Poindexter says Reagan knew deal designed to trade arms for hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former National Security Adviser John Poindexter testified today that President Reagan's initial approval of weapons sales to Iran was a straight arms-for-hostages deal.

Breaking months of silence on the Iran-Contra affair, Poindexter made statements that undercut Reagan's own repeated assertions on the affair.

The Navy rear admiral said the initial paper prepared for Reagan made no mention of an attempt to use arms sales as a way of achieving better relations with Iran.

Poindexter said he tore up the document as the arms-to-Iran scheme became unraveled last fall because "I thought it was a significant political embarrassment to the president and I wanted to protect him from possible disclosure of this."

■ Related stories — 2E

In his opening moments in the witness chair, Poindexter undermined one of Reagan's most consistent statements about the affair that has damaged his presidency — that he sold arms to the Iranians as part of a broader diplomatic initiative.

"We did not, repeat, did not, trade weapons or anything else for hostages, nor will we," the president said in a televised speech to the nation in November 1986.

Later, in March 1987, Reagan conceded after receiving the Tower commission report that the deal had "deteriorated" into one that was tantamount to trading arms for hostages.

At the outset of the hearing, Poindexter's lawyer, Richard Beckler, revealed that the former national security adviser had become the target of a criminal investigation.

Basin purchasers post $20/barrel crude oil prices

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

For the first time since January 1986, Permian Basin crude oil purchasers are posting prices at $20 per barrel.

Effective Tuesday morning, Sun Marketing & Refining, Phillips 66 Oil Co., Pride Pipeline Co., Permian Corp. and other area crude purchasers boosted their postings for West Texas Intermediate by 50 cents.

"We've gotten a lot of positive response from producers on the latest move," Mike Spradlin, West Texas district manager for Pride Pipeline said this morning.

A spokesman for Permian Corp. said he expects the upward movement to continue, reaching $22 by the end of the year.

He explained that the Saudis are aiming for $20 prices and that given the $2 per barrel spread between Persian Gulf and domestic prices, that $22 is a reasonable expectation, barring unforeseen developments.

The move caps a four-month, $4 per barrel climb in WTI prices.

After tumbling $1.50 per barrel, to $16 in late February, posted prices began climbing in early March, marking a $1.00 gain in the first week of the month and another 50 cents the following week.

Senators try to link oil tax repeal, trade bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oil state senators mounted a drive Tuesday night to attach repeal of the windfall profits tax on oil companies to a sweeping trade bill and propelled lawmakers into a hard-fought floor fight.

"In our part of the country, which is very hard pressed, this would make for a better Thanksgiving," Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., declared.

Critics attempted to block the repeal move by substituting a doubling of the federal cigarette tax. A fierce parliamentary dogfight followed.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and proponents of repeal brushed aside an array of efforts to block action. The final blow came on a 75-19 vote that tabled, or killed, a move by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., to junk the repeal move and double the cigarette tax.

After oil forces won repeated skirmishes, Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., recessed the Senate for the the night without final action repealing the windfall tax.

That left the issue undecided overnight.

Jousting over the tax, which has not produced revenue in a year and expires in 1991, brought a new complaint from Byrd that "we're not getting anywhere" on the trade bill. It has been on the Senate floor since June 25.

Byrd said adding non-trade amendments such as the windfall profits measure to the bill was merely "prolonging the agony." He has been pushing to finish work on the 1,013-page legislation by Wednesday night but Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said it looked more like Friday.

Still hanging in the trade debate are disputes over President Reagan's plan to reflag Kuwaiti tankers in the Persian Gulf and whether to force action on a proposed Constitutional amendment to balance the budget.

July sales tax shares slightly below last year's level

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

Midland and Odessa finance directors remained optimistic this month after receiving state sales tax shares only slightly below last July's checks, which are issued monthly by the State Comptroller's office.

"I don't like to make prognostications based on one or two months," said Troy Gifford, Midland director of finance. "But the last three months have been heartening."

Midland's share of the state sales tax brought $433,849 to city coffers this month, a figure 5.5 percent below last July's check of $458,903.

A glance at year-to-date sales tax receipts for Midland show the city running 13.62 percent behind last year's sales pace.

The city so far this fiscal year has collected almost $3.89 million as its sales tax share, compared to $4.5 million by July last year.

Odessa Director of Fiscal Services Frank Muser said that city's payment, which was 2.4 percent lower than for the same month last year, "was the best return we've gotten over the last five or six months."

Odessa received a total $396,604 in July sales tax receipts from the Comptroller's Office, compared to $407,396 last July.

Odessa year-to-date figures show the city running 19.45 behind last year's sales tax pace. So far this fiscal year, the city has collected about $3.28 million in sales tax payments. By July 1986, the city had collected $4.08 in sales tax.

The money represents each city's 1-cent share of the state's total 6.25-cent sales tax.

Money the cities received in July represent taxes collected on sales made in May and reported to the Comptroller by June 20.

With receipts this month of $33,566, Andrews fiscal-year-to-date sales tax revenues reached $285,032, a figure 23.34 percent behind last fiscal year's pace.

Lamesa July receipts of $26,932 brought year-to-date revenues to $236,437, 13.07 percent behind the same figure recorded last July.

In Seminole, a July Comptroller's check of $13,598 contributed to a total $112,031 year-to-date payment figure, 24.46 percent behind last year's pace.

Big Spring city administrators received a $102,702 check, bringing total payments for the year to $855,749, a total 7.1 percent behind last year.

Senate strongly favors hike in state taxes, fees

By STEVE LEVINE
and JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — As the governor and House leaders agreed on a solution to the six-month-old budget stalemate Tuesday, the Texas Senate approved a $5.3 billion package of increased state taxes and fees.

"We have got to raise this money and there's no alternative," said chief Senate tax writer Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, after the 23-7 vote. "We've got to keep our penitentiaries open.... We've got to take care of those that are crippled and mentally ill."

Meanwhile, accomodating part of Gov. Bill Clements' call to restrain spending by $530 million, leaders moved close to a final agreement on a $38.4 billion 1988-1989 state budget. The governor emerged from a meeting with House Speaker Gib Lewis Tuesday claiming "a general state of agreement" on what Lewis called a $130 million cut from a previous House-Senate compromise.

"We're very close now," Lewis said after laying out the agreement to Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. "If we can adopt the bottom-line proposal we're talking about right now," he said, Clements will sign a tax bill to pay for it.

Hobby said the plan remains too sketchy for him to sign off. "It's certainly under study, there are some things that are unclear about it," he said.

Hobby said Clements and Lewis brought the agreement to the Senate to turn up the heat on senators and the lieutenant governor, who have called repeatedly for higher spending.

The Lewis-Clements compromise would provide a $441 million increase in funding for higher education, about $60 million less than the Legislature wanted. It would also save about $90 million by delaying advanced stages of the career ladder bonus-pay plan for outstanding teachers.

Clements said the reductions "really don't do damage to either public schools or higher education.

"No one wants to do that," he said.

"And all we're talking about is the size of the increase."

The House-Senate conference committee trying to write an 1988-89 spending plan is waiting on new higher education numbers before starting work again this afternoon.

Public and higher education remains as the last big-ticket item for budget negotiators, and Rep. Jim Rudd, leader of the House team, said they could be finished by the weekend.

Clements expands second special session agenda

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has expanded the agenda of the second called session by adding 19 more issues that Texas legislators can debate.

In a special session lawmakers can discuss only the subjects named by the governor.

However, Clements stressed Tuesday that the primary objective of the session, which ends July 21, is to ease the state's budget crisis.

"We are making good progress," Clements said. "So, it is essential, with only days left in this session, that we not lose sight of our objective,

"As always, our motive must be doing what is in Texas' best interest — and that translates into ensuring that state government be prudent about how it spends taxpayers' dollars," Clements said.

The expanded call includes a proposed constitutional amendment that would establish the Texas Growth Fund to invest state funds in businesses in the state to promote and encourage economic development in the state. The fund is a outgrowth of the governor's Business Development and Jobs Creation Task Force.

The expanded agenda also calls for legislation that would require sports agents recruiting college athletes for professional teams to register with the secretary of state.

Other subjects submitted by the governor included — Issuance of obligations by the state treasurer and investments by the treasurer.

— Legislation relating to the size of school classes and the number of students assigned to each teacher.

— Legislation relating to the career ladder for public school teachers.

— Legislation concerning the misuse of information by a public servant.

— Legislation concerning the review of actions of the State Commission on Judicial Conduct.

Most CDBG funds go to road project

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The City Council Tuesday doled out $1.2 million in federal community development money, giving the biggest chunk to a Lamesa Road project for the east side.

"Instead of scattering the funds, this year we've brought them together to do a major project to make a larger and more lasting impact," said Mayor Carroll Thomas Tuesday.

The project, which will realign Lamesa with its arterial south of U.S. Highway 80, is expected to double traffic into the east side and with it bring jobs and economic development, said Nancy Vickrey, a consultant hired by the city to coordinate the road project.

Car bomb kills at least 12 at Tripoli supermarket

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (AP) — A car bomb exploded today outside a busy supermarket in this northern Lebanese city and police said at least 12 people were killed and 30 wounded.

Another car bomb exploded a half-hour later in eastern Lebanon's ancient city of Baalbek, killing a woman and injuring five other people.

Most of the victims of the Tripoli blast were women and children.

The initial explosion occurred at 11 a.m. (4 a.m. EDT) on Azmi street in a residential neighborhood of this Syrian-policed city. The bomb, placed inside a red Fiat, went off at the entrance to the supermarket, which occupies the first two floors of a seven-story residential building, reporters said.

The explosion, only 200 yards from a Syrian army checkpont, started a fire that gutted the supermarket and a basement warehouse full of medical supplies, reporters on the scene said.

Window glass at a maternity hospital several hundred yards away was shattered, but no casualties were reported at the hospital.

Ambulances, their sirens wailing, evacuated the casualties from the scene to several clinics and hospitals in the city, 53 miles north of Beirut, one reporter said.

The blast demolished three cars parked nearby and badly damaged 20 other vehicles on both sides of the street.

There were no casualties among the Syrian soldiers manning the nearby checkpoint.

Helmeted Syrian soldiers rushed to the scene and sealed off the area. They fired into the air to make way for ambulances and fire engines.

The second bomb, concealed in a red Mercedes Benz, exploded in Baalbek, which is 31 miles from Tripoli and also controlled by Syrian troops.

On Sunday during a rally in Tripoli during which pro-Syrian leftist and Moslem leaders called for a showdown with Lebanon's right-wing Christians.

Prime Minister Rashid Karami, a native of Tripoli, was assassinated June 1 by a bomb placed aboard a Lebanese army helicopter that was flying him to Beirut. Moslems and leftists have blamed his killing on the Lebanese Forces, a predominantly Christian militia, and Lebanese army officers.

Black trooper fears he has little chance of winning Ranger post

AUSTIN (AP) — A Department of Public Safety trooper will find out by week's end if he will be the first black Texas Ranger, although the 14-year veteran says his race may bar him from the elite organization.

"This is a system whereabout they pick and choose their people. If I am not one of the chosen few, I will not be promoted," trooper Michael Scott said Tuesday following an interview with a DPS board.

Scott claims that the system for promotions within the DPS, from whose ranks the Rangers are chosen, is political, not competitive. He said despite a clean record and passing numerous written promotional exams over the past 11 years, he has yet to rise above the rank of trooper.

He has passed a tough Texas Ranger written examination twice, the most recent score he believes was in the top five. He also has eight commendations in his personnel file and no complaints, department spokesman Mike Cox said.

Scott, 36, is the only black among the 21 people being interviewed this week. The interviews conclude today and an announcement of the new Ranger will not come until Thursday or Friday, spokesman David Wells said Tuesday.

Col. Leo Gossett, director of DPS, said the issue of race is not a factor in choosing a Texas Ranger.

"He (Scott) simply has not been selected as the best candidate," Gossett said, referring to an earlier Ranger application by Scott. "That's the only reason. There is no barrier for a black candidate."

There are 93 Texas Rangers now and one vacancy, Cox said. Four Rangers are expected to retire within the next year, therefore five people will be up for promotions, he said.

Scott

The DPS was created in 1935 and at that time the Texas Rangers agency was merged with the department, DPS spokesman David Wells said today.

A picture displayed at the Texas Rangers Hall of Fame in Waco, from the early 1900s, showed a black man in the unit. His exact capacity with the unit is unclear, Wells said.

"There is a black male in this picture. It's possible that he was serving one of the Rangers, or serving some other duties. But he was in the Ranger company," said Wells.

No blacks have been Texas Rangers since at least 1935, he said.

Becoming a Texas Ranger has been almost a lifelong aspiration for Scott, who grew up a mile from Fort Fisher, a 150-year-old Ranger establishment that later became home to the Texas Rangers Hall of Fame.

"That's what got me to be a police officer," the Houston trooper said.

He first signed on with the Waco Police Department and a year later went to the DPS academy. He finished sixth out of 68 in the 1973 class.

"I have done a very good job and my reward for doing a good job is nothing," Scott said.

Of the 93 current Texas Rangers, four are Hispanic. There are no blacks or women in the elite corps, the roots of which date back to the 1820s.

The DPS has 2,330 commissioned officers, Cox said. There are 1,754 white males, 131 black males, 387 Hispanic males, five American Indian males and five males of other ethnic backgrounds.

There also are seven black females, 17 Hispanic females and 24 white females, Cox said. No women, however, hold supervisory positions.

He said there is one black lieutenant in the agency, three minority sergeants in the criminal law enforcement service and 15 minority sergeants in the traffic law enforcement service.

The DPS does not have an affirmative action plan, although efforts are made to have 40 percent minority cadets in recruting classes, Cox said.

ROAD

The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation is expected to foot the $1.285 million construction bill, but the city must provide the right of way, Ms. Vickrey said.

About 15 homeowners, 14 renters and three businesses are expected to be relocated by the project, she said.

On Tuesday the council put aside $767,803 in U.S. Housing and Urban Development funds for the Public Works Department to buy about 195 pieces of property from eastside landowners.

Of the Lamesa Road money, $356,853 came from the 1987-88 Community Development Block Grant. The remainder was left-over grant money from previous years, said Sylvester Cantu, coordinator for the community development program.

A portion of the Lamesa Road money — $363,000 — was a grant turned down by YMCA officials because of strings attached to the federal purse. A remaining $47,950 was unused money from past CDBG programs.

Ciro Sanchez, a member of the Eastside Economic Development Task Force — which has been promoting the Lamesa Road project for two years — said Tuesday he was pleased with the council's decision.

"It's better to see one whole road lighted and paved, than a little bit here and a little bit there," Sanchez said.

The majority of the east side supports the project, Sanchez said.

But he acknowledged there might be a few objections to the project because of misunderstandings.

Exactly how much land is needed for the realignment is still unknown, with a engineering study on the construction expected to be completed in October, said Public Works Director Fred Baker.

Homeowners probably won't be approached by the city for another month because the Lamesa request will have to clear HUD and the property involved will have to be appraised, Ms. Vickrey said.

Other projects receiving federal money Tuesday included:

The Midland Economic Development Corp., received $50,000 to continue a revolving loan fund for small businesses started by a $161,000 grant last year. The group requested $350,000.

The Black Advisory Council, which was allocated $25,000 to continue a tutorial and senior citizens program. The advisory council asked for $178,000 to $350,000 to buy a building to house the center.

The remaining money was given to city departments including planning, which received $113,050 to administrate the federal grant program; parks, which received $20,000 for a park designer's salary; and code enforcement, which got $148,097 to clear up weedy lots and dilapidated housing.

In addition, a total of $75,000 was put aside for housing rehabilitation and a $10,000 contingency fund will be used as back up for projects that overspend.

Groups getting no money Tuesday were the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens, which requested $50,000; Taylor Park Child Care, which had asked for $15,000; Midland Project Self Sufficiency, which had asked for $60,000; Clean Midland, which logged a $50,000 request; and the Midland Fire Department request for $400,000 for a new fire station at 200 E. New Jersey.

HEARING

Beckler tried but failed to persuade the Iran-Contra committees to withdraw a subpoena demanding testimony from the former top White House aide.

"We have recently been informed that Adm. Poindexter is the target of a grand jury investigation" by independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh, Beckler said as he futilely tried to get the committees to withdraw its subpoena or to order the television lights turned off in the committee room.

The request to have the subpoena withdrawn was rejected by Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House committee conducting the investigation.

The request to have the television cameras turned off was rejected on a 13-1 vote by the House committee and a 10-0 vote by the Senate panel. Rep. Henry Hyde R-Ill., was the only lawmaker to support Beckler's request.

Hamilton took exception to suggestions by Beckler that there was a connection between the congressional investigation and the probe by Walsh.

"We have not been in collusion with the independent counsel in any way," Hamilton said. "We have respected his role."

Beckler said Poindexter "has nothing to hide," and has "committed no crimes.... We'll fight it every step of the way."

But he said the tandem investigations conducted by the congressional committees and the independent counsel's office placed an unfair burden on Poindexter.

"The national broadcast, with the hot lights beaming down and the cameras blaring away, is a violation of his due process rights," Beckler said of Poindexter.

"If there is an indictment in this case, it will not read the president of the United States versus John Poindexter, it will not read the Congress versus John Poindexter," the lawyer said. "It will say the United States of America versus John Poindexter...and I say...if that should happen, the Congress or Mr. Walsh should have gone one way or another."

Said Beckler: "I have never seen a situation where a primary target of a criminal investigation has been forced to testify before a nationwide audience and have that testimony dissected over and over."

Beckler's disclosure that Poindexter is a target of Walsh's investigation was a surprise. Lt. Col. Oliver North, who concluded his testimony on Tuesday, had earlier been identified as a target of Walsh's probe.

Poindexter had been subpoenaed to appear after receiving a grant of limited immunity that compels his testimony.

OIL

The price held at the $17.50 plateau from mid-March through early May, when another 50 cent per barrel increase was marked. The price moved to $18.50 two weeks later, where it held for another month.

On June 18, purchasers responded to spot market prices having spent more than a week above the psychological $20 mark and upped their postings to $19.

Last week, they again closed "the spread" between spot market prices and postings with an additional 50 cent increase.

A complete listing of current postings will appear in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

The Associated Press reports that oil futures prices jumped as well Tuesday, fueled by concerns over the imminent reflagging of Kuwaiti tankers.

Futures traders appear concerned the move could have the unintended result of disrupting the flow of crude oil to the West.

On the New York Commodity Exchange, August delivery contracts for WTI settled 13 cents to 19 cents higher at $21.58 a barrel. Heating oil was .34 cent to .37 cent higher with August at 55.38 cents a gallon; and unleaded gasoline was .43 cent to .50 cent higher with August at 55.47 cents a gallon, AP reports.

TRADE

In skirmishing over the windfall tax, the Senate voted 74-20 at one point to kill a move — pushed before the Bradley amendment — by Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., to double the cigarette tax.

And the Senate voted 77-18 to kill a cigarette amendment offered by Byrd in place of the Cranston version.

The spate of cigarette amendments represented less a concerted drive to change the cigarette levy than a series of parliamentary blockades aimed at splitting oil and tobacco interests and stopping Gramm's move to attach the windfall profits repeal.

Earlier, a move to kill Gramm's plan fell short 36-57.

Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, led critics of the repeal plan, saying that "it turns our back on the American consumer, it turns our back on the American taxpayer."

Some critics also said that a tax measure should not be placed on a trade bill. But Gramm said that the measure would "lower oil imports and reduce the trade deficit (and) is relevant to the trade bill."

The windfall profits tax, approved in 1980, was an outgrowth of the 1970s energy crisis. It was designed to capture for the government some of the revenue from skyrocketing oil prices, which according to some forecasts then would go to $70 a barrel within a decade.

As the crude prices plunged below the trigger level of about $19 a barrel last year, the measure ceased to produce revenue. The present price of oil is about $18.50 a barrel.

The drop in oil prices hammered the economy of oil states.

STATE

Senators spent nearly six hours debating and voting on amendments to the tax bill, which raises the state sales, corporate franchise, hotel-motel, insurance and tobacco taxes along with fees for drivers licenses, car inspections and professional licenses. Sen. John Leedom, a Dallas Republican who failed on several attempts to curb the increases, complained that senators should concentrate more on spending cuts and on raising revenues from non-tax sources.

The senators gave tentative approval to a $670 million bill that maintains the 15-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax. They withheld final action, however, because they may need to increase the rate to make up a possible $280 million shortfall.

The House version of the tax plan would have increased the sales tax from 5.25 to 6 percent and placed insurance premiums under the sales tax. San Antonio Rep. Dan Morales, House sponsor of the bill, said the controversial insurance tax is probably dead in both chambers.

Morales said he expects a House-Senate conference committee to send a compromise plan to Clements before the special session ends at midnight July 21. A new proposal to tax "luxury services" ranging from golf course green fees to valet parking has been offered as possible alternative to raise several hundred million dollars.

The Senate voted three times — twice approving and finally defeating — Sen. Bill Sarpalius proposal that would roll back the tax rates if the economy picks up and tax revenues exceed expectations. "If we're going to look at raising taxes, we should have a means that if the economy gets better, we can make them lower," said Sarpalius, D-Canyon.

In the middle of the final discussion of the measure Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby raced from the podium when he feared that an angry, face-to-face shouting match between two of the biggest senators would come to blows. Sen. Craig Washington interpreted Sen. Carl Parker's move around his desk toward him as a physical threat.

"It may be frightening to some and amusing to others, but it's neither to me," Washington, D-Houston, said cooly. "I do my job and I leave you alone, and I hope you do the same."

"I was not charging you, I was simply walking around my desk," Parker, D-Port Arthur, responded.

San Angelo Sen. Bill Sims, a conservative Democrat, voted for the tax package. "I don't think we have a choice," he said. "We're running the state of Texas, we have to fund the programs."

Plano developing as Perot envisioned

PLANO (AP) — For Texas billionaire Ross Perot, development in the Dallas suburb of Plano is proceeding exactly as he envisioned eight years ago when he bought land in what was then the hinterlands.

"My dream was to have a necklace of diamonds in the complex," he said.

Now Perot, founder and former head of Electronic Data Systems Corp., has the EDS Legacy Office Park, in northwest Plano. The tract is home to EDS, Southland Life Insurance Co., Frito-Lay Inc. and now, J.C. Penney Co. Inc., which announced last month it would relocate to Plano from New York.

EDS Corp. was acquired by General Motors Corp. which bought out Perot for nearly $750 million earlier this year.

Despite the flurry of interest in the site, officials are cautious about more development in Legacy Office Park, and it is Perot who is applying the brakes.

"This development is the place to be now, but it's still in what I call 'half-flight,'" Perot said.

Perot even has a list of criteria he uses to measure the suitability of prospective tenants in the park.

"So far, every company that's located there is a company in a community business, a people business, that will do well in good times and in bad times," he said.

Perot stressed the importance of generating capital independently, as opposed to relying on government funding for support. A self-sustaining business venture is less subject to the whims of an ever-changing democratic system, he said.

"I'd rather see a company like J.C. Penney out there than a high-tech, space-oriented type of organization because they aren't dependent on government money," Perot said.

In Perot's view, the string of corporate development will encircle a major downtown area, complete with glass-and-granite skyscrapers.

"The beauty of going into the middle of nowhere and picking out about 2,500 acres and planning everything out in advance is that you can make it the best," Perot said.

The office park will be the attraction that brings other types of business into an area of about 300 acres in northwest Plano.

Nicaraguan aliens uncertain about immigration status

BAYVIEW (AP) — Political asylum remains just out of reach for Nicaraguan aliens uncertain about their immigration status despite a Justice Department order allowing them to stay in the United States to avoid persecution.

On Tuesday, 79 Nicaraguans remained detained at the Immigration and Naturalization Service's detention camp near Bayview. Those at the camp, isolated on the coastal prairie about 22 miles north of the Mexican border, weren't sure what the new directive means.

Thousands of Nicaraguans in the United States could be affected by the order Attorney General Edwin Meese III issued last Wednesday.

The order bars deportation and calls for granting work permits for qualified Nicaraguans who fear persecution back home.

But INS officials are waiting for further instructions, and meanwhile are continuing established policies.

"Our detention policy is still the same until we get some additional guidance from above," said David Turner, INS deputy chief director for the South Texas district based in Harlingen.

The heavily secured detention center surrounded by a tall fence is nicknamed "El Corralon," meaning the big corral. It is a processing center for apprehended aliens awaiting immigration hearings.

There are 396 detainees at the center, primarily from Mexico and Central America.

Cecilio Ruiz, the INS' district director for detention and deportation, said nearly all of the Nicaraguans at the Bayview detention center have applied for political asylum.

"Out of these 79, 10 already have final orders for deportation, but I'm not going to move them," Ruiz said.

The telegram he received last week announcing the new policy toward Nicaraguans directs him not to deport anyone unless it is a criminal case. INS policy includes payment of a bond, usually of more than $1,000. Aliens are released after paying the bond and agreeing to appear before an immigration officer.

"Many of us don't have money for the bond and we're waiting to see if they'll let us get out without paying a bond or maybe a reduced amount," said Manuel Salvador Aguilar, 26, from Managua, dressed in the bright orange overalls required of all Bayview detainees.

Salvador, whose bond was set at $1,000, said he fears arrest if he returns to Nicaragua, because he left the country illegally. Being an ex-Sandinista soldier, he said he was not allowed to exit the country without the official permission he was unable to obtain.

Border patrol officials detained him in the Harlingen airport on June 16.

Ulises Amador, 30, another Bayview detainee, was caught in the same airport on April 15, two days after he crossed the Rio Grande into Texas.

"We think it's magnificent, because we consider that Nicaragua has a communist system," he said in Spanish. Food and other goods are tightly rationed, he said, and every block is under surveillance by Sandinista informants.

He said he fears arrest in Nicaragua, because he fled to avoid military service.

"If the country was normal like a capitalist country, I would serve, but with my family dying of hunger, I can't serve," said Amador, adding that he hopes his $2,000 bond will be reduced.

DA wants grand jury to question Railey

DALLAS (AP) — Angrily denouncing the Rev. Walker Railey's refusal to talk to police about the attack that left his wife comatose, Dallas County's chief criminal prosecutor has demanded that Railey go before a grand jury.

"I'm tired of this man messing with this investigation," Assistant District Attorney Norman Kinne said.

Kinne said he will subpoena the Methodist minister for an appearance before a grand jury "as soon as I can find him."

Kinne's outburst occurred as he left a two-hour meeting Tuesday with Dallas police detectives, who have been stymied in their investigation of the April 22 near-strangulation of Margaret Railey at the couple's Dallas home.

Mrs. Railey, who remains in a coma, was transferred last week from a Dallas Hospital to a nursing home in Tyler, where her parents live.

Railey, who took an overdose of pills soon after the attack on his wife, has been in seclusion since his release last month from a Dallas psychiatric hospital. He voluntarily admitted himself to the hospital.

Kinne refused to say who else might be called before the grand jury. Last week, however, he said he was considering a subpoena for Dallas psychologist Lucy Papillon, 45, a Railey acquaintance.

Ms. Papillon talked to police about her contact with Railey on the night his wife was attacked, Kinne said.

Railey was questioned by police two days after the attack on his wife, but has declined to speak to police since then.

Investigators have said they want to ask him about discrepancies in his account of where he was the night he said he returned home to find his wife unconscious in the garage.

On May 22, police Capt. John Holt said Railey's account of his whereabouts — primarily about the time the minister said he was at a Southern Methodist University library — is in "direct conflict with indisputable evidence..."

Railey, meanwhile, has kept silent since a two-day flurry of media interviews after his June 20 release from Timberlawn. In the interviews, he denied any knowledge of the attack.

Police hope voice tapes lead to killer's identity

HOUSTON (AP) — Two voice tapes of a man who called police after a couple was murdered may yield clues to the identity of the killer, authorities said.

Jo Ann and Eddie Bruce McMillan were bludgeoned to death in bed at their Kingwood home early Tuesday. An autopsy revealed they died of skull fractures from a blunt instrument.

Police found the bodies after a man telephoned an emergency 911 line and said only "A murder by the lake" before hanging up. Police went to the home after tracing the call.

A second telephone call was later received by authorities from a man who said "If you hurry, they might still be alive."

Houston Police Lt. Drew Warren said the voice tapes will be compared and family and friends will be asked to listen to them.

Volunteers to hunt for body

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Volunteers will be allowed to search a San Antonio landfill for the body of a missing girl whose father has said he shot her to death and dumped her body into a dumpster.

Authorities say the contents of the dumpster were taken to a landfill operated by Browning-Ferris Industries. They say the body of Debbie Moberg is buried beneath tons of refuse.

Peter Block, an official of Browning-Ferris Industries, said "We have agreed to look at their (excavation) plans and even give them guidance."

Suspended San Antonio paramedic Ray Moberg, who pleaded guilty to seven felony charges, including the shooting death of his adopted daughter Debbie, told investigators he placed her body in a dumpster.

Clements sets media time

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements, who has been pursued daily by reporters since cancelling his weekly news conferences three months ago, said Tuesday he would set aside about 10 minutes a day to answer questions.

Reggie Bashur, Clements' press secretary, said whenever the governor is in Austin, he would be available for at least 10 minutes on the front steps of the Capitol at 12:15 p.m.

"This gives the press 10 minutes each day they know they can reach the governor," Bashur said.

Case for Contras begs a consensus

The effort launched in Midland Monday to raise funds from the private sector to tell the Contra story in this country should cause more than a few Americans to get concerned about the off-again, on-again support shown the rebel fighters by the Congress.

The intent is valid: To show a side of the Nicaraguan struggle that may not be getting as much attention as it deserves. And the support shown in Midland is evidence that a segment of the population backs the Contra effort strongly enough to commit money to publicizing the effort of the rebels President Reagan has termed "freedom fighters." According to Brent Bozell, director of the National Conservative Foundation, "under $1 million" in private funds was raised here, a masterpiece of non-information.

Bozell, Contra leader Adolfo Calero and U.S. Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla., brought the case for the Contras to Midland as the beginning of a Texas tour largely because, as Bozell said: "Press coverage has focused on congressional maneuvering and outrageous allegations of misconduct by the 'freedom fighters.' Few, if any stories, have presented the facts about life inside Nicaragua under the Communist dictatorship of the Sandinistas."

While Bozell's criticism of the "national" media may be accurate at least to a degree, it must be recognized that the Congress is no less to blame for the Contras' troubles. Congress has been alternately hot and cold on support for the Contras and the American public has been divided, many exhibiting a lack of knowledge of either the struggle or which side the United States is supporting. That doesn't say a lot about Americans' grasp of a struggle that potentially could effect this country in an adverse way.

That atmosphere of indecision and confusion can easily breed mistakes. So it's imperative, in this nation's interests, that a national consensus be determined on the Nicaraguan question and then followed. The money raised on this tour will not be used to help supply the Contras with arms. Rather it will be used to finance an advertising campaign intended to get the American public and Congress behind the Contras.

Calero said at the Midland fundraiser, "We are not after a military victory as such. What we are after is the replacement of the Sandinista government, by toppling the government or by free elections."

Do Americans want this country to be involved in the Nicaraguan fight? In what manner and at what cost? Do we recognize what is at stake in Central America? Do we perceive a threat to our way of life? These are questions Americans should have been asking themselves all along.

About the only generalities that can be drawn at this point are that:

1. Americans don't want to be drawn into another Vietnam, and

2. If our way of life were being threatened, Americans would be willing to fight.

But the questions about Nicaragua and Central America may not be all that easy to answer. The support shown for the Contra cause in Midland Monday is indicative of an undercurrent of support for the rebels. But how deep and widespread is that support throughout the nation?

In the interest of finding the answer to that question and others, this effort to promote the Contra cause will be well worth watching.

Another View:

OSHA gets tough

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration flexed its muscles last week by imposing its biggest fine ever — $1.5 million — on the Chrysler Corp. Citing 811 violations that endangered workers at Chrysler's plant in Newark, Del., John Pendergrass, the agency's administrator, described the fine as "the only possible response to a totally unacceptable situation."

It was a welcome action. But a single fine, even a large one, does not constitute a policy. The agency has far to go to overcome the Reagan administration's destructive efforts. First under Thorne Auchter and then Robert Rowland, enforcement lagged. The agency cut down on workplace inspections, slowed standard-setting to a crawl and negotiated fines down to nominal amounts, if it imposed them at all.

Last year, after Bill Brock replaced Raymond Donovan as Secretary of Labor, things began to improve. "With Brock," said a spokesman for the AFL-CIO, "you don't have the aggressive efforts to weaken the law." But neither did OSHA move aggressively to enforce it. The big fine against Chrysler suggests a welcome change. Pendergrass's words are the toughest heard from an OSHA administrator in a long time. More important, as Margaret Seminario, the AFL-CIO's health and safety expert, contends, this case represented an advance. Most of the agency's major actions over the last year have focused on record-keeping violations; this one dealt with substantive hazards, including hazards from lead and arsenic.

The best follow-up would be to remedy the agency's administrative problems. With only about 1,000 inspectors, OSHA can never hope to inspect all of the nation's four million workplaces on anything like a regular basis. It needs an intelligent policy for allocating resources — something beyond the discredited practice of exempting any business with an accident rate below the national average.

The agency also must find a way to expedite standard-setting for worker exposure to potentially dangerous substances. That now takes years; standards have been set for fewer than two dozen substances since OSHA was created in 1970. Most important, the agency must mete out more credible, consistent penalties.

Chrysler said it wouldn't even try to have its fine reduced. OSHA, a spokesman for the auto maker observed, is "approaching its duties with a new vigor." That's high praise and good news.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, July 15, the 196th day of 1987. There are 169 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 15, 1971, President Richard M. Nixon announced in a nationally broadcast address he would visit the People's Republic of China to seek a "normalization of relations." Nixon made the trip the following February.

On this date:

In 1606, the Dutch painter Rembrandt was born in Leiden, Netherlands.

In 1870, Georgia became the last of the Confederate states to be readmitted to the Union.

In 1918, the Second Battle of the Marne began during World War I.

In 1945, President Harry S. Truman arrived in Belgium on his way to the Potsdam Conference.

In 1968, President Dwight D. Eisenhower ordered U.S. Marines to Lebanon during a Middle East crisis.

In 1965, U.S. scientists displayed close-up photographs of the planet Mars taken by the spacecraft Mariner IV.

JACK ANDERSON

Moviemaker bowed to Army demands

WASHINGTON — For a moviemaker interested in apparent authenticity and genuine economy, there's nothing like cooperation from the U.S. armed services. The Pentagon has historically provided background locations, military hardware and even masses of uniformed extras to Hollywood producers when asked.

Jack Anderson

But there's a price to be paid for this cooperation, and Francis Ford Coppola paid through the nose for the Army's help in making "Gardens of Stone." Released earlier this year to mixed reviews, the movie is set during the Vietnam era, but focuses sympathetically on Army men and their families back home.

The specific unit is the Army's "Old Guard," the spit-and-polish outfit at Fort Myer, Va., which does ceremonial escort duty for the president, stands guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and performs funeral processions at Arlington National Cemetery.

In the "production notes" — background material and authorized gossip sent to the media — Tri-Star Pictures brags about the level of cooperation it got from the Pentagon for its unabashedly pro-Army production.

"The Army provided uniforms, equipment, military training for the actors, technical advice, 450 precision soldiers for the battalion review scene, a performance by the U.S. Army Band and hundreds of extras," the notes disclose. They quote producer Michael Levy as saying: "This picture could not have been made without the Army. Period."

How did Coppola win over the Army, which had not been at all pleased with his earlier "Apocalypse Now"? Internal Army memoranda we've obtained suggest he took orders from the brass like a lowly recruit.

"There is excessive profanity in this script, which is both gratuitous and unrealistic," an Army critic observed in one memo. "The amount of profanity must be reduced." It was.

"We cannot allow the assault on the Tomb Guard Quarters to be filmed at Arlington National Cemetery," the Army reviewer wrote. "We suggest the site of the 'assault' be moved to the ammunition dump at Fort Myer or that the production company's set designers duplicate the Tomb Guard Quarters at another location." Building movie sets is expensive, so the producers settled for nearby Fort Belvoir.

There were more than 40 other complaints by the Army's critics. They included key characters who were "too old," a company commander who "is given too much authority," a recruit who is too "sloppy, disorganized and inept (to be) a member of the Old Guard" and an Army spouse who "perpetuates the 'alcoholic-wife-of-the-colonel' myth."

The Army even offered advice on how to correct this last problem: "The (woman) need not be depicted in this manner to explain her weak, 'non-person' personality. She could be cowed by virtue of her husband's despotic personality alone." In the Army's view, despotism is better than alcoholism.

At a negotiating session five days after the memo, the moviemakers agreed to rewrite "the funeral and interment scenes with drunken widow," and were asked to make 31 other concessions to the Army censors. Three weeks later, the Army approved the revised script and agreed to cooperate in every way. Three months later, Coppola was made an honorary member of the Old Guard.

But at the final screening, on Nov. 25, 1986, though the Army "found the motion picture to be acceptable," it still urged elimination of "as much of the profanity as possible." It also called the depiction of two characters "underdeveloped," and suggested that the major action sequence be changed "for both technical accuracy and dramatic impact."

The Army critique complained that the character played by James Caan was not the "cultured, sensitive man" of the original script, and added: "We recommend that portions of those scenes from the script be reinstated in the film. Those attributes set (Caan's character) apart from other noncommissioned officers and make him a more sympathetic character."

Coppola paid the price for the Army's support, and expressed no regrets. The taxpayers subsidized the movie — and were never asked.

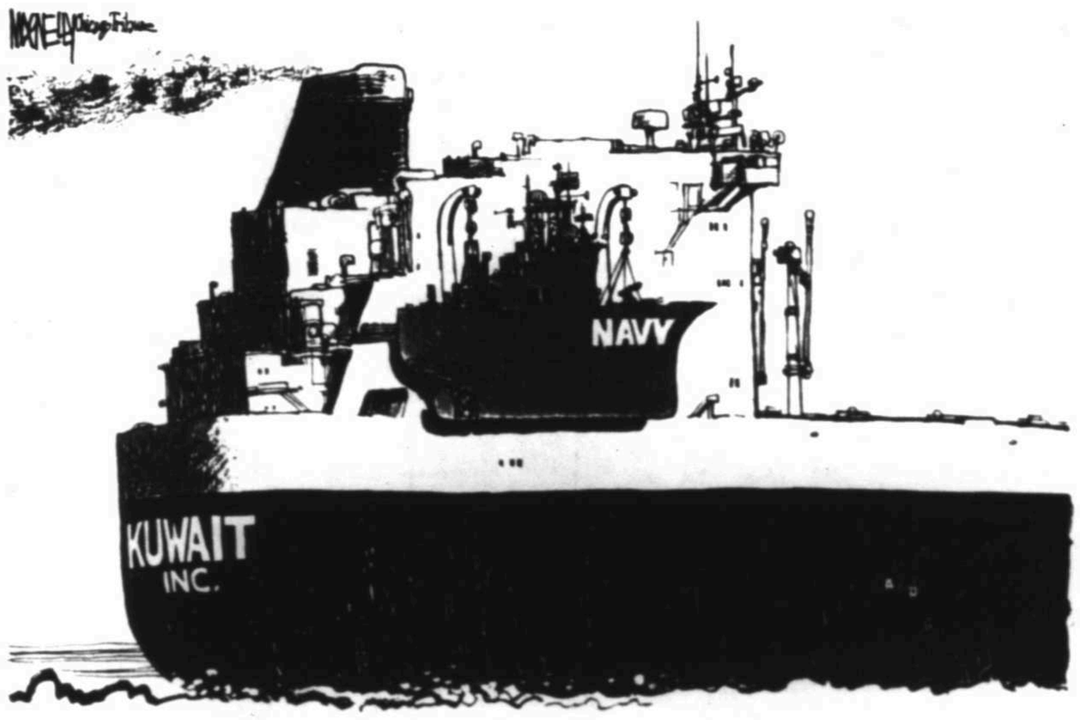

• • •

BUYING OFF CASTRO — CIA sources reveal that the Mexican government has made a secret deal with Cuban President Fidel Castro, letting his spies keep tabs on various exile groups in Mexico — as long as they don't work against their host government. "Whether Cuba will be discouraged from conducting subversive activities (in Mexico) in the future will probably depend to a large extent on how Castro perceives Mexican support for Cuba," a top-secret CIA report concludes. "If he sees the Mexican government becoming less supportive ... he may take the opportunity to once again step up activities among the leftist opposition."

• • •

MINI-EDITORIAL — According to Discover magazine, researchers in Texas concluded that baboons subjected to stress react like corporate executives — chasing after females and otherwise goofing off. Without passing judgment one way or the other on the researchers' findings, we hope they didn't spend a lot of time and money reaching their conclusion. A little eavesdropping on executives' secretaries gathering after work in the nearest fern bar could have turned up the information in a single afternoon.

North broke Nielsen, but forgot lessons

WASHINGTON — You have to give Colonel North credit — millions of it. He not only can shred the Constitution, but stand to gain by what's left of it. For even if the law catches up with him, he can always count on a presidential pardon.

James Reston

Article II, Section 2 of the Constitution is quite specific. It says the president "shall have the power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment."

Colonel North seems to be worried about the special prosecutor's "hundred lawyers down the hall" gathering evidence for his prosecution, but even if they find President Reagan's signature on a dozen documents authorizing the illegal transfer of funds from the Iran arms sales to the contras, the president's signature on a pardon would be decisive.

He wouldn't even have to wait until the special prosecutor managed to indict or convict North. President Ford pardoned Richard Nixon before he could be brought to trial. Reagan could do the same.

Nobody in the hearings has found a "smoking gun" so far, though the hearing room was full of smoke, but sooner or later television dominates everything in Washington and Ollie is the snappiest TV act since Mickey Rooney. It's hard to imagine any prosecutor putting together a jury that would convict him and even harder to imagine Reagan permitting it if any jury tried.

But while North is not on trial and may never be, the Constitution of the United States and the relationship between the executive and legislative branches of this government are very much on trial.

The Constitution not only gives the president the power of pardon but also instructs him to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed." His failure to do so in the Iran-contra case is precisely the cause of this whole hullabaloo.

These hearings have paid so much attention to what the president knew or didn't know about the diversion of funds to the contras that they have almost ignored his failure to see that the law forbidding aid to the contras, which he signed, was faithfully executed.

Even North testified that he was surprised to hear that the president had said he didn't even know that his own National Security Council was engaged in these covert military operations. Reagan's failure to know what the colonel and the NSC were doing is in many ways worse than if he did know, but it's not good television.

North's view of the roles of the Executive and the Congress in the conduct of covert operations was stated with the utmost candor. He regards the Congress as an impediment if not a nuisance in the world of dirty tricks.

It didn't bother him a bit that not a single member of the Congress or elected official knew a single thing for months about his antics or that the president approved selling military arms to Iran and trading them for hostages after proclaiming publicly that he would do neither.

The notion that private citizens without security clearance could negotiate in the name of the United States and talk carelessly about getting rid of the president of Iraq and fighting the Russians if they invaded Iran seemed to the colonel mere incidents in a necessary negotiating process.

He insisted that everything he did was authorized by his superiors at the NSC — Admiral Poindexter and McFarlane — and you had to believe him. For, oddly, even when he boasted that he lied whenever it suited his clandestine purposes, he seemed to be telling the truth to the committee — selectively, of course, but persuasively.

He may even have told more than he intended. For he talked expansively about the late William Casey's involvement in the Iran-contra scandals and indicated that Casey was planning a sort of super-secret network that would carry out subversive warfare in other parts of the world, without the authority of anybody.

For this lieutenant colonel, or "this kid" as he sometimes called himself, the ends justified the means, just as long as he had authorization from his boss, whom he "assumed" had the approval of the Commander in Chief.

Nobody could doubt his sincerity when he talked of "this wicked world" where the enemy was establishing beachheads in the Western Hemisphere, and seizing and torturing our citizens in the Middle East and elsewhere.

He is our latest antihero, bent on expanding democracy abroad even if he violates it at home. On television, he broke the Nielsen records, but on the Constitution, he forgot the lessons he was taught at the Naval Academy.

ART BUCHWALD

Can you fill Ollie North's 'fall guy' shoes?

Ollie North's recent job in the White House has been one of the most sought after in the country. Every lieutenant colonel in the United States wants it, and intensive interviews are now being held by the NSC to fill Ollie's shoes.

"OK, who is next?"

Art Buchwald

"I am, sir. I love my country and will do anything legally to protect it, even if it turns out later that it's illegal. I'll go up the hill and down with anyone in the Executive Branch of government."

"Now, colonel, this job requires somebody who is brave, strong, unrelenting and willing to be the fall guy on television. How does that grab you?"

"Who do I have to be a fall guy for?"

"Anybody who ranks over you or under you. We expect you to follow orders or not follow them, whichever is most convenient to the President."

"Does this mean I should consider myself a loose cannon on the deck of the ship?"

"That is one of the most important parts of the job."

"I can do that, sir. When do you want me to go to Tehran?"

"Tehran is off limits since we sold them arms which they now have announced they would shoot at our ships."

"Selling arms to Iran was a dumb thing to do. Who is the jerk who thought of that one?"

"We have to assume it came from the top."

"You mean Bill Casey?"

"Of course. He's dead, so he now can be blamed for everything."

"What about the Gipper?"

"Don't expect him to remember anything if you get caught."

"If I can't go to Tehran, where do you want me to go?"

"We want you to go to Country No. 2 and pick up money for Country No. 1, but don't talk to Country No. 3 unless it's absolutely necessary. When you deliver the money to a bank in Switzerland, be sure to use Gen. Secord's number. But don't touch Albert Hakim's account or that of the Ayatollah's."

"Who gets the money?"

"Everybody, but it has to be kept secret from the Israeli Chamber of Commerce."

"I get it — you want me to lie like an officer and a gentleman."

"We don't want you to lie, but that is the only way to run the country. Don't worry about the consequences. Ollie lied and he's now in clover."

"I know I'll never be another Ollie North, but I pray I can keep my traveler's checks in as good an order as he did."

"Now, colonel, let's get down to the serious business. How good are you at shredding classified documents?"

"I won my letter in it at the Naval Academy."

"Here's a shredder. Sit down over there and start shredding. Don't quit until I tell you to stop."

"Hey, this is fun. What do I do besides shred?"

"In case you get subpoenaed by Congress, take this poison pill."

Four rush-hour bombings kill 67, wound 300 in Karachi, Pakistan

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Two car bombs and two other bombs blew up within moments of each other at rush hour in downtown Karachi, killing at least 67 people and wounding more than 300, officials said.

No group claimed responsibility for Tuesday's bombings, the worst terrorist attack in Pakistan's 40-year history. The municipal government issued a statement saying: "The explosions appeared to be the work of saboteurs of foreign origin." It did not elaborate.

Officials at two hospitals said they had received a total of 67 bodies. But Sattar Edhi, who runs the city's largest private ambulance service, said his workers were still removing charred bodies from cars this morning, and that the death toll could rise to 75.

The bombs exploded at about 6:30 p.m. in the fashionable Saddar shopping district, which was crowded with shoppers, commuters and street vendors.

Dozens of bystanders were killed instantly, and flames leapt from nearby cars and buildings. Witnesses said terrified people ran screaming down the broad boulevard where the car bombs exploded, as glass from shattered windows rained onto the street.

Ghulam Qadir, Pakistan's deputy principal information officer, said in the capital, Islamabad, that the explosions were "the worst bombing ever in Pakistan."

Throngs of weeping people gathered today at Karachi's two central hospitals to try to identify loved ones from grisly color photos posted on bulletin boards outside.

Karachi, a bustling seaport of 7 million people on the warm waters of the Arabian Sea, has a history of ethnic and political unrest. But until Tuesday it had been spared the terrorist bombings that have plagued four other Pakistani cities this year.

Explosions in Lahore, Quetta, Rawalpindi and Peshawar have claimed more than 60 lives and injured hundreds. No group claimed responsibility for the bombings, but Pakistani officials have blamed them on neighboring Afghanistan's Communist government, which denies the charges.

There has been speculation that recent bombings in other parts of the country were the work of Pakistanis opposed to the administration of Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo, who governs with the backing of Gen. Mohammad Zia ul-Haq, the president.

Dr. Abdul Karim of Jinnah Post-Graduate Hospital and Dr. Abdul Maqquim of Civil Hospital said they had counted 67 bodies and 300 injured people, many in critical condition. The doctors said they did not count body fragments in figuring the death toll.

WORLD IN BRIEF

50 vacationers feared dead in French mudslide

ANNECY, France (AP) — An earthen dam collapsed, and a wave of mud and water from a rain-swollen river swept into a campground filled with Bastille Day vacationers, leaving 50 people dead or missing, authorities said today.

Hundreds of rescue workers digging through dirt and rocks in the French Alpine village of Grand Bourand found the bodies of 19 people, and 31 others were feared dead in the flood and mudslide, said police spokesman Jean Jouandet. Ten people were seriously injured and dozens were treated for shock.

Other estimates said as many as 40 people were missing.

The dam of rocks holding back the Arve River beside the village broke in a storm on Tuesday, Bastille Day, at the end of the long holiday weekend. The water cascaded over tents, trailers and recreation vehicles, and pushed mud and huge rocks into the campsite, leaving no time for escape, witnesses said.

More than 250 rescue workers searched for the missing until about midnight Tuesday. Another 250 joined the effort at first light today, lifting fallen trees, opening flooded vehicles buried under more than three feet of mud, and searching door-to-door among villagers for those reported missing by their families.

Socialism still standard

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev told a gathering of writers and artists that his campaign for openness and reform is designed to strengthen socialism, and will never lead to its replacement.

In a speech Tuesday to Soviet mass media officials and the Creative Workers' Associations, the Kremlin leader welcomed their suggestions for reforming society under his policy of "glasnost." But he said any and all objectives must be within the socialist system.

Glasnost, which is Russian for "openness," has permitted freer expression on selected topics.

Haiti debates elections

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Haiti's nine-member electoral council announced Tuesday it drafted a new elections law taking into account suggestions from the governing junta led by Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy.

The new law gives the council complete authority over elections. It is expected to be promulgated by the government without modification.

The three-member junta issued a decree June 23 assuming control of the electoral process from the council, which is designated to manage elections under a new constitution approved March 29.

Iraq bombs gulf oilfield

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq said its warplanes today bombed and destroyed an Iranian offshore oilfield in the Persian Gulf just north of the strategic Strait of Hormuz.

The official Iraqi News Aagency said the warplanes flew 370 miles to bomb the Rostam oilfield and "to reiterate to the Iranian enemy that no matter how long the war continues, we are determined to deprive them of every source of revenue."

The agency, monitored in Nicosia, said the raid occurred at 9.30 a.m. (1:30 a.m. EDT).

The agency said all attacking Iraqi aircraft "returned safely to base after bombing and completely destroying their target — the Rostam oilfield."

Thunderstorms still possible

From Staff and Wire Reports

A chance of thunderstorms is in the Midland area forecast through Thursday. According to the National Weather Service, there is a 40 percent chance of storms tonight and a 30 percent chance of showers on Thursday. Skies will be mostly cloudy to partly cloudy.

The NWS at Midland Regional Airport is predicting and overnight low in the middle 60s. The high on Thursday should be near the 90-degree mark. Winds will be southeasterly at five to 10 mph tonight, and will shift to the southwest at 10-15 mph. on Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 89 was 18 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1933. Today's 60 degree low is a new record for this date and was three degrees below the previous record set in 1966.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were expected to spread across most of Texas tonight and Thursday.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were reported along a stationary cold front that extended early today across the coastal plains into South Texas following a night of violent weather in the Texas Panhandle.

A tornado destroyed nine mobile homes and injured 10 people Tuesday evening at Pampa. Authorities say damage amounted to about $1 million.

High winds and hail that was estimated to be as large as baseballs caused extensive damage at Borger. High winds damaged a feedlot and airport facilities in Spearman and Gruver.

The Pampa tornado slashed through a largely vacant seven-block area on the western edge of the town.

Nine of the injured underwent treatment for minor injuries and one woman was admitted to the intensive care unit at a Pampa hospital, a nursing supervisor said.

Residents said they had no more than 30 seconds to take cover after emergency warnings were sounded.

Other severe thunderstorms produced two-inch hail Floydada and golf ball size hail at Silverton. Some street flooding was reported in the Lubbock area.

NATION

Strong thunderstorms continued to buffet the Plains today after unleashing a Texas tornado that injured 10 people, twisters in at least two other states and hail as big as baseballs.

Tornadoes also were reported in Iowa and Minnesota, and there were unconfirmed reports of twisters in New Jersey on Tuesday.

Baker: Fixing Wadley drainage will be expensive

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Two firms were hired Tuesday by the City Council to find some answers to the Wadley Avenue drainage problem, but one city official said the solution will be neither easy nor cheap.

"Wadley was designed as a drainage way in the early '50s and to correct that situation now is a hard thing to do," said Public Works Director Fred Baker Tuesday.

"Changing its character is going to be very expensive," Baker added.

The council Tuesday also dropped a proposal for a "vicious dog" ordinance in deference to a state statute.

Parkhill Smith and Cooper, and West Texas Consultants will be paid about $11,000 to find out if a 6-foot-high by 9-foot-wide drainage pipe will help or hurt the north avenue's drainage problem, Baker said.

The $1 million drain would divert about 400 cubic feet of water per second into the northwest drainage channel at Wadley Avenue and Whitney Drive, Baker said.

And while the drain would lower water about 3.5 inches on the avenue, it might overload the northwest channel and flood homes, Baker said.

Homes east of Midkiff Road and Maxwell Drive, and along Haynes Avenue south of the Midland Park Mall might face flooding if the channel is overloaded, Baker said.

The channel begins south of the Fairmont Park Lanes, 5320 North Loop 250, and runs for about nine miles east through north Midland until it dumps into Scharbauer Draw.

A city study already has concluded the drain would raise the water level in the northwest channel, Baker said.

A bridge on the channel at Garfield Street is the culprit because it can only funnel 3,800 cubic feet of water per second. The 400 more cubic feet of water per second added by the drain would cause the flow to back up the channel, he said.

The two firms will refine the public works department study using equipment not available to the city, he said.

On Tuesday the council also dropped an ordinance aimed at controlling vicious dogs, after discovering a state law was enacted in June.

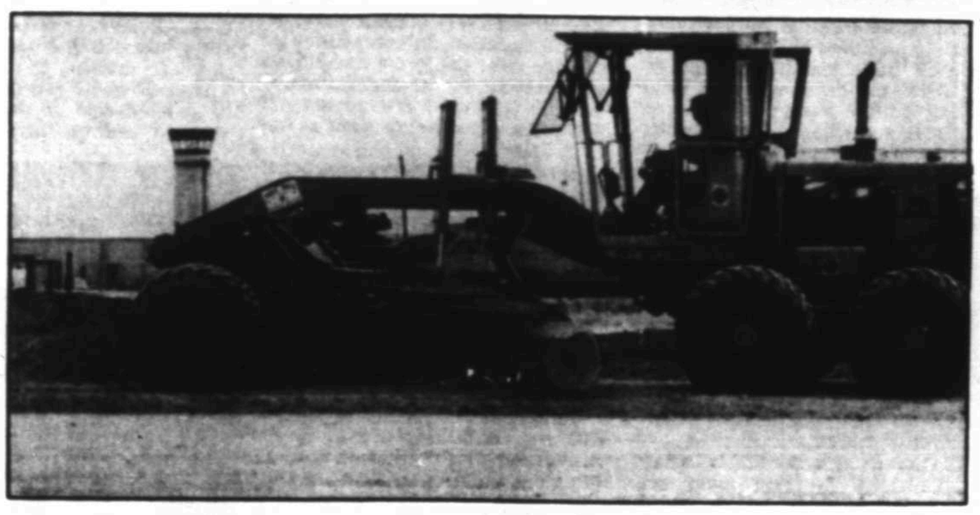

Under the state law, a dog is not considered vicious until it bites someone, said City Attorney David Reagan.

The law makes ownership of a vicious dog a Class B misdemeanor, with an up to $1,000 fine and or a jail term not to exceed six months, Reagan said.

On the second offense, the law allows a judge to order the dog to be destroyed, Reagan said.

The wagon was once used for mail delivery in West Texas. Earthmoving equipment, right top, was rolling just before the groundbreaking for the facility, which is scheduled to open in November 1988. Several dozen people gathered for the groundbreaking, right bottom, which featured comments from Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas, Chamber of Commerce President Wayne Merritt, and postal officials.

U.S. Postal Service breaks ground for new facility

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Permian Basin residents got a vote of confidence Tuesday as U.S. Postal Service representatives broke ground on a new main post office and processing facility at Midland Regional Airport.

The one-story, $6.5 million facility, located on a 15-acre site on the west side of airport property, will process mail for 15 West Texas counties covering 21,000 square miles. It is scheduled to open in November 1988, according to officials.

Arthur Elias, postal division manager from Tucson, Ariz., said the postal service expects West Texas to keep growing despite economic hardships caused by the decline in crude oil prices. Otherwise, "We're not going to spend that kind of money and build that type of facility," he told several dozen guests and dignitaries at the ceremony.

"This basin and this entire area will continue to grow as it has in the past," Elias said as several pieces of earthmoving equipment waited nearby.

"We want to dedicate the new center to the two most important people in the world," said Emilio Garcia, El Paso's division manager. "Postal customers and postal employees."

Garcia also praised the Midland postal employees who were responsible for the "pre-planning" of the facility.

Former banker's attorneys seek change of venue

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

While U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton this week is considering arguments to dismiss bank-fraud indictments against Joel T. Mays, defense attorneys are seeking a change of venue for the trial of their client.

Houston trial lawyer Robert "Bob" Hall said for the 51-year-old former executive vice president and director of First National Bank of Midland to be tried before a jury in Midland would be "severely prejudicial" to Mays and would "deny him his constitutionally protected rights to a fair trial by an impartial jury."

Thus, Hall made a motion to move the trial out of the six-county Midland-Odessa Division of the federal-court system's Western District of Texas.

Hall and his co-counsel, Odessa lawyer Jim O'Leary, are seeking to transfer the Mays case from Midland to Austin, San Antonio or to "some division" within the sprawling Western District of Texas, which stretches westwardly from Waco-Austin-San Antonio area to El Paso. The seven-division district also includes Pecos and Del Rio. The Midland-Odessa Division takes in the counties of Andrews, Crane, Ector, Martin, Midland and Upton.

Mays would be handicapped by prior convictions of former Midland-Odessa bankers, including bank presidents and directors, and by the wide-spread publicity of previous bank cases, his attorney said.

"The news coverage created extensive and repeated unfavorable publicity which adversely impacts the rights of this defendant to obtain a fair trial," Hall argued. Cases which resulted from the (1983) closing of the First National Bank of Midland and other banks were "followed closely in the news media," he said.

FURTHER, Hall cited the indictments of nine former Midland-Odessa bankers since 1985, when the FBI intensified its probes into West Texas banking practices. Of those nine ex-bankers, seven were found guilty by juries and were sentenced by Bunton from one year to 24 years in prison and fined up to $550,000. Another ex-banker pleaded guilty, and the ninth, Mays, is awaiting trial. The hearings, trials and sentencing were held in federal court in Midland.

Midland Independent School Board directors Tuesday unanimously voted to seek bids on a new form of healthcare insurance for their 1,900 employees.

Likely to be coming in are bids from groups which can help the district effect a new self-insurance plan — a plan in which MISD would fund its own claims up to a certain amount — said Superintendent Joe Baressi at the bi-monthly board meeting.

The district tentatively is discussing yearly limits of $50,000 per individual claims and $2.9 million per total group claims.

If claims exceeded those amounts, a third-party "umbrella coverage" would kick in to make up the difference, Baressi explained.

Therefore, MISD will also be taking bids on an umbrella policy, the superintendent added.

The move toward self-insurance comes on the heels of an announcement by the district's present carrier, Allstate Insurance Co., that premiums for the next year will rise 78 percent.

Translated into dollars, the premium increase would take an additional $880,000 out of the MISD coffers, Baressi said.

Odessa council hires firm to find Harrison successor

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — City Council members Tuesday unanimously voted to hire a Dallas consulting firm to conduct the search for a successor to City Manager John Harrison who is leaving to become city manager of Waco next month.

The contract with Ralph Andersen and Associates will carry with it the proviso that the firm will not, "within a reasonable period of time," attempt to place whoever is selected for the city manager position in a comparable position in another city. The term "reasonable time" was defined by council members as not less than two years.

Four firms, including Andersen and Associates, last week presented proposals concerning the search for a new city manager to council members.

The proposal accepted Tuesday was not the low bid. The lowest bid of $16,800 came from the Atlanta-based firm of Mercer-Slavin. This bid also included a clause concerning future recruitment of the candidate selected. The bid of the Dallas firm was $18,000.

Other bids included the maximum cost estimate of $25,000 from Houston-based Peat Marwick and $19,500 from the Bellvue, Wash., firm of Jensen-Oldani.

The resolution approved by council members authorizes Mayor Don Carter to sign the contract for the executive search and consulting services with the Dallas firm.

Harrison, who came to Odessa from Arlington where he had been assistant city manager nearly five years ago, announced last month he had accepted the Waco city manager position. His final day as city manager of Odessa will be Aug. 7.

Air-conditioned cars have made family vacations easier

Ott

Everytime I return home from an out-of-town trip, I'm reminded how much vacations have changed over the years.

Mainly, these differences center around the actual traveling.

Anybody who is at least 35 years old must surely recall that time in American history when many cars were not equipped with air conditioners. That fact, alone, made driving from Point A to Point B a radically different proposal than it is today.

When you go somewhere now, it is a relatively simple endeavor. You gather up the family members, pile them into the car, argue about which radio station will be played, flip a coin to determine who gets the window seats, turn on the air conditioner and off you go. It can be a tedious ordeal, but at least everyone stays cool.

That wasn't always the case.

Take my family as an example.

Each summer we — there were five of us at the time — would visit my grandparents in Georgia. During the early years we did it without benefit of an air-conditioned automobile.

We would load up the car — an ugly brown Chevrolet — and take off. By mid-morning, the July heat would be bearing down on us in an excruciating manner. All windows, of course, would be rolled down so we wouldn't suffer from heat exhaustion.

But, unfortunately, all that did was create a minor whirlwind within the car, causing loose piece of papers to move about in a circular motion and eventually out the rear window. And, since one of these pieces of paper was the one my youngest sister had been using for her drawings, she would break into tears.

My older sister and I would then laugh and taunt her.

This, in turn, would anger my dad, who would turn and shout horrible threats at us while the car weaved dangerously from one side of the road to the other.

All would be peaceful for the next, oh, 45 seconds, I suppose.

Then the above-mentioned scenario would be repeated.

This would continue until we arrived at our destination two days later.

Another thing about traveling was that my dad, like most I have heard about, did not believe in stopping the car for anything "unnecessary" or for what he considered to be "petty reasons."

For example, if nature came calling, which it does often when you are 7 years old, it was too bad. You just held it in until the car needed to be re-fueled. I learned a great deal about self-discipline during those trips. I also learned not to drink anything, no matter how thirsty I might be, while riding.

And, here's a final note: Most fathers handled vacations, at least the traveling part, in a manner that would make your typical South American dictator proud. In short, things were done their way.

That included rising at 4 a.m. "to get an early start."

I once asked my dad why he felt compelled to begin at such an unreasonable hour. After all, I was unaware that 4 a.m. even existed.

He merely smiled and replied, "That's the best time of the day to travel."

I started to protest but he gave me a glare that made me think vaguely of Ferdinand Marcos. So I shut up.

The family piled into the non-air-conditioned Chevy and off we went. After sleeping briefly, I foolishly drank half of a NuGrape which meant I spent the next three hours holding my breath and moving my legs back and forth.

While attempting to amuse myself during this painful period, I read a Batman comic book. Unfortunately the windows were down, causing a minor tornado in the back seat which, in turn, resulted in Batman and Robin flying out of the car.

I started to whine, but my dad gave me a Marcos stare.

This, for some reason, prompted my younger sister to ask the most famous question ever recited on a family vacation, "Are we almost there?"

MAYS

While Bunton has yet to rule on a motion to dismiss the indictment against Mays on grounds that the government violated a limited immunity agreement not to prosecution Mays based on testimony he offered in another trial, the judge did deny a defense motion to "strike" a potentially inflammatory portion of the wording of the indictment.

The defense had asked the court to strike from the indictment the First National Bank's "Standards of Conduct," which states in part: "The achievement of the Bank's goals and objectives is dependent upon complete public trust of and confidence in the Directors and staff of the Bank. Therefore, all parties associated with the Bank will be expected to conform to high standards of ethical behavior in both the conduct of the Bank's affairs and their own personal affairs...

"All directors and staff members will be required to manage their personal and business affairs so as to avoid any conflict between their self-interest and their obligations to the Bank, its customers, and its shareholders."

HALL HELD that inclusion of the provisions of the "Standards of Conduct" in the indictment would be "totally irrelevant with respect to the criminal allegations" against Mays, would serve "no valid purpose," but would tend "to prejudice and inflame the jury."

"Whether or not Mr. Mays was subject to, or even violated, First National Bank of Midland's 'Standards of Conduct' has no relevance whatsoever to any alleged violations of federal law," Hall held.

The judge on Tuesday declined to strike the "Standards of Conduct" from the four-count indictment.

The indictment, which the grand jury returned May 14, accused Mays, as an officer and director of the now-defunct bank, of making false bank reports, making false statements, misapplying bank funds, and carrying out mail fraud. If convicted on each count, Mays could be sentenced up to five years on each conviction for a maximum 20-year sentence.

On the immunity issue, Mays last September had agreed to testify in the bank-fraud trial of 62-year-old William Hoyle McCright Jr., a retired FNB executive vice president and director.

LAST SEPTEMBER, when the McCright trial was held, the government's prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Blankinship, noted that the prosecution had "agreed not to use anything you (Mays) say, or anything derived from what you say, against you in any proceeding which might be brought against you."

However, the government did not offer Mays blanket immunity.

FBI Special Agent Edward Stroz testified Tuesday under questioning by Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom McHugh and Hall that the FBI had gleaned evidence against Mays in interviewing Mays and others prior to and after the McCright trial.

Blankinship said he did not participate in the FBI's investigation of Mays.

"My interest was getting Mr. Mays in a position to be a witness in the McCright case," Blankinship said. Blankinship, who said that the immunity granted Mays was "just regular statutory immunity," said that Mays was not assured he "would not be prosecuted." The prosecutor said he had told Mays that "There was just no telling what might come out in the course" of the McCright trial.

But Blankinship said in Tuesday's hearing that most of Mays' testimony in the McCright trial "was of a negative nature." The prosecutor said Mays said "I don't recall" or "I don't have any recollection."

In interviewing Mays last year, Stroz said Mays had discussed his business investments, the bank's policies on conflict of interest and bank officers' and directors' disclosure of their investment and the bank's loan policies.

Stroz said Mays did not impart "any new" information in the McCright trial and said that "nothing used in the indictment" came from Mays' period of immunity.

Oklahoma to use $1.5 million for SSC application

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma legislative leaders have agreed to put $1.5 million into an application for the superconducting super collider with much of the work already done by consultants working for Gov. Henry Bellmon.

The package as recommended by the House Economic Development Committee on Tuesday would include the appropriation plus bring the state Department of Commerce, a new finance authority and one legislative body in to oversee the project.

There was no indication when the appropriations bill would be considered by the Legislature.

Rep. Don McCorkell, D-Tulsa, committee chairman, said lawmakers were "appalled" by how Bellmon handled the project.

Bellmon and his aides had told the Legislature that the governor handpicked EMSI Ltd. to handle the application because of time restraints in getting the proposal to the U.S. Department of Energy by Aug. 3.

McCorkell said there should have been competitive bidding for a company to handle the application, specific legislative appropriation and authorization for the project.

"We are concerned that we now must pay for something that the governor has obligated us for without our authorization," McCorkell said.

Officially, MISD has received one bid already on self-insurance coverage from the local Premier Health Plan which is based at Midland Memorial Hospital, MISD spokeswoman Becky Ferguson said.

However, Baressi made it clear no decisions on the new form of coverage will be cemented until at least Aug. 1 and likely, not until Jan. 1, 1988.

"We may want to look at a cafeteria-type insurance plan," the superintendent said. This coverage would be along the lines of "picking and choosing" which services an employee needed to be covered, Baressi said.

The Allstate increase resulted from an $800,000 jump in MISD claims last year, Baressi said.

Allstate also requested the district provide a $400,000 reserve fund in addition to the increased premium charge, he added.

Until the decision is made, Allstate will carry the district on a monthly, pro-rated basis, Baressi said.

The insurance problem is but one of the financial sticklers that cannot be fully taken care of until the Texas Legislature decides on the amount of money public school districts will receive over the next two years, Mrs. Ferguson said.

A summary of next year's expenditures for the distirct — excluding 75 percent of the total budget attributable to payroll — showed the district only suggesting a 0.2 percent increase over last year's.

On the bright side, results from the district's first grade Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills (TEAMS) tests revealed the students are doing well in the "three R's."

"The faculties are working harder on the tests. Last year was the first year the TEAMS tests were given and as the faculty has become more familiar with what is on the tests, they have concentrated on teaching the children those objectives," said Asst. Superintendent Lamar Hebert this morning.

On a maximum scale of 100 percent, first graders (district wide) scored 89 percent on the math portion of the tests — a 4 percent jump over last year and 1 percent higher than the national average.

In the reading portion, the first graders scored 78 percent — 5 percent over last year's score and the national average.

On the writing portion of the test, the first graders scored 85 percent — 6 percent over last year's score and 7 percent over the national average.

Odessa personnel rules reviewed

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — City council members Tuesday gave preliminary review to a proposal that would alter personnel rules and regulations regarding the paid suspension of city employees for disciplinary reasons.

Under existing policies, department heads have been permitted to place employees on paid suspension for various reasons. The proposed change would give the city manager sole authority to approve paid suspension of employees.

The proposed change apparently grew out of the nearly three-month paid suspension of former Deputy Police Chief K.R. Jones for alleged violations of the department's Code of Conduct. Jones' $34,680 annual salary was continued during his 85-day suspension until he was fired Dec. 8, 1986 by Chief Alan Stewart.

However, in the face of a threatened lawsuit, Jones was allowed to resign from the police department and transfer to the city's planning and inspection department as an inspector.

In addition to the first reading of the resolution concerning proposed changes in disciplinary procedures, council members also heard a resolution that would amend city personnel policies regarding circumstances under which employee salaries will be continued.

In what Mayor Don Carter described as "merely housekeeping," the proposed amendment of personnel rules specifically defines disbursement of supplemental pay to employees injured in the line of duty. Existing rules, according to City Attorney Joel Roberts, contain "no provisions regulating such payments."

Both changes in personnel policy will receive a second reading during the next council session.

POSTAL

Six months of "very tough" planning were necessary before the project was approved, he said.

"There has to be a very convincing document that justifies the project (to postal headquarters)," Garcia said.

"West Texas is not going to dry up and blow away," said Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas, who delayed attendance at the City Council meeting to attend the groundbreaking. "We'll be pumping oil out here a good 50 plus years from now," Thomas, a trained geologist, said.

Chamber of Commerce President Wayne Merritt also attended, and expressed "our appreciation to the postal service for the confidence they are showing in this area."

Dave Holster, retired postmaster in Midland, said he was "happy for Midland and the progress we are making."

Postmasters from several area post offices, including Midkiff, Monahans, Fort Stockton, Big Spring, Crane, and Kermit, attended, as did Odessa Postmaster Ron Pradon.

Several retired postal workers from Midland and Odessa also attended the groundbreaking and were recognized by Williams.

The 124,000-square-foot facility will be constructed by Lee Lewis Construction Co. of Lubbock. The architect is Harper, Kemp, Clutts and Parker Inc. of Dallas, in association with MWM Architects of Midland.

Tuesday's ceremony marks the second time within a year that ground has been broken for a new postal facility in Midland. Last November, construction began on the $2.5 million Claydesta Station, near the intersection of Airpark Road and Smith Road. The building is nearing completion on a 4½ acre site.

Prison to get new head, expand inmate capacity

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — The Federal Prison Camp has a new superintendent, is planning to expand its capacity by about 400 inmates and will be hiring additional staff members, it was announced Tuesday.

Joseph H. Crabtree, 44, has replaced Troy Belaski as superintendent at the camp. Crabtree comes from Lewisburg, Pa., where he was superintendent of industries at the prison there. Belaski has been named the warden of the Englewood, Colo., facility.

The expansion will increase the inmate population to almost 1,100, which is higher than any other federal prison, said Lloyd McMillan, the camp's assistant superintendent.

"Part of that is natural growth," McMillan said, "and part of that is some of the inmates at certain facilities will have to be re-designated and will be sent here.

"We anticipate the (inmates) will come in higher numbers than normal some time within the next 90 days."

At least 34 new employees will be hired to accommodate the expansion, including about 15 correctional officers, two food service foremen, two physician assistants, and others.

"Certain positions that have been designated will have to be filled before the inmates arrive, others will be done gradually," McMillan said.

A new dormitory will be constructed at the the Big Spring camp, but will not be completed for at least two years, McMillan said.

"You can't build a new dormitory overnight, so that won't help us over the next 90 days," he said.

The Big Spring camp, opened on the site of the former Webb Air Force Base, is a minimum security, or security level "one" facility. Most of the inmates at the prison are serving sentences under two years, and the average sentence served is less than a year.

Official says waste site important

AUSTIN (AP) — Selection of a waste site might help the state win the "super collider" project, said an official of the Texas Low-level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority.

The Department of Energy said recently it might consider disposal of the super collider waste in a local facility if there was a cost saving to the DOE, according to Rick Jacobi, general manager of the authority.

Texas, California and Illinois are said to be the leading contenders for the super collider site.

"Of the three, only Texas has not yet settled on a site for disposing of its own low-level radioactive wastes," Jacobi said.

"We need to get back on track with our site development work, not only to maintain our competitive advantage over California and Illinois with respect to the super collider, but also to avoid Texas paying million-dollar penalties, perhaps as early as 1989."

He said federal law requires penalties from every state that misses the milestones to establish a disposal site for its own wastes.

New Twins Cities Speedway to open Friday

Bush task force promotes use of alternative fuels

By ANDREW MANGAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The purchase of 5,000 vehicles capable of running on methanol is one of a series of steps a vice presidential task force is recommending to help promote greater use of alternative fuels.

Methanol, ethanol and natural gas are viewed by an increasing number of state and national officials as a way to reduce pollution, cut U.S. dependence on imported oil and create new domestic markets.

"This would be a good way to take the pressure off of the hard-hit areas, and it's also good for the future," Vice President George Bush said recently.

A core of 20 to 30 cities face the loss of millions in federal highway dollars and other penalties if they fail to meet federal standards for carbon monoxide and ozone by the Dec. 31 deadline set in the Clean Air Act.

The Environmental Protection Agency announced last month that 14 metropolitan areas, including Dallas-Fort Worth, do not have adequate plans to achieve federal air quality standards for ozone and carbon monoxide by the deadline.

"These recommendations are additional weapons that EPA is making available to the states to meet these standards by telling the states what kind of reductions the states could get if they were to adopt one or more of the strategies outlined," C. Boyden Gray, counselor to Bush, told reporters.

The EPA will now consider development of alternative fuels programs by individual states as an acceptable way of complying with federal clean air standards and will provide guidance to the states on the emission reductions that can be expected.

As an additional step, the General Services Administration plans to buy at least 5,000 vehicles by 1990 capable of running on either gasoline or methanol, an alcohol fuel that can be made from natural gas, coal or wood, according to the report.

"Only Ford has a car out on the road now which is flexible-fueled," Gray said.

By 1995, the task force projects there will be increased demand for methanol-only cars, and that a 150,000 production run by an automaker will cost from $50 to $200 extra per vehicle.

California authorities, who must try to conquer the worst air conditions in the country in the Los Angeles basin, have been seriously looking into the purchase of 5,000 flexible-fueled vehicles as well.

California is promoting methanol heavily, especially for fleet use, and recently signed an agreement with Atlantic Richfield Co. for the sale of methanol at 25 of the company's service stations.

"We've always felt that what you need is to start the process of having cars that can be fueled with methanol to get things started," said ARCO spokesman Al Greenstein.

"There are still a lot of problems with methanol," he added. "We're talking about availability, we're talking about production capability. And there is an emission problem with formaldehyde."

Greenstein called the moves endorsed by the Bush task force as part of "the dawn of a new energy age," but said more study will be needed before methanol can be embraced as the fuel of the future.

The task force also recommended creation of a system of "emission trading" and "banking," under which manufactuers could use emission credits for heavy truck engines with low polluting characteristics to offset emissions from other, more heavily polluting engines.

The task force also adopted a program that calls for the development of retrofit kits to convert diesel transit buses to methanol.

Congress, the EPA and the administration admit that while lead is being removed from gasoline and industry emissions are declining, most of the nation's largest cities — and some rural counties will be unable to meet the clear air standards set by Congress 17 years ago.

TRC seeks incentive ideas

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission, expressing particular concern for natural gas supplies, wants to hear suggestions on what regulatory changes it could make to spur drilling for oil and gas.

In a notice issued Tuesday, the panel said drilling activity has dropped as a result of low well-head prices and the "widespread perception of a surplus."

"The commission believes that unless higher drilling rates are restored, the inevitable result will be a shortfall of supply," Commissioners John Sharp, Jim Nugent and Mack Wallace said in the notice.

The panel said the nation depends on Texas for 30 percent of its natural gas supply.

"We believe there is adequate undiscovered natural gas. We just need to encourage the aggressive pursuit of additional reserves of this premium fuel," the commissioners said.

Is Texaco 'in play?'

By LEE A. DANIELS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK (NYT) — Robert Holmes a Court Tuesday asked for federal clearance to increase his stake in Texaco Inc. to 15 percent.

The Australian investor currently owns 9.6 percent of the oil giant's common stock, he told the Securities and Exchange Commission Tuesday.

Despite the news, Texaco shares sagged on the New York Stock Exchange, ending at $43.75, down 37.5 cents. The stock was the day's sixth most active, trading 1.9 million shares.

Shares of the Pennzoil Co., which is locked with Texaco in a multi-billion-dollar dispute over Texaco's 1984 purchase of the Getty Oil Co., rose 37.5 cents, to $78.875.

Texaco filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Code in April, contending that the $10.53 billion court judgment for Pennzoil, and against it, was a threat to its viability.

The announced intention of Holmes a Court to build his Texaco cache did nothing for Texaco's stock on the New York Stock Exchange because his move had been expected. A source close to him had said on Sunday that he would decide by Tuesday whether to seek 15 percent of Texaco's common stock.

In his statement Tuesday to the Federal Trade Commission and the Justice Department, which must review for antitrust implications any stock purchases that give an investor more than 10 percent of a company, Holmes a Court asked for a waiver of the standard 30-day waiting period between his filing and the purchase of a block of Texaco shares that would bring him to 15 percent.

Federal officials and securities experts said such a request was commonplace in these filings.

However, the statement also said that Holmes a Court "may purchase additional shares without observing such waiting period under such act."

Several government officials, securities experts and sources close to Texaco's management said that the intent of this assertion was puzzling, unless Holmes a Court was referring to his making additional purchases of Texaco common shares that would keep him below the 10 percent level.

Texaco has generally restricted its responses to Holmes a Court's activities to saying that it accepts his repeated statements that his purchases are for investment purposes only. Company officials repeated that view Tuesday.

However, individuals close to the company said that while its management and board hold that view, because they consider the stock undervalued they are also determined to resist any attempt to take over Texaco.

Barry Sahgal, managing director of the investment firm Ladenburg, Thalmann Inc., said that Holmes a Court's intention to increase his Texaco holdings "indicates that he continues to be positive toward the future value of Texaco common shares."

Sahgal said Holmes a Court could yet be a catalyst for a settlement between Texaco and Pennzoil "that would benefit everybody" in two ways: by giving Pennzoil money it would not get otherwise, freeing Texaco of the threat of the damage award and of its bankruptcy status, and by allowing Texaco's stock to rise to its true value, which many analysts estimate at at least $60 a share.

Greyhound seals Trailways buyout

DALLAS (AP) — The president of Greyhound Lines Inc. says the newly-finalized deal to take over troubled Trailways Lines Inc. should show swift results.

"The Greyhound-Trailways partnership means the bus business is back, with the potential to be stronger than ever," said Fred Currey.

The company signed final contracts Tuesday to buy $80 million in assets from Trailways. Greyhound agreed in the cash transaction to buy Trailways buses, terminals and garages, as well as take over some Trailways routes.

Some workers will be laid off, Currey said.

"Our goal is to fill job openings in Greyhound with people from Trailways. For those who can't be placed, there will be severance benefits greater than those provided by Trailways in the past," Currey said.

The acquisition should produce quick results, Currey said.

"Greyhound is profitable now and the combined company will be profitable ... immediately," he said. "We will have the resources to continue service to the communities we now serve, and even go back to some that were abandoned in recent years."

The Trailways name will continue to be used, especially in areas where Trailways is now the sole bus service, he said.

The transaction must still meet Interstate Commerce Commission approval, but Currey said he saw no reason the ICC would reject it.

Currey said Greyhound chose to buyout its rival instead of allowing Trailways to collapse to preserve bus routes.

Fred G. Currey, chairman and president of Greyhound Lines, center, met with Trailways employees in Dallas Tuesday morning.

"You let Trailways collapse, you take away service from 500 to 600 towns that are served solely by Trailways, and that would be a fairly cold and callous thing for a company that is in the public service industry to do."

Under the agreement, about 41,600 scheduled miles of service, or 5.1 percent, will be eliminated by Aug. 5.

Currey said no city or town will lose service, but duplicate routes will be converted to single routes, some garages, terminals and maintenance shops will be closed and some administrative operations will be moved or merged.

A Trailways maintenance garage in Wichita, Kan., was closed Monday because it was not part of the assets purchased by Greyhound, Trailway's spokesman Bob Buschner said.

He said he did not know how many people were affected by the closing. The facility is part of a collective bargaining unit and severance pay or jobs offered elsewhere that might be available would be part of the collective bargaining effort, Buschner said.

Natural gas severance tax payment method amended

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — An amendment senators tacked on to a gasoline tax bill Tuesday would change the way some natural gas producers pay severance tax to the state.

Sen. Don Henderson, R-Houston, said changing market conditions require the state to modify current law, which requires the first purchaser of the gas to make the payments. In the past, pipelines bought most of the gas from the producers and paid the state's 7.5-percent severance tax.

"Now we have producers who are selling directly to small end users, who aren't used to paying the tax," Henderson said. His amendment would allow producers to pay the tax themselves if they sell the gas directly to end users.

"It's just easier bookkeeping," he said.

Senators tentatively approved the gasoline tax bill, with Henderson's amendment, Tuesday afternoon. They are expected to take final action within the next several days.

Trade deficit reverses narrowing trend

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. trade deficit widened to $14.4 billion in May, reversing two consecutive months of improvement, the government said today. Contributing to the worsening of the trade balance was a record $34.8 billion in imports — up from $33.5 billion in April.

The Commerce Department said the May trade imbalance increased from deficits of $13.3 billion in April and $13.6 billion in March.

The report came as a disappointment to economists who had expected continued improvemet in the trade balance under the pressure of a weaker U.S. dollar.

However, Reagan administration analysts contend that the trade picture is improving, if slowly, and caution against reading too much into monthly fluctuations.

The May deficit was the highest since a $15.1 billion deficit in February.

Last year, the United States ran a record trade deficit of $166.3 billion. For the first five months of 1987, the gap between imports and exports was running at an annual rate of $164.8 billion, suggesting only a slight improvement over last year.

Most of the increase in May imports came from manufactured goods and petroleum products.

Automobile imports from Japan, for instance, surged to $2.03 billion in May from $1.71 billion in April — despite price increases for Japanese models due to increases in the value of the yen against the dollar.

Although the dollar has stabilized somewhat on foreign exchange markets in the last month, it has fallen roughly 50 percent against the Japanese yen as well as against some key European currencies over the last two years.

A weaker dollar should make imports more expensive and U.S. goods less expensive abroad. So far, however, the massive U.S. trade deficit has stubbornly refused to yield much ground despite these exchange-rate changes.

Exports also increased in May, although to a lesser degree than imports — up to $20.4 billion from $20.1 billion in April.

Included in the increase was a rise in agricultural exports, to $332.5 million from $278.6 million in April.

Western expects smaller loss

DALLAS (AP) — Western Co. of North America officials say they expect to record a smaller second-quarter net loss than in the first because of improved revenues in a climate of higher oil prices.

Officials said Tuesday the company will take a $90 million write-down for the three months ending June 30. The company will report a write-down of about $60 million in onshore services equipment and facilities for the second quarter.

The Fort Worth-based energy services and drilling company will report an "additional provision" of another $30 million in the second quarter for uncollected accounts receivable and other items.

The company, in last year's third quarter, wrote down $102 million in onshore services equipment and $85 million in offshore drilling rigs.

Western's stock appeared on the most active list of the New York Stock Exchange, where 1.9 million shares traded hands. The stock closed Tuesday at 2⅝, up ⅛.

The company has been negotiating since last year to restructure its debt of more than $600 million. Western, as of the end of March, had assets of $660.6 million, cash of $69 million and negative shareholder equity totaling $110.7 million.

Revenues for both the offshore and onshore divisions were greater in the second quarter than the first, "reflecting slightly improved markets for the company's services," president Sheldon R. Erikson said.

WHAT'S NEW IN RETAILING? A number of local pharmacies now offer complimentary blood pressure testing devices, but if market testing in Colorado is successful pharmacies here could eventually have complete blood testing centers.

Osco Drugs in Denver have opened five in-store health testing stations, which are staffed with qualified medical technicians who take customers' blood samples and test them 55 major health functions. Offerings include: heart, cholesterol, and lung function tests and screenings for diabetes and cancer.

The heart of the health kiosk is a reflotron analyzer that can test seven function in under three minutes, allowing customers to get a health checkup while their prescriptions. Some tests, such as medication levels, can be performed overnight.

Osco, which plans to open the health stations in all 18 of its Denver stores, says the concept can save customers 75 percent on health tests and is endorsed by local hospitals.

John Schmidt, president of the BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU of the Permian Basin, reports that there is still confusion among retailers as to where to file hot check charges. According to Al Schorre, Midland County District Attorney, under Texas law, only checks over $750 are prosecuted by the District Attorney's Office. Checks under that amount are prosecuted by the County Attorney's Office.

HANDY DAN will remain Handy Dan for the time being, but the firm plans to change the name of the business to WESTLAKE HARDWARE in the near future. Westlake Hardware is the principal partner in San Antonio-based Lone Star Hardware, which recently bought Handy Dan locations in Midland and Odessa. Other plans for the Midland store include: lowering the gondolas to provide better visibility; decreasing the lumber department and expanding the paint, housewares, plumbing and electrical departments and reopening the garden department.

The store also plans a weekly restocking route that will allow the stores to carry as few as three items in department's inventory.

DARYL LANSDALE, chairman of the board of Lone Star Hardware said the new corporation hopes to have 10 Texas stores by the end of the year, all wearing the Westlake flag. Westlake Hardware operates 45 stores throughout Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Raines triples home winning runs in 13th

Staff of eight aces returns All-Star title to Nationals

By JOHN NADEL
AP Sports Writer

OAKLAND, Calif — Mike Scott. Rick Sutcliffe. Orel Hershiser. Rick Reuschel. John Franco. Steve Bedrosian. Lee Smith. Sid Fernandez.

It was a succession of names the American League will long remember.

These eight National League pitchers held the Americans to just six hits in 13 innings to produce the first All-Star shutout since the NL won 1-0 in 1968, beating the AL 2-0 Tuesday night.

The winner was Smith, who worked three innings, longer than his usual outing with the Chicago Cubs. He also was the only NL pitcher to give up more than one hit, allowing two.

"I hadn't pitched since Saturday, and I only went one inning at that time so I felt pretty good," Smith said. "And I knew Sid (Fernandez) was the only guy we had left in the bullpen.

"It's a thrill for me to play on a team like this and to pitch against players that are the best. I felt like a little kid. I was really fired up."

Fernandez, of the New York Mets, became the final NL player to see action when he took the mound in the bottom of the 13th. After walking Kevin Seitzer, the Mets left hander retired the side in order. He struck out Pat Tabler of Cleveland, Matt Nokes of Detroit fouled out and Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees grounded out to third.

"A save in the All-Star Game — that's a dream," Fernandez said. "Mel (Stottlemyre, Mets pitching coach) told me you might get nine in."

Fernandez is a starter for the Mets. But he appeared in relief three times in the World Series last fall with a 1.35 ERA against the Boston Red Sox, and he struck out the side in his only other All-Star appearance, last year in relief.

"I was more nervous in this game (than the World Series)," Fernandez said. "I don't know why."

A rotten day got even worse for A's Howell

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

OAKLAND, Calif — Jay Howell was booed even before the All-Star Game started Tuesday night, and it only got worse.

Howell gave up three hits in the 13th inning and was the losing pitcher in the National League's 2-0 victory.

"I didn't need that," the reliever said.

Tim Raines' two-out triple in the 13th inning scored Ozzie Virgil and Hubie Brooks with the only runs of the game.

"The day didn't start out very good either," he added. "I slammed the garage door on top on my car and caught my coat in the door as I was going to the ball park."

In the Athletics' last game before the All-Star break, Howell came out of the bullpen to protect a two-run lead and instead was the losing pitcher in a 4-3 setback to Milwaukee. Some fans let Howell know they remembered that Tuesday, booing him during pregame introductions.

"Some of the other players told me I might hear some boos but I said, 'No way, not when I'm getting introduced right after Mark McGwire,'" he said.

The feint booing of Howell began just as the standing ovation died down for McGwire, the Oakland rookie who has a major-league leading 33 homers.

Raines tripled to left-center field on a fastball which Howell threw on a 2-0 count.

"I was trying to throw him a strike and I didn't think I could come back with another breaking ball. He hit it where I pitched it. He didn't try to pull the ball. He's a good hitter and that's a good lineup. There was no place to put him really."

Captains rock Venturino, go on to claim 12-8 win

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

"If we can't get five good innings from our starter, we're in trouble," Midland Angel Manager Max Oliveras said, wiping a furrowed brow after a 12-8 loss to Shreveport Tuesday night.

The opener of the five-game series with the Texas League first half East winners was a classic illustration of his plight.

Phil Venturino, going for his 10th win of the season, lasted only 3⅓ innings and trailed 11-5 when he departed during the Captains' five-run rally.

The rest of the way, Shreveport managed just one run off Vinicio Cedeno and left hander Vance Lovelace, but the damage had been done. As it turned out, Shreveport relievers Mike Hogan and Randy McCament were just as stingy with the runs and hits over the final five innings.

"To me," says Oliveras, "I've got the strongest bullpen in the league. But it's stretched so thin, I've got to get the five innings out of the starter."

Cedeno gave up a solo homer to Johnny Grimes, the Texas Tech ex from Monahans, to open the fifth and then struck out six in his 4⅓ inning stint.

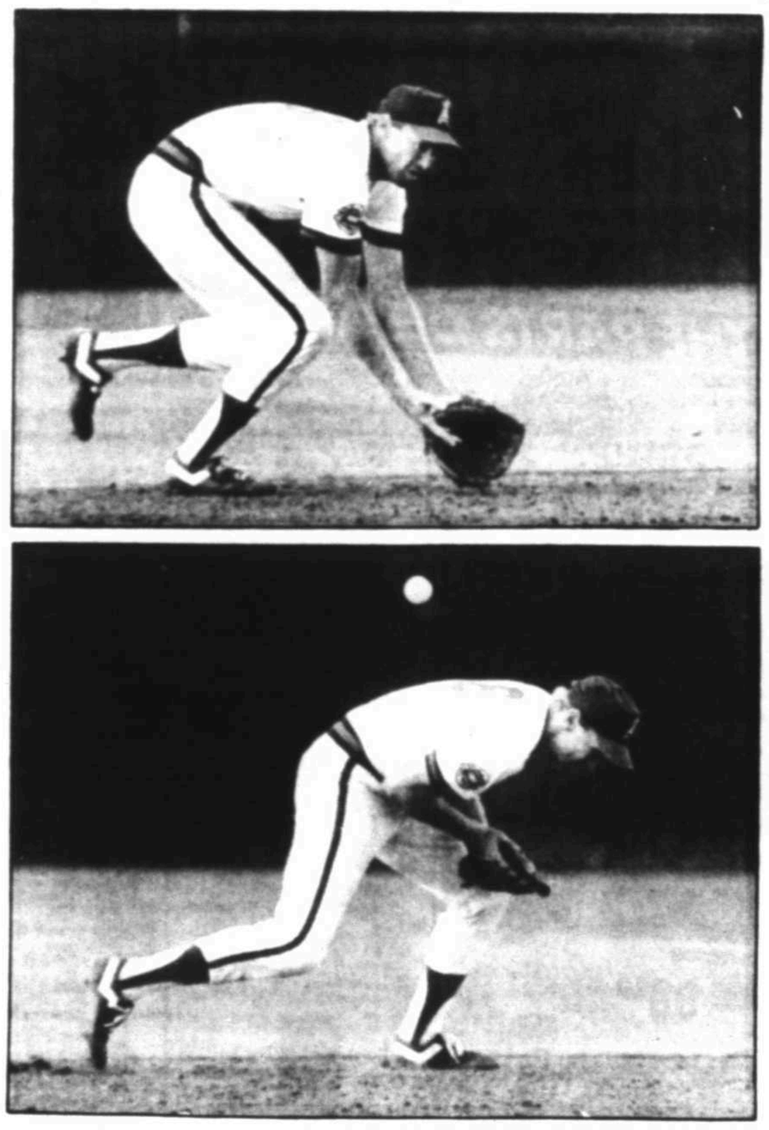

DAN DAVIDSMEIER hit his first homer of the season and Paul Meyers hit his second as the Captains handed starter Stuart Tate a 6-0 lead after two innings.

Midland rallied for five in the third as Doug Jennings hit a two-run homer, his 23rd and Joe Redfield drove his 21st over the center field fence for two more runs.

Shreveport came right back for five runs in the fourth to widen the 6-5 gap to 11-5 as an error opened the door.

When Tate, a third year pro from Auburn University, gave up three runs in the fourth, Manager Jack Mull, who once played for Midland, had seen enough and brought Hogan out of the bullpen to start the ninth.

"Tate has major league stuff," Mull said, "but he needs to develop more aggressiveness. I think that a dropped foul fly in left, which let in three unearned runs, and a wild throw on a double play ball upset him. Instead of bowing his neck like a bulldog, I think he let it get to him."

Scott Rathburn/Reporter-Telegram

Going into the hole behind second, Midland Angel shortstop John Hotchkiss finds this grounder too hot to handle.

Overall, Mull's pitching has been good, a league leading 12 shutouts, and tonight he will throw his best at the Angels. Mull, who spent last season working with the kids in the Midwest League, will start Dean Freeland, the TL's leading pitcher with an 11-3 record, at the Angels.

"Out in El Paso, he gave up four hits, walked one and fanned 10, not bad for that ball park," Mull said.

Oliveras will counter with Mike Romonovsky, 5-5. "He's due for a good outing and he's a battler."

Football injury could end Bo's baseball career

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

Can Bo Jackson have an immediate impact on the NFL?

Yes, say most football experts.

Is he jeopardizing his baseball career by signing a five-year contract with the NFL's Los Angeles Raiders?

Again, the answer is yes.

"I think he can do it for this year, but I just don't see him trying to combine the two sports year after year," said Carroll Hardy, director of scouting for the Denver Broncos and one of the last athletes to combine professional baseball and football careers. Hardy left the San Francisco 49ers after one season to sign with baseball's Cleveland Indians in 1955.

"He could do either one and be a star at either one. But if he's going to play baseball, he's really jeopardizing his career by playing football," Hardy said. "One injury and it could be all over. I love to ski and there's great skiing here in Colorado but I never touched skis while I was playing."

Jackson, the left fielder for the Kansas City Royals, announced Tuesday that he has reached agreement with the Raiders on a contract that sources put at $2.6 million over five years. He was chosen by the Raiders on the seventh round of the April 29 draft after choosing the Royals over the Tampa Bay Buccaners, who had made him the first pick overall in the 1986 draft and offered him $7 million over five years.

The baseball season ends Oct. 4, four weeks into the NFL season.

But the Royals are just two games behind the Minnesota Twins in the American League West. If they win the division, Jackson's arrival would be delayed another two weeks and if they reach the World Series, add on two weeks more, meaning the football season would be half over when Jackson reports.

"Obviously, we would find some ways to use him," Raiders Coach Tom Flores said Tuesday. "When we drafted him, we said we were doing it with the idea of not disrupting his baseball career. We feel that if anybody has the ability to play both, he is the person.

"Since he has decided to play both sports, we are happy with his decision."

MOST FOOTBALL people agree that Jackson can have an impact on the NFL once he gets into shape and learns the Los Angeles offensive system. They cite:

Varied exercise program answer to burnout syndrome

Dr. Cochran

"I don't know why, but I just don't seem to enjoy exercising any more. I go to the club and put on my workout clothes and I just want to stand there. Even when I work out, I don't feel that I'm applying myself."

Have you ever felt this way? If so, then it's a good bet you've had the Exercise Burnout Syndrome.

Most people, whether they participate in aerobic dance, weight lifting or bicycling, tend to form well delineated exercise programs. They workout on the same days each week, doing the same exercises, in the same order. After a while, they get physically and emotionally bored.

It has been well documented that for strength gains to occur in the musculoskeletal and cardiopulmonary systems, a continually progressive exercise challenge must be presented. In regards to the musculoskeletal system, if an athlete performs the same weight lifting exercises, using the same amount of weight, over a period of time, the exercise challenge is progressively lost.

Strength gains occur to the extent needed to handle the chronically performed exercise program. Very similar findings occur in aerobic or cardiopulmonary programs.

Another factor of equal importance is the emotional component of exercise. Ask any athlete involved in competitive sports the significance of mental attitude in winning. An athlete who is emotionally excited is simply going to be able to perform better.

Conversely, an individual bored with an exercise program will just not be willing to put out the effort to have a superior workout.

The best way to avoid the "burnout syndrome" is to regularly change your workout program. Every three months chage to a different type of workout within your exercise interest. For instance, if you are primarily interested in cardiopulmonary conditioning, do "aerobic" dancing for three months, then change to treadmilling or water aerobics for three months.

This change will be productive for both mind and body.

Weight lifters need to change basic lifts every three months as well. Change up the routine, do dumbell bench instead of standard bench press. Trade squats for machine hack squats.

Pete Martinelli, the strength coach at the University of Oklahoma, has designed their football strength program in such a way as to change weight amounts for each consecutive workout.

Sometimes it may be necessary to do something drastic. If you're into aerobics, change to weight lifting or vice versa!

Above all, don't allow mental or physical boredom to take the enjoyment out of your workouts. The Exercise Burnout Snydrome can ruin your health!

Name, playing field have changed, but San Antonio still in league

By JERRY BRIGGS
The San Antonio Light

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Through hard economic times, frustration on the field and the loss of a beautiful ball park, San Antonio somehow has survived as the only remainifg charter franchise in the Texas League.

San Antonio joined Dallas, New Orleans, Galveston, Houston and Fort Worth as the first six teams to open play in the Texas League back in 1888.

In the 100th year of the circuit, they are still playing ball in the Alamo City over at V.J. Keefe Stadium on the campus of St. Mary's University.

Over the years, there have been San Antonio teams known as Missionaries, Bronchos, Bears, Indians, Shamrocks, Missions, Bullets, Brewers and Dodgers.

Even though memories of San Antonio's plight in the Texas League mainly consist of failed opportunities, the good times are enough to sustain die-hard fans.

Rusty Lyons, commissioner of the city's Spanish-American amateur league, fondly remembers March 31, 1930, when Babe Ruth and the New York Yankees — while on a spring training tour of Texas — made a stop at San Antonio's League Park.

"I used to be a bat boy for the Texas League teams. The day the Yankees were there, there was a helluva crowd that came out," he said.

Ruth, the famed "Bambino" who hit 60 home runs for the Yankees in 1927, slammed a homer that left Lyons and other San Antonio fans in awe.

"He hit one over the fence ... a real blast. It must have gone at least 450 feet," Lyons said.

The minor league clubs that have played in San Antonio over the years, however, have been less than Ruthian in stature.

According to Bill O'Neal, author of a recently released book called "The Texas League," San Antonio has been crowned champion only six times in 87 years; the most recent championship was 23 years ago, in 1964.

There has been some excitement generated by star players, though.

San Antonio clubs have produced their share of successful major leaguers — Ryne Duren, Brooks Robinson, Joe Morgan, Steve Sax and Fernando Valenzuela, to name a few.

Duren struck out 224 in 220 innings for the San Antonio Missions in 1954. Later a standout with the Yankees and other teams, he was known as a wild man.

A hard-drinker who was near-sighted and wore thick glasses, Duren reportedly used intimidation to gain the upper hand over the hitters. He was said to have deliberately unleash blazing fastballs back to the screen at Mission Stadium during warmups to scare opposing hitters.

Robinson, the fielding whiz who made the Hall of Fame based on his performance as a member of the Baltimore Orioles, played second, third and shortstop for the Missions in 1956 and 1957.

Morgan played on the San Antonio teams in the early 1960s, when the club was owned by the Houston Colt 45s. Later a star with the Houston Astros and the Cincinnati Reds, Morgan was named the Texas League's Most Valuable Player in San Antonio's 1964 title season.

Valenzuela and Sax, two of the current mainstays of the Los Angeles Dodgers, made their names in San Antonio during the early 1980s.

A phenomenon from Mexico, Valenzuela tinkered with his famous screwball at Keefe Field and finally mastered it, winning eight straight games in the second half of the 1980 campaign before being called up to Los Angeles that fall.

When Valenzuela was called up the the majors in October of 1980, San Antonio had just clinched the Texas League Western Division.

Valenzuela would have pitched the opening game of the Texas League championship series, but instead he was summoned to Houston for a series between the Dodgers and Astros.

Bol, Bogues to combine for Bullets crown

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prospect of having Manute Bol and Tyrone Bogues on the court at the same time has got Washington Bullets owner Abe Pollin talking about an NBA championship.

While it has been written that if the 7-foot-7 Bol lifted the 5-3 Bogues over his head they would form a perfect rendition of the letter "I," Pollin says the pair will be anything but a sideshow.

"We now have the shortest and the tallest players in the league, and the two of them will bring us a championship," Pollin claimed Tuesday. "Tyrone is a tremendous addition to our club."

If Pollin is to obtain the services of Bogues, the team's top choice in the 1987 NBA draft, he apparently will have to pay dearly for an extended period of time.

Big Spring's Ringener owns Austin Open lead

AUSTIN (AP) — Philip Ringener of Big Spring posted a tournament-best 19-5 match-play record in earning the top seed for the championship round of the $115,000 Professional Bowlers Association Austin Open Tuesday night.

Ringener will bowl one game in Wednesday night's nationally-televised finals for the top prize of $16,000.

Kent Wagner, Palmetto, Fla., the only player in the top five with a PBA title, will bowl the semifinal match against one of three bowlers.

Chris Warren, Dallas, in his first championship round appearance, gained the No. 3 seed and will bowl the winner of the opening match.

That opening match will pit fourth-seeded Pete McCordic, Houston, against Purvis Granger, Mansura, La., who is in the fifth spot.

McCordic, who bowled the first perfect game on national TV in 13 years last January, has six second-place finishes without a title.

The runner-up receives $8,250. Third-palce money is $6,000; fourth place is $5,000 and fifth gets $4,000.

Norway's Lauritzen wins 14th Tour de France stage

LUZ-ARDIDEN, France (AP) — Following a slight change of course caused by fear of terrorist attack, Norwegian cyclist Dag-Otto Lauritzen won the 14th stage of the Tour de France cycle race and Frenchman Charles Mottet retained the overall leader's jersey.

The 103-mile course was diverted from one bridge to another after a suspicious vehicle was found parked nearby. Authorities said no explosives were found.

Later, an anonymous caller told a French news agency that the bridge would be blown up, and spectators were evacuated. No bombs were found.

The performances by the cyclists were not affected by the threats.

On the final ascent, Lauritzen, of the 7-Eleven team, managed to hold off Luis Herrera of Colombia. The Norwegian was timed in five hours, 14 minutes and 28 seconds. Herrera was seven seconds behind.

Dickerson says paternity suit just a trap to find money

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Rams running back Eric Dickerson said Tuesday the 25-year-old woman who filed a paternity lawsuit against him did so to take advantage of his wealth and to garner some publicity.

"It's happened with Sylvester Stallone, Eddie Murphy, Mick Jagger," the All-Pro player for the National Football League said in his first public comment on the lawsuit.

"It's very hard to find women you can trust," the former Southern Methodist University running back told the Los Angeles Times. "A lot of them are looking for free handouts. ... This was a trap, just another one of those stories of a woman looking for money."

"This is the way to get back at me — to have a baby and then use the press against me. But in two weeks no one will care who Rea Ann Silva is."

Ms. Silva filed the complaint Monday in Superior Court seeking $7,500 per month for medical expenses for her baby due in November. She was granted a temporary restraining order forbidding Dickerson from traveling 100 yards near her after he allegedly threatened to harm her.

The Los Angeles department store employee claims that on June 2, Dickerson pointed a .350-caliber Magnum pistol at her while they were arguing inside her North Hollywood home.

She contends that on that day, Dickerson broke off their engagement.

"I never proposed to her. Not once," he said Tuesday.

However, Dickerson said that if the child is proven to be his, he will take responsibility.

"A child of mine will be taken care of," he said.

Howe wins first outing with 89ers

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Steve Howe picked up a victory Tuesday in his first appearance since being suspended for drug abuse as the Oklahoma City 89ers rallied to defeat Iowa, 5-4.

The lefthanded reliever came in the top of the seventh with Oklahoma City trailing 4-1 and tossed three innings of no-hit relief.

Howe struck out two and walked none as he threw 38 pitches, 24 of them strikes. One baserunner reached second on an error by centerfielder Cecil Espy.

Howe reported to the 89ers Tuesday declaring himself to be in the best shape of his life.

The Texas Rangers signed Howe to a minor league contract Sunday. Oklahoma City is the Rangers' American Association farm team.

"I'm throwing the ball conditionwise and arm strength-wise right now as well as 1983," Howe said before the game started. In 1983, the lefthander appeared in 46 games, had an ERA of 1.44 and had 18 saves.

Texas General Manager Tom Grieve introduced Howe at a news conference at All Sports Stadium. He said Howe would make "no more than two outings" from the bullpen before starting a game for the 89ers, but Grieve said there was no timetable on Howe's return to the major leagues.

"Steve is healthy and ready to pitch," Grieve said. "He can probably do more than we think he can."

Howe spent parts of last month pitching for the Tabasco Ganaderos in the Class AAA Mexican League. He gave up four hits and no runs, striking out 29 in 23 innings pitched.

Howe answered questions for 40 minutes, while glancing down on the field where the 89ers were preparing for their 7:35 p.m. game against Iowa.

NL

The AL posed serious scoring threats in the second and ninth innings.

Winfield doubled to lead off the second but was doubled off second base when the next hitter, Cal Ripken Jr., lined a shot that first baseman Jack Clark speared in the air.

"I guess I'm just a glove man now," said Clark, who leads the majors with 86 RBI. "Get the glove on the hit, make the catch and get it over to (shortstop) Ozzie Smith."

Winfield was thrown out at home by Bedrosian to end the ninth. Winfield was on second when Harold Reynolds hit a grounder fielded by first baseman Keith Hernandez, who threw to shortstop Hubie Brooks for a forceout. Brooks then threw to first to try to double up Reynolds, but the throw was wide. Bedrosian made a diving catch before scrambling to his feet and throwing home to get Winfield.

"If I don't catch the ball, the game is over," Bedrosian said. "It's a do-or-die play. I just went for it. It was just full extension, one of those Ozzie Smith-type catches."

Scott said he wasn't in top form for his start.

"My split-fingered fastball wasn't exploding," he said. "When you don't have your good stuff, you just try not to walk anybody and keep the ball in play. I had some great defensive plays behind me."

IT WAS obvious that the hitters on both teams had a difficult time picking up the ball in the early going. The game started at 5:40 p.m. PST.

"Without making any alibis, it was awfully hard seeing the ball," said Houston Astro Mike Scott is the first of eight NL pitchers to take the mound Tuesday in the 58th All-Star game.

Philadelphia third baseman Mike Schmidt. "You couldn't pick up the spin on the rotation. This is not the best time in the world to start a game. it makes it awfully hard on the hitters to see the ball."

Said right fielder Darryl Strawberry of New York: "I just couldn't follow the ball at all. It kind of snuck up on you. It was almost impossible to see. You just try to make the best of it."

Sutcliffe was glad for any help he could get.

"I enjoyed everything these two days except the two innings I threw today," he said. "I couldn't have been more nervous. The whole world was watching, and I didn't want to be the one to give up the first run. Thankfully I got through it OK."

Howell, pitching for the first time in an All-Star game, came on in the 12th and retired three straight batters, striking out the last two. Virgil opened the 13th with a single and went to second on Brooks' one-out single to right.

"I don't think its going to be a career-ending loss, but I'm not going to shrug it off under the circumstances, it happening in my home park," Howell said.

HOWELL WAS the fourth pitcher to lose an All-Star Game at his home park.

"What I do from here on is what matters. I've got to be tough and battle back. we have a good ballclub. We're only two games out of first place and they're going to need me down the stretch regardless of what a few fans think," Howell said.

Howell's earned run average of 4.86 was the highest of any pitcher selected to the All-Star Game. But the right-hander had been very effective in most regular-season appearances over the last month.

McGwire was 0-for-3 in his first All-Star outing but hit one of only two balls which reached the warning track, giving the home crowd a mild thrill in the seventh inning. Atlanta's Dale Murphy caught McGwire's fly to right a few feet in front of the wall in the the extreme corner.

"I didn't really think it had a chance to go out but Murphy was playing way over and I was hoping he wouldn't be able to get to it," McGwire said.

The only other player coming even close to hitting a homer during the long night was Kevin Seitzer, whose fly to deep center in the 10th was caught by Willie McGee.

"So much for the lively ball, right?" McGwire said.

a Heisman Trophy winner at Auburn and was considered by some scouts the best running back prospect in a decade.

— His position, one of the least complicated to learn. "He already knows an off-tackle play from a quick trap or an end run," said Jack Faulkner, administrator of football operations for the Los Angeles Rams. "It would be a lot harder if he was an offensive lineman or a defensive back."

— The team. The Raiders got considerable production last year from Napoleon McCallum while McCallum was also serving as a full-time naval officer. The Navy has made McCallum unavailable this year and Flores implied Jackson would be used as his replacement.

Moreover, the Raiders use a less complicated offensive system than many other NFL teams.

"Playing for their offense is easier than playing for our offense with all of Dan Reeves' shifts," Hardy said.

But they were also concerned that the quick transition can lead to injury, particularly if Jackson switches back and forth for several years.

"With the two seasons running so close together, he'll need total dedication to both sports," Miami Dolphins Coach Don Shula said.

"He'll have to be a little lucky," Hardy said. "He can put on the uniform and run the football as soon as he learns the system. But if he takes a hard lick early on his shoulder or his knee he could get hurt badly because his muscles aren't use to taking hits."

"From a mental standpoint, it's difficult switching to football from a noncontact sport, where he hasn't been hit," Faulkner noted.

Quotes from All-Stars

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Quotes from the 58th All-Star Game Tuesday night:

"I knew it was going to be tough on the hitters early in the game. With the sun and lighting, the ball was really hard to see. Late in the game, was the time for the hitters." AL outfielder Rickey Henderson.

"It was tough to hit early. You just couldn't see the ball. Give the pitchers credit, but that time of day is tough to hit." AL outfielder Dave Winfield.

"I thought it was going. I said 'Go, go, get outta here.' That was the greatest thrill I've had — the thought that it had a chance. Wouldn't that have been awesome?" AL infielder Kevin Seitzer, on the fly ball he hit to the warning track in the 10th inning.

"You ask me why there was not many runs. To me, it was it was a combination of three things. One, the hitters don't know the pitchers that well; two, the twilight; and three, just plain old quality pitching." NL pitcher Orel Hershiser.

"The ball just kicked off my glove. It was a tough play, but a play I've made a million times before. I'm just glad I didn't cost them any runs." NL shortstop Ozzie Smith, on his third-inning error, his first in seven All-Star appearances.

"Winfield's a big man. He ran into me hard. There was a lot of beef hitting me. I had to stay in and take the hit. I was short-hopped on the throw and was expecting to get hit. It was a do-or-die play, pick it and get ready to get hit." — NL catcher Ozzie Virgil on a ninth-inning play at the plate when he tagged Winfield trying to score from third.

"I enjoyed everything these two days except the two innings I threw today. I couldn't have been more nervous. The whole world was watching and I didn't want to be the one to give up the first run. Thankfully, I got through it OK. However, the thing I'll remember most about this All-Star game is winning the Roberto Clemente Award. That's the ultimate for me." NL pitcher Rick Sutcliffe, who received the humanitarian award named for the late Pittsburgh Pirate Hall of Famer.

"I'm just happy to be here. Sure, I would have like to have gotten a hit, but it was a privilege, an honor for me to be at my first game." NL outfielder Eric Davis.

U.S. track wins three gold, cuts into Russian edge

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — The American track and field team has raised the interest level in the World University Games.

The United States won three of six gold medals awarded in track Tuesday and closed in on the Soviet Union in the gold-medal race, 15-13.

The Soviet Union has 45 medals overall, while the United States has 36. Romania also has 13 gold medals, 31 overall.

Lee McRae's 10.07-second clocking in the men's 100 meters was the fourth fastest time in the world this year and was by far the best technical performance seen here in nine days of competition.

McRae beat compatriot Brian Cooper, who was second at 10.21, while Gwen Torrence won the women's 100 in 11.09.

The United States lost both sprint titles in Kobe, Japan, in 1985 and the victories here have stirred great interest in this young, inexperienced squad.

"There is great talent in our team although many lack great international experience, but it is probably the strongest team we have ever had at a Universiade," track spokesman Bruce Tenen said.

He said many of the athletes here were headed for outstanding performances in the future.

McRae and Torrence were surely no green newcomers, but Patty Murray of Park Ridge, Ill., was and she was thrilled with her victory in the 10,000 in 33:11.27.

Murray and China's Zhong Huandi waged a furious battle over 24 of the 25 laps before Murray sprinted away in the final 200 meters.

"Everyone was switching and when I was in front I was comfortable," Murray said. "On the last lap I waited until the final straight and then I gave it everything I had."

She called it the greatest victory of her life, and she said she expected to do well at the Pan Am Games next month at Indianapolis.

"It was my second-fastest time ever, and it has given me the morale and confidence for my future," Murray said.

Torrence will join her at the Pan-Am Games, but McRae has already made it out on top, qualifying for the World Championships at Rome in August.

"I was able to get out of the blocks really well," McRae said of his victory. "Then I just ran my race and felt relaxed. I had no idea what kind of times we had. I just knew I was running like my old self."

In other women's finals, Nawal El Moutawakel of Morocco, the only gold medalist in track and field from the 1984 Olympics competing here, won the 400-meter hurdles in 55.21. After winning the gold medal at the Los Angeles Games in 54.61, she is making a comeback after a leg operation.

Svetlana Isaeva of Bulgaria cleared 6 feet, 4¾ inches in the high jump to capture the gold medal, while Liliana Nastase of Romania took the women's decathlon with 6,364 points.

Michael Franks, who coasted to an easy semifinal victory in the semifinals of the 400 in 45.56, led today's list of competitors in today's finals.

The Americans also topped the semifinals in the 110 hurdles with Arthur Blake and Keith Talley, and they had a good chance in many of the other track finals.

The track competition was the main show of the day with seven finals. The others are the hammer, pole vault, men's 10,000, and the women's 400 and shot put.

On the final day of swimming competition Tuesday, the American women set a relay record and the American men finally won an individual gold.

The American women's team of Mary O'Leary of Tucson, Ariz., Lisa Meyers of Mission Viejo, Calif., Cheryl Kriegsman of Los Angeles and Mitzi Kremer of Titusville, Fla., combined for a time of 8:09.52 in the 800, shattering the University Games mark of 8:20.51, set in 1985 by the Soviet Union.

Ali considers rare operation to fight illness

CHICAGO (AP) — Muhammad Ali said Tuesday night he is considering a rare medical procedure to relieve Parkinson's Syndrome but there is no time frame for the surgery.

Ali made his comments at O'Hare International Airport on his way home from a trip to Mexico where he was attending a boxing safety symposium and where the procedure is performed.

"I'd rather not talk about it," Ali, boxing's only three-time heavyweight champion, said of the procedure. "I'm thinking about it, that's all.

"I don't know exactly," he replied when asked when he might decide. "I'd rather not talk about it."

Earlier Tuesday, Ali was quoted by friends as saying the procedure would not be performed.

"I'm happy I'm shaking up the world again," a close personal friend said Ali told him, "... but no doctor's going to touch me."

In Mexico City Monday night, Dr. Ignacio Madrazo, a neurosurgeon, told ABC's Monday Sportsnite that there was a "great chance" he would perform the operation on Ali.

A spokeswoman at Humana Hospital in Mexico City told The Associated Press that the 45-year-old Ali would be tested this week and surgery would depend on the test results.

Ali's longtime friend and business associate Larry Kolb of New York said Ali told him he had decided against any operation, for the time being. Kolb said he spoke with Ali by telephone from Mexico City Monday night and again Tuesday morning before he flew home.

Ali told Kolb he met with Madrazo after the doctor approached him.

"He said he would listen and see what the guy had to say, but his position throughout was that he wanted to get a lot of other opinions," Kolb said. "He wanted to know what the longterm success rates were and wanted all his other doctors to verify what this surgeon was saying.

"He was in close contact with his doctor in Los Angeles, who advised him not to do this. It was too speculative at this point. While he listened to this surgeon (Madrazo), it was totally inaccurate to say there was a great likelihood he would have the operation," Kolb said.

Kolb said Ali told him he had not undergone any tests and didn't plan to be tested "anytime in the future unless he gets enough indication the procedure is safe."

SUMMER'S BERRY TIME

Raspberries, strawberries, blackberries, blueberries – nature's jewels of summer! Whether savored alone or the highlight of a recipe, berries are one of the season's most luscious treats.

Here are some tips to help you enjoy them for the coming months.

- When purchasing berries, make sure they are dry. The container should not be stained with juices – this can be an indication of overripe or damaged berries.
- Fresh berries should be enjoyed as soon after purchase as possible, while at their freshest. However, they can be refrigerated up to three days or frozen up to three months.
- Wash berries just before using – not storing – since water can cause berries to mold sooner.

Sure to extend enjoyment well beyond simple berries and cream, these recipes enhance the color and sensational sweet taste of these seasonal delights.

For a classic treat, try Homemade Strawberry Ice Cream. The base, made with corn starch and eggs, gives this ice cream a deliciously rich French custard texture.

HOMEMADE STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM

1/4 cup sugar
1 tablespoon corn starch
1/8 teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
2/3 cup light corn syrup, divided
1 egg yolk, slightly beaten
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1 pint strawberries, sliced
1 cup heavy or whipping cream

In 1-quart saucepan combine sugar, corn starch and salt. Gradually stir in milk until smooth. Stir in 1/3 cup corn syrup and egg yolk. Stirring constantly, bring to boil over medium heat and boil 1 minute. Remove from heat; stir in vanilla. Turn into medium bowl and cover surface with plastic wrap. Refrigerate at least 1 hour or until chilled. Meanwhile, in blender or food processor, finely chop strawberries with remaining 1/3 cup corn syrup. Add to custard with cream; stir until well blended. Freeze in 2-quart electric or hand-crank freezer following manufacturer's directions. Spoon into freezer containers; cover and freeze several hours or until firm. Makes about 2 quarts.

An all-time favorite! What better way to enjoy blueberries than in a delicious pie.

FRESH BLUEBERRY PIE

1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons corn starch
4 cups fresh blueberries
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel (optional)
1 recipe double crust pastry
1 tablespoon margarine

In large bowl combine sugar and corn starch. Add blueberries and lemon peel; toss to coat well. Line 9-inch pie plate with one-half pastry rolled to 1/8-inch thickness, allowing 1-inch overhang. Spoon blueberry mixture into pie plate. Dot with margarine. Roll remaining pastry 2 inches larger than pie plate. Make several slits to allow steam to escape. Cover pie with pastry; seal and flute edge. Bake in 425°F oven 35 to 45 minutes or until bubbly and crust is browned. Makes 1 (9-inch) pie.

This gorgeous Meringue Berry Pie is a snap to make. Fill the meringue with your favorite ice cream and sprinkle with a combination of strawberries, blueberries and raspberries. Topped with a mouth-watering fresh raspberry sauce, this dessert is sure to receive accolades!

MERINGUE BERRY PIE

(Pictured)

1/2 cup sugar, divided
1/4 cup slivered almonds, toasted and finely ground
2 tablespoons corn starch
2 egg whites, at room temperature
1/8 teaspoon cream of tartar
1 quart vanilla ice cream, softened
4 cups assorted berries, such as blueberries, raspberries and strawberries
Fresh Raspberry Sauce (recipe follows)

Grease 9-inch pie plate. In small bowl combine 1/4 cup sugar, almonds and corn starch. In small bowl with mixer at high speed, beat egg whites until foamy. Add cream of tartar. Continue beating until soft peaks form. Gradually add remaining 1/4 cup sugar; beat until stiff peaks form. Fold in almond mixture. Pipe or spread meringue evenly on bottom and up sides of prepared pie plate. If desired, pipe decorative edge to form a shell. Bake in 275°F oven 1 hour. Turn off heat. Leave meringue in oven with door closed for 1 hour. Remove from oven. Cool completely on wire rack. Just before serving, fill meringue with ice cream and top with berries. Serve with Raspberry Sauce. Makes 8 servings.

Fresh Raspberry Sauce

1/2 cup sugar
1 tablespoon corn starch
1/3 cup water
1 pint raspberries

In 2-quart saucepan combine sugar and corn starch. Gradually stir in water until smooth. Add raspberries. Stirring constantly, bring to boil over medium heat and boil 1 minute. Serve warm or cold. Makes about 1 1/2 cups.

The sweet crisp topping on this Berry Crunch gives just the right balance to that tart berry taste. Top with sour cream or vanilla yogurt instead of the more traditional whipped cream or ice cream.

BERRY CRUNCH

3 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons corn starch, divided
2 pints blackberries or raspberries (about 5 cups)
3/4 cup quick oats
3/4 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1/3 cup margarine
1/3 cup coarsely chopped walnuts

In medium bowl combine sugar and 1 tablespoon corn starch. Add berries; toss to coat well. Turn into 10 x 6 x 2-inch baking dish. In large bowl combine oats, brown sugar and remaining 2 tablespoons corn starch. With pastry blender or 2 knives, cut in margarine until coarse crumbs form. Stir in walnuts. Spoon evenly over berries. Bake in 400°F oven 20 to 25 minutes or until bubbly and topping is golden brown. Makes 6 servings.

These striking Lemony Blueberry Parfaits make a perfect ending to a summer dinner party. The corn starch custard can be made in advance and layered with blueberries well before serving.

LEMON BLUEBERRY PARFAITS

1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons corn starch
3/4 cup water
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
2 teaspoons grated lemon peel
1/4 cup lemon juice
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1/2 cup heavy or whipping cream, whipped
1 pint blueberries

In 1-quart saucepan combine sugar and corn starch. Gradually stir in water until smooth. Stir in egg yolks. Stirring constantly, bring to boil over medium heat and boil 1 minute. Remove from heat. Stir in lemon peel and juice and butter. Turn into medium bowl and cover surface with plastic wrap. Refrigerate 45 minutes or until cool. Fold in whipped cream. In 6 parfait glasses layer blueberries and lemon mixture. Refrigerate 1 hour or until ready to serve. Makes 6 servings.

Food flavors enhanced by adding spices, herbs

By PIERRE FRANEY
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — If I gave lessons to novice cooks, one of the first subjects might be "variations on a theme" — that is, how to alter the flavor of a dish by adding an herb or a spice or by changing the cooking technique.

I thought of this recently when I was asked to prepare an old family standby, chicken Pojarski. It is made with ground chicken (an alternative is veal) blended with cream and bread crumbs.

The dish is said to have been created in old Russia by a tavern keeper named Pojarski. Originally made of chopped game or a blend of game and beef, it is, in effect, a version of hamburger.

When I prepared the dish I added a trace of ground cumin, a minor change that made a major transformation in taste. I served the dish with a butter sauce flavored with fresh chopped chives. The original recipe does not call for a sauce.

CHICKEN BURGERS WITH CHIVE SAUCE

4 skinless, boneless chicken breast halves, about 1 pound
1⅓ cups fine fresh bread crumbs
⅓ cup fresh or canned chicken broth
¼ cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons finely grated onion
½ teaspoon ground cumin
Salt to taste if desired
Freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons corn, peanut or vegetable oil
4 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons finely chopped chives

Cut chicken into 1-inch cubes.

Put cubes in a food processor or an electric blender and blend thoroughly. Scrape chicken into a mixing bowl and add ⅓ cup bread crumbs, ¼ cup chicken broth, cream, cumin, salt and pepper. Use fingers to blend well.

Spoon remaining cup of bread crumbs onto a flat surface. Divide chicken mixture into four portions; shape each into a ball and roll ball in bread crumbs. Flatten each ball into a round patty about ¾ inch thick.

Heat oil in a nonstick skillet. Add patties and cook over medium-low heat about 5 minutes or until nicely browned on one side. Turn patties and cook about 5 minutes. Transfer to a warm platter.

Heat 2 tablespoons butter in small saucepan andadd remaining broth. Bring to boil, stirring with wire whisk, and cook until reduced by half. Gradually add remaining 2 tablespoons butter, stirring with whisk. Stir in chives and pour sauce over the burgers.

Yield: 4 servings.

RICE WITH PEPPERS AND CORN

1 tablespoon butter
⅓ cup finely chopped onion
⅓ cup diced sweet red pepper
¼ teaspoon stem saffron, optional
1 cup rice
Salt to taste if desired
Freshly ground pepper to taste
1⅓ cups fresh or canned chicken broth
1 medium-size ear of corn, shucked

Heat butter in a saucepan and add onion, sweet pepper and saffron.

Add rice, salt, pepper and broth and bring to boil. Cover and cook 15 minutes.

Meanwhile, cut and scrape kernels from ear of corn. There should be about ¾ cup. Stir corn into the rice mixture and cover. Cook about 2 minutes longer and serve.

Yield: 4 servings.

Herbs, grills add pleasure to summer

By PIERRE FRANEY
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Summer is the best of seasons for food preparation. An abundance of herbs — fresh thyme, tarragon, chives, chervil — are ready for picking just outside my kitchen door. And I find pleasure, too, in cleaning and firing up my much-used outdoor grills, of which I have two: one for wood and charcoal, the other heated by gas.

For cleaning the grill, I have a substantial metal brush nearby and put it to use while the grill is still hot; the retained heat eases the job. Occasionally I wash the grill with detergent and water to eliminate any charred bits of meat.

GRILLED SALMON WITH SHRIMP

8 large shrimp, about ½ pound
¼ cup olive oil
Salt to taste, if desired
Freshly ground pepper to taste
1 tablespoon chopped fresh thyme
¼ teaspoon dried hot red pepper flakes
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
3 tablespoons melted butter
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley.

Preheat charcoal or gas grill, or broiler, to high. Cut salmon into four pieces of equal size and set aside.

Place each shrimp on a flat surface and cut through back of shell, leaving shell and underside feelers intact. Open each shrimp butterfly fashion and devein.

Pour oil into a flat dish and add shrimp and salmon. Turn pieces to coat on all sides. Sprinkle all over with salt, pepper, thyme, pepper flakes and lemon juice. Cover with plastic wrap and let stand at room temperature about 10 to 15 minutes.

When ready to cook, remove seafood from marinade. Pour marinade into small saucepan. If using a broiler, arrange salmon skin side up on a baking sheet. Place under broiler about four inches from source of heat. Leave broiler door partly open. Broil 1½ minutes on one side and turn. Arrange shrimp shell side down around salmon and place under broiler. Cook two minutes and turn shrimp. Leave broiler door totally open. Continue cooking salmon and shrimp one minute.

If using a charcoal or gas grill, place salmon pieces skin side down on grill and cook about 1½ minutes. Turn salmon and place shrimp shell side down. Continue cooking two minutes, turning shrimp occasionally.

Transfer pieces to a heated platter. Add melted butter to reserved marinade and bring to a boil. Pour butter mixture over seafood. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve.

VEGETABLES AU GRATIN

1 small eggplant, about ¾ pound
1 yellow squash, about ¼ pound
1 small zucchini, about ¼ pound
7 tablespoons olive oil
1 cup finely chopped onions
1 teaspoon finely minced garlic
1 bay leaf
Salt to taste if desired
Freshly ground pepper to taste
3 red ripe plum tomatoes, about ½ pound
¼ cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese.

Preheat broiler to high.

Cut off and discard ends of the eggplant, squash and zucchini. Cut squash and eggplant into very thin rounds. There should be about two cups of each. Cut eggplant lengthwise into quarters and cut each quarter into very thin slices. There should be about four cups.

Heat six tablespoons of oil in a skillet and add eggplant, zucchini and squash slices. Cook, shaking skillet and stirring so slices cook evenly, about eight minutes. Add onions and garlic and stir to blend. Add bay leaf, salt and pepper. Cover and cook, stirring occasionally, about three minutes.

Meanwhile, cut away and discard core of each tomato. Cut tomatoes crosswise into thin slices.

Remove and discard bay leaf. Pour cooked vegetables into a baking dish and arrange tomato slices on top to cover. Brush tomatoes with remaining one tablespoon oil and sprinkle evenly with cheese.

Rubbing herbs on meat replaces marinating

Associated Press

Here's the rub. A mixture of spices or herbs rubbed into the surface of chops, steak or a roast before grilling gives lots of flavor with less mess and time than overnight marinating.

SPICED PORK CHOPS

4 pork chops, cut ½ inch thick
1 tablespoon soy sauce
½ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon pepper

Peel skin from gingerroot. Rub gingerroot over surface of both sides of each pork chop. Brush chops with soy sauce. In a custard cup combine paprika, dry mustard and pepper. Sprinkle spice mixture over pork chops; rub in with your fingers. Grill pork chops on an uncovered grill directly over medium-hot coals for 5 minutes. Turn and grill 5 to 7 minutes more or until no pink remains.

WHAT'S COOKING

Favorite recipes crowd-pleasing

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

When First United Methodist Church of Midland's United Methodist Women decided to publish a cookbook, Anelle Mack was a natural to contribute. At the church, she is a member of Partners' Class couples' class, vice chairman of the administrative board, member of pastor-parish relations committee and member of planning committee for new kitchen and banquet facilities.

A graduate of Kansas State University, Mrs. Mack also taught home economics for about six years. "I used to judge food at county fairs when I was a home economics teacher," she added.

Mrs. Mack comes by her cooking skills naturally. "My folks were wheat farmers. We always had hired harvest help, and I always helped cook three meals a day for eight to 10 people" during harvest, she said. "I was also in 4-H."

Although daughter Rhonda and son Rodney are both grown and gone from home, she still sometimes cooks for a crowd, especially during the summer when her son comes home from graduate school. "He always brings a group here in time for Summer Mummers," usually about 16 people, she said.

And Mrs. Mack is no stranger to publishing. "I've been in Midland Memorial Hospital cookbook and the church cookbook, the Texaco cookbook, and I've had several recipes printed in Southern Living."

Yeast breads and pies are her specialties, with cinnamon rolls, danish pastries, pecan pies and cherry pies out in front.

Many of her recipes were given to her by other people, but "I do change them a lot of the time."

Mrs. Mack said she is facing new cooking challenges these days. Not only is she learning to prepare more healthy foods "because we don't need as much sugar or cholesterol or sodium," she also is learning the tricks of high-altitude cooking. Mrs. Mack and her husband Jim have a cabin in the Colorado Rockies, where she has learned "cakes fall, it takes a long time for potatoes to boil and beans take forever — you have to soak them. I don't do as much baking."

Some of the Macks' favorite recipes follow.

Fruit butters add taste of summer to breads, muffins

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

Creamy fruit butters taste great on warm muffins or croissants, and add a special touch to waffles, pancakes, or breakfast toast. Spread over hot toasted English muffins or sweet breads and serve with a cup of herbal tea for a refreshing snack.

Fruit butter can mean one of two things: either softened butter flavored with fruit or jam, or fresh fruit cooked down and pureed until it has a buttery consistency. The latter contains no actual butter, but resembles it in texture.

To flavor butter with fresh fruit, choose the pick of the season: apricots, peaches, strawberries, raspberries — alone or in combination. In blender container, whip ½-pound softened butter or margarine with 1 tablespoon honey until fluffy. On high speed blend in ½-cup sliced fruit until smooth and creamy.

To make real fruit butter, simmer fresh fruit with spices and liquid until it cooks down into a sweet, creamy spread. Then pack into sterilized jars to preserve the flavors of summer for the months ahead.

The recipes for Yellow Peach Butter and Apricot Butter are from "Rodale's Basic Natural Foods Cookbook," Rodale Press, Inc., 1984. Rodale recommends processing homemade fruit butter in a boiling water bath if it is to be canned and stored.

NOTE: Do not can fruit butter made from overripe fruit, since it is low in acid and may contain deadly botulism bacteria.

Pack hot fruit butter into hot sterilized tempered glass jars and seal with metal self-sealing lids. Place rack on bottom of water bath canner, then fill canner half-full with hot water. Bring to a boil over high heat, lower jars onto rack (don't let jars touch), and add boiling water to cover jars by one to two inches. Cover the canner and boil 15 to 25 minutes for most fruits. Temperature during processing must reach 240 degrees Fahrenheit to destroy bacteria spores.

When done processing, remove jars, cool for 12 hours and check seal by pressing center of lid. If it is slightly indented and lid will not move, the seal is good.

HONEY-NUT MARMALADE BUTTER

½ cup (1 stick) butter or margarine, at room temperature
¼ cup honey
¼ cup finely chopped toasted walnuts
2 tablespoons orange marmalade

In small bowl beat butter or margarine with fork until fluffy. Gradually beat in honey, then blend in walnuts. Swirl in orange marmalade. Refrigerate, covered, letting butter stand at room temperature several minutes before serving, to soften.

YELLOW PEACH BUTTER

6 cups sliced yellow peaches
¾ cup water
¼ cup lemon juice
10 whole cloves
1 stick of cinnamon, 2 inches long
1¼ cups honey

Combine peaches, water and lemon juice in large, heavy-bottomed saucepan. Cover and simmer until peaches are soft, about 10 to 15 minutes. Place in blender and process to a puree. Return to saucepan.

Add cloves and cinnamon and continue to cook, uncovered, over low heat to desired consistency, stirring occasionally. Remove cloves and cinnamon. Stir in honey. Immediately ladle into ½-pint jars, seal, and process in boiling water bath for 15 minutes. When cool, check seals.

APRICOT BUTTER

4 pounds apricots, chopped
½ cup honey
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg

Puree apricots in batches in blender. Then place in Dutch oven or slow cooker. Add honey, cinnamon and nutmeg. Cover and cook over low heat for 4 hours. (If butter is not as thick as desired, cook longer with lid off, stirring often.) Ladle into ½-pint jars, seal and process for 15 minutes in a boiling water bath. When cool, check seals.

'Light Desserts' use fresh fruits

Hearst News Service

The cookbook "Light Desserts" from Sunset magazine, offers suggestions on cooking with fruits year round, including:

WATERMELON CHIFFON PIE

About 3½ pounds ripe watermelon
½ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
2 teaspoons lemon juice
2 egg whites
½ cup whipping cream
1 9-inch graham cracker crust
Watermelon balls

Cut off rind. Cut fruit into cubes; remove seeds. Whirl melon cubes in blender or food processor until smooth. Pour through fine wine strainer set over a bowl; discard pulp. Makes about 1½ cups juice.

Pour melon juice into pan and stir in sugar and salt. Sprinkle gelatin over juice mixture and let stand for about five minutes to soften. Stir over medium heat until gelatin and sugar are completely dissolved, then stir in lemon juice.

Cover gelatin mixture and refrigerate until thick enough to mound slightly when dropped from spoon (about one hour). In large bowl of electric mixer, beat egg whites until stiff peaks form; fold in melon mixture. In small bowl of mixer beat cream until stiff peaks form; fold into melon mixture. Spoon into crust.

Cover pie lightly and refrigerate until the filling is firm — at least six hours. Garnish with watermelon balls before serving.

FRESH FIG AND RICOTTA TULIPS

12 medium-size to large ripe figs
8 ounces (1 cup) ricotta cheese
½ teaspoon grated lemon peel
⅛ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup sugar
12 whole unblanched almonds

Trim stems from figs; cut each fig open into tulip shape by slicing into quarters from stem end to about ½-inch from blossom end. Set aside.

In small bowl of electric mixer, beat ricotta cheese, lemon peel, salt, vanilla and 2 tablespoons of sugar until smoothly blended. In another small bowl, beat egg white until very frothy; gradually add remaining 2 tablespoons of sugar and continue to beat until mixture holds stiff peaks. Gently fold into ricotta mixture.

To serve, arrange two or three sliced figs upright on each dessert plate. Gently open each fig and spoon about 2 tablespoons of cheese mixture into the center. Top with an almond.

Salad 'rainbow'

Associated Press

Plums are a rainbow fruit, with skins of black, purple, blue, red, green or yellow. Inside the meat may be yellow, red or green. Use any variety you like in this salad, or combine plums of different colors.

SWEET-SOUR PLUM SALAD

¼ cup vinegar
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 tablespoon dry sherry
1 teaspoon sugar
6 ounces fresh pea pods or one 6-ounce package frozen pea pods
12 fresh plums, pitted and sliced
½ cup broken walnuts
Bok choy leaves (optional)

To make dressing, in screw-top jar combine oil, vinegar, soy, sherry and sugar. Cover and shake well. Chill.

Remove strings and tips from fresh pea pods. Or run cold water over frozen pea pods to thaw slightly. In large bowl combine pea pods, plums and walnuts.

Shake dressing well. Add to plum mixture and toss to coat. If desired, serve in bok choy-lined bowl. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

'Meat merchandisers' market trends more than meat values

By MERLE ELLIS

In some parts of America, meat merchandisers are employing a new technique. "Meat merchandisers," for those of you who may not know the term, are third generation mutations of that proud breed of skilled craftsmen known to your grandmother as "butchers." Your mother probably called them "meat cutters," but today they are "meat merchandisers." They don't cut meat, many couldn't tell you from firsthand experience exactly what a steer looks like, let alone where a T-bone comes from or which cuts are tough and which are tender. What they do is "keep up with current trends," and "give consumers what they think they want."

Meat merchandisers seem less concerned with the real worth of the meat in the meat case than with what is called in the biz today "perceived value." Not "Is this cut of meat worth the price?" but, rather, "How can we make the consumer think that it's worth the price!?"

There are a number of ways that meat merchandisers merchandise meat in order to get you to pay more for it without feeling that you are being ripped off. One of the oldest tricks of the trade is what could be called "up labeling." That's calling a cut of meat by some fancy name so you can charge more for it.

A classic example of up labeling is "London Broil." There is no cut of meat on any cow called London Broil. That's a recipe name and the cut of meat called for in the classic recipe for it is flank steak. But it's such a tender-sounding term that meat merchandisers have for years been using it to label all sorts of cuts so they can get more money for them. Top round, for example, is one price if it's called what it is, but when the same cut is cut thick and labeled London Broil, it costs a lot more.

Another way to add "perceived value" to a cut of meat could be called the "cook's little helper" technique. That's the one where the man behind the meat counter helps you fix dinner. For example, instead of selling you cubes of beef to make beef kabobs, he makes kabobs for you. He cuts the cubes for you along with slices of onion and pepper and perhaps a mushroom or two. You pay beef prices not only for the cubes of beef but also for the peppers, onions and mushrooms.

The most recent way to increase "perceived value" is one I'll call the "Do it to dieters" technique.

I saw this being practiced at a beautiful Houston supermarket recently. Capitalizing on consumer concerns about calories, this meat merchandiser was boosting his meat prices by making use of recently published nutritional information provided by the Meat Nutri-Facts program of the National Livestock & Meat Board. There was a whole section of the meat case devoted to "Light-Lean" meat. Each cut carried a special label providing nutritional information from the Nutri-Facts program, but with the supermarket's colors and logo. Each cut, too, boasted that it contained "under 200 calories." Big deal! There were dozens of meat cuts in the same meat case that were just as lean, just as low in calories but considerably lower in price. They, of course, didn't carry the "Light-Lean" label.

The Nutri-Facts program was designed to provide good, sound, muchly needed nutritional information about meat, not to serve as a merchandising tool to rip off consumers.

If you're looking for lean meat, you don't need a label. Simply look for meat without fat — it's not hard to find. And you shouldn't have to pay a premium for it. In fact, it should be cheaper. It costs money to put fat on meat!

DEAR ABBY

Broken plans break bride's heart, pocketbook

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I became engaged last Christmas. We set our wedding date for June. When Joe (not his real name) proposed to me, he revealed that he had lived with a girl before I knew him. She became pregnant; he didn't want to marry her; she didn't want an abortion, so she had the baby. Joe convinced me, and my mother and father, that he had no obligation whatsoever to this woman or the child — that his attorney had settled it with her and her attorney. Joe is 29 and I am 24.

Two weeks before our wedding date, Joe told me that he had been "suddenly" served with papers for child support, and he decided to support this child, and ask for visiting rights as well!

Because our life together would be changed drastically, and because I think Joe lied to me about his obligation to his child, I called the wedding off.

My parents spent thousands of dollars preparing for our wedding — the deposit on the hall (not refundable), my gown and trousseau, engraved invitations, deposit for flowers, etc. I think Joe should repay my parents for all this. Joe disagrees because I'm the one who called the wedding off. (I called it off because he misrepresented himself and his intentions.)

I need your opinion. — BROKENHEARTED IN N.J.

DEAR BROKENHEARTED: I'm in your corner. Retain an attorney and have him work it out with Joe's attorney. (I hope that Joe has his attorney on a retainer. If he hasn't, he should.)

Rejoice. You could have married this man. I think you (and your parents) got off cheap.

DEAR ABBY: I am surprised at the number of men who tell me dirty jokes, then act annoyed when I don't react with a giggle, smirk or wink.

Frankly, I find this kind of talk embarrassing. Am I a prude? If you say I should loosen up, I'll try, but I was taught to be ... A LADY

DEAR LADY: Loosen up? No way! Let the offenders know you don't appreciate that kind of talk. If you don't object at the onset, the "jokes" will get dirtier and dirtier.

DEAR ABBY: I am planning a birthday party for my 5-year-old son. My problem is how to tell the mothers of the children who will be invited that instead of buying presents, to send cash instead.

I have two reasons for preferring cash. One, I spend a lot of time and effort searching for the right kind of toys for my son and I prefer him to have educational toys. And he already has plenty of toys. With cash, I will be able to buy something my son really needs.

Frankly, I would rather have people bring nothing at all than have them bring junk toys or clothes. So how do I tell them without appearing rude? — MRS. Y.

DEAR MRS. Y.: There is no way you can ask for cash instead of gifts. It's tacky and presumptuous.

Children bring gifts to birthday parties because part of the fun is seeing the "birthday boy" (or girl) open the gifts and express joy, excitement, surprise and appreciation. All children enjoy receiving gifts and giving them. It's part of the birthday tradition.

DEAR ABBY: In all the years I've been reading your column, I've never come across a problem like mine. Maybe you or one of your readers have been in a similar situation and can tell me how to get over this nagging, regrettable experience.

Last summer I went to my 50th high school reunion. It was wonderful seeing classmates I hadn't seen in many, many years. We had the banquet at the country club, and each person was asked to stand and give a 50-second verbal resume of what he or she had done in the last 50 years. That was pretty tough for me because I never could talk in front of a lot of people.

I started out OK, telling about how I married my childhood sweetheart right after graduation, went to live on a farm (which I loved), and even after my husband's heart attack less than a year ago, he was now working hard as ever. I said we were building a golf course that I hoped we could finish — if I didn't kill him first! Everyone laughed. I sat down real fast when I realized what I had said. I was devastated all evening and ever since, because I had meant to say "if he didn't kill HIMSELF first" (from all that hard work).

I can't forget that terrible blunder and I'm wondering what my classmates must have thought of me. The next day, I tried to tell a few people what I really meant, but I just couldn't. — DEVASTATED IN MINNESOTA

DEAR DEVASTATED: I would have pretended that what I had said, I had said in jest — which obviously is the way it was perceived by your classmates. Please, don't give this another moment's thought. I can assure you, none of your classmates have.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

THURSDAY, JULY 16, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Try to get negative people out of your hair in the year ahead and you will have more time to relax. Your energy increases — and so does productivity — when you concentrate on the positive! Realize that nobody can control your life unless you let them. Fascinating dream experiences enliven your nights and days. Romance is like a crazy quilt. What you get depends on how you arrange the pieces.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: founder of Christian Science Mary Baker Eddy, dancer-actress Ginger Rogers, artist Sir Joshua Reynolds, actress Barbara Stanwyck, tennis champ Margaret Smith Court, consumer advocate Bess Myerson.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Finish what you start. A romantic interlude could have a negative effect on family and business ties unless you are careful. You feel like you are spinning your wheels. You are not!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): There is no reason for you to be anyone's fall guy. An old friend is counting on you. Keep a promise. Luck will be with you so long as you do not bet.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take things as they come and you will emerge on top. Your independence helps you turn an important relationship around. Others are eager to jump on your bandwagon. Welcome new allies.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Money is available from traveling or writing. It is time to put a rebellious streak in mothballs and show your true colors. Your ability is even greater than you think. Big money is possible.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Try not to get too far ahead of yourself. Maintain a healthy skepticism and you will do just fine. Postpone a final decision until you can double-check certain details. Your caution pays off.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Explore writing as a career. You may have latent talent. Better times lie just ahead! Travel and romance go hand in hand. Watch your cash when you are away from home. Return calls promptly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You could be spending too much money. Become a comparison shopper or make do with what you have. Postpone signing contracts or agreements. You are wise to suspend judgment about a romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Business finances continue to be sensitive. Better wait a while before branching out. Favorable agreements can be finalized. A move to another city is a real possibility. Find out more about your options.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your intuition is right on target, especially in the financial area. You could make a killing on the stock market. Home life will have its ups and downs. Be tolerant of partner's foibles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Clear your desk of routine tasks so that you are free to move quickly when an unusual opportunity presents itself. A live-for-the-moment attitude can be dangerous. Avoid going overboard.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be careful if traveling today. Do not take any unnecessary chances. Contact with an influential person could prove exceptionally lucky. Evening favors happy romance. Do not reveal too much too soon.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Devote special attention to correspondence. Something you send through the mail could help your career. Intellectual endeavors are favored over physical feats today. Get together with people who share your interests and aspirations.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East

2 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ◇

To the average player, the prospect of a finesse evokes the same response as waving a red rag in front of a bull—it is too much to resist. On occasion, though, you have choices and will have to determine which finesse to take.

South obviously did not believe that a five-card major was a bar to opening one no trump. Thereafter, an invitational Stayman sequence led to a normal four-heart game.

After the queen of diamonds opening lead, declarer found a quick way to go down. He won the ace of diamonds and ran the nine of hearts. West took his king and persevered with diamonds, and declarer now had to lose a trick in each side suit for down one.

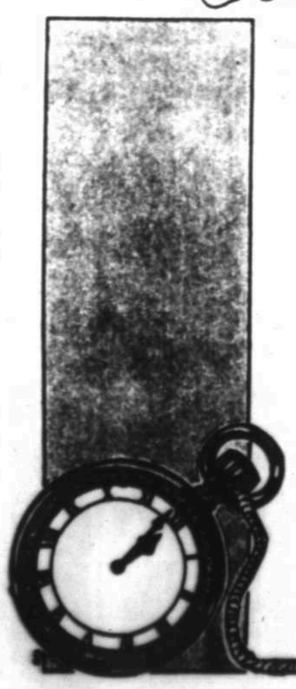

If the trump finesse were going to succeed, it would do so later as well as at trick two. Declarer should have parlayed his chances by first trying to find the king of spades in front of the queen.

Correct technique is to win the first trick in the closed hand and immediately lead a low spade toward the queen. As the cards lie, West can do no better than rise with the king and continue with a diamond. Declarer wins in dummy, cashes the queen of spades, comes back to hand with the ace of clubs and discards a diamond on the ace of spades. When he later ruffs a diamond on the board, he can try the heart finesse for a possible overtrick.

Declarer is no worse off if the queen of spades loses to the king in the East hand. Declarer can win the diamond return in dummy and try the trump finesse for his contract.

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

Barker criticizes treatment of chimps on set of 'Project X'

Barker

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Animal experts and Benji's trainer say game-show host and animal-rights activist Bob Barker is unfairly criticizing treatment of chimps on a movie set.

Barker said a technician told him chimps were beaten on the set of "Project X," in which a young Air Force pilot played by Matthew Broderick saves a group of chimps from a terrible experiment.

"I am not thought of very highly by the people in the fur industry, I'm not very popular with the people who use factory farming, and now I guess I'm being criticized by people who misuse animals in movies," said Barker, who refused to be host of a Miss Universe pageant until contestants agreed to wear fake furs instead of the real thing.

Barker said his critics "are trying to save their own reputations and perpetuate the myth that animals are treated well in the entertainment industry."

He supports legislation to make illegal the use of animals in film and television.

Frank Inn, trainer of Benji the movie dog, was joined by "Project X" director Joseph Kaplan, veterinarian Martin Dinnes, and actress and game preserve owner Tippi Hedren in criticizing Barker on Tuesday.

The American Humane Association said the reports of animal beatings on the set were only rumor.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Police, a three-piece band that evolved from punk to mainstream rock 'n' roll and achieved international success, is no more, says Andy Summers, the trio's guitarist.

"It's all right to say, officially, that it's over," Summers said Monday. "I feel not right in saying that it's still together, because things have been drifting the past three years."

In the interim, Summers, 44, has been writing soundtracks, making duet albums with guitarist Robert Fripp, and is writing, singing and touring with a new, four-man band.

The band's lead singer, Sting, has gone on to a solo career and acting in movies. Drummer Stewart Copeland composes music for movies and television.

"Anybody who's been up as high as the Police were, well, it's a wonderful thing, and it creates a high platform" Summers said. "But you have to get over it, too."

• • •

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — William R. Overton, a U.S. district judge who struck down Arkansas' creation-science law as unconstitutional, died Tuesday of cancer. He was 47.

Overton received a bachelor's degree from the University of Arkansas in 1962 and his law degree there two years later. He began work as an associate in a Little Rock law firm in 1964, becoming a partner two years later. President Carter appointed Overton to the federal bench in 1979.

• • •

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Bishop Joseph G. Vath, leader of the Roman Catholic diocese of Birmingham, died of a heart attack Tuesday night in University Hospital. He was 69.

Vath was ordained a priest in 1941 and was appointed assistant pastor of Ascension Church in Donaldsonville, La., where he served from 1941 to 1946. He served in several churches in Louisiana before being consecrated bishop in 1966. He became bishop of the Birmingham-based diocese for Alabama in 1969.

• • •

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Cornelius R. Sullivan Jr. director of treasury services for IBM World Trade Corp. in Tarrytown, N.Y., died Tuesday of a heart attack at age 57.

Sullivan, who joined IBM 31 years ago, graduated from St. Francis Xavier College in New York and served in the Army in the armored division during the Korean War.

• • •

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Chris R. Warnken, past grand master of the Rosicrucian Order, died Tuesday of heart disease. He was 74.

Warnken was named grand master of the 250,000-member order, officially called the Ancient Mystical Order Rosae Crucis, in 1968. He was employed by the order for 19 years until his retirement in 1977.

• • •

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — Stanley Miller, retired director of public affairs at NASA's Ames Research Center in Mountain View, died of kidney failure at his home Monday. He was 55.

Before coming to Ames, Miller was a public relations officer with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Flight Research Center at Edwards Air Force Base in Kern County.

• • •

CANTON, Miss. (AP) — Margaret James Mosal, national executive director of the Phi Theta Kappa scholastic honor fraternity, died Monday at home after a long illness. She was 76.

Ono

KAANAPALI, Hawaii (AP) — Yoko Ono thinks eyes can tell a lot about a person, and she doesn't want to let everyone get that close.

"When people look into your eyes, they sometimes see what's in your heart," she said, explaining why she wears the dark, ski-goggle-type shades that are her trademark.

"I'm seldom without my glasses," she said. "I like them on; they hide your eyes."

Ono was on the Island of Maui this week for an art exhibit of her late husband, John Lennon.

She plans to leave over the weekend for Japan, where she will participate in an art show benefit.

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher joined Queen Elizabeth II and other members of the royal family in welcoming Morocco's King Hassan II on his first visit to Great Britain.

Hassan received a full ceremonial welcome Tuesday when he arrived at London's Victoria Station on a royal train that brought him 60 miles from the southern seaside resort of Brighton.

At a banquet to honor the king Tuesday night, Hassan ate a traditional English meal of roast lamb. The scent of mint tea, another of his favorites, wafted through Buckingham Palace's red-carpeted corridors, and tables were decorated with camel-shaped salt and pepper shakers.

The Moroccan monarch was accompanied on the four-day state visit by his daughter Princess Lalla Asmaa, 20, and his son Prince Moulay Rachid, 17.

Homemade crackers quicker, easier than yeast breads

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

Crackers and flatbreads are strictly store-bought items in most households, but they're easily made at home and require much less time and effort than leavened breads.

Most flatbreads contain no leavening — either yeast, baking powder or baking soda. These have been around much longer than leavened breads, and the first were probably just pounded whole grains mixed with a little water and baked on hot stones.

Flatbreads are found in the cuisines of virtually every country in the world. Matzo is the flatbread eaten during Passover to commemorate the Jews' flight from Egypt, when there was no time to bake leavened bread. Then there are Mexican tortillas, Indian chapatis, American Indian frybread, Middle Eastern pita bread, Scottish bannocks, Armenian lavash, and a variety of Scandinavian flatbreads: Swedish hardtack, Norwegian potato lefse, and Finnish rieska.

Crackers are just as easy to make at home. Use whole-grain flours for a healthier version, and add seeds or chopped nuts for added nutrition. You can control the amount of salt that goes into homemade crackers — today's recipes contain just a touch, but you may omit the salt altogether if you're on a low-sodium diet.

FINNISH RYE RIESKA
2 cups rye flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 cup evaporated milk
¼ cup buttermilk
2 tablespoons melted butter

Preheat oven to 450 degrees F. Combine flour, baking powder, sugar and salt in mixing bowl; toss with fork. Stir in evaporated milk, buttermilk and melted butter until dough is smooth. Turn out dough onto well-buttered pizza pan or baking sheet. With floured hands pat dough into a 14-inch circle about ⅛-inch thick.

Prick dough all over with fork and bake in preheated oven 15 to 20 minutes, until rieska is lightly browned. Cut circle into wedges and serve hot from the oven with butter. Makes 1 14-inch flatbread.

HONEY-OAT CRACKERS
3 cups quick-cooking oats
1 cup wheat germ
1 cup whole wheat flour
1 cup unbleached white flour
¾ cup honey
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup water
¾ cup safflower oil
1 egg white, lightly beaten
Sesame or poppy seeds

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Combine oats, wheat germ, and flours in large mixing bowl; toss with fork. Drizzle honey over top and sprinkle with salt. Pour water and oil into center and stir with wooden spoon until mixture forms a ball and leaves sides of bowl.

Divide dough into 4 equal parts and shape into balls. Roll out each ball on lightly floured surface into a rectangle about ⅛-inch thick. Roll up dough gently around floured rolling pin, then unroll and fit into lightly greased baking pan. Cut into desired shapes with small sharp knife or cookie cutter.

Brush tops lightly with beaten egg white and sprinkle with sesame or poppy seeds. Bake in preheated oven 15 to 20 minutes, or until golden brown.

Makes 8 to 10 dozen crackers.

CRISPY CHEESE CRACKERS
¼ pound sharp cheddar cheese, shredded
¼ cup butter or margarine, at room temperature
1 teaspoon water
¾ cup whole wheat pastry flour
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon onion powder

Preheat oven to 475 degrees F. In mixing bowl blend together cheese, butter and water. Stir in flour, salt and onion powder, then work dough with fingers until thoroughly blended.

Press dough into lightly oiled cookie sheet to ¼-inch thickness. Prick all over with fork and cut into squares. Bake in preheated oven 10 to 12 minutes, or until golden. Let cool several minutes in pan, then transfer to wire rack to finish cooling. Store in airtight container.

Makes about 2 dozen crackers.

Kasha exotic alternative

By JUDY SHEPARD
Hearst News Service

When you've run out of ideas for ways to make rice, potatoes or pasta, kasha delivers a welcome change.

Although grainlike, kasha is the fruit of the buckwheat plant; it is also called buckwheat groats. It takes only about 15 minutes to make and has a distinctive, strong and nutty flavor. Kasha is high in protein and iron. It is sold in fine, medium and coarse granulations; try the medium.

Cooked kasha is fluffy and tender, and is enhanced by sauteed onions, celery, mushrooms or nuts.

In Jeanne Lemlin's "Vegetarian Pleasures," the Stockbridge, Mass. vegetarian cook has dreamed up a menu for four using a kasha dish as the main course. This is good!

Preparation notes: Lemlin's recipe calls for butter, salt and sour cream. I substitute margarine and use a low-fat sour cream. You also can omit the margarine from the kasha recipe altogether, and in the sauce, cut it down to 2 tablespoons. In the cabbage recipe, I use 2 tablespoons olive oil instead of 1 of oil and 1 of butter.

KASHA TOPPED WITH MUSHROOMS IN SOUR CREAM SAUCE
1¼ quarter cups kasha, medium granulation
1 egg, lightly beaten
1 tablespoon margarine
2¼ cups hot vegetable stock
Sauce:
3 tablespoons margarine
1 large onion, diced
1 pound sliced mushrooms (6 cups sliced)
¼ teaspoon thyme
Dash cayenne pepper
Liberal seasoning freshly ground pepper
1 cup low-fat sour cream
Minced parsley for garnish

Combine kasha and egg in medium-size saucepan and stir over medium heat until kasha is well coated, then begins to look dry, about three minutes. Make well in center of pan and melt margarine. Toss it with kasha, then pour in hot stock. Reduce heat to simmer and cook, covered, until stock is completely absorbed, about 10 minutes.

To make sauce, melt margarine in large skillet over medium-high heat, then add onion and saute for three minutes. Add mushrooms, thyme, cayenne and freshly ground pepper, and cook, stirring occasionally, for 10 minutes, or until mushrooms are brown and juicy.

Add sour cream; stir and cook two more minutes, or until hot and bubbly. Spoon some kasha on dinner plate and top with sauce. Garnish with the parsley and serve immediately.

SAUTEED CABBAGE WITH FENNEL SEED
2 tablespoons olive oil
½ teaspoon fennel seed
6 cups chopped cabbage, about 1¼ pounds

Heat oil in large skillet over medium heat. Add fennel seed and cook for one minute. Add cabbage and saute for five minutes, tossing frequently. Cover pan, reduce the heat little, and cook 10 minutes or more, until tender, stirring occasionally. Serve immediately.

Kasha pilaf is a quick but different side dish to try when you can't think of another way to fix rice, pasta or potatoes. I like a little crunch in mine so I stir in about ¼ cup of coarsely chopped walnuts a few minutes before serving. Food writer Marian Burros' suggestion of toasted silvered almonds is another good variation; she also makes her pilaf with sauteed celery and onion. Try your own variations of this recipe from Lemlin's book. She calls for a vegetable stock, but chicken stock does nicely.

KASHA PILAF
1 tablespoon margaine
8 ounces mushrooms, quartered (3 cups)
1 medium-sized onion, minced
1¼ cup kasha, medium granulation
1 egg
2¼ cups hot vegetable stock

Melt margarine in small skillet over medium heat. Add mushrooms and onion, and cook until mushrooms are brown and tender, about 10 minutes.

Mix kasha and egg together in medium-size saucepan, and stir briskly over low heat until all kasha is coated with egg. Turn heat to medium and "toast" kasha by stirring constantly until grains are dry and separate, about three minutes.

Add mushrooms and onion and toss. Add vegetable stock and cover pan. Simmer for 10 minutes, or until all liquid is absorbed. Fluff with fork before serving.

Navy to begin escort of Kuwaiti tankers July 22

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy will start escorting U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tankers through the war-torn Persian Gulf on July 22, according to legislators who met with top Reagan administration officials.

The first tanker will be escorted up the 500-mile-long gulf to be loaded with oil and then back through the Strait of Hormuz at the mouth of the gulf, the legislators said Tuesday.

The first convoy will include only one or two Kuwaiti tankers while later groups will probably be larger, said Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

Aspin, Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., and Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., said they were told that the first Navy mission would be July 22.

Sasser, a leader of congressional attempts to block President Reagan's plan, said Democratic opponents would try again today to win Senate approval of a resolution seeking a delay. Two earlier attempts failed.

Administration officials have refused to announce an exact start-up date for the escorts and Pentagon officials declined to comment on the July 22 date.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater would say only that the Navy's escort mission "will begin soon." He said it "could come as early as next week."

Later, an administration official who demanded anonymity said it was "unfortunate that congressmen have released details from a classified briefing."

But Warren Nelson, a spokesman for Aspin, said it is assumed that nothing in such briefings is classified unless it is identified explicitly as such and a degree of classification is given. He said Aspin told him that no one in the meeting said the information being discussed was classified.

Rep. Larry Hopkins, R-Ky., said he telephoned National Security Adviser Frank Carlucci on Tuesday expressing concern that the date of the operation has been made public and asking that it be changed.

"I'm concerned about telegraphing our adversaries about the exact date we intend to initiate our plans. ...That is a very dangerous part of the world," Hopkins said. He said Carlucci made no comment on his request.

Dole, Sasser and Aspin were among a bipartisan group of about 20 House and Senate leaders who met behind closed Capitol doors for more than hour with Carlucci, Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Adm. William Crowe Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Reagan's plan to put U.S. captains and flags aboard 11 Kuwaiti tankers and have the Navy escort the ships has raised congressional fears that the United States might be drawn into the Iran-Iraq war. Kuwait has aided Iraq in the conflict.

"This policy is not well thought-out," Sasser said. "I don't believe the administration has the support in Congress to sustain this policy."

Aspin said a second escort mission will begin Aug. 6 and will be the first of three convoys during the month.

Disposable contact lenses more convenient, expensive

NEW YORK (AP) — New, disposable contact lenses sold by the six-pack in market testing are more convenient and help keep eyes healthy, but they'll cost more, the manufacturer says.

The lenses, to be worn about a week before being discarded and replaced, go on sale in Florida this week in the marketing test, Hank Green, president of Vistakon Inc., announced at a news conference Tuesday.

Wearers don't have to clean and sterilize the throw-away lenses, treatments they consider "a real hassle," said Green, whose Jacksonville, Fla.-based company is a subsidiary of health-care giant Johnson & Johnson.

He estimated that using disposable lenses would cost an average $520 a year, compared with an average $350 a year for standard, extended-wear lenses. Green called the difference "a small premium to pay for improved eye health and convenience."

The cost disparity increases if considered over two years, said Dr. Perry Binder of the National Vision Research Institute in San Diego.

Standard extended-wear lenses can last two years if well cared for, the ophthalmologist said, so their second-year cost would be about $100 for cleaning solutions. That brings their two-year cost to about $450, in comparison to $1,040 for the disposables, he said.

North's testimony straightforward to end

WASHINGTON (AP) — Never in six days of gripping testimony did Lt. Col. Oliver L. North inch back from either his strong convictions or the seemingly precarious balance he held on the edge of the seat from which he faced congressional investigators.

North braced, parade-ground stiff. His back never touched that of the black-leather arm chair, never came within a foot of its support.

Leaning forward, elbows on the witness table, gesturing with both hands, North projected his personality and his cause across the Senate Caucus Room to Americans in the national television audience.

On Tuesday afternoon, when those half-dozen days were over, North's congressional critics sternly summed up what they had heard, speaking in measured terms of the lies North had said he told, of the covert apparatus he had helped erect, free of the checks and balances of the Constitution.

North, motionless, his face stripped of expression, stared straight ahead, his fingers interlaced on the table before him.

Unseen, in a room nearby, lay symbols of support, tributes to North's persuasiveness: thousands of congratulatory telegrams hailing him as a patriot and hero, scores of floral bouquets.

That's how Brendan Sullivan, North's lawyer, wanted to leave it. The American people had spoken. The most important verdict of all was in.

And that's what Sullivan said, in an explosive protest, when Senate Chairman Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, declared in his closing summary that the Nuremberg tribunal after World War II had destroyed forever the defense that the actions of a subordinate can be justified by the orders and authority of a superior.

North had declared repeatedly that in setting in motion the secret sales of arms to Iran in an arms-for-hostage swap, and in promoting the diversion of the prceeds to Nicaragua's Contra rebels he had done nothing without the approval of his superiors.

"I find this offensive," Sullivan shouted, interrupting the senator's closing remarks.

"I find you engaging in a personal attack on Colonel North," he said. "To make reference to the Nuremberg trials, I find personally and professionally distasteful, and I can no longer sit here and listen to this."

"There are 20,000 telegrams in our room outside in the corridor here that came in this morning" Sullivan said. "The American people have spoken and please stop this personal attack against Colonel North."

Inouye, who lost an arm to enemy machine gun fire on a hillside in Italy in World War II and won the nation's second highest decoration for valor, said he was not engaged in personal attack.

But he declared that he drew a different message from the massive public response to North's testimony.

"To those thousands upon thousands of citizens who have called, sent telegrams, written letters, I wish to thank all of you most sincerely and commend you for your demonstrated interest in the well-being of our government, of our freedoms and our democracy," Inouye said.

"Your support or opposition of what is happening in this room is important, important because it dramatically demonstrates the strength of this democracy."

North had been portrayed as a hero, Inouye said. And heroes are important. They are "the cement that holds societies together," the inspiration that impells future generations to greatness.

But was North that kind of hero?

"I believe during the past week we have participated in creating and developing very likely a new American hero," Inouye said, perhaps with intended irony.

He quickly made clear he is troubled with the nature of that heroism in light of North's testimony under oath that he had lied, mispreresented and misled in order to protect his secret enterprises from public disclosure, from the risks of congressional leaks.

And he said he is troubled by an attitude, denied by North, that opposition to a president's policies shows a lack of patriotism.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Iran-Contra committee, said he also was troubled by the lies.

They had provided, he said, one element of the explosion that had "catapulted a president to the most serious crisis of his presidency, drove the Congress of the United States to launch an unprecedented investigation and probably damaged...the causes that you sought to promote."

"We all lost," Hamilton said. "The interests of the United States have been damaged by what happened."

The visible symbol of North's patriotism is the six ribboned rows of military decorations that parade in a flash of color across the olive-green of his Marine Corps jacket.

Inouye made clear to the witness that he shares the experiences those ribbons represent.

"As one who has felt the burning sting of bullet and shrapnel, and heard the unforgettable and frightening sounds of incoming shells, I salute you, sir, as a fellow combat man," Inouye said.

Hamilton also focused on North's medals and his secret daring which he said represent the patriotism of courage, action and deeds.

Questions still remain over who knew what

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver L. North's testimony raised new questions about what President Reagan knew and about the initial investigation conducted last November by Attorney General Edwin Meese III into the Iran-Contra affair.

North left the witness stand Tuesday following six days of questions by the congressional Iran-Contra committees, his words and implications framing the questions for today's testimony by his former boss, John M. Poindexter.

North sketched a picture indicating administration officials had wide knowledge of his activities. But he did not answer the big question about what Reagan knew about North's diversion of proceeds from the Iran arms sale to the Nicaragua Contras.

North's testimony cast a further shadow of doubt over the inquiry Meese conducted last November for Reagan, and left hanging questions about North's own efforts to cover up the affair.

The essential point of North's story was that everything he did was authorized.

"I haven't in the years that I have been in the uniformed services of the United States of America ever violated an order, not one," North said.

He said he had assumed Reagan had authorized the diversion of Iran arms monies to the Contras. But he said Poindexter, the former national security adviser to Reagan, told him when the affair became public that the president did not know. He added that Reagan told him the same thing at that time.

Here is a look at other key elements in North's version of the Iran-Contra affair and at some new questions he raised:

— Former CIA Director William J. Casey, who died in May, was the architect and overseer of North's covert operations and had known of the diversion plan since early 1986. North called the diversion "a neat idea," and said Casey enthusiastically embraced it as "the ultimate covert operation."

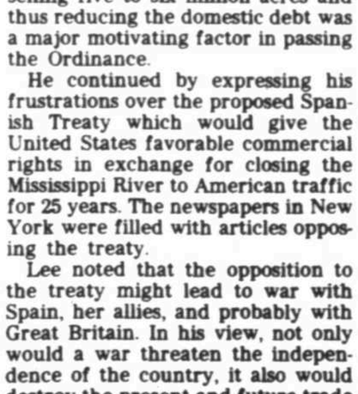

Casey, he said, advised him on other covert activities and told him to begin shredding records when the affair unraveled. He said Casey wanted to use the arms sale proceeds for a self-sustaining secret fund for other covert operations outside the CIA and other government institutions.

— A part of their plan was that North was to be the "fall guy," a proposal North said he was willing to go along with as long as the blame was political. But he said his perspective changed when the possibility emerged that he might be charged with crimes.

— Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams, several CIA officials and others in the administration were aware of North's efforts to aid the Contras at a time when Congress had banned direct or indirect U.S. aid.

— North revealed he saw Reagan's signature on a November 1985 presidential finding to authorize the sale of U.S.-made missiles from Israel to Iran. That finding, a signed copy of which has never been found, stated that the arms sale was a straight hostages-for-weapons swap — directly contradicting Reagan's public assertions.

— North raised questions about Meese's knowledge, saying he assumed the attorney general had cleared that November 1985 finding because Meese normally was brought in on such presidential findings.

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

On this cool July Sunday (mean of 64 at Spring Mill) Christopher Marshall went with his family to the Friends Meeting, dined at Charles' (probably a Marshall, too) and entertained "(as usual) young company at our house."

Ads for runaway indentured servants frequented the pages of the Pennsylvania Gazette this week. For instance, an $8 reward was offered for a Dutch servant man named Johan Henry Henning, 45, a middle-aged, well-set man, who understood little of the English language. His indenture was purchased on board a ship the previous fall. A master offered only 1 shilling for an apprentice lad, James Bluett, 5-foot-4, who disappeared wearing a checkered shirt, trousers, a jacket without sleeves, and calfskin shoes.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

Richard Henry Lee wrote to George Washington enclosing a copy of the Northwest Ordinance and explaining that the measure was necessary to ensure a strong government in the area and protect property rights. He further mentioned that selling five to six million acres and thus reducing the domestic debt was a major motivating factor in passing the Ordinance.

He continued by expressing his frustrations over the proposed Spanish Treaty which would give the United States favorable commercial rights in exchange for closing the Mississippi River to American traffic for 25 years. The newspapers in New York were filled with articles opposing the treaty.

Lee noted that the opposition to the treaty might lead to war with Spain, her allies, and probably with Great Britain. In his view, not only would a war threaten the independence of the country, it also would destroy the present and future trade possibilities of the United States. Fears of war and loss of commerce aside, Lee was afraid that unrestricted use of the river would depopulate and ruin the 13 original states.

CONVENTION TODAY

The preceding week no doubt had been draining and frustrating to many of the delegates. They had decided only a few minor issues and were on the verge of abandoning their efforts over representation in the Senate. The Saturday session ended with every indication that the large and small states would not reconcile their differences.

In the midst of this frustration, one can gain a better understanding of George Washington. With all of his responsibilities and honors, he considered himself a farmer, and like most planters, he did not want to be away from his fields during the growing season. Throughout the Convention, he wrote many letters to his nephew, George Augustine Washington, advising him on proper farming techniques and asking for status reports. On this day the general advised his nephew to plant wheat in the corn ground as soon as possible. He wanted the cut oats sprinkled with lime and the flax rotted in the same fields in which it grew. The general concluded by asking if George Augustine had "thinned the carrots which were too thick."

LOOKING BACK
Convention This Week

The week of July 9 ended with many vexing questions still unanswered. Several details relating to representation in Congress were established. For example, the delegates decided that the members of the first branch would be determined by a census every 10 years.

Other matters, such as tying direct taxes to the number of congressmen, counting three-fifths of "other persons" in the census, and dropping property as a measurement for representation were discussed at length and agreed to by many in principle.

Yet, the matter of representation in the second branch was still undecided and seemed not to have any possible resolution. Advocates from the large states — James Madison, Gouverneur Morris, and others — argued with conviction that representation in the second branch should be determined by population. On the other side, delegates from the smaller states were intransigent in their position that all states should have equal representation in the Senate. No amount of logic or rhetoric could dissuade them from their position, and if the large state delegates persisted in demanding proportional representation, some small states were prepared to leave the Convention.

Even with the tension, there was opportunity for compromise. The report of the grand committee recommended a plan with proportional representation in the House and equal in the Senate. Delegates from the medium-size states, realizing that their constituents would never be large, understood that reconciliation would be essential for the Convention to continue.

IRS returns 'piggy bank' savings to 9-year-old girl

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has returned $70.76 to a 9-year-old girl, admitting it was a mistake to seize her savings account to pay her grandparents' taxes, a bank official said.

The IRS took the money from the account of Carmin Fisher of Junction City, who for six years had been saving up pennies for deposits, but the agency relented after the seizure was publicized Tuesday, said Larry Zeller, manager of the Key Bank of Oregon's Harrisburg branch.

An IRS representative was dispatched to deliver a notice to Carmin's bank authorizing release of the funds, and the money was back in the account shortly before noon Tuesday, Zeller said.

Carmin's savings actually have doubled, because family friend Fred Morgan had made plans to replace the money Carmin lost, "to try to restore the girl's faith in mankind," and said he would go ahead with his gift anyway.

Asked how it felt to be twice as rich, Carmin said, "I like it."

She said she would add to her account until she's 18, when she might buy a car.

Carmin's grandmother, Bettye Fisher, said that when she received a bank statement Monday showing the IRS withdrawal she and her husband, Charles, were furious. Carmin and her mother, Bette, live with the Fishers.

"I looked at it and screamed and yelled," Bettye Fisher said in a telephone interview.

Fire ant restrictions eyed

LUCEDALE, Miss. (AP) — Quarantines of Southern plant and soil products may be eased if federal officials favorably consider plans to ease restrictions on the products from fire ant-infested states.

Richard Backus, assistant deputy director for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's plant protection and quarantine division, told nurserymen gathered here Tuesday that the meeting will be July 30-31, in Las Vegas, Nev.

The meeting will include representatives from the infested Southern states and the uninfested states to the west, where buyers of nursery products have almost halted business with Southern nurseries. Backus predicted the meeting will be fraught with bitter debate between the two regions.

Most of Mississippi and the lower Southeastern states have been under federal quarantines since the 1950s, when agricultural experts began noticing that fire ants could be transported to other areas on plants and soil.

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Buck Ross says continued crop losses may result with no approved insecticides capable of combating the ants successfully.

Fire ants were first imported to this country on an Argentine banana boat in 1918. After the boat landed in Mobile, Ala., the stinging ants spread rapidly. Today, the creatures build their mounds in all or portions of Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, Texas, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina and North Carolina.

In March, Ross met with U.S. Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng about the fire ant problem and Tuesday's meeting was subsequently set up with nurserymen from Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama.

Three die on desert journey

DATELAND, Ariz. (AP) — Three men died after a group of 25, all believed to be illegal aliens, ran out of water as they attempted to walk across 50 miles of searing desert in 110-degree-plus temperatures, the U.S. Border Patrol said.

Two other men were hospitalized in stable condition and 20 other members of the group were taken into custody Monday and Tuesday, officials said.

Temperatures reached 111 in Yuma on Monday and may have reached as high as 120 in the desert where the group was found, said Al Saucier, assistant chief of the Border Patrol's Yuma sector.

Each member of the group had a gallon of water for the journey across the desert, officials said. A person loses half a gallon of body water per hour in the desert heat, authorities said.

One of the survivors — 18-year-old Martin Flores Rodriguez, of Culiacan, Sinaloa, Mexico — said several of the men urinated into a bottle and took turns drinking from it. The survivors also ate toothpaste after they ran out of food, Flores said.
