeared to be less damaged," Michael Benson, a spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board, said Tuesday.

He said it's too early to tell what if anything will be learned from the recorders, which were severely damaged by impact and fire.

The cockpit voice recorder monitors cockpit conversation, while the other device records information such as the plane's speed and altitude. Both were flown to Washington for analysis.

"We've just started analyzing each of them for whatever information we can get that will tell us what the cockpit conversation was (shortly before the collision) and the performance of the aircraft," said Benson.

There were no recorders in the small plane.

All 67 people aboard the two planes and at least 18 people on the ground were killed Sunday when an Aeromexico DC-9 collided with a Piper Archer aircraft over the Los Angeles suburb of Cerritos as the jet approached Los Angeles International Airport.

Investigators said the two planes collided almost head-on, left wing to left wing in clear sky.

Authorities are especially interested in whether cockpit conversation in the minutes before the collision indicates whether the DC-9 crew ever was aware that another aircraft was in the area before the collision.

An NTSB official in California said Tuesday that an air traffic controller warned the crew of the jetliner that an airplane was nearby about 75 seconds before the collision, but it was not yet known whether the aircraft was the single-engine Piper.

A crisis unresolved

Gov. Mark White rightfully bears the blame for not recognizing early enough the state's dire financial straits and calling the Legislature into special session. But the governor should not have to bear the blame for legislators failing to act in this session to resolve the crisis. That blame will rest, as it should, fully with the legislators themselves.

Time is rapidly running out in the session. Already predictions are being made that Gov. White will call the Legislature into yet another special session to deal with the state's financial crisis. He definitely should do that because with each passing day the financial crisis worsens and dealing with it becomes more difficult.

Finding a consensus among legislators will not be easy. The projected $3.5 billion shortfall must be overcome to comply with the state's pay-as-you-go constitutional requirement. But the houses are divided over how to avoid the deficit. The Senate prefers a combination of budget cuts and a tax increase; the House staunchly resists any thought of a tax increase. That's the perfect recipe for a legislative disaster and, hand-in-hand, a financial calamity for Texas.

With pari-mutuel betting and a state lottery thrown in for spicing, this legislative session has really been the proverbial threering circus.

There's been a lot of talk, but talk isn't what's needed at this point. State estimates show that if money isn't generated or made available in the next few days, guards in the state's prison system will stop getting their checks and Medicaid checks will begin to bounce. When it reaches that point, the purpose of even calling a special session will be moot.

Legislators must get off their duffs and resolve the financial crisis. We prefer a combination of budget cuts and a temporary tax increase. The most fair tax hike would be in the sales tax. But time is of the essence.

The legislators ought to do what the people of Texas elected them to do.

Salute to governors

Members of the National Governors' Association are receiving well deserved salutes for the bold and imaginative proposals for education reform they announced during their conclave in Hilton Head, South Carolina.

Some observers were less enthusiastic than others, which is par for the course whenever drastic changes are suggested in an area of activity as traditional, sensitive and controversial as education. But the governors have every right to be pleased by the loud applause their pioneering effort is receiving from many sources.

The lengthy report cites a multitude of sins in America's school systems, and a multitude of remedies. A key point was summed up in an excellent review of the governors' action by Vic Ostrowidzki of The Hearst Newspapers' Washington Bureau. He wrote:

"The centerpiece of the bold plan entitled 'Time for Results' is a proposal that educators be given the authority to determine how schools are organized and operated and, in return, schools be held accountable for what students learn." Ostrowidzki went on to say the report was endorsed by such critical groups as the National Education Association, The American Federation of Teachers and the National Association of Elementary School Principals.

One of the most memorable accolades came from Education Secretary William J. Bennett, who said of the reform proposals: "This may be the single most important event in American education in the last five years." Because of his position, his intellectual honesty, and his choice of words, Bennett's salute was the best of all.

City needs smoking ban

I want to commend the Midland Senior Center for establishing smoking and non-smoking areas. I also want to thank the Midland City Council for designating more non-smoking areas at the Midland Regional Airport. As a non-smoker who has an extreme sensitivity to cigarette smoke, I greatly appreciate these actions. As a health care professional, I am excited about these positive, healthy actions.

Cigarette smoke does the greatest day-to-day harm to people's health. We as taxpayers and consumers of health insurance absorb many of the costs associated with cigarette smoking, including those costs related to passive smoke. Smoking is an epidemic. Smoking-related disorders cause 340,000 premature deaths each year and generate $26 billion in medical care costs. The American Public Health Association has even labeled it the Brown Plague. Unlike the Black Plague that swept through Europe in 1348, the toll of the Brown Plague will continue for many years.

Research is revealing that passive smoke is harmful to one's health. Cigarette smoke contains approximately 4,000 chemicals, i.e., ammonia, carbon monoxide, arsenic. Cigarettes burn at a lower temperature between puffs. Consequently, the concentration of cancer causing chemicals is 50 times greater than the smoke inhaled by the smoker. Plus, there is twice as much tar and nicotine in sidestream smoke than there is in mainstream smoke. There are also many people who have a physical intolerance to cigarette smoke which creates allergic-like reactions such as eye and throat irritation. For some people, an asthma attack can result when exposed to cigarette smoke. Furthermore, if cigarette smoking can bring about health ailments and illness, then passive smoking must be just as damaging.

Health is a fundamental right which has been historically recognized and supported as one of the basic human rights. As a result, sanitation and environmental control regulations have been developed and enforced. In fact, there are many governmental actions that have protected our right not to have our health endangered by the actions of others. A government's first line of defense to protect a nation's health is through health policy, i.e., a clean air act.

Granted, people chose to smoke. It is their right and choice. However, when their actions have negative effects on others, it becomes a community problem. That is why I wholeheartedly support the Senior Citizen Center's smoking policy and the actions of the Midland City Council. I would like to propose that the Midland City Council implement a city-wide smoking ordinance. Midland is a health-conscious community. Why don't we demonstrate our beliefs and concerns by adopting a smoking ordinance.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Sept. 3, the 246th day of 1986. There are 119 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 3, 1783, the Treaty of Paris between the United States and Great Britain officially ended the Revolutionary War.

On this date:

In 1658, Oliver Cromwell, the Lord Protector of England, died.

In 1939, Britain and France declared war on Germany, two days after the Nazi invasion of Poland.

In 1943, Allied forces invaded Italy in World War II.

White House wants to 'save' Senate

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's people have a bad case of the political jitters. They fear the Republicans could lose the Senate, which raises grave implications for the president's program.

Jack Anderson

In sudden alarm, they have started writing urgent memos to one another. "Nothing is more important to the Reagan presidency today than retaining the GOP majority in the Senate," warns Joe Rodota, one of the president's nuts-and-bolts operators.

A Democratic takeover, he predicts, would produce these "dire consequences": Reagan's "achievements" would come "under siege"; his second-term agenda "would be aborted"; the bipartisanship he has nourished "would evaporate overnight"; and America's economic recovery and bolstered defenses "would be placed at risk."

The political arithmetic is against the Republicans. They must defend 22 Senate seats, the Democrats only 12. If the polls are right, the Republicans should lose at least six seats. But only three Democratic seats are in danger. Another six seats are considered to be vulnerable; of these, five are occupied by Republicans, only one by a Democrat.

President Reagan has agreed to lead the battle for the Senate. He'll hit the campaign trail one day a week in September, two days a week in October. He will try to hold in the GOP grip one of the great blocs from the old Democratic coalition: the Southern conservatives and blue-collar voters who abandoned the Democrats to support Reagan.

In some states, particularly in the South, Democratic candidates are shedding their liberal skins with excessive delicacy. This resurgence of conservatives in the Democratic Party could erode Reagan's gains, not only in November but in the Novembers to come.

White House communications director Pat Buchanan, a political hardhead, has sent a confidential campaign packet to senior aides, urging them to help preserve the Republican majority in the Senate. "The president's campaign for GOP senatorial candidates," he wrote, "will require a number of themes and arguments to persuade Americans that Republican control of the Senate is the key to continued improvements."

According to the polls, Republican candidates are in serious trouble in Florida, Idaho, Maryland, Nevada, North Carolina and South Dakota. GOP incumbents are also vulnerable in Alabama, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Washington and Wisconsin.

The Democrats could lose seats in Colorado, Louisiana and Missouri. The only other Democrat in a close race is Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who is, nevertheless, ahead of his GOP opponent.

The strategists foresee Democratic gains unless the president can reverse the political momentum. They have produced various scenarios projecting what this will mean. Summarizes White House aide Rodota:

"At best, we could expect paralysis. The president would not have the votes to get many of his key programs and appointments through the Congress, yet Congress would not have the votes to override a presidential veto.

"At worst, a Democrat Senate would attempt to unravel virtually all of the Reagan administration's hard-won achievements in economic, domestic and foreign policy."

The White House pols, meanwhile, see the oncoming Senate elections in much the same light as the country boy viewed an oncoming train. As the late Vice President Alben Barkley told the story, the boy was running along a railroad track inside a long, narrow tunnel while the train bore down on him from behind. As hope of escape withered, he cried out: "Lord, if you can't help me, for God's sake don't help the train."

STAR WARS SKULDUGGERY?: You'd think opponents of President Reagan's "Star Wars" program would welcome an appropriations amendment cutting funds for it, especially money for public affairs efforts. Less ballyhoo, less chance of pushing the costly project through, no? No. The Federation of American Scientists, among the program's harshest critics, argues that the more publicity Star Wars gets, the better the public will be able to spot its flaws. One suspicious opponent figures that the cutoff of PR money is designed to make it tougher for critical reporters to dig up dirt on Star Wars.

AIRPORT II: We've reported on the outrage of Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., over the Federal Aviation Administration's threat to withhold funds for safety equipment at San Francisco International Airport until the airport management relaxes its noise standards. Now Lantos and several other California members of Congress have warned Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole in a blunt private letter: "If an accident should result from failure to install the safety equipment ... the consequences for the FAA and the Department of Transportation would be unfortunate indeed. Results could be disastrous." They urged Dole to restore the FAA grant to the airport.

MINI-EDITORIAL: The lengths that manufacturers have to go in their desperate attempts to avoid personal injury suits set some kind of record for the absurd with this label on a $3 hammer we saw: "Warning. Be Cautious: This tool is not unbreakable and may cause bodily injury if broken. Wear safety goggles. Protect your eyes." You'll notice that the warning failed to mention the most common hammer injury, which has nothing to do with a hammer's breakability. We suggest an addendum to cover the bane of carpenters professional and amateur: "Warning: Do not strike your thumb with this tool. It will hurt like blazes."

FLORA LEWIS

Playing poker with Gadhafi can be risky

PARIS — The current campaign of agitation about Libya is stranger than a political thriller. Reports from Washington say that the United States Air Force and naval moves, the carefully leaked hints of trouble ahead, are White House efforts to send a "message" to Colonel Gadhafi that there will be heavy retaliation for renewed terrorist acts.

Flora Lewis

The reports also say this is being publicized to disorient and unnerve the Libyan leader, perhaps to provoke him to another irrational strike that would provide an excuse for an American attack and spur his own uneasy military to attempt a coup.

That is, in fact, Gadhafi-ish behavior that ill suits American power. It reflects not confidence in United States strength but peevish frustration, and it certainly suggests that American policy makers have lost sight of basic goals. It conjures an elephant maddened by a fly.

Obviously, this is an exercise in "public diplomacy," distributing information in a way intended to preclude action made politically obligatory by so many threats. Otherwise, the threats would be revealed as bluff.

"Public diplomacy" is not to be confused with "open diplomacy," which requires reasonable explanation for policy decisions and avoidance of secret engagements. It makes no sense in the circumstances. It is working to bewilder America's friends and foes alike, when the national interest would require making sure that they do not miscalculate United States intentions.

Washington has been ambivalent about the results of last April's raid on Tripoli, at some points claiming it a great success in "teaching Gadhafi a lesson" and at others warning that he is a "mad dog" bound by his own nature to strike again.

The current campaign is like the sequel to a hit movie with the same characters and plot. But in fact the Tripoli raid did not do at all well at the box office. It caused sharp strain in the Western alliance and panicked American tourists. What saved the Tokyo economic summit conference in May from tension and recrimination was the greater distress caused by the Chernobyl nuclear accident just before. That distracted minds and catalyzed accord.

Since then, allies have stiffened their attitude to Libya, for their own protection since more Europeans have been victimized by terrorism than Americans, and in order to placate the United States. But it would be a mistake to suppose that last spring's arguments would not be revived even more intensely if there is another American attack out of proportion to the provocation.

A conspiracy theorist puzzling out why on earth Washington seems so determined to repeat the performance and its predictable aftermath might imagine that it is to pressure moderate Arabs to choose sides, or to head off pressure to move toward a nuclear test ban and assure a Soviet-U.S. summit meeting. Moscow called off the preparatory meeting between American and Soviet foreign ministers after the April raid, and might feel obliged to repeat.

President Reagan's Washington appears too divided, too narrowly focused on disjointed issues without a sense of how the world picture fits together, for such a theory to be plausible. But then it is also a masterly image-making machine, and all these peculiar moves are pre-eminently about imagery.

In any case, there is no visible sense in the campaign, no evident policy purpose beyond stirring things up without due regard for likely consequences. The very most Washington could hope to achieve by its maneuvering would be the overthrow of Gadhafi.

But there are not the slightest grounds to suppose his successor would be more palatable to the U.S. Quite possibly, a new Libyan leader would be even more amenable to Soviet influence than the unpredictable Gadhafi, and more hostile to American interests.

Whatever happens to the colonel, American action would reverberate for the worse in relations with everybody else — Europeans, Russians, Arabs, the Third World in general. There seems to be little awareness of the inevitable impact, no concern about how much Libya should count in overall policy goals.

It is as though America chose to play poker with Libya, holding the power aces but counting on not having to pay the price of using them. In poker, there is a new deal after each hand. That is not so in foreign policy; every act sets the circumstances for what can follow. Without a clear idea of longer direction, winning a hand can result in great loss.

Who you are determines quality of meal!

When all the details of the tax reform bill are worked out, it looks as if business entertaining, as we have known it, will never be the same. Under the new rules you can still eat on the government for 80 percent of the meal — but you have to prove that you really did discuss business with the client. The conversation must be substantive and not just for goodwill purposes. If you try to deduct extravagantly without proof of the seriousness of the conversation, you will be fined.

Art Buchwald

This isn't like the old days when men and women took their spouses to dinner and did not hesitate to write them off as legitimate business contacts.

This scene has been repeated many times in one form or another:

"Who do you want me to be tonight?" Bea Hofstadter asked her husband Milton as they entered the Cafe de Paris.

"You can be Gerry Buckingham, president of the Bayou Kité Co."

"Why can't I be Ira Harris of Salomon Brothers?"

"You were Ira last week. We have to mix it up just in case the IRS does an audit."

Bea and Milton were seated and the headwaiter gave them a menu. She said, "Can I go all out?"

"Of course you can," Milton replied. "Gerry is a very important client. He buys thousands of spools of string each month. He has to be treated like a king."

"Do I have to talk business or can we just eat?"

Milton replied, "I think we ought to talk SOME business just so that the taxpayer doesn't think he's paying for our dinner."

"Remember the time you took me to Las Vegas and I was Clint Bronzestader of the Freepoint Cement and Weathervane Co.?"

Milton said, "Will you be quiet. Somebody could be listening. If you keep talking like this, I'm not going to deduct you any more."

"You're such a worrywart, Milton," Bea said. "I'll never forget the night you wrote me off as David Jaffe, your accountant, and then suddenly hid under the table."

"What would you have done if Jaffe walked into the restaurant just as I was paying the check?"

"So what? You were with your wife, and he was dining with his."

"How could I claim to have dinner with him, when he and his wife were eating alone in the same restaurant?"

"Maybe he was taking his wife to dinner and saying it was you."

"David wouldn't do that," Milton said. "He's too chicken. The reason I ducked under the table was that I was afraid when I sent him my bill for dinner, he would see I deducted him for a meal I never had with him. David doesn't have a sense of humor."

"Forget David. Where are you going to take me for our anniversary?"

"How about Bermuda?"

"That would be fun. Who am I as far as the IRS is concerned?"

"How about Norman Plankton of Plankton, Witchhazel Advertising? No one would say a word if I said I took him to Bermuda."

"I hate Norman Plankton, and if I have to be him it will ruin my trip."

"Well, who do you want to go as?"

"If I'm going to be deducted for the whole business trip, I want to go in style. I'd like to be Lee Iacocca."

Milton protested, "What would I be doing taking Lee Iacocca to Bermuda?"

"You could always say you took him because he promised you a good buy on a Plymouth station wagon."

NATION in brief

Union for homeless suing to gain shelter from street

WASHINGTON (AP) — An organization representing homeless people has filed suit against the Department of Health and Human Services to try to force states to shelter families who are living on the streets.

The suit, filed Tuesday by the National Coalition for the Homeless, covers 25 states, Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia.

The coalition charges that HHS Secretary Otis R. Bowen is violating federal law "by refusing to enforce binding commitments made by the state to shelter homeless families."

The states covered by the suit participate in a program called Emergency Assistance to Families, administered by HHS, which gives them up to 50 percent reimbursement of their quarterly expenses for housing the homeless.

To get the money, the states must present their shelter plans to the federal government, which is obligated to ensure that the state adhere to their commitments, the suit says.

Military exceeds goals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's military services achieved or exceeded their recruiting goals during the first nine months of fiscal 1986, a new report says.

The report, released Tuesday, shows that the Air Force matched its nine-month recruiting goal while the Navy, Army and Marine Corps slightly exceeded their objectives.

All told, the four services recruited 233,000 men and women between Oct. 1, 1985, and June 30, compared to a combined objective of 231,500.

But the report also showed that the Navy remained in last place among the services in signing up high school graduates. Of the Navy's first-time recruits, 80.4 percent held high school diplomas, compared with 88.5 percent for the Army, 96.8 percent for the Marine Corps and 99 percent for the Air Force.

Overall, the four services continued to report high totals for recruiting high school graduates. Of the 218,400 first-time recruits, 195,500 or 89.5 percent held high school diplomas.

States to reduce waste

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty states have begun or are planning efforts to reduce the amount of toxic waste generated by their industries, says an environmental group.

The Environmental Defense Fund, which issued a report on waste-reduction Tuesday, also said the federal government can best help these waste-reduction efforts by making it easier for companies and state agencies to get and swap technical information.

The Environmental Protection Agency has hired the Oak Ridge National Laboratory to construct a massive computer data base from information in the files of state agencies.

Mike Gruber, director of policy planning and information for EPA's Office of Solid Waste, said the agency hasn't decided what will be in the data base, but "we intend to work much more closely with the states than ever before."

Navy continues with blimp

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy plans to proceed with construction of a prototype blimp for use in tests that will determine whether the service employs the giant airships as a "radar platform" for surface ships.

The Navy formally issued a "request for proposals" to industry three weeks ago, soliciting bids on the construction of a single "operational development model" that would be outfitted with radar to test the airship in an aerial early-warning role.

According to sources, who requested anonymity, the Naval Operations' Executive Board concluded that a modern blimp could serve as a useful "radar platform" that could travel with surface ships and warn them against low-flying cruise missiles.

The service wants contractors to respond by Sept. 29, according to the request for proposals.

Death toll still uncertain

Copley News Service

CERRITOS, Calif. — Authorities have cleared much of the wreckage from the streets here, but the rubble and ash from Sunday's air disaster remain on many yards and homes — along with a lingering uncertainty over the death toll.

Three days after Aeromexico Flight 498 and a single-engine private plane collided and fell to the earth, Red Cross officials have a conservative count of 15 people who they believe were in the area and have not been located.

Los Angeles County Fire Department officials have put that figure as high as 18. Other estimates indicate up to 24 people on the ground may be missing.

Coroner's workers, who say they have cleared the site of all the human remains they found, cannot yet estimate how many people on the ground were killed.

Another tremor hits Rockies

WASHINGTON (AP) — A strong tremor struck the Aspen-Crested Butte area of Colorado early today, the latest in a series of earthquakes and small tremors to hit the Rocky Mountains, said a spokesman for the U.S. Geological Survey.

The tremor, measuring 3.5 on the Richter scale, occurred at 12:21 a.m. MDT and was centered about eight miles northwest of Crested Butte, said Don Finley, a spokesman for the USGS here.

Teacher contract disputes disrupt school for 45,000 in eight states

Associated Press

Contract disputes involving teachers have disrupted the start of school for 45,000 students and threatened to affect nearly 100,000 pupils and 8,600 educators in eight states today.

New walkouts, most over wages and benefits, were reported Tuesday in Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Washington, New Jersey and Massachusetts, but some of the contract disputes began in districts where classes hadn't begun.

In Illinois, strikes in Alton, Champaign, Berkeley and Okawville involve more than 1,100 teachers and kept more than 18,300 students out of classrooms.

Today was to be the first day of school in Alton, but officials canceled classes for the district's 7,600 students after 400 teachers and 340 support staff walked off the job Tuesday.

In New Jersey, negotiations to end a day-old strike by 140 teachers in Mount Laurel broke off early today and another session wasn't scheduled until Thursday night, said Robert Broderick, a spokesman for the New Jersey Education Association. Wages was the main issue in the talks.

With the first day of classes scheduled for today, superintendent James Anzide had said the suburban Philadelphia district would hold four-hour sessions for the 2,300 students using substitutes and teachers' aides.

Across the Delaware River, strikes threatened today's opening of classes in four suburban Philadelphia districts in Pennsyulvania: Jenkintown, with 50 teachers and 500 students; North Penn with 593 teachers and 9,141 students; Souderton with 280 teachers and 4,500 students; and Bensalem with 490 teachers and nearly 8,000 students.

In Berks County, Pa., 89 teachers in the 1,600-student Schuylkill Valley School District on Tuesday afternoon joined 224 teachers on strike in the 3,450-student Wilson School District in West Lawn. In the Mount Penn district, today's opening day classes for 804 students were canceled.

The district called the dispute a strike but the union representing the district's 56 teachers called it a lockout, saying they voted not to work because the district did not issue their last regular paycheck of the 1985-86 school year, due last week.

More than 500 teachers continued to stay out of class in Bethel Park and Spring Grove, which have a total enrollment of 8,700. Bethel Park canceled classes Tuesday after not enough teachers showed up, though officials had vowed to open classes despite the strike, said spokeswoman Audrie Bennett.

In Ohio, a strike by 100 teachers disrupted classes for 2,000 students in Newton Falls, where classes began last week.

In Michigan, a strike affecting 55 teachers and 1,050 students continued Tuesday in Harbor Beach, and strikes began in four other districts.

In Port Huron, about 650 teachers walked off the job Tuesday and classes for 13,000 students were canceled. Strikes also canceled classes Tuesday in three smaller districts: Niles, with 4,164 students and 258 teachers; Cass City, with 1,578 students and 71 teachers; and Mount Clemens, with 3,725 students and 222 teachers.

In Rhode Island, the 174-member East Greenwich Education Association voted to set up picket lines and boycott orientation sessions Tuesday. School was supposed to begin today for 1,900 students.

Researchers: AIDS in monkeys 'controlled disease by vaccine'

DAVIS, Calif. (AP) — A vaccine that has successfully protected laboratory monkeys from AIDS has been developed by University of California researchers who believe the same techniques can be used for a human vaccine.

"It worked even better than we thought it would. ...It looks like AIDS is a controllable disease by vaccine," virologist Dr. Preston Marx told a news conference Tuesday.

But Marx, who is chief of a 13-member research team at the university's California Primate Research Center, and medical pathologist Murray Gardner cautioned that it would probably be two to four more years before their research would produce a vaccine that could be used on humans.

Even then, they said, it might not be practical for wide use because of cost, high potential risk and financial liability.

AIDS is most often transmitted through sexual contact. Other means of transmission include transfusions of blood or blood products, and the sharing of contaminated hypodermic needles or syringes by drug abusers. AIDS can also be passed from mother to child at or before birth.

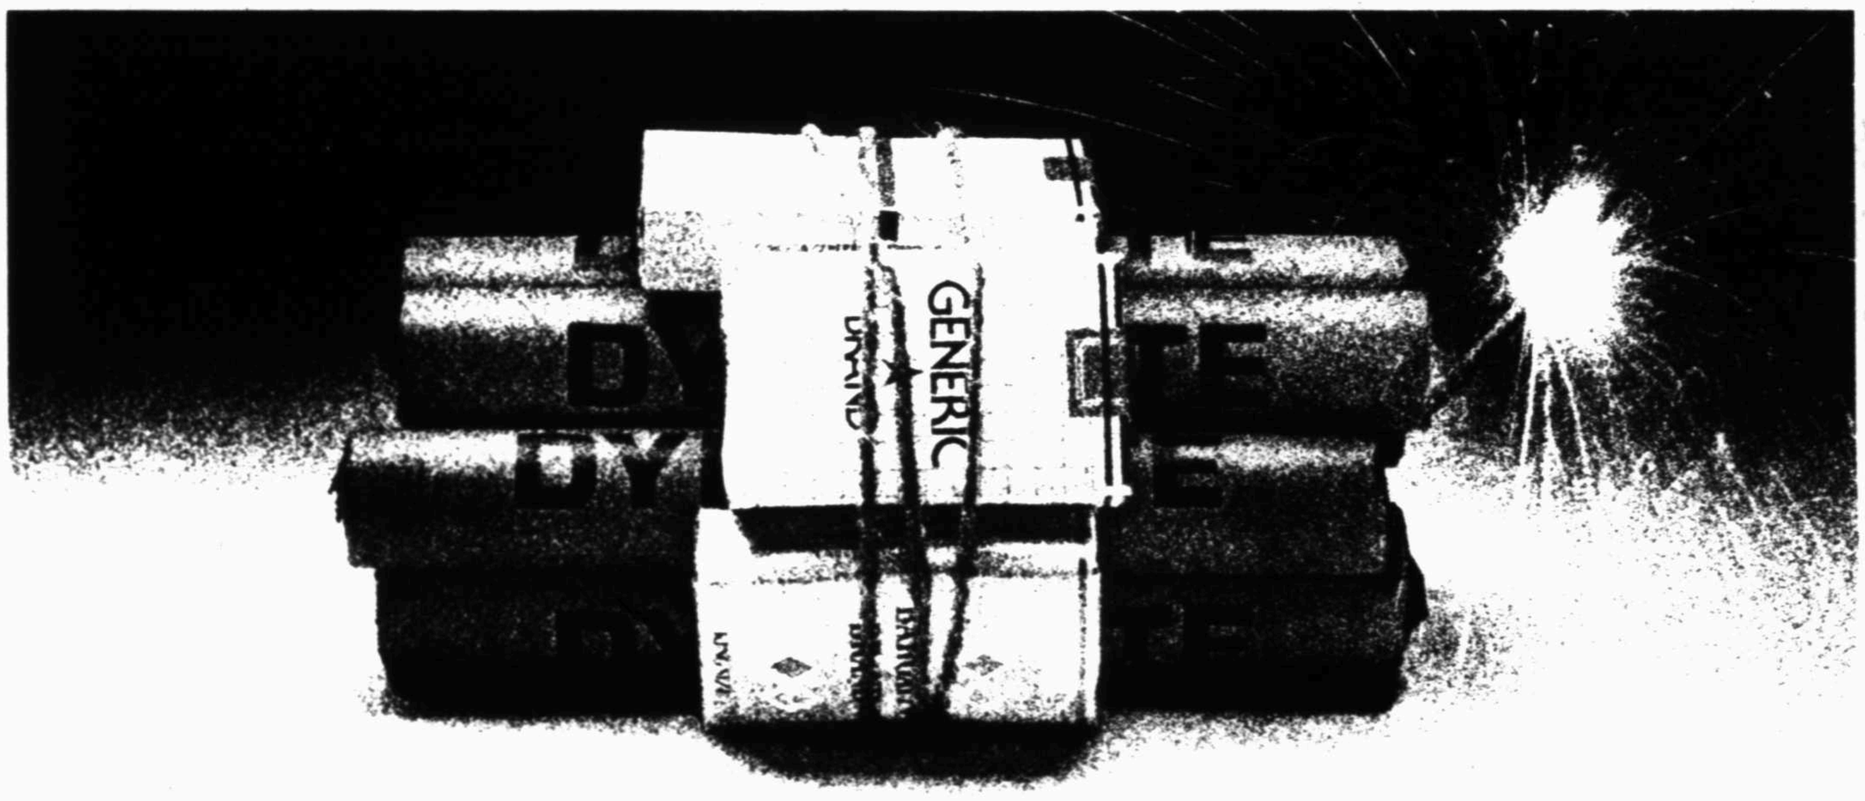

Marx said his year-long study compared six vaccinated monkeys with six given no such protection. All 12 monkeys had been injected with lethal doses of the simian acquired immune deficiency syndrome (SAIDS) virus.

He said the six monkeys that were given the vaccine are all still healthy after a year with no signs of the infection, while four of the six that did not receive the vaccine developed AIDS, and three of those died.

Sterling, Coke, Irion and Tom Green counties: Tonight: 40 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms with a low around 70. Southeast wind 5 to 10 mph. Thursday: mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain and thunderstorms and high in the mid 80s. Southeast wind 5 to 15 mph.

RAIN

About five customers on Club Drive were without power for an hour starting at 9 p.m. Tuesday after lines were blown down, Garrison said.

The Midland Country Club also lost power at 7 a.m. today and crews were working into mid-morning to restore power, he said.

Heavy thunderstorms rumbled throughout the state again today, triggering high water warnings across a wide swath, particularly in Central Texas, where some communities were drenched by as much as 9 inches of rain.

The National Weather Service warned that flooding was imminent along the North Bosque River, which was over its banks after 9 inches of rain fell Tuesday in and around Hico, about 90 miles southwest of Fort Worth.

Heavy thunderstorms fell throughout much of the state on Tuesday, and the same pattern was expected for today.

The storms were triggered by a stationary warm front located across Southeast Texas and extending westward into the southern part of the Texas Hill Country, the weather service said.

Kermit, 45 miles west of Odessa and near the Texas-New Mexico border, received 2.25 inches of rain in a two-hour period Tuesday night, and some houses were reported flooded a few miles away in Wink.

Virtually all of the Texas Panhandle, South Plains and Far West Texas were under a flash flood watch that was expected to remain in force throughout today and tonight.

Record rainfall was reported throughout North Central Texas. Morning rains on Tuesday dumped 1.4 inches on Dallas, breaking an 85-year-old record of 1.32 inches for the day. Cleburne reported receiving 6 inches, Granbury 4.1 inches and Euless 3.44 inches.

Flood waters of up to three feet forced police to close several streets in Cleburne, about 35 miles south of Fort Worth.

Rain-slick streets contributed to a bus wreck in Dallas, and lightning sparked a house fire in San Angelo, officials said.

A San Angelo family was wakened when lightning struck their home early Tuesday, officials said. Andy and Gloria Wilson and their two daughters, Jodi, 14, and Lindsey, 21, heard the lightning hit the roof at about 3 a.m. and ran from the house when they discovered smoke coming from a kitchen vent.

"The storm, the fire and the fact that the phone wasn't working caused us to panic, but we managed to get outside without anyone being hurt," Mrs. Wilson said.

Fire marshal Ken Land said lightning struck the roof, starting a fire in the attic. Half of the roof and attic were destroyed.

Wilander not surprised by Mecir's victory

By PETER ALFANO
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — There are times when Mats Wilander looks as if he would rather be anywhere than on a tennis court. He is the best of the contingent of Swedish players on the tour and is ranked No. 2 in the world, but Wilander has said he does not have a burning desire to climb that one last step.

So although his loss Tuesday to Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia may be considered a surprise by the fans and the U.S. Open seeding committee, Wilander said he knew a week ago that he might be packing his Open bags Tuesday night.

"For me, this is not a big upset," Wilander said. "I've lost to him the last two times we've played. Hopefully, next year he will be seeded higher and I won't have to play him so early."

Mecir, seeded 15th, defeated Wilander, 6-7, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4, to advance to the quarterfinals of the Open. Like his countryman Ivan Lendl, Mecir is an excellent baseline player whose accurate ground strokes can run an opponent ragged on a hardcourt surface. In the past two years, he has also become the player the Swedes hate to see in their half of the draw. His record against them is a combined 17-3.

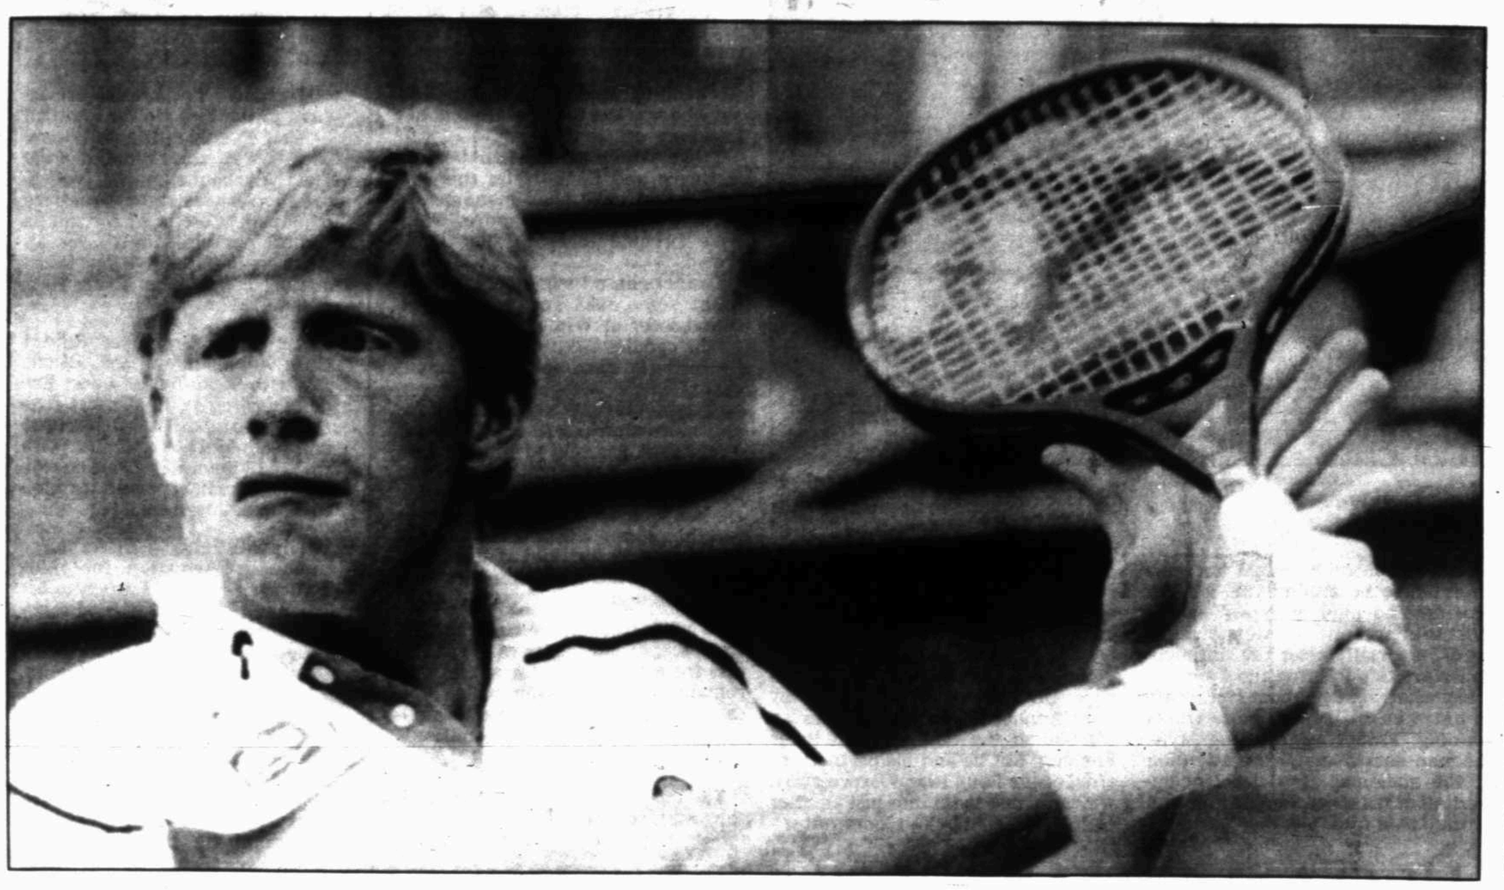

"He likes to rally," Wilander said. "You can run him from corner to corner but then he hits one good shot and it opens up the whole court for him. He knows I am not a serve-and-volley player and that I can't hurt him that much."

Neither Wilander nor his Swedish teammates are particularly fond of the disquieting atmosphere at the Open. Thus far, however, Joakim Nystrom and Stefan Edberg have overcome their ambivalence, advancing to the quarterfinals. Wilander is an introspective type who first gained prominence when he won the French Open title in 1982 when he was only 17.

He was burdened by that victory because it led to comparisons to Bjorn Borg, the player credited for the popularity of tennis in Sweden. Wilander has since won the French Open again and added two Australian Open titles, but he stays in the background as much as possible, delighted when people are surprised he is ranked so high.

He is only 22 years of age, but thinking of cutting back on his tournament schedule. "This match won't help me make a decision," wilander said. "I'll think about it for a few days and then decide."

In other matches, Boris Becker defeated Gary Donnelly, 6-4, 6-3, 6-7, 6-4, to reach the quarterfinals for the first time. Nystrom, who is seeded seventh, beat Matt Anger, 7-6, 6-2, 6-2.

No. 3 seed Boris Becker cocks his racquet as he sets for a backhand during Tuesday's U.S. Open action.

Becker was upset in the round of 16 last year and thus was pleased with his effort Tuesday. Others may dwell on the fact that Becker dropped a set to Donnelly — a qualifier who is ranked No. 211 in the world — and struggled more than he would have liked before winning Tuesday, but he will find satisfaction in having reached the Open quarterfinals.

"One and a half years ago, I was in the same situation as he was today," Becker said. "I went on the court and just hit the ball as hard as I can. There was no pressure at all. Last year, I went out in the fourth round so I am very content this year."

The difference between Donnelly and Becker is that Becker has become one of the top five players in the world at the age of 18, when most players are satisfied to win one round and meet expenses. He does not have that luxury and fights the inclination to be overly disappointed if he does not win a tournament.

His big serve carried him past Donnelly — an equally hard server — in a match among players who have become friends. Donnelly is 24 and a doubles specialist who says he has decided to make an effort to excel in singles play. He upset Anders Jarryd of Sweden, the 13th-seeded player, in the third round, and has the type of serve-and-volley game that can make the seeded players more than a little apprehensive on the Open hardcourts.

John McEnroe plans to appeal the $4,000 fine he received for verbal abuse of the supervisor of officials, incurred when he was disqualified from a doubles match after arriving late last Friday. "I personally believe the fine is not warranted at all," said John McEnroe Sr., who represents his son. "I don't think you should get fined for what is said in private. And the amount is an outrage."

Boston rallies past Texas

Blue Jays' winning streak ends at nine

Associated Press

The Toronto Blue Jays finally came down to earth after nine straight victories, and the Boston Red Sox took the opportunity to move up in the American League East standings.

"This is a never-die team," said Boston's Don Baylor after helping the Red Sox rally to beat the Texas Rangers 8-6 Tuesday night. "We're winning in a lot of ways, and it's a different character each day."

Tuesday night, it was Baylor who tied the game with a two-run homer in the sixth and Marty Barrett who won it with a two-run single in the seventh.

When word was received that Cleveland had beaten Toronto 9-5, boosting the Red Sox lead to 4½ games in the AL East, Baylor said: "That makes our win so much better. It's another game they're (Blue Jays) going to have to try to make up."

With Texas ahead 5-3 in the sixth, Baylor tied the game with his 27th homer. The slugging designated hitter admitted he was trying for a home run all the way after Bill Buckner had been thrown out trying to move from first to third on Jim Rice's single. Baylor leaned into the first pitch and sent it high into the left-field screen at Fenway Park.

"You don't think of home run when you go to bat very often, but that was the exception," Baylor said. "I knew what I wanted to do — put the ball out of the park. I made up my mind as soon as Buck was out at third. I figured it was the right time to go for the long ball."

One inning later, Barrett gave the Red Sox the lead for good with his two-run single and the Red Sox went on to their fourth straight victory.

American League

Veteran Sammy Stewart, who replaced starter Al Nipper in Texas' four-run fourth, earned his fourth victory in five decisions. Calvin Schiraldi pitched the last two innings for his seventh save.

Indians 9, Blue Jays 5

Ken Schrom gained his first victory since July 23 as Cleveland turned back Toronto and stopped the Blue Jays' winning streak at nine.

Andre Thornton had three RBI and Brett Butler two as the Indians snapped a three-game losing streak and won for just the second time in their last eight games.

Schrom, 12-6, a former Blue Jay, snapped a personal four-game losing streak. He scattered six hits through six innings before being relieved by Brian Oelkers. Frank Wills got the final seven outs for his second save.

"I worked on a cut fastball a week ago and tonight I threw it a lot," Schrom said. "I threw it to Lloyd (Moseby) and Rance (Mulliniks, who are both left-handed hitters). It doesn't allow them to dig in. It jams them.

"I was zero for August, so it's nice to start September with a win."

White Sox 3, Royals 0

Steve Carlton pitched a seven-hitter for eight innings and Ozzie Guillen went 4-for-4 to lead visiting Chicago over Kansas City in a game that also saw the major league debut of the Royals' Bo Jackson.

The 41-year-old Carlton chalked up victory No. 322 of his illustrious career by striking out three and not giving up a walk. One of the Royals' hits was a single to the right side of the infield by Jackson in his first major league at-bat in the second inning. On the previous pitch, Jackson hit a 425-foot shot that was foul by inches.

Danny Jackson, 9-10, gave up nine hits in 8 1-3 innings before giving way to Dan Quisenberry. Carlton, 3-2 since the White Sox claimed him on waivers from San Francisco Aug. 12, raised his season mark to 8-13. Bobby Thigpen pitched the ninth and has now saved all three of Carlton's wins with Chicago.

"This is the first time I've seen him during the season," Royals Mike Ferraro said. "He is all business and those are the kind of players who go to the Hall of Fame. He looks like all he wants to do is get the batter out."

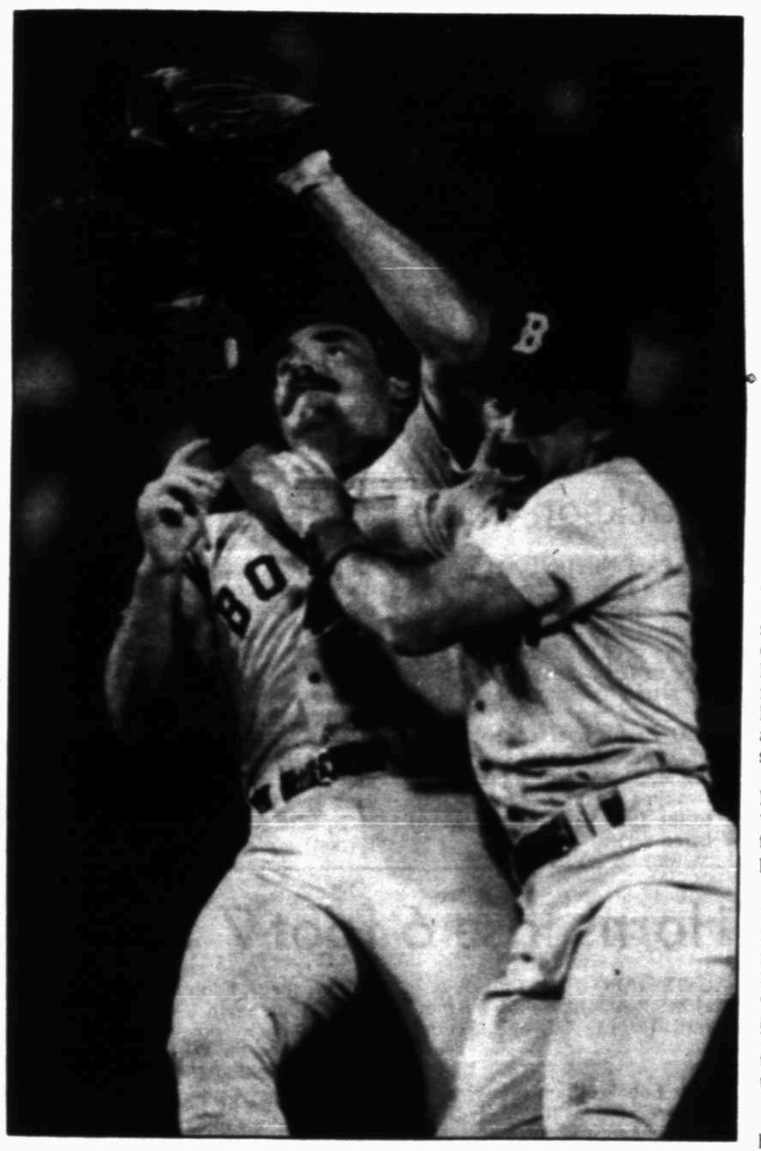

Twins 4, Brewers 0

Bert Blyleven pitched a five-hitter for his third shutout of the season and sixth straight victory as Minnesota beat Milwaukee. Kent Hrbek drove in two runs and Kirby Puckett scored twice for Minnesota.

It was the 54th career shutout for Blyleven, 15-10, who was matched against another veteran, Pete Vuckovich, in Vuckovich's first major league appearance since last Sept. 4. Blyleven walked one and struck out eight.

In pitching his American League-leading 13th complete game, Blyleven gave up just one extra-base hit, Robin Yount's one-out double in the first.

Reds down Pirates, gain on Astros

Associated Press

The Cincinnati Reds are not ready to concede the National League West to Houston just yet.

With a 9-1 victory Tuesday night over the Pittsburgh Pirates, the Reds pulled within 6½ games of the Astros in the West.

"You feel the pressure until you've got it clinched," Reds pitcher Bill Gullickson said, then barrowed a phrase from Astros coach Yogi Berra. "If you've been in this game for a while, you know it's never over until it's over."

NL

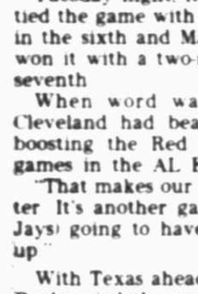

Gullickson, carrying the load with starters Mario Soto and John Denny out due to injuries, pitched a four-hitter against Pittsburgh to win his fifth straight. He did not give up a hit until U.L. Washington beat out an infield hit with one out in the sixth.

"This is a fun time of the year," Reds outfielder Dave Parker said. "At least we've got something to play for. We're still in the middle of a pennant race."

The Reds picked up a half game on the Astros, who played a 4-4, 14-inning draw at Chicago before the game was suspended due to darkness. It will be resumed before today's game. In other games, San Diego beat Philadelphia 6-2, San Francisco edged New York 4-3, Montreal beat Los Angeles 1-0 and Atlanta defeated St. Louis 4-2.

Cincinnati's Nick Esasky hit a home run that helped start a six-run fifth inning, and that was more than enough support for Gullickson, 13-8, who has an ERA of 0.85 over his last nine starts, lowering his season mark to 2.76.

SWC coaches let opinions fly

SWC football coaches sound off...

Houston's Bill Yeoman on the pressures under which a football coach labors: "Once involved, those who have tried to get out usually come back. Nothing remotely equals it. Sure, there are headaches, but once you get a few scars, you don't react as violently."....

On the importance of defense, "When we won the SWC title in 1979, we played so many three-point games I couldn't believe it.,"...

A&M's Jackie Sherrill on the validity of preseason forecasts, "Being picked high sells magazines and makes money for the people that sell the magazines. It doesn't win football games"...

Sherrill on the value of early season games, "The most improvement comes between the first and second game. Last year our game with Alabama was a big plus. We knew we didn't lose to a better team, but lost because we didn't execute."...

Grant Teaff on the drug problem in college athletics, "Lots of the things we face, the rest of the country is facing also. The biggest problem is drugs, not the economy. We are out in front and we're doing something about it, more than the others...Testing is essential. It must be done....I want to be sure the players know the pitfalls...Parents and educators must take a stand...one overlooked area that should be addressed is smokeless tobacco...."

Texas' Fred Akers on the myth that there is mutual dislike and distrust between Texas, Dallas and SMU, "We enjoy coming to Dallas. We enjoy playing in Texas Stadium and the Cotton Bowl. We enjoy playing SMU." Shifting gears, Fred adds, "Now the Dallas Morning News will give you a thrill."...

After the Texas Tech summer tour, Raider Coach David McWilliams, participating in his first golf-every-day-summer, "I always said if I could have a chance to play golf every day, I'd be a good golf player. I was wrong."....

McWilliams on preseason predictions, "I looked at how the teams were picked to finish before the season and where they actually finished. You know there was a big turnover."...

TCU's Jim Wacker on the joys of a round-robin scheduled as that employed by the Southwest Conference. "I want to play every team every year. It's so much more fun for the players and fans. If you don't, it's boring. Who wants to watch games where you know you are going to win."....

Wacker on recruiting quarterback Scott Ankrom, "When was it, Scott, your junior or senior year that we started to recruit you?"

Ankrom's reply, "The seventh grade, coach."...

Yeoman on facing Arizona and Oklahoma State in early season games. "Games like that will give us a chance to be good," if the Cougars survive....

McWilliams on prize linebacker Brad Hastings, "He covers a lot of ground and when he gets to the ball, he's got a bad attitude."....

Rice's Jerry Berndt on the way to the guillotine, "We'll pass this year and we'll run two complete offensive teams."

Berndt says the most obvious change in Owl football will be the concept of defense. "Reducing that 452 yards allowed per game last year is a prime objective."...

Grant Teaff claims he has a back up quarterback to Cody Carlson, "who can stand flat-footed and drill a ball on a line 50 yards. Unfortunately, he throws the five-yard pass the same way."....

Texas A&M's Jackie Sherrill is another who likes the SWC round-robin schedule concept, "In the Big 10, Pac-10 and SEC, it's so often that co-champions don't play each other.

"When I first came to A&M, I didn't realize the importance of the Cotton Bowl. One of the assistants who came with me from Pitt, mentioned that the Aloha Bowl would be nice, gentle breezes, sandy beaches and palm trees....A veteran assistant explained the only bowl was the Cotton Bowl. 'If you want palm trees and beaches, we'll import them.'"....

It just isn't the same U.S. Open

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Blame it on John McEnroe's first-round departure. Or perhaps it was Jimmy Connors' earliest exit since 1972. Somehow, though, this year's U.S. Open seems to lack its usual verve.

The survivors as the tournament turned into its second week just don't stir the emotions quite the way Johnny Mac and Jimbo can.

It is tough to get excited about the mechanical efficiency of No. 1-ranked Ivan Lendl, who plays tennis like a carefully programmed piece of computer software. Lendl's poker-faced style has all the zest of a September baseball game between two last-place teams.

Boris Becker's acrobatic style and freckled-faced smile afford some promise, but not when the draw makes his trip into the quarterfinals about as difficult as a Sunday drive along the German Autobahn.

To reach the round of eight, Herr Becker has had to beat Glenn Michibata, Cassio Motta, Sergio Casal and Gary Donnelly, nice fellows all, but none with a computer ranking higher than Michibata's No. 79. On Tuesday, Becker did away with Donnelly, who arrived in this tournament ranked No. 211. The surprise was that it took four sets.

The only pizzazz in the men's side of the draw has come from Tim Wilkison, who knocked off No. 5 Yannick Noah the other day without losing his baseball cap or the towel he wears jauntily in his waistband like a quarterback who made a wrong turn and wound up at center court.

Wilkison's enthusiasm — at No. 31 on the computer, he might not have expected to be around this long — provides the kind of crowd appeal this tournament so desperately needs, especially after the untimely departures of McEnroe and Connors.

Martina Navratilova, making the U.S. Open semifinals is just another week at the office.

Say what you will about McEnroe's sometimes bullying, sometimes whining, always aggravating style, the man does demand the attention of the audience. He's the Muhammad Ali of his sport. People love him or they hate him, but they certainly don't ignore him. In that respect, he replaced Connors, who had a dead-end kid image until McEnroe arrived and made Jimbo look like a choir boy by comparison.

McEnroe went out of the Open in style. Beaten in the first round by Paul Annacone, he still was an attraction in the doubles with Peter Fleming. But he and his partner ran afoul of the Long Island Expressway, which turned them into just another couple of gridlocked commuters, made them late for a match and caused them to be disqualified.

McEnroe did not depart these courts quietly. He was fined $1,000 for being late and $4,000 for carrying on over the affair. You expected otherwise? He never was exactly demure.

Connors celebrated his 34th birthday Tuesday but unlike past years, the party was not held at center court. He was bounced over the weekend by Todd Witsken, a 22-year-old who was less than reverent about knocking off Jimbo.

There was a time when beating McEnroe and Connors on this surface would have been monumental accomplishments. No more. They have become faces in the tennis crowd.

Connors hasn't won a Grand Slam event since 1983 and was a first-round loser at Wimbledon in June. As the candles increase each year on his birthday cake, suspicions mount that from the twilight of his career, he may not be able to reach back for any more sunrises.

McEnroe has played four tournaments since taking a seven-month sabbatical to re-charge his batteries. He has won none of them and was less than serene about losses at Stratton Mountain, Vt., and at the Open. The traffic was a lot better in Vermont, though.

So while they are gone from the Open scene, and the tournament suffers from their departures, there do remain some things on which you can depend. Martina Navratilova advanced to the women's semifinals Tuesday and Chris Evert Lloyd reached for that plateau today.

The more things change, the more they stay the same.

Stangby wins HPGA in sudden death

From Staff Reports

Bob Stangby birdied the first hole of sudden death Monday to defeat Bruce Lowry for the Hogan Park Golf Association championship in the low-gross division.

Both Stanby and Lowry finished the three-day tournament tied at 223 after opening round scores by Stangby of 73-77-73 and Lowry of 71-77-75. The title was decided when Stangby sank a seven-foot birdie on the first playoff hole.

Midland High volleyball nips Snyder

From Staff Reports

SNYDER — For the second time this year, the Midland High Bulldogs have posted a victory over defending 4A volleyball state champion Snyder. Tuesday, the scores were 15-12, 18-16.

"It was just point-for-point volleyball," said MHS coach Sonja Pittman. "It was outstanding play by both teams. I think we had some outstanding setting by Theresa Brown and exceptional hitting by Amy Cumings and just real good team play. That's what we're finally starting to gel on.

The victory improves the Bulldog record to 5-7 as they head into the Seminole Tournament this weekend, opening play against host Seminole at noon Friday.

The Bulldogs have another two weeks of road play before getting to use their home court and it comes at a time when victory means most: District 4-5A play.

"We don't even play in Midland until the first district game which is the 16th against Lee at our gym," said Pittman.

Falcons' Riggs ending holdout

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — Gerald Riggs said he would report to the Atlanta Falcons training camp today, ending a contract holdout that has cost him $42,000 in fines.

Riggs, the National Football League's second-leading rusher last year, had refused to report to camp in an attempt to renegotiate his current contract.

Talks with the team broke off last week and the Falcons said they were withdrawing a $2.41 million offer until Riggs reported to camp and paid his fine. Riggs wants a contract closer to $3 million.

Riggs told The Atlanta Constitution, "I'm coming in, but not because of some ultimatum.

"I am a competitor. I want to play football. I feel I really need to get in there and get the ball rolling."

Riggs said he had not reached an agreement on a new contract and would play the last year of his current contract at $250,000.

Jackson knots TL East series

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The Jackson Mets' Reggie Dobie scattered seven hits and fanned four in going the distance for a 5-1 victory over the Shreveport Captains in Texas League East playoff action Tuesday night.

Al Carmichael contributed a solo home run and two RBI to the Mets' win, which pushed the two-time Texas League champs to the final game of the best-of-three series.

The Mets scored one run in each of the first four innings — one on Carmichael's second-inning RBI single — and the final run on his sixth-inning solo shot.

Shreveport's only run came in the fifth inning, when Everett Graham's RBI groundout scored Charlie Hayes, who had doubled and advanced on an error by Jackson's Rick Lockwood.

Captains starting pitcher John Burkett got the loss.

'Horns lose 6-foot-7 Sykes

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas has lost John Sykes, a 6-foot-7 forward, for the 1986-87 basketball season.

Coach Bob Weltlich said Sykes, a sophomore, failed to meet NCAA and UT academic requirements during summer school.

"At this point he is not part of the program. He will probably attend a junior college. I don't know if he will play for us again," Weltlich said.

Joe Eivens, the UT academic counselor, said Sykes passed only three of the six hours he needed at Merced (Calif.) Junior College to meet NCAA requirements. Sykes also needed to achieve a minimum grade of B for two correspondence courses for readmission to UT.

Zorn trying for CFL's Bombers

WINNIPEG, Alberta (AP) — Jim Zorn, a 10-year NFL veteran with the Seattle Seahawks, Green Bay Packers and Dallas Cowboys, was in Winnipeg Tuesday as the Canadian Football League Blue Bombers scrambled to find a replacement for injured quarterback Tom Clements.

"This is an opportunity to compete," said Zorn, who was recently cut by the Packers. "I haven't got any phone calls from the NFL so why not the CFL? If it's football I can play anywhere."

Zorn, 33, spent nine seasons with the Seahawks, where he completed 1,593 passes in 2,992 attempts for 20,122 yards and 107 touchdowns. He also was intercepted 133 times.

Relegated to a backup role, Zorn left the Seahawks in 1985 and was signed as a free agent by Green Bay. He appeared in 13 games, starting five.

Clements, the 12-year veteran out of Notre Dame, who was enjoying one of his finest seasons, was placed on the 60-day injury list Monday, after suffering a separated shoulder in Sunday's 34-30 loss to the Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Bomber Coach Cal Murphy said Zorn has been placed on the team's non-active roster.

Astros call up five from AAA

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros called up five players from their Class AAA farm club in Tucson, a spokesman for the National League club said Tuesday.

Joining the Astros will be outfielders Ty Gainey and Tony Walker, spokesman Chuck Pool said. Both Gainey and Walker saw action with the Astros earlier this season before being sent back to Tucson.

At Tucson, Gainey had a .351 batting average with 16 home runs and 62 RBIs. Walker hit .190 with eight RBIs.

Others joining the Astros for their series in Chicago include catcher Robbie Wyne and pitchers Manny Hernandez and Julio Solano.

Wynne had a .228 batting average with 10 homers and 45 RBIs.

Hernandez posted an 8-7 record with a 4.10 ERA, while Solano had a 6-4 mark with a 1.89 ERA.

"I don't think I've been in a streak like this before," Gullickson said. "I don't want to be afraid to fail. When you're afraid of failing, your chances of failing are pretty good. You've got to go at 'em."

Astros 4, Cubs 4

Chicago's Jody Davis hit a sacrifice fly in the ninth inning that tied the score 4-4, and the two clubs played through 14 innings with the score still tied before the game was suspended. It was scheduled to be resumed this afternoon before the start of the regularly scheduled gamed.

Houston took a 4-3 lead in the top of the ninth on Denny Walling's two-out, run-scoring double.

Padres 6, Phillies 2

San Diego ended Philadelphia's six-game winning streak with two-run homers from Kevin McReynolds and Terry Kennedy. McReynolds also doubled, and his homer gave him a career-high 21.

Dave LaPoint, 1-1, making his second start for the visiting Padres since he was acquired from Detroit on July 9, struck out seven and walked two over seven innings for his first victory.

San Diego scored three runs, two on Kennedy's 11th homer, in the first inning off Phillies right-hander Jeff Bittiger in his major league debut. The Padres made it 5-0 in the fifth on McReynolds' homer.

Giants 4, Mets 3

Mike Krukow pitched his fifth straight victory over New York, giving him a career mark of 17-6 against the Mets, and Bob Brenly hit a three-run homer to help San Francisco end a four-game losing streak.

Brenly's homer, his tenth, came with two out in the sixth off Dwight Gooden, 13-5, who gave up six hits and struck out 10 in seven innings. Krukow, 14-8, allowed five hits, struck out three and walked two in seven innings.

Expos 1, Dodgers 0

Floyd Youmans pitched a two-hitter for his second shutout, and Vance Law hit a home run with two out in the ninth to break up a scoreless duel as the Expos beat the Dodgers for the fifth straight time in Montreal. Bob Welch allowed just six hits in going the distance for the Dodgers.

Law hit a 2-1 pitch from Welch halfway up the lower deck in left field for the only run of the game.

Youmans, 12-9, pitched his fourth complete game. He walked two and struck out seven. Welch, 6-11, walked one and struck out nine.

Braves 4, Cardinals 2

Dale Murphy's three-run homer in the seventh inning broke a 1-1 tie and helped Atlanta right-hander Rick Mahler break a personal three-game losing streak. Murphy's homer, No. 26, came against St. Louis left-hander John Tudor, 13-7.

Mahler, 12-14, allowed seven hits in eight innings. He left with none out in the ninth after giving up a home run to Andy Van Slyke, his ninth, and Gene Garber got the final three outs for his 22nd save.

AL

Angels 10, Orioles 1

Don Sutton pitched three-hit ball for seven innings in a milestone performance as California downed visiting Baltimore and improved their American League West lead to 6½ games over second-place Texas.

Sutton, 13-9, allowed only a first-inning unearned run as he won his 308th game, tying Charles Radbourn for 14th place on the all-time victory list. The 41-year-old right-hander also struck out seven for a total of 105 — a record 21st consecutive season with 100-plus strikeouts.

Brian Downing had three hits for the Angels, including a homer, and knocked in three runs.

Tigers 7, Mariners 5

Darrell Evans tied the game with an eighth-inning homer and then hit a two-run single in the top of the ninth to lead Detroit over Seattle.

With two outs and the bases loaded in the ninth, Evans lined a single off the right-field wall at the Kingdome to score Tom Brookens and Alan Trammell with the winning runs.

Bill Campbell, 3-5, the fifth Tigers' pitcher, pitched one inning of one-hit relief to gain the victory. Jim Slaton, the seventh Detroit pitcher, got the last out for his second save.

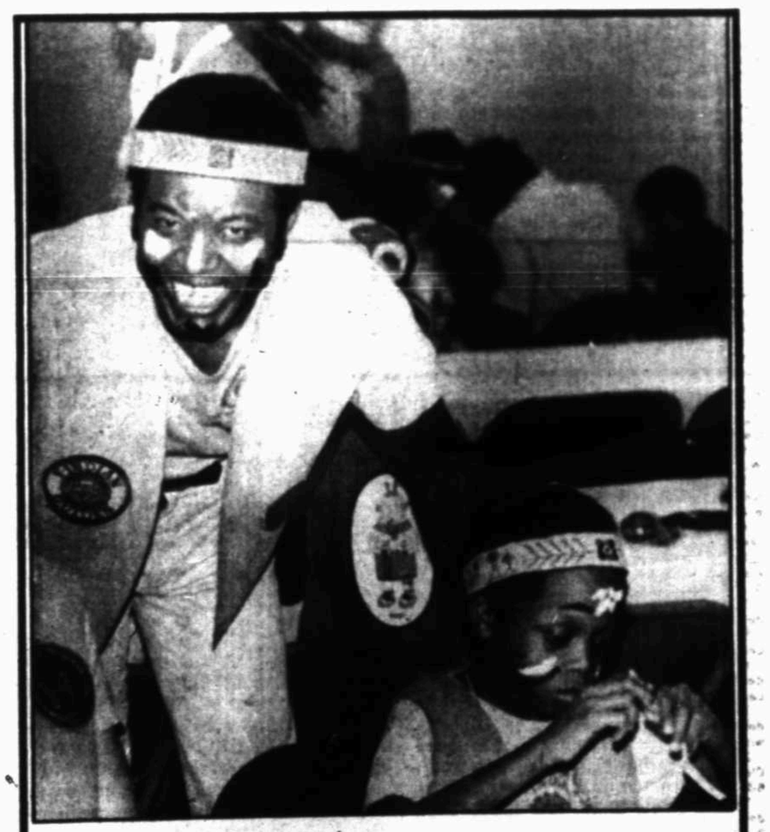

Yankees 9, A's 8

Dave Winfield's RBI single capped a three-run ninth inning rally to lift the Yankees to a win in Oakland.

Don Mattingly's sacrifice fly had tied the game before Winfield, who hit a three-run homer in the first inning, came through with his single to center.

Brian Fisher, the fourth of five Yankee pitchers, improved his record to 8-5 while Dave Righetti pitched the final inning for his major league-leading 34th save. It was Righetti's 17th straight save in as many opportunities.

Jay Howell, 2-5, absorbed the loss.

Browns waive former No. 1 pick

Associated Press

Tom Cousineau, the top pick in the NFL draft seven years ago, was waived by the Cleveland Browns on Tuesday as teams continued the countdown to opening day by reshuffling their rosters.

The waiving of Cousineau followed unsuccesful efforts to trade him and his $500,000-a-year contract. Cousineau lost his starting job at inside linebacker to Anthony Griggs, obtained in a trade with the Philadelphia Eagles. Former USFL player Mike Johnson will be Griggs' backup.

"I have no doubt Tom will play in the NFL and probably start," Coach Marty Schottenheimer said. "We just had too many quality players at the position."

Cousineau taken by the Buffalo Bills with the first choice in the 1979 draft, but opted to play in Canada. He returned two years later and signed with Cleveland.

Cousineau's contract would have to be picked up by any team claiming him on waivers. As a vested veteran, however, he could also opt for free agency and work out his own deal.

Tuesday was a day when most NFL teams adjusted their rosters after getting down to the 45-player regular-season limit. Some players cut earlier were recalled by teams after other players were placed on the injured-reserve list.

Lions

Coach Darryl Rogers announced that Eric Hipple had beaten out Joe Ferguson at quarterback for the second year in a row.

"I feel good about it, but I don't understand what the big deal is, to tell you the truth," Hipple said. "You know, I was the quarterback last year, so why wouldn't I be the quarterback again?"

Rogers left the door open for Ferguson or rookie Chuck Long to move into the starting job later.

"Nothing is etched in stone," the second-year NFL coach said. "I didn't say that this is for a whole season. I'm just saying Eric is our starting quarterback."

The Lions, who open the season at Minnesota on Sunday, signed free-agent return specialist Herman Hunter and placed rookie offensive lineman Joe Milinichik on injured reserve with a dislocated elbow.

Rams

Linebacker Steve Busick, who had started 44 consecutive games for Denver, was acquired for two undisclosed draft choices. Busick, who was beaten out by Rickey Hunley for the starting job at Denver, will help fill a void left by an injury to Jim Collins.

The Rams also placed quarterback Dieter Brock on injured reserve, sidelining him for at least the first four games.

Brock, the starting quarterback last year, underwent arthroscopic knee surgery on Aug. 12. Since then, Steve Bartkowski, signed as a free agent during the off-season, has established himself as the team's No. 1 quarterback.

Tight end Damone Johnson and defensive lineman Alvin Wright were also put on injured reserve. Wide receiver Chuck Scott and linebacker Jim Laughlin, both of whom had been placed on waivers Monday, were re-signed.

Vikings

Waye Wilson, who led the New Orleans Saints in rushing last year with 645 yards, was acquired by Minnesota for wide receiver Mike Jones. Jones was the Vikings' second-leading receiver last season with 46 catches.

Wilson ranks fourth all-time on the Saints' rushing chart, third in touchdowns scored and fifth in career receptions.

Eagles

Coach Buddy Ryan conirmed that the starting running backs for the Philadelphia Eagles' opener with Washington will be Junior Tautalatasi and Mike Waters. That left Earnest Jackson, a 1,000-yard rusher the past two years, on the bench along with last year's fullback, Michael Haddix.

"They're the most productive guys we had in the exhibitions," Ryan said. "We gave everybody a good shot, I thought, and those guys were the most productive."

NFL Roundup

First-round draft pick Keith Byars, who is working his way back from off-season foot surgery, may play some against the Redskins Sunday.

Second-round pick Anthony Toney, who has a sprained ankle, was placed on the injured reserve list Tuesday. Guard Jim Gilmore, cut Monday, was recalled.

Tautalatasi, whom Ryan refers to as "Junior Smith," averaged nearly 10 yards per carry in the preseason and ran for a 65-yard touchdown.

Patriots

Kenneth Sims, the Patriots' most valuable defensive lineman, and first-round draft pick Reggie Dupard, a running back, were placed on injured reserve along with linebacker Clayton Weisuhn and cornerback Rod McSwain. Weisuhn had spent most of the previous two years on the injury list.

Offensive tackle Tom Toth was cut.

Broncos

Former All-Pro cornerback Mark Haynes, acquired from the New York Giants, was placed on injured reserve with a thigh injury and quarterback Steve Stankavage and punter Jack Weil were re-signed.

Denver had placed Stankavage and Weil on waivers Monday. Last year's punter, Chris Norman, was cut last week.

Jets

First-round draft pick Mike Haight was placed on injured reserve Tuesday, leaving the team with none of its 11 choices from last April's draft on the active roster.

Haight, an offensive tackle from Iowa, is suffering from a hyperextended knee and had played in just one preseason game. The Jets replaced him on the roster with guard Ron Sams, who was waived a week ago.

Giants

Veteran placekicker Bob Thomas, cut last week, was signed to replace the injured Ali Haji-Shiekh, and center Brian Johston, cut last week, was also recalled.

Wide receiver Vincent Warren and guard David Jordan were placed on injured reserve. Haji-Sheikh was placed on injured reserve Monday.

Colts

Wide receiver Robbie Martin was placed on injured reserve and James Harbour, a wide reciever cut Monday, was re-signed.

Bills

Coach Hank Bullough announced that first-round draft pick Will Wolford will start at guard against the New York Jets Sunday but refused to say whether Jim Kelly would start ahead of Frank Reich at quarterback.

"First of all, Jim Kelly is not our savior," he said. "He's our leader. He's not going to step on that field and everything is going to change, everything's over, now we're going to start winning."

The Bills also signed linebacker George Cumby, released earlier this year by Green Bay, and Bullough said he would start at inside linebacker Sunday.

Placed on injured reserve by the Bills were defensive backs Ron Pitts and Lawrence Johnson, wide receiver Jimmy Teal and quarterback Brian McClure.

Dolphins

Defensive end Doug Betters ended his 39-day holdout Tuesday, but said the contract he signed left him disappointed.

The Dolphins also placed defensive back Glenn Blackwood on injured reserve Tuesday with a severe thigh injury and recalled his brother Lyle. The elder Blackwood, a 13-year National Football League veteran, had been waived by the Dolphins Monday.

Betters, who missed the entire training camp, was paid $260,000 last year and originally asked for a two-year contract for more than $700,000. He refused to release details of the contract he signed Tuesday, but said he didn't get what he wanted from owner Joe Robbie.

"These days you can price yourself out of the game," Betters said. "Joe didn't move at all. The owners are in the driver's seat when it comes to free agency."

Athletes not alone in suffering from tennis elbow

What may a highway patrolman, housewife and tennis player have in common? An aggravating, painful disability of the elbow referred to as a "tennis elbow" or "lateral epicondylitis."

The common denominator is a repetitive motion which requires the individual to forcefully extend the elbow while twisting the wrist. The term "tennis elbow" came into common usage because so many tennis players seem to suffer from this condition. The cluprit in racket sports is a mechanically poor backhand stroke or a racket that is too rigid or strung too tightly.

How about the highway patrolman and the housewife? What are they doing that causes the elbow pain?

The answer is any one of a million activities of daily living. It could be repetitively opening a door that has a knob that is too hard to turn or carrying a heavy, bulky briefcase.

The muscles that extend the fingers and wrist are referred to as the extensor muscles. They are attached above the elbow to the lateral epicondyle of the humerus and course across the outside of the elbow and run down to the back of the wrist and fingers.

They are responsible for the pain seen in this condition. When the elbow is extended, the extensor muscles rub across the bony prominences of the elbow and become torn and irritated. Healing attempts to occur with the formation of granulation tissue. With repeated injury, the granulation tissue swells, stretches and bleeds. The result is the pain and disability these patients experience.

The average patient complains of severe, sharp pain at the lateral (outside) elbow. Any attempt to use the arm with the elbow in extension hurts. The pain is such that it is even painful to hold a pencil, coffee cup or screwdriver.

Often, objects are picked up and immediately dropped. Pressing on the lateral elbow and extensor muscles causes severe discomfort. The pain worsens with increasing activity. This is a major OUGHY!

In regards to treatment, the first consideration is discovering what activity is the source of the patient's injury. This is frequently very difficult. However, unless that activity is delineated and stopped, it is almost impossible to successfully treat the patient.

Despite treatment, the patient will continue a vicious cycle of reinjury and pain. Local contrast treatments to the lateral side of the elbow are helpful. This is done by alternating moist heat packs and ice packs to the lateral elbow.

The heat and cold are each applied for five minutes, starting with heat and ending with ice. Frequently, an arm strap applied below the elbow will tether the muscles and reduce the pain. Arthritis medicine is definitely very helpful.

After the acute inflammatory condition has subsided, stretching and strengthening of the extensor muscles is indicated. This is probably the most important phase of treatment and hopefully will reduce the tendency for this situation to recur.

Unfortunately, there is no magic pill that will prevent or cure tennis elbow. The best medicine is prevention — use good form and proper equipment in the racket sports. For non-athletic tennis elbow, avoid those situations which could cause injury.

Dr. Cochran is president of the Midland Orthopedic Clinic and specializes in sports medicine and arthoscopic surgery.

DALLAS (AP) — Football season, in this case the Southwest Conference's 72nd campaign, officially begins Saturday, Sept. 6, at 2 p.m. CDT when the Baylor Bears battle the Wyoming Cowboys at Laramie, Wyo.

That begins a trio of non-league battles on this opening weekend of play as Lamar of the Southland Conference travels to Rice for a 7 p.m. game.

Texas Tech hosts Kansas State of the Big 8 Conference at 7 p.m. before Coach Bill Yeoman starts his 25th season at the helm of the Houston Cougars with one of his toughest assignments — an 8:30 p.m. encounter with the Arizona Wildcats at Tucson.

The conference schedule starts "for keeps" one week later when SMU visits Rice on Sept. 13 at Rice Stadium to highlight a busy, seven-contest weekend of league and non-SWC contests.

The Sept. 6 schedule with last year's team records in parentheses and notes of interest:

BAYLOR (9-3, 6-2 in SWC) at Wyoming (3-8), 3 pm — Baylor Head Coach Grant Teaff begins his 15th season with the Bears with an 81-73-5 mark at that location and career record of 123-119-7 for his 23 college head coaching campaigns.

Wyoming Head Coach Dennis Erickson starts his first campaign with the Cowboys after turning around the University of Idaho program with a 32-15 mark over the past four seasons. That includes a 9-3 record by the 1985 Vandals before Erickson succeeded Al Kincaid as head coach.

SWC teams are 4-2 historically in football against Wyoming. Baylor holds a 2-1 series edge after beating the Cowboys 39-18 in Waco in 1985. Senior quarterback Cody Carlson of San Antonio keys a quick-striking Baylor attack. Last year he was eighth in the SWC in passing efficiency with a 104.8 rating while he connected on 61 of 127 aerials for 844 yards and four touchdowns in 10 games played. He was also seventh in the league in total offense with a 97.1 yards per game average.

LAMAR (3-8) at RICE (3-8, 2-6 in SWC), 8 p.m. — A battle of intrastate Texas clubs takes place as the Houston-based Owls host the Beaumont-based Cardinals at Rice Stadium ... Rice is seeking to start off the Head Coach Jerry Berndt era on a positive note with its first season-opening win since 1977 when the Owls routed Idaho 31-10 at Houston. Berndt was 5-0 in season and home openers at Penn. Rice is 23-13 in home openers at Rice Stadium. Berndt enters his Rice debut with a 38-27-2 head coaching record at DePauw (two seasons) and the University of Pennsylvania (four campaigns). He takes over for Watson Brown, who departed for the Vanderbilt Commodores after a 3-8 record in 1985 at RU.

Ironically, Lamar is under the guidance of Head Coach Ray Alborn, who had a 13-53-0 mark for six years as head coach of the Owls' program from 1978-83. Last year the Owls scored a 29-28 win over the Cardinals in the second meeting of the universities. Rice also won the initial game with Lamar 36-19 in 1984.

The last games of '85: Houston edged Rice 24-20 while McNeese State defeated the Cardinals 28-7. Rice topped its football victory total (two) of the previous three seasons last autumn with three wins over Lamar, TCU (34-27), and Texas Tech (29-27). Owls' punter Steve Kidd is the nation's leading returning punter with last year's 45.9 average.

KANSAS STATE (1-0) at TEXAS TECH (4-7, 1-7 in SWC), 8 p.m. — In another interconference matchup of the SWC and Big 8 the Wildcats are the visitors for Coach David McWilliams' first game at the helm of the Red Raiders at Jones Stadium in Lubbock.

McWilliams, who starred at linebacker for the University of Texas and then worked as an assistant coach for the Longhorns for the past 16 seasons, including 14 bowl teams under Head Coaches Darrell Royal and Fred Akers, replaces Jerry Moore for the Red Raiders. McWilliams inherits a Red Raider team which was 4-7 a year ago.

Kansas State is under the direction of Stan Parrish, who owns a 56-11-2 mark in eight seasons as a head coach. The Wildcats opened the 1986 season with a 35-7 victory over Western Illinois last week in Manhattan, Kan. This marks the first of two appearances by the Wildcats against SWC opposition as Kansas State travels to TCU on Sept. 20. Tech has several players who are active and figure into the SWC record book.

Sophomore quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver of Boyd accumulated a conference-record 422 yards passing in his first college start to pace Tech to a 63-7 win over TCU last Nov. 9 while his 398 yards ot total offense represented the fifth-highest SWC figure in SWC history. Tolliver also tied for second place in single-game touchdown passes with five against the Horned Frogs.

HOUSTON (4-7, 3-5 in SWC) at ARIZONA (8-3-1), 9:30 p.m. — The Cougars begin an historic 25th season under the dean of SWC head coaches, Bill Yeoman. Yeoman carries a 159-98-8 mark into his silver anniversary campaign with the Cougars, who have won outright or shared the SWC title four times since joining the conference in 1976.

He is opposing an equally-formidable sideline foe in Arizona coach Larry Smith, who is 57-52-3 for 10 campaigns as a head coach. Last year Smith guided the Wildcats, who are opening at Arizona Stadium in Tucson, to an 8-3-1 mark with a season-ending 13-13 tie with Georgia in the Sun Bowl.

Houston closed out 1985 on an upnote with back-to-back league wins over Texas Tech 17-16 and Rice 24-20.

The Cougars sport one of the top quarterbacks in a league loaded with quarterback talent in the person of Gerald Landry. Landry is already seventh on the SWC's career total offense list with 5,128 yards and a whole season ahead of him. The senior from Beaumont also ranks 13th in SWC passing annals with 4,084 yards

Here are capsules on the Lone Star Conference college football teams beginning play this week:

ANGELO STATE (1-0) at NORTHERN ARIZONA (0-0), 8 p.m. , Saturday, Skydome (15,300), Flagstaff. 2nd straight NCAA Division I opponent for Rams. Lumberjacks are Division I-AA members of Big Sky Conference. ASU got off to big start last weekend with 20-14 win over NCAA Division I member New Mexico State. Sr QB Ned Cox threw 17-yd pass to soph SE Chad Peterson on final play of 3rd quarter for winning TD after 51-yd interception return for TD by soph LB Henry Alsbrooks had erased 14-7 NMsU halftime lead. Big linemen Pierce Holt and Doyle Weishuhn lead coach Jerry Vandergriff's Ram defense. ASU ranked 9th in NCAA Division II in preseason poll after 7-4 season in 1985. 'Jacks were 3-8 last yr. Top players include QB Craig Austin, who threw for 1,752 yds, and all-league DB George Durate, who had nine interceptions in 1985. Radio: KTXE-FM, San Angelo.

LIVINGSTON (0-0) at EAST TEXAS STATE (0-0), 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Memorial Stadium (15,000), Commerce. Lions return 14 starters from 5-5 team for rookie coach Eddie Vowell. Jr QB Mike Trigg leads offense with speed at WR thanks to letterman Bobby Bankston and transfer Joseph Hopkins. Bankston is 1986 NCAA Division II 100-meter champ. Sr DT Reggie Rogers is back after missing most of 1985 with injuries, and veterans Brian Michelson, Stacy Williams, Daven Overstreet and Vincent Stowers return in secondary. Tigers were 6-5 in 1985 (4-4 for 4th in Gulf South Conference) in coach Sam McCorkle's first yr. Radio: KETR, Commerce.

NORTHERN COLORADO (0-0) at ABILENE CHRISTIAN (0-0), 7:30 p.m., Saturday, Shotwell Stadium (15,000), Abilene. Wildcats ranked 12th in NCAA Division II preseason poll with 12 starters back. Jr QB Rex Lamberti, who threw for 3,010 yds and 24 TDs last season, has 3 sr WRs to throw to (honorable mention all-America Reggie McGowan, Arthur Culpepper and swift Arthur Williams). ACU coacl John Payne hopes improved running game will raise 5-4-2 record from last yr. Top defenders include E Mark McIntyre, LBs Monte Richburg and Steven Ates, and DBs Theoplis Hickman and Jesse Bonner. UNC was 2-9 in 1985 in coach Ron Simonson's first yr, but sr QB Loren Snyder returns after throwing for 2,384 yds. Two transfers, TB Jeff Knabenshue of Colorado and TE Greg Finkbonner of Puget Sound, add talent to offense. Defenders with all-league honors include G Mel Garner and DB Vaughn Lechman. Radio: KACU-FM, Abilene; KFKA, Greeley, Colo.

TEXAS SOUTHERN (0-0) at TEXAS A&I (0-0), 7:30 p.m., Saturday, Javelina Stadium (15,000), Kingsville. Defending champs favored to repeat in LSC poll under coach Ron Harms. A&I returns 15 starters from 8-3 team which was undefeated at 5-0 in league play. Jr DB Rickey Collins leads defense with all-LSC honors. Soph RB Heath Sherman led league in rushing with 1,111 yds and was voted LSC Freshman of Year. Jr QB Darcy Davis also back to direct offensive attack. Javelinas ranked 3rd in NCAA Division II pre-season poll. Texas Southern won only 1 of 11 games in 1985 under coach Lionel Taylor. Jr Sean Cook takes over at QB with talented receiver Darrell Colbert available.

TROY STATE (0-0) at WEST TEXAS STATE (0-0), 7:30 p.m., Saturday, Kimbrough Stadium (20,000), Canyon. One of top NCAA Division II games in nation this weekend. Both ranked in top 20 in Football News and Sports Illustrated. Buffaloes, newest LSC member, ranked 2nd in both polls, and Troy State is 7th in Sports Illustrated and 14th in Football News. Buffs move to LSC after 6-3-1 season in 1985 as NCAA Division I-AA member of Missouri Valley. Sr QB Tod Mayfield threw for 3,432 yds and 21 TDs in 1985, most of them to WR Stan Carraway, who also returns in 1986. Sr LB Anthony Miller leads WTSU defense for coach Bill Kelly. Troy State, 1984 NCAA Division II national champion, was 6-4 last season. WTSU coaches must plan defense against wishbone for first time. Radio: KIXZ, Amarillo.

WESTERN NEW MEXICO (0-0) at EASTERN NEW MEXICO (0-0), 8:30 p.m., Saturday, Greyhound Stadium (5,300), Portales. Greyhounds were 5-5 in 1985 in 1st yr in LSC with 3-2 league mark to tie Angelo State for runner-up. ENMU looking for replacement for league passing leader QB Herman Evans, but RBs Rufus Smith, Eric Craig and Charles Mercer should improve coach Don Carthel's running game. Jr LB Cecil Jackson and sr DB Mike Meeks return to lead defense, tops in the LSC against the pass. Mustangs were 3-7 last yr with 11 starters back. WNMU finished 7th in Rocky Mountain Conference with 2-5 mark.

Septien breathing easier now

IRVING (AP) — Rafael Septien says he wasn't sure until the last minute that his job as Dallas Cowboys kicker was secure.

On Monday the Cowboys released rookie kicke Max Zendejas, who had been given the opportunity to compete head-to-head against Septien.

"I knew I was healthy again, but I didn't know if they were convinced," said Septien, who had a back injury. "The way they were playing it, I was insecure."

Zendejas did all the kicking in the Cowboys exhibition game against Pittsburgh and again in Saturday's game against the Houston Oilers until the final 53-yard kick.

"I was getting depressed during the (Houston) game because I wanted to play," Septien said.

"All the first team was in there and I wasn't. I thought the coaches knew that I had done a good job this summer, but then again, they could have been thinking that this was my 10th year in the league and that maybe I would get hurt again like in the playoffs last year," he said.

"But Max did not perform to the caliber that they expected, and I think that helped me to stay here," Septien said. "If he had kicked better, I don't know what would have happened."

Zendejas, who returned to Arizona after his release, said he wasn't surprised at the outcome.

"No matter what, I felt they were gong to go with him. I think Tom (Landry) saw that Septien's back was all right and that, supposedly, he's able to kick this year," said Zendejas, a fourth-round draft pick.

He said he was faced with two challenges — "beating him out and doing good. Things just didn't go my way." Zendejas said the Cowboys are a difficult team to break into and added that he hopes to hear from the New York Giants.

Septien's not getting overconfident.

"They can release you at any time," he said.

Pitt's new boss has rough start

Panther tradition adds to coaching pressures

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

The cover of the University of Pittsburgh media guide shows Mike Gottfried, the new football coach, standing in front of the Pitt Stadium wall which lists the Panthers' national championship years — 1915, 1916, 1918, 1929, 1931, 1934, 1936, 1937, 1976.

It also carries this quote from Gottfried: "I love the tradition here."

Besides the national championships, the tradition includes a Heisman Trophy winner (Tony Dorsett, 1976), an Outland Trophy winner (Mark May, 1980), a Lombardi Award winner (Hugh Green, 1980) ... and 29 head coaches in 97 years.

Some famous names have coached at Pitt — Pop Warner, Jock Sutherland, Clark Shaughnessy, Wes Fesler, Len Casanova, Tom Hamilton, Red Dawson, John Michelosen, Johnny Majors, Jackie Sherrill.

But only Sutherland and Michelosen lasted more than nine years, and in one stretch Pitt had six coaches in seven years — Walter Milligan in 1949, Casanova in 1950, Hamilton in 1951, Dawson in 1952 and 1953, Dawson and Hamilton in 1954, Michelosen in 1955.

Between Sutherland's last year (1938) and Michelosen's first (1955), the Panthers went through seven coaches, including Hamilton twice. Take away the 26 years for Sutherland (15) and Michelosen (11) and Pitt has had 27 coaches in 71 years, which means those 27 lasted an average of 2.7 years.

Majors took over in 1973 and turned things around after three years of 3-27 under Dave Hart and four of 13-29 under Carl DePasqua. Majors was 33-13-1 in four years, Sherrill, who took over when Major went to Tennessee, was 50-9-1 in five and Foge Fazio, who succeeded Sherrill when he went to Texas A&M, was 17-6-1 in his first two seasons. Fazio's last two years, however, were 8-12-2 and cost him his job.

GOTTFRIED, NOTED as an innovative offensive coach, left Kansas to take the Pitt job. His debut Monday night, a 10-7 loss to three-time Atlantic Coast Conference champion Maryland, was disappointing but promising.

"It's a good, sound base, good tradition," he said. "I'm pleased with the players I have, I really am. When you lose for a couple of years I think your confidence is eaten a little bit. We just need to get a win under our belt.

"I still have the same assessment as I had when I came in. I knew we were a little thin depthwise at some spots. But you take this ballgame and just a couple or three or four plays and it changes around and we're standing here a little different.

"Success breeds success. When you lose, sometimes it breeds a losing tendency. I couldn't fault them (the players) one bit. They played hard, they deserved a better fate, they didn't get it. We came up short, we got beat by a better football team. That's the way you have to look at it.

"But the biggest thing is the recruiting area you have here locally. We've got to be able to keep the good players home (Maryland's Dan Plocki, who kicked the winning field goal with 2:06 remaining Monday night, is from the Pittsburgh area).

"There's tradition to build on here. It slips, and you get a couple of years where you lose, and your confidence is shaken a little bit. You only build confidence one way, and that's to win. What we have to do is take all the good things that happened and throw all the bad ones out and say, hey, let's go to the next ballgame.

"I think there's a lot of positives — the fact that we played hard, played with a lot of enthusiasm, played together. We just came up short on a couple of things."

The good things included 347 yards of offense — "That's not bad," Gottfried said — and a defense that held Maryland to 48 yards in the first half.

The bad things included just seven points — "That isn't very good," Gottfried said — three missed field goals, including a 29-yard chip shot, and the failure to score in the first half despite a 184-48 advantage in total offense and possession time of 21:42 to Maryland's 8:18.

"I thought we played well," Gottfried said. "We just didn't get it done. I feel very badly about that. We had a chance to win. We just missed a lot of scoring opportunities early.

"You know that when you don't capitalize on scoring opportunities it has a chance to come back and haunt you. But yet at halftime I felt like we had their defense on the field most of the time so that we would have a chance to wear them down a little bit in the second half. But in the second half our defense stayed on the field too long so it was kind of a reversal of halves.

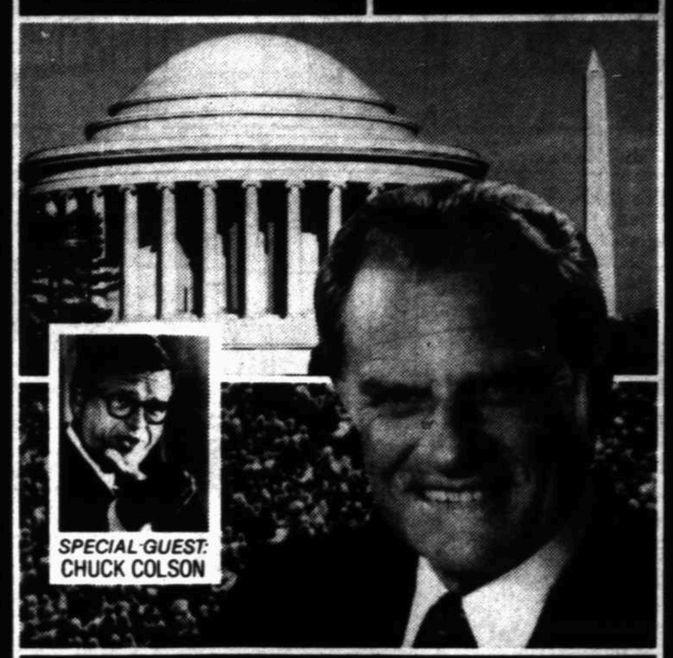

"You've still got to find ways to win. The thing I talked to them about after the ballgame is how they got a real taste of adversity early. I still think we've got a chance to be a pretty good ballclub. But we've got to find ways to win. Just like there at the end, when we knotted it 7-7 with 5:12 to go, that's when you've got to find a way to win.

"The way I'm going to approach this game is look at all the good things that happened and separate the bad things and just say, hey, if we did this a little bit better we'd have won this game. There were about a half-dozen plays that if they go the other way we're sitting here as winners. Instead, they go the wrong way and we lose."

GOTTFRIED TOOK the loss hard. And on Tuesday the Pittsburgh papers hit him with headline words like "familiar" and "reminiscent," alluding to last year when the Panthers were held to a touchdown or less in five of their 11 games.

"It's a tough loss, but there's a long season ahead of us," he said. "That's why I said no one game makes or breaks the year."

Pastorini hot on NHRA track

NEW YORK (AP) — After retirement, NFL quarterbacks usually slow down, take up announcing or do beer commercials. Not Dan Pastorini. He has moved into an office that goes 260 mph.

Pastorini, who played with four teams in 13 years, starting with the Houston Oilers and ending in 1983 after the second of two seasons with the Philadelphia Eagles, has been racing his top-fuel dragster since May 1985.

After an average first season where he struggled to be respected more than any rookie, Pastorini has qualified in all but one of the National Hot Rod Association's national events, won his first national, the Southern Nationals, and is currently fifth in the NHRA's Winston Cup point standings.

Last weekend, Pastorini qualified seventh in the fastest NHRA field of 16 in history with a run of 5.54 seconds (260.86 mph) at the U.S. Nationals in Indianapolis before losing to Dick LaHaie in the quarterfinals.

"At first, people were very skeptical," Pastorini said of his beginning in drag racing. "I think my name hurt me more than it helped. They thought it was a publicity stunt."

Just as in the pro football when first-year players are greeted with bone-crushing welcomes from 280-pound veteran defensive linemen, Pastorini had a similar start in drag racing at the 1985 SummerNationals at Englishtown, N.J.

"I think they were trying to discourage me," the 39-year-old Pastorini said. "They put me up against (two-time and defending champion and current top fuel points leader Don) Garlits every time in qualifying. He was running 5.4s (elapsed time in seconds for a quarter mile), and the best I had every done was 5.63. I saw his chutes open a lot that day."

At this year's Gator Nationals in Gainesville, Fla., Pastorini was alongside Garlits when the "Big Daddy" of drag racing topped a qualifying run in 272 mph, the first time anyone had broken the 270 mph barrier.

"Garlits could make a bathtub go 270," Pastorini marveled.

Pastorini has been running in fellow driver Gene Snow's 4-year-old car, which he purchased with a trailer and other accessories for $250,000 and called the "Quarterback Sneak."

To demonstrate his popularity and success this season, Pastorini attracted the sponsorship of Coor's beer just before last weekend's U.S. Nationals and renamed his car the "Coor's Light Bullet."

Without sponsorship, Pastorini had been driving his trailer, his four-man crew and wife Beverly to match races all over the country.

"Nobody's taking care of me like they did when I was in football, except my wife," Pastorini said.

Pastorini, who played most of his career with the Oilers before being traded to the Raiders in 1980 for Kenny Stabler, suffered a broken leg five games into the 1980 season and was replaced by Jim Plunkett, who took the Raiders to a Super Bowl victory over the Eagles.

From there he bounced to the Los Angeles Rams and to the Eagles and said he grew tired of football.

Pastorini said his interest in drag racing is not new.

"Whenever we were on the road, I used to go the track and hang out and talk to the drivers," he said. "When I got out (of football), a couple of my friends, Kenny Bernstein (defending champion and current funny car points leader) and a couple others helped me get started. I've had a couple of my old teammates come out and see me."

Among them were recently retired running back Earl Campbell and former Oilers and New Orleans Saints coach Bum Phillips.

"Bum Phillips used to say 'If they have to use parachutes to stop 'em, doesn't seem like a safe way to drive.' But then I told him he out to put parachutes on some of the defensive lineman that were chasing me."

Pastorini's new career has not been without its setbacks. Earlier this year at the same Gator Nationals where he ran against Garlits and his 272 mph run, Pastorini's engine exploded in fire and blew off the rear tires.

"I was overweight for years, so . . .

My Friends Were Amazed When I Lost 46 Lbs. In A Few Short Weeks!"

Elizabeth Jordan was a "fad diet junky." She tried everything she could find - the diets, the clinics, the drugstore drugs. Some of them even seemed to work - but never for long.

"Oh sure, I lost a few pounds here and there, but I always gained them right back. At one point I began to feel like an oversized grapefruit."

Then Elizabeth made a discovery that was to change her life and appearance forever. She explains, "One day I saw an article in my newspaper about a miracle new diet product called FIBRAGEN. I thought, "Well, it probably won't work, but the manufacturer was willing to send it C.O.D. and offered a money-back guarantee as well, so I decided to try it anyway. To my amazement and delight the pounds began to drop away from the very first day. Since I had been overweight for 10 years my friends could hardly believe their eyes when they saw me lose 46 pounds in a few short weeks!

What is this incredible product and why did it work so astonishingly well for Elizabeth when everything else had failed? It's an all natural diet pill which was developed based upon the results of the latest nutritional and dietary research. First, FIBRAGEN contains a natural plant extract that has been awarded a patent for weight loss by the U.S. Patent Authorities. In the Patent Study, with no dietary changes, the average weight loss for women over a fifteen week period was 37.5 lbs. and for men 42.5 lbs. The least amount of weight loss for anyone tested was 33 lbs. Second, FIBRAGEN is made from a specially developed blend of dietary fiber which was found to be "remarkable" in speeding weight loss in a "double blind" Scandinavian study. Upon review of the FIBRAGEN formula, Dr. J.B. Dorius of the Institute for Diet Research commented, "The importance of dietary fiber is one of the most significant discoveries in the treatment of obesity in this century. FIBRAGEN is the finest combination of fibers I have encountered in any weight loss product - particularly beneficial for promoting a natural feeling of fullness, preventing overeating and allowing the digestive tract to absorb only those nutrients actually needed by the body - a healthy and sure way to lose weight." Third, FIBRAGEN contains natural Papaya extract which aids effective digestion. And, finally, FIBRAGEN provides 100% of the daily vitamins recommended by the U.S. Government. (The vitamins in this product alone are worth the purchase price.)

EXTRAORDINARY GUARANTEE

Elizabeth has achieved nothing less than a new life. Not only does she look good but she feels great. Because weight loss with FIBRAGEN is guaranteed, the manufacturers make this remarkable offer - one they wouldn't dare make if there were a single doubt. Place your order now and try FIBRAGEN as directed for 30 days. If you are not entirely satisfied simply return the empty container for a prompt refund of your purchase price - no questions asked. Is that fair? Try asking Jack LaLanne or Scarsdale or any of the other diet people for that kind of assurance. Not one of them will do it. FIBRAGEN will!

You can order a 30-day supply of these remarkable pills for $19.95 or a 60-day supply for $34.95 (plus $2.50 for postage and handling).

To order simply call FIBRAGEN, 24 hours a day 7 days a week - TOLL FREE 1-800-453-2100 and use your VISA or MasterCard. Or if you prefer FIBRAGEN will accept your C.O.D. order right over the phone! But please don't wait. Order today. You won't risk a thing. If you don't lose those unwanted pounds you'll get a full refund of your purchase price. One warning though, after trying FIBRAGEN you may need a seamstress to take in your clothes or better yet make you a whole new wardrobe!

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You may travel a lot. Combine business with pleasure when possible. Do not let others rush you into making decisions. Having a well-thought out plan is essential. Keep a confidence and your position in a large company will improve. New, more interesting job opportunities open up. Family ties grow stronger.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Mitzi Gaynor, actor Dick York, New York Times food columnist Craig Claiborne, Sen. Thomas Eagleton (D.-Mo.), Henry Ford II, Toronto pitcher Doyle Alexander, the Kansas City Royals' Frank White, Chicago White Sox executive Ken "Hawk" Harrelson, golf's Tom Watson, commentator Paul Harvey and Milwaukee outfielder Paul Householder.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An unexpected windfall enables you to move ahead with a pet project. Stifle an urge to say too much. Shopping bargains abound but may not be what you need. Business travel is favored.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A decision cannot be reached in a hurry. Weigh the pros and cons very carefully before deciding on a positive course of action. An old friend helps you save a bundle of money.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Morning hours may be marked by a lack of activity. Get important paperwork out of the way. Your career or love life should have an added glow now.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not neglect your creative or artistic talents. This is a good time to approach an influential person for a personal favor or loan. Home repairs and renovation boost the value of your property.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Family members are unusually receptive to your ideas. Financial affairs must be kept free from risk. Be careful not to take sides in a friend's domestic problems. A quarrel is soon forgotten.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Try not to be pushy. Partner or mate is willing to lend a helping hand. Make changes at home or work that will increase your comfort. Comparison shoppers find terrific bargains.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Give a personal problem top priority early today. Do not bottle up your true feelings. You can increase your property's value. Romance looks great for singles. You seem ready to make a commitment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A good day to deal with overdue correspondence. A business partnership will pay off handsomely. Negotiate big deals face-to-face to maximize profits. Delegate less important responsibilities.

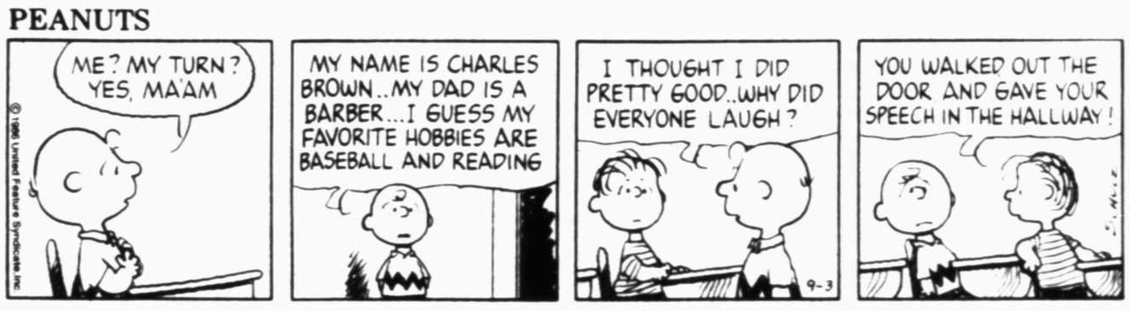

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Work conditions are optimal, enabling you to concentrate on solving complex problems. Your associates prove very cooperative. Those in sales can set a new record.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may have to choose between two good friends. Do nothing in haste. A health club could help you get in shape again. Think about taking some time off from work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Others may see you as a loner. You discover creative talents you did not know you had! A chance encounter could lead to an exciting, new relationship.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Shyness works in your favor when negotiating a financial agreement. A business decision should work to your advantage in the long term.

Dear Charlie:

I had an unexpected honor conferred on me recently: I was selected to represented France, my adopted home, in the Europa Cup. I only wish we had done better—we finished third as Denmark won. Still, I enjoyed myself and have some hands for you.

I ended up playing in four hearts on this one. With the queen in the suit opened by my partner, Michel Lebel, I didn't even think about passing his limit raise of three hearts.

West led the jack of spades, won in dummy perforce. I led a diamond to my queen, which held, and continued with a trump to the jack and queen, and that won. East won the king of diamonds with the ace and exited with the suit. I discarded a club from hand and won on the table with the ten. When East followed to the jack of diamonds, I knew it was safe to sluff my remaining club loser — West would either have to discard or ruff with the ace of trumps. After cashing the ace of clubs, I ruffed two spades in dummy using a club ruff as the entry. I had nine tricks in the bag, and this was the position:

The combined K-10 holding in trumps was equal to East's ace, so I was assured of my 10th trick no matter what I chose to play from dummy. In the other room they stopped in three hearts, so we gained a useful pickup.

As ever,
Omar

Ex-astronaut barred from north face of mountain in quest of ark

KARS, Turkey (AP) — Former U.S. astronaut James Irwin, the eighth man to walk on the moon, has been barred from climbing the northern face of Mount Ararat in his quest to find Noah's ark, a news agency says.

The independent Hurriyet agency said the governor of Kars province issued the order on Tuesday, but allowed Irwin and his team to climb the mountain's southern face.

Irwin and his team were briefly detained in Erzurum on Saturday for flying over the gorge and filming the area. They were released after Turkey's police chief notified local authorities that the team had permission to do that.

NEW YORK (AP) — Susan Akin won't be using her Miss America scholarships to return to the University of Mississippi, but has been taking vocal, piano and acting lessons and plans to seek her fortune in show business.

"That's what I've done this year," she told a news conference Tuesday. "I don't care if it's an autograph session, you're entertaining people."

Miss Aiken, 22, a blue-eyed blonde from Meridian, Miss., will surrender her crown Sept. 13 to a new Miss America in Atlantic City. It's a title, she said, to which any girl could aspire.

"With a little bit of help, a lot of help, any kind of help she needs, inside and outside, anyone can become Miss America," she said. "There was a time in my life where I didn't think I would ever get a boyfriend I was so ugly, that I wouldn't have friends.

"I wasn't the prettiest girl on that stage last year, and I'm not the prettiest in the United States. There were times during my reign as Miss America I'd wake up and say, 'How on earth?' "

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Artist Roy Tamboli has received a commission to create a life-size bronze statue of former sprinter Wilma Rudolph, the first American woman to win three Olympic gold medals.

Miss Rudolph, 46, a Clarksville native who overcame polio, won her medals at the 1960 Olympics in Rome.

The statue was commissioned by First Tennessee, a bank holding company that plans to place it in a gallery at its corporate headquarters here.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Ruta Lee has persuaded Soviet officials to allow a relative to emigrate, her spokesman said.

Miss Lee received permission last week for an adopted niece, Maryte Kosheta, to come to America after she turns 18 in February, said spokesman Dale Olson. The girl's alcoholic mother is unable to care for her, he said.

Miss Lee, however, was unable to obtain permission for another niece and a nephew, whose parents have been jailed in the Soviet republic of Lithuania, to leave, Olson said.

The actress left Aug. 15 for the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius in an attempt to bring back the three teen-agers after being informed about the arrests. The government reportedly has confiscated their home.

The family is pooling its resources to buy back the house so the family will have somewhere to stay when the parents are released, said Olson.

The publicist said Miss Lee called him from London as she was about to board a ship for New York, telling him she hadn't been able to place a call to the United States from her hotel in Vilnius.

The actress has appeared in films such as "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers" and "Funny Face," as well as numerous television films and stage productions.

Gold soars

LONDON (AP) — Led by soaring platinum prices, gold rose about $15 a troy ounce today in hectic European trading, following advances made late Tuesday in New York.

The U.S. dollar also strengthened.

"Gold is very much influenced by platinum, which has been rising rapidly," said Alan Baker, dealing director for bullion traders Sharps Pixley. The turmoil in South Africa, the world's major platinum producer, had fueled "the fear that that supply could dry up if something happens down there," he said.

Platinum rose from a fixing of $640 a troy ounce Tuesday in London to a bidding range of $668 to $672 an ounce early today.

In Zurich, the bid price for gold was $407.50 a troy ounce, up from $392.50 late Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid of $405.50 an ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $392.00, and later hit a bidding range of $408 to $410 an ounce. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $407.20.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $13.69 to close at a bid of $406.12 an ounce, after bidding went as high as $411.50 in early trading.

The dollar was mostly stronger in Europe and Japan in the wake of a sharp drop in U.S. bond prices, dealers said.

They said the drop lessened the likelihood of another U.S. interest rate reduction. The higher the interest rate, the more attractive the dollar looks as an investment because its yield is higher.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar today rose slightly against the yen for the second consecutive day, closing at 154.55 yen, up 0.35. Later, in London, it was quoted at 154.70 yen.

In London, the British pound was quoted unchanged at $1.4925.

Dow tumbles

NEW YORK — After a quiet start, stocks fell sharply Tuesday on the first day back from the long Labor Day weekend, as the market ran headfirst into higher precious metal prices and a number of uncertainties about the economy.

After toying with record levels last week and early Tuesday, stocks succumbed to a complicated chain of events in the financial markets, according to Wall Street experts.

The result was a 27.98-point drop in the Dow Jones industrial average, to 1,870.36. The blue-chip index had been up during the morning, going over 1,907 at one point, which was just shy of the 1,909.03 record close set on July 2.

Tax overhaul could cost oil industry $10 billion

NEW YORK (AP) — The oil industry was able to keep two of its cherished writeoffs in the tax overhaul bill, but insiders say other aspects of the plan will hurt efforts to recover from the collapse of petroleum prices.

Some estimate the proposed revisions could drain at least $10 billion from industry coffers during the next five years, further weakening companies that already are coping with sharply lower margins or struggling to ward off bankruptcy.

Others say, however, that even that projected loss would still rank a distant second to the main problem: the volatility of oil prices, hovering at about half what they were last November.

Whatever happens, energy companies still would benefit from depletion allowances and intangible drilling cost writeoffs retained in the tax bill.

Depletion allowances are tax breaks based on the premise that extraction of oil or natural gas from the ground, while providing a potential profit, also represent losses of a finite supply.

Intangible drilling costs basically represent costs involved in setting up a well, aside from expenses for equipment, land acquisition and land improvements, such as roads.

Under the new bill, the one-year writeoff for intangibles remains for independent drillers. But major oil companies would have to stretch out 30 percent of the writeoffs over five years, instead of the present 20 percent over three years.

"On those things, we got off all right," said Brendan Quirin, senior economist at Amoco Corp., the nation's fifth largest oil company. "But if you look at the investment tax credit, we didn't do so well."

Current tax rules generally permit a company to charge off 10 percent of the cost of equipment, such as the rig, the steel pipe, the physical parts that make up a well.

This writeoff, a dollar-for-dollar credit applied to the company's income tax bill, is in addition to writeoffs for depreciation, which are allowed on 95 percent of the same investment.

Now, Quirin said, the investment tax credit is "a credit you don't get. It has gone from 100 percent to zero."

"After some rough, quick calculations ... I came up with a five-year number of $5 billion to $6 billion of investment tax credit lost," he said. "It clearly is a hit on the business, if you add in the other changes contemplated under the bill.

"I'd estimate about $10 billion over five years; and that's based on the very strong assumption that the industry is going to be in a profitable position."

Charles J. DiBona, president of the Washington-based American Petroleum Institute, said the trade group also figured the tax bill would cost the industry at least $10 billion over five years — "part coming from energy-specific tax changes and part from the bill's impact on business generally."

He said the group especially was worried that the bill would discourage new exploration, thereby increasing dependence on imported oil.

But Dillard Spriggs, president of Petroleum Analysis Ltd., a New York consulting firm, said he still believed the tax bill would not amount to "a big hurt" to the industry.

Mitchell cuts 290 from oil, realty payroll

From Staff and Wire Reports

The continuing depressed activity levels in both the energy and real estate industries have spurred Mitchell Energy & Development Corp., based in the Houston suburb of The Woodlands, into making its largest single round of personnel cuts so far.

The latest reduction, affecting 290 individuals throughout the company's energy and real estate operations, brings Mitchell's total payroll to 2,500, down from 3,800, 18 months ago.

Reports say at least nine people locally were affected by the most recent layoffs, however, district manager Jack Stanley was unavailable for comment to confirm those reports.

Mitchell spokesman Tony Lentini notes that the latest personnel reductions, along with other cost-cutting measures are expected to save the company $10 million annually in operating expenses. The firm's capital budget for fiscal year 1987 has already been trimmed twice since January — originally from $160 million to $144 million, and more recently to $130 million.

Lentini says that the 1,300-worker reduction in the company's payroll since January 1985 has come from a combination of attrition and voluntary retirements in addition to layoffs.

"Some of the budget cuts were in real estate, but most of the trimming was in oil and gas exploration and production," Lentini said.

"We will drill only the wells we have to," said company chairman George P. Mitchell. "We are now exploring at only 16 percent of our exploration and development capacity."

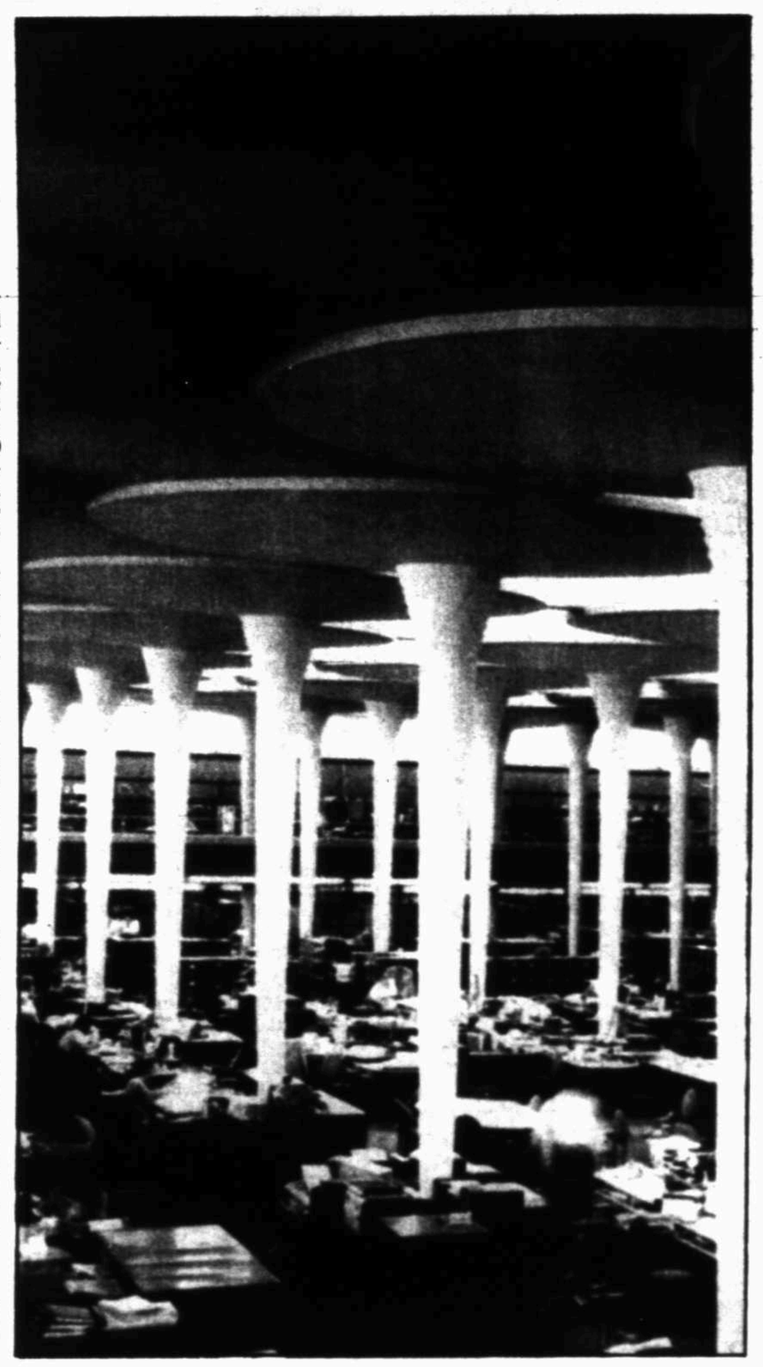

Zero percent financing ready

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (UPI) — American Motors Corp. today topped its Big Three competitors in the buyer-incentive sweepstakes by offering zero percent, two-year financing on most 1986 car and Jeep models.

Joseph E. Cappy, AMC's president and chief executive officer, said the program begins Thursday and will continue through Oct. 8. AMC has been plagued by sluggish car sales for months.

The latest frenzied round of cut-rate financing began last week when General Motors Corp. stunned its competitors by offering 2.9 percent financing on three-year loans.

Ford later matched GM's offer and by the end of the week, Chrysler chimed in with what until Wednesday was a record low 2.4 percent annual percentage rate on two-year loans.

MHCC resolves dispute

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Members of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, MHCC, got some good news regarding a disagreement with the Texas Association of Mexican American Chambers of Commerce at Tuesday's meeting.

MHCC president Roger Robles announced that at the recent TAMACC state convention, members approved two proposals the MHCC was instrumental in introducing.

Earlier in the year, the MHCC had protested a requirement that finalists for state Businessman and Businesswoman of the Year be of Hispanic descent. As a compromise, TAMACC's Awards Committee proposed creating the TAMACC member of the year, which is open to everyone regardless of race, creed or religion, and finalists don't have to

Norway preparing for production cuts

OSLO (UPI) — The Norwegian government said Tuesday it had completed consultations with oil companies operating in its North Sea fields about possible production cuts in support of OPEC's output curb to boost world oil prices.

Oil and Energy Ministry spokesman Egil Helle said the meetings with the six operators in Norway's North Sea fields were over.

Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland's Social Democratic government will now discuss the matter with the parliamentary opposition parties, he said.

The oil companies said they would not undertake voluntary production cutbacks, but observers said that would not stop the government from helping the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to stabilize oil prices at what Norway has termed "a reasonable level."

Oil and Energy Minister Arne Oien reportedly said he would discuss possible Norwegian output cuts with his British counterpart Peter Walker in London Sept. 10, postponing a decision on production levels that had been expected by Thursday.

Helle told reporters Norway would make an announcement in the second half of September before OPEC's next meeting, which is scheduled to open Oct. 6.

Independent North Sea oil producers Britain and Norway have been the prime targets of OPEC's eight-month pricing war.

Unlike Norway, Britain has steadfastly opposed cooperating with OPEC to bolster prices, which had fallen to less than $10 a barrel by late July from an average $28 a barrel last December. Since the OPEC production accord was unveiled early last month, prices have risen by about $5 to the $15-a-barrel range.

On Aug. 26, Brundtland announced her government would consult the oil companies operating in the Norwegian sector of the North Sea before deciding on possible production cuts. The six operators are Mobil, Phillips Petroleum, and Amoco — based in the United States — British Petroleum and Norway's Statoil and Norsk Hydro.

The prime minister said Norway's oil output would not be dropped from the current level of about 900,000 barrels a day but planned production increases could be deferred.

She did not rule out, however, that some oil fields might be asked to lower production.

Norway acted after OPEC agreed Aug. 5 to slash production by nearly 4 million barrels a day for two months beginning Sept. 1 and again urged outside producers to scale back production to help shore up world prices.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Continental makes first Chapter 11 payment

HOUSTON (AP) — Continental Airlines will pay nearly $140 million within 10 days in the first stage of a reorganization plan as the carrier emerges from bankruptcy, a company spokesman said.

The money is the first installment of about $925 million owed to creditors, spokesman Bruce Hicks announced Tuesday.

The remaining debt will be paid within 10 years as part of a reorganization plan approved this summer by a federal judge, he said.

Jurisdiction battle obstacle to Hunt filings

DALLAS — A jurisdictional fight heated up Tuesday over whether the huge Hunt bankruptcy case should be heard in New Orleans or Dallas.

Bankruptcy petitions for Placid Oil and two other Hunt entities were filed Friday in New Orleans, an action that might have violated a previous order by the Dallas judge hearing the Hunts' $15 billion in lawsuits against 23 banks.

Homes, government spur construction spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction spending climbed 0.5 percent in July, the best showing since April, as strength in single-family homes and government projects offset declines in office buildings and apartment units, the government said.

A Commerce Department report Tuesday said that the government and private companies were building at an annual rate of $376.7 billion in July.

Typical existing home now more affordable

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $200 drop in the median price of existing homes in July meant that more than half of American families could afford to purchase an average home during that month, according to a trade association.

The National Association of Realtors said Tuesday that its monthly index of housing affordibility showed that a family with an income of $28,425 — $314 less than the median family income — could qualify for a mortgage on a typical existing home.

BUSINESS SCENE

Workshop set on bidding for city contracts

By MELLA McEWEN

The Eastside Economic Development Task Force and the City of Midland is co-sponsoring a seminar to show local small businesses how to bid on Midland city contracts.

The seminar is set for Sept. 11 at Casa de Amigos, 1101 E. Garden Lane, from 7 to 9 p.m. Those attending will learn what is open for bid through the City of Midland, what opportunities there are for minority and women-owned businesses, where to go to find out what is up for bid and how to obtain the bid documents, how to complete the bid documents, what the bonding and insurance requirements are, and how to be a subcontractor to a primary contractor.

Also, forms will be available to register to be on the city's procurement computer file, and interested business owners can meet the city's materials manager/purchasing agent and department heads that are a part of the bidding process.

The seminar is free. For further information, call 686-0747.

Midland Park Mall welcomes its newest tenant, THE MULBERRY BUSH, a gift shop located near J.C. Penneys. Midlander Jeff Adkins will manage the store.

The store's main lines are sculptures by Dr. Tom Clark, gourmet foods, Los Angeles pottery, and lots of wire wear and potpourri.

According to owner Susan Waid, Dr. Clark's limited edition figurines, made of pecan shells and hand painted, include gones, wood sprites and mountain people. And the gourmet foods include Tex-Mex mixes, jellies, preserves and spiced teas.

Waid reports that the store was mobbed Monday, its first day of business.

The newest addition to Westwood Village, Illinois and Midland Drive, is UP YOUR ALLEY, a mens and womens casual wear shop.

According to co-owner Scott Baker, the store has a wide selection men and women's clothing, including brands such as Levis, Chic and Organically Grown. The store also carries accessories such as costume jewelry, scarves and wraps. "We carry some fun things, like reversible raincoats."

However, Baker pointed out, the store also has a full line of working women's clothing. "We don't cater to the juniors and misses." He also noted that a line of dresses, including labels such as Liz Claiborne will be arriving by the end of October.

Baker reports that the store had a "Sneak Preview" late last week, and had an excellent response. Baker, 22, owns the store with his wife, Billie, 21.

HAPPY DAYS DOUGHNUTS has opened at 318 N. Midland Drive, across the street from M System.

The store has a full line of yeast and cake doughnuts, cinnamon rolls, fried pies and buttermilk sticks, also known as coffee sticks, according to co-owner Eddy Willmon. The store will also deliver orders of 5 dozen doughnuts to businesses . The store also has free refills on coffee, and a sitting area. Customers can also call in custom orders for such items as doughnuts with a special icing or glaze, but Willmon asks for a day's notice.

Hours are from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and 6 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Sundays. Willmon and his partner, John Ellis, do the baking themselves.

New Orleans based HOWARD WEIL FINANCIAL CORP., which has an office in Midland, and Legg Mason, Inc. of Baltimore have announced an agreement in principle to combine the two companies.

Under the agreement, Howard Weil would become a subsidiary of Legg Mason. Howard Weil has over 500 employees in 28 branches, predominantly in the mid-south. Legg Mason has 38 offices in 10 states and the District of Columbia.

O.W. Story of Midland of Friendly Chrysler-Plymouth has earned a national "Award for Excellence" from Chrysler Motors, according to Tom Pappert, vice president - U.S. automotive sales.

This is the first year Story has been honored for outstanding performance in the management of his dealership. Pappert said five factors contributing to the selection of the award include sales performance, facilities, customer service, administration and community relations.

SHOPSMITH, manufacturer of woodworking tools and accessories, will sponsor a woodworking event Sept. 10 through Sept. 14 at Midland Park Mall.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Bonds' call price will at least be its face value

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have 10 $5,000 municipal bonds, issued in 1980. These are bearer bonds, with interest coupons attached. At each semiannual interest date, I have clipped the coupons and turned them over to my bank, where the interest has been credited to my account.

As scheduled, at the latest interest date, I gave my bank the 10 coupons for $1,875 interest. Two weeks later, my bank returned the 10 coupons and informed me that the bonds had been called for redemption on the previous semiannual interest date. The bank charged the $1,875 to my account.

I have since learned that only four of the 10 bonds were called. I redeposited the coupons from the other six bonds and $1,125 has been credited to my bank account.

You have cautioned owners of bearer bonds to "stay alert" for redemption calls by consulting "called bond record" manuals at big public libraries or "by having your broker or bank do it for you."

I haven't been in a library since high school. I have no broker and do no securities business with my bank. Since I had no way of knowing those four bonds were called, at a $750 loss to me, don't I have any recourse?

A. Nope. Responsibility for keeping track of redemption calls rests with you, as it does with all owners of bearer bonds. You could have checked for calls. It's your misfortune that you didn't and no one's fault but your own.

Doyle

You're not alone in this unhappy situation. Many bearer bond owners make the same mistake. Like you, they end up being stuck. I suggest you obtain and use a library card — one of the handiest things in my wallet.

Your bank or some other institution along the coupon-cashing line goofed a bit by bouncing back all 10 interest coupons. Coupons from six bonds should have been cashed, with $1,125 credited to your bank account at that time. Only four coupons — from the bonds called for redemption — should have been returned to you.

Now, if you haven't done so already, you should turn in the four called bonds for redemption. That's done by presenting the called bonds to the bond trustee — usually a bank whose name is printed on the bond certificate.

You'll receive the bonds' call price, which will be at least the bonds' face value. On early calls for redemption, the call price often is a bit higher than face value.

Q. My sister owns a $10,000 utility company bond, due to mature on Jan. 1, 2000. She receives interest checks through the mail twice a year. The bond is in her name only. Due to her age, she would like to add my name to the bond certificate, in the hope one of us will be around when the bond matures.

Should it be made out in both names, with right of survivorship? Must an attorney handle this change?

A. Having the bond's registered ownership changed to your sister's name and your name, "as joint tenants with right of survivorship and not as tenants in common," will accomplish what your sister has in mind.

When a security is registered that way, both "tenants" own it. If one of you dies, the other becomes the sole owner.

There's no need to engage a lawyer. Your sister can fill out the assignment form on the back of the bond certificate. Her signature there must be guaranteed by a brokerage firm, commercial bank or trust company.

Then, the bond certificate must be sent to the bond trustee, which will issue a new certificate in both your names. As always, when sending certificates, do it by registered mail, return receipt requested.

Q. Wishing to shelter some of my income from federal income tax, I would like to put the $90,000 I now have in certificates of deposit into municipal bonds as the CDs mature.

Where do I buy municipal bonds? Do they pay interest monthly?

A. You can buy municipals through most securities brokerage firms and many banks. Try your local bank first. Most municipals pay interest semiannually but some do make monthly interest payments.

Youth takes 'go fly kite' literally

DANA POINT, Calif. (AP) — Tell Kent Horner to go fly a kite, and he'll just laugh. After all, he gets paid for doing that.

Horner, 17, a senior at Mission Viejo High School, began the job last Christmas when Jim Bates, owner of Pacific Winds Kite Co., opened a display at the Mission Viejo Mall.

The job led to Horner helping Bates at other malls as well, and a summer job turned into a high-flying career. Horner says he will keep his job at Bates' Dana Point shop on afternoons and weekends during school.

Rival masacaras face off in court

Defendant calls it a smear campaign

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The fight began with 200 women in the shower, but quickly moved to the swimming pool.

It was Maybelline Co. facing off against Noxell Corp., trying to prove that Noxell's new Cover Girl Clean Lash eye makeup is a drip — specifically, that it is not "waterproof" as advertised.

Noxell, the Hunt Valley maker of Noxzema and other skin products, lost the first round last week. A federal judge issued a temporary restraining order directing Noxell to stop advertising and selling Clean Lash "under the present deceptive packaging."

Noxell considers itself the victim of a smear campaign and is appealing the judge's decision by proving that its product is waterproof.

Maybelline, the nation's leading mascara maker, tested its rival's product by marching 200 women into showers and pushing 201 women into a swimming pool — all while wearing the eye makeup.

Noxell cried foul. "No one puts on makeup before taking a shower or going for a swim," said Leslie Schek, a Noxell senior vice president. "That's not exactly reasonable."

"The whole case revolves around what constitutes an appropriate test, and what is the industry's definition of 'waterproof,' Schek said. "We represent the mascara as waterproof under normal conditions."

Mascara, a product used by an estimated 79 percent of American women, highlights the eyes by coloring eyelashes, making them look longer and fuller.

At stake is the $250 million spent annually on mascara in this country, as well as the national reputations of two household names. Maybelline is the nation's largest seller of mass-market decorative cosmetics — color cosmetics sold through drug chains, food and discount stores. Cover Girl is the second largest.

Maybelline, based in Memphis, started testing Clean Lash after noticing the mark it was making on Maybelline's share of the mascara market and fearing that its arch-rival had developed the perfect mascara — one that is both waterproof and which comes off easily with soap and water.

Both companies make several brands of mascara that are either waterproof or washable with soap and water. A waterproof mascara carries the color pigment in an oil base and is not supposed to run or smear when the wearer swims, cries or sweats. The drawback is that an oil-based product can only be removed with an oil-based remover or cold cream. Normally, a washable mascara carries the color in a water base and can be washed off in water, but also runs when the eye gets wet in other ways.

Since introducing the product in February, Cover Girl has promoted Clean Lash heavily as "the waterproof mascara that's soap-and-water washable."

Maybelline saw its share of mascara sales drop from 35 percent in 1985 to 32.2 percent in May and June, and blamed Clean Lash, according to court documents.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration requires cosmetics makers to accurately label a product with a list of its ingredients, but the agency does not monitor product "performance claims," a spokesman said.

So Maybelline hired an independent research firm, Hilltop Research Inc. of Cincinnati, to test its rival's product.

In both the shower and swim tests, subjects applied mascara to their eyelashes, waited 15 minutes, and were examined by a cosmetologist to ensure that the mascara was dry, according to court documents. The cosmetologist testified that she checked carefully for dryness and made the individuals wait as long as an hour to make sure the mascara was dry.

own 51 percent of a business. The committee also proposed the Corporate Member of the Year. Both proposals were approved at TAMACC's state convention in Waco.

Robles also introduced the Chamber's new Executive Director, Elvia Hernandez-Kavanagh, saying "We felt we needed an executive director to really get the Chamber moving. She's here to lend her expertise to all the different committees, so please use her."

Joan Baskin, president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, gave a talk on her and other Midlanders visit to China in June.

In other business, Manuel Carrasco, chairman of the Eastside Economic Development Task Force, reported that the Task Force is meeting with city officials and local bankers to work out details on the Task Force's revolving loan program, which was recently approved by the City Council.

"You spread that across the entire industry and you can come up with figures like that," he said. "But when you bring it down to individual companies, I don't think it's a big blow against them."

Harold Scoggins, general council of the Washington-based Independent Petroleum Association of America, said the nation's 15,000 independent drillers would suffer most from the bill since they typically rely on tax shelters to lure start-up cash from wealthy individuals.

"We're losers," he said.

Rosario Ilacqua, an analyst with the L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin securites firm, disagreed. He said outside investment will continue because "the intangibles are really what moves the outsider to invest in drillers."

Bright, Light

...and just right

Lush fruits, a generous scoop of cool sorbet, and an ample slice of all butter pound cake — and all for fewer than 200 calories a serving. Can it be?

Yes!

What's the secret? Fruit Sorbet, a creamy blend of fresh fruit and juice with no dairy ingredients to add fat, and great-tasting All Butter Pound Cake.

And these surprisingly light snacks and desserts are ready to eat in minutes. So fix a fast fun treat just for you — most of our recipes are single-serving.

Company coming? No problem. Simply multiply all ingredients for something bright and beautiful for guests.

Sunshine Parfait

1 slice, 3/4-inch thick, frozen original all butter pound cake
1 scoop (1/4 cup) Mandarin or peach sorbet
2 strawberries, sliced
Mint sprig, optional

Cut pound cake slice in half to make 2 thin slices. Cut each slice into thirds; place in dessert glass. Add sorbet and sliced strawberries. Garnish with mint, if desired. Serve immediately. Serves 1.

Blossom Dessert

1 slice, 3/4-inch thick, frozen original all butter pound cake
1 scoop (1/4 cup) strawberry sorbet
4 slices plum OR 3 grapes, halved OR 2 small fresh strawberries, halved

Top pound cake slice with sorbet, garnish with plum slices overlapped like petals around sorbet. Serve immediately. Serves 1.

Frosty Fingers

1 slice, 3/4-inch thick, frozen original all butter pound cake
2 small scoops (1 tbsp. each) raspberry or strawberry sorbet
2 small scoops (1 tbsp. each) pineapple or peach sorbet
1 teaspoon angel flaked coconut

Cut pound cake slice in half to make 2 thin slices; top 1 slice with raspberry sorbet. Top with remaining pound cake and pineapple sorbet. Sprinkle with coconut. Cut in 1/2. Serve immediately. Serves 1.

Gift Package

1 slice, 3/4-inch thick, frozen original all butter pound cake
1 scoop (1/4 cup) raspberry sorbet
Long strips orange, lemon or lime zest OR thin apple peel strips

Frost cake slice top and sides with sorbet. Decorate with zest strips to resemble gift package with curled zest bow. Serve immediately. Serves 1.

NOTE: For more servings: Work quickly; place each "package" in freezer to firm while preparing others.

Crowning Glory

4 cubes* of frozen original all butter pound cake
2 small scoops (1 tbsp. each) Mandarin sorbet
2 small scoops (1 tbsp. each) raspberry sorbet
1 fresh strawberry, halved
2 chunks fresh pineapple (3/4-inch each) OR 2 chunks pineapple (from canned chunk pineapple in its own juice)
Mint sprig, optional

Tropical Tartlet

1 slice, 3/4-inch thick, frozen original all butter pound cake
2 small scoops (1 tbsp. each) raspberry sorbet
2 small scoops (1 tbsp. each) Mandarin sorbet
1 small scoop (1 tbsp. each) strawberry sorbet
1 slice kiwi fruit
1/2 strawberry
Mint sprig, optional

Cut pound cake slice in half to make 2 thin slices. Cut both in 1/2 vertically making 4 pieces. Cut 1 piece in half diagonally. Arrange 3 pieces on plate. Top with alternating flavors of sorbet. Stand remaining pound cake pieces behind sorbet. Garnish with fruit and mint, if desired. Serve immediately. Serves 1.

Piña Colada

1 slice, 3/4-inch thick, frozen original all butter pound cake
1 scoop (1/4 cup) pineapple sorbet
1 teaspoon angel flaked coconut
1/8–1/4 teaspoon rum extract
Mint sprig, optional

Top pound cake slice with sorbet. Combine coconut and rum extract; sprinkle on sorbet. Garnish with mint, if desired. Serve immediately. Serves 1.

Peach Shortcake

1 slice, 3/4-inch thick, frozen original all butter pound cake
1 scoop (1/4 cup) peach sorbet
1/4 medium peach, sliced
Mint sprig, optional

Top pound cake with sorbet and peach slices; garnish with mint, if desired. Serve immediately. Serves 1.

Baked Alaska

1 frozen 10 3/4 ounce original all butter pound cake
3/4 cup strawberry sorbet
3/4 cup Mandarin sorbet
3/4 cup raspberry sorbet
1 egg white, room temperature
1/8 teaspoon cream of tartar
1/4 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/4 teaspoon sugar

Slice frozen pound cake lengthwise into 4 layers. Spread 3 cake layers with a different sorbet flavor; restack cake layers. Return to freezer while preparing meringue. Combine egg white with cream of tartar and vanilla; beat until soft peaks form. Gradually add sugar, and continue beating until stiff peaks form. Cut 1 slice, 1 1/2-inches thick, from layered pound cake* Place slice on oven-proof dessert plate. Spread meringue on top and sides of pound cake slice. Place plate on baking sheet in preheated 500°F. oven 2 minutes or until golden. Cut in half; serve immediately. Serves 2.

*Return remaining pound cake, covered, to freezer. OR Use remaining layered pound cake to make more Baked Alaska. OR Cut into 3/4-inch thick slices; serve with 1 tablespoon blueberries or raspberries.

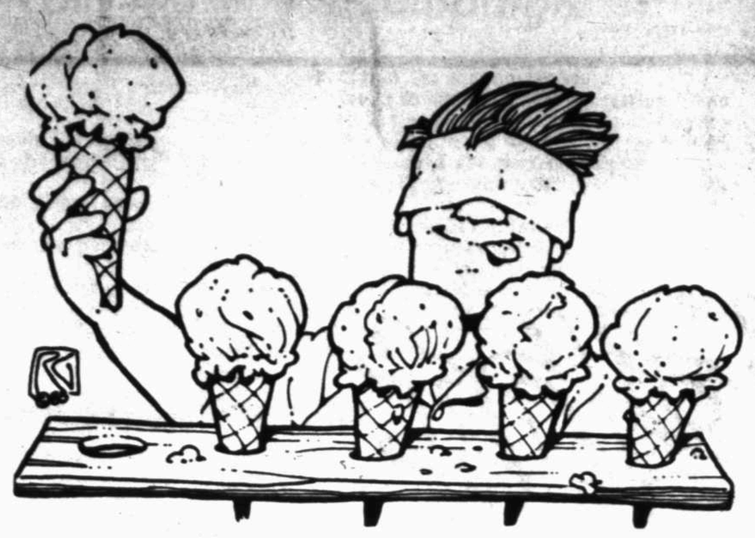

Peach Melba

1 slice, 3/4-inch thick, frozen original all butter pound cake
1 scoop (1/4 cup) peach sorbet
1 1/2–2 tablespoons fresh raspberries OR 1/2 tablespoon thawed frozen raspberries and juice
Mint sprig, optional

Top pound cake slice with sorbet and raspberries; garnish with mint, if desired. Serve immediately. Serves 1.

CNS Graphic

MADISON, Wis. — The mother of the bride-to-be directed an urgent letter to the University of Wisconsin's dairy store. "Having grown up in Madison on ice cream from Babcock Hall," the mother wrote on her daughter's behalf, "she'd like to have some to serve with the cake." Enough for 150 guests shipped to central Illinois in the heat of June, if you please. Such are the burdens of ice cream excellence.

If someone had told Dr. Stephen Moulton Babcock in 1890 that his name would endure for a century, he probably would have attributed the fame to his test for measuring fat in milk. That advance prompted the university to create the nation's first dairy school and, eventually, to name a building for him. Today the Babcock name is most often associated on this Big 10 campus — and throughout the city and state and among nostalgic Wisconsin alumni nationwide — not with an arcane dairy process, but with ice cream.

And not just good ice cream, but creamy, smooth, fresh ice cream scooped in generous portions for 65 cents a single dip and 85 cents a double. Prices are reviewed four times a year to insure that they cover costs but produce no profit.

Babcock Hall rotates about 75 flavors, changing its menu monthly. The old standbys are always available: vanilla, chocolate, strawberry, butter pecan, fudge marble, mint, coffee, chocolate chip and four flavors of sherbet. A recent list of the more exotic rotating flavors included blackberry cordial, black walnut, orange custard chocolate chip, caramel cashew, chocolate cake, almond chocolate, mocha chip, apple strudel, egg custard and chocolate toffee bark.

THE ORANGE custard chocolate chip — which combines chocolate chip candy, egg custard, orange essence and orange coloring — was cited in a recent book on ice creams, "The Very Best: Ice Cream and Where to Find It."

As many as 1,000 gallons of ice cream are produced every weekday in Babcock's gymnasium-sized dairy plant by the university's Food Service Department. Unlike most ice creams the ones produced here are done without a premade ice cream base. Babcock also houses a well-known cheese research institute.

The plant receives about 20,000 pounds of raw milk a day from two university-owned dairies and five private farms, turning it into all types of milk and milk products.

To avoid complaints of unfair competition from commercial ice cream producers, Babcock products are not sold off campus but are distributed at two student unions, in dormitories and at the university hospital.

The heart of Babcock Hall's ice cream consumption is the salesroom, as it is called, in Babcock Hall. The hall itself is a nondescript three-story brick building and its small Formica-dominated salesroom is similarly plain.

On most days, a procession of students and faculty members troop in past old-fashioned dairy cases containing milk, butter, yogurt and cheese to wait in one of three lines — two for cones, one for sundaes and shakes.

A bulletin board has posters boosting the state's dairy industry and displays the many local and national awards Babcock ice creams have garnered. The board also features a neatly typed list of the ingredients in the current month's offerings.

IT MAY seem appropriate that Wisconsin's major university has such an affinity for dairy products in general and ice cream in particular. After all, Wisconsin is the nation's leading producer of milk, butter and cheese. Even its nondairying citizens appear to take that image to heart. Gov. Anthony S. Earl confronted an agitated constituency last year when the state contemplated dropping its 50-year-old "America's Dairyland" license plate motto. Earl averted what he predicted would be an acrimonious debate in the Legislature and declared the motto safe.

While the university's dairy school has been making ice cream since about 1900, it apparently was not until the early 1950's that the products moved toward connoisseur quality. Much of the credit has been given to William C. Winder, who retired in 1981 as a professor of food sciences. In 1949, he began teaching a course called Ice Cream Making and Related Products.

"I didn't think much of the quality of the ice cream they were selling," Winder explained in a recent interview. So he began "an evolutionary path" of changing ice cream mixtures and processing methods. "Even in the latter years, we changed things occasionally," he said. "But we would never grade it down just to sell it cheaper. I suppose that's the legacy I left them."

In his day, Winder and a few colleagues usually did their own taste tests. Today, Thomas Blattner, the dairy plant manager, said, new flavors are run through a "sensory analysis laboratory," a formal process of taste panels comprising graduate students and faculty members.

Regular customers love almost anything chocolate, Blattner said, and there are usually 5,000 or so customers a week (except in the dead of winter, when it drops to about 2,500 a week). But Babcock's patrons are also game for the exotic flavors, he said.

Ice cream makers sport characters

By MINNIE BERNARDINO
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

It was the big rage in kitchen gadgetry last summer. This non-electric, small ice cream maker has captured 30 percent of the total number of ice cream makers sold since then. Today the popular Donvier continues to enjoy its sweet success.

The manufacturers, Nikkal Industries in Virginia Beach, Va., do not seem to sit back and relax, though. Taking advantage of the new baby boom and catering to yuppies' children, who are given precious importance these days, they have just let loose Penguin, Snoopy and Woodstock for the youngsters to enjoy.

Penguin is a 14-ounce blue and white ice cream maker designed to look like a cartoon penguin with a yellow nose, red bow and yellow trim. Charles Schulz's famed Snoopy and Woodstock star in another almost-pint-size ice cream maker that comes in pink or blue with polka dots.

Designed for children ages 6 and up, the new compact ice cream makers work just like the original Donvier. They are uncomplicated, much like a play toy. They use no electricity, no salt, no ice and require but a few turns of the handle in 20 minutes or less to make homemade ice cream. The simple trick comes from Chillfast, a non-toxic refrigerant that is permanently sealed in the walls of the removable aluminum inner tub. When kept in the freezer overnight, the tub becomes cold enough to freeze any liquids that come in contact with it.

One should start with an ice cream mixture that is very cold, recommends ice cream enthusiast Nancy Arum. Author of "Ice Cream & Ices, an Irena Chalmers Cookbook" (Harper & Row; $8.95), Arum, who once owned a 1901 ice cream parlor on Long Island, New York, has come up with a number of frozen treats for the Donvier.

ALMOST ANY type of homemade ice cream and sherbets, sorbets, granitas, ice milks and frozen yogurts ... even cold soups, slushes and cocktail drinks such as margaritas, can be concocted in the ice cream maker, she says.

"I am a purist," she says. "I like to have total control over what goes into the ice cream or any frozen dessert." She adds that anyone can make ice cream at home that is just as good as quality commercial ice cream, starting with cream, sugar, vanilla or other natural flavors.

For youngsters, one of the easiest things to whip up is a slush. Any fruit juice can be thrown into the frozen canister, and after a few stirs of the paddle, presto — you have a delicious icy cold slush. Frozen yogurts are a cinch too. Plain yogurt and any choice of seasonal fruit may be combined and frozen in no time.

When the Donvier ice cream maker first came out, its simplicity in handling may have confused some users who neglected to read directions. One of the frequent causes of failure, particularly in cream mixtures, was when the handle was turned continuously. This did not give the mixture enough time to freeze and harden on the sides. Some mixtures were too soft, caused by too much sugar or too much liqueur or alcohol. Also, failure to completely freeze the aluminum cylinder resulted in a poor product. Other tips on what could have gone wrong are given in the booklet that comes with the product.

Although the larger quart-size Donvier seems to lead in sales, making ice cream in the small new units is also enjoyable. Arum says that it works much faster than the larger cylinders.

Arum says that extra pint- and quart-size cylinders are now available. These can be used to store the ice cream, or larger recipe batches can be prepared and poured into two chilled tubs.

Arum also announced the forthcoming arrival (around September) of Premier Donviers in the colors of black, red, yellow and white. By virtue of their double-walled exteriors, these easy ice cream makers can double as an ice bucket or wine chiller. A half-pint Donvier in white and yellow motif with ice-cream design will likewise arrive to please those who want to make small quantities of any frozen or cold treat. Also expect to find on the store shelves some colorful plastic accessories such as parfait glasses, ice cream bowls, scoops and spoons.

Melon ice makes fresh-tasting ice served in scoops

Associated Press

For even more melon flavor, serve the fresh-tasting ice in scoops atop slices of watermelon.

WATERMELON ICE

1 cup orange juice
¼ cup sugar
2 cups chopped watermelon
½ cup light cream
3 tablespoons lemon juice
Few drops red food coloring (optional)
2 egg whites
¼ cup sugar

In a saucepan combine orange juice and ¼ cup sugar; bring to boiling, stirring to dissolve sugar. Reduce heat; simmer 5 minutes. Cool. In a blender container or food processor bowl combine melon and light cream. Cover and blend or process 1 minute or until smooth. Add lemon juice, food coloring and cooled orange juice mixture. Pour into 12 by 7½ by 2-inch baking dish. Cover and freeze 4 hours or until firm.

Beat egg whites with an electric mixer on medium speed until soft peaks form. Gradually add ¼ cup sugar, beating until stiff peaks form. Break frozen mixture into chunks in chilled mixer bowl. Beat with electric mixer until smooth but not melted. Fold in beaten egg whites. Return to baking dish. Cover and freeze 4 hours or until firm. Let ice stand at room temperature 5 minutes before serving. Makes 6 servings.

More melon ices: For Cantaloupe Ice, substitute chopped cantaloupe for the watermelon and omit food coloring; serve in cantaloupe wedges. For Honeydew Ice, substitute chopped honeydew melon for the watermelon and green food coloring for the red food coloring; serve in honeydew melon wedges.

WHAT'S COOKING

Quiche recipe becomes adventure in pastry shell

By MARY BEA DRUMMOND
Lifestyle Writer

Leaf Faller says she likes to "get wild" when making her favorite dish, Quiche Lorraine.

What started out as a standard recipe for quiche has turned into an adventure in creative thinking for Ms. Faller, an aquatics instructor at the Alamo YMCA.

"I don't hardly follow the recipe any more except for the milk and eggs," said Ms. Faller, a Midland native. "I play around with the recipe and change it up."

The standard Quiche Lorraine recipe includes eggs, Swiss cheese and bacon baked in a pastry shell. But Ms. Faller's version of quiche often includes tomatoes, mushrooms, onions and other chopped vegetables.

"It's more like a stuffed omelet with a pie shell," she said. "It's very versatile and most people, including men, seem to enjoy it. Quiche is as flexible as you are."

Other variations for making quiche include using ham, crab, sausage and various cheeses. Combinations of the ingredients also can be used.

Ms. Faller said she first tried quiche about 10 years ago. It was love at first bite. She hunted up a classic Quiche Lorraine recipe and has been making it regularly ever since.

"This is a great dish for small dinner parties or when you need to make it for a crowd," she said. "The recipe is easily multiplied and freezes very well."

Having a fast, dependable recipe is a must for Ms. Faller. She spends much of time doing volunteer work for the Red Cross as a CPR and water safety instructor. She also is co-chairman of Summertime Girls with Summer Mummers. Her schedule is irregular and often jammed with volunteer commitments.

"Chopping the vegetables and cooking the bacon is the most time-consuming," she said. "But I can usually prepare everything in about 20 minutes."

QUICHE LORRAINE

8 ounces Swiss cheese (grated)
2 tablespoons flour
1½ cups half-and-half cream
4 eggs, slightly beaten
8 slices bacon, cooked and crumbled dash pepper
1 unbaked, deep dish (9 inch) pie shell

Toss cheese with flour. Add creme, eggs, bacon and seasonings. Mix well. Pour into pastry shell and bake at 350 degrees for 40 to 45 minutes or until set. (Can substitute ¾ cup various cheeses, vegetables and meats such as crab, ham or sausage in place of bacon.) Serves eight.

Frozen pops cool off hot days

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

What's cooler than a cold drink and tastes even better on a hot day? One of these economical, easy-to-fix homemade frozen pops, that's what.

POP HITS PEACHY POPS

½ cup drained canned peach slices
¼ cup orange juice
1 cup raspberry sherbet
5 wooden sticks

In a blender container combine peaches and orange juice. Cover and blend until smooth. Add sherbet a spoonful at a time through opening in lid, blending until smooth after each addition. Pour into five 3-ounce paper cups. Cover each cup with foil. Make a small hole in foil with a knife. Insert a wooden stick into the cup through the hole. Freeze 4 to 6 hours or until firm. To serve, remove foil and tear off paper. Makes 5.

Fundamentals of Chinese diet inspires writing of cookbook

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pasta and bread are fundamental to the Chinese diet — a fact that inspires a splendid new cookbook full of recipes for soups, salads, stir-fried noodle dishes, filled breads and pancakes.

Florence Lin, one of the most respected Chinese cooking authorities in this country, has divided her book into sections identifying what kind of starch the doughs are made from.

Part 1 of "Florence Lin's Complete Book of Chinese Noodles, Dumplings and Breads" (Morrow, $19.95) is about doughs made from wheat flour. Part 2 concerns doughs made from rice flour. Part 3 tells all about doughs made from beans and other starches.

In every section are easy-to-follow recipes, offering a rich assortment of dishes for all occasions — from Shredded Chicken With Sichuan Peppercorn Sauce on Cold Noodles to Wonton Duck Soup in Casserole.

CHICKEN WITH SICHUAN PEPPERCORN SAUCE ON COLD NOODLES

½ pound medium or thin Chinese egg noodles
1 tablespoon sesame oil
2 tablespoon dark soy sauce
2 tablespoon Zhejiang vinegar or red wine vinegar
1 teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoon minced whole scallions
1 tablespoon Sichuan Peppercorn Oil (see recipe below)
1 small whole chicken breast with bone, steamed, boned and finely shredded
½ teaspoon coarse salt

Bring 2 quarts of water to a rolling boil over high heat. Add the noodles and stir immediately to separate the strands. When the water returns to a boil, cook for 1 minute if the noodles are thin, 2 minutes if thick.

Drain and run cold water over the noodles immediately to cool them. Shake off the excess water. With chopsticks, fluff them up for a few minutes to dry them completely. Then put the noodles in a serving bowl and add the sesame oil, tossing to coat them evenly.

To make the sauce, combine the soy, vinegar, sugar, scallions and peppercorn oil in a small bowl. Sprinkle salt on the shredded chicken. Combine the sauce and the chicken with the noodles, toss and serve. If you like the dish cold, refrigerate it but not more than 2 hours.

Sichuan Peppercorn Sauce:

2 tablespoon Sichuan peppercorns
1 teaspoon white peppercorns
¼ cup corn oil or peanut oil

Roast the peppercorns in a small dry skillet over low heat until they release their fragrance, about 3 minutes. Using the butt of a cleaver handle or a mortar and pestle, crush them to a fine powder. Put the powder in a heatproof jar.

Heat the oil until it starts to smoke, then remove it from the heat and wait 30 seconds. Pour the oil over the peppercorns in the jar and cover. Leftover oil will keep up to a month, tightly covered, at room temperature.

German staples adopted as part of American culture

By BETTY WILSON
Hearst News Service

The hearty food that marks German meals has been part of the American culture since the early 1800s, when almost 6 million people emigrated here from Germany and Austria. A 1979 Census Bureau study found that 28.8 percent of Americans trace all or part of their ancestry to Germany.

Meat and potatoes are basic to German dishes, with little seasoning beyond salt, pepper, sugar and vinegar. Only in sausages, coffee cakes and cookies did the German people become more adventuresome with spices.

For a taste of German fare, try these recipes:

BAVARIAN BEEF ROLLS
2½ pounds sirloin tip
Salt
Pepper
1 tablespoon parsley, chopped
1 tablespoon chopped onion
2 ounces bacon, chopped (2 slices)
Mustard
2 tablespoons oil
1 onion, chopped
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup bouillon
1 tablespoon sour cream

Slice the sirloin into six slices about ½-inch thick. Pound the meat and rub it with salt and pepper. Spread a little mustard on one side.

Combine the chopped bacon with the onion and parsley. Spread the mixture evenly on the meat slices. Roll the slices and fasten them with string or toothpicks.

Dip the rolls in flour and brown in hot oil. Add the chopped onion and bouillon. Cover and simmer 45 minutes.

Add the sour cream and continue cooking 30 minutes. Skim the excess fat from the gravy and thin, if necessary, with additional bouillon.

GROUND BEEF PATTIES
1 boiled potato
1 onion
1 pound ground beef
1 egg
Salt and pepper
2 teaspoons oil
1 teaspoon cornstarch
½ cup water

Grate the potato, chop the onion and mix well with the ground meat, egg and seasoning.

Form into patties and brown in lightly oiled skillet on both sides, for a total of 8 to 10 minutes.

Transfer the meat to a platter. Drain the fat from skillet and measure 1 tablespoon fat to return to the skillet.

Disolve the cornstarch in water, add to the skillet and cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened.

CHICKEN AND DUMPLINGS
3 pounds chicken, cut up
1 small onion
3 sprigs parsley
2 3-inch pieces of celery with leaves
1 bay leaf
3 peppercorns
2 teaspoons salt
Dumplings — recipe follows

Combine the first seven ingredients in a Dutch oven and add water to just cover.

Bring to a boil, reduce heat and cover. Simmer 1 hour or until the meat is tender.

Prepare the dumplings to add during the last 20 minutes of cooking.

BAVARIAN BREAD DUMPLINGS
10 slices dry white bread
1 tablespoon shortening
½ onion, finely diced
½ tablespoon parsley
1 egg
Salt
½ cup milk

Cut the bread into small cubes. Cook the diced onions in shortening until golden.

Mix the bread cubes with the onion, salt and parsley. Add the milk and eggs and work with your hands to form dough.

Add more bread crumbs if the mixture is too moist. Form small balls with wetted hands, put the dumplings in boiling broth, cover and simmer for 20 minutes.

HOT GERMAN POTATO SALAD
6 slices bacon
3 onions, chopped (2 cups)
¾ cup vinegar
1½ tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 pounds boiled potatoes, peeled and sliced

Cook the bacon in a skillet. Drain on paper towels. Drain the fat from the skillet, reserving ¼ cup.

Add the onion and cook until tender, stirring occasionally. Stir in the vinegar, sugar, salt and pepper. Heat to boiling. Cut the bacon and add to the mixture.

Pour over the potato slices in a serving dish and toss lightly to coat evenly. Garnish with snipped parsley and paprika. Serve hot.

QUICK COFFEE CAKE
Topping:
⅓ cup sugar
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
½ cup chopped walnuts
1 tablespoon margarine, melted

Cake:
1 cup flour
½ cup sugar
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup margarine
1 egg, beaten
½ cup milk

Grease an 8-inch square or round pan. For topping, mix all the ingredients together and set aside.

For the cake, sift the first four ingredients together and cut the margarine in with a pastry blender or two knives.

Make a well in the center of the mixture. Combine the milk and egg and add all at one time to the flour mixture. Stir, mixing only enough to moisten the dry ingredients, about 15 strokes.

Turn into a greased pan and spread evenly to the edges. Sprinkle topping over the surface and pat. Bake at 375 F about 20 minutes or until the center tests done.

Fettucine makes light dish for late summer

ATLANTA (UPI) — Pasta combines all the stylishness of its current popularity with a basic lightness that makes it a perfect central ingredient for many summertime variations.

Here is a recipe for Shrimp and Fresh Basil Fettucine created by chef John F. Wilson of The Mansion in Atlanta. He came up with the dish during a special promotion spotlighting America's best chefs put on by the Prince Pasta Co.

SHRIMP AND FRESH BASIL FETTUCINE
1 pound fettucine
1 shallot, finely diced
5 cloves garlic, minced
3 tablespoon butter
¾ cup fresh basil, finely chopped with large stems removed ⅓ cup white wine
1 tablespoon tomato paste
2 tablespoon roux (1 tablespoon melted butter and 1 tablespoon flour)
1 cup heavy cream
20 medium shrimp, peeled, deveined and butterflied
Salt and white pepper to taste
Parmesan cheese

Saute shallot and garlic over medium heat in 1 tablespoon butter for 3 minutes. Then add the chopped basil, mixing well, and continue to cook for 1 minute. Add white wine and reduce by a third. Whisk in roux and tomato paste until well combined.

Simmer over low heat for 5 minutes. Add heavy cream, bring to a boil and season to taste. Simmer for 5 minutes, remove from heat and set aside.

Cook fettucine al dente. When fettucine is nearly done, heat saute pan and add remaining butter. Over high heat, add the shrimp and season lightly with salt and white pepper, shaking pan frequently to keep shrimp moving.

Cook approximately 2 minutes or until shrimp are completely pink and firm. Drain any excess butter from the pan and add basil sauce to the shrimp. Heat 2 minutes.

Drain fettucine and divide among 4 serving dishes with tongs. Arrange 5 shrimp on top of pasta servings and pour sauce over top. Sprinkle to taste with Parmesan cheese and serve.

Barbequed Sausage Kabobs

Yield: 4 servings
1 lb. Eckrich® Smoked Sausage, cut into 1 inch pieces
1 C. dried apricots
1 12-oz. can beer
1 large green pepper
1 large Spanish onion, cut into wedges
½ lb. fresh medium mushrooms
¼ C. apricot preserves
1 Tbsp. prepared mustard
2 Tbsp. chili sauce
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
Simmer sausage and apricots in beer in large saucepan for 10 minutes. Cut peppers in half lengthwise, remove seeds and cut into 1¼-inch squares. Add peppers to sausage mixture; let stand off heat for 10 minutes. Assemble kabobs on skewers, alternately threading sausage, onion, green and red peppers with mushrooms and apricots. Combine apricot preserves, mustard, chili sauce and Worcestershire sauce. Heat and stir until blended. Brush kabobs with sauce. Grill (or broil 4 inches from heat) for 10 minutes, turning and brushing with more sauce after 5 minutes. Brush with remaining sauce and serve.

DEAR ABBY

Bald women beautiful to man

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter from the young woman who lost all her hair permanently due to a condition called alopecia. I also was surprised to learn there was an organization that gives help and support to such people.

That woman should know that not all men would find her unattractive when she removes her wig. There are men who think bald women beautiful! I am one.

I am a male, late 20s, normal in every way, and for some reason I find bald women attractive. So far my search for my dream girl has been unsuccessful, but I really would like to marry a girl who would keep her head shaved perfectly smooth. Since few would agree to do this (even if she'd agree to shave it once, she'd probably wind up growing it back sooner or later), I would love to meet a permanently bald woman with a pretty face and warm smile.

Remember, beauty is in the beholder's eye, and just because society set one standard of what is beautiful, that does not mean everyone has to conform to it. Smooth legs are sexy, so why shouldn't a smooth head be the same?

So, if any of you bald girls out there go shopping, or just out for a walk — leave your wig at home. How else are men like me going to know you have no hair? Of course, not all women look good bald, but if her face is pretty, and she has a nice smile, expressive eyes, and ears that don't stick out, she's my idea of a beauty. — BALD IS BEAUTIFUL IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR B IS B: What a refreshing attitude. Thank you for sharing it.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you regarding a family matter. Recently I discovered that a maternal aunt married her uncle — her husband being the brother of her mother. This took place over 60 years ago. Everyone in the family tried to cover up this mess, but I am all for uncovering the truth.

Wouldn't such a marriage be outlawed today? What about their children who are my cousins? Wouldn't they be illegitimate if such a marriage is unlawful? And don't such close blood marriages breed idiots, blood diseases and the like? If my cousins are illegitimate, wouldn't any wills and trusts be declared null and void?

Please print the facts. — CAN OF WORMS IN FLORIDA

DEAR CAN: You can judge for yourself whether or not your cousins are idiots. I urge you to consult a Florida lawyer for the answers to your questions concerning legitimacy and inheritance. Laws differ from state to state.

THE BUTCHER

Seasonings key to winning rib cook-off

By MERLE ELLIS

Norm Eggen did it again! For the fourth straight year, which in this case is "since the beginning of time," Norm and his talented crew from the "Old Country Deli" won top honors, "People's Choice," at the Fourth Annual San Luis Obispo Rib Cook-Off.

Ribs, barbecued ribs, are big in San Luis Obispo. They are served by the thousands every Thursday night on Higuera street when the street is blocked off between Osos and Nippomo. Local farmers bring in pickup loads of fresh produce and set up stalls along both sides of the street. Several restaurants set up open pit barbecues to cook and sell those beef ribs, the specialty of the town.

There's a band on a flatbed truck outside McLintock's Bar and everyone comes to town for a good time and some good food.

The whole affair got started a few years back as a creative solution to a community problem. San Luis Obispo is nestled between the mountains and the sea on the south central coast of California. It's a beautiful town. It's also a college town, home of Cal Poly.

A few years back, the kids began cruising Higuera street on Thursday nights when the stores were open. That didn't set too well with the local merchants. They talked the city fathers into blocking off Higuera street on that night of the week. That stopped the cruising, but it also brought business to a halt. To get things going again, they started with a little Thursday night entertainment, a Country Western band on a flatbed truck out in front of McLintock's. That brought out a few folks, enough to encourage some of the restaurants in town to start cooking ribs out on the street.

Before long, some of the farmers started bringing in produce and setting up stalls. Now things have grown to the point where folks come from miles around. Young and old walk the streets together chewing on beef ribs and talking. Chamber of Commerce organizations from around the state and beyond send delegations to see what the town is doing.

Norm's beef ribs are incredible: tender, juicy, as meaty as imaginable and absolutely delicious! Their preparation, according to Norm, is simplicity itself. You start with beef back ribs, not short ribs, but back ribs, the ribs that result from boning out a beef prime rib. Nobody, at least not many people during barbecue season, are much interested in prime rib roast. People want steaks! To meet that demand, meat packers bone out the rib section to get the popular rib-eye section for steaks, the rib bones that are left are sold separately as "beef back ribs." They are often, incidentally, a very good buy.

Norm's secret, as is the case with most successful barbecue cooks, is the seasoning. Like most great barbecue cooks, he seasons his ribs before they go on the grill. He wouldn't give me the exact recipe for his mix - that's his award-winning secret. He will, however, be more than happy to sell you an 8 oz. package for $2.50 plus 75 cents postage and handling. He did tell me what goes in the mix and how to use it. It's a combination of salt, paprika, sugar, white and black pepper, oregano, thyme, garlic powder with just a touch of MSG to bring out and enhance the flavor of the beef.

Some cooks in the competition pre-cook the ribs before they go on the grill. Norm prefers to trim the fresh ribs well, season them and let them set for at least 30 minutes before they go on the grill to sizzle over hot coals on an open grill for about half an hour. It's important to turn the ribs often because the seasoning mix will burn if you're not careful. When the meat starts to sizzle on one side, turn the ribs and let them come to a sizzle on the other side. Then turn them again.

The ribs are cooked in slabs of seven ribs per slab, then cut between each two ribs and served to be eaten out of hand with nothing more than a good beer in the other hand.

Beef back ribs are readily available in most markets at this time of year. They are often even cheap and nothing goes better on the barbecue grill. Try them! If you don't season them with anything but salt and pepper, they'll still be good, but if you want something special, send for Norm's special "Rib Round-up Seasoning." Write to Central Coast Seasonings, 731 Pacific Street, Suite 20, San Luis Obispo, CA 93401.

Greek kitchen pleasures delight visitors

ATHENS (UPI) — The varied and inexpensive delights of the Greek kitchen, so far removed from the classic cuisines of France and Italy, are a happy surprise to many first-time visitors.

There is no tradition of sophisticated cuisine in the land of Socrates and Plato. Those who love Greece feel this is all for the best. What exists here instead is some of the best home cooking the world has ever known.

Even the finest restaurants remember their links to the home kitchen and the black-draped women who work such wonders there.

Preparing Greek meals in American homes turns out to be simple enough — a way of enjoying a taste of the country or reminiscing over your most recent visit. Here is a festive recipe for Rosemary Flavored Lamb Roasted With Chestnuts:

ARNI PSITO ME KASTANA

1 leg of lamb
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
Juice of 1 lemon
Fresh rosemary
1½-2 pounds chestnuts, parboiled and peeled

Wipe the lamb with a damp cloth, then rub with salt and pepper and sprinkle generously with lemon juice. Using the tip of a sharp knife, make small slashes in the flesh of the lamb and insert sprigs of rosemary, using about 6 small sprigs.

Roast in a 350-degree oven, allowing 25-30 minutes per pound, until an internal temperature of 180 degrees is achieved.

Baste frequently with meat drippings, turning the meat so it roasts evenly on all sides. Put the chestnuts around the meat after the first hour of cooking.

Remove the lamb from the oven and transfer the chestnuts to a warm serving platter. Allow the lamb to rest in the pan for 15 minutes before carving, then place on the platter with the chestnuts. Serve warm, garnished with additional rosemary. Serves 6-8.

Tomato-cucumber relish easy with summer delights

Copley News Service

TOMATO-CUCUMBER RELISH

2 pounds tomatoes
2 medium cucumbers
¼ cup water
¼ cup cider vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon celery seed
½ teaspoon powdered mustard
½ teaspoon sugar
1/16 teaspoon ground red pepper
1 cup green pepper in ¼-inch squares
¼ cup sliced scallion (green onion)

Use tomatoes held at room temperature until fully ripe. Cut tomatoes into inch cubes (makes about four cups); set aside. Peel cucumbers; cut in halves lengthwise and scoop out seeds using a teaspoon. Cut cucumbers in ½-inch pieces (makes about 1 1¼ cups); set aside.

In small saucepan combine water, vinegar, salt, celery seed, mustard, sugar and red pepper. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, for two minutes. Remove from heat.

In a medium bowl combine green pepper, scallion and reserved tomatoes and cucumbers. Stir in vinegar mixture. Cover and refrigerate at least two hours or overnight.

Low rates steer customers to car dealers

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland automobile dealers are expecting another surge of customers this week trying to take advantage of temporary super-low financing offered on 1986 models by the Big Three automakers.

Last week, GM began financing 1986 cars at interest rates as low as 2.9 percent for three-year loans.

In response to that, Chrysler initiated two-year loans at 2.4 percent and 3.6 percent for 36 months. Ford is offering financing beginning 2.9 percent for three-year loans.

"We sold about 30 cars Saturday — we usually sell about eight," said Gary Peckham, finance director for Jack Sherman Chevrolet.

"I think a lot of them wanted to hurry up before GM changed their minds."

Peckham said he talked to the area office of General Motors Acceptance Corp. in Odessa Tuesday morning, and he said they had a backlog of at least 200 financing applications to process.

Chuck Newcomer, a GMAC spokesman in Detroit, said Tuesday the volume of applications was at least 50 percent above the record-setting pace of last Friday.

"Last Friday was our highest volume day ever, nationally," Newcomer said.

Jim Foreman, general manager of Midland's Friendly Pontiac Chrysler-Plymouth, said his salesmen were "swamped" with customers Saturday, and reported sales that doubled.

"A lot of the traffic we're getting is inquisitive traffic," Foreman said. "There tends to be a facade about financing terms. It is built up to the point that people want to see of the finance charge is real, and it is.

"I think people were considering buying a new car maybe next year."

Foreman said he had talked to 10 to 15 other dealers about the interest rates, which some had never seen so low.

"It's been mixed talking to them, but it (low financing) has probably impacted more in big cities than it has in the smaller communities," he said.

"Shades of the old days" was the way Neil Florer, vice-president of Rogers Ford, described the response.

"We're seeing at least four times the normal traffic," he said.

The cut-rate financing was concocted to clear inventories as shipments of 1987 models begin arriving, the GMAC spokesman said.

Foreman said dealers in the Permian Basin foresaw the economic difficulties looming here and adjusted accordingly, ordering fewer cars.

"My inventory wasn't a problem," Foreman said. "We haven't had a swollen inventory here, because back in March and April we realized what was going on economically and we simply didn't order more cars."

Foreman said he expects a land office business this weekend, once people visit his dealership and realize the low rates are "real."

Florer also said the inventory of 1986 models at Rogers was manageable. Even though more 1986 models are on the way before the 1987 models arrive, he said, with the low financing this year's models should nearly sell out by the time the rates expire in early October.

"I'm beyond words to describe it," Newcomer said, noting that GMAC had to hire extra employees to handle the workload.

"Certainly we expected to ignite the market, but it's been beyond our expectations."

Newcomer said he had heard a GM dealer in the Midwest was so busy he had to call his mechanics in to work the showroom, and even enlisted the help of his attorney who had stopped by.

An employee of a Ford Motor Co. subsidiary in Dearborn, Mich., said the nationwide demand for Ford products is about double the norm, and said the biggest delay was getting cars ready for deliver to customers.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and 21st Congressional District candiate Lamar Smith, discuss state and national financial woes at a Midland fund-raiser Tuesday.

Gramm endorses local GOP congressional candidate Smith

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

Congressional candidate Lamar Smith brought Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, with him to Midland Tuesday to talk Texas finances at a local fund-raiser.

Smith said, like Gramm, "he sees a giant conflict between every Texan's dream of more opportunity to prosper and every special interest group's dream of lining its pockets with federal programs."

Gramm endorsed Smith on the grounds that "he would possess a new focus in Washington, D.C., while at the same time, keeping old-fashioned values in mind."

Smith said his main focus is on two financial crises devouring the Texan and U.S. economies: becoming hooked on cheap foreign oil and excessive federal spending which, he contends, has bloated the national deficit.

The cure to these plagues, Smith said, would begin with repealing the windfall profits tax, deregulating natural gas prices and filling up the federal strategic oil reserves with domestic oil.

In reference to wild federal spending, Smith said he agrees with Gramm's ideology and praised Gramm for "accomplishing so much in the past 20 months."

Gramm then began an explanation of his new proposal, which Smith endorsed, — the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings II bill.

Smith said between 1981 and 1985, government spending increased 40 percent while government revenues only increased 20 percent.

Gramm said his new bill will take up where its predecessor was booted out of the Supreme Court.

"I liked the first one, but the Supreme Court ruled we picked the wrong fella to administer it (referring to the federal comptroller general).

"This second bill gives the power to the Office of Management and Budget and they will put the mechanism back in place," Gramm said.

Gramm said he was hopeful the budget would be balanced by 1991 and said he hopes to reduce the deficit by $1 trillion over the next five years.

Both Smith and Gramm lay partial blame for the bloated deficit on the federal government's inability to say "no" to special interests.

"Balancing the budget is like going to heaven," Gramm said. "Everyone wants to get there, but no one wants to do what you have to do to get there," Gramm said.

Smith and his Democratic opponent, Pete Snelson, will share their views at a Midland Bar Association luncheon at Midland's Petroleum Club Friday afternoon.

Ector County board, hospital trustees approve MCH budget

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Medical Center Hospital trustees and Ector County Commissioners met in joint session Tuesday and, after more than four hours of review, gave unanimous approval to the county-owned hospital's $68.7 million 1987 operating budget.

The "break even" budget, as MCH assistant finance administrator Russ Kyler described it, calls for elimination of 67 jobs, primarily through attrition and overtime reduction, and an average patient rate increase of 7 percent.

According to Kyler, the hospital expects the work force reduction to save about $1.34 million.

An estimated $400,000 to $600,000 in workman's compensation insurance could be saved, he said, if MCH decides to self-insure.

A consultant is now studying the feasibility of self-insurance.

The rate increase will mean MCH room rates for a semi-private room will increase from $153 to $164. The rate for a private room will rise from $165 to $177.

MCH administrator Sam Glenney and Kyler said the rates "are the most visible, (but) they are not a true indication of a hospital's rate structure."

A chart comparing MCH inpatient revenue per discharge shows that, even with the rate increase, MCH will still be well below state and national averages.

Even with budgetary restraints, MCH administrators are anticipating the hospital will end 1987 slightly less than $350,000 in the black.

Kyler also said, "The hospital anticipates the bad debts to remain high (in 1987) in light of the number of unemployed and/or uninsured patients."

This year's budget projected bad debts of $11 million while the 1987 budgets anticipates an increase of nearly 10.3 percent to nearly $12.2 million.

According to the proposed budget document presented to Commissioners Court, Medical Center will end the 1986 fiscal year with a deficit of slightly more than $2 million.

In the management plan of the budget submitted to commissioners, Glenney said one of the 1985-86 objectives was to "achieve a positive hospital operating margin of 3.8 percent."

But, he added:

"The hospital was unable to achieve a positive operating margin due primarily do to the following — Patient uncollectibles rose dramatically as economic conditions in Ector County worsened, Contracts increased from 8.1 percent of gross revenue in 1985 to 13.2 percent in 1986."

The increase, Glenney said, is attributed to higher Medicare length of stays and lower than expected Medicare payment rates.

Another goal in the current fiscal year was to "reduce the bad debt expense as a percentage of patient revenues.

"Due to the worsening economic conditions and decline in oil prices," Glenney said, "hopes of economic recovery in Fiscal 1986 were slim.

As unemployment rose above 20 percent, it was inevitable that bad debts would rise, he said.

"It has also been observed that the number of working uninsured has increased as employers attempt to reduce expenses prior to releasing personnel."

To improve its position in the medical market place, MCH plans to continue its role in Texas Tech programs, specifically in the further development of neonatology and nursing and in the eventual implementation of pediatrics and OB/GYN services.

MCH also plans to implement an ambulatory care program designed to "more efficiently and conveniently serve the patients and medical staff."

The move is to generate an $1.39 million, officials said.

Student says raising drinking age will make her 'stay home and study'

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

Shepheard — Barkley — Cabral — Keller

If responses garnered at Midland College Tuesday reflect a statewide trend, Gov. Mark White has inadvertently given the biggest boost imaginable to his favorite cause — education — in raising the legal drinking age to 21.

"I guess I will just stay home and study now," Katrina Hatchett, 19, a Midland College freshman said.

"I don't really care for the new law.

"It's not that I like to go out and get drunk all the time. It's just that they've taken away the night life for all of us," Ms. Hatchett said.

Stan Shepheard, 19, who's father happens to be employed with the Midland County Sheriff's Department, said he didn't think it was fair, either.

"They (the Legislature) said we could do it and then they take it away from us.

John Barkley, 18, is optimistic as his 19th birthday approaches in November.

"Heck, by the time I'm 21, they'll probably have Prohibition again," Barkley said.

"But all this means is that we'll have to make more 'at home' parties now," he added.

Rockwell Cabral, 20, leaned up against the wall of the Midland College student center and said he was not concerned.

"I'm not really worried or bothered — I have friends to buy me beer.

"It does cut out the social life. I used to hang out at the Wall Street Broker (a Midland nightspot), but I'm still not worried...I have my older friends," Cabral said.

Judy Gonzalez, 19, reflected attitudes more parents would probably like to see.

"It doesn't bother me; I don't drink.

"I think it's kind of good actually. It will save some lives because there will be less accidents," Ms. Gonzalez said.

Barry Keller, 20, is mad — with one "D," that is.

"It's bunk!" Keller said.

"They're taking away my privileges they've already given me," Keller said.

"I haven't abused them — that's what makes me mad. They should have included a grandfather's clause or something.

Farmer's melons look like 'pumpkins in disguise'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Seventy-one year-old Hubert E. Benton grows cantaloupes the size of pumpkins and as sweet as sugar.

"That's the biggest one I've raised," Benton said of a 22-pound melon.

It weighed 23 pounds when he first pulled it from the vine last weekend on his farm between Midland and Greenwood, but it has lost a pound of moisture since then.

"I had one in here (the Midland Farmers Co-op office) the other day that weighed 21 pounds. It's not unusual for them to weigh 15 pounds."

Most weigh between 10 and 12 pounds, he said.

Benton, a retired farmer, grew the melon from the seed of a "Japanese cantaloupe" which farmer Jimmy Lucas had given him about 10 years ago.

Lucas got the cantaloupe from Melvin Wimberley's Midland farm. About 20 years ago, Wimberley brought the over-size melons between Denver City and Lovington, N.M., on acreage where Japanese farmers had established a vegetable garden.

Benton called the over-size melons "Japanese," "Jerusalem," or "mammoth" cantaloupes.

"I do believe that that is a pumpkin in disguise," said Wimberley, a retired farmer.

The "Japanese" cantaloupe, which is sweeter than the smaller Pecos cantaloupe, did not turn into a bonanza in the marketplace apparently because of its large size and tendency to bruise and sour. They do not ship well.

"They bruise easy," said Benton. "They ain't a shipping or hauling melon. They are too heavy and soft. If you stack them up on one another, you'll have mashed-up melons. You wouldn't have nothing but mush when you got there (to market)."

The more hardy Pecos cantaloupes are shipped by the truckload and do not bruise.

In addition, the larger size of the Japanese melons means that they will cost more than the smaller Pecos cantaloupes.

"Who is going to pay $2 to $4 for a cantaloupe?" asked Benton.

"I like them a lot better than I do regular Pecos cantaloupes," Benton said. "They are sweeter than the Pecos. Of course, some people don't like them sweeter. You can't predict what the customers are going to like or love."

About five years ago, Benton said he did take his crop of Japanese cantaloupes to market in Midland. He said he sold them for 10 cents a pounds to a retail produce outlet, which in turn sold the melons for 40 to 49 cents a pound.

"And I hauled them by the pickup load for several days," he said. "Boy, they were selling like hotcakes. They were sweet and pretty."

Today, Benton said he doesn't try to market the melons. He gives them away.

"I wouldn't drive out there (to town). It's too much traffic, and," he smiled, "I'm too old."

"When Hubert and I were young," said Wimberley, who also is 71, "we thought 65 was old."

"I thought death was knocking at the door," Benton said.

Now, he knows better.

"When I'm 75, I'll be a senior citizen."

Along with his half-acre of cantaloupes, Benton also raises black-eyed peas, sweet and field corn, okra, tomatoes and squash.

"This was a good year," he said. "We got good rains and, of course, I irrigate."

Not once did Benton claim to have grown the world's or even Texas' largest cantaloupe.

The 1986 "Guinness Book of World Records" lists a 55-pound cantaloupe grown by Gene Daughtridge of Rocky Mount, N.C., in 1982 as the largest cantaloupe.

Daughtridge limited one melon to the vine in growing the record-size melon from the seed of a 15-pound cantaloupe.

"I don't think we can break that record," Benton said.

Six Flags provides worker with 'fountain of youth'

By GARY SHULTZ

ARLINGTON (AP) — To John Gavia, it's more than a place to work. It's a place that keeps the boy in him alive.

This year, Six Flags Over Texas celebrates its 25th anniversary. So does Gavia, who has been working there since the day it opened.

"It's kept me young. Look at me. I've found my fountain of youth," says Gavia.

He's seen every show and ridden every ride that's ever been there — except one. "I won't ride the Spinnaker," he says. "It's just too coldblooded for me. But my kids love it."

Six Flags opened in the boondocks on Aug. 5, 1961. The Dallas-Fort Worth Turnpike (Interstate 30) had recently opened, but there were no paved roads to the amusement park. A converted cow pasture served as the parking lot. On rainy days, half the excitement was trying to keep from getting stuck in the mud.

"It was hard to imagine what it would become," Gavia recalls. "People couldn't even keep the name straight. They called it Six Flags Under Texas, Texas Over Six Flags, or Texas Under Six Flags.

"They didn't know what to expect. Some of them thought it was a museum, and they would come out here in their Sunday best expecting to see exhibits. Or they would think it was some kind of picnic grounds."

The park was the brainchild of the late Angus Wynne, a businessman Gavia remembers as a very special person.

"He was truly a very nice, very strong person. He could remember your name out of hundreds of people. He acted no different than the people who paid to ride the rides. He would stand in line and wait his turn," Gavia recalls. "He'd ask you how you were doing, how things were going and what he could do to make your job easier.

"He got stars from all over the world to to come out here. They'd stand in front of the rides to have their pictures made.

"He knew what he wanted. The end product was to have anyone who came out here to be satisfied. Orientations were to the point, no beating around the bush. He told us we were here to sell fun. We were to smile. A smile was part of our uniform.

DEATHS

H.C. 'Blackie' Taylor

H.C. "Blackie" Taylor, 56, of Midland, died at his home Monday evening.

Graveside services will be at 10 a.m. Thursday at the Grape Creek Cemetery in Grape Creek, with Ed McCorkle of the Church of Christ in Carlsbad officiating. Arrangements are being handled through Ellis Funeral Home.

Taylor was born July 30, 1930, in Jonesboro. He bought and sold horses most of his life. He married the former Glendleane Hudson on October 28, 1948, in Midland.

He was preceded in death by one son, Tommy C. Taylor, on Oct. 4, 1985.

Survivors include his wife; one son, Steve Taylor of San Angelo; one daughter and son-in-law, Brenda and Billy Waller of Carlsbad; his father, Hollis Taylor of Graham; one sister, Dale Little of Graham; and two granddaughters.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland, 79702, or the American Cancer Society.

Elizabeth 'Beth' Roby

Elizabeth "Beth" Roby, 93, of Midland, died early Tuesday morning at a Midland nursing home.

Services were to be at 10 a.m. today at the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Dr. Ray Riddle, chaplain of Hospice, officiating. Burial was to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park.

Mrs. Roby was born March 9, 1893, in Monticello, Ark. She attended and graduated from Peabody College in Nashville, Tenn., with a degree in education.

She taught in several different schools in southeast Arkansas.

She was married to L.A. Roby. They lived in Missouri, Mississippi, and Arkansas before moving to Midland in 1946.

He was employed as a state highway engineer. She was preceded in death by her husband in October 1966.

She was a member of First Presbyterian Church.

WORKER

"We were to let people know we were their friend and we were here to help them have fun. With someone that considerate, how could we go wrong?"

Gavia was fresh out of high school in 1961 and trying to make up his mind where to go to college to study art. He also was short of cash and looking without much success for a job.

Gavia's neighbor, Harry Gambino, talked him into going out to Six Flags, where Gambino was to be one of the gunfighters at the Crazy Horse Saloon.

Gavia became a regular at the park even before it opened, and as luck would have it, the operator of the Fiesta Train in the Mexico secton quit a few days before opening day. Gavia's friend helped him get the job, and he was hooked.

In those days there were far fewer rides. Wynn hired roaming musicians to entertain the visitors waiting in lines. There were longhorn steers and buffalo to look at and goat-drawn carts and burros to ride.

"Skull Island really was an adventure back then," Gavia says. "You could really get lost on it. Sometimes we found people who had been out there two or three hours trying to find their way out. It had pirates and sword fights. It even had a mad organist who sat back in a cave and played Boris Karloff-type music.

"We also had a puppet wagon, a Punch and Judy show where one puppet hit the other over the head. It's gone now. Such things are not considered real cool for kids to see anymore."

Gavia, who still takes his family and friends to the park three or four times a year, favors the roller coaster over all the other rides. But there's still a soft spot in his heart for the now-gone La Salle Expedition, a canoe ride along a lagoon lined with trees, Indians and various wildlife.

"That could really be a romantic ride at night," he says with a dreamy look in his eyes. "There were the sounds of the night. The lagoon had big frogs. The sound effects were one thing and then the real frogs. A lot of memories there."

Gavia says everyone thought the park would close at the end of the first summer.

"After everyone got their last paycheck, they were still hanging around," he recalls. "Some were crying and we all wondered if they would call us back. It was very sad. We didn't know what would happen the next year, because everyone had been to Six Flags. We weren't sure if anyone would want to come out and see it again."

But Wynne called them back and, ever since the park and the crowds have grown year after year. This year, attendance is averaging about about 15,000 a day.

And Gavia? He's a little heavier and 25 years older now, but his personality still bubbles happily.

These days he's busy preserving the park's past, overseeing the restoration of the park's ancient carrousel, carving new horses' legs, attaching new harnesses, applying a rainbow of colors — and having fun.

AP Laserphoto

John Gavia, who has been working at Six Flags Over Texas since the day it opened, says it's more than a place to work, it's a place that keeps the boy in him alive. Gavia's job is to preserve the park's past, overseeing the restoration of the park's antique carrousel, carving new horses' legs and attaching new harnesses to the wooden animals.

Program will match farmers with hunters

AUSTIN (AP) — State agriculture and wildlife officials say a new program to match farmers with available land and sportsmen who need places to hunt could mean the difference between profit and loss for some hard-pressed farmers.

The lease-matching clearing house is a joint effort of the Texas Department of Agriculture and the state Parks and Wildlife Department.

"If we save just one farm by this program that otherwise would have gone back to a creditor, then the whole thing would have been worthwhile. I think we're going to help a lot of farmers," Bob Armstrong, parks and wildlife commissioner, said Tuesday.

"This is an economic boost that allows farmers to put a little money in their pockets and in their communities and begin to make a difference in whether the family farm system survives or not," Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said.

Under the new program, both departments are collecting information from farmers and ranchers who are interested in leasing their lands for hunting.

That information will be matched with requests to the Parks and Wildlife Department from hunters looking for available land. Neither department will be involved with the financial negotiations.

Hightower said more than 3.4 million acres have been listed with the clearinghouse program already.

Landowners are providing names, addresses, phone numbers, the number of acres available, proximity to airports, availability of recreational vehicle hookups and other information needed by prospective hunters.

Armstrong said hunters could begin contacting the Parks and Wildlife Department on Oct. 1. Hunters will be asked to specify the species and general area of the state they prefer for hunting.

"Texas has an abundance of wildlife, but much of it is underutilized. Deer, turkey, quail and doves are plentiful in many areas of the state and could provide considerably more recreational opportunity than they do at present," he said.

"Farmers in the Hereford area, the pheasant hunting capital of Texas, are able to lease their land for $5,000 to $10,000 for two weekends. That income for two weekends alone can be the difference between making a profit today in agriculture and not making a profit," Hightower added.

CMA expels controversial Arizona man

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Civilian Material Assistance organization has disassociated itself from efforts by an Arizona man to solicit recruits for a volunteer effort to patrol the Texas border for smugglers and illegal aliens.

A civilian patrol linked to the CMA gained notoriety in June for detaining 16 illegal aliens near Nogales, Ariz., and holding them for the Border Patrol. But the organization, at a national meeting the following month in Memphis, passed a resolution against any further such patrols.

J.R. Hagan of Tucson, Ariz., who led the CMA's armed border watch in Arizona, has been ousted from the CMA for continuing to organize such border efforts, CMA executive director Jim Turney said Tuesday.

Hagan has been "relieved and released" as Arizona CMA director and from CMA, Turney said, describing the action as "just a matter of policy."

"We're just not going to tolerate any mavericks," Turney said.

Hagan reportedly was in the San Antonio area this week, recruiting armed volunteers to patrol the U.S.-Mexico border on his own, the San Antonio Express-News reported today.

In the past month, Hagan reportedly has enlisted about 100 members in his own organization, American Border Watch, in the Edinburg, Harlingen and McAllen areas of Texas' Rio Grande Valley, the newspaper said.

Hagan's first public appearance in the Valley was at the state meeting of Mexican-American Democrats in McAllen on Aug. 9. Denied the right to appear, he held a press conference the next day denouncing MAD.

Traveling with his wife in a mobile home, Hagan has been in and out of the Rio Grande Valley since that time, the newspaper said.

CMA describes itself as an anti-Communist organization of mostly ex-servicemen, primarily Vietnam veterans, whose mission is to provide supplies and expertise to refugees and anti-Communist guerillas in Central America.

When Hagan's group stopped the illegal aliens in Arizona at gunpoint, it ignited a national protest that intensified when it was learned that the so-called reconnaissance patrols would be extended to Texas.

The original purpose of the Arizona border watch, Turney said, was to provide information for law enforcement agencies on drug smuggling across the border.

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox bristled at announcements earlier in the summer that similar patrols were planned for Texas. Federal lawmen said they didn't need any non-official help. At the July national CMA conference, officers of the organization voted to end any U.S.-Mexico border activity by their organization.

House votes to follow federal child support rules

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House has decided to follow congressional instructions on child support payments although one lawmaker said the new law would be too "anti-father."

Also Tuesday, the House voted to ask federal officials to tax imported oil in an effort to boost the price of oil.

The child support measure was approved 76-48 and returned to the Senate with minor amendments. The U.S. Congress in 1984 required states to adopt specific child support collection guidelines.

States that do not comply could face the loss of 5 percent of the welfare grants received from the federal government. Bill supporters said that would mean an $18 million loss this year for Texas.

Included in the bill is mandatory withholding of child support payments from paychecks in certain types of cases, uniform methods of computing payments and tighter interstate enforcement of child support orders.

Rep. Foster Whaley, D-Pampa, fought the bill, calling it "the most anti-father bill you can think of."

"There's only being one party considered, and I'll tell you for sure that not in all cases is the father to blame," Whaley said, adding, however, that "there are more villains on the men's side than there are on the women's."

The resolution calling for federal import fees on foreign oil sparked heated debate, but after the vote Rep. Mike McKinney, D-Centerville, won approval of the resolution with no objection.

Man could get death for woman's murder

VICTORIA (AP) — A 31-year-old San Antonio man faces life in prison or death by injection after a jury convicted him of killing a banker's wife during a failed extortion attempt.

Lesley Lee Gosch was found guilty of killing Rebecca Jo Patton after the jury deliberated about four hours following closing arguments Tuesday morning, said court clerk Richard Burch said.

The punishment phase began this morning at 9 a.m., deputy district clerk Emily Meanes said.

The victim's husband said he did not plan to attend the proceedings.

The sentencing is immaterial, Castle Hills National Bank President Frank Patton Jr. said.

He said he was relieved at the guilty verdict as he had prayed that his wife's killer would be brought to justice.

"This helped us to partially close the books on this," he added.

DRINKING

"I'll have to find me a good bootlegger, I guess," Keller mused.

So, responses indicate many under the age of 21 who were able to drink before Sept. 1 are mad.

Yet this could also translate into longer college honor roll lists.

As one interviewee mistakenly taken for under 21 explained, "Judging from the way I was then, I think the higher drinking age is a good thing."

MPD investigates theft of several leather saddles

From Staff Reports

The Midland Police Department is investigating the theft of several leather saddles valued at more than $1,000.

Robert Gersten, 3501 Mockingbird Lane, told police two Western style leather saddles valued at $700 and one English style leather saddle valued at $400 were stolen from his residence. According to reports, the items were taken sometime between Sunday and Tuesday.

Police are also investigating the theft of an electric guitar from a local night club.

Kenny Coffman told police the guitar, valued at $900, and a pair of sunglasses valued at $48 were stolen from Garfields', 4519 N. Garfield St., about 2:30 a.m. Monday.

Several lawnmowers and an air compressor were reported stolen from a local residence.

Alex Anders, 210 South Tyler St., told police three lawnmowers valued at $300 and an air compressor valued at $300 were stolen from his residence sometime Aug. 18 and Tuesday.

A 19-inch television set valued at $150 was reported stolen from a local business.

Woodrow Paul, who reported the burglary, told police the TV was stolen from Hi-Lo Corp., 801 E. Florida Ave.

The burglary occurred Wednesday between 5:45 a.m. and 6:20 a.m.

In other reports, the Midland County Sheriff's office is investigating the burglary of a washer and dryer valued at $500 from an unoccupied mobile home.

Ron Young, who reported the burglary to deputies, said the items were taken from ABI Mobile Home Service on Interstate 20.

A 32-year-old foreman in the city's traffic department is free on bond after he was charged with allegedly stealing money from a parking meter.

Ronnie Ferrell Stone, 3208 Thomas, was released on bond after he was charged with burglary of a coin-operated machine and criminal mischief under $200.

Stone was arrested early Tuesday following an investigation.

New YMCA has eight ball courts

From Staff Reports

Midlanders belonging to local YMCAs will now have eight more racquet and handball courts to choose from with the opening Tuesday of the Town West YMCA.

Located in Western Park Plaza, 1012 Andrews Highway, the newest YMCA has the eight new courts, two courts devoted to Nautilus and free weights, an aerobics room, a lap pool, a pro shop and whirlpools and saunas in both the men's and women's locker rooms, J. Durwood Owen, general director of the Metropolitan YMCA said.

"We're just delighted to have the opportunity to give this much additional service to our members," Owen said.

He said the new branch was donated to the YMCA by an unnamed businessman who had previously owned the business, but decided later to donate it to the YMCA system.

"This gives us a lot more raquetball and handball courts.

"Up until now, we only had four, so this gives us the opportunity to have more without having to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars," Owen said.

Engineers to hold membership picnic

From Staff Reports

The Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers will hold a membership picnic on Friday at the Hogan Park activities building in Midland. The picnic will begin at 6:30 p.m.

All engineers (registered or not) and their families are invited to attend. The picnic is an excellent opportunity for those who have been waiting to join the TSPE. The picnic is free and all are invited.

Afghan refugees being treated at Austin hospital

AUSTIN (AP) — Two Afghan refugees injured in fighting against the country's Soviet-backed government are receiving medical treatment in Austin and vowing to return home and resume the battle as soon as they are able.

The Afghans, identified as Hamid-Ullah and Gulistan, both 25, began sharing a fifth floor room at St. David's Hospital on Tuesday. They are being treated without charge by the hospital and physicians.

The men were among a group of 21 Afghans who arrived in the United States on Monday after leaving refugee camps in Pakistan during the weekend. Other injured refugees were transferred to hospitals in San Antonio, Boston, Los Angeles, New York and Philadelphia.

"We will continue to fight to the last drop of our blood for the freedom of our country," Hamid-Ullah said during welcoming ceremonies at the hospital.

New trial expected in 20-year-old murder case

Cross Jr.

AUSTIN (AP) — Prosecutors expect the courts to order a new trial for James C. Cross Jr., who was sent to prison for life in 1966 after confessing in the slayings of two University of Texas students.

A U.S. Supreme Court ruling, almost as old as the Cross case, apparently will force a retrial that could pose problems for prosecutors, they say.

About 10 of the prosecution witnesses have died since the 1966 trial, several others cannot be located and there is no transcript of the testimony offered at the trial.

Cross, now 43 and still in state prison, was convicted in the 1965 deaths of Susan Rigsby and Shirley Stark, both of Dallas.

According to Cross' confession, he attacked the women after they came to his apartment to use his shower. Cross and Miss Stark were acquaintances.

Defense lawyers claimed Cross was insane when he killed the women and when he was tried. But jurors decided he was mentally competent to stand trial. The same jurors later convicted him.

Several weeks after the trial, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in another case that the competency question should be answered before the trial, and should be answered by a different jury than the one asked to rule on guilt or innocence.

Over the years that ruling has filtered down to state courts, and has been held to be retroactive.

Cross, who has been described by prison officials as a "model prisoner" during his 20 years behind bars, has been repeatedly denied parole. His parole applications have been met by an onslaught of public protest.

Austin lawyer David Botsford, representing Cross, filed a writ of habeas corpus in April asking that Cross' conviction be overturned. The main argument is that the same jury was used to determine Cross' competence and guilt.

A brief hearing on the writ will be held Friday before State District Judge Mace Thurman, who presided at the 1966 trial. The writ will then go to the Court of Criminal Appeals for consideration.

Travis County Assistant District Attorney Phil Nelson, who helped prosecute Cross, is battling the Cross request, but is not optimistic that he will prevail. Nelson said he knows of no similar case that was upheld on appeal.

"We expect it to be overturned because every case like it has been," said District Attorney Ronnie Earle.

Because Cross never appealed his life sentence, a transcript of the original trial was never made, and the court reporter's notes of the testimony were discarded last year, officials said.

If the district attorney's office decides to retry Cross, the only way to provide the new jury with much of the testimony would be by playing partially inaudible recordings made during the trial on an old Audograph machine, which produced records rather than tapes.

Negotiators forced to speak up on budget

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Responding to complaints from spectators who could not follow the proceedings, House and Senate budget negotiators Tuesday moved to a larger meeting room with a working public address system.

From Wednesday afternoon until Tuesday morning, the conference committee had met in the cramped House Appropriations Committee room, which seats about 50.

The 10 men are trying to iron out about $320 million in differences between House and Senate spending reductions.

The inoperative loudspeakers made it almost impossible for members of the news media, agency observers and the general public to understand the frequent whispered huddles among the committee members.

Last week, committee chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, called Capitol security guards to keep about 150 social welfare activists out of the room.

Some members of the news media complained to legislative leaders that they considered the whispers and room conditions a possible violation of the Texas Open Meetings Act.

On orders from Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis, the committee moved across the hall to the Old Supreme Court Room.

That room holds about 150 spectators and has a working public address system.

The conferees have also eliminated much of the whispering, which some had defended as necessary to keep the delicate budget negotiations moving.

"There was some desire in this office and the lieutenant governor's office to help out," Tim Conger, Lewis' press secretary, said of the move.

"Hopefully, the times of not being able to hear and not knowing what's going on are over."

Man charged with murder of El Paso auto dealer

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — A man has been arraigned on charges of capital murder, armed robbery and auto theft in the slaying of an El Paso, Texas, car dealer.

Gerald Allen Weaver, 37, appeared Tuesday before Magistrate Benjamin Rios, who denied bond for Weaver.

Weaver is charged in the slaying of Rudolph Narod, whose body was found at a Las Cruces motel on Aug. 19. A medical examiner's report said Narod was killed by a shotgun blast between his shoulder blades. His hands and feet had been bound, police said.

Weaver was arrested in Culver City, Calif., last week. He waived extradition and agreed to return to New Mexico and face the charges.

Paperwork reduction bill shuffles toward approval

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — While others became lost in the end-of-session logjam, a bill that would reduce the growing paperwork load on Texas' public school teachers took a step forward Tuesday.

The Senate Education Committee approved the bill, and it should come up for Senate debate today.

Supporters say the bill, which passed the House last week, would allow teachers to spend more time teaching and less time filing out reports.

"There's been a lot of buck passing about what's causing paperwork," said committee chairman Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur.

Opponents contend the bill isn't strong enough and should pose strict penalties against administrators who overburden teachers with paperwork.

Parker said the Texas Education Agency can take care of that because it will consider paperwork as part of the school accreditation process.

The bill would require school districts to include paperwork reduction as part of their training programs for administrators.

It also would require the State Board of Education to limit to one page each discussion topic in the districts' annual performance report.

Other bills, however, weren't so lucky and became caught in the quagmire of the last three days of the special session. They include:

— A proposed amendment to the Constitution's bill of rights that supporters say is necessary to achieve any changes next year in personal injury law.

— A bill that would have placed a referendum on peri-mutuel wagering on this November's general election ballot. Both the House and the Senate have approved a horse and dog racing bill, but the necessary referendum won't come until November 1987 under that bill.

Inmates working on highways

AUSTIN (AP) — Prison inmates will be receiving job training under a pilot program which has put them to work on highway contracts in Washington County.

Eight inmate trusties, supervised by a guard and a job foreman, Tuesday began work installing guardrails on eight bridges along Texas Highway 105 from Navasota to Brenham, officials said.

The work is being funded through an interagency contract between the State Department of Highways and the Texas Department of Corrections.

"The situation benefits both agencies. The highway department is able to obtain work within the state agency system and the corrections department gains a way to provide work and training for inmates who may someday re-enter society," said Bob Lanier, chairman of the state highway commission.

Controversial poet calls ruling 'unfair, disappointing'

EL PASO (AP) — An immigration judge's decision to deport controversial poet Margaret Randall on grounds her writings support the doctrines of world communism was disappointing but represented "just a battle, not the war," Ms. Randall said.

The decision by Judge Martin Spiegel of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service will be appealed, said attorney David Cole of the New York-based Center for Constitutional Rights.

"It's unfair and disappointing," Ms. Randall told The Associated Press from her Albuquerque home. "But people should realize this is just a battle, not the war."

"I feel we have such a strong case," she said, adding that the judge's ruling, of which she learned Tuesday morning, surprised her.

Cole said Spiegel, who presided at an immigration hearing in March for Ms. Randall, did not find his client was a communist but that her writings "advocate the doctrines of world communism."

"This is outrageous," Cole told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from New York. "We think it's highly questionable under the First Amendment."

Ms. Randall, 49, whose writings criticized United States foreign policy and supported the revolutions in Cuba and Nicaragua, gave up her U.S. citizenship to become a Mexican national in 1967. She now teaches at the University of New Mexico in her hometown of Albuquerque, N.M., where her parents live.

The author of more than 20 books and hundreds of articles on poetry, politics and photography, Ms. Randall is married to Floyce Alexander, a fellow poet and U.S. citizen.

In his decision, issued Aug. 28 but received by attorneys on Tuesday, Spiegel denied Ms. Randall adjustment of her immigration status and gave her until Dec. 1 to leave the United States voluntarily.

The Center for Constitutional Rights also represents PEN American Center, a 2,000-member writers' organization, in a pending lawsuit filed last October in federal district court in Washington, D.C..

The lawsuit was signed by such well-known authors as Alice Walker, Norman Mailer, Kurt Vonnegut and Arthur Miller. It challenges the constitutionality of the McCarran-Walter Act, which allows the U.S. government to exclude foreigners who have been affiliated with communist or anarchist groups.

During the March hearing, poet Adrienne Rich testified on behalf of Ms. Randall, calling her writings "invaluable and indispensable."

Norman Mailer, president of PEN, wrote Spiegel before the hearing asking that Ms. Randall's application for permanent residency status not be denied because of her political opinions.

"We American writers are not afraid of divergent views among us and believe our country grows stronger precisely because of diversity and vitality of expression," Mailer wrote.

STATE IN BRIEF

Teacher who led battle against TECAT suspended

PLEASANTON (AP) — A special education supervisor of 30 years who drew statewide attention by going to court to resist taking a statewide teachers' competency test has been suspended without pay for failing to meet teaching requirements.

Iris Porter refused to take the Texas Examination for Current Administrators and Teachers that was given March 10 to about 210,000 teachers across Texas. Her bid to have the test thrown out was dismissed in August by a state district judge.

"We had no choice" but to suspend Ms. Porter, Pleasanton school superintendent Darrell Pool said Tuesday. "We can't hire anyone without certification and we must abide by the law," Pool told the San Antonio Express-News.

He praised her for her years of service.

"We would like to have her back. She is a top teacher and a top administrator," Pool said.

Ms. Porter was notified of his decision on Friday and was formally suspended on Tuesday, Pool said. The suspension will remain in effect at least until Tuesday, when the school board next meets, the superintendent added.

Bishop official may quit

DALLAS (AP) — The acting chairman of the board for financially troubled Bishop College says he'll propose at a meeting Friday that the school's football program be suspended, the budget be cut by $1 million and the number of board members be cut in half.

If the board doesn't accept those recommendations, Comer Cotrell says he'll quit.

"In the three months I've been acting chairman, I've felt so frustrated that I've felt castrated," Cotrell said Tuesday. "I just haven't had the support to make things happen."

Bishop, a 105-year-old predominantly black college, has $3 million in long-term debt and $3 million in short-term debt. It also is facing a cash flow shortfall because many students aren't able to pay tuition up front, according to Cotrell.

He said officials are seeking a $5 million loan but have been hurt in that effort by a failure to come up with a loan repayment plan and by the resignation of Wright Lassiter Jr., Bishop's last president.

Clements offers plan

SHERMAN (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements said Tuesday that the Legislature should approve spending "dormant" state funds instead of raising taxes.

Opening a 19-city fall campaign with a brief stop here, Clements told 30 followers that his six-point plan would bolster jobs for Texas workers.

Democratic opponents criticized the former governor, claiming he was bluffing by not revealing his "secret" plan to eradicate the state's fiscal woes.

"Certainly there is nothing secret about it," he said. "It would require implementing House Joint Resolution 72 to get cash moving."

Clements explained HJR 72 is a constitutional amendment approved last November by 52 percent of Texas voters. It calls for the redistribution of state revenues resting in "dormant" funds.

Special session not a failure, White says

AUSTIN (AP) — It would be wrong to call the nearly expired special legislative session a failure just because lawmakers haven't balanced the state budget, Gov. Mark White says.

The state's $3.5 billion deficit is a tough problem that simply will take more time to solve, he said.

"I think we've made more progress in this session that many people would have expected...We'd like to have solved it all, but then again, I think we have a larger problem with the budget shortfall in Texas than any other state in the nation," White said Tuesday.

"Here you're trying to revamp in 30 days what it took 140 days (during the 1985 regular session) to create. We're also faced with the most radical loss of funds of any state in the history of the United States," he said.

White again stopped short of saying when he would call the next special session, but he talked about "next week" while answering questions on what lawmakers will do next.

White said he hopes House and Senate conference committee members can agree on a budget-cutting plan before time runs out on the current session, which ends at midnight Thursday.

If that can be accomplished, White said, lawmakers then will have "a starting point for a second session that we will make some decision on when that should be called in the future."

White said he and legislative leaders "all went together on this session with the full understanding that we were going to take whatever time is necessary to resolve this problem. We also understand we were going to have to go through it piece-by-piece."

Since the special session began Aug. 6, White has pushed for a combination of spending cuts and a one-year sales tax increase — from the current 4⅛ cents to 5¼ cents — to balance the budget.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby also has favored a tax increase.

The three leaders met over a two-hour lunch Tuesday in the Governor's Mansion. When the meeting ended, all sounded upbeat but none said a solution is in sight.

Boss demands release of reporter

MOSCOW (AP) — The chairman of U.S. News & World Report called Nicholas Daniloff's imprisonment "outrageous" and demanded the American reporter's immediate release from Lefortovo Prison, where he marked his fifth day today.

Daniloff, the magazine's Moscow correspondent for 5½ years, was arrested Saturday. The KGB secret police have accused him of spying, but American officials, his family and peers say Daniloff was framed.

Mortimer B. Zuckerman, the newsweekly's chairman, was scheduled to meet with senior Soviet officials today in his effort to free Daniloff, according to Jeff Trimble, another U.S. News reporter working in Moscow.

He declined to name the officials, but said Zuckerman might discuss the meetings later today depending on their outcome.

Zuckerman saw Daniloff in prison Tuesday and said the case "has no more relation to espionage than my left shoe."

"It's a sad commentary that he remains here," Zuckerman said. "He should be released immediately."

No charges have been filed. Daniloff's wife, Ruth, has said she was told he would be held at least 10 days for an investigation.

Daniloff, 52, has told his wife eight KGB officers seized him after a meeting with a Soviet acquaintance, who handed over a package he said contained press clippings but that was found to hold documents marked "top secret."

Zuckerman said he told prison officials he would like to take Daniloff with him when he leaves the Soviet Union on Thursday.

"I was told he would probably be leaving on another plane," Zuckerman said. "I hope that means he would be released shortly. It's outrageous that this man is sitting in Soviet prison."

Daniloff did not initiate the meeting with the Soviet who gave him the package but "responded to a telephone call from someone he hasn't seen for a year," Zuckerman said.

Gennady Gerasimov, the Foreign Ministry spokesman, told a briefing for journalists Tuesday that the reporter was "caught red-handed with a sealed envelope, which was opened in his presence and found to contain secret documents."

Daniloff told his wife the package contained two maps marked "top secret" and photographs of Soviet military installations.

Asked about allegations by Mrs. Daniloff and U.S. News & World Report that the journalist was set up and given the package without knowing what it contained, Gerasimov replied: "Nobody forced him to go there. He didn't have to have this secret meeting."

Daniloff, who was about to take up a post in the magazine's Washington offices, has said he went to a park in the Lenin Hills section of Moscow for a farewell meeting with the acquaintance.

His wife has said it was a routine meeting with a man who, like many Soviet citizens, was fearful of having Western reporters in his home.

Gerasimov did not answer directly when asked why KGB officers were following Daniloff. "Maybe the man he was caught with was under surveillance," he suggested.

He said he did not know whether Daniloff's Soviet aquaintance was arrested.

Gerasimov said a 10-day investigation was under way and the evidence would be given to judicial authorities for a decision on whether Daniloff should be indicted and tried.

Mrs. Daniloff and Zuckerman have said the journalist's arrest appeared to be retaliation for the Aug. 24 arrest in New York of Gennady F. Zakharov, a Soviet citizen employed by the United Nations.

Gerasimov, however, insisted Daniloff's detention was a "separate" case.

Zakharov, who does not have diplomatic immunity, was charged with buying secret information from an undercover FBI agent and is in jail pending trial.

Zuckerman met earlier Tuesday with a senior Kremlin adviser on U.S. affairs, Georgy A. Arbatov, in an effort to win Daniloff's release.

Arbatov, a member of the Communist Party Central Committee, would not respond to reporters' questions afterward about the party's involvement in the case or its opinion about it.

Hitting the beach

U.S. Marines set up position on a beach near Malangen, in northern Norway, during amphibious assault maneuvers. This week's exercises are part of NATO war games being conducted by forces in Norway, Denmark and in the North Atlantic and Baltic.

Conferees call U.S. arch-Satan

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro accused the United States of waging a war of aggression against Nicaragua, and said the "Yankees will have to relearn the tragic lesson of Vietnam."

Earlier Tuesday, President Ali Khamenei of Iran told delegates from the 101-member non-alignment movement, which is holding its weeklong summit in Harare, that the United States was the "arch-Satan."

On Monday, Nicaraguan leader Daniel Ortega opened the summit conference by chastising President Reagan for his plans to send millions of dollars in aid to Contra rebels fighting to overthrow his country.

The level of anti-American rhetoric from the group of countries that claims no binding ties to either the United States or Soviet Union provoked concern in other quarters.

In Washington, State Department deputy spokesman Charles Redman said, "The litany of arbitrary and unfounded charges is both highly offensive and counter-productive. It also raises a question as to the objectivity or political bias of the organization."

Pro-Western Singapore complained that the non-aligned movement was veering far from the political center.

"Who are we talking to?" Singapore Foreign Minister S. Dhanaban said at a lunch with Western reporters in Harare. "We're losing credibility. The movement has become too radical."

Dhanaban said the movement hit a low at its 1979 triennial meeting in Cuba, but moderated under India's three-year chairmanship, which passed Monday to Zimbabwe.

Meanwhile, tempers flared.

Outside the conference hall, Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi's security guards, trying to crowd in with him, clashed with Zimbabwean security officers and were driven off, witnesses reported.

"The Zimbabweans and Libyans literally got into a scrimmage," said one diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Zambia's president, Kenneth Kaunda, broke into tears over another major issue at the summit — apartheid in neighboring South Africa.

"Thousands have been killed in cold blood and thousands more imprisoned" since the white government declared a state of emergency on June 12, Kaunda said, wiping his eyes with a handkerchief.

Castro described a $100 million U.S. aid package to Nicaraguan rebels as a "shameless slap in the face for the peoples of Latin America and the world."

The package has been approved by both houses of Congress, and U.S. military and logistical aid to the Contras is expected to start flowing this month.

"Nicaragua is suffering a dirty war of aggression. Its economy is blockaded, its ports are mined, thousands of mercenaries at the service of a foreign power are invading its territory from Honduras," said Castro.

"The Yankees will have to relearn the tragic lesson of Vietnam."

Castro also pledged that Cuba would keep troops in Marxist Angola "so long as there is apartheid in South Africa."

Cuba has stationed about 25,000 soldiers in Angola for 10 years. South Africa says that free, pre-independence elections cannot take place in South-West Africa, also called Namibia, until the Cubans leave.

Angola is the base for guerrillas fighting to end South African control of Namibia.

National television broadcasts of summit proceedings were abruptly suspended as President Khamenei brushed aside appeals for peace talks in Iran's 6-year-old Persian Gulf war with Iraq.

"The Iraqi crimes, according to many international authorities, have made Genghis Khan and Hitler seem tame in comparison," the Iranian leader said.

Khamenei turned on Iraq after a lengthy attack on the United States, which he described as "the arch-Satan," and after extolling Islam.

Blacks mark anniversary of riots

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Thousands of blacks in townships south of Johannesburg stayed away from work today to mark the second anniversary of the riots that began South Africa's current period of racial unrest.

Black businessmen in the Vaal Triangle, about 35 miles south of Johannesburg, said they would close their operations between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. so their employees could join other residents at memorial services.

More than 100 people were killed in the violence that broke out Sept. 3, 1984, and continued for several weeks in Sebokeng, Sharpeville, Evaton and three other nearby townships where residents had decided to oppose a proposed rent increase.

Unrest in black townships has continued on a daily basis since then, claiming the lives of more than 2,100 people in the pasttwo years.

In Soweto, Johannesburg's main black township, clergymen and other community leaders met today to discuss how to respond to a police order prohibiting their planned mass funeral service Thursday for people killed by police in clashes there last week.

The police order, issued Tuesday night, prohibits funerals for more than one person killed by security forces, limits the number of mourners to 200, stipulates that only ordained ministers may speak, bans the display of banners or posters, and requires that written permission be obtained from the local police commander.

Police have broken up funerals before that exceeded regulations.

The official death toll from the violence in Soweto on the night of Aug. 26-27 is 21, including 20 blacks shot dead by police and a town councilor hacked to death by a group of youths.

The government says the violence was triggered by blacks attacking police with stones, fire bombs and a hand grenade which injured five officers.

However, anti-apartheid groups say the trouble started when police fired without provocation at people emerging from a meeting where they had discussed an ongoing rent boycott.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Shiites say U.S. blocked effort to free Frenchmen

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Shiite Moslem extremist group holding French and American kidnap victims said the United States blocked a deal with France to free the captive Frenchmen.

One French captive said in a tape accompanying the Tuesday statement from the Islamic Jihad that he and his companions live with "the specter of death."

In the statement, Islamic Jihad renewed its demand that two Iraqi Shiites deported to Baghdad by the French government in February be returned to Paris.

If that is not done, the statement said, Islamic Jihad will "bear no responsibility for any negative act that would affect the lives of the hostages."

The typewritten statement in Arabic and 5-minute videotape were delivered to the Beirut office of a Western television network.

Chinese drink passes test

PEKING (AP) — A new low-alcohol version of the fiery Chinese drink Moutai has passed an official taste test administered by 28 experts, the official Xinhua News Agency said today.

The experts, from major distilleries throughout China, agreed Tuesday that the lighter Moutai "smells fragrant with long enjoyable aftertaste," Xinhua said.

The original beverage is traditionally used for toasts at state banquets, but its high alcohol content "makes many foreigners shrink back," Xinhua said.

The Guizhou Moutai Distillery plans to produce 20 to 30 tons of the lighter liquor by the end of this year, Xinhua said. It did not disclose the difference in alcohol content between the original and the new drink.

Moutai is made from sorghum and is a different drink than maitai, another potent brand of Chinese alcohol.

Air ambulance crashes

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — An air ambulance crashed on takeoff from a Melbourne suburb today, killing all seven people on board, police said.

The Cessna 402 carrying five patients, a pilot and a nurse, ploughed into Essendon airport, in Melbourne's northern suburbs but did not hit any houses, police said.

An emergency services spokesman said the plane went into a nosedive as it was climbing on takeoff.

Further details were not immediately available. It was not immediately known what the patients aboard the plane were suffering from or where they were being flown.

Guam governor indicted

AGANA, Guam (AP) — Gov. Ricardo J. Bordallo was indicted today on charges related to alleged influence peddling and illegal contributions to his re-election campaign.

Bordallo was named in 11 counts of a 12-count indictment handed down by a federal grand jury here and announced in Guam U.S. District Court.

Also named in the indictment were Bordallo's assistant chief of staff, Rose F. Ramsey and Guam businessman John Borlas.

Bordallo was indicted on charges of bribery, extortion, wire fraud, conspiracy to obstruct justice and witness tampering. Ramsey was charged with extortion and conspiracy to obstruct justice. Borlas was charged with bribery.

The indictment accused Borlas of giving Bordallo $9,600 in May 1985 to obtain speedier payment of $35,000 in government bills owed Borlas' telephone company.

The indictment also alleged Bordallo and Ramsey attempted to disguise a $60,000 bribe to Bordallo from a Guam corporation as a campaign contribution.

Sikh suspect arrested

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Punjab police arrested a Sikh suspected of being a top terrorist leader wanted in connection with several killings and terrorist attacks in the troubled state, the United News of India reported Tuesday.

Harbhajan Singh, suspected second-in-command of the underground Khalistan Liberation Khalistan Liberation Army, was arrested in Batala district Monday night, the news agency quoted police as saying.

Khalistan is the name Sikh separatists give to the state they demand be carved out of Punjab. The Khalistan Liberation Army is a wing of the Khalistan Commando Force, the most powerful terrorist group.

The suspected head of the Khalistan Liberation Army, Tarscem Singh Kuhar, was captured on Aug. 12 in Punjab in an offensive recently launched by police.
