Ag Commissioner plans town hall meeting at Howard College

RICK McLAUGHLIN
Staff Writer

Agricultural Commissioner Susan Combs and the Texas Department of Agriculture will host a town hall meeting Saturday in Big Spring, offering farmers, ranchers and the general public an opportunity to meet and discuss issues that are affecting Texas Agriculture and rural communities.

The meeting will begin at 3:30 p.m. at the Howard College Student Union Building in the Fireplace Room. The town hall is free and open to the public.

"The purpose of this meeting is to solicit local views and opinions on problems facing agriculture in this part of the world," said Howard County Agricultural Extension Agent David Kight. "From talking to her staff members, I think the one biggest thing she wants to do is be in more of a listening mode. It's not so much what she is going to do, but it's an opportunity for her to get citizens' input to her."

On the other hand, Kight said she will give an overview of some of the programs they (Texas Department of Agriculture) have implemented that should be of benefit to agriculture, such as some of the guaranteed loan programs," added Kight.

"I want to hear first hand what is on the minds of farmers, ranchers and citizens of our rural communities," said

Combs. "I want to know what issues are affecting them, their families and their community and to hear their ideas and solutions for their future."

"Agriculture is one of the most dynamic industries in Texas. By working with our producers and agribusiness leaders, we can keep our industry on the forefront of change as we head into the 21st century," Combs said.

TDA, Texas Farm Bureau, Texas Agricultural Extension service and various commodity groups are organizing a series of rural town hall meetings across Texas this fall.

"You may have received information where all else she is going to be and it is going to be all over Texas and including West Texas, right here in Howard County," said Kight. "We are fortunate to have her and her staff consider us significant enough to hold one of these meetings."

"She (Combs) has done a good job for the time she has been in office. She is doing a good job

Grate restored, replaced at the Settles Building

By RICK McLAUGHLIN
Staff Writer

A small piece of the former Settles Hotel has been restored and was put back in its rightful place Wednesday.

A large, cast iron decorative grate, with a prominent 'S' in the middle once again graces the recess above the main entrance, where it had been since the hotel was built in 1931.

At the request of Friends of the Settles, the city took the grate down six months ago. The rusted and corroded piece was sandblasted and painted by Southwest Tool of Big Spring.

McMahon Concrete provided the cherry picker truck while inmates of the Wilderness Camp cajoled and wrestled the grate into its old spot above the main entrance.

The move was just in time for the forthcoming 'Tower of Local armory not on list for closure, officials say

RICK McLAUGHLIN
Staff Writer

It's official now, and without ceremony or fanfare. By administrative paperwork, the Big Spring National Guard armory's former Company B is now Detachment 1 of Co. C, 2nd Bat., 142nd Inf. Regt., 49th Armored Div., of the Texas National Guard in Midland as of Oct. 1. The local armory is now home only to a detachment of Co. C.

And that home is official, too. While a number of armories throughout the state are slated for closure, the Big Spring armory is not on the list, according to Lt. Col. John Stanford of the public information office of the Texas National Guard in Austin.

The headquarters for Co. B,

2nd Bat. of the 142 Inf. Regt., is moving to Wellington as part of reorganization activity within the TNG. The armory will remain home to that local detachment, will remain active and will not be closed, Staff Sgt. William Grant of the Big Spring armory said this week.

The local armory has only one full-time position, Grant's, and that is not being affected by the reorganization, Grant said.

Six "slots" for the headquarters operation will go to Wellington, but the six guardsmen holding those slots will remain in the unit here. "Next year, instead of going to annual training, those six will be going to MOS (military occupational specialty) qualification schools for infantry," he added.

Two platoons in Brownfield have been part of Co. B. They will also be part of Co. C in Midland. The Brownfield Armory will be closed, said the company commanding officer, Capt. Jeffrey Humphrey.

Funding gets approval for 76,000 square-foot facility in Big Spring

By BILL McCLELLAN
News Editor

Funding for the Big Spring State Veterans Home has been approved, opening the way for construction, lawmakers announced Wednesday.

"That's great news. This is what we have been waiting for," said State Rep. David Knox, D-Knox City. "Our project can go forward now without any difficulty whatsoever."

Clearing of the land north of Interstate 20 along U.S. Highway 87 for the veterans home began early last month, but construction has been held up, pending approval of the grant, which was awarded by the Department of Veterans Affairs.

It was part of a $289 billion defense bill signed Tuesday by President Clinton.

Some $15.2 million was allocated for veterans homes in Big Spring and Bonham. They are two of four homes being constructed in Texas. The others, in Tyler and Floresville, had already received funding and are under construction.

"It's been an on-going process and we're happy the funds are now available to go on with this," said U.S. Rep. Charlie Stenholm, D-Stamford.

"Number one, it's good from the perspective of our veterans. We have a lot of patients there contracting out to nursing homes. They are contracted on a temporary basis, meaning these contracts have to be renewed every three months, or in some cases every six months. This will allow some stability for them.

"Second, it is good for the economic viability of Big Spring and for the continued viability of the veterans hospital there. While the hospital there is in good shape and they are doing a lot of good things, this just makes them so much more viable," Stenholm said.

MW Builders' Leonard Greco, who is overseeing construction of the home, does not yet have a timetable to begin building the home.

"What happens now is the selling of bonds, but that probably won't take long," he said.

"We've been continuing the dirt work and as soon as we have a construction date, we'll announce that," Greco said.

Previously, officials have said it will take 11 to 12 months to construct the 76,000 square-foot facility. When opened, the home will house 160 veterans and employ 150 workers.

Built with what design engineers are calling a "neighborhood" concept, it will feature natural lighting, shelves in each residents' room and a play area for children visitors. A secure, 32-bed Alzheimer's unit will be included. Other features will include a library, chapel and gift shop.

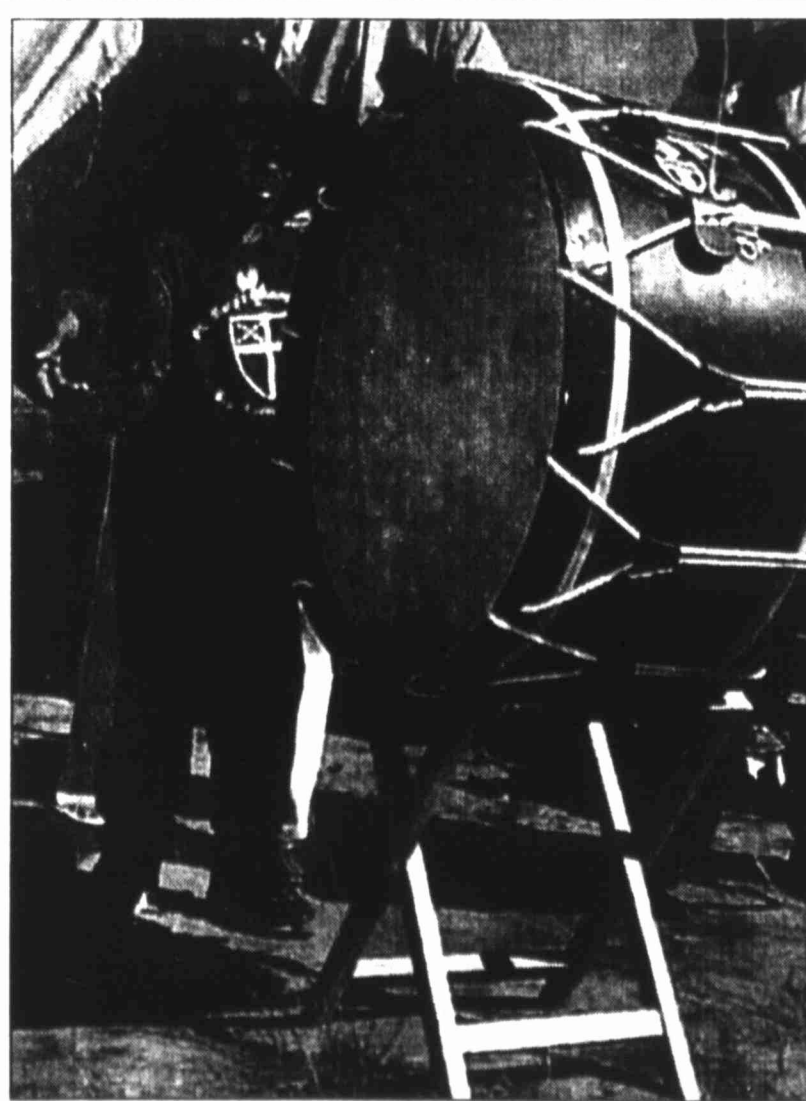

The facility will provide physical, speech and occupational therapy, on-going health care assessments, hospice care, respite care, social services, therapeutic activities and wound care.

Park Associates and its partners, Reese Associates, Inc., a Dallas-based architectural and planning firm, and MW Builders from Temple have designed, and will build and operate the four veterans homes.

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the Big Spring facility were held Aug. 10, 1998.

of public relations for the TNG in Austin, explained that the reorganization is part of a much larger effort on the state and national level reviewing the location and designations of a number of units of the Texas National Guard.

Reed added that "The Texas National Guard is committed to keeping a presence in Big Spring."

The 35-member Company B had about 12 members from Howard County with the balance from surrounding counties, San Angelo, Midland and even a representative from Ft. Worth who commuted for training sessions.

All National Guard armories are currently under review for possible closures and cutbacks, including the one in Big Spring, because of state and national reductions in force and facilities in regular and reserve components, said Stanford. A decision on a first round of closures is expected soon, Stanford said.

Stanford has a list of the armories to be closed, but cannot release it until it is approved by the commanding general. "They've left me hanging," Stanford said Tuesday. They won't give me the go-ahead. All the politicians have been notified including county judges and mayors. Armories will be closed throughout the state, but I can't release the list.

It is becoming harder and harder for small towns to maintain guard units throughout the state, Stanford added. The military is looking at demographic factors in the closing or keeping of guard armories. "Are we up to strength in this unit? Can we continue to recruit in this unit?" he asked. Stanford noted the continued movement of populations to bigger cities and the comparative decline of small towns and cities.

He also pointed to the trend to move to so-called "super armories" such as Lubbock's, where armory facilities are shared with U.S. Army Reserve units.

He also noted the difficulty of keeping recruitment up in the era of all volunteer military organizations and a lack of interest in things military.

Jury gives death sentence to killer who asked to die

VISTA, Calif. (AP) — A remorseless drifter who urged jurors to give him the death penalty for murdering a 9-year-old boy got his wish.

After five hours of deliberation Wednesday, a San Diego County Superior Court jury recommended that Brandon Wilson, 21, receive the death penalty for killing Matthew Cecchi last year at beach resort in Oceanside, north of San Diego.

Wilson smiled slightly as the verdict was read. His court-appointed attorney congratulated him.

"He's quite pleased with the verdict," attorney Curt Owen said. "It's what he wanted."

Testifying at his penalty hearing against his lawyer's advice this week, Wilson told jurors he felt no remorse for the killing and would "do it again in a second if I had the chance."

"Execute me," he said.

Wilson, who left his hometown of St. Croix Falls, Wis., two years ago to travel the West, admitted that he crept up behind Matthew while the boy stood at a urinal, slashed his throat and stabbed him five times in the back.

"It's amazing how anyone can have no remorse for something of that magnitude," said Matthew's uncle, Mark Gerhard, who made the 911 call to police moments after Wilson attacked the boy.

Adviser says JonBenet grand jury may issue report next week

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — The grand jury investigating the death of JonBenet Ramsey was scheduled to meet today and Friday, and one adviser says he knows of no further meetings set for the group.

"I would not be surprised if there wasn't some kind of announcement next week, as opposed to waiting until the 20th or even the week of the 20th," Adams County District Attorney Bob Grant said. Grant, one of four metro-area prosecutors who have advised District Attorney Alex Hunter on the case, was referring to the legally mandated conclusion of the grand jury's term. It was originally set to end April 21, but a judge extended it at the prosecution's request to Oct. 20.

Six-year-old JonBenet was found strangled, beaten and her wrists bound with cord in her home on Dec. 26, 1996. Her millionaire parents, John and Patsy Ramsey, have been identified as suspects but maintain they are innocent.

Several of the grand jurors were spotted at the Boulder County Justice Center on Wednesday, all appearing to leave by midafternoon.

Fears grow for child lost in mountains

RUSTIC, Colo. (AP) — Searchers and dog teams fanned into the rugged wilderness near Poudre Canyon today as the search for a 3-year-old boy entered its fifth day.

No signs of Jared Atadero have been found since he vanished while walking with family and friends Saturday morning along a trail in the 9,000-foot mountains west of Fort Collins and about 75 miles northwest of Denver. Jared was running up the trail to hide behind boulders and trees so he could jump out from his hiding place and say "Boo."

A searcher Tuesday afternoon took the boy's father, Allyn Atadero, 41, up the trail to the spot where his son was last seen by members of the hiking group.

A dejected Atadero emerged from the trail about an hour before nightfall.

"I haven't lost hope," he said, choking back tears, "but it's a major task still, and I think I may never ever see my son again."

Earlier, sparkling Indian summer skies lent no help to rescuers searching the canyon.

"We are checking under every rock and every log — and making sure we look everywhere the little boy could be," said Larimer County Sheriff Jim Alderden in explaining why the search area would be enlarged.

The sheriff said the possibility of an abduction had been

Suspects were in high school at time of killings

AUSTIN (AP) — The crime was horrifying: Four teen-age girls — sisters and friends — all shot in the head and killed during a yogurt shop robbery eight years ago.

The victims are remembered as model students. A plaque with their picture and names hangs on a wall at the Austin high school where three of them attended.

Texas' capital city "lost its innocence," the day of the murders, Mayor Kirk Watson said. Four men arrested Wednesday in the Dec. 6, 1991 killings are remembered differently — quiet, nondescript, sometimes troublesome teens who are accused of committing one of Austin's most notorious crimes while barely old enough to drive.

"I remember all of them," said Charles Wiser, assistant principal of McCallum High School, which three of the suspects attended as ninth or 10th graders in 1991. The victims went to other schools.

"I don't remember any really serious problems at all," Wiser said.

Police in Charleston, W.Va., and Texas arrested Robert Burns Springsteen, Jr., 24, of Charleston, Michael James Scott, 25, of Buda, Forrest Wellborn, 23, and Maurice Pierce, 24. Pierce was arrested in Lewisville and Wellborn was picked up in Lockhart.

All four are being charged with capital murder in the killing of or Eliza Hope Thomas, 17; Amy Ayers, 13; Jennifer Harbison, 17; and Sarah Harbison, 15. Jennifer's sister at an I Can't Believe It's Yogurt store where Miss Thomas and Jennifer Harbison worked. The store then was set on fire.

Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle said his office would move to have Springsteen returned to Texas from West Virginia, where he was held without bail. Scott was being held without bail in the Travis County Jail. Because they were 17 at the time of the crime, they face a maximum punishment of life in prison or death.

"It has been a long and difficult road for all of us in this community," Earle said. "We have all taken it personally for all these years."

Wellborn and Pierce, who were 16 and 15 at the time of the killings, were charged as juveniles. Earle said he would seek to have them tried as adults, but they would face a maximum sentence of life in prison. Judge Jeanne Meurer set bonds of $1 million for Wellborn and $1.5 million for Pierce.

Austin Independent School District officials said Springsteen, Wellborn and Scott all attended McCallum in the 1991-92 school year.

According to school records, Springsteen was placed in alternative education classes for students with behavioral problems two days before the murders. He left school on Dec. 16.

Records also showed that Scott did not return for his junior year. Officials said they are unsure if he finished his sophomore year. Wellborn repeated the ninth grade and left Austin schools in March 1993.

Pierce was a ninth-grader at the Robbins Academy for behavioral problem students in 1991-92. He transferred to Anderson High School the next year and later withdrew from classes.

Wiser said he believes Scott and Wellborn had work study classes together.

Just how and when they may have formed a deadly bond was unclear.

"I don't remember them running together. I didn't ever see either one of those kids with Springsteen," Wiser said.

Springsteen caused problems by not going to class and leaving campus without permission, Wiser said.

He didn't remember the students causing any violent trouble.

"I didn't really know him (Springsteen) because he wasn't here very long," he said.

Brooks AFB has new future as nation's first 'city base'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An Air Force Base once targeted for closure has a new future following a congressional panel's decision to make it a unique military installation.

A measure approved unanimously Wednesday by a House-Senate conference committee will make Brooks Air Force Base the nation's first "city base."

The designation, written into the $266 billion Defense Appropriations Bill, gives the Air Force permission to forge partnerships with businesses and universities at Brooks and create long-term leases. Brooks is the only installation affected by the initiative.

"We came out with a great victory for San Antonio," said U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas.

"When you change federal law, it is a big deal, especially when it's targeted specifically at one base and one community," said U.S. Rep. Henry Bonilla, R-Texas. "It is a huge accomplishment."

The Air Force, under the bipartisan legislation, is given five years to find cost savings at Brooks through the unprecedented creation of partnerships with colleges, businesses and research institutes, as well as local, state and federal agencies. The Air Force can begin creating the city base June 15.

The language was originally drafted by U.S. Rep. Ciro Rodriguez, D-San Antonio, but was killed in the House.

It was later resurrected by Mrs. Hutchison, a strong proponent of the city base concept. It ran into more trouble Wednesday, when House Majority Leader Dick Armey sought to kill it after expressing concerns that the measure was designed to protect the base from planned closure.

But Mrs. Hutchison and Bonilla spent six hours negotiating with Armey and other foes before the conference committee approved the city base language in the early evening.

United Parcel Service ends handgun deliveries through its ground service

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — United Parcel Service has decided to stop delivering handguns through its ground service, sending gunmakers scrambling to find alternatives to the world's largest package distribution company, The Morning Call reported today.

Atlanta-based UPS — which handles the vast majority of firearms shipments — is changing its policy beginning Monday to reduce the risk of guns being stolen en route.

"We're trying to protect ourselves from employees stealing and criminals stealing," UPS spokesman Bob Godlewski said.

Handgun shipments have been stolen in the past, Godlewski said, although he would not say how many.

The company will continue to ship handguns by overnight air service, since such deliveries involve less risk than ground shipments that can take up to six days, Godlewski said.

Overnight delivery, however, costs about $25 more per gun — or about four times as much for a complete shipment, said Jim Chambers, executive director of the Sporting Arms and Ammunition Manufacturers' Institute.

"That's what we're trying to come to grips with. We're looking for alternative methods," Chambers said.

UPS will continue to ship long guns, rifles and shotguns by ground. Godlewski said handguns are more of a target for criminals.

Each business day, Atlanta-based UPS delivers 12 million packages via its trademark brown trucks and brown-uniformed employees. UPS handles up to 75 percent of guns sent from manufacturers to distributors and nearly all firearms shipped from distributors to dealers, Chambers said.

The U.S. Postal Service also will not send handguns by ground shipment, said an employee at the service's nationwide Postal Answer Line. A small gun dealer in Walnutport, Pa., said the UPS policy change would hurt his business.

"It's going to kill me," said Paul Keifer, owner of Keifer's Gun Shop.

Joe Koehler, owner of Eagle Arms Sport Shop near Breinigsville, said he supported the change if it helps keep guns off the street.

"So it costs a little more," Koehler said. "I think it's a non-issue. It's their policy. Maybe one day they'll say they won't ship any guns."

Republicans, Democrats elbow for position on Social Security, spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — The partisan duel over Social Security continued Wednesday as the Senate signaled support for using across-the-board spending cuts to keep from tapping the pension program's surpluses.

By 54-46, the Senate approved a non-binding, Republican resolution advocating unspecified, across-the-board cuts in all 13 annual spending bills for the new fiscal year. Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a presidential contender, was the only senator to cross party lines.

Later, the Senate voted 54-46 to reject a Democratic alternative, with defections by Sens. John Edwards, D-N.C., James Jeffords, R-Vt., and Olympia Snowe, R-Maine. That non-binding measure said instead of across-the-board cuts, Congress should close tax loopholes and find other unspecified savings to pay for spending.

Neither vote advanced Congress' overdue spending bills for fiscal 2000, which began Friday. Rather, a battle for political positioning was under way, with Republicans casting themselves as champions of Social Security and Democrats accusing the GOP of seeking dangerous cuts in popular programs.

"Our objective is to make absolutely certain we don't dip into or spend Social Security surplus money," said Senate Majority Whip Don Nickles, R-Okla., defending across-the-board cuts as a sensible way to prevent that if other savings cannot be found.

"Do my colleagues really want to go on record cutting education?" asked Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., following that with anti-crime, health research, and other programs no politician wants to be seen as slashing.

Amid some internal grumbling, congressional Republicans — especially in the House — are considering across-the-board reductions to keep from eating into Social Security funds.

House Republicans have been considering a 2.7 percent cut to achieve that. The White House budget office said it would really take a 9 percent reduction, and produced a five-page memo asserting that such cuts would have a "severe impact" on defense, education and other programs.

So far, President Clinton has signed only four of the 13 bills for fiscal 2000, vetoed one and threatened to veto five others.

Meanwhile, House-Senate bargainers working on one of the most contentious spending bills were ready to roll back some House-approved cuts in NASA and housing — if administration officials could provide savings to pay for them, said congressional participants who spoke on condition of anonymity.

White House budget chief Jack Lew was talking to lawmakers about finding the savings. But the two sides had not yet agreed on dollar amounts to be restored or how the extra spending would be paid for, an administration official said.

White House rejects demand for test ban postponement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is rejecting a demand by Senate conservatives that President Clinton put in writing any request to delay a vote on an international nuclear test ban treaty.

The conservatives, led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., also want Clinton to promise — in writing — not to seek to revive the treaty during the 2000 presidential election year.

"The issue of debating (the treaty) should be dictated by the national security interests of the United States, not the political calendar," White House spokesman David Leavy said.

"I'm not aware of any plans for the president to send a letter, whatsoever," he added.

Helms on Wednesday made the demand as congressional leaders of both parties sought a way to get out of a planned vote next week on the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty.

Clinton himself had hinted early in the day that he could go along with such a delay — although he did not appear to want to be the one initiating it.

With virtually no Republican support, the treaty appeared headed to near-certain defeat in the Senate.

Its ratification requires 67 votes in the GOP-led chamber if all 100 senators vote.

That would represent a humiliating defeat for the administration, which has led an international campaign for the treaty — and which had criticized Helms for bottling up the treaty for two years in his Foreign Relations Committee.

The treaty would extend the present international ban on nuclear tests in the atmosphere to underground testing as well, resulting in a total ban on all nuclear explosions, no matter how small.

So far 154 nations have signed the treaty, although it has only been ratified by 48. Of the major nuclear powers, only Britain and France have ratified the pact.

Many prominent Republicans — including GOP presidential hopeful George W. Bush and the Senate Armed Services Committee chairman, Sen. John Warner of Virginia — say the treaty is not verifiable and would not stop the nuclear ambitions of North Korea and Iran.

Further, they argue it would harm efforts to maintain the safety and reliability of the U.S. nuclear arsenal.

Not only were Democrats pressing for a delay in the face of a probable defeat, but many influential Senate Republicans were also suggesting the show-down be postponed.

Members of both parties expressed fear that an outright rejection of the treaty would draw international scorn on the United States and increase pressure for a resumption of nuclear testing.

Helms' objection to a delay is significant, because under Senate rules the only way that next week's vote can be called off is through unanimous consent of all senators.

"We're ready to vote," Helms said, predicting that the treaty would be soundly rejected.

Democrats balked at Helms' terms — particularly on his demand not to press for action on the treaty next year — but Helms countered that Democrats "are trying to dictate the terms of their own surrender."

District play nears with anticipation

With five games under their belts, all of the Crossroads Area's high school football teams, save one, begin district competition Friday night.

The area's schedule begins at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow with Big Spring's Steers traveling to Fort Stockton, Coahoma's Bulldogs playing a call on District 3-2A defending champion Seagraves, Stanton's Buffaloes traveling to Plains; Borden County's Coyotes also hitting the road to Westbrook; Grady's Wildcats entertaining Hermleigh; and Sands' Mustangs playing host to Ira.

Forsan's Buffaloes will round out the area's weekend schedule at 8 p.m., teeing it up in their District 2-2A opener at Ozona.

Garden City's Bearkats have the week off, and hope to make the most of an open date before opening District 7-1A play by hosting Rankin on Oct. 15.

What amounts to an entirely new season begins for every team in the area that plays tomorrow night, because it is only what they accomplish in district play that determines whether or not they'll earn a berth in the playoffs in November.

In other words, teams that to date have been unbeaten — Big Spring, Coahoma and Stanton — and those who've struggled to losing records — Forsan and Garden City — have all returned to the same point.

"Everyone is 0-0 in the games that really count," Big Spring head coach Dwight Butler said earlier this week as he prepared his Steers for their District 5-4A opener in Fort Stockton. "You have to look at those first five games as a learning experience... that's all. What's important is to take what you've learned and make yourself a better football team."

The same attitude was expressed universally by the area's other seven head coaches. Nothing is written in stone as far as the 1999 football season is concerned, they say.

Their assertions, in fact, remind us of a line in the Optimist International creed that reminds the service organization's members, "To forget the mistakes of the past and press on to the greater achievements of the future."

As we did six weeks ago at the start of the 1999 football campaign, we here at the Herald wish the area's eight teams the best of luck in this so-called "second season" and look forward to those greater achievements with great anticipation.

Indian gambling has become one of history's most explosively successful anti-poverty programs.

Gaming may not win approval from all quarters, but it's hard to beat as a money-raiser. More than 100 enterprising Native American tribes have found that catering to a growing taste for gambling at tribal casinos offers a quick route to business success.

The casino business in the 1980s and 1990s was dubbed "the new buffalo" for tribes that had languished in obscurity and poverty.

That's why Gov. George W. Bush and the state of Texas look legalistic and mean-spirited rather than policy-minded when they attack the Tiguas' right to operate their Speaking Rock casino near El Paso. ... Bush and (Attorney General John) Cornyn may be correct in arguing that a clear legal ruling on the issue is needed.

But the Tiguas are persuasive when they suggest that the hair-splitting quest is more about political grandstanding than passion for upholding the law.

And they're right in arguing that a state whose lottery involves it deeply in the gambling business looks like a bully when it attacks a small tribe of about 1,500 that has picked itself up by the bootstraps.

Feres doctrine: Malpractice and the corpsman

Michael James Carter, a Navy corpsman, hanged himself on the evening of Feb.

4, 1995. His widow's suit against the United States is now pending in the Supreme Court on a petition for review.

Assuming the truth of her allegations, the court should hear her case. Valerie Jane Carter and her children deserve a chance at justice.

Yes, I am harping one more time on what is known in case law as the Feres doctrine. The rule stems from the death of Army Lt. Rudolph Feres in a barracks fire in New York in 1947. His widow, alleging gross negligence, sued the government, but the high court held in a unanimous opinion that she could not recover damages. The government, said the court, "is not liable under the Federal Tort Claims Act for injuries to servicemen where the injuries arise out of or are in the course of activity incident to service."

For the past 49 years, with some notable exceptions, the lower federal courts have dutifully obeyed the Feres rule. It was a bad decision then, and it remains a bad decision now. The Carter case provides an excellent opportunity to overrule it.

This is the sad story: On June 3, 1994, Carter was off duty and off base. He was driving his own car on a public highway on a personal errand. He collided with a second private automobile, driven by a civilian. A private ambulance took him to a private hospital, where a doctor treated him for severe whiplash and gave him a neck brace.

A few days later Carter began to experience depression and unexplained outbursts of anger. A civilian psychiatrist, under contract with the Navy, treated him with prescription drugs. Carter returned to his corpsman's duties at the Presidio in Monterey, Calif., but his condition steadily worsened. In September he suffered a loss of consciousness and was taken to a naval hospital. In early January 1995, the Navy ordered him back to active duty and assigned him to serve as a corpsman at Oakland Naval Hospital.

Doctors performed two spinal taps, but classified his problems officially as "psychological" in nature. On Feb. 1, upon his own initiative, Carter requested admission to the hospital's psychiatric ward under a 24-hour suicide watch. After further examination, his doctors decided to insert a "shunt" in the rear of his skull and scheduled the operation for Monday the 6th. As part of the procedure, they took him off the anti-depressant drugs.

Carter's widow states that on Saturday the 4th, her husband "exhibited severe depression and anxiety." She charges:

"Military medical personnel on duty repeatedly requested that the treating naval psychiatrist in charge examine and return him to suicide watch.

The naval psychiatrist in charge refused to examine him; he also refused to return him to suicide watch. On the evening of Feb. 4 in the Oakland Naval Hospital, where he was left unattended and alone, he hanged himself with a bed sheet. He died because and only because defendant refused the earlier requested suicide watch."

Those charges would have to be proved in court — if Mrs. Carter could get in court. The U.S. District Court, citing the Feres doctrine, granted the government's motion to dismiss. The 9th Circuit affirmed in a brief memorandum: "We have often criticized the Feres doctrine but were nevertheless bound to apply it. Limiting the reach of Feres, given its decades-long vitality, has become a matter for either Congress or the Supreme Court."

Certain aspects of the case of Corpsman Carter deserve emphasis. In the original Feres opinion of 1950, Justice Robert Jackson acknowledged that the court was proceeding without guidance in interpreting the Tort Claims Act. There were no committee reports or floor debates. He felt a persuasive case could be made that the act does indeed cover negligence by military personnel. The act was intended to make the government liable "in the same manner and to the same extent as a private individual under like circumstances." In the usual civilian doctor and patient relationship, "there is of course a liability for malpractice." But military service, involving a chain of command, is different.

Note that the Feres doctrine applies only to injuries that arise in the course of activity "incident to service." Carter was off duty, off base, driving his own car on errands that had nothing whatever to do with military duties. He was not hospitalized pursuant to military order. His death was not caused by a service-connected injury. Only by torturing the language and the facts could a court conclude that the damages to Carter's brain were "incident to service."

The federal district and circuit courts are plainly in doubt about the Feres rule. A 1988 case, known as Cortez, involved a service member who had been admitted to a military hospital following a suicide attempt. Left alone, he jumped from an eighth-floor window to his death. The 5th Circuit held that his suit was not barred by the Feres rule. The government did not appeal. The 4th, 9th and 11th Circuits also have refused to follow Feres slavishly.

The most significant criticism of Feres came in 1987 from four members of the Supreme Court itself. Speaking through Justice Antonin Scalia, they agreed in dissent that "Feres was wrongly decided and heartily deserves the widespread, almost universal criticism it has received."

All this is gratifying, but perhaps not greatly gratifying to Valerie Jane Carter. She lives in Honolulu now, with her children, 9-year-old Andrea, 8-year-old Robyn and 5-year-old Michael.

As civilians they could have sued the pants off a civilian psychiatrist. Corpsman Carter served his country. Who ever said life is fair?

I FOUND PRESIDENT REAGAN TO BE...HOW DO I PUT THIS DELICATELY...

THE BOOK DESPERATELY NEEDED THE PRESENCE OF A BOLD DYNAMIC, INTELLECTUAL GIANT.

...BANAL, VICIOUS, BORING... A VALUABLE, TOTALLY OUT OF TOUCH WITH REALITY.

...THAT'S WHERE I COME IN.

Darwin's theory on origin of life is bunk

To put it plainly, Darwin's theory of the origin of life and its evolution is bunk.

Scientific evidence points to intelligent design, a fact inconsistent with Darwinism and perfectly consistent with religion.

Evolution is just part of the secular world's basic dogma, which is why evolutionists react so hysterically and maliciously when the flaws of the theory are exposed. The whole poisonous stew of modern philosophy, which began in the 19th century and flowered in the 20th century in the form of socialism and its offshoots — Nazism, fascism, communism and materialism — rest on the basic premise that there is no God.

Many people, including some Christians, have not realized the momentous import of that issue. If there is no God, human life is not sacred, not even valuable. And if human life has no particular value, then a concept such as human rights becomes meaningless. And killing people for whatever reason is also quite acceptable. This is what has produced what Pope John Paul II has called the culture of death.

A new book, "The Lost Literature of Socialism" by George Watson (Cambridge: the Lutterworth Press) shows both the elitist and murderous aspects of socialism, the umbrella philosophy of modernity. "In the European century that began the 1840s," he writes "from Engels' article of 1849 down to the death of Hitler, everyone who advocated genocide called himself a socialist, and no exception has been found."

Darwin — like the Greek astronomer Ptolemy, whose Earth-in-the-center-of-the-universe theory was accepted fact for centuries — may have made some reasonable suppositions, given the limits of knowledge in his day. However, what has undone his theory has not been preachers but honest scientists.

The fossil record not only does not support Darwin, it contradicts him. It shows abrupt appearance of species that hang around with relatively few changes and then disappear.

The laws of probability rule out his by-chance creation of life in the primordial soup. Astronomer Fred Hoyle put it quite elegantly: The probability is the same as it is for a tornado moving through a junkyard to create a Boeing 747 from random tossing about of the debris.

Finally, and most conclusively, as Darwin himself foresaw, the discovery that living organisms are "irreducibly complex" drives the wooden stake through his theory. As one biochemist has put it, the only logical inferences to be drawn point toward intelligent design.

If you'd like to read more, you can order a copy of a special issue of Touchstone Magazine from The Fellowship of St. James, P.O. Box 3000, Denville, NJ 07834-9986. Ask for the issue on intelligent design. It contains a good summary of the latest evidence on intelligent design in articles written by scientists, lawyers and scholars. It's $11, including shipping and handling.

But don't expect the Darwinians to accept defeat gracefully or even admit it. Too much is at stake, and they will fight tenaciously. At least now, however, they will have to rely on polemics and semantic tricks, not on science. They will have their scientists all right, but "scientist," like "journalist" or "bricklayer" — refers to a vocation, not to any sort of special human being. A scientist, like any other human, can be evil or dishonest or a Marxist or a Nazi in addition to being a scientist.

Just remember that once you reject God, you reject the value and dignity of your own life. As many a survivor of this miserable century's horrors can tell you, it isn't necessary to die to find hell.

Death toll in London train crash could reach 70 as wreckage examined

LONDON (AP) — Fearing the death toll in the London commuter train crash could rise beyond 70, authorities today arranged for grieving survivors to visit the site even while the search for the dead continues in the charred and twisted wreckage.

"These are people who are firmly convinced that their loved ones are among the dead," said Superintendent Tony Thompson, spokesman for the British Transport Police. "They want to go to the scene so they can start the grieving process."

Police said today that a scaffold would be erected around a severely burned first-class carriage where a number of people are believed to have died. The scaffold is intended to support the wreckage to protect police and salvage workers and to afford a degree of privacy, Thompson said.

Thirty-three people are known to have died when the two commuter trains collided at the height of the morning rush hour Tuesday. At least 150 people were injured, 14 seriously.

Rescuers toiled at the site all day Wednesday, suspending their efforts at nightfall and awaiting the arrival today of a 100-ton crane capable of moving and stabilizing the burned-out carriage.

Seventy people who are known to have boarded the trains had not been accounted for by late Wednesday. The 28 bodies may be from among that number.

Police said they had received the names of an additional 100 people whose relatives said they might have been on the trains. They appealed to anyone who survived the crash to let authorities know they were safe.

"Clearly, this has been the most appalling, dreadful tragedy, and we now have to brace ourselves for an even higher death toll," Prime Minister Tony Blair said Wednesday.

Authorities promised a swift and thorough investigation. The crash occurred on the same stretch of track where a 1997 crash killed seven people and injured 150.

Great Western, which operated one of the trains that crashed Tuesday, had been fined $2.47 million for "dereliction of duty" in connection with the earlier crash.

Defense portrays victim as threatening criminal during Rodriguez murder trial

UVALDE (AP) — The man country singer Johnny Rodriguez is accused of murdering was on probation for burglary and had a history of arrests for offenses including theft and assault.

That's the image of Israel "Basco" Borrego defense attorneys are trying to portray before a Uvalde County jury deciding Rodriguez's fate. Lawyers for the singer claim Rodriguez was acting in self-defense when he shot Borrego, thinking he was an intruder breaking into his mother's house in Sabinal, about 60 miles west of San Antonio.

"Johnny Rodriguez, just like anyone else, has the right to protect themselves and their property from known burglars," defense lawyer Jay Norton said in opening statements.

Prosecutor Tony Hackbeil alleged Rodriguez fatally shot Borrego during an angry drinking binge on Aug. 29, 1998.

The first prosecution witness, Sabinal police officer Guillermo "Willie" Quirova, testified Rodriguez was drunk and kicking Borrego on a kitchen floor when he arrived at the shooting scene.

"Nobody comes into my house. I'll shoot you and I'll shoot anybody who comes into my house," Quirova quoted Rodriguez as saying to Borrego as he allegedly kicked and cursed.

Borrego, 26, died of a gunshot wound to the lower abdomen at a hospital shortly after the shooting.

Rodriguez, 47, could face life in prison if convicted.

Several of Rodriguez's hits such as "Pass Me By (If You're Only Passing Through)" soared into the Top 10 on the country charts in the 1970s, sending the South Texas crooner into the national spotlight.

In the weeks before the shooting, Rodriguez stayed at his mother's home in Sabinal and played music informally with longtime friends at neighborhood gatherings, testimony showed.

The night of the shooting, Borrego was an uninvited guest at a party across the street from the Rodriguez home at the house of Carlos Tovar. Norton told the jury.

But Hackbeil said Borrego was a frequent guest of Rodriguez and Tovar at drinking parties, sometimes cooking for Rodriguez and spending the night at his house.

Norton emphasized Borrego's criminal history, noting he was on probation for burglary and was arrested or suspected in other crimes including assault on his wife and stealing steaks from a cafe.

"People in Sabinal knew Basco," Norton said. "The problem is, Johnny Rodriguez really didn't know him."

*Your need for security dominates all of your choices, presently. A financial investment might actually be too good to be true. Reconsider or think through a decision. Reorganize your work in order to maximize efficiency. Tonight: Browse decorating magazines to find a new look for your home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

* Aim for excellent communication, worrying less about others' opinions. Partners present ideas that seem (and probably are) too good to be true. Let others add their magic to your day. Smile - the world hears your message loud and clear. Laughter is a healing tonic. Tonight: Favorite people, favorite locale.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

*Expenses seem unimportant as you look at a wonderful business arrangement. You have tremendous faith that a new door is opening. Consider positive changes at home - perhaps a new computer or scanner is needed to make your life run more smoothly. Tonight: Let it all happen.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

*You could be nostalgic and romantic about a relationship. Be sure that you aren't deluding yourself or excessively glamorizing another. Play devil's advocate here. Communication assumes an unusually different tone. Be sure of what you want. Tonight: Just ask - others are only too willing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

Move forward at your own pace and don't let anyone force your hand. Though, to some, you appear to be brooding, you're actually in the process of making an important decision. Talk to someone you trust about restructuring your investments. Tonight: Get some extra ZZZs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

*Be goal-driven, and you'll succeed beyond your wildest dreams. You know exactly what to say, and when to say it. Others gravitate to you; now you see the advantages of teamwork. Meetings bring you closer to the winner's circle. Tonight: Shifting gears.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

* Take the lead and follow through on what is key to you. Listen to your instincts, especially when funds are involved. You could be revamping your thinking about your career and boss. Nothing is carved in stone, presently, so don't worry about making a mistake. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

*What appears to others to be a whimsical or dreamy quality benefits you by helping you see what is going on before it happens. You are a crusader, a pattern breaker. Your decisions and choices often confuse others. You revise your opinion about a friend one more time. Tonight: Take off as soon as you can.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

*Opt to work in tandem with a partner; however, you don't have to share everything that is on your mind. Sometimes your imagination goes haywire. Maintain a high profile, even though you still need to revise your opinion of a boss or someone in charge.

Tonight: Dinner for two.

Use empathy, respect with people who have mental illness

By VALERIE AVERY
Big Spring State Hospital

People who are carrying on a conversation with themselves in a public place should not be feared, but treated with empathy and respect, mental health experts recommend.

"I think the general public is afraid of people with mental illness because their illness is not something that can be seen," said Kathy Salazar, Big Spring State Hospital director of social work services. "Instead, what we see are the symptoms of the illness, where they may talk to themselves or make odd gestures."

The most common form of mental illness is schizophrenia, where people believe they are carrying on a conversation with someone no one else can see. Many others believe they control things that occur in the environment, such as tornadoes, earthquakes or hurricanes.

For example, many people with schizophrenia believe the recent flooding on the east coast was caused by something they did or neglected.

"That's a heavy load for people to carry around, thinking that they caused these problems," Salazar said. "That causes additional stress and worsens the condition."

About one in 100 people develop a schizophrenic disorder in their lifetime. It occurs more often in men and usually is seen in the late teens and early 20s. It typically affects women in the late 20s to early 30s. The medical community does not know what causes the brain disease. Schizophrenia is treated with medication, but medications don't always control it, Salazar said.

When encountering someone with mental illness in a restaurant or any other public place, experts advise treating them like any other person.

• Give them space. This does-

'It's an illness like any other illness. We don't treat people with diabetes differently. They have the same rights as anyone else.'

Robin Riha

n't mean changing tables at a restaurant, but not surprising them or startling them from behind. "A lot of times, a person (with mental illness) may not even notice that you are around," Salazar said.

• Feel free to speak to the person talking to themselves. "People who are talking to themselves and having hallucinations usually can focus on a conversation in their environment for a brief period of time," Salazar said. "The person may appreciate having someone speak to them."

• Leave them alone if they are not intrusive to you, said Robin Riha, assistant director of social services for BSSH. "You shouldn't be afraid," she said. "The majority of the mentally ill are not violent or hostile."

Very rarely does a person with schizophrenia lash out at others, Salazar agreed.

They may try to defend themselves in a situation if they believe they are threatened.

"They don't go out and try to harm the general public," she said. "They are more likely to be a victim, because a lot of times they are not cognizant of what is going on in their environment and are very trusting."

• If a person with mental illness approaches you and requests money, treat the situation how you think is best. "I know at the hospital, we tell that's not appropriate behavior, and we won't give them money," Riha said. "If you're respectful and polite, there should be no problem. Just let them know you don't have any money to give them."

• Many restaurant owners in Big Spring have created a rapport with some of their customers with mental illness. "Some business owners are very good to people with mental illness," Salazar said. "Maybe they'll give them a meal in return for sweeping or carrying out the trash. This connection lends some support to them."

"If they see them walking around in hot weather with a heavy coat, they need to say, 'Take off the coat. Your body's going to get overheated.' That kind of interaction comes best from someone they have come to know and trust."

Restaurant owners might tell people with schizophrenia that they are getting too loud while talking to themselves, Riha said.

"They respond OK to that," she said. "They don't realize they are doing it. They actually think they are talking to a voice, and they usually appreciate that. They don't want to stand out."

• If children ask their parents what is wrong with the person talking to him or herself, Riha recommends telling the child that the person has an illness that affects their mind.

Most importantly, people with mental illness should be included in community activities.

"It is important for a human being to be connected to other people and have a support system and people to talk to," Salazar said. "A lot of times they are made fun of. They understand (being made fun of) at some level. They deserve the same level of respect."

"It's an illness like any other illness," Riha said. "We don't treat people with diabetes differently. They have the same rights as anyone else."

When researching heritage, check in less obvious places

When people talk about patriotism, many think of John Wayne. The actor was a very outspoken man when it came to our American patriotism and was not shy to speak up against anyone or anything that he believed was un-American.

BOBBY RAWLS

About 15 years ago I bought an eight-track tape performed by Wayne called "America, Why I Love Her." It was set to music with Wayne speaking his various thoughts about our way of life here in America.

In one, a young soldier is marching and Wayne asks, "Why are you marching son?" He then proceeds to explain why we Americans should be so proud and willing to defend our nation in time of war, and the rewards we enjoy by the sacrifices of others.

In another he talks about hyphenated-Americans, and says why do we call ourselves "African-Americans, Mexican-Americans, German-Americans, etc. Why can't we be just Americans?"

In yet another, he comes up to an old farmhouse, with the barn falling down, the fields dry and the crops wilted, the land dusty and windblown. An old farmer comes out of the house and Wayne asks "Why do you stay, why don't you just go?" and the old man answers in Spanish "my roots are buried here."

There are many heroes in American history; these people have filled many pages with stories of their heroism and loyalty.

However, there were many people in our great nation that sacrificed as much or more than some of our noted heroes, they just were not noted in the history books.

When you think of wars, most people think first of the generals, and captains who led the armies, but forget the others who played an important role in the victories for us and the defeat of our foes. People like the doctors who helped save the lives of soldiers, blacksmiths that kept the horses and wagons going, cooks who had to make the meals for many with enough food for only a few.

How many inventions were designed and built right here in America? How did these inventions catapult us ahead of other nations in almost all aspects? What would we do, or where would we be if not for these inventions, or the people who invented them?

Heroes come in all forms. Like the farmer who would not be beaten, many of our ancestors gave as much or more to the freedom of America that the notable one did, yet cannot be found in the history books.

When you research your ancestors, look not just for the obvious sources, but the lesser-known sources as well. Check out school lists, jury lists, list for road gangs, on census check out the occupations to see where they worked, whom they worked for or with. Check out the chain carriers on deeds, ferriers, trappers or traders, scouts, riverboat crews, dock loaders, etc.

Our ancestors left paper trails even if they themselves could not read or write. There are may "X's" or marks used for their signatures on old records. If they bought livestock, they many times executed deeds or bills of sale.

Do not overlook any source, no matter how insignificant it may seem.

If anyone out there has or knows where a tape or record by John Wayne is, would you please let me know. I do appreciate your response and your readership.

Next week, North Carolina records, where they are and how to use them.

Plaia, Robinson to be honored Oct. 14

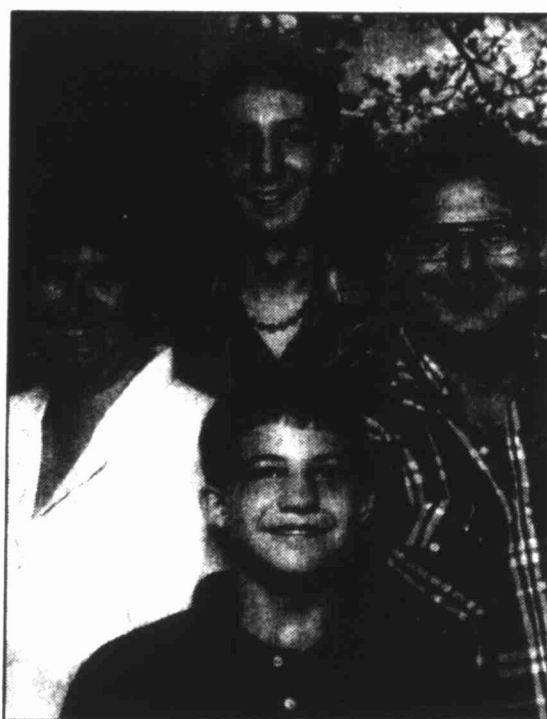

By DEBBIE L. JENSEN
Features Editor

The Plaia family of Big Spring and businesswoman Myra Robinson will be among those honored Thursday, Oct. 14 by Samaritan Counseling Center.

The center, which serves the Midland, Odessa and Big Spring communities, named the Plaia Family of the Year for Big Spring, honoring them as a healthy role model for church and community involvement. Robinson was chosen Ethics in Business Award winner for Big Spring, honored for her ethical practices in more than 25 years at the helm of Robinson Drilling.

The local residents, along with those honored from the other cities, will be guests at a banquet at Green Tree Country Club. Keynote speaker is author/minister Phillip Gulley who has written several books, including "Front Porch Tales" and "For Everything A Season."

The Plaia family, including father John, mother Charlotte and sons Justin and Joshua, arrived in Big Spring five years ago and have capitalized on opportunities for service and family time, according to their nomination. Membership at First

The Plaia family, Charlotte and John with sons Justin (back) and Joshua, were named Family of the Year for Big Spring by the Samaritan Counseling Center.

United Methodist Church has given them many such opportunities.

They have cooked, served with committees, men's and women's groups, driven vans and built stage and props. They have volunteered with Christmas in April, and worked on a mission project in Del Rio.

John works as east district superintendent for Colorado River Municipal Water District. He has also worked for various youth sports leagues in the community. Charlotte is a part-time aide at Head Start who enjoys baking bread and supporting their sons in their many activities.

Elder son Justin, 15, enjoys speech and drama classes, takes Bible study and sings in the church choir and Spirit Wind Choir of the Northwest Methodist Conference. He wants to serve in the Air Force.

Joshua, 12, plays football for Big Spring Junior High School. He participates in handball choir, played on a Little League team, and has interest in science and video games.

Myra Robinson received the ethics award for her leadership of family-owned company, Robinson Drilling, according to her nomination.

G.R. "Bob" Robinson started the company 52 years ago, his wife working alongside him. When he died in a 1972 automobile accident, Myra stepped in full time and kept the business going.

Sharing credit with some longtime employees, including several who have been with the company for decades, she said "they are the only way in the world I would have survived."

The October banquet is a major fundraiser for the center, which offers pastoral counseling services. For ticket information, call (915) 563-4144.

Helling's comments indicate Rangers have inferiority complex

NEW YORK (AP) — If Rick Helling really believes what he says, the Texas Rangers have a major inferiority complex.

"Nobody expects us to win," said Helling, who will try to get the Rangers back into their first-round AL playoff series against the New York Yankees tonight. "To me, all the pressure is on the Yankees. They won the first game."

Not exactly a Texas attitude. Then again, Orlando Hernandez held the Rangers to two hits in eight innings and Bernie Williams had six RBIs in New York's series-opening 8-0 win Tuesday night. The Rangers have lost seven straight postseason games, all to the Yankees, and have been blanked in 22 consecutive playoffs innings.

"Obviously, if you're down one, it's a lot more important game," said Andy Pettitte (14-11), the Yankees' starter opposite Helling (13-11). "But it's still important. If we can get the second game here and go there to Texas up two, we feel confident."

Sound familiar? After the Yankees beat Texas in last year's postseason opener, Pettitte faced Helling in Game 2 and led New York to a 3-1 win, allowing one run and three hits in seven innings with eight strikeouts.

Helling gave up three runs and eight hits in six innings.

"It was just like it has been so far in all these games against the Yankees," Helling said Wednesday. "We got out-pitched a little bit, didn't score enough runs to win."

Helling, who traveled from the team hotel to the Bronx by limo, was the only Rangers player in sight at Yankee Stadium on Wednesday, with manager Johnny Oates giving his team a day off. About half the Yankees showed for an optional workout.

The clubhouse mood was businesslike. The Yankees need 10 more wins to achieve their goal of a third World Series title in four seasons, and they're hoping to find the consistency that led them to a record 125 wins a year ago.

New York is hoping Pettitte will pitch with confidence, as he did in a record 21-3 victory at Arlington on Aug. 23.

"They're a scary team to play against because you know they're going to break loose," New York's Paul O'Neill said. "They're going to score runs when it's all said and done."

Texas hopes so. The Rangers have just one run in their last 42 playoff innings.

"We're a very good offensive ball club," said Rangers general manager Doug Melvin, whose team led the American League in batting for the second straight year. "We'll break out of it somewhere along the line here. Just hope that it's sooner than later."

Texas might have its best chance against Pettitte, a Texan from Deer Park. Juan Gonzalez is 10-for-22 (.455) against the left-hander, Rusty Greer is 9-for-25 (.360), Todd Zeile 5-for-14 (.357) and Rafael Palmeiro 13-for-44 (.295) with four homers and nine RBIs.

It should be noted, however, that the Rangers have hit him a lot better in Arlington than in New York.

Butler eyes 5-4A opener cautiously

Steers' struggles
at Fort Stockton cause for worry

By JOHN A. MOSELEY
Sports Editor

With his unbeaten Steers off to their best start since 1991 and poised to open District 5-4A play facing a Fort Stockton team that has managed an unimpressive 2-3 start, it seems odd to hear Big Spring head coach Dwight Butler admit being concerned about the Panthers.

That is, of course, unless one knows about the Steers' history where Fort Stockton is concerned — especially when they have to travel into the Panthers' den.

"We've traditionally had trouble down there," Butler said as he looked forward to Friday's 7:30 p.m. kickoff at Panther Stadium. "We just want to get out of Fort Stockton alive."

Butler remembers all too well the 1997 season when his team was 6-1 overall and 2-0 in district play when it traveled to Fort Stockton and suffered a 33-22 defeat.

"You don't forget nights like that," Butler said, making it clear he certainly doesn't want a repeat performance this week. "There's just something about those games where you know you're better than someone and wind up getting beat that never leaves you."

Turnovers and mistakes in the Steers' kicking game cost them dearly in that loss two seasons ago, and Butler said he and his staff have stressed the basics during the past two weeks in practices.

"We got a little sloppy near the end of pre-district play and I think a lot of that was simply mental fatigue," Butler explained. "But with the open date, we've had a chance to get rested and we ought to be focused on what we have to do."

Simply put, Butler makes it clear the Steers' impressive 5-0 start won't mean a thing if they don't take care of business on Friday.

"What we've tried to tell the kids these last two weeks is that we've learned some things in those first five games," he explained. "We've learned that we can play on the road and we've learned we can come from behind if we need to. But we've learned that we're not very good when we're not

Big Spring tailback Colby Ford (14) breaks into the open en route to scoring one of the five touchdowns he scored in the Steers' win over Lubbock Estacado. Ford enters Friday's District 5-4A opener in Fort Stockton averaging more than 150 yards per game and has scored 10 touchdowns this season.

"Now we're starting over ... just like everyone else in the district," he added. "What we've done to now doesn't mean anything except what we've learned. You have to take those lessons from those first five and use them to help you when it counts."

And it will certainly count Friday.

Butler admits his biggest concern about facing the Panthers team is a defensive unit that literally shut down Levelland in a 7-6 win last week.

"They've gotten better and better every week and I think the way they shut down Levelland last week ought to open everyone's eyes," Butler said. "They put the clamps on an offense that scored four touchdowns against Sweetwater and three against Andrews. Comparative scores don't mean anything, but they are playing great defense."

That puts pressure on the Steers' offensive unit to perform to its capabilities. And to date, that's been fairly impressive.

Junior tailback Colby Ford and senior quarterback Lance Brock spearhead the Big Spring offense which has averaged better than 360 yards per game.

Ford enters district play averaging 156.4 yards and two touchdowns per game, having piled up 782 yards on 115 carries. He leads the team in scoring with 10 touchdowns.

Brock has completed 28 of 52 passes for 529 touchdowns and five touchdowns in the first five weeks of the season, while being intercepted just twice.

However, Butler admits the week off from competitive action could leave the Steers seeming a little rusty at the outset Friday. The important thing, he says, is "to make sure we don't do anything stupid until we get into the flow of the game."

Big Spring's defense, which in some cases has been overshadowed by the Steers' high-powered offense, could be the key to making sure there's time to get into that flow.

Big Spring's defense has allowed its opponents an average of only 130 yards per game and has been particularly tough against the run.

"They're not scoring a lot of points so far this season, but with the way they've played defense, they don't have to," Butler noted.

"That's really where they've gotten better and better, too. They're throwing the ball a little better and that's opening up the running game a little more for them."

Aikman knows pain McNabb
feels in Philly

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It's been 10 years, three Super Bowl titles and a whole lot of hits since Troy Aikman endured a 1-15 rookie season with the Dallas Cowboys.

He seems like the perfect guy to ask about what the Philadelphia Eagles are trying to do with Donovan McNabb.

Unlike McNabb, Aikman was thrown right into the starting lineup by coach Jimmy Johnson in 1989. The results were forgettable; Aikman made a career's worth of mistakes, was sacked more times than he can remember and stepped onto the field every week with doubts about whether he could play in the NFL.

"We were 0-11 as a starter my rookie season," Aikman said Wednesday, his past experience serving as the backdrop to the Cowboys' game against the struggling Eagles this week. "You invest so much time and energy into the sport for your team to have success. To come up short each and every week, that takes a real toll on you."

The Eagles (0-4) have resisted every temptation to start their heralded rookie. McNabb, the No. 2 overall draft pick and the future of a franchise with a mostly insufferable history, stands on the sideline and watches veteran backup Doug Pederson take his lumps.

In his few chances at relief duty, McNabb's results have been even worse than Pederson's. Neither quarterback has led the offense on a touchdown drive in 15 quarters, dating to the first quarter of the season opener against Arizona.

Though he wavered this week, Eagles coach Andy Reid is sticking with his plan to have McNabb watch and learn until further notice.

"I've heard some people say that they feel it's better to bring a young quarterback along slowly," Aikman said. "I've heard others say that you don't really learn unless you're in the fire and kind of learning on the job. I don't really know which is best. I was thrown in there immediately and took my lumps along with the football team."

Reid's first move when hired by the Eagles was to bring Pederson with him from Green Bay, where Reid coached quarterbacks and Pederson watched Brett Favre work magic.

Through four weeks, it's obvious that the Eagles are one of

Braves' 5-1 win over Astros evens series as it heads to Houston

ATLANTA (AP) — For two years, Kevin Millwood sat quietly in the Atlanta Braves bullpen, waiting for a chance to pitch in the NL playoffs. It never happened.

When the opportunity finally came Wednesday, Millwood made sure he would not be overlooked again. His first postseason game turned out to be one of the greatest in baseball history.

Millwood threw a one-hitter — facing only two batters above the minimum — and the Braves left Atlanta with a critical 5-1 victory over the Houston Astros, squaring the first-round NL series at one game apiece.

"I wish I could pitch every day if it's going to be like this," Millwood said.

He allowed a second-inning homer to Ken Caminiti, but that was all. It was the first complete-game one-hitter in the postseason since Boston's Jim Lonborg in Game 2 of the 1967 World Series.

Tom Glavine and Mark Wohlers combined on a one-hitter for the Braves against Cleveland in Game 6 of the 1995 World Series. There were two other combined one-hitters in league championship series.

"The biggest thing for me was getting our team a win," the 24-year-old Millwood said. "It didn't matter if it was a one-hitter or an 11-hitter. It was a win."

He didn't pitch at all the last two seasons while the Braves were knocked out in the NL championship series. The first year was not surprising — he was a midseason call-up — but Millwood won 17 games in 1998 and still didn't pitch.

"My number never came up," he said, showing no trace of bitterness.

The Braves couldn't pass him by this year. Millwood stepped up to become Atlanta's most consistent starter while Greg Maddux, Tom Glavine and John Smoltz — with seven Cy Youngs among them — went through assorted problems.

"He is probably the top pitcher over all the Cy Youngs this year," said Brian Jordan, who had two RBIs for the Braves. "He is the guy who kind of carried the load in the first half when the other guys were struggling."

With the Braves desperate for a victory after losing the first game 6-1 Tuesday, Millwood bounced back from Caminiti's homer by retiring 15 straight. Houston's only other baserunner was Jeff Bagwell, who reached on Chipper Jones' seventh-inning error.

"I am pretty low key," Millwood said. "I don't get too up or too down over anything. I think about the eighth inning, I started getting real excited out there. I had to calm myself down."

The Braves broke open a 2-1 game with three runs in the seventh. Jordan had a sacrifice fly, followed by RBI singles from Ryan Klesko and Andruw Jones.

"A stronger game has not been pitched against us all year long," Houston manager Larry Dierker said. "We really only hit two balls hard the whole game."

But the Astros got what they wanted in Atlanta — a split. The best-of-5 series now shifts to the Astrodome, where the next two games will be played Friday and Saturday. If a fifth game is needed, it would be at Turner Field on Sunday.

Good news for the Astros: Millwood is not scheduled to pitch again if the Braves stick to their normal rotation.

Millwood's performance was outstanding, but hardly atypical. In his lone appearance against Houston during the regular season, he allowed just two hits in seven innings. In three other starts, he also allowed only two hits.

Overall, Millwood finished second in the NL to Arizona's Randy Johnson with a 2.68 ERA and led the majors by allowing hitters a .202 average.

"Between him and Johnson, they can go for the Cy Young," said Houston starter Jose Lima, who allowed nine hits and four runs in 6 2/3 innings.

The Braves got to Lima in the first inning, with Gerald Williams scoring on Jordan's two-out, broken-bat single. Lima might have been flustered by a

Textiles Woven Into History

The Story of Fabrics

Take a look at the clothes you are wearing. Clothes are made from fabrics, or textiles.

People have made textiles from:

Fabulous fabrics

Flax

Flax is probably the oldest natural fiber to be made into fabric. It is used to make linen.

The strands of the flax plant are like the stringy bits of celery. Because the fibers are very strong, linen does not tear easily.

For thousands of years, people used it to make clothes and things needing extra strength, such as sails. Early ocean voyages might have been impossible without it.

Cloth of gold

The pharaohs of ancient Egypt wore garments made with thin threads of beaten gold. Some fabrics had up to 500 gold threads per one inch of cloth. Not even the very finest Chinese silk had this many threads.

Egyptian slaves spent hundreds of hours tapping out gold to make fine threads no thicker than a hair.

The Mini Page celebrates the millennium with a two-part series about the history of fabrics.

Asbestos

Asbestos (as-BES-tuhs) is a mineral found in rocks. When the rocks are broken apart, it is easy to pull the asbestos into fibers.

It is special because it does not burn. It has been used in thousands of ways, including for firefighter's clothing, in cars and airplanes.

However, asbestos can cause serious health problems to people who mine it or make things with it. If people breathe it in, it can choke their lungs or cause cancer.

People have been making cloth out of asbestos for thousands of years. Ancient Egyptians wrapped dead bodies in it before burial.

About 1,000 years ago, people in the present-day area of Afghanistan, Iraq and Iran wore asbestos clothing. They didn't wash their clothes in water; they threw them in the fire. This burned off the dirt and left the clothes white.

The Mini Page thanks R. Alan Donaldson, professor of Textiles and Apparel, Technology and Management at North Carolina State University, for help with this issue.

History-Making Fabrics

Silk was so important that it changed the course of history. Other fabrics have played a role in history, too.

Silk

Silk is a beautiful, soft, shiny fiber that can be dyed in rich colors. It is lightweight and warm, and the strongest natural fiber.

About 5,000 years ago, a queen in China discovered how to make silk from silkworm cocoons. For about 3,000 years, the Chinese kept her discovery a secret.

The silkworm's cocoon is made of fibers hundreds of feet long. Chinese women put the cocoons in hot water to loosen the silk strands. Then they pulled out the long strands and wound them onto a bamboo cane. They had to be very, very patient.

Silk copies

Because poor people could not afford real silk, they tried to make other cloth look silky. Women beat on cotton with sticks to soften the fibers. Then they rubbed and rubbed it against a big stone to make it shiny.

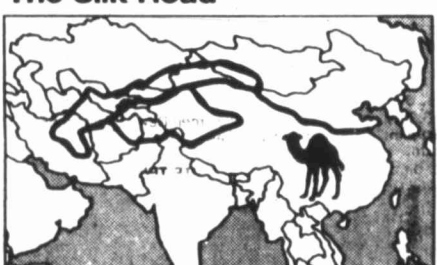

This shiny cotton was called "chintz." Because chintz was a cheaper copy of silk, calling something "chintzy" means it is cheap and not of good quality.

Look through your newspaper for ads about clothes. What fabrics do you think they are made of?

Next week, in the last in our series on textiles, The Mini Page looks at the history of cloth-making.

The Silk Road

Merchants traveling the Silk Road had to travel for months across harsh lands. They had to deal with bandits, scorching deserts and mountain blizzards.

Because silk was so beautiful, and the Chinese were the only ones who knew how to make it, it was very valuable. It was so popular in the Roman Empire that it was against the law for men to wear silk clothes. The Roman emperor thought people were paying too much money for it.

Several roads from China to the Roman Empire were built to handle the silk trade. These became known as the Silk Road.

In exchange for their silk, Europeans traded the Chinese such things as horses and glass.

People also shared ideas. Buddhists brought their religion from India to China across the Silk Road.

An Italian explorer, Marco Polo, traveled across the Silk Road from Italy to China in the late 1200s. He gave Europeans their first eyewitness report on China, including Chinese inventions such as paper money, the compass, printing and paper-making. He told about wonders such as the use of coal (which Europeans didn't know about), baths with hot and cold running water, and kites that carried men in the air.

His stories were so amazing that at first no one believed them. They wanted to see for themselves. The Silk Road opened doors between two very different cultures.

Cotton

Cotton comes from the cotton plant. It can be strong enough for blue jeans or soft enough for baby clothes. The Aztecs were growing it 8,000 years ago in Mexico.

In 1793, Eli Whitney invented the cotton engine, or gin. It separated cotton fiber from seeds about 50 times faster than humans could. Cotton growers could now make more money than ever, so they wanted to plant more and more.

Raising cotton took a lot of workers. As growers planted more cotton, they needed more workers. In the United States, Southern cotton growers depended on slaves to do the work. Their fight to keep slavery legal was one of the main causes of the Civil War.

Raising cotton was back-breaking work.

Modern fibers

Rayon, the first human-made fiber, was invented in the late 1800s. Its name comes from "ray," to show how it shines, and "on" because it is like cotton. It is made from the tough, stringy fibers in wood pulp or cotton stems. These fibers are dissolved in chemicals. Rayon fibers are made from the sticky liquid this makes.

Nylon, made in the 1930s, was the first artificial, or synthetic, fiber. Synthetic fibers are not made entirely from plants or animals. They might be made from coal or petroleum. Nylon is made with oil and chemicals.

Nylon gets its name from New York and London, where the first manufacturers were. It is a strong, stretchy fiber used for everything from nylon stockings, to parachutes, to the mesh parts of running shoes.

Meet Lila McCann

Not many teen-agers have No. 1 recording hits. Country singer Lila McCann had such a hit when she was just 15 years old, "I Wanna Fall in Love."

Last year she was nominated for a Best New Female Vocalist award at the Academy of Country Music Awards.

The first time she performed was at age 4, with her father's band.

Lila, who lives in Tacoma, Wash., is a junior in high school. She has four older brothers. She likes in-line skating and shopping. Her mother, who used to be a beautician, now travels with Lila. Her father works for the Department of Defense. He also plays in a country band.
