AMARILLO IS FILLING FOR C-C MEETING

Military Leaders Received With Salute of Guns by Artillery

OPENS MONDAY

First Day to Be Devoted to Receiving Resignation of Whaley

AMARILLO, June 20—(AP)—Succeeding good rains opened the pre-convention session of the West Texas chamber of commerce here Sunday with crowds promising a record attendance. Hotels were being filled rapidly and accommodations were in brisk demand. Registration for the convention were well under way Sunday afternoon.

Paul B. Malone, brigadier general, U. S. A., Fort Sam Houston, was the first of the military delegation to arrive, being welcomed Sunday night by a deputation of West Texas and Amarillo chamber of commerce officials. Maj. Gen. John A. Hulen and Brig. Gen. Jake F. Wolters, Texas national guard, arrived Sunday afternoon and were given a salute by the guns of the Forty-second artillery.

First official gathering was a patriotic-social meeting at the auditorium Sunday afternoon with General Malone as principal speaker. Several thousand attended.

Monday's events included presentation of the resignation of Porter A. Whaley, as manager of the West Texas chamber and election of a new manager, with Homer D. Wade, Fort Worth, assistant manager, reported as having a strong chance for the position.

Three important group meetings will be held Monday afternoon. The first is the agricultural and livestock meeting at 2:30 p. m. with J. A. Whitehurst, chairman of the Oklahoma board of agriculture and George B. Terrell, agricultural commissioner of Texas as principal speakers.

The second important meeting is that of highway commissioners of Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, who will work out a program of collaboration. It will be held at 3:30 p. m. At 5:30 p. m. the annual conference of presidents and managers of the chamber of commerce of West Texas will be held with George W. Briggs of Eastland presiding and John M. Cage of the Texas highway commission as a speaker.

Greetings will be brought from Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson by Mrs. Emma Grigsby Meharg, secretary of the state, from the United States chamber of commerce by Joe Leopold, Dallas, and from the east Texas chamber by E. A. Blount, Nacogdoches, and W. N. Blanton, manager.

The annual address of the president will be delivered at the Monday morning session by R. Q. Lee, Cisco. A review of the 40 bands entered in the fifth annual band contest will be a feature.

Phelan Is Named Pilot of Sports; Nason Purchased

SHREVEPORT, La., June 20.—(AP)—Art Phelan, former utility player of the Fort Worth baseball team, and captain of the Shreveport Texas league team since last Sunday, tonight was appointed manager of the Sports. Bob Tarleton, retiring pilot, was made business manager.

Tarleton announced the purchase of Big Chief Nason from the Syracuse club of the International league. Nason was with the San Antonio Bears in 1925.

Mary and Suzanne Play Attracting Net Joust Interest

LONDON, June 20.—(AP)—American interest in the jubilee lawn tennis tournament opening tomorrow at Wimbledon will have a crucial point in the very first round when Miss Mary K. Browne again faces the dazzling attack of Mlle Suzanne Lenglen.

Despite Miss Browne's defeat by Suzanne in the recent Paris championship, tennis followers are evidencing warm interest in the clash. The French star, a victor in the Wimbledon matches six times in the last seven years, is a heavy favorite to repeat, she did not contend the seventh year.

Wichitan Critically Hurt In Road Crash

Kemp, Native Texan, Empire Builder, Man of Ideals And Broad Vision

"And who is J. A. Kemp?"

Hugh Nugent Fitzgerald, dean of Texas political writers, has answered this question as a reply to recent political attacks on Mr. Kemp because of his work as chairman of the state-wide road bond validating committee.

To Wichitans, of course, this "explanation" is not needed, for he has been known too long and is known too well in this city and most of Texas to be in need of defense from political demagogues. However, Mr. Fitzgerald has ably presented a few facts concerning the distinguished Wichitan.—Editor's Note.

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

There may be newcomers in Texas who will ask, who is Joseph A. Kemp?" And the question is easily answered by the builders of Texas, the brawn and the brain of, Texas, the men who have made Texas what it is today in the short space of 40 years.

Joseph A. Kemp is a man of the people. He is a native son. He was born in Bosque county. In his early youth he worked with his hands as well as his brains. In youthful manhood he journeyed to the west that was then a wilderness. He was born with vision. He was born with courage. He was born with ideals.

He was proud of the Texas of the fathers and hoped that the sons would see to it that the fulfillment of their dreams came true. He pitched his tent in the county of Wichita where there is a city of 55,000 today, a city that faith built. It was a little hamlet when Joseph A. Kemp pitched his tent not far from the banks of the Red river.

It was an Indian wilderness on the Oklahoma side of the Red river. It was before the coming of the wire fence when a mighty empire was grazing land for the herds of the cattleman.

Joseph A. Kemp and those who were associated with them built highways; they built railroads, north and south and east and west; they built flouring mills and elevators after which they had encouraged the cultivation of wheat and corn. They established wholesale houses. They established banks, little banks and in the fullness of times mighty banks succeeded the little ones. And 30 years ago when he was a young man, Joseph A. Kemp saw that drouths could be prevented and bountiful crops grown every year of the flood waters were caught and stored for irrigation purposes.

He enlisted a little band of zealots, empire builders in their souls, and they began the battle for the conversation of the flood waters and the reclaimation of semi-arid lands and the prevention, by irrigation ditches and vast reservoirs of the drough ever destroying the labor of the tillers of the soil. It was a long drawn out battle.

There were no laws on the subject. An amendment of the constitution was necessary. A campaign of education was necessary. Barriers erected by ignorance and doubt and cupidity and custom had to be brushed aside. Many were the skirmishes and many the failures.

It required their labor of 26 years to make the control of flood waters for irrigation purposes possible by law under the skies of Texas. Now everywhere under Texas skies the blessings of irrigation are known to the minds of men.

Joseph A. Kemp never faltered for a second in the 26 years. He never lost heart. He never lost his power of vision. He was the man that raised the money. He was the man that sold the idea to the doubter. He was the man that remained on the firing line first and last and all the time until success came. He was the man that aided every budding enterprize in his home city and was ever in evidence when it came to inviting investors and home-makers to Texas

5000 MASSES HELD SUNDAY

Opening of Eucharistic Congress Marked by Professions of Faith.

CHICAGO, June 20.—(AP)—Solemn and stately ceremonies symbolising with all the pomp and glory of ancient Rome, the faith of nineteen centuries and the unity of a world-wide church marked the formal opening today of the 28th international Eucharistic congress.

One of the mightiest hosts of pilgrims ever assembled in Christendom for the purpose of making public profession of faith in Jesus Christ inaugurated their five-day festival by worship in more than five thousand masses which preceded magnificent services in the Cathedral of the Holy Name in which his eminence John Cardinal Bonsano was formally installed as the legate of Pope Pius XI.

Cardinal Mundelein, sponsor of the congress and host of its pilgrims, uttered Thanksgiving in his address to Cardinal Bonsano for the spiritual harvest epitomized in the reception of Holy Communion by more than one million souls in the Chicago archdiocese today.

Spires defense will be shooting at first sight after insult to his wife, one of his attorneys announced in justice court February 9, when Spires waived examination, was allowed bond and furnished it.

Eighty-four witnesses and a special venire of 60 five been summoned.

Negro Confesses Oklahoma Slaying To Marlin Officers

MARLIN, June 20.—(AP)—A negro arrested here Sunday by Sheriff Henry Barton today admitted he is Jess "Napoleon" Harris, said to be wanted in Oklahoma City on a charge of murder in connection with the slaying of Ralph Robinson, Rock Island special agent, here March 31.

Such was the statement of Oklahoma officers here to question the negro, who waived extradition, and left this afternoon with the officers for Oklahoma City.

The negro, however, claims another negro did the shooting, although admitting he was present, the officers said.

Robinson was last seen when he arrested four negroes for stealing coal. His body was found the next morning.

Electra Girl Is Sunday Bride

ELECTRA, June 20.—Miss Myrtle Dunagan became the bride of A. B. Jones, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Dunagan, at the family residence on West Wharton avenue at 9 o'clock Sunday morning.

The house was decorated with fern and roses in tall vases with carnations and vines forming an improvised altar. Miss C. C. Stidham played the wedding march.

Immediately after the congratulations the bride and groom left via automobile for Colorado Springs for a two weeks' vacation.

Out-of-town guests were Miss Theo Davis of Decatur; Billie Green of Decatur; Mr. and Mrs. Henry of Belton. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Stidham, Mr. and Mrs. Glissen and family of County Line, Rev. and Mrs. E. M. Francis; Mesdames R. G. Candler, G. L. Henson, Simmons, Miss Minnie Melton and Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Dunagan.

The bride finished high school in 1921 and spent the next two years in Baylor-Belton college while this year she taught school in the Electra public schools.

After the honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Jones will make their home in Electra until school starts, then they will live in Oklahoma where the bride will teach in the high school department.

MAN LEFT ON HIGHWAY AS CAR GOES ON

W. F. Chappell Is Badly Hurt in Accident Saturday.

NEGROES BLAMED

Three-Year-Old Daughter Says Machine Hits Them and Runs.

W. F. Chappell, aged about 50, is in the general hospital in a critical condition as a result of injuries sustained Saturday night when he was run down by an automobile on the Iowa Park road. Attending physicians stated last night his chances for recovery were slight.

The accident, information available last night indicated, happened early Saturday evening on the road bewteen this city and Iowa Park. A 3-year-old daughter of Chappell's who was riding with her father in a farm wagon, stated that an automobile occupied by negroes crashed into their vehicle, demolishing it. The little girl, who was too nervous and frightened to give coherent stories last night, asserted the car drove rapidly away after the accident, leaving her father unconscious on the roadway.

A passing motor bus picked the man up in a few minutes and brought him into Wichita Falls. It was found at the hospital Sunday that he was paralyzed from the chest down, that numerous bones were broken and that he had probably been injured internally.

Chappell lives at 2807 Avenue N but has been operating a small farm near Iowa Park recently. He was coming home to spend Sunday when the crash came.

Rumor of Merger Is Flatly Denied

SALT LAKE CITY, June 20.—(AP)—Knowledge of any contemplated merger of the Western Pacific railroad with the Denver and Rio Grande and Missouri Pacific railroad system, was denied by C. M. Levy, president of the Western Pacific, who was in Salt Lake for an hour yesterday.

Whn asked what effect the recent acquisition by Arthur Curtis James, vice-president and director of the Phelps-Dodge corporation, of a large block of Western Pacific stock, would have on the road, he said he did not know.

Levy said no one could state definitely whether there will be a merger of the Western Pacific with any road.

Stories appearing in Pacific coast papers to the effect that a merger of the Western Pacific with the Denver and Rio Grande and Missouri system, would occur with in a short time, were branded by Mr. Levy as the product of a reporter who was guessing at something regarding which he knew nothing."

One Dead, Another Jailed in Fight

PARIS, June 20.—(AP)—W. D. Davis, is dead and W. V. Webb, his next door neighbor is in jail charged with murder, following a shooting near their homes near Sunday. No cause for the shooting was given. A double barrel shotgun is said to have been used.

Davis is survived by his wife and two children. He had lived here only a short time. Webb is married and has two children.

95 Degree Mark Hung Up Sunday

A maximum temperature of 95 degrees was recorded here Sunday by the weather station of the Wichita Falls Electric Company. It was a day of partial cloudiness, fairly high winds and an average June temperature that kept things hot but not unpleasantly so.

The minimum for the day was 70 degrees, while at 5 p. m. the thermometer stood at 94.

A maximum wind velocity of 12 miles an hour was recorded with the average hanging around eight. The breeze was from the southwest, from which point it has consistently made its appearance the past few days.

Electra Boy Is Hurt in Church

ELECTRA, June 20.—Clyde Johnson Jr., 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Johnson of 402 North Waggoner street was painfully injured at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning when starting into the basement of the First Methodist Sunday school. The child with several others was crowding into the basement and a large iron door which was off the hinges, and standing near the entrance, fell and struck him in the head. He was taken home where Dr. Ralph E. Weller was summoned, and took six stitches in his head. There were two scalp wounds, about two inches in length on the crown of his head, and a severe wound over the right eye. He will be compelled to remain in bed for two or three weeks.

"Let's Make a Little More Family Love," Is Kay's Plea To Class

The beauties of and the need of family life in the world today was touched on Sunday morning by Judge John C. Kay when he spoke to his men's Bible class at the Strand theatre. The day's lesson was one touching on the family, being based on the story of Joseph and which Judge Kay used to demonstrate the value of family love.

A total of 322 persons heard the address, which was as follows:

The lesson this morning is the story of a family. I sometimes greatly fear that the want of proper family life is the one great weak place in the American harness today. The voice of the parent in the family, the voice of authority in the family, affection in the family, I greatly fear, is something that is lacking in many places.

When we think about China and India and all the teeming, thronging millions in the east, who we have been taught to call "heathens," which just means a fellow you don't know, and we imagine that they haven't any good traits. Some of us think that. Some of us are inclined to agree with Kipling that East of Suez the best is like the worst, but it can't be true that a civilization as old as China, as old as India, could have run as long as it has without some good virtues, and I want to tell you what one of their virtues is from the Mediterranean sea to the China sea. It is love and respect for the family. The Chinese emperor, when they had an emperor, used to go barefooted once a year to visit his mother; and, if a Chinese general wins a battle, the newspapers don't say that he won it, but they give his father credit for winning it, and, everywhere throughout the east, the home and the family is the one thing that they most greatly respect.

Family Life

Now, the Jews were Asiatic. They lived in that country and they brought with them from that country a love of family life greater than most people have. You know, I can understand how a man might be a hijacker, or a robber; I can understand how a man might kill somebody; I can understand how he might commit a forgery or perjury; I can, in some degree, understand every crime in the book except one. God help me, I

Missing Argentine Aviators Are Safe

PARA, Brazil, June 20.—(AP)—Bernardo Duggan, the Argentine aviator and his companion, Oliver, who have been missing for a week, are safe. They arrived today at Cigia, State of Parar, having left their hydro-airplane on the Island of Maraca, a short distance north of the mouth of the Amazon, where they had made a landing because of lack of gasoline.

Both aviators are well. They reached Vigia by canoe, a message from the mayor of Vigia to the Argentine consul at Para, stated briefly:

"The Argentine aviators are safe at my house."

Duggan and Oliver disappeared last Sunday after they had left Paramarib capital of Dutch Guiana, on their New York to Buenos Aires flight. They were last reported over Cayenne, French Guiana.

Frenchmen Like American Films

PARIS, June 20.—(AP)—In spite of the wails uttered from time to time in France over the large number of American films displayed as compared with those of French production, the public appears to prefer the American product.

One Paris daily has ben studying display during 1915 and now informs its readers that considerably more than 50 per cent of all films shown in France during the year were foreign (American) ones. There were 319 new films shown and of this total only 123 were French.

There are at present 2,947 halls of various sorts where films are shown. There are 200 cinemas in Paris. 80 in Marseilles, 60 in Lyons, 40 in Bordeaux, 30 in Lille and 20 in Nice.

CAUCUS CHIEF SWITCHES OVER TO DAN MOODY

J. W. Stephenson, Representative From Victoria, Abandons 'Pa.'

PRAISES J. A. KEMP

Erstwhile Supporter Angered by Ex-Governor's Bond 'Repudiation.'

J. W. Stephenson of Victoria, prominent business man and legislative leader of that community, has withdrawn his supprt of the Ferguson administration and transferred it to Dan Moody, it was announced here Sunday by J. A. Kemp following a long-distance telephone conversation with the Victoria man.

In speaking to Mr. Kemp, Stephenson declared he could under no consideration endorse Ferguson's attitude on the state road district bonds, that he resented attacks made by James E. Ferguson recently on Mr. Kemp and the committee which he headed in the interests of securing validation of $100,000,000 of Texas securities; and that he denounced Ferguson's suggestions that the state should repudiate these debts through the legal technicality opened up by the supreme court's decision in the Archer county case.

Old Friend of Jim's.

Stephenson has long been a friend of the Fergusons and was chairman of the caucus of the Ferguson adherents in the house of representatives when the amnesty measure was under consideration.

In explaining his reason for his position Mr. Stephenson said:

"Ferguson may claim he is not advocating repudiation of honest debts, but he can't get around it that he is inviting repudiation. He is the leader of a large element in the state and when he declares that the supreme court has held that Texas does not owe this money, he not only states what isn't a fact, but he suggests to his adherents that they repudiate the debt. In the emergency created by the Archer county decision all state leaders ought to stand together regardless of political advantage, to have the bonds validated quickly and with such unanimity that the bond buying public will feel sure that Texas will never take advantage of a technicality to repudiate its debt. Ferguson has now made everything like unanimity impossible. It is to be a fight and in that I am unwilling to be classed with those who might even consider repudiation.

"A referendum on the question to districts or the state at large such as Ferguson seems to suggest is an insult to the honest people of Texas, and I believe that means most of them. No one wants to vote on whether he is honest or not, what he wants to do is pay his debts as quickly as he can.

Buyers Approve Draft.

"The leading attorneys for the bond buyers have approved the draft of a validating act which is now in the governor's hands. I was present when the bill was handed to Mr. Ferguson. I gathered from his remarks that a special session of the legislature would be called after the primaries to validate the bonds. The position he is now taking however, is in direct opposition to the views I have had and which I expressed when, as a member of the bond validating committee, I was in the conference in the governor's office. I cannot, therefore, continue to advocate the governor's election.

"I have known Mr. Moody well for two years. He is a man of exceptional ability and of sincerity that cannot be questioned. For a time I thought he was too young for the governorship, but his speeches have demonstrated that he has a grasp of state affairs that qualifies him for any office. I was especially gratified when in his Victoria speech he declared in favor of the search and seizure law, which protects a man in his home, and against the use of rangers in counties where not called for by local officers. We must remember that Thomas Jefferson was of Dan Moody's age when he wrote the Declaration of Independence. I have concluded to support Mr. Moody for governor."

SECOND LOVE

COPYRIGHT 1926 BY EDGAR FRANKLIN

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

John Parrish, and Audrey, his only young wife, have established business of her late husband interests to her money and the property. He goes to a hotel. After six days, she goes to a mountain resort to wait for the father who is returning home from Europe. She leaves Marcie Allen in charge of her home. Marcie, young and beautiful, has been ordered from her every home by her father because of her flirtatious ways. Parrish makes the rights of girls to be as they please. He makes violent love to Parrish, when she was frequently after Audrey's departure, and at last he begins to respond. At the last chapter ends, they are sitting on the steps of Audrey's home, and the maid has just informed Marcie that a telegram has come for her.

HOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.
CHAPTER XXIII.

The maid flooded the porch with light from a western overhead, Marcie without turning, lifted her head for the telegram.

"It's from Audrey, of course," she told Parrish as she perused the sheet. "She says:

"Please telephone Mr. Parrish to pay wages of my household staff and tell you please telegraph me whether flowers in garden are being cared for properly and if mattress generally are okay in the house. Will be back in four or five days—Audrey."

Parrish clapped his hand on his knee. "Let that go," he demanded angrily. "Doesn't inquire how I am—waste me to pay the servants though—with her money."

"Be reasonable," urged Marcie. "She would hardly ask me about you in a telegram, you know."

He was on his feet now. "I'm a jackey," he said, ignoring her speech. "Just a fourflusher." He gazed up and down the moment, and then stooped, took her hand, shook it, put his hat on his head and went away.

"Goodnight, boy," she called after him.

"Night," he answered, as he went through the gate.

Marcie did not go back to her own home, but occupied her room at Audrey's as if her visit had not been interrupted. She slept late the next morning, and after rising, floated around in her transparent robe.

Near noon, Parrish came to the front entrance and rang the bell. Marcie chanced to be near by, and opened the door.

She caught his half-averted glance at her thin garment, and said: "Terribly gauzy, isn't it? But you've see it before. Come in."

"Better not," he said. "I brought your roadster—thought you might care to use it." He indicated the yellow car that stood at the curb.

Marcie advanced her forefinger and laid it on his chin.

"You're fibbing again—now tell me the truth," she directed.

Parrish reddened. "That WAS the truth." After a moment, though, he added: "I did want to talk to you, anyway. Would you like to drive yourself and go riding?"

"I'd love it."

In an instant she was gone. Parrish stood waiting with his shoulder against the door-jamb, and contemplated the hallway of his wife's home. The house maid came by, and he greeted her, "I'm sending over your wages today," he said. "Will you tell the cook and the upstairs maid and the chauffeur and the gardener?"

Marcie returned in less than five minutes.

"You dress quicker than Audrey does," Parrish told her as they went out to the car. "She usually takes an hour."

"I'd take an hour, too—if I were sure I had you hooked," Marcie told him with engaging frankness. "Where are we going to drive?"

"Oh, just around." He assisted her to the seat, and climbed in on the other side.

He was silenced as they drove away. Marcie sat so near him that another passenger might readily have found room beside her on the seat.

"You're a perfect driver," she said, once.

He nodded, accepted the compliment but made no other response. Her eyes were merry, and she smiled a little as they rode on.

When they reached a residence street on the fringe of the city, where the dwellings were spaced far apart, he stopped the car under a tree—a small struggling tree, planted there by a real estate promoter and forgotten.

Children were playing in the yard of a house near by. A woman was hanging out clothes in a vacant lot, next to her own dwelling. Parrish watched them soberly for a time.

"Marcie," he said, at last, turning to face her, "What would you do if you were in my place?"

The girl put her hand on his knee. "Tell me more about it," she urged.

"Audrey doesn't care anything about me," he said.

"How do you know?" Her foot was touching his now.

"Look how she treats me!" He pulled his hat down over his eyes, and scowled. "I married her in good faith, because I loved her. I'd have been glad if she didn't have a cent—I was poor, you know, and a man doesn't like to be dependent on his wife."

Marcie laughed. "Aren't men and women different?"

"I decided to make the best of it," he went on, "and I've done everything I could do to be kind and decent. Yet you've heard her talk to me. If she's mentioned once the silk underwear she bought me, she's mentioned it a hundred times. She rubs it in that she bought me an expensive tie pin. She says, in front of people that she pays me my salary. Confound it, she humiliates me every chance she gets!"

"Poor boy," she sighed, taking his hand and squeezing it.

"Now look at us!" He slid further down in the seat, his chin on his breast. "I'm living at a hotel. Without a word to me, she goes away some place. I suppose her father will come home with her, and I'll have no place to live but a hotel bedroom—she'll get a divorce."

"Do you hate her father?" Marcie asked, with curiosity.

"Lord, no." There was utter gaiety in his tone. "I like him. But he'll take her part, of course."

The girl frowned in her lap, tapping his chin with the palm of her hand.

"You love Audrey," she stated, quietly.

"You mean I LOVE her?"

"That's what I said. You're only mad at her now because your feelings have been hurt."

He rubbed his hand over the rim of the steering wheel, reflectively.

"Do you like me?" he said at length.

"I sure do."

"Do you love me?"

Marcie withdrew her hand and foot. "That's a fine question to ask me, when we've just been talking about how much you love Audrey!"

Parrish put out his arm, and laid his fingertips lightly on her wrist.

"I'm talking about you—not Audrey," he said, his gaze solemn. "I have the same right to happiness as any other man. I've been unhappy—you know that. I want to know how you really feel about me!"

The girl laughed. "I told you I was just practising on you."

His fingers closed around her wrist. "I don't believe it, Marcie. I think that's just your line of talk. Besides, you said you were trying to make me run after you."

She looked at him beneath upraised brows. "Are you running after me now?"

His hand tightened. "That's up to you. Do you want me?"

Marcie considered, as he stared at her, waiting.

"John," she said, "you're only trying to get even with Audrey. Maybe you don't realize it, but it's so."

He stirred impatiently. "I know this—you wouldn't nag me because of your money, Marcie."

The corners of her eyes crinkled in merriment. "That's because I haven't got any money."

"Neither have I—we'd start out even. Marcie—" he leaned nearer to her—"the biggest mistake in the world is for a poor man to marry a rich girl."

"I know a worse one," she retorted. "It's for a poor girl to marry a poor man." To soften the words, she laid her palm on the back of his hand, and smoother it. He jerked the hand away abruptly.

"You mean you haven't intended to marry me if Audrey dives—sets me free?" His voice was harsh.

She mined his gladness and held them tight.

"Johnny boy—does a vamp have to be serious? Don't you like to have me make love to you for fun?"

By this time he had twisted himself until one knee was flat on the seat between them. The veins on his forehead were swelling, and his lips were compressed.

"Are you trying to make a fool out of me?" he shouted. "What in the devil's are you driving at?"

She started a laughing reply, but Parrish blazed up in fury. Clapping his hands upon her shoulders he shook her violently, his lips drawn back, his teeth showing.

Marcie's expression altered with lightning suddenness. Thrusting out both arms, her fingers curved. She seized his hair and jerked it with youthful vigor. Immediately afterward she scratched his face. The white streaks she left upon his cheeks and temples turned to reddened welts.

For half a minute she raged, spitting out profanity and hammering at his head, which he had covered with his arms, defensively. Then, with a final dig of her nails that left his mouth bleeding, she sank back.

"Take me home, you blasted idiot!" she commanded.

There was a delay, until he could gather his scattered wits. Slowly he set the car in motion, and turned it around. No word was exchanged as they drove to Audrey's house, and he did not look at her, as he drew up to the curb. Climbing out, he went away on foot. Climbing out, he went away afoot. His face looked as if he had done battle with an angry cat.

LET'S MAKE

sweet could understand how a man could walk all and abandon a group of little babies, and, I hope to see the day come when the soul of Tom will be too hot for his feet. (Applause.)

Family! That's just everything, is the love and the affection and the respect for your family. Once in a while, I take personal delight about going back to one of the children, going to dishonor one of the children. Once in a while that kind of a fellow comes into the governor's office. I have heard men talk about shutting the door in the face of the children. Two years I would let the world burn up before I would turn the back of my hand to one of my children. I don't care what they say, or don't care, That's they say I had about it.

So, old Jacob said: "I haven't seen my boy in 20 years. The wild beasts ate him up." And, they got hungry in that country, and there wasn't any bread. We never think about our modern conveniences and blessings, we take them as a matter of fact. We never think about the blessings of transportation. Our Fort Worth & Denver railroad could move enough food out of Egypt into Palestine in one night to have stopped that famine, but, these fellows had to go on a journey that took months, and get a little wheat in a sack, and carry it across deserts to preserve life. We couldn't have a famine now like they had in those days, unless, indeed, the famine was worldwide.

One Ran At Home

So these boy go down there and find their brother, and he says: "Are there any more at home?" They said: "Yes, there is one little boy." Ah, the son of Rachael, who had died by the side of the road; the favorite son of that old man, (as every youngest child must be.) (You know, people always say that the little one, the last one, is such a baby. It is because everybody sets out deliberately to spoil him. That's the reason.)

So they went back home and they took that one away. The only other boy of Rachael was already gone 20 years, and Jacob let them take this one down there, and they go down there and old Judah says to Joseph, "My Lord!" He called him "My Lord." Do you remember that last day when they were cutting wheat and Joseph came loitering out to the field where they were, when they were all busy throwing rocks at the birds and the grasshoppers flying up there in front of him?

Joseph said: "Boys I had a dream last night about wheat field and I thought your sheaves fell down and worshipped my sheaf." And, here they were down there saying "Lord," you are great just the same as Pharaoh. So, Joseph has them bring their little boy down and then had them arrested on a trumped up charge. You know, it don't take much to get arrested. I never charge it up very particularly against a man because he got arrested.

So, they bring that little boy, and all the others come back and then Judah is making a talk. What does he say? He and Reuben both talking. He says: "We can't go back to that old man and tell him we didn't bring this boy back. This little boy. We can't face that old man and say: 'We didn't bring the baby, back.' "Here, take me and make me a slave. It is all right about me. I don't mind it, but the old man's life is bound up in the lad's life." Isn't that nice poetry? Isn't that a wonderful line in the Bible, that this old father's life was bound up and knit together and tied to the life of the little boy? Is that the way it is at your house? Do the children love you? Do you love the children? Would the neighbors say that your life was bound up in the lives of the children? I don't know. "Where's Jimmie tonight?" "Gone to town." "Where's Sarah Ann?" "She went for a little auto ride." "Where's Willie?" "I dont know." "What time is it?" "Half past eleven." Is your life bound up in the life of the children? I know it is a big job to raise children.

I know an old bachelor can raise them better than anybody, to hear him tell it, and an old maid knows exactly what ought to be done, but, to us who have a house full of them, it is a problem. A big job. Hard work. I don't know how I got to talking about myself here this morning. I think it is bad taste, but sometimes I think I will just lay off of other kinds of business and use it as my sole subject.

After they had Joseph about here the old movie life was found up with that boy, and after another famine had refused to buy there in his place, the next everybody out of the room except the family. (How many times is there in a while you ought to have one company of your house. I remember as my father's house we ran a whole year without ever sitting down to the table without company, nearly one meal. Lo, people wonder why I was so poor when I got to Texas.) So, Joseph sent all everybody—gone; them away, and hands them fellows down there with them donkeys and them sacks of corn, under cover, and he said:—what did he say to them? He didn't say "I am a goat; more in Egypt. I am here your hands and all. I am the governor of state." But, after everybody was out, and they locked the door, he said: "I am Joseph whom you sold into Egypt, and God was behind it all and I have been sent down here to save much people alive." It is the most refreshing dramatic situation in all literature. I don't know of but one play of modern times that approaches, and it is on the same theme, "The Two Orphans," which is said to be the most perfect of all dramatic writings, because in "The Two Orphans," one was a bigger and one ant among the great, and it is the same theme here.

Got the Corn.

Now, these fellows didn't go down into Egypt to get that corn, they only thought they went down there to get corn, because when they got back, and in that parched desert country where there was no food, yet, did they tell the old man: "We have got right smart of corn, enough to last until September 15, we can get by now if we get any rain this fall." Anything like that? No! They said: "Your boy, Joe, he is alive and he is a great man in Egypt, and he wants us all to come down there." What could be a greater story than that? So this family, after all, did love each other, and these bad boys that had sold their brother became more tender. Do you know, you are not doing much again in life if you don't get more tender and more sentimental and more charitable as you grow older, as these young men did.

What does Jacob say? He didn't say, "Put on the pot and put on a little of that corn?" The old man couldn't eat now, but he said: "Joseph, my son, is yet alive. I will go down there and see him before I die," and they did go.

Let's make a little more of the family; a little more love for the family; a little more tenderness for the family; a little softer footfall about the house and a little more quiet voice, and a little more of love, and of laughter, and of song, because the family, after all, doesn't last always.

from other states to take the wild lands of the Lone Star blossom, to plant new industries here, to encourage all branches of manufacturing, to build colleges and school houses, to give all the modern improvements to the dwellers of the country as well as to those of the city and to make this land of the fathers a paradise for people while they are in the land of the living.

In all the years from boyhood out this Texan, this son of Bosque county, has been broad in his vision, tolerant of all nationalities and all creeds, a champion of constitutional government and the bill of rights, an advocate of high ideals in and out of office, honesty in the expenditure of the tax money of the people and ever generous in aiding from his private fortune all movements for the betterment of humanity.

He isn't a shriveled localism. He isn't a hide-bound in politics or creed. He believes in living and letting others live. His word has never been broken. His pledge has never been dishonored. He his has been that of a Texan, living true to the traditions of the fathers who gave this empire state to the people who gave after them as a heritage primarily in domain and principles in the traditions and the achievements that passed on to the builders of future time.

This is Joseph A. Kemp, the father of irrigation in Texas; the empire builder of Texas; the man of heart and courage and valour in Texas; the man who believes that it is dishonorable to repudiate a private debt and a crime to repudiate an obligation made in the name of the state in a legitimate way, for legislative purposes, by legislative way, for legislative investments who bought the bonds because they knew the faith of the people of a commonwealth was in them and the credit of an imperial commonwealth behind them.

Request Clerk's Picture in Show

AUSTIN, June 20.—(AP)—Evidence of the extent to which Right Rev. George Herbert Kinsolving of Austin is held throughout the diocese of Texas of which he is the head has been manifested by requests received from two Texas cities for privilege of exhibiting his portrait recently completed by Wayman Adams, painter of New York City.

Richard Cotner, chairman of the portrait committee, stated today that the museum of fine arts at Houston had requested the portrait to be sent there for one month's exhibition beginning July 1. A similar request has been received from San Antonio municipal auditorium.

Continue Probe Of Missing Medic

SAN ANTONIO, June 20.—(AP)—S. F. Hunt, sheriff of San Patricio county left for Sinton Sunday with his party brought here to investigate the whereabouts of Dr. J. A. Ramsey, Mathes physician, missing from his home since May 20.

H. J. and Ed Leahy, brothers, and Ed Debose, former deputy sheriff, are under arrest and will have a hearing Monday morning before Justice of the Peace A. J. Custer at Sinton. Other arrests are yet to be made, Hunt said.

Hunt's trip here did not develop any new clews concerning the missing doctor.

Briand Endeavors To Form Cabinet

PARIS, June 20.—(AP)—The sixth day of France's cabinet crisis saw a surprising shift in the situation. M. Briand again took up the task of forming a stable ministry after M. Herriot, the radical leader, had notified the president of the republic that he was unable to choose a cabinet.

When the day's consultations with the various political leaders closed, M. Briand was conceded every likelihood of success.

Spudders Close Home Stay, Splitting Double Header With Wacoans

BRAINARD HAS ANOTHER TWIN SET-TO TODAY

Roberts and Williams Work Against Panthers in Cowtown.

The Spudders wound up the home stay yesterday. This afternoon these walloping Wichitans are in Fort Worth where they tangle with Mr. Atz's speeding Felines in a double-header, outcome of a tie game registered at Cowtown earlier in the season.

The Spudders dropped two out of three the past week to Beaumont and two out of three to Waco. In keeping with their apparent habit of losing to the weaker teams pulling down the leaders, the Spudders, according to the dope, naturally should topple the Cats in both ends this afternoon holding Fussell for the opener in Beaumont tomorrow.

The Spudders left Wichita Falls in better shape than on the last road trip which proved quite disastrous and, barring another outburst of injuries and tough brakes, should fare fairly well.

There seems to be a habit developed in recent weeks whereby Wichita Falls wins six straight and then drops four in a row. The loss of the first game Sunday afternoon made it four consecutive defeats. Now they're expected to step out and cop a half dozen in succession. Will the dope hold up? Maybe it'll beat that this time!

The Spudders trek into Fort Worth twice before returning to Wichita Falls July 9. On July 5 they tackle the Cats in another double-header, four golden opportunities to pull the Felines back to their natural level, a lower berth in the second division. The Cats, playing over their heads, the past two weeks, seem to be cracking again and apparently are all set to receive a double trimming today.

Bears Take Two

SHREVEPORT, La., June 20.—(AP)—The Bears took both ends of a double header here this afternoon, winning the first game 3 to 1 and the second game 1 to 0. The locals' only tally for the whole day was scored in the first inning of the first game off the veteran Couchman. After that the locals were blanked. In the second game Shreveport never tallied off Lindsey who held them to four scattered hits. Adkins worked the first game for Shreveport and Thompson the last. Both were pitchers battles.

Athletics Popular

AUSTIN, June 21.—That supervised physical training is popular with the women students attending the University of Texas summer school is shown by the large number who have enrolled for courses in swimming and by the fact that the tennis courts are used daily, according to Miss Ruth Alexander of Dallas, who has charge of these two sports. No courses in tennis are offered this summer by the department of physical training for women, but the courts are kept in condition and may be used by the students at any time during the day. A large number of swimming classes have been organized, some of them for which university credit is given as during the long session. Other classes have been organized for those persons desiring to learn how to swim, but who do not need to meet the university physical training requirements for women. Instructors are provided for all the classes.

Record Crowd Witnesses Sox Defeat Yanks

Kamm's Double Gives Pale Hose Deciding Run in Eighth Inning.

CHICAGO, June 20.—(AP)—Chicago broke even with the league-leading Yankees today when Willie Kamm's two-base hit into the crowd sent over the run which gave the locals the final game of the four-game series, 4 to 3. The Yankees closed their western invastion with nine victories and six defeats. Ground rules made long drives good for two bases only.

The Yankees tied the count in the seventh inning by driving Faber off the hill. With one out and the bases full, Blankenship then checked the rally and prevented New York from even threatening thereafter. The crowd, estimated at 44,000 was the largest which had ever witnessed a game in Comiskey park. Score:

Asked to Fight

BUDAPEST, June 21.—Count Karolyi has been challenged to a duel by Count Teleki.

Count Count Teleki charges that his honor has been impugned by Count Karolyi in statements which he made during the recent franc forgery case.

Details of the duel are kept a secret.

Count Karolyi is well known in the United States, where he had difficulties with the state department in securing admission to visit his sick wife, and was only granted permission to enter after he promised to make no speeches or statements. After leaving the United States he made several utterances denouncing the United States government.

Countess Karolyi also has been barred from netering the United barred from entering the United in the courts.

WHITE-VARNER BOUT TONIGHT

All in Readiness for Fight Card, Says Promoter Wofford.

Tommy White, Texas City, versus Walter Varner, Fort Worth, Catchweights, 10 rounds.

Spike Flanagan, Wichita Falls, versus Tex Ray, Fort Worh, Catchweights, six rounds.

George Dunaway, Fort Worth, versus Bolliyar Ball, Wichita Falls, Featherweights, four rounds.

Battling Sam, Wichita Falls, versus Black Dummy, Wichita Falls, Negro middleweights, four rounds.

Matchmaker D. M. Wofford last night declared all in readiness for this evening's melees at the Eleventh and Ohio arena. The first bout is to go on the boards at 8:15 o'clock.

The Welterweight White steps out of his class again to tackle the middleweight Varner.

Ray claims to be a legitimate lightweight. Flanagan is a welter.

The card is expected to be a speedy affair all the way through.

Jess Petty, "Big Country Boy" From Burk Oil Fields, Winner From Start

"Just a big left-handed country boy, pitching his head off for $50 a month that he never got, but what a pitcher!"

Pat Oliver speaking.

Speaking of Jess Petty, the Brooklyn left-hander, 1926 sensation of the National League hurlers, whom Oliver "discovered."

G. W. (Pat) Oliver, veteran railroad conductor, now retired, has been a baseball follower since he was a boy—and that's been many years ago. In 1919, his "run" took him to Burkburnett, in the midst of the oil fields. The first spare moment he had he hunted up a ball game. He found one.

A husky southpaw was performing for one of the teams. The opposition couldn't smell the ball. The big boy was Petty.

"He seemed to have everything and I watched him frequently," Oliver said. "I had a contract with the late Harry Benson, then president of the San Antonio club, and I spotted Petty as a pitchers ready to go in the Texas League right away. So I got his signature on a contract and he came to the San Antonio team. Fans will remember the great work he did. He joined in July and it wasn't more than a week or two before the major league scouts were flocking down to look him over. Cleveland got him."

Petty remained with Cleveland awhile and was sent to Indianapolis marked "not yet ready for major league duty."

He won 20 games with Indianapolis in his first season.

Brooklyn got him in the winter of 1924, paying a fat price to his American Association owners. He proved erratic last season.

This year, however, he blossomed out and has set the National League on fire. He won his first six games with a team that was laughed at in the spring, being one of the chief reasons for the Robins' high position in the race. Among his triumphs was a one-hit shutout of the Giants.

"Cap" Leidy, Bear coach and scout, touring the Florida major league camps this spring, saw Petty pitch a couple of games and came back comparing him to Christy Mathewson. "He's one of these deep-thinking, hard-pitching guys, with a curve, speed, control and a change of pace; what more do you want?" asks Leidy.

Petty's home is in Jean, Texas.

Hale's home is at Estelline, Texas.

Oliver was a good ball player in his younger days. From 1886 to 1909, he was shortstop at Denison, where Rogers Hornsby did his early playing.

Inability to Hit in Pinches, With Errors, Gives Game to Shippers.

FORT WORTH, June 20.—(AP)—Fort Worth's inability to hit in the pinches coupled with four errors gave the Exporters a 3 to 1 victory in the closing game of the Series Sunday afternoon at Panther park.

Dennis Burns started his first game for Fort Worth and allowed only four hits in his stay on the mound, being taken out in the eighth inning for a pinch hitter. Head finished for Fort Worth. Ross worked for Beaumont and was wild in the opening innings. He walked six men in the first four innings. Score:

Steers Win Three

DALLAS, June 20.—(AP)—The Dallas Steers made it three straight over the Buffs here Sunday before a crowd of 7,000 fans, 8 to 7. Hack Miller's home run in the ninth after one was down won the game for Dallas.

The Buffs went into their half of the ninth two runs behind and tied it up on a hit batsman, a single by Pipkin, pinch hitting for Penner, an error by Gross and a double by Mathes.

Demaggio was chased by Umpire Osborne in the seventh, when he protested a third strike. Love, who went to Darrough's rescue in the ninth with the score tied gets credit for the win.

Browns Tag Sens

ST. LOUIS, June 20.—(AP)—Three hits and a walk in the ninth inning broke a tied score with Washington here today and enabled the Browns to win, 5 to 4. Williams, pinch hitting for Gerber in the seventh, clouted out a home run with two on base, tying the score. It was Williams' eighth homer of the season and Walter Johnson's seventh straight defeat. Manager George Sisler returned to first base for the first time since last Tuesday, when he injured his right arm. Score:

BRIDEGROOM BALKS BISHOP; MARRIED WITHOUT BAPTISM

LONDON.—A. K. Williams, the unbaptized bridegroom whose marriage was forbidden by the Bishop of St. Albans, has circumvented the bishop's veto by having the ceremony performed in the London diocese. Mr. Williams and Miss Phyllis Dickens came to London after every attempt to move the bishop had failed and the ceremony was performed at Christ Church. The general law of the church is that persons must be baptized before marrying, but it is a rule more honored in the breach than in the observance, though other high church dignitaries upheld fully the Bishop of Se. Albans.

Reds and Cubs Take One Each In Double Bill

Cincy Wins First Game 5 to 1, Losing Nightcap 4 to 3.

CINCINNATI, June 20.—(AP)—Chicago and Cincinnati divided a double header here today, the Reds taking the first half, 5 to 0, and the Cubs the latter 4 to 3. Opportune hitting off Blake kept the league leaders well to the front throughout, while Mays held the Cubs scoreless except in the first inning. In the second Art Nehf, starting his first game for the Reds, was knocked out of the box in one-third of an inning, after yielding three hits and a base on balls which netted four runs. Lucas, who relieved him kept the Cubs in check for the remainder of the contest, but the Reds were unable to hit consecutively against Kaufman and Root. Score:

WICHITA FALLS DROPS OPENER BY 8-5 COUNT

Hodge Hurls Domestics to Victory in Second, 5 to 2.

TURGE'S HOMER WINS

McNamara Smashes Two Over in First, One in Second.

Wichita Falls wound up the home stand Sunday afternoon by splitting a double-header with Waco. The Cubs copped the first contest by an 8 to 5 score. The Spudders took the seventh behind tight pitching by Shovel Hodge, 5 to 2.

The nightcap was seven innings in length. With exception of the initial round when an error at third put a runner on and McManara followed with a wallop over the right field fence, Hodge was never in danger. The huge hurler allowed five scattered hits.

Spuds Bunch on Ace

The Spudders buched on Ace Elliott in the third and sixth stanzas. Benton opened the fourth with a single and was forced at second by Hodge who drew a life on fielder's choice. Lamb doubled to left and Turgeon tagged up with a riotous slam over the left field fence, scoring three runs. A walk to Jenkins, a double by Brainard, Metzler's sacrifice fly and Benton's single scored the other two spudder tallies in the sixth.

Spudder home run knockers failed to come through in the first game whereas the Wacoans punched four out of the park. McManara poled two homers in the opener, his one in the second game making it three circuit smashes for the Scotchman during the afternoon. Tom Estell was more or less stingy with his base hits, but those the Cubs did connect for came opportunely and were of the extra-hassock variety.

Shep Cannon, youthful right-hander whose home is in Wichita Falls, hurled all conquerable ball through seven innings, giving up a run in the first frame and then blanking the Spudders until the eighth.

Wichita Falls batted around in the eighth and scored four runs, knocking Shep out from the box. Turgeon opened with a single and Jenkins larruped a double against the left center boards. Pete scored from third on a wild pitch and Tut moved into his place. Washburn drew a walk. Brainard singled to center, scoring Jenkins. Metzler followed with a rift to right that scored Washburn and sent Brainard to second. Cannon was derricked and Willis Hudlin, another right-hander, took up the tossing task. Benton shot a rocket to deep center. Brainard went to third after the catch. Query followed with a single to left center, scoring Brainard. Hodge, batting for Estell, popped out to first and Lamb forced Query at second.

Cubs Score in Clusters

Goff opened the ninth inning against Lefty Ross with a homer over the left field fence. No further damage was done. Turgeon started the Spudder half with a single past third but was forced at second by Jenkins who lined a stiff bounder to Pratt. Ussat in effort to complete a double play heaved into the dirt, so Jenkins went to the keystone. Washburn grounded out, third to first and Brainard hoisted out to left. The first-inning Spudder run was manufactured on singles by Lamb and Turgeon sandwiching a couple of outs and a base on balls.

The Wacoans got to Tom Estell for a three-run lead right at the start on home runs by McNamara and Davis, the latter's four-bagger following a single by West. Two walks, a fielder's choice, a boot at second and Cannon's single tabulated a trio for were of the technically unearned variety. McNamara socked a second homer in the fifth leading off.

When a scientific balloon was preparing to descend in the Vosges recently the guide rope touched a high tension electric cable, causing a short circuit, followed by an explosion that ignited the bag, destroying the balloon and killing the pilot.

Spudder Bludgeons.

FRANCE

FRANCE is on the taboggan again and the French franc has touched its lowest point in history. Prime Minister Briand has organized his tenth ministry to solve the pressing financial political problem now facing the land of the lilies. France is an amazingly rich country and the peasantry of France are thrifty, industrious and saving.

France has two or three colonial empires. France maintains a large standing army and a vast navy. Before the coming of the world war the money loaners of France, including the peasants, invested $4,000,000,000 in the hands and the government of the Romanoffs of Russia.

Now the people of Great Britain, to pay the debts of the war, are taxing themselves almost beyond the limit of endurance. Britons keep their pledges and they pay their debts. Not so France and the French. Their government, their lawmakers haven't enacted taxation measures that pinch the people of France. Their politicians, since the signing of the armistice, have dodged the main issue. They have promised to pay when Germany pays.

They have ever been telling their people that the Germans would be forced to pay some day and this would prevent drastic taxation laws and high tax payments by the people of France. They inflated their currency all along the line. There was a time when the French franc was rated as high as the American dollar or the British pound sterling in the markets of the world. These political financiers of France, whenever they needed money, they started the printing presses and increased the paper circulation.

Germany did the same thing until the German mark wasn't worth the paper on which it was printed. Now the French franc is on the toboggan and some day it may be as worthless as the German mark before the German government practically repudiated the paper money of the republic and placed their country on a gold basis.

France, with its colonial empire should be able to get back to normal as Germany and the Germans returned to normal conditions after a most spectacular experience with paper money, inflated beyond reason and issued whenever it became necessary to start the printing presses and expand a huge volume of paper money already in existence.

There are economical laws which cannot be set aside. Those who play must pay. Those who fight must pay. Even the winner must pay. France needs a Mussolini. It needs a man of iron. There isn't a man of iron, who is the idol of the people today under the French flag.

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

THIS is another chapter of the story of the freedom of the press in Texas. Judgments of the Bexar county court and the fourth court of civil appeals awarding $15,000 damages to P. H. Lancaster against the Express Publishing company of San Antonio for publication of an alleged libelous article December 23, 1917, were affirmed by the supreme court in an opinion written by Presiding Judge Ben F. Powell of the commissmission of appeals.

At the time of publication, Lancaster was chief of police of San Antonio, and he and the judge of the corporation court were criticized during a campaign against vice. He demanded damages and allege malice on the part of the defending newspaper company. Actual malice in the publication of the article was found by the jurors trying the case, Judge Powell held, and that finding was sustained by the court of civil appeals.

It would be well for newspaper writers to take home the sermon delivered by Judge Powell in his opinion. "Consequently, we cannot disturb it here unless it can be said there is no evidence in the record tending to establish actual malice," the opinion said. "We have reviewed the record carefully and cannot make such a statement." The statement was made in Judge Powell's opinion that, "we have no disposition in the world to bridle the press of the state. It is rendering a valuable service to the people. In fact, we are heartily in favor of the freedom of the press. But we do not wish to be unmindful of the corresponding importance to every man of maintaining his reputation for honesty and integrity. This reputation is dear to him. It is the most valuable asset to any man. It is in no sense less valuable simply because a man may hold public office."

Then follow a bit of advice from the court to the newspaper publishers. "When a newspaper charges a person of corruption, it must do so truthfully, or at least base its charge on a state of facts which might probable cause to justify such charge. There is a vast difference between mere inefficiency in office where it is a cause for removal but not generally so. A man may be honorable and hold his head erect, although inefficient. But he cannot face his fellowmen in confidence when he is corrupt or when newspapers have given him that reputation. In singling out individuals and charging them with corruption in office, the press is dealing with a situation of most vital import to the person attacked. As we view it, it is just as serious as it would be to shoot him with a gun or stab him with a knife. Great caution should be exercised in doing so."

In other words, the advice of David Crockett should be taken by the newspaper writer, "be sure you are right and then go ahead." Or the advice of Davy should be revised to read thusly. "Be sure you have facts before you fire the newspaper gun."

MOORE HAS A CLEAR FIELD

STATE SEN. JOSEPH E. MOORE of the Hunt-Collin district has a clear field, and will be returned without opposition. He drew a short term and had to go before the people of his district after serving that district two years. Senator Moore is the editor and publisher of a lively weekly newspaper and prominent in newspaper circles. He is one of the organizers of the Franklin Webster club, which holds its sessions when a legislature is grinding under the big dome.

After he had been given a clear field and the books had been closed against candidates for this election at least, Senator Joe jumped into a wider arena and declared for Lynch Davidson for governor. Two years ago he was a most enthusiastic advocate of the nomination of Judge Felix Robertson. There were two Moores in the upper house of the 39th. William S. Moore represented the district composed of the counties of Cook and Grayson. A district judge died. Governor Ferguson appointed Moore to fill the vacancy. He accepted the judgeship and now he is a candidate for election to that office.

Former Senator S. B. Crowell of Grayson county is a candidate for the upper house in the Cook-Grayson district, and pitted against him for the nomination is Ed Westbrook, who moved from Hunt to Grayson county to get in the running. Crowell is a former member of the board of control. Westbrook is a former state senator. He began life a printer, became a publisher and editor of a weekly newspaper, studied the law trade, passed an examination, got himself a shingle and began business in his new field of endeavor.

As an orator while in the senate, Westbrook had only one rival, the Honorable Dwight Lewelling of Dallas. Lewelling made a speech every day and some time when in trim made two speches. Westbrook did not speak as often as Lewelling but once upon a time he held the floor for three hours and 45 minutes on a popular measure which agitated the populistic as well as the socialistic minds of the commonwealth for a brief season and then turned its little toes up to the daisies of springtime.

This is a prediction. There will be some long distance talkers under the big dome during the grinding hours of the 40th legislature.

DRY BILLS MAY DIE

NOW Wayne B. Wheeler, general advisor of the anti-saloon league is fearful that the dry bills may die on the calendar. He demands that the congress shall pass the following without delay.

First, the civil service bill for pro agents indorsed by both political party platforms recommended twice by the president and planned by the house. Second, the re-organization bill to provide for a buereau of prohibition and a bureau of custom, which has the house. Third, the bill for amending and strengthening the prohibition act, which is before the senate and house judiciary committee.

There is a farm relief bill pending and the corn growers of the west are more interested in its passage than they are in the proposed dry acts. Then, there is the nasty scandal in Pennsylvania, which is being aired by a senate investigating committee.

This involves the expediture of $2,000,000 in a senatorial free-for-all. It is the hot stuff, first page stuff, and the American public demands hot stuff of the first page variety.

The Toonerville Trolley That Meets All The Trains

FIRE —by— Arthur B. Reeve

Suddenly he broke off, wheeled around, jumped up. "It's after midnight!" he exclaimed. "Why didn't I think of this before? Come, Walter, slip your automatic into your pocket. Hurry. I'm going over to the laboratory."

I never question Craig's sudden flashes of induction. I followed him.

In the campus he left the paved walk, where the sand grains made our steps audible, and took to the grass.

We had got not more than a hundred feet from the building where his laboratory was when I could have sworn that I saw a shadow skulking out and into the shrubbery a few feet from the entrance. Kennedy must have seen something, too. He flashed his pocket electric bull's eye. But the beam of light was swallowed up in the darkness at the distance. There was nothing, nothing but the crackling of a dry twig. It must have been under a foot.

"I was right!" he muttered.

Then I knew what his induction had been. The skulking shadow had confirmed it—an effort to break into his laboratory. We separated, gave chase, but, though we had not frustrated the attempt, the intruder had made good the escape.

In the hall, now, we could see that some one had indeed got in. Inside, I hurried over to a steel cabinet where I recalled I had seen Craig place the jewels and the beauty clay.

It was open. I looked in. They were not there! I turned to Craig with a startled gaze. He was regarding the open cabinet calmly.

"Do you think I would leave a hundred thousand dollars' worth of diamonds, for which I am personally responsible, here, in a mere fireproof safe?" he asked. "No, they are in the safe at headquarters. The samples of beauty clay are there, too."

He busied himself looking for evidences of identification, but I could tell by his expression that the intruder had been clever and had left none.

As we closed everything up again, he said, thoughtfully, to me, "I want you, Walter, to get a story into the afternoon paper, the first edition, something as if anounced by the police that they believe it is a poisoning case and have a clue to where the poison was obtained, by whom, and are just about to locate where it is hidden—you see, I'm building—first the glimpse of that glowing face to Irrita, then at the funeral to all, now this story."

I had the story published. But for the whole day the friendship between Craig and Irrita worried me. Nor was I reassured when Craig told me, about six o'clock, that we had a dinner engagement with her. The only crumb of comfort I had was that they were not alone.

By dint of dining and dancing the evening wore away until it became pretty late.

It was not until it was far too late for anything except dancing and dining that I began to see the direction of Kennedy's purpose.

"Irrita," he said, leaning toward her, his voice low, "are you game to learn whether there really was anything wrong in the death of Mrs. Asche?"

She met his gaze squarely; a little shiver seemed to run over her as she looked away momentarily, then quickly back again with clear eyes. "Yes!"

"Then come with me now to Oakley Square."

Though I did not understand it, I fancied I began to see the direction of Kennedys building. He must have calmly calculated to start one of the two, either Davids or Asche, to do something to cover up guilt, if indeed either of them were guilty. Or was it aimed at an unknown?

At any rate, now I have an added worry. If, indeed, it were either of them, would the demonstration of that fact, the shock, clinch matters between Craig and the girl?

It was with small joy that I accompanied Craig and Irrita to the private park that night.

As I have said, there were four grilled gates to the park. Each owner about it had a key to the park. Craig had somehow got the key to the south gate.

It was dark and he posted me in the shadows to watch somewhere between the north gate and the east gate. Just inside the north gate, facing the Oakley house, Craig had placed carefully a small wooden box with holes in the sides and a loose cover.

And now I spent a most uncomfortable hour. To me Irrita was baffling. Yet she was plainly showing a deep interest in Craig. I wondered Why was there always a girl to keep me in anxiety over Craig? Every time I thought of her I could have kidnaped her. I had been cautioned to keep qiet, yet I had to listen to their sensational conversation as I crouched in the shadow.

Again and again raced through my mind the query whether Irrita was not using Kennedy to get information to shield some one. At least tonight he had been careful to give her no chance to communcite. I listened.

Footsteps, stealthy footsteps, on the street!

I was not the only one who heard them. The voices of Craig and Irrita were hushed. They must have stood as quietly as I. I scarcely breathed.

The click of the key in the grilled gate!

I started forward.

"Wait!" a whisper from Kennedy, who had silently, Indian-like, crept up within a few feet of me. "Not yet! He might get away in the dark! Watch!"

The gate creaked on rusty hinges. There was a noise as of something wooden falling over on the flagstones.

Suddenly, rising from the ground, streaks of veritable fire zigzagged through the air in graceful arcs—weird, startling, as if alive! One-two-three-four-five—I counted them. They did not die away.

"What is it?"

"West Indian firefiles," he whispered back, 'the most brilliant firefiles in the world. Primeval fire! Phyrophorous—the fire carrier! Click beetles, cucujos, of the West Indies. There are ninety or a hundred species in tropical America. The natives of the tropical islands sometimes keep them in small cages for illumination—even make use of them for personal adornment."

One of the fire-bearers, more brilliant than the rest, was circling the face of the intrduer. Viciously, with a quick, angry motion, he struck at it, killed it.

But in this wierd light of nature three of us unseen, had seen Gaston Asche!

Quickly he turned toward the corner of the garden park where the shrubbery was dense. By the sounds, he must have been digging. We waited silently.

In a few moments his hasty feet crunched the gravel path. Irrita, Kennedy, and I now strolled from the other end of the park, apparently.

"Good evening, Asche!"

Asche turned to Irrita, ignoring Kennedy. "May I ask you to have a little talk with me, please?" He indicated the other end of the garden. "I have something very important to tell you."

Questions From the World of Love Answered by a Noted Authority

Instead of Making Home a Place of No Privacy or Liberty, Why Not Give Things a Moral Housecleaning?—Abolish the Questionnaire, Redecorate With Courtesy and Refurnish Throughout With Consideration for Others.

There is no other institution in the world that stands in such great need of reformation as the home.

Oh, I know we all get maudlinly sentimental when we talk and write about home, sweet home, and sing about there being no place like it—and most of use are precious glad there isn't. However, I am not talking about the theorectical home, but the actual, practical home as it really exists.

Dr. Johnson one said that a second marriage was the final triumph of hope over experience. I think that the most wonderful illustration of the incurable optimism of humanity is that men and women are still able to keep their dream of home untarnished, and believe that they will be able to realize their ideal in spite of the homes most of them have come from themselves, and the spectacle of the homes they see all about them.

For, striped of all the camouflage with which we try to disguise the ugly facts, what is the average home except a place of sacrifice and suffering; a selves, and the spectacle of the homes privileges; a place in which we have no vistage of privacy or liberty; a place in which we are treated with contumely, and are forced to endure such insults as we suffer nowhere else on earth?

That our jailers are our husbands and wives and fathers and mothers, and that they do not deliberately and with malice aforethought rob us of our happiness, does not mitigate our sufferings. Nor does it ease the situation for us to know that those who make our lives intolerable love us well enough to die for us.

The fact remains that the home of our ideal and the home of reality are as far apart as the Poles. Wherefore we need to do lot of moral housecleaning in our homes and see if we cannot make them alluring places to live in, instead of being places from which every one flees as soon as he can.

For consider what an awful indictment of the home it is that when we need rest we go away from home to get it. When we need a serene atmosphere in which to build up our shattered nerves, the doctors send us away from home to find it. And when we want to enjoy ourselves we go away from home to do it.

Now, if I were mapping out a plan for the reformation of the home, I should begin by combating the ancient and time-honored belief that home is a place where you can be yourself, and freely display all the meanness and crankiness and temper and brutality that you hide from the balance of the world. There are plenty of men and women whose sole use for a hearthstone is to make it a dumping ground for their cussedness.

All of us know who are suavity and gaumntry itself to every other woman, but who swear at their wives and say things to them that they would not dare say to any woman who had an able-bodied brother. We all know women who are so mild and sweet and amiable abroad that butter wouldn't melt in their mouths, but who are vixens and viragos at home.

I would lay the foundations of a pleasant home by making such men and women realize that it is far more important for them to be decent in the home than it is outside of it, and that the returns in comfort and prosperity will be greater.

Also, that it is a debt of honor that they owe to those to whom they are married and their children. For strangers can avoid the society of the boorish and the shrewish, but no wife can escape ther husband's surliness; no husband can avoid his wife's nagging; no children can get away from a house of strife.

Miss Kaatje van Dyke, of Holland, said to be the tallest woman in the world, with a height of seven feet, eleven inches, will soon marry Jan van Albert, nine feet, three and one-half inches high, who claims to be the tallest man.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

A WORD OF YOURS

Our anger is always so quick to speak,
Our love so silent, our lips so dumb,
And we turn away from the souls that seek,
And we close our doors to the hearts that come.
Yet always around us there are some,
Some lives so near that we almost touch;
But we onward go, and we never know
That a word of ours could mean so much.

A wife is weary tonight of toil,
Or a husband sick of a load of sin,
Yet more deep the vale and more dark the soil
The better a rose will bloom therein.
There are souls to save, there are hearts to win,
There are heads to lift, there are hands to clutch,
And they turn to you, and I wish you knew
That a word of yours could mean so much.

We look afar for the greater things,
And we dream so long of the larger deeds,
Yet I know that many a twilight brings
The humbler tasks and the simpler needs,
And I hope tonight that a husband heeds,
Or a wife remembers the gentle touch
Of a gentle hand he will understand—
For a word of theirs can mean so much!

Tomorrow: Mostly Thunder.

What Do You Know

DAILY SCIENCE SIX

1. What is the largest continent?
2. What is the most unknown continent?
3. What isthmus connects Africa and Asia?
4. What continent adjoins Europe?
5. What is the continent of missing links?
6. Is South America larger than North America?

(Answers to these questions in tomorrow's Record News.)

Continental Radio Interference.

A radio expert on his way from Australia to England discovered a form of interference that has not yet been explained. He heard the amateur North American radio signals distinctly as the boat sailed for Cape Horn, with increasing clarity until near South America. As the boat rounded the Horn these became inaudible and were not picked up again until well out in the Atlantic, when they again were quite clear. Apparently the continent of South America acts like a wall, shutting off the sound waves. So far no good explanation of why this should be so has been offered.

Now what do you know about that?

Answers to Saturday's questions:

1. As water cools it contracts until near the freezing point when it suddenly expands, which is why on a cold morning the frosen cream pushes the top off the milk bottles; if very cold, however, contraction again takes place.

2. Liquid air is air cooled below the boiling points of nitrogen and oxygen, that is, —194 degrees Centigrade, it is bluish and limpid.

3. Absolute zero is the theoretical temperature at which there is no heat. It is —460 degrees Farenheit.

4. It takes longer to boil an egg on a mountain top because the boiling point of water is dependent on the pressure of the atmosphere, which is less on mountains.

5. Water can get colder than the freezing point, 32 degrees Farenheit, without freezing if salt or other soluble substance is added.

6. The ocean does not freeze over in winter because of the lower freezing point of salty water, also because of the influence of currents from tropical seas, and for minor reasons.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

BY MARY BLAKE
GEMINI

Today's planetary aspects are excellent until about dusk, they then become overcast and gloomy. During the good period, all work of a constructive nature is bound to be benefitted by the favorable influences that prevail, and there need be no misgivings as to the ultimate result of any efforts made along lines of honest endeavor, even though they may entail a new class of work or that of a customary character. Speculation is bound to prove a failure. The evening will bring in its wake doubts, suspicion, and an exaggerated dread of consequences. This will of course induce morbidity and bad humor, unless poise be established, and a fixed resolve be made to rise superior to such deleterious influences.

Children born today will enjoy exceptionally good health during infancy, and they will give every promise of vigor and strength. They will, however, fall into a condition during their early youth that will give rise to much worry and anxiety. Great care will be required into order to "set them on their feet." The signs denote that once this is done, they will attain a normal adulthood. Their inherent dispositions will leave much to be desired. They will be quarrelsome, hard to manage, and selfish. These evils must be eradicated, by strong measures if necessary, at as early an age as possible. Otherwise, these children will develop into men and women who will be unpopular with the world in general, and a nuisance, even to themselves.

If today is your birthday, your disposition is kindly, your nature is generous, and you are sweet-tempered. It takes much time to make you angry. It does not take you half as long to forgive. You are very rarely critical or suspicious of others' motives, and endeavor to think and speak well of everyone. It is, therefore, only natural that you should have a wide circle of sincere and loyal friends. You have a natural liking for mechanics, and this is clearly demonstrated by the nature of your recreations.

Intellectually you are by no means profound. You, however, read a great deal, and are fairly well informed on matters of general interest. You enjoy bright, witty companionship, and are fully able of taking care of yourself in a battle of wits.

In order to get the most out of your life, you should marry young, and, if you do so, or have already done so, the indications denote exceeding happiness.

My Favorite Stories
By IRVIN S. COBB

THERE SPOKE ENVY'S VOICE.

The town drunkard of a small Scotch community went on an especially vehement tear. The village authorities locked him up until he had entirely recovered.

On the second day of his captivity, as he sat in his cell, thirsty beyond words, the minister, who was of a full habit of life, came to give him consolation and good advice.

They sat down side by side, and the dominie read the parable of the Prodigal Son. The prisoner seemed to hang on the words. He nudged up closer and closer, bending forward until his face was almost in the minister's face, and listened.

"Please read it over once more," he said, when the dominie had finished the chapter and started to close the Good Book.

Touched by this further sign of penitence, the minister read it again.

"Tell me, poor man," he said when he was done, "what was it held you so close the while I was reading—was it the lesson of the Scripture or was it the words?"

"Nay, nay," said the tippler—"'twas your grand breath!"

Prisoners Lose Dope Law Contest

ATLANTA, Ga., June 19.—(AP)—The first step in their move to test the constitutionality of the Harrison anti-narcotic ace denied in federal district court here today, certain inmates of the Atlanta federal penitentiary will carry the case to the supreme court of the United States.

Notice of appeal was given today after Federal Judge Samuel H. Sibley denied a habeas corpus petition by which the inmates asked that Warden John W. Snook be required to produce Dr. Frank Sofge, a federal prisoner serving a sentence for violation of the narcotic law.

Formal motion for appeal will be filed within a few days, counsel for the inmates said.

Mexican Killed, Negro Arrested

TALANTA, Ga., June 20.—(AP)—Emancipation day fell late Saturday included one Mexican killed, a negro charged with murder, a negro slugged at Lake Worth and a negro school burned.

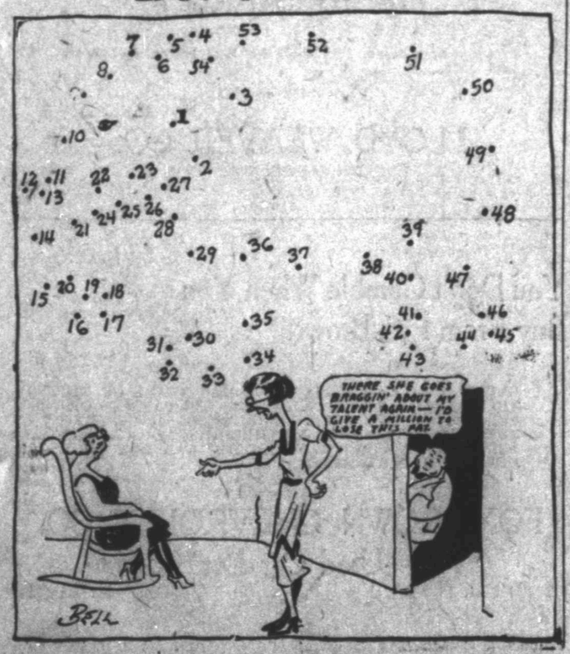

Joe Garcia, 27, was the Mexican killed. George Stone surrendered and was charged with murder after making a statement saying the affair was on account of a woman. An unidentified negro was knocked in the head at Lake Worth but had not been brought in at a late hour. A negro school on the western outskirts of the city was burned shortly before midnight, cause undetermined.

MEXICO PAYS BOND INTEREST, OFFICIALS SAY

Resumption of Semi-Annual Reimbursement Is Announced.

ON BUSINESS BASIS

Financial Agent Declares Nation at Last Able to Meet Debts.

NEW YORK, June 20.—(AP)—Resumption of the semi-yearly payments of interest in the various bond issues of Mexico by the Mexican government has been made possible with the June payment of the monthly sum agreed upon with the committee of bondholders, Arturo M. Elias, financial agent of the Mexican government announced tonight.

"In view of conditions throughout the world," he said, "it is with pardonable pride that Mexico, torn by years of internal struggles announces that she places her public debt on an interest yielding basis. Had it not been for the sinister influences both within and without Mexico, who were responsible for the De La Huerta rebellion, Mexico would have been able to resmue interest payments upon her public debt in 1923. The funds for this purpose were on hand and deposited in New York when the revolt engineered by De La Huerta and his financial backers took place and all the splendid work of the Obregon administration was for a time jeopardized."

Expenses Great.

Mr. Elias states that expenditures in suppressing the revolt were so great that when President Calles took office the Mexican treasury was empty and that it was necessary at first to pay the salaries of civil servants which were in arrears and to reimburse Mexican business men who had come to the aid of the government.

The new agreement with the bondholders was made in January, 1926, providing for fixed monthly payments which have since been maintained.

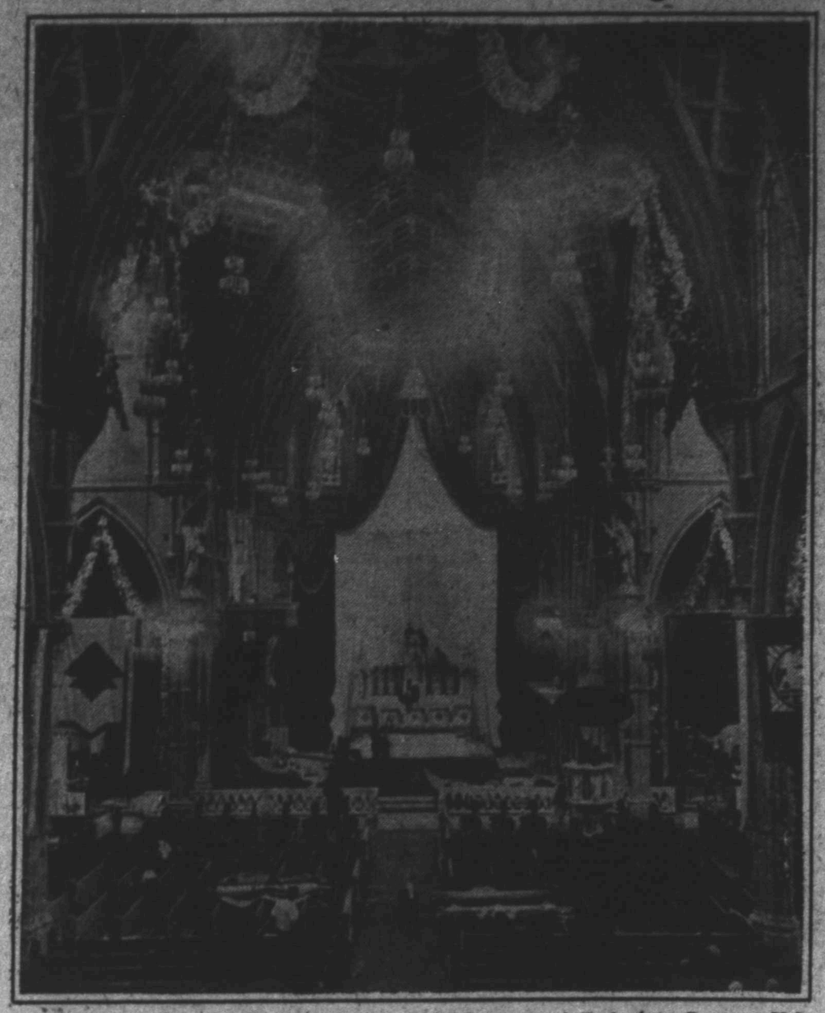

Reviewing the economic struggle, Mexico is passing through, Mr. Elias stated that possessing the greatest amount of potential wealth of any country of similar size in the world, Mexico had just begun really to develop.

"What Mexico wants above everything else is peace," he added. "It wants nothing of any other country but amity. It turns its eyes toward the whole world with no envy or greed in them for the possession of others. And it asks all other nations of the world to look upon Mexico in the same manner."

Cathedral Transformed for Eucharistic Congress Rites

TIT FOR TAT! SALVATION ARMY STARTS LIQUOR ROW

DURHAM, Eng.—A captain of the Salvation Army at Wingate recently dismissed the bandmaster because he attended a colliery officers' dinner on premises licensed to sell liquor. Now the local Association of Licensed Victuallers has written to the captain informing him that in future representatives of the army will not be allowed to enter licensed premises to beg for funds or sell literature as hitherto.

priests and lay pilgrims from the far flung realms of the earth bowed before the resplendent Cathedral Sanctuary, whence 11 cardinal priests, on princely thrones led in the adornation of the Eucharist. More than four hours elapsed between the sounding of the first notes of the processional and the bestowing of the apostolic blessing by Cardinal Bonzano as he descended from his throne, at the right of the marble altar, at the conclusion of the services.

Among participants in the cathedral ceremonies were approximately 400 bishops, a score or more of mitred abbots, more than 200 monsignori, several thousand priests and monks, six hundred seminarians and hundreds of nuns— all clad in the robes of their office or order.

Procession Forms

The ecclesiastical procession assembled in Quigley seminary, three blocks from the cathedral, passing in a narrow lane through reverent throngs to the sanctuary. It began with a group of youthful acolytes in white silk and lace, white shoes and gloves, red girdles and capes, and carrying a large gilded crucifix sorrounded by burning candles. It ended with the entry of the eleven cardinals, in their scarlet robes and trains. Between were thousands of clergy in the order of their rank—seminarians, priests, abbots, monsignors, superiors of orders, bishops and arch-bishops. Uniformed guards of honor from the Knights of the Holy Sepulchre, Knights of St. Gregory and the Knights of St. Sylvester, accompanied many of the bishops.

The ceremonies began with the reading of the papal brief, first in Latin and then in English, by the Very Rev. Monsignor Dennis J. Dunne of Chicago. In his message to the congress, Pope Pius XI defined the purpose of the gathering to be the "consecration and invigoration of Christian life through the devotion to the reception of the Eucharist."

It is needful to stir up in each what the mystical writers call the interior life" as this is conversation in heaven, and as it thrives or languishes according as chairity burns actively or dies down, it evidently depends on the Eucharist, since this sacrament, by its nature and effects, has for its principle object the increase of charity in the soul and the perfect union of the soul with God. The supreme pontiff charged his legate "to urge upon the charity of all" the "return to the Roman church of our separated brethern which must be so sought," and furthered that "all may be one."

Install Legate

After the installation of the legate, solemn pontificial high mass was celebrated by the Right Rev. Louis Heylen, bishop of Namur, Belgium, assisted by a score of distinguished prelates.

Monsignor Carlo Respighi, prefect of pontificial ceremonies at the vatican, was at the altar as director of ecclesiastical formalties.

The Right Rev. Ignaz Seipel, former chancellor of Austria, was attendant at the legate's throne.

Latin hymns by St. Thomas Aquinas, the laureate of the Eucharist, were chanted in the mass of the blessed sacrament by Bishop Heylen. After the benediction, the sacrament was exposed at th Cathdral altar for perpetual adoration during the Eucharistic week.

Cardinal Bonzano concluded his greeting to the assemblage with a prayer for "the peace of Christ in the kingdom of Christ, the reign of goodwill under his dominion, the freedom of the spirit and the cheerful subjection of his law."

Cardinal Mundelein, in a sermon on the doctrine of the Eucharist, asserted that "no king on earth, no emperor of Rome was ever honored as Jesus Christ is honored today in the city of Chicago."

"Surely, not all the gold and jewels of the universe would prove so pleasing in God's sight as this might oblation of contrite and loving hearts opened to received the bread that cometh down from heaven this day.

Has His Message

"To the multitude of ernest, honest souls outside the church, this congress too has its message. Far be it from us humans to look upon it as a demonstration of our strength and numbers. Little would it avail us were it to vaunt our superiority and our own glory. Rather it is our hope that the example of our vivid attachment to the Holy Eucharist and our evident appreciation of the gift that is ours therein, may encourage them to learn for themselves of this marrelous condescension on God's part to us humans.

The Cathedral services were broadcast through a chain of stations in Chicago, New York, Milwaukee and other cities. Thousands massed in the streets near the church, heard the ceremonies through loud speakers attached to all sides of the building.

Aged Woman Dies

LAREDO, Texas, June 19.—(AP) Fifteen days before she would have celebrated her 80th birthday anniversary, Mrs. Juliana Benavides Leyendecker, "the daughter of Laredo," died here a short distance from the house in which she was born June 19, 1837. She died within sight of the San Agustin Catholic church where she had worshiped for three-quarters of a century. She is survived by a daughter and six sons, all of whom are prominent in Laredo business and social life.

During the girlhood of "the daughter of Laredo," the village bordered on what is now San Augustin Plaza, with old San Agustin church and a stockade the place of refuge from Indian attacks. In those days, a guard was always on duty on top of the stockade to warn of the approach of Indian raiders.

She remembered the days when Robert E. Lee and Ulysses S. Grant were stationed here and held the rank of second lieutenant. She remembered, too, the founding of Camp Crawford in 1840 just north of where Fort McIntosh now stands and near the old Indian crossing on the Rio Grande.

GERMAN VOTE FAVORS MIGHT

Majority Favors Seizing Property of Former Kaiser by Force.

BERLIN, June 20.—(AP)—Germany's first national referendum under the republican constitution held today to decide the question of expropriation without compensation the entire proprties and estates of the former rulers, with particular interest centering on the former German emperor and the Hohenzollern family failed to poll and affirmative vote of half the eligible electors.

The returns from 30 out of 35 federal districts, received up to midnight indicated that the total vote would fall short of 15,000,000 which is approximately 5,000,000 fewer than required.

Fully 60 per cent of the eligible voters stayed away from the polls, while 35 per cent endorsed unconditional confiscation. Defective ballots and negative votes constituted only a small percentage.

While admitting that the advocates of expropriation made a respectable showing in today's balloting, the government leaders were visibly gratified when final returns definitely presaged the measure's defeat. Their satisfaction was prompted quite as much by internal political considerations as the feeling that the definite rejection of such a radical law will impress the outside world with the conservative character of the German electorate, regardless of the fact that the personal interests of the former princes were at stake.

The total vote rolled up in favor of complete confiscation was only about 2,500,000 in excess of that poled by the socialists and communists in the initial balloting last March on the question of whether a ferendum should be held. The radicals therefore failed to recruit sufficient new-comers to make up the deficit of 7,500,000.

An early analysis o fthe vote shows that the confiscation proposal was chiefly supported by the big cities in the industrial sectors.

'Charleston' Costs Five Their Lives

SAULT STE MARIE, Mich.—June 20.—(AP)—Five youths were drowned in St. Mary's river here today when a small boat they were rowing was overturned by a youth dancing the Charleston. Three girls and three boys set out in the little punt, but only one was rescued. Arthur Tessier, 15 years old, was demonstrating the manner in which he won a Charleston contest at Sault Ste Marie, Canada, across the river from this city, last winter, when he got off the bont's center of equilibrium and it overturned.

Is There A Hell? To Be Thomas Sermon At Southern Presby' Tonight

Is there a burning, literal hell?

All who believe there is and all who believe there is not, as well as those who know and those who do not know are invited to hear Dr. Trigg Thomas of Atlanta, Ga., discuss this question Monday night at the Junior college tent where evangelistic services of the First Southern Presbyterian church are being held.

The Sunday morning and evening services yesterday were well attended, producing good results and increasing interest in the revival.

Ten new members were received into the church, seven on profession and baptism, and three who had been members in other churches. Other new members will be received at the services during this week, which are held under the tent at 7 a. m. and 8 p. m. each day except Saturday. The morning services are very brief, lasting but 15 or 20 minutes, and the night services are also brief and interesting with social music as an added feature. Dr. Thomas delivered a brief sermonette to the Sunday school yesterday and preached strong heart-searching sermons morning and evening.

His morning subject was "Justification by Faith" which he handled with ability and skill, and discussed at some length the nature, the ground, the method and result of justification, as revealed in the Bible; setting forth the plan of salvation through faith and not by works.

His evening subject was "The Preeminence of Christ" which he introduced by saying "since the day the apostles stood on the Mount of Olives gazing steadfastly upon the Master as He was taken up into heaven, lack of faith and false worship have led people to undervalue the pre-eminence of our Lord. No writer or thinker in all the world's history has been so deeply concerned, so majestic in conception and so able and ready to properly set forth the claims of Christ as the Apostle Paul who gave to the world my text in Colossians 1:18, which teaches the supreme Lordship of the Son of God and the all-sufficient fullness of his grace.

"The people at Collossae were worshiping angels and discussing the great problems of the mystery of creation and the mystery of evil. Their theology and philosophy seemed more dangerous in tendency than in any positive statement. The Apostle Paul, with that clear power of discrimination which he so wonderfully possessed, perceived the fatal tendency, and with pure force of logic, profound depth of philosophy and simplicity of common sense, exalts Jesus Christ as Lord and Master over all things. By virtue of his creative power, his sustaining arm, his guiding hand and his truthful teaching. He proves to the Colossians and to the world that Jesus Christ, with his marvelous wisdom, unapproached greatness and absolute power is supreme, both in the world of nature and of grace, in the realm of the natural and in the realm of the spiritual, and affirms that in all things he must have the pre-eminence."

DETROIT DUE FOR LONG SHOT

BY HERNANDO LOSE.
Special Correspondent of The Record News
Copyright 1926 By The Consolidated Press Association.

DAYTON, Ohio, June 20.—Lieutenant George W. Goddard, aerial photographer expert at McCook Field, and author of an ambitious scheme of long distance aerial photography, is not letting any grass grow under his feet while perfecting his preparations to photograph Detroit, 218 miles away, from the air above Dayton.

Lieutenant Goddard announced today that he was making preparations, while waiting, to make a daylight photograph with his gigantic long distance camera, of the outer corona of the sun—something that has never been successfully attempted.

The project of photographing Detroit from Dayton, announced a month ago, will be held up, Lieutenant Goddard said, while the plane from which he will take his pictures, is remodeled so it can attain the necessary height of 20,000 to 35,000 feet—between six and seven miles.

Use McReady Plane.

Lieutenant Goddard plans to use the high altitude plane that Lieutenant John MacReady used on his unsuccessful attempt to set a new world's height mark and it is this airplane that is delaying the experiment.

While some mechanical changes are being made on the lane so that it may go above altitudes to which MacReady drove it, Lieutenant Goddard is improving his photographic equipment.

He is further trying to improve on the film he will use for his Dayton-Detroit test.

Already Lieutenant Goddard has availed the finest super-sensitized film for the experiment, but he is trying to better it before he gets the chance to put it to the severest kind of test.

The camera itself is four feet long and weighs 100 pounds.

The lens, the fastest yet built, for high altitude work, is nine inches in diameter and is 14 inches thick. It comprises six elements of concave and convex lenses with special ray filters in between for cutting through the haze.

The camera will be mounted in the rear cockpit pointing parallel with the right wing. It will not be a hit or miss attempt, as every detail has been carefully figured. Certain marks have been painted on the right wing so that at 30,000 feet or higher, when one of these marks is pointed at Indian lake, about 90 miles south of Toledo, the camera will be on direct line from Dayton through the western edge of Indian lake to Detroit.

To Be Heated.

To make sure that the camera will function, when called upon, it will be heated electrically, and as an extra precaution, will get heat from the exhaust manifold. This ensures the emulsion on the film and will act as a preventative to a stiffening of the rubber parts of the camera.

Because of the excessive weight, Lieutenant Goddard will be obliged to make the flight and take the picture alone. All arrangements are being made so that he can operate both the camera and the ship without moving from the cockpit.

Lieutenant Goddard does not hope to get much detail of Detroit from Dayton. He says the military values of the picture will lie in the fact that if the town were shelled, the smoke from the ruins would show on the plate. Or if a fleet were anchored in any of the harbors, the detail on the picture would be sufficiently sharp for military purposes.

The Gulf, Mobile and Northern operates 465 miles of railroad from Mobile to Jackson, Tenn., where it connects with the Illinois Central and the Mobile and Ohio. The company has been twice reorganized and the last plan, a very drastic one, almost wiped out the funded debt. Since that time revenue and earnings have increased, the expenditures made during receivership having put the company into excellent physical condition. Freight density rose 170 per cent from 1917 to 1925.

Capital stock consists of $11,413,400 in 6 per cent cumulative shares of $100 par and $10,994,100 of $100 par common. Funded debt consists of a 5 1-2 per cent issue of first mortgage bonds totaling $4,000,000. Earnings on the preferred stock in 1925 amounted to 11.37 per cent, as compared with 9.83 per cent in 1924.

The preferred stock has been placed on its regular 6 per cent basis and with a payment of 4 1-2 per cent on accumulations Jan. 1, 1926, the arrears amount to 20 per cent. This must be paid off before dividends can be declared on the common shares.

As of Jan. 1, 1926, current assets totaled $2,815,332 and current liabilities $1,068,385 with net working capital of $1,756,947. Gross revenues for the first quarter of 1926 were $1,544,754, as compared with $1,547,557 in 1925 while net operating income during the same period was $342,437 as compared with $288,574 in 1925.

Irwin Funeral

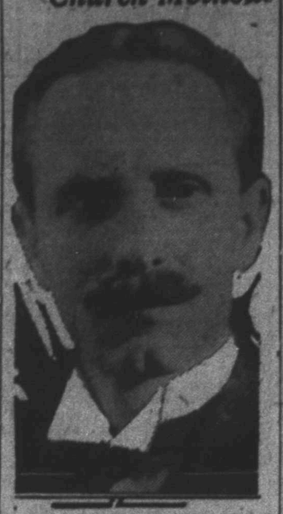

Funeral services for Mrs. Mamie Kate Irwin, 34, wife of E. H. Erwin, who died Saturday night in a local hospital, will be held from the First Church of Christ, Tenth and Austin, Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock with the Rev. L. S. White, minister of the church, in charge. Burial will be in Rosemont.

Mrs. Irwin died suddenly Saturday night following an operation. She is survived by her husband and five children, three sons, Tommy, Elton, Jack; and two daughters, Beta and Berta Ella Irwin. Several brothers and sisters out of the city, also survive.

STRANGLED BY BRIDT.

ATHENS.—Mme. Georgios Vallakis is sought by the police on a charge of strangling her husband. The couple had been married only 10 days.

Shuns "Circus" Church Methods

The Rev. Tertius Van Dyke is leaving his Park Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, for a rather less important charge," in Washington, Conn. "I do not believe circus methods are necessary in preaching the Gospel," is Dr. Van Dyke's comment on much that passes for church activity in New York. He is the son of Dr. Henry Van Dyke of Princeton, former diplomat, and himself a preacher and poet.

Indians Trek Back To Forbears' Home On Little Big Horn

CROW AGENCY, Mont., June 20. (AP)—Reminiscent of the days of the old west when their ancestors roamed the plains of the Rosebud to the Crazbound Yellowstone, Columns of Sioux, Cheyenne and Crows today trekkel back into the valley of the Little Big Horn.

From every direction they came, their lodge poles dragging behind leg-weary, flea bitten ponies, throwing up clouds of dust that hung about the silent moving bands. Grizzled warriors of other years stalked beside squaws, padding along with waiting papooses strapped to their backs; young braves, with their first pilgrimage to the historic battle ground where on June 25, 1876, their forbearers annihilated five companies of the seventeenth cavalry under command of General George A. Custer, made up the columns that wound across arroyo and brush clotted falls.

Suffers Burns

Frank Shaw, life guard at Lake Beach, suffered severed burns about the face Sunday morning when a bottle of wood alcohol which he was using to burn out ants at the beach, exploded in his face. His face was burned and the left eye was seriously injured, and it was feared yesterday that he might suffer the loss of the sight. Fololwing treatment from a local physician, Shaw returned to his work at the pool.

Class Organized

BURKBURNETT, June 19.—The young ladies class of the Cashion Baptist church officially organized at a meeting this week in a session held at the church meeting, Miss Ethel Wolfe was elected president; Lillie Bongant, vice president; Enel Sivinford, secretary-treasurer; Edna Potthoff, class editor; Bertha Evans and Joy Gilmore, personal society workers.

It was decided that the class will meet in different homes of the various members on alternate Wednesday evenings when picnics and social periods will be enjoyed.

Longest Day

Today marks the beginning of summer, according to the calendar and astronomy, for June 21, the longest day of the year, marks the summer equino. However, though it is the longest day of 1926, its additional length is not measured in hours but in seconds.

According to the schedule, the sun is scheduled to rise at 4:52 a. m. and remain in view until a few seconds past 7:11 p. m.

Whiskey Stolen From Warehouse

NEW YORK, June 19.—(AP)—Whiskey intended for medicinal purposes was removed from 500 barrels and an inferior concoction substituted, it was discovered by government chemists at the old '76 distillery warehouse near here.

Government agents are investigating and endeavor to learn when the theft was committed.

ENGLAND'S ONLY WOMAN LEPER A TRAGIC FIGURE

HULL, Eng.—Mrs. Edith M. Carter is the most tragic figure in England today. She has become a member of the only leper colony maintained in this country, a victim of her noble devotion to her husband, a leper whom she nursed during his illness despite the danger she knew she was incurring. Contracting leprosy only a few months before he died, she is the only woman in the colony, where she occupies a small private bungalow. There are several men in the colony. Some of these drive their own automobiles and are able to enjoy the amusements of a normal life in the large grounds, but others are bed-ridden, awaiting the final summons as their only relief from suffering.

BABY DISINHTRITED.

GLASGOW.—The Will of Evan C Macdonald, disposing of $120,000, disinherited the 3-year-old baby of Mrs. Macdonald, whom the testator divorced two years ago.

JOB FOR BIG FEET.

LONDON.—Miss Helen Mayo, London's leading woman dentist, in an address here advised women dental students to abandon that profession unless they had big feet.

BUILDING PERMITS

Biggest Permit for Week Goes to City for New Sewage Plant

A bare $100,000 separates Wichita Falls building permits for the first half of 1926 from surpassing permits issued for the entire year of 1925, figures announced Saturday for building during the past week indicated. Permits totaling $471,675 building were issued, against $133,525 the week before. The week's total brought the figure for June to nearly a million dollars, or $918,766. This figure, with the exception of that for the entire month of April when permits totaling $1,633,423 were issued, exceeds that of any other month this year. The year, less than two weeks away from the half-way mark as yet, showed permits totaling $5,801,964. The total for last year was $5,908,386.

The largest permit issued during the week went to the city of Wichita Falls for construction of its $280,000 sewage disposal plant east of the city. Excavation has already started there. A total of 40 permits issued of which three were for suburban work, representing a total of $344,000, and 37 for work in the city proper, representing a total of $127,675.
