Nicaraguan diplomats prepare to leave

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a swiftly moving diplomatic drama marked by charges of assassination plots and spying, 21 Nicaraguan diplomats are obeying U.S. orders to close all six of their country's consulates and leave the country.

The State Department on Tuesday ordered the consulates shuttered and the diplomats and their families expelled in an unexpectedly severe and swift retaliation for the expulsion of three U.S. diplomats by Nicaragua on Monday.

"The Nicaraguan government's precipitate action in expelling U.S. officials, giving them an unreasonably short deadline for leaving the country, and then the public show staged (in Managua) on June 6, called in our opinion for a strong response," said Rush Taylor, a spokesman at the State Department.

"An important additional consideration was the Nicaraguan government's use of its consulates for intelligence operations," Taylor said.

Another official, speaking privately, said the consulates were "being used very actively" for intelligence gathering. He gave no details.

In Managua, the Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry distributed a note to reporters which said Nicaragua "denounces before the international community the latest act of hostility by the Reagan administration against Nicaragua."

The statement said the U.S. action brings Central America closer to war. "Now the United States comes with this response of closing the six consulates and expelling our diplomats, which strengthens the line of confrontation and the war in Central America," it said.

Word of the U.S. action was passed to Nicaraguan Ambassador Antonio Jarquin during a chilly 15-minute interview with James H. Michel, newly appointed acting assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs.

At the Nicaraguan Embassy, Minister-Counselor Manuel Cordero, the deputy chief of mission, told reporters that "so far the U.S. government hasn't challenged the proof" that three expelled American diplomats plotted for the CIA to try to kill foreign minister Miguel D'Escoto and to form terrorist squads.

However, the State Department says it "rejects the charges." And Linda Pfeifel, head of the political section at the U.S. Embassy in Managua and one of the three expelled Americans, called them absurd.

The officials heading the Nicaraguan consulates in New York, New Orleans, Miami, Houston, Los Angeles and San Francisco were given until 4 p.m. local time today to close their doors and leave the country.

The remaining officials and all dependents were told to be out by Friday.

Cordero said 50 to 60 Nicaraguans in all would have to leave.

Managua and Washington were already locked in a long-running diplomatic word battle that includes U.S. charges that Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government funnels Soviet arms to guerrillas in El Salvador and the counter charge that the Reagan administration is striving "to overthrow our government."

...But compromise expected in House committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee are predicting a compromise will be reached on continuing U.S. covert actions in Nicaragua in the full House, despite their panel's vote to scrap the undercover operations.

The committee voted Tuesday 20-14 to halt the activity, and instead help friendly Central American nations stop gunrunning to leftists rebels in El Salvador. The bill is expected to reach the floor in two weeks at the earliest.

Rep. William Broomfield, the committee's ranking Republican, contended that a lot of Democrats were troubled by the idea of cutting off funds for the covert operations altogether. He told reporters after the vote that he would try to work out a compromise on the floor that would allow the covert work to continue, but to limit its scope.

"It will be a different ball game entirely in the House," Broomfield said. "I expect we will be able to come up with a compromise that will have a good chance of passing."

The committee's second-ranked Democrat, Rep. Dante Fascell of Florida, joined the Republicans who opposed the bill, as did Rep. Andy Ireland, another Florida Democrat.

Rep. Dan Mica, D-Fla., who said he voted for the bill with "great misgivings," added that he would join the effort to "forge a bipartisan approach" on the floor.

Moves to totally strangle covert action have little chance of being adopted in the Senate. Its Intelligence Committee has voiced approval for continued covert operations, subject to review by Congress.

Democrats in Congress have accused the Reagan administration of using intelligence funds to overthrow the leftist Sandinista government of Nicaragua, despite a congressional ban.

Reagan 'rolls up' arms offer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today proposed a new arms control offer that emphasizes Soviet and American nuclear warhead arsenals, instead of missiles, and gives U.S. negotiators more flexibility in reaching an agreement with the Kremlin.

"To the leaders of the Soviet Union, I urge that this new opportunity not be lost," Reagan said in a statement in the Rose Garden.

The statement coincides with the resumption of strategic arms reduction talks between U.S. and Soviet negotiators in Geneva, Switzerland.

He said changes in the U.S. proposal "offer the prospect of new progress" toward an agreement.

The change is designed to move the United States and Soviet Union away from building multi-warhead missiles and toward small, single-warhead missiles that would be less threatening.

Some details of the plan were not disclosed and will remain a secret to give the U.S. negotiators leeway for bargaining.

The new proposal calls for raising the proposed ceiling on the number of land- and submarine-based missiles each side could have.

The existing U.S. proposal would set a ceiling of 850 long-range missiles on each side. It also calls for a one-third cutback in warheads, leaving each side with 5,000.

Under the new plan, the missile ceiling would be increased to an undisclosed number — somewhere from the 850 the United States has proposed to the 1,450-missile ceiling the Soviet Union has indicated it would accept.

"I'm not going to say what our new spectrum is," said a senior administration official, who insisted on remaining anonymous.

At the same time, the warhead limit would remain at 5,000.

The new proposal also gives the Soviets the option of limiting nuclear arsenals according to missile lifting power — or throw-weight. The Soviets now have about a 3-to-1 advantange over the United States in throw-weight, which can determine the number and size of warheads a missile carries.

In other words, Reagan is willing to accept a treaty based on either warheads and missiles — which indirectly limits throw-weight — or on throw-weight, which would, in turn, curtail the number of missiles and warheads for each side.

"We are prepared to go in either direction in which they are most comfortable," the administration official said at a briefing for reporters.

The official refused to publicly disclose the proposed ceiling on the number of missiles.

"You can be confident that we will have numbers and they will have numbers," the official said. "I'm saying that our numbers are not rigid, fixed and inflexible."

Reagan, in his statement, said, "there may be more than one way to achieve our objective of greater stability at reduced levels of arms.

"So, I have instructed (arms negotiator Edward Rowny) to make clear to the Soviet delegation our commitment to our fundamental objectives, but I have also given him the flexibility to explore all appropriate avenues for meeting our goals," the president said.

Mammoth maneuvers

High-rise trees seem to be the only complement for high-rise office buildings as the first evergreen goes in at ClayDesta National Bank on Tuesday. First to be planted in the $2 million atrium, the 40-foot trees shipped from Florida require a crane and a lot of direction from the ant-size men at the bottom.

Parkview still wants to build

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Although Parkview Hospital officials were knocked down on the state level when they applied to build a new hospital, Administrator Dick Liley says they are on their feet again and ready to give Midland what it needs — "more beds."

Dick Liley

Because Parkview officials contend that Midland can support more hospital beds, they have filed a revised application to the Texas Health Facilities Commission to construct a $17 million, 95- to 120-bed medical/surgical hospital.

By state law, hospital additions, new services or equipment costing more than $600,000 must be approved by the THFC. Liley said Parkview's Tennessee-based parent company, American Medical Center, filed a pre-application for the new hospital during mid-May, and now is revising its certificate of need application, which will be filed in July.

Originally, Parkview applied last year for a 110-bed hospital — Doctors Hospital of the Permian Basin, located at Preston Drive and Loop 250 — which included obstetric beds and a full service emergency room.

Although the location will not change in the revised application, obstetric beds are omitted and the 24-hour emergency room has been reduced to a Level I, offering partial service.

Because Midland Memorial Hospital also applied for a 77-bed addition, the two applications were joined at the THFC hearings in April 1982. In July 1982, MMH was granted a certificate of need for its $15.1 million expansion. Parkview, however, was denied and in turn filed a suit against the THFC in Travis County Court.

While the suit is pending, Parkview officials have decided to take an alternative approach.

"We feel one of them (applications) will be approved," Liley said. "Either this new certificate of need or we'll win through Travis County court. We want to keep our options open. We feel very strongly there's a definite need for this project and we're convinced we're going to succeed."

According to Liley, when Parkview and MMH's applications were joined at the THFC hearing, MMH officials objected to the private hospital's project because they said it duplicated services, such as obstetric beds and the emergency room.

Liley said Parkview opposes this thought and, with the hospital's parent company, "are addressing the obstetric beds through the appeal in Travis County."

Nevertheless, Liley said the revised application should be approved.

Death of elderly man investigated

Sheriff's deputies are investigating the apparent murder of a 65-year-old man whose body was found on a bed of his rundown house trailer on the city's far south side shortly after 8 a.m. today.

The victim, whose name was being witheld pending notification of relatives, had been shot at least once in the head with a small caliber weapon, according to criminal investigator Tommy Jones of the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

Jones said the unemployed man was last seen alive about 9:45 p.m. Tuesday. He lived at 503 Longview, and apparently was receiving veterans benefits. His body was taken to Thomas Funeral Home and an autopsy is expected to be performed.

No other details were available by press time.

Sheriff's investigators Linda Petree and Tommy Jones, along with an unidentified deputy, examine the scene of an apparent murder that occurred at the 65-year-old victim's southside home sometime Tuesday night.

Coastal areas get showers

By The Associated Press

Scattered showers and thunderstorms dampened parts of Florida as a storm system that soaked the mid-Atlantic Coast moved out to sea early today.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms covered the upper Mississippi Valley, mid-Missouri Valley and the southern Plains while widely scattered showers and thundershowers covered the northwest quarter of the nation.

Most other areas of the country were expected to have fair weather today.

Heavy thunderstorms, high winds and golf-ball size hail hit the southern Plains and parts of Texas on Tuesday, but the storm system weakened during the late evening hours.

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms continued over the western United States — mainly over Utah, Nevada, Northern California and southern Oregon.

A few showers were developing along a cold front in the north-central United States and dense fog developed in central Alabama and central Georgia.

Temperatures at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 31 degrees in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., to 89 in Phoenix, Ariz.

Salvadoran troops to get U.S. training

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Army will soon send 120 officers and enlisted men to train 2,400 Salvadoran troops at a Honduran military base on the Caribbean coast, the Pengtagon has announced.

The four battalions of El Salvador's army will work with U.S. soldiers and equipment at Puerto Castilla, Pentagon spokesman Henry Catto said Tuesday.

Catto did not say when the U.S. troops would set sail for Honduras, but other defense officials said they were scheduled to leave Wilmington, N.C., within the next two days.

The coastal military base was used by the U.S. Navy in World War II for anti-submarine warfare air patrols over the Caribbean. Defense officials said Salvadoran soldiers will be trained with U.S. Army rifles, machine-guns and mortars.

Delay sought at Salvadoran polls

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A member of the Central Electoral Commission says the general election promised for December should be delayed at least three months, but President Alvaro Magana says plans have not changed.

Commission member Roberto Meza Delgado said Tuesday that incomplete election rolls, a shortage of funds and other difficulties have delayed organizing the voting for a president and a legislature.

Leftist guerrilla attacks on municipal buildings have destroyed most of the voter rosters.

Computer technicians from the U.S. Agency for International Development will help prepare the electoral rolls, but this will take at least six or seven months, Meza Delgado said.

"We hope to be ready by the end of the year," he said. But he pointed out that December is an inconvenient time for elections because that is the month to harvest coffee, sugar and cotton — El Salvador's three major export crops.

Magana moved the election date up three months at President Reagan's urging. Reagan hoped that earlier voting would undercut the rebels, who have been battling the U.S.-backed government for 3½ years.

Meza Delgado said the elections could be held in March, as originally planned.

The independent electoral commission is composed of a representative from each of the country's five main political parties. Delgado Meza, a member of the moderate Christian Democratic Party, said he spoke for the entire commission.

Magana said Tuesday the date for voting will be set by the Constituent Assembly, charged with writing a new constitution and an election law. Political parties have agreed that elections should be in December, he said in an interview with a local radio station.

"There has been no change in attitude, nor have I received a suggestion from anyone" to postpone the elections, Magana said.

Rodolfo Castillo Caramount, a Christian Democrat assemblyman, said his party wants elections in early November.

Leftists, saying they feared their candidates would be killed, refused to participate in elections for the Constituent Assembly on March 28, 1982.

Election officials worked without rolls and marked the index fingers of voters with indelible ink to prevent double voting.

On Tuesday, shots were fired at the Christian Democrat headquarters, where an NBC television crew was interviewing party leaders.

No one was hurt, said party Secretary General Julio Adolfo Rey Prendes, adding that no one knew of a motive for the attack.

An NBC driver who waited outside said people in two vehicles fired machine guns at the top of the two-story building in western San Salvador.

In other developments in the war, Pentagon spokesman Henry Catto said in Washington Tuesday that 120 U.S. Army officers and men "in the near future" will begin training about 2,400 Salvadoran troops at Puerto Castilla, a base on Honduras' Caribbean coast.

Other defense officials said the group would leave Wilmington, N.C., within two days.

The House voted 416-2 on Tuesday to keep requiring that Reagan administration certify the Salvadoran government is making "good faith efforts" in the investigation of the deaths of eight U.S. citizens in order to continue receiving military aid.

Tax changes delayed?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political maneuvering in Congress is clouding the fate of two major changes in tax law due to take effect in just 24 days.

Democrats, trying to portray President Reagan as an enemy of the worker, want to limit, probably to $700 per couple or individual, the tax cut that will begin showing up in paychecks July 1.

And members of both parties, fearing voter reaction to what is wrongly perceived as a new tax, are eager to repeal a 1982 law requiring that 10 percent of interest and dividends be withheld for taxes starting the same day.

Although action on both proposals could come next week, there is no assurance either will be finally resolved before July 1.

House Democrats, meeting in a closed caucus Tuesday, laid the groundwork to limit this year's tax cut. The Ways and Means Committee is likely to approve such a bill next week.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill predicts the tax limit will pass the House despite solid opposition from Republicans and a promise of a veto by Reagan. And because it is an issue of fairness, O'Neill added, "it will be very hard" for the GOP-controlled Senate to resist the limitation, especially since 18 Republican seats will be up for election next year.

Democrats say the cut, the third stage of the tax reduction enacted in 1981 at Reagan's insistence, is unfair because upper-income people get considerably larger benefits than lower-paid Americans. In proportion to the taxes they pay, however, the well-to-do get smaller cuts than most.

The biggest benefit for the wealthy came in 1982 when the 70 percent maximum tax rate on investment income was cut to 50 percent. To change the tax cut now would hurt middle-income people and small businesses, Republicans say.

'Hang toughf,' boy's book tells other cancer sufferers

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Matthew Lancaster, a 10-year-old boy who died of cancer recently, left some advice for other cancer patients — "Hang Toughf."

The book "Hang Toughf" is being published this month by the Hospice of Stark County.

In trying to reach other cancer patients, Matt wrote, "I know that you will be able to handle cancer. Becaus if I can you can. It's OK to be scard. You hav to hav a positiv aditud. Say to yourself you can do anything. Never say you can't. You just hav to hang in ther. I think you can do it. I rote this book to help people with cancer. Your not alone.

"And remeber. Hang toughf, positiv aditud all the time. And pray to God."

"Matt had such a nice smile, but the thing I'll always remember is his courage," said Sue Ellyn Haas, hospice social service director.

In November 1981, Matthew, of Jackson Township in Stark County, was diagnosed as having Ewing's sarcoma, a malignant form of cancer. It did not respond to surgery, radiation or chemical treatment.

The cancer spread. He lapsed into a coma on March 16 and died at home with his parents and brother.

"Sometimes, Matt would say to me: 'Mom, I can't die. I'm only 10 years old.' That's when we'd talk about the important thing not being how long you live, but how many lives you touch," said his mother, Martha Lancaster, in a recent interview.

"In the last four months of his life, he seemed to gain a new maturity and understanding of what was important," said his father, Jon. "He said things like, 'Only your physical body dies, Dad. Your spirit will be around until the year 3,000.'"

In his book, Matt wrote, "I now I have had a lot of scary thoghts. You probale do to. I think before I go to the doctor, will he put me in the hospital? Will he give me a shot? Will he hurt me? Will he tell me I'm not going to walk? When you get thoghts like that, put them out of your mind, think about something else. Anything else. And be happy."

Kahl to be buried with honors

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) — Gordon Kahl, the militant tax resister blamed for the slayings of two federal marshals, will be buried with military honors and his family probably will be entitled to veterans benefits, the Grand Forks Herald reported today.

A U.S. flag will drape the casket and a three-round salute will be fired at the grave to honor the 63-year-old retired farmer and World War II fighter pilot who was killed Friday in a gunbattle with federal agents and police in Arkansas, the newspaper said.

"The only thing we're waiting for is a determination of who will perform it," said Mark Nelson, director of Neuenschwander-Nelson Funeral Home in Fessenden, N.D.

The American Legion post to which Kahl once belonged dissolved some years ago, Nelson said, so he has asked officials at Minot Air Force Base to perform the graveside service Friday.

"The issue is being worked on," Col. William Bristol, 91st combat support group commander at Minot, said Tuesday night.

Frank Gathman, director of the Veterans Administration in Fargo, said he expected Kahl would be entitled to veterans' benefits.

"If he has not been convicted or incarcerated for a felony, then he would be eligible," Gathman said. Kahl's 1977 income tax conviction was a misdemeanor.

Gathman said the VA probably will provide the headstone that will mark Kahl's plot. In addition, the Kahl family is expected to receive the standard $150 allowance to purchase a plot.

"This is all new water for us," Gathman said. "We've never dealt with anything like this before. We have to be careful not to infringe on any of the rights and benefits due the family."

State officers of the American Legion were reluctant to comment.

"We're in a very, very embarrassing situation," said Harry Moore, assistant department adjutant, said. "Our feeling is yes, Gordon Kahl deserves recognition as an honorably discharged veteran — but facing all the other circumstances, I don't know."

Members of the Kahl family, reached at a home in Heaton, declined to comment on the burial arrangements.

Kahl, a member of the ultra right-wing paramilitary group Posse Comitatus, will be buried alongside his parents at a tiny cemetery in Heaton.

An autopsy showed that Kahl died of a .41-caliber pistol shot to the head Friday night when law officers cornered him in a northeastern Arkansas farmhouse. The fatal shot came from the handgun of Lawrence County Sheriff Gene Matthews of Walnut Ridge, Ark., who died after Kahl shot him.

Kahl was wanted in the Feb. 13 shooting deaths of two U.S. marshals who were trying to arrest him near Medina, N.D.

Kahl served in the Air Force during World War II. A 16-page letter that carried his signature and was widely published after the shootout referred to his wartime experiences:

"When you come under attack by anyone, it becomes a matter of survival. I was forced to kill an American P-51 pilot one day over Burma, when he mistook us for Japs. I let him shoot first, but he missed and I didn't. I felt bad, but I knew I had no choice."

Martha Geier, a neighbor and friend of the Kahl family, said, "He earned this 40 years ago — they shouldn't be able to take it away."

Parkview petitions to build new facility

Although MMH President Ray Branson said he could not say whether or not the public hospital would contest Parkview's certificate of need application, he noted the application was not a surprise.

"It will be discussed and studied at the board levels," Branson said. We'd have to hear something to say the least on how this would impact the court proceeding to reverse our certificate of need."

Branson said MMH would not contest a replacement facility — 75 beds replacing Parkview's 60 — but he could not comment on the revised application calling for up to 120 beds.

Liley, however, said Midland needs the additional beds.

"We feel we can prove there is a need for the medical/surgical beds because of the public outcry during the last hearings," Liley added.

"We're stressing once again the public will have no liabilities if we are allowed to build this hospital."

Hance urges Reagan to keep windfall pledge

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — President Reagan was urged by Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, in a letter Tuesday to keep his campaign promise of 1980 and work for repeal by Congress of the Windfall Profits Tax.

Earlier before the letter was drafted, when the White House was told at a press briefing that Hance had cited the President's campaign promise, Press Secretary Larry Speakes said "we have no plans of any kind to take this matter to Congress."

Speakes suggested that those who thought the President "promised to work to abolish the tax" check their records on the President's campaign utterances. He did not think the President said that.

According to Associated Press files, in an interview with AP in New York, October 1, 1980, Reagan said:

"It's (WPT) in now, and is a part of the system. My own economic plan is based on changes of taxes that I think are immediately necesaary to correct the economy. So here's one of the two biggest single tax increases in the history of our nation. I don't know that I could do the other things I'd said, and immediately eliminate that. But it is one that I think you could look to as you progressed to phasing out. Because it isn't a windfall profits tax, its a sales tax, and it is paid by the customer. It isn't paid by the oil companies."

Hance's letter states:

"Dear Mr. President:

"Yesterday's unfortunate ruling by the Supreme Court regarding the so-called Windfall Profits Tax has left those of us concerned with the future of America's energy independence faced with the task of repealing this unjust tax.

"I would respectfully urge you and your Administration to live up to your campaign promise of 1980 and join me and other Members of Congress from energy producing states in fighting for repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax. America's economic health is directly tied to our ability to become energy independent, and the Windfall Profits Tax provides a hindrance to achieving that goal.

"Our nation was plunged into recession by the Arab oil embargoes of the 1970's, and I would hate to see us fall into that trap once again due to our reliance on foreign producers. We need to develop our nation's resources to assure continued economic recovery and future growth."

Evangelist's ideas have been called 'cultic'

FORT WORTH (AP) — Evangelist James Robison's new theological direction into faith healing and exorcism has triggered stormy dissension within his nationwide ministry, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram has reported.

In a copyright story Tuesday, the newspaper quoted critics as saying the controversy will kill Robison's television ministry in six months.

A conservative theologian says Robison's ideas "border on the cultic."

"The criticism, the hostility is hard to believe," Robison said in a May 22 telecast. "It's almost like character assassination.

"Preachers call us heretics, they call me a cult leader. Some say I'm not even a Baptist anymore, and I've been a Baptist all my life."

Robison's closest friends and associates blame his changed views on Milton Green, a Tennessee Baptist layman whose teaching about healing and deliverance from demons allegedly led the evangelist astray, the Star-Telegram reported.

Until recently, the fiery Robison generally followed traditional Baptist theology that de-emphasized faith healing and demonology.

"Certainly it (exorcism) would be considered an extremely odd, if not frightening practice in most Southern Baptist churches," said Dr. Richard Land of the Criswell Center for Biblical Studies, a fundamentalist school in Dallas.

Robison, a leader in the religious New Right, recently helped Fort Worth multimillionaire T. Cullen Davis smash $1 million worth of art objects that they believed were religious idols.

Robison claims that he still preaches repentance and salvation, but that intensive Bible study has opened up new truths and miraculously helped cure his spiritual and physical problems.

"We don't teach healing," he said. "We teach the Bible, and the Word is the healer."

But his critics say that churches are being split by Green's followers, who pick up his theology at seminars sponsored by the Robison ministry. And an Austin pastor, the Rev. Harold O'Chester, said he lost 200 to 300 members when he cancelled a Green seminar.

Robison's pastor, the Rev. Jimmy Draper of the First Bapist Church of suburban Euless and the current president of the Southern Baptist Convention; Moral Majority leader Jerry Falwell; and Dr. Paige Patterson, president of the Criswell Center for Biblical Studies, were among those to warn Robison in private meetings about his new teachings, the Star-Telegram said.

Among critics' major complaints is that Green and Robision teach it is God's will for true Christians not to be sick, a doctrine associated with Pentecostals, the newspaper said.

Robison's ideas "border on the cultic," said Dr. William E. Bell, a professor at Dallas Baptist College, who studied Robison's teachings at Draper's request. Robison takes verses out of context to support his views, Bell said.

But Draper takes a conciliatory approach in the controversy.

"I've talked with James (Robison) and Dudley Hall (an associate of Robison), who are both members of my church, and their basic convictions about healing and the demonic are not strange and extreme," Draper said.

Department of Labor shows interest in TEC matter

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says a decision by the U.S. Department of Labor will help Texas decide if and when a special session is needed to take care of the Texas Employment Commission issue.

In the final days of the Legislature, which closed May 30, a bill to continue operations of the TEC failed because of House-Senate differences.

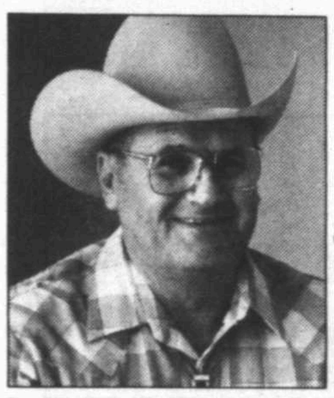

Floyd Edwards, employment and training administrator of the Labor Department's Dallas office, immediately said there would be no unemployment compensation paid and no job placement in Texas after Sept. 30 without passage of the bill.

On Tuesday, Albert Angrisani, assistant secretary of the Labor Employment and Training Administration in Washington, sent White a telegram.

"I would like to emphasize that the Department of Labor has not taken a position on extending the TEC, nor has it analyzed possible consquences of the state Legislature's authorization for the TEC expire," the telegram said.

"Any statements or intervention by the Dallas regional office have been both premature and inappropriate. I regret that the regional administrator has interpretated state actions and consequences on his own initiative."

The Washington official invited White to give them the facts of the TEC matter "and we will respond promptly."

Two men die in pickup gun battle

PRESIDIO (AP) — An argument between two men riding together in a pickup truck erupted into a gun battle that killed both and wounded a third man sitting between them, investigators said.

Refugio Tarin, 33, and Jesus Carrasco, 36, began arguing shortly after 7:30 a.m. Tuesday, then drew guns and fatally shot each other inside the truck, said Presidio County Sheriff Rick Thompson.

Carrasco's cousin, Manuel Carrasco, 54, wounded in the battle, was listed in stable condition at Alpine Hospital with wounds in the arm and shoulder, said hospital spokesman Steve Boyd.

Woman to be retried for murder

BEAUMONT (AP) — San Antonio attorney Jerry Goldstein will help in the second trial of Linda May Burnett, whose death sentence in the murder of a 2-year-old Oklahoma boy was overturned.

Ms. Burnett was convicted of capital murder and sentenced to death in the July 1, 1978, death of Jason Phillips of Woodward, Okla. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin reversed the conviction, saying a tape played for jurors at the trial should not have been admitted.

Instead of trying Ms. Burnett in the child's death, prosecutors have decided to try her in the murder of the child's mother, Martha Phillips.

Bandit robs Cranfills Gap bank

CRANFILLS GAP (AP) — Law officers were searching today for a "clean-cut and neatly dressed" bandit who robbed the First Security State Bank in this small Central Texas community northwest of Waco.

After asking a teller to cash a check, the man pulled a nickle-plated revolver and fled from the First Security State Bank with an undetermined amount of money Tuesday, authorities said.

Bank president Ray Hastings said the visitor in his small-town bank caught his eye because he was a stranger. Hastings watched from his office as the man walked up to a teller's window about 1:20 p.m., pulled out his revolver, announced "This is a holdup," and took money from one teller drawer before backing out of the building.

Prisoner recaptured after escape

COMANCHE (AP) — A 17-year-old prisoner who allegedly held a jailer hostage during a break for freedom was back in custody today facing four additional felony charges, authorities said.

Edwin Rogers was arrested about six hours after the escape after authorities stopped a Greyhound bus at a roadblock in Stephenville, 35 miles northeast of Comanche, police said.

Rogers, who was a trusty at the Erath County Jail here and was not locked up, escaped about 4 a.m. Tuesday, taking hostage jailer Charlene Bennett, who managed to break away a few hours later and call police, police said.

Election irregularities probed

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade says he expects several indictments to be returned by a grand jury studying alleged irregularties during last November's general election.

The panel began its inquiry Tuesday and was expected to call more witnesses today and Thursday.

Most of those testifying were precinct judges from south Dallas, where a controversy arose during the election because many precincts ran out of ballots and because signs posted outside some voting places warning against illegal voting were ruled improper.

Bank files suit to recover funds

LAREDO (AP) — The International Bank of Commerce of Laredo has filed a suit against a longtime former employee to recover money the bank claims she embezzled while working as a secretary there.

IBC names Antonia Villarreal and her mother, Francisca Garcia Gonzalez, in the suit filed Monday in 49th District Court.

The bank alleges Ms. Villareal misappropriated $154,765 while employed by IBC from June 1969 until Feb. 1983.

San Antonian on commission

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A prominent San Antonio woman, long active in the Republican party, has been named by President Reagan to serve on the Presidential Commission for the German-American Tricentennial.

Flo Cameron Atherton, wife of Holt Atherton and heir to the Cameron lumber fortunr of Waco, is the only Texan designated. She will serve with a group named by the President, House of Representatives Speaker Tip O'Neill and president pro tempore of the Senate, Strom Thurmond, R., S.C.

They will plan ceremonies to mark the anniversary of German migrations to this country and programs to recognize the contributions made to U.S. life by Americans of German ancestry.

UT fails to get Stravinsky papers

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas apparently has failed in its 13-year effort to acquire the coveted papers of composer Igor Stravinsky.

Decherd Turner of UT's Humanities Research Center said Tuesday the Sacher Foundation of Switzerland has offered $3.5 million for the papers of the Russian-born Stravinsky, who died in 1971.

That offer and a court's decision to award temporary custody of the papers to the New York Public Library probably have knocked UT out of the running for the documents covering the composer's 60-year career, Turner said.

Possibility of hospital coverup in deaths being investigated

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Bexar County's district attorney says an investigation is continuing into the possibility that officials of a San Antonio hospital tried to cover up a series of puzzling baby deaths at the institution from 1978 to 1982.

However, the board chairman of Medical Center Hospital said Tuesday he is convinced no such coverup took place.

In retrospect, Dr. William E. Thornton said District Attorney Sam Millsap Jr. probably should have been called in earlier. But "I think it is unfair to judge folks on hindsight," Thornton added.

Millsap said Tuesday that he believes the hospital staff had sufficient information to take the matter to him in January 1982, although he agreed it was easier to see that later.

Millsap repeated statements he made last winter that the investigation has focused both on suspicious infant deaths and the coverup angle.

But a Bexar County grand jury's inquiry into the deaths in the hospital's pediatrics intensive care unit is no broader now than when the probe began four months ago, Millsap said.

It is possible that hospital officials could be indicted for withholding information about the deaths, Millsap said, but he added that it is equally possible nothing will be done.

Hospital officials began looking into suspicious deaths in its pediatrics intensive care unit in the fall of 1981. At that time, it was suspected that mismanagement and personnel problems were behind the deaths, Thornton said Tuesday.

Administrators asked attorney Paul Green in January 1982 if the matter should be taken to the district attorney's office, Thornton said, and Green suggested that the hospital get more information first.

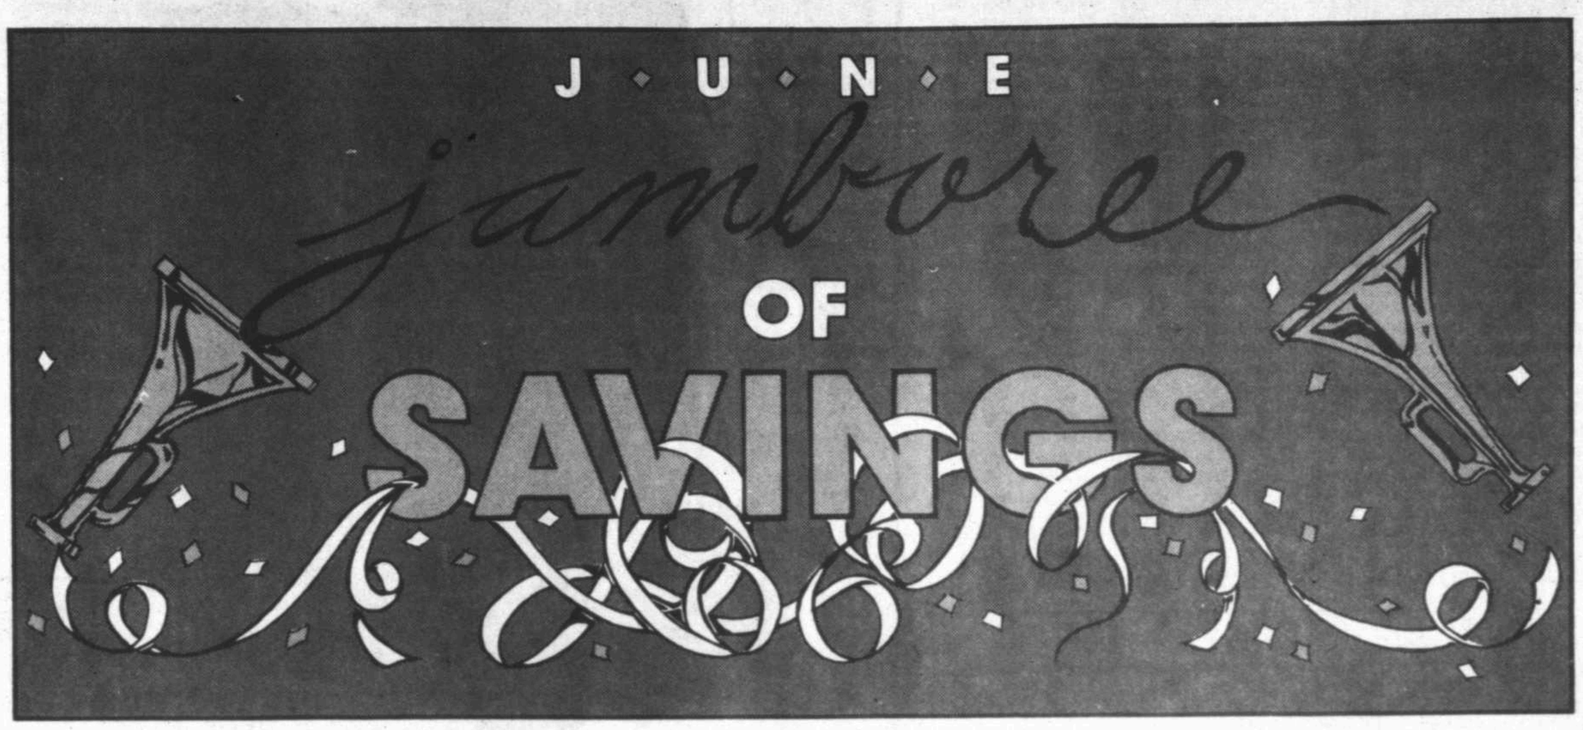

Even then, hospital administrators did not believe criminal activity was involved, Thornton said.

The hospital undertook one study, and then another, before Millsap stepped in. Millsap subpoenaed the findings of the two studies and began his own investigation.

Millsap met with the county-owned hospital's board of managers and administrators Feb. 24 to discuss the investigation. At that time, he said he was promised full cooperation and was satisfied he would receive it.

After deciding to investigate further on its own, the hospital brought in Dr. A.W. Conn from the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto, Canada, to look into the pediatrics ICU problems. As a result of Conn's investigation, changes were made in the unit's staff, Thornton said.

Cranston: Reagan is president for privileged

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale seemed to have the city in his pocket when he and two other Democratic presidential hopefuls came to town earlier this week to give their best anti-Reagan pitches to a major union convention.

Mondale said Reagan's has been the "worst anti- union administration in history," California Sen. Alan Cranston called Reagan a "president for the privileged," and Ohio Sen. John Glenn admonished Reagan for his "unconscionable" action in cutting back safety inspectors for the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

They all assailed Reagan for failing to provide employment for the country as each bid for the backing of the Communications Workers of America, one of the largest and most politically active unions in the AFL-CIO. The AFL-CIO is planning to endorse a Democratic candidate late this year and the CWA nod is one crucial to that goal.

CWA president Glenn Watts, however, conceded that in earlier polls of the members, Mondale was the favorite, followed by Glenn and Cranston.

Colorado Sen. Gary Hart, was lower in the preference polling, said Watts. Membership in attendance was polled before the speeches and will be polled after the convention, said Watts, who will be casting votes equal to the CWA 650,000 membership figure for one candidate when the time comes for the AFL-CIO endorsement.

Though Glenn was greeted by convention delegates in nearly the same wild fashion as Mondale, the former vice president was clearly given preferential treatment by the union in his address to the CWA workers.

Cranston's reception was more subdued, to the point of awkward silence, during a few passages in his speech designed to draw applause.

Mondale, noting that more union households voted for Reagan over the Carter-Mondale ticket in 1980, reminded the convention,"Some of the you in this room voted for him (Reagan)."

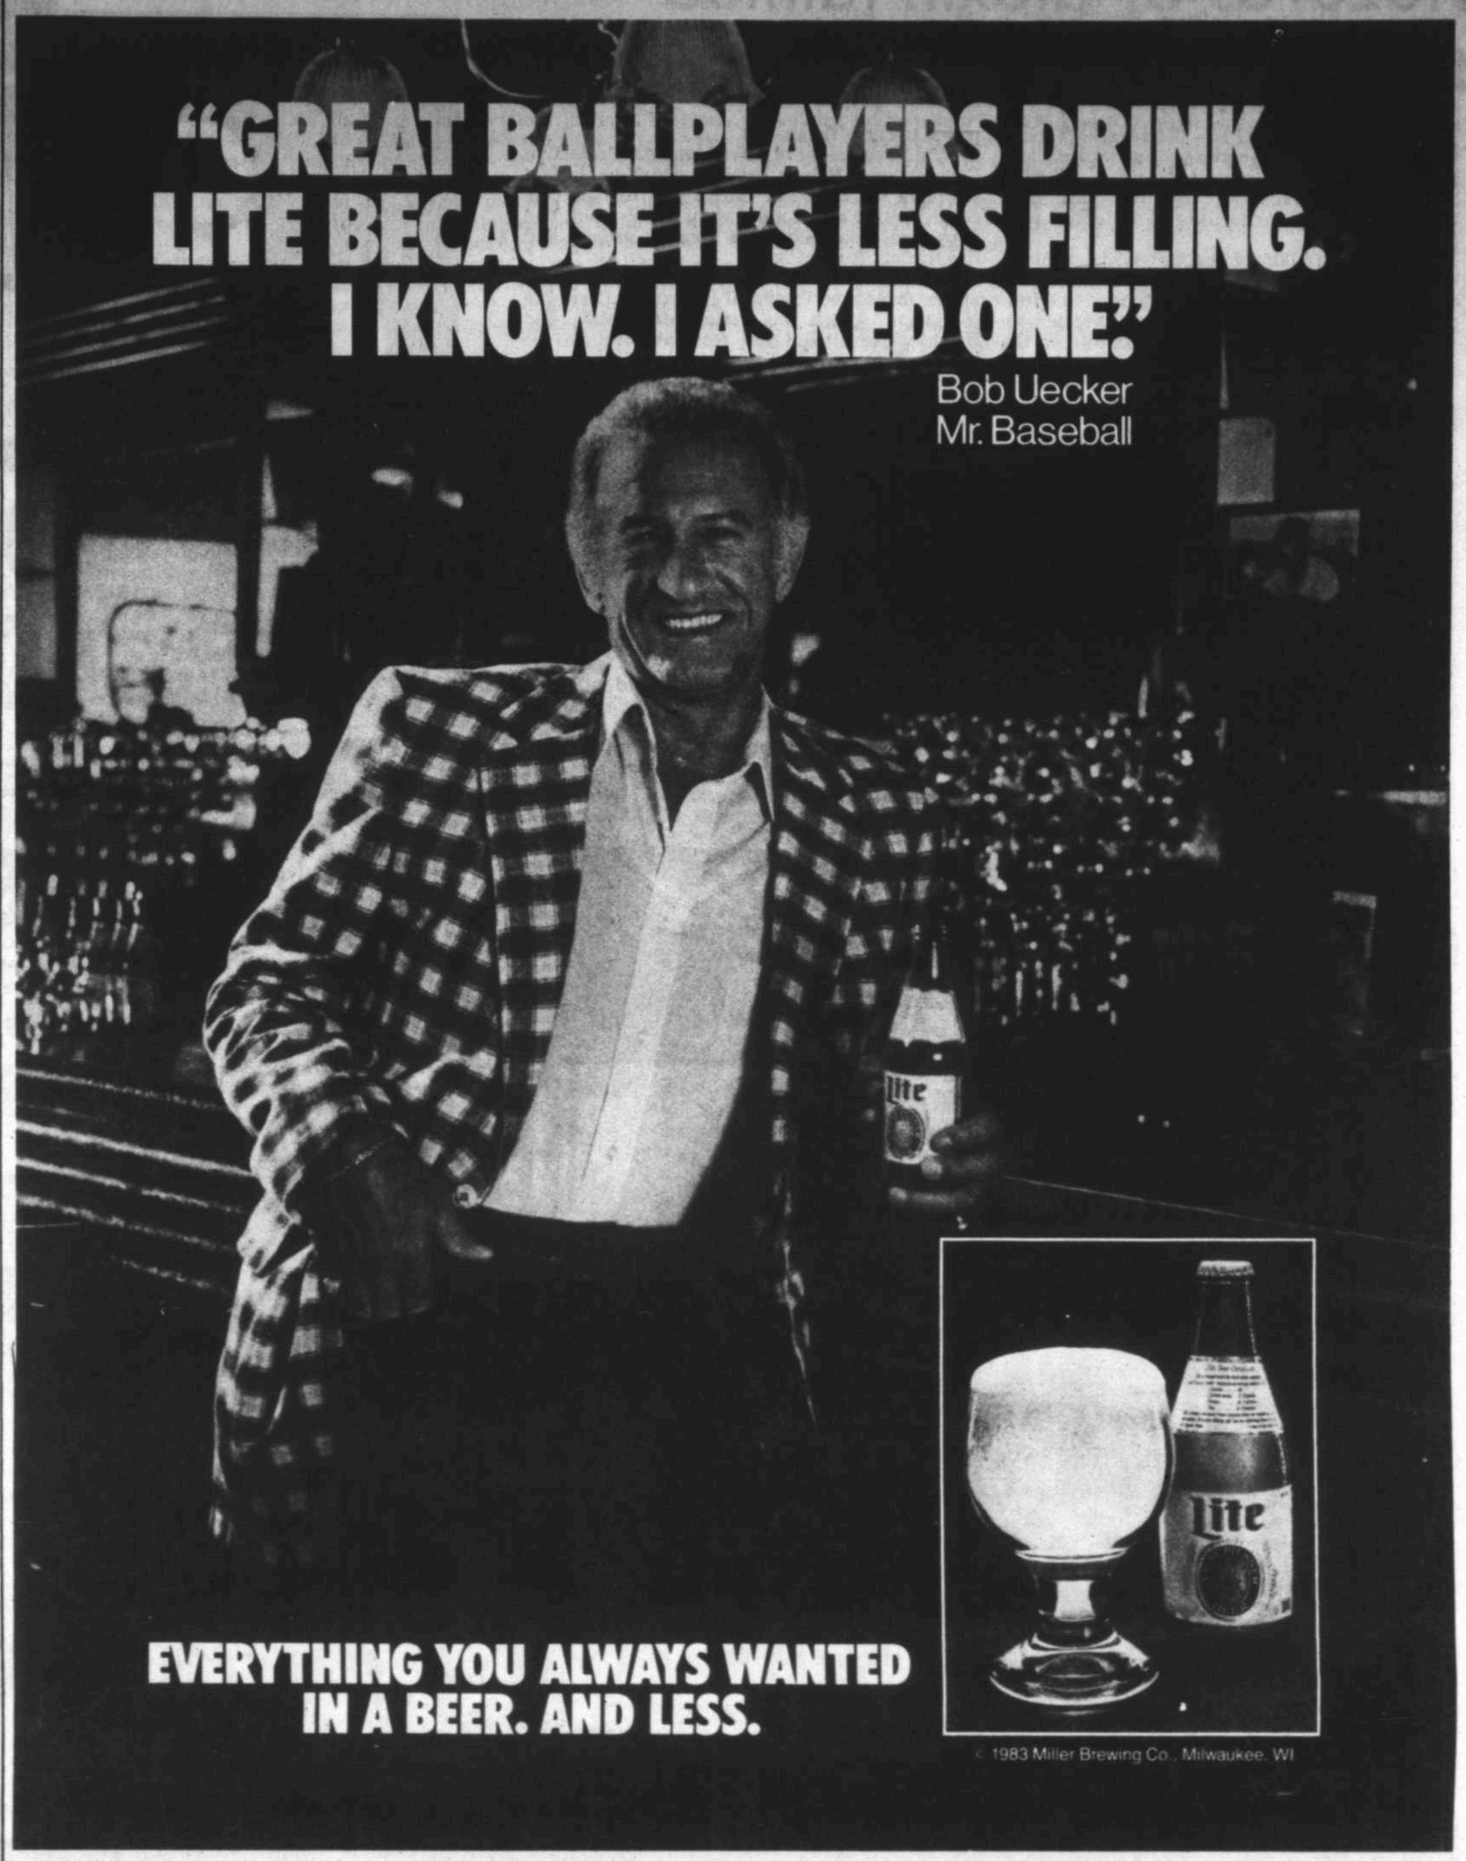

He added, "Let's do it different this time. The first time it's his fault, the second time it's our fault. If he'll do this to you when he's planning to run for re- election, what on Earth will he do to you if he can't run for re-election after you've re-elected him next time."

Glenn reminded the group of his days as an astronaut in 1962 when "the only link I had with this planet was the amazing communications system aboard my spacecraft. My life depended on that system — and people like you were responsible for making it work."

The feud between Mondale and Cranston was a precursor to their battle at the Wisconsin straw poll next weekend. Glenn is staying out of Wisconsin and hung back yesterday, enjoying the fray from a distance.

First, Mondale attracted a number of Mayor Tom Bradley's financial backers at a private breakfast while Bradley was hosting a dismally small breakfast reception for Cranston at the same time.

About 35 people came to hear Cranston out of the 75 who Bradley aides said were invited.

PULSE may replace cash

HOUSTON (AP) — Texans may be able to replace their checking accounts with automatic bank teller cards late this year or early next, officials say.

PULSE cards will be known as "debit" cards under the new system, which would allow customers to transfer money directly from their accounts to those of merchants, said Stan Paur, executive vice president of PULSE.

That company is Texas' largest automatic bank teller network. There are currently 4.2 million bank customers who hold the cards.

Paur said customers would use the same cards they now use in the automatic tellers.

He said the system would work this way:

A customer, making a purchase, would give the merchant the PULSE card instead of cash, check or credit card. The merchant then would place the card into a terminal which would send a signal to a computer. The computer would then transfer funds from the customer's bank account directly to the account of the merchant and the purchase would be complete.

Paur said the customer's identification would be verified either through a signature or through a personal identification number, depending on the type of terminal used by the merchant.

Terminals, he said, could be electronic cash registers, or card-operated gas pumps or card readers attached to a telephone. All would be linked to a financial computer that would sort out the purchase and make the appropriate credits and debits.

"Debit cards and point-of-sale terminals benefit both consumers and merchants," said Paur. "Consumers feel more secure not having to carry checks or large amounts of cash, and merchants receive quicker payments for their goods or services at less risk."

Merchants, he said, "look at the system as protection against bad check and credit card fraud."

The "plastic cash" system cleared a government hurdle during the recent session of the Texas legislature.

The Texas Senate and House passed a bill that would enable electronic transfer of funds for point-of-sale transactions and Gov. Mark White is expected to sign it into law.

But several other elements are yet to be worked out, said Paur. The start-up date is now expected for "late 1983 or early 1984" depending on technical connections and the education of merchants.

He said studies have not yet determined how much each transaction will cost and who will pay the service fee — the customer or the merchant.

Customers now use the cards to transfer funds from one account to another or to check account balances or to withdraw cash. Typically, he said, there are about a half million automatic teller machine transactions daily now.

The PULSE automatic teller network was organized by seven bank groups, Texas Commerce, Allied, Bank of the Southwest, First City, Interfirst, Cullen and Texas American Bank Shares.

Hazards of dioxin-tainted town reported 20 years ago

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Federal officials ignored warnings 20 years ago that workers at a dioxin-contaminated plant here were suffering from a severe skin disease that caused facial boils and hair growth, according to a doctor who treated them.

Dr. Roger Brodkin of the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey said Monday that he treated more than 50 workers at the now-abandoned Diamond Alkali Co. plant, which manufactured the defoliant Agent Orange in the 1960s.

"We told them that there was a health problem there, but they felt it was no big deal," said Brodkin. "They knew they had dioxin there, but they didn't act."

The plant along the Passaic River in the Ironbound section of Newark was sealed off Thursday after Gov. Thomas H. Kean announced hazardous levels of dioxin had been found in the ground at the site.

Diamond Alkali, now part of the Dallas-based Diamond Shamrock Corp., produced herbicides at the plant, which was sold in 1971. Dioxins were byproducts of the process.

Samples taken at the plant recently by the federal Environmental Protection Agency found levels of dioxin ranging from 58 parts per billion to 1,200 parts per billion. One part per billion is considered hazardous to human health, according to the EPA.

Tests also have been conducted to see if the contamination has spread to residences and other businesses in the area. Results of 30 samples taken Friday from nearby homes were to be completed today, officials said.

State Department of Environmental Protection Commissioner Robert Hughey said Monday that sampling for traces of dioxin also will be conducted within a half-mile radius of the plant. The expanded area includes a housing project and two schools, Hughey said.

Tests for dioxin also were scheduled for today at the abandoned Chemical Insecticide Corp. site in Edison, which was sealed off Friday, said Hughey. Results of the test samples will be known early next week, he said.

Sampling at nine other active manufacturing sites around the state where dioxin may have been produced will be conducted "within the next 10 days" by the owners of the sites, Hughey said.

Brodkin, who heads the university's dermatology division, said the workers at the Newark plant were treated from 1962 to 1967 and that he still sees about 10 former workers a month who suffer from the disease, known as chloracne.

"Their skin turned black and they grew hair all over their faces, even on their eyelids. We had to treat them with surgery to remove the boils or drain them," the doctor said.

Brodkin, who was paid by Diamond Alkali to treat workers, said, "They had so much sickness they couldn't afford to let people go to a doctor. That's why I went to the plant and worked at the infirmary.

He said he notified federal and state health officials in 1963 that the plant contained hazardous amounts of dioxin.

Inmate files suit

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — An inmate has filed a lawsuit seeking $2,000 a month for the rest of his prison term and a court order allowing him to order food from a "good health store."

Richard J. VanKeuren, a prisoner in the Lincoln Correctional Center, claims in a federal lawsuit that Correctional Center Superintendent William Foster has violated his civil rights by denying him a vegetarian diet.

Foster and the center's staff accommodate special dietary needs of Muslims, but have denied his requests, VanKeurnen said. He says his diet is based on his own religious beliefs, "which comply with Theo-Sophical teachings."

John Dahm, director of adult facilities, said Muslims at the penitentiary and at the correctional center have been allowed to cook one meal per day on their own, but a decision to revoke that privilege at the end of this week was made before VanKeuren's suit was filed.

Six-year-old David Rothenberg, his face covered by a burn mask, wears a California Angels baseball cap given to him by Reggie Jackson as he is rolled through Los Angeles Airport Tuesday morning. David was to board a plane for Boston, where he will be treated for the severe burns over much of his body.

6-year-old burn victim arrives for treatment

BOSTON (AP) — David Rothenberg, a 6-year-old boy whose father is charged with dousing his motel room with gasoline and setting it ablaze, has arrived for treatment of burns that cover 90 percent of his body.

Wrapped in bandages and wearing a jauntily cocked baseball cap, David arrived at Logan International Airport on Tuesday along with his mother, Marie Rothenberg, and was rushed by ambulance to Shriners Burn Institute.

"He's really coping very well," said Mrs. Rothenberg, adding there were no problems during the trip.

But she said she was still unsure about doctors' plans for David at the burn center. "I just don't know how long it will be," she said.

The youngster, his mother and a nurse entered the ambulance and shut the doors to reporters and cameramen. Airport officials said they wanted to protect the boy from possible infection.

The institute reported Tuesday night it was too early to give a condition report on David.

The youngster, his faced covered with a surgical mask to prevent scarring, was flown to Boston from Los Angeles where he was treated at the University of California-Irvine Hospital for massive burns suffered March 3.

The boy's father, Charles Rothenberg, 42, who is divorced from his wife, has been charged with dousing the boy's Buena Park, Calif., motel room with gasoline and setting it on fire, claiming he feared his ex-wife wouldn't let him see the boy again.

Rothenberg is being held on charges of attempted murder, arson, assault with a deadly weapon and causing great bodily harm to his son.

David and his father had driven to California from the boy's home in Brooklyn, N.Y., for a visit to Disneyland.

Earlier, Mrs. Rothenberg said the boy knows his father's alleged part in the fire.

Traveling to Boston with the boy and his mother was John Cirillo, a New York City policeman who said he was engaged to Mrs. Rothenberg.

"I'm sure he's exhausted by this trip," Cirillo said of the boy. "He is not able to stay in one position for any length of time" because of the burn injuries.

He said the boy slept a bit on the five-hour flight, but ate little except for a soft drink.

David had to wait until he improved enough in the California hospital to make the trip to Boston, where he is slated to be under the care of Dr. John Remensnyder, the director of the institute.

Candy factory to close

PORT CHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Life Savers Inc. has announced it will close its candy plant in April after 64 years of operation, and 145 people will lose their jobs.

Company President Peter Rogers said at a press conference Tuesday the employees at the Port Chester plant will get "generous severence" pay.

"Sugar-rolled candy consumption is down 35 percent in the past six years," Rogers said in explaining the shutdown of the plant which once employed 500 people.

Bomb explodes at hotel

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — An explosion apparently caused by a small bomb occurred Tuesday night at the Anaheim Marriott Hotel, but caused no injuries or fire, authorities said.

The Anaheim Fire Department was called to the scene at about 8:09 p.m., but there was no fire when firefighters arrived, said a fire department dispatcher who refused to identify herself.

Anaheim Police Sgt. Ron Good said investigators were at the scene and the explosion apparently took place on the roof of the hotel.

"It has been confirmed that it was an explosive device," Good said.

The hotel manager, Steve Krings, refused to discuss the incident and referred questions to the hotel publicity department, which was closed until Wednesday morning.

WHAT USO IS DOING FOR THE LONELY SERVICEMAN AND WOMAN

At nearly 175 locations, I know that I can depend on the USO everyday to help me with any type of question or problem. For us servicemen and women, the USO is the three most important letters in helping. And they have helped me... I've been in USO classes, on USO tours... and attended USO special celebrations. I've called home from the USO... gotten help when I felt lonely... and even visited in someone's home, all through the USO... and on holidays, I know USO goes out of its way to help those of us away from home... there's always a Christmas party, tickets for special events and even for Mass in Rome and more. USO... today... everyday and holidays just for us.

I'm like most people. I don't like to admit that I have a problem. But when I do, I know one group that will be there to help me... the USO. Whether it's trying to call home, figuring out the best way around my new community... or just someone to listen, I know the USO is there. For those of us in the military, USO is the three most important letters in helping others.

Herbicide plant site to be shrouded to prevent further contamination

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Parts of an abandoned herbicide plant will be shrouded in canvas tarpaulin to fight the spread of dioxin, after traces of the toxic chemical were found in nearby homes and businesses, Gov. Thomas H. Kean says.

Tests of 31 dust and dirt samples taken in the neighborhood of the defunct Diamond Alkali Co. plant showed dioxin in low concentrations at one home, at a chemical treatment plant and at a street curb, Kean said Tuesday.

The tests were performed after large amounts of dioxin were found in the ground around the abandoned plant last week, officials said.

Kean said that the test results made him "guardedly optimistic" that the contamination was mostly contained at the plant.

"We do not have the potential problem we thought we did," said Richard Dewling, assistant regional administrator of the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Kean said more tests will be conducted and parts of the four-acre plant site would be covered with a canvas tarpaulin to prevent any further spread of dioxin. Some parts of the site will be entombed, possibly in concrete, he said.

The preliminary findings will be sent to a California laboratory for verification, Kean said. He noted the EPA would return to the area Monday to conduct more extensive testing.

The plant manufactured the defoliant Agent Orange and other herbicides in the 1960s. Dioxin — a byproduct in the manufacture of some herbicides, including Agent Orange — is the most dangerous substance synthesized by man and has been linked to health problems, including cancers, birth defects and liver and kidney ailments.

Samples taken two weeks ago by the EPA at the plant site found levels of dioxin ranging from 58 parts per billion to 1,200 parts per billion. One part per billion is considered hazardous to human health, according to the EPA.

Chrysler's profit may spur talks

CHELSEA, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp.'s record first-quarter profits may spur United Auto Workers to renegotiate their current contract with the automaker, a top company official says.

Harold K. Sperlich, Chrysler's president of North American automotive operations, said Tuesday he expected the union to press for a new contract this summer to replace the pact which will expire Jan. 14.

The company's first-quarter profit of $172.1 million has prompted calls for early negotiations from the company's 43,000 unionized autoworkers, who made substantial concessions in a previous contract when Chrysler appeared faced with insolvency. Chrysler workers now make about $2 an hour less than their counterparts at other firms.

Group marches outside court

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Twenty protesters marched outside the state Supreme Court building where a member of a communist youth group was appealing an arson conviction, and two group members were fined for contempt for unfurling a banner in the courtroom.

Nancy Whitley of Eugene, a member of the Revolutionary Communist Youth Brigade, on Tuesday appealed her conviction for burning a gasoline-soaked strip of cloth in a crowded ballroom during a 1981 protest against U.S. involvement in Iran.

Two other members, Claire Cheng, 24, and Beverly Hubbard, 36, both of Eugene, were fined $100 after they refused a judge's order Tuesday to put the banner away.

Artifacts may belong to black

BALTIMORE (AP) — Artifacts found on a 78-acre tract in rural Baltimore County may have belonged to Benjamin Banneker, a self-taught mathematical genius who was America's "first black man of science."

Banneker, an astronomer appointed by George Washington to the surveying team that laid out the boundaries of the District of Columbia, died in 1806 and his home burned as he was being buried.

Archeologists surveyed the site two weeks ago and found pieces of handmade nails, white clay pipe stems and fragments of earthenware vessels that may have belonged to Banneker, Wayne Clark, staff archeologist of the Maryland Historical Trust, said Tuesday.

Illegal dumping investigated

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The state attorney general's office is investigating reports that organized crime members are involved in illegal dumping in a wooded area in the Pocono Mountains, an environmental spokeswoman says.

Former EPA official exonerated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Environmental Protection Agency official Rita M. Lavelle was being arraigned on a criminal charge of contempt of Congress today on the heels of a House subcommittee vote exonerating her former boss of the same charge.

Ms. Lavelle, the former head of EPA's toxic waste cleanup program,was scheduled to appear before U.S. District Judge June Green to enter her plea to the contempt charge.

The former assistant administrator was indicted by a federal grand jury May 27 on the misdemeanor charge for defying congresional subpoenas to testify before a House subcommittee investigating the agency.

If convicted, she could face a year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Meanwhile, a different subcommittee took the first step Tuesday toward exonerating former EPA chief Anne M. Burford by approving a resolution declaring she no longer was in contempt.

The House Public Works investigations subcommittee said in its resolution that EPA and Mrs. Burford were now in full compliance with its subpoena for agency documents. The vote sends the resolution to the full committee.

Ms. Lavelle was cited for her failure to appear before the House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee to testify on her action in handling the $1.6 billion "superfund" toxic waste cleanup program. The subcommittee has been seeking her testimony since February.

Until she was fired by President Reagan on Feb. 7, Ms. Lavelle was in charge of the program. The subcommittee said it needs her testimony to pursue its investigation into alleged political manipulation and mismanagement of the fund, as well as charges of "sweetheart" deals with polluters.

Ms. Lavelle has insisted that she is willing to testify, but that the subcommittee has made no attempt to schedule her testimony between her job-hunting trips to California.

But the subcommittee said Ms. Lavelle failed to appear on the date she was subpoenaed and has made no effort to schedule an appearance. The House voted unanimously in May to cite her for contempt.

The resolution exonerating Mrs. Burford of contempt also involved handling of the "superfund," but under far differet circumstances.

The House voted 259-105 last December to cite Mrs. Burford for invoking executive privilege on President Reagan's orders and refusing to produce subpoenaed documents.

That dispute involved a constitutional dispute between the two branches of government, however, rather than an individual action. The White House later agreed to provide congressional investigators with access to the disputed documents, but sought and obtained a promise that Congress would clear Mrs. Burford when the matter was resolved.

Rep. Elliott H. Levitas, D-Ga., the subcommittee chairman, said no action could ever actually erase the vote citing Mrs. Burford and making her the highest government official in history subject to a contempt action.

"Once a contempt has occurred, there is no legal means to purge it," Levitas said. "The actions of one Congress may not be affected by the actions of a subsequent Congress."

The senior Republican on the subcommittee, who last December supported the contempt resolution, said the attempt to clear Mrs. Burford's name recognized that she was following the president's orders. But he said the resolution also reaffirms Congress' right to oversee the workings of the executive branch.

"Continuation of the contempt proceeding will only cause a higher personal price to be paid by Mrs. Burford for following the advice of her superiors, in addition to the heavy prie she's paid already," said Rep. Guy Molinari, R-N.Y.

Crane found not guilty of charge

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — Rep. Philip M. Crane, found innocent of a charge of drunken driving, has vowed never again to be "in a position where I could be charged" with the crime.

The 12-member Marin County jury deliberated less than an hour before announcing its verdict Tuesday afternoon to Municipal Judge David Baty.

"In all of the 35 years I have been driving ... I have never been ticketed for anything other than speeding or a parking violation," Crane said after the trial. "I have had an impeccable driving record."

The 52-year-old lawmaker from Mt. Prospect, Ill., an unsuccessful candidate for the GOP presidential nomination in 1980, said he felt "a great sense of relief" at the outcome.

"One thing I have learned from this experience — I would never again permit myself to be put in a position where I could be charged," he said.

Crane was arrested at 3 a.m. on Oct. 18, after a sheriff's deputy saw his slow-moving car drift in and out of his lane on U.S. 101 about 15 miles north of San Francisco, authorities said.

The lawmaker and a friend from Woodside, investment counselor Robert Isaacson, had spent the evening drinking in Henry Africa's, a San Francisco bar, leaving after 1:30 a.m.

Julie Marsella, a former cocktail waitress at the bar, testified at the trial that Crane was "very drunk" by the time her shift ended at 11:30 p.m.

She said Crane's "eyes became red and bloodshot. He had a hard time speaking and was slurring his words."

But Crane said during the trial that he was not drunk and was capable of driving.

"I would say I was sober," testified Crane, who is in his eighth term in the House of Representatives.

His lawyer, Mike Dufficy, said the defense never argued with the idea that "the officer had reasonable cause to make the arrest." But he said in court that officers don't convict defendants.

Thursday, June 9, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Pittsburgh Pirates slugger Dave Parker, Happy Rockefeller, conductor Fred Waring, NBC news diplomatic chief Marvin Kalb, one-time Defense Secretary and World Bank head Robert McNamara and playwright George Axelrod celebrate birthdays today. An investment in new technology will make your business more competitive. See if a relative can help you come up with the money. Creative ideas aid your climb up the ladder of success. Romance is on a smoother course than in the recent past. Patch things up with a brother or sister. Wounds that are allowed to fester may never heal. Admit your mistakes without brooding over them.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Salespeople should raise their sights. A shift in the economy helps your aims. Listen to someone who should know what he is talking about. You have good luck in letting certain problems ride.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Business and employment agreements can be expedited. Wind things up quickly so that you can get away for a long weekend. Family member is in an affectionate mood.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A hunch pays off handsomely. You accomplish something that wins you recognition. New employment opportunities open up. Move swiftly. Others are looking for the same thing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Finalize a business transaction right away rather than waiting for a better deal. You have already obtained the best terms you can. Do not dip into savings to buy antiques.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Friends may ask you to make weekend reservations for them. Be sure they are prepared to pay their share. Do what you can to get in better physical shape.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): There may be someone at place of employment who does not have your best interests at heart. Outside friends will be extremely helpful. Do not expect gambling to solve a financial problem.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get more rest and you will find it easier to concentrate. Romance puts you on a collision course with a friend, but you have little difficulty handling the situation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will be happy to stay home and tend to personal matters this evening. The pressure is increasing at work or school. Persevere! You have the strength to succeed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be direct when making requests. Although intermediaries mean well, things can get lost in translation. You have more enthusiasm now. Romance will be happy but somewhat mysterious.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Get your financial affairs in better order. An attempt to rescue a friend proves successful. You will be amply repaid. Nothing can hold you back if you really want something.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are surprised by something that happens at lunch. Take it in stride and you will emerge the winner. A conversation with your mate or an old friend gives you new hope.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your personal life takes on a refreshing new dimension. Refuse to be rushed into signing agreements. You need to get an expert's opinion first. A blind date could lead to a better job.

Network promotes louse?

NEW YORK (AP) — How does NBC promote a louse?

Buffalo Bill Bittinger, the central character in "Buffalo Bill," is such a despicable human boil that test audiences hated him and hated his show. So NBC decided to turn a negative into a positive with a campaign selling Buffalo Bill as "the man you love to hate."

Ads promoting the series, starring Dabney Coleman, say: "You loved to hate him in 'Tootsie.' You loved to hate him in '9 to 5.' Would you rather watch reruns of 'The Gold Monkey' or get hit in the face with a pie?" The people say they'd prefer the pie, and take it on the chin.

As you can see in tonight's second episode, "Buffalo Bill," about a morally bankrupt talk-show host from Buffalo, N.Y., is a rollickingly funny comedy, particularly for fans of dark humor. It is definitely worth saving. As NBC's Brandon Tartikoff says, "This is a show people will talk about the next day. It's not another lovable sitcom from the makers of 'Diff'rent Strokes.'"

But NBC feared that it would be too unconventional and outrageous for viewers used to staring passively at the silliness of "Three's Company."

"This is an extremely fragile show," says Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment. "The research was very unfavorable. He's so outrageous that he took the audience quite by surprise."

NBC's guinea pigs called Bill lots of names — none of them nice. "Self-centered, cold, unfriendly, phony, stupid, oblivious to others." They also didn't like the other characters because they didn't stand up to Bill.

"Their first-blush reaction was not unexpected," says Tartikoff. "In all our conversations about the show, we kept referring to Archie Bunker. But Archie had a wife and daughter, whom he loved. This guy doesn't even pet his dog."

In one future episode, Bill's ugly daughter comes to Buffalo. "He tries to avoid her. He treats her like dirt," says Tartikoff.

When "All in the Family" first appeared in 1971, some people were scared away. It wasn't until after second and third helpings that audiences grew to understand what the character and show were about. As was the case with "All in the Family," test audiences were never indifferent to "Buffalo Bill."

Do you know someone who would like to learn how to play bridge? You could do him a favor by recommending "Contract Bridge," by Alan Truscott (Fell, hard cover, 88 pp., $8.95. Available from Bridge World, 39 West 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10025 for $8.50 plus $.75 for postage and handling). It takes a newcomer in easy steps through the initial stages of bidding and the first steps in play. It has a novel method of evaluating distributional features, even though the end result doesn't differ greatly from standard methods.

Truscott, Bridge Editor of The New York Times, held the South cards in a recent social game. He became declarer in three hearts after a competitive auction. West led the ace of diamonds and, in response to his partner's signal, continued with a diamond. East won and led a third diamond. West discarded a low spade and declarer ruffed in dummy.

Since West did not overcall immediately but only balanced, declarer felt sure that East held the king of clubs. So rather than lead toward the queen of clubs, declarer elected to try for a loser-on-loser play. He immediately led a spade to his king. West won the ace and returned a spade. Declarer won in hand, drew trumps in two rounds ending on the table, and led the ten of spades, discarding a club from his hand.

West won and shifted to a club, but declarer was in control. He captured the jack with the ace, crossed back to dummy with a trump and discarded his remaining club on the good nine of spades. He lost only two spade tricks and two diamonds.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

Tax's wisdom

As expected, the Supreme Court confirmed Monday that the windfall profits tax is constitutional. Note: We said the High Court confirmed the tax is constitutional, not wise. But then, the wisdom of the tax apparently has never been up for consideration.

The windfall profits tax, enacted by Congress in 1980, is nothing more than an excise tax to generate revenue for the federal government. It is doing that. In fact by 1990, government officials say it will bring $225 billion to Uncle Sam.

One fact that can't be overlooked is that if the federal government collects $225 billion from the oil industry by 1990, the federal government is going to spend that $225 billion. The oil industry is not going to have that money to reinvest in exploration and development operations and in research into alternate energy sources.

Won't that money be better spent if Uncle Sam spends it? Before answering that question, you might want to ask yourself this one: Has the government wisely and frugally used your personal tax dollars to your best advantage recently?

What you'll receive for the oil companies' billions of dollars is more bureaucracy, more federal control of your life, more overbloated intrusion in the private sector and larger federal deficits that will demand more and more of your personal income and threaten your economic well-being.

We're not lawyers, but we agree that the windfall profits tax decision probably was accurate. The tax probably is constitutional.

But that doesn't answer the larger question: Is it wise?

Scarcity shortage

The federal government has a new problem: Trying to decide what to do with several billion gas rationing coupons — more than 2,000 tons worth — it printed up during the 1970s. The plan was to pass them out during the next oil crunch. Enter the Reagan administration, which deregulated oil prices in 1981 and thus ended the age of artificial energy shortage — but brought on the coupon crisis.

The coupons carry a picture of George Washington so similar to his mug on the one-dollar bill that they could be used to trick automatic change machines. So they can't simply be thrown away. They also have no serial numbers — so it will be virtually impossible to make sure that no coupons are pilfered en route to being destroyed. Right now, the coupons, which cost $10 million to print, are sitting in an Army storage facility at a cost of $20,000 a year.

There's a kind of poetic justice to a government allocation program with no scarcity left to allocate. Still, prudence probably suggests that the Feds hold onto the coupons anyway. They'll be all ready to go the next time Congress decides to create a shortage of some other commodity by "controlling the price," an event that, if history is any guide, can only be an election or two away.

Another View:

Buying friendship

India and the United States have every reason to be partners: a healthy trade, a shared dedication to democracy, a common concern for world peace. Strengthening those ties, and lessening India's dependence on Moscow, is the abiding aim of U.S. diplomacy. But friendship with India should not be purchased at any price. It should not be purchased with weapons, for example, as the Reagan administration now seems to propose. And India's good will should certainly not be bought with spare parts for its nuclear reactors. As the administration wisely argues, India's disregard for the principle of nuclear non-proliferation is too flagrant to overlook.

India's Tarapur atomic energy plant near Bombay is the center of a protracted nuclear dispute. A steady supply of American enriched uranium kept the two U.S.-built reactors at Tarapur humming from 1963 until last year. The supply agreement barred India from using the fuel for military purposes. But more than a decade ago, the United States started to worry that India might not keep its promise: India refused to sign the 1970 international treaty to halt the spread of nuclear weapons and refused to accept full international inspection of all its nuclear facilities. In 1974, India diverted Canadian reactor fuel to build its first atomic bomb. And it repeatedly threatened to reprocess its spent fuel. To reprocess is to separate out plutonium for additional fuel — or for nuclear bombs.

The 1978 Nuclear Non-Proliferation Act prohibited continued U.S. shipment of nuclear materials to countries that refused nuclear inspection. But in 1980, President Carter and Congress overrode the law and shipped more uranium, purportedly to head off the threat of reprocessing. At the time, many observers agreed with that decision. Last year, the Reagan administration shifted responsibility for supplying India's nuclear fuel to France, with the provision that Tarapur's spent fuel could be reprocessed only with U.S. concurrence.

But India made good on its reprocessing threats anyway. Since late last year, its Tarapur plant has been reprocessing spent Canadian fuel, producing enough weapons-grade plutonium to make 20 Hiroshima-type bombs a year. International inspectors are monitoring the plant now, but India says it will not permit such inspection in the future. India insists that it does not plan to build bombs. But its recalcitrance contradicts such claims. Indian leaders have consistently refused to rule out further nuclear experiments or even to talk about limiting weapons development.

The Reagan administration has responded reasonably — by delaying the supply of spare parts. U.S. officials acknowledge their concern about the safety of the Tarapur reactor, but they correctly argue that the law and the principle of non-proliferation must prevail. If India wants to reprocess, it can do so with or without American help. But if the United States is committed to non-proliferation, it should not send reactor parts to a country that refuses even to negotiate. It should not stand cheerfully out of the way as India converts fuel sent for peaceful purposes to potential military use.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Spying on Einstein undetected

WASHINGTON — The FBI has been caught occasionally in the rear-view mirror. Here is another look backward, which I hope will help assure a better road ahead.

Jack Anderson

Albert Einstein, the exiled German physicist whose theories led to development of the atomic bomb, was under investigation for five years on charges that his Berlin office from 1929 to 1931 was a cable drop for a Soviet espionage ring operating out of the Far East.

According to FBI and Army intelligence documents, Einstein was unaware of the alleged spying.

The data gathered by U.S. intelligence — even the allegations themselves — remained classified "secret" after the Nobel Prize-winning physicist's death in 1955, because they involved a "usually reliable" source in Berlin who gave surprisingly explicit details to the Army's intelligence people in 1950. The source had to be protected.

Hundreds of pages of documents lay out the story. They were declassified between 1981 and 1983 in response to a Freedom of Information Act request by my associate Dale Van Atta. Here's the story chronologically:

— March 13, 1950: An Army G-2 memo shared with the FBI explained that Soviet spies in Shanghai and Canton would send coded messages to countries "such as Egypt or France." Then these surreptitious messages would be forwarded to cable addresses in Berlin. Among the addresses, the Army's informant said, were a watchmaker's shop, a box factory — and Einstein's office. One of his secretaries would give the reports to a courier, who would send them to Moscow, the tipster said.

The G-2 report acknowledged that "since these telegrams from the Soviet spies were in code, Einstein didn't know their contents." But it added: "However, it is reasonable to believe that Einstein did know that his office was being used by the Soviets as a telegram cover address."

— October 23, 1950: A follow-up G-2 report postulated that the alleged Soviet espionage contact was Helen Dukas, who was then Einstein's secretary-housekeeper in Princeton, N.J.

— May 1951: The FBI began combing through Einstein's writings and biographies.

— Nov. 2, 1951: Dukas was interviewed by the FBI on an unrelated matter.

— Nov. 28, 1952: The Army completed its investigation in Europe and forwarded the results to Washington.

— Oct. 14, 1953: FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover asked the Army to "complete its investigation at the earliest possible time and forward the results to this Bureau." The Army dispatched a courier from Heidelberg, Germany, with a letter stating that the investigation had been completed 11 months before and a copy had already been sent to the FBI.

— June 24, 1954: The Army reported to Hoover — who evidently had asked G-2 to reopen the case — that its agents were trying to interview a doctor who might have information.

— Oct. 23, 1954: The Army reported to Hoover that the doctor had been interviewed with no useful results.

— Nov. 9, 1954: The FBI concluded that there were no "outstanding leads... and the most logical remaining lead... is to interview Helen Dukas."

— Jan. 3, 1955: Though leery about approaching Dukas "because of her close association with Einstein... and his known tendency to make public statements concerning matters with which he personally disagrees," top FBI officials decided Dukas had to be interviewed before the investigation could be considered complete.

— Feb. 23, 1955: Two FBI agents interviewed Dukas at Einstein's home, having asked for her help in an investigation of espionage activities in Berlin a quarter of a century earlier. "She did not appear to be evasive in any manner," the G-men reported, "but spoke quite freely.... At no time did she give any hint or indication that she was aware the investigation concerned her in any way."

The Army informant's story fell apart. The FBI concluded, after five years of digging, that "additional investigation is not warranted in view of the long lapse of time since Einstein's office was allegedly used by the Soviets, the lack of corroborating information, and the fact that personnel involved are scattered in many countries and in many cases are deceased."

— April 18, 1955: Einstein died.

— July 27, 1955: A top FBI official recommended that the Einstein espionage case be closed.

Footnote: An error negligently made, willfully persisted in, shielded against inquiry, unretracted or retracted reluctantly, diminishes public confidence in the basic integrity of the FBI.

MISLEADING CONGRESS: My recent exposure of political favoritism in the Minority Business Development Agency led Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., chairman of the House Small Business Committee, to ask MBDA Director Victor Rivera for an explanation. Rivera's written response was, to put it as kindly as possible, seriously misleading on two points:

— I reported that Nelson Rodriguez, a high agency official, had ordered two regional directors to "stack" evaluation panels so that MBDA contracts would go to political friends. Rivera wrote Mitchell: "After investigation, the Office of Inspector General found no substantive basis for recommending formal disciplinary measures against Mr. Rodriquez."

In fact, the inspector general is still investigating the matter.

— I reported that the City of Cleveland had been given an agency award because Mayor George Voinovich is a Republican, even though Price Waterhouse's application was ranked higher by an evaluation panel. Rivera wrote Mitchell that the city's application ranked "a close second behind that of Price Waterhouse."

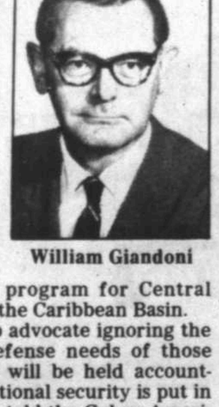

In fact, MBDA documents show that Price Waterhouse scored 255 points with the review panel; Sure Services scored 186 and the City of Cleveland ranked third with 169 points.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Central American disaster looms

WASHINGTON — "Our friends cannot be expected to stand unarmed against insurgents who've been armed to the teeth by the Soviet-Cuban-Nicaraguan axis," the president said, referring to Central America.

William Giandoni

"Any excuse for not providing our friends the weapons they need to defend themselves is a prescription for disaster," Mr. Reagan added, in another plea for acceptance of his program for Central America and the Caribbean Basin.

"Those who advocate ignoring the legitimate defense needs of those under attack will be held accountable if our national security is put in jeopardy," he told the Cuban-American National Foundation in Miami on the anniversary of Cuban independence from Spain in 1902.

Yet, the Spanish-language newspaper, Diario Las Americas of Miami, noted in an editorial that the backing the president seeks "is not as easy to obtain as it should be because the North American nation, for many decades now, has been subjected to such intense Marxist brainwashing that its regrettable results are astounding."

No matter what the cause, the effects are obvious.

Congress haggles over a relatively few million dollars in economic and military aid for embattled Central American countries at a time the Soviet Union is pouring 10 times as much into Cuba.

Congress denounces U.S.-backed "covert" operations in Nicaragua and seeks to cut off U.S. support for the freedom fighters who are harassing the Sandinista regime which the rest of the Central American governments blame for the destabilization campaigns being waged against them.

Congress seeks to reduce economic and military aid to the government of El Salvador, a country struggling against Marxist guerrillas who, members of both the House and Senate intelligence committees say, get material and moral support from Nicaragua.

Confusion on Capitol Hill appears widespread.

Now even some conservative Republican congressmen talk in favor of holding down U.S. aid to El Salvador to a level less than that necessary for victory over the Marxist guerrillas "to give the democratic process time to succeed."

Presumably the Americans who invoke the democratic process expect the coming Salvadoran elections to produce an acceptable political result.

Yet, already the combined Democratic Revolutionary Front-Farabundo Marti Liberation Front, the Marxist-dominated guerrilla organization, has said it will not take part in the elections. If it does what it did in 1982, when it threatened, and used, violence to keep Salvadorans from the polls, it again will try to disrupt and discredit the vote.

If nothing else, that means that those who demand representation even of the Marxist opposition in the next Salvadoran government will be no more satisfied with the outcome of the coming elections than they were with the balloting last year, and the Marxists will have further pretext for their violence and efforts to sabotage the economy.

According to a report prepared in March by the U.S. Embassy in San Salvador, "Direct costs, including an estimate of the amount of foregone production of goods and services attributable to the war, amount to an estimated $596.8 million."

That in addition to the lives of the estimated 30,000 persons fallen victim to political violence of the left and right since October 1979.

Considerable concern is being voiced in El Salvador over the possibility about which President Reagan spoke in Miami, that the United States might not provide Salvadorans the weapons they need to defend themselves.

Even the American Chamber of Commerce of El Salvador has worried that "the real issue at stake is whether the United States will ... develop a position of commitment that will ensure the future of democracy and the private enterprise system in El Salvador, or ... permit another Nicaragua to occur. ..."

"Failure to support El Salvador would again demonstrate that the United States is incapable of defending the principles of democracy against a determined and programmed international communist aggression," the chamber said in a statement prepared for the recent meeting here of the Association of American Chambers of Commerce in Latin America.

ART BUCHWALD

For price, a child's a bargain!

The Department of Agriculture has just reported that it will cost $80,260 to raise a child born this year until it reaches age 18.

Art Buchwald

This seemed like a lot of scratch to Carter Brown, a friend of mine, who is expecting a child very soon. So he went down to the Department to see what he was going to get for his money.

"Is it really going to cost me $80,260 to raise a child until it's 18?" he asked the man behind the desk.

"It's a bargain," the man told him. "Eighteen months ago we projected it would cost $134,414. But that was when we included an 8 percent inflation rate. Our $80,000 figure is based on no inflation dollars."

"What does the $80,000 cost include?"

"Just the bare bone items such as $17,000 for food, $27,000 for housing, $13,000 for transportation, and the rest for miscellaneous items such as medical costs and shoes."

"I don't imagine you included orthodontic work in your estimate?" Brown asked.

"You have to be kidding!" the man roared with laughter. "If we included what it will cost for serious dental work no one would have a baby."

"What other items did you fail to include in your report, so I won't be surprised?"

The man looked at his list. "Well, in the early years of the child's upbringing you'll probably be able to stay within the $80,000 figure. But as your offspring goes into its teens, you could get into serious financial overruns."

"Such as?"

"The Department did not include in its report the cost of such teenage necessities as hi-fi equipment, movie and rock concert tickets, sports equipment, computers, weekend parties, guitar lessons, Christmas, arcade games, and insurance."

"Why not?" Brown asked. "They seem to be as essential as food, housing and transportation."

"Because we have them down as options. Some parents prefer a stripped-down child and others prefer to add everything that's on the market."

"If I pay the basic price of $80,000 to raise a child for the next 18 years, plus all the extras that you've mentioned, is there any guarantee it will turn out all right?"

"There is no warranty with the price whatsoever. You pay your money and you take your chances. We don't guarantee any more that when it gets to be 18, it will be able to read and write. Frankly you'll be lucky if it volunteers to cut your lawn or do the dishes once a week. And if you think for 80 grand it's going to clean up its own room, you're living in a dream world."

"It sure seems like a big investment to get so little in return."

"The Department of Agriculture is not recommending you have a baby. Our job is just to report what it will cost you to raise one. The $80,000 is our official figure. The other items I tipped you off on are unofficial, based on my own experience as the father of three teen-agers. I didn't include the price of collect long-distance telephone calls during the first 18 years because I didn't want to scare you."

"So if I add in all the extras I can easily wind up spending $200,000," Brown said.

"That's a good ballpark figure unless you or your wife have to seek psychiatric care while raising your child."

"Well, I guess $200,000 is not an unreasonable sum of money to invest until a child reaches 18 years old."

"It's actually a steal," the man from Agriculture said. "When your kid reaches 18, it's going to cost you that much just to send it to college."

Writer gets hefty telephone bill

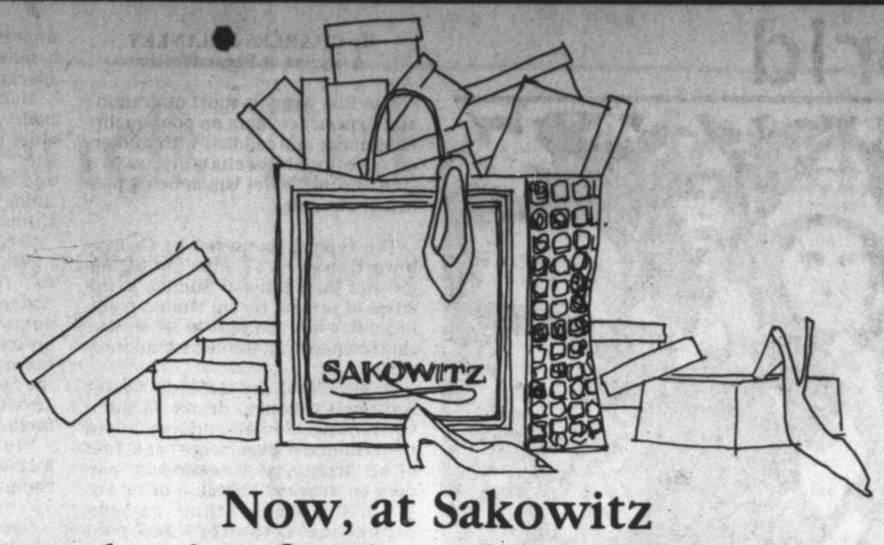

ALSEA, Ore. (AP) — As a free-lance writer, 46-year-old Don Paul admits he gets some hefty long-distance telephone bills, but still he was surprised when the Pioneer Telephone Company billed him for $2,120.56.

It turned out to be the entire bill for all 50 customers in the company's Lobster Valley exchange.

Pioneer credit manager Randy Morgan blamed human error.

Paul said when he got the bill Friday he had "visions of filing for bankruptcy."

"I almost went into cardiac arrest," he said.

Red Army: It isn't world's hottest

AP Laserphoto

The Soviet army is not as well prepared or equipped as many believe, according to a study to be released soon by Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies. It's short on training and experience, the report says.

By CHARLES HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

The Red Army is short on training and experience, long on poor-quality equipment and saddled with soldiers of questionable reliability, says a study of the Soviet Union being published Thursday.

The report, sponsored by Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies, is the latest of several recent studies pointing out what are said to be serious shortcomings in the Soviet military structure.

One, a book by defense writer Andrew Cockburn, draws on interviews with Soviet emigres about their military experience, and tells of an army that "occasionally borders on anarchy" because of brutality in the ranks, ethnic hatreds, drunkenness, thievery and poor leadership.

The new Georgetown volume, titled "After Brezhnev" and published by Indiana University Press, includes a chapter on the Soviet military written by Professor Coit D. Blacker of Stanford University. Like other parts of the Georgetown study, it is based on 18 months of research by a group of specialists and uses a variety of Western and Soviet sources.

"Soviet military capabilities, while impressive, are offset to a degree by a number of persistent problems," Blacker writes.

Much of the advanced Soviet weaponry, including warplanes, submarines and sea-launched ballistic missiles, "tends to be inferior in quality and performance to the high technology systems produced by the United States," Blacker says.

Secondly, he writes, "not all Soviet forces receive the high level of combat training characteristic of... American troops," he writes. He notes that Soviet pilots fly fewer hours per month and engage in fewer exercises than U.S. pilots, and the Soviet air force and navy do not have the war experience of Western forces.

Finally, he says, Soviet armed forces "may be less reliable than commonly assumed in the West."

Because the Red Army draws conscripts from more than 90 racial and nationality groups in the Soviet Union, powerful ethnic and religious tensions have developed, Blacker writes.

In addition, soldiers from the large Moslem minorities of Central Asia are less educated, and many do not speak Russian, "posing potentially serious difficulties of communication and command."

As a result, the army assigns Central Asian soldiers to non-combat support units as much as possible. Western specialists report 80 percent of the troops in support units come from minorities — Uzbeks, Kazakhs, Balts — and 80 percent of the combat troops are Slavs — Russians, Byelorussians or Ukrainians.

Blacker notes that the proportion of Central Asians and other non-Slavs among the draftees will rise in the coming years because the Russian birth rate is declining, aggravating this ethnic dilemma for military planners.

A study last year by the Rand Corp. concurred.

"We can envisage combat-related scenarios in which ethnic or racial riots, minority conflicts with local populations, or even mutiny based on ethnic grievances could become real possibilities," that study said.

Cockburn's book, published by Random House, fills in details of the ethnic antagonisms.

He quotes one former Soviet soldier: "When it is necessary to do some unpleasant work, say, clean a toilet, a Kazakh would be sent and the Russians would make him do it." Russians eat first in mess halls, Moslems are forced to break their religious code and eat pork, and racial tensions regularly erupt into violence, the emigres say.

Cockburn's sources also describe an army in which units can be immobilized by habitual drunkenness, a major problem throughout Soviet society. Thievery and sale of military gear — to supplement pay as low as $6 a month — can strip a unit of spare equipment.

The food is so bad that one Western researcher has found that apparently 65 percent of Soviet soldiers suffer from vitamin-deficiency ailments during their service, Cockburn writes.

"This is why you can sometimes see soldiers on the march stopping their tanks and scattering into the fields for vegetables or fruit in the gardens," he quotes one emigre as saying.

Bullying by senior draftees in the second year of their two-year hitch is the unofficial organizing principle of the army, he writes. Non-commissioned officers are ignored, and commissioned officers cover up indiscipline rather than blot their own records, Cockburn writes.

These conditions so sap morale that only 1 percent of Soviet conscripts re-enlist, the author says.

In a recent interview, the exiled dissident Pyotr Grigorenko, a former Red Army major general, also cast doubt on the effectiveness of the Soviet soldier.

"If he is not in the hands of a good commander, the Soviet soldier is no longer a soldier," he said.

Khadafy attracting African attention

By JAMES R. PEIPERT

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Besides a full dose of controversy, Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy brings theatrical flair and a posse of pistol-packing young women to his first appearance at an African summit in eight years.

Khadafy

Khadafy, with three planes and an entourage of 150 — by far the largest of the 51 delegations at the summit of the Organization of African Unity — arrived Sunday night.

Since his surprise arrival, the volatile Khadafy has been the center of journalists' attention, and his heavily armed bodyguards the bane of the Ethiopian hosts of the summit, whose formal opening has been delayed two days by political squabbling.

Whether for security or glamour, Col. Khadafy has a corps of female bodyguards, some wearing bright blue berets and tailored, desert camouflage fatigues. One woman sports a black jumpsuit, a heavy pistol in a sand-colored canvas holster strapped on her left hip.

Always close by Khadafy are hard-faced young men with rifles slung upside down over their shoulders and automatic pistols and knives in their belts.

In a white military uniform or enveloped in a cloak, the bushy-haired leader has made grand entrances and exits at pre-summit meetings.

The summit was supposed to open Monday but by today was nearing collapse because delegates couldn't decide whether to seat the Libya-backed Sahara Republic, which became the 51st OAU member in 1982 on the approval of Secretary-General Edem Kodjo of Togo.

The republic is the political entity of the Polisario guerrillas, who have been trying for eight years to win control of Western Sahara from Morocco. Morocco opposes the existence of the Sahara Republic and has asked other nstions to boycott the informal negotiating sessions at which a compromise is being sought.

Two attempts to convene a 19th OAU summit last year in Tripoli, Libya, failed because of north African issues in which Libya has played a leading role.

Khadafy's flamboyant presence doesn't make it easy for vhe meeting to get underway.

Once when Khadafy came down the stairs of Africa Hall, where the delegates are meeting, a Libyan television crew began clapping, chanting and shaking their fists.

"The whole world may be against us, but we will stick to our principles," the crew shouted in unison in Arabic, shaking their fists. Khadafy beamed and clasped his hands over his head in a victory gesture.

Khadafy travels around this east African capital in a metallic green BMW. Ahead is a larger, maroon Mercedes limousine like those used by other heads of state here and apparently intended as a decoy. Behind follow two Range-Rovers. Security men are jammed inside; other guards stand on back bumpers.

But it is the young, assured bodyguards that have captured the media's eye.

A Libyan journalist said some of the bodyguards are high school students who learn to use weapons as part of their curriculum and occasionally join Khadafy's road show.

A fresh-faced 15-year-old, Fahd Mohamed Riyani, eagerly showed how he takes apart his Soviet-designed AK-47 rifle. He laid out the pieces in the parking lot near Africa Hall, then put it back together.

An Ethiopian official who declined to be identified said one of the female bodyguards pulled a pistol on an Ethiopian security officer Monday night in Africa Hall.

Ethiopian police tightened security, apparently to keep the bodyguards out of the conference hall.

But to avoid singling out the Libyans, the Ethiopians on Tuesday kept out bodyguards and low-ranking aides from all delegations. This set some irate delegates shouting, shoving, kicking and occasionally swinging a fist at Ethiopian security men on the steps of the hall.

Reprieve considered for black guerrillas

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The white-minority government's Executive Council met in special session today to consider a reprieve for three condemned black guerrillas, but press reports said it was unlikely to be approved.

The meeting of the Council, which includes select Cabinet ministers and is headed by President Marais Viljoen, came amid mounting pressure inside and outside the country for clemency for the men.

Demonstrations in Washington and other world capitals were part of plans today aimed at convincing the South African government to spare the guerrillas, who are scheduled to be hanged at dawn Thursday.

The Seychelles, an archipelago nation in the Indian Ocean, said that if the death sentences were commuted, it would free six white mercenaries convicted of trying to mount a coup there in November 1981.

But South Africa's government seemed resolute in its plan to hang the African National Congress guerrillas, convicted of killing four people in attacks on police stations in September 1982.

The ANC, the largest black-nationalist group trying to tear down minority rule, has pleaded for commutation and promied vengeance if the men are executed.

Beaumont pitching ends Cubs' win streak

Bo McLaughlin takes his turn at playing surgeon

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Only his plastic surgeon could have fully appreciated the job Beaumont pitcher Bo McLaughlin did on the Midland Cubs Tuesday night at Cubs Stadium.

The former major leaguer snapped a two-game Midland winning streak, 9-3, with ninth inning relief help from Mark Williamson, but when the season started it looked like hill career of the 6-5 righthander from Tennessee's David Lipscomb College was ended.

In fact, if you'd seen Bo two years ago after he had been hit in the face with a line drive off the bat of the White Sox Harold Baines, you'd have sworn it was over then. Sudden Sam McDowell didn't suffer any worse damage several years ago and the Cleveland lefthander never really came back.

"It broke my cheek bone, eye socket in four places, broke my nose and broke my jaw. I still wear plates," he relates.

He's got enough metal in his face to audition as Darth Vader.

MCLAUGHLIN was pitching the Oakland A's, one of three major league teams he has done time with. "Oakland footed the bills and made sure everything was back together in place. The surgeons did a wonderful job. I even pitched four games at the end of the season, but last year I had a mediocre year and no one wanted me this spring. I didn't even go to spring training."

He did pitch batting practice for the Phoenix Giants, but they wanted to use him as a mop up pitcher, so he went home to nearby Chandler, Ariz., and sold real estate.

In early May, Bob Cluck of San Diego contacted him and asked if he wanted to pitch in double AA. It was an opportunity to see if any of the magic remained and Bo grabbed the opportunity.

HE RELIEVED for two or three weeks and is now 3-0 as a starter. "They are playing super defense behind me," says the appreciative 30-year-old pitcher, "And we are getting runs and I've been consistent." All in all, it has been fun. And if things keep going like this, it might even become profitable, if he makes it back to the majors.

There hasn't been a shutout in Cubs Stadium in two years, but for six innings it looked like Bo might end the drought. But after a single by Carlos Lezcano, he issued his only walk to A.J. Hill with two outs in the seventh and then Rick Baker singled home the Cubs' first run.

In the eighth, Mike Anicich deposited his eighth homer of the season over the wall at the angle in left-center. All have come since May 21.

RON RICHARDSON took the loss, his fifth in six decisions, but it was one of his best pitching jobs in Cubs Stadium. It was a five-run third that did him in, an inning that might never have happened, if he'd been able to get over to first in time on Ozzie Guillen's chopper to the right of the mound. Or if Steve Johnson hadn't dumped a broken bat single into short right. Or Bill Hatcher, who never drops fly balls, hadn't dropped a fly ball in left. The Gators didn't get a solid hit until Guillen, the 10th batter, singled to right, but right fielder Carlos Lezcano gunned down Pat Casey trying to score from second. However, the five runs were already home and the damage done.

Guillen wound up as the hero of the Gators 14-single attack with four.

For Midland, Trey Brooks collected three of the 11 hits off McLaughlin.

In tonight's 7:30 p.m. game, Carlos Gil, 3-5, will pitch for the Cubs.

Rangers' Honeycutt grounds Mariners in 10-0 win

By The Associated Press

It was a new experience for Texas Rangers pitcher Rick Honeycutt.

"I don't think I've ever thrown a complete game without a strikeout," Honeycutt said after he did exactly that in a 10-0 drubbing of Seattle Tuesday night.

"Sometimes your ego can get in the way and you want to throw the ball hard and overpower people. Well, I think that I've matured enough to realize that the most important thing is winning, and that it doesn't matter how."

Honeycutt, 8-3, fashioned a sinker-ball gem in shutting out the Mariners, getting 20 of the 27 outs on ground balls as he became the fourth major league pitcher to win eight games this season.

He faced just 28 batters, one over the minimum, and allowed only four baserunners on three hits and a walk. He threw 89 pitches and picked off one runner — his eighth pickoff of the year. Double plays erased two others.

Texas scored five times before Seattle starter and loser Bob Stoddard, 4-7, could get an out, and ended up with six runs in the first inning.

Pete O'Brien's two-run homer highlighted the first inning explosion that saw the Rangers send 11 men to the plate. Three singles, a wild pitch, a passed ball, a hit batter and an error on a double play ball also contributed to the scoring binge. Before the night was over, the Mariners added two more errors to help seal their own fate.

Of the 277 outs in his 12 starts this season, Honeycutt has recorded 165, or 60 percent, on ground balls, and 22 of the team's 47 double plays have come with him on the mound.

Honeycutt lowered his ERA to 1.66, tops among American League starting pitchers and second only to Detroit reliever Aurelio Lopez.

Orioles 6, Brewers 4

The Orioles played longball in turning back the Brewers 6-4, a victory made complete when a black cat streaked across the field late in the game.

"I didn't mind the black cat," said Milwaukee Manager Harvey Kuenn. "It was the four homers that gave us trouble."

Eddie Murray drilled a two-run homer and Gary Roenicke homered on Caldwell's next pitch to give Baltimore a 3-0 lead in the first inning.

Benny Ayala, a lifetime .500 hitter against Caldwell, made his first start of the season and belted a solo homer in the fourth. Rich Dauer, mired in a 5-for-53 slump but starting because of a .390 career average against Caldwell, added a solo homer in the seventh off reliever Bob Gibson.

White Sox 12, Angels 11

It was a wild night in California, where Chicago overcame an early deficit and then held off the Angels.

The Angels built a quick 6-1 lead as Daryl Sconiers, Reggie Jackson and Fred Lynn homered in the third inning, tying a team record for home runs in an inning.

But Chicago scored five times in the sixth and then took an 11-7 lead in the eighth by scoring four times, three on Greg Luzinski's double.

Then it was California's turn to come back as it tied the scores with four runs in the bottom of the ninth, three on Ron Jackson's homer.

Chicago won it in the 10th as Tony Bernazard drew a one-out walk from Andy Hassler, and one out later, scored on Luzinski's double.

Indians 2, Yankees 1

Toby Harrah's one-out single in the 10th inning drove in the winning run as Cleveland beat New York reliever Rich Gossage.

Yankees starter Dave Righetti took a three-hit shutout into the ninth, but was pulled after giving up Bake McBride's one-out single. Gossage then came on, but the Indians tied the score on singles by Manny Trillo and Broderick Perkins.

In the 10th, Ron Hassey singled, was sacrificed to second and scored on Harrah's single. Gossage fell to 2-2 while Cleveland reliever Neal Heaton raised his record to 5-2.

Royals 9, Twins 4

Hal McRae doubled twice and singled and drove in four runs as Kansas City left-hander Larry Gura broke his own seven-game losing streak.

Gura, 5-7, worked six innings, giving up four runs on eight hits, including homers by Kent Hrbek and Mickey Hatcher.

Dan Quisenberry recorded his 13th save. Ken Schrom, 4-1, took his first major league loss.

Tigers 4, Red Sox 2

Milt Wilcox pitched a five-hitter and got all the runs he needed in the first inning when Detroit collected five hits and scored four times, capped by John Wockenfuss' two-run homer.

John Tudor, 3-4, victim of Detroit's first-inning uprising, settled down and retired 25 of the last 26 batters. Tudor finished with a six-hitter.

Wilcox, 6-6, bidding for his third straight shutout, yielded Tony Armas' 11th homer in the seventh inning. Dwight Evans, Jim Rice and Armas had consecutive singles in the ninth for Boston's othev run.

Rangers 10, Mariners 0

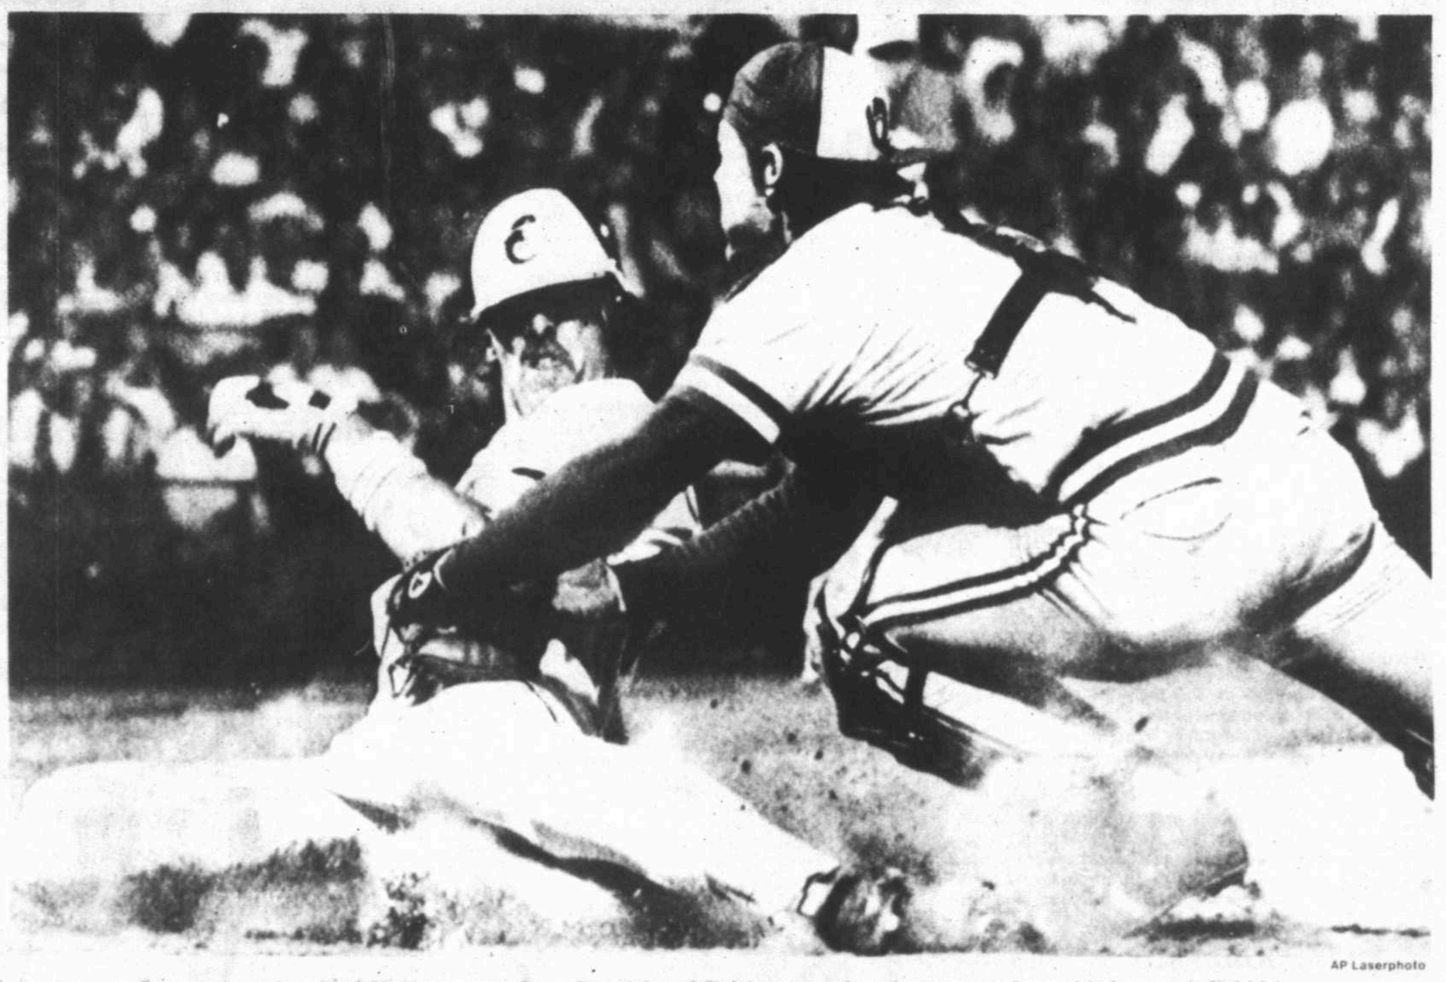

Rick Honeycutt upped his record to 8-3 and lowered his earned run average to 1.66 with a three-hitter. Seattle starter Bob Stoddard didn't fare as well; he did not retire any of the five batters he faced.

Texas sent 11 men to the plate in the first inning and scored six runs, two on Pete O'Brien's homer. Wayne Tolleson singled twice in the first inning and the Rangers finished with 15 hits.

A's 5, Blue Jays 3

Tim Conroy and Steve Baker combined for seven strong inning of relief after taking over for ailing Oakland stater Mike Norris.

Toronto had just four hits in the game, three by Willie Upshaw, including his 10th homer of the season.

Congress may ban boxing

WASHINGTON (AP) — For more than 25 years attempts have been made to outlaw boxing. Another is in the works.

The House Education and Labor Committee approved Tuesday, by voice vote, legislation to create a 10-member panel to study the sport of boxing and make recommendations on reform to the Congress.

Over the objections of one of the chief proponents, however, the committee adopted an amendment to have the study panel decide "whether boxing as a professional sport should be abolished."

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., amendment sponsor, said the outlawing of professional boxing "would move us in the direction this nation should be going.

"It is intolerable that this goes by the name of sport," he said. "We pay two poor kids to knock each other's brains out. For us to tolerate something like that and call it sport...when its aim is to do damage to the brain is intolerable."

Rep. Ronald C. Packard, R-Calif., agreeing with Simon, said, "We've outlawed animals killing animals and humans killing animals in bullfighting but we permit humans to beat humans."

Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont., one of the chief sponsors of the bill, said the Simon amendment would jeopardize passage of legislation because proponents of boxing reform do not want to outlaw the sport.

"The bill will die and we will have to wait another 25 years for action," he said. "We're trying to reform a sick sport."

Despite Williams' pleadings, the Simon amendment was adopted on a 12-11 vote, with most of the committee's Republicans voting for and most Democrats against.

After the vote, Williams said it was an easy vote for most of the committee members to vote to have the study panel look into the possibility of prohibiting professional boxing.

"They can tell their constituents back home that they voted to outlaw boxing when, in fact, they're voting for a commission to make recommendations on boxing reform."

Under the Williams proposal, the main purpose of study panel would be to make recommendations for the establishment either in the federal government or in the private sector of a central boxing commission "for the promulgation and enforcement of standards."

The House Energy and Commerce Committee already has approved legislation to create a 10-member boxing study commission.

New Jersey nets Albeck

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — San Antonio Coach Stan Albeck appears to be on his way to becoming the head coach of the New Jersey Nets, the owner of the National Basketball Association team says.

"Everything looks like he should be our coach," Nets' owner Joe Taub said late Tuesday night. "He wants to come here and we want him."

Taub said he felt the signing of Albeck was imminent, adding: "I'm hoping we can wrap it up."

On Tuesday, the Nets were given permission to negotiate with Albeck, and the team agreed in return to give the Spurs a second-round draft choice, a reported $300,000 cash and the rights to forward Fred Roberts.

The settlement, announced by NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien, follows a court battle over the rights to Albeck, whom the Nets want to replace Larry Brown. Brown left the Nets to become head coach at the University of Kansas shortly before the end of the regular NBA season.

Jay Rosenfeld, a spokesman for the Nets, said the team immediately began negotiations in New York with Jerry Davis, Albeck's agent.

Taub said Albeck, who was in San Antonio Tuesday, was "alerted" to leave for New Jersey if a contract agreement was reached.

Albeck, who had two years to run on a three-year agreement with the Spurs at $175,000 a year, claimed that his commitment to the Spurs was by verbal agreement, not by written contract.

Albeck guided the Spurs to first place in the Midwest Division this season with a 53-29 record and into the Western Conference finals, where they lost to Los Angeles in six games. But he mainteined that he had been blamed by Angelo Drossos, the team's president, for losing the sixth and final game of the series to the Lakers. Drossos has denied that.

Last Friday, a judge in San Antonio ruled that Albeck was the property of the Spurs.

Carlton passes 'Ryan's Express', 'Big Train' but loses

By The Associated Press

Walter Johnson's strikeout record stood for 55 years. But this season, it's being broken right and left.

First right-hander Nolan Ryan of the Houston Astros smashed the hallowed record of the "Big Train" when he zipped past the career 3,508-strikeout mark earlier this season.

And Tuesday night left-hander Steve Carlton of the Philadelphia Phillies moved past Ryan, although his historic achievement was spoiled by a 2-1 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals.

"He pitched good enough to win. We just didn't score him enough runs," said Mike Schmidt, whose homer provided the Phillies with their only run of the night against Bob Forsch.

Carlton struck out six to boost his career total to 3,526 — two more than Ryan, who ironically pitched on the same night and fanned three in five innings during a 4-2 win over the San Francisco Giants.

Carlton's night would have been perfect, except for a bad pitch to George Hendrick in the first inning. The St. Louis outfielder slugged it for a two-run homer and the Cardinals' eventual winning run.

"It was a breaking ball up to Hendrick," said Corrales. "He's a big strong guy and there it went. That was the ballgame."

Carlton, a four-time Cy Young Award winner, tied Ryan with his 3,521st career strikeout by throwing a called strike past Mike Ramsey in the second inning, and he broke the record one inning later when Lonnie Smith lunged at a fastball.

Astros 4, Giants 2

Ryan, meanwhile, battled control problems in his shortened stint against the Giants, walking in a run in the second inning. Ryan allowed all three of San Francisco's hits in five innings while Frank LaCorte, 4-2, and Frank DiPino finished up with hitless relief.

Tony Scott's double keyed a two-run seventh that broke a 2-2 tie for the Astros.

"He just wants to win ball games," said LaCorte of Ryan. "There was a lot of pressure on him to break Walter (Johnson's strikeout) record, and now he's done it. He was first, and that was all that mattered. Now he just wants to help the ballclub."

Ryan, returning from a hamstring pull suffered May 12, threw 90 pitches over five innings, and was clocked at an average of 94 miles per hour with a high of 97 mph.

Braves 4, Dodgers 1

Atlanta took advantage of three seventh-inning throwing errors and scored the tie-breaking run on Chris Chambliss's sacrifice fly as the Braves beat Los Angeles.

With the Dodgers ahead 1-0, Dale Murphy opened the decisive seventh by reaching second base when Steve Sax threw wide of first for the first error.

Murphy then scored the tying run and Bob Horner reached second when Pedro Guerrero fielded a grounder at third and overthrew first. First baseman Greg Brock then overthrew home trying to nail Murphy, allowing Horner to reach third. Chambliss then hit the first pitch into right field to drive in Horner with the decisive run.

The Braves added two runs in the eighth on a homer by Claudell Washington, his second, after Brett Butler singled and moved to second on a sacrifice.

Cubs 6, Mets 1

Ryne Sandberg drove in two runs, including the tie-breaker in the seventh, to lead Chicago over New York for the Cubs' sixth straight victory.

The Mets tied it 1-1 in the top of the seventh on Rusty Staub's pinch single. But loser Jesse Orosco, 3-2, walked two batters in the bottom of the seventh before Sandberg singled to score Larry Bowa.

Then shortstop Bob Bailor and center fielder Mookie Wilson collided on Bill Buckner's pop fly and two more runs scored on the error, charged to Bailor. The Cubs scored two more in the eighth, one of them unearned because of an error by Brian Giles.

Chuck Rainey, 6-4, was the winner with relief help from Bill Campbell over the last two innings.

Pirates 3, Expos 2

Lee Mazzilli and Johnny Ray hit run-scoring singles as Pittsburgh snapped a sixth-inning tie and went on to beat Montreal and break a six-game losing streak.

With the score tied 1-1 and two out in the sixth, Expos starter Charlie Lea, 3-2, walked Dale Berra and pitcher John Candelaria and Mazzilli stroked successive singles for a 2-1 Montreal lead. Candelaria, who took third on Mazzilli's hit, coasted home as Ray followed with a single to center for a 3-1 Pittsburgh lead.

Candelaria, 4-6, earned the victory with relief help from Manny Sarmiento and Kent Tekulve.

Padres 7, Reds 3

Eric Show tossed a six-hitter for his seventh victory and Terry Kennedy drove home the go-ahead run with a sacrifice fly in the fifth inning to lead San Diego over Cincinnati.

Show, 7-2, gave up two of the Cincinnati runs on a homer by Johnny Bench en route to his third straight victory. Show walked three and struck out two. Mario Soto, 7-4, failed for the second time to gain his eighth victory.

Alabama rolls past Michigan in CWS

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Troy Brauchle usually sits in the bullpen until the seventh or eighth inning, and sometimes even until the ninth when the plot has thickened.

"When I come to the ballpark I don't even loosen up," said the Alabama junior reliever. "I sit there and wait for the sign from the dugout to start throwing.

"After about 15 pitches, I'm ready to go to the mound."

Brauchle received that summons in a precarious situation Tuesday night when Alabama led Michigan 6-5 in the bottom of the ninth.

With two outs, runners at first and second, and the count at two balls and no strikes, Brauchle entered the do-or-die situation.

His first pitch to Chuck Froning was a ball for a 3-0 count. The next three were strikes with the last one hit to shortstop for the final out and Alabama's victory over Michigan that sent the Tide into the finals of the winner's bracket against Texas in the 37th annual College World Series.

Michigan meets Stanford and Oklahoma State meets Arizona State Wednesday night in the loser's bracket of the double-elimination event.

Alabama and Texas, both undefeated in tourney play, meet Thursday night.

Alabama, 45-9, has won its last 15 outings, including two games over national champion Miami, Fla., in the NCAA South Regional to earn a spot here.

Tim Meacham, 6-0, got the call for Alabama in the seventh to relieve starter Rick Browne, who had lost a 6-0 Alabama lead, yet with help from his friends boosted his record to 12-1.

Some of that help came from David Magadan, college baseball's leading hitter at .539, who set a college world series record for most consecutive hits in a series, including a three-for-four performance in the game.

Garvey leaving NFLPA job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ed Garvey apparently is on his way out as executive director of the National Football League Players Association.

Garvey, who has held the job for 13 years, said Tuesday night, "If I do anything but stay with the union, it would be return to Wisconsin in some capacity."

The Boston Globe quoted sources as saying Garvey would resign at an NFLPA awards banquet in Chicago on Sunday to become a Wisconsin assistant attorney general.

"I want to and talk with the players and then decide what's in everyone's best interests," Garvey said in a telephone interview late Tuesday night. "I will have have no comment until I meet with the board this week. The decision whether or not to leave is mine and mine alone."

The Globe reported that Garvey, who led the union in a 57-day strike last fall, will be temporarily replaced by NFLPA President Gene Upshaw, who has served in that post for the past three years.

"It is his (Garvey's) decision, whatever he decides to do," Upshaw said from his home in the San Francisco area. "The board is going to meet in Chicago this weekend. We've been mandated by the board of player reps to negotiate a new contract with him. We as the executive committee will make him an offer. It's up to him to accept or reject.

"Until he decides what he's going to do, I can't decide what I'm going to do. I've never done anything on a temporary basis. Whenever I get into something, it's for the long haul."

Tulsa loses, 6-3

Second baseman Terry Pendleton singled to drive in the tying run and Mark Salas doubled to score two more in a five-run fifth inning as Arkansas posted a 6-3 win over Tulsa in Texas League play.

Elsewhere, Mark Schuster scored both runs for Shreveport in a 2-1 victory over Jackson and the game between El Paso and San Antonio was postponed when a power failure hit San Antonio's V.J. Keefe Stadium. (AP)

Economist finds new answers

By WARREN T. BROOKES
Hearst Feature Service

Over the past three or four years, most economists have agreed that there has been a shocking decline in America's rate of productivity growth, from nearly 3 percent per year in the 1950s and '60s, down to less than 1 percent in the last eight or nine years. Indeed, much of supply-side economics got its stimulus from this so-called "productivity crisis."

There is at least one economist whose research argues that the whole thing is the result of what he calls "statistical myopia," the failure to look beyond superficial data into what is really happening.

The economist is Michael Darby of UCLA, and he makes his controversial case in a Working Paper for the National Bureau of Economic Research (NBER 1018) that "a careful analysis within the perspective of the entire 20th century discloses no substantial variation in what is variously described as growth in total factor productivity or technical progress."

Prof. Darby argues that when you adjust the productivity figures for the obvious changes in immigration, population, age and sex to get what he calls a "quality-adjusted" labor force, you find that there is no difference in productivity trends in any of the three major economic cycles of the 20th century, 1900-1929, 1929-65 and 1965-1978.

In other words, if you factor out the impact of the baby-boom, the changes in the average age of the work force, and its male-female composition, virtually all productivity variations disappear.

"Thus," Darby argues, "it appears that there is no substantial variation in private productivity growth trends to be explained by variations in government regulation, oil prices, the failure of American management, labor, or any of the other popular whipping boys."

As Darby told us, "We're trying to find answers to a problem that doesn't exist," referring to current supply-side economic policies. "These policies may be desirable for other reasons, but they have little real influence on the basic productivity trends."

Darby argues that as our population grows older and as females are more completely integrated in the work force, productivity will come surging back to earlier levels.

One problem with Darby's argument, of course, is that he looks at very long population trend periods, while the greatest productivity changes have come over the last 15 years or so, from 1965 to 1978, when the published growth rates dropped from 3 percent to less than 1 percent per year. To that, Darby responds that most of that decline in average growth was the result of seven "bad" quarters in 1973 and 1974, when productivity actually dropped by a whopping 4.2 percent, or 3 points more than that recession could have predicted.

While most analysts have tended to blame this sharp fall-off on the run-up in OPEC prices, Darby finds an altogether different, and to us, more persuasive reason.

He reminds us that this whole period, from 1971 to 1974, was statistically distorted by the presence of price controls, which always result (in the early stages) in an under-reporting of actual price inflation, and therefore an over-estimation of real output or productivity — while the reverse takes place when price controls come off, as inflation is over-reported and productivity is under-reported.

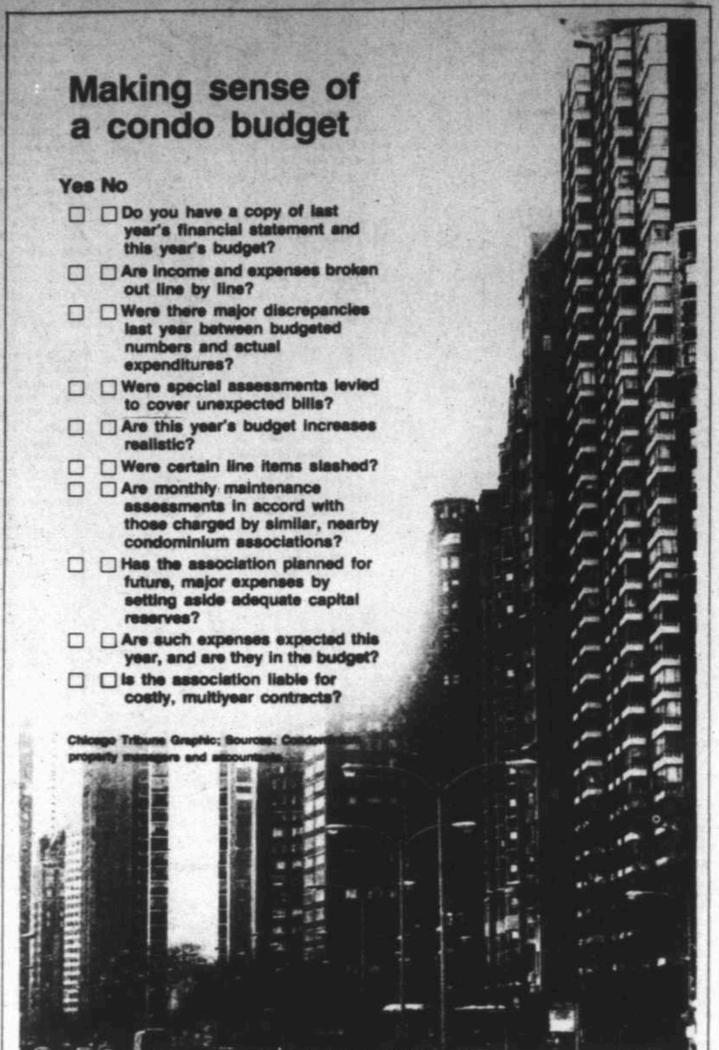

When Darby applies econometric analysis to factor out these statistical "glitches," he finds that even though the raw data suggest that the productivity growth from 1965-73 (2.0 percent) was more than twice as much as the rate from 1973-78 (0.9 percent), the actual growth rates for both periods was the same (1.6 percent). In short, he says there was no "sharp fall-off" in productivity between these two periods, as has been widely reported. Darby even dismisses OPEC's role in our productivity decline. "The oil price increases of 1973-74 do not appear to have played a major role in slowing productivity growth."

Darby's hypothesis is directly challenged in Martin Feldstein's text on President Reagan's 1983 economic message. While Feldstein admits that because of demographic changes "labor productivity growth would have slowed somewhat in the 1970s, regardless of the policies adopted (due to the baby-boom generation entering the job market)," he also argues for some of the "causes" which Darby dismisses.

So, who is right? The answer, to a degree, may well be both. Unquestionably, the productivity crisis has been exaggerated. That's the nature of our media-hyped society. And a measure of this "crisis" is the result of a changing population and work force, over which we have had no control. There may well also be some statistical "glitches" that would explain the more extreme swings in the productivity numbers.

But of one thing we can be sure: Even if our productivity decline has been overstated, we can't ignore that Darby's "adjusted" U.S. numbers are still about a third of the current productivity performance of Japan — and that's not just "statistical myopia."

Making sense of a condo budget

CLEC's clucking 'baloney,' IPAA says

By TOD ROBBERSON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Independent Petroleum Association of America has labeled as "a bunch of baloney" a consumer-activist group's report citing a 159 percent increase in natural gas profits by the nation's top petroleum companies since 1978.

The Citizen/Labor Energy Coalition released a report Monday alleging that the average price of natural gas for residential use has increased 125 percent since Congress passed the Natural Gas Policy Act in 1978.

At the same time, the report says, "24 of the nation's largest gas producers have increased their profit margins on the production of natural gas by 159 percent ... while their production decreased by 22 percent."

Peter Wellish, director of communications for IPAA, said the report's findings "are not really worth acknowledging," after which he gave the report various ratings ranging from "absolute drivel" to "a bunch of baloney."

"These studies are created by a bunch of brain-addled minds", Wellish said, and he alleged that CLEC is "run by a bunch of socialists."

Ed Rothschild, spokesman for CLEC, said that "neither of those are responses to the study," and that Wellish's remarks "are not worthy of a head of the IPAA."

Rothschild acknowledged that the CLEC study involved selected petroleum companies and that the methodology used in the study is arguable.

Asked whether the study involved the top 24 oil and gas producers in the nation, Rothschild said that it included companies "on the bottom side of the top 24" that are "not necessarily the largest" in the nation.

The study, which included statistics from corporate annual reports, Securities and Exchange Commission records and Census Bureau surveys, says that oil and gas companies have shown greater interest in natural gas production and that "they spent 27 percent more on drilling for natural gas than on drilling for oil."

Yet, despite the increased expenditures and profits cited by the study, production of natural gas actually decreased by 22 percent, the study says.

Rothschild acknowledged that the same criteria for determining relative expenditures on gas production were applied to all companies in the study, regardless of whether the majority of their business is gas production as opposed to oil production.

The CLEC study comes two months after the organization officially endorsed a natural gas bill by Reps. Richard Gephardt (D-Mo.) and Dan Glickman (D-Kan.) calling for extended controls on new gas until January 1987 and indefinite maintenance of controls on old gas.

"If Congress listens to the major gas producers and the Reagan administration, who want to speed up the decontrol schedule, consumers' bills are likely to increase by 67 percent between 1983 and 1986," CLEC said in its endorsement. "Such price increases will provide no additional gas supplies, but will simply transfer billions of dollars from residential, commercial and industrial gas consumers to gas producers."

In a prepared statement, Rep. Thomas Loeffler (R-Hunt, Tex.) said that CLEC is "the leader and major proponent for federal recontrol of not only natural gas but all of our nation's energy resources. CLEC has yet to understand ... that our nation's independent oil and gas producers discover more than 80 percent of all our new oil and gas and reinvest more than a 100 percent of their earnings into exploration, development and production.

"If past CLEC studies are any indication, this report is not worth the paper on which it was printed," Loeffler added.

Here is a list of the 24 oil companies used in the CLEC study. Exxon, Standard Oil of Indiana, Texaco, Shell, Mobil, Gulf, Arco, Socal, Union, Tenneco, Getty, Sun, Phillips, Cities Service, Superior Oil, DuPont, El Paso Natural Gas, Pennzoil, U.S. Steel, Amerada Hess, Union Pacific, Mesa, Kerr McGee and LaLand.

June time for building

Building permit activity in June got off to a good start last week when the city of Midland issued one permit for the second phase of an apartment complex and another for Union Texas Petroleum's new five-story office in northeast Midland.

Both are projects owned and built by Houston firms.

Campbell Housing, Houston, received a permit to begin construction on phase II of an apartment complex at 516 North Loop 250 and Manchester Street. Manchester Associates, also of Houston, is the developer of the 142-unit, two story project, which carries a $2.4 million price tag.

Phase I, consisting of 136 units, was announced in April.

Houston construction firm Tribble and Stephens received its permit to begin work on Union Texas Petroleum's five story, $3.7 million office building announced last month. The structure will have 100,882 square feet of space and is to be located at 4000 North Big Spring Street.

Deter Construction, Odessa, was issued permits for four single family residences in the 4700 block of West Princeton. Prices range from $30,780 to $35,000.

Ramcon Homes received five permits for new homes on Hopi Court in northeast Midland. Valuations range from $30,000 to $33,000.

The city issued 12 permits for new homes in all.

Total valuations for the week, combining both residential and commercial structures, were $6.59 million, bringing the 1983 total to $81,862,964.

Canvass to cover Tall City

Representatives of R.L. Polk & Co. will soon hit the streets of Midland to gather information for a new city directory. The canvassers will be calling at all residences and businesses in town.

Polk directories are not phone directories, which only list the names of those having telephones, rather it is intended to be a complete list of all residents of the city, their families and occupations. The directories are most frequently used by businesses, governmental agencies and emergency services, the news media and others with a need to contact a city's citizens directly.

Bille Fuller, who is in Midland coordinating the canvass for Polk, said the companies representatives will be wearing large, round, predomiantely white buttons with blue and red printing. Polk employees will also be carrying an identification card. Person's not having the button and card are not Polk employees.

Polk is hiring Midlanders to cover the city, and those who call at homes and business will be Midland residents. Calls will be made only between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Polk employees are not allowed to enter homes. The Polk staff will be asking for basic information only: the name of the householder, where the householder is employed, the number of children living at the home, and the names of children 18 and older who are living at home.

Fuller said the Midland Police Department and the Better Business Bureau have been notified of Polk's planned activity.

Alaskan oil export ban will cost $2.4 billion, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A ban on exporting Alaska oil out of a "mistaken conception" that the prohibition enhances the nation's energy security will cost the U.S. economy about $2.4 billion over the next decade, according to a study done for a Japanese-owned firm.

The study, released Tuesday by the company which wants to market Alaskan oil in Japan, supports the Reagan administration's assertion that lifting the ban would ease international trade tensions, improve the U.S. balance of trade and reduce federal deficits.

The administration's efforts to end the ban have been stymied by a lack of support in Congress and opposition from U.S. ship owners, builders and unions. Those who favor allowing some Alaskan oil to go overseas said Tuesday that the earliest the ban might be lifted in the existing political climate is 1985.

Almost two-thirds of the net economic loss will be in forfeited federal taxes, the study said. It concluded that the only beneficiary of the ban is the American maritime industry.

William Hogan, an author of the study and a political economist at Harvard University, said the cost of transporting Alaskan oil to Gulf coast refineries aboard U.S. tankers is about 10 times greater than shipping it to Japan, Korea or Asian markets aboard foreign-registered tankers.

"If the ban remains in effect over the next decade," he said, "it will take $5.7 billion from taxpayers, Alaska and oil companies, and give $3.3 billion to the martime interests, for a net loss of $2.4 billion."

About one-half of the 1.6 million barrels a day produced from Alaska's North Slope is shipped to California refineries at a transportation cost of $1.40 a barrel. The other half is shipped through the Panama Canal to refineries on the Gulf coast at an average transportation cost of $5.25 a barrel.

According to the study, Alaskan oil could be shipped to Japan or other Asian markets at a cost of 50 cents a barrel aboard foreign registered tankers or at a $1.10 a barrel using U.S. flagships.

The study was conducted by a Cambridge, Mass., consulting firm for Alaska Lumber & Pulp Co., a Japanese-owned company with timber interests in Alaska.

Jim Clark, an attorney for Alaska Lumber & Pulp, said the company wants to market Alaskan oil in Japan to smooth out its cash flow from the more cyclical timber industry.

Hogan said the reduced transportion costs would allow the companies which own most of the Alaskan oil — Exxon, Standard Oil of Ohio and Atlantic Richfield — to raise the wellhead price without affecting consumer prices in the United States.

About 59 percent of any price increase would go to the U.S. Treasury through the windfall profits tax and corporate income taxes, the study said. The windfall profits tax, passed by Congress in 1980 following accelerated decontrol of oil prices, is actually a tax on sales prices, not on oil industry profits.

The study noted that about 40 percent of U.S. tanker tonnage is more than 15 years old and 53 percent of the average maritime workforce is above the age of 50.

It said natural attrition and retirement would permit the export of 550,000 barrels a day of Alaskan oil by 1990 with "no adverse impact on the existing maritime trade ... if U.S. oil export policy protected only the exisiting ships and workers."

The Maritime Trades Department of the AFL-CIO has said that exporting 500,000 barrles a day would idle 35 to 40 U.S. tankers and cost about 20,000 jobs in shipping and related industries.

Court debates origin of lunch

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The court convened solemnly at noon, the lawyers argued the pros and cons of the tricky issue and spread the evidence before the judge. And then, they drank Exhibit A.

Draining the last drop of his martini, Judge Daniel M. Hanlon pronounced his judgment: the delicious idea of mixing gin and vermouth originated in San Francisco.

So ended Tuesday's session of the Court of Historical Review and Appeals, a tongue-in-cheek tribunal trying to ascertain the birthplace of the martini.

While the court was unofficial, the players — and the evidence — were real.

Hanlon, a San Francisco Superior Court judge, said the mock court gives him, prosecuting and defense lawyers and witnesses a chance to loosen up during the lunch hour. Other topics that have been discussed in the court, which convenes a few times a year, include the origin of the hot dog.

San Francisco Supervisor Louise Renne won her case Tuesday, contending "there can be absolutely no doubt whatsoever that the martini originated here in San Francisco."

But the claims of Italy, Ireland, New York and Martinez, Calif., got a full hearing.

One story has it that Jerry Thomas, bartender at the Occidental Hotel in San Francisco, mixed the first martini there in 1862. But then New York enters the picture because Thomas published a popular bartender's guide there in 1865 that included a recipe for "Martinez Cocktail."

Then there's the story of a young Frenchman named Julio Richelieu, who claimed to have invented the cocktail in 1870 at his Martinez, Calif., bar.

The carefully researched testimony was based on historic accounts, riddled with jokes and punctuated with discerning sips from martini pitchers perched on the judge's and lawyers' desks.

Harre Demoro, historian and self-styled "student of drinking," argued that Thomas perfected the martini in New York, adding "anything that happened in San Francisco was a laboratory test."

But Ms. Renne scoffed at the idea.

"In a city called the Big Apple, it would be impossible for a sophisticated drink like the martini to be invented," she said.

Testimony by Edward Moose, owner of the Washington Square Bar and Grill, seemed to turn the tide toward the San Francisco story.

Mixing a pitcher of martinis and pouring drinks for the judge and opposing attorneys, he said, "This is the drink that would make even the hardened New Yorker realize and appreciate the glories of the San Francisco martini."

Why green olives? demanded one lawyer.

"The argument goes that originally the olive was put in to mask the perfumed wine that was used in the original version of the martini," Moose answered. "But we think it prevents a certain amount of malnutrition."

The judge weighed the testimony, sampling two martinis along the way, and rendered his decision: "Let it hereafter be known that the martini cocktail was originated in San Francisco."

Hunters slay goats on San Clemente Island

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A cadre of hired hunters killed 650 wild goats on San Clemente Island, and the three-man team planned to return to the island later this week to "finish the contract," the Navy said.

The body count from the three-day kill was higher than expected. It was originally thought no more than 200 goats were left on the shell-torn island that the Navy uses as a bombardment range, Navy spokesman Ken Mitchell said Monday.

The hunters returned to San Diego on Monday when overcast skies and fog prevented them from completing an aerial survey of the hunt's results, Mitchell said.

The hunters, armed with shotguns, spent the weekend in low-flying helicopters, firing their weapons as the goats were flushed from deep caves and brush on the desolate island.

The carcasses are being left where the animals die.

The Navy is spending $50,000 to rid the island of goats in an effort to comply with federal laws aimed at protecting several types of endangered plant and animal species on the island, Mitchell said.

He said the hunters would return to the 57-square-mile island, 65 miles northwest of San Diego, on Thursday to track down the surviving goats.

The hunters are led by Dr. Steve Carothers, an environmental consultant from Flagstaff, Ariz.

Since the early 1970s, the Navy has trapped or killed more than 15,000 of the fast-producing goats, thought to be descendants of a tiny herd left behind by Spanish explorers 200 years ago.

Name-calling yields to brotherhood

ATLANTA (AP) — To Presbyterian Yankees of about a century ago, Southerners were rebels and traitors. But to Dixie, the Northerners were tyrants and oppressors of regional rights and culture.

That was the bitter hostility in which Presbyterians of the nation broke apart in 1861 at the start of the Civil War — a split that will be officially healed Friday after 122 years.

The rapprochement, being readied today by assembled church representatives from across the country, has been slow and difficult in coming.

"It means the healing of a deep wound that has embarrassed Presbyterians for more than a century," said the Rev. Aubrey N. Brown of Richmond, Va.

Despite the political reconciliation between the North and the South, "people hold onto things of religious conviction longer than anything else," he said.

"They had to wait for the spirit to move them, and it finally has moved us," said Brown, 75, retired editor of Presbyterian Outlook.

A mood of gladness and nostalgia prevailed as delegates of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. (Southern), and of the United Presbyterian Church, went through final stages of their separate lives.

Much of the closing-out work dealt with financial and legal matters, preparatory to the shift Friday into a merged body, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The combined church will total about 3.2 million Presbyterians, making it the fourth-largest denomination among U.S. Protestants, behind Southern Baptists, United Methodists and National Baptists.

At simultaneous but separate worship services Tuesday night, held in adjacent halls at the Georgia World Congress Center, the vigorous hymnsinging of each assembly could be heard by the other.

"We have fought each other to the point there is no longer a moral position to draw on," the Rev. Irvin Eligan of Miami told the Southern throng, deploring the bickering of the past.

"What an indictment of the church," he said, adding that both sides shared in guilt for the division. "Insignificant differences were magnified into reasons other than defending the faith."

The Rev. James Costen of Atlanta, outgoing moderator of United Presbyterians, told its concurrent opening worship service that "we are standing on tiptoes ... expecting great things in the name of Christ."

The long-ago Presbyterian split, perpetuated out of differences in custom and style rather than basic theology or the slavery issue that provoked it, occurred after an 1861 assembly declared loyalty to the federal government.

Employers urged to be sensitive

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Employers must understand working parents' needs to care for their childrren, 40 business executives from Tennessee have been told.

The first of three regional White House conferences on day care for working parents was cosponsored Tuesday by Honey Alexander, wife of Gov. Lamar Alexander, and the President's Advisory Council on Private Sector Initiatives.

A luncheon meeting is planned at Portland, Ore., Thursday and a breakfast meeting is scheduled June 21 at Hartford, Conn.

Among options suggested are flexible working hours, job sharing and part-time work to enable parents to care for children and to provide for emergency care or after-school care. Child care as an optional benefit, such as insurance or sick leave, also was suggested.

DAYTON, Ohio — The Wright Brothers would be amazed if they returned to their native Dayton today. Instead of the waving grass of Huffman Prairie, where they held many of their early test flights, they would find a vast collection of hundreds of aircraft, missiles and other aeronautical wonders which they could have only dreamed about.

The U.S. Air Force Museum occupies the old Huffman Prairie area, which is now a part of Wright-Patterson Air Force Base. The museum, open to the public, is the star attraction of the recently developed Wright Aviation Trail, a collection of Wright-related sites in Dayton, as well as other historical sites in the area.

The museum is the oldest and largest air museum in the world, and its collection ranges from the earliest flimsy craft to the latest in space hardware. Its collection fills a huge hangarlike exhibition building and overflows onto two airfields.

Man has always cast his eyes upward, looking longingly into the sky. He has imitated birds in his attempt to cast free the bonds of gravity. Brightly colored Chinese kites and prints of Icarus circling the sun greet visitors to the museum's exhibit on early flight. Drawings by Leonardo da Vinci and pictures of Civil War balloon reconnaissance missions show man's early attempts to get into the air.

Around a bend, the museum's first aircraft is about to take off. And standing nearby are Orville and Wilbur. They made the world's first powered, heavier-than-air flight from the sandy dunes of Kitty Hawk on Dec. 17, 1903. But, while the first flight was taken in Virginia, the Wrights often said they actually learned to fly in Dayton, making test flights there in 1904 and 1905.

Although the flimsy canvas and stick contraption on display in the museum resembles the first powered airplane, it is actually a later, improved version. The Wrights developed the Wright Military Flyer for the Army's Signal Corps in 1909 and, in effect, began the U.S. Air Force. The model on display is a reproduction of that first military flyer, using many of the original parts.

The next section is dear to the hearts of World War I veterans and those members of the younger generation who still get a thrill out of visions of gallant dogfights over the French countryside. This is the era when "flying by the seat of your pants" was the accepted practice.

Here visitors see the famous Curtiss JN4-d "Jenny" and the Sopwith Camel, as well as other early planes. While the museum stressed Air Force history and development, it is not confined to it. One of the museum's prized possessions is the Douglas World Cruiser "New Orleans," one of two Douglas-built planes that were the first to circle the globe in 1924.

The path through aviation history winds around through a virtual forest of aircraft. The Curtiss P-6E Hawk, the last known to exist, is considered one of the most beautiful biplanes ever built. The Martin B-10 bomber is also a one-of-a-kind plane. Many future World War II aces trained in the T-6 Texan trainer.

World War II brought a real revolution to fighting aircraft and many of the planes on display have since become almost household words, especially to veterans and old war film buffs. There is a B-25 Mitchell bomber like those used to bomb Tokyo, and a P-38 Lightning. The P-47 Thunderbolt was the last propeller-driven fighter plane, while the P-51 Mustang is known to almost everyone. The jet era soon dawned and the collection includes the first jet, the Bell P-59 Aircomet, as well as the F-84 Thunderjet and the Korean War-vintage F-86 Sabre jet.

The B-29 Superfortress is a legend, and not only can visitors walk around the restored bomber, they can walk through a section of the fuselage of a B-29 and sit in the pilot's seat. But by far the largest airplane on the indoor collection is the B-36, its wings stretching from one side of the hangar to the other. Smaller planes sit insignificantly under its wings.

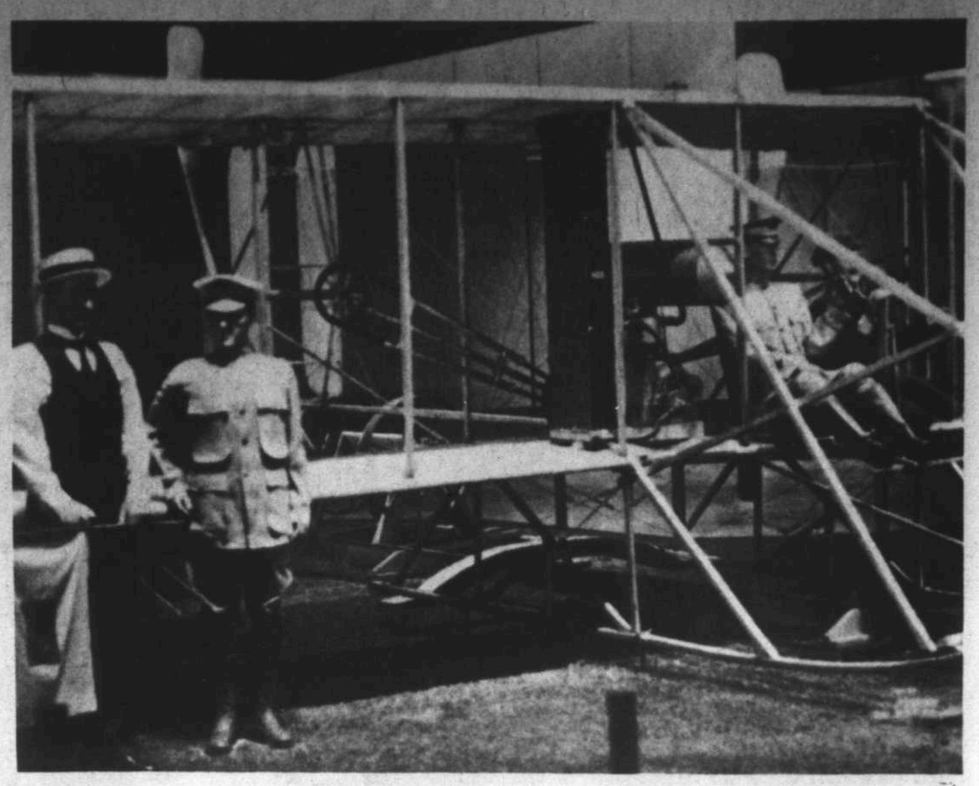

The exhibits then follow the United States into space with an Apollo 15 spacecraft, as well as several rocket planes such as the X-1 and the X-15 rocket plane, which reached speeds of 4,500 mph. There is even a gondola of a stratospheric balloon.

Besides the planes indoors, there are dozens more lined up on the old airbase runway outside. An additional 50 planes, some awaiting restoration, sit in the museum's annex three-quarters of a mile away. A free shuttle bus transports visitors there.

One of the most impressive planes in the outdoor collection is the XB-70 Valkyrie, an experimental bomber that is a forerunner to the bombers being designed for the 1990s and beyond. It even dwarfs the giant B-29 sitting next to it.

The road past the museum to the parking lot is lined with an arsenal of missiles, a fence-row of deadly weapons.

Related exhibits in the museum include a genuine moon rock, a somber prisoner-of-war exhibit, food similar to that eaten by early astronauts, replicas of the "Fat Man" first atomic bomb, Glen Miller's tombstone from Army Air Force Band days and the overcoat President Reagan wore during his World War II army days.

This "new, improved version," above, of the Wright Brothers' aircraft is the oldest plane on display at the U.S. Air Force Museum in Dayton, Ohio. The futuristic XB-70 Valkyrie experimental bomber, below, dwarfs other planes including the legendary B-29 Superfortress parked next to it. The museum is the star attraction of the Wright Aviation Trail, a series of related sites in the area. It is the oldest and largest air museum in the world.

Elderly: Fastest growing group

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's fastest growing age groups are the middle-aged and the elderly, who now include 32,000 people — mostly women — at least 100 years old, the Census Bureau says.

The Census Bureau's latest population report issued Sunday said the nation's median age rose to a record 30.6 years on July 1, 1982, up from 30 in 1980 and 30.3 in 1981.

Between 1980 and last July 1, the nation's population rose five million to 232,057,000, the report said.

Now that most children of the post-World War II "baby boom" have grown up, the fastest growing population group is aged 35 to 44 and numbers 28 million, the report said. The group's size increased 9.5 percent since the 1980 census was taken.

Longer life spans accounted for a 9.1 percent increase in the over-85 age group, the bureau said. The age group totals 2.4 million and includes 32,000 people aged 100 and over, the bureau said. Three quarters of the centenarians are women, the report said.

According to the study the nation has 25,000 white centenarians and 7,000 blacks aged 100 or older.

The size of the group aged 45 to 54 is declining, because the small number of people born during the Depression of the 1930s is reaching that age.

The number of people between the ages of 14 and 17 declined 7.9 percent.

Driver races for mom

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Bus driver Doug Weaver had good reason for skipping a few red lights. His special passenger was "obviously pregnant" — and close to giving birth.

Weaver, employed by the Champaign-Urbana Mass Transit District, was at the end of his line when he got a call from his dispatcher Saturday telling him a woman on another bus was in labor.

She was transferred to his bus at the Country Fair Shopping Center so he could take her to the Carle Foundation Hospital, which is on his route.

"I was hoping nothing would happen on my bus, because I wouldn't really know how to handle it," said Weaver, a bachelor. "She got on the bus with her husband and another kid. They didn't say a word to me, but she was obviously pregnant."

As Weaver drove east, he picked up a fire truck escort.

"We weren't really speeding, but we did blow off a few red lights along the way," said the driver.

Government secrets may be told in trial

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A retired Air Force general charged with embezzling $445,000 in government funds has the right to reveal secret military information if his case goes to trial, a federal judge has ruled.

Richard B. Collins, 53, of Fort Lauderdale, is accused of funneling the money from secret military accounts into his own Swiss bank accounts before his retirement in 1978.

Collins says classified documents and other secret information will show that he wasn't stealing the money, but simply carrying out his assignment as manager of funds used to bankroll the CIA and military intelligence operations in Europe.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys said Monday that a sealed order issued by U.S. District Judge James C. Paine allows Collins to bring out military secrets in a trial set to begin here July 18.

"The government is given the choice of making the information public or letting the case die and preserving the secrecy of the information," said Michael Pasano, a federal prosecutor in the case.

Said defense attorney Stephen J. Bronis: "We now have the ability to defend the case. I'm confident we can win either way."

Justice Department spokesman John Russell said he knew of another case several years ago in which charges were dropped to avoid the risk of exposing military secrets. The case involved an Air Force lieutenant accused of stealing secret missile information, Russell said.

Paine reviewed the classified evidence in Collins' case last week during a closed hearing.

"The judge ruled that it is relevant and material and necessary for the defense to use it," Bronis said.

Bronis said the list of potential witnesses includes former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., who was at one time Collins' military commander in Europe.

Almost all the pretrial proceedings in Collins' case have been closed to keep the classified information secret.

There had been speculation that the trial, too, might have to be held behind closed doors, but Paine said Monday he saw no grounds for a closed trial.

"Unless they come up with some authority of which I'm unaware, it seems to me the trial is going to be public," the judge said.

Presidential hopefuls romance labor union

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — The national labor movement is officially joining the Democratic presidential process this year and the pick of the presidential hopefuls are here romancing one of the biggest and most politically active labor unions.

The Communications Workers of America, with more than 650,000 members, holds a big block of votes toward the eventual AFL-CIO endorsement. It also has an established pattern of involvement in politics at the grass-roots level, recently manning telephone banks for the Democratic telethon, for example.

Democratic presidential candidates Walter Mondale, Alan Cranston and John Glenn will address the CWA convention and be active in town wooing individual union members. Candidate Gary Hart is scheduled to address the gathering Wednesday.

Each candidate will also be staging a variety of stints with city and county public officials sure to attract the television cameras in what is looking more and more to be a mini-presidential convention in Los Angeles.

An indication of strength among the candidates will also be measured when the members are polled, a survey the union is not planning to release.

The AFL-CIO endorsement for a presidential candidate will, for the first time, be made this year prior to the national parties' nominating conventions. That places the labor movement in an officially partisan position, squarely on the side of the Democrats, as it is flatly rejecting the Republican nominee, whomever that may be.

The labor movement also has since established a staff relationship with the Democratic National Committee. Glenn Watts, president of the CWA, is co-chair of the DNC Labor Council.

The AFL-CIO is looking for early involvement before the primaries, when it has a chance to build a campaign organization to help the candidate of their union's choice.

Big money is at stake, with the AFL-CIO promising to dish out more than $20 million for its part in the campaign. It has been left unclear, however, as to how that money will be spent since the favored choice, Mondale, is refusing to accept money from political action committees. The only avenue would be in the form of an independent expenditure.

Solid food causes colic in infants

Dear Dr. Solomon: My new grand-daughter has been having a problem with colic. Can this be because my daughter-in-law is using formula instead of breast-feeding the baby? — Mrs. T.A., St. Petersburg, Fla.

Dear Mrs. A.: The results of a study of more than 800 infants suggest tht the presence of colic does not depend on whether a child is breast-fed or bottle-fed. The investigators did find an increased incidence of colic in infants who have been given solid food during their first three months of life.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been told I have high cholesteol but my doctor says he would rather not give me any medicine for it because I'm in my seventies. I feel good and I expect to be around a long time and I'd like to know whether a pill or something to lower my cholesterol wouldn't be a good idea. — Mr. E.L., Dayton, Ohio

Dear Mrs. L.: Many patients your age can be treated successfully by diet without the need to resort to drugs Furthermore, Dr. Donald B. Hunninghake, of the University of Minnesota, points out that lower protein levels may not decrease the risk of cardiovascular death. If you've lived into your seventies with no ill effects, it might be better not to try to improve on it. As I've said before, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

Dear Dr. Solomon: You can hardly pick up a paper these days without reading something about salt and high blood pressure. We eat so many different kinds of food with so many different kinds of chemicals in them, why don't any cause low blood pressure? — Jackie, Towson, Md.

Dear Jackie: First a word about salt, or more specifically, sodium. A number of studies have implicated excessive sodium intake as a cuase of hypertension. Conversely, salt restriction, along with weight reduction and exercise, have been shown to lower blood pressure in people with mild hypertension. Furthermore, populations that ordinarily do not salt their foods generally hve a very low incidence of hypertension.

There is some evidence that a high potassium intake may help keep blood pressure low. In fact some experiments have shown that a diet high in potassium promotes the loss of sodium in the urine. In a study conducted in a London hospital, the average blood pressure of 23 patients who received potassium supplementation for four weeks was four percent lower than when they were given placebo.

It might therefore be advisable for individuals with hypertension to increase their intake of fruits and vegetables, which are high in potassium, provided that they are able to excrete the added potassium.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've heard that the Pill can be used by inserting it into the vagina. Is this true? If it is, why would anyone want to do this since it is easier to take it the other way? — Ms. S.K., Atlanta

Dear Ms. K.: Oral contraceptive tablets can be administered vaginally. According to Dr. Elsimar M. Coutinho, of the Federal University of Bahia School of Medicine in Salvador, Brazil, this may be one way of avoiding the nausea and gastrointestinal complaints that sometimes accompany the oral use of these contraceptives.

It should go without saying that no one should alter the mode of taking oral contraceptives without first discussing it with her physician.

Dear Dr. Solomon: When a doctor gives advice, I think it should be advice that a person could use. My blood pressure is a little high and my doctor says that if I exercise I can get it down. I am 63 years old, have a few extra pounds, was never very active even when I was a kid, and I sit at a desk all day. If I started jogging at this stage of my life, I'd probably go about half a block before I had a heart attack. What kind of advice is that? — Kenny, Portland, Maine

Dear Kenny: How about walking? Walking is an excellent exercise that most people can manage, and it may produce that decrease in blood pressure you would like to achieve. A study conducted in England indicates that a "good walk" twice a day may lower blood pressure. Why not use your lunch period for one walk and take another after dinner? Exercise does not have to be strenous to be effective.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A lot of people write to you to ask if they could do something their doctors told them not to. But my doctor told me I could have a drink once in a while, and I'd like to know if you think that this is a good idea. The reason I'm asking is that I have heart failure. — Joe, Detroit

Dear Joe: Your question calls for a general as well as a specific response. My general comment is that patients should follow the recommendations of their physicians. If you are not satisfied with your physician, you always have the right to go to someone else. But second-guessing a physician and obtaining a second opinion are two different things.

My specific comment is that investigators from the Oregon Health Sciences University in Portland have reported that patients with heart failure can consume alcohol occasionally and in moderation. Your own physician is in the best position to define "occasionally" and "moderation" as these terms apply to you.

Dear Dr. Solomon: When my boyfriend and I were in college, we would occasionally use marijuana. Since getting married a few months ago, we have continued the practice. We are now talking about starting a family and I would like to know whether the occasional use of marijuana could affect the fetus. It provides a pleasant bit of relaxation for both my husband and myself, and we would hate to give it up. We would appreciate any suggestions. — Mrs. and Mrs. J.G., Queens, N.Y.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. G.: I don't think anyone can tell you with certainty that the occasional use of marijuana by a pregnant woman will harm the fetus; on the other hand, I don't think anyone can tell you that it will not.

One study by the Boston University School of Medicine of almost 1,700 mothers and children indicates that marijuana use may have an adverse effect on fetal growth; however the investigators caution that no firm conclusions can be drawn.

One thing I can guarantee: If you do not smoke marijuana during your pregnancy, you won't have to worry about its possible effect on the fetus. I suggest that you and your husband decide which is more important to you — continuing your use of marijuna or starting a family. With all the uncertainties, I suggest you not do both.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine has become more and more tied to her house. What I mean is that she's afraid of going out. Her doctor has given her a drug to help her depression, and I would like to know if you feel this can do any good. — Millie, Portland, Ore.

Dear Millie: Antidepressants are used at times in the treatent of agoraphobia (fear of open places); however, drug treatment alone may not be sufficient and may even have disadvantages. Dr. Leslie Solyom, of the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, recommends the use of an antidepressant to help the patient accept exposure to what he or she fears. But one without the other may not be very helpful.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What is the relationship between genital herpes and cervical cancer? If you get the first, do you have more of a chance of getting the second? — Sue, Rye, N.Y.

Dear Sue: The results of various studies indicate that women who have been exposed to genital herpes at an early age have a somewhat higher risk of developing cervical cancer than do other women. However, the overwhelming majority of women with genital herpes infections do not develop cervical cancer.

Some physicians suggest that women with genital herpes should have a Pap test at least once a year, especially if they tend to have recurrent lesions.

For Bruce, Baltimore, Md.: The findings in one study suggest that patients with multiple sclerosis do better when the weather is cold. Conversely, it would appear to be a good idea for these patients to avoid exposure to heat if it is possible to do so.

For Cynthia, Toledo, Ohio: If you want to prepare your own baby food, start with single foods rather than with combinations This will enable you to see how your child reacts to each food, and to identify any that might not agree with him.

For Gail, Harrisburg, Pa.,: Listen to your obstetrician rather than to your friends, no matter how well-meaning they may be. Dr. David M. Goodner, of the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, says that pregnant women can continue to exercise. Whether or not a pregnant woman should continue to work, however, depends on the physical environment at her place of employment.

Widow refuses to leave her home

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Bertha Moten believes life's boundaries are set forever.

When she and her husband bought their small wooden clapboard house in the Rock Quarry neighborhood in the 1930s, she knew she would die there.

So when developers of the new Trinity Plaza project approched her and other homeowners about purchasing their property, she stood fast.

As a result, her home today is enveloped by the Trinity Plaza office tower, which is under construction.

Remaining untouched in a corner of the block-sized development, Mrs. Moten's neatly painted and fenced-in yellow house is a monument to her stubbornness and her love of her home and what it represents.

Mrs. Moten is 87 years old and lives with four cats, a dog and lots of memories.

She remembers when Trinity University was a newcomer to the neighborhood and when nearby Alamo Stadium was built from a rock quarry. And she remembers when the monstrous McAllister Freeway took shape outside her kitchen window 10 years ago.

Mostly, however, she remembers when she and her husband, who died 25 years ago, reared two children in a nice neighborhood. She also outlived her children, who died as youngsters.

Now, rezoning has made Mrs. Moten and her home almost anomalies.

Fun-loving patrons of Alexander's Pub park their cars in front of her house.

And in about 35 days, when Embrey Investment Inc.'s Trinity Plaza is completed, her new neighbor will be a drive-through bank with four stories of office space above it.

"I remember when this whole neighborhood was just families, some in nice two-story houses," she said, waving a frail arm toward the northbound lane of McAllister Freeway.

Her neighbor, Thelma Neaves, says of Bertha: "Her house is the only thing that she had ever had that was really hers."

Years ago, Mrs. Moten and her husband obtained the small home by purchasing it with the help of a family for whom she worked.

As far back as the horse-and-buggy days, Mrs. Moten, who is black, reared white families' children.

She says of the Trinity Plaza representatives: "They came and measured things all around. But they're nice white folks. They haven't bothered me, and they put up a nice fence."

She suffers from high blood pressure, arthritis and the effects of a mild stroke, but she has withstood repeated challenges to leave her home. It always has been no contest.

"I'm a Christian woman, and I'm going to die here," she says. "It's my home. I'm not alone here; I talk to God.

"They can't take my home. Where the sidewalk is, that's the government's property. But inside the fence, that's my home."

In her small back yard, she tends a garden of okra, string beans and corn, oblivious to the freeway noise and the Caterpillar bulldozers next door.

"We would have liked to have had it," Embrey Investments president Walter Embrey says of the property.

"We found her some nice houses in the neighborhood. But she's a sweet old lady who wants to live out her life in her home, and that's her prerogative.

"I think we're good friends," Embrey said.

Mrs. Neaves stepped in one day to advise negotiators to stop "molesting" her 87-year-old neighbor.

Mrs. Moten once baby-sat Mrs. Neaves children: Sheriff Joe Neaves and police detectives Horace and Roland Neaves.

The Neaves boys mowed her yard.

But it is the inside of her home that reveals the main reasons for her stubbornness: A round heirloom mirror, an ancient brass bed and a photo of a happy boy — her son — sitting behind the wheel of a Model-T.

Space telescope will miss Halley's Comet

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The space telescope, described as the "most important scientific instrument ever flown," will be launched a year later than planned and will cost $500 million more than expected, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration says.

"This whole job was bigger and tougher than anybody thought it would be," Samuel W. Keller, NASA deputy associate administrator told The Washington Post in an interview.

"I think that developing and building the space telescope may have been the hardest thing this agency has ever tried to do."

Because the space telescope will orbit above the Earth's atmosphere and will have a primary mirror 8 feet across, the telescope will be able to see objects 50 times fainter and seven times farther from Earth — and with three times greater clarity — than any glimpsed by telescopes on Earth.

It is being built to last 15 years, has scientific instruments that can be replaced or repaired in orbit by trained astronauts and is even being designed to be brought home to Earth if major repairs are needed.

However, Keller said the space shuttle will not carry the 11-ton telescope into its orbit 320 miles above the earth until at least April 1986 — a year late — and possibly not until early fall of 1986.

Even if it flies in April 1986, the space telescope will miss the voyage around the sun of Halley's Comet, which will begin approaching Earth in November, 1985, for the first time in 76 years, and come closest in February, 1986.

"We would have liked to make an American commitment to Halley, which is one of the few long-period comets (reappearing every 76 years) we see here on Earth," Keller said with more than a little disappointment.

The telescope's delayed launch also means the space agency will not be able to observe the distant planet Uranus in time to identify targets of opportunity for the Voyager spacecraft's flight past Uranus in January 1986.

The launch delay will bring the telescope's "runout" costs to about $1.1 billion, Keller said. The project's cost was estimated at $572 million when it began in 1977 and revised to $797.2 million late last year. Keller said NASA was forced to add $182.5 million in fiscal 1983 and $195.6 million in fiscal 1984 to keep the project under development.

Keller said the launch delay stems largely from the difficulty in designing three "fine guidance sensors" to lock the telescope onto distant stars, and to sustain its lock as the telescope orbits the Earth in one direction while the star moves in another direction against a background of other moving stars.

So difficult was the design that the first three sensors delivered by Perkin-Elmer Corp. in Danbury, Conn., to Lockheed Corp. in California will not be built into the telescope but simply will serve as engineering test models so engineers can rebuild the devices that will fly in 1986.

Keller said the space agency will clean the telescope's primary mirror, a lightweight (1,800 pounds) mirror of a honeycomb construction unlike any other telescope mirror ever built. (A mirror of comparable size and power on Earth would weigh 8,000 pounds.)

For the past 17 months the telescope's mirror has been gathering dust in a "clean room" at Perkin-Elmer. It also is covered by lint left by workmen who used a jeweler's "rouge" to polish the mirror.

"The longer it sits in the clean room, the more dust it will gather, but we'll clean it right before delivery by turning it upside down and blowing nitrogen on it," Keller said. "Believe me, the dust is only a nuisance; it's no show-stopper. All the dust does is cause light spots where starlight glitters onto the mirror."

Researchers discover sub-nuclear particle

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — International researchers have confirmed the existence of an elusive sub-nuclear particle they say contributes toward a revolutionary single theory to explain all forces in nature.

"We have finally found the 'Z-zero' sub-atomic particle, whose existence has long been postulated, but which was so named because it was expected to be the last particle ever to be discovered," said Carlo Rubbia, professor of physics at Harvard University, who led the 126 researchers at CERN, the European laboratory for particle physics.

The confirmation followed the announcement in January by the same team of another breakthrough, the discovery of "W" particles, electrically charged sister particles to the neutral "Z-zero."

Professor Herwig Schopper, director general of the laboratory, called the two discoveries "the most important discovery in physics" since the transistor was invented 25 years ago.

He said he felt certain his researchers merit a Nobel prize in physics.The discoveries put CERN at least six years ahead of all competitors, Schopper said.

The laboratory's findings are considered significant because they support the idea that a single theory can be constructed that would explain all forces in nature.

Until 1967, the prevalent theories held that natural forces consisted of gravity, electromagnetism, the "strong nuclear force" which binds atoms and the "weak nuclear force" responsible for certain radioactive decay reactions.

"With the discovery of two W particles, one with a negative and one with a positive charge, and the Z-zero we now know that electromagnetism and the weak force are two manifestations of a single force called 'electroweak,'" said Dr. Rubbia.

Attempts to construct theories showing that any two or more of the four forces actually were part of a single force foundered on inconsistencies until 1967.

In that year, Stephen Weinberg, now at the University of Texas, Sheldown Glashow of Harvard and Abdus Salam of The Netherlands independently produced a consistent theory uniting the electromagnetic and "weak" forces.

If those theories are correct, the collision of protons and anti-protons — a proton of opposite electric charge — in a giant accelerator such as the one at CERN should produce the W and Z-zero particles.

These particles, called bosons, are thought of as carriers of the weak force just as photons of light carry the electromagnetic force.

The bosons are created for a period a hundred times shorter than a millionth of a millionth of a millionth of a second at a total energy of 540 billion electron volts in CERN's massive underground particle accelerator ring measuring one and three-eighths miles across.

The collisions produce a multitude of particles, but the problem has been identifying those particles being hunted, Rubbia said. The CERN team made significant advances in detection and identification techniques, he said.

Dr. Simon van der Meer, an engineer on the CERN staff, devised techniques of bunching the anti-protons together that proved to be essential to make the experiment work, Schopper said.

The researchers hope they will make a further major discovery this year, Rubbia said. Buried in their mass of data on the Z-zero particle could be evidence of the existence of the last quark, the elusive "T" or truth quark, one of the twelve smallest known building blocks of matter.

Rubbia described 1983 as a "vintage year for European science."

"Nature seems to like granting insights into her mysteries in batches. 1983 will go down in the history of the physical sciences as exceptional, for there are long periods of research when nothing of interest happens," he said.

Legislators want state drink

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana has an official state dog, state fossil, state insect, state rock, two state songs and seven state fruits. Now it could get a state drink — milk.

The state Senate refused to be cowed by the argument that such legislation is silly and sent the bill to Gov. Dave Treen.

But his signature is not assured. Last year the governor vetoed a bill that would have given Louisiana a state poem.

Electric bills may increase 16.7 percent

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Calling its need for a rate hike "the classic 'pay me now or pay me more later' situation," Texas Electric Service Co. plans to file for a rate increase Thursday which would boost its annual revenues by $195 million.

The increase, representing a 16.1 percent hike in system-wide revenues, would expand residential customers' average monthly bills by 16.7 percent.

If the increase is granted, a customer now paying $50 each month would likely pay $60 and a $100 bill would edge closer to $114. The additional monthly charges will vary slightly for customers in other classifications.

The hearing process before the Texas Public Utilities Commission and the 79 cities served by TESCO will likely take about six months. If approved, the rate increase is not expected to take effect until about December.

Winston Barclay, TESCO's Western Division manager in Midland, said the rate increase is necessary to help offset the effects of inflation and to pay interest expense on loans for new power plant construction.

Barclay said the rate increase would actually be a hedge against even steeper electric bills in the future, because the money will help fund construction of power plants run on lignite coal and nuclear fuel — relatively cheap sources of power when measured against traditional natural gas.

He said TESCO anticipated an increase in natural gas prices and began in the late 1960s to build power plants capable of operating on cheaper fuels.

TESCO now has eight generating plants fueled by lignite and plans to construct two additional 750-megawatt lignite-fueled plants by 1991.

In addition, the company is building its $3.44 billion Comanche Peak nuclear power plant near Glen Rose. The nuclear plant, which was originally expected to cost about $1.7 billion, has been subject to cost overruns and construction delays and is expected to start producing electricity from its Unit 1 next year.

"Admittedly, the Comanche Peak nuclear plant is requiring a lot of money," Barclay said. "The bottom line is it is going to generate economical power. You've got cheaper fuel and you've got high capital cost. It's an offsetting thing over the life of the plant."

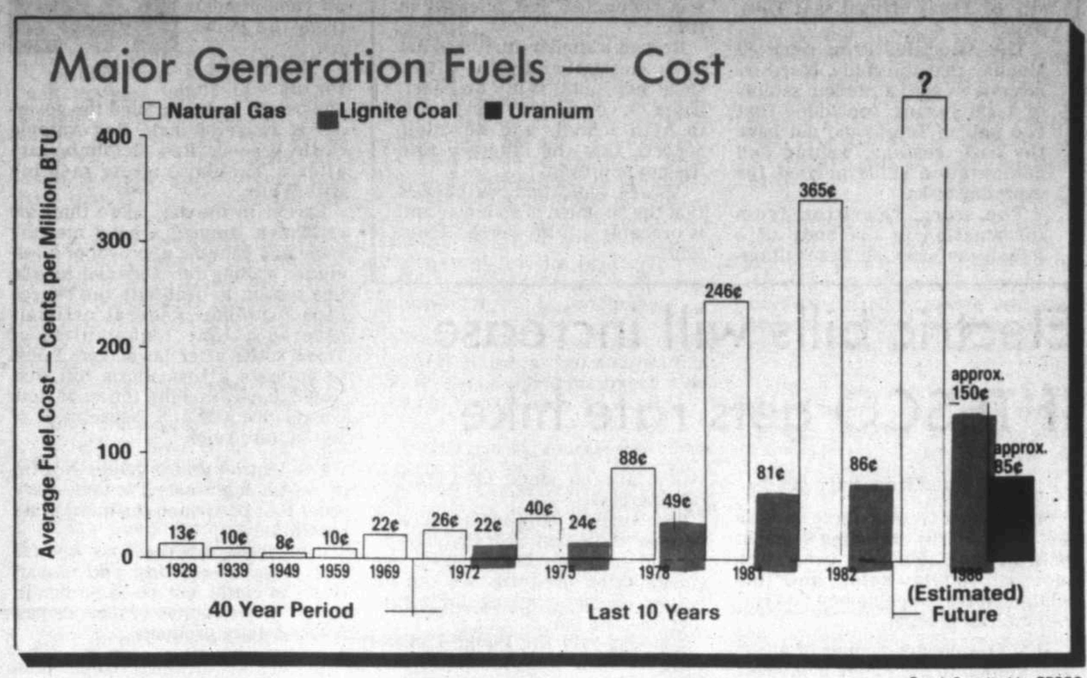

According to TESCO's figures, electricity costs about $3.65 per million British thermal units to produce with natural gas, compared with only 86 cents per million Btus using lignite and 70 cents per million Btus with nuclear fuel.

"These lignite plants have saved our customers about $750 million just since 1972, compared to what they would have paid for the same amount of electricity produced with market-priced natural gas," Barclay said.

He said the energy savings have not come without construction expense. Since its most recent rate increase in 1980, after TESCO sought a 17 percent increase and was granted a 10.1 percent hike, the company has borrowed about $461 million to build new plants. Annual interest payments on the construction loans — also referred to as construction work in progress (CWIP) — have reached about $55 million.

He said while TESCO must pay interest on CWIP, it is unable to pass the interest costs on to consumers without a rate increase. He said mounting interest expense threatens the company's financial health, including its AAA bond rating and the accompanying ability to obtain money at low interest rates.

Higher fuel costs is one of the major reasons Texas Electric Service Co. is asking for a 16.1 percent rate hike.

PRISM is outlet for gifted students

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

When 14-year-old Robert Glouberman's article on death and suicide was returned from a magazine as unsuitable for publication, he immediately phoned the publisher.

"We asked him to send in something a little more upbeat," Sherry Friedlander said of the Phoenix, Ariz., youngster. "Two days later, another story arrived by Federal Express."

That story was published, along with several others from students across the nation in the first issue of PRISM, a magazine designed for gifted young people.

Ms. Friedlander, who recently was in Midland to distribute free copies of the magazine, said the publication fills an important gap.

"We saw the hole in the market," she said, estimating there are 5 million gifted people in the nation.

With T. Constance Coyne, PRISM's editor-in-chief and Ms. Friedlander's partner in an advertising/magazine publications firm in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the two decided to provide a needed avenue for gifted young people to communicate to others.

"These kids have so much to give," Ms. Friedlander said. "They want to learn from each other.

"Their thinking is not way off-the-wall. Some of these kids are not competitive. Some aren't high achievers because they get bored."

Only during the last 10 years have people begun to recognize the potential of gifted students, she said.

"I think we're losing probably 50 percent of these kids a year. We have to be fair to these resources. If there is a way to start these resources communicating, they'll have a feeling of self worth."

The magazine, with the first issue reaching a circulation of 85,000, contains articles written by gifted students as well as educational psychologists, teachers of the gifted children and gifted adults. Also in the issue are several pages of Pen Pals, listing the names of gifted students, their interests and addresses.

Started in October, the research took Ms. Friedlander and Ms. Coyne all over the country. Surprisingly, they hit rural towns instead of the big cities.

"We're finding a lot of gifted students in the rural areas," Ms. Friedlander said. "So instead of going into New York City, we went into White Plains."

They also went into Odessa, and, as a result, the first issue contains a four-page spread of a "roundtable" discussion at Burleson Elementary in Odessa.

While each issue will contain a theme, students are encouraged to submit stories, poems and essays on any subject.

The next issue will be on success, Ms. Friedlander said. "But that does not limit these kids to write about anything else they want to write about. They are free to think."

To be published six times a year, from September through May, the magazine can be used several ways.

"Teachers (of the gifted) can participate in what's happening in the area and it gives parents some insight into what other gifted children are thinking," she said.

Although three-quarters of the school systems in the nation have started gifted programs, Ms. Friedlander said it is a recent trend.

Her partner Ms. Coyne knows. She was not recognized as the gifted student she was.

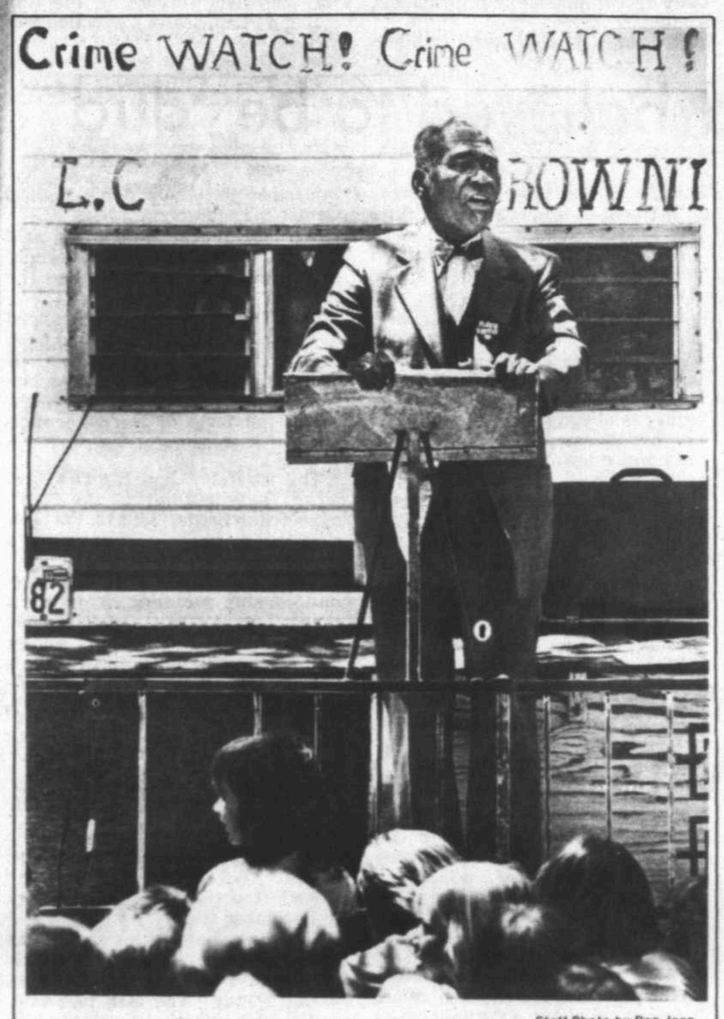

"She was a victim," Ms. Friedlander said.

Ms. Coyne's third grade teacher instructed her overly-intelligent student to read on her own in the library during classes. Ms. Coyne was then expected to return to the classroom and report to her classmates what she had read, according to Ms. Friedlander.

"Do you know what that does for peer relationships?" Ms. Friedlander asked.

"Many of us who grew up gifted in the 1950s and 1960s found the road a bit tough," the two wrote in the editor's column. "Peer acceptance was something we desired and often did not get. Teachers and parents expected great things of us and many of us struggled to define and then live up to those expectations.

The Rev. Louis Calvin Browning announces he will run for president of the United States during an anti-drug/anti-crime rally in Washington Park.

Reverend announces presidential candidacy

By FRANK CLARK
Summer Intern

Bishop Louis Calvin Browning, founder of the Youth Crime Prevention League of America, announced Tuesday at an anti-crime rally in Washington Park his candidacy for president of the United States.

Standing on a platform mounted at the rear of a renovated red, white and blue mail truck, Browning's announcement came as a surprise to his audience of grade schoolers and YMCA workers attending the anti-drug/anti-crime rally.

"Adults must learn to listen to the youth of America," said Browning, the first black to enter the race. "It is time for our nation to forget race, creed and color and start saving our children from drugs and crime."

When asked what he would do first as president, Browning said he would "build more and better schools," and "train teachers better," warning that "without good youth, you cannot have a good nation."

Browning's only comment on present government leadership was that "they're doing what they think is right as best they can." He promised to have both Republicans and Democrats in his cabinet, although he declined to side with either party.

Other speakers at the rally included representatives from the Palmer Drug Abuse Program, the Midland Police Department and the YMCA.

Browning, 76, has worked with young people for the last 26 years, promoting racial harmony and speaking out against drugs and crime. Basing his organization in Fort Worth, Browning has traveled through much of the U.S. preaching to YMCA groups, Boy Scouts and various youth groups.

Police officers exonerated in civil rights violation case

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Four city police officers and one former member of the force have been acquitted of violating the civil rights of Walter Sowell, a 19-year-old Midland man who claimed he was beaten, kicked and maced the night of his arrest 17 months ago.

Exonerated after less than an hour of deliberations Tuesday afternoon were officers Terry Garner, Vince Castillo, Ronald Keck and Victor Kuykendall.

Also acquitted were Chief of Police Wayne Gideon, the City of Midland and former officer Terry Lowe.

Earlier in the day, officer Ed Nicks was dismissed as a defendant in the $1 million suit after defense attorney John Gunter argued that Nicks was not directly involved in Sowell's injuries.

Sowell, whose mother is a cook at the city jail, was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital for lacerations he said occurred when officers Keck, Castillo and Lowe rammed his head into the window of a hall door as they were escorting him to an upstairs cell.

The defense argued that he injured himself by ramming his head against the glass in a "scheme" to get back at police for arresting him.

Sowell was arrested for disorderly conduct and public intoxication the night of Oct. 16, 1981. The disorderly conduct charge was dropped by the city attorney's office, and a municipal court jury acquitted him of the drunk charge.

Crucial to his claim of police brutality were a videotape of the booking procedure and an internal police investigation which contradicted officer testimony that they did not spray him with mace.

The videotape — of poor quality and abruptly shut off as a scuffle erupted at the booking desk — appeared to show Lowe and Garner hitting Sowell with their fists after he brushed Garner's hand off his shoulder during an argument with Lowe.

But jurors, who could not be reached for comment, apparently believed Garner and Lowe's testimony that they did not strike Sowell and were simply trying to grab him so he could be restrained and taken to a cell.

Sowell maintained that in addition to having his head rammed into the window, he was maced during the melee at the booking desk after the video camera was shut off. He also contended he was beaten and kicked after being placed in an upstairs isolation cell.

All officers named in the suit denied knowledge that mace — the use of which is primarily restricted to self-defense — was sprayed on Sowell.

But an internal probe of the case by Sgt. Bob Miller, whose report was admitted as evidence in the case, concluded that Lowe maced Sowell while he was being held by Garner and Keck.

It was erroneously reported in Tuesday's Reporter-Telegram that the macing incident took place as Sowell was being escorted upstairs. Miller's report, however, said it occurred during the booking desk scuffle after booking officer Castillo had shut off the video camera.

Castillo testified that he turned off the camera because the booking procedure was over and "the situation was under control."

Testifying Monday, the opening day of the trial in federal court, Keck said although he was carrying mace that night, he did not use it. He further testified that Sowell "was not maced in my presence."

Apparently overlooking the contradiction between testimony and Miller's report, the three-man, three-woman predominately middle-aged jury spent 55 minutes deciding the defendants were innocent of using excessive force on Sowell.

"I'm obviously very pleased," said Gideon. "And as I've said in the past, the resolution of cases like this should come in a courtroom, not the media."

Odessa lawyer David Gilles, lead attorney for Sowell, was not happy with the verdict: "I'm sorry to see that justice was not done in this case. But I hope it doesn't discourage people from pursuing their civil rights in the future."

Illiteracy rate at least 21 percent, study says

AUSTIN (AP) — A study concluding that about 21 percent of Texas adults were functionally illiterate was conducted in 1975 but the illiteracy rate is probably at least that high today, a University of Texas official said Tuesday.

The Associated Press reported Monday that the study, based on interviews with a random sample of 1,500 Texans, concluded that two million Texans did not have the basic reading, writing and computation skills needed for everyday tasks.

The story, rewritten from information in the body of a newspaper story on Texas illiteracy, did not say when the study was conducted. Jim Cates, director of the University of Texas Education Department's Adult Peformance Level Project, which did the study, said the survey was conducted and released in 1975.

He said a similar study has not been conducted by his office since then, but that it is his belief, based on competency test results in high schools and on other reports, that the illiteracy rate has not improved.

"Every indication we have is that the situation is no better and is probably a little worse," Cates said.

Cattlemen tell White deadline past

White

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas cattlemen, who urged Gov. Mark White to call lawmakers back to Austin to head off a livestock quarantine, went home with no commitments from the governor.

"The deadline for us was the day before yesterday, and the governor is aware of that," San Antonio cattle breeder Red McCombs said after a Tuesday private meeting with White.

Earlier in the day, more than 800 cattlemen jammed a hotel meeting room and shouted approval of a resolution calling for a special legislative session to deal with the brucellosis problem. Federal officials ordered a June 1 quarantine of Texas cattle after lawmakers failed to approve a brucellosis bill that would have brought the state into compliance with U.S. Department of Agriculture rules.

U.S. District Judge James Nowlin of Austin later issued a temporary order that postponed the quarantine indefinitely.

Brucellosis is a livestock disease that causes weight loss and miscarriages in cattle, but poses no health danger to consumers of meat or pasteurized dairy products.

At the hotel meeting, White would go no further than a promise to make brucellosis a topic "if and when" he calls a special session.

The governor drew a standing ovation before his brief speech, but the crowd was less enthusiastic after the talk.

He said he was talking with state Senate and House leaders, "making certain that if and when such time occurs that we will have a special session, that there will be prompt action taken in order to solve this problem."

That comment drew applause, but the discontent showed a bit later when White said, "I have no time established in my mind yet as to when to call a special session, but I am extremely concerned with the problem. I am going to continue to monitor it, not only closely, but on a daily basis."

"I will be working this weekend. If you would give me some time," he said.

One cattleman yelled, "There is no more time."

Before the governor spoke, cattlemen paraded to the microphone to call for quick legislative action.

"We've got to comply with the federal regulations. It's just a matter of when and how. It's coming," said Buddy Jeffers, owner of the Amarillo livestock auction.

Before the private meeting, White told reporters, "I cannot in a public forum tell them all the things we are doing. But I think you'll find we are making progress and we'll have good news for them."

After the private meeting, McCombs said White is "sensitive to the time limits of the problem.

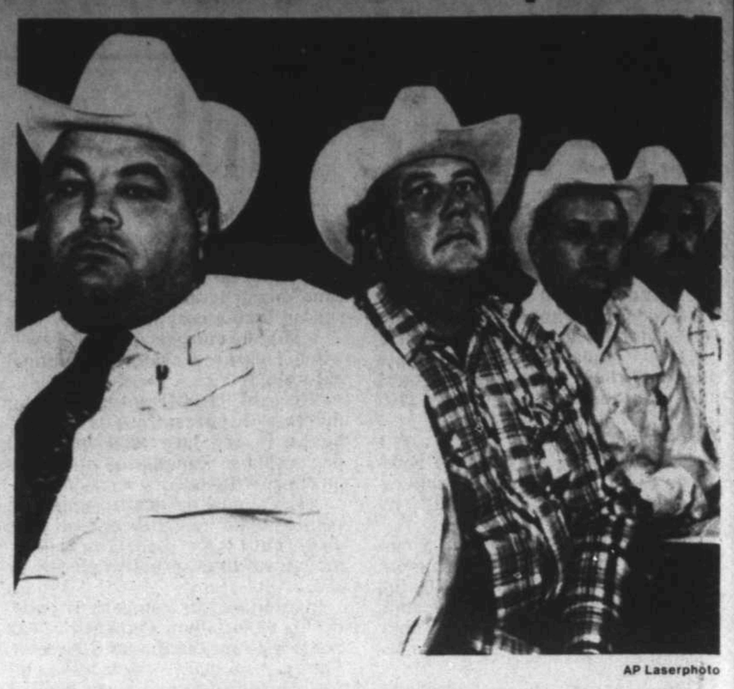

"I feel like there will be (a special session) and it will be included, but there are no commitments and there are no times and no dates," he said.

White apparently is negotiating with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, according to McCombs.

"That's perfectly alright with us. What we want to do is get rid of the problem. If he can do it without the legislative process, that's fine with us," he said. "If the USDA were to decide to lift their order for a quarantine, if the USDA were to contact the other states and say in their judgment Texas was essentially in compliance, our problems would be over."

But John Atwell of the USDA, who attended the private meeting, said he knew of no method short of a special session that could satisfy the federal officials.

"I don't know of another way," said Atwell, deputy administrator for veterinary services of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

Electric bills will increase if TESCO gets rate hike

"If we can't recover these costs as we pay them by including them in bills, we have to borrow even more money," Barclay said, "and this additional borrowed money also carries interest charges."

TESCO estimates savings of about $800 million to customers if interest costs on a $1 billion plant are recovered while the plant is being constructed.

Barclay said inflation has also fueled the need for a rate increase. The Consumer Price Index has increased 22 percent nationwide — and 26 percent in the Dallas-Fort Worth area — since TESCO's last rate increase.

"Because of this inflation, and because of interest costs that have to be paid on money borrowed for our construction program, we can no longer postpone asking for a rate increase," he said.

Barclay said the Public Utilities Commission has traditionally granted utility companies about 50 to 70 percent of their rate increase requests.

"If they do not grant us as much as we have asked for, it means we just have to turn around and ask for another rate increase," he said.

TESCO serves more than 1.5 million people in a 48-county area.

Oaklawn students place in international competition

Students at Oaklawn Park Baptist School were among first place winners at the International Student Convention held during the end of May on the campus of North Texas State University in Denton.

Twenty-five junior and senior high school students from Oaklawn Park Baptist School joined nearly 5,000 students from all over the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Canada and Mexico.

During the six-day convention, students competed in nine major divisions against other state competition winners. Divisions included academics, music, sports, persuasive and dramatic arts, photography, art, needle and thread, drill team and athletics.

Placing first in the nation was the girl's quartet of Montie Clifton, Becky Kelley, Mary McKinney and Davonna Piearcy.

The marching band, under the direction of Mark Jenkins, placed second in the nation. Placing fifth was the woodwind instrumental quartet, consisting of Stacey Clifton, Michelle Smith, Kelly Streun and Kim Walker. Mary McKinney, graduating senior, place sixth in the needle and thread division with her entry of a satin and lace formal.

Oaklawn Park Baptist School, 3001 N. A St., employs a curriculum individually prescribed for each child. The student learns at his own level and proceeds at his own pace.

Dr. David Piearcy is the administrator.

Police investigate theft of $5,000

Midland police are investigating the early morning theft today of $5,000 in cash and an unkown number of credit cards from a mobile home at 1701 Garden City Highway.

According to police reports, Gayland Brown was asleep at about 12:40 a.m. when two people entered his trailer and took a wallet containing the money from his pants pocket. Brown reportedly woke to see the two subjects, a white man and woman, escaping and called police.

In other police activity, two computer panels and a radio amplifier valued at $1,810 were reportedly stolen Saturday from Ray Randolph's pickup at 2612 Whitney Drive. Randolph told police Tuesday the pickup was unlocked and parked in his carport when the theft occurred.

Patricia Mullingin, 4201 Andrews Highway, No. 46, reported a 24-inch color television set was stolen from her home sometime between 4:30 p.m. Sunday and 1 a.m. Monday. The set is valued at $600.

53-year-old man dies after accident

SEMINOLE — A 53-year-old man died during surgery Tuesday morning after his pickup ran off a paved road and rolled over twice at about 8:30 p.m. Monday about 25½ miles south of Seminole.

According to a Department of Public Safety report, Harold J. Harris, of Ransom Canyon, died in Lubbock's Methodist Hospital at 4:20 a.m. Tuesday.

Harris was reportedly driving westbound about a half mile from the New Mexico state line when the accident occurred.

Charge which exploded believed to be 'dud'

EL PASO (AP) — An anti-tank explosive charge that blew up during a classroom demonstration and injured 25 soldiers was believed to be a dud and had been used as a training device "for years," an Army spokesman says.

The light anti-tank weapon was believed to be loaded with a fake explosive device, but somehow ended up with a live round that sprayed shrapnel through a class of basic trainees, seriously injuring the instructor and six trainees, the Army said Tuesday.

Ten other Army recruits with six weeks of basic training experience also remained hospitalized today at an El Paso military complex.

Fort Bliss Maj. Gen. James Maloney said the rocket shell exploded accidentally during a demonstration of a 4-foot-long anti-tank weapon at Meyer Range in southern New Mexico.

"A light anti-tank weapon believed to contain no explosives, and used as a training device, was the source of the injuries," said a press statement issued Tuesday by the Army. "The internal warhead explosive charge... exploded when the instructor put it on the ground."

Fort Bliss spokesman Jim Lemons said the instructor "thought it was a dud. It turned out to be a live device." He said the anti-tank weapon, however, was safe and reliable, and would continue to be used at the base and by Army personnel nationwide.

"An investigation continues to determine how and when the round came to be used as a training device," the Army said.

Munitions being used as training devices in the field also will be more closely examined in the future. "Safety procedures will be expanded," Lemons said.

Nearly half the trainees watching the weapons exhibit were injured.

Trainees, some seated within a few yards of Gonzalez on classroom bleachers, were struck by bits of gravel and shrapnel packed in the rocket launcher, witnesses said.

Karl Clark, 18, of Schroon Lake, N.Y., said the blast caught everyone by surprise, knocking most from the bleachers to the ground. Gonzales, closest to the shell, was severely injured when shrapnel slammed into his abdomen and bladder. Gonzalez remained in serious condition today.

The test weapon lacked a launch tube, the more dangerous rocket propellant and a detonator, the Army said. What it did contain was an internal warhead explosive charge, which accidentally exploded when it was laid on the ground by Gonzalez, Starnes said.

The warhead blast left the new soldiers dazed and in shock until two military helicopters rushed the injured to Beaumont Army Medical Center in El Paso.

Witness Sharon Saperstein said she watched as the copters brought in the injured, and described the scene as "a bloody mess."

Most of the recruits, who ranged in age from 18 to 24 years, had been in basic training with the First Air Defense Artillery Brigade since late April. Those injured mistakenly got their first taste of warlike conditions, officials said.

The wounded had injuries that were "very similar to the types expected in battle," said Lt. Col. Tim Coleridge, chief of Beaumont's emergency medical corps.

The incident was Fort Bliss' second serious accident involving a rocket launcher since 1981. Nearly two years ago, a Fort Bliss soldier was decapitated by shrapnel when a grenade launcher rocket shell misfired.

Prosecutors said defendant confessed to killing

ODESSA (AP) — Prosecutors told jurors that the man accused of beating a priest to death in a West Texas motel room 18 monts ago is the same man who called police in New Mexico and to confess the slaying.

James Harry Reyos, 26, an American Indian from Chama, N.M., is charged with the murder of the Rev. Patrick Ryan of Denver, City.

Ryan, a Roman Catholic priest, was found beaten to death in an Odessa motel room on Dec. 22, 1981. His car was found later in Hobbs, N.M.

Jurors, during the first day of testimony Tuesday, listened to the tape-recorded conversation between an Albuquerque, N.M., police dispatcher and a man saying he was J.H. Reyos.

In the tape, the caller said he wanted to talk with someone "involving a murder that took place in Odessa involving a Catholic priest from Denver City."

The voice went on to inform the police dispatcher, "You are talking to the killer." When the dispatcher asked, "When did you kill the priest?" the voice responded, "Back in December of 1981."

"Do you remember his name?" the dispatcher asked. The caller clearly replied, "Father Patrick Ryan, Father Paddy." The man told authorities he could be found at a telephone booth at an Albuquerque motel.

Stress changing 'executive of tomorrow'

Copley News Service

A major change will be taking place in the composition of the nation's boardrooms as the future unfolds.

No longer will it be the hard-driving, high-achieving, excessively competitive, chronically impatient Type A individual who makes it to the top.

Instead, the executive of the future will tend to be the more relaxed, adaptable, process-oriented Type B personality who does one thing at a time rather than several, balances his or her life and is capable of strategic thinking and sensitivity to public opinion.

Why?

According to Ann B. Sturgis, Ph.D., director of the Stress Management Training Institute in San Diego, the answer lies in the positive interrelationship between stress management and creative problem solving.

Put simply, people who get rigid and uptight can't adapt to the fast pace of change which today's leaders increasingly face.

Type A behavior was first defined by San Francisco internists Drs. Meyer Friedman and Ray H. Rosenman in their 1974 book, "Type A Behavior and Your Heart," which showed that people with this personality style are three times more likely to suffer cardiovascular problems than the more easygoing Type B's.

In a study beginning in 1960 of 3,182 healthy men in 11 California companies, Friedman and Rosenman of Mount Zion Hospital, found that 85 percent of the men they classified as Type A eventually suffered coronaries.

They also discovered that of the men studied, the hard-driving Type A's did not usually rise to become president of their firms. Rather, it was the more relaxed Type B who did, drawing on the A's and B's below them.

What people need to know, Sturgis said, is that learning how to relax will, in fact, increase their leadership potential and ability to gain access to the creative part of themselves.

"When people are really uptight and over-concerned and anxious, they ... impede their creative problem-solving," she said. "Uptight people tend to do all cognitive, linear thinking. But the essence of creativity is in the intuitive and metaphorical realms. By tightening up like that they impede the flow of oxygen and energy to the brain. If you relax, you get in touch with your intuitive drive to be productive."

Thus, the ideal executive of the future is like a Zen swordsman, "ready for anything to come, but not uptight, very at ease."

Unfortunately, Sturgis said, "Most people don't know this. They think pushing themselves to be harried and relaxing with Valium or alcohol is the way to go. But drugs tend to erode your coping skills."

It's not that Type A's don't have admirable, necessary qualities like enthusiasm and analytical ability, Sturgis said. "I would say what they need to do is mobilize their latent Type B characteristics to work in combination with them. What we're aiming at is not to change people into Type B's, but to eliminate the destructive part of those characteristics."

Another argument for stress reduction, according to Sturgis, is the fact that science has been discovering an increased correlation between chronic tension and grief and incidence of all forms of disease, including gout and cancer.

"There are more and more suits against companies for stress-related diseases," she said. "If we have these hard-driving Type A's and no redress of (their problems), not only do we have disfunctions in Type A's, but we will have insurance claims from employees. That's happening more and more in companies all over.

Chicken, whether prepared on an outdoor grill or on an indoor range can have a flavorful taste with the indoor/outdoor method.

Two-way chicken: For grill or range

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

My mother was what I call "a born cook." The dishes she prepared were seasoned perfectly. One of the condiments she used to advantage was Worcestershire sauce. That's not surprising because we lived in Canada and Worcestershire originated in England.

She often used Worcestershire in dishes cooked in a tomato sauce. For example, cabbage rolls, stuffed peppers and chicken. I thought of her good seasoning when recently I tasted chicken wings whose marinade includes both tomato sauce and Worcestershire.

Here's the recipe for the chicken wings — a thrifty part of poultry to use nowadays. It's a two-way deal because you can cook the wings indoors using your kitchen range or on an outdoor grill.

TWO-WAY CHICKEN WINGS

3 pounds chicken wings
8-ounce can tomato sauce
1 cup orange juice
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ cup instant minced onion
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon dry mustard

Cut off tips of chicken wings and freeze for use in making broth. Cut wings in halves at joints; prick skin with fork tines.

In a shallow bowl stir together tomato sauce, orange juice, Worcestershire sauce, onion, orange rind, salt and mustard. Pour over chicken wings; toss to coat completely. Cover and refrigerate at least 2 hours or overnight.

Place chicken on a greased foil-lined baking pan; brush with sauce. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until tender — about 30 minutes. Remove from oven and broil 4 inches from heat source until browned — about 2 minutes.

To broil over charcoal, place marinated wings on a rack over slow-burning coals. Grill, turning and brushing often with marinade, until cooked through — about 30 minutes.

Baked chicken wings make light summer meal

BAKED CHICKEN WINGS

Repeated by request.
1 pound (about 10) small chicken wings
4 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon dry mustard
1½ teaspoons paprika

Snip tips from chicken wings. In a 10 by 6 by 1¾-inch baking dish, melt butter in a 375-degree oven; stir in salt, mustard and paprika until blended. Dip wings in seasoned butter; fit into same dish in one layer. Bake in the 375-degree oven, turning once midway, until tender — about 45 minutes. Drain on paper towels. Makes 3 servings. (AP)

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Late plantings yield quick results

By ELVIN MCDONALD

If for any reason you haven't gotten this year's outdoor garden planted, here is a game plan to help make up for lost time:

1) Survey seeds and bulbs you may have saved from last year. Salvage any that can be used.

2) Visit local sources to determine what's available immediately.

3) It helps if you choose plants that don't really get up and grow anyhow until the consistently warm weather of summer settles in.

Bulbs for hot weather growing include golden calla-lily, elephant ear and fancyleaf caladium, florist gloxinia (best in pots with protection from wind and rain, as on a half-shaded porch), gladiolus, tigridia, dahlia and tuberose.

Consider seeds or six-pack bedding plant transplants of zinnia, marigold, nasturtium, sweet-alyssum, portulaca (rose moss), nicotiana (flowering tobacco), tithonia, four o'clock and cocks-comb. Flowering plants of petunia, hybrid geranium, impatiens and everblooming begonia are generally available the duration of the selling season.

Container roses are also widely distributed, usually in gallon-size pots, smaller for the miniatures. One advantage of buying late is that you can often see and smell the blooms on the bushes you choose and prices may be reduced.

Vines can also be a big help to a hurry-up-and-grow garden, especially to quickly cover an arbor or mask an unsightly view. Check for seeds of gourd, moonflower, cup and saucer cobaea, hyacinth and Scarlet Runner beans, morning glory, balsam apple, passionflower and black-eyed-Susan vine.

Edibles that grow well in hot weather include pepper, cucumber, summer squash, tomato, bean, cowpea, eggplant, okra, New Zealand and Malabar spinach, and Swiss chard. Three herbs you can still grow from seeds: basil, dill, summer savory.

4) The later you plant and the hotter the weather the more vital it is that soil be prepared extra well and that plantings be kept uniformerly moist. Set transplants closer so that they become self-shading. Be generous with deep mulches.

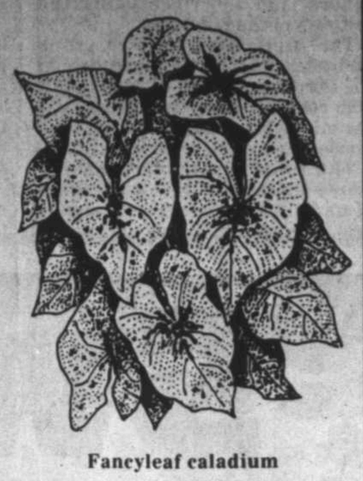

Q. Where can I obtain a tree ivy, Fatshedera lizei?

A. Plants of the plain green and a variegated form are offered by Logee's Greenhouse, 55 North St., Danielson, Conn. 06239 (catalog $2.50). This is an unusual bigeneric hybrid, the result of crossing a Hedera, the genus that gives us English ivy, with the related Fatsia. It grows well in bright light indoors, without much direct sun, and benefits from soil kept nicely moist.

Q. My Christmas cactus has grown into a huge green plant in the five years I've had it. Why no blooms?

A. Your cactus needs more light, especially in the spring and summer months when there is active growth. I grow mine in full sun indoors and out, with the growing medium kept between evenly moist and slightly on the dry side. At the onset of winter, as autumn days grow cooler and shorter, the buds are set, and less water is needed.

More details are in my notebook culture sheets, "What Makes Christmas Cactus Bloom?" For your copy send 50 cents coin and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope with "Christmas Cactus" written on the back flap to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, P.O. Box R, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14305; in Canada, 4141 Glenayr Ave., Niagara Falls, Ont. L2E 6K1.

Fancyleaf caladium

Q. What causes geranium stems to turn black at the base, shrivel up and slowly die?

A. The rot you describe results from soil that stays soggy wet for long periods of time. You may be able to salvage tip cuttings, which can be rooted in moist vermiculite.

Berries of 'Land of Midnight Sun' in fine liqueurs

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

A lingering memory of a visit to Finland and neighboring Lapland back in 1975 is the delightful assortment of berries that thrive in this Land of the Midnight Sun.

These succulent globules flourish close to the Arctic Circle. They include the tawny, golden cloudberry, the rose-hued brambleberry and the bright-red lingonberry.

These berries are unknown to most Americans, since they grow too far away to make it practical to ship to the United States. But now a Finnish distiller is exporting cordials made from all three fruits to America. Called Lapponia liqueurs after their native Lapland, these cordials retain the flavor of the fresh fruit to a remarkable degree.

Cloudberry liqueur has the sunny hue of the fruit which earned it the name "bright gold of Lapland."

Cloudberries grow wild in cold, wet tundra land and ripen under the soft rays of the polar sun.

The Arctic brambleberry grows on bushes that can be found only in the northern reaches of the Finnish lake country, where special soil and the midnight summer sun create the needed environment for survival.

The sweetish-tart lingonberry grows on a bush that sometimes bears fruit sparingly. But in a good year, the plants blanket the northern region, their gem-like berries sparkling.

The winters in Lapland are dark, long and usually severe, but during the brief summer, the sun is up around the clock and brings out a sea of berry bushes near the Arctic Circle, covering the tundra with their bright hues and succulent fruit.

These berries are hand-picked by native Lapp families before the first frost. Many are sent to Finland's port city of Turku where distillers transform them into liqueurs.

The cordials are not only good to drink, they add a piquant flavor to cooking.

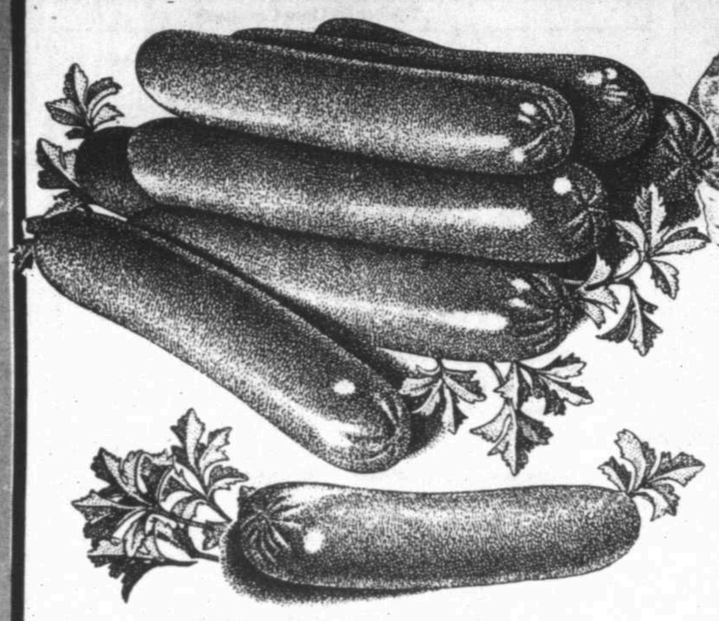

Three tablespoons of lingonberry liqueur and the same amount of Cognac make a great addition to sauces for seafood cocktails. Cloudberry liqueur mixed with sherry is good added to lobster or shrimp bisque. And lingonberry cordial is delicious over Cherries Jubilee.

BRAMBLEBERRY CORDIAL AND RUM

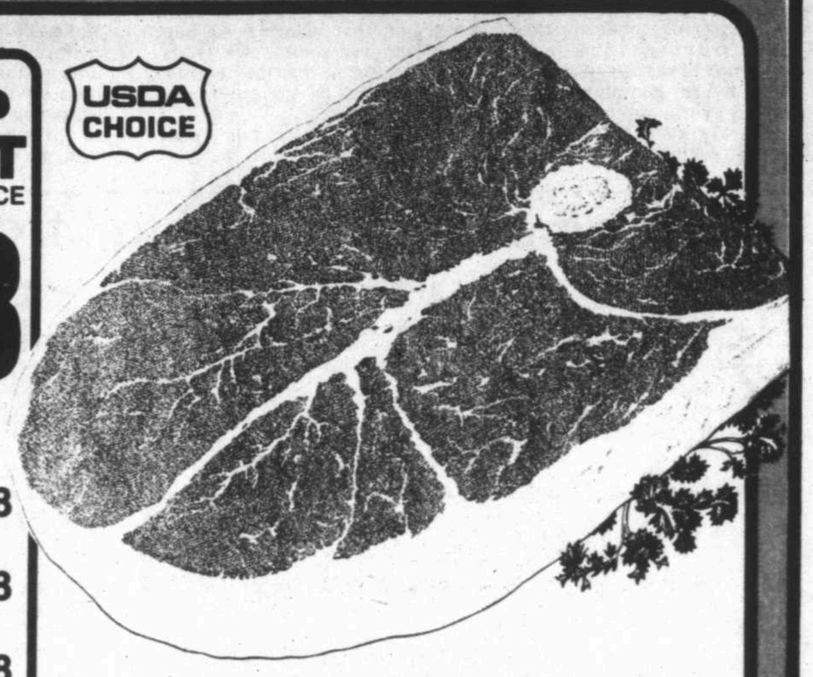

2 ounces brambleberry liqueur
2 ounces rum
1 ounce lime juice

Pour over cracked ice in a goblet and top off with sparkling water or lemon-lime soda. Sweeten with sugar, if desired, decorate with an orange slice and a cherry — and quaff.

Carbonated water celebrating 200th anniversary

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

This year we reach an important milestone in the beverage field. It was two centuries ago that sparkling water was first produced comercially. Today millions of bottles of soda pop, colas and other beverages are sold each year in America alone.

The first bottle of sparkling water went on sale in 1783, but the story actually began in 1767 when an English clergyman and scientist, Dr. Joseph Priestley, was trying to carbonate water with an air pump.

At about the same time, a Swiss jeweler, Jacob Schweppe, was busy in Geneva trying to put bubbles into water. He read about Priestley's problem of placing streams of air into water. Finally, after much experimenting, he perfected a force pump that made sparkling water.

In 1792 a plant to produce aerated water was opened in London's Drury Lane. The English were cool at first, but the idea soon caught on. By 1798, wares such as acidulous soda water, Rochelle salt water, seltzer spa and other products billed as effective aids for kidney and bladder ailments were offered.

During the late 1850s, British officers stationed in the steaming jungles of India had to take daily doses of quinine pills to combat tropical diseases. To make the pills more palatable, they mixed them with gin and lemon juice. Soon, quinine and other ingredients were added to aerated water and thus was born the famed gin and tonic.

Today sparkling waters are a key ingredient in many drinks such as these.

BRISTOL BRACER

1½ tablespoons unsweetened grapefruit juice
2 ounces vodka

Fill tall glass with ice. Add ingredients. Top off with tonic water.

BIG APPLE

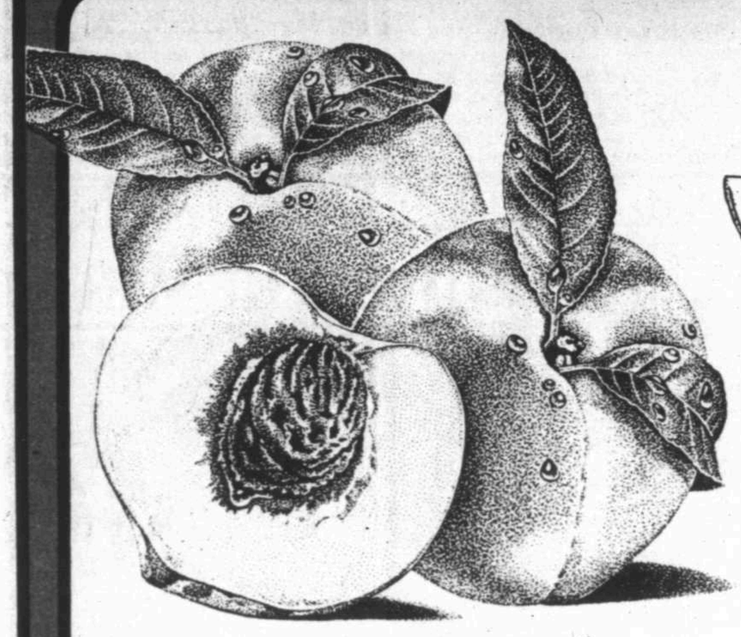

1 ounce vodka
½ ounce Amaretto liqueur
4 ounces apple juice
1 apple wedge

Pour all ingredients in a tall glass. Stir well and top off with chilled club soda.

DEAR ABBY
Birthday one year too soon

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is a problem I've never seen in your column. I will be 50 years old in December, and my wife wants to give me a big party to celebrate the occasion.

I would rather she didn't, because in September we're giving my parents a big party to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary, and a little quick addition will explain why I don't want a big splash on my 50th birthday.

My wife assures me that people are very broadminded today, and nobody will care if it becomes known that my mother was pregnant with me when she walked down the aisle.

My wife then suggested that I "lose" a year and celebrate my 50th birthday next year in order to spare my parents embarrassment.

What do you think? – PREMATURE IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR PREMATURE: If you're giving your parents a big party to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary in September, I suggest you celebrate your 50th birthday quietly in December.

DEAR ABBY: A reader named Sue asked you about the expression, "Mind your p's and q's." She wanted to know, "What do the 'p' and 'q' stand for?"

You supplied three possible theories, but neglected to mention the explanation one would most expect from an old newspaper hand like you.

An elderly printer once told me the expression goes back to the days when printed pages were set by hand, one letter at a time.

The printer's wooden "cupboard" from which he withdrew each piece of type was called a job case. It was compartmentalized into pigeonholes that kept the a's together, the b's together, etc.

The most popular job case, with an exception or two, arranged the pigeonholes in alphabetical order.

The bay containing the p's was the next-door neighbor of the one containing the q's. So it was easy to get the p's in the wrong bay, and vice versa. Such mistakes led to typographical errors, which were hard to detect because p's and q's are look-alikes.

Thus apprentice printers were constantly admonished, "Mind your p's and q's!" – ROBERT McMORRIS, COLUMNIST, OMAHA WORLD-HERALD

DEAR MR. McMORRIS: The theory proffered by the elderly printer seems more likely than any of those I submitted in my column.

Coincidentally, my source was the MORRIS Dictionary of Word and Phrase Origins. Any relation, Mac?

DEAR ABBY: In your reply to "A Raging Fool," you wisely pointed out that children who witness violence at home grow up to believe that it is an acceptable way to deal with their anger and hostility.

That caused me to recall what the late Martin Luther King Jr. wrote in his book, "Why We Can't Wait" (Harper and Brothers, 1946):

"Man was born into barbarism when killing his fellowman was a normal condition of existence. He became endowed with a conscience. And he has now reached the day when violence toward another human being must become as abhorrent as eating another's flesh." – ARTHUR H. PRINCE

THE BUTCHER
With apologies to eye-of-round

By MERLE ELLIS

All right, I apologize! I swear, I could attack Mom, apple pie the institution of marriage and all gray-haired grandmothers over 39 and not receive the "hate mail" that floods my desk whenever I so much as suggest that the eye-of-round is not all it's cut up to be.

I've never said it was bad, only that it is over-rated and usually overpriced. I have only pointed out that there is another muscle of the round that is considerably more tender and a whole lot less expensive. That's all I've said.

To prove that I hold no malice toward the eye-of-round, nor toward the somewhat overzealous defenders of same, I have gathered together a few recipes for that cut of meat. Enjoy!

I think this first recipe was entered by Albert Boesl of New York in the 1982 National Beef cook-off.

"Plum Good" Polynesian Eye-of-RoundRoast
4 pounds beef eye-of-round roast
1 (16-ounce) bottle Italian salad dressing
2 (16-ounce) cans purple plums
1 (16-ounce) frozen lemonade con centrate, thawed
1/2 cup sherry wine
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1/2 teaspoon finely-minced fresh ginger root
1 (2-ounce) package slivered blanched almonds
1 bunch watercress or parsley
2 tablespoons cornstarch (optional)
1/4 cup water (optional)

Place roast in a plastic bag; add salad dressing. Seal bag tightly and place on a tray in the refrigerator; marinate for 3 hours, turning bag 4 or 5 times. Drain plums, reserving 4 for garnish. Pit remaining plums and puree in a blender. Add thawed lemonade, wine, soy sauce and ginger; blend well and set aside.

Pour off and reserve marinade from meat. Place meat in a shallow roasting pan. Cover with foil and roast in a 375-oven for 30 minutes. Remove foil; pour off drippings. Pour reserved marinade over roast; continue roasting, uncovered, for 30 minutes, basting occasionally. Cover roast with plum puree and insert a meat thermometer. Continue roasting, uncoverd, until thermometer registers 140 for rare. Place roast on a warm serving platter and sprinkle top with almonds. Garnish platter with watercress or parsley and reserved plums.

To make sauce from pan drippings, place pan over surface burner and add 1 cup water to deglaze pan. If desired, thicken by combining cornstarch and water and add to pan. Bring to a boil and cook 2 to 3 minutes, or until thickened, stirring constantly. Serves 8.

This recipe for eye-of-round comes from "River Road Recipes," published by the Junior League of Baton Rouge, Inc.

Marinated Beef Roast
4 or 5 pounds eye-of-round roast
1 tablespoon meat tenderizer
3 cups white wine
3/4 cup salad oil
1 tablespoon salt
1 teaspoon rosemary
Pinch of sage
Pinch of thyme
1 tablespoon black pepper
2 onions, sliced
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 teaspoon celery seeds

Pierce surface of roast in many places with fork or skewer, sprinkle with meat tenderizer. Put beef in deep bowl and pour in marinade mixture of wine, salad oil, salt, rosemary, sage, thyme, pepper and onions. Cover bowl and let meat stand for 24 hours in refrigerator, turning occasionally.

At the end of marinating time drain meat (save marinade) and insert spit through center. Combine 2 cups of marinade, melted butter and celery seed and use to baste meat. Roast in electric rotissrie for about 1 hour and 20 minutes, or until meat thermometer registers desired doneness. Serves 6 to 8.

DINNER FOR TWO
Piggy-back Lobster
Cole Slaw & French Bread
Strawberry Chiffon Pie

PIGGY-BACK LOBSTER

For a special occasion.
2 eight-ounce Rock lobster tails, thawed
1/4-pound stick (1/2 cup) butter
1/2 cup stemmed parsley sprigs, minced
2 scallions (white part only), minced
2 large cloves garlic (or more), minced
White pepper to taste

Using a sharp knife or kitchen scissors, cut hard shell of lobster tails down through the middle lengthwise, leaving tail fan intact. Do not remove underside membrane. Gently open shell, separating it from meat with fingers. Lift raw tail meat through split shell to rest on top of shell, leaving meat attached to fan end of shell. Cup each tail in foil; place in a shallow broiler pan. In an 8-inch skillet, melt butter; off heat stir in parsley, scallion, garlic and pepper. In a preheated broiler, 4 inches from high heat, broil lobsters, basting often with the butter mixture, until opaque when tested with a small knife slit — 14 to 16 minutes. (If tails begin to burn, adjust heat or rack.) Makes 2 servings.

1 1/2 tbsp. minced onions
1 tsp. dried tarragon
1/8 tsp. ground pepper
1/4 tsp. salt
2 sticks butter
4 egg yolks

Combine vinegar, onion, tarragon, pepper and salt in saucepan; boil 4 minutes. Add butter; swirl pan until butter is melted and bubbling. Put egg yolks in blender and blend on high for 30 seconds; add sauce slowly through top.

Cookbooks selling like hotcakes

By LINDA DUDLEY
Copley News Service

Cookbook sales jumped 21 percent last year and publishers are predicting that how-to food manuals will eat up even more of the market in '83.

You might say, the books are selling like hotcakes and bringing in enough bread to land some of them on the list of best-selling books of all time.

Cookbook sales in 1982 totaled $260 million, a jump from $215 million in 1981.

"According to publishers, trends which are driving the growth of cookbooks include:

— More orientation to the home because of its higher cost and sophisticated entertainment additions, such as video recorders, video games and home computers.

— The shift toward cooking with fresh and natural ingredients and "from scratch."

— The increase in use of time/labor-saving kitchen devices such as food processors, microwave ovens and pasta makers.

— The emphasis on health-consciousness and diet.

Surveys show the average cookbook buyer is a working woman 18-45 years old.

"Cookbook buyers tend to be above average in terms of education and income," said Bill Dinsmore, vice president/general manager of Nitty Gritty, based in Concord, Calif.

A March survey conducted by Dinsmore's firm also showed that the number of men buying cookbooks is on the rise. Male consumers now account for 25 percent of the market.

Here are some new cookbooks which illustrate the variety available.

American Wholefoods Cuisine: by Nikki and David Goldbeck; New American Library; 580 pages; $17.95. This collection of more than 1,300 meatless recipes "from short order to gourmet" deserves the recognition it has been receiving nationwide.

BROCCOLI IN SWEET AND SOUR

1½ lbs. broccoli
1 green pepper
2 tbsps. oil
Two-thirds cup unsalted peanuts
¼ cup broth or water
2 medium tomatoes, cut in thin wedges
¼ cup soy sauce
3 tbsps. honey
¼ cup cider vinegar
½ cup apple juice
2 tbsps. cornstarch or arrowroot

Peel broccoli stalks thinly if thick and tough and slice broccoli into smal trees. Slice pepper into strips. Heat oil in wok and stir-fry nuts until they begin to color, about 1 minute. Do not overcook. Add broccoli and pepper and stir to coat with oil. Add broth and tomatoes, cover and cook over moderate heat until vegetables are barely tender, about 15 minutes.

While vegetables cook, combine remaining ingredients for sauce. When vegetables are cooked, and a few minutes before serving, stir sauce mixture to recombine, pour over vegetables in wok and cook, stirring, until thickened and at boiling point. This will take 3 to 5 minutes. Serve at once. Serves 4 to 6. (Protein complement)

Variation: Replace broccoli with 1½ pounds cauliflower. Divide into florets and slice central core into strips. Test for tenderness after 15 minutes (cauliflower may require 5 additional minutes of cooking); cook until just tender, not soft or mushy.

Menu suggestions: When served on 1 cup of rice or pasta per person, this protein complement is completed. If grain is omitted, be sure to include another protein dish, such as one containing tofu or eggs. Of course, instead of plain rice or noodles, Chinese-style fried rice or Lo Mein is welcome on the menu. If several such dishes are included, the broccoli should suffice for an additional two servings.

The Regional Italian Kitchen: by Nika Hazelton; M. Evans and Co. Inc.; 362 pages; $7.95. Nika Hazelton, Italian native and constant traveler to that land of olive trees and vineyards, offers a comfortable compendium of Italian home cooking, written in a clear and descriptive manner.

MUSHROOMS WITH GARLIC AND HERBS

6 tbsps. olive oil
2 lbs. mushrooms, cut into thin slices
3 garlic cloves, mashed
2 tsps. dried thyme, or to taste, or any other preferred herb
Salt
Freshly ground pepper
Juice of ½ lemon

Heat olive oil in a large, deep frying pan. Over high heat, saute mushroom in several batches 3 to 4 minutes or until golden brown. Transfer cooked mushrooms with slotted spoon to bowl and keep hot. When all mushrooms are browned, return them to frying pan. Over low heat, stir in garlic and thyme. Season with salt and pepper. Cook for 3 to 4 minutes, stirring frequently. Turn onto a hot serving dish and sprinkle with lemon juice.

Note: The mushrooms must be cooked a few at a time, so that they will saute and not steam, as they do when crowded.

Authorities to crackdown on group

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The federal government is ready to launch a full-scale crackdown on the militant Posse Comitatus after the death of posse member Gordon Kahl in a shootout with authorities, The Kansas City Times reported today.

The newspaper said the death of the militant tax protester in a Friday night gun battle at Walnut Ridge, Ark., apparently cleared the way for broader action by federal authorities against the right-wing group.

The copyright story attributed the information to "well-placed federal law enforcement sources" who refused to be identified.

The legal framework for the crackdown was laid during the months that Kahl remained a fugitive after he, his son and another man shot and killed two federal marshals who tried to arrest Kahl in North Dakota on Feb. 13, the newspaper reported.

The Justice Department granted federal authorities permission to conduct wide-ranging investigations of Posse Comitatus, The Times said. Although federal officers publicly maintained Kahl was sought only as a fugitive, they kept private their plans for broader operations against the group, it said.

Posse Comitatus, literally "Power of the County," is a militant group of armed survivalists who challenge all forms of state and federal authority, including the power to levy taxes.

Posse membership figures are not known, but leaders claim to have chapters in every state except Hawaii, with up to 2,000 members in 13 Wisconsin counties.

Up to 10 Posse Comitatus encampments in northern Arkansas and others in central Wisconsin are presently under close scrutiny by federal authorities, The Times said.

Federal authorities, including the FBI, wanted to keep the crackdown quiet until after the trials of those charged in the marshals' deaths and until the body found in a burned-out Arkansas bunker was confirmed as that of Kahl, the newspaper said. The body was positively identified on Monday.

Kahl's son, Yorie, 23, and an associate, Scott Faul, 29, were convicted May 28 on two counts of second-degree murder and six counts of assault.

"You take these things in stages," one government source was quoted as saying. "Now we can get to some of the things we haven't had time for before."

Dr. Fahmy Malak, the Arkansas medical examiner, used X-rays and dental records on Monday to identify the body of Kahl.

Kahl and Sheriff Gene Matthews of Lawrence County died in the shootout at a munitions-filled concrete farmhouse. The FBI believes that Kahl shot Matthews as the sheriff tried to arrest Kahl and that Matthews shot Kahl.

Kahl, who at the time of the North Dakota shooting was on probation for a 1977 conviction for not filing federal income tax forms, died from a gunshot wound and not from the fire that destroyed the farmhouse, said Clint Palmer, chief field investigator for the medical examiner's office.

The fire started from tear gas canisters police threw into the residence.

'Friendly' supper club meets again

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Although the host remained anonymous, the second meeting of a supper club dedicated to improving relations between blacks and whites drew nearly twice as many guests as the first.

About 60 people, ranging from infants to senior citizens, met for the second Friendly Supper Club at a downtown cafeteria Monday.

The monthly club was the inspiration of "Jack Smith," who has yet to make himself publicly known but who started the dinners last month by sending a letter to about 75 clergymen, reporters, lawyers and others. The writer expressed concern about deteriorating relations between blacks and whites in the community and proposed the supper club as a way to bridge the gap between the two groups.

Anybody is welcome to attend the meetings; the only rule is that visitors must bring a person of another race to dinner.

Some guests Monday night were intrigued about the identity of the host, but others said they did not care who Smith was as long as the supper club served its purpose.

"I'm curious," admitted Roscoe Williams, an electrical contractor. "I was asked to come last time, but I had a previous engagement."

Asked if he knew who Smith was, Williams laughed and said, "That's another thing that's a puzzlement."

Randall Williams, who works at the Southern Poverty Law Center as director of Klanwatch, a group that monitors the activities of the Ku Klux Klan, said he thought the supper club was "a great idea," but was not concerned about the identity of Smith.

"I think it could be anybody," said Williams. "I personally hope that no one ever knows .... I think everybody ought to wear a button next time that says, 'I am Jack Smith.'"

About 35 people showed up for the first dinner on May 5. Smith recently sent another letter as a reminder of the second meeting.

Mary Jo Smiley said she felt compelled to attend Monday's dinner.

"I have no solutions. I have only hope," she said. "I have children, and I want my children to be able to come back here and live.

"I think if we don't come here, we won't have any place to go after a while."

Among the guests was Montgomery County Commissioner John Knight, who on Monday morning had found a 10-foot cross burning in his driveway. No arrests have been made in the incident.

Knight recently was a spokesman for a group of black leaders who have protested police actions against blacks. The group has called for a boycott of certain businesses in Montgomery.

New reform plans to be unveiled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration plans to revamp a program that has cut hundreds of thousands of Americans from the Social Security disability rolls.

Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler was to announce the changes today at a news conference. A source on Capitol Hill, who demanded anonymity, said Monday that part of the plan may involve a moratorium on reviewing the cases of people with the most severe mental disorders.

The Social Security administration began conducting the reviews to see whether disability beneficiaries still were incapable of working. The reviews created a furor because many recipients said they were being cut off the rolls, even though they were too disabled to work.

More than 700,000 cases have been reviewed since the Reagan administration started an accelerated process in March 1981 and more than 300,000 people have been ordered off the rolls. Appeal and administrative law judges have reversed 60 percent of the cases that have been appealed, but federal officials say that still leaves hundreds of thousands of people who have been knocked off the rolls.

Although the mentally ill compose only 11 percent of the 2.6 million disability beneficiaries, they have been involved in more than 25 percent of the cutoffs, according to congressional panels.

Congress ordered the crackdown in 1980 amid reports from Social Security and the General Accounting Office that as many as 20 percent of those drawing benefits were no longer or never had been disabled and that the waste was costing several billion dollars a year.

Deputy Social Security Commissioner Paul B. Simmons said in a telephone interview Monday night that there was no final decision on some aspects of the reform package. But he said the bulk of the reforms already have been reviewed by the Cabinet and Reagan administration budget officials.

Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., chairman of the Senate Special Committee on Aging, and other lawmakers, have called for a 12-month moratorium on reviewing the mentally disabled and other changes in the program. The administration so far has resisted such calls.

Simmons' agency has been running a pilot project in Texas and several other areas giving beneficiaries an opportunity to come face to face with decision-makers at an early stage of the reviews.

Simmons has testified previously before Congress that the reviews were too bureaucratic and needed to be made more humane.

Until last fall, it was possible for someone to be cut off without ever being called in for an explanation or a medical check.

President Reagan became personally involved in one case last month. It involved a former Green Beret, Roy P. Benavidez, 47, of El Campo, Texas, who received the Medal of Honor for his heroism in the Vietnam war. He was ruled fit to work and no longer eligible for Social Security benefits, although because of his war wounds he is unable to bend, lift heavy objects or stand for a long period.

Youth kangs self after friend's suicide

NORTH SALEM, N.Y. (AP) — A popular high school senior who hanged himself three weeks after his girlfriend's suicide told friends he would be "leaving them" and left a note saying he was going to join his dead sweetheart.

The body of William Shott, 18, was found hanging from a bathroom in his family's home on Sunday, three weeks after his 17-year-old girlfriend, Cathy Ann Petruso, hanged herself in the women's room of a drive-in theater after the couple had quarreled, police said.

"They were going out for a long time and they were very much in love ... I don't know why she did what she did and I don't know why he did, either," said Miss Petruso's father, Sal.

"He was emotionally disturbed," Shott's father, Gilbert, said of his son, a senior at North Salem High School who was described as a bright teen-ager and good student.

A note found near Shott's body said he was going to join his dead girlfriend, and the Westchester County medical examiner's office said the death was considered a suicide.

Friends said the young couple had on a few occasions together seen the movie "Officer and a Gentleman," in which a man commits suicide by hanging after the breakup of a romance.

Miss Petruso, a cheerleader and homecoming queen, hanged herself May 14 at a drive-in in Danbury, Conn., after an argument with Shott, officials said. The nature of the argument was not disclosed.

Dr. Boris Zoubock, a psychiatrist and resident of North Salem, said he was told by the young man's friends that Shott appeared withdrawn and depressed and "talked incessantly about Cathy."

"They said he had kind of created a cult around the girl and that he had 400 letters she had written to him," Zoubock said.

According to his friends in this suburban community, Shott spent Sunday afternoon at a swimming pool. They told Zoubock that he began talking about "leaving them," said goodbye and told them "that maybe he would never see them again."

He apparently arrived at his family's home around 5 p.m. One of the friends became alarmed and tried to reach him by phone. When he received no answer, he went to a barn adjoining the Shott's house and heard a scream. It turned out to be Shott's father, who discovered his son hanged by his own belt around 6 p.m.

Stanley Toll, the superintendent of schools, said Miss Petruso was a popular girl who "seemed to have everything going for her."

"She had supportive parents, she was intelligent and had been accepted to college," Toli said. "She was full of life and yet she committed suicide."

Senate needs extra cash for diapers, brooms

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although it costs more than $1 billion a year to operate Congress, legislators like to keep a little extra cash on hand to pay for those unexpected purchases that must be made from time to time.

From the latest expense and salary listings, covering the six months from Oct. 1, 1982 to March 31, 1983, come these "contingency fund" expenses submitted by the office of the Senate sergeant at arms:

—Six cords of firewood (for fireplaces in senators' private offices), for $540 and 162 cases of "Duraflame logs," $2,263.14.

—Four "Welcome to Washington" maps, $80.75.

—Fifteen cases of "facial tissue," $248.85.

—Fifty cases of club soda, $340.

—One hundred pounds of diapers (they make good dust cloths, and accidents among youthful visitors to the public galleries do happen on occasion), $210.

—Fifty mop handles.

—Reimbursements "for damages to automobile incurred in Senate parking lot," $274.40.

—Twenty bags of "white sand," $102.20.

—Ten cases of of whisk brooms, $178.80, and 15 cases of toy brooms, $$276.15.

"Toy brooms?"

"They're for picking up cigarette butts," explained deputy seargent-at-arms Larry Smith.

* * *

The same financial report shows that 43 Senate employes are being paid more than their bosses, including the Senate's six "reporters of debates," who take stenographic notes of Senate proceedings — and who earn $61,690.42 annually.

Senators are paid $60,662 a year, compared to the $69,800 earned by House members. The dual pay arrangement came about last December when the Senate refused to go along with a congressional pay raise — but at the same time scuttled a proposed cap on senators' outside income.

Since the latest figures show that senators last year averaged $26,130 in money from speeches, articles and other honoraria — boosting their job-related income considerably above the $60,662 base.

Do members of Congress do more talking than legislating?

One might make such a case after looking at a recent breakdown published in the Congressional Record: As of the Memorial Day recess, Congress had passed a total of 33 laws this year — while filling 13,733 pages of the Record in the process.

* * *

Members of Congress often have awards bestowed upon them by special-interest organizations — some of which they can hang on their walls and some of which they can't.

An example from the "can't" category: the Oversees Education Fund announced the other day that it was having an "awards presentation" to honor Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan.

Kim Watson, daughter of Charles and Janet Watson of 2006 W. Tennessee Ave., was named Young Tex-Anne for May by the Optimist Club of Midland. A senior at Midland High School this fall, she is active in 4-H and "Teen Twisters" square dance club. She is president of the Midland 4-H Council and secretary of the district 4-H. She is a band twirler.

Lawyer proposes alternative to police recruitment

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — The Police Corps is looking for a few good men. And women. And supporters.

Having spent more than a year touting his unusual police recruiting plan to authorities in New York and on the East Coast, Manhattan lawyer Adam Walinsky has come West.

To audiences of liberal and conservative law enforcement officials, he has preached about his alternative, a civilian cross between the ROTC and the Peace Corps that could supply California, for example, with up to 30,000 extra police officers, Walinsky estimates.

Although many questions remain unanswered about his proposal, it has aroused curiosity — and in some cases outright admiration.

"It is one of the real innovative ideas to come along in the last 10 years," enthused San Jose, Calif., Police Chief Joseph McNamara. "There's a very deep and intense interest here."

Under Walinsky's proposal, students would be paid room, board and tuition for four years of college — provided they serve for three years after graduation on a local police force.

After their sophomore and junior years, the prospective police officer would work summers as cadets in the local departments where, after graduation, they would serve. The new officers would have to satisfy all local guidelines, including training and testing.

If the recruited officers do not fulfill their three-year obligation, the money given out for schooling would be treated as a loan.

Walinsky said students would be paid approximately $35,000 during their college years — possibly less than that in states like California, where lower-priced education is available.

They would be paid about $15,000 per year for the three years of police service, a sum less than normally is paid to recruited officers since, in effect, the Police Corps officers would receive part of their salary in advance. The total would represent far less annually than is spent now for an officer, Walinsky said.

"You're talking about a total outlay of $30,000 or less a year, whereas in New York now the average year of police service costs well over $50,000," he said.

A former legislative assistant and speechwriter for New York Senator Robert F. Kennedy, Walinsky developed the plan as an economic way of combatting rising crime in New York. After figuring that the solution was, simply, more cops on the streets, Walinsky turned to precedents such as ROTC — Reserve Officers Training Corps — and the Peace Corps.

"The jobs that are really important, whether it's social change or national defense, require the assumption of responsibility by citizens," he said.

Walinsky spoke to several California police chiefs in April at the invitation of California Assemblyman Tom Hayden. Hayden, an old friend of Walinsky, believes the plan holds promise.

"I think it would broaden the kinds of people thinking about law enforcement work," Hayden said. "We have to attract people who believe in a combination of community service and traditional enforcement. (The proposal) would attract people who are idealists; you'd get a cross section."

San Jose Chief McNamara contends that the proposal "would instill a concept of professional idealism, of the citizen-police officer like the citizen-soldiers that have served the military," he said.

But there are problems. Under Walinsky's plan, the Police Corps would be organized by states, which would pay the students' tuition and money for room and board. But the students-turned-cops would work for local departments, leading to fears that the state would gain some control over municipal concerns.

Some officials also question who would pay the costs if the student-officers are killed or disabled.

Abandoned railroad to run again

PORTO VELHO, Brazil (AP) — The historic Madeira-Mamore Railroad, built with the lives of thousands of workers from all over the world and then abandoned and forgotten in the wilds of the Amazon jungle, has been partially brought back to service.

Thanks to concerned officials in this far-off northwest corner of Brazil on the border with Bolivia, 4.5 miles of the U.S-built, British-administered line are running again.

Tourists can ride in rickety open-air wooden cars pulled by old-time steam locomotives and get a feeling for what things were like on the so-called "Devil's Railroad," which began operating in 1912.

Eleven more miles are to return to service this year.

"We felt we had to preserve our history," said Joao Dantas Cyrino, the railroad's administrator, who coordinated the restoration. "The Madeira-Mamore was responsible for bringing civilization to this region. It was the mother of our local traditions."

The line was planned during South America's 19th-century rubber boom. Its purpose was to carry latex out of the jungle, past treacherous waterfalls along the Mamore and Madeira rivers, to Porto Velho, an outlet to North America and Europe via the Amazon River System.

But soon after the railroad started, the bottom fell out of the rubber market here. The Madeira-Mamore quietly faded into obsolescence, and in 1972 authorities junked it.

Two American firms and a British company tried to build the railroad before 1900, but they all gave up because of yellow fever, malaria and seemingly impossible engineering tasks.

In 1905 Brazil awarded the contract to a U.S. company — May, Jekyll and Randolph — which, with great difficulty and enormous personnel losses, inaugurated the 226-mile line in 1912 after five years of actual construction.

Thousands of workers from North America, Europe, the Middle East and the Caribbean poured into Brazil to build the Madeira-Mamore. The death toll from disease, wild animal attacks and heat exhaustion was overwhelming.

Although there are no precise overall figures, hospital records from the period, still on file in Porto Velho, show that an average of 15 percent of the workers brought in for each three-month shift did not survive.

Arthur Winter, 55, the Brazilian-born son of an imported railway laborer from Barbados, remained in this country and worked as a locomotive fireman on the Madeira-Mamore until the shutdown. He was called back for the reactivation.

"This railroad has been my whole life," he told a visitor. Winter spoke Portuguese, Brazil's language, saying he had all but forgotten his family's native English.

"You can't imagine what a job it was to restore even 4.5 miles," said Cyrino, 55, who came out of military retirement to head the project. "When we started in 1979, we didn't know what we had or where it was. Much of the equipment had simply been abandoned in the jungle. A lot had been stolen. There were tracks running under people's houses."

Lewis ties his fifth knot

NESBIT, Miss. (AP) — Singer Jerry Lee Lewis has made his fifth trip to the altar, tying the knot this time with Shawn Michelle Stephens, a 25-year-old former secretary.

The Lewises

The quiet ceremony Tuesday at his home was attended by about 30 people, most of them relatives of the bride and groom.

Lewis, 47, met his bride in Detroit about three years ago, said J.W. Whitten, the singer's manager. He said the couple decided to get married about a month ago.

Lewis' fourth wife, Jaren Gunn Lewis, drowned in a swimming accident last summer. She and Lewis were in the process of divorcing.

FRUTHWILEN, Switzerland (AP) — Hans Leip, a German writer and painter who wrote the lyrics to "Lili Marlene," died Monday of heart failure. He was 89.

Leip wrote "Lili Marlene" in 1915. His lithographs and water colors were featured in several European exhibitions.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Christo, the artist who draped 11 Biscayne Bay islands in pink, wore a pink shirt, was honored with a resolution on pink paper, and mingled with government officials sporting pink boutonnieres.

Christo

Gov. Bob Graham slipped Florida's Ambassador of the Arts medal around Christo's neck at a ceremony Tuesday to honor the artist.

"The 'Surrounded Islands' project will go down in history as one of the most extraordinary art projects ever developed," Secretary of State George Firestone said. "For a period of time, all the eyes in the world were on the state of Florida."

Firestone added that the two-week project, completed May 7, increased Dade County tourism between 10 percent and 20 percent.

Christo called "Surrounded Islands" the "most beautiful project I did," but told reporters he won't dress Florida islands again.

Her efforts help uncover scandal

NEW YORK (AP) — A People magazine photographer is waiting for her. Newsweek has her picture in this week's pages. And she just squeezed in a quick appearance on the "Today" show.

Who is this woman?

"Barbara Walters asked me that only a few days ago," she begins in a soft accent of the South. "I am a strong mother, a good daughter, a patriot and I struggle to be a good Catholic."

She is Marie Ragghianti, a woman of principle.

While chairman of the Tennessee Board of Pardons and Paroles in 1976, she saw evidence that paroles and clemency were for sale. She could have ignored it. She was urged to ignore it.

But she didn't.

Her efforts helped topple the Democratic administration of Gov. Ray Blanton. Politicians fell because they never thought this mother of three, a former beauty queen with raven hair and an enchanting smile, would risk her high government post, her handsome salary and her reputation to fight them.

They were wrong.

Blanton escaped that scandal, but two of his aides were caught. They are serving five-year terms in prison. Two years after he left office, Blanton was convicted on unrelated charges stemming from the issuance of liquor licenses. He is appealing.

Despite Mrs. Ragghianti's widely publicized travails in Tennessee, the rest of the country had scarcely heard her name. Now, with the publication of "Marie, A True Story," she has become a national celebrity.

"Marie" is the work of Peter Maas, who wrote about another whistleblower, Frank Serpico, an honest cop who refused to look the other way when he found graft in the New York City Police Department.

AP Laserphoto

Marie Ragghianti of Saracosta, Florida helped topple the Democratic administration of Tennessee. The book entitled, "Marie," was written by Peter Maas, and is about the scandal that toppled the ex-governor of Tennessee Ray Blanton.

Film rights for "Marie," have already been sold to Dino de Laurentiis for $650,000, and Mrs. Ragghianti is off on a 20-city tour to promote the book.

New program teaches three R's in four days

DAYS CREEK, Ore. (AP) — The last bell rings at 4 o'clock and kids come tumbling out of classrooms, eager to be free for the weekend.

As lockers bang shut and chatter fades out the front door, one teacher sighs, "Thank God it's Thursday."

Thursday?

For the 250 students and 16 teachers in this southwestern Oregon farming community, Thursday marks the end of the school week in an experimental program that packs the three R's into four days.

STARTED LAST FALL TO SAVE money on heating, lighting and busing, the four-day school week appeals to teachers who enjoy long weekends and parents who say their children are more enthusiastic about school.

"We're still on a trial basis," said Bob Brown, chairman of the Days Creek school board. "But we haven't had one complaint to the board against it. Basically, we figure everyone must be satisfied."

The four-day school week is gaining acceptance in rural school districts, as administrators search for ways to cut budgets without cutting staff.

Scattered districts in 13 states now operate on an abbreviated week, with the largest number in Colorado, said Paul Bauman, policy analyst for the Denver-based Education Commission of the States. In at least two other states, legislation has been introduced to permit four-day school weeks, he said.

THERE HAVE BEEN NO major studies analyzing the success of the four-day school week nationwide, said Bauman. A 1981 study of Colorado schools concluded that the system needed more time before it could be fairly evaluated, he said.

Nation side, the fou-day week is limited to rural school districts, where many students spend their days off helping on the family ranch or farm, Bauman said.

The grandfather of the four-day week is the 400-student Cimarron, N.M., school district, where a Tuesday-through-Friday schedule has been in effect for 10 years. Superintendent Joe Pompeo says that community would fire him if he switched back to a five-day week.

In Oregon, Days Creek and Prospect, about 45 miles northeast of Medford, are winding up a one-year trial program approved by state school Superintendent Verne Duncan. Both districts want to keep the schedule and officials in Rogue River say they are considering a four-day week next fall.

Shifting to a shorter week required the Oregon school districts to get a one-year waiver from a state regulation that students spend 175 days a year in the classroom. The Days Creek school year is 147 days. In Prospect, it is 145 days.

Fewer classroom days doesn't mean less time in school, however.

IN DAYS CREEK, STUDENTS go to school an extra 50 minutes Monday through Thursday. The school day was extended by 70 minutes in Prospect. Teachers work every other Friday.

In addition, sports events, parent-teacher conferences and other extracurricular activities are held Fridays, minimizing distractions during the rest of the week.

Since kids are only in school four days, "they have a little bit more motivation to work harder when they are there," said Terry Gail, superintendent of schools in Prospect.

"It's long some days, I won't kid you," said Karen Pickett, who teaches third and fourth grade in Days Creek. "We have to push really hard, but the days go real fast."

In a recent survey of parents, 92 percent said the four-day week was a very good or generally good idea, said Roger Rada, superintendent of schools in Days Creek.

Explosion kills Yugoslavian miners

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Methane gas exploded in a coal mine in Serbia, killing nine people and trapping dozens of miners for hours, officials said today.

The blast on Tuesday injured 53 people, police said. Among the dead were three engineers who had gone into the mine to find the cause of a fire that had been smoldering 2,500 feet below ground for several days, Miroslav Vukic, a director of the Alkeksinac mines, told Radio Belgrade today.

"I suddenly felt a blast. I knew it was methane," said Ljubisa Dimitrijevic, an engineer who was hospitalized with a head injury. "I helped two people out and then could help no more. I had severe pains in my head and chest," he told the radio.

The mine is 96 miles south of Belgrade, Yugoslavia's capital.

Shultz critical of Soviet policy

PARIS (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, heading into a meeting of NATO foreign ministers, today criticized Soviet policies in several key areas and said the alliance must remain firm in its determination to deploy new nuclear weapons in Western Europe.

Shultz told a news conference "it must be made clear to everybody" that NATO will proceed with deployment of cruise and Pershing 2 missiles to counter the "relentless" Soviet buildup of SS-20 missiles targeted at Western Europe.

On the Middle East, Shultz renewed his criticism of the Soviet decision to install SAM-5 missiles in Syria, to operate them with Soviet forces and to try to block implementation of the Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement.

Soviet emigration claims blasted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has denounced a claim by a committee of Soviet Jews that most citizens of Jewish ancestry wanting to leave the Soviet Union have already emigrated.

Responding to a statement by the Anti-Zionist Committee, State Department spokesman Alan Romberg said thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands of Jews "are still seeking to emigrate from the Soviet Union."

These citizens "have been denied this fundamental right of movement on the flimsiest of pretexts," Romberg said Tuesday.

On Monday, Moscow lawyer Samuel Zivs said most Jewish emigration to accomplish the reunion of families separated during World War II had already been accomplished.

Mother Teresa, 72, hospitalized

ROME (AP) — Nobel Peace Prize winner Mother Teresa of Calcutta has been hospitalized for a rest after a fall at her mission house in Rome, doctors and mission officials said today.

The 72-year-old nun slipped Monday at the Missionaries of Charity and was taken to Salvator Mundi Hospital for tests, Sister Mary Rajini, sister superior of the order said in a telephone interview.

She said Mother Teresa was not hurt in the fall but was very tired and needed rest.

Bodies pulled from wrecked plane

GRAHAM, Ontario (AP) — Divers have recovered the bodies of four of the five people on board a small plane which plunged into a northern Ontario lake Monday, police said.

Divers of the Ontario Provincial Police divers planned to resume their search today for Greg Heinkal of St. Charles, Ill., whose body was not found.

On Tuesday, the divers discovered the bodies of Sidney Hancock, the pilot, of Fort Frances, Ontario; Gerald Drolen of Chicago Ridge, Ill.; Jack Smith of Chicago, and John Syarto, believed to be of Chicago. The Americans had been on a fishing trip.

Their plane plunged into Dacent Lake, about 125 miles northwest of Thunder Bay.

Hancock had flown to the lake with another pilot, George Qua, 25, of Fort Frances, in a separate plane to pick up nine U.S. fishermen who had been at an outpost camp for five days.

Thai helicopter explosion kills 11

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Eleven government officials and military officers were killed when their helicopter exploded after taking off from an army base today in northeastern Thailand, Radio Thailand reported.

The radio said Maj. Gen. Lert Kanitanaka, deputy commander of the Second Army, and Kangwan Devahastin Na Ayudhya, deputy secretary of state in the Ministry of Agriculture, were among the officials killed.

The helicopter took off from Korat, 150 miles northeast of Bangkok, and exploded about 10 minutes after being airborne, the radio said.

It said the officers were on their way to inspect land that had been set aside for defectors from rebel communist forces.

Three persons killed by Beirut car bomb

By The Associated Press

Two Israeli soldiers and a Lebanese policeman were killed by a car bomb outside Beirut today, at a time when Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization reportedly were suggesting terms for withdrawing their troops from Lebanon.

Lebanon's state radio said the car bomb exploded in a white Mercedes parked near an Israeli patrol just south of Beirut. The radio said several Lebanese pedestrians were injured, in addition to the two soldiers and the traffic policeman who were killed.

The blast occurred on a day when news reports in Lebanon and the United States indicated new possibilities that Syria and PLO might soften their opposition to the Israeli-Lebanese troop-pullout accord and agree to withdraw their own forces from Lebanon.

The privately owned Voice of Lebanon radio station said the Lebanese government and the PLO are negotiating terms for a withdrawal of PLO guerillas by mid-July.

In the United States, CBS television and The Washington Post reported that Syria is floating through Arab channels several conditions for pulling out its troops from Lebanon.

In Damascus, a Syrian official who requested anonymity said the reports were untrue, while mutinous guerrillas denied PLO chier Yasser Arafat's claims that their rebellion had been thwarted. In Jerusalem, meanwhile, Parliament defeated an opposition motion for a partial Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon.

CBS quoted unidentified U.S. officials as saying Syriais taking "a half-step back" in its confrontational stanw%. Ammng the conditions posed by tle Syrians for a negotiated pullout are that relations between Israel and Lebanon not be normalized, CBS said.

Another condition, said the report, is that there be sevurity arrangements in northeastern Lebanon similar to those worked out in southern Lebanon between Lebanon and Israel.

The Washington Post reported that the Damscus government is seeking to prevent the headwaters of Syria's Orontes River, which are located in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, from falling under Israeli control. The river irrigates much of Syria and supplies it with electric power.

The Syrians reportedly want a written security treaty with Lebanon guaranteeing that Lebanese or Syrian troops could keep the Orontes' headwaters out of Israeli hands.

The Post said Lebanon also fears Israel will try to ease its growing water crisis by diverting part of Lebanon's Litani River.

The Voice of Lebanon said Arafat has "agreed in principle to the withdrawal timetable but insisted on guarantees by the Lebanese government to protect the civilian Palestinian population."
