Clergy and Laymen Plan Curb on Foul Newstand Literature

As a non-sectarian meeting Monday night at the Chamber of Commerce building, called by members of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, clergy and laymen discussed the advisability of some sort of curb on the flood of prurient and salacious literature appearing on the city's newsstands, and decided upon a steering committee to chart a course of action.

The meeting, attended by most of the clergy in Aransas County and by many laymen, called to the attention of those present, magazines, newspapers and paper-backed books which purveyed violence, sex and perversion to the populace.

These, it was brought out, could be purchased by anyone, even the smallest child, and expressions of opinion were asked of those present on the desirability of curbing this questionable literature.

Rev. Cecil Lang, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, suggested that a program of cooperation with the newsdealers of the city would probably be the best method, and Rev. Harold W. Edmondson, pastor of St. Peter's Episcopal Church here, asked if there were available criteria by which magazines and other publications could be judged.

Rev. Ben Bohmfalk, pastor of the First Methodist Church, concurred with the need for action, as did N. E. Hicks, pastor of the local Church of Christ, who said he had been following the problem for some time.

Efforts might be made by (continued on page 8)

Pat Falk Is State Champion Speaker

Pat Falk, Aransas County High School Junior, capped a spring of speaking competition by winning the UIL Extemporaneous Speaking Contest in Austin last Friday. Pat defeated the state's best speaking on the subject: "What is the Newly Proposed Plan for Presidential Succession?"

The winner was awarded a medal for first place and an engraved plaque for the school. Pat's trophy will be placed in the trophy case along side that of her brother Terry's. Terry was the UIL state champion in persuasive speaking in 1963. The brother-sister victories account for the only UIL state championships claimed by Aransas County High School. Terry is now a varsity debater at the University of Texas and was on hand to see Pat score her victory.

Pat is one of Aransas County High's most outstanding students. She is a member of every honor group in the school in addition to several interest and service clubs. Her appearance at the state meet in Austin makes her eligible for several scholarships offered by the University of Texas. Pat was accompanied to Austin by her mother, Mrs. Walter Falk, and her faculty sponsor, Frank DeAngelis.

DeAngelis commented that although there were many people who pitched in and aided Pat in her victory, Pat's victory was done to sheer hard work, determination, and faith on her part. An excellent example of perseverance paying dividends. Pat's speaking plans for next year include competition in the persuasive speaking contest. It is not inconceivable that a third state championship trophy won by the Falk family will find a home in Rockport.

STUDENT COUNCIL OFFICERS ELECTED

Board Approves School Repairs

At the regular meeting of the school board, Architect Lynn Evans of Corpus Christi told the trustees that cracks at each outside corner of the old Rockport Elementary School showed evidence of lateral displacement; the roof is in poor condition; the parapet walls are broken, permitting water leakage; the mortar has weathered out of many of the joints between the bricks; and that there is other wear to the building.

Evans said he and Douglas Beck of Corpus Christi had made the inspection, and that Beck estimated it would take around $9,000 to put the building in sound condition. Moreover, Beck said, due to the nature of the work it would be to the interest of the school system to have this work done on a time and material basis.

Evans said no more should be spent than was absolutely necessary, due to the age of the building.

He was also requested to inspect the floor in the high school gymnasium, which has never been satisfactory.

Following Evans was W. W. McLendon, of McLendon and Associates, representing Deer Park Subdivision, of which George Strickhausen III, also present, is the owner.

McLendon stated they came in the interest of dedicating an 80-foot street just south of the high school gymnasium, for which they had made an informal request last August.

It developed that the interest of the owner of Deer Park and the owners of the land west of, and abutting Deer Park, and the interest of the school board was identical. Hence, on a motion by Rogers, seconded by Roaten, and passed unanimously, the following resolution was inserted in the minutes:

"Resolved: That the Board of Trustees of Aransas County Independent School District dedicate to the public use and execute a plat to be prepared by McLendon and Associates, engineers, joined by George Strickhausen, owner of Deer Park Subdivision lying west of the high school-junior high school tract, and W. H. Bloch and M. W. Cochran, owners of the land lying west of and abutting said Deer Park subdivision, the south 80 feet of its land from Omorundo Street to the west line of the school lands, and being on 80-foot strip along and north of the north line of Shady Oaks Addition to the City of Rockport; all upon condition that Strickhausen, Bloch and Cochran execute said plat and dedicate to the public a continuation of the 80-foot public roadway in a westerly direction and in a straight line to a point which will intersect a northerly extension of Magnolia Street from its present intersection with Maples Street to be dedicated to the public on said plat by Bloch and Cochran, owners of the land on which the extension of Magnolia Street will be situated."

An enabling resolution to the Commissioners Court, recommending acceptance of the (continued on page 8)

Gatesville Parolee Arrested Tuesday

Chief of Police Bob Hewes stated Wednesday that a Gatesville parolee, Juan (Johnny) Guzman of Rockport, was arrested Tuesday night in connection with two cases of destruction of public property. Along with Guzman was a 16 year old Rockport youth.

Hewes says that on Tuesday night about 10:30, a resident who lives near the elementary school called the jail and reported two boys in the school yard to Deputy Slim Haynes.

Haynes called Chief Hewes on the radio and Hewes and Patrolman Joe Dominguez proceeded to the school yard. Dominguez who was accompanied by Constable Buddy McLester, arrived at the school first as they were but blocks away when they saw two boys running across the school yard and Constable McLester climbed the fence and caught one of the youths.

While all officers were checking the school ground the 16 year old boy climbed the fence and got away. Guzman was confined in jail under the city's suspicious persons ordinance and detained overnight.

Early Wednesday morning A. R. Griffith, principal of the elementary school called Chief Hewes and reported three windows broken and a bottle of ink thrown against the school wall. Hewes investigated the incident and while on this case it was reported that 11 tires had been cut or punctured at the City warehouse.

After checking on this with J. C. Gurley, asst. water supt., Hewes and Deputy Sheriff Joe De la Garza, after checking with certain residents of the town, learned that the 16 year old boy in question was with Guzman late last night. They picked him up and talked to him at length. After thorough questioning of the subject, and checking with many people, it was learned that Guzman and (continued on page 8)

FUTURE TOURIST ATTRACTION — Preliminary model of HemisFair 1968 shows how the 90-acre site in downtown San Antonio would look for the first major international exposition in the history of the Southwest. Located two blocks from the Alamo, the proposed scale model is dominated by a 70-story tower and a civic center complex that would include an arena and fine arts theater. Theme of the fair, scheduled for 184 days in mid-1968, will be a centuries-deep probe into the varying cultures of the family of Americas.

City Council Transactions Are Routine

At the meeting of the Rockport City Council, Mrs. Byron Bushart told councilmen that Emory M. Spencer wished to donate the park south of his office property to the city, and councilmen voted to accept.

Buster Shely asked the council to try to work out some method of serving the Shell Ridge with city water, and the council discussed annexation of the area, but took no action.

Walter Cassel asked for sewer service in his area, and council members instructed Water Supt. Tom Tom Shults to make a survey of the region to determine the number of sewer connections that might be expected.

James Little, Mrs. Bushart, Paul Clark Sorenson, and Mrs. W. A. Ormand were reappointed to the Park Board.

Bills were approved and the police report read.

Service Establishments Here Gross $1,800,000

Aransas County's Service Establishments had total receipts of $1.8 million in 1963, an increase of 119 percent from 1958, according to a report of the 1963 census business just released by the Bureau of the Census, U.S. Department of Commerce. The last previous census of business covered operations during 1958.

The service trades in the census of business included those providing: Personnel services to individuals; miscellaneous business services; auto repair and other auto services; and other repair services. Also included were motion picture production and distribution businesses; motion picture theatres; other amusement and recreation services; and hotels and motels.

The selected service trade establishments in the county employed 163 persons (exclusive of proprietors) and had a payroll for the year of $668 thousand. The state as a whole included 60,879 establishments with receipts of $1,879.3 million.

The Bureau of the Census report: selected services, Texas, 1963 census of business, from which these data are taken, may be purchased from the superintendent of Documents, Washington, D.C. 20402 at U.S. Dept. of Commerce Field Offices for $70.

Oil Values Are Falling in County

Tentative figures presented to the Commissioners Court by Thomas Y. Pickett and Co., valuation engineers for the county, show that there will be some $862,980 drop in valuations of oil, gas and industrial property for the coming year.

Non producing leases in the county are valued at $36,950 next year, against $37,300 for the current taxation period; personal property of the oil companies showed an increase from $95,750 to $137,550; pipeline valuations remain steady at $553,200.

Utilities company valuations were $449,940 during the current year; next year they are expected to advance to $468,360, while railroad values are upped from $41,800 this year to $43,010 next. Stored products, valued at $59,020 this year are expected to be valued at $34,560 next year, and there will be a rise in industrial valuations from $972,300 to $1,075,300.

However, the sad fact remains that county valuations are dropping faster with the decline of oil production than they are being raised by real estate value which in turn means a decline in county taxes of around $11,000 in the coming year.

The grand total last year was $23,095,840; next year it will be approximately $22,232,860.

Value of the oil industry to this county is graphically shown by the engineers in a comparison of taxable valuations in Aransas County since 1941.

In 1941 the county's total tax roll was $4,669,442; then to $4,182,705 in 1943; the following year of 1944 it was $3,924,722; and in 1945 dropped still more to $3,875,789.

In 1946 it started to climb again, and was estimated at $4,211,289; in 1947, it was $4,250,410; in 1948 it jumped to $5,022,045; in 1949 it rose to $6,547,055; in 1950 it went to $9,044,530; the following year, 1951, to $10,392,754; and in 1952, the last year without oil, valuations were $12,621,803.

In 1953 came oil and that year valuations on oil and gas were set at $11,311,065, while local property was assessed at $3,551,268. In 1954 the figures were $13,590,830 and $3,586,716; in 1955, there were $13,573,100 and $3,606,359;

For 1956 assessments were $12,809,815 and $3,805,949; for 1957 they amounted to $13,237,795 and $4,361,628; in 1959 they were $14,882,415 and $4,564,874; for 1960 they came to $12,724,190 and $8,156,031; to taking up his present duties.

Members of the Aransas-San Patricio Board are from Rockport, Aransas Pass, Ingleside, Portland, Gregory, Sinton, Taft and Mathis.

JUDGE JOHN D. WENDELL ENTERS HOSPITAL WED.

Aransas County Judge John D. Wendell entered Spohn Hospital Wednesday morning, for an extensive series of tests.

The total number of oil wells in the county in January, 1964, was 225; there were 166 gas wells, for an overall total of 391. This year the figures dropped to 186 oil wells; rose to 177 gas wells, for an overall downward total of 363.

In the Aransas Pass field, Atlantic Refining Co. plugged one well; they plugged others in the fields at Fulton Beach, and at Salt Lake.

A. O. Phillips plugged two wells in the Fulton Beach Field; Phillips Petroleum plugged two wells in the Fulton Beach Field; Phillips Petroleum plugged and abandoned 13 wells. Oil and Gas Property Management plugged and abandoned one in the Mud Flats Field.

A large number of wells were also removed from schedule in 1964 (that is, they were off production). Among these were two Cities Service wells in the Copano Bay, South field. Others were Appell Petroleum Corporation, one, Fulton Beach; Atlantic Refining Co., 7, Fulton Beach, and five at Salt Lake;

Colona Oil and Gas Corporation, 1, Fulton Beach; Diversa, Inc., 1, Fulton Beach; Graridge Corporation, 1, Fulton Beach (continued on page 8)

Rockport Was Different In Good Old Days

In an old Rockport paper belonging to the Deane family, we learn that things were certainly different in the good old days of Rockport when C. F. Bailey, grandfather of Travis Bailey, who still lives here, founded the Rockport Transcript.

In the masthead, Editor Bailey says that the Transcript is published at Rockport, situated on Aransas Bay, the natural outlet for the great trade of Texas destined soon to become the commercial center of this section.

"We have commenced publication of this paper," Bailey says, in Volume 2, No. 5, issued on Sept. 24, 1870, "to assist in building up this trade, and shall use our best endeavors to this end, and we hereby call on all interested in this matter to lend us a liberal support; we have placed the rates as low as to bring it within reach of all, making it one of the cheapest newspapers in the state.

"We shall also endeavor to pay due attention to the stock-growing interests of this, the greatest stock region of Texas, and look for those engaged in that occupation to hand us their brands for publication."

Evidently Bailey's plea to the stockgrowers bore fruit, for the back page of the particular issue is almost completely devoted to brands, many of which have long since gone out of existence.

John W. Baylor shows no less than 20 different markings for his stock; S. C. Skidmore shows more than that, although, because of a tear in the old paper it is difficult to determine how many.

J. W. Stockley registered a multiplicity of horse and cattle brands, as did J. M. Ussery of Oakville who lists as his agents names long famous in South Texas cattle industry, including W. A. Petus in Bee County, Thomas O'Connor in Refugio County; W. G. Barnes, Karnes County; H. D. Sullivan, San Patricio County; Henderson Williams, Live Oak County; Martin Culver, Nueces County; Jim Low in Atascosa County; and John

W. Baylor, Rockport.

Merchants at old St. Mary's also advertised in the Transcript, for there was no paper published in that town in Refugio County, situated just north of the present site of Bayside.

St. Mary's Wharf and Warehouse and Warehouse Co. published a schedule of its rates, interesting because it shows the commodities produced or imported to this area in the 70's.

Wharfage on dry barrels was charged at the rate of 7 1/2 cents each; measured freight, per cubic foot, was 1 1/2 cents. Salt was 7 1/2 cents per sack; corn was 4 cents; wool 10 cents per 100 pounds; dry hides, 10 cents per 100 pounds; wet, salted hides, 3 cents per 100 pounds; empty beef barrels, 3 cents each; barreled beef was 8 cents a barrel; a barrel of tallow was charged for at 10 cents; iron and machinery brought 4 cents a hundred.

Horns, another commodity, were charged for at $1 per thousand; bone wharfage was $1 per ton; buggies brought $2 each in wharfage charges; wagons were $1.50; cotton was 60 cents per bale; wood, $5 a cord; beaves were 75 cents although if they were led out wharfage dropped to 50 cents each. Sheep and hogs were charged for at a rate of 6 cents a head; lumber was $1 per thousand feet and shingles 25 cents a thousand.

J. M. Moorhead, J. M. Doughty, J. M. Mathis and T. H. Mathis, operating as Moorhead and Company, on Merchants Square, in Rockport, were wholesale and retail dealers in dry goods, groceries, hardware, wood ware, furniture, stoves, etc. and every article that the trade requires.

The would sell low for cash or approved credit, or in exchange for wool, hides, bacon and all country produce. Those wishing to purchase to sell again, their ad says, "would do well to examine our stock as we are determined to offer inducements."

H. M. Cushman and Company, in an upside-down ad, apparently printed that way to attract attention, offer dry goods, groceries, direct from New York, including hats, caps, boots and shoes, clothing and all sorts of staple and fancy goods and groceries, hardware and cutlery, farming and mechanics tools, buggies, rockaways, carriages and harness, lumber of every description, together with fine cypress shingles, doors, windows, blinds, hangings and stops, all ready for the builders' use, with a thousand and one items not enumerated, as they expect customers to call for what they want from a hog's bristle to a 76-pounder (cannon).

F. A. Bailey and Company had just finished a first class grist mill and had a constant supply of fresh meal and corn on hand; Leonard Henkel was the barber and hair dresser; Frank Waer operated a saddle and harness shop; Wm. Benson was principal of Rockport Academy, which was due to begin its fourth session on Monday, Sept. 5, 1870, with Mrs. Young acting as Benson's assistant.

Rockport's most famous place of entertainment "The Finish" advertised a bar-room and billiards where fine liquors and choice cigars could be purchased, and its proprietors, O. P. Reed and Company, advertised experienced bar-keepers, with every attention given to customers.

What the ad doesn't say, but which is well-known to old-timers, was that once the bar or the first floor was visited, customers ascended to the gambling rooms on the second floor, where the gamblers finished his spending.

Joe Caldwell One Of Attorneys In Zapata Bank Suit

Joe Caldwell of Rockport and Luther Jones of Corpus Christi, attorneys for Zapata County, made the motion in 49th District Court that Crisoforo Ramos and Pedro Gonzalez, who were sureties on deposits of $140,000 in deposits in the defunct Bank of Zapata, should be released from further financial responsibility.

According to the Zapata County clerk's office, Judge James E. Kazan, presiding judge, granted the attorney's motion on Feb. 23.

In the meantime Francis P. Maher, Laredo, trustee in bankruptcy for the Medina Bank, said this week he paid off 18 months ago about 25 cents on the $1 to depositors in the bank. There will be a final dividend, but Maher declined to guess how much it might be.

He said Zapata County has been given its 25 per cent share of assets. Zapata County had $180,000 on deposit when the bank closed, and of this amount $140,000 was assured under the sureties, Ramos and Gonzalez.

Maher said some 375 lawsuits to collect notes and overdrafts have been filed by the trustee in bankruptcy.

One of the most important sources of cash assets, however, was an auction sale in 1962 through which Maher raised $150,000.

The privately owned bank of Zapata, only financial institution in the county at the time, closed in July, 1961. President Manuel Medina said "we just ran out of money."

At the time Medina closed his bank, hundreds of Zapata citizens, the county government and school district had money on deposit.

Since the Medina private bank was declared bankrupt it has been replaced by the First National Bank of Zapata which purchased the old Medina bank building. The new bank has different ownership and management.

Hobbyist Makes Guns From Scratch

When Paul Adams wants a new rifle or a pistol, he grabs a handful of scrap iron and a piece or two of board and makes one. Not for him are the effete products of the modern gunmaker, for he has gone back to first principles. While most Americans wouldn't be caught dead with anything but the latest and finest factory product, and many of them are trading in "obsolete" .30-06 rifles for the most recent magnum cannon, Paul and his friends use the guns with which their grandfathers held off the wild Comanches, and, what's more, if they're dedicated enthusiasts, they make them.

In recent years, muzzle-loading enthusiasts have increased in number out of all proportion to other phases of shooting, and this has created a problem of supply and demand that has done much to revive the ancient skills of frontier gunsmiths.

Of course, a few lucky shooters had only to haul grandpappy's pride from the attic, but even then they preserved these fine old guns as mementoes of the past, and went seeking new muzzle loaders. American distributors are now selling replicas of muzzle-loading pistols, rifles and shotguns as good as, or better than, those of most of the early gunsmiths but even so there are a lot of people who are building their own guns, either from commercially produced kits or from scratch.

Adams has tried it both ways, egged on by Fidel Castro.

For years, Adams, "a teacher by profession but a machinist by trade" was an employee development officer for Civil Service Personnel at Guantanamo Naval Base in Cuba. For recreation he hunted game until Fidel and his minions closed the gates of the base.

Casting about for a new form of amusement, Adams decided to enter competitive muzzle-loading shooting and tried to order a black powder rifle from the States, only to find it was too large to be shipped by mail.

If he wanted a muzzle loader, the only way to obtain one at Guantanamo was to build it, and that's exactly what he did. He found a piece of jack hammer steel in a base junk pile, about the right diameter for a gun barrel, and with a small hole through the center. Welding a drill to a long rod, he laboriously bored a hole in the 42-inch shaft by hand. Using a home-made reamer inside of the barrel, then built his own rifling machine to cut the grooves which make the ball fly true when fired.

Other parts were similarly handmade. Almost every bit of that first rifle, except the main spring, was manufactured by Adams. A piece of quail-eye mahogany was used for the stock. And all of the tools he used, many of which he also made himself, would have been instantly recognized by those ancient gunsmiths that built the Kentucky rifle of the east or the Hawken carried by the mountain men of America's early years.

Successful completion of the beautiful gun gave Adams the bug, even converting one modern, bolt-action .22 rifle to black powder.

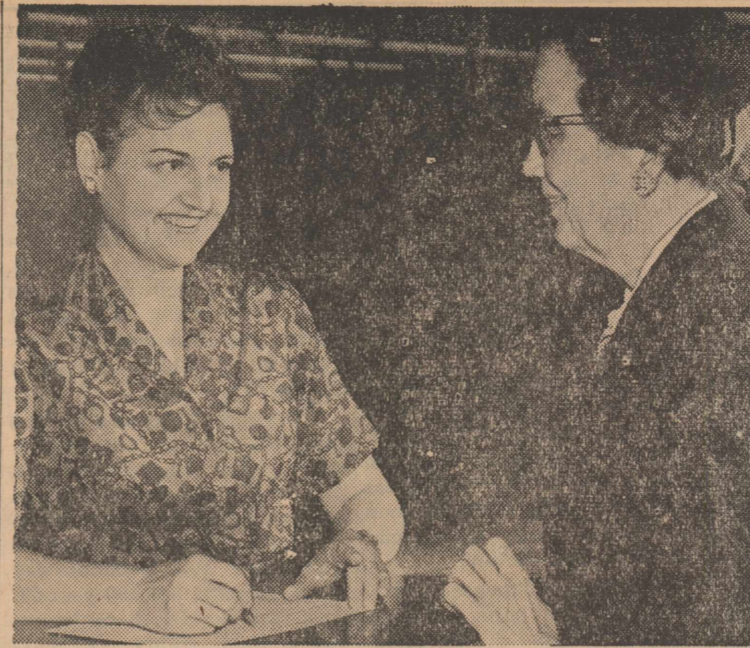

Another he manufactured from scratch is a combination battle ax and hand cannon, of the kind used when gunpowder was first used in the European Middle Ages.

About a year ago, when dependents were sent home from Cuba, Adam's wife had to leave Guantanamo, and Adams asked to be reassigned to the United States, winding up at Corpus Christi Naval Air Station, where he holds the same job he held at Guantanamo.

After settling here, Adams set up a shop in his garage, and continued with his hobby. He recently finished one fine rifle in which most of the parts ordinarily made of metal like the butt plate and trigger guard, are made of lignum vitae, a very hard wood. Only the barrel, lock and trigger are of steel.

The only trouble with the hobby, he says, is that you need time to enjoy it, and an understanding wife. He finds time, and his wife, who operated a milling machine at Mare Island Shipyard during World War II, apparently is the second, for she works away from time to time at the powder horns without which no muzzle-loading rifle would be complete.

The teacher-machinist-gunsmith says that until retirement, when he will have plenty of time for his sport, he plans to go on enjoying the black powder game as much as possible, and that includes tak-

THE LOST AMERICANS. Across the nation, there are 20 million Americans who would find it difficult to prove, legally, that they actually exist. These are "unplaced" persons, people whose births were never registered or whose birth records were somehow lost or destroyed. Legal proof of existence is vital, required to qualify for social security, receive pension benefits, get a passport, or claim an inheritance. Last hope for these lost, unknown Americans is often the records of the Census Bureau's decennial head count, a service of the Department of Commerce. At left, a woman gives her name for tracing, hoping to prove legally that she is who she says she is. Right, Bureau workers go through a labyrinth of files, searching by request for proof of existence for 200,000 undocumented souls who call for help each year.

"I get as much fun out of helping other people as in doing it myself," he said. "I'm always ready to help anybody, and particularly beginners, who need a hand to get started."

Also, to remind everyone that the date for choosing one of three local girls for Merchant Queen, has been set for June 20, the girls that are in the contest are Irma Morales, Nancy Rios, and Nelo Nava.

This Sunday the Merchants will play a team either from Corpus Christi, or Woodsboro, here, at Merchant Field.

FORMER ROCKPORT STUDENT TO RETIRE

A. C. Williamson, who attended school in Rockport before he became head of the Gulf Coast Council of Boy Scouts, a post he has held for 23 years, will retire in 1966. The following resume of his life was written by Ernest Morgan, a Caller-Times reporter:

The retirement of Williamson, known as "Coke" to thousands of Scout leaders in South Texas, was announced this weekend during the campfire program of the council's annual camporee at Knolle Farms on the Nueces River, the last Williamson will attend as Scout executive of the council, which has grown almost sevenfold since he became head of it in 1942.

In that time the number of Scouts has risen from 2,000 to 14,000 and the number of volunteer adult leaders from 700 to 5,300.

The paid executives under Williamson's direction, the men who organize the council's activities, have increased from two in 1942 to 14 this year.

In a brief speech to the 2,900 boys and Scouters at the campfire, Williamson recalled that the first camporee, during World War II, was so small it was held on one of the T-heads at Corpus Christi.

The 1965 camporee was attended by 116 troops who spread out over many acres along the banks of the river.

He says that besides the growth of the Scout membership, the high points of his tenure have been the creation of a Scout camp on Lake Corpus Christi and the erection of a permanent council headquarters building at 1444 Baldwin.

When Williamson arrived in Corpus Christi, Scout headquarters were two rooms in an office building. Later the council offices were in a converted residence on Park.

There was no council camp at first. Williamson said that he and others looked for a site and decided on Lake Corpus Christi. Land owned by Corpus Christi and leased to the State Parks Board was subleased to the council. Camp Karankawa at Lake Corpus Christi uses all of its 115 acres.

Williamson said that there is no longer room for expansion and that in a few years more land will be needed.

Williamson, the son of a Methodist minister who held pastorates in several South Texas towns, began school at Rockport. He was never a Boy Scout himself. He said that none of the towns he grew up in had troops.

While a schoolteacher, Williamson helped a Scout executive organize the first troops at Victoria and became interested in the Scouting movement. His first official Scouting position was as assistant Scoutmaster of Troop 1 at Victoria.

He became a council executive at Mexia in 1927, and later was executive of councils at Sweetwater and El Paso.

Williamson will be 65 next February and under Scout policy will retire March 1.

His successor will not be named for some time. Under the regulations of the Boy Scouts of America, he will not be from the Gulf Coast Council.

BEAR FACTS. Alaska Senator E. L. Bartlett fears that the polar bear may be heading for extinction. To save them, he has called for an international conference to save the arctic animal, a conference which would include Canada and the Soviet Union. Aim would be to take a polar bear census and to decide on protective measures needed. — WFS Photo

Three More Boats Leave For South American Fishery

Captain Wesley Moore, formerly of Port Isabel, Tex., but more lately of Cayenne, French Guiana, left here late yesterday evening on board the Cayenne Vixen which was accompanied by two other boats, the Cayenne Goddess and the Cayenne Princess—all bound for the South American shrimp bonanza.

Moore, a fleet captain for Henderson's Portion Pak, of Coral Gables, Florida, has been here for the past two or three weeks, outfitting the vessels, which represent Nos. 8, 9 and 10 of a 15-boat contract held by Rockport Yacht and Supply Co., of which John P. Mitchell, recently-elected vice president of the company, is local executive head.

The company is a wholly-owned subsidiary of the San Antonio, Luling Oil and Gas Corporation, of which T. Noah Smith is president.

Robert H. Wallace, executive vice president of both companies, says that the next boats for the Florida firm will be the Cayenne Madcap, Cayenne Witch and another still to be named.

All of the boats are 72-footers, powered with D-343 Caterpillars, which are more or less standard among the 800 or so American boats now engaged in the South American fishery.

Moore said he had been in South America more than a year, and before that had been engaged in the Nicaraguan shrimp fishery, off Bluefields, Nicaragua. However, production there is dropping, due to an influx of Mexican shrimp boats, he said, and so he moved to the new grounds being opened in the northern coast of South America.

Many Texans and people from Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama are engaged in the fishery, for it was along the coasts of the Gulf of Mexico that the shrimp fishery was founded and grew great, spreading to other shrimp grounds in the Western Hemisphere, and being used as a pattern by other countries throughout the world.

And, because there is a shortage of good captains, fishermen from other parts of this country are leaving the wintery seas of New England to captain boats where it's summer all the time. One such individual is Winston Carraker, who is captain of one of the boats making the trip with Moore.

Moore said the South American fishery is growing as fast as new men and boats can be obtained, but "there is a world of bottom that we've never put a try net on."

Main centers of the fishery are the island of Barbados and the South American ports of Georgetown, British Guiana; Cayenne and St. Laurent, French Guiana; and Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana.

The three boats Moore is taking down to the fishery, which lies off the mouths of the Orinoco and Amazon rivers, make 13 from Rockport Yacht and Supply that have entered the fishery. First to leave here late last year were four boats for a Japanese firm; then followed three 72-footers for Henderson's; then three more in February for the same firm, and now these three.

In addition to the Henderson boats, RYSCO has two left out of a contract of four for Casterline Fish Co. of Fulton; two for sismograph operators operating out of Fresport; and one for T. J. Johnson of Rockport and a partner from Aransas Pass.

suppliers, Hicks said, to force local dealers to take material of this sort by saying that unless the salacious material was accepted other and better magazines could not be purchased.

Such statements, Hicks said, were not true, and dealers definitely did not have to take any magazines, books, or comics which they did not want.

In answer to a question by Monsignor William Hengel, of Sacred Heart Church as to whether the effort should be made church by church or placed in a community-wide basis, it was the consensus that it was the concern of everyone in the community, and should be handled in such a manner.

After a number of suggestions were made as to formation of a steering committee, it was agreed that a temporary committee be formed of laymen appointed from the various churches by the pastors.

This committee is to seek information as to how salacious and violence-filled trash had been curbed in other communities. After which the next meeting will be called as soon as this information has been received and correlated.

Present at the meeting, besides those already named, were Jack McCready, Raymond Wolf, Thomas D. Picton, V. A. Dullye, Jr., Fred A. Bracht, Jr. and Roy Rogero, of St. Vincent de Paul Society, and Rev. Paschal Bergin, assistant to Monsignor Hengel, from Sacred Heart Catholic Church.

above, was also passed. Following this, Supt. J. D. Gray was instructed to secure the services of a general contractor to repair the Rockport school buildings. He was also asked to contact all banks in the county and ask for bids to serve as a depository for the next biennium.

In other business, Supt. Gray reported that Mrs. Ronnee Schultz, who has been librarian at Rockport will be transferred to sixth grade teacher in the same school, and that Mrs. John Haynes will be transferred from classroom teacher to the post of librarian at Rockport.

The board authorized Supt. Gray to postpone the June meeting from June 8 to June 15, in order that he may attend a conference at Texas A&M University.

He also called to the board's attention that, although the 13th Court of Civil Appeals has found against the Richardson interests on the tax suit instituted by the schools and joined by the county, the Richardson attorneys had filed for a re-hearing which was refused.

This, he said was the usual preliminary to an appeal to a higher court, but he added that he did not know whether such an appeal had been made.

Little time remains in the school year, he said.

The last day of classes is May 26, only about two weeks away. Baccalaureate services will be held Sunday, May 23, at 8 p.m. in the high school auditorium, and the commencement program will be held on the football field Thursday, May 27, at 8 p.m.

Gray said there were 62 in the senior class, 37 boys and 25 girls. The top four in the class, scholastically, are boys. Ten in the class averaged 90 or above for their four years in high school: six boys and four girls. With few exceptions he said, this has always been a good class.

Cochran Describes Turkish Quarters

In a recent issue, we ran the first installment of three on the life of a Peace Corpsman in Turkey, written by Paul Cochran, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Cochran. In this, the second installment, he describes the home he and another Peace Corpsman occupy, and then goes on with his interesting narrative on Turkish conditions.

exit on the courtyard and in the winter this is unmitigated H—. The last three days have been very cold (5 cent. degrees below zero), and when you have to walk through the snow to get to the bathroom in the morning, it's just not worth getting up. This last month we have used 1500 kilos of wood. For the last couple of months we have cooked in our over-coats. But for all this, we wouldn't trade it.

imposing than the Byzantine Hagia Sophia, the church of the Holy Wisdom. We are embarked on the Muslim month of fast—Ramazan. The people do not eat from dawn to dusk, nor smoke, nor drink at all, during this time. We have no particular desire to observe this fast ourselves and, as Americans and non-Muslims could ignore it and get away with it. However so as not to play the part of Satan to our unfortunate Muslim friends, and to avoid being constantly stared at, we observe the requirements when not in our house.

ology and knows a fantastic amount about the area. I had a long and illuminating conversation with him and am anxious for more, but don't know when I can make the time for it. For New Year's, the girls came down here, along with another boy from Ceyhan (near Adana) and our Peace Corps volunteer leader. Our PCVL is named Terry Nichols and is a marvelous person with whom both Frank and I have a great deal in common. Anyway, our New Year's party was excellent, partly because, as everyone who has seen our house (including the PC doctor and the PC representative, as well as other volunteers) has said, "boy, what a perfect place for a party!"

ment and the inevitable boredom in a small out-of-the-way eastern town. Yet the exasperating aspects of this Peace Corps service are by no means the only ones, nor are they the most outstanding. Quite the contrary. They are far outweighed by the joyful experiences—some fascinating some simply heart-warming—with which they are contiguous. No volunteer stationed in a town where he could be run down by a camel caravan on the way to school, feasted or shot at by a smuggler, or treated to a performance by sish wielding dervishes, has any right to complain of an utter lack of excitement.

BALANCE OF PAYMENTS deficit is dwindling. In a special report from President Johnson's Cabinet, shown above, it was predicted that the balance of payments deficit will range between $500 million and $1 billion by the end of the year, compared to the $3 billion deficit of 1964. However, Commerce Secretary John T. Connor, at far end and on opposite side of table, warns that increased foreign travel by Americans, resulting in a larger outflow of dollars, could affect the figure adversely. — WFS Photo

CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Crossword puzzle grid with clues for Across and Down. Includes a solution key for the puzzle.

We Peace Corps volunteers in Turkey have the advantage of having a definite job, albeit sometimes exasperating, and we know pretty well precisely what is expected of us. Thank God, Frank and I are in an excellent town in an area that is fascinating historically as well as sociologically. We're happy, we're grateful to be here we think we are doing some good, and I for one regard this experience as a highlight in a life of really wonderful experiences that in a sense I've never suffered for nor deserved. I'm very thankful, believe me.

Frank and I are extremely fortunate in being only an hour away by bus from Gaziantep, where two very attractive girls from our Turkey Two group are stationed—Martha Crawford and Nancy Bouse. A third girl has recently joined them from the Turkey III group. We went up there to spend Christmas, had a very pleasant time and had the great fortune to meet an American doctor, stationed at the American hospital there.

Finally, a few students have learned a bit of English and most of them (especially the smaller ones) are charming young people with a desire to please their teacher, though they often appear to be at a loss to know how. Anyone who has ever taught youngsters knows how gratifying this last trait can be.

tion Geographic cut it to shreds in accordance with their policy of eliminating everything that could be termed controversial or critical. In Jim's and Nan's article they followed this policy to such an extent that nothing of value or interest was left. I think this policy accounts for the incredibly poor quality of the writing in the Geographic. Every decent writer is discouraged from writing for them, but also, in the spirit of strunk and white, if the contents are watered down with such innocuous results, the style can't possibly be good.

Book, you'd be nothing by a bunch of pagan polytheists'. We western Christians have accepted the theology of the first council of Nicea for a long time, and we tend to be surprised when confronted with such elemental (and good!) Question challenging its doctrine.

We have been here long enough to be able to give our opinions fairly openly, and as long as we don't dwell on the touchy subjects—as everywhere, religion and politics—but only give an opinion on these when we are clearly provoked to it, they respect us for frankness. The Turks themselves are the frankest people on the face of the earth, but on second thought it may only seem that way because Americans, at least in our superficial 'cocktail party talk', are singularly insincere.

Freezing house and classrooms, wood that won't burn, waterless mornings and electricity cut off for days at a time, flies, cockroaches, mice and other assorted vermin, predatory "house" cats that snatch the meat off your plate as you reach for the salt box, the way to the john, down a glacial staircase and across a blizzard-swepted, snow drifted courtyard; in the summer, dust storms from across the Syrian Desert, (a nice balance to the icy cold winter) and worst of all, dysentery. (But then, after all, the Peace Corps wouldn't be the Peace Corps without dysentery).

Even more discouraging, perhaps are the physical difficulties that must be met; the constant criticism of one's country's foreign policy; the subtle suggestion that for one reason or another one's religion was long ago outmoded; students who primarily due to lack of opportunity and an intellectually poor background, have no desire to study, and so, when they do not learn, make one suspect that one's "impact" is zero, and of course, the lack of entertainment and the inevitable boredom in a small out-of-the-way eastern town. Yet the exasperating aspects of this Peace Corps service are by no means the only ones, nor are they the most outstanding. Quite the contrary. They are far outweighed by the joyful experiences—some fascinating some simply heart-warming—with which they are contiguous.

Anyway, Nan and Jim are working for the Peace Corps, recruiting. If you were to write them a note asking them to Windside if they should be recruiting down in our neighborhood, you would not only find them delightful people, but also, there couldn't be a better way to find out about me!

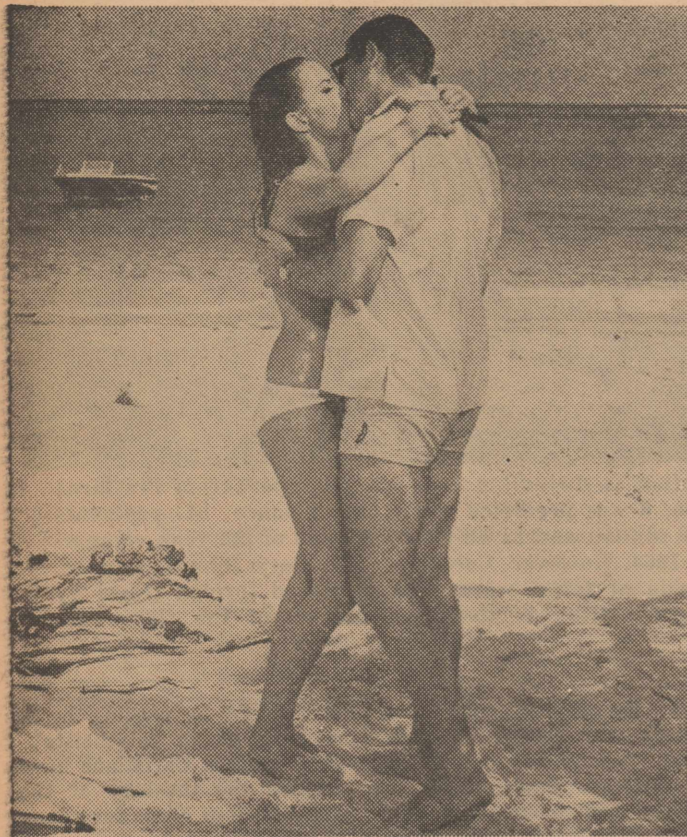

By an extraordinary stroke of vernal good fortune, the Muslim 'sacrifice festival' coincides with the first four days of Easter week this year. Exactly how long this happy concurrence came about I'll never understand, since both festivals are determined according to two completely different yet equally lunar calendars. Anyway, the Muslim holiday is the time when second-year Peace Corps volunteers in Turkey hold their termination conference, so I'll be in Ankara, which is to say, within reach of the British Embassy Chapel, for Easter, and for this, I am extremely grateful—and needful. I am taking great joy in observing a Lent which promises an Easter at its conclusion.

PERSONALIZED PLATES ARE NOW AVAILABLE

Now Texans have a new status symbol: Personalized, prestige auto license plates. A bill approved by the Legislature and signed by Governor Connally Thursday authorizes issuance of personalized license plates upon payment of a $10 fee in addition to normal auto registration charges.

Only one plate of a kind may be issued, and it will go to the first applicant. Once a specific, personalized license plate has been assigned to a motorist, it will be reserved for his use in succeeding years if his renewal application is submitted by Jan. 1.

All applications must be sent to the motor Vehicle Division, Texas Highway Department, 40 and Jackson, Austin. Application forms now are available at the individual county tax assessor-collector's office. They must be accompanied by the $10 personalized license registration fee. A similar fee, in addition to normal registration charges, will be required each year a personalized plate is issued.

All applications must be accompanied by the applicant's name, address and classification of vehicle for which the personalized plates are intended—limited to passenger cars, trucks, truck-tractors, (not exceeding 10,000 pounds), buses or house trailers.

Characters on the personalized plates—either numbers, letters, or a combination of both, will be limited to six. Contrary to normal policy the use of vowels will not be prohibited.

Applications for all-number plates will not be accepted as they conflict with the Department's regular licensing system. However, absent-minded motorists who have difficulty remembering their license numbers still will be able to use various "gimmicks" within acceptable combinations to indicate their birthdays or other anniversaries. Examples might include "Sept. 24," "April 2" or "Nov. 6." Three-letter series may be followed only by numbers 1 through 9.

IT USED TO BE SIMPLE. Planting cotton in the old days was a relatively simple job for farmers, but modern-day knowledge demands more complicated steps. For example, farmers in Tennessee, above, painstakingly examine the variation in soil texture before planting. Number and depth of seeds must vary even in a single row, according to the soil's texture. It's extra work, but the reward is richer yields. — WFS Photo

Teenager Goes To School In Bed By Telephone

Regarding an operation to correct spinal curvature as "something I wouldn't have missed for anything, I've made so many friends," cherry teenager Trina Crow of Corpus Christi is going to school by telephone and making top grades in the four subjects she's taking, in that manner, and by tutoring.

And far from having too much time while she has been in bed, waiting for her back to heal, she says she's so busy she doesn't have hours enough in the day to accomplish everything she'd like to do.

Confined to bed most of the time since last September, with a cast encasing her from her shoulders to her hips, Trina says that people she has met in her various trips to the Methodist Hospital in Houston and others who have heard of her predicament write her cherry letters, and nearly all of them contain suggestions on how to pass the time she's supposed to have.

"When I went to the hospital, I wasn't feeling too well, and I thought it would be a sort of a vacation, but it sure hasn't been. Time has just flown. It doesn't seem more than yesterday that we went to Houston for that first operation."

And far from feeling sorry for herself, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Crow, of 3310 Casa de Palmas, attends classes by means of a school-to-home communications service installed by the telephone company, and is having herself a blast.

It's called the Home Bound Student Service, and its operation is fairly simple. One end of the unit is rigged to a Ray High School classroom, and the other end is by Terri's bed, more than a mile away. By flipping a switch she can listen to classroom conversations just as though she was in the same room herself and when the teacher calls on her to answer, Terri pushes a button atop her speaker unit and talks into the box. Her voice is heard in the classroom.

She's taking four subjects—English, civics, psychology and Spanish—and making B's or better in all of them. And that Spanish is particularly important, because she needs two years of foreign language as an entrance requirement for college.

And to college she's going, for she wants to be a doctor—a desire she's had ever since her father gave her a toy microscope at the ripe old age of five. The family environment may have something to do with it, too, for she has five uncles that are doctors and, she adds, "there are some dentists in the family, also."

Terri has her course all charted. As soon as she finishes high school, which she will do along with the rest of her class, for she really needs only half a credit, she'll enroll in Delmar College, Corpus Christi, from there her mother says, the next step will be Trinity College at San Antonio, and, finally, Baylor Medical College.

And the spinal malformation, which doctors had warned would curve at an angle of 96 degrees by the time she was forty, has been corrected, so she can stand straight and look the world squarely in the eye.

"I had never been hospitalized before, and I didn't much look forward to it," she said. "I was even afraid of needles." But the pretty, plucky teenager withstood the surgery admirably, and the only tears she shed were those when she left the Houston hospital. "I had made so many wonderful friends there."

If all goes well, the cast will be removed soon, but even so, she faces a long period of rest before she is on her feet again, leading a normal active life, continuing the schooling that will eventually lead to her medical degree.

But while she's confined to her home, Trina's school-to-home telephone system helps her keep in touch with old friends and even to make new ones. Ray High School students whom she hadn't met, but whose voices became familiar through the two-way communications set-up, now often stop by the house to visit, chat about school, or study.

Even when she is not being visited by her classmates, Trina doesn't feel alone. With the school-to-home pipeline turned on, sounds of the classroom fill her bedroom, and she is surrounded by her friends.

FOOD BY COUPONS. In an attempt to get more food to low income families, the Department of Agriculture will expand its food stamp program into 41 states by this summer. Eligible families exchange money normally spent on food for coupons that buy more. Benefit goes not only to consumers, but to American farmers as well, since only U.S.-produced food can be bought with the stamps. Above, elderly citizen makes a purchase with stamps. — WFS Photo

How Hawaii Marines Stalk Viet Cong In Jungle

Editor's Note—Los Angeles Times correspondent Jack went on patrol in South Viet Nam with the 3rd Battalion of the 4th Marines, a unit which came from Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station.

Jordan and Stokes are members of Kaneohe's 1st Marine Brigade.

With U. S. Marines, Phu Bai, Viet Nam—"Out there is Mike Company," said the Battalion commander, Lt. Col. W. W. (Woody) Taylor.

He pointed to a distant set of green hills that shimmered in the tropical heat.

"Load yourself in one of those M-113's" he invited. "They're taking water and other supplies out to Mike. Mike has a busy night planned, so if you're joining them, now's the time."

It was a pleasure to be back with an American ground outfit again. Vietnamese Army units with American advisers still pose a strain. Here was the 3rd Battalion of the Fourth Marines—two weeks ashore and casually alert— which is not a contradiction when speaking of Marines.

Now it was Mike Company's turn to probe the hill at night—looking to better the score.

Our armored M-113—an armed box of steel on treads—was manned by U. S. Army MPs. They said they were glad to be helping the Marines, just to get away from policing GIs in the nearby city of Hue, the ancient walled capital of Vietnam.

I think they liked driving these M-113s because it brought out their hotrod instinct. They drove like escaping bank robbers and their passengers inside bounced around like Mexican jumping beans.

We headed for Mike Company, following a faint track, then fording a stream and head across country. We churned past a Buddhist family shrine—an ornate arch and headstone gaudily painted and stuck out in nowhere. We ground past an old French pillbox, the concrete grayed by time and rain, a reminder that wars had been fought here before.

Our churning treads crushed the bright flowers of this sandy wasteland. A bird that looked like a snipe fled from the tangled undergrowth, shrilling protests. People may be different, but the flowers and wild creatures are about the same around the world.

Our approach was noted by a lookout and his partner. They waved us in. As we rounded the knoll, we saw most of Mike Company bathing in a stream. This welcome bath removed three days of accumulated jungle filth and weariness of body—but when the men came out of the creek many of them had acquired blood-sucking leeches. These repulsive creatures are common here.

"Put salt on them" instructed Lance Cpl. Bill Wisimmons, who comes from Monroe, La., and knows how to shed leeches.

Mike's Company commander is 1st Lt. Roy DeForest of Rockport, Tex. He is 25, young to hold the loyalty of 200 men, some far more experienced than he, such as Gunnery Sgt. Jesse Jordan and 1st Sgt. Ben Stokes. But DeForest has not only their loyalty but their respect.

For one thing, DeForest knows when to deviate from "the book." Marine units around Da Nang have gone patrolling with helmet, armored vest and full pack—and as many as 40 men out of 200 in the company have fallen to heat stroke under the load.

Mike Company wisely left its helmets, vests and backboards in base camp. In four days under the sweltering sun here, they have only had two heat casualties.

"LET GO OF THAT POOR MAN!"

night. The red-headed lieutenant talked of rock formations . . . of how he had once wanted to be a ship's pilot like his father in the port of Corpus Christi, Tex. But he's finally decided to make the Marine Corps his career.

He didn't say why, but the answer cried out. The kinship of solid men had got him. The mood of reverie was broken when a siren whistle sounded overhead. Then a dirty gray explosion broke the peaceful valley floor in front of us. The sound of the shell we had seen explode came seconds later. After a second closer explosion, DeForest sent a messenger to the artillery observer, "asking 'what gives?'"

Before he could answer, six shells burst close enough so the shrapnel pelted nearby like rain. This was a test firing, in case Mike Company should be attacked from the valley, the artillery forward observer radioed. DeForest shrugged it off.

We settled for the night, on top of Hill 46, its height in meter above sea level. The shores of the South China Sea were not far away, and the lights of Hue were shining. But on Hill 46 there was no smoking, no talking. This was guerrilla country. Only the whispered coded voice on the radio disturbed our velvet night.

We lay quiet on ponchos, warm enough but wanting to excavate the tiny uncomfortable stones beneath—but fearing to make the noise required. Through the dragging hours of the night we waited, half-awake, for any sudden alarm. There was no contract with the enemy. Only the mosquitoes were victorious in this long night.

At dawn we rose, stretched, yawned and went back to Mike Company's waterhole. "When the Viet Cong want to let us find them, I guess they will," philosophized Gunnery Sgt. Jordan.
