Chinese protesters still occupy square

BEIJING (AP) — Hardliners moved to tighten their control of China on Friday after moderate Communist Party chief Zhao Ziyang was stripped of his power and placed under house arrest.

Students leading the demonstrations that have forced the power struggle continued to occupy Beijing's Tiananmen Square one week after martial law was declared in Beijing. But thousands could be seen leaving, and crowds dwindled to about 15,000.

Despite the drop and the apparent ouster of Zhao, who had been more conciliatory toward the protesters, students vowed to continue to press for social reforms and the resignation of hard-line Premier Li Peng.

The protesters previously have demonstrated the ability to rally huge numbers of citizens on short notice.

Communist Party members nationwide were studying two sets of documents as the Central Committee prepared to meet. One document blamed Zhao for the 6-week-old student movement and the other called for a "resolute suppression of the disturbances," sources said.

Zhao had expressed sympathy for the student movement, was the first to call it "patriotic" and apparently worked behind the scenes to oppose the May 20 declaration of martial law in Beijing.

But sources said conservatives accused Zhao of splitting the party, instigating disturbances, revealing party secrets, corruption and taking credit for achievements of senior leader Deng Xiaoping during the past decade.

On state-run news Wednesday night, Li was quoted as saying that Deng "is the main reformer in China, not anyone else."

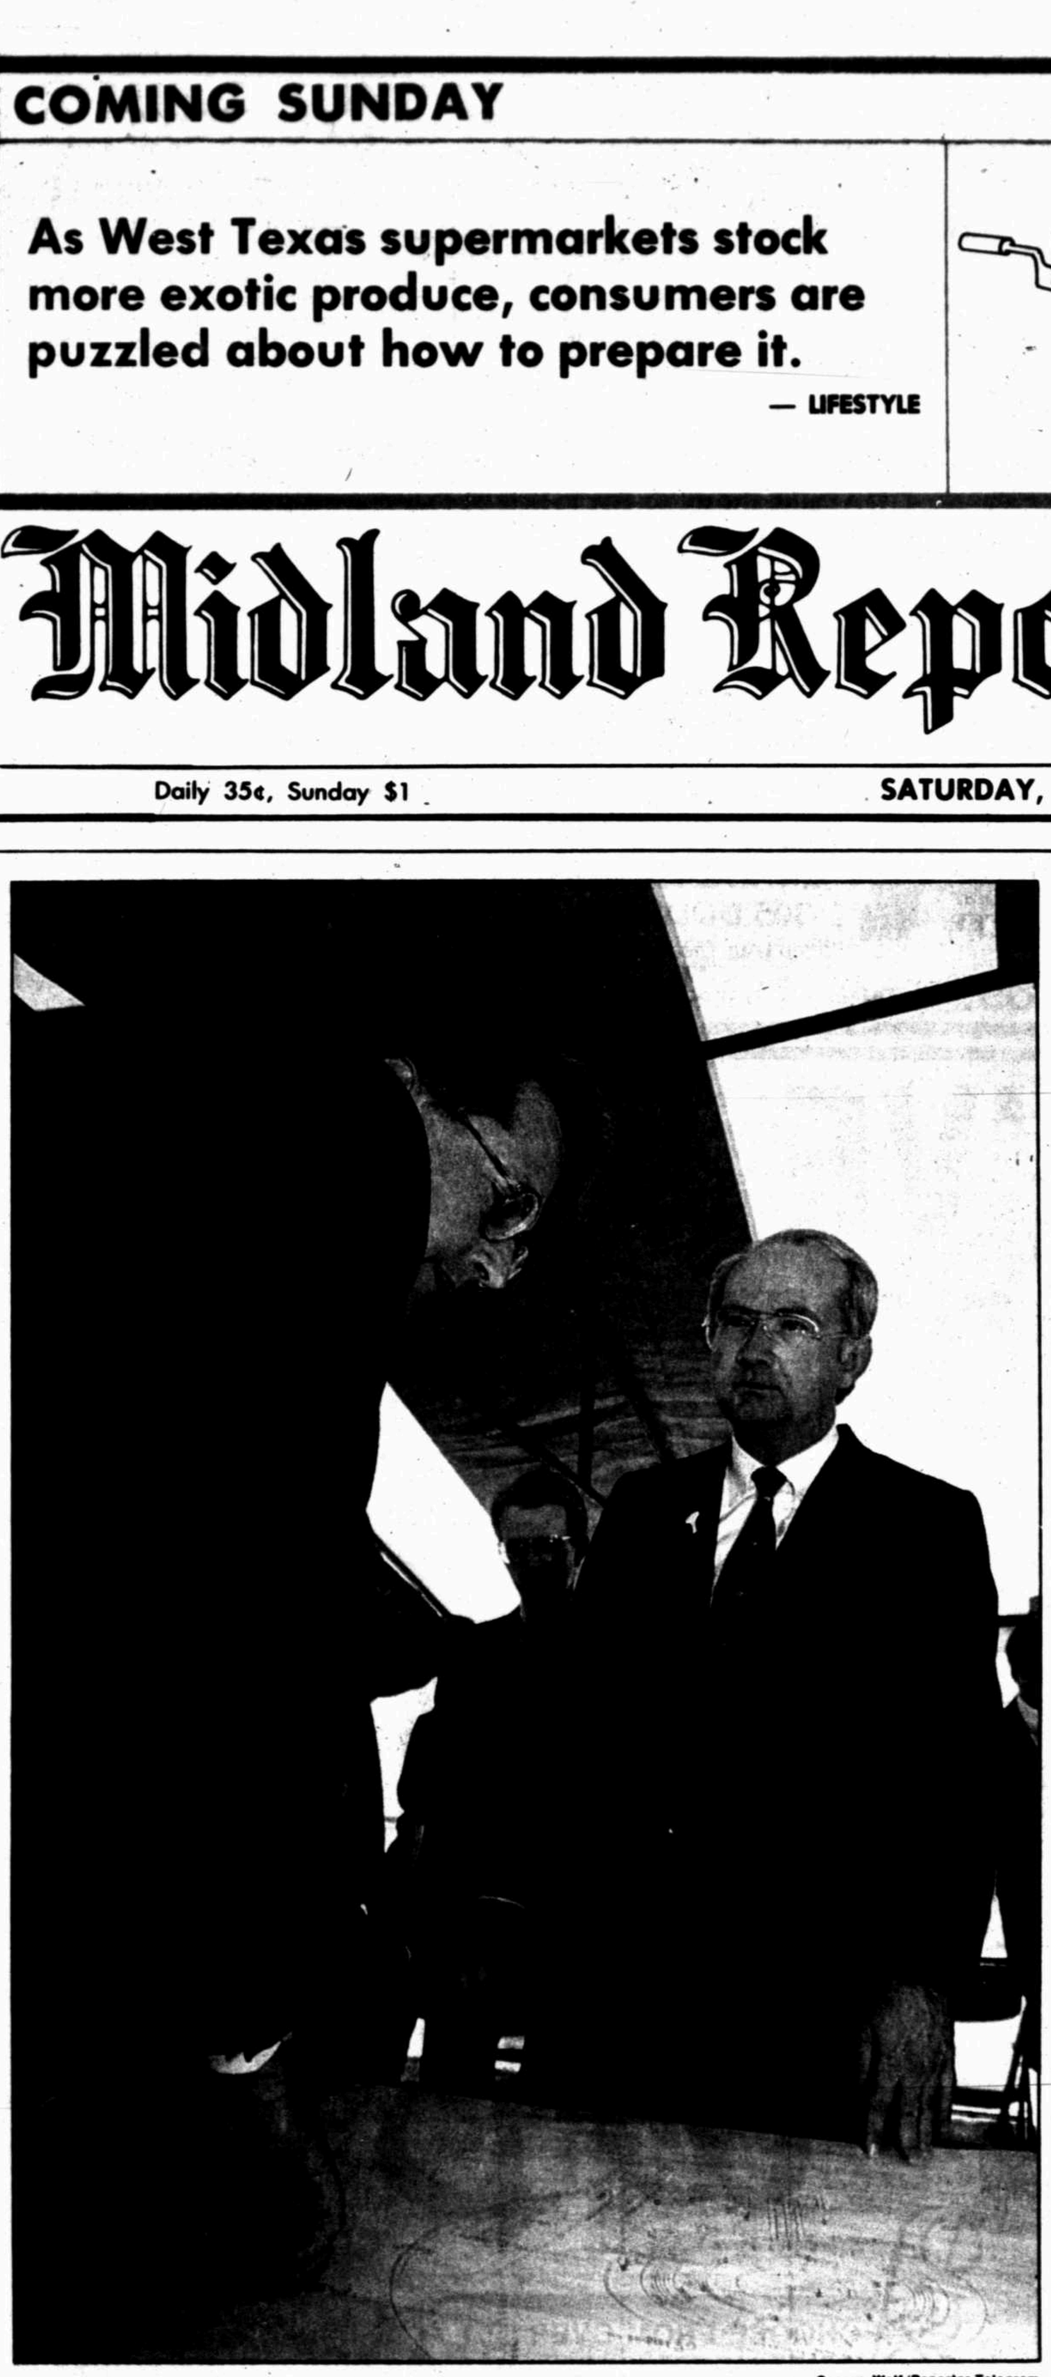

Although Deng ushered in market-oriented economic reforms, student protesters have been pressing for political freedoms, such as a free press, and an end to official profiteering. Millions have taken to the streets in recent weeks to call for the resignation of Li and Deng, who are more resistant to social reforms than is Zhao.

Li was quoted Friday in the state-run press as calling on soldiers surrounding Beijing to conduct "a resolute struggle against the plots of a small minority."

Eastern European and Chinese sources said Zhao was stripped of power Wednesday night during a meeting of top government officials and was under house arrest.

The party's Central Committee would have to ratify any leadership change. It is expected to meet soon.

Congressional briefing

Dr. Philip Bauman, project manager of TU Electric's Superconducting Magnetic Energy Storage site proposal, left, briefs U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, on the U.S. Department of Defense project during a Friday tour. If selected, the site near Monahans would become home to the first test model of its kind for storing electricity.

Gramm backs SMES plan

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

MONAHANS — U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, excited about the prospects of Texas being chosen as the site of the first Superconducting Magnetic Energy Storage facility, Friday announced plans to garner congressional support for the program.

The Texas Republican, who has been working with local, state, federal and industry leaders to promote a West Texas site near Monahans, took an aerial tour of the property and then attended a briefing on the development of the SMES proposal.

"We're just simply going have to do everything we can to see that we get a chance to compete; that the merits of our proposal get through to the people who are making the decision," Gramm told reporters after the briefing.

The TU Electric site, located about six miles west of Monahans, has made the U.S. Department of Defense's list of five finalists, along with those in the states of Washington, Wisconsin and New Mexico.

The defense department, which is interested in the technology as a source of power for the Strategic Defense Initiative, is expected to make its final selection in the summer of 1990.

If chosen, the $130 million engineering test model — designed to store 20,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity — would be supervised by Bechtel National Inc. in cooperation with TU Electric Co.

Gramm said the test model would essentially use superconducting magnets to store electricity — much as a giant battery does — for strategic and commercial application.

Guide billed $2.78 million for forest fire

New York Times News Service

HELENA, Mont. — A Montana fishing guide and his client got a bill this week from the U.S. Forest Service, along with a pre-addressed envelope.

The service wanted reimbursement for the cost of fighting a fire last fall in southern Montana.

The bill, by the way, was for almost $3 million.

The problem, said Joseph Sabol, a lawyer for the guide, Vernon Smith, who runs an outfitting service in Bozeman, is that Smith does not believe he was responsible for the Hellroaring Creek fire that burned 52,600 acres in the Gallatin National Forest and 29,300 acres in Yellowstone National Park.

And even if his client was guilty, Sabol said, he does not have $2.78 million to pay the bill.

"He's gotten a lot of bad press, and been forced to sell his equipment and his pack string," Sabol said. "His life has been shattered. Obviously he's not in a position to pay a bill like that.

"We don't believe we're responsible and we're not going to pay."

A Forest Service spokesman in Gallatin, Jim Sanders, said an investigation just after the fire started in the Absaroka Beartooth Wilderness Area showed it might have been caused by a stove left burning in a tent occupied by Todd Wilkof, of Canton, Ohio, who was on a sightseeing trip with a guide employed by Smith.

Smith was not at the camp when the fire started.

Sanders said a fire in the stove, and perhaps another stove in a different tent, were left unattended when the visitors went fishing for the day.

Sanders said the Forest Service had no choice but to seek reimbursement for the fire. The total amount has not been determined, he said.

But he added that when all the costs were tallied, including equipment and personnel costs, it would probably be closer to $4.5 million.

If so, he said, Smith and Wilkof would receive a revised bill.

Midland businessman Clayton Williams, a likely candidate for governor in 1990, answers questions for Carver Center students in the atrium of the ClayDesta National Bank building.

Williams answers students' questions

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Wearing a white cowboy hat, black boots and a King Ranch-sized silver belt buckle, the cowboy entrepreneur-turned-gubernatorial candidate stood with his hands on his hips Friday and addressed the eager assemblage.

He spoke of his life as a teen-ager, his ascent up the business ladder, the importance of education, his political convictions and, among other topics, his son, who as a high schooler abused drugs and alcohol.

Then, armed with pages full of questions on topics such as AIDS, the dropout problem and global warming, the group of Carver Elementary School gifted-and-talented program sixth-graders got a chance to grill Midland businessman Clayton Williams.

Responding to a scathing editorial on him in Carver's pupil newspaper, written and published by the school's 42 gifted-and-talented children, Williams granted an interview session beneath the life-sized giraffes in the ClayDesta Communications building's atrium.

Melinda Martin, a Carver journalism teacher, said her pupils in early March attempted to contact Williams, who has unofficially thrown his cowboy headdress into the governor's derby, and ask him about his candidacy. The story would go on Page 1 in a May edition of the school newspaper, Ms. Martin said.

"We just never got past the secretaries," Ms. Martin said, adding that the children tried for about six weeks to telephone Williams.

So rather than a story about Williams running for governor, the May newspaper included an editorial saying "Clayton Williams was not interested in the education of the youth in Texas," said Ms. Martin, who mailed a copy of the column to the candidate.

Japan, India upset by trade status

TOKYO (AP) — Japan and India reacted angrily and leveled countercharges against the United States on Friday after being named along with Brazil as serious fair-trade violators possibly subject to stiff retaliatory tariffs.

The Brazilian government also denied allegations of unfair trade practices and a presidential aide in Brasilia said the nation would present "solid arguments in its defense."

The Bush administration on Thursday listed countries with trade barriers most harmful to American producers, as required by the 1988 Omnibus Trade Act. The government has 18 months to negotiate away the barriers and failure of the talks could lead to tariffs of up to 100 percent on selected exports from the offenders.

Foreign Minister Sousuke Uno summoned U.S. Ambassador Michael Armacost to deliver a protest in Tokyo and the government said there were errors in U.S. complaints about alleged barriers to sales of supercomputers, satellites and forest products in Japan.

Uno and other Cabinet ministers said the U.S. action was "extremely regrettable" and officials indicated Japan would refuse to participate in talks sought by the United States to end the alleged practices.

"This designation in no way possesses legal binding force in the international trade system," said Hiroshi Mitsuzuka, minister of international trade and industry.

India was cited for barriers against foreign investment and the closing of its insurance market to foreign companies. The administration cited Brazil for quotas on imports and licensing restrictions.

"We regard this law and action under it as totally unjustified, irrational and unfair," India's Commerce Minister Dinesh Singh said in New Delhi.

"The United States' action is particularly surprising because the U.S. Itself has built and retained a variety of barriers against access to its markets," Singh said. "It is hardly in a position to ask others to lift barriers without doing so itself."

In Brasilia, Ronaldo Costa Couto, the chief of staff of President Jose Sarney, said in a radio interview that Sarney was "concerned" about the U.S. decision but said, "Brazil has solid arguments in its defense."

All three nations have trade surpluses with the United States, led by Japan's $52 billion surplus.

Senate favors requiring English proficiency for college instructors

AUSTIN (AP) — State college and university faculty members whose primary language is foreign would have to prove proficiency in spoken English to continue teaching, under a bill passed Friday by the Senate.

The Senate adopted the measure on a voice vote and sent the bill back to the House for consideration of changes in the legislation.

The bill would require that state higher education institutions establish short courses in English for faculty members whose first language is not English. Those faculty members would be required to complete the course and pass a spoken language test.

In other action Friday, the Senate approved a House amendment to a fair housing measure that tracks federal law, and sent the bill to the governor.

Supporters of the measure said the advantage of having a state fair housing law is that, without it, cities that do not adapt their own housing ordinances could face the loss of federal grant money. If a state law is enacted, cities could adopt it.

The Senate also adopted a measure that would increase disclosure requirements for political action committees and candidates. The bill goes back to the House for consideration of Senate amendments.

Common Cause, a political watchdog group, supports the bill, but said tougher campaign finance reform is needed.

"We urge the Legislature ... to seriously study and develop proposals for controlling large campaign contributions, skyrocketing campaign expenditures, and the influence of powerful and well-financed special interests," said Pam Fridrich, executive director of Common Cause of Texas.

The Senate sent to the governor a measure that would require the Texas Department of Human Services to provide medical care for a child born to a woman incarcerated in the state prison system if there is no other source of payment.

There will be approximately 95 births to women incarcerated in Texas Department of Corrections facilities in 1990 at a cost of about $78,000, according to a legislative bill analysis.

The Senate also sent to the governor bills that would require information on the identities of persons who are victims of a felony offense and home addresses and telephone numbers of former public agency or employees be kept confidential.

AIDS effort opposed

AUSTIN (AP) — A proposal directing state colleges and universities to institute AIDS education programs fell in the House Friday, after five lawmakers objected to the measure.

The proposal by Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, was removed from the consent calendar after objections by Republican Reps. A.R. "Augie" Ovard, Dallas; Troy Fraser, Big Spring; Talmadge Heflin, Houston; Dick Waterfield, Canadian; and Kim Brimer, Arlington. Waterfield later withdrew his objection.

Because the consent calendar is reserved for non-controversial measures, legislation can be removed from it through such objections, so the House did not get to vote on the proposal.

"If college students don't already know about AIDS, then they just haven't been listening and they haven't been looking," said Ovard, who added that he thinks AIDS information should stress the illegality of sodomy in Texas.

Houston representative sworn in during final days of House session

AUSTIN (AP) — Newly elected Rep. Charlie Hartland said he was prepared for "baptism by fire" in the House before he was sworn in Friday, only days before the regular legislative session adjourns.

"I feel like the ultimate rookie, but I feel good, and I feel confident that I'll do all right," Hartland, R-Houston, said as he waited to take the oath of office from House Speaker Gib Lewis.

The House was to be in session until midnight Friday in an effort to meet deadlines for passing legislation before adjournment at midnight Monday.

"Everybody's told me that this is going to be an exciting day. There's going to be a lot of activity, so for the next 16 hours, I'm going to learn all about this thing," said Hartland.

Joining him in the House chamber during the swearing-in ceremony were his wife, Joan, and their 11 children, including a six-day-old daughter.

Hartland beat Democrat Kevin Bailey for the House seat in a special election Tuesday. The election was for the unexpired term of Rep. Weldon Betts, a Democrat who was elected to a two-year term last November but died of lung cancer.

A statement distributed on Hartland's behalf said he is committed to fighting crime and opposes any form of a state income tax. "His pro-life stand and traditional family values also appealed to the voters," said the statement.

Hartland said he would be ready if a special session is required for lawmakers to complete their business. A home builder, he said he would be able to take the time off from his work to tend to state business.

"I have a partner. Before I decided to run we talked and decided that we'd be able to handle this ... He's going to pick up all my slack," he said.

Three arrested in scheme to ship Iran weapons

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Two Canadians and a Swede are being held on allegations they conspired to illegally export more than $600 million worth of U.S. military equipment to Iran, the U.S. Customs Service said Friday.

Federal officials arrested Eileen and Ronald Hilton Arab of Vancouver, British Columbia, and Erik Nissen, of Norrkoping, Sweden, at the Corpus Christi airport Thursday night as Nissen prepared to leave the country.

The trio, believed to be part of a larger organization, had been negotiating to buy weapons and military equipment from undercover Customs agents, said Marvin Milner, Customs agent-in-charge in Corpus Christi.

"They are not radicals. They are not politically affiliated with anyone (we) know of. They were in it for money, and that's all — big bucks," Milner said. "You can imagine on an operation of this size there obviously must be other people involved."

The three were arrested on charges of violating the Arms Export Control Act, money laundering and conspiracy.

U.S. Magistrate Eduardo E. de Ases on Friday denied bond for the three and set a detention hearing for Tuesday. No pleas have been entered.

Milner said Nissen and Arab came to Corpus Christi in February to inspect two 106mm recoil-less rifles, then presented undercover agents with a "shopping list" of weapons including C-130 aircraft parts, attack helicopters, rifles and ammunition, F5B trainer jets, F5E fighters and spare parts for F14 and F4 Phantom jets.

The conspirators, he said, planned to bring vans and containers to Rockport, Texas, where the agents would load the military supplies and send them to Canada by truck, using false cargo documents. The material was to be sent on commercial cargo flights to Luxembourg, and from there to Iran.

The group at one point gave the agents $50,000 in good faith money and demonstrated they could come up with the rest, Milner said.

The only items actually shipped to Iran were 13 heaters, worth $1,400 apiece, used in urinals aboard F4C fighters, he said.

Customs officials believe the group was negotiating to buy weapons elsewhere, but declined to be more specific because of a continuing investigation.

Agents had hoped the three would lead them to other conspirators but were forced to cut short the investigation when Nissen prepared to leave the country, apparently to straighten out a financial problem, Milner said.

Customs believes the weapons buyers decided to work through Corpus Christi in hopes of avoiding detection.

"I think they came here because they were looking for an out-of-the-way place that was quiet, and for their purposes they needed that lack of attention," Milner said.

The three were caught through a sting dubbed "Gulf Breeze." Customs agents opened a phony business in June 1987 at the Corpus Christi International Airport, called "Plane Things Inc." to buy, sell, trade and modify aircraft.

STATE IN BRIEF

Only minor injuries in school bus mishap

HOUSTON (AP) — A school bus carrying 19 children overturned Friday afternoon in the height of rush-hour traffic, but police said no one was seriously hurt.

The bus carrying Clifton Middle School children, ranging in age from 12 to 14, turned over at the Highway 290-Loop 610 interchange, police said.

Paramedics treated the students and bus driver for minor injuries on the side of the freeway. All were taken to three area hospitals as a precaution.

Investigators were still trying to determine the cause of the accident but speculated it was caused by a blown out tire.

"We have a flat tire on the bus. We're not sure at this time whether it blew out causing the driver to lose control or if the accident caused the flat tire," said Officer E.D. Hillman, with the Houston Police accident division. "It's going to require further investigation."

Other drivers carry guns

DALLAS (AP) — A bus driver charged in the fatal shooting of a passenger is one of several drivers who has toted a pistol on certain routes despite regulations and state laws that forbid such action.

"A lot of drivers carry pistols because no one else is going to protect us out there," said a five-year driver who asked not to be named. "We're like meat on a hook, out there ... and if you live in fear, some of the passengers are like animals and they will eat you up."

Chauncey J. Plummer, 37, was free Friday on $25,000 bond. He was charged with murder in the Wednesday shooting of David Hayden, 25, one of his passengers. Plummer had stashed the gun next to his seat.

The veteran Dallas Area Rapid Transit driver told police he began packing a pistol after three separate assaults that occurred within the last two years.

The drivers compared Plummer's actions to those of Bernhard Goetz, the New York man who shot four teen-agers in 1984 on a subway because he said they were going to mug him. Goetz is serving a one-year jail term.

Veterans' cards canceled

AMARILLO (AP) — A veterans' hospital trying to update records canceled 2,000 cards that allow veterans to get medical care at any hospital, prompting a San Angelo man to dash off a complaint to his Congressman.

World War II veteran Joseph Holtem Jr. said Friday that without his outpatient fee basis card, which allows him to obtain up to $75 monthly in medical treatment at any facility, he must drive up to 100 miles to the veterans' medical centers in Amarillo or Lubbock.

"I feel we have such long distances to go in West Texas ... and it's an all-day affair to go up there," Holtem said.

The VA Center in Amarillo canceled the cards after several administrative and jurisdictional changes were made in administering benefits, said Barbara Brooks, center spokeswoman.

Alligator still at large

IRVING (AP) — The canals of an urban business complex are no place for an alligator, but a reptile that wandered into Las Colinas early this week apparently remains unconvinced.

The upscale gator continues to give trappers the slip. A man hailed as the "Red Adair of alligators" proved no match for the elusive beast that escaped his tracker's lasso. Red Adair is a specialist in putting out oil well fires.

Sidney Gardner, an alligator-rescue specialist from Livingston, headed home Thursday after futile attempts to catch the gator that has taken up residence in the lake, which sits between an elite hotel and a computer company's building. Parks and Wildlife officials first set a trap baited with liver.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Temperatures cooler; Storms possible

Temperatures have cooled slightly, but there are now chances for afternoon and evening thunderstorms tonight, forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport said.

Today will be partly cloudy with a high in the mid 80s. Winds should be from the east to southeast at 10-20 mph.

Tonight will also be partly cloudy but skies should clear by late evening. The low should be in the mid 60s.

There is less than a 20 percent chance of late afternoon and early evening thunderstorms today.

Sunday morning should be cloudy but clear. The high will be in the lower 90s.

The record high temperature for Friday was set in 1945 when it reached 100, while the record low was in 1947 when it dipped to 48.

STATE

A stationary front continued across the northwest part of Texas Friday, while a dry line drifted westward as much of the state experienced fair to partly cloudy weather.

The National Weather Service reported the front continued along a line from the Sherman-Denison area, to Abilene and on to Midland. The dry line drifted west to slice across the Far West to just east of the Guadalupe Pass and Marfa.

Partly cloudy skies prevailed in an area east of Wichita Falls, Abilene, Austin and McAllen, while to the west of these areas, skies were clear.

NATION

Thunderstorms on Friday brought hail and damaging winds from Missouri and Arkansas into the central Appalachians, and flooding from heavy rain continued in Ohio and Indiana.

Flooding in southwest Ohio left at least three people missing. A 20-month-old boy was swept away after he fell into a rain-swollen creek northeast of Dayton, Ohio, authorities said. At Miamitown, a one-lane temporary bridge washed away, sending a car and a pickup truck into the Great Miami River. Floods also forced the evacuation of about 200 people in Camden.

Rivers continued to rise in parts of Indiana and Ohio as a result of heavy rains Thursday. The White River was expected to crest 2 feet above flood stage on Saturday at Noblesville, Ind., and at Ravenswood, Ind., flooding homes.

Thunderstorms dropped golf-ball-size hail near Batesville, Ark., and one-inch-diameter hail near Senath, Mo., and in Simpson County, Ky.

Midland statistics

Scramble on for House leadership

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democratic Whip Tony Coelho plans to announce his resignation from Congress on Saturday, Democratic sources said Friday, throwing the party's House leadership into even more turmoil with the expected resignation next week of Speaker Jim Wright.

Wright, his career in shambles as a result of ethics charges, disappeared for a long holiday weekend — after first handing out roses from his garden to television reporters camped outside his door.

Hours later, sources who spoke only on condition of anonymity said Coelho, the Californian who was third-ranking Democrat in the party's House leadership, also plans to quit because some of his business dealings are under scrutiny.

Popular Majority Leader Thomas Foley of Washington is likely to be elevated to speaker without a hint of discord, but Coelho had expected to be a contender for Foley's current job in what was expected to be a nasty battle.

But Coelho told the New York Times he plans to resign his leadership position as soon as a successor is picked and will quit the House on June 15, his 47th birthday.

"I don't intend to put this institution through more turmoil. And more importantly, I don't intend to put my family through more turmoil," the Times quoted him as saying.

"If I can't be leader and if I can't be whip, it's time to try a new and different challenge. Therefore, June 15, which is my 47th birthday, will be my last day in the Congress," Coelho told the Times.

Coelho's decision will be announced Saturday at the Capitol, said one source, who explained. "he doesn't want his attention or abilities distracted in this fashion."

Coelho "has been told by his attorneys that he has no legal difficulties. But he just thinks enough is enough," the source said. "He does not want to put his party through it."

Coelho was facing questions about a California bank executive's purchase of a high-yield junk bond for Coelho in 1986, when Coelho found himself unable to finance the transaction.

The bond was sold to Coelho by the executive a month later.

Coelho was expected to face other contenders for the majority leader's spot, including Ed Jenkins of Georgia.

Likely candidates for the whip position, the post now held by Coelho, include Democratic Caucus Chairman William Gray of Pennsylvania, Chief Deputy Whip David Bonior of Michigan and perhaps Richard Gephardt of Missouri — though Gephardt let it be known he won't try for the No. 2 majority leader's position against Coelho, who helped in his unsuccessful presidential campaign.

Senate bill would limit whistleblowers' lawsuits

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Local government whistleblowers would have to exhaust internal grievance or appeal procedures before they could file a lawsuit seeking relief if they were harassed for reporting violations under a bill the Texas Senate approved Friday.

House Bill 1405, carried by Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, goes back to the House with an amendment by Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, that would allow the whistleblower to seek district court relief 30 days after appealing the suspension or termination.

The bill, as written by Rep. Tom Craddick, D-Midland, did not specify what happened if the local appeals procedure was not exhausted within 30 days of the complaint.

Parker said the amendment was designed to prevent local governments from starving employees by making them go through lengthy appeals procedures.

In other action, the Senate sent to the governor a bill that would put high school dropouts on foot.

House Bill 850, carried by Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, would require persons under age 18 to show they are in school or have been graduated to obtain a conditional permit, which must be re-issued every year.

On a voice vote the Senate approved the bill that requires the Texas Education Agency to develop a form that would certify attendance.

Dropouts could still get a driving permit if they proved it was needed due to illness or economic hardship.

Zaffirini said she believed the bill would help motivate students to stay in school. "I've dealt directly with dropouts ... I know what motivates them and and what their problems are and they're not all related to economic problems and they're not all focused in minority areas," she said.

"In some cases you have children who simply are not motivated," she said, adding that she believed they should meet a higher standard.

WILLIAMS—

"We heard from them right away," she said.

So the pupils got an hour of Williams' time Thursday morning, and he wasted no time in responding to the editorial accusation.

"One reason I am a successful person is because I got a good education," he said. "You never quit learning. Today I'm running for governor of Texas and I'm learning a whole lot of new things I didn't know before."

Williams' central topic was stopping drug abuse. He related a story about how his son in high school drank too much beer and smoked marijuana, leading to his expulsion from school. After spending 1½ years in a drug abuse program in Dallas, his son now attends school at Sul Ross University.

"I want to tell you guys and girls it hurt our family," Williams said of his son's ordeal. "He lost a lot of his life."

After talking about his own education and later endeavors into the business world, Williams opened the floor to questions.

On the dropout problem, Williams said stomping out illegal drugs would take care of some of it, while modernizing vocational training would help other students stay in school.

Other questions included global warming (he doesn't believe in it), gun control (he's against it), keeping illegal aliens from crossing the borders (that's the federal government's job) and AIDS (he's against the lifestyles of homosexuals and drug abusers but for more extensive research to find an AIDS cure).

When asked what he, as governor, would do to help the slumping West Texas economy, Williams responded, "You have to help all of Texas at one time."

Carver Principal Patricia Maurer said the interview meant a lot to her pupils.

"It's important for any student to feel like people listen to them," Ms. Maurer said. "This time was invaluable, and I think he (Williams) handled it well."

Williams, holding true to his convictions, said he even learned something from the interview.

"I learned that they are smarter than they were when I was their age and much more better informed," he said.

Although he said he granted the interview "to give my views to these achieving students," Williams didn't miss an opportunity to do a little campaigning, distributing political literature among the pupils.

"I want you to hand these to mommy and daddy and tell them I'm a good man," he announced.

Sixth-grader Bradley Clary, 12, said that if he could, he would vote for Williams.

"At first I really didn't think of him as a big man," Bradley said. "After today, I feel he has high hopes for Texas. I say 'Go get them.'"

Sixth-grader Autumn Rainwater, 12, said she supports Williams views, especially on waging war on drugs.

"I was really excited about getting to talk to him," Autumn said. "I want my parents to vote for him."

GRAMM—

Electricity generated by system power plants would be channeled into a 500-foot diameter electromagnetic coil buried underground and then supercooled with helium to achieve the low temperatures for superconductivity.

The technology would make it possible to store electricity indefinitely with no energy loss; and the magnetic energy in the coil also could be converted back to electricity if needed.

Gramm said the costs associated with the construction of the West Texas site are far less than those of the other four finalists and should be taken into consideration during the selection process.

"Also, I think the fact that our economy is flat ought to be considered in making the site decision," he said. "It will help our economy at a time when we need it."

Dr. James Van Hoften of Bechtel National Inc. said benefits of the Texas site have been fairly well identified.

The project is expected to bring in more than 150 construction jobs during a two- to three-year period, with an annual payroll of $7.5 million to $10 million.

Since most of the fabrication must be completed on site, Van Hoften said local companies could benefit from such expertise.

TU Electric and other utility companies have been studying energy storage as a potential means of adding flexibility to system operations for the past several years.

In addition to Bechtel National Inc., TU Electric has been working on the technology with universities and members of the Electric Reliability Council of Texas.

CHINA—

Sources said officials who have worked under Zhao on political and economic reforms also were facing punishment. They include the party's propaganda chief, Hu Qili; Vice Premier Tian Jiyun; and Bao Tong, a Zhao aide.

They said the main winner in the struggle appeared to be Deng, 84, who apparently was behind Li's imposition of martial law and is believed to still have final say on major decisions.

Students by the thousands were leaving Tiananmen Square, the focus of two weeks of continuous demonstrations. By nightfall Friday, about 15,000 students remained on the vast expanse that once was occupied by more than 100,000.

Students insist the drop in numbers does not mean their movement lost momentum or was cowed. A few students admitted they feared violence now that the conservatives seem to be in control, but most said they were tired of sleeping on concrete in unsanitary conditions.

Student leaders said they were urging non-Beijing students to go home because they can do more in spreading the movement there than by staying on the square.

The leaders expressed confidence they could again quickly mobilize large groups of students and residents if the confrontation with authorities escalated.

The main train station was packed with students returning home. The television news quoted a station official as estimating 20,000 were leaving Friday.

But some said they would not leave.

"Everybody in the country is watching the square," said one student leader. "If we leave, we will betray their hopes."

On Friday, more government leaders embraced Li's hard-line stance.

Chen Yun, the 84-year-old head of the Central Advisory Commission, a powerful advisory group, appeared on TV to support martial law and the commission later followed suit.

A government source said Li Xiannian, 81, who formerly held the ceremonial post of president, spoke at the meeting where the decision was made to strip Zhao of power.

He criticized Zhao for fomenting the student movement and equating it with "a struggle between two army headquarters." Such a description indicated conservatives view the general secretary's alleged crimes as serious.

That speech and one given by China's 81-year-old President Yang Shangkun made up one of the documents being studied by top party members and officers, said a government source.

Yang said Zhao's actions "had a very bad effect" on the nation, the source said, and indicated that party members, intellectuals and journalists who participated in the movement would be punished.

TRADE—

India had a $700 million surplus with the United States in 1988, while the most recent figures available from Brazil indicate that nation's U.S. exports totaled $8.54 billion last year and U.S. imports in the first 11 months of 1988 totaled $2.74 billion.

Last year, U.S. exports to Japan rose 33.7 percent to $37.7 billion and the bilateral trade deficit shrank by $4.4 billion, according to U.S. statistics. But Japanese exports surged this year, increasing political pressure for Washington to take action under the trade law.

Mitsuzuka described U.S. trade policy as "to threaten other countries into negotiating by brandishing the threat of unilateral sanctions."

He said the policy was contrary to the principles of the multinational General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, or GATT, and could undermine the existing multilateral free trade system and ongoing Uruguay Round of GATT.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Taizo Watanabe said Japan would agree to "quiet talks" that might coincide with U.S. demands under the 1988 trade law. He also said Japan might complain to GATT if the United States imposed sanctions.

Japan has taken steps to open its markets, Uno said, denying that the specific U.S. complaints "can be considered to constitute trade barriers."

"I strongly regret the lack of fairness because the United States has unilaterally made such a decision...despite the fact that the U.S. itself maintains import-restrictive measures and practices to a considerable degree," Uno said.

Takuma Yamamoto, president of supercomputer maker Fujitsu Ltd., said the computer market in Japan "has been totally freed" and the government policy on buying supercomputers — contrary to the U.S. complaint — is not to discriminate between foreign and domestic producers.

He said U.S. supercomputers have 15 percent of the Japanese market while Japanese supercomputers have only 2 percent of the U.S. market. No Japanese supercomputer ever has been bought by a U.S. public organization, Yamamoto said.

The government also said sales of U.S. forestry products in Japan had doubled from 1986 to 1988, and the minister of posts and telecommunications, Seiichi Kataoka, noted Japan was buying five American satellites this year.

India last year exported about $3.2 billion worth of goods to the United States, it's biggest trading partner, primarily clothing, diamonds, crude oil and cashews.

Anwarul Hoda, joint secretary in the Commerce Ministry, said India's trade surplus with the United States only started in 1983 and had dropped sharply from $1 billion in 1987 to $700 million in 1988.

According to reports taken at the scene, Cooper collided with a car driven by Zenaida Villa, 18, of Midland.

Cooper flew over the handlebars and struck the car, reports said.

The accident occurred at 2200 Rankin Highway early Friday evening.

Conservationists concentrate on critical habitats for the '90s

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK — Ask Russ Mittermeier about his work, and he'll talk about marketing, the hard sell, tough choices and money — just what you might expect from a sales executive or investment counselor.

Mittermeier, however, is a wildlife biologist and vice president for science of the World Wildlife Fund. He's talking about marketing conservation in countries where people struggle to find their next meal. He's deciding how to get the most from a limited pool of conservation dollars.

His approach is a sign of a new discipline among conservationists as they try to sharpen the conservation blueprint for the 1990s.

"I think we've got the potential to find the resources to make conservation work," he said. "We really have to make good conservation an element of good development."

Other conservationists are thinking along similar lines. In January, the World Resources Institute issued a report titled, "The Crucial Decade: The 1990s and The Global Environmental Challenge."

"If efforts to save species and biological diversity are to succeed, a more coordinated, systematic and aggressive international effort is needed," the report said. "The 1990s will be the crucial decade for action on these pressing concerns."

Without a major effort, it said, "irreparable damage will be done to the world's environment, and the problems will prove increasingly intractable, expensive and dominated by crises."

Mittermeier is trying to save endangered animals. Saving animals means saving habitat. The most carefully protected animals cannot survive if they have no place to live.

So much has been said about the loss of habitat that the mere recitation of statistics has lost its force. Each year, about 42,000 square miles of tropical forest are lost — almost enough to cover the state of New York.

It's anybody's guess how many plant and animal species are disappearing.

In a report titled "Biodiversity," Harvard biologist E.O. Wilson tweaked the numbers and came up with this: Species are being lost 1,000 to 10,000 times as fast as they were before human beings arrived on the scene.

"By the turn of the century, much of the remaining tropical forest is going to be in isolated parks surrounded by development," said Mittermeier. "There will be very few places where natural evolutionary processes continue, where traditional people continue to live traditional lifestyles."

Mittermeier and his colleagues have established three lines of attack to try to limit the damage:

■ They've identified 10 "threatened hot spots," small forested regions in immediate danger. The hot spots cover two-tenths of 1 percent of the Earth's surface but harbor 27 percent of all tropical forest plant species.

■ They've targeted 13 countries as "megadiversity countries," for their unusually rich animal and plant life. These countries contain at least 60 percent of the world's plant and animal species.

■ And they've identified what they call major wilderness areas, the few places still mostly undisturbed where, if steps are taken soon, evolution can continue and traditional people can survive.

The "threatened hot spots" idea came from Norman Myers, a senior fellow at the World Wildlife Fund.

Without emergency aid, the 10 "hot spots" are likely to lose 90 percent of their forest cover within the next decade. That would mean losing almost 7 percent of the Earth's 5 million to 30 million plant and animal species.—

Apart from Madagascar and New Caledonia, the threatened hot spots are in South American and Asia. South America's are in the Choco region of Colombia, western Ecuador, the uplands of western Amazonia and the Atlantic coast of Brazil.

Asia's are in the Philippines, northern Borneo, Malaysia and the eastern Himalayas.

Many of the species in these areas have already been lost or will soon be lost, even if the areas are left untouched from now on, Myers said. The rule of thumb is that for half of the species to survive, the remaining forest must cover at least 10 percent of its original range.

Myers says that is hardly ever the case.

Mittermeier developed the concept of megadiversity countries.

"As a marketing device, it's tremendously valuable," he said. It can be used in the megadiversity countries to excite the public about conservation.

"It's a source of national pride," he said. "It tells them, in terms of natural resources, 'we're pretty special.' It's an effective way of selling conservation to them — and to foundations."

Because these countries contain at least 60 percent and perhaps even 80 percent of the world's species, they ought to get 60 percent or 70 percent of conservation funds, Mittermeier has proposed.

The countries are Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Brazil, Zaire, Madagascar, Indonesia, Australia, India, China and Malaysia.

Mittermeier, whose research specialty is primates, said Brazil, Zaire, Indonesia and Madagascar contain two-thirds of the world's primate species.

"If we aren't successful in saving primate species in these countries, we're going to lose a major portion of the species," he said.

"We're not writing off the rest of the world. We're saying do something in every country on Earth. But strategically, when we do our planning, these countries should get a major chunk of the interest, a major chunk of the investment."

There is some good news in this story: Mittermeier and company have identified five major wilderness areas that have a good chance of survival.

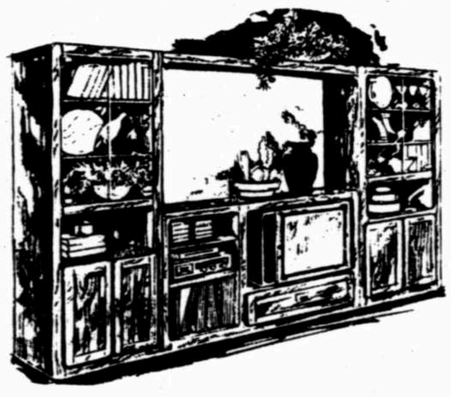

The other bit of good news is that the World Bank, where Mittermeier has served as manager of a task force on biodiversity, takes conservation seriously.

The bank's mission traditionally has been to foster development in poor countries, which often put it in conflict with environmentalists. It made an important change in 1986 with the adoption of a policy.

Candidates for working legislature include Russian radicals

MOSCOW (AP) — The new Congress of People's Deputies nominated a handful of radicals Friday to serve in its working legislature, opening the lawmaking process to broader participation after decades of Kremlin monopoly.

But some progressives charged that Communist Party bureaucrats had rigged the process to stay in power, and others accused the radicals of undermining the course of political reform.

With Lithuanians announcing at one point they would boycott elections to choose the membership of the new legislature, the Supreme Soviet, President Mikhail S. Gorbachev declared the Congress of People's Deputies in a "crisis situation" on only the second day of its existence.

The 2,250-member parliament was choosing members to fill its 542-seat working legislature, called the Supreme Soviet.

Candidates originally were selected in local caucuses. But they had to be nominated by the congress before they could stand for election. Most delegations nominated only one candidate for each seat they were allotted, but a few offered more. It is in those districts where there are real races. Candidates who get the highest number of votes and more than 50 percent are elected.

The final number of deputies nominated Friday was "around 600," according to one official who addressed the congress.

The deputies wrangled for hours over the nominations as members bickered about procedure and traded accusations of obstructionism. The debate got sidetracked by a heated squabble over police attempts to break up a street meeting called to discuss the first day of parliamentary debate.

Voting finally began 12½ hours after the congress convened, with weary deputies filing out of the hall to cast ballots. Results were expected when the congress meets again Saturday morning.

Populist Boris N. Yeltsin was on the list of 573 congress members selected by their home regions to serve in the Supreme Soviet — which took its name from the old, rubber-stamp parliament. The procedure set up tough races for lawmakers from Moscow, where some of the best-known progressives are running.

"The party apparatus is once again asking us to elect the Supreme Soviet according to the old system," complained deputy Vladimir Shevlyuga of Rostov-on-Don.

Vladimir Zolotukhin of Uzbekistan complained the top party and government officials in his Central Asian republic had nominated themselves as in the past.

Nevertheless, the candidates' list showed that the new Supreme Soviet will have a far different makeup from the old one, which met for only a few days a year to unanimously approve any bill put before it and vigorously applaud the speeches of top Kremlin officials.

Only one member of the ruling party Politburo — Russian federation President Vitaly I. Vorotnikov — is on the list of candidates.

Nominations were closed for most republics, assuring the election of a small group of progressives, including Estonian Marju Lauristin and Lithuanian Kazimir Motieka, Popular Front leaders who led fights to declare their republics sovereign.

Live coverage by state-run TV continued to show Soviets the novel spectacle of their representatives openly airing disagreements, and many viewers were riveted to their sets, despite the snail's pace of parliamentary action.

The Lithuanians announced through Vytautas Landsbergis, chairman of the grassroots reform group Sajudis, that they would boycott the elections if deputies from other republics were allowed to vote on which Lithuanians should serve in the Supreme Soviet.

Landsbergis also said parliamentarians from his tiny homeland on the Baltic Sea did not want to cast ballots to elect people to the Supreme Soviet from other regions.

"We can't elect people who are not known to us," he said. "It's not right to vote in the darkness."

Roy Medvedev, a Moscow-based historian whose exposes of Josef Stalin's bloody abuses of power were once banned in his native country, appealed for reconsideration of the boycott threat.

"I ask the comrades from Lithuania ... not to break the huge amount of work done in our society to democratize it," Medvedev said, a giant statue of Soviet founder Vladimir I. Lenin at his back.

WORLD in brief

Arab League leaders reach an agreement

CASABLANCA, Morocco (AP) — The Arab League summit closed two days late Friday after adopting what Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz called a "gentleman's agreement" for Syria to withdraw its troops from Lebanon.

Syrian intransigence prevented any resolution explicitly calling for the Syrian army to leave Lebanon, the main Iraqi objective. Several times the Syrian-Iraqi confrontation almost led to the collapse of the summit.

The Arab leaders appointed a three-member committee and gave it six months to supervise a cease-fire, reconvene Lebanon's Parliament, arrange the appointment of a president and amend the constitution for more balanced power-sharing between the warring Moslems and Christians.

The negotiators are Morocco's King Hassan II, King Fahd of Saudi Arabia and Algeria's President Chadli Bendjedid.

In Beirut, surprising support for the peace plan came from acting Prime Minister Salim Hoss, the Moslem leader whose closest ally is Syria.

14 ordered hanged

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (NYT) — A South African judge Friday sentenced 14 blacks to hang for the murder of a black policeman in the rural town of Upington three and a half years ago.

The judge, Jan Basson, is scheduled to pass sentence next week on 11 other blacks convicted of the same crime, for whom he acknowledged there were extenuating circumstances.

An additional defendant will be sentenced on the lesser charge of attempted murder.

The death penalty is mandatory for murder in South Africa unless the court accepts mitigating reasons from the defense why it should not be imposed.

The defendants, who have become collectively known as the Upington 26, were convicted on a doctrine of "common purpose," under which they were accused of taking part in the murder of the policeman by stoning his house and chasing him into the street, where he was killed.

After a long trial, 25 defendants were found guilty last year of murder and one of attempted murder. They are the largest group of people sentenced to death for a politically motivated crime within memory here.

Noriega remains hopeful

FORT AMADOR, Panama (AP) — Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega said Friday negotiations between the government and opposition parties might resolve Panama's political crisis.

"They both claim they won," Noriega told reporters after meeting with a delegation from the Organization of American States that seeks to end the impasse created when the government nullified the May 7 presidential election.

The opposition, led by presidential candidate Guillermo Endara, won the elections over pro-government candidate Carlos Duque by a 3-1 margin, according to international observers. Noriega's troops seized the vote tallies and the election was nullified three days later.

Noriega said Friday: "The key to the problem lies with the contending political parties. The opposition has declined to talk to Duque.

"If the opposition remains intransigent, the Defense Forces are not going to slip on a banana peel" and be drawn into the dispute. "The two sides have to start talking."

West Bank village hit

JERUSALEM (AP) — Jewish settlers shot up a West Bank village Friday in the second vigilante raid in two days, wounding at least three people and damaging houses and cars, residents and Israel radio reported.

A Labor Party minister in the coalition government claimed the surge of vigilantism by the 70,000 Jewish settlers in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip was intended to block Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's plan for Palestinian elections.

A dissident Cabinet minister in Shamir's conservative Likud bloc announced opposition to the proposal and Trade Minister Ariel Sharon, the leading Likud opponent, toured the West Bank to show support for the settlers.

Dr. Stephen Daniels

Professor gives students grave project

By DEBORAH WILKINS

TYLER (AP) — Some might call it graveside robbery. But the only thing Dr. Stephen Daniels, an associate professor at the University of Texas at Tyler, is stealing is a bit of information.

Each semester, Daniels takes his students to Oakwood Cemetery on North Palace Avenue. The purpose is not to revere the dead, but to study their tombstones.

"I've always had an interest in old cemeteries, but I started doing this when a student teacher wanted to find a way to interest her kids in history," Daniels said.

The field trip is part of the curriculum in Daniels' course, which teaches teaching methods to education majors. His reasoning is that reading dates, birthplaces and various emblems directly from tombstones piques a young person's interest more than a textbook and gives them a personal feel for the 19th century.

"The problem with history textbooks is that they are written for a national audience, so they tend to capitalize and pick up on the biggies in history like the labor movement. Labor organizations don't have a heck of a lot of meaning for kids in Tyler, Texas. But if they go to Oakwood Cemetery and see tombstones with emblems like the Masons, Knights of Pythias and Woodmen of the World, it becomes significant."

He also said name recognition helps drive home bits of history.

"It's a lot better to use hands-on material with familiar names — Bonner, Chilton, Bergfeld, Goodman — than a sterile history text. Oakwood is extremely familiar. It's like reading a city directory or city map."

But the detective work at the cemetery doesn't stop at passively reading names and death dates. Students are required to record the information, sometimes indecipherable to the eye, by making tombstone rubbings.

This involves placing a large sheet of paper over the tombstone's face and rubbing the horizontal side of a crayon over it to make an imprint of the engraving.

"I could stand up in front of a class and tell them, 'Look at these rubbings and I'll tell you this,' but one of the reasons I developed this thing was to teach kids to think.

"Kids have to get information off the tombstone, take that information and draw their conclusions."

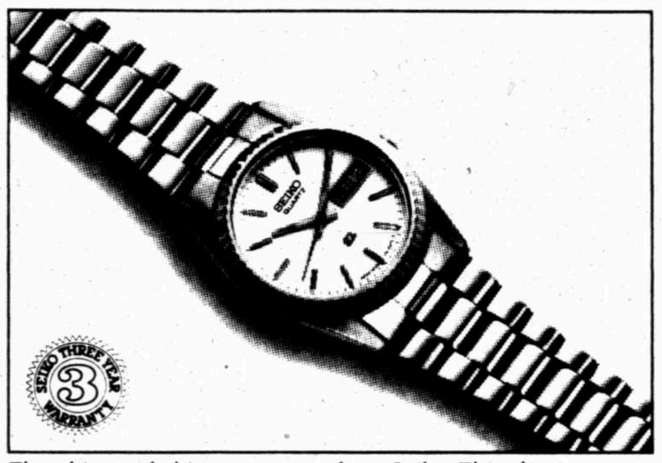

He said sometimes the tombstones prompt more questions than answers. For example, he said emblems of fraternal orders often appear on older tombstones but are seldom on modern stones.

"It indicates people had a lot of pride in them. Why?" he asked. Fraternal orders may have played a more important role in people's lives than they do today, taking the place of modern leisure such as television and radio, he suggested.

"What did Tylerites do in the late 19th century? Only a few occupations show up on a headstones, mostly doctors, lawyers and firemen." But he also said a few stones were engraved with trains and one had an etching of a skull and bones.

Lebanese spirit ebbing with blood from civil war's victims

EDITOR'S NOTE: The writer has covered Lebanon's civil war for its duration. Here is his report on the despair engulfing the country.

By FAROUK NASSAR

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — When the civil war broke out in April 1975, I wondered how many months it would last. Fourteen years later, I wonder if it will ever end.

In 1975, my colleagues in The Associated Press and I huddled under desks as rockets tore through the office. Last week, we were again sprawled beneath our metal desks as shells exploded around us.

The AP has been shelled out of four offices through the years of bombardment, invasions and sieges, car bombings and assassinations.

For the last two months, army commander Gen. Michel Aoun's mainly Christian forces have battled the powerful Syrian army and its Moslem allies in a quixotic crusade to force the Syrians out of Lebanon and try to reunite a country dismembered into sectarian fiefdoms.

More than 350 people have been killed and nearly 1,400 wounded in indiscriminate artillery, rocket and tank barrages that began March 8.

That doesn't compare with the savage battles at the start of the war, when more than 100 people were killed daily. Since the war began, an estimated 150,000 people have been killed, twice as many have been wounded.

The economy is in tatters.

One quarter of the pre-war population of 4 million has fled. Others are leaving every day now to start anew somewhere else with whatever assets they can salvage.

For many Lebanese, the latest fighting has forced them to cower in underground shelters without sleep, electricity, running water or decent food. Their children weep in fear.

It has been the final descent into terror and degradation.

SINCE THE WAR began, I've seen the Syrian army come and go and return, the Israelis invade and withdraw, U.S. Marines come ashore to join French foreign legionnaires, plumed Italian Bersaglieri troops and British paratroopers in an ill-fated effort to bring peace.

But Lebanon's warlords, and the Arab governments who for their own reasons aid and arm them, defied them all to go on waging the suicidal conflicts that have left the country in ruins.

When the Americans and the Multi-National Force eventually withdrew in 1984, with hundreds of their men killed or wounded by suicide car bombers, everyone thought things had hit rock bottom.

But the current fighting has been far more demoralizing because it has demonstrated with such destructive force that nothing has changed and probably never will.

On both sides of Beirut's dividing Green Line, Christians and Moslems speak of their disgust at the carnage and bemoan a future seemingly without hope.

Beirut was once the most glamorous capital in the Middle East and bustled with thousands of Western businessmen and fun-seeking Arab oil sheiks lured by the great beachside casino and luxury hotels.

Now, it is shrouded in despair.

For nearly a decade and a half, the Lebanese have picked themselves up after every catastrophe and somehow found the will to rebuild, patch up their lives and businesses and carry on.

That remarkable spirit is almost drained. Everyone has had enough.

The war, with its undertones of medieval religious conflicts and endless factional feuds on both sides of the sectarian divide, has become as incomprehensible to the average Lebanese as it has long been to the outside world.

THERE ARE NO heroes or villains, no winners or losers any more. Only victims.

The carnage is all-embracing. President-elect Bashir Gemayel, Prime Minister Rashid Karami, warlords, legislators and poets have perished in the Lebanese bloodbath along with thousand upon thousand of helpless civilians.

For the estimated 1 million Christians, the last few weeks have been most traumatic. They have been bombarded day and night in their shrunken coastal enclave north of Beirut by Syria's big guns.

Beleaguered and outnumbered, Aoun has refused to back down from his battle to rid Lebanon of Syrian forces.

The Syrians and their Moslem allies want the Christians, who have dominated government, the judiciary and the army since independence from France in 1943, to share power with the Moslems.

For many Christians, particularly the dominant Maronite Catholic sect, this means Syrian overlordship and the surrender of their traditional privileges.

Lebanese speak with one voice at United Nations

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — In Lebanon, two rival governments — one Christian, the other Moslem — battle each other for power, but at the United Nations Lebanon speaks with one voice.

The division raised questions at the United Nations over which faction Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and other U.N. officials should deal with.

"The secretary-general deals with the permanent representative of Lebanon at the U.N.," said U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani. That representative is Ambassador Rachid Fakhoury.

But to whom does Fakhoury and all other Lebanese diplomats around the world answer?

"Under a mutual understanding, without any public declarations, the secretary-general of Lebanon's Foreign Ministry transmits positions from both factions," said Clovis Maksoud, the Arab League's ambassador to the United Nations and the United States.

The secretary-general of the Foreign Ministry in Beirut, Farouk Abilama, "is the de facto foreign policy adviser for the divided government, but this is being strained now, in the current crisis," said Maksoud.

"There is no attempt on the part of the governments to challenge the unity of the embassies or missions abroad, or to embarrass them by getting them to take a factional position," he added.

Since there is no way the divided government could agree on appointing any new ambassadors for overseas posts, the Lebanese diplomatic corps has been frozen pending the outcome of the current crisis.

"All embassies are getting a new lease on their tenure," said Maksoud.

"The assumption is that this is a transitory stage, and hopefully a short one."

Ambassador Fakhoury declined to be interviewed.

Lebanon's U.N. mission consists of four diplomats, two Christians and two Moslems who, from all indications, work together amicably.

Arab League mediators have tried to arrange a cease-fire to halt the violence in Lebanon, which has claimed at least 278 lives since March 8.

Maksoud noted that a few key government institutions survive in Beirut, the Central Bank in particular.

"The Central Bank pays for the expenses of both factions of government impartially, and for the missions and embassies," he said.

The government crisis broke out Sept. 22, when the Christians rejected Moslem nominees for president to succeed the outgoing President Amin Gemayel, a Christian.

Gemayal then chose Gen. Michel Aoun, commander of 20,000 Christian troops, to lead the government and the Moslem faction picked Acting Prime Minister Salim Hoss to head the rival government.

WAR

Nothing has escaped the latest shelling. Churches, hospitals, schools, apartment blocks, factories, power stations, fuel depots and even shepherds in their fields in the hills above Beirut have all been hit.

Thousands of homes in west Beirut, including my apartment, have been devastated. Every day we hear of friends killed, neighbors buried beneath the rubble of their homes, whole families wiped out.

We have no electricity or running water.

Hospitals are running short of medicine.

THE POWER STATIONS ran out of fuel for their generators weeks ago. The last fuel supplies went up in flames when Syrian shells destroyed the main depot in east Beirut.

The French, the only Europeans to significantly respond to Aoun's appeals for aid, sent 6,000 tons of fuel. That was enough to provide power for about 2 million Lebanese for two hours a day for 10 days.

Everyone has seen worse.

The current violence — frightful though it is — is nothing compared to the destruction wrought by the Israelis when they invaded 1982 and besieged the Moslem sector, or compared to the the colossal losses of 1975-76.

Christian sources say Aoun has come to realize that his David-and-Goliath war against the Syrians is unwinnable. He is having to make most of the concessions to help the Arab League enforce a cease-fire and end the carnage.

Many support the general, who is aided by Iraqi weapons, for finally standing up to the Syrians, not just for the Christians but also for Moslems who would rather see them gone as well.

But many of Aoun's people are increasingly critical of why he decided to fight in the first place, embarking on what many see as a reckless, impetuous crusade against a foe 10 times as powerful.

But the 54-year-old general, a U.S.-trained artillery officer many Christians now call "Napol-Aoun," cannot back down without surrendering the besieged Christians' last card.

Equally, Syria's President Hafez Assad, beset by political and economic problems, cannot meekly march his troops out of a country the Syrians consider their own backyard without a loss of face in the Arab world.

For the Lebanese, this means a future — if such is the word — that holds only more misery, destruction and savagery.

Hotel offers best rare bird perch

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Diners atop a 26-story hotel were ruffled by the sight of a predator munching pigeons outside the window, but managers applauded their guest's good taste after discovering its pedigree.

"We thought it was a hawk," Sheraton Tacoma Hotel sales director Barbara Faulkner said of the bird who liked to bring its own lunch up to the restaurant windowsill.

After a number of complaints, hotel managers called the Point Defiance Zoo to find out how to get rid of the messy eater. But when they found out it was a rare peregrine falcon, an endangered species protected by the federal government, they offered it the best perch in the house.

Recently, the hotel issued a news release proudly announcing the falcon's choice of Tacoma accommodations, suggesting it was attracted by the hotel's "unobstructed view of the city and Mount Rainier."

John Houck, curator of mammals and birds at Point Defiance, said the falcon probably regards the hotel as a convenient cliff.

"He's bopping the pigeons along the railroad yards," Houck said. "There's a lot of pigeons down there, and it's pretty easy to make a living, picking them off and taking them back to the ledges of the Sheraton to eat."

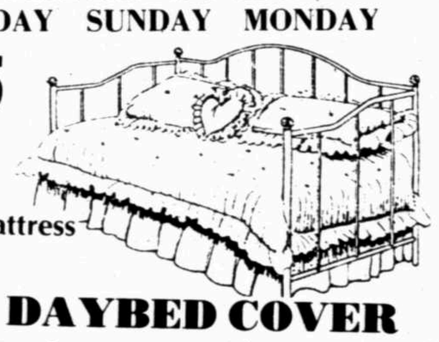

The Audubon Society says tall buildings and easy pigeon pickings attract a number of the birds to city life.

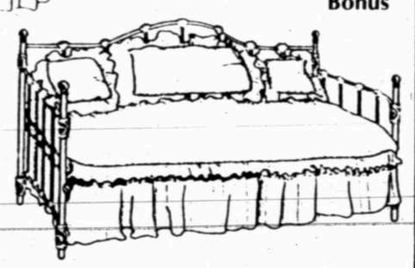

The bird has deserted the restaurant window ledge for the top of the big red "S" on the side of the hotel, but Ms. Faulkner says the staff wants it to stick around.

Fittipaldi Indy 500's narrow track favorite

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Emerson Fittipaldi is the narrow favorite to keep defending champion Rick Mears from his fourth Indianapolis 500 victory Sunday in a poll of media members covering the race.

Fittipaldi, a two-time Formula One champion and last year's runnerup, drew 19 votes from a total of 65 cast. Mears, starting from the pole at Indy for a record fifth time, was the favorite of 17 media members.

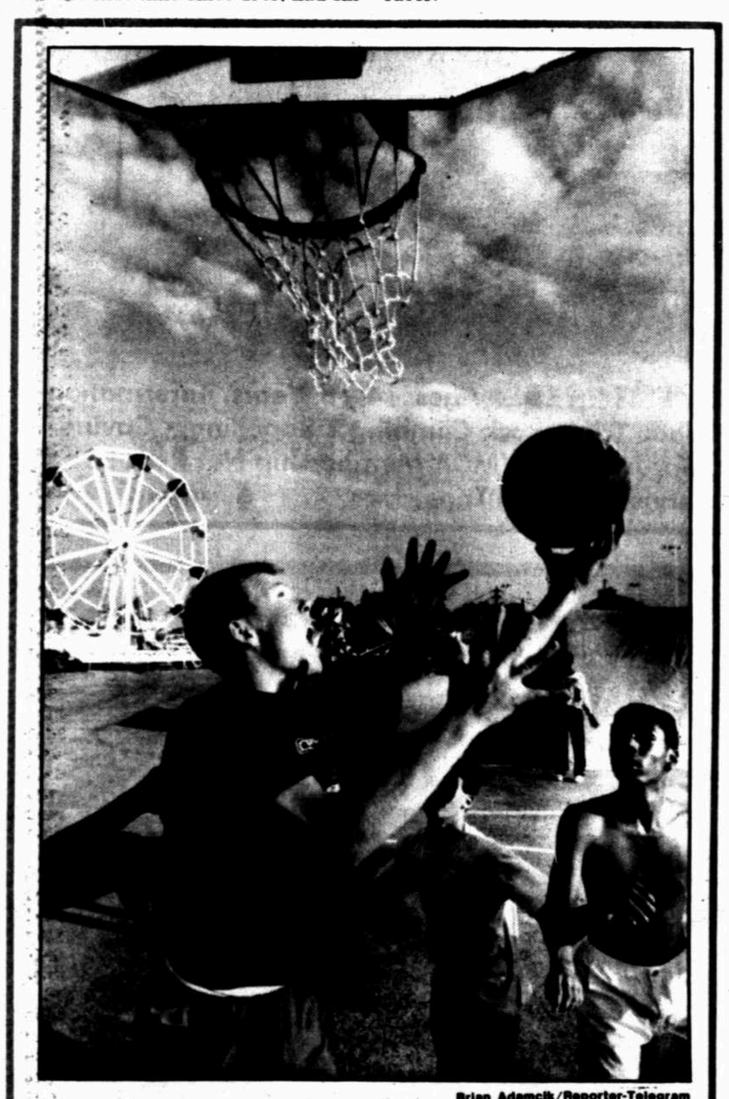

Close behind was Mears' teammate Al Unser with 14 votes. Unser, one of only two four-time Indy winners, will start between Mears and Fittipaldi in the front row of the 33-car field.

Mario Andretti, trying to win here for the first time since 1969, had six votes, while Jim Crawford of Scotland polled four, Al Unser Jr. three and 1986 winner Bobby Rahal and A.J. Foyt, the only other four-time winner, one apiece.

Mike Harris of The Associated Press picked Fittipaldi, saying, "He's got the experience to win, an experienced team behind him and a car capable of winning."

Chic Perkins of the Los Angeles Herald Examiner said, "Fittipaldi's PC18's going to burn Penske."

Another Fittipaldi backer, Beth Tuschak of the Detroit News, said, "It's time for the former Formula One star to feel like a real Indy racer."

Texas A&M erupts for 25 runs

Texas, Arkansas gain NCAA tournament victories

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Mike Easley's bases-loaded triple highlighted an 11-run second inning, as the Texas Aggies put together a big inning for the second straight game to eliminate Brigham Young 25-4 in the NCAA Central Region baseball playoffs Friday.

The Aggies scored 14 runs in the fifth inning to beat Jackson State 23-3 Thursday night. They also broke open the game early against Cougar starter Darin Kracl, 7-5.

A&M, 2-0 and top seeded in the Central Region, plays the winner of Friday night's late game between Louisiana State and South Alabama.

The Aggies have scored 83 runs in five tournament games. They scored 35 runs in three games to win the Southwest Conference tournament last week and they have 48 runs in the Central Region.

After Eric Albright flew out to start the second inning, the next 12 Aggie batters reached base before Trey Witte and Kirk Thompson struck out.

In addition to Easley's triple, Chuck Knoblauch had a two-run single and Jim Neumann drove in two runs with a single and double in the second inning.

Kracl yielded a single to John Byington and walked Albright and Andy Duke before leaving the game. Easley welcomed reliever Mike Switzer to the game with his three-run triple.

The Aggies added three runs in the sixth inning on a home run by Byington and a two-run homer by Neumann.

Singles by Byington, Blake Pyle and Trey Witte and a grounder by Easley gave the Aggies four more runs off reliever Kelly Frederiksen in the seventh.

The Aggies scored five more runs on six hits off reliever Rob Jensen in the eighth inning.

Tim Herrmann, 6-0, got the pitching victory and his first college hit when he singled to left field in the eighth inning.

A&M starter Keith Langston walked home Devin Kunz in the second inning snf Brad Eager singled home Kunz for another run in the third.

Burt Call and Randy Wilstead hit homers in the ninth inning.

Texas 2, New Orleans 0

AUSTIN — Spot starter Phil Wiese outdueld All-American Kirk Dressendorfer for seven innings, but Dressendorfer won his 15th game of the year anyway as the fifth ranked Texas Longhorns held off New Orleans 2-0 in the first round of the Midwest Regional.

While Dressendorfer, 15-2, pitched no-hit ball through five innings, Wiese took a no-hitter into the seventh in only his fifth start of the year.

Despite the performance, Wiese dips to 1-6 on the year after his longest stint of the season. The lefthander allowed two hits and four walks before leaving in the seventh and was threatening to no-hit the Longhorns for the first time in 941 games.

New Orleans came into the tournament with a 30-32 record and one of only two teams in the 48-team NCAA Tournament with a losing record.

Dressendorfer, who threw only 105 pitches, went the distance for the 24th time in 35 starts to equal his 15-2 record of last year as a freshman. He is 30-4 overall at Texas.

The sophomore righthander allowed only a pair of hits and did not walk a batter against New Orleans, which came into the tournament hitting only .265 as a team.

The Longhorns scored the only run they would need in the second after Steve Bethea drew a walk and eventually scored on David Tollison's sacrifice fly to centerfield.

Arthur Butcher accounted for the Longhorns' final run swiping home plate on a double steal.

Craig Newkirk, in a 1-for-18 slump, ruined Wiese's bid for a no-hitter in the seventh, leading off the inning with a single to left.

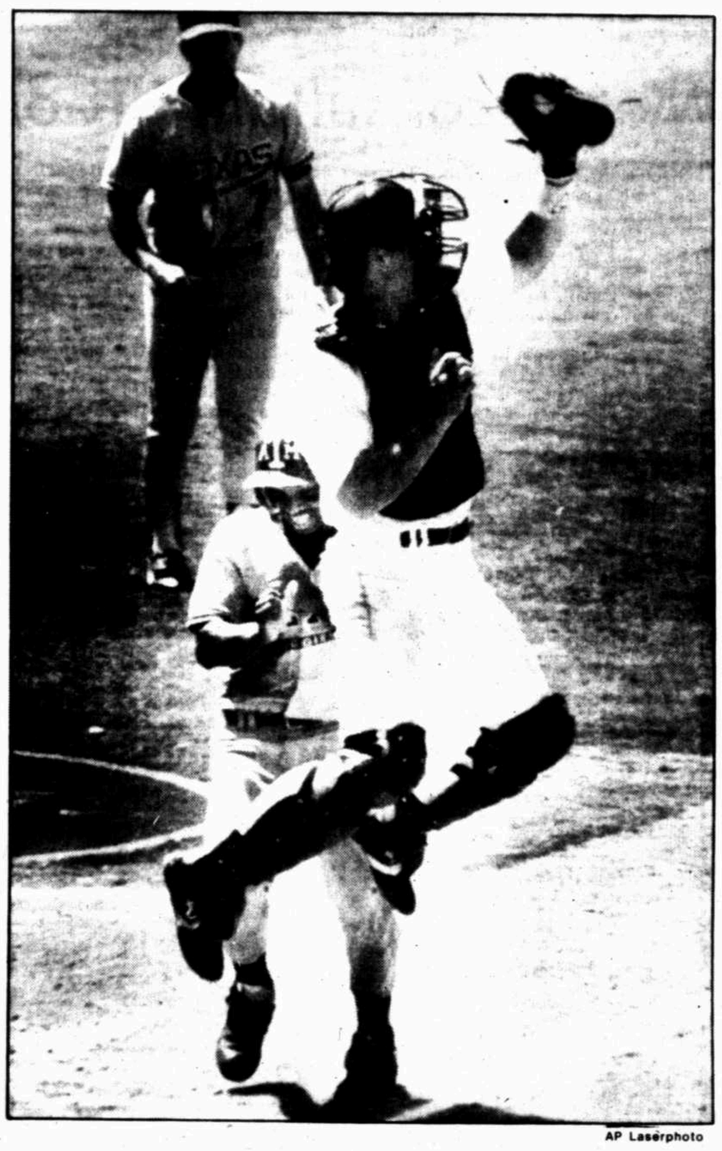

Butcher followed with a single to right.

In last year's regional, Dressendorfer was bombed by the Privateers and was pulled after three innings after giving up nine hits and four runs.

"I really had something to make up for," said Dressendorfer. "That may have been my worst outing ever. I tell you, they played great tonight and got great pitching. You had to be careful pitching to those guys."

Dressendorfer said it was probably his second best game of the year, Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson claims it's his best.

"It may have been his best," Gustafson said. "He had great command of his pitches right from the start. I shudder to think what might have happen if we had gone with someone else."

Arkansas 8, George Washington 2

WATERBURY, Conn. — Troy Eklund drove in three runs on two hits and Greg D'Alexander had three hits, including two for extra bases, and two RBIs as top-seeded Arkansas defeated George Washington, 8-2, Friday in the second round of the NCAA Division I Northeast regional baseball tournament.

Chaps move to exhibition finals

From Staff Reports

TYLER — The Midland College tennis team roared through five straight singles matches en route to a 5-1 semifinal win over Anderson (S.C.) in an experimental team competition here Friday.

The Chaparrals have already won the official national championship, but are playing a team format through today as part of a National Junior College Athletic Association experiment. The NJCAA is pondering a move toward the team format for its official championships as early as next season.

Tonny van de Pieterman, playing in the No. 1 spot for MC, was the only Chap to fall against Anderson, losing in straight sets to Isidro Lledo, 6-2, 6-4. MC then won 10 of 11 sets in its next five matches to clinch the match, and making doubles play unnecessary in the extreme East Texas heat and humidity.

"I'm really pleased with the way the kids have played down here," said Joe Williams, MC tennis coach who was also named National Coach of the Year. "It has been in the 90s and 80 percent humidity and it has been tough on the team. I've won the national tournament with the girls a couple of times before, but this is so much more satisfying because I feel it is a little harder to accomplish this with the men. We would just like to put the rap on this with a win Saturday."

The Chaps face Tyler J.C. at 9 a.m. today for the exhibition team championship, but the Chaps are viewing this as another feather in the cap to go with the official national championship won earlier in the week.

"The Tyler crowd is really a factor here," said Williams. "You really have got to keep yourself in the match to stay with them, or the crowd can become a factor. I told the kids that even though this is an exhibition, it would be a wonderful way to end things here with both titles."

Against Anderson College, Amine Boustani, playing in the No. 3 spot, was carried to three sets by Kiyoshi Ueda, but came out on top, 6-0, 4-6, 6-4. No. 2 Mohammad Ridaoui, No. 4 David Fontaine, No. 5 Pepe Garcia and No. 6 Tommy Heiting all won in straight sets.

Today's match with Tyler should be a good one since Tyler finished second to MC for the official national title earlier this week.

The difference between the exhibition team and the national tournament is that points were awarded for each individual victory in the national tournament. Also individual titles were decided. Individual play isn't as important in the exhibition. Only team scores count in dual match play.

The Chaps will return home after this morning's match with Tyler, hopefully, bringing with them official and unofficial national titles.

Travs defeat Angels, 6-3, with big fifth inning

From Staff Reports

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — The Arkansas Travelers exploded for four runs in the fifth inning here Friday to send the Midland Angels to their third straight loss, 6-3.

Arkansas scored two runs in the first, but Midland matched the Travs with two in the second on a single by Mark Doran, a walk to Bob Rose and a double down the right-field line by Mark Howie that scored both runners.

But that was all the Haloes could get off Arkansas starter Len Picota, 2-1. Midland could do little better with a trio of relievers — at least until the ninth, when Doran belted a leadoff home run. After Howie reached on an error, Trav stopper Mike Perez retired the last two batters for his ninth save — and second in three days.

The Travs touched loser Scott Lewis, 4-5, for four runs on only three hits in the fifth.

Singles by Mike Robertson and Craig Wilson sandwiching a walk to Bernard Gilkey brought home the lead run, but the hosts added insurance when Angel right fielder Reed Peters misplayed a ball in the outfield to plate Gilkey.

Ray Langford then broke the game open with a two-run triple, and scored when Midland's Everett Graham erred on a routine ball at first base.

The Angels try to get back on track tonight with a series-ending doubleheader. Rich Morehouse, 0-0, and David Martinez, 4-2, go on the mound for Midland, while the Travs counter with Frank Potestio, 3-2, and Mike Hinkle, 0-2.

The Angels return home Tuesday for a five-game series with San Antonio.

HALO HOOPS: Rose is second in the TL batting race with a .341 mark, while Chris Cron is fifth at .319. Cron has driven in 33 runs.

In pitching, reliever Luis Merejo is third in earned run average.

Lakers need one win to hit finals

PHOENIX (AP) — James Worthy scored 14 of his 29 points in the fourth quarter and the Los Angeles Lakers hit six free throws in the final 38 seconds to beat the Phoenix Suns 110-107 Friday night and take a 3-0 lead in their best-of-7 Western Conference final series.

The two-time defending champion Lakers can wrap up the series in Game 4 Sunday at Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum. No NBA team has ever come back from an 0-3 deficit to win a best-of-7 playoff series.

Los Angeles is now 10-0 in the playoffs this season, breaking the league record of nine consecutive wins the Lakers set in 1982.

Michael Cooper made four 3-point shots to help the Lakers take an 82-75 lead after three quarters.

The Suns led 54-50 at halftime thanks mainly to the efforts of starting guards Kevin Johnson and Jeff Hornacek, who had 15 points each in the opening 24 minutes.

But the Lakers scored 13 of the first 19 points in the third quarter to go ahead 63-60. Cooper, who made a pair of 3-pointers in the first half, had another in the surge along with a layup.

It was 65-62 when Cooper made another 3-pointer to give him 14 points and the Lakers a six-point lead. Los Angeles led by as many as eight points before settling for their seven-point lead entering the final period.

Magic Johnson led the Lakers through three quarters with 18 points, nine of them in the third period. Worthy had 15 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar 13.

Tom Chambers had 19 points for the Suns, 12 of them in the third period when the Suns were outscored 32-21. Hornacek also had 19 points through three periods and Kevin Johnson had 18.

Kevin Johnson had 12 points and Hornacek 11 in the second quarter, when the Suns outscored the Lakers 35-25.

A three-point play by Hornacek with 3:43 left before halftime broke a 41-all tie and the Suns were on top the rest of the half. Johnson then scored 10 straight Phoenix points.

The Lakers used an 11-1 spurt late in the first period to go ahead 22-16 and were on top 25-19 at the end of the quarter thanks to a hook shot by Magic Johnson from near half-court as the buzzer sounded.

The Lakers extended their lead to nine points on two occasions early in the second quarter before the Suns used a 16-4 run to go ahead 39-36 with 5:04 left before halftime. Dan Majerle had eight of the Phoenix points.

The Suns started quickly, scoring the game's first five points and going ahead 7-1 after just 1:19 of play.

Phoenix then went going 3:42 without scoring, but the Lakers were having a difficult time, too, managing only six points during that span. Eddie Johnson broke the Suns' drought by hitting a baseline jump shot just seconds after entering the game for the first time.

The Lakers won the first two games of the series at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif., by scores of 127-119 and 101-95 to stretch their homecourt winning streak over the Suns to 19 games dating back to 1984.

The Suns won all three regular-season games over the Lakers at Veterans Memorial Coliseum and all were one-sided — 111-96, 114-97 and 127-104.

The fourth game of the series will be played Sunday afternoon in Phoenix. A fifth game, if necessary, will be played at the Forum next Tuesday night.

Trivia Teaser...

Saturday's Question: Friday's question was so easy, let's go for three straight World Series winners in the American League and in the National League?

Friday's Answer: The last American League team to win back-to-back World Series was New York, 1977 and 1978, and Cincinnati in 1975 and 1976.

In the $150 Guaranteed Doubles Tournament, Pat Scholl and Paul Cox automatically advance to the semifinals by knocking down 1,303 pins, the high score of the evening. Other semifinal qualifiers are Javier Tan and Mar Pornan at 1,279. The other quarterfinals matches will be today.

Other events set for today include a cross-country run; children's triathlon; baseball skills competition; and a Great American Racing Tour stock car event. Here is an event-by-event summary:

Cross-Country Run: Runners will traverse one of Hogan Park's three nine-hole sections beginning at 8 a.m. Individual and team competition will be featured in the five-kilometer race.

Ironkids Triathlon: Patterned after the immensely popular series sponsored by a major national bakery, today's competition features swimming, bicycling and running in three age groups. Competition begins at 8:30 a.m. in the Mabee Memorial Swim Center.

Pitch, Hit and Run: The kids again take center stage at Angels Stadium with competition that includes baserunning, throwing a baseball for distance and batting off a tee. The competition is open for youngsters aged five through 10 with a $5 entry fee.

Three-on-Three Basketball: A late addition to the SportFest fold, this all-day tournament is being held outside Angels Stadium on a pair of portable hoops. Many of the top high school and rec league players in the city are expected to attend.

Stock Car Racing: Eighteen late-model stock drivers will vie for a $10,000 purse in the 50-lap GART Texas Championship today. Drivers will practice from 2 to 6 p.m. Qualifying to set for 6:30, with the race slated for 8:30.

Also today, the carnival and concession continue to crank off food and entertainment for the entire family.

Officials didn't waste much time getting things started Friday. Due to a heavy league schedule Friday, only a handful of youth teams were on hand for the Parade of Teams — set to the theme from Chariots of Fire.

But Mayor Carroll Thomas was on hand to welcome the few athletes with an opening statement timed at less than a minute, while Sandy Faulkner of the Midland Softball Association; Steve Melzer of the Midland Junior Baseball Association; and Mike Reed of Midland United Girls Softball.

From Staff Reports

Media consultant grooms Irish for 'real' game

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Take one, roll tape: quarterback Tony Rice stands before a television camera and says he doesn't care about the Heisman Trophy. The same camera catches speedy flanker Raghib "Rocket" Ismail seated for an interview, but moving around like he's in mid-sprint.

Let's try that again.

Take two: Rice says playing well matters most, but he'd be delighted to win the Heisman. Fidgety Rocket now is the very picture of calm composure.

On the surface, the difference is a two-hour session with a media consultant.

Looking a little deeper, into the very deep pockets of television sponsors and NFL team owners, the difference might be measured in fan adulation and many dollar bills.

The premier athletes on Notre Dame's defending national championship team may already be well aware of that reality. But pointers from a North Carolina consultant earlier this month may help these savvy players fine-tune their performances.

"With sports, it's not brain surgery all the time, but I think it prepares you for situations that may be more complex," Irish spokesman John Heisler said Friday.

Sixteen players got tips on how to give quotes that get used, how to say what they really mean, and even how to be patient when the same dumb question gets asked for the umpteenth time.

Consultant Kathleen Hessert of Communications Concept Inc. in Charlotte taped mock interviews, critiqued the results and gave the players a written pocket guide on avoiding bad quotes and garbled body language.

"For instance, Tony Rice has been quoted as saying he doesn't care about the Heisman. He doesn't mean that he doesn't care," Hessert said. "What he means is, it's not his focus. His focus is to have fun and play good ball."

To a viewer, a reader, or a sportswriter with a Heisman vote, Rice's seeming indifference may send the wrong message: the New York Athletic Club's prize trophy isn't worth the bother.

"So I told him, 'Don't say I don't care about the Heisman.' It's a wonderful award and he knows that."

Ismail's rocket speed and dazzling cuts serve him well on punt returns and pass plays. But he even idles at high rpm's, and the camera sends another unintended message.

"The one thing I told him was don't move around so much, because on camera you're going to look nervous," Hessert said.

The top athletes who can "project a positive image" and "come across as genuine" can just about bank on it, she said. "Their value is much higher, both to the reporter and the audience, as well as to the sponsor or the endorsement, if he's a pro athlete."

For some, the task may be hard.

Michael Stonebreaker, a linebacker who won All-America honors in 1988, pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of driving while intoxicated, going to court four days before his scheduled appearance and avoiding reporters and cameras. The charge stemmed from an auto accident that injured his right hip and knee, and caused serious injury to a passenger.

University officials particularly wanted Stonebreaker to join the session. He will face continuing questions from reporters and from the students he addresses as part of his court sentence.

George Washington was eliminated with its second loss, while Arkansas plays Illinois at 1:30 p.m. today.

Right-hander Dennis Fletcher, 9-3, picked up the victory. Mike Rolfes, 8-3, took the loss for George Washington.

The Razorbacks, who collected 10 hits off three George Washington pitchers, took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on an RBI double by Alexander, who also had a triple and a single.

The Razorbacks added four more runs in the second inning on Eklund's two-run single, D'Alexander's RBI single and Rod Stillwell's groundout.

Arkansas added two more in the seventh on D'Alexander's triple and Grayson Lites' single, then finished the scoring in the eighth inning with Scott Pose's RBI double.

George Washington collected 10 hits off Arkansas right-hander Dennis Fletcher, 9-3, and the Razarbacks got the same number off three George Washington pitchers with Mike Rolfes, 8-3, charged with the loss.

The Colonials, who had 10 hits, scored both their runs in the seventh on Mike Welch's RBI single and a sacrifice fly Greg Orlosky.

Finley fires one-hitter at Red Sox

AP Laserphoto

Chicago Cub Damon Berryhill slides past Cincinnati Red Chris Sabo on this play, but the Cubs lost in 12 innings.

Associated Press

Chuck Finley, whose best game in 43 previous major-league starts was a five-hitter, held Boston hitless until Jody Reed's looping single with two out in the eighth inning and pitched the California Angels to a one-hit 5-0 victory over Roger Clemens and the Red Sox on Friday night.

Reed's soft single on an 0-1 pitch fell in front of center fielder Devon White, who had to pull up and let the ball drop. Finley, a 29-year-old left-hander, received a standing ovation from the Fenway Park crowd of 32,417 and went on to pitch his first major-league shutout.

Since Fenway Park opened in 1912, only one left-hander has pitched a no-hitter against the Red Sox there — George Mogridge of the New York Yankees in 1917. There have been three no-hitters by right-handers against the Red Sox at Fenway, the last by Detroit's Jim Bunning on July 20, 1958.

Rangers 5, Twins 3

Bobby Witt broke a personal four-game losing streak despite a shaky effort as Texas beat Minnesota.

Rick Leach had three hits, including his first home run since 1967 and a double, and Ruben Sierra's two-run triple keyed a four-run first inning for the Rangers.

Witt, 4-4, hadn't won since April 25 at Cleveland, a game in which he allowed seven runs in five innings. In his previous five starts, he had an ERA of 8.35.

Witt allowed four hits and three runs in 5⅔ innings, walking four and striking out five.

Athletics 4, Yankees 0

Todd Burns, making his first start of the season, allowed only an infield hit in 6⅔ innings and three Oakland pitchers combined on a near-perfect game.

Burns, who had appeared in relief 11 times this season, was put in Oakland's rotation when Storm Davis was placed on the disabled list on Wednesday with a hamstring injury.

The Yankees got their only baserunner when Rickey Henderson opened the fourth by outlegging a slow roller down the third-base line. Henderson was erased when Steve Sax hit into a double play and Burns, Rick Honeycutt and Eric Plunk retired the Yankees in order the rest of the way as New York sent the minimum 27 batters to the plate.

Orioles 5, Indians 2

Jeff Ballard posted his eighth victory, matching his victory total for 1988 and tying for the major-league lead, and Larry Sheets drove in two runs with a homer and single as Baltimore won its fourth straight victory.

The four-game winning streak is only Baltimore's second since July 1987 but it lifted them into first place in the American League East, one-half game ahead of the Boston Red Sox. Cleveland has lost four straight.

Ballard, 8-1, scattered five hits over the first seven innings and was relieved by Gregg Olson after the first two Cleveland batters singled in the eighth. Olson earned his third save, enabling Ballard to tie Oakland's Dave Stewart and San Francisco's Rick Reuschel with eight victories.

Blue Jays 11, White Sox 3

Ernie Whitt drove in four runs with a three-run homer and a double and Toronto had its biggest inning of the season — an eight-run fifth — on the way to its seventh consecutive setback.

Jimmy Key, 6-2, who allowed three runs and seven hits in eight innings, was the beneficiary of a 17-hit Toronto attack.

Mariners 7, Brewers 2

Scott Bradley and Ken Griffey Jr. homered as Seattle beat Milwaukee and snapped a four-game losing streak.

Bradley hit a three-run homer in the second inning to give the Mariners a 5-1 lead and chase Milwaukee starter Don August, 3-6.

Luis DeLeon, called up from the minors earlier in the day following Seattle's trade of Mark Langston, made his first major-league start and lasted four innings-plus, allowing a run and five hits. The win went to Mike Jackson, 2-0, who allowed three hits and a run in four innings. Dennis Powell pitched the ninth.

Royals 6, Tigers 3

Pinch hitters Bill Buckner and Mike Macfarlane singled home the tying and lead runs with two out in the eighth inning and Bo Jackson added a two-run single, lifting Kansas City past Detroit, snapping the Tigers' three-game winning streak.

With two out, Jim Eisenreich worked reliever Mike Henneman, 2-1, for a walk and Buckner, pinch hitting for Bob Boone, singled to right, scoring Eisenreich, who was running on the 3-2 pitch.

Buckner went to second on the throw home and pinch runner Rey Palacios scored on Macfarlane's single, making a winner of reliever Jeff Montgomery, 6-1, who went two-thirds of an inning. Steve Farr pitched the ninth for his 11th save.

Jim Clancy ends Astro drought

Associated Press

Jim Clancy won for the first time since April 8 and Glenn Davis homered Friday night, leading the Houston Astros past Pittsburgh 4-2 to snap the Pirates' season-high four-game winning streak.

Clancy, 2-4, beat San Diego in his National League debut but went winless in his next seven starts, losing four. He allowed six hits in 6⅔ innings, walked six and struck out five. Dave Smith pitched a hitless ninth for his seventh save.

Neal Heaton, 1-5, lost for the eighth time in nine decisions since last July 26. Heaton, who beat Clancy last Sunday, allowed seven hits and four runs in five innings.

Houston went ahead in the first when Terry Puhl was hit on the left wrist by a pitch, pinch-runner Gerald Young stole second and scored on a double by Davis.

The Astros made it 3-0 in the third on Young's run-scoring single and Kevin Bass' RBI double. Davis hit his 10th home run of the season in the fifth.

Jose Lind hit an RBI double in the fifth. He doubled off Clancy in the ninth and scored when Andy Van Slyke tripled off Juan Agosto.

Reds 10, Cubs 8

Rolando Roomes hit a two-run homer in the 12th inning as Cincinnati rallied from a five-run deficit to beat the Chicago Cubs for their fourth straight victory.

Roomes hit his second major-league homer off Calvin Schiraldi, 1-2, after Todd Benzinger had walked to start the inning. It made a winner of Rob Dibble, 4-1, who played despite a league suspension.

Dibble, who struck out five in two innings, appealed his two-game ban for a bat-throwing tantrum earlier this week and was permitted to play pending his hearing.

The Cubs tied the game in the ninth with an unearned run against Cincinnati reliever John Franco, who had his first blown save of the season.

Domingo Ramos reached second on third baseman Chris Sabo's throwing error and moved to third on a bad pickoff throw from Franco. Pinch-runner Curtis Wilkerson then scored on Gary Varsho's double.

It was Franco's first blown save in 15 opportunities this year. Franco has saved 54 games in 57 chances in the last two years.

Roomes' two-out double off Jeff Pico scored Paul O'Neill from first in the seventh to give the Reds an 8-7 lead. O'Neill had singled to right after Benzinger, who had four RBIs, tied the score with his third homer of the year.

Benzinger drove in another run with a sacrifice fly during a two-run first inning against Cubs starter Paul Kilgus, and his two-run double keyed a four-run sixth inning which brought the Reds to within 7-6.

After the Reds went ahead 2-0 in the first, Chicago came back with four unearned runs after an error by second baseman Lenny Harris.

Mets 8, Dodgers 2

Bob Ojeda pitched a seven-hitter for his first complete game since nearly severing a finger last September, leading the New York Mets past Los Angeles and Orel Hershiser.

Darryl Strawberry drove in three runs with a pair of doubles as the Mets knocked out Hershiser after five innings, his shortest outing in 19 starts. He was chased after two innings in a 15-4 loss to San Francisco last Aug. 14.

Hershiser, 6-4, gave up nine hits and seven runs in five innings. In his last start against the Mets, he pitched a five-hit shutout in Game 7 of last year's National League playoffs.

Cardinals 3, Braves 0

Scott Terry allowed two hits in seven innings and Willie McGee drove in two runs as St. Louis beat Atlanta for the Braves' sixth straight loss and 11th in 13 games.

Atlanta has scored 13 runs in its last 10 games and has been shut out four times.

Terry, 4-3, had a no-hitter for 5⅓ innings before Jeff Treadway singled. Terry, who won for the first time in five starts since April 27, extended his streak of scoreless innings to 13, including a six-inning outing at Atlanta May 20.

Jody Davis walked to open the eighth and Ron Gant singled. Ken Dayley then relieved Terry, who struck out four and walked three. Dayley allowed three hits in 1⅔ innings and Dan Quisenberry got the last out for his third save.

Expos 5, Padres 0

Bryn Smith pitched a six-hitter for Montreal's third consecutive shutout, leading the Expos to their third consecutive victory.

Smith, 5-1, struck out two and walked one in his first shutout and second complete game this season.

Montreal has not allowed a run in 28 consecutive innings. The Expos' record of 41 consecutive shutout innings was set in May 1985.

Locals place in tae kwon do

From Staff Reports

DALLAS — Six students of Midland tae kwon do master Yoo Sun Lee placed in the recent Texas State Junior Olympics Tournament here.

Two of the six, San Lee and Stefan Durham, will be vying for a berth on the U.S. Junior team at the 9th U.S. Tae Kwon Do Union Championships later this month in Rochester, Minn. Young Lee, 16, won the sparring championship in the heavyweight division, while Durham, 15, was second in the 138-pound division.

Other Lee students at the meet — all of whom placed in the sparring competition — included Wade Russell, second in the 79-pound class; Maxie Johnson, third in the 59-pound class; David Smith, third at 79 pounds; and Albert Garcia, third in the heavyweight red belt division.

The U.S.T.U championships will include the U.S. Team Trials. The national team will travel to Seoul, South Korea for the world championships and to West Germany for the World Games later this year.

Tucker Church, a cerebral palsy victim who is 15, has been ousted from Little League in Houston because he plays with 9-12 year olds.

Grady's 66 leads Atlanta Classic

Aussies threatening to pull one-two punch

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Wayne Grady, hoping to give Australia two titles in a row on the PGA Tour, shot a 6-under-par 66 Friday to take a one-shot lead halfway through the Atlanta Classic.

Ian Baker-Finch, another Aussie, captured the Colonial at Fort Worth last week.

"Obviously I'd like to repeat what Ian did last week, but 36 holes is a lot to play," Grady said after his bogey-free round on the hilly, 7,018-yard Atlanta Country Club course. He had a 36-hole total of 136, eight shots better than par.

"We had the best of the conditions," Grady said after posting his score early in the day before swirling winds made club selection a problem for the late starters.

Grady, who missed the cut in eight of his previous 13 starts this year, held his one-shot lead over five others, including Canadian Ray Stewart, who shot a 68, and Larry Silveira, who matched Grady's 66.

Also at 137 were first-round leader Jay Don Blake, 71, Duffy Waldorf, 67, and Mike Hulbert, 70. Hulbert is the only tour winner among the top six players, having captured the St. Jude Classic at Memphis three years ago.

"I didn't do anything real dumb out there, which is unusual," Stewart said. "I usually do a couple of dumb things to get my score up there."

"Basically, I pretty much just got the ball in the hole today," Silveira said, recalling that he also had a 66 in Hawaii, but missed the cut.

Grady, who twice has tied for second in his four-plus seasons on the tour, highlighted his round with a long birdie putt from the fringe on his final hole. Three of his earlier birdies came from inside five feet and he also had a 12-footer at No. 2 and a 14-footer at No. 12.

Japan's Isao Aoki, Canada's Dave Barr and Hubert Green were among a group at 139. Barr, who won this event two years ago, shot a 67 and Aoki and Green each had 70s.

Scott Simpson shot a 68 and was in a group at 140 that also included former Masters champion Larry Mize, Davis Love III and Don Pooley. Defending champion Larry Nelson, who has three major titles in his career, was well back in the pack at 143.

Eagle gives Okamoto lead

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Ayako Okamoto holed a pitching wedge for an eagle Friday en route to a five-under-par 66 that gave her the lead after two rounds of the LPGA Corning Classic.

Okamoto, who finished second at last week's LPGA Championship, scored well despite missing a handful of greens and a pair of three-putt holes.

"I'm a good chipper," she said.

Okamoto finished with four birdies, including a chip-in on the par-4 10th hole, an eagle and a three-putt bogey. She had a three-putt par on the 446-yard, par-5 second hole.

Her seven-under 135 total was one shot better than Beth Daniel, who also shot a 66 Friday.

"I was just trying to play my own game," Daniel said. "I looked over at the leader board and saw that Okamoto was playing well, but I mean, why should I try to catch her on Friday?"

Daniel had a bogey and six birdies including a 60-foot chip-in on the par-4 first hole and a tap-in on the par-5 12th hole.

Sharpstown boots Little League player

HOUSTON (AP) — A 15-year-old Little League baseball player who weighs only 56 pounds because he has cerebral palsy was kicked off his team and his coach was forced to resign because another team competing for the same playoff spot complained about the player's presence on a team of 9- to 12-year-olds.

"I think Little League baseball's for kids, and these adults just have to ruin the fun of it," said Judi Church, whose son, Tucker, was booted off the Sharpstown Little League Pirates.

Coach Scott Davis said when he saw the 4-foot-9 boy try out for the regular 13- to 15-year-old squad, he knew Tucker would not be able to make the cut. So Davis put Tucker on the Pirates, a team composed of children 9 to 12 years old.

"I knew the age rule, but in my heart I just couldn't see this kid not play baseball," Davis said. "He loves it so much."

Tucker was hitting only .167 and fell a lot as he tried to run but his team was contending for a spot in the season-ending playoffs. Little League district administrator Paul Goolsby received a complaint from another team competing for the same playoff spot and on Wednesday night threw Tucker off the team for violating the age rule.

He also asked for Davis to resign as coach and indicated he wanted Davis banned from further coaching.

"I knowingly broke their rules so I resigned right away," Davis said Thursday. "But what this is really about is adults who cared too much about winning."

Tucker said he was disappointed about not be allowed to play, but said his sympathies were more with his coach.

"I don't think they should have done this to Scott," Tucker said. "He's a good coach for the kids. Sure I want to play, but here's a guy who tried to help kids not able to coach anymore. It isn't right."

Executives at Little League headquarters in Williamsport, Pa., said the league makes special provisions for children who may not be able to play in a certain age group.

"If they get a doctor to say they should play in a particular age group, we'll let him play there," Elmer Lenotsky, a Little League official, told The Houston Post.

Basin Stars take second

From Staff Reports

The Basin Stars, a Midland-Odessa based girls fastpitch ASA softball team, recently placed second in the National Softball Association state tournament in Austin.

The Stars lost 4-3 to Spring Kleine of Houston in the championship game after coming through the loser's bracket, playing five games on the final day of competition.

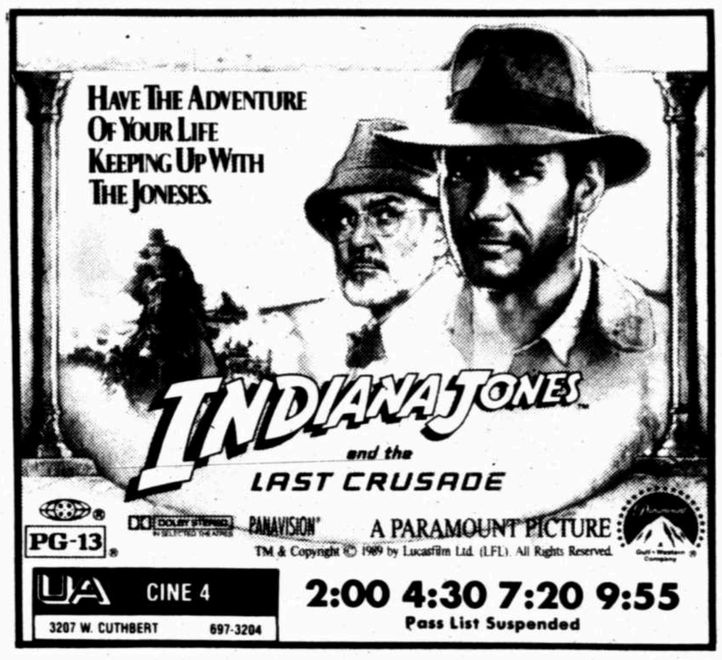

The Stars ousted the Austin Travelers for second place after the Travelers had previously beaten the Stars twice in the tournament.

THE TEAM certainly has a Basin flavor. Six players are from Midland, five from Odessa, two from Andrews, and one each from Sweetwater, Abilene and Carlsbad, N.M. It is the only team of this kind in the Permian Basin, so the team must travel far distances for games.

The team is currently trying to raise funds for the World Series tournament in St. Louis on July 4 weekend, where major college scouts will be on hand. Most of the girls on the team are interested in college softball scholarships.

The team will host an open tournament June 16 in Odessa at the UTPB softball complex.

In the Austin tourney, Marsha del Llano won most valuable player honors and the golden glove award. All-Tournament honors went to Stacy Wood and Prissy Lopez. The team also received the sportsmanship award.

Wilander gets No. 4 seed

PARIS (AP) — Defending men's champion Mats Wilander of Sweden should have an easy time in the first two rounds of the French Open tennis championships.

Wilander, the No. 4 seed, won three Grand Slam titles in 1988 and vaulted into the No. 1 ranking in the world. Since then, however, he has been off form and dropped to No. 4 in the rankings.

In Friday's draw, he was chosen to meet a qualifier in the first round. If he wins, his second-round opponent will be the winner of another match between two qualifiers.

His opponents will be determined Sunday following the completion of the qualifying tournament for the final 16 spots.

Top seed Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, who won the year's opening Grand Slam tournament, the Australia Open in January, will meet West German Davis Cup player Patrick Kuhnen in the first round.

No. 2 seed Boris Becker, who led West Germany to the Davis Cup title, faces American Jim Pugh in the first round.

Third-seeded Stefan Edberg of Sweden drew Czechoslovakia's Marian Vajda for his first match, while fifth-seeded Andre Agassi of the United States will play another Swede, Johan Carlsson.

Agassi and Wilander could meet in the quarterfinals. Last year, Wilander beat Agassi in five sets in the semifinals on his way to the title. Both are in Lendl's half of the draw this year.

Lendl also has seventh-seeded Tim Mayotte of the United States in his section.

In the bottom half of the draw, Becker could meet Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia, the eighth seed, in the quarterfinals. Edberg, the 1988 Wimbledon champion, has No. 6 seed Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland in his section.

However, the most dangerous opponent of all could be 11th-seeded Alberto Mancini of Argentina, who won the Monte Carlo and Italian Opens during the past month, beating Becker and Wilander at Monaco and Agassi at Rome.

Mancini has Australian Simon Youl as his first-round foe and could have Hlasek in the fourth round.

The Chicago Bulls and Detroit Pistons promise more action like this today when their NBA playoff continues.

Bulls, Pistons picking strategy for playoffs

CHICAGO (AP) — A decision made by Coach Doug Collins last week put the Chicago Bulls at an advantage in their Eastern Conference championship series with the Detroit Pistons.

Now, they try to make the most of it.

The two teams are tied 1-1 but the next two games will be played in Chicago Stadium Saturday and Monday afternoons.

After the Bulls eliminated the New York Knicks, Collins was faced with mapping the strategy against the Pistons, a team the Bulls had not defeated in the regular season and the team that had the best record in the NBA at 63-19.

Collins' decision was to put Michael Jordan on Isiah Thomas and Scottie Pippen on Bill Laimbeer.

It worked to perfection last Sunday when the Bulls captured the opener 94-88 but the Pistons came back to even the series Tuesday night with a 100-91 victory.

"I just thought it was worth the chance," Collins said. "If you haven't beaten a team before, then it's hardly taking a chance. It's not like you're trying to play around with something that's working."

Against Cleveland, Collins said "the Cavs didn't like to bump bodies and we played accordingly. Against the Knicks, we wanted to double-team (Patrick) Ewing and, offensively, we tried to have counters against their press.

"Against the Pistons, you have to slash and cut. If you stand, they strongarm you, they get you playing that standstill basketball."

The Pistons have lost only one of nine playoff games, but to hear Coach Chuck Daly talk, you would think Detroit is on the brink of elimination.

"Hey, backs against the wall for real. The Bulls aren't here by accident, you know. People seem to think that, but they're a good team," Daly said after Thursday's practice. "We're a good team, and we're struggling to beat them."

Laimbeer said the Pistons were bothered by sweeping their first two series, then having long layoffs.

"It's more bothersome than annoying," said Laimbeer.

Jordan played with the flu in Tuesday's loss, scoring 27 points, while Thomas led all scorers with 33. Pippen limited Laimbeer to seven points and five rebounds while scoring 12 himself.

However, both were gone in the fourth period. Laimbeer was ejected for elbowing and Pippen suffered a bruised left foot.

Jordan has recovered from the flu and figures to be ready for Saturday's game. Pippen has been receiving treatments from trainer Mark Pfeil and his status is in doubt.

"Basically, he bruised the bone on the foot and the small bones," Pfeil said. "Everything tends to spread out and you just put a lot of irritation on all those tissues. It then becomes tender to bear weight, and jumping in itself will cause tenderness."

Pitino to make decision Monday

NEW YORK (AP) — Rick Pitino said he will spend the Memorial Day weekend pondering.

The New York Knicks coach was at his suburban home Friday after a four-day visit to Lexington, Ky., where the Kentucky coaching job was offered to him by Athletic Director C.M. Newton. Before leaving on the university's private jet, the ex-Providence coach said he would announce his decision Monday.

Pitino, who was unreachable by phone Friday, said earlier he planned to discuss the opening with his wife Joanne, his family and the Knicks players before deciding.

The Lexington Herald-Leader reported if Pitino accepts the job, he will fly to Kentucky for a formal announcement on Tuesday or Wednesday.

Any news from Pitino will be news to the Knicks, who have yet to hear from the coach who helped the team turn from doormats to division champions in two years.

"There's been no contact. He hasn't talked to anybody," said Knicks spokesman Dennis D'Agostino, adding the team knew nothing about where or when Pitino planned to make his announcement.

Pitino has expressed his desire to return to the college coaching ranks, but he has also also called the Knicks position the best coaching job in the NBA.

Quadruple salary sought by Steeler quarterback

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Bubby Brister, the NFL's lowest-paid starting quarterback in 1988, is trying to quadruple his salary and become the highest-paid player in Pittsburgh Steelers' history.

Steelers negotiator Jim Boston met last week in St. Louis with Brister's agents, Jim Steiner and Mark Mottaz, who made their opening proposal for a three-year contract.

Neither Mottaz nor Brister would reveal how much they were seeking, but Brister said he wanted the average for an NFL starting quarterback.

Brister's base salary was $170,000 last year, his first as a starter, and will be $

Sailors celebrate new record

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two ocean-weary sailors celebrated with sprays of champagne Friday after collecting their trophy for racing the 14,500 miles from New York around Cape Horn to San Francisco in record time.

"I want to bet all the money that anybody has in his pocket that there are no happier men on Earth than Steve and I here today," said Latvian-born skipper Georgs Kolesnikovs, 46, after he and crewman Steve Pettengill, 37, completed the voyage in 76 days, 23 hours.

The stained and sea-worn trimaran Great American sailed slowly in light wind beneath the Golden Gate Bridge under cloudless skies. It crossed the finish line — an imaginary line running between touristy Pier 39 and Alcatraz Island — at 10:46 a.m.

The 60-foot, 12,000-pound vessel was greeted by a raucous fleet of boats, and cheers rang out as the men waved their arms in triumph.

"This was a very long trip, very tough," Kolesnikovs said.

The previous record was 80 days and 20 hours. It was set just three months ago by Warren Luhrs and his sloop Thursday's Child.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Would that world famous archeologist, Indiana Jones, ever have imagined? His own hat and jacket have become the nation's artifacts.

The Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American History greeted with pretentious pomp Friday the arrival of its new objects: Indy's brown fedora and worn leather jacket.

They were presented by Harrison Ford, the actor who has played the daring archeologist in two hit movies.

"I was surprised, flattered" at the invitation, he insisted, although the whole thing was timed perfectly to plug the third Indy movie just out.

His trademark attire isn't going on immediate display. But museum officials said it may someday take its place alongside such pop-culture treasures as Superman's cape, Dorothy's slippers and Howdy Doody himself in the History of American Entertainment Collection.

LITCHFIELD, Conn. (AP) — A settlement has been reached in a lawsuit against Dustin Hoffman and three other defendants that stemmed from the accidental drowning of a woman on the actor's estate in 1986.

Hoffman will pay nothing to the estate of Sheila Cruse Fionda under the settlement reached Thursday.

"The amount will not be disclosed but the settlement does not involve any money from Mr. Hoffman," said Superior Judge Walter M. Pickett Jr. after attorneys presented him with the agreement less than an hour before trial was to begin.

The lawsuit, filed by Fionda's former husband on behalf of their son, concerned claims of wrongful death and negligence in Fionda's Aug. 24, 1986, drowning. Hoffman was not at the estate at the time.

Fionda, 43, a teacher, was found floating face down about 6 a.m. in the hot tub portion of a swimming pool on Hoffman's Roxbury estate. An autopsy showed her blood-alcohol count was three times the legal limit for drunken driving in Connecticut.

Fionda had gone out to dinner with Hoffman's former caretaker, Albion Dudley. A court document says Fionda was awake at 4 a.m. in the caretaker's apartment and asked Dudley to go swimming. When he declined, she went alone, the lawsuit said.

In addition to Hoffman and Dudley, the lawsuit also named the tub installer and the company that made the tub's heating element. The lawsuit did not specify damages sought, but Fionda's attorney said last year the family would settle for $200,000.

A fireboat salutes the arrival of the trimaran Great American in San Francisco Bay.

"The story has definitely turned around," said Anne Soble, publisher of the Surfside News, the largest newspaper in Malibu, home to Sheen, actress Ali MacGraw, "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson and other celebrities.

More than 300 Malibu residents, including leading clergy members, signed a petition offering to study how to help the homeless. Possible programs include opening a shelter and holding local fund-raisers.

A group called the Coalition for Peace, Concern for the Disadvantaged and the Environment, which circulated the petition, bought a full-page ad in Thursday's Surfside News.

MONTCLAIR, N.J. (AP) — A thief swiped Olympia Dukakis' Oscar from her kitchen and took nothing else besides the $57 statuette the actress won for her supporting role in "Moonstruck."

"It's curious, puzzling," said her husband, Louis Zorich, artistic director at The Whole Theatre in this northeastern New Jersey city. "It might be a freak who would like to have an Oscar."

Police are investigating the May 19 theft.

The gold-plated statuette has a retail value of about $57, Ms. Dukakis said Thursday. The actress is in Hollywood filming "Dad," which co-stars Jack Lemmon and Ted Danson.

"We're not pretentious," Zorich said. "We kept the Oscar in the kitchen."

DETROIT (AP) — Former Detroit Tigers star Willie Horton has been appointed deputy director of the city's Police Athletic League, in which police and volunteers instruct youngsters in various sporting activities.

"I'm really thankful that I got appointed to this position," Horton said of the $38,000-per-year job. He will work under PAL Director Dick "Night Train" Lane, a former football star with the Detroit Lions.

"I enjoy getting totally involved in kids," Horton said this week.

Janice Ford/Reporter-Telegram

Taking his cue

OVER 50

First-name basis isn't a first-rate idea

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

A letter about an insurance matter arrived in the mail the other day. It was a standard form, with blank spaces for policy number, name, address and so forth. To make things easier for its employees, the company even had typed in half the salutation: "Dear."

Rosenthal

We all get these impersonal documents. But this letter had a twist. Whoever processed it--the handwriting was evidently a young person's--had written in the blank: "Harry."

To this stranger, I am "Dear Harry."

From another city, a public relations firm sends news about its clients on a regular basis. The salutation on the letters that accompany these offerings is "Dear, dear Harry." At first it looked like a mistake generated by a computer. But it's happened so often, it must be the firm's way to make the recipient feel all cuddly and close–and therefore happy to air the worthiness of the client's product.

Now come on. Isn't this kind of folksiness going too far? Does that clerk in the insurance company office feel I have a friendly sounding name? How did I become "Dear dear"?

This quick-let's-be-friends maneuver leaves me cold. Shopping for my first new car three decades ago, I rejected a half-dozen dealers because their salesmen called me Harry. It's not that I don't like my name, but even at a much younger age, I figured if I was going to spend that much money I deserved to be addressed as "Mister."

It works the other way around, too. The modern practice of waiters and waitresses becoming instant friends by declaring at the outset that "Hi, I'm Judy" is demeaning. Do you follow that opening by saying, "Well, hello. This is my wife, Naidene, and these are my friends, Janice and Irving. Irving is a lawyer. Janice tap-dances. Naidene is into volunteer work. I'm Harry and I write for a living"?

Speaking of Janice, this friend doesn't like being called by her first name by any people she does business with. At a new doctor's office, nurses she had never met called her Janice and she responded frostily that she was Mrs. Bass. She then discovered the first-name practice extended to the doctor, too. So she called him Al and that stopped. When it comes to themselves, some doctors are big on dignity–maybe because they don't have to undress for strangers.

Particularly grating are the people making sales pitches on the telephone after asking for "Harry." This type of annoyance is the 1980s version of a bygone time when house-to-house salesmen stuck a foot in the door.

Call me unfriendly, but it's sufficient if the waitress pins a tag "Judy" to her uniform. And I would think it more dignified for both of us if it said "Miss Smith" or "Mrs. Jones."

In a more courteous age, people waited to be invited to be called by their first name. It wasn't unusual, in our parents' age, for a future son-in-law or daughter-in-law to be told when he or she could use "Mom" and "Dad."

Maybe this is much ado about nothing, but how you address other people–older or younger–seems to me important. I'm not sure I want to return to the days when any superior at work was addressed formally--and vice versa. Neither do I side with those who believe, like my friend, Janice, that the doctor-patient relationship should stop short of first names.

But I find it downright insulting when I hear an old person being patronized on a first-name basis by a nurse or a clerk, or anyone being paid to take care of him or her.

And I surely don't want a computer to take such liberties with me.

(Readers may write Harry F. Rosenthal at: The Associated Press, 50 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, NY 10020. Letters of general interest may be used in future columns, but unpublished letters cannot be answered individually.)

Artist uses body as permanent canvas to showcase his works

By ARMANDO VILLAFRANCA

ARANSAS PASS (AP) — Bob Shaw, 63, believes in using his body to make a personal statement.

On any given day, he will wear a wealth of gold around his neck and fingers to complement the gold capped on his teeth.

But across his chest, arms and hands, Shaw wears a kaleidoscope of tattoos as a permanent record of his life, fantasies and friendships.

"I've never known anyone who was a success (as a tattooist) without any tattoos on him," Shaw said recently from his small shop.

For the past 47 years, Shaw has worked outside military bases and around the corner from amusement parks in small tattoo shops where he has marked permanent personal statements on the limbs and torsos of men and women, working people and professionals.

"He's certainly deservingly well known in the tattoo world," said Clinton Sanders, an associate professor of sociology at the University of Connecticut. "He learned from one of the fathers of Western tattooing, Bert Grimm."

Sanders, who has researched tattooing since 1979, said Shaw is known best as a technically skilled traditionalist, a meat-and-potatoes tattooist, and not as an artist.

"When I interviewed tattooists, there appeared a kind of distinction. One was that the traditionalist tattooist really saw himself as an instrument of his customer," Sanders said.

"It wasn't up to him to make value decisions or educate the customer. His task was to provide a service. What he did was, to the best of his technical ability, to do or redo the kind of work that the client wanted. And usually what the client wanted was fairly traditional images that were chosen off the wall," Sanders said.

UNDER GRIMM'S tutelage, Shaw became a "tattooer of tattooers," covering the crude work of less-experience tattooists with images of his own design.

Shaw said he has owned at least 15 tattoo shops throughout his life, including Grimm's former shop in Long Beach, Calif.

His customers have ranged from Hollywood celebrities to barrio gang members from east Los Angeles.

He said he has tattooed policemen, judges, lawyers and doctors, but most of his clients are working-class men who view tattoos as a way to dress up their image or young men who, sometimes foolishly, seek a symbol attesting to their manhood.

"I've had guys come in here and say, 'Hey, where's your "born to lose" design?' and I'd say, 'Well, myself, I'm not really born to lose, are you?' " he said.

Shaw said that he has a standing rule against giving drunks or minors a tattoo. He also advises people against getting facial or hand tattoos.

But he has agreed to occasional unusual requests, such as tattooing a man's will on his back and a sunset scene on a woman's abdomen to cover a sca. left by surgery that removed her navel.

He unwittingly became a part of the country's pop culture in the late '60s after rock singer Janis Joplin began displaying her tattoos to concert audiences.

"Gosh, there was a flood of people coming around wanting a tattoo of a little heart over their left breast," he said.

He has also appeared in or worked as a technical adviser for television series and movies such as "The Rose" in which he had a small role — later cut out of the movie — giving actress Bette Midler a tattoo.

He may not have seen it all, he said, but he's come close.

"I WAS probably one of the busiest tattooers in the world for about 20 years in California," he said.

He moved his family to Houston in 1979, and then relocated in semi-retirement to Aransas Pass several years ago to tattoo out-of-state shrimpers and local residents.

He said he prefers the quieter pace of the Coastal Bend to southern California, where he had to contend with egos and eccentricity on a daily basis.

"Being in southern California, it's like being on a different planet than being down here," said his son, Bobby Shaw, who has been tattooing for 16 years. "That's the rowdiest, craziest place I've ever been."

Tucked in a corner of the road out of Aransas Pass, Bob Shaw's tattoo shop stands as a living history to an ageless art form that has evoked both disdain and praise through the years.

Bob Shaw said people have come into his shop to ridicule and attack his livelihood. But, he noted, people come into his shop willingly. He categorizes people generally as being those who want a tattoo and those who do not.

"If you don't' want one, you can't pull a gun on someone and make him wear one," he said.

He said the criticism does not faze him. He reasons that, as a Christian, he can pursue his craft with conscience because nothing is mentioned in the New Testament against tattooing.

"I try not to judge people, but I used to, to a certain extent," he said. "I'm just a poor Irish boy. I couldn't go the country club; I couldn't be elected president — not that I wanted to. I think everybody has their social place in life."

THOUGH CERTAIN designs of tattoos, intimidating images, will remain popular, tattooing has evolved much since it was first imported into the United States in the 1880s by English seamen.

The name tattoo came from a word used by Tahitians for their elaborate skin colorings, which they called Ta-tu.

In his research, Sanders said, he has seen the art form expand to include legitimate artists seeking another medium for their talents.

He said tattooing's allure has begun to spread throughout the art community, where some professional artists see tattooing as a way to earn money for their work.

"I anticipate, and what one can see now, is the quality of tattooing to improve considerably," Sanders said. "There are people all over this country in tiny little shops who are doing truly beautiful work because they see the work done by other talented people."

Bob Shaw said he has worked with and trained some of the tattoo artists who can command between $3,000 to $5,000 for tattoos that cover much of the customer's body.

Bob Shaw, who has never had any professional art training, said he has witnessed tattooing grow from "bucket shops" to studios, but he said he still prefers the traditional tattooing that has earned him a living for most of his life.

He declines to say how much he has earned during his best years.

But the flashes (tattoo design sheets) on his shop wall list prices for tattoos that range from $50 to $300, and he admitted that tattooing is 80 percent profit.

"It's possible to make a real good living and it's possible to make anything," he said. "I've seen some tough times, and I've seen some good times, but the good times always outweigh the bad."

RUNNING A clean shop is important to Bob Shaw. He said that he has been through too much in the past, working 12 to 14 hours a day and earning a dollar a tattoo in the '50s, to risk his future and that of his two sons in the tattoo profession by running an unhealthy operation.

He said he also attributes his clean-consciousness to Grimm, who took him in as a 15-year-old fascinated with the world of tattooing. He said the standards he now sets for his shop and his sons were imbedded in him from those postwar days when he worked alongside Grimm.

"These pioneers that kept this business alive for these people who have been around for 10 or 12 years, they wouldn't have been around if it wasn't for the old timers," he said. "They were the best available at their time, true enough they weren't art students."

Episcopal bishop urges group to stay in church

By CHARLES AUSTIN
Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — As 1,500 dissident Episcopalians prepare to meet in Fort Worth June 1-3, Presiding Bishop Edmond Lee Browning has urged them not to break with the denomination.

Bishop Browning has asked the group called the Evangelical and Catholic Mission to "take no precipitous actions" that might cause a schism in the 3 million-member church.

The group, which has called February's consecration of Bishop Barbara Harris the "final crisis" precipitating the "disintegration" of the church, is meeting to assess how or if they can continue in a body they consider virtually heretical.

In a pastoral letter to be read to all Episcopalians May 28, Browning said he is "greatly concerned" about the Fort Worth meeting. He nevertheless says he "affirms" the gathering. "I believe there is value in the coming together of those in our Church who disagree with the majority decision (on women priests and bishops)," he writes in the letter.

Browning says he rejects the ECM bishops' statement that the church is in crisis and is disintegrating over the issue, adding "I simply do not believe it."

The denominational leader also said he has met three times in recent months with the dissident bishops and church members who agree with them.

"I recognize them as partners in the gospel," Browning said in the pastoral letter. But for most Episcopalians, he continued, "the issue has been settled," and they are "eager to get on with the mission of the church rather than be mired in endless talk."

LEST WE FORGET

They have not died in vain — those who paid with their lives the last full measure. Memorial Day, is the day to remember Lexington, Gettysburg, Coral Sea, Okinawa, Normandy, Korea and Viet Nam.

We need only to look at the cemeteries of the world to realize the supreme sacrifice that was called for, that we might be secure. As they bravely died, so we must bravely live.

Let us nobly remember those who laid themselves between our country and her foes.

This is Memorial Day.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Consecration service for playground set

The consecration service for the Joan Weir Memorial Playground at First United Methodist Church will be held at 11:40 a.m. Sunday.

The playground is located behind the sanctuary on Baird Street and Ohio Avenue. The consecration will follow the morning worship service as the congregation moves from the sanctuary to the playground.

Children will be given balloons and hundreds of balloons will be released at the service's close.

The playground is named in memory of Joan Weir, who served as the church's Director of Ministries with Young Children and of Childrens Day Out from 1976 until her death in October 1986.

Mrs. Weir led in the designing and construction of the playground, which was lost in the church's present building program.

"She also helped in the design of the new playground and had the joy of knowing it would be named for her," says a release from the church.

Her husband, Bill Weir, has served as Minister of Program at First UMC since 1976 when they moved here from Houston.

The playground is designed for use by children from toddlers up through early elementary and provides a variety of climbing, sliding equipment, a track for wheeled toys, a gazebo and a grassy place for playing.

Ross Roberts served as chairman of the Playground Building Committee.

The public is invited to attend the service.

Extension courses to begin

The Presbytery of Tres Rios and Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary have joined together to bring to West Texas extension seminary courses for those in the Midland/Odessa area who are interested, but are not able to regularly attend classes at the seminary in Austin, according to Dr. A.L. Moreau, director of the West Texas Extension of APTS.

The first of the courses will be "Reformed Theology," taught by Dr. Alan Edmond Lewis, professor of constructive and modern theology at APTS.

The intensive, two-week course will be held in Midland at Trinity Presbyterian Church, 2800 W. Louisiana, July 24-Aug. 4. Classes will meet Monday through Friday, 7-10 p.m., for a total of 30 class hours. Students may audit the course or enroll as a "special student" of the seminary and take the course for six credit hours.

"Anyone interested in quality theological education may participate," says a release from the Presbytery of Tres Rios. "The program will be especially attractive to persons interested in beginning work toward a master of divinity degree; persons working toward certification as Christian educators; and lay persons interested in deepening their knowledge and competence."

Early registration is encouraged. Those enrolling will be given a list of assignments and reading to start on prior to the class. There will also be a paper to be completed following the class sessions.

For enrollment information, contact Dr. Moreau at P.O. Box 5111, Midland, TX 79704 or 682-2514.

Church has anniversary

The newest congregation of the United Methodist Church in Midland celebrated its birth with a special constituting service May 14.

Bethel United Methodist Church, which has been holding preliminary services in the Scharbauer Elementary School cafetorium, was officially recognized by the Rev. Bobby J. McMillan, district superintendent of the Big Spring District of the UM Church.

K.C. Blackketter, pastor, led in a worship service prior to receiving the initial members of the congregation. Twenty-one individuals joined to form the core of the church. Blackketter reported that "the number and quality of individuals is a blessing for our young church."

Teresa Crosby and Glory Bound, a men's quartet from St. Paul UMC provided special music. Several churches in Midland and Big Spring sent official delegations for the event. The Rev. Rex Mauldin, Northwest Texas Conference Program Director, represented the Conference Office in Lubbock.

In other business a steering committee and officers were elected and the congregation voted to pursue incorporation as a non-profit religious body.

The congregation continued its celebration that night with a fellowship supper and a mini-concert by Christian vocalist Laura Fields.

Kelview offers seminar

Kelview Heights Baptist Church will conduct a "Successful Single Living" seminar June 23-25.

The seminar for those formerly married and yet to be married will be led by Clyde Beeson.

"The seminar is designed to help singles through the emotional trauma of a dissolved marriage or relationship, cope with single living, to use the present situation as an opportunity of personal growth and to use the past as a means of improving future relationships," says a release from the church.

The seminar was created by Beeson, who is the author of "Picking Up the Pieces: Success Single Living" and the founder of Christian Growth Ministries, a non-profit organization to provide seminars and counseling.

The seminar begins at 6:30 p.m. Friday, June 23, continues June 24 and concludes with a Singles Rally at 10 a.m. June 25.

A children's seminar will be available for those in the first through sixth grade. This seminar is entitled "Healing the Hurts" and runs concurrent with the adult seminar.

For more information and a registration form call the church, 682-3842.

Family workshop set

The Family Ministry of Golf Course Road Church of Christ will conduct a seminar for blended families from 7 to 9 p.m. June 6 in the church's family center.

The seminar will be taught by Gary Grady, family life minister for the church.

"Dr. Grady, himself a member of a blended family, has done extensive research into the cultural and emotional aspects of blended families and will share insights and information helpful to those who have divorced and began new families with children," says a release from the church.

Information will be presented that will include suggestions for emphasizing the unique strengths of a blended family and how to minimize conflict in a newly formed family by recognizing the realistic differences brought into a blended family, the release says.

The public is invited to attend the free seminar. For more information call Grady, 694-8836.

Dinner planned for Sunday

Ranchland Heights Baptist Church will gather for the monthly fellowship dinner after the evening worship service Sunday. Honorees at the dinner will be all those with May birthdays.

Also to be honored at the dinner will be Lucian Rudd, pastor, who celebrates the 35th anniversary of his ordination to the ministry. Rudd was ordained May 30, 1954, by the First Baptist Church of Hamilton.

Since his ordination, Rudd has served churches in Texas, Missouri and Iowa.

He has been in the Midland area since 1965 where he has been pastor of Belmont Baptist Church and Westover Baptist Church in Odessa, as well as business administrator of First Baptist Church in Midland and Odessa.

The public is invited to attend the worship services and the fellowship dinner at the church.

She is a single parent who has three children and a granddaughter. A native of Dallas, Ms. Smith teaches a singles Sunday School class.

Aglow is a non-denominational women's group that meets monthly to fellowship together and minister to one another, says a release from Aglow.

Aglow officers are Jannie Linney, president; Pat Jones, vice president; Jody Dortch, secretary; and Sandi Tucker, treasurer. For more information call Ms. Jones, 682-8386 or 332-9151, ext. 218.

Unity buys new building

ODESSA — Unity of West Texas has purchased and moved into a building at 210 E. 12th Street, between Texas and Jackson in Odessa.

This Sunday's study group and worship service will be held at the new location. As in the past, the Adult Study Group meets at 9:30 a.m. with the worship service at 10:45 a.m. each Sunday.

This Sunday the video "On the Wings of Truth" will be shown during the worship service.

The new building has provided space for a nursery and a classroom for children and young people. Youth of Unity offers positive uplifting guidelines based on the teachings of Jesus, for the younger generation to carry with them throughout their lives. The meeting times are the same as for adults.

"All familiar and new faces are invited to come and enjoy the uplifting services and fellowship in the new home of Unity of West Texas," says a release from Unity of West Texas.

Fourth year celebrated

Goodwill Baptist Church is celebrating its fourth "Yesteryear: Days of Old Fashions" Sunday.

Sponsored by the Senior Missions board members, the event includes soul food, pies, cakes and cobblers as well as praying, testimonies, singing and sermons.

The purpose of the event is "thanking God for each other and for sharing and caring, giving and forgiving, loving and being loved, walking hand in hand, talking heart to heart, laughing together and weeping together, but most of all praying together, " says a release from the Senior Missions board.

Spring concert planned

ODESSA — Youth Spiritual Enlightment will hold its second annual spring concert at 7:30 p.m. today at St. James Baptist Church, Odessa.

The YSE choir's minister of music is M. Anthony Jackson.

The public is invited to attend. No admission will be charged.

Jewish children collect Rabbi cards

BALTIMORE (AP) — They're more than twice the size of baseball cards, come four to a pack and show faces considerably older than the average sports hero. But even without bubble gum, rabbi cards are the rage among Orthodox Jewish youngsters.

"I used to collect baseball cards," said Meyer Brull, 12. "I gave them up after a while. I gave them to my brother. These are more interesting."

His brother, Yossi, 10, agreed.

"They're something different from baseball cards. My teacher used to give out pictures if you were good in class. So I got a lot that way."

Like their counterparts in the baseball world, rabbi cards are collected by youngsters — and some adults — who buy them by the pack and trade to get pictures of all 36 of the Orthodox religious leaders featured thus far.

The card back includes the rabbi's place and date of birth, schooling and other facts in both English and Hebrew.

In Judaism, rabbis are teachers as well as spiritual leaders, and in closely knit Orthodox communities they are usually revered role models.

The cards, produced by Torah Publications, are the brainchild of Arthur B. Shugarman. More than 300,000 cards from the first series have been sold since their introduction last August, and a second series will be out in about a week, said Shugarman, 34, an accountant who lives in Baltimore and works in suburban Towson.

Torah Publications is non-profit, and any money it makes probably will be used to lower costs for the next series of cards, Shugarman said.

"It's for the children," said Shugarman, the father of two young daughters. "It's educational."

Shugarman said the next five-card pack is expected to sell for 99 cents. The current four-card packs cost 79 cents in most locations. They are sold at religious goods stores throughout the United States and in Canada and some European countries, he said.

Department needs more information to find scroll

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department needs to know more if it's going to help find a sacred Jewish scroll that was being smuggled from Iran to the United States when it was allegedly seized by officials in the United Arab Emirates.

"Without more information, there's no way that the department, which wants to be helpful, can be," a State Department official said Thursday, speaking on condition that his name not be used. "There just doesn't appear to be anywhere else to turn."

Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., has asked the State Department to help recover the 150-year-old Persian Torah, which had been destined for a new Persian synagogue in Queens, N.Y.

But the State Department has been unable to locate the holy book, the man who was transporting it or the official who allegedly confiscated the scroll in the tiny Arab emirate of Ras Alkheimeh.

A spokesman for the Embassy of the United Arab Emirates did not return several phone calls Thursday.

The Torah's owner, an Iranian woman, asked a friend of her husband in November 1988 to smuggle the sacred scroll to Dubai. Iranian law prohibits exporting a Torah, according to Schumer.

The woman was sending the Torah to her brother in Brooklyn, N.Y., who was planning to donate it to synagogue Beit Knesset Omid.

"We were going to have a grand opening at the synagogue and I was expecting to put this Torah at the grand opening," the brother said in an interview from New York. He spoke on condition that his name not be used for fear that the Iranian government might retaliate against his family.

The brother said the scroll had been in his family for generations.

"The value of this Torah, if you are Jewish, is priceless," he said.

Schumer put its price in the tens of thousands of dollars if it is indeed 150 years old.

The smuggler took the scroll by boat from a port in southern Iran to Dubai, where he planned to mail it to the United States, Schumer said. But in Ras Alkheimeh, the courier was stopped by government officials and the scroll was confiscated, Schumer said.

In a letter to Secretary of State James A. Baker, Schumer said he has learned that the person who seized the Torah was Javad Hadad, a member of the Justice-Police Department. Schumer provided a phone number for Hadad, but there was no answer there Thursday.

The State Department spokesman said the U.S. consul in Dubai had tried to chase down Schumer's leads to no avail.

"That name has been given before but they have not been able to track him down, as much as they've tried," the spokesman said. "We're really at a stone wall right now."

Schumer blamed the Torah's alleged confiscation on Arab anti-Semitism.

"It's a human rights issue," he said. "I think they can be embarrassed because this is the most vulgar kind of anti-Semitism that could exist."

Gospel missions serving widened range of homeless

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Gospel rescue missions, long a champion in the inner city for the homeless, are responding to a whole new range of needs that were practically unthinkable even a decade ago.

Expansion in the role of these downtown missions was highlighted at the recent annual convention of representatives of about 300 such missions in cities across the country.

It long has been a stereotype that they mostly serve older alcoholics and drug abusers. However, young adults, women and children are just as likely to seek help these days.

That has put a growing load on rescue missions to meet needs not met by state or other agencies.

"In the last 10 to 15 years, things have changed drastically," said the Rev. Stephen Burger, president of the International Union Of Gospel Missions. "We've been called on to do things we hadn't done before."

A look at some of the issues raised at the IUGM's 76th annual conference here earlier this month tells part of the story: AIDS, children's nutrition, unschooled minors, battered women, drugs.

It used to be almost unheard of to have to worry about children in the missions, Burger commented at the close of the five-day conference. But women and children now are the fastest growing proportion of those served, now amounting to about 40 percent.

Burger, nephew of retired Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren Burger, in August will become executive director of the non-profit Protestant organization which oversees some 300 rescue missions in the United States and Canada.

He says there has been a vast upheaval in the social fabric of this country. "Today there are millions of homeless in America — a population that continues to grow and become more diverse," he says.

No city has been left untouched by the homeless problem, he notes, suggesting a look at the shuttered up steel-mill towns of Pennsylvania, or a place like Astoria, Ore. (population 15,000).

"I thought of that as a picturebook place and here they were with the fishing industry falling apart, the lumber industry falling apart, alcoholism on the rise. And all of a sudden," recalls Burger, "we have a homeless problem."

Astoria is one of a number of cities across the country which have turned to the IUGM in setting up programs for the homeless and what Burger calls the "near-homeless," or those people whose whole condition is unstable and regularly move in and out of the system.

Rev. Marshall to teach seminar at Word of Life

The Rev. Peter Marshall will be teaching a seminar at Word of Life Church, 2303 W. Wall Ave., June 4 through 6.

Marshall

Born and raised in Washington, D.C., Marshall is the son of Dr. Peter Marshall, the chaplain of the United States senate from 1947 to 1949, and Catherine Marshall LeSourd, author of a number of best-selling books.

A graduate of Yale University and Princeton Theological Seminary, he was ordained in 1965 and served as assistant minister in West Hartford, Conn., before becomming pastor of the East Dennis Community Church, Cape Cod, Mass., where he served for 10 years.

Since 1977, he has devoted himself to the national ministry and to writing. He is the co-author, along with David Manuel, of two completed books — "The Light and the Glory" and "From Sea to Shining Sea" — and a work in progress — "Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory." Marshall received the 1986 Faith and Freedom Award from the Religious Heritage of America.

"His particular emphasis is the urgent need for Americans to experience the healing and restoration that Christ can bring to individuals, to families, to churches and to the nation as a whole," says a release from the church.

Marshall will speak at 10:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. June 4, at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. June 5 and at 7 p.m. June 6.

A luncheon meeting with clergy is scheduled at noon June 5 at the Ramada Inn, 3100 W. Wall Ave. Reservations must be made through the church office, 561-9159.

In addition, Marshall will speak to a ladies luncheon at 11 a.m. June 6.

For more information call the church. The public is invited to hear Marshall speak.

Snow recovering from 'difficult life'

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1980s haven't been too kind to Phoebe Snow. But then, nor have the '70s or any other time.

"I've had an incredibly difficult life," the song stylist says, as she lets the world know that Phoebe Snow is back, alive and quite well.

"I feel a little bit like I'm in the safety zone. Things are fairly peaceful compared to how they've been. It sort of makes you appreciate how tenuous life can be and how fragile and how precious.

"I'm afraid to say that too much, afraid the house will fall on me. When you've been scuffling, you don't want to do anything to start trouble in the waters again."

Snow, who describes herself as a former "wandering minstrel," is finding her comeback welcome. Critics and fans hailed her recent performance at the Bottom Line in New York, and her new LP, "Something Real," has received an enthusiastic response. It's her first since "Rock Away" in 1981.

The main reason Snow hasn't been able to pursue her career consistently is because she has been living in New Jersey caring for her 13-year-old daughter, Valerie, who was born severely brain-damaged.

"I have a wonderful woman, since November," Snow says. "She's a blessing from God. We've had some not-so-nice people. ... She spoils Valerie rotten, but that's OK.

"To do what I do most efficiently, eventually I'll have to have more than one person to take care of my daughter."

Snow's husband, musician Phil Kearns, left her while Valerie was still a baby. Their marriage ended legally in 1979.

Phoebe Snow

Her career, which quickly took flight in the early '70s, slipped away just as easily. Inexperienced in the music business, she broke a number of contracts with record companies and others and found herself embroiled in a number of lawsuits and severe financial problems. But her career and all other problems have taken a back seat to her daughter.

Though the '80s haven't been easy, Snow maintains a sense of humor.

"The busiest live year was 1983. I did almost 90 dates that year. It was the Invisible Phoebe Snow Tour. It was the best-kept secret, pretty low budget, not much advertising," she said.

"It was anybody's guess as to whether we'd survive. I was ill. I'm one of those people who feels quite driven to do things and regrets it afterwards. I'll never forget San Francisco. I had bronchial pneumonia. They found a doctor who said, 'Don't worry, I'll get her on stage.' This is not an uncommon story.

"I was so sick I was almost crawling on my hands and knees on stage. I couldn't sing. My throat was completely closed up. I did a comedy routine. I thought, 'I better keep talking or I'm going to pass out.' It was spontaneity based upon desperation. Everytime I looked at the keyboard player he was in tears laughing.

"I can't remember one thing I said.

"I'm going to write a book. Part of it is going to be some of the road experiences. Promoters come up with the doctors: 'You're geting the mystery doctor.' People think this is a glamorous job. Surprise!"

Last year, Snow had a hit duet record with Dave Mason, "The Dreams I Dream." Earlier, she did a featured background part on Joe Cocker's "The One," the B side of his "Unchain My Heart."

She also gave a number of performances at Acme, a downtown Manhattan club.

"A lot of my friends were in the house band. Every Wednesday night was blues night. Nothing was allowed but 12-bar blues. Cyndi Lauper came down and jammed one night. John Waite and Carole King and her daughter sang. It was really fun."

At the time her first album, "Phoebe Snow," and hit single, "Poetry Man," came out in 1974, Snow was an insecure person. No more.

"There are turning points in everyone's life where you decide if you're going to sink or swim. My insecurity wasn't serving me well at all. It was really a stumbling block," she said.

"You read up on it. You watch how other people function. Wallowing in insecurity can be a very tiresome thing for yourself and anyone around you. I'm in analysis. You don't like the way things are working, you've got to change them. Searching your soul can also be exhausting.

"I want my life to run as smoothly as it can run. In this business, that's a joke."

There's no man in her life now. "I'm tired of having failed relationships, so I'd prefer not to have any. I don't know if I came out and said that before. I'm saying it now. I'm saying to all the men who've been in my life, 'Thank you very much for the experience. Goodbye.'

"I'm not conventional or conservative. But in that regard, I always thought I'd live with a man who was my friend and partner in life. I believe I will meet a nice man and settle down. That's something I'm striving for. I'm not ready yet."

Snow took a visualization course to help her reorganize her life.

"You close your eyes, relax your body and see how your life is now juxtaposed with how you'd like it to be. We practiced it every week. There was a lot of humor in it," she said.

"A good percentage of what I visualized is happening now. You can say it would have happened anyhow. But I would recommend visualization. For one thing, it takes your mind off everything else."

Couple didn't realize wedding legitimate

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — A woman who said "I do" after partying for 12 hours wants the Las Vegas marriage annulled because neither she nor the groom realized the ceremony was legitimate.

Kimberly Lorna Scott, 21, who is from Boulder, filed a motion in District Court Tuesday seeking to annul her Dec. 17 marriage to Michael Shawn Dalzell, 22, of Anchorage, Alaska.

"No toaster ovens here," Scott said jokingly by telephone from Alabama, where Dalzell is a student at the University of Alabama. "It was just a joke, an accident, and we didn't think it was real."

The two college students exchanged wedding vows at the Little White Chapel after they spent nearly 12 hours consuming alcohol and wandering along the popular Las Vegas strip of hotels and casinos, Scott said in an affidavit that accompanied the motion.

Scott and Dalzell decided to "get a Las Vegas marriage just to see what it was like, not realizing that it would be as valid as a marriage performed anywhere else," according to the motion.

Shortly after the ceremony, the two parted company, but after they received a Social Security name change request form they realized the marriage was legal, the motion said.

"It was sort of a slight panic, maybe shock," Dalzell said.

Bones may indicate ancient diet

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — High-tech analysis of bones can reveal what ancient people ate, according to an anthropologist who says one culture on a small Caribbean island, for example, didn't eat as much fish as expected.

"Foods that we eat have different ratios of carbon and nitrogen isotopes," said Bill Keegan, assistant anthropology curator at the University of Florida Museum of Natural History.

An isotope is a form of an element that has the same number of protons in its nucleus, but a different number of neutrons.

The new technique has its limitations, he said. Isotopes can only permit identification of food groups.

Copter pilot recalls saving group of Vietnamese at My Lai

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Hugh C. Thompson Jr. blinks away tears when he remembers the first child he rescued from the massacre at My Lai. She had been pulled from a ditch, covered with the blood of the women, old men and other children who filled it.

"I had a child about that size," he says.

Thompson's sons are both grown now, men in their mid-20s. And Thompson has broken a 20-year silence.

He was a 23-year-old helicopter pilot on March 16, 1968 — the day U.S. soldiers in Charlie Company killed more than 400 civilians at a hamlet in Vietnam.

Warrant Officer Thompson and his crews were the only soldiers at My Lai to rescue rather than kill. They saved the little girl, who was about four or five years old, and a group of 12 to 16 old men, women and children.

"Buck has always seemed like he looked out for people," said his mother, Wessie Thompson. "Both the boys are that way. I don't know whether it's the way they were raised or they're just naturally good boys. But I think God every day for them."

Knowing that he did all he could and did right at My Lai doesn't make the memories easy ones for Thompson.

"We're supposed to be the ones on the white horse in the big white hats," said Thompson, whose father was a Navy pilot and whose brother retired as a pilot in the Air Force. He shook his head.

To keep his memories pushed down, Thompson — now a pilot for an offshore oilfield helicopter company called Air Logistics and a part-time real estate agent — rarely talks about the massacre. He testified at an Army inquiry in 1970.

But he didn't talk to reporters until producer Michael Bilton sent him some of his earlier work to back up a request which Thompson had turned down earlier. Thompson said the quality of that work persuaded him to talk to Bilton, whose documentary about My Lai aired Tuesday on the PBS show "Frontline."

Other soldiers who testified at the military inquiry said the troops wanted revenge for buddies killed at My Lai, a desolate cluster of rural villages said to be a stronghold of Viet Cong resistance.

"They were supposed to go through and kill off the enemy," Thompson told the Lafayette Advertiser. "There's only one problem. There weren't any enemy."

The inexperienced, naive troops led by Lt. William Calley Jr. left the base at 7:22 a.m. on March 16, 1968.

"There is no doubt in my mind these boys thought 'this is it.' They went in with blood in their eyes and shot everything that moved," said Thompson.

Thompson's job was to search out locations of enemy fire and tell his gunship escorts where they were. But as his helicopter darted over the trees, he couldn't see any shooting.

"I've heard the intelligence was right, but we were off target. I've heard the bad guys were in (village) My Lai 1, and we hit My Lai 4," he said.

At first, it was routine reconnaissance. Then it turned to nightmare.

"Seems like one time we came back and everywhere was bodies. Everything was burning," he said. "Things didn't look right."

Then he and his men flew over a ditch full of bodies — old men, old women and babies. There were no young men; nobody who might have been a soldier.

Thompson knew that the Viet Cong sometimes tied grenades to babies to trap Americans. But the bodies in the ditch didn't fit that picture. Thompson couldn't figure out how all those people got into the ditch, or why they might have run out of their bunkers into the open.

"I remember coming upon one lady in the field. She was wounded, thrashing around on the ground in a lot of pain. We called on the radio for assistance to help her out," he said.

"An individual (American soldier) walked up to her, nudged her, kicked her, stepped back and blew her away."

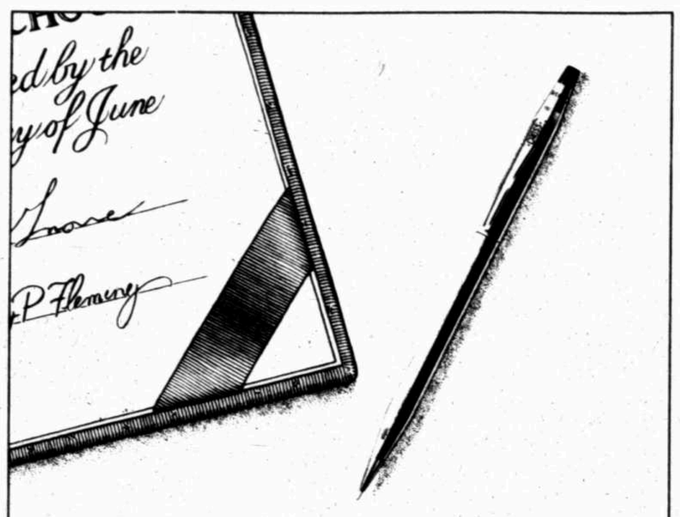

In the ditch, someone moved.

Thompson and his two crew members went back. His crew chief, Glen Androtta, disentangled a little girl from the mass of bodies.

Thompson radioed for help while he held the child, who was apparently uninjured but was covered with blood.

"I couldn't understand what was happening. I couldn't understand why it was happening," he said quietly. "We're supposed to be the good guys."

The helicopter took the child to a nearby hospital, then returned to My Lai 4.

Idaho governor gets Everest card

POCATELLO, Idaho (AP) — Governors get all kinds of mail, but the postcard from a climbers' base camp on Mount Everest was a new twist for Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Climber Tom Whittaker, one of three Pocatello residents in a party trying to scale the world's highest peak, advised the governor the trek is going well "despite high winds."

"I'm having a blast," Whittaker said in the missive from the 23,500-foot base camp in Nepal. "It's still a long way to the top, but there are no complaints."

Before Whittaker and Jeff and Kellie Rhoads, all graduates of Idaho State University, left for the climb, Andrus gave them an Idaho state flag to plant at the summit.

Whittaker said two members of the party had already recovered from flu.

Japanese film shows failed military coup

By ELAINE KURTENBACH

TOKYO (AP) — Kazuo Okuyama began his career with typical Japanese movie fare: gangster and cute animal movies.

Now the ambitious young producer hopes to inspire jaded Japanese with the tragedy of an idealistic rebellion in 1936 which tried to install a military government under the late Emperor Hirohito.

Okayama's problem in making the film, due for release June 17, has been that the attempted coup by 22 fervent young right-wing military officers was quashed under orders of Hirohito himself, who was then revered as a living god.

The emperor isn't portrayed in the film, but his order against the young rebels, whom Okuyama describes as martyrs, is depicted as a misjudgment that ultimately led Japan into World War II, the producer said.

Reflections on the emperor's judgment and the question of his responsibility for the war are acutely sensitive here, although discussion of Hirohito's historical role has become freer since his death Jan. 7 at age 87.

Historians generally agree Hirohito was a figurehead, wielding little real power. His most famous decision was Japan's World War II surrender in 1945, when the government was deadlocked over the issue.

But Hirohito also ordered the 1936 leaders of the coup back to their barracks after two days of assassinations and political turmoil in the "2-26 Incident," so called because it was launched on Feb. 26.

Several coup leaders committed suicide, and others were imprisoned. On July 12, 1936, two civilians and 13 of the rebel officers were executed by firing squad.

Okuyama's movie, "2-26" tells the story of the young officers who led about 1,500 soldiers and nine civilians in a bloody attempt to overthrow the government and install a military regime under Hirohito.

The rebels claimed they sought to restore integrity to a nation they believed was corrupted by a political elite living in luxury while millions suffered Depression-era deprivation. Many of the rebels, historians say, were sons of poor farm families who had suffered hunger and seen their sisters sold into prostitution.

But in the repressive atmosphere after the failed coup, an opposing faction in the military used the incident to build its own power, eventually establishing a militaristic regime that led Japan into World War II.

"There was an energy and an intensity alive then that has been forgotten in today's Japan," the 35-year-old producer said.

"One main reason I wanted to produce this film is because we live in a similar era, when young women prostitute themselves and revelations of political corruption surface every day," said Okuyama. "The only difference is that then we were poor and now we're rich."

The film is coming out amid outrage over a scandal in which 14 prominent bureaucrats and b isinessmen have been arrested on suspicion of bribery and other illegalities, and more than 150 people embarrassed by disclosures that they accepted unlisted shares at discount prices from an employment information firm.

"I wanted to sound an alarm, to use the tragedy and drama of the 2-26 incident to tell people what they don't want to hear about political corruption and decay," Okuyama said.

"Influential people are gathering dirty money. Like the martyrs of 2-26, people should care."

The film depicts the deaths of the coup leaders as a tragic loss of courageous young men who died still true to their ideals.

"Even though the emperor doesn't understand that we were right, history will answer for us," says one coup leader before putting a bullet in his head.

Okuyama said in an interview that he knew a decade ago that there was material to make a good movie, but it just wasn't possible because of a lack of funds, and sensitivities about the emperor.

The screenwriter didn't want to get involved, he said, but "finally agreed on the condition we play down politics and aim the movie more toward young people."

Corporate backers also feared a backlash from right-wing groups that vociferously protest anything they interpret as disrespectful toward the imperial family.

"When we get to the last print, just before distribution, we plan to show the film to some of the major right-wing groups to try to gain their understanding," Okuyama said.

But he still expects some trouble. "Actually, I'm very worried just now, very afraid. But even if there's controversy, I think I can explain what we're trying to do."

The film ends on a note the rightists should appreciate: a clash of gongs and "Tenno Heika Banzai," or "Long Live the Emperor."

Reformation-style hostility driving leader from church

By ROBERT BARR

LONDON (AP) — The passions of the 16th century, burning fiercely in the Highlands of Scotland, have driven the Lord High Chancellor from his church.

Lord Mackay of Clashfern, Britain's chief legal officer, said Friday that he would leave the Free Presbyterian Church of Scotland rather than promise not to attend Roman Catholic funeral Mass, as he had done twice in honor of fellow peers.

"I have no intention of giving any such undertaking as that for which the synod has asked," Mackay said in a statement issued from his office in London.

Like a 16th century chancellor, Sir Thomas More, Mackay was forced to choose between private conscience and public duty in a land where the church as well as the state derives its authority from the crown.

More, a Catholic, was beheaded in 1535 after refusing to recognize Henry VIII's supremacy over the newly formed Church of England, and the rhetoric of the Reformation echoed in the church at Inverness where the "Wee Frees" held their annual synod this week.

"I find it very difficult to believe that the lord chancellor of a Protestant country, with a Protestant queen on a Protestant throne, has any obligation by reason of state to go to a Popish Mass," said the Rev. Donald MacLean, clerk of the Southern Presbytery.

Lord St. John of Fawsley, a prominent Roman Catholic and former Cabinet officer, put the issue this way: "What is the lord chancellor of Great Britain, who is the head of the judiciary, doing belonging to such an intolerant organization?"

The struggle for the lord chancellor's soul was waged amid scenes of stout women weeping, solemn men stomping their feet in protest and the church's moderator, the Rev. Aaron Ndebele of Bulawayo, Zimbabwe, banging his fist on the table for order.

Mackay, an elder of his church in Edinburgh, had been suspended last year following a complaint about his attendance at the funeral of Lord Russell of Killowan at Westminster Cathedral in London. He had attended another Catholic funeral in 1986.

Speaking to the Lord Chancellor's opponents, the Rev. John Ross of Tain warned the synod that it "will make the name of this church stink in the Highland, Scotland, the United Kingdom and wherever it is known."

"May God have mercy upon us as a church," said the Rev. Robert Sinclair of Wick, at 90 the oldest clergyman in the church. "Lord Mackay is a man whose conscience is clear before God."

The Rev. Neil Ross of Laide, convenor of the church's committee on religion and morals, noted that the synod had easily mustered a unanimous vote some years ago to rebuke Prince Charles for attending a Mass. "Yet when one of our own goes to Mass there is a big hullabaloo when he is disciplined for it," Ross said.

Like 16th-century chancellor Sir Thomas More, Lord Mackay of Clashfern has been forced to choose between private conscience and public duty in a land where the church as well as the state derives its authority from the crown.

The vote upholding Mackay's suspension, by 33-27, signaled a new schism in a 6,000-member denomination born in protest in 1893.

The Rev. Calum MacInnes of Toronto, who had once been threatened with discipline for refusing to wear a clerical collar, filed a formal protest and walked out. Besides the Mackay case, MacInnes complained of a 1987 decision to refuse membership to a man whose golf club was open on Sundays, and another last year to suspend a minister who had invited a Catholic priest to pray at an education committee meeting.

Appointed lord chancellor by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in 1987, the 61-year-old Mackay presides over the House of Lords, the unelected upper house of Parliament.

His tenure has been controversial because of his proposals for sweeping reform of the ancient privileges and powers of the English bar, proposals which some lawyers have resented as coming from an outsider.

Mackay, with his twinkling eyes and soft smile, appears an unlikely object of controversy.

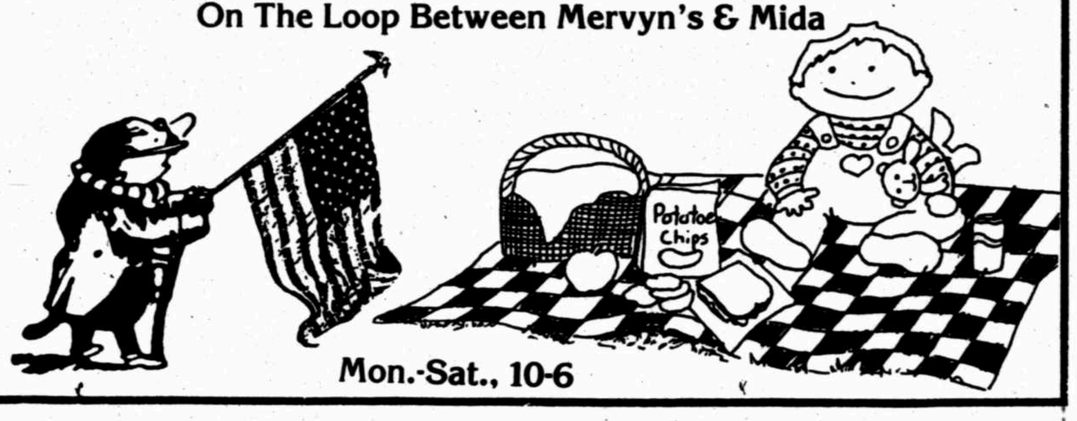

The son of a railway porter, he attended George Heriot's School ("for the improvement of the children of poor but deserving folk") in Edinburgh and then took a degree in mathematics and natural philosophy in Edinburgh.

After lecturing for a time at Trinity College, Cambridge, he turned to law in Scotland and eventually became Lord Advocate, the top law officer in Scotland.

In an interview with author John Mortimer, published in The Daily Telegraph in February, Mackay had defended his church from accusations of intolerance.

"It depends what you mean by intolerance," he said. "If you believe something strongly, if that is your faith, the testimony you have received, you seek change in others by way of persuasion."

President Bush's
European Trip Itinerary

Weapons rift complicates Bush's European itinerary

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Correspondent

ROME — President Bush arrived Friday enroute to a summit with NATO leaders, hoping to use personal diplomacy to resolve a long-simmering dispute over European-based nuclear weapons.

In brief arrival remarks, Bush made no reference to reports that he would use the NATO summit next week in Brussels — his first as president — to announce a reduction in U.S. troops in Europe.

Instead, he declared the United States wants a "stronger and more united Europe," and said he plans to be "actively engaged in Eastern Europe, promoting measures to encourage political and economic liberalization in Poland."

Bush plans to visit Poland in July.

The dispute over short-range nuclear weapons has defied resolution by the two main countries at odds — West Germany, pressing for negotiations with the Soviets to rid Europe of such weapons, and the United States, supported by Britain, wanting to keep the weapons there and make them better.

Other members of the 16-nation NATO alliance have lined up on one side or the other, with a few straddling the fence.

Officials on all sides have sought to dismiss suggestions that the issue would seriously disrupt the summit, which was designed to celebrate 40 years of Cold War unity against the Soviet Union.

As Bush left Washington, The Washington Times reported that he planned to use the summit as the stage for announcing a reduction of up to 10 percent in U.S. troop strength in Europe, "as many as 34,000 troops."

Numerous administration officials, with Bush and back in Washington, said any word on that would have to come from the president himself.

Bush spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters aboard Air Force One en route to Rome: "Any ideas in this area would be one the president would want to discuss with the allies, he would raise with his partners at this session before he discusses anything publicly. ... I am not confirming or denying any decisions."

Fitzwater did not dispute the newspaper's account. He said Bush "will be discussing a lot of different ideas with the allies" but that he "just can't speculate on what the conversations might amount to or what the president might suggest."

The White House spokesman also stressed Bush would make no move on troop deployments in Europe without having consultations with NATO first.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, told CBS News that 10 percent "is the probable amount of reduction that would occur if the Soviet Union accepted the NATO proposal on conventional arms control which is now tabled."

In Bonn, West German spokesman Herbert Schmuelling said, "We have no official word of such a decision."

Bush, in comments just before leaving on his first trip to Europe as president, expressed hopes to see a Europe "that is truly free, united and at peace." He repeated his desire to move beyond any Cold War policy of containment "to integrate the Soviet Union into the community of nations."

"We welcome the political and economic liberalization that has taken place so far in the Soviet Union and in some countries of Eastern Europe. We watch hoping that more changes will follow."

As for the Western military alliance, he said, "NATO has been a success by any measure but success breeds its own challenges. Today, dramatic changes are taking place in Europe, East and West. For us, those changes bring new challenges and unparalleled opportunities."

In remarks prepared for his arrival in Rome, he praised U.S.-Italy ties of friendship and said, "The United States welcomes a stronger and more united Europe."

Melissa Taulbee of Little Rock, Ark., carries an armload of flags into her state's National Cemetery Friday. She and some junior high classmates placed 18,000 American flags on the graves for Memorial Day observances.

Why did pipeline go unchecked?

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — A section of gasoline pipeline that ruptured in a fatal explosion and fire wasn't checked for damage after a runaway train plowed across it two weeks ago, the line's owner said Friday.

Also, federal investigators looking into the fire announced they had found dents and marks on the buried pipe, and pieces of rail cars embedded in the earth near the line.

The pipeline fire Thursday killed at least two people and destroyed 10 houses across the street from the vacant lots left after a freight train derailed two weeks ago, killing four people and destroying six houses.

The investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board refused to say if they believed damage from the freight train wreck was to blame for the pipeline blast Thursday.

But the evidence appeared to lend weight to the contention of residents and city officials that the back-to-back disasters that rocked a neighborhood of modest homes were related, and that the second might have been prevented.

"All these people were saying it was safe to go back after the train accident," said Dudley Brewster, whose rental home was destroyed in the blast. "Now the Red Cross says its got another place for me a few blocks away. I said, 'Uh-uh. No way. We're never going back.'"

The fire that raged all day Thursday as unleaded gasoline gushed from the pipe was so intense that it has been difficult to identify, or even count the dead, authorities said.

Late Friday, spokesmen from the city of San Bernardino said the county coroner's office had been in error in reporting that the remains of three people were recovered. Only two bodies were positively identified, said city spokesman Richard Bennecke and police Sgt. Dan Hernandez, press liaison for the department.

On Thursday, authorities said the dead were two adults and an infant. Coroner's officials didn't immediately respond to requests to explain the discrepancy.

Through the day, reports of the number of people who were unaccounted for also varied, from two to none.

David Andries, operations manager of Calnev Pipe Line Co., owner of the line, said the section of pipe where the rupture occurred wasn't excavated in spot checks of the line for damage caused by the wreck.

Instead, holes were dug every 50 feet along the 2,000-foot stretch of track involved in the derailment to check for damage, he said at a news conference. Two larger areas were excavated, including one spot where a locomotive dug into the ground.

Calnev's parent company, GATX Terminals Corp. of Chicago will provide housing and other support for families displaced by the fire, company president Robert Claypoole told reporters.

At a separate news conference, NTSB's acting chairman, Jim Kolstad, said investigators who were excavating the entire length of the line at the wreck scene found at least five metal pieces that appeared to be from the rail cars. A piece of brake assembly was found in the ground just 15 inches from the pipeline.

The line itself was dented and marked, but investigators couldn't say if the metal pieces had done the damage, he said. The section bearing the 30-inch by 4-inch rupture was being removed for lab tests in Washington, D.C.

The dents and marks "were located near the rupture — on top of, below, to the side, near it," Kolstad said.

The NTSB has juristiction over pipeline accidents as well as other transportation accidents.

City officials, angry over reassurances that the pipeline was safe to use, sought a court order forbidding Calnev from reopening the line this time until its safety is guaranteed.

Agency rejects challenge to AT&T contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Federal Communications Commission official on Friday rejected a challenge to the awarding of a government contract that could be worth up to $15 billion to American Telephone & Telegraph by the year 2000.

The agency said the losing parties in the contract fight, a consortium led by Martin Marietta Corp. and MCI Communications Corp., had failed to prove their claim that AT&T had violated regulatory guidelines by offering a bid below its actual costs.

"We conclude that no compelling argument has been presented that the tariff proposal is patently unlawful so as to require rejection and that no question has been presented that warrants investigation at this time," Gerald Brock, chief of the FCC's Common Carrier Bureau, said in a four-page order rejecting the challenge.

"This is very good news for AT&T," company spokesman Herb Linnen said. "We have said all along that the protest was without merit — another example of AT&T's long-distance competitors using the regulatory arena to try to win something they have lost in the competitive marketplace."

MCI spokeswoman Kathleen Keegan said company officials were reviewing the order to determine their options.

"We're disappointed that the FCC apparently accepted AT&T's faulty legal justification regarding the establishment of preferential rates for the government," Ms. Keegan said.

Martin Marietta spokesman Tom Hobson said company attorneys would review the decision next week and decide whether to appeal.

An FCC spokeswoman said Brock's decision could be appealed to the full commission.

The General Services Administration in December awarded 60 percent of the contract to AT&T and the remaining 40 percent to US Sprint Communications Co. The contract is for telephone and other high-tech communications equipment and could be worth up to $25 billion — among the largest non-military contracts ever awarded.

The system the two companies are to provide to the government is known as FTS-2000. It is a custome-designed communications network using digital and fiber optic technology to link the federal government's expansive telecommunications system. AT&T has several subconctractors lined up to assist with the project, with the first installations expected this fall.

Martin Marietta and MCI challenged the GSA decision, alleging in their petition to the FCC that AT&T offered the government "unreasonably preferential and discriminatory" rates that were below what it would cost AT&T to provide the services.

Dr. Wendy Marshall stands near the Loyola Mecian Center helicopter in Maywood, Ill., Friday. She used her fingers to plug two holes in the heart of a gunshot victim while he was being transported to the medical center for surgery.

Surgeon's fingers plug holes in man's heart during airlift

CHICAGO (AP) — A surgeon saved the life of a gunshot victim by plugging the bullet holes in his heart with her fingers and massaging the organ to keep it beating during a 14-minute helicopter ride to a trauma center.

Dr. Wendy Marshall cradled the exposed heart in her hands and kept the patient from bleeding to death while she supervised his transfer Thursday from a Joliet hospital to a suburban trauma center equipped for open-heart surgery.

Surgeons there repaired the holes, and the patient, Tommy Lee "Tony" Hairston, was doing well Friday, said Ms. Marshall, director of Loyola University Medical Center's trauma unit and its air medical service.

"We were lucky," she said in an interview from suburban Maywood a day after the feat, which the hospital's chairman of surgery, Dr. Robert J. Freeark, called unprecedented and heroic.

"It's one for the books, that's for sure," said Dr. John Barrett, director of the area's busiest trauma unit at Cook County Hospital.

Ms. Marshall said the good judgment of surgeons at Silver Cross Hospital in Joliet to call for help before it was too late, coupled with the efficiency of her medical support staff, made the dramatic transfer possible.

"It's a team effort," she said. "That's the success of the system."

She said the patient likely would not have survived transfer by ambulance. Joliet is about 25 miles southwest of Maywood.

Hairston, 29, a Joliet landscaper, was shot Wednesday night after an argument with a neighbor over missing property, police said. The neighbor, Robert Knox, was charged with attempted murder, armed violence and unlawful use of a weapon, police said.

Hairston was rushed to Silver Cross, where an operation was performed. However, after surgery, he started bleeding again.

A second operation revealed the bullet wounds in the heart, which could not be repaired without a heart-bypass machine, which Silver Cross lacks. Surgeons called for help and Ms. Marshall arrived 23 minutes later.

Congressmen convicted on sex-related charge

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — U.S. Rep. Donald Lukens was convicted Friday of having sex with a 16-year-old girl whose mother accused the congressman of offering a government job to buy her silence.

Lukens

Hours after the verdict, one Ohio congressman called for Lukens' resignation, but an aide predicted he would seek re-election next year.

"I think he should do the gentlemanly thing and resign," said Rep. Chalmers Wylie, the senior Republican among Ohio's congressional delegation. Lukens also is a Republican.

A jury deliberated for 1½ hours before finding Lukens guilty of contributing to the delinquency and unruliness of a minor, stemming from an incident last Nov. 6. The misdemeanor carries a maximum sentence of 180 days in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Lukens stood still, his hands pressed on the defense table and his mouth slightly open, as Franklin County Domestic Relations Judge Ronald Solove read the verdict.

The 58-year-old divorced congressman from Middletown was indicted Feb. 23, about three weeks after Columbus television station WSYX broadcast a secretly recorded videotape that appeared to show Lukens offering to find the girl's mother, Anna Coffman, a job. She had gone to the station to get help and agreed to the secret taping.

On the tape, the woman asked Lukens why he was "messing around" with her daughter, Rosie. Lukens replied, "Well, first of all, I didn't really know she was a teen-ager."

Toward the end of the tape, Lukens said, "Let me go back (to Washington) and see what there is part-time and ... (inaudible). ... I don't know what, uh, the government has, but I can check and find out."

Mrs. Coffman testified that the offer was to try to buy her silence, while Lukens called it an extortion attempt.

Rosie Coffman told reporters she was pleased with the verdict.

"I'm happy to see justice is done," she said. Asked if she hated Lukens, said said, "No, I don't hate him. I don't hate anybody."

A misdemeanor conviction does not automatically trigger an Ethics Committee investigation or bar a member from sitting in Congress. The committee does have the option of investigating such cases and recommending action such as censure.

Solove delayed sentencing pending the completion of a presentence investigation.

Lukens declined to comment on the verdict before he left the courthouse through a private hallway and elevator. His chief of staff, William Jarrell, said he planned to make a statement next week about his personal and political future.

"The congressman will be spending some quiet time, speaking to family and friends to get a lot of opinion and advice," Jarrell said. "But I'll say this, we will be running."

Lukens was first elected to the House in 1966, serving two terms before dropping out to make an unsuccessful bid for the Ohio governorship. After serving terms in the state House of Representatives, he returned to the U.S. House in 1987.

First man to walk on the moon says he ad libbed famous phrase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Neil Armstrong, settling a debate that has simmered since he became the first human on the moon 20 years ago, said Friday that his immortal words — "That's one small step for a man" — were composed on the spot.

Armstrong, commander of Apollo 11, which landed on the moon on July 20, 1969, was reunited with his two crewmates for a news conference in advance of the exuberant celebrations planned across the world to mark the anniversary.

He was asked when exactly he decided on the words "That's one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind," which he said after climbing down the ladder on the lunar lander.

"It was a statement that was natural in the sense of the time," Armstrong said. "I thought about it after we got there."

With that he destroyed long-standing rumors in space circles that it was not Armstrong — an engineer and jet test pilot — who created those words for history, but some anonymous public relations genius hitting on a felicitous phrase.

Armstrong, along with lunar module pilot Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin and command module pilot Michael Collins, fielded questions from reporters with humor and self-deprecation for the niche they carved in the milestones of exploration.

—On the use of robots to explore space — a technique favored by scientists, Armstrong said: "Man can'be amused and amazed, and a robot can be neither."

—On leaving footprints on the moon that will remain undisturbed for millenia, he said: "I had hoped that somebody goes up there some day and cleans them up."

Apollo 11 astronauts Buzz Aldrin, from left, Mike Collins and Neil Armstrong hold a news conference in Washington Friday.

—On how their lives were changed by their adventure, Armstrong said: "Before 1969, press conferences were much smaller."

—On whether the Apollo moon program was a stunt of little value, he said: "Even if it was a bad idea, I'm glad we did it."

Collins, who is writing his third book about space — this one about Mars — was asked why the nation seems to have lost its zest for space exploration.

He said the world of the 1980s is a different place than the 1960s when President John F. Kennedy could easily commit the nation to landing a man on the moon and arouse popular support.

"President Bush appears to be a president as dynamic as Kennedy," Collins said. "I think in today's climate he would have to say 'I think we ought to dedicate ourselves to the goal and perhaps consider appointing a commission after due deliberation to investigate the feasibility of certain long-range goals in the space program, perhaps even including a mission to Mars.' "

Collins, who orbited the moon alone in the mother ship while Armstrong and Aldrin strolled on the Sea of Tranquillity, said America should continue its exploration of space.

"We're a nation of explorers," he said. "We went from the East Coast to the West Coast and then vertically. It is a part of the human condition."

Sailor denies connection with Iowa blast

MIAMI (AP) — The USS Iowa sailor linked to investigation of the massive explosion aboard the battleship Friday denied wrongdoing and charged the Navy was seeking a scapegoat.

Kendall Truitt, 21-year-old gunner's mate 3rd class, got high-profile Miami attorney Ellis Rubin to represent him. Rubin warned that continued allegations against Truitt, from homosexuality to that he intentionally caused the explosion that killed 47 sailors April 19, would be "answered in court."

Truitt and Clayton Hartwig, 25-year-old gunner's mate who died in the gun turret blast, were best friends and took out $100,000 life insurance policies naming each other as the beneficiaries. Navy investigators have said they are looking into the relationship, including a reported falling-out last year when Truitt was married, as they study homicide as a possibility in the case.

"I think the Navy is at a loss," Truitt said. "They're just looking for a scapegoat."

Rubin said Navy intelligence had "leaked the charges to the press little by little" to create what he called a "media frenzy."

He said Truitt had come to South Florida "seeking counsel and advice in connection with these vicious, untrue, false and malicious rumors leaked by the intelligence service of the Navy and transmitted to favored elements of the media.

"They have no evidence," he said. "They don't even have probable cause."

Rubin said Truitt risked his life to save other sailors.

Truitt and wife, Carole, joined Rubin outside the attorney's law offices for a news conference in which Truitt denied allegations against him. Rubin asked if he were a homosexual, which Truitt denied, and then asked Truitt's wife if he were a good lover. She replied affirmatively.

NATION IN BRIEF

Mom won't face cocaine charges in baby's death

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — A grand jury refused to indict a young mother for manslaughter in the prenatal, cocaine-linked death of her 2-day-old daughter, authorities said Friday.

Green

The case of Melanie Green, 24, sparked heated debate over the merits of such prosecution after Winnebago County State's Attorney Paul Logli charged her May 9 with involuntary manslaughter and delivery during pregancy of a controlled substance to a minor.

The move drew fire from some members of the medical, social service and legal communities, who argued fear of prosecution could prevent drug-abusing mothers-to-be from seeking medical help.

"This office brought the charges and sought the indictment because we believed at that time and still do believe that it was an appropriate response to the death of a newborn child," Logli said Friday at a news conference.

"There are no winners in a case like this," said Winnebago County Public Defender Gary Pumilia, who accompanied Ms. Green to Thursday's grand jury proceeding.

Mondale won't challenge

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A Minnesota political era ended Friday when former Vice President Walter F. Mondale said he will not challenge Republican U.S. Sen. Rudy Boschwitz in 1990 or seek any other elective office in the future.

"I believe it's time for other candidates to step forward," said Mondale, a former senator who was the Democratic Party's presidential nominee in 1984. "It was a very difficult choice for us."

Mondale and his mentor, the late Hubert H. Humphrey, dominated Minnesota politics from 1948, when Humphrey was elected to the U.S. Senate, to 1980, when the Carter-Mondale ticket lost the presidential race. Both Mondale and Humphrey, who died in 1978, represented Minnesota in the Senate, served as vice president and were unsuccessful Democratic presidential nominees.

"A lot of the people I worked for have been dead for a long time and at some point, even Mondale has to get out," said Mondale, 61. "One of the requirements of a healthy party is that it renews itself. You can't keep running Walter Mondale for everything."

Mondale said he and his wife, Joan, have enjoyed his life out of political office and has seen too many colleagues remain in the Senate for too long.

Udall out of hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., was released Friday from the hospital where he had been treated since May 9 for pneumonia and symptoms associated with Parkinson's disease, an aide said.

Udall, 66, has had Parkinson's disease for about 10 years and periodically goes into the hospital to have his medication adjusted. During a routine visit this month, doctors discovered he had pneumonia, said his chief of staff, Matt James.

James said Udall is fully recovered from the pneumonia but is supposed to rest at his home in Arlington, Va., next week.

Udall, a 15-term congressman, is chairman of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee.

Seabrook gets license

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — After 13 years of protests and wrangling, Seabrook nuclear power plant officials got their testing license Friday and began laying plans to start their first atomic chain reaction, possibly within a week.

The license, the biggest milestone yet for a project that is 10 years late and billions over budget, was granted by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission Friday morning. A federal appeals court declined to delay the tests late Thursday.

Seabrook officials hope to receive a commercial license in the fall.

Schlueter proves legislative clout

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — It's late May and bills are drawing flies in the House Calendars Committee. And if anybody doubted that the turnkey of that legislative dungeon has considerable clout, Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, set them straight Tuesday.

On Monday, the Senate gave preliminary approval to a pork barrel bill that would establish Central Texas College as the newest state university, but not before passing an amendment requiring clearance by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board before the Killeen college could claim four-year status.

That brought Schlueter, no longer the kinder and gentler Lord High Executioner, to the Senate side to work his charm on recalcitrant members.

On Tuesday, the Senate decided the new college, by then known as "Schlueter State," didn't need Coordinating Board approval; as Senate sponsor Temple Dickson, D-Sweetwater, said, it is readily apparent that the Killeen metropolitan area needs a full-service state college.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, the Senate Finance chairman who also represents Texas A&M, complained. He earlier had protested the summary expansion of the University of Texas at Dallas to four-year status without Coordinating Board review.

Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, changed his vote on the Killeen college. He acknowledged that he visited with Schlueter but denied that any deals were cut. "I think it's a good idea to have a four-year university there now," Sims said.

Schlueter (who denied having twisted any arms) replied that it was all just part of the legislative game. And Schlueter plays hardball.

As end-of-session complaints mount about Schlueter's stewardship of the House Calendar, The episode illustrates the power he wields as the House's traffic cop. Meanwhile, Schlueter dismisses the gripes as the same that occur every two years at crunch time.

After midnight Friday, when no new bills can be considered, he expects to be blamed for the bills that die. "I'll take it all," he said, but he added, "I think we've done a good job, given the fact that we go in at 10, take an hour and a half for lunch and quit at 5. How many bills do you think we can take up in a day?"

He takes the blame so that other committee heads don't have to say no, he said. "Eighty percent of the bills I got were dead before they got here, but I'm going to get the blame for killing them."

Schlueter also finds irony in the criticism that his conservative politics and business ties color the bills that get out of the committee, which was created by liberals in 1973 to dilute the autocratic power of the House speaker.

As the days wane, lawmakers who have been unable to get a green light from Calendars have been looking to attach their bills as riders to other bills that have made it to the floor. Both houses will have to work long and sometimes frantic hours before the Monday midnight adjournment to catch up with the 1,423 bills that got through the 1987 session.

A book spotted on Democratic Sen. Carl Parker's desk Tuesday may indicate where those final days are headed. Asked about his reading of "The Art of War," a classic study of battle tactics by the ancient Chinese general Sun Tzu, Parker replied, "Not everybody has signed off on a kinder, gentler end of session."

That's why, as the saying goes, Austin doesn't need a zoo. They already have a Legislature.

American diplomat slain in her London apartment

LONDON (AP) — An American diplomat was stabbed to death in her ground-floor west London apartment, police said Friday.

Scotland Yard said the body of Marie Burke, 63, a second secretary who worked in the consular section of the U.S. Embassy, was found Thursday afternoon after a colleague became concerned when she failed to show up for work.

She last seen about 10 p.m. Wednesday, heading home after dining with friends, police said.

Police said they found Mrs. Burke in bed, still in her nightclothes, with what appeared to be a single stab wound in the chest.

Detective Superintendent Alan Lewis, leading the investigation, said: "There is no sign of forced entry, and it appears the assailant may have got in through an insecure or open window."

Officers said her purse was missing but embassy-owned art objects were left undisturbed. Scotland Yard said she did not appear to have been sexually assaulted.

A Yard spokesman, speaking anonymously, said the slaying was not believed to have a political motive or diplomatic connection.

Neither Scotland Yard nor the U.S. Embassy knew Mrs. Burke's hometown, although the embassy said she was from New York state.

Mrs. Burke, who was widowed in 1974, is survived by two daughters and a son, police said. She had worked in the U.S. Consular Service since the late 1970s and had been posted in London for the last 18 months.

A statement issued by U.S. Ambassador Henry E. Catto and the embassy staff said: "Marie Burke was a valued and beloved colleague. We share the grief of her family and our prayers are with them. We extend to them our heartfelt condolences."

Judge issues informal gag order in cult-related smuggling case

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela issued a gag order Friday to prohibit authorities from discussing a drug smuggling case against Serafin Hernandez Rivera, the only suspect in U.S. custody linked to a Matamoros drug cult suspected in at least 15 slayings.

Hernandez, who remains jailed without bond in Cameron County, was arrested last month when U.S. and Mexican officials raided the Santa Elena Ranch and learned of the grisly slayings and mutilations of 13 men and boys outside Matamoros, Mexico. Two more bodies were found at another ranch a few days later.

Hernandez was arrested by the Drug Enforcement Administration agents in Houston April 17. He and 10 others were indicted by a federal grand jury in McAllen on drug charges stemming from the alleged smuggling of 1,800 pounds of marijuana shipped through the Santa Elena Ranch days before Mexican Federal Judicial Police arrested Hernandez' son and brother at the ranch.

A spokeswoman at the Cameron County Jail said Hernandez was arraigned Friday, but authorities have continue to refuse bond for the 45-year-old Brownsville man.

Vela dismissed a four-count indictment against Hernandez Friday that charged Hernandez with conspiracy, importation and possession of the marijuana. Three charges remain against him, including possession of an unregistered, sawed-off shotgun, conspiracy to possess and distribute 243 pounds of marijuana in early 1987, and conspiracy to possess and distribute cocaine in June 1987.

Vela approved a motion by Hernandez' attorney, Felix Recio, for a gag order prohiting government officials from commenting about the case.

Recio said "news coverage of this case will nly serve to further prejudice the community" against Hernandez.

Oran Neck, chief of the U.S. Customs Service in Brownsville, has said Hernandez was not involved in the group's alleged bloody cult rituals. The group is believed responsible for several drug-vendetta murders and human sacrifices designed to protect them from authorities through a modified following of palo mayombe, an Afro-Caribbean cult religion.

School divided in alleged group sexual assault on retarded girl

GLEN RIDGE, N.J. (AP) — The five teen-agers charged with sexually assaulting a mentally retarded girl with a toy baseball bat and a broom handle have been suspended from school for 10 days.

"They were not suspended because of the alleged acts, but because of the disruption their presence in the school would have on the educational program," said Glen Ridge Superintendent of Schools Rose McCaffrey.

The five Glen Ridge High School students were arrested Wednesday and charged with sexually assaulting the girl at the home of two of the boys, co-captains of the football team, in this Newark suburb.

Eight other male teens, including the son of a Glen Ridge police lieutenant, cheered the attack on the 17-year-old girl without intervening, investigators said. The eight are considered witnesses and have not been charged.

At the school's annual "spring day" Thursday, the picnics and games were marred by fights, vandalism and the discovery of graffiti on walls inside the school building, students said.

One student shook his head as he removed a rock and shards of glass from the back seat of his car. Some passers-by in cars shouted "rapists" as they drove past the school.

Damian DeVito, a 17-year-old junior, defended the accused teens, two of whom are his football teammates. He said has known the victim since elementary school and said he believed she willingly participated in the March 1 incident.

"I know them well enough to know they wouldn't do anything against somebody's will," DeVito told reporters. "These kids are really not bad kids at all."
