Commissioners Seek Paved Road For This County

Other Counties Will Also Urge Completion Of Gaps In Highway 4

Letting Promised

Fact That Federal Appropriation Was Made Increases Road Prospects

Members of the Collingsworth County Commissioners court will leave Sunday morning for Austin, where they will go before the State Highway Commission Monday morning and present a petition for paving on Highway 4, from the Childress County line, on through Wellington to Salt Fork River and eight miles north to the Nicholson school, according to the announcement of County Judge Luther Gribble.

Expect Contract Soon
"In addition to the Collingsworth petition every county which Highway 4 crosses will have a delegation requesting the gaps in this highway be filled," Judge Gribble said.

Members of the court feel confident that some paving contracts are to be let at the hearing, due to the fact that a similar delegation from this county was promised earlier in the year that if a Federal appropriation was made this county would be among the first to secure paving. In June $12,000,000 was appropriated as highway funds, which practically assures this county of a paving project.

Officials are of the opinion that Highway 4 across this county will be finished in 1935. When the strip across the county is completed, people from this county may ride into Wichita Falls, Amarillo and other points on paved highways.

Largest Edition In County

As the readers of The Wellington Leader receive their copy of this edition through the mail it will signify many things. Some of these factors will be apparent; others will be taken as a matter of course and will be less apparent, but share equal significance.

Sets County Record

The masthead of this paper discloses that it contains 92 pages; it is the largest newspaper ever published in Collingsworth county; it has more advertising than any other single edition ever published in Collingsworth county; it has more features, more pictures and more columns of news than any other paper ever published in Collingsworth county.

The press which printed the first edition of the Wellington Leader in 1909, was used in printing this paper, and in turning out this one edition, it travelled on its axle a distance of 121 1-2 miles, an actual distance of farther than between Wellington and Amarillo.

One page in the Wellington Leader measures 22 inches by 15 inches, giving a total of 330 square inches to the page. Figuring from this basis, the entire edition of 8,000 copies with supplement, contains exactly 83,700,000 square inches.

Stack 74 Feet High

The papers, after being folded, and stacked before mailing were thick enough to form a pile 74 feet high.

Each paper weighs a fraction over one pound and the entire edition weighs more than 3,000 pounds.

Gassers Now Tied For First Place In Valley League

Thousand Fans See Local Team Tounce Hollis 7-5 Here Sunday

Morgan Stars

Gassers Will Meet Electra Sunday; Only Few More Games To Be Played

Following a 7 - 5 victory over Hollis Sunday afternoon, the Collingsworth Gassers moved into a virtual tie with Hollis for first place in the Red River Valley league. Wellington now has a percentage of .667, while Hollis has a percentage of .692.

The Sunday game was attended by a crowd of 1000 fans and was one of the most interesting of the entire season.

Sensational Pitching

Raymond Morgan's sensational pitching was the most colorful part of the game and Morgan is rapidly climbing his way into a position which will make him one of the outstanding pitchers of the entire Panhandle. Morgan struck out 13 of the surest hitters in the Valley League Sunday.

Brisbin, Wilson and Horton held down the outfield in fine style. Horton made three catches, which seemed impossible.

The new infield combination of Seeds, Newman and Morris seems to be an unusually good one and Announcement was made today that E. T. Clark and C. M. Driggers of Comanche have purchased the W. A. Cook Grocery, located across from the post office.

Mr. Clark will serve as manager of the store, while Mr. Driggers is to act as assistant. Both men are experienced in the grocery business and state that they expect to operate a modern store in Wellington.

County 'Tagger'

Public Weigher of Old Succeeded By Public 'Tagger' of 1934

Old timers can remember when Collingsworth County had a public weigher, but Monday, July 23, is believed to have been the first time in history, that this county ever had a public "tagger."

The office of "tagger" came into existence following the receipt of government tax exemption tags for the purpose of avoiding payment of Bankhead tax on cotton which was ginmed during the previous seasons and held by farmers.

There are many other material factors which have gone into the publication of this paper—and probably one of the most outstanding is the number of mistakes, which the Leader declines to figure up because the readers always find them anyway.

Married Sixty-Five Years

Pictured above are Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Brooks who will observe their sixty-fifth wedding anniversary in Wellington Friday, July 27. They have lived in the county continuously for the past 24 years. Both are native Texans.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Brooks To Celebrate Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Brooks of this city will celebrate their sixty-fifth wedding anniversary here on Friday, July 27.

Mrs. Brooks was born in Rusk County in 1852 and was formerly Victoria Isabel Jowell, granddaughter of "Gabe" Jowell, one of the prominent men of his day. Mr. Brooks is 88 years of age, having been born in Cherokee County. They were married in Palo Pinto in 1869.

In his early days, Mr. Brooks was a school teacher. He was elected sheriff of Palo Pinto county in 1872 and it was often the case that he had as much as $75,000 in tax money in his home at one time and he carried this money on horseback to Austin.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks moved to Graham, in Young County in 1874, where they lived for 38 years. Mr. Brooks purchased a quarter section

Deskins Wells To Speak For Small

Deskins Wells, editor of the Leader, left Wednesday morning for Fort Worth where he will broadcast over Station WBAP on Wednesday night in behalf of the candidacy of Clint Small for governor.

Mr. Wells' broadcast will be included in a group of six West Texas men representing all sections of West Texas. The program will be on the air from 10 to 10:30 Wednesday night.

The speakers will assure East Texas that the western half of the state is standing back of its candidate for governor and will give him a tremendous majority of the votes on Saturday.

Other speakers in the group will be: Dr. J. D. Sandefer of Abilene, president of Simmons University; Chas. A. Guy of Lubbock, editor of the Avalanche-Journal; W. B. Hamilton of Wichita Falls, independent oil operator and former president of the West Texas chamber of commerce; Joe Taylor of Amarillo, chairman of the Panhandle Livestock Producers Association; Mayor Ross Rogers of Amarillo. Mayor Rogers will introduce the speakers, each of whom will talk for five minutes.

Highway Work To Result Here As Drouth Project

Collingsworth County Placed In Secondary Drouth Relief Area

Seed And Feed

Assistance To Livestock Raisers Seen In Order Of Emergency Relief

Following announcements that Collingsworth County has been included in the Secondary Drought Relief section, Judge Nabors, district highway engineer, announced plans for starting highway work in this county.

"Drought relief is not to be considered as a charity measure," Miss Katherine Boverie said, "it is merely a means of employing the people through federal funds and will not be limited to charity cases."

Funds For Highway

Funds to be allotted for this county will be placed on improvements for a recognized state highway in this county, other than Highway 4, now under state construction. The highway has not been designated as yet.

In addition, drought relief will bring the people of this county lower freight rates on stock and feed shipments, John O. Stavoll, county agent, said. Funds will also be available for seed, feed and livestock.

This county was included in the secondary drought relief program following extensive efforts in the part of Judge Luther Gribble and Mr. Stavoll.

"The secondary relief" column is just a first step to get in the emergency relief column," Mr. Stavoll said, "in which the Government will buy excess cattle from the farmers and stockmen." Daily, the farmers and stockmen of Collingsworth county,

Expect Corn-Hog Payments Soon

That the state board has advised the Collingsworth County Agent's office of the Corn-Hog allotment was announced today by John O. Stavoll, county agent.

"Work will begin at once in getting the Corn-Hog contracts in line with our allotment," Mr. Stavoll said. "We have been waiting for our allotment figure for some time and the remainder of the task should take only a few days."

"Upon the final certification by the state board, contracts will be sent to Washington and payment will be made immediately, prior to that time all signers of Corn-Hog contracts will be notified just when to come to the local office for final signatures."

Delay in getting Corn-Hog arrangements through the state office resulted from the failure of other counties in this district to complete their contracts and all contracts in each county in the district were held until the entire district was completed.

Indians Lived Near State Capital When W. D. Bailey Came To Texas

To come to Texas when Comanche Indians still lived near the state capital was the experience of W. D. Bailey, Sr., who was also one of the early settlers of Collingsworth county. Mr. Bailey came to Texas from Tennessee in 1872 and his first stop was in Austin, where he secured a job hauling wood for W. L. Carlson. He was only eighteen at that time and he relates with considerable interest the first time he saw six Indians. However, they were peaceful and did not cause any trouble.

In 1875 Mr. Bailey moved to a place near Gainesville at the request of his older brother, who was already established there. He went in partners with his brother and bought school claims on which they intended to raise hay. He put up his saddle horse for his half. The year before hay had sold from $12 to $15 a ton, but when Mr. Bailey gathered his first crop he took it to market and the best price he could obtain was $2 a ton. Mr. Bailey, who later proved to be a shrewd trader, relates this incident with cheerful chuckles, but he says it was not funny then.

In November of that same year he was married to Miss Charlie Tomlinson. Anxious to find work he took a contract clearing up 12

Communities Organize Agricultural Association Over This County

Leaders Named As First Clubs Established Here

Other Communities Will Meet and Select Officers Soon

By

MISS ANNIE MAE DONAGHEY
JOHN O. STOVALL
County Agents

Under the supervision of the State Extension Department it has been suggested that the County Farm and Home agents organize a community and county agricultural association.

The community association will be composed of the local home demonstration club and community farm demonstration club for the purpose of bringing about a worth while program of work to insure more perfect harmony of cooperation in each local community.

Each community will be represented in the County Agricultural Association by the president and one other member. This organization is to consider the problems of the county, suggesting tested solutions of farm improvement. Then this organization stimulates friendly rivalry encouraging each local community to put over a more definite program of work. This County Council serves as a means of discussing the advantages and disadvantages of various methods of farm improvement.

Following each county agricultural association, the president and one other member of the Collingsworth County Agricultural Association will be represented in the State Association. You may see that each person has a part in the improvement of the agricultural association program of work.

In the planning of the program of work, each community should plan to interest their people with the most needed program. Definite goals will be set up for a period of a year for each community agricultural association to accomplish for the improvement of the farm home and surroundings.

During the organization of meetings last week the following topics were suggested: "Farm Fruit Plots," "Yard Improvements," "Farm Food Supply," "Poultry," "Farm Management," "Soil Improvement," and "Boys' and Girls' Club Work."

If interests in one community is varied, a program for several months may be studied then later another program of work taken up. Probably during the fall our interests may be centered around home beautification by planting shade trees, farm management and terracing and winter meat supply during the winter season, then poultry culling during the spring and vegetable and fruit canning during the summer.

The county cotton committeemen met Saturday, July 14, at 2:30 o'clock to discuss plans for making applications for tax-free cotton for each producer. Possibilities of an Agricultural Association were suggested and since they thought that this would be a worthwhile program a schedule of organization was outlined for meetings at central points over the county. The local cotton committeemen took the responsibility of announcing the time and place of the meetings to the people in addition to the schedule that the paper carried.

During the time that has been spent on the organization program each community has responded with considerable interest. It is our pleasure to report that the people have found this program to be worth while in bringing the local

George Corry Asks for Sheriff's Office

For a Second Term

I wish to express my appreciation for your support of two years ago. Your vote and confidence were the two factors which elected me.

I am proud of the assistance you have rendered me during the two years I have served you as sheriff.

I have done my very best to make you, the people of Collingsworth County, a good sheriff—and if re-elected to a second term, I will continue to do my dead level best to serve you.

I am again asking for your vote and influence, this time upon my record and will appreciate anything you may be able to do for me.

Feeling that the duties of this office are more important to the people, I have remained in the office rather than making a house to house canvass. Some of you I have seen on the streets; others, I have not been able to see. However, I consider you my friends and ask you to take this as a personal solicitation for your vote, which will be sincerely appreciated.

George Corry

For Sheriff of Collingsworth County
Second Term

—for—

Experience and Ability

I would like to have met every voter of Collingsworth County personally, but due to my work in the County Clerk's office and the short time I have been out campaigning, this has been impossible for me to do. Therefore I wish to take this means of reaching the voters of Collingsworth County.

It costs any county money to elect new officials, for it naturally requires a certain length of time for them to become versed with the duties connected with public work of this nature. However, if I am chosen by the people for this office, it will not be a case of placing an inexperienced person in charge of this important office.

It is my sincere desire to serve Collingsworth County to the best of my ability, and your efforts in my behalf will be deeply appreciated.

Lois Sherwood Watson

Candidate for County Clerk
(Second Term)

B. W. BEAIRD

Candidate for County Superintendent

I believe with my experience in educational matters continuously for the past several years, as a student in the rural school, high school and college; and as a teacher in the rural and high schools; and having studied education from every available source, that I am qualified to enter the duties of the office of County Superintendent.

If elected, I will be absolutely fair and impartial to all schools of the county and it shall be my aim to develop the schools in every district. I want to see every boy and girl who attends the schools have the opportunity to secure a public school education. I want to see that every school has at least an eight months term. That can be accomplished by good business management.

I am willing to make this promise to the people of this county, that I will do my best to keep the schools out of debt, and will use my utmost ability in good business judgment in the exercising of duties in office. I will run the schools with out undue burden on the taxpayer. I believe that this position is one which should be filled by the person who is best qualified from the standpoint of business ability—one that can get the most for every dollar spent on public education. I believe that schools should be operated on a cash basis—pay as you go.

I have been teaching in the Fresno School for the past seven years. I refer you to the patrons of that district as to my record as a teacher and as a man.

If elected, I will devote my entire time and energies to the efficient management of the office. I consider the position one of great importance and one of trust and I will keep that in mind and endeavor to merit the trust you may place in me.

In the administration of the schools I will be fair and honest in dealing with the problems that come under my jurisdiction, and I will be courteous to all in the performance of my duties.

Your vote and Influence will be Appreciated.

A Rural School Man for a Rural School Job

The position of County Superintendent is a Rural School Job, and the best man to fill the position is one who, by rearing and training, is familiar with the problems of the rural school and understands the questions that confront the pupils, the parents, and the trustees.

As a rural school student and later a rural school teacher, I believe that I understand the needs and the workings of such a school.

The office of County Superintendent is, in my opinion, one of the most important offices within the gift of the people of Collingsworth County. It not only affects us today, but it affects the lives of our children and the welfare of the community in the years to come.

If I am elected, I promise to work untiringly for the best interest of the rural schools. I will keep up and improve the standards to the best of my ability, but at the same time, I will demand a hundred cents worth of education for each dollar that is spent.

I have made a house to house canvass of the county, but in some cases, you were not at home. I take this means of extending a personal invitation to you to consider my candidacy. I will appreciate your support, and I will try to show it by the service I render you and your children.

Asks For Your Vote and Influence in His Campaign For

ASSESSOR and COLLECTOR OF TAXES

Of Collingsworth County

I appreciate the confidence the people of Collingsworth County placed in me last election (1932) when they elected me to the post of Tax Assessor.

Since that time I have worked hard to justify this confidence. My record in the office of county Tax Assessor speaks for itself.

On Saturday, July 28, I am again asking for your support in my campaign for the office of Assessor and Collector of Taxes.

If the people of this county can see fit to elect me for a second term, I assure you of the continuation of my honest, dependable and sincere efforts in discharging the duties of the office.

Your Vote and Influence Will Be Appreciated

W. D. Aldridge

TO THE Voters of COLLINGSWORTH COUNTY

As the Primary Election is at hand, I wish to make this appeal to the readers of The Wellington Leader for their careful consideration of my candidacy for the office of County Superintendent.

I believe that my 12 years teaching experience, my college training, my experience in clerical work and my reputation as a man and a citizen, entitles me to this position in my chosen field of endeavor.

I am in favor of as good schools as we can afford. Saving a dollar at the risk of destroying the everlasting opportunity of some child is poor economy.

I believe a County Superintendent should not only be able to handle the books and financial affairs of the office in an efficient manner, but he should also be capable of supervising the schools in a way that will foster the moral, mental and physical development of the boys and girls. My best references are the students who have attended my schools.

Just for information let me state that I am a native of Texas as was my father before me. Many remember him as J. W. L. Cook, the "Rambler," who visited in homes over the county 8 or 9 years ago. He ran a column in the paper about the people with whom he visited.

I have lived in this county since 1919. I came here after being discharged from the U. S. Army, where I served during the World War.

To supplement my salary as a teacher, I have worked at various jobs between terms, such as bookkeeper, farm laborer, gin hand, and substitute mail carrier on Route 4. If elected County Superintendent, I intend to work at the job.

I want the office, and if you see fit to elect me, I shall do my best to make you a competent, courteous, and wide-awake County Superintendent.

Will you please think it over?

James C. Cook

THE LESSONS OF THE PIONEERS

The complication of history, in the amount contained in this edition, causes one to wonder. It is a record of changing events and the people who lived through them, and because of these people and by means of these events a new type of life now flourishes where an older one once had its being. Surely in so much living, in such a vast amount of human experience there must be some lesson from which the present generation might profit as it is confronted with the problems of these uncertain days.

The first of these lessons concerns material advancement. The people who have really prospered in Collingsworth County did not do so by any single brilliant stroke. It was not due to cleverness or to a desperate chance. There were those who depended upon mental quickness and there were those who took long chances, which sometimes succeeded; but they are not the people who are here today and who have really profited from the opportunities of this community. A certain enduring quality was the chief asset of every one of the families who advanced their position by remaining in Collingsworth County. Integral parts of this endurance were thrift, hard work and a faith that enabled its bearers to live on through the vicissitudes of the early days. Certainly such a stability is a valuable heritage to the people of today who are wondering what the morrow holds.

The second lesson from the pioneers is one of neighborliness. It is true that people quarreled in those days and sometimes more violently than they do now, but the feuds are overshadowed by the memory of the hospitality, the courtesy and the rough kindness of one to another in those days. No early settler ever went without food as long as his neighbors had food to share with him, and it was not called charity or relief. Sick pioneers might have gone without the services of a doctor, but they never lay on their beds of pain without the kindly ministrations of those who lived around them. The weak were never oppressed unjustly by the strong, but what strong men took up the cause and evened the scales. Even before law, as it is now known, was in effect, rough justice and a community spirit were in evidence. People knew that they not only had to live with one another, but that they had to live for one another, and that principle as a leavening in our competitive life is needed more today than it was in the yester-years.

The third lesson has come down the years is the pioneer love of liberty and independence. The desire for freedom was undoubtedly one of the motivating influences which caused many of the old timers to move to this region when it was a new land. They wanted not only financial independence but they wanted freedom from any form of governmental oppression. At the same time they had a quiet pride and a deep patriotism for the government and the country that gave them the liberties they enjoyed. They glorified in their right to free speech and a peaceful assembly, the right of a trial by a jury of their peers, the right of a free choice of religious worship, and when it came the right of a free and untrammelled press. Their respect for the land in which these things were allowed knew no bounds, for they knew that these liberties, guaranteed by the constitution were more precious than land or buildings or gold. In this day when three fourths of the world is ruled under dictatorships, where free speech, free thought and a free press are not allowed, it is important to remember how the pioneers cherished their liberties, by which a democratic form of government was maintained and for which they would have been willing to give their lives rather than lose them.

These are only three of the major lessons that might be learned from the pioneers. There are many more. Each man according to his understanding and his need can determine what the others are. They are the lessons of a courageous and enduring people who handed down a spirited tradition to their sons and daughters. It is a heritage that should be carefully preserved, for it is the foundation upon which all future advancement must be built.

ALWAYS ROOM FOR PIONEERS

Silver Anniversaries come but once in twenty-five years.

This Silver Anniversary edition of The Wellington Leader reflects credit on every man who, during past quarter of a century, has had a part in making the Wellington Leader what it is today—but most of all it reflects credit upon the County of Collingsworth, the city of Wellington and the people who make up the populace of this agricultural area.

It is people who make history. The people who lived here in the early days of this county made most of the history to be found within these 92 pages. We are proud of those people; we account their many feats and accomplishments pleasure.

There is another generation of people, some of whom are the sons and daughters of those pioneers, others who have come to make their homes in this county in more recent years, who have also gone into the publication of the Anniversary edition. Those people are the ones who live in this county today. They are the loyal subscribers who take The Leader. They are the advertisers who broadcast their messages through the columns of the paper. They are the persons who today love this county because it houses, clothes and feeds their children.

Frequently we hear a man or woman say, "I would have given anything to have lived in the days when Collingsworth County was being developed and when buffalo, deer or antelope roamed the land."

Just as present day citizens make their wishes, probably so did the residents of twenty-five years ago make a similar wish. With equal zest, he probably yearned to have defended his favored section in the Civil War or to have blazed trails into lands which were then in a civilized state. Just as a future lay before our early settlers so does a future of continued development lay before us, the citizens of 1934.

When the Wellington Leader publishes its Golden Anniversary Edition in 1959, the people who live here in the future will no doubt look back with a smile at the clothes we now wear and the columns of the paper will no doubt carry happenings of today, all of which will have historical significance—and which will be a tribute to the people who now reside in Collingsworth County.

WELLINGTON

People . . . Places . . . Philosophy

By Jimmie Gillentine

This issue of the Wellington Leader, which marks the close of twenty-five years service, also publishes the last column which I will ever write as an unmarried man—and I am going to dedicate this column to Deskins Wells.

"Deck," as we all know him, returned to Wellington and began editing the Wellington Leader just ten years ago. Since that time he has accomplished many things. His name is known from the Panhandle tip of Texas to the other extreme end of this big state as an outstanding weekly newspaper editor and publisher. He has served as president of the Panhandle Press Association and has his column, "Deck's Didactics," been awarded recognition over every other newspaper column in the state of Texas.

True significance of this accomplishment is realized when one considers that Texas now has more than 500 weekly newspapers and even more personal columns.

Collingsworth County has produced many outstanding sons since its organization in 1890, and many of those sons have gone forth, while others have remained to serve the county which was the choice of their fathers. Deck Wells has done both. By serving the people of this county he has gained a state-wide reputation. As this Silver Anniversary edition of The Leader goes to press, letters have flowed in from brother editors over the entire state.

These letters are in and index to opinions shared by scores of persons, who know Deck Wells personally.

We, who are privileged to work for the Leader, know Deck as a man who has ever worked with the sole thought of the welfare of the people of Collingsworth County at heart. He publishes a paper but foremost among his ideals is deeply planted the necessity of being a good citizen. We have all worked hard in gathering material and printing this edition, which, of course was our job, but if we have sometimes worked just a little bit harder, a little bit longer and a little bit better than we felt like working—it was because we were working for a man who has ever treated us fair and a man we know to be our friend.

We are all proud of this edition. We are all proud of the Wellington Leader. We are all proud of the man for whom it stands—the son of Henry and Lucy B. Wells, a Collingsworth County boy.

The Story Of The Bible Told In Pictures

REBEKAH AT THE WELL.—"And Abraham was old, and well stricken in age; and the Lord had blessed Abraham in all things." Abraham called the daughter of the Canaanites. Abraham sent the d his eldest servant and made him swear that he would not take a wife for Abraham's son, Isaac, from servant into his own country and among his own kindred to seek a wife for his son, and the servant departed into Mesopotamia, unto the city of Nabor. "And he made his camels to kneel down without the city by a well of water. And he said, O Lord God, I stand here by the well of water; and the daughters of the men of the city come out to draw water: And let it come to pass, that the damsel to whom I shall say, Let down thy pitcher, I pray thee, that I may drink, and she shall say, Drink, and I will give thy camels drink also; let the same be she that thou hast appointed for thy servant Isaac. And it came to pass that, behold, Rebekah came out, who was born to Bethuel, son of Milcah, the wife of Nabor, Abraham's brother, with her pitcher upon her shoulder."—Gen 24:11-15. And the sign was fulfilled as the servant had prayed it would occur. The Story of Rebekah is the first romance in the Bible. From an engraving made by Merian in the Seventeenth century.

OUR PAST

By C. C. BISHOP

In 1936 when Texas celebrates her centennial, one of the greatest monuments to her success of a 100 years will be the beautiful capitol building at Austin.

Texas' first capitol established at West Columbia after Houston's victory over the Mexicans was a five-room shack.

President David G. Burnett, elected as provisional president after the declaration of independence, saw the need of better accommodations and issued a proclamation declaring that the little town of Columbia, located on the Brazos river in what is now known as Brazoria county, was to be the capitol of Texas. Thus it has gone down in history as the first capitol of the Republic of Texas.

It is amusing to read in the histories of the accommodations offered by the citizens of Columbia as an inducement to have the seat of the new government located there.

The number of rooms was listed, the number of tables and chairs, and as to whether or not the rooms were heated by a stove or fire place. The largest of these was a store house with five rooms.

It was this ram-shackle one-story five-room building that was chosen as our first capitol building.

It was the exposure in this building that caused the death of our first secretary of state, Stephen F. Austin, that grand leader, councillor and friend.

The little town had boasted of a hotel where it could take care of the government officials.

However, when the first congress met on October 3, 1836, Houston saw that Columbia could not take care of the needs of the government.

Many historians have always felt that Columbia was chosen by President Burnett because of the fact that the "Telegraph and Texas Register," an important newspaper of the time had selected this town for its place of business.

Burnett, recognized the power of the press, made his selection so as to place the seat of the government in the same town with this paper.

The capitol building was completely destroyed by the storm of 1900 and Texas lost one of its most important landmarks.

When it became known that a new capitol would have to be selected, Houston, Matagorda, Washington, Velasco, Quintana, Nacogdoches, Hidalgo, Refugio, Fort Bend, Goliad, Groce's Retreat or San Jacinto, Bexar, Columbia, San Patricia, Brazoria and Orovimbo were all nominated, with Houston receiving 21 votes being selected.

On April 16, 1837, the government was moved to its new home and there remained until 1939.

Many were dissatisfied with the new location and late in the fall of 1837, a committee was appointed to select a permanent site.

A little town on the Colorado River of four families making the settlement of Waterloo was finally chosen for its beauty of mills and rolling plains and Austin was the name given.

Bible Is Lesson In Government

International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for July 29.

Before kings and commoners follow some definite plan of action, they usually seek advice. But, far more than advice, they want confirmation of the wisdom of what they want to do. Anyone who warns them against a policy is likely to get himself disliked for his pains, even though he is being honest and truthful.

Much of the time when we seek advice, we want to have our own judgment confirmed rather than upset, and we tend to value our counsellors somewhat according to whether they give us pleasant and favorable, or discouraging words.

Here, in our lesson, King Ahab of Israel had set himself upon a certain course. He wanted to regain Ramoth in Gilead, then in possession of the King of Syria.

He turned to Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, for help. Jehoshaphat was willing to give him assistance and to ally his people, his horses, and forces with those of Ahab, but he suggested that first of all it might be wise to inquire of the Lord.

I suppose that pagan peoples would have said "consult an oracle." That was practically what it amounted to, for Ahab called in some hundreds of prophets who were ministers of pleasant words, rather than clear-sighted and honest advisers.

They seemed what Ahab wanted them to say, and they said it, telling him to go on up and fight for Ramoth, because the Lord would deliver it into his hands.

Jehoshaphat apparently sensed something rather unsound about it,

He did not seem to have very great confidence in this group of prophets and he wanted to know whether there was not still another whose judgment they might seek.

Ahab told him that there was such a man, Micaiah by name, but that he hated him and did not want to get his words, because Micaiah did not prophesy good things concerning him, but evil.

Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, was urgent about the matter, however, and Ahab sent to have Micaiah brought. Micaiah seems first of all to have mocked the false prophets and to have spoken to Ahab in much the same words.

Ahab apparently sensed the fact that Micaiah was mocking him, and then Micaiah dared immediately to speak out the truth, telling him that his armies would be scattered and that his own life would be lost.

Instead of listening to him, Ahab only turned to Jehoshaphat and said, "Did I not tell thee that he would prophesy no good concerning him, but evil?"

The two kings went up to battle, and it turned out as Micaiah had predicted. They suffered a most inglorious defeat. Jehoshaphat was killed in the battle and Ahab, who had discarded his kingly robes, was killed by an arrow shot at a venture as he tried to escape.

Did Micaiah have divine insight into what was to happen? Possibly, but not necessarily. It does not always require more than the judgment of an honest and clear-seeing man to predict disaster when he sees the sort of men who are in control.

This story of truth-telling and tragedy has, manifestly, its lessons for our own time.

DIDACTICS

By H. D. W.

I am tired—very tired in mind and body and nerves, but not in spirit. I have written editorials, news stories and sold advertising for twelve and fourteen hours a day for the past forty days, and on top of that I have had a political task to which I have given my best efforts—poor though they may be. And now I am so tired that I don't care to write anymore.

For something like five years I have hoped and planned and dreamed about this particular edition. Although it has only been in the last few weeks that any intensive work has been done on it, the thought of this paper has been on my mind for a long time. I intended, in this, my personal column, to write something that would, in a measure, provide a heart and soul for the entire edition. I intended to write in detail concerning my own personal experiences derived from a life lived entirely in Collingsworth County, and to try to link it in a rational manner with the history of this paper. Right now, I A. M., July 23, my stumbling mind fails to register any clear cut connection, but I know that for weeks I have had a sensational notion that there was some kind of relationship between the two.

I intended to write about the days—recounted by me by my mother—when, as a fat and bare-footed infant, I lay on a pallet on the back porch of a farm house four miles southeast of Wellington, watching with wide blue eyes a shining windmill turn round and round, grunting and gurgling and enjoying the fascinating sights of this most interesting world. I intended to tell of going to the fields, after we moved east of the townsite, and gathering lambsquarters for my mother and of the flattering words she said to the lad she called her blue-eyed golden haired boy. I wanted to say something of my father setting me up in the hog business with one gilt, and the herd I raised. It was my intentions to tell of the fine clean boys I have known from Lola Godfrey right on up to Candler Hartsins. I was even going to recount the thrill of the first girl I ever kissed, and I did not intend to skip the sensation of fright when I first left home to go to school.

All of this and much more had something to do with the creation of the present Leader, but I am simply too tired to try to put it down in understandable language. Right now I think I know how an old man feels when he comes to the end of his days. It has been always my intention just before I died, to make a speech, write a story or do something that would lend significance and give continuity to my entire life. Up to now I always planned on doing one last thing which would be better, more interesting and more beautiful than anything I had ever done before. But I know now that it will be exactly like the plans I had for this column. When the time comes I will be so tired or so sick that the only thing I will want to do is to rest and sleep. It is in this manner that the end of everything comes before we realize it. Life is lived and the time is up, and there is no moment for a last testament. In the same way this paper is finished, just as a life completed. There is no time to make a last gesture that will improve the whole. It must stand as it has been made, and thus it will ever be.

But I think that on my last bed, even though there will be nothing to say and no time to say it, there will burn in my heart a warm affection and a deep gratitude for many people and many things. Weariness and difficulties cannot now, and I hope never will, cause me to forget the loyal friends and the good hearts that I have found in this—the community of my birth. I lack words to express how much it means, but I do want everyone to know how I feel.

Next week everything will be different. In fact there are only two things that are needed now to restore my enthusiasm. The first is a little rest and the second is lots of rain. What a world of difference two inches of soaking rain would make in the way every person in Collingsworth County feels right now. Moisture for our growing crops and a cooler temperature to relieve the extreme heat would be a blessing of the first magnitude. I hope it comes soon.

Who Will Be "Miss Queen of the West?" Free Trip to the World's Fair

For the third year, Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico will vie for the crown in a Fashion Show and Bathing Beauty Pageant. The Ritz Theatre has announced that their local show would be held on August 2 and 3. The winner of this local contest will be sent to Albuquerque where she will enter the finals, contesting with models from the three states.

This has been an extraordinary event the past two years, and is claimed that this year will out rival anything of the past, both in entertainment and social events. Scenes of historic interest will be enjoyed by all winners going to Albuquerque, as well as many social activities, said to eclipse anything sponsored during the past two years.

FREE TRIP TO WORLD'S FAIR

The final winner of this contest will be given a free trip to the Centennial of Progress, ordinarily referred to as the World's Fair, with all expenses paid. Manager Bonner of the Ritz Theatre believes that Wellington has equal opportunities along with the other two states entered in this contest.

NO CHARGES TO MERCHANTS

No charges will be made to local merchants for entries in this spectacular show. Mr. Bonner stated to a representative of The Leader that the local merchants cooperated with him so liberally on the Ritz Tiny Tot Revue, that he was endeavoring to repay them by paying all expenses of the Fashion Show and Bathing Beauty Pageant only asking them to enter models of their own choice, without expense or obligation.

NO SPECIAL GOWNS NECESSARY

There will be no necessity for special gowns for this exhibit unless the merchant himself wishes to offer models in new designs, especially for his store. If such should be the desire of any merchant his wishes will be complied with. Otherwise the models will appear in their own evening gowns and their own bathing costumes.

QUALIFICATIONS FOR

All applicants will be judged on three points: Poise, Personality, and figure. Fine clothes, extraordinary bathing costumes etc., has nothing to do with the final decision. Just these three points are all that counts. Wellington went into the finals last year, and Mr. Bonner insists that the merchants and local citizens get behind the movement this year with even a greater vim and enthusiasm than has been displayed heretofore. A special ramp will be built for the display of local entries and no expense will be spared by the Ritz in making it the most colossal show of local talent ever given in the city. The dates for this event is August 2nd and 3rd.

acres of timber. In the spring he started making his crop. The weather was unseasonable and he had to plant over, and just when it looked like the crop was getting along fine, a plague of grasshoppers swept the country and completely destroyed his crop.

Early Cattle Raiser

Not liking the luck he was having with farming and seeing a better opportunity in raising cattle, he later moved to Indian Territory and secured a ten year lease on a large tract of land. Here he spent eight years building up a herd of cattle. It was in the days before barbed wire was used extensively and Mr. Bailey frequently found that he got back fewer cattle from the range than he had turned loose. However, the severest test he went through in Indian Territory was when a drought came in which the grass dried up and in which his cattle died by the thousands. Mr. Bailey skinned each cow that died and sold the hides, and in this manner managed to save something for a new start.

In 1897 he came to Collingsworth County and bought a tract of land from the Mill Iron located northeast of Wellington. It was not fenced at that time and Mr. Bailey says that he rode his range daily for six years and in that time he only lost two head of cattle. Mr. Bailey also profited in another way from his territory experience. After coming to Collingsworth County he handled steers instead of cattle. Mr. Bailey was both a good buyer and a fair trader as the same men sold him their steers year after year. He says that he really began making money out of his steers when he fenced his place and had more time to look after them instead of devoting so much of it to seeing that they were still around. Mr. Bailey retired from active business a number of years ago and since that time has spent a greater number of his days in Fort Worth but he still likes to come back to Collingsworth County and meet his old friends and see familiar faces and to think of the days when he rode an unfenced range.

The Leader has received a card from Mr. and Mrs. F. C. LeDerer who are visiting in British Columbia and other points. They are enjoying the cool weather and beautiful scenery.

Highway Work—

Collingsworth county have been seeking aid through Judge Gribble and county agent John Stovall, to get the government to come in and buy their excess cattle, many reported that their cattle were getting thinner each day for the want of grass and feed, and it is hoped that by the end of the week that Senator Tom Connally, will have advised us that Collingsworth will be placed on Emergency Relief.

"Senator Tom Connally, has been in touch with Judge Gribble, almost daily for the past week, by telegraph, in their efforts to get some relief for our cattle raisers,

Below is a copy of two telegrams that Senator Connally has sent to Judge Gribble, which we think will be of interest to all. The first one received Saturday.

"Hon. L. E. Gribble, County Judge, Wellington, Texas. Pleased to advise Collingsworth County Designated for Secondary Drought Relief Stop Glad to be of service to your people Stop Kindly notify interested parties.

TOM CONNALLY.

"In reply this telegram Judge Gribble wired to Senator Connally the acute condition of the county as now exists, in regard to the cattle producers, asking him to use his influence in Washington, to get this county direct relief, and Senator Connally replied Sunday morning with the following message:

Judge L. E. Gribble

"Regard to your last telegram Stop I am urging Washington to designate Collingsworth County for emergency relief in order that it may have benefits of cattle buying under Jones-Connally Cattle Act Stop I am glad to cooperate.

TOM CONNALLY.

"In event that this county is placed on emergency relief, the government will start at once to inspecting and buying surplus cattle from our ranchers and farmers, and just as soon as we get the news we will let every one desiring to sell cattle make application at the County Agent's office or see Judge Gribble, for information."
