Murder Suspect Takes Life

"Don't Want To Arbirate," Says Mine Leader

All Hope of Averting Anthracite Strike Has Been Called Off

WALK-OUT ON SEPT. 1

Lewis Informs Warriner That Matter Is Closed For Good Now

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 9.—(AP)—Hope that anthracite operators and miners might reconcile their differences in time to avert a suspension September first faded tonight.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, informed Samuel D. Warriner, chairman of the anthracite operators conference, that further negotiations were useless until the operators abandoned their opposition to wage increases and adoption of the check-off.

Mr. Lewis' communication was in reply to Mr. Warriner's comment of last Thursday on the original Lewis letter which had preceded the breaking up of the scale conference on the previous Tuesday.

Writes From Hotel.

Writing from the Hotel Ambassador under date of yesterday, Mr. Lewis addressed Mr. Warriner at the operators' headquarters, Philadelphia, as follows:

"My dear Mr. Warriner:

"I acknowledge your favor of the sixth instant. I do not desire to quibble over the fine shades of meaning affecting words and involved phrases. It remains that your Atlantic City conferees informed the mine workers' representatives, including myself, that they would reject any demand that would disturb the factor of mine costs.

"Your letter confirms the position of your committee. Be it so, we do not have any further inclination to further argue when judgment has been given. I will be glad to hear from you when you abandon this position.

Refers to Old Fight.

"I note your reference to my previous comments upon arbitration. I can well understand your natural irritation in the premises. I referred, of course to the arbitration proceedings of some years ago when the final decision of the arbitrator was changed between twilight and dawn. You might, if you wish, accept the reference as a compliment from the mine workers to a skillful adversary.

"We really do not care to arbitrate. Thanks for the offer. We know that you think the medicine would be good for us but frankly we have little faith in your diagnosis. It will be long before we recover completely from your previous arbitration treatment and until we do we will modestly decline to accept your prescription.

"Very truly yours,

(Signed) "JOHN L. LEWIS,
"President."

Chinese Workers Walk From Plant

PEKING, Aug. 9.—(AP)—The Chinese employes at the British legation and the electric power house walked out this morning. The strikers aggregate 200.

The legation appealed to the Chinese foreign office for relief and the foreign office sent a representative and two police captains to the headquarters of the students, who control the situation among the strikers. This action, however, appears to have been without result.

The spokesman for the strikers is said to have informed the emissary that the strikers were eager to return to their duties if assured of police protection.

D. Laugenour, Dallas astronomical authority. These commonly are called the August meteors because they are visible annually in this month.

Astronomical science explains these heavenly bodies as remnants of disintegrated comets traveling about the sun in an orbit. They are called perseids because they can be traced back apparently to the constellation Perseus.

Small Cloudburst Hits Spur Sunday Morning

3-INCH RAIN WASHES AWAY PART OF ROAD

Girard in Kent County Also Swept by Severe Storm

SHOWERS ELSEWHERE

Scattered Sprinkles Reported in Various Sections of North Texas

SPUR, Texas, Aug. 9.—Sections of highway were washed out, unpaved roads were rendered impassable and some damage done to residences when a 3-inch rain fell here inside of a few hours early Sunday morning. Dickens county, which has been without moisture most of the summer, was deluged by a small cloudburst. Reports received here indicated that another storm of unusual severity broke over Girard in northeastern Kent county near here at about the same time.

The rain started just before midnight and continued intermittently on until daylight. The hardest downpours came right at 1 oclock.

Scattered showers fell over North Texas Sunday, according to reports received by local railroad offices, although with the exception of the severe storm at Spur no great amount of rainfall was recorded. Sprinkles of rain were more or less frequent along the Wichita Valley road as far west and Abilene.

HOUSES WASHED AWAY IN HEAVY RAIN.

Biggest damage was to the Fabens telephone company's building and the residence of its owner, A. E. Smith, which were combined. All the buildings ruined were made of adobe.

Last week residences and cotton lads at Fabens were damaged by high water from the Rio Grande.

PARIS CARFARES UP.

French Beginning to Kick on High Charges Made by Busses.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—The progressive increases in street car and autobus fares in Paris seem finally to have reached the straining point. The French have talked a good deal in recent years of "prices and taxes hitting the ceiling and then bounding back again," by the force of economic laws. Now they are wondering whether they have proof of that theory. For, as a result of the increase of first class fares in autobuses, passengers are now flocking into the second class, at a lower fare.

THE WEATHER

"Papa talked to Mamma about her new hat today and his voice sounded like it does when he calls me William."

LYRICS OF LIFE.
By Douglas Malloch.

Mothering.

To want you for the joy of you
I thought was my desire.
The singing, smiling boy of you
That never seemed to tire;
But, man of mine, it isn't then
Alone that women want their men—
We want you sometimes when the smile
Has left your lips a little while.

We know there is another you.
Another life you lead;
And, oh, we want to mother you,
When that is what you need!
I used to think, O man of mine,
Your song a joy, your laugh divine.
But now I know, as women do,
There always is another you.

So in your trouble come to us,
When winds are blowing wild.
You're always lover some to us,
Yet always some a child.
For life the time will always bring
You need a little mothering,
To heal your hurts, to get you through—
And the weather to mother you.

SCOPES TRIAL JUDGE LAUDS BRYAN'S NAME

Raulston, Speaking At a Chicago Memorial, in Praise of Man

TELLS OF THE CASE

He says "Commoner" Was Fully Deserving of His Title

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Speaking at a William Jennings Bryan memorial service at the North Shore Congregational church here this afternoon, Judge John T. Raulston, who presided at the recent Scopes trial at Dayton, Tenn., paid tribute to him as one of the leading figures in the "evolution case."

"Coming from the south as I do and knowing of my impulsive nature I fear that some of you might misjudge my enthusiasm for political prejudice" said the Tennesseean. "Therefore I think it proper that you know in the beginning that I do not belong to the same political party as the man did in whose memory I speak.

"I had never known Mr. Bryan until I met him at Dayton and whatever I shall say of him will be based largely upon my observations of him during the Scopes trial, and since he and the trial are inseperable in my mind, I shall now be compelled to speak of the one in order to speak of the other.

His Greatest Work.

"I believe that it is generally thought by Christian people that at the time of his death Mr. Bryan was engaged in the greatest work of his life.

"I believe that those who will submit themselves to the guidance of the divine hand are used from time to time in the work where they can render the greatest service. In other words I believe that there is a mission for every person in the world. And if we will allow ourselves to be led by Jehovah we will find the work to which we are best adapted."

Judge Raulston reviewed the circumstances leading to the indictment and trial of John T. Scopes, naming the attorneys in the case in which Mr. Bryan appeared for the prosecution.

Deserved Title.

"I did not know 'the great commoner' before meeting him in court house at Dayton but it required no extensive observation of Mr. Bryan to justify the conclusion that he was eminently fitted for the title 'commoner.' Not that there was a characteristic in his nature common in a vulgar sense; not that he was inferior or low in birth or origin, or that his talent, his habits, his learning, culture or character were mean and wanting in dignity: but he was the true commoner because notwithstanding his towering intellect, his magnetic, eloquent speech, his gentle manner, his unusual culture and his superb character; notwithstanding all these great endowments he was simple in manner, magnanimous at heart, sympathetic by nature and loyal and true to the humble and needy and instead of forgetting God as many do who are thus endowed, he revered and honored His holy name.

RAIL SQUABBLES FIXED.

Recent Strength of Shares Attributed to Peace Among Chiefs.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Recent strength of the railroad shares has been attributed in some quarters to reports that some of the major differences among the "Big Four" of eastern trunk line executives have been patched up and that only a few obstacles now stand in the way for a general agreement on eastern railroad consolidations. Owing to the absence on vacations of some of these officials no definite answer is expected until next month, meanwhile Wall street is attempting to discount coming events through the stock market.

C. E. SCHWARTZ SUICIDES WHEN POLICE APPEAR

Was Hunted in Nationwide Search From California City

HOME IS SURROUNDED

Rather Than Submit to Arrest, He Shoots Self Through Head

OAKLAND, Calif., Aug. 9.—(AP) Trapped in an apartment here, Charles Henry Schwartz, object of a nation-wide search in connection with the mysterious murder in the Pacific Cellulosse company, at Walnut Creek, committed suicide early today.

Schwartz, believed to have killed a laborer and attempted to incinerate the body in a plot to collect more than $100,000 in insurance, shot himself through the head when policemen surrounded the apartment. He had been hiding there since the explosion July 30 when the body was found.

Admits Murder

In a note to his wife, who is the principal beneficiary in the insurance and who steadfastly maintained the body found in the plant was that of her husband, Schwartz admitted the murder.

Partial identification of the body of the laborer in a San Francisco morgue, has been made as that of Gilbert Warren Barbe, self-styled itinerant evangelist and war veteran.

Cecil Barker, Placerville, Calif., undertaker was one of three who said the body was Barbe's. Information from Jersey Shore, Pa., indicated the Rev. John Barb there is the father of Gilbert Warren Barbe, who became estranged from the family 15 years ago. Army records show Gilbert Barbe enlisted and spent some time at Fort McDowell, shortly after the United States entered the world war.

His Wife Silent

Until the last Mrs. Schwartz, wife of the chemist who specialized in amateur criminology said "at the proper time," when she would produce "undisputable evidence in the form of physical peculiarities" which would "definitely establish the identity of the charred body" as that of her husband.

Seach for Schwartz began when authorities were not satisfied with the identification of the body found in the partly burned chemical plant. He was hunted on ocean steamers when it was found he had left a note to his wife advising her to go to England in the event of his death. Stowaways and passengers on several steamers which left about the time of the explosion were examined.

Schwartz's old country name was said to be Leon Henry Schwartzhoff.

Killed in Self-Defense.

In a note Schwartz contended that he had killed in self-defense a man who came to his laboratory and demanded money. This assertion was upset when the police learned that Schwartz had rented the Oakland apartment and arranged to go into several hours before the explosion.

Schwartz carried more than $100,000 in life insurance, some policies of the type that pay double indemnity in case of accidental or violent death. Of his deed, Schwartz wrote his wife:

"Now I wish to tell you, my dear little girl, I do not know the man never looked how he was dressed never touched him after that. The only thing I did was I tried to burn him, to wipe out and go—go. I do not know where."

The end of Schwartz's flight came in a casual way. C. W. Hayward proprietor of the Oakland apartment house where the chemist took refuge was attending a dinner party last night. Hayward happened to mention that one of his lodgers had gone into a scrape and was in hiding. This lodger had rented an apartment on July 30, saying he was in a little trouble. His car had been wrecked and whiskey found in it.

The conversation veered to the Schwartz mystery. Somebody produced a newspaper photograph of Schwartz. The man was smooth shaven; Hayward's lodger wore a mustache. Hayward placed his finger over the mouth in the picture and studied the countenance. Then he rushed for a telephone. Captain C. E. Lee of the Berkeley police department was notified.

House Surrounded.

Before daybreak this morning Berkeley and Oakland police surrounded Hayward's apartment house. They demanded admittance to the apartment occupied by Schwartz. There was no response but they heard a noise within. As they were battering at the door a shot rang out. Breaking down the door, they found Schwartz lying on a lounge, a pistol wound in his forehead. He was still breathing, but died on the way to a hospital.

Schwartz had in his pocket a ticket to Barstow, a town in southeastern California. Folded around the ticket was a map of Mexico. He had $572 in currency.

Armed Robber Gets Rich Haul From Theatre In Chicago's Business Heart

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—(AP)—An armed robber escaped with $12,000 from the offices of the State-Lake theater in the heart of the business district here tonight. He entered the theater office from a lobby entrance, cowed five persons therein with a revolver, grabbed the cash and was lost in the crowd.

Office employes of the theater said the money represented the receipts of Saturday and Sunday. The theater operates on a continuous basis from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m., and is one of the leading popular priced theaters of the business district.

William A. Singer, manager of the theater said the bandit followed one of the five into the office and whipping out a revolver ordered the five to make no outcry.

The theater safe stood open, a package containing the receipts for Saturday night and Sunday having just been placed within it. The bandit ordered George Burdick, assistant manager of the theater to hand over the package.

Seizing this, he dashed back into the crowded lobby and disappeared. Police were unable to find anyone, either ushers or patrons who had seen the man.

CONDITIONS IN STRICKEN IRISH TOWN BETTER

Starvation Facing Populace Being Relieved Say Reports

DUBLIN, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Replying today to a suggestion that an appeal be made for funds to relieve the alleged famine conditions in Clonmel, where on Saturday it was stated a terrible condition of affairs existed, the mayor of Clonmel said the situation had improved and was fairly satisfactory and that every effort was being made to relieve the distress growing out of the unemployment crisis.

The statement on Saturday that two children had died of starvation in Clonmel has not been verified. The conditions in the Tipperary town were asserted today to show no exceptional gravity, but the existence of acute poverty there and in several other Irish towns due to unemployment was admitted.

At the Irish labor congress today speakers put the maximum estimate for unemployment in northeast Ulster at 60,000 and in the free state at 100,000, or slightly higher proportionally than official figures for unemployment for Great Britain. Unemployment, in proportion to population is higher in Belfast owing to a simultaneous slump in the two chief industries—ship building and linen. The labor congress, at which representatives from all parts of Ireland were in attendance passed a resolution calling upon the two Irish governments to enact legislation in order to provide work under trade union conditions for all workers.

The resolution also provided for the initiation of a movement for bringing pressure on the authorities. The mover of it said that if the workers were driven to physical force they could not be blamed.

SUB ROSA BY MIMI

To the Fats and the Leans.

Is there any more popular indoor sport, today, than that of reducing—if you happen to be fat—or of putting on weight, if you fall in the featherweight class.

Truly it's the one great national question that goes on and on. There will always be some unhappy girls in the world who have a clear idea of the ideal weight to be, and will never be satisfied until they've tipped the scales at exactly that figure.

So many of the letters from readers bewail the fact that the writers are just twenty pounds over or under—and what will they do—how will they ever attract the boys when they're of such a dreadful size.

Of course we all want to look like the fashion advertisements—but only about five per cent of us do.

The rest of us have to worry along with what providence has provided, and many of us have an extremely good time in spite of our deficiencies.

That's my message today—that just because you're a fat girl, or an extremely thin girl doesn't necessarily mean that you're doomed to everlasting wallflowerdom.

Don't tell me that nobody loves a fat girl—or that scrawny underdeveloped arms and shoulders blight anyone's chances for social success. I've seen too many cases that prove the opposite.

There is a girl in New York, who would make two of most ordinary individuals—whose arms look like those of a prize fighter—and whose shoulders look like a man's.

Yet she is one of the best known figures around town—always surrounded by a crowd of boys who allege that she's the grandest pal and the best fun in the whole world.

She has a glorious time, and gives no more time and thought to her unusual size than more normal human beings do.

Everybody, of course, asks: "How does she do it?

Nobody can understand her popularity in spite of her handicap, but there it is. She gets away with it.

And the number of popular girls whose evening dresses display the most lamentable bones and hollows and scrawniness—is beyond reckoning.

They go blithely ahead, caring not a whit about their lack of avoirdupois—and making the most of what they have, and enjoying a huge good time.

If we haven't been fortunate enough to draw exactly the right measurements for real beauty, then we'll just have to work a bit harder, to make what we have do.

But we mustn't get the idea that the question of weight is so vital it's going to ruin our happiness forever.

Take a lesson from the New York girls, and see if you can't overcome your handicap.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—The cotton market for the past week has been under the shawod of the overnment report issued Saturday after the market had closed. Anticipating that as a result of recent beneficial rains and favorable condition of the crop in the eastern half of the belt the government would issue a crop indication of about 14,000,000 bales, traders liquidated long contracts freely. On Wednesday October contracts had declined to 23.03, not far from two cents a pound from the highest point touched following the government report of July 23.

Even bullish consumption and carryover statistics issued by Secretary Hester early in the week failed to check the downward trend of prices and toward the middle of the week shorts commenced to cover and take profits, deeming it the wiser plan to reduce committments.

The downward trend was abetted by further rains in sections needed in the eastern belt; then the partial recovery later was caused by reports of increasing insect activity and general crop deterioration, not unusual in August.

Saturday's report was almost as great a surprise to the trade as previous reports were. The condition average of 65.8 was lower than had been expected and the crop forecast of 13,566,000 bales was practically a half million below expectations. It is believed an advance will follow on Monday.

Paint Diet, Visitors and Heat Are Causing Orang-Outang Jim in Dallas Zoo to Break Down With Indigestion

Intelligent Monkey Has Faults But He Is Likewise More Than The Average In Brains

DALLAS, Texas, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Orang-Outang Jim, of all the animals in the Dallas zoo, is easily the most envied among his fellow captives. The lion may set the wild echoes flying with his might roar; the polar bear may growl as his great sides palpitate in the southern heat, but Jim, at present, takes the lion's share of the zoological glory.

Beyond inspiring endless discussions on the beginning and endings of things Jim has many personal qualities that make him an interesting specimen. He is five years old and has been living at the zoo just half that time. Though he has acquired many friends since he came here a baby, he does not recover from his loneliness, which he shows in many ways. That is the reason his keeper went to New York to buy a champanzee lady as Jim's companion.

Just now, Jim is having trouble with his digestion. The condition is due partly to the heat, partly to the excitement caused by so many visitors and partly to eating some paint.

His favored drink is orange flavored soda, and no child was ever more delighted than is Jim when his keeper takes him, hand in hand, down to the soft drink stand in the park to buy him a drink. He lingers at the bottle, sipping the sugary nectar to make it last the longer, and when the contents are consumed, reluctantly he hands back the bottle.

Should his keeper upthinkingly pass the cake without speaking or giving some notice of recognition, immediately there is a wailing and a weeping such as only a nursery could produce. Jim weeps like a baby.

A trip through the zoo to see the other animals is even more delightful to Jim than is the cold drink. No child was more curious and none ever enjoyed the zoo so much as this jungle baby. His interest in the other animals is taken as one sign of his loneliness.

His keeper frequently takes him by the hand and together they make the rounds of the cages where more than 1,000 different specimens are on exhibition. He lingers at each cage, intent on every movement of the animals within. The lions fascinate him and yet fill him with fear. The king of the jungle is a curiosity until he roars and then he is a terror, and Jim wants to leave at once. He will pull and tug at the hand of his keeper, and beg to be gone, when the lion sends forth his roar.

Knows a Lever.

Not a few signs of intelligence are accredited to Jim. He has discovered the principle of the lever. Leave an iron bar or a strong stick within his cage, and he will pry loose anything not strong enough to resist his powerful arms. Place a stick within the cage, and he will rake in all manner of objects lying outside the bars. He can tie and untie knots effectively. He gets much fun out of handing the end of a sack through the bars to a spectator and then pulling on the other end.

One of Jim's special friends is Park Commissioner W. F. Jacobi, who frequently takes him for a walk in the park. The animal always shows delight when the commissioner approaches because he knows it means one of those delicious drinks.

Through a Woman's Eyes

We Don't See the Necessity.

"Abolish the home and marriage—in the interest of women's careers!"

That is the proposition made at the Mid-West conference of the national women's party by Dr. Margaret Daniels, a prominent member of the party. It is the burden of conventional marriage and home that stands in the way of complete freedom, not only for women in the pursuit of their careers, but for men also, says the worthy lady doctor. In her own words, which are too good not to be quoted, we have this a hazing indictment of home life, which we have always regarded as the very foundation of our civilization:

"Both husbands and wives are living under a handicap. Legal marriage and the individual home retard the progress of women and the advancement of the race. Banish the home altogether. The responsibility of a home, the support of a wife and children—these are a great burden on a man. This idea of protection for women—that's another handicap. A woman is first of all a human being, free and independent."

It reminds one of the old story of what Voltaire said to a parasitical acquaintance who came to him for money, saying, "I must live!" whereupon the philosopher replied, "I do not see the necessity."

That's the way most of us will react to the suggestion to abolish the family for careers for women—we don't see the necessity! Personal freedom and careers for women have been regarded by most of us as a means to the desired end of improving the human race. The proposal then, to sacrifice on the altar of this freedom the one fundamental principle which establishes the human race as a superior species, is—well, contradictory, to say the least.

Great principles are established for the majority. The majority of us want marriage and home life and children—our own children, not community offspring—rather than the worthy feminist's conception of absolute freedom, which is really a life without standards or bonds or human restraint.

Those men and women who do want such freedom from bonds and responsibility and conventions more than they want anything else, can have it without attempting to revolutionize the status of the race. Nobody forces a man or woman into marriage; nobody insists upon the security and protection of a home and a husband for women who can not see the idea; those who look upon absolute freedom and detachment as the desired end of all things—can make their own choice. The fact is that some of these have made the choice. And it may be because they are a bit weak and wavering in it that they would like to have everybody in the same boat!

Hermit Can't Savvy Radio, Prohibition

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 9.—(AP)—Henry P. Morris, who has dwelt in a cave in the midst of a large forest south of Omaha for 30 years, has paid his first visit to the city and civilization since the days of "Buffalo Bill" conducted his wild-west shows here.

An Omaha newspaper brought the hermit to Omaha where he found cause for wonder and also alarm in his first sight of the automobile, the elevator and motion picture.

His experiences were perplexing to him. He did not understand how "a voice could travel without wires," let alone the complicated mechanism of a telephone, and the fast moving pace of the present-day world, seen after 30 years of seclusion, left him to wonder if the new ways were best.

Morris expressed disapproval of prohibition, and when the evolution controversy was explained to him, placed his belief in the old fashioned Bible, which he had studied religiously in his cave.

Radio Takes Rome From Grand Opera

ROME, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Moving pictures, the radio and other new fangled forms of amusement have so far claimed the affection of the Romans that the capital of the nation which is generally considered the home of grand opera is unable to support its single lyrico-dramatic institution, the Constanzi Grand Opera house.

Light Opera Good.

Playhouses dispensing light opera managed to eke out a more or less profitable livelihood during the season now ending but the Costanzi which ranks after the Sala of Milan and the San Carlos of Naples, as the most pretentious of Italy's opera houses, fell upon evil days and rolled up the largest deficit in its history.

Its management, it is declared in musical circles, has made it clear that Cotanszi can maintain its position in the operatic field and save itself from slipping into the category of provincial operas, only if aid comes in the form of a large increase in its allowance from the municipality of ome and of a parallel augmentation of the already comfortable government subsidy.

Great Expense.

During the 1924-1925 season the Costanzi spent nearly 5,000,000 lire in producing 18 operas on a scale worthy of the nation's capital. New settings were made, distinguished singers were enticed by good sized salaries, the ballet reorganized and the orchestra was improved to rank with the best in Italy.

The expenditure sheet contained such items as: Singers, 1,410,000 lire; orchestra, 890,000; chorus, 440,000; ballet, 17,000; sets, 385,000.

In an effort to attract the Romans, 143,000 lire was spent on advertising and publicity but to no avail. The number of season subscribers slumped to a lower total than ever before and the house was often almost empty.

Blame for the sad state of affairs, lovers of grand opera assert, can be placed squarely at the doorsteps of the movies and radio. The Costansi, it is declared, can put up a fight against these invaders only with the aid of officialdom.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., Aug. 9.—(AP)—Secretary Hoover, returned tonight to Washington after weekend conferences with President Coolidge on the anthracite situation, commercial aviation and other problems facing the administration.

The visit here of the commerce department head developed that the president expected the anthracite operators and miners to work out a solution of their wage controversy without governmental intervention and that he has no intention of taking a hand.

HOUSTON, Aug. 9.—(AP)—J. M. Ball, assistant general freight agent of the International, Great Northern and Gulf Coast lines, estimates that $3,000,000 has gone into the pockets of farmers in Cherokee and Smith counties from tomatoes alone this season.

From Jacksonville alone, he said, more than 500 cars have been shipped while the estimate of the tomato output of the district is from 1,500 to 1,800 cars before the close of the season.

Twilight League Goes Through A Successful Year

Two Good Races With a Wealth of Upsets Cause Interest

By MACK TURNER.

As an amateur league the local twilight circuit has been run off in fine style. The games of the schedule were all played, save the final pair of the season, which were cancelled after the Security bank had cinched the last half of the race. Not a single forfeited game was had during the complete run of games.

With unpracticed fielding the pitchers were not given the best of support, but the players all gave the best they could considering the fact that only one game was played by each club in a week. The most noted bit of pitching of the year was the game played early in the season by Security bank and the Wichita Falls Electric.

Gabe Harris and Everette Blue tangled up in a highly interesting duel, with neither side connecting for a safe hit. Errors gave Harris the 1 to 0 margin. Only one other game in town was a no hit game. This was turned in by McDuffy in the Sunday school league.

Mosley An Aid.

Umpire Mosley was a consistent member of the umpiring staff of the league, missing but very few of the games and also officiating in both the midseason and final play off of the league. Others of the regular staff of umpires were Frank Quieser and E. D. Shamburger.

The first half of the race was the most interesting of the two, the last being more of a walk off by the Security bank. The first half was a race between Texhoma and American Refinery. The Monroe's Travelers came near upseting the dope in the first half by coming in at the last with a win over the Texhoma club, but came back the next week with a win over American Refinery. The two clubs finished in a tie.

Dope took another cut toward Travelers. This club had a set of nice ball players, yet could never win a high berth in the race. The first half the Travelers beat the two leaders in the last two weeks of play. These two wins almost broke the winner's chances. In the last half it was the same Monroe's Travelers that stopped the perfect record of the Security National Bank.

The two tied clubs met in Spudder park for the game of the half, the game to decide the first half winner. O'Dell McDuffy pitched the Texhoma club to a 6 to 4 win over the Americans, thus putting on ice the first half of the race.

Finishing a low second division in the first half, the Security Bank added to their club Sid Stanfield, brainy little maskman, and polishing up their defensive and offensive work went into the last half with a fighting ball club. With this spirit they captured six straight tilts before dropping a game.

Trail Drivers Help To Raise $100,000

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Mrs. R. R. Russell of this city has added the weight of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Old Trail Drivers' association to the movement to collect a fund of $100,000 for erection of a monument in San Antonio to the men who drove cattle in an early day from Texas to northern markets.

The old trail drivers desire and deserve it, she says in a letter she is sending throughout Texas, and follows with a recital of what they did in the period of the reconstruction when "our defeated soldiers had returned home and found their negroes freed, their property destroyed and nothing left but their cattle, which had increased and overstocked our ranges."

The letter continues, "there being no market for their cattle, a few of our most venturesome stockmen drove a few herds to Kansas in 1867 hunting a market. Being successful, these men and many others drove herds in 1868 and 1869. Stockyards were established in Abilene. Kansas buyers came and a market was established for Texas cattle. Trail driving began in earnest and 10,000,000 cattle and 1,000,000 horses were driven over the trail to northern markets and sold. The proceeds played a big part in the big development of Texas."

The letter declares that 35,000 men were engaged in trail driving. San Antonio, the southern terminus of the trail, was changed from a trading post to the metropolis of Texas. "But in the eighties the trails moved westward, railroads came, livestock furnished tonnage north and immigrants for the return trip," the letter continues. "The eyes of the world were turned on Texas, capital flowed to our gates.

"Ninety per cent of the early trail drivers were confederate veterans, many of them sons of the winners of Texas independence, no other class of men would have braved this hazardous undertaking.

"There are only a few of these hardy pioneers left and that phase of the cattle industry has gone, never to return, as has the period of the open range. Soon there will be nothing left to remind the coming generations of that period of Texas history. It is fitting and right that while some of the old trailers are yet alive, the work started by them should be completed by their descendants who are the beneficiaries of this important enterprise. To this end, we are carrying to raise $100,000 with which to erect at San Antonio a monument to the memory of these noble men."

"Y" Holds a Huge Warsaw Love Feast

WARSAW.—A two-day international love feast under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association recently was held at Suchahora attended by 70 Polish boys and an equal number from Czecho-slovakia. A number of Americans were present. National flags were exchanged, after which a group of Polish boys crossed over into Czecho-slovakia and for four days were guests at Camp Orava.

Fred W. Ramsey of Cleveland, O., took part in the gathering as president of the national council of the American Y. M. C. A. E. R. Cummings, an American connected with the Y. M. C. A. at Warsaw, accompanied the Polish boys, and Walter W Gethman, headed the boys from Camp Orava.

DEAD MEN VOTED?

Close Elections in Corsica Bring Charges of Illegal Ballots.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—Recent elections in the Island of Corsica, birthplace of Napoleon, where political campaigns are always intensely exciting, were so closely contested that each side accused the other of voting a dead man. The charge was within a few seconds of being literally true in one instance. A certain elector in a small town was dying in a hospital. His name appeared upon the membership or registration list of one of the parties. Rearing defeat leaders of that party rushed to the hospital, dragged the dying man from his bed and hurried him to the polls. He had just enough strength to hand in the ballot that had been given him before he fell back from the voting booth, dead.

The widow accused the successful candidate of murder.

FRANCE FINDS SPRINTER.

Young Paris Boy Able to Cover Distance With Poddock.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—France has at last found within her borders a sprinter who can compete with the world's best with an even chance of success. The discovery, however, will not assist France in the 1928 Olympic games at Amsterdam, because the new speed merchant is a Haitian youth named Andre Theard who is a student in Paris. He is qualified to be an Olympic games contestant for Haiti as he was during the last meet but he cannot enter the lists for France because it is not his native country.

Recently young Theard ran 100 yards in 9 4-5 seconds and did 100 metres in 10 3-5 seconds, defeating Andre Mourlon, former French champion by 1 1-2 yards in the first race and by metres in the second. This is the first time since the 1924 Olympic games in Paris that such time has been made by a sprinter in France.

VOLTAIRE USED TANKS.

French Students Say Famed Historian Used Them First Time.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—News that tanks are beginning to play a more important role in the Moroccan warfare has led one student of history and Voltaire to declare that Voltaire was the real inventor of the armored tank.

According to this claimant Voltaire announced the invention about 1756, of the "Assyrian chariot" which was armed like the modern tank. With this invention Voltaire proclaimed that he could crush the armies of Frederick the Great, then waging the seven years war. Marshal de Richelieu, however, turned down the invention and Voltaire in 1770, offered it to Czarina Catherine of Russia, who was then engaged in war with the Turks.

COTTON PROVES PROFITABLE

Willacy County Growers Realize Heavily On 1925 Crop

RAYMONDVILLE, Texas.—Cotton growers of Willacy county have realized to date approximately $300,000 from their cotton. This estimate was made here on the sale of 2,196 bales at an average price of $140 a bale, including the seed. Only about one-seventh of the crop the county is expected to produce this year has been marketed, indicating a production of close to 15,000 bales valued at approximately $2,000,000.

BOND REVIEW.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(AP)—The bond market, both for listed issues and new offerings, lapsed into seasonal dullness last week. Prices of listed issues were inclined to shade in anticipation of the usual fall stiffening of money rates and the diversion of extensive investment buying to high grade industrial and railroad stocks, many of which displayed a buoyant tone.

New offerings totalled nearly $75,000,000 or about $6,000,000 below the week before. The largest was the $24,000,000 issue of three-year 6 per cent notes of the Tokyo Electric Light company which were promptly disposed of at a price to yield 6.40 per cent. The only other public utility borrower was the Monogahela West Penn Public Service company, which sold a $13,200,000 issue of first and refunding mortgage bonds.

The only two railroad loans of importance were a $9,370,000 issue of 5 per cent equipment trust certificates of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad and a $7,500,000 issue of first mortgage general bonds of the Virginia Railway company at prices to yield 5.20 and 5.12 per cent, respectively. There were no industrial loans of any consequence.

Army Schools To Watch the Weather

SAN FRANCISCO.—Army service schools at the Presidio of San Francisco and elsewhere have begun to turn weather prophets.

The military importance of the subject has led army men to a deep study of atmospheric conditions. Graduates of the meteorological section of the signal school are placed on duty along the numerous war department airways, where weather forecasts must be supplied to aviators before they start on extended flights. Not only temperatures and storms must be predicted, but upper air currents, the direction and duration of winds, are of great importance to pilots.

In planning the erection of new airdromes and flying fields the weather experts are given careful hearings.

NEW SOCIETY FORMED.

New Health League in Paris Has Famous Persons as Members.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—The millenium may be a long way off for the worker, but it won't be the fault of the "new health society," which has just been organized here. It includes among its subscribers the Earl of Oxford and Asquith, Sir Robert A. Hadfield, Sir Alfred Mond and other notables and a group of leading doctors, such as Sir William Arbuthnot Lane and Sir Bruce Porter. Its main objects are to teach the public, through county councils, how to keep healthy, to see that the right kinds of foodstuffs are available to the public and to teach the public to obtain and preserve green vegetables.

This ancient timepiece has been passed down in his family for generations. Although somewhat large, wound by a key and of the "chain drive" variety, it keeps good time. The watch has been on exhibition at two world fairs and will be exhibited at the old soldiers' reunion here, Aug. 6, 7 and 8.

MEXICO BUYS AUTOS

Many Carloads of Machines Disposed of South of Rio Grande

LAREDO, Texas.—(AP)—Mexico bought from the United States in June 78 carloads of automobiles, 41 cars of cattle, 34 cars of eggs, 21 of lard, 66 of lumber, 23 of machinery and six cars of pianos. These shipments were included in the 523 carloads of material exported from the United States to Mexico during June, figures compiled by the Laredo chamber of commerce and the National Railways of Mexico show.

SHINGLES TO STAY

Paris Hair Dressers Say Younger Generation Likes This.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—Hair dressers with a clientele of women who have their hair shingled, always evade the question whether shingling is going out of fashion. Certainly, so far as the younger eyes are concerned, it will not, unless the dictates of fashion prove too strong for they have come to regard the shingled head as the finishing touch to a smart appearance, and it seems to suit them as well as many of the older women.

BAKING NOW AN ART

French Experts, Viewing New Tools, Call Themselves Professionals

PARIS, Aug. 9.—Baking now has taken its place among the arts. A salon of baking which opened its doors in Paris this week, has proved a great success. More than 600 bakers and confectioners from eight countries have arrived here to view the latest improvements in ovens, dough mixers and other appliances, and to discuss baking methods.

WOULD CULTIVATE PRISONS.

Federal Prison Superintendent Says Pens Should Be Self-Supporting

TACOMA, Wash., Aug. 9.—(AP)—Luther C. White, superintendent of federal prisons, when here recently to inspect McNeal Island penitentiary, said federal prisons should be made more nearly self-supporting. He pointed out that the federal prison population had increased largely in recent years, and that the burden on the taxpayers could be alleviated by the establishment of proper industries.

STRENUOUS CLUB LAWS.

Foreign Wars Post Requires Service Of at Least 20 Years.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Corporal H. W. Roberts post, Veterans of Foreign wars, has a condition of membership that probably is unique. No veteran is eligible unless he has served at least 20 years in the army, navy or marine corps. He must, of course, have put in part of that time in foreign territory to comply with the general requirement of the V. F. W.

Insulin Improves Human Appetite

VIENNA.—At the last session of the Austrian Medical association investigators reported, and other corroborated, that the administration of insulin to non-diabetic persons resulted in a very intense and healthy stimulus of the appetite, enabling emaciated and convalescents to eat three to four times what they had been eating and resulting in a rapid increase in weight.

In some cases the accumulation of fatty tissue was so great that it was found necessary to decrease the doses soon after the beginning of the treatment to prevent desugarisation of the blood beyond the normal degree. This is considered as welcome news for those engaged in the treatment of the early stages of lung affections as well as unsightly thinness.

SPARE PATCHES PAY.

West Texas farmers are badly in need of utilizing small and ordinarily useless tracts for raising of feed stuffs, thinks B. M. Whiteker, agricultural manager of the West Texas chamber of commerce who in a recent bulletin has the following to say:

"If every idle acre is now planted to feed, cane, millet, turnips, etc., the stock will smile at you and dollars from the cotton crop will remain with you longer.

"It can be done.

"It costs several dollars a month to feed an animal. Figure the worth of the extra acreage by the length of time it will carry your stock—big saving.

"One farmer in following the idle acreage idea raised enough feed extra to carry his stock until February before beginning on the regular crop. Eight head at $10 per month. Five months $400—yes.

"One boy took a little idle corner that 'dad' said was not worth while and planted. Results: Enough made to buy a heifer yearling. Boys, if father does not want to plant idle acres to feed, get his permission to do it yourself. Let him pay you for the crop less rent—then, he may owe you two or three yearlings.

"Another farmer had his worthless patch plowed up and lo. One night he saw a rain nearing; he left the 'straw' grabbed his sack of turnip seed and flashlight, found the patch and scattered the seed in the wee hours of night to beat the rain. Results: Over $300 out of the 'shower bath' he received that night.

"Texas is probably the shortest on feed crops this year that she has been in her history. This year you will not be able to buy feed produced by friend Jones, nor from but very few and scanty places in Texas. When you do, it will be on basis of $40 to $60 per ton for sorghum grains. Only a few acres of cane will save hundreds of dollars of maize.

"Start now to 'get by' another year. The banks cannot buy all the feed. It's a matter of impossibility for an ordinary bank of West Texas to supply funds to purchase all the family and livestock needs. Some feed must be raised. In fact, a great deal of forage crops must be our dependence now. Every farm can have a dandy stack of 'roughness' by planting now.

"The landlord, who does not encourage his tenant to plant some feed now and help the country to get by another year, should sell out and let some fellow have the place that will help the country to prosper.

"Plant more feed and thus get by—it can be done."

WHERE THEY MAKE THE FINISHED PRODUCTS.

New England is a great manufacturing section. New England buys all its raw materials. New England buys most of its food products. Is New England going into decline? If you think so, read the figures:

Between 1887 and 1924 saving bank deposits in New England increased 340 per cent; exports 95 per cent; imports 470 per cent; value of manufactured products 380 per cent; value of agricultural products 375 per cent; bank clearings 878 per cent; bank capital 4 per cent; bank surplus 436 per cent; bank deposits 531 per cent and population 68 per cent.

All these figures show the way that New England is declining. New Englanders turn the raw material into the finished product and this is the way that wealth is made.

CHAUNCEY VS. CRANKS.

Chauncey Depew is 84 and against cranks. In a Fourth of July address he made a strong plea for the preservation of the constitution from further amending and interference. This is his viewpoint:

"Every crank wants to throw a crank into it. Let us preserve it as we have had it for 149 years. The attitude of the late Senator LaFollette was beneficial to the constitution since it made many people think of just what the constitution was and what it meant."

Chauncey is for the constitution against the world. He is right. Robert M. LaFollette attacked the constitution last year and it cost him a million or two votes. A vast number of Americans are for the constitution as it was adopted by the fathers. They stand pat.

METEORS.

An Iowa editor was nearly hit by a flying fragment of a meteor which was picked up hot and will be sent to the scientists for examination. It is said to resemble iron. Only the hardest substance could penetrate the atmospheric garment of earth without being consumed by friction heat. There is a constant rain of rock and metals against the outer air, we are told, from which we are saved by the air cushion and combustion. Occasional meteorites strike the earth but they are few in comparison to the shooting meteors that cross the sky, flame for a moment and become extinct.

IS HORSE RACING COMING BACK?

It is said twelve million dollars will be distributed in purses in the United States and Canada and Mexico this season. It is said that 1926's gross will be all of fourteen million dollars and may run far beyond that figure. It is said horse racing is fast expanding into new territory and everywhere its popularity grows. It is said $10,000 purses are no longer rare in the United States. The cat came back.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE.

Changeable Minds.

Let it be said to the credit of women that they often change their minds.

And let the stolid old gentlemen, who clings eternally to an idea or a belief envy them for it.

If there is anything that makes for stupidity and dreariness, it is the setting of ideas like cement.

All the prejudice, all the intolerance that has made life miserable for the dwellers on earth since Adam's time, has been the result of clinging to convictions and defending them till death in the face of all opposition.

There are people living in the world today, who would be quite capable of believing that the world is flat, if their fathers had believed it before them.

There are men who belong to political parties, without every having analyzed the tenets of these parties, but who defend them loudly and angrily whenever they are attacked.

And this tendency is by no means confined to the ignorant of the educated.

You will find physicians and lawyers and even men of science so wedded to sets of ideas they imbibed in their youth that nothing can possibly change them.

Yet ideas must change if the world is to change, and the world has changed a great deal and must change a great deal more in the future.

For somehow or other progressive opinion manages year by year to make itself felt, to mould gradually the opinion of the majority of the world, last, of all, of course, the curmudgeons who insist that it is a crime to think in any other way than the good old way in which their fathers thought.

Fortunately the tide of thought does now and then set in new directions, and sweeps with it the ideas of the ancient and reckbound dwellers in the past.

But for this doctors would still be bleeding their patients to death, in their effort to cure them, and sick children would still be gagged with molasses and sulphur.

Few of the readers of this newspaper but can remember how the unchangeable ridiculed the efforts of the Wrights to fly.

But a comparatively few years ago the grandfathers of these men were pitying Robert Fulton as a poor half-wit who believed that hot water in an iron box could make a boat move through the water.

Opinions are but states of mind. They are formed only to be reformed and again reformed in the light of new revelations.

Because of earnest thought and toil on the part of thousands of people, new revelations of life and its meaning, and the world and wonders, are constantly being made.

The intelligent dweller in the present must have his eyes on the future, or he soon will be lagging along in the past.

Women are more mobile, and more alert. They change their minds when new ideas are presented to them.

And instead of laughing at them, men should honor and respect them for it.

The stationary mind is a monument. Monuments belong to the past.

ABOUT DARROW.

The Spartanburg, South Carolina, Herald is of the opinion that Tennessee took Clarence Darrow's measure and found that he was just a lawyer, after all. Says the Herald:

"Clarence Darrow came into Tennessee from the notorious Leopold-Loeb trial with a reputation as a great criminal lawyer, supposedly a man of ability, poise and brains. He will leave the little town of Dayton, where he has exhibited for two weeks, known of all men to be a mediocre, irritable, quarrelsome lawyer. He came into a country of plain folks of the pioneer type, wholesome and cordial to their guests, direct and outspoken in their beliefs. He mistook their simplicity and deference for weakness of character, and perhaps for ignorance, or lack of a sense of the consideration due them by those who might entertain views contrary to their views. He came in intolerant and arrogant, impatient to annihilate his opponents and change the habit of thought of a commonwealth.

"If Darrow is capable of further enlightenment, he should leave Tennessee a man of broader understanding and with a new appreciation of the character of the people who have contributed most to the building of the nation. He dug into some of the bedrock. Coming from the gang-ridden, thug-infested city of Chicago into the simplicity of Tennessee life in a small town, it is not surprising that Darrow had to be taught that even among very simple folks, as he might have judged them, there is a very clearly definite sense of the fitness of things. If Darrow is a man of any capacity, he will ponder over his Tennessee experience. As he stands today, he just isn't anybody. And the great Chicago lawyer met his Waterloo in a little country court down in Tennessee where he came in contact with a gentleman judge."

A PROTEST FROM EUROPE.

And speaking of London, a prominent film producer is coming to America to see if something can't be done to stop the flood of obscene and misleading American films into England. This producer is an American operating in England, and asserts that some types of American films are causing the British people to look upon all Americans as sex maniacs and degenerates.

The American public has become more or less hardened to such things. At first there were a few protests against obscene films and filthy books, but in the last year or two there has been little outcry.

It is coming to a pretty pass when America puts itself in the position of letting Europe, with its old world standards of morals, suggest improvements in the American national habits. But we seem to have reached that pass.

ANOTHER RECORD BREAKER.

Production of motor cars and trucks in the United States for the first six months established a new high record and if this activity should continue 1925 will be the banner year in the history of the automotive industry. As for the consumption of gasoline a new high record was established.

This reminds the writer that Henry Ford has purchased 200 ships from the American shipping board and will dismantle these relics of the World War. He needs the iron and the steel and will make large dividends on his latest acquisition.

Henry is only 56 and he is the wisest of wise birds. Should he live another ten years he should be in the ranks of the multibillionaires unless he happens to be the only multibillionaire on the face of the earth.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

By MARY BLAKE.

Leo.

Today's planetary aspects are favorable, especially for those interested in real estate or banking enterprises. They indicate an ability to reach decisions quickly and accurately, and a common sense attitude—neither unduly optimistic nor one of excessive under valuation. It is a good opportunity for concluding agreements or contracts—especially those that have been hanging fire, as a result of either procrastination or doubt. In the home or family circle, the signs denote unalloyed success for any social functions or reunions, and theatrical enterprises that may be produced today will enjoy fair sailing. It is not a propitious occasion for travel, or for any radical change.

Children, born today, will be subject to the inevitable viscissitudes of infancy, although more danger can be anticipated from accident than from sickness. Necessary vigilance must be exercised in order to prevent the taking of chances, or the incurring of unnecessary risks. The disposition of a girl born under today's auspices will be amiable and attractive; she will not display any exceptional intelligence or ability, but will possess an inexhaustible fund of sound common sense, and a sympathetic understanding that will insure for her countless friends and admirers. A boy will develop a dominating, and even stubborn, temperament. He will have a very keen sense of right and wrong, and neither punishment nor reward will induce him to deviate from the path that he considers right.

If today is your birthday, you should be more than ordinarily successful in all business or professional undertakings, and are more fitted to be a chief than a subordinate. This diagnosis applies equally as well to a woman as to a man. You should never be satisfied with humdrum conditions, but should branch out to tackle something big, and for which your talents are suitable. You possess a keen mind as well as sound judgment, although very little intuition. You have great executive ability, but can only use this gift to the nth degree when your position is a commanding one. In addition to these assets, you are a persuasive and forceful talker, and very rarely come off second best in any argument. Although you have a generous disposition you are a firm believer in the axiom that charity begins at home.

Your family is characterized by lack of discord. You, however, do not set so much store on home ties as the other interests with which you are associated.

Successful people born on this date:
Jay Cooke, financier.

Kidnap Band At Work in Florida

TAMPA, Fla., Aug. 9.—(AP)—A band of kidnapers alleged to have robbed eight Portuguese and held them captive in Tampa for 12 days before releasing them today are operating throughout the state, fleecing foreigners and strangers, authorities believe.

A state wide investigation of abduction and confidence activities has been started by Tampa police. Descriptions of the alleged kidnapers have been sent to the principal cities of Florida.

Although weak and exhausted from confinement in a little one-room house in Ybor City, the Portuguese who come from Taunton, Mass., will suffer no ill effects, physicians said.

Better Gas Process To Save Big Sums

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(AP)—The New York World will say tomorrow that the secrets for manufacturing a motor fuel far more efficient than gasoline and snythetic wood alcohol have been discovered by a minor government employe in thirteen German patents seized by the alien property custodian during the war and turned over to the chemical foundation six years ago.

As a result of this discovery, at least two industries—the automobile industry capitalized at $2,000,000,000 and the $100,000,000 wood alcohol industry in this country face a revolution in production methods. The patents are also said to describe processes for manufacturing a steel that is lighter, stronger and cheaper than that now made, and other products.

HOW IT STARTED

"Drumming a Man Out of Camp."

This is an expression which is sometimes appropriated into everyday speech from the parlance of places where men foregather. A member of a team or one of any group of men becoming obstreperous or trouble making is threatened with being "drummed out of camp"—in other words, thrown out! The phrase had its origin in the army, where at one time it was of literal significance.

Years ago, when a soldier was dishonorably discharged he was literally "drummed out of the regiment." The regiment was lined up in full dress, and the offender placed in the middle of a hollow square. His buttons and shoulder straps were then cut off and he was led off the reservation while the band played a funeral dirge!

An apt phrase, "drumming a man out of camp," soon found its way into the language of men regardless of its military significance. And today it is frequently encountered, used in its figurative sense in common speech.

National C. of C To Start Publication

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 9.—(AP)—A national junior chamber of commerce publication will be launched by that organization in September, E. Fred Johnson, national president, announced today. Johnson's plans have been approved by the board of directors of the national chamber and he has left for Chicago for a conference with other national officials.

A name for the publication will probably be decided upon during the conference at Chicago, Johnson said. The new magazine will be published in St. Louis under the direction of G. Edwin Popkess of East St. Louis. Popkess will be business manager according to present plans.

WHOLE TOWN GOES BACK

Seven Cars Take Tulsa Folk to Old Home Week in East.

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 9.—(AP)—Former citizens of Bradford, Pa., oil town, are on their way "back home" on a special seven-car train. Over 100 persons boarded the train before it pulled out of the Tulsa Frisco station at six o'clock tonight. Approximately 90 of the 100 are former Bradford citizens and will attend home week August 10 to 17.

IRRIGATION

Mr. Waggoner's Bridge.

Pile bridges were built by the contractor at both of the dams. These bridges were used mainly by the men doing the construction work, but of course there was a considerable amount of other traffic.

Both of these bridges were taken down upon the completion of the work. At the storage dam this made but little difference to the general public as the wagon road crosses on top of the dam, but at the diversion dam this is not possible. The spillway is not provided with a bridge and this effectually cuts off even foot traffic. The only way to get across the river at that point is to ford it.

However, Mr. Waggoner managed to get a nice new bridge as a part of the consideration allowed him for the privilege of building the two reservoirs. The paragraph covering this reads as follows:

"(d) Party of the second part (the irrigation district) will build a bridge across the Big Wichita river at a place to be selected by the party of the first part, the bridge to be a substantial bridge and to be erected at the cost of the party of the second part and without expense to the party of the first part. It is distinctly understood, however, that the said bridge shall be erected between the two dams referred to in this contract and at a point far enough west of the lower dam so that it will not be necessary to erect a bridge across anything except the channel of the Big Wichita river; in other words the bridge shall not cross a point where any water in the lower reservoir extends beyond the bed of the river.

The bridge for Mr. Waggoner was built about eight or ten miles above the diversion dam near an old ranch house. It is strictly a private bridge and used very little indeed by the general public.

Union Farmers' Idea Endorsed

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 9.—(AP)—The unionizing of farmers was endorsed at a round-table of the institute of politics today by Henry Charles Taylor, chief of the bureau of market and crop estimates of the department of agriculture. He was discussing how farmers might gain a greater share of the national wealth.

"There is danger at this moment of conflict between farmers and cities," he said, "each person engaged in the series of operations of distribution of farm products wants to increase his share of the profits but doesn't want others to increase the cost of the products by increasing their profits. It is as proper for farmers to organize as it is for miners, plumbers and business men to organize to increase their gains at the expense of others."

Body of Saint To Be Buried in U. S.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(AP)—The body of Saint Christina, the virgin recently bestowed by the pope upon Bishop Joseph Schrembs of Cleveland will arrive here Wednesday aboard the White Star liner Homeric. It will be the first body of a saint to find a resting place in this country.

The body will be sent immediately to Cleveland where it will be placed in the cathedral, in recognition of the Cleveland bishop's sponsorship of a movement for the restoration of the catacombs near Rome.

For some time after reading the letter Diana sat lost in thought, her brows knitted anxiously, her eyes absently following Gaston who was moving about the room making preparations for her solitary dinner. The general had not minced matters. It was plain that in Paris the ministry of the interior was frankly alarmed.

What would a general upheaval in Algeria lead to? How would it affect Ahmed.

For a moment her face grew very white and the tent seemed to waver oddly around her. Then, with an effort, she regained control of herself.

She had faith in her own people. And if the worst came to the worst and it became necessary for Ahmed to take part in operations beyond his own territory—well, God would give her strength that she might not fail him.

She read the dispatch through once more and then put it away carefully.

She would not answer it tonight, she would leave it until tomorrow—for what might tomorrow not bring?

And throughout her lonely dinner she kept her thoughts at bay, chattering of trivial matters with Gaston and eating more to please him than because she felt any inclination for food.

When she had finished her coffee and Gaston had cleared away, she wrapped a burnous round her and went out, moving a few steps beyond the awning to look up at the stars.

Less brilliant than usual they seemed tonight, for the moon was almost full. The traveler's moon, she thought suddenly, and wondered how many slow-moving caravans were, even at that moment, wending their patient way across the great sandy waste, profiting by the clear, white light that made their night journey possible. In imagination she could see them—the armed guards that walked in front with hteir rifles in their hands; the long strings of camels plodding steadily on under their heavy loads, carrying great pendulous sacks of weighty merchandise, and some bearing the gaily curtained, swaying basours in which the women and children traveled; and tailing at the end of the procession a motley crowd of camp followers, mounted Arabs and cameleers, and a swarm of half-grown boys trotting perpetually up and down the scattered line urging on the little, underfed, overladen donkeys while savage-eyed watch dogs slung at their heels.

How often she had seen them in reality. They were part of the life that had become hers, that strange, primitive life that had gone unchanged throughout the ages. For so had they journeyed when Islam first came to Algeria, so would they journey in the days of generations yet unborn.

The night was calm and still, and the soft air, blowing in her face, brought with it the subdued sounds of distant revelry; the plaintive notes of an Arab pipe, the rhythmical beat of a tom-tom, the deep chanting of men's voices. And far off on the other side of the camp she saw the glowing reflection of two big fires, round which she knew the tribesmen were clustered.

Soon Gaston joined her. In the Sheik's absence he was always within call, unobtrusive but watchful, eager to carry out her smallest wish, often anticipating her needs.

The laughter and merriment echoing from the men's quarters had made Diana acutely conscious of her own solitude, and she turned to the valet with a momentary feeling of relief.

"The men are gay tonight, Gaston."

"Yes, Madame. They have arranged a fete in honor of the two Spahis who came in this afternoon. Would Madame care to go and see them for a few moments? It will give them pleasure."

But Diana shook her head.

"Not tonight, Gaston. I'm not in the mood. I'm tired, I think. And the men notice so quickly. I don't want to spoil their amusement. But those Spahis, Gaston, they must be made of iron. They were dead beat when they got here."

Gaston laughed dryly.

"An Arab is never too tired to enjoy himself. Madame knows that. Besides they can sweep tomorrow, and the next day if they want to. Their horses will need two days' rest, at least. But is the noise too much for Madame? Shall I tell them—"

"No, no," she interrupted quickly. "I don't mind het noise. It won't disturb me. I am only glad that the men are happy and contented. It makes it—easier," she added, with a little break in her voice.

And a few minutes later she went back into the tent.

How empty it seemed! How chill and lifeless without the strong, vigorous personality whose dominating influence seemed to be in everything she saw about her. The whole room spoke of him, bringing memories of the long years they had spent together, of days and nights of delirous happiness, of a wonderful love that had grown and strengthened through mutual understanding.

Tonight it seemed more than she could bear, and with a little sob she fled into the inner room to fling off her clothes and creep into bed, hoping in sleep to find forgetfulness.

But sleep persistently evaded her. And here were memories more intimate, more forceful.

In the great wide bed, where she lay alone, there was no need to hide the passion of misery and loneliness that swept over her and, burying her face in the pillow, she wept as she had not allowed herself to weep before.

She wanted him. Oh, God, how she wanted him! More even than that night so many years ago when he had ridden away with Raoul de Saint Hubert and she had lain agonizing on this same bed, dreading that his return would mean the end of hte brief romance that had come so strangely into her life. Then she had been only his slave, the victim of his caprice and passion. But now she was his wife, an integray part of him. And without him it was as if some portion of herself had been torn from her, as if by some horrible physical dismemberment she had lost all vitality, all strength; and what remained was merely a quivering, mutilated fragment whose only capacity was suffering.

Ahmed, her splendid loser! She whispered his name in an agony of love and longing.

Would she ever feel the curve of his strong arm round her again, ever hear again the soft, slow intonations that once had drawn her back from the very gates of death. She had nearly died that night—hte night that the boys were born. It was only his voice that had given her strength to fight for her life.

Exhausted with emotion she lay with closed eyes, courting slumber by every device known to her. But still sleep would not come, and hour after hour she tossed feverishly, growing every moment more wide awake, more nerve shaken. The cheerful noises of the men in the camp had long since died away.

Only the rapid teking of a little clock near her broke the stillness, and at length the monotonous regularity of its silvery chime became more than she could endure and she sprang up to stop it with shaking, ice-cold fingers.

She did not go back to bed.

The room had become suddenly unbearable.

Slipping a warm rwap about her, she went into the outer room, where a couple of lamps were still burning, forgotten as she often did forgett hem when she was alone.

Selecting a book haphazard, she curled up on the divan and settled herself to read, since sleep was impossible.

But after turning a few pages her attention wandered and she sat up, pushing the hair off her damp forehead.

The tent seemed airless and hot, strangely hot for the time of year. Perhaps it was the lamps that made it so, she reflected. And, going to the door, she noiselessly unfastened the entrance flap, not wishing to waken Gaston, who was sleeping across the threshold as he always did when the Sheik was away. Then once more she lay down on the divan, and forced herself to read. And gradually her nerves grew calmer, the rigidity of her limbs relaxed and she lay more restfully, ceasing to listen for the sound that never came.

Perhaps it was the change of atmosphere that soothed her. Perhaps sleep, the capricious, was nearer than she had imagined. Whichever it was, she never knew that she had stopped reading, that the novel on which she was endeavoring to compel her attention had slipped from her hand. And she was hovering on the borderland of oblivion when the sound came that roused her abruptly to complete wakefulness and sent her flying to her feet to stand with straining ears and wide, dilated eyes.

Breathless, her hands pressed tightly over her wildly beating heart, she waited, listening until the effort became an agony.

The sound came again—the harsh, protesting snarl of a kneeling camel, followed by the quick murmur of men's voices.

Then thme entrance flap was flung open and a tall figure swept into the tent.

The next moment she was in her husband's arms(laughing and sobbing as she clung to him. And, holding her as thoumgh he never meant to let her go ,the Sheik rained passionate kisses on her upturned face.

"Ma mie, ma mie," he murmured, his deep voice trembling, his fierce eyes softening into a wonderful tenderness. "Has it seemed so long, poor little lonely wife? Do you think I wouldn't have come sooner if I had been able? Do you think I haven't counted the days and nights until I could hold you in my arms again? Bon dieu, how I have hungered for you, Diane!"

The clasp of his strong arms was pain, but she scarcely felt it. Her lips on his, she whispered her happiness and confessed her fears, her hands running over his broad breast as if to convince herself that he had returned to her safe and sound, her eyes fixed searchingly on him trying to read in his face the answer to the question she would not voice.

It was not until he had loosened questing fingers, slipping up inside his wide sleeve, met with the unmistakable folds of a bandage wrapped round his forearm, that her eager outpouring faltered suddenly, and she went white to the lips.

"Ahmed—you are wounded?"

He smiled reassuringly, and put her from him with a quick caress. "It's nothing to worry about, cherie. No bones broken. It will be healed in a day or two," he said lightly, and turned in search of a cigarette.

"But—how?" she panted, her eyes jealously watching his every movement. He shrugged slightly, as if impatient of her insistence, and lit the cigarette slowly, inhaling a long breath of smoke with the keen enjoyment of one who has not tasted good tobacco for some time.

"I was in a tight corner, and had to make a bolt for it. Luckily their shooting was atrocious," he said, rather shortly.

And Diana knew from experience that that was all she was to hear of the matter. It was not his way to speak of himself, or exaggerate what he considered trifles.

She fwollowed him to the divan, where he had flung himself down, and slipped to a pile of cushions beside him.

"Have you found out what you went to find, Monsiegneur? Do you want to tell me tonight—or are you too tired?" she asked hesitatingly, noticing, as she saw him for the first time under the full light of the lamp, how utterly weary he looked.

He slid his arm round her, drawing her bright head closer.

"I am tired," he allowed, and even that slight admission seemed to cost him an effort, "so tired that I think I could sleep for a week!" he laughed, almost shamefacedly, "but I can tell you somewhat, tonight, at any rate, until Gaston comes. He is bringing me something to eat. I haven't tasted food for nearly two days." He laughed again at her little cry of distress, and reached out his hand for another cigarette.

For a few moments he sat silent, staring, not at her but straight in front of him, his brows drawn together in the heavy scowl that was so characteristic.

LARGEST BANQUET IS HELD

8,000 Free Masons Attend One Big Dinner in London.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Eight thousand British free masons were seated this evening at tables at Olympia the Madison Square of London at what is said to have been the world's largest banquet. Two thousand waitresses, many of who were brought from the provinces were required to attend the guests.

More Truth Than Poetry

JUSTIFIABLE ASSAULT

Though curly-haired heroes seem always to me
Somewhat of a visual affliction—
They flock, to a rather distressing degree,
Through the pages of popular fiction;
And a man's not to blame for his natural curls,
And the reason one hates him intensely
Is probably due to the fact that the girls
Declare that they like 'em immensely.

We can bear with the poet whose tresses hang down
Unchecked by the barber-shop mower;
From the wrinkles he uses in building a frown
To the base of his collar, or lower,
Dame Natnre has plenty of hair to bestow,
And she always seems keen to bestow it
On a fellow who needs it in order to show
That he's really a genuine poet.

And as for the chaps with their hair in reverse,
It really is cruel to chide 'em,
For premature bald spots are always a curse
And the hair that grows back, serves to hide 'em.
Though their locks, in a manner of speaking, may lie—
They are only a trifle untruthful—
And brushing hair backward serves better than dye
To make its possessor look youthful.

But never excuse was devised that could save
From the scorn of the just and right living
The man who walks 'round with a permanent wave—
That's a crime that is past all forgiving;
And if by chance you should happen to view
The gents who are said to have got 5em,
There is only one plain manly course to pursue—
And that is to haul off and swat 'em!

RALLY IN NINTH NETS 5 RUNS FOR TANNERS

Exporters Stage Last Round Spurt Too, But Fall Short

BEAUMONT, Aug. 9.—Wichita Falls made a clean sweep of the Beaumont series, winning the third game, 9 to 8, here through a ninth inning rally that netted five tallies. Exporters' boots, three of them in the last frame, proved too much for O'Neal and Lewis, local hurlers, to overcome. Bernie Deviveros smacked out two home runs over the right field wall.

Errors Help In Steer Win Over Bears, 3 to 1

Santone Unable to Hit When Blows Are Needed; Two Ousted

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 9.—Errors behind Homer Owens and inability of the Bears to hit Lefty Shuman gave the Steers the final game of the series Sunday, 3 to 1, for a clean sweep of the three-game series. In the first inning Rhine Williams circled the bases when his single got away from Rosenthal, and in the third Washburn's high heave to Khadot put Gross on second following which Gross scored on Williams single past third. The Bears' only run came in the first when Gonzales singled and scored on Clark's double. The Steers scored their last run in the eighth when Miller came in on Segrist's sacrifice fly to Meyers. Manager Coleman and Catcher Wirts were put out of the park by Umpire Weir for kicking on a decision at the plate and the crowd showered Weir with cushions.

STEER AND BUFF HOPES GO HIGH AS TEAMS WIN

Dallas and Houston Hard On Heels of Leading Panthers

DALLAS, Aug. 9.—Spectacular play of the Dallas Steers and Houston Buffaloes headlined Texas league diamond activities last week. By winning six of their seven contests Snipe Conley's hired hands advanced to third place but two games behind the pace-setting Cats; while the performers led by Marvin Goodwin won five out of seven tilts and came up within one game of the Panthers. The San Antonio Bruins apparently are out of the running and the rest of the way the race is expected to be a triangular battle among the Cats, Bisons and Steers, with the Wichita Falls Spudders always giving the three favorites plenty of trouble.

Hopes Up.

Pennant hopes of the Houston fans flamed high as the Bisons whipped the Panthers Friday and Saturday in two of the hardest fought battles of the season. A crowd of 5,000 Houston fans saw Friday's struggle and a crowd of 6,500 witnessed the game of Saturday. So large was the crowd of Saturday that difficulty was experienced in preventing the pennant-mad Houstonians from flowing into left field. Hundreds of spectators stood throughout the game.

Friday, Manager Marvin Goodwin further endeared himself to the diamond followers of the Bayou City by besting Joe Pate in a sensational mound duel and winning over the Atamen, 3 to 1. Marvelous support enabled the veteran right-hander to defeat the ace of the Panthers. Four double plays strangled as many Cat rallies. Twice with a man on first, one man down and a dangerous hitter at the swinging station, Boggess, young third-sacker of the Bisons, started a double play on a hard chance. Frankie Fuller, veteran second-sacker, acted as the pivot on these two plays. Once, with a man on first and second, and one down, Fuller made a shoe string catch of a whistling liner off the bat of "Ziggy" Sears, and tossed to Johnny Kane for the double play.

Boggess, by his sterling play in the field, redeemed himself for his poor work in running bases.

Record News Trims Frieberg 7 to 2

The Wichita Falls Record-News baseball club emerged the victor over Frieberg Sunday afternoon on the Frieberg diamond, 7 to 2. Schlette pitched great ball for the Record News and allowed Frieberg only three hits. The two runs were homers by Pitcher Geyer. The first of his nonstop drives came in the second and the final one in the ninth. Doyle collected the third hit for Frieberg in the eighth. Cossey was the fielding star of the game with a great catch in left field in the ninth.

Schlette and Thorne led the hitters for the Record News with two hits each. Deiterman was the only one to get an extra base blow off the slants of Geyer. He poled out a triple in the fourth inning. Geyer fanned fourteen of the visiting batters and Schlette fanned an even dozen.

Score—		R.	H.	E.
Record News	100 104 001—7	8	2
Frieberg	010 000 001—2	3	5

Batteries: Schlette and Buss; Geyer and Rousch.

Pitcher Geyer by hitting his two home runs off the slants of Schlette in the Sunday game gained a one-year subscription for the Record News free of charge. If he will drop around by the Record office and leave his address he will be fixed up with the paper.

ST. LOUIS 8; PHILADELPHIA 4.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Four home runs helped the Cardinals defeat Philadelphia in the opening game of the series here today. The score was 8 to 4. Shinners, the first Cardinal to bat, hit into the right field bleachers with the call 3 to 2. Hornsby clouted a homer in the same inning and raised his season's total to 30 with a drive out of the park in the fifth. Blades hit for the circuit in the second. Friberg was banished for arguing with Umpire McCormick, Fonseca moving to second and Hawks to first. Score:

Spudders Sweep Series With Beaumont With a 9 to 8 Win

RALLY IN NINTH NETS 5 RUNS FOR TANNERS

Exporters Stage Last Round Spurt Too, But Fall Short

BEAUMONT, Aug. 9.—Wichita Falls made a clean sweep of the Beaumont series, winning the third game, 9 to 8, here through a ninth inning rally that netted five tallies. Exporters' boots, three of them in the last frame, proved too much for O'Neal and Lewis, local hurlers, to overcome. Bernie Deviveros smacked out two home runs over the right field wall.

Errors Help In Steer Win Over Bears, 3 to 1

Santone Unable to Hit When Blows Are Needed; Two Ousted

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 9.—Errors behind Homer Owens and inability of the Bears to hit Lefty Shuman gave the Steers the final game of the series Sunday, 3 to 1, for a clean sweep of the three-game series. In the first inning Rhine Williams circled the bases when his single got away from Rosenthal, and in the third Washburn's high heave to Khadot put Gross on second following which Gross scored on Williams single past third. The Bears' only run came in the first when Gonzales singled and scored on Clark's double. The Steers scored their last run in the eighth when Miller came in on Segrist's sacrifice fly to Meyers. Manager Coleman and Catcher Wirts were put out of the park by Umpire Weir for kicking on a decision at the plate and the crowd showered Weir with cushions.

STEER AND BUFF HOPES GO HIGH AS TEAMS WIN

Dallas and Houston Hard On Heels of Leading Panthers

DALLAS, Aug. 9.—Spectacular play of the Dallas Steers and Houston Buffaloes headlined Texas league diamond activities last week. By winning six of their seven contests Snipe Conley's hired hands advanced to third place but two games behind the pace-setting Cats; while the performers led by Marvin Goodwin won five out of seven tilts and came up within one game of the Panthers. The San Antonio Bruins apparently are out of the running and the rest of the way the race is expected to be a triangular battle among the Cats, Bisons and Steers, with the Wichita Falls Spudders always giving the three favorites plenty of trouble.

Hopes Up.

Pennant hopes of the Houston fans flamed high as the Bisons whipped the Panthers Friday and Saturday in two of the hardest fought battles of the season. A crowd of 5,000 Houston fans saw Friday's struggle and a crowd of 6,500 witnessed the game of Saturday. So large was the crowd of Saturday that difficulty was experienced in preventing the pennant-mad Houston fans from flowing into left field. Hundreds of spectators stood throughout the game.

Friday, Manager Marvin Goodwin further endeared himself to the diamond followers of the Bayou City by besting Joe Pate in a sensational mound duel and winning over the Atamen, 3 to 1. Marvelous support enabled the veteran right-hander to defeat the ace of the Panthers. Four double plays strangled as many Cat rallies. Twice with a man on first, one man down and a dangerous hitter at the swinging station, Boggess, young third-sacker of the Bisons, started a double play on a hard chance. Frankie Fuller, veteran second-sacker, acted as the pivot on these two plays. Once, with a man on first and second, and one down, Fuller made a shoe string catch of a whistling liner off the bat of "Ziggy" Sears, and tossed to Johnny Kane for the double play.

Boggess, by his sterling play in the field, redeemed himself for his poor work in running bases.

Record News Trims Frieberg 7 to 2

The Wichita Falls Record-News baseball club emerged the victor over Frieberg Sunday afternoon on the Frieberg diamond, 7 to 2. Schlette pitched great ball for the Record News and allowed Frieberg only three hits. The two runs were homers by Pitcher Geyer. The first of his nonstop drives came in the second and the final one in the ninth. Doyle collected the third hit for Frieberg in the eighth. Cossey was the fielding star of the game with a great catch in left field in the ninth.

Schlette and Thorne led the hitters for the Record News with two hits each. Deiterman was the only one to get an extra base blow off the slants of Geyer. He poled out a triple in the fourth inning. Geyer fanned fourteen of the visiting batters and Schlette fanned an even dozen.

Score—		R.	H.	E.
Record News	100 104 001—7	8	2
Frieberg	010 000 001—2	3	5

Batteries: Schlette and Buss; Geyer and Rousch.

Pitcher Geyer by hitting his two home runs off the slants of Schlette in the Sunday game gained a one-year subscription for the Record News free of charge. If he will drop around by the Record office and leave his address he will be fixed up with the paper.

ST. LOUIS 8; PHILADELPHIA 4.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Four home runs helped the Cardinals defeat Philadelphia in the opening game of the series here today. The score was 8 to 4. Shinners, the first Cardinal to bat, hit into the right field bleachers with the call 3 to 2. Hornsby clouted a homer in the same inning and raised his season's total to 30 with a drive out of the park in the fifth. Blades hit for the circuit in the second. Friberg was banished for arguing with Umpire McCormick, Fonseca moving to second and Hawks to first. Score:

Watch Yourself, Kay's Advice On Crime Clean-Up

Speaker Tells Class Only Way to Improve, Is to Let Liquor Alone

Wichita Falls may be getting worse and there may be bootlegging going on here, but the way to remedy the evil is to bring about a reawakening of individual responsibility in law observance rather than criticism of the police.

This is the view of Judge John C. Kay as expressed Sunday in his Bible class talk. His full address was as follows:

In talking to this class from Sunday to Sunday, I am beset with many delicious temptations. I am naturally a little bit mean, and one of the temptations that pesters me here is to tell the truth sometimes. I have often wondered if I could get away with it. Being a pretty fair diplomat, I never tried to tell just what I thought about conditions in general. I like very much to see humanity pass along, watch the weakness of this man, the foible of that man, the sin of antoher, sometimes the crime of one, but I don't know whether that would be a proper subject to discuss here. I know it would be interesting. I don't know whether you would ever come back, but, at least, one dose of it would be interesting.

Write Me Letters

I am going to ask you to do something that I never did before. I want all of you to write me a letter next week and tell me whether you think that this class ought to concern itself with such topics, as crime, politics, official duties, and things like that. Write me a good letter, you needn't be afraid to make it too long, and I am going to read it. I wonder how many letters I will get on that. I have got a notion that all of the intelligent, good citizenship element in my class is going to write to me.

I had a farmer visiting me last week from East Texas—a prosperous, hard-working farmer. He is quite a man in his country and would be in any country. You know, you fellows sometimes think reading the comic papers, and seeing them called "jays" and "backwoodsmen," that a farmer doesn't know anything. Why, he has got more sense than we have. He does more thinking out there by himself than we ever do in town. He is better up on what is going on, than we are. So this man said to me—just a farmer, talking to a swell like myself—he said: "We are getting tired in the country of this foolishness that you call court." I said, "What is the matter?"

"Why," he said: "You drag us up there to town on the jury, and we sit there a week and mess around and nobody can tell what is going on, and sometimes there is very little going on, and, if we get a criminal and convict him, you turn him loose in three weeks, and we don't know of any reason why we should go there at all." That's what the man said to me, and I gathered from his remarks that he thought our system of court was a joke. Well, we were right there in my own house, and I couldn't afford to get ugly with him and take issue with him. Being the host, I had to be, as I try to be, a gentleman, so I didn't say anything. When you are writing to me, you might mention his view too, and what you think about it. Now, don't go away with the idea that that is my view. I am telling you what another man thought and said. I am one of these high priests that minister about the altar of the law and I think, as all lawyers think, it perfect. That is, we try to think it.

About Friendship

Now, the lesson this morning is about friendship and the breaking up of some friendships. You know, Paul was a great man but not great in every respect. Another old farmer said to me, once, that "You can't get all the squirrels up one tree," and that's true. So, while Paul had a wonderful, wonderful mind, wonderful energy, and all that, he couldn't get along with people as well as some folks could. He didn't have that sweet temper, that patience, that long-suffering kindness that Barnabee had. So, they started out on a missionary journey and Barnabee said: "I am going to take this fellow John Mark along." Paul said: "No, no. We don't want to take him. I don't want anything to do with him. We won't have him."

One of the biggest mistakes that strong men make, when they do make it one of the greatest mistakes that executives make, when they make it, is to think that nobody can do anything but themselves. I have had a little touch of that myself, on two or three occasions. Do you ever suffer that way? Do you ever imagine that "If this thing is not fixed by me, it will never be fixed right?"

That is not a fatal disease. The technical name for it is "swelled head." And, when you get as old as I am, (and I am not half as old as a lot of these fellows sitting around here), when you get as old as I am, you will find out there are a lot of men that wouldn't do a thing just like you would, many times, but there many, fine, strong men that I can see, now, that can do things better than I can do it. You have to get about 45 or 50 years old before you can find that out. That is a sealed book to many young people.

How long did it take Paul to find that out about Mark? He never found it out while he was prosperous and preaching over the country, and running up and down. He didn't find out that Mark loved him and that he loved Mark until one day he was sitting down there in the jail at Rome, and he happened to think about his old friend, and he said: "send for my old friend. I want to see him." That's one of the most touching things in the Bible. You mustn't fall out with your friend because he doesn't see things like you do. It might be he has better eyes than you have. You mustn't fall out with him because he doesn't do like you do. One of the prettiest things in the Bible one of the most human things is that religion, and all that pertains to it, has been entrusted to earthen vessels.

There is a little evolution in the Bible, because it says that man was made out of mud, and the preacher, and the teacher, and the politician, and the statesman, the lawyer, the farmer, the physician, and all other men, are but earthen vessels. You know, I don't expect as much of my neighbor as I used to. I have learned not to do that, that he is of the earth, earthy, even as I am. But, so many of us are so willing for the other fellow to be honest. We are so willing for the other fellow to be perfect and so ready to criticize him, when an imperfection comes up. That brings me around to that word, "criticism." You ought to do it. You ought to be a terrible critic, providing, only, that you begin with yourself. And, if you begin with the criticism of yourself, you will find out that you have undertaken the labors of Hercules, and that it is a life-time job to straighten up.

Wichita Falls' Crime.

Now, you talk about Wichita Falls, and the crime, and the sin, and the shame, here. And, I reckon it's true. But, Wichita Falls would be some better city if I was a better man. That would help some. Maybe not much, but some. Now, take that thought home with you, and say to yourself that, "if I would clean, and sweep out, and burnish my house, then this city would be, at least, that much better, and cleaner and safer."

Our idea of criticism is some bootlegger, some social pariah, somebody without standing, and how our upper lip does curl up with contempt when we think about a man like that, when we are living in a glass house ourselves. Let's have a little more practical religion, a little more practical citizenship, and then you will have on an armour when you go out here to preach, or to teach, or to talk about citizenship, or to try to do something with conditions in the community, as all men know that you are a clean man, then your words are going to have weight, but, if there are joints in your harness here and there, so that the shafts of the enemy will pierce you, then you will be a broken vessel.

I may take a notion to help clean up Wichita Falls some day, myself. But, if I do, I think before I undertake it, I will begin with myself, and go, like St. Anthony, into the desert and study for two or three years to justify my heart, so that bad men couldn't say: "He, even he, is also one of us."

Now, you talk about good citizenship, and the church and the lodge, and all kinds of things, but, a man that buys whiskey from a bootlegger has got no more right to talk about good citizenship than a cow. A bootlegger couldn't do business without a lot of fellows that wanted to buy. It must amuse him to see them coming. How do you reckon a bootlegger feels when he finds a sanctimonious old church member easing up around the corner? Why, he is not as good a man as the bootlegger because the bootlegger is making something out of it and not making any pretentious toward citizenship.

I don't aim to get too far with my remarks here, but I say, if you are going to criticise things in the community, if you are going to help Wichita Falls straighten up, if you are going to enforce the law—I have heard them talking about that all my life; I never did know just exactly what they meant—if you are going to stand up for law, and for order, and for decency, and for sobriety, and some of the finer things of life, before you can stand up four square against every wind that blows, remember, I say to you, that you have got to be clean yourself.

Here, along comes a fellow and says: "Oh, our officers are so bad." Do you know what that reminds me of? That doesn't remind me of a thing on earth. Supposing a man came down here from some other planet, if they have men there. We will say that he comes down from Mars to Wichita Falls, and he learns our system, and our way of doing things, and our primary and general election, and our constitution, and all those things, and finds out that we have officials. Now, here is an outsider, he doesn't care anything about us, he is going back to Mars in a few days, wouldn't he naturally conclude that the officers were just like the people that elected them? Is that fair? Wouldn't he naturally go home and report to his people that "down there in Texas, they elect their own sort to office." Now, you don't know what I am fixing to say. I am fixing to say something now that I think is important.

You talk like you could go out here and throw your officers out of office, and put in some more, and have everything sailing sweetly. Nothing could be more shallow and foolish, than that idea. You can only put the right kind of men in office when you have the right kind of people to put them there. What is that old proverb—"Like people, like priest?" Now, I am not critizing the officers here, this morning, of Wichita Falls, either. I don't know anything about these charges that are being bandied about here. I don't know whether they are true or false. I don't condemn people without knowing something about them. But, I am just saying that the time to complain of your officers is at the ballot box. Here gets up a statesman out here, and says that "we are a free people." You are a free people just as you stand over the ballot box, with that ticket in your hand, but the minute that you let that ticket drop into the little crack that you put it through, you delegate your power to somebody else, and you are not free. You are a judge maker, a mayor maker, a president maker, just before you let the ballot drop, but, when it drops, that power has been delegated to that official that you have selected.

You know, over there in Arabia, when they swear in the king, or when they used to swear him in, they made him take an oath. We do here in Texas. We have got the most glorious oath here for our official. Here in Texas, before a man can assume the robes of office, he has got to swear that he will not fight a duel. That suits him exactly, because he wouldn't fight one, anyhow. And, thus we pay tribute to the ghosts of the dead. That is a fine modern view of things, to jerk up a constable here and make him swear that he won't fight a duel, and never did fight one. But, over there in Arabia, in the desert sands, they made the king hold up his hand to Almighty God and swear that he would never appoint any man to office if there was a better man in the kingdom for the job. We need something like that here.

So, I am just saying to you, this morning, though we're getting a good way away from the lesson, let us walk down the street and say that "times may be getting worse, that Wichita Falls may be getting worse, but that, as for me—I, even I—I am going to do better than I have heretofore done.

Autos Driving Wild Life Wilder

SEATTLE.—Long suffering deer, elk and bears in Woodland Park, Seattle's zoological tract, verged so vividly on nervous prostration this summer that movements were set afoot to provide them new quarters. Fumes and noises from automobiles and the chatter of the crowd have been too much for them. Other animals in the park do not seem to mind civilization.

The deer and elk are confined in half-acre tracts which are bounded on three sides by roads crowded with traffic. The bears are in cages of steel and concrete.

Plans for relief centered on quarters deeper in the park, which contains 200 acres, covered in large part with heavy Douglas fir forest.

The various woods contained in the pavilion came from the Ivory Coast, Indo-China, Siam, the Congo, French Guiana, Southern Gabon and Madagascar.

Skilled workmen, mostly graduates of the Havre technical school were selected to build the pavilion.

Haskell

A director and camera man were in Haskell last week making street scenes and pictures of the West Texas Utilities company properties for a two-reel industrial picture of the company. They are having pictures made of the majority of their properties in West Texas and these will be shown in some of the northern states as well as in West Texas.

A new addition is being built to the Haskell laundry which will double the capacity of the floor space and give the much needed room for the machinery which has been entirely too crowded for the patronage the laundry is receiving. The total floor space with the new building will be around 4,000 square feet, which will give much more convenience to the working force of the laundry. Mr. Tubb, the manager will also install a carpet cleaner.

The Nairn-Albiets company of stock players opened an engagement at Haskell Monday night and will remain here all of this week.

Upper Classmen To Run School

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Calif.—At the beginning of the fall term, in October, Stanford university will give especially qualified junior and senior students the run of the university.

They will be permitted to map out programs of study leading to definite ends and, with the advice of professors, carry out these plans in any way they prefer.

President Ray Lyman Wilbur explained that this was not a device to make college work easier.

"On the contrary," he said, "It is a scheme to make college work sufficiently hard to give exceptionally able students a chance to extend themselves and go as fast as they are able, instead of lagging along and marking time with less gifted fellow students. At the end of their course they will have to pass stiff examinations to prove their knowledge, and they will be checked up and tested at intervals by faculty advisers.

American Anthems To Peal Christmas

BRUSSELS.—The American delegation to the Congress of the International Chamber of Commerce here had the chance to assure for all time the playing of the American national anthem to the people of the town of Nivelles, Belgium, every Christmas morning. The only condition was that they find an American Santa Claus to present the town with a new set of chimes.

A letter to that effect was posted on the bulletin board of the delegation but at the time the congress adjourned it was still awaiting acting action. Many members of the delegation thought they had already acted the part of Santa Claus toward a considerable number of Belgian merchants, hotel keepers and shop keepers.

STREET TRAFFIC HEAVY.

Berlin Laughs at Idea It Is Paralyzed as Result of War.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Heavy vehicular traffic in Berlin belies the idea that the city is still in a more or less paralytic state from the effects of the war, according to a traffic census taken recently by the National Zeitung at Potsdamer Platz.

Crossing this square, the center of traffic in Berlin, approximately 1,461 automobiles, 1,261 bicycles, 300 street cars, 162 buses and 179 sundry vehicles were counted in one hour. Subway tunnels of the Platz have been proposed as one means of relieving the traffic congestion.

LONG TRIP ON CYCLE

Argentine Sportsmen Coming to New York Via Side Car

BUENOS AIRES.—Two Argentine sportsmen, Messrs. Braun and Schik, are at present engaged upon an attempt to reach New York by motorcycle, with sidecar, the machine being of American make.

The travelers left Port Madryn, Patagonia, May 17, and recently passed through Buenos Aires. They intend proceeding via Rosario, crossing the Bolivian frontier at La Quiaco to La Paz, proceeding thence through Peru, Ecuador, Colombia, Central America and Mexico to New York.

He Gets Bear, And Then It Gets Him

YAKIMA, Wash., Aug. 9.—Big game hunting by automobile is not so good, L. D. Gaines, driver of an oil truck, is convinced, after an encounter he had with a black bear, while on the Rimrock road, in the Cascade mountains, east of here, recently.

When first seen, the animal was loping along the highway ahead of him, Gaines related. Speeding up his machine, he forced the creature toward the rocks at one edge of the road. Suddenly turning, the bear sprang onto the hood of the truck, but skidded off, fell under the wheels, and lay still.

To take home proof of his prowess, Gaines returned and grasped the bear by an ear. The truck massage however, had not killed, only dazed him, and the animal sprang up with an angry "Woof!"

At this point Gaines decided to allow the bear his life and liberty, and sped back to his machine without dignity and only a part of his trousers. The bear disappeared up a canyon.

SUGAR CROP SHORT.

Small Harvest of Beets In Bulgaria to Cause It.

SOFIA, Aug. 9.—Due to a smaller harvest of beets, Bulgaria's sugar crop is expected to fall far short of that of last year, when the country had sugar to export. The reason is said to be due partly to the refusal of the factories to furnish beet seed to the peasants.

Last year there was such a bumper crop of beets and so much sugar manufactured that the price dropped. The manufacturers are said to have guarded against a similar situation this year with the result that many beet raisers withheld the seed from the farmers. Thus the beet acreage was greatly reduced and it is predicted that Bulgaria will be obliged to import sugar from Czecho-Slovakia.

NEGROES TOLD TO STAY OUT OF "CONGRESS"

Labor Organization Head Issues Warning to Blacks In Unions

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—(AP)—A warning to negro members of trade unions not to attend the American negro labor congress at Chicago, Oct. 25, was issued today by President Green of the American Federation of Labor.

Declaring his organization had not approved the meeting, he asserted that communists had called it to mislead negroes into believing "all their grievances will be remedied by overturning the government of the United States and establishing a soviet republic" and to "instill into the lives of that race the most pernicious doctrines and race hatred."

Citing "glittering phrases" used in the call for the congress, he said "negroes are led to believe that the dark races of the world are in rebellion against the whites and that all they need to do is to form an American labor congress and all social, political and economic discrimination will be wiped out."

The originators of the congress, from their headquarters in Chicago, he asserted are conducting a number of communist organizations with interlocking directories working under the direction of Moscow.

"A number of unions composed of colored men have been deceived into sending delegates," said Mr. Green. "They have been led to believe they will attend a convention of union negroes. The fact is that the convention was called by men who are not members of trade unions or if they are, they do not attend the unions of which they are members. The organized labor movement is expelling communists as rapidly as they are found out.

West Is Ripe For Democratic Move

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Advised that the west is ripe for a great democratic movement, Chairman Oldfield, Arkansas, of the democratic congressional committee has completed plans to leave August 15 for a tour of Nebraska, Colorado, Utah, California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Ohio.

"Democratic leaders tell me," he said in a statement today, "that the western farmers are disgusted with this administration with its protective tariff which protects only the rich, with its unfilled promises of agricultural and general prosperity, with its false claims of economy and its flat declaration to the farmers to work out their own salvation. A democratic congress would correct these evils. This is the fact I am going to drive home."
