Friends, families of fireworks plant explosion 'shocked'

TERLTON, Okla. (AP) — Shortly after an explosion demolished a fireworks factory near this town of 155, most of the relatives of the plant's workers were aware that their loved ones were not coming home again.

They are now waiting for officials of the Tulsa County medical examiner's office to identify the bodies found in the wreckage of the Aerlex Corp. plant Tuesday. Most of the victims were burned beyond recognition.

Billie Creekmore, like the other relatives of the 21 victims, gathered at the First Baptist Church of Terilton after the disaster to learn the fate of their loved ones.

By late Tuesday, Mrs. Creekmore said her cousin, 23-year-old Jason Creekmore still had not been accounted for.

"He really loved his job there, he said it was easy, he just sat around mixing gunpowder," she said. "He was to have been married in August and his fiancée's father also worked at the plant."

"He had quit the job once but he went back," she said. "He knew what he was doing. He said he worried about it sometimes. But never really

Hostage flies to freedom

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — American hostage Jimmy Dell Palmer flew to freedom today, 13 days after he was captured by hijackers of a TWA jet. Shiite militia leader Nabih Berri freed Palmer for health reasons and proposed that the other 39 hostages be placed in a Western embassy until Israel releases 735 Arab prisoners.

Berri said the remaining American hostages might also be sent to Syria if no Western nation would hold them in an embassy and promise not to let them out of Lebanon until the hijackers' demands for freedom of the prisoners in Israel are met.

Palmer, 48, of Little Rock, Ark., flew from Beirut aboard a Middle East Airline Boeing 707 to Larnaca, Cyprus. Wearing a red polo shirt, Palmer smiled as he walked down the steps of the airplane without aid.

"I feel fine," he told waiting reporters. "I'm just happy to be out of Beirut and with the American people. I'd like to say, 'Hi,' to my wife and family. I'm so happy to be home."

The scheduled flight was delayed 45 minutes until Palmer arrived in an airport bus, with six Shiite Amal militiamen.

Palmer told The Associated Press as he waited to board the plane: "I can verify that we were very well treated. I don't know of anyone (among the hostages) who has been mistreated."

Before releasing Palmer, Berri brought him to a news conference, where he said he also was studying the medical condition of another hostage, Simon Grossmayer, 57, of Algonquin, Ill., who has only one lung. "If he is not in good condition I will release him today or tomorrow," he said.

The French government today indicated it might be willing to accept custody of the Beirut hostages under the plan outlined by Berri. The Foreign Ministry said in a brief statement: "France is always available when it is a question of protecting human lives and avoiding suffering."

A spokesman, traditionally anonymous, said Foreign Minister Roland Dumas had delayed leaving for Bonn this morning to take personal charge of the situation.

The Americans, passengers on a TWA Boeing 727 that was hijacked June 14 on its way from Athens to Rome, are thought to be held in separate groups in and around Beirut.

Asked if he has the power to release all the hostages, some of whom are thought to be held by the radical Hezbollah, or Party of God, Berri said: "All of them, no. The majority are under Amal and the others under the hijackers."

However, he said all 39 are in Beirut. There had been news reports in Lebanon and the United States that about nine of the hostages were being held in Baalbek in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, a stronghold of Shiite extremists.

Two Frenchmen kidnapped near the Beirut airport on May 22 also will be freed once the hostage crisis is settled, Berri said.

Berri said the kidnapers of the Frenchmen told him they do not hold any of the other 10 Westerners — seven Americans, two Frenchmen and one Briton — who have been kidnapped since March 1984.

The Shiite Moslem hijackers let more than 100 passengers and crew go, and killed a U.S. Navy petty officer in the early stages of the 13-day incident. They are demanding that Israel free prisoners it accused of planning or carrying out attacks on the Israeli army in southern Lebanon.

Bills come to the aid of child-protective service programs

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Much attention has been focused on child abuse recently, and state lawmakers have responded with a flurry of legislation to help deal with the problem.

"It was a surprisingly excellent session, all things considered," said

Peggy Boice, associate director of the United Way of Texas, by telephone from Austin.

Because of the state budget crunch, "Most programs received a major decrease in funding," but most child-protective-service programs were either increased slightly or left uncut, she said.

The most publicized child-abuse bill created a Children's Trust Fund, funded by large increases in the cost of marriage licenses, to pay for locally organized child-protection programs. But other bills signed by Gov. Mark White would:

— Provide $4 million in 1986 and $4 million in 1987 for the Department of Human Resources to hire more Child Protective Service workers.

— Provide $500,000 for family-violence centers.

— Increase foster care payment rates.

— Increase medical assistance for hard-to-adopt children, so families won't be discouraged from adopting them by high medical bills.

— Allow increased access to criminal records of day-care-center employees.

— Make child hearsay statements admissible.

Laws which didn't pass included one to indemnify state employees, including child-protective-service workers, against civil suits arising from their jobs, Ms. Boice said.

Important changes were also made in the legal machinery dealing with child-abuse cases, but some needed laws failed to win approval, according to Midland County Administrative Assistant District Attorney Tom Morgan.

Committee to determine whether school campuses should be closed

MISD Board of Trustees President Bill Jackson

By JULIE HILLRICH
Staff Writer

A 13-member committee, comprised of parents, students, teachers and administrators, will study the proposed closing of Midland and Lee High School campuses. The group will determine whether students should be prohibited from leaving school during the noon lunch hour.

The committee appointment, headed by assistant superintendent Garland Chapman, resulted Tuesday after about 40 concerned parents signed petitions requesting Midland school trustees close the campuses to curb the "problems" associated with students leaving campus during the lunch hour.

Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees President Bill Jackson designated the committee to study "all of the facts" and report its findings to the board July 3.

MIDLAND
CENTENNIAL 1885-1985

From Staff and Wire Reports

The cloudy weather that has been hanging over the Midland area may be on its way out, with fair days and nights expected for the weekend, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

A 40 percent chance of thundershowers is forecast for tonight, however, with lows expected in the lower to upper 40s and southeasterly winds at 10 to 15 mph.

Thursday should be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorm activity and a high temperature near 80 degrees. Winds will come from the east at 10 to 15 mph, shifting to the northeast in the late afternoon.

Despite the bright outlook for the weekend, there will be a "slight chance of afternoon showers," Friday through Sunday.

"Otherwise it will be fair days and nights with temperatures near 90 degrees and reaching the mid 90s by Sunday," said a spokesman.

Lows should be in the mid to upper 60s. The record high temperature ever recorded for Tuesday was 105 degrees in 1953. An all-time low of 59 degrees was recorded in 1958.

Israel released 31 prisoners Monday.

Berri made his proposal today after Syria was reported to have joined efforts to secure the hostages' release. Syria is the main power broker in Lebanon.

Berri reiterated his warning that a flotilla of U.S. 6th fleet warships led by the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz must "be far away" from the Lebanese coast, and said there must be no attacks on Lebanon by either Israel or the United States after the hostage situation is resolved.

At the White House, an administration official who spoke only on condition that he not be identified, said the Reagan administration would withhold comment on Berri's proposal for moving the hostages until the Amal leader was able to make the actual transfer. "I don't think that we can allow ourselves optimism or pessimism," he said.

President Reagan threatened Tuesday to close Beirut airport and impose an economic blockade on Lebanon.

In Jerusalem today a spokesman for Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Israel is ready to consider any U.S. request to cooperate in fighting terrorism, including taking part in a blockade of Beirut.

Israel "feels it is our duty to consider positively any request coming from the United States touching the field of cooperation against international terrorism," said Shamir's spokesman, Avi Pazner.

The Red Cross said in Geneva that it had recommended Palmer be released. Two Red Cross officials, one a doctor, visited all 40 hostages overnight.

Before getting on the plane, Palmer said: "I have a heart condition and high blood pressure... I was without medication until four days ago, when the Red Cross brought me medication that brought down the pressure. I feel real good now," he said.

Red Cross spokesman Pascal Gondrand said in Geneva that the two Red Cross representatives had held private talks with all of the hostages, and saw all of them in one place, except for the three crew members on the plane at Beirut airport.

In keeping with Red Cross policy, information on the hostages' conditions would not be made public, he said in Geneva, Switzerland. A report of the visit will be provided to U.S. authorities and to the families of the hostages, he said.

Embassies to be renovated, rebuilt

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, at a cost of $3.5 billion, is planning to replace or renovate 126 embassies and consulates felt to be vulnerable to terrorist attack.

The program, which will affect almost half of the 262 such missions the United States has overseas, represents the most ambitious effort to date to enhance security at U.S. diplomatic posts.

The recommendations were contained in a report by an advisory panel formed last July by Secretary of State George P. Shultz following terrorist attacks in 1983 at the U.S. embassies in Beirut and Kuwait. The panel was chaired by former CIA Deputy Director Bobby Inman.

Disclosing State Department acceptance of the recommendations, Assistant Secretary of State Robert Lamb told a news conference Tuesday that about 75 of the posts will be rebuilt at new locations.

He said many of the missions scheduled for removal are difficult to protect because they have glass fronts or are located in downtown areas and share a common wall with adjacent structures. Others, he said, face a "serious espionage threat."

An 82-page report submitted by the panel and made public on Tuesday said the current situation at overseas posts "cannot be allowed to continue unchanged."

"As shown by the bombings and takeovers at our embassy buildings in the Middle East in recent years, as well as by the levels of electronic and other eavesdropping activities by our adversaries, there are simply too many risks to our diplomatic personnel and activities at posts with these vulnerabilities to allow these buildings to remain potential targets for such threats," it said.

The countries in which the program will be carried out were not identified.

The report said the United States must "control" buildings in which it does business overseas, adding that, in contrast to an earlier era, it is no longer an asset for an embassy to be located "on the busiest or most fashionable street or corner."

It also said close proximity to other buildings make safeguarding sensitive information extremely difficult because of modern electronic intercept devices.

All told, the panel made 91 recommendations for improving embassy security, some of which were contained in a separate, classified report that was not made public. Lamb indicated that not all of the proposals would be implemented.

Several organizational changes were recommended, including the creation of a new Bureau for Diplomatic Security.

State Department spokesman Edward Djerejian said Shultz supports the recommendations in principle and believes they are "imaginative, well-thought out and far-reaching."

The report said sweeping changes are needed because of changes in the global political environment over the past two decades.

"The peaceful neighborhood, city, or country of yesterday can be a hotbed of terrorism, insurgency or violence tomorrow. Buildings that were designed, located and constructed most carefully in the past may now be unacceptable from a security standpoint," it said.

dreamed there would be any danger. For him it was just a job, something to do."

She called the waiting "hard."

"It's a strain on your nerves and it just drains you...it's real frustrating I'd rather know something than not know anything. Deep down inside I know that there is no hope or something would have been said," said Mrs. Creekmore.

Mrs. Creekmore works in Drumright as a police dispatcher and said she first heard about the explosion on the police radio.

"I imagine I was one of the first. My first thought was 'Oh my God, my cousin works there!'"

A steady procession of shocked and disbelieving people filed into the Terlton church seeking information from state officials about husbands and wives, brothers, sisters and cousins. They were asked to bring dental records to aid in the identification process.

By early today, officials had tentative identities of about three of the bodies found in the rubble of the fireworks plant.

One of those at the church was Jim Smith of Tulsa who said his sister, nephew and a cousin by marriage were all killed in the explosion. He said two other relatives, including the owner of the plant, were among the injured.

Smith said he was at home in Tulsa when he learned of the explosion on television. Tulsa is about 40 miles from Hallett in northeast Oklahoma.

"All we can do now is wait for them to verify the deaths," he said.

Among townspeople in Jennings, the explosion was a painful topic because most knew the workers at the plant.

Chris Tilley, 18, who had worked at the plant until a month ago, said the plant workers were "always warning us" to be careful.

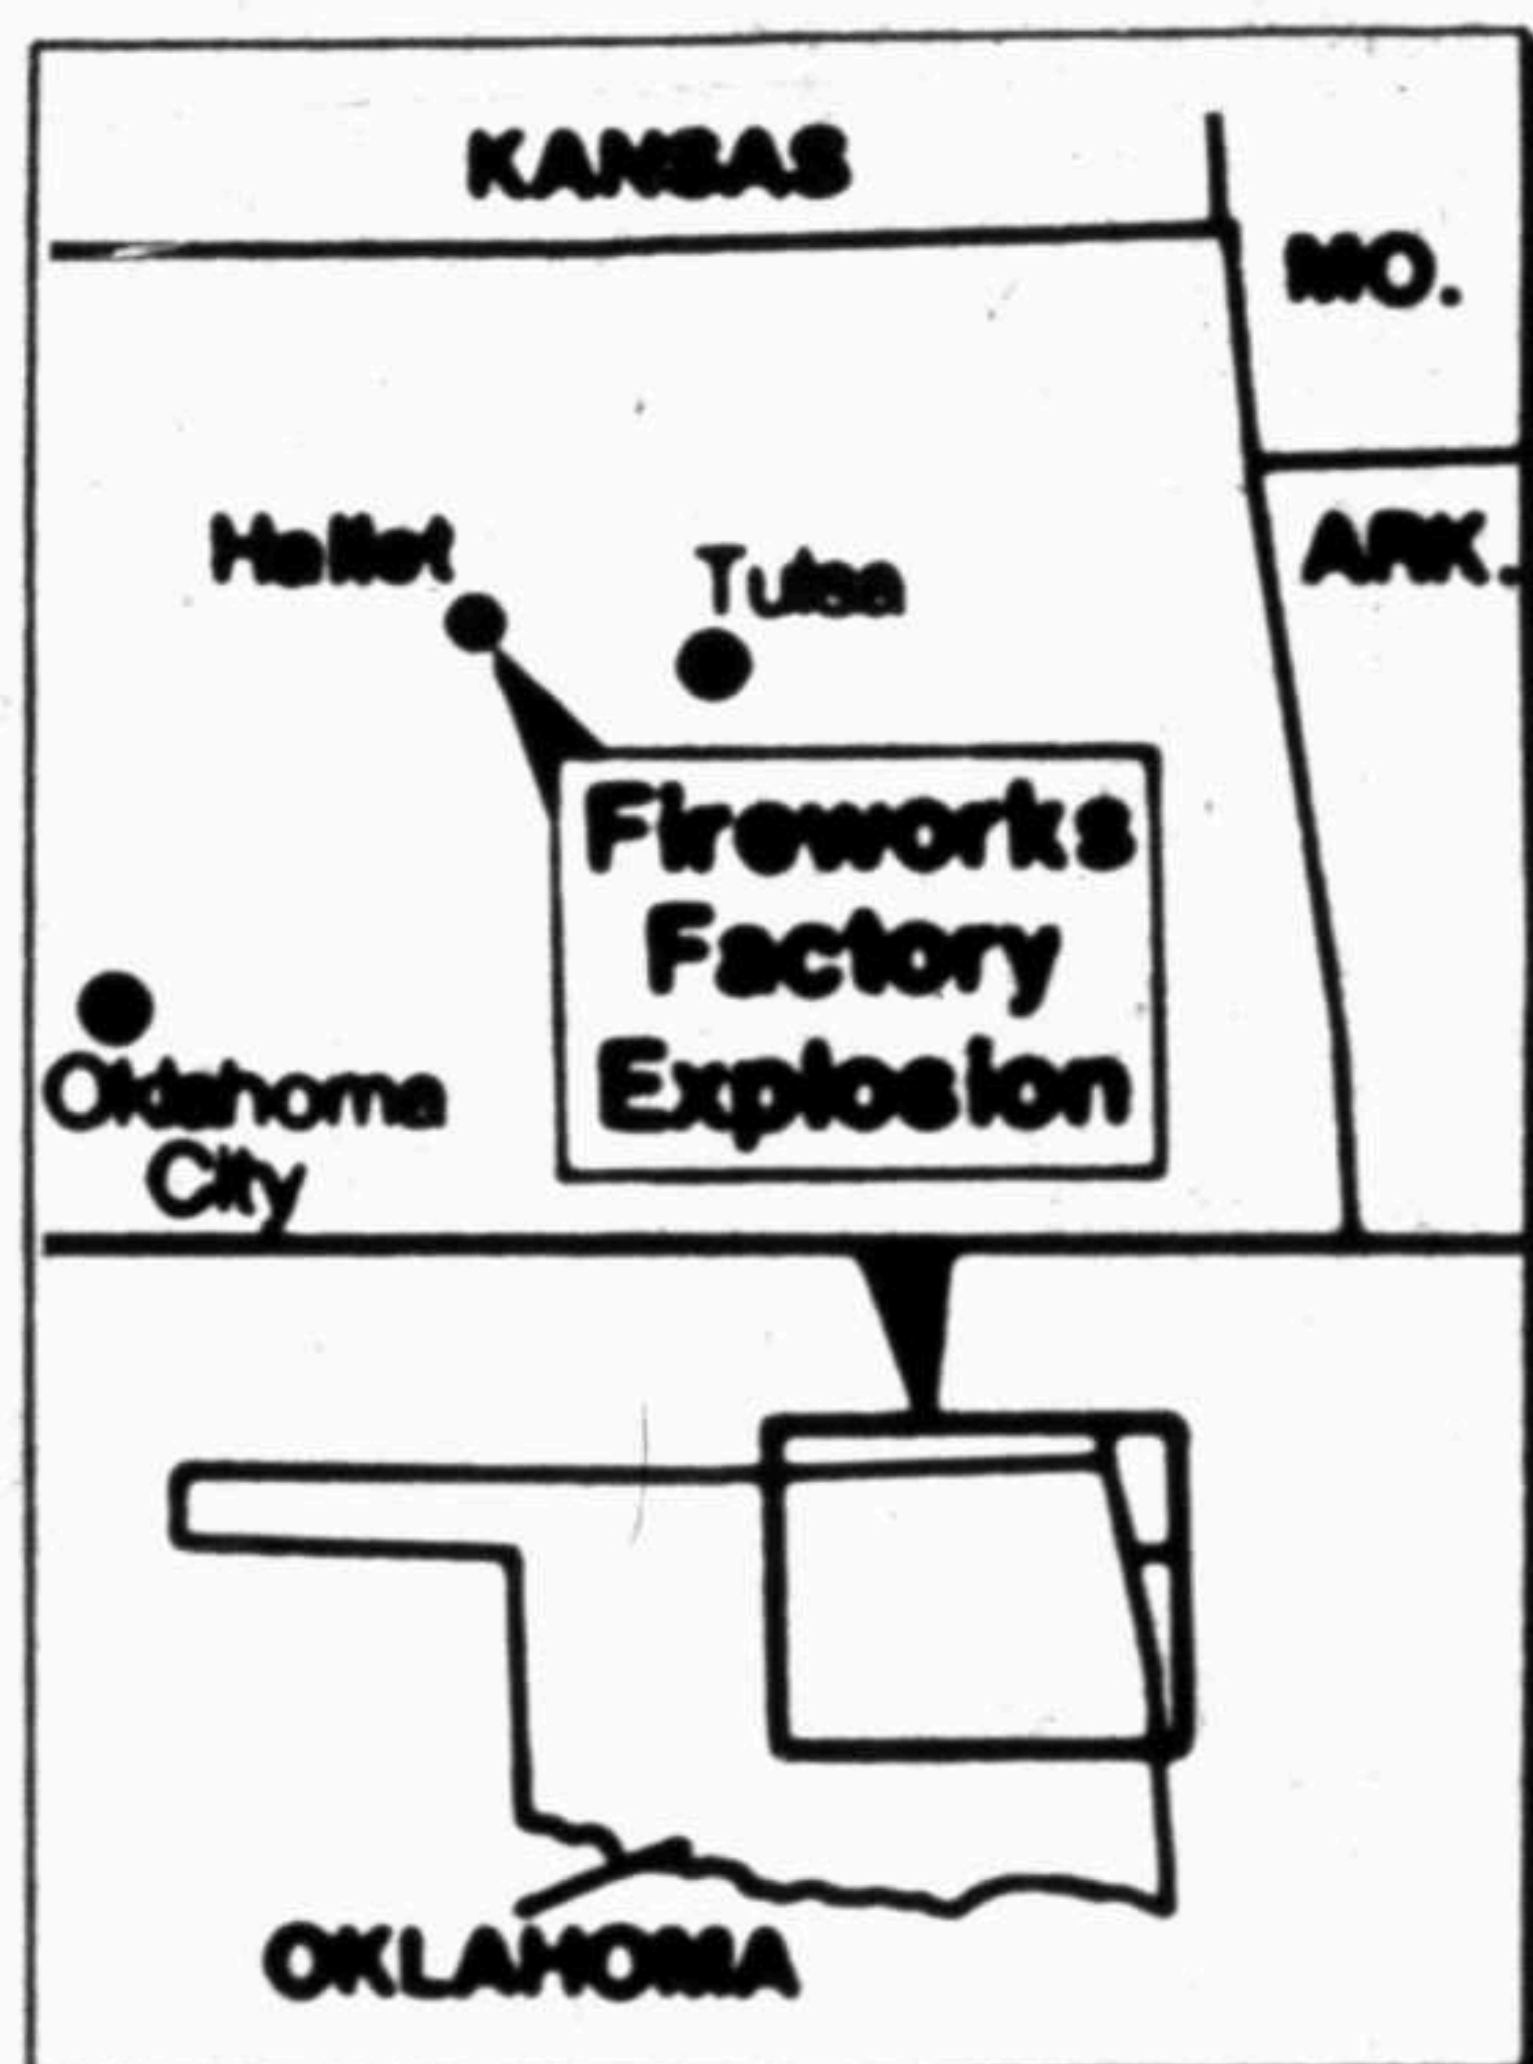

"They told us to keep our work area clean and the aisles clear of boxes, because we would only have five seconds to get out if anything happened," Tilley said as he joined other people at the First Christian Church in Jennings.

He said that in the days before he left the plant, fireworks production was stepped up for the holidays.

At the Poor Boy Cafe, employees stood around in the kitchen reflecting on the explosion and trying to remember who had gone to work in the factory Tuesday morning.

"I used to know all of their names, now my mind is a blank," said Mary Ann Kilpatrick, owner of the cafe and a former worker at the factory.

The Rev. Bill Larsen, pastor of the church, said shortly after word of the explosion spread around the community he was besieged by calls from relatives of people at the plant asking for help.

Saudis learning English on computer system

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Abdel-Hadi Omar, who comes from a family of Bedouin nomads, says learning English on a computer looked complicated at first but soon it became "as easy as grazing a camel."

He is one of a group of Saudis learning English on a new computer system, the first of its kind in the Arabic-speaking kingdom where English has become widely used in business, commerce and everyday life.

Developed by the Computer Curriculum Corp. of Palo Alto, Calif., the computer system has been installed by Northrop Corp. for a petrochemical plant and for trainees of aircraft maintenance.

The computer system is unique in Saudi Arabia, according to George Zarbokrsky, director of the program at Northrop Aircraft Services Division in Riyadh, capital of Saudi Arabia.

Students complete exercises in reading, grammar and vocabulary on the computer screen while a voice synthesizer lets them hear the English as directions are given in Arabic.

Initially, the system gives students instructions in Arabic. As they proceed through the program, English takes over. Students who are quicker to learn may complete the course in 250 hours. But an additional 350 hours have been allocated for those who need more instruction.

In one typical exercise, the student hears a familiar Arabic word through the headphone and is asked to pick the English equivalent from a list shown on the screen.

Other exercises ask the student to complete sentences by choosing a word or rewriting a sentence to match a particular syntax.

There are 72,000 exercises from the beginning to the upper intermediate levels.

In each lesson, three to seven new words are introduced and reviewed after every five. Each day the student begins where he left off the day before.

When a student signs on the computer in the morning, he is greeted by name.

"It fascinates me," said Omar, the Bedouin, whose family still lives in

"If the student performs well, he advances to more sophisticated material," said Zarbokrsky.

MISD opened its campuses in 1979; thus allowing students to leave during the school day.

Since then, MISD trustees have received a barrage of complaints and requests from parents, law enforcement officials and civic leaders that the campuses be closed.

Cheryl Mears, 1404 Community Lane, told trustees, "We encourage you to close the campuses because, you see, parents decided to take the responsibility to place their children in the schools so they will not involve themselves in the community during the school hours."

"We are concerned that they're drinking and returning to the classroom and they're behavior is unacceptable to the teachers. We're also concerned with the truancy rate. I would encourage you to respect the feelings of the community because we have elected you and we have placed the responsibility for you to meet the needs of our children," Mrs. Mears said.

According to a 1984-85 study, MISD reported the Midland Police Department conducted 57 searches for drugs and other substances at the district's three junior high, two freshman and two high schools.

Of those 57 searches, school officials reported six incidents in which Bills to revoke spousal immunity for parents who don't report abuse by the other parent also failed, as did a bill that would have made videotaped testimony by children admissible in civil suits and DHR hearings, and another to criminalize interfering with a child witness. But Morgan did welcome the passage of Senate Bill 175, which made abandoning a child a criminal offense even if the child was not hurt.

"The child must suffer bodily injury" under the old law, Morgan said, but the new law requires only "the substantial and unjustifiable risk of harm" to prosecute the parent.

Despite the failure of the bills Morgan mentioned, local child-abuse workers seemed satisfied that the legal machinery they need was available; their concern was making it work.

"I think the laws are in place. (The question is) whether there are enough people to carry them out," said Margaret Purvis, a United Way of Midland board member who closely followed the organization's legislative program. Ms. Purvis was also concerned about coordination "between the Child Protective Service workers and the community programs."

"It's a three-way deal" between community-service organizations, the legal system and the DHR, she said.

The laws regarding child-abuse "are better than they used to be," said Deborah Pockat, director of the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children. Ms. Pockat would like to see increased penalties for those who don't report abuse — "it's a slap on the fingers" right now — but is basically satisfied with way the legal system deals with child abuse.

"It's just a matter of using it," she said.

Burglary suspects arrested at scene

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County Sheriff's deputies Tuesday morning, as a result of helicopter surveillance, arrested two suspects at separate locations as they were in the process of allegedly burglarizing two homes about 12 miles south of Odessa.

At about 11:30 a.m. Tuesday Sheriff's Lt. Richard Pate was flying on helicopter patrol south of the city in the Pleasant Farms area when he reportedly observed a suspicious individual at a home in the vicinity of Arrowhead and Quail Run. Pate notified ground units which converged on the home and arrested 28-year-old Rodrigo Munoz Anaya, 1008 Zacatecas, on charges of burglary of a habitation. Bond has been denied Anaya because of a "parole hold."

Earlier, Pate was patrolling in approximately the same area when he observed a suspicious individual at a home in the vicinity of Heritage and Quail Run carrying a television set out of the house. Pate called for ground units as he landed in the back yard and the suspect ran back into the house. Pate stayed on the ground in the helicopter until the ground units arrived and arrested the suspect on charges of burglary of a habitation. No bond had been set for the 28-year-old man as of late this morning, according to Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss. Delay in the arraignment and setting of bond was due to fact the suspect "spoke very poor English." Investigative officers wanted to make sure they had the proper name and individual before formal charges were filed, according to reports.

Kloss said the helicopter patrols were reinstituted following a rash of burglaries during the month of May. In the month of June so far, he said, there have been only 13 home burglaries compared to more than 80 in the month of May.

Kloss attributed the decrease to the resumption of helicopter patrols.

Across the rest of the state, heavy rains continued to fall today over a wide stretch of rain-soaked West Texas, prompting the National Weather Service to extend flash flood watches for the region.

Satellite photos early today showed a steady flow of tropical moisture into the western half of the state, the weather service said.

"This moist and highly unstable air mass continues to induce showers and thunderstorms from the Big Bend northward to near San Angelo," a spokesman for the weather service in Fort Worth said.

Rainfall estimates by radar indicated that as much as 2 inches of rain fell in Terrell County, along the Big Bend, in a six-hour period ending at 5 a.m., the weather service said.

Elsewhere, a cold front approaching Northwest Texas triggered showers and thunderstorms across the Texas Panhandle this morning. Another area of lighter showers was

Jewish leader's plea moves NAACP convention

Rabbi David Saperstein of speaks at the NAACP convention in Dallas, Tuesday.

DALLAS (AP) — A Jewish leader addressing the NAACP blamed the breakdown of interaction between blacks and Jews on a lack of communication, but he added that it was not too late to rebuild relations and form "a coalition of equals."

When Rabbi David Saperstein spoke before NAACP convention delegates Tuesday, it was the first time in at least 10 years that a prominent Jewish leader had addressed one of the group's national conventions.

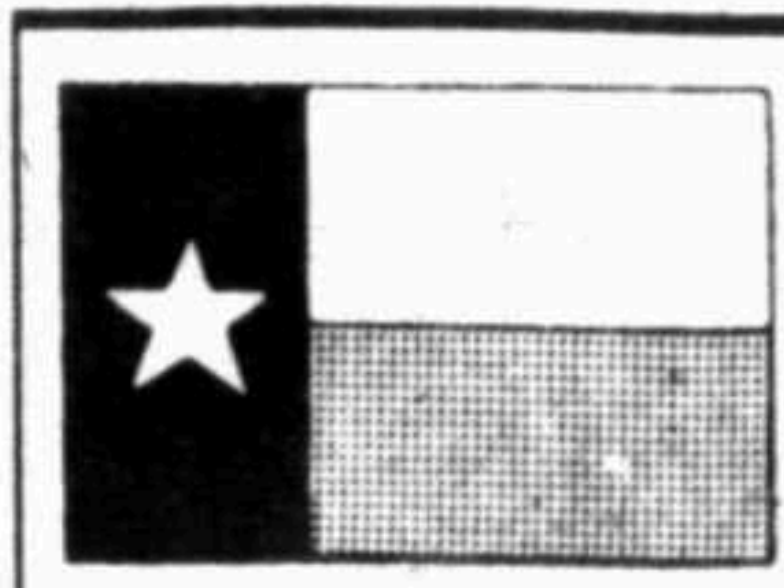

Saperstein, representing the Union of American Hebrew Congregations at the invitation of the NAACP, said he came to the group's 78th annual convention in Dallas to shatter some myths and stereotypes involving Jews.

"The breakdown of interaction between the two communities has made us less sensitive to each other's fears and needs, conveying a sense of betrayal and disappointment," Saperstein said.

"Jews have failed to appreciate that affirmative action is as precious to blacks as Israel is to Jews, that pride in Rev. (Jesse) Jackson's successes has little to do with his view on the PLO but everything to do with his ability," he said.

The majority of the six million Jews in America support affirmative action programs, but the very vocal and visible Jewish Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith opposes affirmative action.

STATE

"To the black community the ADL represents the entire Jewish community. I am here today to tell you that this stereotype is wrong," he said.

Saperstein's emotional speech urged the crowd to its feet, and brought tears to the eyes of NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks, who embraced Saperstein after the speech.

Also Tuesday, a California congressman told NAACP members that they would not be able to change the Reagan administration's stand on civil rights.

"Civil rights, affirmative action and equal educational opportunity are not accepted practices in Washington, D.C., namely in the executive branch," said U.S. Rep. Esteban Torres, a Los Angeles-area Democrat.

He said the solution is not a prolonged anti-Reagan harangue "because we're not going to change anybody's mind out there in 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue."

Instead, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People members must prod their congressmen for pro-civil rights action, Torres said.

"Let's get on with the lamenting (about Reagan)," he said. "Let's get it out of our system and let's move on to focus on the future, because the future starts this week."

Relatives to ask de La Madrid to aid hostages

LAREDO (AP) — Relatives of two of the 40 American hostages being held in Lebanon are hoping for a chance to ask Mexico President Miguel de La Madrid to work for a solution to the crisis.

The presidential press office duty officer in Mexico City said Tuesday night that de La Madrid today would finish making plans for a trip through northern Mexico, and a Friday stop in Nuevo Laredo may be on the agenda.

Just across the border, in Laredo, are the relatives of Vicente Garza and Robert Trautmann Jr.

They will ask the president to help secure the release of all the hostages, said Javier Santos, Garza's brother-in-law.

Santos said his family hopes de La Madrid will make a "humanitarian plea" on behalf of the hostages.

Garza and Trautmann are among 40 Americans who have been held hostage since the airplane they were on was hijacked 12 days ago. The men's wives and Trautmann's two daughters and stepdaughter also were aboard the TWA plane, but they were released.

Meanwhile, White House officials said Reagan may try "some sort of blockade" against Lebanon if diplomatic efforts do not succeed in freeing the hostages within "the next few days."

Santos said he would favor some type of economic sanctions against Lebanon over using violence to gain the hostages' release.

"We have full trust in the president and whatever actions he takes," Santos said.

Officers surprise inmate holding two hostages

KARNES CITY (AP) — An inmate held a jailer and a dispatcher hostage for seven hours before law enforcement officers took him by surprise, authorities said.

The standoff at Karnes County Jail ended Tuesday afternoon when police stormed the building, overwhelmed Roland Garcia, 38, of San Antonio and freed the two hostages, Sheriff Bobby Mutz said.

"There was no scuffle. The officers just drew down on him and he froze," the sheriff said. No injuries were reported during the takeover, Mutz said.

Garcia had armed himself with a metal shank he apparently pulled from a air conditioning vent, the sheriff said.

Garcia had been in the jail two weeks on a bench warrant after being indicted for auto theft and forgery. Mutz said Garcia was serving a 12½-year term at Huntsville for the same charges.

Garcia took the two as hostages Tuesday morning when he was allowed out of his cell to use the telephone, the sheriff said.

Mutz said the inmate asked the jailer, "What would you do if I tried to escape?"

"I'd stop you," the jailer replied.

The sheriff said Garcia then pulled the metal shank out and overpowered the jailer, identified as Eddie Garcia. Mutz said he did not know how the dispatcher, identified as Daisy Villanueva, was taken hostage.

The prisoner, who had all the jail keys, locked the door separating the jail from the sheriff's office, the San Antonio Light reported.

During the ensuing hours, Garcia asked to see his father and to be sent back to the Texas Department of Corrections prison in Huntsville, Mutz said. He also asked for an automobile and a set of handcuffs.

Authorities said the standoff, which began about 9:30 a.m., ended about 4:45 p.m.

Mutz said that since no one had a key to open the door Garcia had locked, an officer went to San Antonio, about 60 miles away, and returned after getting a duplicate of a master key.

Uncertain if the key would open the door, Mutz said he gingerly slipped it into the lock and twisted.

"We had a code worked out," Mutz said. "When I opened the door, I yelled 'Go!' and the officers rushed in."

The suspect was away from the hostages when about 10 state and local law enforcement officers rushed the room, the sheriff said.

House hopes amendments will curb Pentagon purchasing abuses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is hoping a series of amendments passed by overwhelming margins will transform the Pentagon's system for buying weapons and end public turmoil over "rampant waste, fraud and abuse."

The votes came Tuesday as a reaction to congressional investigations and published news reports about defense contractors billing the Pentagon for $640 toilet seat covers and country club memberships.

"There is rampant waste, fraud and abuse and it is a shame and a disgrace," said Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., who led a probe of allegedly improper overhead costs charged to Pentagon contracts.

The House voted for stiff criminal penalties for contractors who submit improper bills, approved a plan to end the so-called revolving door between Pentagon and defense industry jobs, and passed measures to encourage competition in awarding defense contracts.

These were the major actions: — The House voted 411 to 4 to provide criminal penalties and fines of up to $250,000 for individuals and $500,000 for corporations for contractors who bill unallowable overhead costs. The amendment also sets up strict accounting standards to end loopholes in current regulations.

— It voted 397 to 19 to prevent Pentagon employees from accepting work with a defense contractor within two years of leaving government service if they have had "significant responsibility for a contract involving that company."

"Billions of dollars have been awarded to contractors by officials whose judgments may have been influenced by future employment prospects," said Rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., sponsor of the amendment.

In recent years, more than 2,000 military officers have retired from their service jobs and quickly gone to work for contractors.

— The House voted 272 to 140 against giving the secretary of defense wide-ranging authority to grant exemptions to those "revolving door" restrictions.

Reynolds could stay as civil rights chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — If civil rights groups defeat the nomination of William Bradford Reynolds as associate attorney general, they might find him just where they don't want him — in his current job as the Justice Department's civil rights enforcer.

Terry Eastland, chief Justice Department spokesman, said Tuesday, "Mr. Reynolds intends to stay in his position should he not be confirmed... We have every hope he will be confirmed."

Civil rights groups, who have lobbied intensely to stop the Reynolds nomination, heard the department's message but reacted with caution.

Ralph Nease, director of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, said: "The immediate question is whether the Senate should promote someone who has placed himself above the law, and who has not been candid with the Senate. If necessary, we will then address any other questions."

The Senate Judiciary Committee is scheduled to vote Thursday on Reynolds, who was nominated by President Reagan as the Justice Department's No. 3 official. His nomination has been stalled by senators who said Reynolds gave misleading testimony under oath and failed to uphold civil rights laws.

If promoted, Reynolds could no longer devote full-time duties to the civil rights division he now directs — a factor that could take him away from his continuing, bitter feud with civil rights groups over enforcement policy.

The associate attorney general is in charge of all civil matters in the Justice Department, including civil rights, lands, taxes and antitrust.

The Judiciary Committee postponed a vote on Reynolds last week after Republicans, despite their 10-8 majority, couldn't muster the votes for a favorable recommendation.

The key to Reynolds' fate in committee may be Democratic Sen. Howell Heflin of Alabama, who has given no indication of his position.

Man's 'feeling' saves him from explosion

HALLETT, Okla. (AP) — James Aveni said he had driven halfway to work at the Aerlex Fireworks plant "when all of a sudden, I decided I just shouldn't go to work."

"It was just a feeling I had, telling me that I shouldn't go to work, that something was going to happen there," Aveni, 19, said. "So I just drove home, and called in sick and went back to sleep."

Twenty-one people were killed and five injured when the plant exploded Tuesday. Aveni was listed as missing for much of the day before authorities discovered that he was not at work.

Aveni, who had just completed his freshman year at Oklahoma State University, had worked at the plant for two months, part of increased temporary staff to handle the Fourth of July rush, he said.

"We began working seven days a week on the seventh of June and were due to cut back to five days a week after the Fourth (of July)," he said. "Eight of my buddies and I were only working until the Fourth."

"They had about as much precautions as anybody could have, and it still blew up. I guess no plant can be 100 percent safe."

Aveni said after he returned home Tuesday, he fell asleep — "but woke up suddenly at about 9:30, right about the time of the explosion. I guess the force woke me up, but I didn't know what it was."

Hostage crisis major challenge to Peres

By ARTHUR MAX

An Analysis

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Beirut hostage crisis presents a major challenge to Prime Minister Shimon Peres, whose popularity already is slipping because of a lopsided prisoner exchange, stalled peace initiatives and a failure to right the economy.

For the first time since taking office, Peres' rating has dipped in the opinion polls. A Public Opinion Research of Israel survey of 1,200 Israelis, published Tuesday in Haaretz newspaper, said Peres' monthly approval rating fell in May by 7.9 points to 51.9 percent.

Analysts say the prime minister's falling popularity is partially a sign of growing impatience with his nine-month-old administration's handling of the economy and the peace process.

But Peres' worst setback came last month when his government agreed to trade 1,150 convicted guerrillas for three Israeli soldiers held by Syrian-backed Palestinian guerrilla leader Ahmed Jibril.

Government officials acknowledge that the deal was a blunder and that the Cabinet misread the public mood.

The prisoner swap now weighs heavily on Peres, who is under pressure to free 700 Lebanese accused of lesser offenses to meet the demands of the TWA hijackers holding 40 American hostages in Beirut.

Some Israelis perceive Peres' handling of the hostage crisis as indecisive. This, coupled with the prisoner swap, reinforces an image of being soft in dealing with the Arabs.

Although the government had said it would not consider freeing the prisoners unless it received a public request from the United States, Israel unilaterally freed 31 of the detainees Monday and Peres sent a letter to President Reagan offering to cooperate on the hostage crisis.

Israeli officials said the release was not linked to the hijackers' demands, but was in line with Israel's policy of freeing the Lebanese as the security situation in South Lebanon permits.

But one official who spoke on condition of anonymity indicated that Israel might clear any future releases with the U.S. government.

Last week, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin, voicing an anger that had been expressed privately by other Israeli officials, lashed out at the United States for not letting Israel know clearly what it wanted.

Then, fearing a rift with its most important ally, Peres changed tactics and began praising Reagan's firm stand against terrorism.

Facing tough questions from an international audience last Friday, Peres responded defensively to criticism of his stand against terrorism. He repeatedly cited his record as defense minister in 1976, when Israeli commandos rescued hijack hostages from Entebbe airport in Uganda, 7,000 miles from Israel.

"In war sometimes there is retreat. There are tactics and there is strategy. As far as strategy is concerned, there is no country that fought terrorism" like Israel, he said.

The hijack crisis comes at a time when Peres' economic management is crumbling and when his efforts to move ahead on the peace front are blocked by right-wingers in his own Cabinet.

Strikes by both workers and businessmen have made a shambles of his plan to halve last year's 400 percent inflation rate.

Because of Peres' partnership with Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir's right-wing Likud bloc, his coalition government is hamstrung in efforts to start peace talks between Israel and a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation.

Peres and Shamir are at odds over who would qualify to represent the Palestinians at the bargaining table. The question is seen as the major obstacle to opening a peace conference.

Shamir has also blocked an agreement with Egypt to submit a border dispute in the Sinai peninsula to international arbitration.

Peres believes that meeting Egypt's demand for binding arbitration would thaw the cool relations with Cairo and clear the way for a summit with President Hosni Mubarak, which he sees as an essential first step in broadening the peace process.

Red Cross workers visit all hostages

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Two Red Cross workers, one a physician, visited all 40 American hostages held by Shiite Moslems in Beirut, a spokesman for the International Committee of the Red Cross said today.

"The Red Cross workers held private talks, that is, without witnesses, with all of them," spokesman Pascal Gondrand said. He said the visits took place overnight.

However, in keeping with Red Cross policy, information on the hostages' conditions will not be made public, Gondrand said. He said a report of the visit would be provided to U.S. authorities and to the families of the hostages.

The two-member team visited the three crew members of the hijacked TWA jetliner on board the aircraft where they are being held, he said.

The other 37 Americans are said to be in separate groups in and around Beirut. It was not clear whether the Red Cross team was brought to their hiding places. Gondrand said he could only say the visits took place in Beirut.

Shiite Moslems are holding the American passengers and crew of a Athens-to-Rome flight hijacked June 14, demanding that Israel release about 730 Lebanese prisoners.

Canada says it's uncertain jet destroyed by terrorists

TORONTO (AP) — Despite suspicion of sabotage, reports that Sikh extremists are being sought and claims of responsibility, the government says it cannot be certain that Air-India Flight 182 was destroyed by terrorists and that the crash was linked to a Tokyo airport blast.

The Boeing jumbo jet with 329 people aboard, bound for New Delhi and then Bombay after taking off from Toronto and stopping in Montreal, vanished suddenly from radar screens Sunday morning as it approached the Irish coast. Rescue workers found broken wreckage and 131 bodies strewn over the sea.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney is urging Canadians not to jump to conclusions.

"There is no evidence linking any group at this time to this act and fairness and decency requires that the Sikhs be given the benefit of the doubt," Mulroney told reporters.

Asked if he believed terrorists were responsible for the Air-India crash and an explosion Sunday of luggage unloaded from a Canadian airliner at the Tokyo airport, Mulroney said:

"We do not have the firm evidence that would allow us to make that flat statement and I haven't made it, but obviously we're very concerned about the fragmentary information we have so far."

An official said today investigators are studying the possibility that an extra engine strapped to the wing of the Air-India Boeing 747 may have contributed to its crash.

Rene Mercier said in a telephone interview from Ottawa that the engine was attached in Toronto and was being carried back to India for an unrelated use. He said it was a standard procedure that never before had caused problems.

Sean Brady, spokesman for Foreign Secretary Joe Clark, said Monday that the Tokyo explosion was "clearly terrorist," and claims of responsibility and other information about the Air India flight brought the government "to the conclusion that it was a terrorist incident as well, and as a result we are not discounting possible links between the two."

Tokyo police say time bomb probably caused explosion

TOKYO (AP) — A police spokesman said today that investigators can assume it was a time bomb that exploded at Tokyo's Narita airport and killed two cargo handlers the same day that an Air-India jet went down in the Atlantic Ocean near Ireland.

Another police source, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said among the theories authorities were investigating was that an explosive device was hidden in a piece of luggage that arrived on a Canadian Pacific jumbo jet, and was destined for an Air-India flight to Bombay.

Police declined to comment on news reports that pieces of an integrated circuit, which sometimes are used to make bombs, had been found amid the debris.

The explosion occurred Sunday as handlers were unloading baggage from a Canadian Pacific flight for distribution to the terminal claim area or for transfer to other flights. Two baggage handlers were killed and four others injured.

The Narita police spokesman, Masafumi Ebie, said in a telephone interview that "we can assume it was a time bomb" but added that conclusive evidence was still lacking.

"It will be a while before we can make any decisive conclusions about the explosive mechanism because there is so much debris, which ranges from shrapnel to human flesh," Ebie said.

The Japanese news media has speculated that Sikh terrorists may have planned the simultaneous explosions on two Air-India jets. Sikh spokesmen have denied involvement.

An Air-India flight from Toronto to India crashed off the coast of Ireland on Sunday, killing all 329 aboard, apparently after an explosion. The crash occurred 53 minutes after the blast at Narita.

British police net IRA's 'master bomber'

LONDON (AP) — Police who thwarted a planned IRA blitz of English seaside resorts also have netted some of Northern Ireland's most wanted men, including the suspected "master bomber" behind last year's attack on the prime minister, news reports said today.

Police are holding 15 persons under the Prevention of Terrorism Act, which allows detention without charge for up to a week, Scotland Yard confirmed.

Among them, according to The Press Association domestic news agency, the British Broadcasting Corp. and Independent Television News, is a 33-year-old Belfast man who stayed in Room 629 at the Grand Hotel in Brighton under an assumed name four weeks before a bomb in the room gutted the building last October during a Conservative Party convention.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher narrowly escaped injury but five other Conservatives were killed in the blast, which the Irish Republican Army claimed as part of its campaign to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

Scotland Yard's press office declined all comment on the reports.

But in Parliament Tuesday, Home Secretary Leon Brittan — who also escaped the Brighton blast unharmed — lauded the "outstandingly successful" police operation, which Mrs. Thatcher said had averted a campaign designed to "maim and kill many innocent people."

Brittan added: "What has come out reflects only a small part of the information already in the hands of police."

Scotland Yard would only confirm that eight people were being held in Glasgow, Scotland, two in London, two in the county of Sussex south of London and three in Lancashire, a north-central English county. It said that three women who had been held since Monday in Brighton under the Prevention of Terrorism Act were released late Tuesday night.

Police and hotel officials today continued searching rooms in the 12 resort cities they said were singled out in an IRA hitlist seized during raids in several cities.

Bombs ignite fuel depot in black tribal homeland

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Two explosions apparently caused by bombs ignited a government fuel depot and knocked out a power station today in the black tribal homeland of Transkei, authorities said.

In riot-torn black townships east of Johannesburg, seven blacks were killed and eight were injured in a series of grenade attacks, police said.

It was one of the worst nights of violence in 10 months of protests against white minority rule and the racial segregation policy called apartheid. Private groups say more than 400 people have died in the unrest.

The incidents came on the 30th anniversary of the signing of the Freedom Charter, a document calling for a non-racial government that is regarded by many activists as a blueprint for a future South Africa.

The explosions in Umtata, capital of the Transkei black homeland, came only a few minutes apart and plunged the city and its suburbs into darkness.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Guerrillas launch 'just' war

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas say the slaying of four American Marines last week was "only the beginning" of a "just" war against U.S. military personnel.

The guerrillas' statement, broadcast Tuesday on the rebel station Radio Venceremos, called the killing of the Marines "a just action in the legitimate defense of our people."

The Marines were shot dead last Wednesday along with two U.S. businessmen and seven Latin Americans when gunmen dressed as Salvadoran soldiers sprayed two sidewalk cafes with automatic weapons fire.

The Marines, off-duty and out of uniform at the time of the shooting, were assigned to guard the U.S. Embassy. Their bodies were sent home on Saturday.

Following the shootings, new security restrictions were imposed for U.S. diplomatic and military personnel, and the U.S. Embassy said it would plan only a small Independence Day celebration.

Italian president elected

ROME (NYT) — Francesco Cossiga, a Christian Democrat from Sardinia, was elected president of Italy Monday.

Cossiga, who will take office July 8 for a seven-year term, will be the youngest president of the postwar republic and the first since 1946 to be elected on the first ballot.

A 56-year-old former prime minister, he will replace Sandro Pertini, 88, who was widely regarded as Italy's most popular postwar president.

Pertini took himself out of the race after it became clear that the Christian Democrats, Italy's largest party, would insist on taking back the presidency. Pertini is a Socialist.

Cossiga won an overwhelming 752 of the 977 votes cast by members of Parliament and regional leaders.

Manuscript fragment sold

LONDON (AP) — A fragment of a 1,300-year-old manuscript, found last fall in the binding of a book in Washington, D.C., has been sold for $105,600. Sotheby's auction house said.

The buyer of the fragment — believed to be the earliest known manuscript written in England — was an unidentified dealer who bid by telephone Tuesday.

The tattered double page of yellowed vellum was found in the Folger Shakespeare Library and is believed by experts to have been written by an Irish monk in an English monastery in the early to mid-7th century.

Changing names

Often in the excitement of victory, successful leftist revolutionaries immediately go on a rampage of changing the names of old and revered institutions to conform with their ideology — many times with ludicrous results.

Such was the case in mainland China after Mao Tse-tung's forces clamped their communist tyranny on the country in 1949. One of the first targets of the name-changing fanatics was the Peking Union Medical College Hospital which had been financed by the Rockefeller Foundation since 1914.

Depending on the direction of the changing political winds, this venerable establishment underwent three name changes, the most lunatic being "The Anti-Imperialist Hospital" which was affixed during the Red Guard follies of the late 1960s.

In deference to former President Nixon during his visit to Peking in 1972, the Chinese government again renamed the complex as Capital Hospital. That survived until early this month when, in an unusual ceremony, the hospital reverted to the name under which it had functioned prior to 1949.

Obviously the move was inspired by the current Chinese Communist leader, Deng Xiaoping, to help restore the links between his country's scientists and those of the West, a collaboration from which the hospital — and China itself — are certain to profit.

When the chips are down, wily Deng Xiaoping clearly is on the side of hard-headed practicality and against revolutionary theatrics.

Keeping secrets

Top secret isn't, anymore. The number of Americans with government clearances to view classified documents is 900,000. The number of Americans with Top Secret security clearances is 100,000. When that many people can see secret documents, they're not secret anymore.

Spies used to do it for political reasons. They now seem to be doing it for money. The U.S. government will never be able to pay people not to be spies. It must rely on the patriotism and the fear of punishment.

It's easier to keep a limited number of important secrets than to keep a high number of unimportant ones.

We must limit the number of people with access to secret information. And we should curtail the number of documents that are classified, reserving that status for documents which must remain secret.

Secret must mean it to be it.

Another View:

Ease the distress

More than a year has passed since the Reagan administration stopped its overzealous review of Social Security benefits for disabled Americans. But the lull in that mean-spirited campaign has not brought an end to the hardship. Thousands of deserving people thrown off the disability rolls still must fight their way through a complicated appeals process. The administration could ease their plight simply by complying fully with the law.

When Congress ordered reviews of disability benefits in 1980, it envisioned an orderly effort to purge the program of malingerers. Yet the administration used reviews not just to detect fraud, but to shrink the program's $18 billion cost. It redefined eligibility rules and cut off payments to half a million handicapped, mentally ill and retarded recipients by declaring them able to work. That capricious scheme unleashed the wrath of the courts — which reinstated benefits for nearly two-thirds of those who appealed — and of Congress, which last fall approved a law to forbid arbitrary benefit cutoffs.

A somewhat abashed administration temporarily suspended the review program even before Congress acted. But the moratorium did nothing for the destitute thousands already tossed from the rolls. They remain victims of a misguided administration policy: Whenever a court ruled that a disabled person had been wrongfully removed from the rolls, the administration reinstated the plaintiff's benefits — but refused to apply the court's ruling to other cases.

That policy hurt many people who were simply too poor or too confused to appeal their benefit losses. Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler admitted as much earlier in June when she announced that the administration will now follow legal precedents in benefit cases. Yet the new policy offers only feeble hope. Though it requires administrative law judges to give claimants the benefit of appellate rulings within their circuit, it includes no similar requirement for state agencies that handle initial claims and appeals. Thus only the few claimants with the money, stamina and time to press a case past the initial appeal will benefit from federal-court rulings.

That approach ignores the real distress of defenseless people wrongly removed from the rolls and in need of immediate relief. And as lawmakers at a recent House subcommittee hearing complained, the policy flouts Congress's order that the administration apply circuit court rulings it does not plan to appeal to all claimants within the circuit. Despite those criticisms, the administration says it will keep the new policy and resume disability reviews this summer. Congress should intervene to change the administration's lawless plan.

Questions linger in Mengele case

WASHINGTON — Our intelligence sources are not convinced that Dr. Josef Mengele, the Nazi war criminal, is dead. They believe the evidence of his alleged drowning in 1979 could have been manufactured as part of an elaborate hoax to throw off the legions of Mengele hunters, some of whom may have been getting uncomfortably close to the Auschwitz "Angel of Death."

At first blush, the evidence of his demise is impressive. It includes not only the remains found in Brazil, but letters and other documents. There is also the testimony of Mengele's son and exiles who knew him while he was on the lam.

But both American and Israeli intelligence sources told our associate Lucette Lagnado that the story of Mengele's accidental drowning is contradicted by other evidence. Here are some of the contradictions that make us suspicious:

— The testimony of Gilda Stammer, the Hungarian woman who claims that she and her husband gave Mengele refuge in Brazil for several years starting in 1962, doesn't jibe with other, more authoritative evidence. Also, her husband has yet to be interviewed to confirm or deny her account. At last report, he was on his way to Singapore.

— Ms. Stammer said Mengele lived alone in Brazil. Yet there is documented evidence that his second wife, Marta, and stepson, Karl-Heinz, were with him in South America through 1964.

— Members of Paraguayan dictator Alfredo Stroessner's staff admitted to the CIA that Mengele lived in Paraguay until 1965 — three years after Ms. Stammer said he had settled in Brazil. The staff members also told the CIA that Mengele moved to Portugal in the late 1960s and "sent correspondence, including Christmas cards, to them from Portugal until late 1980" — a year after he was supposed to have drowned.

— Ms. Stammer insists that Mengele was never away from their home for more than a day or two during the years he spent with them. Yet a CIA report indicates that Mengele was a frequent visitor to Paraguay after 1965. Our associate also interviewed a Paraguayan rancher who said he stayed in the room next to Mengele for extended periods as late as the 1970s. A room was kept specially for Mengele at the small Europa Hotel in Asuncion, the rancher said.

— The circumstances surrounding the news of Mengele's death were bizarre, to say the least. After years of inaction, West German police suddenly got an anonymous tip that led them to raid the home of Hans Sedlmayr, a longtime executive of the Mengele family tractor firm. There they found the documents that led them to the evidence of Mengele's drowning. It couldn't have come at a more suspicious time — just as several governments were zeroing in on Mengele and after millions of dollars in reward money had been offered.

— Before the drowning story broke, the Mengele family attorney, Fritz Steinacher, publicly affirmed that he was "still" Josef Mengele's lawyer. Steinacher also made a secret visit to Israel just a few weeks before the tip to West German police led to the discovery of the old Nazi's supposed grave in Brazil.

Did Steinacher return from Israel with alarming news for his client? Did this have anything to do with the sudden appearance of evidence a few weeks later that Mengele was dead?

The Mengele mystery still has not been solved. Nothing short of an international commission composed of Americans, Germans, Israelis and Brazilians would have the credibility to settle the matter once and for all.

Footnote: We have been pursuing the Mengele story for 25 years. The story of our long search for the death-camp doctor will appear in Sunday's Parade magazine (June 30). It went to press before the alleged Mengele remains were exhumed.

UNDER THE DOME: President Reagan has threatened to veto a supplemental appropriations bill because it contains several pork-barrel items for local water projects. So Congress also tacked onto the bill the president's requested funding of anti-Sandinista Nicaraguan guerrillas. A disgraced Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., termed the move "pork insurance."

FUDDLE FACTORY: A Pentagon employee showed us these excerpts from a bureaucrat's exercise book: "Duck responsibility. Jump through hoops. Run in place. Push those papers. Dodge decisions. Keep flexible. Bend with the prevailing wind."

MINI-EDITORIAL: David Packard, a wealthy businessman and former deputy defense secretary under President Nixon, has been assigned by President Reagan to head a task force to discover how to clean up the Pentagon's procurement mess. We've been watching Packard since the Nixon era. In one column we quoted a Pentagon memo that described a conversation between Packard and a subordinate on the subject of defense contractors. "We have to do something to get their profits up a little bit," Packard was quoted as saying. Like $640 toilet seats?

Teenagers need place

Please tell me of a place where teenagers can go to meet their friends and to meet new people. It seems to me that everyone is so eager to keep us out of certain areas and parking lots but no one will offer a suggestion of some place we can go.

There's the movies, right? Sure, if you have five dollars to drop every night and that's not including something to eat and drink. We're not all rich and cruising is an inexpensive night out, especially if we can park somewhere. Besides, inside a movie theater is no place to talk and make new friends.

We can't go anywhere to dance because we're not "of age," whether we drink or not. I guess we could hang out at the mall with all of the freshmen or go skating with the junior high and elementary kids. Ha! Nowadays they cause just as much trouble, if not more, than the average teenager!

Though adults may find this hard to believe, we teenagers look forward to the weekend so we can go cruising. All teenagers aren't such bad people. Personally, I have met some of the nicest people I know on "the strip." Cruising is the only time a lot of people get to see each other.

First, we were run off of Mr. Gatti's parking lot. The police told us not long before that they were sympathetic with us and trying to help us to have a place to cruise. The we started going to the old Gibson's lot. Now, all of a sudden there are signs all over the parking lot prohibiting us from the lot. Again, run off but where to now?

If someone would work with us and offer some solutions we might could make everyone involved happy. Laws, such as trespassing, wouldn't be broken if we had some place legally to go. I realize not everyone is as cooperative as others, but we all shouldn't have to suffer. I am not a troublemaker and I am not trying to be rude. I just want a place to go and be with my friends. There are some people I may never see again if we aren't given a place to cruise.

Someone, PLEASE, help us out and work with us instead of against us. We deserve a place to meet people too but our chances are being taken away from us. Besides, I had much rather meet someone cruising than in a bar. In the long run I feel that more trouble will be started if we can't all get together — at least this way the police would know where trouble might start.

We are expected to show respect, but in turn, I think we deserve a little respect too!

Auction was successful

The 1985 Country Squire's Picnic, sponsored by the Opportunity Center Auxiliary, was highly successful. The money generated from the event this year will be put to use in improving services for citizens with mental retardation who live in Midland.

Many people, businesses, and organizations contributed to the success of the picnic. So many, in fact, that I hesitate to mention their names for fear of overlooking someone or appearing unappreciative of their efforts. I am compelled, however, to publicly thank Mr. Hanway and Mr. Price of Hanway & Hanway of Odessa who donated the time and resources of their staff to conduct our auction. Many hours of preparation were necessary prior to the picnic. Tom and Tim Assiter traveled from Floydada and Amarillo, respectively, to attend and to work, without charge, as auctioneers.

I wish to express appreciation to everyone who participated with us — to those who helped by acting as benefactors, patrons, or sponsors; to those who volunteered their valuable time; and especially to those who purchased tickets and bid on the auction items. You have supported a most worthy cause and we thank you.

Thanks to Animal Control

Just wanted to take a small space in this column to thank the two lovely ladies from Animal Control who came in 30 minutes, close to quitting time when they learned five small kittens had been confined for four days between fences due to new neighbors not wanting them as they made their dog bark.

May I say here if one does not want their pets don't throw them on your neighbor, call Animal Control — they are lovely people, and may keep a guilty party from being arrested for cruelty to animals.

ART BUCHWALD

Whose hijacking is this?

At some point in time, and no one knows exactly when, the coverage of a hostage crisis becomes as important as the event itself. Whether we like it or not TV news is diplomacy and diplomacy is TV news.

I was therefore not surprised to find Farley Glitchfield, news director at the Sky Network Company, in the SNC situation room looking at a bank of monitors.

Art Buchwald

A voice came over the loudspeaker. "The U.N. Ambassador of Israel refuses to discuss what his government intends to do with the 700 Shiite prisoners his country is holding."

Glitchfield said, "Did you tell him his government's position is vital to Bob Haircomb's lead hostage story tonight?"

"Yes, I did, and he said things were too delicate for him to go on the air with any statement."

"Then dump him and go to one of the Carter White House people. How are our negotiations going with the terrorists in Beirut?"

"The competition is trying to sabotage us. ABC is telling them they can get much better Nielsen if they give them an exclusive interview. CBS is dealing with another faction that claims it controls all TV rights to the hostages, and NBC is refusing to let us use their satellite unless we share our tape with them. Nabal Kamal, the moderate terrorist leader, says when it comes to negotiating exclusives, he will only deal with you."

"Get him on the phone. Nabal, I haven't spoken to you since your people blew up our consulate in Tripoli two years ago. Didn't we treat you right when you hijacked the 747 over the Dead Sea last April? And remember five years ago when you took over the USIA Library and none of the other networks would put you on the air? ... Who let you read your demands on camera? SNC did, that's who. You owe us, Nabal. The other networks are sucking around because you have control of the hostages. But just see if they'll give you the time of day, much less prime time, once the crisis is over ... No, Nabal, we're not interested in a joint press conference. What kind of a news operation do you think we run?"

"You have two hours to think it over. If you don't reply affirmatively we're pulling all our TV cameras and lights out of your headquarters."

The person sitting next to Glitchfield in the situation room said, "That's the way to talk to him. I hope he knows terrorism doesn't pay unless he deals with us."

"You have to talk tough or they'll walk all over you in a crisis situation. By the way, whoever dubbed Kamal a 'moderate'? He's car-bombed more than seven buildings in Beirut."

"We had to call him moderate to distinguish him from those who wiped out all the Palestinians in a refugee camp last month. Our new guidelines are if they talk to us, then they're moderate terrorists. If they don't, they're radical killers. If Nabal won't play, do you want us to put on the back-up terrorist leader tonight?"

"Does he have anything to do with the hostage crisis?"

"I doubt it, but nobody's going to know that."

"Put him on standby," Glitchfield said. "Who else have we got?"

"A terrorist expert from Georgetown University, an Oxford professor who wrote a book about hijacking, a former CIA Mideast operator — and Henry Kissinger."

"We had Kissinger last night."

"It doesn't matter. People like to see Kissinger on TV during a national crisis. Hello? ... Just a minute. It's the White House. They're asking if we have any new information as to what's going on."

"I told them we'd call if there was anything to report. Why do they keep bugging us when they know we have a hostage show to put on?"

Snow hits Wyoming mountains

Associated Press
The temperature hit freezing and snow piled up in Wyoming's high country today while heavy rain prompted flash flood warnings in Nebraska and Texas.

Showers and thunderstorms stretched from central and eastern Nebraska across parts of the upper Mississippi Valley. Thunderstorms were scattered across the southern High Plains and lingered from Mississippi across southern Alabama and in the panhandle and west coast of Florida.

Showers moved across southern New England and rain was widespread across Wyoming.

Snow fell at elevations above 7,500 feet in northwestern Wyoming amid predictions of as much as a six-inch accumulation at high elevations.

A flash flood watch was issued for south central through northeastern Nebraska after 4 inches of rain fell at Brady during 90 minutes late Tuesday.

In Texas, a flash flood watch was issued from the Big Bend to the Permian Basin.

College athletics tries to tackle problems

Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association would seek to ban newspapers from publishing the point spreads on college sporting events if the law allowed such censorship, the NCAA's president says.

But a sports editor for The Boston Globe defended the practice Tuesday, while conceding newspapers print point spreads as a service to gamblers.

"I think most newspapers have come to the conclusion that gamblers are readers too," said Vince Doria at a hearing on organized crime and gambling. "I think most of us believe that those readers deserve to be serviced."

Doria, the Globe's assistant managing editor for sports, agreed with a questioner on the President's Commission on Organized Crime that the Globe thus printed point spreads as a tool for illegal gambling.

"I admit that in my statement, yes," he said.

A POINT spread is a gambling device that sets a margin by which a team must win for a better backing that team to collect. Doria said some point spreads, as in hockey, "are of interest only to the hard-core bettor."

John R. Davis, president of the NCAA, told the commission that gambling, combined with the use of drugs by college athletes, threatens "to destroy the integrity of major college sports programs" if left unchecked.

Davis called for a federal law banning any gambling on amateur sports — countering a proposal by Doria for legalization of sports gambling.

Moreover, Davis said, "Were it not for apparent constitutional limitations, the NCAA would favor legislation which prohibited the publication ... of gambling information relating to intercollegiate events."

The testimony came during the second day of a three-day hearing in Manhattan by the crime commission, which was formed to study organized crime.

ANOTHER WITNESS, sports broadcaster Howard Cosell, assailed Doria's position on point spreads by referring to the role of organized crime in illegal gambling. "The kind of attitude expressed there creates mobocracy, no more, no less," Cosell said of Doria's statement.

While Davis urged tighter anti-gambling laws, Doria favored legalization of college sports gambling. "The guy who wants to place a bet is going to find a place to do it," Doria said, and government regulation would "take sports gambling away from organized crime."

Davis testified drug use and gambling come together when bookmakers — possibly representing organized crime syndicates — proffer drugs and money as bribes to have players affect the outcomes of games.

One president's course of action: firm punishment for rules abusers

Associated Press

Joe B. Wyatt remembers attending the NCAA's annual convention in January of 1984 — when the powerful Presidents Commission was formed — and coming away "simply appalled at the actions there."

What especially gnawed at Vanderbilt University's chancellor was what he called "the overall feeling of ambivalence whether the chief executive officers had the responsibility to act" on matters concerning higher academic standards for athletes.

"It was inexplicable to me that the CEO of an enterprise doesn't have full responsibility concerning athletic matters," Wyatt said. "To me, it was a very simple matter — you shouldn't admit anyone to a college or university if you don't believe, based on his past, that he can complete the course of study he takes."

In the last year-and-a-half, Wyatt has had his eyes opened by some of the goings-on and apparently intends to become a leader in the escalating effort to clean things up.

At this time last year, Vanderbilt and Florida were the only Southeastern Conference schools that had never won the SEC football title. Florida thought it had broken through with a 5-0-1 league record in 1984 and the blessings of the SEC's Executive Committee, which ruled the Gators could keep their title but couldn't go to the Sugar Bowl because of an NCAA probation resulting from 59 rules violations.

THANKS IN no small measure to Wyatt, Florida and Vandy still are officially without a championship. A letter written by Wyatt to Mississippi State President James McComas, chairman of the Executive Committee, was circulated — with Wyatt's approval — among all the SEC presidents and resulted in Florida's being stripped of the title late last month. Wyatt would like Florida to know it's nothing personal.

"This really has nothing to do especially with Florida except that they were found guilty of more than 50 violations," Wyatt said. "It seemed ludicrous in the face of that for them to be recognized as conference champions."

"I didn't lobby against anybody. To me, it was a matter that each institution had to decide. It was a matter of the utmost importance to the integrity of the conference and college athletics."

Wyatt's letter did point out that "the integrity of the SEC is in jeopardy. Indeed, the integrity of college athletics in general is close to an all-time low, from my perspective."

HE URGED the presidents to reconsider the Executive Committee's ruling on the football championship. They did so at the annual SEC meetings in Destin, Fla., late last month and voted 6-4 — Alabama, Auburn and Mississippi State were in Florida's corner — to take away the Gators' championship.

Ancient Koosman turns trick on Cards' Andujar — again

Associated Press

Jerry Koosman has done twice what the rest of the National League has only done once this season. And it only took him seven days.

For the second time in a week, the NL's oldest pitcher beat baseball's winningest pitcher as Koosman and the Philadelphia Phillies beat Joaquin Andujar and the St. Louis Cardinals 3-1 Tuesday night.

The 42-year-old left-hander pitched a three-hitter — yielding only an unearned run — struck out eight and walked two. Andujar, 12-1 before he ran into Koosman, dropped to 12-3.

Koosman underwent surgery on his left knee May 8. A month later, he was pitching in relief. Last Wednesday he started for the first time since the surgery and hurled six innings as the Phillies hung a 1-0 loss on Andujar and the Cards.

"It's like a broken bone in that I should have given it longer (to heal)," said Koosman of the knee. "But I didn't. I wanted to help. It may bother me all year. I have no pain."

KOOSMAN NOW pitches with a brace on the knee designed to prevent fluid accumulation.

He pitched with a mind to prevent an accumulation of baserunners.

"The whole club is built around speed, so the whole secret is keeping them off the bases," Koosman said, revealing a strategy everyone knows but few have been able to execute this year. The Cardinals are leading the league in batting and runs scored.

"I was making my pitch the whole game," Koosman said. "Once in a while you get beat at it. Willie McGee hit one of my pitches."

McGee slammed a one-out triple in the sixth with the Phillies ahead, 3-1. But Koosman struck out Tom Herr and, after walking Jack Clark, got Tito Landrum on a fly ball.

"I got Herr 0-2 and it offered me a chance to play a game with him. He was looking for a curve and I got him with a fastball inside," Koosman said.

ST. LOUIS Manager Whitey Herzog, a coach with the Mets when Koosman pitched in New York, asked: "How old is he, 42? There's not much difference now than when he was with the Mets. He can pitch. He throws the slow curve but still has the good fastball."

Mets 3, Cubs 2

Dwight Gooden returned to the only park where he was frustrated in his rookie campaign and went all the way to force a 13th straight defeat upon Chicago. He struck out six Cubs and walked three.

Last Tuesday, Gooden, now 11-3, beat the Cubs 1-0 in New York.

"I was glad to finally win at Wrigley Field, I knew what happened last year," said Gooden, who absorbed losses of 11-2 and 9-3 in Chicago as a rookie in 1984. Working with six days rest, he pitched his seventh complete game of the year.

Gary Carter and Howard Johnson hit solo homers, Carter his 10th and Johnson his second.

Chicago's losing streak has tied a team record. The Cubs first lost 13 straight in 1944 and did it again in 1982. "I've gone through two of these," said Keith Moreland, who was also with the 1982 team. "This is a different feeling than before."

"It was different then, we didn't have the talent we have now," agreed Ryne Sandberg. "We weren't expected to win."

"It's really hard to explain how this team can lose 13 in a row. We're more intense now. With the talent we have, you are not expected to lose like this."

Reds 7, Giants 6

Cincinnati, trailing 6-3, rallied for four runs in the eighth inning. Cesar Cedeño's first home run as an American — a two-run shot — touched off the rally against reliever Mark Davis, 3-5.

"I hit my first home run as an American," said Cedeño, a Dominican who became a U.S. citizen last week. "Now I'm only 754 behind Henry Aaron."

Singles by Nick Esasky and Ron Oester and a throwing error by first baseman Scott Thompson on Eddie Milner's grounder let Esasky score the tying run.

Gary Redus' soft pop barely fell in front of a drawn-in infield. Milner scored as Redus was thrown out at first.

The Giants suffered their fifth consecutive loss by wasting a 6-2 lead after seven innings off Mario Soto, who narrowly averted his fourth straight loss. John Stuper, 6-5, worked an inning for the victory. Ted Power pitched the ninth for his 12th save.

Dave Parker hit his 12th homer for the Reds and Chris Brown his fourth for the Giants.

Expos 3, Pirates 2

Tim Lincecum hit a solo homer and Dan Drisless, who had committed a costly error the inning before, drilled a tie-breaking single as Montreal rallied in the seventh and moved into first place in the NL East, a half-game in front of St. Louis.

Drisless bumped into catcher Steve Nicosia on Jim Morrison's foul pop in the sixth. The ball dropped. Morrison then doubled in a run, tying the game 1-1, and scored on George Hendrick's two-out single, putting Pittsburgh ahead.

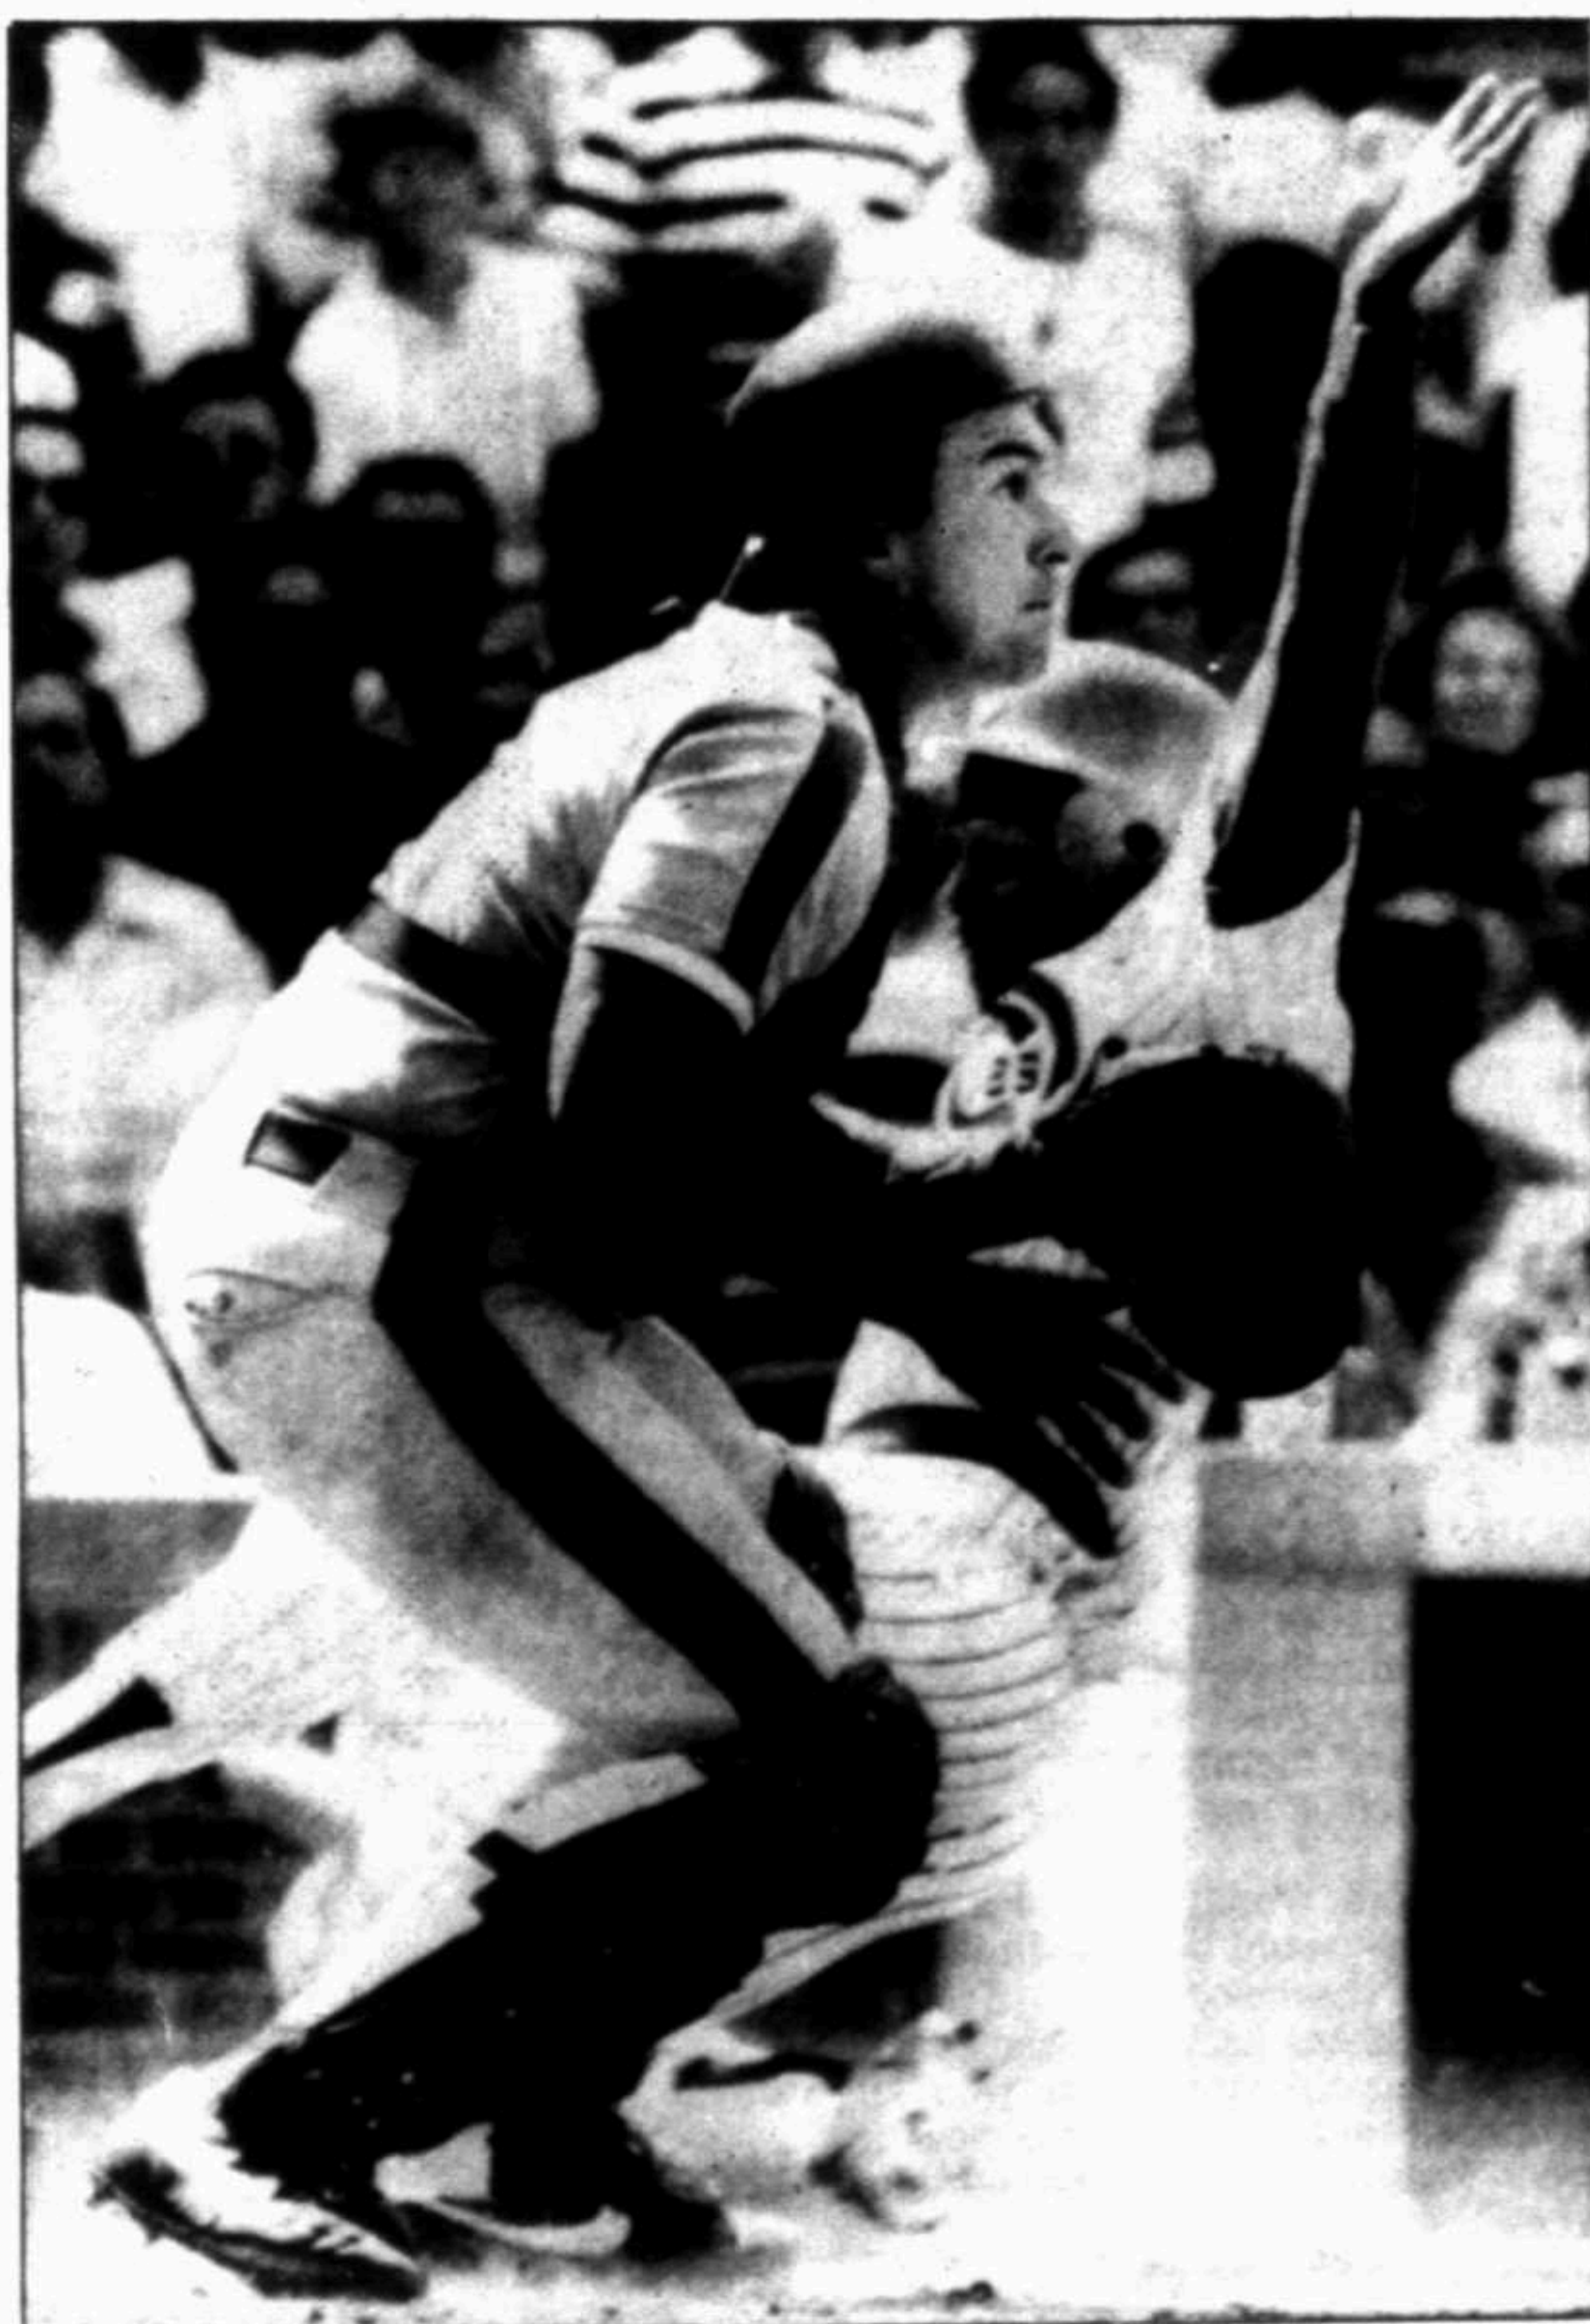

Tim Burke, 4-0, pitched one-third of an inning for the victory. Jeff Reardon pitched the final 2 1/3 innings for his major-league-high 21st save.

Braves 6, Astros 4

Six Houston errors provided four unearned runs for the Braves. The error total was one short of the Astros team record. Third baseman Phil Garner and shortstop Craig Reynolds made three each. Four errors fueled the Braves' three-run sixth — two wild throws by Reynolds and two fielding errors by Garner.

Consecutive home runs gave the Astros three runs in the eighth. Jerry Mumphrey drove his fourth homer for two runs and Alan Ashby followed with his third of the season. The Astros, who hit 18 home runs in the Astrodome last year, have hit 20 there so far this season. Bob Knepper, 7-4, was victimized by the miscues. The only earned runs he gave up were on a two-run triple by Rafael Ramirez.

Dodgers 3, Padres 2

Al Oliver's bases-loaded sacrifice fly with one out in the ninth scored Ken Landreaux, ending the Padres' four-game winning streak.

In Game 2-1, the Dodgers tied the game in the eighth. With two outs, Bill Russell, batting for starter Bob Welch, dropped a single into center field that scored R.J. Reynolds and denied San Diego starter Andy Hawkins his 12th victory.

Graig Nettles got the Padres off to a 1-0 lead with an opposite-field home run, his eighth, in the second inning.

Rain again slows Wimbledon play

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — For the third consecutive day, rain delayed the start of play at the Wimbledon tennis championships today.

But the weather slowly improved and officials lifted the tarpaulin covers off the outside courts.

In an all too familiar scene, a heavy drizzle fell on the All England Club, forcing spectators to take cover and holding up matches on the 15 outside courts.

Thirty minutes after the scheduled start, however, the overcast skies gave way to partial haze and action was expected to begin shortly afterwards. Play on the center court and court No. 1 was not due to get under way until later.

The first center court match paired Mats Wilander, the No. 4 seed from Sweden, against Yugoslian Slobodan Zivonjovic.

That match was to be followed by a women's battle between Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden and Barbara Potter of the United States. After that, it was back to the men's singles for a twice-postponed match between Boris Becker of West Germany and Hank Pfister.

ON COURT No. 1, Johan Kriek, the No. 9 seed, was to face Victor Pecci of Paraguay. They were to be followed by John Lloyd's match against West Germany's Wolfgang Popp, with Jimmy Connors then making his first appearance at this year's championships against Hans Simonsson of Sweden.

John McEnroe, the men's defending champion, was not due to return to the show courts until Thursday.

For the first time in seven years, McEnroe changed his pre-Wimbledon routine and adopted one that worked for Bjorn Borg.

In the past, McEnroe always played the grass court tournament at Queens Club in west London as a crucial part of his preparation for the All England championships.

He won Queens four times, but this year stayed away, preferring to practice on grass in New York in the build-up to defending his Wimbledon singles crown.

"I just thought that if Borg can win Wimbledon five years in a row without going to Queens, there's no reason why I can't," McEnroe said after posting a straight-set, first-round victory over Peter McNamara of Australia.

Officials were hoping that the appalling weather, which wrecked more than 10 hours of play during the first two days of the tournament, would improve enough to reduce the backlog of matches.

McEnroe, bidding to become the first American to win three consecutive Wimbledon singles crowns, and his fourth overall, admits he still is haunted by Borg's five-year Wimbledon winning streak.

Borg never played Queens, yet consistently reached a peak at Wimbledon. He retired from competitive tennis in 1982.

"Borg proved you do not have to play a grass tournament beforehand to win Wimbledon. He won it five years in a row and he was not even a grass court player," said McEnroe.

McNamara was playing only his fourth singles match since returning to the circuit after a two-year layoff with a knee injury.

"He still hits the ball well but doesn't move as well and when the court is as slippery as that, it makes it really tentative. It must be frustrating because of his knee problem," said McEnroe.

McEnroe denies marriage report

LONDON (AP) — Britain's racy tabloid the Sun did a swift about-face Wednesday, quoting Wimbledon tennis ace John McEnroe in its first edition as saying he's going to marry girlfriend Tatum O'Neal soon and quoting him in later editions as saying he's not.

Under a front page banner headline reading "McEnroe to wed," the Sun had him saying in its first edition: "No matter what happens, she and I have decided that we will get married shortly after Wimbledon, provided we can make all the arrangements."

In later editions this became: "The fiery champ denied reports that he will wed Tatum soon and claimed the fuss over their relationship had forced her to stay in America. John, 26, also denied that he and Tatum were even engaged."

The Sun, censured several times in the past by Britain's watchdog Press Council for fabricating stories, offered no explanation for the surprising about-face.

White called to Edmonton

From Staff Reports

The time had come for Devon White of the Midland Angels, and Tuesday, White was moved up another notch closer to the big leagues when he was optioned from the Texas League club to the AAA Edmonton Trappers of the Pacific Coast League.

To take White's spot on the roster, Midland called up infielder Greg Steen from the Redwood club in the Class A California League. Steen is primarily a second baseman, but will see action with the Angels in several infield positions. White, a switch-hitting centerfielder, was hitting an even .300 for Midland with 35 RBI and 42 stolen bases in 51 attempts.

Steen was hitting just .221 when called up by the Midland club, but he gives Midland manager Joe Madson a utility infielder he hasn't had since the release of Juan Cruz earlier in the season.

In another unrelated roster move, outfielder Tito Nanni was designated for reassignment with the intent of giving him his release. Nanni was hitting .263 for the Angels with five homers and 20 RBI. No one has been purchased to take his spot on the roster as yet.

1916 — In a game against the Chicago White Sox, the Cleveland Indians appeared on the field with numbers on their sleeves. It marked the first time that players were identified by numbers corresponding to the score card. It was thirteen years before a team wore numbers again, this time by the New York Yankees, on a permanent basis.

1962 — Earl Wilson of the Boston Red Sox pitched a no-hitter in a 2-0 victory over the Los Angeles Angels 2-0 at Fenway Park.

1970 — Frank Robinson hit two bases-loaded homers for the Baltimore Orioles as they clobbered Washington 12-2.

1976 — Shortstop Toby Harrah played an entire doubleheader for the Texas Rangers without handling a batted ball from the Chicago White Sox.

Mob found in boxing, commission discovers

NEW YORK (AP) — New Jersey's State Commission of Investigation has uncovered a "mob presence" in boxing which could result in a "massive public scandal," the commission's executive director has testified.

James J. Morley told the President's Commission on Organized Crime that several associates of organized crime figures are involved in boxing in New Jersey and the SCI "can confirm at this point that organized crime is definitely a threatening intruder in the industry."

But, Morley acknowledged on Tuesday, "We cannot prove that any particular boxer has become a mob pawn, or that any particular boxing exhibition has been mob 'fixed,' or that any particular promoter is operating primarily with funds derived from mob depredations."

"We have a well-founded suspicion that such activities have occurred but, unfortunately, no evidential proof at this point," Morley testified.

Morley, in a preliminary report on an ongoing investigation, said the SCI has discovered a "mob presence" that, if found in professional baseball or football, "would constitute a massive public scandal."

MORLEY, WHO said the SIC would elaborate on its findings in a more complete report soon, called on the federal government to help regulate boxing, in part by licensing industry personnel ranging from promoters to referees.

The government also should create a central repository of information on people involved in boxing, including fighters, managers and promoters, to allow for greater scrutiny of the sport, Morley testified.

"We at the NCAA have no hard information that there is a direct link between organized crime and drugs and gambling on the college scene," he said. But he called that "a possibility that cannot be ignored."

DAVIS SAID the NCAA may propose allowing colleges to pay some players a stipend or let them work on campus in order to ease the financial burdens that can make college athletes susceptible to bribes.

The idea of pay for college players was endorsed by Rick Kuhn, a former Eastern College basketball player who was sentenced in 1981 to 10 years in prison for his role in a point-shaving scheme.

"If you give him a salary or whatnot," Kuhn testified, "you're taking away the temptation."

VANDY

Thanks to media headlines, the University of Tennessee has become the villain where Florida is concerned, and Florida athletic director Bill Carr is worried about crowd control when the Vols come to Gainesville on Oct. 12.

However, Tennessee only followed Vanderbilt's lead. And, courtesy of Wyatt, who says he is "not after credit," not looking for ink," here is the chronology.

"It first started during a discussion about the Sugar Bowl. I was called, as was each SEC president, by (Executive Committee Secretary) Will Bailey and it was explained to me that the NCAA had charged Florida with some 100 violations (107, later reduced to 50) that put both the conference championship and the bowl game in jeopardy.

"MY RESPONSE was that they (Florida) should neither go to a bowl nor be declared conference champions. My understanding was that the presidents were to vote separately on the two questions on advice of counsel.

"I voted no to the Sugar Bowl and went about my business. I had no inkling that anyone could conceive of Florida being awarded the SEC championship under these circumstances.

"I was in New York or Washington or someplace when I read that Florida was awarded the SEC championship. I returned to Nashville later that week and began to ask my own legal people and others how this matter could be addressed. I understood I'd be polled again, and I wasn't.

"The view I got — and still have — is that the presidents of the SEC schools are the final authority for the conference, although they authorized the Executive Committee to act on their behalf in certain matters.

"About a week before the (conference) meetings, (Tennessee President) Edw. Boling called and said he supported my position, but in order for Tennessee to support it formally, he needed approval from his board of trustees. I wasn't trying to make it a media event, but this would then become a public matter.

"THERE WAS a long discussion at the meetings. It lasted a couple of hours. I was really encouraged by the vote. I understand why the other four voted the way they did but I'm really proud of the six who voted to take away Florida's title. Some of them probably had a tougher time making the decision than I did."

Wyatt isn't about to back down if Florida President Marshall Criser wants a legal battle. Criser, a lawyer, said the presidents' action was "clearly unauthorized by the constitution, by-laws and rules and regulations of the SEC."

"He is perfectly free to take it to court, then we'll find out," Wyatt said. "My lawyers say it's legal and they're perfectly willing to sit on the other side of the courtroom."

Guerrero finds paradise a short walk away

Tired of the old grind, are you? Had it up to here with the pressures of the job? Dread going to the office every day? Afraid of what will happen next?

Everyone knows what you need. A change of scenery. A new outlook on life. New companions. A fresh venue.

Usually this calls for a trip to Hawaii. A long ocean voyage. A visit to the great cities of Europe. The South Seas. At least, Palm Springs or Scottsdale or maybe flying down to Rio to bask under Sugar Loaf. Certainly, a geographical change.

So, that's what Pete Guerrero undertook.

Except, he didn't have to change climates, time zones. No change of planes. He didn't need a new wardrobe, passport, golf clubs, a matched set of luggage. He didn't even need Dramamine. In fact, he could throw it away.

Pete only had to move about 90 feet to get his new lease on life. But it was the most important hunk of real estate this side of Fifth Avenue for Pete. It was like going from Devil's Island to the Bois de Boulogne, from Hudson's Bay to Miami.

It was like lifting a 100-pound anvil from his back. Pete didn't have to go to a time-share condo where palm trees are waving and the surf is lapping. Pete just went to left field.

NOW, SOME people may not think of left field as a paradise-on-earth. It's not to be ranked with the moonrise-over-Cladah or the Greek Isles at sunset. It's not even Pismo Beach. But, to Pete, it looked like the Garden of Eden. Or one of the great tourist stopovers of the South Seas. Rodgers and Hammerstein should write a song about it.

Now, Pete's old position was not exactly like catching hot rivets in a pail or walking girders 80 stories up. But third base is not exactly the executive suite, either.

It's the baseball equivalent of answering three phones at once, of being on 24-hour call, of having dinner with the boss. At third base, you, so to speak, sleep with your clothes on. You're never more than 90 feet away from breaking your nose, losing your teeth, even cracking your skull. It's a hard-hat position.

Baseballs come out there at velocities up to 140 miles per hour and they're dipping and sliding. Even the slow ones can make you turn your ankle, pop your knee or jerk your elbow loose. It's the boiler room of baseball.

Left field, on the other hand, is a place where you can hear the birds sing, watch the grass grow. There's very little traffic, you can check out the pretty girls, enjoy the fresh air and sunshine. There are days you could bring a book.

THIRD BASE clutters up the mind. You never know when that sly sneak at the plate is going to try to make a fool of you by dropping one down the foul line at the last instant after faking hitting away. Yet, if you sneak in, cheat a step or two, you may find him hitting away after all and the ball sailing right through your prize molars.

Guerrero remembers his days at third the way Red Adair remembers oil-well fires at sea. It became a matter of pride to him to get good at it and, Pete remembers, it required hours away from the activity which he really excelled at — striking a moving baseball with a bat, not a glove.

The precious time, Pete should have been solving the slants of the batting practice pitcher, he was solving the slants of hard fungoes hit at him by Monty Basgall, the Dodger infield coach.

The record shows Pedro Guerrero became a quite skilled third baseman. And Napoleon might have made a good ribbon clerk. And Babe Ruth was a great pitcher.

But it was chipping away at the thing he really did best. Pete Guerrero is one of the great strikers of the ball in baseball, maybe in history. But the Dodgers were spending more time trying to make Pie Traynor out of him than Henry Aaron. It was like casting John Wayne as a faithful old Indian scout.

THERE'S A punch line in an old football joke that goes "If Calhoun ain't got the ball, you done made your first big mistake." Well, if Pete Guerrero ain't hitting a ball, instead of trying to learn to catch it, the team done made its big mistake.

As it occurred to Manager Tom Lasorda one day at the end of May when it occurred to him that one of the best hitters in baseball, Guerrero, was batting .268 with 4 home runs, 16 runs batted in and 18 runs scored, at a time when the team was leaving so many men on base the infield looked like a bus stop.

Lasorda called his third baseman and sent him on a short voyage to a romantic location. "I need your bat more than I need your glove," he told Guerrero. And an outfielder was born. To say nothing of a pennant drive.

"It's a funny thing," recalls Lasorda. "Last year, he was begging me to take him off third base. But, this year, he was beginning to get the hang of it, he didn't want to move, he wanted the challenge."

Fortunately, hotter heads prevailed and Guerrero was given the historic change of scenery every overworked employee should get. Characteristically, Pete insists it was not a case of burnout. "If the team wants me to go back to third, they pay me to play where they want me and that's where I'd go," he insisted stubbornly in the locker room Sunday when someone suggested it would take an act of Congress and a company of Marines to get him back to third.

BUT IN the month of June, Pedro Guerrero, outfielder, has passed the Dodger mark set by Frank Howard for most home runs in a month with 13, and Willie Mays' league record of 17 in a month is not entirely out of the question even in a short month. Mays set his in August 1965.

Guerrero is batting .297, has 16 home runs, 38 runs batted in, and 39 runs scored. He is batting .371 for the month of June.

Putting him on third base is like putting Liz Taylor in a nunnery. In fact, I'm wondering whether I should get off this hot corner and onto the society pages myself. If that's far enough, that is.

NBA discusses draft lottery revisions

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The National Basketball Association competition and rules committee has recommended several changes in the draft lottery, but none called for immediate action.

The committee, made up of coaches and general managers, is chaired by Phoenix General Manager Jerry Colangelo. It met Tuesday and made recommendations to the NBA Board of Governors, which meets today.

The committee discussed several revisions in the lottery that determines the first seven picks in the draft, Colangelo said.

However, it was suggested that NBA Commissioner David Stern appoint a committee to study the lottery before changes are made.

"We've made some hasty decisions in the past," Colangelo said. "The game is in good shape as it is. You don't have to necessitate change for change sake."

Under a proposed revision discussed at this week's meeting, the lottery would determine the first pick in the draft, then the next six picks would go in inverse order of the final standings.

Another called for the lottery to determine the first two picks in the draft, with inverse order applying thereafter.

Today, the league is expected to decide on several other items, including a proposed deal that calls for former Milwaukee Bucks owner James Fitzgerald to provide operating capital to Golden State Warriors owner Frank Mieuli.

Heston: McEnroe 'insufferable bore,' disgrace to United States

LONDON (AP) — Actor Charlton Heston has lobbed a tough volley at tennis ace John McEnroe, accusing the defending Wimbledon champ of being "an insufferable bore" and a disgrace to the United States.

Heston said Tuesday he turned down an invitation to sit in the royal box at Wimbledon this week and watch McEnroe play because "I simply do not want to sit in that box at that wonderful place and risk the embarrassment, as an American, of seeing an American disgrace our country."

"John McEnroe is a great player. He is also an insufferable bore who demeans the game that made him a millionaire. For many of us he has ruined tennis as a spectator sport," said Heston, who is in London to star in the play "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial."

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway musicals aren't what they used to be, says composer-conductor Leonard Bernstein, whose recent reprise recording of his "West Side Story" is a hit 30 years after it was written.

"With a few exceptions, notably the shows of Stephen Sondheim, Broadway has retrogressed in a lamentable way," he says in a cover story appearing this Sunday in Family Weekly.

But Bernstein, 66, says the Grammy awards recently gave him good feelings about the world of rock — "not the music, which just isn't good enough and doesn't compare with what we had in the '60s, but the rock people."

"In that recording they made for Ethiopian famine relief, you get a sense of the stars giving, trying, seeking...They gave me a whole new feeling about possibilities in the world. For them, and for me."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Jennifer O'Neill has been released from a Greenwich, Conn., hospital after undergoing treatment for uterine bleeding, her publicist says.

Miss O'Neill, 36, who starred in the canceled CBS series "Coverup" last season, checked into Greenwich Hospital on Monday for a dilation and curettage, a cleaning of the uterus walls, and was released Tuesday, said Terry Etlinger.

The actress, now resting at the home of a friend, had been "hemorrhaging from too much air travel," including trips to Mexico for "The Network Battle of the Stars" and Japan for a film festival, Ms. Etlinger said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali and his third wife, Veronica, have filed for an amicable divorce, her attorney says.

Frederick J. Glassman said Tuesday that the couple, married for eight years, filed for divorce in Los Angeles Superior Court and that all major issues had been worked out.

He said they had not separated prior to filing for the divorce and that both had been at their home in Hancock Park, an exclusive area of Los Angeles, earlier Tuesday.

Three-time heavyweight champion Ali, 43, and Veronica, 29, have two children, Hana Yasmeen, 8, and Laila, 7.

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Actor Mark Lindsay has been fired from a role as John Lennon in a TV movie of the former Beatle's life after officials learned his real name was Mark Chapman — the same as the man who killed Lennon in 1980.

Lindsay's real name surfaced after it was announced Monday that the actor, unknown in the United States, had been given the role.

NBC and Carson Productions said in a joint statement Tuesday, "We feel it is in the best interest of this project that another actor be cast as John Lennon."

Mark David Chapman is serving a life sentence for murdering Lennon.

Kim Miyori, who played Dr. Wendy Armstrong on NBC-TV's "St. Elsewhere," will continue in her role as Lennon's wife, Yoko Ono.

The network said it will resume its search for an actor to play Lennon.

HONOLULU (AP) — "Magnum, P.I." star Tom Selleck, noting what a good year he's had, says he's still "on Cloud Nine" from all his honors and that he's considering doing a western with Clint Eastwood.

"I think there's a big audience for Westerns, and they're fun to make," said Selleck, who captured an Emmy and a Golden Globe award for best dramatic actor in television and People's Choice awards for favorite male TV performer and favorite all-around male entertainer.

Of his film prospects, Selleck told the Honolulu Star-Bulletin, "I am a viable commodity in the movie industry."

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — The estate of actor John Wayne is trying to track down a mail-order firm that has been using the Duke's likeness on its belt buckles, jackknives, and other goods.

In a lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court, Wayne Enterprises of California is seeking to prevent The Old New England Mint Co. from selling goods with Wayne's likeness. It also seeks restitution and $1 million in damages.

Attorney William F. Dow III of New Haven, representing Wayne's estate, is trying to locate the company owner, Joseph W. England, to serve papers in the suit.

The company operates from a post office box in Wilton, but neither it nor England can be found, Dow said in court papers. He did not return telephone calls Tuesday from The Associated Press.

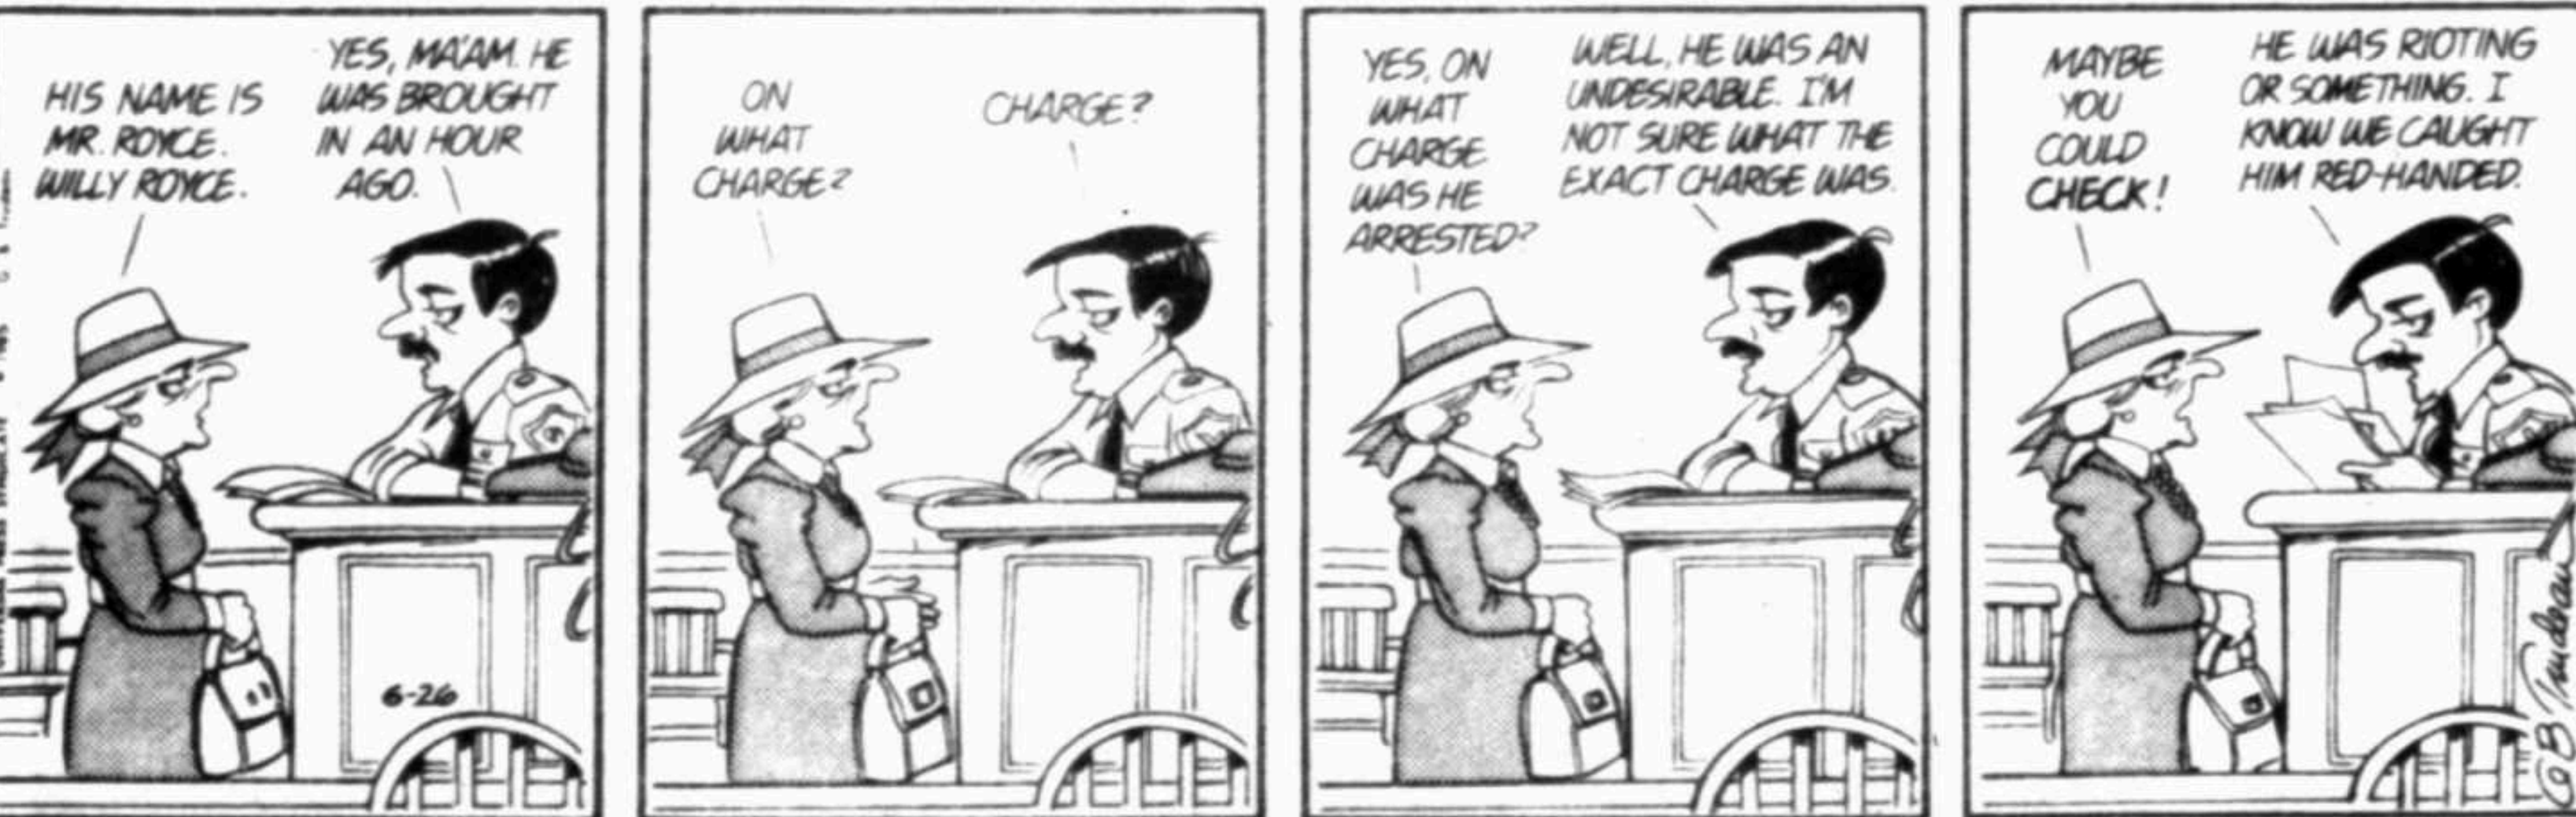

The lawsuit contends that under an agreement executed by Wayne before his death in 1979, Wayne Enterprises has exclusive commercial rights to exploit the actor's name and likeness.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — There she was, Miss America 1985, showing off that toothpaste smile from billboards across the land to see if motorists knew who she was.

In Albuquerque, N.M., and Tucson, Ariz., where the first of 300 nationwide billboards went up last winter, Miss America's name recognition went up nearly 700 percent, Jack Donahue, spokesman for the Institute of Outdoor Advertising, said Tuesday.

Give up? Miss America for 1985 is Sharlene Wells.

Dollar slides

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mostly down against major hard currencies in quiet European trading today but remained strong against the Japanese yen and jumped against the Swiss franc. Gold was generally up.

The dollar had strengthened slightly on Tuesday after Washington reported an increase in U.S. durable goods orders in May.

But a London dealer said the American currency was drifting down again because dealers were realizing that the increase in durable goods orders had a large military component.

"Given the military element of the durable goods orders which inflated them quite considerably, people have tended to ignore them. There was a bit of an over-reaction yesterday afternoon and now we're seeing the dollar drifting back to where it was," the dealer said.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 249.15 yen from Tuesday's 248.70. Later, in London, it was quoted at 249.00 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Tuesday:

- 3.0610 West German marks, down from 3.0710.
- 2.5593 Swiss francs, up from 2.5150.
- 9.3265 French francs, down from 9.3725.
- 3.4710 Dutch guilders, up from 3.4655.
- 1.951.00 Italian lire, down from 1.960.00.
- 1.3640 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3641.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.2888, compared with $1.2865 Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $315.75 an ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $316.50. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $316.50.

"It looks like another dollar-watching day for gold traders," a London dealer said of the very quiet market.

In Zurich, the bid price was $315.75, up from $315.50 late Tuesday.

In New York Tuesday, gold rose 40 cents to close at $316.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.13 an ounce, down from Tuesday's $6.15.

Rig workers' safety plan may be abolished

WASHINGTON (AP) — A safety plan designed to protect 95,000 workers in the oil and gas well drilling industry may be scrapped, mainly because of objections to its cost.

The Office of Management and Budget is pressing the Occupational Safety and Health Administration to replace the current plan with a new proposal, in effect starting the regulatory process all over again. The procedure could involve several more years of study and hearings.

For the past five years, OSHA has been trying to develop a regulation to reduce the 200 deaths and thousands of serious injuries that occur annually among drilling rig workers, who are engaged in one of the most dangerous occupations.

As of Tuesday, OSHA had made no announcement on what it intends to do. The parent Labor Department will have to decide in the next few weeks whether to challenge OMB's position.

An industry lobbying group challenged OSHA's proposal as soon as it was issued a year and a half ago and OMB now has sided with industry.

In a letter recently put in the public record and dated last Oct. 10, OMB's administrator for regulatory affairs, Douglas H. Ginsburg, told the Labor Department that "in light of the ... widespread criticism ... on this rule," OSHA should consider issuing a new proposal.

The industry objects to OSHA's proposal mainly because of its cost. OSHA says the proposed regulation would cost the industry $24 million a year. The International Association of Drilling Contractors, an industry lobbying group with a membership of 800 firms, estimates the annual cost at nearly $600 million.

OSHA chief Robert A. Rowland said Tuesday through spokesman Jack McDavitt that because of the opposition to the rule from industry, Rowland had long ago decided to "take another look at" the proposal and is still doing so.

Rowland, who is resigning effective next Monday, has been OSHA director for the past year.

Currently, some states have their own safety standards for well drilling. But the sole federal protection for workers in the oil and gas well and servicing industries is a set of general industry standards that apply to all workplaces, not just well-drilling sites.

"The death and injury experience in this industry is compelling evidence that workers are exposed to hazards which OSHA inadequately regulates through existing general industry standards," Barry White, the agency's director of safety standards, testified at a hearing on the drilling regulation.

OSHA's proposal sets out an array of protective measures for workers, including requirements for handling pipe and other drilling equipment, standards designed to reduce the number of fires and rules that require immediate cleanup of oil and other chemical spills.

Midlanders compete for TAMACC's 'Businesspersons of Year' awards

Two Midland citizens have been nominated by the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce to compete for statewide honors at the Texas Association of Mexican American Chamber of Commerce (TAMACC) convention July 20 in San Antonio.

Felipe Morales and Oralia Corrales will be among Hispanic businesspeople competing for TAMACC's Businessman and Businesswoman of the Year awards at the 10th annual convention.

Morales, an independent insurance agent, has twice won the industry's Million Dollar Round Table award. He came to Midland in the late 1950s and has been active in civic work through the Midland United Way, Meals on Wheels and as a board member of both Family Counseling Services and Senior Citizens Services. He was among the founders of Hillcrest Manor for elderly citizens and is a member of St. Ann's Catholic Church.

Ms. Corrales is owner of Corrales Insurance Agency. A native Midlander, she is a member of the Midland City Council and is also active in civic work, serving as a volunteer for Hospice of Midland, a field worker for the Human Relations Council and a director of the Lease

IBM becomes largest shareholder of MCI

WASHINGTON (AP) — A financial plan for IBM to become the largest individual shareholder of MCI Communications Corp. could create a telecommunications computer giant rivaling American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

International Business Machines Corp. earned major-league status in the growing telecommunications market on Tuesday with an agreement that would make it the biggest stockholder in MCI, which has been vigorously fighting AT&T for long distance telephone customers.

Under a complicated deal, the Washington-based MCI agreed to acquire Satellite Business Systems, a rival long-distance telephone network principally owned by IBM, in exchange for millions of MCI shares.

ARCO sells refinery, service stations

New York Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — The Atlantic Richfield Co. said Tuesday that it had agreed to sell its Philadelphia refinery and 576 service stations in Pennsylvania and New York to the Atlantic Petroleum Corp., a new company, for about $420 million.

The sale, part of Arco's restructuring plan announced April 29, furthers the company's withdrawal from its refining and marketing operations in the Northeast. Last week, Arco agreed to sell more than 400 service stations in eight states and the District of Columbia to the Shell Oil Co. for an undisclosed price.

The Atlantic Petroleum sale includes the refinery and piers in Fort Mifflin, Pa., and the retail and distribution network of the 576 stations, 27 terminals and a pipeline system in Pennsylvania and New York, Albert Greenstein, an Arco spokesman, said.

About 400 of the stations to be bought by Atlantic Petroleum are in Pennsylvania, and only about a third are controlled by Arco, Greenstein said. The rest are owned by lessee dealers. About 400 other independently owned Arco stations were not included in the sale, and have until November to find other suppliers.

Texas Commerce investigated for misrepresentation

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Texas Commerce Bancshares Inc. disclosed Tuesday that it was the subject of a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation into whether it misrepresented its financial health to investors between 1981 and 1984.

It also said that the office of the Comptroller of the Currency was challenging the loan-loss reserves it took in the fourth quarter of 1984, saying they should have been increased by $28.2 million.

The Houston-based bank, the fourth largest in Texas, said that the SEC was looking into whether the bank's loan-loss reserve procedures and its purported practices of artificially inflating deposits at the end of each quarter had materially misled investors.

The company reported the comptroller's contention in a routine 8-K filing with the SEC Tuesday. It had disclosed similar information in a June 19 shelf-registration filing for the offering of debt securities.

John H. Sturc, associate director of enforcement at the SEC, would neither confirm nor deny that an investigation was occurring. A spokesman for the comptroller's office would not comment.

According to bank officials, the SEC investigation of Texas Commerce springs out of the comptroller of the currency's censure last August of six large banks for accounting abuses that purportedly bolstered their financial statements, including one practice called window dressing.

Banks use window dressing to inflate their deposits and to make their liquidity positions seem stronger than they really are. A bank will arrange for a number of its largest corporate clients to place large cash reserves in their bank accounts for less than a day at the end of each quarter. By inflating the deposits, the banks achieve a higher ranking on the list of the biggest banks and that supposedly helps attract business.

The six banks, including Texas Commerce and two other Houston banks, signed a consent agreement in August, neither admitting nor denying guilt but agreeing not to engage in the questioned accounting practices in the future.

"It was instructive after the consent order," said James L. Cochrane, chief economist for Texas Commerce. "We suddenly became the largest bank in Houston," implying that the other banks were engaged in more window dressing than Texas Commerce.

In its filings, the bank told the SEC that the alleged window dressing "had no material effect on the consolidated earnings or financial position of Texas Commerce at any time." Moreover, it said that the bank and "its independent accountants believe that its allowance for possible credit losses was adequate for the periods under investigation."

Cochrane added that "an investigation by the SEC should have been expected after the action taken by the comptroller last year." Regulatory agencies frequently exchange information on investigations.

The comptroller's office referred the matter with Texas Commerce to the SEC, the bank said. And subsequently the SEC began a formal investigation.

Cochrane said that the bank had received no indication from the SEC of whether it intended to bring an enforcement action.

The comptroller's office is contesting the treatment of provisions for energy loan losses by the holding company's Houston bank and three smaller banks taken in the first quarter of 1985. The comptroller contends that the $28.2 million provision should have been applied to the bank's fourth-quarter 1984 charges, which totaled $30.4 million.

Cactus moves to Midland

Dallas based Cactus Drilling Company and Cactus International, Inc. moved their head office to Midland June 24. The move represents the consolidation of two land drilling entities (Cactus Drilling Company and Cactus Drilling Corporation) and a concentration on the Permian Basin market.

Cactus Drilling Company will maintain their Midland operations office and yard on West Highway 80. Executive, financial, and sales offices will be situated in Midland at 731 W. Wadley.

Cactus International, Inc., the offshore drilling entity, continues to operate out of Morgan City, Louisiana.

As part of the original AT&T breakup settlement with the Justice Department, the telephone company was permitted to go into the computer manufacturing business. IBM is the nation's largest computer maker.

The merger of MCI and SBS could indirectly increase competition between IBM and AT&T in the communications industry.

IBM Vice Chairman Paul Rizzo said at a news conference that he "finds it difficult to believe the merger will strike at the heart of AT&T." On the other hand, IBM and AT&T will continue to be competitors.

MCI chairman William G. McGowan said that in exchange for SBS assets and operations, MCI would issue to IBM 45 million shares of MCI common stock, and warrants for the purchase of an additional 7 million shares of MCI common stock at $15 per share.

IBM has agreed to hold the shares for a minimum of three years.

IBM currently owns 60 percent of Satellite Business Systems. Aetna Life & Casualty Co., which owns the other 40 percent, also agreed to sell its share of SBS in the transaction with MCI.

SBS, based in Tyson's Corner, Va., has struggled since starting operations in 1981 in the increasingly competitive long-distance market, which an AT&T spokesman says now consists of about 400 companies.

SBS originally was founded by IBM, Aetna and Communications Satellite Corp., or Comsat. But last summer Comsat sold its stake to IBM.

Aetna Chairman James T. Lynn said in a statement that "while the transaction will produce a one-time capital loss to Aetna in the second quarter, it is consistent with our strategy to refocus resources on our basic insurance and financial services businesses." Aetna declined to give a specific loss figure.

MCI currently has about 237.3 million common shares outstanding. Assuming conversion of the warrants, IBM would hold a 22 percent interest in MCI.

The agreement also calls for unspecified future cash investments by IBM in MCI securities, but IBM said it would not increase its MCI stake above 30 percent without MCI's approval.

After the IBM deal is completed, McGowan said he would be the second largest shareholder of MCI, with 5.5 million shares. He said institutional investors hold 45 percent of MCI stock.

IBM's Rizzo said the company has reached an agreement with Aetna to take over outstanding debt for the SBS business. He said the debt eventually could be $400 million.

McGowan told the news conference that the acquisition of SBS "would significantly improve MCI's revenues and capital structure and would add over 200,000 customers to the more than 2.5 million business and residential subscribers now served by MCI."

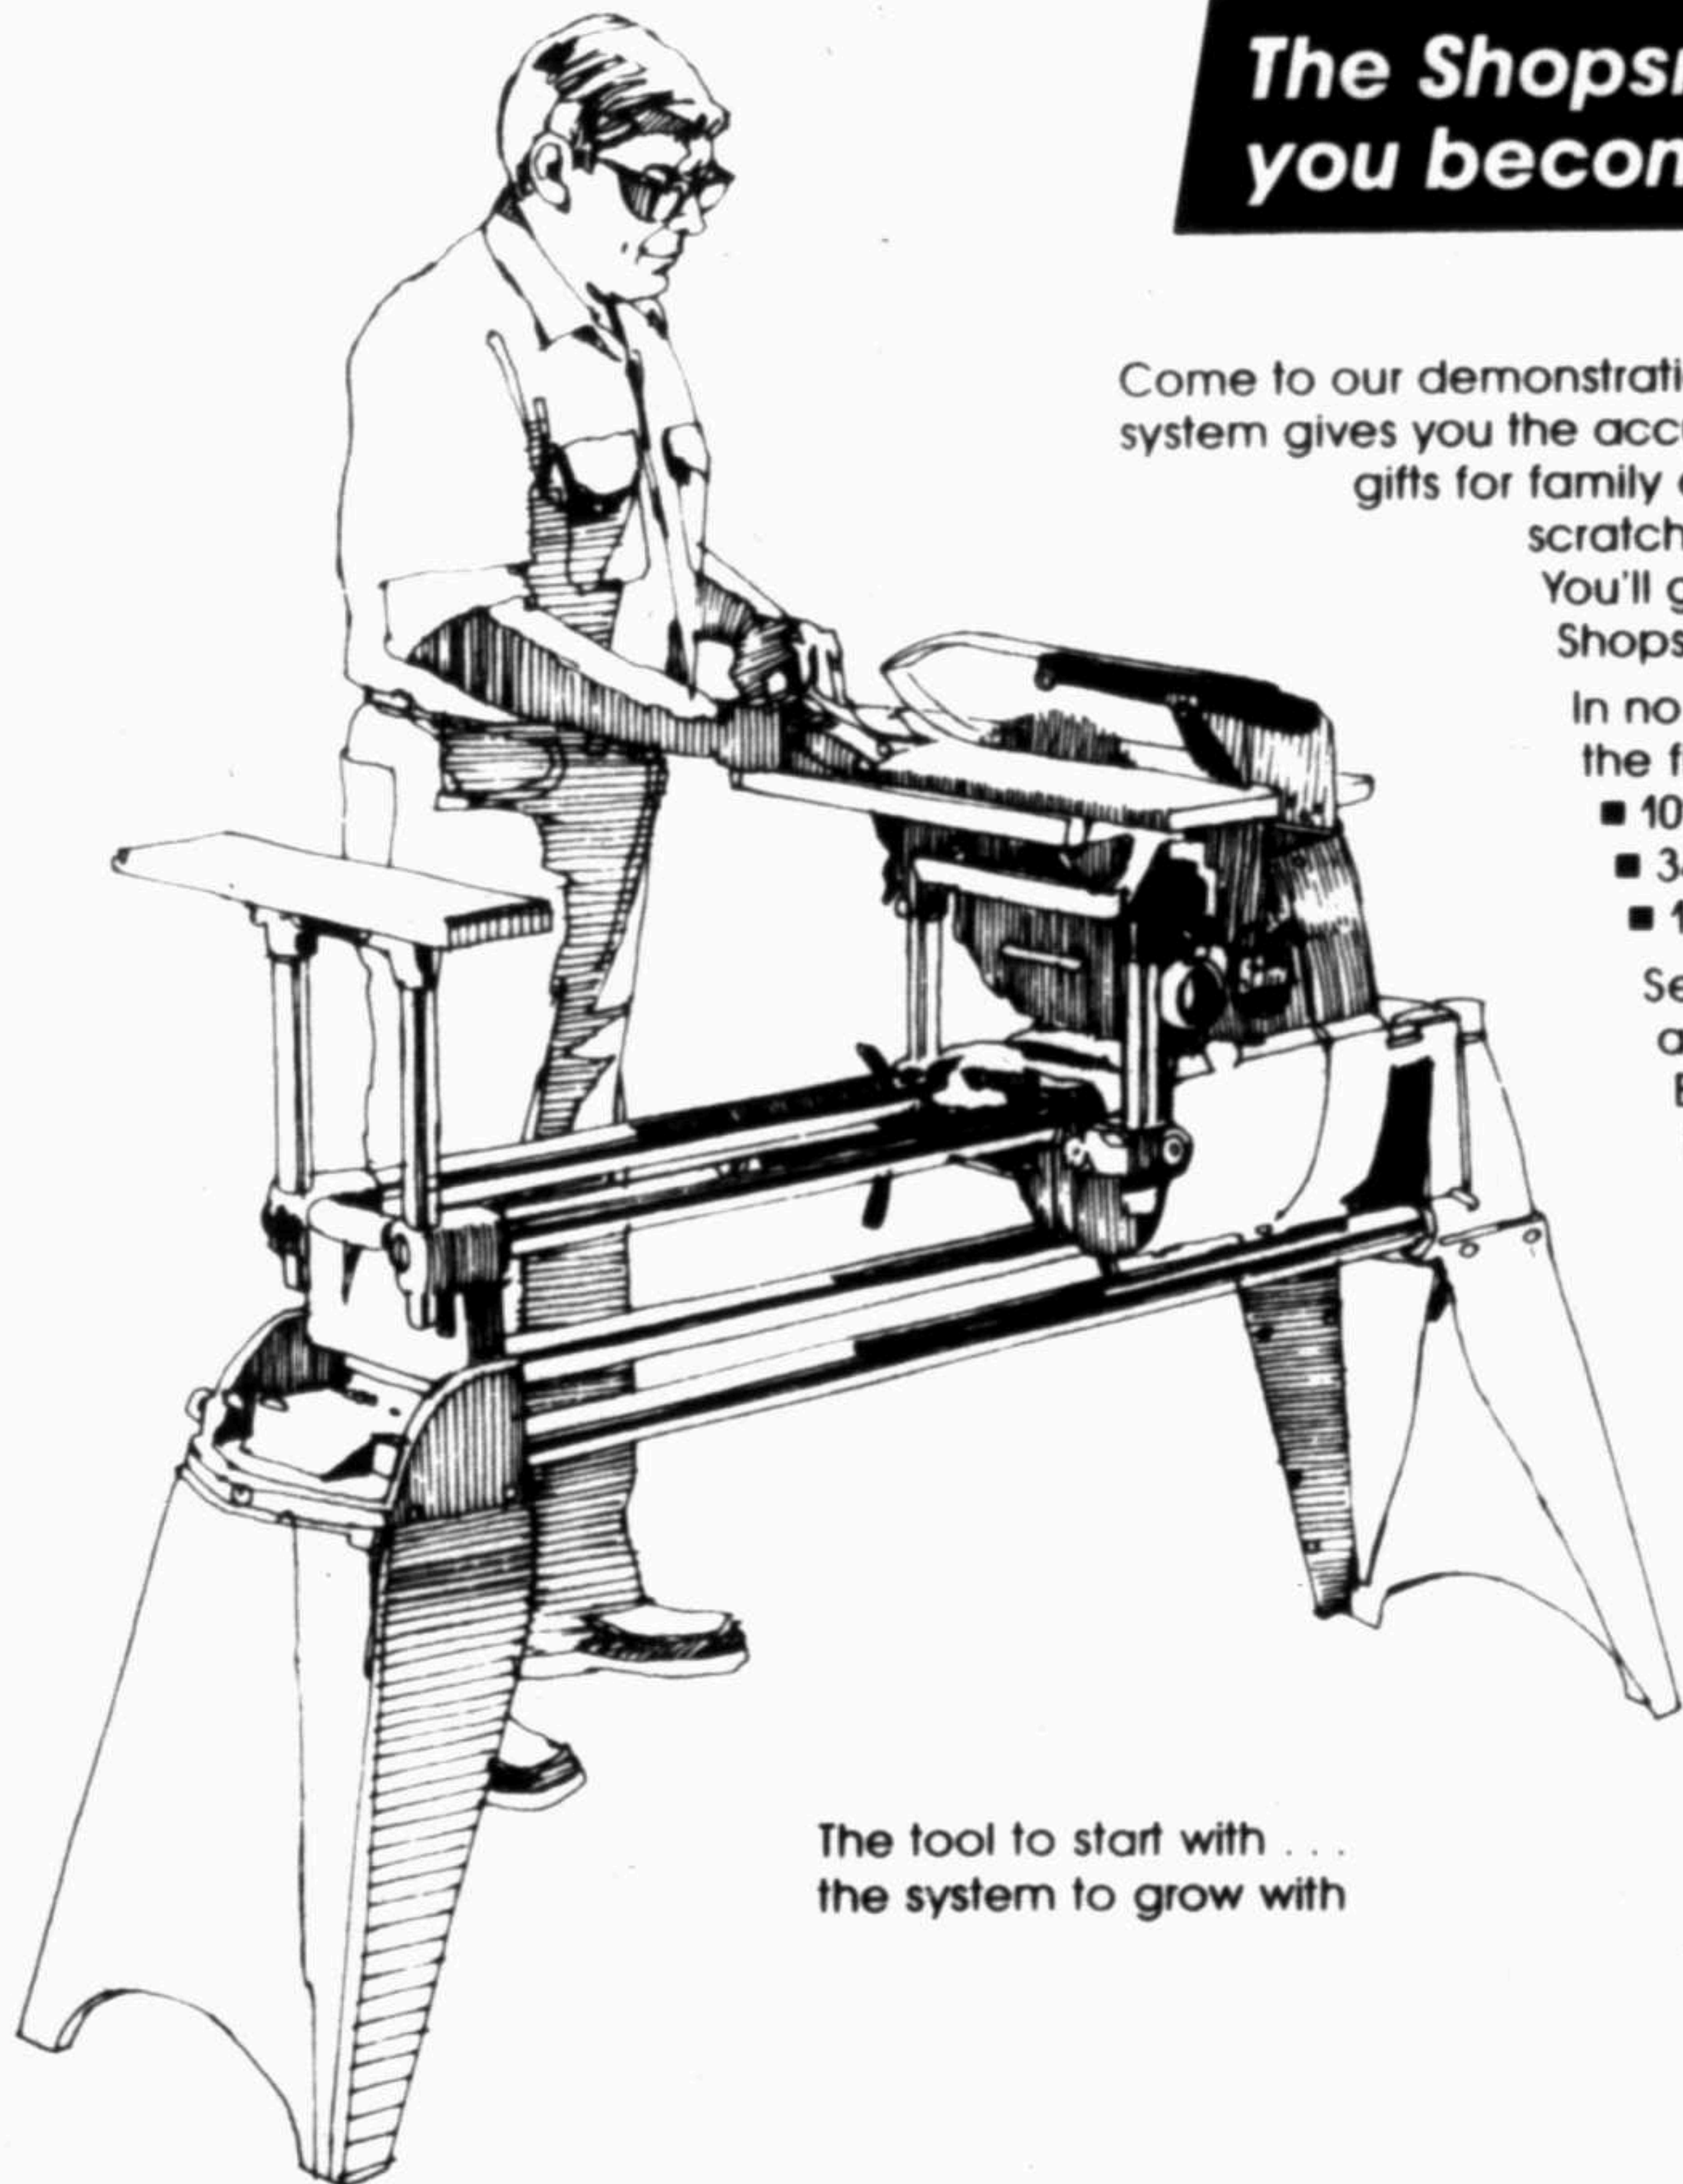

Directors of IBM and MCI have approved the transaction, but the deal also is subject to approval by the Federal Communications Commission.

AT&T chairman Randall L. Tobias quickly attempted to use the MCI-IBM action to call attention to its regulatory problems.

"IBM... the country's largest computer maker and already a presence in the telephone equipment business has now staked out a very big role in the long distance telephone business," said Tobias in a statement.

Keogh's smart for self-employed

Q. I have a company pension plan at work. I also have an individual retirement account, into which I put $2,000 a year from my salary. Apart from the above, I do some consulting on a part-time basis.

A. You can set up a Keogh plan, if your consulting work is self-employment. Anyone who is self-employed is eligible for a Keogh plan. This applies even when you are covered by your employer's pension plan and/or have an IRA.

Many people who have regular jobs and who have self-employed sidelines overlook this opportunity. They shouldn't, providing they can afford to tuck away part of their self-employed income in the dandy tax deferral of a Keogh retirement plan.

As the rules now stand, you can put up to 20 percent of your net self-employed income — but no more than $30,000 — into your Keogh plan each year.

Each year.

As with an IRA, you don't pay federal income tax on the money you put into a Keogh plan. Also, that money and the money it earns in interest, dividends and/or growth in value, remains tax-sheltered until you withdraw it.

Now, the bad news for your particular situation. You missed the boat by not setting up a Keogh plan for the previous years in which you had self-employed consultant income.

You must establish your Keogh plan by Dec. 31 of the year for which you make your first contribution. Then, each year, you must make your total contribution no later than the date you file your income tax return — April 15, for most people. Boiled down, this means you can start your Keogh plan this year and make your 1985 contribution into it. But you can't put any money into the plan for those prior years.

Q. I know it is possible to fund an individual retirement account for the previous year by putting money into it by the time I file my income tax return and deduct that contribution from the previous year's taxable income. But is it possible to fund a future year's IRA and get a deduction on the current year's taxable income?

For example, since I have already contributed $2,000 to my IRA for 1985, can I contribute $2,000 for 1986 and deduct $4,000 from my taxable income on my 1985 return?

A. Nope. You're not allowed to take an IRA contribution as an "adjustment to income" of any more than the maximum allowed for each year. You can't add IRA contributions for future years or previous years to the deduction you take on any year's return.

That maximum annual contribution now is $2,000 for one person's IRA. It's $2,250 for a spousal IRA, when only one spouse is employed.

Q. I am 63. My wife is 62. We are both employed. In recent years, paying off several debts has required all of our available income. Now that the debts are about to be retired, we will have the luxury of considering an individual retirement account.

Is an IRA applicable for people our age?
A. Absolutely. It would have been better if you had been able to go the IRA route sooner because you would have built up larger retirement nest eggs. But it's certainly not too late for that.

Because you're both employed, each of you can have an IRA, into which each can contribute $2,000 annually. That will reduce your family's taxable income by $4,000 a year — lowering your income tax bill.

As long as you're employed and earning income, that can be a mighty big plus. For many people, sheltering current income from taxes is just as important a factor as building up a fund for retirement years.

Even if you both retire at 65, by taking full advantage of IRAs, you'll have put away $10,000. Add to that the money your IRAs earn and you'll have accumulated a reasonable tax-sheltered bundle. If you continue working past that age, you'll have even more.

As long as you can afford to put money into IRAs, the natural advice is that currently popular expression: "Go for it!"

A-Asked

employed. In recent years, paying off several debts has required all of our available income. Now that the debts are about to be retired, we will have the luxury of considering an individual retirement account.

Is an IRA applicable for people our age?

A. Absolutely. It would have been better if you had been able to go the IRA route sooner because you would have built up larger retirement nest eggs. But it's certainly not too late for you to start IRAs.

Because you're both employed, each of you can have an IRA, into which each can contribute $2,000 annually. That will reduce your family's taxable income by $4,000 a year — lowering your income tax bill.

As long as you're employed and earning income, that can be a mighty big plus. For many people, sheltering current income from taxes is just as important a factor as building up a fund for retirement years.

Even if you both retire at 65, by taking full advantage of the IRAs, you'll have put away $10,000. Add to that the money you'll earn and you'll have accumulated a reasonable tax-sheltered bundle. If you continue working past that age, you'll have even more.

As long as can afford to put money into IRAs, the natural advice is that currently popular expression: "Go for it!"

Harry Rosenfeld had the creative ideas that have made Hearst's Albany newspapers 'must reading' in New York's state capital.

Pat Paquette's creative ideas at The Hearst Magazines Division started 53 years ago and haven't stopped yet.

To build a great company, you need good creative ideas. Ideas that come from not just a few of our people, but from all of them.

At The Hearst Corporation, we like to think of all our 13,000 people as creative people.

People whose creative ideas have helped us more than triple our size in the past ten years and have made us one of the largest and, we think, one of the best communications companies in the world.

Harry Rosenfeld's creative ideas have produced news coverage that has made the Albany Times-Union and the Knickerbocker News two of the most respected newspapers in the State of New York. Whether it's a story about the aging suburbs, or patients' rights in hospitals, Hearst's Albany newspapers are among the best examples of contemporary journalism.

Pat Paquette joined Hearst in 1932 and for more than 50 years has been coming up with creative ideas to improve record-keeping and formalize our historical magazine backlog. What's more, he's a "walking encyclopedia" of the people who have built our company during the last half century.

We at Hearst know that as long as our people keep contributing their creative ideas, the best is still yet to come.

The Hearst Corporation

Summertime Fun

Eating outdoors is one of the perennial joys of summer. It is this time of the year when neighborhood gatherings, block parties and family get-togethers highlight the season.

Entertaining outdoors can be simple and yet great fun! Set the stage for your festivities by offering your friends a chilled glass of Lemonade Refresher — the perfect quencher in getting your barbecue gathering off to a summertime start.

Impress the group with a grill filled with some all-time favorites — barbecued chicken, hamburgers, sausages and ribs. Add a new taste experience by marinating the meats in the zesty, pungent Best BBQ Sauce ahead of time. Then, while the meats are grilling, brush with the sauce to bring out the delicious, savory flavor that makes outdoor cooking so enjoyable.

Complement the festivities with the Super Summer Salad, a colorful and unusual array of refreshing ingredients, such as bananas, fresh spinach, green leaf lettuce, Swiss cheese and seedless grapes. Add your favorite sweet and spicy French or slaw dressing jazzed up with poppy seeds and the result is a sure palate pleaser.

For an added delight have plenty of snacks on hand such as the colorfully tasty and chewy Peanuttty Puff Bars, filled with popped corn, puffed rice, creamy peanut butter and your choice of "M&M's" Peanut Chocolate Candies or "M&M's" Plain Chocolate Candies. Another terrific snack treat is the irresistible, moist and nutritional Banana Bonanza Bar. The colorful chocolate candies combined with oats and bananas give these bars a golden, festive look that is perfect for any occasion.

Add a bit of nostalgia and bring out the Pull Apart S'mores, a new twist that combines old-time favorites all in one pan ... graham crackers, peanut butter and marshmallows with those crunchy multi-colored chocolate candies, a sure winner with kids.

Easy to make, these totable, snacklike treats are ideal for anytime get-togethers, whether it is a backyard barbecue, a family outing in the country, or just a plain picnic in the park.

Best BBQ Sauce

|---|------------------------------------|
| 1 cup chopped onion | 1 cup chopped fresh parsley |
| 2 tablespoons vegetable oil | 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce |
| 1 jar (12-oz.) chili sauce | |
| 1 jar (12-oz.) peach or apricot preserves | 1/2 teaspoon celery seed |
| 1 cup catsup | 3/4 teaspoon cinnamon |
| | 1/4 teaspoon pepper |

Saute onion in oil in 3-qt. saucepan until tender. Add remaining ingredients; mix well. Bring mixture to a boil. Reduce heat; simmer until thickened, about 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Makes about 1 qt. sauce. (Recipe may be doubled.)

Super Summer Salad

- | | |
|--|---|
| 2 cups thickly sliced bananas or peaches | 3 cups red or green seedless grapes |
| 2 tablespoons orange juice | 1 tablespoon poppy seeds |
| 6 cups torn fresh spinach | 1/2 cup bottled sweet & spicy French or slaw dressing |
| 6 cups torn green leaf lettuce | |
| 1 cup shredded Swiss cheese | |

Toss bananas and orange juice together in a large salad bowl; add spinach, lettuce, grapes, cheese and toss well. Stir together the dressing and poppy seeds; pour over the salad and toss well. Serve immediately. Makes about 10 servings.

Peanuttty Puff Bars

- | | |
|---|------------------------------|
| 4 cups popped corn | 1 cup sugar |
| 3 cups puffed rice cereal or 3-1/2 cups puffed wheat cereal | 1 cup light corn syrup |
| 2 cups "M&M's" Peanut Chocolate Candies | 3/4 cup creamy peanut butter |
| | 1/4 cup margarine |

Combine popped corn, cereal and candies in large, lightly greased mixing bowl; reserve. Melt together sugar, syrup, peanut butter and margarine in 3-qt. saucepan over low heat, stirring occasionally until smooth. Bring to a boil over medium heat, and boil 2 minutes, stirring constantly (mixture scorches easily). Immediately pour over popped corn mixture, mixing and tossing until thoroughly coated. Quickly spoon and lightly press the mixture into a greased 15-1/2 x 10-1/2-inch jelly roll pan. Cool about 1 hour. Cut into bars to serve. Makes one 15-1/2 x 10-1/2-inch pan of bars.

Banana Bonanza Bars

- | | |
|--|---|
| 3/4 cup butter or margarine, softened | 1-1/2 cups flour |
| 1-1/4 cups firmly packed light brown sugar | 1/2 teaspoon baking soda |
| 1 egg | 1/4 teaspoon salt |
| 1 large ripe banana, mashed | 2 cups quick oats, uncooked |
| 1/2 teaspoon lemon juice | 1 cup "M&M's" Plain Chocolate Candies, chopped or whole |

Beat together butter and sugar until light and fluffy; blend in egg, banana and lemon juice. Add combined flour, soda and salt; mix until thoroughly blended. Stir in oats and 1/2 cup candies. Spread into greased 15-1/2 x 10-1/2-inch jelly roll pan. Sprinkle top with remaining 1/2 cup candies. Bake at 350°F. for 25 to 30 minutes or until golden brown. Cool thoroughly; cut into bars. Makes one 15-1/2 x 10-1/2-inch pan of bar cookies.

Pull Apart S'mores

|---|--|
| Peanut Butter | 4 cups mini-marshmallows |
| 12 graham crackers, broken into squares | 1-1/3 cups "M&M's" Plain Chocolate Candies |

Preheat the broiler. Spread peanut butter lightly over each graham cracker; arrange the crackers in rows in a 15-1/2 x 10-1/2-inch jelly roll pan. Sprinkle the marshmallows and then the candies over all. Place the pan 6 inches below the broiler and cook until the marshmallows are lightly browned and softened, 1 to 3 minutes. Lightly press the candies into the melted marshmallows. Serve immediately. Makes 12 large S'mores.

Lemonade Refresher

- | | |
|--|---|
| 6 cups cold water | Lemon, lime, orange or strawberry slices |
| 1 cup prepared orange juice | 2 bottles (10 oz. ea.) club soda, chilled |
| 1 cup lemonade flavor drink mix powder | |

Combine water, juice and drink mix in large pitcher, stirring to dissolve drink mix. Add fruit slices. Chill until ready to serve. Immediately before serving, add soda; mix well. Pour into tall ice-filled glasses. Makes about 2-1/2 qts. or 10 8-ounce servings.

Fried ice cream is 'impossible' new restaurant dessert sensation

By BARBARA HANSEN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The name alone is intriguing. How could you possibly submerge in intensely hot oil something that will melt at anything short of freezing temperature? Nevertheless, ingenious cooks have worked out a solution, and fried ice cream has become a popular restaurant dessert.

An analysis of several recipes reveals the keys to success. First, the ice cream must be insulated from the hot oil by some type of coating that encloses it completely. Second, the ice cream and its coating must be frozen as hard as a rock. Third, the frying time must be brief, just enough to crisp the coating. And fourth, the ice cream must be served immediately.

The actual frying may take only 30 seconds, but fried ice cream is far from a last-minute dessert. The preparation may require more than one freezing, and to freeze the ice cream solid takes several hours. With advance planning, however, it is quite feasible to whip out one of these intriguing desserts for a party.

CALIFORNIA BEACH ICE CREAM TEMPURA

1 (1-pound) frozen poundcake, thawed
Green tea, vanilla or other flavor ice cream
Tempura batter
Oil for deep-frying
Apples

Cut frozen cake into slices a little less than 1/4-inch thick. Arrange two slices side by side and place 2 1/2-inch scoop ice cream in center. Place another cake slice on top. Fold cake slices around ice cream to cover completely, forming ball. Wrap in foil. Freeze until hard, several hours or overnight.

Prepare Tempura Batter. Cut 1-inch-thick orange slices. Cut out center fruit, leaving ring of peel to form support for fried ice cream. Heat oil to 400 degrees. One by one, place ice cream balls in Tempura Batter, turning to coat completely. Smoothly slide into hot oil. Fry 30 seconds, turning with long chopsticks. Remove at once and drain. Coating should be crisp but pale. Ice cream ball should feel crisp and firm when squeezed very lightly. If soft, it is overdone and will be runny.

Place ice cream ball in orange ring, insert miniature paper parasol in top, if desired. Garnish with orange and apple slices. Makes about 8 servings.

Tempura batter:
1 egg
1 cup water
1 cup flour

Beat egg, then add water and flour and beat until smooth. Makes about 1 cup batter.

EL TORITO'S
DEEP-FRIED ICE CREAM
20 ounces chocolate chip ice cream
2 cups 4-grain flake cereal, crushed
1 1/4 tablespoons sugar
3 1/4 teaspoons ground cinnamon
2 eggs
1 teaspoon water
4 (8-inch) flour tortillas
Oil for deep-frying
Cinnamon-sugar
Whipped cream
4 maraschino cherries

Form ice cream into four balls. Place in baking pan and freeze solid, two hours or longer. Mix cereal, sugar and cinnamon. Divide equally between two pie plates or other shallow containers. Beat eggs with water. Roll each ice cream ball in cereal mixture and press coating into ice cream. Dip coated ball in egg wash, then roll in second container of cereal mixture. Again, press coating into ice cream. Freeze coated ice cream balls solid, 4 to 6 hours.

To make each hourglass-shaped tortilla container, cut off curved slice from 2 opposite sides of each tortilla. Remaining tortilla will be fan-shaped at each end with narrow "waist." One end will serve as base for ice cream. Other end will be decorative fan.

Heat oil. Place tortilla between 2 ladles or large spoons of different sizes (smaller ladle on top). Place tortilla so that base end is cupped in larger ladle to form basket, with back of upper fan supported by handle of larger ladle. Deep-fry until crisp. Drain and sprinkle with cinnamon-sugar.

Deep-fry frozen coated ice cream balls 30 to 45 seconds. Place each fried tortilla in large-stemmed glass with fan part of tortilla standing vertically above glass. Set fried ice cream ball in base of tortilla. Top with dollop of whipped cream and decorate with cherry. Makes 4 servings.

WALDORF FRIED ICE CREAM II (Cookbook Version)

Grand Marnier liqueur
8 crepes
1 egg
1 tablespoon water
1 cup flaked coconut
Oil for deep-frying

Form eight balls of ice cream about 2 inches in diameter. Dip hands in ice water and smooth ice cream to make as even as possible. Make small hole about 1/4-inch deep in center of each ball. Place ice cream balls, not touching, on flat tray. Freeze until solid. Remove from freezer and fill holes 3/4-full with Grand Marnier. Cover holes with a little soft ice cream and smooth evenly. Freeze solid again.

Prepare crepes and cool thoroughly before using. Beat egg with water. Rub edges of each cooled crepe with egg wash. Place ice cream ball in center. Fold crepe around ice cream, enclosing it completely. Place seam side down on tray. When all are prepared, freeze solid, several hours or overnight. Reserve egg wash. Roll frozen filled crepes in egg wash, then in coconut. Return to freezer and freeze solid.

Just before serving, heat oil for deep-frying to 350-F. Fry each crepe 30 seconds, until browned. Serve at once. Makes 8 servings.

Crepes: 6 tablespoons flour
1 egg yolk
1 egg
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon sugar
1 cup milk
Oil

Combine flour, egg yolk, whole egg, salt and sugar. Blend until smooth. Add milk, beat well and strain through fine sieve. Let stand one hour before making crepes.

Heat 5- to 6-inch crepe pan. Grease lightly with oil. Pour in about 2 tablespoons batter. Quickly rotate pan so batter spreads evenly over bottom. Cook over medium heat until underside is lightly browned and top is firm. Turn and cook second side until brown flecks appear. Remove crepe and cool. Makes about 16 (5-inch) crepes. Set aside eight for wrapping ice cream. Stack remainder with wax paper between each, wrap in foil and refrigerate or freeze.

WALDORF-ASTORIA FRIED ICE CREAM II (Traditional Hotel Version)

1/2 gallon ice cream, any flavor
4 egg yolks
1 teaspoon water
8 crepes
1 to 1 1/2 cups flaked coconut
Apricot-Brandy sauce

Form ice cream into eight balls, 2 1/2-inches in diameter. Freeze until solid. Beat egg yolks with water. Coat one side of each crepe well with egg yolk mixture. Place ice cream in center of coated side and bring sides up to cover ice cream tightly, securing all edges well.

Heavily coat outside of crepe balls with egg mixture and roll in coconut. Place on tray or in baking pan, cover and freeze solid. Heat oil for deep-frying to 375 degrees. Fry ice cream balls 1 minute or until golden brown. Serve at once with warm Apricot Brandy Sauce. Makes 8 servings.

Note: Mango ice cream is recommended based on a test in The Times' Test Kitchen.

Apricot-Brandy Sauce:

1 1/2 cups apricot jam
1 tablespoon lemon juice
3 tablespoons brandy or rum

Place jam and lemon juice in saucepan. Cook over low heat until jam is melted. Strain. Add brandy and serve at once. Makes about 1 1/2 cups.

Restaurateur is also hunter, conservationist

Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — As a hunter, conservationist and restaurateur, John Bruno successfully balances his three interests with a clear conscience. The owner of Manhattan's decidedly un-Yuppy Pen and Pencil Restaurant, Bruno serves up caribou, venison, bear and shark and simultaneously is actively involved in a dozen wildlife conservation organizations, including the Explorers Club, the Sierra Club and the Arctic Institute of America.

"I believe you can hunt in an intelligent, sacred, gentlemanly fashion if you don't violate the natural law," Bruno says. "God gave man dominion over the animals. Only in the last several hundred years have we had animal husbandry. In 1850, it was cheaper to shoot a buffalo than raise a steer."

Bruno says the Marketing Hunting Act of 1902 — still in existence today — changed this.

"The act, principally for the conservation of waterfowl, essentially said, 'You can't shoot it and then sell it.' If you've raised it, you can kill it and sell it, which is why pheasants, quail, ducks and grouse are available in meat markets today."

Further, Bruno isn't sure you'd really want to eat wild fowl.

"There's a tremendous difference in taste between wild and domesticated fowl. It's far more muscular, and the metabolism is different. If you shoot a mallard duck living inland, it'll taste great. If it lives near the sea, eating aquatic vegetation, it'll taste fishy. Because of this, those ducks living near the sea are doing fine today, except for contamination spills and land development."

ONE OF BRUNO'S interests is Ducks Unlimited, which he calls the "finest example of good game conservation," involving the American and Canadian governments and to a lesser degree the government of Mexico. The group is buying land in Saskatchewan to put in trust "so ducks can have a place to go, and nets will be placed in the streams to deter animals who eat their eggs."

Bruno says a serious hunter won't shoot an endangered species, and cites as an example the antelope, which has been brought back from near-extinction. And for those who shudder at the thought of eating venison after having been brought up on a diet of "Bambi," Bruno says there are far more deer in the country than when the nation's settlers first arrived.

"Because they need secondary growth and man-planted crops to eat, deer need cleared land," Bruno says. "That's why the number of deer is up 50 percent since the first settlers."

Bruno says the nation's dining trend is toward lightness and health awareness.

"We eat a lot more than we should, compared to other people," he says. "It's a quandary. We've tried serving smaller steaks, but people won't buy them. The steak house today is locked in with its image." But he says that women who order lighter dishes have been at the vanguard of the light food trend, and that today it equals the heavier fare in sales.

"We sell a phenomenal amount of salads and fruits," he says. "Seafood comprises 60 percent to 70 percent of our lunch business. Fish that used to be called 'junk' fish — halibut, tile fish — is extremely popular. With sea scallops, 15 years ago the smallest were considered the best; today, it's the biggest available. And the prices have kept pace — up 200 percent to 300 percent."

Further, he says that alcohol sales are in a nose-dive.

"Liquor is down a good 25 percent over the last two years. People now are drinking white wine, sodas, fruit juices and Perrier — France's greatest racket." We haven't bought a whiskey sour glass or cocktail glass in a year.

FOR LUNCH, Bruno sees a trend away from red meat.

"There's a shift to fish and white meat, particularly veal," he says. "Veal lends itself to a small portion."

And dessert?

"It's disappearing," he says, "although anything chocolate is still okay. Fruit seems to be a suitable substitute, although this has been a particularly lousy year for melons."

Bruno is bemused by the nation's preoccupation with caffeine.

"The trend is toward decaffeinated coffee, but we also sell a lot of iced tea in season," he says. "Apparently people don't know it's loaded with caffeine."

Mutton is a Pen and Pencil specialty, and the recipe below confirms that it does not have to be tough. When prepared, the meat looks different from lamb; it's a larger chop and more uniform in color, but the difference in taste is not noticeable. Bruno says that mutton today comes from an animal that is only a year old.

MUTTON CHOPS

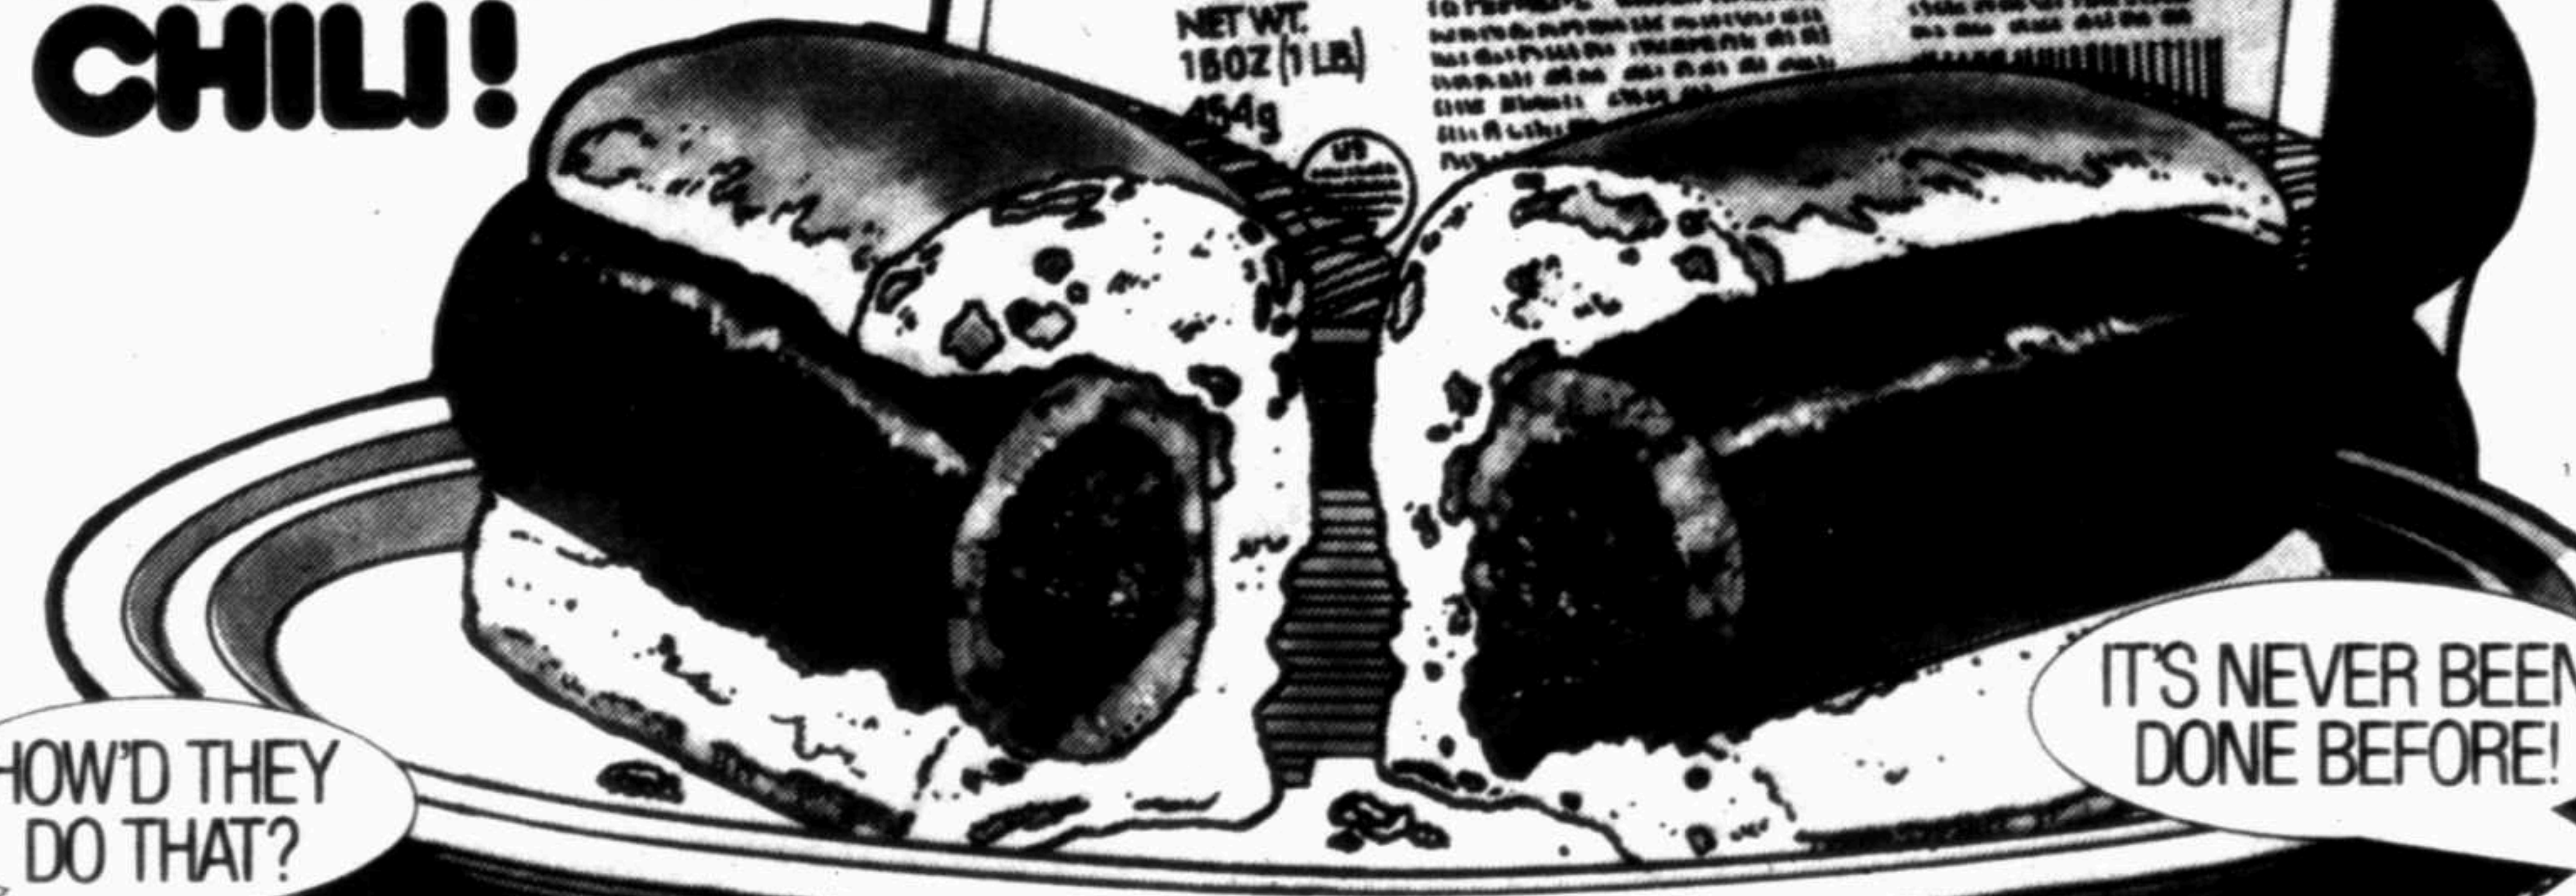

(Serves two)
Order a rack of mutton ahead of time from your butcher; it should have white, hard fat, a "pleasing" confirmation, and the bones should have visible blood content in the marrow. The rack will have 12 bones, six on each side. Age it for one week in the coldest part of the refrigerator.

Split each six-bone segment into two three-bone chops. Broil under or over intense heat for approximately 8 minutes on each side, or until done.

While the chops are broiling, mince one shallot very fine and saute it in butter until clear. Add two sprigs of chopped fresh mint and saute for another 30 seconds. Pour over the chops and serve.

Recipes bring 'Great Expectations'

Washington Post News Service

Shrewish heroines have been subdued with the offer of teasakes or mustard sauce on beef, sated lovers have renewed their passion over deviled chicken and fictional families in trouble have held together with a pan of freshly made biscuits or a well roasted goose, writes editor and author Linda Wolfe in her foreword to "The Literary Gourmet: Menus From Masterpieces."

In the recently released paperback edition of this clever collection of literary meals, Wolfe presents excerpts from more than 25 great works, following them with recipes from historical cooks and cookbooks of the authors' own times.

Food has been used by writers to demonstrate their characters' personalities, and so the book includes representations such as Tolstoy's Levin, "who ascetically longs for Russian cabbage soup," although he can have the finest French luxuries, and Thomas Wolfe's Eugene Gant, "who raids the refrigerator as if he were raping a woman," writes Wolfe.

FOOD IS also used to set a mood. In an excerpt from Herman Melville's "Moby Dick," whalers Ishmael and Queequeg come upon the Try Pots, a Nantucket inn famous for its chowders:

"Fishiest of all fishy places was the Try Pots, which well deserved its name; for the pots there were always boiling chowders. Chowder for breakfast, chowder for dinner and chowder for supper, till you began to look for fish bones coming through your clothes. The area before the house was paved with clam shells. Mrs. Hussey wore a polished necklace of codfish vertebrae; and Hosea Hussey had his account books bound in superior old shark skin."

At a table spread with the relics of a recently concluded repast, Mrs. Hussey serves Ishmael and Queequeg a dinner of smoking chowder, as described by narrator Ishmael:

"Oh! sweet friends, hearken to me. It was made of small juicy clams, scarcely bigger than hazel nuts, mixed with pounded ship biscuits and salted pork cut up into little flakes! The whole enriched with butter and plentifully seasoned with pepper and salt. Our appetites being sharpened by the frosty voyage, and in particular, Queequeg seeing his favorite fishing food before him, and the chowder being surpassingly excellent, we dispatched it with great expedition."

YOU WON'T need "Moby Dick" on your shelf to make these literary dishes, but you will need butter, salt, pepper, sugar and flour before going through the express lane.

The 1846 recipe for clam chowder comes from Catharine Beecher, sister of Harriet Beecher Stowe and author of "Miss Beecher's Domestic Receipt-Book." And for dessert, there is apple charlotte from a poem by Joel Barlow.

EXPRESS LANE LIST: clams, milk, cayenne pepper, mace, chives, oyster crackers, apples, white bread.

MISS BEECHER'S CLAM CHOWDER

2 cups water or juice of the canned clams plus enough added water to equal 2 cups

4 cups milk
Up to 5 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons butter
1 quart shucked, fresh clams or 20 ounces canned minced clams
¼ to ½ teaspoon cayenne pepper
¼ to ½ teaspoon mace
Salt and pepper to taste
Fresh chives or dried chives for sprinkling

Oyster crackers for serving
In a large saucepan, combine water, clam juice (if using) and milk. Heat over medium heat until hot, but do not bring to a boil. Work 3 tablespoons of flour into mixture with your fingertips until mixture resembles coarse meal. Whisk into soup, stirring constantly.

If thicker soup is desired, dissolve 1 tablespoon flour in ¼ cup water and add to soup, whisking constantly. Repeat procedure again, if soup is not thick enough. Add clams, cayenne pepper and mace, and salt and pepper to taste.

Cook for 10 minutes over low heat. Adjust seasoning. Sprinkle minced chives on each bowl of soup before serving. Serve with oyster crackers.

APPLE CHARLOTTE

12 slices white bread
5 tablespoons butter, softened
3 medium apples, pared, cored and cut in thin slices
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup milk
Trim crusts from bread. Butter 4 slices of the bread and place in the bottom of a 9-by-9-inch baking dish. Cut another 4 slices of bread in half, butter and line the sides of the dish. Spread apple slices on top of bread, sprinkling sugar and dotting with butter after each layer.

Heat milk until warm. Soak remaining 4 slices of bread in warm milk. Lay on top of apples and sprinkle with sugar. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 1 hour. Makes six servings.

The abused child will grow up someday. Maybe.

Each year, over one million American children suffer from child abuse. Over 2,000 children die from it.

But what about those who survive?

Statistics show that an abused childhood can affect a person's entire life.

Many teenage drug addicts and teenage prostitutes report being abused children.

So do juvenile delinquents and adult criminals.

Yet we now know that child abuse can be prevented.

The National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse is a private, charitable organization that knows how to prevent child abuse.

But we need your help to do it. We need money. We need volunteers.

Send us your check today, or write for our booklet.

Because if we don't all start somewhere, we won't get anywhere.

Madame Chocolate a mail-order magnate

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

CHICAGO — Elaine Sherman is the mail-order maven of chocolate. From her chocolate-packed warehouse in Chicago's northern suburbs, Madame Chocolate, as she calls herself, sends out hundreds of pounds of bars, slabs, chunks and chips to satisfy America's cooks and chocolate lovers.

She began her business in 1982, after closing the Chicago cooking school she had run for seven years. Her catalog, printed on tan paper with chocolate brown ink, has brought her coast-to-coast business, especially from areas where a large selection of good quality chocolate is difficult to find. "Our biggest business is from Hawaii and Alaska," she says.

Sherman is serious about her chocolate. So serious, in fact, that the air in her warehouse is charcoal filtered to make sure the chocolate does not absorb any unpleasant odors. "Chocolate is like a sponge; it soaks up smoke, perfume, even deodorant from visitors," she tells a visiting group of food editors.

She also showed us how dramatically the type of chocolate can affect the same recipe. We were served brownies made at the same time from the same recipe, but using two brands of chocolate: Baker's unsweetened (commonly found in supermarkets) and World's Finest unsweetened (a baking chocolate made by a Chicago family firm, available by mail order).

The difference between the two was immediately obvious in the brownies' appearance, and, with one bite, taste. The Baker's brownie was darker on top, but much lighter in color inside, with a dry, crumbly texture and less chocolatey taste. The brownies made with World's Finest were lighter on top, but dark, dense and moist inside with an intense chocolate flavor.

Americans are "chocolate crazy," Sherman says, and their growing desire for top-notch, imported chocolate has caused American chocolate to improve. "I don't think we'll ever go back to poor quality chocolate."

Asked for her favorite chocolate, Sherman admits that "I haven't found any Belgium chocolate I don't like." For baking, "Lindt is one of the finest in the world."

Here are some hints Madame Chocolate has for chocolate users:

— Use your nose: If it does not smell chocolatey, do not use it.

— To taste-test chocolate: Let a piece melt in your mouth. It should fill your mouth with flavor, and after swallowing there should be no lingering bitterness or dryness.

— Store chocolate together with other baking supplies. Do not store it where it might absorb any strong, unpleasant odors.

— Wrap chocolate in foil for long storage, or in plastic for quick use. Never refrigerate chocolate.

Bittersweet, semisweet and unsweetened chocolate will have a shelf life of 2 to 3 years if kept at a constant moderate temperature in a cupboard or cabinet. White chocolate and milk chocolate have a one year shelf life.

Here is the brownie recipe Sherman used to show the difference quality chocolate can make. Recipes are from Sherman's book, "Madame Chocolate's Book of Divine Indulgences."

For more information or a catalog, write Elaine Sherman, 1940-C, Lehigh Ave., Glenview, Ill. 60025.

DAVID'S BROWNIES

½ cup walnuts
2 ounces unsweetened chocolate
¼ pound unsalted butter, at room temperature
1 cup sugar
½ cup all-purpose flour
2 Grade A large eggs

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Butter an 8-inch square cake pan and set aside.

Chop the walnuts in the bowl of a food processor fitted with a steel knife (or by hand) and set aside.

Chop the chocolate into small pieces and melt with the butter in the top of a double boiler over hot, not boiling, water. Stir until smooth. Remove from the heat and stir in the sugar, then the flour, then the eggs, then the nuts. Pour into prepared pan and smooth the top.

Bake 20 to 25 minutes. Brownies will pull away from the sides of the pan.

Allow brownies to cool in the pan or on a rack. Cut into squares. Makes 25 small brownies. (To freeze brownies, place in a single layer and protect them, first with plastic wrap, and then with aluminum foil.)

BLOND BROWNIES

2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon baking soda
2 Grade A large eggs
½ cup nuts
¾ cup unsalted butter at room temperature

2 cups light brown sugar, firmly packed

6 ounces semisweet chocolate chips

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Set aside a 9 by 13-inch baking pan. Do not butter it!

Sift flour, baking powder, salt and baking soda and set aside. Lightly beat eggs and set aside. Chop the nuts in the bowl of the food processor fitted with a steel knife (or by hand) and set aside.

In a heavy saucepan, melt the butter. Stir in the brown sugar and allow mixture to cook over a medium flame for 1 minute. Remove the pan from the heat. Add eggs and vanilla to the pan and mix together well. Gradually beat in the flour mixture, mixing well after each addition. Sprinkle batter with the chocolate chips and nuts.

Bake 20 to 25 minutes. Allow brownies to cool in the pan or on a rack. Cut into squares. Makes about 50 brownies.

Fish lean cuisine

Hearst News Service

Trout, an important food as well as a game fish, is related to salmon. Unlike lake trout and salmon, which are classed as fatty fish, brook trout is a lean fish and better suited to freezer storage.

Fish are very perishable. Clean and freeze or cook fish as soon as possible. Refrigerate them no more than two days. Properly wrapped, lean fish maintain quality for six months when frozen soon after reaching home.

Brook trout are low in calories. They are quick and easy to cook. Fish may be steamed, poached, broiled, fried or baked. Avoid overcooking. Fish are done when the flesh is opaque and the meat flakes easily.

When a pound of lean fish is steamed or poached to serve three, each serving provides 153 calories with 29 grams of protein before the addition of seasonings. Try Slim Dill Sauce for fish to keep calories low.

To poach or steam pan fish, combine in a skillet 1/4 cup water and 1/4 cup of wine or lemon juice. Add 1/4 teaspoon oregano, 1/4 teaspoon onion salt and 1 teaspoon dry parsley flakes to season. Bring to a boil. To poach, add fish, reduce heat to simmer, cover and cook 5 to 10 minutes. Or steam them on a rack or inverted saucer for the same length of time.

Bake pan fish 20 to 30 minutes at 350 degrees, basting with melted fat from time to time. Pan-fry in 1/4 inch oil at 350 degrees for 8 to 10 minutes.

Cod, ocean perch, haddock and halibut from the market freezer are other low calorie fish. Thaw your favorite to use in the following recipes when brook trout is not available. Rainbow trout or steelhead are fatty fish with double the calories of those suggested.

SLIM DILL SAUCE FOR FISH

2 tablespoons flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon dill weed
1/4 teaspoon mustard (dry)
1/4 teaspoon white pepper
1 minced garlic clove
1 cup milk

Whisk flour and seasonings into a small amount of milk in a small saucepan. Add garlic and remaining milk. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture comes to a boil and thickens.

Makes 1 cup to serve 3 or 4.

HERB GRILLED TROUT

6 ready-to-cook trout (1 to 1 1/4 pounds each or 2 pounds frozen fillets)

1 cup lemon juice
1/4 cup oil
1 tablespoon onion powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon dry parsley flakes

Mix the lemon juice, oil and seasonings in a heavy-duty freezer bag large enough to accommodate the fish. Add the fish and lay the bag in a cake pan; refrigerate 30 minutes.

Remove the fish from the marinade. Place on a well-greased grill over hot charcoal and grill about 10 minutes or until fish flakes when tested with a fork, turning once and brushing often with the marinade.

Serves 6 to 8.

OVEN-BROILED FISH FILLETS

2 trout or 1 pound frozen fillets, thawed
2 teaspoons fresh dill weed (or 1 pound dried)
1/4 teaspoon thyme
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon grated ginger root (optional)
1/4 cup dry white wine or 1 tablespoon lemon juice plus 3 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons margarine

Place fillets skin-side down in a lightly-oiled 2 quart shallow baking dish. Sprinkle with dill, thyme, salt and ginger root. Pour wine over and around the fish. Set aside. Melt the margarine and pour over the fish. Broil 6 inches away from heat 7 to 10 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork.

ALASKA HALIBUT WITH FRESH VEGETABLES

1 lime or lemon, divided
1 medium carrot, diced
1 stalk celery, diced
4 green onions, chopped
2 tablespoons dry white wine or water
1/4 teaspoon oregano, crushed
Salt and coarsely ground pepper
1 medium tomato, peeled and diced
4 Alaska halibut steaks (about 6 oz. each), thawed
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Saute carrot, celery and green onions in 1 tablespoon butter, margarine or oil until crisp-tender. Add wine, oregano, dash salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper and tomato; heat thoroughly. Meanwhile, season halibut with salt and pepper. Arrange halibut over vegetables. Place lime slices on steaks and bake at 450 degrees, allowing 10 minutes per inch of thickness or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Cut the remaining lime half into wedges to garnish the platter.

Makes 4 servings.

QUICK DEEP DISH SALMON PIE

1 can (10 1/2-ounce) cream of celery soup
1 can (16-ounce) salmon, drained and flaked
1/4 cup milk
1 can (16-ounce) small potatoes, drained
1 can (16-ounce) green peas, drained
1 teaspoon onion flakes
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon oregano
1/4 teaspoon basil
1 package refrigerator buttermilk biscuits

In a saucepan, combine the first three ingredients. Add the remaining ingredients, except biscuits. Heat until sauce begins to simmer, stirring occasionally. Empty into 1 1/2 quart casserole. Top with biscuits. Bake in preheated 400 degree oven for 15 to 20 minutes, or until biscuits are brown.

Serves 4 or 5.

Fondues simple to make

By OLIVIA and PAUL BENSEN
Copley News Service

The first fondues — and the ones most often prepared in the United States — consist of a mixture of cheeses with either a beer or wine base.

Beer and cheese fondues are very simple to make. The cheeses blend smoothly and evenly with the beer, and the resulting mixture remains quite stable, even if the temperature varies somewhat.

Wine and cheese fondues are a bit trickier. If you overheat the mixture while the cheeses are melting, or if you allow your fondue pot to become too hot while your guests are dipping, you'll be left with a glutinous mass of cheese solids floating in a clear, watery liquid.

We have found the best method is to heat the wine until it is near, but not at, the boiling point, then add the cheeses, keeping the mixture barely simmering, stirring gently until the cheeses are melted and blended with the wine. Only then are other ingredients added.

If the fondue should become too thick at any point, stir in a bit more kirsch or wine.

Cubes of crusty French sourdough bread may be the traditional choice for dunking in cheese fondues, but we like to add greater variety by also offering lightly steamed flowerettes of broccoli and cauliflower, chunks of rye bread, pieces of toasted onion bagels, pumpernickel, garlic bread and bite-size pieces of smoked sausage, well browned on all sides.

HERE'S A BRIEF list of some cheeses that make excellent fondues. When you're considering combinations, avoid coupling a very strong-flavored cheese with a delicate variety.

— Appenzeller: a fairly robust, full-flavored Swiss cheese.

— Bel Paese: a soft, mild Italian table cheese.

— Cheddar: nutty, tangy, varies from mild to very sharp.

— Danbo: a fairly hard Danish cheese that melts smoothly.

— Emmentaler: the classic Swiss cheese, with a nutty flavor and holes of varying sizes.

— Fontina: a sweet, delicate Italian cheese that combines nicely with most varieties of Swiss.

— Gruyere: a hard milk cheese with a mild flavor, made in France and Switzerland.

— Monterey Jack: a white, fairly mild cheddar-type cheese.

— Samsoe: a rich Danish cheese with the texture of a cheddar but the flavor of a Swiss.

— Tilsit: a medium-firm German cheese with small holes and a medium-sharp taste.

BEER AND CHEESE FONDUE

4 ozs. Tillamook cheddar (see note)
4 ozs. Wyoming cheddar (see note)
4 ozs. Butter Kase (see note)
2 tbsps. flour
1/2 tsp. dry mustard
1/4 tsp. paprika
8 ozs. full-bodied beer
1/2 tsp. horseradish (optional)
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste (optional)

Coarsely chop or grate cheese and toss in mixture of flour, mustard and paprika. Heat beer in chafing dish or fondue pot until almost boiling.

Add cheese, a handful at a time, stirring constantly until each handful is thoroughly melted before adding next.

Check for seasoning and add some horseradish or salt and pepper if desired.

Serve with crusty bread or other items for dipping (see text).
Serves 4.

Note: Other cheeses may be substituted, but avoid processed cheeses, which may not melt properly.

WINE AND CHEESE FONDUE

4 ozs. Gruyere (see note)
4 ozs. Emmentaler (see note)
4 ozs. Havarti (see note)
1 clove garlic
1 cup dry white wine
1/4 tsp. nutmeg
1 to 2 tbsps. cornstarch, mixed in equal amount of water
3 tbsps. kirsch
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Coarsely chop or grate cheeses. With sharp knife, thoroughly score garlic clove, and with it rub inside of chafing dish or fondue pan. Add wine and heat at medium-high setting until bubbles form on surface but wine is not boiling.

Add cheese, a handful at a time, stirring constantly until smooth before adding next handful. If mixture is about to boil, reduce heat immediately.

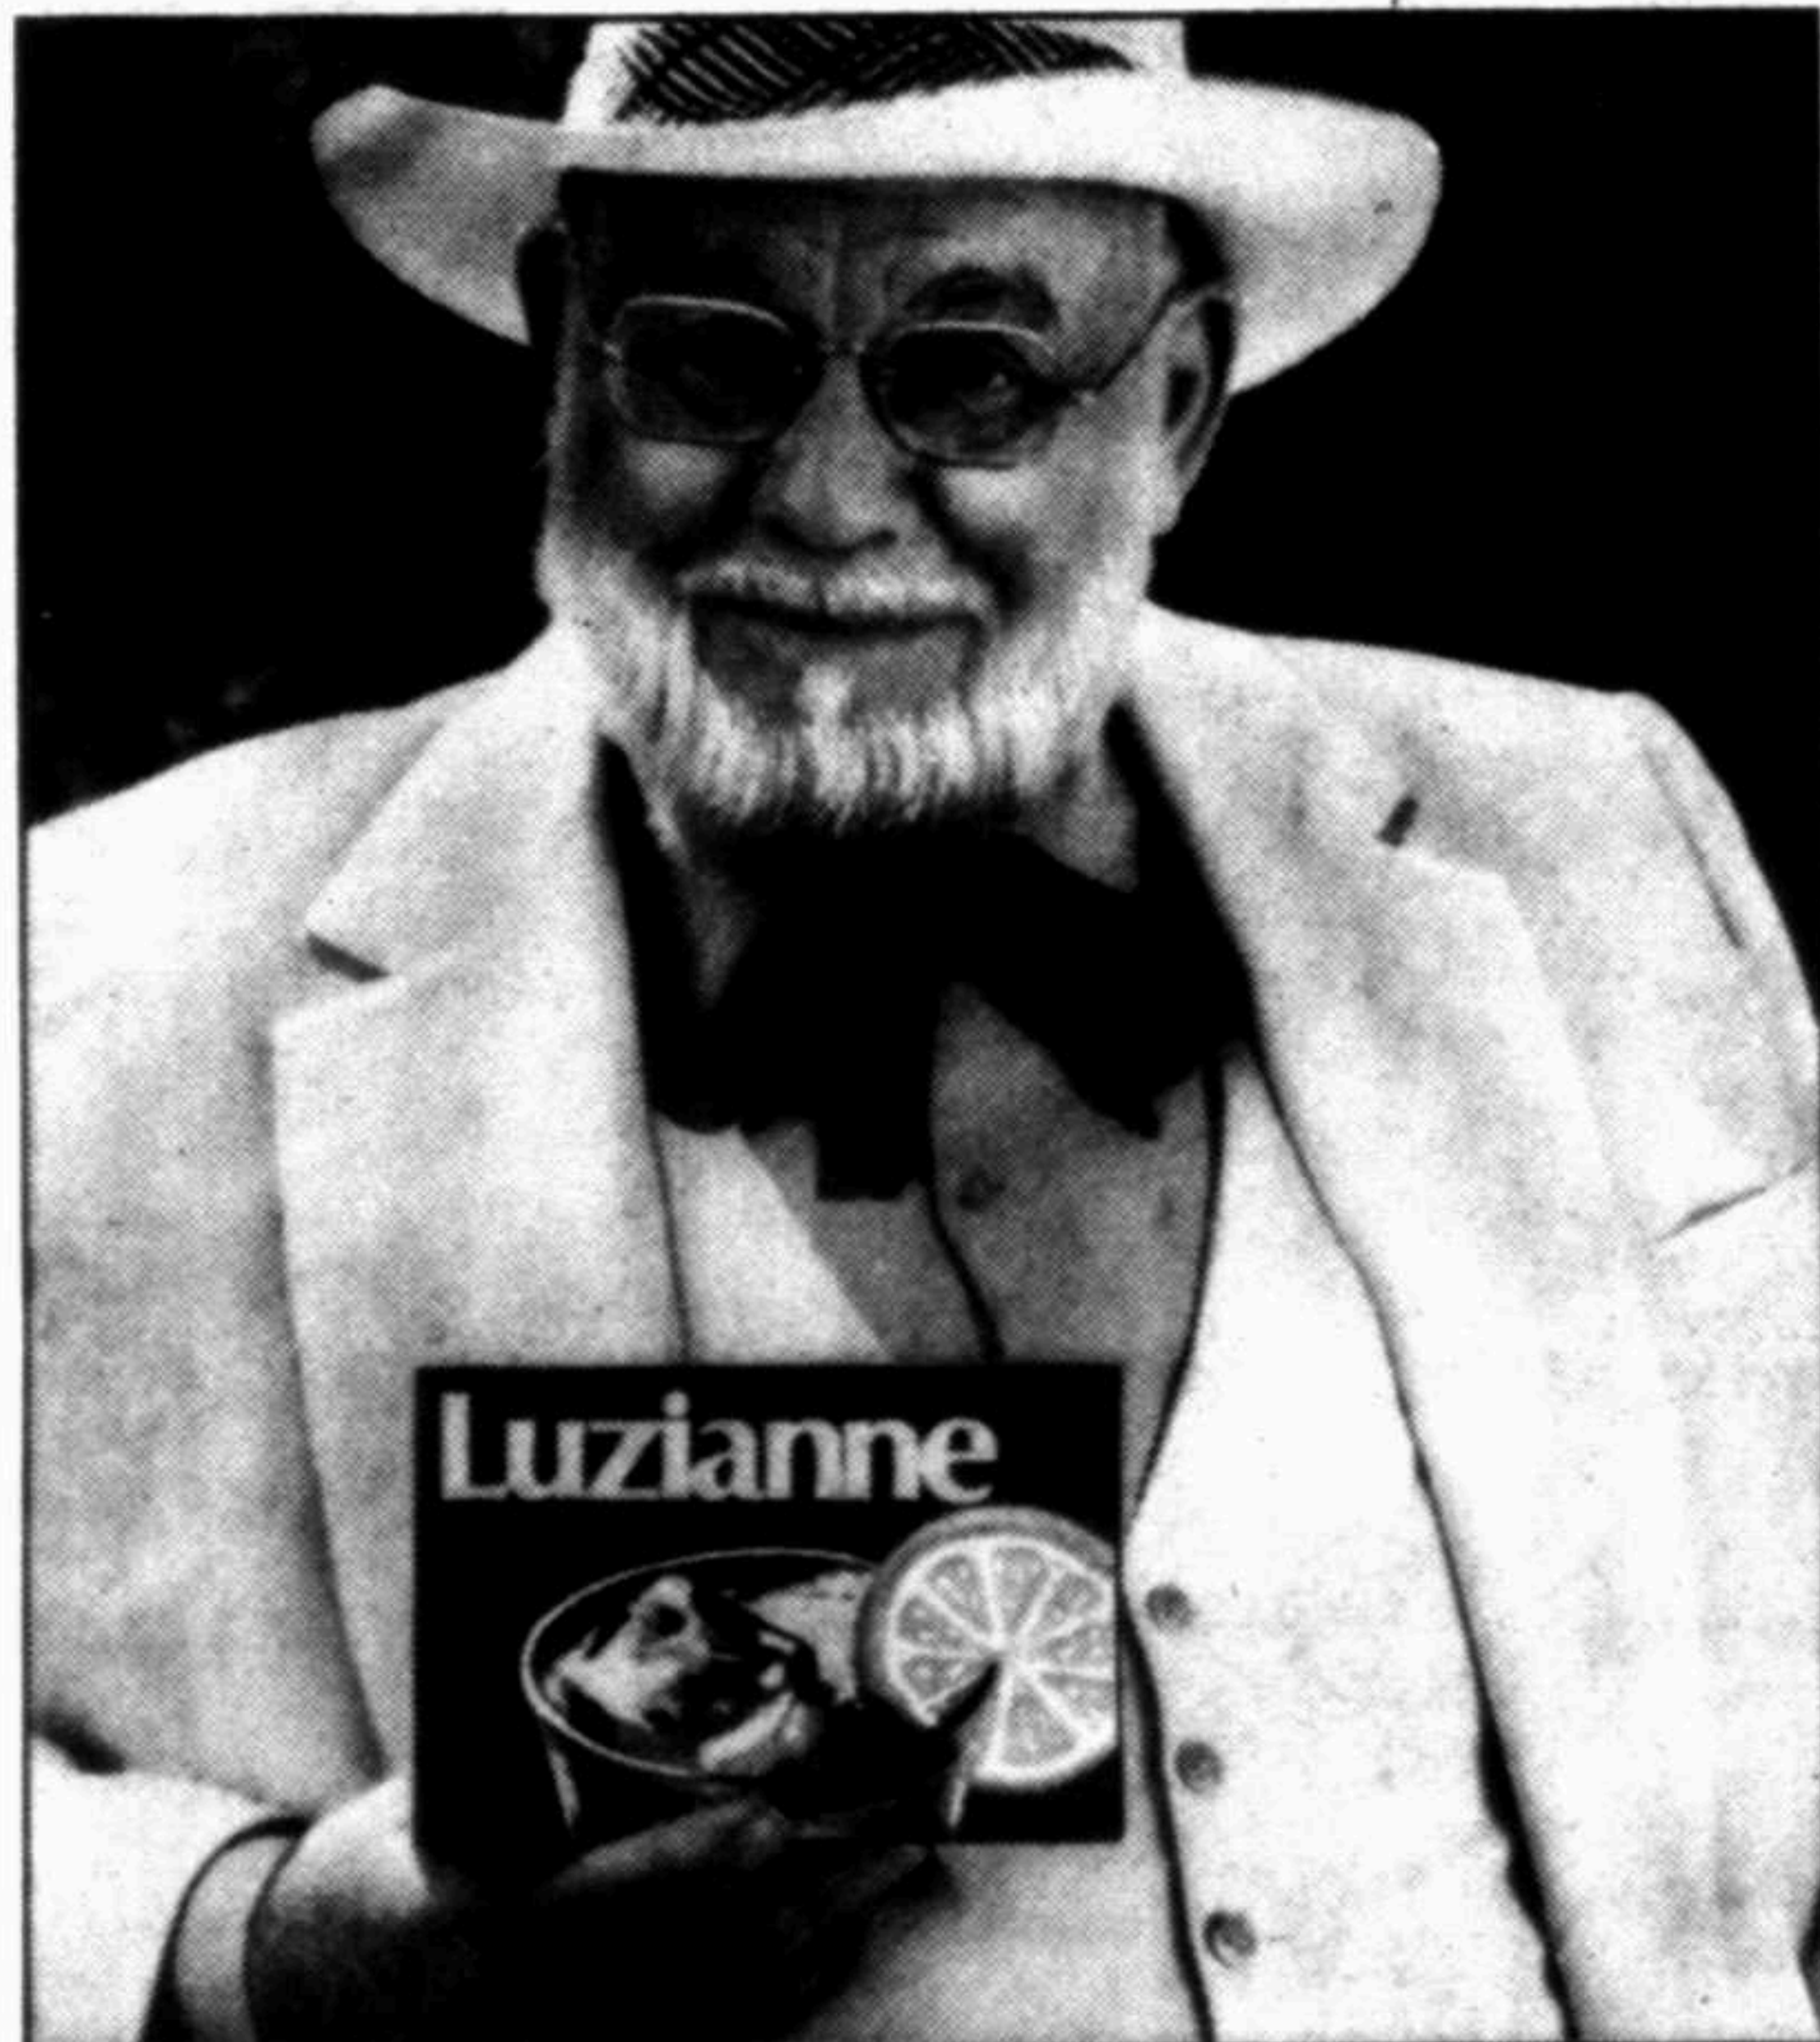

When mixture is smooth, but still presents bit of resistance to stirring spoon, add kirsch and 1 tablespoon of cornstarch mixture. Continue to stir until fondue begins to thicken.

Check for seasoning and add nutmeg and salt and pepper to taste. If fondue is not thick enough, add a bit more of cornstarch mixture.

Serve with crisp bread chunks or other items for dipping (see text).
Serves 4.

Note: As with the Beer and Cheese Fondue, other cheeses may be substituted, but avoid processed cheeses, which may not melt properly.

DEAR ABBY

Juror ignores husband's appeals

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is my second week of jury duty. I've committed for eight weeks of jury duty, and I am afraid by the time it is over, my marriage will also be over.

My husband, a very opinionated and persuasive man, insists that I tell him the details of the trial I am now on, knowing full well that I have sworn not to talk about it until it's over. I have refused to discuss the case with him, but he is very angry, which has created a lot of friction between us.

Today is our 19th wedding anniversary, and he's using that as a reason why I should tell him. "After all," he said, "we've kept no secrets from each other all these years, and if you really love me you would trust me enough to tell me everything."

I told him I love him enough to not ask him to do something he thought was wrong.

I looked forward to being an honest juror, and nobody is going to spoil it for me — not even my husband.

Thanks for letting me get this off my chest, Abby. I'm signing my name, but for obvious reasons, sign this ... OFF MY CHEST

DEAR OFF: You are right on! In time, your husband's anger will blow over. Meanwhile, in his heart he knows you're right, and he can only love and respect you more for your integrity.

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "Tired of OK" in Arizona" brought to mind the following:

Few people know the origin of the expression "OK." Our eighth president, Martin Van Buren, was born and raised in Kinderhook, N.Y. In later years he was nicknamed "Old Kinderhook."

During his presidency, when a bill was brought before him, he would either veto it or approve it by initialing it "OK" for his nickname. Hence an OK indicated approval.

And that's how OK became a part of the language. — DON FINN, ORANGE, CALIF.

DEAR DON: Thanks for an interesting bit of trivia. And for those who wonder if I am any kin to Old Kinderhook, I am not. I took the Abigail from the Old Testament (Book of Samuel) and the Van Buren from our eighth president because I liked the aristocratic ring.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of this invitation from a 3-month-old son who was born out of wedlock: "John Jay Smith requests the pleasure of your company at an open house to celebrate the marriage of his parents, Richard James Smith and Jane Susan Doe, Saturday, June 15th, from 2:30 until 5:30 p.m. at their home" etc., etc. — SEEN EVERYTHING IN ST. PAUL, MINN.

DEAR SEEN: I think it's unique, courageous and original.

DEAR ABBY: "Grieving in Gulfport, Miss." could have been signed "Grieving in Wichita, Kan." and written by me. Only it was my older sister who died from cigarettes.

I tried to get her to quit, but her only answer was the same as many others: "I'm not hurting anybody but myself."

But the night she died, her family had to listen to her cry out, "Help me, help me." And that's the night she hurt a lot of other people. — GRIEVING IN WICHITA

USDA issues 'spicy' reports

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Sooner or later, someone no doubt would wonder about the world celery-seed situation, so here's some of the good news and bad news crossing the desk of Rex E.T. Dull, the man at the Agriculture Department who keeps tabs on the spice trade.

The good news is that prices early this year were down from last year's exceptional highs, which were caused by civil strife around Amritsar, India.

The bad news, according to late intelligence, is that unrest is boiling up again, and nobody knows what will happen to celery seed.

India, it turns out, supplies most of the world's celery seed. And any savvy who knows his potato salad knows that potato salad is nowhere without celery seed from India.

The nutmeg picture, on the other hand, is a bit clearer from Rex Dull's vantage point.

Indonesian nutmeg is doing well, nutmeg from Grenada, however, is doing poorly in general and here in particular, because it contains more fat than American buyers want.

After the U.S. invasion of Grenada in 1983, the Soviet Union canceled a contract to buy 500 tons of nutmeg a year, and the island's warehouses now hold a huge surplus, Dull said recently.

An American firm's promotion of a Grenadian nutmeg "kit," with graters and recipes, hasn't made much impact either, he added. To top off the problem, the Soviets recently rejected a new sales feeler put out by Grenada.

Arcana like these are the sugar and spice of Dull's life. He has been the Foreign Agricultural Service's keeper of data on tea, spices, cocoa and essential oils for 24 years, and never, by his account, has it been a bore.

"I've always enjoyed working with the spices, but you never get to where you know it all," he said. "Because of our budget cuts, we've had more work, and I was assigned to work on vegetables and wine and olives as a result. Last year we were running ragged around here. I was a nervous wreck."

Dull's reports and market analyses, published periodically by the Agriculture Department, apparently are snapped up eagerly by people who have a need to know about his subjects.

He said the spice trade association just bought 500 copies of his "Tea, Spices and Essential Oils" report for 1985. Dull's "Cocoa," which came out in March, was another big seller.

As a result of his total immersion in the fine print of spices and the like, Dull has become a walking encyclopedia of things you always wanted to know but probably never dared ask about.

For example, most of our mustard seed comes from Canada, and perhaps the biggest purchaser in this country is the R.T. French Co., the mustard manufacturer.

"You will see turmeric as one of the spices in the statistical tables (imports hit 1,800 metric tons in 1984). They color the mustard with turmeric, because people expect it to be yellow," Dull said.

Dull's data also disclose that oregano imports continue moving right on up on the charts. "Oregano has become very popular, due to the popularity of pizza, spaghetti, the Italian foods. Same thing for basil, which is increasing," he said.

Summer squash a surprisingly versatile vegetable

Copley News Service

If you're in the habit of planting a summer vegetable garden, you probably reserve a corner of the lot for summer squash. The trailing green vines are pretty to look at, and the plants yield a veggie that's hard to beat for kitchen versatility.

Peak season for summer squash is April to August, but some varieties, such as the ever-present zucchini, are available all year. Because summer squash is picked while still immature, the skin is tender and seeds are unobtrusive and edible.

Winter squash varieties, on the other hand, are harvested when fully mature. Their seeds and skin are not tender enough to eat.

Probably the most commonly used of the summer squashes are zucchini, yellow crookneck (or straight), and patty pan (or scallop). Generally, these can be used interchangeably in recipes that simply specify "summer squash."

SCALLOPED SUMMER SQUASH

3 lbs. yellow summer squash
1 small onion, quartered
1 bay leaf
¼ tsp. ground thyme
1 cup water
¼ tsp. salt
¼ cup butter or margarine
3 tbsps. whole wheat flour

¼ tsp. pepper
1¼ cups light cream or half-and-half
2 eggs
2 tbsps. lemon juice
2 tbsps. chopped fresh parsley
¼ cup shredded cheddar or Swiss cheese
¼ cup fine dry bread crumbs

Preheat oven to 325 F. Wash squash, trim ends and scrape lightly. Slice paper thin.

In saucepan, combine squash, onion, bay leaf, thyme, water and salt. Bring to boil, cover, and simmer over low heat 10 minutes. Drain well in colander, discarding onion and bay leaf. Set aside.

Melt butter in small saucepan over medium-low heat, gradually stir in flour and pepper to form roux. Slowly pour in cream, stirring constantly, until sauce just comes to a boil. Adjust heat to low and simmer 5 minutes, stirring often.

In bowl, lightly beat eggs and pour in hot cream sauce, stirring constantly. Beat in lemon juice, then stir in chopped parsley.

Stir in half of cheese, then gently fold in squash.

Turn mixture into oiled or buttered baking dish. Combine bread crumbs with remaining cheese and spread evenly over top.

Bake, uncovered, 30 minutes, until heated through and top is golden brown.

Plums, cheese combined

For a variation on the fruit-and-cheese theme, try combining cheese with plums.

PLUM CHEESE STRIPS

4 fresh plums
1/4 cup brown sugar, packed
1 1/2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup shortening
1/4 cup sharp Cheddar cheese, finely grated
1/4 cup milk

Pit and dice plums into blender jar or food processor and process smooth to measure one cup puree. Combine with sugar in 1 1/2-quart saucepan and bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer about 10 minutes, stirring frequently and watching closely to avoid scorching. Cook until mixture is reduced to 1/2 cup. Cool. Combine flour and salt. Cut in shortening until particles are size of peas and stir in cheese. Sprinkle with milk, adding just enough to make stiff dough. Divide in halves. Shape each into rectangle and roll one piece at a time on floured board to 5x12-inch strip. Trim edges with fluted pastry wheel if desired. Transfer to ungreased baking sheet and spread 1/4 cup plum mixture lengthwise down center of strip. Fold sides over filling toward center, leaving 3/8-inch space open in center. Repeat with second strip. Bake below center of 400-F. oven 20-25 minutes, until pastry is crisp and lightly browned. Slide off onto wire rack to cool. When cold, cut each strip diagonally into 10 slices, about one inch wide. Makes 20 pieces.

THREE CHEESE PLUM SPREAD

2 fresh plums
1 package (8 oz.) cream cheese, softened
1/4 cup sharp cold pack Cheddar cheese food
1/4 cup blue cheese
3 tablespoons melted butter
2 tablespoons toasted sesame seeds

Pit and finely chop plums to measure 1/2 cup. Cream together cheeses and butter. Stir in plums and sesame seeds. Turn into serving dish and sprinkle with additional sesame seeds if desired. Makes about 2 1/2 cups.

Practical pointers may prevent picnic poisonings

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — The ribs are done to a turn, the potato salad looks mouthwatering and even the common hot dog looks kingly as it sizzles over the coals.

Whether this summertime meal becomes a memorable feast or a bout with serious illness has already been decided by the time it hits the table, says Gerald D. Kuhn, professor of food science at The Pennsylvania State University.

Food poisoning can ruin the most elaborately planned picnic if even one of several simple food-handling rules is broken, he says.

"A lot of foods contain foodborne pathogens," he says, "but in small numbers. They are part of our environment." And as such, the bacteria are normally ingested and pass through our systems without our notice, he explains.

During the summer, however, it is temperature that can "provide an ideal environment for (bacterial) populations to grow," he says. In food held at higher than refrigerator temperatures, it takes only two to four hours for normal numbers to grow to high enough populations to become toxic, Kuhn says.

Common picnic foods that are susceptible are meats, egg products, meat spreads, salads and, surprisingly, cream pies, Kuhn says. "I discourage anyone from taking a home-made cream pie to any carry-away eating activity," he says. "Bacteria grow best on these pies."

"The big three," says Kuhn, can ruin a summer meal. Staphylococcus, clostridium perfringens and salmonella are the bacteria that, when found in excessive numbers in your food, can cause food poisoning and its accompanying painful symptoms.

Kuhn says 100,000 bacterial germs per gram of food are not harmful, but if they multiply to 1 million or more per gram they can cause problems. The symptoms can include stomach cramps, diarrhea and vomiting, lasting from a few hours to several days.

Although bacteria are more commonly introduced through foods such as raw meat, poultry, eggs and dairy products, even if the food was "sterile" when purchased, how it is handled at home can turn an innocent-looking cheeseburger into a menace.

"You know those signs in rest rooms that tell employees to wash their hands before returning to the kitchen?" Kuhn asks. "They are there for a reason."

He says that 20 to 30 percent of all humans carry salmonella bacteria in their intestinal tracts, and staphylococcus bacteria are found on the skin and in the noses and throats of nearly all people.

"That's why it's critical to wash your hands when you come from a bathroom and are handling food."

Improper holding temperatures and poor personal hygiene are two of the most common factors contributing to food poisoning, he says, so it is easy to understand why food poisoning is more likely with a summertime fresh-air meal.

Kuhn recommends cooling as a particularly easy preventive. "Cool foods ahead of time and pack them in ice so they will never exceed 40 degrees in temperature," advises Kuhn, who suggests packaging for the cooler should be done with plastic.

Vegetable Kabobs healthy fare for barbecue

Americans are barbecuing healthier these days. Burgers, steaks and franks high in cholesterol and saturated fat are being replaced by other foods which are hearty, flavorful and full of nutrition.

For a tasty, healthful and unusual barbecue, try these vegetable kabobs. The brown rice salad makes a fine side dish to serve with the kabobs.

MARINATED VEGETABLE KABOBS

 $\frac{1}{4}$ cup red wine vinegar
1 teaspoon thyme leaves, crushed
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon rosemary leaves, crushed
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon salt
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon ground black pepper
1 teaspoon Dijon-style mustard
8 small white onions

2 small zucchini (12 oz.), cut in $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch slices
1 medium green pepper, cut into $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch squares
1 medium unpeeled eggplant, (12 oz.), cut in $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch cubes
4 large mushrooms, quartered

To prepare marinade combine in large bowl safflower oil, vinegar, thyme, rosemary, salt, black pepper and mustard; set aside. Trim ends from onions.

In medium saucepan simmer onions in water to cover until onions just begin to soften, about five minutes. Add zucchini and green pepper.

Cover and refrigerate for two hours or longer. Drain vegetables, reserving marinade. Alternately thread vegetables on skewers.

Grill on rack over hot coals until vegetables are hot and glazed, four to seven minutes, turning and brushing with marinade often. If desired broil under a preheated hot broiler following directions for grilling.

Makes four portions.

HOLLYWOOD BROWN RICE SALAD

$\frac{2}{3}$ cups water
1 cup long-grain brown rice
 $\frac{1}{4}$ cup raisins
 $\frac{1}{4}$ cup chopped dried apricots
Safflower oil
 $\frac{1}{4}$ cup lemon juice
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon ground cumin
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon salt

$\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon ground black pepper
 $\frac{1}{4}$ cup chopped walnuts

In medium saucepan bring water to boil. Add rice. Simmer covered until almost tender, about 25 minutes. Add raisins and apricots; mix gently.

Cook covered until rice is tender and liquid is absorbed, about five minutes.

Meanwhile prepare dressing by combining in small bowl $\frac{1}{4}$ cup safflower oil, lemon juice, cumin, salt and black pepper.

Transfer rice to large bowl. Add dressing and mix gently. Cover and refrigerate until chilled.

In small skillet heat 1 tablespoon safflower oil. Add walnuts. Saute until lightly toasted. Drain on paper towel. Just before serving add walnuts to rice; mix gently.

Makes four portions.

Consumer group rates fast foods for fat, sodium

WASHINGTON (AP) — High levels of fat and sodium have landed five popular dishes on the list of "worst" fast foods, while a consumer group cited three low-calorie, low-salt items as the "best" available for Americans.

Two McDonald's offerings joined food from Roy Rogers, Wendy's and Hardee's on the selections listed as worst for Americans, the Center for Science in the Public Interest said.

At the same time, Wendy's also landed on the best fast foods list, along with products sold by Long John Silver's and Jack in the Box, the Washington-based consumer health organization said in its newsletter, "Nutrition Action."

The Center for Science in the Public Interest first began citing its choices for best and worst fast foods in 1983, and said it is updating its selections now because of changes in the types and varieties of foods available.

The group welcomed the growing popularity of salad bars at fast food restaurants and noted that an increasing health consciousness among consumers has led to the addition of low-fat items such as non-fried chicken and fish, plus mixed-grain breads and low-calorie salad dressings.

Selected as the best fast-food choices available to nutrition-conscious eaters were Long John Silver's baked fish, Jack in the Box's shrimp salad and the reduced-calorie salad dressings available at Wendy's.

In addition, the consumer group listed two honorable mentions on the good food side of the coin — Arby's roasted chicken breast and Wendy's multi-grain bun.

"Bravo," the consumer group said of the baked fish, which weighs in at only 151 calories and 361 milligrams of sodium. "Why it took so long we'll never know."

The center suggested customers at Long John Silver's restaurants select mixed vegetables and corn on the cob along with the baked fish to obtain "the first all-around, low-fat, hot, fast food meal."

Jack in the Box's shrimp salad contains just 115 calories, the center reported, and 460 milligrams of salt, if consumers bypass dressings.

"The demise of many a dieter comes at the end of the counter where the salad dressings wait," the group went on. "Wendy's reduced calorie dressings ... chop the calories and fat roughly in half. That means both your health and waistline win."

On the negative end of the scale, McDonald's was cited both for Chicken McNuggets and the breakfast sausage biscuit.

Fat supplies more than half the calories in the breaded and fried chicken pieces, the center said, while the sausage biscuit is high in both fat and calories.

Contacted for a response to the listing, McDonald's spokesman Bob Kayser said the firm could not comment on the criticism until it had a chance to study the center's report.

Finally, the center criticized Wendy's cheese-stuffed potato as among the worst fast foods.

The potato itself has plenty of credentials as a health food, the center said, but with the addition of cheese the amount of fat is as high as that in many cheeseburgers.

'Fancy' not a tuna grade

"Fancy" on a can of tuna doesn't refer to the content's grade. The "fancy" labeling merely means that the tuna is solid-style rather than chunk or flaked.

Fish prepared just for 'the halibut'

Hearst News Service

Pacific halibut is a white-fleshed flatfish which roams the ocean bottom and prefers cold waters to warm. Although halibut range from northern California to icy northern Alaska waters, the bulk of the U.S. Pacific catch comes from the Gulf of Alaska.

Halibut are slow-growing; it takes about seven years for one to reach 10 pounds, the smallest legal catch size. Halibut fishermen are restricted to hook-and-line fishing designed to yield high-quality fish, quickly killed and largely unbruised.

In the market, the flesh should be a clear, translucent pearly color, not chalky white. And it should be firm to the touch, not squishy-soft, said seafood consultant Jon Rowley. The scent should be sweet, not fishy-strong.

Halibut is available in steaks (cross-sections), fillets (cut lengthwise along the backbone), roasts (chunks of meat from either end of the body) and "cheeks" (hand-cut portions from either side of the halibut's head, which have a wholly different flavor and texture). These low-fat fish offer about 24 grams protein and 110 calories for every 3 1/2-ounce serving.

Halibut can be prepared in as many ways as any other firm-fleshed white fish: poached, baked, grilled, sauteed, pan-fried, broiled, deep-fried or simmered in soups or stews.

HAZELNUT HALIBUT
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

6 tablespoons finely ground hazelnuts
4 tablespoons melted unsalted butter
4 teaspoons lemon juice

Season halibut steaks with salt and pepper. Combine hazelnuts and butter. Spread one-third of the mixture into the bottom of a shallow baking dish. Place halibut on nuts. Top with remaining butter mixture. Sprinkle with lemon juice. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 25-30 minutes or until halibut flakes easily when tested with a fork.

This recipe, from the Halibut Association of North America, would serve for guests who are not fish lovers, or for halibut that's not in perfect condition. Other fresh vegetables can be substituted for carrots and celery in season, and spices can be adjusted to taste. Recipe may be halved using a smaller can of tomatoes.

HALIBUT VEGETABLE CHOWDER

2 carrots, cut in thin julienne strips
2 stalks celery, sliced diagonally
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
2 tablespoons oil
1 can (28 ounces) tomatoes
1 cup water or fish stock
3 tablespoons minced parsley, divided

1 teaspoon chicken bouillon granules (omit if fish stock is used)
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon each thyme and basil, crushed
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 1/2 pounds halibut

Saute carrots, celery, onion and garlic in oil for five minutes. Add tomatoes, water or stock, 2 tablespoons parsley, bouillon (if used) and seasonings. Break up tomatoes with spoon. Cover and simmer 20 minutes. Cut halibut into 1-inch cubes; add to chowder. Cover and simmer until halibut flakes easily when tested with a fork. Sprinkle with remaining parsley.

Makes six to eight servings.
This unusual treatment, developed for the Alaska Seafood Marketing Institute, babies delicate halibut steaks, steaming them on a bed of lettuce leaves and sliced vegetables. Try using rice vinegar or a sweeter herb vinegar and eliminating the sugar.

STEAMED HALIBUT AND CUCUMBERS

2 heads Boston or bibb lettuce
Butter or margarine, melted
1/2 teaspoon salt, divided
Pepper
1 cup very thinly sliced cucumber
1/4 cup very thinly sliced onion
1 or 2 tablespoons vinegar
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon dill weed
4 (6-ounce) halibut steaks

Separate lettuce into leaves and toss lettuce with 2 tablespoons butter, 1/2 teaspoon salt and dash pepper. Toss cucumber with onion, vinegar, sugar and dill. Layer vegetables on a steaming rack and place over boiling water. Season halibut with 1/2 teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper; brush with butter. Place halibut on vegetables. Return water to boil; steam, covered, 10-15 minutes or until the fish flakes easily when tested with a fork.

Norwegians export millions of dollars worth of fish

Copley News Service

Norway exported fish, shellfish and roe valued at $285 million in 1984 compared with $255 million in 1983. Norwegian fish were exported to 32 countries. The No. 1 customer was Germany, which bought 11,900 tons. Exports from Norway's fish

MISD teachers request pay raise

By JULIE HILLRICH
Staff Writer

A local teachers organization Tuesday submitted its request for an 11.5 percent "across-the-board" pay raise in 1985-86, shortly after Midland Independent School District trustees approved a preliminary budget study that would include a proposed $2.5 million or 6.8 percent increase over 1984-85.

The Texas Federation of Teachers in May reviewed the MISD financial situation to determine whether the district possesses adequate resources to fund a "major" teacher pay raise, according to Sam Manning, president of the Midland chapter.

The group based its findings on an assumed five percent annual growth rate.

According to Manning, the results indicate that MISD does have such resources and that the district should provide:

— An 11.5 percent or $2,800 across-the-board raise to teachers and "all other instructional personnel."

— Career ladder stipends to all teachers eligible under state guidelines for Level II, plus the placement of certain other personnel including support staff.

— An increase in funding for supplies, materials and other support services, including a five percent pay raise for support staff.

"All of the above can be accomplished without an increase in the local tax rate, by a slight re-ordering of priorities," TFT president John Cole said.

The study revealed that sources of revenue or savings to fund a pay raise for teachers and other instructional staff would be provided by reducing the balance in the operating fund to five percent, thus saving MISD an estimated $3.3 million. A five percent growth in local property values also would generate approximately $2.7 million.

In addition, the study suggested that if MISD reduced the debt-service tax rate by 47 cents and increased the maintenance tax rate by that amount (keeping the total tax rate the same as 1984-85), re-allocation to instructional programs could amount to $228,890.

The total savings, new revenue and re-allocations ($6.3 million) minus a $774,950 reduction in state aid would provide about $5.5 million for pay raises.

Manning told trustees, "I wanted to bring this analysis before you and, if some of the analysis helps in setting up the budget, and you can see a way to (aid) teachers in terms of pay raises and the career ladder, perhaps this will be helpful."

Prior to Manning's presentation, trustees approved a preliminary budget study that would, however, allocate $2.56 million, or an increase of 6.8 percent over 1984-85. The increase includes 38 new teaching positions, seven new support people, the additional career ladder allocation, the local contribution to teacher retirement, tutorial contributions and annuity contributions.

The total amount budgeted for salaries and other payroll costs is $40 million, or 81.3 percent of the operating budget, MISD business manager Don Furgeson said.

Texas Tech students to evaluate city's water system

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

After adopting a proposal to allow Texas Tech University students to evaluate the city's water system and approving an extension of A Street, Midland City Council adjourned at 1:46 p.m. Tuesday, going on record for holding the shortest meeting in recent history.

During the boom days of 1980-82, city council meetings lasted into the evening hours, sometimes continuing the next day.

The Texas Tech study by graduate civil engineering students will cost $21,000, which Utilities Director

John Lowe said is a lower price than hiring a professional consulting engineering firm.

The students will look at how the water gets to Midland and into the distribution system and will evaluate the chemical processes at the treatment plant, according to Lowe.

"It's the kind of research data we wish we had the time and money and people to do. It's far beyond what our present capabilities are. If we learn how to save a small fraction of our power and chemical costs, it will be worth it," Lowe said.

The study will begin July 1 and take 14 months to complete. A final report should be ready by August 1986.

Texas Tech is extending its research capability into West Texas. "It could be beneficial to cities. I hope it's a long-term relationship for us," Lowe said.

In another item on the agenda, Lowe submitted a report of an evaluation of 30 monitoring wells in the vicinity of the city's sewage-treatment project, 15 miles southeast of the city.

The ongoing monitoring of those wells is part of the state permit which allowed the holding ponds and irrigation system to be constructed at that site.

The wells were constructed in September 1984 after most of the reservoir was completed, he said. It was several months before there was sufficient water available in the wells for an analysis.

"We don't see any particular or unusual circumstances with the water," he said. "It seems to be ground water that has taken a long time to collect in the monitoring wells. If you analyze the effluent water in the pond, its quality is much better than the ground water in the wells."

The council agreed to release restrictive covenants on some land near Air Park which the city had wanted for extending A Street. However, the plan has changed to make the street go straight north, rather than curve around the existing airport.

Bill Sandlin, general manager of ClayDesta Corp., said his company wants to develop the tract. Getting rid of the restriction on that land "would free up the 71 acres for development." Proposed is a high-fashion retail shopping center, and two of the three anchor stores have verbally committed, according to Sandlin.

In addition, the Postal Service is considering a corner tract for a new postal outlet, he said.

The council adopted recommendations from a school-crossing traffic report which suggested removing the 20 mph speed limit at Scharbauer Drive and Western Street, putting a flashing light at the school crossing on Gist and Terrell streets and adding a crossing guard for Washington Elementary School at Tilden and Indiana streets.

Financier pleading 'not guilty' in Security National loan-default case

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Eftim Pandeff, an international financier who had borrowed $325,000 from Midland's Security National Bank in 1983, had failed to provide promised collateral for the loan, according to testimony in a federal court trial in Midland, Tuesday.

"Mr. Pandeff had the trust and confidence of the president of Security National Bank, David Covey," said the federal prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Wayne Speck.

The financier had borrowed the money in part to stave off the Internal Revenue Service's garnishment of an Arkansas tennis-shoe company.

Pandeff, a 55-year-old New Yorker, pleaded "not guilty" to making false statements to gain a $325,000 loan on a 90-day note from the 1982-established bank in July 1983. If he is convicted by the three-man, nine-woman federal jury, Pandeff could be sentenced up to two years in prison. U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton is presiding over the trial.

He was indicted for pledging stocks he purportedly owned as collateral to secure the loan but did not turn over any stocks to the bank and then defaulted on the note.

PANDEFF allegedly had pledged as collateral shares of common stock which had a market value of almost $4 million. Those include 13,000 shares of common stock in Monolithic Memories Inc. and valued at $344,500; 6,200 shares in Rolm Corp. and valued at $434,000; and 66,918 shares in Xebec Corp. and valued at $3.2 million.

However, the government maintains that neither Pandeff nor Axa Capital Corp., with which Pandeff was allegedly associated, owned stock in those corporations.

"He was a money broker and financier of sorts," Speck said of Pandeff.

The stock was in the United Bank of Switzerland and in a Paris bank, according to evidence presented in federal court on Tuesday.

Covey indicated he had become acquainted with Pandeff in the early 1980s when Covey was executive vice president of Red River National Bank in Clarksville in Northeast Texas. Pandeff was helping finance operations of Tred II, a tennis-shoe manufacturer in De Queen, Ark., and had sought out Covey after he was named president of the Midland bank in 1982.

"Were you aware of claims...David Covey had committed fraud and dishonest acts in connections with the loan of $325,000," Pandeff's defense attorney, Bill Alexander, had asked the bank's cashier, Joyce Cowan, the government's first witness.

"Yes," she replied. Alexander said Covey had "kind of got in trouble" at the bank and was "summarily discharged or asked to resign."

Four-car crash

Two Midlanders were taken to Midland Memorial Hospital after this four-car accident at about 7:45 this morning on Highway 80 near Loop 250, according to a hospital spokeswoman. Victor Perez, who was driving the GMC pickup in the foreground, and Rick McCarter, who was driving a B&B Vending truck, were expected to be admitted in fair condition. Laura Dodson, who was driving the Chevette, and Robert Scott, who was driving the white pickup in the background, were unhurt. No other information was available from police at press time.

Former Midlander Dru-Ann Perry is wasting little time in establishing her acting career. She won a lead role in a feature film two weeks after moving to Hollywood.

Midland actress finds her 'big break'

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Dru-Ann Perry wanted to break into show business, so last March she packed up a rented truck and moved from Dallas to Los Angeles.

The 22-year-old former Midlander had no illusions about her chances. She knew most would-be stars spend years waiting on tables while they wait for their big break, and she was prepared to do the same.

"I saw years of struggling," she said in a recent interview at the home of her parents, Wes and Jackie Perry, 2508 Neely.

On the drive out to L.A., "All I kept thinking was, 'What makes me think I could go out there and make it?'"

Two weeks later, she was cast as the lead in a feature film. So much for the years of struggle.

Of course, "Red Moon" wasn't exactly big-budget. It was shot in 10 days for under $1 million, and has yet to find a distributor.

"It was a quickie," said Ms. Perry, who worked 20-hour days during the filming. "It's about four girls in a rock 'n' roll band. I play the lead singer of the band."

The movie is a futuristic fantasy-adventure, with Ms. Perry cast as a high-school student named Judy Jetson who joins the band and changes her name to Ace.

"I start out sweet and innocent, and then I change," she said. "It's geared toward the younger generation."

If "Red Moon" doesn't quite sound like Academy-Award material, it's still a terrific break for a woman whose previous acting credits were limited to Midland High School musicals. A former dancer with the Permian Civic Ballet (now Ballet Midland), Ms. Perry started at Texas Christian University in 1980 as a dance major.

"But I got really burned out on it," she said. Switching to radio-TV-film, she concentrated on the technical aspects of film-making.

"I decided to get a degree in something technical, because if nothing else worked out, at least I can operate a camera," she said. "Then in my senior year, (a classmate) put me in his videos."

Ms. Perry found she liked being in front of the camera more than she liked being behind it, so after graduation last August, she began taking acting classes.

"It stems from being in ballet and doing musicals," she says. "When I quit dancing, I still knew I wanted to do something to release my creativity."

Ms. Perry started in the business end of movie making, working as Dallas representative for the Producers, Linda Bond's Midland-based production company. But eventually she decided Dallas was too far from Los Angeles, where most important casting decisions are made.

"I didn't want to be sitting in Dallas and just getting little parts," she said. "I packed up my bags, dumped everything and just moved out there."

The condo she rented in West L.A. came equipped with a roommate whose previous roommate was helping cast "Red Moon." At first, the woman thought Ms. Perry too wholesome to play a rock singer.

"So I got punked out," she said, and went to the Club Lingerie, a trendy Hollywood nightclub, where she ran into the ex-roommate and impressed her with the new-wave image.

One thing led to another, "And I got the part," she said.

Now, with one movie under her belt, she has to find an agent, "and then, work on the agent. I have to be able to turn it off when I don't need it, or it's going to limit me."

Ms. Perry is interested in television — soap operas were her original objective — but said she wants to do "a little bit of everything."

If "Red Moon" finds a distributor, it may be released next fall. If not, there are music videos, soap operas, situation comedies, other movies...lots of possible avenues for an ambitious young woman who has given herself "six or seven" years to carve out her own niche in Hollywood.

Meanwhile, she plans to explore her new city a bit more. Going to work so quickly has left Ms. Perry little time to make new friends, but she's already had to fend off come-ons from strangers who say they will make her a star.

Mobile home destroyed by fire, no injuries reported

From Staff Reports

A mobile home and its contents were destroyed Tuesday by a fire of undetermined cause which originated in the bathroom, according to fire reports.

The fire in Lupe Hernandez' mobile home at Westgate Mobile Home Park on County Road 1224 South was reported at 5:13 p.m. No injuries were reported in the fire, which was extinguished with 2,000 gallons of water, reports said.

In other reports, a 29-year-old Midland man was arrested at Skaggs Alpha Beta, 4706 N. Midkiff, at about 3:30 this morning after allegedly trying to steal about $720 worth of cigarettes.

Police arrived to find three Skaggs employees sitting on the man. Of the 80 cartons taken, 26 were recovered, but 54 cartons worth about $486 were reportedly taken by another suspect, who escaped in a white Chevrolet two-door, reports said.

Julia Leonard, 111 N. Tyler, reported an assault by a female acquaintance who accused Leonard of going out with the woman's husband.

Ms. Leonard told police the woman hit her with a stick and a rock and cut her across the fingers of one hand with a butcher knife about 4 p.m. Monday. Ms. Leonard intends to file charges, reports said.

Permian Distributing, West Highway 80, reported the theft last month of 72 cases of Coors beer worth $756 from trucks parked overnight in the lot, according to Sheriff's reports.

Reports said 40 cases were taken the night of May 30, and 32 cases were taken the night of May 31.

Eugene Darrell, 2206 Wyndwood, reported about $855 in damage to a rental house he owns at 1806 Delmar.

Damages reported Tuesday included cracked walls ($400) and a cracked bay window ($275), reports said.

Jack Bryant reported a $350 portable power plant was reported stolen Tuesday from 908 S. Weatherford. The power plant was taken from his trailer sometime Monday night, reports said.

Joseph A. Baca, 4212 Ferncliffe, told police his $260 edger was taken from his garage sometime between Friday and Monday.

A 49-year-old Midland man hospitalized Thursday with shotgun wounds has been upgraded from serious to fair condition, according to a Midland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman. Milton Glosson was allegedly shot by his wife, 41-year-old Rose Anna Glosson, who remained in county jail this morning on a $25,000 bond, charged with attempted murder.

Also in county jail this morning were three Midland men arrested Monday after they fled the scene of a burglary at the Midland Flea Market on County Road 114, reports said.

Raymond Hayes was held on a bond of $10,000 for one count of theft by exercising control over stolen property, and Joel Lee Grooms and Jeffrey Yarbrough were held on bonds of $15,000 each for burglary of a building and burglary of a habitation ($7,500 for each count), according to the Sheriff's Office.

A 13-year-old Midland boy injured June 18 when he fell out of a moving pickup remained in critical condition this morning, according to an MMH spokeswoman.

Michael Corbin, 3208 Thomas, was holding a piece of wood paneling when a gust of wind blew him out of the pickup in the 3900 block of Holiday Hill Road, according to police reports. The boy reportedly suffered serious head injuries.

MHA examines elderly housing

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

A report on what the Human Relations Council is doing to help senior citizens was given to board members of the Midland Housing Authority during its monthly meeting Tuesday afternoon.

Rita Jimenez, executive director of HRC, said the organization is planning monthly sessions at Hillcrest Manor, a housing project for low-income elderly and/or handicapped persons that is operated by the Housing Authority. To date, sessions have focused on diet and nutrition, beauty tips for senior citizens and a high blood pressure clinic. A future session will feature a retired music teacher with a musical presentation, she said.

Ms. Jimenez said the council is operated by a 12-member board and a 40-member council. "We get a lot of input and project ideas for our council," she said.

HRC, which is funded in part by the city of Midland and private donations, also contracts with the Housing Authority to review applications for the housing rehabilitation program.

In an update of the housing rehab program, Susan Howell said 14 of 16 houses approved for rehabilitation are completed. Total cost on the 16 houses will be $94,494.19 with about $5,500 left over from the $100,000 allotted for that program in this fiscal year. The money is part of the annual Community Development Block Grant program.

Ms. Howell, CD coordinator, said the remaining money would be spent on some additional repairs needed on some of the houses.

Langtry Village, a second low-income housing project being constructed east of Hillcrest Manor, is still in the first stages of having the concrete foundation poured, the board was told.

Monahans couple sentenced for transporting aliens for profit

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Monahans couple who was accused of illegally transporting Central Americans from Mexico to the United States for profit was sentenced to 10 years in federal prison on Tuesday by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

The couple, Attilano Rocha Bravo Jr., 38, and his common-law wife, Maria Arenivas "Dora" Bravo, 27, earlier had pleaded guilty to transporting several Guatemalan and Honduran citizens from Juarez, Mexico, to this country in a van for money.

"I just ask the court to have mercy on me," pleaded Bravo.

Bravo's attorney, Mike Cunningham, noted that there was "no evidence these people (the illegal aliens) were taken advantage of."

"This is not a heinous type of case," Cunningham said. "He (Bravo) is remorseful. He cooperated with the government; he didn't play games with the government."

Bunton noted that the Bravos, who are parents, had been done "well" until they started hauling illegal aliens for pay.

He admonished the couple for taking advantage of the aliens who apparently had been through hardships in raising money to pay for their illegal entry into the United States.

"I probably would feel more lenient if you were doing this for humanitarian reasons rather than for money," Bunton said.

The judge sentenced the couple to two five-year consecutive sentences.

In a similar case, Bunton ordered Fausto Beato-Brito, 23, to jail after he reported late to court on Tuesday for a hearing and failed to retain an attorney and to bring one with him as the judge had ordered.

Beato-Brito is charged with illegally transporting two citizens of the Dominican Republic from El Paso to Midland.

City council takes look at thoroughfare plans

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — City council members Tuesday morning got a look at the revised Thoroughfare Master Plan that has been formulated as a joint effort between Midland and Odessa.

Planning Department Director Judy Miller told council members the portion of the revised plan pertaining to Midland has been adopted by the planning and zoning board and the city council.

Ms. Miller explained that the purpose of the master plan is to facilitate development of areas between the two cities. In presenting the plan Tuesday, she said she was not asking for approval, but merely submitting the revised plan for consideration. Formal approval will be sought in about 30 days, she said.

Once the revised Thoroughfare Plan has the approval of both governing bodies, she said, it will have to be submitted to the Texas Highway Department for approval of the changes.

The plan presented to council members is the product of about 18 months of joint effort on the part of representatives of both cities.

Ms. Miller said major land holders in the proposed development areas are aware of the plan and will continue to have input before final adoption.

Auto 'Thrill Show' to roll tonight

From Staff Reports

The Joie Chitwood Thrill Show is currently staging its 42nd annual tour and will be appearing at 8:30 p.m. today at Twin City Speedway on Highway 80 next to Odessa Country Club.

The auto thrill show's origin as a traveling form of entertainment has been traced to 1934. For 50 years, "daredevils" thrill shows, and stunt teams have taken their exhibitions to the people. "Lucky" Teter is the man generally credited with conceiving the idea of the traveling stunt show. After his death during a performance, Joie Chitwood Sr. took the show over and introduced many new stunts. He turned over the reins in 1962 to his sons Tim and Joie Chitwood Jr.

The Chitwood drivers somehow manage to survive a series of leaps, crashes, rollovers, two-wheeled wheelies — even a blast-off flight from the mouth of a big cannon.

There's much in the show: raucous clown acts, fire-defying driving acts, reverse spins and an exhibition of multiple-car precision driving which many consider to be the most unbelievable act in the show.

Ms. Cowan said Covey had resigned and was not fired.

COVEY HAD RESIGNED from the bank in mid-August 1983, the deadline for Pandeff to deliver the stock to the bank, and entered a cat-litter business called Catus Corp. in Midland. He was succeeded by Ray Moudy, a Midland attorney who was one of the bank's organizers and who had accused Covey of "misconduct" in making the Pandeff loan. Jim McCain succeeded Moudy as bank president in July 1984, when Moudy was named the bank's chief executive officer and chairman of the board.

In cross-examining Ms. Cowan, Alexander noted that Covey's assignment was "to build this bank up" and to make it an aggressive financial institution. He described Covey as a "hustler."

Covey, the government's second witness, said he "left (the bank) on my own" to enter the cat-litter business.

Covey offered glimpses into his friendship and business dealings with Pandeff, whom, he said, was a European and is a naturalized American citizen who lived "between Geneva, Switzerland, and New York" and who owned a vineyard in France. He said Pandeff's father was a Russian banker.

"He was the gentleman behind the financing of Tred II of Arkansas," Covey said.

"Did the defendant (Pandeff) ever waltz on a security that he had promised you?" Speck asked Covey.

"Oh, no."

Covey said the Pandeff and the European investors, in a group called Acor, were behind Tred II and "needed a bank that knew what Tred II was doing."

"WE WERE a newly-chartered bank, and we needed a loan. We had money on deposit," Covey said, "and in order for the bank to make money, we put money on loan," he explained.

Covey noted he previously had loaned money to Tred II. Through participations with banks in Clarksville and Belles, he had raised $574,000 in trying to arrange a $1.8 million loan for the company. The $325,000 was raised through participations with those other banks, he said.

Covey said he loaned the $325,000 to Pandeff in July 1983, since the IRS threatened the garnishment of Tred II unless the company paid IRS $115,000 in back payroll taxes was paid. He said the funds also were to give a "financial boost" to Tred II.

"He (Pandeff) assured me he had the stock," Covey said. "He owned all the stock, and he was willing to pledge it in order to secure the $325,000," Covey said.

"He was the owner of the stock," Covey said. Covey said he had "trust and faith" in Pandeff but "never did receive the stock" and never got kickbacks or prizes "whatsoever."

"I never distrusted him."

Police go from browns to blues

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Not long after the new television shows begin this fall, the Midland Police Department will start resembling the "Hill Street Blues" crew.

On Tuesday, the Midland City Council approved exchanging the brown uniforms that have been the standard garb for many years for the "authoritative" midnight blue pants and shirts that attire the well-known television show's cast.

City Manager Jim Brown said the city staff has considered changing the color of uniforms for several years, but the timing was never right. However, after receiving a bid of $19,920 recently for the brown uniforms and a request of $37,000 more for next fiscal year, the staff decided this might be the right time to combine the money and go for the blue.

Only sworn officers will be wearing the blue uniforms with the royal blue piping down the pants legs. Meter maids, dispatchers and others that are not sworn officers will keep the brown outfits.

He noted that the midnight blue uniforms are standard, while the brown outfits had to be special ordered. "They've been wearing the brown ever since I've been here," He surmised the brown was part of a cowboy outfit and that Midland was dustier when that uniform was selected.

A survey of Midland police officers showed that all but 16 preferred the dark blue clothes, according to Brown.

Not only does the dark blue stand out in a crowd and hide the officer at night, but "psychologically, it gives more of a feeling this guy has authority," Brown said.

The city manager expects bids on the uniforms to be submitted by the July 23 council meeting. Filling that order will take several weeks, he said.

SMU banning drinking

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University will begin banning drinking in public places on campus except during special occasions, school officials announced.

The move was aimed at forcing the traditional fraternity party off campus.

"We're preparing our students — we hope — for 1986," said dean of student life James Caswell, referring to the year that a new state law goes into effect changing the drinking age to 21.

The new rules permit alcohol to be served during specified occasions, such as homecoming banquets and events attended by parents or alumni.

The new rules goes into effect in August, when the fall semester starts.

Jimmy Dell Palmer and Nabih Berri

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The family of Jimmy Dell Palmer Sr., released today by the Shiite Moslems who have held him hostage since the hijacking of TWA Flight 847, is "sitting on standby," waiting to go meet him, his son said.

"At this point, I'm overwhelmed," Jim Palmer Jr. said in a telephone interview. "But it's going to have to be a little restrained until we find out for sure."

The elder Palmer, who has a heart condition and suffers from hardening of the arteries, appeared this morning at a Beirut, Lebanon, news conference at which Shiite Amal militia leader Nabih Berri announced his release.

The Little Rock resident has been held hostage since the June 14 hijacking of a TWA jetliner on a flight from Athens, Greece, to Rome.

Travelers find tightened airport security

Associated Press

A New York-bound jet was ordered to return to Miami when officials realized a passenger had hurriedly jumped off the plane before takeoff, leaving luggage aboard. Dogs sniffed the baggage of travelers in San Francisco. And in Dallas, armed guards were stationed at the airport.

Across the country, travelers are finding tightened airport security in the wake of the seizure of TWA Flight 847, deadly explosions at Tokyo and Frankfurt airports and the downing of an Air-India jumbo jet — all within 10 days.

Stepped-up security measures at Miami International Airport caused tower officials to order the return of Eastern Airlines Flight 240 Monday night.

Eastern spokeswoman Paula Musto said the plane was ordered back and a police bomb squad called in to search the luggage of a passenger who hurriedly left the plane just before takeoff, saying he was ill.

A search turned up no weapons or explosives and the plane was allowed to leave again at 3:45 a.m. Tuesday, after a seven-hour delay, Ms. Musto said. "We've really tightened security. Everybody's alert to anything unusual."

Security at O'Hare International Airport — the world's busiest — was already being updated but it has been accelerated because of recent incidents, said Larry O'Shield, deputy commissioner for aviation.

"This is being done not basically because of the terrorists," he said. "It's because we fear a copycat because of all the press. What it generally does is motivate a sick-minded individual to try to beat the system."

Travelers have mixed feelings.

"A lot of people are complaining," said Robert Crawford, a checkpoint supervisor for Lansell Protective Agency, which handles security for People Express Airlines at Newark, N.J. "You'd be surprised. They don't like the idea of being really searched thoroughly."

Karl Muecke, 66, of Salt Lake City, said he had to open up his briefcase at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport because coins set off a metal detector.

"They looked all through it," said Muecke. "I was very pleased they did so."

Joe Lanciotti, a spokesman for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, said more police officers have been assigned to Kennedy, La Guardia and Newark airports.

Some people have been asked to produce identification outside terminals, he said. "That's part of that high-profile appearance in key areas."

At Dallas-Fort Worth, American Airlines has posted armed guards at service entries that formerly had only an intercom system. Freight from Europe is being delayed for one or two days, officials said.

At San Francisco International Airport, more security agents have been hired and spot inspections of checked baggage have been increased.

"We are in a significantly advanced stage of alert," said airport director Lou Turpen.

Police in pairs and trios were observed in all terminals, taking note of luggage sitting by itself for more than a few minutes and eyeing the crowds for anything suspicious. Specially trained dogs on leashes sniffed at baggage.

"I'd like to see them (the police) carrying rifles," said China-bound passenger Jessie Crook of Columbus, Ohio, saying she wasn't at all unhappy at the presence of the officers and the possibility of a delay.

Officials at some airports expressed satisfaction with their precautions, but still gave pep talks to security forces.

At Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport, the world's second busiest, spokesman John Brader said, "If we could beef up security, we would. The only way we could make this airport completely secure is to just close it down."

Man didn't know father-in-law's secret

WASHINGTON (AP) — In hindsight, Mark Snyder says, it seems obvious that his estranged wife's father — John A. Walker Jr. — encouraged her to pursue a military communications career to help his alleged spying for the Soviet Union.

But Snyder, who is desperately trying to find his wife now and to recover their 5-year-old son, says he never knew of his father-in-law's alleged secret life as a spy.

"My impression was he was sneaky," said Snyder. "I thought he was strange. I never knew he was involved in any espionage at all — I knew he was probably involved in something illegal, but I didn't care to know."

Snyder, 26, is separated from Laura Walker Snyder. She said in interviews last week on the Christian Broadcasting Network that her father had nearly persuaded her to spy for him while she was serving as a communications specialist in the Army.

Snyder, in interviews last week and again Tuesday, said he didn't know that Walker had tried to recruit his wife to spy. He denied Laura Snyder's contention — made on the Christian Broadcasting Network's "700 Club" television program — that he had blackmailed her, threatening to reveal the Walker family secret in order to keep custody of son Christopher.

"That's garbage. Totally false," Snyder said.

Walker, 47, of Norfolk, Va., was arrested May 20 and charged with selling Navy secrets to the Soviet Union and operating a spy ring that the FBI says may have gone on since 1965. Also charged are his son, Navy seaman Michael L. Walker, John's brother Arthur J. Walker, 50, of Virginia Beach, Va., a retired Navy officer working for a defense contractor, and John's close friend Jerry A. Whitworth, 45, a retired Navy radio-man from Davis, Calif.

Snyder and his wife met, married and had their child while both were in the Army at Fort Polk, La., in 1979 and 1980.

John Walker and Whitworth both had access to sensitive military information while serving in a variety of communications posts. Snyder said he didn't suspect it then but now believes his wife was led by her father to seek a career in Army communications.

"I'm sure of it, for a career decision. No doubt in my mind," he said. "It's obvious, with hindsight."

Astronomers glimpse birth of comet's atmosphere

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — Astronomers say Halley's comet has given them their first look at the birth of any comet's atmosphere and their findings support the prevailing theory that the unearthly visitor is a "dusty snowball."

Based on observations of the comet and its changes in brightness, the ice-and-dust nucleus of Halley's sprouted a coma, or gas-and-dust atmosphere, in October, said Susan Wyckoff, of Arizona State University.

The findings by researchers from Arizona State and the Institut d'Astrophysique in Paris were presented Tuesday at the annual meeting of the Astronomical Society of the Pacific. Wyckoff said the study will be published next month in the British journal Nature.

"This is the first time we've been able to follow a comet through the transition from a bare nucleus to the onset and development of its atmosphere," said Michael Belton, an astronomer at Kitt Peak National Observatory outside Tucson.

Belton said other astronomers also observed the transition, but the Wyckoff group is the first to publish findings. Halley's comet will be visible to the naked eye by late January.

NATION IN BRIEF

Farm raffle fizzling

UNIONVILLE, Mo. (AP) — Despite a $1,000-a-month public relations campaign and national publicity, Bud and Hazel Hirst aren't finding enough takers to make it worthwhile raffling off their 476-acre farm.

The couple, both 53, had hoped to raise $400,000, enough to pay off their $200,000 debt on the place and give them a stake when they move on.

But so far, Hirst said Tuesday, only about 15,000 people have sent in $10 for a copy of Mrs. Hirst's book of poems, "Bitter Harvest," about the trials of farm life, and a chance to win the farm.

The Hirsts have been running their Bitter Harvest Great Farm Sweepstakes for a year. It was to have ended July 4 with a drawing in the town square of this farming community of 2,200 near the Missouri-Iowa line.

When interest in the sweepstakes declined earlier this year, the Hirsts decided to postpone the drawing until Labor Day, which is also their 34th wedding anniversary.

Rural health caucus formed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rural Americans make up nearly one-third of the U.S. population but must make do with just 12 percent of the nation's doctors to treat their ailments, says a group of senators banding together in a new "Rural Health Caucus."

The senators said Tuesday that in the face of that apparent doctor shortage, rural populations are vulnerable to a higher incidence of modern chronic diseases because they are typically poorer and older than Americans in cities.

Thus, said one organizer, Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., "our caucus is being formed to make sure that rural America's special needs are heard as Congress establishes health care policy."

Judge rules against Klan

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Evidence gathered for a lawsuit against Ku Klux Klansmen involved in a bloody clash with black demonstrators also may be used in a criminal case rising from the same incident, a federal appeals court says.

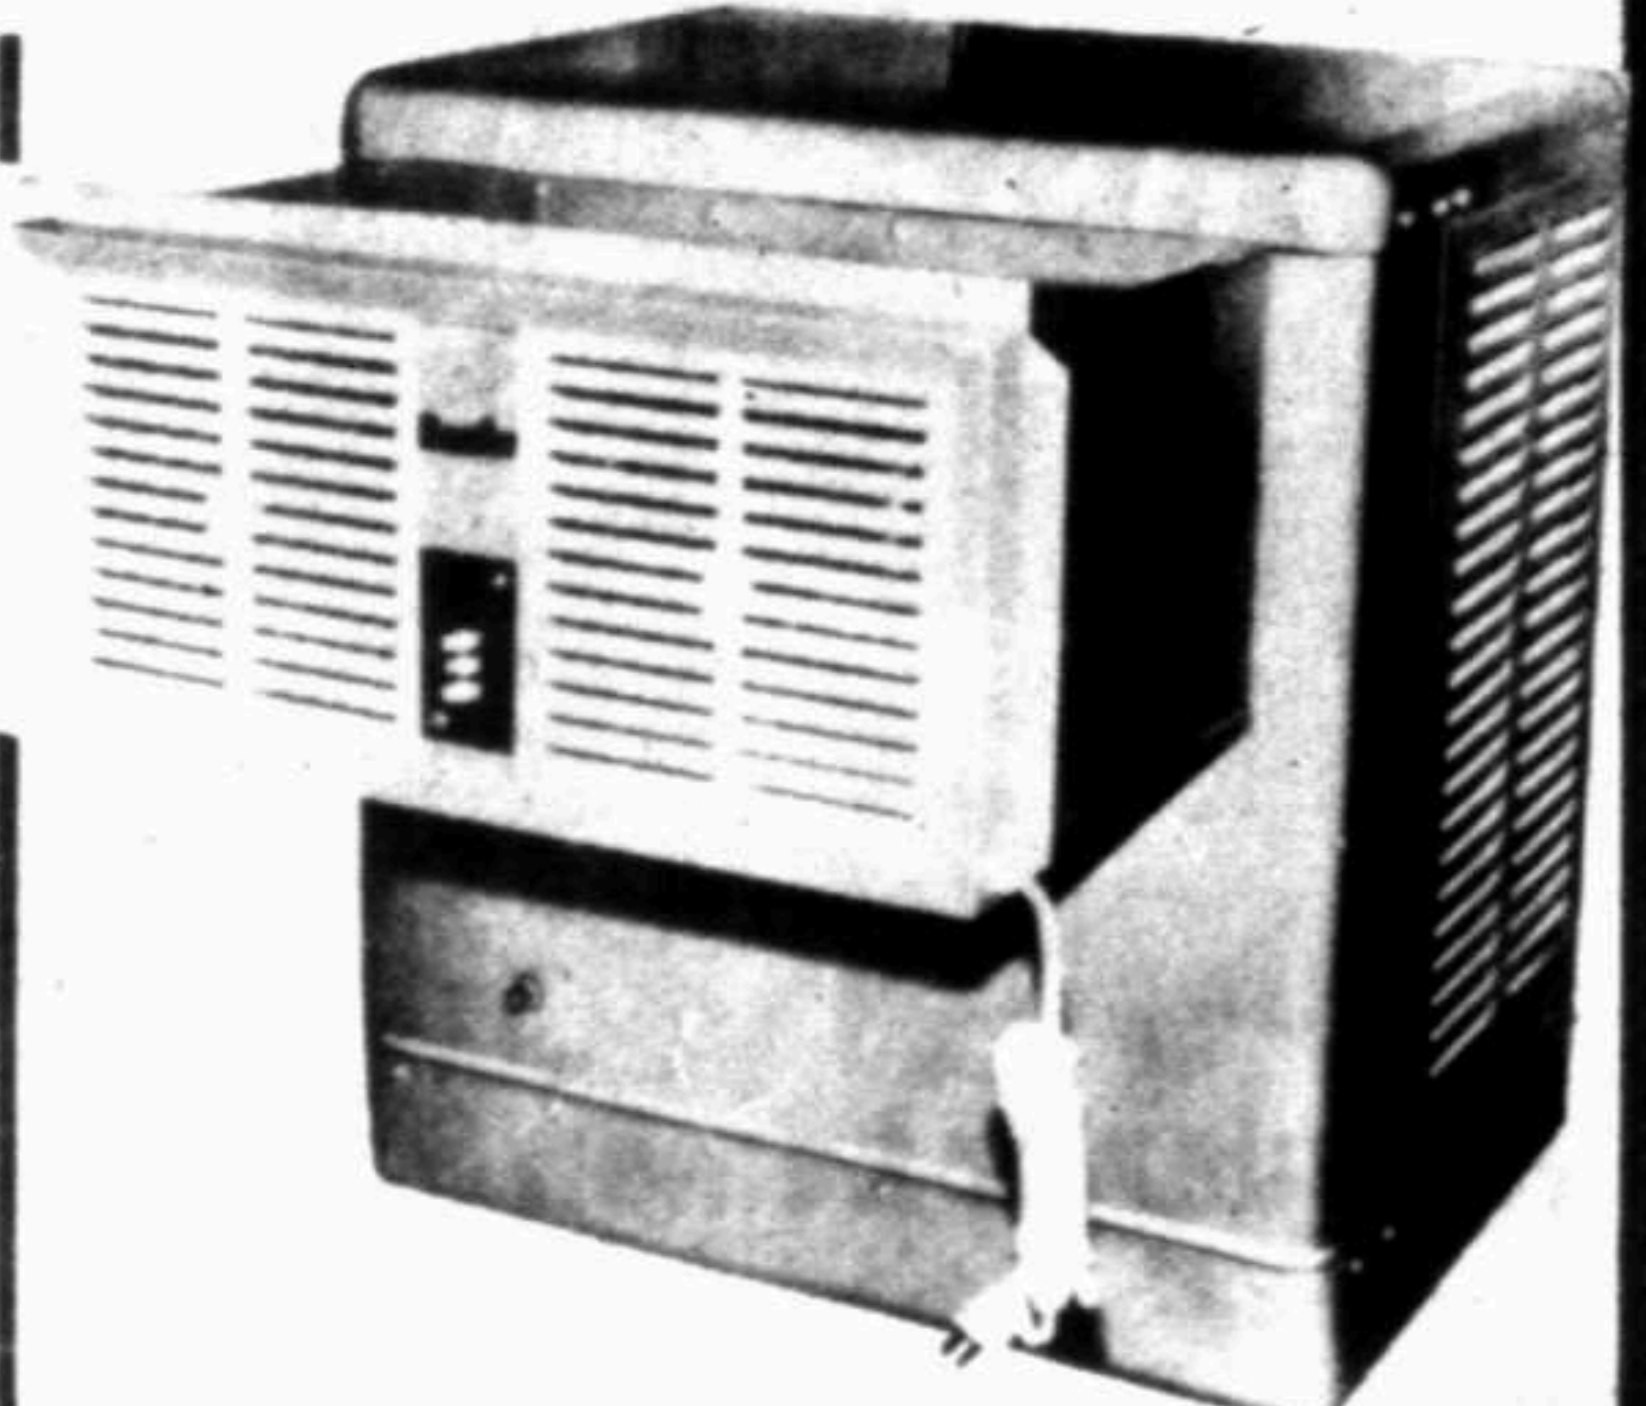

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Tuesday overturned a ruling by U.S. District Judge William M. Acker Jr. of Birmingham, who had said that sworn statements taken from Klansmen could not be used in the government's criminal suit because different rules applied to the taking of statements.

STATE IN BRIEF

For 'security,' Cauble moved from Big Spring to La Tuna

EL PASO (AP) — Rex Cauble, millionaire rancher and owner of the Cutter Bill western wear stores, has been transferred to La Tuna Federal Correctional Institute near here so he can be provided greater security than was available at the minimum-security facility at Big Spring, officials said.

Cauble, 71, of Denton County, arrived Friday at La Tuna to continue serving a 5-year sentence for a 1982 racketeering conviction, prison officials said Tuesday.

Bill Messersmith, executive assistant to the warden, said Cauble was completing orientation at La Tuna and had not been assigned to one of the many manufacturing jobs at the prison.

Cauble was convicted of masterminding a marijuana smuggling ring that authorities said brought more than 150,000 pounds of the drug into the United States in 1977 and 1978.

Woman sought in scheme to sell baby in Texarkana

TEXARKANA (AP) — A woman wanted on felony fraud warrants in Texas borrowed the 18-month-old son of a woman staying at a shelter for battered women, purportedly to enter him in a beauty contest, but then tried to sell him for adoption, authorities said.

Police have issued bulletins to law enforcement officers in both Texas and Arkansas to be on the lookout for two, perhaps three, women posing as social workers and seeking to place children for adoption.

The adoption scheme failed, police said, when a woman who agreed to pay a $30 "adoption fee" for the young boy called the battered women's shelter Monday to inquire why the child hadn't been delivered to her yet.

Security tightened at Texas airports

DALLAS (AP) — Recent terrorist actions against commercial airlines are the reason security measures have been tightened at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport and Houston Intercontinental, officials said.

Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., on Monday asked the Federal Aviation Administration to examine security at all U.S. airports, especially those such as the Dallas-Fort Worth and Houston facilities, which have expanded international service and are Texas' two largest airports.

At Dallas-Fort Worth, armed guards have been assigned to service entries that previously were covered by an intercom system, American Airlines officials said. Also, freight from Europe is being delayed for one or two days, officials said.

In Houston, Intercontinental Airport manager James Ellingsworth said security agents are using metal detectors and X-ray machines to check items twice as often as the devices are usually used.

But airport officials said it is too soon to begin extreme safety measures such as checking every piece of luggage by hand or by X-ray, which is done at Israel's Ben Gurion International Airport.

Checking every bag is expensive and would bring flight service "to a screeching halt," said Joe Dealey, spokesman for the Dallas-Fort Worth airport.

Vandals damage club's golf course

CHILDRESS (AP) — Authorities say they have made no arrests in connection with a vandalism spree at Childress Country Club that caused more than $100,000 worth of damage and forced a golf tournament to be cancelled.

Childress County Sheriff Claude Lane said 15 teen-agers ranging from 15 to 17 had been questioned about the vandalism but none had been arrested Tuesday.

"At this time I don't feel like there was any planned thing. It was just spontaneous," Lane said.

He said charges of burglary in addition to vandalism would probably be brought in connection with the incident.

Charges could be up to a month away from being filed because of the extensive nature of the investigation, the sheriff added.

Lane estimated the damage at $100,000 to $125,000. All the suspects are believed to be teenagers living in the area.

Course officials said that 31 golf carts of club members and 11 carts belonging to out of town competitors were damaged or destroyed.
