Changes wrought by budget struggles

Republicans offer new compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican leaders, hoping to rebuild their successful budget coalition of last year, are offering a new plan with sharply scaled back domestic spending and $95 billion in tax increases over three years.

But Democrats and Republicans alike agree that finding a majority this election year in the fractious House will be an uphill battle.

"The No. 1 problem before the House is not which one (budget) to pass, but being able to pass any of them," said House Budget Committee Chairman James R. Jones, D-Okla.

During a flurry of Capitol Hill news conferences Wednesday, separate plans backed by Republican leaders, liberal Democrats and a small group of Democrats and Republicans were unveiled to compete with the plan drafted last week by majority Democrats on the House Budget Committee.

House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois hopes to repeat the budget victories that outnumbered Republicans scored last year with the "bipartisan recovery budget" he has worked out with conservative Democrats and moderate Republicans.

In the Senate, meanwhile, majority Republican leaders Wednesday stripped their budget of plans for $40 billion in Social Security savings over three years. At the same time, they restored $3 billion for a variety of domestic programs including Medicare, guaranteed student loans, housing, veterans programs and space.

Michel's budget calls for deeper cuts in domestic and benefit programs and the defense buildup than either the Jones plan or the proposal under consideration in the Senate.

President Reagan was calling Republican members of the Senate today to lobby against any effort to scale back previously approved tax cuts.

Bipartisan battles

Office of Management and Budget Director David Stockman, left, and House Republican leader Bob Michel of Illinois Wednesday work on the bipartisan budget compromise everyone in Washington is hoping will satisfy everyone involved in the process of deciding and improving the fiscal year 1983 national budget.

Stockman changes position

WASHINGTON (AP) — David Stockman, saying he's learned a bit since becoming President Reagan's budget director, has recanted his previous opposition to a constitutional amendment to balance the federal budget.

"I would like to think we keep learning over life," Stockman said Wednesday in explaining to a House subcommittee why he now supports the amendment he once opposed as probably unnecessary and possibly unworkable.

See related story, Page 7A

Stockman was the first administration witness to testify before the House panel since Reagan announced he wholeheartedly endorsed the amendment.

Stockman told the House Judiciary subcommittee on monopolies and commercial law that he had decided since becoming director of the Office of Management and Budget that the problems with the budget process are too great to be cured internally.

"The (spending) problems probably are far greater than I thought," he said. "The problems I saw with a constitutional amendment are not as severe as I thought." He said the amendment was necessary to correct an inherent congressional bias toward spending more and taxing more.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on the Constitution, predicted today that the proposed amendment would pass the Senate within the next couple of months.

Hatch said the provision faces a tough fight in the House because the House Judiciary Committee is dominated by "liberals who oppose any limit on spending." But he said he believed the House would approve it by a wider margin than the Senate if it reached the floor.

Permian Basin mayors tell different city stories

Answering questions posed by local media at the Wednesday meeting of the Petroplex News Association are Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant, left, and Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Issues and opinions affecting Midland and Odessa differed Wednesday as the mayors of both cities faced a roomful of journalists and questions during the Petroplex News Association's meeting in Midland Center.

Neither Bob Bryant of Odessa nor G. Thane Akins of Midland could predict what the cities' budgets for next year would be but both noted it would be an increase.

Both cities are in the early stages of putting together a budget for fiscal year 1982-83. Bryant said preliminary figures show $47 million in expenditures and $41 million in revenues.

Akins said that Midland's department heads are still putting together proposals. "But we know we've got an increase in population and an increase in demand for city services. However, our tax base has expanded and our sales tax revenue has gone up to help us."

Faced with a shortage of police officers and a request for adding 64 more, Bryant said if staffed fully the city would have 2.5 police personnel per 1,000 population "which is at the level we should be."

ODESSA HAS SENT out a recruiting team to various cities in search of officers, and brought in six from an already short-staffed Amarillo force. To solve future problems with insufficient officers, Bryant said Odessa is looking at a plan where "we would grow our own" in which high school seniors would be attracted to that job field. By the age of 20, they would be graduating as qualified officers.

Akins noted that Midland's police force is at full staff, but acknowledged that turnover in all city departments had been high until pay raises and benefits were upgraded.

"I wasn't aware you were at full staff," joked Bryant. "We'll have to send our recruiting team over there."

On the issue of one-way streets, which were recently instituted in Midland, Akins said the change has been successful and he predicts it won't be too much longer before Louisiana and Michigan are extended one-way to Andrews Highway.

The most serious short-term problem facing Odessa is water, said Bryant, in answer to a question concerning possible annexation of a tract near Odessa.

If the vote comes down to him for a decision, Bryant alluded that he would veto it.

"We have a critical water problem. If we have a dry August, we might have to ration water. We can produce 31 million gallons of water per day through our water treatment plant. On peak days last August we delivered 41 million gallons" with the additional amount coming out of a reserve, he said, noting the reserve wouldn't last long.

MIDLAND'S PROBLEM with water came not with the drinkable kind but how to dispose of the waste. Akins said the city council is negotiating on acquiring land for a proposed sewage disposal site southeast of the city. A contract on using that water has been submitted by landowner J. "Timber" Floyd and Akins noted the council is working "on resubmitting it. We hope to have the land acquisition done by the end of the month."

Bonds for the $20 million plan will be sold through the Colorado River Municipal Water District, and Akins predicted the bond sale will be held in

TI, Continental fates closely linked

HOUSTON (AP) — An auditors' report says if debt-ridden Continental Airlines goes bankrupt, loan agreements could kill its sister carrier Texas International Airlines as well.

The opinion by Arthur Andersen & Co., the auditor whose figures were used in Texas Air Corp.'s annual report, said a collapse of Continental would cause the failure, in domino fashion, of Texas International.

Texas International marketing executive James O'Donnell said the report is "technically accurate," but that the airlines have developed a more promising outlook in the last six weeks — partially because of the bankruptcy of competitor Braniff International.

Recent traffic levels have increased by 24 percent for Continental and by 27 percent for Texas International, said O'Donnell.

Still, Texas Air President Frank Lorenzo predicted the company would "continue to experience significant losses over the near term."

Texas Air Corp. owns Texas International, 51 percent of Continental and 67 percent of New York Air.

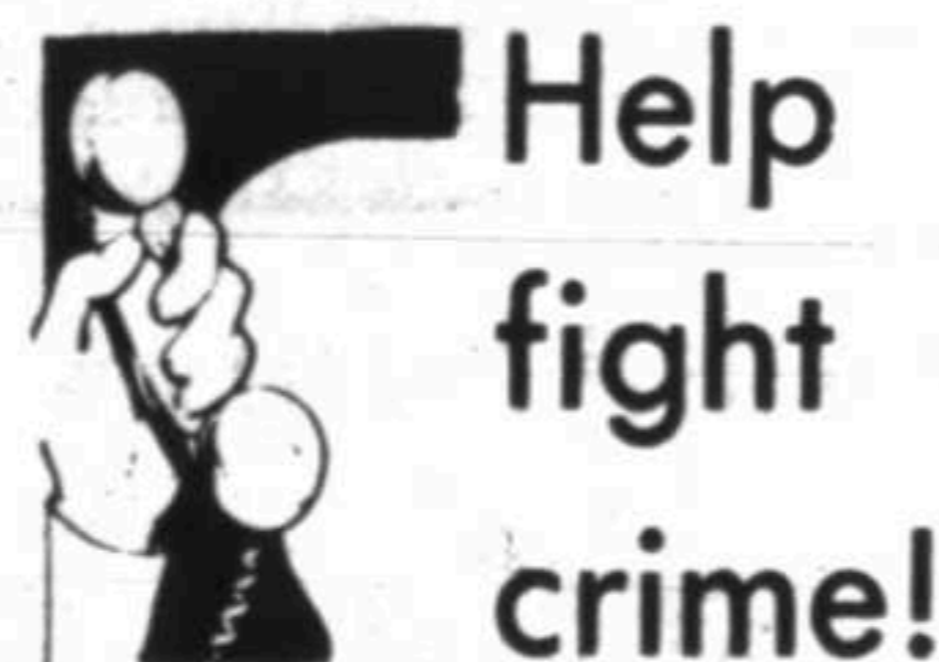

The Andersen statement said that if Continental collapses, "adjustments might create defaults under Texas International Airlines' loan covenants which would make such debt subject to demand for accelerated repayment."

"This factor," said the opinion, "indicates that should Continental Airlines be unable to continue in existence, Texas International Airlines, in turn, might be unable to continue in existence."

For 1981, Texas Air reported a loss of $47.2 million on revenue of $719.4 million, compared with a 1980 profit of $4 million on $291.5 million in revenue.

Continental reported a net loss of $60.4 million in 1981, on top of a $20.7 million loss the year before.

Earlier this year, the boards of directors of Continental and Texas Air approved a combination of the two airlines into one Texas Air subsidiary.

Hatch says threats don't scare him

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Labor Committee is vowing to pursue allegations linking Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan to union payoffs and organized crime figures — despite an anonymous death threat to a committee investigator.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, disclosed that a committee investigator got a call warning him "to lay off" Donovan, the subject of a special prosecutor's investigation in New York City and a continuing Senate committee probe.

Hatch, who declined to identify the staff member, said "there's no proof that it could be attributed to anybody. But, basically it was to lay off Mr. Donovan."

"It was a serious call. It was a threat," said Hatch, adding the matter had been referred to the FBI. The senator also said, "I've had some minor threats in this matter, but I don't consider them significant."

One labor committee source, who declined to be named publicly, said the anonymous caller warned that if the investigator did not back away from the Donovan probe, "...your wife will end up in a pine box."

The labor secretary said through a spokesman late Wednesday that he would not comment on the death threat. Spokesman Vernon Louviere reiterated Donovan's position that he will not talk publicly about the allegations against him while the case is before a special grand jury in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Hatch's disclosure of the death threat came on the same day that the Utah senator and committee members said they were outraged by instigation of a counter-investigation of the labor committee.

Man arrested on attempted burglary

Police responding to a burglar alarm at White's Auto Store, 3 Meta Drive, Wednesday night arrested a young Midland man and jailed him on attempted burglary charges.

The officer making the arrest said he pulled into the alley behind the store with his lights out and saw a man standing near a partially open overhead door, the window of which had been removed. The 17-year-old suspect was arrested as he attempted to get in a car that was parked nearby.

Fire believed caused by a cigarette did extensive damage to a room at the Desert Inn Motel, 3103 Bankhead Highway, early this morning. Five fire department units responded to the blaze, which broke out in room 292 shortly after 3 a.m., and also destroyed the contents of the room.

In the first of what's expected to be a rash of such blazes, exploding fireworks did minor damage to the roof of a home owned by Don Hamilton of 710 Osage. The fire broke out shortly after midnight and was quickly extinguished.

Garden City Highway to be renovated

The state highway department has announced that renovation of the Garden City Highway — Texas 158 — will get under way next Wednesday with the erection of barricades and the imposition of a 45-mph speed limit.

The construction, which will take an estimated eight months to complete, involves reworking and resurfacing a 12-mile span of the road from about four miles south of Interstate 20 to the Crockett County line.

The work will be done in three-mile strips on half of the existing roadway, which will be closed to traffic. Crews will then complete the other half before moving on to the next three-mile strip. The D&H Paving Co. of Guyton, Okla., was awarded the $774,289 contract.

Air Force jet fighter crashes in Utah

HILL AIR FORCE BASE, Utah (AP) — An Air Force F-16 jet fighter crashed on the Utah Test and Training Range early today, killing the pilot, an Air Force spokesman said.

Lt. Col. Joe Winsett, director of public information at Hill Air Force Base, said the pilot was assigned to the 388th Tactical Fighter Wing at the Utah base. The pilot's identity was being withheld until relatives could be notified.

Base spokeswoman Connie Smith said the plane went down at 12:20 a.m. while on a training mission on the range west of Great Salt Lake, about 20 miles southwest of Lakeside.

The cause of the crash was not immediately known. Winsett said a crash investigation team was at the site.

Ms. Smith said it was the 20th crash of an Air Force F-16 since the highly sophisticated fighter began operating in 1979.

She said that so far this year, eight Air Force F-16s have crashed, six of them from Hill, a major training center for the fighter.

Hinckley upset by doctor's testimony

By LARRY MARGASAK

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr. buried his head in his arms and then left the courtroom when a psychiatrist recounted actress Jodie Foster's message to the defendant: "Drop dead."

Hinckley, on trial for shooting President Reagan and three other men, walked out of the courtroom a second time Wednesday when the psychiatrist discussed the protagonist in the movie "Taxi Driver."

The defense claims that Hinckley, who has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity, was obsessed with Miss Foster. She played a teen-aged prostitute in the film.

Before leaving the courtroom on both occasions, Hinckley looked pale, folded his arms on a table and put his head down like a child taking a nap at school. Defense lawyer Vincent J. Fuller then asked if his client could be excused.

Each time, a prosecutor continued the cross-examination of Dr. David Michael Bear, a defense psychiatrist who has concluded Hinckley suffered from severe mental illness when he shot Reagan. Bear was returning for more questioning today.

Although on the stand for two days, Bear virtually demanded more time to tell jurors that sophisticated brain scans confirmed his diagnosis of a severe form of schizophrenia.

When the trial resumed Wednesday morning, the doctor refused to answer questions from prosecutor Roger M. Adelman unless he could mention the brain scan results.

A furious U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker sent the jury away, pointed his finger at the Harvard Medical School professor and said: "You're not in a classroom, you're in a courtroom."

But Parker said he would hear oral argument on whether the brain scan evidence should be admitted.

Adelman argued the evidence should be barred unless a relationship can be shown between the brain scan results and Hinckley's behavior March 30, 1981, the day of the shooting.

Defense lawyers had told Parker that the 26-year-old Hinckley was upset by testimony about his mental condition.

"I think that the testimony that the defendant has been hearing the last two days has been very difficult for him. It is very personal to him," Fuller said during a mid-morning conference at the bench.

"If he wishes to be excused...I should request permission that he be excused...it is better for the whole proceeding," Fuller said. "But he is a very charged individual."

Parker replied, "You stand in close observation and contact, so if it does arise, you just say, 'Your honor, may I interrupt. Might I be heard for a second?'"

Hinckley first walked out about 2:30 p.m., shortly after Bear testified that the defendant had ignored the message Miss Foster politely gave him during a telephone conversation.

"The message is drop dead, go away," Bear said.

In less than an hour Hinckley was back in the courtroom. But at 3:55 p.m., he left for good while Bear was conceding that in many ways, Hinckley was different from Travis Bickle, the character in "Taxi Driver." The defense claims Hinckley got the idea to shoot a president from the film.

Bear and another psychiatrist have testified Hinckley believed he could enter into a magical union with Miss Foster by assassinating Reagan.

At day's end, Parker instructed the jury not to "react with either sympathy for or prejudice against Mr. Hinckley" because of his absences.

On May 12, Hinckley walked quickly out of the courtroom while videotaped testimony of Miss Foster was being shown to the jury.

During Wednesday's testimony, Bear acknowledged under cross-examination that while Hinckley closely identified with Bickle, there were at least 13 dissimilarities between the two men.

After Bear had listed the similarities between the men, such as that they both bought Army fatigue jackets, Adelman tried to show there were differences.

When Adelman asked if Hinckley wore the fatigue jacket at the time of the shooting, Bear answered, "No."

Deaf hold silent protest at KOSA-TV

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — For six Midlanders and one Odessan who maintain they never knew who shot J.R., it was a form of "silent" protest.

The scene was KOSA-TV in Odessa, so chosen because of its affiliation with what the group believes to be the real culprit — CBS — and the picketers were those who must live with silence every day of their lives and are deprived of the enjoyment and informational benefits of standard television.

Across the nation Wednesday, other hearing-impaired persons joined with these members of Midessa Association of the Deaf in protesting the failure of CBS to provide closed captions for their programming.

"The deaf all over the United States are getting together to try to help themselves — nobody else is helping us," said Midessa Association president Charles Archer of Midland, as he stood with picket in hand outside the KOSA-TV studios.

NBC, ABC and PBS already provide closed captioning on some of their programming through a method termed "line 21", for which a decoder costs more than $280, and it is CBS' failure to follow suit that has aroused the ire of the nation's deaf.

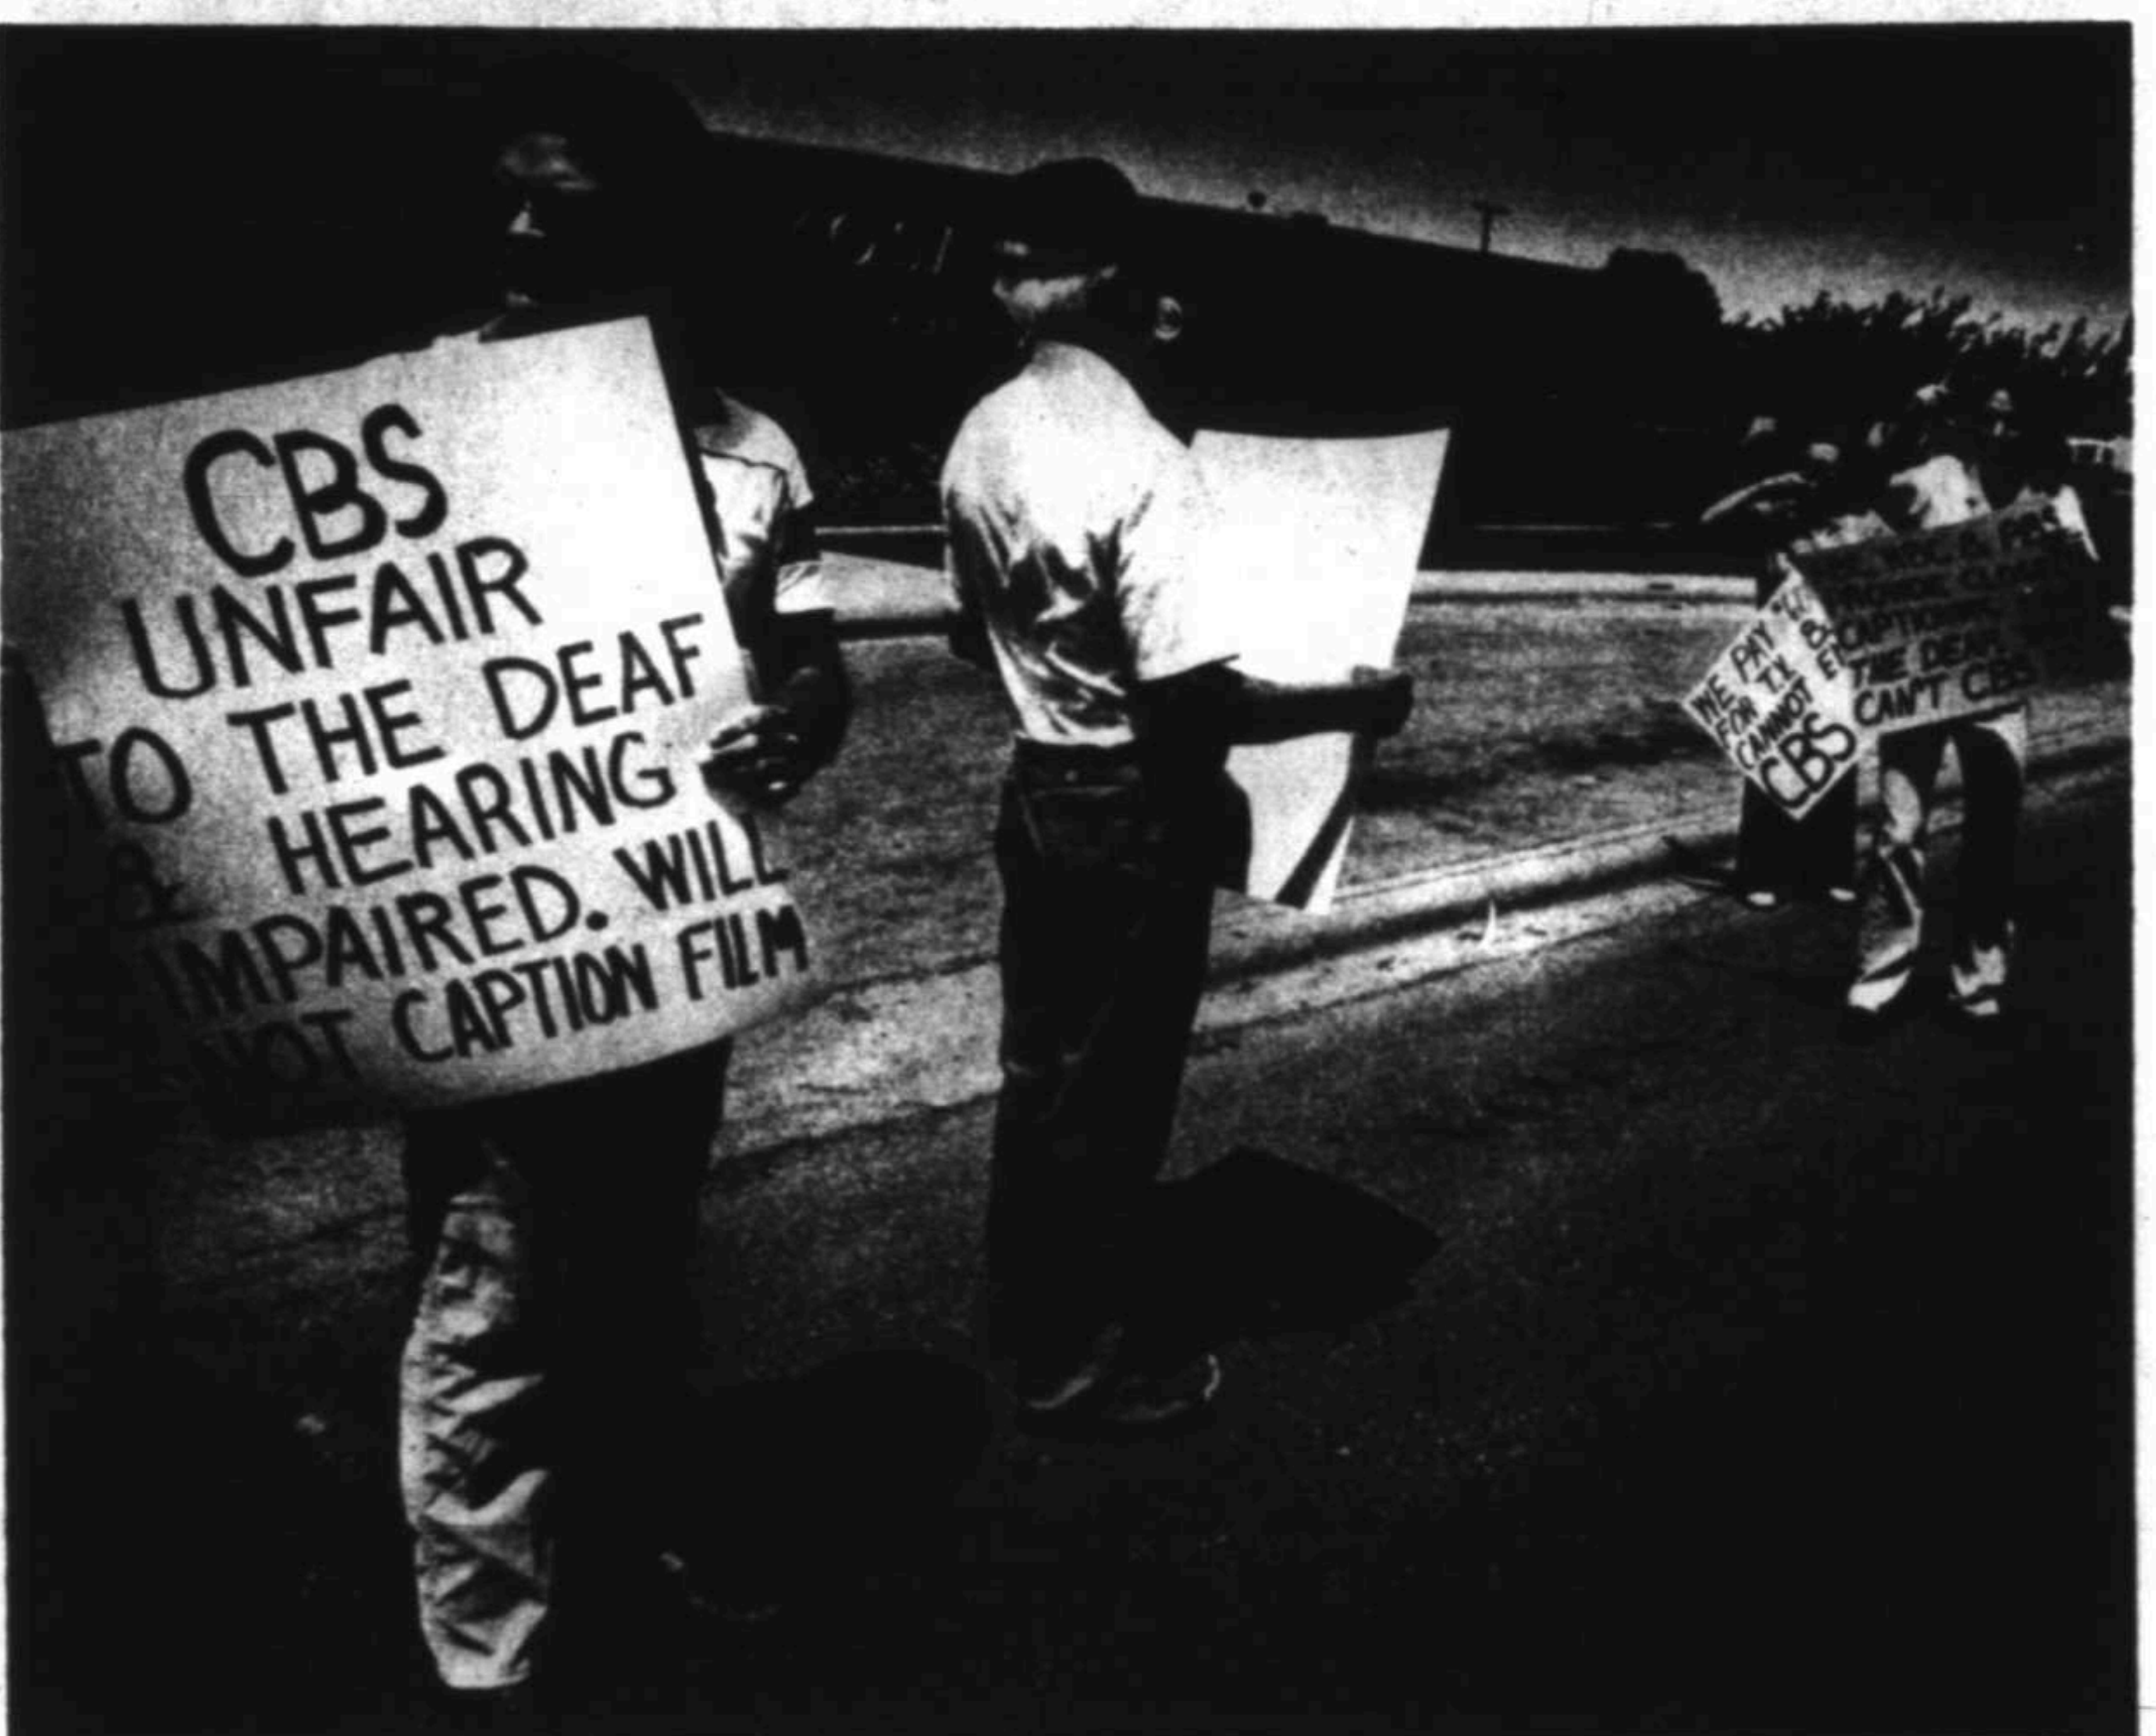

"I can lipread off the television, but when (the actors) turn away and speak, I always have to punch somebody in the shoulder and ask, 'what did he say?' and they get tired of telling me," said Elizabeth Bickford of Midland.

"People will ask me the next day, 'did you watch such and such?' and I'll say, 'yes, but I didn't understand it.'"

Ms. Bickford noted that many deaf persons who strain their budgets purchasing a decoder are faced with great disappointment when they discover the absence of closed captioning on CBS. Moreover, she said, educational benefits for the deaf are being denied.

"Closed captioning improves 100 percent in helping to read and understand English," she said.

KOSA-TV station manager Tom Hughes said Wednesday CBS informed him earlier in the day that a proposed captioning process known as tele-text is on the docket for discussion with the Federal Communications Commission

Displaying pickets protesting the absence of closed captioning on CBS-TV, members of Midessa Association of the Deaf stand before the studios of CBS-affiliate KOSA-TV in Odessa Wednesday. They were part of a nationwide demonstration on the part of the hearing impaired, who sought to bring public pressure to bear on CBS to initiate closed captioning like its network counterparts.

Deaf call for CBS-TV to provide close-captioning

NEW YORK (AP) — Deaf protesters calling for CBS to carry closed caption programming picketed outside network headquarters here and at affiliated stations across the country.

"Try turning off the sound on your television set for 15 minutes," said Darlene Watson, coordinator of deaf services of the Detroit Hearing and Speech Center Inc. "It will drive you crazy and you'll see what we're talking about."

Protesters at Wednesday's demonstrations said CBS is the only one of the four major TV networks that does not provide closed-captioning, in which part of the television signal is used to send printed subtitles that can be decoded on specially equipped TV sets.

The largest demonstration was outside CBS headquarters in New York, where more than 100 sign-waving protesters gathered.

CBS officials say closed captioning is outdated and the network is developing tele-text, an information system that provides news and sports stories in words and graphics that are projected above the television screen or instead of a picture.

"We never went along with closed-captioning," said George Schweitzer, vice president of communications for the CBS broadcast group. "We felt that to provide and develop tele-text would be doing a greater service. It brings information into the home."

But Dr. Lawrence Newman, a member of the National Association for the Deaf, said tele-text won't be available in homes across the country for another three years.

"What we are complaining about is that they should be captioning for the deaf people while working on tele-text," he said. "We feel that CBS is insensitive to the needs of the deaf."

Al Pimencel, executive director of sure what the teletext decoder would retail for, "I understand it's going to be considerably less than the $280 Sears charges (for a line 21 decoder)."

But the members of Midessa Association for the Deaf who picketed Wednesday remained appalled at the slowness of the network in initiating a closed captioning system.

"We have 1.8 million deaf people," said Ms. Bickford. "We just want to be treated fair and equal."

Midland, Odessa mayors relate cities' sides of stories

August.

However, the city still needs a permit from the Texas Water Department before construction can begin. But the Midland mayor predicted the permit will be forthcoming.

"I feel confident the state will give us a permit," he said. "Otherwise, we'll give the water to the state."

The two mayors appeared slightly at odds on how to deal with pornography. Bryant said he didn't follow the philosophy of Odessans for Decency which succeeded last week in getting the Odessa council to refuse to allow a cable television company to sell Escapade, a movie channel which features R-rated movies, to viewers.

"I've had more phone calls from people objecting to Odessans for Decency" than from people who support the group, he said.

"I DON'T SUBSCRIBE to Cablevision. If I did, I wouldn't subscribe to Escapade. But I don't want to force my views on others. It's a tremendous infringement on others. Denying Escapade is censorship; it goes back to the book-burning days."

While he has no problem with the Odessa anti-pornography group, Bryant wondered where it would stop. "I'm afraid some other group will come up and say they don't like the movies being shown at Pelman Mall. And what if they say they don't like Baptists? I'm a Baptist. I'm afraid the council made an error; there's no end to censorship."

Akins noted that Midland doesn't have the X-rated bookshops and theaters that Odessa does and attributed it to the city council which "represents what they see as the attitude of the community. There will always be censorship of some kind. I'd rather draw the line too far on the conservative side on these matters than too far the other way. Each community can set its own standards and ours are high."

Moving? Beware movers' differences

WASHINGTON (AP) — The approaching end of the school year means moving season for many Americans, and the key to making it a success is preparing yourself as much as possible.

Summer is the peak moving season, which means it's not necessarily the most convenient time to get service. But if you can't avoid a summertime move, get estimates and sign a contract as early as possible.

Deciding which firms to consider can be confusing, and it can pay to check with friends and relatives to hear their tales of success or woe.

Also, check your local Better Business Bureau to see if they have had an unusual number of complaints about particular firms.

Moving rates are based on weight and distance, and among interstate carriers they are usually similar, although not identical. Check several for their rates.

They will have to guess the weight of your possessions to make an estimate, but the actual charge will depend on the real weight once your goods are loaded.

Under the law they have to note the empty weight of the truck on the bill of lading, and allow you to accompany them to the scales to measure the loaded weight. The difference, or tare, is the weight of your goods.

While basic charges are often similar among movers, there are ways you can save. For example, many firms offer special services such as packing and unpacking, clean-up of your home after the move and clean-up of the new home before you move in.

The more of this work you do yourself, the more you can save, of course.

Watch the estimate of the value of your goods, too, because it determines the extent to which the mover is responsible for lost or damaged goods. Get an estimate of this value before signing any contract.

Usually you are required to pay for the move on delivery, by cash, money order or certified or cashier's check. Sometimes, however, is the amount is more than 10 percent over the estimate, you can pay the amount over that later. But terms vary, so check this out in advance.

CHECK THOSE RVs — The weather is warm, gasoline prices have moderated, and the recreational vehicles are taking to the roads. These can be plenty of fun, with a little care.

Two major considerations are to keep the tires properly inflated, and don't take along enough cargo for a trip to the moon, suggests the Tire Industry Safety Council.

These vehicles can sit idle for long periods of time, so proper tire maintenance is very important. Inflation pressure should be checked before a trip, when the tires are cold. Underinflated tires lead to excessive heat, possible tire failure, uneven tread wear and increased fuel use.

Paper inflation worrying San Francisco Fed

Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — All the time they've been harping about paper-money inflation, officials at the Federal Reserve Bank here actually have been creating a blizzard of paper — more than 18.5 tons of it.

This trash-paper inflation, in fact, has been giving the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco almost as many fits as paper-money inflation gives Fed chairman Paul Volcker.

The San Francisco Fed, which regulates banks in the West, is planning to move to its new headquarters on Market Street this fall and has been cleaning out the bureaucratic bombast of decades past.

"We've been deflating it," said Fed spokesman Ron Supinski.

"Our paper currency was the only thing we didn't think of throwing out," Supinski said.

Hearst Feature Service

Cynthia Davis, a senior at Midland High School, is the recipient of a $500 scholarship from the Midland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary. Miss Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Davis of Rt. 2 Box 181-J, plans to attend Midland College School of Nursing next fall. She is a member of the National Honor Society, Latin Club, All-Region Choir and has earned an academic letter at MHS.

"Show me a happy homosexual and I'll show you a gay corpse," bemoaned Michael, the unhappy homosexual in "The Boys in the Band."

Until recently, that statement could stand as the credo for Hollywood's treatment of gays in film. But the last few months have seen the release of five gay-themed pictures involving shifts in that attitude.

The subjects include female and male impersonation, ("Victor/Victoria"), rite-of-passage lesbian dalliance ("Personal Best"), the defection of a heterosexual husband to homosexuality ("Making Love"), murderous collusion between male lovers ("Deathtrap") and Fruit-of-the-Loom faldral ("Partners").

These last two films represent nothing new. "Deathtrap" has a few gay corpses, but it is a murder mystery. "Partners," a comedy about two cops — one straight, one gay — who pose as a gay couple to solve a murder, is so regressive in its attitudes that it's practically ante-diluvian.

But the other three movies are, at least on the surface, novelty items. They feature "good" gays; their prevailing message is live and let live. They're supposed to be daring, but they're about as daring as the market will bear right now — not very daring at all.

Blake Edwards' "Victor/Victoria" is the most commercially successful of the trio. It stars Julie Andrews as a chanteuse posing as a man posing as a female impersonator. In order to perpetuate her hoax and remain the toast of Paree, Victoria must pose as the male lover of her mentor — the brazenly gay Toddy (Robert Preston). When she falls in love with a Chicago gangster (James Garner), the ruse threatens to collapse until, revealing all to him, they agree to see each other in public — as a gay couple.

If Garner's red-blooded heterosexual gangster had found himself attracted to Victoria even though he thought she was a man, the movie might have been daring. But, essentially, all the sex-role swaps in this film are the elements of harmless farce. And without Preston's felicitous, good-humored Toddy, the movie would be an almost total, er, drag.

Temperamentally and stylistically at the other end of the scale is Robert Towne's "Personal Best," a movie about two female athletes (Mariel Hemingway's Chris and Patrice Donnelly's Tory) who have a lesbian affair.

None of Chris and Tory's teammates react in any way that suggests they're threatened by the women's affair. And even though the movie covers four years, during which time Chris is supposed to be going to college, it eliminates virtually everything that might put a crimp in the story's emotional trajectory.

Towne's response to this criticism has been, predictably, that "Personal Best" isn't really about lesbianism at all.

Then there's "Making Love," which is a gay I'm-OK-You're-OK film. Basically, the movie is saying that it's OK to be gay as long as you're a successful doctor (Michael Ontkean's Zack) or writer (Harry Hamlin's Bart, the guy Zack has his first affair with) or lawyer (the guy Zack eventually lives with after he leaves his wife). It's typical of this film's Puritanism that because Bart is portrayed as sexually promiscuous, he's not even mentioned in the movie's epilogue, where we're given happy-ending updates.

Reagan wants 'tax gap'-closing penalty

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a growing number of Americans using their tax returns as a form of protest, the Reagan administration is calling for a flat $500 penalty on anyone filing a frivolous return.

The penalty is aimed at those who deliberately leave blank spaces on their returns and at those who, in refusing to pay taxes, raise such dead issues as the constitutionality of the income tax, the meaning of income or the legality of paper money.

The Internal Revenue Service counted more than 27,000 such "tax protesters" last year — a 283 percent increase in three years. Although the sum of taxes owed by such filers is relatively small, processing these returns and pursuing them through the courts take a disproportionate share of IRS time.

The penalty is included in a bill, endorsed Tuesday by the Treasury Department, that carries several provisions aimed at reducing the nearly $100-billion-a-year "tax gap" — the money that unaware, careless or dishonest people cheat the federal tax collector out of each year.

Other parts of the bill would require increased reporting to the IRS of payments by bond issuers, stockbrokers, and certain direct sellers; compel states and local governments to inform the IRS about state and local tax refunds, to ensure that recipients list them as taxable income; and make it easier for the IRS to tax large sums of cash that it considers came from criminal activity.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and a similar version written by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, were the subject of a hearing before the House panel Tuesday.

John E. Chapoton, an assistant secretary of the treasury, and IRS Commissioner Roscoe L. Egger Jr. endorsed both proposals, although they found some fault with each. "We view these bills as laudable steps toward improving compliance with our tax laws," said Chapoton.

Added Egger: "I am convinced that only as we focus on those areas where taxpayers are not reporting their full tax liability can we assure the great majority of taxpayers in our country that everyone will be required to pay their fair share."

The administration earlier had given a conditional endorsement to Dole's bill after portraying it as a poor substitute for withholding tax from interest and dividends.

But the withholding measure was so unpopular that it was withdrawn.

Dole's bill would increase tax collections by about $20 billion over the next three years. The Treasury Department has not yet estimated the impact of Rostenkowski's bill.

Egger said the tax gap from legal income rose to $87 billion last year, triple the $29 billion in 1973. If left unchecked, he said, the sum will swell to $120 billion by 1985.

The tax gap from illegal income from drugs, gambling and prostitution is up to $8 billion, compared with $2.5 billion in 1973, and probably will hit $13 billion by 1985, Egger said.

About $2.3 billion in tips escaped taxation last year, Egger said.

Hospitals told to watch handicapped treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, disturbed by a case where a deformed Indiana infant was allowed to die, is investigating charges of a similar case in Illinois and sending warnings to thousands of other hospitals.

The Department of Health and Human Services has sent an investigator to check allegations made against Crawford Memorial hospital in Robinson, Ill., after receiving a complaint contending that a child suffering from the congenital birth defect spina bifida was being denied surgery it needed. The complaint was filed by Laura Canning, assistant director of the Chicago-based Family Life League.

But Gregory Coler, director of the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, said he met with physicians and others involved in the case and found no evidence that the infant's parents had been negligent. In spina bifida cases, there is an opening in the spinal column which can admit infections and cause death.

Health and Human Services also put 6,800 hospitals receiving federal funds on notice Tuesday that they risk losing the government's financial support if they deny proper care and treatment to any handicapped person.

Betty Lou Dotson, director of the department's office for civil rights, sent letters to hospitals receiving Medicare and Medicaid funds notifying them that denying food or treatment to the handicapped or to infants with birth defects risks violating Section 504 of the 1973 Rehabilitation Act. That law, which protects the rights of the handicapped in federally-funded programs, forbids discrimination against the handicapped solely because they are handicapped.

"In the aftermath of the recent death of a handicapped newborn child in Bloomington, Ind., there has been a great deal of justified public concern about the protection of newborn infants with birth defects and their right as human beings to receive appropriate treatment," Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker said in a statement.

In the Indiana case, the deformed infant suffered from Down's syndrome. The Indiana Supreme Court and two lower courts declined to issue orders that would have required that the baby be fed. The baby died April 15.

"President Reagan and I share this concern (for the rights of such infants), and the president has instructed me to make absolutely clear to health care providers in this nation that federal law does not allow medical discrimination against handicapped infants," he added.

Separately, the department sent a telegram containing the warning to Carlton King, administrator of the Illinois hospital. King would neither confirm nor deny that the infant was a patient in the hospital. But he did acknowledge that the 107-bed hospital was not equipped to handle spina bifida surgery.

He also acknowledged that an investigator from the department had questioned him. But he said he would not disclose information about patients to even government investigators unless they were armed with a subpoena.

"Because we place confidentiality of our patients as the highest priority, I am not free to release any information on any of our patients," he said.

The Justice Department was monitoring developments in the Illinois case to determine whether the infant's rights were being protected. A source in the department who had determined the identity of the child's parents said the infant's father was a physician.

Attempts to contact the parents proved fruitless.

Donna Mahaney, a senior at Lee High School, is the recipient of a $500 scholarship from the Midland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary. Miss Mahaney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Mahaney of 3214 Sinclair, plans to enroll in Midland College School of Nursing next fall. She is a member of the National Honor Society.

Amazing Diet Breakthrough: CUT CALORIES BUT NOT CONSUMPTION

At last, medical science has discovered a way to lose weight without reducing caloric intake. No more strict regimentation, fad diets, or gnawing hunger pains! Eat regular, nutritious, well-balanced meals and still lose weight.

Eleven years of scientific research

A noted Biochemist directed twenty-five other scientists in an eleven-year research study that discovered an incredibly effective diet aid.

The scientific team noted that when laboratory animals were fed uncooked kidney beans, undigested starch was found in their digestive systems. Evidence suggested that some substance in the raw beans prevented the digestion of starch. After years of painstaking research, the scientists isolated the substance and named it Special Legume Protein Concentrate (SLPC).

Caloric absorption blocked

SLPC performs its magic by prohibiting the carbohydrate-digesting enzyme, alpha-amylase, from digesting carbohydrates in the digestive tract. When SLPC is ingested prior to eating a meal containing starchy foods such as potatoes, rice, breads and pasta the SLPC inhibits the alpha-amylase from working. Undigested starch passes through the digestive tract and is eliminated—calories and all.

Convenient tablet formulation

Until now, SLPC has been restricted to use by physicians. But because SLPC is not a drug and is harmless when taken in combination with a variety of healthy foods, Nutrion Corporation has made this miraculous dietary breakthrough available to the public in tablet form, STARCH-LITE.

One STARCH-LITE tablet, taken at the beginning of each meal or snack, inhibits the ingestion of 400 starch calories—the amount of starch found in four baked potatoes, four slices of bread, two cups of rice, or two cups of pasta. While it is unlikely to consume such quantities of any one food in one meal, many fruits and vegetables also contain large amounts of starch, and thus each STARCH-LITE tablet is formulated to block the average starch content of one meal.

Food	Total calories	Starch calories blocked by STARCH-LITE	Calories remaining
Bread, one slice	110	100	10
Rice, 1 cup cooked	200	180	20
Macaroni, 1 cup cooked	210	168	42
Corn, 1 cup	174	160	14
Potato, 1 medium baked	120	100	20
Banana	120	104	16

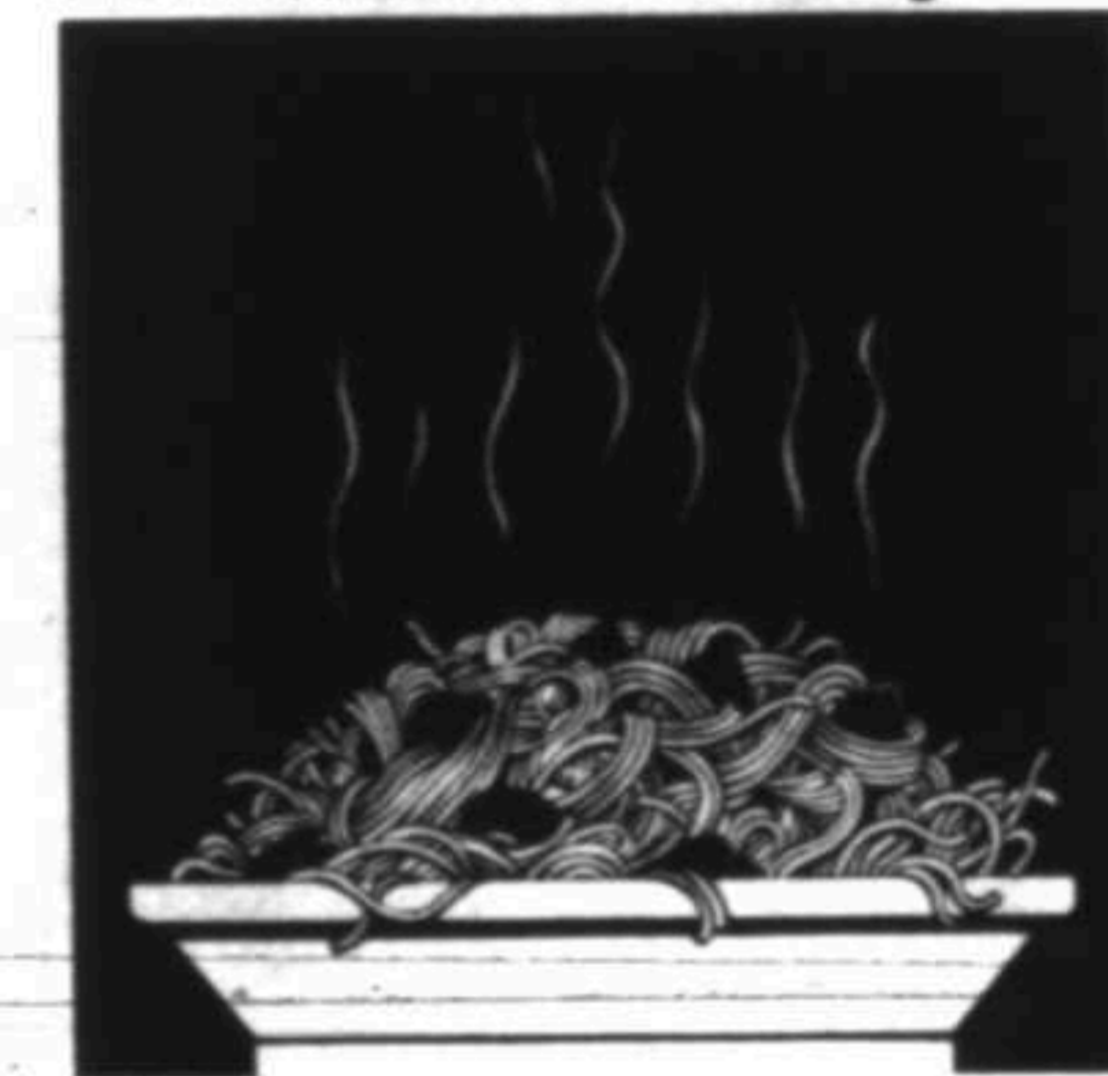

The STARCH-LITE difference

Unlike most starch blockers on the market, STARCH-LITE is more than just granulated beans. The STARCH-LITE formulation includes a highly concentrated portion of the effective SLPC ingredient.

In addition to inhibiting carbohydrate absorption, STARCH-LITE tablets have been formulated with a bulking agent which serves as an appetite suppressant. In the stomach, each STARCH-LITE tablet expands to fifty times its original size, creating a full, satisfied feeling which naturally reduces your desire for food.

Safe and stable weight loss

One STARCH-LITE tablet taken with every meal results in pound after pound of excessive weight loss. You'll realize losses of five to ten pounds almost immediately. But most importantly, your weight will come off and stay off. With the continued use of STARCH-LITE, you'll never again have to suffer the frustrations of dieting.

A time to begin
NUTRION CORPORATION introduces STARCH-LITE to the market with a limited TWO WEEK INTRODUCTORY OFFER. Order today to take advantage of this special price and to join the thousands of other customers who are now enjoying this simple, effective diet breakthrough.

Funds aid two state hospitals

Midland Shriners raised $2,320.52 Saturday during their first paper drive to raise money for the two hospital facilities in Texas, according to a spokesman.

Shriners handed out tabloid newspapers which explained the hospitals and accepted donations from persons. Club members were situated at J.C. Penney, Sakowitz, K-mart, Safeway, Furr's Supermarkets, Furr's Cafeteria, Gibson's, M System and Walgreen's.

The spokesman said the group hadn't set a goal this year since it was the first time such a drive had been held. "But next year we will set a goal," he added.

The Texas hospitals include an orthopedic facility at Houston and a burn hospital at Galveston. Both are operated by the Shriners.

November Israeli election forecast

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Elections in November, three years ahead of schedule, were predicted today for Israel after Prime Minister Menachem Begin squeaked past another attempt to vote him out of office.

Begin on Wednesday defeated the seventh no-confidence motion of his 10 months in office by a vote of 58-57 in the Knesset, the Israeli parliament, despite the defection the day before of two members of his Likud Bloc to the opposition Labor Party.

The defection ended Begin's precarious two-vote coalition majority in the Knesset, reducing him to 59 of the 120 members. But Likud has a comfortable lead over Labor in the opinion polls, and most political analysts believe the prime minister will call an early election with the expectation of improving his support in parliament.

The favored date is Nov. 2, when municipal elections are scheduled. But the National Religious Party and the TAMI faction, the two minor parties in Begin's coalition government, are opposed to an election. They fear a continuation of the 1981 voting trend, in which Likud and Labor profited at the expense of the smaller parties.

Before calling an election, Begin is expected to try to entice the two Knesset members of TELEM, a right-of-center party founded by the late Moshe Dayan, into his coalition. The abstention of the TELEM members saved him on Wednesday, but even if they joined him, he would have the same precarious two-vote majority that he has had to struggle with.

Begin, who will be 69 in August and is still using a cane to support a hip broken last November, came to power in 1977 after 29 years as the perennial outsider in Israeli politics. He has held on to the office with strongly nationalist, pro-religious policies.

He has waged intermittent war against the Palestinians in Lebanon and made peace with Egypt. He acceded to the ultra-religious sector's demands for restrictions on abortions, easy avoidance of military service for Orthodox women and an end to Sabbath flights by El Al, the national airline.

There appears to be increasing public support for his fervent belief that the West Bank, seized from Jordan in the 1967 war, is land promised to the Jews from biblical time and his corollary program of settling Jews throughout the occupied area.

He envisions extending Israeli sovereignty over the West Bank while its 850,000 Palestinians manage their daily affairs separately with limited autonomy, a plan the Arabs know from the Camp David accords and have rejected.

The Labor Party accuses Begin of following a misguided policy that will lead to a binational state with a large Palestinian Arab population. But a Labor alternative was tried for nine years after Israel took the West Bank from Jordan. Labor governments built settlements on the fringes and offered to trade the heavily populated heartland for peace with Jordan, but Jordan refused.

Begin's offer of limited autonomy and no more for the Palestinians of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip has brought bloody unrest to the occupied territories, but he blames the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Reagan's daughter calls for nuke freeze

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan's youngest daughter, Patti Davis, says the idea of a limited nuclear war is "absurd" and has called for an immediate end to the manufacture of nuclear weapons.

Ms. Davis' statement Wednesday seemed to be in direct opposition to administration policy, which says the concept of a limited nuclear war is realistic and that there would be survivors.

But at a news conference to announce a "peace" concert and rally, the actress and singer insisted: "We all do have the same goals. The difference is in the opinion of the best way to achieve them. Any steps in that direction are good, but we're advocating an immediate freeze."

"Man has never invented a weapon he didn't ultimately use," she said, recounting the horrors of the 1945 nuclear attack on Hiroshima.

Saying that today's nuclear weapons have many times more destructive force, Ms. Davis added: "The idea of a limited nuclear war is absurd. There would be no limit and no survivors.

"We must freeze production of nuclear weapons and begin negotiations for reduction," she said. "You can't talk about disarmament when you're still building nuclear weapons."

The Reagan administration opposes such a freeze on the grounds that it would lock in Soviet superiority, but the president has proposed negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union to reduce arsenals — including more than a one-third cut in the number of nuclear warheads deployed on long-range missiles.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev on Tuesday rejected that proposal, but said he was prepared to open negotiations.

The news conference by Ms. Davis, who appeared with singers Stevie Wonder and Graham Nash, was called to announce a rally and concert called "Peace Sunday," to be held June 6 in Pasadena's 100,000-seat Rose Bowl. Proceeds from tickets will be split between the anti-nuclear Alliance for Survival and a coalition of churches.

'Embarrassed' South Korean Cabinet quits

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The entire South Korean Cabinet submitted its resignation today, assuming responsibility for a major financial scandal and other embarrassments to President Chun Doo-hwan's regime.

A government spokesman said the 22 Cabinet members tendered their resignations to Prime Minister Yoo Chang-soon and he would present them to the president on Friday.

There was no immediate indication of how many resignations would be accepted.

It was also announced that the top officials of Chun's Democratic Justice Party also submitted their resignations to the party chairman.

Loeffler's budget work continues

WASHINGTON — Congressman Tom Loeffler emerged Wednesday from three days of intense negotiations with House leaders urging strong congressional support of the Bipartisan Recovery Budget for fiscal year 1983.

Loeffler, the Deputy Republican Whip, said the meetings were held with members representing conservative Democrats, the so-called "Boll Weevils," liberal Republicans — the "Gypsy Moths" — and the House Republican leadership.

David Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, also took part in the group effort to arrive at a budget package that would have enough support to pass the entire House of Representatives.

Loeffler, who formed part of a small core group on Monday and watched the number grow to nearly 25 by mid-week, expressed confidence that the resulting proposal would be a critical tool in further reducing government spending and sharply lowering the deficit.

"As compared to the Jones House Budget Committee version, the bipartisan recovery budget calls for less domestic spending, lower tax increases, and a smaller reduction in defense spending than other proposals now on the table," Loeffler said after the meeting.

House Republican leaders hoped to forge a compromise budget that would defeat the Jones budget reported by the House Budget Committee last week. That plan contains greater tax increases, greater cuts in defense spending and more domestic spending than is sought by the Reagan Administration and most House conservatives.

"To form this coalition we had to bargain between some difficult, competing choices," Loeffler said. "What we have now, in my judgment, is the best possible package put together in either the House or Senate. Adopting this budget will put us on a steady downward glide path in deficit spending and significantly help in lowering interest rates which now have the economy in a stranglehold."

The House negotiating team began its discussions facing a budget deficit of $182 billion in fiscal year 1983 and arrived, through the three days of negotiations, at a budget deficit of $101 billion in FY 1983.

"Personally, I want a balanced budget today, but our nation's current economic and political realities do not make that possible," Loeffler said.

The current proposal of the bipartisan team, among other things, calls for a $7.5 billion reduction in defense spending along with a $20.8 billion reduction in non-defense spending for FY 1983. Details of the cuts will be worked out by the committees having jurisdiction over specific areas.

The bipartisan package also includes increases in revenues of $20 billion in FY 1983, again to be worked out in the Senate Finance House Ways and Means Committee.

Loeffler, who helped secure passage of the bipartisan budget package last year, said his role would be similar in this session.

"Just as last year, I will be working with members on both sides of the aisle, along with the president and his administration, to achieve a victory in the House for the Bipartisan Recovery Budget," Loeffler said.

 Argentine Deputy Foreign Minister Enrique Ross arrives at the Secretariat Building in New York for talks with United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar Wednesday. The meeting was to relay Britain's response to the latest Argentine peace proposals. Later in the day the Secretary-General announced his failure to bridge differences between the two sides.

Young: National pride blocks Falklands settlement

ATLANTA (AP) — Andrew Young, comparing the Falkland Islands crisis to the Vietnam war, says Great Britain and Argentina are putting national pride ahead of peace.

Young, who was ambassador to the United Nations under President Carter and is mayor of Atlanta, said Wednesday in a speech to the local chapter of the United Nations association that the British and Argentine governments are more concerned with their "fragile economies" than their citizens.

"The truth of it is they're not really fighting over the Falklands, because there's nothing to fight for, just like we weren't really fighting for oil in Vietnam," Young said.

He blamed "some kind of mythical national pride" for blocking a settlement.

Young served at the United Nations from January 1977 to August 1979. He resigned during a controversy stemming from an unauthorized meeting he held with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Young said President Reagan has "a belligerent foreign policy, one that tries to persuade a domestic constituency more than it tries to solve international problems."

He said the U.S. ambassador has "got to be considered part of the foreign policy apparatus" because he "is the only voice always speaking for peace."

"An aggressive posture of peace is not likely to come from the State Department, the White House or the National Security Council," Young said. "There's got to be someone who's brash enough to believe peace is possible in any situation."

Crucial Falklands battle will be fought in skies, military analysts believe

By ED BLANCHE

LONDON (AP) — The crucial battle for control of the Falkland Islands will be fought in the skies above the South Atlantic chain when the British task force launches its apparently imminent invasion, British military analysts believe.

The fleet massing off the Falklands will be at its most vulnerable when it moves within combat range of Argentina's air power, based on the mainland.

"If it can't get its air defense right, then it's in trouble," said Col. Jonathan Alford, deputy director of the International Institute of Strategic Studies.

Argentina's air force commander, Gen. Basilio Lami Dozo, has threatened a massive air assault when the Royal Navy fleet moves inshore to land its 4,000 marines and paratroopers.

BRITISH EXPERTS question Argentina's ability to mount a large-scale coordinated air attack. But "if the Argentines are prepared to risk their planes in a determined fashion," said Alford, "it will be very difficult to produce a water-tight defense. The Argentines will lose a lot of planes and men. But if the Argentine pilots are prepared to die in a major attack, some will get through."

"The main problem the fleet has suffered right from the start is the lack of air cover...operating a long way from home without early-warning radar and an adequate fighter umbrella," said Vice Adm. Sir John Roxburgh, a former NATO submarine force commander.

The Argentines can muster about 190 combat planes for any mass attack. Against this, the British have about 30 Sea Harrier fighters on the task force's two carriers, Hermes and Invincible. But an estimated 10 of these are RAF ground-attack craft, assigned to strike at Argentine shore positions in support of the landing force.

That will leave only 20 fighters to meet any large-scale Argentine air strike. But the missile-armed fighters, dubbed "dancers of the skies" because of their maneuverability, will be backed by a formidable arsenal of missiles aboard the ships.

These include computer-controlled Sea Wolves aboard several ships that probably will be stationed between the Falklands and the mainland as an anti-aircraft screen.

SO FAR, the Argentines have not committed their warplanes to a major strike. The British say that in the only dogfight of the six-week-old conflict, on May 1, the Harriers downed two Mirage fighters and an aging Canberra bomber, and no British planes were lost. In the only other air strike against the fleet, Sea Wolves brought down two A-4 Skyhawks, and another one trying to evade a missile cartwheeling into the sea.

The Argentines' only success in the air came May 4 when a French-built Super Etendard fighter-bomber wrecked the destroyer Sheffield with a French Exocet missile. Informed sources said one of the three planes involved in that operation crashed when it ran out of fuel before it could get back to its base.

Informed sources who asked not to be identified said the Argentines have only four Exocets left and are husbanding them for a major strike when the British fleet moves into invasion range.

India, China border talks end on friendly note

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India and China concluded four days of border talks on a friendly note today but apparently without a breakthrough in the territorial dispute that clouds their relations.

Fu Hao, head of the Chinese delegation, and Eric Gonsalves, the Indian delegate, both indicated they were satisfied with the results of the negotiations.

"Everything is working according to our plans," Fu told reporters through an interpreter. He declined to elaborate, saying, "We have an agreement with the Indian side not to make any comment on our talks."

Gonsalves used almost the identical words, saying with a broad smile, "Everything has gone according to our schedule."

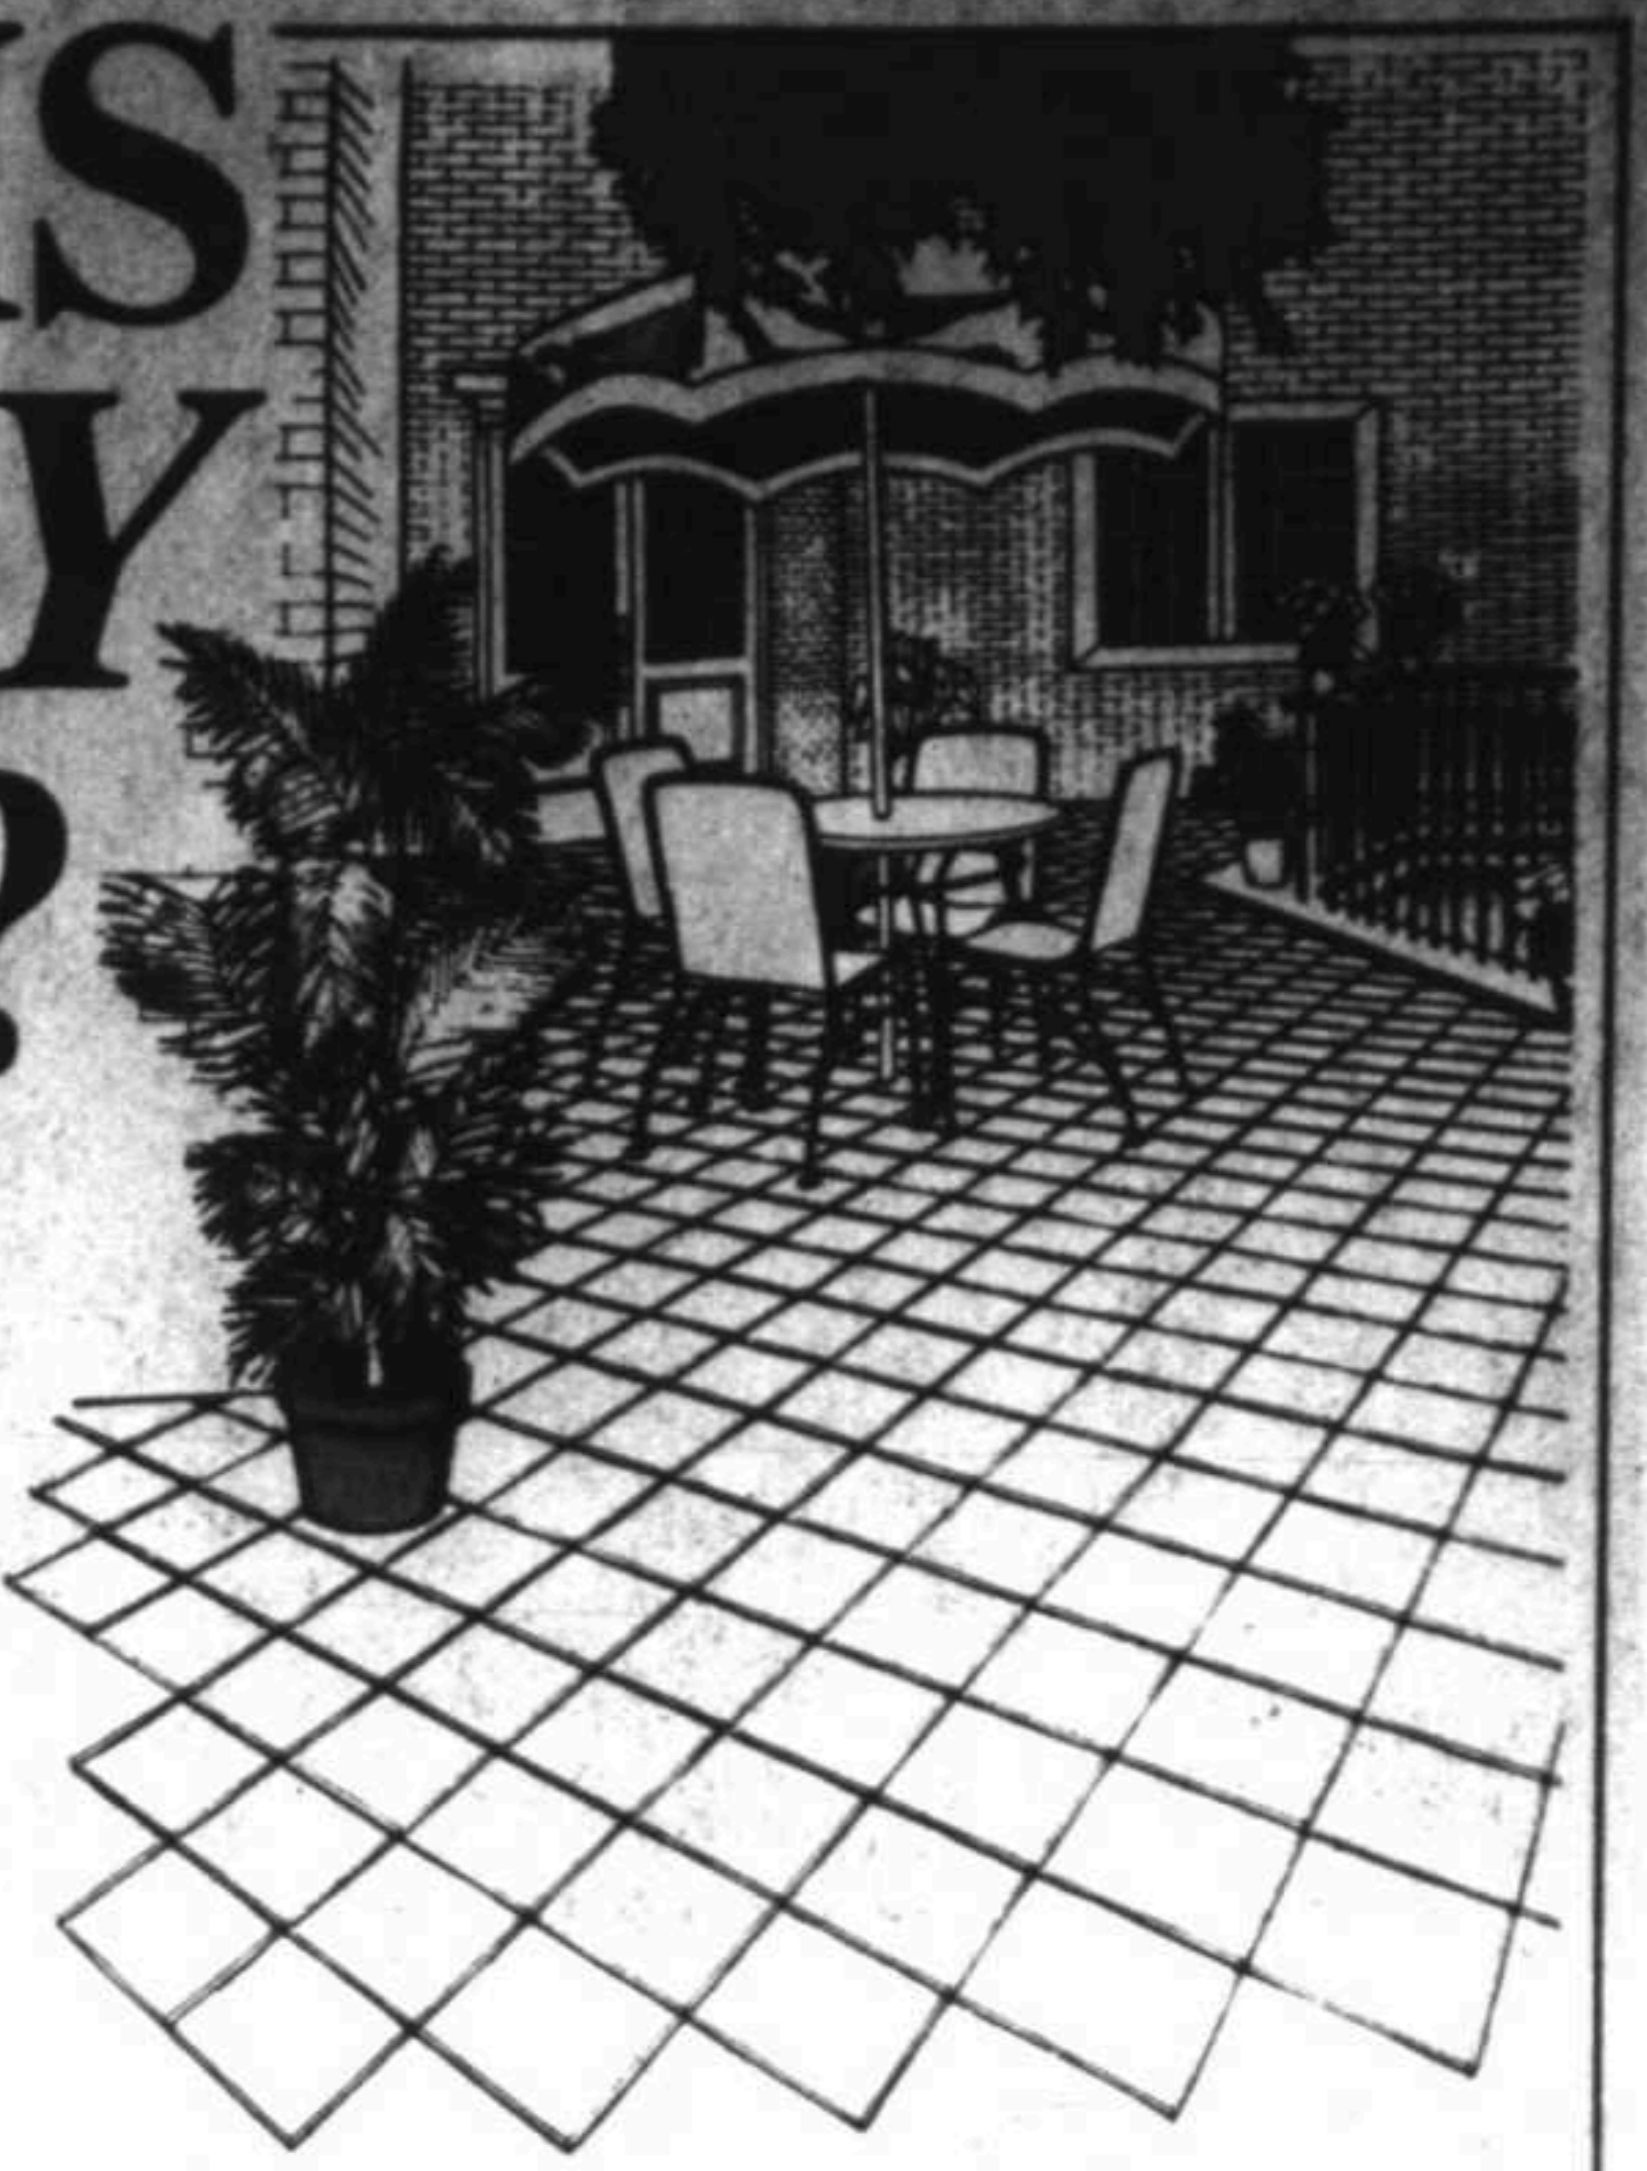

The talks were the second round in an effort to settle the lingering dispute that has burdened relations between the world's two most populous nations for the last 20 years. The first round was held late last year in Peking.

India wants China to withdraw from 14,500 square miles of territory in the Ladakh area on the border north of New Delhi which Chinese troops occupied in the brief and bloody 1962 war.

UTPB names 'Alumnus of Year'

ODESSA — Linda Felts, assistant professor of accountancy and information systems at The University of Texas at the Permian Basin, was named "Alumnus of the Year" at the UTPB Alumni Association's Night of Celebration Friday.

Ms. Felts, who received her BBA in accounting in 1974 and her MBA in 1975 from UTPB, is completing doctoral work at the University of Colorado. She was nominated for her involvement as a student, alumnus and faculty member.

A UTPB faculty member since 1975, Ms. Felts has been an active member of the UTPB Alumni Association and an advisor for the UTPB Accounting Association. She has served on the UTPB student recruitment and commencement committees. In addition, she has held several offices with the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants and is a member of several professional organizations.

In recognition of being named "Alumnus of the Year," Ms. Felts received a lifetime membership in the UTPB Alumni Association and a plaque. A $500 scholarship in her name will be given to a deserving student in accounting.

She was among seven nominees for the "Alumnus of the Year" award. Others included Phillip Cochran (MBA 1976), treasurer-controller of the Ortloff Corporation of Midland; David Reyes (BA 1979), adult basic education teacher at Odessa College; Sandy Collins (BA 1981), Odessa tennis professional; Larry Riley (MBA 1980), vice president and trust officer at State National Bank of Odessa; Julie Sanderson (BA 1981), sales representative for Life Savers, Inc. of Odessa; Brent Roach (BA 1981), sales production coordinator of KOSA-TV of Odessa; and Carroll Hedrick (BS 1976), geologist at Anadarko Production of Midland.

Farm 'crisis' near, bureau director says

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Grocery shoppers are going to have to pay higher prices if farmers are to escape a depression-like crisis, says a director of the Texas Farm Bureau.

Calvin Rueter called the farm income crisis "the worst since the Great Depression of the 1930s." "Some of our more important crops are down 30 percent to 40 percent in price below this time last year. Many producers are being forced into bankruptcy," Rueter said at a news conference Monday.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said in Washington that agriculture economists are predicting farm income this year will be the lowest since the Department of Agriculture began keeping income records in 1949.

He said the economists estimated Texas' real net farm income for 1982 will be between $280 million and $340 million.

"The Department of Agriculture has been keeping these records since 1949, and that's the lowest that it's been in all that time. I really don't think they understand how serious the problem is," Bentsen said. "We're facing a catastrophe on the farm, and it's terribly important that we get such assistance as we can get and that we get it fast," he said.

He urged the bureau's 290,000 member families to support a four-point plan for "profitable agriculture." But he said increased farm income will mean higher prices for consumers.

"Sooner or later they're going to have to pay more..." said Rueter.

"Either we're going to have a slight rise in prices now and ask for a larger share of the housewives' food dollar, or else the next couple of years she may have a relatively stable food market, and then she may find some empty grocery shelves."

The farm bureau plan includes supporting President Reagan's economic recovery program. The plan also proposes expanding export markets, cutting red tape on Farmers Home Administration loans and avoiding government programs that build commodity surpluses.

Court to see ad issue

By KEVIN COSTELLOE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to decide whether unsolicited advertisements for condoms and other contraceptives can be sent through the U.S. mails.

The justices said they will review a decision striking down a ban on such mailings to the general public.

The ban imposed by Congress was challenged by the Youngs Drug Products Corp., distributors of Trojan brand condoms.

Mailings of contraceptive advertisements to physicians and others in the medical field were allowed by the law, as were similar promotions by non-profit groups.

The law also permitted contraceptive promotions to be mailed upon request and included in publications that had been requested by the recipient.

But last September, U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn in Washington said the law was too restrictive.

Penn said that drug store flyers containing "tasteful promotion" of condoms and other contraceptives "buried" among other ads for various other items could be mailed without restriction.

Penn added that flyers and pamphlets devoted solely or in large part to condoms or other contraceptives would have to be specially marked and packaged.

"There is no dispute that the materials at issue in this case are tasteful expressions on a subject matter that obviously could lend itself to communications that some would find offensive," Penn wrote.

The judge noted his decision was limited to such "tasteful" advertisements.

In its appeal, the government said the unsolicited ads did not deserve protection under the First Amendment's guarantee of freedom of expression.

Ulcer sufferers get hope

CHICAGO (AP) — The nation's estimated 10 million ulcer sufferers can take heart from a new drug that quickly heals the internal sores and apparently poses no threat of side effects, medical researchers say.

Two researchers told a meeting of the American Gastroenterological Association Monday that ulcers also are less likely to recur in people who use sucralfate, which was approved for use in the United States last fall.

Dr. Daniel Hollander, a professor of medicine at the University of California-Irvine, said he found in two studies that sucralfate healed ulcers in 90 percent of recipients, compared to a 50 percent healing rate for patients given a placebo.

Another study by Dr. Friedrich Hagenmuller of Frankfurt, West Germany, indicated that administering the drug to ulcer patients reduced their chances of getting a new ulcer after old ones healed. Twenty-one percent of patients given sucralfate suffered recurrence, less than the 50 percent of patients given a placebo.

Hagenmuller said those results probably will move the West German government to approve the use of sucralfate as a preventive medicine. The drug has been legal in Germany for treatment of acute ulcers since March 1980.

Hollander said it costs about the same as other ulcer treatments using cimetidine and antacid therapies, but cimetidine can have side effects that include impotence and breast tenderness in males, confusion and muscle weakness.

About 4,000 specialists in digestive diseases are meeting through Wednesday at a convention of the gastroenterological association.

MOVING UP TO ELECTRONICS

This is the turning point.

Royal 5010
Advanced Electronic Typewriter

Two-line correcting memory for more productive typing

The new Royal 5010 electronic typewriter shifts the burden of typing to the typewriter, where it belongs. An advanced microprocessor-controlled correcting memory has a 132-character capacity. Two full lines, including programmed functions such as tabs, carrier returns and backspaces, can be corrected automatically.

The Power of Memory
The memory does practically everything... automatically aligns columns, selects one of the three type pitches plus proportional spacing, and sets tab stops, impression control, margins and line spacing.

72-Hour Retention
Once functions are programmed through the electronic keyboard, the memory stores them as long as 72 hours.

Print-Wheel Quiet
Interchangeable print wheels create distinctive-looking printwork. Whisper-quiet, too!

Keeps Pace With the Fastest Typist
A keyboard memory, which stores the last 16 characters and prints them in correct order, allows the 5010 to keep pace with the fastest typist, without jamming or flicking.

Put the Turning Point to work in your office, today! Advanced electronics makes it smarter, faster, quieter, far more productive typewriter.

Increased lead in gas concerns legislators

WASHINGTON (AP) — The health of tens of thousands of children could be endangered if the Reagan administration succeeds in a plan to relax federal restrictions on lead in gasoline, according to a group of congressmen.

In a letter to Anne Gorsuch, head of the Environmental Protection Agency, 31 members of Congress on Wednesday urged the EPA instead to consider tightening regulations.

They were responding to a formal EPA proposal to relax and possibly abolish restrictions on lead additives.

Medical experts have testified in public and congressional hearings that the proposal would increase the amount of lead coming from auto exhausts, leading to increased instances of lead poisoning in children.

Meanwhile, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., urged congressional approval of a package of anti-crime bills intended to deter criminals he said are operating "with impunity and with little or no fear of arrest or punishment."

Introducing the legislation along with Sen. Lawton Chiles,

D-Fla., Nunn said many Americans, especially the elderly and inner-city residents who most frequently are the victims of crime, "are prisoners in their own country."

The proposals, all of which have been considered before but died in Congress, involve FBI jurisdiction, security for families of law enforcement officials, bail in drug and illegal alien cases, penalties in marijuana smuggling cases, and the rights of prisoners to file court challenges to their convictions.

In a discussion on defense, a member of the House Armed Services Committee told an investigating subcommittee that "a potential Pearl Harbor in space" could result from U.S. failure to develop outer space as a line of defense against enemy attack.

Rep. Ken Kramer, R-Colo., cited Soviet development of anti-satellite weapons and its potential construction of space stations to base offensive and defensive weapons. He said it's vital for the United States to unify its space program under the Air Force's direction and turn the program toward strategic military uses in space.

And at a Senate defense appropriations subcommittee hearing, congressional investigators said as much as 80 percent of the $103 million in special bonuses the Navy and Marine Corps are spending to keep critically needed aviators in uniform is going to the wrong people.

Top personnel officials of the two services countered that the program has saved many times more money than it has spent — by reducing the high cost of training new pilots, navigators and other fliers.

The subcommittee hearing was on pay and benefits for the armed services in the upcoming fiscal year.

Late Tuesday, the Senate Appropriations Committee approved an additional $24.4 million for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, bringing its total share of taxpayer funds to $130 million for the current fiscal year.

Grain elevator problem has farmers scared, uneasy

CINCINNATI (AP) — Although Congress is piecing together legislation to help farmers cope with grain-elevator bankruptcies, the failure of one such storage company has "put a scare into a farmer around here," a grower says.

At least 30 farmers in southwestern Ohio, southeastern Indiana and northern Kentucky have $500,000 worth of grain stored in elevators of the Cincinnati-based Queen City Grain Inc., which filed two weeks ago for protection under Chapter 11 of federal bankruptcy laws.

on Wednesday he urged a House Agriculture subcommittee to take action on the matter.

Cryts said such bankruptcies cost many farmers their livelihoods.

"BEFORE THE SEASON started, we were told that most farmers would be lucky to break even," said Sarah Hale, who with her family operates Greenacre Farms and Hale's Farm Equipment in Lebanon, Ohio. "Now we're looking at a $40,000 hole." That represents the amount of grain from their 2,400 acres stored at Queen City Grain.

On Wednesday, after months of inaction, the House Judiciary subcommittee on commercial law endorsed a bill that supporters say would speed determination of who owns the grain in bankrupt elevators. Sponsors of the bill say it would give farmers with clear title the flexibility to market their grain.

Other lawmakers, led by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., say the measure is "watered down" and "meaningless" because it sets no definite timetable and leaves farmers to divide up an elevator's assets with other creditors.

Missouri farmer Wayne Cryts focused national attention on the issue when he was jailed in April for contempt of court by a bankruptcy judge in Arkansas — Cryts had refused to reveal who helped him remove soybeans from a bankrupt elevator last year.

Cryts was allowed out of jail this week to testify and lobby in Washington, and "I HOPE WE'RE ABLE to pass legislation so that this injustice to the American farmer is not continued," he testified. He was to return Friday to his cell in a Russellville, Ark., federal detention center.

In Ohio, the farmers whose grain is stored at Queen City Grain had not been paid for the crops, and their grain is now in legal limbo.

One Ohio farm family, Gary and Sherri Carrington, already scaled down planting this spring after losing $18,000 last year because of a wet growing season and low grain prices.

"My husband said this year, we either make it or get out," said Mrs. Carrington. "And with Queen City going bankrupt, it's put a scare into a lot of farmers' around here."

Cryts had stored soybeans in one of 11 grain elevators operated by a company that failed in 1980. He moved the soybeans in February 1981 to another elevator, then removed them in defiance of an order from Bankruptcy Judge Charles Baker, who ruled the grain was an asset of the bankrupt elevator.

Although granted immunity from criminal prosecution in exchange for his testimony, Cryts still refused to testify and was jailed April 28. His wife, father and two friends also refused to testify.

The Dole bill has been passed by the Senate, but legislation had been bottled up in the House Judiciary Committee.

A large selection of handmade Oriental and Persian Rugs (new and old). Kerman-Kashan-Tabriz-Ardabil-Suk-Sarak.

"Oriental rugs and carpets have been produced for centuries and the rugs and carpets produced today are the same in almost every respect as the those produced 500 years ago. The best known and most beautiful rugs come from Persia but there are also excellent pieces that come from China, Afghanistan, Turkey, Pakistan, India and Romania. There are other countries in Asia and Africa who produce hand made rugs, but we do not have enough space here to enumerate all of them. All these rugs are made of wool. There are exceptions such as some of the Persian Qum that are made of pure silk.

One may ask why is a hand made oriental rug carpet the most prized and sought after of all floor coverings? The main reasons are:

- 1) An oriental rug, being entirely hand made, has a guaranteed durability. Even accidental damage can be repaired without decreasing the rug's value. This cannot be said of a machine made rug which, once damaged, loses its value.
- 2) The decorative value of an oriental rug is undiminished. It greatly enhances a room and creates an immediate impression of friendly warmth on entering it.
- 3) Provided it is used with care, the value of an oriental rug increases year by year. It is a safe investment and can be turned into ready cash at any time.

It is sometimes believed that oriental rugs and carpets are very expensive items. This is not so. We have many fine pieces that sell at under $500.00.

A brief summary of our rugs and carpets, and their characteristics, is as follows:

Persian: The finest pieces come from the towns such as Isfahan, Qum, Kashan, Tabriz and Kerman. In addition there are the nomadic rugs of coarse weave such as Humadan, Shiraz, Abadeh, Afshan and Balouch. We also have Kilims which have no pile, which come in colorful, geometric designs.

Chinese: The thickest pile of all carpets and rugs. They are very luxurious and come in embossed Aubusson, Floral and Peking designs.

Pakistani: Specializes in Bokhara and Afghan designs and in excellent copies of Persian design considerably less expensive than Persian rugs.

Afghan: In well known elephant foot designs in red and gold. Useful for offices and hallways. Other designs are also produced.

Indian: Mainly heavy pile. Produced with beautiful pastel or paste backgrounds in Floral, Aubusson or Chinese Peking designs.

Turkish: Made of wool, silk and artificial silk. Some rugs rival those of Persia in quality and design. Reasonably priced.

Romanian: Mainly copies of Persian designs, but we also have large carpets with the Aubusson design made in wool supplied from England. Extremely good value & very low prices.

Amendment feared harmful to Caribbean initiative

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration supporters say they will seek to overturn a Senate committee vote they argue would make the president's emergency aid package for Central America unworkable.

The Foreign Relations Committee approved the $350-million economic aid proposal, known as the Caribbean Basin Initiative, by a vote of 16-1 Wednesday.

Before the final vote, however, the committee approved an amendment funneling the money into a World Bank trust fund instead of granting it directly to Central American countries.

Steven Bosworth, deputy assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, said it would take at least until 1984 to set up such a trust fund. He said many of the countries need the money now to stave off economic collapse.

"The trust fund idea just won't work," Bosworth said.

Sources, asking not to be identified, said a move to reverse the action would be made either in the committee today or when the bill reaches the floor.

"It is not by any means irretrievable," Bosworth said.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., sponsor of the amendment, said it would encourage other countries to contribute support for the economically troubled region. The administration has said it hopes Mexico, Canada and Venezuela will contribute aid.

The amendment was approved 9-8 with Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., joining eight Democrats in voting for it.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who cast the only vote against the bill, said he did so because he objected to Dodd's amendment and one by Mathias that would set aside $50 million of the money for private organizations rather than the Salvadoran government.

Helms said the Dodd amendment would make it possible to funnel aid to the leftist government of Nicaragua. He said the Mathias amendment could permit use of U.S. aid money to pay for abortions.

The committee rejected by an 8-6 margin a move to detach $128 million for El Salvador, which is in the grip of a leftist revolution, and require a separate vote on it later.

Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., who offered the amendment, said it would give members time to study a secret Pentagon report on El Salvador's need for assistance, which he outlined at a closed-door session.

Bosworth told the committee that the money is needed to keep the Salvadoran economy from collapsing "under the active assault of an armed insurgency."

The amendment failed on a near-party-line vote. Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, joined seven Republicans in voting against it. Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., and five Democrats voted for it.

Sen. Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, the ranking Democrat on the committee, said he voted for the amendment to encourage the Salvadoran government to carry out land reform, halt political killings and negotiate with the leftist guerrillas.

Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary for inter-American affairs, testifying before the House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations, said the administration will support land reform and "efforts to curb abuses of authority by security forces."

But Enders added, "We will not endorse or promote negotiations over power-sharing, with guerrillas accorded a special place at the bargaining table because they bear arms."

Water subsidy limit ruling could affect western farms

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In a ruling that could affect farms throughout the West, a federal appeals court has upheld the 160-acre limit on private farmland receiving federally subsidized water.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday in favor of the government, which had sued in 1963 to enforce the limit imposed by the Reclamation Act of 1902.

Government officials said in 1980 that as much as 1 million acres in 16 western states might have to be sold if the Reclamation Act were enforced.

Government attorneys, apparently caught by surprise by the ruling, said the case was so old they will need time to analyze its effect.

The defendant, the Tulare Lake Land Co., contended it was exempted from the 1902 law by the 1944 Flood Control Act, which authorized construction of Pine Flat Dam. It also contended the federal law clashed with state laws, and it challenged the constitutionality of the old statute.

That dam controls floodwaters on the Kings River and supplies irrigation water to part of the fertile San Joaquin Valley.

Private companies, including the defendant, contributed $14.25 million of the dam's $44 million cost.

Jim Turner, of the U.S. Solicitors Office for the Pacific Southwest Region, said Wednesday the decision could affect Army Corps of Engineers projects built under a variety of flood control acts.

"It's something we'll have to look into," he said.

The law, designed to help preserve small, family farms, says anyone who owns more than 160 acres may receive federal water only after selling the extra land at a price reflecting the value it would have without the project.

Lighten the burden

If necessity truly is the mother of invention, as the old adage goes, then perhaps the current "crisis" over inmate populations in Texas prisons and county jails will necessitate the invention of a better criminal justice system.

In fact Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith, whose jail is rapidly approaching the overflowing point, has put forward to county commissioners in recent weeks a proposal that has merit and should be pursued. Even though commissioners have not taken action on Sheriff Smith's proposal, there is time to do so before the jail reaches its 102-prisoner capacity. Currently, the jail is housing about 100 prisoners per day fairly consistently.

The sheriff's proposal is to institute a work-gang for county jail prisoners. Under his plan, several prisoners held for non-violent misdemeanor offenses would be allowed to carry out manual labor in the county under the supervision of armed deputies.

Such a program apparently would go a long way toward accomplishing the judicial goal of rehabilitation and would utilize some of the vast reserve of manpower now totally underutilized.

During a recent commissioners meeting, County Judge Bill Ahders noted it would be unlikely that the prisoners charged with minor offenses would attempt to escape and risk boosting their criminal action to the magnitude of a felony. We agree and would offer some food for thought to Sheriff Smith, Judge Ahders and the commissioners.

With the approval of the concerned jurists, of course, and meeting legal requirements, what would be wrong with having those charged with minor offenses in Midland County pay their debt to society by working in toil that would pay their restitution, or in the event restitution was not required, would serve the betterment of all Midland's residents?

In other words, what we're proposing is allowing those charged with minor offenses to spend a minimum of time in jail — a day or a night, for example — and to spend the remainder of their sentence at their homes, but requiring them to report for duty at specified periods to a pre-determined site to join a county work force. This idea likely would save the county money, free space in the county jail for prisoners charged with more serious crimes and would help accomplish projects that would benefit all Midlanders such as cleaning bar ditches and city and county parks of weeds, tall grass and litter. For some prisoners, it likely would be more punishment than jail time.

The necessity, of course, would be to carefully screen those placed on such work programs. Once a "release prisoner" failed to show up at the designated time and place for his work detail he or she should be arrested and incarcerated for the full sentence originally imposed.

This proposal may be a bit progressive for some residents, but we think it has definite merit. At any rate, Sheriff Smith's proposal, our version of his or some other version of the two should be strongly considered. With the current crisis facing the Texas Department of Corrections which quit accepting new prisoners recently for a short time because of lack of space and the growing burden on county jails like the one in Midland, innovative action for the criminal justice system is needed.

Society will not and should not be allowed to suffer because of the burden placed on it by the criminal element. It should merely adapt to the situation to lighten the burden while continuing to achieve the goal of giving punishment where punishment is due.

Reliability pays

The best way to avoid automobile repair gyms is to establish a solid business acquaintanceship with a trustworthy dealer, service station owner or a reliable, experienced mechanic. They might be one and the same.

Unless the vehicle owner already knows someone fitting that description, it is wise to shop around until he or she finds one.

In Midland as elsewhere, a reliable mechanic can diagnose most common automotive problems and provide a reasonable estimate of repair time and costs. If specialized work such as transmission, ignition, wiring, cooling system or body work is needed, often he can refer the motorist to a reliable specialist.

A car is an increasingly expensive investment. Repair costs keep rising. As in finding a good physician, time and care must be taken to locate a seasoned and honest "car doctor." Not only can he steer vehicle owners away from the kind of gyms uncovered by the "sting," he can help them keep their vehicles safe, and that is a vital matter.

Another View:

Alliance threatened

The troubles between Turkey and Greece have long been a source of worry within the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, which naturally would prefer to have its members on friendly terms. With two of them squabbling, the alliance itself is weakened, and that works mostly to the benefit of the Soviet Union.

The United States has sought to ease the tensions between Athens and Ankara over such issues as the future of Cyprus and of Greek islands in the Aegean, and has not met with much success. One result has been that the United States itself has become a target of criticism, particularly in Athens, where many feel that Washington too often takes Turkey's side.

Against this background, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. visited both Turkey and Greece last week in hopes of improving relations between the two alliance members and between each and the United States. The journey seems to have gone well in terms of ties with Washington, but much remains to be done on the disputes arising from the Turkish invasion of Cyprus in 1974 and from territorial claims in the Aegean. To both countries, Haig stated the obvious:

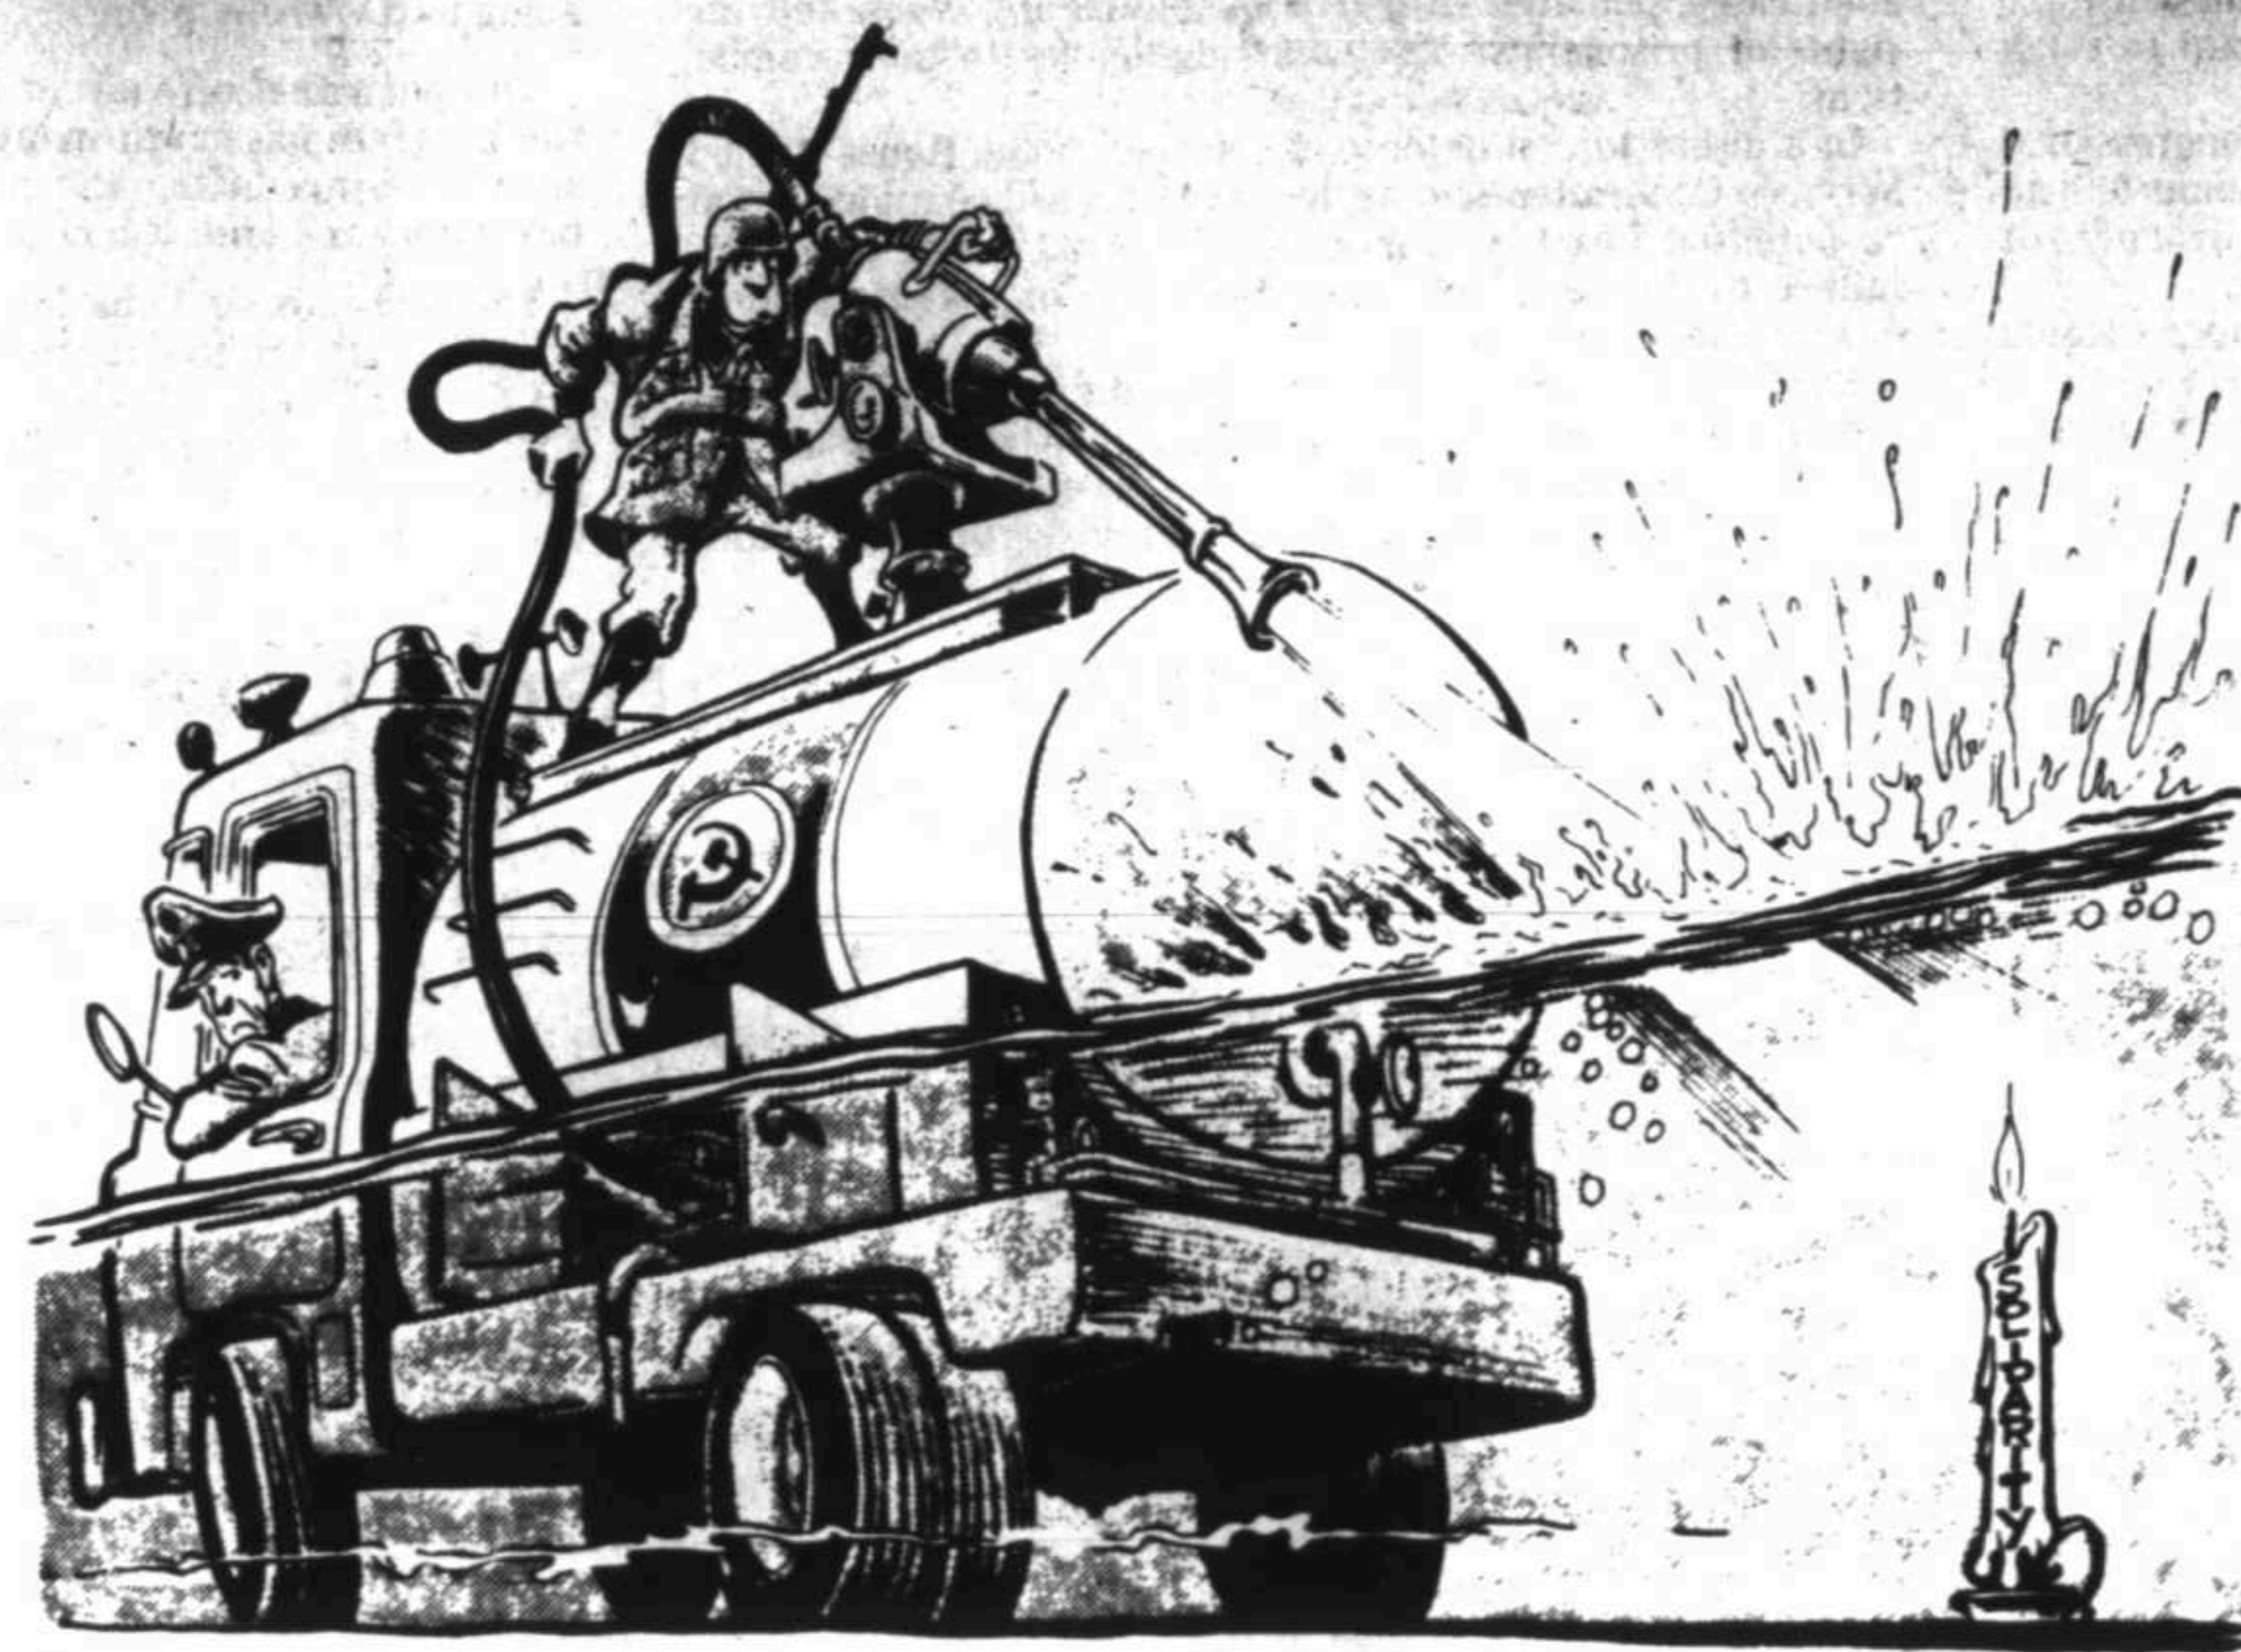

They should try to settle their differences themselves through negotiation.

What Haig encountered in Athens was particularly encouraging. After its election seven months ago, the Socialist government of Prime Minister Andreas Papandreu threatened to withdraw from the North Atlantic alliance and the Common Market and to expel the Americans from their bases in Greece. Tones of moderation became more audible with time, and Haig heard them in person over the weekend during his Athens visit, which was the first by a high-ranking American since Papandreu's election. It now looks as if Greece's Western links will remain secure.

The problems between Greece and the United States thus appear to be moving toward solutions: Papandreu will meet with President Reagan next month at an alliance meeting in Bonn. But the problems between Greece and Turkey remain unresolved. It is up to both now to move ahead with negotiations to remove what amounts to a serious threat to the internal stability of the alliance, which has enough other troubles.

Feminist is victim of Taiwan's martial law

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is easily aroused over the plight of the Polish people who have been ruled by the bayonet for less than six months. He is less agitated over the condition of the Taiwanese people who have lived under martial law for 33 years.

The Chinese rulers of Formosa, polite and urbane, may be more benevolent than the military governors of Poland. But military rule is still government by decree.

In America, for example, a woman out of Harvard Law School can safely speak out on the issue of women's rights. She can even set down her views on paper without being hauled before a court martial.

Such a woman is Lu Hsiu-lien, a 37-year-old alumna of Harvard Law School. But unfortunately, she published her women's rights tract, "On New Feminism," in her native Formosa. The book was confiscated by soldiers.

Undeterred, she spoke at a human rights rally in Kao Hsiung in 1979. The rally erupted into violent protest. A few days later, Lu was arrested and charged with trying to subvert the government. She was found guilty of "sedition" and sentenced to 12 years in prison.

What makes Lu's case particularly poignant is that she is reported to be seriously ill. Several years ago, her malignant thyroid gland was surgically removed. But her friends say she has been experiencing symptoms that may be related to her old cancer.

Documents obtained by my associate Lucette Lagnado give a harrowing picture of Lu's physical torment. She is in almost constant pain; she has trouble breathing and feels a strangling sensation in her throat. Lately she has reportedly been vomiting blood, and her weight has increased alarmingly, making her face and body puffy.

When Lu suffers her attacks, usually at night, she cries out for help. But her jailers do not respond. Only her cellmate is there to offer solace in their unlighted cell.

The authorities finally allowed Lu to be examined by a doctor on March 5. The doctor felt her neck and said her symptoms had nothing to do with her old thyroid cancer. A month later, she was taken to a military clinic for tests. The results were negative, she was told. But she continues to suffer.

American medical experts contacted by Amnesty International have not been able to examine Lu. They have suggested tentatively that the symptoms described may indicate a recurrence of her cancer. They advised Amnesty International that the woman may be in imminent danger, and should be given a thorough re-examination.

Even without being sick, prisoners lead grim lives in Taiwanese jails. The food is poor; closed-circuit television monitors Lu's every move; much of her mail is confiscated and visits are limited to 30 minutes a week from close relatives only.

Lu's plight has caught the attention of Rep. Steve Solari, D-N.Y., chairman of the House subcommittee on Asian and Pacific affairs. Her case will be taken up at a subcommittee hearing today.

Path of genius still strewn with scoffers

WASHINGTON — Among my objections to the current administration of the universe is the fact that the path of genius is still steep and strewn with scoffers, even when the path is Wilshire Boulevard. Consider the case of the Candle Corporation.

Candle Corp. deals with computer software, but also has had the gumption to pioneer a new dimension in video cassette for viewing in the home and elsewhere. The first is called Fish I. Pop it into your video cassette recorder and — Shazam! — your television screen is filled with fish. Fish on tape, that is: It is like gazing at a tropical fish tank.

Okay, scoff. Just remember: They all laughed at Rockefeller Center; now they're fighting to get in. Someday, you may line up to rent or buy Fish XVII and other tapes that may be certified by the surgeon general to be good for body and soul.

Someone from Candle attended a seminar at a school of veterinary medicine, and learned that bonds between humans and lower animals can be relaxing (at least to the humans; the rest of the animal kingdom has not spoken up). For example, people placed in front of an aquarium have been found to experience reduced blood pressure and heart rate.

Well, yes, of course: especially if the people who are placed in front of the aquarium have just been doing anything more taxing than watching the fish. But the Candle people are interested in the practical problem of reducing stress in an office environment. They have an aquarium in their own lobby. Fish I was taped there and is (so say those who did the taping) better even than the real fish. The colors of the fish seem somehow more vivid on tape. Furthermore, the tape was done with dissolves and overlays (that is cinema-talk) to give the fish a pleasing rhythm that the brutes did not achieve on their own. And, best of all, Fish I has a soundtrack: the gurgle of bubbles.

Candle hopes some university will test the potential uses of such cassettes for mellowing out (that's Southern California talk — I think) the nation's office workers. Furthermore, Candle has a nibble (sorry about that) from a potential customer for Fish I. It is a chain of Florida hospitals that reasons, not unreasonably, as follows: Patients emerging from surgery are more apt to live (and more apt to want to live) if, when they turn on the TV in the hospital room, they see tropical fish rather than "General Hospital."

Candle has in mind other cassettes: fire in a fireplace, wheat rippling in the wind, clouds scudding across a summer sky, waves gently lapping the shore. "Hey, Margaret, whatta ya wanna watch tonight — 'Hollywood Squares' or the sun setting behind purple mountains majesty?"

The possibilities are limitless. In fact, Candle may lift the burdensomeness from life. I am not just thinking of small matters, such as the fact that a tropical fish tank, unlike the tape of one, occasionally needs cleaning. ("Daddy, can I have a hamster?" "No, Jimmy, but I'll buy you a tape of one.") This may be the wave of the future: "Daddy, can I watch 'The Dukes of Hazard'?" "No, but you can watch the tide go out on Cape Cod." "I think I'll read a book."

The national parks may someday be crammed with recreational vehicles whose owners divide their time between watching "General Hospital" on their generator-powered television sets, and roaring around on their off-trail motor bikes to feed Reese's Peanut Butter Cups to finicky bears with PEOPLE PROBLEMS: Some landowners in an isolated timber area of western Montana are rebelling against the government's high-handed methods. But this time, it's not the federal bureaucrats in Washington who are the target of citizen outrage, but state officials in Helena.

About 50 Sanders County families — mostly pensioners, hay farmers and small cattle grazers — are fighting a move by the Montana Highway Department to sell off 100 feet on each side of State Route 200 that runs along their property. They can't afford to outbid real estate developers for the strip of land, but they don't want a string of trailer homes or commercial buildings sitting in their front yards.

The 12-mile stretch of land was once part of the Northern Pacific Railroad's right-of-way. In 1928, the railroad turned the land over to the county, and in 1947 the county deeded it to the state for the express purpose of building the two-lane highway.

Over the years, though, a number of the residents paid property taxes on the disputed land their parents and grandparents had homesteaded. Homes and gardens sit on the boundary line in some cases. Frank Reynolds' living-room is bisected by it.

The land is appraised at $1,200-$1,500 an acre, far more than the homeowners can pay. To add to the confusion, the railroad's successor, Burlington Northern, is thinking of trying to regain title to the old right-of-way.

Under pressure of the homeowner's protest, state officials are trying to soft-pedal the dispute. They say they're ready to talk about it.

Bad-mouthing defenses is name of game

Frederenko, my KGB contact, and I dine about once a month and exchange information on each other's country's defense.

"Haig told me the Soviets have missile superiority to the United States," I said.

"Is big liar," said Frederenko angrily. "By claiming nuclear inferiority, American military is able to spend billions of dollars on new weapons. The U.S.S.R. is not going to let you say you are inferior when whole world knows you more powerful than we are."

"You are a victim of your own propaganda, Frederenko," I told him. "The truth is your missiles are much larger and have more throw-weight. Ours are smaller and more vulnerable to a first-strike attack. Soviet know-how is forcing us into an arms race we can't afford."

Frederenko was getting red in the face. "You only know about our successes. You don't know about our failures. If we have to use our ICBM missiles, half of them would fall into the sea."

"Don't try to plant disinformation on me," I warned him. "We are aware your submarine cruise missiles are targeted on every city in the U.S."

"And what about your B-52 bombers with hydrogen smart bombs that can wipe out all of Russia?"

"We haven't tested one in years. For all we know none of them will even explode."

"Our backfire bombers are a joke," said Frederenko. "We only built them to use as a chip in the SALT II talks."

"We're not too thrilled with our nuclear aircraft carriers. Rickover says in case of war they won't last more than six days."

"You must not tell anyone," Frederenko said in a low voice. "But the cameras on our spy satellites take everything out of focus."

"Since you have told me that, I will tell you something. Our AWACs break down after only 25 hours of flying time."

"We can't even fight a war in Afghanistan!"

"We couldn't even rescue 50 hostages from Iran."

"We're not even sure the Warsaw Pact countries will be on our side."

"NATO is a paper army," I told him. "In a conventional war, you could capture all of Western Europe in 10 days."

Frederenko said, "You are just saying that to trick us. We know how many tactical nuclear weapons you have planted all over West Germany. You could wipe us out in no time."

"I've seen studies of our war games, my friend. We've lost to the Soviets every time."

"I spit on your war games. We have to keep millions of troops on the Chinese border. We're spread so thin now we can't even defend Moscow."

"And what about our window of vulnerability in the U.S.? Unless we close it, you could blackmail us into a political defeat in any part of the world."

"Reagan made up the window of vulnerability to scare Congress into giving him the biggest defense budget in history."

"Frederenko, you must take my word for it. We are no longer a superpower. Here is a copy of the Joint Chiefs of Staff testimony to the Senate Armed Forces Committee. It proves you are superior to us in every military area."

"And here are the microfilmed minutes of the last Politburo meeting. The Minister of Defense says we are outgunned and out-missiled on land and sea and in the air."

We exchanged secret papers of the various failures of our defense systems and said goodbye.

"When I reported back to my CIA superior at Langley, he said, 'Did Frederenko buy it?'"

"I don't think so. He kept poor-mouthing Soviet military superiority."

"We'll have to send Haig back up the Hill again to testify how weak we really are. Under no conditions can we afford to let the president discuss disarmament with Brezhnev from a position of strength."

Cruise missile on way to deployment

By MICHAEL WHITE

DUGWAY PROVING GROUND, Utah (AP) — The latest successful test of the computer-controlled Tomahawk Cruise missile could hasten its scheduled deployment in Europe next year, the Air Force says.

The missile was launched here Wednesday in the fourth of 11 tests planned before deployment of the nuclear-equipped weapons.

"We were very pleased with the performance of the launching system, which was our primary focus," said Col. Donald Couture, ground launch program manager. "We feel the Tomahawk is well on its way to operational use."

In a post-flight briefing, Couture said the missiles, intended to counter the Soviet nuclear threat in Eastern Europe, could be operational before the test schedule is completed.

"If they all go like today, we may want to shorten that a bit," he said.

COUTURE SAID the test was successful despite the failure of the missile's telemetry system, which gives information on engine thrust, temperature and performance.

The system failed 16 minutes after launch and almost forced an early termination of the flight, Couture said. Officials decided to continue the test when trailing F-4 fighters began monitoring the missile's performance.

The blue-and-orange missile was hurled 500 feet above the desert by a rocket booster from a camouflaged mobile launcher before it sprouted wings and its jet engine ignited to carry it on a 906-mile, circular test flight.

Couture said the missile was programmed to attack two simulated targets in western Utah. It was the first test conducted entirely under Air Force authority.

At the end of its two-hour flight, the missile floated slowly to the ground under a parachute triggered about 25 miles from the launch site.

COUTURE SAID the primary purpose of the launch was to test computer programs that identify the missile's target and course.

The $1.3 million missile flies at altitudes below 100 feet to evade radar, at speeds up to 550 mph. It has a range of about 1,500 miles.

A Navy version of the Tomahawk has been fired from submarines, surface ships, aircraft and ground platforms.

The Air Force plans to deploy 180 Tomahawks in Great Britain by December 1983 to counter Soviet intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Eastern Europe. The Tomahawks later will be placed in Italy, West Germany, Belgium and the Netherlands.

Other versions of the missiles are being developed for use on B-52 bombers, warships and submarines. The Navy and Air Force plan to build 10,000 of the missiles.

THE LAUNCH was delayed twice. Couture said a one-hour delay was forced because two transformers at a microwave relay station, which connects the launch site with its control center at Hill Air Force Base at Ogden, Utah, were hit by lightning Tuesday night.

A second 30-minute delay was forced by a news photographer's malfunctioning remote-control camera, said Dick Whittaker, director of public affairs at Dugway.

A Cruise missile leaves the launch site at Dugway Proving Ground Wednesday. The missile flew 906 miles, attacking two simulated targets before being lowered to the ground by parachute.

New Soviet warplanes may give U.S.S.R. advantage

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union will soon introduce three new types of warplanes that may have key advantages over the U.S. Air Force's most advanced jet fighters, senior military officials say.

Air Force Secretary Verne Orr predicted recently in a little-noticed speech that a new generation of Soviet fighters and ground-attack planes will enter service within the next year or so.

"In comparison with the U.S. Air Force's F-15s and F-16s, this new generation aircraft may give the Soviets advantages" in average speed, air-to-ground attack range and other characteristics, he said.

Orr forecast that the new planes will go into operation even before the Soviets finish introducing their current high-performance warplanes such as the MIG-23, MIG-27, MIG-25 and SU-24. These planes already feature improved electronics equipment and air combat missiles.

Orr, the Air Force's civilian chief, gave no further details. But Assistant Secretary Alton G. Keel Jr. said in an interview this week that the anticipated new Soviet planes include a ground-attack jet called the SU-25 and two fighters that have not yet been given designations.

KEEL SAID there is evidence the new Soviet planes are being fitted with more powerful, more effective engines that give them greater range and maneuverability.

Keel, the Air Force's civilian research boss, acknowledged that the U.S. F-15s and F-16s will probably continue to have an edge in air-to-air combat range as well as in the range at which they can engage an enemy. He explained that the American planes have better radar and weapons-fire control gear.

However, Keel said, "there is reason to have concern about how long we can keep our technological edge."

Orr and Keel noted that the Soviets have been outproducing the United States in tactical combat planes. This year, they said, the Soviets will build about 1,300 combat aircraft, compared to a U.S. output of slightly more than 200.

The United States long has relied on what engineers regard as superior quality to offset Soviet numerical advantages.

ASKED ABOUT prospects for improved U.S. combat aircraft, Keel said the Air Force is looking at ways to develop versions of the F-15 or the F-16 to penetrate deep behind an enemy's front to strike at its supply lines, troops and tanks.

A decision on such a development is hoped for next year, with about 400 new aircraft to be built especially for this purpose. Beyond advances in F-15 and F-16 technology, Keel said the Air Force is Shuttle being mated with fuel tank, twin rocket boosters

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The space shuttle Columbia is being mated to a 15-story-tall fuel tank and twin rocket boosters for its final test flight next month after a record "turn-around" time in the hangar, space agency officials say.

The shuttle is scheduled to take off June 27 for its fourth and last test flight before becoming operational in November.

Workers began mating the shuttle to the rockets and fuel tank at 2:40 p.m. EDT Wednesday, said Mark Hess, Kennedy Space Center spokesman. The attachment process and other advance work will be completed during an eight-day layover in the Vehicle Assembly Building, he said.

"The mating process is going well without any hitches," Hess said Wednesday evening.

Workers will replace seven tiles during the eight-day stay. Three more tiles, all in the forward area, will be installed after the space plane is rolled out to launch pad 39A next week, he said. The ten tiles were knocked off during its asking Congress for about $30 million for research on a future air-combat fighter for the 1990s.

third test flight last month. Workers towed the shuttle 300 yards from its hangar to the 52-story assembly building early Wednesday and hoisted it vertically in a sling for the mating process, Hess said.

The 30-minute tow was delayed for 13 hours, when ground crews miscalculated the time needed to prepare the craft for towing, he said.

"No major problems. There were just some bad guesses by technicians on how long it would take to complete each procedure" in the hangar, Hess said.

Despite the last-minute delays, the shuttle's "turn-around time" in the hangar was a record 41 days, compared to 53 work days before the third flight last month.

Columbia is to carry a top-secret military cargo on its fourth flight, a seven-day mission commanded by Apollo 16 veteran Thomas K. Mattingly. The pilot will be space rookie Henry W. Hartfield.

U.S., U.S.S.R. end round of nuclear-weapons talks

By W. JOSEPH CAMPBELL

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — American and Soviet representatives resumed negotiations on intermediate-range nuclear weapons in Europe today, but they were still far from an agreement.

The talks ended after two hours and 40 minutes with the negotiators agreeing to meet again Tuesday.

The American negotiator, Paul Nitze, said before the talks began that he would press discussion of the fundamental U.S. position, commonly called "the zero option," which the Soviets have publicly rejected. The Soviet news agency Tass today criticized the plan as "tantamount to a unilateral disarmament."

Nonetheless, Soviet negotiator Yuli A. Kvitsinsky told reporters he expected "success."

The two men and their delegations shook hands and exchanged greetings in English as they resumed the politically sensitive deliberations after a two-month recess.

President Reagan has proposed convening parallel talks in Geneva by late next month on reduction of the warheads for strategic, or intercontinental-range, nuclear missiles. The Soviets have said they are willing to talk but have not agreed on a time and place.

The intermediate-range missile talks, which began Nov. 30 amid intensifying public pressure in Western Europe for nuclear disarmament, resumed with mutual criticism that the other side has been less than forthcoming.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev said Tuesday that the talks would be a test of American good faith and commitment.

"We shall see how the Americans will conduct themselves — whether they will only take their time again, preparing for the deployment of missiles or will show a desire to reach agreement," he said.

Nitze, who has acknowledged that the two sides have made no progress on central issues, appealed the same day for a "constructive dialogue" and said he hoped the Soviet negotiators had been "hard at work" during the recess.

"We are eager," he said, "to hear the considered responses of the Soviet delegation to our proposal."

The "zero option" which the Americans presented as a draft treaty in February proposes canceling NATO plans to deploy in Western Europe 572 U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles that could hit the Soviet Union if the Soviets dismantle their SS-series rockets threatening Western Europe from launching sites in the European part of the Soviet Union.

Link with climbers on Everest broken

SEATTLE, Wash. — Families and associates of the American climbers seeking to scale 29,028-foot Mount Everest by an unexplored route have been without word from team members since a communique dated April 21 and received May 3, leading to speculation a severe storm may have disrupted the climb or that a breakdown in the communications chain has occurred.

The 17 climbers, being led by 53-year-old Lou Whittaker of Ashford, Wash., have been in the Himalayas since March 21 in an attempt to scale the world's highest peak by a Tibetan route that was to take them up the north face, which turned back eight separate expeditions in the years between World Wars I and II.

"The last thing we heard was that there was to be a summit attempt the 7th to 10th (of May)," said Dan McConnell of Seattle, Wash., who is handling public relations for the expedition. "There's been a lot of speculation including...a storm, but it's probably just a breakdown in the communication chain."

Because of the remoteness of Everest and the logistics involved, there is a communication lag of 10 days or two weeks from the time of the original message until it is channeled down the mountain, across Tibet and into the United States. In the early stages of the climb, Whittaker's team sent out reports every week or 10 days: on March 30, April 11, April 21 and April 28.

With the failure of any correspondence to reach the United States so far this week, 17 days have now elapsed since last word was received.

The April 21 report indicated that the expedition — which includes Dallas oilman Dick Bass and 31-year-old Marty Hoey of Tacoma, Wash., who is seeking to become the first American woman up Everest — had reached the 24,000-foot level and stood poised for an attempt at the summit of the mountain revered by Tibetans as Chomo Lungma, Goddess Mother of the World.

In that communique, Whittaker, who lectured in Midland last year, indicated that "within the next two weeks we plan to establish two more camps that will put us in position to go for the summit the first week of May. The fact that the entire team has pulled together from the very start is what has allowed us to make the excellent progress to date."

Kidnapper called polite, friendly

CHURCH POINT, La. (AP) — The arrest of a 23-year-old fugitive has ended an alleged abduction spree that one victim says included a stop at a coin-operated laundry so the dyed loot from a bank robbery could be washed and dried.

Although the suspect is charged with bank robbery and kidnapping, he was friendly and polite and talked frequently about his troubled life, said Virgie Latiolais, who described being abducted Monday with her husband, John, from their home in the southeast Louisiana town of Church Point. The couple was released unharmed in Houston nine hours later.

The suspect, Kent David Kloster, was arrested Wednesday night in Vinton, La., shortly after he stepped off a bus, the FBI said.

He is charged with the Monday holdup of the First National Bank in Lafayette, La. Money from the bank had been stained red from a booby trap packed into the stolen bills.

Authorities said after the robbery, Kloster went to the Latiolais' farm home.

Mrs. Latiolais said she and her husband were abducted by Kloster at gunpoint and forced to drive 150 miles across the state line to Houston. There they washed the money in a coin-operated laundry.

"He made me go in a supermarket with a $100 bill to get some change," Mrs. Latiolais said.

"I had a very difficult time because they had noticed the dye and I guess they could tell I was extremely upset," she said.

Mrs. Latiolais washed the bills in soap and bleach, but the dye wouldn't come off. She said she was nervous about using a clothes dryer because the fluttering bills were plainly visible through the glass window of the dryer.

"But no one noticed it," she said. "People would pass by and say 'Hi' and we'd say 'Hi.'"

The fugitive said the couple would not be hurt if they followed instructions, Mrs. Latiolais said. He was friendly and polite, talking frequently about his past, she said.

Kloster told the couple he was abandoned by his mother at age 2 and had "missed a lot in life by not having a family home. He told us of all the places he had robbed...He always dreamed as a child to work on a farm but all he learned was stealing," she said.

Mrs. Latiolais said when she and her husband were released unharmed by Kloster in a Houston parking lot, "He shook hands with us and I said, 'God bless you, son,' and he said, 'Thank you, I need it.'"

Two days later, a tip led to Kloster's arrest in a hamburger restaurant in Vinton, said Police Chief Lionel Almond.

Hostage-taker surrenders quietly

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A 16-year-old youth armed with a pistol and a knife surrendered today after holding four babies and four teen-age women hostage in a home for unwed mothers.

Charlotte Police Chief Mack Vines said Tyrone Caldwell of Charlotte, who had demanded to see his baby sister, surrendered about 9 a.m. to end a 10-hour standoff.

No shots were fired.

"He just surrendered," Vines said. "We promised to cooperate with him if he would come out peacefully so there was no bodily injury to him." Police refused to discuss what charges might be filed against the youth.

Police said Caldwell took eight hostages at the Hunter House dormitory of Florence Crittenton Services about 11 p.m. Wednesday.

Several hostages were released at various intervals during the night. One baby was released about 7 a.m., and a baby girl, wearing pink pajamas, was brought out in a stroller just before 8 a.m.

The last released hostage was an 18-year-old woman seen running across the street with police shortly before officers brought the youth out and put him into a police car.

The youth, who negotiated with officers by telephone, at one point asked police to bring his baby sister to him. Officers held up the 9-month-old girl, wrapped in pink blankets, so Caldwell could see her through a window.

Police to appeal

HOUSTON (AP) — The attorney for 13 policemen disciplined for beating and threatening black residents of an apartment building says most of them will appeal a civil service board decision upholding their firings and suspensions.

Richard Cobb said Wednesday one basis for the appeal was the Houston Civil Service Commission's refusal to hear the cases individually.

Woman bandit hits restaurants

ODESSA — Police here are looking for a woman bandit who held up two fast-food restaurants Wednesday night.

The first holdup occurred about 9:30 p.m. at the Hot Dog Haus Restaurant at 2813 West County Road. Officers said an employee thought it was "a joke" when the woman pulled a gun and demanded money from the cash registers. She insisted it wasn't a joke, however, and escaped on foot with an undisclosed amount of cash.

Forty-five minutes later, a woman matching the same description robbed the Whataburger Restaurant at 1900 East 8th St. of an undisclosed amount of money. She was described as either Mexican-American or a dark-complected Anglo, about 30 years old, 5 feet, 4 inches tall and weighing 130 pounds.

One detective said it's only the third time in his 26-year experience that a woman bandit has struck Odessa.

Line drive to chest kills pitcher

MIAMI (AP) — An 18-year-old pitcher was killed during a softball game when he was hit in the chest by a hard line drive as his parents and five brothers watched. Lazaro Garcia sat down, opened his arms and the softball rolled slowly off his chest. He lay face up on the mound, motionless.

Officer acquitted

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A 27-year veteran policeman has been acquitted by a federal court jury of charges he acted as a bodyguard in a major narcotics deal.

Jurors deliberated more than 10 hours over two days before finding Sgt. Oscar Meissner innocent of aiding and abetting and failing to report a plot to possess cocaine.

"They can't give me punishment for being stupid," Meissner, 61, said after the verdict was returned Wednesday.

Defense attorney Gerald Goldstein grabbed the sergeant's badge, which prosecutors had called "tarnished," and pinned it back on Meissner's chest.

The government had argued Meissner acted as a bodyguard for convicted drug dealer Timothy O'Leary in a major cocaine buy on July 2, 1981.

Defense attorneys contended O'Leary, a sometime police informant, tricked Meissner into believing he was helping O'Leary get out of a 25-kilogram cocaine deal.

However, O'Leary was discussing the deal with two undercover federal narcotics agents who arrested Meissner and O'Leary.

Meissner, who has been suspended with pay since his arrest, said he had not decided what to do next.

These past months, I've had one boss, Mr. Goldstein, Meissner said.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am an older gentleman. After my beloved wife died, I married a lovely, refined widow my age. My grandchildren, ages 10 and 12, started to call her "Hazel," her given name.

Hazel feels that it is disrespectful for children to address an older person by her given name, and I agree, so I asked my daughter (the children's mother) to please instruct them to call my wife "Grandma Hazel." I thought a word from their mother would solve the problem. It didn't. My daughter informed me that she asked the children how they felt about it, and they told her they preferred to call her "Hazel," so they continued to do so.

I recently suggested rather pointedly that should this irritating situation continue, it would eventually have some rather unfavorable repercussions.

They have not as yet taken the hint. It is causing a strain on the family ties. What do you suggest? Should I just keep quiet, and quietly cut them all out of my will? — FROM MISSOURI

DEAR FROM: Why not approach your grandchildren directly? Explain how proud you are to hear them call you "Grandfather," and you know it would make your wife feel very proud to be called "Grandma Hazel." Explain that it is rude and disrespectful to address an older person by her given name.

If they object to the term "Grandmother" or any variation of it, suggest "Miss Hazel" as an alternative — anything but just plain Hazel.

And if this doesn't work, you're from Missouri — SHOW 'EM!

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is marrying a young man soon. He has never been married, but he has a son whom he sees every day. After he and my daughter are married, do we look at this man's son as our grandson? —

NERVOUS IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR NERVOUS: Inasmuch as your future son-in-law sees the boy every day and obviously regards him as his son, it would be very generous of you to "look at" the boy as your grandson.

DEAR ABBY: This is an open letter to Dr. Heineman, who thinks if a man gets an unmarried girl pregnant and she wants an abortion and he doesn't, HIS wishes in the matter are as important as hers.

I'm not talking through my hat. Have you ever worked in an abortion clinic? Well, I have. A sample of the interviews: Question: "Why are you here?" Answer No. 1: "My boyfriend refuses to see me until I get rid of the baby."

Answer No. 2: "I just found out my boyfriend is married."

Answer No. 3: "When I told my boyfriend, he left me."

Answer No. 4: "My boyfriend says he is too young to be a father."

Answer No. 5: "My boyfriend says the baby is not his."

Abby, I am sure many more girls would keep their babies if the men were more supportive. But the truth is, it's the MEN who do not want the baby, and women can't handle it alone. — OFF MY CHEST IN MASSEPEQUA, N.Y.

Vegetarian diets can provide proper protein

Copley News Service

As every vegetarian cook knows, the well-stocked kitchen is incomplete without a well-stocked kitchen library. Any diet requires some planning to make sure that the body gets its full complement of nutritional requirements. A meatless diet requires an added bit of planning since the vegetarian cook must make up, through vegetable sources and dairy products, the proteins which other diets derive from meat.

A good book to keep handy in the kitchen, to help make sure that your meal planning includes the proper protein requirements is Frances Moore Lappe and Ellen Buchman Ewald's "Great Meatless Meals."

These two ladies are separately the authors of the famed "Diet for a Small Planet" and "Recipes for a Small Planet," and here they collaborate with a variety of recipes which are both delicious and nutritionally sound. The book is based on the theory of protein complementarity. Each menu contains ingredients providing amino acids which cannot be synthesized by the body and which must be ingested simultaneously, in the proper proportions, to be effectively synthesized in the body. Good combinations to effect this synthesis are beans and wheat, rice and beans, peanuts and sunflower seeds, cornmeal and soy, wholewheat bread and cheese.

The format of the book is such that several complementary recipes are grouped together under one heading; together they make up the "meatless meals" of the title. The ingredients of the separate recipes combine to make meals which provide the fullest possible protein requirements. The flavors and textures of the recipes comprising each meal are complementary too, and many of them include desserts.

The delicious Feijoada Brazilian Dinner below contains the complementary combination of beans and rice, served with greens and followed by a spicy Nutty Applesauce Cake.

FEIJOADA BRAZILIAN DINNER

- 2 stalks celery, chopped
- 1 tomato, chopped

Saute the onion and garlic in a little oil, then add them to the beans, with stock, bay leaf and pepper. Bring to a boil, simmer two minutes, and let sit, covered, for one hour. Add the whole or halved orange (whole is the traditional way), salt, celery and tomato. Simmer, covered, with lid ajar, for two to three hours or more, until the beans are tender. Remove a ladleful of beans, mash them, and return them to the pot to cook until the mashed beans thicken the mixture.

RICE

- 1 onion, chopped
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 tsp. olive oil
- 2 tsp. butter
- 2 tomatoes, peeled, seeded, coarsely chopped
- 2 cups raw brown rice, cooked

Saute the onion and garlic in the olive oil and butter until the onion is golden. Add the tomatoes, and simmer a few minutes. Stir in the cooked rice and keep warm over low heat.

SAUCES FOR RICE

- 1 cup lemon juice
- 1 small onion
- 2 cloves garlic
- 1 tomato, peeled and seeded
- 1 tsp. green salsa jalapena or 2 oz. canned California green chiles, seeded
- 1 tsp. salt

- 2 cloves garlic
- Juice of 1 lemon
- 1 onion, chopped
- scallions, parsley, to taste
- ¼ cup vinegar

Blend the first four ingredients in a blender until smooth. Stir in remaining ingredients and, just before serving, stir in a little liquid from the bean pot.

GREENS

- 1½ lbs. trimmed greens (turnip or mustard greens, collards, etc.)
- 1 clove garlic
- 1 orange, peeled and sliced
- 6 heaping tbsp. toasted sesame seed meal

Steam first three ingredients together until greens are barely wilted. Sprinkle one heaping tablespoon of toasted seed meal on each serving with orange slices on top.

NUTTY APPLESAUCE CAKE

- 1 cup applesauce
- ¼ cup honey
- Cup oil or melted butter
- 1¼ cups whole wheat flour
- Cup soy flour
- 1 tsp. baking soda
- ½ tsp. each salt, cinnamon, ginger, cloves

To cup roasted peanuts, ground ½ to 1 cup sunflower seeds

Mix together the applesauce, honey and oil. Stir together the remaining ingredients and blend into the liquid. Bake in an 8-inch-square pan for 30 minutes at 350 degrees. The pan should be oiled and floured.

Midland Christian Women meet

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

"Ralph Lauren originated the Santa Fe look," informed Anita Blackford to members of the Midland Christian Women's Club at the May meeting at Midland Country Club.

"He established the look at the top of his line and it has come down to the look for all women," she said. Ms. Blackford's is owner of A. Blackford's at San Miguel Square.

She said, however, that more and more women are wearing a modified Santa Fe look.

The basic look is made up of a highly ruffled blouse, skirt with a deep flounce and boots.

The most important element, however, is the belt, according to Ms. Blackford.

"The belt can be in a variety of materials and be in a variety of styles," she said.

"For example, it can be made of cotton, silver, turquoise or leather. It can be slim or wide."

She explained that one of the true looks is the ruffled blue denim skirt.

But the Midland woman is modifying that look for summer, wearing ruffled skirts in lightweight cotton and in multicolor prints.

Tops which were originally a white ruffled blouse have developed into brightly colored tops for summer.

"This is a good fashion for bringing out all of your turquoise accessories," said Ms. Blackford.

She also said that the California influence has given the Santa Fe look a softer effect with wide waistlines, ruffled puff sleeves and the white eyelet hem.

"And from the Santa Fe look, designers are going to the native American Indian look," she said. One of Ms. Blackford's models demonstrated that look with a basic linen dress that had rick rack trim, and a split skirt.

THE FASHION PORTION of the program show was preceded with a musical presentation by Matt Carr, a freshman at Midland College. He is the son of Leo and Judy Carr of Midland.

Accompanied by Diane Davis at the piano, Carr sang a medley of old favorite love songs.

THE PROGRAM WAS presented by Lee Hemphill of Dallas. She told of her life, and her mistakes before she became a Christian. Her theme was "One More Club Should Do It."

"There's just two kinds of people: Christian or non-Christian," she said. "There's no such thing as 'sorta Christian.'"

She explained that many women are caught up in what was her experience—of trying so hard to handle the details of living a happy life and forgetting that God can do this for them.

"When I was growing up, I promised God that if he gave me a husband, then I would handle the details involved with 'happily ever after'—a husband, children and happy home," she said.

She did find a husband while attending Southern Methodist University as an art major. It wasn't long after, they moved to Houston that she began a teaching career and then formed a family.

"But we were living in the future," she said. "We were always saying that we wanted to do this and that for when..."

"I didn't realize it for a long time, but that's how we lived all those years in Houston. All I knew then was that I felt a restlessness."

"I have since learned that you have to live each day at a time."

Mrs. Hemphill said that before she learned this, however, all she knew was that she was restless and felt an emptiness.

"To fill that void, I joined clubs," she said. "I joined and joined and joined—I joined the garden club, stitchery club, sorority alumnae, a storytelling group, the woman's club, a babysitting club and the community concert board."

"I developed a disease called clubarrhea—it's where you go all the time."

Mrs. Hemphill said that the goals she had wanted to attain—a husband, home and children—had dimmed in the attainment of those goals.

A friend asked her to join one more thing—a Bible study. She refused three times before she accepted. "I didn't join it because I wanted to change my life, though. It was just another thing to do."

She said that she soon realized that the warmth among the women in the Bible and prayer groups was special, and that it became more important.

"I noticed their lives and their priorities—they put their husband and children first," she said.

And I went to Bible study for three years before I realized that I didn't know the Lord Jesus as my personal saviour."

She said that her life had been like an artificial flower. "On the surface, I looked okay. But if a person looked at me up close, then he would realize that you couldn't smell the heavenly fragrance of a real live flower. Because I was plastic."

She said that her life did change, but it has been gradual and ongoing. "And it's only been through prayer, faith and fellowship that I've been able to change and grow," said Mrs. Hemphill.

"But I have learned, as a Christian, that I didn't have to handle all those details of 'happily ever after' anymore. I finally realized that the Lord will take care of that for me."

Next meeting of the Midland Christian Women's Club will be June 2 at Midland Country Club.

Hank O'Neal, head coach of the Midland Swim Team, will give a special feature on "Let's Get IN the Swim of Things."

Music will be presented by Ted and Candy Markle.

Head speaker will be Pat Culpeper, head coach at midland High School. He will speak on "From On Top of the Mountain."

Nursery and luncheon reservations must be made by May 31. Tickets are $9.50 a person and are available by calling Pat Gatlin at 699-6506 or Julie Cole at 682-5851.

The free nursery will be from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at Fannin Terrace Baptist Church. Mothers should bring a sack lunch and drink for their children.

Persons attending who have teenagers are encouraged to bring them.

Luncheon begins at 11:45 a.m.

Advice on how to get and keep that job

By JANICE TYRWHITT
(Special from Reader's Digest)

Patricia Werner is executive director of the Canadian University and College Placement Association. In this exclusive interview, she offers professional pointers to young people seeking work in today's tight job market.

Q. Ms. Werner, what are the prospects for young people looking for their first fulltime jobs?

A. College graduates with a technical education — engineers, computer scientists, accountants — are now very much in demand. People with nontechnical backgrounds face a much tougher job search, which means they're going to have to use more initiative and ingenuity.

Recently we needed someone for a temporary job in our office. Candidates poured in. I said to one young man with a B.A. in philosophy, "You have no specific skills I can use; why should I hire you?" "Because," he said, "I've learned to think." I knew then that he recognized what general education was about, and I hired him. What he learns here, doing routine administrative work, will help him to find his next job.

Q. What is the biggest hurdle new graduates face?

A. The ones who will find it most difficult to get jobs are those who haven't yet discovered their own skills and priorities. Career planning should start early. Before applying for any job, you should have a clear idea of what you can offer, and what you want to do.

Q. Where should job hunters begin their search?

A. School or university guidance counselors and placement officers can supply information and, possibly, contacts with graduates already working in the field you hope to enter.

College placement offices, employment centers and newspaper ads are obvious hunting grounds, but want ads aren't very productive for a new graduate because your competitors are answering the few that don't require experience. Some of the best jobs never get advertised. Resourceful job hunters will find their own leads by scanning financial pages and trade journals for news of expanding companies.

Q. How should a candidate prepare for an interview?

A. You should have a clear idea of what you have to offer.

Anyone who applies to a company he knows little about is wasting time. Be ready for obvious questions: How do you think you can contribute to our organization? Are you willing to travel? What do you hope to be doing five years from now?

Take your cues from the interviewer. Talk about yourself, but don't give one-word answers or talk too much. Find out exactly what you'll be doing if you're hired.

A busy employer may rush you through questions that tell him what he wants to know without giving you a chance to understand what he's offering. Unless you know this, you may be on very shaky ground when you start working.

Know how to end an interview gracefully. If you haven't brought up a key point, now is the time to do so, briefly. Beyond that, ask about the next step. "When can I expect to hear from you?"

If you're offered a second interview, ask whom you'll be meeting, and whether you'll be expected to take a test, so that you can prepare yourself as much as possible.

Q. When and how should the job hunter discuss salary?

A. If it hasn't been mentioned by the end of your first interview, ask about the salary for the job. If you're asked the awkward question, "What do you think you're worth?," avoid stating a figure. Say you would expect the going rate.

Q. What are the commonest mistakes made in interviews?

A. Some responses are guaranteed to make interviewers see red. One is the cliché, "I want to work with people." Another is, "What's available?" or "I'll be glad to do anything," which means you have no idea of what you CAN do.

Don't push for responsibilities beyond the level of the job under discussion. For several years, I recruited candidates for jobs in the federal public service, and many were astoundingly ignorant of what they were applying for. Some public administration students, for instance, expected to make policy decisions from the day they began working; others would tell me that they could help my company make money!

Q. Once hired, how can a young worker get ahead?

A. Your entry into the working world will be easier if you favorably impress not just senior managers but the photocopy clerk who decides whether your work gets done first or last. Avoid setting your sights so high that you neglect what you're actually doing.

Asparagus spears rolled in ham and served with a creamy cheese sauce make a lovely entree for patio dining.

Easy ham roll-ups perfect for summer entertaining

When you're planning on having friends over, it certainly helps your reputation as a hostess if the food looks as great as it tastes! Summertime is an active time. This entree is quick, nutritious and has eye appeal as well.

For this season of the year, select such favorites as thinly sliced ham, fresh asparagus spears and a golden cheese sauce. Work simple magic by rolling the ham around the cooked asparagus spears, then top with the melted cheese sauce.

Get the asparagus underway with butter, lemon juice, water and salt in a skillet. Fresh asparagus will cook to tenderness in 15 minutes or less. In the meantime, prepare the cheese sauce, which is made with a white sauce base.

The colors, pink, green and gold, are attractive, too. Place the ham rolls in a fancy casserole for a short trip to the oven. Fifteen minutes is enough to warm the entree. Set the rolls on toast points when serving to make the entree complete.

Sliced tomatoes, mingled with Bibb lettuce, constitute the remaining vegetable/salad portion of the meal, while icy cold glasses of milk furnish a delightful beverage.

Meat dishes can be prepared easily using microwave oven

By DESIREE VIVEA
 Copley News Service

Meat dishes cooked in the microwave oven are as easy to prepare as they are delicious. There are several procedures that you should bear in mind when cooking meats this way, to ensure a perfect outcome every time.

Microwave ovens do not brown, so you must use your oven in conjunction with a browning dish. Be careful to use the dish that is manufactured for your oven, and do not use a browning dish if it will void your warranty. A sauce or baste will add color as well as flavor.

Refer to charts as necessary for cooking times required for different types and cuts of meat. Undercooking will allow for carry-over cooking (continued cooking after the dish is removed from the oven).

After your cut has been cooked for the prescribed amount of time, remove it from the oven and insert a standard meat thermometer. Let it stand for 10 minutes to allow the thermometer to register the proper internal temperature of the meat. You can easily return the meat to the oven if additional cooking time is required. It is wiser to under-cook rather than over-cook your meat. There isn't much you can do for a cut that is cooked beyond your preference.

Be sure never to use a thermometer in the microwave unless it is specifically designed for such use.

For frozen meat, place it on a flat dish and heat two minutes per pound on the defrost setting. Then let the meat stand at room temperature for 15 to 20 minutes. Return the meat to the oven for an additional one minute per pound, turning the meat over several times throughout the process.

When thawing ground beef, remove portions as they soften to prevent premature cooking. Thick steaks should be thawed, but cuts under 1 1/2 inches can be cooked frozen.

Do not salt meat before you cook it. It is fine to season with pepper or other spices, but salt tends to toughen the meat as it cooks. Add it after the meat is done. As moisture accumulates during cooking, drain it off. The moisture distracts the cooking energy from the meat itself and an excess can leave your cut undercooked. When cooking a roast, start with the flat side down, on a flat glass or ceramic dish of appropriate dimensions. Turn it over halfway through cooking and turn the dish around as well.

Cover your meat lightly with a paper towel when cooking to prevent splattering and to help act as a baster for the juices, holding them in the meat.

Less tender cuts of beef require a longer and slower cooking time. To compensate for this, use the slow cooking or defrost setting on your oven.

To slow cook, double the cooking time, because at the slow setting only half of the energy is utilized to cook the meat. Tenderizers, such as pineapple juice, wine or commercially-prepared varieties, are helpful.

SAVORY POT ROAST

minutes, covered. Turn meat over. Cook one hour, turning meat every 15 minutes. Let stand 20 minutes before slicing. Season with salt and pepper. Makes six to eight servings.

Place seam side down in a lightly greased 1 1/2-quart ovenproof glass loaf dish. Cover meat loaf with tomato sauce and bake, uncovered, six minutes. Rotate dish 1/4 turn, cook six minutes longer. Let stand 10 minutes before serving. Serves six.

 1 tsp. dry mustard

 1 small clove garlic,

minced or pressed
 1 lemon, sliced
 Arrange spareribs in a 7x11-inch baking dish with large ends toward the edges of dish and meatiest sides down. Cover lightly with paper towels and cook in the microwave oven seven minutes, turning ribs over once, drain off and discard fat.

Meanwhile, mix together lemon juice, chile sauce, horseradish, Worcestershire, salt, paprika, orange juice, mustard, brown sugar, and garlic. Pour over ribs. Cook, lightly covered, 20 minutes, turning ribs and repositioning them in the dish every five minutes. Serve with lemon wedges tucked between ribs. Makes two servings.

MARINATED LAMB CHOPS PORTUGUESE-STYLE

1/2 cup dry red wine
 2 tps. olive or salad oil
 2 small cloves garlic, minced or pressed
 In a 7x11-inch baking dish, combine wine, oil, garlic, salt, cumin, cinnamon, and onion. Stir well. Place lamb chops in marinade, turning to moisten all sides, and arrange in a single layer. Cover and refrigerate at least eight hours or overnight. Turn chops over in marinade occasionally. Drain off marinade (reserve for other uses) and cook lamb chops, uncovered, in the microwave oven three minutes. Turn chops over and reposition them in the dish. Cook, uncovered, three minutes for medium (add one additional minute for well-done). Let stand, covered, five to seven minutes before serving. Makes four servings.

Casserole dishes excellent for casual summertime entertaining with friends

How about popping a casserole in the oven for a porch or patio meal? A Beef/Corn Bread Casserole with its half pound of ground beef is light on meat, but hearty with a half pound of Monterey Jack cheese. It's colorful and zesty, too, with a tasty tomato sauce.

1 cup all-purpose flour
1 cup yellow corn meal
2 tbsps. sugar
4 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
1 cup milk
1/4 cup (1/2 stick) butter, melted

8 slices (8 oz.) Monterey Jack cheese

SAUCE

1 can (16 oz.) tomatoes, undrained
2 tbsps. tomato paste
1/4 cup chopped celery
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
2 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 bay leaf

1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. sugar
1/8 tsp. pepper

For casserole, cook meat and onion in skillet until meat is browned and crumbly; drain off excess fat. Stir in olives, catsup and seasonings. Cook and stir 2 minutes; set aside. Preheat oven to 400 degrees F. Combine flour, corn meal, sugar, baking powder and salt in mixing bowl. Add milk, butter and egg. Stir just until all ingredients are moistened. Stir in corn until combined. Place half of the batter in bottom of buttered 2-quart rectangular baking dish. Spoon half of the meat mixture over the batter. Place 5 slices of cheese over meat. Cover with remaining batter and meat mixture. Bake 25 to 30 minutes. Remove from oven. Cut remaining cheese slices into 2 triangles each. Place cheese over meat. Return to oven just until cheese is melted. Remove from oven and let stand 5 minutes before serving. Meanwhile, for sauce, combine all ingredients in medium-sized saucepan. Heat to boiling over medium heat, stirring occasionally. Simmer, uncovered, 10 minutes. Remove bay leaf. To serve, cut corn bread mixture in squares; spoon sauce over each serving.

1 teaspoon cinnamon
1-2 cup caraway seeds (3-4 ounces)

Cream butter and sugar until fluffy. Beat eggs over pan of hot water, not boiling, until pale yellow and thick. Beat into sugar mixture. Sift flour with cloves and cinnamon. Beat into creamed mixture. Add caraway seeds. Turn into greased and wax paper-lined 10-inch spring form pan. Smooth top. Bake at 350 degrees 60 minutes or until cake tests done in center.

DEAR MRS. R.: Here's our Buttermilk Fudge.

BUTTERMILK FUDGE

1 cup buttermilk
1-2 cup butter or margarine
2 tablespoons light corn syrup
1 teaspoon soda
2 cups sugar
1 cup chopped nuts
1 teaspoon vanilla

Combine buttermilk, butter, corn syrup, soda and sugar in 1 1/2 quart or larger saucepan. Stir over low heat until butter is melted and sugar is dissolved. Then cook very slowly without stirring, until mixture forms a hard ball when dropped into cold water, about 45 to 55 minutes. Remove from heat and cool 10 to 15 minutes. Beat until candy loses its gloss. Stir in nuts and vanilla. Pour into greased 9-inch square pan. Cut while warm. Makes about 3 dozen 1 1/2-inch squares.

NO TIME SCHEDULE

Dear Heloise: How often does one change sheets, mop floors, dust, etc.? I once read somewhere a housekeeping hint which said "Recipe for easy house cleaning — wait 'til you can see a difference."

It works! Sometimes too well! Fortunately, I am not allergic to house dust or cat hairs, but some of my friends are. Does that tell me how often I should clean?

From one who would rather quilt... P.W.R.

My philosophy has always been that there are no hard and fast rules for housecleaning, no uncompromising schedules as to when this or that should be done.

Some of us are more fussy about dust, etc., than others are and are more demanding of ourselves.

But, if you would rather quilt and a little dust doesn't particularly bother you, don't be swayed too much by what others might think! — Heloise

POTATO SALAD

Dear Heloise: When cooking potatoes for potato salad, don't boil the potatoes with their skins on or you'll have to wait patiently — or impatiently — for them to cool and then go through the messy process of skinning and cubing them.

Instead, peel the potatoes and cube them before cooking, then steam them in a vegetable steamer.

Both cooking and cooling time are reduced, since the pieces are small, saving both energy and time.

And, a real plus is that valuable nutrients are preserved by steaming rather than boiling — Mrs. Nelson Crooks Don't hoard a great cooking cue. Do send it to Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, TX 78216. She can't answer your letter personally but she'll be sifting her mail with care looking for superhints to feature in her column.

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise: The following anecdote will be most appreciated by those who have to cope with a houseful of live-wire kids (in my case, four under 16 years of age) during the summer when there is no school...

I work part time (during school months only — love it!) and have to leave the house a few minutes earlier than my youngest son, Alan, age 11.

He must have been feeling sorry for me the other morning because I had to go to work. And he must have felt I was looking forward to school being out as much as he because he rushed out to the car as I was leaving and said sympathetically, "Hang in there, Mom! Only three more days and then you can stay home with us!" — S.C.

Protein-rich nuts add flavor, versatility to the menu

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food
Writer

With meat, fish and fowl continuing to be costly, consumers are looking for supplements of protein vital to their diet.

One worthy candidate is the nut, which is generally rich in protein and has considerable adaptability.

Nut is the word for a number of dry fruits consisting generally of a single kernel enclosed in a wood-like shell, such as the filbert and hazelnut. Some varieties are, botanically speaking, legumes, such as the peanut, which is the pod of a vine of the pea family. This is one of the most versatile of nuts.

George Washington Carver, famed scientist, found more than 300 products that could be made with peanuts, including milk, butter, coffee, oil and flour.

America has a plentiful supply of various nuts that were welcomed by the early settlers as an addition to their meager diet. The colonists learned about ways of using nuts from the Indians, who roasted them and added them to meat and vegetable stews. They also ground the dried kernels to make breads and puddings, much as they used corn.

One of my favorite nuts is the almond, which has been cultivated since early times in the Mediterranean area and the Orient. They are also grown commercially in California where they were said to have been brought by the Spanish missionaries. Almonds are a cooking boon, adding flavor and texture to many dishes, such as curry. They also make a delicious garnish for main dishes, salads and vegetables.

And, of course, almonds have long been a key ingredient in candies, ice creams and dessert sauces.

Almonds also make a nice soup, as in the following recipe.

1 cup blanched almonds, ground fine

3 cups chicken broth
1 small onion
Dash of nutmeg
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 cup hot milk
1 cup heavy cream
Slivered toasted almonds

Combine ground almonds, broth, onion and nutmeg in saucepan. Simmer, covered for 30 minutes. Discard onion. Keep soup hot. Melt butter in another pan, and stir in flour. Stir in milk. Cook over low heat, stirring till smooth and thickened. Stir mixture into chicken broth-almond mixture. Simmer over low heat, stirring constantly for 5 minutes. Remove from heat and stir in heavy cream. Heat through once again but do not let boil. Serve sprinkled with slivered almonds. Good hot or cold. Serves 3 or 4.

Economy hurts Mexico's nuclear program

By RICHARD BOUDREAU

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Burdened with an acute financial crisis, Mexico is considering a suspension of its atomic energy program, the most ambitious in the developing world.

The decision will affect the nuclear industries of Canada, France, Sweden, the United States and West Germany, which have dispatched heads of state, cabinet officials and atomic scientists to lobby for the first of a series of contracts worth an estimated $32 billion in current prices.

President Jose Lopez Portillo, whose administration wrote the energy plan as part of his oil-financed push to industrialize Mexico, planned to sign the first contract before leaving office Dec. 1, 1982. It calls for construction of two of the 20 atomic reactors planned for the year 2000.

But soon after the bids were opened Feb. 1, the Mexican peso collapsed under the strain of declining oil revenue and a $70 billion foreign debt. The 40 percent devaluation set off a burst of inflation and forced an 8 percent slash in government spending.

The Federal Electricity Commission is assuring bidders its 180-member evaluation team will meet the original August deadline for awarding a contract. But the president is reportedly under pressure from financial aides to let the next administration decide whether to sign it.

"THERE ARE currents in the government that are against the project, given the extremely difficult situation Mexico is in," West German Science Minister Andreas von Buelow said last week after talks with Lopez Portillo. "No decision has been taken, but my assumption now is the entire nuclear program will be delayed."

Seven companies spent millions of dollars promoting their bids for the twin-reactor plant and delivered truckloads of supporting documents. The 2,300-megawatt project would be built at the Mexican Gulf coastal site of Laguna Verde, where the nation's first atomic generator has been under construction since 1973.

The bidders are Westinghouse, General Electric and Combustion Engineering of the United States, Atomic Energy of Canada, Framatome of France, ASEA-ATOM of Sweden and Kraftwerk Union of West Germany.

Competition is keen because the government is also committed to deciding, by August 1983, which bidder will supply fuel-cycle technology for all 20 plants. Their production target is 20,000 megawatts of electricity — more than Mexico generates from all sources today and about double the goals of such big atomic planners as Argentina, Brazil, India, South Korea and Taiwan.

Until the financial crisis, opposition to the plan was limited here to a small group of academics. Foreign powers, they contended, want to saddle Mexico with dependence on expensive and hazardous technology, inappropriate for a country with the world's fourth largest oil and gas reserves.

Even with today's oil glut, government planners argue hydrocarbons are more valuable earning export dollars for Mexico than generating its electricity. But they admit budget pressures could stall the switch to atoms.

"IF THE economic situation continues to be this critical two or three years from now, then clearly we cannot build nuclear reactors," Juan Eibenshutz, the electricity commission's planning chief, said. "It's like being stuck in an apartment. Buying a house makes better long-run economic sense, but at the moment, we cannot afford one."

Costly construction delays on the first Laguna Verde plant have dealt the government a sobering lesson. A joint venture of Mexican firms and General Electric, it was first billed as a three-year project costing $263 million. Nine years later, $2 billion has been spent or allocated, with a completion date tentatively set for 1984.

An example of what is at stake is Canada's nuclear industry. Forseeing slack times after its reactor orders from Romania run out in 1985, it spent "$10 to $25 million" on the Mexican bid, a Canadian diplomat said. Roy McLaren, the Canadian parliament's energy secretary, called it the country's "largest and most comprehensive export proposal ever."

Worth about $2 billion at face value, the initial Mexican contract could generate "35,000 man years of employment and $8.8 billion in spinoff benefits" for Canada's economy, the industry journal Nuclear Week quoted McLaren as saying.

Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau came here to make a sales pitch for his country's technology as did Swedish King Carl XVI Gustaf, French President Francois Mitterrand and U.S. Vice President George Bush.

France and West Germany gained an edge over U.S. competitors by offering Mexico formulas for enriching its own uranium for atomic fuel. Though Mexico has signed the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, U.S. law bars the transfer of such "sensitive" technology.

EVEN SO, Reagan administration officials told Mexico they were willing to discuss such a transfer if U.S.-sponsored studies show that enriching uranium in Mexico is cheaper than importing the fuel, U.S. industry sources said.

President Reagan announced the formation of a commission to assist in the rehabilitation of the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island. The president is seen in front of a painting of the landmark by artist Peter Max which hangs at the White House.

Alcohol abstinence may not cure impotency

Dear Dr. Solomon: I can't say that you didn't warn me. To put it plain and simple, I'm an alcoholic — not the skid row type but still an alcoholic. One result has been that sex is something I only read about in books even though I'm not yet 40 years old. I've been off the bottle for a couple of months, and what I'd like to know is whether a man's sex life can return if he stays away from alcohol for a while. — Alfred, Miami Beach, Fla.

Dear Alfred: Abstaining from alcohol usually is not sufficient to restore impotence caused by alcoholism. Dr. David H. Van Thiel, of the University of Pittsburgh, has reported one study in which only 15 of 60 men recovered after they were on the wagon for two years.

Subsequently, however, 32 of the 45 men in the study regained their potency after being treated with an oral androgen (a substance that stimulates the development of secondary sex characteristics in men). One side effect of the treatment was a reduced fertility.

If you are interested in following through on this, why not check with your physician or ask your local medical society for the names of doctors that specialize in this area.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband's doctor says he is thinking about prescribing lithium because for some time my husband has been alternating between great highs and lows in mood. But my husband has a heart condition, and I know you have written that a drug may be good for one condition but bad for another. Should I get a second opinion about lithium for my husband? — Mrs. M.U., Easton, Pa.

Dear Mrs. U.: You always have the option of getting a second opinion; and, if you have any doubts about your husband's treatment, a second opinion might be a good idea. But research has shown that treatment with lithium rarely causes adverse cardiac reactions when normal doses of the drug are used. At a European conference on internal medicine, Dr. Hans Simon, of the Bonn-Venusberg University Clinic in West Germany, flatly stated that there is no need to withhold lithium from patients with heart disease.

Should lithium eventually be prescribed for your husband, I assume his doctor will monitor his condition carefully so as to detect any adverse side effects that may occur.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My 16-year-old daughter has reached the age where she worries about every extra pound. Now she has decided to go on a diet. That's all right with me as long as it does not affect her health. Is there anything in particular I should look out for to make certain she gets all the vitamins and minerals she needs? — Mrs. T.P., Carlsbad, N.M.

Dear Mrs. P.: My general recommendation is that your daughter see a physician for a checkup before she embarks on any diet. More specifically, she should be careful to get sufficient iron, calcium, and vitamin A. Iron supplementation in particular may be needed by a girl who has started to menstruate. An extra pint of milk each day should provide the calcium and vitamin A she needs.

If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Survey says Americans most politically conservative

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are among the most politically conservative of people, the Irish among the happiest and the Japanese and West Germans among the least likely to go to war for their countries, according to Gallup surveys taken in 15 countries to measure changing world values.

The surveys also found that Americans take more pride in their work than people in other countries, are more willing to fight for their country and are more likely to believe in God, life after death and the Ten Commandments.

Preliminary results of the study of attitudes and values in 15 countries were presented Tuesday by the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate, an international Roman Catholic research organization which sponsored the American portion of the undertaking.

Officials of the center said the study would help the church "take a more meaningful place in a rapidly changing world."

Outside the United States, the survey was sponsored by other groups and in some cases by the government. In each country, at least 1,200 adults, selected at random, were interviewed by Gallup Organization workers for an hour or more.

Some results are surprising. The survey found that far more Americans take more pride in their work than do their Japanese counterparts. Eighty-four percent of Americans said they did, while only 37 percent of Japanese and 36 percent of Europeans said so.

The results showed that Americans, rating themselves on a liberal to conservative political scale, rank among the Western world's conservatives. They are to the left of the whites in South Africa, and of the citizens of Belgium, Ireland and Northern Ireland, but to the right of the Japanese, Finns, Danes, British, West Germans, Dutch, Swedes, French, Spanish, and Italians.

The results also suggest that the people of Japan, West Germany and Italy, losers in World War II, are least willing to go to war for their countries.

Only 22 percent of the Japanese, 28 percent of the Italians and 35 percent of the West Germans said they would fight for their countries "if it came to that."

"Yes" answers were provided by 71 percent of those in the United States, 62 percent in Britain, 53 percent in Spain, 49 percent in Ireland and 42 percent in France.

A higher percentage of Irish people than those of any other nationality surveyed said they were very happy when asked to characterize their mood "taking all things together."

Thirty-nine percent of the Irish said they were very happy, with the British next at 38 percent and Americans third at 32 percent.

Next came the Spanish, the French and the Japanese. And at the bottom — with only 10 percent "very happy" — were the West Germans and the Italians.

The survey also reported that: — When people were asked how proud they were of their nationality, 80 percent of the Americans said they were very proud to be Americans. Only 30 percent of the Japanese, 21 percent of the West Germans, 33 percent of the French, 55 percent of the British and 41 percent of the Italians expressed high national pride.

"In many European countries, pride in nationality is regarded as a rather outdated concept," the center commented.

— 95 percent of Americans and Irish assert a belief in God. Only 39 percent of the Japanese, 62 percent of the French, and 76 percent of the British do.

— 71 percent of Americans believe in life after death. Among Europeans as a whole, 43 percent believe in the hereafter while in Japan only 31 percent do.

— Americans rank first, the British next and the Irish third in believing that the Ten Commandments apply fully to themselves.

The Rev. Cassian Yuhaus, president of the center, said the research would help social thinkers seek ways to bridge a gap, which he said is growing and is "fraught with danger," between "those who are not able to make it" and "those who get richer every year."

Stokowski: Tradition form of laziness

By ANDRE KOSTELANETZ
Special from Reader's Digest

As the throng of elegantly dressed men and women gathered for the New York Metropolitan Opera's revival of Puccini's "Turandot," excitement filled the air. That night in February 1961, the featured performers were Birgit Nilsson, Franco Corelli and Anna Moffo. And, for the first time, my friend Leopold Stokowski was to conduct this great opera company.

The house lights dimmed and Stokowski appeared — on crutches after breaking a hip while teaching his young sons to drop-kick a football. When the audience saw him, they gave him a standing ovation. The memory of the crutches vanished as Stokowski, now sitting on a stool, reached his arms out vigorously, caressingly, urgently, drawing from the orchestra the glorious sounds of the opera. At 78, he had all the energy and zest of a young man.

Throughout his life, Stokowski was brilliant and unpredictable. Tall and strikingly handsome in his youth, he was known as "the glamour boy of the baton" until one day, during a particularly vigorous movement, his baton broke. From then on, he used his hands, and those graceful expressive "instruments" soon became his trademark, along with his china-blue eyes and golden hair.

In 1912, at age 30, he took over the then mediocre Philadelphia Orchestra and within 10 years made it one of the great orchestras of all time. Much has been written in analytical terms about his ability to build orchestral groups with a specific lush sound, full of fire and drive. But, frankly, I feel there has been too much analysis. One can explain the greatness of Stokowski in a single word: genius.

For 12 years, Leopold and I lived in the same apartment building. Once we were discussing the art of composition and he said, "The greatest art of all is living itself." Certainly, his life was proof of that philosophy.

At a time when audiences expected only the classic sounds of Bach, Mozart, Beethoven and other masters, Stokowski insisted on new compositions by contemporary composers. "Tradition," he said, "is a form of laziness." Such pioneering made him one of the most controversial and exciting figures in the musical world.

Leopold's audiences weren't always appreciative of his efforts. In 1919, he introduced Philadelphians to Scriabin's "Poem of Ecstasy," and many in the audience rose and walked out. In 1922, he gave the American premiere of Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring." Leopold, who early developed the practice of talking directly with the audience before a performance, said, "Frankly, I can't imagine you liking this on first hearing." He was right.

Through the years, Leopold at various times conducted the NBC Symphony, the Hollywood Bowl Symphony, the New York Philharmonic, the New York City Center Orchestra and the Houston Symphony. It is hard to believe that he conducted music — gloriously — for more than 60 years, in over 7000 concerts.

His long musical trail began in London in 1882, where he was born to a Polish father and Irish mother, neither of whom were professional musicians. A child prodigy, Stokowski played the violin, piano and organ. His first major job was as church organist and, in 1906, he was invited to serve as organist and choir director at New York's St. Bartholomew's Church. Four years later, at 27, he became music director of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, moving on to Philadelphia in 1912.

Stokowski was the first great conductor to plunge into the movies. His most famous was Walt Disney's "Fantasia," in which he shook hands with Mickey Mouse — and brought some of the greatest classical music to millions.

Whenever people talk about Leopold Stokowski, they invariably bring up his ego, his penchant for the spotlight. Everything he did was news, including marriage. His first wife, Olga Samaroff, was an accomplished pianist; his second was heiress Evangeline Brewster Johnson. In 1945, when he was 63, he was wed for the third time to 21-year-old Gloria Vanderbilt. Between marriages, he was romantically linked to many famous women, including Greta Garbo.

For all the talk about Stokowski's showmanship and ego, though, he was the most considerate of men. When auditioning young players for a position, for instance, he always understood that the player might be nervous. Many times he would interrupt, give some advice and then allow the player to start again.

In all our conversations, Leopold avoided talking of the past. Often he would say to me, "Don't ask about what was, but what is to come."

It was typical of my friend that when he died of a heart attack in Sept. 1977 at 95, he was still making plans for the future. Shortly before, he had signed a contract with Columbia Records to make four records a year until 1982 — when he would have been exactly 100 years old.

Policy to disassociate Reagan from bad news

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the first seven weeks of the crisis over the Falkland Islands, President Reagan and his aides have successfully adhered to a White House policy of keeping the announcement of bad news as far away from the president as possible.

In recent years, it has become something of a truism at the State Department that if a given international development reflects well on the occupant of the White House, then White House aides, or perhaps even the president, will make the public announcement about it. Bad news, however, is relegated to the State Department.

And so it is with the Falkland Islands.

From all public appearances, the president's involvement in the crisis has been limited.

While high-level White House aides say the president is not entirely divorced from the issue, they are quick to point out that the diplomatic action is taking place elsewhere, primarily at the United Nations.

One senior official, requesting that he not be further identified, observed that "it is a very good political rule" to avoid associating the president with bad news whenever possible.

Is that the case with the Falklands these days? "I suppose you could say that," he said.

The flip side is the likely behavior at the White House if everything fell into place in the diplomatic efforts and the crisis subsided. There was no denial that the White House role — if there was any — might be brought more into the open in that case.

Soon after Argentine troops seized the islands, ruled by the British for a century and a half, there was a flurry of activity on the part of the Reagan administration.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. undertook his first diplomatic shuttle missions, flying a triangular route between London, Buenos Aires and Washington. But even as he did that, Reagan's involvement appeared to have been kept at a minimum. The president was said to have spoken several times by telephone with the secretary and to have been kept up to date on Haig's discussions.

Then, as the prospects for success dimmed, Haig's public role also slackened.

As increased military action appeared greater, Haig decided to keep long-standing appointments in Turkey, Greece and Luxembourg. Like Reagan, he has managed to put some distance between himself and the crisis involving two U.S. allies.

The president spoke on the telephone with Leopoldo Galtieri, the Argentine president, and with Margaret Thatcher, the British prime minister. On occasion, he was briefed by Haig or by the White House national security adviser, William P. Clark.

Reagan told the Soviets to "butt out" of the conflict. In an off-the-cuff comment to reporters at the end of a news conference a week ago, he said he saw some prospects for a breakthrough, but he said little else.

With those exceptions, his public comments have been kept to a minimum, and his spokesmen made every attempt to also follow that course.

Day in and day out, Larry Speakes, the deputy White House press secretary, has been asked about the crisis, the U.S. role in it, and the prospects for war or peace.

Gasoline tax increase dead

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials say a proposal for a 5-cent-per-gallon increase in the gasoline tax is dead until at least next fall.

President Reagan rejected the measure after Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis outlined the proposal at a White House meeting of the cabinet council on economic affairs.

Stokowski realized importance of radio

Special from Reader's Digest

Stokowski was the first to appreciate fully how broadcasting could increase the audience for serious music. In 1929, the Philadelphia Orchestra, with Stokowski conducting, became the first classical orchestra ever to be heard on commercial radio. He worked with experts at the Bell Laboratories and soon became an expert himself on radio and phonographic recordings as well as hall acoustics.

I remember when Philharmonic Hall (now Avery Fisher Hall) in New York had just been built and many important conductors were asked to try it out. Leopold chose Beethoven's "Eroica" for his test.

He conducted the opening chords, looked up and said, "They asked me too late." He then walked out, knowing the hall would have to be rebuilt. In 1976, it was, at a cost of $67 million, and now has excellent acoustics.

Bunkhouses offer change from debt-laden life

HARVEY, La. (AP) — Don Murphy's debt to the company grows a little with each cigarette he smokes, each beer he drinks, each sandwich he eats. He knows he'll pay it back in sweat but says things could be worse.

"It's better than sleeping out in the street and robbing people," said Murphy, 24, of Boston. He shrugged as he sat in the restaurant-bar that gives him ample meals of soft-shell crabs and red beans — and keeps the chits for his bosses to claim against his pay.

He's among the droves of jobless, sometimes rootless men, attracted from points north to Louisiana by stories of ready work and good pay.

He's among the many who end up in the labor pool bunkhouses that flourished with the oil boom. They're referred there by word of mouth, charity groups and even state employment offices.

A LEGAL VERSION of the "company store" system, bunkhouses are unregulated in Louisiana where officials place them in the same category as boarding houses. No license is needed.

The trade-off is simple but loosely defined. The men usually arrive broke, and are given the shelter, food, hardhats and steel-toed workboots they need right away — each at a charge deducted from the paycheck they get later.

Some companies, including B & H Applicators and Labor Services Inc. here, will even advance their workers money for a little beer, cigarettes, toothpaste and shampoo.

The busiest and most frugal worker can clear $100 or $200 a week after deductions when work is plentiful.

But deductions can sometimes wipe out every penny when work is scarce. Right now it is.

"This is a sad situation," said Don Schnepf, manager of B & H. Its office consists of two desks behind a corner partition in Bob and Louis' Restaurant in this New Orleans suburb.

"We've got guys begging us to give them 60 hours a week. We're lucky if we can get them 30," said Schnepf, who calls it a casual labor business.

Most of the jobs contracted by the bunkhouses are linked to oil and gas drilling. Usually it's dirty and backbreaking work — chipping stubborn paint from a tanker in the nearby Mississippi River or loading thick drill pipe onto a grimy barge.

SCHNEPP SAID HE noted in mid-April a sudden and severe cutback in oil-related business. He pointed only yards away to the Harvey Canal, where scores of barges sat idle along the pipeyards and loading docks.

"Everything stopped dead, practically overnight," he said. "We did $3,900 worth of labor last week. We need $10,000 just to break even."

Schnepf says he goes out and solicits work for the men he takes on as full-time employees. Now the company is turning would-be workers away, leaving about half the 50 bunkhouse beds empty.

"We try to rotate it so that in these hard, hard times everybody gets a few days a week so they can make their expenses and have a few bucks in their pockets," he said.

No one keeps track of how many bunkhouses there are in Louisiana, or how many people they employ. State officials say that drilling boom towns such as Morgan City, Houma, Venice and Harvey probably each have about a half-dozen.

Some bunkhouses attract the shiftless or violent. Deep into the Oil Patch that spreads west from here to Texas, bunkhouse killings occur sporadically.

They are often criticized as havens for men running from the law. Jailhouse author Jack Henry Abbott was captured at a Morgan City bunkhouse after he stabbed a waiter to death in New York City.

Some labor pool operators are accused of bilking the workers, charging high fees for rent, food and workclothes to create a condition of permanent debt.

"I've even seen them deduct 35 cents a day for a knife, fork and spoon," said Michael Moreau of the Travelers Aid Society in New Orleans.

Yet Moreau said his group refers many men to the bunkhouses.

"From our point of view, they're providing a service," he said. "If it wasn't for these bunkhouses, some of these people would be sleeping in the streets."

THE WORKERS HERE said B & H was one of the better companies, charging $25 a week for a bed, $2.95 for an ample supper, and not misleading its workers about what they were getting into.

Favorite author's 'court' is Californian's model

Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Erle Stanley Gardner's Court of Last Resort, resurrected by a former prisoner, accountant Darrell Bross, is busy "trying" cases.

What Perry Mason, Gardner's fictional defense attorney, did for fictional clients, Gardner did for real prisoners with his court, formed in 1946 to free wrongly convicted men.

Bross says his own case resembles that of Bill Keys, a Gardner client. Keys, who swore he shot a former deputy sheriff in self defense during a 1943 shootout, was one of 33 prisoners Gardner's court freed during its six-year life span.

Bross' "court," located in his home here, is a private, non-profit corporation that has taken about 100 of the 400 cases convicts have brought to it.

BROSS REVIVED THE court in 1976 when a member of MENSA, the international society for intellectuals, asked him to investigate her husband's death. The investigation led him to the name of the killer, Bross said, but not to the legal proof required for a police arrest. The case still resides in police department unsolved homicide files, he said.

Though Bross' Court of Last Resort has been in existence as long as Gardner's court was, he has not yet won freedom for a single prisoner.

Gardner spent about $100,000 for every prisoner he freed, Bross says, and was helped by his clout as a nationally recognized lawyer-turned-mystery writer. Bross says he can't match Gardner's prestige or financial backing.

Only prisoners facing life or death sentences and claiming total innocence are eligible for a Last Resort investigation, Bross said. Ninety-seven percent of those who ask for help are "guilty as sin," said Bross, whose office is adorned with such framed documents as his dishonorable discharge from the Navy and his mail-order ministry certificate.

Bross is well aware of the frustration inmates face when they try to maintain their innocence after conviction. He lived through the same situation more than 15 years ago, he said, when he tried to prove he shot a 74-year-old neighbor in self-defense.

Bross was convicted of voluntary manslaughter for the death of a man with whom he had had a longstanding dispute over rights to a road they both used. He spent 20 months in prison before his conviction was reversed in 1965.

Bross' case is remarkably similar to his favorite Gardner case — that of "Desert Bill" Keys. Keys also complained futilely to local authorities about his neighbor. In one last argument over rights to a road both men used, Keys shot and killed his neighbor.

GARDNER EVENTUALLY PERSUADED the California Adult Authority to take a second look at the case. Keys got a full pardon in 1956 when it was ruled he had acted in self-defense.

Bross currently has six active cases of prisoners he believes are innocent. One prisoner serving time in Minnesota's Stillwater State Prison was convicted of the sex-related slaying of a 13-year-old girl. During his trial, the prosecution rewarded people who brought in evidence against him.

Bross and his volunteer investigators are convinced that the slain girl's earnings was planted in the man's truck, but have been unable to provide proof.

Not all his clients are satisfied that Bross and his court are doing all they can to help.

CHESTER MALIN, SERVING time in Ohio for killing his wife by throwing her out of a car in 1976, has asked for the court's help. He claims his wife died in a car accident and he was mistakenly blamed.

"After 18 months, I realized he wasn't going anywhere and I couldn't wait. I'm trying to get out of prison the best way I know how," said Malin, in a telephone interview from prison.

"I understand his feelings," Bross said. "The inmates feel, 'What the hell is this guy doing? Sitting on my transcripts?'"

Lawrence Chartier, serving time in California for rape and kidnapping, has been a client since 1978. "Darrell and his investigators have damn near proved I'm innocent. But quite a few people still don't believe it," said Chartier.

Though he hasn't proved a single man's innocence, Bross says he will not abandon the Court of Last Resort. "It's hokey, but I get a tremendous kick out of finding out what the truth was."

Device eases eye trouble detection

WASHINGTON (AP) — If impaired vision prevents a person from seeing an eye test chart, then the best way to predict the effects of cataract surgery is to put the chart into the eye, researchers said Tuesday.

Scientists at Johns Hopkins University say they have invented a simple instrument to project an eye chart through small holes in an obstructing cataract so that patients can see it on the retina in the back of the eye.

This can tell doctors and patients if there is damage or disease within the eye that will prevent recovery of good vision, and let them know what to expect after surgery.

And if the results are too bad, they may choose to skip the trauma and expense of surgery altogether, they added.

"We have developed a means to predict how well a patient will be able to see after cataract surgery," Dr. David L. Guyton told a writers' seminar sponsored by Research To Prevent Blindness, a voluntary eye research foundation.

"Measuring the potential visual acuity of the retina before cataract surgery, using a visual acuity chart, has never been possible before," Guyton said.

For decades, doctors have successfully removed blinding cataracts from eyes in hopes of restoring vision. But they could not tell if there were other underlying problems that would frustrate this effort.

Cataracts are a condition in which the transparent lens in the eye, which normally focuses light onto the retina, becomes cloudy and rigid. The problem can stem from disease, injury or old age.

When the lens becomes completely opaque and little light can get through, doctors surgically remove it. The lens is either replaced with an artificial one or the patients are required to wear special corrective glasses or contact lenses.

An estimated 1.7 million Americans have vision obstructed by cataracts and 450,000 cataract operations are performed each year.

"It is not uncommon for patients with cataracts to have other eye disease present as well, especially retinal disease," Guyton said. "It may be difficult for the ophthalmologist to judge, especially with early cataracts, just how much the cataract is interfering with vision."

To answer this question, Guyton and his colleagues, including Dr. John Minkowski, hit upon the idea for their Potential Acuity Meter. The device is essentially a pinpoint light source, a transparent 10-line eye chart similar to the ones seen in doctors' offices and a special lens for focusing the light.

The beam projecting the chart is focused to a diameter smaller than an ordinary straight pin and doctors aided by a microscope probe the cataract for tiny, clear windows in it. Once through a window, the light projects the chart on the back of the eye and the patient can distinguish the different lines of symbols, Guyton said.

The researchers tested more than 500 eyes with the device last year, and cataract surgery was performed on 66 of them. Of the 47 eyes that had 20-200 vision before surgery, which is above the level of being legally blind, only three failed to obtain the vision predicted by the device, Guyton said.

With the other 19 eyes, which had denser cataracts and worse pre-operative vision, the results were less reliable but still helpful, he said.

"Clinical testing thus showed that the Potential Acuity Meter provides a useful prediction of the post-operative visual acuity in cataract patients with 20-200 vision or better," Guyton said.

Nancy's 'borrowed' jewels will be returned after trip

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — When Nancy Reagan goes to Europe in June, she will take along the borrowed Harry Winston diamonds she has had for 16 months and which are at the center of a ruling by the White House counsel that advised against setting up a permanent collection of state jewels.

The first lady's press secretary, Sheila Tate, said Monday the earrings and a companion necklace, estimated to be worth several hundred thousand dollars and kept by Mrs. Reagan since the inaugural balls in January 1981, will be returned to the prestigious New York jewelry firm, headed by Ronald Winston, after the Reagans get back from their 10-day trip.

"Originally, it was the desire of Mr. Winston that the necklace and earrings be a gift to the White House as part of a permanent collection for use by all first ladies," Ms. Tate said in a statement issued in New York City, where the first lady traveled to attend Monday night's premiere of the movie "Annie."

"Unfortunately," the statement continued, "White House counsel advised against this. The two pieces of jewelry now on loan will be returned after the state visit to Great Britain as per agreement with Mr. Winston."

Mrs. Reagan's continued use of the jewels was disclosed over the weekend in President Reagan's 1981 financial disclosure report, in which more than $31,000 worth of gifts were listed. The Winston jewels, along with 17 designer outfits (which industry sources estimate to be worth anywhere from $36,500 to $117,750) and "assorted" Bulgari jewels were not designated as gifts but as "Clothing and Accessories Made Available for Use and Thereafter Returned to Owners-Designers or Donated by Owners-Designers to Museums."

Actress Sophia Loren returns to Rome's airport Wednesday and is surrounded by relatives and police before being carried away to serve a 30-day jail sentence for tax evasion in Italy in 1963.

Cell's a bit different, but she'll eat same food

CASERTA, Italy (AP) — Sophia Loren spent her first night behind bars in a private, pink-walled cell with a private bathroom and a black-and-white TV set. But her guards said she woke up today to the same breakfast of coffee, milk and bread served the inmates in the other nine cells.

The 47-year-old film star returned to her native Italy Wednesday to begin serving a 30-day sentence for tax evasion handed down in July 1980. She had said last September that she would return and serve her sentence as soon as she fulfilled her "work obligations."

Miss Loren left Geneva, Switzerland, one of her residences, and entered Italy for the first time in two years. She was met by police at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport as soon as she stepped off the plane.

She said she was innocent of the charge that she failed to file a tax return in 1963. The problem, she said, was caused by her tax specialist, now dead. But she said she decided to return home "to see my mother, my country and my roots."

After nearly being knocked down by the crowd of photographers and reporters at the airport, Miss Loren and her sister, Maria Scicolone, were ushered into an unmarked police car and driven to the three-story women's prison at Caserta, 20 miles north of Naples.

The jail is an 18th century convent with flowers on the balconies and a staff of six nuns and eight male guards.

"She was brought here because this is a tranquil place and nothing will happen to her here," said Vincenzo Scolastico, a local judge.

Miss Loren, wearing a green silk dress and tinted glasses and carrying a bouquet of flowers, was serene as police rushed her through a crowd of cheering fans and journalists outside the prison.

The women inmates cheered and shouted "Sophia! Sophia!" as she entered the jail's only private cell, a room 15 feet square with an unbarred window looking into a barren enclosed courtyard. Other inmates, convicted of crimes ranging from prostitution to homicide, are housed two and three to a cell.

Training accident does Belgian prince no harm

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Prince Philippe of Belgium, the nephew of King Baudouin and second in line to the throne, escaped unhurt when an air force training jet had an accident on landing, the Defense Ministry says.

The ministry said his twin-seat Alpha-Jet broke part of its landing gear as it landed Wednesday on the military airport of Brustem in eastern Belgium. The damages were not detailed.

The 22-year-old prince, who is serving part of his conscription period in the Air Force, escaped uninjured, as did his instructor.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The director of the Jewish Defense League has apologized to actress Jane Fonda for suggesting she supported the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The apology Wednesday by Irv Rubin came after Miss Fonda joined Moshe Arens, Israel's ambassador to the United States, for a Jewish Federation breakfast.

"Apparently not enough homework was done on my part," Rubin said. "Apparently she isn't pro-PLO. As far as we're concerned, I have no quarrel with Jane Fonda. I will send her a letter of apology."

Miss Fonda said she appreciated the apology, adding it was "time to put this matter behind us and move forward."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Broadcaster Edwin Newman of NBC, known for his efforts to spur proper use of language, has been named winner of the 1982 Lowell Thomas Award for electronic journalism.

In making the announcement Wednesday, the International Platform Association said Newman has "a considerable reputation as a watchdog of English usage."

The organization, founded as the American Lyceum Association in 1831 by Daniel Webster and Josiah Holbrook, promotes public speaking.

Newman will receive the award Aug. 5 at the group's 151st annual convention in Washington from Lowell Thomas' widow, Marianna Thomas. Thomas, a pioneering broadcast journalist, died in August 1981 at the age of 89.

NEW YORK (AP) — Alfred A. Knopf, who in 1915 founded the publishing company that bears his name, has been honored for service to the arts by the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters.

Knopf, 89, was cited Wednesday for having "brought to American readers many of the most important and innovative works in contemporary foreign literature, and a consistently high quality of American works."

Other recipients of the Award for Distinguished Service to the Arts have included choreographer George Balanchine and former Sen. J. William Fulbright of Arkansas.

Japanese IQ edge increasing

NEW YORK (AP) — The Japanese score higher on standardized intelligence tests than any other nationality, including Americans, and the edge has increased steadily since the end of World War II, says a study published in this week's Nature magazine.

The article in the May 20 issue says the mean Japanese IQ is 111, compared with 100 in the United States.

Reagan aiming at Freedom of Information Act

Hearst Feature Service

Washington — While White House correspondents continue to grumble about such things as roping off the press corps to keep them away from the president, the Reagan administration has launched a quiet, almost unnoticeable assault on the public's right to know.

President Reagan signed the executive order himself on April 2, 1982 and even though the new regulations probably will affect thousands of historians, journalists and authors, little has appeared in the nation's newspapers about the new restrictions governing de-classification of information.

FOR EXAMPLE, MADELINE Kalb's new history of America's involvement in the Congolese civil war, "The Congo Cables," published this month by MacMillan and a main selection of the History Book Club, probably would never have seen the light of day. Indeed, the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press estimates that at least 75 books, including the recent best-seller "Warriors at Suez" and countless books about the assassination of John Kennedy, would never have been written without the help of the Freedom of Information Act.

The new executive order is aimed squarely at the act. It states: "Information may be classified or reclassified after an agency has received a request for it under the Freedom of Information Act or the Privacy Act of 1974 or the mandatory review procedures of this order."

The only proviso is that "such classification meets the requirements of this order and is accomplished personally on a document-by-document basis by the agency head, the deputy agency head, the senior agency official or an official with original top secret classification authority."

In other words, if you request access to a previously declassified document, your telephone call is all that an official needs to re-classify the embassy cable or document in question. "It's this simple," a National Archives official said, "if they don't feel like giving it to you, they won't."

"Almost all of my stuff was classified," Mrs. Kalb said in an interview. "It was a long, laborious process to get them declassified." She explained that a review board of former foreign service officers has been set up to review each request on a case-by-case basis.

"OBVIOUSLY THIS (NEW order) would affect the people reviewing them. How? If the president is leaning toward more secrecy, they would decide on an individual basis in a much more restrictive way," she said. As far as "The Congo Cables" is concerned, "it would make it practically impossible."

It's not only the Freedom of Information Act that is under assault. The new executive order completely removes any requirement for a document to be de-classified within a stipulated period of time. That effectively obliterates what Jimmy Carter signed into law on June 28, 1978.

He decreed that the Federal Government "shall set a date or event for automatic declassification no more than six years later" or in exceptional cases, 10 years after a document is classified. Perhaps equally important, Executive Order 12065, signed by Carter on June 28, 1978, instructed all federal officials that "this authority shall be used sparingly."

The Reagan order pulls no punches in sweeping away any time limit for classifying information. It states: "Information shall be classified as long as required by national security considerations" and when it is determined that those considerations no longer are valid, "a date shall be set up" for review. In other words, a cable could virtually be classified forever.

But perhaps the most far-reaching of all the changes is the right the government will have after August 1 to take something that has already been declassified and is in the public domain and re-classify it "top secret" or "confidential" if the nation's security conceivably could be compromised.

The provision of the new order states: "The President or an agency head or official designated" by them "may reclassify information previously declassified and disclosed if:

(1) It is determined in writing that the information requires protection in the interests of national security; and (2) the information may reasonably be recovered. These reclassification actions shall be reported promptly to the director of the Information Security Oversight Office."

THE STATE DEPARTMENT, wasting little time in invoking this provision even though the executive order doesn't take effect for another six weeks, has contracted for Allan Thompson, director of the National Archives Declassification Division, to go after numerous 1950s Cold War documents.

The cost to the American taxpayer? $168,000.

Elks install new ruler

Clem H. Roberts was installed recently as exalted ruler when the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks (B.P.O.E.) Lodge No. 1826 met recently in its new headquarters, 2501 W. Illinois Ave.

Roberts is a second generation exalted ruler. He is the son of the late Joseph J. Roberts of Tyler.

Other officers installed included Alan Wickham, leading knight; Thomas Nelson, lecturing knight; R.G. "Hawk" Davidson, loyal knight; Dr. B.J. Youngblood, esquire; W.C. "Bill" Kimball, secretary; Don Hibbitts, treasurer; and Arthur L. "Ike" McCarroll, chaplain.

Trustees elected were James H. Turner, one year; Richard Morris, two years; George Horst, three years; Robert "Bob" Griffin, four years; and Eugene Penn, five years.

All officers and trustees were installed by the Big Spring Elks Lodge.

Department says disability reviews work

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Social Security Administration says a check of its controversial disability reviews found the decisions to force some people off the rolls have been 97.5 percent accurate.

But the agency said Monday that half of those who lose benefits on review are appealing their cases to administrative law judges and two-thirds are winning reinstatement.

The agency, citing a separate study, on Monday also doubled to $4 billion its estimate of how much the system is wasting by paying benefits to people well enough to work.

Agency analysts said the bulk of the mistakes were in cases involving musculoskeletal, cardiovascular or mental disorders. They recommended that the reviews continue to be targeted on people with these problems.

The agency said that it found errors in 4.9 percent of 8,597 disability review cases it checked from last October to March, but the mistakes affected the outcome in only 2.5 percent of the cases.

The agency based its new estimate of overpayments on a national pilot study of disability cases from July to September of 1980.

The pilot study found, "Over 51 percent of the excess payments occurred because beneficiaries did not report improvement in their conditions or a return to work."

Of the $3.7 billion paid to the 2.8 million disabled workers during that quarter, "a little over $1 billion was determined by quality review procedures to have been paid in error," an agency study said. "This equates to a payment discrepancy rate of 27.8 percent."

The Reagan administration last year accelerated a congressionally ordered review of all disability cases. Groups representing the handicapped and some lawmakers have charged that thousands of people with severe mental or physical disabilities have been stripped of their benefits.

In the first 13 months since the drive began in March 1981, some 436,308 cases were reviewed and 174,221 people taken off the rolls, or about 40 percent.

The reviews are conducted by state disability examiners who review paperwork without seeing the beneficiary face-to-face. In some cases, the examiners order new examinations by doctors.

Beverly A. Bedwell, the agency's associate commissioner for assessment, said that two-thirds of those cut off by the state examiners will remain off the rolls. That includes the half who do not appeal the decision and about 17 percent who lose their appeals.

Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security, is seeking to alter some review procedures and allow people to keep benefits during appeal. The Reagan administration recently said it favors some modifications to ensure the process is fair.

The pilot study said that among disability beneficiaries in their 40s, more than 41 percent were able-bodied.

It said those awarded benefits from 1974 to 1977 also should be targeted for review because of a 34 percent error rate.

California county talks splitting

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — The foothills and mountains of eastern Fresno County are rural, rugged and — in some people's minds — ripe for revolution.

Voters will decide June 8 if California will have a 59th county in the Sierra hill country — a county that would be larger than the state of Delaware. It has been dubbed Ponderosa County after a defunct judicial district.

Proponents, who formed the Mountain Alliance, are battling high historical odds in their quest for limited sovereignty. Imperial was the last California county to form when it broke from San Diego County in 1907.

Another mountain group, called Citizens for Unity, is just as intent on seeing that a new county is not created.

With fierce pride and independence, both sides in the Ponderosa County dispute argue about land use, public services and finances in their attempts to sway voters.

To pass, the ballot measure must receive a majority vote on each side of the proposed boundary, a major central California irrigation canal. It would split more than 12,000 people and 45 percent of the land from Fresno County, which has a total population of 519,000 in the heart of the San Joaquin Valley.

About 85 percent of the Ponderosa territory is public land, mostly rough terrain in Sierra National Forest and Kings Canyon National Park. This is largely inaccessible, except to hikers and pack teams.

Another 9 percent is bound by state farmland conservation contracts, leaving 6 percent as the core of small, unincorporated communities.

The region relies on Pacific Gas & Electric hydroelectric plants for about half of its tax base, and it looks to the county seat in Fresno for its services.

Mountain Alliance leader Paul Bartlett, general manager of a Fresno television station, paints the disension as a move for home rule among people waging a "peaceful but determined revolution."

But Citizens for Unity spokeswoman Betty Bolinger depicts proponents of the new county as those who are most concerned with easing controls on development.

"Many of them have it in their minds that property owners should be able to do with their property what they wish," she said. "Citizens for Unity thinks that would be disaster. We believe strong controls are needed."

"They say we're all land developers, and we're going to hack up the mountains," Bartlett says. "That's foolishness."

"The concern is that we'll urbanize the mountains. I think Fresno County would be more likely to do that. The general push of our people has been random, rural development rather than urban subdivisions."

An independent commission appointed by Gov. Jerry Brown to study the formation concluded that the new county would be economically viable and provide services comparable to other small rural counties. But the report warned that revenues had to keep pace with rapid growth or services would become overloaded.

Bartlett said he was "somewhat loose with the language" on the pro-county ballot argument, which said that the commission found residents could expect "comparable or better services than now received."

Mrs. Bolinger said that the commission compared Ponderosa's potential services to other "cow counties" and not to a county with a metropolitan base, such as Fresno's.

"We believe it will not benefit anyone and will only be harmful to both areas," she said. "They will get fewer services for their tax dollars. All it's going to do is form another government."

But Bartlett argued that Fresno County already is unmanageable because of its size.

"Fresno County is bigger than Connecticut," he said. "You can't have local government on (a county) the size of Connecticut."

WELCOME, AMERICAN, TO OUR LONDON SKIES.

Through two World Wars and over 50 years of commercial aviation, we have flown side-by-side with America's pilots over London and throughout the world.

Americans tell us they feel a special kinship between our two countries when they visit Great Britain. We have experienced that same feeling from Texans during the more than four years that we've flown non-stop from Texas to London.

It is with sincerity, then, that we welcome American Airlines to our London skies. We extend the hand of friendship to American, as we did to Braniff, as a direct competitor.

Competition is what made us Europe's largest independent airline. It stimulates our people to provide the very best personal service, because we never forget you have a choice when it comes to air travel to London and beyond to over 40 other world-wide destinations, such as Paris, Amsterdam, Hong Kong and Africa.

This week, we're doubling our non-stop service, Dallas/Ft. Worth to London, to six times weekly. If you have a Braniff ticket to London with a British Caledonian reservation (made prior to May 13), we'll honor that ticket as always. If you have a Braniff ticket and Braniff reservation, we'll fly you from DFW to London as a standby passenger. Also, we fly non-stop daily from Houston to London, giving you a choice of 13 weekly non-stops from Texas to London—more than any other airline—and all featuring our famous Skylounge® Service.

If you're planning a business trip or a family vacation to London or beyond, we invite you to experience the wide-bodied comfort and unique British hospitality and service we're known for on five continents. Call your travel agent or British Caledonian Airways for details.

Corporate profits suffer second-largest drop

By DAVID TREADWELL
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Corporate profits suffered their second-largest drop in the first quarter of 1982 as the economy continued to stagger under the impact of the recession, the Commerce Department reported Wednesday.

During the quarter ended March 31, before-tax profits fell from an annual rate of $212.8 billion to a rate of $169.8 billion, while after-tax profits declined from a rate of $144 billion to $118.8 billion, the report said.

The dollar amounts of those decreases — $43 billion and $25.2 billion, respectively — were exceeded only in the second quarter of 1980 during a short but severe recession when the before-tax profits rate plunged by $59.2 billion and the after-tax profits rate dropped by $36.4 billion.

The first-quarter percentage drop in corporate profits was 20.2 percent before taxes and 17.5 percent after taxes, the largest quarterly percentage declines since the second quarter of 1980 and the second largest declines since the last quarter of 1983.

Along with the latest corporate profit figures, the Commerce Department also released its update of the gross national product for the first quarter of 1982. That report showed that the GNP, the broadest measure of the nation's economic activity, fell by an inflation-adjusted 4.3 percent from January through March instead of the originally estimated 3.9 percent.

That compared with a decline of 4.5 percent — also computed on an annual rate — in the previous quarter.

Most of the revision in the first-quarter GNP was attributable to a new estimate that personal spending was $2.4 billion lower than originally calculated, department analysts said.

Economists say an average annual increase of 4 percent in the GNP is needed to maintain the economy at levels of prosperity sufficient to absorb new job seekers.

In releasing the new corporate profit figures, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige acknowledged in a statement that "the recession has had a strong effect on corporate earnings."

Before-tax profits were down 27.5 percent from the third quarter and 33.9 percent from the first quarter of last year, he said. During the first quarter of this year, he said, "the cost-price squeeze on corporations intensified...as increases in costs of production outstripped the rise in prices."

"However, the dramatic drop in inflation is laying the groundwork for a sustainable business expansion, which should be accompanied by a strong rebound in corporate profits," he said.

Baldrige said that savings and loan associations, airlines, oil refiners, auto makers and steel producers suffered the severest declines in first-quarter profits.

Profits of commercial banks and utilities rose moderately, he said.

John M. Albertine, president of the American Business Conference, a coalition of 100 high-growth companies, said the decline in corporate profit was not unexpected although the magnitude of the dropoff was "a little surprising and troublesome."

Once in a blue moon.

It's not often a car like the 1982 Honda Prelude Sport Coupe comes along.

A sleek, responsive automobile designed for uncomplicated sportive handling and fuel-efficient fun:

Equipped with front-wheel drive, 4-wheel independent suspension, a 5-speed transmission and rack and pinion steering.

And a car to be enjoyed for many moons. Both because of the attention to quality engineering that goes into all our cars, and the Prelude's standard power-operated moonroof.

The moon and stars come standard as well.

If today's not your day to buy a car, that's OK!

It probably comes as no surprise to you, but we really don't sell a car to every single person who visits our dealership. We don't expect to. We try, though, in every case, to be very helpful. We'll appraise your present car for you, show you what cars we have available for immediate delivery, explain the details of ordering a specific car from the factory, take you on a tour of our parts and service departments, go for a test drive if you like, and, of course, we'll present you with a very competitive and attractive cost proposal. Here are some examples:

1980 CHEVROLET CHEVETTE A super gas saver at a super price! Stock no. 6028 has a roof carrier, 4 speed transmission, AM radio, rear window defogger, and even more on this 4 door sedan. Stock no. 6160. $4444	1977 PONTIAC LEMANS Family size 4 door hardtop. Stock no. 508A is equipped with factory air conditioning, cruise control, durable vinyl interior, power steering and power brakes. $3030

But if today's not the day, or this isn't the week, or the month, or even the year to buy...that's OK!

We just want to leave you with the impression that when it is time to buy a car...well, then we'd like to have that chance to serve you.

Rained out Cubs begin 10-day homestand Friday

Midland's Cubs were rained out of their final two games at Little Rock when heavy rains washed away Tuesday's single game and Wednesday's doubleheader. The Cubs and Travelers will make up the lost games as parts of twinbills during the homestand which begins Friday against Tulsa's Drillers and runs for 10 days. Today is a travel day for Texas League teams.

The Bruins' first invasion of the Texas League East wasn't bad. Midland wound up with a respectable 4-4 record, thanks to Bruce Chaney's one-out, three-two pinch-hit grand slam homer in the ninth inning of Tuesday's come-from-behind 5-2 win over Arkansas.

After the current homestand, Midland will have finished its season's series with Tulsa, a Texas Rangers farm club, and Arkansas, an affiliate of the St. Louis Cardinals.

SAN ANTONIO, meanwhile, swept the doubleheader, but the fight was a draw as both teams lost a player via ejection after a bench-clearing brawl in the first game of their Texas League baseball doubleheader with the Shreveport Captains.

Scotty Madison's two-out RBI single in the bottom of the 12th inning gave the Dodgers a 3-2 victory over the Captains in the second game of their doubleheader Wednesday night.

San Antonio took an easy 7-0 victory in the first game that was delayed about seven minutes because of the brawl.

The fight took place after a player ran into another on a close play at home plate. No one was injured in the pushing, shoving and slugging that followed, but the umpires ejected Mark Sheehy of San Antonio and Doug Wabeke of Shreveport.

IN OTHER Texas League action, El Paso beat Tulsa, 6-3, and Amarillo walloped Jackson, 11-2.

San Antonio clubbed out 15 hits in the 3-2 victory over Shreveport, but four errors by the Dodgers helped keep the game close.

Rusty McDonald was the winning pitcher. The loser was Don Jamerson.

Paul Voltz limited the Captains to only four hits in the first game to pick up the 7-0 victory for San Antonio.

Mike Brecht was the losing Shreveport hurler.

PITCHER Andy Beene had a perfect game for four and two-thirds innings and a no-hitter for five and two-thirds innings as the El Paso Diablos beat the Tulsa Drillers, 6-3.

Randy Ready had a two-run homer and teammates Bill Foley and Jon Hansen had solo homers for the Diablos.

Beene was the winning pitcher. Mike Mason was the loser.

Brian Greer had a three-run homer and Jerry Davis had a solo home run as the Amarillo Gold Sox clubbed the Jackson Mets, 11-2.

GREER HAD two hits, including his 13th homer of the season, and drove in four runs. Davis had three hits and drove in three runs.

Gold Sox second baseman Dan Purpura had his hitting streak snapped at 17 games.

John White, 41, was the winning pitcher. Tagged with the loss was Ted Davis.

Angelo hires Ramsey

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Clint Ramsey of South Plains College in Levelland has been named head track coach at Angelo State University, officials announced Wednesday.

The 44-year-old Stinnett native succeeds David Noble, who resigned effective May 31 to enter private business.

Ramsey, who has spent 13 years as athletic director and head track coach at South Plains College, will join the ASU staff for the 1982-1983 academic year.

Selected as the national junior college outdoor track and field coach of the year in 1979 and 1981, Ramsey coached South Plains to the runner-up spot in the 1981 National Junior College Athletic Association championships.

MC Chaps sign Permian's 6-8 Woolley

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Jerry Stone, Midland College's head basketball coach, has dipped into the ranks of District 5-5A for the third time, in his quest to keep his Chaparrals as a national power during next season's reign as defending national NJCAA champions.

Stone announced Wednesday that he has signed Odessa Permian's 6-8 Mike Woolley to a basketball scholarship. Previously Stone had signed 6-5 Preston Robertson and 6-2 Raymond Parker, both of Midland High.

Woolley, who averaged 17.9 points per game and 13.5 rebounds per contest, was an All-District 5-5A pick and MVP of the Permian team.

WOOLLEY had previously signed a basketball agreement with Abilene Christian University in Abilene, but that does not keep him from playing junior college basketball if he decides against it. He has now decided to go the junior college route.

"I think Mike has a lot of unused potential and it's been a while since we've had the height he possesses," Stone said. "Preston Robertson and Raymond Parker can both help us a lot. Mike (Woolley) expressed an interest to me that he wanted to play major college basketball and he thought the best road to do that was by going to junior college first instead of Abilene Christian."

Robertson was named as District 5-5A's most valuable player after leading Coach Jack Stephenson's Bulldogs in scoring with a 19.1 per game scoring average. Parker was also a hefty scorer for the Pack with a 13.2 per game average.

STONE DID say that he has signed some Dallas players also, but was not ready to release any names.

Celtics alive Series returns to Philly Friday

By HOWARD ULMAN
BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics and Philadelphia 76ers usually fight furiously to the bitter end. Recently, the end has come long before the final buzzer.

Just 10 days after burying the 76ers by 40 points and only three days after being crushed by 25, the Celtics walloped Philadelphia by 29 Wednesday night to stay alive in the sevens series of the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Boston's 114-85 romp slashed the 76ers' lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference final to 3-2. Game Six is Friday night in Philadelphia.

"This game was over in the latter part of the third period," said 76er guard Andrew Toney, who cannot just sit on the bench after hitting 14 of 21 in Sunday's 119-94 Philadelphia victory.

Boston had 85 points through three periods, the same amount Philadelphia had in four.

ON SUNDAY, the 76ers had 85 points after three quarters, just nine fewer than Boston had for the entire game. In the Celtics' 121-81 triumph that opened the series, they scored their 81st point with 4:39 left in the third period.

Why have the teams been taking turns routing each other?

"With two great teams like this, all it takes is one little lull in one area and you're going to capitalize," said Boston center Rick Robey. "Tonight we played defense and were able to capitalize. The last two games we didn't play well and they capitalized."

"It shows the capability of both clubs to make adjustments and come back after a low point," said Celtic M.L. Carr.

The nearly 21-point average margin of victory is particularly unusual for the 76ers and Celtics. In last season's Eastern Conference final, when the Celtics clawed back from a 3-1 deficit to eliminate the 76ers, three games were decided by two points and two others by one.

BOSTON HAS outscored Philadelphia by 34 points in the current series but still is just one loss away from being foiled in its attempt to successfully defend its NBA title.

"It's not like income averaging," Carr said. "You don't add up the points and the team with the most points wins."

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham agreed. "The point spread doesn't mean anything, just a win," he said.

The Celtics got that Wednesday night with a rejuvenated team defense and by using the two days off to adjust their offense to the absence of playmaker Nate "Tiny" Archibald, who dislocated his shoulder in Saturday's third game.

Robert Parish's 15 points led Boston to a 33-22 lead after the first quarter, and the closest the 76ers came thereafter was nine points.

Parish led all scorers with 26 points, and Larry Bird added 20 points and 20 rebounds for Boston. Toney had 18 points and Darryl Dawkins scored 14 for the 76ers.

Boston, seeking to become the first team since the 1967-68 and 1968-69 Celtics to win back-to-back titles, was aggressive on defense, often forcing the 76ers into poor shots as the 24-second clock wound down.

"We double-teamed and pressured them and they became disorganized and confused," said Cedric Maxwell, who had 15 points and 12 rebounds for Boston.

"You're going to like some of the kids we have signed. I think we have some good ones," Stone said while evading giving away any names at this point in time.

According to the Mesquite Daily News, one of the Dallas standouts Stone has signed is 6-5 Brian Essery, who led North Mesquite to the state semifinals with an 18-point average and 11 rebounds per game. North Mesquite was 38-3 under coach Ron Powell, and Essery was the key, being named by the Dallas Times Herald as Metro player of the year and All-Metro by the Dallas Morning News.

Essery was named to the All-State team by the Texas High School Coaches Association and was third team All-State on the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches.

Chaparral women up golf lead to 4 strokes

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla.—Coach Susan Holland's Midland College women's golf team shaved 30 strokes off its tournament leading first day's total, but still managed to pick up only two shots on the field.

Still, going into today's final 18 holes of the National Junior College Athletic Association tournament, the Chaparrals held a four-stroke lead.

Broward, Fla., had the best chance of catching Midland, shooting a 326 for a two-day total of 676.

Midland fired an opening round 346, but posted a 326 Wednesday for a 672 total.

In third place, Temple, Texas, had a 340-722, followed by Glendale, Ariz., 359-750 and Palm Beach, Fla., 379-784.

Jill Himmelman led the Midland golfers with a 78-163 while Wendy Swift had an 80-167; Ann Coombes, 81-168. All were better than any of Midland's first round scores. Other Chap scores included Deborah Latham, 87-174; Rebecca Bradley, 91-183.

Broward's Sue Smith took over the medalist lead with the day's low round, a 76, for a 161 total. First-day leader Terri Myers of Edison, Fla., Community College took an 82-162. Miss Himmelman was tied for third with Beth Shumacker of Broward at 163.

Bulldogs' Mims tilt ends drills

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Good impressions are what Midland High football players hope to leave behind for their coaches to ponder over the summer as they go into the final organized get together of the spring practice session, better known as the annual Bill Mims Spring Game.

Since it's the last meeting before fall practices get underway, Coach Pat Culpepper and his staff are going to try and get as many players as possible into the game, and those players want "Coach" to be thinking about them with the hopes that it might help them obtain a starting role when the season gets underway. And, that should make for intense play even though nothing will go down in the record books.

"WE'LL PLAY as many as we can," said Culpepper about tonight's 7 p.m., game at Memorial Stadium. "In our spring game here, all kicking will be used. It will be played like a regular game with no arbitrary marking of the ball."

The Bulldogs have been divided into two squads with the talent as close to even on both sides of the ball as the coaches could make it and the two teams, Purple and White, will be using the same game plan the Bulldogs hope to utilize in the fall.

"It's a chance for some of them to show they belong in varsity competition," said Culpepper. "Our team is split. It has equal amounts of ability on both sides of the ball, or the lack of it."

"It's pretty much the same offense we'll run next fall. Misdirection plays (making a block or a move in one direction to try and freeze the defense while the play sets up to go another) will be apparent in the scrimmage. In all probability, we'll be starting a 5-foot-8, 150-pound center and a 5-foot-7, 155-pound left guard in the fall and those are two good reasons for using misdirection. Our backs are bigger than our linemen."

WHILE THE players, so they can fit into future plans, and the coaches, so they can plan the future, will be taking the Bill Mims game seriously and play with intensity, one element has been added to the script that will help put a lighter tone into the game: novice coaches.

Taking command of White will be 1981 MHS Booster Club President Ron Holcomb while newly elected Booster Club President Gene Bartus will guide Purple. And, they are not simply acting as symbolic figures. They will actually be calling plays.

"Ron Holcomb and Gene Bartus will each select one play for every series, either on first, second or third down," said Culpepper. "They will walk out to the huddle and give the quarterbacks - Mark Page and Jay Harkrider - the play."

"I think it's quite an honor to be picked," said Holcomb. "I'm looking forward to coaching the White squad. The team's pretty well divided by Coach Culpepper and his staff with a strong running game and good defense. I think defense should be pretty good on both sides."

And a possible bit of strategy: With Mark Page as the quarterback, I'm looking forward to putting the ball in

JIM MURRAY Kurt Rambis somehow defies mold of classic Laker

Washington Post News Service

The first look you get at Kurt Rambis coming downcourt in a basketball game, you figure he must own the ball. Or, his Daddy owns the team. Either that, or he's just a faculty member doing a shoot-around for a paper he's doing on the effect of intercollegiate athletics on the work ethic. Fully annotated and laced with allusions to the Freudian symbolism of the moving pick.

First of all, he's too white. But, on top of everything, it's those glasses. Nobody, repeat nobody, plays big-time basketball in horned-rimmed glasses. You got to have the peripheral vision of a walleyed pike to play this game. You got to have arms which, if you let them hang down, you could walk on them. You got to have all these cute moves where you could go through a car wash without getting wet. Kurt Rambis would go through a car wash like a 1931 Nash. He should play the game in a helmet. He goes to the basket like a cop busting up a crap game or a guy on a motorcycle jumping cars.

THERE WERE people who couldn't bear to look when Kurt Rambis tried out for the Lakers at Palm Springs last summer. When someone asked what position he was trying out for, the answer came back, "I don't know, probably full-back." When Kurt got the ball, it was fourth-and-goal on the one. Guys look niftier falling out of burning planes.

Still, whenever a ball got loose, there was Kurt, glasses and all, elbows, knees and feet, surrounding the ball. It's not a good idea to drop a ball around Kurt Rambis. Unless you're insured. Kurt plays like he's an 18-wheeler on I-95 with the lights out and the brakes shot. Some night, he's gonna take out two rows of seats looking for the ball, or the guy who's got it. Rambis acts like the ball owes him money. There are some people who think "Loose Ball Foul" is his first name. That's because all you seem to hear all night long is "Loose ball foul, Rambis, fourth personal, fifth team foul, Julius Erving shooting two." One thing about Kurt Rambis: he's not nonchalant about anything. He treats a basketball game like Hitler treated Poland.

SO, A LOT of people thought Kurt Rambis trying to make the Lakers was just an interesting social experiment - like letting a family of gorillas live in a condo in Palm Springs for a summer. They just hope he didn't hurt anybody. I mean, if Norman Rockwell drew a basketball player, it would be Kurt. He should have a spotted dog on court with him. They thought his only chance to make the NBA was as commissioner.

Among those who had his doubts was Kurt Rambis. Kurt had been something of a legend at Santa Clara where his horned-rimmed looks had gotten him the nickname "Superman." He used to average 19 points and rebound everything but the hands on the scoreboard clock. The Knicks drafted him in the third round, but, when he showed up, they thought he was from the Auto Club. To give you an idea, his nickname there was "Concrete." When he got cut, he had no trouble finding another job. Athens, Greece, was putting a team together.

When the Lakers were putting a team together, they figured they'd have no trouble finding Kurt in Athens. He'd be the only one not selling postcards or dancing with a handkerchief in his mouth.

But, Kurt didn't want to come to the NBA again. He'd been burned once. Besides, playing in Greece wasn't much worse than going to Yale.

PAUL WESTHEAD was the coach of the Lakers at the time, and the Lakers had everything but someone to get a ball for them now and then. Westhead liked Rambis. He didn't care how he looked out there so long as he had the ball.

"We had to convince Kurt we weren't bringing him to camp just as a battering ram to toughen up the veterans and then send him off to the Aegean fields again," Westhead recalls. "He was most reluctant to sign a contract. He figured it would jeopardize his chances to return overseas." Rambis also figured he would just be used as kind of a complicated punching bag at Palm Springs.

(Continued from 1D) by Galveston Ball after making the Final Four. Essery was recruited by North Texas State and Sam Houston State along with the junior colleges of Cooke County, Henderson, Tyler and McLennan.

"I THINK Essery was swayed by Midland College because of Jerome Crowe and Spud Webb, and the fact that Midland College won the national championship last year," said Luke Johnson, a writer for the Mesquite Daily News.

And Stone has promised that more is to come, which should put the Chaps back in the running for a repeat national championship. Of course, Stone has Webb back after almost losing him a month ago to North Texas State. Stone again won't return to NTSU with the signing of Essery.

In addition to those named above, Stone has returning from the national championship team 6-2 Rodney McCriston, 6-4 Jerome Crowe, 6-6 Chester Smith, 6-5 Justin Morett, 6-3 Chuck Robinson and 6-7 David Thompson.

Youngster's heart beats handicap

HOUSTON (AP) — What Patrick Norris lacks in legs he makes up for in heart. The eight-year-old Little League pitcher plays well enough on artificial limbs to be named to an all-star team.

Born with underdeveloped legs, Patrick has been wearing two artificial limbs since he was 14 months old, but the handicap has hardly slowed him down.

He was walking by age 17 months, climbing trees and riding a bike by the age of five and now plays soccer and baseball.

Patrick pitched for the Hawks of the Pee Wee League and was credited with the team's only victory of the season.

In one inning, Patrick retired the side single handedly. "I struck out two guys and then I caught a pop fly," he said.

Batting is his weakness, but even there he's done well. The second grader runs out all his hits and has stolen 14 bases.

The team coach, Tom Lee, said Patrick tried out two months ago and was impressive.

"He showed a lot of heart," said Lee. "He threw a ball better than anyone else in the league's less-advanced division."

Of Patrick's all-star selection, Lee said: "Patrick is here on his own merit."

The youngster was born with both legs undeveloped; his right below the knee and his left below the hip. He underwent surgery and began receiving a series of artificial legs, a new set every two years.

Sports have been hard on the legs. Once he kicked a soccer ball and a foot flew off. A friend helped Patrick home where the youngster refitted the foot and returned to the game. Another time an old pair of legs cracked during a soccer game and a new pair was brought from home so he could continue playing.

Patrick also swims and this fall wants to take up a new sport: football. His mother admits she's nervous about it, but she will let Patrick play.

Astros not only sweep Phillies, but beat nemesis Carlton, 5-3

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

How sweet it was for the Houston Astros.

Not only did they sweep a three-game series from the Philadelphia Phillies in Philadelphia for the first time since 1965, but they beat nemesis Steve Carlton in the process.

"Nobody expected us to do that," said Houston reliever Dave Smith after saving Wednesday night's 5-3 victory over the Phillies. "But we battled them and played real good baseball."

The Astros' victory was the first in nine games over Carlton. The last time they managed to beat him was May 18, 1978, when they won 6-1 at the Astrodome.

Smith was largely responsible for Wednesday night's success, earning his sixth save with two strong innings of pitching in relief of Bob Knepper. He came into the game in the eighth inning after a 73-minute rain delay.

"I made some bad pitches," said Smith. "I made some bad pitches but got away with them."

The Phillies were hot before running into the Astros, having won 10 of 11 games. Now Phillies Manager Pat Corrales is hopeful that his team can turn things around as they head to Atlanta on a road trip.

"We've got to play better than we have been, that's for sure," Corrales said. "We've got to get Mike Schmidt going. We need his bat."

Schmidt had four hits in the last two games, but had no home runs and has not been driving in his usual batch of runs.

Kiko Garcia knocked in two runs to back the combined efforts of Smith and Knepper, who scattered seven hits, struck out four and walked two in seven innings. In losing his sixth game in 10 decisions, Carlton gave up 10 hits and had eight strikeouts, giving him the National League lead with a total of 71.

error with one out in the 10th inning allowed Alan Wiggins to score the winning run as San Diego beat St. Louis.

Wiggins led off with a bunt single off reliever Bruce Sutter, 2-1, then stole his third base of the game. After Tim Flannery sacrificed Wiggins to third, Sutter intentionally walked Garry Templeton and Ruppert Jones to load the bases and bring up Sixto Lezcano. Lezcano hit a routine chopper to third baseman Dane Lugo, who threw to the plate and appeared to force Wiggins. But Tenace failed to touch the plate and Wiggins was ruled safe with the winning run.

Mets 4, Reds 2

Dave Kingman hit his 13th home run, a three-run shot in the first inning, and Pat Zachry scattered seven hits as New York beat Cincinnati. Zachry, 3-1, making his first start since May 1, allowed two homers to Dan Dreissen while walking one and striking out three. It was Zachry's first complete-game victory since May 27, 1981.

Loser Tom Seaver, 1-5, lasted six innings, yielded five hits, two walks and struck out four.

"That's what we were looking for tonight," said Mets Manager George

Bamberger. "Our bullpen is kind of tired right now, and we needed somebody to go the full nine."

Pirates 2, Giants 1

Don Robinson survived eight walks and three wild pitches over 7-3 innings and got relief help from Rod Scurry and Kent Tekulve as Pittsburgh defeated San Francisco.

Robinson allowed four hits before both Scurry and Tekulve came on in the eighth. Tekulve finished up to post his fifth save as the Giants left 12 runners on base.

Center fielder Omar Moreno provided important hitting and fielding support for Robinson, 4-0. Moreno hit his first homer of the season in the fifth when the Pirates scored twice. Then he made a diving catch with the bases loaded in the bottom of the fifth to snuff out a San Francisco threat.

Braves 9, Expos 1

Bob Horner went four-for-four and drove in three runs and Chris Chambliss knocked in two as Atlanta defeated Montreal. Ken Dayley, 1-1, making only his second major league start, yielded the Expos' run on Andre Dawson's homer in the fourth inning. Dayley

The score was tied 2-2 in the sixth when Houston's Ray Knight, who extended his hitting streak to 16 games, opened with a single. Phil Garner tripped to score Knight and Garcia singled across Garner with the eventual winning run. Garcia also singled home a run in the eighth.

Fashion model now ring promoter

By JACK STEVENSON
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — California, known for its beauty queens, now has perhaps the loveliest boxing promoter in the nation if not the world.

She appeared in television, was a model and now, Japanese-born Akiko Goto Thompson has a license to promote boxing matches.

She was even diminutive posing with Joey Olivo, the North American Boxing Federation champion in the mini-fly-weight division which has a limit of 108 pounds.

THOMPSON, who is separated from her husband, weighs just 100 pounds and stands 5-feet-3.

She has proven size is no drawback in business having earned millions in the fields of plastics and beauty aids. She considers boxing just another business.

"I like boxing very much," she said Wednesday. "The more I see it, the more I enjoy it. I wanted to be a part of it."

Thompson, who came to the United States in 1967, starts her promotional efforts in San Bernardino, Calif., on May 28 with a main event matching Felipe Canela of San Bernardino against Rey Rogue of San Diego in a welterweight 10-rounder.

THE LOVELY lady knows next to nothing about the game of boxing, as such, but has hired Mickey Davis as her matchmaker and surrounded herself with other knowledgeable boxing men. "Boxing is hard and tough," she said. "I want to help these young men succeed. I have two sons, 15 and 16, and I want to see them succeed."

Akiko graduated from Tokyo Joashi Bijutsu Daigaku University in Japan and later attended the University of San Francisco. Her father was one of Japan's noted artists. Her mother was an artist and, she says, "I am an artist, too."

She was a fashion model for 14 years in New York after working with movie and television credits in Japan.

Akito has homes in Las Vegas, Nev., and Monterey Park, Calif.

The California Athletic Commission carefully checked her credentials before issuing her a promoter's license this week.

DAVIS SAID: "I tried to discourage her, but she wants to be in the game. She'll start on a small scale and go from there. We plan cards once a month in San Bernardino where she has a six-month lease on the stadium for her bouts."

Joe Olmos, chief inspector for the California Athletic Commission in Los Angeles, said, "I told her she is vulnerable to the fast pace of boxing and especially boxing on television. I asked her what she would do if she lost $50,000 on a match and she replied, 'I never lose.' She is planning to start in with a small club and then expand.

Toronto shortstop Alfredo Griffin goes high in air to avoid runner in an attempt to complete a double play. But even with the acrobatics, he failed, this time.

SCRATCHPAD Texas, LCC to meet in 2 doubleheaders

(Compiled from R-T wires)

BASEBALL—The No. 1-ranked teams in NCAA and NAIA baseball—Texas and Lubbock Christian—will play doubleheaders in Austin Friday and Saturday. SWC champion Texas is 49-4 and LCC set an NAIA record for most victories with a 64-15 mark. In early season games UT won 2-1 and 5-2.

San Jacinto JC's Bud Ray, an outfielder who batted .430, and catcher Alam Brown, who hit .261 with 14 homers, signed with the Texas.

Hiroshima Toyo Carp downed the Chunichi Dragons 9-3 as Ken Macha hit his fifth homer while in other Japanese action, the Seibu Lions beat the Nippon Ham Fighters, 3-2, and Vic Harris homered in Kintetsu's 4-3 win over the Hankyu Braves.

BASKETBALL—Guard-forward Denard Holmes, who averaged 12 points a game for Texas last season, will not play under new Coach Bob Weltlich. The 6-4 sophomore said Weltlich is "blackballing" some players and trying to force them out of the squad with an off-season fitness program that includes running and weight-lifting. Holmes said Weltlich, who replaces Abe Lemons, told him he wasn't good enough to play, a charge Weltlich denies.

Big Eight coaches voted 5-3 to reject a proposal for a three-point basket and 30-second clock. Under the plan, the 30-second shot clock would begin once teams crossed the half-court line. The Big Ten voted to use the three-point basket and Southern Conference has been using the three-point basket for two years while the Sun Belt Conference has been using a 45-second clock for three years.

The ACC voted to try a 30-second shot clock and a three-point field goal for shots beyond 19 feet for the 1982-83. The changes will have to be approved by the NCAA Rules Committee, but ACC Commissioner Bob James said there should be no problem with the one-season shot-clock trial.

AUTO RACING—Money as much as a liberated sex viewpoint will be needed if a woman is ever to win the Indianapolis 500, says Janet Guthrie. "The problem is that most sponsors are afraid to risk a lot of capital on a woman driver," said the first woman ever to drive a car in the racing classic. "It takes more than $4 million today to build and prepare a car. I had to operate on a fraction of that. When I failed to win and then couldn't find financial backing, I dropped out of the limelight. That's when people started saying, 'Well, that proves she wasn't much of a driver anyway.'"

Whaling expedition off North Carolina's Outer Banks Turner turns Captain Ahab and almost joins Davey Jones

Davey Jones has enlisted more than 500 vessels in his Ghost Fleet of the Outer Banks, that notorious shelf in the Atlantic off the wild and untamed coast of North Carolina, yet he is never satisfied.

Just last summer he let a couple of West Texans slip through his salty fingers when a son took his unsuspecting parents sailing in Boque Soundoff Morehead City, N.C., where Portland went down in 1943 and the Bedfordshire plunged forever a year earlier.

The 15-foot sailboat capsized in calm seas, a disaster involving a tragic loss of cameras, telephoto lenses, tape recorder and eyeglasses and which ended with a dramatic rescue by the fishing smack Wake Forest.

The intended victims were dumped in warm waters a mile from land, never mind that it turned out to be in water five feet deep.

THE SON who last summer aspired to be another Ted Turner, decided this spring to become a Captain Ahab by signing on as a tourist on the 65-foot long Crystal Dawn. The sightseeing vessel embarked 6:15 a.m. from Pirates Cove near Manteo with a crew of two and 69 excursionists, photographers and news people for a 12-hour trip to the Gulf Stream and back.

Sea birds and whales migrate about this time of year to the North Atlantic from their winter breeding grounds in the Caribbean and the prospect of spotting Moby Dick heading for New England was the magnet for the trip.

As the vessel passed through Oregon Inlet, where the Sarah J went down in 1961 and not that far from the last resting place of the Monitor as it returned from its Hampton Roads engagement with the Merrimack, the Dawn's capt'n announced, "We'll be in the Gulf Stream in two hours." Someone suggested, "He's been known to lie."

Off Cape Hatteras, whose wild, isolated beauty even on a pleasant summer day can emit an ominous hostility, passengers rushed to the rail as a school of porpoises crossed in front of the Dawn.

It wasn't too long before the passengers again rushed to the rail. The seas had turned choppy.

IT WAS when the Crystal Dawn crossed the northern tip of the mysterious Bermuda Triangle that things got serious. The water line which served to cool the engines with sea water had burst and the vessel was taking on water.

The surviving engine overheated and the Crystal Dawn was without power, left to bob like a cork in a rocking crosswell churned by 18-knot winds.

Those who knew their history recalled that less than 40 years before, U-boats had registered a dreadful toll in the same area. Victims included the San Delfino (1942), Marore (1942), City of Atlanta (1942), Ciltviara (1942), Chester Sun (1942), William Rockefeller (1942), Empire Gem (1942), Dixie Arrow (1942), Manuela (1942), Lambert Tree (1941), Nordal (1942), Australia

At 2:35 p.m., the Coast Guard was radioed for help. A helicopter from Elizabeth City, not far from where the Thomas Martin in 1883, the Harroway in 1885, the J. B. Holden in 1903 and the Momie T in 1920 all went down, was on its way with a pump. A Coast Guard cutter had been dispatched from Oregon Inlet.

"If we can pump out the water, we'll go back on our own power," the captain told the passengers, the green ones who had turned momentarily away from the rail to catch their breaths. "If we can't, we'll get a tow. We're in no immediate danger."

THE HELICOPTER found the Crystal Dawn at 4:50 p.m. The pump didn't do the job. The Cutter arrived at 6:50 and a tow was attached. Passengers were told to put on their life jackets and as darkness fell. The Crystal Dawn was without power, the only light was provided by the small flashlights attached to the jackets and which were flicked on as passengers moved to and from the rail.

To pass the time, someone suggested a prize for whoever guessed the time of arrival back at Pirates Cove. "A free trip on this boat," it was offered. "And second prize will be two trips."

A woman began singing, "Nearer My God to Thee". Nobody joined her.

THE CRYSTAL Dawn was dragged through the swirling waters of Oregon Inlet at 12:05 a.m. and was met at the marina by a high school bus. A Coast Guardsman suggested the rescued souls write their congressmen urging opposition to proposed cuts in the Coast Guard budget. Reportedly, 69 letters were in the mail the next day.

The ordeal made the front page of the Raleigh paper Sunday. And Captain Ahab made it home in time to see himself on the next day's TV news, smiling weakly at the camera between waves over the rail. It seemed only poetic justice for anyone that would dump his parents in the ocean with tragic loss of etc...

And back in Greenville, N.C., Captain Ahab's seafaring reputation was firmly established. Neighbors turned their backs on him. His buddy announced that from hence forth he would be barred from his boat, the one he uses to fish in the Tar River. "Face it, you're bad luck for any vessel. I'll bet the rats deserted the Crystal Dawn when they saw you sign up."

Bucs' controversial Haak receives new assignment

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Chief scout Howie Haak has been sent on a new mission by the Pittsburgh Pirates, but General Manager Pete Peterson says it has nothing to do with Haak's remarks that the club might have to trade for some white players.

"Haak will scout some high school and college players in southern California," said Peterson, here for a series with the San Francisco Giants.

"The amateur free agent draft is in early June and we want Howie to cross check certain players who have been recommended," Peterson added.

Haak, who had been traveling with the Pirate club, has left the team several other times this season to scout minor leaguers.

Earlier this week, the 71-year-old Haak expressed his opinion that the Pirates might have to trade for more white players.

"To me personally, nine blacks would be acceptable," Haak said. "I'd go to a game if there were all blacks out on the field. But I've been hearing people talk and I don't think you can in Pittsburgh."

Peterson and Pirate owner John Galbreath immediately said Haak's comment did not reflect the policy of the Pirate club.

"I think you play the best people who are available," said Peterson.

"I'm just disappointed as the devil that Howie, being the fine scout he's been over the years, would make a statement like that," Galbreath said.

 Eric Heiden swings into final turn on famed Milwaukee training ice of U.S. speed-skating champions.

Rink of champions waits on death row

MILWAUKEE (AP) — More than half of the 37 Olympic medals Americans have won at four Winter Games since 1968 were claimed by athletes who trained at a special ice rink in suburban Milwaukee. Now the rink — one of only two like it in the United States — is being closed.

Such national heroes as Eric Heiden, winner of an unprecedented five gold medals at the 1980 Games in Lake Placid, N.Y., his sister, Beth, winner of a bronze, and Leah Poulos-Mueller, winner of two silver medals in 1980, are alumni of the 400-meter Olympic rink in West Allis.

POULUS-MUELLER and others think the closing — for budget reasons — is "a tragedy" that could end America's dominance in the international sport. The nation's only other speed skating rink is at Lake Placid. It, too, has been shut for budget reasons.

"Ever since the 1980 Olympics, people have wondered who the next Eric Heiden will be," said Poulos-Mueller. "Now there may never be one. That to me is sad."

Wisconsin state officials say they're willing to keep the facility open — if non-state funds can be found. Closing the oval rink, which opened in 1966, would save an estimated $300,000.

"Whatever is done, donations will have to meet expenses," said James Huntoon, director of the Department of Natural Resources, who announced the rink's closing on May 10. The closing of three state parks was revealed at the same time.

THE RINK has already drawn fans to its rescue. George Howie, of Oconomowoc, Wis., president of the U.S. International Skating Association, is trying to raise $74,000 — the amount that he says Wisconsin officials will require to keep the rink open.

Larry "The Legend" Johnson, a Milwaukee radio personality, has begun a fund drive. So has Kenneth Potts, operator of a fishing tackle shop near Madison.

"I'm just an interested person," Potts said. "I believe that if you can keep the youth involved and off the streets, it's good for the community. The whole country should be proud of what Eric Heiden did at Lake Placid."

Rambis defies tradition

The Lakers, too, found out Kurt Rambis looked a lot better with the basketball. He pulled a job off the backboard, literally. "What you liked about Rambis," notes Westhead, "was that, if you dug an elbow in his ribs, you were gonna get it back a few plays later. He didn't initiate it. There's no room in basketball for guys who knock you over just to impress the coaches. But, Kurt impressed the older players because he didn't back off. He didn't go into a show. Kurt went from No. 12 on the bubble in the lineup to No. 9 and No. 8."

On Dec. 19, the Lakers million-dollar power forward, Mitch Kupchak, broke a knee bone. When the Lakers bought Bob McAdoo, Rambis began wondering if they played baseball and basketball in Red China, but, in a game against Indians, Kurt went out and grabbed 14 rebounds, shut down his man, who was only Herb Williams, and got the starting forward job.

NO ONE EVER called Rambis "Slick." The refs would blow two fouls on him before he got dressed. He got one foul for every seven minutes play. But, he led the team in rebounds nine times, and blocked shots 18 times (only Kareem got more), and in steals six times.

No one was telling him to go back to a Saturday Evening Post cover anymore. The other night, in a crucial game in the NBA playoffs, he slapped around the San Antonio

Spurs unmercifully — 15 rebounds, eight points, one assist, and only five personals. Kurt has learned to remove basketballs from people rather than vice versa. Sometimes, of course, he's got to learn to wait till they got it, though.

The moral of the story: If you don't look like a basketball player in Madison Square Garden, go to Greece where they don't know what a basketball player is supposed to look like and, the next thing you know, you'll be pounding the boards in the NBA playoffs, looking more like Mr. Basketball or Dr. K all the time.

Lamar ruled ineligible

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Southland Conference baseball champion Lamar has been removed from post-season play after conference officials determined the Cardinals were using a player who was not even enrolled in school.

Commissioner Beman cautions PGA Tour is at crossroads

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

Golf, says PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman, "is at a crossroads." While almost all authoritative sources agree golf is healthy, there are indications that the professional game is heading into a period of turmoil. Two decades of burgeoning growth in pro golf interest, in increased purses, has run its course. "If you put it on a graph, it would go like this," says Jack Nicklaus, making a sharp, upward motion with his hand. "Since the late 1950s... it's like this," he adds, describing a line rising just above the horizontal. And, in a period of vastly increased competition for the entertainment dollar, golf cannot remain static.

It MUST continue to grow or, inevitably, it will begin to decline, Beman says. "There is no way we can be aloof. We have to get down in the market place and fight and scratch for our share of that dollar. And we're ready to do it." The problems and concerns are confined to the game as it is represented by the touring pros. At the level of recreation — of the member-guest events, the weekend player, the partici-pan — golf is very healthy indeed. Even in an era of financial recession, golf courses are being constructed at a great rate. Arnold Palmer is building one in China. Nicklaus' company is starting construction on more than a dozen this summer. "It's a natural thing," Nicklaus says. "Most developments build in, in their plans, green space. And a golf course provides the most appropriate use of that green space." Professional tournament golf is something else, however. And Beman says that level of the game faces enormous, complex problems which it must solve quickly or cease to be an important factor in the American sports scene.

not readily identifiable. —Fragmentation. Potentially this could be the most serious problem. It is a clear and present danger, recognized as such by the game's establishment. "We could end up like tennis," divided between the rival World Championship of Tennis and Grand Prix circuits, Palmer said. BEMAN HAS taken a leadership role in attempting to combat splinter groups. He and Joe Black, president of the PGA, recently brought about a closer relationship of the two organizations which represent the touring pros and the club pros. That, Beman says, "has laid to rest two decades of friction" and is the most significant accomplishment of his administration. The two groups, often at odds and sometimes nearing open war, have merged some of their marketing efforts. This, Beman and Black say, could be the first step toward consolidation of some of the game's varied governing bodies into more cohesive management and administration. Talks, aimed at producing a further consolidation, now are being conducted with at least one other golf organization. As these discussions proceed, however, others talk of the institution of another tour, a 20-stop circuit for older players that could be in direct conflict with the established tour and composed of some of golf's more well-known names. "If the price is right, I'm ready to go," Trevino says.

AMONG the major problems: —Financial Purses are leveling off. Television revenue is not increasing at the rate of recent years. Fewer events are being televised. —A tour for older players. There are rumblings of revolt among some of the game's more established performers, Lee Trevino among them. Some are looking with considerable interest at alternate avenues of income, alterna-

Clell Guest has a tough assignment. As a fishery biologist with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's research unit in Fort Worth, Guest must go fishing eight days in succession, six hours a day. Not many salaried workers get to go fishing on the job, but in Guest's case the enviable assignment is indeed part of his duties. "This will be the second half of a catchability study of several strains of hybrid sunfish," Guest explained. "We already have done some work with hybrids, and this fall the study will involve hybrids and tri-hybrids."

green/redear, which has proven to be a fast growing fish with sporting qualities. The Florida strain of bluegill sunfish and Florida redear are also being studied for use in hybrid crosses.

AS A reminder to West Texans, there is still time to sign up for the Western Bass Fishing Association Possum Kingdom Invitational tournament to be held June 4-5. Headquarters for the event will be Lakeview Lodge on the lake's south side. Entry fee is $125 with three cash options at $25, $50 and $100. Also there will be a big bass option for $20. You must also be a member of Western Bass which is $15. Fishing will take place on Friday and Saturday with two days of practice legal on June 3-4. The lake will be off limits May 23-June 1. Some of the best bass' pros in the country will be there, including Tommy Martin, Larry Nixon, Basil Bacon and Ricky Green.

For more information about Western Bass, you may write Western Bass Fishing Association, P.O. Box 15370, Santa Ana, California, 92705.

TEXAS HUNTERS considering going to Colorado to hunt during the fall hunting seasons are reminded that June 8 is the deadline for submitting applications for some limited permits. Permits required for hunting antelope, antlerless deer and elk and muzzle-loading rifle hunts are included in this category. Colorado officials have announced a new "preferential point system" under which those who are not drawn for a limited permit this year will receive preferential treatment in the following year's drawing. For application forms and other information, write the Colorado Division of Wildlife, 6060 Broadway, Denver, Colo., 80216 or call 303-825-1192.

NFL, players huddle
NEW YORK (AP) — The two sides in the National Football League's contract negotiations are once again huddling although it seems they're still far apart in a new bargaining agreement. Meeting for the first time in more than a month, representatives of the NFL Management Council and the NFL Players Association met for about four hours Wednesday at the New York Sheraton hotel. The two sides discussed the philosophy of key economic issue, the union's demand that 55 percent of gross revenues be allocated for salaries, but their positions were far apart. The current contract expires July 15. The players union wants to replace individual bargaining with the percentage-of-gross concept. The owners' bargaining have not accepted that theory.

Fashion model now ring promoter

By JACK STEVENSON
LOS ANGELES (AP) — California, known for its beauty queens, now has perhaps the loveliest boxing promoter in the nation if not the world.

She appeared in television, was a model and now, Japanese-born Akiko Goto Thompson has a license to promote boxing matches.

She was even diminutive posing with Joey Olivo, the North American Boxing Federation champion in the mini-flyweight division which has a limit of 106 pounds.

THOMPSON, who is separated from her husband, weighs just 100 pounds and stands 5-feet-3.

She has proven size is no drawback in business having earned millions in the fields of plastics and beauty aids. She considers boxing just another business.

"I like boxing very much," she said Wednesday. "The more I see it, the more I enjoy it. I wanted to be a part of it."

Thompson, who came to the United States in 1967, starts her promotional efforts in San Bernardino, Calif., on May 28 with a main event matching Felipe Canela of San Bernardino against Rey Rogue of San Diego in a welterweight 10-round.

THE LOVELY lady knows next to nothing about the game of boxing, as such, but has hired Mickey Davis as her matchmaker and surrounded herself with other knowledgeable boxing men. "Boxing is hard and tough," she said. "I want to help these young men succeed. I have two sons, 15 and 16, and I want to see them succeed."

Akiko graduated from Tokyo Joishi Bijutsu Daigaku University in Japan and later attended the University of San Francisco. Her father was one of Japan's noted artists. Her mother was an artist and, she says, "I am an artist, too."

She was a fashion model for 14 years in New York after working with movie and television credits in Japan.

Akiko has homes in Las Vegas, Nev., and Monterey Park, Calif.

The California Athletic Commission carefully checked her credentials before issuing her a promoter's license this week.

Joe Olmos, chief inspector for the California Athletic Commission in Los Angeles, said, "I told her she is vulnerable to the fast pace of boxing and especially boxing on television. I asked her what she would do if she lost $50,000 on a match and she replied, 'I never lose'. She is planning to start in with a small club and then expand.

"It takes more than $4 million today to build and prepare a car. I had to operate on a fraction of that. When I failed to win and then couldn't find financial backing, I dropped out of the limelight. That's when people started saying, 'Well, that proves she wasn't much of a driver anyway...'"

SOCCER—England, Scotland and Northern Ireland should all play in the World Cup soccer tournament in Spain next month despite the Falklands crisis, British Sports Minister Neil MacFarlane. "The British government at the moment sees no objection to British teams going to the World Cup. I only hope it can continue under normal circumstances." Recent reports have said the government might object to the British teams going to Spain and competing along with Argentina...

GOLF—Tommy Valentine, who lost to Tom Watson on the third hole of sudden death in the 1981 Atlanta Classic, says it "seems like a million years ago... There really isn't any carryover," he said of this year's tournament beginning today. "This is still the toughest tournament for me to play in because it's close to home. It's great to play well in front of these fans but gosh awful to play bad. I've done both, and it just adds to the pressure..."

BOXING—WBC lightweight champion Alexis Arguello, who fights No. 1 ranked Andrew Gangan Saturday, says he would rather discuss his philosophy of the sport than say anything that might make him look cocky or denigrate his hard-hitting opponent. "Be nice with the contender, be nice with everyone—that's the most important thing I've learned in the 14 years I've been fighting. This (the Gangan fight) is a big river I have to cross. If I'm a good swimmer, I'll cross the river..."

The 30-year-old Nicaraguan is one of only six persons to win pro titles in three weight divisions and is considered by many boxing experts as the best pound for pound fighter around today.

The WBC light heavyweight title fight between champion Dwight Braxton and Lotte Mwale of Zambia, scheduled for Saturday, has been postponed until sometime next month, after Mwale, 23-1, injured his right eye during sparring last week.

Larry Holmes, WBC heavyweight champion, and Gerry Cooney, each are guaranteed $3 million for the June 11 fight. The Ring magazine reports Don King, one of the promoters, said, "That's not true. Say it's more."

TENNIS—Thierry Tulasne, an 18-year-old Frenchman, stunned top-seeded Jose Luis Clerc 7-5, 6-1 in the second round of the Italian Open while Vitas Gerulaitis overcame Diego Perez 4-6, 6-2, 7-5.

Whaling expedition off North Carolina's Outer Banks Turner turns Captain Ahab and almost joins Davey Jones

Davey Jones has enlisted more than 500 vessels in his Ghost Fleet of the Atlantic off the wild and untamed coast of North Carolina, yet he is never satisfied.

Just last summer he let a couple of West Texans slip through his salty fingers when a son took his unsuspecting parents sailing in Boque Sound off Morehead City, N.C., where Portland went down in 1943 and the Bedfordshire plunged forever a year earlier.

The 15-foot sailboat capsized in calm seas, a disaster involving a tragic loss of cameras, telephoto lenses, tape recorder and eyeglasses and which ended with a dramatic rescue by the fishing smack Wake Forest.

The intended victims were dumped in warm waters a mile from land, never mind that it turned out to be in water five feet deep.

THE SON who last summer aspired to be another Ted Turner, decided this spring to become a Captain Ahab by signing on as a tourist on the 65-foot long Crystal Dawn. The sightseeing vessel embarked 6:15 a.m. from Pirates Cove near Manteo with a crew of two and 69 excursionists, photographers and news people for a 12-hour trip to the Gulf Stream and back.

Sea birds and whales migrate about this time of year to the North Atlantic from their winter breeding grounds in the Caribbean and the prospect of spotting Moby Dick heading for New England was the magnet for the trip.

As the vessel passed through Oregon Inlet, where the Sarah J went down in 1961 and not all that far from the last resting place of the Monitor as it returned from its Hampton Roads engagement with the Merrimack, the Dawn's capt'n announced, "We'll be in the Gulf Stream in two hours." Someone suggested, "He's been known to lie."

Off Cape Hatteras, whose wild, isolated beauty even on a pleasant summer day can emit an ominous hostility, passengers rushed to the rail as a school of porpoises crossed in front of the Dawn.

It wasn't too long before the passengers again rushed to the rail. The seas had turned choppy.

IT WAS when the Crystal Dawn crossed the northern tip of the mysterious Bermuda Triangle that things got serious. The water line which served to cool the engines with sea water had burst and the vessel was taking on water.

The surviving engine overheated and the Crystal Dawn was without power, left to bob like a cork in a rocking crosswell churned by 18-knot winds.

Those who knew their history recalled that less than 40 years before, U-boats had registered a dreadful toll in the same area. Victims included the San Delfino (1942), Marore (1942), City of Atlanta (1942), Ciltviara (1942), Chester Sun (1942), William Rockefeller (1942), Empire Gem (1942), Dixie Arrow (1942), Manuela (1942), Lambert Tree (1941), Nordal (1942), Australia (1942)...but why go on and on, that should give you an idea.

At 2:35 p.m., the Coast Guard was radioed for help. A helicopter from Elizabeth City, not far from where the Thomas Martin in 1883, the Haraway in 1885, the J. B. Holden in 1903 and the Momie T in 1920 all went down, was on its way with a pump. A Coast Guard cutter had been dispatched from Oregon Inlet.

"If we can pump out the water, we'll go back on our own power," the captain told the passengers, the green ones who had turned momentarily away from the rail to catch their breaths. "If we can't, we'll get a tow. We're in no immediate danger."

THE HELICOPTER found the Crystal Dawn at 4:50 p.m. The pump didn't do the job. The Cutter arrived at 6:50 and a tow was attached. Passengers were told to put on their life jackets and as darkness fell. The Crystal Dawn was without power, the only light was provided by the small flashlights attached to the jackets and which were flicked on as passengers moved to and from the rail.

To pass the time, someone suggested a prize for whoever guessed the time of arrival back at Pirates Cove. "A free trip on this boat," it was offered. "And second prize will be two trips."

A woman began singing, "Nearer My God to Thee." Nobody joined her.

THE CRYSTAL Dawn was dragged through the swirling waters of Oregon Inlet at 12:05 a.m. and was met at the marina by a high school bus. A Coast Guardsman suggested the rescued souls write their congressmen urging opposition to proposed cuts in the Coast Guard budget. Reportedly, 69 letters were in the mail the next day.

The ordeal made the front page of the Raleigh paper Sunday. And Captain Ahab made it home in time to see himself on the next day's TV news, smiling weakly at the camera between heaves over the rail. It seemed only poetic justice for anyone that would dump his parents in the ocean with tragic loss of etc...

And back in Greenville, N.C., Captain Ahab's seafaring reputation was firmly established. Neighbors turned their backs on him. His buddy announced that from hence forth he would be barred from his boat, the one he uses to fish in the Tar River. "Face it, you're bad luck for any vessel. I'll bet the rats deserted the Crystal Dawn when they saw you sign up."

Bucs' controversial Haak receives new assignment

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Chief scout Howie Haak has been sent on a new mission by the Pittsburgh Pirates, but General Manager Pete Peterson says it has nothing to do with Haak's remarks that the club might have to trade for some white players.

"Haak will scout some high school and college players in southern California," said Peterson, here for a series with the San Francisco Giants.

"The amateur free agent draft is in early June and we want Howie to cross check certain players who have been recommended," Peterson added.

Haak, who had been traveling with the Pirate club, has left the team several other times this season to scout minor leaguers.

Earlier this week, the 71-year-old Haak expressed his opinion that the Pirates might have to trade for more white players.

"To me personally, nine blacks would be acceptable," Haak said. "I'd go to a game if there were all blacks out on the field. But I've been hearing people talk and I don't think you can in Pittsburgh."

Peterson and Pirate owner John Galbreath immediately said Haak's comment did not reflect the policy of the Pirate club.

"I think you play the best people who are available," said Peterson.

"I'm just disappointed as the devil that Howie, being the fine scout he's been over the years, would make a statement like that," Galbreath said.

Eric Heiden swings into final turn on famed Milwaukee training ice of U.S. speed-skating champions.

Rink of champions waits on death row

MILWAUKEE (AP) — More than half of the 37 Olympic medals Americans have won at four Winter Games since 1968 were claimed by athletes who trained at a special ice rink in suburban Milwaukee. Now the rink — one of only two like it in the United States — is being closed.

Such national heroes as Eric Heiden, winner of an unprecedented five gold medals at the 1980 Games in Lake Placid, N.Y., his sister, Beth, winner of a bronze, and Leah Poulos-Mueller, winner of two silver medals in 1980, are alumni of the 400-meter Olympic rink in West Allis.

POULUS-MUELLER and others think the closing — for budget reasons — is "a tragedy" that could end America's dominance in the international sport. The nation's only other speed skating rink is at Lake Placid. It, too, has been shut for budget reasons.

"Ever since the 1980 Olympics, people have wondered who the next Eric Heiden will be," said Poulos-Mueller. "Now there may never be one. That to me is sad."

Wisconsin state officials say they're willing to keep the facility open — if non-state funds can be found. Closing the oval rink, which opened in 1966, would save an estimated $300,000.

"Whatever is done, donations will have to meet expenses," said James Huntoon, director of the Department of Natural Resources, who announced the rink's closing on May 10. The closing of three state parks was revealed at the same time.

THE RINK has already drawn fans to its rescue. George Howie, of Oconomowoc, Wis., president of the U.S. International Skating Association, is trying to raise $74,000 — the amount that he says Wisconsin officials will require to keep the rink open.

Larry "The Legend" Johnson, a Milwaukee radio personality, has begun a fund drive. So has Kenneth Potts, operator of a fishing tackle shop near Madison. "I'm just an interested person," Potts said. "I believe that if you can keep the youth involved and off the streets, it's good for the community. The whole country should be proud of what Eric Heiden did at Lake Placid."

The Lakers, too, found out Kurt Rambis looked a lot better with the basketball. He pulled a job off the backboard, literally. "What you liked about Rambis," notes Westhead, "was that, if you dug an elbow in his ribs, you were gonna get it back a few plays later. He didn't initiate it. There's no room in basketball for guys who knock you over just to impress the coaches. But, Kurt impressed the older players because he didn't back off. He didn't go into a show. Kurt went from No. 12 on the bubble in the lineup to No. 9 and No. 8."

man, who was only Herb Williams, and got the starting forward job.

NO ONE EVER called Rambis "Silk." The refs would blow two fouls on him before he got dressed. He got one foul for every seven minutes play. But, he led the team in rebounds nine times, and blocked shots 18 times (only Kareem got more), and in steals six times.

No one was telling him to go back to a Saturday Evening Post cover anymore. The other night, in a crucial game in the NBA playoffs, he slapped around the San Antonio

Spurs unmercifully — 15 rebounds, eight points, one assist, and only five personals. Kurt has learned to remove basketballs from people rather than vice versa. Sometimes, of course, he's got to learn to wait till they got it, though.

The moral of the story: If you don't look like a basketball player in Madison Square Garden, go to Greece where they don't know what a basketball player is supposed to look like and, the next thing you know, you'll be pounding the boards in the NBA playoffs, looking more like Mr. Basketball or Dr. K all the time.

Commissioner Beman cautions PGA Tour is at crossroads

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

Golf, says PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman, "is at a crossroads." While almost all authoritative sources agree golf is healthy, there are indications that the professional game is heading into a period of turmoil. Two decades of burgeoning growth in pro golf interest, in increased purses, has run its course. "If you put it on a graph, it would go like this," says Jack Nicklaus, making a sharp, upward motion with his hand. "Since the late 1960s... it's like this," he adds, describing a line rising just above the horizontal. And, in a period of vastly increased competition for the entertainment dollar, golf cannot remain static.

It MUST continue to grow or, inevitably, it will begin to decline, Beman says. "There is no way we can be aloof. We have to get down in the market place and fight and scratch for our share of that dollar. And we're ready to do it." The problems and concerns are confined to the game as it is represented by the touring pros. At the level of recreation — of the member-guest events, the weekend player, the partictives that could be in open conflict with the established PGA tour. —Delicate legal problems. At least one player, who asks that his name not be used, is talking of a class-action suit charging illegalities in the tour's system of exemptions. —Age. The great stars themselves — the household names, the men who led the way into the era of golf's greatest affluence — are a problem. They are reaching the end of their competitive roads. And their replacements are not readily identifiable. —Fragmentation. Potentially this could be the most serious problem. It is a clear and present danger, recognized as such by the game's establishment. "We could end up like tennis," divided between the rival World Championship of Tennis and Grand Prix circuits, Palmer said.

BEMAN HAS taken a leadership role in attempting to combat splinter groups. He and Joe Black, president of the PGA, recently brought about a closer relationship of the two organizations which represent the touring pros and the club pros. That, Beman says, "has laid to rest two decades of friction" and is the most significant accomplishment of his administration. The two groups, often at odds and sometimes nearing open war, have merged some of their marketing efforts. This, Beman and Black say, could be the first step toward consolidation of some of the game's varied governing bodies into more cohesive management and administration. Talks, aimed at producing a further consolidation, now are being conducted with at least one other golf organization. As these discussions proceed, however, others talk of the institution of another tour, a 20-stop circuit for older players that could be in direct conflict with the established tour and composed of some of golf's more well-known names. "If the price is right, I'm ready to go," Trevino says.

AMONG the major problems: —Financial. Purses are leveling off. Television revenue is not increasing at the rate of recent years. Fewer events are being televised. —A tour for older players. There are rumblings of revolt among some of the game's more established performers, Lee Trevino among them. Some are looking with considerable interest at alternate avenues of income, alternationing that could be in open conflict with the established PGA tour. —Delicate legal problems. At least one player, who asks that his name not be used, is talking of a class-action suit charging illegalities in the tour's system of exemptions. —Age. The great stars themselves — the household names, the men who led the way into the era of golf's greatest affluence — are a problem. They are reaching the end of their competitive roads. KENNY REDIN'S

Fin & Feather

Clell Guest has a tough assignment. As a fishery biologist with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's research unit in Fort Worth, Guest must go fishing eight days in succession, six hours a day.

Not many salaried workers get to go fishing on the job, but in Guest's case the enviable assignment is indeed part of his duties. "This will be the second half of a catchability study of several strains of hybrid sunfish," Guest explained. "We already have done some work with hybrids, and this fall the study will involve hybrids and tri-hybrids."

THE DEPARTMENT has taken three species of sunfish: the redear, redbreast and longear, and produced eight hybrid and tri-hybrid combinations. A tri-hybrid is, as the term suggests, the result of crossing a female of one species with a male of another, then crossing their offspring with a third species.

"What we are trying to find is a fast growing sunfish that is easy to catch and has very low reproductive potential," Guest said.

Low reproduction is highly desirable in a sunfish, especially for stocking in state park lakes and small urban reservoirs, because they tend to overpopulate and become stunted.

GUEST AND two assistants will fish eight hatchery ponds with each angler fishing for each species three times with live earthworms for bait and three times with an artificial fly.

They will fish one-hour periods, carefully recording their hourly catch. So far differences in catchability between hybrid and native sunfish have been insignificant, but there is hope that the tri-hybrids will be more aggressive and more easily caught.

The department has already been successful with another hybrid, the green/redear, which has proven to be a fast growing fish with sporting qualities. The Florida strain of bluegill sunfish and Florida redear are also being studied for use in hybrid crosses.

AS A reminder to West Texans, there is still time to sign up for the Western Bass Fishing Association Possum Kingdom Invitational tournament to be held June 4-5.

Headquarters for the event will be Lakeview Lodge on the lake's south side. Entry fee is $125 with three cash options at $25, $50 and $100. Also there will be a big bass option for $20. You must also be a member of Western Bass which is $15. Fishing will take place on Friday and Saturday with two days of practice legal on June 3-4. The lake will be off limits May 23-June 1.

Some of the best bassin' pros in the country will be there, including Tommy Martin, Larry Nixon, Basil Bacon and Ricky Green.

For more information about Western Bass, you may write Western Bass Fishing Association, P.O. Box 15370, Santa Ana, California, 92705.

TEXAS HUNTERS considering going to Colorado to hunt during the fall hunting seasons are reminded that June 8 is the deadline for submitting applications for some limited permits.

Permits required for hunting antelope, antlerless deer and elk and muzzle-loading rifle hunts are included in this category.

Colorado officials have announced a new "preferential point system" under which those who are not drawn for a limited permit this year will receive preferential treatment in the following year's drawing.

For application forms and other information, write the Colorado Division of Wildlife, 6060 Broadway, Denver, Colo., 80216 or call 303-825-1192.

NFL players huddle

NEW YORK (AP) — The two sides in the National Football League's contract negotiations are once again huddling although it seems they're still far apart on a new bargaining agreement.

Meeting for the first time in more than a month, representatives of the NFL Management Council and the NFL Players Association met for about four hours Wednesday at the New York Sheraton hotel. The two sides discussed the philosophy of key economic issue, the union's demand that 55 percent of gross revenues be allocated for salaries, but their positions were far apart.

The current contract expires July 15. The players' union wants to replace individual bargaining with the percentage-of-gross concept. The owners' gainers have not accepted that theory.

College football.. can it be for fun?

An AP Sports Analysis
By HAL BOCK

Let's have a college football game, just for the fun of it you understand. Suppose we schedule — forgetting for the moment pending NCAA sanctions and investigations — national champion Clemson against the University of Southern California.

That salivating you hear in the background belongs to the television networks, who would pay dearly for that kind of pairing — all in the interest of good clean collegiate sports, of course. Well, if it's good clean collegiate sports they're after, says John Reeves, director of sports and recreation at the University of Rochester, then maybe the networks ought to be showing the little guys instead of the heavyweights. "Amherst against Williams, that's where the real collegiate football is taking place," says Reeves. "It's being played by student-athletes with no aspirations for the pros, student-athletes who spend as much or more time in laboratories as they do on the practice field."

THAT IS the philosophy of Division III, the low key NCAA niche where Rochester lives quite comfortably, thank you. It's not that Rochester doesn't have the resources to move up in athletic class. Quite the contrary. With an endowment bordering on $500 million, the school could invest as much as it cared to in sports. It chooses, however, to follow a low profile route that does not create an athletic monster like the one devouring so many universities.

"I don't pretend to pass judgment on Division I schools and their athletic programs," says Reeves. "Sports there can be run above board. Certainly schools like Penn State and the Ivys have proven that they can keep it in control, in the proper perspective. But with the abuses in the quest for winning and gaining bigger television contracts and more money, the temptations are frightening. That's why, for us, Division III is proper and right." Don't misunderstand. Division III schools like Rochester take their sports seriously. They compete for national championships, just like the big guys, and they want to win. But not at any cost. Not at the price of creating a separate and far from equal society for the athletes.

IN DIVISION III schools like Rochester, sports aren't allowed to devour the educational process. It's an approach that assumes a student-athlete might like to be as much of a student as he is an athlete.

Occasionally the academic side of college life can cause eligibility problems for an athlete. Reeves has a solution for that dilemma. Instead of forcing them to major in an academic area, how about letting them concentrate on something more familiar — something like, say, sports?

"We design specialized programs for artists and musicians," he says. "Why not for athletes?"

A major in sports could include courses in signing with an agent, long term investments, contracts, free agency, player unions — the whole spectrum of subjects which affect professional athletes.

The program is unlikely to show up at Rochester, though, because, frankly, professional prospects don't usually matriculate at Division III schools where athletic scholarships are nonexistent.

AN ATHLETE who enrolls at Rochester isn't doing it to play football or basketball. Sports are secondary, an extracurricular activity. But after all, wasn't that the idea in the first place?

Every so often there is a suggestion that the NCAA limit membership in Division III to schools with enrollments of under 3,500 students. There was a motion made to that effect at the last convention. It failed — by a lot.

"Good," said Reeves. "Hopefully it will continue to fail."

Thanks to Vince, deafness didn't stop Brown

Ex-Redskin keeps his ear to ground

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

The oldest admonition in sports is "Keep your eye on the ball." Larry Brown asks: "What about the ears?"

"Not many people realize that some 14 million Americans suffer from some sort of deafness, of which two million are profoundly deaf and one million are children," says the former running back of the Washington Redskins.

"Seeing clearly is very important. It's just as vital that you can hear. Partial or total deafness can affect not only your performance in sports but in every phase of your life."

Brown should know. He has been totally deaf in his right ear since birth and, while close members of his family knew, he tried to keep the ailment a secret from others.

EVEN WHEN he moved into pro football, where every human faculty is required, he was too embarrassed to reveal his hearing problem, also fearing it might jeopardize his football career.

It took the late Vince Lombardi, coach of the Redskins at the time, to make the discovery and take measures to see that Brown's career was not adversely affected.

"It's something I can never forget," said the 34-year-old Pittsburgh native, who played nine years in the National Football League. "That's why I am so determined to tell everybody I can that it's unwise to keep the condition a secret."

"Good gains are being made in this area but there still is a lot of clinical research to be done."

BROWN, NOW a business and community relations manager for Xerox and active in many charities, currently is very involved in promoting the fundraising campaign of the Deafness Research Foundation (DRF).

The Foundation, a voluntary health organization, is embarked on a broad program of research and public education. Its chairman is George L. Ball, president of E.F. Hutton & Co. Inc.

It is ironic that it was with E.F. Hutton that Brown started his business career in 1976, a year before retiring as the Redskins' deceptively small runner.

Hutton is the financial firm which airs the commercials with the kicker: "When E.F. Hutton talks, people listen."

Trouble is, if Hutton talked to Larry Brown and his head was turned to the left, he couldn't hear a word.

"I have always had a profound deafness in my right ear," he said. "I got by when I was a kid in school and even college (Dodge City JC and Kansas State). Occasionally the kids would find out I had a problem and would tease me. But my mother was adamant against an operation — she said it was too delicate."

Brown was one of about 30 running backs who reported to the Redskins' camp in 1969. He took care to place himself in a position that no one would suspect he had a hearing trouble.

ALTHOUGH RELATIVELY small at 5-foot-10 and 185 pounds, he was bulldog tough and made an immediate impression on the Redskins coaches, particularly George Dickson.

"This guy is the best of the whole crop," Dickson told his associates. "Yeah, he's tough," said others, "but "The 'but' was that I seemed to be getting off the ball a split-second late," Larry said. "And I was. Although I lined up in the huddle opposite the quarterback, Sonny Jurgensen, I usually caught the play."

"But my trouble was I could never hear the snap. I tried to compensate by keeping my eye on the ball. At the first twitch, I moved. A few times, I got caught offside but generally I thought I had it whipped."

He didn't, however, reckon with the sharp eye and instincts of Lombardi, one of the all-time great coaches.

"One day Lombardi called me to look at the movie and he said, 'Larry, don't you think you're getting off a little late?' I mumbled something but the next day Lombardi ordered hearing examinations for the whole squad. My secret was exposed."

Instead of sacking Larry right there, Lombardi ordered a special device designed and inserted in the headgear which amplified the sound and transferred it to his good ear. That's how he played for nine years.

"Trouble was," Brown said, "every time it rained I thought I was going to get electrocuted."

FBI probes trot scandal

NEW YORK (AP) — An FBI probe of race fixing at two New York area harness tracks has uncovered evidence that a number of groomers were bribed to allow doping of horses they cared for, the New York Daily News reported in today's editions.

The Daily News said it learned that the bribes and drugging activity took place at Yonkers and Roosevelt raceways in the spring and fall of 1978. The newspaper said a total of six races at the two tracks were involved.

A spokesman for the New York State Racing and Wagering Board told the Daily News that the state agency is cooperating with the FBI and that no action has been taken against any groomers.

The newspaper said the result of the FBI probe is being given to a federal grand jury in New York.

Remember Kison? Well, Bruce is back

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

Bruce Kison missed more than a year following surgery on the ulnar and medial nerves in his right elbow and wrist, so he isn't about to gripe because a little thing like a pulled back muscle cost him a chance for a complete game and a shutout.

"I could have gone out in the ninth and pitched, but it's no big deal," Kison said after blanking Milwaukee on five hits for eight innings Wednesday night in the California Angels' 7-2 victory over the Brewers. "We won, and I felt very comfortable out there, as comfortable as I've felt at any time since coming back."

Kison, a 32-year-old right-hander and 10-year major league veteran, last pitched a complete game May 3, 1980. His last shutout was April 23 of that year.

"I feel I'm pitching within the capabilities of myself," he said after walking two, fanning five and upping his 1982 record to 3-0. "I don't feel I've lost any velocity because of the injury, and I think I've gained some knowledge about pitching. My delivery was out of synch for a while after I came back."

White Sox 6, Rangers 5
Pinch runner Jerry Hairston scored from second base on an infield hit and an error by Texas second baseman Doug Flynn with two out in the ninth inning. Rookie relief sensation Salome Barojas picked up the victory, his first decision of the year, to go with his league-leading 10 saves.

Greg Luzinski singled off Danny Darwin with two out in the ninth and Hairston went to second on Tom Paciorek's fourth single of the game. Marv Foley then hit a grounder which Flynn stopped but tossed wildly trying for a forceout at second. Hairston, who had stopped at third, was waved home and just beat shortstop Mario Mendoza's throw to the plate.

Tigers 6, A's 3
Enos Cabell's single drove in the go-ahead run in Detroit's four-run sixth inning and the Tigers went on to their seventh consecutive triumph. Trailing 2-1, Lou Whitaker led off the sixth with a double and scored on Alan Trammell's single. Trammell went to third on Chet Lemon's single and scored on Cabell's single to put Detroit in front 3-2. Lemon and Cabell moved up on Kirk Gibson's grounder and scored on a single by Mike Ivie. Wayne Gross and Rickey Henderson homered for Oakland.

Red Sox 6, Mariners 5
Gary Allenson's double to deep center field following Dave Stapleton's two-out single drove home the winning run in the 12th inning against Bill Caudill. The Red Sox tied the game 5-5 with two out in the bottom of the ninth. Rick Miller walked, was sacrificed to second, took third on an infield out and scored on a single by Jim Rice. Al Cowens and Bobby Brown homered for Seattle, while Glenn Hoffman drove in three Boston runs with a homer and single.

Yankees 3, Royals 2
Tommy John, in his 100th start for New York, scattered seven hits in seven innings. John Mayberry and Graig Nettles delivered RBI singles and Willie Randolph squeezed Nettles home with what proved to be the winning run. John gave way to Rich Gossage to start the eighth and the Yankees' relief ace earned his ninth save. Paul Splittorff, who hasn't beaten the Yankees since July 1977, suffered his ninth consecutive loss to them.

Orioles 4, Twins 2
Benny Ayala, the first batter after an 81-minute rain-delay in the second inning, rapped a three-run homer, his first of the season, off Pete Filson, who was making his second big league start. Sammy Stewart went eight inning for the Orioles, giving way to Tim Stoddard after a leadoff single in the ninth. Baltimore, which has a 17-3 edge over Minnesota since the start of the 1980 season, added another run in the third on Rich Dauer's double and Gary Roenicke's single.

Blue Jays 8, Indians 5
Rance Mulliniks and Dave Revering cracked RBI doubles to highlight a three-run eighth-inning rally. Cleveland's Len Barker, who hurled a perfect game against Toronto just one year and four days earlier, took a 4-3 lead into the eighth but Damaso Garcia singled and Mulliniks doubled him home.

Johnny wants to join crowd at Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Three-time Indianapolis 500 winner Johnny Rutherford would like to be part of the big jump in speeds this year at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. But his Chaparral race car won't cooperate.

Rutherford, who just three years ago stepped into car owner Jim Hall's "Yellow Submarine," won the 1980 Indianapolis 500 and dominated Indy-car racing, qualified last weekend for the May 30 race at 197.066 mph.

That is nearly 10 mph slower than pole-winner Rick Mears, whose record qualification run of 207.004 mph was just one of eight that surpassed the once-magical 200 mph barrier.

Rutherford still is driving the bright yellow, Pennzell-sponsored car that Hall first introduced in 1979 with Al Unser, another three-time Indy winner, at the wheel.

That was the car that really ignited the ground effects revolution in racing, going fully into the concept of trapping air beneath the car to cause a low pressure area, thereby producing tremendous downforce. That downforce makes the cars run through the turns like they are on rails.

BUT OTHERS, notably the Penske and Patrick racing teams, have brought new cars from the drawing board to the racetrack since 1980, and they have taken the original concept and carried it more than a step or two further.

"This is the toughest May I've spent in 10 years," said Rutherford. "Everybody is working so doggone hard, and we just can't seem to get it going. You just have to keep working at it, though. We could make the discovering this week that'll free this thing right up and suddenly we'll be going 200."

The Chaparral team struggled to get even the 197 mph qualifying speed out of the car, but now that it's solidly in the race day field it would seem they could relax a little because race speeds are always slower than those during time trials. But Rutherford insists that's not the case.

Sorry Lubbock. We don't have a room in the house. Just suites.

That's all Granada Royale Hometels® has ever had. Big, beautiful suites. For every guest in the house. And our new Lubbock Hometel® has 161 of them. Every suite opens on to a stunning courtyard, designed in the architectural style and garden-like setting of a Mediterranean villa. Not like the old hallway-lobby layout you find in hotels.

Every suite includes a separate bedroom with king or 2 double beds. Every bedroom has a phone, color TV and untypical furniture such as an armoire and double dressers. Every suite also has a separate living room with sofa that makes into a queen size bed for extra guests and children. And there's a second TV, a second phone, room for cocktails, a meeting, a quiet evening at "home."

Every suite also has a dining table, chairs, a bar, a kitchen with refrigerator, range with oven, pots, pans, dishes, tableware.

But the Hometel® concept doesn't stop with suites. Every evening the manager holds a 2-hour cocktail party for all registered guests. There's no charge whatsoever. Every morning our guests also receive breakfast without charge. That means eggs cooked to order. Bacon or sausages, pancakes, cereal, coffee, juice, fresh fruit—whatever they want.

As you can see, this is not the way they do it in hotels. But it is the way we do it in a Hometel®.

And to make it easier to sample this comfort and ambience, we are offering an introductory rate of just $59 per night single occupancy. And only $10 more per extra occupant. Children under 12 stay free. What's more, to celebrate our opening, we are offering an additional 30% discount.

At these prices, Lubbock's new Granada Royale Hometel® comes uncomfortably close to the hotels and motels of Lubbock. But otherwise, it's miles apart.

Investor's Guide Self-directed IRA transferable

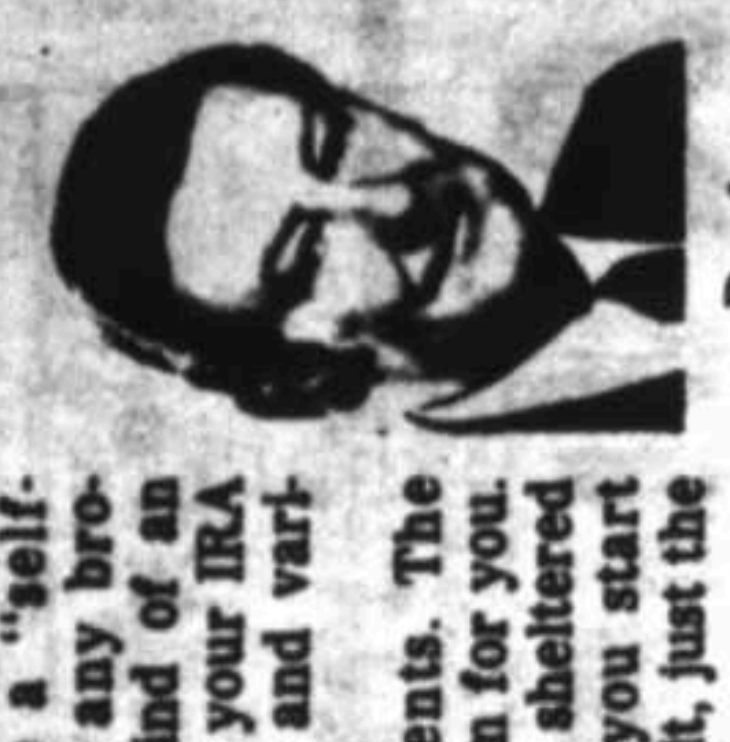

By BILL DOYLE

Q. When I retire at the end of this year, I will have $25,000 from my pension fund to roll over into an individual retirement account. I'm confused as to which type of IRA to use. My objective will be to receive the best return. There will be no need for growth in value. Hopefully, my other investments will keep me abreast of inflation.

A. Sure, you can use a "self-directed" IRA at almost any brokerage firm. With that kind of an arrangement, you can put your IRA money into bonds, stocks and various other investments.

Here are a few words of caution. Remember that brokers get commissions only when they buy or sell securities for customers. If, after you have picked your bonds and opened your IRA, your broker starts to recommend a lot of switching, you'll have to be firm and say "no."

This is not to say that changing holdings in an IRA or any other investment portfolio is always wrong. But, if you suspect your broker is "churning" your investments, in order to generate commissions, move your account. Remember you can transfer your IRA once a year.

PORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Hog prices were steady today.

Women have longer life expectancies — 15 years at 70. A female turning 70 this year must withdraw one-fifth of her IRA's value the first year, one-tenth the second year, and so on.

These life expectancy tables get revised every so often. By the time you retire the "multiple" the Internal Revenue Service uses for IRA withdrawals could very well be higher than 12 for men and 15 for women.

Q. I have a friend who expects to work for several more years. She is skeptical about starting an IRA, because she says her Social Security checks will be reduced by whatever amount she gets from an IRA. Isn't she wrong?

A. Yes, indeed. Money received from an IRA or any other investment does not lessen the amount you're entitled to from Social Security.

NEW YORK (AP) — One-quarter of the largest U.S. corporations are now in the throes of total realignment, which in some instances is nothing less than building a brand new company out of an existing one.

The massive changes often involve product lines, finance, plants, manpower marketing and other aspects of companies. Some are due to foreign, but others are due to past failures to anticipate change.

'Star Wars' soon to be launched into video orbit

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — There is a new "Star Wars" sequel in the offing; it might be called "The Studio Strikes Back."

Twentieth Century-Fox is about to launch "Star Wars," the top-grossing feature film of all time, on a carefully planned TV orbit that, so far at least, is going right around Home Box Office, the No. 1 pay-TV network. That little twist in the trajectory is like a Space Shuttle pilot ignoring Mission Control.

Here is what is happening: Next month, Fox plans to release "Star Wars" as a rental-only home videocassette. Three months later, the cassettes and videocassettes (the latter probably through RCA) will go on sale. Then, Fox is expected to re-release the movie to theaters before offering it as a one-time-only "pay-per-view" pay-TV event. Next February, pay-TV networks — Showtime and the Movie Channel are already signed — will show "Star Wars." Then, a year later, CBS will get a crack at the movie with a traditional network-TV premiere.

By some conservative estimates, Fox may gross more than $60 million from the video and TV releases alone.

But HBO, which controls at least 60 percent of the pay-TV business and is the financial Saturn boosting much of the movie business today, has not even suited up for this particular launch.

"We are not discussing with HBO," said Steve Roberts, president of Fox Video, in a telephone interview. "They don't want to talk about it. They've said it's something they want to do, but not now."

Talks with studio and pay-TV executives suggest that HBO's problem with "Star Wars" is really quite simple: money. HBO is not willing to pay the astronomical price Fox is asking for the movie.

Competing pay-TV networks are said to be paying $1 or more per subscriber for the movie. Up to now, top movies have cost pay-TV networks about 50 cents per subscriber, with some films considerably lower and a few higher. Because HBO is so big, it often gets a price break, paying a lower per-subscriber fee than its pay-TV competition.

The studios long have grumbled about HBO's bargaining leverage, and two years ago four of them tried to do something about it. Fox joined Universal, Columbia and Paramount in the ill-fated Premiere pay-TV network, which, in part, was intended to counter HBO's growing influence. The Department of Justice took Premiere to court on antitrust charges and won, killing the new network.

The studios went back to HBO, and it was business as usual. At least on the surface. Many studio executives maintained feelings of resentment toward HBO.

Enter Luke Skywalker, Darth Vader and the rest of the "Star Wars" crowd. Few, if any, other movies could provide Fox the bargaining leverage it needs to stand up to HBO.

John A. Lack, executive vice president of Warner-Amex Satellite Entertainment, which owns the Movie Channel, said in a telephone interview, "We think 'Star Wars' is going to be one of the biggest, most satisfying experiences in the history of pay television. That's why it's commanding the highest prices in pay television."

Studio and pay-TV executives are watching the "Star Wars" situation closely and hope to learn a great deal how megahits will perform in the confusing new world of timed multi-media releases. They are also watching to see whether the combined strength of the smaller pay networks can counter the weight of HBO, which some executives expect will be forced to take "Star Wars" on Fox's terms.

Recently, an HBO executive commented that "Star Wars" would probably be "the first $10-million pay-TV movie." If Fox has anything to say about things, that estimate may prove to be way off. Or, as Yoda might say, "No wisdom have they."

Hearst Corp. acquires Kansas City TV station

By The Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK. — Formal transfer of television station KMBC-TV, Kansas City, to The Hearst Corporation from Metromedia, Inc., has been completed, it was announced today by Frank A. Bennack, president and chief executive officer of Hearst, and John W. Kluge, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Metromedia. Hearst, a broadly diversified company engaged in publishing, broadcasting and other media, paid Metromedia $79 million in cash for the station.

KMBC-TV becomes Hearst's fifth VHF television station, the maximum currently permitted under Federal Communications Commission rules. Metromedia, also the owner of five VHF stations, sold KMBC-TV to enable it to buy WCVB-TV in Boston, Mass., for $220 million.

Other Hearst stations are WTAE-TV, Pittsburgh; WISN-TV, Milwaukee; WBAL-TV, Baltimore; and WDTN-TV in Dayton, Ohio. WDTN-TV was acquired by Hearst in September, 1981. All are affiliates of the ABC Television Network except WBAL, which is a CBS affiliate. Hearst also operates AM and FM radio stations in Pittsburgh, Baltimore and Milwaukee, and an AM station in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Metromedia is one of the nation's leading group broadcasters in television and radio, with five VHF stations, now including WCBV-TV, Boston, two UHF television stations and seven AM and seven FM radio stations in 11 major U.S. markets. Metromedia, which operated KMBC for 20 years, is also a major outdoor advertising company through its Foster & Kleiser division.

Hearst holdings include 15 daily and 30 weekly newspapers, 21 magazines in the United States and United Kingdom, 12 broadcast stations, four book companies, a newspaper feature syndicate, business publishing activities and other media-related companies as well as businesses in ranching, timber, real estate and papermaking.

Rebellion cost more than money

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

HAMA, Syria (AP) — Bulldozers scrape bare the earth where whole neighborhoods once stood. Gaping shell holes and bullet scars mark scores of remaining buildings and the once-bustling streets are nearly deserted.

In February, Syrian troops used artillery and tanks to crash a rebellion in this ancient city of 260,000 which has long been a power base for the Islamic-fundamentalist Moslem Brotherhood opposed to President Hafez Assad's government.

The cost was high. At least 3,000 people were killed, by unofficial Syrian estimates, and thousands more wounded, arrested or forced to flee. But the Syrian army was able to prevent the uprising from spreading to other cities and thus quashed the most serious challenge to the regime since Assad came to power in 1970 via a military coup.

A recent tour of the stricken city revealed that the destruction was far greater than originally reported at the time of the fighting when nearly all reporters were unable to visit Hama.

Western diplomats say the legacy of bitterness may provide fertile ground for the recruiting of Islamic-fundamentalist guerrillas in the future but that the army's object lesson has dealt a crippling blow to the underground movement.

AT THE SAME time, the Hama rebellion has prompted the Syrian government to risk alienation in much of the Arab world by forging strong new ties with the Islamic revolutionary regime in Iran, a predominantly non-Arab nation that is at war with Iraq.

Hama, on the Orontes River 125 miles north of Damascus, the Syrian capital, has yet to recover from the trauma.

In the market along Hamadiyyeh Street, an elderly merchant told a reporter that 85 of his relatives and close friends died in the fighting.

"Before the fighting this street was full of people until midnight," said the merchant. Now, he shrugged, there is no nightlife and very little business.

The merchant and two friends said Syrian government commandos rounded up all the men after the fighting.

"My son is still in jail, but I don't know where," the merchant said, adding that most of his relatives and relatives who were killed died when shellfire collapsed their houses.

A tour of the city indicated about 20 percent of Hama was destroyed and an equal portion was damaged but repairable. A Syrian source said a government study indicated it would cost the equivalent in Syrian lira of about $550 million to rebuild.

EXPLAINING THE harsh measures against the Moslem Brotherhood in Hama, one senior official who declined use of his name, said: "When you have killers who are armed, what are you supposed to do, shake hands? No. Government troops tried as best they could to avoid killing innocents. Some got caught in the middle."

The Hama uprising climaxed a two-year-long campaign of bombings and assassinations that the brotherhood carried out against Assad supporters. In the past six months, car bombs exploded in Damascus outside the air force headquarters, the Prime Ministry building, the Information Ministry and in a residential neighborhood. More than 100 people, nearly all civilians, were killed.

Syrian officials accused the Iraqi government of arming the Moslem Brotherhood and closed its borders with Iraq in late March, shutting off the oil through a pipeline that stretches to the Mediterranean from Baghdad, the Iraqi capital.

"Closing the borders with Iraq was a measure we were obliged to take," Information Minister Ahmed Iskandar Ahmed said in an interview. "We closed the door to any criminal who would try infiltrating into Syria or anybody trying to smuggle in a booby-trapped car."

Iraq was Syria's main source of oil, about 35 million barrels in 1981, and severing all ties with Baghdad over the Hama rebellion forced a major realignment in Syria's foreign policy.

In the wake of Hama, Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam of Syria traveled to Iran and signed a trade protocol insuring Syria of about 60 million barrels of oil annually.

FCC sued to force kids' programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer group is suing the Federal Communications Commission in an attempt to force the agency to require stations to offer programs for children.

The civil suit, filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court by Action for Children's Television, accuses the FCC, Chairman Mark G. Fowler and the other six commissioners of abusing their discretion by not taking final action on a children's television rule. The suit was filed in federal court in Newtonville, Mass., where the consumer group has asked the FCC to require stations to provide a minimum amount of daily programming for children.

The FCC published in early 1980 a notice of proposed rulemaking with five options for improving children's television program. Hearings were held later in 1980 but no final action has been taken.

SALT II will not die easily

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Hearst Feature Service

Washington — Secretary of State Haig told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last week that the unratified SALT II treaty is "dead" but like Mark Twain's rejoinder when he read his own obituary in an Illinois newspaper, the reports of SALT's death may be a tad premature.

No less than three of Haig's predecessors — Henry Kissinger, Edmund Muskie and Cyrus Vance — have called on the Senate to ratify the strategic nuclear arms pact that was signed by President Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev in Vienna in June, 1979.

The treaty set an overall ceiling of 2,250 launchers, which would have required the Russians to destroy 250 nuclear delivery systems by 1985. Although the treaty was five years in the making, Carter was forced to withdraw it from Senate consideration after the Soviets invaded Afghanistan in Dec. 1979.

But even though it was removed from the Senate calendar, the treaty is still technically before the Senate — never have been actually withdrawn by Carter himself. Doubts about Reagan's sincerity on arms control have led several key senators who criticized SALT II in 1979 to suggest they ratify it now.

One of those senators, himself an oft-mentioned candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, John Glenn (D-Ohio), warned that "unless we proceed, and soon, to ratify the SALT II treaty...I think we face the very real prospect of a breakdown in the arms control process and another round of superfluous strategic weapons purchases."

"I never understand why if it's so flawed, it's something they (the Reagan administration) feel they have to abide by," Vance said here. "My guess is it's the Joint Chiefs who recognize that SALT II put very effective limits on the Soviet ability to add multiple warheads to existing missiles."

IN UNUSUALLY blunt language for the mild-mannered former official, Vance told reporters: "If you're going to make progress on further cuts, you have to reach agreement on the essential terms of SALT II. You're not going to get to the second if you don't do the first."

Vance also surprised some people when he said that his conversations with top Soviet officials have convinced him they would accept all the reservations and understandings that the Senate attached to the treaty in 1979 and there even "would be one or two more changes the Soviets would agree to."

"What worries me," the former secretary said, "is that unless you have a very clear affirmation of SALT II, pressures in both countries will build and you'll lose the base" that is required for mutual restraint. Even Haig conceded that Moscow has faithfully abided by the pact.

He told the Senate committee that the Soviets had actually dismantled nine older nuclear submarines in accordance with the requirements of SALT II. Then why is Reagan so bitterly opposed to its ratification?

For one thing, the Republican chief executive made the "fatally flawed" treaty a cornerstone of his attack on Carter during the 1980 presidential campaign. Neither Reagan nor Haig want to suffer political embarrassment at a time when they have put their own arms proposal before the Russians.

So Haig engaged in a little verbal overkill of his own, imploring the Senate to "rally behind" Reagan's new offer of much more dramatic cuts in the nuclear arsenals of both superpowers, warning that ratifying SALT II would sow "massive and instantaneous" confusion in Moscow and among "our allies."

But Reagan also contends the treaty is flawed in substance. Most important, Haig told the Senate committee the 1979 pact would leave the Russians with a major advantage because it would leave them with hundreds of land-based ICBMs much larger than their U.S. counterparts and capable of destroying them.

NOT QUITE true, said Henry Kissinger in a speech in the Hague. He pointed out that SALT II contained no restrictions against the United States building and deploying the new MX missile that is designed to help make America's underground ICBM's less vulnerable to Soviet attack.

Kissinger, who helped draft many of the provisions of SALT II, said he agreed with former opponents, such as Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who now favor ratifying the SALT II treaty. But Kissinger added that three important additions should be attached to the treaty.

— "First, spelling out an American right to build heavy ICBMs equivalent to the Soviets."

He explained that even though the United States has that right, it might be worthwhile to codify it because then "we could offer to trade reductions or even elimination of the MX" for the Soviets dismantling the SS-18, their heaviest missile.

The Newspaper BIBLE

IT'S WAR! ARE YOU PREPARED?

"Put on all of God's armor so that you will be able to stand safe against all strategies and tricks of Satan. For we are not fighting against people made of flesh and blood, but against persons without bodies - the evil rulers of the unseen world, those mighty satanic beings and great evil princes of darkness who rule the world; and against huge numbers of wicked spirits in the spirit world."

So use every piece of God's armor to resist the enemy whenever he attacks, and when it is all over, you will still be standing up.

But to do this, you will need the strong belt of truth and the breastplate of God's approval. Wear shoes that are able to speed you on as you preach the Good News of peace with God. In every battle you will need faith as your shield to stop the fiery arrows aimed at you by Satan. And you will need the helmet of salvation and the sword of the Spirit - which is the Word of God." (Ephesians 6:11-17)

"It is true that I am an ordinary, weak human being, but I don't use human plans and methods to win my battles. I use God's mighty weapons, not those made by men, to knock down the devil's strongholds. These weapons can break down every proud argument against God and every wall that can be built to keep men from finding him. With these weapons I can capture rebels and bring them back to God, and change them into men whose hearts' desire is obedience to Christ." (2 Corinthians 10:3-5)

Glaucoma may be treated with laser, researcher says

By WARREN E. LEARY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The major form of glaucoma, an eye disease that threatens the sight of millions, can be treated with a new type of laser therapy that one day could lead to a cure for the blinding condition, says an eye researcher.

The therapy, which uses laser light beams to scar part of the inner eye, relieves the pressure within the eyeball that leads to blindness and greatly reduces the need of many patients for surgery or constant medication, Dr. James B. Wise said earlier this week.

Wise, of the University of Oklahoma College of Medicine, and other experts said his new approach — called laser trabeculoplasty or LTP — is so successful that many eye specialists around the country are quickly adopting it.

"Because of its simplicity and safety, LTP is rapidly displacing surgery as the treatment of choice for cases of glaucoma uncontrolled by drops," Wise told a seminar sponsored by Research to Prevent Blindness, a voluntary eye research group.

"Because LTP appears to reverse a principal mechanism of glaucoma, in the future it may become something close to the cure for this disease," he added.

Glaucoma is a condition of uncertain cause in which fluid does not drain properly from the eye, causing increased internal pressure. This slowly damages the optic nerve, leading to blindness.

The risk of the disease usually increases with age and millions of people have some form of it, many unknowingly. An estimated 1.6 million Americans are visually impaired by glaucoma and 62,000 are blind from the disease.

The laser treatment is effective against the most common form, called chronic open-angle glaucoma. But it does not work with the congenital form or the so-called closed angle type, in which the angle of the iris in the eye blocks drainage.

Near the front of the eye beneath the cornea, the curved transparent surface, is a ring of spongy tissue called the trabecular meshwork. Fluid constantly produced in the eye normally filters through this tissue into a canal where it leaves the eye.

With glaucoma, this meshwork loses its spongy nature, collapses into the canal and blocks drainage.

Glaucoma sufferers use special eyedrops that promote drainage, but they become less effective with time, Wise said. With severe disease, surgery is the only alternative. A hole is cut in the eye and covered with layers of tissue to create a controlled leak.

In 25 percent of the cases, the leak closes and glaucoma recurs, Wise said, and all patients are in danger of cataracts, bleeding and other complications.

With the laser treatment, an outpatient procedure that takes 15 minutes and costs one-tenth as much as surgery, doctors put a special reflecting contact lens on the eye, Wise said. With a full, magnified view of the meshwork through the lens, doctors fire short laser pulses evenly around the body.

The 60 to 100 burns scar the mesh ring, but do not burn through. This scar tissue contracts and pulls the mesh tighter, opening the drainage channel and reducing pressure, he said.

Wise said almost 85 percent of the 500 eyes he has treated with LTP achieved good pressure control although most still required minimal use of eyedrops afterwards. Between 7 percent and 10 percent of the treatments failed and required surgery, he added.

In groups that have a low success rate with surgery, including black people and those over age 70, more than 90 percent were controlled with LTP, Wise said.

The only significant side effect of treatment was a temporary increase in eye pressure from the burning, but Wise said this could be reduced by dividing the treatment into two or three sessions.
