Suffers for Her Mother's Deed

Two great fears beset Mrs. Katharine Kelly, wife of "Machine Gun" Kelly, as she faces punishment for complicity in the Urschel kidnapping. One is for her mother, already sentenced to prison for life. The other is for the future of her daughter by her first marriage, Pauline Fry, shown above, as she appeared in the courtroom where her mother faced trial.

PASTOR IS FOUND DEAD IN HIS CAR

PLEASANT HILL, La., Oct. 16.—The body of Dr. E. L. Thompson, pastor of the Mount Auburn Christian Church in Dallas, was found today in his parked car in a secluded wood south of here.

The body was badly decomposed and investigation of the death was not possible immediately.

Sheriff Edwards said cause of the death was uncertain. It was feared the minister had been slain. A revolver was clutched in the man's right hand. A wound, apparently caused by a bullet, was found on the left side of the pastor's head, about the ear. Thompson was involved in a federal court case at Shreveport and when he dropped from sight it was feared he had met with foul play.

SHREVEPORT, La., Oct. 16.—Search was started here today for Rev. E. L. Thompson, pastor of the Mount Auburn Christian church in Dallas, and it was feared he had been kidnapped.

The minister, who formally occupied a pastorate here; left Dallas last week to appear in federal court Wednesday to answer charges of sending obscene matter through the mail. He was heard from by friends here Wednesday when he telephoned he was driving to Loevoise to meet his brother, an attorney.

James Williams, chairman of the Mount Auburn board of governors, told police the pastor had in his possession a brief case containing a perfect defense against the indictment. The Dallas churchmen expressed the belief the pastor had been kidnapped. He said the defense case would involve persons high in political circles of Louisiana.

Germany Ready To Preserve Peace

BERLIN, Oct. 16.—Germany stands ready to collaborate to the limit of her resources in the preservation of European peace on any basis that will preserve her national honor, it was said today.

It was indicated Germany was ready and eager to negotiate and honorable agreement for disarmament and make it plan with the next few days the war scare which followed her withdrawal from the League of Nations and the conference had no basis in fact so far as she is concerned.

ARMS PARLEY ADJOURNS AT MEETING TODAY

GENEVA, Switzerland, Oct. 16.—The general commission of the world arms conference adjourned today after approving a blunt note to Germany characterizing her excuses for quitting the conference as "invalid" and voting to reconvene on Oct. 26.

The note pointed out that withdrawal came at the moment the committee was attempting to fulfill the German demand.

It was hoped that through direct negotiations on the part of individual nations, between now and Oct. 26, to achieve some measure of compromise, both to save the face of the conference and to achieve a partial regulation of European armaments.

Every effort will be made to persuade Chancellor Hitler to reconsider his position and if possible to return to the world effort at harmony.

Members of the steering committee appeared cheerful as they arrived today for the momentous session. The corridors buzzed with the possibility of five-power negotiations following the main conference Oct. 26, and the probability that if Germany maintains her attitude a major arms convention will be signed without Berlin, the pact being offered at Hitler for his acceptance or rejection.

T. L. Blanton Raps Federal Salary Drive

Federal employees restoration of the old pay scales will get no help from Congressman Thomas L. Blanton of Texas. In a telegram sent E. Cloud Babcock, president Federation of Government Employees, Washington, D. C., he made his position on the matter clear, and expressed the opinion that "government salaries have been higher than they should have been and that those in the government employ should be thankful to God that they have positions with Uncle Sam who pays them regularly while many people are starving."

Congressman Blanton's telegram to Babcock follows:

"Abilene, Texas, October 14, 1933.

"Hon. E. Cloud Babcock, President, Federation of Government Employees, Secretary, United Civil Service, Washington, D. C.

"Replying your telegram just received stating that Senator Harrison assures you that cuts will be rescinded and reductions in salaries of government employees will be restored in coming session of Congress, and asking for similar assurance from me, regret that I cannot help you. It is my firm belief that government salaries have been entirely too high and out of all proportion to salaries received for like work in private positions. American citizens are tired of being told to pay some government employees three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine and ten thousand dollars per year, some of whom until recently were granted 30 days vacation on full pay, no work on Sundays, numerous holidays including half of Saturdays, and generous retirement pay, all working under comfortable surroundings. Disabled veterans of all wars have been cut materially, and government employees must take their cuts the same as Congressmen and other citizens, with smiling faces, and be thankful to God that they have positions with Uncle Sam, who pays them regularly while many people are starving."

"Blanton, Congressman."

Car Theft Case Is Being Tried Today

The defense is being represented by Judge J. Frank Sparks, Criminal District Attorney Grady Owen is representing the State.

Says M'Adoo Aided Loan to Brazil

How Senator William G. McAdoo of California, in the role of legal counsel, helped the banking investment firm of Dillon, Read & Co., to float a $12,000,000 Brazilian loan in 1921 was described at the Senate stock market inquiry by Robert O. Hayward, the firm's vice president. Hayward here is shown during the hearing.

RUSSIA HAS STRENGTHENED EAST BORDERS

PEIPING, China, Oct. 16.—Russia has strengthened her far eastern defense in preparation for a possible war with Japan, a Russian spokesman said today.

The spokesman, a member of the Russian embassy, admitted he had informed his government that Chinese travellers arriving here reported that three Russian airplanes were seen around Jehol for three hours, flying off to the northward when Japanese anti-aircraft guns opened fire.

"Commenting on reports that Russia was concentrating military forces on the Manchurian frontier, the spokesman said:

"It is no secret that Soviet Russia is notably strengthening her far eastern defenses."

Methodist Raise $5,000 On Their Church Debt

Eastland Methodists came out to church Sunday and helped to raise more than $5,000.00 on a $9700.00 budget. The church members pledged in the morning service $2503.00 and the District Board holding the church loan matched dollar for dollar the amount subscribed by the local church, making the entire amount raised $5006.00.

According to the leaders in the campaign, the goal will be reached. All captains and their team are to meet again tonight at the church at 7:30 to make further plans to carry on the work indefinitely until the full amount required is raised. The amount, if raised, will wipe out the entire due indebtedness of the church, it is stated, and the new conference year will start in November without these pressing obligations that must be paid now.

Rev. C. Q. Smith, presiding elder of the district, who has been the leader in the absence of Rev. Sam G. Thompson, pastor, who is critically ill in a Temple Sanitarium, preached at the morning hour to a large crowd on the subject, "What Shall Man Give In Exchange For His Own Soul."

Men's 9:49 Class Has Good Program

The Men's 9:49 Bible Class had an unusual program presented at their meeting Sunday morning, conducted by President O. L. Duckett. The song service was directed by Frank Pierce, with Mrs. T. J. Haley pianist. Prayer was by W. C. Campbell, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison.

A negro soloist, Prof. Adolphus Baker of Pittsburgh, sang a group of negro spirituals with self piano accompaniment.

The lecture of Judge J. E. Hickman followed. This was a strong lesson on the subject of Saul's conversion.

Trial of Three On Murder Charge Is Postponed

FORT WORTH, Oct. 16.—Trial of three men, charged with murder in the most sensational crime in Fort Worth's history, the slaying of three men here in July, was postponed in criminal district court today.

The defendants are:

O. D. Stevens, Handley, alleged "master mind" of the $72,000 postal robbery here last February, reputed head of a narcotic ring and alleged leader in the slayings.

W. D. May, Handley farmer, alleged lieutenant of Stevens.

M. T. Howard, Fort Worth, identified by the state as an accomplice in the robbery and slayings.

All have been in jail since their arrest a few days after the slayings.

The state contends the three slain men—J. B. Rutherford, Dallas; his brother, Harry Rutherford, Abilene, and Jack Sturdivant, Eula—were shot to death in a gangland dispute over division of the postal robbery loot.

They were discovered missing July 9 when friends and relatives came here seeking them. Fear they had been slain arose at once.

The next day, this fear turned into dread certainty, when a farm youth, with his father, discovered the knife-slashed clothing of the three men in the Trinity river near Handley, bound together in an improvised basket of hogwire.

Suspicion turned to Stevens and his alleged aides on information given police by Mrs. J. B. Rutherford that the men had gone to the Stevens home the night of July 8 to discuss the robbery loot.

Search for the bodies spread to Lake Dallas, to numerous ponds in this vicinity, and on the Stevens farm where a lake was dragged and a well pumped dry.

Late in the evening of July 12, Deputy Sheriff Dusty Rhodes, in returning from a day's search for the bodies, played a hunch. He stopped at a bridge across the Trinity on the edge of Fort Worth, not far from where the clothing had been found.

A bright object attracted his attention. It proved to be an eye of one of the dead men. The badly decomposed bodies, bullet-riddled and slashed, were found bound together with hogwire similar to that found with the clothes.

The bodies had been weighted down with bags of cement.

A search of the May farm revealed a spattered truck, which the state will attempt to show was used in hauling the bodies to the river. Spots on the truck, believed to be blood, were ordered analyzed. Findings of the analysis were expected to be brought out in the trial.

Federal, state, and county law enforcement officers worked together to link together the slayings and the robbery.

The three men charged with the slayings, along with 10 others, including the three slain men, were named in a federal grand jury indictment returned at Amarillo in connection with the postal robbery. The trial in the case probably will be held in federal court in November.

During the search for the bodies, agents discovered a cache of narcotics in a secret paneled chamber in the Stevens home. Stevens was charged with possession of narcotics and faces trial on that count.

The three men charged with the slayings, along with 10 others, including the three slain men, were named in a federal grand jury indictment returned at Amarillo in connection with the postal robbery. The trial in the case probably will be held in federal court in November.

Arizona's New Congresswoman

ALL NATIONAL BANKS COME UNDER PLAN

Bank Closed Since Jan. 1 Can Participate In Liquidation.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—The government today came to the aid of depositors in closed national banks with an announcement by President Roosevelt of creation of a federal deposit liquidation board to free $1,000,000,000 quickly.

The board, composed of ranking fiscal officials, will concentrate on stimulating the distribution of the frozen assets of banks, closed since Jan. 1, 1933, salvaging as much as possible for depositors to bolster purchasing power.

The general intention, the announcement said, is to make loans on the assets of closed banks for the benefit of depositors up to a maximum of 50 per cent of their deposits, inclusive of distribution heretofore made.

This does not, of course, mean that a bank whose remaining assets are worthless, that the depositors will get 50 per cent. They will get, in such a case only their share in the assets.

Exact sum that will be freed depends upon appraisal of the actual asset of each closed bank.

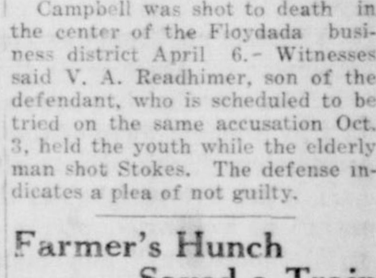

"In cases where the conditions of the closed banks will justify it, proper consideration will be given to a larger distribution than 50 per cent. More than one distribution will be made, as and if, assets improve in value."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S TRIBUTE TO SAMUEL GOMPERS

President Roosevelt paid an eloquent tribute to the late Samuel Gompers in dedicating a huge bronze memorial to the dead voice of labor who had served 38 years as the president of the American federation before he died in Mexico in 1924. Samuel Gompers was a masterful figure in the life of organized and unorganized labor for more than a third of a century. He was sane most of the time, patriotic all the time, and ever an adviser against acts of violence on the part of labor. He was a cigar maker who had battled his way from obscurity to international fame as a leader of breadwinners. He was ever a champion of arbitration of the disputes which would come between the employer and the employee. He ruled labor with a firm hand and at times that hand carried a steel glove.

President Roosevelt gave excellent advice to the leaders of labor of today. He bluntly said there were "hot heads in workers' ranks who think that results can be obtained by noise and violence." And then he made it 50-50 by declaring there were some employers "who preferred government by a privileged class instead of by majority rule." This was his parting shot as well as timely warning: "But it is clear that the sum of the objectors on both sides cuts a very small figure in the total of employers and employees alike—men and women—who are going along wholeheartedly in the war against depression."

William Green is the successor of Samuel Gompers. He is the president of the annual convention of the American federation of labor now in session. In closing his review of conditions as they exist, the chief magistrate asserted the organization of wage workers and bread winners "which had halted its annual convention here for the dedication, MUST SETTLE ITS JURISDICTIONAL AND OTHER DISPUTES IF THE RECOVERY PROGRAM WAS TO GO AHEAD FULL SPEED." Long before the address was delivered at the dedication service the President had won an agreement from the steel industry "to enter negotiations in good faith with representatives of the miners to settle the Pennsylvania coal strike."

There is a recovery program on. It is nationwide. It is of the nature of general relief as well as a recovery program.

There is no Utopia or Garden of Eden coming to the employers of America or their employees in the near future. An egg that has been scrambled cannot be rescrumbled by a magic wave of the lawmaking wand. Time in its remorseless flight adjusts all things that are perishable. As for the non-perishable, there are eternal laws which govern as well as shape the destiny of mankind. "Now-is-the-time-to-buy" movement has been launched. It is for each individual, regardless of station in life to do his part.

HIGHWAY CONSTRUCTION ON THE WAY

Washington correspondents announce that eight of the 14 states described by the public works administration as dilatory in expenditure of public roads funds now have begun highway construction. These are the states: Arkansas, California, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma and South Carolina. A reminder that the congress appropriation is more than $400,000,000 federal road money. Why not make the dirt fly the nation over. Winter is almost here.

It is widely known that a large proportion of our older roads are unsuitable for modern traffic, which was not foreseen when they were built. It is also recognized that many of the new roads constructed in the past few years are unsuitable for the demands now being made upon them. This condition will exist so long as we continue to build roads that cannot serve both through truck and motor car service such as is required these modern days.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

When poor business hits a city, that city gets sick. When a city gets sick the only thing that can cure it is better business.

In order to have better business, a spirit of home pride and cooperation must be shown.

When all cooperate, hopeful signs can soon be seen; a growing unity among the people is soon noticeable.

The business men will wake up; they will realize that in order to get anything worth while they will have to go AFTER IT!

When every citizen cooperates, better business follows. If you have faith in the home city you should let others know about it.

Pet Crow Pays Master For Fun

By United Press
TALIHNA, Okla.—Jack Wilson's pet crow, Jim, is honest. When the bird broke a comb, he paid for it with a dime. Recently the bird, which picks pockets, pilfers, and performs every other annoying prank, was caught picking the teeth out of Wilson's vest pocket comb, Wilson acceded his pet.

"Jim" flew away, and soon returned to drop a shiny new dime amidst the ruins of the comb.

Distillers Prepare For Big Holiday

By United Press
CHICAGO.—American distillers are preparing for a big Christmas trade, and hoping their supply lasts through the holidays.

Liquor to quench the American thirst after the first big "spree" will have to be imported, distillers say. American distilleries cannot possibly catch up with the demand before next spring, they believe.

One European firm, it was learned, has announced it is ready to start 20,000,000 bottles of champagne to the United States as soon as repeal is effective.

The price which the consumer will be required to pay for the present American supply and that imported has not been decided upon, but one distiller predicted the price would be about $4 a quart for the best grades.

ALTHOUGH millions of Americans eat oysters solely because of their enjoyment of the mollusks as a food, it is satisfying to know that the richness in minerals, and other factors, make oysters an important and nutritious addition to the diet.

Food research chemists tell us that "marine fishes, mollusks and crustaceans contain a higher percentage of iodine than any other marine food, with the exception of marine algae. Oysters, clams and lobsters contain about 200 times as much iodine as milk, eggs and beefsteak."

It is evident that by using marine fish or shellfish in the diet two or three times each week, the amount of iodine ingested could be increased considerably. These facts should be of interest to the American people, especially to those living in the so-called goiterous belts in which the iodine content of the water and foods is below normal. This is important in planning the diet of young people living in districts where disorders of the thyroid gland are common.

Rich in Iron
In a new publication of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, Dr. E. J. Coulson points out that oysters contain many valuable minerals and that as a source of iron and copper, the oyster is comparable only with liver. In particular Dr. Coulson stresses the health value of the oyster stew made of a combination of oysters and milk.

Another interesting bit of information concerns the old fallacy

DENSMORE SHUTE—Britons gasped and gaped when he won the 1933 British Open over St. Andrews' deceptive fairways and angry bunkers. Golf prophets say Shute will line up with Golf Immortals. Answering a question, Shute recently said: "I have tried all the brands, and long ago found that Camels are milder, and what is even more important to any golfer, they do not jangle the nerves."

TOMMY ARMOUR—Often called "Wizard of the Irons," Armour has won a flock of championships, including the U. S. Open in 1927, the P. G. A. in 1930, the British Open in 1931. Tommy knows his golf and his cigarettes. "What do I think of Camels? They are my brand and have been for years. I smoke a lot but I must be sure that my nerves are healthy and my head is clear—that's why I prefer Camels."

GENE SARAZEN—This great golfer began his ways in 1922 when he became U. S. Open. He has been a consistent tournament winner. This year he won his third P. G. A. Championship. The subject of cigarettes Sarazen says: "I agree with Armour—I smoke Camels, too. They are good—and they never interfere with my nerves."

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

Men and women whose work and play demand healthy nerves and level heads prefer Camels. Active people agree that they can smoke these fine-flavored, milder cigarettes without fear of jangling their nerves.

Another thing about active people—they are pretty generally steady smokers... And, as anyone who smokes Camels will tell you, you can smoke as many of these cigarettes as you want—and never have a "cigarette" aftertaste. The last cigarette at night tastes as good as the first in the morning, if you smoke Camels.

Try a package of Camels today... Enjoy the superior flavor of their costlier tobaccos. If you are a steady smoker you will appreciate the fact that Camels never get on your nerves, never tire your taste.

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand. You will find Camels rich in flavor and delightfully mild.

CRAZY WATER HOTEL MINERAL WELLS, TEXAS

Forgotten Sweetheart by MARY RAYMOND

BEGIN HERE TODAY

BOB WESTON, son of a millionaire, falls in love with JOAN WARRING, a pretty Memphis girl. He has come to Memphis in connection with a new textile plant owned by his father.

Barbara, in order to show Joan at a disadvantage, invites her to a house party at which Bob is also guest. Barbara's plans are successful. Joan is left at ease among so many strangers. Meanwhile, she hears several girls openly criticizing her, she decides to leave the house and return home with JIM WARFIELD, who admires her.

A month passes with no word from Bob. Then one day on the street Joan meets Bob with Barbara and an older man.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI

A voice called, "Here, Joan—let me!"

She turned quickly and faced Bob. He helped her into the car, then stood by the still open door. Joan wished unhappily that she had listened to her mother's warning, "Better change into something else before you go. You might meet some of your friends."

"Haven't time," Joan had answered. "Whom would I meet, breezing around department stores and browsing around libraries?" She was wearing a plain, dark dress that had seen its best days. The dark beret had seemed suitable when she left the house on her round of tutoring.

The gray day had turned bright and sunny with the capriciousness of spring weather, and the sun had brought warmth. The dark crepe had seemed hot and heavy before she had reached the business section.

Now she was acutely conscious that she was unbecomingly dressed, that she looked hot and tired. She was aware at the same time of Bob's careful grooming, aware too that just in the background was Barbara, as exquisite as fresh in her spring suit as the flowers she was wearing.

After all those weeks of longing here was Bob standing close beside her and Joan wishing wildly that the earth would open suddenly and swallow her.

"How have you been, Joan?"

"Fine. How have you been?"

"All right. Busy. I'll be busier now that Dad is here." So the distinguished, elderly man was his father.

"It's nice for you to have your father with you."

"Yes, it's great. But he's a hard taskmaster. Believes in keeping everything tight at all times. Irrelevantly, "There's smut on your cheek, Joan."

Joan brought out her vanity case and carefully wiped off the little dark smudge, adding an extra touch of powder to her nose. Bob was smiling a little.

Chin high, unhappy eyes turned from him. Joan's slim, tanned hand moved toward the gears.

"Goodbye, Bob."

He closed the car door. It was like a period, concluding the brief conversation.

JOAN backed the shabby old car into the street, conscious of every rattle, and turned its nose toward Union glad to become a part of moving traffic. She was glad to put distance between her and the place that had witnessed her humiliation. She drove blindly, almost without seeing the lights of cars that flashed past or hearing the familiar creaks and groans of the four-year-old car.

It wasn't fair to have been caught like that when she was looking her worst, tired, wearing a wintry frock, her hair slipping carelessly out from under the dark beret. It wasn't fair for Barbara to have been with Bob, a picture of spring freshness and wearing his flowers. Evidently they were going to the Carlton for dinner. A family affair—Bob and Barbara and his father.

Joan was on the familiar old street now, grown dear through long association. A moment later she was out of the car and flying up the walk. Once inside the gloomy hall, she leaned against the door, fighting tears, getting command of herself before entering the living room.

The door opened and Mrs. Warring came into the hall. "Joan, dear. Is that you? I thought I heard someone come in." Her hands moved over the wall. The light switch clicked.

"Joan, is anything wrong?"

"I'm just a little tired, Mother."

"You shouldn't have gone down town. You drive yourself so, Joan. Gracious, your hands are like ice! It is turning colder, isn't it? Darling, come in to the fire. I've just built it up. Did you see anyone you know?"

"Nobody especially."

"Pat's in, dressing to go out again."

"I called for her but she had left the office."

Mrs. Warring bent to the fire, stirring it with the old brass poker. With her head back against the cushioned chair, eyes closed, Joan heard the affectionate voice rambling on. She felt the warmth of the fire gratefully.

AFTER a while words pricked through her detachment. "I'm worried about Pat," her mother was saying. "I didn't mention it before because you seemed so troubled yourself, dear. But Pat's not happy."

"Not happy?" Joan's eyes flew open. "Why, Mother, I hadn't noticed."

"Joan, it's three parties she goes to with Jerry. There's—drinking!"

"Well, lots of girls take cocktails," Joan said slowly. "I'm sure Pat will always be sensible."

"No, dear, she isn't sensible! Once while you were away she had to stay away from work. Oh, Joan, it was terrible!"

Pat losing her head—drinking too much? Oh, that was unthinkable! Joan thought that she must have a talk with Pat.

She started upstairs, then quickened her steps as she heard angry voices. The scene that followed was to live in Joan's memory. She heard Bill's furious voice and saw Pat, her face flushed above the green dress, swaying a little like a flower bending under a rough wind.

"You can abuse me all you like, Bill. I'll do as I please and there's nothing you can do about it!"

"Pat!" pleaded Joan.

"Don't you start, Joan. I'm no child. I'm 18 years old!"

"I know, Pat—"

"Eighteen!"

"I'm sick and tired of Jerry Forrester," Bill was saying. "I guess I was fooled as much as anyone at first. But he's no good. Amusing himself getting a kid tight!"

Pat's face went scarlet. Her eyes met Joan's unhappily.

"Joan, Bill's making a mountain out of nothing. Some of Jerry's friends threw a party and I took a drink—just a little one—"

Bill laughed mirthlessly. "I guess it was a little one! Two or three little strong ones that knocked you out cold!"

"Bill's right," Joan said. "Jerry isn't any good."

"Please, Joan! I won't have everybody interfering in my affairs. There's Jerry now." At the door she flung back. "Darn—I never saw such a family!"

"I'd like to spank her," Bill said.

"I know. But it wouldn't do any good. Pat feels grown up. I guess she'll have to find out things for herself."

Afterward those words were to come back to Joan.

"You've been drinking," Pat told Jerry as he assisted her into the car. "Too much."

"Now, little Prudence, don't start wet-blanking a happy evening," Jerry retorted. "If you have scruples, stay at home with them."

PAT did not reply, trying to control her anger. She was realizing more and more that Jerry was getting the upper hand. She had slipped lately into a conciliatory attitude. She hated herself for that.

"You've changed a lot," she said in a low tone. "You're not the same, Jerry."

"I haven't changed," Jerry said. "You have! I used to think you were lots of fun. I'm serious, Pat. If you're going to spoil the party, you'd better stay at home."

"Don't be silly," quickly. "You know I'm a good sport."

Well, Pat thought, she had been talking like Bill and Joan. It must have irritated him!

"All right then," Jerry's right hand covered hers for a minute. "That's my girl!"

They were leaving the city behind, the car moving swiftly now along a dark highway.

"Where are we going?" Pat asked.

"You'll be surprised. Some place you've never been before."

Some time later they turned into a broad driveway, flanked on each side by trees. Through more trees lights flickered like fireflies in the darkness. The sound of music came faintly. Soon the flickering lights merged into a blaze of color, the faint music into a blare of sound. Meaningless saxophone, the whine of violins, the staccato notes of a piano.

"A party?" Pat queried. "Who's giving it?" she asked as Jerry did not reply.

"Don't be absurd! It's a road house."

"I won't go in," Pat said firmly.

"All right. Don't. I'll take you home!" It was what Pat termed Jerry's "dangerous tone." "I'll leave you and come back alone."

"You wouldn't!"

"Certainly I would. I've no time for a prude! He was beginning to turn the car.

Pat, with a look at his set face, said slowly, "All right. I'll go in."

"And mind, you behave," Jerry said. "I'm tired of these tantrums!"

A description of the mission work in Argentina was given by their director, Mrs. S. C. Walker, and was concluded with a story, "Red Roses for Their God."

The need for kind deeds was discussed and this lesson exemplified in Bible verses, given in unison by the children.

The L. T. Sunday School Class Has Novel Party

The L. T. Sunday school class of the senior department of the Methodist church enjoyed a novel party at the home of the class teacher, Miss Lorraine Taylor, Saturday night.

The young people were received at 8 o'clock, and were given their instructions by the hostess, for their paper chase hunt, which they were to pursue in pairs.

The A. F. Taylor residence was cleverly decorated for the occasion, in Halloween devices, with jack-o-lanterns over the lights, and bouquets of golden glow and yellow zinnias placed throughout the rooms.

A list of 20 articles was furnished the couples, and the one that collected the most was to receive a favor.

Some of the unusual things to be found were a beet, skeleton key, thumb tacks, and on down through the list.

The couple that brought in the most articles, Miss Ophelia Smith and Gilbert Clark, shared the prize, a big orange moon sucker, with mints for eyes and a candy mouth.

Miss Taylor served an appropriate and satisfying lunch of hamburgers, sandwiches, cookies, and lemonade to the merry group.

Plate favors were peanut shells, enclosing a written fortune and fastened with red ribbons.

Class members present, each of whom was entitled to invite her own boy friend, included Misses

Bruce Pipkin had his ninth birthday happily celebrated by his mother, Mrs. Grady Pipkin, at the family home Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, when nine little boy friends were asked to enjoy the event, and the novelty of the circus parade, which was developed in the arrangements of the table and decorations for the birthday cake.

The round dining table laid in Madeira linen and centered with the cake, had novelties that developed a genuine animal parade.

A double row of animal crackers marched about the cake in sawdust rings of coconut.

The silver tray beneath the cake was encircled by a similar procession, and another parade marched around the table's edge; between these, wagons made of stick candy, drawn by candy dogs, formed their circles.

The children's places were marked by toy automobiles as favors, and at the "party" hour, ice cream was served with the birthday cake.

A brisk and happy morning hour was spent in out of door games, by Ray Gene McDonald, Bobby Kessler, Jack McDonald, Jerry Bailey, Wood Butler, Cone Johnson, Bruce Pipkin, the honor guest; T. J. Haley Jr., and Virgil T. Seaberry Jr.

Young Bruce received many useful and pleasing gifts from his small friends.

Martha Dorcas Bible Class Heard Interesting Reports

The Martha Dorcas Bible class of the Methodist church Sunday school, had a most interesting meeting Sunday morning, presided over by their vice president, Mrs. Ed T. Cox Jr., in the absence of president Mrs. H. O. Satterwhite.

Hymn, ensemble, "In the Garden," and prayer by Mrs. Milton

Newman, opened the meeting.

A wonderful reading was presented by Miss Oneida Russell, preceding the brief business period in which Mrs. E. M. Anderson, chairman visiting committee, reported flowers had been sent for the class to Mrs. W. J. Peters, at the time of her mother's death, and that Mrs. F. A. Jones, who was ill at the hospital had received flowers from Mrs. George Brogdon, member of the class. Mrs. Olin Stover of San Angelo, expressed thanks for the greeting postal cards sent her by members.

Mrs. Anderson presented a large wall map to the class, for use and aid in the study of Paul's ministry.

The lesson given by Mrs. Charles C. Robey, class teacher, brought a fine message in "The Gospel of the People and the Life of Paul."

Class prayer in unison closed the meeting.

Katharine Hepburn, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Adolphe Menjou!

Every name a box-office magnet, and in RKO-Radio Pictures' "Morning Glory" they are all united in a swift moving film which tells a story that parallels in many respects Miss Hepburn's own real life experience in fighting her way to stage fame.

A star who swept comet-like to screen heights in one film, the dynamic Miss Hepburn has captured the popular imagination as no other favorite in the history of the cinema. She's the toast of the hour, the talk of the towns, and one of the real mysteries of the screen.

A star like that with two such top notch luminaries as Fairbanks, Jr., and Menjou as cast running mates, RKO-Radio has scored the master coup of presenting them in a powerful drama which will attract added interest because of its resemblance to Miss Hepburn's life.

The role the spectacular Hepburn girl plays is that of an unknown novice in the act of acting who goes to New York and makes Broadway yield her acclaim. There are bitter disappointments, heart-breaking reverses, and periods of heroic struggle before her final dazzling triumph.

Fairbanks has the highly sympathetic role of a young assistant to a theatrical producer, who believes in and loves the courageous girl. Menjou is seen as his suave and polished chief.

The screen story is based upon a play by Zoe Akins.
