President's immune?

Earlier this month, former Arkansas state worker Paula Corbin Jones filed a lawsuit against President Clinton in U.S. District Court, alleging the chief executive made unwanted sexual advances toward her in 1991, while Clinton was still governor.

Should a person be allowed to name a sitting president as a defendant in a lawsuit? Or should the man who occupies the highest office in the land be immune from civil lawsuits?

We'd like to know your views . . .

Call Cityline's Community Pulse Poll at 560-2400 to register your views.

If you feel a president should be immune from such action, press 1; if you feel a president should be subject to civil litigation just as any other citizen, press 2. The non-scientific poll will remain open until noon Tuesday with results to be published in Wednesday's Reporter-Telegram.

Analysts: Surge in area construction, retail development has yet to top out

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Following a lull in the Midland economy, construction and interest in retail businesses and housing have picked up considerably over the last year and a half. And analysts said this surge in development has yet to top out.

"Really, the whole picture looks like a change in economic conditions," said Cameron Walker, planning and development coordinator for the city.

Walker's office has seen an increase in site plans for construction as well as zone-change requests to build.

In particular, interest along Loop 250 has skyrocketed. So much so, that it has prompted the city to form a task force and employ a consultant to examine the city's master plan for development with special emphasis along the loop.

Legal source: Rostenkowski declines offer

■ Chairman of House Ways and Means Committee rejects plea bargain, to be indicted Tuesday.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski has rejected a plea bargain and will be indicted Tuesday unless he changes his mind at the last minute, legal sources said Saturday.

Rostenkowski's attorney, Robert S. Bennett, informed U.S. Attorney Eric Holder Jr. on Thursday night that the Illinois Democrat was rejecting an offer to plead guilty to a felony and avoid a criminal trial, the sources said.

However, Bennett "still believes Rostenkowski might change his mind," said a source, speaking on condition of anonymity.

If indicted, it's likely that Rostenkowski would be charged with a broad conspiracy to defraud taxpayers, as well as other felony counts, the source said.

The indictment would allege that Rostenkowski defrauded taxpayers of hundreds of thousands of dollars. It also would accuse him of getting sweetheart deals on government-purchased vehicles; making improper purchases of gifts and furniture from his official account, an action for which Rostenkowski has reimbursed the House $82,000; hiring "ghost" employees; and receiving money improperly from the House Post Office in transactions disguised as stamp purchases.

Rostenkowski's rejection of the plea bargain was first reported Saturday by the Chicago Sun-Times.

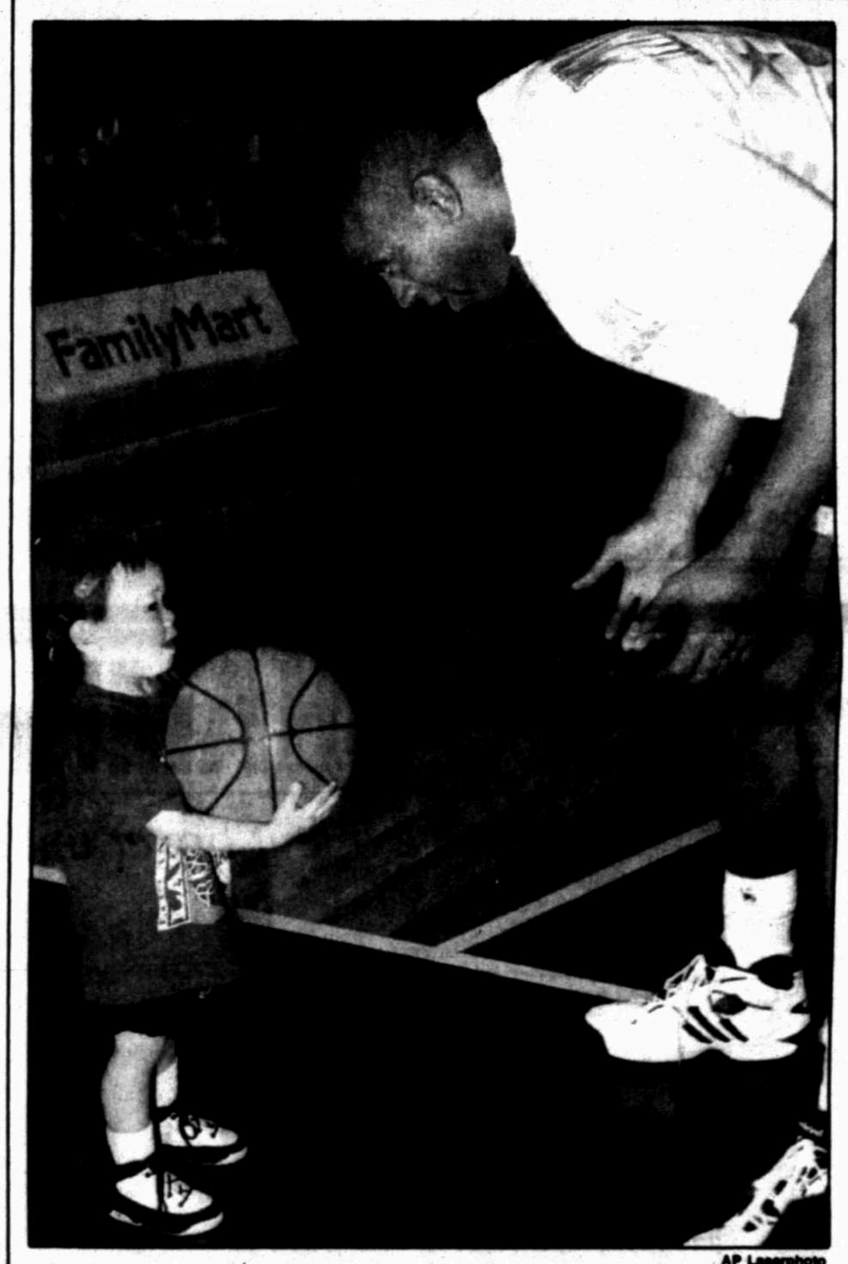

A felony indictment would force Rostenkowski, 66, to step down from his chairmanship just as he's trying to shepherd President Clinton's health care bill through the House. Rostenkowski also could choose to resign from Congress rather than operate without the power he has held since 1981 as one of the House's most influential committee chairmen.

Rep. Sam Gibbons of Florida, the second-ranking Democrat on the committee, would be expected to take over the top spot. He is an expert on trade matters but not on health care, welfare reform and other key matters before the committee. However, the House Democratic Caucus could tap someone else to head the committee — one of several panels working on health care reform.

The Rostenkowski investigation began as a probe of low-level House Post Office employees, who pleaded guilty to embezzlement and drug charges.

In a classic investigative tactic, prosecutors from the U.S. attorney's office worked their way up the ladder of the House facility — obtaining guilty pleas from the former chief of staff and from former Postmaster Robert V. Rota.

The Rota plea last July was crucial, because he admitted using the post office — staffed by House employees, not U.S. Postal Service workers — as a source of illegal cash for a Congressman A and a Congressman B.

Fatherless family builds new life, looks to Memorial Day with sadness

EDITOR'S NOTE — Old soldiers get to fade away, but the families of fallen warriors can't do that — suddenly thrust from their familiar military world, they must build new lives in a stark new universe.

SPRINGDALE, Ark. — When Army Cpl. J. Scott Lindsey died in a final, fatal spasm of the Gulf War, he carried in his pockets the two small books of Scripture his father had taken to war in Vietnam, two dollar bills, a pocketknife, a letter from his wife, and a poem he had written her during desert guard duty.

Death stalks California's struggling logging region

By Richard Cole
Associated Press

WILLITS, Calif. — Death shakes this small outpost of California's struggling logging region.

It came again last week, so fast that schoolchildren had to postpone a memorial service for one dead classmate because two more were found axed to death.

Since last summer, this depressed logging town of barely 5,000 has seen a family of five shot to death by their drugged son. Two children killed in a fire. A teen-ager crushed in an accident three weeks ago. An 8-year-old killed by a car a week ago while he was riding his bicycle.

Finally, logging truck driver William Sweazey, took an ax to his sleeping wife and three young chil-

Victim of change, success: It catches up with Tijuana

By James Anderson

TIJUANA, Mexico — Drug gangs. A police chief and presidential candidate slain. Arrests of top prosecutors. Federal and state police shooting it out on a busy boulevard.

Tijuana, the once tawdry, now bustling, border boomtown of anywhere from 900,000 to 1.5 million people, seems to be swept up in a tide of violence and hidden politicking.

Or is it?

"Los Tijuanenses, we're not the criminals," said Fernando Cervantes, a lawyer with business clients on both sides of the border. "We're not the drug traffickers in the streets. This is sad. We don't know who is doing it."

U.N. forces evacuate nearly 700 Rwandans from hotel, stadium

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — U.N. soldiers took advantage of a lull in fighting in the Rwandan capital Saturday to evacuate nearly 700 civilians trapped for weeks in a hotel and stadium.

More than 7,000 people remained at the national stadium and Milles Collines hotel in Kigali, where they have sought refuge from the clashes and murderous rampages in the city. It could take weeks to evacuate all of them.

U.N. spokesman Abdul Kabia said the United Nations has received verbal assurances from both sides that the convoys would not come under fire.

West of Kigali, rebel forces pressed toward Gitarama, headquarters of the interim government, U.N. sources said. The offensive came in advance of planned U.N.-sponsored cease-fire talks between the warring sides Monday in Kigali.

The cease-fire proposal includes a provision to put the airport under control of the United Nations so that relief supplies and 5,500 peacekeepers can be flown in. A Canadian C-130 cargo plan brought supplies to Kigali on Saturday — the first relief aircraft to reach the capital in four days because of heavy fighting around the airport.

An estimated 200,000 people have died in the past seven weeks in ethnic massacres and in fighting between the rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front and government forces.

The majority Hutu tribe leads the government forces and civilian militia gangs, which have been blamed for most of the massacres. The rebel front is dominated by the minority Tutsi tribe.

Fighting in the capital Saturday was limited to some mortar shell blasts and sporadic gunfire, Kabia said. A mortar shell fired from an area under rebel control hit a Red Cross medical facility, but no casualties were reported.

Many members of government-allied gangs have pulled out of Kigali as rebel forces advance on the capital. The gangs had blocked previous U.N. attempts to evacuate civilians.

"We are anxious to get as many people out as possible while the fighting is at a low level," Kabia said.

Those evacuated from the hotel were Tutsis who chose to go to places controlled by the rebels. Most of those in the stadium were Hutus who went to government-controlled areas.

Rebels were pressing toward Gitarama from both the east and south, leaving only one principal escape road, U.N. sources said. Tens of thousands of government soldiers and allies have tried to fortify their positions in the city in recent days, but U.N. officials said there were indications of forces retreating to the west toward Kibuye. The reports could not be immediately confirmed.

The death of President Juvenal Habyarimana, a Hutu, in a plane crash April 6 touched off the massacres and reignited a three-year-old rebel war. About 2 million people have fled their homes.

Banned planes can't bring medicine to Haiti

By Lisa M. Hamm
Associated Press Writer

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The latest trade ban against Haiti is not supposed to include humanitarian supplies — but tell that to Susan Etheridge, who runs a tiny medical clinic in a remote mountain village.

Ms. Etheridge recently treated three people for potentially deadly anthrax, and the thought of a fourth victim makes her shudder: She's out of medicine because planes bringing medical supplies have been grounded.

Medicine, humanitarian supplies and food were exempted when the United Nations banned nearly all trade with Haiti in an attempt to force out its military rulers and reinstate the ousted president, Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

Smuggling from the Dominican Republic, which shares the island of Hispaniola with Haiti, had helped Haiti's leaders evade an earlier, less stringent embargo and enrich themselves on the black market in the process.

However, the Dominican military chief, Gen. Constantino Matos Villanueva, pledged Saturday to shut the border with Haiti so tight that not "a single drop of fuel" would get through. The military also said it had stepped up arrests of smugglers and seizures of contraband gasoline.

Two weeks before the tightened embargo took effect May 21, the U.S. State Department grounded the two missionary flight services that bring in medicine, spare parts and other supplies.

The planes carried medical supplies, spare parts, generators, office equipment and educational materials to more than 600 aid organizations and almost all hospitals in this impoverished Caribbean country.

But because they fall into the net of banned cargo planes, Agape airline and Missionary Flights International have been denied permission to fly into Haiti.

"It's affecting all humanitarian aid organizations, because there's no humanitarian aid going to Haiti," said Charles Gardner — executive director of Agape, based in Sarasota, Fla. — in a telephone interview Friday.

Gardner said he found out abruptly on May 7 that Agape and Missionary Flights International of West Palm Beach, Fla., wouldn't be able to get to Haiti.

"Our cargo is exempt; it's just that you can't get permission to fly it there," explained Gardner, who has been sending hundreds of letters and making hundreds of phone calls trying to regain permission to fly.

"The wheels of bureaucracy are so big and to get them moving is incredibly difficult," he said.

In the meantime, he has 14,000 pounds of supplies sitting in his loading dock.

Among the supplies is the medicine Ms. Etheridge needs to run her isolated mountaintop Clinic of Hope, 70 miles northeast of the capital, Port-au-Prince.

The anthrax that so scares her is a treatable disease caused by an animal-borne bacteria that can live in the soil for a decade. But without penicillin and bicillin, it eats away skin like frostbite, spreads to the digestive system and kills its victims.

Ms. Etheridge needs that medicine now.

"If it (the medicine) expires, it can't come into the country," said Ms. Etheride, whose clinic is affiliated with World-Wide Missions of Pasadena, Calif. "We don't know when we'll get more medicine."

The Inter-American public affairs office at the State Department in Washington did not return repeated calls to find out why the missionary aid planes were banned.

The loss of cargo planes isn't the only obstacle to delivering aid. Bureaucracy is as big a foe.

A program of the United Nations and Organization of American States allocates gasoline to humanitarian organizations that supply food, primary health care or drinking water in Haiti.

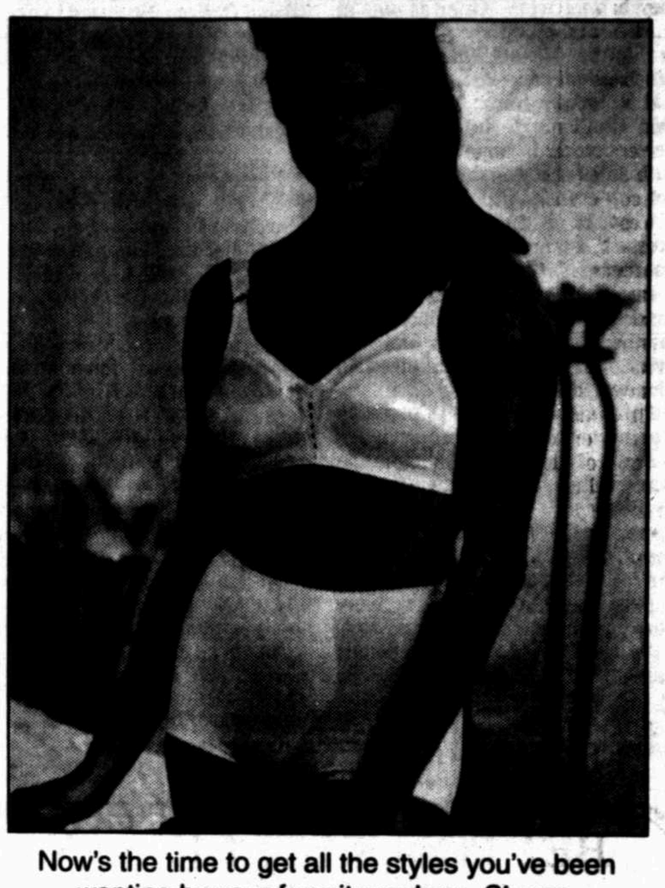

But organizations such as Christian Reformed World Relief Committee, which operate health, literacy and community development programs, aren't eligible. And a U.N. official in New York said Friday that new guidelines issued next week will make it harder for small groups to get aid.

"The only ones that will remain (eligible for aid) are the handout programs," complained Charlotte Wright, director of the Christian Reformed World Relief Committee, which is based in Grand Rapids, Mich.

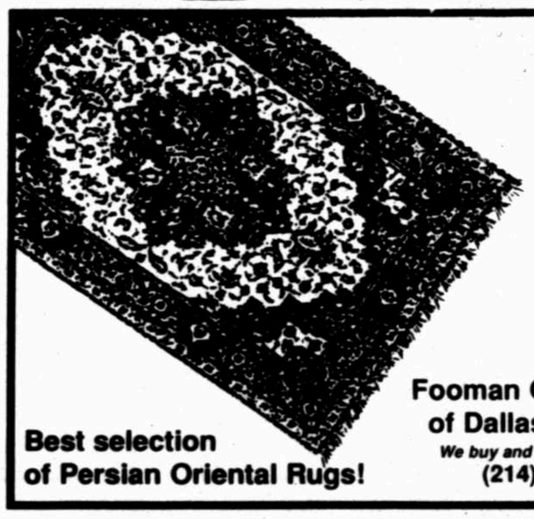

"We're reducing this nation to a nation of beggars."

FAMILY: Wife, children face Memorial Day with sadness

(From 1A)

Her feelings are strong
They hold me together
Like notes in a song. . . .
I awake in a spin
My head's in a swirl
For this is my love
My wife, my girl."

These few cherished things were packed in a small cardboard box. They reached Debi Lindsey a month later when America was in a self-congratulatory mood, jubilant at the end of a whirlwind war.

"There were so few lost — hurt and killed — that it was one big friggin' picnic," she said as she knelt before a hope chest filled with the legacy of her husband's death — newspaper articles, medals, books on the Gulf War. "By July 4th, I thought 'If I have to see another parade, I'll scream.' "

Because for Debra Ann Strain Lindsey and her three children — for the surviving spouses and children of the 293 U.S. servicemen and women who perished in the Persian Gulf War of 1990-91 — this was no painless engagement.

And it wasn't brief; for them the war goes on, an ongoing struggle to adapt to a world without their loved ones — a world that is suddenly, startlingly civilian, outside the military cocoon.

Debi tries. Energetic and lively at 29, a patient mother, her days fold one into the next, between laundry baskets and sandwiches, growing her elaborate garden, trying to dodge probing questions that bring her pain.

Most weekends, she is visited by the young soldier who tried to save her husband's life when he was felled by shrapnel.

Two or three times a month, she drives alone to J.'s grave in nearby Fayetteville, never staying. Just to check.

This year, for Memorial Day, she planned a camping trip in the Grand Canyon. She used to like the holiday. Before J. died, Memorial Day meant flying the flag and welcoming summer on the beach.

"I was young and stupid," she says. "Now, it breaks my heart."

The cease-fire was declared on Feb. 28, 1991. On the night of March 3, a Sunday, Debi Lindsey was at her kitchen table in Germany, happily turning a sheet into a welcome home banner, when she heard the knock at her door.

The military procedure for handling deaths is set down in precise detail and, per regulation, Debi's casualty assistance officer arrived Monday morning to offer condolences and information.

Debi would need to learn about benefits and about burial. She was about to be sent home — wherever that was.

"I lost everything," she says, her voice breaking. "My friends and my family. My house."

Despite the enormity of her losses, she seemed to absorb it only in little, tiny pieces.

Four days later, when Debi flew back to America, the horror of the outside world rushed in. A flight attendant asked, in front of her children, whether her husband was in the cargo hold. She did not answer.

This love story's sad and complicated ending seems all wrong. When they were teen-agers, living in the lush rural foothills of California's Sierra mountains, J. and Debi's future brimmed with adventure and promise.

He was the youngest of three children in a military family; his parents named him simply J. Scott. She was the elder of two children; her father was a letter carrier, her mother a housewife.

J. stopped by one day with his new midnight blue motorcycle and offered her a ride. Debi was 15 years old. He was almost 17. "It was love," she says. "I was the first to ride on his bike, and it went on from there."

They married in 1983, as the tulips were coming up. Then, Debi graduated from high school and, in August, J. left for Army basic training in Fort Benning, Ga. When Cole was born that October, his father first saw him in a photograph.

The road map of their eight-year marriage is dotted with tiny apartments, and years when they were eligible for food stamps but declined out of pride.

Their first home, in Hawaii, was a filthy two-bedroom apartment where Debi thought she heard termites gnawing at night. J. departed for training in South Korea, two weeks after she arrived with Cole.

A second baby, Cassie, was born Jan. 2, 1987. Then came a detour into civilian life, an airline job, and more struggles to make ends meet. J. returned to the Army.

"I was glad," Debi says with a sigh. "It's a nice life. This is going to sound strange: It's predictable in its unpredictability."

Military life, among so many different kinds of Americans, had opened her mind. She was proud of her husband, her friends, herself.

J. was accepted back at his old job of mortarman, in charge of a cannon. Given a choice, they picked a posting to Germany.

In the fall of 1988, he shipped out alone. For a year, they lived apart until he could move his family to base housing. She moved with the children to Colorado Springs, handy to an Army base, its stores and friends from Hawaii.

When at last she reached Gelnhausen, an enchanting medieval town, she found herself in a spotless three-bedroom apartment with friends grouped around a stairwell. After all their hardships, the Lindseys had found happiness.

"We finally had a plan and a family, and knew what we wanted to do," she says. "It was one of the best years of my marriage."

But when Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2, 1990, a worm of worry crept into the Lindsey household.

The orders came around Thanksgiving. He would be leaving Dec. 20.

Christmas arrived early around the stairwell. Debi remembers the crumpled wrapping paper piled up ahead-of-schedule in the trash cans.

A night or two before J. left, Debi voiced her doubts. "I didn't think they should go. There was so much 'It's oil, it's oil, it's oil' and it doesn't seem something worth dying for."

His tart, hurt reply: "Would you be proud if I died doing my duty?"

Less than a month after J.'s death, Debi Lindsey landed with her children in Springdale, in Arkansas's northwest corner. She came here because the cost of living was low. Because her in-laws live here, and they had bought J. and Debi an 80-acre farm, though it eventually was sold. And, of course, because this is where she buried her husband.

"And for lack of a better idea," she adds.

Springdale, population 33,000, is one of those protean boomtowns not yet sure what it will become — strip shopping centers and malls alternate with farms and feed and grain lots, and housing developments bump up against millionaire spreads.

News reports had thrust Debi into the hot light of unwanted celebrity. Knots of reporters greeted her at airports. Then came the deluge of sympathy cards and letters from strangers, in nearly every one a check. Thousands of dollars, about $8,000 she thinks, paid for a car and two pairs of bunkbeds for the kids.

The money astonished her.

"At first, I couldn't fathom why they were doing it," she says, "until I realized they wanted to do something to help and this is what they could think of."

Her family now lives in a four-bedroom, ranch-style house of yellow brick and blue-green shutters near the bottom of a cul de sac. A steal at $69,000, Debi is filling it with found furniture and modest antiques. The yards front and back bloom with flowers and children's toys, a slide and wading pool.

In all that space, Debi has not found a good place for the flag she was given on March 11, 1991, the day she buried her husband at Fayetteville National Cemetery, 10 miles to the south.

"I haven't found a home for it where it doesn't leap out at me," she says.

In death, J. Scott Lindsey was awarded a Bronze Star Medal and promoted to sergeant. In the Fayetteville cemetery, he lies alone, the only Gulf War casualty, surrounded by veterans of World War II, men who ripened into their 70s and 80s.

WEATHER WATCH

Today sunny, high near 95

Staff Report

Today should be sunny with a high near 95 and southwest winds 5-15 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low between 65-70, according to a spokesman for the National Weather Service in Midland.

Memorial Day should be sunny with a high between 95-100.

After a high of 95, compared to the record high of 102 set in 1974, temperatures dropped to 60 compared to the record low of 49 set in 1992.

STATE

Scattered thunderstorms darkened the central and southeast Texas skies Saturday, bringing heavy rain and hail to some areas, the National Weather Service said.

Clouds filled the afternoon skies over south and east Texas on Saturday, while sunny skies prevailed elsewhere.

Reports of marble-size hail were numerous during the afternoon from Austin to Alvin to Beaumont. Thunderstorms also began cropping up over the Texas Hill Country as twilight fell. No severe damage or injuries were reported.

Afternoon highs ranged from 80 in Sherman to 97 in Wink.

The scattered storms came after patchy dense fog covered the coastal plains, while clouds mostly covered the eastern half of the state. Morning temperatures Texas ranged from 53 in Marfa to 77 in Galveston.

Forecasters said low this morning clouds over North Texas should disperse by noon. Otherwise, the Memorial Day weekend should be fair to partly cloudy and warmer throughout Texas.

A slight chance of showers and thunderstorms are in this afternoon's forecast for Southeast Texas and this evening forecast from the Big Country to the Edwards Plateau.

Highs should range from the mid-80s to the mid-90s, except for between 100 and 105 along the Rio Grande. Lows should settle in the 60s.

NATION

Temperatures fell to record lows early Saturday from the Carolinas through New England, and thunderstorms were scattered across the northern Plains and the South.

High pressure settled into the Ohio Valley, pulling unseasonably cold air across sections of the East, the National Weather Service said.

Record lows were 49 at Greenville-Spartanburg, S.C.; 37 at Jackson, Ky.; 44 at Paducah, Ky.; 39 at Roanoke, Va.; 40 at Cincinnati; 34 at Bluefield, W.Va.; 32 at Beckley, W.Va.; 37 at Huntington, W.Va.; 36 at Parkersburg, W.Va.; 36 at Clarksburg, W.Va.; 31 at Elkins, W.Va.; 36 at Atlantic City, N.J.; 39 at Allentown, Pa.; 36 at Scranton, Pa.; 35 at Binghampton, N.Y.; 33 at Albany, N.Y.; 40 at Providence, R.I.; 30 at St. Johnsbury, Vt.; and 32 at Caribou, Maine.

The lows at Cincinnati and Huntington erased records that had stood since 1907.

Elsewhere, Flint, Mich., tied its record of 36.

Saturday morning's low for the Lower 48 states was 27 at Sanford, Maine.

Another area of high pressure spread cool air across across the Northwest and Rockies. Readings dipped into the 30s from parts of northeastern Oregon into western Montana, and at higher elevations of the central Rockies.

A cold front sweeping eastward across the northern Plains touched off thunderstorms across sections of Colorado and North Dakota, the weather service said.

Farther south, thunderstorms with locally heavy developed across parts of the South along a cold front extending from southeastern Texas into central Florida.

Thunderstorms produced small hail near San Augustine, Texas; Shelbyville, Texas; Powhatan, La.; and Grant Parish, La., the weather service said.

During the 24 hours up to 7 a.m. CDT, 2.10 inches of rain fell at Lufkin, Texas, and 1.83 inches fell at McComb, Miss.

GROWTH: Construction in Midland hits surge

(From 1A)

Meanwhile, the construction of Loop 250 has literally moved forward — to replace the service roads motorists have used for years — setting the stage for retail businesses alongside.

North of the roadway construction, east of Garfield Street, workers are building an Outback Steakhouse, an Australian-themed restaurant. Next door to the east, shoppers are visiting the recently opened women's apparel store, Talbots.

Slated to be built to the east of the up-and-coming steak house is a Denny's restaurant, and to the west, an Office Depot, an office supply store.

Crossing to the southside of that section of the loop, between Ward Street and Whitmire Avenue, developers want to build two restaurants: an Olive Garden and a Black-Eyed Pea.

But that will require the City Council to approve a zone change. Last summer, the council denied a zone change at that location that would have permitted a Best Buy consumer electronics store.

Two intersections west, a 200,000-square-foot Wal-Mart supercenter is under construction at Loop 250 and Midland Drive. A Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburgers restaurant is set to be built next door.

Nearby, off Midland Drive near the loop, a Rosa's Cafe & Tortilla Factory restaurant is under construction and a Texas National Bank is set to have a groundbreaking this week.

Moving southwest on Loop 250, developers recently received preliminary approval to build a shopping center on 23 acres of land south of Wadley Avenue. The same developers have made preparations for apartments and a retirement home or townhomes nearby.

And at the southwest corner of Loop 250 and Andrews Highway, a Builders Square, a 110,000-square-foot home improvement store, is scheduled for construction.

On another portion of Loop 250, about a quarter-mile west of Big Spring Street, a 50-acre golf-training facility is currently under construction.

Aside from the popularity of development along Loop 250, other construction is going on around town.

A T&T Donuts shop is to be erected at Midland Drive and Shell Avenue.

A Midland American Bank drive-in is under construction on Cuthbert Avenue east of Andrews Highway; a Bank One is being built off Courtyard Drive across from the Midland Park Mall.

Construction of the 200,000 square-foot Westwood Medical Center, a 94-bed facility to replace the 60-bed Physicians and Surgeons Hospital, is under way at Andrews Highway, west of McDonald Street.

And a private medical clinic is being built on Andrews Highway east of Midland Drive.

Two Family Dollar stores were recently constructed and are now open for business on Big Spring Street and Rankin Highway. And on Andrews Highway, two hamburger drive-through restaurants, Grillz and Central Park, recently began serving customers.

Other new additions in the last year include a Rex TV and Appliance store on North Midkiff Road and a Taco Villa restaurant on Courtyard Drive.

And new retail in Midland doesn't necessarily mean new construction.

"We think it's been pretty significant there's been some interest in redevelopment, too," Walker said.

That includes the H.E.B. supermarket chain, which may purchase the majority of the La Villita Plaza on Wadley Avenue near Midkiff Road to house a grocery store.

Already doing business, Lack's Furniture Center leased part of a building on Cuthbert Avenue near Midkiff Road, and there has been nine new leases at the Plaza Oaks shopping center on the south side of Wadley Avenue near Garfield Street.

Pier 1 Imports will open a store in the near future at the Midland Plaza shopping center, at Loop 250 and Midkiff Road.

Across the loop at the current Wal-Mart location, three retail stores — two new to Midland — are reportedly planning to lease that space.

On Andrews Highway west of Cuthbert Avenue, a Schlotzsky's Deli is expected to move into the building that houses the Midland American Bank, which is being relocated.

Meanwhile, other retail businesses — including a Target discount store — are reportedly scouting locations in Midland.

In addition to retail development, permits for housing in the city have increased.

"We've seen subdivision growth in Green Tree, and up in Briarwood and Grassland Estates. And we've had new subdivisions laid out, none of which have developed yet but we expect to," Walker said.

Three planned subdivisions north of Mockingbird Lane have received preliminary plat approval: Midkiff Estates — 193 lots, North Midland Estates — 95 lots, and Red Oaks — 598 lots.

Overbuilding of homes in the late 1970s and early 1980s has been absorbed by the population growth causing a need for new housing — especially upper-end, said Neill McClung, vice president of real estate for Southwest Royalties, developer of Red Oaks.

Nevertheless, residential construction has remained strong over the years in Midland, McClung said.

Most of the new homes were within established subdivisions; the needs have now caused developments on the outer edges of town.

For example, the planned Red Oaks subdivision — 375 acres — is located north of Mockingbird Lane west of the Midland Country Club.

"We felt like there was a real need for a custom-home area," McClung said. "The project will be where the individual will buy the lot for the most part and select the architect and builder."

McClung acknowledged that the planned subdivision is indicative of economic conditions in Midland. "I'm very bullish about it," he said.

"I think (Midland) has gotten to the size you just can't say it's an oil-patch town anymore," McClung said.

Indeed, Midland has grown in more ways than one.

In January 1993, the federal government approved a request to classify Midland and Odessa as a standard Metropolitan Statistical Area. With a population in excess of 225,000, Midland/Odessa is the 12th largest metropolitan area in Texas and the largest population center in West Texas.

In the eyes of national retail chains and other businesses, that population size is ripe for investment, according to several observers of the Midland economy.

"There's a greater emphasis on this (city) as a regional shopping center," said Jerry Jones, president of the Midland Business Center.

That becomes especially true as many retail stores in smaller West Texas cities are closing their doors for good, he said.

Tom Stinson, economic development manager for the Midland Chamber of Commerce, said retail sales in Midland have climbed steadily since 1986.

Economic observers believe the retail outlook is part of a greater economic picture in Midland.

"I think we're on the upturn significantly and that's very positive for the community," Jones said.

"I think part of the transition is a movement from the city's focus primarily on (major) oil companies to independents or smaller operators, and a trend on being a retail center," he said. "I think we are seeing a growth in diversification."

Stinson agreed and noted some settling down following the restructuring movement among the major oil companies.

And the Midland economy isn't all oil and retail.

The chamber was instrumental in attracting six manufacturing companies to the city over the last three years, Stinson said. Those companies generate about $10 million annually for the Midland economy.

"We've also seen growth in our existing manufacturing base," he said.

Other factors influencing the economy include demographic and employment shifts, an increase in retirement in the area, and although interest rates are rising, people taking advantage of lower rates.

"I think it's part of a regional and national pattern of shifting," Jones said. And for the large part, the changes have been favorable to Midland, he said.

Midland attitudes are changing as well.

After the bust in the early 1980s, "there was a long time where there was a high degree of uncertainty," Jones said.

As a result, that perception was damaging to the economy to the point where the national media portrayed the oil industry as "the last person to leave, turn off the lights," Jones said.

Overall, analysts see the upswing in attitudes and the economy continuing.

"I think it's a good steady solid increase rather than a boom-bust cycle," Stinson said.

SHAKE: Deaths stalk California outpost

(From 1A)

dren on Tuesday or Wednesday, then shot himself in the chest.

"Nobody can understand a thing like this. There just aren't words to in the language to describe this," said Sweazey's neighbor, Margaret Young.

Maybe, as Mrs. Young suggested, there is a darker side to this area. The man who allegedly abducted and killed Polly Klaas lived down the road from Willits in Ukiah. Residents said both Charles Manson and the Rev. Jim Jones once lived nearby.

Police Chief Robert Foster said callers are always offering explanations. Space aliens or supernatural serial killers, they said.

"It's just a string of bad luck," Foster said.

The latest casualties were Barbara Ann Sweazey, 32, and her three children: 12-year-old Joshua, 9-year-old Jacob and 11-month-old Zecharia.

They were all last seen alive playing ball outside their yellow bungalow where a barrel swing hangs from a shady oak tree and a hummingbird feeder dangles over the cluttered front porch.

At Blosser Lane Elementary School, Joshua and Jacob's classmates were supposed to plant a rose bush Thursday morning for 8-year-old Nathan Crittendon, who was struck and killed May 21. The ceremony was postponed when the bodies of the Sweazey family were found.

For the second time in a week, school psychologist Rod Gabrielson and his colleagues found themselves counseling bewildered pupils.

"Verbalized or not, they want to know 'Why did this happen? How could this happen to me?'" he said. "Unfortunately, in a situation like this, I'm not sure there is an answer."

Maybe some of it traces to Willits' economic decline, Foster said. This town, about 125 miles north of San Francisco, once cut the redwoods that built America, but its only growth industry now seems to be thrift stores.

"When we respond to our domestic violence calls, a fair amount of them do relate to economics — money, loss of a job, then substance abuse," Foster said.

Phil Shuster, who owns the trucking firm where Sweazey spent his last day moving logs from Fort Bragg to coastal mills, sees the economic toll.

"People who work for me, especially this winter and last winter, were more depressed and not nearly as happy as they had been in the past," Shuster says. "You're trying to make a living in six months, and it's just impossible."

Arafat names 14 ministers to govern Gaza, Jericho

■ 10 more seats remain to be filled.

N.Y. Times News Service

JERICHO, West Bank — Yasser Arafat on Saturday named 13 men and one woman as ministers to the authority that is to govern the Gaza Strip and Jericho under the self-rule accord that the Palestine Liberation Organization negotiated with Israel.

About half the appointees come from Arafat's headquarters in Tunis. They either took part in negotiations with Israel in the last nine months or have been the PLO chairman's comrades since 1965 as he moved from Jordan to Lebanon to Tunisia.

In an effort to widen support for the peace agreement, Arafat named well-known figures from the Israeli-occupied territories, including Elias Freij, the mayor of Bethlehem since 1972; Saeb Erakat, a political science professor, and several lawyers and doctors from prominent families.

The appointments to the Palestinian National Authority, as the governing body is officially called, now leave 10 more seats to be filled. Arafat may be holding them out in the hope of persuading other top officials who have so far refrained from serving under him.

The members of the authority are expected to accompany him to Jericho next month, when they are be sworn in at a public ceremony.

Among the most notable of the powerful figures in the leadership is Nabil Shaath, 55, a businessman and public administration expert who has emerged as the top negotiator in the talks with Israel. Shaath, who holds a doctorate in public administration, was put in charge of planning and economic cooperation.

Ahmad Qorai, 53, who conducted all financial and economic talks with Israel, was named minister of economy and trade. Mohammed Zuhdi Nashashibi, a Palestinian banker from a prominent Jerusalem family, was placed in charge of finance. Erakat will oversee local government.

Freij, 76, was placed in charge of tourism and monuments. He is a Christian Palestinian with long experience in managing the visits by Christian pilgrims every year to the city, and has helped sustain it by securing loans and grants from Western countries for public works.

The portfolio for social affairs was given to Intisar Wazir, 52, the widow of Khalil Wazir, a popular PLO official who was killed by Israeli commandos in Tunis in 1988.

Over the last decade, Mrs. Wazir has helped provide care for hundreds of Palestinian orphans and families of men and women killed or wounded by Israeli troops during the 27 years of occupation of the West Bank and Gaza.

North Korea rejects proposal to monitor reactor

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A U.N. team left North Korea on Saturday after the communist state rejected proposals for monitoring the refueling of a nuclear reactor, heightening prospects that the Security Council will take up punitive sanctions.

North Korea's official news agency said, however, there were no plans to stop unloading spent fuel from the reactor at the Yongbon nuclear complex.

"It is utterly nonsensical to tell us to suspend the refueling of the reactor," the Korean Central News Agency, monitored in Tokyo, quoted a North Korean analyst as saying.

Meanwhile, there were reports in Tokyo that North Korea planned to test an improved version of the Rodong 1 missile, which can reach most of western Japan.

The head of the U.N. nuclear watchdog agency told the Security Council in a letter Friday that North Korea was removing fuel rods so fast that the agency could lose "within days" its ability to measure the plutonium produced at the Yongbon complex.

North Korea has been suspected of converting plutonium from the small research reactor into weapons-grade materials.

The North claims its nuclear program is peaceful, but for more than a year has evaded demands for full inspections by the International Atomic Energy Agency.

In a statement Saturday from its headquarters in Vienna, Austria, the IAEA said its negotiators had left Pyongyang after failing to win an agreement. Two inspectors will remain in North Korea.

In Seoul, President Kim Youngsam was quoted as saying it was highly likely the U.N. Security Council would now consider imposing sanctions and that even China, North Korea's closest ally, would probably support such an action.

"Then the situation on the Korean peninsula will grow extremely tense," the opposition party quoted him as telling an opposition leader on Saturday. Kim's office refused to discuss the remarks.

Security Council members met Friday night to discuss the letter from IAEA director general Hans Blix. More talks were scheduled at the United Nations on Tuesday.

Some U.S. officials believe North Korea already has one or two nuclear bombs, possibly made with plutonium acquired from a 1989 change of fuel rods.

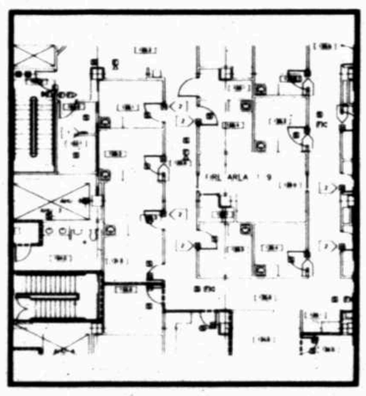

North Korea claims it removed only a small number of fuel rods that year — too few to make nuclear bombs — but the IAEA says it has reason to suspect the North has more plutonium than that.

Physical analysis of certain rods in the reactor's core would enable the IAEA to establish their age, thereby revealing how many were withdrawn in 1989.

The fuel rods currently being removed from the reactor are said to contain enough plutonium for several more bombs.

Troops wage artillery duel near Serb territory

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian Serbs fought artillery duels with Bosnian Croat and government troops Saturday near a crucial northern corridor linking Serb holdings in the east and west.

About 100 artillery rounds were fired by both sides around the government-held town of Gradacac on Saturday, after heavy shelling there Friday killed one civilian and wounded two others, said Capt. Jens Kirk, a U.N. spokesman in nearby Tuzla.

Croatian radio, meanwhile, reported several people were injured when Bosnian Serbs pounded a Bosnian Croat stronghold on Bosnia's northern border with Croatia. About 20 shells landed inside Croatia, Kirk said, citing the report.

There was no immediate independent confirmation. But an assault could have come in retaliation for a Croat attack reported earlier that killed one person and injured 40 in Serb-held Brcko, a town that sits astride the thin Serb-held land corridor.

The report of a Croat attack came from the Bosnian Serb news agency SRNA.

The fighting showed how little had been achieved at peace talks in France earlier in the week between an international mediating group, consisting of the United States, Russia and the European Union, and Bosnia's warring factions.

The mediators have proposed that a coalition of Croats and the Muslim-led government get 51 percent of Bosnia and the Serbs 49 percent. Both camps are demanding more land.

On Saturday, the United Nations made another effort to end hostilities by inviting the leaders of the warring factions to a meeting intended to achieve an overall ceasefire. The conference would be held Thursday and Friday in Geneva, a U.N. press release said.

Yasushi Akashi, the U.N. special representative for former Yugoslavia, also invited U.S. and Russian special envoys Charles Redman and Vitaly Churkin to attend, along with top U.N. military commanders from Bosnia.

But the positions of the warring sides make it highly unlikely the Geneva talks will produce concrete results.

Speaking in Serb-dominated Yugoslavia, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic pledged not to sign any accord unless U.N. sanctions — imposed to punish Yugoslavia for instigating the Bosnian war — are lifted first.

He also said any territorial concessions would have to be ratified by the Bosnian Serbs' hard-line assembly or by a general referendum of Bosnian Serbs. In either case, chances of approval likely would be slim.

The Bosnian war began in April 1992 when the minority Serbs, armed and led by the Yugoslav army, rebelled against independence from Yugoslavia. They now control 72 percent of the country. The conflict has left at least 200,000 people dead or missing.

Elsewhere in northern Bosnia on Saturday, fighting tapered off near Tesanj, where government forces and Bosnian Croat troops pushed back besieging Bosnian Serbs over the preceding week.

Cooperation between Croat and government troops has grown in recent weeks, following the end of hostilities and creation of a federation loosely uniting the two groups.

The cooperation seems most successful in northern Bosnia. Central Bosnia, where the two former foes battled fiercely last year, is tense.

About 100 Cubans invade Belgian embassy hoping to win exit visas

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A crowd of Cubans apparently seeking to emigrate invaded the residence of the Belgian ambassador to Cuba on Saturday.

The Cubans posted a placard outside the residence saying that 114 people were inside, according to a reporter who visited the scene. He said about 20 police had gathered outside.

"A group of unidentified people penetrated the residence of the Belgian ambassador in this capital and the motives for the action are not known," reported the Cuban government's Prensa Latina news agency, quoting an unidentified foreign ministry official.

In Brussels, Belgium's Foreign Ministry confirmed about 100 people had occupied the residency compound. Officials told the national news agency Belga that Ambassador Paul Belmeirsch spoke with the intruders and Cuban authorities.

The officials said they are waiting to find out the Cubans' demands.

No one answered the telephone at the Havana embassy.

The would-be emigrants entered at about noon, some going through an open door and others jumping a fence.

Cubans frustrated in attempts to leave the island have sometimes resorted to embassy invasions in efforts to win asylum abroad.

Scores of Cubans invaded the Spanish, Czech, Swiss and Belgian embassies in 1990 demanding permission to emigrate.

At least 11 were given visas and emigrated via Mexico after forcing their way into the Mexican Embassy last year. Four tried to obtain visas by invading the Canadian Embassy in April.

Hundreds rushed the U.S. Interest Section on Havana's waterfront in February after hearing a false rumor that a mass of visas would be issued. Cuban police arrested 82 people.

Donut-shop workers would gossip about tapes, ex-employee says

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Employees at two Dunkin' Donuts stores used hidden microphones to eavesdrop on customers' coffee talk, fast-forwarding to the juicy parts that involved people they knew, a former employee says.

The best gossip — particularly conversations about cheating on spouses — would later make the rounds of the shop, the employee said in Saturday's edition of the Manchester Union Leader.

"They would make fun of people's private lives," said Tammy O'Neal, who worked at Dunkin' Donuts for three years before being fired in 1992.

The stores' current managers said no one is listening to customers' conversations now.

News reports last week revealed that Dunkin' Donuts and other businesses routinely used hidden microphones for security and to monitor customer service.

A security contractor said he installed audio taping systems in about 300 Dunkin' Donuts stores in the Northeast. Others say hidden microphones are common in many businesses, including restaurants and clothing stores.

A South Florida company, U.S. Arms, has installed at least 1,000 hidden microphones in retail stores, its owner, Allan Lawrence told The New York Times. He said they include dime-sized mikes on clothing racks to eavesdrop on potential shoplifters.

Responding to the stories, Dunkin' Donuts directed its shops nationwide to unplug the microphones and destroy tapes. It said video monitoring may continue.

Spokesman Bill Chiccarelli said franchise owners are not obligated to obey, but "with all the adverse publicity, we are confident they will comply."

'I told her if she wasn't listening to my private conversation, she wouldn't have gotten her feelings hurt.'
— Tammy O'Neal,

Meanwhile, New Hampshire Attorney General Jeffrey Howard banned the microphones, saying they violated state law. He said as many as 35 Dunkin' Donuts stores broke the law, but he did not intend to press charges.

Ms. O'Neal said that a Dunkin' Donuts supervisor, who no longer works for the company, fast-forwarded surveillance videotapes until she saw someone she knew. Then, Ms. O'Neal said, the woman and other store employees listened to their conversations.

Once, Ms. O'Neal said she sat in the dining area and made uncomplimentary comments about her supervisor. Two days later, Ms. O'Neal said, the woman confronted her about the comments.

"I told her if she wasn't listening to my private conversation, she wouldn't have gotten her feelings hurt," Ms. O'Neal said.

Identical twins are co-valedictorians

COLUMBUS, Miss. (AP) — Quintrelle and Quintelle Griggs are identical twins. Really smart ones.

The 17-year-old sisters are co-valedictorians of Columbus High School's graduating class.

The two share perfect grade-point averages of 4.0. Their quality-point averages, which include bonus academic courses, are identical, too. Both have participated in numerous school activities, including the National Honor Society and the marching band.

"I'm honored," Quintrelle said. "I was shocked that we both had the same grade-point average."

The sisters also share future plans: They plan to attend Mississippi University for Women for two years to major in pre-engineering. Then they will transfer to Mississippi State University to complete their studies in engineering.

One thing they don't share is personality. Quintelle said she is easy-going, while her sister has a quick temper.

Quintrelle sees it differently.

"Quintelle is more shy," she said, "and I say what I feel."

AIDS virus infects at least five volunteers in trials of vaccine

CHICAGO (AP) — At least five volunteers in the government's principal, AIDS immunization study have become infected with the virus, despite having been vaccinated, the Chicago Tribune reported in today's editions.

The matter raises concerns about how well the vaccine works and whether it may actually increase the likelihood of people getting infected.

The vaccines contain only a piece of the AIDS virus. In theory, such vaccines generate antibodies that attack and neutralize the entire AIDS virus should it later appear.

Each of the five vaccinated subjects who later became infected previously had developed normal levels of HIV antibodies.

"There was nothing unusual about the responses of these individuals. Nothing stands out about their response to the vaccine;" said Dr. Jack Killen, the National Institutes of Health official in charge of the vaccine trials.

Two of the five infected were considered to be at low risk for catching the virus; the other three were considered at high risk, meaning they had traits or behavior patterns that made them more likely to be exposed to the HIV virus than most people.

The five cases have been discussed at scientific meetings, including one closed-door session in Washington last month in which researchers debated whether the NIH should continue plans to test the vaccine on thousands of new uninfected volunteers.

"We just don't know what we're going to do," Killen said.

The trials have been designed to test the safety and immune response of the vaccines, not their effectiveness in preventing HIV infection.

"This could mean the vaccine is 90 percent effective, and you're seeing a leak of 10 percent," said Dr. Donald Francis, a scientist with vaccine maker Genentech. "Or it could mean the vaccine is 100 percent ineffective."

About 1,400 volunteers have enrolled in the vaccine trials at five universities. The vaccines are under consideration for use in the expanded trials, but if further trials take place, they may include only 5,000 new volunteers instead of the 10,000 previously planned, the newspaper said.

Four of the five infections, Killen said, have occurred in volunteers given vaccine made by Genentech or by Biocene, both based in California.

Francis said he shared other researchers' concerns that those receiving the AIDS vaccine may be left more susceptible to HIV infection than they otherwise would have been. Such vaccines both stimulate and burden the immune system.

"We saw this in the trials for hepatitis-B vaccine," he said. "This is something you always have to watch for in a vaccine trial."

CHANGE: Burst of violence follows rapid success in Tijuana

(From 1A)

This much is clear: Tijuana is changing rapidly.

By removing import tariffs, the North American Free Trade Agreement has eliminated some advantages enjoyed by the "maquiladora" assembly-plant industries on the nearby U.S. border. But NAFTA also has opened new opportunities.

Franchises of such U.S. icons as McDonald's and Burger King, Domino's Pizza and Kentucky Fried Chicken dot a downtown area that is filling up with gleaming bank and office buildings.

The gloss and modernity is framed by shantytowns that still line some of Tijuana's hillsides and canyons. The government says it wants to pave and light the slum streets, but can't afford it.

Floods in 1993 hit the shantytowns particularly hard, killing more than 30 people and leaving 15,000 homeless. The city paid to move 300 families home to other cities.

Both Tijuana and Baja California state are governed by the opposition National Action Party, elected on a reform agenda. Its cooperation with the long-governing Institutional Revolutionary Party's federal government, however wary, had been widely viewed as democracy at work in Mexico.

All seemed well until March, when Luis Donaldo Colosio, the governing party's presidential candidate, was assassinated and federal police shot it out with state police officers accused of protecting a drug trafficker. In April, police chief Jose Federico Benitez Lopez was ambushed and slain.

What is behind such a burst of violence?

"The logic of local politics doesn't explain these events," said Tonatiuh Guillen Lopez of the Colegio de la Frontera Norte, a think tank.

Drug traffickers have capitalized on Tijuana's status as a business center next door to California, he said, making it "a victim of where it is and of its commercial success."

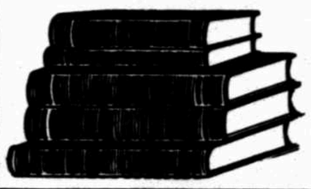

Tijuana has an official unemployment rate of only 1 percent, largely because of the border plants, but tens of thousands of its people are underemployed, many working as street vendors just to get by.

Recession and underemployment have hurt business more than the headlines, said Paulo Carrillo, owner of Aidez Curios. Carrillo said his sales have declined more than 55 percent since 1990 and he takes in $150 on a "very good" day.

"It isn't as bad as they say," he said of the violence. "Everything is calm here."

Sightseers strolling along Avenida Revolucion, the main attraction for tourists, seemed unconcerned about personal safety.

Clinton says he's more optimistic about future than when he took office

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reflecting on a world with "ragged edges and uncertainties" as the 50th anniversary of D-Day approaches, President Clinton said he is more optimistic about the future than when he took office.

"I'm quite encouraged, actually, about the way things are going," Clinton told the BBC in one of two interview transcripts released Saturday.

The president acknowledged limits on his ability to shape world events but rejected criticisms that his generation of leaders lacks the vision of the Roosevelt-Churchill era.

He added: "I admit there are ragged edges and uncertainties, but that was the case after the Second World War for a few years as well."

In the second interview, with Italian television, Clinton said he was learning the limits of his power as president but "I am, frankly, more optimistic than I was about the future of the world when I took office."

Clinton said Harry Truman once said the president's job "largely consisted of trying to talk other people into doing what they ought to do anyway. Sometimes I feel that way, that I don't have as much power as I thought I would have."

Speaking of the ongoing bloodshed in Bosnia, for example, he said the United States "cannot impose our will, and we have to be flexible and listening."

Overall, Clinton said, "The United States is still prepared to lead in a world in which our concerns are clear — security, prosperity, democracy and human rights."

Clinton echoed similar themes in his weekly radio address, holding out the sacrifice of the D-Day veterans as a model for America's ongoing commitment to freedom around the world.

The president, whose foreign policy has been labeled by critics as uneven and ineffective, made it clear that new challenges loomed and there were limits to what the United States could do.

Ethnic and religious hatreds, hunger, economic and environmental devastation, and the threat of spreading nuclear weapons technology all persist, he said.

"In this new era we cannot dispatch our troops to solve every problem where our values are offended by human misery, and we should not," Clinton said. "But we are prepared to defend ourselves and our fundamental interests when they are threatened."

In the Republican response to Clinton's address, Rep. Gerald Solomon of New York said one way to honor the nation's military personnel this Memorial Day weekend is to "give them the tools that just might save their lives."

He criticized Clinton's proposed defense cuts, saying the reductions would turn the U.S. military into a "skeleton force" unable to curb aggression and protect American interests abroad.

Clinton flies to Italy on Wednesday to begin an eight-day trip that will culminate in a huge celebration of the Normandy landing on June 6, 1944, by 175,000 Allied troops who broke through Hitler's "Atlantic Wall" and helped liberate Europe.

In his interview with Italian television, he voiced no concern about the rise to power of the National Alliance, successor to the neo-fascist Italian Social Movement.

Mrs. Clinton's brother marries at White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's brother-in-law, Tony Rodham, and the daughter of Sen. Barbara Boxer were married Saturday in the first White House wedding in 23 years.

The Rose Garden was brimming with pink and white geraniums and, of course, roses, as Clinton and his wife played host for the marriage of Mrs. Clinton's younger brother to Nicole Boxer.

About 250 guests attended the 40-minute ceremony, which included poetry, scripture and lilting violin music. Judge Peter Capua, a family friend from Miami, performed the wedding under a white canopy after remarks from a Methodist minister and a Jewish lay representative.

"Everyone was extremely happy," reported Neel Lattimore, a spokesman for first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton. "There was applause at the end of the wedding and a lot of laughter."

Fourteen-year-old Chelsea Clinton, in a teal gown, performed her duties as a bridesmaid with aplomb, Lattimore said. And he described Clinton as "gleeful."

After the ceremony, guests retired to the first lady's garden and the state rooms for a buffet dinner and reception.

Ms. Boxer, a 26-year-old film company executive from Marin, Calif., said in one prenuptial interview that she thought it was "going to be a kick."

"How often do you get to have friends at the White House?" she told the Marin Independent Journal. "I'm excited to have the kind of party my friends will remember."

Rodham, 39, works for the Democratic National Committee. The groom's brother, U.S. Senate hopeful Hugh Rodham of Florida, was best man.

The families said they — not taxpayers — were paying for the wedding, which was closed to the media. The bride's mother, a Democrat, represents California in the Senate.

The last White House wedding was in 1971, when Tricia Nixon married Harvard Law student Ed Cox. The only time a sibling of the first couple wed there was in 1812, when the sister of Dolley Madison, Lucy Payne Washington, married Supreme Court Justice Thomas Todd.

Clinton's half-brother, Roger, married Molly Martin in Dallas in March after declining the Clintons' invitation to wed at the White House.

Clinton dutifully helped host the rehearsal dinner at a private home Friday and steered clear of Saturday's preparations by heading out for a round of golf. The groom, best man and father of the bride were part of the golfing party, as well. They returned to the White House just two hours before the nuptials began.

Teacher wins excellence award

■ State bar grants Leon Jaworski award to Zoe Carter, who teaches at San Jacinto Junior High School.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Zoe Carter, an educator with the Midland Independent School District, is one of seven Texans to receive the Leon Jaworski Award for Teaching Excellence in Law Focused Education.

Granted by the State Bar of Texas, the Leon Jaworski Award is open to all public or private school teachers who have at least five years experience in their field.

Only four other awards were presented. A team of three educators near Houston won one award; the other awards went to a Plano woman, a Dallas woman and a Bryan man.

According to the State Bar of Texas, the Leon Jaworski Award is given to educators who have made "an outstanding contribution to law-focused education" and whose programs:

- foster understanding of the values of our legal and judicial system;
- inform and educate students as to the roles in society of the law, the courts, the law-enforcement agencies and the legal profession;
- stimulate a deeper sense of individual responsibility, instructing students to recognize their duties as well

Family to display its spelling skills in nation's capital

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Tarfia Faizullah won't be the only member of the family competing in a national spelling bee this week — both of her parents will be competing, too.

It's all a part of the 67th Annual Scripps Howard National Spelling Bee. Tarfia was the winner of the regional spelling bee sponsored by the Reporter-Telegram.

She'll be competing in Washington, D.C., on Wednesday and Thursday. Tarfia's parents, Dr. A.M. Faizullah and his wife, Fahmida, will compete in the first Merriam-Webster's Parents of Champions Spelling Bee on Memorial Day.

Tarfia and other student spellers will exchange places and sit in the audience while their parents, randomly grouped in teams of three, duel in a regular spelling bee format until a winning team is crowned. Spouses aren't allowed on the same team.

Each member of the winning team is awarded $750 in cash and prizes from Merriam-Webster, the bee's sponsor

"Bee week is always memorable, but having the adults kick off the festivities with their own bee is certain to be a highlight of good-natured fun for everyone involved," said William Burleigh, executive vice president of Scripps Howard.

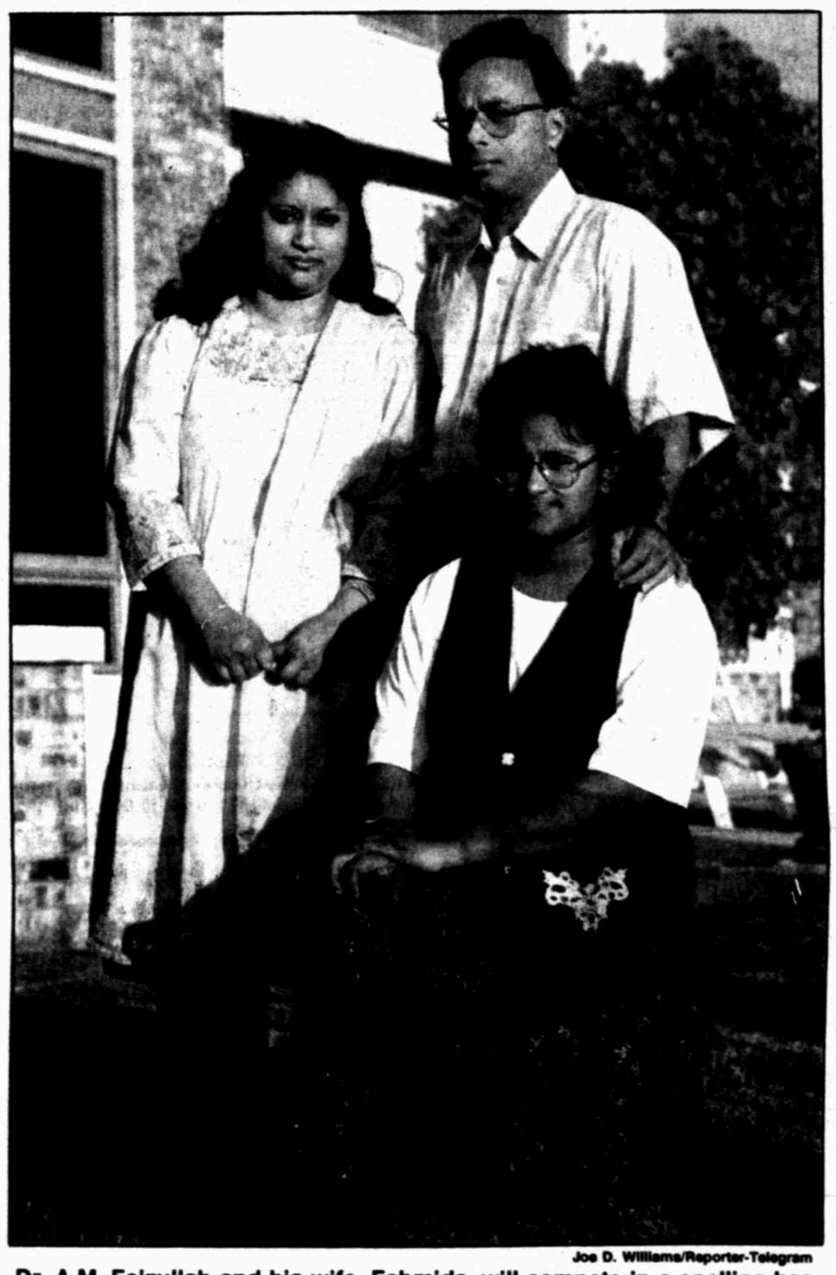

"If I don't make it, I don't make it," Faizullah said with a grin.

The parents have no spelling list to study, but they get to confer with team members before spelling the word.

This will be the first spelling bee competition for Tarfia's parents.

Neither parent is nervous about the competition. But Faizullah said

Doctor, officials want to educate area pedestrians

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

A local doctor has joined forces with the Midland Police Department and the city of Midland to increase awareness of pedestrian safety, particularly for young people who in-line skate and skateboard.

"In the past month, I have had to put on my brakes and nearly hit kids who were roller-blading and weren't paying attention to the traffic," said Dr. William McGavran. "It was in residential areas where I guess they feel safe."

McGavran said after the two incidents, he approached the city of Midland and the Police Department about putting out public service announcements concerning in-line skaters, skateboarders, roller skaters and other pedestrians.

"I got the backing of the Midland County Medical Society to go to the city and to Chief Czech with my idea," he said. "We are trying to get the Ector County Medical Society and the Odessa Police Department to go in with us and turn it into a twin-city media blitz."

McGavran said the announcements would be to educate young people on their responsibilities when they are out in traffic and to alert adults in residential areas to the potential problems of skaters and skateboarders.

"These kids think they are invincible," he said. "They are smart enough to stay off the main streets, but they are all over the residential areas. They really have no fear of the traffic."

McGavran said the city and the Police Department have been extremely responsive to his ideas, which include radio and television announcements.

One of the officers who has been in contact with McGavran is Lt. David Wilks who said residents need to be educated on general pedestrian safety, particularly for their children's sake.

"Parents need to supervise their children and take them through the proper

In conjunction with a county program, workers rebuild a road off Farm to Market Road 1213 about six miles southeast of Midland.

County crew transforms marred road

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

What had been termed the "biggest pothole" in Midland County is shaping up into the smoothness of a speedway.

The once marred and hole-laden roadway is the 13.5-mile stretch of the old Salt Lake Road, Midland County Road 1160, south of town toward the Midkiff community.

Johnny Williams, superintendent of the Midland County Road and Bridge Department, said the old roadway was the "biggest pothole" he had come across.

"We have recycled and reclaimed the whole road," Williams said.

His road-and-bridge crew took on a 90-day project to reconstruct the highly trafficked road at an estimated cost of $430,000, which was about half the cost of what a profit-making road builder would charge.

The construction, which started in early April, will result in a smoother, wider roadway for carrying mostly heavy, high-speed oil-field and farm and ranch traffic.

The drive lanes will increase from two 9-foot lanes to two 13-foot lanes or, straight across, from 18 feet to 26 feet wide. The road is crowned or sloped for ready runoff and bordered by barrow ditches to carry the rage of West Texas downpours.

"We stay with the natural rise and fall of the road," Williams said of construction.

The roadway represents the new direction that the 30-member Road and Bridge Department is taking.

"Everybody now is more involved and has a job to do," Williams said of his heavy-equipment crew — which is being supervised and guided by Bill Harral, the county's consulting engineer.

About 20 Road and Bridge Department workers are assigned to the road-building project. Others are on the project of doing patchwork on the 825 miles of county-main-

Officials to charge 15-year-old in murder of her guardian

Associated Press

GRAPEVINE (AP) — A troubled 15-year-old girl will be charged next week with murdering her 63-year-old guardian, a killing that didn't surprise those close to the situation, police said Saturday.

The teen-ager has confessed to shooting the woman who was her step-grandmother and legal parent since childhood, said Grapevine police Sgt. E. Salame.

"No one seems very surprised," Salame said. "Evidently, the neighbors are very familiar with the problems. She had been seeking assistance with the girl."

The woman, whose name was being withheld until relatives could be notified, was shot once in the head Thursday night, the Tarrant County Medical Examiners Office said.

The girl, no stranger to officers, was being held in the Tarrant County Juvenile Detention facility. She was to formally be charged with murder Tuesday.

"She's a fairly streetwise young lady," Salame said.

Also involved was a 16-year-old whom Salame said "was a somewhat familiar name also." She too was in the juvenile center facing charges Tuesday.

Both girls' names were being withheld because of their ages.

The 16-year-old girl's mother discovered the grandmother's body Friday morning. The 15-year-old had spent the night at her friend's house and when the mother took her home, they found the victim, police said.

One neighbor who said he's known the suspect about four years said that when he saw paramedics at the house Friday, "My first thought was, 'She killed her, didn't she?'" said Jason Peterson, 18.

The tragedy unfolded Thursday. Police say the two girls discussed the slaying in advance, even wondering how to muffle the sound of a .38-caliber revolver. Their ideas included using a potato or a phone book.

Around 10 p.m., the 15-year-old went into the older woman's bedroom. The woman "was still awake at the time and they were talking," said Grapevine Sgt. Sue Hanley.

"Then she pulled out a gun and shot her," Hanley said.

The girl picked up the friend in the woman's week-old 1994 Pontiac Grand Am, drove around for several hours and threw the pistol out the window, police said.

The girls considered driving to Mexico, but ditched that plan and ended up at the 16-year-old's house, police said.

AWARD: Winner teaches at San Jacinto Junior High

as their rights;

- encourage effective law-focused education programs in their schools or communities; and
- increase communication and understanding between students, educators and those involved professionally in the legal system.

Ms. Carter, who teaches at San Jacinto Junior High School, said she was very pleased to receive the award. Ms. Carter has been involved with teaching law-focused education for the last 17 years.

"We're extremely proud of her. She's certainly deserving of this recognition," said MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi. "She is recognized statewide for her involvement in social studies," he said.

Ms. Carter's resume was submitted to the state bar by Patty Smith, MISD coordinator of social studies. "Over the last 33 years, my personal and professional respect for (Ms. Carter's) scholarship, commitment to quality education, communication skills and dedication to the learning of all students continues to grow. In my opinion, the judging committee may select no finer applicant than Ms. Carter for the prestigious Leon Jaworski Award," Ms. Smith wrote.

Ms. Carter's application was also supported by MISD teachers and administrators, by the law offices of Kerr, Fritz-Gerald & Kerr and Jerry W. Perry, assistant professor of government at San Angelo State University.

"Since 1976, Ms. Carter has traveled across the state of Texas conducting teacher-training workshops in law-related education and strategies. Hundreds of teachers have been the beneficiaries of Ms. Carter's enthusiasm, skill and ability in spreading the gospel of law-related education," wrote Midland attorney Ted M. Kerr.

"Zoe Carter's long, dedicated, professional service to law-related education in Texas should at last be recognized. Her name richly deserves to be added to the list of distinguished recipients of the Leon Jaworski Award for Teaching Excellence," Perry said.

Ms. Carter exhibits a wide latitude and depth of study, depending on her target audience — be it young students or seasoned educators. In one of her lesson plans, she teaches the history of American law, beginning with colonial laws from 1672. These include such strict standards as: "If any man be a witch, that is, has or consults with a familiar spirit, they shall be put to death."

From these humble beginnings, Ms. Carter takes young students through the history of legislating right and wrong in the United States.

Her innovative teaching techniques are widely copied around the state, Perry said.

"I've developed games to teach kids how the three branches of government work," Ms. Carter said.

Ms. Carter has studied at Texas Tech University, Carnegie-Mellon University, University of Texas, University of North Carolina and Eastern Michigan University.

She has been teaching for 33 years and has served as social studies chairwoman for most of that time.

She is the author of a teachers' manual for instruction dealing with the text "The American People." She holds a bachelor of arts in English and a master of arts in history.

PEDESTRIANS: Doctor, city, police join forces for safety procedures for crossing the streets," Wilks said.

(From 1B)

Sgt. Brian Bogart agreed.

"Small children need constant supervision if they are in the front yard," he said. "It's too easy for them to dart into traffic."

Wilks said that anyone who is not in a vehicle or on a bicycle is considered a pedestrian and subject to pedestrian laws.

Any pedestrian has the right-of-way at marked and unmarked crosswalks, which include traffic lights. Pedestrians must also use a sidewalk where it is available. If no sidewalk is available, then the pedestrian must walk along the far left side of the roadway, facing traffic.

Only bicyclists can be considered vehicles and must adhere to traffic laws at all times. Bicyclists must always stay in the far right lane of traffic.

Bogart said that although pedestrians do not have the right-of-way outside of crosswalks, the law states that motorists must exercise due care around pedestrians.

"It's kind of a conflict of laws there," he said. "It says that pedestrians don't have the right of way unless they are at a crosswalk, but then it states that motorists must do everything they can to avoid the pedestrian. Basically, everyone just needs to do their part and follow the laws and use extra precaution while in traffic."

McGavran agreed.

"The responsibility starts with the kids and their parents," he said. "Everyone needs to realize that they can be hurt and killed if they don't pay attention. The street is not built for skaters, it's built for vehicles.

"A dead kid is a dead kid, no matter who was following the law," he continued. "As a physician, the worst part of my job is trying to put back together a child or tell the parents they don't have a child anymore. I want to stop that."

he expected to hear words he has never even used.

Tarfia didn't have much advice for her parents on the bee; but that doesn't concern them.

"You can just do your best," Mrs. Faizullah said. "Either you know it or you don't. There is nothing in between."

However, the Faizullahs think studying the spelling and meaning of new words can broaden an individual's horizons.

"Increasing your vocabulary is important in day-to-day situations. At work, everywhere. Without vocabulary, everything comes to a halt," Faizullah said.

Tarfia, a student at Trinity School, knows the importance of expanding her vocabulary. She will be among 238 eighth-grade-and-under students competing at the bee.

She said she is excited about the bee and has been studying hard. She said she believes she will do "pretty good."

Not only do the students have a list of several thousand words to learn how to spell, they must also know the meanings behind the words.

Tarfia's parents proudly boasted she has been the school spelling champion since she was in the fourth grade and the regional runner-up for the past two years.

Tarfia dedicated her victory to her sister, Tangia, who died in an automobile accident last summer.

The spelling Faizullah family said they plan to do a little site-seeing while in Washington, D.C., in between the spelling competitions.

CONFESS: Police: Teen confesses to shooting of guardian

(From 1B)

The fatal incident may have been triggered by the girl's interest in the older woman's 1994 Pontiac Grand Am bought last week, police said.

The relationship between the 15-year-old was somewhat muddled, though often strained.

It's known that the girl was adopted by the victim and her late husband, who apparently was the girl's biological grandfather, when her father abandoned her around age 5, police and neighbors said. The whereabouts of the mother and father were not immediately known.

It's also known that the girl and grandmother often fought, prompting them to join a counseling group that helped families deal with rebellious teens.

The girl was expelled from Grapevine High School for shoving a teacher, said Mary Reed.

CREW: Road and Bridge Department workers reconstruct 'biggest pothole' tained rural roads — including 400 miles of paved roads — or are assigned to maintenance at the shop.

"It's easier to 'do right' than come back and re-do it," said Harral, a retired district engineer for the Texas Department of Transportation, formerly the Texas Highway Department.

"It has been moved from a maintenance organization into a construction organization," he said of the county's road-and-bridge crew.

Williams, the county's road-and-bridge superintendent since 1992, said the majority of his crew is specializing in roadway construction work rather than switching from repair work to pothole filling to roadway construction.

"It's hard to be No. 1 at everything," he said.

Harral said the work crew takes pride in its work and focuses on doing quality work.

"They seem to be taking pride in what they are doing," he said.

Helping the county's regular work crew are seven county jail inmates — clad in red overalls — whose tasks include heavy-equipment operating, mowing, pothole patching, and working in the shop.

"We're teaching them out here as we go along," Williams said. "They are doing some excellent work."

In their new construction work, the heavy-equipment operators employ a giant rotary-tiller — called a "Bomag" — to mix new caliche with the old roadway's rock and asphalt. They add a primer and two coats of asphalt and two coats of rock and work and rework the road.

It's a routine that requires the expert use of the Bomag rotary tiller, compacting steel and pneumatic rollers, dump trucks, motorgraders, and water-hauling trucks, Williams said.

HOW HEALTHY IS BLUE CROSS AND BLUE SHIELD OF TEXAS?

THESE ARE THE FACTS.

We are financially and operationally sound, as are the majority of other Blue Cross and Blue Shield Plans.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Texas is an independent and locally operated Plan, governed by its own board of directors.

WE'RE WORKING FOR TEXANS.

We are a financially strong and conservatively managed company, reporting a financial gain every year since 1989. To protect our subscribers, current contingency reserves exceed $289 million. A January 1994 Standard & Poor's report reiterates our "A" rating and says, "The investment portfolio is very conservative with high asset quality and excellent liquidity."

A PLAN FOR THE FUTURE.

The Texas Plan is an active participant in the search for answers to better delivery of health care to Texans. We are well-positioned for health care reform as a result of well-established relationships with most health care providers in Texas. We are working as partners in change with both government and research.

We are committed to ensuring total quality management in every area of the company, and we continue our commitment to provide quality products to all Texans.

Because needs differ in each area of the state, we are in the process of restructuring our company into six regions in order to move closer to customers in each area of Texas.

We're all aware that health care insurance in America is at a critical juncture. But Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Texas continues with the financial strength and stability it has long enjoyed.

And that's something of benefit to all Texans.

KEEPING TEXANS IN A HEALTHY STATE.

Rule under consideration by health department faces strong opposition from anti-abortion groups

AUSTIN (AP) — A rule being considered by the Texas Department of Health to ensure that minors have access to abortion without parental or spousal consent has been met with strong opposition by anti-abortion forces.

State Health Department rules currently don't address parental consent, but officials are considering a proposal stating that "neither spousal or parental consent may be requested or required" for minors seeking to terminate their pregnancies.

The proposal does, however, direct counselors to encourage minors to talk to a "trusted or significant adult" about their decision.

Health Department guidelines must be followed by clinics if they are operated by or have contracts with the state agency.

At a hearing Friday, officials representing Right to Life Committee Inc. said the new rule would "gag" counselors from suggesting to pregnant girls younger than 18 that they seek help from their parents.

"This gag rule eliminates parents as a resource and source of support for their daughter when she most needs them," said Lisa Salcedo, press secretary for the Texas Right to Life Committee.

Health officials and abortion rights groups said there is nothing in the proposal that would gag counselors. They said it directs providers to encourage teen-agers to talk to their parents or other trusted adults about contraceptives and pregnancy.

"Not only is it legal to provide confidential family planning services to minors seeking them, it is sound public policy," said Peggy Romberg, executive director of the Texas Family Planning Association.

A FEW MORE WORDS ABOUT MINOR
EMERGENCIES.

Sometimes life resembles a cartoon. It seems like every time you turn around you get bumped, bruised or burned.

MC Continuing Education to offer short courses

Staff Report

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer 15 short courses beginning the week of June 6.

The Summer Course Bulletin — available at the main campus, the MC South Facility, 201 W. Florida Ave., the Midland Chamber of Commerce office or the Midland County Library — lists all the courses being offered along with registration details.

Registration is 7 a.m.-5 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday at the Continuing Education office, Administration Building. Call 685-4518 for more information.

Bill Preibe will be teaching "Environmental Compliance/Waste Management Seminar" on Monday, June 6; Tuesday, June 7; and Wednesday, June 8 from 7:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Course fee, if paid before June 1, is $275.

"Environmental Compliance Seminar" will also be taught by Bill Preibe on Monday, June 6 and Tuesday, June 7 from 7:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Course fee, if paid before June 1, will be $200; after June 1, fee will be $250.

Bill Preibe will be teaching "Waste Management Seminar" on Wednesday, June 8, from 7:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Course fee, if paid before June 1, will be $100; if paid after, fee will be $125.

Each of the programs carries credit for Registered Land Professionals, Certified Petroleum Landmen, and CPL/Environmental Site Assessors.

"Quicken" will be taught on Monday through Thursday from 7:30-9:20 p.m., June 6 through June 16. Learn to use this very popular home and small business computerized bookkeeping system. In this course, you will learn to track savings, checking, and money market accounts. From the instructor's tips you will learn to track all of your financial activities or just the important ones and then create and print any type of report you may need. Text used is the Quicken software manual. Course fee is $65.

Sandy Hicks will be teaching "Real Estate: Principles" in two different sections as follows: Mondays through Thursdays from 6-10 p.m., June 6 through June 22 or on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m., June 7 through June 23. This course is designed to introduce students to the basic principles applicable to the practice of real estate as a profession. Students are given the tools necessary to develop a foundation for advanced study in the general practice of real estate or in any one of the real estate related fields. Course fee is $145.

"Tummy Trimmers and Thigh Thinners" will be taught by Shawn Loyd on Mondays and Wednesdays from 6-6:45 p.m., June 6 through June 29. Come and join this special class designed to "beat the tummy bulge" and work off those "saddle bags" and flabby thighs. The exercise level varies throughout the workout — some easy, some fairly challenging routines. Working at your own pace, you'll achieve remarkable results as you strengthen, reduce, tone, and flatten these problem areas. Wear tennis shoes and bring a towel. Course fee is $16.

"Word Perfect II" will be taught by Jennifer McLeod on Mondays through Thursdays from 7:30-9:20 p.m., June 6 through June 16. In this second course, you will make use of the advanced and automated capabilities of WordPerfect that make it a premier tool in office operations. Topics include production techniques, such as mail merge, advanced printing, macros, envelopes and labels and columns. Course fee is $65.

Alfred Johnson will be teaching "WordPerfect for Windows 5.2" on Mondays through Thursdays from noon-1:50 p.m., June 6 through June 16. Many businesses are moving to Windows and so are we. This introductory course will enable you to find your way around in WordPerfect 5.2 for Windows and type documents the Windows way. Course fee is $65.

"Computer Applications" will be taught on Monday, June 7 through Thursday, July 12 from 5:40-7:40 p.m. The student will use commercial software packages such as word processing, electronic spreadsheets, and database managers to solve consumer and business-oriented problems without writing programs. The use of particular software packages will be a vehicle to enable the student to generalize skills as a computer user to other machines and other similar software. Course fee is $119.

"Computer Operations and Maintenance" will be taught on Mondays, June 7 through Thursdays, July 1 from 5:40-7:40 p.m., June 7 through July 12. The student will gain skills required to perform the computer center operations of process scheduling, data protection, and security. The student will also learn elementary mechanics of trouble shooting computer problems involving communications, board failure, peripheral malfunction, and chip failure. Course fee is $119.

Barbara Elliott will be teaching "Country Western Dance I" on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7:30-9 p.m., June 7 through June 23. This class offers you the opportunity to improve your Country Western dance style and learn new moves. Emphasis is placed on a smoother style of dancing. Prerequisite is Country Western Dance I or comparable experience with turns and twirls. Classes held at Bingham Dance Studio. Class is limited to 20 students. Course fee is $28.

"Beginning Keyboarding/Typing" will be taught Mondays and Thursdays from 1-3 p.m., June 7 through July 12. This is a beginning course in touch typewriting/keyboarding for the mastery of machine parts, keyboard, position, accuracy, and rhythm. The student will type manuscripts, business letters, and tabulation problem. Course fee is $112.

"Nurse Aide Training" will be taught on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 5:15-9:15 p.m., June 7 through August 11. This entry level training course will certify you as a nurse aide in a hospital or a long-term facility. Course prepares students for written and skills evaluation testing for the Texas Registry. Required text available at the Midland College Bookstore. List of supplies is available from the Department of Continuing Education. Course fee is $241. (Course fee includes: Nurse Aide Insurance, $15 and Nurse Aide Testing Fee, $61.)

Steve Forbes will be teaching "Child/Infant CPR" on Tuesday, June 7 and Thursday, June 9 from 6-7 p.m. Parents, teachers, day-care personnel — this course covers crucial information for anyone working with children. Infant and child rescue breathing and cardiac compressions will be covered as well as obstructed airway prevention and rescue techniques. Certificates of First Aid and CPR will be awarded upon successful completion of the skills test. Course fee is $25.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Some MC parking lots remain open while circle gets new pavement

By H.A. Tuck

Tuck

If you are going to drive onto the campus this week, please use caution and plan on a little extra time. Paving on Chaparral Circle is being removed — along with the base — and replaced. Some parking lots will remain open, but you may not be able to park as close as you might wish. Think of the inconvenience as the college's contribution to your daily aerobic work-out!

The parking lot adjacent to the Administration Building and Student Center will be open at all times but accessible at different times either through the Main Entrance from Garfield or the North Entrance from Garfield Street. The campus will be accessible at all times through the entrance at Wadley Avenue and I Street, next to Hillander School.

And while the Chaparral Circle is being dug up, other parts of the campus look as if they have been attacked by giant gophers. Trenches are being dug in all directions, then covered up almost immediately.

Fiberoptic cable is being laid into the trenches as the college ties all its facilities together for its planned computer network. This is being done in anticipation of networking the entire campus at some future time. All the cable was contributed to MC by a source who prefers to remain anonymous. They know who they are, and we appreciate their gift.

Computer instructor Dennis Sever arranged the contribution. He and Ron Hall, director of the college's central computer system, are overseeing the cable installation and its resultant network.

Economics instructor Chloice Shofner has assumed duties as president of the Midland College Faculty Council for 1994-95. He replaces Bob Stuart, who held that post for 1993-94.

Elected by the Faculty Council, the president works closely with the administration in presenting the faculty's views and concerns. He also attends meetings of the President's Council and the Board of Trustees, as well as presiding at monthly meetings of the Faculty Council.

This is the last week to obtain registration time permits for the Summer I session. Time permits are issued in the Student Services area of the Student Center building from 7 a.m.-5 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday since the college will be closed on Monday in observance of Memorial Day. The permits assign a specific period for students to register on June 6. Summer I classes start on June 7 and end July 12 with classes in session Monday through Thursday. There's even a holiday during the session on July 4. Summer II is scheduled July 13 through Aug. 18.

Students planning on taking math and English classes, especially those who are first-time college students or not TASP-exempt, need to come on Wednesday for placement testing and advising.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director for Midland College.

AUSTIN — Odessa's Permian High School is one of 22 schools that will serve as a mentor in the Texas High School Network, the Texas Education Agency announced last week.

The 22 new mentor schools join 18 others that link 460 high schools statewide to share innovative and successful approaches to solving problems at the local campus level.

TEA officials chose the schools based on applications the schools submitted to show their commitment to state education policy recommendations, experience in staff development and successful use of new strategies to meet needs of students.

Mentor school principals will attend staff development and planning sessions to coordinate activities for other schools in the network.

"A cry pierced the night... Running to the crib, her hand flipped the switch, flooding the room with LIGHT."

Whew! No matter how old you are, it's sometimes scary in the dark. We feel safer in the light. That's why Cap Rock Electric works so hard to make sure you get the power for all the little things you've come to expect.

Little things like lights, washers and dryers, televisions, even baby monitors. And while you're enjoying all those little things for your little ones, thanks to Cap Rock Electric, you enjoy them at the lowest cost possible. In fact, while inflation has risen 30%, Cap Rock Electric rates have increased less than 12% since 1987. There's safety in those numbers.

Cap Rock Electric is always looking for ways to save you money. Which, we think you'll agree, is no little thing.

BAYTOWN (AP) — Authorities Saturday were trying to determine what caused a set of bleachers to collapse during a high school baseball game, crushing a young girl and injuring 17 other people.

The accident occurred Friday afternoon at Baytown's Memorial Field during a playoff game between Robert E. Lee and Bellaire high schools.

Witnesses said the 6-year-old girl who died was playing beneath the 15-foot-tall bleachers when they began to sway and then fell on her. Jennifer Sutton suffered massive head injuries and was pronounced dead at Houston's Hermann Hospital about an hour after the collapse.

No other serious injuries were reported, but 17 others had to be taken to area hospitals for treatment. Baytown is about 20 miles east of Houston.

About 200 people were sitting on the set of steel frame and wooden seat bleachers that stood along the third base line.

"It just started shifting and collapsed," said Bobby Mitchell, who was sitting in the upper half of the stands that fell.

Players and coaches ran from the field to help spectators get out of the bleachers, and dozens of people lifted the wreckage so that the fatally injured girl could be freed.

Keith Hart, Lee's third baseman, was closest to the bleachers.

"I just heard a bunch of screams and it fell like a deck of cards," he said. "Me and the rest of the players rushed over and tried to free the little girl. We tried our hardest. It took over 30 seconds but seemed like forever."

Patrick Foley, 18, Lee's second baseman, said he thought "there would be a lot of people killed."

"It's amazing it wasn't worse," he said.

The Class 5A Region III semifinal was halted in the second inning. It was completed Saturday afternoon at the San Jacinto College North Campus, with Bellaire winning 7-6 in 12 innings.

Meanwhile, officials from the Baytown Fire Department officials and the Goose Creek Consolidated School District, which serves Baytown, were investigating the accident.

"We won't let anybody in that stadium until everything is checked out," said Kathy Clausen, the school district's spokeswoman.

Fort Worth jury ruling sensible

It was refreshing the other day to see a Fort Worth jury turn the judicial tables on a criminal who sought to add insult to injury by suing a bystander who shot the criminal as he was beating up a police officer.

The criminal, Jesus Puentes, had filed a $1.7 million lawsuit against Lee Lively, a utility repairman who came to the rescue of police Corporal Randy Whisenhunt in 1990. Lively shot Puentes twice in the legs, but was rewarded for his life-saving action with the suit by Puentes, claiming Lively was negligent in shooting Puentes, who was unarmed, and that he used excessive force. Negligent? Excessive force? Who was preying on the public in this instance?

Thursday, however, a Tarrant County jury refused to buy Puentes' claims and, instead, said Puentes owed the officer $1.75 million. The outcome was hailed as an outstanding show of support for law enforcement. It was that.

The jury's decision also shows that juries in Texas are not falling for the "war" being carried out in the courts of this country by criminals against law-abiding citizens and law enforcement officers. And it is a "war." All the trouble began in New York a few years back where a subway mugger sued after being shot and paralyzed by a transit policeman. In its controversial decision, the New York jury actually awarded the mugger, who was the "bad guy" in the initial attack, a $4.3 million judgment and last November, the Supreme Court let that award stand by refusing to review it. Regrettably, decisions such as that which give the wrong impression of what our system of "justice" is all about.

It isn't difficult to understand how or why criminals are taking to the courts to fight back against police officers or private citizens who take aggressive actions against them while they are committing crimes. If they can make it futile for the general public and law enforcement to fight them in the streets, the criminals will have free rein to prey on their hapless victims.

Fortunately, there still are people in this country who know the difference between right and wrong, and are willing to stand up for what is right. When there is no one left to stand up to the criminal element — either on the streets or in the courts — our streets and cities will be ruled by the lawless.

New fed homeless plan is what doctor ordered

Fortunately, for the first time the federal government has acknowledged the full scope of America's homelessness problem.

And just as importantly, a comprehensive private and intergovernmental plan has been developed to finally attack homelessness using the accurate figures and the nation's best experts.

The plan was developed by the combined efforts of 17 government and non-profit agencies. It calls for the doubling of funding for the Housing and Urban Development Department's homeless assistance budget in 1995. In announcing the plan, HUD Secretary Henry Cisneros explained that "homelessness is not just a housing problem."

The homelessness problem ties in with other chronic national problems, such as health care and welfare. The administration is grappling with reforms in each of those areas. The administration recognizes that the solutions to those problems are tied together just as the problems are intertwined. ...

The homeless plan should benefit the administration's health care reform plan. And the soon-to-be announced welfare reform package should help the homeless plan. And the health care plan should benefit the other two plans.

The president should support the $1.7 billion homeless plan. It appears to be just what the doctor ordered.

Graduation cliches paint true picture of opportunity

This spring on college and high school campuses throughout the country, excited graduates will hear speakers of varying specialties and degrees of eloquence tell them that the best years of their lives have yet to come.

The world is their oyster. There is nothing they can't do. They are perched on the launching pad for success. Life is what they make of it.

And with each cliche, the speakers will be telling them the truth.

Despite all the doomsayers, economic forecasters and Generation X pessimists depicting a dwindling work force, limited entry level positions and added competition from across the sea, today's graduating class — as individuals — has as much of a chance to succeed as any before them. ...

No, the world they are about to enter is not harsher with fewer opportunities. In fact, some would argue that today's graduate does not face the major crisis that single-handedly defined generations before them — the Depression, two world wars, the Korean and Vietnam wars, bread lines and a stock market crash.

Today's graduate can leave the stage and enter a world where the Berlin Wall no longer exists, the Cold War is over, communism has fallen and a black man is finally president of South Africa.

Anything can happen.

North Korea crashes nuclear club

WASHINGTON — Republicans meet for lunch every Tuesday in a small dining room off the Senate floor for an hour of strategizing, storytelling and political gossip. Last Tuesday the talk turned to a madman who may already have his finger on the nuclear button.

Anderson

In a chilling message to colleagues on the eve of Memorial Day, Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., warned that a major war with North Korea is inevitable unless America finds a way to deter Kim Il Sung, a dictator bent on crashing the nuclear club and unleashing weapons of mass destruction around the world. From 1985 to 1992, North Korea shipped more than $2.5 billion in arms to some of terrorism's best friends — Iran and Syria, to name two.

Amid the picnics and parades — when heroes from the battle of Gettysburg to the Gulf War are honored — a psychopath in Pyongyang is talking about turning South Korea into a "sea of fire." And someday it just may be an American fight.

In a compelling 14-page analysis of the brewing crisis, McCain explains the American vital interest: "... The eventual outcome of North Korea's pursuit of nuclear status will be a world where the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction explodes exponentially; where, in a never ending spiral of escalation, all Asian powers capable of producing nuclear weapons do so and the most irresponsible, terrorist regimes in the world have the capacity to intimidate... where the United States itself might be the victim of a terrorist attack — like the bombing of the World Trade Center — only this time the weapon of choice will be a nuclear bomb."

This is a scary scenario for an administration whose forte is not foreign affairs. Sometimes it even seems like the administration suffers from attention deficit disorder in dealing with foreign policy, just as George Bush did on domestic affairs. Where's the focus or follow-through? North Koreans were watching during the back-flips on Bosnia, the hypocrisy on Haiti, and the cut-and-run on China.

It's hard to scapegoat Secretary of State Warren Christopher, who, at least until recently, was forced to grovel for a weekly White House appointment with Clinton.

Nor can Defense Secretary William Perry be blamed. McCain and Perry are on the same page when it comes to preempting North Korea by acting sooner rather than later.

McCain could have written Perry's remarks. McCain, for example, responds to the popular suggestion that the United States refrain from any response that might provoke the North to launch a military attack with a rhetorical question: "Would an attack be more or less likely after North Korea acquires a nuclear arsenal and after it has completed its production of ballistic missiles capable of delivering nuclear warheads to Tokyo?"

A Vietnam war hero who has emerged as one of the most influential military authorities in Congress, McCain is nonetheless one of the most doveish members of the Senate. He is sharply critical of U.S. intervention except where American vital interests are in peril, and a plan is in place for getting out as well as getting in.

GEORGE WILL

Adventure in nation-building is important to Clinton

WASHINGTON — President Clinton, who feels our pain and wears mostly briefs and can't keep quiet, recently rattled off many reasons, or perhaps pretexts, for a splendid little invasion of Haiti — to borrow the words of John Hay describing another Caribbean adventure, the 1898 war with Cuba. So here we go again. As with Bosnia, Somalia and China, the president is looking around for a dignified way to climb down from the moral high ground, where he is not the first to find the wind cold and the prospect unpleasant.

Will

His reasons for invading include: Haiti is "in our backyard." And a flood of refugees may put to sea in unseaworthy boats, jeopardizing their lives (and reminding people that he called the Bush administration's resistance to Haitian refugees cruel). And some drugs pass through Haiti en route to the United States. (Many more drugs pass through Puerto Rico.) And Haiti is now this hemisphere's only country governed by a military junta that toppled an elected leader.

Here is a reason not to invade: baseball. Lawrence Pezzullo, former special envoy to Haiti, notes something about the last U.S. invasion of that country: We were there from 1915 to 1934 "and it still strikes me that it's the only place in the Caribbean that doesn't play baseball. Every place else we left something behind. In Haiti, we left nothing."

And here is a reason for abandoning the economic sanctions that are the latest futility intended to convince the military leaders to restore President Aristide: The sanctions are killing people, particularly children.

Aristide may not be as unstable and unsavory as many U.S. officials believe, but he did encourage violence against his opponents and his return to power probably would do next to nothing to make Haiti democratic or prosperous. Nevertheless, Clinton is being pushed into rashness regarding Haiti by various liberal factions, including the Congressional Black Caucus, an important component of his shrinking core support.

It is understandable why the Black Caucus is concerned about Haiti, the world's oldest black republic and the product of the only successful slave revolt in history. But that is insufficient reason for Clinton to offer an American version of the Brezhnev Doctrine. That doctrine said the Soviet Union would guarantee that communism, once imposed, would not be overthrown. The Clinton Doctrine would be that the United States must guarantee that democracy, once attained, endures.

That doctrine would be dubious in any case, but is inapplicable to Haiti. Mark Falcoff of the American Enterprise Institute says the idea of "restoring" Haitian democracy is a "radical misnomer" because "democracy even in the most limited sense has never existed there, and Aristide's return by no means guarantees its introduction."

Sen. John Kerry (D-Mass.), a Haiti hawk, says, "By tolerating their defiance and unrelenting brutality, we have empowered Haiti's military thugs." Oh? If the United States does not overthrow a dictator, this "toleration" is tantamount to "empowerment"? Such slippery language can put this nation on a slippery slope to many interventions and much "nation-building."

Haiti was the poorest nation in this hemisphere even before the U.S.-led embargo began to bite the weakest Haitians. Now, while powerful Haitians prosper by making the embargo porous for goods for Haitians with money, Kenneth Freed of the Los Angeles Times reports from Haiti on 18-month-old Bobouson Myrtil and his three siblings. Their mother says, "They will all die." Says Freed:

"Added to this is the sour irony of a U.S. policy that exempts the most powerful of Haitian civilians supporting the coup from travel restrictions and asset-freezing ... on grounds that 'they may be of use to us' in the future, as one U.S. official put it."

Of use to us, that is, as we continue our splendid little adventure in nation-building, a project the Clinton administration evidently considers important enough to justify the slow killing of children.

RUSSELL BAKER

Federal Reserve Board keeps Mac the barometer in line

Mac phoned last weekend with "great news." The bank had just cut the monthly payments due on his adjustable-rate mortgage.

Russell Baker

This was not great news, of course. It was terrible news, but I didn't tell Mac. The truth about his situation might drive the poor guy over the edge. That truth is: Mac is the Federal Reserve Board's chief economic barometer.

I have it straight from Alan Greenspan, the Fed's chairman. Back when the Fed cut interest rates way down I asked Alan what had got into him and his fellow bankers.

"Nothing got into us," he said. "It's the nothing getting into Mac lately that told us it was time to cut rates."

To put it in non-economist talk, Mac hadn't had a job for so long that after raiding his savings to pay the mortgage he couldn't afford enough groceries to save the American supermarket industry from bankruptcy.

In short, when Mac doesn't eat the Fed knows it's time to cut interest rates.

The cut starts the mighty engine of capitalism roaring again. Builders start building again. Grocers start seeing the gourmet-food counters swept bare again.

In Wall Street the bulls and bears buy and sell again with joy. At sundown they raise glasses to Mac, whose dietary deficiency has moved the Fed to cry, "Let happy days be here again!"

Since that great day when the Fed slashed the rate so Mac could put the grocery business back on its feet, the Fed has raised the interest rate four times.

"Why, Alan?" I asked Greenspan.

"We ordered the first hike after hearing Mac had bought new underwear and was talking about buying a new pair of shoes."

If this sort of thing kept up, Alan explained, Mac could soon be buying new jeans. Then it would be new socks. Who could say Mac wouldn't go all the way and buy a new shirt?

"So we raised the rate a tiny bit. Just enough to let Mac know the Fed was watching, so he'd better mind his step. Could you blame us?"

"Absolutely not, Alan," I said. "The Fed couldn't let Mac destroy the American economy."

"Well, Mac refused to take the hint. Improved diet and new underwear weren't enough for him. He went right ahead and bought the jeans, bought the socks and bought the shirt."

What choice did the Fed have? It plunked him gently with another interest-rate hike. And what did Mac do?

Took a pretty good job. He hadn't been able to find one since the great leaning-down of the corporate lean-and-mean era had filled the unemployment lists with thrown-away talent. Now the minute he saw a good job open up he took it, with selfish disregard for the health of the economy.

Suddenly Wall Street's bulls and bears hated Mac for no longer being unemployed. He was threatening the American economy with a labor shortage that would inflate their money. Then happy days would be here again no longer.

Naturally the Fed had to put Mac back into his place at the unemployment compensation claims window or see the economy collapse and all Wall Street burst into tears.

"We figured a third boost in the interest rate would settle Mac's hash," Greenspan said. "Or to be more precise, would make Mac willing to settle for hash."

But Mac didn't respond. As a mere lad, he had been so deeply imbued with the American work ethic that he refused to quit working, even to save his nation's economy from collapse and Wall Street's bulls and bears from doubled doses of Prozac.

When he phoned with his "great news" about a reduction in mortgage payments, I immediately knew the worst. He was leaving Alan and the others at the Fed no way out. They would have to deliver "the big Mac," as I've heard Alan call it — an interest rate hike that will have him hocking all those fancy new clothes if he wants firewood to get through next winter.

His mortgage payment of course will soon go stratospheric, ending his impulses to buy a 1955 Hudson and put new tires on it.

Russell Baker's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

Pastor appreciates hospital nursing staff

For the past nine years I have been a pastor here in Midland. This letter is to offer my public appreciation to the nursing station staff of the various floors of Midland Memorial Hospital. They have without exception been helpful to me in facilitating my caring for the members and constituency of the church I have served. I thank them for the care and concern they have demonstrated for their patients. The nursing staff and the chaplain, Alan Williams, have made many stressful times less difficult because of their attitude and cooperation.

Highest tax bracket is better place to be

To the lady whose son questioned the effort to achieve because the government would take half his earnings and give them to folks who do not achieve, I can provide the answer. I have been in the zero tax bracket, and I have been in the highest tax bracket. Being in the highest tax bracket is much better!

Mike Craddock

Many answers come to mind for question

Mary Hahn posed three questions in her May 22 letter: Why should students work hard and do their best in school? Why should those of us who work continue to work when government uses some of our earnings to help those who don't? Why are some Midland Independent School District (MISD) students promoted when they aren't qualified for the next grade?

The final question is a good one to direct to MISD administrators. Are students promoted when they don't deserve to be? Are teachers too lenient when it comes to grades or expectations? Are there district policies in place that set standards but are not enforced? Are exceptions made for athletes? As a teacher at Midland College who has taught graduates of MISD, I wonder whether the answer to at least some of these questions is yes.

I am appalled that Mrs. Hahn had no answer to the first question. Why should you keep working at school? How about because everything you do should be done to the best of your ability? How about because "hard work and a job well done are their own rewards?" How about because you want to make a good life for yourself? How about because you want to keep your career options open?

As a side comment, our taxes do much more than support people who don't work. Mrs. Hahn's son shouldn't mind that, among other things, his tax dollars will pay the salaries of his teachers in MISD, Midland police and firefighters, Texas state troopers, U.S. Border Patrol officers, those who design, build and maintain interstate highways, the men and women in our military forces, and park rangers in our state and national parks. Welfare isn't the biggest line item in the United States, Texas or Midland budget.

When children ask questions such as these, they give us one of many opportunities to pass along our values. I have suggested some answers I would give my children; there are many more.

Amy Viveiros

Academic challenges can bring satisfaction

Mary Hahn's sixth-grade son's reluctance to enroll in the honors class, and Ms. Hahn's challenge to the Midland citizens to respond (Reporter-Telegram, May 22) raises issues worthy of discussion. If one of my grandchildren had asked me a similar question, how would I respond?

I suggest that the question to be addressed is not why should a bright student strive for excellence when he observes that many of his classmates are apparently satisfied with mediocrity. Rather, why the student should not accept an academic challenge regardless of the performance of his peers is the heart of the matter.

If I were talking to my grandchildren, I would try to help them understand that their lives will never be more satisfying than when they throw their talents and energies totally into worthwhile challenges that come their way. Would that I could infect them, and all young people, with an enthusiasm for accomplishment, a yearning for learning and a hunger for knowledge. To turn away from educational challenges, regardless of what the crowd is doing, is to deny oneself a full measure of an abundant life. All we are ever offered is opportunity, and that is what the Midland Independent School District is offering with its honors program. The rest is up to us.

Don't set yourself up for a situation in 50 or so years when, after a lifetime of half-hearted efforts and just getting by, you look at yourself in the mirror and say, "I really blew it." You won't get a second chance.

No one has right to put Cobain down

It's been more than two months since Kurt Cobain ended his life with suicide. I've been contemplating what I was going to write for a while. Life is never easy or without its hard times or shortcomings. The rock'n'roll group Nirvana really was the voice of a generation of young people that was next to the next coming generation. The song, "It Smells Like Teen Spirit," really defined mine. Now I know and I have heard what other generations think of rock'n'roll and the untimely death of Cobain. I get so tired of hearing people when a person — and especially a rock star who tragically ends his life — make rude comments like "I guess he was living too fast in the fast lane and just burned out." What really makes me mad is for a person that didn't know him or listen to his music to say "Well I just think he got too rich and famous too quick and couldn't handle life anymore." Whatever the reason he did what he did doesn't give anybody the right to run him down or put him down.

Others can walk away from smoker

The more I think about it, the less I understand. Don't you think we are banning the wrong thing here or does alcohol come after smoking cigarettes?

Smoking is bad for you. It makes you cough, it stinks, and it does bad things to you. OK. I will agree. Soon, no matter where you go there will be no smoking in public. Most of us will not put up a fight. We will just wait until we are in our own homes to smoke.

Just let me ask, how many people have been killed by a person driving while smoking? How much property has been destroyed by someone who has smoked one too many? How many homes have been torn apart by an adulterous spouse who didn't know what they were doing because they were on tobacco? Look at the paychecks that have gone down the drain, just to buy another round! Have you ever heard of someone letting their children go hungry for a carton of cigarettes?

Yes, I'm a smoker, and I am not proud of it. But look around. Get real! Let's get alcohol off the shelves. Make it very hard to buy, maybe even against the law.

You can walk away from a smoker, but you may not always be able to walk away from a drunk!

We may never see baby face again

Because the Gerber Baby Food Co. has been bought out, we may never see that wonderful baby face again. I must tell how that face came to be.

When Gerber was a new company and they wanted a good baby face, they decided to have a contest. Pictures were sent in from everywhere. Paintings, drawings, photographs were all hung for everyone to see. Then they had the contest, and each and everyone that came in made their choice.

The new baby face was chosen. The company phoned to tell the winner the good news. She was very thankful and said, "I'll come and get the picture because I didn't finish it." The company said "Oh you can't do that because it was chosen as is, and we want it just as it is. It's perfect."

Soon after that, anyone who wrote to Gerber would receive a picture with that story on the back.

Republicans need to get act together

Ed Todd is to be commended on his in-depth report on May 1 addressing the dominance of the Christian Right (or pro-life) movement in today's Republican Party. He opines, "Is it healthy or is it splitting the GOP?"

I believe most of us are "pro-life" in the literal definition of the word, however, I do not believe this very personal, moral and religious issue has any place in government — local, state or federal. In fact, I tend to believe it borders on being unconstitutional in that it infringes upon our constitutional guarantee of separation of church/state issues. The Republican Party should encompass all diverse entities and not let this one issue become the litmus test qualifying anyone for anything! We simply cannot be a one-issue party.

The Democrats are trying to pull their party from the far left to the center, the traditional home of the Republican Party. We see this happening and are not willing to try to abort it? There are many, many things wrong with the way liberals are getting their way on social issues with the resulting breakdown in the moral fiber of this country, but splintering the Republican Party is not the way to stop it. I'll bet the Democrats are laughing their way to another shoo-in victory in 1996.

It is worth pondering that the folks who are of this fundamentalist persuasion are trying to perpetrate upon the people a political outcome not much different from what the Clintons are accused of — they know best what is good for all.

The National Republican Party is wondering what to do about the massive fundamentalist right-wing takeover attempts all over the country, especially in Texas. Unless we get our act together, I truly believe that we will have four more years of what the majority of Americans believe to be the worst tragedy our country has ever faced sitting in the White House. If you have been happy with 18 months, you are going to love eight years!

Readers' views on: Planned Parenthood

Letter's tale appears to be fabrication

I am writing in response to Chuck Clarkson's letter concerning the 15-year-old girl whose plan to have an abortion was derailed by a family doctor. The letter stated "that Planned Parenthood of Midland scheduled her for an abortion and requested her medical history from the local family doctor. The father was lucky; the family doctor phoned him and told him of his daughter's plan for an abortion..." This story had to be pure fabrication since:

- Planned Parenthood of Midland or Odessa does not schedule abortions.
- Only the doctor who provides the service schedules the abortion.
- There is never any reason for that doctor to request medical records since those women who receive abortions undergo complete physical and gynecological exams.
- Any doctor who would break his patient's confidentiality — past or present — has no respect for privacy and is violating the physician's code of ethics.

The letter goes on to say that "she really did not want an abortion, but she was too ashamed and afraid to tell her parents." This statement is full of incongruity.

- This girl apparently is more afraid of her parent's condemnation then she is of the moral consequences of having sex.

Clarkson goes on to say that the child was put up for adoption and that "at least the daughter did not have to face . . . the reality that she had years before stopped the life of a little person inside her."

- There is an assumption among anti-choice individuals that all women regret their decision to abort. Given similar conditions, most women say they would choose to abort again.

Finally, Clarkson dares to state — concerning the freedom of access to abortion clinics — "were homosexuals picketing in front of a church . . . I'm sure then they would come under the full protection of the First Amendment." I can only reply that I have never witnessed homosexuals or any other groups picketing churches, but if it does occur, I would insist that the congregation's freedom of access be respected.

Services should be free of harassment

Carolyn Sheffield is misguided in her paranoia regarding the motivation behind successful litigation brought about by Planned Parenthood of Houston and Southeast Texas (Reporter-Telegram, May 15).

Why did Planned Parenthood seek damages from right-wing fanatics blocking patient access to their clinic? Like any Texas not-for-profit corporation, Planned Parenthood has a right to operate free of harassment.

Ms. Sheffield asks what kind of services does Planned Parenthood offer (I presume she implied Planned Parenthood was really trying to protect their abortion service). I cannot speak for the Houston affiliate, but if it offers the same services as 99 percent of like affiliates throughout the nation, it provides pregnancy testing, prenatal care, diabetes and anemia testing, AIDS counseling, Pap tests, and contraceptives. Nationally, Planned Parenthood is the single largest provider of these services to persons who cannot afford to pay full prices for them. Does Ms. Sheffield know that because of screening done by Planned Parenthood affiliates across the country, thousands of cervical and breast cancers are detected and treated each year?

Ms. Sheffield questions Planned Parenthood's not-for-profit status. Not-for-profit status doesn't mean an organization cannot make an excess of revenues over expenses. Most so-called non-for-profit entities attempt to make excesses to pay for new equipment, expand the scope of services, and meet the needs of more people. The term "not-for-profit" means only one thing: that excesses (or "profits") are not distributed to shareholders.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The shorter the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.
- We do not publish 'open' letters or copies of letters sent to others.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

DAVE BARRY

Just about anyone can be oaf in this office

June is almost here, and once again I'm looking to perform a wedding ceremony. I can legally do this in Florida, because I happen to be — this is true — a notary public. I am darned proud of this accomplishment. They do not bestow the title of notary public upon just any random dork. You have to be a specific dork who sent in an application.

Barry

I have an official notary certificate from the state of Florida, signed by the governor, suitable for framing, written, as is mandatory for government documents, by lawyers from Mars, stating that I am authorized to (this is a real quote) "have, hold and exercise the said office and all the powers and responsibilities appertaining thereto, and to receive the privileges and emoluments thereof."

I love being a notary public. I love getting together with other notaries for wild and crazy parties where we consume large quantities of emoluments and notarize each other's body parts. When you're a notary, you need to let off steam, because you have a lot of weighty responsibilities that an ordinary civilian cannot begin to comprehend. The main one is trying to remember where you put your official rubber notary stamp. I use my stamp about once a year, to notarize somebody's signature on a document; this serves as legal proof that, in my official opinion, the person really is the person. Although just between you and me, the person could sign the document "Amelia Earhart" or "The Hunchback of Notre Dame Jr." and I would probably still notarize it, because I really like using my stamp.

But the real reason I became a notary public is that I wanted to perform a wedding ceremony for two people named Claire and Merle. They met in 1992 at a charity bowling tournament that I hosted, and they fell in love almost instantly. Bowling will do that to people. It's an extremely romantic sport. There is something about the sight of a woman trying to pick up a spare that drives a man crazy.

So anyway, Claire and Merle decided, I think around the sixth frame, that they had to get married. And since I was partly responsible for the fact that they had met, I volunteered to become a notary public and marry them at a ceremony in the bowling alley. Unfortunately, it took six weeks for my notary application to go through, and Claire and Merle just couldn't wait that long.

So I'm still looking to officiate at my first wedding. I definitely have the background for it. My grandfather and my father were both Presbyterian ministers, and I watched my dad marry a LOT of people. Many times I'd be with my dad before a wedding, in the back of the church, as he tried to prevent the groom from imploding due to sheer nervousness, leaving nothing but a sweaty heap of rented formal clothing on the floor. The bride always had several hundred people flurrying around her, offering support, but usually the groom had nobody with him except the best man, whose dominant emotion — this was obvious — was enormous relief at the fact that HE was not the groom.

So my father would do his best to soothe the groom, acting very calm, talking softly, the way you act around an easily alarmed horse. One time I remember we were waiting in a church office, and there was a basket of Tootsie Roll Pops on a desk, and my dad offered the basket to the groom. The groom took a Tootsie Roll Pop and, while staring rigidly off into space, removed the wrapper, bit off the entire candy end, stick and all, then chewed it up and swallowed it in maybe four seconds.

My dad watched this and then said, quietly, "You know, there are those who actually suck on lollipops."

"No thanks," said the groom, still staring off into space. "I'm fine."

So I've had experience with pre-wedding tension. And I feel that I could conduct a good ceremony. I'd include special questions designed to determine whether the couple had a realistic concept of what married life was going to be like, such as:

"Are you, John, troubled by the thought that no matter how large your bathroom is, your half will consist of three square inches, and even that will soon be taken over entirely by The Invasion Of The Skin Care Products?"

"Do you, Mary, honestly think that you will ever again be able to watch a TV program without John here scanning all of the other 57 cable channels roughly every 30 seconds in case there's something better on, such as a replay of the 1978 Super Bowl?"

Yes, I would definitely run a thought-provoking wedding. I'd have the happy couple trading blows before they even got to the cake-cutting. Maybe I could even — I'll have to check the notary handbook to see if this is one of the powers appertaining thereto — grant them a divorce right on the spot. Then we'd have a GREAT party. I would do The Stamp Dance.

Anson Jones Elementary to hold enrichment camp

An enrichment camp for youngsters in grades 1-6, called "Write On Science and Math Camp," is scheduled for June 6-July 1 at Anson Jones Elementary School, 4919 Shady Lane.

The camp is planned in response to a recent parent survey, according to Principal Marillyn Odum.

The camp is supported, in part, by Phillips Petroleum in a school-business partnership with Anson Jones Elementary.

The camp is to be held in classrooms with adjoining atriums where campers will be involved in planning and creating blueprints for a new outdoor learning center, observing nature and collecting data for a computer data base they will help develop and use.

Campers will do extensive reading on "Arachnephiles: Web Weavers," and they will use writing and literature to connect with life skills such as perserverance, problem solving, initiative and organization.

Campers will work in cooperative groups, learn leadership skills, write and publish books. Naturally, they will learn much about spiders and their habitats.

Math enrichment will come through solving real problems associated with investigations in the atriums. Ms. Odum said parents will be pleased to know that the thematic approach will take advantage of reserarch on brain-compatible learning.

Students from around the city are invited to enroll in the camp, which is limited to 40 students. For more information call Diane Harris or Teresa Moore at 689-1810.

June 3 is the deadline to register. Tuition is $80 a student.

Golfer Boros dies

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Julius Boros, a former U.S. Open and PGA champion, died Saturday after collapsing while driving a golf cart around a course where he frequently played. He was 74.

Boros was on the golf course when a club member went into the office to report that someone had apparently passed out, said Ron Sharpe, director of golf at the Coral Ridge Country Club.

"An assistant went out, and he had obviously died at the time," Sharpe said. "He's had a bad heart for a long time. I don't know if he had a stroke or a heart attack."

Borgs' son, Guy, who is on the PGA Tour, is playing at the Colonial in Fort Worth, Texas. Guy Boros was within a shot of the lead Saturday until he took a three-putt bogey at his 17th hole. There was no immediate word from him on his father's death.

Julius Boros won the U.S. Open in 1952 and 1963 and took the PGA in 1968. He won 18 tournaments on the PGA Tour. He joined the Senior Tour in 1980, last winning money in 1990.

He was inducted into the PGA Hall of Fame in 1974 and the World Golf Hall of Fame in 1982.

Welcome home Tommie Smith

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Tommie Smith came home Saturday to a standing ovation and a remembrance of athletic accomplishments long overshadowed by his raised-fist protest during the 1968 Olympics.

Smith, 49, who at one time held 11 world records, was honored during an intermission in the Bruce Jenner Classic.

He was presented with a trophy commemorating his world record 200-meter victory at Mexico City and a copy of the proclamation by Mayor Susan Hammer declaring Saturday "Tommie Smith Day" in San Jose.

Hall team hoping changes bring win

Staff Report

Since Dec. 8 when the Indycar racing team owned by Midland's Jim Hall introduced their new engine, driver Teo Fabi has been looking for the ultimate testing ground.

Although the IndyCar circuit was just beginning in January, Fabi's thoughts were already six months ahead — at today's Indianapolis 500. That's where the Hall team's new 1994 Reynard-Ilmor engine will receive the ultimate test.

"Our goal this year is to win," Fabi said when the new car was introduced. "Personally, I want to win Indy. I've been on the pole. I've been in the lead. But this year, I want to win."

Fabi starts today at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway from the eighth row, two behind last year's sixth-row position, but the Hall team is hoping the new car and new Indy technology will net them a higher finish than their 10th-place 1993 result.

Fabi recorded a four-lap average of 223.394 in qualifying in the 24th position and will be driving the No. 11. yellow Pennzoil car. Al Unser Jr., racing for Team Penske, holds the pole with an average of 228.011 while Brazilians Raul Boesel and Emerson Fittipaldi complete the first row. Boesel qualified second with a 227.618 while Fittipaldi, also with Team Penske, qualified with 227.303.

After winning the pole as a rookie driving for the Forsythe Brothers in 1983, Fabi left the IndyCar circuit from 1984 to 1988. Last year, with a Lola-

VDS' competition is getting tougher

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

Franz Weis and his Midland VDS Engine Shop go for their sixth Indianapolis 500 win today. But it may be harder in 1994 than it's been in recent years for a VDS-built engine to take first place in the country's most famous auto race.

Weis said last week before he took off for the Speedway that last year almost half the Indy 500 field, 16 cars, had engines built by his shop. This year the number of cars with VDS engines that has qualified is down to seven.

"Thing have gotten a lot tougher ... but we're pretty pleased and happy just to have seven," Weis said. "The average qualifying time is three mph higher than it was last year. I guess the cars must be getting better."

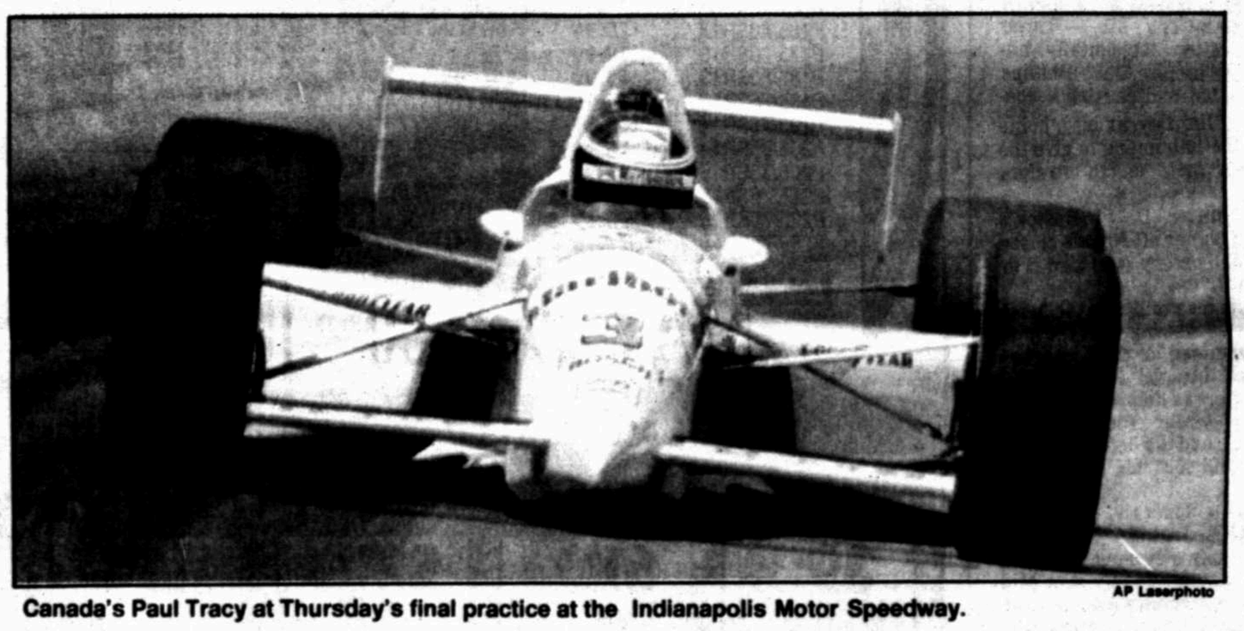

VDS has built engines exclusively for Ilmor Engineering out of England since 1987.

This year's VDS engines are driven by Hall Racing's Teo Fabi, Indy Regency's Arie Luyendyk, Bettenhausen Motor Sports' Stefan Johansson, Galles Race Team's Adrian Fernandez, Pro Formance Motor Sports' John Paul Jr. and Rahal-Hogan's Bobby Rahal and Mike Groff.

Weis said he thinks three Penske drivers — Al Unser Jr., Emerson Fittipaldi and Paul Tracy — are the favorites at this year's Indy. But he feels three drivers using his engines also have good chances to win.

"Teo Fabi is capable of winning the Indy 500. Bobby Rahal is a big prospect because he's won it before in 1986, and Luyendyk," Weis said. "If something would happen to Penske they would have legitimate shots to win it. Deep down inside I hope it's Fabi because we're local ... that would really make

Pacers choke off Knicks' offense

■ Indiana holds New York to the NBA's lowest playoff point total in 40 years to cut the Knicks series' lead to 2-1.

By Hank Lowerkron
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Reggie Miller, the Indiana Pacers' marquee player, took a back seat Saturday as his teammates inflicted the punishment on the New York Knicks.

Derrick McKey, missing in action in the first two games of the NBA Eastern Conference finals, led a balanced offense with 15 points Saturday as the Pacers breathed life into their playoff hopes by beating the Knicks 88-68.

The 68 points were the fewest scored in an NBA playoff game since the league went to the 24-second shot clock in 1954.

Indiana still trails the Knicks 2-1 in the best-of-7 series with Game 4 set for Monday in Market Square Arena, where the Pacers are undefeated in the playoffs and have won nine straight dating to the end of the regular season.

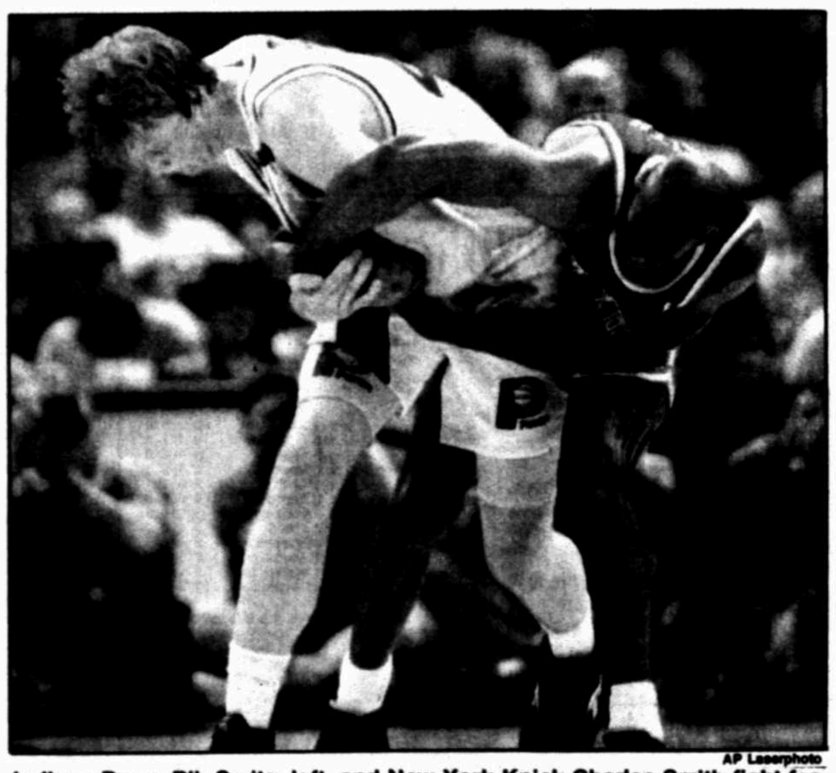

McKey, who had a total of seven points on 2-for-16 shooting in the first two games, also contributed nine rebounds and five assists.

"I got some pretty good looks at the basket," McKey said. "I got the ball low and was able to make things happen. I don't think I had to do it to take any pressure off anybody."

Miller, who has been selected to play for Dream Team II, was more concerned with the victory than his point production.

"I don't care how many points I have," said Miller, who got into early foul

Williams tosses no-hit shutout against Travs

Staff Report

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Shad Williams, who had not pitched since April 18 when he was hit in the leg by a batted ball, threw a seven inning no-hitter against the Arkansas Travelers in his first game back to give the Midland Angels a doubleheader split Saturday night, winning 7-0.

Williams became only the second Midland pitcher to have a no-hitter to his credit. The other came from Bernie Beckman.

Williams faced only one batter over the minimum in his seven innings and that came when Andy Bruce struckout, but reached first when the ball got away and Williams was charged with a wild pitch. In all, Williams had eight strikeouts, all on called third strikes. He faced only 22 batters and walked none.

He retired the first 14 batters he faced and then the last seven after Bruce reached.

The Angels helped Williams by scoring four runs in the top of the first inning, giving him a relaxed comeback start after spending almost six weeks on the disabled list when he was injured in a road game.

Williams is now 3-0 on the season. He entered the game with a sterling 1.96 ERA.

Rangers lose in 10th inning

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Carlos Rodriguez doubled home the go-ahead run in the 10th inning Saturday night and the Boston Red Sox beat the Texas Rangers 3-2.

The Red Sox, held hitless by Bruce Hurst until Mo Vaughn homered with one out in the sixth, tied it in the ninth on Mike Greenwell's double off Rick Honeycutt.

Cooper led off the 10th with a single against Cris Carpenter (2-2). Cooper moved to second on Dave Valle's sacrifice bunt and scored when Rodriguez doubled down the right field line.

Greg Harris (2-3), the third Boston pitcher, pitched one hitless inning. Jeff Russell got three outs for his 11th save.

Boston tied the game at 2 in the ninth as the Texas bullpen again failed to convert a save situation. The Rangers are 8-for-19 in save situations.

With one out, Honeycutt hit Naehring in the foot with a pitch. Naehring raced home with the tying run when Greenwell followed with a double.

Indians 4, Athletics 2

CLEVELAND — Mark Clark pitched his third complete game in his last four starts, and Carlos Baerga homered as Cleveland beat Oakland Saturday for their eighth straight home win.

It's the first time Cleveland has won eight in a row at home since 1982. The current streak was interrupted by a 2-4 road trip.

The A's lost for the 30th time in their last 36 games.

Paul Sorrento, Kenny Lofton and Alvaro Espinoza also drove in runs for Cleveland.

Clark (5-1) blanked the A's on three hits until the seventh inning, when Brent Gates singled and Mike Aldrete hit his fourth home run. Aldrete had entered the game in the fifth after Ruben Sierra strained his hamstring rounding first on a single.

Blue Jays 9, Angels 4

TORONTO — Dick Schofield hit his fifth career grand slam and first home run in almost two years, leading Toronto over California.

Ed Sprague started the second inning with a walk, Mike Huff doubled and Randy Knorr walked, loading the bases against Mark Langston (2-3). Schofield hit the next pitch for his first homer since Sept. 29, 1992.

Schofield's last slam came on June 14, 1987, when he played for the Angels. The grand slam was only the second given up by Langston (2-3) in his 10-year career. The other came when he played for Seattle and allowed one to Detroit's Darnell Coles on May 31, 1986.

Juan Guzman (5-5) gave up four runs and 11 hits in eight innings.

■ AL Roundup

Brewers 7, Mariners 5

MILWAUKEE — B.J. Surhoff drove in three runs and Ricky Bones snapped a month-long losing skid as Milwaukee beat Seattle.

Ken Griffey Jr. hit his 22nd homer for Seattle, which lost for the 19th time in 24 road games. The Mariners committed errors on three consecutive plays in the sixth inning, when Milwaukee scored three times to break open a 3-2 game.

Dave Nilsson went 4-for-4, tying his career high for hits in a game. Milwaukee beat the Mariners for the second straight time after losing a club-record 14 consecutive games.

Bones (4-4), who last won on April 24 against Kansas City, gave up six hits in eight-plus innings. He retired 11 straight batters during one stretch, struck out four and walked one.

White Sox 6, Orioles 2

CHICAGO — Frank Thomas homered for the fourth straight game to help Chicago to their seventh straight win, beating Baltimore.

Thomas, batting .466 in May, hit his 19th homer and Julio Franco drove in three runs as the White Sox won for the 10th time in 11 games before 43,589, the largest crowd in four seasons at the new Comiskey Park.

The winning streak is Chicago's longest since it won seven straight from Aug. 4-11, 1991.

Jason Bere (6-1) gave up three hits and two runs in 5 2-3 innings.

Yankees 5, Royals 3, 10 innings

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Three pitches after accidentally hitting plate umpire Dave Phillips with his bat and causing a concussion, Jim Leyritz hit a home run in the 10th inning to give the Yankees their fourth straight win.

Pinch-hitter Daryl Boston's two-run homer off Royals closer Jeff Montgomery (0-2) tied it in the ninth.

Leyritz hit Phillips in the head with his backswing, and the umpire sustained a mild concussion and bruised left temple. The game was delayed for eight minutes while Phillips was checked, and he left and Tim McClelland took his place.

Twins 10, Tigers 9, 10 innings

MINNEAPOLIS — Rookie Steve Dunn's two-out RBI double in the 10th inning sent Minnesota to a victory over Detroit, who got two homers from Kirk Gibson.

Gibson, celebrating his 37th birthday, homered in the seventh and ninth innings for the Tigers, who rallied from an 8-2 deficit to take the lead before the Twins tied it at 9 in the ninth.

Astros gain first place with win

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Luis Gonzalez's sacrifice fly scored the go-ahead run in the seventh inning Saturday night to give the Houston Astros a 7-5 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies. The Astros are now tied with Cincinnati for first in the National League Central.

Mitch Williams, who nearly blew Friday night's game by walking and hitting a batter in the ninth inning, warmed up but didn't get the call as Houston manager Terry Collins went to his bullpen three times. Instead, Tom Edens worked the seventh, Mike Hampton pitched into the ninth and Todd Jones finished up for his first save.

Williams, returning to Philadelphia this weekend for the first time since being traded to the Astros in December, said Friday night that he expected to be released on Monday and hinted at retirement.

Gonzalez's long fly to center scored Jeff Bagwell, who had greeted reliever Andy Carter (0-2) with a double and moved to third on a groundout.

■ NL Roundup

Ken Caminiti drove in two runs as the Astros won for the fourth time in five games.

Brian Williams (1-2) got the win despite allowing five runs and 10 hits in six innings.

Cubs 9, Braves 2

ATLANTA — Anthony Young, who set a major league record with his 27th straight loss last season, became a three-game winner for the first time in his career.

Young (3-3) began this year with a 5-35 record in three seasons, all with the New York Mets. His losing streak spanned 1992-93.

Young allowed one run and five hits in six innings. The last time he faced the Braves, they tagged him for eight runs and eight hits in 1 1-3 innings on April 15.

Kent Mercker (3-1), who pitched a no-hitter in Los Angeles last month, lost for the first time since last July 29.

Marlins 3, Giants 2

SAN FRANCISCO — Chuck Carr scored the tying run on a passed ball in the seventh inning and drove in the go-ahead run with a single in the ninth, giving Florida a victory over San Francisco.

The Marlins broke a three-game losing streak and ended the Giants' three-game winning streak.

Bret Barberie led off the Florida ninth with a walk from Pat Gomez (0-1). After Jesus Tavarez sacrificed, Carr singled.

Jeremy Hernandez (3-3) pitched two innings to get the victory.

The Giants put runners at first and third with none out in the seventh and had Matt Williams and Barry Bonds due up, but still failed to score.

Mets 5, Reds 4

NEW YORK — Bobby Bonilla homered and doubled twice as New York beat Cincinnati, the Reds' seventh loss in eight games.

Ryan Thompson homered and drove in three runs for the Mets. Bonilla singled in the sixth inning and Thompson connected with two outs for his 10th home run and a 4-3 lead.

Jeff Kent also homered, his 11th, for the Mets. Pinch-hitter Kevin Mitchell had a solo home run, his 12th, with one out in the Reds ninth.

Rockies 3, Expos 2, 10 innings

MONTREAL — Joe Girardi singled home the go-ahead run with two outs in the 10th inning and Colorado beat Montreal.

Dante Bichette led off the 10th with a single against Tim Scott (1-2) and Charlie Hayes also singled. Bichette moved to third on a fly ball and scored on Girardi's single off Jeff Shaw.

Bruce Ruffin (2-1) pitched two scoreless innings for the win.

Padres 4, Cardinals 0

SAN DIEGO — Wally Whitehurst combined with two relievers on a six-hit shutout and Bip Roberts tripled in two runs as San Diego defeated St. Louis.

Whitehurst (4-5) went five innings for the win before being lifted for a pinch hitter in the bottom of the inning because of tenderness in his pitching elbow. He gave up five hits and has not allowed a run in 13 1-3 innings.

NO-HIT: Williams has near perfect game

(From 1C)

In the first game, homers by Terry Bradshaw, a two-run shot, and Anthony Lewis, a solo blast, was the difference in the 4-3 win by the Travs.

Midland had a chance to win it in the seventh, but with runners at second and third with one out, Arkansas reliever John Kelly, who entered the game with an ERA of over 7.00, struckout the last two Angels to earn his 10th save of the year. The Angels stranded 10 runners.

The Angels also have Marquis Riley off the disabled list. Mark Sweeney, who was with Midland last year, re-joined the Angels, replacing the departed Luis Raven.

The Angels begin a 12-game homestand Tuesday with a 7 p.m. contest against San Antonio at Christensen Stadium. The Angels have today and Monday off.

NBA: Miller goes 5-for-10 shooting trouble and scored most of his 14 points when the outcome was all but certain in the fourth quarter. "Playing defense was important to me. You've got to burn the candle on both ends. You can't sit out there and shoot jump shots."

Miller had 14 and 23 points in the first two games, struggling from the field. He was 5-for-10 Saturday, limited this time by foul trouble.

McKey hit his first three shots in the first quarter and scored eight in the period.

"I felt pretty good. I made a couple of baskets early, that's the way it goes," he said. "I don't worry about scoring, or shooting. I just felt like I had to come out and play hard, to get involved, rebound, come up with some loose balls and put on some defensive pressure."

All five starters finished in double figures.

"When you look at the games in New York, we were so conscious of Reggie and Rik (Smits) getting involved," Pacers coach Larry Brown said. "We didn't have Derrick and Haywoode (Workman) looking to score. Today, Derrick started out as an offensive threat, and I thought Haywoode and Dale (Davis) really contributed offensively."

Smits, who like Miller had early foul problems, also had 14 points but helped limit Patrick Ewing to one point as the New York center missed all 10 of his shots from the field after scoring 60 points in the first two games of the series.

"We defended pretty well. I looked at the shots Patrick took," Brown said. "I never expected to coach in a game where I saw him get one point. ... We gave better help on Patrick."

"We tried to double-team him right away and then stay between him and the basket," Smits said.

"Rik pushed him out on the floor a little more, got him off the block, and we tried to help him," McKey said of the defensive effort against Ewing. "We tried to get a hand in his face, block him out, keep a body on him."

Texas crushes Nevada

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Shea Morenz had four hits and scored three runs and Texas scored seven times in the fifth inning as the Longhorns blew out Nevada in the NCAA Central Regional baseball tournament.

Third-seeded Texas (42-19) will face arch-rival Oklahoma, the No. 1 seed, Sunday in a battle of the only two unbeaten teams in the double-elimination regional.

Nevada (41-14), the second seed, will take on No. 6 seed Arkansas State Sunday in an elimination game.

Trailing 1-0, Texas erupted for three runs in the third inning without a hit. Then, with two outs in the fifth, the Longhorns rocked Nevada starter Kevin Lake for five consecutive hits and finished the inning with seven runs and a 12-2 lead.

Ryan Kjos (9-6) was the winner, giving up six runs on five hits over 5 2-3 innings. He struck out seven and walked six for the Longhorns, whose entire starting lineup had at least one RBI.

Lake (11-4), who gave up 10 runs on nine hits in 4 2-3 innings, took the loss.

Neil Garcia doubled in two runs and scored another to lead the Wolf Pack.

In Texas' explosive fifth inning, the Longhorns got run-scoring singles by Marcus Hendry, J.P. Webb and Jeff Conway.

Cal St. Fullerton 4, TCU 1

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Mike Parisi and Ted Silva stifled Texas Christian's hot hitters and handed Cal State-Fullerton a victory in the NCAA Midwest I Regional.

The Horned Frogs (38-21) must quickly bounce back for a noon elimination game Sunday against Oklahoma State. The winner will play Fullerton Sunday night.

Sunday's other game has Memphis playing Northwestern State, La., in an elimination game.

The second-seeded Titans (43-13) placed themselves firmly in the double-elimination tournament's driver's seat with a second straight strong pitching performance and an efficient offense featuring five extra base hits, a single and four sacrifices.

Parisi (11-3) allowed only six hits and one run in 7 2-3 innings. Silva bailed him out of a two-out, two-on jam in the eighth for his 13th save and second in two days.

Arkansas St. 10, Texas-San Antonio 5

AUSTIN — Ripley McWilliams belted two home runs as Arkansas State eliminated Texas-San Antonio from the NCAA Central Regional baseball tournament with a 10-5 victory Saturday.

Arkansas State (38-24) will face the loser of the Texas-Nevada matchup on Sunday under the six-team tournament's double elimination format.

Flu doesn't slow Malone, who should play today

By Jay Privman
N.Y. Times News Service

■ Rockets-Jazz, 2:30 p.m., NBC

SALT LAKE CITY — A flu bug that hit Utah Jazz forward Karl Malone before Friday night's game at the Delta Center did not stop him from scoring a team-high 22 points in a 95-86 victory over Houston.

But Malone was too ill to attend practice Saturday, "and he hasn't missed many in 10 years," according to Utah Coach Jerry Sloan.

"He's not feeling very well," Sloan said. "He's had a tough time. I don't know if he's getting worse, but he's not here."

Malone is expected to play Sunday afternoon in Game 4 of the Western Conference Final. He averaged 26.7 points per game in a seven-game series against Denver, and 29.3 points against San Antonio in the opening round of the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Malone averaged 12.3 rebounds a game in the first two rounds, and had 16 Friday night, equaling his best mark during this year's playoffs.

Malone also spent time before Friday night's game getting treatment for a tender right ankle, which he turned in the third quarter of Game 2 Wednesday night in Houston.

Utah controlled most of Friday night's Game 3 as little went right for the Rockets. Hakeem Olajuwon was held without a field goal for the first 16 minutes 34 seconds of the game, and the Rockets' outside shots, which complement Olajuwon's inside game, kept missing.

The Jazz beat the Rockets in the transition game, getting fast-break baskets in bunches. And when several calls didn't go their way, the Rockets complained bitterly, incurring four technical fouls.

Despite all that, the Rockets trailed by only 8 points with a little less than two minutes to go. So even though the Jazz finally won, and halved the Rockets' lead in this four-of-seven-game series, the Rockets were convinced Saturday that they are the superior team, a position they want to re-establish Sunday.

"We didn't play well at all, and we still had a chance to win," said Olajuwon, who had a game-high 29 points.

Olajuwon, who had both Utah center Felton Spencer and forward David Benoit come over to visit every time he touched the ball in the low post, missed his first eight shots, then made 10 of his last 15. But by the time Olajuwon heated up, the Jazz had built as much as an 18-point lead, the last time at 73-55 in the third quarter.

"The Jazz played smart, they did a good job, and I was tired, too," said Olajuwon, who, despite playing 46 of 48 minutes Friday, said he is weakened by the altitude in places like Salt Lake City and Denver.

Even without oxygen, Olajuwon is good for about 30 points a night. This year's NBA most valuable player has averaged 33.7 points in the three games of this series, after averaging 28.7 points against Phoenix in the Western Conference semifinals and 34 against Portland in the opening round.

For the Rockets to succeed, however, they need an outside shooter to relieve some of the pressure on Olajuwon. Like guard Kenny Smith, who had 27 points in Game 1. Or Vernon Maxwell, who had 34 one night in Phoenix. Or Mario Elie. Or Sam Cassell. Those four guards, however, made only 10 of 38 shots Friday night, with Elie drawing a seven-shot blank.

"We know we can beat this ball club," Cassell said. "We've just got to concentrate on making our three-point shots. I'm not whining about our guard play. We'll be back. One person's got to step up. It's not a big concern of mine."

The Rockets made only six of 21 of their 3-point attempts, and were only three of 14 in the second half.

The Rockets rely on their outside shooting more than most teams, and it became a crucial factor Friday night.

RHCC: 2-team race shaping up

a 69 on Saturday, and they now own a two-day total of 131, the same as Herell and Whiteside, who had a Friday round of 65.

It now appears that the Stampede title is a two-team race heading into today's final round of play. The 131 on the leader board is a full six strokes over the third place team of Craig Winborn and Tim Peden.

Joe Williams and Jim Hill stand in a fourth-place tie with Pap Roark and Greg Frazier at 138. Roark and Frazier also had a 66 Saturday to tie Herell and Whiteside for the best round of the day.

Second round golf results from the Ranchland Hills Country Club's annual Stampede Member-Guest tournament.

Steers advance in 4A playoffs

ABILENE — The Big Spring Steers like to keep their Class 4A state baseball action on the heart-thumping side.

Big Spring swept two games from Fort Worth Arlington Heights at Hardin-Simmons University Saturday to advance to the region finals, but they waited until the last minute to do it.

The Steers, who lost to Heights 12-4 on Friday in the first game of the three-game region semifinal set, came back with a 4-2 win in the first game and took a 5-4 win in the second game, winning in dramatic fashion.

With two outs, the bases loaded and facing an 0-2 count, Steer batter Trey Terrazes grounded a single to score Luis Bustamante with the winning run.

Big Spring trailed 4-1 earlier in the game when Heights had a three-run fourth inning, highlighted by two Steer errors.

In the first game Saturday, Big Spring scored three of its four runs in the first inning on a two-run triple by Todd Parrish and a run scoring double by John Oliva. Bustamante (4-1) went the distance to get the win.

Big Spring, now 24-7, will play Fort Worth Brewer, again at Hardin-Simmons, with a single game on Thursday and two, if needed, on Friday. The winner of the Big Spring-Brewer series will earn a state berth in Austin.

Haynes has ace

Don Haynes produced his first hole-in-one Saturday, acing the No. 8 West, 175-yard hole with a 5-iron.

Haynes was playing with Tom Harrell and Pete Eastup.

U.S. soccer team ties Greece, 1-1

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Frank Klopas achieved his goal. The United States is still trying.

Klopas scored against his former country, but the United States had a mixed game Saturday in a 1-1 tie with Greece, the next-to-last game for the Americans before the World Cup begins.

"This was sort of an ego thing," said Klopas, a 27-year-old forward who was born in Athens and raised in Chicago. "I wanted to show everyone and prove to everyone that I was back 100 percent."

Klopas spent four seasons with AEK Athens until leaving last December. He tore a ligament in his right knee in July 1992, needed surgery twice and didn't regain his form until this spring.

He knew this game was being televised back to Greece, which gave him an audience. He scored the goal in the final minute of the first half against Greece's backup goalkeeper, Ilias Atmatzidis, the starter for AEK Athens.

When the game ended, Klopas said the Greek players joked with him.

"Why don't you tell us what vitamins you're taking," he said they told him.

Greece (1-2-4 this year) is preparing for its first World Cup appearance and was the overwhelming favorite among the small crowd of 21,317 in the Yale Bowl. They chanted "Hel-las! Hel-las!" throughout.

"Playing in Greece wasn't a bad result to play 1-1," U.S. coach Bora Milutinovic joked.

Klopas, who got his fifth goal in his last seven international games, put the United States (4-5-8) ahead after Paul Caliguiri got by Stratos Apostolakis, who slipped on the left side, and sent a left-footed cross into the middle. Klopas twisted over Ioannis Kalitzakis and knocked the ball in with his left foot.

Minas Chatzidis, who came on at the start of the second half, tied the score four minutes into the second half with his first international goal, a booming left-footed shot from the top of the penalty area after Dimitris Saravakos shuttled the ball over to him.

Chatzidis said the Greeks believe they can advance from a first-round group that includes Argentina, Bulgaria and Nigeria.

"We will need at least one victory," he said "It's possible to get that one victory out of the three games."

Eric Wynalda, who played the second half, had a chance to put the United States ahead in the 56th minute when got behind Greece's defense, but then missed an open net.

"That situation, as it presented itself, was pretty much an ideal scoring opportunity," Wynalda said. "I think I should have put that away."

Ernie Stewart, who also played the second half, nearly scored off a header with about four minutes to go, but Atmatzidis dove and parried the ball over the crossbar with his left hand.

Greece coach Alkis Panagoulias, the coach of the U.S. team from 1983-85, said he thinks the Americans can get to the second round of the World Cup.

"They have that American fighting spirit," he said. "There is not much difference between big and small powers."

Parsons ends long drought with win

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Phil Parsons broke a 12-year winless drought on the Busch Grand National circuit by overcoming trouble on a late-race pit stop and passing Mark Martin to win the Champion Spark Plug 300 Saturday.

"This is the biggest moment of my career," said Parsons, whose only other victory on the circuit came at Bristol, Tenn., on March 13, 1982, a span of 83 races.

The victory, worth $35,050, also was Parsons' first in NASCAR competition since winning the 1988 Winston 500 at Talladega, Ala.

"We peaked that year," Parsons said. "We've been downhill since then."

Parsons led laps 140-158 in his Chevrolet before Mike McLaughlin's spinout on the fourth turn brought out the race's sixth and final caution.

When the leaders pitted, Parson's crew had trouble with an air wrench and couldn't get off his right rear tire.

"Those things happen," Parsons said. "It didn't concern me, because I knew we had the car."

By the time Parsons' crew got another air wrench and changed the tire, Martin had retaken the lead and Parsons was fifth.

Martin got a good jump on the restart on lap 164 and quickly built a two-second cushion.

But Parsons worked his way through the pack and caught Martin on lap 181. One lap later, Martin slid up the 24-degree banking as the two exited turn four. Parsons ducked low, completed the pass before they reached the start-finish line and spent the rest of the race pulling away.

■ Champion 300

"We got beat, that's all," Martin said. "Just got outrun."

Defending race champion Michael Waltrip, driving seven days after fracturing his right shoulder blade in a Winston Cup crash, was third.

"The shoulder's feeling good," Waltrip said, adding that he didn't expect to have any problems in Sunday's Coca-Cola 600, the longest race of the Winston Cup season.

Roy Payne, in fourth place, was the only other driver on the lead lap.

Harry Gant appeared to be the class of the field early, leading three times for 33 laps. But he fell off the pace while leading on lap 87 and pulled his Chevrolet behind the wall. The problem was diagnosed as a broken oil pump, ending Gant's day.

Also having trouble was Grand National season points leader Kenny Wallace. He experienced engine trouble only 18 laps into the race and had to take his Ford behind the wall. Wallace wound up last in the 43-car field and saw his lead over Ricky Craven drop from 98 points to 2. David Green, who had been in second place, finished 24th, 34 laps down, and fell to third place, 13 points behind Wallace.

The field was trimmed considerably on lap 47, when Stanton Barrett banged into Bobby Labonte as the lead pack went down the front stretch. The collision triggered a 15-car pileup that resulted in several drivers being sent to the infield hospital.

All were checked and released with the exception of Chad Little, who was taken to Cabarrus Memorial Hospital, where officials said X-rays revealed a broken right shoulder and a broken right leg.

Race has variety of meanings for drivers

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — For Jeff Gordon and John Andretti, the Coca-Cola 600 is a chance to chase their dreams. For Dale Earnhardt and Sterling Marlin, it's a chance to chase $1 million.

Gordon, the 1993 Winston Cup Rookie of the Year, is hoping Sunday's race at Charlotte Motor Speedway will enable him to break out of his sophomore slump.

Earnhardt, winner of the Winston Select 500, and Marlin, winner of the Daytona 500, are in contention for the Winston Select Million, a bonus that goes to a driver who wins three of the sport's top four races. The 600 is the third leg.

As for Andretti, he'll be happy just to get to Charlotte, get in his Chevrolet Lumina and get on the 1½-mile trioval. Andretti is trying to become the first to drive in both the Indianapolis 500 and the Coca-Cola 600 on the same day.

Gordon leads the field into the 600, NASCAR's longest race. Winning the pole has been one of the few bright spots lately for the 22-year-old. After finishing 14th in the 1993 driver standings, Gordon's in a tailspin this year. He was sixth in the Winston Cup point standings three races into the 1994 schedule, but plummeted in the last seven races.

In 18th place in the standings, 593 points behind Ernie Irvan's leading total, Gordon is still looking for his first victory on stock car racing's top circuit.

Many people — Gordon included — had expected better from a driver who dominated every series in which he ran prior to Winston Cup.

■ Coca-Cola 600

"I want to be a Winston Cup regular," he said. "I want to win."

Charlotte is a good place to begin that quest. He has two second-place finishes in Winston Cup racing, one coming in last year's Coca-Cola 600.

"I feel very good about this car," Gordon said of his Lumina. "I've felt good about it since we dropped it off the truck last week. The longer the race, the better I think we're going to be.

"We need to be there at the end. We haven't been there at the end lately, so that's very important to me."

Earnhardt, who will start 24th Sunday, will be seeking his third consecutive victory in the 400-lap event. He has won the 600 three times, second only to Darrell Waltrip's five victories.

This is the second time in five years that Earnhardt comes to Charlotte after winning the spring race at Talladega, the second of the sport's big races. After winning the Talladega event in 1990, Earnhardt couldn't win the 600, but he earned a $100,000 consolation bonus for winning the other of the four showcase races, the Southern 500.

Harry Gant got a $100,000 bonus for winning two of the four races in 1991, as did the late Davey Allison in 1992. Nobody claimed any of the bonus money last year.

The only driver to win the $1 million bonus was Bill Elliott in 1985, "so you know it's not easy," Earnhardt said.

Trevino leads seniors

Associated Press

MALVERN, Pa. — Lee Trevino is doing just fine off the tee and everyone is having trouble on the greens.

"I have more confidence in my driver than any other club in my bag," Trevino said Saturday after taking a one-stroke lead in the Bell Atlantic Classic. "Nothing makes me angrier than to hit a 3-wood, 5-wood or long iron and miss the fairway."

■ Golf Roundup

Trevino shot a 3-under-par 67 for a 138 total, one better than Tommy Aaron, who shot 68, and Jim Dent, who shot 71.

Only four players broke par Saturday on the hilly, 6,608-yard course, and 70 of the 78 remaining in the field were over par after two rounds.

The greens at Chester Valley Golf Club have been causing so many problems for the other players that Trevino figured he could win the $700,00 tournament with another 67 in Sunday's final round.

"This is not the type of course where you're going to shoot 63 or 64," said Trevino, who is using a putter he first used in the 1960s. "Someone shoots that, and they're gone."

First-round leaders Dent, Tom Wargo and Larry Ziegler had their share of trouble Saturday. Each had sole possession of the lead at one point, only to lose it to Trevino. Wargo and Ziegler both had second-round 72s.

Trevino hit 10 of his first 11 greens in regulation, making a one-foot putts for birdie on 9 and 11 before finishing up with birdies on two of the last three holes.

"The secret is to play bad and get away (with it)," said Trevino, who had an opening-round 71. "It's the perfect example of grinding. You have to grind."

Dent was in position to take control of the tournament when he moved to five under with a 40-foot birdie putt on the fourth hole and a 25-footer for birdie on 5.

Colonial

FORT WORTH — Scott Simpson converted a record-breaking effort into a four-stroke lead Saturday as the weather-troubled Southwestern Bell Colonial finally got back on schedule.

Simpson, playing almost flawless golf on a rain-soaked Colonial Country Club course, put together a bogey-free, 6-under-par 64 and matched the largest 54-hole lead of the season on the PGA Tour.

His 195 total was 15 under par, broke the old course and tournament scoring record of 197, set last year by Fulton Allem and Greg Norman, and four shots better than Gary Hallberg, who had a third-round 65.

It also gave Simpson, the 1987 U.S. Open champion, a shot at the 72-hole record in the tournament Ben Hogan won five times: 264. Simpson needs a 69 in Sunday's final round to match that total, and he hasn't be that high yet.

The weather, which disrupted the tournament schedule for three days, was at least partially responsible for the extremely low scoring on the tough old track on the banks of the Trinity, but took nothing away from Simpson's dominance.

With the course saturated from a series of thunderstorms, players were allowed to lift, clean and place balls in the fairway.

"Anytime you let players of this caliber get their hands on the ball, and you have a course that is soft, low scoring is going to be the result," veteran Hale Irwin said.

Only Hallberg could keep the runaway leader in sight.

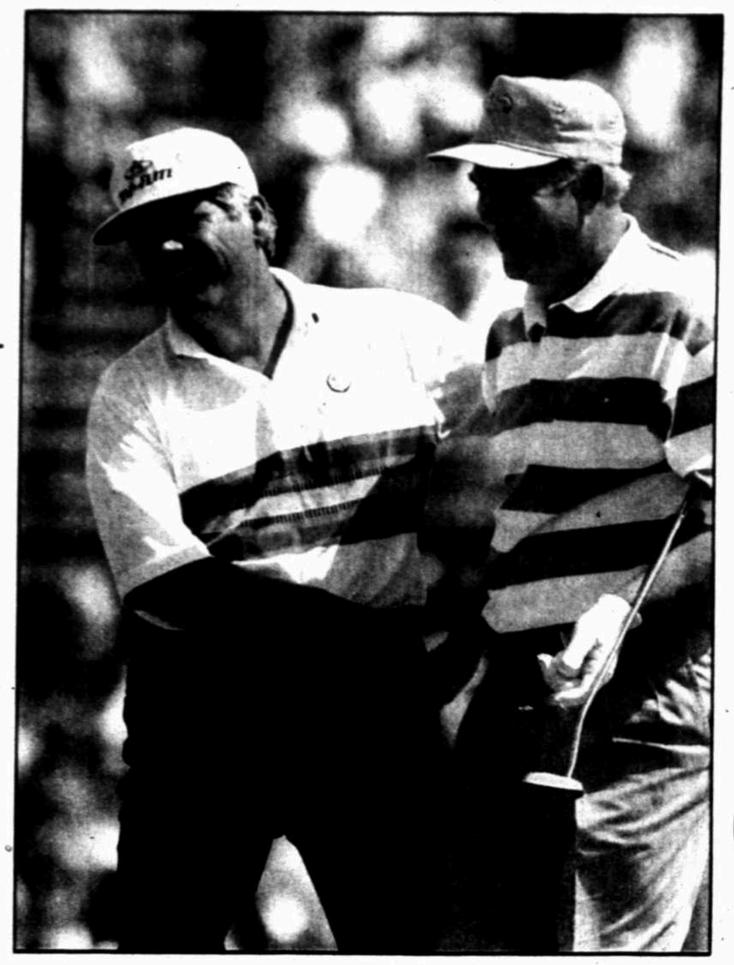

"Four shots is not a lot out here," Hallberg said, looking ahead to Sunday's final round.

Then, however, he viewed the man he is chasing.

"He's a very machine-like player," Hallberg said of Simpson. "He's very steady. He gets in a groove and he just stays in it, like a machine. He's in a zone, very focused."

No one else was within six strokes of Simpson.

Tom Lehman, a runaway winner last week in the Memorial tournament, was third alone at 201 after 69.

Defending champion Betsy King was the only other member of the foursome to cash in, earning $25,000 when she converted a 15-foot birdie putt on the seventh hole.

King missed a chance for $45,000 when she blew a 7-footer on the third hole.

The other two contestants, Nancy Lopez and Brandie Burton, were shut out in the first day of the fourth LPGA Skins Game over the Stonebriar Country Club layout north of Dallas.

LPGA Corning

CORNING, N.Y. — Nancy Ramsbottom, a player whose game rises or falls with her putter, is leading the LPGA Corning Classic after three rounds due in large part to two holes on which she didn't take the club out of the bag.

On Thursday, when she shot 64, she holed a 7-iron from 124 yards for an eagle.

On Saturday, when Martha Nause had just tied her for the lead, Ramsbottom stepped up on the tee of the par-3, 186-yard third hole at the Corning Country Club and stroked a 7-wood toward the pin.

"I liked it the whole way," she said.

But she could only see the top of the pin. The roar of the crowd told her the rest.

"I could tell it was THE roar," she said. "You can just tell. It would have been just a big clap had it been close. But the big yell means it's in the hole."

LPGA Skins

FRISCO, Texas — Patty Sheehan relied on a hot putter to capture $140,000 and emerge as the big first-day winner Saturday in the LPGA Skins Game.

Sheehan rolled in a 30-foot birdie putt from the fringe on the par-3 sixth hole to win six skins and $90,000.

On the par-4 ninth and final hole, Sheehan holed an 8-foot birdie putt for two skins and an additional $50,000.

Bullets beat men for 1st win

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The all-woman Colorado Silver Bullets made history with a 7-2 victory over the Richfield Rockets, a 35-and-over men's amateur team.

Stacy Sunny's three RBIs and Lee Anne Ketcham's 14-strikeout pitching Friday night paced the Bullets to what is believed to be the first victory by a professional women's baseball team over an all-male squad.

"We are on a mission to prove women can play this game," Sunny said. "This is a great moment."

The game ended with Ketcham striking out the side in the seventh inning as 3,954 fans cheered wildly.

"We had no idea how good or bad they might be," Rockets manager Ron Cottone said. "Watching them warm up, we said we would be in for a tough game. My hope is that young girls will see this and get it into their heads that they can do this."

The Rockets entered the game with a 2-2 record against other 35-and-over teams. The Bullets were 0-6 against pro, semi-pro and amateur opponents.

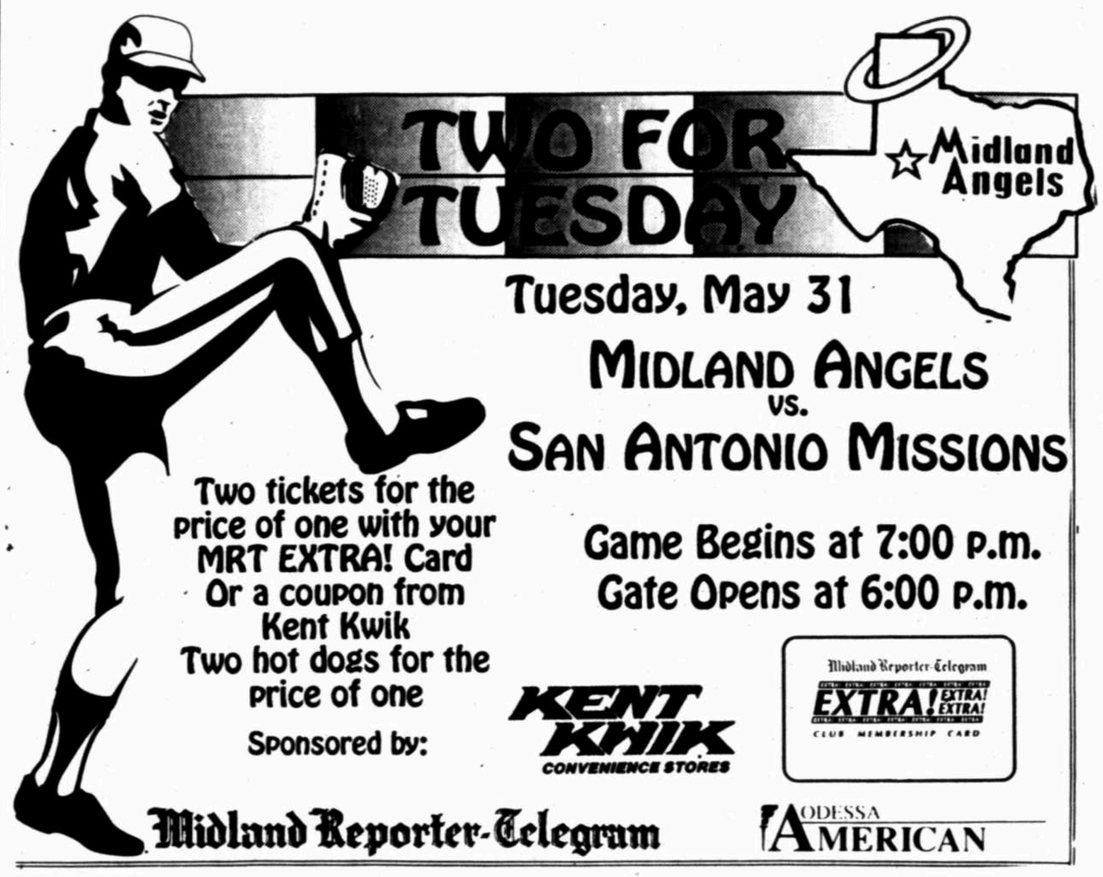

Sunny's two-out, two-strike line-drive single off former Twins farmhand Kevin Sevcik drove in two runs in the sixth, doubling the Bullets' seasonal output to that point.

Melissa Coombes capped the rally with a two-run pop-fly single that should have been caught in the infield.

Sunny singled in another run in the seventh and Shannan Mitchem singled in two more as the Bullets scored all their runs off Sevcik, at 36 one of six Rockets under 40. Brock Kiecker, 43, and Brian Kispert, 51, blanked the Bullets the first five innings.

Ketcham, a right-hander from Birmingham, Ala., gave up only five hits and two unearned runs.

"I threw a lot of sliders and off-speed stuff early," Ketcham said. "Then I got stronger as the game moved on and threw a lot of fastballs. This is the best crowd we have had.

Devers wins Jenner 100

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Gail Devers made her 1994 outdoor debut a successful one Saturday, winning the 100 meters at the Bruce Jenner Classic in a wind-aided 10.77 seconds.

Devers, the 1993 world champion in the 100 and 100 hurdles, edged Carlette Guidry (10.97) en route to finishing with the ninth-fastest time ever under all conditions. Juliet Cuthbert of Jamica was third in 11.04.

"I really didn't practice last week and maybe that did me some good," said Devers, whose schedule was thrown off by a May 17 auto accident in Los Angeles in which her car was rear-ended while she waited at a stop light.

"I'm pleased with the time. I made some mistakes and I did some things right."

Devers, the 1992 Olympic gold medalist in the 100, had planned to open her outdoor season at last Sunday's New York Games but neck and back soreness from the accident forced her to pull out.

Drivers urged to use caution

By Paul Newberry
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — The racers were urged to "pay attention, drive with your heads and take care of each other" during final instructions Saturday for the Indianapolis 500.

"Getting to the end of the race is the key to winning the race," chief steward Tom Binford told the drivers.

The 33 competitors had met behind closed doors earlier in the day, so their attention waned during the traditional, made-for-the-fans ceremony just outside the area where they all want to be Sunday, Victory Lane.

Mario Andretti, preparing for his final run at the Brickyard, chatted amiably with Lyn St. James. Emerson Fittipaldi kidded with Arie Luyendyk. Nigel Mansell slouched up front with his legs crossed and a distant look in his eyes, perhaps thinking about his rumored return to Formula One.

"This means nothing," Luyendyk said after the 45-minute ceremony, waving to the fans as he walked down pit row to board a bus for another Indy tradition, a downtown parade. "We've already had our closed meeting. This is for the fans."

Ah, the fans. Only at Indianapolis would thousands of people show up to see Binford admonish the drivers on the finer points of racing at the 2½-mile Speedway — especially the start.

"The start of this race is the most exciting thing in sports," Binford said. "But it's also one of the most dangerous."

He reminded the drivers that pole-sitter Al Unser Jr. would be in control when the green flag fell. "The race is not won on the first lap," Binford said. "Use your head and be careful."

Luyendyk, the 1990 winner, said there were no surprises in the private meeting.

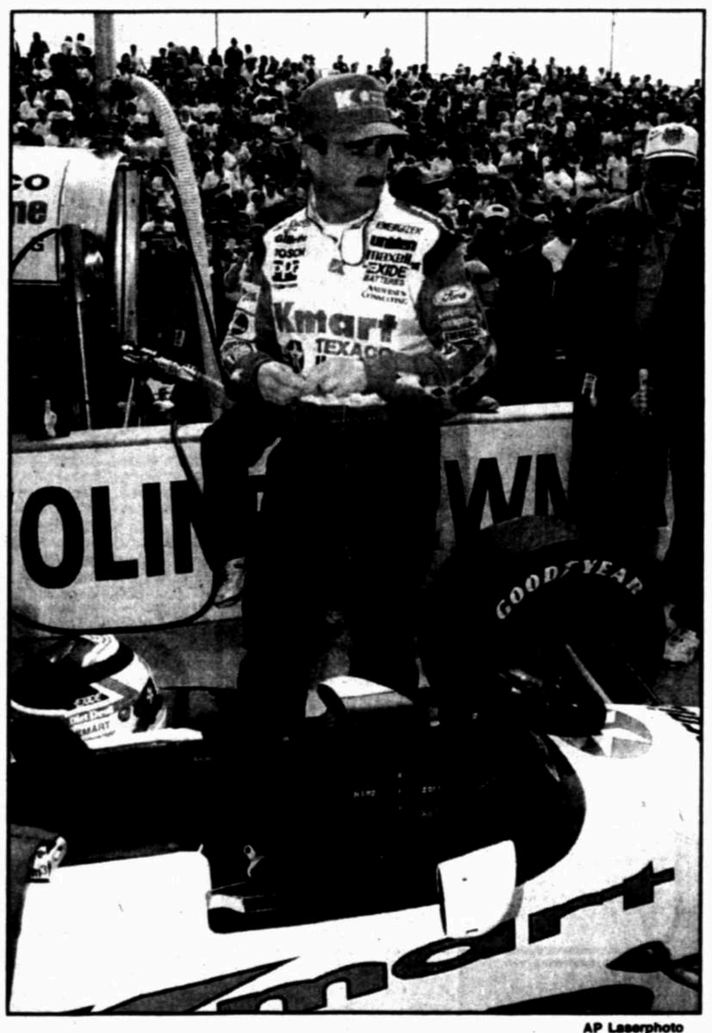

"Nothing has changed much since last year," he said. "We talked about the speed in the pits (which is limited to 100 mph) and what to do when the yellow flag comes out. Everything is clear, but there's a lot of rules to remember."

Luyendyk has reviewed film of last year's race, in which he finished second to Fittipaldi, looking for any little edge that might put him in the winner's circle this time. "The more you know," he said, "the more you have to work with."

The throng craned their necks to get a glimpse and perhaps a picture of their favorite star. Pressed against the fence which separates the grandstand from the pits, some people got a little testy.

"Can you see alright?" a man said sarcastically when a camera-toting spectator jumped in front of him. "I've been standing here for an hour and a half and now I can't see a thing."

But for most, the hassle was worth it.

HALL: 10th-place finish

(From 1C)

Chevrolet chassis, the Hall team finished 11th in team standings.

It was disappointing because the team had high hopes for Indy when they garnered a sixth-row position and led the race by the third lap. Fabi recorded the fastest lap of the race and the fastest leading lap at 197.507 miles per hour.

He dropped back to fourth but held that position with just 70 of the 200 laps to go in the 500-mile race. A bad pit stop, however, dropped Fabi to 10th where he held off former Hall driver John Andretti to the checkered flag.

"I think we played it too safe," Fabi said after the race. "To win, you have to take everything to the limit. You can't be conservative and win."

So Hall and Fabi collected their thoughts and are back at Indy with the new engine along with IBM software and car analysis technology that some of the other drivers are also using. And they're hoping the changes and fine-tuning will put them across the finish line ahead of today's other 32 competitors.

VDS: Luyendyk best poll position for VDS

(From 1C)

my day."

Fabi team owner Jim Hall resides in Midland.

Luyendyk has the best position of seven drivers with VDS engines. His average qualifying time of 223.673 mph put him in the second spot of Row 3. Next comes Fabi (223.394) in the 24th spot and then Rahal (224.094) at 28.

Weis took his company's last two engines to the airport Tuesday. Once VDS' engines are shipped to the Speedway, the shop's job is all but over with. But Weis goes to the race for his own pleasure and for "PR to show you're interested," he said.

VDS engines won Indy in '78, '86, '88, '89, and '90, Weis said. In '78 a VDS engine made for Jim Hall won the triple crown of 500 races: Indy, Pocano and Ontario (Calif.).

Strangely, the VDS owner isn't as interested in the 500 race as he is in the Indy scene.

"Mainly, the 500 race is pretty boring," Weis said, "but you just can't believe the atmosphere. When you see 150,000 people in one place, it's impressive ... your heart's just pumping the whole time."

Andretti to try Indy and Coca-Cola today

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It doesn't hurt to have a sense of humor when you're trying to do something that people say can't be done.

John Andretti, nephew of longtime racing star Mario Andretti, will try to pull off the ultimate double on Sunday, racing in both the Indianapolis 500 and the Coca-Cola 600 at Concord, N.C.

"I'm looking at Indy as a warmup for the 600," the younger Andretti joked. "Maybe those guys at Charlotte (Motor Speedway) will be so tired of sitting around all day waiting for the (5 p.m. EDT) start that I'll be fresher than they are."

Unlikely, considering the gruelling task the 5-foot-6, 130-pounder is undertaking.

"I'm a lot bigger and stronger than he is, and I wouldn't want to try something like that," said Paul Tracy, who will compete against Andretti at Indianapolis.

"I wish him well, but I don't see how he's going to pull that off," NASCAR star Rusty Wallace said.

What made it possible to even try to run in both races was the Charlotte Motor Speedway installing lights two years ago, and this year pushing the starting time of its NASCAR Winston Cup stock car race back by an hour.

Indy traditionally begins at Noon EDT. The race generally last 3 hours, 10 minutes.

That would leave Andretti less than two hours to helicopter out of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, board a private jet at a nearby airport, make the 366-mile, 53-minute trip to a private air strip at Concord, N.C., and helicopter into the Charlotte track.

He already has been crisscrossing the country just to qualify and practice for both events.

Andretti began practice for Indy May 9 in an A.J. Foyt Lola. He qualified for a stock car race at Sonoma, Calif., May 11, flew by private jet to Indy and qualified May 13.

Indy facts and figures

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Facts and figures of the 78th Indianapolis 500-mile race Sunday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway:

EVENT — The 78th annual Indianapolis 500.

DISTANCE — 500 miles; 200 laps around the 2½-mile, asphalt-on-brick Indianapolis Motor Speedway track.

SANCTIONING BODY — The U.S. Auto Club; also open to IndyCar, NASCAR, SCCA, Formula One and other drivers through international FIA listing.

RACE CARS — Open-cockpit, open-wheel and single-seat, with engine specifications set by the U.S. Auto Club. Minimum wheelbase of 96 inches; maximum length of 16.25 feet; maximum width of 78.5 inches; minimum weight of 1,550 pounds.

START — 11 a.m. EDT from a flying start, following warmup, parade and pace laps. The pace car, a 1994 Ford Mustang Cobra, powered by a 240-horsepower, 5.0-liter V8 engine, will be driven by Parnelli Jones, the 1963 Indy winner.

FINISH — Standings are unofficial until posted by USAC, expected six hours after the end of the race.

POLE POSITION — Al Unser Jr., 31, Albuquerque, N.M., who qualified a 1994 Penske-Mercedes at a four-lap average of 228.011 mph.

FORMER WINNERS IN RACE (5) — Mario Andretti (1969), Bobby Rahal (1986), Emerson Fittipaldi (1989, 1993), Arie Luyendyk (1990), Al Unser Jr. (1992).

OUR HEROES GAVE THEIR LIVES TO KEEP OUR NATIONS FREE . . .
MEMORIAL DAY, MAY 31st IS IN HONOR OF THOSE HEROES

Throughout our Country's history, our precious state of liberty, was under threat by many foes, and as our annals will disclose, we've been compelled to go to war, since freedom is worth fighting for; and when attempts at peace had failed, our fighting forces then prevailed. Those servicemen obeyed the call, and were prepared to give their all. So many of them paid the price, and made the final sacrifice. From lessons of your chosen creed, remember their heroic deed, and praise them for their gallantry,: they gave their lives to keep us free.

FAMILY LIVING

Amazing, breathtaking, stunning, huge and wonderful.

These are all words which could describe this luxurious four bedroom house located in the heart of Midland.

Decorated throughout with a Southwestern theme, this home features many one-of-a-kind features; original in part because, like the hand painted tiles, they were designed specifically for this house.

Although from the street the house has a fairly modest facade, set back from the street and shaded by mature trees, once inside the truly inspirational decor and design become apparent.

Everywhere one looks there are features which are reminiscent of a by-gone, more luxurious era.

The gun closet with cabinets and work-bench, the silver room and the maid's room are all features that recall an older, more graceful way of life.

Because the house curves around a central garden and patio area and has plenty of large windows overlooking it, the house is very bright and cheerful with pleasant view accessible from the informal living areas.

There is a tremendous amount of living space, all of which has been professionally decorated to a very high standard indeed.

Double fireplaces, custom cabinetry, parquet floors and plantation shutters all add luxurious touches to the property.

The master bedroom suite typifies the design elements that are to be found throughout the house.

The bedroom boasts elegant terra cotta tiles on the floors and the fireplace is set into a curved, Southwestern chimney.

Other rooms in the suite include dressing rooms, huge walk in closets and a stunning bathroom complete with whirlpool bath, large skylight and double vanity.

For more information about this amazing property, or to arrange an exclusive appointment to view, call Roberta Aldridge at Langston Realtors at 682-9495.

Analysis helps realtors determine fair market value, price of homes

Pat Orseth
President/Midland
Board of Realtors

The highest price a property will bring in a competitive and open market is called the fair market value.

A major step in establishing the fair market value is to examine comparable house sales. (Completed transactions that resemble the subject property most closely.) When this data is collected, the Realtor will compile a competitive market analysis which lists several home sales in the neighborhood. The analysis includes such items as (1) a description of each house, (2) how long each house was on the market, (3) the list price, (4) the sale price and (5) a comparison of each house with the subject property (style, size, condition, etc.)

In addition the competitive market analysis would examine the houses on the market in the area and the price of each, to determine the competition.

The fair market value assumes the price will not be affected by undue circumstances. Factors that might cause a price to be set less than fair market value include: (1) the lack of buyers in the market place (perhaps due to a poor economy), (2) an increase in inflation, (3) the need for the seller to sell immediately.

Based on the competitive market analysis the Realtor and the seller can determine a price they believe is fair based on all the information reviewed.

The idea of pricing high so a seller has room to come down should be considered very carefully:

- Most buyers borrow money to buy a house. The lending institution requires the property to be appraised to insure a fair market value. The sale could fall through if the property is priced unrealistically.
- Overpricing reduces the response to any merchandising done for the property, and will not produce results.
- Buyers look at prices on many comparable properties. If a property does not compare favorable it won't sell.
- If overpricing delays a sale, the cost and inconvenience could be prohibitive (delay in job transfer, payment on two mortgages, wear and tear on your present property, and loss of opportunity elsewhere).

Homes sell at fair market value. Pricing a home realistically will usually bring an early sale, fewer inconveniences and a greater monetary return.

The Midland Association is one of more than 1,800 boards nationwide that comprise the National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association and the voice for real estate.

Real Estate Facts . . .
Extra points earn thousands

Vicky Garrett
Chaparral Realtors

Want to make a great investment? Would you consider paying $1,000 to earn over $14,000? Consider this alternative when buying your next home.

Mortgage lenders often offer several different mortgage plans, each with a different interest rate. For example, they may offer these two alternatives on a conventional loan: 7.75% with no discount points, or 7.5% with one discount point.

A discount point is equal to 1% of the amount borrowed on a mortgage loan. Mortgage lenders charge discount points to increase their "yield" on home loans, and the number of points charged may vary from day to day.

If you borrow $100,000 for 30 years at 7.75%, your payments for principal and interest would be approximately $716.41. The same loan at 7.5% would have payments of $699.21. That's $17.20 per month less than the first example.

If you choose the lower of the two interest rates, you will be charged one discount point (1%) on $100,000. That's $1,000.

The question is: Why spend an extra $1,000, up front, to save $17.20 each month. The answer is: by placing the $17.20 in a 5% interest bearing account for 30 years, you save $14,314.85.

What if you plan to own the home for five years? The $17.20 per month savings would still grow to $11,69.70. If you plan to sell after only two years, your $17.20 would only grow to $433.20.

Does it make sense to pay $1,000 in discount points, in order to save $433 in interest? Obviously not. Real savings do begin to accrue, however, if you own the home for five or more years.

The longer you plan to own the home, the more sense it makes to pay the extra point and increase your overall savings. This little-known secret to savings is just one aspect of the financing formula. Ask your agent for more information.

310 General Help Wanted

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

A small deposit is required.

CIRCULATION

A CHOICE ROUTE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram is seeking a responsible person to fill a motor-route in the rural area southwest of Midland by June 1, 1994. Be an independent contractor with potential average earnings of $200 per week take home money. CALL NOW!

WHAT HOURS?

Papers must be delivered to 4 stores and approx. 340 residents daily. Pick up the papers at 1 a.m. in the morning and you can be done in three hours. That leaves your days virtually open for other daytime activities, such as a part-time or even full-time job.

INTERESTED?

★If you are a person who wants/needs good part time income.

★If you are a person who can't justify day care and a job

★If you are 55 and older wanting regular exercise and neighborhood involvement (with added income).

★ Enjoy making lifetime friendships and earn extra income to make use for house payments, car payments, new furniture, etc.

Applicants must be serious, have an economical, dependable car and a $100 REFUNDABLE deposit. For more information and/or an interview appointment, please call Marvin Wooten at the Midland Reporter-Telegram, 915/687-8805 (after hours leave message and I'll return your call).

Coming
JUNE 12. . .
ODESSA
MANUFACTURING

BRIEFING

A rig crew for Arlequin Fishing Tool Co. paused time to pose while turning right.

Rig count

The rig count was sharply lower for both the Permian Basin and the U.S. during the week ended May 20, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count slumped nine rigs to 92, the lowest since September 1992, and was due largely to severe rainstorms the week before. A year ago the count was 105.

Nationwide, the rig count dropped 25 rigs to 687 but remains above the year-ago tally of 641.

Among major producing states, Texas showed the sharpest decline, 14 rigs, while Michigan and Ohio had the sharpest increase, three rigs each.

Prices steady

After sliding to last Wednesday at the end of last week due to the approach of June contracts, prices of West Texas Intermediate on the New York Mercantile Exchange held at about $1 lower this past week.

West Texas Intermediate closed at $17.74 a barrel last Friday with the posted price at $18.50 a barrel. Prices slumped this past week because refiners had eased up on their crude purchases and due to weak natural gas prices, which slumped to a 18-month low of $1.84 per thousand cubic feet at mid-week.

Drilling industry seeks stability

■ Survey collects contractor views on number of industry issues

By Ellen Hopkins

Stability and more stability. That's what the drilling industry is looking for more than ever in oil and gas prices.

In a random survey to solicit the opinions of Permian Basin drilling contractors on a variety of subjects from technology and margins to alliances, price stability was almost unamiously listed as the one factor that could have a significant impact on the industry.

Another top concern listed in the survey was a need for stable crews, which is also a function of price stability. Crews are stable when rigs are busy, and busy rigs are based on operator confidence in stable prices. Contractors say, unstable prices are minimizing drilling, causing crews to drift away. And so the cycle repeats.

Although the industry seems to be caught in this loop, overall outlook for the drilling industry varied among our survey respondents from "we're just one day closer to the next boom" to "hope it doesn't get worse."

What lies ahead for the drilling industry? None of the contractors were aware of any new technology that might result in a significant breakthrough. Most agreed that research and development takes money, and the industry isn't generating enough to warrant new technology.

Views on whether alliances are here to stay were fairly widespread; contractors either look on them as mutually beneficial, temporary fixes to keep idle rigs busy, or they have no use for them because the time and effort involved in the bid process is often wasted.

Will natural gas or 3-D seismic spur drilling? The general consensus was that only tax incentives and stable prices — stable meaning fairly consistent for at least two years — could significantly generate activity in the drilling industry.

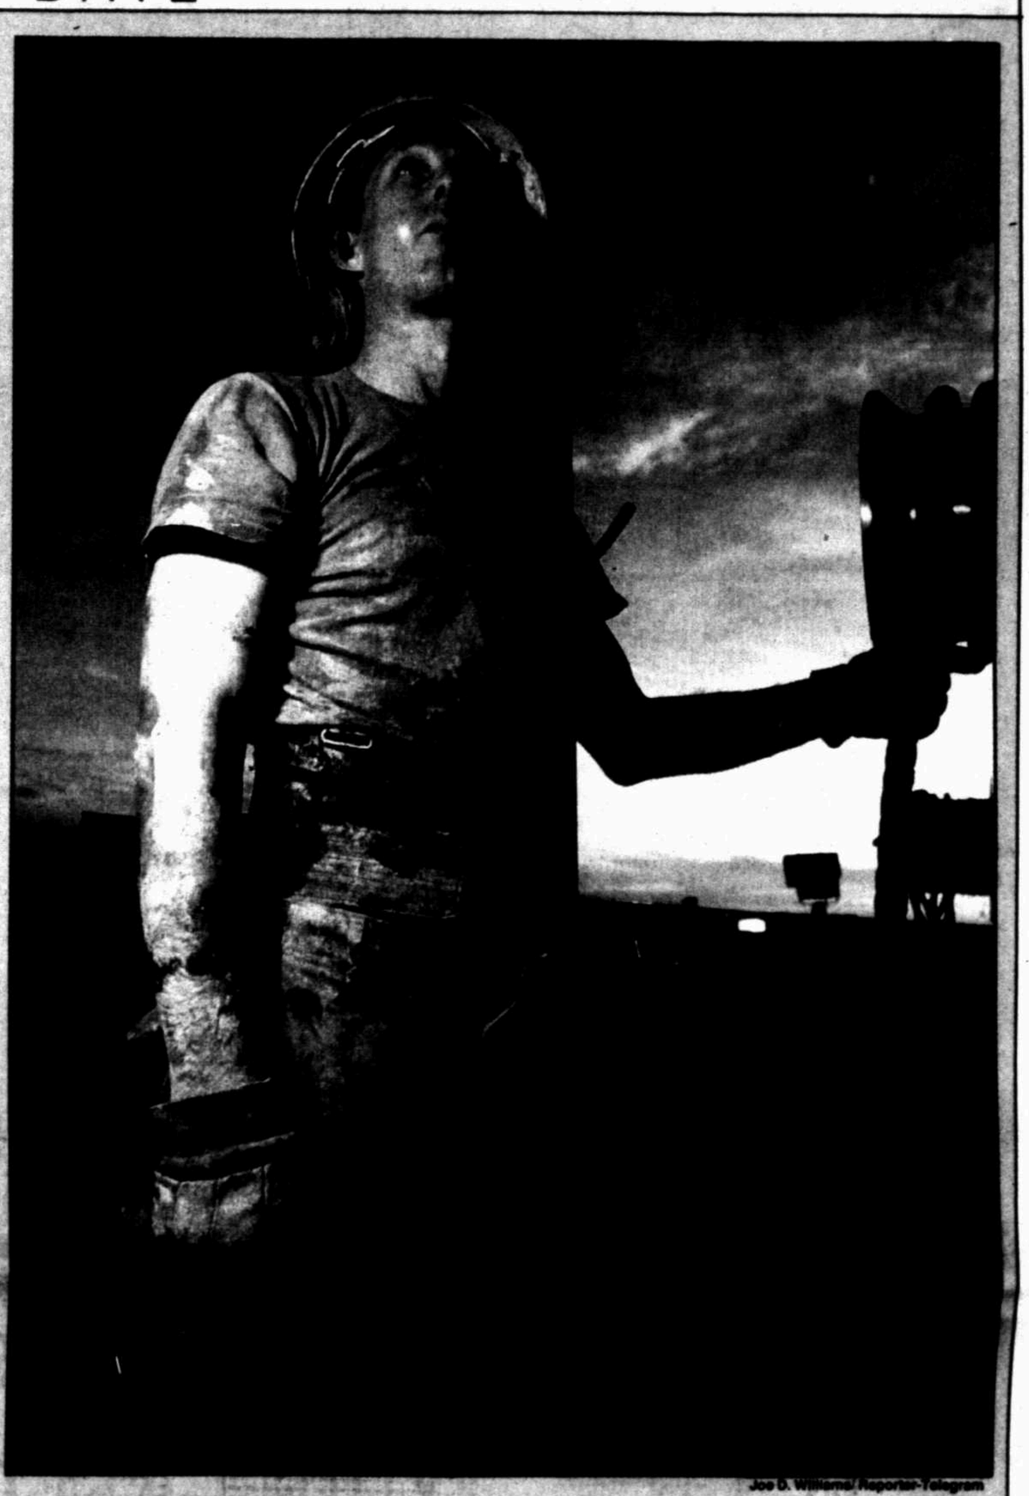

"There's a big difference between being busy and making money," said Kirk Cleere of Cleere Drilling in San Angelo. "Since 1981, operating costs have increased 25 to 30 percent. Everything has gone up — the cost of fuel, labor, everything associated with drilling. And insurance rates have doubled."

Cleere said with drilling contractors' rates going in the opposite direction, something has to give. He said alliances might keep you busy enough to assure you can break even, but they don't help profit margin.

"In order to drill more, the industry needs more capital," said Cleere. "The only way to get it is through stable prices and tax incentives which will draw investment dollars into the industry. We need incentives that will make it lucrative for non-industry people to invest money in drilling."

He said until footage rates rise to the point where profit margins increase, contractors will try to wait it out and make

Rig count steadies

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Analysts at Baker Hughes Inc. had expected an increase in the nation's rig count for 1994, but the count, a benchmark of oil industry health, has exceeded expectations.

"The rig count, through the first 20 weeks of this year, has averaged 744," said Ike Kerridge, chief economist with Baker Hughes. "In the same period last year, it averaged 671. That's an increase of 10.9, almost 11 percent."

He said this increase is above what had been forecast for this point in the year, and officials will likely raise its forecast at its next revision in June, though probably not by 11 percent, Kerridge said.

The most recent forecast, made in the first quarter of this year, called for an average rig count of 777 for calendar year 1994, a 3.1 percent increase over 1993.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count slumped to an 18-month of 92 for the week ended May 20. But Kerridge said that was largely weather-related due to heavy rains earlier in the month and the rig count for both the Permian Basin and the nation has likely reached its low point for the year.

Optimism, though, is hard-won, according to Leroy Peterson, vice president of Peterson Drilling in Midland, who notes that utilization in the Permian Basin is around 50 percent, compared to 85 percent last year.

Completions report fuels speculation

Pitts

If completions are an indicator of the health, one might conlcude that the domestic oil industry is declining rapidly. But what appears bleak for the nation as a whole is not necessarily true for the Permian Basin.

The American Petroleum Institute has just come out with its latest completions study and it paints a negative but puzzled picture of current activity that leaves ample room for speculation.

According to API, the number of oil wells, natural gas wells and dry holes completed in the U.S. during the first quarter of the year declined 20 percent compared to the same period a year ago.

According to API's "1994 Quarterly Completion Report: First Quarter" 5,185 oil wells, natural gas wells and dry holes were completed during the first three months of the year. For the same period of 1993, the total was 6,482 completions.

While rig counts and completions don't necessarily correlate, it is worth noting that the rig count in the Permian Basin for the first quarter has been fairly steady, running slightly under 1993 in January, February and March and slightly above in April and May.

The most distrubing fact in the report was a very sharp decline in natural gas well completions, which saw completions in the first quarter fall by 32.2 percent down from 3,027 completions a year ago. What does it mean?

But again this is a national number that does not necessarily correlate to the Permian Basin. Ask any drilling contractor in the Permian Basin what is driving activity and the response will likely be "natural gas."

With falling oil prices and steady gas prices, one might have thought stastics would go the other way, but they didn't. Oil well completions were down only 10.5 percent to 1,826 for the quarter.

At a time when the industry is strongly upbeat about natural gas, and drilling companies are counting on natural gas completions to make up for an ailing oil market, a 32 percent decline in completions is not positive news.

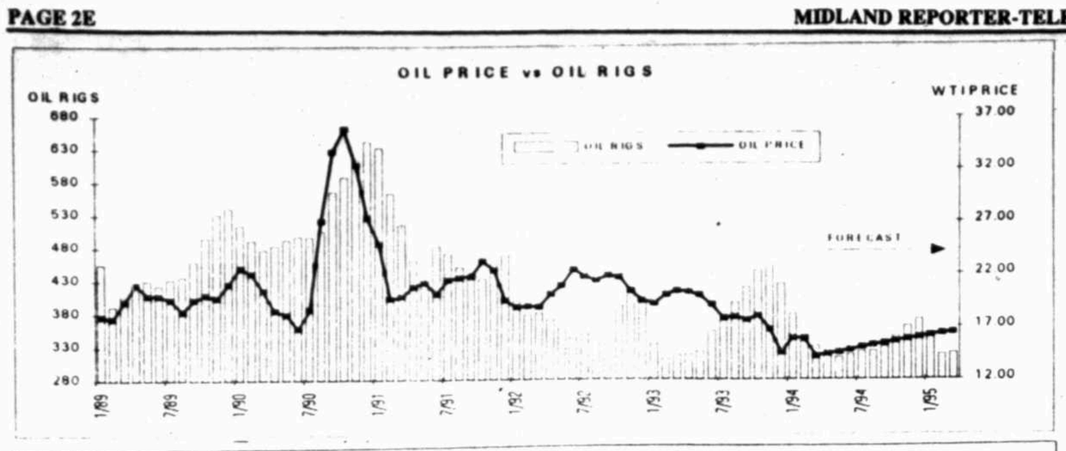

One can only sumise from this gap, what we in the Basin have known for a long time, that the Permian Basin has far more natural gas potential and activity than other areas of the country.

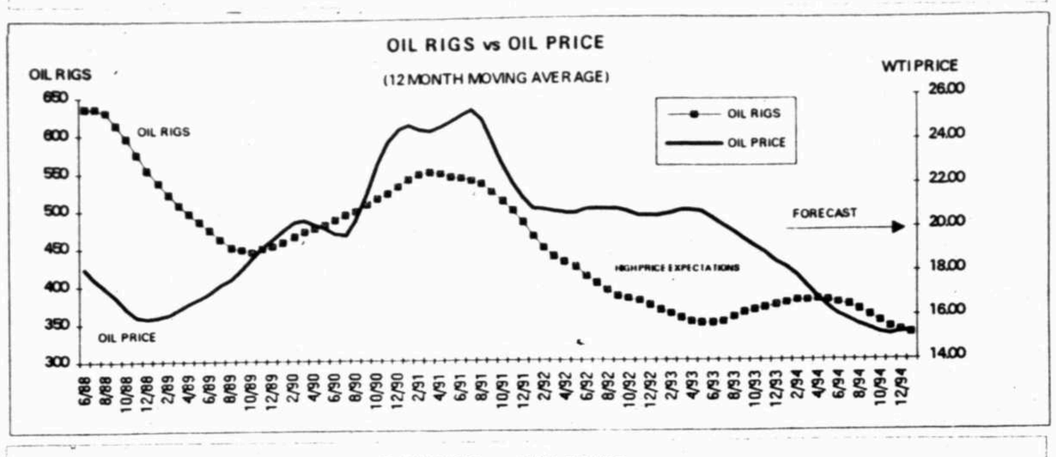

This assumption is confirmed by a recent influx of operators moving into the Basin to pursue natural gas opportunies in the hot spots. One large independent, on the heels of a big acquistion, recently announced that it could drill as many as 1,850 wells in the Canyon Sand trend of Crockett and Sutton counties over the next months. That one program alone could would equal the Permian Basin rig count for an entire year.

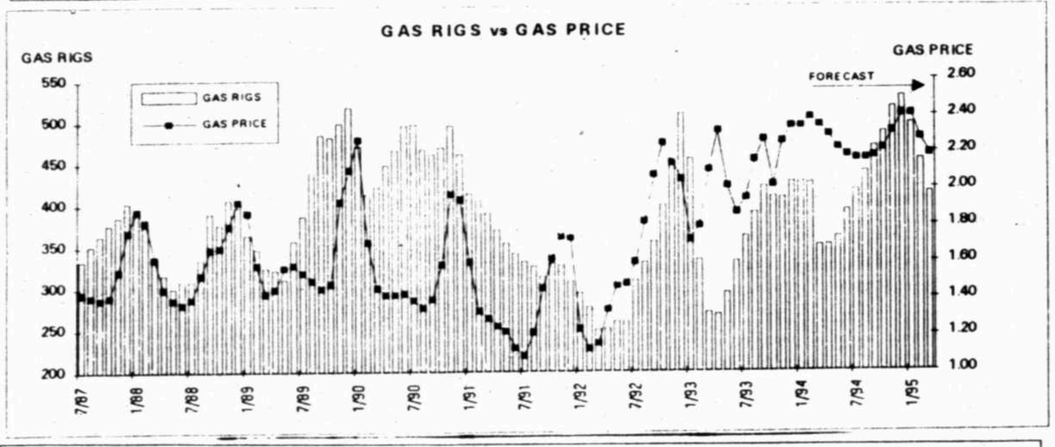

Other interesting observations in the API report, are a low percent of dry hole completions, a decline in development drilling, and increases in exploratory activity.

RIG FORECASTING

Rig count driver of activity

■ Product prices, rig counts essential to energy economics

J. Marshall Adkins

Since the rig count is the prime indicator of oilfield service activity, an understanding of rig counts and their relationship to other industry indicators can be beneficial to the planning of those in the drilling industry.

By accurately forecasting the rig count one can more effectively estimate the future revenue levels of various service industry sectors — including drilling. Forecasting rig counts are also necessary to company valuations.

Since everything in the oilfield service industry is somehow tied to the price of oil and gas, the first step is to show how closely various rig counts correlate to oil and gas pricing and, more importantly, to pricing expectations.

For instance, in preparing this rig projection and methodology it was our conclusion that U.S. drilling activity in the future will be driven more by the preception of price than actual petroleum prices. Accordingly our rig forecasting model takes into account petroleum futures pricing as well as rig seasonality, well permits and other leading indicators.

Projecting the U.S. rig count is aided by the fact that the Baker Hughes rig count is separated into oil rig versus gas rig components.

RIGS & OIL PRICES: As expected, the number of oil rigs appears to track fairly closely with the oil price. Unfortunately, the seasonal nature of the oil rig count tends to mask the true correlation between the number of oil rigs and the oil price.

The seasonal fluctuations of both the oil price and the number of oil rigs can be removed by looking at the 12-month moving average of both price and rigs. There is a loose correlation between the price of oil and the number of oil rigs running in the United States. Nevertheless, there are substantial digressions.

These digressions are believed to occur when the price of oil either exceeds or falls short of long-term price expectations. Examples of the oil rigs underperforming the oil price expectations occur throughout late 1992 and early 1993. It is interesting to note the low oil price expectations of the period are confirmed by the occurrence of a relatively flat or "inverted" futures trip during these pessimistic times. An inverted strip is described as the price of oil futures 12 months forward is actually less than the price of oil one month forward. Producers base their drilling budgets upon petroleum price expectations, therefore the rig count tracks the expectations of the future oil price rather than the actual oil price itself.

RIGS & GAS PRICES: Like the oil rig to oil price comparison, one would expect the gas rig count to track closely to the gas price. Again, any trends are very difficult to identify because of the extreme seasonality associated with both the gas prices and gas rigs.

Once the seasonality is removed by plotting the 12-month moving average, it is seen that, contrary to what one might think, there are, indeed, substantial divergences between the price of gas and the number of rigs drilling for gas.

As with the oil rig count, it is believed these gas rig to gas price divergences are caused by the gas rig count moving with the expectations of the future gas price rather than with the actual gas price at the time. A good example of the gas rig count performing to expectations and the gas price underperforming expectations can be found in the futures "strip" of April 1, 1991. On that date, the futures strip predicted the average price of gas for the upcoming year would be $1.70. By the time the year was over, the actual gas price average had significantly underperformed the futures price at less than $1.40 for the year. The actual rig count, on the other hand, correlated much more closely to the futures "strip" of $1.70.

New valve will address expansion leaks

By Ellen Hopkins

KONE VALVE & FITTING CO. Area Manager, Karl Groening, said the company is addressing an environmental problem that will soon be a factor for companies with fluid system components.

Hopkins

Groening said the EPA's regulation governing fugitive emissions (those emissions to the atmosphere from pumps, valves, flanges, seals and other process points that are not vented through a stack) has a scheduled compliance date of September 1, 1994.

Kroening said because of ambient temperature cycling in West Texas, for example a 50 degree change in temperature in a matter of five or six hours, the metals used in valves and fittings can expand or contract and thus leak. He said the company is carrying a line of "live loaded concept" valves and fittings that handle temperature expansion and eliminate associated leakage.

AREA TANKS in Odessa is expanding its local business opportunities through two separate methods.

Jim Patterson, general manager, said the company is using the single sourcing concept to attract business. He said single sourcing with a major, for example, means that Area Tanks standardizes equipment for that major. Patterson said Area Tanks then supplies all the customized equipment for that major's oil production and/or gas related system needs.

Patterson said another means to increase business at Area Tanks has been registering with the state of Texas as a "hub" or historically underutilized business. He said the process was simple and has resulted in listing Area Tanks as a company that state agencies will contact to offer bids on state and county projects.

PMC EQUIPMENT CO., an Odessa gas measurement company with international markets, has started offering full gas service according to Kenny DeWitt, president of PMC.

DeWitt said his full gas service includes electronic measurement, installation, field services witnessing and calibration data management.

DRILLING SAFETY

Contractors focused on safety procedures

By Ellen Hopkins

Along with concerns about idle rigs, operating costs, and maintaining crews, drilling contractors have another area of concern: safety.

Contractors use whatever successful methods they can to continually improve safety records because they know operators are watching. And some of the majors have commended contractors for their stand on only providing crews and rigs that meet safety standards, even if it means stacked rigs.

Realizing that safety is compromised with inexperienced rig hands is a given. Some contractors have found a definite parallel between accident rate and turnover, and have noticed that new hands tend to get hurt within the first two to four weeks after they start. And if they don't get hurt, they are often the cause of accidents for other crew members.

A pre-employment physical, drug screening and a determination of common sense are all attempts by contractors to avert injuries on new hires. It can cost about $300 per person just to hire them, if there is anyone to hire.

Follow-up drug screenings, daily or at least weekly safety meetings, and a myriad of equipment -- including steel toe boots, glasses and back support belts -- are further measures designed to reduce accidents and insurance rates.

Along with safety equipment, some contractors will rely on experienced hands to train new hires. On the job training is the only option. Because when help is needed it's needed now, not after a six-week to six-month training course at a school.

The new hand might be the fifth man on a crew, learning from the more experienced crew members. But the transient nature of rig hands is well known. All contractors agree that experienced help is not only hard to keep, but even harder to find these days, if not impossible.

Most contractors also concede that experience doesn't preclude accidents. Even an experienced worker hired from another company needs to learn the operating methods and timing of his new crew.

OSHA regulations have meant continuous training for all rig hands. Some contractors begin each tour with a safety meeting, some have 15-minute daily reviews, and others insist on stopping all work prior to any activity out of normal--tripping, cementing, whatever -- to talk about potential hazards.

DuPont developed a "STOP" program which has been adapted to the drilling industry among others. Along with a combination of films, books, meetings, and question and answer sessions about safety, the participants learn that they're supposed to stop someone on the job from doing something dangerous.

There is no associated reprimand, just discussion about what almost happened. The incident is written up on a card, dated and signed. At the end of the month the cards are compiled so problem areas show up right away and can be discussed at the next safety meeting.

This push for safety has some contractors devising creative incentives to convince rig hands to think safety first. Among these are day bonuses for pushers who don't have any medical claims, and hourly bonuses for drillers and roughnecks who stay accident free.

Other contractors have tried issuing certificates for items like tools and clothes. The certificates are issued monthly for hands who work without a lost-time accident, but only if their entire crew remains accident free. This approach not only generates self-awareness, but has also helped promote teamwork. Other measures include safety contests and BBQ lunches at the wellsite.

Some of the majors have gotten into the act. For those contractors in the major's alliances, or otherwise used on a regular basis, safety incentive programs with material awards, such as knives, have been issued for crews meeting safety standards.

Extra effort is required to ensure safety for all of a contractor's vendors. Third party accidents can be expensive for every company involved, even those never visiting the wellsite.

Exchanging safety experiences, information and regulations has fostered mutual respect among all who do visit a wellsite. The effort has been promoted through monthly vendor luncheon/safety meetings which some contractors feel is an ideal time and atmosphere to reinforce safety for employees and vendors attending.

Most contractors are appreciative of vendors' cooperation in observing and reporting safety. In return, contractors sometimes share their in-house safety programs with vendors who are too small to afford their own.

Eastex Energy names president

HOUSTON — The Board of Directors of Eastex Energy Inc. announced that Mark A. Searles has been named as President and Chief Operating Officer of Eastex effective May 11, 1994. Additionally, it is expected that Mr. Searles will be nominated to the Company's Board of Directors at the next regularly scheduled Board of Directors meeting on June 2, 1994.

Mr. Searles is the former President of Enron Gas Marketing Canada, Inc., headquartered in Calgary, Aberta, a subsidiary of Enron Corp. Prior to that assignment, Mr. Searles was the Vice President of Supply Development for Enron Gas Marketing in Houston, Teas and also served in a number of senior management positions with Enron and its subsidiaries since 1985. Previously, Mr. Searles was employed for seven years with the exploration and production division of Gulf Oil Corp. in various financial and planning positions. He is a graduate of the University of Southern Mississippi with a B.S. Degree in Business Administration.

erator will send out four or five bids and take the lowest one."

He said this wonderful industry with all its ups and downs still has a lot of positives, and stable prices is what it needs.

"If we knew there would be $18 to $20 oil, and that gas would stay above $2, more operators would drill more wells knowing that the wells would pay themselves out," he said. "But we'll only have that kind of confidence with stability."

Scandolari added that increased profits would prompt contractors to experiment on some new technology, but that currently no one can afford to.

"If you tried something different, and it worked, you might get an attaboy," he said. "But in these times, if it didn't work people would wonder why you took the chance. What could you have been thinking?"

Leroy Peterson, vice president with Peterson Drilling, doesn't think he foresees any new technology to experiment with in this industry. He said no one wants to be a guinea pig at today's prices.

Peterson said, "Besides, it takes money to develop new technology and that's not going to happen in drilling with prices this low. I think 3-D seismic is about all the technology we'll see that can help us spot additional locations."

Mike Sledge agrees that 3-D seismic is the wave of the future and that directional drilling is an important advancement. He said Gene Sledge Drilling has been involved in some alliances and he appreciates that they can keep his crews taking home a paycheck.

Bob Lange with Exeter Drilling said the right alliance can be a good thing, but that both parties must be able to prosper.

"It doesn't do us any good if we can't share in the operator's benefits and vice versa," Lange said. "It must be a win/win situation because nobody's in this business to lose money."

Lange said the industry needs stable oil and gas prices, and maybe a national energy policy. He said it looked like 3-D would help, but even that has slowed somewhat do to prices. He sees the industry continuing in its present state until the price of oil stabilizes and operators regain their confidence.

FWA's John Pace agrees that the drilling industry will continue to be very competitive with marginal profit potential for the short term.

"Additional consolidation within the industry is necessary at the current low activity levels before profits will improve," Pace said.

Capstar's Jim Brazeal agreed that the industry needs to be more economical. He's in favor of alliances.

"They've been very advantageous to us," Brazeal said. "However, I understand that some companies don't have the time or personnel to evaluate bids."

Randy Thompson with Wes-Tex in Abilene, said he's bid on some alliance packages for majors and independents, but it doesn't always work out even when they get the job.

"You have to spend a lot of time and money getting ready for these bids," Thompson said. "Then sometimes the operator's plans change, they'll pull the package and all that time is wasted."

Bandera's Ray Brazzel said he's bid on some alliances, but he considers them a temporary bridge rather than the wave of the future.

"They're a temporary solution to a long-term problem," Brazzel said. "What we need is a better oil price, that's the determining factor. Stability is needed, but stable prices at $10/bbl is no good for anyone."

Good relations with Washington is on the agenda as far as Ken McPeters of ZIADRIL is concerned.

"We need to release the regulatory shackles and the environmental shackles," said McPeters. "Some of the regulations start out as a good idea, but by the time they're written they seem way too complex and complicated. It's almost to the point where we need a lawyer on staff."

Gene Grimes, VP/GM with Nabors Drilling in Midland, said more sane regulatory and environmental policies would certainly help. He wants to see "less government against us" policy.

He added that most industry people are 100 percent for protecting the environment, but there have to be more rational ways to do it than with present regulations. Grimes said higher oil and gas prices, if they're stable, would help a lot.

Logan McGill of Hack Drilling said it's obvious the industry needs a better price or a tax break for investors. He said the downturn has lasted longer than anyone expected.

Don Lawson of TMBR/Sharp said knowing what to expect is the key.

"If oil prices would stabilize to where operators know what to expect," Lawson said, "then investors would put money into drilling programs and everything else would take care of itself."

Kirk Cleere believes it's a matter of waiting it out.

"Those who will eventually make money — if and when tax incentives or increased prices come around — are in the business now," said Kirk Cleere. "It will be too late for someone to just jump in and make money."

OSHA rule impacts drilling contractors

Staff Report

Drilling contractors are being impacted by a new U.S. Department of Labor Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) which requires drilling contractors to orally report any occupational fatality or catastrophe involving in-patient hospitalization of three or more workers within eight hours.

The previous deadline had been 48 hours, allowed written or verbal reporting, and covered incidents involving fatalities or hospitalization of five or more workers.

Assistant Secretary of Labor for Occupational Safety and Health Joseph A. Dear noted, "This shorter reporting period will enable OSHA to respond to workplace accidents more quickly and help assure that no other employees remain at risk. Lowering the reportable number of hospitalizations from five to three will provide OSHA with additional information on the causes of workplace accidents."

OSHA's toll-free hotline for reporting (1-800-321- OSHA).

Over all the number of dusters nationwide dropped to 1,306 — a 7.7 percent decline for the quarter. In other times one might attribute fewer dry holes to stronger development drilling programs, but this report also notes that development well programs are down and exploration footage is up.

API notes that exploratory well completions and footage drilled during the first three months of 1994 increased 1 percent and 11.5 percent respectively. Exploratory oil well completions rose 13.6 percent and exploratory natural gas well completions increased 21.8 percent. Exploratory dry hole completions fell 6.9 percent.

With regard to development wells, API said that the number of oil wells, natural gas wells and dry holes completed in the January-March period was 22.8 percent less than the number completed during the same period last year.

Development oil well completions declined 11.9 percent, natural gas well completions fell 34.7 percent and dry hole completions were down 8.2 percent.

API also reported that development footage drilled amounted to 26,715,000 feet — 14.4 percent less than the 31,217,000 feet drilled during 1993's first three months. Total footage drilled amounted to 31,721,000 feet, 11.2 percent less than the 35,707,000 feet drilling the last year's first quarter.

Put all these statistics together, and read between the lines and one gets a somewhat accurate picture of what is happening in drilling and the industry in general.

If one concluded from this set of statistics that low dry hole rares, less development footage and higher success rates in exploratory drilling are the results of 3-D seismic activity, that conclusion would probably be right.

Operators have had good success at finding new oil — sometimes in the form of three and four well fields, and they are continuing to pursue that success. The Permian Basin has become the hottest place in the nation for 3-D simply because there is more to look for and find here.

If I had to sum it all up in one sentence, I think it would be this: "The industry is in transition from oil to gas, and the Permian Basin will fare better during this transition than other parts of the country."

John Paul Pitts is business/oil editor of the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

COUNT: Gas plays draw drillers

(From 1E)

He said that, while there are some "hot spots" in the Permian Basin, such as the Canyon gas in Crockett, Sutton and Terrell counties, last year's "hot spots" such as the Delaware in southeast New Mexico have cooled because of weaker oil prices.

"The biggest thing to note is there's very little true exploration going on, still. There's some 3-D seismic prospects being drilled in Martin County and places like that, that would be considered exploration because they wouldn't be drilled without 3-D. But as far as any real, true exploration, that's been very limited."

Brent Sanders, vice president of sales and contracts for Nabors drilling and the chairman of the Permian Basin chapter, International Association of Drilling Contractors, said activity is related to the price of oil, and there has been a migration from oil development to gas development, which has kept the area rig count flat compared to last year.

"Everyone's taken a wait and see attitude. No one's really down in the dumps, there is some rig activity, there's just not any significant difference from this time last year. A lot of rigs have moved from oil plays in southeast New Mexico to gas plays around Ozona, Sheffield, that area."

He said, though, that while activity is flat compared to last year, producers who had shut in projects because of low prices are beginning to call drilling contractors again because prices are improving.

Though oil prices were weak in the beginning of the year, natural gas prices were strong, and gas prices should be supported by the need to refill storage after record drawdowns this past winter, Kerridge said.

And it is gas drilling that has powered the rig count, he said.

Drilling activity is quite strong in gas areas such as the Gulf of Mexico and areas in Texas such as South Texas and the Permian Basin, and parts of the Rocky Mountains.

Offshore drilling, which is primarily for natural gas, has also been strong. Kerridge said the count is averaging 100 this year, up from around 70 last year.

For the calendar year through May 13, Kerridge said the number of rigs drilling for natural gas has averaged 409 while the number of rigs drilling for oil is averaging 375. That puts the percentage looking for gas at 51.6 percent.

"If you go back 10 years, the percentage of rigs drilling for gas has averaged 30 percent," he said. He added that, since 1990, there have been brief periods when the gas percentage exceeded 50 percent and, toward the end of 1992 when Section 29 tax credits for drilling for tight sands gas were about to expire, that percentage neared 60 percent.

Said Kerridge: "I think the long-term trend will be towards natural gas, for two reasons.

"First, our resource base is much larger for gas than for oil, and part of the reason for this, I'm told, stems from the fact that in this county, those areas where we are allowed to drill have been extensively drilled. Most of our big oil reserves have been found, unless we're allowed to drill in new areas; that's why most of the majors are exploring abroad. With gas, no one's sure how deep you can go and still find gas. Over the long-term, there's more gas to be discovered than oil.

"Second, obviously, natural gas is an environmentally superior

Lea County yields Yates discovery

Staff Report

A Yates discovery has been recorded in Lea County, N.M., a quarter-mile west of 13,000 ft. Morrow production in the Grama Ridge East field, 14 miles west of Eunice.

STEVENS & TULL INC., Midland, potentialed the No. 2 New Mexico "DW" State to flow 252 barrels of 29.6 gravity crude, 70 Mcfd and 65 barrels of water from perforations 3,700 to 3,789 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 85,000 lbs. 16/30 sand and 43,000 gallons of gel.

Permitted as a 4,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 3,944 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 6, T22s, R35e.

King field gets new pay opener

Upper Tannehill has apparently been opened in the Bee Wright field of King County, 13 miles south of Guthrie.

WESTICO ENERGY INC. potentialed the No. 3 Simpson to pump 111 bnarrels fo 36 gravity crude and 30 Mcfd from perforations 3,293 to 3,304 ft. The interval was acidized with 150 gallons of 15 percent acid.

Permitted as a 3,700 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 3,480 ft. and plugged back to 3,475 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 3,478 ft.

The well topped the Upper Tannehill at 3,288 ft. and Lower Tannehill at 3,308 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 1,776 ft.

Location is 2,302 ft. from south and 709 ft. from east lines of Section 126, Block F, H&TC survey, Abst. 726.

Texaco completes horizontal producer

TEXACO EXPLORATION & PRODUCTION INC. has completed a horizontal producer in the San Andres formation of the Slaughter field of Hockley County.

The No. 1361H Slaughter Unit Sundown was completed to pump 22 barrels of 35.5 gravity crude, 28 Mcfd and 343 barrels of water from open hole interval 5,108 to 6,079 ft.

Total depth was 6,079 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 5,102 ft.

The well topped the Rustler at 2,200 ft. and San Andres at 4,800 ft. on elevation of 3,546 ft.

Surface location is 825 ft. from north and 1,100 ft. from east lines of Labor 66, League 39, Maverick CSL survey 39, Abst. 171. Bottom hole location is 825 ft. from north and 820 ft. from west lines of Labor 67 of the League and survey.

Lea County strike flows 162 barrels

PG&A RESOURCES has completed an undesignated discovery in Lea County, N.M.

On potential test, the No. 1 Smith "15" flowed 162 barrels of crude and 133 Mcfd on a 13/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 1,500 psi. The well flowed from perforations 11,453 to 11,526 ft., with no treatment reported.

Drilled to 11,750 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 11,626 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 15, T16s, R36e.

Pennzoil names new chairman

HOUSTON (AP) — Pennzoil Co.'s board of directors have named James L. Pate the firm's chairman, to succeed retiring J. Hugh Liedtke.

Pate, 58, has been Pennzoil's president and chief executive officer since March 1990. He will keep those titles in his new position.

"Our goal is to become a global producer of oil and natural gas, a worldwide marketer of premium motor oil, and a low-cost, efficient producer of quality Pennzoil products," Pate said.

Pate joined Pennzoil in 1976 and has served in numerous financial and operating positions.

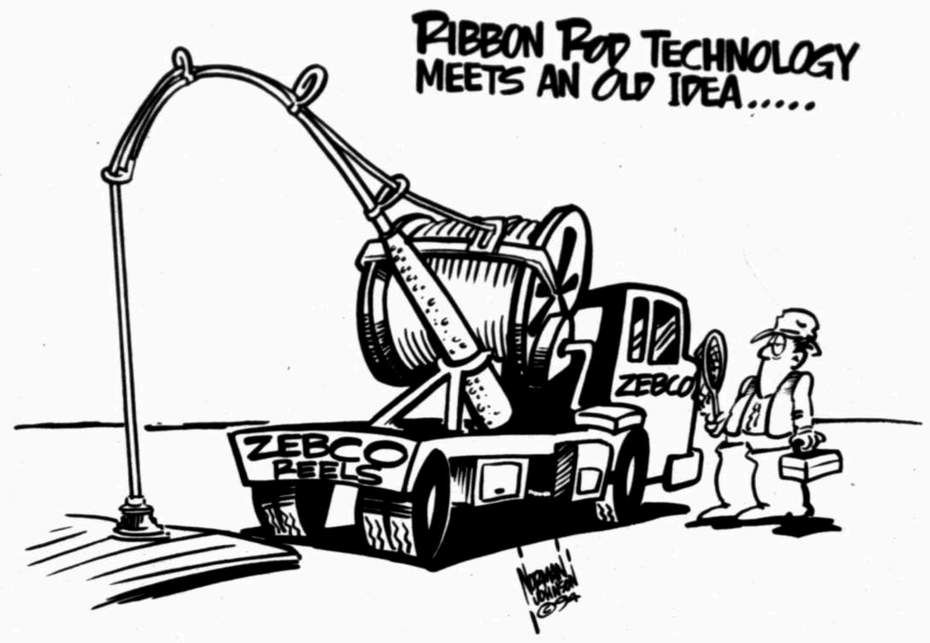

In 1981, he was named treasurer. Four years later, he was senior vice president overseeing finance. In 1989, he was appointed to the board and executive committee.

Pate, named one of Business Week magazine's "25 Executives To Watch" in 1993, is credited with taking significant steps to restructure the 105-year-old Houston-based firm's operations and balance sheet.

Liedtke, Pennzoil chairman for 27 years, announced his retirement last month.

DRILL PIPE CONNECTION

Cost of drill pipe becoming a factor

By Ellen Hopkins

The cost of drill pipe is becoming a major factor for Basin drilling contractors.

New drill pipe costs between $23 and $26 per foot, so replacing pipe on a 10,000 foot rig will average around one-quarter of a million dollars. That's more than the value of most 10,000 foot rigs which cost $175,000 to $200,000.

Replacement cost is no small consideration for a drilling contractor who knows that the average life expectancy of a drill string in West Texas is three years. With drilling prices at low levels for years, many contractors have turned to used pipe as an economical replacement alternative. Now the used market is drying up.

Consistent with supply and demand economics for any industry, even the cost of used pipe has increased as the supply has dwindled. The supply of other used equipment -- drill collars, engines, etc. -- has also declined.

Many drilling contractors indicated in our survey that the lack of used drill pipe and equipment will be a major problem within the next two years. Drilling prices aren't at a sufficient level to replace current drill pipe with new.

"We've seen this coming for years," said Sherman Norton of Norton Drilling. "Over the last 10 years many contractors haven't had the money to replace drill pipe, and this will become more of a problem."

Also of concern is that a lack of reliable equipment will eventually mean a lack of work.

"Operators are getting more particular about failures in drill string," said Bob Lange of Exeter Drilling. "Failures cost them money because they still have to pay consultants at the wellsite, the mud bill and everything else that costs money whether there's downtime or not."

Lange and other contractors indicated that drill pipe replacement costs would have to be passed on to operators. Raising rates is a dilemma when acquiring work depends on having the low bid.

FWA's John Pace agreed that passing on replacement costs is inevitable.

"Prices for good used drill pipe are increasing with every transaction," said Pace. "Current drilling margins don't cover drillstring replacement at the higher prices, so eventually these costs will have to be passed on to the operators."

Ray Brazzel, president of Bandera, sees the drill pipe shortage as a problem surfacing as soon as the rig count climbs.

"There's enough pipe to run 750 rigs in this country," said Brazzel. "But there's not enough to run 1,000."

"There are a limited number of rigs that can be put into operation," said Kirk Cleere of Cleere Drilling in San Angelo. "And that number has been decreasing monthly since 1984."

Tool brings new drilling efficiencies

Staff Report

HOUSTON — The new generation UBI (Ultrasonic Borehole Imager) from Schlumberger Wireline & Testing is expected to bring new efficiencies to the drilling industry.

The tool produces very-high-resolution azimuthal images that allow engineers, geologists and petrophysicists to detect openhole features and potential problems acoustically, even in oil-base muds.

New-generation hardware and a new high-resolution, rotating transducer provide unequaled quality of amplitude and precision of radius measurements. A completely new processing technique provides improved accuracy, avoids cycle skips and reduces echo losses. Images are clean and easy to interpret, even in highly deviated wells.

Schlumberger says the high quality of UBI images makes the tool suitable for a number of applications:

Greater image resolution helps reveal and evaluate fractures, even when nonconductive, oil-base muds prevent resistivity measurements.

The UBI radius and cross-section analysis provides an accurate report of the shape of the wellbore, allowing a clear and detailed analysis of potential stability problems.

The images, cross-section plots and 3-D spiral views generated from UBI measurements reveal keyseats, breakouts, shear sliding and shale alteration to help the driller avoid stuck pipe and the resulting loss of time and equipment.

The tool's ability to characterize the borehole's mechanical properties also helps predict perforation stability in unconsolidated formations.

Additionally, the UBI tool can be used to monitor the internal surface of the casing. As a result, an additional run in the hole can be avoided by acquiring data while tripping out after an openhole survey.

Offshore rig named for Midland drilling manager

By Ellen Hopkins

The offshore rig stands 250 feet tall, a monument to the sturdiness, loyalty and commitment of the man for whom it was named.

The Earl Frederickson is located offshore near Maracaibo, Venezuela, and it is one of only 31 rigs in the last 25 years that Noble Drilling has named after its dedicated employees. The list of employees is somewhat of a Noble Drilling "Hall of Fame."

The company attributes its success to the hard work and loyal service of its employees. Earl Frederickson gave 33 years to the company, retiring in Midland in 1979 as Manager of the West Texas Division.

"You expect to work hard, and they expect you to work hard, but Noble rewards you for the effort," Frederickson said.

The rig dedication ceremony was held last month, and Frederickson was given an oil painting of the rig and an engraved crystal sphere of the earth.

He joined Noble in 1946 as a roughneck and through the years filled every position on a rig including Rig Manager and Drilling Superintendent. His first job with the company was in Hobbs, New Mexico, and since then he has worked in East and South Texas, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma, Colorado and Utah.

Frederickson lived in Hobbs three different times in his career, and both of his children were born there. The last move was in 1959, just before he was transferred to Midland.

Of all the changes he has seen, he finds the change in people most remarkable.

"People took a lot of pride in their jobs," he said. "Work was hard to come by and you moved wherever it was."

While drilling in Pennsylvania, he remembers the ice was so thick on top the pump house one year that the roof caved in. And in Utah, it was standard fare to box in the entire derrick and substructure each winter and use boilers for heat.

Frederickson said from the late 40s to about 1955, he would work on a rig between three and six months depending on the depth of that particular well. Then he'd move to the next job. He and his wife had a trailer house they took with them.

Improvements in engines, blowout preventers, mud pumps and other rig equipment increased not only drilling depth, but also speed.

"When the time came that we could drill faster, for example a 10,000 foot well drilled in 30 days, then it didn't make sense to move that often," he said.

Rig hands lived in the closest town and commuted every day to the wellsite. There was no mileage rate paid, and most often the crew of five would drive together in one car taking turns each day.

"If you didn't have a car, you had to pay the driller to drive for you," he said.

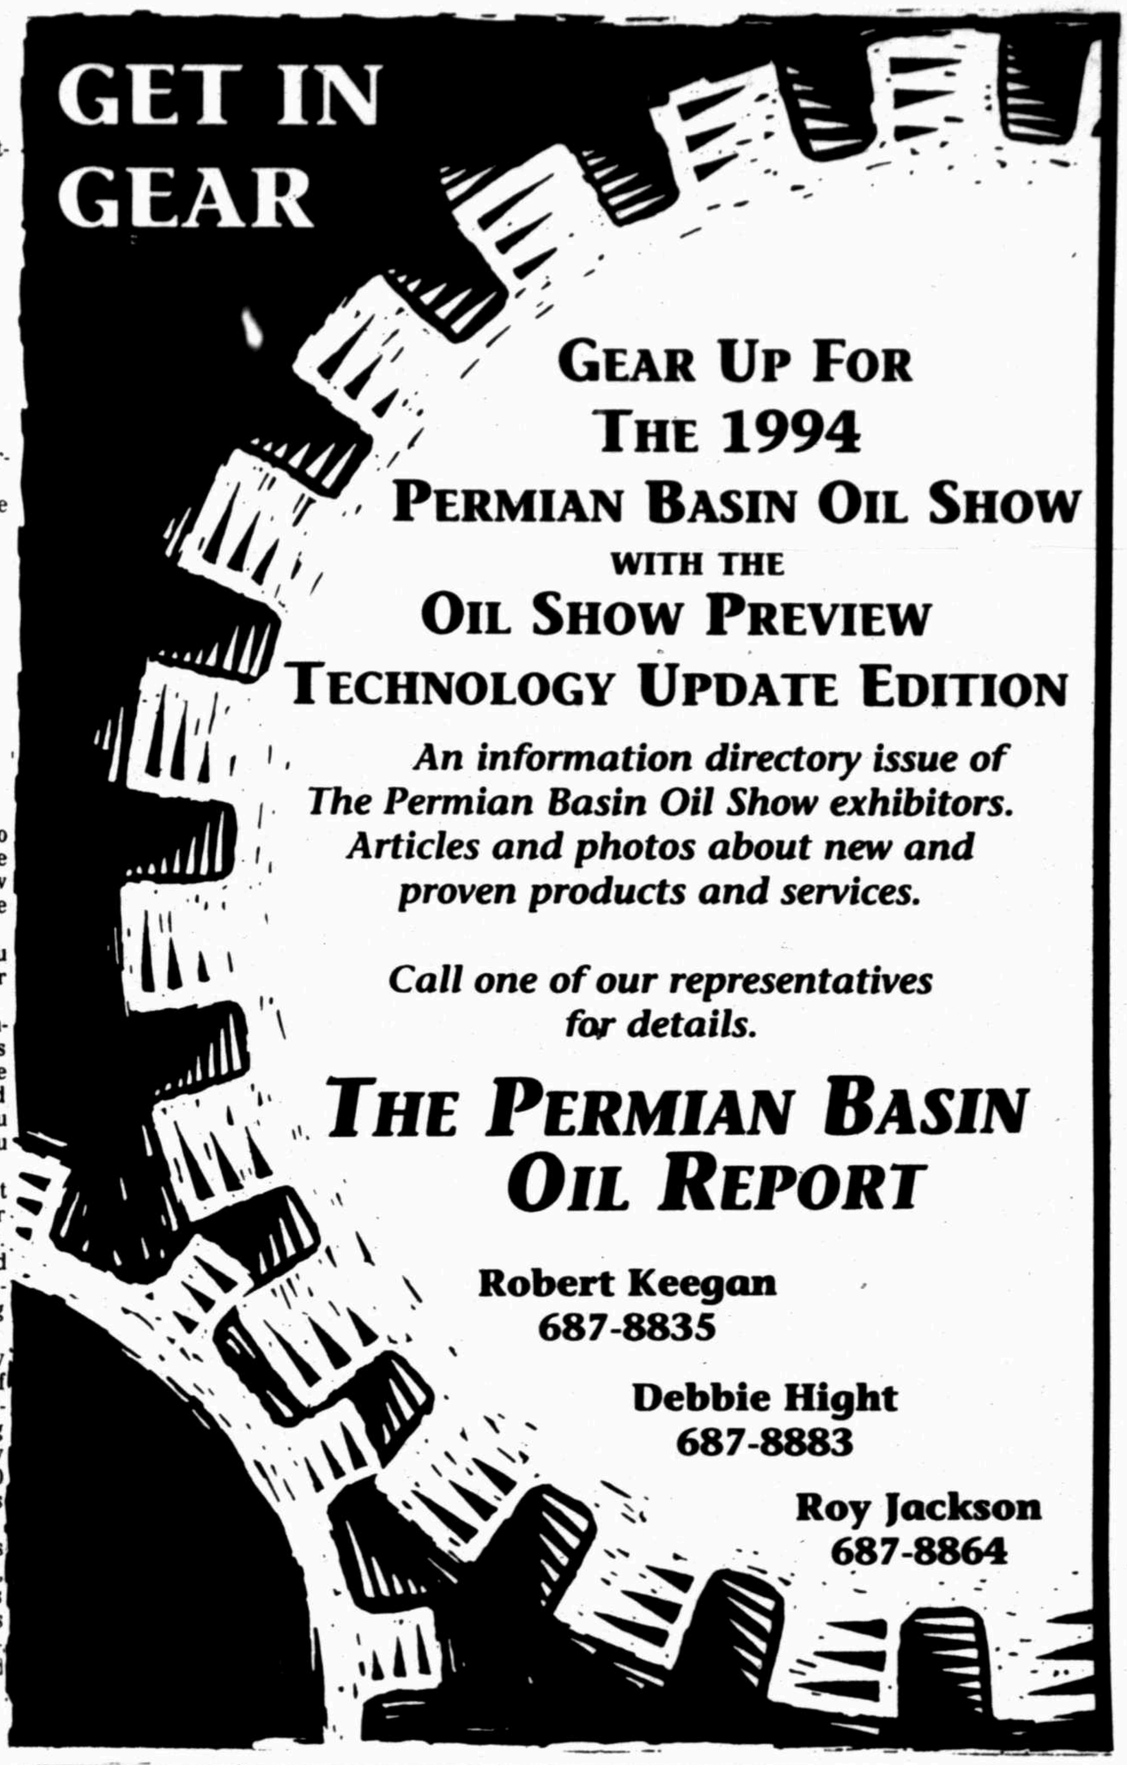

There also was no formal training for rig hands; everything was learned by on-the-job-experience and often in 12-hour shifts. He said the higher the job position you had, the longer the hours you worked.

Frederickson recalled that meals at the wellsite were never as bad as you hear people say. They ate a lot of baloney and cheese sandwiches, and occasionally some of the wives would bring ice cream out to the rig.

When engineers came out they sometimes brought their golf clubs. Other than that, entertainment consisted of cards, hunting and fishing -- certainly a far cry from the televisions and 12 x 60 foot modern trailers on wellsites today.

Even while 2-way mobile phones were used by some companies, Frederickson remembers one boss who didn't want to run business that way. But drilling for the majors was a different story and

Tool brings new drilling efficiencies

Staff Report

HOUSTON — The new generation UBI (Ultrasonic Borehole Imager) from Schlumberger Wireline & Testing is expected to bring new efficiencies to the drilling industry.

The tool produces very-high-resolution azimuthal images that allow engineers, geologists and petrophysicists to detect openhole features and potential problems acoustically, even in oil-base muds.

New-generation hardware and a new high-resolution, rotating transducer provide unequaled quality of amplitude and precision of radius measurements. A completely new processing technique provides improved accuracy, avoids cycle skips and reduces echo losses. Images are clean and easy to interpret, even in highly deviated wells.

Schlumberger says the high quality of UBI images makes the tool suitable for a number of applications:

Greater image resolution helps reveal and evaluate fractures, even when nonconductive, oil-base muds prevent resistivity measurements.

The UBI radius and cross-section analysis provides an accurate report of the shape of the wellbore, allowing a clear and detailed analysis of potential stability problems.

The images, cross-section plots and 3-D spiral views generated from UBI measurements reveal keyseats, breakouts, shear sliding and shale alteration to help the driller avoid stuck pipe and the resulting loss of time and equipment.

The tool's ability to characterize the borehole's mechanical properties also helps predict perforation stability in unconsolidated formations.

Additionally, the UBI tool can be used to monitor the internal surface of the casing. As a result, an additional run in the hole can be avoided by acquiring data while tripping out after an openhole survey.

Offshore rig named for Midland drilling manager

By Ellen Hopkins

The offshore rig stands 250 feet tall, a monument to the sturdiness, loyalty and commitment of the man for whom it was named.

The Earl Frederickson is located offshore near Maracaibo, Venezuela, and it is one of only 31 rigs in the last 25 years that Noble Drilling has named after its dedicated employees. The list of employees is somewhat of a Noble Drilling "Hall of Fame."

The company attributes its success to the hard work and loyal service of its employees. Earl Frederickson gave 33 years to the company, retiring in Midland in 1979 as Manager of the West Texas Division.

"You expect to work hard, and they expect you to work hard, but Noble rewards you for the effort," Frederickson said.

The rig dedication ceremony was held last month, and Frederickson was given an oil painting of the rig and an engraved crystal sphere of the earth.

He joined Noble in 1946 as a roughneck and through the years filled every position on a rig including Rig Manager and Drilling Superintendent. His first job with the company was in Hobbs, New Mexico, and since then he has worked in East and South Texas, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma, Colorado and Utah.

Frederickson lived in Hobbs three different times in his career, and both of his children were born there. The last move was in 1959, just before he was transferred to Midland.

Of all the changes he has seen, he finds the change in people most remarkable.

"People took a lot of pride in their jobs," he said. "Work was hard to come by and you moved wherever it was."

While drilling in Pennsylvania, he remembers the ice was so thick on top the pump house one year that the roof caved in. And in Utah, it was standard fare to box in the entire derrick and substructure each winter and use boilers for heat.

Frederickson said from the late 40s to about 1955, he would work on a rig between three and six months depending on the depth of that particular well. Then he'd move to the next job. He and his wife had a trailer house they took with them.

Improvements in engines, blowout preventers, mud pumps and other rig equipment increased not only drilling depth, but also speed.

"When the time came that we could drill faster, for example a 10,000 foot well drilled in 30 days, then it didn't make sense to move that often," he said.

Rig hands lived in the closest town and commuted every day to the wellsite. There was no mileage rate paid, and most often the crew of five would drive together in one car taking turns each day.

"If you didn't have a car, you had to pay the driller to drive for you," he said.

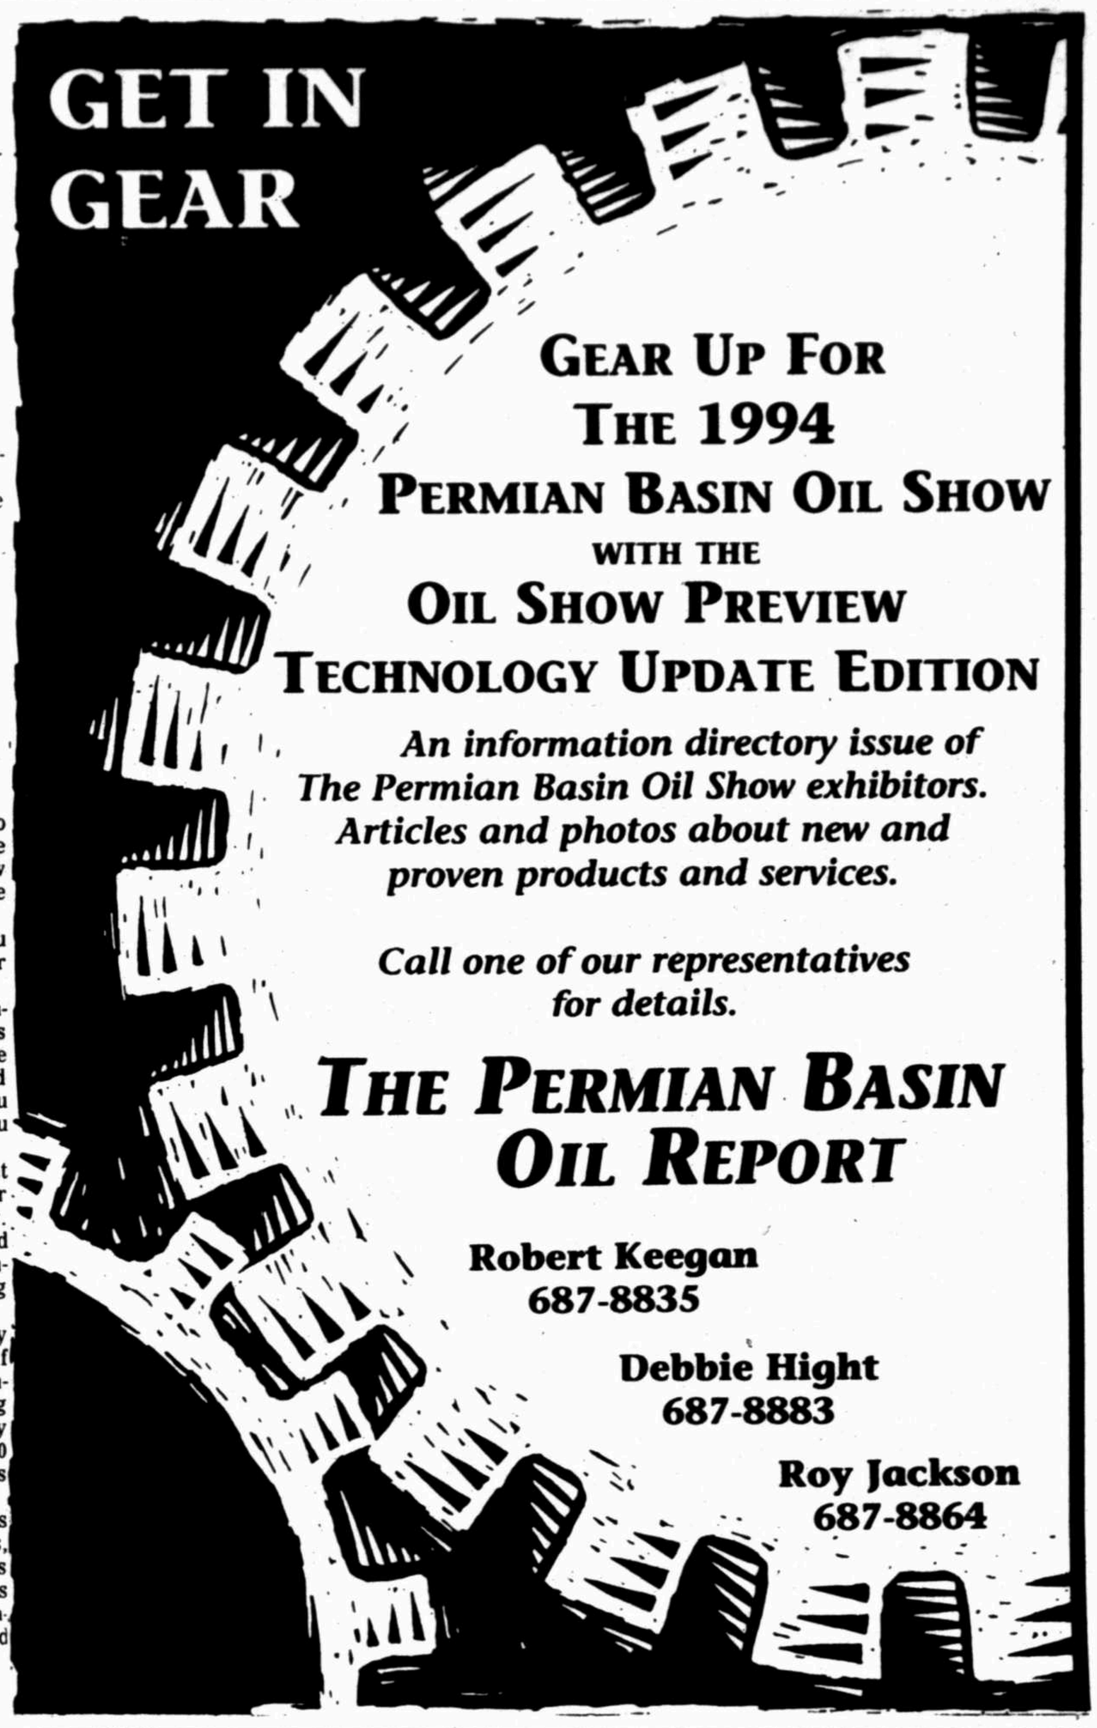

There also was no formal training for rig hands; everything was learned by on-the-job-experience and often in 12-hour shifts. He said the higher the job position you had, the longer the hours you worked.

Frederickson recalled that meals at the wellsite were never as bad as you hear people say. They ate a lot of baloney and cheese sandwiches, and occasionally some of the wives would bring ice cream out to the rig.

When engineers came out they sometimes brought their golf clubs. Other than that, entertainment consisted of cards, hunting and fishing -- certainly a far cry from the televisions and 12 x 60 foot modern trailers on wellsites today.

Even while 2-way mobile phones were used by some companies, Frederickson remembers one boss who didn't want to run business that way. But drilling for the majors was a different story and fuel. If we can convert vehicles to compressed natural gas and encourage gas usage in electric power generation, there's a market there. That's why the trend toward gas should continue."

But Peterson noted that the Permian Basin, "with the exception of the Canyon Sands and down south, we haven't seen the gas drilling we anticipated with the advent of lower oil prices."

He explained that southeast New Mexico is the main base of activity for his company, and the main market for southeastern New Mexico gas is California, which did not see the wintertime upswing the East Coast did because it escaped much of the severe winter weather.

He added that there remains a lot of optimism about gas, but he cautioned that "according to experts, market demand is so close that it would only take a little extra gas to really deflate prices. Over the past 10 years, we've seen that the winter the Northeast had in 1993 was more the exception than the rule and no one anticipates having another winter like 1993. If everyone's drilling natural gas and we're at 90 percent utilization or better in the Gulf of Mexico, as far as supply is concerned, we could get an oversupply quickly."

And Peterson added, "I still think oil is our mainstay. Sooner or later our own government is going to realize the security ramifications of our declining production and find some way to enact incentives or something of that nature to create or spur on more drilling. It may not be this administration or this year, but people will realize the ramifications."

He said he believes the nation is closer to an energy crisis than people think because production rates are low and continue to decline, and because world demand and oil supplies are drawing closer together — largely because of production declines in the U.S. and the former Soviet Union.

Should there be a strong rise in demand for drilling rigs, Kerridge said there should be plenty of drilling rigs and equipment to meet it.

"The most likely problem will be trained crews. That could be a constraint, and another might be drill string and that's not because you can't get it from the mills but simply because the prolonged weakness in the drilling industry has made it difficult for contractors to be able to purchase new drill string."

Sanders said there is a limit to what the Permian Basin drillers can do from a manpower standpoint, but there is still room for more rigs to go to work.

"Manpower could be a problem down the road, it could limit is to where that'll be one of the limitations in getting a rig. There won't be an iron shortage, there'll be a people shortage."

He explained that a number of employees "have ridden the up and down cycle too much and would rather manage a convenience store or anywhere else, where they can have a steady paycheck."

In fact, he said, in the Permian Basin, a couple of recent year-end surges in the rig county "have pushed us to the maximum."

Gas reserve replacement higher

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Companies holding large reserves of natural gas replaced those reserves at a higher rate in 1993 than they did in 1992.

A review of 1993 annual reports issued to shareholders and the Securities and Exchange Commission ("10-Ks") by the Natural Gas Supply Association shows that the 30 biggest natural gas reserve holders produced a total of 8.4 trillion cubic feet (TCF) of natural gas in 1993 and acquired new reserve additions of 7.3 TCF - an 87 percent replacement rate.

The comparable rate for 1992 was 69 percent. At the beginning of 1993, these 30 companies held 87.4 TCF of natural gas in reserves; at the end of the year, they held 86.1 TCF.

"Given that the reserves replacement rate of the top 30 is usually lower than that reported for the rest of the industry," said Phil Budzik, NGSA , "it is possible that the industry as a while might reach or surpass 100 percent reserve replacement in 1993."

Parker awarded drilling contract in Chad

Parker Drilling Co. announced a subsidiary has been awarded to two-rig, four-well contract in the African republic of Chad.

An Exxon affiliate has contracted Parker Drilling Company International Ltd. to drill four exploratory wells in the Kome-Miandoum area of southern Chad. Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

Spudding the first well is expected to occur mid-June. Approximately 200 Chadian nationals and 70 Parker expatriates will be involved in the drilling program, related construction activities and operation of the base camp.

Basin contractors looking to hot natural gas plays

■ Gas drilling brings new opportunity to contractors, as oil prices recover

By Ellen Hopkins

Make no doubt about it, natural gas is having a major impact on drilling in the Permian Basin, as rigs appear to be clustering in those traditional gas areas, but recovering oil prices and 3-D seismic are keeping oil development drilling alive, according to local contractors.

Currently rigs seem to be concentrated in natural gas regions. The Sonora/Ozona Canyon Sands region is the hot gas play, including the Val Verde Basin where between 13 to 16 of the Basin's rigs have been active in Sutton, Terrell and Crockett Counties in the last month.

Additional gas activity is on-going in the Delaware Basin of New Mexico, especially around Carlsbad. Developmental drilling, much of it based on 3-D seismic results, is occurring in Howard, Glasscock and Martin counties. Other activity is scattered from Andrews to the Eastern Shelf.

Wes-Tex Drilling, just one of the contractors active in the Sonora/Ozona area, plans to stay that way in the months ahead.

"Profit margins are better in this area, and it's probably the hottest prospect," said Randy Thompson, drilling superintendent with Wes-Tex. "It's still pretty competitive in the north where they're drilling for oil, around Howard and Garza, and prices are low."

Thompson said volatile oil prices have hurt the drilling business in this part of the Basin, and if oil prices would stay up he'd stay busy. Wes-Tex has been especially busy the last three months, running 18 rigs with only one idle. The company has averaged 90 percent utilization rate since February, after having drilled about three million feet in '93.

Tucker Drilling, based in San Angelo, is air drilling in the Sonora/Ozona area and has several rigs drilling for oil up north in the Hardeman Basin. Ron Scandolari, vice president of drilling for Tucker, said the current 65 percent utilization rate of the company's 12 rigs has kept them relatively active.

"But it's a highly competitive business based strictly on supply and demand," Scandolari said. "It's hard to make a comfortable profit margin when supply is up and demand is low."

He said the company's crews remain fairly stable when no more than five rigs are running.

Nabors Drilling USA Southwest Division is looking for gas in Terrell County, and for oil and gas in southeast New Mexico, some of which was generated from 3-D seismic. About half of Nabors' 45 to 50 rigs are currently working according to Gene Grimes, vice president and GM in the Midland office.

"We've managed to keep rigs running and have not had problems with crews," Grimes said. "We cover depths ranging from 3,500 to 35,000 feet if someone wants to drill that deep."

Sherman Norton, president of Norton Drilling in Lubbock, said business has been better than he thought this year, especially in light of oil hitting $14/bbl.

"This is notoriously a slow quarter but it acts like it's picking up again," Norton said. "I'm encouraged because it usually doesn't get this busy until August or September each year."

Norton said a lot of his work in the Val Verde Basin in Crockett and Terrell counties. He added that the company has three rigs in Wyoming and 11 rigs in the Permian Basin. He has crews for nine locally, seven of which are currently running.

"Rig maintenance goes on all the time," he said. "When a rig isn't busy, that's when we overhaul it so it will be ready to go to work."

Mike Sledge, vice president with Gene Sledge Drilling, said business is more stable in the last year than it has been in quite some time.

"We're busy, developmental mostly for oil and gas wells but predominantly oil," Sledge said. "We're drilling Wolfcamp in Upton County and in Glasscock near Garden City."

Sledge said as of last week the company's first rig is down in over a year, so only four are now active. But he experienced 100 percent utilization rate this year prior to last week, and 90 percent last year when the company drilled 500,000 feet.

Drilling for gas in the Delaware Basin near Carlsbad is an active area for ZIADRIL based in Hobbs. CEO Ken McPeters said his fiscal year begins in August, and he's showing a profit since last August. He added that although ZIADRIL's utilization rate has been about 50 percent for two years now, he currently is running only two of his six rigs.

"We have trouble finding people when we run three rigs," McPeters said. "Crews are transient because there just isn't enough work to keep them busy. It's not their fault, the state of the industry is to blame."

Peterson Drilling also has a 50 percent utilization rate, and according to Vice President Leroy Peterson that's reflective of the industry.

"We're down substantially compared to '93," he said. "Our crews have been fairly steady though, because we've kept our key employees busy. Of course they still want more work."

Peterson said his six rotary rigs can drill from 4,000 to 14,000 feet, and he hopes the 3-D seismic in New Mexico will keep the company busy.

Exeter's Drilling Manager in Midland, Bob Lange, said the company is active in the Dagger Draw and in the Livingston Ridge of New Mexico where they are drilling for Meridian.

"Our crews are okay because we're keeping the drillers and derrick hands busy," Lange said. "But our seven rigs are running way behind last year."

Hack Drilling, which concentrates within a 125 mile radius of Abilene, has six rigs with a 70 percent utilization rate last year according to CEO Logan McGill.

"We've had periods where we're pretty busy, but it's not what I would call consistent," said McGill. "Some of our downtime has been due to weather conditions such that we can't move the rigs."

TMBR/Sharp's nine active rigs are scattered throughout the Basin in South Sheffield, Andrews and Seminole according to Don Lawson, vice president of operations.

"We have 15 rigs and last year was our best year," Lawson said. "We kept eight to nine rigs busy all year, drilling for oil and gas."

Capstar Drilling is also busy in Andrews County, drilling mostly for oil. Jim Brazeal, manager of Capstar's Allen, Texas office, said that on the average five of the company's six rigs have been active this year.

"This is a very acceptable level and we're pleasantly surprised," Brazeal said.

Cleere Drilling, based in San Angelo, has five rigs that average 80 percent utilization. The company's drilling activity has been mostly gas trends along the Eastern Shelf.

COUNT: Rigs forecast activity

More recently a trend in the opposite direction has been seen, where the actual gas price is overperforming the rig count. Again, this overperformance can be explained by low price expectations that were evidenced by the futures market in late 1992 as compared to the much higher actual price of natural gas that occurred in 1993. Accordingly, it is expected the 1994 gas rig count will converge upon today's natural gas futures market price expectations.

RIGS & PERMITS: Because of state drilling regulations, virtually every well in the United States must have some type of permit filed before it can be drilled. A drilling permit can be a very useful tool for projecting the level of drilling activity before a rig is even counted.

It is important to note that the permit count tends to lead the rig count by two-to-three months. This is because it usually takes several months between the time a permit is filed and the time the well will actually be drilled. If the permit count is shifted by two months, it can be seen that the permit count movements almost exactly match the rig count movements.

Several other permit count considerations should be mentioned. First, the permit count is always higher than the rig count, because the permit count represents the total number of permits submitted during a month, rather than the way the rig count is reported with a weekly average. Second, the filing for a permit does not mean the well must be drilled. Usually, a small portion — less than 10 percent — of the permits filed are never actually drilled. Third, because a different number of permit filing days occur in each month, the permit count must be adjusted to evenly weight each month. And finally, the permit information is collected by Petroleum Information and covers approximately 90 percent of the drilling activity areas of the United States.

RIGS & SEISMIC CREWS: One of the longest-lived leading indicators of the U.S. oilfield service industry is U.S. seismic crew count. Seismic crews have historically been considered a leading indicator of drilling activity, because there is usually a six-month to one-year lag time between when the seismic crew is active and when a well is actually drilled. Unfortunately, it is believed this leading indicator has lost much of its usefulness over the past decade because the crew count has increasingly become more of a coincidental or concurrent indicator rather than a leading indicator.

The seismic crew count has lost its ability to predict rig counts primarily because it is no longer a good representation of the actual amount of spending upon seismic services. The introduction of computers and 3-D seismic technology has shifted a larger part of the overall seismic spending to processing and interpretation of data rather than the acquisition of data. Improved seismic technology over the past decade has also resulted in improved finding efficiencies. By using 3-D seismic technology, there are fewer dry holes drilled, resulting in fewer rigs per seismic crews.

RIGS & WELLHEAD REVENUE: One method used by oilfield service analysts to project the U.S. rig count is to estimate the future amount of spending on oilfield services, backing out the rig count from this. The amount of projected spending is usually determined by the following steps:

- Estimate the amount of oil and gas production for the next year.
- Predict the average price of oil and gas for the upcoming year.
- Calculate the wellhead revenues that would result if assumptions No.1 and 2 are correct; and finally,
- Estimate the percentage of wellhead revenues that will be "plowed" back into oilfield services.

This technique is not being used here because, in addition to being overly complicated, there are too many variables that compound the error probability. The price of oil and gas is hard enough to predict, but add on top of that the error associated with production forecasts, "plow back" percentage estimates and the potential digression from the actual number can be significant. Even when the rig count is compared to historical wellhead revenues during a relatively consistent "plow back" period, a good correlation does not exist.

Providing news coverage to an oil and gas empire.

Sprawling across 100,000 square miles of the arid Southwest is the Permian Basin of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico. This giant oil and gas empire accounts for nearly 20 percent of the nation's oil production!

With an oil and gas well for every square mile, the area (named for a geological formation first discovered in Perm Russia) has a well-developed and cohesive industry that conforms more to the productive boundaries of the Permian formations than state lines. The "Basin" is home to hundreds of oil producers, oil-related service companies and manufacturing companies serving portions of two states.

What it did not have was a newspaper that provided comprehensive news coverage of this far-flung industry. The Midland Reporter-Telegram now fills that void by publishing the Permian Basin Oil Report. This special weekly supplement is inserted into the Reporter-Telegram and also distributed to oil industry readers throughout the 54 county basin.

Finally...first class oil coverage as vital to the Basin as the region is to the country.

RIG FORECAST MODEL: Since the oil and gas futures markets seem to be much better predictors of actual oil and gas rigs, they have become an integral part of the rig forecasting model. Without getting into details the model makes the assumption that the rig count will be tied closely to the oil and gas price expectations inherent in the futures market and then adjusts for rig count seasonality and the time premium placed upon long-term futures prices. Using the oil and gas price expectations exhibited by the current futures strip, this model projects the overall 1994 U.S. rig count will slightly outperform the average over the past five years. Since price expectations, spending patterns and rig counts can change dramatically in a short time, this model will be updated monthly to include the latest industry trends and petroleum price expectations.

By accurate forecasting the rig count, the future revenue levels of various oilfield service industry segments can be more effectively estimated. This is important for company valuations, because virtually all detailed company models will be driven by this rig count forecast.

The 1994 and 1994 rig projects have been shown as has the methodology used to develop them. Like anything in the petroleum business, the ultimate driver will be the price of oil and gas. For U.S. drilling activity, it is felt the oilfield service activity level will be driven more by the perception of future prices than by actual petroleum prices. Accordingly, the rig forecasting model takes into account petroleum futures prices as well as rig seasonality, well permits and other leading indicators.

Since it is shown the rig counts and activity levels are tied to petroleum prices, it is also concluded that any increase in petroleum prices will result in even greater percentage increases in oilfield service earnings.

ACTIVITY: Locating rigs

Kirk Cleere said he's limited to running four rigs because he can't find people to staff another rig.

"They're just not out there," he said. "Profit margins are also low, and a lot of contractors have a tough time working on a two to five percent margin."

FWA Drilling has 27 rigs running at a 48 percent utilization. John Pace, operations administrator, said current activity levels are inadequate to generate profits on a sustained basis.

"I suppose most drilling contractors are trying to break even until margins improve," Pace said.

He added that FWA has not cut back on rig maintenance or crew pay due to the depressed drilling margins, because these are high priority items. Pace said holding crews has not been the problem it once was.

"There is always a certain level of turnover due to the significant changes in activity level," he said. "However, our turnover rate has been reduced over the last few years due to the incentives we pay for safety and years of service."

Pace said gas activity is concentrated in Crockett and Sutton counties.

Bandera Drilling has nine rigs, with five of them active in Schleicher County, one for Mobil in Salt Creek, and three for Phillips near Goldsmith. President Ray Brazzel said the company drilled nearly 700,000 feet last year and that business is up this year.

HONOR: Rig named

Chevron was the first to require mobile phones at Noble's wellsites.

"We drilled for just about every major and a lot of the independents," he said. "There was Amerada, Mobil, Exxon, Pennzoil, Shell, Marathon, Union of California, Union Texas and Continental Oil, just to name a few."

In 1953 Frederickson received his first company watch for working three years without a lost time accident. He has accumulated quite a few over the years.

He was transferred to Midland in 1960 when Noble's offices were in the Petroleum Building. He said eventually he worked in nearly every field in the Permian Basin.

"At one time Noble had 15 rigs in the Permian Basin and it was really a challenge to keep them all running."

Frederickson was on hand to witness the use of high-pressure drilling equipment on the deep Puckett Ellenburger wells. He has seen a lot of changes since 1946, but still has one industry sight he'd like to see.

He said he hopes to someday visit that rig off the coast of Venezuela.

GHK, partner purchase Anadarko wells

OKLAHOMA CITY — Robert A. Hefner III announced that his GHK Co. has joined Fuel Resources and Oil and Gas Producers Inc. in the acquisition of 115 wells in 18 wells from Anadarko Petroleum Corp. The fields are located principally in Arkansas and Oklahoma. GKH's interest in the properties is 12.5 percent.

The purchase also includes 55,000 net acres of undeveloped leases and four gas gathering systems. GHK, Fuel Resources and Oil and Gas Producers Inc. are evaluating an extensive development drilling program for the properties.

GHK is continuing to pursue the acquisition of producing properties in the mid-Continent area as well as exploration in the Republic of Colombia, South America, and the development of power generation plants in China.

Even though summer doesn't officially start until June 21 this year, for millions of Americans, the Memorial Day weekend signals the beginning of the season.

With backyard barbecues, swimming pools and lots and lots of sunshine, families all over the country will be celebrating this weekend out in the summer sun.

But experts warn that sunshine might not be the best place to be for very long periods of time. For many years, the medical profession has

Dr. Stephen Ullrich is associate professor of immunology at M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston.

The Under Cover Skin Cancer Prevention Project began its second year in the Permian Basin on Tuesday when the first ultraviolet ray readings of the season were recorded by the UV meter located on top of NationsBank.

The project "started (by M.D. Anderson) in 1990 in Houston, and two years later in Austin and Corpus Christi," said Karen Watson Phillips of M.D. Anderson Cancer Center's Office of Public Affairs.

Beginning this week and continuing through Labor Day, the program includes readings taken by the UV meter four times a day — 10 a.m., noon, 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. — and issued to the public by local media. Readings are on a scale of one to 10, with one being low danger of skin damage due to UV rays, and 10 being high danger.

Readings taken last summer show that the highest amounts of UV rays registered at 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. for all three summer months.

Seniors' parties honor graduates

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

With graduation less than a week away for Midland and Lee High Schools, seniors' parties fill the calendar.

McKnight-Harrison

Among the latest was "The Last Rowdy Round-Up," held Friday evening at Prescott's Cafe, located next to Water Wonderland.

The honorees, all MHS graduates-to-be, were Hadley Tyler, Clay Brown, Cara Carney, Jennifer Chase, Ryan Cochran, Christi Cowden, Carrie McKague, Alan Hall, Reid Dunbar, Courtney Hawkes, Matt Glover, Ross Sport, Sheridan Gilkerson, Brennan Hensley, Trey Wetendorf, Charles Hill, Holt Johnson, Linsey Matthews, Tom White, Lauren Pace, Kasey Morse, Emily Spears, Ross Hunter, Tom Becker and Dustin Fellows.

Hosted by their parents, the party featured the music of the award-winning band, O.M. Brown and the Rowdy Cowboys of Austin.

The restaurant's western motif provided just the right setting for the "round-up," with brightly colored balloons adding a festive touch.

Popcorn and soft drinks were served to the large throng. Invitations went out to approximately 300 students, who in turn were invited to bring dates.

MHS SENIOR Mauri Nicholson was honored recently with a luncheon in the home of Olga (Mrs. W.A.) Banks. Hallie (Mrs. J. Woodford) Sale was the co-hostess.

Mauri, daughter of Tricia and Dr. Curtis Nicholson, plans to attend Baylor University this fall.

The clever decorations included a wreath, decorated with purple and gold ribbons, and flowers and a figurine dressed in cap and gown, on the front door and banners proclaiming "Midland High School Graduates" in the house.

Box lunches were served in the home's garden room. Red, yellow, green and blue balloons were used as centerpieces on matching table cloths.

The guests were Gretchen Eben, Amanda Hill, Buffy-Marie Knight, Joni Koenig, Susan Leibrock, Tiffany McDonald, Tiffany Pehl and Jenette Smith.

ANOTHER MHS SENIOR, Holt Johnson, was honored with a barbecue recently at the home of Alice and Bob Johnson. Co-host couples were Nancy and Vince Johnson, Karen and Doug Scharbauer and Monta Jo and Ted Johnson.

The colors and mementoes of his future alma mater, Texas Tech University, were used in the decorations.

The 70 guests included a host of friends, in addition to his parents, Anne and Bert Johnson; his sister, Katherine; his cousins, Sarah and Daniel Scharbauer and Jennifer and Amy Johnson.

ACT IX, Midland Community Theatre's women's auxiliary, recently held its annual spring luncheon and year-end meeting at Venezia Restaurant.

A special cake was presented to celebrate Act IX's upcoming 25th anniversary and MCT's 50th anniversary.

President Karen (Mrs. Dean) Rucker introduced the incoming president, Kim (Mrs. Mark) Nearburg, who in turn presented her executive committee and standing committee chairmen.

Special guests included MCT executive director Don Bachmann, comptroller Janet Cole George, custodian Willie Swindell, and prospective new members.

"DINNER WITH DOUG" read the invitations to the first-ever benefit to be sponsored by the Midland Opera Theater. The event, enjoyed recently by more than 250 persons at the Petroleum Club, featured Santa Fe's premier pianist and showman, Doug Montgomery, and Kansas City soprano, Lindsey McKee, in an evening of opera, Broadway and popular piano and vocal favorites.

The benefit was chaired by Susan (Mrs. Frank) Tirey, assisted by Patty (Mrs. Richard) Jennings and current MOT president Maridell (Mrs. Jack) Fryar.

Among those attending were previous MOT board presidents Joanie Holt and husband, Bobby; Nancy Anguish and husband, Buddy; Charlene Waddill; Tom Johnson and wife, Jeanie; Lee Harley and husband, George, and Brad Kisner and wife, Jane.

Other Midlanders enjoying the evening's entertainment included Mary and Henri de Compiegne, Janet and Bob Pollard, Jane and Bob Ward, Anne and Jim McLaughlin, Fay Helms, Martha Black and Margaret Cerf.

Proceeds from the evening will go toward funding the fall projects of the Midland Opera Theater, which will include an October performance of "La Traviata" by the Minnesota Opera Company and a November concert featuring a quartet from the Santa Fe Opera.

UV: Precaution is key to prevention warned that ultraviolet (UV) rays of the sun cause skin cancer.

Dr. Stephen Ullrich, associate professor of immunology at M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston, was in Midland recently to discuss the center's Under Cover Skin Cancer Prevention Project, and ways individuals can protect themselves from the disease.

"Skin cancer is the most prevalent form of cancer" in humans, Ullrich said. "You have to understand what causes cancer. ... Skin cancer is caused by UV (ultraviolet) light and it's out there."

According to information from M.D. Anderson, more than 700,000 new cases of skin cancer are expected in this country this year. Ullrich added that more than 1 million are expected in 1995.

Many of these cases can be prevented with a few simple precautions. "The biggest thing we try to tell people is to limit their sun exposure," Ullrich said.

In addition to that, "there are a lot of things people can do," he said. "Wear a good broad brimmed hat. There's a reason why cowboy hats are big and broad brimmed. About 80 percent of skin cancers are on the head, face and neck. A hat with a good brim will protect" those parts of the body.

Sunscreen also will provide some protection from UV rays. Ullrich listed three things to look for in a sunscreen: (1) a sun protection factor of 15 or more; (2) a sunscreen that is waterproof; and (3) a sunscreen that blocks UV-B and UV-A.

UV-B IS linked to cancer, he said, but UV-A contributes to the development of cancer and the premature wrinkling of the skin.

Most new sunscreens that are UV-A and UV-B blockers will say so on the label.

"Another important thing about sunscreen is, use a lot," Ullrich said. "Don't be cheap — put a good layer on about a half an hour before you go out in the sun so it can soak in, and apply it often."

Even though skin cancer is rare in children, protecting the younger generation from the harmful effects of the sun is vitally important, Ullrich said.

"It is estimated that you get 80 percent of your total sun exposure before the age of 18. A number of studies support the idea that exposure (to the sun) you get as a child will dictate your risk of melanoma as an adult."

Malignant melanoma is the most serious and deadly form of skin cancer because it can "spread throughout the body," Ullrich said.

He advises parents to make sure their children are protected from too much exposure to the sun. "Hats and sunscreen," he said. "I would push hats more than sunscreen" because hats block the sun. "Send your kids out with baseball hats on — that's in style now.

"Broad brimmed hats would be even better."

Ullrich said that Queensland, Australia, has the highest incidence of skin cancer in the world, and adults there are taking steps to protect children from harmful UV rays. "If the kid (at school) doesn't have a hat and a long-sleeved shirt on, they keep them in at recess."

CHILDREN ALSO can be protected from harmful rays of the sun by playing in the shade.

Even window glass will filter out UV rays, Ullrich said. "That's why you don't get tan after spending hours in your car."

He also advises everyone to wear sunglasses, preferably those with some UV protection in the lenses. UV-A and UV-B both are linked to eye problems, he said, including cataracts and retinal damage. "UV block helps. It doesn't cost very much and I think it's worthwhile.

"Even just cheap sunglasses will cut down on some of the radiation going through."

And, he added, try to stay out of the sun during the heat of the day when UV rays are the most powerful — generally between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. "If you do your own garden work and cut the grass — who cuts grass at noon?" he said. "Some of it is just common sense."

Although no one is totally immune from skin cancer, some people have a higher risk than others, he said. People with the fairest skin who never tan are more at risk for skin cancer than those with dark skin.

Many cases of skin cancer are preventable — and many are curable. Ullrich suggested beginning with self-examination. "The fortunate thing about skin cancer is, you can see it," he said.

Some of the things to look for are included in what the American Cancer Society calls ABC, he said. If a spot or a mole is asymmetrical, has uneven borders or shows any changes — such as changes in color, size or density, or it starts to bleed — that is a cause for concern. "If you have any questions, go see a dermatologist," Ullrich advised.

THE EARLIER the treatment, the more likely the cure. Information from M.D. Anderson says: "More than 95 percent of patients with non-melanoma skin cancer (the most common kind) are completely cured. The cure rate could be even higher — perhaps 100 percent — if all of these skin cancers were diagnosed and treated early."

And, the information goes on: "The overall five-year survival rate for malignant melanoma is 83 percent."

The center's information also warns against tanning salons. "Most tanning salons are equipped with UV-A sun lamps, which were once considered safer than sunlight and the older UV-B sun lamps. However, recent studies suggest that UV-A radiation may promote the development of non-melanoma skin cancer. Experts advise avoiding both natural and artificial ultraviolet radiation exposure."

Ullrich agreed. People who use tanning salons are "exposing themselves to a carcinogen and paying someone to do it."

Although a tan used to be considered healthy, he said, "a tan is a short-term gain and a long-term problem."

Remember, now as the hot weather season is here, that fun in the sun can be a lot more fun — and healthy — when precautions against skin cancer are part of your summer plans.

METER: Device measures UV rays

(From 1F)

on Project began its second year in the Permian Basin on Tuesday when the first ultraviolet ray readings of the season were recorded by the UV meter located on top of NationsBank.

The project "started (by M.D. Anderson) in 1990 in Houston, and two years later in Austin and Corpus Christi," said Karen Watson Phillips of M.D. Anderson Cancer Center's Office of Public Affairs.

Beginning this week and continuing through Labor Day, the program includes readings taken by the UV meter four times a day — 10 a.m., noon, 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. — and issued to the public by local media. Readings are on a scale of one to 10, with one being low danger of skin damage due to UV rays, and 10 being high danger.

Readings taken last summer show that the highest amounts of UV rays registered at 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. for all three summer months.

Last year the project was brought into the Permian Basin, Ms. Phillips said, because of the risk of skin cancer in the area. "We chose this area because of the high incidence of skin cancer (here). There's a lot of outdoor work (in the oil field) and that really causes problems.

"The whole idea is not to scare people, but to help them protect themselves," she said. "The whole issue of skin cancer is getting more and more (important) as incidents are going up."

Summer is not the only time UV rays can cause problems, she said. Winter weather is no protection against damage by the sun. "You are wearing more clothes, but the areas (of the body) that are exposed are still getting the same amount of UV."

Dr. Stephen Ullrich, associate professor of immunology at M.D. Anderson, agreed. Although people tend to spend more time outdoors when the weather is warm, "one of the worst places you can get (exposed to UV) is on the top of a mountain where you are skiing. It (damage from the sun) has nothing to do with heat, it has to do with radiation." This radiation can reflect off snow, sand or water too.

Limiting your exposure to the sun's UV rays is a simple and easy way to help prevent skin cancer. The UV meter is one way to help people know what the danger of overexposure to the sun is at any given time.

Weather forecasts may add UV ratings

By Randolph E. Schmid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans worried about tanning their hides when they go outdoors may be getting a new forecast — the ultraviolet outlook.

National Weather Service researchers are developing a new ultraviolet rating system, which could be added to regular weather forecasts to help people avoid potentially dangerous exposure to the sun's rays.

"It's a serious issue and one which, from a very personal standpoint, I'm concerned about what we can do to help," Weather Service Director Elbert W. Friday said in a recent interview.

He said experimental ultraviolet — UV — forecasting could begin in June or July if researchers can work out the final technical problems.

The Environmental Protection Agency is joining in the project, and plans an education program to warn about the dangers of ultraviolet exposure — the prime cause of skin cancer — when the forecasts are set to begin.

More new cases of skin cancer are diagnosed every year than all other types of cancer combined, says a new report in the Journal of the American Academy of Dermatology.

The traditional weather forecasts predict whether it will be dry or wet, hot or cold, windy or calm. In summer, the pollen count and an air quality index are often thrown in.

And, depending on the time of year, the wind-chill factor or some type of humidity index can be added — telling people why things feel worse than they are.

Now the ultraviolet forecast could tell people that things may be worse than they feel.

UV rays give people that bronze skin color once thought to be a healthy look. But the urge to tan has faded in recent years as the danger of skin cancer loomed larger.

Canada issues UV forecasts on a 1-to-10 scale, the higher the number the more the danger.

Because the United States is more southerly — meaning it has more direct sun exposure — the scale here would have to be 1 to 15, Friday said.

"We want to put out a product that is solid, scientifically based, that doesn't cause excessive alarm but does raise a sensitivity in the public as to what risk they are taking," he said.

Ozone, a special type of oxygen, forms a thin layer in Earth's upper atmosphere and blocks the most dangerous UV rays from reaching humans. But that layer sometimes thins, at least in some areas, and physicians are concerned about the potential for more cancer.

The problem isn't the "ozone hole," which occurs only over Antarctica, Friday said. In other areas, ozone in the stratosphere thins seasonally and varies from day to day, and that has an impact on the UV reaching Earth.

How to Sponsor Education and Enjoy Your Vacation...

WHEN YOU CALL IN YOUR VACATION STOP, OFFER TO DONATE YOUR OFFICE-PAID SUBSCRIPTION FOR THE PERIOD YOU'LL BE AWAY TO A SCHOOL IN YOUR AREA.

Many thousands of area students benefit each school year through exposure to newspapers in education. Whether used as a library resource, as a "living textbook" to support classroom skills, or as a special project, the newspaper adds a powerful and exciting dimension to learning. Unfortunately, in these difficult economic times, teachers and school boards are finding it increasingly hard to fund the purchase of newspapers. As a Spectator subscriber, you can help by donating your vacation credit to sponsor newspapers for classroom use.

The daily newspaper is one of the most practical and versatile teaching resources available. It's real-world relevance promotes practical literacy and offers young minds the opportunity to develop a lasting sense of social and civic responsibility.

Best of all, newspapers are fun! Students enjoy newspaper based activities while they build curriculum skills and develop good reading habits.

Conversational slipstream gets faster as we age

By Erma Bombeck

Young people are knocked out by couples who have been married a long time. At a period in their lives when they can't wait for hair to dry or oatmeal to cool, their main concern is, "What do you people talk about after all those years?"

Bombeck

It's hard to explain that after 30 or 40 years it isn't what you say to each other, it's what you can say together.

My husband and I are at the stage where we are incapable of finishing a story or a sentence without help from the other one.

For example, every time I tell my "back" story (which is often) I end by saying, "I had a surgical procedure called ..." At that point, I punch my husband. He can be engaged in another conversation across the room, but he will answer mechanically, "Automated Percutaneous Lumbar Discectomy." Since 1987, I have never once been able to remember it, and he knows it.

He can never remember Phil Jackson's name (coach of the Chicago Bulls). So when he gets to the end of his story, he clicks his fingers at me and says, "What's his name, Erma? The guy who looks like Tom Selleck with a migraine?" and like a trained seal I bark, "Phil Jackson."

One night I had to excuse myself to go to the bathroom, and as I heard him telling the story, I leaned down and whispered in his ear before I left the room, "Phil Jackson." He thanked me.

It's not that the blanks in our conversations are hard to fill, like the name of President Buchanan's vice president or something; it's just that throughout the years we have learned to rely on each other.

Watching "Jeopardy" together is a real trip for us. When Alex is giving the answer to the final Jeopardy question, we are still trying to remember the book Grace Metalious shocked New England with in the first round.

A typical conversation between us goes like this. I will say, "The kids took a drive last week up to Escondido." (Bill interrupts with "Santa Barbara.") He says, "You'll never guess who they spotted at a gas station there ... you know, he has a series on TV ... a cop show." (I reply, "Jerry Orbach.") We give each other high fives for having completed two sentences.

Throughout the years we seem to have known our areas of expertise. I keep track of our children's ages and he remembers the year we built the house.

The other day I blurted out excitedly, "Peyton Place."

"What are you talking about?" he asked.

"That's the novel by Grace Metalious that shocked New England. Remember on 'Jeopardy'?"

"You file it away," he said. "I've got my hands full remembering the name of the host, Alex ... what IS his name?"

It would be three days before we came up with Trebek.

Dear Abby

Cost of hospital care sees changes through the years

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A California woman wrote to say her hospital bill for a five-day stay came to $64.25.

Van Buren

I can top her: I'm enclosing a man's bill from Pennsylvania Hospital, dated 1869. It totaled $70 and the cost per day was $1. I have the actual bill, which has a 2-cent revenue stamp on it. — MARY M. WALLACE, HORNELL, N.Y.

DEAR MARY: I was surprised by the amount of mail which that letter generated — but yours was the winner, by far, as the oldest bill. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I just saw your column with the hospital bill from 1948. I can sure beat that! I'm enclosing a copy of the bill for my wife's delivery in 1931. She was born at Henderson Hospital in Henderson, Ky. It only cost $25.50 — but she's worth every penny of it. — A.D. McALISTER, EVANSVILLE, IND.

DEAR ABBY: I am four score years old, and I read you every day. My wife and I have been married three score years. Thought you might be interested in a copy of my mother's hospital bill from Spartanburg, S.C., General Hospital, dated 1922. One week: $38. — DAVID R. BLAKELEY, TRAVELERS REST, S.C.

DEAR ABBY: When our oldest daughter (first child) was born in June of 1944, we paid Polyclinic Hospital in Harrisburg, Pa., $56 for a 10-day stay. The flat rate for 10 days (that's how long mothers stayed in the hospital then) including EVERYTHING — there was no itemizing — was $70. As a clergyman, I received a 20 percent discount.

Our physician, a general practitioner, charged $35 for delivery and pre-delivery visits, with 50 percent off for clergy — $17.50! Who can beat that? — THE REV. PHARES O. REITZ, ALLENTOWN, PA.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the lady about prices in 1948 prompted me to send some for 1933. My older daughter was born April 17 of that year. The total cost for the hospital, the delivery room, and 10 days postnatal care for both the baby and me was $50. The doctor's fee for prenatal, delivery and postnatal care was $50. In those days, we stayed in bed 10 days.

Rent on our small, furnished house was $8 a month. Before that, when I was working in an office, my salary for six-day weeks was $60 a month, no deductions.

The newspapers then had many classified ads for used Model T's at $7.50 each. Gasoline was 18 cents a gallon. Cigarettes were 10 cents a pack for the cheaper brands.

And when Social Security started, about 1937, my first deduction was 16 cents a month. — ORVALETA H. DODD, RAYMOND, WASH.

DEAR ABBY: In your column, you included a 1948 medical bill and commented, "Oh, those were the days, my friends."

Abby, those were the days of salaries as low as those prices. My first job in 1944 paid $20 for a 40-hour week. That medical bill would have taken nearly a month's pay and left me nothing to live on. It was ever thus.

Now ... if we could combine '40s prices and '90s earnings — ahh! — JEANNE NELSON, FOUNTAIN VALLEY, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: This may be a little late, so please forgive me; I've been very busy. But I must respond to all those people who wrote in to complain about serving holiday meals on paper plates.

One lady signed "Mom in Murraysville, Pa." finally interjected a little logic and told about feeding the families of 14 married children and grandchildren at Christmas using paper plates, plastic utensils and plastic serving bowls. Well, speaking for myself, I cannot wait until they invent paper pots and pans! — 56 YEARS OLD AND TIRED OF BEING CHIEF COOK AND BOTTLE WASHER IN GREAT FALLS, MONT.

To order "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Tuning fork sings perfect pitch, regardless of conditions

LONDON (AP) — The tuning fork, a two-pronged metal device used for tuning musical instruments, was invented here in the 1700s by John Shore, a trumpeter who played with composer George Frederick Handel.

When struck, the U-shaped tuning fork vibrates at 440 cycles per second. It produces a tone which is always the same, regardless of temperature, moisture or other condtions that can affect the pitch and tone of a musical instrument.

'Molly Pitcher' was heroine in war

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — "Molly Pitcher" was the nickname of a woman who fought in battle during the Revolutionary War.

Born Mary Ludwig in 1754, she married a young barber named John Hays, who enlisted as an artillery gunner in 1775. On the hot summer day of June 20, 1776, Molly joined her husband at the battle of Monmouth and carried water in a pitcher to the thirsty soldiers. Thus her nickname.

During the day, her husband fell from a heat stroke while firing the gun. She took his place and fought the rest of the battle. In 1822, the Pennsylvnia legislature awarded Molly Pitcher a yearly pension of $40. She died in 1832.

Forensic artist Jean Boylan poses at her Ben, Ore., cabin in the fall of 1993 with samples of her composite sketches used in police investigations. Among her best known work is a portrait of Richard Allen Davis, who has been charged with the kidnapping murder of 12-year-old Polly Klaas of Petaluma, Calif.

Forensic artist haunted by faces of the victims

By Karyn Hunt

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The faces haunt her.

Not the criminals Jean Boylan draws every day, but the faces of the victims who guide her sketches with their painful memories.

There are times when Boylan, one of the country's leading forensic artists, would rather hang it up and try a job that's more, well, pleasant.

"If I'm going to continue to do this kind of work with this degree of intensity, I'm just going to have to find a way to withdraw," Boylan said one evening from her cabin in the Oregon woods.

"It's just too much. I've got to balance it with something more positive."

But Boylan, 40, can't stop until she achieves her goal, which is nothing short of revolutionizing how law enforcement officials create the likenesses on the "Wanted" posters that are a staple of criminal investigations.

She has lectured about her unorthodox methods in China, Japan, Russia and Central America, and visited police departments all over the country.

EVERYWHERE SHE goes, she delivers the same message.

"I'm trying to find a constructive way of saying, basically, you're doing it all wrong," she said. "There's a better way. My idea is to get to every agency and teach them that this is a more complex task than anybody has acknowledged."

According to Boylan, the drawings that line post office walls, telephone poles and laundromat bulletin boards have less to do with art than with lending an old-fashioned sympathetic ear.

"I can't emphasize enough, this has nothing to do with art," she said. "This is all about the interview, about the brain, how it processes memory and how trauma affects memory. The art is not the point. The point is to get accurate information. It's about developing a place of safety, listening skills, interview skills."

The problem with the way it is done now is that forensic artists with a minimum of training use a kit of photographs showing facial types. In asking questions about the perpetrator's appearance — "How tall was she?" "Did he have a mustache?" — they unwittingly put visions in victims' heads and words in their mouths. That can contaminate the victim's memory and prompt inaccurate descriptions.

Also, in using the kit's stock features, they lose the subtle differences that make a person's appearance unique.

BOYLAN USES a more freeform interview technique characterized by open-ended questions. If a victim is upset, she brings up other, neutral topics to relax them. Bolstered by her calming manner, they are better able to rehash the painful memories that, in many cases, have been repressed or distorted.

It was while she was working with the Multnomah Sheriff's Department as a civilian investigator in 1977 that Boylan noticed something was wrong with the process used to make composites. The drawings the department's artists were producing looked nothing like the people eventually arrested, and the victim's descriptions of their attackers changed radically over time.

'If I'm going to continue to do this kind of work with this degree of intensity, I'm just going to have to find a way to withdraw. It's just too much. I've got to balance it with something more positive.'

— Jean Boylan
forensic artist

She decided to find out why.

She studied psychology, counseling and criminology at Oregon State University. Her focus was post-traumatic stress syndrome, coping mechanisms for sexually traumatized victims and how information is encoded in the memory.

She learned that the emotional trauma of being assaulted taints the memory. She discovered, for example, that victims tend to remember their attackers as larger than they are. And she found out that the memory is least accurate immediately after a crime and best two to three days later.

WHEN SHE GRADUATED in 1981, she signed on with the Portland Police Department. What followed was a succession of rape, murder and robbery cases.

Boylan has drawn more than 7,000 composite sketches during a 16-year career. She's been involved in such notorious cases as the kidnaps and killings of 12-year-old Polly Klaas in Petaluma, Calif., and 10-year-old Cassidy Senter and 9-year-old Angie Housman in St. Louis County, Mo.

Her sketches also have been instrumental in the hunt for suspects in the slaying of Los Angeles police officer Martin Ganz, a San Fernando serial child molester, the Green River serial killer in Washington state, and other killers in Massachusetts, Oklahoma and Toronto.

When her drawings began to yield arrests in previously unsolved cases, Boylan's reputation grew. When Polly Klaas was abducted from her bedroom, the FBI asked for her because "we'd heard she was the best," said FBI Special Agent Rick Smith of the San Francisco office.

She didn't disappoint them, according to James Nelson of the FBI's St. Louis office, who worked with her on the Senter and Housman cases. He was so impressed he mentioned her to the higher-ups in the FBI's Washington headquarters. They're interested in her ideas, he said.

"She has done probably the best work I've ever seen," Nelson said. "I think her concept is a definite improvement."

Time to head to the hills for popular Kerrville festival

By Jeff Guinn
N.Y. Times News Service

As has been usual in the Texas Hill Country for more than two decades, the 23rd annual Kerrville Folk Festival will be more of the same and a lot that's different.

"What we hope we've developed is a level of performance excellence such that, if people don't know anyone on an evening's roster, they'll still come out anyway," said festival producer Rod Kennedy. "Out of 100-plus acts each year, we try to bring in about one-third new ones we haven't presented before, just to keep things fresh and give additional artists a chance to be heard."

So 1994's 18-day program, which began Thursday and runs through June 12, will feature:

- Perennial favorites such as Peter Yarrow, Sara Hickman, Tish Hinojosa, Josh White Jr., Christine Albert, Jon Ims and the Austin Lounge Lizards.
- Recent festival discoveries Limpopo, Pele JuJu, David Broza, Michael Smith and the Righteous Mothers.
- A comeback by late '60s histrionic folk songstress Melanie.
- And the traditional slew of new acts — 26 in all — who will make their festival debuts on the outdoor stage of Quiet Valley Ranch, nine miles south of Kerrville on Texas 16.

IT'S A LINEUP format that continues to attract ever-increasing crowds, and Kennedy acknowledged it's getting hard for folk music fans to get through the Quiet Valley gates without advance ticket reservations.

"We've been experiencing a solid 7 percent attendance increase every year," Kennedy said. "Last year we had our biggest festival attendance yet, 30,000. On a couple nights we just had to close the gates and tell people there wasn't any more room to let them in. We hate for that to happen; some people come a long way to get to the festival, and we want them to hear the music they came for."

Accordingly, Kennedy said, there have been some changes in the festival office and operational procedures. "We've gone from a couple to six telephone lines, and now we've got five people working in the festival office," he said. "We've changed camping and parking regulations to be able to have better flow. It's not meant to add unnecessary regulations. We're just committed to maintaining the right ambience here, and the more people we have attending, the better we've got to plan in advance."

The basic Kerrville performing schedule, though, remains the same: six or seven featured acts from 6 p.m. to midnight on the main stage on May 26-30, June 3-5 and June 10-12, with other nights offering "Sundown Concerts" on a smaller ranch stage.

WHILE KENNEDY and his staff ponder logistics, performers who've gained a spot in the '94 Kerrville lineup anticipate their chance to play music in front of large, appreciative and "discerning" crowds.

"We play lots of festivals around the country, but Kerrville's the best," said Oleg Bernow, bassist for Limpopo, the Russian rock/folk acrobats who took the festival by storm during their first appearance in 1993, and who will be closing on the final night in this year's event. "The people who come there, they are really different. They want to listen to what you're doing and have fun with it."

Igor Khramov, Limpopo's trombonist, added, "We didn't wait to get asked back. We called (Rod Kennedy) and asked to come."

Getting a Kennedy invitation to play at Kerrville is usually much more difficult than making a single phone call. The festival producer is regularly inundated with cassettes and CDs sent by non-mainstream musicians who see Kerrville as a major career break.

"For our New Folk program alone, where we select 32 acoustic artists to present two songs each, I got 689 tapes this year," Kennedy said. "By actual count, from established performers who wanted invitations I got 290 CDs, and I'd have to say in excess of 700 tapes. Some were from very famous people who wouldn't fit — I won't give their names, of course."

THESE MUSICIANS, veteran and rookie alike, are well aware that Quiet Valley's backstage area serves as a festival-long gathering place for music industry agents, music publishers, record label scouts and concert hall bookers. At every festival, there's always a spate of contract signings.

"We're not star makers, and we don't claim to be that," Kennedy said. "But, especially early on in the careers of young performers, we can help give them that sense of self-esteem that's so necessary to successful careers. To step out on a stage in front of such large, knowledgeable crowds to perform your own original music takes a lot of guts, and with all the industry people there, too, we try to help artists get into the network of the business."

Ticket and camping information and reservations for the Kerrville Folk Festival are available by calling (800) 435-8429 or (210) 257-3600. Discounts are available on orders received prior to May 25th.

Featured performers for specific festival weekends include Jon Ims, Bill and Bonnie Hearne, Sara Hickman, Bobby Bridger, Peter Yarrow, Mumbo Gumbo, Butch Hancock and Alan Damron on May 26-30; Josh White Jr., Christine Albert, Jimmy LaFave, the Righteous Mothers and Michael Smith on June 3-5; and David Broza, Tish Hinojosa, Melanie, Tom Paxton and Limpopo on June 10-12.

Study: Doctors overlook older women's worries

By Bill Hendrick
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Feelings of hostility and anxiety can impair the health of men and women alike, but physicians treating women in midlife often fail to recognize these traits, researchers say.

Doctors examining women patients too often generalize findings from studies of men, said Dr. Sally H. Adams, lead author of a study on health problems of middle-aged, educated women.

"Health concerns of women during midlife are under-represented in research and clinical practice and the health priorities for women are poorly identified," she said. "As a result, women are at risk for receiving inadequate or inferior medical care and treatment."

The study by scientists from the University of California-San Francisco, the University of Michigan and Wellesley College was presented recently at the American Psychological Association's first major conference on women's health.

The researchers studied long-term records of more than 400 women in three groups who earned college degrees and began developing careers from the late 1950s to the mid-1960s, a time it called "the beginning of the era of major social transition of women's family and work roles."

The subjects were studied at ages starting at 27 up to 52. Results revealed that good physical health was associated with low levels of hostility and anxiety, and high levels of "intellectual efficiency" — being able to perform well without suffering undue stress or anxiety.

Despite the fact that the three groups were different in significant ways — they included female college seniors in 1958-60, women in college in the early '60s, and a group that graduated in 1967 — results were strikingly similar.

The researchers concluded that health care providers should work harder to assess the levels of hostility and anxiety in female patients in order to help them manage such characteristics.

Also, they said, doctors should "encourage the development of specific skills such as assertiveness, time management, conflict resolution and interpersonal skills to enhance self-confidence and self-assurance."

One of the authors, Dr. Lillian K. Cartwright, described the work as "a landmark study" because it suggested that personality, family history and many other factors affect health of women in ways that have not yet been quantified.

"While the available data show that women live longer than men and develop chronic life-threatening illnesses later than do men, they also show that women have significantly higher rates of acute illnesses, more days of bed time due to illness, more medication use, and more hospitalizations than do men. In other words, it appears that women live less well than men due to health constraints," the study said.

The authors concluded that intellectual efficiency seems to be a positive health factor, and this can be aided through more training in such fields as assertiveness and conflict resolution.

Though health problems occur for many reasons, including diet, lifestyle and hereditary factors, it's also obvious, the study concluded, that psychological problems such as stress play important roles in physical health problems.

It also found that "hostility, a lower degree of empathy and poorer planning abilities are long term antecedents of poor physical health and consequences of poor psychological health."

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Most galls ugly but harmless to trees

By Deborah A. Benge

Benge

On close examination of your favorite oak tree, you may see some unusual, sometimes alarming, growths on the leaves, petioles or small twigs. In fact, there may be more than one type of these funny-looking growths on the same tree, occasionally as many as five different ones at the same time. These galls are abnormal swellings of plant tissue caused by insects, bacteria, fungi, mites or nematodes. Don't get too excited about these atypical plant growths. The majority of them do no measurable harm to the tree.

It's important to point out that gall tissue is plant tissue. The external organism that is associated with the gall (insect, fungi, mite, etc.) causes a stimulus that so that the plant will produce plant cells that will serve as food or shelter to the organism. For instance, if a gall wasp lays eggs on the leaf of an oak tree, the larva can secrete chemicals that will stimulate plant growth that produces the gall. The insect can complete its lifecycle in the gall, feeding and being protected until it is ready to emerge.

Several plants can get galls, but classic examples are live oak, red oak and hackberry. We don't have too many hackberry, but of course we've got lots of oaks and we see many types of galls. The mealy oak gall is a large one ranging from one-half to one inch in diameter. It forms on the small branches and is rather grey in color. This particular gall can persist on the tree for many years. This and other galls can serve as a house for many beneficial spiders and insects once the original home owner moves out. Another interesting observation about gall-infested trees is that they may be located next to the very same type of tree, but it may be literally untouched by gall-producing organisms. Why this is, is not known.

Some of the common types of galls seen in the Permian Basin include wooly leaf gall, mealy oak gall and leaf galls, most of which are caused by a type of cynipid wasp. Controlling galls caused by insects is very difficult. Unless chemicals can be applied when gall-inducing insects fly or when adults are actively depositing eggs, they offer no effective means of control. In many cases, the proper time to spray is not known or it will vary from year to year. Systemic insecticides have not prove effective in controlling galls. Once the gall begins its development, it is impossible to stop or reverse its growth with chemicals. The lack of actual plant damage from galls and the difficulty of properly timing insecticide applications pose strong arguments against the use of insecticides.

There are a few galls that do actual damage to the plants they form on. But there are the few that do. There is a small oak leaf gall that can damage leaves as they emerge, distorting their shape. Or numbers can become so high that leaves begin to drop. If you see this type of damage, attempts to control the pest might become necessary. Otherwise the smart way to deal with galls is to think of them as they are — plant tissue.

If you have questions or need information about these plant pests or others, contact your local County Extension office.

560-2400

On June 3, CITYLINE, in conjunction with the Project Awaken Task Force, will launch the Y-Line.

What exactly is the Y-Line, you ask?

Simple.

The Y-Line is an interactive telephone service geared toward the youth of Midland County.

The Y-Line will offer answers to frequently asked questions that youths have, and will also feature entertainment options in which youth callers can participate.

Interactive Movie Polls.

Health and Social Concerns.

Youth Community Pulse Polls.

Local Activities sponsored by area youth groups.

It's all on the Y-Line. And it's all free.

The Y-Line will be entirely voiced by youths in Midland County. It's a service for young people. By young people.

One problem -- we need your help. In order to make the Y-Line as successful as many youths have said they foresee it, the Y-Line is in need of sponsors to help underwrite operating costs. Sponsorships are available beginning for as little as $100 per month.

A $100 sponsorship will give you the opportunity to display your company's support of our youth in a weekly directory publicizing the Y-Line in the Reporter-Telegram; a $350 sponsorship will get you the same directory ad, plus an on-line sponsorship of one of the 25 categories available on the Y-Line.

For more information on how you can help, call Jimmy Patterson at 687-8852.

Gargoyles AND Scarecrow Sins

Above left, Lou Gene (Patty Loftis) and Lyla (Mary Lou Cassidy) take a break during Yahtzee so Lou Gene can take delivery of ice cream from her husband Kenny (Earl Keller) in this scene from Rick Hamby's "Gargoyles and Scarecrow Sins." Above right, Desdemona (Cindy Berger) works on Miss Opal (Nancy Daugherty), the town prostitute, whose death provides the focus of Rick Hamby's "Gargoyles and Scarecrow Sins."

For playwright and Howard County District Attorney Rick Hamby, right, "Gargoyles and Scarecrow Sins" is the first of his plays to be produced outside his hometown of Big Spring. Above, Darcy (Blake Spraggins) and Ruline (Marilyn Allen) say a few words over the fallen — and departed woman — in this scene from Rick Hamby's "Gargoyles and Scarecrow Sins." Below, undertaker Tanner (John Phillips) looks over some work as apprentice Pickle (G. Thomas Harlowe) dusts.

Playwright to see work come to life

'I know what sewer you're taking this conversation down, and you're wrong,'' Ruline tells Lyla. The two ''old friends'' are sitting up with Miss Opal's body at the Tanner Funeral Home in Big Spring.

''I'm not a prostitute.''

''If your definition of a prostitute is sleeping with someone to get what you want, then there are only two differences between you and Opal,'' Lyla says. ''The first is that Opal was good at it, and the second is you're still open for business.''

Midland Community Theatre veteran actresses Marilyn Allen (Ruline) and Mary Lou Cassidy (Lyla) appraise one another much as cats do when they are deciding whether to pounce or not.

Snickers can be heard coming from the back of the room where rehearsals for Midland Community Theatre's upcoming production of ''Gargoyles and Scarecrow Sins'' are in motion.

''Is that funny?'' interjects director Don Bachmann, directing his attention toward playwright Rick Hamby.

''Well, I hope so,'' Hamby replies.

Affirmative nods from around the room answer the question.

''She deserves it,'' Marilyn Allen said, speaking of Lyla's comments to Ruline. ''She is absolutely so tunnel-visioned in her project for the Divine Buick.''

The Divine Buick?

''She's married money, and her husband owns the Buick dealership,'' Ms. Allen said.

She said Ruline is determined to raise money for a proposed religious shrine and name it the Shrine of the Divine Buick.

Actually, the action in ''Gargoyles and Scarecrow Sins'' begins when Miss Opal dies, and Big Spring residents wonder where to put her remains.

Back in 1962, Opal, Ruline and Lyla were friends at Big Spring High School. Then Miss Opal became the town prostitute, while Ruline and Lyla became pillars of the community.

''We're not real sure why we became enemies,'' Ms. Cassidy said, speaking of the relationship between her character and Ruline.

''We were best friends in high school, but now we are not. Maybe I drive an Olds instead of a Buick.''

Additionally, all three are members of the exclusive Imperatorial Order of the Daughters of Diana. A requirement of the membership is that three members must sit with the body of a deceased member. That is what brings Rulene and Lyla together at the funeral home, along with Lou Gene, played by Patty Loftis, another classmate and sorority member.

''We are going to have a live dead person in the casket,'' Ms. Cassidy said.

''She is going to have to be very, very still. And we hope she doesn't get the giggles.''

Others in the production, which opens Friday at Theatre Midland, include John Phillips as Tanner, G. Thomas Harlowe as Pickle, Cindy Burger as Desdemona, Earl Keller as Kenny, Blake Spraggins as Lil'Davy and Mike Harrell as Mr. Fant.

Don Bachmann, MCT executive director, is director. Stage manager is Max Howard.

''It's exciting to be a part of a new work,'' Ms. Allen said. ''Every time Rick comes there's some more refinement to it. We are honing and polishing it to his and Don's satisfaction.

"I think it's going to be, hopefully, very well accepted. It is one of the funniest plays I've ever read."

Ms. Cassidy also finds it "very exciting" to be performing in a new work and have the opportunity to talk with the playwright at rehearsals.

"He listens to our input on line changes," Ms. Cassidy said. "So often, the playwright doesn't know what we do to his play. But with Rick there, we can actually get his blessings on some of the changes, and he does take suggestions."

"We haven't done too many original plays at the theater, and it sure is nice to be able to do one, especially with the playwright close by," Ms. Allen said.

"I personally would like for us to do more readings (of original scripts)."

As head of the McLaren Playwriting Competition, Ms. Cassidy feels a special affinity for this play, which won the McLaren competition in 1993.

"I feel like it's my baby a little bit," Ms. Cassidy said. "This is the first McLaren winner that has become part of the season and been produced as a full-scale production.

"I read this play in January of 1993 and have been waiting for its production ever since."

She was eager to tryout for the role of Lyla.

"She is a great deal like Ouiser in 'Steel Magnolias' and just about has a laugh line ever time she opens her mouth," Ms. Cassidy said. "They don't write these very often and you grab them when you can find them."

Ms. Allen auditioned because she was particularly interested in playing Ruline.

"I find the character intriguing. And she represents, for the most part, what I detest in human beings — being a hypocrite," she said. "It's an excellent role, as most unlikeable characters are generally good parts. And I haven't played a good witchy role since I have been in Midland.

"And I thought it would be a good change for me since I enjoy doing Shakespeare and period pieces and this is about as far a switch as you can get."

The production, which is co-produced by Parker & Parsley, will be on stage in Davis Theatre One through June 18. Tickets are priced at $6 and $8. Parental guidance is advised. For reservations call 682-4111.

Hamby, who is Howard County district attorney, is pleased that MCT thought enough of his third play to produce it on the main stage.

"It's a great feeling to see it come to life in much the way that you had it pictured in your mind," Hamby said. "It's been a thrill for me dealing with quality actors and quality directors. It's a real treat.

"And, I definitely want to mention the professionalism of MCT — the really fine actors that participated in this thing both at the reading theater and in the rehearsal for the big show.

"And the directors — Rene Brister Chambers (who directed the Readers Theater presentation) and Don Bachmann. I'm in awe of his ability, and he's had a lot of suggestions for me.

"I thought Rene Brister Chambers during the Readers Theater and Don Bachmann have an innate understanding of what I wanted to say and never let that get lost."

Those who attended the Readers Theatre production in August will find the show has undergone some changes, Hamby said.

"The thrust of the script, the moral to be pulled from the story has not been changed, but there are some rewrites. It's a different enough script to make it worth someone's while who perhaps saw it in the Readers Theater to see it on the big stage."

This marks Hamby's third play and the third one to be performed. The theater in Big Spring produced his first two. He also has two novels with his agent.

"That's really my first love," Hamby said of writing novels. "And that's how playwriting came about. It was an exercise in dialogue."

Hamby has written in one form or another all of his life, but he became serious about it in the last six to eight years.

"Being an attorney is what feeds my family," said the Big Spring native. "As they say — the closest thing to the film industry and to stage acting I have gotten is the old axiom, 'You better not quit your day job.' "

He is particularly intrigued by life in a small town.

"The foibles and idiosyncrasies of a small town are of great amusement to me," Hamby said. "A small town is rife with subject matter for a play."

Yet, Hamby does not claim to have strong powers of observation.

"Even a blind hog finds an acorn every now and then," he said. "And even though observation many not be one of my strong characteristics, living here all my life — just by osmosis — you're bound to pick up a little bit.

"And trying to find grist for a play certainly makes you more observant. I've probably become a more observant student of human nature since I got interested in writing."

Hamby agreed that writing is demanding, yet "it's not without its enjoyment. By getting involved in characters, they sort of come to life. I figuratively go to bed with my characters at night and wake up with them the next day."

His writing isn't motivated by money.

"It's not a money thing," Hamby said. "Money would be nice. It's just something I enjoy doing.

"Like a lot of people play golf for the sheer pleasure of it without any thought they are going to be on the PGA tour. I'm a much better writer than I am a golfer, and that's not bragging, believe me. I'm a hacker at both."

Apparently the McLaren Playwriting Competition readers disagree. Hamby has again won the McLaren competition and his play "Maggie's Dance" will be presented in a Readers Theatre on Aug. 19 and Aug. 20.

"It's not quite as uproarious," Ms. Cassidy said. "It's a little bit different kind of comedy, but I think if people like this one, they will want to come see that one as well."

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, MAY 29, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A special relationship will become more harmonious. Make certain your romantic partner is also your best friend. Getting down to brass tacks will help you move closer to a career goal. Turn on the charm when dealing with people in a position to influence your future. A financial situation will come to a head in December. Vacation travel is indicated. Postpone a business trip until early in 1995.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: legendary comedian Bob Hope, actress Annette Bening, baseball player Eric Davis, producer Stacy Keach Sr.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Romance could have you walking on air. An excellent day for creative projects. Beautify your home or go through your wardrobe. Your intuitive energies are strong.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Talk with your mate or family about ways to cut expenses. Try delegating more responsibilities to school-age offspring. Phoning or writing a relative who has been on your mind makes you feel good.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Attending church in a different neighborhood can be fun. You may want to spend part of the day catching up on household chores or relaxing. The choice is yours.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be wary of free advice. Someone who makes a suggestion could be misinformed. It may be time to change some of your priorities. Reading expands your horizons.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A burst of energy enables you to accomplish a lot today. You find that physical activity relieves tension. Get in touch with old friends. Write or call someone who has been in your thoughts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Draw on the knowledge of your allies if you become a trifle confused today. They can guide and comfort you when doubts surface. Be tactful when asking romantic partner to curb an annoying habit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Come to an agreement with someone whose good will means a lot to you. Togetherness should be your ultimate goal. Family entertainment can be fun without being expensive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A wonderful day to pay an overdue visit to a friend or relative. Call someone you may have neglected recently. Submit a vacation idea for the consideration of the entire family.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Socializing or sightseeing will make this a fun day. You may go farther than you had anticipated. Put mate's desires ahead of your own.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The emphasis today is on making a contribution. Ideas are afloat which could improve your financial position. Analyzing a competitor's resources proves valuable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Tune in to other people this morning and find out the direction they want to go. Saying "no thanks" to a risky business proposition is wise. Romance is on hold.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Stay upbeat about a close relationship. The two of you can probably work things out if you are patient. Just be careful not to let partner think that you are a pushover.

TODAY'S CHILDREN: Life with a Gemini youngster will never be dull. Fiercely independent and headstrong, these tots will let you know exactly how they feel about almost everything! Although these highly intelligent Gemini can succeed in almost any career, they have a flair for the dramatic and will probably be happiest in acting or sales. Somewhat capricious in romance, they may be reluctant to marry. It is the pursuit of love that interests them, not the idea of a long-lasting relationship.

Opening lead: Queen of ◇

Would you back a team of yesterday's stars against a squad of today's greatest? When it comes to the play of the cards, the household names of the golden years of bridge would more than hold their own. But this era's players would run rings around their opponents in the bidding.

This hand was played almost 60 years ago by Willard Karn, among the finest players of his time. Indeed, the auction would be a model of precision even by today's standards. Although South's heart rebid showed no extra strength, since it was made after declarer had bid two suits, it certainly guaranteed at least a six-card suit. North needed no further encouragement.

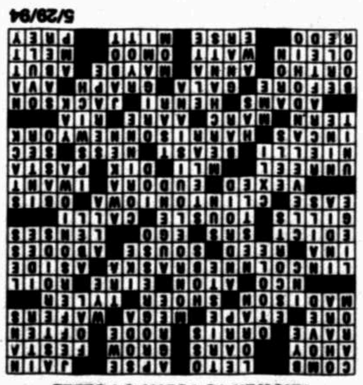

West led the queen of diamonds and declarer's problem was entries to hand. A successful finesse in either hearts or clubs would probably assure the contract if declarer could get to hand to take them.

Karn solved the problem easily—he overtook the king of diamonds with the ace to run the queen of hearts. West did not cover. A second trump finesse ran the risk that East was holding up the king of hearts, so declarer could not afford to try it again. Instead, declarer ran the ten of clubs. When that held, declarer repeated the club finesse, cashed the ace of hearts and the ace of clubs and, as the cards lay, made all the tricks.

Note how carefully declarer tackled the hand. The key was to keep West off lead early in the play to prevent a potentially fatal shift to a spade through the king.

■ Entertainment offered

"Summer in the City," a new performing arts series, will offer free entertainment weekly this June and July at Centennial Plaza.

Each session, which will run from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Thursdays, will include one performing group, one artist painting or sketching, and "something else."

The first performance, Thursday, will be a 1930s-style musical salon called "Then and There" featuring singers Pam Six and Jami Owen and singer-pianist Steve Porterfield. The evening will include a mix of '30s songs, show tunes and opera.

During the evening, artist Charlotte Seay will be working on a watercolor painting. Her painting "Murmur of the Dove's Song" was recently dedicated at High Sky Children's Ranch. Midland's Lawn Chair Precision Marching Team will strut their stuff.

Sandwiches, hot dogs, salads, brownies, cookies, cheesecake, fresh squeezed lemonade, soft drinks, wine and beer will be available from 7:15-9 p.m. at Sonny's in the Park on the south side of Centennial Plaza.

Adults interested in performing in the "Summer in the City" series are asked to call Linda Bond, producer of the series, 684-6459.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Book drive planned

A book collection drive is being planned by The Friends of the Library for 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. June 6-10 at the West Building, corner of Colorado Street and Ohio Avenue.

Those bringing books are asked to use the Ohio Avenue entrance.

The organization's annual book sale, held to benefit the Midland County Public Library, is set for Oct. 13-16. At that time, the organization will sell all the books it has collected throughout the year. Hardbacks are sold for 50 cents and paperbacks are sold for 25 cents.

The organization usually has more than 35,000 books for sale. The sale raises around $20,000 each year.

Book donations are tax deductible and receipts are available upon request. In addition to the book drive, book donations are accepted from 9 a.m. to noon on Wednesdays at the same location.

■ Company to perform

ODESSA — The Kaleidoscope Company of the Permian Playhouse was invited to perform in the upcoming Texas Non-Profit Theatre Convention in Dallas this weekend.

The TNT conference is an annual event designed to bring information to non-profit theaters across the state. In even-numbered years, the focus is on theater for youth and its impact on the community.

"Because the Permian Playhouse has such a strong commitment to youth theater, this year the Kaleidoscope Company has been invited to perform 'Rapunzel' as part of the conference," said a release from Christopher J. Olsen, Permian Playhouse educational director. "This is a tremendous honor since the Kaleidoscope Company will be one of only two performing groups at the conference."

Olsen will present two seminars relating to youth theater during the conference. One session deals with acting for young audiences and the other focuses on bilingual theater.

■ Outdoor concert set

Recording artist Ronna Reeves is to performs an outdoor concert at Midland's Cactus Moon Friday.

The Big Spring native's Mercury Records album features "What Comes Naturally," "Waitin' for the Phone to Ring," "This Can't Be Anything But Love," "How Could You" and "He's My Weakness."

The Friday concert kicks off the second annual KNFM "Country Fest."

Gates open at 4 p.m. Saturday for a music festival that features four live bands including Midnight Stampede, Johnny Blaine and the Spur Band, Showdown and Jerry Dugan and Westwind.

Saturday's activities also feature Cactus Moon's first chili cookoff and a new truck show provided by Jack Sherman.

For more information call Cactus Moon or KNFM radio.

■ Opree presented

ODESSA — The Globe Theatre will present the Odessa Brand New Opree at 7 p.m. Saturday.

The Southern gospel portion, which begins at 7 p.m., will feature Cecil Hart, Jayson Hart and Charles Shuffield.

The country portion of the program, which begins at 8 p.m., will feature the opree's Stage Band of the Month — Charlie Brannon, Randy Thompson, Danny Walker, Greg Smith and Don Armstrong. Singers will include Donna Brannon, Candy Thompson, Amada Brannon and Clark Bond.

Tickets are $5 for reserved seats and $3 for general admission. For more information or advance tickets call 1-332-1586.

The Globe Theatre is on the Odessa College campus, 2308 Shakespeare Road.

■ Director to teach

Anne Burton Avery, former director of Permian Civic Ballet, will be teaching at Coleman Academy, the Colonnade at Polo Park, Suite A-7, June 25-30.

Ms. Avery began her dance training at the Atlanta School of Ballet.

When she was 16, George Balanchine gave her a Ford Foundation scholarship to the School of American Ballet. He then invited her to join the New York City Ballet, with which she toured the United States, Europe and the former Soviet Union.

Ms. Avery became director of Midland's Permian Civic Ballet in 1980. She directed the Midland ballet for several years, appearing simultaneously with Skibine's Dallas Ballet.

■ Hilton hosts series

The Midland Hilton and Towers is sponsoring "My Dinner with the Winemaker" on June 9.

The winemaker will be Jim Didier of the Schieffelin & Somerset Wine Co. He will spend time at each table during the course of the evening. As the evening progresses, Charles Sandifer, the hotel's executive chef, and Didier will discuss the chosen dishes and wine parings.

The evening will begin with a champagne reception at 7 p.m. in the lobby. Dinner will be served in the Santa Fe Grill. Cost is $40. For reservations call 683-0445.

"My Dinner With the Winemaker" is one of a series of evenings the Hilton will be hosting over the next few months.

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARIES

Sandra Wegner

The downtown library, 301 W. Missouri, will be operating on a different schedule this week and most of the summer. Monday is Memorial Day and the downtown library and Centennial Branch at Midland Park Mall will be closed.

Beginning Tueaday, the downtown library will begin summer hours of operation. The library will be open on Mondays 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Tuesdays through Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. There will be no change in the Centennial Branch schedule. It will continue to be open 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

The downtown library in the Rosalind Redfern Building will resume winter hours August 22. The downtown library attempts to follow the public school schedule as much as possible. Because the Midland Independent School District is having a short summer vacation, the library will resume winter hours much earlier than we have in past years.

School ends and the summer reading program begins. Come in now and get your schedule of events. If your child doesn't have the new green library card with the bar code, he/she will need to get a green library card. If you want to avoid the crowd, get the card before June 6.

Parents must sign for children's library cards and must bring identification with a current address to the library to obtain a new card.

The good times start June 6 when boys and girls may pick up their reading logs to record what they read between June 6 and July 30.

Reading 10 or more books qualifies the young reader for prizes and chances in drawings.

Some fun events have been scheduled on every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday for eight weeks. The library is grateful to volunteers Annalon Gilbreath, Robert and Adam Kahle, Ritzie Williford, Linda Newkumet, Vivian Moss and Vicky Welch for helping the Children's Department with programming.

Officially summer has not arrived, so it isn't too late to refer to spring cleaning (if anyone does that). The Friends of the Library are ready to take some of your clutter. Just bring those books, paperback and hardcover, that you no longer want and give them to the Friends for their October used book sale. Monday through Friday, June 6-10, between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m., volunteers will be ready to take your donations at the Friends book drop on the corner of 401 N. Colorado and Ohio avenues. While the Friends are ready to take your donations on Wednesday mornings through out the year, this week in June, the Friends will be collecting Monday through Friday.

If you have used magazines to part with, bring them to the downtown library foyer. The Friends sell magazines for 10 cents a piece all year to benefit the library.

Last summer when the library basement flooded, the library telephone and city directory collection received quite a bit of public attention. We have several requests for current telephone directory information that we couldn't supply.

CD-ROM to the rescue. The library now has Phone Disc for U.S. business and other nonresidential address and telephone numbers.

A recent gift to the library by the Friends is a computer work station complete with CD-ROM for the Reference area upstairs in the main reading room. Patrons may access information on specific CD-ROM sources, among them Phone Disc. During the year Phone Disc will be updated to keep the information as current as possible.

We still receive donations of old and new directories from the public and from Southwestern Bell and GTE for the basement collection.

The library also has PROPHONE, a CD-ROM program for U.S. residential telephone numbers. This is on the Genealogy Department computer in the Special Collections Room. It is not as current as Phone Disc but it does greatly expand our telephone directory sources.

It's budget time in Midland County. Department heads send their fiscal year 1995 funding requests to the courthouse and wait to see what happens. The county's fiscal year begins in October and ends the following September.

Midland County provides important and essential services, some mandated by higher government. Public libraries have no higher government mandate: public libraries need your mandate. Let our County Officials know how important the library is to you and your community.

Sandra Wegner is director of Midland County Public Library.
