Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serbs appeared to pull back from Gorazde and allowed new U.N. peacekeepers into the battered enclave late Saturday, averting for now threatened NATO strikes. A top U.N. official said a cease-fire was generally holding.

Serbs earlier persisted in shelling the town hours past a U.N.-mediated noon cease-fire deadline, killing 21 people. The United Nations reportedly turned down a NATO request for clearance to bomb Serb positions.

A spokesman for U.N. chief Boutros Boutros-Ghali said he would approve strikes if the Serbs failed to meet a NATO deadline to cease fire and withdraw 1.9 miles from the town center by 2:01 a.m. today (8:01 p.m. EDT Saturday).

It was not clear if the Serbs had totally complied with NATO demands. But in a statement after the deadline passed, the top U.N. official for former Yugoslavia said the situation had not required air strikes.

"The compliance is quite positive," Yasushi Akashi said in a statement.

Campaign focuses on teen sexual behavior

EDITOR'S NOTE: The package of stories "Parents before their time" calls attention to the consequences of teenage sexual behavior and pregnancies in conjunction with the national White Ribbon Campaign.

Pregnant before prom night.

It happened to hundreds of young Midland women this year.

In fact, an informal survey of local high school nurses indicated that approximately 250 female students reported pregnancies since September, according to Linda Goddard, who conducted the survey.

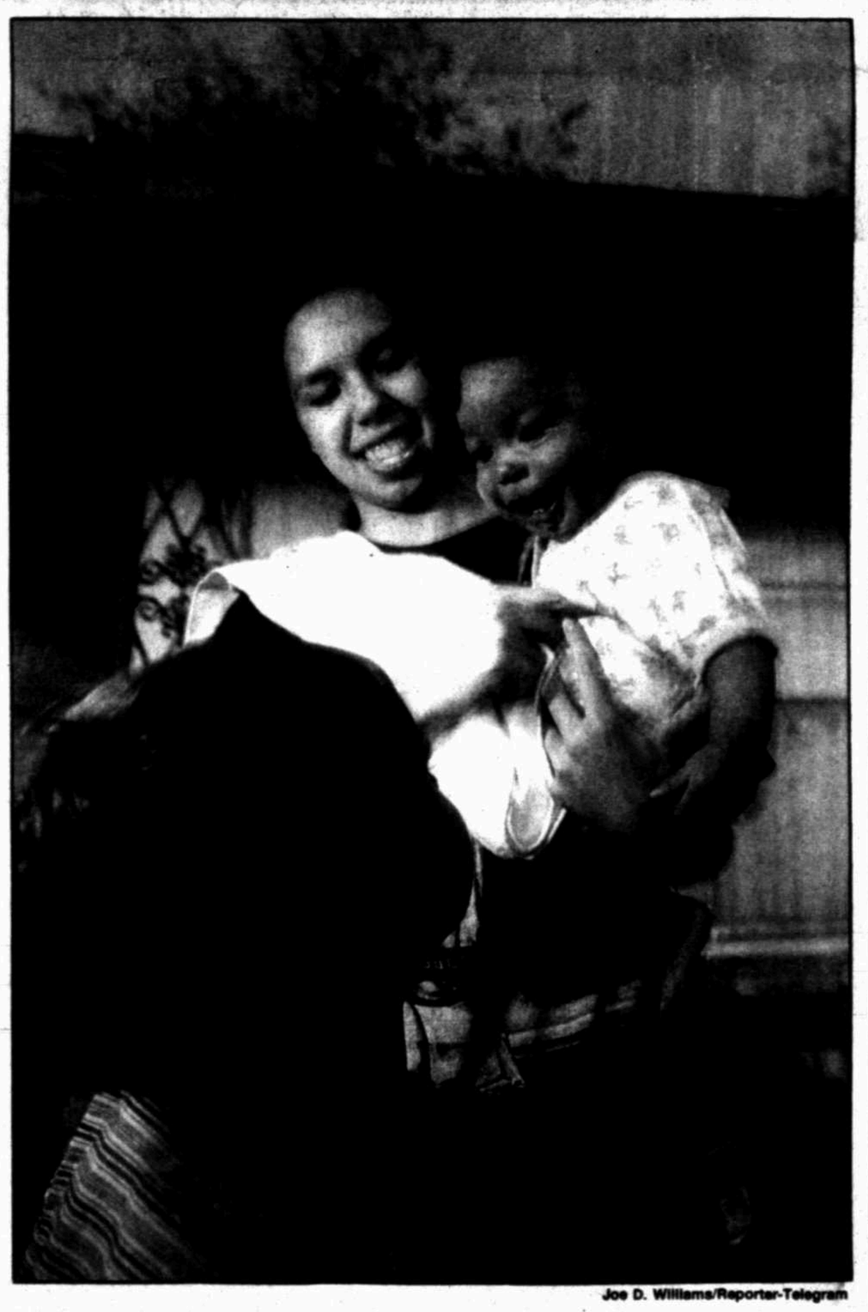

And these are just the young women who went to the nurse's office for one reason or another, said Ms. Goddard, who is president of Christian Life Enrichment (CLER) Ministries, which offers spiritually based human sexuality courses.

Ms. Goddard called nurses at Lee, Midland and Coleman high schools, and both freshman high schools, to get an approximate number of teen pregnancies this school year. (Junior high schools were not contacted.)

Midland Independent School District officials said they didn't have exact records, since reporting pregnancies is a confidentiality issue, but the number "sounded fairly accurate."

To highlight the problem of Graceful and meticulously groomed, when Shelly Trammell speaks candidly about her youth, her wisdom belies her 19 years. Becoming pregnant in her sophomore year at Lee High School, at the age of 15, catapulted her from adolescence to parenthood in the span of a school year.

"I did it all in reverse," she said. "I had a baby, graduated from high school, and have yet to get married."

Rather than just becoming another dropout statistic, Shelly's resolve — combined with her parents' unwavering support — has adult acquaintances describing her as a success story.

Living with her parents, Shelly is majoring in sociology at Midland College, working full time in a restaurant and caring for her 3-year-old daughter in the evenings.

Though she wouldn't trade her daughter for anything in the world, if she had to do it all over again, Shelly said she would delay

First lady forges whole new role for political wife

By Jill Lawrence

■ Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barbara Bush talked about home and hearth. Hillary Rodham Clinton talked about hypocrisy and margin calls. Within hours of each other on national TV, they defined the distance between yesterday's first lady and the breakthrough model of today.

"George broils a mean steak," Barbara Bush said Friday in typically homey remarks to Republicans at the Nixon Library in Yorba Linda, Calif. Privacy is wonderful, she said, and so is the couple's newly built Houston home.

"It's our dream house. It's our last house. It's our 31st," said Mrs. Bush, a traditional political wife who stood by her man for all 31 moves. Now, she told her friendly audience, "we have more broken furniture and chipped china than anyone else in America."

Nixon: Watergate to share history pages with accomplishments

By Tom Raum
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon will always be remembered as the first president forced to resign. But this dubious distinction will share pages in U.S. history books with the bold policy strokes that marked his 5½-year presidency.

AP Laserphoto

Richard Nixon, shown here in 1993, died Friday at the age of 81./Related story/6A

Clearly, Nixon's overtures to China and the "detente" he achieved with the Soviet Union will long be viewed as Nixon's prime international policy achievements. But he also left a rich legacy of activist environmental and social programs.

Watergate aside, Nixon's accomplishments already are being viewed more substantially by many historians than those of the arch-rival who defeated him in his 1960 bid for the presidency.

S. Africans to cast historic ballots this week

By Bill Keller
N.Y. Times News Service

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — For decades it was a distant dream. Then for a few years it seemed inevitable. Only in the closing days has it hit South Africans with the force of an electric charge that it is real.

Over the next few days, a black majority that has grown up enslaved by a misbegotten white ideology will become full citizens of their own country. Beginning Tuesday with prisoners and the bedridden, and continuing for two more days, they will vote.

What once seemed a confrontation of irreconcilable forces has ended in the most unusual collaboration Africa has ever seen.

On Wednesday, a state that not long ago ranked its populace by the thickness of their lips and the curl of their hair will submit to a constitution so protective of an egalitarian ideal that it prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex or gender, though no one here seems to know the distinction.

On May 10, unless fate intervenes or the polls are wildly wrong, Nelson Mandela, a man who languished 27 years in prison for the treason of considering himself his jailors' equal, will be inaugurated as president.

And suddenly there will be no country left on the African continent that is ruled by a white minority.

But that is only half, and perhaps the less amazing half, of what will transpire this week in South Africa. For what once seemed a confrontation of irreconcilable forces has ended in the most unusual collaboration Africa has ever seen.

Who among the liberation fighters could have imagined that, when white dominion ended, the outgoing president would not depart for exile or irrelevance, but would step into the job of vice president?

Or that the victors might be obliged to offer seats in the cabinet to such foes as Mangosuthu G. Buthelezi, whose Zulu nationalist followers have been embroiled in a 10-year power struggle with Mandela's followers, and Gen. Constandt Viljoen, the white separatist leader?

Or that the white chief of the army and the white finance minister would be serious candidates to retain their jobs?

All of these are possible under a power-sharing formula crafted as a five-year expedient to heal the wounds of racial division and especially to reassure whites that they will not become the new oppressed.

The bargain has not seriously diminished the popular elation in black townships. But for many who endured prison or exile to end apartheid, it tints the victory with a wistful ambivalence, and a sense that the battle is not entirely finished.

"I never thought we would negotiate with the ones who took our youth and our lives," said Thandi Modise-Mkhwanazi, 35, who was a teen-age guerrilla and spent nine years in prison. She is now deputy president of the African National Congress Women's League.

"I look at de Klerk and Buthelezi with bitterness," she said. "They say 'forgive and forget,' but some of us are carrying scars too deep. Children who are still fighting us because we had to leave them and go off to jail.

"One looks at the victory and asks, was this worth so much blood? So many lives had to be lost for a government of national unity?"

"It's good because we can take the best from all the different parties," she conceded. "But it's not the kind of victory some of us dreamt about."

When the African National Congress was founded in 1912, reasonableness and Gandhi-style protest were the vogue. By 1944, when three young rebels — Nelson Mandela, Oliver Tambo and Walter Sisulu — founded the ANC Youth League, a generation was running out of patience.

Rwandan rebels declare unilateral cease-fire before peace talks

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Rwandan rebels declared a unilateral cease-fire in their blood-soaked homeland on Saturday, hours before peace talks were scheduled in neighboring Tanzania, a Tanzanian official and news reports said.

The rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front issued a statement saying the cease-fire would begin at midnight Monday, said a Tanzanian foreign ministry official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

He said the cease-fire was conditional on the government stopping all killings in areas under its control within four days. The official spoke by telephone from the northern Tanzania town of Arusha, where talks were to begin late today.

Abdul Kabia, a U.N. spokesman in Rwanda's capital, Kigali, said he had been informed of the cease-fire by a Rwandan diplomat and was awaiting written confirmation.

Kabia, speaking by telephone, said there was no gunfire reported in Kigali all day Saturday but declined to "draw any conclusions from that as things here change very quickly."

An estimated 100,000 people have been killed in two weeks of bloodletting between the majority Hutus, who dominate the government and the military, and the minority Tutsis who form the bulk of the rebel force.

As many as 2 million people have fled their homes and thousands more are barricaded in buildings to escape the violence, which began a day after the presidents of Rwanda and Burundi died in a mysterious plane crash in Kigali on April 6.

In Brussels, Belgian radio quoted a rebel official as saying the decision to declare a cease-fire was taken in response to international pressure.

"The cease-fire should allow humanitarian aid to reach the tens of thousands of victims of the Rwandan conflict," the radio quoted the unidentified official as saying.

The Tanzanian official said the rebel statement was signed by rebel chairman Alex Kanyarangwe and released in Arusha.

Officials of the Rwandan government, the insurgents and the United Nations in Arusha were reported in closed-door consultations and unavailable for comment.

President Ali Hassan Mwinyi of Tanzania early this week invited the warring parties for talks to seek ways of ending the bloodbath.

Last August, the Rwandan government and the insurgents signed an agreement in Arusha on broad-based rule to end a three-year war but failed to implement the accord once back home.

Private aid agencies have repeatedly said they are ready to send food and medicine as soon as security improved and were angered by a U.N. decision Thursday to slash the number of peacekeepers to 270, down from a peak of 2,500.

Singapore seems to hold firm stance on caning to come

SINGAPORE (NYT) — With a presidential decision nearing over whether to excuse an American teenager from a flogging for vandalism, the government on Saturday appeared to rule out leniency in a rigid defense of the cane as a deterrent to crime.

"We do not think it is unusual or cruel," said Home Affairs Minister Wong Kan Seng. In a specific reference to vandalism, he said "In Singapore, the culprit will be caned if convicted."

Wong, whose ministry oversees police and prisons, said "nobody takes any joy," in meting out floggings or other tough forms of punishment. "But if it has to be done, it must be done."

'We do not think it is unusual or cruel. . .In Singapore, the culprit will be caned if convicted.'
Official

In a speech to note the opening of a new prison facility here, Wong said corporal punishment is a major factor in keeping crime down here. And, in a sharp rebuke of U.S. criticism of Singapore's use of the cane, Wong added, "It is absurd that societies so stricken with crime should attempt to apply their standards on us and teach us what to do."

Wong's comments came amid a mounting row between Singapore and the United States over this island republic's plans to lash American teenager Michael Peter Fay six times on the bare buttocks with a rattan cane as punishment for spraying paint on two cars.

Caning is an excruciatingly painful punishment that typically splits the skin, causes extensive bleeding and leaves permanent scars.

Fay, who is also serving a four-month jail sentence for the offense, has asked President Ong Teng Cheong to commute the caning portion of his sentence. A decision appears likely next week.

President Clinton, the American Medical Association, the American Bar Association and a host of human rights groups have written to Ong in support of Fay's clemency appeal, contending that the caning sentence is excessively harsh.

Fay, of Dayton, Ohio, has said since his arrest last October that he has never sprayed paint on any cars.

He pleaded guilty last month to two counts of spray-painting cars, however, as part of a plea bargain arrangement his lawyers hoped would spare him the mandatory caning proscribed by Singapore's vandalism laws. Courts rejected that approach.

Today, slight chance of rain

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny to partly cloudy skies with a slight chance of thundershowers, winds south to southwest 15-25 mph and gusty, and a high between 85-90, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight is expected to be mostly cloudy, with a 20 percent chance of rain and a low between 60-65.

Monday's forecast is cloudy in the morning, becoming partly cloudy and windy in the late afternoon, with a high between 85-90, the NWS said.

Saturday's high was 55, compared to the record high of 98, set in 1989. The record low for today's date is 37, set in 1968.

STATE

Much of Texas was gray, rainy and cloudy Saturday, and the National Weather Service expected those conditions to continue today.

Afternoon showers and thunderstorms were reported in parts of West Texas, but the region was mostly sunny. Winds were from the southwest at 15 to 25 mph, with higher gusts.

West Texas should be cloudy today, with a chance of showers and thunderstorms east of the mountains and in Big Bend. Lows were expected in the 50s and highs in the 90s.

North Texas was partly cloudy with temperatures in the 70s and 80s. The region should by partly cloudy today, with a slight chance of thunderstorms in the west and south. Highs should be in the 80s and lows were expected in the 60s.

Showers and thunderstorms developed in western parts of South Texas, and the Coastal Plains as South Texas had a cloudy day with temperatures mostly in the 80s. Today should see continued cloudiness, with a chance of scattered showers and thunderstorms. Today's highs should be in the 90s.

NATION

A strong snowstorm interrupted springtime Saturday in the mountains of northern California, while parts of the Northeast chilled with record cold and winds gusted across the Southwest.

The storm in the West could bring severe thunderstorms and tornadoes to the central part of the nation on today and Monday, the National Weather Service said. It also threatened to produce heavy snow in California's Sierra Nevada.

QUIET: Serbs pull back from Gorazde

(From 1A)

"The cease-fire is generally holding" and the approximately 200 newly arrived U.N. troops in Gorazde were deploying "between Serb and Bosnian Muslim forces."

The peacekeepers were deploying on a perimeter 1.9 miles from Gorazde center, said Col. Richard Pernod, a U.N. spokesman in Sarajevo.

French Gen. Andre Soubirou, the U.N. commander for Sarajevo, reported from Gorazde that the town was calm shortly after the NATO deadline elapsed, according to Pernod.

A town official, Esad Ohranovic, reported by ham radio that only small-arms fire was heard after the deadline and that Bosnian army scouts had detected some Serb weapons withdrawals.

The NATO ultimatum, issued Friday, threatened air strikes unless Serbs immediately halted their assault on Gorazde, a U.N.-declared "safe area" where a three-week Serb offensive has killed more than 700 people.

NATO also demanded that the Serbs withdraw their forces and weapons 1.9 miles from the center of Gorazde and allow U.N. peacekeepers in. Serb leaders later agreed to a U.N.-brokered cease-fire, beginning at noon Saturday, and to a withdrawal by midnight Saturday (6 p.m. EDT).

On Saturday, the Bosnian Serbs initially continued to test the resolve of the world community.

Aid workers in Gorazde reported heavy shelling before and after the cease-fire deadline. The hospital and a building housing local U.N. staff were hit, they said.

Ohranovic, the town official, said U.N. medical workers who entered with the U.N. convoy had gone to Gorazde's hospital to deliver desperately needed medicines.

Spokesman Kris Janowski of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees said 21 people were killed and 53 wounded in Gorazde between 8 a.m. and 7 p.m. Saturday. That brought the causalty toll in the offensive to 715 dead and 1,970 wounded.

But U.N. military observers in Gorazde reported late Saturday "that military activity seems to be dropping off quite appreciably," said a U.N. spokesman in Sarajevo, Maj. Dacre Holloway.

He said aerial reconnaissance showed that Serb equipment "seems to be moving from the Gorazde area." It was not known if the apparent pull-back would satisfy NATO demands.

Later Saturday, five major shells hit at about 9 p.m., Janowski quoted reports from the town as saying. The reports said one Gorazde neighborhood and the villages of Habjari and Kazagici were on fire.

Serb leaders met for a second day with U.N. officials in the Yugoslav capital of Belgrade and agreed to allow the deployment of peacekeepers 1.9 miles from the town center, said a U.N. statement.

They agreed that as soon as the peacekeepers were in place to monitor the cease-fire, all heavy weapons would be placed under U.N. control or withdrawn "out of range" of Gorazde.

The agreement was reached in talks Yasushi Akashi, the senior U.N. official in former Yugoslavia, held with President Slobodan Milosevic of Serbia, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic and his military commander, Gen. Ratko Mladic.

"With cooperation of everybody who participated in these discussions, we have been able to avert a major crisis," Akashi said.

Serbs have taken most of the Gorazde pocket in eastern Bosnia, which is home to about 65,000 residents and refugees. There are virtually no medical supplies left in Gorazde, and shelling has wrecked the hospital's operating rooms.

A NATO source in Brussels, Belgium said as the noon deadline for a cease-fire loomed, the alliance "asked the U.N. for authorization to launch air strikes, given that the shelling had resumed.

So far, we are still waiting for the green light from the U.N. We must have that." The source spoke on condition of anonymity.

In Washington, a U.S. administration official said that the United Nations had argued for the delay because they felt the NATO threat was "having an effect" and the Serbs were moving belatedly to comply.

Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic angrily suggested that U.N. delays were causing more deaths in Gorazde.

Either the U.N. commander in Bosnia or NATO's commander for southern Europe can call for air strikes, but both have to agree before they are carried out.

The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug said Serb units claimed they were "forced to retaliate" for a Muslim attack on the east bank of the Drina River, which divides Gorazde. The Serbs claim that side of the river as theirs.

Countless cease-fires have collapsed in Bosnia's two-year-old war, but this one was given a better chance because of NATO's threat and the participation of more major players in the truce agreement.

WIFE: First lady rewrites her political role

(From 1A)

Clinton, fielding inquiries on her past investments, business deals and legal career at a full-scale White House news conference. "It's a little difficult for us as a country, maybe, to make the transition," Mrs. Clinton said of her approach to the job.

Indeed. Other first couples have his-and-her bath towels; this one had his-and-her press conferences, within an hour of each other, in separate rooms at the White House.

Mrs. Clinton said Eleanor Roosevelt had held 340 news conferences while she was first lady. But Geraldine Ferraro's 1984 attempt to clarify her family's finances was probably the session that most resembled Mrs. Clinton's Whitewater interrogation.

Ferraro, then the Democratic candidate for vice president, submitted to nearly two hours of questions about her taxes, her campaign finance records, her husband's real estate dealings, the family's net worth, and other financial issues. She was calm and forceful, and she saved her spot on the ticket.

The consequences of Mrs. Clinton's pathbreaking foray are bound to be less clear-cut.

The controversy over the Clintons' long-ago real estate investment and its ties to a failed savings and loan is exacting some cost. A U.S. News and World Report poll released Friday found a third of Americans believe Mrs. Clinton has hurt her husband's presidency — twice as many as a year ago. And four in 10 said she hasn't been truthful about the family's finances.

In the short term, Mrs. Clinton's polished, conciliatory news conference could result in the same type of popularity rebound her husband experienced after he held his clear-the-air-on-Whitewater session earlier this year.

But it is in the longer term that it's likely to have more impact, particularly if she meant what she said at the end. "Could we do this again?" someone asked. "I think — yeah, it sounds like fun," Mrs. Clinton replied.

After a few first lady news conferences, some of them on substantial, high-stakes issues such as health reform, the idea of a female president may come to seem inevitable rather than unimaginable.

There is a conservative faction bent on convincing Americans that Hillary Clinton already is running their country. Perhaps that's why Mrs. Clinton wore pink on Friday, and spoke in a formal dining room seated in a chair, rather than standing before a podium in a more traditional business setting.

Perhaps that's also why she made her move the same day the president was speaking out on a critical international issue, the Bosnian war. And made a point of noting her unfamiliarity with news conference procedure. "How does my husband ever make these choices? These are hard choices," she giggled as questioners clamored to be recognized.

Mrs. Clinton may also have tried to minimize the effect of her news conference by choosing to have it on one of the busiest news days in recent memory. Did she think, or perhaps hope, she'd be overlooked?

Not likely. Some people revile her and others revere her, but nobody ignores her. She's a transitional figure, well aware of the complications that brings.

"We don't fit easily into a lot of pre-existing categories," Mrs. Clinton said Friday of herself and her husband. "I came to this role having worked my entire life. I started working in the summers when I was 13. I worked through college; I worked through law school. And after I was married, I continued to work. And after my daughter was born . . . I worked," she said.

She was independent. She made decisions. And she would be herself in the White House. "I'm trying to find my way through it," Mrs. Clinton said. "Trying to figure out how best to be true to myself, and how to fulfill my responsibilities to my husband and my daughter and the country."

LEGACY: Nixon to have his place in history

(From 1A)

Democrat John F. Kennedy.

"He'll be remembered as one of the significant presidents of the century — both for good and for bad," said Bruce Buchanan, a political scientist at the University of Texas.

There is no denying that he will go down as one of the most fascinating and complex politicians of U.S. history.

"His contribution is really remarkable," said William P. Rogers, Clinton's first secretary of state and now a New York lawyer.

"He almost single-handedly made it possible for China to re-enter the world community. At the same time, he was able to maintain delicate balance with the Soviet Union. He did it with shrewdness and perseverance."

Even those savaged politically by Nixon give him high marks.

"The opening to China and the establishment of detente were his two most historic achievements," said former Sen. George McGovern, the South Dakota Democrat whom Nixon trounced in his 1972 re-election landslide.

And while McGovern cautioned that "it's a little risky to try to evaluate someone historically" so soon, he said Nixon "went a great way toward restoring himself as a respected figure, especially on foreign policy" after leaving office.

'I think history will treat Nixon kindly. The Watergate business will recede. People will see he was a person who had very big ambitions for improvement in policy.'

—Herbert Stein

Nixon's presidency also will be identified with many domestic initiatives that do not square with the image of the hardline conservative champion of the "silent majority."

Community block grants and the housing program that helps subsidize the rents of poor people bear his stamp, as does the indexing of Social Security benefits to inflation.

Nixon waged a frontal assault on inflation by imposing wage and price controls. He created the Environmental Protection Agency and won adoption of two landmark environmental laws — the Clean Water and Clean Air Acts.

His revenue-sharing program was an innovative way of aiding strapped local governments without bureaucratic red tape. He lent his support to legislation that expanded the food stamp, school milk and Women Infants and Children welfare programs.

His attempt to get Congress to enact a national employer-mandate health insurance program preceded President Clinton's efforts by more than two decades.

"I think history will treat Nixon kindly. The Watergate business will recede. People will see he was a person who had very big ambitions for improvement in policy," said economist Herbert Stein, chairman of Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers.

"As time goes by, the thing that people will remember about Nixon is here was a guy who was never loved and yet who managed to put a lot of stuff through Congress, who kept coming back again and again from defeat," said Lyn Nofziger, who worked for both Presidents Nixon and Reagan.

Still, there was the dark side of Nixon. And the Watergate scandal will remain the first reference to Nixon in most history books.

In the end, Republican members of Congress had to persuade Nixon to resign — rather than face certain impeachment for his role in the Watergate burglary coverup and other government misdeeds.

"One side of Nixon is the highly skillful political leader. The other side is a mysteriously flawed person. And this was known throughout his entire career," said Erwin Hargrove, a presidential historian at Vanderbilt University. "And for that reason, Nixon will never be in the American canon of great presidents."

But Stephen Hess, a speechwriter for Nixon in the 1960s who worked in the early Nixon White House, predicted Nixon would be the second most written-about president of the 20th century after Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Nixon "cared a great deal about his place in history," Hess said. "That's probably why he kept tapes."

European travelers anxiously wait for opening of Channel Tunnel

By Patrick McDowell and Dirk Beveridge
Associated Press

CALAIS, France — At last, the Chunnel is ready to go. Maybe.

One day this spring, when the BBC and French radio reported yet another delay in the opening of the Channel Tunnel, British day-trippers just off the ferry rolled their eyes at the fifth postponement in a year.

"So what's wrong with it this time?" said James Kaczmarek, a heating engineer from western England. "The toilets aren't working, I suppose."

Starting dates have been altered so often — because of disputes with contractors, changes in train specifications, slow delivery of rail cars — that few people take them seriously any longer.

The latest delay, said Andre Benard, the tunnel's top man in France, was due to the slow pace of safety tests on computers, alarms and train communications. He would not set a new date, thus saving himself the possible embarrassment of another cancellation.

Everything seems ready, despite the postponements: The tunnels are dug, the tracks laid and hundreds of silvery rail cars and engines fill the yard near the Chunnel mouth in Calais.

President Francois Mitterrand of France and Queen Elizabeth II of Britain plan to formally open the tunnel May 6 even if it isn't ready for passengers.

Eurotunnel, the operator, hopes shuttles carrying commercial trucks between Calais and Folkestone, England, will be operating by then. Rail shuttles for motorists and their cars will come later. There will be no driving through the Chunnel.

The first "bullet" trains should be zipping passengers between Paris and London by June or July, but full service is unlikely before September.

Some problems lurk down the line.

Construction costs of nearly $15 billion were more than double the original estimates and the tunnel's top British executive, Sir Alastair Morton, has predicted Eurotunnel will be broke around inauguration time. Soon, shareholders will be asked to invest hundreds of millions more.

Britons, already skittish over Irish Republican Army bombings, worry that the Chunnel could become a target. Eurotunnel will not reveal all its security arrangements, but notes that the project was built in an era of terrorism with security in mind.

And one more question: Can the Chunnel take enough of the market from ferries and airlines to earn a profit?

Whatever the eventual result, the inauguration ceremony will symbolize an unprecedented union of the two peoples who share the strip of choppy water that carried William the Conqueror to England but frustrated Napoleon and Hitler.

"We're not an island anymore, we're Europeans," said Mike Hanks of Kent, the county on the British side of the tunnel. "We're supposed to like each other."

Anti-Chinese riots break out in Indonesia

SINGAPORE (NYT) — Anti-Chinese riots in Indonesia have led to one death and have alarmed government and business leaders who fear that the violence could spread to other parts of the vast Southeast Asian nation, which has an economy dominated by ethnic Chinese families and a work force consisting mainly of ethnic Malays.

The riots began the week before last in Medan, Indonesia's third largest city, paralyzing the area for several days as thousands of laborers took to the streets, demanding higher wages and an explanation for the mysterious death last month of a union activist.

On April 15, an ethnic Chinese factory owner, Kwok Joe Lip, 53, was stoned and beaten to death in his car as he tried to drive to his factory in hopes of protecting it from the crowds of rioters in Medan. More than 100 shops and businesses owned by ethnic Chinese families in the city were said to have been vandalized.

Tuesday, thousands of looters were reported to have descended with machetes and iron picks on a downtown shopping mall owned by Chinese.

The ethnic Chinese, who make up only about 3 percent of the population of Indonesia, quickly became the target of the demonstrators, as they have in years past.

Leaflets that circulated among the crowds described the wealth of ethnic Chinese families and said that they were exploiting Indonesian factory workers, who are mostly of ethnic Malay stock.

The success of the Chinese is widely envied — and resented — in Indonesia, an archipelago of 180 million people and the fourth most populous nation on earth. The average annual per capita income is about $600.

World leaders remember Nixon positively

Associated Press

Russians, Chinese, French, Israelis, Indians praise Nixon's foreign-policy moves.

Leaders worldwide lauded Richard Nixon for his bold foreign policy moves, with some of America's Cold War enemies most warm in their praise.

China's Communist leaders hailed Nixon, who died Friday, as a man of "strategic foresight and political courage" in messages of condolences.

Chinese President Jiang Zemin and Premier Li Peng praised Nixon for his 1972 breakthrough visit to Beijing that began the rapprochement between China and the United States, and for his efforts to improve relations even after he resigned. His last visit was in April 1993.

Nixon also was warmly remembered in Russia. President Boris Yeltsin said he was "one of the first major world politicians who have understood Russia and understood what it was fighting for."

Yeltsin had refused to meet with Nixon during his 10-day trip to Russia last month because the former president had met with some of Yeltsin's political opponents.

But Nixon is credited with establishing the policy of detente toward the Soviet Union during his presidency and, in recent years, with pushing for U.S. aid for Russia.

Even India, whose relations with the United States reached an all-time low during Nixon's administration, commended the former president for taking bold steps in international affairs.

"Although President Nixon's term was marked by a certain controversy, he was well known in international affairs as having been courageous enough to take bold steps such as normalization of relations with China and steps towards East-West detente," Foreign Ministry spokesman Shiv Shankar Mukherjee said.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, who was ambassador to the United States during Nixon's presidency, praised his support of Israel in the 1973 Yom Kippur War "in the face of the opposition of most of the world."

"I am convinced that history will recall the great role he played on the international scene," French President Francois Mitterrand said in extending condolences to his family.

Italy's president, Oscar Luigi Scalfaro, said on behalf of his country: "In these sad circumstances, I would like to acknowledge my deep-felt respect for the statesman, for his constant work in holding up the principles of democracy, and of peace, and for his service to the well being of the people."

The secretary-general of the United Nations, Boutros Boutros-Ghali, extending his condolences, called Nixon's impact in international affairs "especially significant."

Sir Edward Heath, who was Britain's prime minister in 1970-74, hailed Nixon's diplomatic skills.

"He discussed policies with all those likely to be affected and took into account their views. One never felt one had been stamped on or ignored," he told BBC radio.

Rising interest rates make it costlier to use credit cards, buy cars

■ Federal Reserve Board engineers rate increases to ease inflation (keep overall prices lower), analysts say.

By Rick Gladstone
AP business writer

NEW YORK — It's now costlier than just a few months ago to get a mortgage, finance a new car, borrow against the value of your home and shop with a credit card.

The reason is that interest, the price lenders charge for borrowed money, has been rising since early February after falling for five years, a tidal shift engineered by the Federal Reserve Board.

The nation's central bank has said higher rates are needed to arrest the potential for higher inflation, the syndrome of price spirals that historically has followed rising prosperity in the economy.

But hold on. Are higher rates getting painful? Are legions of homebuyers scrapping plans because they can't afford the monthly payments? Are showroom dealers lamenting over unsold lotfuls of cars and trucks? Are higher borrowing costs hurting corporate profits and discouraging expansion plans?

Not yet, at least. Sales of cars and homes have been surging. Consumers are generally more optimistic. Most businesses are making more money than they did a year ago, judging from the latest spate of quarterly earnings reports.

The rise in interest rates is not only slight but remains largely an abstraction outside the world of the financial markets. Moreover, forecasters say it would take a much higher spike in rates over a much longer period to lead to a recession or even a significant economic slowdown.

"It's going to take time for higher rates to negatively influence the economy," said David Lereah, chief economist at the Mortgage Bankers Association, a Washington trade group.

It took years for the tonic of lower interest rates to help the economy recover from the 1990-91 recession by making borrowing and spending more affordable. Conversely, Lereah said, in the Fed's effort to control inflation, "the same thing is going to happen when rates are going up."

That doesn't mean the impact of higher rates hasn't been noticed. For consumers, perhaps the most visible arena of influence is in home lending, where fewer people may want to shop for mortgages as they get more expensive.

HSH Associates, a financial publishing company in Butler, N.J., that tracks mortgage trends, says a 30-year fixed-rate mortgage rate averaged 8.67 percent last week vs. 7.08 percent just before the Federal Reserve began nudging rates up in early February.

For a $100,000 mortgage, that translates into $781 a month vs. $671 a month, or $110 a month more in payments. Most lenders say monthly payments can't exceed a third of your gross income — which means you need an extra $330 a month, or extra $3,960 a year in gross income, at the higher rate.

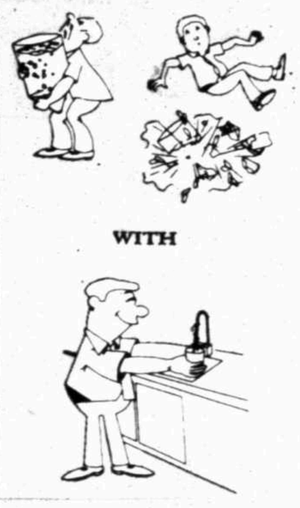

"It certainly can put a crimp in your ability to qualify. That can make a considerable difference," said Keith T. Gumbinger, an HSH Associates analyst. "Every rise in rates cuts some portion of the market out."

Homebuilding, one of the most interest-rate-sensitive industries and a barometer of future economic activity, has shown some faint signs of weakness from these higher rates as well.

Astronauts fly NASA jets to tourist spots

Astronauts claim expensive flights to Fort Lauderdale, New Orleans, Colorado Springs were training related.

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Astronauts at the Johnson Space Center in Houston have flown two-seater supersonic jets to Colorado Springs on weekends during ski season as well as to New Orleans and Fort Lauderdale, Fla., according to the NASA's inspector general.

While the astronauts said they were fulfilling the flight time required of them each month, some lawmakers criticized the flights to resort cities, which cost about $2,000 an hour.

Sen. Joseph I. Lieberman, the Connecticut Democrat who is chairman of the Governmental Affairs Subcommittee on Government Regulation and Information, said the audit report, which was prepared by the inspector general and made public in February, raises questions about the purpose of the trip.

"There ought to be more comprehensive regulations and requirements to document the flights that are being taken to make sure they are solely for proficiency training and not personal use," the Senator said.

Carla Corcoran, deputy assistant inspector general of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, who oversaw the audit, conceded that the inspector general's office has no evidence o "joyriding."

Nonetheless, the report noted that NASA does not "monitor and periodically review the justification for flights not directly associated with mission activities." As a result, the office said, the jets "are vulnerable to potential misuse."

Ten- to 12-hour weekend flights on the T-38 Talons, two-seater supersonic training jets, are unproductive, according to some NASA officials and experts outside the space agency.

"The way to get really proficient is to fly a little bit at a time," said Steve Holly, NASA's deputy director of flight crew operations. "To fly 10 or 12 hours that day — it's very efficient from a time-management standpoint, but it's not the best for training."

Charles J. Searock, a retired Air Force lieutenant general who is now executive vice president of AirCorp, an airport development company in New Jersey, agreed with Holly. "We've proven in our Air Force and in the Israeli Air Force that many short-duration flights are better because there's more activity."

The space agency requires its pilots to log 15 hours a month of proficiency flying, and most astronauts satisfy their requirements by flying near the Johnson Space Center or on daily missions to military bases.

The astronauts did not provide details about the resort flights in their log books. The inspector general's report suggested that NASA make periodic reviews of log entries and strengthen "internal controls" of all proficiency flights taken overnight or on weekends.

Tonya Harding sues ex-husband to get vehicles

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Figure skater Tonya Harding is back in court, this time in a fight with her ex-husband over a pickup and a motorcycle.

She filed a lawsuit Friday against Jeff Gillooly seeking the return of a Ford pickup and a Honda motorcycle, or $12,500. She also seeks $30,000 in punitive damages.

An injunction was issued barring any sale of the vehicles. A hearing was scheduled for Friday.

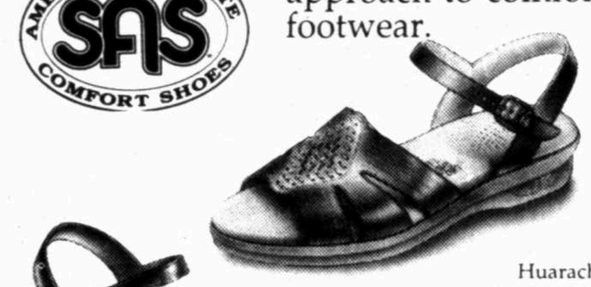

The lawsuit said Harding bought the vehicles last year, using her own money. In November, the motorcycle was parked behind her mother-in-law's house for the winter. In January, the couple split during the investigation of the knee -bashing of Harding's rival, Nancy Kerrigan.

Harding said Gillooly refuses to return the pickup and she has been unable to retrieve the motorcycle.

Harding pleaded guilty last month to conspiring to hinder prosecution in the attack on Kerrigan. She was placed on three years' probation. Gillooly pleaded guilty to engineering the plot and is free pending sentencing July 5.

Judge reinstates principal who was suspended over school prayer

JACKSON, Miss. (NYT) — A judge, faulting "the loss of moral values in public education," on Friday ordered the reinstatement of a school principal who was suspended because he let a student read a prayer over the school intercom.

The principal, Bishop Knox, became the center of an uproar after he was dismissed in November. Hundreds of people attended rallies, students walked out of many schools around the state, and politicians, including Gov. Kirk Fordice, spoke out in favor of school prayer. The state legislature passed a law allowing prayer initiated by students, even though some lawmakers expressed doubts about its constitutionality and predicted court challenges.

The Jackson school district maintained that the reading, at Wingfield High School, violated the Supreme Court ban on organized prayer in public schools. But in the face of the protests the school board voted in December to lessen Knox's punishment to suspension without pay until July 1.

In his ruling on Friday, Judge Chet Dillard of Hinds County Chancery Court suggested that the Constitution's authors did not intend to ban school prayer.

"In just a relatively few years, beginning in the '60s, it has become a constitutional right to have an abortion, avoid the death penalty for at least 10 years, but unconstitutional to pray in school except under very limited circumstances," the judge wrote. "There is a valid argument being made that the attempt to prevent the freedom to offer prayer in school has led to the loss of moral values in public education."

Lawyers for the school district filed an appeal with State Supreme Court. In an interview Saturday, one lawyer expressed surprise at the ruling, saying that the issue before the judge was not school prayer itself but the narrow one of whether Knox had failed to follow district directives.

"He missed the whole point," the lawyer, Jim Keith, said. "This is obviously a personal agenda of the judge to put forth his opinions with regard to violence, abortion, HIV, you name it. He knew what he was doing and he just missed the whole point."

The judge ordered the school board to draw up "guidelines" that are "consistent" with his decision — perhaps a mandate to institute prayer — and the board had no choice but to appeal, Keith said.

Students hold 'protest prom' in support of interracial dating

By Ken Berger
Associated Press

WEDOWEE, Ala — Prom night is supposed to be unforgettable for fine gowns, corsages, tuxedos and dancing the night away. In small-town Alabama, interracial dating split Saturday's big event in two.

Trouble began when the principal of Randolph County High School threatened to cancel the prom to prevent black students and white students from dating.

Principal Hulond Humphries was suspended, then reinstated by the school board two weeks later. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Southern Christian Leadership Conference organized a student boycott of classes and put together a protest prom.

"We believe we're going to have the prettiest, nicest prom in Randolph County," said the Rev. Henry Sterling of the SCLC.

The controversy began in February, when Humphries, who is white, told a school assembly that he would cancel the prom if interracial couples planned to attend.

ReVonda Bowen, 16, stood up and asked who should she date, given that her father is white and her mother is black.

Bowen recounted Humphries' response: "That's just it. You're mom and dad made a mistake, having you as a mixed race child."

She planned to show up with her white boyfriend at the school prom, then attend the protest prom, Sterling said. (She has a lawsuit seeking damages pending against against Humphries and the county school board).

Humphries, in his 25th year as school principal, has not commented publicly on the matter. Reached at his home Friday night, he again declined comment.

His supporters have said his comments were misinterpreted or taken out of context and were a result of his frustration with a series of student fights.

The 680-student school has 422 white students and 258 black students. The 20,000 person county is about 76 percent white and 24 percent black.

The media was barred from the high school dance and the theme was a surprise.

"The media has been a nightmare for the kids," school secretary Linda Fincher said. "They had a meeting and their No. 1 request was 'Keep the media away.'"

About 50 couples were expected, she said. Sterling said no protests were planned.

Last month, Humphries' supporters formed a 100-car motorcade and waved signs at a rally in Wedowee (pronounced Wah-dow'-ee).

The theme of the protest prom, "Love Forever," was chosen by students, said Sterling, who expected about 25 couples.

"In Wedowee, and probably all of small-town America, the prom is the biggest thing of the year."

Victim of U.S. friendly fire gets military burial

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — First Lt. Laura Ashley Piper, whose helicopter was mistakenly shot down over Iraq, was buried Saturday near the same Air Force chapel where she was baptized 25 years ago.

The pews were lined with Air Force cadets in somber blue. They stood proudly during the posting of the colors, as the flags were placed by marching cadets, and again when the casket, covered with a U.S. flag, was guided in.

"Laura's a modest person, she'd be taken aback by all this," said Piper's fiance, Lt. Dan Murray.

The cadets sat stiff-necked, eyes forward, until Murray began sharing his recollections of Piper. As he remembered the woman who loved to giggle, who talked with her hands in constant motion, repeatedly broke her nose playing rugby and always lost her term papers to computers, the dignity of her comrades gave way to grief and tears.

Murray saw his fiance days before her death while the couple vacationed in Egypt.

"When we kissed goodbye ... she was happier than I've ever seen her," Murray said. "She knew she was loved, she was happy and she was off on another adventure."

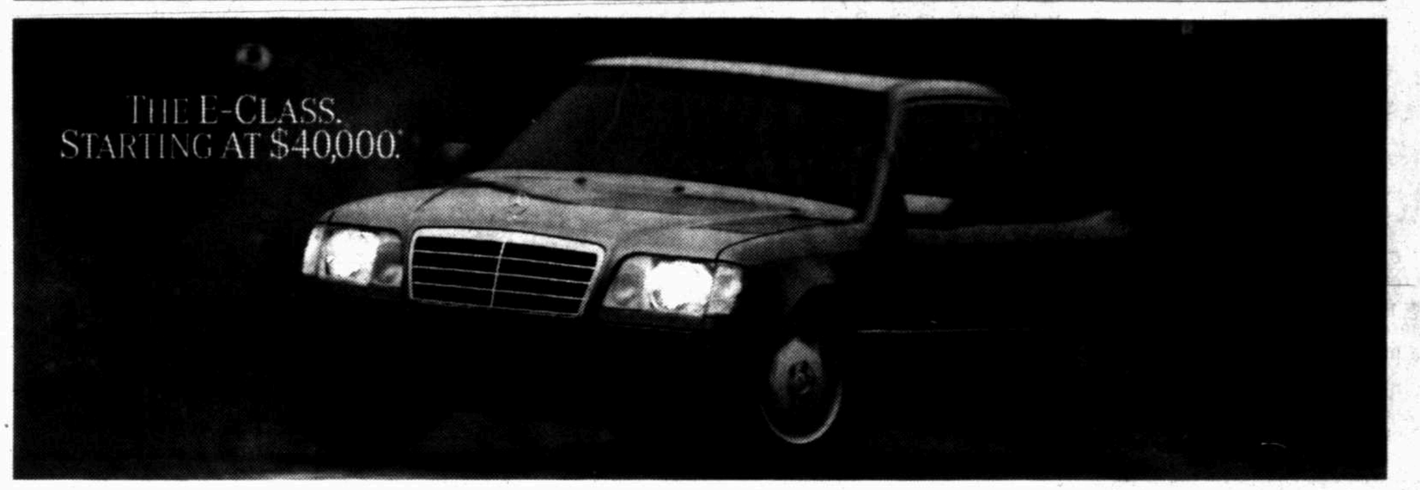

Piper was one of 26 people, including 15 Americans, who died April 14 when two U.S jets mistakenly fired on two helicopters carrying a United Nations relief mission.

Piper, an air operations intelligence analyst stationed in Ramstein, Germany, was on a temporary assignment in Turkey.

Sex-education issue polarizes parents, teens

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Teen pregnancy. You can't talk about it to teen-agers without hearing them complain about the lack of sex education in Midland schools. Too many young parents say they really didn't understand reproduction until they conceived.

"When it comes to sex education we get too little, way, way too late," said one 17-year old, who has an infant.

"You don't learn anything at school and your parents are too embarrassed to even answer any questions. My mom says: 'Go ask your father,' and my dad says: 'I'll tell you when you are older.' So, I learned about stuff from my friends and some of it — like you can't get pregnant the first time you have sex — was wrong."

Another teen-ager said she thought rubbing ice cubes on her abdomen before sex would "freeze the reproductive organs" before sex, inhibiting fertilization.

Several teen-agers said if they had known how easy it is to conceive, and how no contraceptive is 100 percent effective, they might have delayed having sex.

"My friends told me condoms were a sure thing to keep you from getting pregnant," said one 16-year-old mother. "I'm here to say that's wrong, and having sex was not worth stopping my dreams to start raising a baby. If I had known what a risk I was taking, I would have waited at least the middle of my senior year to have sex."

Despite hindsight, mentioning any need of sex education in Texas public schools is enough to result in local parents storming school board meetings to be certain it won't be taught in their district.

Some teen-agers, however, especially members of the True Love Waits program — where participants pledge abstinence — are also adamantly against learning about sex education in school.

Matthew W. Gasch, 16, a Greenwood High School student and a member of True Love Waits, wrote that "The place (sex) education needs to be is in church, at home, on bended knee," in his poem "Guess What I Learned In School Today."

Every attempt to bring up the subject of sex education has polarized children and parents.

Even the Texas Education Agency's moderate Education for Self-Responsibility (ESR) III program became the target of rumors and exaggerated misinformation December 1992 through March of last year.

It got to the point where curriculum teaching kindergarteners not to touch blood — because blood carries germs and germs can cause illness — was described in flyers distributed to local churches as teaching kindergarteners sex acts, about abortion and forms of self-gratification.

Ann Newman of San Antonio, director of the Texas Council for Family Values, spoke to area parents in March 1993 to warn them of "sex pushers."

"We are asking children to be responsible in their irresponsibility (since there is no such thing as safe sex). Safe sex isn't worth dying for, and love, commitment and marriage are worth waiting for." Her remarks met with the thundering applause of hundreds of attendees to her lecture at Odessa's Bonham Junior High School.

Ms. Newman questioned having sex education when most students know "where babies come from and what condoms are for."

One 19-year-old who attended the lecture, said, "I've never forgotten her saying that. I wanted to stand up and ask: 'Aren't your children's lives worth more than that? Don't we deserve to be told about AIDS? I have more adults telling me to abstain when they didn't do that when they were teen-agers.'"

Other groups, including the Permian Basin Eagle Forum, have also raised concerns about teaching sex education that doesn't include teaching moral values.

In hundreds of letters sent from Midlanders to state Sen. Teel Bivins, U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, and state Rep. Tom Craddick, the writers stated they were adamantly against any type of sexuality education taught in public schools.

Nonetheless, several Midland parents at a recent Odessa seminar on teaching children about sexually transmitted diseases, said those parents don't speak for them.

Even more surprising, a telephone survey conducted by university psychology students indicated that Midland and Odessa parents were overwhelmingly in favor of sexual education being taught, as long as abortion was not discussed.

"About 97 percent of 401 respondents — 200 from Ector County Independent School District and 201 from Midland ISD — were in favor of sexuality education being taught in the public schools," said Gary McCullough, psychology professor at the University of Texas for the Permian Basin.

He said the survey was conducted as a class project and statistics from the survey — taken as a random sampling from telephone books — are still being analyzed.

A large number of the persons contacted (50 percent who have school age children) were in favor of facts being taught about birth, puberty, birth control (including condoms), incest, sexual harrassment, date rape, so-called "safe sex," and sexually transmitted diseases.

"The only question drawing a lot of opposition was any issues on the topic of abortion," McCullough said. "About 50 percent of the persons called were against it.

"For both cities combined, about 96 percent felt sexuality education should be taught and — of those who said yes — 68.2 percent thought the schools should be teaching it," the UTPB professor said.

All participants in the survey were 18 and older. "We wanted to get taxpayers," McCullough said.

While the survey indicates there may be more of an interest in teaching sex education than might be expected from previous opinions reported, McCullough notes that statisticians are "crunching the numbers" for an accurate report to be presented to school board trustees of both Midland and Ector County independent school districts.

Several health counselors said usually the extreme opinions — for and against an issue — are teen-agers cutting their youth short in order to become parents, a white ribbon campaign is being held in conjunction with Teen Pregnancy Prevention Week, which began Saturday.

FOCUS: Texas has second highest teen birth rate

"White Ribbon Week was started by a teacher who worked with teen parents," said Jane Hellinghausen, director of community affairs for Planned Parenthood of West Texas. She noted this is the first year of the campaign.

Planned Parenthood offices are providing free white ribbons for the national campaign, which is also supported by the Children's Defense Fund, according to a spokeswoman in the Washington, D.C., office.

"We do support teen-age pregnancy prevention and sex education, but we aren't sponsors of the campaign," the spokeswoman said.

"Seeing the positive outcomes of the red ribbon campaign in reducing substance abuse, the White Ribbon Campaign was started this year to call attention to teen-age sexual behavior and teen pregnancies," Ms. Hellinghausen said.

The goal of the White Ribbon Campaign is to stimulate community-based activities to help prevent teen-age pregnancies through education, abstinence-based programs or other programs which increase awareness.

"In Texas, in 1993, 51,001 teen girls gave birth. Of these, 867 were Permian Basin teens," she said.

In 1992, the Texas Department of Health logged 276 births to Midland County women 17 and younger, and an additional 53 abortions the same year for young women 15 to 19.

Texas is second in the nation behind California in the number of teen-age pregnancies and in the number of young women under age 14 giving birth. Texas also ranks second in the nation in the number of births to females age 15 to 19.

The national theme of the campaign is "People working together to show our young people a better life — a life free of the abuse and misuse of sex."

Many local parents, passionately against the idea of sex education being taught in the schools, are quick to say we don't have a problem with teen-age sexual behavior in Midland.

The statistics discount that stance.

"In West Texas people have a rural point of view. They think we don't have big-city problems, that we are living clean and safe," said Sarana Savage, HIV/STD coordinator of the Midland office of the Texas Department of Health.

"Since January, we have seen 99 cases of chlamydia, 19 of gonorrea, and two syphilis cases in Midland and Odessa. There are so many people with sexually transmitted diseases in the Permian Basin, we can barely deal with syphilis," Ms. Savage said.

According to health department records, the number of people with HIV and AIDS has increased. In 1988, Midland had 15 persons with full-blown AIDS. In 1993, 60 cases were reported.

The rates of pregnancy and STDs and local surveys indicate that many young people engage in sex before their senior year of high school.

Recent studies, including one conducted in several countries by Population Action International, have concluded that adolescents, no matter what their culture, are sexually active before age 20.

"Many adolescents don't think of the consequences of their behavior," Ms. Hellinghausen said. "They don't have the intellectual capacity of adults, and they are in denial about being sexual beings. They justify not using birth control by saying sex just happens. If they plan ahead, then they are acknowledging that they are a sexual being."

The greatest service to teen-agers, according to Ms. Hellinghasen — other than giving them factual sexuality information — would be to give them assertiveness training.

"No one is teaching adolescents assertiveness skills or strategies to make decisions," she said. "So consequently, decisions are being made by default."

Cathy Harris, a registered nurse and school health specialist with Region 18 Service Center, agrees.

"My grandmother told me, 'If a boy gets fresh with you, you keep a hat pin under your lapel and stick him with it.' That's fine if I don't ever want to see him again. So, that doesn't work. Now we have two out of every 10 girls getting pregnant before they finish high school."

"Young people need decision-making skills so they can assertively tell someone else their decision. They need refusal skills," Ms. Harris said.

Referring to the book "The Stork is Dead," Ms. Harris said the author related a story about a boy pressuring a teen-age girl to have sex. She told him to take her to a drugstore first. "She left the boy in the car with the motor running, and his motor running too," Ms. Harris joked.

While in the store the girl called her parents to come get her.

"That was a strategy," Ms. Harris said. "Parents need to talk to their teen-agers about this before they get into these situations."

Several teen-agers, when asked about pressures of having sex, laughed it off. "It's no big deal."

Some young women, juniors at Lee High School, said pregnancy has its status.

"When people see my baby (a 4-week old son) they say they want one too," said Lee High School junior Celina Granado. Other LHS juniors said having a baby has become acceptable.

"It's really the 'in' thing to do now," one junior said. "Everyone tries to see who can have the biggest and best baby shower. I don't want to have a baby and quit high school, but I sure would like to have a baby to love."

Some health professionals said teen-agers who consider having a baby in high school as something "that just may or may not happen," don't think about parenthood being a lifetime commitment.

Even worse, they don't think about the risks involved in early sexual behavior — such as contracting sexually transmitted diseases, including HIV.

"Be assertive parents. Talk to your children about these things before they are 18 and they go off to college campuses and come back HIV infected," said Barry Lee Cole, a local HIV counselor.

Other counselors say young students need to realize the long-term impact of having babies.

Teen parents are more likely to drop out of school, and have lower paying jobs than those who delay childbearing. Nationally only one in seven teen pregnancies result in marriage. If they marry, teen-age couples are three times more likely to separate or divorce than those who give birth in their 20s.

Health problems in mothers under age 15 and their babies are also more prevalent.

"We have a society that values human life, with a lot of guilt involved in having abortions, yet we don't — as a society — facilitate the quality of human life," said Janis Keasler, a volunteer board member with Centers for Children & Families. She teaches parenting skills at Coleman High School which has 54 children — 38 from CHS parents and 16 are the children of students attending the other two high schools — this month — in its day care. Currently there are 19 students expecting who are on the CHS rolls this month, according to a school official.

Ms. Keasler said some teen-agers have babies to satisfy their own needs.

Ms. Goddard agreed. "Too many kids have sex to get love and attention. Many young people don't have the skills or self-esteem to avoid having sex. They want to belong and no fear of disease or pregnancy is going to stop them."

Parents before their time

Group believes in abstinence

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel

GREENWOOD — A national program to promote abstinence until marriage — "True Love Waits" — is being practiced in this small community with a fierce commitment by the teens who have joined.

Greenwood Baptist Church has 52 junior high and high school youth participating in the program. Each Sunday night the group has a Bible study session that focuses on national literature dispensed through the True Love Waits program.

Through the program the participants sign a covenant card pledging to themselves, their parents, their church and, most of all, God, that they will abstain from sexual activity until the day they marry.

The pledge reads: "Believing that true love waits and acknowledging the biblical principle of human sexuality, I commit from this day on to remain sexually pure. Believing that God's way is always best, I covenant with Him to abstain from sexual intercourse until the day I enter into a marriage relationship."

The Rev. W. Wayman Swopes, church pastor, and Allan Strickland, music and youth director, head the project for their congregation.

The teens involved in the program are outspoken in their beliefs and don't mind telling anyone who asks why they are so committed to the True Love Waits program.

Guess What I Learned at School Today?

Twas a dark and starry night
None but two in sight
Naughty things could happen now
But they're only seven, they don't know how

They see it on the TV
They see it in the movies
They hear about it in the bathroom
Now our government wants it in their classroom

If our government has its way
These kids at seven will be taught to play
"Education is what they need
So they don't do the dirty deed"

The place that education needs to be
Is in church, at home, on bended knee
So these kids don't come home and say

— Matthew W. Gasch, 16, member of True Love Waits in Greenwood

Additionally, almost all of the teens have their own reasons for abstaining from sex.

Carrie Patterson, 13, said sex out of marriage is wrong. When asked why, she said premarital sex is wrong because God says so. She added, too, that there are pluses to staying celibate, especially protection against sexually transmitted diseases and AIDS.

"God is trying to protect us by telling us it's wrong," she added.

Fifteen-year-old Sarah Moorehead said sex today is "deadly and so many things can happen.

"Besides, I don't want to risk my life for one night of fun," Sarah said. "I don't want to die."

The reason Mary Moorehead, 13, gave for abstaining was "God gave it (sex) to us as a gift and it's something you can never get back once you've given it."

"God is love and He'll teach us love. One act is not love. You have to nurture a relationship and let it grow into love," said 17-year-old Hudson Hanks.

"I respect myself too much to mess up my life. And you can get diseases," said Misty Sceales, 14.

In addition to their many reasons for staying celibate, the youth group members said they don't mind letting schoolmates and friends know their beliefs.

"I don't mind taking a stand," said 13-year-old Chad McMurtry.

He said although not all of his friends and classmates respect his decision to stay celibate, that's OK with him.

Rachelle Scantling, 14, said being a member of True Love Waits is good because it lets her peers know her beliefs.

Candyce Childers, 14, agrees with Rachelle. She said she likes being in the organization because she knows she has friends to stand with her in her decision.

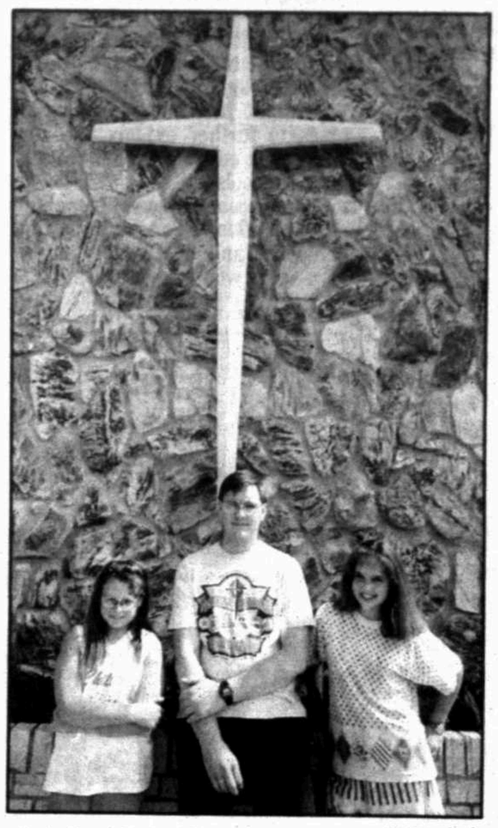

"I think it's good to have an organization like this so you know where everyone stands. You also have friends to support you in your decision," said 16-year-old Wes Graham.

Mary said belonging to the group sets a Christian example to other students regarding sexual activity.

Plus, she added, "if you slip and fall (from your commitment to abstinence) God is always there to forgive you and pick you up."

Carrie noted the members of the organization are supportive and are willing to stand by others who stray from their commitment.

The youth minister said there have been a few group members who have faltered in their commitment, but he said the group has been very supportive of them and encouraged them to get back on their intended path.

Brian Adamcik/ Repoter-Telegram

Although most of the group said they would stand by friends who didn't share their commitment, they vary on how they would personally feel about those people.

Thirteen-year-old Christi Burger said if one of her friends strays she is willing to support him or her. Susan Crawford, 14, said she would still be friends with others who don't have the same beliefs, but she would "lose respect for them."

"I made a commitment and I'm not about to mess up. But, the group is here to support any of us who do," Sarah said.

Many of the girls in the group said their membership in True Love Waits lets potential beaus know where they stand on premarital sex. Some of the guys in the group acknowledged that dates may be a little harder to get when people know they don't believe in sex before marriage.

But, the True Love Waits group said that is no problem for them.

Children need to receive right information

'No one in Midland wants to talk about sex, teen pregnancy or AIDS. It's like, if we don't talk about it, if we continue to ignore it, then it's not a problem in our community.'

ODESSA — Holding out a paper bag, speaker Cathy Harris urged an audience member to reach in and pull out a poker chip. Blue symbolized a sexually transmitted disease, red meant pregnancy and white was a negative reaction.

"Go ahead, jump in the sack and see what happens," she said, eliciting laughter. "Just remember, every time you jump into the sack you are taking a risk."

One woman asked if she could abstain.

"Good thinking. You certainly may," said Ms. Harris, a registered nurse and school health specialist with Region 18 Education Service Center.

One by one, a majority of the audience members drew a blue chip.

"Even though this is just a game, were you apprehensive?" she asked about 30 adults, who attended the recent session on talking to children about HIV.

"The More Your Kids Know, the Safer They Will Be," a three-hour seminar hosted by the Psychology Club of the University of Texas of the Permain Basin , drew a meager crowd.

Attended mostly by health professionals and some area parents, HIV counselor Barry Lee Cole said, "I'm talking to people who don't need to hear this. Why isn't this place packed? Where is everybody?"

Sarana Savage, HIV/STD Coordinator of the Midland office of the Texas Department of Health, noted a similar seminar was offered in Midland. All of the speakers sat around waiting for people to arrive. "And not one person came," she said.

"No one in Midland wants to talk about sex, teen pregnancy or AIDS," piped up one woman in the audience. "It's like, if we don't talk about it, if we continue to ignore it, then it's not a problem in our community."

While it's true some parents have stormed Midland Independent School District school board meetings to insist sex education not be taught, local health officials say sexually transmitted diseases are running rampant in the Tall City, and teen pregnancies are high.

In fact, the rate of STDs is high enough that the TDH was able to prove the need for grant money to provide services for West Texas.

"We were able to prove we do have disease out here. We got $35,000 in 1988 for HIV services. Now we are up to $1.8 million to provide services for all of West Texas," Ms. Savage said. "We are able to provide a lot more services, but the need grows every day."

Ms. Savage said she was pleased with the Odessa turnout at the seminar discussing HIV. "I was also pleased with the openness of the discussion."

She said, too often, people have the idea "If I start talking about HIV, people will wonder why I have the interest, if someone in my family is HIV positive."

The state health department coordinator said trying to monitor, track down and keep records of people with syphilis alone in Midland County, gives the health department "a full plate."

"The high rate of teen pregnancies and sexually transmitted diseases has caught the attention of the state," Ms. Savage said.

HIV counselor Cole said, "I've been bumping with school districts for five years to try to get through to them that you can teach students the three R's and they will get a disease which will stop them from realizing their dreams.

ONE: Teens learn to balance parenthood, school pregnancy.

"I just didn't think it would happen to me," she said. "If I had known more I would have given it more thought — not been so carefree."

During her pregnancy, Shelly said her friends "found it hard to relate to my problems. Everything changed for me emotionally, but my parents stuck by me from the very beginning."

Shelly's mother, Clarice Trammell, said too often teen-agers become pregnant and think "their life is over. That's not true."

She said becoming a grandmother at just about the time her daughter was of age to leave home, "was hard."

"But I wouldn't have done anything differently," she said, noting their granddaughter has "added so much to the family. Shelly did the best she could and we supported her."

Shelly considered all of her options before deciding to give birth. "I highly commend both the Problem Pregnancy Center and Planned Parenthood for all the help they gave me."

She said the Problem Pregnancy Center stressed adoption and offered information on adoption referrals, and showed her an anti-abortion film.

Shelly also went to Planned Parenthood for information. "There was no pressure. I wanted to have the baby. Other options would have been easier. But easier isn't always the best way," she said.

A National Honor Society student at LHS, Shelly was motivated to finish high school. She only missed two weeks of school despite giving birth through a cesarean section.

After her daughter was born, the magnitude of her responsibility set in.

"No one tells you about being up at 3 a.m. with a crying baby with an ear infection and a lot of dirty diapers. I'm lucky my mother was always right there."

After she conceived, Shelly said she learned a lot about human sexuality and parenting.

"As far as sex education in school, it was real limited, more like a biology course which we had for six weeks in the seventh grade."

She said she approves of of the Christian Life Enrichment Researchers (CLER) Ministries spiritually based human sexuality course.

"Linda Goddard (CLER president) spoke to a class I was in. She was very up-front and knowledgeable. I would like to see the course integrated into the schools."

The father of Shelly's baby didn't stick around. National statistics indicate that about 85 percent of teen males leave the responsibility of raising a baby to the female.

"We were both young and we made a lot of bad choices. His parents didn't want him trapped for the rest of his life," Shelly said, noting she doesn't plan on having another baby "for a long time."

"I've got to finish school now," she said. "Having a baby is a huge responsibility — both financially and emotionally. I haven't seen 20 yet, but having a baby meant that I would be caring for someone for the next 20 years.

"And ultimately, the responsibility rests on the shoulders of the girls. Unless someone makes the boys take responsibility, they can take off and do whatever they want to do."

Far from being bitter, Shelly said she is blessed with supportive parents and she is motivated to get a four-year college degree.

However, several local counselors and health professionals said Shelly is the exception to the rule.

Too often, pregnancy ends the education of one or both young parents.

For some girls, having children during their teen years is an acceptable fact of life. And local counselors say teen pregnancies cut across all racial and socioeconomic lines.

"For every teen-ager who gets pregnant, you will hear a different reason why they got pregnant. Their body develops (at ages 10, 11, 12) long before the mind develops cognitive skills (18, 19 and 20)," said Jane Hellinghausen of Planned Parenthood.

Celina Granado, 18, and a junior at LHS, only missed three weeks of school when she had her son four weeks ago.

"My mom takes care of him a lot," she said, noting her boyfriend has also been supportive financially and emotionally. "Joey lives with me and gets up with the baby at night."

Joey has quit school to work full time to help financially support the baby.

"He's talked about trying to go back to school, We are also trying to save money," Celina said.

The young parents are waiting until Celina graduates to get married.

Unlike the stigma decades ago that was once attached to girls getting pregnant, Celina said it has become acceptable among her peers.

"You can stay in school right up to going into labor," she said. "Last year a lot of my friends were having babies. When they saw my baby, some of my friends said they want one too.

"Sometimes it's hard being a parent, but I'm happy. I enjoy it," Celina said.

Michelle Sotelo, a slim and petite 16-year-old, attends Coleman High School for a half day while taking advantage of the school's day care for her daughter Adriana, 5 months.

Coleman offers flexible classroom hours and self-paced workloads. The school functions as a dropout prevention facility for students who work, or get behind in regular classes due to illness, pregnancy or family problems. Some students attend because other obligations prevent them from attending school during regular hours. Day and evening classes are offered to accommodate work schedules.

Several young mothers attending Coleman said the unstructured setting and self-paced classes mean more responsibilty and discipline is required to finish high school.

"You better be motivated to get your work done, because it's up to you to do it," Shelly said.

Michelle was attending Midland High School when she became pregnant in her sophomore year. "I was surprised when I found out. I moved out of my house and moved in with my aunt for four months because I didn't want to tell my parents."

The teen-ager, a Hispanic, said she was more apprehensive about telling her parents that the baby's father was black, than telling them she was pregnant.

"They have accepted Adriana," she said.

Michelle had a rough pregnancy and was in bed for two months due to toxemia, which causes abnormal swelling.

She stayed with her parents and lives with them still. After Adriana was born, she and the father married, but didn't live together. Now he is out of the picture except for visits with his daughter.

The young mother says firmly that she never considered any other options except going through with the pregnancy and keeping her baby. With a younger brother and other children around, she is accustomed to caring for youngsters.

Nonetheless, even though her older sister had two babies before age 20, Michelle said she didn't realize the effort involved in caring for an infant.

Her baby's crib is at the foot of her single bed in her bedroom. Instead of visiting her friends in late afternoons and early evenings, her time is spent bathing, feeding, entertaining and caring for Adriana.

"All my goals have been set back. You can still achieve, it just takes longer," she said.

In retrospect, she said she would definitely have delayed pregnancy. Most of what she learned about human sexuality and parenting, she learned after conception. She agreed, that maybe, students should be required to take a parenting class along with any sex education course, so that they could see "what they're in for," before they decide to become sexually active.

Shelly — on a recent busy afternoon balancing attending Midland College classes with getting ready to work a shift at a restaurant — said she would advise teen-agers to think about the long-range consequences of sexual behavior.

"Take this seriously," she said, "and be educated, be careful."

White Ribbon Campaign

OBJECTIVES

- To create and increase awareness of the consequences of teen sexual behavior.
- To support teen-age sexual abstinence.
- To create an awareness of how society abuses children with sexual messages.
- To resolve to build a safer, healthier future for America's youth.
- To open the communication channels in families, communities and the country.

PARTICIPATION

- Wear a white ribbon.
- Put a white ribbon in places where it can be seen.
- Become involved in the community to prevent abuse and misuse of sex.
- Openly discuss the affects of sexual activity on youth and society.
- Hug a child and model other examples of showing affection.

White ribbons will be available, free of charge, from all Planned Parenthood offices during the week of April 24 through May 1.

ISSUE: Sex-education survey reveals surprising results

most often reported, and people with middle-of-the-road opinions seldom speak up.

"People in Midland seem to consider sex education in extremes. One group is teaching abstinence and no sex education. The other wants to teach sex education and hand out condoms. I consider myself a passionate moderate. I say you can teach value-based sex education," said Linda Goddard, president of Christian Life Enrichment (CLER) Ministries.

"Some people are opposed to sex education. They would rather discuss morals and values. They say: 'Just be abstinent, end of subject,'" said Jane Hellinghausen of Planned Parenthood. "The problem is, human beings just aren't that simple."

McCullough said the People's Choice organization, which supports civil rights and takes a prochoice stance, suggested the university conduct the survey.

"In this area, some people that are against sex education whip up people into a frenzy with rumors and innuendo until they have accused sex education as being a way of abusing kindergarteners with homosexual teachers or something," the professor said.

"But what we have seen from the survey is overwhelming support for the idea of teaching human sexuality in schools, and (according to the response of another question on the survey) it was supported that fourth and fifth grade is the time to start teaching this."

McCullough allowed that the survey might just be a jumping-off place to further explore the subject of sex education being taught in the schools.

Some parents have said teaching sex education is condoning sexual behavior, and if it's not taught, teen-agers won't be encouraged to engage in sex.

"If sex education causes pregnancy, then Texas should have the lowest birth rate in the country, and it is the opposite," Ms. Goddard said. "Texas has the second highest teen-age birth rate in the nation. People are also mistaken in assuming teen-agers know more than we did at their age. They don't know the facts."

Ms. Goddard said she was incensed over the fact that parents have complained to her about condom commercials on television.

"Then on the show 'Melrose Place' — where everyone has sex with everyone with no protection or nothing — one episode had a female university teacher saying monogamy is a myth. She said monogamy really means having one sex partner — at a time. And not one parent complained to me about this show.

"When we don't educate our children, we are allowing the media like this to educate them," she said.

"Parents need to be the primary teachers of their children," Ms. Hellinghausen said. "Problems set in when parents aren't receptive to questions about sex. And assertive skills are just as important as scientific facts.

"Research shows the majority of parents nationally support sex education in the schools," she said. "Locally, we are stuck between the needs of the kids and the perceptions, desires and wishes of some parents who are opposed to it."

(From 10A)

go wrong. We've seen diseases, pregnancy . . . I'm proud to make a stand because I don't want to be another statistic," Sarah added.

The Greenwood Baptist Church youth may be included in statistics of a more positive strain: that of thousands of young people across the country abstaining from intercourse before marriage.

A.C. Green of the Phoenix Suns basketball team pitches chastity with other Athletes for Abstinence. Television's "LA Law" and "Beverly Hills, 90210" include positive depictions of characters who are virgins (though one character on "90210" also recently became pregnant out of wedlock).

Green, recently quoted in "USA Weekend" magazine, said "Kids need to know more about how to develop self-control and their own sense of values and morality. Kids think everyone is having sex. Well, everyone's not."

Opponents of True Love Waits say abstinence should be an option, not a mandate, and students should still be given information about sexually transmitted diseases and contraceptives. Results of the abstinence campaign have yet to be seen since it just began a year ago.

Led by the Southern Baptist Convention, hundreds of thousands of teens across the county have already joined True Love Waits with the numbers increasing as more denominations are joining the cause.

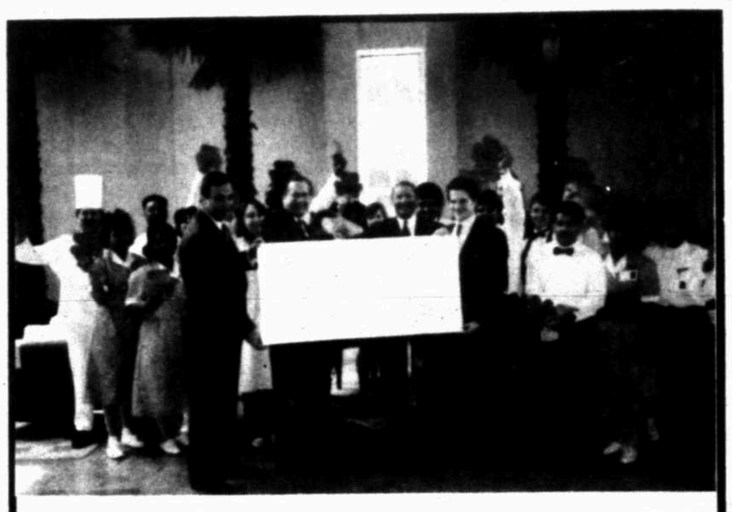

RIGHT: Students need information

There especially is a vocal minority in Midland which is killing your kids."

The health professionals said too many children aren't getting the information they need about sex from churches or parents.

"Whether sex education is going on in the schools formally or not, it is going on — usually between students (talking about it) in bathrooms," Ms. Harris said. "This is sad, because right now, the only vaccination we have against HIV is education."

Some believe Federal Reserve is keeping millions out of work

By Louis Uchitelle
N.Y. Times News Service

Economic theory holds that there is a trade-off between unemployment and inflation (high prices), which means board's attempts to decrease inflation would produce increase in unemployment.

■ News analysis

With the Federal Reserve pushing up interest rates, a disagreement has surfaced about whether the central bank might be trying unnecessarily to keep at least a million unemployed people out of jobs in the belief that this is required to hold down inflation.

Neither the Federal Reserve nor the Clinton administration, which has endorsed the Fed's anti-inflation policies so far, would say they were in favor of bolstering unemployment. That would be damaging politically, and contrary to the job-creation goals of the administration.

But with the economy growing strongly and the unemployment rate falling, the Federal Reserve has responded by raising interest rates three times since early February. Some economists argue that the Fed is overreacting to a decline in unemployment, asserting that falling joblessness has a much smaller inflationary impact than it did in the past.

"The Federal Reserve may be convinced that the inflation danger is closer than many of us in the economic profession think it is," said Robert M. Solow, a Nobel laureate in economics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Solow argues that unemployment can fall to seven million people before a shortage of workers begins to push up the inflation rate. But Federal Reserve officials say the danger point is eight million, and as unemployment has fallen toward that level, they have acted.

The connection between inflation and jobs is one of the most debated and elusive concepts in economics. No economist questions that at some point, unemployment will fall so low that the nation will lack enough people to apply for all the jobs that corporate America wants to fill. When that happens, companies compete for workers, bidding up wages in the process. The rising wages become the backbone of rising inflation.

The higher rates are intended to discourage borrowing and spending. They force business activity, and the economy, to slow down. Fewer jobs are created and unemployment rises.

At what point does the pool of unemployed workers become too small to satisfy the demand for new employees? That level seems to change with the decades. In the 1990s, the mass layoffs, the corporate downsizings and the reluctance of many companies to hire even when business is good may have lowered the threshold below what it was in the 1980s.

"My conclusion is that a good national target — one that does not accelerate inflation — is an unemployment rate of around 5.5 percent, or seven million people," Solow said.

If Solow's view guided the Federal Reserve's policy, the central bank might not be raising interest rates. But his opinion, which represents an important sector in economics, does not prevail.

French woman captain breaks sailing record

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A French woman skipper overcame a trip overboard and a week of no wind to sail from New York to the Golden Gate in record time, shattering the old mark by 14 days.

"I would like to thank the sea and the waves and the winds because they let us go through," Isabelle Autissier said after arriving Friday night with her three-man crew aboard the 60-foot Ecureuil Poitou-Charentes 2.

She was welcomed at the dock by about 200 people, some waving French and U.S. flags. Autissier was handed bouquets and the crew was doused with champagne.

The race against the clock followed the 13,945-mile Cape Horn route once traveled by the famed Clipper ships of the last century.

Autissier's official time was 62 days, five hours and 55 minutes, easily besting the previous mark, set in 1989. She was presented with the Clipper Cup by the Manhattan Yacht Club, the official timekeeper of the event.

For Autissier, being the first woman to break the record was a side issue.

"I'm very proud to be the winner of this record and that's enough," she said.

The trip didn't always go smoothly. Early on, she was washed overboard by a wave and rescued by a crewman. There was a long stretch of no wind off the coast of Brazil.

"We were becalmed six or seven days. It's quite awful when you're trying to go fast," she said.

But the boat picked up speed after rounding Cape Horn.

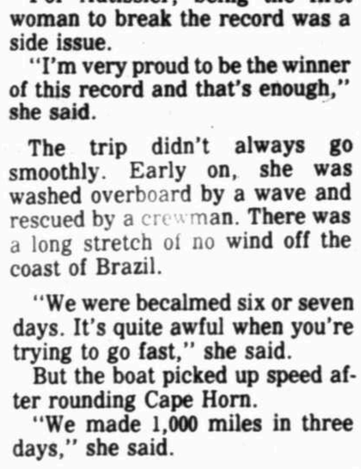

"We made 1,000 miles in three days," she said.

Autissier, 37, docked at the Maritime National Historical Park near Fisherman's Wharf, not far from the 1886 square-rigger Balclutha, which rounded Cape Horn six times in its career.

The New York to San Francisco route was made legendary in the 19th century days of "iron men and wooden ships" by huge clipper ships like the Flying Cloud, which set the standard of 89 days, 8 hours in 1854.

The French boat is a light monohull with a fairly small sail area and a hydraulic, laterally pivoting keel. Its name combines the French word for squirrel, which is the logo of a sponsoring bank, and a region of France.

Autissier's crew included Luc Bartissol, 28; Pascal Boimard, 42 and Lionel Lemonchois, 33.

N.Y. Libertarians choose Stern to be their candidate for governor

By Kevin Sack
N.Y. Times News Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — At first blush, the pairing of Howard Stern, the outrageous radio showman, and New York's Libertarian Party might have seemed a bit incongruous.

But consider his opponents for the party's gubernatorial nomination at its state convention here Saturday. There was Norma Segal, who advertised herself as "Al Sharpton's English teacher at Tilden High School." There was Dottie-Lou Brokaw, who was nominated by a man who boasted that "she hasn't missed a hemp (marijuana) rally since they've been having hemp rallies." There was James Ostrowski, who spent much of his speech to the convention quoting the writings of Karl Hess, a Libertarian theorist.

Where else could Stern, who was nominated for governor by a man waving a plastic sex toy, have seemed virtually mainstream?

The Libertarian Party, its ranks bloated by new members recruited by Stern, overwhelmingly elected him its gubernatorial nominee. In a five-person field, he won with 287 votes out of 381 cast. The Libertarians also nominated Stern's handpicked running mate, Stan Dworkin, a former Rockland County legislator who said he hopes to make a New York tradition of having lieutenant governors named Stan.

Stern has vowed to resign the governorship and hand the office to Dworkin as soon as he accomplishes his three principal goals: reinstating the death penalty, improving toll collection, and requiring road construction crews to work at night.

Many Libertarians said that Stern's platform fit well, more or less, with their own goals of legalizing drugs, eliminating restrictions on gun ownership, cutting taxes, and encouraging choice in schools.

Despite their common ground on the fringes of American politics, Stern and the Libertarians did experience something of a clash of cultures during the convention at Albany's Italian-American Community Center.

Stern campaigned in a black shirt opened to his navel, and surrounded himself with women in leather who exposed even more. His main opponent, Ostrowski, a Buffalo lawyer, wore an olive suit and shiny brown shoes, a uniform more typical of the Libertarian regulars.

"We're ruining their chess club meeting," said Gary Dell'Abate, Stern's producer and one of the many members of the Stern radio entourage who joined him here.

Some Libertarians opened their speeches with the salutation "Good morning fellow freedom lovers" or spoke about the "beast of tyranny in New York." Stern took things a bit less seriously. "No comment," he said to one question at a news conference. "I'll tell you why I'm saying no comment. Because at every press conference at least one question is answered with no comment."

Rio Grande drops on list of most endangered rivers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rio Grande's future is looking slightly less murky now that the United States and Mexico are focusing more attention on the polluted border, an environmental group said Tuesday.

Branded last year by American Rivers as the nation's most endangered waterway, the Rio Grande this year has slipped to No. 8 in the non-profit group's annual survey of 10 most imperiled rivers.

The improved ranking isn't so much because pollution levels have plummeted, but rather because a new emphasis is being given to the 2,000-mile river by officials in Washington, New Mexico, Texas and across the border in Mexico, the group said.

"There are some signs that this important watershed may finally be receiving the attention and resources it needs," American Rivers said in a study issued Tuesday.

The Environmental Protection Agency's plan to open a border office in El Paso is a sign of progress, the group said. Other positive developments cited include a nearly-completed sewage treatment plant in Nuevo Laredo and a conference next month to discuss the watershed's future.

But the Rio Grande's future is far from rosy, with diseases and human health problems still linked to its waters. High levels of PCBs and fecal bacteria have been discovered, the group noted.

"By the time it enters the Gulf of Mexico, near Brownsville, Texas, and Matamoros, Mexico, this once grand river has been subjected to just about every type of pollution possible," American Rivers said.

The pollutants include agricultural chemicals and sediments, mine waste such as cyanide, municipal sewage and industrial and landfill toxics, the analysis said.

Nuclear contamination from Los Alamos has washed into the river and sparked concerns about contamination of ground water, American Rivers said. "The Los Alamos National Laboratory continues to resist efforts by the state water quality officials to toughen discharge standards from the lab's archaic and bewildering system of outfall pipes," the study said.

The Rio Grande also is harmed because its natural flow has been altered in many place, the group said. Water diversions for irrigation in Colorado and New Mexico are continuing to reduce the river's natural flow, the organization said.

Urban development, levees, erosion, dam construction and increased sediment load also are contributing to the river's harm, the environmentalists said.

The 1994 endangered list is headed by the Clarks Fork of the Yellowstone River. Others in the top 10 are the Mississippi and Missouri rivers.

Mom vows to give up drugs after children die

By Jack Douglas Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — Four times a day Laurita Keilough makes her way to the sixth floor of Parkland Memorial Hospital.

She reaches through tubes and machinery to touch the badly burned body of her only child. She used to have five.

Several weeks ago, fire swept through a southeast Fort Worth house in the darkness of early morning. Mrs. Keilough was not there. Her children were.

They had always tugged at her for attention and love through the fog of her cocaine addiction, amid their poverty.

Mrs. Keilough said she would usually smoke her crack cocaine in the bathroom, away from the children. But she said they still knew, "sure they did."

They would often scold her saying: "We hate that. Don't do that."

Now, four of them are dead, and another is within the grasps of death. Mrs. Keilough has vowed to do what her children had so often asked of her: give up the crack cocaine.

"I don't even have a craving for it, because I think about my kids," said Mrs. Keilough, 29, as she sat twisting the end of a pen and biting at her lower lip to keep from crying.

"I'll never do drugs again. For my kids and for me, I'm going to change my whole life, give my life to God, so I can go where my kids have gone, when that day comes."

An electrical skillet sparked the fire that killed her 2-year-old daughter, Allencia; and two of her sons, Sammie, 9, and Lorenzo, 17.

Another son, Ronnie, 12, was pulled from the burned shell of the house and died hours later at Parkland.

That leaves Mrs. Keilough one son.

Lee Waun, 13, lies tethered to breathing apparatus and medical equipment in Parkland's burn unit, enduring the agony of second-and third-degree burns over 48 percent of his body. He is expected to be in the hospital for many more weeks.

Mrs. Keilough is tormented by what might have been.

I feel I'm at fault for their deaths because I wasn't there," she said.

If she had not left, Mrs. Keilough said, "I would have been there where Allencia was laying, on the couch in the bedroom.

"If I'd been there, I could have helped them. But then," she said, "maybe I would have gotten burned up too, and I wouldn't be here to help Lee Waun."

Olivia Davis, 44, a sixth victim of the house fire, was also in serious condition in Parkland's burn unit.

Officials at the Fort Worth fire department said lives may have been saved if not for the burglar bars that were welded to the windows and doors of the modest home, trapping the victims inside and hampering rescue efforts for arriving firefighters.

"It hurts. I miss them so much. I'm so lonely. I wish I had been there to help them," Mrs. Keilough said.

She stared at the pictures of her children. Mrs. Keilough acknowledged she had been no saint. But she said she loved her children.

The evening before the fire, she said, she drank two 40-ounce bottles of Colt 45 malt liquor, she said.

Nevertheless, she said she was sober and in control when she left the house sometime after dark. She told her children she was going to find some money to buy the family meat.

"I told the kids I'd be gone two or three hours. I told Lorenzo, Lee Waun and Ronnie to watch Allencia and little Sam."

Mrs. Keilough said she felt safe leaving her children with Olivia Davis and her husband, Larry. The Davises had taken the Mrs. Keiloughs into their home just days earlier. They had been wandering from place to place after another fire in January

Missing seamen

GALVESTON (AP) — The Coast Guard, police and immigration officials searched Saturday for up to six merchant seamen thought to have deserted a cargo ship moored at a Galveston pier.

Officials were alerted to the desertions about 11:30 a.m. Saturday after "a very wet Indonesian national" walked into Galveston police headquarters seeking help, Coast Guard spokesman Don Merwin said.

After finding an interpreter, police determined that the man and three others had jumped from the 700-foot Bahamian-registered bulk carrier Leon. The ship was moored at a Galveston pier at the time.

In addition to the man who turned himself in, six crew members were unaccounted for, officials said. They included three Indonesians, one Jordanian, one Turk and one Syrian.

Merwin said the men apparently were unhappy with "very harsh working conditions and long hours" on the ship.

He added that the men probably all made it out of the water safely and were somewhere in Galveston.

"That's what we're hoping," Merwin said.

The Coast Guard dispatched two boats and a helicopter to search for the men, and Galveston police were joined by immigration officials in the land search.

The Indonesian man who went to police was taken to John Sealy Hospital for a checkup. He and the other men will be sent back to their countries when they are captured, Merwin said.

LAREDO (AP) — A judge has ruled that fraud tainted a judicial election in Webb County, so a runoff has been ordered.

Visiting Judge James F. Clawson found that abuse and fraud occurred in the absentee voting for the March 8 primary race between County Court-at-Law Judge Raul Vasquez and challenger Cynthia Zuniga Puig.

Clawson advised attorneys of his ruling in a Friday telephone conference. No written ruling was immediately available Saturday.

Vasquez garnered 18 votes more than the 50 percent needed to avert a runoff.

Native Midlander makes mark on nation's capital

Schwartz

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Carol Levitt Schwartz is a straight-shooting "gutsy gal" whose wit and candor was carved out in West Texas and honed in Washington, D.C.'s, political, educational, social, and volunteer-service scenes.

"I'm known for being straight-forward and open," Ms. Schwartz said recently during a return trip to her other home — Midland.

"I think that's been an appeal of mine as a politician."

Ms. Schwartz has spent more than half of her 50 years in the nation's capital, where she delved into politics and focused on volunteer work — the sort of work that she began as a youngster, when she collected money for the March of Dimes.

"I've always been a person who is very interested in trying to better the world around me."

Ms. Schwartz, who served on the District of Columbia's Board of Education and City Council, campaigned for mayor in 1986 against the popular incumbent, Marion Barry, who is black. Washington's 600,000 people are predominantly black.

"I had every handicap you could possibly have," Ms. Schwartz reflected. "I was a white Jewish Republican woman in a town where the black population is about 70 percent, the Democratic registration is 82 percent, and the Republican registration is 8 percent."

Even so, she polled more than one-third of the vote in a race that included Barry — a Democrat — and three independent candidates.

"I think they (the voters) liked my courage in running against him — a pretty popular, charismatic leader."

Ms. Schwartz said she thought Barry "should be

City, police work on youth program

■ Sgt. David Garcia hopes Midnight Basketball will begin in June with City Council's recent approval of funds.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

In an effort to provide Midland's youth with something constructive to do during the long summer months, the Midland Police Department and the city of Midland are working together to set up a Midnight Basketball program.

With funding for the program approved recently by the Midland City Council, Sgt. David Garcia said he hopes the program will be in place by June.

"It will be a six- to eight-week program aimed at kids from 7 to 18 years of age," Garcia said.

"The kids will be grouped according to age or grade, with the younger kids playing earlier in the evening."

He said several sites are being considered to host the program, including San Jacinto Junior High School and various outdoor basketball courts. The program would run three nights a week from about 7 p.m. until midnight.

Depending on the response to this summer's program, it could become an annual event for Midland's youth, Garcia said.

The program is the idea of City Council member Juluis Brooks who said programs in other cities were what prompted him to propose night basketball in Midland.

"I had heard about it in larger cities, and it gave me the idea to try it here," he said. "We are trying to keep kids occupied with something to do and off the

Missionaries from Midland recount tragedy of Rwanda

EDITOR'S NOTE: Missionaries Vernon and Sandi Sivage of Midland were forced to evacuate Rwanda during the recent bloody ethnic fighting. The couple recounted their experience in an interview with Craig Bird, Baptist Press correspondent based in Nairobi, Kenya.

Craig Bird

NAIROBI, Kenya — Sometimes angels wear combat fatigues.

At least Midland's Vernon and Sandi Sivage think so, after their recent evacuation from Kigali, Rwanda, in the middle of ethnic fighting that has left tens of thousands of people dead.

"We watched out the back of our house as hundreds and thousands of looters ran back and forth on a path just 10 feet from the gate to our yard," Sivage said after the two Southern Baptist missionaries arrived in Nairobi.

"Plus, there was gunfire and grenade explosions all the time. There was no way our two unarmed guards and another Baptist missionary who had moved to our house could have stopped a gang from coming in."

Yet no one attempted to enter the compound from the time of the death of the country's president Juvenal Habyarimana on April 6 until the Sivages left home to join an evacuation convoy at the U.S. Embassy on April 9.

Schools reap recycling rewards

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Thousands of pounds of aluminum cans were recently picked up from four elementary schools that intensified their recycling drive because of Earth Day, which was Friday.

The drives coincided with the city's recent agreement to retrieve and purchase the cans from all the elementary schools. The sanitation division uses the same truck and driver that picks up paper for recycling at the schools.

The old converted garbage truck — a "recycled recycling truck" — was recently painted an environmentally colored pea-green.

"It looks like a guacamole salad going down the road," said Jack Burns, assistant utilities director.

A city worker rigged the truck so the trash bin filled with cans can be weighed to determine — by subtracting the weight of the bin — the amount of cans collected.

GARY OTT

Even old longhairs will miss Richard Milhous Nixon

Anyone who grew up — and more importantly formed their political views — during the late 1960s and early '70s had one thing in common: they considered Richard Milhous Nixon to be the enemy.

He was the president everyone loved to hate.

Ott

And it was easy to do. Richard Nixon wasn't exactly the most loveable guy in the world. He was stiff. He always looked uncomfortable on TV. He had dark circles under his eyes. He had a persistent 5 o'clock shadow. He perspired heavily, and his voice was one of those that was easy for even the most amateurish of comedians to imitate.

So they did.

Repeatedly. And harshly.

It wasn't the best of times to be president. America was in the process of losing its innocence. Vietnam was ripping the country apart. There was violence in the streets. Assassinations became almost commonplace . . . the Kennedys and Martin Luther King Jr., too.

It was as though America was searching for its identity.

And without much luck. Young people defied authority like never before. Parents were confused, not sure what had happened to their peaceful little world. Everyone was mad at everyone. Nothing was black and white anymore. The United States of America had turned into one giant gray area. No longer was there a clear vision of what was right and what was wrong.

There was anger. Pain. Hatred.

And much of it was aimed directly at the man in charge.

Richard Milhous Nixon.

But it didn't end there.

Soon after calm returned to the streets, Watergate entered the country's consciousness. What started out as a bungled break-in of Democratic headquarters eventually led to the tortured downfall of a president. And the word "tortured" should be emphasized. There were heated public debates. Congressional hearings. Impeachment proceedings.

The rhetoric — from both camps — was loud and forceful. But in the end, the opponents won out. America turned on its leader.

For the first time in history, the president of the United States was forced to resign in disgrace. It happened quickly. One day he boarded an airplane, waved good-bye and flew away.

We all assumed we had heard the last of Richard Milhous Nixon.

And for awhile we had. The fallen president went into seclusion, rarely to be seen or heard from. And no one seemed to care. It was a classic case of "out of sight, out of mind."

Then something strange happened. He began to resurface. There was an occasional televised interview, followed by magazine articles expousing his views on international affairs, and he even authored a book or two.

Almost always his words focused on world events; not on what was happening in Washington. It was as though that was beneath him. He had become bigger than domestic politics.

Indeed, he became an elder statesman of sorts. His views — be they on the Soviet Union, China, the Middle East, the fall of communism, whatever — were sought by experts and scholars alike. He traveled extensively, visiting leaders throughout the world. He had entered a new sphere.

No longer would his place in history be defined exclusively by Watergate.

That ugly blemish would remain forever, of course, and rightfully so, but somehow you got the feeling he was now being judged beyond that one monumental blunder.

His critics softened. They began balancing the good with the bad, trying to get a more complete picture of this complex man.

Now he is gone. And as one of those former longhairs who reveled in his fall from grace, I find myself terribly saddened by his passing. It is as though an old friend from my past has gone. He was the person I most enjoyed arguing with because, though we often disagreed on the issues, he was a formidable opponent. He knew his facts. He was smart. He was tough.

Yeah, Richard Milhous Nixon died Friday night.

But somehow I feel a part of him will remain with us forever. And I, for one, am glad.

America will miss Mr. Nixon. And so will I.

ODESSA — Services are pending for Luis Francisco Rodriquez, 17, with Martinez Funeral Home.

He died Saturday at an Odessa hospital.

RECOUNT: Sivage family escapes Rwandan horrors

(From 1B)

S. Sivage

One possible reason for their safety was revealed that day, when they made a first attempt to drive to the convoy link-up point. As they pulled out of the driveway, six United Nations soldiers stationed atop a six-story building in front of their house began waving their arms, urging them to go back. Almost immediately heavy gunfire echoed down the street they would have been driving on.

V. Sivage

The Sivages wrote their phone number on large pieces of cardboard so the soldiers could read it with their field glasses. Later, the U.N. troops phoned them with the "all clear", and they drove to the embassy without incident.

"Maybe God put them there as angels," Mrs. Sivage said. "Something kept us safe."

One other major "happy moment" took place when U.S. Marines let Mrs. Sivage board an evacuation transport plane with Ziggy, a French poodle she acquired on their last furlough in Midland in 1993.

When they landed in Nairobi, a woman boarded the plane, saw Mrs. Sivage struggling to carry her two bags and the dog and offered to carry the pet into the terminal. Only later did the Sivages learn the helpful woman was the U.S. ambassador to Kenya.

But recent days have still been mostly filled with sorrow for the Sivages, who have worked in Rwanda since 1978.

"We don't mourn the 'things' we lost, even though all we got to bring out was a carry-on bag and a suitcase each," Sivage explained. "We had packed to evacuate in 1990, and even though we didn't actually leave then, it was a good emotional half-step to cut ties between what we own and who we are. As Christians we know we're not what we own."

Rather, the family — which considers Crestview Baptist Church its home congregation — worries and prays over the friends left behind in Rwanda. The churches of the Baptist Union of Rwanda are ethnically mixed with leaders and membership drawing from both the dominant Hutu and minority Tutsi tribes.

But the claims of the gospel for brotherhood bump hard against centuries of ethnic hatred and lust for revenge. Practically, that means both Hutu and Tutsi friends are vulnerable.

Most poignant are their memories of Vincent, a close friend and lay leader in Kigali Baptist Church who had worked for the Baptist Mission of Rwanda for more than 12 years.

Saturday morning as the Sivages were finishing packing their car to join the evacuation convoy, Vincent, a Tutsi, called. He had slipped to a neighbor's house to use the phone.

"I need you to pray with me," he said. "A few minutes ago an armed gang entered our neighborhood, and as I look out the window I can see them searching door to door. When they come to our house and find me and my family they will kill us."

With heavy hearts the Sivages prayed with him. Then he hung up the phone and returned home to face the Hutu mob.

The Sivages got in their car and began the perilous 12-hour drive to Bujumbura in the neighboring country of Burundi and the eventual flight to Kenya aboard a U.S. Air Force C-141.

Rwanda has been doing a delicate balancing act for months now as the Hutu-dominated government negotiated with the Tutsi-dominated Rwanda Patriotic Front that launched a civil war in 1990. Both the RPF and radical Hutu military officers, unhappy with a proposed power-sharing government, have been blamed for killing the president.

The Sivages have always worked on preaching and teaching unity and love, but over the past six months Sivage found himself preaching two sermons repeatedly.

One was from 1 Corinthians 5:18 on the ministry of reconciliation where he pointed out, "If we in the church can't be reconciled, the world doesn't have a chance for peace."

The other was based on Ephesians 2:19, where Christians are described as "fellow citizens in the house of God."

"In Kinyarwanda (the language spoken by both Hutu and Tutsi) the word translated 'citizen' in English is their word for tribe," Sivage explained.

"So the verse literally says 'all Christians are members of the same tribe.' Yet the common response was silence, almost a feeling of 'that's very interesting, but what does it have to do with us?' It broke my heart."

As the Sivages and their 16-year-old daughter, Keri (older daughter Amy is a student at Dallas Baptist University), wait in Kenya and try to plan what to do next, they are anxious to return to Rwanda, but concerned about what they will find.

"The church in Rwanda is at a complete standstill until a government is established," Sivage said. "All our itinerant work such as Theological Education by Extension, women's work, medical and veterinary clinics, agriculture projects and other teaching will have to be radically reassessed or eliminated."

Even more focus will likely be on refugees and displaced people in a country already hard hit by malnutrition.

And there will be new realities to face.

As Miss Sivage pointed out: "It's not the Rwanda we knew anymore, not with truckloads of gangs armed with knives looking for people to kill."

MARK: Schwartz still feels that Midland is her home replaced. I did not think he was a good mayor." He was re-elected.

Ms. Schwartz "ran a very upbeat, non-negative campaign. And I think people appreciated that."

After her husband, attorney David Schwartz, died in 1988, Ms. Schwartz decided not to seek political office.

She is what may be perceived as the consummate volunteer. She has been doing volunteer work in Washington since 1966, the year she moved from Texas and married Schwartz.

"When we were first married, we didn't have any money," Ms. Schwartz said. "We were a young, struggling couple. I was teaching school. He was just beginning a law practice."

And she was involved in volunteer work at a drug-treatment center.

"I was doing volunteer work like Lady Astor when we could barely put food on the table."

Ms. Schwartz's primary interests have been nurturing her family — Stephanie, 25, Hilary, 24, and Douglas, 22, college graduates and products of District of Columbia public schools — and bettering public education.

She has served on numerous task forces and boards, including the Children's Education Foundation, the National School Boards Association Task Force on Improving the Quality of Teaching, the National Advisory Council on the Education of Disadvantaged Children, and District of Columbia Citizens for a Better School Board, which she founded in 1981.

"Good teachers are probably the most important thing" in education, Ms. Schwartz said. "What goes on in the classroom is first and foremost, and that's the teachers."

Ms. Schwartz, who is a 1961 graduate of Midland High School, earned a bachelor's degree in special and elementary education in 1965 from the University of Texas.

She said her "interest in and empathy for" her mentally retarded older brother, John Simmons Levitt of Austin, "is what kind of led me into the volunteer-charity, special-education areas."

She is vice chairman of the National Education Commission on Time and Learning, a nine-member group appointed by Congress and the secretary of Education; president of the Metropolitan Police Boys' and Girls' Clubs, and is a member of the National Council of the Friends of the Kennedy Center.

Along with her involvement in Washington's political and volunteer scenes is her social life.

"I get invited to most of the 'right' parties," Ms. Schwartz said. "I never sought that. I really have always got more involved in the political and community aspects of our city."

From the outset, Ms. Schwartz "absolutely fell in love with Washington. I thought it was the most beautiful city I had ever been to — all the greenery and water."

She alluded to the "sheer beauty" of the city: the trees, the countryside, the monuments, the homes.

"Possibly San Francisco would compete with it and maybe Paris. I also found it very exciting: the political environment, the international flavor."

While Washington, D.C., is her home, so is Midland.

Ms. Schwartz, who grew up in Midland in the 1950s and early 1960s, is the daughter of the late Stanley Levitt and Hilda Simmons Levitt, who for 35 years owned and operated the General Clothing Store, a "real mama-papa operation."

Ms. Schwartz said her father was the "most interesting" and "smartest" man she has ever met.

"That doesn't mean I agreed with the way his brain always worked," she said. "He had more fact retention in that brain than anybody I've ever known."

Levitt, who was a 1936 engineering graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, worked on the Manhattan Project in atomic-bomb research in the 1940s. Her mother, a poet, was a journalism graduate of Louisiana State University.

She said her father was "just a powerful presence in my life. There's a real void there (with his recent death). He was real character. My mother was much more low-key, very sweet; had a zip and a personality about her, but was very much overshadowed by this powerful man, my father, who was very strong, very opinionated.

"There was a real devotion there, and for good reason. She was lovely. She was a kind, sweet, easy-to-be-with person. And he needed that."

When she returns to Midland to visit friends, "I feel like I'm home," Ms. Schwartz said.

"Midland is home to me. I love it here. The sunsets are magnificent. And I love the wide-open spaces. I find it very appealing.

"I like the refreshing, straightforward nature of the people of Midland," Ms. Schwartz said.

There is "very little phony stuff here." West Texans are "straightforward and open, and I like that."

streets. This is a way that all kids from Midland can come together and have fun."

Brooks said the program will be funded with about $10,000-$12,000 from the the city's special projects fund.

"If the program is successful, the council will have to decide later on on how to fund it in the future," he said.

Garcia said the program — which will be open to all Midland young people — will kick off the Police Department's Police Athletic League (PAL) program, which he hopes will begin this summer.

"This is a good program to get the PAL program off the ground," he said. "We are still meeting and trying to get the volunteers, funding and the space for the PAL program."

The Police Department has been in the process of setting up the PAL program for almost a year. The program is designed to offer sporting activities to young people with police officers and civilians volunteering as coaches and officials.

Like the PAL program itself, Garcia said he is trying to get officers involved as coaches and referees in the Midnight Basketball program.

"We want to promote interaction between the officers and the kids," he said. "We want to build relationships with these kids."

Both Garcia and Brooks emphasized that the program will be open to all young people in Midland.

"We aren't targeting anyone," Garcia said. "It's coed and open to anyone within the age bracket. However, we realize that this type of program usually attracts low-income, single-parent kids who can't afford to get involved anywhere else.

"No one will be turned away," he continued. "Our goal is to get these kids off the streets and into a good environment for them to channel their energy."

Judge reinstates fraud lawsuit against Tilton

DALLAS (AP) — A lawsuit accusing former television evangelist Robert Tilton of fraud has been reinstated.

State District Judge Eric Moye's ruling came Friday, one day after a federal court jury awarded a Florida couple $1.5 million after finding that they were defrauded by the Dallas preacher.

The lawsuit by Norma Smith of Dallas alleges Tilton defrauded her and about 500 other people through false claims that he could heal ill and injured people.

What specific issues prompted you to run for this position? (limit 100 words)

I am running for mayor because I believe Midland can do better. It's time for a new generation of leadership to chart Midland's future. We must find ways to make good things happen instead of hearing "it can't be done."

Our history is filled with examples of leadership, hard work and compromise. All we have to do is look into our past to learn the secret — dedicated Midlanders who even though they disagreed on details, worked together to make things happen.

Everyone can get what they want when Midland gets what it needs. We all win by having a better city with jobs, strong property values, a wide variety of stores and restaurants, police and fire protection, quality airport and business success virtually unparalleled by any city our size.

But today, something has gone wrong. That "Midland spirit" has been replaced by the word "NO" or "it can't be done." Together we can get that little word "NO" out of Midland's vocabulary and put it where it belongs — against crime, taxes, drugs, intolerance and mediocrity. We need new leadership that is rededicated to the Midland spirit of making good things happen.

Midland's future is at a critical economic crossroad and will require significant mayoral leadership and experience. My economic plan includes the following:

Economic Diversification — With unstable crude oil and natural gas prices, Midland can no longer rely solely on petroleum related industries. We must use our abundant natural gas and and agricultural raw materials to attract new industries to Midland.

Attracting New Business — I have been actively involved in attracting new businesses to Midland. In know that an in-depth knowledge of the city's infrastructure and its ability to create financial incentives are critically important in attracting new business prospects.

Commercial Rezoning — Regrettably, Midland has lost countless business opportunities because many desirable locations are not zoned properly. We must develop an extensive inventory of "ready-to-go" commercial locations so new business can relocate quickly.

I-27 Extension — For almost two years, I have been actively involved in the proposed I-27 extension. I have participated in numerous meetings from Chihuahua to Washington selling our "New Trade Corridor" concept. The next 12-15 months will be critical in the I-27 route selection process.

International Trade — In order to diversify our economy, we must compete globally. Even before NAFTA, I have been actively involved in seeking international trade opportunities in Midland.

CITY COUNCIL, DISTRICT 3

TOM DOLLAHITE

Native Texan; 28 year Midland resident and taxpayer; Graduate of Texas A&M; Vietnam Veteran; Retired Army Officer; Currently employed as corporate pilot; Very familiar with the situation at Midland International Airport; Have actively participated in debates involving several extravagant local tax increasing proposals, (including the original 1973 Midland Civic Center ($20,099,122), and the recently proposed and defeated City sales tax increase election for "Economic Development").

I am running for City Council, Place 3, to try to save the taxpayers of Midland lots of money. I am fully convinced that we do not need to build a new terminal building at the Midland Airport. Our present terminal is quite adequate, and with renovation and proper maintenance, will cost much less than the $29,000,000 the new terminal is forecast to cost. The City is now giving our Chamber of Commerce a large sum of money each year for its "Economic Development" program. I don't feel that taxpayer money should be used for this program which primarily benefits chamber members. I strongly oppose both of the spending programs and will attempt to modify each of them. Midland is a wonderful place in which to live, work and raise a family — but I feel that there are much better ways to spend our tax money than build pie-in-the-sky airports or fund "economic development" projects with questionable results. I feel that the best way to build and improve Midland is to assure that we have the lowest tax rates possible.

ED VOGLER

I have been involved in civic, cultural and educational affairs in Midland for some 44 years. I am a past board member of the Museum of the Southwest, Keep Midland Beautiful, Midland Community Theatre, Tax Review Board-Midland Central Appraisal District, and City of Midland Airport Advisory Board. Currently, I serve on the Chamber of Commerce Transportation Committee, Visual Aid News Mobile Board, and Project Awaken against crime and drug abuse.

I have always been an outspoken critic when I see tax dollars being wasted. Therefore, I should become involved in the Midland City Council, whereby I would be able to actively participate in decisions regarding the expenditure of tax dollars. Members of the City Council, as custodians of tax dollars, have an obligation to the taxpayer to see that maximum benefit is achieved with these funds, especially in today's economic climate. I pledge to the voters that I will continue with diligence my ultra-conservative approach to the expenditure of tax dollars. Special privileges should never be granted to a favored few. All taxpayers should be represented and treated equally.

MIDLAND COLLEGE, PLACE 4

PARKER M. HUMES

Midland College Trustee past 7 years — Graduate of Baylor University — Degree in Communications — Former President and 6-year member of MISD School Board. Former Chairman of Leadership Midland —served on numerous education boards and 30 committees. Businessman and resident of Midland for over 30 years.

A sincere interest in education and service to my community. Midland College not only educates our young people but it is instrumental in the lives of most Midlanders from all walks of life — from Kid's College for young children to adult education courses for grandparents. I want our college to continue to be responsive and sensitive to the needs of our community. To educate our young people after High School — to provide quality education for those returning to college seeking a new career or preparing for upper level college work. To be aware of changes in our economy and employment needs so that we may assist in training to aid our local employers. The Midland College Board of Trustees should continue to be diligent in watching how local tax dollars are spent assuring Midlanders that they are getting the very best investment in the advancement of education. Midland College is and should continue to strive to be a full service community college.

HUGH G. WHITE

I have over thirty years' experience in management and administration in the oil business and the Air Force. I have extensive background in budget and finance development, with degrees in accounting, business administration, and education. I have been a student at Midland College for the past ten years and am acquainted with its organizational structure and educational functions.

I have the willingness, skills, background and time to serve Midland College and the community.

A — Midland College is one focal point of Midland's future economic development. Midland College trains and educates thousands each year for local businesses. However, it sorely needs newer equipment in several departments. Some students are currently training on obsolete equipment rarely used today in industry. This reduces the marketability of the student's job skills and reflects poorly on the school. Midland College should be teaching state of the art disciplines on state of technology equipment.

B — The Midland College Board of Trustees should be more representative of Midland's electorate. In the past the board has been composed of a select few who stayed in office term after term, some for over twenty years. This is NOT representative government. This precludes new ideas and solutions that accompany new blood. The Board of Trustees needs representation from a broader spectrum of our community than it has had previously. It should also have a more rapid turnover of the Board of Trustees. The six year term is adequate to master the job (learn the ropes). There is no reason for anyone to serve more than one or two terms on the Board. I pledge to serve only one term if elected, no more.

MIDLAND INDEPENDENT SCHOOL DISTRICT, PLACE 6

DIANNE ANDERSON

A parent of three students: one in high school, one in junior high and one in elementary. I have been involved in MISD schools for over 10 years in numerous areas of the educational system such as serving on the Long Range Planning Committee, helping in the classroom, serving as PTA President, and serving on the Executive Board of the City Council PTA. I am the recipient of a Life Time Membership to the Texas PTA for service. Presently I am serving in the District DEIC, Fannin's CEIC and MISD's Citizen Advisory Committee. I am involved, committed and interested in the direction of education in this community.

I believe that all children can be taught and can learn. Therefore, I believe that Midland residents, with their commitment to quality education, should not be asked to be satisfied with being ranked just above state average in a state that is ranked 46th in SAT scores nationally. I also believe that spending more money per student, just because we are slightly below state average, does not mean a better education. (District of Columbia spends almost twice as much as MISD and is ranked 50th while Iowa, ranked No. 1, has below-average per pupil spending.)

I believe that teachers should be allowed to teach, not have to baby sit or worry about their safety. I believe that parents and students should be held accountable for the student's behavior at school.

I believe that parents know what is best for their children rather than telling them what is best. I believe a district school board member should represent the views of the district.

My willingness to question and explore all the possibilities and not be drawn into the "status quo" syndrome even when there is pressure, makes me the best candidate.

LEONARD R. MONROE

My professional and educational background has included 30 years of increasingly responsible management, training and education, program development, and public relations experience in the field of education. My varied experience in teaching and administration has given me the unique ability to implement effective teaching and innovative programs which benefit all students. As a professional educator, I have the people-oriented training skills to productively work with people to create a highly motivated work environment with excellent morale and increased productivity.

As a member of the Board of Trustees, I would work to provide strong instruction within the school district to further the education process of students and to provide close communication between the community and the school. If a school has strong, effective educators all students can learn. Teachers are crucial to the success of a school system, and they excel when they are provided with consistent administrative support. Enthusiasm and high staff morale are critical at all levels. The problems facing public education today are many and varied. A board member must be fair and consistent in the solving of problems. Strong leadership ability is needed as an effective board member must be visionary and proactive. We must work together to insure the success of all students.

GARY R. WILLIS

With Staley stepping down and Dobey's skills concentrating in technology, I become the Board's only businessman. I bring to the board the fiscal accountability skills of the CPA/financial executive. Further, I bring the heart of the teacher. For five years I taught in Texas high school classrooms. In participating in over 180 hours of school trustee training my knowledge and skills concerning educational issues are current and ready for the policy challenges that we face.

I seek to finish that which I began. Recognizing increasing concerns of citizens for seeing improved discipline, I initiated a dialogue at the school board level concerning teaching the five R's: Reading, 'Riting, 'Rithmetic, Respect and Responsibilty. Increased security, pepper spray, drug dogs, and the like treat the symptoms of student misbehavior. I seek to ensure that this community and School Board again empower our local professional educators to teach positive character traits side-by-side with academic skills. Students must learn to be both smart and good. I seek to free our local educators of the shackles of the past. I am not satisfied with the learning achievement of many of our students. The heart of the teacher within me wants to see kids delight in learning. I strongly encourage our professional educators in the attempts to use better instructional approaches with kids. I applaud block scheduling, teaming, reading recovery, the consideration of controlled choice, and programs which promise greater measures of student learning and success. Finally, I seek to strengthen the bond between parent-child-teacher-principal. With over 23,000 students we must be ever vigilant to fight to keep our schools personal, inviting, where parents are welcome partners.

POLICE REPORTS

Shooting

ODESSA — An Odessa man died following a shooting Friday night.

Luis Francisco Rodriquez, 17, was pronounced dead at 2 a.m. Saturday by Dr. R. Johnson at Medical Center Hospital.

Investigators of Metro Homicide Unit and the Criminal Investigation Bureau were called to the hospital about 11:20 p.m. They found Rodriquez, who had been shot once in the head with a large caliber handgun, according to Metro Homicide reports.

Investigators learned that the shooting had occurred about 11:15 p.m. in the 1300 block of Drury Lane.

Patrol officers picked up Frank Levario Vargas, 28, at the same block, and questioned him in connection with the incident, according to reports.

Officers seized a .38-caliber revolver, along with some expended shell casings, according to reports.

Information gained during the investigation lead Justice of the Peace J.P. Hungerford to issue an arrest warrant for Vargas, who was charged with murder, according to reports.

His bond was set at $55,000. He had not posted bond late Saturday night, officials said.

Investigation

ODESSA — The investigation into the deaths of Manuel and Merced Aguirre was continuing Saturday. Odessa police said further information concerning their deaths — which have been classified as homicides — was expected to be released this morning.

A family member found Aguirre, 73, and his wife, 65, dead in their 220 Schell St. residence about 9:30 a.m. Friday.

Ector County Medical Examiner Dr. Sparks Veasey is conducting autopsies on the victims.

Accident

ODESSA — Two other persons involved in the Thursday accident, in which Ray Gilbert Rodriquez died, were treated and released from Medical Center Hospital with minor injuries.

Rodriquez, 18, was killed after his four-wheeler collided with a truck in the 3100 block of Park Boulevard.

Robbery

A Midland convenience store clerk who was robbed at knifepoint early Saturday morning, was not injured during the incident.

Vernon Haggard, 36, a clerk at the 7-Eleven at 4401 W. Illinois Ave., told police that a man, 18 to 19, approached him, pulled out a hunting knife and said, "Give me all of your money or I will stab you."

Haggard handed over about $37 in cash from the register and $58 from his wallet, according to a police report.

The suspect is described as a Hispanic male, 5 feet, 8 inches tall, about 180 pounds, with long black hair and a thin moustache. He was wearing blue jeans and a green shirt.

The police K-9 patrol tracked the suspect to the 3400 block of Ohio Avenue.

Assault

A manager at Motel 6, 1000 S. Midkiff Road, was transported to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center following an assault early Saturday morning.

The manager, who was not identifed, was attacked by a Hispanic male, 16 or 17 who threw a rock at his head, according to a police report.

The victim was taken to the hospital in a private vehicle. No further details about his condition were available Saturday.

Saturday

Burglary: It was reported at 9:05 a.m. that a window at Pinkies, 608 Andrews Highway, had been broken out and four 12-packs of beer were taken.

Vandalism: Andy Anderson reported at 9:08 a.m. that a window was damaged at 2301 Cotton Flat Road, No. F1.

Theft: Bob's Grocery, 1822 E. Pecan, reported at 12:56 p.m. that Bluebonnet Bucks Lotto tickets were taken.

Donor program to conduct bone marrow tests in Midland

Staff Report

A community-wide bone marrow testing program will be conducted from 12:30-6 p.m. April 30 at Casa de Amigos in an effort to find compatible donors for thousands of potential transplant recipients.

A National Marrow Donor Program representative will be at Casa de Amigos to perform donor testing and answer questions regarding the NMDP.

Those people in need of transplants come in all ages, genders and ethnicities. The best possibility for locating a donor is to find a person of the same ethnic group because the tissue typing is inherited in the same way as eye, hair and skin color.

Unfortunately, only a small percentage of volunteer donors are of minority groups such as Hispanic or African-American, officials said. This reduces the chances of identifying a perfect match for some potential recipients.

Becoming a donor is a simple process. For eligibility, the donor must be between 18 and 55 and in good general health. The donor will be asked to complete a brief consent form and have a small sample of blood drawn. From this sample, the tissue type is determined, and that potential donor is entered into the NMDP registry. The odds of a match are one in 20,000.

There are a number of West Texans on the waiting list, including Amy Cunningham Lightner, a 23-year-old Fort Stockton mother of three children as well as Shane Warren, a 6-year-old boy from Odessa. A 13-year-old African-American youth from Midland, Kant Walker, is also searching for a donor.

For more information call Luanne Howard or Linda Wood at 1-800-643-2448.

Midland College aviation student takes top honor in statewide contest

Staff Report

Ron Wallin, a student in the Midland College Aviation Maintenance Technology School, won a first-place award April 16 at a statewide aviation contest.

Wallin took his award in the General Competition, one of four contest divisions at the contest in Dallas. Students from aviation programs in the state competed in the annual Texas Aviation Maintenance contests in Powerplant, Airframe, General, and Electrical divisions.

"This was the first time for Midland College students to enter the contests, so we learned a lot which can enable us to compete even better in future years," said Dennis Givens, instructor.

Wallin, from Odessa, is a second-year Aviation Maintenance Technology student and is scheduled to complete the two-year program in August.

Also competing from Midland College were Mark Henderson and Rusty Patterson, both of Midland. Both are second-year students. Instructor Mona Roberts also attended the event.

Guest speaker for the contest banquet was U.S. Air Force Col. Frederick Gregory, three-time shuttle astronaut.

The contest was sponsored by Aviall, which held the contests at its Dallas Love Field facilities.

Midland College currently is accepting applications for the 1994 fall class for its Aviation Maintenance Technology program. It offers a one-year or two-year certificate program in Airframe and Powerplant technologies, certified by the Federal Aviation Administration.

Additional information is available by contacting program director Bud Stapleton, 561-8953; by visiting the MC facility at Midland International Airport; or from MC counselors at the main campus Student Center.

Fisher appears with Mattox, asks for party support

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Richard Fisher, with defeated opponent Jim Mattox at his side, beseeched party leaders to support him Saturday and vowed to beat GOP incumbent Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison.

"I cannot do it alone. I need you," Fisher told State Democratic Executive Committee members. Most had supported former Texas Attorney General Mattox against newcomer Fisher, a Dallas multimillionaire, in the April 12 runoff election.

Fisher, who along with Mattox got a standing ovation from the crowd, said he felt "a deep sense of humility and the burden of responsibility" in carrying the Democratic banner. He promised he can win in the November general election.

"I can beat that woman with something other than a notebook, folks . . . I'll beat her because we will unify together," he said of Mrs. Hutchison, a former state treasurer who was accused last year by a one-time Treasury employee of striking the worker with a notebook binder. Mrs. Hutchison has denied the allegation.

Fisher recognized the five Democratic committee members, among more than five dozen, who originally supported his race and asked the whole group, "Be my friend. Be my supporter."

"I beg you, please . . . unify together," he said.

Committee member Barry Sprouse from Dallas County, who had backed Mattox, said he will support Fisher and believes others will as well. "He's our nominee."

Fisher saluted Mattox — who served as a state lawmaker and congressman before his two terms as state attorney general — as a Democratic hero, putting his arm around the shoulders of the man he beat in a hard-fought campaign.

Mattox acknowledged his disappointment at losing but spoke against carrying grudges.

"You get out there and you fight the fight as hard as you can, but when the game is over with, whether you win it or whether you lose it, you walk to the center of the field and you shake hands," Mattox said.

Nixon overcame many hurdles during lifetime

Last week, while President Richard Nixon lay in New York Hospital suffering from the effects of a major stroke, the nation was given ample opportunity to ponder the impact of the chief executive who opened China to the world, led the United States through the darkest years of the Vietnam War, ended the military draft during an era of peak resistance to it, and eventually resigned the presidency because of the Watergate scandal.

The period of soul-searching regarding Nixon is good. His impact on this nation's political life is far reaching and significant. At this time, the nation needs to recognize that fact.

Nixon was either loved or despised by Americans, but few people regardless of their personal feelings about him would deny that Nixon was an outstanding chief executive in the field of foreign policy.

While he was particularly strong in foreign policy matters, at home Nixon battled a nation divided by the Vietnam War and groping for a solution to the death and destruction being unleashed in Southeast Asia. At the height of American involvement in the war and the divisiveness it bred in the United States, the break-in occurred at the Democratic Party headquarters in the Watergate building complex in Washington, D.C. that eventually led to the House Judiciary Committee recommending three articles of impeachment against Nixon in July 1974. Faced with imminent impeachment, Nixon resigned from the presidency on Aug. 9, 1974. The nation breathed a sigh of relief. The perceived "threat" Nixon had posed to our republic was removed.

Even more compelling, however, was Nixon's life after he left the White House in disgrace in 1974. After departing, he returned to San Clemente, Calif. where he avoided active participation in politics and spent much of his time playing golf and writing. In the late 1970s and early 1980s, the publication of several books, newspaper and magazine articles he authored and speaking engagements brought Nixon back into the American consciousness. Some of the presidents elected after Nixon called on him from time to time for counsel and the fallen leader actually recouped some of his earlier prestige and came to be thought of as something of an elder statesman.

Nixon's amazing "recovery" in the eyes of the American public probably should not have been so surprising. After what was viewed as a politically shattering loss to John F. Kennedy Jr. in the 1960 presidential election, Nixon recovered from the defeat to win the presidency eight years later. That singular fact bespoke Nixon's outstanding ability to overcome defeat.

Americans love a fighter. Americans love an underdog who can overcome tremendous odds to win. Americans love a person who struggles to prove his worth.

Is there any question why the nation's heart went out to Richard Milhous Nixon when he lay in a New York hospital struggling for life?

Governor dodged ball to play lobbying game!

Whether Gov. Ann Richards really didn't want to accept an offer to attend the inaugural game at The Ballpark in Arlington because it came from her gubernatorial opponent, or whether she "usually has to choose work" over having fun doesn't matter. What does matter is that she was in Washington on Monday lobbying to keep defense jobs in Texas, which has been devastated by military downsizing.

With the long baseball season only into its second week, the governor has plenty of time to catch many Ranger games. However, neither she nor this state has a lot of time to prepare for the next wave of defense shocks. Thus Gov. Richards deserves a lot of credit for being proactive.

Particularly significant was her effort to get as much information about the next round of base closures scheduled for next year. The governor wisely wants to get out ahead of the process this time. . . .

By passing up the Rangers' home opener, the governor did her part toward helping our state get passed over when the next round of defense cuts rolls around.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, April 24th, the 114th day of 1994. There are 251 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 24th, 1800, Congress approved a bill establishing the Library of Congress in Washington D.C., appropriating $5,000 "for the purchase of such books as may be necessary."

On this date:

In 1792, the national anthem of France, "La Marseillaise," was composed by Capt. Claude Joseph Rouget de Lisle, an officer stationed in Strasbourg.

In 1877, federal troops were ordered out of New Orleans, ending the North's post-Civil War rule in the South.

In 1898, Spain declared war on the United States after rejecting America's ultimatum to withdraw from Cuba.

In 1915, the Ottoman Turkish Empire began the brutal mass deportation of Armenians during World War I.

In 1916, about 1,600 Irish nationalists launched the Easter Rising by seizing several key sites in Dublin, including the General Post Office. (The rising was put down by British forces several days later.)

In 1953, British statesman Winston Churchill was knighted by Queen Elizabeth II at Buckingham Palace.

Politicians dog paddle in Whitewater

WASHINGTON — Asked to cite a turning point in the Whitewater saga, a House Democratic leader harked back to the grilling President Clinton got at his last press conference. Democrats spent that night glued to the television — not knowing whether to expect a crash or a comeback.

Anderson

"We were all in the cloakroom," this source recalled. "You could have heard a pin drop. Everyone was wondering how long we were going to have to live with this. But every member there said it was all over that night. There was relief."

In some respects, the relief was premature. To be sure, Clinton made a comeback. He turned in a virtuoso performance, fielding questions with seeming candor and command. The president's poll numbers soared 10 percentage points. Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, who had earlier predicted a "bombshell," began calling for a "respite."

There's been little time for Democrats to relish this "respite," according to party officials. The next battle is already brewing over the shape and structure of congressional hearings. Democrats are drawing up scenarios to satisfy the mandate for hearings while precluding them from turning into a morality play on the first family — or from starting a family feud within their own ranks.

Whitewater may be receding from center stage but the question of hearings hangs over the Democratic and Republican cloakrooms.

"The Democratic leadership is working as hard as it can to have zero hearings on Whitewater," said one House Republican strategist. "They presume that if they look attentive but can't quite reach an agreement maybe this will go away."

"We're in a dilemma," explains one House Democrat who has participated in high-level Whitewater strategy meetings in recent weeks. There are at least four committees claiming some jurisdiction over Whitewater. According to sources, the House leadership is tilting toward a plan creating a special "task force."

Further complicating the search is that the task force members should not be perceived as being too cozy with the Clinton administration. Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., is considered a likely member because of his background on the Banking and Judiciary committees. So would Rep. John M. Spratt Jr., D-S.C..

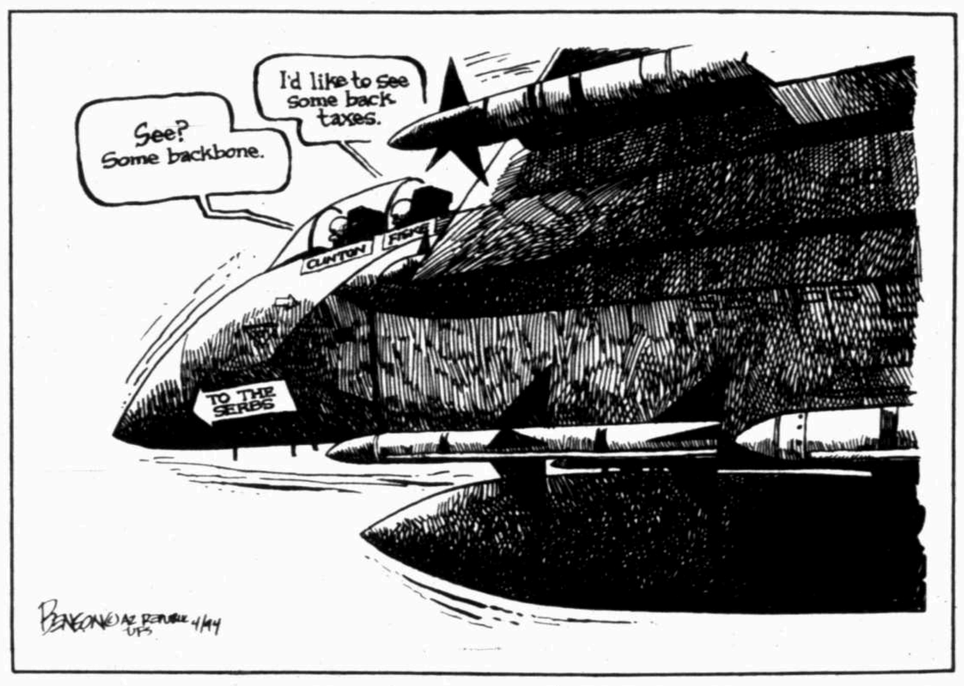

These machinations wouldn't be necessary but for the fact that Democrats are playing a game of keep-away with Banking Committee Chairman Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas, who many Democrats view as an unguided missile, and retiring and Rep. Stephen L. Neal, D-N.C. "There's no way we're going to give it to Gonzalez," said one Democrat.

After Gonzalez was ruled out, serious thought was given to handing it over to Rep. Steve Neal, D-N.C., who heads the financial institutions subcommittee of the House Banking Committee. "The original thinking was that they were going to send it to Steve Neal," explained one source. "Then they (leadership) realized two big deficiencies in that theory. First he's retiring and has nothing to lose."

The GOP's big gambit is congressional hearings. They can't wait for — or count on — Special Counsel Robert Fiske to breathe new life into the sputtering scandal. Democrats believe that House Minority Leader Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., has a strategy. "Let me tell you what Newt wants us to do," said this official. "They have a three-year strategy on this. They want us to intervene, mess up the evidence, therefore no prosecutions, and blame us for no prosecution. We aren't that dumb"

For Democrats, hearings are a hurdle to clear; for Republicans they are a vehicle for stoking the story. In either case, this is no time for Democrats to feel any "relief."

Debate erupts over selection of jurors

WASHINGTON — Writing for the Supreme Court majority, announcing the conclusion that lawyers may no longer base peremptory challenges to potential jurors on the basis of sex, Justice Blackmun says the conclusion is "axiomatic." By that he means, judging from his opinion, that the conclusion is so self-evident as to need no constitutional argument. But so flimsy is his opinion, and so foolish is the ruling, that both are demolished by, of all things, a concurring opinion.

Will

In an Alabama paternity trial a Tennessee salesman was found to be the father of a child and ordered to pay child support. The state, on behalf of the mother, used its peremptory "strikes" to produce from a pool of 36 jurors (12 male, 24 female) an all-female jury. The salesman appealed, arguing that the logic of a 1986 ruling, in which the court held that peremptory strikes solely on the basis of race violate the Constitution's equal protection guarantee, should also proscribe strikes on the basis of sex.

In this Alabama case concerning the exclusion of men from a jury, Blackmun waxes indignant about injustices to women, arriving at the thought that peremptory challenges arising from "gender stereotypes" reinforce retrograde thinking about "the relative abilities of men and women." Actually, what is at issue is not abilities, but different inclinations in certain trial contexts. Never mind. The vote was 6-3, with Stevens, Souter, Ginsburg, Kennedy and O'Connor siding with Blackmun.

However, O'Connor's strange concurring opinion actually shreds the decision it ostensibly is concurring in. After expressing perfunctory agreement with the majority concerning the equal protection clause, she enumerates the costs and contradictions of this ruling.

With this latest intrusion of new rules constitutionalizing the jury selection process, she says, the court "increases the number of cases in which jury selection — once a sideshow — will become part of the main event." And the decision erodes the role of the peremptory challenge, which for centuries has been considered a contribution to fair trials.

She notes that the court has hitherto held that the "essential nature of the peremptory challenge is that it is one exercised without a reason stated, without inquiry and without being subject to the court's control." By making peremptory challenges less discretionary and more challengeable, "we also increase the possibility that biased jurors will be allowed onto the jury, because sometimes a lawyer will be unable to provide an acceptable gender-neutral explanation even though the lawyer is in fact correct that the juror is unsympathetic."

Furthermore, O'Connor says, in jurisdictions where lawyers must make peremptory challenges in open court, they may be deterred from using their quota of such challenges because if they are unable to justify them to the trial court's satisfaction, the court will sit a juror who knows the lawyer thought him or her unfit. And, says O'Connor, the Supreme Court "has now added an additional burden to the state and federal trial process, taken a step closer to eliminating the peremptory challenge, and diminished the ability of litigants to act on sometimes accurate gender-based assumptions about juror attitudes."

O'Connor notes that reasons for peremptory challenges often "cannot be stated, for a trial lawyer's judgments about a juror's sympathies are sometimes based on experienced hunches and educated guesses." She says we cherish peremptory challenges as they have been exercised for centuries precisely because we know good lawyers often will have intuitions they cannot explain. "But, as we add, layer by layer, additional constitutional restraints on the use of the peremptory, we force lawyers to articulate what we know is often inarticulable."

New layers may be coming, as Justice Scalia argues in his dissent, in which Rehnquist and Thomas joined, and O'Connor should have. What other restrictions will be coming on peremptories based on "impermissible stereotypes"? Religious stereotypes, for starters. And there are many other possibilities for new rules concerning biases about group characteristics.

George Will's column is distributed by Washington Post Writers Group.

RUSSELL BAKER

Mean mechanical firms breed callous society

It's mean out here. Half the country is cheering for a foreign government to go ahead and beat an American, age 18, to bloody pulp because he vandalized cars and signs in Singapore.

Russell Baker

This was rotten of him, no doubt, and he is also sentenced to do jail time for it, but it says something about the collapse of American ego when half the country starts cheering for foreign powers to beat up our fellow citizens.

Inside the Beltway, where I ventured recently, there was deep philosophical calm about this apparent onset of national self-loathing. They are thoughtful inside the Beltway. So thoughtful. It must have something to do with the famous Beltway's power to concentrate the mind even as it deadens the emotions.

"You must understand about the bloody-pulp beating," these thoughtful people explained — all in more or less the same words with that same philosophical calm so easy for a person to maintain about a bloody beating when he is not the party about to receive it — "you must understand, there are a lot of people out there angry about crime."

"Out there," when spoken by people inside the Beltway, means "outside the Beltway," a vast space that exists mostly to be polled.

Occasionally a reporter travels there and, on returning, is said to have been "out in the country."

It's a little like those old movies about British India in which minions of the Raj sit around Delhi drilling the regiment and occasionally welcoming back some chap from the Blues who's been "up in the Punjab."

So the anger about crime "out there" is submitted to explain the mean public mood.

Its most revered corporations, for instance, have made a boast of being "lean and mean" as they betray years of employee loyalty by cutting thousands of workers and managers off payrolls.

In a secular nation the corporation is the closest thing we have to an idol worthy of worship. If meanness leads to corporate success, a citizen might be sensibly persuaded by the example.

Many people now live in fear of being wiped out in onsets of meanness required for the higher good of corporations and country.

Economically therapeutic though such meanness surely is, the individual vulnerable to its salubrious savagery might naturally feel tempted to kick somebody even more helpless than himself. Or, as in the present case, to cry, "Lay on with a will, Singapore!"

Such theories receive no hearing inside the Beltway. It is too charmed right now by crime to entertain dull economic theories for human behavior. Everybody has polls showing all America is absolutely terrified by reports of inner-city crime whose victims are overwhelmingly black.

Voting "tough" on crime is easier for Congress than facing intractable urban problems. And so drug-inspired criminals, who deal out capital punishment to each other daily, will soon be subject to official capital punishment by the federal government!

There seems little disposition inside the Beltway to deal with the economic roots of American uneasiness.

That is, an awful lot of Americans are disappointed with their lives, think they are moving down the economic scale and are pessimistic about moving up again.

There isn't much in Clinton economics to encourage their optimism. As a "new Democrat," he is basically a pre-Reagan Republican, which is to say a trickle-down fellow.

He is betting on those lean and mean corporations to do well, thus creating enough new jobs to improve the nation's mood. It isn't clear how this is going to stop the relentless march of electronic automations which makes it easier and easier to produce more and more while putting more and more people out of work.

It will probably get meaner out here — or out there as they say inside the Beltway.

Russell Baker's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

Vogler brings benefits to citizens of Midland

Regarding the coming election for Midland City Council, District 3 has an excellent choice in Ed Vogler. Ed's longtime interest in and surveillance of Midland city government has not always endeared him to those in city government, but the citizens have benefited immensely. With Ed on the council, I feel Midland will get more bang for its bucks.

Vogler's opponent, as stated in the announcement of his candidacy sounds good and conservative, but I fear he is more appropriate for a smaller town and a less competitive age.

Let's go for Ed Vogler.

Board trustee candidate's brochures contain lies

Gary Willis, District 6 Midland Independent School District (MISD) board trustee, in his reelection campaign, has been handing out brochures that are full of lies! He's been extremely misleading to prospective voters during many appearances at various organizations' meetings.

He reports MISD schools are doing "better than the state average in academic testings." Wrong! Recent TEA results ... Midland is now BELOW AVERAGE in Texas. And Texas has dropped from 46th in the U.S. to 47th.

He is proud of "restructuring the administration" and "being lean and mean" by "not replacing departing administrative personnel." Wrong! Executive director of instruction is now working on a contract basis! Director of athletics is being done by contract people! MISD redistributed the assistant superintendent duties to four key administrative employees ... whom were all given brand new company cars and raises! MISD is the largest employer in Midland, with one employee per every nine students in Midland. MISD has a $98 million-dollar budget this year. Does this sound lean and mean?

Willis condemns A.B.L.E. saying they should not be believed because they say MISD schools are in "sorry shape." A.B.L.E. stands for Advocate for Better Learning & Education ... is there anyone in Midland who does not advocate better learning and education? Although A.B.L.E. applauds several good MISD educational programs and many extraordinary teachers, our schools could be much better! Willis says a vote for him is a vote against A.B.L.E., I thought he was running against Dianne Anderson and Leonard Monroe ... I didn't realize A.B.L.E. was in this race!

Vogler is outspoken critic of wasted city tax dollars

In (Tom) Dollahite's announcement of Thursday, April 14, that he is running against Ed Vogler for City Council District 3 representative, he suggests some impractical ways he can save tax dollars. His suggestion is that the people should be allowed to vote for the construction of the Midland International Airport terminal and to stop funding to the Midland Chamber of Commerce for economic development.

Three public hearings were held by Mayor (J.D.) Faircloth, members of the City Council, and representatives from the airport board regarding construction of the airport terminal. The opportunity was presented at that time for the public to voice their opinion. No concerted effort to oppose construction was put forth by any group. Midland must proceed with the construction of a new terminal, as the process requires approximately four years from start to finish. If one looks at the facts from an economic standpoint, one can see that the City Council and current airport board made a wise business decision in replacing an inadequate and deteriorating 37-year-old structure.

I am surprised that Dollahite, with his reasoning, did not suggest that we eliminate water and sewage services because they also require the expenditure of a large amount of tax dollars. The Chamber of Commerce, working with the Midland City Council, must move forward to seek economic development at every opportunity. Without such efforts, Midland would die on the vine and become a ghost town. I will support Ed Vogler for City Council District 3 representative, as he has demonstrated throughout the years that he has prudently monitored the expenditure of tax dollars from all taxing entities and has been an outspoken critic when tax dollars were being wasted.

Anderson will investigate issues before voting

I would like to urge Midland District 6 school board voters (Bush, Rusk, Fannin and Scharbauer Elementary Schools) to support Dianne Anderson. She is mother to three children, one in high school, one in junior high school and one in elementary school.

She graduated from Lee High School and has lived in Midland for over 20 years. She has been extremely involved in Midland Independent School District (MISD) schools, served as PTA president, served on the City Council PTA executive board, served on Site Based Management Teams (both CEIC and DEIC), served twice on MISD's Long Range Planning Committee, has coached boys basketball and girls volleyball, has been PTA life member recipient, recipient of MISD (VIPS) Volunteer of the Year, helped numerous teachers in the classroom, is a member of St. Ann's Catholic Church and teaches Spanish at Midland College's continuing education department.

I know this fine lady personally and would be proud to have her represent me ANY day! She is impassioned with improving both the quality and environment of Midland schools. She will listen to anyone's input who lives in Midland, regarding MISD schools! She will be accountable to both District 6 residents as well as the entire community! She is not afraid to ask questions, will work hard to investigate the issues and become knoledgeable before voting on them. She will keep in contact with Midland residents regarding any issues affecting MISD schools.

Absentee voting began April 18. PLEASE VOTE! Even if you don't have children in MISD schools, your tax dollars are involved! Vote for Dianne Anderson.

Readers' views on: Mayoral candidates

Mayor should carefully consider his comments

I am writing this letter first as a Christian, and second as a concerned constituent of Midland.

I must say that I find Mayor Faircloth's derogatory comments toward Bobby Burns utterly deplorable. I was so looking forward to at least one political campaign that was beyond the point of candidates feeling the need to belittle each other's character in order to win a political victory.

Mr. Faircloth's "reliable resources," as he called them, are obviously not very reliable. He evidently has no idea of the tremendous financial strain that an illness such as cystic fibrosis can place on a family. Not only do I know Bobby, Deni, and Austin, but I knew Tyler as well. However, only knowing them and what they went through does not qualify me as knowing the kind of financial burden this disease can place on a family. Having two nephews who have cystic fibrosis does. Breathing machines alone cost in excess of $800. The medicine that these children must take before each meal is extremely expensive. These expenses are not even a drop in the bucket compared to the trips that they have to make to the Children's Hospital in Ft. Worth, (or where ever their respective specialist practices), every four months just for their checkups. Most cystic fibrosis patients are also required to check into the hospital for a two-week period of time each year to have what is called a "build up." This is a process in which the children are given antibiotics in order to strengthen their ability to fight infection. They are also faced with enormous hospital bills incurred each time the children have to be admitted to the hospital. That can be quite often, as Cystic Fibrosis destroys a child's immune system. A common cold is almost nonexistent for these children, as it most often develops into pneumonia, which can kill them.

As a Christian, I cannot understand the maliciousness of Mayor Faircloth's comments, nor can I understand what he could hope to gain from them. God's word tells us in the third chapter of the book of James that a man who can control his tongue can control himself in every other way. It also tells us that the tongue is a very dangerous weapon and likens it to a tiny spark that has the capability of starting a huge forest fire.

As a constituent, I do not understand how a man of Mayor Faircloth's position can call himself an upstanding, caring and concerned individual when he has consistently proven otherwise by his action and his words.

Please understand, I am not writing this letter to badger or berate Mr. Faircloth, and I truly apologize if anything that I have said has offended him in any way. I only wish to make him aware of the profound effect that his statements have made on some of the citizens of Midland.

I will be praying for Mr. Faircloth, and I will continue to pray for Bobby Burns as the campaign continues, and I truly hope that Mayor Faircloth will carefully consider any further comments that he may wish to make regarding this matter.

Candidate's tax troubles don't change voter's mind

So, mayoral candidate Bobby Burns owes the U.S. Treasury for federal income taxes; don't all working individuals? Bobby Burns was and still is getting my vote in the upcoming election.

Shame, shame on you J.D. Faircloth for this highhanded escapade.

Mayor seems to have been digging in mud

Wasn't it just a week ago that our mayor was thanking his opponent, Mr. Bobby Burns, for running a clean campaign and discussing issues that affect Midland and the future of its citizens instead of dealing in personalities and dragging out negative issues? Boy, what a difference a week makes! It looks like our mayor was just trying to lull Mr. Burns to sleep while he dug around in the mud himself! Without his digging, we would never know about the situation between his opponent and the IRS ... he was just doing his civic duty when he contacted the media. What a bunch of baloney!

Our mayor, who has never run his own business but instead has worked for the other guy, is attacking a man who has earned the admiration and respect of all with whom he has dealt over the years. If owing Uncle Sam disqualifies someone for serving in public office, then most, if not all, of our government leaders would have to resign. Besides, owing the IRS just means that you have disagreed over a matter. If you have ever had any dealings with these people, you know that it is one place where you are guilty and then have to prove your innocence. And even if you are right, once they make a decision, you are simply stuck.

Whatever the situation with Mr. Burns, I would rather have a man in the office of mayor who is abiding by his word to keep the campaign on issues than a man who says one thing and then, when your back is turned, tries to bring you down to his level. One of them is a leader, the other one is a politician ... you can decide which is more worthy of your vote.

Burns has essential components for mayor

Being a veteran of almost six years on the Midland Planning Commission, I have had the opportunity to work closely with Bobby Burns on numerous projects related to the city's development. During that time I have developed a personal friendship and deep respect for Bobby.

As planning commissioners, we face a wide range of issues, often reviewing requests requiring difficult decision making. Public hearings are often emotionally charged to say the least. In my tenure on the commission, I can think of no one who has demonstrated more fairness and genuine concern for the citizenry and the proper development of Midland.

I think Bobby Burns shares with me and many others the true desire to restore the positive attitude that has made Midland the great community that it is. I feel that his vision, character, and integrity are essential components for a mayor, with his Planning Commission experience as an invaluable ingredient contributing to those efforts.

I am sure that many would agree that our vote in this race is an affirmation of Bobby Burns' vision for the future of Midland.

Mark T. Wellen

Tax issues should not enter political races

I feel I have no choice but to voice my concerns about the recent news articles about Bobby Burns. Many people may not be aware that Bobby and Denise Burns lost their son, Tyler, to cystic fibrosis. This tragedy is one that all of us hope we never have to experience. The medical bills that Bobby and Denise incurred were very substantial as a result. I personally applaud Bobby and Denise; they are survivors.

They have had to work very hard to overcome the financial difficulties involved in such a lengthy medical illness. When tragedies like this strike families in our community, we very often band together to raise funds to help them through these hardships. To my knowledge Bobby and Denise have weathered this financial storm on their own. I feel very strongly that this type of issue needs to be left out of politics.

I know Bobby well enough to say that he will not go looking under the rug to find dirt on J.D. Faircloth and will stay above such political tactics. I can only encourage both candidates to run clean campaigns based on their qualifications, their records and the issues that face our community.

Burns can make Midland better place to live, work

This is a letter to voice my support for Bobby Burns for mayor of Midland. I have known Bobby since we were kids and found him to be trustworthy in all dealings. I believe that Midland needs the kind of leadership that will look for the best in the city and lead all citizens to rise to meet that goal. Midland needs direction and unity for the present and for the future. This will take strong, energetic leadership, and that leader is Bobby Burns. His education prepares him for management, and his business experience equips him to lead Midland into our future.

Bobby's vision is of economic diversification, no new taxes and the renewal of that great Midland "can do" spirit. Bobby is the only leader with the experience, integrity and ability to lead our city to make it a better place to live and work. I suggest that people consider all the candidates and choose the only mayor for Midland — Bobby Burns.

Burns demonstrates traits needed to be our mayor

The city of Midland needs a mayor who shows vision and a genuine concern for the future. Vision comes from leadership and an entrepreneurial spirit. Genuine concern comes from someone who cares for a city as if it was a family member. Bobby Burns has demonstrated both of these traits time and time again.

Over the years, Bobby Burns has served on numerous city boards, from the airport board to his current position as chairman of the Midland Planning & Zoning Commission. Bobby does have a genuine concern for the city of Midland.

Bobby has a tremendous entrepreneurial spirit and sound business judgment. This is evident in the successful insurance business he has built over the last 11 years.

One more point I would like to make, and this is especially important to me — Bobby is a strong family man and believes in traditional family values. He is a man who seems to draw strength from his family — this is the type of person we need running Midland.

I urge you to visit with Bobby about his vision and concern for our city. When you do, you will see and understand just how much he does care and loves this great city we are all so fortunate to call home.

I am proud to call Bobby Burns my friend, and I am equally proud to support him for mayor of Midland. I hope you will join me in voting for Bobby on May 7 and give Midland a great future.

Burns shows necessary qualities in volunteer work

For almost three years, I had the distinct pleasure of working with Bobby Burns at Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Midland. As executive director, I depended on a volunteer board of directors to raise funds and govern the agency. Since 1988, Bobby served in several officer positions then ultimately became president of the board. Bobby worked diligently to accomplish tasks he agreed to handle. In addition, as board president, he was a very effective leader. He listened well, considered all the options and made objective decisions. He was a consensus builder and was able to run timely, efficient meetings. As mayor, I believe these qualities are a must! I have the utmost respect for Bobby and his leadership. He was able to lead Big Brothers/Big Sisters through some sensitive issues, and the agency truly benefited from his guidance.

Volunteers make Big Brothers/Big Sisters run, and Bobby went above and beyond the call of duty numerous times to make sure the best interests of our clients were served. I have resigned from my position as executive director, but I know that Bobby continues to serve the agency with unending energy. I wholeheartedly believe Bobby will do the same and more as mayor for Midland. I urge you to consider Bobby Burns as your candidate for mayor.

DAVE BARRY

Innocents take trip abroad to England

Recently I went to England on a selfless humanitarian mission to sell books. It was a very relaxing trip until about 35 minutes after the plane landed at Heathrow Airport, which is when a British person cheerfully informed my wife and me that terrorists had been shooting mortar bombs onto the runway. Really. They have political organizations over there that, having apparently received public-relations advice from Charles Manson, believe that the way to garner public support is to bomb and mortar the public.

Barry

Shortly after we arrived, there were two more mortar attacks on Heathrow. None of the bombs detonated, but I was starting to wonder about the quality of the airport security. I envisioned squadrons of Scotland Yard detectives wearing Sherlock Holmes hats, crawling on hands and knees, scrutinizing every blade of glass through powerful magnifying glasses, not noticing trucks rumbling past them with large signs that said, "CAUTION! MORTAR BOMBS!"

Anyway, the mortars were scary, but we had a MUCH scarier experience in England: Somehow — probably because of another massive screw up at the CIA — we got invited to dine at the U.S. ambassador's residence. We were the only people on the guest list whose titles were "Mr. and Mrs." Everybody else was something like "The Lord Earl of Gwebbing and Her Worshipfulhood the Viscountess Lady Huffington Prawn-Armature." So when we arrived at the ambassador's residence, which is approximately the size of Wales, but with more bathrooms, we were feeling socially intimidated.

Fortunately the ambassador and his wife were extremely nice, which was reassuring, as was the fact that they had three dogs (one main, two backups) with no sense of etiquette whatsoever ("I know! Let's sniff the viscountess!"). Nevertheless, when it came time to eat dinner, I developed severe Table Manners Paranoia. I estimate that there were 27 forks at my place setting alone. Plus, it turns out that at these formal dinners they have rules about whom you talk to: Before the main course, you're supposed to talk exclusively to the lady on your left as though she is the most fascinating human on the planet, but when the main course arrives, you're supposed to drop her like used chewing gum and talk to the lady on your right.

Of course I didn't know about this, so midway through the dinner I suddenly found myself having an animated conversation with the back of the head of the lady on my left, who, despite having been, only moments earlier, my closest personal friend, no longer seemed to realize that I existed. (To this day, she never calls, and she never writes.)

Also the British still speak in British accents, so that no matter what they say, it sounds really intelligent to Americans; and they still really say things like "bloody" and "smashing." Plus they keep inventing wonderful new expressions. For example, I saw a newspaper front page that had a photograph of a man, with the headline: "MR. CHUCKLETROUSERS." I asked a number of British people about this expression; they had no idea what it meant but they all agreed that they would definitely try to use it a lot. So should we, I think. We should maintain close ties with our friends across the Atlantic. But we should also remain out of mortar range.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The shorter the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.
- We do not publish 'open' letters or copies of letters sent to others.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Midland's oldest business looks to the future.

For 102 years, Midlanders have looked with assurance to the fact that there has always been a generation of the Ellis family to serve them in their special times of need.

Today these needs are being served by a capable and caring staff of professionals headed by two descendants of the founder, Newnie H. Ellis. These include his grandson, Newnie W. Ellis, Jr. and great-grandson, David Donnell, along with Funeral Home Manager, Bill Vallie.

With humility, the Ellis family wishes to thank the community for the opportunity to be of service.

Lee High School has received the 1994 International Education Award of Excellence from Youth for Understanding (YFU) International Exchange, a non-profit international educational organization.

Lee High School and Ben Cason have been awarded this honor based on the school's continued commitment to encourage the placement and involvement of international exchange students, as well as American students interested in overseas exchange opportunities. The 50 schools honored nationwide have demonstrated a keen interest in promoting cultural diversity, friendship among nations and opportunities for personal development through international student exchange.

"We're pleased to honor Lee High School in the field of international education. As the world becomes increasingly diverse and interdependent, firsthand knowledge and understanding of other cultures will be a requirement for our future community and business leaders," said Douglas S. Soffer, National Director, YFU-USA.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

MC group, Vocal Point, to give concert

By H.A. Tuck

For an enjoyable evening, we are recommending you attend the spring concert Monday by Vocal-Point, MC's performance group. The dozen young people in Vocal-Point are outstanding vocalists who are selected by audition.

Tuck

Their program begins at 8 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Building.

There is a $3 admission fee for adults; proceeds are to go to the college's music scholarship fund.

The 1994 Midland New Car Dealers' Association show is set for noon until 5 p.m. today at Chaparral Center.

Admission is free, so come out and look over all the new models. The show comes just in time to pick out something special for your summer trip.

This spring's Student Art Show opens Tuesday evening with a reception from 7 to 9 p.m. honoring those who have works in the show.

The exhibit of oil paintings, watercolors, drawings, ceramics, photographs and mixed media may be seen at the McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building through May 8.

The public is cordially invited to attend the reception.

This is the final show of the season for McCormick Gallery, which begins another schedule of showings around Labor Day.

Applause once more to Dan Buckley, exhibits coordinator, and the MC art faculty for bringing in another great group of artists for the edification of the community and the college.

With a great schedule already conquered, the Midland College golf team takes the next-to-last step for the season at Hobbs on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The Region V tournament is being hosted this year by New Mexico Junior College at the Ocotillo Country Club course in Hobbs. The top two teams get automatic berths in the NJCAA Division I championship tournament in Scottsdale, Ariz., in June.

Since the Chaparrals are the No. 1 ranked team in the country, they will be among the favorites to take one of the two qualifying spots at the regional tournament. Should they falter, they likely would receive an at-large invitation to the NJCAA championships.

Tryouts for the 1994-95 Chaparral Cheerleading squad and mascot Pepe Paisano are set for 4 p.m. Wednesday in the Physical Education Building.

Persons who are interested in competing for positions should contact sponsor/coach Tommy Ramos at 685-4701 in advance. Those selected receive scholarships that help pay educational expenses.

Returning students may register Monday through Wednesday for Summer I classes. New and transfer students may obtain permits to register for Summer I starting on May 17, with registration being held June 6. Classes begin June 7 and end July 12.

There will be a Spring Interim Session this year, starting on May 16 and ending June 2. It's sandwiched between the end of the Spring Semester and the beginning of the first summer term.

Summer II starts on July 14 and ends Aug. 18.

Twenty classes are listed on the Interim Session schedule. One is a State and Federal Government course that includes a trip to Washington, D.C.; another is Sociology of the West Indies, which is to be held on a sailing vessel in the Bahamas.

Both of these classes have extra fees. For details about the government class, contact Lee Almaguer at 685-4739; about the sociology class call Mike Schneider at 685-4642.

All the information about summer classes being offered and registration requirements is included in the combined bulletin for summer classes, both credit and noncredit. The bulletins are available at the Student Services area, Student Center, or the MC South Facility, 201 W. Florida Ave.

Marine Lance Cpl. Jimmy Gallo, son of Jose and Maria Gallo of Lamesa, is currently off the East Coast of Africa with Command Element, 11th Marine Expeditionary Unit, Camp Pendleton, Calif., and was recently involved in the evacuation of Americans from Rwanda.

In response to the escalation of fighting in that country, USS Peleliu was ordered off the coast of Somalia to participate in the evacuation of United States citizens who had left Rwanda.

The 1990 graduate of Klondike High School joined the Marine Corps in September 1990.

Plane crash sends pilot to hospital

AZLE (AP) — A single-engine airplane practicing emergency landing drills crashed and burned in a field northwest of Fort Worth early Saturday, injuring the pilot and destroying the plane.

Christopher Wood, 42, suffered serious lacerations and was listed in good condition at Harris Methodist hospital Saturday.

A man believed to be Wood's flight instructor suffered minor injuries when their plane went down.

MC journalism students receive 35 awards at press convention

Staff Report

Midland College journalism students took 35 awards at the recent Texas Intercollegiate Press Association convention in Corpus Christi.

Among the awards were a first place in Best of Show for El Paisano, the MC student newspaper, which also took an honorable mention in the Best Overall competition.

Chaparral, the MC magazine, took second in overall general magazine and first in a single issue magazine. The college's literary magazine, Tableau, took honorable mention in its category.

Kes Gilhome received a number of awards, including first place in news story; third in editorial; second in news photo, third in sports feature photo, third and honorable mention in sports action photos; and honorable mention in general magazine feature photo. He also took a second place in the news action photo category during the convention's live competition.

Nancy Calhoun won honorable mention in newspaper critical review, honorable mention in magazine feature, second in magazine computer-generated infographic, third in single general magazine cover, honorable mention in magazine typography, layout and design; and second place in magazine story packaging/one story.

El Paisano sports editor Bridget Woolverton received first place in sports page design. Angela Rice received an honorable mention in special edition.

Jacqui Stewart, former El Paisano editor and now a student at Southwest Texas State University, received third place in general column and first in news page design. Stephen Madero, former El Paisano opinion page editor and now a student at San Antonio College, received first in opinion page design, honorable mention in sports news, and honorable mention in magazine typography, layout, and design.

Chris Rose, former El Paisano cartoonist, received an honorable mention in cartoon; Chris Heib, now a student at UTPB, won second and third in general magazine illustration and second in magazine computer-generated infographic; Cynthia Villa won first place for magazine picture story and honorable mention for magazine typography, layout, and design.

Kari Dahlberg, Oslo, Norway, received a first in newspaper sports news, second in magazine story package/one story, and first in magazine news feature. Chai Kiat Ng, now a student at the University of Texas-Austin, received a second in news feature; Marilyn Covington, a creative writing student, won third in magazine essay.

Bob Templeton, Midland College's Allison Professor of Journalism, was elected to a two-year term as president of the Texas Community College Journalism Association.

"The large number of awards won by MC journalism students again this year represents a program built on a consistent, solid foundation," he said. "I am most proud of that. Some student publications fluctuate in quality, but MC's always have a professional appearance. We have among the highest and most consistent enrollments in the state."

Good Things About Listening To The Top Ten List On Texas 102

10. No deadly gamma rays
9. Like Larry King, it's easier on the ears than the eyes
8. If you listen with headphones and turn the volume all the way up, you can hear Dave's pacemaker
7. Just another way for Dave to get his message of love to the masses
6. Static sort of sounds like applause
5. Complete traffic and weather updates between #7 and #6
4. Unlike Dave's show, when the list is over Texas 102 will play your Favorite Rock 'n Roll Hits Texas Style
3. On radio, you can pretend the list is being read by handsome actor Robert Wagner
2. Every list contains long distance dedication by Casey Kasem and the number one good thing about listening to the Top Ten List on Texas 102:

1. You're not distracted by Dave's hair

Guest speaker is Jim Ness, a translator in Northern Kenya.

■ Church plans seminar

A marriage seminar, "Blueprint for Marriage," will be hosted by Kelview Heights Baptist Church on May 14.

Taught by Don and Jan Frank, authors of "When Victims Marry," the seminar is designed to help people grow in their ability to have fulfilling relationships.

Mrs. Frank has a master's degree in marriage, family and child counseling and is a frequent speaker at women's gatherings. She trains pastors, professional and lay persons in how to minister to victims and has designed and co-directed support groups for incest victims.

Frank, a high school teacher and basketball coach for more than 20 years, has a master's degree in education. He is the author of the tape album, "Are You a Victim of Your Wife's Past?"

Cost of the seminar is $15 a person, $25 a couple if pre-registered by May 8. After May 8, the cost is $20 a person and $35 a couple.

Child care is available for children 8 and younger for an additional fee for those who pre-register.

The program will run from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

A Bible study for mothers will be offered in conjunction with the program.

For more information call the church, 694-4517.

REAP: Schools intensify recycling efforts

(From 1B)

The city pays the schools the posted price of aluminum less 10 percent to help cover some costs and market fluctuations. The current going rate is about 35 cents a pound.

Because the truck that picks up the cans does so while on its normal run to pick up paper for recycling, the arrangement is cost-effective.

Although the city took on the sole responsibility to recycle the school-collected cans, the program isn't new.

Since last year, a local beer distributor — in conjunction with the city — picked up and purchased the aluminum. The company recently abandoned the service.

"Very nobly the city has taken over," said Alynda Best, volunteer coordinator of recycling at Greathouse Elementary.

Ms. Best said the aluminum-can recycling program has been a success.

"Our program has grown from once-a-month pickup to twice-a-month pickup," she said. "We feel like recycling has gone quite well at our school."

The can receptacle — a trash bin — is for the entire neighborhood to use, but most deposits are made by students and their families, she said.

Money raised at Greathouse goes into beautification of the campus and for paper recycling boxes for the classrooms, Ms. Best said. Other schools use the money for similar projects or the civic good.

But the project isn't geared toward the monetary rewards. "Our school would recycle regardless of the money," Ms. Best said.

"We believe that if we can educate these kids, their lifestyles will be different when they're older," she said.

"I think it makes them respect the environment and care," Ms. Best said.

But recycling isn't just for the young ones, she said.

"If you live around a school, you can recycle, too."

Dodger down

LOS ANGELES — Dodgers second baseman Delino DeShields was carried off the field on a stretcher Saturday night after colliding with teammate Raul Mondesi during the seventh inning of a game against the Montreal Expos.

DeShields, in his first season with the Dodgers after being traded from Montreal for pitcher Pedro Martinez, drifted out to right field when Mike Lansing hit a pop fly.

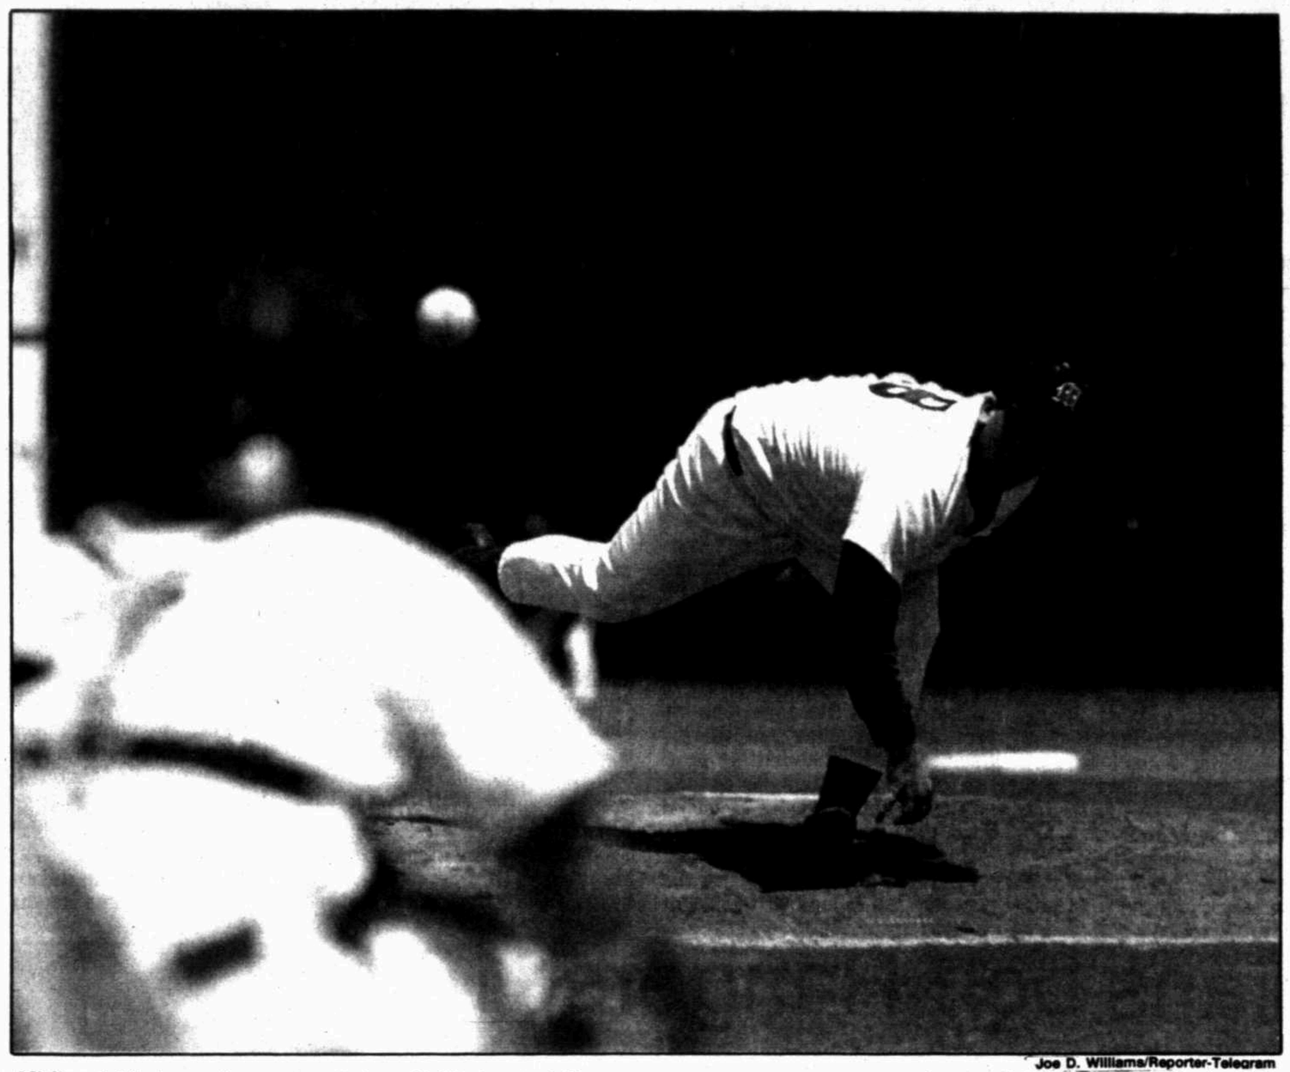

Mondesi charged in, and DeShields' head smashed into Mondesi's chest. Both players went sprawling on either side of the foul line.

■ Midland quells a late San Angelo Central rally, but is eliminated from the playoff chase with Odessa Permian's win over Abilene Cooper.

By Bill Petitt

For Midland High center fielder Abel Sanchez, Saturday's game with San Angelo Central was a big game for the team and for himself.

Bulldog head coach Rick Wood used a designated hitter in place of Sanchez in Tuesday's 7-3 win over Odessa High. Sanchez, who was batting .179 in district play prior to Saturday, used it as motivation going 4-for-4 and scoring one run to lead Midland to a 6-5 win over San Angelo.

The celebration was short-lived as less than two hours after the Bulldogs stayed alive in the district playoffs Odessa Permian pulled the life support with a 5-4, nine win over Abilene Cooper in Odessa, giving the third playoff spot to the Panthers.

The Permian win also clinched the district championship for idle Midland Lee. Lee is 11-0 in league play and leads Cooper by two games with one game remaining. Lee will receive an automatic bye in the first round of the Class 5A state playoffs.

Midland improves to 5-6 in District 4-5A and 9-14 overall while San Angelo, who was tied with MHS going into Saturday's game, falls to 4-7 and 6-16 overall.

Missions end losing streak with 9-3 win

The San Antonio Missions ended a five-game Texas League losing streak at Angels Stadium Saturday night with an 9-3 victory over the Midland Angels, and didn't even need the services of heralded South Korean pitcher Chan Ho Park.

Park, who was sent to the Missions from the Los Angeles Dodgers this week to get more work, won't face the Angels until Wednesday night, but his mere arrival may be the turning point for the Missions, who are off to a woeful 3-12 start.

It's scary at the top

■ Ohio State's Dan Wilkinson, the projected No. 1 pick, faces high pressure and a rookie salary cap.

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

What's it like to be No. 1, the first player picked in the NFL draft, anointed by the pros as a franchise guy who will turn things around for some woebegone team?

Scary, mostly.

"For the first pick, there are a variety of extra dimensions that are not felt by other players," said agent Leigh Steinberg.

He ought to know. He's represented five of the last six No. 1s, including Ohio State defensive lineman Dan Wilkinson, who seems set to be Sunday's top pick.

Three of those picks — Troy Aikman, Jeff George and Drew Bledsoe — are quarterbacks. Being the centerpiece of the offense and the No. 1 pick as well — that's a load to handle. At least Wilkinson, like Steinberg's other No. 1, Russell Maryland, plays in the defensive line, where mistakes are less obvious.

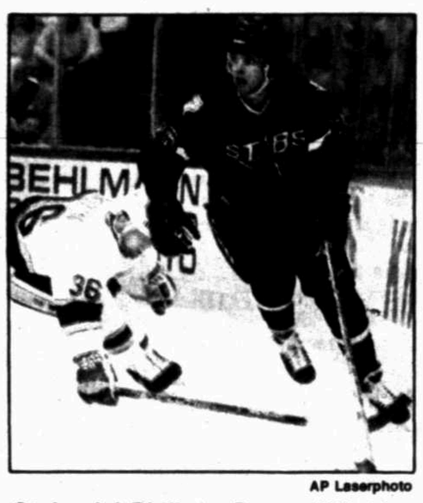

"No. 1 is a mantle that carries with it a level of prestige and pres-

Disciplined Stars circling for the kill

■ Dallas defenseman Paul Cavallini credits Bob Gainey for his recent success against his old team.

ST. LOUIS — The Dallas Stars are circling for the kill against the St. Louis Blues, and bracing for criticism at the same time.

Defenseman Paul Cavallini, who got the game-winner in Game 3 Friday night with a rare overtime playoff goal for a 5-4 triumph, said there's no way the Stars will lose their focus when they try for a 4-0 sweep Sunday.

"No, no, no," Cavallini said. "Not with Bob Gainey in charge. We'll watch tapes and go through what we did wrong tonight and the last two nights, and we'll correct mistakes."

Cavallini, who played for the Blues from 1987-92, has been at his best against his former teammates with a goal and five assists in the series. He was the NHL's best plus-minus player one of his seasons in St. Louis, but felt he took a lot of unfair criticism when things went wrong.

Cavallini, who scored 44 points in his first season with the Stars, credits Gainey with instilling discipline in his game.

"I thought it was all over when I left here," Cavallini said. "But I've gained a lot of confidence this year. This season has gone extremely well."

Teammate Dave Gagner could say the same thing about facing the Blues. He scored his third goal of the playoffs and seventh in four games against St. Louis in Game 3. He had a career-high four-goal game in a 9-5 victory over the Blues April 12.

"Sometimes players just get on a roll, and when he gets around the net he has the feeling the puck will go in for him," Gainey said.

Still, Gainey said he didn't worry about a letdown.

"Our experience will keep us from feeling things are wrapped up," Gainey said. "We respect our opponent."

The Stars' biggest mistake to correct is the shot volume that goaltender Darcy Wakaluk had to face in Game 3. The Blues

Gus hits 1,333-win pinnacle

■ Texas baseball coach Cliff Gustafson said he is relieved the record count is over.

By Michael Holmes
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Long after the game ended, the bright lights of the center field scoreboard glowed with one big number — 1,333.

Shining there, too, was the story of Cliff Gustafson's 27 seasons as leader of the Texas Longhorns, who overpowered Grand Canyon 10-1 Friday night and gave him the career record for Division I college baseball coaching victories.

The win raised Gustafson's record in college baseball to 1,333-325-2, one more victory than Rod Dedeaux, whose record was 1,332-571-11 in 45 years at Southern California.

"There is a special feeling," the unassuming Gustafson said of his team's season-long chase for the record. "Mainly connected with the relief of getting it over with."

And then, the man they call "Coach Gus" thanked all those who helped him reach the milestone — his players, fans and Darrell Royal, who hired him from South San Antonio high school before the 1968 season.

"None of this could have been possible without what I call the guts of a guy named Darrell Royal to select a high school coach with no college experience to succeed a legend, coach Bibb Falk.

"The most important thing in being able to compile any kind of a record would have to be the players who have done it for us. So I want to acknowledged not only this team but all those who've played for us in the last 27 years," Gustafson said.

Some of those players were in the stands, including

Major leaguers uncork long balls to begin year

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

The initial warning sign came as soon as the first batter of the year, Ray Lankford, hit a home run on the sixth pitch of the season.

The next day, Karl Rhodes, another leadoff hitter known for speed rather than strength, became the first player ever to hit homers on his first three at-bats on opening day.

A few hours later, Toronto rookie Carlos Delgado hit the window at the Hard Rock Cafe in right-center field at the SkyDome, about 450 feet from home plate. A few days later, 5-foot-8 Mike Gallego homered twice in one game at Yankee Stadium.

The next week, Cory Snyder and Tim Raines — Tim Raines? — each hit three home runs in a game. The week after that, Detroit Tigers manager Sparky Anderson watched yet another opposite-field popup, this one by Gary Gaetti, wind up in the seats.

"If that's a home run," Anderson muttered, "I've got to stop working in baseball and go into something else."

Like maybe mathematics, to count the soaring number of home runs this season, or something like science, to figure out why the ball is flying.

Less than a month into the 1994 season, the stats are staggering:

■ Home runs are up almost a full 50 percent from last year. They're also up 18 percent from 1987, the so-called year of the lively ball, when a record 4,458 home runs were hit.

■ More than 30 players, including Keith Lockhart, Darrin Fletcher and Geronimo Pena, have hit two homers in a game. That's also way ahead of last year's pace, when there were 214 multi-homer games.

■ Three players have homered three times in a game. Mark Whiten, Juan Gonzalez, Joe Carter and Caros Baerga were the only ones to do it in all of 1993.

■ The Atlanta Braves became the first team ever to hit three consecutive home runs twice in a space of four days.

Well, what gives?

Are there a lot of lousy expansion-era pitchers? Are there a bunch of beefed-up hitters? Is the ball juiced? Is the weather warm, or is wind blowing out?

"There are a hundred things you could talk about," New York Yankees manager Buck Showalter said.

"The quality of pitching in the middle is a problem for everybody. But just once, I would like to see somebody give the guys who swing the bats credit. There are some damn good hitters in our profession," he said.

Such as Cecil Fielder, who homered deep into the third deck at Yankee Stadium, about 475 feet away.

"If you knock the heck out of the ball, it'll jump," Bo Jackson said. "It's just that they guys are stronger. More of them are working out now more than they used to."

Barry Bonds, Frank Thomas and Matt Williams, meanwhile, are once again among the league leaders in home runs. They're not the only ones homering, however.

"Yes, the ball's been flying around the ballpark. But whether it's juiced or not, I don't know. I missed that class in college," said Boston's Tim Naehring, who hit back-to-back home runs with Mo Vaughn twice in one game.

"The weather's been a little bit better up north, and the wind has been blowing out a little bit," he said. "I constantly hear the ball is juiced, but I don't hear about the fact that there are expansion teams and pitchers who wouldn't normally be in the league."

In fact, about 30 percent of the pitchers in the majors this season have been either released or just let go during their careers.

The entire AL went into the weekend with an ERA of over 5.00, and Baltimore's bullpen, even with Lee Smith, had an 8.92 ERA. The Seattle Mariners still didn't have a single save and after they blew another late lead, manager Lou Piniella grabbed the telephone in the dugout and ripped it off the wall.

"Made a quick phone call to the bullpen," he said. "The phone was off the hook."

Hardly a day had gone by this season in which some team didn't score in double digits. Boston put up 22 runs and Atlanta and Los Angeles each reached 19 in a game.

But don't put all of the blame on the pitchers, pleads Minnesota pitching coach Dick Such.

"Actually, I think there are a lot of corked bats in the big leagues. How do you check them? I don't know. I just think there are."

More importantly, he said, umpires have made it easier for hitters to swing for the fences — which now include new, nice-and-tight dimensions in Texas and Cleveland.

"The pitchers have to throw to such a small strike zone. The hitters are 'keyholing' up there," Such said. "It's like batting practice, where the hitters don't swing at pitches unless they're keyholed down the middle of the plate."

Umpires, though, argue that pitchers try to fool around on the corners, fall behind in the count and then have to groove pitches.

Whatever is more offensive — the hitting or the pitching — the hits and runs are also coming at record levels so far. That's even without a single home run from either Whiten, who connected four times in one game last September, or Dean Palmer, who finished with 33 homers last year.

The only thing that has not changed, claim the people who make major league baseballs, is the baseball.

"The materials we use, the manufacturing process, the standards we use — it's all exactly the same as it always has been," said Scott Smith of Rawlings Sporting Goods Co.

The only difference in the 720,000 baseballs that Rawlings will provide this season is that soon the NL will begin using balls stamped with the name of new league president Leonard S. Coleman Jr., instead of the William D. White model.

"Four more letters, a little more ink," Smith said. "Maybe it won't go as far."

The balls are made in Costa Rica. Before 1989, they came from Haiti. The specifications, though, have remained the same.

"If we wound them tighter, you put more yarn on the ball and they'd be too heavy to pass the tests," Smith said.

By the way, Smith added, the AL and NL both have the right to ask for an independent firm to test the balls if they think they're too lively. Neither league has made that request.

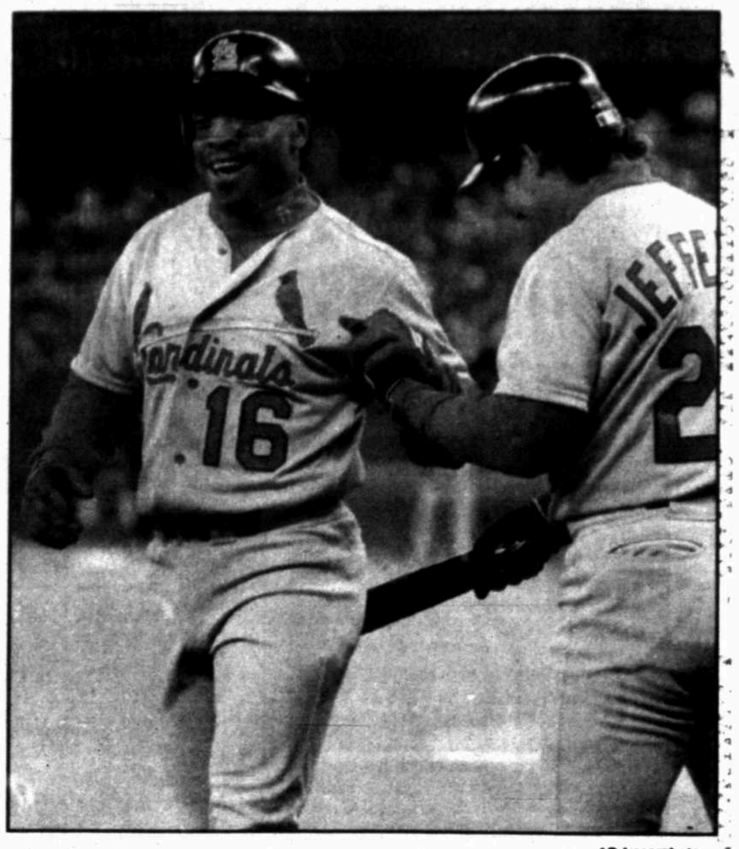

Besides, the statisticians ask, why should they?

"Baseball has gotten an incredible break," said Seymour Siwoff, head of the Elias Sports Bureau, which keeps the official numbers.

"For 30 years, people complained that pitching dominated the game. Suddenly, hitting is back in," he said. "It's an entertainment business, and offense is entertaining."

Especially these days, when almost every game seems to look like that night last October when Toronto outlasted Philadelphia 15-14 in the highest-scoring game in postseason history.

"It's just one of those things," Baltimore manager Johnny Oates said. "Sit back and enjoy it if it's to your benefit, and pull your hair out if it's against you."

Murray, Indians belt Rangers, 10-9

Associated Press

ARLINGTON, — Eddie Murray led off the ninth with a homer off Tom Henke Saturday night, lifting Cleveland to a 10-9 victory over the Texas Rangers.

■ AL Roundup

The Indians trailed 9-6 but scored three runs in the eighth to tie it. Jim Thome hit a two-run homer, his third, and another run scored when Henke (1-2) threw a wild pitch.

Texas scored three runs in the sixth, highlighted by Junior Ortiz's RBI double, to take a 9-6 lead.

Jose Mesa (2-0) gave up two runs in three innings but got the win.

The teams combined for 29 hits. Murray and Thome each went 3-for-5 for the Indians. Billy Ripken had three hits for Texas.

Cleveland catcher Sandy Alomar left the game after cutting his right hand trying to handle a low pitch from Chris Nabholz in the second. Tony Pena replaced Alomar, who split the webbing between his middle and ring fingers, the same injury he suffered in 1992. Alomar received between 15 and 20 stitches.

Kevin Brown gave up eight runs and 12 hits in 7 1-3 innings. Brown has allowed at least 10 hits in all five of his starts this season.

Brewers 3, Royals 2

MILWAUKEE — Bill Spiers singled home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning and Milwaukee beat Kansas City.

Matt Mieske singled with one out in the eighth off Stan Belinda (0-1) and Darryl Hamilton singled with two outs against Mike Magnante. Spiers followed with a single to right field.

Graeme Lloyd (1-1) got two outs for the victory, despite allowing the tying run to score. Mike Fetters pitched the ninth inning for his first save.

Kansas City, which managed just two hits off starter Bill Wegman, tied it at 2 with single runs in the seventh and eighth innings.

Brian McRae opened the seventh with a double and Mark Kiefer relieved Wegman. Bob Hamelin's sacrifice fly drove in Kansas City's first run.

The Royals added just one run in the eighth, even though they had four singles. Pinch-hitter Felix Jose singled to right, but was thrown out by Mieske trying to stretch it into a double.

Vince Coleman singled, chasing Kiefer, and Lloyd relieved. The Royals loaded the bases on singles by McRae and Wally Joyner, and Gary Gaetti's infield single scored Coleman.

Orioles 4, Mariners 3

BALTIMORE — Leo Gomez singled home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning and former Midland Cub Lee Smith got his ninth save faster than any player in major-league history as Baltimore beat Seattle.

With the score 3-all, Chris Hoiles opened the Baltimore eighth with a single off Bobby Thigpen (0-2) and took second on a sacrifice. After a walk to Mark McLemore, Gomez lined a single to left.

Yankees 8, Athletics 6

NEW YORK — Paul O'Neill hit his second career grand slam and drove in five runs as the New York Yankees chased Todd Von Poppel in the first inning.

Don Mattingly also homered as the Yankees won their fourth in a row, including Friday's 8-6 win over the A's. Ruben Sierra, Geronimo Berroa and Scott Brosius homered .

Red Sox 5, Angels 3

BOSTON — Tim Naehring hit a pair of run-scoring singles and Mike Greenwell had a two-run homer as Boston won its fifth straight game, defeating California.

The Red Sox have won eight straight against the Angels at Fenway Park.

Danny Darwin (3-1) allowed single runs in the third, fourth and fifth innings, but then retired the last seven batters he faced. Ken Ryan pitched the eighth and Jeff Russell pitched the ninth for his fifth save _

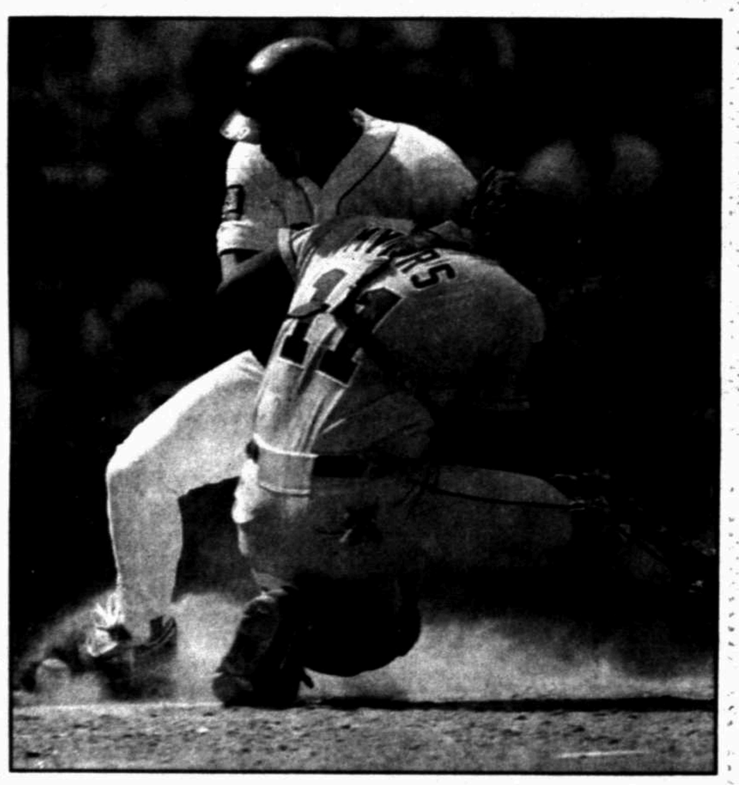

White Sox 9, Tigers 3

CHICAGO — Lance Johnson's bases-loaded triple highlighted a six-run first inning as Chicago defeated Detroit.

The White Sox, who have won six of their last seven, scored all their runs in the first with two outs.

Robin Ventura went 4-for-5 for the White Sox, who had a season-high 16 hits.

Johnson, who has led the AL in triples the past three seasons, gave the White Sox a 4-2 lead in the first with his first triple of 1994.

Astros bombard Cardinals with 18-hit attack

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Kevin Bass went 5-for-6 with a homer, and Steve Finley had four hits and drove in three runs Saturday night to power Houston to a 15-5 win over St. Louis Cardinals.

■ NL Roundup

Bass, who drove in three runs, matched a career-high with five hits by homering in the ninth. Finley went 4-for-5 and scored twice.

Rookie James Mouton hit a grand slam, his first career homer, to highlight a six-run eighth inning. Finley followed Mouton's homer with his fourth of the season to make it 14-5.

Andy Stankiewicz scored three times for the Astros, who had a season-high 18 hits.

Darryl Kile (2-1) ran his lifetime mark against St. Louis to 4-1, allowing three runs and three hits in six innings.

Rene Arocha (1-2), who pitched a shutout in his last outing, allowed six runs and nine hits in 3 2-3 innings.

Todd Zeile hit two home runs for the Cardinals.

Houston scored four runs in the fourth to take a 6-3 lead. Finley, Craig Biggio and Bass had run-scoring hits in the inning, and the fourth run scored on a passed ball.

The Astros took a 1-0 lead in the second when Bass singled, moved to second on a wild pitch and scored on a single by Scott Servais.

Zeile tied the score with his fourth home run to lead off the second.

The Astros regained the lead in the third when Bass, who had doubled with two-out, scored all the way from second on second baseman Luis Alicea's fielding error.

St. Louis tied it 2-2 in the third when Gregg Jefferies singled to drive in Terry McGriff. Jefferies has a nine-game hitting streak.

Rookie John Mabry, playing in his first major league game, drove in the Cardinals third run in the fourth with a double.

The Astros scored a run in the fifth on two walks and a single by Finley.

Chris Donnels hit his third homer of the season in the seventh to make it 8-3.

Zeile brought the Cardinals to 8-5 in the seventh with a two-run homer. The two-homer game was the first of his career.

Rockies 8, Cubs 2

DENVER — Greg Harris broke his six-game losing streak, scattering eight hits as Colorado defeated the Cubs.

Harris, bidding for the first complete-game shutout in team history, blanked the Cubs until Mark Grace led off the ninth with a single and Derrick May followed with a home run.

Harris (1-1) struck out eight and walked three in Colorado's first complete game of the season. He won for only the second time in 11 decisions since San Diego traded him to the Rockies in the middle of last year.

Walt Weiss had three hits, including a solo homer, for the Rockies. Eric Young hit an inside-the-park homer in the eighth inning and Dante Bichette followed with his seventh home run of the season.

Marlins 3, Reds 2

CINCINNATI — Pinch-runner Chuck Carr beat shortstop Barry Larkin's throw home on a grounder in the ninth inning, giving Florida a victory over Cincinnati.

Orestes Destrade led off the ninth with a single against Hector Carrasco (3-1) and was replaced by Carr, who led the league with 58 stolen bases last season.

Carr moved to second on Eddie Taubensee's passed ball and took third on a sacrifice by Benito Santiago. Rick Renteria followed with a grounder to Larkin, but Carr scored ahead of the throw.

Jeremy Hernandez (2-1) pitched two innings for the win. Bryan Harvey pitched the ninth for his sixth save, ending Cincinnati's four-game winning streak.

Giants 9, Mets 1

SAN FRANCISCO — Matt Williams, Royce Clayton and Mike Benjamin each hit two-run homers and San Francisco broke out of a hitting slump in a victory over the New York Mets.

The Giants, who entered the game batting .198 in their last five games, collected 14 hits off three New York pitchers.

Bryan Hickerson (1-0) limited the Mets to five hits in seven innings. He struck out six and walked none.

Darren Lewis led off the first with his first homer of the season off Eric Hillman (0-2), and the Giants made it 2-0 in the second on Lewis' RBI single.

The Giants roughed up Hillman for 10 hits and five runs in three-plus inning.

After Willie McGee led off the third with a single, Williams hit his seventh home run of the season.

Pirates 6, Braves 1

ATLANTA — Atlanta lost its fourth straight game, its worst slump in a year, when Kevin Young singled home the tiebreaking run in the ninth inning and sent Pittsburgh to a victory.

The Braves, who began the season with a 13-1 record, had not lost four in a row since last April 25-29, when they dropped five consecutive games.

Young, batting .095 (2-for-21) entering the game, had two hits. His single in the ninth followed singles by pinch-hitter Dave Clark and Don Slaught off Greg McMichael (1-1).

Orlando Merced and Carlos Garcia followed with RBI singles. Andy Van Slyke also singled home a run, and another run scored on left fielder Mike Kelly's error.

Jeff Ballard (1-0) earned the victory. He relieved and got Fred McGriff to ground into a double play with the bases loaded, ending the eighth inning.

Padres 8, Phillies 2

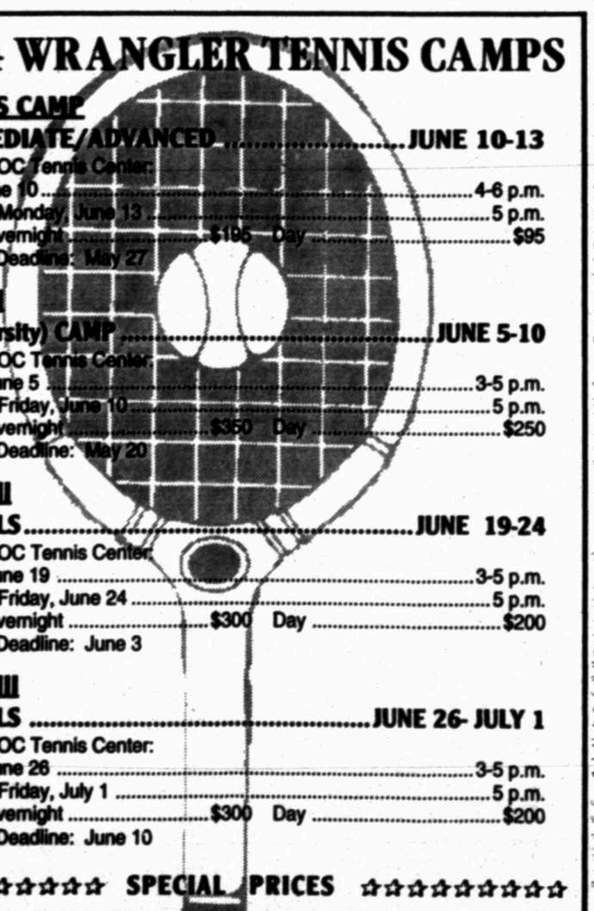

SAN DIEGO — Tony Gwynn went 5-for-5 with a home run and tied a club record by scoring four runs, lifting San Diego over Philadelphia.

Gwynn, who has had five or more hits in a game eight times, added three RBIs as the Padres won their second straight game for the first time this season.

Tim Mauser (1-0) got his first major-league win with 2 1-3 innings of hitless relief. Pedro Martinez pitched four innings for his major-league save.

Ben Rivera (1-1) gave up five runs and seven hits in four innings.

San Antonians battle for league scoring title

■ The NBA scoring title goes down to the final game with San Antonio native Shaquille O'Neal leading David Robinson by .07 for the scoring championship.

By Bill Barnard
AP Basketball Writer

As the NBA season ends today, the tightest scoring race in 16 years concludes with Shaq vs. The Admiral, from 2,400 miles apart.

The races for postseason berths were not nearly so close.

The eight Western Conference teams in the playoffs were decided with more than a week to play in the regular season. There were still three days left when the Eastern Conference clubs were settled.

Although there are some pairings and homecourt advantages still to be determined, the most intriguing battle on the final weekend is to see whether Shaquille O'Neal or David Robinson wins the scoring title.

"You can't vote on scoring champ. It's something you have to earn on the court, and we're going to see to it that Shaq earns it this weekend," said Dennis Scott, O'Neal's teammate. "Both of them are lying if they say they don't want it."

O'Neal and Robinson went into their final two games with Robinson trailing by an average of .07 points (29.34-29.27) after O'Neal scored 53 Wednesday night against Minnesota.

Not since 1978, when George Gervin averaged 27.22 points and David Thompson 27.15, has the scoring race been so close. On the final day of that memorable battle, Thompson pulled ahead with 73 points — the highest in NBA history for a player other than Wilt Chamberlain — before Gervin finished with 63.

O'Neal has the advantage of playing last this year. Orlando is at home against New Jersey at 6:30 p.m. CDT, so he should know by halftime how many points he needs to beat out Robinson, whose game at Los Angeles against the Clippers begins 90 minutes earlier.

"If I don't (win it), I can always say I was up there," O'Neal said. "But hopefully I will."

Michael Jordan won the seven previous scoring titles, never by less than an average of 2.1 points. The closest since the Gervin-Thompson battle in 1978 came in 1986, when Dominique Wilkins edged Adrian Dantley 30.3 to 29.8.

Also worth watching Sunday is Chicago's bid to win the Eastern Conference. At the same time, the Bulls have a chance to win 57 regular-season games, the same number they won last year before going on to win their third NBA title under Jordan's leadership.

"We looked at the possibility of a team falling after the exit of a superstar like Michael," coach Phil Jackson said. "We looked at guys like Bill Russell and Chamberlain. Before the start of the season, we figured the difference was about 15 wins.

"Anything over 45 wins would have been magnificent for this team."

Jackson is thrilled, but still a little puzzled about how it happened.

"Having the same record as last year without Michael Jordan is beyond reason," Jackson said. "Maybe we played down to 57 victories last year and played up to 57 this year."

Chicago plays host to the New York Knicks in the finale, with both teams locked with Atlanta in a three-way race for first place.

The Knicks had homecourt advantage over the Bulls last year, but it didn't help as Chicago won in six games after beating the Knicks in Game 5 at Madison Square Garden.

"I don't know how much homecourt advantage means, but I would rather have it than not have it," said Knicks coach Pat Riley. "It may not make a difference until a seventh game, and I'd much rather play a seventh at the Garden than at the Omni (in Atlanta)."

The Hawks took a big step toward winning the conference with a victory at New York on Tuesday, then lost the inside track with a loss at Miami that made the Heat the 16th and final playoff team.

Laettner takes poke at team before finale against Dallas

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Christian Laettner took one last rip for the road, painting some Minnesota teammates as selfish and tearing into management for failing to make the Timberwolves better.

Laettner

After the team's final home game of the season — and perhaps its last game ever in Minnesota — Laettner said the Timberwolves won't start winning consistently until they add more players like him.

"I'm not worried about my game. I'm more worried about the team getting some players around me," he said after Friday's 118-103 loss to Portland.

"I'm 200 rebounds ahead of anyone on this team. I want someone to compete with me. I don't want to be the second-leading assist person on the team. There should be guards that beat me.

"So until they get players around me ... I don't have to worry about my game that much. Because I'm doing all right."

The Timberwolves, who might move if a public bailout of Target Center doesn't win legislative approval by month's end, are 20-61 going into today's finale at Dallas.

They have lost at least 60 games in four of their five seasons and the losing obviously has worn on Laettner, who arrived last season after winning two NCAA titles with Duke.

He has earned suspensions for missing practice and swearing at coaches, has been criticized by teammates for playing too selfishly and by coaches for not shooting enough, has feuded with fellow captain Chuck Person and has battled referees.

But it hasn't been all bad for the player some consider the NBA's reigning Bad Boy.

"My dream was to play well in the NBA and I'm doing that," said Laettner, who ranks either first or second on the team in points, rebounds, assists, steals and blocked shots. "My dream was to make a lot of money and be able to give it to my family and friends. So I'm very happy with my life.

"Just because we lose every night and I don't walk out of here laughing doesn't mean that I'm not happy. It's just that we lost and I'm not happy that we lost. If we had more people like that, maybe we'd be a better team."

During his 30-minute critique of one of the league's most futile franchises, Laettner said changes must be made. But he displayed little confidence in general manager Jack McCloskey.

"They said they were going to do things last year," Laettner said. "They said they were going to do things during this year. They may think getting rid of me is the right move. I really don't care. I doubt that they're going to make the right moves.

"We've got people on this team who don't pull for each other all the time. That's a fact. You can't have that.

"There are 12 apples on the team and there might be two or three that don't sit so well with the others, and you can't have those apples in the bushel because it'll make the rest rotten. I'm not saying change seven or eight of the apples, only two or three."

Which two or three?

"I have my theories, but I'm sure there are other people on the team who think other people are the bad apples," Laettner said. "They might think trading me is a good move."

Though Micheal Williams leads Minnesota in assists, Laettner said the team needs a point guard who doesn't look for his own shot first.

"We need someone who's going to penetrate and pass the ball, someone who doesn't like to shoot, someone who is dying to run our team and pass the ball," he said.

Laettner also displayed jealousy toward popular rookie Isaiah "J.R." Rider.

Asked about the cordial crowd reaction on fan appreciation night, he said: "Even though we're not that good, they're still applauding the effort we gave — or some of the effort some of us gave. Who knows? Maybe they were just cheering for J.R. the whole time."

Finally, Laettner played the part of the tortured soul.

"I know if I have to get through another year like this, I'll be blamed for stuff," he said. "So hopefully it won't happen again, because I don't want to be blamed. We had a lot of losses. I'm sure a lot of people thought it was my fault for all those losses."

Hawks take homecourt

■ NBA Roundup

ATLANTA — Atlanta clinched homecourt advantage through the Eastern Conference playoffs with a hard-fought 93-89 victory Saturday over the Orlando Magic.

Stacey Augmon had 22 points and 11 rebounds, and his dunk with 26 seconds left ended the scoring. Kevin Willis had 21 points and 14 rebounds, Danny Manning had 19 points and former Midland College standout Mookie Blaylock added 15 points and 15 assists.

The Hawks claimed their fourth division title since moving to Atlanta in 1968. They will play Miami in the best-of-5 opening round of the playoffs.

Orlando, locked into the fourth playoff seeding position, will play Indiana if the Pacers beat Miami on Saturday night.

It was Atlanta's seventh home victory in a row and its sixth in eight games overall to finish the season, leaving it with a franchise record-tying 57 victories. The loss snapped a three-game winning streak for the Magic.

Scott added 20 for the Magic and Hardaway finished with 18.

Hornets 108, Pistons 103

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Alonzo Mourning scored a career-high 39 points to lead Charlotte to a come-from-behind victory over Detroit in the Hornets' last home game of the season.

Charlotte, which outscored Detroit 37-16 in the final period, improved to 41-40 and went above .500 for the first time since Feb. 2.

The Hornets also won their fourth straight and completed a sweep of the four-game season series with the Pistons.

Mourning hit 14 of 22 field goals and 11 of 15 free throws, and also had 12 rebounds and five blocked shots. He took over the game midway through the fourth quarter to help Charlotte erase a deficit that reached 19 in the third quarter.

Eddie Johnson scored 20 points for Charlotte, Larry Johnson had 18 and Curry 11.

Rookie Allan Houston led Detroit with a career-high 31 points. Sean Elliott added 17 and David Wood and Terry Mills had 13 points and 10 rebounds apiece.

Warriors 126, Lakers 91

OAKLAND, Calif. — Chris Webber scored 27 points to lead six Warriors in double figures as Golden State routed the Los Angeles Lakers, sending them to a franchise record ninth straight loss in Magic Johnson's next-to-last game as coach.

The Lakers, who failed to qualify for the playoffs for the first time in 18 years, finish the regular season today at home against Utah.

Johnson has said it will be his final game as Lakers' coach, ending a 16-game tenure, the second shortest stint for a coach in the club's history. Los Angeles is 5-10 since Johnson was named coach March 23.

Suns 101, Kings 100

PHOENIX — Kevin Johnson scored 20 points, Cedric Ceballos had 18 and Phoenix held off a furious last-minute rally to close its regular season with a victory over Sacramento.

The Suns (56-26), who will play Golden State in the first round of the playoffs, finished the regular season with a seven-game winning streak for the third-best record in franchise history.

Kleine finished with 14 points, Dan Majerele and Charles Barkley added 12 each and a Barkley had a team-high 14 rebounds.

Wilson had 14 points for the Kings while Olden Polynice added 12 and led all rebounders with 16.

Nets 135, Bucks 100

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Derrick Coleman had 17 points and 12 rebounds and New Jersey kept its playoff picture unsettled by defeating Milwaukee.

The Nets' fifth straight victory, matching their season-high, means New Jersey (45-36) won't know its playoff pairing until the regular season ends today.

New Jersey, whose 135 points were a season high, will play either the New York Knicks or the Chicago Bulls in a best-of-5 opening round series.

Pacers 114, Heat 81

INDIANAPOLIS — Reggie Miller scored 24 points and Indiana clinched fifth place in the Eastern Conference with a club-record eighth straight victory.

The Pacers finished the regular season with their best record since joining the NBA, 47-35. They will play the Orlando Magic in the first round of their fifth straight playoff appearance.

The Heat, which finished with a franchise-best 42-40 record, will play the Atlanta Hawks in the playoffs.

Rony Seikaly led Miami with 17 points and 15 rebounds.

Pfund takes fall for Lakers dive

By Michael Ventre
N.Y. Times News Service

It was easy to blame the Lakers' troubles on Randy Pfund. He was a nice guy, but did not have a distinguished NBA playing career behind him. He was an intelligent basketball man, but he did not have experience as a head coach and had to learn on the job. He was a good choice for the position, considering the promise he showed as an assistant, but not the type of name that would cause a stir in Lakerdom.

But Magic Johnson was in the midst of an eight-game losing streak (entering Saturday's game at Golden State) with a collection of spoiled, egocentric underachievers. Perhaps it's time for a look back.

Sure, given my druthers, I'd rather have Magic Johnson as my head coach than Randy Pfund. In fact, there are only one or two current NBA coaches I'd consider taking ahead of Magic.

But Randy Pfund was not the reason the Lakers are missing the playoffs for the first time since 1976.

As Pfund found out, dealing with a group that consists of Elden Campbell, Vlade Divac, Doug Christie, Sedale Threatt, Nick Van Exel, George Lynch, Tony Smith, Antonio Harvey, et al., bears no resemblance to the coaching task involving a Lakers team with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Magic Johnson, James Worthy, Michael Cooper, Byron Scott, Kurt Rambis, Jamaal Wilkes and Norm Nixon.

This is a rebuilding process, all right, but one in which the architect's plans had to be continually revamped and redrawn because of injury, ineffectiveness and attitude problems.

When you think of coaching excellence with the Lakers franchise, you probably think of Pat Riley. Chances are you don't think of Riley as a guy who was once unemployed, directionless and so anonymous that he was refused entry into the Forum press lounge.

But that was Riley. He went from star sixth man to nobody. And then he got an unbelievable chance to become the head coach of a team that had more talent than any club in the NBA.

Granted, Riley used that opportunity to the fullest. He worked his tail off. He created innovations in the area of videotape scouting that were copied by every other team. He became an expert motivator. He earned the respect of his players. He became a great coach, one of the greatest ever.

But I bet that if Pat Riley had gotten his first head-coaching assignment as the leader of this horrendous mixture of egos, brats and dogs that currently dons the purple and gold, he might have quickly opted for another career.

There are pundits nowadays who insist that the Randy Pfunds of the world — the diligent students of the game who were not NBA players — is, or will soon be, extinct. Today's athletes, the reasoning goes, need someone who they admire and revere, which would then dissuade them from trying to trample all over them.

But today's NBA athlete is doing that, too. Don Nelson, of all people, has had to quell uprisings from Chris Webber and Billy Owens. John Lucas in San Antonio can't rein in Dennis Rodman. Phil Jackson finds himself trying to mollify the likes of B.J. Armstrong in Chicago.

And worst of all, Magic Johnson complains because he can't get the current Lakers to respond. If you are an NBA player, and you can't get motivated to play for Magic Johnson, you are a disgrace to the game.

In retrospect, the Lakers' job was the worst thing that could have happened to Randy Pfund.

If he had taken the Sacramento Kings' position, which he had a strong shot at, he'd still be there. The expectations in Sacramento aren't nearly as lofty as they are in Inglewood.

Randy Pfund should be remembered as someone who worked extremely hard at a job he loved, but was the victim of bad timing and even worse attitudes.

Childcare DIRECTORY

As a childcare provider, you are well aware of the vital concern for today's children by their parents and loved ones. For this reason we will be publishing our semi-annual Childcare Directory in the Midland Reporter-Telegram on Sunday, May 15, 1994.

Midland area parents have come to rely on this directory as a guide to good, safe, quality childcare. This section focuses on just that and gives the basic "who, what, where and when" of the quality providers in our area. As a provider you can reach parents with more information about the services that you provide by placing an ad in this Childcare Directory on Sunday, May 15th.

We offer advertising packages that range from 8" to 65" and include not only your advertisement but a photo about/of your facility, a story about your facility and a dot on the area map that indicates where you are located. We also offer rates for an advertisement only without the package plan. Plan to advertise you childcare facility on May 15th. To reserve space please call:

GUS: Lauded by fans

(From 1C)

James Street, winning pitcher of Gustafson's first game at Texas.

Gustafson, 63, needed 258 fewer games to reach Dedeaux's mark. But for a while, it looked as though Friday might not have been his night to break the record.

Texas fell behind 1-0 in the first inning and didn't tie it up until the third. After five, they led only 2-1. Then, a 3-run sixth sparked by left fielder Jeff Conway's two-run single set off a Longhorn explosion.

Winning pitcher J.D. Smart (9-2) said the players felt the pressure.

"I was excited. I'd try to block out all this hype about the record-breaking game and just go out and pitch," he said. "But once it's over with you realize how special it is. It's a thrill for me to have been a part of it."

The game was a classic example of the run-manufacturing style of play that Texas fans call "Gusball," which saw Texas runners steal a season-high six bases.

As also is customary, the coach showed little emotion throughout the game. He paced slowly with hands on hips while guiding his players from the coach's box behind third base.

But the Texas fans were another story.

They gave him a standing ovation when Gustafson took the field before the game began. On their feet, they chanted "Gus, Gus, Gus..." as the Longhorns made the game's last out. Then it was, "We want Gus, we want Gus" until the coach walked to a microphone near home plate and spoke to them.

"The support that you fans have given me from day one is just unbelievable, and I thank you from the bottom of my heart," he said.

Gustafson had feared the pressure surrounding the record quest was contributing to his team's recent slump. The Longhorns had lost eight of their last 15 and had fallen from first to fourth in the Southwest Conference.

"I would have liked for it to happen sooner because that would have meant we'd have won more ballgames. I think the suspense just made it that much worse," Gustafson said, his eye already on the next game.

"We may have played our very best ballgame of the year tonight, so hopefully this team will come around now, relax a little bit and start playing the way I think they can play."

Gustafson has said the record was significant because of the feelings he has for Dedeaux, a friend and coaching rival for nearly 20 years.

"The record won't dilute the great accomplishments of Rod Dedeaux," he said of the man who led the Trojans to 11 national championships and 28 Pacific 10 Conference titles before retiring in 1986.

"There will never be anyone to replace him or what he accomplished in the college game."

Dedeaux, 80, said he was excited for Gustafson because "he puts the game ahead of himself and is a good ambassador for college baseball."

"I knew he would catch the record," Dedeaux said. "He's special. Some of our toughest battles came against Texas in the College World Series. We knew we would win or lose to an outstanding, well-coached team."

Gustafson's career is full of impressive statistics: national championships in 1975 and 1983, 21 SWC titles, 17 trips to the College World Series, and a corps of star former players such as Roger Clemens, Greg Swindell and Burt Hooton.

But he talks as proudly of the men who graduated to become doctors, lawyers and businessmen as he does of Clemens, a two-time Cy Young Award winner for the Boston Red Sox and the only Longhorn to have his number retired.

"I take pride in what these guys do whether it's in baseball or in teaching," Gustafson said.

Clemens, a member of the Longhorns' 1983 national championship team, said Gustafson taught him to never quit.

"He was very direct," Clemens said. "It was simple, but he was a very direct person when he gave us our lectures after games that we lost and in getting us ready for life after baseball."

Gustafson's overall record since taking over at Texas, his only college job, is 1,372-329-2. That includes games against professional or semipro teams.

MHS: Eliminated from playoffs

team batting .242 entering the game.

He also sparked the team defensively, as Midland pulled off an unusual double play in the second and seventh innings to keep MHS' slim lead.

In the seventh inning, San Angelo rallied for two runs in the top of the seventh. Midland starting pitcher Keith Lant (2-3) allowed back-to-back singles by designated hitter Jeff Hoelle and Jeromy Speciale. A walk by Will Griffis loaded the bases and Wood brought in Chad Benson in relief.

A 15-minute delay ensued when San Angelo tried to use starting pitcher Billy Scott in a pinch hit role. The umpires ruled that Scott's return would be an illegal substitution and catcher Dusty Daniel was forced to bat.

Daniel hit a sacrificed fly to centerfield, scoring Speciale. Sanchez's throw to the plate was high, but Benson backed up the play and then threw to third to get Griffis out to end the game.

In the second inning with one out and runners on second and third, Bobcat left fielder Andrew Graves hit a single up the middle. Sanchez fired a strike to home to get August Pfluger out at home and then catcher Albert Flores threw to third to get leadoff hitter Jesse Martinez out to end the inning.

"We jumped out early and hit the ball well. Then they did some things and basically we just held on," said Wood. "The thing that enabled us to hold on and win was some great defensive plays. Not many people in high school have players that can make assists like Abel did today. We were very happy with the way we played defensively."

"I felt I had to come on and prove something," said Sanchez. "I was very surprised that I was DH'ed for against Odessa. I was really concentrating and trying to have good at-bats and play good defense."

San Angelo had its changes early, leaving five runners in scoring position in the first four innings. That allowed Lant to gain his control and pick up his second win in district play as Benson came on in the seventh inning to record his first save.

"The deciding factor was how many people we left on third and second today," said San Angelo coach Rod Moore. "We didn't get those guys around.

"In the first and second innings we bobbled some balls and we just didn't get the hits at the right time. They come in hitting .242 and they were certainly a better hitting ballclub today. They put the ball in play and got the hits when they needed them and we fielding them, throwing them or catching the little Texas Leaguers."

After San Angelo took an early 1-0 lead, Midland came back to take a 3-1 lead in the bottom of the first after six consecutive players reached base for MHS, including Jason Rogers' RBI single to cap off the inning.

MHS extended the lead to 6-3 in the fifth on a pair of triples by Clay Johnston and Rogers in between a single by Gabe Lawson.

DRAFT: No. 1 pick usually feels pressure

sure," Steinberg said. "Only one player can be No. 1 and be remembered that way. The expectations are massive. The first pick is a celebrity figure. Some people shy away from it."

In 1989, Aikman wasn't thrilled with all of the baggage that goes along with being No. 1. "He didn't love it," Steinberg said. "He wanted to get it over with. He was so full of trepidation the night before the draft in New York, I called him Crocodile Dundee."

Dallas owned the first pick that year. The team had been sold to Jerry Jones two months earlier and this was the new administration's first foray into the dynamics of the NFL. The Arkansas oilman arrived — surprise, surprise — playing hardball.

Steinberg and Jones began negotiating, one trying to get his price, the other trying not to pay it. At one point, the owner played his trump card. "Take this offer," he told Steinberg, "or we'll draft Tony Mandarich and Troy can go No. 2 to Green Bay."

At that point, it became psychological warfare and a high stakes game of chicken.

Would Jones really do that?

How much does he need Aikman?

Is he prepared to use the No. 1 pick for an offensive lineman, who might come cheaper?

And how important is it to Aikman to be No. 1? Important enough to accept Jones' price?

Questions. Questions. Questions.

Eventually, they all got answered. Jones and Steinberg agreed on $11.037 million for six years, a figure that would explode upwards in 1993 after Aikman won his first of successive Super Bowls. Mandarich went to Green Bay, a pick the Packers would later regret.

And from 3-13 the year before, the Cowboys with Aikman at quarterback, went 1-15. Uhh, that was not exactly the idea.

Aikman has called that humbling season the worst experience of his football life. All that losing, though, made the winning that followed that much more enjoyable.

Now it is Wilkinson's turn. Since he's not a quarterback and since the NFL is wearing a rookie salary cap now, the numbers won't be astronomical. Comfortable, yes. Astronomical, no.

With those numbers, though, comes a burden. Call it the Aikman factor. Barring trades, No. 1 picks are owned by terrible teams. Cincinnati earned this one on the merits of a 3-13 season. New England got Bledsoe as the prize for suffering through a 2-14 year.

The message for No. 1 is make us better and, by the way, do it right now. Bledsoe was not an instant hit. He threw as many interceptions (15) as he did touchdowns. But he did a credible job, passing for a shade under 2,500 yards. And the bottom line is that the Patriots won their last four games and finished 5-11, three games better than they were BB — before Bledsoe.

Steinberg offers this quick quiz for potential No. 1s.

"For offensive players, if the game is on the line and one play will decide it, do you want the ball?

"And for defensive players, do you want that one play run at you?"

The questions never seem to end.

STARS: Power play makes Game 3 difference

(From 1C)

came out flying and outshot Dallas 48-31, reversing the averages from the first two games.

"I'd say he had a more difficult game to play," Gainey said. "He had to be very strong the first 20 minutes ... "

Wakaluk faced 18 shots in the second period, and shut out Brett Hull on 12 shots and Petr Nedved on eight.

"You'd think sooner or later some of them have to go in," said Brendan Shanahan, who had a goal and two assists in Game 3. "But they haven't. We just have to keep shooting at him."

The Stars helped make up the difference by going 3-for-7 on the power play.

"We were doing what we wanted to do, working hard," Craig Janney said. "The tide changed when they got the last power play."

The defeat put the Blues a loss away from a quick playoff exit a year after sweeping Chicago in the first round. Only two teams in NHL history have come back from 3-0 deficits in the playoffs, the 1942 Toronto Maple Leafs against Detroit for the Stanley Cup and the 1975 New York Islanders against Pittsburgh.

"We'd like to sweep, but we realize that the last game's going to be the toughest," Gagner said. "There's such a difference when you're up 3-0 instead of 2-1. That really can put a team down."

Lee softball ends year with win

Midland Lee pitcher Emily Hayes allowed two hits while striking out 15 to lead the Lady Rebels to a 4-1 win over Odessa High in the season finale.

Lee finished the season 20-3 and will begin University Interscholastic League sanctioned games next season.

Hayes was the winning pitcher for Lee (14-1). Christian Lance had two hits, including a double for two RBI to lead LHS.

MHS completes trifecta with win

The Midland High girls softball team used Jodie Strain's three hit pitching to defeat Odessa High 7-1 to complete a three-game sweep on the final weekend of play at the MUGS Complex Saturday.

Midland High completes its season 15-6.

Strain struck out six in Saturday's win.

On Friday, Midland defeated Coahoma 13-1 and 13-10 for a doubleheader sweep.

In the first game Strain was the winning pitcher, allowing three hits in the win.

Casi Madison had a double for MHS. Butts hit a pair of triples; Sheila Vines hit a double and triple and Jennifer Thompson had a pair of doubles in the win.

Karina Madrid was noted for outstanding defensive play at second base.

In the nightcap, Midland defeated Coahoma 13-10 after trailing 6-0 in the bottom of the second inning.

From that point on MHS gathered 13 hits and held the Lady Bulldogs scoreless until the bottom of the seventh.

Vines, Natalie Lowe, Becky Piper, Madison and Butts hit doubles in the game.

Mustangs earn trip to state

Midland Christian had three athletes qualify for the state track and field meet in Waco May 6-7 during the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools meet held at Mustang Field Saturday.

Kyle Jackson, Jerod Zahn and Wes Adams earned trips to state with impressive performances Saturday.

Jackson will compete in two events in Waco after winning both the shot put and discus events. Jackson had a put of 46-feet, 1½ inches and threw the discus 140-9.

Adams finished first in the high jump with a leap of 5-7 and will also complete in the long jump after winning the competition with a jump of 20-2.

Zahn finished second in the 110 hurdles with a 17.8 second time and second in the 300 intermediate hurdles with a 48.0 qualifying time.

ANGELS: Korean pitcher Park the spark San Antonio needs

(From 1C)

Park, who was sent to the Missions from the Los Angeles Dodgers this week to get more work, won't face the Angels until Wednesday night, but his mere arrival may be the turning point for the Missions, who are off to a woeful 3-12 start.

Park, working with a 66 pitch count Friday night against El Paso, pitched four innings of superb ball, facing 14 batters and striking out seven of them. He allowed only two hits and no walks, leaving the game with a 1-0 lead. San Antonio ended up losing 5-3 to the Diablos.

Still, San Antonio catcher Ken Huckaby, who didn't play against the Angels Saturday, but caught Park against El Paso on Friday, feels that Park may be the spark his team needs.

"He was in total control of the game for the four innings he worked and that was like a sigh of relief for us," Huckaby said. "We hadn't seen that this year and I think he brought some confidence to the team. He had a great control of his fastball and used his slider as his out pitch."

And even though the Missions have been taking some heated darts for not being able to win in a brand new ball yard back home, they had little trouble disposing of the Angels on the road Saturday.

"It's a beautiful stadium (in San Antonio), and it will be great if our fans don't give up on us," said catcher Chris Abbe, who caught Saturday. "It's been a tough start for us, but every team has a low point in the season. For whatever reasons, ours came at the start. I think we have the talent to turn it around. It's a long season."

Mission starter Ismael Valdez got off to a rough start, giving up all the Angels' runs in the first two innings, but he faced only 18 batters with shutout ball over the next five frames before giving way to Chris Nichting, who gave up no hits over the last two innings.

Meanwhile, the Missions erupted for a four-run first inning and held a 8-3 lead after four innings. They did it with 14 hits, eight for extra bases, including solo homers by Dwight Maness and Chris Demetral. In a rarity, Michael Moore and Abbe had back-to-back triples in the first inning off Midland starter Shawn Purdy. Purdy, who was making his 1994 debut with the Angels, was touched for eight earned runs in 3⅓ innings of work.

Midland's Chris Pritchett had a two-run double in the first and Marquis Riley drove in a run in the second, but that was the extent of the Angel attack as San Antonio turned in four double plays.

"The biggest thing we did tonight that we haven't been doing is getting results in all three aspects of the game, hitting, pitching and fielding," Abbe said. "We jumped out with some runs early and got timely hitting when we needed it."

One of the bright spots for the Angels was the relief appearance of Dom Johnson, who gave up only one hit and two walks over 3⅓ innings. He struckout five Missions.

ANGEL DUST: One of the reasons the Missions were able to beat Midland was by keeping Luis Raven in the park. Raven had only one hit, a single, in four trips. Entering the game, Raven led the Texas League in eight offensive catagories: Batting Average (.424, next best is .374), Home Runs (9, next best is 5), RBIs (30, next best is 13), Hits (28, next best is 22), Triples (4, next best is 2), Slugging Percentage (1.030, next best is .596, and Extra Base Hits (18, next best is 10) ... Emmitt Cohick finally got back into a game. He hasn't started since April 15. That means the Angels have a .433 hitter on the bench. The arrival of Mike Wolff has force Cohick to the bench. On Saturday, Cohick had one hit in three at-bats. Wolff had one hit in four trips and hit into a key double play with two runners on base to end the bottom of the sixth ...

Vanisi wins discus for Longhorns

HOUSTON (AP) — All-American Eileen Vanisi won her fourth consecutive conference discus title at the Southwest Conference Outdoor Track and Field Championships Saturday.

■ SWC Track and Field

Vanisi threw 166 feet, 4 inches on her fourth throw of the day. It was more than four feet short of her personal best 170-11.

"I was throwing very smoothly, and I would say it was a consistent day for me," said the senior from Euless.

Vanisi will attempt to also capture the shot put, which she won in 1991, when many of the final field and running events are scheduled.

Defending SWC champion Courtney Ireland of Southern Methodist edged out Texas' Richard Wells in the men's discus, 183-10 to 183-9. The junior from New Zealand heaved his best on his fourth effort.

"I was pretty lucky to win," Ireland said. "I didn't throw that well. I just rushed my throws a bit. ... He (Wells) throws pretty well. He's only a freshman."

Texas A&M's women's team scored 23 points in the high jump when six team members placed in the top eight. The Lady Aggies' Jackie Newberry cleared 5-7 as did Katrina Harris of Houston, and had few misses to win the title.

"My goal was to win, and I did that, but I can do better," said Newberrry, a junior from Red Oak.

Sophomore Richard Duncan, in his first year with Texas, won the high jump, clearing 7 feet, 1/4 inch.

"I've been concentrating on the high jump because that's what I have a better chance of winning," said Duncan, who finished third in the triple jump.

Junior Ivory Angello of Rice completed the sweep of both indoor and outdoor titles with a leap of 53-8¼ in the triple jump. Texas senior Telisa Young won the women's event at 42 feet even.

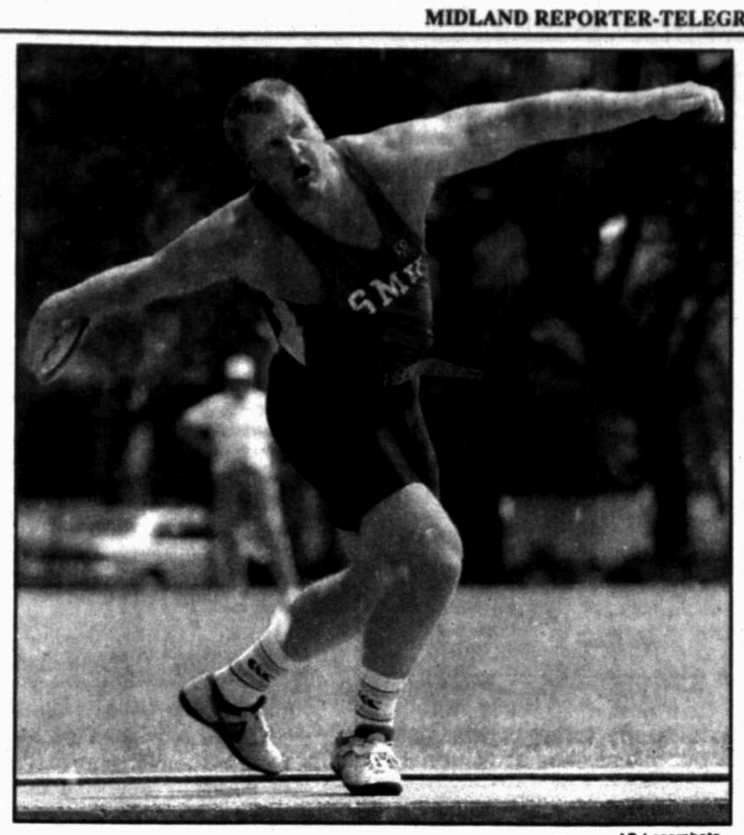

Tim James of Texas Tech set a stadium record in the pole vault at 17-9¼.

Richard Harrison of Texas A&M led Todd Lockwood of Texas by 34 points with 3,575 in the men's decathlon. Meanwhile, Edwina Ammonds of Houston held the lead after four events of heptathlon with 3,098 points over teammate Carolye Asfahl (2,838).

Ubeda Anderson of Houston easily qualified for the 110-meter high hurdle finals by winning his heat with a 14.01 time. Anderson, a sophmore transfer from Florida, is the collegiate leader this year with a time of 13.49.

Texas' Marcus Stokes won the other hurdles heat with a time of 13.9. He also won his 100-meters heat. Defending champion Samuel Jefferson of Houston, Donovan Powell of TCU and Texas A&M's Dante Bolden also advanced in the 100 meters.

Both the Texas men and women are favored to repeat their team titles in this 79th edition of the SWC outdoor meet, which could be the conference's last. Eight of the SWC's nine schools have committed to join either the Big Eight or Western Athletic Conference within the next two years.

Rice sweeps No. 18 Tech

Associated Press

■ SWC Baseball

HOUSTON — Rice designated hitter Jim Miller hit a home run and had three RBIs as the Owls beat No. 18 Texas Tech, 7-4, sweeping a Saturday doubleheader and clinching a spot in the Southwest Conference Tournament. Rice won the first game, 12-2.

In the nightcap, Rice (31-17, 12-6 SWC) jumped to a 6-2 first-inning lead behind the hitting of Miller, who went 2-for-4. Third baseman Mark Quinn added two RBIs and went 2-for-5, including a double.

Tech's Luke Potter hit a two-run triple in the seventh inning to pull the Red Raiders (36-14, 10-5) within three runs, but they couldn't get any closer.

Bo Johnson (5-3) got the victory, giving up seven hits and four runs in 7⅓ innings. He struck out six. Tim Byrdak picked up his ninth save of the year for Tech, giving up no runs and no hits in 1 1-3 innings.

TCU 9-19, Houston 4-4

COLLEGE STATION — Beto G. Gongora drove in seven runs on three hits to lead Texas Christian to a 19-4 victory over Houston, completing a Southwest Conference doubleheader sweep Saturday.

TCU won the first game, 9-4, at Texas A&M's Olsen Field.

The Horned Frogs (32-16, 11-3) scored in eight of nine innings as Houston (29-22, 4-10) tried seven pitchers to slow TCU's 14-hit attack. The Cougars had 15 hits, all off Clay Caruthers (8-2), who went the distance.

Texas 6, Grand Canyon 0

AUSTIN — Texas' Ryan Kjos pitched a no-hitter until the seventh inning and Danny Peoples had two hits and two RBI, leading the Longhorns past Grand Canyon.

Kjos (7-5) walked three and struck out eight in nine innings, leading Texas (33-16) to its fifth straight victory. He retired the first 15 batters he faced, then walked the Antelopes' Gerard Sharko to open the sixth inning.

Grand Canyon's Jim McCalmont ended the no-hitter in the seventh with a single off the glove of Texas left fielder Jeff Conway.

A&M, TCU to meet in SWC tennis

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas A&M defeated Texas Tech 5-1 in men's tennis Saturday to advance to the finals of the Southwest Conference Tournament at Rice University.

Fifth-ranked TCU scored a mild upset over No. 3 Texas, 4-1, to complete the other half of the bracket.

TCU coach David Kent said he was looking forward to the challenge.

"We'll have our work cut out for us after they beat Texas the way they did," Kent said. "We're just going to give it all we can."

The Aggies are 22-2 and ranked 25th nationally.

In the women's division, Texas defeated Baylor 7-1. Texas A&M survived against Rice, 5-3, and will meet the Lady Longhorns in Sunday's finals.

Nebraska upsets champion Stanford

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — All-around champion Dennis Harrison knew he could score higher than he did Friday night to help Nebraska qualify for the NCAA team finals.

He did, leading the top-ranked Cornhuskers over two-time defending champion Stanford Saturday.

Harrison, who won the all-around title Friday night, scored 58.425 as Nebraska claimed its eighth NCAA gymnastics championship. NU's point total of 288.250 was third-best in meet history, topped only by the 289.575 by Stanford and Nebraska's second-place 288.95 in 1992.

Nebraska also was second to Stanford last year.

Ohio State was third for the third straight year with 285.025, behind Stanford's 285.925.

Nebraska had season-high totals on the high bar and still rings, plus a 48.225 on the pommel horse, second only to the 48.25 it had in Friday night's qualifying round.

■ NCAA Gymnastics

Former NCAA event champion Che Bowers had a school-record-tying 9.9 on the pommel horse. Harrison also scored a 9.9 on the parallel bars.

"There was no doubt I could go out and do better than I did Friday night," said Harrison, who won the all-around with a 58.20.

For Harrison and fellow seniors Bowers, Sumner Darling and Burkett Powell to finally beat Stanford for the title was a prize.

"Losing the first two makes this incredible to finally get it," Harrison said.

"We've had some rough times and we've had some good times," Powell said. "This is the best feeling I've ever had."

"Because we got second the last two years, it means more," said Darling, credited by coach Francis Allen with getting the team off on the right foot.

In individual championships, Chris LaMorte of New Mexico defended his title in the still rings, Mark Booth of Stanford won the floor exercise, Jason Bertram of California claimed the pommel horse title, Steve McCain of UCLA won the vault, Richard Grace of Nebraska took the parallel bars and Jim Foody of UCLA won the high bar.

McCain and Grace also are repeat champions. McCain won the high bar a year ago when Grace won the floor exercise.

Springer takes huge lead into final round

■ Winless on the PGA tour, Mike Springer holds a commanding four stroke lead in the Greensboro Open.

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — There's a message for those golfers trailing Mike Springer in the Greater Greensboro Open. Bring your best game to the final round.

■ Greensboro Open

"I feel like I'm in control. I feel like they've got to come take it away from me," said Springer, whose third sub-par round at Forest Oaks Country Club gave him a GGO record for lowest 54-hole score.

After scrambling out of sand traps on the early holes and making par-saving putts much of the day, Springer shot a 2-under-par 70 for a three-day total of 203, 13 under par. Danny Edwards was at 204 on the way to winning the tournament in 1977.

With his game remaining consistent, Springer considers himself a target who will be hard to hit.

"I think if you give anybody on this tour a four-shot lead, you're chasing them," he said. "It's my tournament to lose. So it's a great position to be in, and I've been looking forward to it for a long time. I'll go out tomorrow and see how I do."

Springer maintained a four-shot lead on the field he built after the second round as he tries for his first victory.

Brad Bryant, who has had three tours of qualifying school since getting his PGA Tour card in 1978, shot a 4-under-par 68 for a 207. John Morse, fifth in winnings on the Nike Tour last year, also moved to 9-under-par after a 67.

Bryant, like Springer, has a history of getting close. He has six seconds in 12 years, most recently in the Doral Open last month. He also said it's not his mission to aim his game at catching the leader.

"I don't have to make up any ground. I'm going to go out there and do my best," Bryant said. "It's not up to me what the other guys do. If they play great and they beat me fine. The only thing I don't want to do is beat myself."

Although he's had limited success in the United States, Morse has the 1990 Australian Open title to his credit. But while he said he likes the Australian courses, the Nike Tour helped get him to this point.

"It teaches you a lot of patience and how not to get carried away and be stupid out there," Morse said. "You just let things come to you."

One thing he doesn't expect to come to him on Sunday is Springer.

"Mike's a great player. He's not about to back up on the golf course when the weather conditions are just perfect," Morse said. "You're just trying to play yourself into a position to maybe chase a little bit tomorrow. All I'm trying to do is go out there and beat the golf course."

Morse covered the most ground, having started the day at 4-under-par. He had five birdies, and put himself in a spot to win more money in one outing than his entire take from the Nike Tour in 1993, $122,627.

The Greater Greensboro Open, with a $1.5 million purse, pays the winner $270,000.

Gil Morgan, who had to take 2½ months off to recover from a rib injury earlier this year, is at 8-under 208 following a 69.

With no clouds, mild temperatures and no significant wind to bother him as happened on Friday, Hale Irwin shot a 71 for 7-under par 209. Bob Lohr joined Irwin after his round of 69.

Ed Humenik, Springer's closest competitor after two rounds and his playing partner in the third round, had trouble all afternoon and wobbled in with a 73, leaving him at 210 along with Donnie Hammond.

Six more players are at 211 and Mark Calcavecchia led a trio at 212.

From the beginning, it appeared Springer would have trouble staying on course to win his first PGA Tour title. His first tee shot found sand and he struggled for par. His second shot at the par-5 No. 2 hole was short of the green and he had to chip to save par.

On the par-3 third, his tee shot flew the green and scattered the small gallery gathered there. That led to his only bogey. Springer got that shot back with birdie at the eighth hole, then got two more birdies on the back nine.

Springer gave himself a margin to keep the contenders at bay, but he also gained a big boost of confidence.

"All I can do is what I can do. And I know that if I go out and play the way I've played the last three days, I'll win."

Thoroughbred park opens

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas horsemen, forced to take their thoroughbreds out of state to race for 47 years, now have a home at the sparkling new Sam Houston Race Park, the state's first Class I facility.

The track is racing the clock to be ready for the April 29 official opening of the $84 million facility, built on 240 acres in northwestern Harris County.

Each completed step in the construction process has been a thrill for Sam Houston vice president Ken Pearson, who has been aboard from the beginning of the project.

"On April 1, when the first horses got off the vans and walked to the stalls, I almost cried," Pearson said. "When the people get here, it will be a special time, that's for sure."

Fans will find an air-conditioned grandstand, 20 luxury suites, a private Jockey Club, the Winner's Circle restaurant and there will be more than 1,000 TV monitors catching the action.

Sam Houston Race Park is the first pari-mutuel horse racing track in Houston since Epsom Downs closed in 1937 after the state banned pari-mutuel betting.

"We were chosen by the state to have the only license for the entire southeast portion of Texas," Pearson said. "They said 'Here is a monopoly, follow the rules and do good.' It's a very humbling experience and a helluva responsibility."

Few are happier about the state's first Class I track than the horsemen who have been forced to race in other states.

"Texas is horse country. The people have an affinity for horses," Sam Houston general manager Jim Murphy said. "The people have been waiting 50 years for Class I racing to come to Texas. The reception has been phenomenal."

There is a Texas connection with 90 percent of the horses stabled at Sam Houston. Leland Cook of Corsicana, whose Dixieland Heat won the Louisiana Derby at the Fair Grounds in New Orleans last year, is among them.

McGee leads pack at Pro-Am

DALLAS (AP) — Jerry McGee fired a 4-under-par 66 Saturday for a two-round total of 8-under 132 and a two-shot lead over a tightly-bunched field in the Dallas Reunion Pro-Am Senior PGA tournament.

McGee overcame chronic pain in his left wrist, hand and elbow for his best round of the year.

■ Reunion Pro-Am

The East Palestine, Ohio, resident leads DeWitt Weaver, Dick Goetz and Bob Murphy, tied at 134. Goetz shot a 65, Murphy a 66 and Weaver 69.

"I haven't led a round since the Kemper Open in 1979," said McGee, who left the regular PGA tour in 1982 with muscle problems in his chest and joined the Senior Tour last year. "But it's only the sixth inning. We've got three more innings to go. Anything can happen."

A total of 20 players are within six shots of McGee.

A check for $75,000 awaits Sunday's winner in the Senior Tour's only pro-am event, which is being played at the Oak Cliff Country Club.

The group at 135 includes Rocky Thompson, Robert Gaona, Larry Gilbert, George Archer, Simon Hobday and Chi Chi Rodriguez.

Hobday, Weaver and J.C. Snead shared the first-round lead with 65s, but Snead faded Saturday with a 71.

Snead, Tom Wargo, Dick Rhyan and Jack Kiefer are at 136.

Archer got to 8-under on the 14th before double-bogeying the 15th, then bogeying No. 18 to finish with a 68.

Weaver would have been within a shot of McGee, but missed a one-foot putt for par on No. 4.

"I took it for granted, but you can't do that in this game," Weaver said.

Weaver said the tournament is wide open.

"Even somebody at 2-over could throw an 8-under tomorrow," Weaver said. "Somebody's going to take off and make some putts tomorrow."

Crowd favorite Rocky Thompson shot a 67 Saturday.

Thompson moved to 4-under for the tournament with an eagle-3 on No. 2, holing a 5-iron from 180 yards, then birdied the 17th to improve to 5-under overall.

Thompson is the mayor of Toco, Texas, a town of 164 northeast of Dallas, and handed out 46 guest badges to friends.

NBA playoffs dull last day

Associated Press

The NBA playoff picture got clearer Saturday, making at least nine of today's 11 games practically meaningless.

The Atlanta Hawks clinched the homecourt advantage through the Eastern Conference playoffs with their 93-89 victory over Atlanta. The Hawks will play Miami in the best-of-5 opening round series.

All the Western Conference seeding positions were determined after Friday night's games.

Top-seeded Seattle will play Denver, Houston will play Portland, Phoenix will play Golden State and San Antonio will play Utah.

Playoff schedules will be released today, an NBA spokesman said.

Scherbo, Li shine at World Gymnastic Championships

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — Vitaly Scherbo, showing flashes of his old form, won the men's floor exercises Saturday night at the World Gymnastics Championships, while a new star arose on the women's uneven bars.

■ World Gymnastics

Luo Li, a tiny 17-year-old from China, received 9.912 points — the highest score of the championships so far — in winning the women's event.

Scherbo won his first title of the championships after having finished a disappointing third in defense of his all-around title earlier in the week and struggling during qualifying events.

Scherbo, the greatest gymnast of his generation, had won six gold medals at the 1992 Olympic Games and three at last year's World Championships.

The 22-year-old from Belarus will compete in three other apparatus finals today — in the vault, parallel bars and horizontal — and has a chance to better his gold medal haul of last year.

Li, competing in her first world championships, previously had won gold medals in the East Asian Games and the Chinese national championships.

She was undaunted by the bigger stage, turning in a performance that combined artistry and athleticism and had the crowd on its feet at the Brisbane Entertainment Center.

Svetlana Chorkina of Russia, with 9.875 points, finished second, and her countrywoman, Dina Kochetkova, was third with 9.850.

Scherbo received 9.725 points for his floor routine in beating Neil Thomas of Britain and Ioannis Melissanidis of Greece, who tied for second with 9.687 points each.

Scherbo was the last of the eight finalists to complete his routine, overhauling Thomas, a 26-year-old from Liverpool who also was runner-up at last year's World Championships, and Melissanidis, 17, the European junior champion in the discipline.

Yuri Chechi of Italy, the defending champion, won the rings with 9.787 points. American Paul O'Neill was second with 9.725, and Dan Burinca of Romania and Valeri Belenki of Germany tied for third with 9.700 apiece.

Gina Gogean, 16, of Romania, won the women's vault with 9.812 points. Chorkina was runner-up with 9.800, and Lavinia Milosovici of Romania took third with 9.787.

Shannon Miller of the United States, who successfully defended her all-around title Friday night, led after her first vault with 9.825, but tumbled on the dismount from her second vault, landed on her bottom and finished seventh with a score of 9.543.

"I wished I would have done a better second vault, but it was the first time I'd tried it in competition," said Miller, 17, of Edmond, Okla.

Marius Urzica, an 18-year-old student competing in his first major senior competition, collected Romania's second gold medal of the night, winning the pommel horse title with a score of 9.712.

Eric Poujade of France, the European Cup champion, was second with 9.700, and Li Donghua of Switzerland and Vitaly Marinich of Ukraine tied for third with 9.662.

The six-day championships end today with five individual apparatus finals.

China's Lou Li won the gold medal on the uneven parallel bars with a score of 9.912 at the World Gymnastic Championships in Brisbane, Australia Saturday.

Bruguera advances in Monte Carlo

Associated Press

MONTE CARLO, Monaco — Defending champion Sergei Bruguera and Andrei Medvedev scored straight-set victories in the semifinals of the Monte Carlo Open today.

Bruguera, who also won in 1991, eliminated second-seeded Stefan Edberg, 6-2, 7-6 (7-3) with a number of passing shots and a double fault by Edberg on match point.

Medvedev defeated his friend and former junior doubles partner, Yevgeny Kafelnikov, 7-6 (8-6), 6-3.

The 19-year-old Medvedev, an ethnic Russian who represents Ukraine, defeated the 20-year-old Kafelnikov, originally from Sochi, Russia, in 1 hour, 43 minutes. Both developed in the former Soviet system and played a number of matches in the junior ranks but never as pros.

Kafelnikov earlier had eliminated Andre Agassi and Michael Stich. Medvedev beat Jim Courier in a 3-hour, 19 minute marathon in their quarterfinal Friday.

La Familia Open

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Sixteen-year-old Iva Majoli of Croatia advanced to the final of the La Familia Open by beating Magdalena Maleeva 5-7, 6-4, 6-2 in their semifinal match on Saturday.

Majoli, the youngest fulltime player on the WTA Tour, will face local favorite Arantxa Sanchez Vicario in Sunday's final. Sanchez Vicario, the tournament's top seed and the tour's second-ranked player, breezed past Germany Sabine Hack 6-0, 6-1 in 53 minutes.

Sanchez Vicario, a Barcelona native, has won this event three times. This will be her fifth appearance in the final. Her only loss in the final was in 1992 to Monica Seles.

Majoli took 2 hour and 15 minutes to beat her 19-year-old Bulgarian opponent, who was seeded third.

Majoli, ranked No. 27 in the world, beat the Conchita Martinez of Spain in the quarterfinals.

"I've never played against Arantxa and I'm looking forward to it tomorrow in the final," Majoli said. "She's the world's No. 2 and it will be interesting. I'm not feeling any pressure. If I play well I'll have my chances."

Sanchez Vicario compared Majoli with Seles, who has been sidelined since being stabbed a year ago by while competing in a tournament in Hamburg, Germany.

"Majoli has a style like Seles'," Sanchez Vicario said. "If I can play well like today with the home crowd on my side I shouldn't lose."

Sunday's final will be the second this season for Majoli, who has never won a WTA event. She has reached the semifinals four times this season. Her best career finish was second earlier this year in Osaka, Japan, in the Asia Women's Open.

In addition to this tournament, she also reached the semifinals this season in Indian Wells, Calif., and Hilton Head, S.C.

Majoli, who will turn 17 in August, trains in Bradenton, Fla.

NFL teams continue underclassmen feast

■ Since 1989 hungry teams have gobbled up non-seniors and this year is no different.

By Barry Wilner
AP Football Writer

NEW YORK — Since the NFL decided that youth shall be served up for selection in the draft, teams quickly have satisfied their appetite for underclassmen. That hunger will be evident again Sunday.

In 1989, after Barry Sanders threatened to take the league to court over its prohibition of drafting underclassmen, the NFL backed down and approved Sanders' petition to be made eligible. The next year, sensing it couldn't successfully defend barring underclassman, the league opened the draft to the non-seniors.

And teams have opened the draft by grabbing junior after junior, with a sophomore or two thrown in.

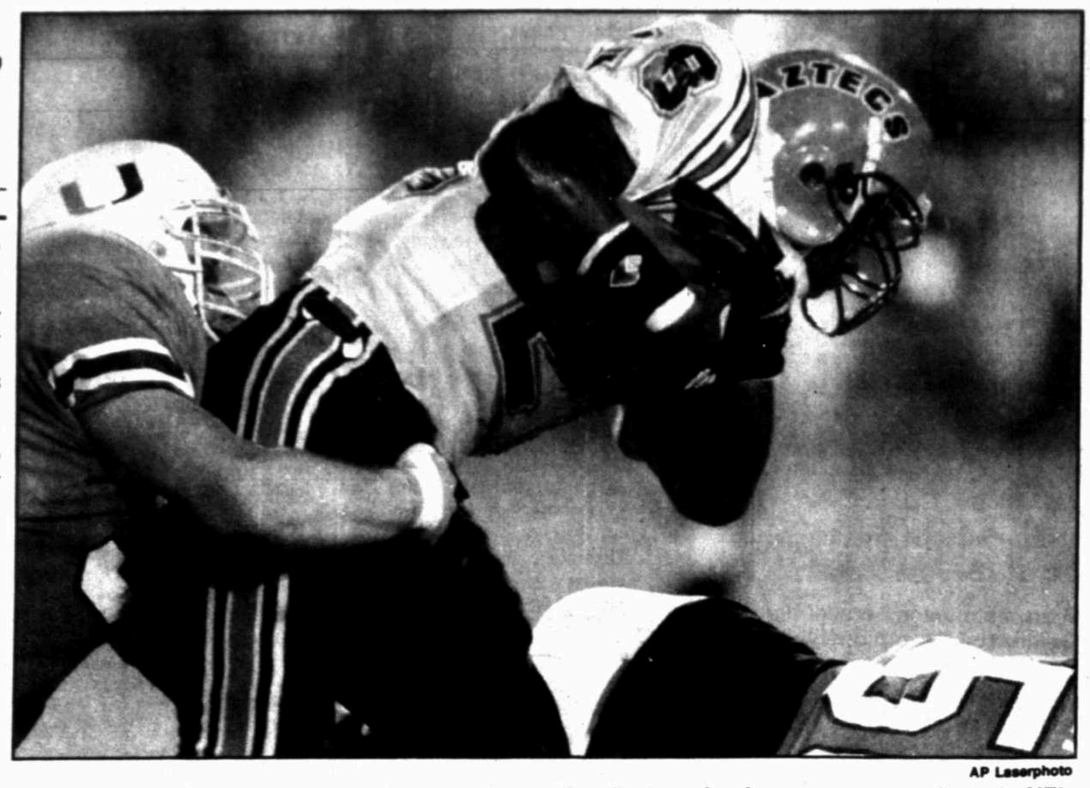

"If they are the best players, you select them," Jimmy Johnson said. "It's not their class or their age that matters, it's their talent."

So Sanders went third overall in the '89 draft, and the race to fill draft lists with underclassmen had begun.

In 1990, teams couldn't get young blood fast enough. Such future stars as Emmitt Smith, Junior Seau and Rodney Hampton went in the first round. Jeff George was the opening pick — and Indianapolis traded two starters who became Pro Bowl players to get him. Keith McCants, a defensive fiend at Alabama, went fourth overall, and Heisman Trophy winner Andre Ware was seventh.

Not that the talents of all the underclassmen were fully recognized: In the second round, Tampa Bay took Reggie Cobb and a guy named Barry Foster went to Pittsburgh in the fifth round.

Of the 38 underclassmen who were made eligible for the draft, 18 were selected. Eight went in the first round, five in the first seven picks. By 1991, picking juniors had become a habit for the pros. Rocket Ismail would have been the No. 1 choice had he not signed with Toronto of the Canadian Football League before the draft. Herman Moore, Leonard Russell, Todd Marinovich (a sophomore) went in the opening round and Eric Swann, who did not attend college and played in a semipro league, was picked sixth overall.

San Diego State's Marshall Faulk is one of several underclassmen to declare themselves eligible for the 1994 Draft. Since 1989 when the first underclassmen was selected, NFL teams have taken advantage of the new rule allowing non-seniors to enter the league.

'If they are the best players, you select them. It's not their class or their age that matters, it's their talent.'

— Jimmy Johnson

"It certainly has made it more difficult to find players," Jets GM Dick Steinberg said. "We've had to concentrate on just one class of players in previous years, and that wasn't an exact science. Now, it's even sketchier."

The 1992 draft provided the real breakthrough for underclassmen. Steve Emtman of Washington was the top pick, while 11 non-seniors went in the opening round. Four of the first five picks were juniors: Emtman, Sean Gilbert, Desmond Howard and Terrell Buckley.

"I'll have to learn to crawl before I can walk," said Howard, the '91 Heisman Trophy winner who still is crawling with the Redskins.

The pick-'em-before-they're-ripe frenzy continued last year, when three of the first four selections were non-seniors. Quarterback Drew Bledsoe went first and says, "I've never regretted coming out." He's also returned to Washington State to finish off his undergraduate studies.

Garrison Hearst was the third choice overall and Marvin Jones went right after. Both had their rookie seasons curtailed by serious injuries.

In all, 10 underclassmen were selected in the first round, including Offensive Rookie of the Year Jerome Bettis.

The trend figures to continue on Sunday, with perhaps the first four picks being sophomores or juniors. Ohio State defensive lineman Dan Wilkinson showed in just two seasons of Big Ten play that he's a franchise-type player.

"I started thinking about it in the spring of last year," he said. "I had heard that pro scouts were looking at my workouts and giving me good ratings, and I knew that it would be a good chance to do something for me and my family. It wasn't really difficult to decide to turn pro." Quarterbacks Trent Dilfer and Heath Shuler and running back Marshall Faulk also had little to prove by staying in college.

Other underclassmen to watch for in this draft are running backs Mario Bates, James Bostic, William Floyd, Greg Hill, Calvin Jones and Bam Morris; receivers David Palmer and Darnay Scott; defensive linemen Sam Adams and Joe Johnson; linebacker Jamir Miller and cornerback Corey Sawyer.

"If a player thinks he's ready, he's going to give it a shot," Sawyer said. "I think I'm ready."

How would Jimmy have performed?

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Recently retired Jimmy Johnson will probably be lounging on his boat "Three Rings" soaking in Florida sunshine when the Dallas Cowboys face Sunday's NFL draft with owner Jerry Jones' finger on the trigger.

With seven free agent losses, Jones needs to hit some bull's eyes.

What would Jimmy have done? It's a question that will be hanging like gunsmoke in the air of the draft war room at Valley Ranch.

Jones, who paid Johnson $2 million to end their feud, has wanted to be in charge in the draft room.

With Johnson out of sight and out of mind, Jones finally has his wish.

He talks like he has been a decision-maker, but anyone familiar with the Cowboys operation knows it was Johnson who wheeled and dealed on draft day with Jones on the sidelines as a cheerleader.

There have been published reports that Jones even asked Johnson to confer with him so it would look good for the television network cameras.

"I'll have to make decisions that Jimmy and I made in the past," Jones said. "But I never thought I wasn't making the call."

But it was Johnson's call in 1990 when he moved up in the draft to get Emmitt Smith when others said the Florida star was too slow and too small. Johnson saw what others missed: Smith's courage and heart, which have been on ample display in the last two Super Bowl seasons.

Anyone could have drafted Troy Aikman, but Johnson hit on such players as offensive tackle Erik Williams, a third-round pick from small Central (Ohio) State, and seventh-round pick Leon Lett, a rising star at defensive end who played for tiny Emporia (Kansas) State.

Johnson had a few misses such as second-round wide receiver Alexander Wright, who lacked the good hands to match his blazing speed, and first-rounder Robert Jones, who has yet to pan out to be a game-breaking linebacker.

But his overall mark is of a gambler who won more than he lost.

New coach Barry Switzer will be in the war room this year.

Switzer has been out of college coaching for five years since leaving Oklahoma under a dark cloud. He's never had a fling as an NFL coach.

Jones does have a powerful ally on his side. Larry Lacewell, director of college scouting, knows football players, particularly defensive players.

At Oklahoma, Lacewell was one of the best defensive coordinators in college football and knows what it takes from that side of the field. Johnson called Lacewell the best football technician he has ever been around.

The Cowboys need defensive help, particularly in the line, where they lost free agents Tony Casillas to Kansas City and Jimmie Jones to the Los Angeles Rams, and at linebacker where Ken Norton is defecting for $8 million to sign with the San Francisco 49ers.

Drafting from the 28th position leaves the Cowboys little room for error. Johnson would have found a way to move up into the top 10 with trades if he saw a player he wanted.

What will Jones do? What would Jimmy have done?

Under the salary cap Jones isn't likely to sign picks before the Cowboys draft them as they've done on several occasions in the past.

"There will be a tight money squeeze," Jones said. "Clubs only have a certain number of dollars for the draft picks. It's a different ballgame now."

It certainly is at Valley Ranch, where Jones has been wanting to take credit for the Cowboys' excellent draft day reputation. Now, he also must be prepared to take the blame for any misfires.

Profiles of 1994 NFL Draft Top Players

By Rick Warner
AP Football Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Profiles of top players in Sunday's NFL draft (All are seniors unless otherwise noted):

QUARTERBACKS

HEATH SHULER, Tennessee, 6-2, 221, junior — Elway-type arm and runs like a fullback. Last year's Heisman runner-up, he completed 65 percent of his throws and set a school record with 25 touchdown passes.

TRENT DILFER, Fresno State, 6-3, 228, junior — Big, strong and fearless. Led nation in passing last season, and set Division I record by throwing 271 consecutive passes without an interception.

DOUG NUSSMEIER, Idaho, 6-2, 211 — Left-hander with soft touch. Won Walter Payton Award as top player in Division I-AA last year, passing for 2,960 yards and 33 TDs.

GLENN FOLEY, Boston College, 6-0, 212 — Accurate passer with quick release. Broke many of Doug Flutie's school records.

CHARLIE WARD, Florida State, 6-1, 188 — Despite fabulous college career, pro scouts are skeptical because of his size and scrambling style. Won the 1993 Heisman Trophy and led Seminoles to their first national championship.

RUNNING BACKS

MARSHALL FAULK, San Diego State, 5-10, 206, junior — Breakaway runner who can also catch and block. Led nation in rushing as a freshman and sophomore, and finished career with fourth-best average in NCAA history (148 ypg).

CHARLIE GARNER, Tennessee, 5-9, 181 — Fast and elusive. Led Volunteers in rushing last two seasons after transferring from junior college.

MARIO BATES, Arizona State, 6-0, 217, junior — Impressive combination of power and speed. Had major knee surgery in 1992, but came back to rush for 1,111 yards last season.

GREG HILL, Texas A&M, 5-10, 206, junior — Shifty, low-to-the-ground runner. First back in Southwest Conference history to rush for 1,000 yards as a freshman and sophomore.

LESHON JOHNSON, Northern Illinois, 5-10, 206 — Tough, aggressive back who can run over people. Led nation in rushing last year (179.6 ypg).

ERRICT RHETT, Florida, 5-10, 211 — Versatile back who is excellent receiver. Rushed for 1,289 yards and caught 36 passes last season.

CALVIN JONES, Nebraska, 5-11, 212, junior — Quick feet, exceptional balance. Plagued by injuries last year but still gained 1,043 yards.

JAMES BOSTIC, Auburn, 5-11, 222, junior — Powerful runner and blocker who can also play fullback. Was Tigers' top ground-gainer last year with 1,205 yards.

FULLBACKS

WILLIAM FLOYD, Florida State, 6-1, 242, junior — Bruising blocker and effective runner in short-yardage situations.

BYRON "BAM" MORRIS, Texas Tech, 6-0, 241, junior — Won Doak Walker Award as nation's top running back. Broke Earl Campbell's Southwest Conference rushing record last season with 1,752 yards.

WIDE RECEIVERS

CHARLES JOHNSON, Colorado, 6-0, 188 — Sprinter's speed, great hands. Set Colorado career record with 2,447 receiving yards. Needs to get stronger.

JOHNNIE MORTON, Southern Cal, 5-11, 189 — Runs precise routes, makes acrobatic catches. Set school records last season with 78 receptions for 1,373 yards and 12 TDs.

DERRICK ALEXANDER, Michigan, 6-1, 196 — Big-play man who can run after the catch. Returned four punts for touchdowns in college career.

DARNAY SCOTT, San Diego State, 6-1, 186, junior — Outstanding leaper with smooth moves, but drops too many balls. Overshadowed by teammate Marshall Faulk.

DAVID PALMER, Alabama, 5-7, 167, junior — Terrific all-around athlete who can run, throw and catch. His 3,939 all-purpose yards is second on all-time Alabama list.

TIGHT ENDS

LONNIE JOHNSON, Florida State, 6-2, 239 — Good hands, but small for the position. Not used much as a receiver in Seminoles' fast-break offense.

CARLESTER CRUMPLER, East Carolina, 6-5, 254 — Tall target who must improve blocking technique.

CENTERS

ERIC MAHLUM, California, 6-4, 285 — Good range and footwork. Can play guard or center.

KEVIN MAWAE, LSU, 6-3, 285 — Versatile lineman who played center, guard and tackle in college.

TOM NALEN, Boston College, 6-2, 280 — Excellent technique, fierce competitor.

JIM PYNE, Virginia Tech, 6-2, 277 — Durable, quick, strong hands. Father and grandfather played pro football.

TIM RUDDY, Notre Dame, 6-2, 274 — Overachiever. Very strong upper body.

OFFENSIVE GUARDS-TACKLES

AARON TAYLOR, Notre Dame, 6-3, 303 — Explosive blocker. Won Lombardi Award as nation's top lineman.

TRE JOHNSON, Temple, 6-2, 315 — Fine athlete, mobile for his size. Tendency to be overweight.

WAYNE GANDY, Auburn, 6-4, 289 — Quick off the ball, good balance. Needs to be more physical.

BERNARD WILLIAMS, Georgia, 6-8, 317 — Wingspan like a condor. Great natural ability, but inconsistent.

TODD STEUSIE, California, 6-5, 315 — Hard worker who added more than 60 pounds in weightroom.

LARRY ALLEN, Sonoma State, 6-2, 325 — Dominant run blocker. Questionable competition in Division II.

MARCUS SPEARS, Northwestern State, 6-4, 302 — Can run, pull and block downfield, but has poor technique.

ISAAC DAVIS, Arkansas, 6-2, 325 — Came on strong at end of last season. Can be overpowering at times.

DEFENSIVE LINEMEN

DAN WILKINSON, Ohio State, 6-3, 327, sophomore — Considered one of top defensive line prospects in last decade. Great size, strength and quickness. "Big Daddy" played only two years in college.

SAM ADAMS, Texas A&M, 6-2, 292, junior — Tremendous pass rusher. Had 10½ sacks, 13 tackles for loss and 16 quarterback pressures last season.

BRYANT YOUNG, Notre Dame, 6-2, 276 — Intense player who wears down opponents. Led Irish in sacks three straight seasons.

WILLIE MCGINEST, Southern Cal, 6-4, 255 — Jumping ability and long arms make it hard to throw over him. In-between size — small for defensive end and big for linebacker.

HENRY FORD, Arkansas, 6-2, 284 — Powerful pass rusher. Set school records last season with 14 sacks and 23 tackles for loss.

WILLIAM GAINES, Florida, 6-4, 300 — Mobile with fine footwork. Missed 1992 regular season with knee injury.

ROMEO BANDISON, Oregon, 6-3, 289 — Possible sleeper from the Netherlands. Didn't play American football until coming to California for his senior year in high school. Has ability, but needs experience.

JOE JOHNSON, Louisville, 6-3, 285, junior — Aggressive, well-coordinated. Had 17 sacks last year.

FERNANDO SMITH, Jackson State, 6-5, 283 — Can stuff the run. Led team with 131 tackles in 1993.

BRENTSON BUCKNER, Clemson, 6-2, 310 — Extremely strong. Has been compared to former Tigers star Michael Dean Perry.

TIM BOWENS, Mississippi, 6-4, 317, junior — Raw but talented. Played only nine games at Ole Miss after transferring from junior college.

LINEBACKERS

TREV ALBERTS, Nebraska, 6-4, 243 — Robo-LB. Keeps coming at you. Won Butkus Award as nation's best linebacker.

JOHN THIERRY, Alcorn State, 6-3, 248 — All-around athlete who also starred in track and field. Made 119 tackles and nine sacks last year.

JAMIR MILLER, UCLA, 6-4, 226, junior — Fast, flashy and erratic.

AUBREY BEAVERS, Oklahoma, 6-2, 233 — Bodybuilder's physique, good endurance. Only played two full seasons for Sooners.

SAM ROGERS, Colorado, 6-2, 249 — Junior-college transfer who made great strides last year, leading team with 9 1-2 sacks.

RONNIE WOOLFORK, Colorado, 6-2, 254 — Started out as QB, but turned into top LB. Had disappointing senior season.

DEFENSIVE BACKS

ANTONIO LANGHAM, Alabama, 5-11, 180 — Big-play man who won 1993 Jim Thorpe Award as country's best defensive back. Holds Crimson Tide career record with 19 interceptions.

AARON GLENN, Texas A&M, 5-8, 184 — Terrific one-on-one defender. Also led the nation in punt returns last season.

DEWAYNE WASHINGTON, North Carolina State, 5-11, 191 — Hard-hitter. Blocked two kicks, intercepted four passes and forced two fumbles in 1993.

COREY SAWYER, Florida State, 5-9, 170, junior — Small, but skillful. Had 13 career interceptions. Elusive punt returner.

JEFF BURRIS, Notre Dame, 5-11, 194 — Very versatile. Played cornerback, safety, tailback and kick returner for the Fighting Irish.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, Kansas State, 5-9, 176 — Track star with blazing speed.

PUNTERS-PLACEKICKERS

PAT O'NEILL, Syracuse, 6-0, 200 — Very strong leg. Averaged 44.3 yards per punt last season and made 10 of 17 field goal attempts, including a 50-yarder.

DAN EICHLOFF, Kansas, 6-0, 223 — Great distance on field goals and kickoffs. Made 61-yard field goal in 1992.

Roy saves Canadiens day with performance

Associated Press

■ NHL Hockey

MONTREAL — Only hours out of a hospital bed, Patrick Roy made 39 saves Saturday night to key Montreal's 5-2 victory over Boston, squaring the first-round NHL playoff series at 2-2.

Roy was hospitalized for two days because of appendicitis and there were fears he would require surgery, which would have finished him for this series.

But the condition responded to antibiotics and he was released Saturday morning.

About 12 hours later, with the ovation of a sellout crowd ringing in his ears, he looked like the same Roy who was voted MVP last spring in leading the Canadiens to the NHL title. He was at his best in power-play situations, stopping Boston cold on six opportunities.

Kirk Muller scored twice and Paul DiPietro got another on power plays for Montreal as the Canadiens scored on three of their first five shots against Boston goalie Vincent Riendeau.

A key goal came from Guy Carbonneau in the final minute of the second period after Adam Oates and Ted Donato had closed the gap to one goal for Boston.

Ed Ronan added another for Montreal in the third period.

Sabres 5, Devils 3

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Wayne Presley and Yuri Khmylev each scored twice as Buffalo got more goals on than it did in the first three games combined to beat New Jersey and tie the NHL playoff series 2-2.

Both teams broke out of the disciplined, defensive styles that held the scoring to eight goals in the thre first three games. Game 4 also added fighting to the mix, with Rob Ray taking a break from two brawls with Mike Peluso to score Buffalo's fifth goal.

That had not even been approached early in the series, as neither Dominik Hasek or Martin Brodeur — the league's two stingiest goaltenders in the regular season — were beaten more than twice in one game.

The win assured the Sabres of another home game after the Eastern Conference quarterfinal goes to New Jersey for Game 5 on Monday night. Game 6 will be in Buffalo on Wednesday and Game 7, if necessary, back in New Jersey on Friday.

John MacLean had a goal and two assists for the Devils and had a chance to tie it when it was 4-3 early in the third with Hasek sprawled out and a rebound bouncing in the crease. But MacLean put it over the net.

Capitals 4, Penguins 1

LANDOVER, Md. — Sound defense, solid forechecking and spectacular goaltending. Those are the reasons why Washington have pushed Pittsburgh to the brink of elimination in their first-round NHL playoff series.

Luck has nothing to do with it.

"Right now, they're outworking us in every department," Pittsburgh coach Ed Johnston said Saturday night after Washington once again frustrated Mario Lemieux and the Penguins' high-powered offense in a 4-1 victory.

Washington can wrap up the playoff with a victory in Game 5 Monday night in Pittsburgh. The last time the teams met in the playoffs, the Penguins rallied from a 3-1 deficit and went on to win the Stanley Cup in 1992.

The Capitals still have to win another game, but the Penguins are in no position to be overconfident.

Washington goalie Don Beaupre faced only 22 shots, stopping all but one, and Joe Juneau and Dimitri Khristich each had a goal and an assist. Peter Bondra scored the go-ahead goal in the second period, but the key to the game was the Capitals' defense.

Lemieux took only two shots in the first 40 minutes and the Penguins managed just seven shots in the final period. Pittsburgh's lone goal came on a 55-foot slap shot by Martin Straka in the first period.

The Penguins averaged 3.6 goals per game during the regular season, but they've scored just once over the last eight periods. Lemieux is the only Penguin with more than one goal in the series and Kevin Stevens, who had 41 goals in the regular season, does not have a point.

Pittsburgh went 0-for-2 on the power play and is 1-for-18 in the playoffs.

Blackhawks 5, Maple Leafs 4

CHICAGO — The hats and the rolled-up posters came flying down onto the ice as Tony Amonte got Chicago back into its opening-round playoff series with Toronto.

His four goals sparked a 5-4 Blackhawks victory and prompted the rain of debris from fans at Chicago Stadium.

"It made me feel part of the city. It was a great gesture," Amonte said after Chicago cut Toronto's lead in the best-of-7 series to 2-1.

Amonte hadn't scored four goals in a hockey game since he was in college. And in 17 previous playoff games, he only had three. But Saturday night he got the dormant Blackhawks' offense untracked.

"The puck just seemed to go to me," said Amonte. "And fortunately everything went my way. This is the biggest game I've had so far in my career and the most satisfying."

Amonte, acquired from the New York Rangers in March, tied a Blackhawks playoff record for goals in a game, set by Denis Savard against Toronto in 1986.

"Before the game the coach told me not to put any pressure on myself, do the little things and the goals will take care of themselves," Amonte said.

"You keep thinking about scoring, thinking about scoring and you put pressure on yourself."

Amonte scored twice in the first two minutes, seven seconds of the game — doubling Chicago's output from the first two games combined — and had one each in the second and third periods.

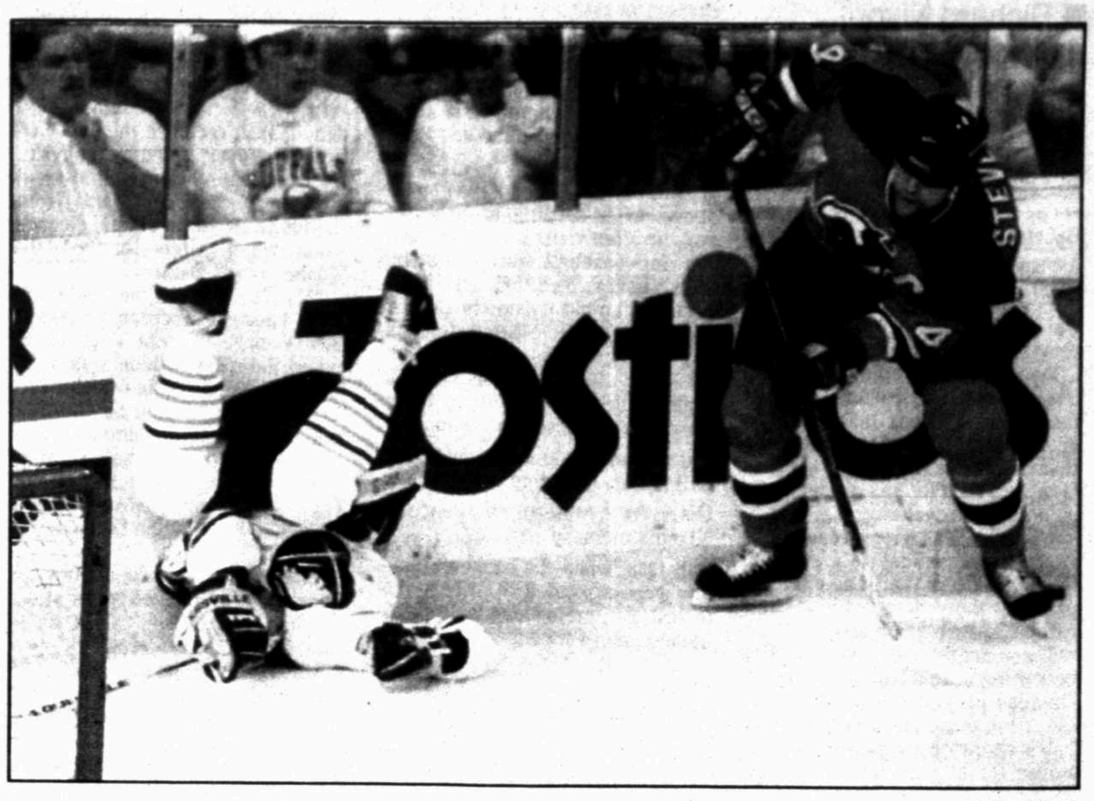

Amonte skated down the right side and beat Felix Potvin one-on-one at 1:31 of the final period to make it 5-3.

"I missed two I should have had," said Potvin, referring to Amonte's final goal and an earlier one by Joe Murphy. "I've got to do my job. I knew they would score. I've got to forget it and come back tomorrow."

Toronto's Dave Ellett got his second goal of the game five minutes later on the power play with a 40-footer from the left circle, making it 5-4. But the Blackhawks later killed a Toronto power play without allowing a shot to preserve the lead.

Amonte broke a 3-3 tie at 15:58 of the second period, taking a pass from Jeremy Roenick and firing from the left circle to beat Potvin on the glove side. That produced the first avalanche of hats and rolled up posters onto the ice, celebrating the hat trick and delaying the game for nearly five minutes.

Toronto, which trailed 3-0 early, had tied the game at 3 just a minute into the second period on the power play when Dimitri Mironov scored on a 40-footer from between the circles.

Clark sweeps 3 events at diving championships

■ U.S. Diving

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Mary Ellen Clark became the first woman in 23 years to sweep all three diving events and Russ Bertram held off 15-year-old Mark Ruiz to win the men's 10-meter platform title as the U.S. Indoor Diving Championships concluded Saturday.

Clark, peaking at the relatively advanced age of 31, won her fifth U.S. 10-meter platform title with a personal-best score of 430.17.

Coupled with her 1- and 3-meter springboard victories earlier in the week, the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., resident became the first woman since Cynthia Potter in 1971 to earn a sweep.

"She's the hardest worker I've ever coached," said Ron O'Brien, who has tutored Greg Louganis and four other Olympic gold medalists. "Most people peak in their mid-20s; when they get to be about 28, they start to drop off and get out of the sport. She just seems to get better."

Louganis was the last male to pull off a triple, in 1986.

Clark's Fort Lauderdale teammate, Bertram, also had a personal best (603.42) to win his second straight U.S. indoor platform title.

He needed most of it to hold off the late charge of Ruiz — a 96-pound, baseball card-collecting, Nintendo-playing kid from Puerto Rico who was participating in only his third 10-meter event.

"He's going to be incredible," Bertram said of Ruiz, who had 557.76 points to edge 1993 outdoor platform champion Patrick Jeffrey of Coconut Grove, Fla., for second place. "He's got incredible entries."

Bertram then formed a small circle with his fingers and said: "Of course, he's only about that thick, so it helps. He barely even makes a splash."

Concern wins by nose in derby

■ Arkansas Derby

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — Concern, the trailer until the field turned for home, gathered in pacesetting Silver Goblin deep in the stretch and then held off Blumin Affair by a nose to win the $500,000 Arkansas Derby at Oaklawn Park on Saturday.

Concern, sent off at odds of 19-1, was already a dozen or so lengths behind the eighth-place horse after the opening quarter, and was still in last as Silver Goblin led the field into the stretch of the 1⅛-mile race for 3-year-olds.

Garrett Gomez, who got the ride on Concern when Aaron Gryder was injured, rallied Concern down the middle of the lane with Blumin Affair keeping pace. But the latter horse couldn't catch Concern, who completed the trip in 1:48.

The son of Broad brush, owned by Robert Meyerhoff and trained by Richard Small, paid $43.40, $14 and $6.20.

Blumin Affair, second choice in the wagering, paid $4.40 and $3.40 and Silver Goblin, the leader until collared late by Concern, ran third and paid $3.40.

Favored Ride The Rails finished fourth.

Concern won for the third time in 13 starts. He captured a maiden race at Pimlico last Oct. 3 and an allowance race at Oaklawn on Jan. 21.

In his last start, in the Rebel three weeks ago, Concern rallied to run second behind Judge T C with Francine Villeneuve in the saddle that day.

Concern, who carried 118 pounds under the allowance conditions of the race, earned $300,000.

Nixon fascinated by sports, personalities

■ Richard Nixon once said if he retired from politics, he would like to write sports.

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

If Richard Nixon's profession was politics, his passion was sports.

More than any other president, Nixon, who died Friday night at the age of 81, was fascinated by sports and the personalities in them. And he frequently became involved, as a fan, as a friend and as a decision-maker.

When he was vice president in 1959, Nixon confided to a group of football writers that if he ever left politics, there was nothing he'd rather do than write sports.

Ten years later, six months after becoming president, he hadn't changed his mind, saying exactly the same thing to a group of baseball writers who were at the White House for a reception commemorating the 100th anniversary of the sport.

Nixon never made it to the press box, but he was a frequent visitor to the ballpark, where he often threw out first pitches, first as a vice-presidential pinch-hitter for president Dwight Eisenhower during the early '50s and later during his administration as president.

When a nine-day strike disrupted the start of the 1972 baseball season, Nixon stepped in, ordering federal mediation to settle the dispute. That action caught the attention of the owners, and after Watergate brought down his administration, Nixon was considered a candidate for commissioner when Bowie Kuhn failed to win re-election in 1982.

Had baseball decided it needed a Washington insider at the time, Nixon might have gotten the post. Instead, the owners went for a businessman and elected Peter Ueberroth.

That hardly soured Nixon on the sport. After settling in New Jersey, he often visited Yankee Stadium for baseball games, sitting with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, an old friend. In 1974, at the height of the Watergate scandal, Steinbrenner was suspended by Kuhn after pleading guilty to making illegal contributions to the president's re-election campaign.

On Saturday, a number of baseball teams, including the Yankees, observed a moment of silence in Nixon's memory.

In 1985, when the baseball playoffs were expanded from best-of-5 to best-of-7, major league umpires balked at working without increased pay. Nixon was selected by the two league presidents and the umpires association to arbitrate the dispute. "He is a longtime friend of baseball and a man in which both sides place a great deal of trust," said Richie Phillips, counsel for the umpires.

The former president concluded that the umps should receive a 40 percent increase in pay to coincide with the 40 percent increase in the number of games. That amounted to $4,000 per umpire for the 12 umps working the playoffs.

Ironically, the award mirrored the formula Ueberroth used to settle an umpire's strike the previous year.

Nixon followed football just as closely as he did baseball. In 1969, he watched Texas defeat Arkansas and proclaimed the Longhorns No. 1, a move that rankled Penn State coach Joe Paterno, whose Nittany Lions finished 11-0 and No. 2. "How come," Paterno, a lifelong Republican, said, "he knew so much about college football and so little about Watergate?"

In 1959, while still vice president, Nixon received the first lifetime pass ever issued by the NFL. He is perhaps best remembered, however, for offering plays from the White House to old pal George Allen when Allen coached the Washington Redskins.

"My father and the president went back to Whittier College," Gov. George Allen of Virginia recalled Saturday. Nixon was a little-used lineman — he failed to letter — at Whittier during the '30s and an interested alumnus when Allen coached the small California's school's team from 1951-56. They became reunited when Allen arrived in Washington to coach the Redskins.

"The president often came to Redskins Park when my father coached Washington," Gov. Allen said. "They talked a lot."

Among the things they discussed was the Redskins' offense. "Dad was using Larry Brown all the time," the governor said. "The president suggested a reverse for Roy Jefferson."

Allen, always open-minded, plugged the play in for a playoff game against San Francisco. It went for a big loss. Another time, Allen used a screen pass suggested by Nixon that also misfired. The failures did not disturb the relationship between the coach and the president, though.

"After the 'Skins beat Dallas Dec. 31, 1972 to win the NFC championship, D.C. went wild," Gov. Allen said. "It was the first championship in decades. The next morning, we were all invited to the White House.

"The president pulled out a football that my father had the team sign for him when he coached the Los Angeles Rams. I remember him pointing out Tony Guillory, a special teams player. He knew Guillory's college, his uniform number, everything. This wasn't Roman Gabriel, or Deacon Jones, or Merlin Olsen. This was a special teams player, who once blocked a punt against Green Bay. But the president knew who he was.

"That showed the depth of his interest in football. He didn't watch only in the playoffs or the championships. If he suggested a play, it didn't come off the back of some cereal box."

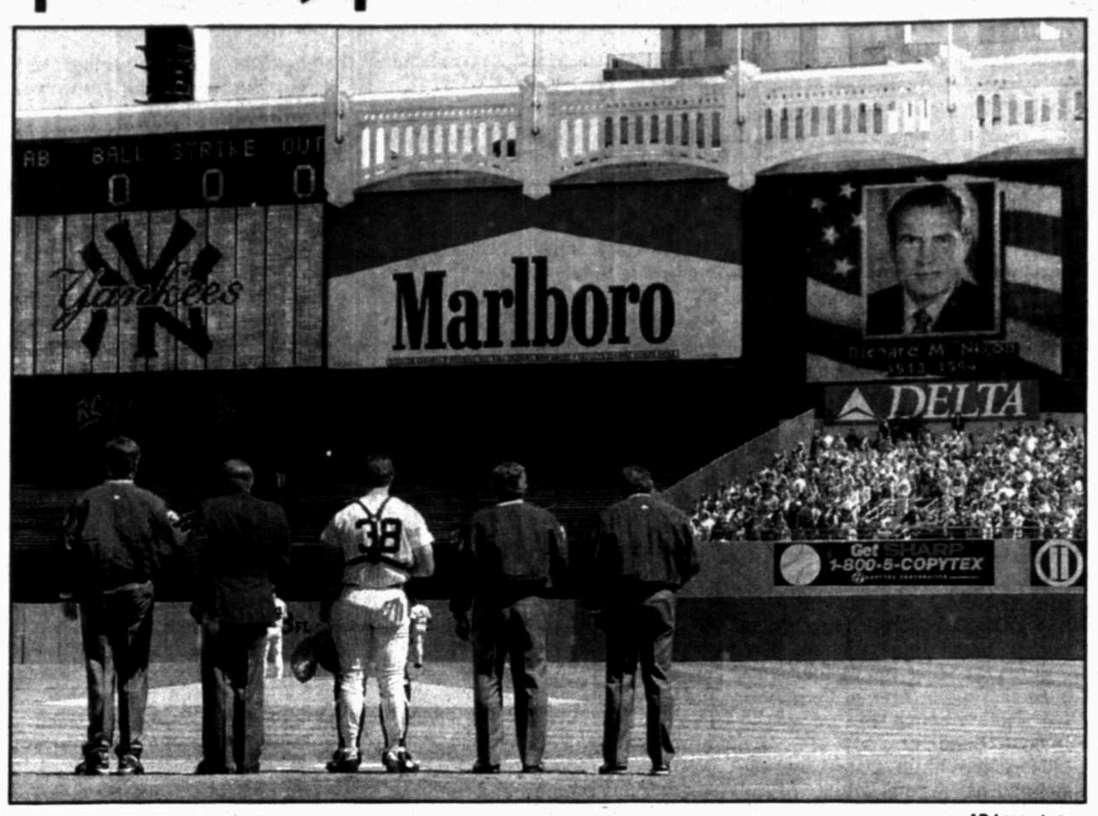

Nixon's home in New Jersey was only a half-hour from Giants Stadium and he regularly attended games there. On one bitterly cold day in 1990, he sat with a number of the players' wives.

"We offered him an enclosed box," said Tom Power, director of administration for the team, "but he turned it down. He said he felt closer to the action sitting with the wives."

Later in the dressing room, Nixon said he had invited a number of the Giants players, including linebacker Lawrence Taylor and quarterback Phil Simms to his home for lunch during the previous week. "We talked football," he said.

Had he suggested any plays for them?

"No," the former president said. "They're too good. I just listen when they talk."

Champ Moorer says his boxing future will be short

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Michael Moorer, secure in his new position as heavyweight champion, is not sure about his future.

"I hope to be in the game only for another year or a year and a half," the 26-year-old Moorer said Saturday following his history-making, 12-round decision over Evander Holyfield.

Moorer became the first left-handed heavyweight champion by winning the IBF and WBA titles on a majority decision over Holyfield Friday night at Caesars Palace.

"I've proven myself," Moorer said at a news conference Saturday. "To keep fighting just means getting more money."

Moorer, who might have made $5 million Friday night, depending on pay-per-view sales, can get good money fighting a chosen opponent or two and major money for fighting former champion Riddick Bowe or WBC champion Lennox Lewis.

There also is a possible rematch with Holyfield, who spent late Friday night and Saturday morning in a hospital with a left shoulder injury. He also was treated for dehydration.

Moorer, who fed Holyfield a steady diet of right jabs, also went to the hospital for treatment.

"My left elbow and hand hurt," said Moorer, who was treated and released. "I didn't feel any injury during the fight."

Teddy Atlas, Moorer's trainer, said he thought the champion had a tendon problem.

Moorer will be examined by his physician, Dr. Charles Maloney, when he goes to New York Tuesday for an appearance on the David Letterman show.

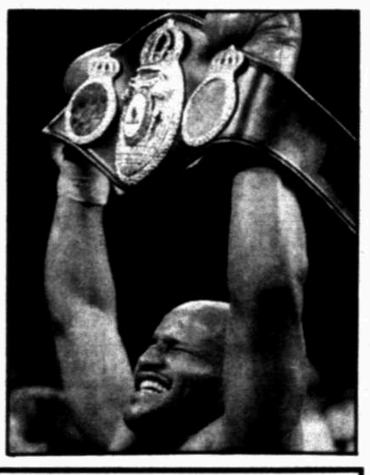

Holyfield, who did not attend the news conference Saturday, said after the match, "I felt like I was in the fight. Maybe after I watch it on tape, I'll feel differently."

Shelly Finkel, Holyfield's manager, said he would protest to the Nevada State Athletic Commission and to the IBF (it was an IBF mandatory defense for Holyfield) about the second-round scoring of judge Jerry Roth.

Roth scored that round even at 10-10 despite Holyfield knocking down Moorer. His score was 115-114 in favor of Moorer. If he had scored that round at least 10-9 for Holyfield, Roth would have had the fight 114-114, and Holyfield would have kept the title on a majority draw.

Dalby Shirley scored it 114-114, while Chuck Giampa favored Moorer 116-112.

The Holyfield camp, however, did not dispute Moorer's victory.

Irvan dominant in wins and losses

■ Hanes 500

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — When Ernie Irvan has won this season, he has been dominant.

In fact, the two-time winner also has dominated some races he hasn't won, including last week at North Wilkesboro, where Irvan's Robert Yates Racing Ford led most of the way only to have a bad late pit stop relegate him to a third place finish.

Irvan, who will start fifth in the 34-car lineup for Sunday's Hanes 500, would love to overpower the field on Martinsville Speedway's .526-mile oval.

"I think we'll be real competitive, and I'm sure the (No.) 2 car (pole-winner Rusty Wallace) will be competitive, and there will probably be some other cars that will be," Irvan said.

"I'd rather just stink up the show and drive off from everybody, but this week do it for 500 laps, still be doing it at the end."

Wallace won this race last year from the fifth position, while Irvan took the fall event at Martinsville from the pole, his first victory after switching from the Morgan-McClure team to RYR.

That victory, the first of four he has given his new team in 16 starts, was a big one for Irvan, who has finished sixth or better in six of the seven races this season.

"When you're making decisions, even if you know they're right, you still ask yourself if you made the right decision," said Irvan, who trails Winston Cup leader Dale Earnhardt by only 20 points after the first seven races of this season. "After we won that race, we all looked at each other and knew we made the right decision to get together, through all the heartaches it took to do it.

"We knew the reason we did it was to get into the position that we're in this year."

Wallace, who has won once this season and is sixth in the standings, trailing Earnhardt by 233 points, was first going into this race a year ago. The win at Martinsville last spring was his third straight — all on short tracks.

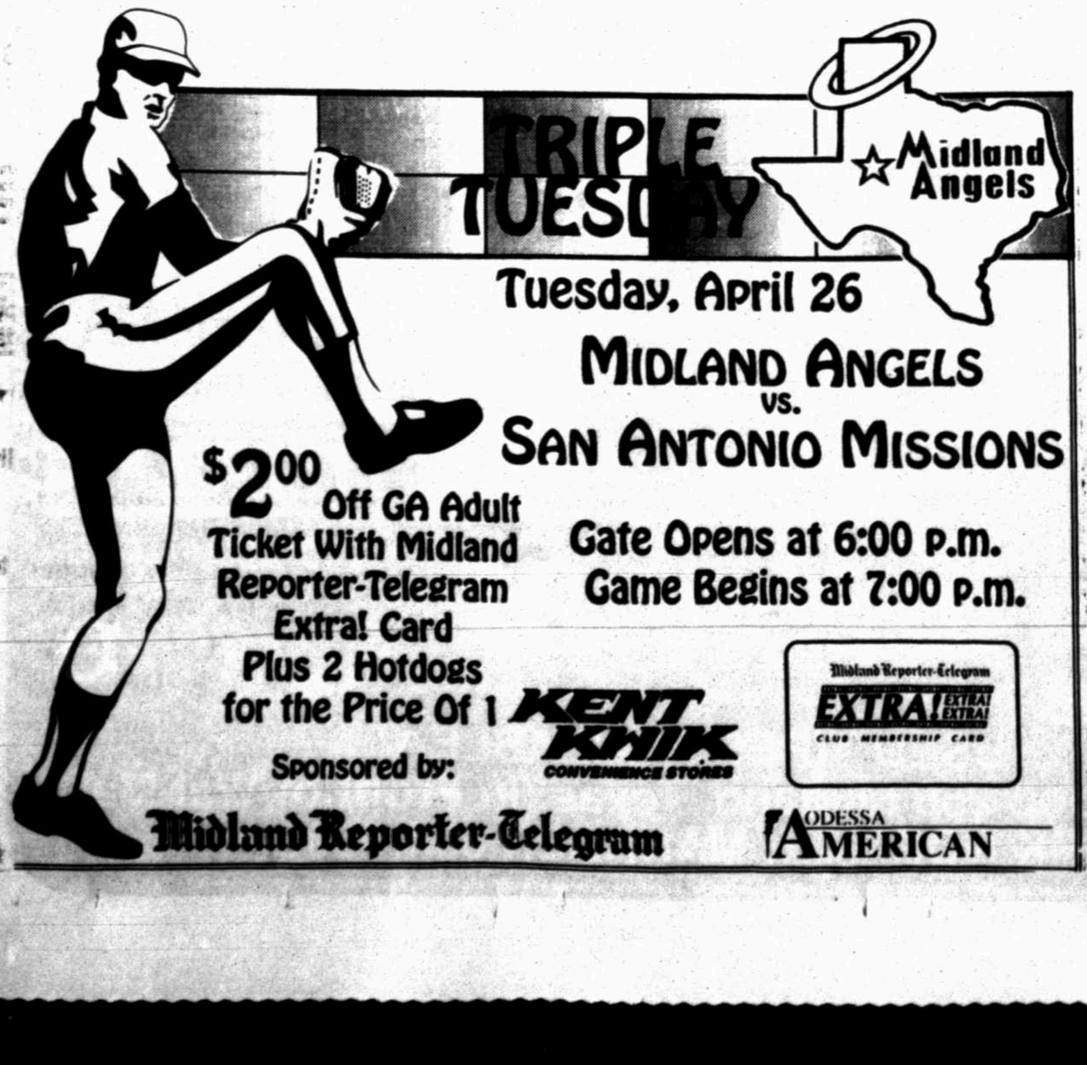

This month, he has finished seventh at Bristol and second at North Wilkesboro.

Wallace said, "I had a good reign on the short tracks last year, which I'm not repeating this year. But I'm running decent on 'em. I wasn't on the pole here last (year) and I'm on the pole this time, so I'm a little quicker."

"When you start up front, you can start the race clean," Wallace added. "I've got a good pit crew and, hopefully, they can keep me up front all day."

Wallace has the opportunity to pick up a $98,800 bonus, added to the race winner's purse of about $45,000, if he wins Sunday. The Unocal 76 Challenge, which builds at $7,600 a race, goes to a driver winning from the pole.

Nobody has done it since Irvan's victory last September at Martinsville — a span of 12 races.

NOTICE OF APPLICATION
DOCKET NO. 08-0205114

Notice is hereby given that the applicant, Parker & Parsley Development Company, P.O. Box 3178, Midland, Texas 79702, has made application under the provisions of Railroad Commission Statewide Rule 38 (16 Tex. Admin. Code Section 3.38). Applicant seeks exception to the between well distance requirement by recognition of its Midkiff Unit (Lease ID. No. 15254) as an entity for density purposes in the Spraberry (Trend Area) Field, Midland and Upton Counties, Texas. The Midkiff Unit is comprised of 23,161 acres, more or less, located in Block 38, Twp. 4 South, Block 38, Twp. 5 South and Block 37, Twp. 5 South, T & P Railway Company Survey, Midland and Upton Counties, Texas.

By the approval of this application Parker & Parsley would be exempted from compliance with the between-well spacing rule as to wells within the subject unit and would not be required to file proration plats for any wells until the unit has been drilled to final development.

Pursuant to the terms of Rule 38(e), this application may be granted administratively if no protest to the application is received. An affected person is entitled to protest this application. Affected persons include the operators and unleased mineral interest owners of all adjacent offset tracts, and the operators and unleased mineral interest owners of all tracts nearer to the proposed well than the prescribed minimum lease-line spacing distance.

If a hearing is called, the applicant has the burden to prove the need for an exception. A protestant should be prepared to establish standing as an affected person, and to appear at the hearing either in person or a qualified representative and protest the application with cross-examination or presentation of a direct case. The rules of evidence are applicable in the hearing. If you have questions regarding this application, please contact the applicant's representative, Van Rodgers, Senior Landman, at (915) 683-4768.

If you have any questions regarding the hearing procedure, please contact Carey Holtzendorf with the Commission at (512) 463-6718.

NOTICE OF APPLICATION
DOCKET NO. 08-0205113

Notice is hereby given that the applicant, Parker & Parsley Development Company, P.O. Box 3178, Midland, Texas 79702, has made application under the provisions of Railroad Commission Statewide Rule 38 (16 Tex. Admin. Code Section 3.38). Applicant seeks exception to the between well distance requirement by recognition of its Midkiff Unit (Lease ID. No. 18551) as an entity for density purposes in the Spraberry (Trend Area) Field, Midland and Glasscock Counties, Texas. The Preston Spraberry Unit is comprised of 17,358 acres, more or less, located in Block 37, Twp. 3 South, Block 37, Twp. 4 South and Block 37, Twp. 5 South and Block 38, Twp. 4 South, T & P Railway Company Survey, Midland and Glasscock Counties, Texas.

By the approval of this application Parker & Parsley would be exempted from compliance with the between-well spacing rule as to wells within the subject unit and would not be required to file proration plats for any wells until the unit has been drilled to final development.

Pursuant to the terms of Rule 38(e), this application may be granted administratively if no protest to the application is received. An affected person is entitled to protest this application. Affected persons include the operators and unleased mineral interest owners of all adjacent offset tracts, and the operators and unleased mineral interest owners of all tracts nearer to the proposed well than the prescribed minimum lease-line spacing distance.

If a hearing is called, the applicant has the burden to prove the need for an exception. A protestant should be prepared to establish standing as an affected person, and to appear at the hearing either in person or a qualified representative and protest the application with cross-examination or presentation of a direct case. The rules of evidence are applicable in the hearing. If you have questions regarding this application, please contact the applicant's representative, Van Rodgers, Senior Landman, at (915) 683-4768.

If you have any questions regarding the hearing procedure, please contact Carey Holtzendorf with the Commission at (512) 463-6718.

IF YOU WISH TO REQUEST A HEARING ON THIS APPLICATION, YOU MUST FILL OUT, SIGN AND MAIL OR DELIVER TO THE AUSTIN OFFICE OF THE RAILROAD COMMISSION OF TEXAS A NOTICE OF INTENT TO APPEAR IN PROTEST. A COPY OF THE INTENT TO PROTEST MUST ALSO BE MAILED OR DELIVERED ON THE SAME DATE TO APPLICANT AT THE ADDRESS SHOWN ABOVE. THIS INTENT TO APPEAR IN PROTEST MUST BE RECEIVED IN THE RAILROAD COMMISSION'S AUSTIN OFFICE BY MAY 9, 1994. IF NO PROTEST IS RECEIVED WITHIN SUCH TIME, THE REQUESTED PERMIT WILL BE GRANTED ADMINISTRATIVELY.

in the City of Midland, Texas, have become a public nuisance and health hazard in as much as they have become overgrown with weeds, tall grass and brush, become strewn with litter, or become a collection point for stagnant water. The owner of the above named properties are hereby ordered to abate the nuisance within ten (10) days and notify the City of Midland Property Code Administration of the same. Otherwise, the City of Midland will then enter the property, abate the nuisance thereon, and charge the cost of so doing as a lien against the property. You may appeal the decision of the City of Midland to enter your property and assess a lien against it by contacting the City Manager's office at 300 North Loraine, Midland, Texas 79701, phone number 685-7200 within nine (9) days of this notice.

LEGAL NOTICE

The City of Midland is requesting bids for the sale of a tract designated as Lot 1, Block 8, Westgate Acres Addition, Section 2, an addition to the City of Midland, Midland County, Texas, less a portion out of the NW/4 thereof. This property is located south of Princeton Avenue, East of Loop 250 and North of Cuthbert Avenue, Midland, Texas and otherwise known as "Wild River Canyon". The sale of this property shall include all permanent improvements and fixtures located on the property.

In order to assure yourself that your bid will be properly submitted and considered, it is important that perspective bidders read, understand and follow the following instructions:

a. A bidder may submit a cash bid.

b. All bids must be accompanied by a certified check or bank money order issued by a bank satisfactory to the City in the amount of $1,850.00 payable without recourse to the City. Bids without the required check or money order will not be considered. All other checks will be returned after the bid is awarded. The purpose of such check or money order is to provide a guarantee that the bidder will accept a conveyance to said land from the City and pay the balance of the amount bid or comply with any and all conditions of his bid.

c. All bids must be sealed in an envelope, and the envelope must be plainly marked "Proposal for Wild River Canyon". All bids must be submitted to the Director of Facilities and Fleet Management in his office, Room 330 in City Hall, 300 North Loraine Street, or mailed to P.O. Box 1152, Midland, Texas, 79702, on or before 3:00 p.m. o'clock on the 18th day of May, 1994. All bids being received after such time and date shall not be considered.

d. Bidders are advised that the City reserves the right to accept or reject any or all bids, to waive technicalities, to negotiate with any of the bidders, and to make any investigation deemed necessary as to a bidder's financial status.

e. Bidders are advised that the City of Midland will issue a Special Warranty Deed and the bidder must satisfy himself as to title and acquire all desired abstracts and other title information or insurance solely at his own expense, and all other costs of sale, if any, must be borne solely by the successful bidder.

f. Bidders are advised that the Special Warranty Deed given by the City will be subject to any existing easements of record and/or on the ground fro pipelines, utilities or other purposes.

g. The City will consider any lease purchase options that purchaser may want to offer insofar as the total consideration offered by Purchaser equals or exceeds the appraised property value of $37,000.00.

h. Any questions concerning the property appraisal or the submission of bids shall be directed to Mark Phillips, Director of Facilities and Fleet Management, P.O. Box 1152, Midland, Texas, 79702, Phone NO. 685-7235.

DOES YOUR TEACHER DESERVE AN "A"?

Teacher Appreciation Week is the perfect time to tell your teacher he or she deserves an "A" grade. Your teacher's "A" grade printed in The Midland Reporter-Telegram is the perfect way to let them know how much you appreciate him or her!

All entires will be printed on a special page honoring the grade "A" teachers on Sunday, May 1.

The teacher receiving the most "A's" will receive a dozen red roses and a complimentary dinner for two. In case of a tie, we will conduct a drawing.

The cost is only $3 per entry

To give your "A" grade, complete the form below, using 15 words or less to tell why your teacher deserves an "A". Mail or bring your entry to The Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified Department by 4 p.m. Friday, April 29 and include your $3 per entry.

HOMES & CLASSIFIED

SUMPTUOUS ELEGANCE

There are a lot of superlatives which could be used to describe this unique two-storey family house in the prestigious Saddle Club Estates, but amazing could well be the most appropriate.

Offering fantastic versatility within a design so unique that it was featured in Southern Living Magazine, this four bedroom, six bath home offers a level of elegance and comfort not usually seen outside one of the great Southern mansions.

As with all great houses, this house has a wonderful drive up appeal. Situated on a graceful cul-de-sac the property draws you in with its mature trees, gleaming white picket fence and elegant front porch.

Once inside, the magnitude of this house is easily apparent; the hardwood floors and a dramatic oak staircase which flows up to the second floor, immediately tell one that this is a very special house indeed.

With a game room, study, play room formal dining room as well as a huge living room there is plenty of space for formal entertaining as well as the more informal kind.

Informal activities are perfectly suited to the amazing game room situated on the second floor: a cathedral beamed ceiling adds height and space whilst the large built-in wet bar adds a more mature note to the room. Ceiling fans, a brick fireplace and oak built-ins which stretch the length of the room complete the picture.

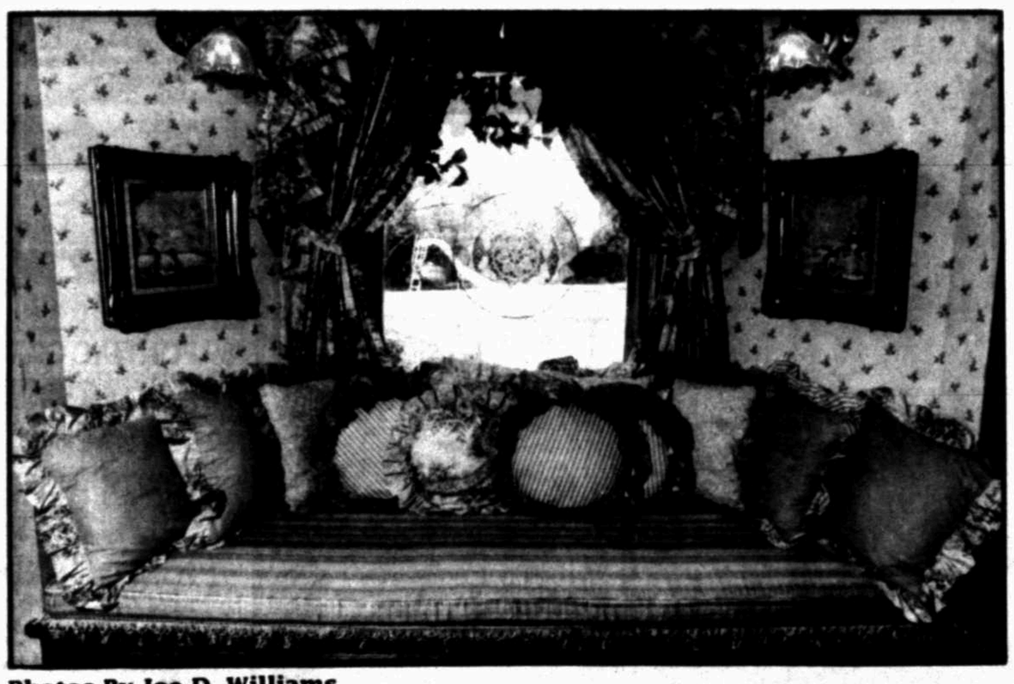

Of course, as befits a house of this caliber, the sequestered master suite is absolutely stunning.

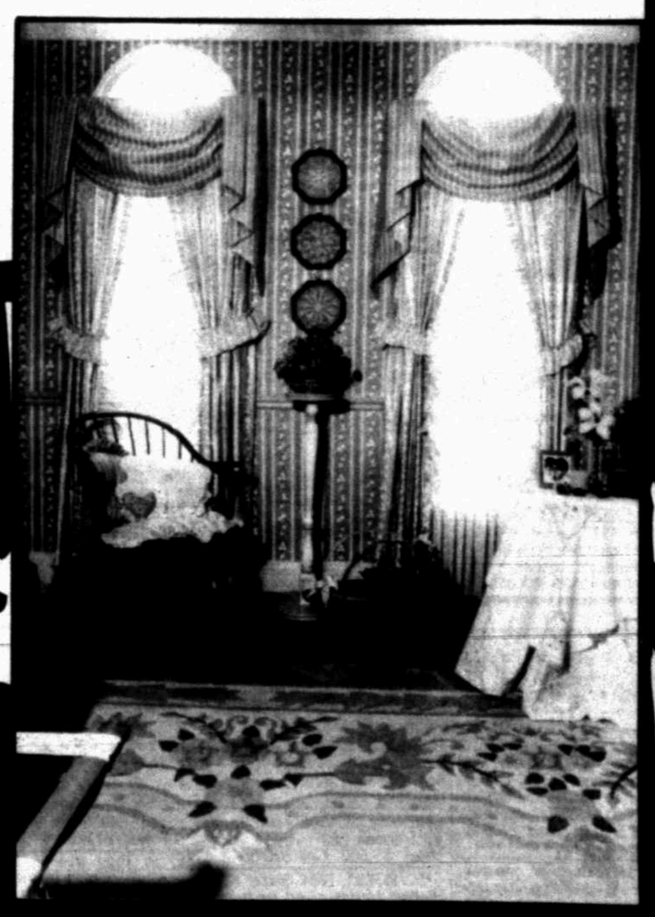

Located downstairs with large French windows which open out onto the pool and patio, a huge bathroom with a double vanity, this suite is perfect for those who enjoy the finer things in life.

The whole house has been beautifully and professionally decorated, and the emphasis has obviously been on the unique, as the hand hammered copper insets on the kitchen-cabinets doors will attest.

All over the house are examples of fine design, luxurious living and the finest in home construction such as the fret-work around the doorways and the stencils on the ceilings, which are just two of the many possible examples.

Buyers ask: "Why do I have to sign a form to look at a house?"

Pat Orseth
President Midland
Association of Realtors

Buyers are being asked, prior to viewing properties, to sign a form known to Realtors as the TREC -3 form. The form is titled "INFORMATION and DISCLOSURE REGARDING REAL ESTATE AGENCY RELATIONSHIPS."

The Texas Real Estate Commission has promulgated this form which advises buyers, sellers and landlords/tenants who have contact with a real estate broker or salesman of important information concerning agency relationships.

The Commission requires brokers to ask buyers to acknowledge receipt of the form by signing a copy of the form. This form in no way "commits" the buyer to anything - it is merely a disclosure on the part of the agent as to whom they represent in a real estate transaction, and provides a useful information to the consumer. When the buyer signs the form it simply allows the real estate agent to be in compliance with the Real Estate License Act.

While at times both agents and buyers may find the usage of the form cumbersome and inconvenient (ie, if a buyer looks at 20 homes, with 20 different agents, the buyer will sign the form 20 times for each agent to be in compliance with the law) there is a positive aspect for the buyer.

As a consumer of services, buyers have a right to know and understand their relationship with the agent and their options. The form informs the buyer of the following:

- the duties of the broker to you depend upon whom the broker represents.
- The broker who lists a property for sale is the Owner's agent.
- a broker who acts as a subagent represents the Owner through the listing broker.
- a broker who acts as a buyer's agent represents the Buyer.
- a broker may not represent both an Owner and a Buyer in the same transaction unless both Owner and Buyer consent in writing to the representation.
- a broker can assist in locating a property, preparing a contract or lease, or obtain financing without representing the buyer.
- brokers are obligated by law to treat buyers honestly and fairly.

The form outlines the agent's duties to the buyer:

- if the broker represents the owner
- if the broker represents the buyer
- if the broker represents both

As a buyer, you have the right to choose the type of representation you wish to receive. If you have any questions regarding the duties and responsibilities of the broker, you should resolve those questions before going further. Once you have read and discussed the information with the agent, you can acknowledge your receipt of this information by signing the TREC - 3 form.

(This is Part 1 of a 4 Part Series).

Understanding lease/ purchase, lease/option

Ruth Young
ReMax of Midland

If a newspaper ad reads "Lease/Purchase Available," does this mean the rent you pay can be used as a down payment if you decide to purchase the home in the future? Probably not! Commonly misunderstood, the methods of financing known as lease/purchase and lease/option-to-buy have different requirements and do not provide the buyer with an escape from cash down payments.

In a lease/purchase, you sign a contract expressing a definite commitment to buy the property. Earnest money is required from the future buyer, and the owner will most likely include a clause in the contract stipulating that if the transaction doesn't close, all monies received are forfeited to him. This is an offer to purchase with a delayed closing.

A lease/option-to-buy agreement, the future buyer may not be required to supply an earnest money deposit, and the decision to purchase is his option. In most cases, it is nothing more than renting. No protection for the seller. It just gives a buyer first option to purchase if house is sold. Like the lease/purchase, the portion of the rent being applied to the purchase price is fully negotiable between buyer and seller. Since the seller's payment goes on, usually rent is not applied to purchase price.

The main benefit to the buyer is that he accumulates cash needed to close the sale while making rent payments. But be aware that some mortgage agencies, such as Fannie Mae, require that under normal circumstances, buyers must invest a minimum amount of cash to qualify for a home loan. Rent credit cannot be used to make up the required minimum down payment. Rather, rent credits can be used to reduce the original asking price of the home, or to have the seller pay some expenses the buyer would otherwise. There is not ax advantage on either of these for a buyer.

Most sellers can not take a contract for lease purchase or lease option if they need the money now from sale of present home before they can purchase in a new location.

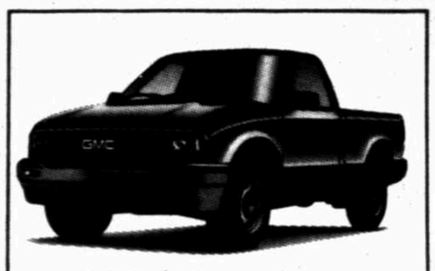

It is more likely that older people retiring to a vacation home or retirement community not needing cash to live on, are in position to lease purchase.

As with any contract, have an attorney review it to ensure your protection. Be sure it is the most beneficial method for you.

Childcare DIRECTORY

As a childcare provider, you are well aware of the vital concern for today's children by their parents and loved ones. For this reason we will be publishing our semi-annual Childcare Directory in the Midland Reporter-Telegram on Sunday, May 15, 1994.

Midland area parents have come to rely on this directory as a guide to good, safe, quality childcare. This section focuses on just that and gives the basic "who, what, where and when" of the quality providers in our area. As a provider you can reach parents with more information about the services that you provide by placing an ad in this Childcare Directory on Sunday, May 15th.

We offer advertising packages that range from 8" to 65" and include not only your advertisement but a photo about/of your facility, a story about your facility and a dot on the area map that indicates where you are located. We also offer rates for an advertisement only without the package plan. Plan to advertise you childcare facility on May 15th. To reserve space please call:

687-8813

Deadline for this section is May 9, 1994

What Makes Every Langston Realtor So Special?

Reason #3: Commitment to the Community

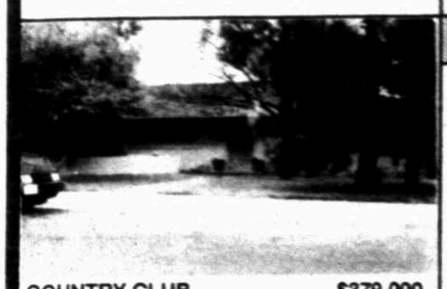

Our Realtors are strongly committed to this community - to its civic and arts organizations, to educational opportunities, to the United Way, to their church, to all of the fine entities that make Midland so special and unique. We generously support the community through our resources, through volunteer opportunities and through serving on community and civic boards.

We are often the first Midland "Ambassador" that a newcomer meets; we not only do our "home" work but our "city" work as well - and feel it is a special privilege to introduce new people to the city.

RELOCATING?

OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, APRIL 24, 1994 — SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

A pumpjack silhouetted against a field of Texas wildflowers in this composite photo is symbolic of the connection between oil and the environment in this state. The 24th celebration of Earth Day serves as a reminder of that connection.

Prices strengthen

Oil prices returned to levels seen last November, just before OPEC's Thanksgiving meeting, where they decided not to cut production and sent prices to five-year lows.

Late in the week, West Texas Intermediate for June delivery closed at $16.63 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange while the posted price was $15.25 a barrel.

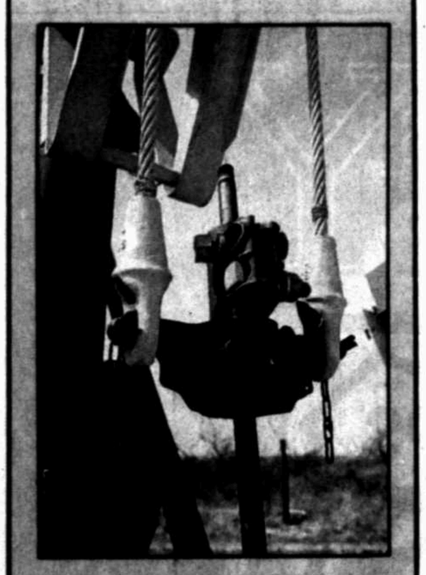

The market's strength was due largely to technical factors as traders shrugged off reports by the American Petroleum Institute of a rise in U.S. crude stocks.

One factor supporting prices is the restarting of refining operations, with refiners expected to increase crude consumption in order to produce gasoline for the warm weather driving season, causing concern about supplies. Strength in unleaded gasoline markets has also helped boost crude oil prices.

Also boosting the market late in the week — aside from traditional end-of-the-current-month contract trading (the May contract expired at mid-week) was a report of rioting in Nigeria, sparking fears of a disruption of supplies from the member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which accounts for about 8 percent of OPEC's output and is the world's 10th largest exporter.

Natural gas for May delivery closed at $2.13 per thousand cubic feet.

Drilling up

Drilling activity moved higher during the week ended April 15, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count rose two to 105 and is above the year-ago count of 97.

The national rig count also moved higher, rising 11 to 720 for the week. A year ago the national rig count was 603.

Texaco Chemical sold

HOUSTON — Jon M. Huntsman, a Salt Lake City entrepreneur, announced the completion of the $1.06 billion acquisition of Texaco Chemical Co.

The new company name is Huntsman Corp. The Huntsman family will own 80 percent of Huntsman Corp. and Consolidated Press Holdings in Sydney, Australia, will own 20 percent.

The acquisition includes four sites in the United States, as well as facilities in Canada and the United Kingdom, and an option for Huntsman to buy either all or half of a new propylene oxide-MTBE plant under construction at Port Neches, Texas.

Oil companies showing green

■ Earth Day reflects environmentally conscious oil industry

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Contrary to popular belief, the annual recognition of Earth Day is not necessarily Anti-Oil and Gas Industry Day.

Increasingly more and more oil companies are becoming involved in Earth Day to show their commitment to a safe and clean environment.

Many industry majors and independents recognize Earth Day each year with community-related projects.

For example, Phillips Petroleum is repeating its environmental education program this year in 20 area schools, teaching grades 4-6 about hazardous household products and safer alternatives.

And in New Mexico Yates Petroleum and the New Mexico Landmen's Association are taking advantage of Earth Day to commemorate the drilling of the first well in New Mexico.

Over 400 guests are expected to attend the Earth Day celebration, which will feature prominent state speakers and a barbecue, and is being held at the site of the Flynn-Welch-Yates State No. 3, which was completed as a gusher on April 9, 1924 to open the New Mexico oil industry. The well produced until 1959 and was plugged in 1964.

From the very beginning of the New Mexico oil industry, hundreds of oil wells and water wells have been drilled in the same region without serious environmental problems to surface conditions, the

Earth Day turns 24

■ Broad-based celebration calls attention to the environment

By Ellen Hopkins

The idea for Earth Day was officially born in April 1970, and its founder and catalyst, former Senator Gaylord Nelson, did not intend to exclude anyone from participation — including the oil industry.

In a twentieth Earth Day anniversary speech at the University of Illinois in 1990, Nelson recalled his impressions after that first national celebration.

"Earth Day achieved what I had hoped," Nelson said. "The objective was to get a nationwide demonstration of concern for the environment so large that it would shake the political arena. It was a gamble, but it worked."

An estimated 20 million people, including 10,000 grade schools and high schools, 2,000 colleges, and 1,000 communities all across the country were involved.

Nelson attributes the success of that first Earth Day to the fact that it occurred at the grassroots level.

"Don't ever forget," he said. "If you want to move the nation to make hard decisions on political issues, the grassroots is the source of power. With it you can do anything; without it, nothing."

Nothing like it had ever happened before, and Nelson said that the bulk of that first day's events were not only implemented at the grassroots level, but were organized there. He said although he and his assistants had time to organize events at college campuses, they had neither the time nor the resources to organize the thousands of schools and communities that wanted to participate.

"They simply organized themselves," he said. "That was the remarkable thing that became Earth Day."

Preceding this historic day was Nelson's initial concern which had actually surfaced in 1963. To him it was obvious then that neither the President, Congress, the economic power structure of the country or the press paid any signifi-

The earth is our friend; oil is our friend

With the arrival of Earth Day this year, there were many celebrations honoring trees and "Mother Earth."

We should appreciate, honor, love and maybe even "hug" our friends the trees, which give us oxygen, shade, food and beauty, but, how much more should we love our friends the hydrocarbons? Maybe we should also "hug" a barrel of oil.

Consider all that our friends oil and gas provide for us:

■ Energy for transportation — for all our cars, buses, airplanes, trains and trucks that are used to move people and goods all about the world.

Those who support Earth Day also support globalization. But how can there be globalization if you cannot move people and goods throughout the world? For that matter how can there be a USA or Texas without the energy to move all the things a society needs to move to be civilized and economically viable

■ Energy for heating and cooling — for our homes, offices, store and factories.

Go anywhere and comfort is just a flip of the switch away. Oil and gas furnaces and natural gas cooling have put sweltering heat and bitter cold on the run. Imagine life without warm homes and cool offices.

■ Energy for work — to run plants that make electricity that bring light to the night and power into our lives.

Electricity runs assembly lines, computers, televisions, toasters, microwaves, hair dryers, washing machines, irons, elevators, traffic signals, draw bridges, telephones, ovens.

Hydroelectric and nuclear provide only small percentages of America's electrical generation needs. It is our friends the hydrocarbons — natural gas, fuel oil and coal — that provide the bulk of our electricity.

■ Chemicals and materials for making many good things that improve the quality of our lives.

Hydrocarbon materials such as plastics give us clothes, furniture, carpet, packaging, containers, automobile parts, electrical components, eyeglasses, insulation, shoes, tires and boats. Also, chemicals for medicines, cosmetics, lotions, salves, polish, paints, varnishes, cleaners, asphalt highways and streets. Because of economical and durable plastics, we don't have to cut down nearly as many trees or strip mine metals as much as we used to.

Like trees, hydrocarbons are a precious non-toxic, biodegradable natural resource that springs from the bowels of Mother Earth and gives so much for so little.

Imagine a world without oil and gas. Imagine a nation of over 250 million that could not move freely about. What if there were only two steam-powered locomotives that went from coast to coast each week?

What if we had to cut down trees for heating and cooking? What would the air pollution be like around L.A.? How many trees would be standing in Angeles National Forest?

What if there were no mass communications to cement the government of 250 million people? No electricity. No airplanes. No automobiles. No insecticides to kill mosquitos, fleas, roaches and flies. No fertilizers to promote crop growth.

Existence in a world without hy-

Pecos River or ground water.

"The New Mexico Landmen's Association thought Earth Day would be a very appropriate time to place a plaque on this well," said Chuck Moran, a spokesman for Yates Petroleum Co."

Oil companies, while often at odds with radical environmentalists, have not been slow to show that they have always been environmentally responsible.

Conoco has come up with nine bold environmental initiatives and an environmental statement to guide the company. Locally, Conoco employees have been involved in building bird habitats, and the development of oilfield technology to reduce air pollution and drilling contamination.

Texaco, which recently debuted a new environmentally friendly gasoline, is in the midst of a promotional program to make the public aware of the potential the new gasoline formula offers.

Fina has used its resources to protect bald eagles in the wetlands of Louisiana.

Amoco, in an effort to more than meet environmental standards, has launched a strict lease housekeeping program to radically reduce oil leaks, and the program has been praised by the Texas Railroad Commission.

Each year the most successful event sponsored by the Permian Basin Petroleum Association is the Environmental Seminar, which sees increasing attendance year after year.

"A committment to good environmental practices and being in compliance with environmental regulations is very important to our members," says Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the PBPA.

PITTS: Oil's benefits

(From 1E)

drocarbons would be worse than ten thousand Haitis and Rwandas rolled into one. The poverty, disease and pestilence would be unbearable, and the violence of too many people struggling over too few resources would make today's heartless mayhem look like a Sunday school picnic. Murder would be epidemic.

Nothing but a compact, portable, potent fuel like gasoline, coming when it did, could have allowed mankind to build transportation systems that would shrink the world and expand civilization. It was exactly the right fuel at the right time for the technology available.

Was it coincidence or divine providence? I prefer to think that the advent of hydrocarbons was a godsent to mankind.

Without hydrocarbons, civilization as we know it today simply would not exist, and mankind would be a far different creature — much for the worse.

Yet, there are those who would have us believe that oil and gas have suddenly become dangerous and undesirable substances that should to be heavily taxed, penalized and regulated to discourage their use.

Further, they would ask us to believe that those who find, produce and provide hydrocarbon products are somehow the ignoble enemies of a pristine and orderly civilization — an uncaring, greedy, subclass bent — not on bringing great good to mankind — but rather the destruction of Mother Earth.

To be honest, there is an environmental downside to using hydrocarbons. But then, there is an environmental downside to everything associated with civilization and man's presence on this planet.

Some radicals would have man cease virtually all human activity, to stop growing and building and turn back the hands of time to protect the environment. But that is not an option, and should not be even a consideration. Man, being the smart but frail and naked creature he is, requires more than a hole in the ground and grass for survival.

Besides, the facts speak for themselves. Some things are self-evident. It doesn't take a rocket scientist to look around and see that the comfort, convenience, health, and social order that hydrocarbons bring to the social equation far exceed the real and supposed dangers to the environment.

Those who would make oil, gas and coal villains in our society simply do not speak the truth. It is not a matter of misunderstanding or misinformation. Perhaps it's time sensible, truth-loving people everywhere held up for serious examination the motives and agenda behind environmental radicals and their "logically incorrect" crusade against hydrocarbons.

19 firms join NGL network

TULSA — Chalkboard has again boosted natural gas liquids activity on its on-line, real-time brokering network for petroleum liquids with the recent addition of 19 companies to the system, says David Gregorio, managing director for Williams Brokering Services.

The new Chalkboard traders are Amoco NGL Supply & Trading, Blue Ribbon Energy, Cenex, Cimmaron Gas Companies Inc., Clark Oil Trading/Apex, Diamond Shamrock Refining & Marketing, Ferrell North America, Ican Energy Co., Liquid Energy Corp., Liquid Petroleum Group Inc. and Metrogas Supply Corp.

Also, Mobil Oil Corp., Phillips 66 Co., Rexene Corp., Sage Petroleum, Trident NGL Inc., Ultramar Inc., Union Pacific Resources Co. and Venture Oil Co. of Texas have joined the system.

Chalkboard provides cash-market traders a forum in which to negotiate trades in domestic crude oils, natural gas liquids and refined products in a secure, real-time environment, Gregorio says. These petroleum liquids can be traded at virtually any delivery point in the United States.

Williams Brokering Service is a subsidiary of Williams Energy Ventures Inc., whose family of computer-based information products also includes Streamline, an electronic natural gas trading system, and Capacity Central, the less-than-30-day firm capacity brokering system for natural gas pipeline users.

Williams Energy Ventures is a unit of The Williams Companies Inc., a $5 billion energy and telecommunications corporation.

Environment guides Texas for 95 years

By Ellen Hopkins

With the celebration of Earth Day 1994, it marks almost 100 years that environmental law has been a guiding factor in the Texas oil industry, balancing environmental protection against economic interests of the state.

Strangely the first environmental law was enacted not to protect fresh water from oil wells, but to protect oil wells from fresh water.

It seems surface water in Navarro County had seeped from some old wells into producing wells and ruined them. This led to the enactment in 1899 of a Texas law that required wells to be constructed with casing and plugged upon abandonment.

But by 1919, the reasoning had changed. This year marked the Texas Railroad Commission's (TRC) adoption of a rule requiring fresh water to be protected during drilling and plugging operations.

Increasingly more stringent and comprehensive water protection rules have been adopted over the years, as well as the strengthening of statewide rules pertaining to environmental regulations -- all of which have been amended since 1980. The sixty year span, from the 1930s to early '90s, indicates the diversity of TRC rules.

■ UNDERGROUND INJECTION. In the 1930s, the TRC began regulating underground injection through special orders issued for enhanced oil recovery projects after notice and hearing.

■ SALTWATER PITS. In 1969, the TRC issued a statewide order that required TRC approval for the use of a pit to store or dispose of saltwater produced with oil and gas. This order also prohibited the discharge of saltwater without a permit.

■ INJECTION AND DISPOSAL WELLS. By 1981, the TRC had amended its rules for fluid injection and disposal wells to establish more specific technical standards, broader notice requirements for permit applications, and new monitoring and reporting requirements for permitted wells.

■ UNDERGROUND INJECTION. In 1982, the TRC received primary enforcement authority from EPA for the Class II Underground Injection Control Program.

■ COMPLETING/PLUGGING. Also in 1982, the TRC amended its rules to incorporate state-of-the-art require-

Texas Railroad Commission sets environmental standard

By Ellen Hopkins

Regulations. Permits. Compliance.

The words take on a whole new meaning in the context of the Texas Railroad Commission (TRC), the Texas Water Commission (TWC) and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), and can cause nightmares for operators throughout the Permian Basin.

A lot of Texas environmental regulations in the oil field have changed since the TRC's first rules in 1919, and especially since 1987. More revisions are pending.

Keeping up with the acronyms is one thing; staying abreast of all the regulatory changes is another. As a result, the Oil Report decided to recap the major revisions over the last seven years, and to describe the pending rules and regulations as an insight to what's coming.

With assistance from Lori Wrotenbery, Director of Environmental Services for the Oil and Gas Division of the Texas Railroad Commission, excerpts from and clarification of her State Environmental Regulation in the Oil Field publication are summarized as follows.

Since 1987, four major areas of environmental activities have seen major changes:

■ State Bill 1103 has replaced the old oil well plugging fund with a more comprehensive oil field cleanup program.

■ Through questionnaires to thousands of operators, the TRC has been working to develop its rules for handling hazardous oil and gas wastes.

■ The TRC has been evaluating recommendations from an IOGCC review regarding exempt oil and gas wastes. The TRC has already made some changes and is working on more, realizing the consequences of placing burdens on the industry or on itself.

■ The TRC has formalized its standards for cleanup of crude oil spills.

STATE BILL 1103

The result of S.B. 1103, enacted in September 1991, was the replacement of the old oil well plugging fund with a more comprehensive "oil field cleanup fund." S.B. 1103 not only authorized the TRC to use these funds for plugging abandoned wells, but for oil field cleanup as well. Fees, penalties and other payments from the industry support this fund.

In fiscal 1992 over $9 million was deposited in the oil and gas cleanup fund, and over $11 million in fiscal 1993. Also of note, in each of these last two fiscal years, the Commission plugged three times as many wells with state funds as were plugged in fiscal 1991 (1,324 wells plugged in fiscal 1992 and 1,404 in fiscal 1993).

The $100 annual fee for each unplugged well is deposited in this fund. The TRC's current inventory of wells approved for plugging is about 1,600 wells, and around 80 contaminated oil field sites are candidates for state-funded remediation.

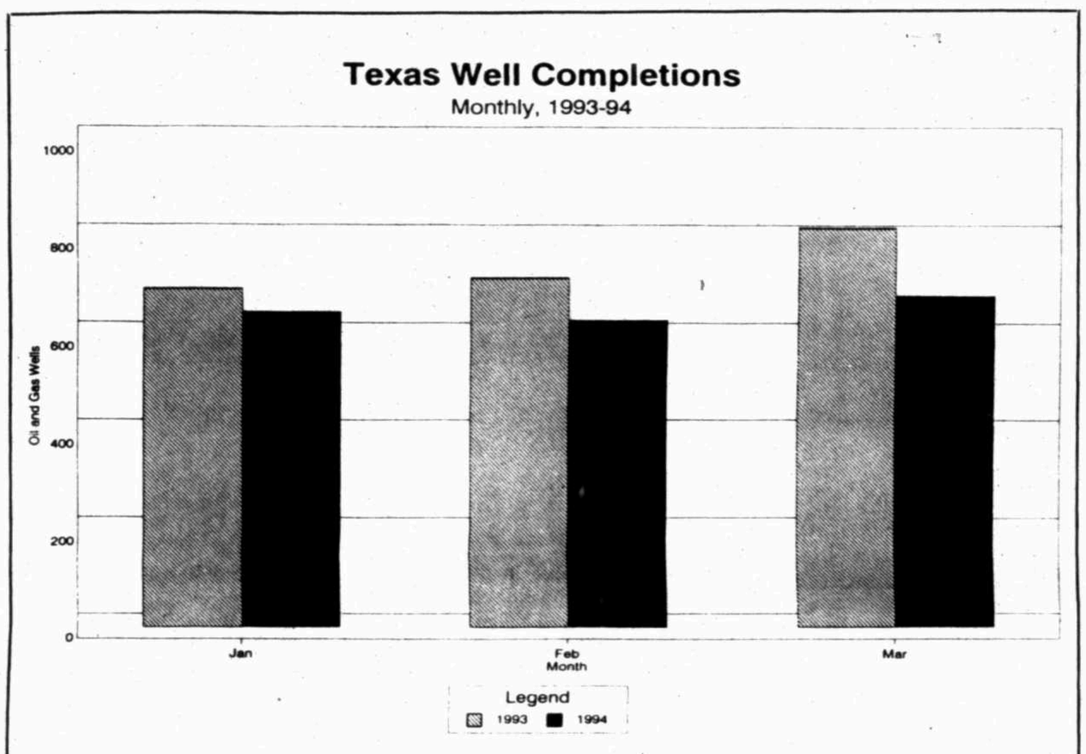

Also during fiscal '92 and '93, fund money was used by the Commission to take pollution abatement actions at more than 130 sites.

Drilling permit fees that were the principal source of revenue for the old well plugging fund have been transferred to the oil field cleanup fund. The standard, flat $100 drilling permit fee now ranges from $100 to $200 depending on well depth.

Additional funding is obtained from regulatory fees on the production of oil and gas (5/16 cent per barrel of oil and 1/30 cent per MCF of gas). These fees are collected and deposited in the fund until it reaches $10 million, then suspended until the fund drops below $6 million.

Also deposited in the fund are new fees including pipeline severance fees, fees submitted as an alternative to a bond, discharge permit application fees, hazardous oil and gas waste generation fees, and oil and

Texas completions

Operators reported 280 gas, 362 oil and 39 service completions in March, compared to 323 gas, 459 oil and 39 service completions in March 1993. There were 128 oil and nine gas completions in the Midland area, District 8. To date in 1994, the total well completions is 1,959, down 3 percent from 2,232 recorded in the first three months of 1993.

Phillips takes message about environment to area students

■ Phillips employees are visiting area schools to teach about the environment, and give the industry a positive face.

By Ellen Hopkins

Phillips Petroleum's management is committed to communicating positive messages about the oil industry. Through a proactive, instructional program in schools, Phillips' employees are teaching children about environmental issues and hazardous products.

"Management is committed to communicating environmental issues to the public, and what better place to start than with school children," said Jeff Carlson, safety and environmental engineer for Phillips West Texas Region in Odessa.

"We're targeting whole schools, grades four through six," he said. "We want to teach them as much as we can, because they'll be in our position in the future."

Lars Takla, regional manager for West Texas, said centering the program around young children has been very successful.

"We go to different schools and make presentations about subjects like identifying hazardous chemicals and how to avoid them. Then the children tell their parents what the oil company is doing to promote the environment."

This is the second year the program has been active in the company's West Texas Region. Carlson said last year he and other employees made presentations in 17 schools and distributed 4,000 copies of the Phillip's book "25 Simple Things Kids Can Do To Save Energy."

The printed materials and slides used in classroom presentations are produced by Phillips Environmental Earth Works Group at the company's headquarters in Bartlesville, Oklahoma, and sent to Phillips' field locations.

Carlson said locally the books were tied in with an issue of interest to this office, namely bioremediation. He said talking to children about the process, which involves microscopic bugs used to "eat up" oil spills, captured the children's attention.

"This year the Earth Works Group designed a "Kidswheel" to teach them about hazardous household products," said Carlson.

The wheel lists categories of hazardous products that children might come in contact with. For example, when the wheel is spun around to the paint category, the viewing window lists different types of paints. Children see that the hazardous properties of spray paint are that it's flammable and explosive. Less toxic alternatives are also shown, such as a brush on water-based paint.

Carlson said this year's program has targeted 20 schools through which 4,300 Kidswheels will be distributed. The West Texas Region will make presentations at schools in Odessa and Midland, and Phillips' New Mexico Region will cover Hobbs and Lovington schools.

Carlson said the children also learn how to properly dispose of hazardous products. The presentation includes a discussion on how Phillips disposes of motor oil and oil filters for its fleet vehicles, and discusses Phillips' Borger Refinery, located in the panhandle of Texas, where used oil is recycled into new oil and used again in fleet vehicles.

Also discussed is a partnership between Phillips and a Tulsa company for a plastics recycling plant. He said the process of grinding plastic containers into flakes is explained, and how the flakes are turned into pellets which are sold to manufacturers who turn them into new products.

"We pass around samples of plastic recycled products that kids see in their homes, such as Downey bottles, Surf Detergent and Tidy Cat.

"Another part of the presentation describes the differences between fresh water and produced water," said Carlson. "And we compare reusing produced water in a waterflood to recycling, because they know a lot about recycling."

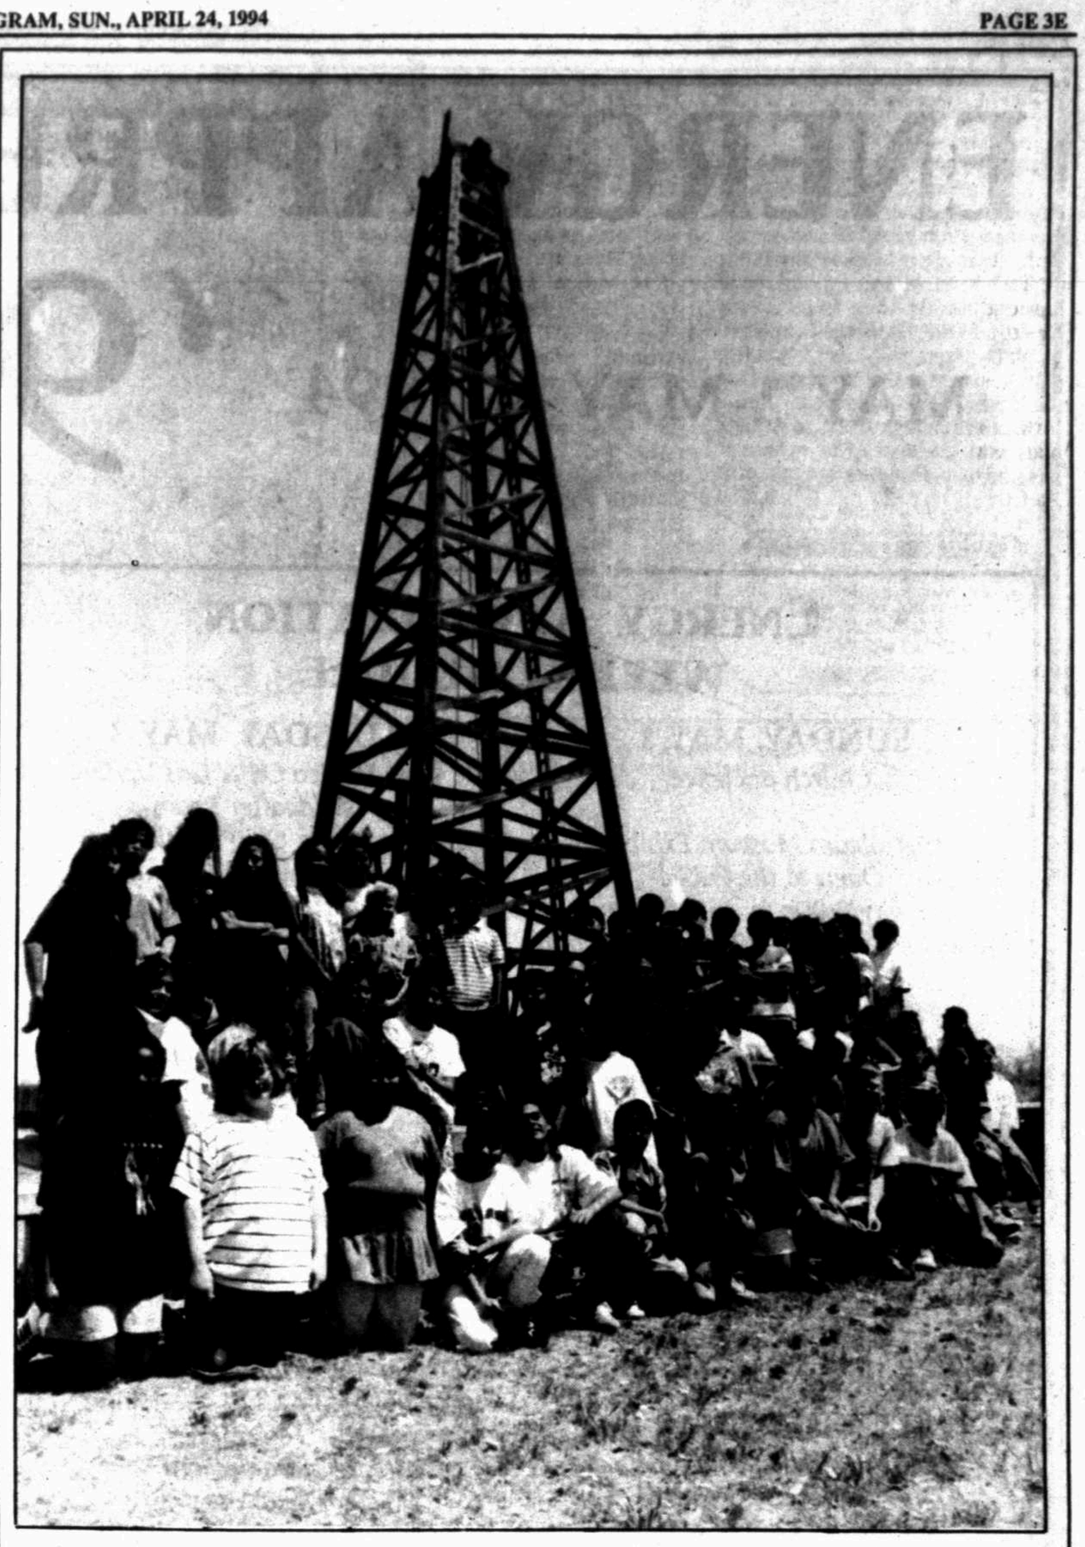

To aid in understanding, Carlson said they bring along a lot of props such as small containers of produced crude oil, another of new oil, and one of oil that has burned in an engine.

"We bring in water samples -- fresh and produced -- and plastic flakes so kids can see what we're talking about," he said. "If they can touch and shake these containers, it's help them remember."

An award from Phillips Environmental Partnerships was bestowed on Odessa Litterbusters for its Odessa Time Machine recycling center. With the $5,000 cash award Odessa Litterbusters plans to produce a bilingual recycling video in English and Spanish which Carlson said schools and the public can request for instructional purposes.

This year 40 Phillips employees will present the program. Carlson said when the various schools were contacted about when they would like to schedule the presentations, the school administrators unanimously agreed that the program was so successful last year, Phillips could schedule presentations at its employees' convenience.

"They said 'We can't wait to have you come back this year,'" Carlson said. "We know the kids are learning something because they ask a lot of questions. Sure, we're providing a service for the schools, but it's for the whole community really. That's the way we look at it."

Mixing school and oil

More and more, oil companies are getting involved with area public schools. For example, DA&S Oil Well Servicing of Hobbs has adopted Edison Elementary of Hobbs. The school's fifth and sixth grade honor students were brought in for a tour of the Petroleum Museum earlier this month.

DAY: Founder sought attention for the state of the environment cant attention to the sustainability of the earth.

In his words, "the critical matter of the state of the environment had been a non-issue in U.S. politics.

"It was clear that until we somehow got this matter into the political arena, until it became part of the national political dialogue, not much would ever be achieved," Nelson said.

He remembers the challenge as puzzling, and knew that focusing national attention on the environment would require a dramatic event. He began his efforts by convincing President Kennedy to go on a nationwide conservation tour in the fall of 1963. Nelson, along with Senators Hubert Humphrey, Gene McCarthy and Joe Clark, accompanied Kennedy on the first leg of the tour.

Although the objective was for Kennedy to give national visibility to environmental issues and propose a comprehensive agenda to address the problems, Nelson realized that the impact he was looking for was not achieved. However, he still considers the attempt "the germ of the idea that ultimately flowered into Earth Day."

Other attempts in that six-year period failed to achieve the prominent attention Nelson desired. Then in 1969, with national attention already drawn to college campuses, his idea for an environmental teach-in was born.

At that time, protests over the Vietnam War were held at college campuses across the nation. These "anti-war teach-ins," as they were known, triggered Nelson's idea of a nationwide teach-in on the environment.

By August, Nelson had raised the funds to start Earth Day, and had written letters explaining the event and asking for Earth Day proclamations by all 50 governors and by the mayors of all the major cities. He also contacted college newspapers and Scholastic Magazine, which was distributed to most grade and high schools.

The next month Nelson formally announced that there would be a national environmental teach-in sometime in the spring of 1970.

"The wire services carried the story nationwide," he recalled. "The response was dramatic. It took off like gangbusters. Telegrams, letters and telephone inquiries poured in from all over the nation.

"Using my Senate staff, I ran Earth Day activities out of my office," Nelson said. "By December, the movement had expanded so rapidly that it became necessary to open an office in Washington to serve as a National Clearinghouse for Earth Day inquiries and activities."

Nelson considers the first Earth Day an astonishing grassroots explosion. He saw it as the first opportunity Americans had to join in a nationwide demonstration to send a big message to Washington — "a message to tell them to wake up and do something."

For the twentieth anniversary Earth Day celebration, over 200 million people from 141 countries "awoke" and participated. Hundreds of environmental awareness organizations have since evolved from Nelson's inspiration.

Earth Day USA is one of these organizations and the national coordinating headquarters for the network of groups and people that serve U.S. communities. It is committed to providing the tools and support necessary for groups and individuals across the country to educate, lead and inspire every person toward positive environmental action and change. Nelson is Chairman of the Board of Earth Day USA.

Oil spill costs Unocal investors

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Investors in Unocal Corp. had a rough March and may be in for more unpleasant news arising from a little-publicized oil spill on the central California coast that ranks as one of the largest in the nation.

Last month, Unocal, the big oil company based in Los Angeles, announced that it would take a charge of $25 million against its first-quarter earnings to cover the immediate cleanup costs and eventual closing of the four-square-mile Guadalupe field, in the foothills 20 miles south of San Luis Obispo.

That write-off excludes the cost of the most intensive phase of Unocal's proposed cleanup, an undetermined sum for excavating to eight feet a pit the size of a football field and building a submerged seawall. State and Federal authorities are expected to approve the plan next week.

Nor does the write-off take into account a potential payout to cover the legal liabilities rising from the Guadalupe spill, which has contaminated ground water, spoiled a 10-acre area of shoreline and led to at least five ocean oil slicks.

Also last month, the state attorney general filed a civil suit against Unocal, charging 23 water quality and pollution violations. While the complaint does not ask for a specific amount of damages, one California statute permits penalties of $20 a gallon, or a fine of up to $170 million.

These problems — and the drops in oil prices and oil company stock prices following the failure by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to agree to cut oil production — had helped knock Unocal's stock down to a 52-week low of $24.375 on March 31, from a high of $32.625 last June.

Shares of Unocal rose 62.6 cents Thursday, to $27.25, on the New York Stock Exchange.

But some industry analysts said they did not expect Unocal's stock to be depressed further because of Guadalupe, where an estimated 8.5 million gallons of a diesel-like thinning agent called diluent has been spilled or leaked since the company's operations began in 1953.

The grounded Exxon Valdez tanker spilled 10.1 million gallons of oil into Alaska's Prince William Sound in 1989.

One analyst suggested that Unocal might find a silver lining if it was successful in turning an environmental catastrophe into a shining example of responsible corporate behavior.

Frederick P. Leuffer Jr., an analyst for Bear, Stearns, said oil investors were not unnerved by spills. "Until there is some quantification and reasoned assessment of financial liability, investors won't focus on it," he said.

The cost of the excavation of the spill site will probably show up in the company's third-quarter results. Company officials said the earth-moving project was unlikely to have a material impact on Unocal's earnings, although no initial estimates have been made. Analysts said they expected the cost would be covered by existing reserve funds.

Roger Briggs, San Luis Obispo's water quality official, said unexpected "show stoppers," like the discovery of a protected wildlife habitat at the cleanup site, could make Unocal rework its plan.

Settlement talks have also begun about the state's suit. Unocal's lawyers said they intended to argue that spills occurring before laws took effect in 1988 should be excluded, and thus, the company's potential fines should be lower.

The Guadalupe spill came to light after an inquiry by a new state agency financed by a tax on oil companies.

When A Spill Occurs You Need A Company That Is Both Environmentally Aware As Well As Quick Acting

M&P Environmental Services realize the financial and economic incentives for prompt and effective control of an oil spill are substantial. The benefits of being environmentally aware and responding quickly with experienced personnel are immeasurable. Our spill response personnel receive 40 hour HAZ MAT training and have logged a total 10,000+ hours of emergency response time. M&P's Response Team is available 24 hours a day - 365 days a year.

ENERGY APPRECIATION LUNCHEON

Mr. Alcorn is a third generation oil and gas producer and the President of Alcorn Exploration Inc., a private, family-owned exploration company in Houston, Texas. He became Chairman of the IPAA after being elected to the position at the IPAA annual meeting in New Orleans in November 1993.

George was born in Dallas and raised in a family with interests in ranching, lumber and oil. Although his father was a founder of Falcon Seaboard Drilling Company, George wanted to be involved in the creative side of the petroleum business so he formed his own business 32 years ago. Today, his firm has producing interests in Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas. Its main exploratory target today is deep, pressured natural gas along the Texas Gulf Coast. Mr. Alcorn has been an active member of the IPAA and a proponent of independent producer issues for over 18 years. As Chairman of the IPAA Natural Gas Committee, he lobbied at length over FERC issues and he was a primary contributor to and supporter of the Comprehensive Energy Security Act of 1992. He is a strong advocate of the North American Free Trade Agreement, having worked on its development by participating in strategy meetings in both Washington, D.C. and Mexico.

George believes that price and price stability are essential to the domestic industry's recovery efforts. He is currently working closely with the Department of Energy and the Senator Boren Domestic Petroleum Initiative to gain Presidential and Congressional confidence that a strong domestic industry is salient to the foundation of America's industrial base and a secure America.

Mr. Alcorn received his business degree from the University of Texas at Austin and his geology degree from the University of Houston. He and his wife, Libby, reside in Houston and have five children, one daughter and four sons.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Glorieta pay opened in Winkler field

Staff Report

Glorieta pay has apparently been opened in the Monahans North field of Winkler County with recompletion of a former Tubb producer in the field, 15 miles southeast of Kermit.

MW PETROLEUM CORP. recompleted the No. 6 Sealy & Smith Foundation to pump 98 barrels of 42 gravity crude, 197 Mcfd and 10 barrels of water from perforations 5,361 to 5,925 ft. The interval was acidized with 4,000 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid.

Total depth was 6,147 ft. and the well was plugged back to 5,945 ft.

Formation tops include the Glorieta at 4,946 ft. and Tubb at 6,115 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and 1,996 ft. from west lines of Section 51, Block A, G&MMB&A survey, Abst. 43.

The well was originally completed as a Tubb producer, producing from perforations 5,986 to 6,089 ft. It was recompleted as a Queen producer, pumping 9 barrels of 38 gravity crude, 24 Mcfd and 18 barrels of water from perforations 3,442 to 3,470 ft.

Sterling County field gets Strawn pay

BRIGHT & CO. has apparently opened Strawn pay in the Passout field of Sterling County, 15 miles north of Sterling City.

The No. 1 Foster "57" was recompleted to flow nine barrels of 56 gravity condensate and 564 Mcfd oin a 7/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 1,720 psi. Production was natural from Strawn perforations 7,854 to 7,859 ft.

Drilled to 8,083 ft., the well was plugged back to 7,890 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 8,012 ft.

The well topped the Strawn at 7,850 ft., Mississippian at 7,922 and Ellenburger at 8,006 ft. on ground elevation of 2,378 ft.

Location is 1,711 ft. from south and 2,311 ft. from west lines of Section 57, Block 18, SPRR survey.

The well was originally a Mississippian producer in the field, completed in July 1993 to flow 136 barrels of 49 gravity crude and 50 Mcfd from perforations 7,924 to 7,934 ft.

Lea plugback nets Drinkard discovery

A plugback operation has yielded a Drinkard discovery in Lea County, N.M.

PHILLIPS PETROLEUM CO. reentered the No. 125 Santa Fe, plugging it back to 8,500 ft. from an original total depth of 10,450 ft. The well, producing from Drinkard perforations 7,604 to 7,995 ft.,is currently shut in. The producing interval was acidized with 25,500 gallons of acid.

The operator set 5-1/2 inch casing at 10,450 ft.

Formation tops include the Rustler at 1,690 ft., Yates at 2,985, Queen at 3,870, Grayburg at 4,228, San Andres at 4,542, Glorieta at 6,078, CLearfork at 6,213, Tubb at 7,564, Abo at 8,260, Wolfcamp at 9,545, and Cisco at 10,310 ft.

Location is 600 ft. from south and 1,820 ft. from west lines of Section 20, T17s, R35e.

Concho field gets third producer

A third well has been added to the Mozelle Nutt (Strawn) field of Concho County, extending the field southwest, eight miles west of Eden.

PLANO PETROLEUM CORP. completed the No. 7 Mozelle Nutt to pump 17 barrels of crude and seven barrels of water from unreported Strawn perforations.

Drilled 3,852 ft., the well was plugged back to 3,817 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 3,851 ft.

On kelly bushing elevation of 2,090 ft., formation tops include the Palo Pinto at 3,248 ft., Harkey at 3,288,Camar at 3,609, and Capps at 3,722 ft.

Location is 1,542 ft. from north and 1,667 ft. from east lines of Section 44, Block 9, H&TC survey.

Diamond Shamrock posts profits

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Despite lower revenues from depressed oil prices, Diamond Shamrock Inc. reported first-quarter profits of $12.2 million, up from a loss driven by an accounting change in the first quarter of last year.

For the three months ended March 31, Diamond Shamrock earned $12.2 million, or 38 cents per share. The company lost $9.2 million, or 32 cents per share, during the first quarter of 1993. Before a $14.2 million charge for accounting changes, Diamond Shamrock earned $5 million in the year-ago period.

Revenues for the period dropped 6 percent, from $620.8 million to $583.8 million.

Diamond Shamrock chairman Roger Hemminghaus estimated that lower crude and petroleum product prices cut about $5 million from the quarter's profits.

"First quarter operations were very good. Refining margins were relatively strong at the beginning of the quarter and continued to improve. Sales were strong and the company benefited from increased refinery capacity," Hemminghaus said in a news release.

San Antonio-based Diamond Shamrock is a regional refiner and marketer of petroleum products with annual sales of nearly $2.6 billion.

Mitchell unit selling some properties

HOUSTON (AP) — Centana Energy Corp. has reached a $120 million deal to buy certain MND Energy Corp. properties.

Under the agreement, Centana, a Houston subsidiary of Panhandle Eastern Corp., will purchase the Winnie Pipeline Co. intrastate pipeline, the Spindletop Gas Storage Facility and a Liquid Energy Corp. natural gas processing plant, all from The Woodlands-based MND.

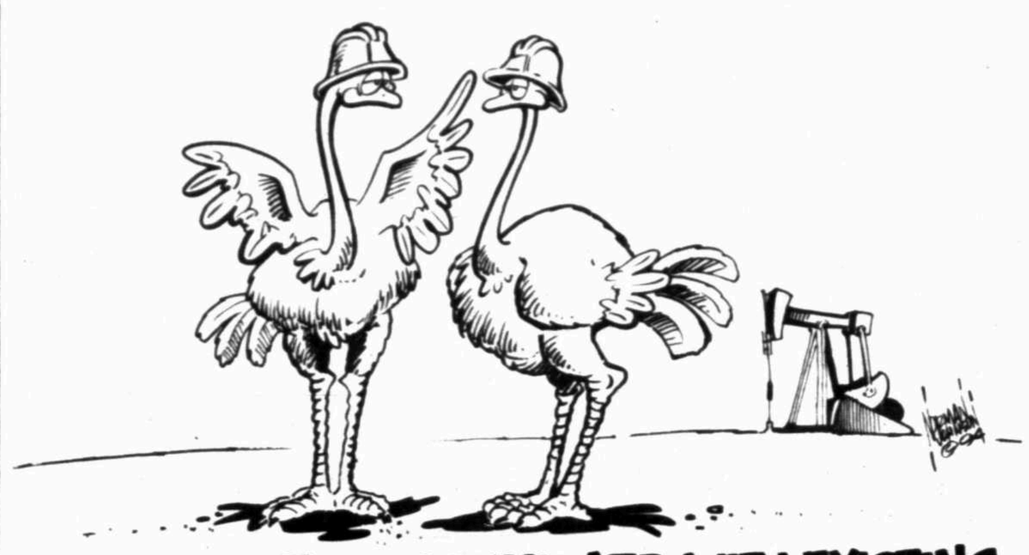

MND is a subsidiary of Mitchell Energy & Development Corp., one of the nation's largest independent energy companies. Panhandle Eastern operates one of the nation's largest interstate natural gas pipeline systems.

Winnie Pipeline and Liquid Energy are both in Winnie, Spindletop is near Beaumont.

The sale must be approved by both companies' boards. Pending regulatory review, the companies expect to close on the transaction in June.

Amoco starts operations at new gas connection

Staff Report

ODESSA — Amoco has begun the successful operation of its Mojo gas gathering system after careful completion and thorough testing last month of the new connection to Amoco's Midland Farms and North Cowden gas processing plants north of Odessa.

"This is an exciting day for everyone involved in this celebration," said David R. King, manager of plants for Amoco's South Permian Basin Business Unit.

"For Amoco, it's a chance to reaffirm that we are serious about providing a better alternative in gas processing. And for producers, it's a chance to learn firsthand how Amoco's efficient system can improve their profit potential."

King cited the energy efficiency, equipment upgrades, and marketing strength as the key cash-return advantages that Amoco offers producers. He also noted that the company's producer-focused service includes customer friendly contracts as well as easy accessibility via the Gas Asset Management Team, sponsor of today's celebration.

"We are determined to raise the level of competition for gas processing in the Permian Basin," he said.

Amoco announced last November that it had acquired the Mojo gas gathering system (formerly knows as the Foster gas gathering system). Located in Ector and Midland counties, the system is considered one of the largest West Tea packages of rich gas to become available in years.

The Mojo gas gathering system transports approximately 16 million cubic feet of gas per day. It serves more than 2,500 wells in about 30 fields including the Azalea, Foster, South Cowden, and Spraberry fields.

Amoco Production Company is the worldwide oil and gas exploration and production subsidiary of Amoco Corporation.

Chevron to upgrade California refinery

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Chevron Corp. has announced a $700 million plan to upgrade its sprawling refinery in El Segundo, Calif. for production of cleaner gasoline.

The company's three-phase clean fuels project will be completed in early 1996 and create nearly 2,000 new construction jobs, officials said Wednesday. Federal standards take effect next Jan. 1 and new California Air Resources Board regulations come on line April 1, 1996.

The new regulations are intended to reduce vehicle tailpipe emissions by between 30 percent and 40 percent, said Duane Brown, Chevron's manager of refinery projects. The rules require the Los Angeles Basin's refiners to alter their gasoline formulas.

"It's going to be much more difficult to make the ... gas on a day-in and day-out basis," Brown said.

San Francisco-based Chevron had previously announced that it would spend more than $1 billion modifying its refineries in Northern and Southern California but this is the first time the company put a price tag on the El Segundo project in El Segundo.

The El Segundo refinery is the biggest in the Los Angeles area, stretching over 1,000 acres along the Pacific Ocean and employing 1,300 workers. The refinery processes 250,000 barrels of crude oil daily, producing 4 million gallons of gasoline and other petroleum products.

The project's first phase, which involved changes to a catalytic unit, was completed in March at a cost of about $130 million, said Chevron spokesman Rod Spackman. The new unit will lower the vapor pressure and benzene content of gasoline, guidelines in both the federal and state standards.

Prior to its modification the unit had to be shut down for service every three to four months. Now it can run continuously for up to four years at a time, Spackman said.

In addition to producing cleaner gasoline the refinery modifications also will reduce emissions from the facility, Brown said.

Additionally, the project will bring an economic benefit to the city of El Segundo through revenue from increases in property tax on the refinery and sales tax on purchases made in the community by construction workers, company officials said.

Property taxes could bring about $450,000 to El Segundo's general fund, said city finance director Steve Klotzsche, but it is almost impossible to calculate any windfall from sales tax increases.

"It will be a welcome addition to the city's revenues," he said.

Valero earnings slide

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — First-quarter profits for Valero Energy Corp. slumped to less than half their year-ago level due to severely depressed natural gas liquids margins, the company said.

During the three months ended March 31, Valero earned $6.3 million, or 13 cents per share, on revenue of $247.5 million. That's a 60 percent decrease from the first quarter of 1993, when Valero earned $15.6 million, or 36 cents per share, on nearly even revenue of $249.3 million.

The company blamed the drop mainly on a lower contribution from Valero Natural Gas Partners L.P., of which Valero owns 49 percent. Valero Energy lost $4 million for the quarter from its partnership, compared to an earnings contribution of $2.2 million in the year-earlier period.

Valero Energy has said it intends to buy the rest of the natural gas partnership and merge it into Valero by the end of the second quarter.

gas waste hauler permit application fees.

Attempting to reduce the number of abandoned wells and oil field sites that required state funds, S.B. 1103 established new financial responsibility requirements for oil and gas operators.

An annual Form P-5 must be filed by anyone conducting oil and gas operations regulated by the TRC, along with simultaneously submitting a bond or alternate form of financial security which covers all the operator's oil and gas operations regulated by the TRC.

S.B. 1103 states that failure to comply prohibits the TRC from accepting a drilling permit application if the applicant has any outstanding safety violations or pollution prevention rules within the last five years.

OIL & GAS WASTES...HAZARDOUS OR NOT?

S.B. 1103 authorizes the TRC to develop a regulatory program for oil and gas wastes classified as hazardous by the EPA and by the Texas Natural Resources Code.

This code requires the TRC to adopt rules relating to the generation, transportation, treatment, storage, and disposal of hazardous oil and gas wastes and to assure that these rules are consistent with EPA's hazardous waste regulations.

The EPA designates hazardous waste as having four characteristics: ignitability, corrosivity, reactivity, and toxicity. Some non-exempt oil and gas wastes regulated by the TRC are classified hazardous because they exhibit one or more of the four characteristics.

The TRC has been authorized to require permits for hazardous oil and gas waste management activities, such as treatment, storage or disposal (TSD) facilities, but the TRC does not expect to issue any permits. It does collect fees to support its hazardous oil and gas waste program.

Each oil and gas operator will pay an annual fee based on the volume of hazardous oil and gas waste the operator generates, unless the operator qualifies as a "conditionally exempt small quantity generator." The latter is defined as generating no more than 100 kg/month of hazardous waste or 1 kg/month of acutely (as defined by EPA) hazardous waste at each facility.

Before drafting rules for oil and gas wastes, the TRC sent a questionnaire to 12,500 operators in late 1991. More than 58 percent of them responded. Of those who responded, 74 percent said they did not generate any hazardous oil and gas waste and 23 percent reported that they qualify as conditionally exempt small quantity generators.

Despite some confusing responses and some misinterpretation by the operators on what constitutes hazardous waste (some did not include spill contaminated soils, hydrostatic test waters, etc. on their returned questionnaires), the TRC is proceeding carefully to develop its rules.

PENDING

As the TRC proceeds to develop its rules for hazardous oil and gas wastes, some rules will follow EPA regulations and others will not. For example, the EPA permit requirements for operators of hazardous waste TSD facilities do not appear to apply to oil and gas operations from a practical or economic standpoint. The permits are expensive, the application process is lengthy, and the quantities of hazardous waste are limited.

Also, those commercial TSD facility operators who do need permits because they also accept other types of hazardous waste, obtain these permits from the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission (TNRCC) and the TRC sees no need for duplication.

Hazardous waste generated at a natural gas processing plant will be considered a hazardous oil and gas waste only upon approval of the TRC's hazardous waste program by the EPA. Until then, this one category of hazardous waste generated by oil and gas exploration and production operations will be regulated under the TNRCC's hazardous waste program.

The TRC is investigating the possibility of issuing emergency permits and enforcement orders for hazardous oil and gas wastes that need to be disposed of on-site, such as those wastes from pits or crude oil pipeline spills. The TRC will seek public comment on its proposed rules for hazardous oil and gas wastes by publishing them in an upcoming issue of the Texas Register.

HAULING

Regarding the hauling of hazardous oil and gas waste, the Salt Water Haulers Act enacted in 1967 is now amended under S.B. 1103 to include hauling other types of waste generated in the exploration, development or production of oil and gas.

The act is now known as the Oil and Gas Waste Haulers Act and requires commercial haulers of salt water, drilling fluid or other oil and gas waste to obtain a permit. The $100 permit is deposited in the oil and gas cleanup fund.

The main thrust of the act is to ensure that hauling vehicles are maintained and operated so as to prevent spillage, leakage or other escape of oil and gas wastes, and to ensure that these wastes are properly disposed of at permitted facilities.

However, S.B. 1103 also authorized the TRC to exclude certain types of oil and gas wastes from the required permit, namely inert wastes because they don't pose a serious risk to the environment: asbestos containing materials regulated under the federal Clean Air Act and PCBs (polychlorinated biphenyls, because both are regulated under other federal and state authorities.

OIL & GAS WASTES...EXEMPT OR NOT?

Produced waters constitute about 98 percent of all oil and gas wastes, and each year Texas oil and gas operations generate roughly 7.8 billion barrels of produced waters.

Most produced waters, drilling fluids and other industry-related wastes have been exempt from classification as hazardous waste under the federal Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA) since 1976 due to their low toxicity and extreme diversity.

Nearly 75 percent of active Texas wells are marginally productive and extremely sensitive to environmental compliance costs. And a comparison of Gulf Coast wells with Permian Basin wells indicates the diverse operational and environmental settings of the associated wastes.

An American Petroleum Institute study has estimated that 78 percent of the oil wells and 59 percent of the gas wells in the nation would be shut in if associated wastes were subject to regulation as hazardous wastes.

Although the actual costs to the industry and the national economy are being debated, the TRC feels it is no exaggeration to say that domestic oil and gas production would decline precipitously if exempt oil and gas wastes were subject to regulation as hazardous wastes.

The oil and gas industry has cautioned Congress about these potentially disastrous economic consequences of federally regulating oil and gas wastes. However, some environmental groups and commercial hazardous waste firms have urged Congress to lift this exemption.

In a study published in 1988, the EPA determined that exempt oil and gas wastes posed no threat to public health or the environment when managed in accordance with existing federal and state programs.

However, the EPA proposed to work more closely with the oil and gas producing states and specifically with the Interstate Oil and Gas Compact Commission (IOGCC). The TRC participated in a joint effort between these two parties, and a report was published in December 1990.

Since then the TRC has been evaluating its programs according to the report. Some of the resulting changes approved by the Texas Legislature are: expanded authority for the TRC to regulate oil and gas waste haulers, stricter requirements for obtaining disposal permits, and providing a technical assistance program to encourage operators to take advantage of waste minimization opportunities.

PENDING

Further consideration is being given to developing a waste tracking system for oil and gas wastes hauled off site for disposal, placing additional limitations on the use of certain pits and disposal methods, and -- since the authority to regulate the disposal of oil field NORM was transferred from the TWC to the TRC in August 1993 -- developing rules by January 1, 1995 for the disposal of oil field NORM.

Another key area of interest involves pit construction. The TRC is reviewing the types of pits, what they can contain and for what length of time. Additional controls are under review such as how the pits are constructed and where they can be located in proximity to housing.

OIL SPILL CLEANUP--HOW CLEAN IS CLEAN ENOUGH?

The TRC has long required oil and gas operators to clean up a crude oil spill by removing all free oil and working the contaminated soil to the extent necessary to prevent runoff or release of oil. For spills in sensitive areas, additional requirements have been imposed on a case-by-case basis.

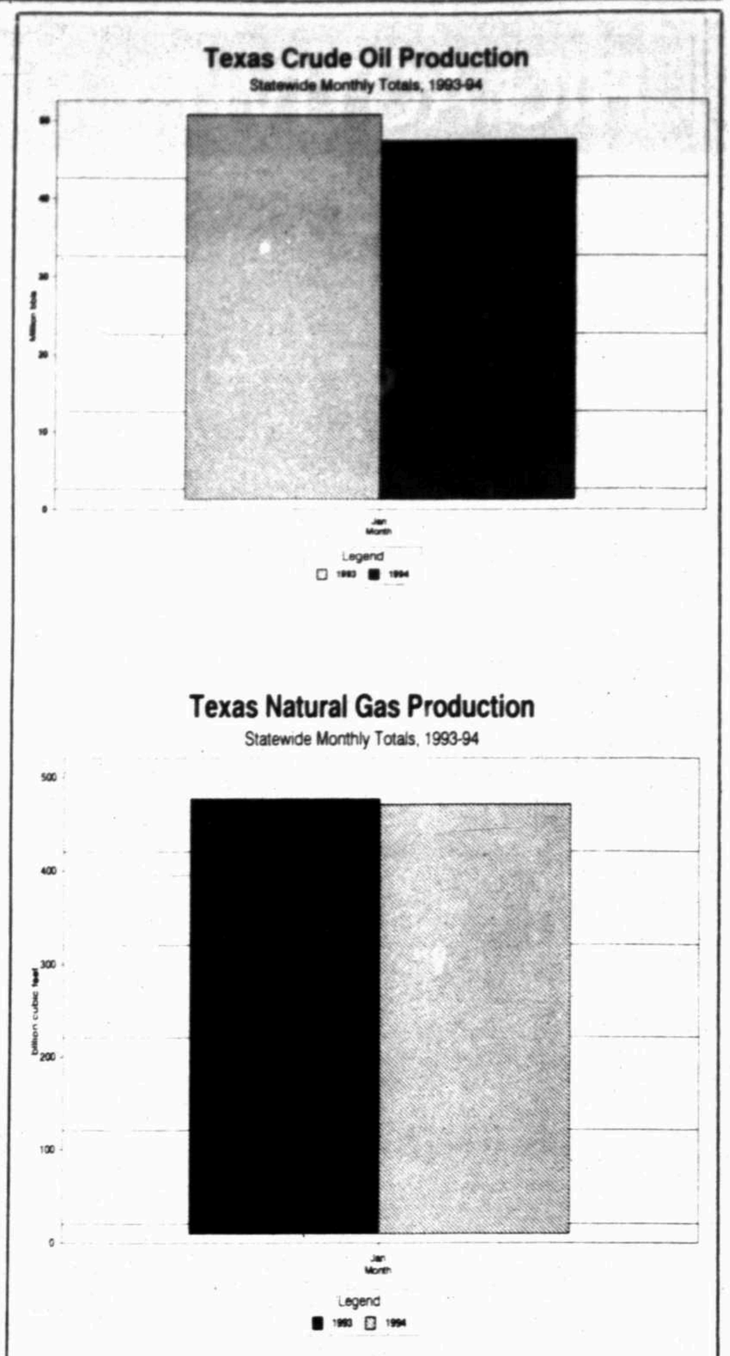

Beginning with interim guidelines in 1992, numerical standards and step-by-step procedures to promote cleanup consistency were developed. The end result, which became effective in November 1993, is known as Rule 91.

This TRC rule applies only to crude oil spills from exploration and production operations, including pipelines. Also, it applies only to spills in non-sensitive areas, i.e. not including spills into surface water bodies, in areas with shallow groundwater, or in parks, wildlife refuges or residential areas, because these areas require more cleanup.

Regarding cleanup of crude oil spill into soil, the TRC's Rule 91 is based on achieving a final cleanup level of one percent by weight total petroleum hydrocarbons (TPH). This one weight percent TPH is consistent with the landspreading criteria in IOGCC's guidelines for state oil and gas waste management programs.

PENDING

Texas and several other states have requested the EPA to suspend application of its new toxicity characteristic rule to petroleum-contaminated soils.

Texas production

Texas preliminary January crude oil production averaged 1,488,559 barrels daily, down from the 1,597,059 barrels daily average of January 1993. The preliminary Texas oil production figure for January is 46,145,328 barrels, down from 49,508,814 barrels reported in Janaury 1993. Texas oil and gas wells produced 460,797,035 thousand cubic feet of gas in preliminary production for January, down 1.19 percent compared to January 1993 preliminary gas production total of 466,295,379 Mcf.

Phillips tests Alaska appraisal well

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — Phillips Petroleum Co. and its co-venturer, Arco Alaska Inc., has announced the results of the test of the No. 3 Sunfish appraisal well on the Sunfish project, North Cook Inlet, Alaska.

Phillips operated the well from its Tyonek gas production platform and directionally drilled the well to a measured depth of 14,705 ft.

Phillips performed two drill stem tests.

■ The Sunfish Sand flowed 412 barrels of oil per day and 155 barrels of water per day from perforations between 13,594 and 13,706 ft. Phillips officials said the test indicates the zone could be capable of flowing at two to three times the test rate under normal development and production conditions.

■ A second test recovered small amounts of oil from an unnamed sand interval from 12,478 to 12,538 ft.

The well failed to encounter the secondary North Foreland Sand objective.

The No. 3 Sunfish is the third appraisal well, and the third productive well, on the Sunfish Prospect and was designed to test the area north of the Tyonek platform. The 1991 discovery well flowed 42 degree API oil at 1,100 bopd through a 24/64 inch choke from the Sunfish Sand at a depth of 12,160 ft.

The No. 1 North Foreland confirmation well flowed from two zones on different tests at a total rate of 3,610 bopd.

The 1992 No. 2 Sunfish well was drilled to define the downdip limit of the play but failed to encounter hydrocarbons.

Future operations are pending, based on further analysis of the test data and a 3-D seismic survey of the prospect acquired last year.

Arco and Phillips are 60/40 coventurers in the Sunfish Prospect.

Enron senior debt rating raised

CHICAGO — Duff & Phelps Credit Rating Co. has raised its rating on Enron Corp.'s debt as a result of the company's progress toward sustained improvements in the quality of its earnings, operating cash flows, and balance sheet.

Enron's senior debt rating is raised to 'BBB+' (Triple-B-Plus) from 'BBB' (Triple-B) while Enron's senior subordinated debt rating is raised to 'BBB' (Triple-B) from 'BBB-' (Triple-B-Minus) and the convertible preferred rating is raised to 'BBB-' (Triple-B-Minus) from 'BB+' (Double-B-Plus).

Duff & Phelps has also raised the credit rating on Enron subsidiary Houston Pipe Line to 'BBB+' (Triple-B-Plus). Approximately $2.7 billion of debt and preferred stock is affected.

The upgrade reflects the impact on quality of earnings of continuing improvements in Enron's operations. The Teeside power project was completed and began operation in 1993. Implementation of FERC Order 636 and cost reduction efforts have reduced pipeline volatility and improved profitability. Production volumes from Enron Oil & Gas increased significantly over the last few years, increasing discretionary cash flow. Enron Gas Services' profitability has improved on increased volumes. Operating results in these business areas are expected to continue to improve.

The rating upgrade also reflects Enron's ability to access equity markets for funding additional capital investments while maintaining appropriate financial protection measures. This is particularly important given Enron's growing capital investment program. Enron has reorganized its operations to increase business focus and reduce costs as it pursues a strategy of controlled growth. Adequately controlling growth, in both new domestic and international investments and in expanded risk management activities, is the major challenge facing Enron.

ments for casing, cementing and plugging wells.

■ SAFETY/POLLUTION RULES. By 1983, the Texas Legislature had authorized the TRC to assess administrative penalties of up to $10,000 per day for a violation of its safety or pollution prevention rules.

■ OIL & GAS WASTES IN PITS. In 1984, the TRC amended its rules on the storage and disposal of oil and gas wastes. Almost all previously permitted pits had to be repermitted under more stringent standards. Several types of pits and disposal methods were regulated by rule or permit for the first time.

■ OIL & GAS WASTES AND SURFACE WATER. In 1985, the TRC adopted a new rule concerning discharges of oil and gas wastes to surface waters. The rule is tied to the federal National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES).

■ TANK BOTTOMS. In 1990, the TRC amended its rule on the reclamation of tank bottoms and other crude oil wastes to require reclamation plant operators to file bonds to ensure that their plants are operated and closed in accordance with TRC rules. The amendments also expanded the permitting requirements for the disposal of tank bottoms.

■ ABANDONED SITES. In 1991, the TRC sought additional funding and authority to address the problem of abandoned oil field sites. The Texas Legislature enacted S.B. 1103, which created the oil field cleanup fund and also established new financial responsibility requirements for operators.

■ MIGRATORY BIRDS. Also in 1992, the TRC adopted a rule requiring oil and gas operators to take measures to protect migratory birds at oil field tanks and pits.

■ PLUGGING WELLS. In 1992, The TRC amended its plugging rule to place additional conditions on the granting of an extension of time to plug a well and to establish requirements for monitoring and testing of older, inactive wells. The TRC also adopted new rules for plugging seismic and core holes and for completing cathodic protection wells.

Texaco signs deal with Russia

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — Texaco announced that it has completed three license agreements with refineries in Perm and Novokuibyshevk, Russia. The agreements represent the first Texaco technologies to be licensed in Russia and will assist in the revitalization of the country's refining industry.

The Novokuibyshevk Refinery project, located in the Samara region of Russia, is part of an overall modernization and expansion program of the refinery's lubricant base oil manufacturing facility. The agreement is for an 11,000 bbl/d Texaco-licensed MP-refining unit, which greatly enhances the refinery's efficiency in the production of high quality base oils. Texaco's other major refinery modernization license agreements are with Lukoil at its Permnefteorgsintez refinery in Perm, located approximately 700 miles east of Moscow. These involve the licensing of a 67,000 bbl/d T-Star vacuum gas oil hydrodesulfurizer and a grassroots Fluid Catalytic Cracking unit.

Texaco's FCC process significantly increases a refinery's capability to convert heavy hydrocarbons into gasoline and other lighter products. The T-Star pretreater further improves the FCC yields of clean light-end products, as well as reduces the sulfur content of the products emissions.

"These projects, in cooperation with the Russian refineries, further expand Texaco's presence in the country and underscore the company's commitment to forge strategic alliances," said David C. Crikelair, vice president of Texaco and head of Texaco's alternate energy group. "We are pleased to have developed sound working relationships with the national, regional and local governments of Russia as well as with the Russian oil industry."

In addition to the licensing activities in Russia, Texaco is currently involved with three upstream projects. These include a successful well re-work project begun last year in the Sutormin oilfield, currently producing about 16,000 barrels per day; a recent agreement to negotiate for exploration and production blocks in the Sakhalin Islands; and Timan Pechora project, a long-term major oil development program above the Arctic Circle.

Welding supplier expands markets

By Ellen Hopkins

WEST TEXAS WELDERS SUPPLY is expanding into new markets according to Rob Vaughn, district manager.

Vaughn said after running market surveys in the Monahans and Andrews areas the company decided to broaden its markets for welding supplies, and for welding, medical and specialty gases. West Texas Welders will deliver directly to accounts in Andrews, but in Monahans the products will be supplied through a reseller.

Vaughn said after this expansion is fully underway, the company will look at growth in other markets as well.

CENTURY GRAPHICS & SIGN has seen a large increase in the demand for customized hazard communications labels, according to owner Marshall Fox.

These labels are designed for specific chemicals and list the chemical name, i.e. methanol, the numerical health hazard code and a pictogram illustrating each protective step people need to take as a precaution when working with the chemical such as wearing gloves or goggles.

OSHA regulations also require the posting of confined space signs, for example DANGER, or DO NOT ENTER, PERMIT REQUIRED. Fox said there has also been a big surge in the demand for safety related signs such as H2S GAS, HIGH VOLTAGE, and HEARING PROTECTION EQUIPMENT REQUIRED.

ALLIED EQUIPMENT INC. has diversified its oil and gas production equipment product line to include compressed natural gas (CNG) storage spheres.

Owner Ron Worley said these spheres are used for quick filling CNG vehicles. He described a sphere as a 48-inch round ball which holds 11,695 cu. ft. of CNG at 4500 PSIG.

Worley said the national market for CNG vehicles and fill stations is big business since the federal alternate fuel mandate requiring a varying percentage of fleet vehicles to use alternate fuel. Large company fleets, municipal bus fleets, federal and state fleets, and municipal fleets like MISD and ECISD vehicles are required to have a certain percentage of their vehicles which use alternate fuel.

Worley said estimates are that the number of CNG fill stations nationwide will double in '94. Allied Equipment has broadened its markets and is selling CNG storage spheres from California to the east coast.

TEXAS RAILROAD COMMISSION is holding a seminar this week, April 27 and 28, to discuss water protection and hydrogen sulfide safety.

Wednesday's topics target water protection related to oil and gas wastes and include Rule 8 (water protection), Rule 91 (crude oil spills into soil), Rule 22 (protection of birds), pollution prevention, NORM, and proposed Rule 98 (management of hazardous oil and gas wastes).

Thursday's session begins with water protection related to wells and includes a discussion of Rule 13 (casing, cementing, drilling and completion requirements), Rule 14 (plugging), Rule 99 (cathodic protection), Rule 100 (seismic holes and core holes), and disposal injection wells. The afternoon session covers hydrogen sulfide safety including precautions and equipment, field operations and Rule 36.

B & L EQUIPMENT in Midland is selling an agitator to improve cement jobs, and owner Ronald Ladd said some of the majors and a lot of the independents are using agitators on every well they drill.

Ladd recommends bolting an agitator to the outside of the casing every ten feet along and 50 feet either side of the pay zone. He said agitators are an economical way to help prevent channeling of cement. Along with its popularity in the Permian Basin, B & L Equipment is shipping agitators as far away as Casper, Wyoming, and to many companies in Oklahoma, New Mexico and South Texas.

Geco-Prakla undertakes 3-D survey of Gulf trend

HOUSTON — Geco-Prakla announces the start of its newest 3-D non-exclusive seismic survey in the subsalt trend of the Gulf of Mexico.

This survey, in the West Texas Cameron South Additions, will add 48 OCS blocks of full-fold, 3-D seismic data to the existing Geco-Prakla inventory of over 800 blocks of non-exclusive 3-D data in the Gulf of Mexico.

The new seismic data will be acquired with the Geco Longva using triple 4000-meter streamers and dual-source acquisition technology. CDP coverage will be obtained underneath all surface platforms in the area using the Geco-Prakla two vessel system.

The data will be processed using the latest development in DMO and steep dip, one pass, 3-D time migration, resulting in a final bin size of 12.5 x 20 meters.

Geco-Prakla, a member of the Schlumberger Oilfield Services Group, provides integrated seismic services worldwide and is a leader in seismic data, acquisition, data processing, interpretation services and non-exclusive data sales.

Amoco marks 10 years at Bravo Dome

Staff Report

CLAYTON, N.M. — Birthday parties for 10-year olds usually come in two varieties - noisy and extra noisy.

The exception happened last at the Amoco Production Company compressor station near Rosebud, N.M., when 18 Amoco employees enjoyed a quiet lunch to celebrate the tenth anniversary of initial production at the Bravo Dome Carbon Dioxide Unit.

Amoco has safely and successfully operated this Northeast New Mexico carbon dioxide (CO_2) resource since the Bravo Dome unit officially was formed in 1979, according to Amoco Operations Foreman Danny Holcomb.

The 1 million-plus-acre unit began producing CO_2 on April 2, 1984. Currently, it produces about 370 million cubic feet per day of CO_2, which is used to enhance production in 14 oil fields located in West Texas and Southeast New Mexico.

Holcomb said that while promoting Permian Basin oil production, the unit has also significantly stimulated the economies of Union and Harding counties, where the unit is located.

For example, the investment and expense dollars spent by working interest owners on the CO_2 resource between 1979 and 1993 totalled nearly $426 million. In addition to developing and maintaining the unit's wells, pipelines, and plant, this money has also built and improved 789 miles of roads (including 413 miles of lease roads and 376 miles of county roads), and installed or upgraded more than 500 cattle guards.

The unit currently has some 2,000 royalty owners. In 10 years since first production, the unit has paid approximately $46 million in royalties. Royalties are paid based on volume of CO_2 sold, and the unit exceeded the 1 trillion cubic feet mark last July.

Holcomb said the Bravo Dome unit has provided a significant number of jobs, contracting more than 1,475 people for various drilling and development programs conducted between 1983 and 1993. There are also some 80 firms that the unit has hired 10 or more times during its history.

As for permanent jobs, 18 Amoco employees and five contractors now work full time at the unit. The peak full-time Amoco employment rate of 34 was set in 1984.

The State of New Mexico has benefitted from a decade of successful production at Bravo Dome, collecting nearly $23 million in property taxes, which include school, severance, conservation, and ad valorem taxes. The state has also received more than $12.5 million in gross receipts tax from the unit during this 10 year peiod.

The unit has donated a fair share of charitable contribution and community service to local groups, Holcomb said. He cited as examples the unit's contributions to build the Clayton Little League baseball park and the Hayden rodeo arena, and Amoco's support of the Union County junior livestock sale. He also noted fire truck and equipment donations to the Harding County Fire Department. Finally, Holcomb noted the financial and hands-on help Amoco provides through the Science Enrichment program offered in the Clayton and Logan public schools.

"Of all the success we've enjoyed here, I guess I'm most proud that we have a perfect safety record (10 years without a lost-time accident) and that we give something back to these New Mexico communities where we live and work."

Zapata subsidiary buys gas compression units

HOUSTON — Zapata Corp.'s natural gas compression subsidiary, Energy Industries Inc., has purchased 41 natural gas compression units from Natural Resources Compressor Co. of Tulsa for $2 million in cash.

"Natural Resources Compressor Co.'s parent company, New Jersey Resources Corp., of Belmar, N.J., has entered into a lease agreement with Energy Industries to continue the operation of these units on its natural gas properties in Oklahoma's Arkoma Basin. Consequently, they will provide immediate incremental cash flow for Zapata," said R.C. Lassiter, Zapata chairman and chief executive officer.

With the addition of the 41 Natural Resources Compressor units, the Energy Industries compressor fleet now totals 700 units, in sizes ranging up to more than 1,100 horsepower.

"We plan to seek additional opportunities to make acquisitions that will enable Energy Industries to further benefit from the economics of consolidation," Lassiter said.

Headquartered in Corpus Christi, Energy Industries is one of the leading companies in the natural gas compression industry with domestic facilities in several Texas locations, as well as Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

Zapata Corp. is a Houston-based international company primarily involved in natural gas services.

Several solutions being tried to recycle hydrocarbon products

By Ellen Hopkins

Recycling hydrocarbon products is a problem that is being approached from several directions.

Approximately 250 million used tires per year were filling city dumps and landfills until a 23-year old group called Environmental Action decided to change things.

Now, unless states agree to use a varying percent of rubberized asphalt (made from recycled tires) in state roads, they fail to qualify for federal highway assistance.

"We simply wanted to provide a market for used tires," said Jim Pierce, marketing director for Environmental Action (EnAct).

The organization was formed by former Senator Gaylord Nelson, initiator of Earth Day, and other promoters of Earth Day and environmental awareness. According to Pierce, EnAct considers itself an energy issue organization concentrating on two specific areas.

"We're especially interested in utility accountability," said Pierce. "We focus our efforts on the regulation of utilities, rate equity, and transmission access so even a small public utility can transmit its small energy and not be denied access due to its size."

He said EnAct was instrumental in PUCHA -- Public Utility Holding Company Act, which monitors utilities and their subsidiaries. They also stay on top of unaccountable utilities like the Tenneesee Valley Authority (TVA) which has shown an interest in building nuclear power plants to help pull itself out of debt, yet is not accountable to the public.

Pierce said EnAct's other area of interest involves renewable energy sources. He said they work at the national level to promote solar, wind geothermal and other sources of alternative energy for the future.

"We house the Energy Conservation Coalition," said Pierce. "This is a group of 20 nonprofit organizations that concentrate on energy conservation and on renewables."

He said when the Administration submits its budget to Congress for the Department of Energy, EnAct reviews it for areas pertaining to renewables and incentives such as weatherization programs.

"We also try to do our part in promoting transportation efficiency," he said. "Mass transportation, car pooling, bus pooling and 'bike to work' programs all have our support."

Besides encouraging the recycling of tires, Pierce said EnAct works for recycling a lot of solid waste products including plastics.

"We exposed the so-called 'biodegradeable plastics' for what they really were," he said. "They broke down alright -- just into smaller pieces of plastic."

Pierce said the plastics industry recently spent $18 million on its national advertising campaign, including a number of television commercials that all told the viewer to "take another look at plastic."

He said Environmental Action suggested to the plastics industry that they spend the money on an improved plastics recycling program, because a lack of plastics recycling centers was one major reason people weren't recycling it.

"Even the closest facility to the plastics industry headquarters in Washington D.C. is in Connecticut."

Fertilizers help clean up oil spills

N.Y. Times News Service

'When you talk about adding nutrients to the water, you must be aware that it's not just the bacteria that are going to change.'

Dr. John Farmington, Biogeochemist, Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute

The notion that fertilizers could help clean up beaches fouled by oil spills was suggested more than 20 years ago, but the effectiveness of such efforts has been hard to demonstrate outside the laboratory.

Now scientists studying the 1989 spill of 10 million gallons of crude oil from the tanker Exxon Valdez into Prince William Sound in Alaska say they have developed a reliable measurement technique proving that the method works.

Dr. James R. Bragg, a scientist with the Exxon Production Research Co. of Houston who helped coordinate the study, said the new technique allowed his team to show that applying nitrogen-rich fertilizers to the polluted beaches caused an acceleration of more than five times in the rate of microbial degradation of the oil. The findings were reported on March 31 in the journal Nature.

Although Bragg said that extensive laboratory experiments and field trials had demonstrated "that we might be able to give nature an assist," he added that the dynamic nature of ocean shorelines made it difficult to prove that fertilizers were playing a significant role in cleaning up oil.

"In this study," he said, "we tried to look at internal changes within the oil so that we could find a scientifically valid measure that would prove whether adding fertilizers was speeding up the rate of oil degradation by the bacteria that are naturally present in the environment along marine coastlines."

In what the researchers called the largest bioremediation effort to date, about 110,000 pounds of nitrogen and 11,000 pounds of phosphorus were applied to beaches in Prince William Sound over the summers of 1989 to 1992.

Hopane, a nonbiodegradable hydrocarbon molecule in crude oil, was used as a benchmark for comparing changes in the composition of residual oil on treated and untreated sections of beach. By measuring oil residue over time and comparing changes in the proportion of hopane, which does not break down, the researchers were able to determine the effectiveness of the treatment.

They also found that the rate of oil biodegradation depended on the concentration of nitrogen in the intertidal sediments, but that the addition of phosphorus appeared to be unnecessary.

Dr. John Farrington, a biogeochemist at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Massachusetts, said researchers have moved cautiously on bioremediation because they want to be sure that "intervention by humans is going to do something that is better than nature taking its course."

"When you talk about, for example, adding nutrients to the water," Farrington said, "you must be aware that it's not just the bacteria that are going to change.

"I'm not suggesting that this would happen, but we have to worry about things like whether changing the nutrient balance is all of a sudden going to result in something like a red tide. Then you're in big trouble, because your solution is worse than the problem you started with."

Bragg agreed that bioremediation must be used judiciously. He said future cleanup efforts could probably be improved by carefully measuring nutrient concentrations in beach sediments to insure that safe and effective nitrogen levels were maintained.

"We don't believe that this paper answers every question on bioremediation," Bragg said, "but at least we have a technique now that can be used to better evaluate how things are happening."

MEETINGS

PBPA to host Texas Comptroller Sharp

Sharp

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association will host John Sharp, Texas Comptroller of Public Accounts, at its monthly membership luncheon Thursday at the Petroleum Club. The meeting begins at 11:30 a.m.

Sharp, a former Texas Railroad Commissioner, was elected Comptroller in 1990. His "Texas Performance Review" found over $4 billion in immediate savings and $12 billion in savings through 1997, a feat that prompted President Clinton to name Sharp his advisor on the "National Performance Review." His most recent effort, "Forces of Change," is a sweeping study of the economic, demographic, environmental, criminal justice and other major issues forecasted to shape Texas in the generation to come.

Cost is $15 per person. Reservations are required and can be made by calling 684-6345. Reservations are guaranteed unless cancelled 24 hours in advance.

State senator speaks to area drillers

State Sen. Teel Bivins will be the guest speaker at Tuesday's meeting of the Permian Basin chapter, International Association of Drilling Contractors. The meeting will be at the Petroleum Club beginning with social hour at 5:30 p.m. and dinner at 6:30 p.m.

Sen. Bivins will discuss current issues and information regarding the industry.

Cost is $20 and reservations can be made by calling 570-648.

Petroleum accountants honor employers

The Petroleum Accountants Society of the Permian Basin will hold its annual Employers Appreciation night Tuesday at the Petroleum Club beginning with social hour at 6 p.m. and dinner at 6:45 p.m.

Guest speaker will be David Griffin, president, Griffin Petroleum Co. His topic will be "What Are You Paying for Oil In the Ground These Days?"

Energy attorney to discuss property sales

Terry I. Cross will be the guest speaker at Wednesday's meeting of the Natural Gas Producers Association. The group will meet at the Petroleum Club beginning at 11:45 a.m.

Cross, a partner in the energy section of Haynes and Boone, Attorneys and Counselors at Law specializing in oil and gas law and energy finance. His topic will be the purchase and sale of oil and gas properties.

Cross received his law degree from the University of Houston School of Law in 1977.

Reservations should be made by noon Tuesday by calling 683-4540.

SPE study group plans Thursday meeting

The Production Operations Study Group of the Permian Basin Section, Society of Petroleum Engineers, will meet Thursday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Robert E. Barba of Integrated Energy Services Inc. will speak on "Designing Permian Basin Fracture Treatments Using 3-D Fracture Simulators."

With 3-D hydraulic fracture simulators becoming increasingly popular in the Permian Basin, the choice of input parameters to these simulators is becoming more critical to obtaining reasonable results. When sufficient effort is put forth to estimate these parameters, fracture height can be predicted prior to the job. This can be critical if water-bearing zones are inclose proximity to hydrocarbon zones of insterest.

Barba will discuss field examples from the Delaware, San Andres, Bone Spring and Spraberry to demonstrate the value of proper parameter selection for the 3-D models.

New survey method unveiled

HOUSTON — Geco-Prakla announces the availability of the Digiseis Enhanced Streamer Survey technique used to acquire marine seismic data in densely obstructed areas.

Areas populated with obstructions most typically use a two-boat acquisition operation. One vessel is equipped with the acquisition system, while the second vessel carries the energy source. Although high resolution data is obtained with this technique, it becomes difficult to apply in very densely obstructed areas. Such a situation would traditionally call for an ocean bottom cable technique that uses gimbaled geophones and hydrophones whose outputs are combined to deghost the data.

The Digiseis Enahnced Streamer Survey method provides a technically attractive and cost-effective alternative for acquiring seismic data where only portions of the survey are densely obstructed.

DENTISTS FILLING COMMUNITY NEED

SINKING THEIR TEETH INTO CARING FOR OTHERS

With just a phone call, Dr. Michael Keith Wilkerson changed the lives of several children in the Permian Basin.

That phone call was to volunteer his services as a pediatric dentist to the Junior League's Children's Dental Clinic. He is one of several local dentists who volunteer their time and expertise to the program.

"It is a well established program that is a public service," Wilkerson said. "As a child specialist, I felt I owed it to the kids to help with this program. With children, sometimes you have to do things a little differently. I have two and half years extra training in pediatric dentistry to teach me how to better deal with them.

"We tell them stories to ease their fears," Wilkerson said. "Your approach is the key. You can get a lot more done in a short time if you can gain their trust. If they trust you and know you are trying to help them, then they will usually try to help you.

"Sometimes the kids are really scared," Wilkerson said. "After we are done treating them, I'll just sit with them a minute or put them on my knee to reassure them everything is OK."

The Children's Dental Clinic has been a Junior League Community Service project which has offered professional basic dental care to indigent patients in kindergarten through high school since June 1954.

However, in May the League will turn the project over to Casa de Amigos to maintain, according to Elizabeth Blount, project chairman for the Junior League.

"Casa de Amigos will take over the operation of the clinic," Ms. Blount said.

"Initially, we plan to maintain the Children's Dental Clinic at the same level that it has been functioning under," said Lael Cordes-Pitts, executive director of Casa de Amigos. "The administrative work has been done by Junior League members."

Until May, Junior League members have done the administrative duties at the clinic such as educating patients (and often their parents) about dental care, keeping records, scheduling patients and preparing patients for the dentist, Ms. Blount said. League members also have been responsible for coordinating with the school nurses of Midland independent schools about which students are in need of care and prioritizing the cases.

The Junior League has funded the project and purchased the equipment and supplies for the dentists to use.

CLINIC: Volunteer dentists fill need

(From 1F)

League's involvement still will be present in the form of a three-year financial promise.

"Once the clinic is turned over to us, the coordination will be done by Dinah. She will be the contact here," Ms. Cordes-Pitts said.

The "Dinah" Ms. Cordes-Pitts referred to is Dinah Doggett, a dental assistant for many years who joined the Casa de Amigos staff in January as the dental services coordinator. Ms. Doggett replaced Teresa Ingram who had served in the position since January 1992.

Ms. Doggett has worked for several dentist in Midland and is familiar with the Junior League Children's Dental Clinic, according to Ms. Cordes-Pitts. "We know she'll be able to help us build the program as we take over the administrative coordination of the Children's Dental Clinic from the Junior League this summer."

Currently, the clinic functions during the school year from 5:30-8 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday evening (excluding League meeting times once a month and holidays) at Casa de Amigos. Over the years, the volunteer dentists and hygienists have donated at least a couple of nights of year to help area children who are less fortunate.

"They set up a schedule then call to remind you (the dentists) a week or so before you are supposed to be there," said Wilkerson. "I had forgotten it was my week when they called. I had to find someone to give my George Strait tickets to."

That's dedication in just about any West Texan's book.

"We take turns being clinic advisor," Barroso said. "I think this is my second time to do it," adding that the advisor is there to help the Junior League members with any problems that might come up. "They might have a question, but usually it is not a difficult job."

Barroso is reaching the end of his 13th year as a volunteer to the clinic. When he first began practicing in Midland, "I worked with Dr. Rusk and he told me about it. I think all the dentists at the time were involved, so I said I'd help out. But once you get started and you see how much it benefits the kids, you're hooked."

During each clinic session, there are five League members scheduled to assist the dentists with the administrative duties, both before and during the office visit.

"I think the volunteer spirit shown by these Junior League ladies and the dentists involved is just wonderful," Barroso said. "If we could see something like this in all areas of health care, we'd all be better off."

"I want to see the program continue with the help of the volunteer dentists in Midland," Ms. Doggett said. "I know there are many school children who need the service."

"The school nurses have identified 750 to 1,000 children in the schools who are need of dental services, but the clinic has only been able to serve about 300 children a year," Ms. Cordes-Pitts said.

THE CLINIC was closed the third week of each month due to Junior League meetings; therefore, Ms. Cordes-Pitts said they hope to be able to increase the number of children served by the program to around 500 by maintaining a more regular schedule.

"We plan to have the clinic open every week, so we believe that will help increase the number of children we can help," Ms. Cordes-Pitts said. "If possible, we would like to expand the clinic to include a morning session too. At one time, the League had a morning schedule one day a week. But they had a hard time getting volunteers for that shift, so it was canceled.

"But it was a well-received time, so we hope to find the volunteers to have a morning clinic as well," she said.

During the summer, Ms. Doggett will be contacting dentists asking for them to volunteer, as well as be looking for volunteers to help with the jobs formerly performed by Junior League members.

"We are planning on forming a Dental Advisory Committee with Dinah and some of the dentists to plan the future of the Children's Dental Clinic," Ms. Cordes-Pitts said.

Part of the planning will include funding for the clinic.

"Junior League has pledged $30,000 to us and they have a $35,000 challenge grant from the Abell-Hanger Foundation they are trying to match," Ms. Cordes-Pitts said. Beyond that, the clinic will be funded through grants and donations. "Funding allowed, we hope to expand. In the future, we hope to be able to hire a dentists who can take care of the more difficult cases, but still use the volunteers for the routine work."

THE CHILDREN'S Dental Clinic will remain at its present location, at Casa de Amigos, 1101 E. Garden Lane. The equipment used by the volunteer dentists was purchased by the Junior League and it will be donated to Casa for the continuation of the program when the League turns over its responsibilities.

The funds for the clinic will be used to pay the salary of the coordinator, the operation expenses of the office, clerical and administrative work, dental supplies and the maintenance of the dental equipment.

Currently, supplies have been purchased by the League or donated by dental supply companies or local dentists.

While several local dentists give up a few evenings to volunteer for the clinic, some dentists help out in other ways.

"I've adopted a few of the kids that I continue to see in my office — without pay. Sometimes the problem is causing pain, or the procedure will take too long to complete in the short time we have at the clinic," Wilkerson said. "So I continue to see them until we can fix what's wrong, and I know I'm not the only one who does this."

"A few of the doctors may not volunteer to work at the clinic, but there are specialists who will take a patient from a referral from the Children's Clinic and treat them free of charge," Barroso said. "And when there is a problem with an adult tooth that is abscessed that will call for multiple visits or something like that, some of the dentists will agree to finish the treatment as needed in their office."

SOME OF THE dentists have made donations to clinic as well. In June 1954, the clinic was located in Midland Memorial Hospital, and the hospital, the City-County Health Unit and the local dentists helped with the supplies.

While the clinic was being remodeled in 1957, several dentists offered their personal offices in order for the clinic to continue serving the children. A new dental chair and equipment was brought to the clinic in 1976 courtesy of Dr. Vincent Bash.

Other equipment and supplies have been donated by dentists and other health professionals throughout the years.

However, the dentists agree that a toothbrush used properly can be one of the best pieces of equipment a child can have. To help the children who come to the Children's Dental Clinic learn proper dental hygiene, education is a priority at the clinic. The volunteers take time to show the children the proper way to brush and care for their teeth in order to promote healthier teeth for their patients in the future.

"If there is a negative side to this, it's that a few of the parents or the kids don't respect what's being offered to them. The people who receive care are blessed by it. They should take care of it and keep their appointments," Wilkerson said.

In addition to the Children's Dental Clinic, there is a dental hygiene program for adults.

Once a week, Casa transports 10-12 adults by van to Howard College School of Dental Hygiene in Big Spring where they receive a free dental hygiene cleaning by the students of the school.

"There are 12 students in their program. This gives them practice and provides our adults with a service that is needed," Ms. Cordes-Pitts said. "Dr. (Alice) Haynes (director of the Dental Hygiene School) has been very helpful in this program."

"I pre-screen all of the adults and determine who are the neediest for the program," Ms. Doggett said in Casa's newsletter. "So many adults have not taken proper care of their teeth and need to have them cleaned."

The goal of the program is both preventative as well as educational.

Turmoil in Mexico shouldn't stop travelers' vacation plans

By Dudley Althaus
N.Y. Times News Service

MEXICO CITY — What with an indigenous uprising, an assassination and an increasingly contentious election year, this is a good time to forgo that vacation to Mexico, right?

Not quite.

This undoubtedly is the most turbulent political year in Mexico since the 1920s. First, there was the bloody indigenous uprising in the southernmost state of Chiapas, then the assassination of Luis Donaldo Colosio, the ruling party's presidential candidate.

But the action is taking place in relatively isolated corners of the country or among a small circle of the country's political leadership. The trouble hasn't affected the beaches, the mountains or the ancient ruins that attract most tourists to Mexico.

And now, with the long overdue devaluation of the peso — the Mexican currency has dropped more than 7 percent against the dollar in recent months — Mexico may be cheaper than it's been in years.

A lot of tourists already seem to know that.

Resorts were packed for Easter Week vacation, which began just a week after the assassination of Colosio, the ruling-party candidate who was all but certain to be elected president in August. Not all were foreign visitors; traditionally, any Mexican with the means leaves the country's cities that week for the beaches or for family visits in the provinces.

Tourism dropped dramatically in the southern state of Chiapas, however, following the Jan. 1 uprising of the mostly Maya Indian Zapatista National Liberation Army.

The Zapatistas, whose uprising left at least 140 dead according to government figures (human rights groups say the toll was much higher) are demanding more land, health services, education and democracy for their own communities and the rest of Mexico's poor farmers.

Marching into the main square of San Cristobal de las Casas just after midnight on New Year's Day, the Zapatistas startled and frightened the hundreds of tourists who were in town to enjoy the holiday. Although the rebels set about burning the city hall and other government offices, they were invariably polite to the tourists.

More worrisome was the arrival several days later of thousands of heavily armed Mexican paratroopers. The troops occupied San Cristobal for weeks, setting up machine gun and mortar positions in the plaza and roadblocks on the edge of town.

Although the soldiers were usually polite, if not overly friendly, their very presence was intimidating for tourists.

Violence has not occurred near the city since the first week of January. Still, San Cristobal has yet to recover its tourism business, hotel managers say.

Mothers of AIDS victims seek action, support

By Georgia Dullea
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Downstairs, the mothers of adult children with AIDS talked of doctors, drug trials and T-cell counts. Upstairs, the mothers whose children had died of the disease talked of cremations, burials and patches on a memorial quilt.

When they were not talking, they were weeping, upstairs and downstairs, on those Tuesday nights in the small brick building in New York City's Greenwich Village.

The saddest nights were the ones just after a death. Leaving the downstairs group, the grieving mother would climb a steep, narrow flight of stairs with a dim light at the top, to join the others.

"The stairs symbolized what they were experiencing, the separation of the living and the dead," said Barbara Fried, a social worker who became a facilitator for the upstairs group after losing a son to AIDS.

For Eileen Mitzman, "walking upstairs for the first time felt like going to the showers at Auschwitz." For Rhea Parham, knowing there were friends "up there" who had been through the same pain and survived, made the journey easier. For Blanche Mednick, who still believed in the myth of the magical mother, as the social workers call it, there was anger on every step.

"The magical mother is the healer who can cure every illness," Ms. Mednick said at a recent gathering of upstairs mothers. "When Brian died — and this is so peculiar — I was angry with the mothers downstairs. I knew one magical mother could not cure him, but somewhere in the back of my mind was the thought that 10 magical mothers would help me save my child."

SINCE 1986, when the mothers began meeting, almost 300 of them have passed through these support groups, which are sponsored by the People With AIDS Coalition of New York. On the second anniversary of the original group, Florence Rush wrote about it in the coalition's newsletter:

"We are the mothers of adult people with AIDS. We range in age from 40 to over 80. We are working-class, white-collar, business and professional women. We are widowed, divorced and married. We are black, white, Hispanic, Catholic, Jewish and Protestant. Our sons and daughters, gay and straight, have AIDS, and that is all that matters. All differences dissolve."

While the mothers are no less diverse today, they are growing more and more political as the AIDS crisis deepens. Some mothers have lost more than one child to the disease. And some, like Ms. Rush, have found themselves nursing a gay son's lover, along with the son. "His own parents abandoned him," she said. "They said, 'You made your bed; now go lie in it.'"

At times, these mothers bring to mind the Argentine women who held up pictures of their lost children, "the disappeared ones," outside the presidential offices in Buenos Aires after the so-called Dirty War of the 1970s.

TRAVELING IN small groups, with framed photos of their children, living and dead, the AIDS mothers have been lobbying in Albany, N.Y., and Washington for the last two years. Ms. Mitzman's technique is to set a picture of her dark-haired daughter, Marni, who was 26 when she died in 1991, on legislators' desks, near their family photos.

"That's the only way to get to them," she said. "For 12 years, they couldn't identify with anyone with AIDS. It wasn't their disease, so they did nothing. Now, we show them pictures of children who look like their children, and they gulp."

At the moment, the women are caught up in a Mother's Day card campaign organized by a national group, Mothers' Voices, that many of them belong to. Last year, drawing on a network of religious and educational groups around the country, the campaign collected 500,000 signatures on special greeting cards for members of Congress.

This year, the goal is one million signatures, and the plan is to truck the signed cards from the New York offices of Mothers' Voices to Washington, where they will be delivered by teams of mothers. The message: "Mother's Day can never be the same until there is a cure for AIDS."

AIDS: Mothers become activists

(From 3F)

"Activism provides an outlet for some of the anxiety and loss of control they feel," said Susan Katz, a social worker whose brother died of AIDS. "It allows them to do something constructive about a process that is deconstructing."

AS THE FACILITATOR for the downstairs mothers for three years, Ms. Katz has met many of their children and observed how both generations deal with the disease. "Some mothers go right into activism, others try to do the best they can with the illness, and others succumb to it," she said. "There's usually a parallel between the way the mother responds and the way the child responds."

The mothers who become advocates are not necessarily the ones who call themselves feminists or the ones who took to the streets during the war in Vietnam. "Some of them are ladies who lunch," Ms. Katz said.

But first they march. Carrying a 15-foot banner with "Mothers' Voices" in blue, the mothers joined several other groups outside City Hall one morning last month in a demonstration against a proposal to eliminate or drastically cut the city's Division of AIDS Services.

"They say cut back!" chanted the young marshals from Act Up.

"We say fight back!" chanted the middle-aged mothers.

The two groups bonded last January when they argued on the same side in a stormy debate before the New York City Board of Education concerning condom distribution in high schools.

"After that, the mothers began attending our meetings," said Tom Beer of Act Up, the AIDS advocacy and protest group. "They got a wild and popular reception."

NOW THE MOTHERS call themselves "Act Up in sheep's clothing," and one of them wears an Act Up T-shirt to the office, under her cashmere sweater.

A week after the City Hall protest, the mothers were out again. Carrying small white candles, they marched across the Brooklyn Bridge in a larger protest against cuts in AIDS services. The march, which tied up rush-hour traffic, resulted in the arrests of 47 demonstrators, including two upstairs mothers.

That night the mothers' telephone chain rang with the news: "Connie and Barbara were booked and released. They got to keep the plastic handcuffs."

The women no longer meet in the brick building in Greenwich Village. The People With AIDS Coalition moved to new quarters in the Chelsea section of New York City last month, and the downstairs mothers followed. The upstairs mothers are meeting at Ms. Rush's apartment.

There are no more physical stairs to climb, just psychological ones every bit as steep. This may be why the women still speak of themselves as upstairs or downstairs mothers. And why — though they march and lobby and work together on the coalition's help line for mothers — when the time comes to talk about the children, the two groups must be apart.

"The women downstairs, whose children are alive, must live with hope, and the women upstairs no longer have that hope," Ms. Parham said. "What the women downstairs cannot hear is that that hope is gone."

ONE THING THAT separates the AIDS mothers from others whose children have life-threatening diseases is the way the virus is transmitted.

"We still haven't dealt with our own sexuality, with homosexuality and with drug addiction," Ms. Mednick said. "That's the thing that keeps some mothers from taking to the streets or even telling relatives their child has AIDS. They are ashamed."

Even on the mothers' panel of the memorial quilt, the shame is stitched, said Deane Dixon, an upstairs mother who keeps the groups' history. It is a splendid quilt, of a satiny fabric in midnight blue, scattered with 111 stars of silver, pink and gold lame, one for each child. The full names of all the children appear on the quilt, except for six who are identified by first names. "One mother would only put her child's initials," Ms. Dixon said.

When the mothers first began meeting eight years ago, it was thought to be the only group of its kind in New York City. Today there are several mothers' groups, as well as groups for parents and other family members. In each of these groups, there are lessons to be learned about AIDS, the social workers say.

"A lot of what happens is modeling," Ms. Katz pointed out. "In caring for another mother's child while yours is still functioning, going to the hospital and seeing the last stages of the illness, you are learning the ropes, getting a video."

"Of course," she added, "not everybody can do this."

THE GROUP IS where the stories of AIDS begin. "After a child dies, the stories are told and retold," Ms. Katz said. "A narrative unfolds that can be talked about later on. Memories are created, and the bonds continue, and the story doesn't end."

The group is where each birthday of a child, each holiday, is celebrated as though it might be the last one.

About this time last year, a downstairs mother and son got "his and hers" tattoos. She had a red rose inscribed on her left calf, along with his name. He had a black panther on the same leg with her name.

"It was my Mother's Day present from him," said the 42-year-old woman, who works for a dentist in Brooklyn. "I never thought I would have a tattoo, but this sickness makes you do a crazy things."

Her son has not told his friends that he has AIDS. "He says every time I look at my feet I will remember him," she said. "If he wanted me to put a red rose on my forehead, I would do it."

Wedding dresses made to order

Associated Press

The sure way of getting the wedding dress you dream of and getting it without spending a small fortune is to make it. About 40 percent of brides have their gowns sewn at home or by dressmakers, estimates the Sewing Fashion Council. Cost is a factor, but getting custom fit, style, fabric and color also are strong reasons, says Caryl Svendsen Deiches, council spokeswoman.

Some brides, family members, or local dressmakers can design and execute original gowns from scratch. Others can individualize commercial patterns; home sewers can find bridal designs by Alicyn Wright from McCall's and by Jessica McClintock from Simplicity, for example.

A defined silhouette is currently popular with brides, says Susan Khalje, a bridal couturier. "Simpler styles call for sophisticated material. Rich fabrics such as silk, silk peau de soie and satin are ideal when creating a gown. Complemented with a French lace, these fabrics offer simple elegance."

If you're going to sew your own, pick a style that's within your range, the council advises. Otherwise, turn the job over to an experienced dressmaker; a fabric store or tailor is a good source for referrals to those who specialize in bridal wear.

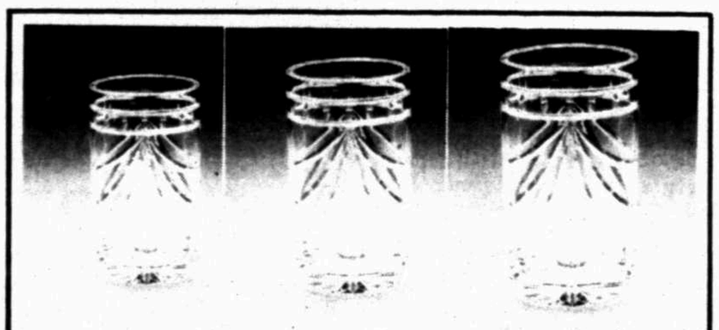

For a copy of "Wedding Belles," a brochure about making your own wedding gown, send $1 to The Sewing Fashion Council, P.O. Box 650, Madison Square Garden Station, New York, N.Y. 10159-0650.

DEAR ABBY

Passing of church plate is no time to make change

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You really bombed with your advice to Caroline Dell about making change from the offering plate at church.

Van Buren

Good grief, Abby, when people know they are going to church, they should come prepared with money for the offering. If they really did forget, rather than making change, they should bring a little extra the following Sunday.

When people start digging around in the collection basket, they leave themselves open for suspicion. Why start a precedent by taking money out? It will only tempt someone less honest to do something crooked.

Here's another alternative: I know a man who contributes generously at the end of the year in one lump sum. — CHURCHGOER

DEAR CHURCHGOER: While the person who gives to the church once a year may be very generous, those who see him passing the basket without putting anything in may assume he's giving nothing, which is a poor example to set for others.

DEAR ABBY: My youngest brother died from a slip and fall in his own bathroom — hitting his head on the edge of the tub. This happened two days before his 33rd birthday. He left a wife and two sons, 5 and 7 years old.

For the viewing, he was nicely dressed, and his head was resting on a pillow. He looked so peaceful — as though he was sleeping.

I had my camera with me and took 10 instant photos of him. Some family members said they thought it was disgusting.

Abby, I'm sure other people have taken pictures of a deceased loved one laid out.

What is your opinion of this? Also, maybe others will write in and back me up. — BIG BROTHER TOM

DEAR TOM: One last picture is often important to a survivor, as it apparently was with you, and I have no criticism of that.

However, it might have been better had you arrived earlier and taken your pictures privately to avoid offending those with different ideas of respect for the deceased.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for the many columns you have written concerning bicycle safety. Please continue to stress the importance of wearing a helmet.

Here in California, starting Jan. 1, 1994, all children under 18 are required by law to wear an approved safety helmet when riding a bicycle on public streets or trails. In 1995, violators will be fined.

We at the Centre for Neuro Skills know what happens when helmets are not worn. We also know that helmets can reduce the risk of severe brain injury. Even a minor head injury can lead to problems with learning and memory. And severe brain injuries can result in death.

Abby, please continue to tell your readers: Wear a helmet! — MARK J. ASHLEY, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, CENTRE FOR NEURO SKILLS, BAKERSFIELD, CALIF.

Chiropractic
It Should Be Your Choice

Today there are powerful forces at work trying to limit your choice of a doctor by discrediting or misrepresenting chiropractic care.

What is Chiropractic?
Chiropractic is a natural method of health care that does not require drugs or surgery. Chiropractic's prime objective is to keep the spine and nervous system free of irritation so that the body can function at it's maximum capacity without pain.

Is Chiropractic Care Safe?
Absolutely. Chiropractic is one of the safest forms of health care for you and your family. In addition to undergraduate training, doctors of chiropractic receive a four-year, post-graduate degree at a state accredited college and are licensed by the state of Texas. Because doctors of chiropractic do not use drugs and are conservative in their approach to treatment, their malpractice insurance rates are among the lowest of any doctors.

Is There Any Scientific Proof Chiropractic Works?
You bet there is. Nearly every study conducted in the last 20 years comparing chiropractic to traditional medical care confirms chiropractic's efficacy, cost saving and patient satisfaction ratings. A recent study by a team of Canadian health economists reported "the best clinical studies show spinal manipulation by chiropractors is more effective, safer and more cost-effective than other treatments for lower back pain."

Why Is Chiropractic So Controversial?
Mainstream chiropractic care isn't controversial. Doctors of Chiropractic have been treating patients since 1895. News reports focusing on experimental or unorthodox treatments employed by only a few chiropractors do not reflect the mainstream Chiropractic care received by millions of satisfied patients around the world.

To truly implement health care reform, we will need to turn to the most cost-effective means of treatment for many conditions that are now treated with drugs and surgery. Powerful special interests are anxious to discredit or misrepresent chiropractic care because of its growing acceptance by millions of Americans.

You and your family should have the right to choose safe, drug free chiropractic care.

Book: For employees, it's the little things that count

By Barbara Presley Noble
N.Y. Times News Service

You might think a man who could write a book called "1,001 Ways to Reward Employees" would have put what most people would consider the most obvious — more money — at the top of the list.

Actually Robert Nelson thought of that, and rejected it. "Most managers think it's just money," said Nelson, a management consultant now traveling around the country touting "1,001 Ways." "Most people won't start with that. They want appreciation. They want to know what's going on with their job and how they're doing."

Nelson's new book, from Workman Publishing in New York, bears a family resemblance to another Workman product, the design-and-graphics-intensive Silver Palate cookbook series.

It documents the ways in which companies can make their employees feel appreciated, from having a chief executive stop by to pay compliments for good work to giving everyone, including receptionists, a business card to featuring workers in commercials or giving them a car.

NELSON SAYS some managers will be able to apply the suggestions simply to patting employees on the back. But some, he hopes, will be able to appropriate one reward and develop it into a new management style at their companies.

Rewards, Nelson notes, aren't meant to replace increasingly-hard-to-come-by raises, and in fact they serve quite a different purpose. The continuing reorganization of corporate America has taken a toll on more than those who lost their jobs.

It has left behind people struggling to do more with fewer resources and less time. Whole layers of middle management have been stripped away and either not replaced or replaced by technology. Managers spend even less time with employees, and yet many companies are encouraging their workers to show more initiative, to become, as the buzzword puts it, "empowered."

What gets lost in trying to keep up with the pace of an accelerating treadmill, Nelson believes, is the civility of the workplace. Managers are more likely to take time to deliver criticism than praise. Many reserve praise for the annual performance review.

"If the only feedback is when they mess up," Nelson said, "that takes a toll over time. It needs to be done every day, not once a year."

TREATING EMPLOYEES with respect is particularly important in organizations that have suddenly caught onto customer satisfaction as a strategic goal. "If you're treating employees badly, eroding their self-esteem, they'll turn around and do that to customers," he said.

Nelson, 38, a management trainer with Blanchard Training and Development in San Diego, collected the suggestions in the book by sending out questionnaires to 1,500 companies and asking some of Blanchard's clients.

The companies responded with descriptions of programs that fall into several categories, from informal "no-cost recognition" to traditional cash incentive or prize awards to employee stock options.

Some managers have resisted Nelson's advice, on the ground that it is simplistic. "When I ask them 'Why don't you do this,' they say, 'because it is simple: solutions to problems need to be complex,'" he said.

NELSON ACKNOWLEDGES that the idea of showing appreciation to employees isn't exactly rocket science. And unlike plans to re-engineer or shift a company to a total-quality management model, which require organization-wide commitments and hordes of costly consultants, incentive programs are usually inexpensive and can be introduced into a company by one manager, who may be able to nurture it into a formal program.

The reward-and-incentive approach is not universally loved. Alfie Kohn complained in the Harvard Business Review last year that reward-and-incentive systems are manipulative and oriented toward short-term gains, that they can easily be perceived as punishment and that they encourage workers not to take risks and thus undermine creativity.

Not only is Nelson unsympathetic to that approach, he can work himself up into a positively patriotic sweat about the value of soliciting opinions from the employees closest to the company's frontlines and rewarding them when the opinions turn out to be useful.

"No one likes hearing about the Japanese anymore," he said. "The average Japanese worker gets 167 suggestions implemented each year. The average American worker has 1.3 suggestions implemented," he said.

THE NUMBERS, he believes, provide evidence that American companies simply don't know how to inspire their workers to work an economic miracle.

"We tell workers just do the job you're told to do," he said, warming to his subject. "It's an erosion of the American spirit of enterprise. If workers don't care about their jobs and managers don't care about their employees' contributions, we have unplugged the formula that made America great."

But can giving someone three pints of free ice cream, as Ben and Jerry's does, according to the book, help revive the American spirit? If so, the solution to America's problems may indeed be deliciously simple.

AT WIT'S END

TV's wretched excess is becoming the norm

By Erma Bombeck

If you gave a party and invited Andrew Dice Clay, Eddie Murphy, Howard Stern and Sandra Bernhard, the chances are real good you wouldn't sit around all night reading Robert Frost poetry out loud.

Bombeck

If you invite Madonna to be on your late-night TV show, you don't have to be too swift to know that she isn't there to talk about how the Waltons changed her life.

To believe David Letterman was shocked beyond belief is a stretch. Is there anyone in the free world who has not followed Madonna's excesses? She is a staple in America's junk food diet for the mind.

During the Christmas season, the Postal Service offered a choice to customers of a secular stamp or one honoring the birth of our Lord with baroque artwork of the Virgin Mary.

A middle-aged woman approached the clerk and was asked if she wanted the secular stamp or the Madonna. The woman's face clouded. "Oh no! Don't tell me they now have that awful woman on a stamp too!"

The problem with all those people in the first and second paragraphs is that they have a language problem. They speak profane fluently. That's all they speak. If they were to appear on "Wheel of Fortune" and Vanna gave them a chance to buy a vowel, they wouldn't know what she is talking about.

They form entire sentences by stringing together nouns. Sometimes, they use them as adjectives or verbs. Since there are fewer than 20 vulgar nouns, they have to repeat a lot. When there are enough bleeps to sound like a roomful of beepers, they resort to body language.

I don't know when language pollution of our air became a breathing problem. I only know that it has flourished in the '80s and '90s. Small children have the mouths of sewers, TV sitcoms get more daring with each episode, and you can no longer send grandma out for popcorn during a movie when the language is obscene or you would forget what she looks like.

There's a seductive curiosity that seems to follow people who do sleaze to see how far they will go. It's the same mentality that watches the Indy 500 to see who crashes into the wall or ice skating at the Olympics, anticipating the fall on a triple axel.

Everyone seemed outraged with Madonna's performance on Letterman. Yet she was on every wire service and the show's ratings soared. The shock schlocks contend they have a right to free speech. My mama always said, "You get what you pay for."

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Worcester has rich, centuries-long history

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Worcester, which is midway between Boston and Springfield, was established as a town on an old Indian camping ground in 1684.

It is the home of the College of the Holy Cross, Assumption College, Clark University and Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

During Revolutionary days, Isaiah Thomas published the Massachusetts Spy newspaper here, encouraging the move toward independence.

In 1828, a canal connected Worcester with Narragansett Bay, and the city grew as an industrial center.

Robert H. Goddard, the father of modern rocketry and space flight, was born here and conducted his first scientific experiments with rockets in Worcester.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Some trees are well suited to West Texas climate, soils

By Deborah A. Benge

Benge

Don't let another year pass without planting trees. Don't let the hot summer sun and harsh conditions of summer drive you indoors to crank up the air conditioner. Make your home the oasis it can be by planting trees.

Well-placed trees in the home landscape can make significant temperature differences inside and outside your home. Trees provide shade that can lower your cooling costs during the hot summer months. Trees not only provide shading to the patio, driveway and windows, but they shade walls, roof surfaces and other areas of the home that are blasted with the searing hot rays of summer sun. As a result of planting trees in the right locations, homes are cooler and outdoor living areas are pleasant retreats.

Trees give us much more than just shade. They give us beauty, variety and seasonal changes. Some trees are so seasonal they give beautiful blooms in the spring, glossy green leaves in the summer, brilliant leaf color in the fall and a striking silhouette in winter.

The reasons for planting trees are many. They encourage wildlife, increase property values, can increase trade in business area, filter dust and pollution and give us beauty. Surely you've read or heard the poem by Joyce Kilmer:

I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree
A tree whose hungry mouth is pressed
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast:
A tree that looks at God all day
And lifts her leafy arms to pray:
A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair:
Upon whose bosom snow has lain
Who intimately lives with rain.
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.

Trees accent and enhance the architecture of your home. Planted as enframement trees, they soften the hard, harsh line of dwelling structures. They soften roof and wall lines and extend the size of the house. They can make a house look larger and more interesting.

There are several trees well adapted to provide some of the benefits listed above. Since we can't talk about all of them, let's look at three outstanding trees.

When it comes to big and statuesque trees, Bur Oak (Quercus macrocarpa) fills the bill. This stately, rugged tree is well adapted to the area, tolerating the alkaline soils and,harsh conditions, and being one of the most drought-tolerant oaks around. It has a moderate growth rate when young, slowing down as it ages, but will reach a 50-foot height with good soils and care. Large dark green leaves cloth this deciduous tree during the growing months. These leaves can be six to 10 inches long and four to five inches wide with rounded lobes. Twigs and stems are stout with a few corky wings developing on 2-year-old wood. With age the bark becomes deeply furrowed and almost black. The wood is strong and durable, resisting the ravages of West Texas weather. The acorn is massive for an acorn, about two inches long with a deep bushy cap that covers almost half of the nut. This tree can be difficult to transplant, but five-, 10- and 15-gallon sizes should establish with good planting practices.

If you use Bur Oak in your landscape, you need to have plenty of room or use with a two-story structure or as a backdrop for your home.

Chinese pistache, (Pistacia chinensis) is an excellent medium-sized tree that would fit well in any landscape. This deciduous tree has fine textured leaves that will not shade out your turf and other plants. The small foliage is a medium to dark green and has fall colors that range from orange to red-orange to a brilliant scarlet. There are male and female trees, with the female making a cluster of small green berries that eventually turn purple-red in fall. The tree is easy to grow, tough and well adapted to the area and urban conditions. Very drought tolerant and few pests are two more of its strong points. It does need well-drained soils — if that's a problem, don't plant this tree species. An excellent yard tree, it may need some pruning to train while young. One problem is does have is, it's ugly when it's young and growing in a 10-gallon container. Most folks have a problem spending money on a little tree only a mother could love, but if you will bite the bullet and buy on faith, I think you'll like the results.

Now I am going t suggest a tree and I don't want any ugly notes — the Lacebark elm (Ulmus parvifolia). There I said it. This is a desirable, medium-sized tree that grows rapidly and provides excellent shade. The major problem with this tree is its name — elm. Don't confuse it with the common elm we grow, which is correctly called the Siberian, but commonly referred to as Chinese. The finely textured leaves, branching and bark make this tree very attractive. Leaves are slender and medium green, turning pale yellow in the fall. The bark sheds, leaving patches of exposed inner bark that is slightly orangey-green in appearance. This exfoliating characteristic is very attractive and interesting. This tough tree will grow well in the harsh soils and climate of the Permian Basin. It is drought and wind tolerant and should be used more. I think I'll save the virtues of the Cedar elm for another time.

Find out all about trees — selecting, planting, growing and caring — by attending West Texas Tree Talk 1-5 p.m. Saturday at the Museum of the Southwest. Speakers will be Burr Williams of Sibley Learning Center discussing "Landscaping with Native Trees:" Nick Harrison, Texas Forest Service, "Taking Care of Young Trees:" Charles Allen, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, "What's Bugging Your Trees:" and Walt Wigzell, Walter Wigzell Horticultural Services, "Mature Tree Care."

'That's the BREAKS'

Slice of Texas Toast

Play showcases Midland talent

Pam Six is one of the geishas performing "The Yen Song" to "Who's Sorry Now?"

The stage production, "That's the Breaks" offers area residents an opportunity to simultaneously have fun and participate in a worthwhile cause. At least, that's how some people who participated in last year's show felt. And they're back again this year to bring yet another production to life this coming weekend at the Yucca Theatre, downtown.

"It's a fun way to raise some funds for a very worthy and needy cause," said Big Spring resident Johnnie Lou Avery, president of Avery and Associates. "It's also a way to pull our communities together. We need to do more among our communities to draw closer and have fun together. And so this was one really good opportunity to do that."

"That's the Breaks," an annual benefit for the Permian Basin Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, will be performed at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave. For ticket information call 520-0451 or 550-4015. The production, a take-off of old vaudeville shows, features parodies of popular songs.

"It's also a way to make yourself do things that maybe you wouldn't do otherwise — like make a fool of yourself," Mrs. Avery said, laughing the entire time she talked about the show.

"This last year, I also had a solo. I sang the 'Horny Toad' song. This year, I have a solo, and I'm the coupon lady at the grocery store. This is coming from someone who cannot sing, cannot carry a tune, and I am at the age and stage where it's even hard to memorize lines."

"Uncle Sam's Great All American All-Star Review," better known as "That's the Breaks," was written by Donna Trammell, a native of Denton.

All of the songs focus on different facets of living in America in the 1990s. Some of the parodies include "I Can't Get In," featuring Sally Mogford trying to break into an aspirin bottle, and "Take Me Out to the Mall Game," with six people singing about American's love affair with shopping.

The show is part of the "Slice of Texas Toast" series, which is performed at benefits all over the state. It is designed to showcase well-known local talent while giving people who are not usually seen on stage a chance to perform.

For Dianna Nuss, who moved to Midland 18 months ago along with her husband, Tom, and their three children, "That's the Breaks" provides her with the opportunity to perform in a stage production without having to give up more time than her schedule allows.

"I like to sing, and this requires only two weeks rehearsal,

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARIES

By Sandra Wegner

Besides the striking use of color, the many paintings and art prints on display have given the downtown library, 301 W. Missouri Ave., its unique look.

One of the most popular pieces of art, a large oil of flowers, hanging on the south side of the main stairs was donated to the library by local artist Dollye Ballenger.

Other works by Mrs. Ballenger are currently on display in several areas of the library. Interested library patrons will find them in the Children's Department, the upstairs public meeting room and around the main staircase.

Handicapped parking on the east side of the downtown library has been moved. Due to safety considerations, there will be no parking against the east sidewalk of the library or the future museum. Three new handicapped spaces have been designated on library property in our parking lot to the south and east within our fences. We regret the inconvenience and additional steps, but the traffic lanes in front of the library are no longer as wide as they were. If you have questions about library parking (and many do!), please consult the map on entering the front door of the library.

Have you seen any Prickly Poppy, Fleabane, Skeleton Plants, Primrose or Huisache this spring? You don't have to take the roadsides to see these local wildflowers, they are all in the library and are made of aluminum. These pretties are part of the lovely wreath that the Friends of the Library commissioned artist Virginia Rachal to create to enhance the library clock tower at the top of the main staircase.

Mrs. Rachel made the wreath of aluminum wire and recycled aluminum. She has included area wildflowers, grasses, even tree leaves to make the wreath educational as well as decorative. We invite you to come in and see how many flowers you can identify.

Three pre-school programs remain to be given by volunteer Linda Newkumet. These Monday morning sessions at 9:30 a.m. feature stories and crafts. Dinosaurs will be the theme for Monday's session. This will be followed by Rocks and Minerals on May 9 and Sea Life on May 23. Parents must accompany the child and the number of participants is limited. Preregistration for children 3 to 5 years of age may be arranged by calling 688-8991. Registration for April 25 is full.

The Children's Department Staff is finalizing plans for the summer reading program, "Familiar Faces — Far Away Places." Activities will begin the first Monday morning of summer vacation and continue for eight weeks. Programs, reading incentives, puzzles, games, films and, of course, good books will make the summer enjoyable. Pencil in the library on your child's summer schedule.

FAMILY SEARCH is ready for use at the Redfern Genealogical Research Center of the downtown Midland County Public Library. Featuring the 1993 International Genealogical Index and the New Ancestral File, genealogists may search on CD-ROM these databases of over 200 million records. This information comes from the Family History Library in Salt Lake City, the genealogical research facility of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Ancestral File contains genealogical data submitted to the church since 1978. Searching by ancestor name, it is possible to connect to work already done by other family researchers and find several generations of ancestors plus the name of the person that submitted the information.

The International Genealogical Index is an index of more than 200 million deceased persons throughout the world. One many search for births, marriages or family groups.

Included in the FAMILY SEARCH package is the Social Security Death Index. This indexes persons having Social Security numbers who died between 1962 and 1988. Information listed is the dates of birth and death, the state where the Social Security number was issued and residence of the deceased or where death benefits were sent.

A smaller Family Search file is the Military Index listing individuals who died or were declared dead in Korea or Southeast Asia (1950-1975).

Individuals wanting to know more about the vast resources of Family History Library in Salt Lake City may also view their catalog on compact disc.

Another new CD-ROM genealogy source at the library is the General Land Office Records of Arkansas. These are the homestead, cash patents and deeds issued by the U.S. government before 1908.

ALPINE — Big-hatted, tall-booted cowboy poets and storytellers are in vogue these days. Like colorful and fashionable tumbleweeds, they blow across the West and collect in towns like Elko, Nev., and Ruidoso, N.M., for yearly gatherings.

But of all the places cowboys gather to swap tales and put their stories to rhyme, there might be none better than this West Texas mountain valley town, home of the annual Texas Cowboy Poetry Gathering.

Alpine is special.

It is smaller than the others, which adds something to its charm, and it is still cowboy country. Each March, when the poets offer their verses about wide-open spaces, the listeners have only to walk outside and gaze at the vastness of Brewster County to understand.

When the storytellers tell of rugged cowboys and their derring-do, Alpine can produce Apache Adams.

Not every place can do that.

Adams was born in Del Rio, raised in nearby Marathon, and lives in Alpine. At 57, he is the personification of the cowboy about whom most poets write. He has spent the better part of his life on horseback, and has accumulated enough real-life experiences to feed the storytellers' insatiable appetite.

He saves the best for himself.

After a lifetime of ranching, Adams is now a recognized storyteller. He travels each year to a couple of gatherings. He is always a performer in Alpine.

"The first one I went to was the first one they had here," he said. "This is the eighth annual, so I've been doing it for eight years. They got me to introduce the poets at the first one, and that was the first time I ever got up in front of an audience and said a word.

There are some stories, however, that Adams doesn't tell.

Everywhere in West Texas he's known as the man who roped a mountain lion, and he did. But he doesn't talk about it much. It wasn't, he says, really that big a deal.

"Me and a couple boys who were working at the ranch were riding some young horses," he said reluctantly. "I was riding a young mule, and we were just going to ride out in a circle to exercise the dogs.

"We didn't go a half a mile from camp when the dogs hit a trail. We thought at first it was just a coon, but they really took off on the track. It turned out to be a mountain lion and the dogs ran him about a mile, a mile and a half, before they penned him up on a rock slide that had come off an old mountain.

"The dogs had him bayed up on this big boulder and he was fighting them off. I was afraid he was going to kill the dogs and I didn't have a pistol or anything with me.

"I just grabbed my rope and threw up there at that old cat and I kind of roped him. But when I did, he pawed at it and it drew up around one of his legs. He came off of there just a-fighting that rope like you couldn't believe.

"One of the boys with me, Domingo — he was really a good hand with a rope — got another rope on him and we stretched him out. The other boy went back to the house to get a pickup and an old dog cage. We opened the cage door, took a forked stick off an old persimmon tree and we poked him into that cage.

"It wasn't any big deal. It wasn't like we were blowing out of there to rope a mountain lion ... but we did get one roped."

and it's just two nights (of production)," said Mrs. Nuss, who works for Pinocco's Pizza.

"I can be in a theater production and it doesn't have as much rehearsal time, and also it's a good cause, too, so that makes it even better."

Mrs. Nuss is in charge of the fund raiser's kick-off and the cast party, for which the Junior League of Odessa is providing the food.

"Everybody's been pitching in in the Permian Basin area so it's been great," said Mrs. Nuss, who is one of the soloists in the finale and in a skit called, appropriately, "Fast Foods."

Also returning this year is D'Lane Runkles, the weather reporter on KOSA-TV.

"Every year they try to get the stations involved," Ms. Runkles said. "We had done some things last year. We had sort of a KOSA number with eight of us in it. When this one came up, we all decided to do it again. We have a group number with Kurt Kiser (news director) singing a solo to the tune of 'The Gambler.'"

Ms. Runkles is not new to the stage.

"I was a theater major in college, so I love that sort of thing, and I did it last year and did the Permian Playhouse fund-raiser on 'Dogs.'"

Another stage veteran is Jami Owen, who was in Midland Community Theatre's production of "Quilters" several years ago.

"Any performer loves to perform," said Mrs. Owen, who is spending her time behind the scenes of several local arts organizations by serving on their boards, including Midland Community Theatre, Midland Opera Theater, the Museum of the Southwest and Las Manos. "We have just a couple of days worth of rehearsals, and then we are in production, and that's really a lot of fun to be able to combine a performance and a very worthy cause in one evening."

Others in the all-star volunteer cast includes:

— Dan Anderson, Janice Archer, Ahmad Austin, Peggy Bales, Tierra Barber, Julius Brooks, Cindy Burger, Jane Burgess, Joe Bush, Maxine Cathey, Carol Chidlaw, Barbara Collingsworth, Candi Cooper, Joyce Cornejo, Kathi Craig, Bob Darlington, Danie Dochron, Horace Doyle, Elizabeth Edwin, Eloise Elgin and Paz Esquibel;

Marsha Fairchild, J.D. Faircloth, Juan Franco, Nina Green, Debbie Griffith, Michael Griffith, Vicky Hailey, Kathleen Hamels, Pamela Hamm, Jay Hendricks, Sylvia Hernandez, Donna Herrera, Fran Hillin, Jeff Hogan, Janice Holley, Sarah Hopkins, Millie Howard, Heather Howbert, Alayna Huckby and Lesley Hughes;

Jamie Jackson, Dale Jenkins, Rachel Johnson, Layne Johnston, Sam Jolliffe, Michael Jordan, Crystal Kaysen, Deanne King, Kurt Kiser, Andy Kolb Mike Krueger, Billie Lanier, R. Antoine Lathan, Amber Loftis, Kristen Loftis, Patty Loftis, Bill Maselunas, Carole McCarter, Tom McKelvey and Scott McKelvey;

Twala Medearis, Jacquelyn Medearis, Cheneekwa Merritt, Dick Mocksfield, Vanita Moffit, Sally Mogford, Pat Monacelli, Bill Morrow, Junanne Mosley, Michael Mosley, Kemit Mouton, Officer Alvin Navarrete, Leesa McNeese, Ann Omar, Bruce Partain and Steve Porterfield;

Jean Reddell, Charlie Rentz, Alex Rose, Ed Rowland, Doris Roy, Gordon Schrank, Carol Schrank, Bro Seltzer, Marthana Sewell, Meredith Simmons, Berry Simpson, Daphne Sims, Jimeca Sims, Pam Six, Robin Smith, Sara Spector, Ruth Spence, Charlie Spence, Mark Stroker and Heather Sullivan; and Rolli Taylor, David Thomas, Trudie Thomason, Michelle Thurman, Scooter Tilley, Ed Todd, Jim Uhelski, Clay Vaughn, Bill Warren, Forrest Waters, Marcus White, Doris Williams, Jeffrey Wilson, John Wilson, Ashley Winters, Becky Woodard, Terry Zeigler and Jean Zeigler.

Musical director is Rebecca Sawyer with special choreography by Cherry Jones and Lisa Vaughn.

Mrs. Owen, who talks about the arts Saturday mornings on Kids Zone on Channel 9, also enjoys the opportunity "That's the Breaks" offers for residents to see politicians and community leaders in a different light.

"It's a neat opportunity for people of the community to see politicians and community leaders being silly," Mrs. Owen said.

"It's a great comment on West Texans that so many people donate their time to be in this show," said Fran Hillin, co-chair of the show along with Billie Lanier. "There're over 140 people performing in it, including Midland's mayor, the publisher of the paper, a museum director, several city councilmen, the news teams of all three television stations, girl scouts, a church choir, a college professor, a police officer, restaurant managers, corporate executives — in fact there's probably a representative of almost every profession in Midland," Ms. Hillin said. "The key ingredient is that the show is good, clean fun."

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, APRIL 24, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A refusal could turn out to be a blessing in disguise. Thank your lucky stars! An emotional decision you make in June will work out fine. Blind dates add spice to romance. Children or a beloved pet will play an important role in choices you make next September. A chronic health problem could disappear if you follow a doctor's advice. Early in 1995, take stock of your options. You may not want to make a major move. Travel is favored early next spring.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Barbra Streisand, artist Willem de Kooning, actress Shirley MacLaine, basketball player Rudy Tomjanovich.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A gentle manner and kind words will lighten a strained financial or romantic situation. Communicating a caring attitude brings out the best in others.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emotions run deep now. Your understanding in difficult moments will keep romance alive. Make allowances for any delays. Remember, not everything has to be done at once.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your sense of style and powers of persuasion will impress others, making them willing to share their resources. A talk could trigger some worthwhile ideas; jot them down.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Friendly talks with relatives or old pals bring to light forgotten facts or figures. The pieces of a puzzle begin to fall into place. Someone longs to know how you feel.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A loved one could be giving you the silent treatment. Go about your usual routine without asking too many questions. Communications tend to improve late in the day.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Communications and travel enjoy highly favorable influences today. You may hear from a friend who lives far away. Do not become impatient with a new project.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The door to romance opens wide, and you are more than ready to walk through it. Let your intuition be your guide when it comes to sidestepping arguments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Strive to get on better terms with your partner. After all, you want to have a pleasant day together. Write down your thoughts to reread later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A lively exchange of ideas brings you and a partner closer together. Congratulations on your perseverance! New friends find you dynamic and exciting.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A candid conversation gives you a lot to think about — as it should. Keep an open mind. Let go of those feelings of jealousy before you end up in hot water.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may be in the mood to spend money. If you must do so, buy something to beautify your home. Spending time in beautiful surroundings will give you fresh inspiration.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A good day for reviewing investments. You could also sign real estate papers or have a fruitful discussion with family members. If loved ones react defensively to something you say, try a different approach.

Bill Root's fifth videocassette ("Opening Bids," "Responses" and "Rebids." $39.95. Available from Root-Hahn Enterprises, Box 7205, Heights Station, Concord N.H. 03301) is technically the best of the series. As usual, the instruction, in the world's premier teacher's inimitable style, is sound and to the point. It is based on the common-sense methods found in Root's books—five-card majors, weak two-bids, 16-18 point no-trump openings. Since responses and rebids are the cornerstone of every auction, we know of few players who would not benefit from the sage advice offered.

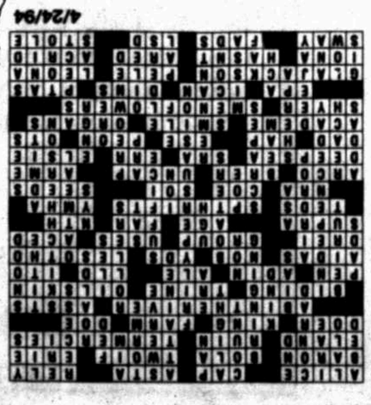

The auction given here won't be found on the tape. It is from a high-stake rubber-bridge game at the Honors Club in New York. North and South respectively were Pakistani internationalist, now New York resident, Zia Mahmood and Jack Dreyfus, philanthropist and founder of the Dreyfus Fund and strong proponent of Dylantin as a cure for many of man's ills.

South's opening bid of three no trump conventionally showed a long, solid minor suit with no more than one stopper in a side suit. North's four clubs was a temporizing move to prepare for his next bid. Over the expected four-diamond correction, North jumped to five no trump—an invitation to a grand slam made with a void in partner's suit!

Since North had to have first-round control of all the unbid suits, South judged the eighth diamond and king of clubs warranted acceptance. No matter what the opening lead, there were 13 top tricks, since the opening lead could force out only one of declarer's two entries to the clubs.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Recital scheduled

ODESSA — Organist Peter Hurford will perform a recital at 7:30 p.m. Monday at First Presbyterian Church.

The program includes works by Cesar Franck, Percy Whitlock, Alfred Hollins, Joseph Rheinberger and Johann Sebastian Bach. A reception follows the free performance.

Born on St. Cecilia's Day in 1930, Hurford studied at the Royal College of Music before going to Cambridge University where he received degrees in music and law.

While Master of Music at St. Albans Cathedral, a position from which he retired in 1978 after 21 years of service, he founded the International Organ Festival. Now in its 29th year, the festival has done most to restore the organ to the mainstream of music-making and through its competition has launched many artists who are now well known.

Hurford's recital career spans 36 years. He plays regularly in the United States, Canada, Australia, Europe, Japan and the Far East.

He is known for his interpretation of Bach's complete organ music, recently reissued by Decca on 17 compact discs. Volume Three of the original series was awarded "Best Instrumental Recording" by The Gramophone in 1979 — the only occasion that this distinction has been won by an organist.

His Bach recordings for the BBC occupied 34 weekly broadcast programs in 1980 and were repeated two years later. In 1990, he completed a new series of eight broadcast programs to celebrate his 60th year.

He has served on many international competition juries, including Haarlem, Bruges, Prague, Linz, Nurmberg, Berlin and Dublin. He has been visiting professor of organ at the universities of Cincinnati and Western Ontario.

From 1980 to 1982, he was president of the Royal College of Organists, and in the same period was visiting artist-in-residence to Sydney Opera House. From 1992-93 he holds the Betts Fellowship at the University of Oxford.

In addition to his music-making and teaching activities, Hurford has many published musical works to his credit, and has recently become an author as well. His book for players and listeners, "Making Music on the Organ," was twice reprinted in its first few months of publication, and now has been released in paperback.

■ Exhibition planned

ODESSA — Big Red's Art Groupies, 122 E. 52nd St., presents "Salon Printemps," an exhibition of contemporary visual art, Friday through May 13.

The exhibition opens with a public reception from 6 to 10 p.m. Friday. "Salon Printemps" will be available for view by appointment April 30-May 13.

The exhibition will include recent works by area artists gary bain, Steve Cochran, Jack Hickman, Delmos Hickmott, Tim O'-Reilly, Barry Phillips the Elder, Barry Phillips the Younger, Susan Randle and Warren Taylor.

BRAG is a non-profit environment dedicated to the support, promotion and enjoyment of progressive contemporary art. For more information call 1-335-6490.

■ Exhibition opens

EL PASO — The El Paso Mission Train Association is opening a major exhibition in conjunction with the Onate First Thanksgiving Festival April 23 and 24.

"God, Gold and Glory: The Story of the Conquistadores in North America," on loan from the Witte Museum, can be viewed at Los Paisanos Gallery in Chamizal National memorial.

The exhibit, which consists of 22 artifacts and documents Spanish domination in Mexico, has been viewed only in Houston, San Antonio and two other Texas cities. Cosponsor is Chamizal National Memorial. For more information call 1-800-351-6024 or 1-534-0641.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Benefit planned

A benefit for the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens is set for 7:30 p.m. Friday at Midland Center.

The benefit, titled "Comedy Under the Big Top," features comedians Alan Thicke and Louie Anderson.

Admission is $125 a couple. The evening includes cocktails, dinner and silent auction. Black tie is optional. For ticket information call 682-9771.

■ Presentation planned

ODESSA — The Kaleidoscope Company of the Permian Playhouse will present "Rapunzel" at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, May 1, 7 and 8 at the Odessa theater.

In this Brothers Grimm classic, a witch — played by Krista Castleberry — takes Rapunzel — played by Jami Martin — away from her parents — Tina Leckbee and Chad Cazee — and locks her in a tower to protect her from the evils of the world. The story that follows incorporates comedy, suspense and action.

Also in the cast are Anthony Acosta as the dragon and Derek Reznik as the handsome prince.

Tickets are $3 a person and $2 a person for groups of 15 or more.

The youth troupe will be holding its special Scholarship Performance at 6 p.m. May 6 to raise money for the Permian Playhouse Scholarship Fund. The $10 admission includes pizza, drinks, cookies, balloons and an autographed picture of the cast.

For more information call the Playhouse Box Office, 362-2329, between 10 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

■ Choirs to perform

ODESSA — Mozart's Requiem is to be presented by the Odessa College Choir and the Community Choir at 4 p.m. May 1 in the Permian High School Auditorium.

Singing with the choirs will be a group of high school students selected for the Texas Music Educators Association Area Choir.

Tickets are $5 and may be purchased in advance at the OC Music Department or at the door.

Featured soloists will be soprano Jennifer Chandler of Andrews, a vocal performance major at OC; tenor Joseph Duerkson, choral director at Crane High School; and bass Robert Stovall, coordinator of music and choral director at Fort Stockton High School.

■ OC presents concert

ODESSA — The Odessa College Concert Band will present its spring concert at 8 p.m. May 3 at the Globe Theatre on the OC campus.

No admission will be charged.

The band will present a mix of music including "Barnum and Bailey's Circus March," "South Rampart Street Parade," highlights from the movie "City Slickers" and a patriotic medley "Red, White and Brass."

Featured soloists will be trombonist Jeanie Lee and vocalist Sherry Talley.

OC band members include students as well as professional and amateur musicians

■ Reception set

ODESSA — The opening reception for the Annual Student Exhibition at the University of Texas of the Permian Baisn is set for 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday.

The reception will be held in the UTPB Third Floor Gallery. Exhibition dates are Tuesday through July 8. The reception is sponsored by UTPB Student Life.

■ Senior recital set

Michael Leung will give his senior recital at 4 p.m. Saturday at Jessen Recital Hall at the University of Texas at Austin.

Leung, the son of Dr. and Mrs. Patrick Leung of Midland, graduated valedictorian at Midland High School in 1990 and is a senior at UT majoring in biology and minoring in music.

He is a Texas Scholar and the president of Beta Beta Biological Honor Society. He is also a member of Golden Key National Honor Society, Phi Kappa Phi, Alpha Epsilon Delta, Phi Eta Sigma, Who's Who Among Students in American University and Colleges.

He will be inducted to Phi Beta Kappa May 1 and will attend Baylor School of Medicine in Houston beginning in August.

The recital is free to the public.

■ Festival planned

Midland's Celebration of the Arts' festival will spotlight all aspects of the arts May 5-8 at Midland Center and Centennial Plaza.

The festival begins with the Arts Assembly's free family concert from 6:30 to 8 p.m. on May 5 at Midland College's Beal Plaza. Performing for the concert will be Khenany, a popular group from Sonora, Mexico.

Next up will be the Preview Party from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. May 6 at Midland Center. The 1994 Distinguished Artist, Doris Spires, will be honored. Entertainment will be provided by "Folks Like Us" and Jack Ingram.

Eight Midland chefs will be serving their specialities as part of the Culinary Art Show at the Preview Party. Guests will have the opportunity to preview and purchase artwork and to register to win Continental Airlines tickets. Tickets are $35 and may be purchased by calling the Assembly, 687-1149.

The festival is set for 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. May 6 and noon to 5 p.m. May 7 at Centennial Plaza, Midland Center and the Midland County Courthouse lawn. Admission is $3 for adults, $2 for seniors, $1 for children 3 to 17 and free to those under 3.

Also a street dance is planned for 8 p.m. to midnight on May 6 in downtown. Advance tickets, priced at $7, may be purchased at Woods Boots. Admission is $10 the night of the dance.

■ Watercolors displayed

Nancy Klingler is displaying her drybrush watercolors at Midland National Bank this month.

The artist is a member of Midland Arts Association.

Among the subjects displayed at Midland National Bank, Marienfeld Street at Texas Avenue, are Southwest and Oriental still lifes, New Mexico landscapes, wildlife and wild flowers.

The work may be viewed during banking hours.

■ Auditions held

Auditions for Midland Community Theatre's production of "Gargoyles & Scarecrow Sins" are being held at 7:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday in the Redfern Room, Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Roles are available for four men, ranging in age from mid-30s to mid-40s, and five women, ranging in age from late 20s to late 40s.

Silver-medal pianist to perform with symphony

Pianist Valery Kuleshov — silver medalist at the 1993 Van Cliburn International Competition — is to perform with the Midland-Odessa Symphony Tuesday and Thursday.

The concerts, which begin at 8 p.m., mark the season's final performances in the symphony's Masterworks Series. Tuesday's performance will be at Lee High School. Thursday's concert will be at Bonham Junior High School in Odessa.

In his North American debut at the Ninth Van Cliburn International Piano Competition, Kuleshov was awarded the Silver Medal as well as the prize for the Best Performance of the commissioned work, "Ghost Waltzes" by American composer Morton Gould.

The Moscow resident attended the Moscow Central Music School for gifted children.

Featured on the Midland-Odessa concerts will be Mozart's Overture to the "Marriage of Figaro," Charles Ives' Symphony No. 2 and Tchaikovsky's Concerto for Piano No. 1 in B-Flat minor, Opus 23.

Concert sponsors include Village Lincoln Mercury Dodge, Mary Frances "Chan" Driscoll and Chevron.

Individual tickets may be purchased at the door. For more information, call the symphony 563-0921.

Childcare
DIRECTORY
As a childcare provider, you are well aware of the vital concern for today's children by their parents and loved ones. For this reason we will be publishing our semi-annual Childcare Directory in the Midland Reporter-Telegram on Sunday, May 15, 1994.
Midland area parents have come to rely on this directory as a guide to good, safe, quality childcare. This section focuses on just that and gives the basic "who, what, where and when" of the quality providers in our area. As a provider you can reach parents with more information about the services that you provide by placing an ad in this Childcare Directory on Sunday, May 15th.
We offer advertising packages that range from 8" to 65" and include not only your advertisement but a photo about/of your facility, a story about your facility and a dot on the area map that indicates where you are located. We also offer rates for an advertisement only without the package plan. Plan to advertise you childcare facility on May 15th. To reserve space please call:
687-8813
Deadline for this section is May 9, 1994

Weight loss mystery puzzles scientist

ADV

WASHINGTON -- A research scientist's plan to end world hunger became side tracked when people eating his "hi-tech" chewable food tablet lost weight. The reason for the weight loss is still somewhat of a mystery, but some results have been significant.

Called Food Source One (FS-1), the low calorie food replacement, developed by National Dietary Research never achieved its original goal of feeding the world's undernourished people, but has instead become a windfall for some overweight people. The revolutionary new formula includes an ingredient so unique that it has received a U.S. government patent.

So why are some people losing weight with FS-1 --- lots of weight? According to Dr. William Morris, director of research and development at NDR, the Food Source One Plan allows you to lose weight without giving up your favorite foods. "While controlling calorie intake is important to lose weight, with the FS-1 Plan there are no forbidden foods", says Morris.

Dr. Morris says that he has received some incredible success stories from people who have lost 70 pounds or more with the Food Source One Plan. One woman from Niagara Falls, New York lost over 70 pounds without giving up her favorite foods which included chocolate, pizza and chicken wings. Although her results may not be typical (individual weight loss varies), FS-1 is a bona fide natural, drug free way of confronting the problem of obesity.
