End of planting nears, hoping begins

By Joyce May
Staff Writer

With the June 20 crop insurance deadline Saturday, some area cotton farmers are planting around the clock to ensure they meet the date and to avoid decreases in their crop insurance coverage.

"We waited until the last minute hoping it would rain," Max Drum said. "Now we're running around the clock.

"This guy's the first shift," he joked, referring to Arturo Guardado, who was busy in the early morning sun Thursday near Fluvanna planting seed in a dusty field.

Fistfuls of powdered dirt blew through his fingers into the wind as Drum demonstrated how hot, dry temperatures and scant rain have parched the fields that last year produced record crops.

"Last year all these fields made a bale-plus per acre. This year, nothing."

Drum added that because of the condition of the soil, the chance of a good crop from the field "doesn't look promising."

"It's going to have to rain to get the cotton up, and then rain every time the cotton needs it because there is no underground moisture."

In another field, however, a sea of green and brown can be seen. Fifty acres of drip-irrigated cotton is up and thriving.

"We started irrigating that land in March and we planted May 11th," Drum said.

The green-laden field was a far cry from its dusty neighbor, a dry, recently-planted field.

But other cotton producers may not wish to hear of Drum's well-standing 50 acres.

As seed goes into the ground, farmers look for rain...

County extension agent Greg Gruben said most of the fields in the area are "spotty".

"A lot of the guys thought they had enough moisture when they planted to get the seed to germinate. They got some of the seed up, but the stand of the cotton has been really spotty."

As for the just-planted seed, whether they will come up is yet to be seen.

"I imagine these last few showers we got might be enough to germinate the seed," Gruben said. "But there is a fine line in there where the moisture can ruin the seed if they did not get enough of it.

"If they just got a little bit of rain like these two-tenth rains, that might not get the plant up. It will all fall back on what kind of condition their land was in."

Doug Foster, who farms near Hermleigh, said the little showers hindered, not helped his situation.

"We thought the showers helped, but it looks like they ruined the seed," he said. "Some of the cotton did come up, but some is dying because the roots are hitting dry dirt.

"After the shower, the dirt is wet right on top and wet farther down below, but in between it is dry. That's what makes it detrimental. We just haven't had enough rain to make the moisture meet."

Added industry will need more waste-water capacity

While taking care of mostly routine matters Thursday afternoon, the Development Corporation of Snyder board of directors stressed the need for the expansion of the city's waste water plant.

In making his monthly report to the board, DCOS executive director John DeLille told the board that the number one priority in bringing additional industrial-type businesses to Snyder is the expansion of the plant.

"We have a 300-acre industrial park, and whether it is Lorber who expands, or we have another business come in, the expansion of the waste water plant is a must," added DCOS board president Roy McQueen.

McQueen said he felt estimates are needed on the costs of expanding the plant, and then the search should begin for grants to finance the project.

DeLille, in his report, added that a firm looking to construct duplexes in the $50,000 price range has been in touch with the DCOS office concerning possible sites.

DeLille also made note of a reception planned at 10 a.m. Thursday for new Midwest Electric Coop general manager Jerry Stapp.

The board, meeting for less than half-an-hour, tabled any action on an industrial propect which has indicated interest in moving a manufacturing plant to Snyder.

"Right now, we don't have anything to take action on," the chairman said.

McQueen presided at the meeting and board members in attendance were Jack Gorman, David Cotton, Gary Landes and Bill Wilson. Also in attendance was board chairman emeritus Roy Baze.

Former resident reported missing

A former Snyder woman has been listed as missing in Midland since April 27, and deputies there have no clues as to her whereabouts.

Daytina Hulslander, who attended Snyder High School in the early '90s, has not been heard from since taking her three children to school the day she disappeared.

"This case is my number one priority," said Sgt. Terry Lowe of Midland Sheriff's Dept.

Legends beat goes on and on

One of the most popular bands of past Legends of Western Swing Music Festivals will be playing today at Scurry County Coliseum.

Dave Alexander and his Legends of Western Swing Band will be on stage at 4:30 p.m. and again at 10:50 tonight.

Leon Rausch, Tommy Allsup and Bob Wills' Texas Playboys will play today at 3 p.m. and again at 9:25 p.m.

Other bands on stage today are Clyde Brewer's Original River Road Boys, Ted Scanlon and the Desperados and Fiddlers Two and Friends.

The event continues through Saturday with music getting underway at 10 a.m.

Ray Price will perform Saturday at 2:55 p.m. and again at 9:30 p.m.

July start...

Warehouse bids in under projections

Although a general contractor has not been selected, expansion of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice warehouse in Snyder is expected to start next month, according to State Rep. David Counts.

Following a meeting Thursday in Snyder involving management personnel from Huntsville, the "anticipated notice to proceed" date for construction remains July 13.

Robin Smauley, manager of the TDCJ distribution center in Snyder, said the low bid came in substantially below the $8 million estimate and that one bidder is contesting whether the low bidder from the Lubbock area met all requirements.

Smauley said the legal department of the contract services division will resolve that issue, but the agency still expects for construction of the 60,000-square foot addition to begin in July.

The current warehouse is 70,000 square feet and 20,000-square feet of the expansion will entail cold storage to house bulk inventories of frozen foods, meats and other perishable items.

Wayne Scott, TDCJ executive director, said construction should be completed by July, 1999, but an accelerated construction schedule with an earlier completion date may be possible.

The distribution center was first announced in August, 1996, but the construction delay has not held up a growth in the number of employees at the facility, the former Wickes building located on U.S. 84.

Smauley said all the truck drivers have already been hired, bringing the total current employment in transportation to 34. Smauley said four more warehouse positions, plus a supervisor are still to be hired.

Full employment of 18 in the warehouse and 34 in transportation will account for 52 jobs. The expansion will net an increased payroll of more than $300,000.

The Snyder facility will be the first regional distribution center for the prison system, serving 22 West Texas units. It is expected to save the state an estimated $1 million annually in transportation costs.

Windham School regional staff, which previously occupied a portion of the warehouse offices, has since relocated to modular buildings at the Price Daniel unit.

Attention now shifts to next big tobacco case

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — With a tobacco deal up in smoke on Capitol Hill, attention has turned to the industry's next legal battle.

This time it's not against flight attendants or grieving relatives of cancer patients. It's the nation's first class-action lawsuit to be brought by smokers, people who blame the industry for their illnesses.

And it comes in Florida, unfriendly territory to tobacco companies.

The multibillion-dollar case, set to open in state court in Miami on July 6, could involve as many as 500,000 Florida smokers, led by Dr. Howard Engle, a 78-year-old Miami Beach pediatrician with emphysema.

They will have the benefit of some of the strongest medical evidence so far linking smokers and disease. And attorneys will be armed with the industry's own documents, forced into the public in earlier cases, some of which seem to indicate a conspiracy to conceal the detrimental effects of cigarettes.

Already tobacco has suffered some blows in the Sunshine State.

Last summer, the state a won an $11 billion settlement over the costs of treating smoking-related illnesses. Then, cigarette makers agreed to pay $349 million to settle a secondhand-smoke lawsuit filed in Florida by flight attendants. And just last week, a Florida jury ordered a tobacco company to pay punitive damages in a smoking liability case for the first time ever.

In fact, only three times in 40 years of tobacco litigation have juries ordered the industry to pay damages in smoking liability cases. Two of those cases were in Florida.

"It can't be a place where the tobacco companies want to fight," said Richard Daynard, chairman of Northeastern University's Tobacco Products Liability Project, a health advocacy group. "Florida has not been good to them."

The sick smokers are represented by the husband-and-wife team of Stanley and Susan Rosenblatt, who in October won the flight attendants' case. The lawsuit seeks compensation plus punitive damages from cigarette makers for a host of smoking-related diseases.

Rosenblatt said he learned in his first trial to take nothing for granted when dealing with the tobacco industry.

"The fundamental lesson is you've got to watch those guys every minute. Don't take your eyes off of them," he said. "They have a bottomless pit of resources. Our pit is not limitless."

Nationwide anti-tobacco legislation perished on Capitol Hill on Wednesday on procedural votes. The bill would have settled three dozen state lawsuits against the industry seeking to recoup the cost of treating sick smokers. It also would have allowed federal regulation of nicotine.

The next state lawsuit to come up for trial is Washington's, in September.

Steve Rissman, senior counsel for Philip Morris, said many of the claims originally brought against the industry in Washington state have been dismissed, making it a different case from those in Florida, Minnesota, Mississippi and Texas, where the industry has settled for a total of $36.5 billion in damages.

Rissman also played down any unfriendliness in Florida toward the tobacco industry. He cited an April ruling by a federal judge in West Palm Beach that threw out a lawsuit by unions accusing the industry of targeting blue-collar workers.

In his decision, U.S. District Judge Kenneth Ryskamp said the industry had become "the whipping-boy of American political discourse."

While the legislation that failed in Washington would have settled the state lawsuits, it would not have protected the industry from individual claims, such as the smokers' class-action or the more than 200 lawsuits brought in Florida by Jacksonville attorney Norwood "Woody" Wilner.

Last week, Wilner won nearly $1 million from Brown & Williamson — the nation's third-largest tobacco company — for the family of a man who died of lung cancer at 67 after smoking Lucky Strikes for more than 40 years. It was the biggest liability verdict ever against a tobacco company, and marked the first time a jury awarded punitive damages in such a case.

In the B&W case, Wilner argued the company was negligent, made a defective product and conspired with other companies to hide the risks of smoking. Those same arguments will arise in Miami next month.

Certain to be key are the industry documents, some of which include in-house research dating back to the 1950s revealing a relationship between smoking and cancer.

AMA wants nicotine deleted from tobacco

CHICAGO (AP) — Saying most smokers want to quit and could do so if nicotine wasn't keeping them hooked, the American Medical Association called for the removal of nicotine from tobacco within five to 10 years.

The 290,000-member AMA, the nation's largest professional organization of physicians, represents about 40 percent of U.S. doctors and is a powerful lobbying force and opinion shaper.

"We know that cigarette companies can remove nicotine from tobacco. They've already done it through a process similar to that which is used to take caffeine out of coffee," said Dr. Ronald Davis of Detroit, chairman of the AMA's Council on Scientific Affairs.

Whether nicotine should be removed gradually or all at once would need to be decided after more research, Davis said.

In the meantime, the AMA wants the government to require tobacco companies to put labels on their products so users would know not only the quantity of nicotine but also whether it is relatively high or low.

The AMA's recommendations, adopted on the last day of its twice-yearly policy making meeting, came Thursday. A day earlier, the U.S. Senate killed a bill that would have created the first national tobacco policy.

"The progress of the nation toward reducing the prevalence of smoking and tobacco smoke exposure appears to be stalled if not actually moving in the wrong direction," the AMA said.

A representative of the Tobacco Institute, a trade association, said no one there was available to comment.

Dust Bowl exhibit will be featured at local museum

The Scurry County Museum is now exhibiting photographs related to the Dust Bowl and Great Depression.

If there is a single experience that joins all senior Texans into a commnunity, it is the Dust Bowl of the 1930s. This is the common denominator of Texas life in the Great Depression, not only for farm people whose livelihood was driven before the winds, but also for folks hundreds of miles east, where black or yellow skies rained dirt through streets, yards and houses, and deposited grit into food served at tables. The devastation of the High Plains turned noonday so dark that people could only see by lamp.

But for the Texans on the High Plains, at the southern reach of the Great Plains, grit and darkness were of less significance than the destruction of their way of life.

Tenant farmers, unable to pay rent, were turned out by landlords. Landowners, unable to meet their mortgage payments, were dispossessed by the banks.

Land-rich and cash-poor, the banks failed, and ownership of the land was further removed from the reach of families who wanted to live on farms. Family farms vanished and farm families became migrants.

In this condition, Texans of the High Plains suffered in common with fellow residents of the Great Plains northward from Oklahoma through the Dakotas. Victims of drought and depression, they were also victims, at times, of public opinion, viewed as somehow having brought their failure entirely upon themselves.

If they joined the flow of families westward, they were detested "Okies." If they moved to town looking for work, they were hicks and hayseeds.

For most Texans under the age of 50, the Dust Bowl, is "history," something that happened before they were born. For senior Texans, however, it was, and it remains, quite personal, a set of conditions and circumstances that changed their lives and shaped their outlook.

Fortunately for later generations of Texans, the Dust Bowl is documented not merely by historical narrative, but by visual images, photographs taken from the historical section of the Farm Security Administration, one of the New Deal programs designed to help farmers during the Great Depression.

Some of the most gifted American photographers of the 20th century worked for the FSA, documenting what people were enduring even as they endured it.

These photographs provoke questions: What became of these people? Did they weather the Dust Bowl and the Great Depression? Where are they now? What did they make of themselves? How did the Dust Bowl affect their view of America, of life, of society in general?

In the 1970s, Nebraska photographer Bill Ganzel decided to seek the answers. Guided by the limited annotations made by FSA photographers, he went in search of people who were featured in the Dust Bowl sectors of the file. Upon finding these descendants, he posed them in positions like the originals and tape-recorded their recollections.

Now a temporary exhibition of these original photographs and Ganzel's updated pictures is appearing at the Scurry County Museum, from now through July 5. This exhibition is made available by the Texas Humanities Resource Center in Austin and supported by the Texas Committee for the Humanities.

Seniors disciplined for prank

EXETER, N.H. (AP) — High school students thought it was funny when about 90 seniors dressed in camouflage and masks overran the school cafeteria, squirting pink and yellow water guns and lobbing water balloons.

But the senior prank frightened cafeteria workers, and Exeter High School officials took it seriously in light of recent school shootings across the nation. Fifty-two seniors were disciplined.

"The cafeteria workers and the support staff were really scared, considering what's been going on in the country," Superintendent Arthur Hanson said Thursday.

The prank happened Monday morning, shortly after seniors were dismissed from school early. Between 70 and 90 students returned a few minutes later, running out of the woods behind the school wearing camouflage and face masks, nylon stockings and Halloween masks over their heads.

They ran through halls and into classrooms, throwing water balloons and "shooting" students with pink, blue and yellow Super Soaker water guns, then converged on the cafeteria.

The other students, still studying for finals, knew something was happening.

"We knew they were going to do it. We just didn't know when. They said just be ready for the water guns and don't wear white," said junior Melissa Bettcher, 17.

Britain gives muted welcome to au pair

ELTON, England (AP) — It was a drama that riveted millions: A baby's death, a murder conviction and an agonizing wait for an appeal verdict.

But the final act unfolded quietly as famous au pair Louise Woodward returned Thursday to her home and a life that has been forever changed.

Ms. Woodward's many supporters here wished her and their village a return to normalcy after her manslaughter conviction for killing an 8-month-old Massachusetts boy in her care. It wouldn't be easy.

Even Ms. Woodward, 20, has said her life could never be the same.

"Of course, not. How could it be?" she told hundreds of reporters in her first public comments since the saga began 16 months ago.

At Manchester Airport after her overnight journey from Boston, Ms. Woodward insisted that she did not kill Matthew Eappen and attacked what she called a "purely political" American justice system. She also pledged to clear her name in the baby's Feb. 9, 1997, death.

Her return to Britain followed Tuesday's decision by Massachusetts' highest court that a lower court judge acted within his power when he reduced her second-degree murder conviction to manslaughter and sentenced her to the 279 days she had served since her arrest.

Ms. Woodward still faces a civil lawsuit filed by Matthew's parents. U.S. District Judge William Young barred her temporarily from spending any money she may earn from selling her story and set a trial date of Oct. 5. Ms. Woodward vehemently has denied having any plans to sell her story.

Ms. Woodward was visibly relieved when she noted Thursday that, at long last, she was back on British soil. But in Elton, there were no blaring car horns, no fireworks and no parades to welcome her home.

A police escort accompanied Ms. Woodward and her parents into the northern England village of Elton, where the most visible signs of support were the dozens of yellow ribbons tied to trees and fences in the village green.

Locals remembered all too well the barrage of world criticism after their raucous champagne celebration when a Massachusetts judge freed Ms. Woodward in November.

The quiet reaction to her homecoming, many insisted, had nothing to do with dwindling support, despite reports of rifts among her key advocates.

During the trial and after her October murder conviction, the British offered overwhelmingly enthusiastic — some say nationalistic — support.

After Sir Walter Raleigh introduced tobacco to England in the 1600s, King James I argued against smoking it.

Judge allows murder confession

HOUSTON (AP) — A man charged with strangling a jogger to death with the laces from her running shoes testified Thursday that his confession was coerced by authorities who berated and slapped him.

Arthur Lee Burton, 28, took the stand in his own capital murder trial. He's charged with the slaying of Nancy Adleman, 48, who disappeared July 29 while jogging along a northwest Harris County bayou.

The defense rested after Burton's testimony and jurors began deliberating his fate late Thursday afternoon.

Burton wept on the stand as he recalled giving his August confession, in which he told investigators in a written confession that he attempted to rape Ms. Adleman but was too nervous to carry it out.

Detective Allen Beall, of the sheriff's department, testified Wednesday that Burton volunteered his confession without coercion. Prosecutors say Burton described details about the crime only the killer could have known.

Cubs notch first-round victory, 9-2

ALBANY — Tanner Reed's curve ball, combined with Jed Martin and Mikey Martinez' hitting, proved to be too much for Baird.

The Cubs, Snyder Little League's Major Division champions, knocked off Baird, 9-2, Thursday night in the opening contest of the County Tournament.

"Tanner pitched one of the best games of the year," Cubs coach Rick Martin said. "He only threw in three regular season games, but his curve ball was working great."

Reed allowed only two hits and struck out five in four innings of work. Marcus Villarreal and Jed Martin combined for the final two innings in relief.

Martin also got the job done at the plate, notching two base hits and a pair of runs.

Martinez capped the scoring in the top of the sixth with a three-run homer for the 9-2 final.

Villarreal and Jeremy Reed also slapped a single apiece for the Cubs.

"The whole team played great together. It was a team effort," Martin remarked.

The Cubs face Eastland at 7 p.m. Saturday in a second round match-up in Rotan.

Stewart makes final charge to lead U.S. Open

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Payne Stewart was the only one who really felt like dancing at the U.S. Open.

The other eight players who managed to break par in the first round Thursday were either too surprised to see their names on the leaderboard or simply relieved to get off the course before it caught up with them.

"Always be satisfied with making par," said Stewart, who speaks from experience of having won this championship seven years ago at Hazeltine.

On a day when The Olympic Club beat up so many others, Stewart was doing a shimmy on the 17th green when a 45-foot putt fell, the centerpiece of a masterful birdie-birdie-birdie finish.

That gave him a 4-under-par 66 and a one-stroke lead over Mark Carnevale. Another stroke back were Tom Lehman, Jose Maria Olazabal and Bob Tway — all past major championship winners — along with Joe Durant, the only player to reach 5-under during the day.

Lehman, who has had the lead going into the final round of the last three U.S. Opens, birdied three of the last four holes, and Olazabal holed a 6-foot birdie putt on the 18th.

Amateur Paul Simson was 2-under at the turn until a spectator ran off with his errant tee shot on the 10th hole. Not realizing what had happened, Simson considered it lost and played a second tee shot. He took triple bogey on his way to a 43 on the back.

Jesper Parnevik, who was at 69 with John Daly and Jeff Maggert, sensed that the pin placement on No. 18 was different than what his yardage book showed, and he was right. The USGA realized the pin was unfair and changed it two hours into the round, although everyone played it the same.

And Casey Martin made history by becoming the first player to ride a cart in the U.S. Open. It could have used a pair of headlights, since Martin's bogey-bogey finish for a 74 came in near darkness.

Lehman was one of many who repeated a popular phrase in majors — they cannot be won on Thursday, only lost.

And several players who didn't beat Olympic didn't beat themselves, either.

Colin Montgomerie never went over par in his round of 70, where he was joined by Masters champion Mark O'Meara, Tom Kite and happy-go-lucky amateur Matt Kuchar.

Those at 71 included Justin Leonard and Phil Mickelson. Fred Couples was at 72, and the group at 73 featured Tom Watson and 58-year-old Jack Nicklaus.

Tiger Woods was cruising along at 2-under, tied for the lead in the early going, when he four-putted No. 9 for a double bogey. Four more bogeys followed on the back and Woods wound up at 74.

Van Poppel called up by Rangers

ARLINGTON (AP) — Todd Van Poppel completed his climb back to the major leagues Thursday, when his hometown Texas Rangers purchased his contract from Triple-A Oklahoma.

Van Poppel, 26, will start for the Rangers on Saturday at Anaheim.

"This is exactly what I wanted to do," Van Poppel said. "I came to the Rangers to start all over. They gave me the opportunity to right my ship. This is the first time in my career that I feel like I can throw strikes whenever I want."

Van Poppel grew up in Arlington rooting for the Rangers. He starred at Arlington Martin High School before his selection by the Oakland A's in the first round of the 1990 amateur draft.

Sele becomes league's first 10-game winner

ARLINGTON (AP) — Aaron Sele became the AL's first 10-game winner and the Texas Rangers took advantage of Oakland starter Tom Candiotti's wildness to end a three-game losing streak with a 3-2 victory Thursday.

Sele (10-4) allowed six hits in 6 2-3 innings. The right-hander issued a career-high seven walks and hit a batter, but hung on to give the Rangers a badly needed boost. Texas starters were 1-5 with a 7.58 ERA in their previous seven games.

Sele reached 10 victories earlier than any pitcher in Rangers history.

John Wetteland pitched the ninth for his 20th save.

WTC competitors closing in on finals

RAPID CITY, S.D. — With the final round slated for Saturday, competitors at the College National Finals Rodeo are making their charge to the front.

Kyle Bowers posted a score of 73 Thursday in the third go-round of bareback riding, powering into first place after three rides with a total of 219. Chad Maynard currently sits in twelfth place in the event with a 147 total.

In the saddle bronc event, Matt McCloy registered a 70.3 on Thursday. The second-best score of the day moved McCloy into third place with a three-ride total of 195.4

Tona Wright has things going her way in barrel racing. Wright took the top spot in the first go-round and second on her next ride, giving her the lead in the average.

The Lady Westerners took the lead in the team standings right out of the chute and haven't relinquished it. Weber State and Lewis-Clark State are giving chase in second and third.

The WTC men currently occupy sixth place in the team standings, but have a chance to move up quickly. Due to the number of men's events, average points have not been figured into the totals. The Westerners will likely move into the top-three before the finals begin on Saturday.

Facts About The BIBLE

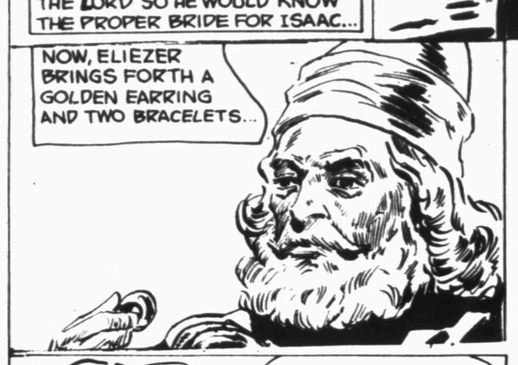

BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Genesis intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times

A BRIDE FOR ISAAC

ELIEZER, HAVING ASKED FOR WATER, WATCHES WHILE THE MAIDEN ALSO BRINGS WATER TO HIS CAMELS, A SIGN HE ASKED OF THE LORD SO HE WOULD KNOW THE PROPER BRIDE FOR ISAAC...

NOW REBEKAH RUNS AHEAD TO HER HOUSE — SHE IS EXCITED, FOR, ALTHOUGH IT IS CUSTOMARY FOR ANY STRANGER TO OFFER A GIFT FOR THE WATER HE HAS RECEIVED, STILL A GOLDEN EARRING AND TWO BRACELETS ARE QUITE UNEXPECTED!

Next Week
A FAMILY COUNCIL!

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Mementos of Wife's Affair May Make Her Marriage a Memory

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, my wife, "Sheila," had an affair that nearly destroyed our 15-year marriage. She carried on the affair right under my nose, telling me she had simply made a "good friend" on a trip she had taken with a girlfriend. At first I was trusting and naive, and then too much in denial to openly challenge the small gifts, cards and phone calls that began arriving shortly after her return. When I asked if there was anything more to it than just friendship, she lied to me.

With counseling, our marriage has survived, although it is still somewhat shaky. My current problem is that after I discovered the affair, I told Sheila I wanted her to get rid of the gifts she had received from this creep, which she had the audacity to openly display in our home. Now she has boxed them up and put them in the basement, but she's balking at getting rid of them.

To me, her reluctance means she hasn't really let go of the relationship. I'm ready to dissolve the marriage as a result. I'd appreciate your feedback.

SEETHING IN SEATTLE

DEAR SEETHING: You have every right to expect Sheila to dispose of the souvenirs along with the relationship. If your wife is unwilling to accommodate your reasonable request, both of you need to reconsider the logic of staying in this marriage.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for all the letters you are printing about abuse. Your recent letter from Michael Groetsch in Kenner, La., about "serial batterers" really got my attention.

I was in an abusive marriage for 34 years, and I know what breeds abuse — it's silence. Abby, I'm not silent anymore. I now work for a women's crisis center, and I was recently asked by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice to tell my story. I was on a victim impact panel for a sensitivity training seminar for law enforcement. I have since been asked to speak at other meetings and plan to do so.

On the door to our office hangs a sign. It says, "There's no excuse for abuse." Those few words say quite a lot. Keep up the great work, Abby. There should be more out there like you.

KAREN IN VICTORIA, TEXAS

DEAR KAREN: You are to be commended for your activism in helping other abused women.

I would like to correct a statement I made in my answer to Michael Groetsch: I stated that the majority of domestic abuse comes at the hands of men who are "unable to control their anger — not psychopaths," and I added that these people can be helped through therapy and anger management programs. I regret to say that I may have spoken too optimistically.

In his book, "He Promised He'd Stop" (C.P.I., 1997, $14.95), Mr. Groetsch points out that a batterer who is motivated to change and feels remorse can be helped. But a serial batterer is generally cold, detached, and does not possess a conscience. Professionals report that therapy with a serial batterer is rarely, if ever, successful. While the habitual offender may enter a treatment program (often court-ordered), he rarely completes it. He generally enters counseling only to manipulate his partner into dropping criminal charges and returning to him. The safest recourse for victims of chronic abuse is to end the relationship, once a comprehensive support system and personal safety plan have been established.

Home health care industry awaits ruling

DALLAS (AP) — Home health-care officials in Texas say the fate of their industry could well be in the hands of U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders of Dallas.

Sanders has heard arguments but has yet to rule on whether to impose a national injunction to stop the federal government from implementing a new Medicare payment system. His decision could come any time.

Industry officials in Texas say if the new Medicare reimbursement rules — projected to save Medicare $3.1 billion this year — go into effect, as many as half of the state's 2,000 home health-care agencies would be forced to shut down.

Medicare is the federally funded health insurance program for the elderly and disabled.

Home health firms provide an alternative to nursing homes and hospitals by allowing nurses and therapists to treat patients at home under the supervision of physicians.

Patients typically are recovering from strokes or surgery or suffer from respiratory ailments or other chronic illnesses.

Craig Florence, a Dallas attorney who is representing the Texas Association for Home Care, said the new payment system drops the reimbursement for patient visits in Texas from an annual limit of about $8,000 per patient to about $3,200 per patient in some cases.

Because the system is retroactive, many agencies must repay the government hundreds of thousands of dollars, Florence said.

"It's a harsh result for the home health agencies but also for the people they care for," Florence said Thursday. "Those most likely to be without home health are the sickest and frailest people in Texas."

Derric Henderson, administrator of Metro Home Health Inc. in the Dallas suburb of DeSoto, said his annual Medicare reimbursement would drop to $178,133 this year from $785,239 last year — a 77 percent decrease.

"I figured I might as well close my doors and declare bankruptcy," Henderson said. "I don't care what anybody says, you can't work under this system."

In arguments before Sanders last week, lawyers for the federal government defended the Medicare fee cuts as a response to skyrocketing home health costs.

Because Congress created the home health benefit three decades ago, the government argued, lawmakers have the right to reduce funding for it or eliminate it altogether.

The government doesn't "believe that the home health industry is being destroyed," said David Bucholtz, a trial lawyer with the U.S. Department of Justice in Washington.

Several home health agencies said they will be forced to close their doors and strand hundreds of patients if the reimbursement system is not put on hold.

Their major complaint is that the government wants to treat all home health agencies the same without regard to the type of patients each agency handles.

Diarrhea may cause mineral deficiency

DEAR DR. GOTT: A month ago, I suffered from a sudden bout of explosive diarrhea that lasted two days. I ended up in a hospital for IV fluids to correct dehydration. I was also found to be deficient in potassium, which added to my weakness and overall sickness. What is a potassium deficiency and how can I avoid it in the future?

DEAR READER: During an episode of prolonged diarrhea, patients lose minerals (such as potassium) as well as fluids. This can result in a marked potassium deficiency, as well as dehydration. Such a deficiency may lead to weakness, faintness and problems with the heart rhythm.

There is really no effective way to avoid an occasional bout of diarrhea, most of which are caused by a short-lived virus infection in the intestine. Everybody experiences this from time to time.

However, in the presence of diarrhea, there is much you can do as an adult to avoid getting into trouble.

First, abstain from all solid food for 24 to 48 hours.

Second, keep up a generous intake of clear fluids, such as water, tea, beef broth and ginger ale.

Third, consider supplementing your fluid intake with a mineral-containing beverage, such as Gatorade. This will supply the potassium that you lose from the diarrhea.

Fourth, use an over-the-counter anti-diarrhea medicine, such as Immodium AD, Pepto-Bismol or Kaopectate.

Finally, if the diarrhea continues unabated, seek medical assistance.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Constipation and Diarrhea." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have emphysema and wonder if taking a medicine called Lung Support would help me.

The enclosed brochure makes the medicine sound like a godsend for people with lung problems.

DEAR READER: Lung Support is an herbal remedy that, its manufacturer claims, will reverse or cure asthma, bronchitis and emphysema. This claim is totally without scientific merit. The remedy is worthless. Don't waste your money.

Instead, go to a lung specialist, who will address your pulmonary disease by prescribing more effective therapy, such as breathing exercises, oxygen, and certain medicines.

GM production plants 90 percent idle

DETROIT (AP) — The silence is growing at the North American plants of the world's No. 1 automaker. And it's growing painful.

Two strikes at General Motors Corp. parts plants in Flint have idled or slowed production on 21 GM assembly lines in North America. By today, nearly 90 percent of GM's production capacity was down.

With the strikes affecting 88 other parts plants, nearly 89,000 GM workers have been idled. That's in addition to 9,200 striking workers.

All of which means the supply of new cars and trucks to dealers is being choked off.

"We're into the summer selling season, the hottest time of the year," said Clint Davis, sales manager of King-Chamberlain Oldsmobile-GMC in Loveland, Colo. His dealership is running low on its best-selling models, highly profitable GMC pickups and sport utility vehicles.

"I don't think there's any way I can overstate the negative effect of these strikes on this store," Davis said Thursday.

While most GM dealers across the country still have several weeks' supply of new vehicles, deliveries of new cars and trucks have nearly ended as the strikes have dried up the production pipeline.

The latest assembly plants to go down were GM's only factory that makes minivans, in Doraville, Ga., and its Oklahoma City plant, which makes the Chevrolet Malibu and Oldsmobile Cutlass. The big Lordstown, Ohio, plant, which assembles Chevrolet Cavaliers and Pontiac Sunfires, was expected to be idled today.

GM had a 58-day supply of vehicles on June 1, four days before the first strike, according to the trade weekly Automotive News. But supplies of some popular models were far lower after unusually strong May demand spurred by rebates.

There was only a 39-day supply of the Chevrolet Tahoe sport utility, for example. Davis said his lot had only a 20-day supply of the Tahoe's twin, the GMC Yukon, and GMC extended-cab pickups.

"We still have a fair day's supply of stock in the field," said Donald Hackworth, a GM vice president who directs the company's North American Car Group. "But the strike is hurting us."

The strikes are largely over fears that the automaker plans to trim jobs or even close the factories. Also at issue are productivity, health and safety issues and subcontracting.

Negotiations resumed today in Flint. But both sides appeared entrenched.

House conservatives, moderates pushing GOP for cuts in spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican moderates and conservatives want party leaders to strip a total of $4 billion from four spending bills, arguing that the expenditures are excessive and would steer the GOP away from its goal of smaller government.

House GOP lawmakers were meeting privately today to discuss the demands. The clash resembles a successful confrontation the same group of lawmakers had with party leaders in March over disaster spending legislation.

The battle is being waged as Congress begins concentrating on its 13 annual spending bills for fiscal 1999, which begins Oct. 1.

Congressional Republicans are sure to clash with President Clinton over his proposals for more money for health, education and other domestic programs, but leaders would like to complete the bills so legislators can go home early this fall to campaign for re-election.

The $4 billion in question, in four bills approved by the House Appropriations Committee or its subcommittees, exceeds spending limits allowed by last year's budget-balancing deal with Clinton.

The money is for fixing the government's year 2000 computer problem, dealing with future natural disasters and exempting millions of dollars in wheat sales to Pakistan and India from a U.S. trade embargo imposed after the countries' nuclear tests. It was designated as emergency spending, which means that offsetting cuts in other programs would not be required.

The unhappy conservatives and moderates say such tactics could lead to more spending being declared emergencies to evade budget caps. They want cuts in other programs to pay for the extra spending, and are threatening to vote against spending bills unless that happens.

"You open this door, and I don't see how you stop it," said Rep. Mark Neumann, R-Wis., a leader of the group opposed to the spending.

House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bob Livingston, R-La., whose committee writes the annual spending measures, said his panel's bills already contain less money than last year's. The 13 bills account for almost a third of the government's $1.7 trillion annual budget.

"They're asking the system to accept too much in cuts," he said of the conservatives' and moderates' demands.

3 arrested in 24 hours

Area peace officers made three arrests in the past 24-hour period, two on outstanding warrants.

Officers arrested a 28-year-old male at 10:17 p.m. Thursday in the 4000 block of College on an outstanding misdemeanor warrant for assault causing bodily injury.

At 1:41 a.m. this morning officers took a 21-year-old male into custody at North Park for driving while license suspended.

A 25-year-old male was arrested at 2:18 this morning in the 600 block of N. Ave. Q on an outstanding misdemeanor warrant for theft of service, and for public intoxication.

In other activity, officers were requested at Cogdell emergency room at 1:41 this morning in reference to two subjects who had been assaulted. An offense report for aggravated assault was filed.

Snyder fire department responded to a grass fire at 6:06 p.m. in the 3000 block of Ave. F. The cause of the fire was unknown and damage was limited to grass.

Republicans predict that smaller tobacco bill will be approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — After derailing the Senate's tobacco bill, Republican leaders predict they will pass a smaller measure to curb teen smoking and drug use this election year and that President Clinton will sign it. He denounced the notion as "a charade."

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott told reporters: "What I want is a result that is fair that will deal with the problem, that will restrict, limit and fight teen-age smoking and, in fact, discourage smoking as a whole. That's all."

Clinton and other Democrats responded with a prediction of their own. They said the GOP's tobacco policy would be a token, "a fig-leaf bill" targeted at protecting the interests of tobacco industry campaign contributors, not kids.

For the third time this week, the president summoned reporters today to hammer the point. "The Republican majority may want the tobacco companies to run the Congress on this issue; I don't. ... I am not going to participate in a charade which provides people with some cover to pretend they did something they didn't," Clinton said emphatically.

"Politicians who don't want ... a tobacco bill) ought to look the American people in the eye and say, 'Look, the tobacco companies have got a lot of power around here, they've helped us a lot and we can't cross 'em.'"

"This will be revisited," said the bill's Democratic floor manager, Sen. John Kerry of Massachusetts.

End of planting nears

Service Agency, concurred, added the forecast is not bright.

"The moisture we have had did not help that much and there is not enough underground moisture. As soon as the roots hit that dry strip, they will die. It doesn't look good," Hefner said. "No one is excited about what their crops are going to look like."

Foster did say, however, he had two places west of Hermleigh that were up and doing alright.

"Some of last year's fallow (uncultivated) land had maintained enough moisture that we have a decent stand over there."

The bottom line, Gruben said, is "we still need rain and more of it."

"If the seed goes ahead and comes up, we still need rainfall desperately because there is only so much stress a young cotton plant is going to take. It needs rain."

Farmers had to purchase crop insurance in March, and in order for it to take full effect, it must be planted by Saturday.

"In order to have 100 percent coverage, it must be planted by the deadline. The guarantee then gets discounted each day that it is late," Amy Hargrove, of Hargrove Crop Insurance said. "But it is better to have it late than not have it at all."

She also said insurance adjusters cannot go into the field until the eighth day after final planting, June 28.

And whether the ground is ideal for planting does not matter, a deadline is a deadline.

"We have to plant whether it is wet or dry," Foster said. "Then all we can do is keep our fingers crossed."

Gruben and Foster both agree cotton farming is a gamble.

"It is an extremely expensive gamble," Gruben said.

"Just a roll of the dice," added Foster.
