

On The BEAM

By J. W. King, Sr.

People of the United States sometimes get agitated and more or less disgusted when the Supreme Court of the country rules on a matter especially if the ruling is not exactly as they think it should be.

I think the daily press of the United States in many times responsible for the people becoming agitated in the way they present the news. It is the duty of the press to keep the people informed but I do believe that on occasion the press overdoes things by presenting the news in the sensational manner they do.

A case in point is the ruling of the Supreme Court on the matter of prayer in public schools. The way I interpret the ruling is that any prayer directed by the state to be said in public schools is unconstitutional. The specific ruling was an opinion directed by the State Board of Regents of New York to be read in public schools of that state.

In my opinion the Court could not have ruled otherwise and complied with the requirements of the Constitution. I have not read the entire opinion but from what I have seen in the press I have concluded that the Court did not rule against prayer itself, only prayers directed by the state (or any political subdivision) to be recited in schools. The Supreme Court is opened with prayer, so is the House of Representatives and the Senate.

Those who believe in God also believe in prayer and I am inclined to believe that members of the Supreme Court had no intention of banning prayer from public schools or anywhere else except on the grounds on which they ruled.

In his opinion Justice Hugo L. Black said: "It is no part of the business of government to compose official prayers for any group of American people to recite as part of a religious program carried on by government."

NEWS OF INTEREST FROM ANSON AREA

GENERAL PERFORMANCE

Crop measurements have been delayed somewhat due to the adverse weather conditions; however, a full crew of crop reporters will begin measuring on July 3. Again, as in past years, you are requested to assist these reporters by pointing out all crops for which measurements are required on your farm or farms. These reporters have been fully trained in crop measurements and their work will be spot-checked throughout their employment to insure correct measurements. Measurements are required on all cotton; designated Conservation Reserve Acres and Soil Bank Base crops on CR farms; Corn, Grain Sorghum and diverting acres on farm participating in the Farm Conservation Program. Please remember that the acres you designate as diverted from Grain Sorghum, Corn, Barley or Wheat may not be moved. Remember too that the diverted acres must be devoted to an approved cover crop unless approval has been or is given to summer fallow the acreage. If you summer fallow and desire to do so, applications are available in this office.

SOIL BANK FARM

Acres designated under the soil bank program may not be grazed or harvested and the noxious weeds must be controlled. The county committee has authorized plowing of the designated acreage after July 1 if 1962 is the last year of the contract. The committee has also authorized plowing a 66 foot strip around the outside of the designated area to prevent the spread of grasses to other land or adjoining farms on all CR farms.

NOTICES OF MEASURED ACRES

Please review very carefully your notice of measured acres when received and contact this office on any questions. Charges for checking disposition of excess crops this year will be $4.00 per farm plus $2.00 for each plot over one. Acres disposed of must be regular in shape with not more than 4 sides (same as last year).

Another in Series Of Research Articles

(Editor's note: This is another in a series of especially written articles telling of Texas A&M College faculty and staff probes deep into research areas, one of the great frontiers. Some of the research results in immediate rewards in dollars-and-cents for Texans, other projects add to mankind's knowledge and provides the basis for further ventures along the frontiers of research.)

By Henry L. Almsmeyer, Jr., College Station, Texas (Sp.)-Cancer in animals is one of the research frontiers at which Texas A&M College scientists are working successfully.

The School of Veterinary Medicine at A&M long has served Texans and the world of learning through its extensive, highly respected program of teaching and research.

The use of radioactive Cobalt in the treatment of cancers of the eyes and eyelids of cattle and horses is among the newer developments at the School.

So far as is known at A&M, the Veterinary Medicine and Surgery Department team is the only veterinary organization using the Cobalt 60 treatment on a clinical basis.

The technique of implanting "Cobalt needles" has been especially effective in treating carcinomas likely to develop in Southwestern animals having little pigmentation near the eyes. White horses are particularly susceptible to this type of cancer.

There was no hope for animals so afflicted until research led to the new treatment. Dr. W. C. Banks, professor of Veterinary Radiology, and his staff have treated 100 or so large animals with wholly satisfactory results in 95 percent of the cases.

There is an apparent close relationship between the animal carcinoma and eye cancers developed by persons in the Southwest-particularly middle-aged persons of a fair skin who spend much time in the outdoors. Radioactive Cobalt also is used effectively in the treatment of such cancers in man.

Another radioactive material, Strontium 90, also is being used by A&M veterinarians. The strontium is used clinically in the treatment of many animals for ocular diseases, those centering in and around the eye. The Strontium 90 is used to remove the blood vessels which have invaded the cornea and tend to interfere with sight. The radioactive material removes the undesirable blood vessels without damaging deeper tissues in the eye.

The annual Texas Conference for Veterinarians held on the A&M campus late each spring is one of the ways in which information gained through on-campus research is made available to veterinarians with local practices. The conferences also feature prominent speakers from across the nation, who bring reports on research elsewhere. And then, of course, results of research at A&M are made known through professional journals.

Colorado City Prepares For Highway Bypass

The Colorado City Chamber of Commerce passed the $7,000 mark Friday in a week-long campaign to raise funds for advertising on the new Interstate 20 soon to bypass this West Texas town.

Faced with the fact that the major cross-country highway, U. S. 80, would no longer be passing through town, the citizens decided to "do something about it rather than roll over and play dead," according to Bob Carver, chamber president.

"We feel like the Interstate 20 system will be attracting many more drivers than the old U. S. highway giving us a chance at a lot more tourist and other traffic. Therefore, we intend to do all we can to stop our share of the cars," Carver said.

In the plans are two large billboards of the 12' by 40' size and six smaller ones 10' by 15'. The theme to be carried out in the eight signs will stress the historical and recreational attractions in Colorado City. The town, built in 1881, was the first major city in West Texas area and for a number of years was the only cattle loading depot between Fort Worth and El Paso.

Two lakes, known throughout West Texas and New Mexico as ideal fishing spots, will share equal billing with the historical theme. "We hope to get the ever-increasing number of campers-travelers to visit our lakes for an overnight stop. We don't think they will be disappointed, and perhaps they will spread the fame of our good fishing," Carver said.

Plans also are underway to equip restaurants, service stations and motels in Colorado City with tourist maps and information. The maps will show the lakes and how to get to them on one side and the historical tourist attractions in a map on the other side.

Wood-framed historical markers pointing out the town's early buildings and sites of historical significance will correspond with the tourist map.

The whole project is a joint effort of the chamber's Tourist and Conventions, Retail Merchants and Publicity committees. The fun raising drive this week has been primarily a function of The Merchants Committee, but every effort was made to spread the support to all businesses in town, according to Jeff Taylor, chairman of the Merchants Committee.

WEST TEXAS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ACTIVE IN SAVINGS BONDS DRIVE

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce, Abilene, today placed its full support behind the U. S. Treasury's Freedom Bond Drive now underway in Texas.

J. Carter King, Jr., President, wrote each member "The Savings Bonds Program is now over 20 years old. We've got a winning team in the program. Let's keep it rolling. There's nothing like it in the entire world."

The Chamber of Commerce President called on all members to buy bonds. "We are not in a 'hot' or 'shooting war', but I need remind you that our National defense agencies are working around-the-clock to prevent our being engulfed in one," he said.

"One of the best things you can do to help keep America strong is to protect your own personal financial security. Savings Bonds offer you an ideal way to do that."

Ed Gossett, State Savings Bonds Chairman, points out that investing in government bonds is more than a patriotic exercise. "It's a positive way of building up our economic strength to sustain the burden of cold war and of strengthening the individual's financial future as well," he said.

"Being a good citizen and turning a handy profit in the process is a pretty good deal for any of us," he added.

THE UPPER ROOM, NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Read Revelation 22:1-7

He showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. (Revelation 22:1)

At the lower edge of a meadow on my father and mother's farm was a small swamp. At the lower edge of the swamp a little stream came out. It made its way down the valley over rocks and rills, through sunshine and fresh air, until it was purified. Joining other streams and creeks, it flowed into navigable rivers on its way to the ocean.

That little stream, along with many other little streams, has been doing its part to help bear up the commerce of the world.

and assuage the thirst of those who otherwise might have perished.

Christ's church is made up of many individuals who are being made more and more pure in the stream of a strong faith and an active life in Christ. Each, joined to others, does his part to help lift the burdens of the world and to bring other persons into the sunshine of God's love, to the fountain of life, that they too may be made pure.

Prayer: Our Father in heaven, thanksgiving and praise be unto Thee for Thy love and tender mercies. Grant us Thy rich blessings that we may become pure and holy and may always be active in Thy work and service as we journey homeward. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

Thought For The Day: As we become more active church members, we become more useful to Christ.

4-H CLAIMS 23 MILLION ALUMNI, HONORS MANY

Awards Program In 10th Year

The 4-H Clubs of America can claim the largest alumni of any co-educational youth organization in the world.

Today's former 4-H members number nearly 23 million men and women, according to the Federal Extension Service. They can be found in virtually every rural community and in cities as well.

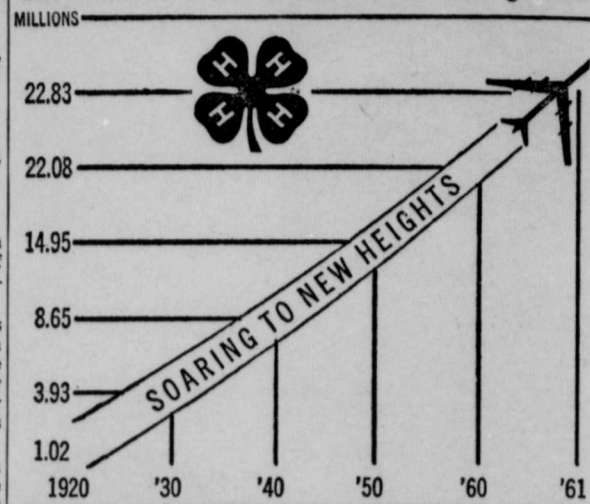

Within the next decade, an even larger number will reside in suburban towns and big cities because 4-H is rapidly extending into these areas as the farm population continues to shrink. The latest U. S. census reports the smallest farm population in history in proportion to the entire population. About one person in 12 resides on a farm.

Awards Given

The national 4-H Alumni Recognition program was launched just 10 years ago when 4-H grads numbered around 15 million. Its purpose is to inspire today's youth by citing men and women who credit 4-H with making a valuable contribution to the success and satisfaction they now enjoy.

Award sponsorship of this unique 4-H program was under-

22.8 million alumni reflect 4-H Club growth taken at its inception by Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation, Chemical Division - Agricultural, of Little Rock, Ark. The Cooperative Extension Service supervises selection of award nominees.

Since 1953, the national gold alumni key has been presented to 80 men and women from 35 states. Several thousand have gained county and state recognition and awards. They represent occupations or professions ranging from homemaker to astronaut.

Candidates may be nominated by anyone. Nomination forms can be obtained at the County Extension office. A judging committee then selects two individuals who best measure up to standards set for meriting county 4-H alumni certificates.

Plaque to Four

From all those receiving county recognition, as many as four can be chosen for the state award. The winners receive a handsome, engraved, burnished copper and walnut plaque.

Eight national award recipients are invited to Chicago to attend the National 4-H Club Congress as guests of Olin Mathieson. Each is presented with the 4-H alumni key during the annual alumni banquet attended by 500 national and state 4-H leaders, educators, business officials and other friends of 4-H.

B. W. Tartt Implement Company

By Vern Sanford
Fishing techniques have been in constant evolution during the past decade.

While spinning tackle still is holding on strong, the current trend is marked by the determined comeback of casting and fly-fishing outfits.

Probably the foremost reason is that those who started fishing with spinning rigs now want to try something new and more demanding.

At first it was thought that spinning was a cure-all for fishing. Now that the picture is clearing it is evident that spinning tackle has a definite place in fishing, just like fly-fishing and casting tackle. But it isn't the all-around tool that will do everything.

Often an angler can take fish on fly tackle when everything else fails. There's something about the colorful little cork bugs and the enticing flies that really appeal to fish.

This type of tackle is particularly effective when fished on small fast-running streams.

But there's one overlooked fact about bass bugs. They WILL work effectively on Texas' deep, man-made reservoirs. And a fisherman hasn't really lived until he duels a pugnacious bass on a delicate little wand of a fly rod.

Many people have the misconception that learning to use a fly rod is a difficult assignment. Actually, the basis are quite simple. Usually a person becomes proficient enough to go fishing after an hour's practice in the backyard.

Unlike spinning or casting outfits, the fly fisherman casts the line rather than the lure. With this type outfit balance is all important, particularly correct balance between line and rod.

All fly rods come marked with the type line they require. However, it has been my experience that these are usually a mite on the light side. It is better to go to the next largest line than the one designated on the rod.

The reel on a fly rod is simply a device to hold the line. The type reel, either automatic or single action, is purely a choice of personal preference.

Fly rods today are priced within the budget of anyone's pocketbook. In years past the custom-made bamboo rods were quite expensive, but nowadays fiberglass rods not only are relatively inexpensive, they also are dependable and cast adequately.

A basic rig includes a fly rod and a level line. But the more expensive tapered lines are easier to cast and therefore easier to learn to use. The difference in price is well worth the money.

A bass bug line, for example, is a forward taper, with the heavier portion of the line being out on the end.

A line to be used in the northern states for trout fishing is a double taper, slim at both ends with a heavier belly in the middle, made to put a fly more delicately on the water on the cast.

Long, tapered leaders, at least six to nine feet in length, are less prone to spook wary fish. A typical one tapers from about four to six pound test where it attaches to the line, down to about two pound test on the tip.

In fly casting the one important thing to remember is timing.

Some loose line is stripped off the reel and laid out in front of the caster. Then the rod is brought back smoothly to the 1 o'clock position, where the caster pauses until the back cast completely straightens out, before he starts forward smoothly. It is best to watch the back cast at first to make sure it completely straightens out before coming forward.

If the line strikes the water back, the bait does then the caster is not allowing the back cast to straighten out before bringing the rod forward.

To become a real good fly caster requires practice.

But it is one of the most rewarding and satisfying ways to fish. Many times also it is the best productive.

There's something about those little topwater bugs and the imitation flies that sunfish and bass can't resist. Probably because they so closely resemble the fish's favorite food.

Anyway, it's fun to fly fish. What's New? — First to hit the 100 hp bracket with an outboard motor is Mercury. Kiekhafer's 1962 line includes an all-black "Phantom" rated as the most powerful outboard motor ever built. It's known as the Merc 100. Despite the new high in horsepower it boasts a new low in weight.

R. H. Venn

R. H. VENN ELECTED DIRECTOR OF HUMBLE

Houston — The election of R. H. Venn as a member of the board of directors of Humble Oil and Refining Company was announced today by C. E. Reistle, Jr., president.

Mr. Venn will transfer to Houston from New Orleans, where he has been a vice president in charge of the company's Southeast Esso Region.

C. G. Herrington, who has been general manager of the Southeast Esso Region, was named to succeed Mr. Venn as vice president in charge of the region and A. A. Diffey, who has been serving in Houston as executive assistant to the Humble board, will transfer to New Orleans, where he will succeed Mr. Herrington as regional general manager.

The changes are effective August 1, and will bring the Humble board membership to twelve.

All three men began their oil industry careers in the early 1930's. Mr. Venn with Humble, Mr. Herrington with The Carter Oil Company and Mr. Diffey with Esso. Standard Oil Company, Carter and Esso were merged with Humble at the end of 1959, when most of the domestic affiliates of Standard Oil Company (New Jersey) were consolidated into the reorganized Humble Oil and Refining Company.

Mr. Venn, born in Pentwater, Michigan, graduated from Wayne State University, Detroit, in 1933 with a bachelor of science degree in chemical engineering, and received a master of science degree in chemical engineering practice in 1934 from Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He joined Humble the same year as a junior chemical engineer at Baytown, Texas.

He became manager of the Refining Department in 1955, was named manager of the Marketing Department in 1958, and was appointed a member of the board of management of the company's Humble Division the following year. He was named a vice president in charge of the Southeast Esso Region late in 1960.

Mr. Herrington, a native of Tecumseh, Okla., was graduated in 1934 from Oklahoma A&M College, now Oklahoma State University, with a degree in civil engineering. After graduation, he joined The Carter Oil Company as a roustabout in Oklahoma oil fields. For the next 10 years, he served in various engineering positions, and in 1944 was named chief engineer for the company, in Tulsa.

He became manager of Carter's Production Department in 1948, was elected a member of the company's board of directors four years later, and became a vice president of Carter in 1954. He was named executive vice president of Carter shortly before its merger with Humble in 1959, and the following year, he moved from Tulsa to New Orleans to serve as general manager of Humble's Southeast Esso Region.

Mr. Diffey, a native of Cotton Plant, Arkansas, graduated from the University of Arkansas in 1932 with a bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering. He joined Esso that same year as a service station manager in Cotton Plant.

Assigned to New England in 1934 as an industrial salesman, he spent some 22 years in the New England Sales Division, where he rose to assistant division manager. He moved to North Carolina in 1956 as division manager and served there until he was named operations manager in New York in 1957. Two years later, he was named assistant general manager of what is now Humble's Eastern Esso Region, and in December of 1960, he became general manager. In February of this year he joined the company's Headquarters staff in Houston as executive assistant to the board of directors.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Bodine returned to their home in Weatherford Friday after spending several days here on business. Mr. and Mrs. W. J. West will move to the D. E. Gunn home since Mrs. Gunn has moved to Weatherford.

FORAGE PRODUCTION CAN BE INCREASED ON ABANDONED CROPLAND
College Station, June 30—There are about ten million acres of land in Texas that should be producing forage for about one million head of grazing animals. G. O. Hoffman, extension range specialist, says this land can be found in the many abandoned fields that were once under cultivation.

If these old fields were put into forage production, it would mean a sizable increase in the income of many Texas farmers and ranchmen. In general, these old fields are producing only unpalatable weeds, brush and poor quality grasses, explains the specialist.

Getting these fields back into profitable production would require a certain amount of money and effort, but it would allow the operator to carry out a better grazing and management program on other parts of the ranch or farm, points out Hoffman.

Many of the abandoned cultivated fields are best adapted to the production of native grasses only, adds Hoffman. Some may be a step to the production of Coastal Bermudagrass, however. Generally old fields west of the 30 inch rainfall belt should be planted to adapted native grasses, while those receiving more than 30 inches of rainfall or supplemental irrigation can be planted to either native grasses or Coastal Bermudagrass.

In order to return a field to profitable production, the operator usually needs to control the brush, prepare a seedbed and plant to an adapted grass, says Hoffman. The steps necessary to grass establishment may vary with the different areas of the state, but local county agents can provide the recommendations for your particular area.
