Panama assembly sides with Noriega

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The National Assembly today convened an emergency session and ousted President Eric Arturo Delvalle after he tried to fire the nation's military chief and de facto leader, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

In a 10-minute session, 38 legislators voted Delvalle out of office and accused him of promoting U.S. interference in domestic affairs by trying to force Noriega out.

The Cabinet immediately named a new chief of state, Education Minister Manuel Solis Palma, who was sworn in before dawn. Devalle called the moves "legally despicable."

Opposition leaders were meeting today to discuss a possible national strike and the university was closed, but banks and stores opened and there was no sign of unrest.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur Davis said the U.S. government would not recognize Delvalle's replacement.

Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci said it was premature to discuss military intervention. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the United States is not considering military intervention because the Reagan administration does not want to "unduly intrude upon" Panamanian affairs.

Noriega, under indictment in the United States on drug trafficking charges, controls 15,000 soldiers and police in Panama.

In an attempt to assert civilian control over the government, Delvalle tried Thursday night to get the military to replace the military chief. It refused.

Drivers honked their horns and some waved white handerchiefs immediately after Delvalle announced his plan. Both have been signs of opposition to Noriega, who was the target of nationwide protests and strikes last summer.

Carlos Ernesto Gonzales de la Lastra, a spokesman for the opposition National Civic Crusade coalition, said today in a telephone interview, "The National Civic Crusade and other opposition leaders are meeting to reach an agreement, with the intention of carrying out a national strike." He declined to give more details.

Officials of the National University of Panama closed the school and said it was to prevent disturbances. Secondary and primary schools were out for vacation.

Delvalle called his ouster "something legally despicable that only fulfills a formality in the mind of those who want to grasp power at any cost."

In an interview with "CBS This Morning," Delvalle urged a trade embargo against Panama but said he opposed U.S. military intervention.

The U.S. Southern Command has 10,000 troops and 20,000 dependents in Panama.

Assemblies of God may give Swaggart harsher punishment

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Leaders of the Assemblies of God resumed their discussions today on whether to impose harsher punishment for fallen TV evangelist Jimmy Swaggart, as hundreds of people called to complain that a recommended three-month suspension was too lenient.

The church's Executive Presbytery met again today at 8 a.m. after spending 7½ hours behind closed doors Thursday concerning the admission of moral failure by its most prominent minister, said spokeswoman Juleen Turnage.

Mrs. Turnage said the final decision on what will happen to Swaggart may not be determined for weeks. She said the next regular meeting of the Executive Presbytery is March 29, hinting that a decision may not be announced until then.

Meanwhile, the companion of a prostitute who claims she performed pornographic acts for Swaggart for about a year said he was negotiating to sell her story to the mass media.

"This is a shot for me and a shot for her," said John Martinez, a carpet cleaner who said he met Debra Murphree, 28, in West Palm Beach, Fla., about four months ago. "It's the American way — see an opportunity and jump on it."

Martinez said he discussed a $100,000 contract to tell Ms. Murphree' story with the National Enquirer and also contacted People magazine, ABC-TV's Nightline and other media worldwide, The Palm Beach Post reported Thursday.

Enquirer President and Editor Iain Calder confirmed the tabloid was talking with Martinez, but would say nothing more.

Swaggart, who was not at Thursday's meeting, has not made a public appearance since Sunday, when he tearfully told his congregation in Baton Rouge, La., that he had committed an unspecified sin.

The evangelist, whose Jimmy Swaggart World Ministries gives $12 million a year to the Assemblies of God, has been known for his harsh denunciation of sexual lapses by other preachers, including PTL ministry founder Jim Bakker.

The church's 13-member governing body was considering a recommendation by the Louisiana district that Swaggart be barred from preaching for three months and undergo counseling during a supervised two-year rehabilitation.

Mrs. Turnage said the international headquarters here has been swamped with up to 300 calls an hour since Swaggart's televised confession Sunday. About half of the callers complained that the Louisiana recommendation was too lenient, she said, while others were generally supportive.

Phone firm to decide policy for sexually explicit messages

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

The brouhaha over the sexually explicit messages available long distance to local residents is becoming a "headache" for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., a spokeswoman said today.

Thursday night, a meeting was held at Emerson Elementary to give parents more information about Bell's 976-exchange telephone system that includes the sexually explicit recordings.

■ Related photos — Page 1B

Although the 976 system is not available locally, children in the Midland-Odessa area can hear the messages if they dial the numbers long distance.

Bell Tuesday began offering free blocking service to the cities where the numbers are available locally — Dallas, Houston, Fort Worth and San Antonio.

General Telephone Co. will soon begin the free blocking system in Dallas, as well.

Bell is looking at three options to deal with the problem, said Darlene Gifford, Bell's area manager.

The phone company will either block the service statewide if a customer wishes, refuse to bill the customer for the charges owed to the sexually explicit message sponsor or offer the sexually explicit messages in a separate bank of exchanges available by subscription only, Ms. Gifford said.

"Our company stands to lose money, but our corporate image is more important than the money," Ms. Gifford said.

A social worker from Glenwood Psychiatric Hospital, James Hare, also spoke of the potential psychological dangers children are exposed to after listening to the messages.

The messages — which go into intimacies dealing with sado-masochism, having sex with children and item-by-item accounts of sexual encounters — offer teens a magic or fantastic image of sex they might not be able to distinguish from reality, Hare said.

"Sometimes younger teens get entranced by these messages and act them out on siblings or little neighbor children," Hare said.

Other long distance carriers such as ClayDesta, MCI and Sprint don't process the 976 system numbers on their phone lines, officials said.

Randy Kidwell, president of ClayDesta Communications in Midland, said today his firm stopped processing the calls over a year ago, when he saw upset parents not wanting to pay their phone bills after their children had run up big 976 tabs.

"People were abusing the privilege and then the parents were unhappy. We felt that it was easier to turn off the option so they wouldn't have the capability," Kidwell said.

Bell will decide within the month what it intends to do.

The Texas PTA is urging Bell to adopt the subscription method.

Current justices lukewarm on new plan

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A new plan for changing the way Texans choose their judges earned luke warm reviews from two Supreme Court justices and comparisons to "Russia and other Communist countries" from a third justice Thursday.

Three opponents of the current elected system took the "s" out of merit selection Thursday in unveiling their new plan for merit election.

The trio — former Supreme Court Chief Justice John Hill, Rep. Bruce Gibson, D-Godley, and Rep. Terrel Smith, R-Austin — said their revised plan would increase public participation in the process, ensure that no new judges assume the bench without the voters' approval and force sitting judges to "stay within the mainstream of judicial thought."

"I think this will produce good results for the state," said Hill, who left the high court in January to campaign for a merit-oriented procedure of choosing Texas judges.

The plan would apply only to judges on the Supreme Court, Court of Criminal Appeals and the state's 14 regional courts of appeals but not to district, county or municipal trial judges. To take effect, it would require a constitutional amendment that would need the approval of two-thirds of the Legislature and of the voters.

Here is how the system would work:

— Judges who wish to seek another term on the bench would file for re-election in the February before their term ends and face non-partisan yes-or-no elections in November. If the voters reject any judges, their seats would be filled as if they had resigned or died in mid-term.

— When judges die or resign mid-term, a bi-partisan panel of nine lawyers and six non-lawyers would recommend three nominees to the governor. The panel — appointed by state leaders, the State Bar of Texas

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The political establishment is astonished over how easily Republican presidential hopeful Pat Robertson has sown the wind without reaping the whirlwind.

Political experts say a string of controversial pronouncements that would have damaged most politicians has only strengthened Robertson's ties with his natural following, conservative Christian fundamentalists.

"My guess is that Pat is deliberately playing to his South Carolina constituency," says University of Virginia sociologist Jeffrey Hadden, a Robertson biographer. "He doesn't care if folks in New York or Chicago or Los Angeles think he's crazy at this point. If he can get the press bashing him a bit, it would help ignite his followers."

But Republican consultant Ed Mahe disagrees: "I can't believe this reflects any kind of strategy. What we have here is a talk-show host here who doesn't understand the power of talk; after all, when you're a talk-show host you toss these things out and who cares."

Two soldiers leapt from burning copter as it crashed into field

AP Laserphoto

Army personnel walk by the wreckage of the twin-rotor Army helicopter which crashed into a North Texas pasture Thursday near Chico, Texas.

CHICO, Texas (AP) — An Army helicopter nosedived into a cow pasture and skidded about 75 feet before it broke apart in a sheet of fire, killing 10 men and seriously burning eight others, authorities and witnesses said.

Two soldiers leaped about 35 feet to the ground from the burning twin-rotor CH-47D Chinook before it crashed about 50 miles from Fort Worth on Thursday, said state Department of Public Safety Sgt. Robert Rankin. One of the soldiers died.

The other soldier said that a fire had broken out at the rear of the helicopter based at Fort Sill, Okla., and that those aboard had tried to move to the front to get away from the flames, Rankin said.

Horse Racing Association focus of suit

By STEVE LEVINE

STATE

AUSTIN — Accusing the Texas Horse Racing Association of masking the source of $1 million spent in support of the fall referendum that legalized gambling, Common Cause of Texas filed a civil suit Thursday to force the group to reveal its backers.

The self-styled "citizens' lobby" also asked Attorney General Jim Mattox to join the suit, a move that could subject the Horse Racing Association to more than $3 million in fines.

"The very essence of campaign finance disclosure laws in Texas is that full and accurate reporting be made regarding the source of campaign contributions," Common Cause Executive Director John Hildreth said at a Capitol news conference announcing the suit. "Evasion of that standard makes a mockery of the law and reflects contempt for the public's right to know who finances political campaigns."

Ricky Knox, director of the Horse Racing Association and its political action committee, Texans for Economic Development, denied the charges. "We haven't done anything wrong," he said.

The lawsuit focuses on $1,018,177 that the Horse Racing Association contributed to Texans for Economic Development during the fall campaign. State law allows non-profit corporations to contribute funds in support or opposition of a referendum measure only if that money "is the corporation's own property," the lawsuit says.

Hildreth charged that the association "served merely as a conduit for those contributions, that they never really became corporate property." He alleged that the association wanted to hide the source of the funds, some of which came from out of state, "so that that would not become an issue in the election."

Knox said about one-fourth of the association's 4,000 members live outside of Texas, and the group regularly raises money by auctioning off breedings donated by out-of-state horsemen. Asked if disclosing the source of the funds would have affected the election, Knox said, "Not a bit."

"We checked with the secretary of state's office on our filings, Texans for Economic Development did, and the secretary of state's office said they saw nothing wrong," he added.

The lawsuit names Mattox as an "involuntary plaintiff" in the matter, which means he may get involved if he wants to. State law permits Mattox to sue for damages equal to three times the amount of any illegal contribution.

"We don't know what we're going to do yet," said Mattox spokesman Ron Dusek, adding that the office would probably make a decision today. Involvement in the controversial issue could have political consequences for Mattox, who is considering a 1990 race for governor.

The lawsuit asks the court to order the Horse Racing Association to open its books to Common Cause and release the names and addresses of its donors to Texans for Economic Development and to order Texans for Economic Development to file revised campaign finance reports with the secretary of state showing the names and addresses of the donors.

Retirement home shooting leaves five hurt

ARLINGTON (AP) — About 16 people gathered for a board meeting at a retirement home scrambled for cover when a former resident walked into the room and started shooting, authorities said.

The 79-year-old man, who apparently was disgruntled about being evicted, opened fire with a rifle Thursday, wounding four residents and sending a fifth into cardiac arrest, said Arlington police spokesman Dee Anderson.

Four people suffered minor gunshot wounds in the shooting at the Masonic Home for the Aged, he said.

A fifth person, Willie Joe Wright, 67, suffered a heart attack and was in critical condition at Arlington Memorial Hospital late Thursday, hospital officials said.

The man surrendered peacefully shortly after the shooting, Anderson said.

"Apparently, they had a board meeting and one former resident, who was apparently disgruntled, walked into the board room and started shooting" at the 15 to 16 people gathered there, Anderson said.

Officials at the man's current residence, the Arlington Villa retirement home, said they were shocked to hear of the shooting.

"He is a good resident, very congenial and sociable," said Arlington Villa administrator Gennie Pace.

Ms. Pace said the man had been admitted Dec. 1, 1987, to the Arlington Villa.

The man was being held late Thursday on investigative charges of attempted murder at Arlington City Jail, said Arlington police Officer Bob Westbrook.

Anderson said the suspect had lived at the Masonic home for three years, but was evicted in September 1987 for breaking rules.

After the shooting, the suspect went to a kitchen area, police said.

"When the officers went to a kitchen in the rear of the building, the man still had one rifle. He very calmly gave up when the officers asked him to surrender," Anderson said. "He did not give any information to police."

Both weapons were .22-caliber semiautomatic rifles, Anderson said.

Retirement home employees referred all questions to board chairman Sam Hilburn, but refused to say where he could be contacted. Shortly after the incident, home officials put the buildings and grounds of the home off limits to visitors.

Injured in the shooting were Frank Smith, 77, who was treated and released from Arlington Memorial Hospital; Eldon Brooks, 54, John Thompson, 49, and Dorothy Heath, 67, all of whom were in fair condition early Friday.

UH branch site of shooting

HOUSTON (AP) — A student wrestled a gun away from officers as he was being taken into custody and opened fire, wounding two campus police officers and a maintenance worker, authorities said.

The 28-year-old student remained at large Thursday, while the three men were recovering in two Houston hospitals, police said.

The suspect began shooting after he was taken into custody Thursday morning in connection with a disturbance in a college dormitory, police said. During a scuffle as he was being handcuffed, the suspect grabbed an officer's .357-caliber gun.

"I struggled with him and eventually I went to the ground," said University of Houston-Downtown officer Jim Durbin, 32, shot in the arm. He was listed in good condition Thursday at Ben Taub Hospital.

"I started to get up and he was leaving and he turned and pointed the gun at me and said he was going to kill all of us, and I dropped back down on the floor, and expected the shot," Durbin said. "When I looked up he was running off."

Also injured in the attack was UH-Downtown Police Chief Joe Norwood, 55, who received a gunshot wound to the head; and Juan Perez, a member of a cleaning crew hired by the university, who was shot in the chest. Both were listed in serious but stable condition Thursday night at Hermann Hospital.

India's royalty retains old style

GWALIOR, India (AP) — The once-glittering world of India's maharajas is frayed at the edges, but many former princes and princesses cling to the old ways, trying to retain the grandeur of another time.

The nawabs and nizams still dress in gold tissue capes on occasion, wear pearl and emerald necklaces, own horses and call each other "Your Royal Highness." A troop of liveried servants hangs on every word they utter.

Polo and poker fill their idle hours. Much of the wealth is still visible, despite heavy taxes imposed by the Indian government.

Princely states were absorbed into the Indian nation within three years of independence from Britain in 1947. The government allowed the ex-rulers to retain their "privy purses," or special allowances, until 1971 when the 279 rajas, maharajas and nawabs were stripped of their titles.

The transition from the glory of yesterday to the hard realities of modern India has been been smooth for some and difficult for others.

But for most, it is not yet a riches to rags story. Many families maintain a lifestyle of Mercedes-Benzes, posh bungalows and socializing in top clubs of London and Paris. Their sons still go to Eton and Harrow, the prestigious schools in England.

Gayatri Devi, the 68-year-old maharani of Jaipur, still lives in one of the family's three palaces. But the grandest, Rambagh Palace where the James Bond "Octopussy" adventure was filmed, is leased to a hotel chain. Foreign tourists compete for reservations and hope the maharani will drop by for tea.

The Rajmata or royal mother — for Gayatri Devi is still called that, although royal titles were abolished in 1971 — spends half the year in Europe to escape the desert heat of Jaipur and surrounding Rajasthan state.

Politics have attracted many princely families: at least 30 of the 544 seats in the Lok Sabha, the governing lower house of Parliament, are filled by scions of bygone royalty.

Madhavrao Scindia, son of the last maharaja of Gwalior, is the minister of railways in Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's government.

The suave, Oxford-educated Scindia was the host for the royal remnants' biggest show in post-independence India: The marriage Dec. 11 between the houses of Kashmir and Gwalior, two of the largest princely states of a bygone era.

Rusty swords were polished and jewel chests were opened for the event, condemned by some newspapers and politicians as a vulgar display of wealth in a country with an annual per capita income of $270.

In Gwalior, a once-powerful kingdom, members of more than 20 former royal families were among the 40,000 guests for the wedding of Scindia's daughter Chitrangada to Vikramaditya Singh, son of the last maharaja of Kashmir.

Vikramaditya arrived at the Scindia's Jai Vilas Palace in a horse-drawn silver carriage. A caparisoned elephant painted with the royal insignia led the wedding procession.

Forty years of independence and democracy seemed to have made little difference to the thousands of villagers who attended the wedding.

But the old days have long gone for some former princes and princesses.

Hearst News Service

The nation's homeless population grows so swiftly that semiofficial estimates now range from 300,000 to 3 million. But no one knows for sure.

The federal government isn't officially counting the nation's homeless. Government officials, university researchers, charitable organizations and advocacy groups can't arrive at even a common definition of homeless.

"It's impossible to quantify that which is impossible to quantify," said Mitch Snyder of the Community for Creative Non-Violence, which operates a 1,700-bed shelter in Washington, D.C., the nation's largest.

"The debate over numbers is a diversion," Snyder said. "You can't walk out of your house, anywhere, without seeing a homeless person. Whole families in chicken coops. Bag ladies on Rodeo Drive. People in caves in Appalachia."

But Peter Rossi of the University of Massachusetts insists there's a "strong need to have a number, if only so you can say it authoritatively and shout it loud enough."

The 300,000 estimate is based on interviews and reports collected in 1984 from 60 cities by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. The 3 million estimate comes from the National Coalition for the Homeless.

"No matter what the figure, it's too many for the most wealthy country in the world," says Louise Stark of Arizona State University, president of the National Coalition for the Homeless. "The prognosis is not good. Unless something drastic is done, by the turn of the century we'll have 18 million people who can't afford housing."

Among the problems of counting the homeless is the debate over how "homeless" should be defined or classified.

Rossi counted only the "literal homeless" in two sweeps of a 50-block district of downtown Chicago in the fall of 1985 and spring of 1986. His investigators walked the streets from 1 to 6 a.m., interviewing everyone they could find in bus stations, cars and doorways.

"We'd ask them if they had a place to go," he said. "This doesn't include people with extremely low incomes or low family ties or others with a high risk of becoming literally homeless, but it least it tells you how many people at a given point in time don't have anything over their heads."

commencement — (noun) When you graduate from high school, you'll have an opportunity to participate in a "commencement." During this ceremony, degrees or diplomas are granted or bestowed. "Commencement" also means the act, fact or time of "commencing" or beginning. There can be a "commencement" of an era, season, career or event. "Commencement" is based on the verb "commence," which can be traced to the earlier Latin words "com" and "initiare," meaning to begin. It's no wonder that the ceremony for receiving a diploma is called "commencement," since it represents a new beginning. Graduates will enter a new phase of their lives by beginning a career or continuing their education.

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff Reports

Cloudy skies and a shift to northerly winds are expected in the Permian Basin through Saturday, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight will be mostly cloudy with a low in the mid-40s. Winds will be from the south 5-15 mph, shifting to the northwest after midnight.

Saturday will be mostly cloudy with a high in the mid-60s, with north winds expected 10-15 mph.

The record high for a February 25 was 83, set in 1986, 18 degrees warmer than Thursday's high of 65. The record low for today's date was 14 set in 1934, almost 40 degrees higher than today's low of 53.

STATE

Low level moisture from the Gulf of Mexico and high level moisture from the Pacific Ocean will keep skies cloudy across most of Texas through Saturday.

Forecasters say that although there had been no precipitation reported around the state by dawn today, they expected some later in the day, tonight and possibly Saturday morning.

The precipitation will likely be triggered by an upper level disturbance scheduled to pass across the state today and tonight.

Forecasters said the precipitation would likely be in the form of drizzle in the Concho Valley and Permian Basin and thunderstorms in the Trans-Pecos area.

There may be some widely scattered light rain or drizzle tonight across South Texas and there may be some scattered showers Saturday in South Texas.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 40s and 50s, ranging from the 30s in the Panhandle to the lower 60s along the coast in South Texas.

NATION

Isolated snow showers lingered in the Northeast today and a few light rain showers dampened Northern California, but fair weather prevailed across the nation.

A weak storm moving across Lake Ontario was expected to drop 3 to 6 inches of snow on New York state east of the lake, and a snow squall warning was in effect.

Clouds extended from California to Texas and over Washington state and Oregon. Partly cloudy skies prevailed from the Great Lakes to the middle and northern Atlantic Coast.

Today's forecast called for scattered snow showers across eastern Upper Michigan, the eastern Great Lakes and upper Ohio Valley; rain showers over the southern Pacific Coast and mild weather for most of the nation, with mostly sunny or partly cloudy skies.

PANAMA

The White House called for Noriega's resignation after his indictment in Florida on Feb. 5. Delvalle's attempt to oust Noriega, announced in a nationwide broadcast Thursday night, received immediate backing from the United States.

"At this time, we want to reiterate our unqualified support for civilian constitutional rule in Panama," Fitzwater said.

But Noriega and his supporters moved quickly.

The National Assembly was called into session, although opposition lawmakers in the 67-member legislature boycotted the 1 a.m. meeting. Both Delvalle and Vice President Roderick Esquivel were removed from office.

Noriega, who says he is innocent of all charges, did not comment publicly on the events.

Delvalle said of his opponents, "They will not receive acceptance from any country that takes pride in being democratic. I continue to feel that I am president of the republic."

From his home, Delvalle said he asked Noriega to "retire" as soon as the U.S. indictments were announced, but the general refused.

"He (Delvalle) is going first," said Macias, flanked by senior officers at the Defense Forces' central garrison.

In its resolution, the National Assembly said Delvalle violated the law in removing Noriega and noted that Esquivel had abandoned his post in September without resigning.

The resolution said Delvalle mentioned U.S. charges against Noriega "with the object of permitting the intervention of the government of the United States in the internal affairs of Panama," damaging national sovereignty and endangering national security.

Delvalle said earlier that Col. Marcos Justines, the chief of staff, would replace Noriega. Justines refused.

Justines told television reporters: "We have been conversing with him (Delvalle) constantly, and he knows that our position has been that there is too much American interference in this Panamanian affair."

The U.S. indictments accuse Noriega of using his authority to let Colombian drug traffickers use Panama as a base for smuggling cocaine and marijuana into the United States. The charges said Noriega received a healthy kickback from drug profits.

Later, at his home, the president told The Associated Press, that he ordered Noriega's dismissal "for the health of this country."

U.S. not weighing military options, Fitzwater says

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said today that the United States is giving no consideration to military intervention in Panama because the Reagan administration does not want to "unduly intrude upon" that country's affairs.

"We're waiting for the situation to sort itself out," Fitzwater told reporters at a briefing dominated questions about by the governmental crisis in Panama, where President Eric Arturo Delvalle failed in an attempt to oust Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Earlier in the day, Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci, interviewed on a U.S. Information Agency program, also said that "it would be premature at this time" to discuss an American military move, although Carlucci also said that he was "disappointed at this turn of event."

Fitzwater confirmed that Delvalle, whose position is largely ceremonial, had told the United States of his plans, although the spokesman did not say when the notification had come, and acknowledged that Delvalle had consulted with American officials at the U.S. Embassy in Panama City.

"We have had discussions with Delvalle over the past several days. We assured him of our position, which is that we would like to see a peaceful transition to civilian rule," the spokesman said.

Asked whether the United States had encouraged Delvalle to dismiss Noriega, who has been indicted by a federal grand jury in this country on charges of drug trafficking, Fitzwater replied:

"I can't elaborate on any of the specific conversations. We did not urge him to take this action. He did it on his own...

"We have a precarious position. Yes, we want him (Noriega) to stand trial. Yes, we want a civilian government in Panama. Yet, we want to be careful not to unduly intrude upon the affairs of Panama."

Another U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the United States would "take steps" if Americans are endangered in Panama but also said military intervention is not being given serious consideration.

The official said the administration was busily weighing options to respond to Delvalle's overnight ouster by the national legislature following his attempt to fire Noriega, who is the country's de facto ruler.

Fitzwater said that President Reagan was being kept abreast of the fast-moving developments in Panama, but he said he doubted the political crisis there had anything to do with the president's decision to cancel a weekend trip to the retreat at Camp David, Md.

FACTOR

Even Ronald Reagan, who has often stood corrected, ridiculed Robertson's claim that his Christian Broadcasting Network had information about the location of hostages in the Middle East.

"Isn't it strange that no one in our administration was ever apprised of that?" asked the president at his news conference Wednesday.

Robertson bounced back, saying he could not understand the big flap. "I used that as a throwaway line," he said.

He also complained Wednesday in the Atlanta Constitution that he's being put under undue scrutiny.

"The press of the nation is holding me to an incredible standard of conduct," he said. "They want me every time I open my mouth to be accompanied by a press aide, a lawyer and a librarian with at least a thousand volumes to back up every word I've said."

Just as Robertson's campaign has weathered the hostage crisis this week, it weathered the missile crisis earlier this month — when Robertson claimed there were Soviet missiles in Cuba.

The Pentagon denied it, the White House denied it, even Fidel Castro denied it. Robertson shrugged off the outcry, saying he hoped those doing the denying were right.

Robertson also suggested he saw the sinister hand of Vice President George Bush behind the timing of the disclosures of sexual misbehavior by a fellow fundamentalist preacher, Jimmy Swaggart. And he accused television anchorman Tom Brokaw of engaging in "religious bigotry" when he referred to Robertson, a former television evangelist, as a former television evangelist.

Stephen Hess, a Brookings Institution student of the press and politics, says Robertson's ability to weather attacks on his credibility — "the Teflon factor" — exists because the press has been easy on him.

"The media gets tough on people when they become important," he says.

Adds Larry Sabato, a political scientist at the University of Virginia who has followed Robertson for decades: "The other Republican candidates are hesitant to attack him. Even Bush his done so gingerly. The Republicans know they need his constituency in the fall; they know these people are easily offended and will stay permanently offended."

Moreover, he says, reporters, with few evangelical Christians in their ranks, are shy about attacking Robertson. "They know they're subject to a charge of cultural bias."

"At first he was getting a good press," says Hess. "There was a surprise about Robertson. We expected Elmer Gantry and instead we got Robert Young."

The more the press challenges Robertson, the more his natural constituency — Christian fundamentalists — rallies around, says Anson Shupe, an Indiana sociologist and coauthor with Hadden of a forthcoming book, "Televangelism: Power and Politics in God's Country."

"He's playing to a different audience," says Shupe. "There is a real conspiratorial, paranoid theme running through fundamental Christianity. They see the world almost as a conspiracy against Christians. What to someone else may look like a way-out statement plays a lot better with his following and may even help him."

COPTER

"Some of them were just sitting there screaming," said 17-year-old Dale Christopher, a Chico High School student who was among the first on the scene. "And they kept asking us 'Help us. Help us.' And then we'd say 'Help is on the way.' That's all we could do for them."

A three-person team of investigators from the Army Safety Center at Fort Rucker, Ala., was investigating the crash today.

The Chinook CH-47D has a history of problems and the Army grounded its entire fleet of 63 of the big transport helicopters for 1½ months in 1985 after an accident in Honduras injured eight soldiers.

Witnesses said the helicopter was tilted forward at a 45-degree angle, puffing smoke and descending rapidly when it crashed about 3:29 p.m., slicing through a power line.

"All of a sudden a little thin streak of smoke came out of it and there was a small explosion on the right side underneath it," said Joe Haworth, who was working at a nearby plant. "Then it put out a little more smoke and it flew straight for a ways, then parts went to coming out of it."

The craft skidded about 75 feet before breaking apart in a sheet of fire, said Wendell Berry Sr., 53, who watched the accident from his home a half mile away.

Berry cut the seat belt away from a crewman strapped to the remains of the cockpit.

"There was only one guy still in the helicopter who was either the pilot or the co-pilot, and he was conscious," Berry said. "He was so conscious that when I cut his seatbelt he said, 'That feels better — thanks.'"

Jack Souther, 54, used a small fire extinguisher from his pick up truck to douse burning bodies. "The only thing I could do was put the fires out on the bodies. I went from body to body trying to put them out."

The copter, carrying 13 passengers and five crew members, was returning to Fort Sill from Fort Hood in Central Texas, Fort Sill spokesman Rick Brink said. He said the passengers probably were from Fort Hood but officials identified only two of them. Army officials said a complete list would be released late this morning.

Fort Sill officials said today, however, that two pilots and a flight engineer from the post were among the 10 killed, and that two of the injured were also from Fort Sill.

Fort Sill spokesman Richard Brown identified the three dead as Staff Sgt. Raymond T. Hill, 31, of New Baltimore, Mich.; Chief Warrant Officer 4 Ronald W. Bender, 40, of Rockville Center, N.Y., and Chief Warrant Officer 4 Scott J. Temple, 43, of Irving, Texas.

Bender was the command pilot and Temple was a pilot. Hill was a flight engineer.

Of the 10 dead, six died at the scene, one died in Parkland Hospital in Dallas, one died in Bridgeport Hospital and another died early today at Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio. Another soldier was found dead at the crash site after dark Thursday.

A spokesman at Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio said today that three soldiers who had been initially taken to Parkland Hospital late Thursday were moved to the San Antonio facility at 4:30 a.m. CST. One of the four soldiers died shortly after arrival at San Antonio, the spokesman said.

SWAGGART

Mrs. Turnage said the two-year rehabilitation is standard, but in cases of moral misconduct on the part of ministers, "the precedent has always been that for that first year, the minister is barred from preaching."

Under the church constitution, if the Executive Presbytery decides to toughen up the state district's recommendation, they would send the case back to Louisiana for reconsideration.

The group had no statement after the meeting Thursday, but Mrs. Turnage said they may release a progress report after more discussion today.

"We cannot put time and expediency ahead of our constitutional process," she said. "I know that they are really carefully considering everything."

The church, the nation's largest Pentecostal denomination, has been shaken by the Swaggart revelations and a sex-and-money scandal that last year cost Bakker, another prominent Assemblies minister, his ministerial credentials. He had rejected the option of undergoing rehabilitation.

Evangelist Marvin Gorman, who claimed Swaggart falsely accused him of adultery, for which he was defrocked by the denomination, reportedly gave the church photographs of Swaggart entering and leaving a motel room with a prostitute.

Ms. Murphree told WVUE-TV of New Orleans Wednesday that she met with Swaggart for about a year at various motels between New Orleans and Baton Rouge to perform pornographic acts, but did not have sexual intercourse with him.

Ms. Murphree has an arrest record in Louisiana and Florida for prostitution-related offenses. She also is wanted on a drug charge in Nashville, Tenn., according to police records.

JUDGES

and the chairmen of the state Republican and Democratic parties — would hold public hearings on the nominees before sending their names to the governor. The governor would pick one, who would serve — with Senate approval — until the next general election, when he or she would face a yes-or-no vote.

— When judges decide to retire at the end of their terms, the process involving the nominating panel, public hearings and governor's selection would take place, but the new judge would not take office until approved by the voters.

"The whole focus of this is to try to focus the election effort on the records of the judges running and get the role of big money out of the judiciary," said Gibson, co-sponsor of the merit selection proposal that failed during the 1987 legislative session. He stressed the public hearings, citing the effect of public outcry over President Reagan's nomination of Judge Robert Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Mauzy attacked the plan, saying it takes "away the people's right to elect their judges." He was particularly critical of the one-man, yes-or-no elections.

"The ballot they propose reminds me of the ballot they use in Russia and other Communist countries when you have one candidate and you vote for or against him," said Mauzy, a Democrat. "That's not in the American tradition of competition."

Chief Justice Tom Phillips and Justice Barbara Culver, the two appointed, Republican members of the Supreme Court, said the plan would provide one of many options for lawmakers to consider next year.

Correction

In Wednesday's Reporter-Telegram, it was reported that school district superintendent Joe Baressi said new classrooms that may or may not be built pending a summer bond election would cost on the average of $100,000 each.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Mecham's chief lawyer resigns

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gov. Evan Mecham's chief attorney has resigned, just days after other lawyers were brought in to handle the governor's impeachment trial opening next week before the state Senate, a newspaper reported today.

The Arizona Daily Star of Tucson quoted the governor as saying, "Murray (Miller) withdrew from the case. We parted friendly, but that's really all. You'll have to ask him why."

Miller and Mecham did not return phone calls this morning.

Earlier this week, Mecham hired Washington D.C. attorney Jerris Leonard to be the lead lawyer for his impeachment trial, which is scheduled to begin Monday. Also brought in to the case was Phoenix attorney Thomas Crowe.

STATE in brief

'Dapper Bandit' strikes again; Ten year toll 24

ARLINGTON (AP) — The so-called "Dapper Bandit," complete with disguise of sunglasses, wig and fake mustache, robbed two Arlington banks in one day to bring his 10-year total to 24, including 20 in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, authorities say.

In one robbery Thursday, he disarmed an off-duty officer and escaped with the officer's pistol, police said.

Thursday's robberies, which occurred four hours and two miles apart, increased his total to 24 since 1978, authorities say. He had been idle since striking a bank in east Dallas last September.

In addition to the usual sunglasses, wig and fake mustache, the bandit has been known to wear bandages on his face to add to the disguise. He has been photographed numerous times by bank cameras and a reward has failed to generate significant leads, police say.

Police recovered getaway cars used in each robbery. Both had been stolen in nearby Irving, Arlington police spokesman Dee Anderson said.

GSU rate estimate out

AUSTIN (AP) — Updated estimates released Thursday by the Public Utility Commission show its decisions so far in the Gulf States Utilities' case could mean a rate increase of $79.7 million to $86 million.

The commission voted Tuesday to bar GSU from charging customers for $1.5 billion of the company's $3.1 billion in construction expenses at the River Bend nuclear plant in Louisiana.

The Beaumont-based company filed in November 1986 for a $144.1 million rate increase from its Southeast Texas customers. PUC examiners recommended a first-year increase of $86.7 million, but also added additional increases for the following three years.

The total increase recommended by the examiners added up to about $300 million. The estimates released Thursday by the commission reflect a one-year increase, with no additional increases in subsequent years.

School financing eyed

AUSTIN (AP) — Increasing state funding for public schools shouldn't be a main concern of a task force looking for ways to satisfy a court order, says Gov. Bill Clements.

"The question you must answer is not whether the state can pump more money into education. The question is whether the money now spent for education can be used more efficiently," Clements told the Select Committee on Education at a Thursday meeting.

Advertisement not under First Amendment protection

HOUSTON (AP) — A Soldier of Fortune magazine ad, subject of a negligence suit that seeks millions of dollars in damages, does not fall under First Amendment protection because the ad represents a commercial form of speech, a federal judge says.

U.S. District Judge David Hittner issued the written opinion Thursday, elaborating on a pre-trial decision that refused to dismiss the $22.5 million suit filed against the magazine by the family of a Texas woman slain in 1985.

In an eight-page decision, Hittner cited several federal rulings that allowed negligence suits where commercial speech was the issue, Hittner wrote.

"This court's decision is not intended to place upon every publisher an undue burden of investigation into the nature of every advertisement submitted for publication," he said. "It is intended only to permit a cause of action for negligence."

According to the judge, the magazine acknowledges the ad fell into the realm of commercial speech and to allow dismissal of the suit under First Amendment grounds "would afford to commercial speech a broader protection than that given core speech."

Gary Black, 18, and Marjorie Einmann, 64, are suing the self-styled "Journal for Professional Adventurers" for running a classified ad that led to the killing of Sandra Black, Gary Black's mother and Mrs. Einmann's daughter.

Robert Black is on Texas' death row for paying John Wayne Hearn $10,000 to kill his wife at her Bryan home in February 1985. Hearn is serving three life terms in Florida for the Black slaying and two others in that state.

Hearn's ad appeared in four issues of the magazine in late 1984, offering services of former Marine and Vietnam veterans and weapons specialists with jungle warfare expertise for "high-risk assignments" in the United States or overseas.

Attorneys for the magazine do not dispute the ad brought Hearn and Black together, but insist Soldier of Fortune publisher Robert Brown had no way of knowing the ad was for illegal activity. Brown has testified he would have halted the classified ads for personal services if he had known they were linked to crimes.

Existing airport expansions, new construction major issue

GRAPEVINE (AP) — The number of air travelers is soaring and the nation needs to embark on a multi-billion-dollar airport construction program to keep up with the increase, says the chief of the Federal Aviation Administration.

T. Allan McArtor, appointed by President Reagan in July to head the FAA, said Thursday at a news conference at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport that expansion of existing airports and construction of new ones will be a major issue in the next few years.

He said the Dallas airport, completed in 1974, was the last major airport built in the country.

Since then ridership has increased nationwide from 200 million people to about 450 million people, he said.

"Air capacity is the single most important issue facing the growth of air commerce in this country," he said.

McArtor, formerly in charge of telecommunications for Federal Express Corp. as a senior vice president, said airports are the "switches" needed to link the country. "We have got to go about the business of building bigger switches," he said.

Upgrading existing airports and building new ones should be a priority in every metropolitan center, he said, noting the cost would be several billion dollars.

Also in need of a build-up is public confidence in air travel safety, McArtor said.

U.S. air safety, under fire recently for the increasing number of near mid-air collisions, is in good shape, but could improve, he said.

CREDIBILITY IS THE ISSUE IN THE RACE FOR DISTRICT JUDGE!

Referendum items should be passed

Voters in the March 8th primary elections will see non-binding referendum items on the ballot, but not the same ones. The items are vastly different on the Democratic and Republican ballots, but should give state legislators valuable input about how Texans view a couple of controversial issues.

The item appearing on the Democratic ballot asserts "Texans shall maintain their right to select judges by a direct vote of the people, rather than change to an appointment process created by the Legislature" and asks voters to vote either "for" or "against".

The years-old complaint involved in this item is that the work judges perform actually does not involve matters that can legitimately be deemed either "liberal" or "conservative", and that on many occasions because of the state's size and diversity, voters have no personal knowledge of the qualifications or background of the judicial candidates. So, supporters of an appointive judiciary say, the interests of the state's residents actually would better served by jurists picked by a select group of qualified individuals who would make the recommendation to the governor.

While that might actually improve the quality of the state's jurists, one recent proposal aimed at appointing state Board of Education members went down in last November's general election. Voters indicated loudly and clearly that they want to continue to elect those officials.

The Reporter-Telegram endorsed the appointed Board of Education for the reasons cited, but on the question of giving up the right to elect members of the judiciary, we agree with the sentiment expressed by voters in last November's election. We encourage voters to say "yes" on the issue, indicating their desire to keep electing their jurists.

Republican voters, on the other hand, will find a proposal that says: "English should be established as the official language of the State of Texas and United States of America." Voters may vote either "yes" or "no".

This is a delicate issue and we certainly do not support any move that would restrict the constitutional rights of any group of Americans, but there is something to be said for having an officially-recognized national language. It would serve as a cohesive force rather than underscoring ethnic differences. And it's already a recognized fact that those who do not know and use the English language effectively cannot function at their best in our society.

In that sense, we encourage voters in the Republican Primary to vote "yes" on this proposal.

Robertson plans to undercut Bush

Presidential contender Pat Robertson may have the last word at the Republican nominating convention this year, even if he isn't the candidate of choice.

Jack Anderson

Robertson has such a bad taste in his mouth about opponent George Bush that he has told his aides he will throw all of his delegates behind the man most likely to defeat him. That man is likely to be Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and the addition of Robertson's delegates in a neck-and-neck race could push Dole over the top.

A former television evangelist, Robertson is an affable man who believes in dealing with people on the up-and-up. He likes to play fair. No questionable deals. No dirty tricks.

Our sources in the Robertson camp say the candidate doesn't think Bush has played fair in return. It began with a less-than-warm telephone call between the two men last year and culminated with what Robertson claims were "dirty tricks" played on his campaign. He suspects the pranksters were in Bush's camp.

Last September, before he announced his candidacy, Robertson made a courtesy call to Bush to inform him that he was running. A source close to Robertson told us that he saw it as a "Christian gesture" to give the vice president advance notice. They talked about keeping the race clean, and Robertson said he wanted to remain friends, come what may.

We asked Robertson recently about the call. Ever the gentleman, he told us that the conversation was cordial. But he gave a different impression to one of his aides right after the phone call; he told the aide Bush had been less than receptive.

Not long afterward, Robertson became convinced that Bush campaign manager Lee Atwater was playing sophomoric tricks. Atwater has a reputation among Republicans and Democrats for stooping to pranks.

According to Robertson, the pranks began when someone canceled hotel reservations for his staff, vandalized automobiles and spread false scheduling information about Robertson press conferences. In New Hampshire, someone wielding a hacksaw vandalized a telephone system that Robertson volunteers had planned to use to encourage voters to go to the polls.

"There's something dirty going on," Robertson told us.

Ed Rogers, a spokesman for Atwater, said Robertson's charges were "ridiculous." Atwater "doesn't spend his time that way," he said.

Robertson didn't blame the pranks on the Dole campaign, because Dole staffers have been the victims of similar tricks.

No matter who the prankster is, Bush is likely to pay for it. The decision by Robertson to pledge his delegates to Dole could swing the nomination. Robertson picked up delegates in Iowa and New Hampshire and is likely to pick up more on Super Tueday, March 8, in the Southern states. He has enthusiastic supporters who will show up at the polls rain or shine and is likely to do well, especially if voter turnout is light.

A bloc of Robertson delegates delivered at the convention could be just the ticket for Dole — not to mention a sweet tit-for-tat for Robertson.

B-1 FRILLS — A Manchester, Conn., company may have to pay back part of the $23 million it got for building fan blades for the B-1 bomber engine. An investigation done for the Air Force revealed that Mal Tool and Engineering Co. charged the Air Force for the use of a yacht in North Palm Beach, Fla., ski condominiums in Vermont, a golf club membership, and hotel, bar and restaurant bills.

The company said the expenses were legitimate costs of doing business and justified them as sales promotion costs and employee morale boosters. But the General Accounting office says the frills do not fit the definition of overhead expenses on the B-1 project. The GAO has recommended that the company refund the Air Force $150,000. Mal Tool was a subcontractor to General Electric on the B-1.

SUMMIT NEWS LEAKED — You probably thought you had read or heard all there was to read and hear about the December summit between Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev. As it turns out, you had to be out of the country to get one inside story. Soviet leader Gorbachev made a surprising offer regarding the civil war in Nicaragua. The news was kept under wraps here, but national security adviser Lt. Gen. Colin Powell let it slip. His vehicle was the U.S. Information Agency's worldwide news network. He told foreign listeners that Gorbachev had offered to reduce arms shipments to the Nicaraguan government if the United States would cut off aid to the anti-Sandinista rebels.

WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENT — Don't ask us how the bride and the groom met, but we have early word that two world-famous characters are going to get married in a big bash four years from now. The 500th anniversary of the discovery of the New World by Christopher Columbus comes up in 1992. Spanish pop artist Antoni Miralda thinks that's a great excuse for a party — a wedding party, to be exact. He wants to marry off the Statue of Liberty to the statue of Christopher Columbus in Barcelona. Private companies are putting up the money for Miss Liberty's gown and for Chris's bachelor bash.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Miraculously, 2 million Soviets are about to be cured of mental illness. The process is simple. The Soviet health ministry will merely remove their names from the list of mental patients. For years, the Soviets have used a diagnosis of "mental illness" to punish political dissidents. In some cases, people were declared mentally ill because they read the poems of Boris Pasternak. Now, the Soviets have made it illegal to institutionalize a mentally healthy person. With that embarrassment resolved, Soviet psychiatrists are ready to rejoin the World Psychiatric Association — a group they bailed out of in 1983 amid rumors they were going to be thrown out. They have only one request of the association: Don't ask them about politics. Maybe they don't have any answers.

Who's to blame for big federal deficit?

People don't seem to care much for truth these days if a lie is more useful. An example of a useful lie which is repeated continuously is that President Ronald Reagan is responsible for the budget deficits and the large increase in the national debt.

Charley Reese

If this were true, I'd have no objection to it. I've long said there is a great gap between Reagan's rhetoric and Reagan's actions. In this particular case, however, the charge is a flat lie.

First, the Constitution gives the president no power over the federal budget. It is a custom, not a duty, that presidents submit budget proposals to Congress. They are only non-binding recommendations.

Congress, however, and only Congress may vote to levy taxes (the revenue side) and vote to make appropriations and vote authority to spend (the spending side). The difference is the deficit. The sum of the annual deficits is the national debt.

Now, if in the past seven years, Congress had accepted President Reagan's budgets — appropriated what he recommended, cut what he recommended, eliminated what he recommended, then certainly whatever deficits accrued would be properly the responsibility of the president.

In fact, however, Congress has not once, no not once, adopted the president's budget proposals. They have tossed his into the trash can and created their own. Therefore, the responsibility for the cumulative deficits rests squarely and unarguably on the shoulders of the House and Senate majorities who passed them.

The fact that Congress puts the president in the position of having to veto the appropriations and authorizations bills and bring government to a halt or accept them does not transfer responsibility to the president. He has more things to do than fight with Congress over its Constitutional duty to handle the fiscal affairs of the federal government.

There is no justification for the debt crisis congressional majorities have created. Every time Congress convenes it has the power to develop a balanced budget. It has, even though the Constitution does not mandate a balanced budget, a duty to deal only with a balanced budget.

It is kindergarten basic common sense that government should operate at a deficit only in times of national emergencies, principally war, and then, as soon as the emergency is over, eliminate the deficit.

Congressional majorities have, for base motives, been progressively impoverishing the American people. The dollar has lost so much of its purchasing power that the government has periodically changed the base year by which such loss is measured in order to hide the truth from the people.

You can buy today for $1 only one-third of the goods and services that $1 would have purchased in 1967. That means that if you were earning $10,000 a year in 1967 and now earn $30,000 a year, all of your labor and accumulated experience and skills have earned you a zero return. You are no better off in 1988 with $30,000 a year than you were in 1967 with $10,000.

The effect of congressional fiscal irresponsibility has robbed you of two-thirds of every dollar you earn or own. It has burdened the lives of your children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren with taxes that must be levied to pay the debt congressional majorities have created.

There is no complicated formula for balancing a budget. The most humble families, mom and pop corner stores, children on allowances all do it. You simply must not spend one penny more than you receive in income.

What congressional majorities have formed the habit of doing, however, is buying votes to keep themselves in office. They want to stay in office because they have voted themselves high salaries, generous perks and other privileges and amenities. With rare, rare exceptions all men and women who go to Congress leave richer than they were when they entered. This ought not to be. Whenever public office becomes a means of accumulating riches then bad government is inevitable.

Israeli story incomplete

As the number of Palestinians killed by Israeli soldiers rises (54 at last count), and as the news reports about it drift from the front page to the back, I feel some response need to be made to Alice Brown's article in a recent "Speaking Out."

The article implies that the press has been unfair to Israel in reporting about the riots and shootings. It goes into the history of the Jewish colonization of Palestine that culminated in the establishment of the state of Israel in 1948. The point seems to be that the Palestinians who live there have no right to self-determination, don't want to govern themselves, and enjoy killing Jews for no reason.

The facts in the article are impressive, but they are obviously not complete. The Jewish settlers did come in and take over the land from the Palestinians, and the fact that they got permission from the British who had conquered it before was no consolation to the native population.

The excuses used in the article are the same ones industrialized countries always use when they encroach on a "primitive" people. The Jews "improved the living conditions and the land", and the Palestinians were allowed to keep part of the total area (much like American Indians being allowed to keep their reservations).

Finally, the column states that the only thing necessary for the whole conflict to be solved would be for "the Arab states and the Palestinian Arabs to recognize Israel's right to exist in peace."

By the "right to exist in peace," it apparently means the right to treat Palestinians in Israel as an underclass, oppressing them and denying them equal rights, killing them when they get uppity, beating them into submission, extracting confessions to crimes by torture, burying them alive with bulldozers (Midland Reporter-Telegram, Feb. 15), planting bombs on their non-military vessels, etc.

I guess we ought to go along with South Africa's "right to exist in peace," too, because that nation's treatment of its blacks is no worse.

Media double standard

A double standard operates in the Western media. Would Israel have trouble with the press is it adopted the tactics of its neighbor, President Assad of Syria? Assad put down disturbances within two days in the city of Hama by shelling it with artillery and killing up to 20,000 of its inhabitants, while preventing any access by the media and making it clear that any correspondent who wrote an unkind word about Syria risked his life. Of course, the media in the West said nothing.

The same goes for journalists in almost every Arab country. Western journalists say little about unpleasant details in Lebanon, for example, knowing that they have an excellent opportunity to be kidnapped if they do so. Last year when King Fahad of Saudi Arabia shot dead several hundred Iranians and other pilgrims in putting down a riot in Mecca during the Haj celebrations, he received little or no critical press as to his methods of quelling the riots. Reason: instant expulsion for such indiscretions.

The Iran-Iraq war has seen over a million men slaughtered, but coverage has been modest because Westerners are allowed in only when either country deems it to its advantage. And if a Westerner should write disparagingly of their methods (i.e., lethal gas warfare), it will be, at best, his or her last visit.

I do not justify Israel's handling of the riots, but point out that where there is true freedom of the press, all the ugliness of violent conflict is shown in living color. The presence of the media and resulting worldwide coverage undoubtedly encourages more violence.

Palestinians, with their knives, stones, Molotov cocktails, and occasional guns, are bent on one thing: killing every Israeli Jew they can. The press certainly is not bringing out the fact that Israeli citizens, as well as soldiers, are attacked, maimed and killed daily by terrorist acts. The soldiers are fighting for their lives against the Arab rioters!

Others control media

Dr. Thomas's letter headlined "Israelis 'killing rats' " on Feb. 18th caused me to think Americans cannot grasp the complicated situation in Israel, because we see protestors demonstrate in our country for the purpose of airing grievances and bringing about change. But they are still U.S. citizens.

In Israel, the Palestinians in the occupied territories are not citizens of Israel. They are part of a hostile Arab people whose published avowed purpose is to annihilate the Jewish state of Israel and have their country themselves. This tiny parcel of Middle East real estate approximately the size of Massachusetts was deemed virtually worthless when sold to early Zionist settlers, and sheer guts and hard work have turned it into a beautiful, productive land.

Palestinians who live in the troubled area on the West Bank of the Jordan River hold Jordanian passports. Many stone-throwing Palestinians are too young to recall the harshness and misery when this area was occupied by Jordan's King Hussein, nor can the Palestinian youth living in the Gaza Strip remember former Egyptian President Nasser's murderous rule. Israeli troops have occupied the so-called West Bank and the Gaza Strip since 1967 when Egyptian and Syrian aggression propelled Israel into the "Six-Day War".

All the world has recognized Israel's status as a nation but not the 20-plus Arab nations (except Egypt), even though it came into existence in 1948. There is only one Jewish nation, born out of the horror of Europe's World War II holocaust.

I cannot justify Israel's present actions, but please consider the utter frustration of all parties. Conflicting reports aside, the real issue is: the Palestinians believe that Israel is not Israel at all, but Palestine. The tiny nation of Israel is taunted from within and without by Arab enemies from whom it has heard every day for the past 40 years.

I think it is time for Israel to hear from its friends!

Attend pet meeting

This is regarding the proposed amendment limiting the number of pets we can own. After presenting my opinions to the city council members, an article appeared in the local newspaper. This article was slightly misleading. The amendment went back for revision not to be rescinded. I was made out too cheap to pay the $25 for a kennel license. My opposition to the kennel license is it requires the animals be caged or confined. This defeats the purpose of having cats in an AE district.

I am told the reason this amendment came up was a newcomer came to Midland with many animals that could not be vaccinated for rabies. They will be transferring within a year or so. Why should we Midlanders be penalized? Is that fair?

We should address the real source of the problem — overbreeding. I am going to suggest to the Animal Control Advisory Board to implement a system similar to Houston's (and many other places in the country) — have a low licensing fee for neutered or spayed pets ($1 to $2) and a much higher one for those that aren't ($25 or more). It would make economic sense to me. Why not require a breeder's permit for those who want to have puppies or kittens? In a year's time that would mean a great difference in the number of unwanted animals.

The Animal Control Advisory Board and the city council are being very shortsighted in their efforts. I feel they will be creating a bigger problem than we already have. As long as pets are cared for, vaccinated, not abused or neglected and are not a nuisance, then this should not be a major issue. We already have rules for these problems. Call your city council representative.

Please come to the open hearing on March 1st at 5 p.m. in City Hall Council Chambers. The fate or our pets is at stake. One more unnecessary regulation goes against my grain!

Thanks for concern

I would like to thank all the people of Midland for all their love and understanding during my recent loss. On Feb. 8th my little girl, Jenalee Dawn Frazier, was killed.

I have so many questions, but one thing I do know is that she was a hero. I truly believe that she gave her life to save her mother, Debra. Thanks to all who care.

Filibuster succeeds in blocking spending limit bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans, victorious after a 53-hour round-the-clock filibuster, once again have stymied efforts by Democrats to pass a bill that would limit spending on Senate campaigns.

The coup de grace was slated to be administered today when the Senate holds a scheduled cloture vote in a last-ditch Democratic attempt to halt further debate and bring the legislation to a vote.

Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., and his troops have enough votes to pass the bill but are, for the eighth time since last June, expected to fall short of the 60 votes needed to invoke cloture and halt debate.

Another cloture-vote loss would all but doom the chances of the campaign finance legislation emerging from the 100th Congress.

This week's struggle centered on a plan advanced by 52 senators, including Republicans Robert Stafford of Vermont and John Chafee of Rhode Island, to attack the escalating cost of campaigns by imposing spending limits.

Limits for a Senate general election race would range from $950,000 to $5.5 million, depending on a state's population. In 1986, the average campaign cost $3 million — up fivefold from 1976 — with some big state races topping $10 million per candidate.

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., one of the bill's authors, said that to build a $3 million warchest, a senator must raise $10,000 every week from the time he or she arrives in Washington until the end of the six-year term.

A candidate observing the limit would be eligible for subsidized mailings, rock-bottom radio and TV ad rates and money from the Treasury if the opponent exceeded the limit or the candidate was the target of heavy spending by independent groups.

The legislation also takes aim at the increasing role of special-interest political action committees, which in 1986 provided over half the campaign money raised by more than 200 House and Senate candidates, most of them incumbents. Under the plan, PACs could supply no more than 20 percent of the candidate's spending limit.

Except for Stafford and Chafee, Republicans are having no part of the proposal, which they say would favor Democrats and doom them to continued minority status in heavily Democratic states, particularly in the South.

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., calls it "the incumbent protection act" because, he said, it would hamper challengers with little name recognition or financial resources.

"Everyone in politics knows that with these limits, what we absolutely say to most challengers is, 'you've had it,'" Rudman said.

Democrats rejected this argument, saying that the real question was the public perception of senators scurrying for contributions to fuel increasingly expensive campaigns.

"We have to spend our time running around the country looking for a handout," Byrd said. "How can we blame anyone from perceiving us as corrupt? The system is corrupt and we're trying to reform it.

"The Senate should not be owned by an aristocracy of money," he said. "Campaign reform gives the little guy an equal share...This business of the golden handshake — nobody likes it. Senators don't want to spend all their time going from fund-raiser to fund-raiser with their hand out begging for money."

Republicans were forced into the filibuster at 2 p.m. Tuesday when Byrd placed the legislation before the Senate. Within 12 hours, things turned bitter with the parliamentary arrest of Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore.

Vatican opens records to raise money

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Vatican appealed for more money from the faithful as it revealed its financial statement for the first time in history, saying the administrative headquarters of the Roman Catholic Church had a $56.7 million deficit in 1986, according to a published report today.

Cardinal John Krol said a 15-man council of cardinals on which he sits decided to release the information to encourage more contributions from Roman Catholics. The church counts 840 million members worldwide.

The Washington Post said in today's editions the statement was released by the Washington-based National Conference of Catholic Bishops, ending centuries of secrecy.

The $56.7 million figure represents a shortfall in the Vatican's operating budget in 1986. The deficit was met by taking $32 million from Peter's pence, the Vatican's annual worldwide collection intended for charitable purposes, and $24.7 million more from the fund's reserve, the Post said.

The Peter's pence collection for the first nine months of 1987 totaled $35.8 million, an increase attributed at least in part to repeated pleas for help, the newspaper said.

The document revealed that Vatican expenses in 1986 totaled nearly $114 million, with the largest chunk, $58 million, spent for personnel. That included $50.6 million for the Vatican's 2,395 employees and $7.3 million for pension payments to 885 retirees.

Other major expenses included $11.7 million for publishing, $11 million in expenditures related to investments, $10.4 million for equipment and operating costs of Vatican Radio and $9.7 million for administrative expenses ranging from stationery to the costs of the worldwide synods of bishops.

Operating income comes from investments, publishing, endowments and Vatican Radio's sale of tapes of papal speeches and radio programs.

"We need complete accounting," Krol told U.S. bishops at their annual meeting here last fall. "It's the only way to go."

Krol retired last month as head of the Philadelphia archdiocese but continues to head special fund-raising efforts for the church.

Reagan trip could mirror Gorbachev visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is welcoming reports from Moscow that a strategic arms agreement could be ready for signing at a May summit, but says it is doubtful such a timetable could be met.

"We welcome it, if it means the Soviets are going to work at the negotiations just as hard as we will," an administration official said Thursday, speaking on condition of anonymity.

And Reagan, in an interview Thursday with The Washington Post, expressed hope it could be signed by the end of the year although "the time is too limited" to complete work on the treaty by the summit.

A senior Soviet official in Moscow also said Thursday he expected a treaty to reduce the superpowers' long-range nuclear weapons stockpile would be ready for signing at the summit meeting, the Post said.

The official, who was not identified, talked to about 20 foreign reporters at a two-hour meeting. The Post was uninvited but said it obtained its account from other reporters.

The official also said that Reagan will stay in the Kremlin during the visit, which should last for about a week and could include other cities besides Moscow, according to the account in today's Post.

According to administration officials, Reagan's expected trip to Moscow is likely to mirror in length and style the four-day visit to Washington last December by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The officials said Thursday that no dates have been fixed for the president's trip, but that tentative plans continue to be that it will fall sometime from mid- to late-May to early June.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters this week he did not expect a summit date to be set until Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze meets in Washington late next month with Secretary of State George Shultz, who just returned from Moscow.

Gorbachev's visit was confined to Washington.

MMH may get 'sophisticated' imaging unit

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

A sophisticated magnetic imaging unit quickly becoming standard equipment in big city hospitals may be on its way to West Texas as Midland Memorial Hospital officials try to arrange financing for the unit.

News of the Magnetic Resonance Imaging unit came during a Thursday meeting of the Midland County Hospital District Board of Directors.

Directors heard a report from Midland Memorial Hospital President Ray Branson, who said that the hospital is trying to work out an arrangement with local doctors and other hospitals to purchase the equipment.

Board president Frank Cahoon today said the focus of the unit's use would be regional. With an approximate $2 million price tag — plus another $750,000 to $1 million for installation — participation of doctors and other hospitals in financing is a necessity.

Branson said today that "Not very often does an opportunity like this come along, but the MRI appears to be an opportunity for a large cross section of doctors and hospitals to work together."

Other hospitals which could be involved in the financing include Physicians & Surgeons Hospital in Midland, Scenic Mountain Medical Center in Big Spring and Medical Center Hospital in Odessa, Branson said.

He added: "Medical Center less so, simply because there is an outpatient facility across the street with a low-field strength unit that has lesser imaging capabilities.

"We would like for Medical Center to participate if at all possible, but it just may be that they are too encumbered by the unit across the street to participate," he said.

The new equipment's installation would be in a building outside but adjacent to the Midland Memorial plant.

The unit works by setting up a strong magnetic field around a patient, Branson said. That field causes movement within the patient's cells which is picked up by the imaging process.

Resulting images are similar to x-rays, but offer "tremendous adavantages" over the older technology, including the lack of radioactive rays, he said.

Because of the magnetic nature of the unit, patients with pacemakers or other metal implants must use the unit with great caution, he added.

Much of the expense of the unit's installation involves shielding of the magnetic forces so they don't affect cars parked nearby or microwave signals in the area, he said.

The imaging is accomplished through the use of a computer, and therein lies another of the advantages of the unit, Branson told hospital district directors Thursday.

Software currently exists for brain and neck imaging, but coming on line soon will be other software for imaging of the heart and other body parts, he said.

Because of the emerging technology, the unit likely won't become obsolete for seven years, Branson told directors.

To design financing for the purchase and installation, the hospital is working with the consulting arm of a medical consortium of 800 nonprofit hospitals.

A committee of Midland Memorial doctors already have heard presentations for imaging units built by three medical equipment companies — General Electric, Siemen's and Phillips, Branson said.

Bids from the companies are scheduled to be opened next week, he added.

If financing can be arranged as planned, the unit could become a reality in Midland by September, Branson said.

Women linked to check-floating scheme get 'weekends'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Two ex-tellers and a customer who were part of a check-floating scheme at Home Savings Association in Midland were sentenced Thursday by U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton to two weekends in jail after they had pleaded guilty to the offense.

Others involved in the scheme to hold cashed personal checks in the till until they could be covered by personal payroll checks are to be brought to court.

Bunton had sentenced the three women to three years in prison but suspended the sentences to two weekends in jail and to three years of supervised probation. He also ordered each woman to perform 100 hours of community service.

The three women were charged with aiding and abetting misapplication of funds following internal audits by Home Savings, now Banc Home Savings Association, and had made restitution before the Federal Bureau of Investigation had probed into the cases.

Convicted were:

— Ida Martinez McCormick, 27, former teller at Home Savings Association.

— Juanita Grimes Williams, 35, the Home Savings customer and former vault-bulk processor at Republic-Bank First National Midland.

The three women had checking accounts at Home Savings when the scheme was carried out between June 1986 and May 1987.

In pleading for mercy before the judge, each of the women apologized for their wrong-doing.

"First of all," said Ms. Granado, "I'd like to apologize to Home Savings and my fellow employees and all of the customers who put their trust in me. I let them down."

Ms. Granado said she had failed her parents and family.

"I knew I was doing wrong," she said, "but in all honesty I did not know the severity of it."

Ms. Granado said she now hoped "to try to put my life back together. I'm glad I was caught," said Ms. Granado, who said she wanted to "earn the trust that I have betrayed."

Bunton commended the woman for making "apologies to those who needed apologies" and then said she should be punished.

"When one of your children steps out of line, violates the rules, they've got be punished," the judge said.

Ms. McCormick made similar apologies.

"They (Home Savings employees and customers) put trust in me, and I abused that trust," she said. Her parents, she said, "raised me so much better than that."

Ms. McCormick admitted that she had "done wrong, but at the time, it (check floating) seemed like common practice." She said that she had violated the "teachings" and "tenants" of her father.

"Punishment must be meted out," said the judge.

In making her amends before the court, Ms. Williams said, "I've done something I'm ashamed of" and recited an aphorism she said she had told her children: "Experience is not always the best teacher." Ms. Williams, who said she is the daughter of a minister, said that she just thanks "God for another chance."

Bunton, who noted that Ms. Williams was morally supported in the courtroom by a "very good-looking family," said when "one of the sheep strays and goes wrong," then punishment must be exacted.

Bunton said that he would be "surprised" and it would be "most usual" were any of the three women again to be brought to court for a crime.

The judge had observed that all three defendants were given moral support by their family members, who sat in the courtroom's spectators gallery while sentencing was carried. Some shed tears.

Augesen, Smith debate scratched

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — An announced "one-on-one" debate at UT Permian Basin between Ector County District Attorney Eric Augesen and his Republican primary challenger, John W. Smith, failed to materialize Thursday night.

Augesen declined to participate in a confrontation sponsored by the UTPB political science and law clubs after arriving, contending that the 25 to 30 persons turning out for the political forum, which included Democratic and Republican candidates seeking the office of Ector County Attorney, had been "stacked" with mostly supporters of Smith.

Instead of debating each other, Augesen and Smith each addressed the group, then answered questions.

Terming the race between himself and Augesen "the hottest race in West Texas and rightly so," Smith contended Augesen had paid insufficient attention to such areas as child abuse and victim's assistance. He said, if elected, he would have one assistant district attorney assigned to handle child abuse cases and indicated he would hire a person to handle the victim assistance program.

Challenging Augesen statements that the Dominguez child abuse case, described by some investigators as "the worst case of child abuse" they remembered, was a dead issue, Smith said he did not continue to resurrect it, but had simply responded to questions from a newspaper reporter who wrote an article after talking to Augesen, too.

Smith said when he was asked by the reporter about Augesen's handling of the Dominguez case, he said he thought Augesen "bungled" it.

Rather than specifically responding to Smith's criticism of his handling of the Dominguezes, Augesen concentrated more on his record, saying when he took office he said he would "get rid of crimes and gangs and we have done it," he stated.

Referring to statistics, Augesen said, since he took office in 1985, Ector County has been ranked fifth in the state for the number of criminal commitments to the Texas Department of Corrections.

Saying that he has "the most experienced staff in the State of Texas," Augesen said, rather than assigning one assistant to exclusively handle child abuse cases, all of his assistants have the necessary prosecutorial experience to handle child abuse cases as well as other criminal cases. Augesen contends the child abuse caseload in Ector County, which represents about 24 percent of all cases, is far too heavy to be handled by a single assistant district attorney.

Concerning Smith's experience as a criminal defense attorney, Augesen stated that Smith, for whatever reason, has not taken the trouble to seek certification by the State Bar of Texas as a specialist in criminal law.

Responding to questions from the audience, Augesen said he was satisfied with his staff and its performance, although he noted he would need a new assistant to replace Roger Jones, who is running unopposed as a Republican candidate for Ector County Attorney.

Smith said he would probably keep some members of Augesen's staff, but he would have to look at each individual case and make a decision once elected.

In his remarks to the audience, Smith questioned why Augesen refused to prosecute drug charges against persons arrested during a raid on the Doll's House about a year ago.

Ex-Odessan gets 'life' for murder

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 31-year-old former Odessan Thursday drew a life sentence for the July 1984 murder of a 25-year-old woman whose skull was found south of Penwell by hunters in November 1986.

Following the sentencing, 161st District Court Judge Tryon Lewis said Jerry Grey Shelton's decision to testify on his own behalf "probably didn't help his case" because it allowed assistant District Attorney Howard Whitworth to reveal a previous conviction on a sexual assault charge.

Citing Shelton's apparent "lack of remorse" and past criminal record, Lewis announced the life sentence and ordered the sheriff's office to transfer Shelton to the Texas Department of Corrections to begin serving his sentence. Under current law, Shelton could serve only 15 years of the life sentence before being eligible for parole.

A one-time friend of Shelton, Ricky Lynn Davis, 22, testified during the trial that he had helped Shelton dispose of the body of Dorothy Jean Purcell in a field about 15 miles south of Penwell. On Nov. 22, 1986, three hunters found a human skull, but the discovery was not reported to the Ector County Sheriff's Office until Dec. 5, 1986, when one of the men was having lunch with Sheriff Bob Brookshire. The rest of the young woman's body has never been found.

Shelton was found guilty Wednesday night of the murder of Ms. Purcell by a jury of seven men and five women following more than four hours of deliberation.

TT law students conduct Moot Court

From Staff Reports

Forty advanced law students at Texas Tech University in Lubbock will be trying a personal-injury civil case on appeal in Moot Court to be held Saturday in the Midland County Courthouse.

"It gives the students some practice in making arguments in courts of appeals or before the Supreme Court," said Robert Rendall, president of the Midland County Young Lawyers Association, which is hosting Moot Court. "It assumes the trial has already taken place."

The hypothetical case will be argued in five of the courthouse's six courtrooms from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and will be appealed before a three-judge panel of young Midland lawyers, whose upper age is into the mid-30s.

The arguments mostly will be made by third-year law students, Rendall said.

Arguments will be carried out in each of the five courtrooms, Rendall said.

"They (law students) really don't get academic credit for it," Rendall said of the mock court. "It's like extra-curricular activity."

The 30 to 35 judges in the mock court will analyze and evaluate the arguments, Rendall said.

Senator wants more information on border acid

AUSTIN (AP) — State Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, said Thursday he wants to gather information about the presence of hydroflouric acid along the border.

Uribe said Quimica Fluor in Matamoros, Mexico, is a major producer of the substance, the same chemical that leaked from a Marathon refinery in Texas City, Texas, causing the evacuation of 3,000 people.

He called for an inventory of the chemical within 10 kilometers of the United States-Mexico border.

"We know now that an accident in one country can have dire effects on the citizens of the other," he said in a statement.

USDA criticized for role in state citrus ban

McALLEN (AP) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture was the focus of sharp criticism at a hearing called to examine Texas' emergency quarantine of Florida citrus.

No one from the USDA, however, was sent to testify at the Texas Department of Agriculture's hearing Thursday.

TDA imposed an emergency quarantine on Florida citrus Feb. 15 after the federal agency lifted a 3-year-old ban on shipments of fresh Florida fruit to other citrus-producing areas.

"We are only trying to bring all parties together to discuss the problem, as USDA should have done before lifting its quarantine," Mike Moeller, deputy commissioner of the Texas Department of Agriculture, said Thursday.

Moeller said the hearing was called to determine if the 30-day quarantine should be extended, modified or dropped.

"My understanding is that USDA is not going to attempt to provide any documentation of their position," Moeller said.

USDA on Feb. 9 lifted the ban on Florida citrus. The ban had been imposed after the discovery of bacterial citrus canker in Florida.

Texas growers complained that the ban was lifted without warning.

Officials from the citrus-producing states of California, Arizona and Louisiana also attended the hearing. Al Fehrman, county agent in Louisiana's Plaquemines Parish, where most of that state's tiny, 1,000-acre citrus industry is located, offered support for the Texas quarantine.

"I find it incredibly reprehensible and even despicable that the USDA has not taken the time and effort to send somebody down here to talk to us," Fehrman said.

Don Husnik, deputy administrator of the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service in Washington said in a telephone interview that litigation prompted by the Texas quarantine was the main reason the agency stayed away from Thursday's hearing.

A Florida citrus growers association and a shipper and grower of Florida citrus filed suit Monday in federal court, seeking to stop the Texas quarantine.

"At this point there is a potential for USDA to be involved and we didn't think it would be appropriate for USDA to attend that hearing," Husnik said.

Husnik added the agency has provided some information on its decision to lift the ban on Florida fruit.

"We have published the final rule on this matter and in the supplementary information we published our rationale for the decision," Husnik said.

The most widespread form of canker in Florida is the nursery strain, which Florida officials say has not been detected in mature, fruit-bearing commercial groves.

Richard Gaskalla, assistant director for the Florida Department of Agriculture's Division of Plant Industry, said the nursery strain is far less serious than the Asiatic, or strain A of canker.

Canker can damage plants and cause lesions that make the fruit unmarketable.

Strain A has been found in three Florida counties which remain under quarantine.

"On the movement of commercially packed, certified fresh fruit, the documentation is there that there is minimal threat," Gaskalla said.

Texas producers said not enough is known about the nursery strain, and want the quarantine to continue until a scientific review authorized by the USDA is complete, said Ray Prewett, executive vice president of the Texas Citrus Mutual growers organization.

He also called for a buffer zone around the western Florida counties where strain A has been confirmed, and said Florida fruit at least should not be allowed into the lower Rio Grande Valley, where the 30,000-acre Texas citrus industry is concentrated.

Prewett also said USDA should have accepted its invitation to take part in the hearing.

"I think it would have been the courteous and constructive thing for them to have somebody here," Prewett said.

Lower Valley's water problems may be eased

SAN ELIZARIO (AP) — Colonia resident Jorge Lopez now has clear water to drink, following the installation of a $750 purifier that university officals hope may be the answer to the Lower Valley's water problems.

Thursday was the first time Lopez could make that claim about the water he pumps from the 21-foot-deep well in the front yard of his home in the Lower Valley, about 20 miles east of El Paso.

Lopez's mobile home in the Bosque Bonito "colonia," or illegal subdivision, is a quarter-mile north of the Rio Grande and near several irrigation ditches. The well is about 100 feet from the outhouse, and the liquid it pumps out smells like sewage.

But on Thursday morning, the water was pumped through the purifier that University of Texas-El Paso officials hope might be the answer to some of the Lower Valley's water problems.

Those troubles are considerable. El Paso city and county governments have refused to extend water and sewer lines to about 28,000 Lower Valley residents because of the cost and the fact that most of the subdivisions are unplatted.

As a result, Lopez and his neighbors had to make the 10-mile journey to the Socorro Mission to buy water. Lopez, 36, said he usually made the trip twice weekly, filling three five-gallon plastic jugs. He paid the church $3 a month.

"That was a lot of gas and a lot of time," Lopez said of the journeys to the mission. "Sometimes, when I didn't have money for gas, I had to ask my friends over there for a ride."

If Howard Applegate has his way, Lopez and others won't have to make the drive anymore. The University of Texas civil engineering professor helped install the portable purifier as part of a project to help homeowners in the Lower Valley get affordable, clean water.

Applegate, who is an adviser for Texas-El Paso's Center for Inter-American and Border Studies, decided the water purifier could alleviate the Lower Valley's water troubles after he was told one of the machines had worked for 20 years in the kitchen of the Hotel Plaza Juarez in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

He described the water purifier as "temporary for at least 20 years."

"If it's worked in Juarez for 20 years, it'll work here for 20 years," Applegate said. He estimated it would take that long for political action to help the situation.

Applegate and the machine's inventor, Al Gough, plan to start a university-sponsored program to make the purifiers available and affordable to colonia residents. Details have yet to be worked out.

The machine, built by Natural Oxygen Products of El Paso, is about the size of a carry-on suitcase and employs three filters and six ultraviolet lights to clean water of impurities and kill bacteria.

One thing it won't do, Gough said, is remove salt from the water.

The machine can filter about 10 gallons a minute — enough to run through a shower. Lopez said he plans to use the machine for that purpose because the youngest two of this three children — 6-year-old Zulema and 2-year-old Jorge Abrhan — had developed rashes.

"I thought it was the soap, but it wasn't," he said. "And it wasn't the food or the milk, either. It was the water."

Judge suggests mothers should stay home with kids

EL PASO (AP) — Mary Anne Bramblett says she's surprised that District Judge John McKellips has interjected motherhood as an issue in their campaign for a state judge's post.

The incumbent judge suggested that Bramblett and other mothers should stay home with their young children.

Bramblett, El Paso's first assistant county attorney, has less than six years experience as a lawyer and is seeking to become the county's first female state judge.

"She had to take some time out for maternity leave to have two small children, so I don't know how much time she's actually spent working as an attorney," he said Wednesday night.

The judge also linked absent mothers to the problem of overcrowded jails and prisons.

"What do we do (about crowded prisons)? Well, we can start in our homes," he said. "Mothers can stay home and raise their children during the formative years."

The judge continued the theme Thursday during an interview with the El Paso Times.

"No one who will be truthful will deny the importance of a mother being with children during pre-school years," he said. "Other persons may try to substitute and mean well, but there's no substitute for a mother's love."

Official: Rufugee shelter being used illegally

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — The slaying of a refugee who was trying to get to a church-operated shelter for Central Americans shows how smugglers use the sanctuary for illegal activity, a Border Patrol official said.

Capital murder charges were filed Thursday against a man accused in the robbery and shotgun execution of a Guatemalan in a field near the Mexican border.

Ramiro Vasquez Jr., 24, of El Ranchito, was held without bond on a charge he participated in the murder Wednesday of 31-year-old Odilio de Jesus Ceron Lima.

"Yesterday's incident is not an isolated case," Silvestre Reyes, chief of the Border Patrol's McAllen Sector, said Thursday. "Organized smugglers are taking advantage of the Casa's safe haven to move aliens into the interior and around our checkpoints."

Reyes said he would like to see Casa Romero closed down.

Sister Juliana Garcia, who runs the shelter for the Catholic Diocese of Brownsville, said refugees would continue to travel to the Casa as long as there is strife in their countries.

The Cameron County Sheriff's Department has capital murder warrants out for two other men in connection with the brutal slaying, said Sheriff Alex Perez.

"They shoot and kill and rob people like this in cold-blooded murder," Perez said.

DEBATE

Answering his own question, Smith said Augesen contended the reason the cases were not prosecuted was that the raid was set up by County Attorney Gary Garrison as retaliation against Odessa Police Sgt. Terry Tyree who was instrumental in helping set up gambling raids in 1986 that resulted in the arrest of some of Garrison's friends.

Smith noted Tyree and Jones appeared during a Texas Alcohol and Beverage Control Board hearing to revoke the liquor license of the Doll's House, asking that the license not be revoked.

Smith also questioned if some significance attached to the fact Tyree's wife, Carla, is currently employed by Augesen as a secretary.

Augesen did not specifically address Smith's questions concerning the action of Tyree and Jones before the TABC, but said the reason Carla Tyree was employed in his office is that she was one of several applicants for a job opening and was the best qualified for the job. The district attorney noted that she had been hired before controversy about her husband had surfaced.

AGRICULTURE

EARNEST KIKER

Proper chemicals beautify lawns, control weeds

Kiker

One of the best means for controlling weeds in a home lawn is to maintain a dense, vigorous growing stand of turfgrass through proper fertilization, irrigation and mowing. Thin, weak turf encourages the invasion of weeds. However, even the best kept lawns will have some weeds. To effectively control "problem" weeds in a lawn, herbicides can be used.

Effective use of chemicals (herbicides or weed killers) to control weeds in a lawn depends upon: proper weed identification, selecting the right herbicide, treating weeds when they are immature and actively growing, applying herbicides at proper rates, and observing labels for proper precautions. It is very important that only specific herbicides labelled for use on home lawns may be used to control weeds in lawns. Some herbicides come in many trade names and not all trade names carry a label for home lawn use. Indiscriminate use of industrial strength weed killers often results in tree and shrub damage or death.

Herbicides used to control weeds in lawns can be grouped into three categories: nonselective contact sprays, selective postemergent sprays or granules and selective preemergent sprays and granules and selective preemergent sprays and granules.

Glyphosate herbicides are an example of nonselective contract spray vegetation killers. Round Up, Doomsday and Kleenup contain varying amounts of the active ingredient glyphosate. These herbicides are slow acting and require patience on the applicators part. Two to three weeks may be required to root kill some stubborn perennials. Hoeing or mowing top portions of the weed after applying glyphosate will negate the effectiveness of the product. Ironic as it may seem, the healthier the target weed the better the kill from glyphosate. Complete rootkill also depends on the material being applied to healthy leaves for translocations to the rootzone.

Postemergent selective materials are applied shortly after the weeds are visible and when used according to the label will not damage turf. Weeds such as henbit, chickweed, dandelion, wild onion and garlic, and plaintain can be controlled by postemerge treatment with 2,4-D, MCPP, dicamba, or a combination of these herbicides. Remember, for best results treat only when weeds are immature and/or actively growing. Do not use 2,4-D, MCPP or dicamba on St. Augustine in hot weather (above 85 degrees Fahrenheit). Dicamba should not be sprayed next to shrubs or under the drip line of trees. Some caution should also be used when using these chemicals on hybrid burmuda grass such as Tifgreen and Tifdwarf.

Rescuegrass (incorrectly called qild rye), goosegrass, dallisgrass and sandbur can be controlled in lawns with postemergent treatment of MSMA or DSMA. Spray when weeds are young and actively growing. Repeat applications may be needed at 7-10 day intervals if regrowth occurs. Do not use MSMA or DSMA on St. Augustine or Centipedegrass.

The annual grassy weeds can be effectively controlled by preemergent treatment with Balan, Dacthal or Betasan. Check labels for specific weeds controlled by the herbicide. It is very important that these chemicals be applied prior to germination of the weed seed. September and February applications may be necessary. If you plan to do any reseeding of the lawn, do not use preemergent herbicides 90-120 days prior to seeding.

Most breadleaf weeds and annual grassy weeds in St. Augustine lawns can be controled with Simazine or Atrazine. However, only certain weed and feed formulations containing these chemicals have a label for use in home lawns. In general, weed and feed formulations with Simazine or Atrazine have caused more damage to desirable vegetaion in west Texas than other herbicides combined. Or low soil organic matter makes the successful use of Simazine and Atrazine difficult. Never use weed and feed combinations to fertilize trees, shrubs or vegetable gardens.

Soil sterilants (Pramito, Bromavil) are often incorrectly used to control weeds in alleys and driveways. These weed killers should never be applied where the roots of desirable trees and shrubs are present. Even if you have no trees in your backyard, your neighbors trees quite likely have roots in your alley space. Your use of soil sterilants may damage their trees and contribute to neighborhood disharmony.

Weed control herbicides can be helpful when used properly. Wouldn't it be nice if herbicides were intelligent, extremely discriminating and functional at any rate and method of applications? The properly attached hoe comes closest to meeting these requirements and even it has a disagreeable application rate.

Crabgrass, dandelions early spring nuisances

Minzenmayer

Crabgrass and dandelions are two common weeds appearing in early spring that can ruin your lawn. But with a little know-how and proper care, you can stop these common weeds and enjoy a beautiful lawn all summer long.

Crabgrass is an annual, bunch-type grassy weed. It sprouts in early spring and is killed by the first frost of fall. Crabgrass is a very vigorous plant. And if crabgrass was in your lawn last year, you can be sure it will be back this year. Thousands of seeds are left behind each fall when crabgrass dies.

Fortunately, crabgrass is an annual plant — dying completely each fall. And that makes early spring the best time for control with a per-emergence herbicide.

A per-emergence herbicide kills crabgrass before they have a chance to sprout. Apply a per-emergence herbicide about two weeks before the crabgrass first appears. This prevents crabgrass from even sprouting — eliminating the chance that it will overtake your lawn later in the season.

After crabgrass has begun to grow — post-emergence herbicides must be used to control crabgrass. A well-stocked nursery, garden center or hardware store should carry per- and post-emergence herbicides for crabgrass control.

Dandelions pose a different problem to the homeowner. Dandelions are broad-leaf perennials and do not die from year to year. They only seem to die because because they become dormant. Most live through the harshest of winters, popping back up with the first warm spell of spring.

Because dandelions develop deep tap roots — it is virtually impossible to get rid of them by pulling or digging. Even if you cut a root below the ground leaves, you still probably won't eliminate the weed.

The best sprayer for treatment of lawns is the compressed air sprayer. Look for one with an adjustable nozzle, spray extension, and positive on-/off valve. These features will you control the spray and put it right on target.

Herbicides should be applied according to the manufacturer's directions. Always read and follow carefully all label instructions. To spray lawn weeds, set the nozzle on your compression sprayer to deliver a coarse spray and apply at low pressure to avoid drift.

After application, thoroughly rinse your sprayer with water at least two or three times. Fill with water again, pressurize sprayer and spray so nozzle and hose are rinsed.

Because of the nature of herbicides, I recommend that you keep one sprayer for herbicides and another for insecticides and fungicides. Most vegetable and ornamental plants are broad-leaves and may be killed as readily as weeds.

Fruit fly gene found to be essential to biological clock

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

BOSTON — Researchers have identified a gene in fruit flies that is essential to the working of the biological clock that governs a wide range of bodily processes in humans and animals.

The gene is associated with the generation or maintenance of the daily, or circadian, rhythms that presumably evolved to help animals and humans cope with night and day, said Michael Rosbash, a biologist at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass. He spoke Sunday at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

In addition to controlling the length, or period, of the daily cycle, the gene — called the period gene — also governs minute-long fluctuations in the courtship song of the fruit fly, Rosbash said.

The gene is involved not only in the length of the rhythms but also seems to carry instructions regarding such things as the extent of activity during active periods of the cycle, Rosbash said.

Circadian rhythms are a pervasive feature of human and animal life. They govern fundamental measures such as body temperature and hormonal secretions, and many other more subtle physical and mental factors.

Rosbash said the period gene presumably triggers the production of a protein. That protein might be part of the clock mechanism, something that researchers know nothing about.

Seed planter's work leads to harvest for the hungry

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — He is the godfather of food banks, the guardian angel of gratis grub.

From modest beginnings two decades ago, John van Hengel, 64, has built the food-bank movement into an international phenomenon. He recently helped establish food banks in Canada, France and Belgium.

From a small, cluttered office, van Hengel operates International Food Banking Services, a consulting company, as well as the Alpha-Omega Association, which provides free transportation for the blind. Both are non-profit organizations.

During those 20 years, the food-bank movement has blossomed into 100 banks in this country and 70 in foreign countries.

"I'd be a fool if I pretended to have any great vision," he said. "I just planted a seed, and water came from a hundred directions."

Van Hengel was diverted into the food-bank movement by a divorce and an injury.

He was working as a manufacturer's representative in California around 1960 when the divorce caused him to seek a place to clear his head.

He ended up working in a stone quarry in Wisconsin, where he injured his back while breaking up a fight between fellow workers. When complications set in, his doctor suggested he seek a warmer climate.

So in 1961, van Hengel moved to Phoenix. Though nearly 40, he worked as a lifeguard at pools and became involved in volunteer work with the Catholic Church.

His lifestyle had become such that he could afford to contribute his time, he said: "I had a $70-a-month apartment. My expenditures were under $3,000 a year."

It was while working at the St. Vincent de Paul Society, which ministers to the needy, that van Hengel started collecting food.

He learned that price fluctuations often would prompt growers to leave produce to rot in the fields, so he recruited workers to pick it. There turned out to be more produce than St. Vincent's could use, so he began distributing it to other groups catering to the needy.

"We'd bag the stuff, then we'd go around to missions and drop the stuff off," he said.

With help from missions he had aided and St. Mary's Catholic Church, van Hengel in 1967 was able to refurbish a warehouse. It became the St. Mary's Food Bank.

"He was the founder that began everything," said Priscilla Scheid, who worked with van Hengel at the food bank and serves today as its associate director. "He cares enough about the underdog that he has given a great part of his life over to them. John is, in his way, a very saintly man."

Van Hengel said his faith in God increased as he witnessed minor miracles while establishing the food bank. Once, when the food bank's account was approaching zero, a man came in and handed him a check, van Hengel said. It was for $10,000.

"This was when I really began to know that all you have to do is plant the seed," he said. "The Lord will take care of the rest."

No sooner was the Phoenix food bank off the ground than Boeing announced massive layoffs in Seattle. Van Hengel in 1969 found himself helping to establish a food bank in that city.

From there, as word spread of the successes, the movement mushroomed.

"In 1971, a group came over from California," he said. "They started the Grandview Food Bank in Pasadena. It went from Pasadena to Santa Clara, then into Portland (Ore.)."

In 1976, the federal government provided a grant to establish a clearinghouse to help establish food banks and instruct those operating them. Van Hengel was named director of the program, called Second Harvest.

Second Harvest succeeded in educating people throughout the United States in food banks, van Hengel said.

"We started having conferences here (in Phoenix)," he said. "People came from around the country to learn how to operate a food bank."

Representatives of Second Harvest tapped a new source of food by contacting manufacturers who agreed to provide them with food items that had been mislabeled or found to be shortweighted.

Blunders and misjudgments by manufacturers led to some odd contributions over the years, he recalled. "I got a tremendous quantity of hot fudge one time. The guy had forgotten to put suger in."

Van Hengel left Second Harvest about five years ago.

Since then, he has helped the French open several food banks in Paris and its environs. His latest venture as a consultant took him to Brussels, Belgium.

Van Hengel sees no end to the potential of the food-bank movement. He would like to see it spread in Third World countries. It merely awaits the involvement of the right individuals to spread it, he said.

Wheat market improved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The outlook for U.S. wheat farmers has improved significantly, aided in part by huge subsidized sales to the Soviet Union.

An additional sale of 700,000 metric tons to the Soviets was announced Tuesday by the Agriculture Department. Overall, exports are expected to rise more than 50 percent from last year, reducing the U.S. wheat stockpile to the lowest level in six years.

In a related analysis, the department's Economic Research Service said the rising demand and shrinking inventories have boosted wheat prices well above last year's harvest lows of about $2.28 per bushel.

Over the entire wheat marketing year, which began last June 1, the national average farm price is expected to be in the range of $2.55 to $2.65 per bushel, up from $2.42 in 1986-87, the report said. That will be the first year-to-year increase since 1983-84.

Looking briefly at 1988 harvest prospects, the report noted that plantings of winter wheat last fall for this summer's harvest were the smallest in 10 years. Spring wheat plantings may be up slightly if strong prices entice farmers away from the USDA's 1988 acreage program.

War turns 'City of Flowers' into refugee center

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — The war next door in Afghanistan has transformed this "City of Flowers" into a squalid center for refugees.

The population of 300,000 has more than tripled to about 1 million. The city, which for 25 centuries was the gateway to central Asia, echoes with the sounds of the craftsmen's hammers and hooves of horses and donkeys, some of which carry Soviet goods smuggled from Afghanistan.

The air reeks with the fumes from oily gasoline burned by the ubiquitous three-wheeled scooters that serve as taxis.

Peshawar derives its name from the sanskrit word "pushpapura," which means "city of flowers."

The famous Khyber Pass to the west has been the route of marching armies throughout history, including the invading Persians, Greeks, Turks and Mongols.

Pathan tribesmen guard the pass, which crosses into Afghanistan, as Pathans did down through the ages.

Britain left its mark on Peshawar in the form of an area known as the "cantonment," which the British built for their colonial administrative offices, military barracks, residences, parks, churches and shops.

Unlike the rest of the city, the cantonment has broad, paved roads and single-story houses with large lawns — all left behind when the British departed 40 years ago.

The real charm, however, is in the old city where the Kabuli Gate leads out to the Khyber Pass and on to Kabul, Afghanistan's capital 140 miles to the west. The road is called Qessa Khawani — Street of Story Tellers. Legend has it that travelers were regaled with tales by professional story-tellers in the evenings in the tea shops that still dot the bazaar.

The influx of Afghan refugees has turned Peshawar into a teeming metropolis. The arrival of Soviet troops in Afghanistan in 1979 brought widespread smuggling and black marketeering to Peshawar.

Some of the foreign arms shipped to the Afghan resistance fighters for their struggle against communist forces inside Afghanistan end up on the black market.

Other smuggled goods range from Soviet stationery to electrical appliances, textiles and automobile tires.

About half the goods sold by shops in the Karkhana Bazaar are made in the Soviet Union.

Hair dryers, irons, television sets, washing machines and air conditioners are among many Soviet-made items smuggled on donkeys from Afghanistan through the rugged mountainous passes into Peshawar.

A Soviet-made washing machine costs $43 while in the open market where Soviet goods are not available, a washer would fetch $126.

A Pakistani shop owner who sells only Japanese and Western appliances said he bought a Soviet-made air conditioner for his house.

"It's much cheaper than in my shop," he said. "The government is closing its ears and eyes to the smuggling."

In the open market, importers have to pay a duty that is three times the basic market value of the goods, according to businessmen.

Afghans, including guerrilla organizations, have sunk their roots deep in Peshawar. The seven main guerrilla groups operate out of expansive offices, and also have plots of land, religious and cultural centers, schools and hospitals.

Afghans have also opened businesses in Peshawar, contributing to the city's economy and attracting tourists seeking Afghan rugs and handicrafts.

Zoologists hope to save Oman turtles

MUSCAT, Oman (AP) — Man, wild dogs and foxes are threatening one of the world's few remaining nesting-turtle populations. U.S. and Dutch zoologists have been summoned to Oman to help save the reptiles that now reach only half their usual 850-pound weight.

"People have been seen riding the turtles up the beach," said Mahmoud Amour al-Barwani, director of the Oman's Marine Science and Fisheries Center.

He and other conservationists said thousands of turtle eggs buried in beach sand along Oman's Arabian Sea coast have been wiped out by tourists lighting fires that inadvertently bake them.

Plastic wrappers are another lethal man-made hazard. The turtles eat them, apparently mistaking them for jellyfish, and kill themselves in the process.

Foxes and wild animals dig up the eggs and eat them as well as pick off hatchlings, scientists said.

The two most significant are the loggerhead, or Caretta Caretta, and the green turtle, or Chelonia Mydas.

Official estimates indicate that about 100,000 turtles nest on Oman's Masirah Island in the Arabian Sea, making it the world's biggest loggerhead nesting colony.

Al-Barwani said: "Ras al-Hadd is now a big tourist draw and visitors are disrupting nesting."

Perran Ross, 38, a zoologist attached to the Massachusetts-based Earthwatch organization, has been called in to work with the government on the protection program.

Working with him is Dr. Rod Salm, 40, a Dutch marine zoologist from the Swiss-based International Union for the Conservation of Nature, who said Oman has an important role to play in turtle conservation.

Salm, project leader for the government's coastal zone management project, said: "In the past, sightings of green turtles weighing 850 pounds were common.

"Today, most turtles seen are about half that weight, a sign that predation by man is having significant effect.

"The balance has been upset. Unless it's restored, the green turtle could be just another statistic on the growing list of extinct species. Fortunately, Oman is very conservation-minded."

Nesting females emerge from the sea in moonlight to lay up to 100 eggs at a time. But the chances of them hatching and the baby turtles reaching maturity are 1,000 to 1, scientists say.

Evidence of this lies on the beaches, where egg clutches are destroyed or washed out by salt water.

Oman recently banned commercial exploitation of its turtle population and banned trawlers from waters off the main nesting beaches at Ras al-Hadd and Masirah.

But Al-Barwani said that man remains a problem.

"People lighting fires on the beaches are a big problem. Apart from inadvertently cooking the eggs, the light of the fires attract hatchlings away from the sea.

"Plastic debris left littered about is also dangerous. Floating in the water, it looks like jellyfish...

"We're working hard to educate people," he added. "I don't believe we should ban tourists, but explain to them how to behave.

"It also means persuading fishermen not to disturb nesting beaches and not spread out nets in which hatchlings can be entangled."

Field teams from the Marine Science and Fisheries Center now make nightly checks of two beaches at Ras al-Hadd and four beaches at Masirah.

They count tracks to estimate nesting numbers, measure, weigh and tag turtles, and make random egg counts. So far, 23,000 turtles have been tagged.

About 50 of these have been sighted as far away as Ethiopia, India, Pakistan, Kenya and Somalia.

Recent studies indicate that females do not reach sexual maturity for 30 to 50 years.

Salm said that means that the results of the protection effort will not be known until well into the next century, when the next generation hits the beaches.

Israeli soldiers kill two Palestinians, injure 5

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli soldiers killed two Palestinians and wounded five today during protests on the Moslem Sabbath. Israeli officials cautioned U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz to move slowly on proposals for Arab self-rule in the occupied territories.

One Palestinian was killed in the refugee camp of Jabaliya in the occupied Gaza Strip and a second was shot dead in Hebron in the occupied West Bank south of Jerusalem, an army official said. Four other Arabs were wounded in Hebron, he said.

An Associated Press reporter saw a fifth wounded Palestinian in Nablus' Al Ittihad Hospital.

The deaths bring to 67 the number of Arabs confirmed killed since rioting broke out in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip 11 weeks ago.

The army official said the death and woundings in Hebron occurred when "soldiers fired at the legs of hundreds of Arabs coming out of the mosque after the crowd did not disperse when tear gas and rubber bullets were used."

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he had no details on the Jabaliya fatality. But the Arab-owned Palestine Press Service said soldiers shot and killed a 12-year-old boy there and wounded as many as 20 others.

Two Palestinians were arrested outside Jerusalem's sacred Dome of the Rock and al Aqsa mosques carrying sharp spiked weapons and nationalistic pamphlets, city police said.

Shultz met separately with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and his political rival, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres. Shultz arrived Thursday for a five-day visit to present U.S. proposals for ending the violence.

Informed sources said Shamir urged Shultz to move slowly on Palestinian self-rule in the occupied territories. He said there should be "a time of testing" for up to three years before negotiations are held on a final settlement, said the sources. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

Shultz's proposal is understood to be a two-step plan that would loosen Israeli controls over the 1.5 million Palestinians in the occupied territories immediately and lead to negotiations on a final settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict by December.

It is widely known that Shamir rejects key elements of the American plan, while Peres supports it in principle.

Instead, Shamir has proposed several years of limited Palestinian self-rule based on the 1978 Camp David agreements, a plan rejected by Egypt and Jordan.

Obando y Bravo proposes new round of Contra talks

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo has proposed that a new round of peace talks between the leftist Sandinista government and Contra rebels be held in Guatemala March 10-12.

The Roman Catholic archbishop of Managua, who is mediating efforts to establish a cease-fire, suggested the dates Thursday in response to a letter from President Daniel Ortega.

He made no reference to Ortega's request for three days of negotiations beginning today and did not explain why he was suggesting different dates.

Obando y Bravo suspended the last round of negotiations Feb. 18 in Guatemala after presenting a proposal for breaking a deadlock that arose in the talks' first hours.

Deputy Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco accused the cardinal, Nicaragua's Catholic leader, of breaking off the talks before the government could deliver its formal, conditional acceptance of the proposal.

In his letter, Obando y Bravo asked Ortega if the president's letter of Tuesday was "a rejection of the acceptance in principle that your delegation belatedly gave" to the proposal.

There was no immediate response from the government to the March dates or Obando y Bravo's letter.

The cardinal said representatives of the Nicaraguan Resistance, the umbrella group for the rebels, told him Thursday they "are willing to continue discussing the proposal the mediator made Feb. 18 in Guatemala."

Amado novel tells of 'primitive democracy'

Brazil's most famous author has 'Showdown'

ENTERTAINMENT

NEW YORK (AP) — After a week of interviews, receptions and book-signings, Brazil's most famous author is clearly tired, but on certain subjects he still perks up.

Take prostitutes and democracy.

"I am with the poor," says Jorge Amado, lifting his full white head from the back of a chair in his hotel room. "I'm not a novelist of class, of workers, but of the marginal — whores and vagrants, the dispossessed."

Amado's new novel, "Showdown" (Bantam, $18.95), is about whores, cattle drovers, sharecropping families, an Arab merchant, a black blacksmith and a half-breed planter; in short, a town — from its conception to the arrival of religion and the law.

It is his 22nd novel and the book his publisher hopes will win the author of "Gabriela, Clove and Cinnamon" and "Dona Flor and Her Two Husbands" greater fame in the United States.

Like those novels, "Showdown" is set in Bahia, a region of northeastern Brazil known for tropical beauty, magic and, at the turn of the century, sweeping cacao plantations.

"It was 50 years since I wrote my first book about the plantations, 'Cacau,'" says the 75-year-old Amado, a small, portly man with an owlish face. "I wanted to write another about the region, telling about things I had seen, the growth of the cities in the middle of the jungle.

"I wrote with the intent to show that the true heroes aren't those that have their names on streets, and the statues in the plazas. These really aren't the pioneers, the heroes — they just built on what was there. The real hero is the townspeople."

"Showdown" traces the history of Tocaia Grande or Big Ambush, named for the attack by a plantation owner on a rival's gunmen. The site of the fight becomes home to characters of different races, religions and classes, most of them refugees from violence or property seizures in other parts.

A turning point comes when the townspeople band together to defend a group of local whores from some brutish cattle drovers. From there, they go on to collectively fight off flood and disease.

However, as one character says: "People could make it against flood and pestilence; but not against the law; they went under." In the end, the son of a plantation owner wrests the town from those who developed it.

"The biggest enemy is the law," Amado declares, chopping the air with a hand. "The law is always against the poor. I don't think law is made for man, but against him, and against liberty.

"Tocaia Grande is like a primitive democracy, where there is no law."

Amado says his work is political only in the broadest sense: "Books have the possibility to influence, and that influence is a political thing." But he argues fervently in support of socialism, which he says is part of "the march of history."

"With democracy," he adds. "Without democracy, there isn't socialism, there is dictatorship."

Despite its obvious political message, "Showdown" is also a celebration of the people of Bahia: the Indian Natario da Fonseca, a gunman who becomes shepherd of the young town; the wrinkled Caroca, a whore who discovers her greatest joy in delivering babies; the mischievous black, Castor Abduim; and the huge Arab, Fadul Abdala, who dispenses sugar-cane rum and wisdom at the local store.

Amado's books have been translated into more than 45 languages and are widely read outside Brazil. But his works have sold relatively poorly in the United States, a pattern Bantam Books hopes to change with "Showdown."

It paid Amado $250,000 for the right to publish the novel in English, a record payment by an American publisher for the hardcover rights to a foreign book. It is more than 10 times any advance the author had received for previous English-language rights.

The translation is by Gregory Rabassa, who rendered Gabriel Garcia Marquez's "One Hundred Years of Solitude" into English.

Brazilian author Jorge Amado holds a copy of his new book, "Showdown" during an interview in New York, recently. Amado's new novel is about prostitutes, cattle drovers, sharecropping families, an Arab merchant, a black blacksmith and a half-breed planter: in short, a town — from its conception to the arrival of religion and the law.

Amado, who has spent several periods in exile because of his political beliefs, is now so lionized in his own country that he works on his books elsewhere. He set out for Europe in late January to write his next novel, which will focus on the mixture of religions in Bahia.

ABC collects ratings gold for its Olympics coverage

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC has swept to victory and ratings gold with its coverage of the Winter Olympics.

Its Olympic telecasts for the week that ended Sunday captured four of the top 10 place in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings and won the week for ABC.

ABC also moved ahead of NBC and into first place for the February sweeps and into second place ahead of CBS for the season-to-date. It kept its first-place position among the evening news shows. The "CBS Evening News," which had dominated that category for the entire season until last week, finished second.

NBC, whose eight-hour mini-series "Noble House" managed to win only 16th place, was second for the week. Its highly rated comedy shows did well, but were pushed down a few notches by the Olympics.

ABC, which usually takes third place, won the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings for the week with an average of 19.4. NBC was second with 15.0 and CBS was third with 12.8. For the season-to-date, NBC now has a 16.3 rating, ABC 13.8, CBS 13.6.

The rating is the percentage of the nation's 88.6 million households with televisions.

It was only ABC's third weekly victory of the season, which began in September.

Nike plans to drop ads using Beatles' song

NEW YORK (AP) — The sports-shoe maker Nike Inc. has agreed to discontinue ads featuring the Beatles' recording "Revolution," the company's lawyer said.

Nike's license from Capitol Records Inc. to use the Beatles' recording expires next month, but before it runs out, the company plans to run one more new commercial with the song, said Gerald Sobel, a New York-based lawyer for the athletic footwear company. The ad campaign began last spring.

The commercials have shown people wearing Nike shoes and walking or playing basketball and other sports. The only sound is the Beatles' recording.

The three surviving Beatles, through their recording company, Apple Records, have claimed they never intended that their recordings be used in commercials.

Nike, which is based in Beaverton, Ore., has insisted it is an innocent bystander in a longstanding dispute between Apple and companies that hold the licensing rights to the Beatle's original recordings.

Nike reportedly paid $250,000 to Capitol Records, which holds the North American licensing rights to the Beatles' recordings, for the right to use the song in ads for a year.

Nike recently decided against exercising its option to use the song for another year.

Last July, Apple Records, which is controlled by the three surviving Beatles, George Harrison, Paul McCartney and Ringo Starr, and John Lennon's widow, Yoko Ono, filed a suit charging that Nike was using the rock group's "persona and goodwill" without permission.

The suit, pending in U.S. District Court in New York, asked for $15 million in damages and named Nike, its ad agency, Capitol Records and EMI Records Ltd., which holds licensing rights outside North America.

Steve Martin gets Harvard's Hasty Pudding Award

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Actor-comedian Steve Martin had a question as soon as he received the Hasty Pudding Club Man of the Year award at Harvard University: "There is a cash prize for this, right?"

Appearing Tuesday in a rumpled, oversize tuxedo and rubber-soled suede shoes without laces, Martin delighted the audience of nearly 200 when he leaped like a game-show contestant, shouting, "I won, I won."

He received a brass pudding pot, but no cash.

The nation's oldest undergraduate theatrical organization gave its annual award to Martin for "his lasting and impressive contribution to the world of entertainment," said program co-producer Andrea Campbell.

Martin said receiving the award made up for his movie "Roxanne" not being nominated for an Oscar this year.

"Yes it does, because it's such a prestigious award, and so few people have gotten one," he said.

Martin's first two comedy albums won Grammy awards and he has written and co-starred in such box-office hits as "The Jerk" and "Pennies from Heaven."

The Hasty Pudding Club awarded Lucille Ball its Woman of the Year award last week.

Veteran lawyer Murray Miller and his son Rick pose for a photo in their Phoenix office this week. On the eve of the greatest challenge of his 30-year legal career, Murray, impeached Gov. Evan Mecham's lawyer, sees a 'lynch mob atmosphere' undermining his fight to save the governor from the political gallows of an impeachment conviction.

Siegan confirmation creates Bork redux

WASHINGTON (AP) — The face had changed and some views were different, but senators might have imagined Robert H. Bork was back when they held a confirmation hearing for the most controversial judicial nominee before them.

Bernard Siegan, nominee for the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals spent his confirmation hearing Thursday defending what one senator called his "remarkably extreme views." Bork did the same during confirmation hearings on his Supreme Court nomination.

And like Bork, Siegan pledged over and over that he would cast his personal constitutional views aside if confirmed, and follow Supreme Court precedent.

So did Bork.

The players were the same, too, in the Senate Judiciary Committee hearing room.

Liberal Sens. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., both major opponents of Bork, were highly critical of Siegan, a 63-year-old professor of constitutional law at the University of San Diego.

Conservative Sens. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, and Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, two of Bork's most ardent backers, jumped to Siegan's defense.

And People For The American Way, the civil libertian group that ran a controversial anti-Bork television spot narrated by Gregory Peck, promptly issued a news release attacking Siegan.

Siegan, the group said, "spent the morning distancing himself from his entire body of legal scholarship."

Siegan's views do not always parallel those of Bork, but he is just as controversial.

He wrote that the Supreme Court reached the right conclusion in outlawing school segregation but used faulty reasoning. He said prayer in schools could be constitutional, although the Supreme Court has said otherwise. He gave equal weight to property rights and human rights. And he said the framers of the 14th Amendment, which governs due process rights, never intended its scope to be as broad as that defined by the Supreme Court.

Leahy — who conducted the confirmation hearing because committee Chairman Joseph Biden Jr., D-Del., is recuperating from brain surgery — said afterward that Siegan's almost total lack of experience in the courtroom and his "remarkably extreme views" make him "one of the more difficult ones for the Senate to approve."

"The last time you were in federal court I was 12 years old," Leahy said.

Asked about Siegan's promises to follow Supreme Court precedent, Leahy said, "There is a feeling there may be a confirmation conversion here, too."

The senator used the same term during Bork's hearing, accusing the nominee of changing many of his controversial positions in order to win confirmation. Bork proved to be unconvincing, and the Senate rejected his nomination 58-42.

"In many ways Bork would be easier to accept because he had judicial experience and federal court experience," Leahy said.

During the hearing, Hatch listed many of Siegan's controversial writings, and repeatedly gave the nominee the chance to say he would "observe the law of the land" and resign if unable to do so.

"I hope people will give you a fair shake," Hatch said.

The 9th circuit, on which new Supreme Court justice Anthony Kennedy served, covers Alaska, Arizona, California, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, Guam and the Northern Mariana Islands.

Siegan told the committee: "There are times I will rule contrary to my own feelings. It would be a direct violation and contrary of my oath to push my position ahead of the Supreme Court."

Metzenbaum told Siegan, "I'm concerned that if confirmed, you will find a way to implement your views. Circuit courts are often the courts of last resort." He said there would be a "great risk" if the Senate confirmed Siegan.

Siegan said his lack of courtroom experience would not be a problem, commenting: "A circuit court judge is given scholarly duties to see if what the lower court did was right. I have spent 20 years of my life in scholarly activities. Even a lawyer with trial experience may not know how to write an opinion."

Father-son team leads Mecham's defense

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — On the eve of the greatest challenge of his 30-year legal career, Gov. Evan Mecham's lawyer sees a "lynch mob atmosphere" undermining his fight to save the governor from an impeachment conviction.

"They're trying to sandbag the governor," Murray Miller said, referring to Mecham's foes in and out of the state Senate which is scheduled to convene as a court Monday.

"If they convict him, they can also stamp the Dracula clause," said the metaphor-prone attorney. "They can bar him from holding office for life — putting the stake through his heart."

Miller, 60, who with his son, Rick, has defended the governor through months of impeachment proceedings, got a surprise this week when Jerris Leonard, a Washington attorney and former congressman, walked into his office and announced he had been hired by the governor.

"That was the first time I met him, when he walked in here on Tuesday," Miller said with a shrug. "I spoke with the governor and he said he was bringing (Leonard) on board for advice."

The Senate dealt Leonard a setback Wednesday night, however, rebuffing his plea for a delay to let him catch up on the case but agreeing to let Leonard join the defense team.

"I will be the lead counsel at the beginning," Miller said as he left the proceedings. "I'm most familiar with the case."

The 23-count impeachment accused Mecham of concealing a campaign loan, diverting money from the governor's protocol fund for private use and obstructing justice in the investigation of a death threat allegation.

Miller said he believes Mecham is innocent, but that it is impossible for the Republican governor to get a fair trial even though the GOP controls both houses of the Legislature.

"You really have a lynch mob atmosphere in the city," Miller said.

"You're not dealing with a neutral jury," he said. "You're dealing with senators who may be predisposed against the governor...I'll try to beseech them to keep an open mind. But, politicians being what they are, I'm not sure that's going to be possible."

> "They're trying to sandbag the governor."
> — Murray Miller, defense attorney for impeached Arizona Gov. Evan Mecham

If Mecham faces difficult odds, he has in Miller an attorney who knows how it feels to be an underdog.

Described by colleagues as talkative and tenacious, the New York-born lawyer is the son of European immigrants and was the youngest of six children raised in a one-bath, two-bedroom Brooklyn tenement.

Miller recalled nostalgically how he waded through snowdrifts to carry his father's lunch to his upholstery shop.

"Oh, Dad, you're telling those stories again," chided his son Rick, 28, who joined his father's law practice a year ago. Another Miller son is a court stenographer and a third is about to enter law school.

Miller was sent by the Army to New Mexico where he met and married Zelda Cohen, a registered nurse, and attended the University of New Mexico.

A job selling X-ray equipment brought them to Arizona, where he decided to try law school. Mrs. Miller worked to pay his tuition at the University of Arizona, and in 1958 he set up a one-man practice.

"We were really broke," he recalled of the days when he accepted any case that came along.

His current clients include Max Dunlap, a contractor who is suing Phoenix for $650 million over his subsequently reversed conviction in the car-bomb slaying of newspaper investigative reporter Don Bolles.

Democrats file for New York primary

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Supporters of Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis filed petitions containing more than four times the number of signatures needed to get on the April 19 New York presidential primary ballot.

Thursday was deadline day for the Democratic candidates at the state Board of Elections and, in addition to Dukakis, supporters of Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon also filed petitions to get their candidates spots on New York's statewide ballot.

Supporters of Jesse Jackson and Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt had filed earlier in the week.

Soldier acquitted of desertion, receives discharge

Prosecutor expected a prison sentence

FORT DIX, N.J. (AP) — A U.S. soldier was acquitted of desertion and given a bad conduct discharge for fleeing his West German base to live in the Soviet Union, shocking prosecutors who had expected him to do prison time.

When he took the stand Thursday, Roberts told how one of his sergeants told him to stay away from German women. Roberts said he "panicked" because he didn't want to leave Ms. Neumann, and scaled a fence at the base.

Courtroom spectators, mostly military personnel, gasped when presiding judge Col. Earl Pauley ordered Pfc. Wade E. Roberts, 22, of Riverside, Calif., released from military custody Thursday.

"I feel great!" Roberts said after he was convicted of a lesser charge of being absent without leave and given a bad conduct discharge.

Roberts, described by a superior as "the most reprehensible, casual soldier" in his command but as "confused" by his attorneys, said he will live in West Germany with his wife, Petra Neumann, and their 3-month-old son.

The military pressed hard for a conviction of desertion during the 1½-day courtmartial at Fort Dix. That offense carries a maximum penalty of a dishonorable discharge and three years' imprisonment.

"I'm shocked," said Capt. Daniel Shaver, chief military attorney. He said the Army expected Roberts to be sentenced to the maximum AWOL penalty of a dishonorable discharge and one year's imprisonment.

When the sentence was read, Roberts and his attorneys broke into wide grins, and the soldier and his wife embraced and kissed. Shaver's jaw dropped, and he stared at the judge.

To prove desertion, the Army had to demonstrate that when Roberts left his base at Giessen, West Germany, last February, he never intended to return to the Army.

The prosecution produced a half-dozen witnesses in an effort to show Roberts didn't like the Army, talked about leaving, didn't get along with his superiors and had disciplinary problems.

But Roberts' attorneys argued their client fled his unit because was harassed by his superiors for, among other things, dating Ms. Neumann because she was German.

When he took the stand Thursday, Roberts told how one of his sergeants told him to stay away from German women. Roberts said he "panicked" because he didn't want to leave Ms. Neumann, and scaled a fence at the base.

When they went to the Soviet Union, they were put to work on a snake farm, but quickly became disenchanted with Soviet life.

After getting Soviet approval, Roberts and his wife flew to Frankfurt, West Germany, on Nov. 4 and was told by a U.S. embassy official to turn himself over to the military the next day. Before he could, however, he was arrested by the Army.

Roberts' civilian attorney, Ronald Kuby, asked for lenient treatment. "Private Wade Roberts is not cut out for the Army. He doesn't need the Army. The Army doesn't need him," Kuby said.

Roberts returned to the Philadelphia Naval Yard brig, where he has been held for the past several months, to pick up his belongings, and went to an undisclosed location with Ms. Neumann, officials said.

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Pat Robertson's campaign complained Thursday that supporters of his main Maine Republican rivals, George Bush and Bob Dole, have cut a deal to deny him state convention delegate slots.

Organizers for Bush and Dole said they were merely putting their own candidates' interests first.

John Solberg, Robertson's state coordinator, issued a statement asserting that "the Bush and Dole campaigns are attempting to keep the majority silent in the Democratic process."

Solberg made his comments the day after the GOP caucus in Waterville, at which Robertson won a straw poll but came away with no delegates. Solberg said Robertson led the straw poll with 57 votes, Bush had 40, Dole 20, and Jack Kemp eight.

But Bush and Dole backers joined together in the caucusing to block Robertson from maintaining a winner-take-all plurality. The caucus' 12 delegate slots for the state convention were then awarded to the stop-Robertson combine.

Solberg said a similar arrangement was made at the GOP caucus in Kittery last week.

Gov. John McKernan, who has been campaigning for Bush, said Thursday that the vice president's campaign was acting in self-interest to "maximize the number of delegates" it could lock up.

Executive Committee adopts two-year schedules

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The District 4-5A Executive Committee met in Big Spring Thursday to officially adopt the district football and basketball schedules for the next two years and there are some major changes.

The committee, composed of the athletic directors and school superintendents from Midland, Odessa, San Angelo and Abilene, adopted a district format that differs from the schedule used the past two years.

The district schedule has become a heated thorn for 4-5A since Big Spring dropped from the league to Class 4A two years ago, leaving 4-5A with an odd-numbered, seven-team league.

The odd number of teams forces the district to give an open date to each team during the course of district play. It seems all the teams would like to have the first open date and no one wants the last open date.

San Angelo, the only town with only one team in the league, again draws the first open date. The only way to force San Angelo, the odd member, from dropping that request would be to force a complete blind draw, which could mean teams would have to play at home on the same weekend, forcing games on Thursday, Friday or Saturday. No one wants to take that chance, giving San Angelo a schedule advantage.

However, this year teams were paired in such a way that the Midland, Odessa and Abilene local rivilaries would kickoff the district season while San Angelo was open.

This is nothing new for Midland High and Midland Lee since they opened the district season against each other the last two years. It will be a new experience for the Abilene and Odessa teams.

When one of the local teams has an open date, the other will play San Angelo. This is a new feature in the schedule and means that Midland teams will always be playing against Abilene teams on the same weekend and Odessa teams on the same weekend.

The disadvantage of the new schedule is that a team could play two weeks in a row on the road, causing concern that fans may forget about the team when they are gone so long.

For instance, San Angelo has back-to-back road games against Lee and Odessa High this year. Lee has a road game against Abilene High, an open date and a road game against Permian, meaning the Rebels will go a month without playing at home.

Home sites will switch in the last year of the two-year agreement.

It wasn't all good news for Midland High. The Bulldogs again catch Lee and Permian to open the district season, a fact that coach Doug McCutchen wasn't too thrilled with.

"It's not a great schedule for us with the two openers we have," said McCutchen. "Ideally, we would like an open date or someone else in between those two games. Still, it's better than last year when we had Permian, Lee, San Angelo and Abilene High in order. At least we get an open date following the Permian game."

Lee appears to have a favorable schedule, again drawing an open date prior to the Permian game. Lee has beaten Permian the last two years with an open date in front of that big game.

"We like our district schedule," said Lee coach Earl Miller. "I'm sure Permian isn't excited about us having that open date again before we play them. We won't fill that date, so we will have another nine-game regular season schedule. In fact, it looked for a while like we may have only a six-game schedule. We had a lot of trouble lining up non-conference games for next fall."

Lubbock Coronado, Plainview and El Paso Eastwood all dropped Lee from its schedule. Lee has a new two-year agreement with Killeen, Del Rio and El Paso Andress, but the Rebels must travel to Killeen and El Paso this fall in a hectic non-conference slate.

"At least, we should be able to learn to play on the road," said Miller.

Rangers ousted from 3A playoffs

By JOHN FREY
MRT Correspondent

LAMESA — The Greenwood Rangers took an early exit from the 3A state basketball playoffs with a disappointing bi-district 48-39 loss to the Idalou Wildcats.

In a game where neither team played particularly well, Idalou used a late forth quarter spurt to take the lead and never looked back. To that point both teams were showing signs of their inexperience by shooting poorly and turning the ball over in bunches.

The first quarter started slowly and was a sign of things to come. Both teams seemed to be feeling each other out to get themselves into the game. Greenwood used a small shooting streak, hitting four out of five, to take a slim 11-9 lead.

The second quarter started out with a little more hope of getting the offenses on track. With 3:42 left in the half, the Wildcats had taken the lead at 16-15. But again both teams went dry. The two teams combined for only two field goals the rest of the half with Greenwood going into the lockerroom with a 20-18 lead.

First half statistics echoed the poor play as the Rangers hit only 7 of 22 shots from the field for 32 percent while Idalou was even worse at 27 percent on 7 of 26 shooting.

Both teams were not shy of the three-point shot but neither was particularly successful either. Greenwood was empty in the first half, shooting 0 for 5 from long range while Idalou hit only 2 of 8. Greenwood led in turnovers, 8-6.

The third quarter was more of the same. Idalou took the lead briefly at 33-32 with 5:00 left on a three pointer by Kyle Sisk. But that lead slowly diminished as the quarter ended with Greenwood back on top at 30-28.

The forth quarter brought the spurt that everyone was waiting for, except Greenwood Ranger fans. Greenwood seemed to take control of the game as they took a five-point lead with 6:00 left. Then came disaster.

Idalou scored on five straight possessions, four of those by Trevor Bell. On those five possessions, Greenwood turned the ball over three times and missed two free throws to add to their frustrations. In all, the Rangers did not score from 6:00 left until Tommy Lawson hit a three pointer with :08 left in the game.

Neither coach was particalarly pleased with the way their teams played. However, Ranger coach Robert Chaney kept a positive outlook after the game.

"There was just a matter of three or four minutes that they took the game away from us," Chaney said. "They went through a stretch where they converted on our turnovers and it really picked them up. But this is a whole new experience for our players. This is our first playoffs in three or four years and we have a lot of young players. We did not play particulary well, but we played hard.

"You had to sit and wait for that moment when someone was going to break out and take control. But we really did not expect it to happen the way it did. We knew that we would have to protect the ball and we did not do it when we had to."

Idalou coach Monty Malcom had many of the same feelings.

"Both teams seemed really tight in the first half. Neither of us could get on track. We were really disappointed at halftime with the way that we had played but we also felt fortunate to only be down by two points. Greenwood probably was not too happy with their play either.

Chaps win final regular season tilt

From Staff Reports

BORGER — Midland College efficiently took care of business in its last conference outing, whipping Frank Phillips College here Thursday night 91-60.

That left the Chaps with a 23-6 mark for the year and 12-4 in conference. They are in third place right now, awaiting the results of Saturday night's game between South Plains College and Western Texas College at Snyder.

New Mexico Junior College upset league-leading Odessa College in Hobbs Thursday, 78-70, to put those two schools into a tie for the conference lead. Odessa will be the top-seeded Western Conference team in the upcoming Region V tournament because of their larger winning margin between OC-NMJC in their first meeting. Midland College is ½-game ahead of SPC pending tomorrow's game at Snyder.

Frank Phillips College saluted it all-time leading scorer, Carlos Harris, at halftime Thursday night. But that was about all the recognition the sophomore sharpshooter got all night. He came in averaging 30 points a game, but a nasty Chaparral defense limited him to just eight points for the night. Harris needed 10 to hit the 1,700 point mark.

And the Chaparral offense wasn't too bad as it ripped off 10 straight points to open the game, seven of them by Herman "Skeeter" Henry. Midway through the first half, Midland was up 22-7.

Thomas leads, but Witt scores high

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Debi Thomas spoke diplomatically, but the judges' scoring sparked thunderous boos from the Winter Olympics crowd and the pungent comment, "It stinks," from her coach.

The judges flipped for Katerina Witt's Broadway boogie-woogie — blue feathers, soft shoe and "Hello, Dolly" — and scored her much higher on artistic merit after giving Thomas the edge on technical merit.

Thomas performed as precisely as a surgeon, a profession she hopes to pursue. Witt showed the pizzazz of the actress she wants to be.

The numbers added up to a slight lead by Thomas, of San Jose, Calif., over the world champion Witt of East Germany going into the free skating program Saturday night, with Liz Manley of Canada in third.

Any of them can win the gold.

None of them wants to rile judges, but Thomas couldn't conceal her disappointment completely.

"Of course, I hoped to have higher marks," Thomas allowed after she received a 5.6, four 5.7s and four 5.8s for artistic merit. Witt got one 5.8 and the rest 5.9s.

The partisan, American flag-waving crowd of 19,000 was more vocal in its disapproval and Thomas' coach, Alex McGowan, was flat angry. In a departure from decorum, McGowan held his nose to show he thought the judging was a little smelly.

"It hurts me when I see her skating so well and she's dropped in artistic marks when they raise Katarina," he said later. "Katarina did skate well — I have no problem there — but I'm a little concerned it may happen again in the long program. No matter how well Debi skates, she will be dropped in the long."

The judges indeed appear to have drawn the lines between Thomas and Witt, but that could work to Thomas' advantage in the free skate as it did for fellow Californian Brian Boitano when he won the gold last Saturday.

Ties in scoring are broken by giving the nod to the better technical skater, the one who leaps higher, spins straighter and lands more lightly. Boitano held the technical advantage over Canadian Brian Orser, and Thomas hopes a similar advantage will enable her to hand Witt her first defeat in a long program since 1982.

There were no judgment calls on the giant slalom course, only sheer speed by an Italian who won a gold medal and a red Ferrari, and proclaimed with Muhammad Ali bravado, "I am the strongest in the world."

Alberto Tomba, 21 and cocky, certainly was the fastest skier on this warm, sunny day, whipping past the gates in 2 minutes, 6.37 seconds in two runs to earn the new sports car his father promised him if he won.

Tomba was more than a second faster than silver medalist Hubert Strolz of Austria, the Alpine combined champion, and more than two seconds faster than bronze medalist Pirmin Zurbriggen of Switzerland, the downhill winner.

Tomba sped gracefully along the course with the powerful legs and efficient style of a young Ingemar Stenmark, the Swede who once dominated the sport and won two gold medals in 1980.

The present-day Stenmark, 31, was back in the Olympics after missing the 1984 Games because of professionalism, but the return wasn't so sweet. He was 30th after the first run and didn't finish the second. Asked how it felt to be back, he replied, "Right now, it doesn't feel so good."

Fourteen other skiers, including all four Canadians, weren't feeling so wonderful, either, after they were disqualified from the second run because their suits were not approved by the International Ski Federation. None would have won a medal, but they all spent a long time training to get here.

All the training in women's figure skating didn't produce many surprises. More than two hours passed in the short program before the crowd got pumped up by a superb performance by Japan's Midori Ito. Although skating earlier than the top contenders, she produced high marks with an exuberant, smooth routine, then delighted the roaring crowd by waving joyfully in every direction.

Witt slipped twice in practice and looked distracted just before her program, but some sharp words from her coach and a few moments to settle down helped.

MC women blast OC

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Midland College blasted Odessa College 8-1 in a women's tennis match here Thursday that had been billed as a battle between two of the top junior college teams in the country, but the Chaps turned it into nothing more than a routine win while running their record to 9-0.

For MC coach Joe Williams, it was the first time this season he had utilized a complete team. For the fall term, he had only five players and was having to forfeit two matches against each opponent.

"I told our players that they had one of their better teams, but we had pride and tradition, plus we are ranked number one and we wanted to prove that the ranking was correct," Williams said.

The Chaps lost only the No. 1 doubles match to Odessa's Melissa Nelson and Julie Cass. Nelson and Cass are ranked among the top doubles teams in the country. They beat Caroline Bhaguandas and Sara Hancock 6-3, 6-2.

Midland's Jill Vallandigham and Gabi Csorba had to struggle in their No. 3 doubles match against Sharon Westfall and Dena Hohn before winning 6-7, 6-1, 6-4.

Region I tourney starts tonight

From Staff Reports

That quest begins today with semifinal action in the Region I girls tournament. Amarillo Tascosa, 27-3 on the year, will go against the No. 3 state ranked North Richland Hills Richland, 34-1, at 6 p.m. while 24-7 Lubbock Monterey squares off against 31-2 and No. 4 ranked Duncanville in the 8 p.m. game.

The two winners will advance to Saturday's 11 a.m. final with that state berth on the line.

Tascosa and Monterey are both from District 3-5A and have had little trouble getting to this part of the playoffs. Tascosa drilled Midland Lee in bi-district and punished El Paso Hanks 63-40 in the area game at Chaparral Center Tuesday night.

Monterey eliminated 4-5A champion San Angelo in bi-district and then tossed 24-2 El Paso Eastwood out of the playoffs 64-42 Tuesday at Chaparral Center.

Unconscious Rebels roll

Associated Press

Jarvis Basnight was knocked out in the opening minute by Pacific University but Nevada-Las Vegas won on points anyway.

Basnight, second in the NCAA in field goal percentage and the rebounding leader of the Runnin' Rebels, was knocked unconscious when Pacific's Holger Fuerst elbowed him under the backboard 49 seconds into Thursday night's game.

Without him, the eighth-ranked Runnin' Rebels broke a 30-30 tie late in the first half and went on to beat Pacific 77-61.

Gerald Paddio scored 18 points and Anthony Cook added 15 for the Runnin' Rebels, who gave the Tigers their 18th consecutive loss. Stacey Augmon had 14 rebounds for Nevada-Las Vegas.

"I was very happy to get a win without Jarvis," Rebels Coach Jerry Tarkanian said. "Early in the game, we did not have anything going. We were absolutely horrible. Stacey Augmon was not there in the first half, but in the second half, his offensive rebounding made the difference."

Basnight, who makes 68.2 percent of his shots and averages 7.4 rebounds, was taken to Dameron Hospital in Stockton, Calif., with a concussion. He was released after the game but did not return to the arena.

"Las Vegas is a very good basketball team," Pacific Coach Denis Willens said. "Tonight, we could not play any better. We tried to slow the tempo down. We played the best 19 minutes and 30 seconds we could play against them."

Nevada-Las Vegas, 24-3 and 13-2 in the PCAA, scored the last four points of the first half to lead 34-30. The Rebels opened the second half with a 13-4 run in the first five minutes.

"In the first half, we were all playing together and everybody was doing what we were told to do," Pacific guard Christian Gray said. "Then — it always happens — you have a couple of individuals not playing together, and you break down."

"I was surprised we shut them down in the first half," guard Dan Embick said. "It was the best defense we played all year."

No. 1 Temple 94, Duquesne 55

Macon scored 18 points in the first half, matching the total for Duquesne's team. He made 9 of 18 shots and all six free throws.

Vreeswyk made five 3-pointers and Tim Perry scored 13 points, had nine rebounds and blocked nine shots. Ramon Rovas had 10 rebounds for Temple.

No. 2 Purdue 93, Illinois 79

McCants' spurt helped the Boilermakers open a 57-41 lead with 15:57 remaining. Purdue, 23-2 and 12-1 in the Big Ten, led by at least 10 points the rest of the way.

Nick Anderson scored 21 points to lead Illinois, 18-9 and 9-6. Lowell Hamilton and Kendall Gill scored 16 points each.

No. 10 Syracuse 91, Providence 73

Steve Thompson scored 18 points as the Orangemen used 15-point runs in each half to gain their 18th consecutive victory over Providence, 10-15 and 4-10.

Syracuse, 21-6 and 10-4 in the Big East, scored 15 straight points for a 29-12 lead, led 50-36 at the half and used its second 15-point spurt to go up by 25.

Delray Brooks scored 17 points for Providence, which has lost four straight and 11 of 13.

No. 11 BYU 76, Air Force 62

Michael Smith scored 21 points and had 12 rebounds for Brigham Young, 23-2 and 12-1 in the Western Athletic Conference.

Air Force, 11-3 and 4-9 in the Western Athletic Conference, stayed even with Brigham Young for the first 11 minutes before the Cougars opened a 37-25 lead with 2:29 remaining in the half.

No. 14 Bradley 67, Tulsa 62

Bradley, 21-4 and 10-2 in the Missouri Valley Conference, led nearly the entire first half until Tracy Moore's 3-pointer with six seconds left gave Tulsa a 28-27 halftime lead.

The Hurricane, 8-18 and 4-9, opened a 41-36 lead eight minutes into the second half before the Braves tied the game at 45-45 on a driving shot by Paul Wilson. Hwakins followed with the go-ahead basket.

No. 16 Wyoming 79, Utah 56

Fennis Dembo scored 19 points, including 14 in a second half that opened with a 16-2 Wyoming run.

Dembo had nine rebounds and Eric Leckner scored 14 points for the Cowboys, 21-5 and 10-5 in the WAC. Tommy Connor scored 14 points for Utah, 16-9 and 8-5.

No. 19 Loyola 96, St. Mary's 94

No. 20 Georgia Tech 76, Virginia 71

Tom Hammonds scored 23 points and Craig Neal made a school record 17 assists, breaking the single-game record of 14 set by Mark Price in 1985 and matched three times by Neal.

Harris finally got his first points of the night with 9:40 left, but Midland stretched its lead to 25-9 and cruised to a halftime lead of 44-30.

Henry ended the half with 11 points; Clifton "Slam" Jones had nine and Charles "Smokey" McCovery eight.

The Chaps used their newly-discovered defensive pride, numerous turnovers and powerful rebounding to demoralize FPC. In the second half, freshmen McCovery and Sydney Rice did the damage. Rice scored 13 of his season high 16 points in the second half, blocked three shots and took control of the boards with 10 rebounds. McCovery, who had a game high 19, scored nine straight points on three field goals and a three-pointer from the corner.

"I was pleased with our team tonight," said MC first-year coach Reggie Franklin. "We had a long trip up here, but played with enthusiasm and intensity to finish off the regular season.

"I was especially pleased with our defense. It takes a great effort to keep Harris out of double figures, but he got 35 against us the first time we played and we were determined to prevent that tonight. Smokey did a super job on defense against him and that threw Frank Phillips out of their game plan."

Sophomore guard Stewart Barnett hit his first three-pointer since November. It was determined Thursday morning that he does have a chipped bone at the base of his thumb, suffered two weeks ago. But a soft cast enables him to play.

The Chaps get a rest today, then begin preparations for next week's Region V Tournament, which is being held at Chaparral Center. The top four teams from the Western Conference will be matched with the four best from the Northern Conference. The brackets have the number one team from each conference playing the number four from the other conference and the number two teams playing the number three teams.

The Northern Conference has one night of action left, with all the teams playing Saturday. Going into those games, the top four are Weatherford, McLennan, TSTI-Waco, and Ranger. Brackets will be determined Sunday.

Knicks find way to win on road

Associated Press

Let the record show that rain last fell in Southern California 24 days ago. Prior to Thursday night, when they won in Los Angeles, the Knicks had gone through a 91-day drought. The losing streak ended at 18 games with a 106-96 victory over the Clippers.

"This gets the monkey off our backs," said Gerald Wilkins, who led the Knicks with 25 points. "And if we can win in Golden State and Denver, we go home (where they are 19-8) for two weeks and it will be a great stretch for us."

"When you have our road record (2-23), the last thing you are is overconfident," he said.

"We were playing confident basketball on the road the last five games and it really feels good," said Mark Jackson, who had 11 assists.

Patrick Ewing, who scored 16 points, said the losing streak was blown out of proportion.

"Not too many teams in the NBA play well on the road," he said. "Too much has been made of it."

The Clippers, who were led by Mike Woodson's 20 points, played without center Benoit Benjamin and forward Joe Wolf. And they lost sixth man Quintin Dailey with 2½ minutes left in the first half after he aggravated a strained groin muscle.

"We were really short of players," said Los Angeles Coach Gene Shue, whose Clippers now lead the league in consecutive road losses with 18. "But our players played their hearts out."

Mavericks 108, Rockets 106

Derek Harper wasn't satisfie with his offensive production, so he felt a big play on defense might be in order.

"I hadn't been shooting well, and I had to make some kind of contribution," said Harper, who scored only five points. "It came at the biggest point in the game for us."

After Rolando Blackman, who scored 29 points, made a 20-foot jump shot with 26 seconds remaining to put Dallas ahead, Harper sneaked up behind Houston's Sleepy Floyd and blocked an 18-footer with one second remaining to give the Mavericks their seventh straight victory.

"It would have been wide open shot," said Floyd, who led Houston with 22 points and 11 assists.

Suns 109, Cavaliers 103

Walter Davis watched one-third of the Phoenix roster turn over in three trades, shrugged it off and led the Suns to victory by scoring 16 of his 35 points in the fourth quarter, including eight in the final 1:18.

"It was weird," he said. "We were all here early before the game, wondering what was going to happen. We lost four teammates in 24 hours. It's tough, but that's part of the business."

Bullets 129, Kings 110

Jeff Malone scored a season-high 35 points as Washington broke a three-game slide, extended Sacramento's to five and left a bad taste in the mouth of Kings' Coach Bill Russell.

Moses Malone added 27 points and grabbed a season-high 17 rebounds for Washington. John Williams added 17 points.

SCHEDULE

Midland High's non-conference schedule remains the same with Lubbock Monterey, Andrews and Lubbock Coronado. The Bulldogs will have to travel only to Andrews.

"I don't like open dates and I would rather have 10 games," said McCutchen. "We'll fill the date if we can. I've called all over the place and the only possibility we have right now is with Roswell, N.M. We are considering it. The only thing is that we would have to go there and it's only a one-year agreement since the two states don't begin the season at the same time in 1989."

The basketball schedule will follow this same format, but home sites will switch for the second round of play since each school plays each other twice.

Normally, the basketball schedule isn't as critical as football since there are 12 district games in basketball and only six in football. But the idea of having to play back-to-back road games in basketball doesn't sit well with any coach. It's been hard to win on the road in this league.

The committee also decided to study a new proposal for breaking ties when more than two teams are tied for a championship. Currently, a toss of the coin is used to break such deadlocks, but the committee will study a point-system plan, much like that one being used in District 2-4A, where points scored against those tied will break the tie.

Martin fumes over absentees

Associated Press

Ninety-nine percent of the major leaguers have arrived in spring training. It's the other one percent that managers are concerned with.

Rickey Henderson and Gary Ward have not reported to the New York Yankees' camp in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Andres Thomas is missing from the Atlanta Braves' camp at West Palm Beach, Fla. And Juan Castillo has not arrived at the Milwaukee Brewers' camp in Chandler, Ariz.

"I don't like the fact that Rickey's not here," Yankees Manager Billy Martin said Thursday. "As for Ward, I think maybe he might be pouting a little over losing his job to Jack Clark. I can't understand a guy pouting who has a guaranteed three-year contract. I would like to know why Ward isn't down here. He needs the extra swings."

No one knows where Thomas is. He was supposed to arrive at the Braves' camp on Wednesday.

Castillo, who also lives in the Dominican Republic, has annoyed Milwaukee Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn.

"It surprised me a little bit," Trebelhorn said. "It never ceases to amaze me how anyone can fail to show up on time when they're trying for a job in the big leagues. I think if I showed up late, I wouldn't have a job."

SIGNINGS

Cruz, 40, played 13 seasons with the Houston Astros, but became a free agent after hitting .241 with 38 runs batted in. He is the 56th of the 76 free agents to sign and the 18th to switch teams.

Several players signed one-year contracts with their own teams: Rick Aguilera with the Mets for $295,000; Barry Larkin with Cincinnati for $127,500; Terry Leach with the Mets for $150,000; Tom Nieto with Minnesota; Steve Buechele with Texas; Mike Birkbeck and Charlie O'Brien with Milwaukee; Jeff Montgomery with Kansas City and Walt Weiss with Oakland.

COMEBACK TRAIL

Soto, who's been slow recovering from the shoulder injury that required arthroscopic surgery in August 1986, reported to spring training this week after receiving permission to delay his arrival so he could pitch in a game in the Dominican Republic.

Soto, 31, went six innings Sunday and pronounced himself ready for what could be his final comeback attempt.

"I'm getting to the point where I think I can turn it loose," said Soto, who threw 80 pitches. "I've been throwing every other day for a month. If it's fine, fine; if it's not, it's not."

Soto is in the last year of a guaranteed contract that will pay him $1.2 million this season. He is 8-12 with a 4.81 earned run average over the last two seasons.

Ojeda is considered one of the bigger question marks in the Mets' camp. But because he answered concerns about his surgically repaired left elbow last September, he's hoping his status will not be in doubt much longer.

3 ♡	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♢

There are two words that the prudent bridge writer soon learns to discard from his vocabulary. They are "never" and "always." Use one, and that very day you will come across an exception to the rule.

North-South conducted a reasonable auction to five spades. Note that North cue-bid his heart ace before showing spade support. The one disadvantage of the auction was that it painted a complete picture of the North hand.

Sitting West was Tom Smith of Greenwich, Conn, a top-ranked player and member of the Goren Editorial Board. He knew all about "never" leading away from an ace, but it was obvious that North's distribution was 3-1-4-5 and that if the enemy had a weakness, it was going to be in diamonds. So he committed the unpardonable bridge crime of underleading his ace of diamonds.

As the cards lie, that rated to be the killing lead. If declarer finessed the jack, East would win the queen, return the suit to his partner's ace and ruff the third diamond for a one-trick set.

Now Smith's reputation worked against him. After considerable thought, declarer called for the king from dummy. When that held, he cashed two high clubs for diamond discards and ran the queen of spades. When that also worked, declarer had no trouble making all the tricks.

"Nice lead," remarked declarer, as he scored up one trick more than did his counterpart at the other table in the match. The only difference was that there the contract was six spades.

Packed house cheers rock star

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Rock superstar Bruce Springsteen walked onstage, threw a bouquet of roses into the crowd, stepped up to a microphone and yelled, "Ready for a date?"

Nearly 13,000 people, most standing as they would throughout the concert, roared back that they were.

Springsteen and his 12-piece E Street Band then went to work, and the Boss' nationwide "Tunnel of Love" tour — his first in nearly 2½ years — got under way Thursday night at the Worcester Centrum.

"I'm excited," said Cynthia Swienton of Simsbury, Conn., standing up in her seat 12 rows from the back of the auditorium. She and her companion, John Smedick of Torrington, Conn., paid $300 for their two tickets.

According to the Worcester Telegram newspaper, ticket scalpers' prices were generally between $150 to $225 a ticket, but one unidentified person said he was offered a ticket for $750. Tickets were $20 each when first went on sale.

Ticket scalping is illegal in Massachusetts.

The crowd was generally orderly outside the Centrum, said police Lt. Paul F. Campbell. He said there were a few arrests for unarmed robbery of concert tickets and one man was charged with being a disorderly person after he allegedly spit in the face of a television camerman.

Police Sgt. John R. Harrington also said two men, one wielding a crowbar, were arrested for robbing four teen-agers of their tickets before the show began.

Several celebrities were among the 12,800 people attending the show, including basketball star Kevin McHale of the Boston Celtics and Miami Steve Van Zandt, Springsteen's lead guitar player until 1981.

"A lot of the guys (Celtics) like Springsteen," McHale said, taking time to sign autographs while sitting in a middle section of the auditorium. "The '84 tour, they seemed to be touring a lot of cities that we were playing in. We'd play on one night, they'd come to our game; we'd go to the concert next night. It worked real nice."

Dressed in tight black jeans, black boots, vest and a white shirt buttoned to the neck, Springsteen later took off the shirt to reveal a black T-shirt, and his hair was lathered with sweat 3 hours and 25 minutes later.

"Do you want me to get a heart attack? On the first night?" he asked the crowd before he and the band did a 15-minute encore of such rock favorites as "Devil with a Blue Dress on," "Good Golly Miss Molly" and "CC Rider."

He opened the show with "Tunnel of Love."

Springsteen, 38, will perform again Sunday and Monday in Worcester before the tour moves on to Chapel Hill, N.C.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 10-day visit to California by Britain's Prince Andrew and his wife, "Fergie," the Duchess of York, will be full of public events, but no security problems are expected, a British Consulate official says.

The couple, scheduled to arrive late this afternoon, will attend exhibitions and concerts that are part of UK/LA '88, a three-month-long British arts festival, said Angus Mackay, the royal visit press officer. They also will attend banquets and visit schools, stores, an aircraft carrier and churches from Los Angeles to Palm Springs and San Diego, he said.

When Andrew, the third child of Queen Elizabeth II, visited Los Angeles four years ago he was a bachelor naval officer who lived up to a rowdy reputation by playfully turning a paint sprayer on the press corps. Since then, he married the former Sarah Ferguson, who is pregnant, so the current visit promises to be more staid.

The list, in the magazine's March issue, assesses who has been the most active collector of art and antiques in the past year — no easy job, since many collectors are secretive about their holdings.

Art & Antiques calls Cosby "a major force in the American furniture and folk paintings market," but says Nicholson's collection of 19th and 20th century French art has "been described as 'uneven.'"

Bob Guccione, the publisher of Penthouse magazine, and Sid Bass, the Texas financier, fell off the list this year. Taking their places were game show producer Mark Goodson, who collects 20th century masterpieces, and Virginia billionaires Patricia and John Kluge, who collect a little bit of everything.

Others on the list include music producer David Geffen, Frances and Armand Hammer, actor Steve Martin, and Barbra Streisand.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan honored singer Wayne Newton at the White House for participating in United Service Organizations tours to entertain armed forces overseas.

Newton received a plaque Thursday for giving a Thanksgiving tour aboard ships in the Mediterranean and also touring the Arabian Sea and the Persian Gulf, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

"We talked about his Las Vegas years," Newton said of his conversation with the president. "I didn't sing for him and he didn't sing for me, and I think we'll probably keep it that way."

Fraud appeal threatens operators

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

Hansen

A potentially precedent-setting case which could change the legal treatment of working interest owners is pending in the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals and could have disastrous effects on independent oil operators, if the court determines that working interests must be registered under securities law.

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association has filed a "friend of the court" (amicus curiae) brief urging affirmation of a local federal jury's decision in a half-million dollar lawsuit. If the decision is overturned by the appellate court in New Orleans, the results could be "terribly dangerous" for independent oil operators, according to a PBPA board member.

Hans Hansen, the board member who drafted the brief, told the group's executive committee Thursday that an adverse ruling in the case originally filed by Midland oilman Don Sparks and his Discovery Operating Co., could inhibit all operators in trying to sell working interests in drilling projects.

Sparks' original suit alleged that the defendants, a group of Arizona residents named Baxter who were working interest owners, failed to pay their share of development costs. The defendants made counterclaims of securities fraud and deception.

Sparks and Discovery were awarded $400,000 in actual damages and another $100,000 in punitive damages by the jury, Hansen said.

The allegation of securities violations has raised the issue of whether or not working interest ownership constitutes a registerable security. The historic analysis of investment contracts (which are securities) versus joint venture may be questioned in the appeal, Hansen said.

Traditionally, a joint venture — one in which the investor has the power, whether or not it is exercised, to manage operations — has not been considered a security which requires registration. However, the State of Texas has taken an interest in the case and the Attorney General has filed his own brief in support of the Baxters' appeal, Hansen said.

Not only would overturning the standing decision have a chilling effect on raising drilling funds by making it more difficult and more expensive to register and sell working interests, but there could be criminal implications as well. Reversing the decision could mean that most existing deals could be subject to being voided because they are in violation of state and federal security codes.

BUSINESS GLANCE

MARKETS

Dollar falls in moderate trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell in moderate European trading this morning on indications the U.S. economy is expanding slower than the market expected, dealers said.

Gold prices were mixed in quiet trading.

Dealers said economic data released in the past few days showed the American economy slightly less robust than expected, weakening the dollar.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 128.35 yen, down from 128.80 yen on Thursday. Later, in London, it was quoted at 128.45 yen.

— 1.3695 Swiss francs, down from 1.3935

— 5.7165 French francs, down from 5.7315

— 1,244.00 Italian lire, down from 1,248.25

— 1.2649 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2650

In London, the British pound rose to $1.7715 from $1.7665 late Thursday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $434.20 a troy ounce. At midmorning the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $8432.65. Both were up from late Thursday's 428.00.

In Zurich, the bid price was $432.60, down from $433.00 late Thursday. Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose 88 cents to close at a bid 437.23.

Stocks fall 22 points in late selling

Analysts said the market seemed to hit a stone wall of resistance as it made a bid to climb to new highs since last October's crash.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up about 27 points at its midsession high, closed with a 22.38 loss at 2,017.57.

Big Board volume totaled 213.49 million shares, against 212.73 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index lost 1.24 to 147.30.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $17.67 billion, or 0.68 percent, in value.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 246.16 million shares.

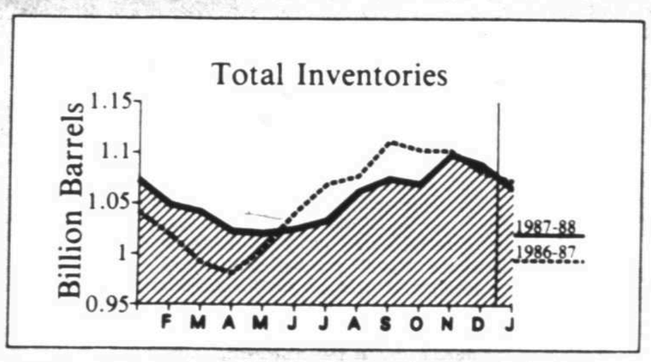
The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose 48 to 363.62. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 283.29, up .09.

OIL PRICES



While inventories trends show here pointed downward and were thought to be shrinking, a report released Wednesday showed them higher than expected.

Oil futures down, posted price soft

From Staff and Wire Reports

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for April delivery of West Texas Intermediate closed at $15.92 per barrel, down 54 cents from Wednesday. The market opened at $15.88 and slipped to $15.81.

At noon, the posted price of West Texas Intermediate remained at a very soft $16, but traders expect the posted price to go under $16 within hours if downward pressure continues.

Technical factors and a report showing larger-than-expected U.S. inventories are the cause for the downturn, alysts said. It is the first time the near-month crude contract closed below $16 since Dec. 21, when it settled at $15.16.

William Byers, an analyst at Bear, Stearns & Co., said he believed the "catalyst" of the decline was a federal Energy Information Administration report, issued Wednesday night, that showed U.S. crude inventories up by 8.5 million barrels last week.

That figure, much greater than the 1.88 million-barrel increase cited Tuesday by the American Petroleum Institute shook the market, which was already edgy over continuing reports of growing oil production and inventories.

"OPEC is producing about 1 million barrels a day more than it was a month ago, and this perception is getting into the market — which isn't thrilled by it," said Peter Beutel of Elders Futures Inc.

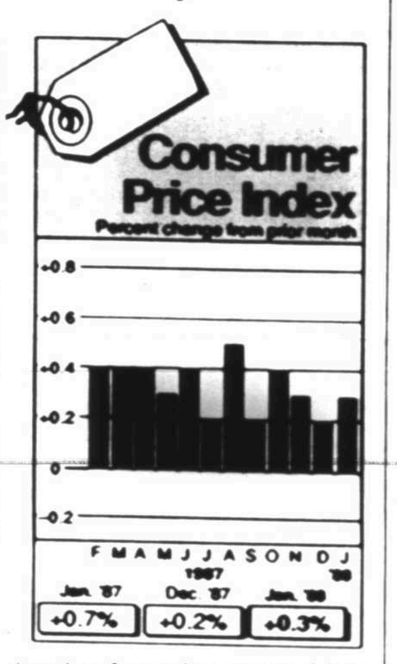
The market's confidence was shaken when the near-month crude contract broke below $16.37, "which had been seen as a very important support level," Beutel said.

Donald Morton of Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., said the market got off on a sour note when it picked up on overnight declining prices for North Sea Brent crude.

"The general feeling, psychology in the market was already very weak, very negative," he said. "So it gave ground and just broke."

"It seemed like everyone lined up on the sell-side all day long," Morton added. "There weren't any new rumors. There weren't any new reasons. There weren't any new excuses. It was the same old reason: oversupply."

Moderate dose of inflation hits 1988 consumer prices



WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose 0.3 percent in January as the year began with a moderate dose of inflation, the government reported today. Higher grocery prices partially offset declines in energy costs.

The increase in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index was equivalant to an annual rate of inflation of 4.2 percent, compared to the 4.4 percent rise for all of 1987.

Last month's increase was larger than the 0.2 percent rise in December and matched November's 0.3 percent rise. December's increase was revised from the previously reported 0.1 percent.

Pacing the January increase were widespread gains across a range of goods and services. Energy prices, however, supplied a major dampening on the overall rate by plunging 0.7 percent after a 0.8 percent drop in the preceding month.

Gasoline prices fell 1.6 percent, heating oil costs were down 0.8 percent. The price of natural gas and electricity, combined, fell 0.3 percent.

Food prices rose 0.3 percent, down from December's 0.6 percent gain. Pacing last month's rise were jumps in prices for poultry, eggs and bakery products. Meat, fruit and vegetable prices declined.

Three Texas banks closed

Associated Press

Three Texas banks were closed by state and federal regulators, with depositors' accounts assumed by other banks, officials said.

The closures on Thursday brought the national tally of closed banks to 28 for the year, and 11 for the state of Texas, officials said.

The latest casualties were Harris County Bank-Houston, N.A., acquired by OMNIBANC South, N.A.; Collin County State Bank, acquired by Willow Bend National Bank of Plano; and American National Bank of Stafford, acquired by Park National Bank of Houston, regulators said.

The largest of the three banks closed Thursday was Harris County Bank-Houston, with with assets of approximately $81 million.

In the case of Harris County Bank-Houston and American National Bank, liberal lending practices by former bank officers, and poor administration and supervision of the loan portfolio by senior management and the board of directors resulted in excessive problem loans and loan losses, said Robert J. Herrmann, senior deputy comptroller of bank supervision in the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency in Washington.

Harris County Bank-Houston came to the attention of federal regulators in 1984, while regulators became concerned about American National Bank in 1985, the comptroller's office said.

Commitments were obtained from the banks' board of directors to try to correct the banks' problems, the comptroller's office said. The bank boards' efforts were unsuccessful, however, as the depressed local economy led to continuing loan losses and further deterioration of the banks' condition, the comptroller's office said.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

USG mum on Wagner & Brown offer

CHICAGO (AP) — USG Corp. is keeping quiet about a Texas partnership's $1.96 billion takeover offer for the nation's largest producer of gypsum.

"At this time, we have nothing to say on any aspect of this," Paul Colitti, a spokesman for Chicago-based USG, said Thursday.

The group led by oilmen Cyril Wagner Jr. and Jack E. Brown said Wednesday it would pay $42 a share in cash for at least 21.5 million common shares, or less than half the total shares outstanding. The group said it would exchange securities for the rest of the stock.

Getty Petroleum buying Texaco stock

NEW YORK (AP) — Getty Petroleum Corp. has joined the brewing contest over Texaco Inc., announcing it has bought $14 million worth of Texaco stock and is seeking to acquire more.

Getty Petroleum, which sprang from Texaco's 1984 takeover of Getty Oil Co., said Thursday it would ask the Federal Trade Commission to let it buy more than $15 million of Texaco's stock.

Takeover strategist Carl C. Icahn, Texaco's biggest shareholder, is attempting to win five seats on the company's board of directors. Fellow takeover artist T. Boone Pickens has disclosed plans to acquire a major Texaco stake and says he supports Icahn's move.

Halliburton, Gearhart agree to merge

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A letter of intent that Halliburton Co. of Dallas is to acquire struggling Gearhart Industries has been signed by the two oilfield service companies, officials said.

The proposed merger was announced by Gearhart's directors after a six-hour meeting in which they also heard a merger offer from Houston-based Energy Service Co. Inc., a contract drilling company.

Gearhart approved the $270 million buyout offer from Halliburton, but still must hammer out a definitive agreement to complete a merger, said Marvin Gearhart, chairman and chief executive officer of Gearhart.

Volcker: Tax hike could help economy

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A "broad-scale consumption tax of some sort" may be the best medicine for the nation's economic woes, former Federal Reserve Board head Paul Volcker says.

"I don't think we are approaching Doomsday," he said. "I do not think we face inevitable recession or inevitable inflation or a combination of the two."

To alleviate the nation's trade deficit, foreign debts and declining dollar, Volcker said, "We need to start with the federal budget deficit."

"I think there's some amount of wishful thinking about the budget deficit," he said. "I'd like to think we can solve it all by a little spending restraint, but I don't think that's possible.

"Certain elements of spending are going to increase, and you know it," he said.

AFG chairman to take company private

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — AFG Industries Inc., which has made unsuccessful bids for two other companies in recent years, has agreed to be taken private by its chairman in a $940.5 million plan.

The board of AFG, one of North America's leading glassmakers, said Thursday it had signed a definitive agreement to support Clarity Holdings Corp. offer to pay $33 a share for 94 percent of its common shares, or $863.4 million.

Clarity, headed by AFG founder R.D. Hubbard, would acquire the rest of the stock for $33 a share in preferred stock or a combination of cash and stock for a total of about $57.1 million.

Campeau increases offer for Federated

CINCINNATI (AP) — Campeau Corp. has increased its hostile tender offer for Federated Department Stores Inc. to $66 a share from $61, and said it would consider sweetening the bid again if necessary.

The move Thursday by Campeau — which previously had offered $60 a share, about $5.84 billion, only as part of a negotiated merger agreement — came as Federated's board of directors met to consider Campeau's offers and its own takeover alternatives.

CHAMBER REPORT

Chamber of Commerce history is long

EDITOR'S NOTE: This begins a series of columns about the workings, programs and purposes of the Midland Chamber of Commerce. The columns will appear each Friday in the business/oil section of the Reporter-Telegram.

By CHARLES A. SPENCE
Chairman, Midland Chamber of Commerce

What's the role of a Chamber of Commerce? Oddly enough it is not a notion that began with modern commerce. It is an evolving concept whose roots go back to a time when DeSoto was trekking across Texas trying to find Mexico and Magellan was circumnavigating the world.

The first Chamber of Commerce was organized in Marseilles, France in the 16th century. It began as a meeting place where businessmen could come together to discuss issues affecting the marketplace — and propose solutions to common business problems.

The concept was brought to America by English colonists, and by the early 20th century spread to cities large and small, as American entrepreneurs discovered there were economic and civic benefits in group action.

Today, there are thousands of local chambers of commerce across the U.S. and the free world. Each is independent and autonomous, but shares the basic purpose of preserving and enhancing the free enterprise system.

Much of the local chamber's efforts a few decades ago centered on "boosterism." Towns puffed their image with claims of greener grass, better schools, unsurpassed farmland and boundless futures. While advertising claims have moderated and communications techniques have improved over the years, putting the city's best foot forward with prospective investors, visitors and residents remains an important role of the chamber.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce has been in continuous operation since the 1920s. During that time it has played a leading role in the economic, civic, educational and cultural advancement of Midland.

Through voluntary association, the chamber brings together the business and community leadership to address the major issues which affect the economic well-being of the community. Utilizing a volunteer board and committee structure, supported by a trained professional staff, the chamber seeks to identify community problems or opportunities, propose solutions, and implement programs which result in community progress.

The chamber is not an agency of government, nor a civic club. It is a vehicle for concerned business and professional men and women to join together, to work for the solution of mutual concerns — doing things together no one can do alone.

Specific objectives are established by the chamber and reviewed on a periodic basis, and may vary from year to year as the needs of the community change. The work of the chamber touches on many facets of community life, from education to the arts, from industry recruitment to visitor promotion. But the bottom line is economic opportunity — and jobs.

Historically, the chamber has initiated or played a leading role in a long list of community improvements. Its Community Development division is charged with the responsibility of ensuring an adequate infrastructure and quality of life that's conducive to economic growth: better transportation systems, education, health care, and other factors. That's the "product development" aspect of economic development — making Midland the best it can be, and ensuring a quality product to "sell" in the global marketplace. Economic development and community development go hand-in-hand, and one can't succeed without the other.

Externally, the chamber promotes Midland to a variety of publics. Its visitor development program attracts visitors to the community for conventions, special events or leisure travel. The Department of Economic Development advertises and promotes Midland as a desirable location for new business and industry, and assists local employers wishing to expand.

None of these programs would be possible without the investment of time and money by the 1,700 plus members of the Midland Chamber of Commerce. They are both the principal stockholders and the customers of the services provided by the chamber, and provide the voluntary work force that last year gave over 18,000 hours of service to the community.

The role of the chamber, then, involves the identification of community needs, finding and implementing solutions, and marketing the community for new business or personal investment. At the same time, it provides an extensive network for business and professional persons and others interested in the future of Midland, and a unified voice for a better community.

In short, the chamber is an advocate for Midland — speaking out and acting in the community's interest.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Reinvested proceeds taxable as capital gain

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I put $10,000 into a mutual fund right before the October stock market cash. Then, the value of my shares fell about $2,000, so I switched my investment to another fund in the same management group in order to establish a tax loss.

In December, the second mutual fund declared a dividend and a capital gains distribution. My account was credited with a $125 dividend and a $3,199 capital gains distribution, both of which I reinvested.

As a result, I am required to pay income tax on $3,324 I never received, when I actually lost about $2,000. How can this be legal?

Doyle

A. Because you are talking about two different things, each with its own tax consequence.

When you switched from one mutual fund to another, you redeemed shares of the first fund and purchased shares of the second fund. The redemption was a sale. The difference between the $10,000 you invested in the first fund and the $8,000 or so proceeds of the redemption was a capital loss. It was a short-term capital loss, because you owned shares of that fund less than six months.

You report that capital loss on Schedule D of your Form 1040 federal income tax return. The approximate $2,000 capital loss can be used to offset an equal amount of the $3,199 capital gains distribution from the second fund or any other 1987 capital gains.

After you purchased shares of the second fund, that fund declared a dividend and capital gains distribution. The tax laws require most mutual funds to pay out to shareholders virtually all of the funds' net income.

Dividends come from the dividends and interest the fund collects on stocks, bonds and other securities the fund holds as investments. After deducting its operating expenses, the fund passes that money along to fund shareholders as "income dividends."

Capital gains distributions result from the net profit a mutual fund realized in 1987 from the sale of securities the fund held in its investment portfolio for more than six months. (As of Jan. 1, 1988, the long-term capital gains holding period became one year.) In the normal course of events, a fund will sell some of those securities at a profit; some at a loss. When the profits exceed the loss, the fund passes that money to fund shareholders as capital gains distributions.

By acting as a "conduit," the mutual fund does not pay tax. Instead, fund shareholders pay tax on the dividends and capital gains distributions.

You had your choice of taking the December dividend and capital gains distribution either by check or of reinvesting that money to buy additional shares. Either way, the $3,324 is taxable — $125 as a dividend and $3,199 as a capital gain.

You chose to reinvest. As a result, you are required to pay tax on $3,324 you never laid your hands on but which you did use to buy more mutual fund shares.

Q. Is it true that some mutual funds do not make capital gains distributions, thereby saving fund shareholders from having to pay tax?

A. Not quite. Some — not many — mutual funds retain their long-term capital gains and pay tax for shareholders on those amounts.

If your mutual fund uses that procedure it will send you Form 2439, "Notice to Shareholder of Undistributed Long-Term Capital Gains" every January. Then, you are required to report the allocated amount of the capital gains distribution on line 13, Schedule D; take your proportionate share of the tax the fund paid for you as a credit on line 60, Form 1040; attach copy B, Form 2439, to your return.

Keep copy C, Form 2439, for your records. Copy A already went to the Internal Revenue Service to feed into its computers.

This method does not relieve you from paying tax on your share of the mutual fund's capital gains. The fund just pays that tax for you — and makes your income tax filing more complicated.

FAMILY MATTERS

Step-families successfully 'blended' with love, effort

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR FAMILY: I have been divorced for almost four years. I have two children — a boy nine and a girl seven — by my my previous marriage. We have had a difficult time, but we have been able to get along. I have a good job and the support of my family. I think that I have done very well, all things considered.

I presently have custody of my children and my ex-husband has them every other weekend. This arrangement has worked fairly well, although my ex and I still clash over some things. Sometimes he still acts like he has a right to tell me what to do with the children when they are with me. I keep pointing out to him that he gave up that right when he divorced me. But I think that we do OK most of the time.

I am considering getting remarried. I have met a very nice man who is kind and generous. He seems to get along well with the children and my parents like him. The problem is that he also has been married before and has three teenagers from that marriage. Only one of his children, his 16 year old son, lives with him. His two daughters live with their mother.

As a teacher, I see so many children with problems who live in homes where the parents have remarried. Do you have any advice? I'm really not asking you if I should remarry, just what do you think about remarrying and the family? — CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: There are a lot of "blended" families — some work and some don't.

The first step for a successful blended family is that the adults have a satisfactory recovery from the loss of their first marriages — an "emotional" as well as physical divorce. Both adults need to be ready to recommit themselves to each other, and to marriage and all its complexities.

Second, both adults should recognize the fears they have (if they exist) concerning a new spouse and "new" children. The new family will have many issues on new roles, new individual and family boundaries, loyalty conflicts, and so on.

Start by sharing your fears and concerns, as well as your love. It also is helpful, if possible, for the children and the new spouse to maintain cooperative relationships with the ex.

Finally, the family must "see" itself as a different model of the American dream family. You must be especially careful to establish boundaries, or family rules, that are appropriate for a blended family. Everyone must try to make room for the new parents, biological parents and grandparents and other extended family members.

It's not easy, but if you know what to expect, and keep those lines of communication open, it will work. Also try to see the humor of it all. It will be like a three-ring circus at times, and humor will help.

DEAR FAMILY: I strongly disagree with your position on spanking. I think that what you told "Disagree" about spanking was wrong. The Bible tells us that "sparing the rod spoils the child." I believe that and have five very fine children to show for it. In our house if they do something wrong they are punished immediately. Spanking works. — POSITIVE PARENT

DEAR POSITIVE: Perhaps I should have said that I think that a "time-out chair" works better. No research evidence confirms or denies the value of either method. Children who are punished by spanking (and by spanking I am sure that neither of us means "beating") when appropriate seem to suffer no long-term ill effects.

The method a parent chooses to discipline children is a private matter. However, I do stand by my view that spanking as the primary means of discipline can cause problems as the child grows older. The issue of having to escalate the severity of the spanking in order to "punish" is ever present.

I have never felt bad about placing one of my children in the time-out chair, but I have always felt bad when I spanked them. So, I think that this is very much a personal choice.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: As medical professionals who have worked with children for more than 24 years, we truly appreciate current, informative material presented in a non-judgmental fashion with a dash of humor, and seasoned thoroughly with honesty, love, warmth and concern for our children of today.

Don't we all as parents wish we could protect and shield our children from adversities and pressures of living in the fast lane of the '80s? However, unless we put our children in protective plastic bubbles, the realities and pressures of life and living will eventually touch them.

As much as we want to protect our children and their innocence, it may be to our advantage and theirs to "arm" them with some concrete informative ammunition with which to deal with the pitfalls of the '80s.

With the information contained in your booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know," a young adult may come to realize that there are always consequences to pay for one's actions.

On the last page of your booklet is "A Letter to Parents." I think those words are so important they should be engraved on a plaque and positioned where parents can read them often to remind us how to achieve a healthy relationship with our children. Will you please print it in your column?

Abby, you are to be commended. You did a fantastic job. — BOBBIE ELDRIDGE, R.N., J.M. TARLE, M.D., SANTA MONICA PEDIATRIC MEDICAL GROUP

DEAR NURSE ELDRIDGE AND DR. TARLE: Thank you for your kind letter. Here's "A Letter to Parents":

Dear Parents: I know this is a booklet for teen-agers, but there's something that needs to be said, and I'm going to say it.

Sociologists and psychologists have interviewed teen-agers on the subject of what's bugging them. Here is what our youngsters have said they wanted:

LOVE. We want parents who will love us no matter what happens or what we do. We want our dad around more often. We want him home in time for dinner, so we can discuss the day's happenings with him.

UNDERSTANDING. Maybe we don't even understand ourselves. But we want parents who DO, who will listen and at least let us explain.

TRUST. We want to be put on our own. We want our parents to expect the best of us ... not fear the worst.

JOINT PLANNING. We want parents who will stand BESIDE us, not OVER us. We appreciate guidance in important matters, but after we've proven ourselves to have fairly mature judgment, we don't want to be nagged about every little thing.

PRIVACY. We need a room of our own to retreat to, and a place to pursue our hobbies — and store our junk. We don't want our letters read, or our phone conversations listened in on.

RESPONSIBILITY. We want our share of family tasks. But we'd like to know who's to do what, and why.

FRIENDSHIPS. We want the right to choose our own friends. And unless they have reputations for being "bad" company, such as boozers or dopers, we want them to be welcome in our home.

So ends the Teen-Age Bill of Rights. How much of it applies to your home is for you to decide.

But don't ever say that you don't understand what your children want. Right or wrong, I think they've made it pretty clear. Don't you?

Also a Parent, ABBY

Woman ranked with handful of top hunters

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Barbara Nagurney was a typical teen-ager, interested in skiing, tennis and high school football games. Then she became Mrs. Jim McCarthy and entered into an entirely different lifestyle.

Today, Mrs. McCarthy ranks as one of just a handful of women who have hunted, and taken, the African Big Five.

Proudly displayed in the family big game trophy room are mounts of an elephant, rhino, cape buffalo, leopard and lion. She'll be honored for this Big Five collection at the Safari Club International convention early this year in Las Vegas.

"At one time I figured I'd get married and take care of a house," she said. "Then I met my husband and all that changed."

The McCarthys met when she was in the audience of a Red McCarthy radio show. Jim was working with his father in those days and doing DJ appearances on the side.

"Jim had just returned from a bear hunt," Mrs. McCarthy said. "We got talking about it and one thing led to another. I had always been interested in the outdoors and sports. At first we went small game hunting together after Jim taught me to handle firearms safely and to shoot. We took our first safari in 1975 and just fell in love with Africa."

The McCarthys have returned to Africa 11 times since that first trip.

"For me, the biggest challenge of the Big Five was the elephant," Mrs. McCarthy said. "It's the most difficult and hardest of the African hunts. Because you're really after a nice bull as a trophy, you walk eight or 10 miles a day. You have to be physically fit.

Information packet instructs hearing impaired with telephone use

By MICHAEL COLIN
Copley News Service

To a 3-year-old, the telephone is a fascinating toy. To a teenager, the telephone is a social necessity. To a business person, the telephone is a vital link with clients, customers and suppliers. But to someone with impaired hearing, the telephone can be a source of frustration, anger and humiliation.

Unless a telephone is hearing aid compatible (HAC), someone with a hearing aid can't use it. Since the deregulation of the telephone industry, incompatible telephones have flooded the market, creating a crisis for the hearing impaired. Learn about what an organization called OUT (Organization for Use of the Telephone, Inc.) is trying to do about this mounting problem for a large segment of our population.

When you send for their information package you'll receive a summary of current legislative action, background material on the issues, and a pamphlet titled "All Telephones Must Work With All Hearing Aids Everywhere." The pamphlet describes OUT's purpose and the legislative action it supports.

If you or someone you know has a hearing impairment, send for this freebie and take a step toward independence.

Send a long self-addressed, stamped envelop to: All Telephones Must Work Info, OUT, P.O. Box 175, Owings Mills, MD. 21117-0175.

Waldheim says he considered quitting

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — President Kurt Waldheim said he considered quitting but rejected the idea, adding that he dropped plans to speak at a ceremony marking the 50th anniversary of Nazi Germany's forcible annexation of Austria.

In an hourlong interview on Austrian television late Thursday, Waldheim said he had a "clear conscience" and repeatedly insisted he did nothing wrong despite the furor over his involvement in the German army under Adolf Hitler.

Asked whether the decision to cancel the speech had been "painful," Waldheim responded: "It wasn't very painful since I will be present at the ceremony.

"I thought that with this decision, which was my own initiative I might add, I would contribute to the orderly carrying out of the solemn ceremony," Waldheim said he will address the nation in a televised broadcast on March 10, the eve of the ceremony marking the "Anschluss," when Austria was absorbed into the German Reich in 1938. Austria was liberated by the Allies in the spring of 1945.

Waldheim opponents had promised to take to the streets in demonstrations if the president went ahead with the talk on March 11 in the Hofburg Palace.

Numerous leading Austrian politicians said a Waldheim speech was not the way to lead the country into reflecting on its Nazi past.

There have been calls for Waldheim's resignation since March 1986, when Austrian and U.S. media and the World Jewish Congress reported that he served as a lieutenant with the Germany army in the occupied Balkans during World War II.

The calls intensified after an international historians' commission issued a critical report earlier this month.

"If I thought I had done anything false or anything wrong, then I would have taken the consequences," Waldheim said.

In the controversy over Waldheim's past, "taking the consequences" has come to be synonymous with resignation. Waldheim's term is scheduled to end in 1992.

Waldheim was asked if he had considered quitting.

"Naturally I thought of it," he said. "Otherwise I wouldn't be a human being. I'd have to be a piece of wood."

But he firmly rejected any notion of stepping down. "My resignation would only make things worse," he said.

The March 11 speech originally had been planned as a way to avoid a political showdown over whether Waldheim would address a joint session of Parliament to mark Anschluss.

Waldheim also sharply criticized the historians' commission that probed his past and the U.S. decision to place him on a "watch list" of undesirable aliens that bars him from entering the United States.

Political manuevering may erode support for Panama

An Analysis

By REID G. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — If President Eric Arturo Delvalle's attempted firing of Panama's military strongman has no other immediate result, it will make it harder for other Latin American countries to support the Panamanian government.

That has long been a goal of opponents of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, so leading Panamanian dissidents as well as the U.S. State Department were quick to cheer Delvalle's seemingly quixotic move.

Delvalle's order had all the futility of tilting at windmills because he had no real way of backing it up. Panama's president does not control the army, the police, the legislature or even the nation's game wardens. Gen. Noriega does.

Thus, it came as little surprise that Noriega's top aides, including the commander of the national police and the army's chief of staff, quickly decided to side with the general against the president.

So, too, did the National Assembly, which is dominated by a coalition of Noriega followers. The assembly's 10-minute meeting early this morning, in which it fired Delvalle and Vice President Roderick Esquivel, had the rubber-stamp quality of a session of the Supreme Soviet.

But he has only one weapon, public opinion, and Panama's neighbors in Latin America have been slow to condemn Noriega despite widespread allegations of his involvement in drug trafficking and other forms of corruption — even murder — all of which Noriega has denied.

That's largely because Noriega has thrown up the United States as a straw man, accusing it of trying to oust him in an attempt to renege on a 1978 treaty turning over the Panama Canal to Panama at the turn of the century. Delvalle himself took that stance before changing his tune Thursday.

Many, if not most, Latin American governments are loathe to side with the United States in any dispute involving a neighbor, if only to pacify their own large numbers of left-leaning voters.

But the spectacle of a legally elected president firing his top general only to be fired himself by the general's henchmen is not likely to sit well, even in Latin America.

"This will isolate the government, no doubt," said Mario Luis Del Valle, vice president of the Panama Banking Association and a member of the National Civic Crusade, which began clamoring for Noriega's ouster last June.

The Civic Crusade, a loose coalition of business, professional, labor and political organizations, has been trying for months to convince the other Latin American countries that Panama's is an illegitimate government under Noriega's thumb.

Aurelio Barria, president of Panama's Chamber of Commerce and Industry and an opposition leader, has personally carried that message to the presidents of at least half a dozen Latin American nations.

But, until now, he has garnered little support.

In an interview, Delvalle predicted that would soon change.

"I think it will be another blow against Noriega and also against Panama, which has had a terrible track record in recent years," he said of his attempt to dismiss the general. "I expect that the majority of the nations of this hemisphere will be very reluctant to have relations with Panama."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Korean president OKs amnesty for dissidents

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Roh Tae-woo approved a sweeping amnesty today for 1,731 political dissidents and labor activists to demonstrate his determination to build a democratic government.

A time bomb was found today in a U.S. government building in the southern city of Kwangju and police said radical students planted the device.

The bomb was found in the public library of the U.S. Information Service and people in the building were evacuated while army bomb experts were brought in to defuse the device, U.S. diplomats said. Police said the device was faulty.

Five students armed with homemade bombs and knives briefly seized the service's library in Seoul Wednesday and detonated two of the devices before being overpowered by police. Nobody was hurt in the attack.

Roh approved the freeing from prison or restoration of civil rights to the dissidents after meeting with his Cabinet for the first time since he was sworn into office Thursday. The government said the measure was designed to build public trust.

The political and labor cases were included in an amnesty for 7,234 people, most of them convicted of ordinary criminal offenses.

It was not immediately clear how many of the dissidents were still in prison, but it appeared many have been released in earlier amnesties. Those still in prison were to be freed Saturday.

Gorbachev pleads for calm

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev today made an unprecedented public appeal for calm in the protest-plagued republic of Armenia, but thousands ignored him and took to the streets in a "sea of banners," witnesses said.

For the past five days, protesters have jammed the center of Yerevan, Armenia's capital, to demand that a region of the neighboring republic of Azerbaidzhan, Nagorno-Karabakh, whose population is more than three-quarters Armenian, be made part of Armenia.

The Soviet Communist Party Central Committee, over which Gorbachev presides over as general secretary, rejected the call earlier this month. That sparked street protests in Yerevan in numbers without precedent in the 70 years of Soviet history.

Sergei Grigoryants, an Armenian dissident, said a speech from Gorbachev was read over Armenian state-run radio at 11 a.m. by Vladimir I. Dolgikh, a non-voting member of the ruling Politburo. It was later read by Dolgikh over local television, said Gevorg Miroyan, an editor at Armenian Gosteleradio, the state broadcasting authority.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Soviet troops headed home from East Germany and Czechoslovakia taking with them the first nuclear missiles dismantled under the superpower treaty scrapping intermediate-range nuclear weapons.
