LAWYERS CONCUR IN HOME BREW PLEA

JUDGE'S PLEA OF WASTE OF TIME IS GIVEN APPROVAL

BEER MAY BE BOUGHT, SOLD OR DRANK UNDER LAW OFFICERS STAFF

(By The Associated Press)
DALLAS, July 7.—Dallas residents may buy, sell or drink beer without fear of conviction under prohibition laws in the opinion of city, state and federal officers commenting on District Judge C. A. Phippen's charge to the grand jury.

Judge Phippen admonished the jurors not to "waste time" listening to beer case defendants. He declared the state makes no financial provision to have beer tested for alcoholic content, the only medium on which convictions can be secured.

No Funds For Test
District Attorney Shelby, Cox and Sheriff Schuyler Marshall, whose deputies have been destroying quantities of beer, both sold they have no funds to have chemical tests of beer made.

Corporation Judge W. C. Graves said he had been collecting fines for violation in beer cases, but that he does not believe the fines would be allowed to stand on appeal.

Assistant Federal District Attorney Randolph Caldwell declared he will not allow city and county officers to file beer cases in Federal Court. He also said that the United States government chemist at Fort Worth will not analyze beer for city or county officers.

Government prohibition agents have so much work to do that they are not inclined to make more raids, Caldwell said.

"When they do," he explained, "our office accepts only complaints in aggravated cases."

Still Accept Complaints
Cox said he still will accept complaints in beer cases but will require officers to note on the backs of complaints that the beer will be analyzed. He said he did not know who will pay to have it analyzed.

"It is an unfortunate situation," Judge Phippen said, "but what can be done? Neither the District Attorney or Sheriff have a fund to have the beer analyzed. When they try a man in my court, for instance, and fail to prove the beer in evidence is intoxicating, what else can a jury do but acquit him."

"It is only a violation of the Dean law to sell, make or possess intoxicating liquor. No reference is made to the term beer. The Legislature has defined intoxicating liquor as a beverage containing more than one percent alcohol. Analysis is the only way to tell how much alcohol beer contains."

PONZI APPEALS FOR CLEMENCY

Asks Governor For Hearing On Extradition and Case Set For Thursday

(By The Associated Press)
AUSTIN, July 7.—Charles Ponzi, "became for self preservation, a fugitive from justice, oppression and persecution," he informed Governor Miriam A. Ferguson in his appeal for a hearing on extradition proceedings to Massachusetts. The Governor set Thursday for the hearing.

Ponzi told the chief executive that his case is mostly a question of publicity with a certain element "wanting to capitalize for political purposes." The communication was written from the Harris county jail at Houston, June 30. In it Ponzi, reputed financial wizard of Boston, said that it was his desire to place all the facts before the Governor in such a way as to obtain a fair hearing, and asked her to allow him sufficient time to present his side of the case.

Wants To Attend Hearing

HOUSTON, July 7. (AP)—Charles Ponzi's chief worry today was whether he would be permitted to go to Austin for the extradition hearing Thursday.

"I have always thought that it was one of the privileges of the accused to face the accuser at any trial," said Ponzi.

His attorney Henry M. Kahn announced that his client would not go to Austin until tonight at least.

PART FEARED AS MOST DANGEROUS ALREADY PASSED

MISSING BUOY AND BAD PILOTING CITED AS CAUSE OF PLUNGE

(By The Associated Press)
NEW YORK, July 7.—The United States submarine S-51 went aground today between the Williamsburg bridge and the Queensboro bridge, in the East river while being towed to the navy yard here.

The S-51 had just passed through what was believed to be her major peril of the journey here, possible sinking again in the deep waters of the Sound, and loss in the swirling waters of Hell Gate. All seemed to be in order for a speedy and safe arrival when the undersea boat went aground.

The most dangerous part of the 130-mile trip to the navy yard from the place where the submarine was raised after nine months submergence following its collision last September with the steamer City of Rome, was considered by navy officers to be the area near Execution Rock. This had been safely passed.

Officers say a missing buoy and the negligence of the civilian pilots were the causes of the grounding. The submarine was listing to starboard as she was towed, but when she struck the rock she was seen to roll still farther over. All that remained in view after the collision was the conning tower on which a flag was flying at half-mast, and the torn wreckage of her bridge, smashed in her fatal collision with the city of Rome.

Probable delay in releasing the submarine from the rock was seen in the fact that the accident occurred at high tide. As the tide ebbs officers pointed out that the water will drop more than 3 feet and it may be necessary to wait for the next high tide to float the submarine.

Crowds on both shores, which were cheering the flotilla's progress witnessed the accident and were augmented by thousands as soon as word spread that there had been trouble.

All the way from Hell Gate, the funeral convoy was greeted by the sirens of Harborcraft, all of which were flying their flags at half mast in honor of the sailor dead.

It was thought there had been serious damage to property and loss of life.

The damage to the tracks cut road traffic between Mexico City and Vera Cruz impossible over the Inter-Oceanic Line, but operation has been continued over the Mexicana Line.

Apparently there has been complete destruction of crops throughout the Mexican plateau and the loss is estimated at from 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 pesos.

Number of Trains and Speed Cut In Half; New Yorkers Resort To Walking

(By The Associated Press)
NEW YORK, July 7.—Father Knickerbocker and family are getting some unneeded exercise—walking.

The cause is a strike in his pet subway which forms a huge H beneath the surface of Manhattan Island and enables the New Yorker normally to get quickly from any part of the island to any other as the result of high speed express and local service in the four track tubes.

The first day of the strike saw the number of trains and the speed cut in half. Doubting whether he could get to or from work, the average New Yorker avoided the strikebound interborough Rapid Transit Company's subways and used other means of transportation including shanks mare. Instead of a step to nearby subway stations, he usually walked block after block to one of the four elevated lines that parallel the sub-

Mesdames W. R. Davis and Parke Dalton, of Crosbyton, were visitors in Lubbock Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Morris are spending a few days vacation at Rudoso, N. M.

Ordinarily the elevated is so little used relatively that the Interborough advertises its merits in order to relieve the subway crush. Hundreds of buses in places saved some residents long walks. Buses and private cars made heavy congestion in some streets.

More than 2,000,000 persons have found their trips to and from business lengthened by anything from 15 minutes to an hour because of the strike of some 700 subway motormen and switchmen for wages of $1 an hour, a 20 percent increase.

In contrast to the number of strikers, some 25,000 traction employes are remaining at work, including those on the Interborough and other companies. One subway in downtown Manhattan and Brooklyn is not affected by the strike.

The second day of the strike opened with the strikers claiming support of the motormen and switchmen on the elevated lines.

FRENCH PROTEST CABINET ACTION

Seek To Cancel Order Against Manifestations of Veterans Over Debt Agreement

(By The Associated Press)
PARIS, July 7.—Pressure was being brought to bear on the cabinet today to rescind its order forbidding next Sunday's manifestation by French war veterans against the terms of the Washington debt agreement.

The Ministers of the Interior, Jean Durand, promised M. Rosignol, chairman of the National Union of Veterans, that he would take up the question with the cabinet again.

M. Rosignol, with members of his committee, explained to M. Durand that the coalition of associations he represented, such as the mutilated, blind and other war victims, as well as simple combatants, had no political purpose and was composed of members of all parties.

The veterans were not inspired by ill will against America, he said. "Quite the contrary was the case. They intended to march in the greatest calm, to lay flowers upon the statues of Washington and Alan Seeger, American soldier-poet, and thus 'touch the American conscience.'"

The subject is likely to come up in the Chamber of Deputies on an interpretation by M. Marcel Henraux, one of the deputies organizing the movement.

Calls for the demonstration have gone all over France, and the leaders cannot stop the manifestation now, if they would.

The cabinet order was published yesterday after Ambassador Herrick protested against the proposed "insult" to the United States, Ambassador Herrick consulted Premier Briand and the managers of several leading Paris banks. Members of the Paris post of the American Legion also pointed out to their former comrades in arms that demonstration as outlined, would have a delectious effect in the United States.

The demonstrators had planned to hang crepe on the door of the American embassy while a band played a dirge over the death of Franco-American friendship. It was hoped that 40,000 would participate.

LOSES GAME BUT PIRATES RALLY WITH MEADOWS TO TAKE SECOND

(By The Associated Press) Joe Bush, the bullet of the world series of 1913 between Athletics and Giants, has started his work as a National Leaguer.

Dropped by Washington recently, he appeared on the mound for Pittsburgh against Chicago yesterday in the first game of a double header and encountered Sheriff Lake on one of the Chicagoans best days. The result was a defeat for Pittsburgh, 3 to 0, with Blake permitting only four safeties.

But Lee Meadows was even stronger in the second contest and gave the world champions a 2 to 2 decision. Three hits was the best the Cubs could do against the bespectacled one.

The Cincinnati Reds required 11 innings to defeat Grover Cleveland Alexander of the Cardinals, 5 to 2. Until the ninth, Alex was invincible, but in that frame Wally Pipp smashed out a home run that tied the game at 2-2, when Christensen scored ahead of him.

Fothergill and Hellmann tried desperately to halt Detroit's losing streak, now run to five games, by hitting homers, but the St. Louis Browns downed the Tigers, 5 to 2. Sinner of the Browns also hit for the circuit.

Ted Blankenship was hit rather freely in Cleveland's last appearance of the season in Chicago, but turned back the Indians, 5 to 0, with excellent support. George Burns, Cleveland first baseman has left for home with a broken rib as the result of being hit by a pitched ball.

The NUT CRACKER by Joe Williams

The chief trouble with Mickey Walker is that he believed all those stories in the newspapers that said he was an invincible champion.

A stitch in time may save nine but it usually takes a 200 hitting outfielder and a bang up left-handed pitcher to save the home nine.

Cal Coolidge is going to pitch horse-shoes on his vacation. . . . There is a growing belief Cal will need horse-shoes before the next campaign gets far under way.

We presume the polite coxswain on a slighted boat will always turn to the stroke oar and says, "Thanks for the boat ride."

It is not true that Dempsey has drawn the color line. . . . He is willing to fight anybody for the heavy-weight championship, provided his name is Tunney.

Passing the buck is popular in Scotland, too, probably for the reason that a buck over there has nothing to do with a silver dollar.

The Washington club is beginning to release its veteran pitchers, which is further proof that the gland treatments are no good.

Anyone riding down town in the street cars these mornings will tell you that the bare necessities of life all seem to be knees.

While this is the open season for statistics no one has yet compiled the number of flies swatted on screen doors since summer began.

Until we see a picture of the Prince of Sweden shaking hands with Babe Ruth we will continue to refuse to believe that he is a gent of any great importance.

If you are to believe the old picture books there is plenty of evidence to prove Abraham Lincoln was the worst high bidder the nation ever had.

HELPFUL HINTS By GOLFING STARS JOYCE WETHERED Using Driver Through Green

Whether the golfer is a natural long player or not the mental attitude he should adopt in attempting to play his driver through the green will be identical in every case. There are, however, certain precautions that need to be taken.

Stand a shade more behind the ball than is customary with the driver off the tee and take up the line to the hole with exceeding care by means of the stance. Swing more easily than was your wont, and feel that your left arm is guiding the club on its way down and that, at the psychological moment, but not before, the right arm, with all its straightness and cautious strength, is guiding the club through to an effortless finish.

Imagine that the ball lies at that place in the curve of the swing which is the lowest point of its arc. Sweep the ball away and avoid any movement that is in the nature of a dip or an uncertain snatch.

Finally, do not try to elevate the ball, since every driver has a shade of loft, however unapparent it may seem; and, on the other hand, make no attempt to drive the ball in a downward direction.

If everything goes well, the result will be the sign of your dream.

FRED may not be much on looks, girls, but over in sunny France he's hung up quite a reputation in the gentle art of flouting. Fact is, he's the lightweight champion of that part of the country. Fred's now in our midst, being booked to battle Stanislaus Loayza, the Chilean champion, next month.

Billy Evans Says

Most baseball managers are just superstitious as the ball players and superstition runs riot among the athletes.

As one watches Connie Mack methodically directing his ball club from the bench, he would never suppose the tall leader of the Athletics believed there was such a thing as a jinx.

Yet only recently, Connie, by deciding that "Lefty" Grove should never again be used as the opening pitcher in a three or four-game series, proved he did.

And thereby hangs a very interesting tale of how superstitions often cause smart baseball men to suffer an entire change of opinion.

When a ball club has a big defensive threat like Grove or an offensive menace like Babe Ruth, the manager of the club has two lines of action.

One is to hurl your best bet at the opposition, get 'em "croaky" and then try your best to keep them in that condition. The other to keep him in reserve.

Landing an early knockout was Mack's original intention in using Grove to open every series. With the star southpaw at the top of his game, the odds are always in favor of his turning in a victory.

Winning the first ball game in any series is the edge. It puts the opposition on the defense.

That is all very well if form holds good and your best bet comes through. If he fails, it is different. You have used your ace and lost. That removes the big threat and adds to the confidence of the rival club.

All season Grove has pitched sensational ball for the Athletics, yet his pitching percentage would never convey that impression to the fan who had only the figures to guide him.

Grove has done little better than break even, yet with the possible exception of, say, two ball games, every one of his pitching efforts was deserving of victory.

Since the opening of the season Grove has been used as the starting pitcher in practically every series.

When the opposing team beat Grove which it did quite often, it breathed a sigh of relief, figuring him out of the way for the rest of the series.

The tough breaks suffered by Grove on the club's recent road trip caused Manager Mack to decide a shift in plans was necessary to remove the jinx.

In three games against Boston, Chicago and Cleveland, the last one going 11 innings, Grove allowed a total of only four runs, yet suffered three defeats.

That was too much for the usually complacent Mr. Mack.

A change of program was decided upon. Instead of starting a series, Grove was named as the selection for the third or fourth game.

In addition to keeping the big threat in the back ground, it enabled Manager Mack to use him late in the first two games to hold a slight lead.

Strong and willing, this feature of his makeup will permit his use in pinch roles without in any way hurting his work in his regular start.

It will be interesting to watch how the new program that has been outlined for the pitching sensation of 1926 turns out.

Weather Man Takes A Hand In Politics And Hurls Speeches

The trials and tribulations of a candidate are many and varied.

Hectic arguments, speech-making, floundering and pleas for support are expected, the candidates say, when they file for public office. But, according to popular report, to have the weather man take a hand in just "carrying the opposition too far."

Over in Crosby county last night at the Cone community, 10 miles north of Balla, to be exact, a public speaking for district and Crosby county candidates was scheduled. Then it rained.

A number of candidates were present, but the listeners were sadly lacking. No one braved the elements save the candidates themselves so the vocal assaults were postponed. Among the victims of the weather man was County Attorney Owen W. McWhorter, candidate for District Attorney, who drove ninety miles, much of it in the mud, to his avail.

SECRETS OF STARS INSIDE BASEBALL as told by BILLY EVANS

BY ROGER PECKINPAUGH Most Valuable Player 1925—American League

Play the ball always. Never let it play you.

By that I mean study the course of the ball carefully and so position yourself that you receive it on the high bounce.

It is almost always a miscue when a shortstop or any other infielder tries to handle the ball between bounds, as we say in baseball.

This happens when a player comes in a trifle too fast on the ball and is forced to handle it just as it hits the ground. Likewise, if he backs up on the ball he gets a short, nasty bounce to handle.

Getting the ball on the high bounce handling a ground ball. Taking it on the short bounce, caused by letting the ball play you, is the hardest possible way to handle any ball this is hit on the ground.

It is also well to handle the ball in such manner that you are in a position to throw without any lost motion. This is very important if the batsman is a fast runner and a hurried throw is necessary to complete the play.

Equally important as the proper handling of the ball is the study of the batsman. Learn whether he is a right or left field hitter and shift accordingly.

A step or two in the proper direction often makes possible a play that otherwise couldn't be turned if the shortstop played his regular position.

Don't be a stationary shortstop; by that I mean playing every batsman from the same position. In my next article I will tell why the successful shortstop should play every batter differently.

Air Flight Halted By Arab's Bullet

BASRA, Iraq, July 7. (AP)—An Arab's bullet has halted Alan Cobham's flight from London to Australia. His mechanic, Elliott, is in the hospital here in a serious condition, and Cobham is uncertain whether to await his recovery or to proceed with one of the British air force mechanics here.

Cobham's plane was about 100 miles from the city when a bullet penetrated the fuselage, glanced off a copper pipe and penetrated Elliott's chest and arm, shattering a rib and puncturing his lung.

Cobham brought the plane down on the river Shatt El Arab, near the city, and carried his wounded companion ashore.

ANDREWS TO HOLD POST

WASHINGTON, July 7. (AP)—Assistant Secretary Andrews, chief of the prohibition enforcement service, promised his superiors today he would stick to his post until he had finished re-organization of the dry forces.

Woman Is Largest Donor In Anti Fight

WASHINGTON, July 7. (AP)—Mrs. Berend Van Gerbig of New Canaan, Conn., was listed as the largest contributor to the headquarters of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment with Mrs. Ino De Erabebrant of New York City, the second largest, in figures presented to the Senate campaign funds committee today by the association.

Mrs. Van Gerbig gave $2,000 in five allotments, while Mrs. De Erabebrant gave $5,500. The list covers the period from 1921 to 1926. William H. Stayton, national chairman, said a list of sixty contributors would be furnished later. There were 126 contributors on the national list for a total of $16,700.

Rockefellers Aid Dry Fight by $20,000

WASHINGTON, July 7. (AP)—John D. Rockefeller and his son John D. Jr., have contributed $20,000 to the Anti-Saloon League since January 1, 1925.

This was shown by a list of contributions to the dry organization made public today by the Senate campaign funds committee. The committee refused by a vote of three to two to make public contributions prior to that date.

The Rockefeller contributions were made on April 11, 1925. Joseph Boyer, of Detroit, was the next largest contributor for the period covered, a total of $11,000.

The Northwood Ward Avenue M. E. Church of Detroit gave $18,000, one-half of which was supplied by S. S. Kressge, the ten cent store magnate.

Pennington Named Pro Administrator

WASHINGTON, July 7. (AP)—John H. Pennington, former lieutenant commander in the navy, was named prohibition administrator at Pittsburgh today by assistant secretary Andrews.

He will replace Edgar R. Ray, who has been filling the position since the resignation of Frederick C. Balrd.

Ray, it was said, was given the opportunity of staying in the service as an agent. He said in a letter to Mr. Andrews Saturday that in his opinion the government had no intention of enforcing the dry laws. In a subsequent statement he said efforts had been made to force him out of office and to compel him to issue alcohol permits against his will.

Diverse Opinions Held Over Arica Row

NEW YORK, July 7. (AP)—The majority of the plebiscite commission returned on the liner Essequibo today with diverse views concerning the situation in the Taena-Arica provinces which are claimed by both Chile and Peru.

Some members, who would not permit their names to be used, however, went so far as to say that war between Chile and Peru was inevitable as a result of failure to agree on a plebiscite. Colonel Edward Kreeger of the commission, on the part, expressed the opinion that the dispute would be settled by arbitration. He referred to the

It is built for young people who are going somewhere. They have discovered it in thousands. It is "modern" . . . not made over. We mean just what we imply. Many cars have been "modern" too long. Buyers of such "new" cars are due for a "shock" when they look for resale value. The Overland Six is new all thru . . . brilliantly engineered as a unit. It was designed for road speeds of from 45 to 55 miles per hour without wear and tear on the motor. That's why you can run this new-type car at high speed hour after hour. It will pickup in high gear from 5 to 40 miles an hour in 11 seconds. It has ample power to climb steep hills in high . . . gear shifting reduced to a minimum. It has a modern full pressure-feed oiling system. That's one reason why the Overland Six will run longer than other cars, without a pile of repair bills. SHAKESPEARE, THE WISERACKER

For a long time the world in general, and the English-speaking portion of it in particular, has been taking a certain gentleman who once dwelt on the banks of the Avon with too great a degree of seriousness. We refer, of course, to Will Shakespeare, to whom the centuries have been most kind.

Time not only has mellowed and enhanced the gentleman's literary excellence but it has gone on to give him considerably more credit than was his due as a wit and a philosopher. Hamlet, of course, is still Hamlet, and the greatness of that melancholy prince has withstood the acid test of plus fours. We submit that if anything, in the world is calculated to change a tragedy into a farce it is the attire of the present day golfer. But Hamlet survived even this.

But ever and anon something occurs that raises a sharp challenge to the bard's reputedly great knowledge of phenomena. Little things have a way of creeping into the news; very little things, but so many that, were we to array them all together, they would present a very formidable refutation of some of the Shakespearean philosophy.

The latest is a piece of news from Chicago. It seems that 22,000 boys and girls sang in a mighty chorus during the ceremonies attendant on the 28th International Eucharistic Congress. Now the leader of that chorus—the largest, we are assured, in all history—is not Smith, or Perkins, or Jones, or Lawrence, or yet O'Laughlin. No indeed. His name was Singenberger.

The question arises, where under the sun will you find, for the purpose of leading the world's largest collection of voices, a finer, a sturdier, more qualified and more honest name than Singenberger? You wanted to be instructed in the art of human vocal music, to whom would you go—to a mag named Hamburger or a man named Singenberger?

It was Shakespeare—none other—who once raised the question as to the value of names. "What's in a name?" he asked. "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet."

That, we are sure, is not philosophy. Or, at best, it is pretty shallow philosophy. There are many names that have very pronounced echoes qualities to them. For instance, there is the word "goosey." We dare you to think of "goosey" as something that is not sticky and gummy. And as for the rose, well, would its fragrance be as sweet if it were called for instance, a wieser?

It seems to us that many of the pearly drops of Shakespearean wisdom that have come reeling and rocking down the ages are just a little "phony," if you know what we mean. Were the gentleman alive today and gave utterance to some of his famous phrases, we would be willing to wager a week's salary against your other golf ball that he would be set down as something of a wisecracker instead of an oracle.

"WHERE'S THE OLD TURNIP?" What has become of the good old-fashioned hunting gun when you were curious as to the time of day and which popularity was supposed to safeguard the crystal against injury? There was a time when it flourished like the proverbial bay tree, but it seems to have passed out of favor along with long skirts, peg-top trousers, corsets and the brown derby.

Jewelry salesmen tell you it is obsolete. The war made men brave enough to wear the strap watch, and the high-gear efficiency of the day demanded a watch that it furnish the time in a snappy manner and without any lost motion.

The hunting case timespiece very often was an ornamental affair, with all sorts of fancy birds engraved on it. It was a jim dandy in its day, along with the family album and the what-not. Like many other things, it had to yield to a more fashionable successor.

IN NEW YORK SEE SAWING UP and DOWN BROADWAY

NEW YORK, July 7.—Hermit is presumed to seek out mountain caves, or hovels on barren sea coasts. Yet the heart of Broadway, which contains a little of everything, also has its hermit.

For 20 years a recluse has dwelt in a modern hotel, within shooting distance of the white lights district. "Old Joe" he has been called, and for many years he has been a leading theatrical photographer.

Although he had amassed a fortune of some $200,000 or more, "Old Joe" is said to have spent exactly 15 cents a day on food. He never refused an invitation to a bowl of soup or a sandwich and, since they came frequently, his 15 cents went generally toward the purchase of some delicacy, such as cake or cookies.

The story goes that upon his retirement from business "Old Joe" made a trip to Italy. There he met a "voodoo doctor" who warned him that bathing robbed one of the "magnetic powers" that make for "middle life."

Four padlocks, rusted with age were found upon the bathroom door in the hotel when, recently, "Old Joe" was found exhausted and weak in his room. In this room, also, they found four pigeons—sole companions of the old man, coaxed by crumbs from a pigeon flock that lived in the hotel eaves.

Newsprint clipping, yellowed with age, were scattered about the room, telling of the gay events of a time when "Old Joe" belonged to Broadway's glided world. Not an old-timer in the theatrical game but remembers "Old Joe's" studio where gathered the favorites of footlight and drawing room as well.

Because of his length of residence and his former fame, the hotel management has never interfered with his eccentricities. Just now the "recluse of Broadway" is in a hospital, getting the care that he so long denied himself.

And here's your daily irony: A newspaper clipping apprised me of the death of a famous circus "swallow." He died of indigestion. —GILBERT SWAN.

AN OLD RACE PASSES We need a poet to sing the song of a passing race—the American harvest hand. Time was when the scorching summer sun of the great middle west, when he beat down on a migratory herd of adventurous men bound on a mission both economic and romantic.

To quote a staff correspondent of the Kansas City Star, they led a hard life and followed the harvest from Oklahoma on north through Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas into Canada. Blazing sun and intense heat to which they were unaccustomed, the dust of many a weary mile of country road to a new "stand."

These men spent oppressive nights in barns, traveled in box cars, often were robbed of their earnings while on the road. But the harvest hand took his bumps without great complaint. His spirit grew as hard as the callouses on his hands, and as rough as his tanned skin. He exchanged chews of tobacco with his partners of the road, swapped rough and ready yarns and grew philosophical.

But today the species is rare. Farm machinery has wrought a great change in the farm labor situation on the wheat plains. Many farms require no outside assistance at harvest. Those that do are supplied by motor cars, a new genus that infests the grain belt highways in dilapidated flivvers.

The government maintains permanent employment bureaus in many towns throughout the wheat country, but machinery has displaced about 75 per cent of the harvesters. Kansas has a bumper crop of wheat. It may be the greatest in its history. And 80 per cent of it will be harvested by motor car hands, the product of an efficient age. It takes fewer of this new species of harvest hand to handle the grain, because they can get about with greater ease. They can do more work, with less labor, than their more romantic predecessors, but even they will grow fewer and fewer with the passing years, as the use of machinery spreads throughout the wheat country. They are the remnant of a picturesque race.

ABOUT FLAG-WAVING On July 4 the flag of our country was flown generally. It is a good custom, flag-waving, if sincerely and correctly done. Long may it wave! Now, in New York the other day, a certain rich woman was arrested because she cut a strip of bunting from one of her tenant's places. She had demanded that the tenant remove it from the front of the restaurant he occupied, and when he refused, she went up and cut away the bunting herself.

Reprimanded by a magistrate, and asked why she dare do such a thing, the woman told the court: "The bunting was dirty and unattractive. It was not my intention to disgrace the flag. The decoration made the building look like a section of Second avenue."

There is no finer flag in the world than ours, Mrs. New Yorker. It should awaken pride in us wherever it is viewed, on the battlefield or over a haberdashery. But let us keep it clean, too. Hanging out a dirty flag is like wearing a soiled badge. It is a kind of muddied patriotism.

FATAL FATALISM A Japanese cartoonist in New York, Maturo Okabe, thought it time for him to die, and put the ideal of fatalism into practice by slashing himself. Fatalism is a queer quirk of thought. Shakespeare had a good idea in mind when he said: "There's nothing either good or bad but thinking makes it so." If we think a thing hard enough, the mind becomes obsessed. Fatalism may be fatal.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

DON'T MONKEY WITH SENATOR CARAWAY IF YOU DON'T WANT TO BE SCORCHED

By CHARLES P. STEWART WASHINGTON, June 7.—Senator Thaddeus H. Caraway of Arkansas is one of the most formidable debaters who ever came to Washington and Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut made a mistake when he crossed verbal swords with him the other day during the former's discussion of the proper price to pay for votes at senatorial primaries—in Pennsylvania.

When Caraway had finished his speech there'd have been nothing for him to do but quit and sit down. What he needs, worse than anything in the world, when he's making a talk is to have somebody try to interfere and mix him up. It's at a bit of repartee that he's best. He always comes out of such encounters on top.

Other senators discovered this long ago, from bitter experience. They let him strictly alone, no matter what he says. But Bingham is rather a new hand at the senatorial game. He rushed in where hard-boiled solons fear to tread and Caraway had some fun.

Caraway didn't start with the idea of assuming that votes were bought, out and out, at so much per, in Pennsylvania. Bingham gave him the idea, and Caraway so twisted the conversation that the Nutmeg State senator appeared to be agreeing with him that that was what really happened.

When one considers that the Pennsylvania primary was a republican primary and that Bingham is a republican senator and that Caraway is a democrat one, it immediately becomes apparent how awkward this was for Bingham.

However, he brought it on himself. It will be recalled that when Truman H. Newberry was criticized for having spent $195,000 to be elected governor from Michigan, Senator Frank E. Willis of Ohio, introduced a resolution to the effect that $195,000 was more than any such campaign ought to cost.

Nevertheless Willis voted not to unseat Newberry. Caraway simply re-introduced this resolution, but with the amount blank, suggesting that as the republican primary appeared to have cost about $1,550,000, he thought the resolution ought to be amended. He invited Willis, "or some senator who sympathizes with him, to write in whatever sum he feels would be reasonable."

At this point Bingham made the unfortunate remark that it seemed to him there ought to be a sliding scale—a larger allowance for a state with a large population than for a state with a small one. Caraway agreed immediately.

If a Senate seat cost, say $10 a vote, obviously, he said, a candidate in a state with 10,000,000 population ought to be authorized to spend more than a candidate in a state with 100,000.

Hooked, Bingham struggled to escape. He meant legitimate expenditures, of course—not the purchase of votes. "Don't you think," he insisted, "that instead of a lump sum per state, it would be wiser to provide that not more than 10 or 25 cents per head might properly be spent by candidate on a primary campaign?"

You Might Call Later. The house-visiting parson in Australia sometimes gets unexpected rebuffs. A zealous curate doing the Alexander (Sydney) rounds had his knock answered by a nipper of six or eight. "Mother is suited with a clergyman, thank you," she said, and shut the door.—Bulletin (Sydney.)

A Pretty Compliment, Sir! The worthy old parson dropped his wallet. A tough local character picked it up and restored it. The minister thanked him adding: "Yet some people say you are not honest." "Well, parson," was the reply, "I'm honest to goodness." — Louisville Courier-Journal.

Helpful Health Hints By DR. HUGH S. CUMMING Director General U. S. Public Health Service

In a preceding article you were told how easy it is for water to become contaminated with such deadly disease germs as those of typhoid fever, cholera and dysentery, how milk may be contaminated by washing the milk cans in contaminated water, and be the carrier of such diseases as diphtheria, scarlet fever, and septic sore throat. How does your health department protect you from the dangers of disease germs which thus may have been accidentally introduced into water and milk? In the first place, an endeavor is always made to obtain water which is free from the possibility of pollution by human beings.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE IN THE DESERT THE BEAUTY THAT BLOOMS

By ARTHUR N. PACK President, The American Nature Association. To most of us the word "desert" conveys an implication of anything but beauty. We are apt to think of sterile, sandy, stony wastes, whose sparse vegetation repels the observer with its thorny stems and leathery, grayish leaves. The idea of flowers in the desert seems incongruous, even impossible. Yet in the arid and semi-arid regions of the American west there are many plants whose monotonously dry lives are relieved, for a brief period each year, by a short season of beauty that rivals any dream of Persian gardens.

With Our Contemporaries OUR NEW ADDITIONS Amarillo is building without any objective, any vision, or any thought of that are imposed in most cities. I beauty. Building here escapes regulations that are imposed in most cities. New additions are laid out and the lots sold before the city engineer's office knows of their existence. Consequently, there is no thought given to connected streets, or the uniformity of lots or blocks.

At its present rate, and under present supervision, Amarillo with a few years will be a jumble of haphazard additions and a city without beauty. But then it will be too late for change.

Correction must come now when the new districts are being platted. Subdividers should be penalized for failure to comply with the city ordinance. It shouldn't be tolerated. The engineer must be given additional help to supervise the districting of new tracts, if those responsible for the new divisions persist in flagrantly ignoring every policy of city developing, as has been done in some cases in recent weeks.

It is time to call a halt in present methods and build a city along some definite, well laid-out, sensible and harmonious plan.—Amarillo Globe.

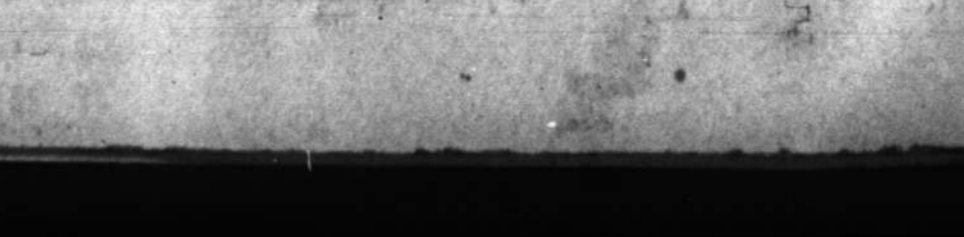

POSTOFFICES The Herald might add to its "Know Plainview" column: "Plainview has the poorest postoffice facilities of any town its size of which we have knowledge." That wouldn't look good in that particular column, but it is the truth. It is remarkable how well the postoffice force here serves the city cooped up as they are with hardly elbow room. Facilities of a town of 1,500 population are provided in Plainview while the receipts of the office are sufficient to put it in the list of offices of the first class. — Plainview Herald.

WHEN THERE'S A WILL THERE'S A WAY That's what the T.C. man thought this morning after having a short conversation with two legless travelers. The two hailed from Fort Worth, and are on an outing to Colorado and Kansas.

A man without legs would hardly be expected to travel very much but these young men solved their problem by fixing up a jitney with a lot of levers and wires that can be manipulated by their hands. A complete camping outfit leaves them independent wherever they go, and they expect to have great times this summer fishing in the mountains.

It's all in the spirit! No matter how handicapped a man is, so long as he does not give up there's hope for him. Judge Cortiss of Dallas, an armless man, showed us how he could button his collar, and cripples should take courage from him and many other brave souls.—Quannah Tribune-Chief.

GAINESVILLE If you have been sticking pretty close around home recently you would be agreeably surprised if you took a drive about the city and noted the amount of substantial building and improvement under way in Gainesville at this time. You would find very few streets on which some new building or some remodeling job is not under way. This work is going on quietly and steadily, and practically every mechanic in the city is busy. This consistent improvement is slowly transforming Gainesville into a city beautiful. Old structures are being replaced with modern bungalows and more pretentious residences. Others are being remodeled in the same end. And in the business section, old buildings are being given modern fronts and interiors. This work has been going on for some months, and will no doubt be greatly increased under the impetus of the new shallow oil field that seems assured in the northwest portion of the county. If you have strayed to Gainesville, you are lucky.—Gainesville Register.

VACATIONS More than ever do we believe in the genuine worth of a vacation from work, if forgetfulness of the cares of business can accompany it. If business worries can be pushed into the background and new sights, new sounds and new experiences added to the life history, the rejuvenation is worth all that it costs. There's no denying, however, that one can not jump right back into the big middle of his work after a vacation. As one friend put it, "I must have a little time to rest up from my vacation." — Childress Post.

A THOUGHT Whoso boasteth himself of a fat gift is like clouds and wind without rain.—Prov. 25:14. Where there is much pretension, much has been borrowed; nature never pretends.—Lavater.

JUST AS SIMPLE He asked his girl for her hand in marriage, so to speak. And, did she give it to him? Yes. She did—upon the cheek.

OTHER PEOPLE'S BUSINESS The mother-in-law joke is an ancient one, and in nine cases out of ten, perhaps, the good lady is not nearly so officious as the wisecrackers have made her out. Occasionally, however, proof is offered that parents-in-law succumb to the temptation of meddling.

In Washington a jury awarded $100,000 to a woman who had complained that her parents-in-law were constantly telling her husband that she was not good enough for him. There also were allegations concerning her treatment at the home of her husband's parents. The jury, after deliberating two hours, awarded her the full amount she had asked: it does not pay to butt in.

Little Joe

NEIGHBORS' WIVES

By ERNEST LYNN Copyright NEA

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN and FAY MILBURN buy a home when their baby girl is born and the advertising agency in which John is partner and copy writer lands a new contract. Among their acquaintances are—

NOEL and VERA BOYD, whose marriage is strictly "modern."
PAT and MARIAN FORBES, who have three children and whose domestic life is unhappy because of Pat's roving tendencies. Previous chapters told how John was fascinated on meeting NEEL ORME, of whom Pat FORBES hints that she is having trouble with her husband.

When Fay took JUDITH, the baby to Houston to visit her parents, John "ran around" a good deal, mostly with Pat Forbes.

When Fay returned, gossip had retailed some of his doings, and sharp quarrels between him and Fay followed, one of which drove him "out on a limb." Fay, learning he had been out again with other women, threatened to leave him if it was repeated.

She fears John will get into trouble, but John thinks she is beginning to dislike him. He becomes aware that people are talking about him, and NAT GRAHAM, his partner, blames the loss of a client on the "damaged reputation" he charges John was bringing the firm.

Vera Boyd invites him to tea and overcomes his objections by holding out a "surprise" for him. It is a real surprise for there he finds Nell Orme. Both are astonished to see each other and realize it is one of Vera's old tricks, she being noted for a fondness for promoting "affairs." He resolves not to again, but he does, and this time he madly takes Nell in his arms and kisses her. A few minutes later the door opens and Marian Forbes walks in to find him holding her hands.

Fay learns of it and announces her intention of leaving. He tries to dissuade her and a violent quarrel follows, during which Fay strikes him in the mouth, and John leaves the house. When he comes back, Fay is packing.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLV

Blindly, and without purpose, John descended the stairs his mind a seething furnace of resentment. To be treated like this—like he were a criminal! How could Fay do it? Well, she wouldn't, if she thought anything of him, and he wondered if, indeed, he really had killed her love for him.

He wandered into the kitchen, spotless and gleaming. Here—a thing of resplendent nickel and porcelain—was their gas range, which Fay had taken so much pleasure in buying and which had given the two of them so much joy as they prepared their little informal Sunday suppers. He wondered, dully, what was to become of it, now that Fay had made up her mind to leave it, and it did not occur to him at all as ridiculous that he should feel pity for it—inanimate though it was.

Across the room was the white enamel table with its porcelain top. He had surprised Fay with that table—had bought it one day on impulse, knowing that Fay had wanted it and knowing, also, that she was waiting until they could afford it. Cautious, economical Fay. Practical Fay. That was it—she was too darned practical. Given a little more imagination, she might have understood him better.

He shrugged. Oh, well! His glance, roving idly around the room, fell on the cupboard above the table. On the second shelf, he knew, was a bottle of whisky—and forgetfulness. Well, if Fay was going to drive him to it, all right. He opened the door to the cupboard and pulled forth the bottle. He did not bother about a glass, but drank fiercely, bent on drowning his troubles.

Fay was proceeding calmly with her plans for leaving. Breakfast the next morning was a cold, emotionless affair, and John, as he played abstractedly with Judith, was nigh to breaking Fay's heart, and she was compelled to turn her head to hide the compassion and the tears that were in her eyes.

A word from either might have bridged the chasm that had yawned between them since yesterday, but Fay had issued her ultimatum, and John now was too proud to make any more advances. If he had said, at that terrible breakfast, "Fay, I need you, I can't let you go," she would have melted, for she had cried ceaselessly throughout the sleepless night and she was a little aghast and in terror of her contemplated act. Such trifles as what she would tell her mother and father when she returned to them were trifles no longer now, that they loomed as actualities, and they in themselves would have been enough to dissuade her if John only had said the proper thing.

But John, as he wiped his lips with his napkin after drinking his morning glass of orange juice, said, "I suppose you're still bound and determined to go through with this silly thing," and Fay could only nod.

"Well, then," he went on grimly, "I'll give you my check for $5000 today."

"Five thousand dollars! What for?"

"Have you forgotten that you invested $1000 in my business when we were married?"

"Oh—that, but—"

"Well, it's about trebled in value—a little better, even. Five thousand ought to cover it. We won't bother about a few odd dollars."

Fay protested. "I don't want it."

"You're going to get it whether you want it or not. His jaw had set grimly. He knew he was punishing her. "But you can't spare it—not right now."

"That makes no difference. The minute you cease being my wife you cease being my partner. You came to me with your money when I needed it pretty badly. I don't want any debts like that hanging over me when you pull out."

"When you pull out!" The words rang in Fay's ears, pounded against her senses, seemed to tear at her heart. "To put it so cruelly—pulling out!"

"But I don't need it," she was saying.

"Now, look here," he stated cruelly, "you don't want any sentimental ties between us when you pull out, do you? You want to make a clean break, don't you?"

She bent her head down over her plate and made no answer.

"Come," he said sharply, "answer me!"

"Do you suppose," he asked with a grim smile, "that I'm going to let my daughter live on someone else's charity? If you won't accept any yourself, you'll have to accept it for Judith! You can't deny me that, right—to help provide for my own child."

"You seem to forget that Judith is also mine."

"I haven't forgotten for a minute. But you're not going to take away from me the privilege of being a father to her."

She said cuttingly, "It's a shame you didn't think more of the privilege while you had her."

John colored hotly, but held his temper in leash. "All right, we won't argue that point. I just want to set things straight. You're leaving me, and you're going to get a divorce. I won't contest it—I'll make it as easy for you as possible. At least," he added bitterly, "you'll have to give me credit for that. I presume you're going to live with your parents. Are you going to go to work?"

Fay nodded. "I hadn't given it much thought, but I can always get my old secretarial job back. However, I won't have to work, of course. Mother and dad will take care of that."

"I don't want them to support Judith," he insisted. "I'll send you a check for $25 a week. That ought to be enough to take care of her."

"It's too much, I—"

"I insist. I'll send it every week. I'll send it even if it costs me the last penny." He rose. "I'll have to go down to the office. Got an appointment. I can't dodge. I'll be back (CONTINUED ON PAGE SIX) early and help you if you can. When do you intend to leave?"

"Neighbors' Wives"

His matter-of-factness was exasperating. Fay thought, "Well, if it didn't mean any more to him than that, she'd show him she could be indifferent, too."

"I like to leave tonight, but I hardly think I can get ready. Suppose I take the morning train?"

He showed a little surprise, though not much. "So soon? Well, all right, shall I get your ticket?"

"If you don't mind."

"Not at all." He was maddeningly polite. He bent down to Judith, kissed her and then, bowing slightly to Fay, departed. And Fay lay all with Judith once more, and appalled at the finality of the step she was taking, did the only thing that was natural for her to do; she sat down and cried, and begged Judith to her breast and cried some more.

"John," she kept saying over and over, "if you only cared! But you don't you don't!"

the maid to you," she told him at dinner.

"Very well," he said wearily. "I'm not a drawing room on the ten-twenty-nine tomorrow morning. Have you wired your folks yet?"

"No. I'll do it tonight."

"All right. Anything I can help you with?"

"Not a thing."

She once more descended on them, thick, terrible silence, and Fay to keep from screaming aloud, went early to bed, where she lay sleepless. And John, the awful thought of the tragic tomorrow oppressing him like a fog, sought solace once more in the bottle in the kitchen cupboard, but even the heavy liquor failed to bring him restful sleep in the little room down the hall.

Morning came, and the great red sun in its cheerfulness was like a gigantic mockery. More than once John was on the verge of pleading with Fay to change her mind, and more than once Fay, on the point of surrendering, was tempted to seek comfort in his arms. But pride ruled, and at the railroad station John experienced the greatest pang of his life when he kissed Judith goodbye. What would tomorrow be like without her and Fay—and the next day, and the next, and the next?

Former Minister Of France Raps Debt Agreement

PARIS, July 7. (AP)—France's great mistake in the Washington debt agreement was her acceptance of "such astronomical figures," without safeguards and transfer clauses, Henry Franklin-Fouillon, former minister of finance, told the Chamber of Deputies.

"His statement was made in the course of a strongly worded protest against the government's demand for ratification of the agreement negotiated by Ambassador Berenger.

"The nature of the debt should be discussed as well as the figure," he continued. He cited the alleged opinions of a number of American Senators, "to the effect that America did not enter the World War on behalf of the Allies but on her own account.

"Sentiment in America had changed since the war, he declared, adding that both former Senator Kenyon and Senator Smoot have expressed themselves in favor of cancellation of indebtedness.

Special Size Plots For Heroes Available

WASHINGTON, July 7. (AP)—By direction of Secretary Davis of the War Department, plots of special size will be made available in national cemeteries hereafter for holders of the Congressional medal of honor, awarded for gallantry in action.

The order provides for plots large enough so that headstones can be erected carrying representations of the medal.

A Prescription That Should Be In Every Home

Scientific Discovery of Dallas Pharmacist Wins Recognition

If housewives generally knew the value of a private prescription known as Gordon's Antiseptic, the scientific discovery of a well-known Dallas pharmacist, very few homes would be without it at any time. As a panacea for ailments of the stomach and bowels, it has established an enviable record for itself. Druggists everywhere laud its merits and recommend it as the ideal household remedy.

Gordon's Antiseptic should be in every home for the reason that it is effective in so many different forms of sickness. It is good for young and old. It contains no alcohol, narcotic, salts, iron, calomel or soda—nothing that will injure even the most delicate stomach.

It goes right to the seat of stomach and bowel troubles, as it exercises a gently antiseptic as well as a digestive effect. It stops and prevents fermentation, soothes and heals the irritated and inflamed conditions of the stomach and bowels. Relieves indigestion, constipation, gas on the stomach, dyspepsia, heartburn, bloating after meals, excess acid, bad breath, nervousness, tones up the digestive organs and stimulates the stomach and bowels to their normal functions.

Gordon's Antiseptic is sold by good druggists, $1.50 for sixty-four doses, less than 3 cents a dose.—adv.

Boston Officers Arrive For Ponzi

HOUSTON, July 7. (AP)—Three officers seeking to extradite Charles Ponzi, held here as a fugitive from justice, arrived in Houston Tuesday noon from Boston, Mass. They arrived in Galveston on the steamship H. B. Mallory and came immediately to Houston. The officers, Alfred R. Shrigley, assistant attorney general of Massachusetts, John F. Mitchell and Honey M. Pierce, inspectors of police, went into conference with local officers immediately on arrival.

A Farmer Boy's Success

From hard work on a farm to the study of medicine was the course Dr. Pierce pursued. Finally he determined to put up in ready-to-use form his "Golden Medical Discovery" so the public could easily procure it. This "Discovery" is a tonic in its effects on the stomach and digestive apparatus; an alternative in its action on the blood, liver and skin. It increases the appetite, stimulates the digestion, enriches the blood, and makes both men and women feel as they did when they were young.

All dealers. Large bottles, liquid, $1.50; tablets, $1.25 and 65c.

WHEAT HARVEST AIDS SANTA FE

Daily Average of From 1,200 To 1,500 Cars Handled At Slaton

(Special to the Journal)

SLATON, July 7.—The wheat harvest over the North Plains has shown the greatest volume of grain shipment as the Slaton division of the Santa Fe that has ever been encountered since the construction of the Plains line. A daily average of from 1,200 to 1,500 cars of grain are handled in and out, weighed and checked, through the Slaton terminal, with indications that production is to increase through this week. Storage facilities are so cramped in Slaton that it has been found necessary to use the Lamesa main line for placing from one hundred to three hundred cars that are to be weighed.

For the past months thousands of cars of oil from the Panhandle fields have rolled through Slaton bound for the coast refineries. At the present time four wheat trains and three oil trains, loaded with products to feed and transport the world pass south through Slaton daily, the oil shipments carry about 125 loaded cars.

through Slaton daily, the oil shipments carry about 125 loaded cars. This division of the Santa Fe is doing almost one hundred percent more business than ever handled before. A large number of trainmen have been added to Slaton's million dollar payroll and new men in every department have been necessary. Indications are that the present rush of business will be felt for many months to come; production in the oil fields has been on the increase and is expected to take a sudden upward trend with the completion of the two new branch lines now under construction.

Speeders Pay Fines Into City Treasury

It costs money to speed on the public thoroughfares of Lubbock. The police ledger gives mute testimony to that fact.

During the past two days a total of $30 has been tumbled into the city's coffers on speeding counts alone, six car-tlemen anteing in five bucks a throw for the privilege of "stepping on her." According to Chief of Police T. B. May this is just a sample of what will come if the DePalmas and DePaulas of the city do not refrain from breaking the speed laws.

Idalou To Be Host To Candidates Of County On July 17

IDALOU, July 7.—The entire citizenship of Idalou has broadcasted an invitation for all candidates for county and district offices to be present here on Saturday, July 17, at which time they will be given an opportunity to mix, mingle and speak to the voters.

Idalou has planned to have the candidates here for some time, but due to the busy work on the farms and the continued pretty weather, they did not deem it wise to invite them here now. The majority of the farmers are completely up with their work or will be by that date, and a large crowd is expected to hear the candidates set forth their claims.

D. M. Norwood, editor of the Idalou Echo, will issue a special candidate's edition of the Echo next week in which the majority of candidates are "telling it to the voters," and an urgent appeal will be made to the voters to come and hear the various candidates which will be the last opportunity for them to do so before the primary election which is the Saturday following.
