THREE TEXANS KILLED IN OIL REFINERY BLAST

Cloudburst Descends On Forgan, Okla., As Scattered Rains Benefit Crops

PLAINS SECTION GETS MOISTURE AFTER DROUTH

Extended Dry Weather Is Checked in Portions of West Texas

FIVE INCHES IN HOUR

Rich Wheat Producing Area Drenched by Unusual Downpour

While most of Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma were tantalized by light showers that hardly more than checked the progress of the spring drouth, a terrific cloudburst drenched a half mile strip around Forgan, Okla., in five inches of rain between 6 and 7 o'clock Friday afternoon. Heavy rains were also reported at Woodward, Okla., and other points near the Oklahoma terminus of the Katy railroad.

The downpour reached a heavy wheat growing area hard hit by the prolonged dry weather and promised salvation to thousands of acres of grain.

Wheat Benefited

Rain in sections of West Texas reached beneficial proportions, bringing relief to wheat growers and cattle men who have been watching the ranch land parch under an unseasonable sun. Lockney, Plainview, Lubbock, Floydada and Haskell reported saving showers with cloudy weather promising more rain.

Light sprinkles, similar to that which fell in Wichita Falls were reported along the Denver road from Childress to Bowie, but a one-half inch rain was welcomed by cattlemen and wheat growers in and around Dalhart. The precipitation here measured only .04 of an inch and skies cleared to admit a bright sun before nightfall Friday.

The following reports were received in the office of The Record News late Friday:

CROWELL: Very light rain fell in Crowell and Foard county Friday. The sky was still overcast Friday night.

PLAINVIEW: Rain varying from one quarter to three-quarters of an

Prison Fire Toll Increased to 320

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 25. (AP)—The open revolt of Ohio penitentiary convicts, opposed to the rule of Warden Preston E. Thomas, simmered down to a peaceful state today and, with things quiet at the prison, Governor Cooper's investigating committee completed its inquiry into the fire that claimed 320 lives.

Investigators finished their task after hearing conflicting testimony of five prison guards who were in G and H cell blocks after fire broke out in the roof last Monday night.

Two more fatalities were added to the death list today, raising the total from 318 to 320. Scores of injured still were in the prison hospital, a number of them expected to die.

M. J. Bashara, Pioneer Oil And Business Man in North Texas, Dies at Home Here

M. J. Bashara, leading oil operator and builder in Wichita Falls section for many years, succumbed to a long illness at his home, 1000 Van Buren street, about 11:30 Friday evening. Funeral services have been tentatively set for 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Since 1915, Mr. Bashara has held a prominent position in the oil activities in many Texas fields, centering his activities in and around Wichita county. His name early became significant in the development of the adjacent fields and his widespread business enterprises have played an important part in the history of the section.

Born in Syria 62 years ago, Mr. Bashara came to the United States in his early boyhood. From a comparatively small beginning he developed a flourishing mercantile business in several eastern and midwestern states.

More than a quarter of a century ago he transferred his business interests to Texas, establishing himself first in the south, and later moving to Electra, where he carried on his mercantile interests. During his stay in South Texas he made extensive purchases of oil lands, later become one of the largest royalty owners in the state.

In 1915 he moved with his family to Wichita Falls. His enterprises included a major part in the building and operation of the American Refinery, a part in the building of the Staley building and the direction of many other important North Texas projects.

Friends and business associates of Mr. Bashara describe his long business career in the United States as full of color and drama, bordering at times upon the spectacular through the vicissitudes of numerous huge financial ventures. One of the latest successful operations accredited to him and his sons is the opening of a new field near Wink where a discovery oil and gas well has just been completed.

M. J. BASHARA

For the past two years Mr. Bashara has been waging a losing fight against illness. He was recently brought back to Wichita Falls after a futile effort to regain his health in California. He is survived by his widow, a daughter, Miss Sadie Bashara, and three sons, Abe, Joe and Sam Bashara, all of Wichita Falls. Funeral arrangements will be under the direction of the Merkle Undertaking company.

Jury Fails to Reach Verdict In Imperial Wizard's Libel Claim

Count Stands 9 to 3 for Damages During 30 Hours After Deliberations Are Begun in Dallas Trial

DALLAS, April 25. (AP)—Unable to agree after nearly 30 hours of deliberation, the jury considering the $150,000 libel suit brought by Dr. Hiram Wesley Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, against the Austin American, was dismissed late today.

The foreman said that since the first ballot the jury had stood 9 to 3 for assessing damages against the American.

Evans, former official of the Dallas klan and a dentist, based his suit upon the American's report of a speech by Gen. M. M. Crane before the Democratic state convention of 1924. The particular paragraph he contended was libelous follows as it was introduced into the trial record:

"Then they talk about honesty. No one dare say Mrs. Ferguson is not honest. What is the record of the klan on honesty? Evans and Simmons split $150,000 suckers' money. What would they do to the state treasury? The dragons and titans boss the klan worse than plantation owners bossed the slaves." Mrs. Miriam Ferguson, wife of the former governor, was elected governor that year.

This paragraph, Dr. Evans testified, caused him to suffer mortification "and other emotions." He denied profiting from the transaction to which Crane referred, the payment of approximately $150,000 to W. J. Simmons, former imperial wizard, for which Simmons relinquished all claims upon the invisible empire.

'Bribery' Charge Precedes House Passage Of Rivers-Harbors Bill

WASHINGTON, April 25. (US)—The house late today passed the $110,000,000 omnibus rivers and harbors bill. It provides for a 10-year program of inland waterways improvements to supplement projects heretofore authorized by congress.

A charge of "bribery" was made by Representative LaGuardia, Republican, in moving to strike from the bill a provision to allow Brig. Gen. Herbert E. Deakyne, to retire with the rank of major general. Deakyne is assistant chief of army engineers.

Protesting against inclusion of such a provision in an omnibus rivers and harbors bill the New Yorker waved his arms at Chairman Dempsey, of the rivers and harbors committee and shouted:

"That's not legislation that's bribery."

Faces Dempsey

When Dempsey made no reply, LaGuardia strode over in front of him and demanded:

"Why don't you say something?"

Representative Hudson of Michigan, a Republican member of the river and harbors committee, said he had heard the proposition discussed in committee but did not know of its inclusion in the bill until he saw the printed copy.

The bill was denounced as a "pork barrel" by Representative Frear, Republican, Wisconsin, as a bitter attack was launched on the provision for federal acquisition of the Erie canal.

"This bill is one of the worst I ever heard of in the history of pork barrels," the Wisconsin member shouted. "There are 156 projects and 346 surveys in this measure. They are put there to get votes. The whole thing is a pork barrel."

SCHOOLS COUNT 11,034 PUPILS

Wichita Population 47,403 On This Basis

Wichita Falls population is approximately 47,403, regardless of just what figures Uncle Sam arrives at in his census, it was learned Friday in the report of the scholastic census of the Wichita Falls independent district.

The school census, according to figures released by officials, shows an enumeration of 11,034 scholastics in the independent district between the ages of 6 and 17 years. In 1920, the date of the previous U. S. census, Wichita Falls had 5,792 scholastics enrolled between the ages of 7 and 17.

Figures given by Dr. J. W. Cantwell, superintendent of city schools, listed 500 children as residents of the district but not within the corporate limits of the city of Wichita Falls. Deducting this number from the total, the net for the city would be 10,534. Statistics show that for every scholastic in a city there are approximately 4½ residents, giving the total population of Wichita Falls as 47,403.

While the scholastic census will have no bearing on the government canvass, the figures compiled by the schools bears out the contention of chamber of commerce leaders here that many residents are still unlisted in the Wichita Falls count. T. L. Ball, census supervisor, has declared that returns will be completed here about Tuesday or Wednesday next week, leaving two or three days in which residents still may be counted. An enumerator will be sent to any part of the city to list uncounted persons if notice is given Mr. Ball at 2-5930 before the closing day.

800 TEACHERS ATTEND MEET

Educational Leaders in Addresses Here

Approximately 800 persons including about 500 out-of-town guests attended the initial meeting of the Northwest Texas Teachers' association which opened at the Junior college Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

Dr. J. W. Cantwell, superintendent of city schools gave the welcoming address in which he discussed several points on "Why We Should Have a Northwest Texas Teachers Association." Doctor Cantwell pointed out that Texas is too large for a state organization of this kind and many times teachers who attended the state conference did not get the information they wanted because there were too many phases to be taken up.

The response to the welcome address was given by W. A. McIntosh, of Amarillo who paid tribute to Wichita Falls' school spirit which he said was worked out on a well grounded citizenship basis.

"The main compensation we teachers get in our line of work is the knowledge that we have done our work well and our first consideration is the morale of a rising generation," Mr. McIntosh said.

"The Problem of Higher Education as Related to Texas State Government" was discussed by Dr. J. A. Hill, president of the West Texas State Teachers' college at Canyon.

"The question of higher education is a question upon which there is a great variety of public opinion," Doctor Hill pointed out. "According to the college world it requires $500 to send one person to the university for one year and Texas is spending about half that much. The method of appropriation in this state is exceedingly clumsy

EXPLOSION OF TOWER STILL CLAIMS LIVES

Fourth Man Expected to Die Following Port Arthur Mishap

BUCKET SAVES LIFE

Identification of Mangled Bodies Proves Task For Officials

PORT ARTHUR, Texas, April 25. (UP)—Killed when a still in the Texas company refinery here exploded in a high-pressure tower late today, three men, burned and mangled almost beyond recognition, were recovered.

A fourth man, believed to be burned fatally, also was rescued from the blazing inferno.

The dead:

P. Kebodeaux, 39, a still cleaner; C. C. Wilburn, 26, still worker; Claude Broussard, 35, still worker.

Rene Herbert, 28, who saved himself from certain death by throwing a large bucket over his head and shoulders, probably will die, physicians said tonight. He was burned badly about the body. He was unconscious when dragged out of the still tower.

W. K. Holmes, refinery superintendent, said a break in the vapor line leading to the power still cleaner, caused the explosion.

Flames were hurled into the still after the power cleaner, being used on a steel casing, exploded and burst into flames.

Immediate identification of the bodies was impossible because of their badly burned condition. Officials first had to check company records to determine who had been working in the still tower at the time.

An investigation into the explosion was started by Holmes and other officials.

CARESSE — A Complete Novel — By Ruth Taylor

CHAPTER I

Caresse O'Neill, in her bridal array, stood in the middle of her bedroom, staring at the note she had just read.

The blood drained from her cheeks, and she lifted her stricken gaze to the two girls who were preening themselves before her, chattering and fluttering like bright birds. They were preparing for a wedding, to be solemnized in five minutes downstairs, in the parlor of Shady Lawn Inn, Caresse's home.

The daughter of the inn-keeper was to be married to Teddy Barnard—care-free Teddy, happy-go-lucky, sleek of hair and brown of eye. Teddy, the son of Riverton's richest, sternest man.

Miriam Nowell stopped midway in a sentence as she saw Caresse's face.

"C'resse!" she cried. "Oh what is it? What's the matter?"

Caresse laughed mirthlessly and held out the note between her fingers gingerly as though it might burn her.

"This," she said. "Ted's father just brought it."

Through narrowed eyes she watched Miriam and Bess Parker read the missive, Bess craning on tiptoe to look over Miriam's shoulder. Her lips curled in an odd smile.

The note was short for one that meant so much.

"Dear Caresse," it read:

"Haven't we made a mistake? Dad and Mother think so, and after a long confab with them, I believe they're right. I'm not cut out for a good husband, Caresse. You know that. Even if I'm doing this at this late day, you'll thank me. You ought to. Sorry, old dear, and all that.—TED.

"P. S.—Dad gave me the car I've been wanting. Gone riding in it. See you some more when I get back.—[illegible]

Miriam smoothed her pink organdie bridesmaid's frock nervously and swallowed.

"What," she asked in a meek little monotone, "are you going to do, Caresse?"

"Do? Please go away—I've got to think. No, stay here," as they started to the door. "I don't want to think."

But she was thinking of many things, her mind a jumble of resentment and humiliation. She turned and walked to the window, gazing out with unseeing eyes at the dreary drizzle. She was thinking of Teddy. Had she ever loved him as she thought she did? It didn't seem possible now.

Bess and Miriam slipped an arm each about her waist in a protective way. That was better than words. She knews they would stand by her. But what of the rest of the town? Would they believe the truth, that she was in no way to blame? How could she face those people waiting downstairs?

That Teddy could have done such a thing! In such a cruel way! Surely she must be dreaming.

Her glance wandered about the room. No, she was awake. She recognized all the familiar things—the table by the bedside, on it the blue garters with the rosebuds: the book she had read herself to sleep with; her slippers upturned beside the chair where she had sat to put on her dainty sun-tan stockings; the hole in the couch cover; her blue rayon bedspread. She saw them through a haze.

"Did you see Mr. Branard?" asked Bess, hesitantly.

"Didn't want to see him. He's downstairs with mother now. Oh, forget the Branards, while I think of what to do. Let's do something—we can put my things away, for one thing!"

But all the time, Caresse was wondering what Ted's father could possibly be saying to her mother in the dining-room. She had been determined to marry Ted in the face of his parents' opposition, largely because they had looked down on her hardworking, beloved parent.

And just now her mother was standing quietly, proudly, before the man whose son had gaily ridden away on his marriage day, looking him straight in the eyes, disconcertingly, as he tried to falter a sort of excuse.

"And—er—so, Mrs. O'Neill," he was saying, with something less than his usual dignity, something more of embarrassment, "of course we realize the matter should not have been allowed to go so far, but not until this morning could I get my son to listen to reason. I—ah—have arranged with my lawyers—any sum that—"

"I see," said Mrs. O'Neill, deliberately. "Your son is purchasable—for a motor car. But my daughter's happiness is not for sale. At any price. Good morning, Mr. Branard. I have much to do."

As though her mind were in no way concerned with any downstairs conversation, Caresse was talking volubly.

"Like this dance set?" she asked the girls, holding up a sheer bit of black chiffon lingerie with splashing red roses.

"Sweet," murmured Miriam.

"And here's the sports suit. For the car—we were going honeymooning in Ted's old boat—"

She lifted an orange-striped sweater and a little pleated skirt and shook them out.

"Good for this summer, they'll be! Nothing lost, I'd say. Except Teddy. And he's no loss."

Miriam stood off, with hands on hips, and regarded her curiously.

"C'resse O'Neill," she declared,

Kohler Smiles At Testimony

COURTROOM, SHEBOYGAN, Wis., April 25. (UP)—A ruler and a tally sheet were pressed into service to estimate the amount of personal correspondence Gov. Walter J. Kohler wrote during his campaign for the Republican gubernatorial nomination when a sharp tiff developed today over the question at the governor's trial on a charge of excessive campaign expenditures.

Governor Kohler, immaculate in a dark blue dougle-breasted suit bearing a white carnation in the lapel, looked on from the witness stand in seeming amusement as the trivality assumed mountainous proportions.

Governor Kohler was recalled to the stand when court opened, but after only a few questions and a prolonged argument, he was excused and other witnesses were called.

A brief case brought into the courtroom by George L. Meyer, the governor's secretary, led to the argument. The case was said to contain Kohler's personal correspondence during the disputed campaign, which Special State's attorney Harold M. Wilkie seeks to prove should constitute part of the expenses of winning the nomination.

"The letters will make a stack 14 or 15 inches high," Wilkie told the jury.

"If you stand the brief case on end, they will," said Judge Gustav Gehrz.

Harry Butler of the governor's counsel then challenged Wilkie's estimate of the size of the pile.

"If you are going to measure the height of that pile of letters, I suggest that all filing cases, envelopes or containers be removed," said the governor.

The state's attorney snapped, "well, then, we'll count them," and the issue was closed.

Counsel for both sides agreed to a week-end adjournment of the trial at the close of today's session, to permit states attorneys to examine the files of the governor's correspondence during the campaign and other records available at the Kohler plant tomorrow.

Aged Cattleman Calls on Comrades To Immortalize Old Chisholm Trail

P. P. Ackley, 72-year-old campaigner for establishment of a national highway from Canada to Mexico along the line of the old Chisholm cattle trail, arrived in Wichita Falls Friday to carry on the work which he began several years ago. The aged cattleman recently offered $1,000 toward construction of a monument to commemorate the pioneers of the cattle trail at a point on the Red river between Texas and Oklahoma.

Last fall he set out from his home in Elk City, Okla., and drove through 12 states, across the Canadian border and back through Idaho, Wyoming, Montana, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico and the Panhandle, back to his home and then across Texas to Brownsville and into Mexico, advertising his plan to interest the government in designating a highway to preserve the old cattle trail.

"You old cowboys and cowboys' friends, come listenin' in, because us old timers are fast passing away and it will not be long until we are all gone," he said Friday. "Some now say we ought to get out of the way but come on, let's show this bunch a thing or two, because when we are through we want to leave something behind that will stay. And that will be the Chisholm highway so that when they go speeding along it their minds may carry them back to the frontier day when many a poor cowboy was laid away beneath six foot of clay."

and expensive and throws the colleges and grade schools into competition with each other. One of the two should be taken off the state's hands."

In his discussion of "Classification of Rural Schools," H. L. Goerner of Dallas stated that "as far as thought is concerned, there is no classification of rural schools but in reality it is the most important factor of public education. Every child should have the same opportunity for education and unless that theory is sound, the whole school system is based upon false principles."

H. D. Fillers, president of the organization talked on "The Limits of Progress" in which he emphasized the fact that if the public could be made conscious of the real problems of rural schools a great contribution will have been made to the state. The limits of progress today do not compare with the limits of progress 10 years from now" he pointed out.

Special music was given by the high school and Junior college orchestra under the direction of Mrs. Hermione Vaughan after which the Junior college boys' quartet gave several numbers. H. A. Glass, superintendent of Zundelowitz school, presided as master of ceremonies.

P.-T. A. Frowns on Silk Hose and High Heels

DALLAS, April 25. (AP)—Flaying sheer silk underwear, high-heeled slippers and "extreme dresses" for school wear, parents and teachers of this section started a movement here today to have middy blouses, simple dark skirts and low-heeled shoes made compulsory for girls attending Texas public high schools.

A motion to this effect, presented by Mrs. L. J. Wathen of Dallas, was endorsed by delegates to the annual convention of the second district, Texas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher association.

Extravagant dress among well-to-do girls is the cause of many unfinished educations among the less fortunate class which cannot afford such clothes. Mrs. Ella Caruthers Porter of Dallas said.

General on Plains

FLOYDADA—The Floydada trade territory received a one and one-half inch rain Thursday night and Friday, relieving dry weather conditions that threatened the small grain crops.

HASKELL—Showers that measured close to one inch fell in the Haskell teerritory Friday morning. The precipitation was slighter here, but reached beneficial proportions in and around Rule.

LOCKNEY—Floyd county welcomed drouth breaking showers Friday morning. At Lockney .76 of an inch was reported, and the down pour extended over most of the county. The wheat acreage which has not already been plowed under will be substantially helped.

GRAHAM—Light showers which fell here Friday are believed to have had little effect on the parched fields of the section.

DALHART—Brisk showers brought relief to farmers and cattlemen here Friday morning. The precipitation measures one-half an inch in most parts of the county.

WAURIKA, Okla.—Showers fell here between 1 and 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, but are believed to have had small effect in breaking the drouth.

MANGUM, Okla.—Showers Friday and heavy clouds Friday night brought hopes of an end to the long spring drouth.

CHEST BOARD CUTS BUDGET

Funds of Agencies Reduced 20 Per Cent

A cut of at least 20 per cent in the amount originally allowed for the community chest organizations was made at the regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of the chest held in the directors rooms of the City National bank Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

Instead of the $60,832 originally divided between the 10 participating organizations, $53,703.03 was allowed, due to the fact that the $70,000 asked for in the last campaign was not secured. It was announced that if the collections fall below the expectations of the finance committee, the budget will suffer another drastic cut. A report from the special collector for the organization showed very little success due to a mistaken idea that pledges made in 1928-29 are not payable after the subscriber has made a new pledge for this year. It was also pointed out that no obligations could be binding on the organization unless previously approved by the finance committee.

The chest directors ratified the recent action of the executive committee in securing the services of the American city bureau of Chicago to conduct the 1930 campaign which will open Sept. 29 and continue through Oct. 4.

Permission was granted Miss Myrle Neely, executive secretary, to attend the Texas state conference of social workers meeting which convenes in Galveston May 1. Miss Neely will speak on "Transients and Their Effect on Social Agencies" at the conference. Miss Neely, who is the national council member of the American association of social workers, will also attend a dinner for that order while at the conference.

Those attending the meeting included George D. Fairtrace, J. H. Terrell, W. E. Wilson, J. F. O'Donohoe, F. R. Collard, E. A. Bebb, J. S. Bridwell, H. J. Awker, P. B. Roberts, Walter Robbins, Mesdames Carrie Joline, B. L. Fain, W. L. Robertson, G. R. Ellis, C. E. Basham, J. W. Akin and J. H. Allison.

Potato Cookery Simple, but Often Poorly Done, Says Mrs. Dawson

Cook May Even Make Failure at Boiling, Says Expert; Sunday Menu Lists Attractive Dishes

By MRS. ARCH DAWSON, B. S., M. A.
Written Especially for The Record News

Potato cookery is simple but is often very poorly done. In fact, it requires thought and care to cook perfectly this common food. Potato dishes must be served hot and they should be eaten as soon as they are removed from the fire. The French say, "Potatoes must never wait for the guest—rather the guest must wait for the potatoes."

Without doubt, potatoes are more often boiled than cooked by any other method as many potato dishes call for boiled potatoes. Boiling is a simple method of cooking. Yet, very often, because of careless cooking, potatoes are served discolored, soggy and half-warm instead of snowy-white, mealy and hot.

Potatoes may be boiled before or after paring. But since valuable mineral salts and starch are lost in the water during cooking, when the potatoes are peeled, it is far better to leave the peeling on. The skins should be thoroughly scrubbed with a vegetable brush to remove all dirt before boiling. If you prefer to cook potatoes without the skins, pare them thinly and use the potato water in sauces and soups. Another important principle to observe is to drop pared potatoes in cold water to cover as soon as possible after pealing to avoid discoloration. Pared potatoes may be left in cold water over night so they may be peeled hours before cooking time.

Boiled potatoes may be either steamed or cooked in a small quantity of boiling water. Never start them in cold water. After they are all scrubbed or pared, drop them in a sauce-pan and add only enough boiling water to half cover the potatoes. Then cover them tightly and cook until tender in gently boiling water. Use one tablespoon of salt for every seven medium-sized potatoes. It should be added when the potatoes are half done. When tender, drain the little water that is left from the potatoes and shake uncovered over a low fire until they become dry, mealy and flakey. If they have not already been peeled, remove the thin peeling and place in a hot vegetable dish; sprinkle with paprika, finely chopped parsley and melted butter, allowing one teaspoon of butter to each medium sized potato.

Nothing can be more tempting than snowy mashed or riced potatoes. To make them perfectly, mash or press boiled potatoes through a ricer or a course seive into a hot fireproof dish, being careful to reduce all of the potatoes to a smooth mass. Season with salt, pepper, butter and hot milk allowing about one teaspoon butter and one tablespoon milk to each potato. They should be fluffy but stiff enough to stand when dropped from a spoon. Beat them until snowy-white, light, fluffy and creamy; place in the oven a few minutes to heat thoroughly and serve immediately. If it it necessary for mashed potatoes to stand place in the top of a double boiler; put boiling water in the lower part of the boiler and set over the fire uncovered. Pile them lightly in a vegetable dish and garnish with parsley and paprika.

If more potatoes have been mashed than can be used at one meal, drop while fluffy and hot on greased baking sheets and heat thoroughly, browning slightly in the oven when desired. These potato drops are attractive when served on a platter with broiled steak.

How to Bake

Many housewives complain that they are not able to make their baked potatoes dry, mealy and fluffy. No dish is easier to prepare than this. In baking potatoes, select smooth unblemished, medium-sized ones so that all will bake in the same length of time; scrub and dry them well and rub the skins over lightly with fat or cooking oil. Medium-sized potatoes should be baked in a hot oven at 400 degrees F for 45 minutes, while large ones should be baked at the same temperature for an hour. A good test for "doneness" of baked potatoes is to pinch them with the fingers, they should be soft enough to dent easily. When the potatoes are soft, remove them from the oven and slit the skin on top each way about an inch, thus forming a cross. Then, hold each potato in a clean cloth and with the fingers gently push the potato from the bottom until it breaks, all snowy white and fluffy, through the cuts in the top. Place a small piece of butter on top of each and sprinkle with paprika or finely chopped parsley. Baked potatoes must be served immediately or they will be soggy and moist.

Stuffed Baked Potatoes

Six medium sized potatoes.
Three tablespoons butter.
Four tablespoons hot milk.
One teaspoon salt.
One-eighth teaspoon pepper.
One-eighth teaspoon paprika.

Wash potatoes with a vegetable brush and soak in cold water one hour. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) 40 to 50 minutes. Cut across in the side of each potato skin and turn back corners. Scoop out the potatoes with a spoon, being careful not to break the skins. Mash and add butter, milk, salt, pepper and paprika. Beat until light and creamy. If desired potatoes may be sprinkled with grated cheese, or peas, or ham may be mixed with the mashed potato mixture before it is returned to the shell. Dot each potato with butter and return to the oven to brown.

Franconia Potatoes

Wash potatoes and let stand in cold water one hour. Pare and parboil 10 minutes; drain and put in pan with roast three-quarters of an hour before roast is done. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Baste them when meat is basted and bake until soft and well browned.

Savory Irish Turnover

To three cupfuls of hot mashed potatoes, add one-half of well beaten egg, two tablespoons of butter, one teapsoon salt and one-eighth teaspoon pepper. Turn onto a floured board; shape in an oval three-fourths of an inch thick; brush with one tablespoon melted butter and spread one-half with the following ingredients: One cupful of leftover minced ham or chicken, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon of pepper, and cream to moisten. Fold the remaining half over the filling and place on a buttered baking-dish. Brush the top 5:00 p. m.

Yesterday you left me and I was cool.
You wouldn't stay away; you're no fool.
If you haven't come by six, you won't come!
All day the clock's ticks struck me dumb.

5:20
If you never came again, should I cry?
Or should I hail the next lad passing by?

5:40
Will you not come back to me? Who can tell?
Twenty minutes of six now; clocks are hell.

6:20
Twenty after six; you know I must go.
God, how that time clock beats so slow!

6:30
So you're never coming back! I'm alone.
Well, at least my hell is all my own! —Aired.

Man About Town

The gayest of the Heartacre square asylums is the Abbey on Fifty-fourth street just this side of the canyon. It is where the night loafers pause with their magdalens before going home to their wives, after they have filled themselves elsewhere with Wyoming Ketchup. The syncopation never ceases from 11 p. m. until the following dawning, for when Jerry Friedman's tooters have failed to exhaust the tireless fox-trotters, they are replaced by the Croonaders, a trio of mad musicians, who sing and hoof as well. Between dances several models parade in their beads.

The Abbey, then, is Broadway's hottest spot, and not until all the others have pulled down their blinds does it play to capacity, although its audience changes at least twice before the curfew law for other clubs drives the late comers into the Abbey.

In a corner surrounded by men who are tailors, but who spend, droops a lass who was the class of the street less than a year ago. The market, she will say, made her what she is today, but some of us know that it was a lad she adored. Still beautiful, and gowned in last year's smart frocks, she keeps making believe that she still is in-the-dough, and although she has run the gamut of Broadway emotions you hope for her.

"If I only had some decency left," she says without whining. "If only I could hold my head high again I wouldn't regret a thing. I don't care what they are saying about my past. It isn't that. I know I am not on the hop anymore. But they are now saying I go for those Harlem brownskins and Japs and Chinkies and it is almost killing me. I wouldn't be so desperate now if I could get myself to care for a white man, but they are too cruel when they link my name with the others. I've got to like a feller—that's why I'm broke. This street sure has been unkind to me and I was a good guy when I had it, too."

One of the boys who was on the make a year ago joined her table. He had heard that she was having a difficult time of it. "What d'y'say, baby?" he cooed, "how about you getting to like me for a change and let me be nice to you. I need affection and you need coin. You know I can give you enough dough to keep those other wolves from your door." And so saying he brought out his checkbook and wrote one for $1,000.

She looked at the good-as-platinum draft as he prepared it. Then she placed it on the table before her. "That's a lotta money, daddy," she said with a forced smile. "Mama could do plenty with all that gold. Mama could pay off the old mortgage at the hotel and get respect from the clerk and bell-boys, and from the assistant manager, who wanted to put me out last night because I wouldn't be sociable. Mama sure could be happy for a little while, you bet. But I can't take it from you. I just can't. You wouldn't be a good guy and loan it to me for a while? I mean until I could pay you back, would you, please?"

"I hate to keep books, sweetheart," he countered. "I sure hate to keep books. I've got a crush on you, honest. Let me love you. Live for the moment, you never know what will happen tomorrow."

She ripped the check into bits and dropped the pieces on the table. "I've got to powder my nose," she said, "I'll see you later." And then she left the room.

"What a chump!" whispered the eavesdropper at the next table. "I can't believe my eyes," chirped another startled wisey.

"She slays me," chimed in another, "and she's so broke!"

Looking Through the Smoke Rings

WITH the sickening mental picture of 317 human beings burned or smoked to death having receded somewhat by the passage of a few days, two features of the week's events at the Ohio state penitentiary are gaining prominence in public thought of the situation at Columbus.

A phase of the tragedy which intrigues one's thought is the record of the prison's "bad eggs" both during the fire and in the subsequent revolt which now smoulders threateningly. Release from their cells both as a precaution against unnecessary increase of death's harvest and in order that they might render aid, prisoners in the penitentiary displayed a wide variety of dispositions in the emergency. Some went beserk; some were apathetic; some were dangerously rebellious; but the "bad eggs," the most hardened criminals of the almost 5,000 confined there, contributed the deeds of heroism which mitigated the sweep of death and destruction. Outcasts in the prison community because of incorrigibility, these hard-boiled members of "company K" were heroes during the fire, and now are firm hold-outs in the rebellion among the convicts.

Therein lies an interesting commentary on human nature. The man who is of definite stamp, positive in his character, will react positively in any situation. Society is compelled to admire, in many instances, the dynamic capacity of men who unquestionably have the strength to be masters of their fate, but who through some peculiar quirk of heredity, environment, or disease receive warped rudders which steer them squarely against the current of conventional conduct. Compelled by the demands of general good to imprison such characters, we find our condemnation of their deeds strangely tempered by regard for their rugged courage and in most cases, a ready willingness to sacrifice their own lives for humanitarian purposes. Ultimately, one finds himself hoping that evolution of social science will discover means of salvaging such valuable material, purged of its dross.

Another element in the catastrophe and current uprising will be noticed: it registers further definite protest, from the standpoint of a reasoning intelligence, against prevalent punitive systems. Added to the numerous outbreaks of recent months, the Columbus affair inevitably will more effectively draw public thought to the question of crime, criminality, and punishment. The whole problem has in the past week increased its appearance of becoming nationally critical.

Society, as it is constituted, cannot condone violations of established rules of conduct. Neither does society wish to harbor dens in which human beings might be tortured needlessly, or burned by the hundreds. It may be that sheer necessity will force the application of more intense thought, and a resultant higher intelligence, into the avenues of crime prevention and punishmnt.

"I'm Sorry for My Wife"

IN LOS ANGELES a confessed murderer is awaiting trial.

In love with a married woman, he killed her husband. Now, caught, he is in jail, and he may be hanged. He says that he "feels better" now that he has confessed; but he adds:

"I feel very sorry for my poor wife. I wonder how I can explain all of this to her."

His bewilderment is only natural, at that. After all, it is a thing that will take a bit of explaining.

But the interesting thing is the way in which this gentleman follows the regular pattern that seems to be laid down for murderers of his type.

"I feel very sorry for my poor wife."

How often—how very, very often—have we not heard that unctuous statement from the lips of some man whose Lothario escapades have finally landed him in an inextricable jam? It seems to be the inevitable thing for a man to say when it is finally too late for his pity to be of any use. "My poor wife"—after he has broken faith irretrievably and wrecked her life to the full limit of his ability.

Dr. Snook said it, and Judd Gray, and other despicable specimens too numerous to mention. But why does it always have to come so late?

Murders like these—crimes of passion, as the French call them—are always the final climax to a long series of indiscretions and follies. They come when a situation has progressed so far, and has got its principals into such a hopeless tangle, that a deed of violence looks like the only solution.

But it is noteworthy that the men in such cases never stop to consider their wives until at last the catastrophe has come. Then they are full of pity. They berate themselves soundly, and beg forgiveness. And—wives being a long-suffering race—the forgiveness is usually granted.

It is all rather disgusting, and it puts the erring husband in a pretty poor sort of light.

Why, oh why can't a man who has put his foot into a mess like that take what comes to him without crawfishing? Why can't he understand that an expression of pity and a plea for forgiveness are worse than useless?

Probably that's too much to expect. There will always be a certain type of man who will follow his self-indulgence until it leads him to disaster; and that type, unless human nature changes, will always realize, just too late, that he has been a colossal sap, and will squeal that he really does love his wife very, very much after all.

Hoover's Troubles Come Early

JUDGE JOHN J. PARKER of North Carolina, nominated by President Hoover to be a member of the supreme court of the United States, appears to be traveling a rocky road. By a vote of 10 against to six for the judiciary committee of the senate declared against confirmation of the presidential nominee. A majority of both Republicans and Democrats on the committee voted against the North Carolinian whose nomination by the president aroused the fierce opposition of the labor organizations of America and negro organizations the country over.

As for the labor leaders they declare that Parker is the most obnoxious of injunction judges. As for the negro associations, their spokesmen say he is the unrelenting enemy of the black race.

Parker has two stalwart backers and friends—Senators Simmons and Overman of North Carolina, his own state. These distinguished gentlemen and national law makers promise to carry the contest to the floor of the senate. The Republican progressives led by Borah and Norris, are against Parker on his labor record, and promise to go down in the last ditch in the struggle to defeat his confirmation.

Senator Connally of Texas is said to be arrayed against Parker's nomination, while Senator Shephard has the matter under advisement. Thus, for the first time in many years, the senate judiciary committee has voted against the confirmation of a presidential nominee for an associate justice of the supreme court. All presidents have hard roads to travel near the finish of a second term. President Hoover is having a rocky road early in the second year of his first term.

The planet was first observed on Jan. 21 of this year by Clyde Tombaugh, a photographer of the Lowell observatory, at Flagstaff, Ariz., and later identified by Doctors Slipher and Lampland as the long sought transneptunian body, computed to be some 4,000,000,000 miles from the earth.

The boys are taught how to care for themselves, their home, and their clothes. They are taught not only how to earn but how to spend money. The meals are prepared and served by students and the entire domestic routine is managed under the supervision of but one resident master. To do this, the boys are divided into squads of five members, each under a leader appointed by the master. The school day begins with setting up exercises, followed by a hygiene lecture and then breakfast. Household chores follow in order, then morning assembly, and the school day proper starts at 8:30. By rotating lessons and employment every boy becomes familiar with some trade while studying at his own speed.

Q.—When did Tennyson become poet laureate of England?—L. P. M.

A.—Tennyson was appointed poet laureate upon the death of Wordsworth in 1850.

Q.—Are there flesh-eating ants in Africa?—N. H.

A.—The safari ant belongs to the sub-family Dorylinae of which the genus Dorlyus with several subgenera frequents nearly all parts of Africa. These ants usually make only temporary nests but spend most of their time wandering in long files. The size varies from quite minute forms to over one-half inch in length. The mandibles are very strong and the ant also has a powerful sting, and a swarm is able to kill animals or birds that it may come upon. These ants sometimes enter houses in search of vermin and on these occasions the people leave till the ants are through. The same general type of ant occurs in almost all the tropical countries except on islands. The female is without wings which makes its distribution to islands impossible.

A.—It is 1 p. m.

CARESSE ⚜ A Complete Novel By RUTH TAYLOR

Dear Caresse,

Haven't we made a mistake? Dad and Mother think so, and after a long confab with them, I believe they're right. I'm not cut out for a good husband, Caresse. You know that. Even if I'm doing this at this late day, you'll thank me. You ought to. Sorry old dear, and all that.

Ted

P.S. Dad gave me the car I've been wanting. Gone riding in it. See you some more when I get back.

Caresse O'Neill had been jilted! . . . With her home town to witness her humiliation.

"anybody'd think, to hear you, that you didn't care! Me—I'm pretty peeved about having no wedding party—no dance."

Caresse looked up quickly.

"Who said we wouldn't have a party?" she demanded. "'Course we are. Everything but the groom. And them as needs a groom to make 'em happy can go home. I was in a sort of tail spin for a minute. But I'll come out before I crash. Party?" she laughed. "I'll tell the universe—"

She stopped and pounded on her head with her knuckles, staring desperately, blankly, before her.

"I've got an idea, girls, a real idea. Speaking of a party—"

"What are you going to do, C'resse?"

"Watch me. See if the coast's clear, will you, Bess? I've got to do some heavy telephoning before I make my grand entry again. First, though—" she drew back her lips and carefully applied her lipstick—"I've got to mend my face."

As a usual thing Caresse, with her wonderful Irish coloring, did not use much make-up. Now she spread it on thickly. Cheeks were rouged pink, lips raspberry red beneath her Celtic black eyebrows and blue eyes and black hair. There was not much of the real Caresse O'Neill recognizable when she got through.

She bent closer to the mirror and examined the result. She smiled and nodded, and showed white, even teeth between parted red lips. She gave a twist to the flowered chiffon her mother had made for her wedding, and pattered her dark hair. She turned.

"There!" she announced. "All set. Come on. It's going to be a party, girls! How do I look? Hand over that bottle of 'L'Amie,' Miriam. Like some? Where's my handkerchief?"

She bumped into her mother as she ran out of the room.

"Caresse," her mother began apologetically, staunchly hiding the pain in her mother heart as she saw the girl's too-bright eyes, "Don't you think——"

"Haven't got time. We must do something. Run along downstairs and tell 'em something. The truth. We've got to face it, lady love; can't put it off. Say I'll be on hand for a solo wedding party in a minute."

"But Caresse, dear——"

"Don't argue. It's my party, isn't it? Can't I run it if I want to? Who knows when I'll ever have another wedding party of my own? Never, likely! I'm off men!"

Mrs. O'Neill's head shook, but she went slowly down the front stairs. Caresse, with Miriam and Bess following, went down the back way. Her mother could not imagine what the girl had in her mind to do, but she knew Caresse O'Neill's spirit well enough to know there would be no repining. If there was, no one would know.

Caresse went to the telephone in the hall near the kitchen door. From behind the door came the clatter of much preparation made by the three women hired for the occasion.

"Who you calling, C'resse?" whispered Miriam.

"Wait!"

In a moment the bell tinkled.

"Long distance—New York on the wire."

"Give me 0092 Wentworth," said Caresse. She waited.

"That you, Billy? Caresse."

"You—you little pulse disturber! Thought you were taking the big leap about this time."

"It's off, Billy. We——"

"Hooray and a couple of tigers. Say, Caresse——"

"Listen, Billy. You busy? All right. Here's what I want you to do. Hop the old mile-eater and come on out as quick as you can. There's going to be heavy doings at the O'Neill manse, and I want you, particularly. Particularly, hear? And I want you to be as sweet to me as——"

"Ask me something hard! What's the large idea? Had a change of heart? Not going to marry the merry gentleman who wears the golf pants?"

"Never mind. You'll come?"

"Let a traffic cop try to stop me."

"And bring Paul and another chap. I've two girl friends a little disappointed not to play bridesmaids. You'll come? Right!"

She hung up the phone and turned to the listening girls. "There!" she announced. "The party's off to a start!"

Bess giggled. Miriam drew a deep breath and exploded:

"Well, C'resse O'Neill, I must say for a disappointed bride, you're coming along!"

"Billy Parker! With scads of money——" began Bess.

"And strong for you, C'resse, ever since that country club dance last fall," added Miriam, eagerly. "And——"

"——Ted hates him!" completed Bess, triumphantly. "Oh, boy!"

After the first few awkward minutes of facing the guests who had come to see her married, and remained to see how she would take her jilting, Caresse did not find it hard. The music aided.

Caresse announced it was to be an all-day fete.

"It's my coming-out party," she declared. "I'm coming out of it, you know. Going to celebrate my release."

Some had thought they ought to go. Others acted as if a dire calamity had befallen. Caresse dispelled this impression.

"Hey, you two," she roundly rated Sam Barber and Eunice Pelham when they tried to sneak out the side way, "be yourselves. Why the long faces? Nobody's dead, or even passing out. Stick along, if you think so and see a lively wake. Come on, professor! Let's go!

'Picture you—up—on—my knee,
With tea for two—and two for tea,
With me for you—'"

"Meaning me, C'resse?"

The Carrington boy seized her as her feet tapped restlessly in time to the music and the words she softly hummed. They whirled down the length of the parlor, past the crayon picture of Caresse's father and mother, under which she had planned to be married. She did not glance at it. She was too busy looking at Bert Carrington. She was telling him:

"That's what they all need—a little jazz. They're fed up on the 'Hearts and Flowers' thing, and Mendelssohn didn't get a break."

A few thought there ought to be tears dripping about Shady Lawn inn. But there were no tears. Mrs. O'Neill, serving the "refreshments" was as smiling and cheerful as though there had been no humiliation or embarrassment. And Caresse!

"My dear," old Mrs. Horton, president of the Ladies' guild, whispered behind her hand to ancient Miss Elvira Lewis, who sat on the haircloth sofa beside her, "did you ever see the like? It's scandalous! Simply scandalous. The way that girl is carryin' on, laughin' and dancin' and all! Why, if 'twas me—"

Miss Lewis finished her forkful of chicken salad and took a bit of hot beaten biscuit.

"If 'twas me, I'd be hidin' my head 'stead of prancin' 'round. Jilted right at the church door, as one might say. I'd—"

As the biscuit went again to her mouth, she nodded vigorously. Miss Elvira had never had occasion to know, except in fancy, how she would act on any kind of wedding day of her own.

Her vis-a-vis leaned closer and whispered sibilantly: "You mark my words, Elviry Lewis, they's a lot we don't know. Look at Sheilah O'Neill. There's an indignant mother for you! Tryin' to make out she never wanted C'resse to marry Ted Branard nohow—talkin' about his bein' so irresponsible and flighty. She wouldn't be takin' it so light and gay if there warn't some secret—"

Miss Lewis cupped her hand to say in her ear:

"Y' think likely they got paid?"

Mrs. Horton was mysterious.

"I'm not sayin' I think anything—except there's a mystery somewheres. And that girl! Look at her!"

"Laws," complained the prim Miss Lewis, "how the young folks do dance these days. And that heathen music!"

Caresse was a picture at which to look, and she floated by in the arms of the Carrington boy. The orchestra was playing:

"I want to be loved by y-o-u-just y-o-u!"

Caresse hummed the words softly as she danced. Her eyes smiled coquettishly up into the eyes of the boy who held her.

He whirled her to a stop beside a window as the music died down. He held her at arms' length and looked at her admiringly.

"C'resse O'Neill," he said, fervently, "you're a dear!"

She laughed and shook her head.

"Wrong, Bert. You are kidding me."

"But how you're taking this—er—Wish I could get my hands on that stuffed shirt," he growled.

"Why worry? I'm not."

"You don't need to. Humph! You've had everything in pants you knew eating out of your hands since you were a kid. Me, too. All you need to do is to turn your smile on a fellow and blooie! Who'll be next, I wonder? I got a chance?"

Caresse shook her head.

"Nobody. Oh, I don't mean I'm off men. I like a good time too much, but I—I'm off the love stuff. That's all."

"Better watch yourself then. With a pair of eyes like yours—You mean you're not going to—"

"Not going to listen to the love stuff—except with both eyes wide open. It doesn't mean anything. There's the music! Sure I'll dance, Harold. 'Bye!"

To Caresse's disappointment, Billy Parker was delayed. She wanted him to play Romeo for the benefit of the villagers, but she had plenty of other attention. Billy and his friends arrived at 10 o'clock as the party was breaking up.

The feet of even Miriam, the indefatigable, and of Bess Parnell lagged, after the hours of merry-making. Only Caresse herself seemed tireless.

She whispered to the girls to wait. When she closed the front door on her last guest, she faced them, eyes sparkling.

"Now," she said, "the fun begins. The boys are waiting."

"For what?" yawned Bess.

"Why, we're going out to the Red Glen to dance, stupid. What did you think?"

"Dance! aunt! Why, C'resse, I've got bunions and 16 stone bruises and water blisters now."

"Oh, you'll get rested in the car. This, you know," she added impressively, "is my night. You've got to stay with me."

"I've got to go home, C'resse. My mother—"

"My mother has fixed that," said Caresse, airily. "She phoned it was necessary for you to stay here with the deserted bride."

"Oh, all right."

Ten minutes later, the three came downstairs, freshly rouged and powdered. Their eyes shone again.

"You sit with me, Caresse," said Billy. "I'm driving."

The others piled in, laughing, humming.

The rain had stopped, so the moon shone benignly down over the glistening tree tops.

"Gee," said Caresse, "this is good!"

"Boy! I'm tired," complained Bess.

"Lean on papa's shoulder," said Paul. "It's restful."

They were a noisy crowd, but Caresse suddenly noticed Billy was quiet. She leaned over and looked into his face.

"What's wrong, big boy? Peeved? What's Caresse done?"

He bent his head close.

"Just didn't want to speak out of turn. Trying to let you get over Ted a little. But you know you've got me going."

Caresse laughed teasingly.

When they reached the Red Glen, they knew the squat red house with the tall brick chimneys was a road house because the sign at the turn said so. There was a wide, glass-enclosed veranda with little tables and pink-shaded lights. A dance floor was inside.

A winking electric sign along the veranda top informed that "La Belle Gironda and her Honey Girls" were cavorting within. Easel signs beside the motor driveway further announced "Dancing" and gave the information that "Special Chicken" or "Blue Plate" dinners might be had for the asking—and the astonishing price.

The place was crowded. The late show was just starting.

"Care where you sit?" asked Billy as they went in.

Bess Parnell sighed, "Not so long as I can sit," she said.

Billy ordered a bite. The girls had no interest in food after Mrs. O'Neill's choice viands, prepared for her daughter's feast. Though they had danced away the afternoon and the evening so far, they did not want to see others dance. They wanted to dance themselves. Billy Parker wanted to hold Caresse in his arms.

He leaned over and spoke to her softly.

"Happy, Caresse?"

She nodded.

"You—you're not thinking of—of him, are you?"

"Why bring that up? I haven't gone into mourning."

"Be kind to me, Caresse," he coaxed. "I'm off my head about you, honest. If you try to give me the go-by again, I—I—well, I'm apt to wake up sobbing in my sleep."

Caresse blew him a kiss from her finger tips.

"Silly!" she scoffed. "Come on and dance!"

Members of the Unity club met at the Woman's Forum clubhouse in the closing session of the year when Mrs. J. C. Hunt presided in a business meeting and led the program on Italy. The first number was a splendid paper on "Modern Italy" by Mrs. Hunt, following which Mrs. C. Joline gave an interesting talk on "Italy's Agreement With the Vatican and Its Results." Mrs. Marvin Smith closed the program, finishing an outstanding year's study, with a most interesting paper on "The Modern Literari of Italy."

Friday Literary Club

Mrs. D. K. Bell entertained members of the Friday Literary club at her home on the Iowa Park road, where spring flowers made an attractive setting for the interesting program on Eugene O'Neill.

Members of the club answered the roll call with names of and quotations from the dramas of O'Neill. In the absence of Mrs. J. Will Gray, Mrs. Thelbert Martin was leader in the program and read the interesting paper prepared by Mrs. Gray on "Eugene O'Neill as a Dramatist." "The Strange Interlude" was reviewed by Mrs. W. B. Whiting who read the splendid paper prepared by Mrs. Harvey Harris.

The program closed with Mrs. L. R. Thurman's discussion of "Anna Christie."

A lovely refreshment plate was served to Mesdames F. M. Hansen, J. E. Kanatser, Thelbert Martin, J. J. Thomas, L. R. Thurman, W. B. Whiting, J. E. Zihlman, Earl Dayvault and the hostess, Mrs. Bell.

Coterie Club

Members of the Coterie club were delightfully entertained at the home of Mrs. Hubert Harrison, where the last study meeting of the year dealt with "Bolivia and the Foreign Owned Guianas." Roll call was answered with facts concerning education in South America.

Mrs. J. Wilkie Talbert read an interesting paper on "Bolivia, Past and Present," which was followed by Mrs. C. W. Boller's well told story of "La Paz, the Sunken City." "An Inland Sea on a Mountain Top," was the subject of an interesting paper by Mrs. Horrace Robbins and Mrs. J. C. Mytinger talked on "British, Dutch and French Guiana," in a well informed and interesting manner.

Mesdames Edgar Ratcliff and Charles Borland were welcomed as new members and Mrs. Harrison served a delicious refreshment plate to them and to Mesdames E. B. Bailey, E. P. Bass, C. W. Boller, C. P. Burton, A. D. Collins, Rhea Howard, Lester Jones, J. H. Massie, J. C. Mytinger, Horrace Robbins, C. D. Shamburger and J. Wilkie Talbert.

Story Telling Club

Mrs. W. A. Scarborough was hostess to members of the Story Telling group when R. W. Willis, E. J. Tschabold and J. E. Strong were welcomed as new members. The home was lovely with roses in luxuriant abundance.

With Mrs. O. H. Karr as leader, the roll call was answered with the names of each mother's children's favorite stories and a surprising number were reported to have named the "Three Bears."

The program was on "Children's Stories" and in the short business meeting, Mrs. W. H. Penix reported on the last story telling hour at the day nursery conducted by Mrs. Patrick Henry and Mrs. Penix. This club tells stories to the children at the nursery one Saturday of each month.

Stories told were "The Little Red Hen," by Mrs. W. C. Duncan; "The Lion and the Mouse," by Mrs. Harlod Murph and "The Story of the Pine Tree," by Mrs. Rex. Lindsay. Mrs. H. A. Glass told the ever interesting story of "Cinderella."

Mrs. Karr, as leader, told of the kind of stories children should read and where to find them.

After a pleasant social hour, during which Miss Billie Jean Scarborough gave two pretty piano numbers, a delicious refreshment plate was served to Mesdames P. B. Curd, Jack B. Dale, R. L. PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

The lacy leaves of a tree on the hospital grounds, outlined against the shining night sky, reminded us of the locust tree. And, almost as if we smelled the blossoms that make the air heavy with scent at this time of year, we were in Mississippi.

◆ ◆ ◆

There's a long drive down the banks of the Sunflower river where locust trees meet others, and make a green roof over the road. "Lover's Lane," they call it.

◆ ◆ ◆

Down the deep bank to the right, one may see the Sunflower winding in and out through the rich green vines and shrubs and trees that are mirrored in the glimmering water. And one may hear song birds of all kinds, and ever and again, the whistling call of the partridge, "Bob White! Bob White!" that always carries so clear and far and yet has a hint of loneliness.

◆ ◆ ◆

There's a clear wide place in the river they call "Mussell shoals," that is a favorite spot for little picnics; grownups pull off shoes and stockings and wade knee deep across the shallow waters spread over a bed of shells and clear from any mud. Memory can almost make us smell the bacon broiling on long wands above the fire.

◆ ◆ ◆

Always the thought of the old state brings with it the beauty of trees—of driving in spring through forests just putting on roseate colors and silvery greens and in the autumn where the woods outrival the colors of Oriental rugs.

◆ ◆ ◆

Such drives are different from those where the glare of the sun meets unprotected eyes; where grass and grain fields have turned sere, and waves of heat seem at times to meet and scorch you.

◆ ◆ ◆

We heard two lovers of trees discussing planting them on Texas highways at a forum luncheon last week. They had driven, the past season, through the deep Arkansas woods and past great forests in Tennessee, and they spoke with sorrow of the hundreds of old trees being circled for destruction in each state. Farmers are clearing more land each year.

◆ ◆ ◆

Texas women want to beautify Texas highways and work toward that end. But it is difficult; trees planted on the right-of-way of highways will almost surely be burned in autumn fires. Farmers do not want them on their land shading crops.

◆ ◆ ◆

But when the women of the largest state in the union back the movement, it grows and grows. They are back of beautification now.

◆ ◆ ◆

Some man talking over the radio the other night was rather hard on women in a comparative way; he said women loved little things like flowers round a doorstep; men loved big things, like skyscrapers.

Mrs. Dawson Gives New Recipes For Cooking Potatoes

with the other half of the egg and brown in a moderate oven.

Hungarian Murphies

Cook two and one-half cups of boiled potato cubes slowly in two tablespoons of hot butter until they begin to brown, seasoning with one-half teaspoon salt and one-half tablespoon of minced onion. Add a cupful of beaten sour cream and one-half teaspoon of paprika. Serve very hot sprinkled with minced parsley.

Golden Potatoes

Parboil small uniform sized potatoes in boiling salt water; drain and dry over the fire. Place in a frying basket and brown in very hot deep fat.

French Baked Potatoes

Pare six small potatoes, cut in eighths, lengthwise, soak in cold water for at least an hour, drain and dry thoroughly. Dip into two tablespoonfuls of melted bacon fat, seasoned with one-half teaspoonful of prepared mustard, salt and pepper to taste. Bake until tender, about one-half hour, in a covered casserole in a moderate oven, 400 degrees F. Uncover and brown before serving, garnish with parsley and sprinkle with lemon juice.

Stuffed Ham

2 slices ham.
2 tablespoonfuls flour.
2 cupfuls stale bread crumbs.
3-4 cupful hot water.
Salt to taste.
1-4 cup water.
1-4 teaspoon pepper.
1½ teaspoonful sage.
1-4 cupful chopped walnuts.
2 tablespoonfuls chopped olives.
1-2 cupful milk.
1 egg.

Have the ham cut about one-fourth in in thickness. Make a stuffing by moistening the bread crumbs with hot water and adding the egg, seasoning, nuts and olives. Rub flour over one side of each slice of ham. Turn, and on the other side of each spread the stuffing generously. Roll up and skewer with toothpicks. Place in a baking dish with the milk and water and bake about one hour at 400 degrees F., basting frequently. Make a gravy of the juices in the pan and serve with hot apple sauce. Serves six.

Stuffed Tomato Salad

Six medium-sized tomatoes.
1 green pepper.
3-4 cup chopped celery.
1-4 teaspoon salt.
1-4 cup chopped nuts.

Put tomatoes in boiling water for a moment to loosen skin. Peel and place in ice box to chill. Remove pulp from centers and drain off juice. Cut slice from top of pepper and remove seeds. Cut six small squares of pepper for garnishing and chop the remainder. Mix the tomato pulp, chopped pepper, celery, nuts and salt with enough mayonnaise dressing to hold ingredients together and fill the tomato shells with this mixture. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves, garnishing each with mayonnaise dressing and square of green pepper.

Chicken Scrapple

Carcass and bony pieces of one roast or boiled fowl.
1 teaspoon salt.
1-4 teaspoonful pepper.
1-4 teaspoonful paprika.
1-4 teaspoonful celery salt.
1 carrot.
1 small onion.
1 turnip.
2 stalks of celery.
1 cup white cornmeal.

Crack up the carcass of the chicken, cover with cold water, add carrot, onion, turnip and celery stalks and let simmer several hours. When the liquid is reduced to one quart, strain and add the bits of meat from the bones, cut fine. Add the salt, pepper, paprika and celery salt. Return to the fire and add the white cornmeal slowly, stirring constantly. Cook in a double boiler for one hour. Then pour into a greased shallow pan to cool. Cut in slices, roll in seasoned flour and saute until brown in a little hot fat. Farina or hominy grits may be used in place of the meal. Serves six.

Manhattan Salad

1 package lemon Jell-O.
1 pint boiling water.
1 tablespoonful vinegar.
1-2 teaspoon salt.
1 cup tart apples, diced.
1 cup walnut meats, chopped.
1 cup celery, diced.

Dissolve Jell-o in boiling water, add vinegar and salt, pour thin Jell-o to mold. Chill until firm. combine apples, nuts and celery and place in mold. Add remaining jell-o to mold. Chill until firm. Serve on crisp lettuce with mayonnaise dressing.

Pecan Rolls

Cream seven-eighths of a cupful butter with four tablespoons of sugar; add two cups sifted flour, two teaspoons vanilla, one teaspoon cold water and one cup finely chopped pecans. Pinch off dough with fingers and roll in palm of hand in pieces about two inches long. Cook in a slow oven about 30 minutes. When cool roll in powdered sugar. This makes about 100 small cakes.

Pretty Picnic Is Final Meeting Of New Century Club

A picnic on the Gilliland-Fisher farm lying off the Burkburnett road and noted as the beauty spot of this section of Texas formed the final meeting of the New Century club of which both Mesdames Gilliland and Fisher are members.

In the delightful day spent in the open, the only business was Mrs. R. W. Gutzler's report of the meeting of the first district, Texas Federation of Women's clubs, recently held in Stephenville. Her talk was extremely interesting, and following it the new yearbooks were distributed. The study for the next year will be "Neighboring Countries," including Canada, Mexico and South America.

At noon a delicious picnic lunch was served in the prettily furnished bungalow to Mesdames C. J. Barnard, W. P. Bolding, Fred T. Couper, W. D. Cline, C. B. Felder, J. A. Fisher, R. W. Gutzler, C. W. Gilliland, W. J. Grisham, C. R. Hartsook, T. T. T. Reese, M. D. Rowe, Mack Thomas and J. L. Waggoner and three of the club members' mothers, Mesdames M. L. Reed, Hall and J. M. Sweeton.

If wafers are desired, first place in a slow oven until they are a golden brown all the way through, which completely dextrinizes the starch.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Sore Muscles

Question—J. H. asks: "What is mialgia, its cause and the best way to treat same?"

Answer—Mialgia is a name taken from two Greek words meaning "muscle" and "pain." The treatment of such pain would, of course, depend upon its cause and location, but in general the best treatment would be with the application of heat and the use of general massage.

Prunes and Raisins

Question—Miss H writes: "Are prunes and raisins fattening?"

Answer—Prunes and raisins contain a large amount of fruit sugar, and when used in addition to other foods of high caloric value they may be said to be fattening. However, a small amount used each day with a well balanced diet would be allowable with one who is trying to reduce weight.

Heart Trouble

Question—Mrs. A. F. S. writes: "I am 26 years old, the mother of four children. For a year I have been troubled with my breathing—some days I think I will smother to death. My heart seems to stop beating at these times. Do you think this might be the sign of leakage of the heart?"

Answer—It is more than likely that your difficulty with breathing is due to some form of heart trouble. I would advise you to have a physician examine your heart, and then if you will write me again I will be glad to send you my opinion of the cause and cure of your trouble.

Rector Upheld in Marrying Catholic

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 25. (UP)—The right of one of its youngest rectors to marry a girl of another faith without religious prejudice and the ecclesiastical censure of his colleagues, has been upheld by a council of five ministers of the Episcopal diocese of Lexington.

The Rev. Julius Arnold Velasco, rector of St. John's Episcopal church at Dayton, near here, sat with his wife before the council last night and heard them declare him not guilty of breaking a previous pledge to resign if he married a Roman Catholic.

They did, however, find him guilty on a charge of circulating defamatory literature against Bishop H. P. Almon Abbott, head of the diocese, and he will be censured but will continue his pastorate.

FORT WORTH DEFEATS EXPORTERS IN ELEVEN-INNING BATTLE

The Rambler's Corner

By FRED D. THOMPSON

Well, Friday's game with Waco was postponed on account of what the sports writers finally agreed they would call wet grounds, since they were forced to give their readers some excuse or other. The fact of the matter is, the grounds were not wet enough to postpone the game. Nor was it raining when game time came around. Nor was there a blizzard, sandstorm, or hailstorm.

The dismal truth is that the powers that be were victims of fate, if that's what you can call West Texas weather. About 1 o'clock the rain was pouring down, and Carl Williams and Del Pratt were in Guy Airey's office talking it over. Finally all adjourned to Prexy Huff's office. The diagnosis continued, and while it was going on the rain stopped and the skies cleared somewhat. It began to look zif a game was going to be played after all. Then the clouds opened up again about 3 o'clock and Prexy Huff delayed the game.

Wherein he committed a grave error, inasmuch as the sun was in glaring evidence shortly before 3:30 o'clock, and the fans were all panting for a ball game. Proving that in future games in this part of the country should not be called off until five minutes before the hour arrives to start.

Indeed, why such a truism as this should be pointed out to native West Texans is beyond us. West Texans worthy of bearing the name should know by this time that given a rainstorm at 2 p. m., a drouth should be expected by 2:01 p. m.

The talk of the boulevards was that Mr. Pratt grabbed at the opportunity to ask postponement of the game so his "two pitchers," as Jinx Tucker of Waco fondly calls Messrs. Thormahlen and Thurman, could get a rest and be ready for Saturday's warfare. This street corner gossip could not be verified sufficiently to warrant its publication as a certainty in the Rambler's corner, hence it is merely noted in passing.

Anyway, the baseball lot down at the foot of Seventh street Friday was as dry as a speakeasy customer's throat when he finds the joint padlocked, and a game would have been appreciated.

At that, however, the Spudders got a break in the postponement. It was Caldwell's turn to pitch yesterday. He'll get the job today, probably, leaving Wiltse to start against the Beaumont Exporters Sunday.

APOLOGIA NO. 8,765

Del Pratt is neither fat
Nor lean nor short nor tall
We thought that he was all of these
But he wasn't, not at all.

We also thought his club was naught
And said so loud and long
But after Thursday's game we changed
To quite a different song.

We thought his Cubs were awful dubs
Our tongue was in our cheek
When we went to the park but long ere dark
Our mug was mild and meek.

We grasped a quill and with a will
Inscribed a noble lay
To Spudderland but now we wonder
How we got that way.

Three victories we did predict
Three wins all in a row,
Our innocence was sweet and pure
Such as our children know.

To wind this up we wish to say
We accurately foretell
The outcome of most anything,
Likell, likell, likell.

Waco's invasion of the home lot provided the occasion for one more new pitcher to break into the Wichita Falls lineup, if for only a few innings. This time it was Roland Flinn, the lengthy boy from Maine. He got his chance Thursday even as Ash Hillin and Dick Florrid got theirs in preceding games with other foes.

Flinn didn't pitch but two innings, relieving Galeria after the seventh. The tall hurler exhibited some wildness, which was to be expected in his season's debut. At that, however, he allowed but one hit and one run in the two frames, and showed speed and accuracy of throw in his fielding. His error in the ninth in muffing Storti's throw from behind first could be offset by many an alibi, for it was a difficult chance, but Flinn didn't need an alibi after he made a great peg from first and caught Gottlieber out at third.

Dell Pratt brought a very familiar figure with him when he led his Cubs into Athletic park. He is none other than George Bischoff, the catcher who almost singlehanded defeated the Wichita Falls Spudders last year in the playoff with the Dallas Steers.

George philozophized a bit Thursday. "Well," said he, "it looks like I'm going South. First with the Spudders, then with Dallas, now with Waco . . . and I guess Houston, Beaumont and San Antonio will be next."

Britain Gets Setback In Tennis Competition

LONDON, April 25. (UP)—Great Britain's prospects of a victory in the European zone Davis cup competition received a stunning blow when Henry W. (Bunny) Austin, England's greatest singles player, was beaten in the opening day's play in the first round match against Germany.

Dr. Heinz Landmann, German star, defeated Austin in a five set battle, 6-3, 8-6, 5-7, 4-6, 6-4. In the other singles match Dr. Daniel Prenn of Germany, led Harold G. N. Lee, England's new international player, 6-4, 7-9, 6-3, when play was suspended because of bad light.

FORT WORTH, April 25. (AP)—The Fort Worth Cats defeated the Beaumont Exporters in the second game of the series Friday, 8 to 7, in 11 innings. Henry Hardaway, who relieved walkup, the Panthers' starting hurler, in the sixth, helped win his game when he doubled in the last of the 11th; moved to third on an infield out and scored on Mallon's single to right. SPORTS DEFEAT BUFFS

SHREVEPORT, April 25. (AP)—The prettiest ball game of the season here came to a freak ending when Joe Brown, a relief pitcher, walked home the winning run in the ninth inning with the bases full to give the Sports a 2 to 1 win over the Buffs. Tuero allowed Houston only three hits and with two out in the ninth an error allowed the visitors to score. Krauss' double off Littlejohn, relief hurler in the ninth, resulted in him being yanked and Brown went to the box. An infield hit and two bases on balls to the following batters decided the contest. GOSLIN'S HOMER DEFEATS A.'S

Victory Sends Senators to Top of League

Runyon Traces History of Champs Who Fought for Title as Contenders

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, April 25.—"To settle a very large argument," writes Mr. Bill Thomann, manager of the Hotel Forrest, and a violent ringworm, "aren't Max Schmeling and Jack Sharkey the first men to fight for the heavyweight title, both as contenders?"

I hope and trust that Mr. Thomann hasn't wagered in the affirmative on this proposition, for the answer is no. My history records that Marvin Hart, of Looeyville, Kentucky, and Jack Root, the Bohemian, were the first to struggle for the heftiest award in fistiana, and Hart flattened Root in the 12th round.

That was on July 3, 1905, at Reno, Nevada, and on February 23, 1906, Hart lost in 20 rounds to Noah Brusso, otherwise Tommy Burns, the ex-la crosse player out of Canada, and Burns was accepted as heavyweight champion of the world to such extent that his name appears on the Muldoon-Tunney trophy that stands in the rotunda of Madison Square garden.

Hart's name isn't there, however. I never could figure out why they slighted old Marvin, who is still refereeing fights down Louisville way. He will probobaly be present at the ringside the night of June 12 when Schmeling and Sharkey meet at the Yankee stadium, along with Tommy Burns and as many of the other old time heavyweight champs as can be mustered.

The reason Hart and Root were both contenders for the title at Reno is because a vacancy existed in the office of heavyweight champion, James J. Jefferies having retired. Hart and Root were summoned as the best of the period, Hart having grabbed a rather dubious decision over John Arthur Johnson, and James J. Jefferies himself refereed the Reno affair, which was accepted as tacit recognition of the winner by Jeff as his successor.

Hart may not have been an impressive figure as champion-elect, but he was a rough, tough fellow, at that. He took on Burns at Los Angeles as a sort of pop over, for Burns had lost a 20 round decision to Jack Twin Sullivan of Boston only a few months before the bout with Hart. The squat-built Canuck swarmed all over Ig Marvin, however, and there wasn't much argument about the decision. From that, Burns went on to become a right good fighter, which often happens to gladiators who suddenly gain distinction.

He belted out the fighting fireman, Jim Flynn, drew with Philadelphia Jack O'Brien in 20, and then took a 20-round decision over Jack. He flattened Bill Squires, the Australian, in a punch, and then went to England, Ireland, France and Australia, and whaled the best men they could produce for him. The Canadian was about as close to the ideal of a world's champion that you could find, because he went all over the world looking for opponents.

Meantime, John Arthur Johnson was on his trail, and three years after Burns beat Hart for the title, he met the big negro in Sydney, N. S. W. Burns got $30,000 for his end of that bout which was advertised and generally accepted as for the heavyweight champion. The cops stopped it in the 14th round with Burns badly beaten, but he couldn't have been the worst fighter in the world to go that distance with the great Johnson.

When Jefferies was finally poked out of his hole of retirement by the late Tex Rickard and matched with Johnson, Jeff appeared as the contender, no matter what anyone says. He had put aside his title, and the statute of limitations of common sense had run against him. He had been absent from his job for five years. It would be silly to argue that a pugilistic absentee could hold a title that long without defending it.

If Mr. James J. Tunney should decide to return to the ring after the Schmeling-Shakey fight, he would have to return as the challenger. He has relinquished all his rights to the title of heavyweight champion of the world. So then it was Johnson who successfully defended the title against Jefferies, and his span of titular office is from 1908 when he beat Burns, to 1915, when the lost to Jess Willard.

So far as the Queensbury realm is concerned, the heavyweight title from John L. Sullivan down to Tunney is unclouded, as I read the legal documents on the subject. I have always insisted that Hart was lawfully champion if Burns was, and no one now disputes Burns' claim. Wherefore, the winner of the Sharkey-Schmeling fight will have clear title to his equity in the heavyweight crown.

As I trace the American title back beyond the Queensbury day, Joe Goss claimed it some 50 years ago, and was licked in 87 rounds at Collier Station, W. V., by Paddy Ryan. How and why Goss claimed the title would involve too much history, but his claim seemed to be accepted. Thus when Ryan and John L. Sullivan met at Mississippi City, Miss., in 1882, the fight was regarded as for the American heavyweight title.

Sullivan won in nine rounds, and was considered champion of these states. In 1889 he cinched his claim by beating Jake Kilrain in 75 rounds at Richburg, Miss., which was the last bare knuckle battle for the championship.

Sullivan to Corbett; Corbett to Fitzsimmons; Fitzsimmon to Jeffries—the line is unbroken. Then Jeffries' retirement, and the election of Marvin Hart. Jeffries was as sincere in his retirement as Tunney. His subsequent return has nothing to do with the case. Hart to Burns; Burns to Johnson; Johnson to Willard; Willard to Dempsey; Dempsey to Tunney.

That's the way it runs. And now it will be Tunney to Schmeling or Sharkey. The world will recognize the claim of the winner as just as valid as the claim of any other champion in the long line. It is always within the bounds of possibility, of course, that Tunney may return as a claimant, but if he has any lingering desire to retain the shadow of a claim on his old title, he had better announce it before the night of June 12, when the German and the American Lith crawl through the ropes.

South and West Loom Strong in Boat Races

NEW YORK, April 25. (UP)—While the East holds the advantage because of a numerical superiority, the South and Middle West have splendid chances to take top honors in the third annual Albany to New York outboard marathon race to be run on the Hudson river Saturday.

The most important eastern contestant is Jake Dunnell of Philadelphia, winner of the 1929 race. With him, defending the honors of the East, are more than 100 drivers from the Atlantic seaboard. However, the Chicago sector, and the South are well represented, along with a sprinkling of Canadian entries.

Among the midwesterners are James Holden of Trenton, Mich., Jack Wood of Detroit, Ray Pregenzer Jr., of Detroit, Glenn Merrill of Hammond, Ind., Irving Bunting of Detroit.

Late entries today brought the total to date to more than 150. Sponsors of the race expect over 200 drivers will hear the starter's pistol Saturday morning.

The race will start at Albany at 6 o'clock Saturday morning and the winner should have crossed the finish line at 9:30 o'clock here.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, April 25. (AP)—The feature of cotton today was the issuance of the first day notices which were said to represent about 227,000 bales. It was reported they were taken up by interests representing the Southern Cooperative Marketing association but their circulation led to scattering liquidation and the market was nervous and unsettled. A slight rally from an opening decline carried May up to 16.27 during the early trading but the prices weakened again later with the decline extending to 16.02 in the late trading. That delivery closed at 16.04 with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 20 to 36 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 1 to 12 points in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables and reports of rains in Texas, while the appearance of the May notices caused scattering liquidation in the near months. Initial offerings were absorbed. July sold up from 16.25 to 16.35 and the new October advanced from 15.09 to 15.16 but these rallies met increased offerings.

Prices reached the lowest levels of the day in the late trading. July sold off to 16.10 and the new October to 14.84 and while the old crop showed rallies of 2 to 3 points at the close prices for new crop positions were generally at the lowest. The closing quotation for May was 9 points under July and 119 points above the new October.

Liverpool cables said that trade calling in the market had been supplied by continental and Bombay selling and reported that the India boycott was affecting business in cotton goods.

Exports today 16,130, making 6,230,319 so far this season. Port receipts 21,847. U. S. port stocks 11,657,630.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, April 25. (AP)—Cotton was active during early trading due to the circulation of May notices, today being first notice day for that position. The market quieted down later, however, after it became known that the notices were stopped. Tenders for 225,000 bales were issued in New York while the notices here called for only 119,150 bales. Despite the large tenders and lower Liverpool the market opened only 5 to 8 points down, and promptly rallied 8 to 9 points on the reported stoppage of the notices.

Later, prices declined 23 to 27 points on reports of rains in West Texas where needed, but recovered 18 to 20 points on the loss when it was reported that the rains were insufficient. The market turned easier in late trading on indications of rains in West and new crop months made new lows for the day.

July opened 5 points down at 15.92, rallied 8 points to 16.00, then declined to 15.74 and closed at 15.75, or 22 points net lower. The general market closed barely steady at net declines of 21 to 34 points.

Liverpool came in 3 to 5 points worse than due but despite the cables and the heavy notices the market opened only 5 to 8 points down, prices promptly rallied after the call, to 15.88 for May and 15.17 for October, or 8 to 9 points up from the opening.

After ruling quiet most of the afternoon the market eased and new crop months made new lows at 14.84 for October and 14.98 for December or 29 to 33 points under the early highs, the old crop months did not duplicate their lows. The close was at or near the bottom.

DRY GOODS MARKET

NEW YORK, April 25. (AP)—Cotton goods markets were quiet today. Prices were firmer with ⅛c advances on print cloths following volume sales the previous day. Sentiment was stronger on probability of extensive curtailments in print cloths and sheeting mills as well as in eastern fine goods mills.

Stocks Sag as First Quarterly Reports Bring Fresh Uncertainty

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, April 25. (US)—First quarter reports, particularly those of railroad and automobile companies, influenced greater uncertainty in the stock market and caused further decline on the average today. A few stocks stood out by reason of strength due to special influences but the list as a whole continued to sag.

Steel finished with fractional loss while General Motors dropped 1⅛, Stewart Warner 12, Radio ¾, American Telephone 1½, International Telephone 1, Hudson 1¼, Studebaker 1⅛, Atchison 1, Canadian Pacific 2, Great Northern 1, Radio Keith 1⅛, Johns Manville 1¼, United Aircraft 2¾, and U. S. Rubber 1.

Utilities again were the most actively bought with Public Service jumping 4⅞, Columbia Gas 1⅛, and Consolidated Gas 3. Gillette jumped 1½, Vanadium 9, American Can 3, Sears Roebuck 1¼, and Alleghany corporation 1g.

Turnover dropped under the 5,000,000 share level. Call money again eased to 3½ from the 4 per cent renewal.

That loan report was the subject of considerable discussion especially as it came coincident with the federal reserve's annual report to congress. That report evidenced that the reserve board was rather satisfied with its work last year. No one else is, however. The reserve tells of its forcing banks to stop lending money to the stock market but fails to point out that as a result the banks now are loaning $500,000,000 more in the miscalled "brokers loans" than they were a year ago. There is no doubt that a good part of the increase in loans was due to new financing. The gain of $44,000,000 in loans for "account of others," however, was regarded as funds received by profit taking in stocks by those who thought the advance had gone far enough for the time-being.

The Utility crowd remains the most bullish in the street. In fact they and the group of professionals working in Radio, Radio-Keith and a few others, appear to be the only ones with decided opinion on the immediate market outlook. They continue to talk bullish. They are very experienced market operators, however, and would hardly "talk" otherwise if holding any stock at all. Railroad earnings, automobile reports, and commodity price trend are the main worries of the trading community in general. With the Steel bankers obviously holding off from the market, the nervousness aroused by these factors is enhanced.

The Chrysler report to be issued next week will make less satisfactory showing than some that have been received thus far from the automobile industry, it is claimed. Professionals short of the motor stocks, therefore, are making capital of it although the market has discounted the happenings of the automobile industry in the first quarter to a goodly extent. As a result of recent utterance of one independent steel official, there is more widespread talk of lower steel prices in the near future. The $22,000,000 general foods stock taken over by a banking group represented private holdings and not "pool stock" as one brokerage firm indicated. Latest expectation of the Diamond Match splitup is that it will be on a six for one basis.

The Oils will stand out. Further advance in Mid-Continent and California crude oil prices is not far away and there is strong belief that the price of gasoline in the East will be raised before long. Group work continues in Simms Petroleum, Petroleum corporation and some others. Strong interests started activity in Ohio Oil in which the Mellon group of Pittsburgh has an interest. If the stabilization in the oil industry can be maintained, there will be important merger developments before the end of the year.

Sterling continued to decline in a generally unsettled foreign exchange market, renewed bearish pressure was evidenced in the cotton market and all options closed lower. Wheat and other grains remained under the influence of bearish weather advices.

Grain

TEXAS CASH GRAIN

FORT WORTH, April 25. (AP)—Offerings of grains were light today and prices on the cash market here were slightly stronger, with demand fair except for barley which continued slow. Dealers reported that more corn and milo could be absorbed here. Exporters said that some No. 2 wheat was being sold abroad at around 4 cents over Chicago July f. o. b. ships at Galveston but this was without effect on milling bids which were $1.12@1.13 for ordinary No. 1 milling wheat delivered Texas common points.

Bids and offers on coarse grains ranged as follows Friday, basis carloads delivered Texas common points, freight paid:

Corn—No. 2 mixed 94@95c; No. 2 white 96½@97c; No. 2 yellow 97@98c.

Oats—No. 2 red 56@57c.

Sorghums—No. 2 milo per 100 pounds $1.88@1.90; No. 2 kaffir $1.57@1.59.

Cane Seed—Bulk country run red top, per 100 pounds according to type, germination, origin and clean-out $4.25@4.60.

Dealers also quoted basis delivered group 1 points: No. 2 mixed corn 91½@92½c; No. 2 white 93½@94½c; No. 2 yellow 94@85c; No. 3 white oats 52½@53c. Add one cent to oats for delivery group 3 points.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, April 25. (AP)—Rains in drouth districts which previously had been skipped brought on heavy selling today that swept wheat down to new low prices for the season. Export demand for North American wheat was also disappointing, and an official forecast of the 1930 wheat crop of India put the total at 50,000,000 bushels in excess of last year.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous 1⅜@1⅝c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed ⅛@1c down, oats ⅜@⅝c off, and provisions showing 5@12c decline.

Final transactions of the day in wheat were within ⅛c of the bottomost level reached. Liverpool price downturns were attributed largely to offerings of new wheat from India and to the fact that the season's harvest in that country was officially estimated as 36,000,000 bushels more than latest figures from private sources. Corn and oats sympathized with wheat weakness. Besides, larger country sales of corn to arrive proved discouraging for holders, and the shipping demand here for corn was also slower.

Provisions reflected the downturns of grain prices, although hogs values were tending upward.

Closing indemnities: Wheat—May $1.00¼ $1.03¼@103½; July $1.02⅝@1.02¾, 1.05⅜; Sept. $1.05⅞@1.06, 1.08¾@1.09; Dec. $1.10⅜-$1.13⅜. Corn—May 80⅝c, 81½c; July 82½@83½@83⅝c; Sept. 83¼@83⅝c, 84½c; Dec. 88¼c, 78¾c.

PIT NOTES

CHICAGO, April 25. (US)—While bearish sentiment continued dominant in the wheat trade today there was marked reluctance to press the selling side too actively as the market becomes readily oversold. This tendency is attributed to the fact that there has not yet been sufficient moisture in southwest sections of the belt.

Larger shipping sales of corn the previous day were not present today to offset a further substantial increase in arrivals. In addition it was reported a leading local industry was out of the spot market.

Wheat traders foresee a narrow market for the near future, what with the lack of rain bringing in support on the declines and the prospects for further heavy May liquidation overhanging advances.

The Winnipeg grain exchange will open at 8:30 a. m. beginning Monday. This is to make hours conform with the Chicago exchange which will be operating on its regular schedule, but by daylight savings time.

There is again considerable heard regarding possible decreases in acreage of wheat in the domestic and Canadian spring wheat sections. However, no estimates of the total for either country have appeared. These may be expected within two weeks, when the bulk of the seeding should be completed.

LIGHT RAIN HELPS WHEAT

Pastures Also Given Aid by Showers

Those districts visited by rains in this section of the country Friday reported almost without exception that the precipitation came in time to salvage a wheat crop which had assumed all the appearances of a failure. While Friday's showers in most of the Wichita Falls territory constituted little more than a promise of possible relief from drouth, there was sufficient rain in some nearby areas to revive the wheat temporarily, and to give some added life to pasture grass.

Poultry prices revealed another slight decline Friday, heavy hens moving from 18 to 17 cents, and light hens dropping by the same margin to 14 cents.

Franklin Warns Of Field's Danger

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 25. (AP)—Ruination of the Oklahoma City oil field is a constant danger unless strict regulations are made for the prevention of "blowouts" and "craters" in oil wells, Wirt Franklin, president of the Independent Producers' Association of America, told the state corporation commission today at its hearing on proposed regulations intended to lessen oil field hazards.

The movement originated after the rampage of the Mary Sudik No. 1 well, which blew wild in the field for nearly two weeks, creating a grave fire menace.

TWO HARDEMAN TESTS STARTED

Operators Seek Shallow Oil Production

Special to The Record News

CHILLICOTHE, Texas, April 25.—Announcement has just been made of the spudding in of a wildcat well on the Judge Berry tract, locally known as the Lawson place, three and a half miles southeast of the city. Daniel and company are the drillers.

Wickliffe & Derr and associates have spudded in a well on their holdings four miles south of the city, on the Reynolds farm. The plans call for a drilling to a 2000-foot level.

The Berry test will reach a depth of 1000, and if necessary, the J. E. Daniels company will drill deeper.

A few years ago a well was drilled on the Durham farm south of the city, and it is claimed oil was encountered at a very shallow depth, pumping about 15 barrels per day, and the promoters feel confident that by drilling deeper a good pay sand may be reached.

C.-C. JOBBERS MEET TUESDAY

Leaders to Discuss Plans for Industrial Exhibit

Members of the manufacturers and jobbers division of the chamber of commerce and of the industrial development committee of the Junior chamber of commerce will meet next Tuesday morning, April 29, at 10 a. m. in the old Martin company building at 911 Eighth street to formulate plans for the opening of the industrial exhibit there shortly after May 1, it was announced Friday.

The executive committee of the manufacturers and jobbers division met Friday morning at the chamber of commerce offices, with L. H. Estes as chairman, with members of the industrial committee of the Junior organization. Complete approval of the industrial exhibit now under development by the latter committee was expressed by Mr. Estes' group, and the cooperation of their division assured in pushing the plan to completion as a permanent establishment here.

At the meeting to be held Tuesday morning, it was said, a name for the exhibit will be selected, the definite date of opening selected, and an opening day program formulated. More than 33 firms now have signed up for exhibition space in the building, it was stated. Discussion of similar enterprises in other large cities indicated that they become convenient centers for all buying by visiting purchasers of wholesale supplies.

Local manufacturers, jobbers, etc., will use space on the first floor of the building for their displays, while the second floor will be given to chambers of commerce of nearby cities for exhibition purposes, according to plans heretofore announced.

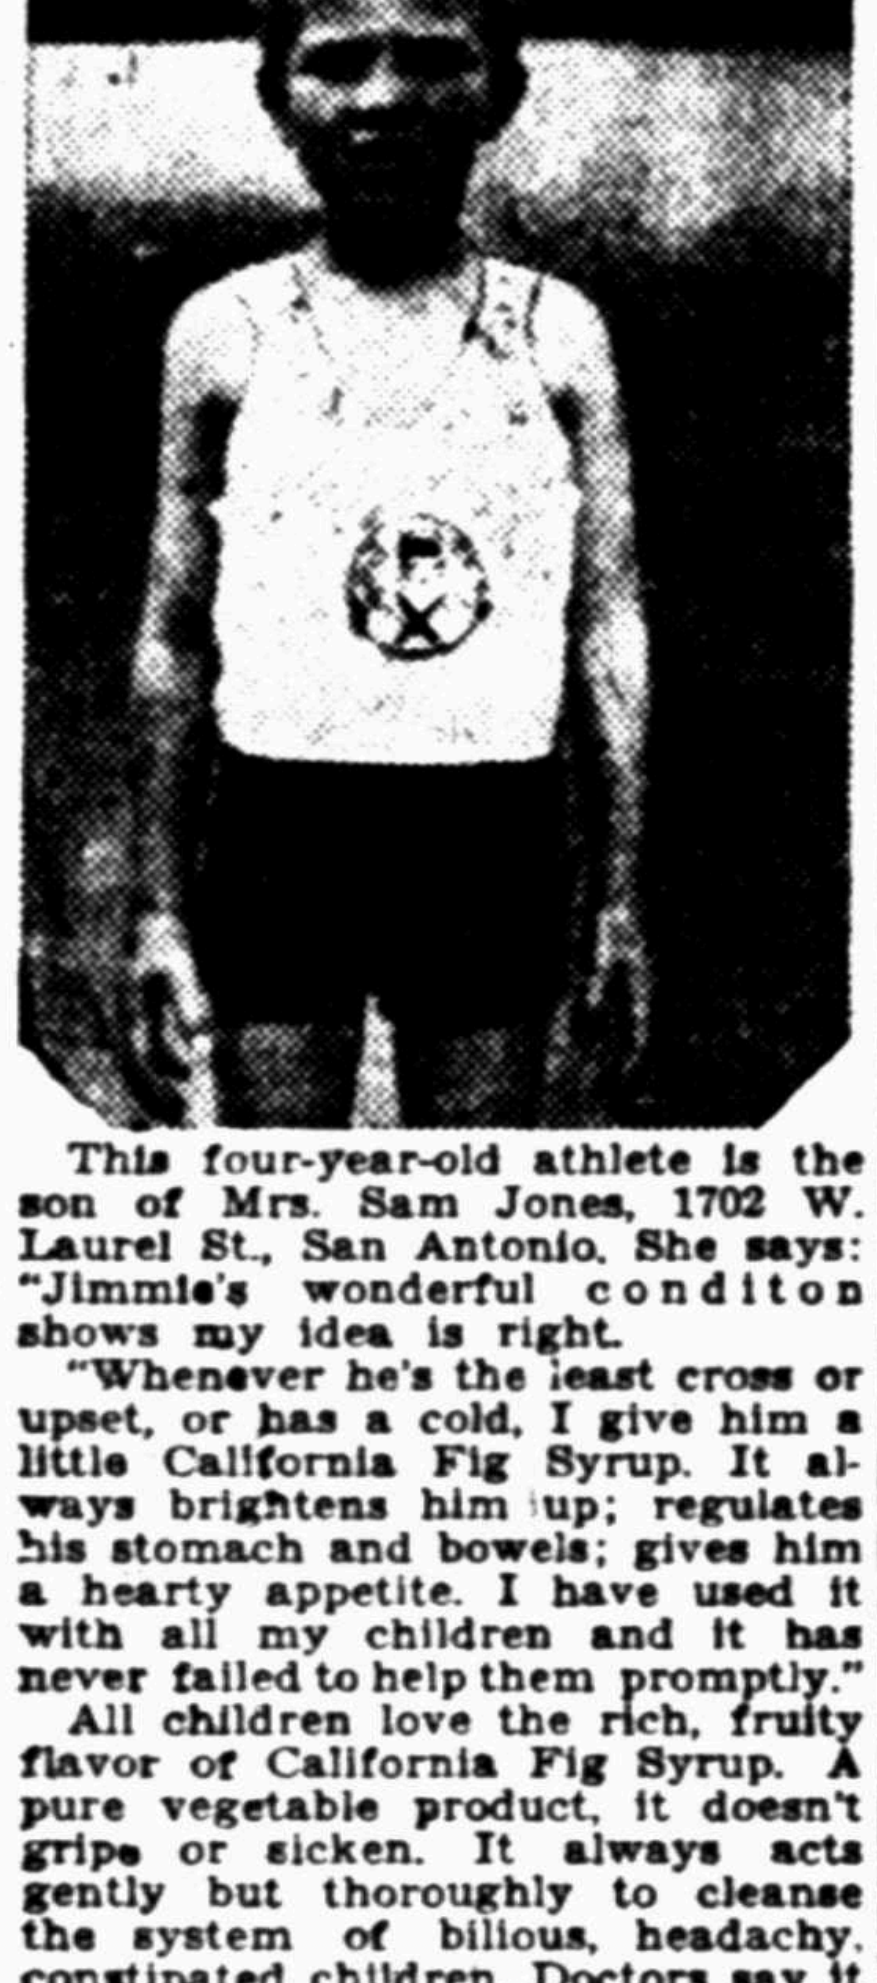
Right Idea!



This four-year-old athlete is the son of Mrs. Sam Jones, 1702 W. Laurel St., San Antonio. She says: "Jimmie's wonderful conditon shows my idea is right.

"Whenever he's the least cross or upset, or has a cold, I give him a little California Fig Syrup. It always brightens him up; regulates his stomach and bowels; gives him a hearty appetite. I have used it with all my children and it has never failed to help them promptly."

All children love the rich, fruity flavor of California Fig Syrup. A pure vegetable product, it doesn't gripe or sicken. It always acts gently but thoroughly to cleanse the system of bilious, headachy, constipated children. Doctors say it tones and strengthens weak bowels. Try it with your child. See how bad breath, coated tongue or feverishness disappear!

The name California marks the genuine, famous for 50 years. So look for it when buying.—Adv.

MAJESTIC: "Honey," with Nancy Carroll as the chief ingredient. Stanley Smith, Harry Green, and Skeets Gallagher. "Madam Q," talking comedy. Krazy Kat comedy. Sound news.

STRAND: "Son of the Gods," with Dick Barthelmess and Constance Bennett. Rex Beach drama in Chinese colors. "Silly Symphony" of "Autumn." Paramount sound news.

STATE: Mary Nolan in "Undertow," with John Mack Brown. "King of the Congo," closing episodes. Sound news.

GEM: Tim McCoy in "The Desert Rider." Chapter 6 of "The Final Reckoning." Comedy.

The Strand's new bill, for the next six days: "Son of the Gods," (Rex Beach), with the sleek-haired Dick Barthelmess; another "silly simfony," and Walter Johnson handing a ball to a man named Herbert Hoover at the opening game. The director of this new Barthelmess film must at some time have been a basket ball player. He zigzags the plot to and fro over the entire playing field dizzily and interminably, and with as clever dribbling as any star forward could display. To cap it all, when he finally cuts loose a midfield shot for a final counter, the climax runs round and round the rim, tantalizingly deferring its descent—but does it fall outside? Not if you know your cinematic spheroids—it drops happily in the basket with other happy endings. Except for that grandstand shot, however, it will prove just that kind of a game that keeps the fans jibbering or sighing with the strain.

◇ ◇ ◇

It is seldom, in our maze of modernity, that even Elder Hays could point any clearly drawn moral, social or philosophical teaching on the screen. But this "Son of the Gods" is an exception. The very thin mixture of which racial prejudice is composed comes in for a nice demonstration—as nice as that with which the venom of such prejudice is depicted. Chinese atmosphere is heavily applied, but skillfully. Barthelmess and the lovely Constance Bennett furnish genuinely stellar performances, and endure the extra-period without noticeable loss of finesse. In fact, Constance gives an alluring example of blond, polite and instantaneous vamping. She has not been seen heretofore in just this sort of thing; and some will regret that there are not other roles just like it for Miss Bennett.

◇ ◇ ◇

The extra-period offered as a redemptive feature an elaborate bit of pageantry which takes a funeral procession through San Francisco's China-town with much professional mourning and less practiced wailing. This is utilized by the honored but more or less obsolete means of a cut-back, and was embellished by the use of colored film. "Son of the Gods" will rate with the most satisfactory screen entertainments of the current month—and the "silly simfony" as usual is a tonic for souls which have been surfeited with "drama," melo and otherwise.

Boy Admits Age Is 15 After Jury Votes Bill

The desire to reach the age of a man is strong in the heart of every youngster, but not as strong as the fear of prison bars.

Visions of prison life Thursday caused a youngster held here on a charge of automobile theft to abandon his youthful desire to appear older and he confessed his age was 15 instead of 19, the age he gave the officers at the time of his arrest.

He was indicted by the grand jury for the April term of the 30th district court, but even that did not shake his statement that his age was 19. Not until the approach of his trial did he waver in view of the possibility of going to the penitentiary. He was being held Thursday while James A. McDonald, county juvenile officer, communicated with his mother in Cook county in an effort to establish his correct age. He was arrested in Henrietta less than two hours after he took a car from the streets here several weeks ago.

JURY AWARDS WOMAN $20,000

Crash Victim Wins Verdict In Damage Suit

An award of $20,000 was granted by a jury in the 89th district court Friday to Miss Violet Stone at the close of the trial of her suit for $35,000 damages against W. P. Lincoln on a claim growing out of injuries she is alleged to have sustained in a highway crash near Electra last October. Attorneys for the defendant immediately signified their intention of filing a motion for a new trial, according to Judge P. A. Martin.

According to testimony, the truck involved in the crash, owned by Mr. Lincoln, had no tail-light and was not seen by occupants of the car in which Miss Stone was injured until too late to avert the collision. The trial lasted almost four days. The accident in which Miss Stone was injured claimed the life of Gaston Scott, driver of the car in which she was riding.

Nervous

"I HAVE taken Cardui, and found it to be the greatest help for a weak, run-down condition," says Mrs. Danie Rabon, of Lugoff, S. C. "I could not rest at night. I was nervous in extreme. I got upset easily.

"After I began taking Cardui, I could see that I was improving. I began to gain in weight, almost from the first dose. I had been so nervous that I fell off to a shadow. I began to gain back what I had lost. My appetite improved; I was hungry at meal time and enjoyed my food.

"The nervousness decreased. I was not nearly so weak. I think that is the greatest thing about Cardui, for I had been so weak, at times, I could hardly keep going to do my work. After I had taken Cardui for a time, I felt like a different person. I could do many times as much work as formerly, and I felt equal to my tasks."
