Wide-open race could mean surprise winner

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

When Jose Cuevas announced his decision last month not to run for mayor, it meant a wide-open race could emerge, one filled with suspense and lots of surprises.

■ Related story/4A

Weeks later Midlanders are finding out just how wide open that race really is and what a predicament the city's "winner by plurality" voting system could mean. Because while filed candidates — Mike Canon, Bill Dingus and Buddy Sipes — offer a choice, the three and Dale Brown, who could announce his candidacy sometime next week, don't offer much of a contrast.

All are expected to focus on Midland's up-and-down economy and support some kind of economic diversification.

Indeed, the differences aren't that obvious, or at least, there may not be anything so great it could rally enough people to list one candidate as the frontrunner. Having someone win by a majority — at least 51 percent — on May 5 seems highly unlikely at this point. Winning by a plurality (simply receiving the most votes among all candidates on the ballot) seems much more likely, which could favor a late-entering darkhorse later on.

"Someone could steal this election," Cuevas said. "Someone could have less than 30 percent and win the election. That could be the difference. A darkhorse, who no one had an eye on, could sneak in quickly, because if you look at it, three of those candidates are cut from the same fabric and it makes it difficult for them. This thing is wide open."

Defense claims DNA tests clear man convicted of girl's murder

By Susan Parrott
Associated Press

DALLAS — New DNA tests on hair samples do not link convicted killer Michael Blair with the 1994 slaying of Plano 7-year-old Ashley Estell, for which he was sent to death row, the Texas Attorney General's Office said Friday.

Hair samples and a fiber from a stuffed toy were the key physical evidence that Collin County prosecutors used to link Ashley and Blair, who was a convicted child molester.

A forensic laboratory, Mitotyping Technologies of Pennsylvania, performed DNA tests on two previously untested hair fragments and retested a strand of hair found on the floorboard of Blair's car.

"Recent DNA testing confirmed that hairs found on the victim's body and hairs found in Blair's vehicle do not belong to either Blair or the victim," said Jane Dees Shepperd, a spokeswoman for Attorney General John Cornyn.

She said the new tests used technology not available when Blair was on trial.

Cornyn's office filed a motion Friday asking the case be dismissed in federal court so it can be returned to state court for review.

A forensic expert testified at the 1998 trial, which was held in Midland on a change of venue, that the strand microscopically matched Ashley's hair. However, results in June from a DNA test performed at a North Carolina lab hired by Blair's attorneys showed it "could not have originated from Ashley Estell."

Defense attorney Roy Greenwood said the latest tests prove his client did not kill Ashley.

"Ninety-nine percent of the state case is gone," Greenwood said.

Some teachers scoff at yet another boost for beginners

By Danielle Belton

Does newer equal better?

Many area educators are starting to believe the Midland Independent School District thinks so. MISD's latest plan to study the possibility of raising salaries for beginning teachers is raising eyebrows among local teachers.

While most agree the more money the better, many feel it sends the wrong message to teachers who have more than a few years under their belt. Many contend MISD's latest move sends the message that teachers are disposable.

"Our concern is that they are not paying us for our experience," said Midland Classroom Teachers Association President Shelley Reep. "A five-year teacher is a much better teacher than a zero experience teacher. A 10-year teacher has a lot more experience that a zero-year teacher does. We do not feel we're being paid for our experience."

During Tuesday's school board meeting, MISD Executive Director of Human Resource Services Tom Holland said MISD needs to raise its starting teacher salary from $31,000 to $32,000 per year in order to stay competitive. That new figure — $32,000 — is how much a five-

Greenspan defends Fed actions, says slowdown could have been worse

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan on Friday rejected suggestions the economy slowed dramatically because the central bank bungled the handling of monetary policy. He said the Fed's string of rate increases that ended in May probably prevented an even more severe slowdown.

Greenspan told members of the House Budget Committee he did not accept the view of critics that the Fed, which was raising rates through May of last year, had waited too long to begin reducing rates in the face of growing signs of economic weakness.

Instead, Greenspan said that had the Fed moved too soon to cut rates, it could have forced an even larger adjustment than is currently occurring. Greenspan has said previously that he believes economic growth at present is close to zero but that the economy is not in a recession.

"In retrospect, I see nothing that we did that was inappropriate in terms of policy," Greenspan said in response to questions.

Greenspan would not be pinned down on whether the Fed, as widely expected, will deliver a third rate cut when it next meets on March 20. The Fed reduced rates twice in January in response to the rapidly slowing economy.

But Greenspan repeated that the central bank sees no signs inflation is threatening to get out of control, despite the sharp rise in energy costs.

"We think inflation at the moment is very well contained," Greenspan said, a comment indicating that the central bank could cut rates further without triggering price pressures.

On Wall Street, stock indices fluctuated broadly. Shortly after midday, the Dow Jones industrial average was up 75 points and the Nasdaq index had recovered most of the day's loss but was still down 22 points.

Greenspan repeated his views that the government's budget surpluses have grown so large that there is room to cut taxes. But again he refused to specifically endorse President Bush's $1.6 trillion package as the correct size.

That is a judgment call for Congress and the administration, he said.

Much of Greenspan's testimony Friday was identical to his Jan. 25 comments to the Senate Budget Committee.

However, he changed a section in which he had argued that it would be harmful to allow the federal government to use the surpluses to accumulate sizable holdings in the private sector, either by buying stocks of publicly traded companies or by buying corporate debt.

> 'Over time, having the federal government hold significant amounts of private assets would risk sub-optimal performance by our capital markets, diminished economic efficiency and lower overall standards of living than would be achieved otherwise.'
> — Alan Greenspan, Federal Reserve chairman

"I doubt that it is possible to secure and sustain institutional arrangements that would insulate federal investment decisions, over the long run, from political pressures," Greenspan said.

"Over time, having the federal government hold significant amounts of private assets would risk sub-optimal performance by our capital markets, diminished economic efficiency and lower overall standards of living than would be achieved otherwise."

Greenspan's remarks five weeks ago provided a major boost for Bush's big tax cut and left Democrats fuming that the Republican Greenspan was modifying his position to accommodate the new GOP administration.

Greenspan for a number of years had repeatedly said that the No. 1 use of the budget surplus should be to reduce the national debt.

As he did in his January appearance, Greenspan explained the switch Friday by saying that the size of the surplus projections has grown so large — now $5.6 trillion over the next 10 years — that there is enough room to pay down the debt and provide a significant tax cut.

Bush on Tuesday used his first address to a joint session of Congress to urge quick passage of his tax plan to give a boost to the weak economy.

Republicans in the House heeded that call and the Ways and Means Committee on Thursday approved by a party-line vote the key element of the tax proposal, a cut in individual tax rates worth $1 trillion over 10 years.

The Fed chairman on Friday repeated his comments about the difficulty in reducing the national debt to zero, which had been a goal of the Clinton administration.

Greenspan said the government must face the fact that there is a "rising cost" of buying back debt that bond holders may want to keep.

Bush's $1.96 trillion budget, which he unveiled on Tuesday, abandoned the goal of eliminating the entire $3.2 trillion publicly held national debt, saying that $1.2 trillion of that would be too costly for the government to buy back.

Democrats have charged that change was made to provide more of a cushion for Bush's $1.6 trillion tax cut.

The Fed has cut rates twice, by one-half percentage point each time, on Jan. 3 and Jan. 31, the first time in Greenspan's 13-year tenure at the central bank that rates have been reduced by a full percentage point in a single month. Many investors believe the central bank will cut rates again at their next meeting on March 20.

Dozen Mississippi teachers lose licenses in testing scandal

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A dozen Mississippi teachers have been stripped of their licenses for allegedly cheating on competency tests by paying up to $1,000 to exam supervisors for extra time and help with answers.

The 12 were among 52 teachers from Mississippi, Georgia, Louisiana, Tennessee and Arkansas who investigators say took part in the cheating scheme in 1998 at Philander Smith College in Little Rock, Ark. The college has not been accused of wrongdoing.

Three of the Mississippi teachers pleaded guilty earlier this year to federal charges ranging from lying to a grand jury to conspiracy to commit wire fraud.

Eight teachers surrendered their licenses last week and four others who contested the charges had their licenses suspended or revoked, said Doris Smith, chairwoman of the state Commission on Teacher and Administrative Education.

The test, required of teachers in 34 states to gain certification, involves a four-hour general knowledge examination and a survey of the candidate's subject matter. The service then turned over all evidence to the FBI.

Bush faces tough choices on multibillion dollar weapons

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush is facing some tough choices on the future of big-ticket military weapons.

The Air Force's $62 billion F-22 stealth fighter program, the Navy's $25 billion DD-21 destroyer, the Marine Corps' troubled $41 billion V-22 Osprey program and the developing $200 billion Joint Strike Fighter fleet are all candidates for the budget ax.

Bush has made clear that his first priority for the military is to put more money in the pockets of American troops and their families. The politically tougher choices of where to invest in weapons modernization are yet to be made, with the exception of Bush's commitment to a national missile defense — which could cost $60 billion or more.

"In our broader transformation effort, we must put strategy first, then spending," Bush told Congress this week. On Wednesday the administration unveiled a $310 billion defense budget but included few spending specifics; details are expected to come in April.

During visits to military bases in mid-February, Bush said the advances he foresees in defense technologies will require "great effort and new spending."

To afford those increases — and to fit Pentagon priorities with the Pentagon strategy being built by Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld — some weapons programs presumably will get cut, delayed or scaled back.

The question is which ones.

"They don't want to commit themselves to anything until this (Rumsfeld) review is finished," said Jack Spencer, a defense analyst at the Heritage Foundation, a think tank.

Rumsfeld has called on a range of expertise inside and outside the Pentagon to look at such central issues as a new strategic concept of what the military should be used for; ways of improving Pentagon financial management; prospects for reducing U.S. nuclear forces, and the most effective approach to building a defense against ballistic missiles for the United States and its allies.

Until preliminary results are in — perhaps as early as April — neither Rumsfeld nor the president is likely to answer the many questions that have been raised about the future of major weapons programs.

Among those thought to be in jeopardy:

Military projects on the bubble

Here are some big-ticket weapons programs that are in danger of being cut by the Bush administration. President Bush said his priority is the American troops while his advisers examine priorities for weapons modernization.

Name	V-22 Osprey	Joint Strike Fighter	DD-21 Destroyer	F-22 Raptor
Total budget	$41 billion	$200 billion	$25 billion	$62 billion
Number in fleet	458 are planned, only eight exist now.	Prototypes exist, 2,852 are planned.	On the drawing board, 32 are planned.	Prototypes exist, 339 are planned.
Purpose	Replace the Vietnam-era helicopters, which are breaking down at an alarming rate.	Combat for the Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps.	With a crew of only 95 sailors, tailored for land attack warfare.	Replace the F-15E Strike Eagle, which is used for ground attack and other missions.

■ The V-22 Osprey, a centerpiece of the future of Marine Corps aviation. The hybrid aircraft, which takes off and lands like a helicopter and flies like an airplane, was in trouble even before Bush took office. After a December crash — the second fatal Osprey accident in nine months — the Pentagon created an outside panel to review the entire program. At stake: a decision on whether to begin full-scale production. The Marines are desperate to get a fleet of Ospreys to replace Vietnam-era CH-46E combat assault helicopters and CH-53D transport helicopters, which are breaking down at an alarming rate.

Vice President Dick Cheney tried to kill the V-22 program in 1989 when he was defense secretary, but Congress rescued it. So far $12 billion has been spent on it; another $29 billion is planned.

■ The next-generation strike aircraft, known as the Joint Strike Fighter, with a price tag of $200 billion. The plan, still on the drawing boards, is to build versions for the Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps. William Cohen, the defense secretary during President Clinton's second term, called the plane the "only affordable solution" to sustaining the military's fighter force through the year 2050.

Andrew Krepinevich, director of the Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments, says Bush should cancel the Joint Strike Fighter and put more resources into developing "unmanned combat air vehicles," the kind of leap-ahead technology that the president has said he finds attractive.

■ The Navy's DD-21, a next-generation destroyer tailored for land attack warfare. The Navy wants to build 32 of these, with construction to begin in 2005, at a total cost of $25 billion.

Loren Thompson of the Lexington Institute think tank says the DD-21 is the most vulnerable of the Navy's ship construction projects, although he notes that politics could play an important role: the two shipyards involved are in Maine — home of Republican Sen. Olympia Snowe, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee — and Mississippi, home of Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, also a Republican.

■ The Air Force's F-22 Raptor stealth fighter, to replace the F-15E Strike Eagle. The price tag is $62 billion for 339 planes, and it is priority No. 1 for the Air Force. If push comes to shove, Thompson thinks the Air Force would advocate keeping the F-22 program at the expense of the Joint Strike Fighter.

Man convicted in slaying of 8-year-old murder witness

WATERBURY, Conn. (AP) — A man was convicted of conspiracy Friday in the slaying of an 8-year-old murder witness and the boy's mother.

But the jury acquitted Adrian Peeler, 25, of the most serious charges — murder and capital felony — which could have brought the death penalty. Peeler could get up to 20 years in prison for conspiracy to commit murder.

Peeler was accused of shooting to death Leroy "B.J." Brown Jr. and his mother, Karen Clarke, in their Bridgeport home in 1999 to keep the boy from testifying against Peeler's drug-dealing brother, Russell Peeler

At the time, Russell Peeler was awaiting trial on charges of murdering Clarke's boyfriend.

The murders of Leroy and his mother led to changes in Connecticut's witness protection laws. Protection for Leroy had been withdrawn at Clarke's request because she found the police presence intrusive.

DNA: Girl was abducted from soccer field

(From 1A)

"The last 1 percent is that Blair was in the county" when Ashley was abducted.

Greenwood said defense lawyers support returning the trial to a state court.

But the prosecuting district attorney said the new tests don't mean Blair is innocent.

"I think there's other sufficient evidence," said Collin County District Attorney Tom O'Connell. "I don't know that that would be the deciding factor."

Ashley was abducted from a crowded Plano soccer field. Her body was found a day later.

Blair, who has repeatedly said he is innocent, was scheduled for execution in July 1999, but the date was delayed when his attorneys moved his appeal to federal court.

Blair's case became the catalyst for "Ashley's Laws," a package of tough sexual-predator measures in Texas requiring longer prison terms and public registration for sex offenders.

Greenwood said he spoke to Blair Friday afternoon.

"He said 'Thank God. Finally.' But he's said that before," Greenwood said.

Five jurors from the case have said testimony about hair was the most compelling proof against him, although they noted they considered other factors.

In about 80 cases nationwide defendants have been released from prison because DNA cleared them.

Cuevas said 3,500 votes could very well deliver Midland's next mayor.

Other candidates are possible. Mike Conaway and Bill Williams also are listed as possible candidates. After those two, the guessing game continues. The filing period ends March 21.

Conaway, a past United Way chairman, has told the Reporter-Telegram he is leaning toward not running but is keeping his options open.

Williams told the Reporter-Telegram Tuesday he might enter the race if he doesn't see the changes he thinks are needed.

Talking to the official candidates, there is agreement that plurality could lead to a problem.

"It is entirely possible with no runoff," Sipes said. "It is something that we all have to be concerned with."

Canon, who filed for mayor on Friday, won his at-large seat on the City Council by gathering 27.71 percent of the vote in a seven-person race. He says a dark-horse still will have a lot of work to do. Earning 3,000-plus votes isn't easy, especially with the major issue (economic diversity) being something everyone will agree on.

"Theoretically (it is possible for someone to sneak in), but that's a lot of votes," Canon said. "You have to have a good following to garner 3,500 votes, even in Midland."

Regardless, though, a tight race is expected and each candidate will attempt to emphasize any difference there may be and use that to his advantage.

"No matter who they pick, the differences are minor," Dingus said. "But sometimes the minor differences can make big differences."

Again, candidates will first talk about the economy, which has been plagued over the past few years by the departure of oil companies and the loss of thousands of oil-related jobs. All will agree the city should look to diversify the economy.

On Tuesday, the Midland City Council voted 7-0 to award a contract to the general contractor picked to build the $45-plus million Scharbauer Sports Complex. Canon and Sipes agree it is time to move on. But Dingus expects to revisit the complex issue.

"The complex is still an issue with me," Dingus said. "It is an example of a problem which will not happen with me (as mayor) because I will be so up front and free with information on what is going on that there will not be a giant misunderstanding like that again."

Dingus also will dive into his plan for city improvements, which is highlighted by, but not restricted to, beautification.

Canon said the three official candidates are pretty close philosophically.

"I don't see a whole lot of differences in those type issues," Canon said. "Whether or not we can help the community accomplish things is not based on philosophical beliefs as much as our ability to lead. I wouldn't be in the race if I didn't think there was a difference in that category."

Sipes said when he publicly announced his intention to run for mayor that his platform emphasized three issues.

- economic diversification
- solid financial planning and execution
- working with other cities and entities

Sipes will venture off his economic platform from time to time, but his strength is in the economic numbers. He is the president of Chisos Operating and the chairman of the Midland-Odessa Transportation Alliance (MOTRAN). With every report from the Midland Assessment and Action Plan (MAAP), Sipes' expertise becomes more and more relevant to Midland's future.

All three filed candidates are in the beginning stages of their respective campaigns, setting financial backers, gathering campaign literature and distributing signs.

They were in agreement that until all candidates come forward, most campaigning will focus around getting their own respective names and ideas out and adding to their voting blocks.

OBITUARIES

Lena Norine Free Anderson

Lena Norine Free Anderson died Wednesday, February 28, 2001 in Midland, Texas.

Funeral services have been scheduled for 11:00 a.m., Saturday, March 3, 2001 at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Reverend Gary Groves officiating. Interment will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park, under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Lena Norine Free Anderson was born on July 9, 1916 in Callahan County, Texas to John Elbert and Nettie Jewel Free. Along with her family, she attended the Church of Christ of which her parents were charter members, and was baptized in "Deep Creek" in Callahan County. Lena grew up in Callahan County attending elementary school in Putnam, Texas and graduating from high school in Baird, Texas.

In high school she was active in sports activities and was a part of the debate team that went to the State debate meet in Ft. Worth, Texas. With her brother, Jack, she often participated in local rodeos where she rode her horse "Spotty" and barrel raced while Jack entered roping events. After graduating from high school, she attended Texas Technological College in Lubbock, Texas. She met and married B. G. Anderson ("Bill") in Wichita Falls, Texas on January 12, 1939. Their only daughter, Gigi, was born in Wichita Falls.

The Andersons moved to Midland in 1949 where Bill went to work for Plymouth Oil Company, and Lena began two new business ventures. She started the Midland Hostess Service, a welcome service for Midland's newcomers, a business that quickly won the sponsorship of the leading Midland merchants, and then, at the urging of several Midland physicians, including Dr. Dorothy Wyvell, Lena established and operated Midland's first telephone answering service for physicians and oil related industries.

After later selling both businesses, Lena worked for Pelletier Realtors. Her business activities always revolved around her wonderful people skills and her interest in them.

When Midlanders began work for the establishment of High Sky Children's Home, Lena worked tirelessly to get donations of money and supplies for their opening, and it remained a place near to her heart for her entire life. Because of her work on behalf of High Sky, she was Altrusa Club's Woman of the Year nominee the year High Sky opened.

She was never too busy to help others and was often helping young women find a means to go to college, by gathering clothes for them or assisting them in finding financial aid.

After Bill's retirement from Plymouth Oil, Lena and Bill eventually became a team of property managers, working for a number of years in Corpus Christi, Texas for Callaway Properties until they both retired in 1980. Lena and Bill were each other's best friends and were an unbeatable work team as well.

In recent years, Lena had resided at Trinity Towers and at Mabee Health Care Center where she made many new friends and continued her life-long interest in people. Two days before her death, she told Gigi of a new fellow who had moved in next door at Mabee and that she hoped to feel well enough soon to visit with him.

She was also looking forward to the summer birth of two new great-grandchildren.

Lena was predeceased by her parents, and by her husband, Bill Anderson, on May 9, 1984.

She is survived by her brother, Deering T. "Jack" Free of Big Spring, Texas, her daughter and son-in-law, Gigi and Aubrey Linne of Midland, her sister-in-law and best friend, Sarabeth Siddall of Midland, her niece and nephew, Mary and Paul Johnson of Albuquerque, New Mexico, her grandchildren, Kelly Owen and husband Steve of Midland, Kent Carlisle and wife, Heather of Rockwall, Texas, and Brandi Matheson and husband, Allen of Midland, and her great-grandchildren, Amanda and Kaltlin Owen, Nikki and Baylee Carlisle, and Aeryk Matheson, and many friends.

Lena once told her daughter that if she could pick an inscription for her grave marker, it would say, "Let me live by the side of the road and be a friend to man." Her many friends could testify that she was a very good friend who was never too busy to listen, to help, and to treat them to a bowl of her wonderful custard or homemade soup when they were sick.

She always cared about others and lived the Golden Rule, treating others as she wished to be treated — with interest and caring and love.

Memorials may be made to High Sky Children's Home.

Pallbearers are: Aubrey Linne, Kent Carlisle, Steve Owen, Rick Carlisle, Roy Blair, and Bill Cathey.

Honorary Pallbearers are: Paul Johnson, Kenneth George, Linn Pescaia, Jimmy O'Neil, and Sam Torres.

Brown keeps quiet on mayoral decision

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

Dale Brown is taking his time when it comes to making, or at least announcing, his decision concerning a mayoral run.

On a couple of occasions, Brown has stated an announcement would be coming in the next week, only to delay it again and add to the ongoing speculation — will he or won't he? Now or later? Is there a method to his timing or just plain political luck?

There is cause for speculation. Brown is a former city councilman and likely would be a major player if he opts to put his name on the ballot for the May 5 election.

There is also speculation Brown has been stalling in announcing, although he will deny it. Brown was a city councilman as recently as one year ago. The final council he was a member of was scrutinized heavily for its actions on a variety of issues, ranging from the Scharbauer Sports Complex to the manner in which former City Manager Mike McGregor left office.

With the current council having faced the biggest vote of its term this past Tuesday (to award a general contractor's contract), some political observers suggested he was putting off the announeement to gauge the reaction from the community to the council's decision.

But Brown said that was not the case.

"The sports complex was not a motivating factor (in putting off the decision to announce)," he said.

In fact, Brown was in Tyler last Tuesday as his granddaughter had a baby.

Still, it has been 25 days since Brown told the Reporter-Telegram he was "seriously considering" running. That announcement came days after Jose Cuevas fired the starting gun of the election race by stating his decision not to run.

Mike Canon decided to run. Buddy Sipes followed, and then on Monday of last week, Bill Dingus became the third announced candidate.

Brown does have a campaign treasurer (Jim Alsup), two co-finance chairmen (Wayne Merritt and Kyle Stallings) and a campaign chairman (Robert Rendall) and has had at least two of them penciled in for a while. So why not announce sooner? Is it a campaign strategy of some sorts? Brown says that would be reading too much into the lack of an announcement.

There have been reports that phone calls have been made to perspective voters, asking their beliefs on the issues that face Midland. Brown says he knows nothing about that, but says he has "talked to lots of folks firsthand, learned what they are thinking about and has been encouraged to run."

"The only factor I need (in making a decision) is making sure we are doing the right thing," Brown said. "The people of Midland are looking for responsible, conservative leadership."

RAISE: MISD's teacher pay gap with average tightens at mid-level

year teacher made this year. If the board approves the increase, all teacher salaries would have to be bumped up.

During the board meeting, Holland said the $1,000 increase was needed to attract the best teachers. That was the statement that initially rubbed many educators the wrong way, causing some to point out when it comes to teaching, older is better.

"We want the best," said Midland Federation of Teachers President Steve Buck. "The best are experienced teachers. The only way you can become a good teacher is to have experience. Now there are some fine beginning teachers but they become good teachers when they have experience."

Although MISD officials have stated all teacher salaries have gone up across the board by nearly $8,000 since the 1996-1997 salary schedule, local teachers said the problem is although MISD is above state average for beginning teachers, its pay scale is barely scraping the minimum when it comes to experienced teachers.

According to Midland Federation of Teachers Grievance Chairman Cindy Bond, the MISD salary schedule for teachers has become more and more compressed. Teachers are finding while MISD offers a good starting rate for new teachers, once they hit the eight-year mark there is very little salary movement.

"Raising the beginning salary to attract new young teachers is fine, but you need a salary that keeps them here too," Ms. Bond said. "In the middle (of the salary schedule) we're barely above state minimum. We've lost some really fine, really good, single and young married teachers after a year or two because they can make so much money going somewhere else."

According to Texas Education Agency and Texas Classroom Teachers Association data, there is a more than $5,000 difference between MISD's starting salary for beginning teachers and the state average, which is about $24,000. But at the 10-year level, there is only approximately a $1,000 difference. So while MISD is above state average in the mid-level salary range, the pay gap tightens. The gap begins to widen again around the 15-year mark to a $2,000 difference.

Currently, MISD has a 15 percent to 16 percent teacher turnover rate, Holland said. On average, the district will hire between 175 and 200 teachers a year. Most of those vacancies will be filled by new and beginning teachers. Ms. Reep said MISD has become a training ground for new teachers, who come in, take the high salary and get their experience, then leave the district for better paying jobs in places like Dallas and San Antonio.

MISD board of trustees President George Lara said the board is trying to work on incentives for teachers in its latest school plan. The board right now is discussing the idea of buying out teachers' unused discretionary days.

'Raising the beginning salary to attract new young teachers is fine, but you need a salary that keeps them here too.'
— Cindy Bond, Midland Federation of Teachers grievance chairman

Currently, MISD teachers get five discretionary days per year from the school district. Lara agreed that MISD is not very competitive when it comes to recruiting teachers in the mid-level salary range across the state.

"There's a disparity between the mid-level and bottom-level," Lara said. "We're not very competitive in the mid-level across the state."

Holland said MISD has not forgotten their current teachers and will be looking at a raise for them when the 2001-2002 school budget comes up for review. Holland said he is hopeful there will be a teacher raise this summer.

"My position is that teachers need and deserve an increase," Holland said. "It's a matter of timing. Right now it's recruiting season. We will address teacher needs during the regular budgeting process."

Although Buck said many beginning teachers leave after a few years with the district, Holland said the No. 1 reason why teachers leave MISD is because their spouse has been transferred to another community.

Holland's second reason for why teachers leave MISD is because "a small percentage leave the profession entirely." Although Buck's statements agreed with this, he said MISD is going to have to make some changes or Midland will be facing a teaching crisis. Buck said there are several direct correlations between teaching experience and test scores. He also said the district needs to realize the high turnover isn't from teachers retiring after spending several satisfied years with the district.

"If you look at the school directory you'll see that nearly 50 percent of them (teachers) are living in apartments," Buck said, pointing out people satisfied with their jobs purchase homes and set up permanent residence. "Does that sound like they want to stay?"

The school board will be discussing the salary increase again during the March 6 board meeting. They will make the final decision regarding the amount of the raise.

Phillips' 'last cast party' set today

By Georgia Temple
Entertainment Editor

Soft-spoken and outwardly retiring, John Phillips had a way of surprising those who didn't know him. For all his diplomacy, he was not a man to be ignored, especially on stage.

"He was a scene stealer," said his wife, Enid Phillips, recalling in particular his portrayal of Jethro Crouch in Midland Community Theatre's 1982 production of "Sly Fox."

"He had such a marvelous presence on stage," said Mary Lou Cassidy, a longtime participant in community theater here. "You would always watch John.

"I think he was a consummate example of a community theater volunteer. He was really the person that founded The Maverick Players. And he participated, just as recently as the end of January, in our Maverick Sampler readings. I was fortunate enough to read with him in a play called 'I'm Herbert,' and he was Herbert. And he was very funny."

No one who knew him would be surprised to hear Ms. Cassidy speak of his ability with comedy. John Phillips, who was born on Aug. 4, 1930, in Fort Worth, had a talent for the comedic.

On Wednesday, he took that talent with him to audition in front of a higher power. Today, his family and friends are holding "John's last cast party" from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

"I hope his ashes show up in time," Mrs. Phillips said. And then in true theater tradition, she added, "If not, we'll just go on without him."

The party was, after all, his idea. And he would expect the curtain to rise on time.

"John thought of it when Ron Hughes died," Mrs. Phillips said. "They had a party for Ron at the Yucca, and John said, 'When I go, this is what I want.' And so I said, 'OK, you'll get it.' "

"We all feel that this celebration of his life is something that he would approve of," said his father, Paul M. Phillips of Las Cruces, N.M. "He loved Midland. The last time he and I talked about it, he said, 'I am never going to live anywhere else for the rest of my life.'"

His serious heart condition had been with him for decades. When the couple moved to Midland in 1980, he was in "A Doll's House," then took a couple of months off for open-heart surgery. Six weeks after he left the hospital, he played Charlie Martin, the mailman, in "On Golden Pond."

He loved doing the olio bits in Summer Mummers, his wife said. Many Mummers' fans will remember Maynard and Maxine as well as two skits based on songs by Ray Stevens — "Gitarzan" and "The Streak."

"Whenever John was feeling sick, when it came time to go on the stage, the old adrenaline flowed, and he was up there enjoying life," Mrs. Phillips said.

His son, Steven Phillips of Midland, remembers with utmost affection his father's portrayal in "Arsenic and Old Lace," saying, "That was the one he kept doing over and over, and it was the first one I ever saw him do. ... I liked the play to begin with, and he just did a really great job."

He was the rabbi in MCT's 1991 production of "Fiddler on the Roof," Mark Twain in MCT's 1992 production of "Big River," and his wife said, most proud of being Col. Pickering in MCT's 1993 production of "My Fair Lady."

"He was always a joy to watch," said Ruth Cole, who has been involved in community theater here for decades. "He really was a very accomplished actor."

"When I think of John," said actress and educator Trudie Thomason, "I think of the passage from 'Harvey" when Elwood P. Dowd says, 'In order for a person to get on in life, they need to be oh, so clever or oh, so nice,' and John was both of those. He was as intelligent as he was gracious.'"

Denise Rich donations flowed after 'personal mission' e-mail

She made three donations to the library foundation totaling $450,000.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Denise Rich, ex-wife of pardoned fugitive Marc Rich, pushed nearly $500,000 toward Democratic causes after a Rich confidant sent an e-mail saying she should be sent on a "'personal' mission to NO1" — whom congressional investigators identify as President Clinton.

Republicans and a federal prosecutor in New York have been trying to find out whether there was a money-for-pardon deal in Clinton's grant of clemency to the billionaire commodities trader. Clinton has denied there was any "quid pro quo" for the pardon.

Rich, who fled the United States in 1983 rather than face racketeering and other criminal charges, was pardoned by Clinton on Jan. 20 just before George W. Bush assumed the presidency.

Records examined Friday show there was a flurry of donations from Denise Rich — who divorced Rich in 1991 — following the "personal mission" e-mail, which was released Thursday at a House Government Reform Committee hearing.

Clinton supporters have said Denise Rich's contributions to the Clinton presidential library project came months before talk of a presidential pardon request.

Indeed, she made three donations to the library foundation totaling $450,000 — $250,000 in July 1998, then $100,000 in August 1999 and finally $100,000 in May 2000, two months after the e-mail was written.

The March 18, 2000, e-mail by Rich representative Avner Azulay to Rich lawyer Robert Fink talks about sending Denise Rich "on a 'personal' mission to N01 with a well-prepared script. If it works, we didn't lose the present opportunity — until Nov — which shall not repeat itself."

The House committee's chairman, Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., suggested "NO1" was code for Clinton.

Fink didn't disagree that the reference was to the president. "It was not a code that we had, but I read it as you do," Fink told the committee at the hearing.

A seven-month flow of half a million dollars in contributions by Denise Rich followed the e-mail, starting with $50,000 to Hillary Rodham Clinton's Senate campaign on March 21. Other donations went to the Democratic Party, Mrs. Clinton's Senate campaign and President Clinton's library foundation.

Jack Quinn, Rich's attorney in pursuing the pardon and formerly Clinton's White House counsel, said he did not believe Denise Rich spoke to the president at that time about the pardon.

"I don't believe this was followed up on," he told the committee Thursday.

Committee officials looked at the names of 149 other large donors to the library foundation this week. On Monday, they expect to see how much certain donors gave and when. The review was to have occurred on Friday but was put off until the next week, officials said.

The Clinton foundation also was supplying a list of donors in response to a subpoena from New York U.S. Attorney Mary Jo White, who is conducting a criminal investigation into Clinton's pardon of Rich. Clinton issued a total of 140 pardons and 36 commutations in his final hours in office.

Report says blacks three times as likely to be special-ed students

WASHINGTON (AP) — Black public school students are three times as likely as whites to be categorized as needing special education services, making them subject to less demanding schoolwork, more restrictive classrooms and isolation from their peers, educational researchers said Friday.

In a series of 14 studies commissioned by The Civil Rights Project at Harvard University, researchers said they decided to address the issue after years of complaints from the NAACP and civil rights advocates nationwide.

"It was such a broad complaint that we decided it must be looked into seriously," said Gary Orfield of the civil rights project, who presented the research on Capitol Hill.

The studies, which looked at educational and legal issues in the nation's special education system, found that black students were nearly three times as likely as whites to be labeled "mentally retarded" and in need of special education services. The studies also found that, as the wealth of school districts rose, black male students were at greater risk of being disproportionately labeled "mentally retarded."

In five states — Connecticut, Nebraska, South Carolina, Mississippi and North Carolina — black students were more than four times as likely to be identified as mentally retarded than their white peers, the studies showed.

Latino students were underrepresented nationwide in special education classes, but tended to be overrepresented as their proportion of a school district's student body grew, the studies found.

"Across the board, this is a problem for minority students," said Daniel J. Losen, a lawyer for The Civil Rights Project who co-authored one of the studies.

Losen said special education programs, when used alongside regular classroom support, "can really do wonders for kids."

But in many places, he said, special education classes have become "a dumping ground for low-achieving students" who don't succeed in regular classrooms — often because classroom teachers are unprepared for the emotional and learning problems that many students suffer.

In many cases, special education classes isolate students from their peers and feature more uncertified teachers, a watered-down curriculum and over-reliance on IQ testing, the studies said. A placement in a special education class can also mean that a student's specific learning disability goes undiagnosed, the studies said.

Using 1997 Education Department data, the studies found that, nationwide, black students were 2.9 times as likely as whites to be identified as having mental retardation. They were 1.9 times as likely to be identified with an emotional disturbance and 1.3 times as likely to be identified with a specific learning disability.

Nationwide, American Indian students also were slightly more likely to be identified as mentally retarded, emotionally disturbed or with a specific learning disability.

A spokeswoman for Education Secretary Rod Paige said the department is awaiting the results of its own study on the issue, conducted by the National Academy of Sciences. The report will be issued as early as this summer, she said.

Paul Houston of the American Association of School Administrators said schools have known about such discrepancies for years. He said special education is often a school's only way to get needed counseling and special services for troubled or failing students.

"In some places, schools are confronted with kids who are not learning adequately, and they search for solutions," he said. "Special ed is one of those solutions. ... Realistically, in many cases, schools don't have those resources available to them, outside of the special ed system."

The NAACP in 1999 complained that a public school district in Virginia discriminated against black students, placing too many in special education classes and too few in gifted classes. A federal investigation found no evidence of discrimination against blacks in the Roanoke, Va., public schools.

Similar complaints by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People prompted the Harvard studies, Losen said.

The studies recommend that the Education Department and the U.S. Office for Civil Rights more aggressively enforce special education rules and that states intervene where minority students are overrepresented in such classes.

The studies also said high-stakes tests that determine whether students receive diplomas should be put on hold until schools can show that all students have had a "meaningful opportunity" to learn the material on the tests.

The studies said schools should help special education and regular classroom teachers work together, provide better training for all teachers in special education issues, provide better services for children with emotional disturbances and reduce classroom sizes overall.

Unions rally to preserve ergonomics regulations

By Leigh Strope
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Labor unions, struggling to block an attempted repeal of new safety rules, brought out workers like Ursula Stafford, a classroom assistant from New York, on Friday to describe careers wrecked and lives ruined by workplace injuries.

"Why did they use me and abuse me?" Stafford, 24, said, sobbing at a news conference arranged by the AFL-CIO. She said she was permanently injured when she had to lift a paralyzed, 250-pound student from a wheelchair.

She added the new federal ergonomics rules, under fire from businesses and their GOP allies in Congress, would have prevented the injuries.

For their part, business groups who oppose the regulations conducted their own lobbying effort in the run-up to an expected showdown vote next week.

"OSHA's rush to issue an ill-conceived, expensive and unscientific ergonomics standard is irresponsible government at its worst," said a U.S. Chamber of Commerce summary being handed out on Capitol Hill. "The rule will cost businesses billions of dollars, yet the benefits to workers — if any — are uncertain."

Several Democratic aides conceded privately the barring last-minute switches, the GOP likely has the votes to prevail in an attempt to overturn the regulations.

"It's going to be a tough battle, but we're going to win it," said Randy Johnson, vice president of the U.S. Chamber for labor and employee benefits.

As a result, Democrats were trying to determine whether they have the option under Senate rules of filibustering the measure.

GOP aides, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said the bill would be brought up quickly in the House if it passes the Senate, possibly within two or three days.

President Bush has not said whether he would sign the measure, although Republicans say they expect he would.

The Clinton administration issued the more than 600-pages of regulations in mid-November after a decade-long struggle by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration to regulate repetitive motion injuries.

The rules took effect Jan. 16, four days before President Bush took office. Businesses have until October to comply with the first regulation by distributing information to employees and begin the process of receiving and responding to injury reports.

Organized labor supports the rules, which could force companies to alter work stations, redesign facilities or change tools and equipment once employees are found to have sustained work-related injuries.

Business groups generally oppose them as too far-reaching, costly and unscientific and threatening to override existing workers' compensation laws. Several lawsuits have been filed to block them.

Republicans plan to bring the issue to the Senate floor as early as Tuesday under rules that require a swift vote, according to lobbyists, union leaders and GOP officials.

"Congress has no choice but to head off the devastating side effects of the Clinton ergo rule by dismantling it," Sen. Kit Bond, R-Mo., said Friday.

Stafford, a member of the United Federation of Teachers union, said she eventually fell while trying to lift the student, who toppled on top of her and caused spinal disc injuries that have delayed her pursuit of a college degree and require her to take pills daily, go to physical therapy twice a week and remain under the care of a neurologist and an orthopedist.

"I'm a young girl, and it hurts when I wear heels," she said, in tears.

Unions protested this week outside a National Association of Manufacturers meeting that Vice President Dick Cheney addressed. They also have been distributing information at work sites, showcasing workers with injuries, bombarding lawmakers with e-mails and phone calls and specifically targeting freshman lawmakers and several Democratic senators who voted against the rules last year.

The U.S. Chamber and other business groups also have been lobbying heavily and want lawmakers to move under the Congressional Review Act, a 1996 law that permits the House and Senate to pass legislation rejecting regulations issued by federal departments and agencies. The act would kill the regulations and prevent similar standards from being issued.

Unions contend that would effectively kill hope for any ergonomics standards.

OSHA estimates the rules would cost businesses about $4.5 billion in compliance costs but result in $9 billion in benefits by reducing injuries. Officials say 1.8 million workers in the United States have injuries related to ergonomics, with 600,000 missing work each year as a result.

Business organizations put the cost of compliance much higher, at more than $90 billion a year.

Like his dad, Bush uses Camp David frequently with family

By Sonya Ross
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — It's the weekend, and thousands of tourists are at the White House, snapping photos from outside the gates. But President Bush is not inside.

He is at Camp David, the only place where he can still drive, run with his two dogs and relax in privacy, the scenic hills of Maryland's Catoctin Mountains.

Unlike President Clinton — who typically went to the 143-acre camp only on holidays, such as Thanksgiving — Bush said he plans to be there every weekend unless he's giving a speech somewhere or is at his ranch in Texas.

"I intend, every chance I get, to go up," Bush said. "It's a good place to relax. It's also a good place to catch up on my work. I'm a little bit behind in my mail right now."

Camp David was the site of much Bush-family bonding during the presidency of Bush's father. The second Bush was keeping that tradition this weekend, spending it with his brother Marvin and sister Dorothy Bush Koch, who was married in 1992 at Camp David's chapel.

President Bush and his dog Spot walk with British Prime Minister Tony Blair following their lunch at Camp David, Md., in this file photo. While thousands of tourists are at the White House this weekend, the president will be at Camp David, the only place where he can still drive, run with his two dogs and relax in privacy.

So before the sun could disappear into evening Friday, the president and first lady Laura Bush — both still in navy blue business suits — strode hand-in-hand past applauding staffers and guests, stepped into their helicopter and were whisked off to the retreat, about an hour's drive — just over 55 miles — from the capital.

They also took along a few aides, including his national security adviser, Condoleezza Rice, and the Bushes' springer spaniel, Spot.

Camp David essentially is a collection of low-slung cabins, the largest of which, Laurel, has Bush's office, a big family room with a fireplace and a floor-to-ceiling window overlooking nearby woods.

Guests stay in various smaller cabins, each with a guest book chronicling who has been there before.

"You turn the pages, and it's reading recent American history," said senior adviser Karen Hughes, who spent last weekend at a cabin where the late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat slept.

Aides say Bush finds freedom at Camp David, as also the privacy he cherishes but gets now only in small doses. The place is heavily guarded by Marines, gates and surveillance cameras. The security allows Bush to do normal-guy stuff like watching movies and taking a morning jog in the clean mountain air.

"Here at the White House, he runs on a treadmill," said spokesman Ari Fleischer. "When he travels on the road, he'll often run on a treadmill at his hotel room. So it's an opportunity for him to run outdoors, which he appreciates."

Friday's trip was Bush's fourth to Camp David since he took office Jan. 20. He met there last week with Prime Minister Tony Blair of Britain. At one point, Bush took the wheel of a golf cart to take Blair and both their wives for a short drive.

After the Blairs left, the Bushes lingered an extra day and attended church at the chapel. Much of the weekend was spent working on the address Bush delivered Tuesday to a joint session of Congress.

The routines seemed to fit Bush's casual style. Last weekend, meals were family-style, hearty and quite Texan: tomato soup, grilled ham-and-cheese sandwiches, hamburgers, taco salads, chicken enchiladas with guacamole.

There is a bowling alley, a movie theater, ranges for horseshoe pitching and skeet shooting and, with the large Bush clan, always somebody to play with.

"My son had a great time running around outdoors with the kids," Hughes said. "They showed up for the meals. Otherwise, we didn't see them a lot."

FAA proposes new rules for flight entertainment systems

The proposed rules stem from an FAA investigation of the entertainment systems following the September 1998 crash of a Swissair plane flying to Geneva from New York.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Certain airlines would have to rewire their flight entertainment systems or keep them turned off during flights under new rules proposed Friday by the Federal Aviation Administration.

The proposed rules stem from an FAA investigation of the entertainment systems following the September 1998 crash of a Swissair plane flying to Geneva from New York. An electrical problem is suspected, though the cause remains under investigation.

In case of smoke, a burning smell, or an electrical short, airline crews would want to shut off nonessential electrical equipment to try to isolate the problem, but the entertainment systems on some aircraft can't be turned off without also shutting down other systems crucial to keeping the plane in the air.

FAA spokesman Les Dorr Jr. said the proposed rules were not connected to any possible cause of the Swissair accident, but the crash spurred the agency to begin looking at airplane entertainment systems.

At least 74 airplanes have entertainment systems that would need to be modified, most of them flown by American Airlines, Continental Airlines or Hawaiian Airlines.

The planes affected are certain Boeing, McDonnell Douglas and Airbus models.

Air carriers would have 18 months from the time the rule is adopted to make the necessary modifications. The FAA will accept comments on the proposal until next month.

Far-right crimes reach new peak as Germany struggles to respond

By Geir Moulson
Associated Press

BERLIN — Far-right crime in Germany last year reached the highest level since World War II, with offenses surging nearly 60 percent, new government statistics showed Friday, adding urgency to Germany's struggle against neo-Nazis.

After a year in which brutal far-right attacks grabbed attention worldwide, the German government is pursuing plans to outlaw a far-right political party and even considering a ban on jackboots and other typical neo-Nazi attire.

The leader of Germany's Jewish community said the figures should bring an end to any talk that the far-right threat has been exaggerated. He was backed by the head of the domestic intelligence agency, Heinz Fromm, who said the figures are convincing evidence that right-wing violence is on the rise.

"I hope now for a first effective step in fighting right-wing extremism," said Paul Spiegel, the leader of Council of German Jews.

Interior Minister Otto Schily said Germany was determined to stamp out the far right, promising to use "the required toughness and resoluteness."

Violent crimes with a far-right, anti-Semitic or anti-foreigner motivation — ranging from robbery to murder — jumped by 34 percent from 1999, the Interior Ministry said, reaching the highest level since a wave of hate crimes in 1992 and 1993 following German reunification. A total of 998 such offenses — including three murders — were committed.

Anti-Semitic crimes surged by 69 percent to 1,378, while crimes against foreigners rose 57 percent to 3,594, the ministry said.

Total right-wing crimes — including the illegal display of neo-Nazi symbols and distributing banned propaganda — was at the highest level since Germany began compiling figures after World War II: 15,951 offenses, an increase of 59 percent over 1999, the ministry said.

That was far higher than the previous record of 11,700 registered in 1997.

The slayings, including the beating death of a Mozambican as he walked through a park, sharply focused outrage and galvanized the government into action.

The government said sharp increase in violent crimes may be one reason for the increase. Schily warned "it would be wrong to dramatize the situation."

As the violence spiraled this summer, Germans also were stung by cases that were widely reported as instances of neo-Nazi violence that turned out to be something else.

In one case, a new investigation was launched into the 1997 death of the 6-year-old son of an Iranian father and German mother in the eastern city of Sebnitz after witnesses came forward to say he'd been killed by a neo-Nazi mob only to recant days later. In another, two Arab men were arrested in the firebombing of a synagogue in Duesseldorf.

"We can't say for sure how the far-right threat will develop this year," Schily said. "But even if it decreases, that doesn't mean we can relax. The government will pursue its programs against right-wing extremism with the required toughness and resoluteness."

More than a half century after the end of Adolf Hitler's Nazi regime, a society burdened by the Holocaust, in which 6 million Jews were killed, has argued sharply over how to stamp out neo-Nazism without inadvertently fueling it.

Germany's highest court is considering a government request to ban the far-right National Democratic Party. Opposition lawmakers have argued the strategy may only embolden extremists.

Plans to offer help for extreme-right wingers who want to get out of neo-Nazi groups have been welcomed by Jewish leaders, but received a lukewarm response from the conservative opposition.

Praise by Family Minister Christine Bergmann for restrictions on neo-Nazi fashion items in a school in western North Rhine-Westphalia state unleashed criticism that any ban would only add cachet to items favored by extremists, like jackboots and bomber jackets.

Zapatistas seek to unite Mexico's Indians in open-air conference

By Mark Stevenson
Associated Press

NURIO, Mexico — Mexican Indians gathered Friday to launch a three-day National Indigenous Congress — a convention sponsored and attended by rebels halfway through a march to the capital to lobby for Indian rights.

The Indians' problems — and their approaches to solving them — are as varied as their 62 languages and diverse modes of traditional dress.

Maya Indians from the Gulf coast state of Campeche — who are demanding farm aid — mingled with Purepechas from this western state of Michoacan, a group whose biggest concerns are a lack of jobs and the deforestation of fir groves that thrive where they live.

Mazahua Indians from near Mexico City quickly staked out an area for their tent on a hilltop where the convention will take place, as if to illustrate their own concerns about encroachment onto their land.

But all were here for a common cause: to see if traditionally fragmented Indian communities could unite behind the Zapatistas, a rebel group that on Friday marked the seventh day of a 15-day bus caravan through Mexico to build support for its leftist, Indian-rights agenda.

No one seemed to mind that Subcomandante Marcos, the rebel leader, is not an Indian himself, or that the Tzotzil and Tzeltal Indians of southern Chiapas live far from these cool, blue-green mountains in western Mexico.

AP Photo

"We want to keep the image, the momentum that Marcos has created around Indian problems," said Jose Arsenio Cahuich, a Maya farm leader who traveled five days from the farm town of Dziblche in Campeche to attend the congress. "Let's hope it doesn't fade."

But Cahuich also illustrated how complex it will be for Marcos to unite Indians behind his leadership. Cahuich is a member of President Vicente Fox's National Action Party, which Marcos has accused of serving the interests of the rich and foreign corporations.

Cahuich is willing to give Fox a chance — "He just got into office. Let's see how he'll do," he says — something Marcos seems unwilling to do.

Despite the security Fox's government has provided for the rebel caravan, Marcos continues to criticize the president and ridicule his goodwill gestures.

Since taking office Dec. 1, Fox has closed four army bases in Chiapas, helped gain the release of dozens of Zapatista supporters jailed on various charges, and sent Congress a bill on Indian rights and autonomy.

That takes him about halfway toward meeting the demands of the rebels, who say that in addition to passage of the rights bill, all prisoners must be released, and all seven military bases shut down.

In addition to the Indian rights bill, the congress's agenda promises to discuss "the hopes and realities of Indian life" and to hammer out a joint Indian position on Fox's policies.

Left off the agenda was the issue of women's rights, what some see as one of the most burning issues within the Indian communities.

A tradition of male domination in many Indian groups has contributed to a legacy of high birthrates, little contraception and little education for women, contributing to the increasing competition for the few remaining jobs or parcels of land.

"A lot of us have to leave and go to the United States, because there just isn't any work here," said Salvador Hernandez, 36, who has worked illegally in the United States three times.

Hernandez lives in Nurio, a Purepecha village of 3,500, most of whose young men are in the United States working. Old U.S. vans brought back by undocumented workers roam the dirt streets of this town.

The lure of immigration may be one reason why the Purepecha — despite a 500-year history of oppression and discrimination — didn't join in an Indian uprising like the one that took place in Chiapas seven years ago.

"If other Indian groups in other states haven't done it, it's because, like our state, they have an escape valve: migration to the United States," said a Thursday editorial in the local newspaper La Voz de Michoacan.

The congress's agenda also appeared to leave little room for environmental issues, not surprisingly given that rebel supporters themselves have expanded into one of Mexico's few remaining tropical jungle reserves.

The environmental problems plaguing Indian communities were evident in Nurio, where dust storms swirled around the congress site — a wooden stage and rows of tree-trunk benches situated on a dry, partly deforested hilltop.

"It used to rain more around here," said Pablo Soto Leonel, a 68-year-old Purepecha guide from the nearby town of Angahuan. "But now that they're cutting down the forest, little by little, it's been getting drier and drier."

Turkey names World Bank official to direct economy

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — The government on Friday put a senior World Bank official in charge of healing Turkey's crisis-plagued economy and restoring international confidence after its currency plunged against the dollar.

Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit appointed World Bank Vice President Kemal Dervis to a Cabinet post in charge of the treasury, with responsibilities for overseeing the Central Bank, state banks and the banking regulatory board.

Dervis, 52, is one of 26 vice presidents at the World Bank. Economists say the government hopes he can use his close ties with international lenders to get desperately needed loans for Turkey.

President Ahmet Necdet Sezer signed the decree appointing Dervis, private television NTV reported.

The government also appointed Sureyya Serdengecti as Central Bank governor, Ecevit said. Serdengecti was deputy governor under Gazi Ercel, who took early retirement along with Treasury Secretary Selcuk Demiralp following the crisis.

Ecevit is under intense pressure from the business sector and public to revamp his economic team after a political and financial crisis saw the lira lose a quarter of its value against the dollar since last week.

The crisis emerged after a public fight between Ecevit and Sezer led to fears of a major political crisis and caused foreign investors to pull out of Turkey's markets.

"We have a lot of work to be done," Dervis told reporters after Ecevit's announcement.

"If we are going to be successful, the whole of Turkey must really come together," Dervis told the Anatolia news agency, listing bureaucrats, businessmen and trade unions.

Dervis's first task will be to revise Turkey's stabilization program, which is backed by $11 billion in loans from the International Monetary Fund, following its decision to abandon its currency exchange control during the two-week financial crisis.

Turks have pegged much hope on Dervis and business reacted positively to his appointment.

"This development is a blessing and a comfort for the (Turkish) people," said Husamettin Kavi, chairman of the Istanbul Industrial Board.

Aziz Karadeniz, general director of Alfa Security Exchange, said Dervis' appointment would encourage foreign investors to return.

But some expressed doubts that even Dervis would succeed in overcoming the current crisis.

"If Kemal Dervis, who seems to be our last chance, too fails in this political climate — which is quite likely — I would fear for Turkey's future," wrote Gunduz Aktan in the English-language Turkish Daily News.

Economist Faruk Selcuk said Dervis must first tackle the problems of Turkey's frail and overcrowded banking system.

Stamping out foot-and-mouth more about trade than health

By Emma Ross
Associated Press

LONDON — Foot-and-mouth disease is a relatively mild livestock ailment, and it is not a danger to humans, but once a farm animal has been exposed to infection it is killed to safeguard international trade.

Foot-and-mouth disease is probably the most infectious illness in the world and the most important economically, according to the Institute for Animal Health in Pirbright, England, the world reference laboratory for foot-and-mouth disease.

It can destroy livelihoods and food supplies almost overnight. Animals that recover produce less meat or milk; vaccination is ineffective, experts say.

However, the meat is safe to eat, unlike the case of mad cow disease, which has been linked to a brain-wasting disease in humans, variant Creutzfeld-Jakob disease.

It's all about trade. A country that imports livestock touched by the disease risks infecting its own herds, thereby endangering its own export business.

Soon after the British outbreak was detected last week, the country banned livestock and meat exports, knowing that trade partners would bar their products anyway.

Any infected animals, or susceptible livestock on the same farm, are being killed and then burned or buried.

The virus can be spread by anything it touches, from sandwich meat to the soles of shoes and truck tires, experts said. Wind can carry it 40 miles.

So far, foot-and-mouth disease has been confirmed at 40 locations across Britain, and more than 2,000 animals have been destroyed, said the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

The last major British epidemic, in 1967, infected nearly 2,000 farms and nearly 500,000 animals were destroyed.

The disease is widespread in many countries in Africa, the Middle East, Asia and South America. Poor nations that don't export meat let it just run its course.

But in developed countries, extermination is the norm, experts say.

"Like for any infectious disease, global travel creates a world community and the only way to stop it is to stop the animals moving and to stamp it out," said Chris Bostock, director of the Institute for Animal Health, which conducts global surveillance of the disease.

The Meat and Livestock Commission, a British trade group, says the industry is losing $12 million a week due to the epidemic.

Fear of similar losses has spread to continental Europe and beyond. Animals from Britain have been incinerated as a precaution and British travelers are being disinfected as they step off planes in some countries.

"It's purely about trade," Bostock said. "What we are going through is a pretty standard approach."

Foot-and-mouth disease has been around for centuries.

Cloven-hoofed animals such as cattle, sheep, pigs and goats are susceptible, as are rats. Horses aren't affected.

It causes fever, then blisters on the feet and mouth. About 95 percent of animals recover after two or three weeks, but the disease can kill the very young, vets say. There is no cure or treatment.

AP Photo

Agricultural workers lift slaughtered cattle onto a pyre so they can be burned at the Great Warley in Essex, England, last week. The cattle are being destroyed to control the spread of foot-and-mouth disease in Britain.

Vaccines offer little help, veterinarians say. There are seven main types of the virus and several subtypes of each. As with human flu shots, the vaccine has to match the strain and the strains change all the time.

"No vaccines are completely effective against stopping an infection. Even after an animal has recovered, it can travel and remain infectious," said Bostock.

England developed the drastic control measures imposed now.

"We were the first country, in 1869, to recognize it as a problem," said Abigail Woods, a researcher at Manchester University who has studied the history of foot-and-mouth disease. "Economically speaking, prominent farmers in the 19th century decided this was a harmful disease,"

In 1864, a major cattle plague was eliminated by destroying animals, restricting movements and blocking imports, Woods said.

Legislation in 1869 allowed such an approach for other infectious farm diseases such as foot-and-mouth, which was first detected in England in 1839, Woods said.

The last outbreak in the United States occurred in 1929, prompting the strict controls on livestock imports that continue today, said U.S. Department of Agriculture spokeswoman Kim Smith.

Nepal demands prime minister's rapid resignation

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — More than 10,000 protesters marched through the streets of Katmandu on Friday, calling for the resignation of Prime Minister Girija Prasad Koirala.

Nepal's main opposition parties have been demanding Koirala's resignation since one of his Cabinet members was named in a bribery scandal involving the lease of an aircraft for the state-owned airline. The minister resigned in January.

Pressing for the prime minister's resignation, the opposition has blocked business in the legislature since the winter session of Parliament convened in early February.

Odessa High's Cinderella story ends; Duncanville, The Colony meet in final

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Duncanville is in the Region 1-5A basketball finals for the fifth consecutive year and The Colony, the No. 1 ranked team in the Metroplex, is the Panthers' opponent in a high octane finale.

The Colony, 31-1 on the season, ended the fairly tale season of the 23-8 Odessa High Bronchos, 75-60, Friday night at Chaparral Center to start the tournament.

Then Duncanville, one of the major powers of Region I over the past five seasons, ousted 27-8 El Paso Montwood, 56-34, for the third year in a row to set up today's 1 p.m. final, again at the Chap. Duncanville will be seeking its third consecutive Final Four berth in Austin.

Oh yes, The Colony's lone loss this season came at the hands of Duncanville even though Panther coach Phil McNeely doesn't think that means very much.

"We beat The Colony something like 54-53. I know it was by one point," McNeely said, but quickly added, "That was one of those games played during the Christmas break when both schools were out of school and I think both teams would have rather been off skiing somewhere."

The Colony possesses no player taller than 6-4, but they do own one 6-2 guard Bracey Wright. Wright did nothing but fill the hoop for a tournament high 34 points against the Bronchos, who were making their first region appearance since 1969.

The Cougars can just about do it all. They hit 56 percent from the field and canned 13 of 14 free throw shots.

"It's amazing what this team can do when we put our mind to it," Wright said. "We came into this game with a lot of respect for Odessa High, but we played the game the way we know we can."

Cougar coach Tommy Thomas said of Wright, "When you are ranked as the No. 1 player in the junior class, you have to bring a good game with you. Bracey's confidence factor is really high right now."

OHS junior Arron Lewis led the Bronchos with 22 points and 15 rebounds. Guard Gary Williams had 21 points, but 4-5A Co-MVP Chris Evans, who has had games of 38 and 26 points in the playoffs, was held to only nine points and guard Matt Sutherland was just 1-of-9 from the field. The taller Bronchos just couldn't keep up the scoring pace despite a 33-22 edge in rebounds.

"The Colony is the quickest team I've ever played against," Lewis said. "In fact, they are the best all-around team I've ever played against. But we are going to come back here next year knowing what to expect. I have no doubt we will be back."

The Cougars, now 28-6 on the season, also had Bamfield Harmon with 14 points and Deron Williams with 11. That

Lady Chaps beat Howard, win first conference game

By H.A. Tuck
MRT Correspondent

The Midland College Lady Chap softball team won its conference opener Friday evening over the Howard College Lady Hawks, 8-4. Mother Nature took the nightcap, as the second game of the scheduled doubleheader was called at the end of two scoreless innings due to rain.

The two-day, four-game set against Howard now appears to have become a three-day affair. MC and Howard are slated for games today at 1 and 3 p.m., with the make-up contest tentatively planned for Sunday. All games are at the MUGS complex at Ulmer Park.

MC relied on strong pitching and powerful hitting for its first Western Junior College Athletic Association win of the season. Howard threatened in the top of the first, as a walk and a single put the first two runners aboard. But two strikeouts and a fly to center field stranded the runners.

Michelle Hofman, who was moved to lead-off in an effort to get more power at that spot, responded in the last of the first with a double to the fence in left center. With two out, Tiala Tagaloa tagged a rocket to right center for a two-run homer.

Howard took a 3-2 lead in the third, showing their power. With one out, DeShaun Drake doubled to left, and Christine Joiner moved her up with a single. Breanna Boles then homered to right.

Midland made it 5-3 in the last of the third. Julie Stanford singled, Hofman sacrificed her to second, Dora Pichardo walked, and Ksenia Stepanova singled to load the bases for Tagaloa, who doubled in three runs, giving her five RBIs for the game.

Two more runs scored for the Lady Chaps in the fourth. Tish Hernandez opened with a single, Stanford sacrificed her to second, Hofman doubled to get Hernandez home, then came in when Pichardo's short fly to right was bobbled.

Howard loaded the bases in the top of the sixth on a walk, single and an error. But Katya Eronina struck out the next three batters to leave the Lady Hawks stranded.

Amarillo downs Jackalopes, 5-3

Kyle Clark
MRT Correspondent

ODESSA – The Odessa Jackalopes had their four game winning streak snapped in a 5-3 loss to the Amarillo Rattlers Friday night.

After building a 3-1 lead over the Rattlers in the first period, the Jacks collapsed defensively and gave up four unanswered goals.

The game winning goal was scored by Amarillo right-winger Bill Newson on a power play in the third minute of the final period.

"Our focus changed tonight," Odessa coach Don McKee said. "We were hungry for goals instead of being hungry for a shutout. We were playing with a good team that can score."

Amarillo, which had not won a game in its last five attempts, still has a chance of qualifying for the final playoff spot in the WPHL West.

The first period saw goals by Jackalope forwards John Bossio and Trevor Allman. Bossio scored twice in the first period and Allman, who has scored in his last five games, scored off assists from Donnie Margettie and Derek Laxdal.

Woods cards 64 at Dubai Classic

Associated Press

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — Tiger Woods is amused some people think he is actually in a slump. He suspects they have a lot to learn about golf.

Winless in five U.S. tour events this season, Woods reminded organizers of the Dubai Desert Classic why they paid him $2 million to play on this peninsula course in the Persian Gulf.

He birdied the last two holes Friday for his second straight 8-under 64, taking a two-stroke lead on partner Thomas Bjorn of Denmark in what is virtually a two-man event.

"I haven't won in eight tournaments in America," said Woods. "But I've won three other tournaments in that span. I won in Thailand (Johnnie Walker), the Grand Slam (Hawaii) and then in Argentina (World Cup). There are three events that I've won and they (Americans) don't count those."

TOURNAMENT OF CHAMPIONS

All-Midland Final

Rebs, MHS to meet in title contest

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

This year's Tournament of Champions definitely belongs to Midland.

Both the Midland High and Midland Lee baseball teams went unbeaten in pool play during the first two days of the tournament spread out over three fields in the Tall City. As a result of their dominance, MHS and Lee will meet in this evening's championship game at 6 p.m. at Christensen Stadium.

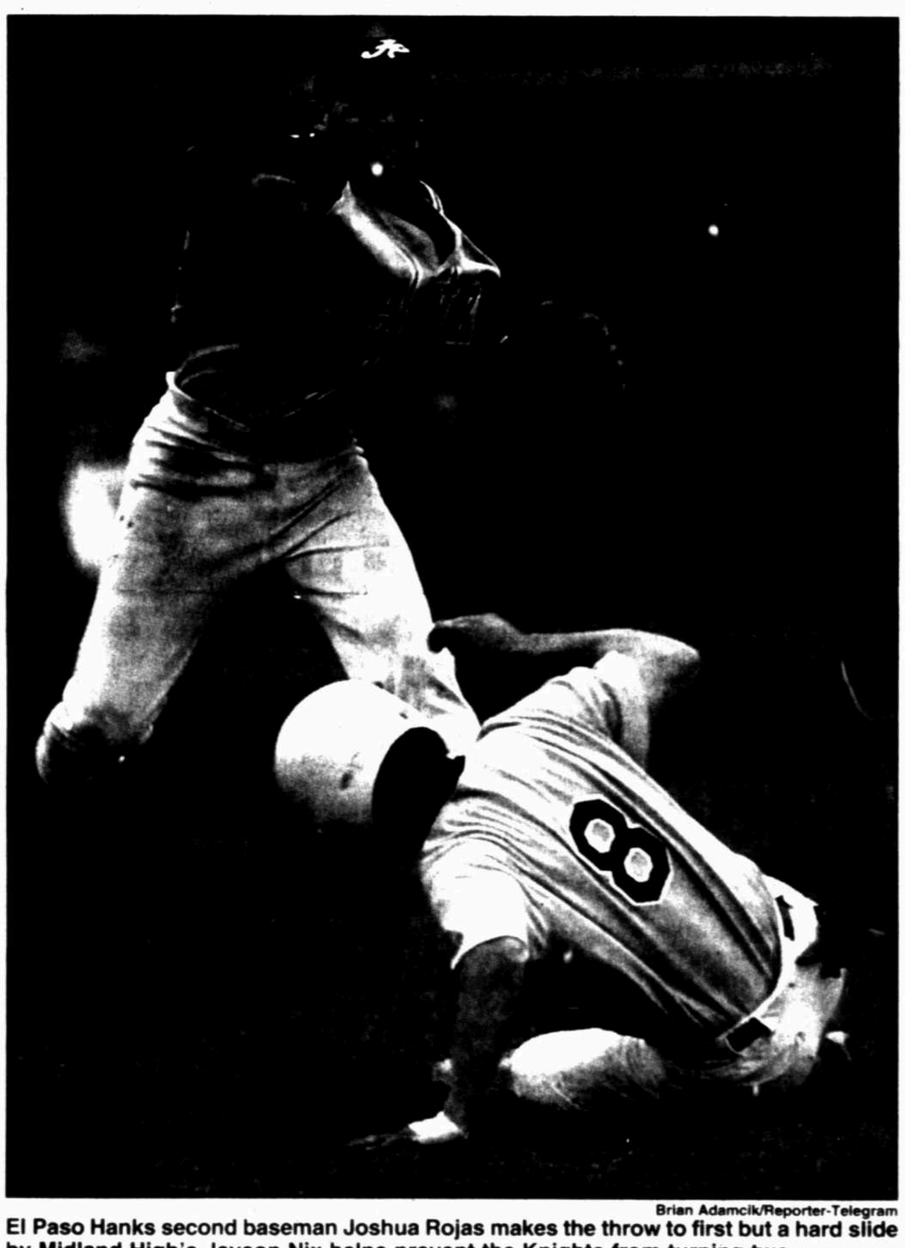
While Midland High had already sewn up a spot in the championship game by mid-afternoon Friday, the Bulldogs weren't assured of meeting Lee until the evening's finale at Christensen. The Rebels guaranteed an all-Midland championship by defeating Amarillo Tascosa 12-7. Earlier in the day, Lee beat Andrews 5-1 at Ernie Johnson Field.

"We've got to play them sometime," said Lee coach Jesse Benavidez, whose team also opens District 4-5A play against MHS in 10 days. "I just look at it as another ballgame, but it should be a good competitive ballgame. It should bring out a crowd."

Midland High, which lost to Lee in the tournament's title game two years ago, returned to defend its championship without much trouble in its pool, beating a pair of El Paso schools at Zachery Field. The Bulldogs defeated El Paso Franklin 7-5 in their first game of the day, then rebounded from a three-inning slumber to rout El Paso Hanks 11-3.

"We did it two years ago and they got the better of us," said MHS coach Barry Russell of facing the Rebels. "I think it would be good for the tournament and make money and put butts in the seats."

Lee and MHS have won the last two tournament titles respectively, so it's appropriate that the Rebels and Bulldogs have repelled all challengers in this year's tourney. They also thwarted revenge hopes of those hoping to show them up in their hometown as Lee and Midland High defeated the teams which they eliminated from the playoffs last year: Tascosa and Franklin, respectively.



Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram
El Paso Hanks second baseman Joshua Rojas makes the throw to first but a hard slide by Midland High's Jayson Nix helps prevent the Knights from turning two.

The Rebels (6-1) benefited greatly from Tascosa's self-inflicted wounds, which may have carried over from Game 2 of last season's bi-district series, in which Lee rallied from a six-run deficit in the seventh inning to win the game and ultimately the series. Tascosa committed nine errors on Friday, which led to 10 unearned Lee runs on the cool, damp evening.

"I was thinking that if we hit groundballs on the infield or dump them into the outfield that would make the ball slippery and make it harder to throw," said Benavidez, whose team by contrast didn't commit an error.

The Rebels took a 5-2 lead in the top of the third thanks in large part to three Tascosa errors, including two on one play by first base-

Looking for Five: Andrews takes lead at Tall City Invite

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Andrews girls golf coach Mike Campbell said he didn't know if his team could never get used to winning tournaments. But then, that's pretty easy to say when you have the team that's usually winning the tournaments.

On Friday, when every team in the 10th Annual Tall City Girls Golf Invitational was battling the cold out at Green Tree Country Club, the Andrews Lady Mustangs were continuing their hot streak this year with a first round 325, 10 strokes better than Fort Stockton which shot a 335. So far this season, Andrews has won all four tournaments it has entered and it is on its way to its fifth.

"I thought overall the team played really well," said Campbell. "I was very pleased especially with their effort. They played hard out there and it was a good round on a pretty difficult course."

"I think they will win state," said Lee coach Phyllis Sutton about the Andrews team. "They played exceptionally well for the weather."

Considering that Green Tree is a tough course, the Lady Mustangs had two players shoot in the 70s on a day when only four other golfers shot in the 70s. Juniors Jessica Thurston and Ashley Robb shot a 77 and 79 respectively to lead the Lady Mustangs. Both Thurston and Robb bring experience to the table as both were on last year's team which finished third in the Class 4A State Tournament.

"I'm real proud of those two girls," Campbell said. "Jessica had been struggling lately but we worked on some stuff this week and she really came through and played like she was capable of. And Ashley has just played solid all year round."

Thurston is tied with Midland Lee's Federica Billig for second place in the medalist race. Leading the medalist round is San Angelo Central's No. 1 player Amy Young, who shot a 75 to lead Central to a seventh place standing with a 358.

Billig was a bright spot for the Lady Rebels as the foreign exchange student from Uruguay continued her solid play this year. Sutton now hopes Billig can put together

Favre signs contract to become football's 1st $100 million man

By Richard Rosenblatt
AP Sports Writer

On the first day free agents were allowed to cash in, non-free agent Brett Favre crashed the party.

Favre re-upped with the Green Bay Packers on Friday for a reported $100 million over 10 years, while free agent Jerome Bettis was happy to stay put in Pittsburgh for $30 million.

Favre, who had three years left on a $47.25 million, seven-year deal, agreed to a contract extension that makes him the NFL's first $100 million man. Last year, running back Stephen Davis signed a $90 million contract with the Washington Redskins.

"I do want to be a Packer for life," the 31-year-old Favre said during a conference call. "I couldn't envision myself playing with another team. ... Don't want to. If that was to ever come up, I probably would just retire."

In other moves Friday, Tampa Bay claimed bad-boy quarterback Ryan Leaf off waivers; Seattle acquired Packers backup Matt Hasselbeck for undisclosed draft picks; and Miami defensive tackle Tim Bowens agreed to restructure his contract rather than be released.

Favre, the ironman quarterback who set the NFL record for consecutive starts with 141, receives a $10 million signing bonus and the new deal cuts $4 million off his salary cap number which would have been $9,474,000. Favre hopes to play through 2006, making his deal essentially a six-year package for cap purposes.

The NFL's only three-time MVP winner, Favre threw for 3,812 yards with 20 touchdowns and 16 interceptions last season. Green Bay finished 9-7 and missed the playoffs for the second year in a row. The Packers are 1-1 in Super Bowls under Favre.

Bettis, who has seven seasons with 1,000 yards rushing in eight years in the league, agreed to a six-year deal that, with incentives, could jump to $35 million. He said he passed up more lucrative offers because of "an opportunity to retire a Pittsburgh Steeler."

The 5-foot-11, 250-pound running back receives a $6 million signing bonus with a 2001 base salary of $484,000. In 2002, his base pay jumps to $2.5 million.

"Jerome is one of the foundations of what we hope to accomplish as we move into the new stadium," Steelers vice president Art Rooney II said.

Last season, Bettis ran for 1,341 yards and eight touchdowns, but Pittsburgh finished 9-7 and failed to make the playoffs.

By midnight Thursday, the 31 NFL teams were required get under the $67.4 million salary cap, and many teams ended up cutting big-name players with big-time contracts to prepare for free agent signings. The Colts cut Cornelius Bennett, the Titans waived Al Del Greco, the Bills cut Doug Flutie and the Redskins parted with Dana Stubblefield.

Elsewhere:

— The Bucs will take what amounts to a "free look" at Leaf, the second pick in the '98 draft behind Peyton Manning. "We liked Ryan a lot coming out of college and have a pretty good understanding of some of the problems he has experienced over the last couple of years. For us, this could be a short-term free look, but his abilities warrant that we perform due diligence," Bucs GM Rich McKay said.

— Hasselbeck will be reunited with Seahawks coach Mike Holmgren, who was the Packers coach when Green Bay picked the quarterback in the sixth round of the '98 draft. Hasselbeck, who has thrown only 29 passes in the NFL, will replace free agent Jon Kitna as Seattle's starter.

— The Denver Broncos signed two of their own — linebacker John Mobley and offensive lineman Dan Neil.

— The St. Louis Rams kept Jeff Wilkins, signing the kicker to a five-year deal. Wilkins was the league's only perfect kicker last season, hitting all 17 of his field-goal attempts and all 38 extra-point attempts.

— Wide receiver-kick returner Derrick Mason, who set an NFL record with 2,690 all-purpose yards last season, is staying with Tennessee. He signed a five-year deal worth a reported $23.45 million, including a $4.45 million signing bonus. Mason made $472,000 last year.

Louisville's Crum set to retire after this season ends

By Chris Duncan
Associated Press Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Denny Crum says he could've left Louisville for other basketball jobs and more money but could never bring himself to walk away.

He finally did Friday, ending a 30-year coaching career with a $7 million buyout after weeks of sniping with the athletic director.

It was an about-face from Crum's insistence throughout this season that he would be back next year.

The Hall of Fame coach met with athletics director Tom Jurich on Jan. 25, after Jurich was quoted as saying he could not guarantee Crum would be back. Their strained relationship escalated last week with the release of confidential memos between the two. Louisville president John Shumaker called the release of the memos "not appropriate."

Shumaker denied then that university officials have held secret meetings, talked with boosters about buyouts or contacted other coaches.

In announcing his retirement, Crum hinted Friday that he ended months of speculation about his future in part to preserve the school's image.

"I honestly wish none of that had ever happened," Crum said. "There's no way any kind of division is good for the university. I don't want this to be, nor did I ever want this to be something that could damage the university. Things happen, and sometimes you can't control them."

However, Crum insisted at a news conference attended by Jurich and Shumaker that he was not forced out.

"This is my decision and I feel really good about it," said Crum, who held off tears at times while standing at a podium. "Nobody's pushing me out of here. This is really what I wanted to do. I feel great about it."

Crum's contract ran through the 2002-'03 season. A clause required the university to pay Crum $2 million if his employment ended before June 30. Crum will be paid that, plus about $5 million in the next 15 years while serving as "a university consultant," according to Shumaker.

Louisville is 11-18 heading into Saturday's regular-season finale against Memphis, and then the Conference USA tournament at Freedom Hall.

This year's team has only two seniors and six freshmen — Crum's youngest team ever. His strong recruiting class for next season included Carlos Hurt, considered one of the best guards in the nation.

The Cardinals are 61-61 in the past four seasons, with an 0-2 record in the NCAA tournament. The program was also hit with sanctions twice in the 1990s, although no violations were directly linked to Crum.

Jurich said he has not set a timetable for hiring a successor.

"We've got to continue to build this program back to where it was," Jurich said. "I don't think anyone is happy with where this program's at. We want to make sure we get this house in order."

Junior Bridgeman, a member of the board of trustees who starred for Crum from 1972-75, said the rift between Crum and Jurich could take time to heal.

"It should've never happened like this," he said. "So many people outside the program have gotten involved, and it was disappointing to see this handled this way."

Crum has won 674 games, 14th on the career list. The only active Division I basketball coach with more time at one school is Jim Phelan, with 47 years at Mount St. Mary's. He guided the Cardinals to two national championships and six Final Fours. However, the Cardinals haven't returned to the Final Four since winning the 1986 championship.

Crum is only active college coach in the Hall of Fame, and he and Duke's Mike Krzyzewski were the only active coaches with more than one NCAA title. Crum's six Final Fours were second among active coaches to Krzyzewski's eight.

Louisville remained a perennial Top 25 team into the mid-1990s, with seven 20-win seasons from 1987-97. The Cardinals went 26-9 and reached the national quarterfinals in 1997.

Crum passed John Wooden on the all-time victory list this season in Louisville's 86-85 win over UNLV in this year's Maui Classic.

A-Rod says magazine comments about Yanks' Jeter misinterpreted

By Stephen Hawkins
AP Sports Writer

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. — The friendship between Alex Rodriguez and Derek Jeter looks more like a feud these days.

"He's never had to lead," Rodriguez was quoted as saying in April's edition of Esquire. "He can just go and play and have fun. He hits second — that's totally different than third or fourth in a lineup.

"You go into New York, you wanna stop Bernie (Williams) and (Paul) O'Neill. You never say, 'Don't let Derek beat us.' He's never your concern," he said.

Told about the remarks, Jeter said he had a phone call to make.

"I'll ask him tonight, and I'll talk to you tomorrow," the New York Yankees' shortstop said Friday. "The only thing you can ask him is what his intentions were. Do I think his intentions were bad? No."

Later in the day, Rodriguez said he looked forward to telling Jeter he meant nothing negative. The Texas shortstop insisted his comments were taken out of context from a 90-minute interview last December.

"How can I ever dog Derek Jeter? It's impossible," Rodriguez said. "There is nothing to knock. He's a great defensive player. He's a great offensive player. He's one of the top three players in the game, for the greatest team of my era.

"It's my mistake because I said it. It's not the journalist's fault," he said. "It's been my fault for just talking the game and being too general. I guess you have to be very specific."

While the All-Stars have been friends for several years, this marked the second time in a few months that A-Rod has mentioned Jeter in what appeared to be an unfavorable fashion.

Soon after he signed a $252 million, 10-year contract with Texas that is the largest in sports history, Rodriguez said the salary figure would be hard to top.

"Even a guy like Derek, it's going to be hard for him to break that because he just doesn't do the power numbers and defensively he doesn't do all those things," A-Rod said in December.

Jeter, who already has won four World Series championship rings at age 26, recently got a $189 million, 10-year contract from the Yankees, the second-largest deal in sports history.

Rodriguez said he was trying to compare his situation to Jeter's.

"So when you say you don't go into New York trying to stop Derek, to me that's more of a team compliment," he said.

"When you come to Texas now, you don't say you have to stop Ivan (Rodriguez), Alex or Raffy (Rafael Palmeiro). You say, let's stop one through nine because everybody can hurt you."

Rodriguez left Seattle as a free agent after the Yankees beat the Mariners in last year's AL championship series.

"It's great because our situations mirror each other. All we have to do is go out and play. I don't have to worry about leading Ivan, (Andres) Galarraga or (Ken) Caminiti or Raffy. Those guys all lead themselves. You lead by example, but it's not like leading in Seattle last year."

Jeter's teammates have no doubts about his leadership role. The Yankees have won four of five World Series since Jeter joined the team, including three in a row.

Jeter was the MVP of last year's World Series win over the New York Mets and last summer's All-Star game. He's a career .342 hitter in the Series.

"He's one of our leaders in the clubhouse. There's no doubt about it," center fielder Bernie Williams said. "He's definitely one of those guys, in a clutch situation, that would do something."

Said reliever Mike Stanton: "We really don't know what the context of the conversation was. They're pretty strong words."

"There's intangibles there that make Jeter an MVP. I don't think there's any doubt that he's one of the hearts and souls of this team," he said.

And what about A-Rod's remark that teams don't focus on stopping Jeter?

"Yeah, the Mets probably weren't worried about him, either," Stanton said

Jeter, who has been slowed by right shoulder stiffness, hasn't thrown or taken batting practice since Tuesday.

Rodriguez is to play his first game for the Rangers on Saturday in their exhibition opener against Boston in Fort Myers. Rodriguez is slated to bat third, behind Ivan Rodriguez and ahead of Palmeiro.

Cornhuskers beat Texas Tech in baseball

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Matt Hopper's 2-run double and Dan Johnson's RBI single gave Nebraska three runs in their first at-bat, and the Cornhuskers made it stand up for a 3-2 victory Friday over Texas Tech.

Shane Komine (3-1) pitched a complete game, striking out 10 and walking 4 for Nebraska (7-3, 1-0 Big 12). Cory Metzler (2-2) was the loser, giving up 9 hits, striking out 2 and walking 2 in 5.1 innings.

The Red Raiders (12-7, 0-1) got a run in the second inning when Nick Blankenship scored on a balk. In the seventh, Tech pulled within a run Gera Alvarez's double that scored Byron Smith.

Alvarez then appeared to have scored the tying run on a passed ball, but the first base umpire called off the run, saying a ball came onto the field from the Tech bullpen, forcing a timeout.

Tech had runners on first and second with one out in the bottom of the ninth, but Komine pitched out of trouble.

Baylor 3, Missouri 2

WACO — Chris Durbin hit a two-out double in the bottom of the ninth to drive in Trevor Mote and give Baylor a 3-2 win over Missouri Friday night.

Steven White (4-0) pitched a complete game, giving up only two hits to record the win for the Bears (13-4, 3-1 Big 12). White struck out seven and walked seven.

Drew Endicott (1-2) took the loss for Missouri. Endicott gave up three runs on nine hits over 8.2 innings for the Tigers (3-6-1, 0-4).

Missouri jumped to an early lead when Wes Fewell singled to drive in two runs in the top of the first. Baylor tied the game in the bottom of the inning with RBIs from Paul Richmond and Mike Huggins.

Texas 8, Wisconsin-Milwaukee 1

AUSTIN — Omar Quintanilla went 3-for-4, including a double and a 2-run single, leading Texas to an 8-1 victory Friday over Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

The single came during the Longhorns' 5-run second inning that gave Texas hurler Gerrit Simpson more than enough runs. Simpson (2-2) threw his second straight complete game while allowing just four hits. He struck out 10 and walked 2 in lowering his earned-run average to 1.38.

another good round today plus get some help from her teammates.

"We didn't play as well as I wanted to," said Sutton whose team sits in ninth place with a 366 total. "We have the capability to shoot better, it's not that we don't."

Like Lee, Midland High is also having to contend with youth among its top five players. The Lady Bulldogs stand in 11th place with a 383.

The tournament, with both the Maroon and Purple divisions, moves today to Hogan Park Golf Course where Andrews hopes to continue it's "drive for five."

"We're going to have to play a real solid round because other teams are going to be on our tails," Campbell said.

was plenty to go with Wright's 34.

Montwood, a team with no player taller than 6-3, just couldn't hang with the Panthers. The Rams had only 13 points mid-way through the third quarter while Duncanville just went through the paces.

"We just came to play basketball," was the way Duncanville's 6-5 junior Seneca Collins said it. "We just didn't want to mess with our intensity. We'll be ready to play (The Colony) again tomorrow."

Collins, the Panthers' leading scorer this season, had 15 points. Montwood's Tony Helton, who was coming off a 38-point game against El Paso Andress, led the Rams with only 10 points. Those were the only double digit scorers in the game.

Now, Duncanville and The Colony play for more than a Christmas break outing. Today, they shoot hoops for a ticket to Austin.

Midland teams land 5 on district's first team

Staff Report

■ Boys' Basketball

Senior Chris Evans of Odessa High and junior Brian Young of San Angelo Central have been named as Co-Most Valuable Players of District 4-5A basketball for the 2000-2001 season.

Newcomer of the Year honors went to Midland Lee's sophomore guard Drew Coffman. Bobby Milliorn, who guided OHS to the league title, was named as Coach of the Year. OHS advanced to the Region I-5A Tournament, where the Bronchos lost on Friday to The Colony, 77-60.

Those were the names that topped a liberal all-district list that included 14 players on the first team and 42 players overall when counting second team and honorable mention selections. There are only 35 starting positions in the seven-team league.

In addition to Coffman, who was the only sophomore on the first team, Lee also placed senior Wendell Smith, the team's leading scorer at 18 points per game, and 6-7 junior post Eric Winston, who averaged 15 points per game and 15 rebounds, on the first team. Lee ended a three-year absence from the state playoffs, tying San Angelo Central for second place. Both Lee and Central went two rounds deep into the playoffs.

Midland High, which saw its reign of four consecutive 4-5A titles and eight consecutive playoff trips go by the boards with a fourth place finish, had two players make the first team in junior Lucquente White and junior Jarvis Brown. White led the Bulldogs in scoring, averaging 15 points per game. White was the league's Newcomer of the Year last season. Brown is a deadly three-point shooter.

Central's Young and senior Donte Randle were all-district first team selections a year ago as was OHS senior guard Matt Sutherland. MHS' White was the only other return selection from a year ago.

It this year's all-district list is an indication of how 4-5A will perform next season, both Lee and MHS should be in good shape since Lee returns both Coffman and Winston, while White and Brown both will be back at MHS. The only other underclassmen on the first team are Central's Young (Co-MVP) and Odessa Permian's Marquis Pierce. League champion OHS loses all three first team selections, Evans (Co-MVP), Sutherland and Gary Williams.

MHS had three picks on the 10-member second team in junior Blake Huggins, sophomore Anthony Jackson, two other returners next year, and senior Roman Conner. Lee also placed another junior on the second team in Cornell Hunt.

Lee also placed senior Kyle Shatzer and sophomore Jacoby Hartley on the honorable mention list while MHS had three players listed with senior Jason South and two juniors in John Alcala and Roget King.

The team was picked by the seven head coaches in District 4-5A and was based on the performance in regular season play only.

Local Soccer Today

Boys

San Angelo Central at Midland High

When: 2 p.m.
Where: The Boneyard (Audrey Gill Sports Complex), Midland.
Records: Midland High is 8-1 in District 4-5A and 14-2 overall; San Angelo Central is 7-1 and 14-1.
Last Meeting: MHS won, 2-1, on Feb. 6 in San Angelo.
4-5A Significance: This could be for the district title. The district is definitely not over, since both teams still have to play games against Odessa Permian and Abilene High, but this is still a showdown between the teams with the two best records in the district.
Notes: MHS is coming off a 3-0 win over Abilene Cooper on Tuesday, while Central beat Odessa High, 2-0... Central hasn't lost since the loss to MHS, in which the Bulldogs came from behind with two second-half goals. Central has outscored its opponents, 13-2, in that time and won one shootout... Central's Tommy Vu, with five goals and two assists, is the fifth-highest scorer in the district. Four other Bobcats — Logan Mikeska, Ross Harris, Cody Scott and Derik Schneider — are among the top 15. For MHS, Ryan Pervier (4 goals, 2 assists) is tied for sixth, and Matt Lozano (eighth with 4 goals) and Joseph Duran (13th with 1 goal, 3 assists) are close behind. Mike Cervantes, Sean Sandel and Michael Rupe are all in the top 20.
Next: Midland High will host Abilene High at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Girls

Midland High
at San Angelo Central

When: 2 p.m.
Where: Old Bobcat Stadium, San Angelo.
Records: Midland High is 7-2 in District 4-5A and 13-4 overall; San Angelo Central is 4-4 and 8-10.
Last Meeting: MHS won, 3-2, in a shootout (2-1) on Feb. 6 in Midland.
4-5A Significance: MHS, which leads the district by a half-game over Odessa Permian (6-2), is close to clinching a playoff spot, but it can't do it today. MHS needs a win combined with losses by Central and Midland Lee, but Lee is off today. A regional semifinalist last season, Central is barely hanging onto playoff hopes this season. It has a lot of work to do to move up from fifth place, and it won't be easy. Central's final four games are against the four teams that are ahead of it in the standings.
Notes: MHS is coming off a 5-0 pounding of Abilene Cooper on Tuesday, while Central was beating up on Odessa High, 4-0. Those are two of the three biggest blowouts in all girls' 4-5A games this season. The other was MHS' 4-0 win over Odessa High on Jan. 30... Central's record is deceiving. The Lady Cats were forced to forfeit five wins, including an early district win over Odessa High, for the use of an ineligible player. Their overall record on the field is 13-5... The forfeiture may have made the Lady 'Cats mad; they are 4-1 since then... The shootout these teams played in earlier was the seventh of the season for Central, and it has played in another one since. Central has played in four shootouts in district play. The Lady 'Cats are 1-3 in those shootouts, but the one win was the one they had to forfeit to OHS... MHS' has gone to only one shootout in district play... MHS' Megan Dozier and Amy Brammer are the two highest-scoring players in the district. Dozier is first with six goals and two assists, and Brammer is second with four goals and five assists. Odessa Permian's Kelly Wilson, who has missed a few games, is third with four goals and four assists. Central's Kelli Camfield is fourth with four goals and one assist. She scored two of her goals in the first meeting against Midland High.
Next: Midland High goes to Abilene to play Abilene High at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

BASEBALL: Midland High, Lee play tonight

man Evan Gerald. But Lee starter T.J. Mansell couldn't retire a batter in the bottom of the third, and after walking Ryan Zimmer to force in a run to cut the lead to 5-4, Mansell was finished.

Enter Eric Winston, who was making his first appearance of the season on the diamond a week after ending his season with the Lee basketball team. Winston gave up a double play grounder which allowed a run to score and tie the game, but for four innings, he gave up nothing else. The righthander retired 11 straight batters, gave up no hits and at one point struck out six straight, only giving up two runs in the bottom of the seventh after he walked three batters.

"I'd dressed for three games and hadn't gotten in and I just wanted my chance to show what I could do," said the 6-foot-7, 270-pound Winston. "I didn't try to do anything spectacular and just stayed within myself. I never think it's fatigue (late in the game) but it probably was and I was probably a little over my pitch count."

The Rebels broke the tie with six unearned runs in the fifth thanks to four Tascosa errors, including two straight by leftfielder Chase Kalka. Tyler Webb had two hits and drove in three runs for the Rebels while Ryan Huddleston also had two hits.

As dominant as Winston's performance was, it might not have even been Lee's best mound showing of the day. Against Andrews, junior lefthander Jacob Ramos gave up only two hits and struck out 11 for the win, his first as a Rebel.

Only Brady Haygood seemed to have clue against Ramos for Andrews, as he beat out a bunt for a hit and walked twice. After the second walk with two outs in the sixth, Haygood scored on a double by Tyson Dever for the only Andrews run.

For good measure, Ramos also had two hits. No. 9 hitter Robert Rogers actually had the best day against Andrews with two hits and two RBIs.

The Bulldogs (7-1) had a tight game as might have been expected against Franklin, a team MHS beat 6-3 at Zachery in last year's area round of the playoffs. Lefthander Michael Forrest pitched six innings, giving up only four hits for the win. Tye Orr pitched the seventh inning to earn the save.

Forrest helped himself at the plate, getting a pair of doubles and driving in two runs. Jayson Nix hit a home run and drove in two runs for the Bulldogs.

Against Hanks, though, the Bulldogs appeared to be in a slumber for three innings, falling behind 3-0 while giving up two unearned runs. Midland High also couldn't solve Hanks starter Casey Lara, who faced the minimum nine hitters while holding MHS hitless for three innings.

Midland High's bats finally came to life in the fourth, as the Bulldogs scored five runs and eventually chased Lara, who along with relievers Oscar Aragon and Gabe Macias combined to walk six hitters in the inning. The Bulldogs put the game away with five runs in the sixth, as the top five hitters in the MHS lineup rapped out consecutive singles.

After struggling with his control early, Midland High starter Matt Bose settled down, shutting out Hanks over the final five innings and finishing with a three-hitter while striking out nine.

Colby Overstreet had two hits and drove in three runs for MHS while Madison Edwards also had two hits. James Gripp drove in two runs.

Before meeting tonight, Lee and MHS will play "guaranteed" games to start the day. Lee will play Franklin at 10 a.m. at Ernie Johnson Field and MHS will face Andrews at noon at Zachery.

In other pool games, Tascosa routed El Paso Austin 13-0 in five innings. Tascosa's Leonard Guerrero doubled, tripled and homered to drive in five runs while Zak Faulkner pitched a two-hitter. Monterey beat Hanks 5-3 as Grady Sanders homered for Monterey and winning pitcher Geno Montoya drove in two runs. Kevin Letz had two hits and drove in two runs for Hanks.

Andrews and Franklin thrashed Austin and Monterey respectively 21-0 and 6-0. No details were available.

JACKS: Odessa faces San Angelo squad today

(From 1C)

Amarillo also came out shooting in the first period. The Rattlers scored on goals by Marc Dupuis and Ron Newhook.

The next two periods were dominated by Amarillo. The Rattlers received scores from Newson, Newhook, Kevin McKinnon and Toby Harris, who scored on an empty net goal in the final minute of the game to end the Jackalopes comeback hopes.

The Jackalopes will now face the San Angelo Outlaws, who are also battling for the final playoff spot in the WPHL West, at 7 p.m. tonight at Ector County Coliseum.

RELIGION

Growing church aims to teach Word, reach out to community

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

The Rev. Mark Kohl, who has been pastor of the Community Bible Church of Midland a year this month, says the honeymoon period may be over, but the marriage is solid and meaningful.

This is Kohl's first experience as pastor of a congregation. He previously had been a member of Cadence International, a mission organization that works with the military in the United States and in Europe. He spent 10 years overseas, mostly in Germany, then for seven years served as eastern regional director of the organization in the United States.

"I had always wanted to be a pastor, and although the work in missions was very pastoral, the age range in the military was limited," Kohl said.

"We worked closely with military personnel, and many of them spent a lot of time in our home, which was very gratifying, but I wanted to be a pastor of everyone from age 2 to age 100. That's hard to do on a military base."

Kohl became a Christian when he was quite young, through the influence of his family.

"My father had come to know Christ when I was about 2 years old," he said, "He had grown up in a religious home but had never experienced a personal relationship with Jesus Christ. That changed the course of our family's history, and we ended up getting involved with the Evangelical Free Church.

"This church is a member of that body, although the name is Community Bible Church."

Kohl attended Dallas Theological Seminary and was ordained as an Evangelical preacher in 1986.

He said he had never been to Midland, and had no idea where Midland was, but that a friend of his, Greg Keys, who had moved to Midland several years previously, called him to say that an Evangelical Free Church was searching for a pastor.

"He asked me if I wanted to place my name in the hat, and I said yes. It has turned out that the congregation and I have similar viewpoints, and it has been a good match," Kohl said.

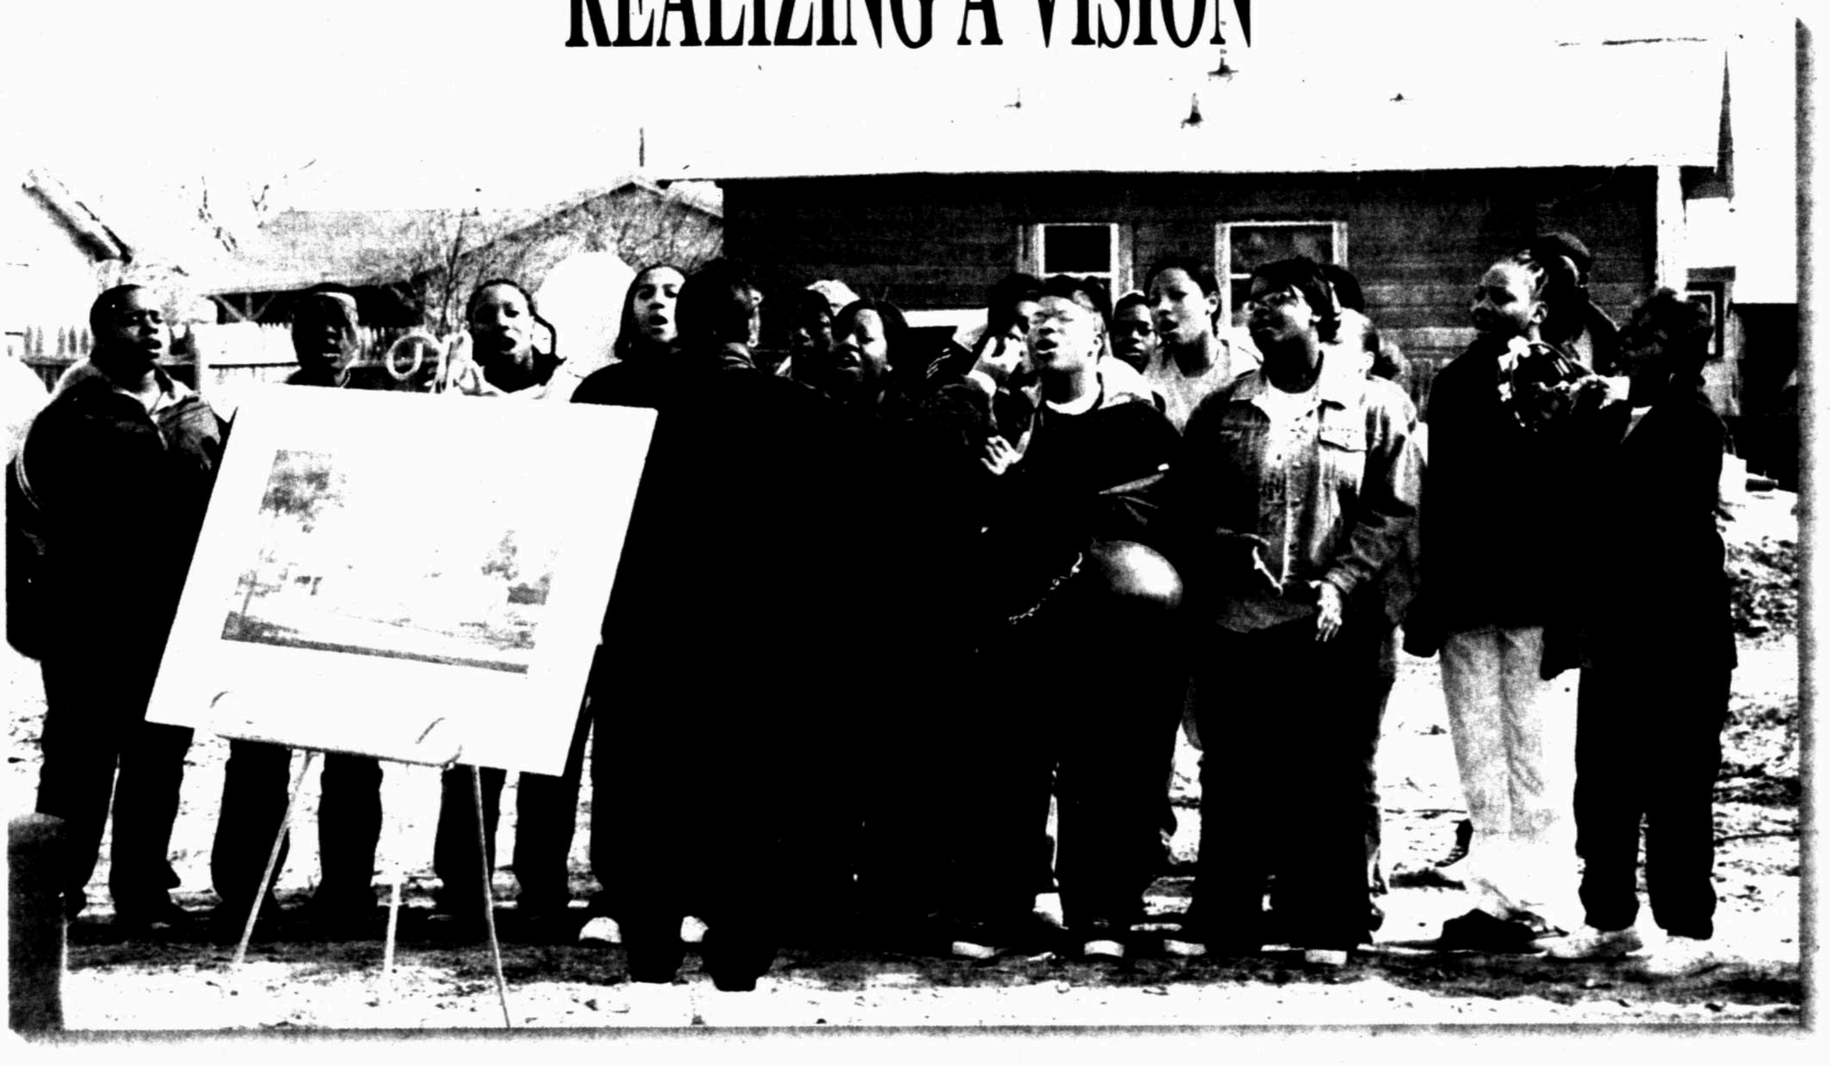
REALIZING A VISION



'We're putting drug dealers and those who would prostitute our children on notice that we will no longer allow such activities in this neighborhood.'

—the Rev. George Bell, pastor of Greater Ideal Baptist Church

Family life center projected to be showplace of neighborhood

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

With winds taking chill factors down to single digits, the members of Greater Ideal Baptist Church gathered Feb. 11 to pray over and dedicate the ground where their family life center will stand.

While a few tended barbecue pits at the edge of the lot, where hot dogs were cooking, the majority of the crowd stood at the center of the site where Greater Ideal choristers raised their hands and the temperature with stirring renditions of "Magnify Your Name" and the Hallelujah Chorus from Handel's "Messiah." Among the groundbreakers, were 95-year-old Christine Roberts — a charter member of Greater Ideal — some of the church's children, the deacons and community leaders,

The $1 million facility is projected to be the showplace of the neighborhood, enclosing a basketball court complete with seating for spectators, a walking rack, an exercise room, game room, a cafeteria with kitchen facilities, a library, computer room with Internet facilities, 12 classrooms and a chapel.

City officials and representatives from the project's lender, Wells Fargo, were on hand to speak, but the real message came from the workers in the trenches, both in the words recited by the crowd — "For the youth and adults whose lives will take on new meaning and purpose as they play, learn and work here, and therefore enable us to witness more fully to the love of God revealed in Jesus Christ, we break this ground" — and in the unequivocal message voiced by members of the southside clergy.

Please see LIFE/2C

Greater Ideal Baptist Church had a groundbreaking for their Family Life Center on Feb. 11. The church's choir, shown at top, sang at the groundbreaking with the artist's rendition of the center in the foreground. The rendition is also shown above. Mayor Bobby Burns and Councilman James Bradford spoke to the crowd during the ceremony.

LESLIE WILLIAMS

It seems as though it takes a lifetime to complete process of giving ourselves over to God

My son, age 4, stood defiantly, knee-deep in Legos, puzzle pieces, stuffed animals, and books scattered willy-nilly around his room. The floor had disappeared underneath his toys. "You're not the boss of me!" he said.

Williams

I replied, "Boss or not, let me put it this way. I'm the person who will send you to time out if you do not clean up your room. And no more sassing."

Later, at the supper table (after his room was clean), he asked my husband and me, "Who is boss of this family?"

We gave him the hierarchy: God, Daddy, Mommy, him and his sister, and the hamster bringing up the rear. Finding out that he and his sister were equals was a disappointment, but knowing he was the boss of the hamster provided some measure of compensation. But being the boss of the hamster didn't just mean a power trip. It meant feeding the hamster, taking care of it, loving it, and not squeezing it to death in enthusiastic outbursts of affections (as he tended to do).

God, we reassured him, does the same for us.

At different periods of my life, I have wondered, "Who is the boss of me?" In the first flush of young adulthood, I used to think I was in charge of my life. After all, who made my decisions, good or bad? Me. Who took advantage of (or missed) opportunities? Me. Who decided what I wanted to do? Me.

Or so it seemed.

The turning point for me came one afternoon in a pink shower stall when I cried for so long that the water ran cold. With a white-knuckled grip on the controls, I had steered the little craft of my life right up on the rocks. I was 25 years old.

At that moment, the phrase I'd heard all my life "Give your life to Jesus" suddenly made sense. Oh! Jesus was the boss of my life. Not me.

The relief was immediate. I didn't have to be my own bungling, fumbling, bad-news boss. God was willing to take me on as His child. I could curl up in the palm of His mighty hand and He would take care of me.

Don't get me wrong. My life did not instantly turn into a bed of roses, or even dandelions. And the almost 25 years since then have been a tug-of-war over different pieces of my life I didn't even know I was holding back. (Well, maybe I knew; I just didn't want to give every single piece of me to the Lord. Who, for instance, is the boss of my weight, my free time, my volunteer activities, my mouth, my temper?)

Who is the boss? The question starts young, and it seems as though it takes a lifetime to complete the process of giving ourselves over to Him. Fortunately, God is the boss over all of it and loves even the parts of us we haven't yet discovered.

Methodist church in Houston nation's largest

HOUSTON (AP) — The Rev. Kirbyjon Caldwell recently took the national spotlight by giving the benediction at the inauguration of President Bush.

Now his congregation joins him in the spotlight of the United Methodist Church by topping the denomination's membership rolls.

Windsor Village United Methodist Church in far southwest Houston now boasts 13,498 members, making it the denomination's largest church in the United States, according to the United Methodist News Service.

"We don't make a big deal out of numbers," Caldwell told the Houston Chronicle recently. "At this point we are really committed to blessing the Lord and striving to be a blessing to the people."

Windsor Village moved ahead of Highland Park United Methodist Church, which was the largest church in 1999 and now has 13,188 members, the Methodist news service reported. The Dallas-area church now ranks second.

In fact, the four largest United Methodist churches in the country are in Texas. First United Methodist Church of Houston, with 12,325 members, is the third largest, and First United Methodist Church of Fort Worth is fourth with 11,162, the service said.

Of the approximately 35,600 member churches in the denomination, 94 are considered large churches, defined as those with a membership of more than 3,000, said Beth Babbitt, director of the United Methodist Church's department of statistics.

Of the 94 large churches, only six, including Windsor Village, have predominantly African-American memberships. Of the 8.4 million United Methodists in the United States, 4.6 percent are black, she said.

PASTOR: Church aims to teach, reach out

(From 1C)

Community Bible Church is small — with about 60 to 70 members — but it's growing. Kohl said there are quite a few members with young children who will be going to junior and senior high school in the next few years, and the congregation is beginning to search for a youth director to serve the needs of those children as they grow.

According to information furnished by Kohl, the Evangelical Free Church of America was begun in 1950 by the merger of the Swedish EFC and the Norwegian-Danish EFC; both of these groups were formed in the late 19th century.

The church holds that the Bible is the inspired Word of God, is without error in its original writings, is the complete revelation of God's will for salvation and is the divine and final authority for Christian faith and life, according to the EFC's statement of faith — a 12-item summary of its doctrine.

They believe in the Trinity, the virgin birth of Christ, the expiation of sins through Christ's death on the cross, the bodily resurrection of the dead in Christ and the eternal punishment of non-believers.

Members of EFC observe water baptism and the taking of the Lord's Supper, but they don't think these sacraments are to be regarded as a means of salvation.

Following its statement of faith, the EFC brochure lists a series of Distinctives by which it further defines its doctrine, among them being a commitment to the inerrancy of Scripture "without drawing battle lines over minor points" or testing members over minor differences of opinion.

There is also a statement in the Distinctives referring to the EFC as ecumenical in spirit, though not in structure.

"We join with other Christians and other denominations of like precious faith in common goals and ministries to accomplish the Great Commandment and the Great Commission. But we believe that there is strength in diversity," reads Distinctive 3.

Kohl, when asked to state goals of the local autonomous church, said the first priority is constitutional.

"We are to preach the Word in an expository way, and to go through the text so that people understand how that text fits within the book and within the Bible as a whole.

"Our church has a unique perspective in that our aim is not only to teach the Word but to teach it accurately, in a way that people can take it and apply it to their lives."

Secondly, Kohl said, the people are to take what they know and reach out to the community. "We're desirous to expand our ministry and to reach out into the community. We're not sure exactly what our niche is yet, but we're waiting to see where God wants us to go, and then we'll go there.

"I very much want to empower our people to do ministry," he said. "When people want to start a new ministry, we want to be able to say yes, and to have funds to help them go ahead.

"A good example of that was when one of our members wanted to get an Awana program started for our children. We ended up getting it started with 40 or 50 kids, but our church isn't large enough to have our own staff, so we borrowed staff from other churches, and it's worked out very well."

Kohl stated a third personal goal: "That is to develop relationships with our members. I want us to build relationships so that we can walk more closely with Christ, and to have the support of each other while we're doing this, to pull around and encourage us all.

"Of course, that's what Christianity is anyway. It's a personal relationship with God, and if it's not that, then it's dead."

Kohl said his overall desire is "just to have people give us a try. If they are looking for a church where people love each other and love the Lord and have a desire to grow in their understanding of who Christ is, they will find it here. And if they're not Christians, but want to know what it's all about, so much the better. We'll talk."

LIFE: Wells Fargo to help finance family center

(From 1C)

"We're putting drug dealers and those who would prostitute our children on notice that we will no longer allow such activities in this neighborhood," said the Rev. George Bell, pastor of Greater Ideal. "We're dedicating this place to God, and whatever it takes to keep it holy, that's what we're determined to do."

The words he spoke held special poignancy for many in the crowd, who have been involved in a war against drugs and other crime to an extent that most residents of Midland's more affluent outskirts have never experienced.

In January, the Greater Ideal congregation buried an 18-year-old drug dealer before a packed congregation, an event that member Cathy Wallace said only solidified their determination.

"We're constructing this center to provide a place of safety where our children and our senior citizens can come without being afraid. But the building is only the symbol of that safety," she said. "We're building a ministry that reaches beyond walls."

By taking out a loan and engaging the services of an architect and builder, members of Greater Ideal have put their hand to the plow and they cannot turn back. They say they're well aware of the sacrifices they're called to make.

"We're in this now," said Michael Shelton, chair of the Greater Ideal board of deacons, "and we're determined to carry it through. We are already receiving support from much of the community, and we're hoping for more."

Bell, who has been pastor of the church for the past two years, said the congregation has been working on plans for the center since 1999, and it all began with a vision that awoke him in the middle of a hot August night.

"It was not an easy thing to do, to take that vision (of a family life center) to the congregation, because it came at a very high cost. I estimated that it might cost as much as $1 million. And it was not well-received at first," he said. "But the congregation understood that if God wanted us to build it, he would also show us a way to provide the financing."

They started with a deadline.

"Our church was going to celebrate its 50th anniversary the second week in October that year, so we decided that we needed to raise $100,000 by then," Bell said. "I knew it was a short period of time to get to that point, but we needed something that would show us God's will."

Bell had no intention of making it easy. He and the board eschewed thoughts of trying to raise money with bake sales and rummage sales, deciding instead to test the resolve of members by asking for pledges above their normal tithes and offerings.

By October, they had raised $50,000 for the capital campaign, but this was enough of a sign that they knew they had to keep going. By April 2000, they had reached the $100,000 benchmark, enough to buy the lots just north of the church plant, where the family life center would stand.

Bell said their next step was to hire architect Roger Stevens to draw up plans for the facility.

"After that, (the project) really began to take off. We continued to give to the capital campaign in addition to our tithes and offerings, and we began asking friends of Ideal, and those who believe in this community, to invest, and to sow seeds into the ministry of the family life center. From the beginning, this has been much more than just a Greater Ideal project," he added. "We want it to be city-wide, and we're asking for everyone's involvement, because this is just the beginning of what God has given us to do in this community."

To finance the building, the board first approached Bank of America, where the church had had an account for its entire existence. "They offered to finance half the project, and we had to have more than that," Bells said. "Roger put us in touch with a company in California called Commonwealth that sent us a letter committing to finance the entire amount. Meanwhile, Roy Nelson, a member of our church, suggested that we contact Stacy Adams of Wells Fargo, and he gave us a better deal than Commonwealth."

Bell said he could see the hand of God in every step of the process.

"Stacy is such a fine Christian, and then about three weeks before we began work on the building, Leonard Roper, a retired builder who now does this kind of work as a ministry, came to us with an offer (to build the center).

"God has shown us that if we'll just be obedient to him and do those things Christ has shown us to do, that he will greatly bless this community."

Bell said even the burial of the young drug dealer had a side effect of blessing.

"At that funeral, we had a packed house, and during our altar call, we had 35 of these young people come to dedicate their lives to Christ. Then during the next weeks, more came, and in less than 30 days, we had had 65 come to Christ.

"We're not talking about church children here," he added. "These were drug dealers, drug addicts, young women who had been prostituting their bodies since they were 12 years old.

"We knew that they would never be comfortable in church, not at first, so we created a survival kit, a new-members class that teaches you everything you need to know to survive in today's world, and we're renting the community center on Butternut Street on Monday nights where we bring them together in a non-church, non-threatening environment.

We're also doing the survival kit ministry at Midland College on Friday nights, and on (Friday we started) a basketball and volleyball league. We're just trying to open up ministries in a non-traditional way.

"In the past, all our programs have been in church surroundings, but we have some folks who are not going to come to the church house. However, they will let us come to their house, so that's what we're doing."

Baptist church participates in annual congregation exchange

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

We've all heard of clergy exchanges, but what about congregation exchanges?

The entire congregation of Greater Ideal Baptist Church of Midland climbs aboard its bus and heads for Phoenix, Ariz., every year to con-celebrate with New Hope Christian Center, a Phoenix church engaged in ministry to Phoenix's poorer areas. And New Hope later reciprocates by gathering its entire congregation for a trip to Midland.

The Rev. George Bell, pastor of Greater Ideal Baptist church, grew up in Midland, but moved to Phoenix while in high school, and lived there until he assumed the pastorate of Greater Ideal two years ago.

He didn't burn his bridges behind him, however. When one of his close friends — who had served with Bell on the board of deacons of a Phoenix church — was called to pastor a new church in Phoenix, he called Bell.

"Alfred Smith and I graduated from high school together, and his church, New Hope Christian Center, is smaller than ours, but it has a similar vision," Bell said.

"The church was located on the north side of Phoenix, in one of the nicer areas of the city, but they moved to the south side in order to minister to drug addicts, to prostitutes and to people who are less fortunate.

"We shared stories of our congregations and how wonderful they were, and then, of course, we would tell the congregations about each other," Bell said. "And finally, we decided it would be a great blessing to minister to one another, similar to the apostolic ministries of the New Testament."

Bell said the trip to Phoenix is like a picnic.

"I can't tell you how many different pies and cakes and fried chickens come onto that bus," he said. "It's like a 12-hour picnic, with all the eating and singing and testifying and praying going on, and witnessing to one another. It's just like a big family coming together.

"When we get to Phoenix, we start the meetings on Saturday, out in the park where everybody can see us and come and join us; and we continue the entire weekend."

Bell said the trip is exhausting, but that the participants don't really feel any adverse effects until after they return to Midland.

"Our people are so pumped up that they don't even feel the sleep they miss, they're so excited about getting there. It really doesn't seem like a 12-hour trip.

"Then after we get back, we take a couple of days to recuperate, and we're ready to get back into the ministry again."

Case of allegedly raped 15-year-old model shows fashion's dark side

By Alessandra Rizzo
Associated Press

MILAN, Italy — Blond, with that in-demand innocent schoolgirl look, a 15-year-old model from Slovenia came to Milan with hopes of gracing magazine covers. Instead, she got caught up in a circle of nightlife and drugs, was allegedly raped and wound up in a hospital.

The case, coming in the middle of fashion shows in Milan, is the latest scandal involving the dark side of Italy's fashion capital: a not-so-underground world of parties, cocaine, easy sex and — of course — models.

"This life corresponds to the idea of success these girls have," Silvia Ranzi, a booking agent at Flash Model Management, the agency that hired the girl, said Friday.

The scandal has evoked the case of Terry Broome, an American model who was convicted of murdering a Milan playboy in 1984. The Broome story was laced with accounts of abundant cocaine and alcohol, and insiders say things have only gotten wilder.

In 1998, a 19-year-old Israeli beauty queen was raped at knifepoint while in Italy to audition for modeling jobs. An Israeli travel agent was convicted in the case.

As Milan Prosecutor Marco Ghezzi seeks the indictment of two Flash Model executives, many in the fashion industry blamed the girl's father, who brought her to Milan then headed back to Slovenia after a week.

Representatives of the agency called themselves "victims of fashion-world parasites" and said they could not be expected to replace the girl's parents.

"I wouldn't even leave a 15-year-old girl with nuns," said Beppe Modenese, a founder of Milan fashion week. "Her parents just shouldn't have left her alone."

The girl was first spotted in Slovenia during a modeling casting.

"She was dressed like a schoolgirl: blue suit, white stockings, no heels," recounted Massimo Mandelli, one of the two executives accused in the case. "I thought she had what it takes."

A few months later, in October, she arrived in Milan and landed at Mandelli's agency. In business since 1984, Flash Model is well known in the fashion world and for representing such tennis stars as Anna Kournikova and Martina Hingis in Italian advertising campaigns.

A group of models take the catwalk for Trend Les Copains fall-winter fashion collection in Milan. The case of a 15-year-old Slovenian model caught up in a circle of nightlife and drugs came in the middle of fashions shows in Milan and was the latest scandal involving the dark side of Italy's fashion capital: a world of parties, cocaine, easy sex.

The girl from Slovenia posed for photographers to build her "book," the portfolio young models need to attract designers.

After her father left, the girl was given a cellular phone and an apartment to share with a model from California. By the girl's account, according to the prosecutor, a few days later she was taking cocaine, hanging out with playboys and going to discos until the early hours.

"It is a dangerous world out there," Ann Christiane Peine, a 19-year-old model from Germany, said after a fashion show. "You shouldn't start too young, not before 18 when you are much more responsible."

Prosecutor Ghezzi, in a telephone interview, said the Slovenian model told him she was raped by a man in the bathroom of one of Milan's fashionable nightclubs.

She told Ghezzi she had consented to "many" sex acts with other men on previous nights and to taking drugs.

"Fifteen year olds who are in Italy seeking work and don't speak the language need to be protected, even against their own will," Ghezzi said. "Someone must be held responsible."

The girl developed a vaginal infection and went to a hospital accompanied by Ranzi, the booking agent, where she told doctors her story.

Police and the prosecutor were then alerted.

Ghezzi has accused the two agency executives, Mandelli and Alberto Righini, with abandonment of minors, a charge usually applied in the case of children under age 14. But it can be extended to anyone else deemed unable to care for themselves, and Ghezzi argues that applies to the teen-age model.

A judge must now decide whether or not to indict the executives.

Giorgio Armani, one of the biggest names in the industry, supported the prosecutor.

"I agree with those who say that the agencies should have the legal role of looking after models who are minors during the time parents entrust them to the agencies," he was quoted as saying in Italian newspapers.

More than one designer has called for a minumum age of 16 for models, like France has.

The girl has returned to Slovenia and, according to Ghezzi, is undergoing counseling.

The two executives fend off the accusations, blaming not only the father, but what they called a "playboy network" surrounding the fashion world.

"In Italy, a model can live without spending a penny. From breakfast to restaurants and discos, they can get everything for free," Mandelli said.

American hostages head home; Ecuadoreans fear surge in kidnappings

By Gonzalo Solano
Associated Press

QUITO, Ecuador — Smiling and appearing rejuvenated, four freed American oil workers headed for home late Friday as Ecuadoreans expressed concern that the reported $13 million ransom could set off a kidnapping industry in their unstable country.

The Americans, held hostage along with three others for months, had been recovering from their ordeal at Quito's five-star Hilton Colon. They left for the airport just before dark and boarded a jet that took off for the United States. Its precise destination wasn't disclosed.

The men had earlier shaved scraggly beards and trimmed long hair that grew during 141 days of grueling captivity. Their captors, described as a professional gang of Colombian kidnappers, kept them on a jungle march almost continuously.

The captives — who also included a Chilean, an Argentine and a New Zealander — were picked up by a military patrol at a prearranged rendezvous point Thursday in Ecuador's oil-rich northeast Amazon jungle near the border with Colombia.

Foreign Minister Heinz Moeller said Friday that the ransom would be used by the kidnappers "to step up violence, perhaps other kidnappings or other crimes" along Ecuador's northern border region.

Moeller said in speech in Washington that Ecuador's security forces stayed on the sidelines during the four-month hostage ordeal at the request of the U.S., Chilean and Argentine governments.

He also said the kidnappers could be members of various Colombian paramilitary or rebel groups, "for sure financed by the drug lords."

The commander of Ecuador's air force, Gen. Oswaldo Dominguez, said of the widely reported ransom: "We celebrate their liberation, but this is a bad sign that could eventually promote a perverse industry of abduction."

The kidnappers killed Ronald Sander, 54, of Sunrise Beach, Mo., last month to pressure his employer, Tulsa, Okla.-based Helmerich & Payne, Inc., to pay up.

The Americans freed Thursday were identified as David Bradley, another Helmerich & Payne employee from Casper, Wyo.; and Arnold Alford, Steve Derry and Jason Weber of Gold Hill, Ore., all employees of Erickson Air-Crane, a helicopter company.

German Scholz of Chile, left, and Americans Arnold Arfold, center, and Steve Derry, right, are ecorted by soldiers to a waiting helicopter at Batallion 26, in Lago Agrio, after they were freed Thursday. Ecuador's defense ministry said in a statement the freed men, who also included a Chilean, an Argentine and a New Zealander, were released before noon Thursday. They were kidnapped last October in Ecuador's petroleum-rich northeast jungle.

The men were seized Oct. 12 from an oil camp in the Pompeya jungle region, about 45 miles south of the border with Colombia, and flown deep into the jungle in a hijacked helicopter.

They said they did not know Sander had been murdered until after their release.

German Scholz, a Chilean consultant for European energy giant Repsol-YPF, told Channel 10 television Thursday shortly after being freed that the kidnappers told them Sander had been liberated as part of a ransom deal.

"On Jan. 24, the day that we were separated from him, we shook hands and said goodbye," Scholz recalled. "The promise was that they were freeing Ron because that was the deal they had agreed to with the oil companies."

The ransom payment has sparked a debate about how to prevent a spillover of Colombia's thriving kidnapping trade in the lawless border region that separates the two countries.

Colombia has the world's highest kidnapping rate, with about 3,700 abductions ever year, most by leftist guerrillas and common criminals.

Tiny, impoverished Ecuador has suffered severe political instability in recent years, including two military-supported coups. It is seen as having little ability to control violence spilling over the border.

The secretary of Ecuador's bishops' conference, Monsignor Jose Vicente Equiguren, said the success of the kidnapping "may also lead others to believe that it is a good business and to attempt it."

However, the chief of Ecuador's anti-kidnapping police unit, Bolivar Cardenas, said interviews with the freed hostages provided information that could help thwart future abduction attempts.

"We are going to use all the information that they gave us so that we'll be able to prevent this situation from happening again," said Cardenas, who also linked the kidnapping to armed groups in Colombia.

The men's companies have not publicly confirmed the ransom payment.

An oil industry source from one of the companies told The Associated Press that the $13 million wrapped in plastic was thrown from a helicopter near the banks of the San Miguel River, which separates Ecuador from Colombia.

The kidnappers are believed responsible for the 1999 abduction of eight foreign oil pipeline workers. The Alberta-based pipeline company that employed of the seven Canadians and one American has never confirmed that it paid $3.5 million for their release.

African leaders push for union at summit

SIRTE, Libya (AP) — African leaders on Friday declared that an African political and economic union would become a reality, but said the idea remains a few nations shy of formal ratification.

The "United States of Africa" — a brainchild of Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi — would involve an African central bank, a Court of Justice, a common currency and an African parliament. But the parliament would not make laws and the union is expected to be largely symbolic.

In a resolution ending the two-day Organization of African Unity summit in the Libyan coastal town of Sirte, the leaders said 51 of the 53 OAU members had signed the African Union proposal, but that ratification by a two-third majority, or 36 states, has yet to be reached.

Still, African nations had decided "to proudly declare the establishment of the African Union by the unanimous will of member states," the summit's resolution said.

Delegates applauded warmly as OAU Secretary-General Salim Ahmed Salim read the resolution. Gadhafi clapped, waved his fists and banged on his desk in a show of jubilation.

"From here begins a new balance of power in the world," Gadhafi said in a brief address.

Africa, the world's poorest continent, is torn by civil wars and relinquishing sovereignty isn't likely to appeal to many OAU members.

Gadhafi, who has sometimes used his country's oil wealth to persuade small African nations to support his ideas, paid membership arrears owed to the OAU by at least 10 member states so they could participate in the Sirte summit.

Signing the proposal, which was drafted in Libya in 1999, does not imply ratification. But the resolution said that ratification was expected before the July OAU summit in Lusaka, Zambia.

Former South African President Nelson Mandela, who attended the summit as an observer, on Friday called for the lifting of U.N. sanctions imposed on Libya after the 1988 bombing of a U.S. airliner over Lockerbie, Scotland. The bombing killed 270 people.

The sanctions were suspended, but not abolished, in 1999 after Libya handed over for trial two Libyans indicted for the bombing. A special Scottish court in the Netherlands on Jan. 31 sentenced one to life in prison and acquitted the other.

Harry Potter creator J.K. Rowling receives award from Prince Charles

LONDON — Harry Potter creator J.K. Rowling received the title Officer of the Order of the British Empire, or OBE, Friday from Prince Charles — himself a fan of the schoolboy wizard.

The prince asked whether the movie version of "Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone," currently being filmed in Britain, would live up to the book.

"He said he can't wait, and he wanted to know whether it was true to how I saw the story in my mind," Rowling said after the investiture ceremony at Buckingham Palace. "I said that it was,

"It's always very difficult for TV and film adaptations to live up to a book," said the 35-year-old Rowling, who received her award for services to children's literature.

"But I had a lot of input in this one and although it can never be 100 percent, I think it's going to be great."

Rowling's four Harry Potter books, recounting the adventures of Harry and his friends at Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry, have sold more than 30 million copies around the world.

NEW YORK — Apparently, being married to a billionaire doesn't come with an instant line of credit at one Upper East Side dentist's office.

Actress Ellen Barkin, wife of billionaire Revlon chairman Ronald Perelman, found that out the hard way this week when her credit card was turned down at the practice, according to the Daily News.

After the card was rejected three times, Barkin called someone to sort out the problem, according to eyewitnesses cited by New York Daily News gossip columnist Mitchell Fink.

Fink said Barkin, who was accompanied at the dental office on Monday by one of her children and a nanny, called him Wednesday to explain that the card was turned down because it had expired, not because she and her husband were suddenly falling behind on their credit card bills.

"No, the card was not maxed out. The expiration date was 11-00," she said. "It was in my wallet on top of the new card, and I took the old card out by mistake."

NEW YORK — Director Daniel Minahan said he didn't even know the CBS show "Survivor" existed when he started work on his first feature film "Series 7," a satire of reality television.

"It's a very happy coincidence," Minahan, who also wrote the script, said Friday morning on NBC's "Today" show.

"Series 7," which opened Friday in New York and Los Angeles and goes wider on March 16, takes the genre to a bloodier, more violent level. Six people are picked to kill each other on a TV show called "The Contenders." Each contestant gets a gun and a cameraman; the person left standing wins.

Minahan, who watched hours of programs such as "The Real World" and "Cops" to give "Series 7" its authentic look, said he hopes people watch television differently after seeing this movie.

"I think people are really fascinated with reality TV because it gives them something to compare their lives to," he said. "That could be you on the screen, and I think that's very engaging. Unfortunately, I think a lot of shows on TV right now are particularly mean-spirited."

RUSSELL, Kan. — Former U.S. Senator Bob Dole returned home for a party recognizing what he called the "greatest generation."

The party on Thursday night, sponsored by Pepsi Cola, honored "soldiers, farmers, workers and families who all worked together to sustain this nation during World War II," Dole said.

Dole, a former vice presidential and presidential candidate and a World War II veteran, has helped raise about $150 million for a World War II memorial at the mall in Washington, D.C. It will take two years to build.

"We'd like to finish it," Dole said of the memorial, "so some of us can be there for the dedication."

About 300 people attended the event where World War II veterans were called forward for applause.

"It feels good to see them" and others in Russell, Dole said. "Every time I come home, there's some I don't see."

TULSA, Okla. — A member of the Christian rock band Raze was jailed after being arrested on rape and molestation charges.

Ja'Marc Antoine Davis, 25, was arrested around 10 p.m. Thursday at the Brady Theater, Detective Chris Witt said. The arrest came after the Tulsa band's first concert in a planned 30-city tour.

Davis is charged with five counts of lewd molestation, three counts of rape by instrumentation and three counts of forcible sodomy. He was being held on $550,000 bond.

The charges accuse Davis of having a sexual relationship with a former backup dancer for the group starting when she was 13 and he was 22, according to an arrest affidavit. Police said the suspected sexual relationship with the girl occurred from 1998-99.

Davis met the girl and her family through their church, the affidavit said. The family asked Davis to tutor the girl, her sister and her brother, who also had a Christian-based music group.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, March 3, 2001:

You are unusually insightful, and you will gain financially as a result. Often, others don't see what you see. Home and security are dominant in your year's theme. You will make decisions for the long term. You also have an ability to express your feelings and thoughts in a unique way. If you are single, an especially satisfying relationship enters your life after midsummer. You might want to make this more than a romance. If you are attached, your relationship warms because of your openness and caring. You feel as if you have fallen in love again. GEMINI helps you understand yourself.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ Your dreams give you a strong sense of direction. Reveal more of your deeper thoughts to a partner or friend. Spontaneity surrounds friends and plans. Don't force structure. Laugh and be free with others. Tonight: Wherever you are, the party is.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ You might have a strong idea about what you would like to happen. Yet trying to force a situation easily backfires. Discuss your feelings with a loved one who understands you. A parent, aunt or uncle shows concern. Tonight: Curb a tendency to go way overboard.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Your smile wins the day. A friend might have stronger feelings for you than you realize. Be willing to talk through a situation. See the big picture. Schedule a trip or take off on a day trip with a friend. You need a change of scenery. Tonight: Others go along with whatever you want.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ You might not want to discuss with everyone what is going on with you. A trusted partner understands a lot more than you realize. Lighten up with this person; he really does care. Don't try to control another's reaction or behavior. Tonight: Be with your favorite person.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ What appears as a suggestion or idea out of the blue could be key to making a relationship better. Understand more about what you need to make you happy, but also look from another's point of view. You gain because of your willing attitude. Tonight: Where your friends are.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ You assume one more responsibility. Though you might complain about the burden, understand that in some way you allow this to happen. A friend or loved one has a nice way of thanking you for taking the load off. Let go, for a little while, of having to do for others. Tonight: Accept an invitation out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Take off, if you can, overnight or for a day trip. You might be surprised at how some distance will change your perspective. Have you been too hard on another? A child or loved one could surprise you. Go with the moment. Tonight: Follow the music.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Unexpected developments mark your decisions. Think about a partner. You might need to be less demanding or perhaps let go of a special wish or desire. Express your nurturing and caring so another can feel as good as you do. Tonight: Dinner for two.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Your high energy works well with a partner or loved one. Jump on a surprise and run with it. Schedule a favorite pastime or happening with a child or loved one. Someone appreciates your sharing a new interest. Tonight: Go along with another's ideas.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ Pitch in where a family member doesn't seem to have follow-through. Price an enhancement for your home. You might be surprised at your options. Keep relaxation your theme, even if it involves physical activity. Tonight: Make plans as easy as possible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ Your playfulness comes forward when dealing with a child or loved one. You know how to have a good time and also how to help others lighten up about something. Speak your mind, but be gentle about how you frame your words. Tonight: Be a firecracker.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ A decision around your home needs to take an even higher priority. You understand much more than you realize. Extend your caring and do something special for a loved one. Settle down and have a close talk. Tonight: Go for a drive with a loved one.

Fourth-graders accused of raping classmate

By Angela K. Brown
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Authorities are proceeding with a case against one of two fourth-graders accused of raping a 10-year-old girl at school.

Police have filed a delinquent conduct charge of aggravated sexual assault against the 10-year-old boy, who was placed in his parents' custody. No charges will be filed against the 9-year-old because under Texas law children under age 10 cannot be prosecuted.

The boys were suspended and transferred to an alternative school after the girl reported the incident Feb. 10, Fort Worth police Lt. Duane Paul said.

The students were at Worth Heights Elementary during a Saturday tutoring session for fourth-graders. Before the sessions began, the boys dragged the girl screaming into the auditorium, where the 10-year-old boy held her down and the 9-year-old boy raped her, the girl told police.

"It wasn't a case where they knew her and were mad at her. They didn't know the girl," Paul said. "But we're not trying to find out why it happened as much as how the case will proceed from here."

The juvenile unit of the Tarrant County district attorney's office did not return calls to The Associated Press on Friday.

Although Principal Berty Magana and teachers were in the building, no campus monitor was on duty when the attack occurred, said Frankie Batts, assistant superintendent of elementary operations at the Fort Worth Independent School District.

She said she has since told all principals to have adult monitors walking the hallways during Saturday sessions.

Children who commit sexual crimes usually have been sexually abused or influenced by their peers, family or the media, said Tod W. Burke, associate professor of criminal justice at Radford University in Radford, Va.

The chances for rehabilitation decrease as a child grows, he said.

The crime is a symptom of a larger problem in the child's life, he said. But such cases are difficult because children learn the difference between right and wrong at different ages, he said.

"From ages 7 to 10 or 11, it becomes a little less clear. You have to look at it on an individual basis," Burke said. "It's not so much their chronological age as their mental age."

Investigators also must consider the child's intent during the crime when finding out whether a child is old enough to face responsibility for his or her actions, Burke said.

"I don't know if these kids were thinking in a sexual way or about power, control and humiliating this little girl," he said. "Many kids don't even know what rape is. But I'm sure they knew what they were doing was wrong."

In a separate case in Indianapolis, a 16-year-old boy first convicted of rape at age 7 was sentenced Friday to 15 years in prison for rape.

An Indiana judge also ordered Jovan Watson, who was 14 when he raped a 12-year-old girl, to serve five years probation and undergo sexual offender and substance abuse counseling.

Watson's sentencing makes him the second-youngest inmate in Indiana's prison system, a state official said.

Tire maker settles lawsuits with Texas rollover victims

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston law firm has settled 26 lawsuits filed by accident victims who alleged tread separation on tires made by Bridgestone/Firestone Inc. caused their rollover crashes.

Linda Houssiere, of the firm Houssiere Durant and Houssiere, confirmed Friday the settlements involving 78 people who either were killed or injured in rollover wrecks. Most were Texans.

The lawsuits, filed in Harris and other counties around Texas, alleged tread separation in Firestone tires caused Ford Explorers to roll over.

Most of the firm's clients, who settled with Firestone at the end of last week, already had settled with Ford Motor Co. in the last few months, Houssiere said. The firm still has suits pending against the tire maker and Ford.

"(The clients) are ecstatic," Houssiere said. "I've done a lot of thinking about that, and I think it's because litigation didn't go on so long. They weren't put through depositions, hearings, or long protracted waiting. I've never seen clients so happy as these, because they didn't have time for animosity to build up."

None of Houssiere's cases was scheduled for trial before June, she said.

Terms of the confidential settlements were not revealed by Houssiere or Firestone, although the attorney said her firm's clients received "a premium."

Bridgestone/Firestone spokeswoman Jill Bratina confirmed the settlement without additional comment.

In August 2000, Firestone recalled 6.5 million tires after reports of hundreds of rollover accidents nationwide involving the combination of Firestone tires and Ford sport utility vehicles.

An outside consultant hired by Bridgestone/Firestone issued a study last month that found hot weather was a primary factor in the tire failures, but other factors included design; manufacturing differences among different Bridgestone/Firestone plants, especially the Decatur, Ill., plant; and usage.

Sanjay Govindjee, a civil engineer at the University of California-Berkeley, reached conclusions similar to those arrived at in December by the tire company's internal investigators.

In another Texas case handled by different law firm, Donna Bailey, 43, of Corpus Christi — left a quadriplegic as a result of an Explorer rollover — settled in January for an undisclosed amount.

The settlement occurred on the eve of her scheduled trial. No tread separation lawsuit against Ford or Bridgestone/Firestone has gone through a trial.

Four injured in bus-pickup crash

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Four people were injured Friday when a pickup truck jumped a median on Interstate 10 and hit a bus filled with high school students from Laredo.

None of the students was hurt, but the bus driver, two people from the truck and one person from a third vehicle were taken to a hospital with minor injuries.

The GMC Sierra pickup was east-bound on Interstate 10 in San Antonio around 9:30 a.m. when the driver lost control, police said. The pickup slid into a grassy median and hit a guardrail, careening into oncoming traffic.

It then collided with a charter bus filled with students from Laredo's United South High School. The bus veered and hit the rear bumper of a Kia Sportage SUV.

Complete driving confidence: 2001 LINCOLN NAVIGATOR SUV

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Based on the ultra modern Ford F-150 truck chassis, the Lincoln Navigator SUV is built alongside the Ford Expedition at the automaker's Michigan Truck facility in Wayne, Mich. First of all, make no mistake – this is a big truck!

With a 119.5 inch wheelbase, width of 79.9 inches and a curb weight of 5,557 pounds (four-wheel drive model), you can't miss it. But its heft is very deceiving. Available in two- or Control Trac four-wheel drive, the Navigator does not drive, handle or ride like any other truck. Powered by the sophisticated Triton 5.4L V-8 and joined to a silky-smooth four-speed automatic transmission, this Lincoln drives more like a luxury sedan than a SUV.

Improvements for 2001 include Lincoln's new Complimentary Maintenance Program. This is a factory program that provides no-charge regular maintenance for the first three years or 36,000 miles. Lincoln leads the domestic luxury automakers by offering this service free of charge.

Navigator, along with all 2001 Lincolns will be available with advanced telematics and communications connectivity. This includes connectivity of a StarTAC cellular telephone, hands-free functionality through voice controls and 24-hour emergency assistance – available at the touch of a button. Access to news, stocks, weather, sports and e-mail will also be available on the same basis.

The Lincoln Navigator combines the comfort of a premium sedan with the confident ride of an advanced SUV. This is a vehicle for those motorists who want the functional attributes of a full-size utility vehicle, but who refuse to sacrifice luxury. On the road, the Lincoln is very nimble and easy to drive. The driver has a commanding view of the road; up high, safe and secure. The powertrain is powerful, quiet and reassuring.

Inside the cabin, the Navigator is chock full of creature comforts with a wood/leather steering wheel that is very comfortable to use. The standard level of luxury matches or exceeds most luxury cars! Displays and controls are excellent, with a cavernous center armrest that can swallow the $595 optional CD player and still have plenty of room to store stuff. Ventilation is excellent throughout the vehicle.

The Navigator comes standard with power-adjustable brake and accelerator pedals – a first for any car, truck or sport utility. The driver and front passenger have plenty of places to put a cup, can, or bottle without compromise.

Lincoln did not forget the second row passengers either. With a choice of a very comfortable 60/40 split bench seat or two Captain chairs and a large console between them with big cupholders and lots of storage room, the second seat passengers are very well taken care of indeed. Leg room for second seat passengers is generous as well.

The third row seating is comfortable for children or small adults. Maximum cargo capacity with the optional second row seats folded and third row seat removed is 109.9 cu. ft.

By the Numbers

Engine performance numbers are 300 hp at 5,000 rpm and 355 lb/ft torque at 2,750 rpm. EPA fuel economy for the Lincoln is 12 city/17 highway in two-wheel drive and 12 city/16 highway in four-wheel drive. Underhood fluids are clearly marked, but a bit of a reach due to the height of the vehicle.

A Class III trailer hitch is standard equipment. Properly equipped, the Lincoln Navigator has a maximum payload of 1,540 pounds and can tow a trailer with a maximum weight of 8,800 pounds.

Standard safety/security equipment includes: dual front airbags, driver and front passenger seat mounted side impact airbags, four-wheel anti-lock disc brakes, side impact door beams, fog lamps, remote keyless entry, Securilock passive anti-theft system, limited slip differential, full-size spare tire and automatic door locks.

Optional safety/security equipment includes the Lincoln Navigation system ($1,995) and/or the Reverse Sensing system ($255).

The base Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the 2001 Lincoln Navigator SUV starts at $43,645 for two-wheel drive and $47,395 for four-wheel drive. Destination charge adds $690. Dealers report good supplies.

Authentic Capability: 2001 JEEP WRANGLER SUV

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Jeep vehicles have led many drivers off-road into the wild all over the world during the last 50 years. The Jeep Wrangler can stake direct claim as a descendent of the rich Jeep tradition. Over the years, the brand has earned its reputation as a rugged, go-anywhere vehicle by sheer experience throughout the world.

The Jeep thrived in locales where roads were merely suggestions and repair shops were far and few between. Completely redesigned during 1997, the Wrangler received a revised dashboard, displays and controls for 2001.

According to the automaker, the rear-drive Jeep Wrangler, with Command Trac part-time four-wheel drive, is customized by more of its owners than any other vehicle sold by DaimlerChrysler Corp. Built in Toledo, Ohio, the Wrangler is available in SE, Sport and Sahara models.

Buyers have a choice of a 2.5L, four-cylinder or 4.0L, six-cylinder engine with the standard five-speed manual or optional three-speed automatic ($625) transmissions. Driving a top-of-the-line Sahara equipped with the standard powertrain – 4.0L six-cylinder powerplant bolted to a five-speed manual gearbox – in winter, afforded the opportunity to test out the optional hardtop ($920 SE/ Sport, $1,160 Sahara), complete with full metal doors and crank-up windows.

With better overall build quality than previous Wranglers, this vehicle takes tried and true to new levels.

On the road, the powertrain is strong and sure, and seems to pull forever! Handling inspires the feeling of going anywhere and doing almost anything. Robust suspension hardware is the heart of this Jeep – front and rear live axles with coil springs and track bar work with front and rear stabilizer bars and gas charged shock absorbers to keep everything manageable. The fuel tank and transfer case are protected with full skid plate shields as standard equipment, not optional like some other products in the market.

Inside, excellent "in your face" displays and controls greet the driver, with very comfortable seats and a commanding view of the road. As for the rear "seat" in the hardtop configuration – forget about it! It is best used as a shelf to store bags, briefcase, and/or other stuff.

Little things mean a lot in this Jeep – like the fact that the fog lights can be operated independently of the regular headlights; that by removing a specific fuse in the fuse box the driver can start and stop the Jeep in gear with just the key – a must for serious off-roaders that need to crawl over a large obstacle very slowly with great control. The Jeep Wrangler, despite its city slicker looks, is still a Jeep – the ultimate SUV for the diehard off-road enthusiast.

By the Numbers

Engine performance numbers are 2.5L four-cylinder – 120 hp at 5,400 rpm and 140 lb/ft of torque at 3,500 rpm; 4.0L six-cylinder – 181 hp at 4,600 rpm and 222 lb/ft of torque at 2,800 rpm. EPA fuel economy ranges from 19 city/20 highway for the four-cylinder/manual to 15 city/17 highway for the six-cylinder/automatic using regular unleaded. Underhood fluids are easy to reach and clearly marked. Properly equipped, the Wrangler can tow up to 2,000 pounds.

Standard safety /security equipment includes: dual front airbags. Sahara adds fog lamps. Four-wheel anti-lock brakes are $600 (N/A on SE) and Trac-Lok locking rear differential, $285. Fog lamps are $180 on SE and Sport.

The base Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the Jeep Wrangler starts at $14,890 for the SE to $22,435 for the Sahara. Destination charges add $585.
