Truman Outlines Conditions For Peace Talk With Stalin

New Storms Halt Haylift Over Nevada

(By The Associated Press)

WINTER slapped down the Nevada haylift Thursday but pulled its punches in the Nebraska, South Dakota and Wyoming snow disaster area where steady relief progress was made.

Other sections of the nation had much less trying conditions. Rain and snow fell in the Midwest and the Pacific coastal area. It was unseasonally chilly in the East. And the South recovered somewhat from recent unprecedented cold.

Snow Halts Haylift

In Congress, a second $500,000 appropriation was passed to pay for the herculean task of reviving snow-choked expanses of the West.

The Nevada haylift operation by the Air Force was halted by snow squalls driven by high winds. Road diggers were warned of another six or more inches of snow by Friday morning. How much work the wind and new snow would undo was uncertain. Meanwhile scores of sheep herds remained in dire straits despite earlier haylift aid.

Farther east, on the other side of the Rockies, 912 pieces of snow-fighting machinery and 3,994 men cut roads through drifts in Nebraska, South Dakota and Wyoming. There was no immediate threat of more heavy snow here, but another night of sub-zero temperatures boded more hardship for snow-bound families and livestock.

Army Pushes Work

The three-state effort, directed by the Fifth Army, freed 4,856 persons in a 24-hour period. Its commander, Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, termed it "the greatest bulldozer operation ever organized."

In operation were 673 bulldozers, 123 graders and snow plows, and 116 of the Army's weasels, full-tracked vehicles which climbed over and through drifts on emergency missions.

Though no new weather obstacles arose, many families were reported burning fence posts and furniture to keep warm while awaiting help. Food supplies were nearing exhaustion for other families.

Meanwhile, heavy snows clogged roads and cut visibility to block efforts to get relief to 6,000 marooned Navajo Indians, in Arizona, the International News Service reported. Giant bulldozers that were trying to push their way into the Seligman-Flagstaff-Williams area, on the northwestern rim of the vast isolated reservation were turned back at Winslow, Ariz., by a new storm.

Cardinal Admits 'Partial' Guilt

By ENDRE MARTON
Associated Press Staff Writer

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Feb. 3.—The prosecution tonight charged Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, now on trial for treason, had attempted to get U. S. Minister Selden Chapin to help him escape prison and flee Hungary by plane.

Hungary's Roman Catholic primate pleaded partial guilt earlier to the government charges against him. He firmly denied, however, that he had plotted to overthrow Hungary's Communist-dominated regime.

All of the things charged against him, the cardinal said, occurred early in 1947, "when many people thought that a third world war was inevitable."

American Envoy Accused

Cardinal Mindszenty said that in the future he would have regard for the sovereignty of the Hungarian government. He also offered to withdraw from his office for a time if such a move would help establish peace be-

Senators Wrangle Over New Labor Bill

HST Claims He Has Strike Curb Power

By ROSE McKEE
INS Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—President Truman declared today he can curb major strikes without any injunction power being spelled out in law, and his statement was challenged by Senate Republican leaders.

Mr. Truman told a news conference that he had authority to deal with labor disputes endangering the nation's safety under the Constitution both as President and Commander-in-Chief.

The President's statement was challenged immediately by Sen. Taft (R-Ohio) who asserted that in peacetime "Mr. Truman has no power of seizure without a statute, and no power to get an injunction without a statute."

Clark Backs HST

Taft said at a night session of the Senate Labor committee:

"The very suggestion that such powers exist is a threat to the liberty of the people of the United States.

"There is no authority anywhere which creates even a prima ficie case of such powers on the part of the President."

CIO General Council Arthur J. Goldberg also questioned the President's position, which was backed up, however, by an opinion from Attorney General Tom Clark.

Goldberg told the Senate committee that there are no injunction sanctions in the administration's proposed new labor law, and he said he did not believe that Mr. Truman has authority to ob-

Accidents Credited With Killing 98,000 Americans In 1948

(By The International News Service)

CHICAGO, Feb. 3. — The National Safety council reported today accidents resulted in 98,000 deaths in the nation during 1948, injured 10,300,000 persons and cost the nation $7,200,000,000.

The council listed accidents in the home as the nation's number one killer and said such mishaps took 34,500 lives last year, 500 more than in 1947.

The overall 1948 death toll from all types of accidents was two per cent below 1947.

Traffic Toll Declines

The 1948 traffic toll of 32,000 was two per cent under the total of 32,697 of 1947 and 7,969 below the all time high of 39,969 established in 1941.

The council said the reduction in motor vehicle deaths was "numerically modest but large in relation to soaring travel miles."

Twenty-two states showed a decline in traffic deaths, headed by Rhode Island, where the drop from 1947 was 41 per cent.

Of the 45 states reporting their traffic tolls, Wyoming led the 19 states showing an increase in the number of deaths. It reported a 31 per cent increase.

Among cities with more than 200,000 population, Syracuse, N. Y., reported the largest reduction in traffic fatalities—46 per cent. Richmond, Va., was second with a 33 per cent drop, and Los Angeles third with a 29 per cent decrease.

Fifty-two cities of 10,000 population or more completed the year without a traffic death. The largest city to achieve this record was Madford, Mass., with a population of 63,100. Decatur, Ill., and Vallejo, Calif., were the second and third largest cities to go through 1948 without a traffic death.

UN Leaders Praise Stand

By PIERRE J. HUSS

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Feb. 3—The United Nations hailed President Truman's declaration today that peace talks with the Russians or others can be conducted only within the framework of the 58-nation body.

The presidential assertion was welcomed at Lake Success as turning the weight of personal conferences involving top statesmen back into the channel offered by the General Assembly in a resolution appealing to world powers to settle differences and get the peace treaties signed.

It is generally agreed that President Truman has left the door wide open for a meeting of the heads of the four big powers in accordance with the assembly resolution.

New Move Foreseen

The second communication from Premier Stalin to Kingsbury Smith, European general manager of International News Service, advising that he would be willing to meet President Truman in Russia, Poland or Czechoslovakia has strengthened belief that the Russian chief is looking for an opportunity to launch another round of top-level talks.

UN observers are certain that the last move has not yet been made and would not take it as a surprise if Stalin in the next days let it be known that he is willing to meet with the heads of the United States, France and Britain.

Top officials at UN headquarters reiterated their intention of placing at the disposal of such a meeting all available facilities in the United States and Europe.

Group Backs Policy

Shortly after President Truman's declaration, the board of the American Association for the United Nations issued a report strongly counselling the United States to deal through UN in its relations with Russia.

The far-flung group, which is using the report as basis for its 1949 educational program, counts on its board of directors such national figures as Sumner Welles, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Thomas Lamont.

Street Naming Plan Submitted

By ROGER SOUTHALL
Avalanche Staff Writer

A system for naming streets in areas not covered by the existing pattern was given the City Planning commission by the standing committee on Betterment at a regular meeting of the planning group last night in City Hall.

The report concerned in part a meeting here Jan. 11 which was attended by K. N. Clapp and Chas. A. Guy, both of the City Planning commission, and R. L. Oldham, city engineer and ex-officio member, as well as a number of other civic leaders. The meeting was held to work out a standard system of naming streets in subdivisions and other parts of the city which were not covered by the existing pattern.

Street Naming Proposed

Last night's report recommended that avenues east of Ave. A be given names of trees in alphabetical order; that streets north of First be named alphabetically for colleges and universities, with short streets "between" regular blocks carrying corresponding alphabetized names; and avenues west of College Ave., being named for cities in the eastern United States, also in alphabetical order.

With minor changes, the street-naming system reported on at last night's meeting is the same as that formulated at the special meeting.

The commission also dealt with a number of other matters, one of which was the official recommendation of the commission that the city dispense with further serv-

Giant Plane Sets Record

By JAMES J. STREBIG
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3 — The Navy's giant Constitution landed at National airport at 8:30 p. m., (CST), tonight, nine hours and 35 minutes out of San Francisco, non-stop, with the largest passenger load ever to span America by air.

The 72 passengers and 18 crewmen covered the 2,557-mile airways route at an average speed of 268 mile an hour.

The 184,000-pound transport was eased on the runway so skillfully that some passengers were not aware it was down.

Meals Are Served

The flight was the first regular operational trip in a six months series of transcontinental runs to be made as part of the Navy's evaluation of the largest aircraft it has ever owned. The Constitution, largest in the Lockheed family of planes, will be used regularly as a passenger transport between Patuxent River, Md., Naval Air station and Moffett field, near San Francisco.

The passengers were accommodated entirely on the upper deck, capable of seating 92, in a cabin with grey walls, rose carpet and dark blue seats.

They had coffee and cookies for a take off snack, T-bone steak and all that goes with it for lunch, sandwiches and ice cream before landing.

The plane can accommodate 168 passengers if used entirely for personnel, but in its normal operation the two vast holds of the

FHA Chief Proposes Vast Building Plan

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3. — Raymond M. Foley, Federal Housing administrator, told Congress today the nation needs between 17 and 18 million new dwellings within the next 10 years.

He said the government must provide outright grants as well as loans to cities to help them clear and redevelop slum areas.

Testifying before the Senate Banking committee, Foley said:

"In city after city, the rates of infant mortality, disease, juvenile delinquency, crime and fires are at least twice as great in slum and blighted areas as in the city at large."

He mentioned Boston and Newark, N. J., as examples of the need for a nationwide slum clearance program.

Foley appeared in support of bills designed to carry out the administration's program for long-range, government-subsidized slum clearance, public housing and rural homes.

Chairman Sparkman (D-Ala) said he hopes to complete public hearings in about two weeks and then draft legislation for Senate action.

While Foley waited to testify, Republicans and Democrats clashed over how many subsidized dwellings should be attempted and how much they should cost.

Eviction Ban Studied

Senator Ellender (D-La) urged approval of a one-package bill which would authorize federal aid for constructing 1,050,000 public housing units over the next seven years.

But Senator Flanders (R-Vt) objected that such a vast program might take away scarce materials and labor from private builders. He contended this would only intensify the current housing shortage and high prices.

Meanwhile, Chairman Spence (D-Ky) of the House Banking committee said Congress may write a ban against mass eviction of tenants in its new rent control bill. The House group starts hearings next Monday on the administration's bill to extend and strengthen rent controls for two years.

The new bill gives the federal housing expediter full authority to halt illegal evictions and to bring action against landlords if necessary. At present, tenants must go to court to protect themselves.

Wallgren Named To Federal Post

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3. (AP) — President Truman today announced the appointment of former Gov. Mon C. Wallgren of Washington state as chairman of the National Security Resources board.

The one time colleague of Mr. Truman in the Senate will receive $14,000 a year in his new post.

Takes Steelman's Job

Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman has been acting as head of the resources board since the resignation some weeks ago of Arthur G. Hill.

Wallgren, 57, is a native of Des Moines, Ia.

He was a retail merchant at Everett, Wash., until 1932 when he was elected to the U. S. House of Representatives. He was elected to the Senate in 1940, but left it four years later after being elected governor of Washington.

He was defeated for re-election as governor last year although Mr. Truman, with whom he campaigned in Washington, carried the state. Wallgren is a veteran of World War I.

Facilities Of UN Proposed

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3—President Truman declared today the United States is willing to talk peace with Russia but only within the structure of the United Nations.

The President made it clear the door is still open to settlement of all differences between the East and West. But he insisted the established structure of the United Nations must be used by Russia to end the "cold war."

The President, in effect, ruled out both the Council of Foreign Ministers and the old wartime form of "Big Three" talks as an instrument of negotiating peace.

Backs Acheson's Stand

He backed Secretary of State Dean Acheson to the hilt in his declaration yesterday that the United States would not enter into bilateral talks with Soviet Premier Stalin.

At the same time, Mr. Truman renewed his assertion that he would be glad to see Stalin at any time he might come to Washington for a visit. The President was asked at his news conference:

"Would this government, in conjunction with other powers aside from Russia, consider entering into peace talks with Russia outside the United Nations?"

Consulted By Acheson

The President, with some emphasis, said:

"It would not. I think Mr. Acheson made that perfectly clear."

The President said Acheson had made a complete and thorough answer to the peace overtures of Soviet Premier Stalin.

He said that Acheson, before framing his pronouncements Wednesday, had consulted him.

Beyond this, the President refused to comment on Stalin's "peace bid" statements to Kingsbury Smith, European general manager of the International News Service.

Suggestion Causes Laughter

He said, however, that when he attended the Potsdam conference three and one half years ago he personally invited the Russian premier to visit him in the United States.

He added that if reporters would study the record he felt they would find that this was all

One Dead, Three Hurt In Wrecks

One person was killed and three others injured in traffic accidents on the South Plains Thursday.

Kenneth Lee Goen, 24, of Anton, was killed when his 1940 Chevrolet sedan rammed into the rear of a truck-tractor five miles from Lubbock on Shallowater highway at 8:15 a. m. Thursday.

Goen, father of a three-day-old son, was returning home from a visit with his wife and the infant in West Texas hospital here when the accident occurred.

Pulling Off Highway

The truck-tractor, driven by Russell W. Love, 24, of Benton, Ark., had slowed its speed and was pulling off the highway to assist a third car which was stuck when Goen's sedan crashed into the rear of the heavy vehicle, investigating highway patrolmen reported.

Love escaped serious injury.

Goen was pronounced dead on arrival at Lubbock Memorial hospital, where he was taken by Rix Funeral home ambulance.

Funeral arrangements for Goen late last night had not been completed, Bryan McDonald & Son Funeral home reported.

He is survived by the widow; the son, Boyd Wayne; the parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Goen; two sisters, Johnnie Nell Goen and Mrs. Ruby Lindsey; and two brothers, Boyd and Don. All the survivors are residents of Anton.

The mishap brought the traffic toll on the South Plains to nine since the first of the year.

'THE COMMUNIST CONSPIRACY IN THE U.S.'

House Probers' Activities Scored By FDR After Labor Official Testified Of Communist Moves

By ROBERT E. STRIPLING
(Chief Investigator, House Un-American Activities Committee, 1938-1948; Edited By Bob Considine)

THE perils of inquiring into the Red conspiracy in the United States began to show themselves immediately after the first hearings of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

President Roosevelt grew quite indignant over the tone of the committee's second witness. He was John P. Frey, president of the Metal Trades Department of the AFL.

No. 4

On August 12, 1938, he outlined to the Committee the spread of Communists and Communism in the CIO, a story which, though attacked at the time, has long since become a well-established fact.

FDR Opposed Move

Several days later Chairman Dies visited the White House, along with the late Sen. Morris Sheppard of Texas, to plead for a government-financed dam in Dies Congressional district. The President had always been quite friendly to Dies. He had enormously enjoyed Dies' remarks, a few years previous, when the Texan inducted him into the "Demagogues Club" at a Democratic outing on Jefferson Island.

But now the President hardly spoke to Dies, though he greeted Sheppard warmly. The men discussed the dam for a time, and then the President asked Sheppard to step aside, so that he could speak to Dies.

Roosevelt then criticized Dies sharply for "... letting this thing turn into a denunciation of the CIO." Dies protested that he had invited John L. Lewis to appear, but Lewis had refused. As Dies later related it to the Committee:

"The President became very upset. He told me that no one was interested in Communism; that he had heard about it all his life but had seen nothing of it; that it was not a menace. He urged me to

Gen. Hodges Retires After Long Service To Nation As Soldier

By HAL BOYLE
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK — Another of the fabled figures of the second World War is gone from the American military scene.

And this one — Gen. Courtney H. Hodges — leaves a question mark behind him as he goes into retirement.

The question in many minds probably is:

"Who is he?"

Well, he is a shy, quiet-voiced, gray-haired, slender man who commanded what some soldiers regard as the most powerful trained striking force in history—the American First Army.

Led Army Into France

The faces of Generals Eisenhower, MacArthur, Bradley and Patton are known to practically every man and boy in the land. Yet it is doubtful whether one American out of five could pick from a group in uniform the portrait of Gen. Hodges, who rolled a vast Army from St. Lo in France to the River Elbe in Germany.

Why? He has had quite a career in 43 years. He funked out of West Point, enlisted in the Army as a private and rose to the rank of full general. The American First Army he commanded had quite a career, too.

It was the American First Army that broke the Nazi line at St. Lo, in Normandy, after being the first army into France. It was the first army into Paris. It was the First American Army into Belgium.

It was the American First Army that was first into Germany. It was the first to pierce the Siegfried line. It was the first to capture a major German city — Aachen. It was the American First Army that was first across the Rhine at Remagen. It was the American First Army that was the first Allied army to link up with the Russians along the River Elbe.

Gen. Patton Better Known

There is a big difference between achievement and recognition. And there is a big difference between the public renown accorded Gen. George Patton and his famous Third Army and that enjoyed by Gen. Hodges and his First Army.

Today, Patton, dead, is still better known than Hodges, alive and retired.

It is doubtful that Hodges regrets his name is less in the public memory than high-tempered glamorous "Georgie" Patton's. But the fame he dosen't desire for himself he always has hoped would go to the Army he led for the feats it performed.

Perhaps because he did flunk out of the military academy and worked up from private to general, Hodges became more tradition-bound than Patton, who was no scholar at West Point but did eventually graduate.

It is more likely, on the other hand, that the difference stemmed from a fundamental difference in personality. Life was always easy for Patton, the aristocrat, and hard for Hodges.

Hodges always fought his battles quietly, silently. Patton fought noisily—and advertised.

If Hodges today has less of a hold on the public heart, it might be because a general who was a private, perhaps remained — too private. He never played up himself. But what his Army did will live and last.

And that is the way the little gentleman from Georgia would prefer to let the record stand.

U. S. Copper Firm In Peru Is Ordered To Grant Pay Hikes

LIMA, Peru, Feb. 3. (AP) — The ministry of justice and labor today ordered the American-owned Cerro De Pasco copper corporation to grant retroactive wage increases and overtime pay to its workers.

The ministry decree called for an increase of 1,80 soles (11.26 cents) in regular daily wages, an additional payment of 20 centavos (1¼ cents) an hour for work done between the hours of 6 p.m. and 6 a.m. Both raises were retroactive to July 1, 1948.

The company also was directed to pay 30 per cent extra for overtime from now on.

The ministry decree was issued in response to an appeal presented by Cerro De Pasco miners last September, in which they promised to present no further demands at least until 1950.

British Reds Reported Moving Underground In Face Of Purge

By WALTER KOLARZ
United Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Feb. 3.—British Communists are showing a tendency to go underground.

Political observers say they are reverting to pre-war camouflage tactics. Their object is to meet more successfully the anti-Communist campaign started both by the Labor government and the trade union leadership.

The new tactics, observers said, are designed to protect the individual Communist Party members against purges now in progress among both civil servants and trade union officials.

The British Communist Party is believed to have instructed its members among the civil servants to resign outwardly from the party and to dissociate themselves from it but to keep discreet contact with the party machinery.

Secrecy Sought

Thus the Communist Party would have in future a category of secret members known only to trusted party officials and otherwise considered as "non-party people" or as "sympatizers." Similar tactics are known to have been applied successfully by numerous Communist parties before the war.

British trade union quarters believe the Communist camouflage maneuver will make itself felt in the British trade union movements as well. The Communist Party politbureau, it was said, is taking for granted that the front-rank Communist trade union leaders will have to leave their posts before long.

In view of that eventuality, trade union circles suspect, a second set of Communists will be standing ready to set in and to carry on the infiltration work.

Such new Communist agents in the trade union movement, trade union circles gather, are likely to operate most carefully and are expected to seek election to trade union posts in the disguise of "non-Communists."

Trade union quarters admit it would be more difficult to counteract the maneuvers of the new type of underground Communists than the intrigues of openly-operating party members.

They claim the campaign against the latter, which was started last November, has been eminently successful so far, since more than half of the almost 20 unions affiliated with the TUC have endorsed the official anti-Communist line of the TUC general council.

The remaining unions are holding executive committee meetings and almost all of them are expected to subscribe to the purge of Communist trade union officials. The TUC pamphlet warning the individual unions against Communist infiltration has become a best-seller and three editions were sold out in December alone.

The official anti-Communism of the TUC met opposition only in isolated cases, such as the Scottish mine workers.

Settlement Reached In Compensation Suit

Judge Dan Blair of 72nd district court Thursday approved a compromise agreement whereby Margaret Driver Simmons, a negro woman, recovered $1,500 in compensation benefits growing out of the murder of her husband Curtis here Nov. 27, 1946.

The recovery was apportioned, two-thirds to her, one-third to her counsel. Costs were adjudged against the defendant, Texas Employers Insurance association.

The suit had been brought upon the woman's allegations that her husband was slain when in course of employment at an oil mill, described as a compensation insurance subscriber. The husband, she said in her petition, was killed under such circumstances as to make his death "compensable."

A jury was waived and the settlement agreement announced to Judge Blair for his approval.

The court concluded that "whether the death occurred under such circumstances as to be compensable is a matter of such uncertainty as to make this a proper case for compromise settlement."

Willie Barnes, another negro, was indicted on a murder charge in connection with the slaying and now is in a Missouri insane asylum from which he had escaped and come to Lubbock, officials said.

CHANGING FRAME—Women are getting bigger, but better to look at, says Louise Douglas, Chicago corset designer.

After watching the show change for 30 years, the designer declares today's women are broader through the shoulder, hips and bust and, on the average, one inch taller. Also, she adds, they are healthier.

PRIZED POSSESSIONS

WHAT is your most prized possession? That question formed the theme for a program presented at a program for Zeta Chi chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, Wednesday night and the young women reported a most enjoyable evening.

Mrs. Ray Chapman displayed a set of bone china doll dishes, handed down from her grandmother; a fragile dainty collection and with every piece intact.

Mrs. Ivan Mayfield believed her piano is her most treasured possession.

For Mrs. R. B. Parkinson the vote goes to a crocheted bedspread. Her mother crocheted when Mrs. Parkinson practiced the piano. While she ran the scales her mother plied the shining needle and lent encouragement.

MRS. Stanley Cotton voted her grandmother's wedding shoes as her most prized possession. They are size 3 and ½ and incidentally, petite Mrs. Cotton can wear the shoes.

Antiques that have been handed down from generations are things of beauty to Mrs. Cecil Pickens and Mrs. Galloway displayed a berry spoon that had been in her family for years.

Mrs. H. I. Linn thinks that a baby ring, cut down from a ring worn by her father, who died before she was born, must be the most highly prized of her possessions.

LAST PRAYER

WE mentioned a prayer given by the late Dr. Peter Marshall, Senate chaplain, the other day. Here is his last prayer, written two days before his death and read by Dr. Clarence W. Crawford, Baptist:

"Deliver us, our Father, from futile hopes and from clinging to lost causes, that we may move into ever-growing calm and ever-widening horizons.

"Where we cannot convince, let us be willing to persuade, for small deeds done are better than great deeds planned.

"We know that we cannot do everything. But help us to do something. For Jesus sake.

"Amen."

It seems a great pity that such a man should have been cut down in his prime; a man with a vision and with a message.

IS HE HERE?

A HUNT is on by the Square Deal Pictures corporation of Ossining, N. Y., for a young man to be starred in a series of motion pictures now in preparation.

Candidates for the part should send photographs and complete background and description of themselves to the company in that city.

While the successful applicant must be well built and good looking, the company is insisting that he also have a certain idealism and basic character. He should be about six feet tall, preferably blond and blue-eyed and in his early twenties. He need not have had previous acting experience, but will be chosen rather for latent ability. The films will depict the struggles of a typical American youth to adapt himself to a complex civilization. They will be in serial form.

WHO knows but that such a young man is living right here in our midst? We'd like to see one or two of them try at getting the contract.

Today's Town Talk

EDDIE STEWART, trombonist and novelty soloist with big-time orchestras, will leave Lubbock today for a month's engagement with George Olson's orchestra at the Roosevelt hotel in New Orleans.

A son of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Stewart, sr., who have recently moved here from Midland, Eddie has been in town for several weeks, and after returning from his trip to Louisiana, he plans to "settle down" in Lubbock and stop being a traveling trombonist.

Although he has played longest with the Olson outfit, the pleasant brown-haired Eddie has previously played with Wayne King, Alvino Ray, Johnny Long, Eddie Howard, Teddy Phillips and the Majestic Recording Studio band. He has been one third of a vocal trio with the Olson, Phillips and Howard bands.

His plans for the near future include doing some teaching in a private studio and working in a local music shop. But like everyone who has let band music get into their blood, Eddie's principal pipe dream is, "Maybe eventually, I'll have a little combo or band of my own."

Celebrating their birthday tomorrow will be Mrs. Tilda Martin, 2432 Twenty-second, mother of Mrs. Noble Sides, 1524 Twenty-fifth; and Miss Margaret W. Weeks, 2802 Twentieth, who is dean of the division of home economics at Texas Tech.

Bingo will be the feature of tonight's family night at the Lubbock Country club.

Only members of the club and their house guests may attend.

Wearing a dacia suit complemented by a wheat colored milan hat, Miss Phylliss Johnson, assistant cataloguer in the Texas Tech library and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Johnson, sr., of Philadelphia, Miss., became the bride of William F. Raffaniello, instructor in the Tech English department, in a single ring ceremony read Monday, Jan. 31, at 11 a. m. in St. Elisabeth's Catholic rectory by Father William Blakeslee.

Miss Olivia Remmler, maid of honor, wore a brown suit with a hat of matching straw, and William MacDonald, attended the bridegroom as best man.

The couple is at home at 2902 Twentieth.

A red satin heart edged in Normandy lace and surrounded by white cupids holding red bows and arrows formed a centerpiece for the luncheon table laid with a cut work cloth when Mesdames John Spikes, Irving L. Jones, and R. M. Williamson were hostesses in the Spikes home, 1903 Twenty-third, Wednesday honoring Mrs. John Leslie Spikes.

A bridal nosegay of lilies of the valley, double hearts and white satin ribbon marked the honoree's place, and Valentine favors were used.

Luncheon guests were Mesdames W. C. McManus, W. J. Spikes, D. E. Sellers, J. R. Weiss, M. L. Shepherd, R. C. Young, A. T. Cocanougher, Douglas Witt, Bryan McDonald, Jimmy Edwards, G. R. Kennedy, W. J. Spikes, jr., Owen Gilbreath, the honoree and Miss Nelda Chapman.

A hostess gift was presented to the honored guest.

Featuring a Valentine theme in their decorative motif, South Plains Optometric society will entertain with a semi-formal dinner-[illegible] in the Lubbock hotel ballroom tonight.

About 70 guests are expected to attend including the doctors, their wives, optometric assistants and their escorts.

Dr. Gordon Richardson is president of the society, and Dr. W. M. Cauley is secretary.

Las Cresas club will have its annual presentation dance tonight at 8 p. m. in the Hilton hotel.

The decoration motif has not been revealed.

Valentine Luncheon Is Given By Class

Phebean class of First Baptist church attended a Valentine luncheon given Thursday at the annex. Mrs. Mack Mead brought a devotion using the theme of "Love" and Mrs. Russell Ray taught a Bible lesson.

Mrs. L. E. Stone discussed plans for a class membership contest.

House Probers Under Fire From High Officials In Early Days

concentrate on Nazism and Fascism and forget Communism."

DIES was dismissed from the President's office after refusing to refrain from having the Committee hear the rest of Frey's story.

From Frey's testimony the Committee moved on through another Nazi hearing, then began bringing in witnesses from New York and Washington to support its suspicions that there was Communist domination in the WPA's Federal Writers Project and Federal Theater Project, both of which had the warm sympathetic support of Mrs. Roosevelt.

That did it.

J. B. Matthews, a former Communist fellow traveler (and, incidentally, the originator of that apt tag), told the Committee on August 19, 1938, in the course of explaining Communist tactics:

"The Communist Party relies heavily upon the carelessness or indifference of thousands of prominent citizens in lending their names for its propaganda purposes.

Used Big Names

"For example, the French newspaper 'Le Soir,' which is owned by the Communist Party (denied at the time but confirmed in 1948), recently featured hearty greetings from Clark Gable, Robert Taylor, James Cagney and even Shirley Temple.

"The League of Women Shoppers boasts of the membership of Miriam Hopkins and Bette Davis. A list of such persons could be expanded almost indefinitely. No one, I hope, is going to claim that any one of these persons in particular is a Communist. The unfortunate fact, however, remains that most of them unwittingly serve, albeit in this slight way, the purposes of the Communist Party. Their names have definite propaganda value which the Party is quick to exploit."

It seemed a constructive, thoughtful revelation. But it was ingeniously turned against the Committee by two Cabinet officers. In a speech shortly after that, Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes said:

"They've (the Committee) gone to Hollywood and there discovered a great Red plot. They have found dangerous radicals there, led by little Shirley Temple. Imagine the great Committee raiding her nursery and seizing her dolls as evidence!"

At the same time Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, wrote:

"Perhaps it is fortunate that Shirley Temple was born an American citizen and that we will not have to debate the issue raised by the preposterous revelations of your Committee in regard to this innocent and likeable child."

Matthews' words were forgotten in the gales of laughter that sprang from these warped interpretations of what he actually had said. Heywood Broun's brilliant column added fresh laughter, and —on this ludicrous note — the Committee actually neared collapse.

DIES stopped the laughter, if not the abuse, by gaining time on a national network to repeat exactly what Matthews said. He called more witnesses, immediately thereafter, and was soon able to identify as Communist fronts the following:

American League for Peace and Democracy, Workers Alliance, International Labor Defense, Friends of the Soviet Union, International Workers Order, American Student Union, National Negro Congress, American Youth Congress.

This aroused considerable indignation at the time on the part of the organizations named. But the Attorney General subsequently placed all these groups on the official list of front organizations.

Two overtures were made to Dies during these hectic early days of the Committee's work.

Two Offers Rejected

Herbert Bayard Swope offered to help establish a private foundation to combat subversive activities, and to urge the appointment of Dies as its head. Swope told Dies of his close relationship with the President.

Robert Wolfort, secretary of the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee, offered to supply Dies with certain personnel to help him run his inquiries.

Dies was wary of both offers and rejected them. On the day after he turned down Swope's offer, the President administered his severest public rebuke to Dies.

The salaries of our staff of four, plus witness fees and transportation expenses, blotted up most of the $25,000 budget several weeks before the end of the Committee's allotted seven month term. Dies mentioned this in two of his speeches, and the response opened our eyes.

Money began to pour into the office: nickles, dimes, bills, checks up to $500. A group of three businessmen called upon Dies and offered the Committee $5,000 to use in any way it saw fit. On a trip to Detroit, a representative of Henry Ford called at our hotel and offered, in exchange for three $1 bills, to deliver new Lincoln cars to Dies, Rep. Mosier and myself—as gifts of Mr. Ford.

We had to reject the cars, with thanks, and the Committee depleted the last of its funds by hiring two extra girls to return the money sent in.

IT was a warming experience, especially the letters that accompanied the lesser contributions. We all felt that it was perhaps even a miracle, for theretofore little but grief had been our lot.

And so it was with something of a flourish that we presented the first annual report to the Committee, a 124-page statement which concluded, prophetically enough, "Our Committee has only scratched the surface of the un-American and subversive activities of those who are invading America with their alien ideologies.

"The continued success of the investigation will depend solely upon the courage, fearlessness, and the thoroughness with which it is conducted, and upon the assumption and maintenance throughout the investigation of a strictly nonpartisan attitude and policy."

Police Recover Stolen Autos

Two cars reported stolen in the city before midnight Wednesday were marked recovered Thursday by city police.

One car, taken from Don Jennings of 1963 Texas avenue about 11:30 p. m., was recovered shortly after midnight in 1500-block of Ave. H.

The other, stolen from Lowell Campbell of Abernathy in 1000-block Main, was not recovered until late yesterday. Campbell, when he reported the car missing, did not know the license number, police said, and was not certain about the model of the vehicle. Police, who were searching for a 1940 model Ford, "passed up" a 1939 model several times before the license number was furnished as more positive identification, they said.

Two Fines Levied

Police said they had fined a 41-year-old Idalou man for drunkenness and disturbance after force had to be employed in arresting him. In connection with the case, official reports showed, a patrol cruiser operated by J. M. Clark of the police jumped a curb and almost crashed into plate glass at Broadway and Ave. J when the defendant allegedly interfered with the patrolman's efforts to transfer him to the police station. Clark's uniform was torn and his eye blacked, his report showed.

City Detectives LeRoy Boling, jr., and L. W. Forrester, in plain clothes, were accosted by a man who asked a handout so that he could "eat breakfast."

He had his breakfast in city jail—where it was found that he had $5.62 in "change" in his pockets.

"He admitted that mooching is a very good business and that he intended to mooch some more," the official report disclosed.

The man, 45, of Ryan, Okla., was fined $100 on a corporation court plea of guilty of vagrancy.

Declines To Prosecute

A man who was taken to a hospital at 3 a. m. Thursday for treatment of injuries told police he had been beaten, but would not prosecute his assailants, one of whom he identified.

J. G. Abington, 48-year-old San Angelo man, was arrested here about 5:10 p. m. Thursday by Deputies Sheriff Tom Mitchell and Earl Horton, after a warrant had been issued from Brownwood for the man on a charge of swindling by worthless checks.

Abington, in order to secure his release, must pay a fine of $50 and court costs and "make good" $75 worth of checks, it was announced.

Meat-Buying Public To Pay For Winter Losses, Is Claim

STERLING, Colo., Feb. 3. (AP)—The meat-buying public ultimately will have to pay for the blizzards sweeping western rangelands, a leading Colorado stockman said today, but right now they mean cheaper steaks and roasts.

A. A. Smith of Sterling, American National Livestock association president, said in an interview, "because of storm conditions in feedlots and ranges," he said, "cattle are going to market in abnormally large numbers and prices are depressed— doubtless temporarily.

"Prices of better grades of beef are down as much as 33 per cent from the peaks of last summer, and wholesale meat quotations show that these prices, too, have closely followed the decline in prices of live cattle."

WRONG THROAT TO CUT

LEOMINSTER, Mass. (U.P.)—Said 220-pound Cpl. Ervin E. Whisnant, walking up to a policeman here, "I'll cut your throat." Waking somewhat later in a police cell, where he was held on a drunkenness charge, the soldier found the policeman was Henry Surette, a former amateur heavyweight boxing champion.

Israel Takes Steps To Assure Safety Of Christian Holy Sites

By ELIAV SIMON
United Press Staff Writer

JERUSALEM, Feb. 3.—The Holy See is expected to commit itself shortly to a definite stand regarding the holy places in Israeli territory. It is believed likely that the Pope will go on record as being satisfied with Israeli measures for the preservation of Christian places of worship.

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. Thomas McMahon, who was sent to the Holy Land by Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, told the press that his conversations with Israeli ministers and Chief Rabbi Isaac Herzog were "highly satisfactory."

The monsignor, who traveled through the country for two weeks studying conditions of Christians in Israel, visited the Galilee and the Negev.

He emphasized that his mission was purely humanitarian, to organize Christian charities in the country on behalf of the Roman Catholic Committee for Near East Welfare. He made it a point to see every town and village in Israel.

Relief Distributed

He organized financial help to various institutions and distributed the first installment of foodstuffs, clothing and medicines. He said further shipments will arrive shortly.

The monsignor said 2,000 priests, monks and nuns now in Israel were continuing their normal life. He said Franciscan and French nuns in Acre were caring for some 4,000 refugees of all creeds.

During his visits to Lydda, Ramle and Jaffa, he dealt with immediate needs of convents which suffered during the war. He said: "The moment Israel gets real peace, conditions will improve considerably."

In Jerusalem, Msgr. McMahon held conferences with Franciscan Father Patrik Coyli, whom he appointed as his representative for Judea.

He gave Israel 14 days and spent a fortnight on the Arab side. After that visit he crossed the lines again to Israel and then proceeded to Syria and Lebanon.

Msgr. MacMahon holds three posts. He is head of the Roman Catholic Committee for Near East Welfare, vice chairman of the Holy Land and special representative of the Catholic War Relief Services.

"As a result of my tour I hope to be able to co-ordinate the relief work of these three important organizations," he said. He is also due to give his observations to the UN Relief Organization for Palestine.

On New Year's Eve the monsignor organized charities for refugees in Bethlehem. That followed similiar activities in Galilee, Jerusalem and Transjordan. The money and supplies for refugees came from churches in the United States.

Before leaving Tel Aviv, Msgr. McMahon saw the Israeli premier, David Ben Gurion, and Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok. The monsignor would not go into details about his conversations, but it was understood he intimated to the Israeli government that the study he made here will enable the Holy See to see things here in "the right perspective."

Mexican Officials Hit Oil Importing Report

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 3. (U.P.)—Petroleos Mexicanos officials today scoffed at estimates made by various United States commercial organizations that Mexico might be an oil-importing country by 1950.

Pemex director Antonio Bermudez said he expects "not only that Mexico will become not an importer of petroleum, but an important exporting nation."

Despite rising Mexican production, however, reliable sources have estimated that, on a dollar basis, Mexico may actually be an importing country this year.

Mexican imports of lubricants, blending stocks and anti-knock fluid unobtainable at present from Mexican refineries will probably outweigh the dollar value of crude exports, these sources said.

Mexico last year produced some 60,000,000 barrels of oil. It imported, at high dollar unit values, 5,000,000 barrels of oil products unavailable in Mexican plants.

Missouri Official Says He Bones Of Austin Remain

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 3 (AP)—A proposal to move the bones of Moses Austin to Texas has drawn a protest from the director of the Missouri historical society and raised the question of whether anything remains of the Missouri and Texas pioneer.

The Potosi, Mo., Lion's club recently suggested Austin's remains be moved to Texas provided the Lone Star state put up $50,000 for construction of a Potosi town hall.

Austin, who with his son, Stephen, led a colonization expedition to Texas in 1820, died in Missouri the following year and was buried at Potosi in southeast Missouri's lead mining belt. The elder Austin had a big part in developing the lead mining industry in the area.

Texans have protested many times during the years that passed that the remains of Moses should lie beside those of Stephen in the capital city of Austin.

Meanwhile, Wesley A. Delaney of St. Louis expressed belief that there are no remains of Austin. He said he inspected Austin's tomb in 1944 and found it empty. A cherry tree had taken root in the vault and cracked it open and time and weather had caused Austin's bones to disintegrate, Delaney said.

Officials Move To Block Two Evictions

DALLAS, Feb. 2. (AP)—Federal housing officials here have moved to block eviction of two Dallas tenants under a justice court order. The federal government claims the eviction order constitutes an effort to evade rent regulations.

Acting on petition by the office of housing expediter, Federal Judge William H. Atwell cited Herman Voss, landlord, and Roby Love, Dallas constable, to appear at 10 a. m. Friday to show why they should not be enjoined from carrying out an eviction order issued Jan. 28. The order was issued by Justice John E. Baldwin against Mr. and Mrs. Fred Edward Slough, tenants in the East Side apartments.

The OHE petition recited Voss was required to refund $72 in rental overcharges to Mr. and Mrs. Slough. Three days later, the OHE alleges, Voss sent the couple notice to vacate.

OHE alleged Voss sent a notice to vacate for "non-payment of rent."

OHE claims Slough tendered $7 a week rental, the maximum under the rent ceiling, and that Voss refused to accept it.

Make This Home Recipe To Take Off Ugly Fat

It's simple. It's amazing, how quickly one may lose pounds of bulky, unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this recipe yourself. It's easy—no trouble at all and costs little. It contains nothing harmful. Just go to your druggist and ask for four ounces of liquid Barcentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill bottle. Then take two tablespoonfuls twice a day. That's all there is to it.

If the very first bottle doesn't show the simple, easy way to lose bothy fat and help regain slender, more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't just seem to disappear almost like magic from neck, chin, arms, bust, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles, just return the empty bottle for your money back.

Follow the easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears — how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

10 pounds lost in 10 days

Mrs. M. G. Britton, 306 W. Hildwood, San Antonio, Texas, writes us as follows: "I am a faithful user of Barcentrate. I had dieted for weeks without your product and needed so badly to lose 10 pounds, so I started using Barcentrate and my worry was over for I lost the 10 pounds in 10 days. I now weigh 136 pounds.

"I eat most anything I want and hold my same weight."

OUTLINE FOR AID PROGRAM SET

UN Session To Hear U. S. Plans For Assisting Backward Areas

LAKE SUCCESS, N.Y., Feb. 3. (AP)—The United States plans to unveil a loose outline of President Truman's "bold new program" for backward areas at the coming session of the United Nations economic and social council, it was learned today.

The 18-nation council, one of UN's principal agencies, convenes an important session here next Monday.

American officials said that Assistant Secretary of State Willard C. Thorpe planned to submit late in the session a tentative blueprint of the plan envisaged by Mr. Truman in his inaugural speech. The chief executive said the United States would take the lead in fostering a far-reaching program to bring economic opportunity, enlightment and freedom to dependent peoples of the world. He said America wanted the program carried out through UN.

Thorpe, who is U. S. delegate to the economic and social council, will be unable to give the agency many specific ideas of what the President has in mind, American officials said.

They said, however, that Thorpe hoped to be able to lay down a broad set of principles on which the global economic development program would be based. The United States would like the council to begin thinking about the idea and actually get down to work on a specific program at later meetings.

The program would call ultimately for billions of dollars and many teams of technicians and experts drawn from all corners of the globe to help backward areas develop their resources and climb toward self-dependency and self-government if they do not now possess it.

Following Mr. Truman's first reference to the idea in his inaugural speech, Secretary of State Dean Acheson and other U. S. officials indicated they felt the program could be carried out to a major extent through private investment instead of government—American—largesse.

The UN, pushed into the background by the UN-skirting Marshall plan and "Molotov plan" and battered by the East-West cold war, has grabbed at Mr. Truman's suggestion.

The UN feels that a program along the lines proposed by the President could provide the UN with a prestige boost and an objective capable of overcoming many of the stultifying effects of the cold war.

Connally In Protest On News Of A-Bomb

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3. (AP)—Sen. Tom Connally of Texas joined yesterday in a protest against premature disclosure of information by the Atomic Energy commission without consulting the military.

Connally and Sen. Millard Tydings, D., Md., criticized commission Chairman David E. Lilienthal for disclosures in a report submitted to Congress Monday which they said led to newspaper headlines reporting "super atomic bombs." Lilienthal emphasized that the report did not justify such headlines.

The criticism by Connally and Tydings was in contrast with the request by Sen. Brien McMahon, D., Conn., who said he felt much more atomic information should be released. He heads the House-Senate Atomic Energy committee.

FREE RIDERS REBUKED

CHICAGO (AP) — Police Commissioner John C. Prendergast reminded policemen that they must stand in the streetcars, interurban trains and buses. Prendergast said the policemen, who ride free, occupied seats while paying customers had to stand.

Victor Herbert's Son Runs Cattle Ranch In Louisiana

SHREVEPORT, La., Feb. 3 (AP) Composer Victor Herbert's only son, Clifford, lives in semi-exclusion in Shreveport, a frustrated oilman turned cattle raiser.

Herbert owns a ranch near here, the 1,120-acre "Diamond H." He has 600 whiteface Hereford cattle and a 4,256 dry well.

A mile north of his property, two wells are producing. One of them was the discovery well for the rich Kickapoo field.

Herbert says cattle raising is not so profitable as most people believe, either.

EVIDENCE ALMOST GONE

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Police arrested Wesley Jackson for selling a pint bottle of liquor on the street on Sunday. Evidence in the case was almost lost, however, because the thirsty customer drank four-fifths of the bottle before officers could stop him.

Golden Gloves Champions Decided In Finals Last Night

Six Knockouts Feature Final Bouts Of Regional Tourney

By JOE KELLY
Avalanche Sports Editor

Gene James of Lubbock, defending heavyweight champion, successfully held onto his crown last night in Tech gym to pace seven other fighters to championships in the regional Golden Gloves tournament.

Eight champions also were crowned in the novice division, with one fighter, Paul Hill of Tahoka, the 1948 high school middleweight champion, winning the light heavyweight crown.

The Lubbock Naval Reserve unit won the team trophy over Roswell, N. M., and Plainview, while Olton captured the novice team trophy over Lubbock, Brownfield and Plainview.

A capacity crowd for the fourth and final night saw 16 good bouts, although the fighters were more cautious in their attacks on the last night of slugging. There was still plenty of fighting and six knockouts were registered, four in the open division and two in the novice.

The fight that came nearest to bringing the house down was the lightweight open class bout between Ismael Olvera of Levelland and H. L. McMillan of Tahoka. The spider-like Olvera, a great crowd favorite, had all the best of the action. He knocked McMillan down in the first round and had him on the canvas again in the second. And in the third canto, Olvera clowned, making McMillan appear foolish.

Olvera feinted McMillan into errors that he was quick to pounce upon, landing several solid rights to the head in each round. He also had the best of the in-fighting, pounding McMillan in the mid section. In the final round, Olvera toyed with the Tahoka fighter, playing with him like a cat with a mouse.

James and Don Williams gave the crowd a good fight in the heavyweight open and the decision was close. James showed himself much the better boxer, jabbing the eager, less-experienced Williams with a sharp left. Williams landed some heavy blows, but it was James who stalked Williams about the ring.

The first two rounds were about even, with each fighter needing to take the last for a clean cut edge. James won the round with a right that staggered Williams, forcing him to hold on.

Bickel Wins Bout

Another great crowd pleaser was the open middleweight fight between James Bickel of Lubbock and Texas Tech against Joe Skinner of Lubbock. Skinner opened with a weaving style that had Bickel pondering for a minute, but the Tech student suddenly lashed a right to the heart that hurt. He followed with a right to the head and Skinner slowed up. A stinging left sent Skinner down for a nine count and seconds later, another flurry of blows had Skinner down again.

The second round was a repetition, with Bickel firing lefts to the head that shook the Lubbock fighter. A right to the body stung and a left jab rocked Skinner.

A flurry of lefts and rights soon after the third canto opened sent Skinner sprawling for a nine count and blood poured from his nose. Finally, a short, powerful left uppercut sent Skinner down for the last time at 1:34 of the third round.

Elmo Sams of Plainview bested Jimmy Peden of Lubbock in a bantamweight open fight that was good from start to finish. Peden was slow with his blows, missing opportunity after opportunity, but the Plainview fighter carried zing in his gloves.

Sams dropped Peden for seven in the first round, but the Lubbock fighter came back to carry the fight to Sams and hurt him with a right, left and right to the head. But Sams recovered to have Peden in trouble at the bell.

Peden was in trouble early in the second heat from Sams' left jabs, that rocked his head. Sams carried the fight all the way, while Peden's lack of speed cost him chances for points. A right uppercut by Sams was causing Peden to grab and hold on.

The third round was all Sams, with Peden down once and in trouble, although he rallied slightly.

A brief resume of the other fights follows:

REECER vs HALL

Two novice flyweights opened the 16-card program with action on the sparse side. Hall held a slight edge in the slow first round, a brief flurry in the second died down and action that speeded up in the third round was about even.

MARTINEZ vs HOELSCHER

The fight went to the third round, with Hoelscher showing gameness, but failing to land damaging blows. Martinez opened up in the first round with solid lefts and rights that hurt. Hoelscher went down in the second from a solid left and uppercuts did plenty of damage. The KO came 0:50 of the third when Martinez found the opening he had been looking for and fired a right.

BURKHART vs CHAPMAN

Action that started fast and continued for two rounds slowed down in the third, when Chapman punched enough to pile up an edge. It wasn't a bad fight and the Plainview boy was a little sharper.

McCLURE vs SHELTON

The Brownfield boy, who showed class right along, came out swinging. A flurry of solid lefts and rights to the head staggered McClure and he went down for a KO at 0:27 of the first round.

SPARKS vs PACHECO

This decision was booed and deservedly. Sparks opened with a sharp left jab, but Pacheco got the range and out-jabbed his opponent. Long rights to the body slowed Sparks down and Pacheco kept punching. Pacheco's sharp left kept getting sharper in the second round and a right cross almost lowered Sparks to the mat. Pacheco's left jab was telling, even though Sparks staged a rally. In the third canto, Pacheco's nose spread a bloody mask over his face, but he hurt Sparks with his left jabs and had the best of the leather trading. Pacheco was the aggressor all the way, but the decision went to Sparks.

GOLLETT vs. AUSTIN

Gollett fired long rights that staggered Austin in each round and held his own during the in-fighting in clinches. It was close, but Gollett threw more leather.

NICHOLS vs. MONTGOMERY

One of the better fights of the night in the novice division. There was good action in every round, but it was Montgomery's fight from start to finish. The boys opened fast, but it was Mongomery that threw more leather harder.

PRITCHARD vs. HERNANDEZ

The game kid with the crippled foot, Pritchard, was no match for the hard-hitting Hernandez, who opened the fighting with a solid right and left to the body. The fighting grew slow, but Hernandez suddenly threw a flurry of blows that landed with telling effect. Pritchard fell through the ropes and the kayo was tolled at 0:34 seconds of the first round.

HALL vs. SCOTT

Scott relied almost entirely on a looping right that Hall avoided nicely. Hall opened up in the second stanza and Scott had to hold on. The third was about even, with Hall getting the decision.

HILL vs. UTLEY

The Tahoka fighter didn't have much, throwing a long right that Utley managed to avoid in the first round. But in the second, Utley caught one with his face and was down at the bell. And in the final heat, Hill landed a right chop to the jaw that spilled Utley to the mat and had him reeling at the bell.

BEEDY vs. WILLIAMS

Williams started to force the action, but a right canvassed him for a nine count. It was a bad fight in the first round. In the second, Williams had Beedy in trouble once with a right uppercut and a left hook, but the Plainview boy shook off the blows and lit the fuse on his own artillery. Beedy chopped rights to the head that stunned Williams, sitting him down for nine counts twice. And a short right to the button ended it at 1:48 of the second heat.

GOSS vs. CARGILL

It was over before it started. Cargill came out, started to carry the fight, then ran into a right hand that came out of nowhere straight to the jaw. It laid him out cold at 0:38 of the first.

DEFENDING TITLIST LAGS BEHIND

Lloyd Mangrum Cops First Round Lead In Tucson Open Golf Meet

TUCSON, Ariz., Feb. 3. (AP) — Shooting one of his best rounds of 1949, Lloyd Mangrum, Chicago, Ill., today took the first round lead in the $10,000 Tucson Open Golf tournament with a six under par 64.

One stroke behind were the long-hitting Chick Harbert, Detroit; Eric Monti, Santa Monica, Calif., and Johnny Bulla, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Within easy striking distance were 11 contenders with cards of 66.

Jimmy Demaret, Ojai, Calif., twice Tucson Open champion, was five strokes off the pace with 69.

Defending champion Skip Alexander, Southern Pines, N. C., had to content himself with an even par 70.

About 3500 spectators watched 42 of the field of 138 smash par 70 for the level 6,500-yard El Rio country club layout.

But most of the half dozen foreign players found the going rough. Only Jimmy Uqauka, Hawaiian star, was able to equal or break par. The veteran from Honolulu shot the hottest practice round of 62. Today he carded 68.

Bunched as a result of four under par rounds of 66 are Jim Turnesa, Briar Cliff, N. Y.; Dave Douglas, Wilmington, Del.; Jack Burke, White Plains, N. Y.; George Schoux, San Francisco; Johnny Revolta, Evanston, Ill.; Skee Riegel, Tulsa, Okla.; Frank Stranahan, Toledo; Fred Haas, New Orleans; Al Brosch, Garden City, N. Y.; Ted Kroll, Philmont, Pa.; and Fred Hawkins, Antioch, Ill.

Riegel, former national champ, and Stranahan led the field of 16 amateurs.

Sam Snead, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., almost eliminated himself as a threat with a three over par 73. He was one of the pre-tourney favorites.

Heaviest man on the Syracuse university football squad for 1948 is James Pepper, 235-pound tackle.

Bill Henderson Kayos Rivers In Semi-Final

Galvan Gets Kayo Over Charley Neff

EL PASO, Feb. 3 (Special)—Bill Henderson of Lubbock won his 12th straight professional fight here tonight scoring a knockout at 1:14 of the third round over Dick Rivers, classy young lightweight, in a scheduled six-round semi-final.

And on the supporting card, Charley Neff of Petersburg was knocked out at 2:45 of the second round by Sammy Galvan, who lost his first fight only three weeks ago to Henderson.

Henderson was terrific tonight. He forced the fighting all the way and led in every round. He stalked Rivers around the ring with coolness and precision, firing damaging rights and solid lefts.

Late in the second round, Henderson landed a left and right that moved so fast even the spectators barely saw the blows. Rivers was down for a count that reached nine when the bell ended the round.

Rivers charged Henderson at the start of the third and jarred the Levelland fighter with a right to the head. But Henderson countered with two quick, stinging rights that staggered Rivers, then moved in for the kill. A left and right followed, Rivers sinking to the mat for the knockout.

Neff showed courage, but no intelligence, in trying to slug with the experienced Galvan. He took an awful body pounding and Galvan fired rights and lefts to the head with ease. Finally, Galvan uncorked a right that settled Neff to the canvas for his nap of the night.

Rivers, out on his feet after the knockout, tried to claim a quick count, but there had been no question that Henderson was going to win by a knockout from the first round on.

Crosby Says Pirates To Do Better In '49

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 3 (AP) — Harry Lillis Crosby, a stockholder in the Pittsburgh Pirate baseball organization, steps forth today with a bold prediction.

"I believe we'll lead the National league attendance again, just as we did last year.

"Our advance ticket sale," continued Bing, as he is sometimes known, "is larger than last year, so this prediction doesn't involve any great clairvoyance on my part."

"I also predict," went on Crosby, "that we'll finish higher than we did as a fighting fourth last year. The only thing that kept us out of second place last season was the unfortunate illness in the closing weeks of Ralph Kiner, who is something of a powerful man at bat for us. He was playing about 50 per cent under his normal capacity at the end."

Brown-Layco Cagers Defeat Crawford Electric, 41 To 35

Brown-Layco's quint clinched the runner-up spot in the Industrial independent basketball league here Thursday night at the Chapman field gymnasium by defeating Crawford Electric, 41-35.

Dick Wolf paced Brown-Layco with 13 points, while Bill Walker tallied 11 for Crawford.

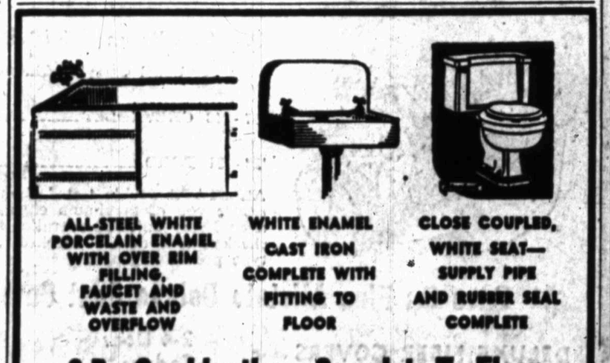

Rigney Auto dropped Trammell service, 37-29, as Jimmy Smyth chalked up 18 points. James Simmons collected eight for Trammell.

Westerners Clash With Pampa In Crucial 1-AA Game Tonight

Winner In Contest Here Favored To Take District Championship

Lubbock High's smooth-working Westerner cagers will bid for the most important victory in their campaign for the District 1-AA basketball championship here at 8 o'clock tonight at the Chapman field gymnasium, located at Twenty-third and Ave. W, where the Hub city schoolboys will tangle with the powerful Pampa Harvesters.

Lubbock and Pampa are virtually tied for the lead in the District 1-AA race, although the Westerners hold a narrow percentage edge, and the winner of the crucial setto tonight will be favored to win the district championship. If Lubbock could win the tilt with the Harvesters tonight, the Westerners would face only one other strong loop foe—the Borger Bulldogs Saturday night at Borger. If Pampa wins tonight, however, the Harvesters must still meet the Amarillo Sandies at Pampa.

The Harvesters, coached by wily Clifton McNeely, will enter the tilt tonight as clear favorites over the Westerner quint. Pampa has already defeated Lubbock twice this season, once in the finals of the Brownwood tournament and once in district play at Pampa. The Harvesters nosed out the Westerners at Brownwood, 30-29, but took a more impressive 32-22 triumph at Pampa. Pampa has an amazing record of 17 victories this season, against two defeats.

The Lubbock-Pampa District 1-AA game tonight will be re-broadcast over radio station KCBD starting at 10:15 o'clock tonight, officials have announced. KCBD will make a wire recording during the game, then broadcast the tilt at the later hour.

Coach Roy Morris' Westerner cagers have a very creditable record this season of 17 victories and five defeats, with only one of the losses in conference competition. The Westerners accomplished a major objective this season in defeating the Amarillo Golden Sandies twice in district play, and the Hub city schoolboys will be bidding for their first district cage title since the 1944 season.

Fans will have an opportunity to see some of the top schoolboy cage stars in the state in action in the tussle tonight, as well as two of the most highly-rated West Texas teams. The Harvesters are paced by big Derral Davis, a six-foot, three-inch center who was an all-District 1-AA performer last year, and by sharp-shooting Guard Jim Howard.

Galey Leads Lubbock

The Westerners are lead by Charles Galey, scoring ace who alternates between guard and forward positions. Galey has scored a total of 252 points in 21 games, although he has been hampered most of the season by injuries, and is the Westerners' field general out on the floor. Other probable starters in the Westerner lineup are Center Jim Wilson, Forward Jimmy Sexton, and Guards Blair Hankins and Bob Rooker.

Pampa starters, other than Davis, will include Howard and Guard James Gallemore and Forwards Bill Douglass and John Bond.

A capacity crowd of approximately 2,000 persons is expected to see the Lubbock-Pampa tilt, officials announced. A few numbered reserved seats, priced at one dollar, will be available today at the Senior High athletic office, then 75 cent general admission ducats will be sold preceding the game at the gymnasium. Students will be admitted for the regular price of 30 cents.

Two other 1-AA games will be unreeled tonight, when the Amarillo Golden Sandies invade Brownfield and Borger journeys to Plainview.

Regional Meets In Final Stage

FORT WORTH, Feb. 3 (AP)—Regional eliminations for the state Golden Gloves tournament in Fort Worth Feb. 9-14 reached the last lap this week as the field for the annual boxing extravaganza began to shape rapidly.

Abilene, Dallas, Waco, Houston, Tyler, Beaumont and Lubbock were the last regions to finish their tourneys, and only their champions had not been certified.

Lufkin, Brownwood, Amarillo, Temple, El Paso, Fort Worth and Corpus Christi boosted the number of completed meets to 13, and all promised to have stronger competitors this year than last.

Lufkin has a 1946 state champion returning in little Henry Kagawa, flyweight winner, who will again go after the 112-pound title; Milam Rowald, welterweight who lost to the state champion in the 1948 tournament, and heavyweight L. G. Haak went to the state semi-finals in 1948, but had to drop out because of an injury.

Amarillo has two state champions returning in welterweight Eugene Cooper and bantam Leon Palacio, plus an abundant supply of experienced lesser lights.

Temple has Fred Morales, the flyweight king back, and promises to make a good showing with some bolstering from Camp Hood.

Lightweight Winston Lackey, featherweight Billy Dickerson, and lightheavy John Willingham are returning regional champions in the Brownwood region.

Mandy Neal, the Corpus Christi bantam champion in 1948, has jumped a weight, and returns to Fort Worth as a full-fledged lightweight.

Lightheavyweight Hugh Garland is Fort Worth's only returning regional champion from 1948. Last year he went to the finals in the state tournament, losing to champion Tom Adams by a decision.

Christopher Rejoins Tribe

CLEVELAND, Feb. 3. (UP) — Skinny Russ Christopher, Cleveland Indian relief hurler with a weak heart but a strong desire to play baseball, reconsidered a previous decision to quit the game today and announced he would continue "for one more year."

The 31-year-old underhand specialist, who declared last January that the 1948 season would be his last one because of an enlarged heart, signed his 1949 contract yesterday with the approbation of his doctors.

On other big league fronts, the Boston Braves announced the signing of sophomore shortstop Alvin Dark, who was named the "Rookie Of The Year" for the 1948 campaign. Dark, a $40,000 bonus player who batted .322 in 137 games last year, was given a "sizeable increase" in salary according to general manager John Quinn. Terms were not disclosed, but it was believed Dark will receive approximately $20,000.

Curt Simmons and Charlie Bicknell, two young bonus players, also came to terms with the Philadelphia Phillies. Simmons, a 19-year-old lefthander, won seven and lost 13 last season, while Bicknell, used mainly in relief, had a record of no victories and one setback.

The Pittsburgh Pirates announced the signing of Bob Munchief, 33-year-old right-handed pitcher who was obtained from Cleveland during the winter, while the Brooklyn Dodgers brought their total number of players signed to seven with the acceptance of terms by catcher Roy Campanella, second baseman Eddie Miksis and infielder-outfielder Tom Brown.

Following the lead of their city rivals, the Dodgers and Giants, the New York Yankees signed their first negro player, outfielder Louis Harquez, from the Baltimore Elite Giants.

Lorenzo Cagers Score 43-25 Win Over Crosbyton's Chiefs

CROSBYTON, Feb. 3 (Special) Lorenzo's sharp-shooting cagers drubbed the Crosbyton Chiefs, 43-25, here tonight in a non-conference tilt.

Nettles hit the loop for 17 points for Lorenzo, while Billy Stephenson chalked up nine for Crosbyton.

Casey Stengel Predicts New York Yanks Will Cop American Pennant

NEW YORK, Feb. 3. (INS) — Casey Stengel predicted today — without so much as the tell-tale bat of an eyelash—that his New York Yankees will win the 1949 American league pennant.

The new Yankee manager, who has acquired quite a reputation as a comedian during his long stretch in organized baseball, apparently was deadly serious in levying his advance claim on the pennant.

He made his statement in a news conference, held soon after he arrived in New York from his west coast home.

Hinges On "IFs"

As the conference progressed, it developed that Casey's prediction hinged on several "ifs."

For one thing, Stengel averred that he considered his pitching staff as good as any in the league—even including Cleveland's array of talent.

This rating, said Casey, would be accurate if: (1) His eight potential stars "attain their form of previous years," and (2) "They stand up."

Not too enthusiastically, Stengel remarked that the Yanks will be okay behind the plate—if Yogi Berra can learn to catch.

First base, in Stengel's book, belongs to the veteran Babe Young. If the Babe bogs down, Tommy Henrich will be brought in from the outfield.

Quiet About Outfield

As for second and short, Casey implied he didn't expect to need replacements for George Stirnweiss and Phil Rizzuto.

Not much was said about the New Yorkers' outfield. That obviously is of pennant caliber— if Charlie Keller is recovered from his physical woes and if Henrich can encamp out there all season.

Nothing at all was mentioned about Joe DiMaggio. The stellar center fielder still is negotiating contract terms with the club. He'll doubtless be on hand, seemingly with the fattest salary arrangement in all baseball history.

Concerning the remainder of the league, Stengel indicated that he respects the Boston Red Sox more than the world champion Indians—particularly if Joe McCarty comes up with some pitching help.

More than 1,000 Syracuse University students are being taught to ski on the campus during the winter.

Garden Slates Gorgeous George

By PAT ROBINSON
INS Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.— Along broadway today we hear that Gorgeous George . . . the perfumed pachyderm . . . will show something special in marcelle waves when he makes his Madison Square Garden debut Feb. 22 . . .

Ned Irish . . . the Garden impresario . . . must have wanted to leaven the high drama of fights, hockey and basketball . . . by injecting a few laughs into the script . . . hence the first wrestling show in the big arena in many years . . .

And so that no mistakes may be made . . . Ernie Dusek . . . a tried and true flop and fall artist . . . has been selected as the Gorgeous One's opponent.

Gorgeous George is the greatest mat draw since the heydey of Jim Londos . . . he has parlayed a marcelle wave, some perfume, and a belt into quite a fortune . . . but the grunt and groaners tell me the guy really can wrestle . . .

Somehow we're reminded of the time Londos was wrestling George Calza in the Garden many years ago . . . we met Jim on his way into the dressing room and asked him how long the match would last . . .

"How big is the house?" Jim asked.

"It's a sell-out," we assured him.

"In that case I'll throw him in exactly one hour," said Jim. And exactly 60 minutes after the match began, Jim threw him, tipped us a wink, and went out laughing . . . it was little things like that which made us realize that vaudeville isn't dead no matter what theatrical people say . . .

Texans Will Coach Cards

CHICAGO, Feb. 3. (AP) — Two Texas football products, Phil Handler and Ray (Buddy) Parker, today were elevated from assistant to co-head coaches of the Chicago Cardinals of the National football league.

Handler, 40, member of the Cardinal organization for 19 years and head coach from 1943 through 1945, and 35-year-old Parker succeed Jimmy Conzelman, who resigned surprisingly last month.

The co-coaching selection was announced by club president Ray Bennigsen, who said Handler and Parker were handed two-year contracts and will "have a free hand to do things their own way."

Their salaries were undisclosed, but Bennigsen said each would get a "substantial increase" over his assistant coaching pay.

The new coaches said each would continue concentrating on his specialty—Handler on the line and Parker on the backfield—and would co-ordinate in general supervision of the club.

Handler, a former Texas Christian guard from Fort Worth, Tex., joined the Cardinals in 1930. He played seven pro seasons and became an assistant to the then-head Cardinal Coach Milan Creighton in 1937. That was the same year Parker came to the Cardinals from the Detroit Lions.

Parker, whose home is Kemp, Tex., was a brilliant halfback at Centenary college, jumping into pro ball with the Lions in 1935, a title-winning year for Detroit.

Parker came to the Cardinals in a swap for tackle Bob Reynolds in 1937. He became assistant Cardinal coach in 1942.

Robert "Tex" Williams, of Waco, Texas, tackle on the Abilene Christian College football team, is the president of the Junior class.

Bantam Ben Hogan Said Improving From Effects Of Auto-Bus Crash

EL PASO, Feb. 3. (AP) — They said at the hospital today that Ben Hogan, golf's terrific atom, had a bright disposition. But as some pal of the links, who knows the durability and spirit of the little Texan, would quip: "Why shouldn't he—he only has a fractured pelvis, broken collar bone, a fractured rib and a few other assorted injuries?"

Anyway, the 137-pound Hogan was improving from the hard knocks suffered in a car-bus crash yesterday, and it was dollars to doughnuts he would be back on the tournament trail sooner than expected.

Car Hit Greyhound Bus

Hogan, 1948's leading golfer and for a decade one of the greatest stars of the tourney swing, was hurt when his car crashed with a Greyhound bus 29 miles east of Van Horn, Tex., which is 152 miles southeast of here.

Ben's wife, Valerie, suffered only minor injuries. She was saved from possible serious hurts by the action of Hogan in throwing himself in front of her just before the crash. It also probably saved Hogan's life because the steering wheel was driven into the back seat. Valerie's most noticeable injury was a black eye.

As Hogan was removed from the tournament trail for an indefinite period speculation immediately arose as to whom would succeed him as headman of the nation's golf. Another Texan would be a good bet. There have been four tournaments held this year and a Texas golfer has won each of them. Lloyd Mangrum took the Los Angeles Open; Hogan the Bing Crosby Invitational and Long Beach Open, and Jimmy Demaret the Phoenix, Ariz., Open.

Solons Sent New Tidelands Bill

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3. (AP) — The government sent Congress the draft of a new bill for federal control of oil-rich tidelands today.

The bill is identical with legislation before Congress last year except for one highly controversial item. It omits any reference to distribution of proceeds from recovery of oil and gas in the tidewater lands.

Last year's proposals, which were not acted upon, would have directed 2½ percent of the proceeds into a federal reclamation fund for the benefit of the 17 western reclamation states, 37½ percent to the states off which oil and gas were recovered, and 10 percent into the federal treasury.

States Oppose Move

Congress last year showed more interest in legislation designed to give the states full title to the tidelands in which the Supreme Court held the federal government has the "paramount interest."

The draft of the proposed bill was submitted by Secretary of Defense Forrestal, Attorney General Clark and Secretary of the Interior Krug in a letter to the President of the Seaways and the Speaker of the House.

They pointed out that since the proposed bill is silent on distribution of money received by the federal government from oil and gas operations, those proceeds would be paid into the Treasury and credited to miscellaneous receipts.

"In this connection, the Congress may wish to consider whether the states off whose shores operations under the legislation are conducted have equities which justify the payment of some portion of the income to them," they said.

The bill proposed a rental and royalty system, with land to be leased at 25 cents an acre for the first lease year and not less than 50 cents an acre a year thereafter.

After oil or gas has been discovered, the government's royalty would be not less than 12½ percent. Leases would be open to bidding.

The Supreme Court ruling on the government interest in the marginal sea from low tide line to the three mile limit applied specifically to California. Texas and Louisiana are resisting its application to their offshore oil lands.

Cotton Hearing

mittee hearing in which it has been sought to get the cotton production and price picture from every major section of the belt as the legislators seek to formulate an improved long range program.

This relates particularly to the parity price structure, and to probable acreage and quota controls following the 1949 crop. Cotton prices are under government support this year on the basis of 90 per cent of parity, but there are no acreage or production controls.

Solons Exclude 1949

Seeking to offset what can be a record cotton acreage this year, the House Wednesday passed a bill excluding 1949 cotton from consideration as a base year in determining acreage and quotas in any possible future control program. It had been feared that farmers might rush to plant every possible acre to cotton in an effort to boost acreage allotments under future controls, if 1949 had been allowed in the base period.

It was indicated that Senate approval of the plan would be routine.

Appearance of the West Texas group at the Washington hearing is at the insistent suggestion of Cong. George Mahon, who believes that since this is one of the heaviest cotton producing areas in the world, the West Texas picture should be in the record.

Mahon Backs Program

Mahon said the committee hopes to conclude the hearings by Feb. 11, but added that the final draft of long range legislation probably will not be agreed upon until a much later date.

Mahon is a staunch supporter of the parity price support program, but asserted that a parity support less than 90 per cent would be unsatisfactory and inadequate.

He explained that the support price this year on cotton is 90 per cent of parity, but that after this year, the law permits the secretary of agriculture to set the support as low as 60 per cent of parity.

FIVE-YEAR BASIS URGED FOR COTTON QUOTA PLAN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3 (AP)—Spokesmen for cotton growers on Mississippi delta land recommended today that a five-year period be used as a base for prospective acreage allotments.

Testifying before a House Agriculture subcommittee, James Hand, Jr., of Rolling Fork, Miss., said a five-year base "is not to susceptible" to variations from crop disasters as would be a base of fewer years.

Also appearing before the committee, which is working out a long-range farm program, were Irby Turner of Belzoni, Miss., and Dr. C. R. Sayre of Stoneville, Miss. They expressed views adopted by the Delta council.

Hand told the committee the law should provide for a minimum national annual production of 10,000,000 bales.

He declared that soil building features of any long-term agricultural program "can not be emphasized too strongly," and urged that maximum assistance be given farmers who made adjustments in their operations to build back worn out lands.

The committee expects to receive testimony tomorrow from representatives of cotton growers in Louisiana, Arkansas and Missouri.

Senators Wrangle

tain court injunctions in labor disputes without specific legislation to that effect."

Red Ban Proposed

Taft, a member of the Senate Labor committee holding explosive hearings on Mr. Truman's proposed substitute for the Taft-Hartley labor act, said that "in my opinion the President has no such power" to halt a major strike.

Taft contended the President needs to have the injunction weapon spelled out in the new statute, as it is in the T-H law.

Goldberg said the President may have "other constitutional powers" to halt a strike "but I don't believe he has any injunction power".

Other developments:

1. Labor Secretary Tobin proposed before the Senate Labor committee that Congress ban Communists from holding office in labor unions or business corporations.

2. Tobin said he also favored a law depriving government workers of the right to strike. However, he said this ban and the one against Communists should be considered in legislation apart from the labor bill.

3. The CIO through Goldberg gave the labor bill qualified endorsement. It opposed certain sanctions outlined in the bill as "dangerous."

Sen. Morse (R-Ore) warned that the labor bill "hasn't a ghost of a chance" of passing the Senate in its present form. He called for "conscionable compromises" to remove the "serious disadvantages" of the Taft-Hartley act and to protect labor rights.

Injunction Power Seen

Chairman Thomas (D-Utah), indicated he would be agreeable to some changes though not necessarily those envisioned by Morse. Thomas said there never was any intention of getting the labor bill through Congress in the exact form the administration wrote it.

Sen. Taft predicted the administration labor bill would contain power for court injunctions by the time it passes Congress.

In a luncheon address before the National Federation of Women's clubs, Taft said he thought that "by the time we get through we will have a Thomas-Lesinski bill that will contain most of the provisions of the Taft-Hartley act."

Repeal Recommended

Meanwhile, a House Labor subcommittee recommended that the Taft-Hartley act be repealed immediately and the Wagner Act restored without the amendments asked by President Truman.

The committee, headed by Rep. Kelley (D-Pa) thus adopted a "two-package" approach in carrying out President Truman's labor legislation. The subcommittee was selected for the specific task of handling the Taft-Hartley repealer and the new law.

Tobin was cross-examined on the labor bill for the second straight day. Republican committeemen frequently interrupted their sharp questioning to deliver what Democrats attacked as "long speeches."

Clark's View Denounced

Tobin at one period sat silently in the witness chair for 50 minutes as Sen. Donnell (R-Mo) denounced Attorney General Clark's view that the labor bill does not leave the nation helpless in major strikes.

Clark held in a letter to the committee that the President has vast inherent powers and always has "access to the courts" in a national crisis.

Republicans demanded that Clark appear personally before the committee to defend his view. The GOP members demanded that the powers to which Clark referred be spelled out in detail in the bill.

Morse said he would "fear" to leave the application of the unwritten powers to a future President because this is an error of "political turn-over."

Administration Accused

Taft entered the fray by accusing the administration of trying to "please the people by saying there is injunction power and please labor leaders by saying there isn't."

The bill omits the injunction weapon against strikes, one of the provisions of the Taft-Hartley act especially denounced by labor.

Taft, Morse and Donnell in a barrage of questioning tried to get Tobin to say whether he would recommend that President Truman seek an injunction in a grave national emergency. Tobin finally replied:

"I can only say that no President of the United States is going to permit the economy of this country to be brought to its knees in a national crisis."

Tobin refused to say whether he would draft strikers into the Army. He repeatedly declared that "I'm in no position to say what the President might do."

News Briefs

Fifty-four letters containing $342.50 were received Thursday at March of Dimes headquarters, campaign officials announced last night. In addition, $56.55 was contributed by students of the New Home school, and $105.64 was brought in from coin collection boxes, the three sums boosting the local March of Dimes fund to approximately $9,074. The Lubbock county March of Dimes, whose minimum goal is $12,000, closes this week.

Mrs. A. M. Howard, of 1915-B Ave. N, who underwent major surgery Monday in Lubbock Memorial hospital, last night was in good condition and was resting well, according to a hospital report. Her son, Brooks Penney, and his wife of Tucumcari, N. M., and her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Hanks of Wichita Falls are in Lubbock during her illness.

MARKET IN SLOW TRADING

NEW YORK, Feb. 3. (AP)—Buyers and sellers of stocks didn't have much difference of opinion in today's market.

Price changes were mainly fractional with gains and losses in close balance. A handful of stocks which usually play minor roles in the trading scene stepped into comparative prominence as a result of news directly affecting them.

Turnover was the fastest for the week thus far but it was still slow enough for some brokers to haul out the red ink. Sales of 770,000 shares compared with 720,000 yesterday. Substantial business in such low priced stocks as Commonwealth and Southern, Pepsi-Cola, Packard and Farnsworth Television helped swell the total.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks dipped .1 of one point to 69.4, the first average loss after two successive gains. Of the 971 issues which traded, 388 decline and 226 advanced.

Columbia Broadcasting issues showed a comparatively severe decline. The "A" stock lost 2⅛ at 19⅛ and the "B" was down 3⅞ at 19 following word that directors had cut the quarterly dividend to 35 cents a share from half a dollar.

Midland Steel stood out in the steel group with a rise of 1⅝ points to 44. The company's board has proposed a two-for-one stock split.

Brooklyn Union Gas reached a new high for 1948-49 with a gain of 1⅛ at 24⅝. Demand, brokers suggested, may have been influenced by the company's long-range program of getting into the distribution of natural gas piped from Texas fields.

Cotton

NEW YORK REPORT

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (AP)—Cotton futures were quiet in slow dealings today as traders awaited developments, particularly in export situation.

Washington reports that the ECA was continuing to work on a barter plan for cotton whereby Marshall plan countries will exchange ECA cotton for other commodities with eastern European countries. There was renewed doubt concerning the status of United States cotton shipments to China as foreign advices said that the ECA is closing up its offices in some cities which have been taken over by the Communists and ECA stocks of grain and other commodities seized.

Cotton acreage ideas in the trade moved slightly higher, with one private survey placing planting intentions this year at 25,633,000 acres compared with 25,972,000 last season.

Futures closed 15 to 45 cents a bale higher than the previous close.

Treason Trial Opens

tween the government and the Catholic church.

Cardinal Mindszenty and six other defendants went on trial today on charges of treason, spying and black market money dealings.

(In its "yellow book" on Cardinal Mindszenty's case, the government charged Chapin sought military and other information from the cardinal. Those charges were rejected by the U. S. State department, which expressed full confidence in Chapin.)

The cardinal was clad in the robes of a simple priest when he was brought in to face the court.

Vatican Denounces Trial

There was nothing to indicate that the Hungarian primate had been beaten or drugged, as had been charged abroad. His facial expression contained the same fixed look of religious zeal which marked his appearance before his arrest last Dec. 27.

(The Vatican City newspaper L'Osservatore Romano referred to the trial as Mindszenty's "Calvary." The Vatican radio described the trial as unpardonable and said "all seems to indicate there is not much hope" for Mindszenty. Vatican City dispatches pointed out that, under church law, all Catholics who put the cardinal on trial before civil judges will be excommunicated. The Vatican already has excommunicated all Catholics who had anything to do with his arrest.)

Speaking in calm, clear tones, Cardinal Mindszenty told the five-man people's court:

"I plead partly guilty, having committeed the majority of those deeds I am charged with."

Charges Rejected

Then under questioning by Presiding Judge Vilmos Olthys, the 56-year-old leader of Hungary's 7,000,000 Catholics said:

"It is not my intention to mince matters. I must state that I cannot accept all of the conclusions contained in the indictment as a consequence of my activities.

"I cannot, for instance, accept the charge which alleged that I organized or led a movement to destroy the democratic system of this state."

Cardinal Mindszenty has been a foe of government nationalization of church schools. The government's case against the defendants includes accusation that they sought to place the pretender Archduke Otto of Hapsburg on the Hungarian throne and sought to conspire with western envoys and the Vatican to rob Hungary of her right to a sacred relic—the crown of St. Stephen, Hungary's first Christian king.

ABILENE MAN KILLED

collision at Roundup community, on the Lubbock-Littlefield highway Thursday morning at about 9 o'clock.

A 1947 Chevrolet coach, driven by F. Norwood Vicars, 24, of 2000 Thirty-fourth, Lubbock, collided with a 1948 GMC pickup truck which was turning from the highway onto the Whitharral cutoff.

Orville Bailey, 38, Roundup, man who was driving the pickup, was taken to Payne-Shotwell hospital in Littlefield for treatment of injuries suffered in the collision. He was being treated for head injuries which were not considered serious, the hospital reported.

Vicars was brought to Lubbock Memorial hospital for treatment of a forehead cut, and was later released.

Mrs. Janie B. McManus, 47, of 2118 Thirty-first street, suffered a fractured and dislocated left shoulder, along with several bruises and abrasions, when her 1948 Plymouth sedan was in collision about 4:45 p. m. with another auto at Thirty-first and Ave. S.

Mrs. McManus was driving east on Thirty-first when her car was struck by a 1947 Ford coach driven by Jack Tannery, 20, of 1918 Twenty-seventh, who was traveling south on Ave. S. Mrs. McManus was admitted to West Texas hospital where she was carried by Plains Funeral home ambulance, after the force of the collision threw her from the car into an adjoining yard.

Tannery was not injured, police reports indicated.

China's Government Activities Curtailed

NANKING, Feb. 3. (AP)—Acting President Li Tsung-Jen was virtually without a government today.

His efforts to beg peace from the Chinese Communists were stalled and the Nanking offices of his government were almost all closed.

Only at the Foreign office, where Vice Minister George Yeh was still keeping office hours, was there any semblance of activity.

Foreign correspondents who went to the Informaiton ministry for the usual weekly press conference found it locked. At the Defense ministry, an attendant told inquirers for the military spokesman, "he's gone away."

An informed source said leaders of the government's control and legislative Yuans had asked Premier Sun Fo to return to Nanking from Shanghai but Sun replied he was going to Canton and advised them to do likewise.

The government has announced it will be open for business in Canton Saturday (Feb. 5). However, Chinese press reports quoted the new governor there, Hsueh Yueh, as saying he had received no instructions on such a move.

Truman Gives Terms

that was necessary in the way of an invitation.

The President showed very little disposition to discuss the Stalin proposals.

Mr. Truman and newsmen burst into laughter when the President was asked by a correspondent:

"If Stalin would be willing to come to Alaska . . ."

It was here that the President began to laugh. He then said that he had already answered that question.

Reaffirms Invitation

Then someone making a play of words, asked:

"Did I understand your answer to be Nome (Nome, Alaska)?"

This brought another outburst of laughter which the President closed off by stating that he had not answered that question. He said that the answer went back to the previous question.

The President was asked:

"Mr. President, you are on record as having said you'd be glad to meet Stalin in Washington....."

The President said again that he had invited Stalin to Washington while he was in Potsdam and would still be glad to see him here at any time.

Room Not Prepared

On a facetious note, a woman correspondent asked the President whether he had asked Mrs. Truman to prepare a guest room at Blair House for Stalin.

Seriously, the President said that he had not. He said that he has not received any official notification from Stalin that he would like to come to Washington, or intended to.

The President was told that his remarks on the Stalin matter, and the remarks of Acheson, indicated that, if Russia is sincere in wanting to bring about guaranteed world peace, there are other ways in which the Soviet Uuion could do it.

No Further Comment

The President said again that the subject was thoroughly covered in what Acheson said in his own news conference.

A correspondent then asked:

"Would you care to mention one or two ways?"

The President said that he had no further comment—that Acheson had answered fully.

The secretary of state referred specifically to the western powers' long effort to have the Soviet blockade of Berlin lifted and Russia's obstruction of United Nations efforts to achieve disarmament.

UN Hails Stand

ated by Mr. Truman, the report calls upon the U. S. government to act with "consistency, courage and clarity" in its leadership in UN.

All Possible Effort Urged

Turning to the policy to be adopted toward Russia, the association report continues:

"Without sacrificing principle and without appeasement, the United States should do everything possible, through the United Nations, to come to an understanding with the Soviet Union.

"To the extent that Soviet policy is the result of deep-seated, if mistaken, fear of the policy of the United States, this country must do everything possible to disarm these fears.

"To the extent that Soviet policy, or the policy of any other nation, is the result of a desire to expand, the United States should indicate that no nation can expand with impunity in violation of its United Nations obligations."

HST Intends To Keep Army In Control Of Occupied Berlin

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3. (AP)—The United States intends to keep the Army in control in occupied Berlin.

President Truman said today he has no intention of transferring control to the State department. Gen. Lucius D. Clay will remain on the job.

His statement was in response to questions at his news conference.

to knock down South Plains temperatures tonight, but not to the extent the recent cold wave battered the mercury around.

The front, which earlier had caused some concern among weather forecasters at the station north of Lubbock, was reported last night to have lost most of its "sting" and would blow in here at 10 a. m. today to cause only slight drops over today and Saturday. No precipitation is expected, weather forecasters said.

A low of 23 to 25 is predicted for this morning, with a high of 38 this afternoon, as compared to Thursday's readings of 31 and 44 degrees. Saturday's temperatures are due to range from 18 to 40 degrees, the weather station predicted.

The official forecast was for partly cloudy and cooler weather both days.

The Associated Press reported that light rain fell Thursday at Fort Worth, Waco, San Antonio, San Angelo, Brownsville, Corpus Christi, Houston, Beaumont, Lufkin, Tyler, Texarkana, Clarendon, Amarillo, Abilene, Big Spring, Laredo, Tyler, Bryan and Alice.

Plane Sets Record

lower deck will be used for cargo. The Navy has two ships in the Constitution class.

The Constitution was readied immediately for a ferry flight to Patuxent where it will be given an inspection in preparation for the return flight to Moffett field scheduled for 9 a. m. Sunday. The plane already has more than 600 hours of test flying, including a trip to Washington and New York last summer.

((Cost of the planes is $11,000,000 each, plus $1,250,000 for a hangar at the Navy Air base at Alameda, The International News Service reported.

(The Lockheed corporation said the Constitution type of plane could be built for $3,000,000 each in lots of 10.

(The Constitution is heralded as the first plane of the giant class that can use an ordinary commercial airfield because of its jet-assisted takeoff. It can take off in 3,000 feet.

(The persons aboard found they occupied less than half the long cabin, equivalent to the largest type of Pullman car, plus the biggest railway freight car, plus an ordinary railway flat car and an auto bus.

(In an emergency, Navy spokesmen said, the plane could carry 400 troops or evacuate 300 injured, INS reported.)

Although the Constitution is the largest transport to go into scheduled service, it is dwarfed by the Air Force XC-99, a 300,000-pound behemoth developed from the B-36 bomber. The XC-99 is now in the early stages of flight testing at the Consolidated Vultee plant at San Diego, Calif.

Today's flight set neither a speed nor air lift record, but is distinguished by the fact it carried the most passengers ever hauled on a regular transcontinental flight operation.

The largest number of passengers taken aloft is 207 carried by the Navy dirigible, the Akron, later lost as sea. The flight was made at Lakehurst, N. J., Nov. 3, 1931.

The fastest transport plane time west coast to Washington is six hours four minutes, established Jan. 9, 1945, with the Boeing C-97, an Air Force transport.

Two Dead, Two Hurt In Crash Near Odessa

ODESSA, Feb. 3. (AP)—Two Odessa airfield workers were killed and two others were critically injured when two trucks collided headon seven miles west of Odessa on highway 80 today.

The dead:

Tommy Lloyd Latimer, 28, and Johnny Stewart, 30.

Gravely injured were Ellis Dean Hood, 22, and T. J. Elkins, about 25.

The men killed and injured all were riding in the same truck. Employes of the Robert M. Bass Well Servicing company of Odessa, they were traveling west on the highway going to work.

Their truck collided with a Braswell Motor Freight truck of El Paso, driven by L. F. Moon, 33, of Anutillo, Tex.

Moon was alone in his truck. He was not injured.

Street Naming Plan

ices of O. H. Koch, Dallas consulting engineer and city planner, who was retained by the City of Lubbock in 1946 to aid in a long-range program of zoning and like matters. A motion also was passed that the commission recommend that Koch's bill for $1,800 for services rendered be paid.

Zone Changes to Be Studied

A zone change request, which came from R. C. Hopping, asked that the south 150 feet of the East ½ of block 3, Roberts and McWhorter addition, be placed in an "F" (local retail) zone. The property is located at the northwest corner of the intersection of Ave. Q and Fourth street. The request was referred to the zoning subcommittee for further study.

Plats which were approved after recommendation of the platting subcommittee were:

South ½ of the southeast ¼ of the southeast ¼ of the southeast ¼ of section 15, block B, Lubbock county, located between Thirty-third and Thirty-fourth streets from Tyler to Polk Ave.

"Modern Homes addition," a subdivision of the south ½ of block 7, L. D. Kinser subdivision of the northeast ¼ of section 14, block B, Lubbock county, located between Fortieth and Forty-second from Washington to Adams Ave.

Plats Are Approved

"Brooks subdivision," of the south ½ of the southeast ¼ of the north ½ of block 7, L. D. Kinser subdivision of the northeast ¼ of section 14, block B, Lubbock county, located at Fortieth and Washington Ave.

A re-plat of "Dennison Heights" in section 15, block B, Lubbock county, located between Thirtieth and Thirty-second streets from Taylor Ave. to Pierce Ave.

"Park Hill addition," a subdivision of block 1, Lubbock View addition, located between Thirty-fourth and Thirty-sixth streets from Monroe Ave. to Jackson Ave.

"Boles Place addition" out of the northeast ¼ of survey 8, block B, Lubbock county, located between Thirty-eighth and Fortieth streets at Ave. B.

Line Termed Impractical

Rejected was a plat of the north ½ of the northwest ¼, section 3, block E, located between College Ave. and Ave. U on Fiftieth and Fifty-fourth streets. The plat was rejected since it did not conform to the diagonal street pattern and did not provide for 50-foot streets throughout.

Commission members were informed that a recommendation made by the group at their January meeting to the effect that a building line be established on Fourth street between Avenues A and H in order that off-street parking might be established when deemed advisable, had been termed impractical by City Commissioners at their Jan. 13 meeting.

The City Commission, the Planning commission learned, considered it impractical to comply with the recommendation since lots in this area were thought to be of insufficient length to leave adequate space for building, after such building line had been established.

Amendment Urged

It was decided that the Planning commission will seek a meeting with the City commission soon to discuss the recommendation further, as well as to investigate possibilities of adding another staff-member to the city engineering department whose duty, among other things, would be to compile statistical information on all phases of the city plan, including zoning, street naming, and traffic.

Upon a request from the Board of Adjustment, the Planning commission passed a recommendation that section 2 of Ordinance 661 be amended to read as follows: "Servants Quarters: A building for separate accommodations for bona fide servants and shall be limited to 288 square feet of floor space."

A motion was made and passed that the Betterments committee be complimented for its comprehensive work in formulating the street

U. S. Cotton Export Group Plans Discussion Of Market Outlook

BY TEX EASLEY
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3—The National Cotton Export Advisory board will meet here Feb. 23-24 to discuss the world market outlook for the staple.

Burris Jackson of Hillsboro, Tex., one of the nine southern cotton industry leaders who serve on the board, said today the group will study the effect of the Economic Cooperation administration's foreign shipments on the steadily increasing supplies of domestic cotton.

Hope To Speed Exports

"We hope to come up with some recommendations to both the ECA and Congress which will expedite the movement of cotton to European countries," Jackson told a reporter.

"We will give special attention to China.

"The board wants to learn what the American policy is to be regarding China, so we can get our cotton going to the Orient in quantities consistent with our government's position in that part of the world."

Complicating the Chinese market picture is the fact that textile mills which in normal times used American cotton are in areas now dominated by Communist forces.

Japan Using Staple

Sizeable shipments of cotton have been moving to Japan since the war, for processing under U. S. Army jurisdiction.

It is expected the advisory board—named by the secretary of agriculture—will discuss the possibility of increasing these shipments, so that finished cloth can be sent into those areas of China which may be still holding out Communists.

The announcement of the advisory board meeting came as a House Agriculture subcommittee continued its public hearings on a long range cotton program.

Spokesmen for farmers of Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Missouri were scheduled to testify regarding the proposed reinstatement of production controls on the 1950 cotton crop.

Lifted during the war, controls are expected to be reestablished because of steadily increasing supplies, and a fear that overflowing warehouses will cause a break in market prices.

Anticipating that farmers late this year will vote for controls in next year's crop, the Agriculture department has recommended that the years 1945-1948 be used as a base for making acreage allotments.

While the committee considered the long range program, stop-gap legislation was being hurried through the House and Senate concerning the 1949 crop. The House-passed measure provides that 1949 cotton plantings shall not be used in figuring acreage allotments on any future crop.

Program On America Tops Kiwanis Meet

Climaxed by an admonition from Roy Bass that "we mustn't grow careless, sit back and let our precious American heritages slip away," the Kiwanis club at luncheon Thursday at Hotel Lubbock, heard a program on "It's Fun To Live in America."

Speakers in additions to Bass were Stanley Ray Winter, second grade student from Chris Harwell school, who thinks it's fun to live in America because of a good, strong and free nation, freedom of worship, ways to travel, warm houses, and medical care;

Frank Poyner, president of senior class in Lubbock High school, who said living in America is fun because of the well developed educational system, a democratic form of government, and well developed sports; and Marion Baumgardner, agriculture student in Texas Tech college, who paid a high tribute to American life in general.

Bass pointed to the United States as the most fabulous and most sought after land in the worl dtoday, and warned that liberties and privileges must be guarded or the nation will in time fall as have several other great civilizations before us.

The speakers were introduced by George McCleskey, program chairman.

Dr. Richard Mayer was introduced as a new member. Club President Fred Sparks was in the chair, with invocation by Rev. Hubert H. Bratcher.

FORT WORTH, Feb. 3. (AP) — Officials of the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock show battened down the hatches today in preparation for a boom business on Friday.

Fort Worth schools will have a holiday, freeing 35,000 prospective customers to throng the grounds and attend the rodeo. Friday also will be Eastland, Hamilton and Seymour day.

Shorthorn and aberdeen-angus cattle auctions were held during the day.

Divide Janitor consigned by the Allen Cattle company, Colorado Springs, Colo., sold on a bid of $1,025 to P. K. Cummings of Kingston, Kansas.

C. M. Caraway and Sons, DeLeon, topped the female sale when they paid $1,100 for the heifer, Divide Mayflower 22d, consigned by the Allen Cattle company.

Champion guernseys were chosen. The grand champion bull was Cooper's Maraschino owned by the Tom Cooper farm of Ardmore, Okla., and the grand champion female was Fairview Pearl, owned by Earle M. North of Houston.

U. S. Businessmen Earn Dollars Abroad Despite Many Problems

By EDWIN HOFFMAN
INS Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3—American businessmen, operating under the spectre of ever-present inflation in Europe, are earning United States dollars abroad but it's a difficult proposition.

Besides normal competitive conditions, the Yankee investor in the Marshall plan countries is faced with:

1. Rigid government regulation and intricate red tape;

2. The real problem of turning his earnings—all in foreign currency—into American dollars.

Officials of the Economic Cooperation administration and other government agencies believe, however, that the position of the U. S. businessman — dollar-wise—is improving, largely as the result of the Marshall plan.

Money Exchange Eased

For one thing, the U. S. manufacturer is guaranteed a dollar payment when he sells recovery goods to the ERP countries through ECA financing. This is currently accounting for almost five billion dollars worth of goods, a big chunk of the trade between America and Europe.

Another heartening sign is the increasing ability of the ERP governments to convert the earning and dividends of American businessmen operating in Europe into dollars.

But the recovery nations are unable to convert all earnings into dollars and, officials say, U. S. businessmen usually dispose of surpluses by:

1. Trading or bartering; and

2. Ploughing back foreign currency into plant expansion and development on the continent.

The latter accounts for a fair share of incomes of American companies because, officials explain, businessmen want to prepare for the day when trading becomes normal.

Some Earnings "Frozen"

Meanwhile, earnings garnered during and just after the war largely are still in a "frozen," nonusuable state because the recovery nations can not afford to redeem the currency.

The problem of changing foreign exchange for dollars is not peculiar to western Europe. It is well-known in Latin-America, eastern Europe and the Far East.

Officials believe that President Truman suggested a partial answer to this world-wide question in his inaugural address when he proposed guarantees to investors for the development of areas needing such assistance abroad.

It is felt that such a plan, generally, would add new incentive to world trade by injecting new dollars into the market. Foreign nations would be able to earn more dollars through their export trade as a result of the outside development work.

ECA has been operating a guaranty program but it has hardly met expectations. Congress allocated 300 million for this operation but officials believe that only about $27,700,000 will be committed.

The lag is explained by a general feeling of U. S. investors that the "cold" war between the east and west may end before they spend their dollars. Another factor is the desire of industrialists to study the program thoroughly before acting.

Probably the most important reason is that the American market for goods is still the best source of dollars.

Seeing-Eye Dogs Barred From Paris Subways By New Ruling

PARIS, Feb. 3. (U.P.)—Dogs no longer will be allowed in the Paris subways, with or without a ticket.

Until recently, blind persons led by dogs could use the Paris under-ground. The municipal council now has forbidden the practice.

Blind persons will be permitted to be accompanied by other persons, the council said, and such guides will not need tickets.

Angry Victim Hits Off-Duty Cop Raid

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., Feb. 3 (U.P.)—The underworld of East St. Louis believes in strict adherence to working hours, especially for police officers.

Sgt. Fred Theriac and Patrolman Charles Lewis worked their regular night trick and then came back to raid a disorderly house. While the suspects were being booked, one of the women studied the station's bulletin board, then turned angrily to the officers.

"What's the big idea?" she said. "You're supposed to work the 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. shift."

Men Arrested In Raid Made On Houston Employment Office

SAN ANTONIO, Feb. 3. (U.P.)—Eight city detectives raided the Texas employment office here today and arrested 15 men, charging 13 of them with vagrancy and booking two for the immigration office.

Detective Capt. Charles Steed said they had consistently refused jobs paying up to $1 an hour.

Woman Has Answer To Housing Shortage

LAWTON, Okla., Feb. 3. (U.P.)—Keep a house or build a house, it's all the same to Mrs. Vida Martin.

Mrs. Martin is her own answer to the housing shortage. She built the four-room house where she lives, plus two smaller houses next door. She wired her house, installed the plumbing, made built-in cabinets, tiled the bathroom, papered the walls and painted the whole thing, inside and out.

She learned her carpentering with her father's hammer and saw. When her father, a farmer near Snyder, Okla., decided to put up a barn, there were no sons to help so little Vida got the job.

She's sold on the work. Next summer, she's going to a farm she bought in Texas to build a house on it.

Hint Of Federal Action Follows Increase In U. S. Gold Hoarding

By WILLIAM KERWIN
INS Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Government officials today reported an increasing trend in gold hoarding in the United States and warned they may crack down on the practice.

Treasury department and Federal Reserve board gold experts said they are not alarmed at present over the situation although they estimate that transactions are running over a million dollars annually.

However, they asserted that if the situation becomes "serious" they will ask Congress to tighten loopholes in the Gold Reserve act which permits Americans to own gold.

Law Limits Possession

Under present law, hoarders may buy unlimited quantities of gold in its "natural state" which includes nuggets, flakes and dust. Possession of gold bars or coins is strictly forbidden.

Recently, a New York investment firm offered to sell natural gold to prospective purchasers in 100 ounce lots at $1,250 per lot for immediate or future delivery. Other firms have made similar offers.

A reserve board official said that the gold hoarding increase reflects the "old fashioned European idea" that gold can always be used in transactions while currency can be devalued by governments at will.

He explained that this condition generally stems from worldwide inflation which follows every war. He asserted:

Called Inflation Symptom

"Gold hoarding is a symptom of post-war inflation and instability. People also obtain gold in the belief that its price may be increased, making it a good investment."

The treasury believes illegal gold hoarding has increased because of the number of violations of the Gold Reserve act committed recently. An official said:

"Gold hoarding violations have been sporadic during the past year although they have been increasing since the end of the war. Tht treasury is studying the situation, of course. Whether anything is done still is to be determined."

Federal and private investment officials agreed that most people obtain gold as a hedge against economic instability. One firm told prospective gold buyers in a booklet:

"American gold coins may never again be issued. The price of gold may never again be raised. But some people are not convinced of this.

"Wisely or rashly, they would like to hold some gold, if they may do so legally. Perhaps it is this desire on the part of individuals which justifies governments hoarding gold in central strongboxes."

Texas A & M Contest Surveys Egg Production Of Average Hen

COLLEGE STATION, Feb. 3—(INS)—This is strictly for the information of curious city folk, who, while consuming their ham and eggs, may have wondered how many eggs a hard-working hen can lay in a month.

No one hen can be singled out for analysis, but some per flock figures are available thanks to Texas A & M college and its December Texas Farm and Home Egg-Laying contest.

Mrs. Buck Turner of Ellis county has a flock of between 350 and 500 white leghorns that averaged 26.9 eggs per hen last month. This is the top contest effort in the state for any flock of any size during one month.

White leghorns seem to be the most prolific producers. Even in such large numbers as the 2,042 flock owned by Bruce Spring of Gonzales county, they do pretty well.

For December they got together and turned out some 22 eggs per bird.

This, however, may be jumping to conclusions because for the contest's present three month span 117 inbred-hybrids owned by R. H. Mitchell of Brazos county are tops, having averaged 23.8 eggs per hen since Oct. 1.

FAMILY TREE

Let's See, If I'm My Uncle, Then—

DENISON, Feb. 3. (INS) — He's not his own grandpa, but S/Sgt. Earl Brewer II stumped recruiting officials by saying his aunt and his sister "are both the same."

"You mean they both live at the same address?" asked the man filling in the forms.

"Naturally," returned the sergeant, "because they are both the same."

"Is your aunt—or sister—related to your mother or father?"

"She's my mother's sister."

With a bit of reasoning it seemed logical that if his mother's sister was his sister, then his mother was his sister.

"Exactly," said Brewer. "You see, when my parents divorced, my grandmother—my mother's mother—adopted me. Her daughters, who were my aunts, became my sisters. And by the same token my mother became my sister."

Naturally he's not his own grandpa—just his own uncle.

New Angle On Mixing Gasoline And Alcohol Destroys Tavern

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 3. (U.P.)—The moral of this might be: don't mix gasoline and alcohol.

A Phoenix resident stopped in a local tavern for a drink and parked an uncorked gallon of gasoline he was carrying beside a stove.

Just as he raised a glass of beer to his lips, the gasoline exploded. The visitor raced out of the tavern, knocking over the gasoline jug as he passed.

The tavern was burned to the ground.

Ventriloquist Pastor Uses Dummy To Accent Sermons

LYNN, Mass. (U.P.) — A wooden ventriloquist's dummy is "assistant pastor" of the Disciples of Christ First Christian church.

The Rev. Willis P. Miller, 28, a spare-time ventriloquist, shares his pulpit with the dummy, "Victor."

"Victor" interrupts Miller's sermons and Bible stories with questions, elaborations and occasional quips.

Miller, who believes he's the first clergyman in the nation to use a dummy in religious work, says the idea makes the congregation pay more attention to sermons and helps the children of his flock retain more of what they hear in church.

Malay Parrot In St. Louis Zoo Gets Lessons In English Speech

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 3. (U.P.)— Big Boy, the St. Louis zoo's talking bird, is getting bilingual.

The bird, a Javan hill mynah, is being taught English because none of the zoo authorities can understand his fluent monologues in Malayan.

For his language lessons, Big Boy attends private classes each afternoon in a room above the monkey house.

Expressions like "How are you?" and "Anybody home?" are already in the bird's vocabulary. Discouraging to his teachers, however, is a long, low "wolf whistle" that Big Boy uses indiscriminately on men, women and monkeys.

Missionary Group To Defy Chinese Reds

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 3. (U.P.) — Regardless of Communists, Lutheran missionaries will stay in China.

Representatives of five Lutheran foreign missionary boards made the policy clear in a meeting here at which they said the church must meet the Communist drive "head on."

Even though churches in China are forced to close, the mission work will not be abandoned, they said.

The board members asked that all Lutheran missions in China form a joint, permanent committee there to decide what will be the nature of their work if Communism forces curtailment of activity.

Poultry Expert Suggests Bantam Roosters For Household Pets

NANTUCKET, Mass., Feb. 3.—(U.P.)—Bantam roosters make good household pets, according to C. L. Sibley, a poultry expert.

"It's best to get them about two or three months old," he said. "Up to that time, they simply don't know much what is going on."

Sibley said the bantam "is affectionate, recognizes people rapidly and is very gentle with children."

They are good for your ego, too, he claimed. After a while, they learn to follow you around, stop when you stop "and strike a pose."

Irish Merchant Fleet Enters World Trade For First Time

NEW YORK, Feb. 3. (U.P.)— The maiden voyage to New York of the S.S. Irish Pine, the first of five new ships, inaugurates a new venture in world trade under the Irish flag. The new fleet with its accommodations for passengers and the latest cargo handling facilities, will maintain a regular service between European and American costal ports.

The Irish Pine of 7,500 tons and 16 knots speed, will be followed shortly by the S.S. Irish Cedar, S.S. Irish Oak and S.S. Irish Alder, operating in conjunction with the State Martin Corporation, New York. Until recently, Erie had no deep sea tonnage under her own flag and her trade was mainly in the hands of Britain and foreign powers.

You'll find only the tender, better-flavored meat of the small tuna in this can.

NEW MACHINE IS MOST POWERFUL IN WORLD

Super Atom-Smasher Is Completed In California To Speed Up Research In Sub-Atomic Regions

By JACK HANLEY
INS Staff Correspondent

BERKELEY, Feb. 3—A super-atom-smasher, which liberates X-rays of 300 million electron volts, was revealed today at the University of California.

The machine weighs only 135 tons but is the world's most powerful working atom-smasher using electrons as atomic "bullets." It is a new and improved synchroton, a "baby" compared to the university's 4,000-ton cyclotron—but a baby with a powerful wallop.

Synchrotron Aids Research

The new synchrotron may enable researchers to peek into previously unexplored sub-atomic regions and may even enable them to obtain a better understanding of the meson, the mysterious particle found in cosmic rays.

Three other synchrotrons now are in operation but they produce only 70 million electron volts or less. Several other 300 million electron volt machines are under construction.

The new synchrotron is one of several types of postwar super-atom-smashers with which research physicists have been "cheating" Einstein's theory.

Einstein's law says that as a particle gains energy it gains mass. In other words, it gets heavier.

Maximum Speed Raised

This meant that the atom-smashing "bullets" or deuterons (the nuclei of heavy hydrogen) used in the prewar cyclotrons could not be speeded up beyond 100 million electron volts.

Beyond this energy, the increasing weight of the "bullets" caused them to lag and fall out of step with the regularly spaced electrical pushes applied by the cyclotron.

The new synchrotron uses the basic cyclotron idea of shooting atom-piercing "bullets" around a circular magnetic field. This field could be likened to one of those little race tracks miniature racing fans use.

Electric Volt Set Speed

And like the miniature automobiles, which are controlled by a wire, the synchrotron's projectiles are accelerated or slowed down by electrical pushes.

Instead of heavy projectiles like protons, deuterons and alpha particles used in the cyclotron, the synchrotron uses an electron "bullet." The electron is one two-thousandth the size or mass of a proton.

By the time electron "bullets" have attained an energy of 300 million electron volts in the new doughnut - shaped synchrotron, they have increased their mass 600 times.

To keep them whirling at this dizzy speed, the new synchrotron is equipped with "booster" equipment, which pushes the lagging electrons up to the spot where they get the synchrotron's terrific and full power charge.

The "booster" on the synchrotron is an electro-magnet that operates with delicate micro-second timing. A huge condenser bank fires power that builds up the spot where they get the synchrotron's terrific and full power charge.

Muddy Roads Cause Closing Of School

Because of the condition of unpaved streets in the vicinity of the M. C. Overton elementary school, at Filmore and Twenty-ninth street, that school will be closed today, it was announced Thursday after a conference by public school authorities.

The building is located in an unpaved portion of the city, and great confusion and difficulty have been caused parents who seek to drive to the school with children. Streets in the area have been pronounced as almost impassable.

Another reason for the closing as cited by Clyde Tatum, chairman of the board of trustees, is to allow city and county road crews full and free access to the streets involved, with the hope they may be put in shape for use by Monday, when it is hoped the school can reopen.

The announcement said that both city and county equipment will be used in seeking to open the area, as a portion of the zone is outside the city limits. It was asked that traffic avoid that area, so that road crews will not be hampered in their work.

Do-Si-Do Invades Washington As Old-Timer Calls Square Dances For Capital Society

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3. — If you have a strong set of lungs, a loose tongue and a sense of timing, you, too, can sing out with:

"Big foot up and little foot down, and whirligig, whirligig 'round and 'round."

Or:

"Promenade with your girl by your side; your arm around her waist if she ain't too wide."

The above, to the very young, should be identified as the chant that goes with the old-fashioned quadrille, which Granddad and Granny used to swing in the old town hall. The Fox Trot, the Charleston, the Old Black Bottom and jitterbugging were danced and quickly forgotten. But the old Square dance, enjoyed by those from eight to eighty goes on, like the brook—forever.

Ed Durlacher of Freeport, L. I., who has been calling the Do-Si-Do since he was 12, is here to reintroduce the old time calls to Washington society.

Ed is a little guy with a bald head and a raspy, booming voice. He calls himself a "second generation caller." His pappy was one and Ed got his start when he was 12 years old.

His folks took him along to a dance. The caller was a construction engineer who came down with no voice at all in the middle of the first dance. Ed stepped up beside the fiddler and finished out the evening. He's been calling 'em ever since.

His peak was touched recently when he published a big book called "Honor Your Partner," which contains the calls and music for 81 American Square dances with instructions for doing same.

The volume contains all the catchy parlance quadrillers know so well like "allemande left," "buckle up two," "corner gent," "duck for the oyster," "ladies swing in, gents swing out," etc.

The music, dances and calls such as "chase rabbit, chase squirrel, chase that pretty girl around the world" have come so far down the years they now are in the public domain.

Ed feels that Square dancing is a vital, if often neglected, part of our life.

"These dances," he said, "cannot be claimed entirely by America since they are a melting of old-time dances from all over the world."

The old-time caller looked over his horn-rimmed eye glasses, and admitted quite frankly that he is pretty popular among the Square set.

Kids have been named after him and 73 couples—that he knows of—wound up before the parson after attending some of his callings.

"The moment people join hands in a Square dance, all antagonism is forgotten," he said. "It's the old smoother-outer of ruffled tempers and bad dispositions."

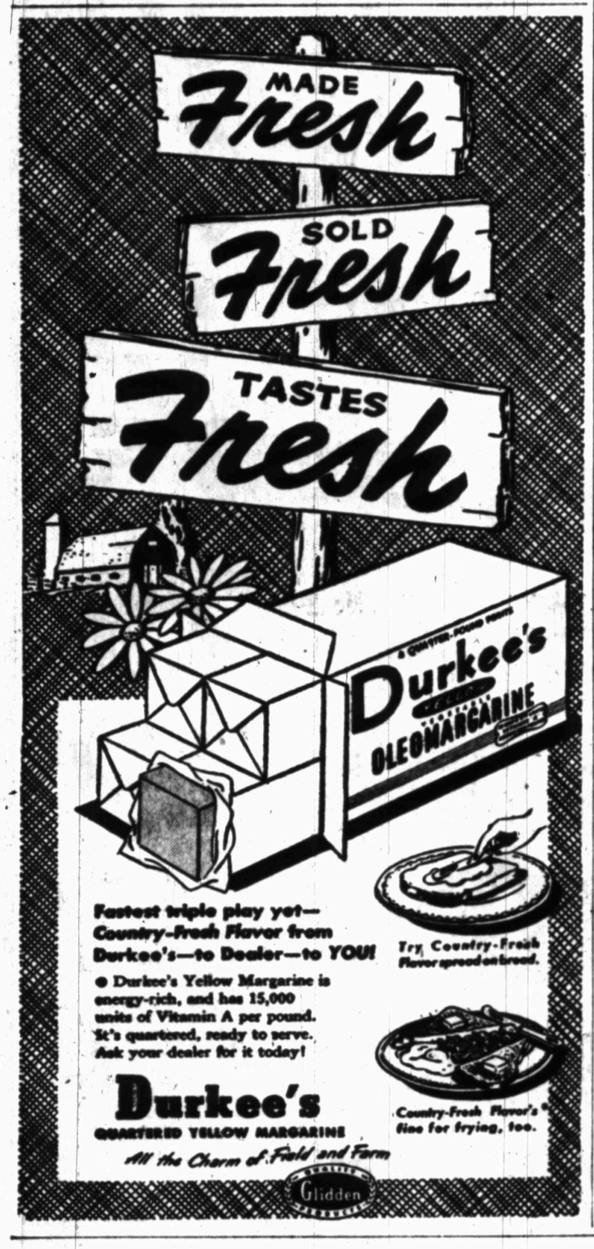

Ed Durlacher believes that if those Russian leaders would loosen up once in awhile and kick up a toe and heel in a Square dance, there would be less trouble in the world.

Anybody who can lift a leg—and many who cannot — can "chase that possum, chase that coon, chase that great big old baboon."

Southern Rhodesia, in a recent month, licensed 42 new companies, with capital aggregating over $7,000,000 — the highest figure since 1946.

NEW PLANTS BELIEVED POSSIBLE

U. S. Farmers May Reap Great Benefits From Atomic Energy

By PAUL F. ELLIS
United Press Staff Writer

OAK RIDGE, Tenn., Feb. 3.—The farmers of America stand to reap great benefits from atomic energy.

Out of this "atomic city" may come plants now unknown to man—a potential addition to the world's shrinking food supply.

And don't be surprised if you see scientists going through a field with geiger counters. That is part of the plot science is weaving to learn the secrets of why plants grow and what they need to produce bigger and better crops.

Better Fertilizers Foreseen

There may be a higher standard of eating just around the corner for all of us.

Scientists make new predictions but experiments being conducted at this atomic headquarters hold vast potential gains. They set no dates and count no bushels of corn until they are in the granary.

Scientists believe that increased and better crops will not come from "atomic soil." The big gains, they said today, will come in better fertilizer—growth producing substances much cheaper and more powerful than used now.

The new type fertilizer, they believe, will come as a result of using radioactive isotopes, or substances, to determine definitely what food plants need to exist.

As of today, it is hit or miss to find out how much of various compounds to use in fertilizer. Experiments, however, are under way with radioactive substances that will tell the exact amount of phosphorous, for example, that a plant takes from the soil.

Most fertilizer contains such substances as phosphorous, calcium, potassium and zinc. The time is coming when the farmer will not have to wait until a crop yields to know just how much of each compaund he must apply to the earth.

The fertilizer compounds can now be "tagged" with radioactive atoms. In the case of phosphate, for instance, it can be determined how much a plant takes from the soil. The technique is simple. As the plant grows the radioactive phosphorous it takes up can be measured by a geiger counter, a delicate instrument that records radiation.

It can also be determined how much is left in the earth. Thus, a better formula in the makeup of fertilizing compounds can be made.

After Hiroshima it first was believed that the radioactive earth made plants grow better, but later investigation showed that the ground was made more fertile by destruction of numerous types of organic material. The radioactivity had nothing to do with the increased growing, the scientists determined.

However, there is a big possibility that mutations (hereditary changes) can be induced in certain types of crop seeds and produce better type quality — and even new types of food plants.

Several research laboratories are sending seeds to Oak Ridge for exposure in the uranium chain reaction pile here. They are exposed under planned-controlled conditions and in a year or so, there may be available new types of crop seeds for America's farmers.

Argentine Official Denies Plan To Permit Peron's Re-Election

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 3. (U.P.) — Reports that the Argentine Constituent assembly had abandoned a proposed constitutional amendment which would permit the re-election of President Juan D. Peron were denied today.

Statements by two assemblymen that the Peronist majority would not seek the re-election amendment were displayed prominently by all Buenos Aires newspapers.

Ernesto Bogliolo, the assembly's press officer, said on behalf of Col. Doming Mercante, president of the Constituent assembly, that the reports were not true. He said the proposed amendment reflected the Peronist party's view, and had been approved unanimously by all Peronist assemblymen.

Four New York Communities Set Example In World Understanding

By BOB CONSIDINE
INS Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Four New York communities—Schenectady, Ithaca, Glens Falls and Jamestown—are making a fine contribution to international understanding.

With the blessing and aid of New York's State Education department, those towns sent some of their young men and women to Europe this past summer. They went not as government representatives, not representatives of an agency or college or anything else. They went as plain people in search of other plain people.

Since their return they have explained the people of Europe to thousands of the members of their communities, just as they explained their people to the Europeans last summer. They brought back the hopes, problems and customs of a Europe fighting desperately to survive and, through our aid, succeeding.

Plan Is Explained

"The importance of helping people of different countries to understand each other better is too obvious to require comment," Gov. Dewey wrote to the first batch of such ambassadors as they were about to leave. "Never in the history of the world has it been quite so important as it is today. The State Education department is to be congratulated upon instituting this program."

In the hope that it will spread to other U. S. cities, the department has outlined how its project works:

1. The local community service council of young adults, a group operating under the auspices of the municipal school system and the State Bureau of Adult Education, approaches the community at large with a proposal that it send one or more young people abroad as ambassadors of the town.

The council of young adults promotes the project and raises funds to finance the trip of the ambassador or ambassadors selected. The New York ambassadors got along nicely on $750 for the whole trip.

Results: The people of the community become increasingly aware of their stake in peace and international understanding and their need to know more about other peoples. The Council of Young Adults learns more about its community, gains experience in promoting an educational activity, in carrying on a publicity campaign, in raising funds. The young adults gain status as a group in the community, and learn to cooperate with other groups.

2. A committee of the townspeople selects one or more young adults as ambassadors, depending on amount of money raised.

Results: Attention is focused on the young adult age group and its role in community life.

Given Good Background

3. The young adults selected to go abroad are briefed on the historical, cultural, social, economic and political backgrounds of their home towns.

Results: Young adult community leaders gain an insight into the nature and workings of their community; they depart better-equipped to educate people overseas on what American Democracy is at the "grass-roots" level.

4. The community ambassadors travel overseas, take up residence with a European family, and live for six weeks in a typical European community executing their mission of international education. They report their experiences to the American community via newspaper articles and letters.

Results: People overseas learn directly from an American community representative what the U. S. is really like.

5. The ambassadors return, report their experiences to civic groups, service clubs, religious organizations and, through press and radio, to the townspeople.

Results: The community and state receive the benefits of an education in international understanding, not through books or through information from a distant agency, but on a personal level from people they know and have seen grow up in their home town.

The ambassadors gain status in the community, as well as experience in journalism, radio, public speaking, group work. Increasing numbers of people become aware of the need for greater familiarity among peoples, and of the potentialities of this kind of international education.

If your town is interested, contact Lawrence L. Harvie, associate commissioner, New York State university, State Education department, Albany, N. Y. It is, indeed, an imaginative and heartening program.

ONE TRAP PROFITABLE

WADDINGTON, N. Y. (U.P.)—Frank Oshier, veteran St. Lawrence County hunter and trapper, figures making $25 to $35 on just one trap isn't bad. The trap contained a rare platinum mink, believed to be the only one of its kind ever taken in the area.

Struck Texas City Plant Is Blamed In Construction Layoff

GALVESTON, Feb. 3. (U.P.)—A spokesman for the strike-bound Carbide and Carbon Chemical Corp. at Texas City repeated its willingness today to resume negotiations, after a union group had charged the company with responsibility for forcing 2,000 construction workers not involved in the dispute to stay off their jobs.

The Galveston Building and Trades council yesterday revealed a meeting with officials of the Ford, Bacon and Davis Construction Co. in an effort to find means of resuming a $15,000,000 construction project at the struck plant.

"Safety" Move Disputed

The construction workers were laid off "as a safety measure" when 1,400 maintenance employes of the plant went on strike. Union officials told United Press preparations had been made for a strike of a year's duration.

The council charged the company had turned down an offer by the International Union of Operating Engineers, local 347, to supply enough fire-fighting manpower to make the plant safe for construction workers.

Action Is Defended

However, E. J. Fox, assistant plant superintendent, countered with a statement that the factors involved in that type plant prohibited maintenance of safety by a "skeleton" crew.

"Until the plant is again on a normal, stable operating schedule, we canont permit construction work to be resumed," Fox said. "It is a matter of safety for the workers that is at stake."

At the same time, Fox said the company has received no word from the union implying willingness to resume negotiations to end the labor dispute. He said management was ready to once again sit at the bargaining table with union representatives.

Minnesota University Students Aid Search For Cold Remedy

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 3. (U.P.)—Health service officials at the University of Minnesota are hoping that their 1,000 human guinea pigs will help solve the common-cold problem.

The university doctors have developed a cold-killing drug. They are testing it for winter aid to cold sufferers.

Students take the pills, which have no name yet, when they feel symptoms of a cold. They keep records on their "cold" histories, reporting weekly if they have a cold, and what its symptoms are.

A similar test last year indicated that flu shots were not effective as far as colds are concerned.

Maine Judge Suggests Public Lashings For All Wife Beaters

ROCKLAND, Me., Feb. 3 (U.P.)—Municipal Judge Zelma Dwinal believes the whipping post should be revived for wife beaters.

He said whipping posts should be set up in public squares with the number of lashes for the erring husband to be determined by "the severity of the beating he given his wife."

Jailing wife beaters is no good, he said, because it deprives their families of income and costs the state money.

Gov. Jester Reported To Be Improved From Minor Cold

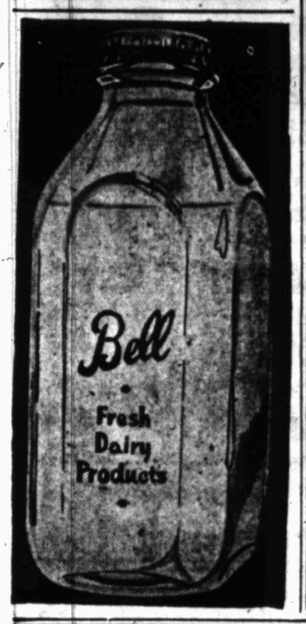

AUSTIN, Feb. 3. (U.P.) — Gov. Beauford Jester is "feeling better but has been advised to stay at home another day," his office reported today.

The governor, suffering from a cold and laryngitis, has been confined to the mansion since Monday.

However, a spokesman said that the governor was "doing some paper work and otherwise carrying on official business from the mansion . . ."

A machine that turns switches on and off 2200 times a minute has been devised by an electrical manufacturing company to test the tiny switches used in aircraft vending machines, household appliances, and a wide variety of other electrical equipment.

U. S. Fears Nazi Publishers May Regain Control Of German Press

By JOHN M. ANSPACHER
United Press Staff Writer

FRANKFURT, Germany, Feb. 3—Nazi publishers may yet regain control of Germany's press.

U. S. military government authorities concede that there is no guaranty the 56 publishers licensed by them as free of Nazi taint will be able to carry on, particularly after the occupation troops go home.

These non-Nazi publishers operate their newspapers on lease from the former owners, mostly Nazis. The military government forced the former owners of the plants, Nazis or not, to give five-year leases to the new publishers at an approved rate.

Good For Eight Years

The leases carry a three-year extension option, which can be picked up automatically with the military government's approval if the new publishers so desire. The leases will take the newspapers through to 1955, at least, as the leases were signed in 1947.

But what will happen after the occupation forces leave, or after 1955 if the Americans are still here then, is an open question.

The new publishers fear the old owners may take the leases to court once the Americans have left, get them voided and take over the newspapers by law or by charging exorbitant rates.

Johann Naumann of Augsburg, Bavaria, chairman of the U. S. zone-wide publishers association, said the former owners already have begun to exert pressure.

"The attitude of these plant owners, most of the Nazi party members, was evident almost immediately after the bulk of the de-Nazification procedures broke down early last year," he said.

"Although their legal efforts may not be successful now, they have already tried to put pressure on the publishers by increasing the rents. No newspaper today can cope with the rates quoted. In this way, the owners have tried to force their way into the business and thus establish themselves in the newspaper field again."

Military government spokesmen say any permanent safeguards must be set up by the Germans themselves. The military government already has begun to withdraw gradually from the fields of German law.

Hope In Constitution

Most observers feel the best chance of a solution lies with the Bonn constitutional assembly, which is attempting to write a new constitution for Germany.

If the eventual German government will insure a free press, guided by editorial and managerial principles already laid down by the western Allies these observers believe there may be some hope.

But, they said, the matter will have to be kept out of the realm of laissez-faire private enterprise and out of the hands of lower-level German courts.

Allied authorities admit they can see no chance of complete protection for the present publishers.

Radio Manufacturer Sees Trend To FM, Video Sets

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 3. — Vice-President H. C. Bonfig, of Zenith Radio Corp., told West Coast radio dealers today that the two largest markets in the electrical field this year will be television and geunine FM radio.

Bonfig said, "Some manufacturers and dealers have made a serious mistake in becoming so excited about television that they seem to have forgotten all about the radio business."

According to Bonfig there is a larger market today for genuine FM sets than for television. He said that FM broadcasting is so superior to ordinary AM broadcasting, and is so rapidly becoming entrenched in most of the country, that there is today a terrific market for FM sets that really perform. He told the dealers that nearly every AM set in the more populous areas is ripe for replacement by FM, and that each top quality FM set sold creates a market for several more.

This, Bonfig stated, has been the experience of Zenith and other producers of quality FM sets. Zenith expanded production on two inexpensive FM table models during the off-season this year, and found demand so heavy that they do not expect to catch up until late in 1949.

Bonfig concludes that, "Even if our economy should enter a recession, FM radio and television will make such relative progress that we will all be glad we are in the business."

Farmer Finds What May Be Meteor Site

Fritz Speckman, farmer who lives 12 miles east of Meadow, believes there might be something to those reports about a meteor falling in this area last Sunday night.

For there appeared mysteriously on an ice-covered stock tank on his farm a hole in the ice about six to eight inches in diameter as if something had fallen through the ice. The hole was about six to eight feet from the dam of the 60-foot square surface tank.

Speckman said it appeared that the hole had been made with a great force for the ice was cracked in a pattern similar to that made by a bullet striking a glass window.

Speckman marked the spot where the hole appeared and said he planned to investigate later whether there was a portion of a meteor there.

He explained that there had been no stock near the tank and no one but he had been near it since the ice had been frozen.

Mrs. E. D. Crouch of 2822 Maple, Lubbock, also reported seeing the meteor Sunday night.

Mrs. Crouch said Thursday she saw a "terrible light" in the Southwest sky Sunday night and that it appeared to be a Roman candle or skyrocket just as it was bursting. She added that it didn't appear to be "too far away."

Mrs. Crouch said she thought it was a shooting star or comet but after the ligit flash she didn't see any light falling toward the earth.

Tulsan Rejoins Rent Law Fight

TULSA, Feb. 3. (U.P.)—Rev. Wallace J. Murphy left his sick-bed today and returned to his office to push the "Tulsa plan" of evicting thousands of tenants from their homes.

"I'm a little shaky, but I feel pretty good," he said as he arrived at the office of the Tulsa Property Owners association after spending nearly a week in bed because of a heart attack.

Murphy said he would concentrate on details for a nationwide anti-rent-control conference in Washington Feb. 14.

Plan Special Train

"We're planning a special train," he said. "We'll need at least two cars from Tulsa and two from Kansas City, and we'll pick up others as we go."

All persons who are interested in getting rid of rent controls are invited to the conference at the Willard hotel, he said. The meeting is sponsored by the Property Owners Association of America, of which Murphy is national president.

The minister-landlord reported the local association has "several hundred" housing vacancies listed by landlords who have refused to rent them on account of the federal controls. He wouldn't say exactly how many. The association is trying to prove there is no housing shortage here.

35 Renters Protest

Only about 35 Tulsa renters have called the local rent control office to protest their 60-day eviction notices.

Area director C. E. Marshall interpreted this as meaning the tenants aren't particularly worried.

"I think they understand that our office will protect them," he said.

But Murphy had another explanation:

"The tenants are as disgusted with the rent control office as we are."

Methodist Schools In Japan Send Plea To U.S. For Used Textbooks

ABILENE Feb. 3 (Special)—English, history, philosophy, sociology, New Testaments and Bible textbooks are needed in the Methodist schools in Japan, W. B. Swim, a McMurry college graduate and teacher there, has written to the McMurry College Christian foundation.

"The libary here was completely destroyed during the war," he writes and the need for books is great."

The members of the Christian foundation have set up boxes in the chapel of the religious building, and also at the bookstore, on the campus, and students have been urged to donate their used textbooks for this purpose.

A special collection to pay costs of shipping the books to Japan was taken at a recent meeting.

Writer Sees U. S. Chance To Force Stalin's Hand On 'Peace' Meeting

By J. M. ROBERTS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Joseph Stalin gave the United States an opportunity this week to make its attitude perfectly clear and the administration has taken full advantage of the opening.

Acheson and Truman explain succinctly, with a good bit of non-diplomatic satire too strong even to be lost in translation for foreign consumption, why you can't do business with Stalin.

The United States merely says that, while "good old Joe" is always talking about disarmament, peace, lifting the Berlin blockade and the like, he is never willing to really get down to business in the councils which have been set up to handle those problems. Now he must put up or shut up, or rather if he won't put up he won't be listened to.

U. S. Leads Bout

So far, the U. S. is way ahead on points in this latest propaganda bout.

There are two points, however, where we may be falling short.

All this business has been going on through the press. Stalin, a master of progaganda, has been able to talk without being held formally accountable. Could the United States drop a blockbuster into Moscow's propaganda factory by asking formally for a conference of the chiefs of state immediately, where Russia would either have to put up or admit by her acts, right in this current chapter of the cold war, that we are right about her attitude?

Our relations with other western powers demand their presence at any such parley. If the U. S. is really interested in peace, the site of the meeting doesn't matter, nor should previously taken positions be allowed to interfere.

Doubts Effectiveness

I agree that such a conference would probably be entirely futile so far as any agreement is concerned. But it might be a most effective answer to Stalin's "peace offensive."

The other point has been soft pedaled by everyone because it is difficult to handle without causing misunderstanding. But President Truman hinted at it in his inaugural address. If Stalin should adopt what many believe would be his smartest course, and promote a lull in the cold war for the purpose of putting the world to sleep about the dangers of Communist aggression, those who know the danger might use this point as their best weapon for keeping the western peoples awake.

The point is this. Even without her expansionism, Russia's very existence as a ruthless dictatorship, her suppression of the liberties of 190,000,000 people, her own subservience to power-mad men who brag of their independence of morality, would remain a cancer deep in the body of the world.

Achievement of a formal peace before that cancer is eliminated would be only sporific. Arriving at a day when you can do business with Stalin cannot be the main objective. Real peace can come only with the day when you don't have to do business with him, or anyone like him, anywhere in the world.

Sweden has a labor shortage.

Ann Blyth Returns For New Film With Bob Montgomery; Young Actress Given Praise

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
INS Staff Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 3. — Ann Blyth, who just finished "Top O' The Morning" with Bing Crosby, returns to Universal - International to start "Come By My Love" with Robert Montgomery.

In spite of her tender years, Ann is one whale of an actress and don't think Bill Goetz doesn't know it. When Frederic and Florence March were here, they said they would like to do a show with Ann on Broadway. That's real praise, because the Marches do not usually like anytihng in Hollywood.

Bob Montgomery's pictures seem lucky for new girls. Wanda Hendrix gave her best performance with him in "Ride a Pink Horse." His new one, with Ann, is a light romance which starts the end of this month with Michael Gordon directing.

To Take New Post

Eddie Sutherland, who has been in the motion picture business for 34 years, is deserting it for television and radio. Eddie and Edwina (Mrs. Sutherland) leave the end of this month for New York where he will join NBC as a director.

Eddie should be valuable to video, because of his many years experience as a director. He started as an actor with Marguerite Clark and Bebe Daniels. Then he became assistant to Charlie Chaplin, and finally became a director.

My exclusive story that Sam Goldwyn is forming a big international tie-up with Roberto Rossellini for Ingrid Berman's next picture, annoyed Mr. Goldwyn, who told me off in no uncertain terms.

"Yes, it's true, but you should have waited and printed it when everyone else did," he said.

That's not the way I do business, Sam, and you ought to know. When I know a story is true, I print it.

Ingrid, who leaves April 1, will play a Swedish girl in the Rossellini picture. All other members of the cast will be Italian.

'Very Happy' California Woman Cancels Wife-Beating Charges

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 3. (INS)—Phyllis Drake, who during the night had her mate tossed into jail on a wife-beating charge, announced today that she and Chicago manufacturer Harrington E. Drake have reached a reconciliation and are "very happy."

Mrs. Drake had originally complained that Drake fractured her jaw during a discussion over a pending divorce last Tuesday night. He was jailed for a few hours until his lawyers posted $1500 bond.

The Drakes said that there would be no signing of any complaint "because we are very happy and have settled our differences."

Phyllis is the sister of Lou Dell Spreckles, ex-wife of sugar heir John D. Spreckles, III.

CANADIAN DAM:

The Job Is Started

INDICATIVE of interest and confidence in a Canadian river dam and reservoir as a source of water for large areas of Northwest Texas, and of diligent effort in behalf of the project, was a bill introduced in the Texas Senate this week by Sen. Grady Hazelwood, of Amarillo.

The measure would authorize the chairman of the Texas Board of Water Engineers to begin negotiations with New Mexico and Oklahoma for an agreement upon the proposed project. The Canadian rises in New Mexico and flows across the Texas Panhandle into Oklahoma. An agreement among the three interested states is described as one of the necessary preliminaries to hastening any developments along the stream.

Senator Hazelwood's bill seems certain of early approval. But an interstate Canadian river compact is likely to be more difficult. Even if New Mexico and Oklahoma contemplated no developments along the stream themselves, they might utilize their positions to do a little horse-trading for something they do want. New Mexico, for example, might balk on approving a Canadian river compact in an effort to obtain a more generous allocation of waters from the Pecos.

But delay is not likely to make an agreement as to the Canadian river less difficult. The sooner the job is tackled, the quicker it is likely to be solved. The Hazelwood bill provides the means and method for tackling it.

At the same time it supplies reassuring testimony that those who see the Canadian as a possible solution of many water problems—including those of Lubbock, Amarillo and other cities—are doing the hard work behind the scenes which invariably precedes great achievements.

Link In A Chain

FURTHER proof of national courage of the highest order was given by Norway's announcement the other day of a desire to join the North Atlantic Defense alliance now in the final stages of seemingly assured formation.

The risks the Norwegians thus have assumed are apparent to anyone familiar with the European map. Norway undoubtedly would be one of the first, if not the first, target if war should break out between the Soviet East and the Democratic West.

The action, however, was consistent with the untarnished record of a courageous nation. Norway may have been lacking in other things. It never has been accused, even by enemies, of lacking in courage.

The nation may be a small link, as to size, when the alliance actually is completed. But no link in the chain designed to strengthen human liberty will be stronger.

Look What I Sabotaged, Comrade

Beware Of Romance

By ROBERTA COURTLAND
Distributed By NEA Service, Inc.

(THE STORY: Susan shocks Merry with the announcement that she is going to marry Carter Bagby. Aunt Jane tells Merry he will probably make Susan happy but once the wedding is over, she speaks her mind. "How Susan could ever fall for that stuffed shirt—after Kin!" she explodes.)

XIX

BEFORE Carter and Susan had been back from the month-long honeymoon a week, Merry knew that it was going to be impossible for herself and Carter to live under the same roof. Carter's manner toward Susan was jealous, possessive, and he obviously resented her devotion to Merry.

Aunt Jane had returned home and Carter resented Susan's unwillingness to go out for the evening and leave Merry alone; yet when Merry's own youthful crowd filled the playroom or were on the terrace, his manner was one that laid a damper over them all.

So it was that when at Thanksgiving, Kin telephoned Merry and asked her to spend Christmas with himself and Lissa in New York, and urged that she come immediately so that she could "get in" on some of the gaiety of the winter season, Merry accepted with an alacrity that annoyed Susan and pleased Carter.

There were arguments between Susan and Carter. Susan was tearfully averse to Merry's visiting "that woman"; while Carter was so frankly glad to have Merry out of the house and be alone with Susan that the newly married couple had the first and most serious quarrel about it. And Merry climbed on the train at last with such gratitude at her escape that she was prepared, on arrival in New York, to welcome Lissa as her dearest friend for assisting in her rescue.

IT HAD been warm and mellow when she left St. Vincent's, but when she stepped off the train in New York, a light snow was falling. Coming up the ramp into the rotunda of the station, her eyes searched eagerly for Kin, and suddenly she saw him, searching just as anxiously for her. She gave a little childish whoop of delight, and flung herself upon him.

"Oh, Dad, I'm so glad to see you!" she told him unsteadily after the first excited moments.

"You're growing up on me, chick. Where's my little girl?"

"Well, growing up is a bit of something you can't seem to stop, somehow—only right this minute, I'm five years old and it's the night before Christmas, and I'm waiting for Santa Claus, and I can already hear the reindeers prancing," she told him, and gave a delightful skip as her hands closed tightly on his.

"Lissa thought it would be nice if I met you alone," said Kin drawing her toward the entrance where taxis were lined up, and signalling to a redcap who was following with her bags. "Very discerning woman, Lissa?"

There was such deep pride in his voice, such happiness in his eyes, that Merry asked involuntarily, "You are happy, Dad?"

"Very happy, darling." His tone gave a depth and a richness to his words that made her look swiftly up at him. "And Susan?"

"Oh, she and Carter are having fun," said Merry carefully. She knew that Aunt Jane had written Kin about the wedding.

"Good. I'm glad to hear it," said Kin, and tucked her into a taxi and gave an address on Sutton Place. Then he smiled down at her. "Swell having you here for Christmas, Merry. For always, if you'd like it as much as I would." Tears stung her eyes and she smiled mistily at him.

"You're sweet, Dad. But maybe Mrs. Carson might have something to say about that!" she said awkwardly.

"Lissa will—but there! Never mind. You and Lissa will hit it off, I know. You're my two favorite girl friends. It would be unthinkable if you didn't," he said comfortably, and proceeded to point out to her things of interest as the taxi, caught in thick afternoon traffic, prowled its way north and into Sutton Place.

THE apartment house was impressive, though not offensively so. The doorman wore a dark blue livery, with a minimum of gold braid and buttons. He greeted Kin with affectionate interest, and the same friendly attitude followed them as they entered the small, well furnished lobby and stepped into an elevator. On the sixteenth floor, the elevator disgorged them in a small foyer with only one door facing them.

The door opened even as Kin was fishing for his keys, and a tall woman in some sort of misty blue-gray chiffon hostess gown stood there, smiling at them, and saying in a voice that was like thick, rich cream, "Hello, angel—and is this the infant? How do you do, Merry? I'm Lissa. Welcome to our humble abode."

"Thank you," said Merry shyly. Lissa looked her over, and cocked an eyebrow at Kin.

"You beast," she said, her tone making it an endearment, "you didn't tell me she was so pretty or so young! Why, she is an infant."

Kin laughed, his eyes warm and tender.

"Them's fightin' words, gal," he assured her firmly. "Merry's all but eighteen years old and a full-grown woman, she wants you to understand!"

"But of course she does! Even at my age, I can look back and remember how I felt at almost eighteen. I've never denied I have a phenomenal memory!" said Lissa lightly. And though Kin had not touched her, Merry had the feeling that he had taken her into his arms and kissed her. There was about them an aura of two people so deeply in love, so completely happy at being together, that a blind man could have seen it.

Looking At Life - - By Erich Brandeis

A FRIEND of ours called my wife on the phone from New York last Saturday.

She is a good friend—the kind whom you forgive almost anything. She was all excited.

BRANDEIS

"Honey," she said, "I must see you and Erich as soon as possible. It's important!"

My wife got scared.

"Anything serious?" she asked.

"No, nothing serious," said the friend, "but it's sensational.

"It's a new card game and I just got it direct from Hollywood. It's called Canasta. Everybody is playing it out there.

"Gin rummy is dead. So is Oklahoma. Canasta is all they do in Hollywood now."

Well, this friend of ours has lived in Hollywood for many years and only recently returned to New York.

She knows everybody, and if everybody were playing it in the best movie and radio circles, who were we here in rural Connecticut not to learn it?

So we invited our friend and her husband to dinner for Sunday.

And they came, full of thirst, appetite and Canasta.

In the meantime I made some inquiries around our own parts. We have so many writers and artists and show people living here that our ilk is worth about a dime a dozen when there is a good market.

But we do get around. And we do try to know what's going on in this world.

Nobody had ever heard of Canasta.

But our friend insisted "Be the first," she said. "After a while everybody will be playing Canasta. And you'll have the laugh on them."

SO WE played Canasta, out of a little red instruction book that somebody had sent our friend from Hollywood.

To my mind it's a crazy game. It is the Argentine version of Gin Rummy—although it isn't really anything like gin rummy.

At any rate, there are four deuces in the deck of 104 cards and four jokers. These are wild cards and come in pretty handy.

If you have seven cards, four of which must be of the same kind, you have a Canasta, which counts for 300 points, (or 500 if none of the seven cards are wild).

Well, we played and played, until three o'clock.

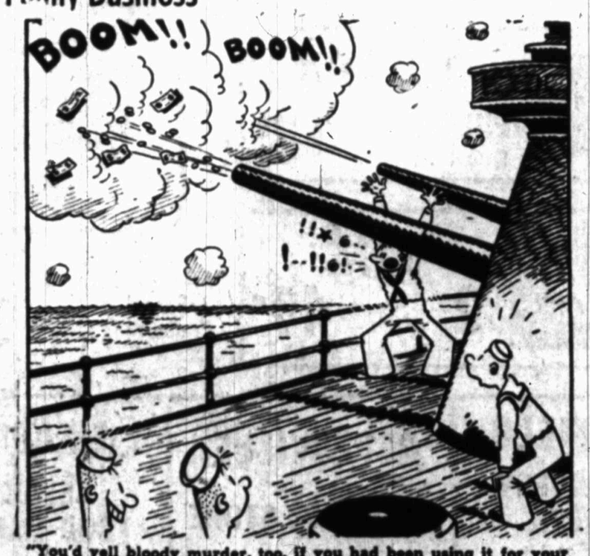

Then night lunch until three forty-five. At almost four our friends got into their car and drove back to New York—fifty miles.

My wife washed the dishes and I went to bed.

And today I have to write a column, tired as I am.

But we have learned to play Canasta.

Labor Bosses Upset

By RAY TUCKER
Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The two big labor leaders who whooped it up for President Truman—AFL President William Green and CIO-er Philip Murray—cannot afford to admit it publicly, but they feel already that they have been kicked in the face by the man they claim to have placed in the White House over the opposition of his own party's politicians.

Messrs. Green and Murray promised their cohorts that the Taft-Hartley Act, which was the only issue in the campaign for them, would be stricken off the law books almost overnight if they voted the Democratic ticket. They made a special drive to return members of the House and Senate who would support repeal, even if the White House showed signs of flinching against full abolition.

TUCKER

What Mr. Green and Mr. Murray did, to their current chagrin, was to make repeal the test of their own personal prestige. That their tub-thumping about the law did not impress the average worker is demonstrated by the fact that Governor Dewey carried most of the eastern industrial states, and lost middle western manufacturing states by an extremely small majority.

REASON: The only reason why John L. Lewis has not bent his head with them alongside the wailing wall of labor is that he never expected the Administration to demand repeal.

He has charged that Mr. Truman could have rounded up enough votes to uphold his veto two years ago, but that the President made no move because he secretly wanted this safeguard against labor excesses.

Moreover, John L. needs no Taft-Hartley Act repeal to give him complete control over his minions and dominions. He has wrung so many concessions from the coal operators, he feels, that he can afford to stand off and laugh at his erstwhile buddies—Bill and Phil.

REBUFF: "Bill and Phil" are grousing today—privately, of course—because there is no sign that the Administration or its controlled leaders on Capitol Hill intend to honor the pledges which labor's hierarchy gave to their union members during the recent presidential campaign.

With President Truman's acquiescence, House and Senate leaders will give a long thought to the problem of labor legislation. Instead of rushing through a Taft-Hartley repeal measure and reinstating the Wagner Act, they intend to hold protracted hearings on each side of the Capitol Building. That is rebuff No. 1.

AGREEABLE: In his union message, Mr. Truman specified the sort of overall labor legislation he wants. With a few amendments which will probably be insisted on in the Senate—otherwise, no measure will pass that body—the final statute will be the Taft-Hartley Act except that it will carry the title of Thomas-Lesinski because they happen to be the chairmen of the Senate and House committees handling this question. Rebuff No. 2.

Both Messrs. Thomas and Lesinski, although hitherto regarded as great friends of labor, are agreeable to the program of delay, thoughtful consideration and amendment outlined above. Now that they are burdened with affirmative responsibility, they hesitate to legislate hastily.

DISGRUNTLED: Worst of all in the eyes of the AFL and CIO, Senator Thomas is consulting such Republicans as Senator Taft and Senator Ives of New York in approaching the broad question of new labor legislation.

Labor's hostile reaction accounts for the dinner conference which Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, who also doubles as Democratic National Chairman, called for Wednesday evening, in an effort to reassure the disgruntled laborites, he insisted that Mr. Truman intended to keep his pledges on this issue.

But—and his listeners thought this a queer move for a National Chairman, whose party controls the White House and both branches of Congress—he begged them to lobby and coerce and buttonhole Democratic members so that they would "vote right."

VIOLATION: Although nobody begrudges likeable Sam Rayburn his salary boost, the pay raise given to the Speaker of the House of Representatives was a cold violation of the law governing Congressional compensation.

The Constitution provides specifically that the salary of no member of Congress shall be increased during the term of the Congressional body to which he was elected. That is, he cannot raise his own pay to have it become effective during the session in which he voted an increase.

Mr. Rayburn was elected to the Eighty-first Congress. Yet it was that body which boosted his income and also gave him a tax-free expense account. If there could be a plainer violation of the law, it would be hard to find it.

IMMUNE: Here is how House Parliamentarian Louis Deschler helped Sam's friends to get around the law:

He held that Mr. Rayburn was not elected to the Speakership by the people. The folks down in Texas, true, sent him back to the House, but it was the members of that chamber which elevated him to the rostrum. Therefore, he is immune to the laws of compensation which affect his colleagues' pay envelopes. Even "Lou" had to wink when he explained the so-caled distinction.

Under this theory, however, Congress could boost the pay of the Majority and Minority Leaders, the two whips and the chairman of every committee. They, too, were selected for their legislative posts by their buddies rather than by hoi polloi.

"How can I keep potatoes from sprouting?" some one asks. There are probably other ways, but we keep ours from sprouting by eating them.

"The roly-poly type man makes the most pliable husband," says a psychologist. It would seem more plausible that the tall stringy type would be better for winding around the little finger.

One more accessory should be provided for the new car; a mask for the owner to wear, while driving so his creditors couldn't recognize him.

"Police have been unable to get him to say why he threw his wife into the river."—From a news story. Maybe he wanted to drown her.

Upon reading that Washington, D. C., has the highest percentage of crazy people, we were so surprised you could have knocked us over with a bulldozer.

The world is in such a confused state today that we could almost wish we hadn't fallen in love with it during our formative years.

PEACE STAKES WORTH MEETING

Writer Urges U. S. Accept Bid

By THOMAS L. STOKES
Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON,—We very likely have the only atom bombs in the world, and we certainly have the biggest ones according to the Atomic Energy commission's annual report to Congress which also reveals that we are producing more and bigger ones all the time.

In short, we are well-stocked on bombs.

For a day or two we read about that in the newspapers and heard it over the radio. But that was just one item. When you stop to consider it, the American newspaper reader and radio listener today lives in a veritable din about implements of war, faster and faster war planes, rocket ships and the like. Generals and admirals make speeches and give out interviews about the need of more and bigger of everything, and about high strategy to meet this or that possible thrust of "the enemy."

STOKES

It's news, and that's the frightening part of it. We are letting ourselves drift into a dangerous state of mind almost without being aware of it. A fellow takes a chance to raise a whisper about "peace."

It is, for instance, considered very naive in some quarters, if not actually that now horrid thing "appeasement," to suggest that our government should take up seriously the last of several overtures in the last several months from Prime Minister Josef Stalin of Russia for negotiation of our many differences.

That shows how far we've wandered from American common sense.

It is, we are told, just another move in the Russian game to trick us and deceive us, and maybe it is. But we've both been playing a vast poker game for quite a while now. Russia shoves in Poland, Romania, Czechoslovakia and Berlin crises, and we push forward with Greece and Turkey and the Marshall Plan and now the Atlantic pact, and, between times, set off a bomb or two in the Pacific just to see how good we are getting at that.

The chips are stacked up high on the table, and so is the pile of guns underneath our respective chairs—ready for the quick draw.

The game can't go on forever.

It is said that the latest "peace" offer of Premier Stalin is aimed at the projected Atlantic pact, that thereby he hopes to stop that. That diagnosis may be correct. That proposed alliance of western powers, coupled with military supplies from us, probably looks no nicer from the other side of the iron curtain than Russia's moves look to us on this side. But her previous moves have not stopped us. We don't have to give up that or anything else to sit down and talk.

It might be possible that our persistence finally has had its effect in high places in Russia, and now they are willing to talk business.

It is said that you can't trust Russia. That has been said over and over so much that it gives the impression at least that we don't think we are clever enough to sit down and negotiate, that we really don't trust ourselves. That can't be true. Constantly cited are other conferences, Yalta and Potsdam among them, in which it is said glibly that we were badly outsmarted. It is difficult now to place ourselves back in situations in the midst of war and make any true judgment.

We have plenty of good diplomatic brains. And we lead from strength, for we are the strongest nation in the world today. We are so strong that we can afford to make the simple gesture of accepting the invitation for negotiations, either at the highest level or lower, whichever is most practical. In fact, we are so strong that we cannot afford to refuse, for the stake is the peace of the world.

It is the matter of pride, at least to this newspaperman, that the way has been opened by newspapermen, for this latest interview procured by Kingsbury Smith of International News Service follows another similar one last year that was secured by Eddy Gilmore of the Associated Press, both of whom are well known among Washington newspaper correspondents.

Newspaper and press associations consider it quite a feat to interview someone like Josef Stalin, but these are more than newspaper feats in their significance. They represent newspaper enterprise in the best sense of public service in that they truly symbolize the desire of the people of the whole world for a just and honorable peace.

Robert the Devil is the hero of an ancient French legend about the young man of prodigious strength who used it only for crime. The legend was used as the libretto for Meyerbeer's opera of that name.

Price Tag On Texas Vegetables Boosted By Unseasonal Freezes

(By The Associated Press)

The flash freeze that hit the Texas produce belt Monday shoved prices of several winter vegetables higher this week in many cities across the country.

The price of meat and dairy products remained unchanged generally, despite a few regional declines.

Texas produces the bulk of winter beets, parsley and spinach, and prices of these vegetables advanced moderately as shipments dropped away to fractions of last week's supply. Spinach and beets were up about 15 per cent above last week and parsley was about 25 per cent higher.

120 Carloads Shipped Daily

An average of 120 carloads of mixed vegetables leave the Lone Star state daily, but this dropped to 15 the day of the freeze and has been light since.

Prices were stable for vegetables grown in other states besides Texas.

Warmer weather eased Texas growing conditions Tuesday and officials reported the freeze had not materially affected the state's citrus crop. Citrus fruits from California, Florida and Texas were unchanged in prices except for a minor increase in large fancy oranges.

The Dun and Bradstreet wholesale food index declined to $5.88 this week, a new low since the end of OPA price control in October, 1946. The decline was 0.5 per cent off last week, 17.6 under a year ago and 20.1 off the all-time high of last July 13.

The index represents the total wholesale cost of a pound of each of 31 foods in general use.

Housing Court Aids Baltimore's Efforts To Clean Out Slums

By DON JENNINGS
United Press Staff Writer

BALTIMORE, Feb. 3.—Tenants and landlords get no special favors when they are brought into Baltimore's unique housing court for failure to correct improper living conditions.

Magistrate Harry Kruger wants to clean up the city's slums. Through impartial application of a strict building code, he has made hundreds of homes fit for human occupancy.

But Kruger, the judge responsible for enforcement of a code that makes it a criminal offense to permit improper housing, has an idea that the secret of his success may cost him his job.

Kruger doubts that he will be re-appointed to the housing court bench. He says you can influence a lot of people as housing court judge, but you don't necessarily win political friends.

Holds His Ground

Not that it worries Magistrate Kruger. As long as he's on the housing bench, he intends to be fair but rigidly firm.

"My friends meet me on the street and lots of them advise me to get out of this field," Kruger said.

"Some of them say it will ruin me. Some say it's bad politics to have to be fining people for housing violations. All right, it is. Someone has to do it, and this program must succeed.

"Lots of good people and civic leaders tell me I'm doing a fine job, and that they're behind me and the whole housing program. I appreciate what those people say, but I've been in politics long enough to know that the people who don't like what we're doing in housing court will work against us every day, and not go on to other things and forget us."

Many Fines Levied

Opened several years ago, the housing court was set up to standardize procedure formerly handled far less effectively by police courts.

Gov. William Preston Lane, Jr., made Kruger, then a magistrate-at-large, the first judge of the housing court. Kruger has since levied some $11,000 in fines, acting on about 600 housing violations and eliminating more than 200 outside toilets and 400 faulty trash and garbage containers.

Kruger doesn't show favor to tenants. He's just as strict with tenants who create health hazards as he is with landowners who fail to meet the requirements of the housing, health, fire and sanitation laws.

A few appeals have been taken to higher courts, but Kruger has been upheld in most of them.

Fort Worth Fire Trucks Assist During Emergency Plane Landing

FORT WORTH, Feb. 3. (U.P.) — Four city fire trucks stood by at Meacham field at noon today for the landing of an American airlines Convair plane carrying 21 passengers.

The big airliner radioed for the trucks when the plane began leaking hydraulic fluid after leaving Dallas.

The precaution was taken in the event the plane's brakes would not come down. However, the ship made a normal approach and landed without trouble, field officials said.

NEWS OUT OF ORDER

Bikini Refugees Begin Anew On Tiny Island

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3. (U.P.)—A tiny island covered with coconut palms has become the Pacific home of the Bikinians.

Kili, in the southern Marshalls, is one mile long but is sufficiently fertile to provide the 181 displaced persons of the atomic bomb test with food, drink and shelter. The island was once a valuable coconut plantation operated by Japanese and German holders, according to the National Geographic Society. It also grows breadfruit.

Although the Bikini atoll measures over 21 miles, its former inhabitants chose minute Kili in preference to 11-mile-long Wotho, which was recommended by the Navy. They also preferred Kili to Rongerik, which is larger than Kili but which they feared because of an ancient curse, thought to have poisoned the fish in surrounding waters.

The new settlers of the little island have begun their simple tropical life which centers around the coconut tree. It will supply them with nuts, milk and leaves and is expected to yield a greater harvest of copra than they were able to gather on Bikini.

114-Year-Old Man Found By Road Taken To Bexar County Home

SAN ANTONIO, Feb. 3 (AP)—A 114-year-old man, Dionicio Escobar, had been admitted to the Bexar County home for the aged today after he collapsed from exhaustion during one of his regular trips to a grocery store a mile and a half from the tiny shack where he had lived for the past year.

Deputy Sheriffs Bob Beckmann and Andy Ankrom took the man, who said he "was born before Texas had a governor" to the home late Thursday after other deputies found him lying beside the road.

Natural Gas Tax To Be Proposed

By DAVE CHEAVENS
Associated Press Staff Writer

AUSTIN, Feb. 3.— Dozens of bills bound to stir up storms of controversy were filed today for introduction in the House as soon as their numbers come up.

Twenty-four days after the start of the 51st session, three measures were formally introduced to give the House its first real lawmaking task. More than 300 were piled up in the chief clerk's office for introduction.

Would Abolish Commission

Meanwhile, the total of bills introduced on first reading in the Senate climbed to 186. Both branches of the legislature adjourned for another Thursday-to-Monday week end recess after brief sessions today.

Included in the mounting stack of proposed legislation in the House were bills to make first degree lynching a death-penalty offense, to curb Communism in all state departments including educational institutions, and to abolish the Good Neighbor commission.

Also ready for earliest possible introduction in the House were two bills taxing natural gas, one at the rate of one and one-half cents per 1,000 cubic feet, the other at the rate of one cent per 1,000.

New Board Proposed

The three bills formally introduced and referred to committee in the House today would:

Create a state board to manage state hospitals, removing all the eleemosynary institutions from direction of the board of control; appropriate $3,600,000 for establishment of Southwestern Medical college at Dallas under direction of the University of Texas; create a committee to recommend election law revisions.

The Senate got its shoulder into the fight by the states to retain title to their tidelands. It unanimously adopted a resolution Senator John Bell of Cuero giving Lieut. Governor Allan Shivers power to send delegates representing the senate to meetings of the council of state governments.

This was aimed primarily at promoting the tidelands campaign.

Study Of Taxation Sought

Two resolutions offered the Senate were referred to committee, leaving their fate somewhat up in the air.

One, by Senator Keith Kelly of Fort Worth, authorizes a committee of 21 to make a thorough study of the entire question of taxation.

The other also, by the Fort Worth law maker, provides for an 18-member committee to study the organization of state government with a view to effecting economies. Both resolutions would have to win approval of both the

Two Men Fined In Liquor Cases

Three liquor law violation fines totaling $850, exclusive of county court costs, were assessed Thursday by County Judge Walter Davies against two defendants, one of whom was served with a writ commanding him to appear in 72nd district court and show cause why he should not be adjudged in contempt of a 1943 order enjoining against trafficking in alcoholics.

It was W. R. (Slim) Isbell, 39, who was cited to appear at 10 a. m. Feb. 11 before Judge Dan Blair for the show cause hearing.

Negro Assesed Two Fines

He had been fined $300 and court costs Thursday after pleading guilty of a liquor law violation charge filed several weeks ago.

The other defendant, T. G. Sims, 34, a negro, was fined $300 in one case, $250 in the other, exclusive of costs.

The court also fined M. M. Franklin $75 and court costs on a plea of guilty of a drunk driving charge filed July 23.

The district court petition naming Isbell was filed upon affidavit of E. A. Gordon, a member of the liquor control board, that Isbell has violated a temporary injunction order of June 9, 1943, by his possession on Jan. 15 at his residence on West Fourth of whisky and beer for purpose of sale. The 1943 order demanded compliance "until further orders of this court."

The affidavit was signed by two assistant attorneys general and by County Attorney Waggoner Carr.

The newest order commanded Isbell "to appear and show cause why he should not be fined or committed to jail for contempt."

Numerous Contributions Aiding Families

Relief Work Pushed Among Needy Here

By OPAL DIXON
Avalanche Staff Writer

Widespread efforts to alleviate suffering resulting from a prolonged siege of cold weather and resultant drop in employment continued Thursday, as additional organizations and individuals contributed money, time, food, fuel, medicine and clothing to help Lubbock's needy residents.

Even if weather conditions make it possible for many day laborers to return to work Monday, wages may not be received until the last of next week, it was brought out in discussion by some of the relief workers in the Mexican quarters Thursday.

More Space Obtained

Some of the developments were: The City-County Welfare association moved Thursday from 1411 Thirteenth into the American Legion hall so more space would be available for interviewing applicants. Gerald Jarvis, director of the department of public health and welfare and for the city and county of Lubbock, and Jack Hall, county service officer of the American Legion, made arrangements for temporary use of the American Legion hall by the welfare organization during the emergency.

The Salvation Army took its mobile soup kitchen to the St. Joseph's Catholic church property again Thursday and soup, bread and vegetable juice which had been donated were issued to the needy. The lines were not as long as in the two previous days, since many families have received other rations issued during the emergency.

Capt. Tom Gregory of the Salvation Army here said last night that some soup had been distributed in the negro section of town. Sacks of groceries were distributed in the Mexican sector Thursday.

Thousands of dollars worth of clothing, food and kerosene, plus numerous cash donations were given by individuals and organizations for use in helping needy persons.

The Mexican quarters continued to be scene of extensive activity. In addition, case histories were being taken by the City-County Welfare association at the Legion hall and those approved for help were being referred to the Salvation Army and the Broadway Church of Christ for supplies. The Red Cross also was taking case histories.

Mrs. A. C. Bowden and Mrs. Jimmie Lumus headed a group of women from the First Baptist church who opened a commissary and relief center in the Avinger addition. The center was operated in conjunction with efforts of the City-County Welfare association.

Nurses To Visit Homes

Mrs. Tom Cannon, visiting nurse of the First Methodist church, and Mrs. I. B. Wright, nurse representing the Lubbock county chapter of the Red Cross, began a project in which they plan to visit every home in the Mexican quarter where a person is sick. Several funds were available from which to purchase medical supplies, said Rev. John Moore, assistant pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic church, who has done considerable work in helping assist the needy.

Jimmie Wilson, past president of the ABC, who Wednesday night had issued a call for Lubbock residents who had extra supplies of meat in their frozen food lockers to contribute anything they could, said approximately 400 pounds of meat had been given Thursday. In addition several hundred cans of fruits, foods and other items were contributed.

Contributions Are Made

Donors have been listed by different relief organizations as follows.

Steve Allgood of A. & M. Co., clothes valued at approximately $1,500; Junior Chamber of Commerce, which gave 300 gallons of oil and kerosene for use as fuel; W. B. Price, who gave 150 gallons of oil; manager of Los Llanos theater, $100 for use in purchasing fuel or medicine; Arthur Cunningham of Cunningham Frozen Food locker, who contributed 100 pounds of meat and offered more if needed, giving 75 pounds of that

Classes Start At Tech Today

The regular period for registration at Texas Tech ended Thursday and students meet their first classes today at 8 a. m. Students will be allowed to register until next Wednesday but they will be required to pay a late registration fee, W. P. Clement, registrar, announced.

The official figures on the number of students that had finished enrolling has not been compiled yet but the last count showed that 5,200 had scheduled classes. The registrar's office also indicated that of that number 396 were new students or transfers.

New System Used

A new system was worked out for this registration whereby freshmen were allowed to sign up for classes on the first and second days along with the upper classmen. About a third of the first year students went through the lines the first day and a third the second day and the remainder the last day. The result was good and indications were that the plan will be adopted permanently. Many of the long lines were eliminated and on the last day work slowed down to a minimum.

More veterans had registered than had been expected and H. A. Anderson, veteran coordinator, said that 2,550 ex-service men and women had been cleared through his office late Thursday. This did not include those whose elgibility under the Federal G. I. bill had expired. The Hazelwood Act, a state law, says that any Texas citizen who is a veteran may attend college in a state school free of charge. His tuition will be paid but not his books and a subsistance allowance as it is under the Federal law. Anderson said that for the first time many of the veterans were taking advantage of this law since their other elgibility had ended.

Rivals For Pecos Airline Rights Join To Entertain Texas Solons

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3. (Special)—Two rivals for giving air service in Texas joined forces today and entertained Texas congressmen with luncheon at the capitol to explain the state's needs for great air expansion.

Former Gov. James V. Allred of Trans-Texas and General Bob Smith of Pioneer Air lines both had been fighting the day before over their application to serve the city of Pecos.

Both companies have only temporary licenses to operate in Texas and wanted to explain to the congressmen the need for making the service permanent.

Water Proposal Ready In House

AUSTIN, Feb. 3. (AP)—Rep. I. B. Holt of Olton has ready for introduction a bill to regulate the use of underground water.

The bill would set up districts. Their boundaries would be established by the limits of underground reservoirs.

Within the districts the elected directors could, by a majority vote, take action to "develop, control, preserve, recharge, and protect the underground waters within the boundaries of the districts."

Holt seeks quick action because "the unregulated construction of wells . . . in certain ground-water areas threatens the investments and economic well-being of a vast number of citizens."

Water Group Writes Bill

Holt's bill was drawn up by the Texas Water Conservation association.

The heavily irrigated sections of the high plains and the winter garden district have been at odds on underground water regulation bills. Both sections have agreed on provisions in Holt's bill.

The bill endorses the state water policy of giving a land owner the right to withdraw and use the ground water under his land—but "subject to reasonable regulations."

The Board of Water Engineers would designate the basins, or basin for the creation of underground districts.

Broad Powers Given

In addition to their powers of regulation and conservation, directors would be authorized to acquire lands and construct dams, drain lakes, and creeks for the recharging the water-bearing strata.

The districts could issue bonds to finance such projects.

The district's power of regulation would include "the location, method of drilling, casing and finishing of wells to the end that there may not be waste of underground water and to require the return, where feasible, of excess of unused water to the underground strata."

The practical spacing of wells could be required so that "the use of one well will interfere least with other wells and other potential well cites."

The districts would be autohrized to require that well be capped or equipped with valves so the flow can be stopped when not in use.

PROPOSAL IS GAINING SUPPORT

Lubbock Doctors Approve Tech Medical School Branch Plan

Almost unanimous approval was voiced here Thursday among members of the medical profession to a proposal among Texas legislators for establishment of a state medical school in Dallas—the school to be a branch of Texas Technological college.

Introduced Thursday in the House at Austin was bill No. 2 of the current legislative session, a measure by Rep. W. O. Reed of Dallas to establish Southwestern Medical college of Dallas as a branch of the University of Texas.

Amendment Is Backed

Under the leadership of Rep. Preston Smith of Lubbock, support is mounting in Austin for a projected amendment which would put the school under the direction of Texas Tech. Rep. Sam Hanna of Dallas, one of the co-authors of the Reed bill, has indicated that he would not oppose such an amendment.

Dr. R. C. Douglas, immediate past president of the Lubbock-Crosby Medical association, said yesterday that he would ask an association official to conduct a preliminary survey of sentiment among association members concerning the proposed medical school as a part of Texas Tech. A report on the survey had not been announced last night.

Meanwhile, definite support of the plan had been found among Lubbock medical men contacted for their opinions.

One clinic superintendent, after making a quick survey among doctors on the staff, said the reaction was wholly favorable, because Texas is big enough to support two good medical schools, leaving the University of Texas medical branch at Galveston largely to serve South Texas, and the other to serve West and North Texas, which is now without adequate service.

A spokesman for another major clinic said "It seems like a good thing; it will help the prestige of Texas Tech," and "certainly we need more and better facilities for medical education in Texas."

Australians are protesting against "deflated sausages at inflated prices."

Navy Orders Slash In Forces To Meet Smaller Budget Setup

By LEON SHLOSS
INS Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3. — Navy strength was ordered cut by 29,500 men, 72 warships and 418 planes today to meet the smaller defense budget ordered by President Truman.

Navy Secretary Sullivan, in letters to congressional military committees, said he is ordering the cuts so that when the new fiscal year begins July 1 the Navy can conform to the budget for the 12 months following.

Will Gain In Ships

The Navy action followed by two weeks cancellation of 300 million dollars in Air Force contracts to trim the U.S.A.F. to budget size after Mr. Truman cut the defense chiefs' money requests from 16.9 to 14.4 billions.

Major effects of Sullivan's order will be:

Reduction of manpower from 531,000 to 501,500; cut in plane strength from 8,183 to 7,765; reduction of warships from 755 to 683.

Only 15 major vessels will be inactivated, however, and 30 accessions and conversions in fiscal 1950 will actually result in a net gain of 15 major fighting ships. The other 57 ships "mothballed" by today's order are minor craft.

Some Stations Hit

Naval observers predicted today's action was taken to "strip" the sea force to a necessary minimum, from which it can be increased in fiscal 1950 as the world situation dictates.

The President has asked Congress for 4.6 billion dollars for the Navy in fiscal 1950.

Sullivan's "strip for action" order also inactivated nine air stations, including those at El Centro and Santa Ana, Calif., and Weymouth, Mass. Three air stations will be placed on a semi-active basis, including Glynco, Ga. The air station at Seattle, Wash., will be converted to a reserve air base.

Three aircraft carriers, nine light cruisers and three anti-aircraft cruisers were inactivated. However, in fiscal 1950 twenty-four destroyers, two carriers, two cruisers and two submarines will join the fleet.

Sullivan's letter said the reductions were necessary to "enter fiscal year 1950 with the operating forces and the supporting establishment which the Navy plans to maintain during that year."

Observers pointed out, however, that under today's plan, margins were left for some expansion during fiscal 1950 in whatever direction is deemed advisable. For example, with manpower cut to 501,500, Sullivan would be 24,500 men under Mr. Truman's budget authorization.

Legislation Proposed

Senate and House to become effective.

Senator Fred (Red) Harris of Dallas offered a proposed constitutional amendment, which, if adopted, would permit women to serve on juries in Texas.

As the House finally got around to formal introduction of bills, Speaker Durwood Manford urged chairmen of all committees to call organization meetings and otherwise make ready to begin processing the huge stockpile of bills. The Appropriations committee will meet Monday.

The measures filed with the chief clerk will begin rolling across the speaker's desk next week in mounting volume. Members drew lots this week for the order in which they may introduce bills, and Manford set a deadline of 6 p. m. Saturday for filing of bills with these preferential numbers.

If members don't use their numbers by then, he said, they will lose them.

Truman Demands Complete Power

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3 (INS) — President Truman demanded today that he be given complete power to reorganize the government without exempting any federal agencies from the reshuffling program.

His demands came as the House Executive Expenditures committee agreed to report an administration bill giving him permanent authority to streamline federal agencies.

The bill is a compromise providing that Congress shall have 60 days in which to reject a reorganization plan after the chief executive has submitted it, and applying only to executive agencies.

Other Proposals Made

It also requires the President to submit separate reorganization plans for the National Defense establishment, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve system.

The Democratic leadership hopes to call up the bill in the House Monday.

Without mentioning the House bill, Mr. Truman told his news conference that if the President's hands were tied with regard to regrouping agencies in the interest of efficiency, there would be no reorganization.

Mr. Truman said he believes that a thorough reorganization of the government can be accomplished and that concern of any members of Congress over "pet" agencies will not thwart it.

AUSTIN, Feb. 3 (AP)—Creation of a Texas Citrus commission will be proposed in the House of Representatives by Rep. Joe Kilgore of McAllen.

AFL Leaders Hint Compromise If Labor Law Repeal Blocked

By NORMAN WALKER
Associated Press Staff Writer

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 3.—The AFL leadership today outlined an area of possible compromise for use in case the administration labor law plan hits a snag in Congress.

William Green, the federation's president, said he felt sure the AFL will have "no serious objections" to continuing three Taft-Hartley law provisions now proposed to be repealed by the administration bill.

These three are the requirement for non-Communist affidavits from union leaders, for filing union financial reports, and guaranteeing employers "free speech" rights in relations with employes.

Wants Other Legislation

Green told reporters the AFL's executive council, in midwinter meeting here, was generally satisfied with the administration plan to repeal the Taft-Hartley act and restore the New Deal's Wagner act with a few changes.

However, Green said one thing the AFL wants is specific legislative language to permit craft workers to set up separate union bargaining units in plants now considered as single bargaining units.

And he said the council here is studying the administration's bill provisions respecting secondary boycotts and jurisdictional disputes to determine if the Communist disclaimers before their unions can get certain labor law privileges. So is John L. Lewis, head of the Mine Workers union.

The AFL council will continue poring over the administration bill clause by clause with lawyers all day tomorrow.

In an expected action the council refused to go along with CIO President Murray's suggestion of several months ago that the AFL and CIO pool forces in supporting President Truman's "fair deal" program in Congress.

The council reiterated it wants an actual merger of the two organizations.

House Bill To Put Freedom Train On Tracks Gets Okay

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3. (AP)—The House Postoffice committee today approved a bill to put the Freedom train back on the tracks and keep it running until July, 1951.

The bill would provide $3,000,000 for government operation of the train and its cargo of historical documents. It had been under the supervision of the American Heritage foundation, a private group. The train completed a 16-month tour covering 37,106 miles last month.

Lubbock Man Gets Commission In Armored Cavalry Reserve

Edward S. Birkman, jr., 22, son of Mrs. M. R. Birkman of 1632 Ave. Y, has received an appointment as second lieutenant in the Armored Cavalry Reserve and will go on active duty March 8 at the Armored Cavalry school at Fort Knox, Ky.

He has attended Texas Tech and Southern Methodist university and prior to that time spent 19 months in the Navy.

Birkman received his commission under Department of the Army circular 330, 1948, which states that any veteran with one year of honorable active service and two years of college may apply for a commission as a second lieutenant in the regular Army. His papers were processed at the Dallas U. S. Army and Air Force recruiting district at Dallas.

Galveston Boy Among Finalists In 'Scientific Talent' Search

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3 (AP)—A Galveston boy was among the finalists to day in the annual search for the outstanding potential scientists among the nation's high school seniors.

He and 39 other high school boys and girls in the finals, representing 17 states and the District of Columbia, will be brought here March 3, with all expenses paid, to compete for $11,000 in Westinghouse science scholarships and to attend the five-day science talent institute, March 3-7.

Robert Anigstein, 16, of Galveston's Ball High school, is the Texas representative. Born in Warsaw, Poland, Robert came to the United States when he was eight.

The first science talent search finalist from Texas, he is intent on a career in scientific research after attending Wesleyan university in Middletown, Conn.

Robert's project was an attempt to transfer living organisms from the salt waters of Galveston bay into liquids of lower salt content.

He conducted his experiment with a wide range of salt concentrations, and found that a liquid 30 per cent as salty as bay water seemed to be as pure as the organisms could stand.

A man on the outskirts of Los Andes, Chile, was arrested for firing revolver shots across the street because a neighbor had his radio turned up too loud.
