Carter to work while others chase votes

President faces two challenges

WASHINGTON (AP) — On Wednesday, when Sen. Edward M. Kennedy announces his presidential challenge, President Carter will be engaged in a struggle for Senate support of the arms limitation treaty.

On Thursday, when Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California declares his presidential ambitions, Carter will be conferring with the prime minister of Ireland.

"A fairly routine week for us here," says White House press secretary Jody Powell.

This is the week, one year from Election Day 1980, when Carter comes face-to-face with the reality he has known for months: he is facing a stiff challenge for the Democratic nomination. Kennedy and Brown are hitting the road on cross-country campaign swings.

Carter is responding with a schedule lacking any overt political work.

Today, for example, he was to sign legislation giving him authority to impose gasoline rationing in a crisis.

There is an arms treaty briefing, a breakfast meeting with the Democratic congressional leadership and a conference with economic advisers.

At the end of the week, there are three diplomatic events — the meeting with Ireland's Jack Lynch, a state dinner Thursday night for the prime minister, and then a trip to Canada for meetings with Canadian Prime Minister Joe Clark and a speech to the Parliament.

It all adds up to a fairly common campaign strategy for an incumbent: a portrait of the president hard at work on presidential matters while his would-be replacements are out chasing votes.

Carter's own candidacy will be announced Dec. 4. It will be followed by a cross-country fund-raising trip certain to gain him wide media coverage after this week's focus on the Kennedy and Brown announcements.

Meanwhile, Carter captured a 70.63 percent majority in a straw vote taken at a Democratic fund-raising dinner in Ames, Iowa, Saturday night. Kennedy's share of the vote was 26.01 percent, while Brown garnered a scant 0.82 percent, according to tabulations released today by the Iowa Daily Press Association.

Carter campaign officials had taken the lead in selling tickets to the dinner, prompting Kennedy's operatives to concede the non-binding vote in advance.

Time magazine reported in this week's issue that Carter, who trailed Kennedy in its poll by a 2-to-1 margin last summer, closed the gap to 10 percentage points — 49 percent to 39 percent — in a sampling taken Oct. 23-25.

The president now leads all potential Republican opponents, although not by as wide a margin as Kennedy does, said the poll, taken by Time by the firm of Yankelovich, Skelly & White.

Khomeini's supporters demand return of shah

By The Associated Press

Urged on by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iranian protesters seized two U.S. consulates, an American cultural center and the British Embassy in Tehran today, and continued to hold the U.S. Embassy and more than 50 hostages, it was reported.

Khomeini called on the student militants to act against "the great Satan, America," in order to force it to extradite the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, hospitalized in New York for cancer treatment, back to Iran for trial. Radio Tehran reported.

The Moslem clergyman and revolutionary leader also demanded that Britain hand over former Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar, now living in exile in Britain.

Radio Tehran said the students who seized the U.S. Embassy Sunday added a new demand today — a break in relations with the United States.

The Iranian oil minister, meanwhile, raised the possibility of cutting off Iranian oil exports to the United States — 900,000 barrels a day that amount to 5 percent of all U.S. oil.

In a Radio Tehran interview, the oil minister, Ali Akbar Moinefar, said the decision was up to Khomeini.

The British Foreign Office announced that its embassy in Tehran was seized today. Further details were not immediately available.

The official Tehran Radio, monitored in London, said student protesters also took over the U.S. consulates in Tabriz, in northwest Iran, and in the southern city of Shiraz. There was no word on the fate of the consular staffs.

Later, the State Department reported that students occupied and ransacked the Iran-American Society building, a cultural center, in the central city of Isfahan. No injuries were reported there. Radio Tehran said other anti-American demonstrations were staged across Iran.

Polls to open at 7 a.m.

Gray County voters will have four sites open for voting in Tuesday's state constitutional amendment election.

Precinct 2, including Pampa residents, will vote at the Gray County Courthouse; Precinct 1 residents will vote at the Lefors Senior Citizens Center; Precinct 3 residents at the Grandview Schoolhouse; and Precinct 4 residents at the McLean Community Center.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Three propositions are on the ballot, including issues relating to legislative review, notaries public and farm loans.

Proposition 1, if approved, would appoint notaries public for four-year terms instead of two-year terms. The secretary of state would make appointments for the state as opposed to current authorization of notaries public for each county.

The second amendment deals with legislative review of state agency rulemaking. If this passes, the legislature could enact laws establishing procedures to review rule-making processes of state agencies in the executive department.

It would allow the legislature to enact laws to prescribe conditions for rules to go into effect; to provide for suspension, repeal or expiration of rules; and to delegate powers to either or both houses or to the committees of either house.

Proposition 3 would authorize $10 million in general obligation bonds to set up the Family Farm Security Loan program. The program would guarantee loans made by private lenders to individuals buying farms and ranches.

Hutchinson County voters will also vote on $1.5 million in bonds for a Criminal Justice Center in Borger. It would house a county jail and offices for county government departments. It would also serve as new quarters for the Borger Police Department.

If the bond issue passes, it will be built near the Aluminum Dome in Borger. The present county jail is in Stinnett and does not meet requirements set by the State Commission on Jail Standards.

Offices in the new center would include facilities for the county and district attorneys, juvenile and adult probation officers, the sheriff, drivers license examiners, justice of the peace and the Alcoholic Beverage Control agency.

Hutchinson County voters last year overwhelmingly defeated a $1 million bond issue on the same proposal by a vote of 2,191 to 282. Proponents said defeat was mainly due to inclusion of a proposal for a $500,000 bond issue to finance construction of a livestock exhibition barn.

Ray escape foiled

PETROS, Tenn. (AP) — James Earl Ray, imprisoned in the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., tried unsuccessfully to escape from Brushy Mountain Prison early today, prison officials said.

Ray, serving 99 years for the 1968 assassination plus a year for an escape in 1977, was recaptured inside the prison grounds but outside the fortress-like building in the rugged East Tennessee mountains.

Prison Sgt. Ray Tucker said inmate Donald Eugene Wolverton accompanied Ray in the attempt but was also recaptured. Tucker said a guard fired one warning shot but that no one was hit.

Ray, who pleaded guilty to the killing but has since declared his innocence, escaped with several other inmates from the prison in June 1977 but was recaptured after a few days.

Klan hearings begin

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — While the FBI looked for possible civil rights violations, court hearings began today for 14 men charged in the deaths of four persons gunned down Saturday at an anti-Ku Klux Klan rally.

The first two suspects to appear before District Court Judge Robert Cecil were Rayford Milano Caudle and Michael Eugene Clinton, both of Winston-Salem.

Wearing jail-issued jumpsuits and sandals, the two asked Cecil for court-appointed attorneys. The judge said lawyers from the Guilford County Public Defenders office would be named to represent them.

Caudle and Clinton were arrested Sunday on charges of conspiracy to commit murder.

Elementary students love them

Learning centers asset to teachers

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

"It's fun for them, but they're learning." That's how a first grade teacher describes learning centers, an innovative concept now in use for early education at Pampa's elementary schools.

"Pumpkins, Pinwheels and Peppermint Packages," a teacher's manual on learning centers by Imogene Forte, described the program's objectives: To develop the fine and gross motor skills of the child and provide a higher level of motivation for students who become bored with the daily routine.

By using the learning centers, teachers can meet the individual needs of students more effectively by making use of activities that stress specific skills.

A learning center is a specific area of the classroom set up by the teacher with activities which improve the student's skills in math, reading, eye-to-hand coordination and colors — to name a few. Children work at the centers at their own rate of speed, checking themselves on accuracy.

Teachers usually allow students who finish their work early to go to the centers, or she may let part of the class go while she works with a reading group.

Often used as a "reward" for a lesson quickly and accurately done, the centers are less structured than working on papers at a desk.

The atmosphere of the centers is one of relaxation and fun, with little peer pressure on the students.

"I think it gives them responsibility," said Myrtle Laflin, first grade teacher at Travis. She said the students check themselves on their work and also keep track of which activities they have finished.

For the reading center, students may read elementary books, use a listening station composed of a record player or cassette and earphones, work with spelling blocks or arrange picture cards into a story sequence. A specific area of the classroom is set up for the center.

Flash cards, felt boards, and other exercises can be found in the math center. All the activities are designed so the child may check himself, and many allow two or more children to work together.

Eye-to-hand coordination is improved as children string colored beads to match a card or arrange magnetic blocks on a board in the design and color pattern indicated by another set of cards.

"By using the learning centers, I am able to give extra help to a student without him feeling the pressure from the classroom," according to second grade teacher Kay Harvey.

The centers build confidence, Mrs. Harvey said.

"They take a folder and they know what to do." This gives them a feeling of accomplishment, she added.

Katy Hupp, a first grade teacher, believes the centers help keep the children busy in a positive way.

"It's a creative way to use their time," she said, explaining it gives her the time to work with the students who are slower in finishing their assignments or who need extra help.

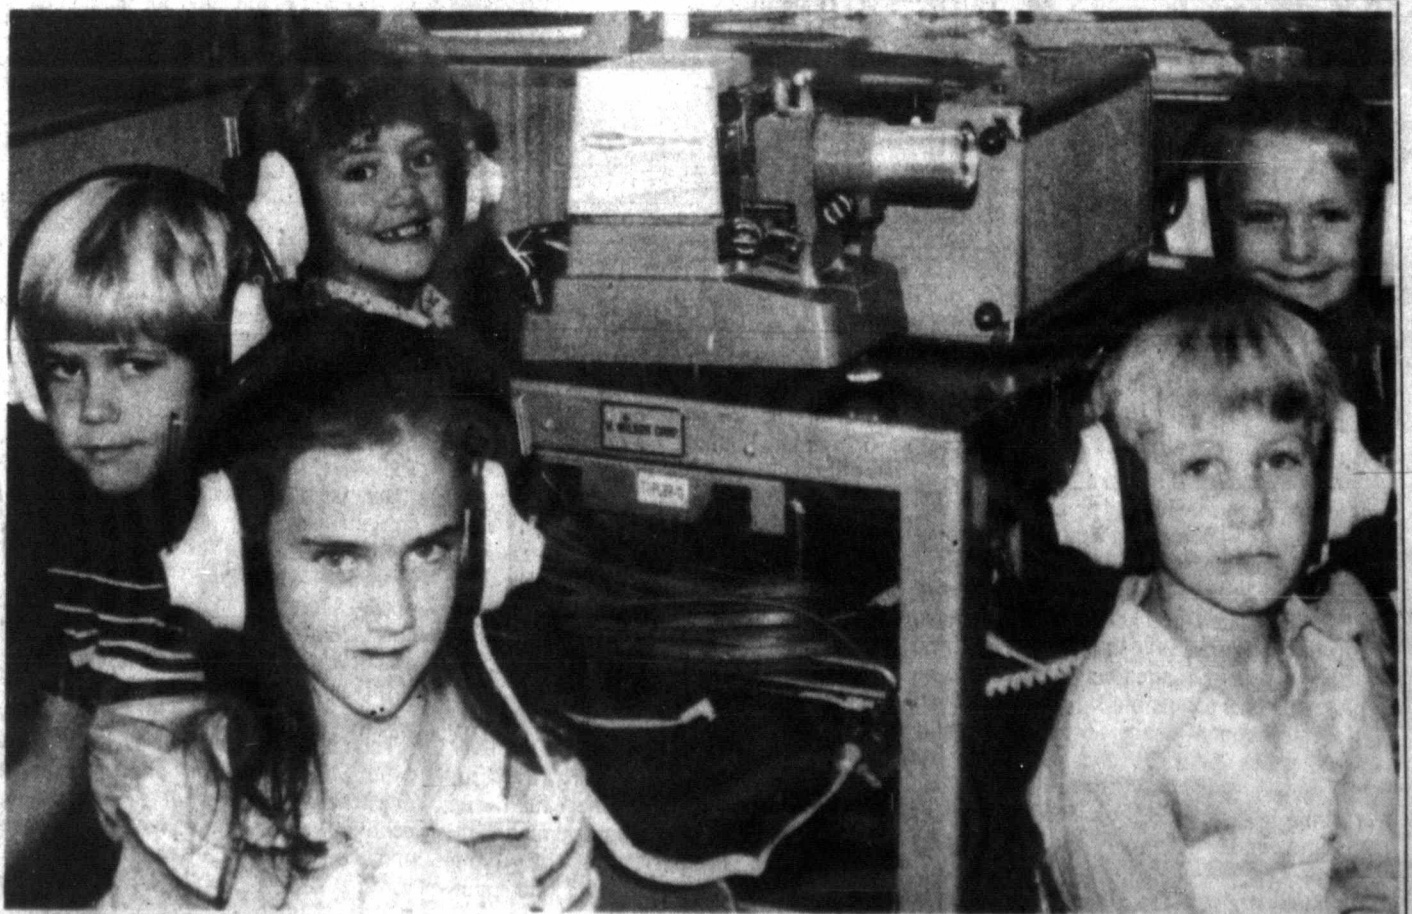

Mrs. Harvey enjoys seeing her students moving, talking and learning in an active way.

"Not all children learn by seeing and hearing," Mrs. Harvey said. "Some learn by feeling."

She said the centers allow children to touch numbers and letters; to trace through words while working on a story or to touch a math problem while they think about the answer.

Mrs. Laflin believes learning centers are "the coming thing in teaching." For Mrs. Hupp, they are a "real learning asset."

But for the children... well, it appears to be just plain fun!

STUDENTS FROM JEAN SOSSAMAN'S second grade class demonstrate how a listening station is used. The station, a reading learning center, is composed of earphones, a record player and books on a wheeled cart. The cart is wheeled from room to room so all the teachers may take advantage of the reading center. The children use the station to listen to stories reproduced on records and follow along by reading in their books.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coving Commandment.

Government adds to bills

One pays one's electric bill here in West Texas and fumes more than a little over the more than big fuel adjustment charges added to it. Beneath the fuming, though, does the customer realize that government itself has much to do with causing the increased utility payment, or perhaps even all to do with it?

Most of us are fully cognizant of the fact that government regulation and incentive-killing taxation have slowed the development of new domestic oil and gas sources. Mark that as the No. 1 cause of the present fuel crisis.

But there is another major factor which has now evolved to the forefront. And it has to do with state severance taxes.

As Texans have become more dependent on coal to generate their electricity, our use of coal has increased sharply. And the price we pay for the coal itself has become sky-high.

As of now, many homeowners in some Texas regions are paying extra on their electricity bills because of a 17 percent severance tax levied by the state of Wyoming, and homeowners in the Austin area pay even more because of a 30 percent Montana severance tax.

Only recently, Congress legislated a 12.5 percent ceiling on state severance taxes on energy produced from federal lands. But much of the coal comes from private lands and is not affected.

This is not to give the Congress any laurels for that legislation. It actually infringes on states' rights. On the other hand, a severance tax of this nature also interferes with the free market, and such interference is wrong.

Texas accepted a limitation on severance taxes for natural gas it sells out of state. Yet the people of this state are paying dearly through the severance tax measure for coal. This makes rotten sense.

Were all the states to eliminate their severance taxes on energy raw materials, then likely the fuel adjustment charges on the electricity bill would be minimal.

This is one of those many things that affect our costs of living and bolster the rampant spread of raging inflation which so many persons do not think about. What it amounts to, simply, is governmental interference with the free market.

And while we are on the subject let's ponder a related matter! The rate for shipping coal by rail has increased rather sharply and has caused serious problems, too, for consumers of electricity. We hear rumbles that various governmental agencies are out to interfere more in the free market by confronting the railroads on the matter of high rates. It would be wiser to let the free market run truly free in the case of transportation, too, and in time the rate situation would level off much more to the advantage of the consumer than it ever will so long as the government trifles with it.

It is ironic that while Texas has vast veins of coal, the state is not yet utilizing the local resource because of the kind it is and because of the expense of adapting to it. While progress is being made in that direction, governmental meddling, taxation and sheer trifling continue to load the electricity bill each month with the excessively high fuel adjustment charges.

The Noble nobels

If it is possible to discern a trend in Nobel Prize awards in recent years, then what might be discerned is encouraging. National political leaders, for one thing, no longer seem the automatic and predictable recipients — a blow to if not a reversal of the statism of the modern age.

Anwar Sadat, Menachem Begin, Henry Kissinger, Le Duc Tho — all these national political figures have lately been cited. And the awards — handed out because of these gentlemen's ostensible labors on behalf of international peace — seem ineluctably sullied by political considerations. The cynicism would have been complete had Jimmy Carter been awarded the prize, as some of his supporters had actually proposed.

Mother Theresa founded her Mission of Charity 31 years ago when, with 40 cents in her pocket, she began taking the destitute and the dying out of Calcutta's gutters, providing them shelter and nourishment. From that humble beginning, with its special permission from the Vatican, the Mission began its worldwide reach, never suffering the corruptions of institutionalization.

So improbable is this Yugoslav-born nun as a candidate for worldly laurels — throughout her life she has painstakingly insisted that charity is meaningless unless voluntarily undertaken — that it is possible to worry that something special about her will be lost: precisely the failure of the world to harmonize with her.

Consider Mother Theresa's meditation on kindness (from Something Beautiful for God, by Malcolm Muggeridge, Ballantine): "Be kind and merciful. Let no one ever come to you without coming away better and happier. Be the living expression of God's kindness: kindness in your face, kindness in your eyes, kindness in your smile, kindness in your warm greeting. In the slums we are the light of God's kindness to the poor. To children, to the poor, to all who suffer and are lonely, give always a happy smile — Give them not only your care, but also your heart." Not quite Henry Kissinger, or Le Duc Tho, what?

Nor is it the never-smile-on-a-beggar anti-altruism that characterizes — and corrupts — some of the opponents of excessive welfareism. Mother Theresa's words shine as inspiration to the true libertarians — to those liberated enough to overflow with love for their fellow denizens of this planet, to those who live and reflect the spontaneous order of humanity.

This is the kind of Nobel Prize that counts. It did not originate as an acknowledgement of some dubious political treaty, more likely to aggravate and intensify international frictions than to instill a lasting peace in individual human souls.

The same pretty much can be said for the Prizes awarded the Northern Irish housewives last year who founded a non-political women's march for peace in dogwoods, willows, fruit trees — down they went, mutilated, crushed and broken. My wife wept; but this is country living, and after a while she rounded up candles and made a kitchen fire.

Most of the snow melted in 24 hours, but some of our people were housebound for two days because of blocked roads, and some remote houses didn't have power restored for another week. Compared to the disaster that struck Mobile with the hurricane, or compared to the more recent earthquake near Mexicali, our storm was nothing at all. It was the swiftness of the violence that left us a little shaky. Mother Nature can be a terrible termagant when she chooses.

Thus we reach the peak of our autumn with thousands of trees still shattered. In parts of the Blue Ridge Parkway, one tree in four suffered damage. Along every back road, tall trees are on their knees, suppliant, hunchbacked, crippled.

And yet, and yet: The familiar beauty emerges even so. This is the time in the Blue Ridge when maples turn out in scarlet, members of the hunt. The dogwoods go first, changing from a mottled red and black to the deep purple red of old morocco slippers. Poplars, willow and birch tend to the yellows — to lemon, butterscotch and gold. Within a couple of weeks the oaks will wind up the parade in the brown of friars' robes. And the whole procession moves against a gallery of dark green pines.

Autumn is the best of our seasons in the Blue Ridge. Spring can be lovely; summer is pleasant until the weeds of August; our winters are utterly irredeemably blah. But October is the stained glass time, when sunlight strikes cathedral shafts in the naves of the forests. We walk on carpeted aisles through choir lofts of locust, hickory, walnut and cedar. It is the woods smoke time, the hunting time. My neighbor Geoghegan comes by, shotgun in hand, but his quest is not truly for squirrels; it is for the peace in these hills that passeth understanding.

Rappahannockers are a hardy lot. These past few weeks have seen flash floods that wiped out fences, washed out bridges and claimed two lives. The road crews had scarcely repaired the flood damage before the freaky snowstorm descended. People are mumbling, what next?

Yet even as we go about the sad business of sawing and pruning and picking up the litter of broken limbs, we know that this too will pass. We will know more brilliant autumns, and we will survive greater misfortunes. Yes, it will take a generation — two generations, perhaps — for the great trees to replace themselves, but nature has a way about these things. The big oak may not survive, but it will leave a record fall of acorns behind.

By James Kilpatrick
SCRABBLE, VA — On the night of Tuesday, Oct. 9, an unpredicted storm struck our part of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Over a period of six hours the storm dumped 10 to 12 inches of heavy, wet snow on our countryside. It will not be much of an autumn in Rappahannock County.

Such is the anesthetic selectivity of memory that we tend to forget the violence of nature. The deepest floods, the worst hurricanes, the most devastating fires in time become mere points of reference. This particular storm was like a mugging; it was swift, vicious and unbelievable. It broke trees, and it broke records also; nothing like it had been recorded in these parts since 1872.

Our forests had barely begun to turn color — they were still in full leaf — when the snow began. The same snow in January would have damaged little. But this snow, beginning about 4 a.m., piled its enormous weight upon branches that could not bear it. Almost immediately the electric power went out. By dawn 200,000 persons over an area of eight counties would wake without service.

I myself happened to be in Texas at the time. My wife told me how it was. She stood in a dark kitchen gazing in disbelief at the steadily falling snow outside. There was no wind — that was a part of the misfortune — and the snow simply fell like heavy green pines.

She could hear the incessant crack of snapping trees. A row of poplars fell like toy soldiers. A plane tree split in two. A pear tree came up by the roots. A maple 12 inches in diameter broke like a shingle, splintered in compound fracture. Pines,

Once you put nuclear waste on the market everyone is going to believe it must be valuable or people wouldn't be speculating in it. If nuclear waste goes up and the dollar goes down, you'll have people all over the world trying to buy in. The Arabs will figure there must be something to the waste or we wouldn't be selling it at auction. The gnomes of Switzerland will recommend it to their clients, and pretty soon all the big banks will start stockpiling the waste in their safes."

"If we get everyone buying it, we could wind up with a shortage." "It's a good plan," I agreed. "particularly if the OPEC countries start demanding to be paid for their oil in nuclear sludge. How do we get it off the ground?"

"The first thing we have to do is persuade the President to go on television and say the country is running out of nuclear waste and unless we all conserve, there will be none left 100,000 years from now. That's all the speculators will need to dump their holdings in wheat and start gambling in radioactive garbage."

Radioactive garbage

Washington — If you talk to most governors (Jerry Brown is the exception) they're all for nuclear energy. But there is one problem — no governor wants to accept the nuclear waste that is produced by the energy. Everyone thinks it should be buried in another state.

Since we only have 50 states, our options as to where to dump the stuff are limited. Nuclear waste is not your everyday garbage. Its life is anywhere from 10,000 to 50,000 years. While it doesn't give off any smell, it radiates like mad and there doesn't seem to be any canister which will hold it more than a couple of decades.

What's the answer? A broker friend thinks he has it.

"We must make nuclear waste a precious commodity like gold or silver and have people start speculating in it. The government could hold an auction on the waste, and then the commodity people would begin dealing in futures. A pound might start off at $100, and then the speculators would take it from there. In a good market it could see it going up to $500, with delivery in six months."

Economic truths

By Anthony Harrigan

The worsening of America's economic position is increasingly understood and admitted by thoughtful people around the country. The nation faces very difficult times.

Our national problems were very accurately described in a recent article on the op-ed page of The New York Times by Felix G. Rohatyn, the baker who has been deeply involved in handling New York City's tangled financial affairs.

Mr. Rohatyn pointed out that, with the steady rise in crude oil prices, "American will pay more than $400 billion to OPEC over the next five years. This equals about half the value of all New York Stock Exchange companies and is patently absurd."

He said that the United States can't really afford to pay this sum: "The United States is mortgaging its assets, its productive capacity, for oil; it has become a prisoner not only of the supply of oil but also of OPEC's dollars. We cannot afford to have them taken out of our system and converted to gold or other currencies since this would collapse the dollars and jeopardize our banking system. We cannot have OPEC acquire our companies since we do not wish to become a colony again."

This is a very concise, albeit alarming, summary of our situation. If the oil-producing cartel suddenly decides it wants some other currency for its product, the United States will receive a terrible blow. Even without this development, the drain of dollars overseas critically threatens our nation's health.

Congress and the public have yet to awaken fully to the dimensions of the threat. Everything must be done to increase domestic production of oil and gas. Our tax policy must be changed in order to help American industry modernize facilities and increase production. Our trade laws must be revamped to protect the interests of vital industries.

Mr. Rohatyn defined what he believes should be our goals at this time: "Our aim should be to reindustrialize America, to make goods and provide manufacturing jobs for those who need them, to have a workable railway system, a viable steel industry, and competitive auto industry."

At the moment, we don't have these aims. Many of our railroads are in awful shape. The steel industry is threatened by a counter-productive tax system and by foreign imports. The automobile industry is threatened by excessively high union wage rates and a colossal burden of federal regulation and design requirements.

Mr. Rohatyn proposed the appointment of a National Economic Commission to develop a national economic strategy. It seems to me that it's the responsibility of Congress to set the goals and to enact the reforms in the law that would lead to a revitalization of America's industrial system.

The real need is to strip away the excessive regulation and reform the tax law in order to provide incentives for industry, in place of the disincentives now written into the law.

Sales tax facing problems

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The one-cent local sales tax has been called a lifesaver for city treasuries but the levy faces new problems in coming months.

For one thing, city adds say inflation and soaring costs have overrun the current one-cent local tax that raised more than $450 million in about 1,000 Texas cities the past year.

At the annual meeting of the Texas Municipal League in Houston, representatives of cities voted in favor of a one- or two-cent increase in local sales tax.

That was the easy part.

Now, the city officials have to convince the 1981 Legislature to authorize such an increase, then they will have to convince local voters to boost the tax in each city.

Gov. Bill Clements Mayors' Advisory Committee approved the city tax increase but it drew sparks from Controller Bob Bullock.

If the cities want to increase the city sales tax, then the cities should have to collect it, Bullock said. "All the cities have their own tax offices now," Bullock said. "It would be appropriate for the burden of the collection and the benefit of the income to rest in the same place."

Currently, the state collects the one-cent local sales tax at the same time it collects the four-cent state sales tax. Then the city portion is refunded, minus a small payment to the state for collection.

But there is still another problem facing cities with local sales taxes.

The constitutionality of the city sales tax, as originally approved, has been attacked by U.S. Steel Corp. If the steel company wins, the cities will have to refund that portion of the tax wrongfully collected through last June, when the Legislature corrected the statute.

Although the suit was filed only by U.S. Steel, its outcome will affect all businesses paying the optional one percent tax.

Some estimates say the refunds could run well into the tens of millions of dollars.

"It's really serious," said Richard D. Brown, TML executive director.

The TML asked Texas cities to contribute one-twentieth of each city's annual income from the tax, hoping to raise a $200,000 legal war chest to fight the suit. At last count they had raised more than $210,000, Brown said.

Donations range from $10.15 for Roscoe to almost $38,000 from Houston.

TML says the fight against U.S. Steel will be carried all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Other sources point out that the Ohio Supreme Court recently ruled that state's local option tax was unconstitutional on very similar grounds.

U.S. Steel's suit said the Texas tax as originally passed was unconstitutional because it discriminated against intrastate commerce by imposing a greater tax burden on items purchased outside Texas and brought in for use.

'The law doesn't fit Nalley'

18-year-old waiting for someone to decide his fate

KAUFMAN, Texas (AP) — Christopher Nalley celebrated his 18th birthday earlier this year in the Kaufman County jail. He has spent the last 2½ years of his life in an institution of some kind, waiting someone to define his fate within the confines of laws that so far have provided no answers.

Nalley was first admitted to Terrell State Hospital in 1977 after he was found unfit to stand trial for sexually abusing a 6-year-old girl. While in the hospital, he became a suspect in the sexual mutilation and strangulation death of a 7-year-old Dallas girl.

On Nov. 4, 1978, fellow Terrell inmate Gary Van Adams was sexually abused and brutally choked to death with a chain. His body was discovered under the bed in Nalley's room.

A short time later, the husky older boy was apprehended on a roadway west of Terrell. He was transferred the next day to the Rusk Hospital for criminally insane adults in Cherokee County.

Indicted for murder in January, Nalley was diagnosed by a Rusk psychiatrist as mentally fit to stand trial. He was transferred to the Kaufman County jail in February.

A mistrial was declared May 18 when a Kaufman County jury could not decide whether he was competent to stand trial.

Nalley has been in jail since then, waiting for another competency hearing set for Nov. 12.

"The law doesn't fit Nalley," said Kaufman

County District Attorney Glen Ashworth. "He's an exception and a special case. Damn it, I don't know about that boy. We've never really struck upon a solution to the Nalley case."

"Chris should never be released to the public," he continued. "My main concern always has been the institutionalization of Nalley. Right now, the only solution is the Texas Department of Corrections."

"I don't know how he would survive in that type of environment."

Adams was a frail boy, five feet tall and only 80 pounds. He was sent to Terrell after he repeatedly ran away from home and refused to attend school but was never been diagnosed as violent.

His death turned an emotional spotlight on the state hospital where officials now say they have made changes to cut down on the chances of another similar tragedy.

"This is the type of person (Nalley) who should not have been committed here," Terrell Superintendent Luis Cowley said at the time. "We don't have the facilities to deal with this type of patient."

And some administrators say quietly that Nalley would not be admitted to the hospital today.

"We don't say they are too dangerous," said one who asked not to be named. "We just don't accept them."

The slaying has prompted concrete changes at Terrell. But for Nalley, the last year has meant virtually nothing.

"He's been a model prisoner," said Kaufman County Sheriff Roy Brockway. "He never done a thing in the world to cause us a problem."

"We go back there and talk to him a lot. We feel sorry for him."

Nalley's attorney, Tom McCorkle of Dallas, is looking for solutions outside the system in Texas.

"The prosecution and the defense are attempting to find alternate solutions in the case... something to take the matter out of the criminal justice system and put it in the hands of the medical system where it belongs."

"We are looking at an out-of-state institution because Texas is archaic in its approach to mental health and there are no facilities to hold Chris. We in Texas are not equipped to handle sophisticated mental health cases."

Texas has no facilities to house juvenile offenders with mental problems, said Kent Johnson, director of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation legal department.

"We don't have the policing to protect the treatment case from the offender," he said, adding that the establishment of a separate institution is unlikely.

"Any time you talk about anything going through the legislature, you can never predict its outcome."

The last year has been one of frustration and pain, too, for Dorothy and Jesse Adams, Gary's foster parents.

Terrell officials have been ordered by their superiors not to release any information on the incident to their attorney, Hal Thorne.

"They have never complied with any of our requests for information. There are definitely still questions to be answered."

The Adamses are still very upset and very disappointed with how the whole thing was handled.

"They would very much like to see this thing resolved so that another tragedy like this would not happen again and so no other family would have to go through the grief and embarrassment they had to go through."

In jail, Nalley is optimistic he will someday be free again, a luxury he has not enjoyed in two years.

"I want to be free. I want to sit in a tree," he said. "I don't want to sit on the ground."

"I don't like all the bugs."

New oil leases hinge upon knowledge of Ixtoc I spill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Connecticut senator says he wants to know more about the Ixtoc oil spill before any leases are approved in the Georges Bank off New England.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., on the Senate floor Thursday called for hearings to evaluate the environmental impact of oil spills in the Gulf of Mexico and elsewhere.

"Georges Bank could be the next potential disaster area if we do not re-think our policy," Weicker said.

The senator sent an aide to Texas the previous week to investigate the oil spill that began June 3 in the Bay of Campeche.

Weicker said he was disturbed to learn that oil still was spewing from the runaway well despite the placement of a "sombbrero" to reduce the flow.

Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti is not waiting for all the paperwork to be completed before meeting with his new Hispanic advisory committee.

Civiletti had targeted Oct. 1 for starting the group he decided to form after running into opposition from Hispanics at his confirmation hearings last summer.

The committee, however, must be formed in compliance with the lengthy requirements of the Federal Advisory Committee Act, pushing back his timetable significantly.

The attorney general has called a meeting of Hispanic leaders Wednesday outside of the framework of an advisory committee, but those present eventually will be members of the official group.

The Justice Department planned to announce its guest list early this week.

Lupe Salinas, formerly an assistant U.S. attorney in Houston, started work Monday as a special assistant to Civiletti.

Among his responsibilities will be Hispanic affairs, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and the department's land and natural resources division.

Another Mexican-American, Jose Uranga of Carlsbad, N.M., started work at the same time as Civiletti's special assistant for energy and energy litigation policy.

Uranga already was working in Washington as an attorney in the land and natural resources division.

Lilla Tower agreed to stand in for her husband, Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, for the christening Saturday of the Armadillo.

A naval reserve unit in Austin renovated the Armadillo, a 43-foot Coast Guard boat, for the UT Applied Research Laboratory's use in sonar research.

The christening was slated for dry land in Austin, but the boat's destination is Port Aransas.

Members of the unit sent Tower their invitation to christen the Armadillo not knowing they were almost certain to get an acceptance. He is a Navy veteran.

A House-Senate conference committee has retained language in the Military Construction Authorization Bill that would delay an Air Force decision to close Goodfellow Air Force Base in San Angelo.

The measure would require a formal Environmental Impact Statement, concentrating on the socio-economic impact of closing the base.

About 300 civilians and 2,200 military personnel are employed at the base, which the Air Force wants to close as a cost-cutting move.

The bill also contains language that would require a formal Environmental Impact Statement at two locations in Pennsylvania before units can be moved to Corpus Christi.

Sen. Lloyd Benisen, D-Texas, spoke about the 50th anniversary of the 1929 stock market crash at a special hearing of the Joint Economic Committee.

The committee, chaired by Benisen, held a special hearing Monday designed to answer the question, "Can it happen again?"

Economists John Kenneth Galbraith, Alan Greenspan and Walter Heller testified.

MICHELLE IMEL, a senior at Pampa High School and a three-year member of the Pride of Pampa band, won a five-pound chocolate bar for selling the most candy during a band fund-raising effort this fall. She sold 310 boxes of candy to take top sales honors in the band.

Kennedy's lead narrows

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who had a 2-to-1 lead in popularity over President Carter in public opinion polls this summer, now holds a lead of just 10 percentage points over Carter, Time magazine says.

A poll of 1,027 voters conducted Oct. 23-25 by the research firm of Yankelovich, Skelly & White shows Kennedy, (D-Mass.) ahead of Carter 49 percent to 39 percent in popularity, the magazine says in its current edition.

Kennedy is expected to formally announce his candidacy for the 1980 Democratic nomination for president on Wednesday.

The poll also shows that although Carter trailed Republican presidential hopeful Ronald Reagan by four percent in August, the president has pulled ahead and leads Reagan by 45 percent to 41 percent.

"Losing Hair? Try This At No Risk"

HOUSTON, Texas—If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss...and grow more hair.

For years "they said it couldn't be done." But now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for both men and women, that is not only stopping hair loss, but is really growing hair!

They don't even ask you to take their word for it. They invite you to try the treatment for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself.

Naturally, they would not offer this opportunity unless the treatment worked. However, it is impossible to help everyone.

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in the family," it is certainly not proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and many other conditions can cause hair loss. If you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead, you are beyond help. So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop your hair loss and grow more hair...now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc. will supply you with treatment for 32 days—at their risk—if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially, by mail.

DR. LAMB

Normal heart rate varies

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Will a continuous heartbeat of 110 to 112 per minute in a 16-year-old boy cause damage to the heart? This is his rate at rest. He also has palpitations at times while lying down. The doctor said it was normal but it was a little high. He had an electrocardiogram taken and a thyroid blood test. His blood pressure was 135 over 80. The doctor said his heart and thyroid are OK and nothing can be done about the fast heartbeat. A week later he passed out in school and the doctor said nothing was wrong.

He weighs around 150 pounds and is 5 feet 10. He does not smoke or drink. He has allergies the year round and his head and nose are stuffed up and running. He also is high strung and loses his temper easily. I'm afraid his heart will wear out from overwork. I don't know whether to let things go as they are or take him to another doctor. Any advice you could give would be greatly appreciated.

DEAR READER — The

normal heart rate has a wide range of variability. It's also affected by many different things. I've always been impressed by a study of weight lifters who had a normal heart rate at rest of 72 beats per minute and just before competition, their rates were between 135 and 160 beats per minute, even though they weren't doing any work at the time. This will show you how much nervous tension can affect your heartbeat.

In a high-strung young man such as you described, I should think the best index as to how fast his heart really beats is to get a basal heart rate, specifically one while he's asleep or just as he awakens in the morning.

It's true that an overactive thyroid can cause a high heart rate but so can anxiety, excess use of cigarettes (which you say your son doesn't use) and coffee and cola.

Also your level of physical fitness affects your resting heart rate. Individuals who are in good physical condition are more likely to have slow resting heart rates than those that are in poor physical condition. I'm sending you The Health Letter number 9-8, Your Heart Rate: What It Means. It will give you additional information on heart rates as related to health. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Why don't you go ahead and get your son's heart rate while he's asleep or early in the morning and see what that is? If it still persists over 100, even though he doesn't drink coffee, tea or colas and doesn't smoke, it might be worth having him checked again. If he's in very poor physical condition, it might also be worth having him start a physical fitness program. Finally, I would just observe that laboratory tests are not infallible and occasionally a person with an overactive thyroid gland may have a normal blood test report. However, if he did have an overactive thyroid, the probabilities are that he would have some other findings which would help to lead to the correct diagnosis.

Cover can't help worn mattress

Mattress manufacturers have long advocated the use of a mattress pad to protect bedding against soil and perspiration and thus help to prolong its life.

"But there's no way a pretty cover can transform a worn-out or damaged mattress into a new one," say sleep experts at the Spring Air Company in Chicago.

The basic function of a mattress pad, be it the simple flat quilted kind or the luxury type that completely encloses the mattress and foundation, is to absorb the eight ounces of moisture generated by the normal human body during an average night's sleep. At the same time, it protects against dust, dirt and soil.

Don't let the cover fool you into thinking that the mattress beneath is immune to wear, however. Periodically examine the mattress for missing or broken stitches, rips or tears, sagging edges or low spots. Run hands firmly over the surface, feeling for ridges or lumps. These are signs new bedding — not a pretty cover — is in order.

BEEN THERE IN GALVESTON

DEAR ABBY: Where there is total silence, no progress can be made in righting wrongs or settling disputes.

Appropos of prolonged silences: it has been my observation that it's the more mature party who breaks the silence.

DEAR ABBY: You wrote, concerning men who talk about sex all the time, that "Those who CAN do, and those who CAN'T, talk about it."

That sure didn't apply to my late husband. He was a morning, noon and night man — seven days a week! He always came home for the noon hour, then again at 5 p.m. on the dot, so I never suspected a thing when he talked about his "other girls," which he did constantly.

Not until he was 60 did I learn that he'd been known at the office as a chaser for 30 years! At 65 I caught him with another woman who boldly said, "If you took care of your husband's needs at home, he wouldn't have to go elsewhere." (He had told her I was frigid!) I couldn't believe it. I started laughing, and haven't stopped yet. Meanwhile I was exhausted trying to keep up with him!

No, I didn't divorce him. After that, I just told him to stay downtown for lunch. Abby, I loved that man until the day he died. He was 76. He never slowed up, and never stopped chasing, and never stopped talking about sex, either. I just had to tell you that not all men who talk about sex are only talkers. Some are doers. At least mine was.

THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

FDA head is no bureaucrat

By Joe Graedon

Dr. Jere Edwin Goyan, new head of the Food and Drug Administration, is not one of your basic bashful bureaucrats.

Goyan, former dean of the University of California (San Francisco) School of Pharmacy, is the first member of the pharmacists' profession to serve in this prestigious and vital position.

His appointment is good news for consumers, since it is expected he will not run from controversy (of which there is plenty at the FDA) or hide behind ambiguous statements (based on his past speeches).

In 1974, before a meeting of the distinguished Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Science, Dr. Goyan stated, "Too often the wrong drug has been given to the wrong patient, at the wrong time, and in the wrong amounts, with no consideration of costs."

Although he is admired by doctors and in fact was nominated for his current post by the American College of Physicians, he has been unafraid to criticize the medical profession: "I staunchly refuse to accept the notion that any physician, merely because he graduated from medical school and is currently a card-carrying member of his or her country medical society, is great, or good, or even tolerably competent. Too much of drug therapy has been atrociously irrational."

Even though Dr. Goyan is a pharmacist himself he has been equally tough on members of his own profession. He has little patience for the pharmacist who is merely an assembly line pill pusher.

While serving as dean of one of the country's leading pharmacy schools, he was a strong innovator. Dr. Goyan believes that the pharmacist must be trained to maintain an active role in health care. This means keeping a patient profile of all medications a regular customer is taking. In so doing the pharmacist can better monitor drug reactions and interactions, help select appropriate drugs and recommend therapies.

But more important than anything else, the new head of the FDA won't be a pushover for special interest groups of drug industry lobbyists. In a recent interview with R. Jeffrey Smith from "Science" magazine, Dr. Goyan suggested that drug salesmen could be professionally certified to counteract the fact that "they're paid to sell things, not to do a good job."

One of the hottest potatoes the new commissioner will have to face is the issue of patient inserts. The pharmaceutical industry and many pharmacists have spoken out strongly against an FDA move to provide consumers with informational brochures when they receive prescription medications.

Besides objecting to the increased cost of such inserts, drug manufacturers are worried that a list of warnings and side effects may scare some customers or worse, "raise unwarranted concerns about the prescriber's judgment."

But Dr. Goyan feels differently. In his "Science" interview he said, "I have a strong belief in a patient's right to know. My philosophy on this makes doctors and some of my colleagues uneasy, but in the best interest of public health, it should be mandated."

This apparent endorsement of patient package inserts stems from a concern that "drug companies have a tendency to try to sell drugs and not to convey information."

Joe Graedon is a pharmacologist, a consultant to the Federal Trade Commission and author of "The People's Pharmacy" (Avon Books).

Altrusa members have ESA program

Epsilon Sigma Alpha members met last week for a program by two guests from Altrusa Club of Pampa.

Catherine Sullins reported on the Reading Is Fun (RIF) program sponsored by Altrusa. Altrusa Club activities for Dental Health week in February were discussed by Marge Penn.

ESA members discussed what they could do to participate in the projects.

During the regular business session Dorothy Miller reported on the pecan project. Due in by Thanksgiving, they will sell for $3.50 a pound.

Dance plans were completed for the Nov. 10 dance at M.K. Brown; the group decided on Comstock for the band.

Refreshments were served by Helen Danner and Elsie Floyd, hostesses.

The next meeting will be Nov. 15 at 7 p.m. in the Senior Citizens Center.

Candidate hosts Big Mac fundraisers

In Brownsville, Texas, on the Mexican border, Jolly Leal Yarbrough, publisher of the Rio Grande Valley's only all-Spanish language newspaper, decided to hold a different kind of political fundraiser.

Mrs. Yarbrough, who at 4-foot-11 is known as "Little Jolly," was the independent candidate for mayor of Brownsville — the first woman ever to run for that position. She planned a $5-a-ticket fund-raising dinner at McDonald's in the Amigoland Mall — with ticket-holders entitled to a "Big Mac," french fries and a soft drink or coffee. Sale of each ticket was to place more than $3 in Mrs. Yarbrough's campaign fund.

Her two opponents, the one-term incumbent and another independent, were reported to have spent thousands of dollars on their campaigns.

Mrs. Yarbrough, who said she does not believe that a political race for an unsalaried position ought to involve much expense, pledged to guard city funds with equal vigor.

Whatever happened to the 1979 recession?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whatever happened to the 1979 recession? Well, it didn't happen in 1979, at least not yet. Evidence continues to accumulate that the economy is turning up, not down, as the year draws to a close.

The index of economic indicators that came out last week was up by 0.8 percent, the biggest advance in 14 months. Factory orders for September, also reported last week, rose 3.9 percent, the most in a year.

The growth in the economy has frustrated efforts to curb inflation. Wholesale prices increased another 1 percent in October, the government said Thursday.

Unemployment rose slightly last month, to 6 percent, but was still lower than anyone would have predicted a few months ago. And employment increased by 305,000, a business survey showed.

The economy, in fact, is looking downright robust.

"It's the case of the missing recession. It's out there somewhere, but nobody can find it," says Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

"The economy is simply not behaving in response to economic weakness as it used to," Lyle E. Gramley, a council member, said in an interview Friday.

Gramley said one reason for continued growth is that consumers are spending much more in relation to their income than they used to, the result of "being motivated by inflationary expectations."

Treasury Secretary G. William Miller, who declared in September that the nation was in a recession, and that it was half over, says the economy is giving off "false signals." But he has retracted his half-over statement.

Miller wasn't the only one who was fooled. A sizable 2.4 percent increase in the nation's gross national product in the third quarter caught nearly everyone off guard, including most private forecasters.

George Perry, an economist at the Brookings Institution who also thought a recession was underway, said the most surprising economic statistics were the September home-building figures, which showed housing starts at an annual rate of 1.9 million during the month.

"Everybody underestimated housing and how strong it would be even with the high interest rates of summer," he said in an interview. He said "one had to wonder" whether interest rates were high enough.

It is generally accepted that the nation's GNP, the value of total output of goods and services in the economy, including housing, must decline for at least two consecutive quarters for a recession to occur.

The GNP had declined at a 2.3 percent rate in the second quarter, and just about everyone else had taken it as a foregone conclusion that the third quarter GNP would decline as well.

The National Bureau of Economic Research, which makes the official determination of a recession, said after a meeting on Oct. 25 that the "recent strength of the economy" makes any such assessment premature. It scheduled another meeting in December.

Most forecasters still expect a recession to occur, especially in the wake of the new measures announced by the Federal Reserve Board on Oct. 6 to curtail growth of the money supply. The actions resulted in another big jump in interest rates, and the housing industry already is feeling the strain.

But the events in the third quarter have led forecasters to be more cautious in predicting when the downturn might begin.

Gramley said the impact of the Fed's actions probably won't show up in the economic statistics until early next year.

"The big issue is what effects the rise in interest rates has had on the outlook for housing and other sectors of spending," he said. "It's premature to make any judgment, except that the uncertainties have increased."

He said the nation entered October "with a much stronger economy than anticipated" and added he would not be surprised to see it grow again in the fourth quarter, although not so much as in the third.

But while the economy isn't yet sinking, inflation is still soaring. Administration economists have given up all hope of reducing inflation below 10 percent by the end of the year, and expect it to remain at the current level of about 13 percent through December at least, although maybe just slightly under.

A flame kindled from the cradle

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Muayed Kilani is a 16-year-old Palestinian "guerrilla cub" who wants to die for a country he has never seen.

"My father met his martyrdom for the sake of Palestine and, Allah willing, I shall die for the same cause," the lean, wiry schoolboy said during a break in combat training at the Palestine Liberation Organization's Chatilla camp here.

With sweat pouring from his face, Kilani spoke with determination of the mission of the "cubs," aged 14 to 19, who will graduate and join one of eight guerrilla groups that make up the PLO. They average four hours of training a day.

"We are the sons of the Palestinian revolution, and we want to die revolutionaries," he said. "Our mothers fed us the love of Palestine with the milk of their breasts. The Palestine of our dreams is indeed more sacred to us than the reality of Palestine was to our fathers."

Trainer Abu Khaled roared a command, and the youngsters jumped and cried out in unison. "Revolution until victory!"

"A drop of sweat in training saves a drop of blood in combat," Abu Khaled reminded them. "Let your triumphant cry ring in enemy ears like a tocsin of bloodletting and utter death."

Holding Soviet-made Kalashnikov rifles, the boys thrust and zigzagged through their drills in a sprawling compound of tents and tumble-down, sun-bleached shacks.

"Some of us cursed our fathers because they failed to fight, but our sons will not curse us," said Kilani, brandishing his rifle and patting its butt.

His guerrilla father was killed in southern Lebanon two years ago, leaving a widow and three boys to "refuel the revolution" against Israel, he said.

"My mother has always been proud of my father's martyrdom, and we never felt like orphans," he said. "The Palestinian revolution is our eternal father."

Kilani, his mother and two brothers have since been living on the dole, a meagre 300 Lebanese pounds — $93 — a month, from Yasser Arafat's PLO.

Raising a portrait of Arafat and a four-color Palestinian flag, the boys marched under a group of pine trees at the head of a "cub formation."

"The white portion (of the flag) symbolizes our intentions, the green our land, the black our battles and the red our swords," he said.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

November 5, 1979

This coming year you may be subjected to some anticipated changes in your basic lifestyle. What occurs will turn out to be the very best for you in the long run.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) When it comes to managing things for others today you are able to do so masterfully. Where your own affairs are concerned, you may not be as adept. Find out more about yourself by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Things will work out smoothly today if you make an extra effort to see things from the other fellow's point of view. Don't be one-sided.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The only thing that could defeat you is your own lack of will and determination. Display courage and you can meet all challenges.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You may face a problem today similar to one that confronted you in the past. Apply the lessons learned from experience and you'll come out the victor.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Where your goals are concerned today, be content with slow but steady progress instead of trying to do everything in one fell swoop. You'll get there eventually.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Jumping to conclusions today could cause you unnecessary grief. Study all the facts from every angle before passing judgment or making decisions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you're involved in any financial arrangements today, make sure everything is clearly spelled out in advance. Nebulous deals could cost you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Someone who is very fond of you may be a bit more sensitive than usual today. You could cause hurt feelings if this person thinks he or she is being taken for granted.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Although you may be a trifle inconvenienced by a favor asked of you today, don't let this person down if he or she went to bat for you in the past.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Friends will find more to admire in you today if you forego any type of pretense. There is enough to like in you if you'll just be yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There are ample opportunities to further your ambitions today, although you may have some difficulty in getting yourself to believe this is true.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Deal with life realistically today instead of being a wishful thinker. You can solve your problems if your approach is logical.

Pokes break Giants hearts in squeaker

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Broken dreams meant broken hearts for the New York Giants, who barely missed knocking off the Dallas Cowboys in their biggest game in seven years.

"I used to cry a lot when I was a little kid when we lost. This is the first time I feel like crying in 15 years," said a disconsolate Brad Van Pelt after Rafael Septien's third field goal of the game, a 22-yarder with three seconds remaining, gave the Cowboys a 16-14 victory Sunday.

"The Giants deserved to win," observed Dallas coach Tom Landry.

New York parlayed incredible emotion, a record crowd and two touchdown passes by quarterback Phil Simms into a 14-6 lead with 8:43 remaining in the game.

"Not until the final gun can you count a victory, we learned that last year against Philadelphia," said New York defensive tackle Gary Jeter, referring to the "fumble" that cost the Giants a game and former head coach John McVay his job.

Jeter was right, but it certainly looked as if the Giants would notch their fifth consecutive National Football League victory and move back into playoff contention after dropping their first five games this season. It also looked as if they would defeat the Cowboys for the first time in 10 meetings.

Dallas, which had not scored a touchdown in more than nine quarters, earlier had to settle for Rafael Septien field goals when they could not crack the New York defense. The Giants even stopped the Cowboys on a tremendous first half goal line stand after Dallas had a first down at the 2-yard line.

Quarterback Roger Staubach, however, began to take advantage of all the time the Giants' 3-4 defense was allowing and hit Drew Pearson for a 32-yard score with 2:24 remaining to draw within one point.

Dallas got the ball back on its own 9 with 1:49 to go after the defense shut down Simms and the Giants. Staubach hit Pearson for 27 yards and Tony Dorsett on a 32-yard screen pass helping them to get to the New York 12, leading to Septien's game-winner.

"They gave me a chip shot to work with," Septien said. "I just did my job."

The Giants played with an intensity rarely seen in the NFL. The club record crowd of 76,490 — only 320 no shows — was a big factor. Ultimately, it was the experience of the playoff-hardened Cowboys that burst the bubble.

"We have the poise to execute the big plays when we need to," Pearson said.

"We finally made some big plays at the end," said Staubach.

Giants safety Beasley Reece was proud of his team, which was the laughing stock of the league a month ago.

"We did our best today and came up a little bit short," Reece said. "It was just total deflation when they got the field goal. I was so built up, so hyped, playing with so much emotion. I could feel all the air coming out of my body. We know it wasn't for nothing, but that's what it feels like."

The Giants' defense held Dallas to 106 yards rushing and bottled up Staubach until the end. In victory, Landry felt for the team he once played for.

"This may help them mature," he said. "They have a good young quarterback and a good young coach."

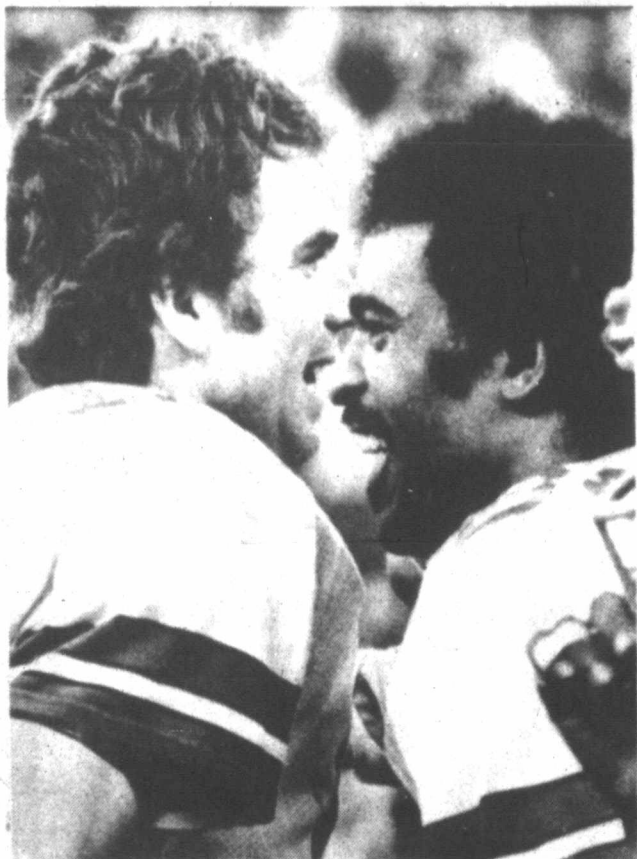

That coach also was emotionally drained after the game.

"It would be very wrong for us as a football team to let one game — and I don't think it will — destroy what we have built up," said Ray Perkins. "It's after a defeat like this that all of us find out what we're made of."

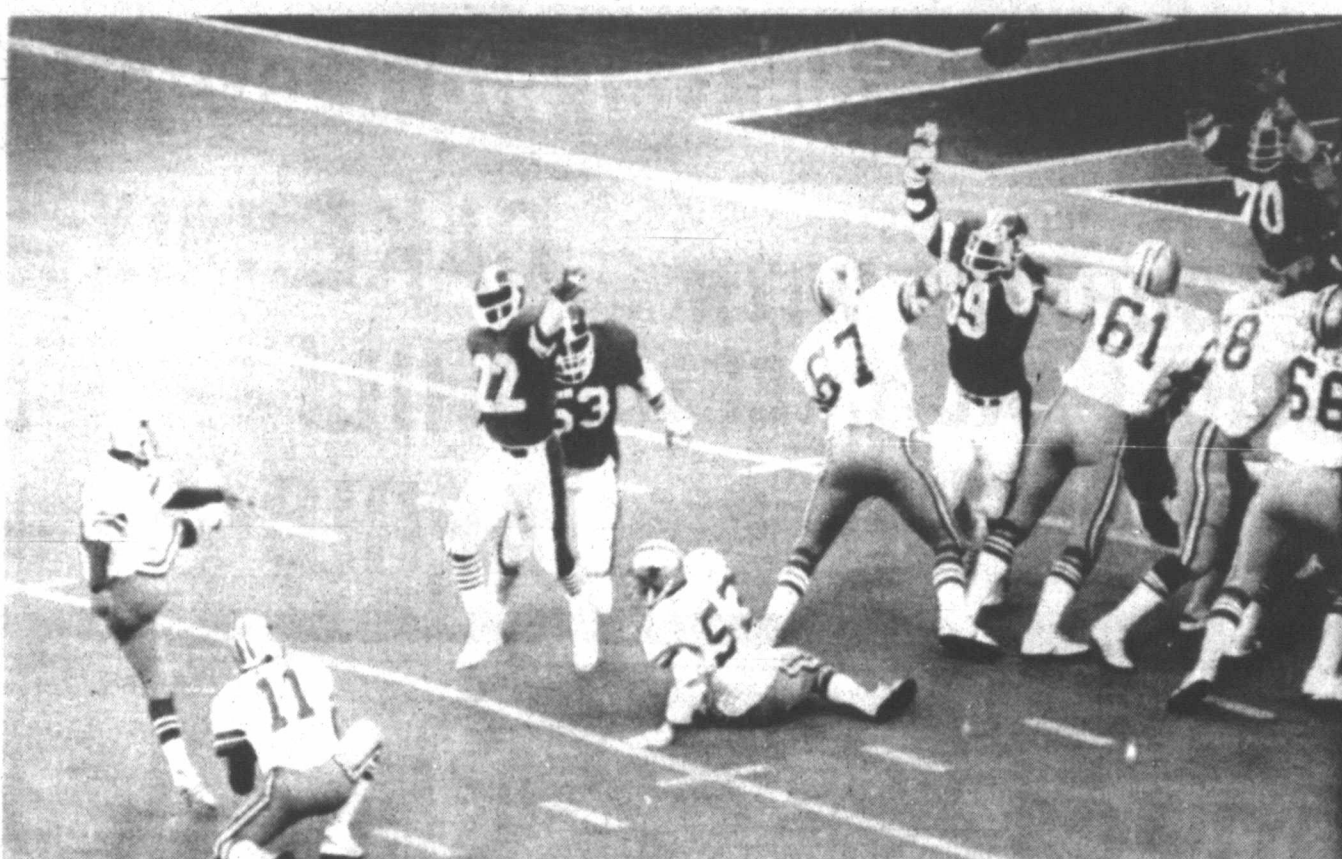

New York found out there's no quit in the 8-2 Cowboys.

"This is a 60-minute game, not 57," Dorsett noted.

It's a fact that broke a lot of hearts.

ROGER STAUBACH and Drew Pearson exchange smiles after their fourth quarter pass play set up the winning field goal by the Dallas Cowboys. Harriers finish sixth Pampa's Joe Murray led the Harvester harriers to a sixth-place finish in the Amarillo Invitational cross country meet Saturday at Thompson Park.

Murray placed ninth with a 10:51 clocking while five of his teammates also placed. They were Don Braswell, 28th, 11:19; Mike Wheeler, 36th, 11:28; Neal Braswell, 39th, 11:33; Rick Kupcanas, 52nd, 11:57; and Lane Howard, 60th, 12:11.

Pampa garnered 163 points as a team. Tascosa took first with 55 points in the 14-team meet.

In the girls division, Pampa failed to make enough points to finish among the top eight teams, but four Harvesters did complete the two-mile run. They were Kerri Golden, 48th, 14:54; Christi Youngblood, 57th, 15:29; JoLynn Ellis, 66th, 16:24; and Nancy Martin, 70th, 17:24.

Tascosa also won the girls meet with 44 points.

Top individuals were Mindee Mayfield, Monterey, 12:39; girls; and David Williams, 10:17, Tascosa, boys.

Pampa enters the district meet Saturday at Amarillo's Thompson Park. Starting time is 10 a.m.

Martin sits out brawl

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Former baseball manager Billy Martin was watching his son play high school football Saturday when a fullscale brawl on the field ended the game prematurely. Neither Martin was involved.

Martin, recently dismissed from the helm of the New York Yankees because of an incident in a Bloomington, Minn., bar that left a man with a cut lip, was on hand to watch Trinity Valley freshman wingback Billy Jr.

Greenhill was ahead 14-0 when the game ended with 2:05 left to play.

Oiler win vital for playoff spot

MIAMI (AP) — A possible repeat of last year's shootout against the Houston Oilers had Miami Dolphins center Jim Langer tossing and turning in his hospital bed.

Last year, Houston outlasted Miami 35-30 in one of the wildest Monday night games ever played. It isn't likely to happen again, but that didn't calm Langer, who just had surgery to replace bone chips in his leg.

"You can ask our defensive people," Langer said. "Whenever they play against a rookie or someone new at a position, they try to do everything they can to confuse and intimidate him."

Mark Dennard will make his first start tonight against the Oilers. He spent most of the week getting a taste of what to expect from the Dolphins' nose tackle, Bob Baumhower.

"I'm not so nervous that I can't go out and play, but it's exciting," said Dennard, a 10th-round draft choice last year from Texas A&M. Just in case, Langer will be on crutches along the sideline to give advice.

Last year, Earl Campbell erupted for four Houston touchdowns, and 199 yards while Miami quarterback Bob Griese had the best statistical game of his career with 23 completions in 33 attempts for 349 yards.

SPORTS

But several factors make another shootout unlikely: —Campbell's bruised thigh has slowed him to just 41 yards on 14 carries in the Oilers' last two games.

—The steadily improving Dolphins' defense is now the second-best in the National Football League against the run. Five teams have managed fewer than 100 yards rushing in Miami's nine games this year, and no individual runner has broken 100 yards.

—Both quarterbacks, Griese and Houston's Dan Pastorini, have struggled this year. Griese had his first solid game of the season last week when he passed for 287 yards against Green Bay. Pastorini has been intercepted 14 times and has hit just 46.4 percent of his passes.

—Last week, the Dolphins lost halfback Delvin Williams, Langer and reserve fullback Norm Bulaich to injuries. Promising fourth-year pro Gary Davis will start in Williams' place and Bob Torrey, a New York Giants reject, will spell Larry Csonka at fullback.

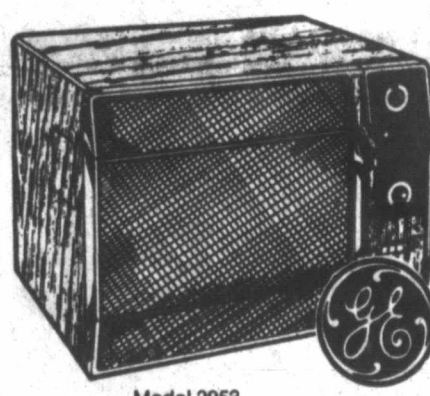

But the game is vital for each team. Both Miami and Houston are 6-3 this season and each is in a thick cluster of playoff contenders. Last year, Houston eventually beat Miami 17-9 here in a wild-card playoff game.

The Dolphins are battling New England in the AFC East, while Houston is struggling against Cleveland to challenge Pittsburgh in the AFC Central.

Miami is a three-point favorite, the oddsmakers say. Club officials expect a crowd of 65,000 in the 72,000-seat Orange Bowl. The game, televised at 9 p.m. by ABC, will be blacked out in the Miami area.

TRACY AUSTIN prepares for a forehand smash with a heavy-duty backswing Sunday during the Wightman Cup competition in West Palm Beach. Austin won her match against Great Britain's Sue Barker, but the Wightman Cup had already been won by the United States in Saturday's competition.

(AP Laserphoto)

Lloyd-Austin gives U.S. Wightman Cup Sweep

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Clay courts and the baseline games of Chris Evert Lloyd and Tracy Austin gave the United States the lift it needed to blank England's women 7-0 in their Wightman Cup tennis competition.

Blustery winds and an occasional shower couldn't stop the American women Sunday, as Lloyd teamed with U.S. player-coach Rosie Casals for the final victory in the 3-day event. Earlier in the day, Lloyd and Austin each picked up a singles victory.

"I'm not surprised at the shutout, because we had it all on paper — all in the statistics," said Casals. "Chris and Tracy were favored all the way. This was their surface, but I feel they would have been that strong, even if we would've played on any surface."

"For sure, (Virginia) Wade and (Sue) Barker could have played much better games on a faster surface." It was the tenth Wightman Cup sweep by the United States in the Wightman Cup's 51-year history. This time the American women won 79 games to the Britons' 33.

The low note of the day came afterward, when President Carter failed to telephone his congratulations. Even when the U.S. women lose, Lloyd said, the president traditionally calls his condolences.

"We're a little upset with President Carter," said Lloyd, a 6-1, 6-1 victor over Wade in singles. "He still hasn't called us and we're a little annoyed at that."

Carter could have gotten himself off the hook with a call Saturday night. Tracy Austin — a 6-4, 6-2 winner over Barker on Sunday — had clinched the Cup for the Americans then by winning a singles match against Wade and teaming with Anne Kiyomura for a doubles win.

The British had a hard time motivating themselves for Sunday's play at the Palm Beach Polo and Country Club, Wade said.

Asked how she felt about the shutout, she joked, "Oh, you mean wiped out completely? Thoroughly worn down? Completely shorn of all respect? Why that's the understatement of the day!"

Prince Valiant to the rescue

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (NEA) — The boos in the drafting room of the National Football League — in this case, the Starlight Roof of the Waldorf Astoria — still rankle George Young.

He had taken over this year as general manager of the New York Giants, a team that hasn't had a winning season since 1972. The Giants had just announced their No. 1 pick for 1979.

Phil Simms of Morehead State, some place in Kentucky, Phil WHO?

The gallery — they let outsiders in to watch the draft — snickered. Even some of the people at the NFL tables were incredulous.

"The thing is," remembers Young, "not one person in that room ever saw the guy in college."

Neither for that matter had Young. But he had seen a couple of game films of the young towhead quarterback from the little school in the Ohio Valley Conference. And the Giants' own scouts had seen him. Plus Ray Perkins, their new young coach, had personally gone down to Morehead and worked Simms for one full day.

"A lot of people," says Young, "didn't understand he had a lot of ability. We felt we needed a quarterback. The Cowboys had Roger Staubach, and the Cardinals had Jim Hart. Old guys. We needed a young one to get ahead of the cycle, even if we had to put him in the barn and wait for him to develop."

That was the plan for Simms. Young had been through the development process before when he was on the staff of the Baltimore Colts and watched Johnny Unitas and Bert Jones in their incubation periods as pros.

Perkins didn't want to play Simms before he felt he was ready so that he wouldn't get physically and emotionally scarred — the way quarterbacks like Jim Plunkett, Randy Johnson and Norm Snead have been in the past by being force-fed as rookie regulars with bad teams.

But by the first week of October, the Giant's had won zero games and lost five. And the embryonic Young-Perkins regime was turning into a disaster. Joe Pisarcik, their quarterback the last two seasons, was getting sacked regularly and clearly was not going to be their leader of the future.

With the 0-5 Giants getting ready to face Tampa Bay, then the only undefeated team left in the NFL, Perkins — who had said, "I'd rather bring him along slow" — decided Simms would start. The coach explained, "I felt like he could help us." (Simms had received his professional baptism the previous week in a relief role against New Orleans and he had done fairly well.)

Well, the winless Giants, with Simms — a blond with bangs whom his teammates call "Prince Valiant" — upset visiting Tampa Bay.

Then they routed the San Francisco 49ers (in their New Jersey Meadowlands complex) with Simms throwing the ball spectacularly for two touchdowns and evading a blitz to run the ball in for a score himself. Next Simms led the Giants to difficult road victories against Kansas City and Los Angeles.

Young does a little back-patting. "Other people," he says, "didn't have the guts to take a guy from Morehead State."

One could note that the Pittsburgh Steelers back in 1970 decided to rebuild around another blond bomber named Terry Bradshaw, from Louisiana Tech — another school that is a little off the beaten track.

But Young doesn't feel the situations are analogous.

"Bradshaw," he says, "was a very successful quarterback at Louisiana Tech. Phil will tell you they were 10 and 42 at Morehead State when he was there. He had Bradshaw's ability, but not his mobility."

Actually, football scouting is so extensive today that talent in the most remote nook still makes it into all the pros' computers. No less than 18 NFL teams took the trouble to send representatives to the hill country of eastern Kentucky to work Simms out personally.

A PORTION of the mass of 6,473 runners which took part in the 4th annual Marine Corps Marathon leaves the starting line Sunday in Washington to begin the 26½ mile race. The race was won by Phil Camp, a Navy flight instructor stationed in Pensacola, Fla., in two hours, 19 minutes and 35 seconds.

Spurs lose in OT

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Portland Trail Blazers overtook San Antonio on Sunday night then went into overtime to beat the Spurs 127-124 in a National Basketball Association game.

Maurice Lucas of Portland made a layup to send the game into overtime then scored six points in the extra period.

Portland, 11-2, trailed 115-107 with 46 seconds remaining. Tom Owens hit two field goals and Ron Brewer made a three-point jumper to cut the Blazers' disadvantage to 116-114 with 14 seconds left.

T.R. Dunn deflected James Silas' inbound pass intended for George Gervin and Lucas drove with the ball from midcourt for a layup that tied the game 10 seconds from the buzzer.

Dunn said of Silas' pass, "The five seconds were running out, so I guess he was looking for anybody. I was lucky enough to get my hand on the ball and then I fell to the floor. I didn't even see Luke pick up the ball. When I looked, Luke was on his way to the hoop."

San Antonio, 6-5, led 120-118 in overtime when Portland outscored the Spurs 6-1 to take a 124-121 advantage with 1:44 left. The Blazers remained ahead.

San Antonio Coach Doug Moe lamented, "We were in control the whole way and should have won it. It really hurts ... I think anybody who really watched this game tonight would agree that we outplayed Portland and deserved to win this game. This is the best we've played on this trip."

George Gervin of San Antonio, who also made a three-point goal, led all scorers with 32 points. Larry Kenon scored 20 for the Spurs, and teammate James Silas had 18. Owens led Portland scoring with 32 points.

Von Dohlen's raising money - but for what?

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Organizers say a weekend fund-raiser for Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, netted about $25,000 in campaign funds for a yet-to-be announced race.

Austin consultant Jim Ray, who handled the details, said advance ticket sales raised $35,000, and "I am guessing it will total $40,000." He said Von Dohlen will have $25,000 after expenses from the $25-per-person Sunday night reception.

Von Dohlen, 36, is speaker pro tem of the House — a largely honorary post to which Speaker Bill Clayton appointed him. More importantly, he heads the committee that will draw House district lines after the 1980 census.

Von Dohlen, however, left unanswered the question of whether he intends to be back in the House in 1981 to oversee the redistricting effort.

"We haven't made that decision yet. Our options are open," he said when asked whether he will seek a sixth term in the House in next year's elections. "We have had people talk to us about a Senate race. We have had people talk to us about a statewide race."

Von Dohlen's possibilities also include a race for House speaker in 1983.

Sen. Bill Patman, D-Ganado, whose district includes Goliad, is up for re-election next year, and a race to unseat him is a possibility for Von Dohlen. Patman, a crusader against higher interest rates, is seen by some as too liberal for the district.

"If that is a race against Patman, there was something he wanted to do, he'd have lots of support," said University of Texas Regent, Jon Newton, a former state representative from Beeville who served as chairman for the Von Dohlen Salute Committee.

Newton said the idea behind the fund-raiser was "to help him run for whatever he wants to."

Honorary co-chairmen of the 400-member statewide steering committee for the affair included former Govs. Dolph, Briscoe, Preston Smith, Price Daniel Sr. and Allan Shivers.

In brief remarks, Lt. Gov. Bill

Hobby called Von Dohlen "one of the ablest and most industrious members of the Legislature and one of the most compassionate."

Gov. Bill Clements sent his regrets in a letter in which he called Von Dohlen "one of the truly bright members of the House."

PAUL McCARTNEY, the only former Beatle to tour Britain since the group broke up in 1970, will begin a 15-date tour at the Royal Court Theater Nov. 25-26 in his hometown of Liverpool, England. His agents made the announcement in London Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

Air fares on the rise

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Air fares are on the rise again and would-be travelers have to be more careful than ever if they want to get the most for their money.

The Civil Aeronautics Board has just revised its 28-page guide to air travel in the United States. To get a copy, write: "Fly-Rights," Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

The guide is designed to be as up to date as possible, but the business is changing so quickly these days that the board warns: "By the time you read this, a few of the rules... may be different. Contact the airline you plan to use or the nearest CAB office if you have any questions."

Higher fuel costs have been blamed for the latest round of price increases and the carriers say the situation is expected to get worse. United Airlines officials, for example, predict that by the end of next year, it will cost up to 50 percent more to fly than it does today.

The boosts will not affect all routes or airlines equally. Because of deregulation, there is a wide variety of fares and promotional offerings. One airline may charge more for a particular trip than another. Finding the bargains often means hard work, repeated telephone calls and persistence.

Here are some things to remember: —Make plans as far ahead of time as possible. The number of discount seats is usually very limited and the cheaper tickets are often sold out weeks or even months ahead of popular holiday periods.

—Find out what will happen if you switch flights. Is there a cancellation penalty? Is there a deadline after which you no longer qualify for a discount fare? What if you get sick or are forced to cancel by circumstances you can't control?

—Is the fare guaranteed? As a general rule, domestic airlines will not charge you extra once you have bought your ticket — even if the fare goes up.

—Be careful with your ticket. Getting a refund or replacement for a lost ticket is a lot of trouble and there's no guarantee you'll receive either one, says the CAB.

—Learn what your rights are in case you are bumped. Under CAB rules, an airline which overbooks a flight must ask for volunteers who are willing to be bumped in exchange for compensation. The amount of the compensation can vary; you can bargain to get the best deal. If there are no volunteers — or if there aren't enough — the airline gets to decide who will fly. If you are bumped involuntarily, the airline must pay you the fare to your destination, up to a maximum of $200. If the carrier can't arrange another flight to get you where you are going within two hours of the original flight (four hours on international flights), the amount of compensation is doubled. In either case, you get to keep your original ticket and use it on a later flight or turn it in for a refund.

Newest Research Results:
MERIT favored 3 to 1 over high tar brands in tests comparing taste and tar level.

Merit Topples High Tars!

Smokers report the taste of low tar MERIT matches that of high tar cigarettes.

New taste tests with thousands of smokers prove it.

Proof: A significant majority of smokers rate MERIT taste as good as—or better than—leading high tar brands. Even cigarettes having twice the tar!

Proof: Of the 95% stating a preference, 3 out of 4 smokers chose the MERIT low tar/good taste combination over high tar leaders when tar levels were revealed.

Smokers rate low tar MERIT satisfying taste alternative to high tar brands.

New national smoker study results prove it.

Proof: The overwhelming majority of MERIT smokers polled feel they didn't sacrifice taste in switching from high tar cigarettes.

Proof: 96% of MERIT smokers don't miss former high tar brands.

Proof: 9 out of 10 enjoy smoking as much since switching to MERIT, are glad they switched, and report MERIT is the best tasting low tar they've ever tried.

You've read the results. The conclusion is clearer than ever: MERIT delivers a winning combination of taste and low tar.

A combination that's attracting more and more smokers every day and—more importantly—satisfying them long term.
