Cars among casualties of 7-inch snow

Midlanders who woke up New Year's Day groaning and moaning at the thought of digging their cars out of the 7 inches of snow that blanketed Midland, can count their blessings compared to more than a dozen residents of the Peppertree Apartments at 2700 N. Midland Drive.

These residents were left aghast at the sight of their cars entombed in an aluminum-type canopy.

The apartment complex's south carport covering of the north parking lot began slouching about 2:30 a.m. Saturday, according to Sharon McDaniel, a Peppertree resident.

"They (managers) came and told us to move our cars about 5:30 (a.m.)," Ms. McDaniel said, adding that she complied with the request.

"They told us this carport (northside of the parking lot) was more sturdy," she laughed, pointing to the carport covering that laid on top of her 1980 Subaru.

"Then it crashed! At 7:30 (a.m.) I found my car with the covering on top of it," the distraught Ms. McDaniel said. "If I had kept it where it was, this might not have happened."

Even though the south carport did not completely fall, the two carports opposite on the northside had a domino effect as they crashed.

Robert Guinn, husband of Linda Guinn, the apartment's assistant manager, said the Peppertree complex owners had been notified and insurance would cover the damages.

"It just broke away from the weight of the snow," Guinn said.

The snowstorm also affected transportation at Midland Regional Airport, according to a spokesperson at the airport tower. Holiday travelers attempting to leave or arrive via commercial airlines were disappointed when 2 inches of slush and 4 inches of powdered snow covered the runways, forcingpilots to stay put on the ground or to forget about landing.

"We hope to get some of the (commercial) airlines up by tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon, but we're not sure," the control tower spokesperson said.

Although the New Year's Eve storm caused havoc to many, it also delighted others who trudged the white powder Saturday, creating snow sculptures and constructing snowmen.

However, the Midland Police Department weren't delighted, as they were kept busy working about 15 to 20 fender-benders which resulted from icy road conditions.

Police departments in area towns also were on the road, helping travelers who braved the highways.

Big Spring police reported slick streets with 5 to 7 inches of snow, whild Andrews and Lamesa police departments said snow accumulation was 8 inches.

Odessa police reported "knee deep" conditions in some areas with an overall 4½-inches of snow accumulation with freezing, slick roads. Crane and Garden City officials also reported snow accumulation at 4½ inches. Rankin and Big Lake police reported 2 inches, while Stanton officials recorded 8 inches with flurries still falling.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, hazardous road conditions will continue through today with a travelers' advisory, unless the sun melts the sheet of ice frosting the streets.

Decreasing cloudiness should bring the temperature up to near 40 today, but colder temperatures in the upper teens are expected to re-freeze the Inspecting damage to her 1980 Subaru at the Peppertree Apartments, 2700 N. Midland Drive, is Sharon McDaniel. As the snow kept falling Saturday morning to amount to 7 inches, the weight on the carport grew heavier until the metal structure crumpled, entombing 15 cars. But the snow didn't bring bad news to everyone.

Big Spring woman dies in accident

BIG SPRING — A woman died and five others were injured Friday when a tractor-trailer struck a parked car at 9 p.m. on Interstate 20, west of Big Spring.

Connie Spears Rabb, 23, of Big Spring was pronounced dead after she was struck by a tractor-trailer which sent her body over the bridge, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Apparently, Donnie Ray Trotter, 30, of Big Spring was parked in the westbound lane of I-20 after a previous accident. Trotter and Ms. Spears, who was a passenger in the car, attempted to leave the car when a tractor-trailer hit Ms. Spears and the vehicle, the DPS reported.

Kenneth James Thomas, driver of the tractor-trailer, was not injured.

Passengers Mildred Spears, 41, and Fernette Spears, 19 were transferred from Malone-Hogan Hospital in Big Spring to Lubbock General for neurological problems, according to a spokesperson at Malone-Hogan.

Other passengers Demita Spears Clemons, 21, Joyce Adams, 33, and the driver, Trotter, were treated and released at Malone-Hogan.

Rival Moslem militias battle in Tripoli

By TERRY A. ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon -- Rival Moslem militias in Tripoli battered each other with rockets, artillery and small-arms fire Saturday in fighting so fierce that civil defense workers were forced to leave the dead and wounded lying in the streets, radio reports said.

Panicked residents of the northern port city formed long lines at bakeries and groceries, seeking to stockpile food supplies as the battle spread out of neighboring slums that have been the center of the Sunni-Awalite battle for dominance, the state-owned radio.

The two militias launched heavy artillery and rocket barrages, while gunmen fought in the streets with light weapons, radio reports said. The fighting cut electricity and water supplies to parts of Lebanon's second-largest city, they said.

Civil defense workers reported they had been forced to leave many victims, living and dead, in the streets, and police could give no casualty figures because of the intensity of the fighting.

The fighting had broken out Friday after a week-long truce between the pro-Syrian Alawite "Arab Democratic Party" militia and a coalition of anti-Syrian Sunni Moslem militias called the "Popular Resistance Movement." There was no indication of what triggered the renewed violence.

At least 83 people had been killed in Tripoli, 50 miles north of Beirut, in the month of fighting before the truce.

The two militia groups have been fighting sporadic battles in the Mediterranean coast city for nearly a year in a war that involves long-held sectarian animosities and friction betwen the Palestine Liberation Organization and Syria. The Sunni militia is backed by the PLO.

The Tel Aviv military command reported, meanwhile, that gunmen ambushed an Israeli military vehicle near Kfar Sil, south of Beirut, and wounded two Israeli soldiers with small amrs fire. The soldiers were evacuated to a hospital while Israeli forces hunted for the attackers, the command said.

In Beirut, children chanted "We are your men, Abu Ammar," using the PLO code name for Yasser Arafat, as more than 100 women and children held two marches to mark the Palestinian guerrilla organization's first raid on Israel on Dec. 31, 1965.

They were the first PLO demonstrations in Beirut since the bulk of the guerrilla army was evacuated in August and September under the guns of the Israeli army.

One group of about 75 women and children, led by four PLO officials, marched in drizzling rain to "Martyr's Cemetery," where many Palestinian guerrillas are buried. The officials included the PLO's ambassador to Lebanon, Shafik al Hout.

About 40 other women and children escorted by internal security police walked to the mass grave in the Chatilla refugee camp, where the bodies of hundreds of massacre victims are buried. The group carried PLO flags, wreaths and pictures of slain relatives.

While the children chanted their allegiance to Arafat, other marchers demanded revenge for the camp massacre, blamed on Lebanese Christian gunmen. Wreaths were laid on the mass grave and brief prayers spoken.

Cardinal Terence Cooke, archbishop of New York and vicar-general of the United States armed forces, celebrated Mass for sailors aboard a Navy ship anchored offshore.

Cooke, making a five-day visit to Beirut, also said Mass on New Year's Eve for the 1,200 Marines at Beirut airport who are part of the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon.

Negotiations between Israel and Lebanon, which began last week, resume Monday at the Beirut suburb of Khalde. The two sides are expected to continue trying to resolve a dispute over the agenda for the negotiations.

Israel, which invaded Lebanon on June 6 to crush the PLO's Lebanese power base, wants to start with discussion of normalization of Israeli-Lebanese relations and a security arrangement for southern Lebanon. The Lebanese want the talks to begin with the withdrawal of an estimated 25,000 Israeli troops, 30,000 Syrian soldiers and 8,000 PLO guerrillas.

At the stroke of midnight Saturday, the tradition of "the Phone Man," such as Joe Longoria, coming to the house to hook a new telephone became a thing of the past. A consumer now must buy his phone at one place and have it connected by the Bell telephone people.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a six-part series explaining some implications of one of the most massive corporate dismemberments in history, the breakup of AT&T's Bell System, scheduled for Jan. 1, 1984.

By JIM PRESNELL
Energy-Business Writer

Southwestern Bell was awarded a 90-cent local service rate hike last week, and the company is raising the cost of phone installation to almost $100 if Bell employees have to come to your house. These news items, although they make consumers mad, are almost old news before they hit our pocketbooks. We've come to expect it.

But tomorrow, as far as telephones themselves, it's strictly "caveat emptor." That is, buyer beware. The telephone was transformed into just another appliance while we weren't looking New Year's Day. It might as well be a toaster or a refrigerator.

A ruling by the Federal Communications Commission forbids Bell Operating Companies (BOCs) like Southwestern Bell to lease or sell additional telephones, effective Jan. 1, 1983.

THEY CAN SUPPLY some businesses and residences with phones out of stock, but the Midland phone company cannot order new sets from its current manufacturer, AT&T's Western Electric. Bell spokesman Jay Allen warns the phone company's supply will run out.

Bell System Breakup

First in a Series

The reasoning behind making consumers buy a phone just as they would buy a radio, television or toaster oven is: If they don't have to buy light bulbs from the electric company, why should they buy telephones from the telephone company?

If consumers haven't thought about this before, that's because Americans are used to dealing with "The Phone Company."

IF YOU ARE leasing a phone from

Democratic victory state's number one story in 1982

DALLAS (AP) — Democrats' smashing return to statewide elective office — led by Mark White's victory over Bill Clements in the governor's race — dominated Texas news stories in 1982, according to a poll of journalists across the state.

All but one of the newspaper and broadcast executives participating in The Associated Press survey listed the Texas Elections on their ballots, and almost half of them listed it No. 1.

There was almost as much unanimity among the three stories that ranked next highest on the list, but the sweep by Democrats to all the statewide elective offices easily dominated the voting.

A get-out-the-vote effort, led by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, not only helped White blunt Clements' try for a second 4-year term, but swept Democrats into office in all other statewide offices. GOP candidates also were bumped from new congressional seats they hoped to win.

After Texas Elections, here's how the state's newspaper and broadcast journalists rated Texas's top 10 stories of the past 12 months:

2. The Dec. 7 execution of Charlie Brooks Jr., the first inmate to be put to death by lethal injection in the United States.

3. The San Antonio trial and conviction of Charles Harrelson and two others in connection with the assassination of U.S. Judge John Wood Jr.

4. The mid-May collapse of Braniff International, in which the airline ceased operations, laid off thousands of employees and sought protection from creditors under federal bankruptcy laws.

5. The repeated devaluation of the peso by the Mexican government, triggering economic crises in Texas border cities.

6. The recession in Texas, including the layoff by Texas Instruments of 2,600 employees in September, bringing to 10,000 the number furloughed in two years. That layoff came on the heels of the Aug. 21 closing of the Lone Star Steel plant that resulted in the layoff of about 3,500 workers.

7. The simultaneous announcements in May by Texas prison officials — later vetoed by Gov. Clements — that in order to meet a federal judge's order against overcrowding they would refuse to accept any more prisoners and would parole 600 inmates already behind bars.

8. The confession by Coral Eugene Watts, a Houston bus mechanic, to 11 Houston-area killings, followed by his leading police to the graves.

9. The Paris tornado that left eight dead and hundreds homeless in its April 2 swath through the North Texas city.

10. A controversial ruling on Texas' congressional redistricting that reversed the Texas Legislature and forced a delay of filing deadlines, but which held up through appeals all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Finishing just out of the top 10 were a Houston hotel fire that killed 12 people; a 43-year-old man who received the first heart transplant using a new anti-rejection drug; the death of four Salvadorans during an aborted attempt to smuggle 50 aliens into the U.S. near Edinburg; and an extortion attempt that shut down a Gulf Chemical plant near Baytown after five bombs were found.

Two other stories were mentioned on several ballots, but not prominently enough to win inclusion among the top 10. They were the airplane crash in which evangelist Lester Roloff died on Nov. 2, and the Sept. 9 launching of a rocket from Matagorda Island, the first such venture by a private company.

Texas man falls from cliff

Joseph McDonough, 52, fell 15 to 20 feet into near-freezing water in the middle of the canyon here Friday afternoon, injuring his head and losing all his teeth, officials said.

"He was in waist-deep water when we found him. He was shaking so bad it was impossible to tell anything from him," said Randall County sheriff's deputy Kirk Williams, who was in the helicopter during the rescue.

"He was frozen to the core," Williams said.

McDonough was listed in serious condition late Friday night at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, a hospital official said.

Doctors were attempting to warm his body, guard against hypothermia and assess the damage to his skull, said the official, who asked not to be identified.

Rescuers had to hike three miles over rough terrain to reach McDonough, who then was carried one-half mile to a flat ledge for the helicopter pickup.

Herbert Gambrell dies at age of 84

DALLAS (AP) — Herbert Pickens Gambrell, chairman emeritus of the Southern Methodist University history department, has died at the age of 84.

Gambrell was the author of several books, including "Mirabeau Buonaparte Lamar: Troubadour and Crusader" in 1934 and "Anson Jones — The Last President of Texas" in 1948. With his wife, the late Virginia Leddy Gambrell, he also wrote "A Pictoral History of Texas," which won the Award of Merit from the American Association for State and Local History.

I ARE A Good Deal.

You've heard all about the Individual Retirement Account. But maybe you don't realize just what a great deal the IRA really is. Interest rates are seesawing, your income is increasing, and income taxes are taking a greater portion of your earnings each year. Portions you need now. That's how the IRA can help you today. You can open an IRA and deduct up to $2000 from your 1982 income tax return. Each year until you retire, if you deduct $2000 annually, you can retire comfortably because your money earns interest on interest. Depending on your age now, you could have almost a million dollars at retirement.

When you begin making withdrawals from your IRA, between ages 59½ and 70½, you'll be protected even further from income taxes because you'll be in a much lower tax bracket.

Briercroft has other types of IRAs to help you now and later.

Briercroft offers the Spousal IRA for couples with only one working spouse. With this plan, you can deduct $2250 in taxes per year.

The Employer IRA is set up by employers, employee associations or labor unions who want to provide a retirement fund for the benefit of their employees. Once contributed, funds belong to the employee, not the employer.

The Rollover IRA is designed for individuals who receive lump-sum distributions from other qualified retirement or pension plans. That large amount of money, subject to taxation, can be sheltered with a Rollover IRA.

The best part of the IRA good deal.

The best part is simply this. You can open an IRA. As long as you are an employee, with or without an existing pension plan, you are qualified. Any way you slice it, the IRA is a great deal. Let us help you open yours today. Call the Briercroft office nearest you.

Lieutenant Governor Bill Hobby

Hobby remains familiar face

By KATHRYN BAKER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A team of novices descend on the Capitol Jan. 11 to tackle perhaps Texas' toughest legislative agenda in history.

New faces include a governor, a speaker of the House, 10 state senators and 44 state representatives, not to mention attorney general, land commissioner, agriculture commissioner and treasurer.

But one reassuringly familiar face remains in a position often called the most powerful in Texas — lieutenant governor.

Bill Hobby is going into his sixth regular legislative session at the helm of the state Senate. He is a low-keyed man, more interested in the machinations of government than the trappings of power.

Quietly and proficiently, as he has been doing every other year for 10 years, he reels off the "big issues" of the upcoming session.

"The three big issues are going to be money, money and money," says Hobby.

They always are.

AS CHAIRMAN of the Legislative Budget Board, Hobby's hand can both giveth and taketh the money away.

"Every session there are 5,000 or 6,000 bills introduced and 600 or 700 passed," he said. "There is one general appropriations act, and the rest of it is poetry."

The programs that will compete for major parts in that appropriations act are familiar. They have shifted in relative importance somewhat, partially due to cutbacks in federal funds.

There will be "tremendous pressure" on legislators to replace those lost federal dollars, said Hobby, who already has predicted state taxes must increase by about $1.5 billion if Texas is to pay even the minimal freight on its programs.

Once again funds for water will head the list of "Big Issues," he said.

Water shortages in West Texas have produced some of the Legislature's most creative thinking, such as diverting the Mississippi River into the Panhandle.

Hobby points out, however, that maintaining the water Texas already has will force legislators to dig deep into the state's pockets, especially because of missing federal money.

THE FEDERAL WATER quality law, passed in he mid-'70s, set escalating standards of water purification which peak during the next biennium. Cities and counties don't have the money to pay for the equipment the new, stricter clean water standards will require.

"Mayor Henry Cisneros (of San Antonio) has told me that they're going to lose about $60 million a year in the next five years, which they'll either have to replace with local funds or be coming to the state for, or else they won't be able to comply with the water quality act," Hobby said.

School building and prison construction funding were given a lick and a promise in a special session last summer. Now legislators will be expected to find long-term solutions for them.

Hobby said legislators will be asked to quickly pass, early in the Legislature, a $90 million emergency prison construction appropriation. The budget board, he said, estimates a 400 prisoner-per-month increase in the state penal system for the foreseeable future.

"In September, it was 900," Hobby said. "I hope that was just a blip on the chart, but it's nonetheless a fact."

GROWTH IS THE factor that permeates all Texas' problems.

It produced a school construction crisis, Hobby said, but also has aggravated another problem — a teacher shortage, both in colleges and public schools.

The Legislative Budget Board has recommended a sizable increase in public schoolteacher salaries to try to draw new ones into the field and keep the veterans. Teachers' lobbyists don't think it's enough, though, and will ask for more.

Some legislators already have promised to try to set up a separate dedicated fund for state universities not included in the Permanent University Fund. The PUF covers only Texas and Texas A&M universities.

"Taking them in rank order of dollars expended, education's first. Next comes transportation," Hobby said.

Highways, after years of complacency, have sprung up with a mind-boggling, multi-billion-dollar request.

Texas' highway system was built 30 years ago with a life expectancy of between 12 and 20 years. Normal deterioration would dictate repair or replacement of the roads by now, but rapid state growth has made the situation even worse.

ABOUT $5 BILLION is needed over the next two years, highway officials say, to repair roads and build new ones.

"I don't think it's an irresponsible request," said Hobby. "I think it's a legitimate statement of need. Now, obviously, all of those needs are not going to be met in one biennium (two-year period).

"The good news," he summed up, "is that we're by far in the best financial shape of any state I'm familiar with. The bad news is that even Texas doesn't have unlimited resources."

So much for the money. Now for the "poetry."

"Sunset legislation will be a much bigger thing this time," Hobby predicted. "In the past, it's always been the Battleship Texas Commission and licensing agencies and so forth. This time it's public utilities, the Railroad Commission, Banking Commission, Board of Insurance, just a few little minor things like that."

Many legislators have jumped on an anti-DWI bandwagon, and measures to increase penalties and raise the drinking age will be debated, Hobby said.

These are "perennial things," he said, "drinking age, horse racing. And there'll be some issue with the plaintiffs' lawyers on one side and the defense lawyers on the other. It used to be no-fault insurance, then it was medical malpractice, then products liability. There's always some issue between the two sides of the law there.

Leaders speak of hope, peace

By The Associated Press

World leaders greeted the New Year with pleas for peace Saturday but fresh violence left more casualties in Lebanon, and 42 were wounded by a hand-grenade in Manila.

Millions of Japanese flocked to Shinto shrines to make New Year's requests for good health, wealth and success. Israelis trooping to Jerusalem found the city shimmering under a blanket of unseasonably early snow.

Many world leaders talked of new beginnings and pledged solutions for the problems of 1982. In a speech on Lebanon's national television Friday, President Amin Gemayel looked forward to withdrawal of foreign troops and the return qf "sovereignty and dignity" to his strife-torn nation. Yet heavy sectarian fighting continued Saturday in the northern port of Tripoi.

In Poland, where martial law used to smother the Solidarity movement ended at midnight Thursday, council of State chairman Henry Jablonski somberly said: "The coming year will not be an easy one." Vodka-loving Poles spent hours in line Friday for party supplies, but some then found "to their dismay and fury that (their bottles) contained only ordinary water," the newspaper Kurier Polski reported in Warsaw.

Two women were trampled to death and 36 people were injured in a crowd of 100,000 jamming Londodon's Trafalgar Square. A young man died of a heart attack, the London Ambulance Service said. Flying bottles and drunken fistfights took over the celebration after midnight, when Big Ben rang out 1982 with 12 resounding booms.

Next to the Tower of London the first of a chain of 160 bonfires was lighted. Barbecues and dances were held in mild weather around the bonfires.

As fireworks exploded in Manila, an unidentified man tossed a fragmentation-type hand grenade into a crowd watching a tribal dance at about 1 a.m. Saturday.

"It was like seeing a Christmas tree," said 18-year-old Belen Silva, nicked in the leg by shrapnel. "There was a loud explosion and colors went shooting up. I saw people rolling on the ground."

No fatalities were reported in the bombing, the sixth of the week in the Philipines. Two earlier bombings, blamed by the government on communist rebels or Moslem separatists, killed 19 people aand wounded 165.

Forty police officers were injured by stones and bottles and rioters torched a police car in parts of the Danish capital of Copenhagen. Police said 22 youths were arrested and charged with assaulting officers.

Eight people were killed in auto accidents on icy Belgian highways early Saturday, police in Brussels said.

Swiss Alpine resorts swarmed with celebrities on New Year's Eve, including Spanish King Juan Carlos and his queen skiing near Gstaad. U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Nasily members moved into a hotel near St. Moritz.

A cold snowball in the face is the best way to suddenly "come alive," as Margie Norton discovers when her husband, Eric, treats her to a snowball fight Saturday morning. The two were only dozens of Midlanders who enjoyed the rare 7-inch snowfall on New Year's Day.

Bell making many changes

Southwestern Bell, it will still service it. If you move, the phone company may ask you to buy it or give it back, so it can be sold as a reconditioned unit.

A total of 22 Bell System companies that now service 80 percent of the U.S.'s 182 million telephones will stop selling and leasing new telephones this month to open up the field to their competitors.

"It's like a big divorce," Jay Allen says. Allen is Midland's Southwestern Bell public relations person. "Divorce is never easy," he concludes.

BUYING A PHONE offered consumers savings, and they started to buy telephones in large numbers when they became available for sale.

David Aylward, an adviser to Congress on communications, said recently: "The consumer will benefit. Buying a phone for $35 and owning it instead of paying $36 over the course of one year just to lease it is a major benefit."

You can shop for a new telephone in Midland at Radio Shack, K-Mart and other electronics merchants, or through J.C. Penney's catalog.

Harold's Electronics on Andrews Highway even carries a deluxe Sony telephone that has a base station and a cordless carrying range of 300-400 feet, depending on whether the house has lead walls.

ALSO SELLING telephones will be American Bell Phone Center.

What happened to Southwestern Bell PhoneCenter in Midland Park Mall? It's vanished. Poof! It's now listed with Directory Assistance as American Bell PhoneCenter.

AT&T created this new company to take over retail-area stores and allow them to become independent of local phone companies.

The American Bell store will not offer consumers telephone connections or changes in service. Just phones.

They will sell — not lease — the instruments.

BUT THE VALUE of the Bell name in Midland, AT&T hopes, will sell lots of American Bell phones.

Archie J. McGill, new president of American Bell, concedes that use of the name "Bell" could give the new company a marketing edge over other communications suppliers. AT&T's competitors fear the use of the trade name "Bell" might give the new company unfair advantages because of the consumer connection with the phone company.

But when a consumer needs to change phone service, he'll have to see the folks at the Southwestern Bell business office.

"THE ONE-STOP shopping and service aspect of the PhoneCenter will be the most missed attribute. Customers won't be able to change service or apply for new phone service at the store after the end of 1982," said Jay Allen.

Companies like ITT, Radio Shack, GTE, Northern Telecom, Sony and countless other electronics makers are part of the proliferating field of phone manufacturers.

To be assured of buying a good telephone, consumers have to check the bottom of the instrument for the legend "Approved by the FCC." It's illegal to connect phones that haven't been approved.

Also, customers have to start worrying about telephone service contracts, warranties and reliability.

A MIDLAND-BASED communications executive warns: "The thing about Radio Shack, Penney's and other consumer phone sellers is that there's nowhere to get these telephones serviced and quickly back in use. A good service organization — with huge inventories — will be the key to breaking the huge consumer telephone market."

American Bell — for a time — will be "leasing" service crews from Midland's phone company to fulfill their service contracts.

But a non-Bell phone is off limits to local phone company technicians. They won't fix anything not bought or leased from Bell. And there probably will be some extra red tape involved in servicing an instrument from American Bell.

Saving money on long-distance calls, business phones and other changes in telecommunications will be discussed later in this series.

Getting all the attention from her mother, Niki Widmayer, and father, Ron, is Heather Ann Widmayer. Born at 12:08 a.m. Saturday in Midland Memorial Hospital, Heather becomes the first Midland baby of the new year. At 21¼ inches long, she weighed in at seven pounds.

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — For President Reagan and his wife, New Year's Eve wouldn't be New Year's Eve if it wasn't celebrated in this Southern California resort, where the snow-capped San Jacinto mountains meet the desert floor and the rich meet the rich.

Reagan has welcomed every new year for more than a decade at a 200-acre compound on the outskirts of Palm Springs where the dense shrubs that mask a chain-link and barbed wire fence along Bob Hope Drive and Frank Sinatra Drive also hide the activities of a vacationing president.

Reagan celebrates with many of the longtime friends whose encouragement propelled him into politics nearly 20 years ago.

This year was no different.

Reagan and his wife, Nancy, dined with millionaires at their customary haunts, generally out of sight of the city's 32,500 residents and thousands of tourists who flock here on winter weekends. The dress was black-tie one night, more casual at other times.

Where protests over budget cuts and defense policies often greet the president when he travels elsewhere, little notice was taken of his comings and goings in Palm Springs.

But Reagan was slightly less isolated this holiday than a year ago. After reporters covering his seven-day western vacation complained that they had barely seen the president, he made a point of approaching a small group of them Wednesday evening when he arrived in Palm Springs and chatted for a few minutes.

Clad in a red V-neck sweater he received for Christmas, Reagan chatted, shook hands and posed for pictures. Aides took pains to point out that everything the president said should be considered off-the-record.

Before coming to Palm Springs, the president and Mrs. Reagan had spent a night with her mother in Phoenix, Ariz., and one night in Los Angeles. They did not make it to their mountaintop ranch this trip.

Does he sleep late?

"I'm sure he does," deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said midway through the visit.

He reads and visits with his hosts, Walter Annenberg, multi-millionaire publisher and former U.S. ambassador to Britain during the Nixon administration, and Leonore Annenberg, Reagan's chief of protocol in 1981.

He goes to parties, where he and the guests — industrialists, businessmen, and Hollywood stars — are on a first-name basis.

The party Thursday night was at the El Dorado Country Club, where iron and steel magnate Earle Jorgensen, and William Wilson, Reagan's envoy to the Vatican, were the hosts.

Friday night, the group gathered at the Annenbergs. Another party was planned for Saturday night. The Reagans return to the White House Sunday.

Seventeen Texans die in traffic accidents

By The Associated Press

Seventeen Texans have died on state streets and highways this holiday weekend, but Department of Public Safety officials hoped a winter storm that glazed many roadways with ice and snow would help keep the traffic toll down.

DPS troopers predicted 43 people would die from holiday accidents between 6 p.m. Thursday and midnight Sunday, but said widespred reports of bad weather and poor driving conditions might convince many people to stay home.

"The weather can work two ways," said DPS spokesman Larry Todd said. "It can work for you when people stay home. But it can work the other way. If they get on the roads when they are slick and they've been drinking — that's dangerous."

"We're hoping that the bad weather will work to our advantage and people will stay home," Todd said.

The worst traffic accident of the period killed three Stockdale men Friday when their car went out of control on Texas Highway 123 and struck a tree. Dead at the scene were Clayton Alan Lynn and Rocky Joe Childress, both 25, and Mark James Dugi, 27.

The first traffic victim of 1983 was an unidentified man who was struck by a car at 12:30 a.m. Saturday on a city street in Conroe.

City glazed by 7-inch snowfall

streets tonight, the NWS said.

Monday should be fair and warmer, reaching near 40. Winds through Monday are expected to be light and variable. The 7 inches of snow melted down to .28 of an inch of precipitation.

Saturday's high of 32 was a far cry from the record high of 73 recorded in 1973, but the overnight low of 29 was quite a bit warmer than the record low of 0 in 1979.

First baby of new year arrives at 12:08 a.m.

Seven-pound Heather Ann Widmayer popped into the new world at 12:08 a.m. Saturday, becoming the first baby to be added to Midland's roll for 1983.

In addition to being the first new Tall City resident, Heather won the "first 1983 baby contest" sponsored by local businesses.

The baby who was the first to be born in Midland Memorial Hospital — as specified by the attending physician's exact account of the time of birth — was eligible to win a myriad of gifts.

The gifts include a $50 savings bond from Berg Motor Company, an infant seat from Western Mattress, a $25 savings bond and a 1983 tax return prepared free from L.A., Inc., a $10 money order from Chaparral Realtors, a $25 gift certificate from Driscoll's Gifts, Inc., a $25 gift certificate from The Calico Barn, a baby bed bumper pad from Matlock Furniture, a Borden's Elsie doll and Elsie flower arrangement from Borden, Inc., two boxes of Pampers from M System Food Store, an 8-by-10 color portrait of the baby from Bud's Photography, a pair of leather soft sole shoes from The Shoe Tree.

Also, a $25 gift certificate from Bernard's Tortilla Factory, Inc., a $25 gift certificate from Kids Toggery, a musical container from A-1 Floral, a $10 gift certificate from Peyton's Toys, two deluxe dinners from Monterrey Cocina Mexicana, two steak finger dinners from Texas Burger, and a novelty arrangement from Monterrey Flower Shop.

Hard times visit Lone Star state in 1982

By PAUL RECER

Hard times, Texas style, arrived in the Lone Star state in 1982, with some areas hit hard and others hardly noticing.

Unemployment along the Texas-Mexico border, already at rates among the highest in the country, was further aggravated by the devaluation of the Mexican peso and a steep decline in retail business.

Houston, the state's economic giant, is losing its reputation as a job mecca. The city is suffering from the anemia of the oil industry, in addition to a lag in shipping and a softening in big-project construction.

Mother Nature played dirty tricks on Texas farmers during the year. Wind, hail and an over-abundance of ill-timed rain wiped out millions of acres of corn, cotton and vegetables. Experts say thousands of the state's farmers are hanging on by their fingernails.

Inventories, particularly in energy and heavy manufacturing, remained high as a new year was born, and economists warned that the stockpile will have to be reduced before there is a major upturn in industrial hiring.

EVENTS AND conditions far from Texas had a great impact on the state's economy in 1982. A national surplus of grain held down prices for the state's farmers. Slack demand for oil caused a cutback on drilling, energy sales and fuel transportation. Interest rates, heavily influenced by the Federal Reserve Board, stayed high most of the year and helped to hold down sales of homes and big ticket items. The strength of the U.S. dollar held down exports and some Gulf ports experienced a drop in shipping traffic.

Unemployment statewide dropped in November to 7.6 percent, an improvement from the 8.3 of October, while the rate worsened, from 9.9 to 10.4 percent, at the national level.

A lowering of the interest rates triggered a spurt in home building starts and economists predict this will trickle down into other areas of the economy, particularly durable goods, as new home owners buy furniture, appliances and such things as lawn mowers.

RETAIL SALES spurted in Houston, Dallas and other cities far north of the border. Noone expected a "fabulous" Christmas retail season, said one economist, but the result was better than feared.

Here's a glance at specific areas:

The Border:

The drop in value of the peso, unofficially falling to as low as 135 to the dollar, sent border merchants and real estate investors reeling.

Seven firms, heavily dependant on Mexicans crossing the border to buy, shut down in El Paso. Heavy layoffs were reported from El Paso to Brownsville, an area that was already experiencing the state's highest unemployment.

Example: A McAllen merchant who owns seven dress shops cut his employment force from 85 to 29 and reduced his prices by 50 percent, eliminating any profit.

Example: A grocer in Brownsville reported his business off by 65 percent. He laid off 25 employes and cut salaries by 15 percent just to keep his stores open.

EXPAND THIS UP and down the Rio Grande and there is ample reason fo dispair.

Even real estate prices have dropped along the border because wealthy Mexicans, trapped with deflated pesos, are not buying as they once did. The average home price in McAllen has dropped from $80,000 to $64,000. A Padre Island developer dropped his prices 20 percent.

The forecast is grim: Most expect more businesses to close and more people to be laid off. This could further aggravate serious problems in places like Laredo, with a 24.2 percent unemployment rate in November, and in McAllen, where the rate was 19.8 percent.

Dallas:

"September this year was when the interest rates began to go down and naturally sales picked up," said Carrie Boswell, a business analyst for the Dallas Chamber of Commerce.

RETAIL SALES for September rose 10 percent, compared to a year ago.

The increase in housing starts, of all types, was dramatic for September, jumping from to 4,265 for the month, compared to 1,442 for a September, 1981.

Dallas, like other Texas cities, is attracting new residents from the economically stricken north and the newcomers are being absorbed in the North Texas area.

Unemployment in November dropped slightly in Dallas, from 5.9 percent in October to 5.7 percent.

"Mostly we attribute our stronger economy to the fact that we are diversified," said Ms. Boswell.

Houston:

The muscular Houston economy continues to stagger under the recessive direction of the oil business.

Thousands of workers have been laid off from oil field equipment manufacturing firms, causing a ripple effect in a number of areas.

CAROL BENNETT, a Texas Commerce Bank economist and assistant vice president, said there is a year's backlog of oil field equipment inventory and this will have to be liquidated before there is massive rehiring. She noted that there has been a slight increase in drilling activity, but it will have to grow before the effect is felt in Houston.

Unemployment in Houston rose in November, from 8 percent to 8.2 percent.

Ms. Bennett said the retail office market is expected to soften, reflecting a bonanza-scale building spurt in 1981 and 1982 during which the city had back-to-back years of $3 billion worth of construction permits.

"It's unlikely we'll get to that level next year (1983)," she said. And, she added, it will take a while for the market to absorb the office space now being completed and expected to open for rent in 1983.

Port of Houston tonnage is down for two reasons. The demand for fuel has lowered the amount of oil imported and exports dropped because of the strong U.S. dollar, said Ms. Bennett.

THE WORD IS out that Houston is no longer paradise for the jobless. The overwhelming inundation of people moving down from the North to find work has slowed, by most estimates, to a mere flood. Folks are still coming, according to one report, but they are also turning around and going back home.

Houston's housing market remains strong. Ms. Bennett said there were more than 60,000 starts in 1982 and she expects a similar year in 1983, boosted along by the decline in interest rates.

Some real estate agents, however, report the resale market is softening as sellers are realizing their homes are overpriced for the current market.

Ms. Bennett forecasts an upturn in sales of durable goods because of the spurt in home buying, which usually creates a demand for furniture and appliances.

Retail sales remain strong, she said, noting, "the Christmas season has not been exuberant, but it has been pretty good."

Better times, Ms. Bennett said, are just ahead for Houston.

"WE BELIEVE the recession has bottomed out," she said. "Overall, we expect 1983 to be a much better year than 1982. Not as good as 1981, but a year of sustainable growth."

Lubbock:

Cotton farmers in the high plains had one of the worst years in memory. Hail storms and ill-timed rains reduced almost 2.5 million acres of cotton to stubble. This was one factor that caused Texas A&M expert Bill Braden to call 1982 "a disaster in almost every sense of the word" for Texas farmers and ranchers.

The impact of the cotton loss has not been felt, as yet, in the urban sectors of the high plains, according to Gray Lewis, assistant general manager of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce.

"Lubbock is diverse enough to absorb the impact," he said, although some of the town's major employers are cotton plants.

Legislature full of new faces

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — New senators in the 1983 Legislature include the first black in 10 years and a former FBI agent who helped track the assassin of Martin Luther King Jr. Among first-term House members is an author who may write a book about his experiences.

Nearly one-fourth of the lawmakers will be answering their first legislative roll call when the session convenes Jan. 11. The Senate, as usual, is far and away more experienced than the House.

The edge in experience carries over to the leaders. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, with 10 years on the job as presiding officer of the Senate, will set a record for longevity with his new four-year term.

The apparent House speaker, Rep. Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, has been a legislator since 1971 but will be serving as speaker for the first time.

The new-face count in the 150-member House comes to 40. Four more representatives are returning after missing the 1981 session: Tip Hall of Ponder, a dairy farmer and preacher; insuranceman Mike Millsap of Fort Worth; and lawyers Roy English of Arlington and W.O. "Bill" Harrison of Corpus Christi.

House members are elected for two-year terms.

Retirement, death and political defeats took away 10 senators and erased a combined total of 74 years of Senate experience. Only four of the new senators, however, have to learn the ropes from scratch. The other six won promotions from the House.

This session, as they must after redistricting every 10 years, senators will draw slips of paper, numbered one through 31, from a box. The 16 senators drawing odd-numbers get four-year terms, the others two.

Among the more notable new senators are House committee chairmen Craig Washington, a self-styled liberal-radical Democrat who grew up in a Houston ghetto, and Republican Bob McFarland of Arlington, an ex-FBI agent described by Washington as a "conservative with a heart."

Washington, 41, is the first black senator since Barbara Jordan, later a member of Congress, served there in 1966-72.

War, economy among year's top stories

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer

Hard times hit home in 1982. Twelve million Americans were out of work, businesses failed on Main Street and Broadway, and thousands resorted to public shelters and soup lines for the first time. Children asked Santa to bring jobs for Mom and Dad.

Wars raged in the Mideast and the South Atlantic, a poisoner made eveything on store shelves suddenly suspect and terrorists dealt out death and destruction with bombs, grenades and guns.

It was a time to look for heroes, and to find them.

There was 28-year-old Lennie Skutnik, plunging among chunks of ice in the Potomac to rescue a woman after the crash of Air Florida's Flight 90, which claimed 78 lives. And there was the man, his identity was never positively established, who drowned after repeatedly passing a dangling helicopter life ring to fellow passengers.

The nation pulled for Barney Clark, a tough-willed 61-year-old retired dentist who made medical history and chose a chance at life even though it meant being permanently tethered to hoses and the bulky compressor pumping his artificial heart.

And there was big-eyed, long-necked little E.T., the extra-terrestrial film star who won hearts everywhere with his determination to get home.

They brought joy, laughter and tears in a year in which there was much to cry about.

Like war. Israel marched into Lebanon in June to drive out the Palestine Liberation Organization, and succeeded in ousting thousands of guerrillas. But thousands of civilians and soldiers were killed, and the invasion provoked controversy at home and abroad.

As order began to be restored, Lebanon's Christian president-elect, Bashir Gemayel, died in a Sept. 14 bomb blast. Three days later, Christian militiamen slaughtered hundreds of Palestinian and Moslem men, women and children in Beirut refugee camps. Israel was widely condemned for letting the militia into the camps, but disclaimed responsibility for the massacre.

Britain and Argentina fought a 74-day undeclared war over the tiny Falkland Islands, home to 1,820 people and 600,000 sheep and claimed by both nations. The fighting some 250 miles off the Argentine coast cost more than 1,000 lives, and showed that one French-made Exocet missile could sink a British warship.

PRIME MINISTER Margaret Thatcher grimly led Britain into its biggest military conflict since World War II in the fight to recapture the islands 8,000 miles away, sending out a Royal Navy task force that included a son of Queen Elizabeth II. When Argentina gave up, Mrs. Thatcher declared, "We have put the Great back into Britain."

But it was the Great in Depression that had many Americans worried in a year when unemployment reached 10.8 percent, the highest since the waning days of that deprived era. The Reagan administration, as it had all year, promised recovery was on the way at year's end, and could point to a slowing of inflation, lower interest rates and an exuberant rally on Wall Street as hopeful signs.

That was little comfort to those without jobs, and charities and welfare officials said they couldn't bear the strain of feeding, housing and caring for the needy. And unions, which avoided strikes and backed down at the bargaining tables in 1982, reported some unemployed members were cutting down on food to make house payments.

Nationwide, authorities estimated 2 million people were homeless, twice as many as a year ago and the most since the height of the Great Depression. Many were newly poor: An estimated one-third of the homeless once had been part of the middle class. Some 300 of the homeless and unemployed took up residence in a tent city outside Houston, cooking their meals over campfires.

People compared 1982 to the Great Depression, although they were told that economic safeguards now will prevent another era where so many would lack for so much. But the statistics still were harsh.

More businesses failed than in any year since 1933, and factories were running at 67.8 percent of capacity, the lowest level since the government began keeping records 35 years ago. Wages grew at the smallest rate in 15 years, and the value of farmland dropped. Auto production was at its lowest point in 25 years; the steel industry had its worst year since the Depression.

IT WAS A time for holding on to pocketbooks. Braniff International, Altair Airlines and Laker Airways were casualties of a money-conscious, stay-at-home people.

President Reagan expressed annoyance at the spate of news stories on jobless families, but he conceded unemployment was a "continuing tragedy."

Fall brought a different kind of tragedy: Seven people died in the Chicago area after taking capsules of Extra-Strength Tylenol containing cyanide. Copycat product tamperings surged nationwide, and Halloween trick-or-treating was called off in at least 40 communities.

Johnson & Johnson, the parent company of the Tylenol manufacturer, spent $100 million to withdraw the aspirin-free pain reliever capsules from store shelves. It re-introduced the capsules in tamper-resistant packaging, vowing not to be destroyed by a "terrorist act."

Terrorism. The word did not go away in 1982.

The mostly Roman Catholic Irish Republican Army and their Protestant foes did their deadly work in Northern Ireland, culminating at year's end in a nationalist bomb attack on a Ballykelly disco that killed 11 off-duty British soldiers and five civilians. In London, IRA bombs killed nine men on July 20, including members of the Queen's Household Cavalry. Seven horses also died.

IN PARIS, U.S. Lt. Col. Charles Robert Ray was fatally shot Jan. 18, a bomb killed a PLO leader in July, and a wave of bombings and attacks on Jews included a bloody assault that claimed six lives at a kosher restaruant.

Other anti-Semitic attacks occurred across Western Europe, including a grenade and machine gun assault on a Rome synagogue in October that killed a 2-year-old Jewish boy and wounded 34 people.

And in Tehran, Iran, a bomb killed at least 60 people and injured 700 others in September.

Leftist guerrillas in El Salvador, however, did not discourage voters from turning out in that country's March elections, hailed by U.S. officials as "an important beginning to the democratic process." Political strife was the rule in much of Central America, with leftist rebellions also sparking violence in Guatemala and Honduras and bloody border clashes between Honduras and Nicaragua.

There were no elections but big changes in the Soviet Union, where Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Communist Party leader for 18 years, died in November at age 75. Leaders from 100 nations attended the funeral, and KGB chief Yuri V. Andropov took over as top man in the Kremlin.

For millions of Poles, the dream of independence died in 1982.

Lech Walesa, leader of the banned independent union Solidarity, spent 11 months in detention until authorities released him, announcing he was not so dangerous anymore. Shortly thereafter he was detained just long enough to prevent his speaking at a rally.

ON DEC. 13, a year after it was begun amid Soviet pressure for a crackdown on Solidarity, the Polish government announced martial law would be suspended at the year's end. But many Poles believed civil restrictions would prevent any revival of Solidarity.

There were many deaths to mourn in 1982, including 77-year-old Henry Fonda, the all-American hero of films; Princess Grace of Monaco, 52, who gave up movie stardom to marry a prince; Oscar-winning actress Ingrid Bergman, 67; zany comedian John Belushi, 33; and piano virtuoso Arthur Rubinstein, 95.

A Pan American jetliner went down in Kenner after taking off in a thunderstorm July 9, claiming 154 lives. Air Florida's Flight 90 took off in a snowstorm from Washington on Jan. 13 and crashed into a Potomac River bridge, killing 78 people.

The weather also proved fatal for the 84 crew members of the oil rig Ocean Ranger, they died in February when the rig sank in 90 mph winds and waves up to 50 feet off the coast of Newfoundland.

Hurricane Iwa roared into Hawaii in November, causing up to $200 million damage in the island state's first major hurricane in 23 years. In the Atlantic, the hurricane season passed uneventfully, with only five storms strong enough to warrant a name, the fewest in 50 years.

RONALD REAGAN, meanwhile, weathered foreign travel, problems with Congress and an off-year election that saw the Democrats gain 26 seats in Congress. Early in the year, internal problems with his foreign policy operations eased with the resignation of Alexander M. Haig Jr. as secretary of state.

And a potential problem for Reagan evaporated when Sen. Edward M. Kennedy announce he would not seek the Democratic presidential nomination in 1984 because of his children's wishes and his impending divorce.

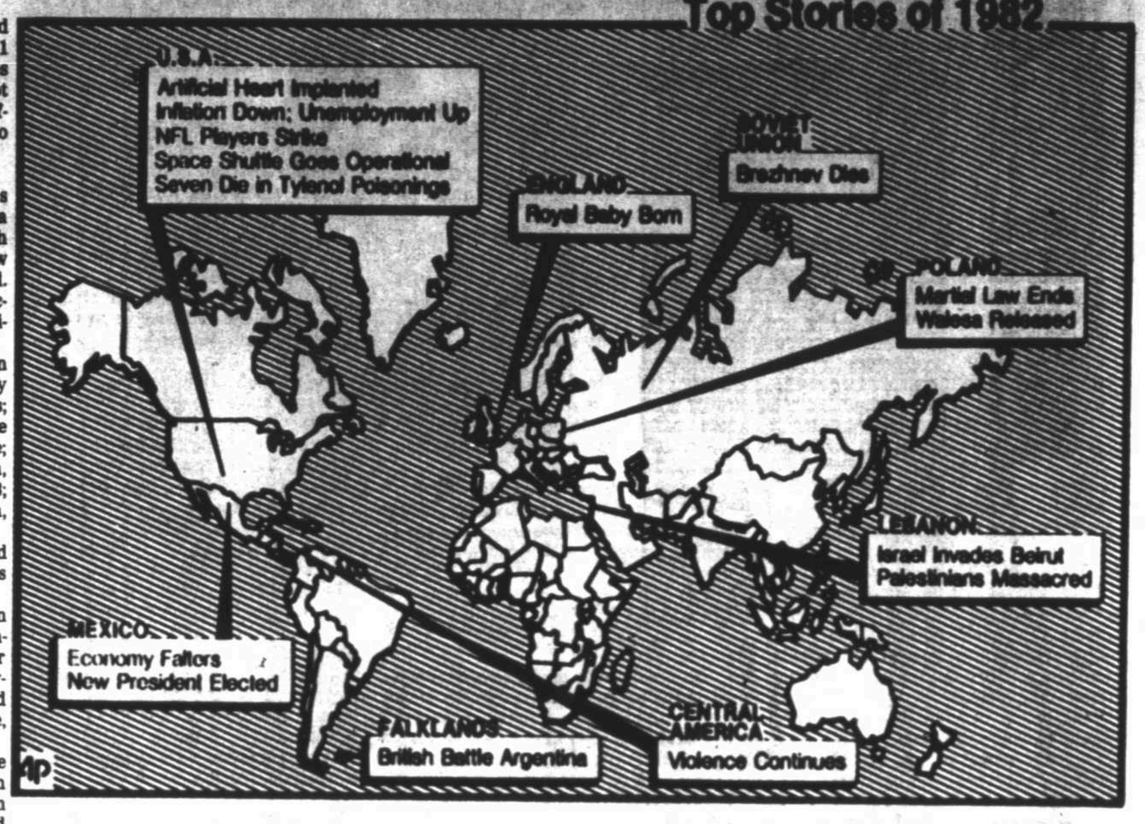
The president and the Republicans were blamed by Equal Rights Amendment supporters when the proposal to ban discrimination based on sex died in June after a 10-year fight for ratification. The GOP worried about winning support from women and minorities, and the "gender gap" was born.

Reagan pushed a $98.3 billion three-year tax increase through Congress, but refused to give up on increased military spending or the third part of his three-year income tax cut. A balanced federal budget, however, was far out of reach.

The president unveiled a program to cluster MX missiles in Wyoming, but Congress refused to approve the production money he sought for the weapon he called the "peacekeeper."

Others had a different view of how to attain peace: 500,000 people rallied in New York in June and thousands gathered and voted from San Francisco to Maine in support of a freeze on nuclear weapons.

A NUCLEAR freeze resolution didn't make it through Congress, but the movement picked up steam anyway, with resolutions passing in eight of nine states and the National Conference of Catholic Bishops and the National Conference of State Legislators adding support.



Enten Eller, 21, of Laverne, Calif., became the first person convicted of failing to comply with the 2-year-old law requiring 18-year-old men to register for the draft. But a federal judge threw the government a curve, declaring the registration requirement illegal because not enough time was given for public comment. The government appealed.

Painful memories were mixed with joy at long overdue recognition in November, as thousands of Vietnam veterans journeyed to Washington for the dedication of a gleaming black marble memorial to the 57,939 Americans who did not return from the unpopular war in Southeast Asia.

The year 1982 was also a time of anti-heroes, as crime stories across the nation's front pages showed.

John W. Hinckley, Jr., 27, the brooding loner obsessed with actress Jodie Foster, was acquitted by reason of insanity when a jury found he was not criminally responsible for his attempt to assassinate President Reagan. The verdict set off outraged calls to abolish the insanity defense.

Wayne Williams, 24, was convicted in Atlanta of murdering two black men, charges stemming from an inquiry into a string of 29 slayings. Authorities closed the books on 22 of the deaths.

After a soap opera-style trial with an aristocratic twist, socialite Claus Von Bulow was found guilty in Newport, R.I., of twice trying to murder his heiress wife, now in an irreversible coma. At year's end, the 56-year-old von Bulow was free pending appeal.

IN HUNTSVILLE, Texas, convicted murderer Charlie Brooks, Jr., 40, became the first person executed in the United States by lethal injection.

Korean-born evangelist Rev. Sun Myung Moon, 62, the "Moonies" leader, was convicted in New York of evading $162,000 in income taxes. He appealed.

Jet-set sportscar maker John De Lorean, 57, was arrested in Los Angeles as he allegedly arrived to pick up 220 pounds of cocaine in a $24 million deal to save his debt-ridden company. He made bail, and pleaded innocent.

And in a crime footnote, the year brought the largest cash robbery ever in the United States: Nearly $11 million stolen from an armored car company by robbers who entered by punching a hole in the roof.

Pope John Paul II, meanwhile, escaped an assassination attempt by a bayonet-wielding Spanish priest in Portugal, a year after he survived an assassin's bullets in St. Peter's Square. The attack in Portugal failed to deter the voyages of history's most traveled pope, who later visited England, the first visit there by a Roman Catholic pontiff.

The British endured a series of spy scandals and crimes that had them doubting their nation's security system. Even the queen seemed at risk: An intruder found his way into her Buckingham Palace bedchamber and chatted with the monarch for 10 minutes, a broken ashtray in his hand, before help arrived.

THE BIRTH IN June of Prince William, now second in line to the throne after his father, Prince Charles, provided a welcome distraction for Britons, as did his mother, Princess Diana. The queen's second son, Andrew, stirred up a fuss by vacationing in the Caribbean with an erotic movie star.

But other countries had little diversion from their troubles.

Iran and Iraq were locked in an expensive stalemated war that has cost up to 60,000 lives over two years. Mexico had to devalue its peso repeatedly and take other drastic action to stave off fiscal ruin and 100 percent inflation. Brazil grappled with a burgeoning foreign debt.

In Afghanistan, as many as 700 Soviet troops and 2,000 Afghan civilians were killed in a tunnel in an explosion and fire in October, but the figures were never confirmed by the Soviet or Afghanistan governments.

An earthquake in Yemen killed more than 1,000 people. An Aeroflot jetliner crashed on takeoff from Moscow, killing 90 people, and a Chinese plane went down near the southern Chinese city of Guilin, killing 112 people.

At home, new health worries emerged over herpes, an incurable veneral disease, and over AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, in which the body loses its ability to fight disease.

SOME SAID herpes, which causes painful genital sores, was changing sexual patterns across the country, but others said that was all talk and no action. The immune syndrome, first identified among homosexuals, was later reported among Haitian refugees, drug users and blood tranfusion recipients, and researchers said it might be on the verge of a "huge outbreak."

Football was no help in relieving the worries of 1982, with the National Football League strike that idled players for eight weeks. And Garry Trudeau, the Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist, put his fans in the doldrums when he announced his Doonesbury characters were "confused and out of sorts" and would take a 20-month break.

—"We deliver!" said jubilant astronauts aboard the space shuttle Columbia, as it logged its fifth flight, 10 millionth mile and first commercial venture, launching two communications satellites for paying customers.

—From the San Fernando Valley came the Valley Girls, with their funny "gag me with a spoon" and "fer sure" lingo that updated the "gross" and "right on" of a generation earlier.

—And Deely Bobbers, the glittery styrofoam balls, stars or hearts that bounced on springs attached to headbands, went from inventor Stephen Askin's kitchen to nationwide distribution with one marketer acknowledging they served no purpose except to "uplift your spirits."

For 1982, the street-vendors' price was right: $1, no taxes, and no questions, asked.

Promise of human genetic engineering realized in 1982

NEW YORK (AP) — It was 10 years ago when a casual conversation between two biologists in a Waikiki delicatessen led to the first manipulation of human genes, a milestone that offered spectacular promise in the quest to heal the sick. In 1982, that promise began to be realized.

In October, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved for the first time a drug made by genetic engineering. The drug, synthetic human insulin, heralds a revolution in treatment of disease.

The news in medicine was not all good, however. In perhaps the most troubling development of the year, researchers at the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta charted the spread of a menacing new illness in which the body's defenses crumble, allowing a variety of uncommon diseases to appear.

The illness, called acquired immune deficiency syndrome, appears to be infectious, but its cause is unknown.

History was made at the University of Utah, where the world's first permanent artificial heart was implanted in the chest of 61-year-old Barney Clark, opening a new age of spare-parts medicine.

It was in biology, however, where the most noteworthy progress was made. The techniques for combining human and animal genes, conceived by Stanley Cohen of Stanford University and Herb Boyer of the University of California, are now producing results.

The two biologists were in Hawaii for a scientific meeting. Cohen told Boyer about a tiny loop of genetic material he had isolated that could be inserted in bacteria. Boyer described an enzyme he had found that would clip that loop and allow a foreign gene to be inserted into it. The two techniques used together, they realized, would allow them to put a foreign gene, such as a human gene, into bacteria, and genetic engineering was born.

Two new vaccines appeared in 1982. One prevents hepatitis, and has been recommended to doctors, dentists and others at high risk for the disease. The other is aimed at protecting livestock against foot-and-mouth disease, a costly ailment that has an effect on food supply.

The first steps have been made toward the cure of genetic diseases. Researchers have treated sickle-cell anemia with a drug that alters the function of the genes responsible for the disease, and they have treated thalassemia, another blood disease, in mice.

Mice and fruit flies have been made to incorporate foreign genes using techniques that might someday be used to replace defective genes responsible for a variety of human ailments.

In August, physicists in West Germany manufactured a new element in an atom smasher. The element, known as element 109 because it contains 109 protons and 109 electrons, is the heaviest substance ever discovered.

U.S.' shuttle comes of age

WASHINGTON (AP) — The coming of age of America's space shuttle and an endurance record by Soviet cosmonauts highlighted a milestone year for space exploration in 1982, the 25th anniversary of Sputnik.

In 1983, the U.S. shuttle fleet will increase to three, with five or six flights planned. The Soviets are expected to continue Salyut 7 space station operations and to send on a test flight the largest rocket ever built.

Columbia, the first U.S. shuttle, completed its test program with third and fourth trial flights in April and July. In November, it became operational by putting its first commercial cargo, two communications satellites, in orbit.

By successfully completing that November mission, Columbia demonstrated convincingly that the sometimes maligned, $11 billion shuttle program was finally in business.

Commercial customers are standing in line to place their communications and other satellites aboard the space shuttle. NASA has booked 70 flights into 1987 and is working on a cargo manifest that is expected to fill an additional 230 missions into 1992.

Four commercial flights and one or two military flights are planned in 1983, with the launch rate increasing to 12 in 1984 and 16 in 1985.

While Columbia was aloft on its cargo delivery mission in November, two Soviet cosmonauts aboard the Salyut 7 space station broke the manned space endurance mark of 185 days that had been held by two countrymen. The latest Soviet space mission ended Dec. 10 with a safe landing after 211 days in space.

Soviet officials have indicated the time may be fast approaching when a Soviet citizens will always be orbiting Earth.

While U.S. officials are debating the American commitment to space, the Soviets are moving aggressively on several space fronts. Their stated goals:

—To place large, permanent, manned space stations in Earth orbit, with the target date for the first in 1985. It will take the most powerful rocket ever developed to deliver the core of the station. The rocket is to be test-launched for the first time in 1983, according to government sources in Moscow.

—To explore the planets extensively with automated probes and to send cosmonauts to Mars early in the 21st century.

The United States has made no firm commitment to either a permanent station or to manned planetary flights. Studies are being made on the feasibility of both.

The Soviets now possess the only operational space weapon, a killer satellite capable of destroying orbiting payloads. The Air Force is set to test-launch America's first anti-satellite weapon early in 1983.

Both nations also are pushing ahead with research into such exotic space weapons as laser guns and charged particle beams that could knock out satellites or ballistic missiles in flight.

September 1982 brought two budding commercial space ventures, one a successful launch, the other a failure on the first try.

A European effort suffered a major setback, and the launch schedule was delayed several months, when the Ariane rocket built by the 10-nation European Space Agency failed on liftoff in its first launch. The Europeans hope Ariane will compete with the space shuttle for commercial payloads.

Two members of the New York City Bomb Squad search in front of the Federal Building in lower Manhattan Friday after a bomb exploded on the main floor of the building. The building houses the offices of the FBI and other federal agencies.

Puerto Rican group may be liable for bombings

NEW YORK (AP) — The FBI says it believes a Puerto Rican terrorist group was responsible for the bombs that exploded at four federal and city buildings on New Year's Eve, injuring three New York City police officers and causing undetermined property damage.

Metropolitan Correctional Facility, a federal detention center.

SHORTLY AFTER the first two bombs went off, the FALN, a Puerto Rican terrorist group, called WCBS radio and claimed responsibility for the blasts.

"We are definitely investigating an FALN link," FBI spokesman Joe Valiquette said.

Robert J. McGuire said at a hastily called news conference early today that the first bomb exploded around 9:30 p.m. on the main floor of 26 Federal Plaza in Manhattan, which houses the offices of the FBI and other federal agencies.

The blast from the device, made of several dynamite sticks and a timer, knocked out windows on three floors but caused no injuries.

Officer Salvator Pastorella, 42, a policeman for 15 years, suffered extensive injuries to both eyes and fingers and may have lost his hearing, McGuire said.

Four bombs exploded in New York City Friday night. The explosions occurred on the main floor of 26 Federal Plaza, which houses FBI offices; 1 Police Plaza, where one person was injured; the federal courthouse in Brooklyn; and at the Metropolitan Correctional Facility in Manhattan, a prison adjacent to police headquarters. Authorities aren't sure which group is responsible for the bombings.

The explosions damaged the New York City Police Department headquarters, the Manhattan Federal Building, the U.S. District Courthouse in Brooklyn and the

At the same time, the FBI expressed skepticism about a call to The Associated Press in which a person claimed responsibility for the Palestine Liberation Organization. That caller said two more bombs would go off within the hour, and they did.

Police Commissioner

A SHORT distance away at police headquarters, Officer Rocco Pascarella, 33, was on security duty. He heard the Federal Plaza blast, stepped outside to investigate and a bomb exploded under him nearly severing his left foot.

David Handschuh, a freelance photographer, said he heard the blast at police headquarters while covering the Federal Plaza explosion five blocks away.

"All of a sudden there was this loud boom, it shook the ground," he said. Hanschuh said he rushed to police headquarters where he found "pandemonium."

"There was a detective yelling," he said. "There was a cop on the ground with others attending."

The smell of gunpowder filled the air and giant plate glass windows were shattered, Handschuh said.

SURGEONS amputated Pascarella's foot below the knee, McGuire said.

The third bomb exploded at the Brooklyn court house at 10:10 p.m., McGuire said, "causing extensive property damage but no injuries."

And at 10:45 p.m., McGuire said, police found two bombs outside the Manhattan office building that houses the U.S. District Courthouse and the U.S. attorney's office.

1982 gas prices fall by 11 cents

NEW YORK (AP) — A statistic for American motorists to cheer: The price of gasoline fell 11 cents a gallon in 1982 to mark the biggest yearly decline on record.

The drop was from $1.33 a gallon at year-end 1981 to $1.22 a gallon, and it was the first yearly decline in more than a decade. In the three years before 1982, the national average price of gasoline had jumped more than 50 cents a gallon.

Until this past year, the average price of gasoline had risen every year since 1971, when it slipped less than half a cent. Never had it dropped as much as in 1982, according to the Commerce Department, whose figures go back to 1936.

And the trend was still downward as 1983 began. Standard Oil Co. of California, one of the biggest gasoline sellers, said it would complete a nationwide round of cuts this weekend to shave as much as 2 cents from its wholesale price.

While many oil industry analysts expect retail gasoline prices to slip further in early 1983, the trend may be interrupted April 1 when a 5-cent increase in the federal gasoline tax takes effect. Refiners, who will pay the added tax, are likely to pass on most of it to consumers, many economists believe.

The national average price at the pump ended 1982 at $1.22 a gallon, including taxes, according to the Lundberg Survey Inc., a Los Angeles-based trade journal that tracks gasoline prices through a survey of 19,000 retail outlets.

That is an 8 percent drop from the year-earlier price of $1.33 a gallon. The dropoff was spurred in part by a drop in gasoline demand and a steady decline in the price that refining companies paid for the crude oil used to make gasoline.

Americans used nearly 15 billion fewer gallons of gasoline in 1982 than in 1978, the peak year for gasoline demand, according to Lundberg. That is a 12.7 percent drop, although the rate of decline has slackened considerably in recent months.

The average world price of crude oil at year-end 1982 was about $33 a barrel, down about $1.25 from a year earlier, according to the Department of Energy.

Equally as important, however, was the stiffer competition that gasoline dealers faced in the aftermath of President Reagan's decision in January 1981 to end federal controls on the price and distribution of crude oil and gasoline.

Few analysts expect the average gasoline price to fall as much in 1983 as it did in 1982. Yet the trend clearly is downward, and already the price of regular leaded gasoline has dipped below $1 a gallon in some parts of the country.

To a degree, the 1983 trend in gasoline prices will depend on actions by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, whose policies still influence world oil prices even though the cartel has been weakened by the oil glut.

Wright views job retraining as priority for Congressional bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, calling the nation's 10.8 percent unemployment "priority No. 1," says job retraining must be a part of any program passed by the new Congress.

"We are going to have a jobs bill. In fact, we'llhave several bills," Wright said in an interview with ABC Radio that is being aired today.

"One of the things we have to do is create...job retraining programs for people in mid-career, well trained, well-paid, highly-skilled people who suddenly find themselves out of a job for which they were trained," Wright said.

The purpose of those and other job-related programs, he said, "will be to stimulate the economy to the point that, in the private economy, jobs will be available."

He gave no details of any legislative proposal. During the lame-duck session that adjourned just before Christmas, the House approved a $5.4 billion public service jobs program while the Republican-dominated Senate endorsed a more modest $1.2 billion plan. But both were abandoned after President Reagan threatened a veto that would have endangered other legislation.

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee has also pledged that, with or without Reagan's support, the new Congress that convenes Monday will approve a jobs program of some kind.

Wright, again blaming Reagan's economic policies for the nation's financial woes, said the ranks of conservative Democrats who supported those policies, have diminished to the point they can no longer provide the president a margin of victory.

Things back to normal in Miami's riot-torn Overtown neighborhood

MIAMI (AP) — The encampment of shotgun-wielding police ringing the Overtown slum was dismantled Saturday and local officials set out to salvage Miami's riot-scarred reputation as a winter tourist mecca.

"It's calm and quiet. Everything's back to normal," said City Manager Howard V. Gary following nearly two riot-free days and a peaceful Orange Bowl parade watched by a half-million people. "Of course, we're still keeping a watchful eye."

More than 100 specially equipped officers were pulled out of the 2-square-mile zone just north of downtown as the sun rose on a tourist-pleasing New Year's Day.

Orange Bowl festivities, the traditional start of the peak winter tourist season, continued Saturday with the 49th staging of the collegiate football classic pitting No. 3 Nebraska against 13th-ranked Louisiana State.

Officials turned their energies to driving home the message that Miami is now a safe and pleasant vacation spot, and moved to enlist Metro-Dade Mayor Steve Clark, Miami Mayor Maurice Ferre and Miami Beach Mayor Norman Ciment to attend a New York meeting later this month where the area's virtues will be hawked to tour guides and reporters.

Tourism organizations were in the middle of a major promotional push when disturbances broke out Tuesday night after a Hispanic police officer fatally shot a young black man in a video arcade.

The withdrawal of police was a topic of discussion in Overtown.

"I feel better now that the police are gone," said Ben Johnson, 25, while pushing a friend in a wheelchair along an Overtown street. "When they're around, with their guns and everything, in a way it makes me scared."

Gary said Saturday that he believes public perception of the investigations into the shooting will make a difference to the city's immediate future. "If they believe there are thorough investigations, I believe they'll be restful."

The city's tourism traffic had begun to rebound after significant setbacks attributed to the May 1980 riots that left 18 dead in Miami's Liberty City.

Officials said the latest troubles caused no hotel cancellations, and a racially mixed crowd watched Friday night's two-hour parade without incident.

The only trouble overnight occurred when a bus filled with parade-goers somehow passed police roadblocks and went through Overtown while leaving the city. The bus was pelted with rocks and bottles but no one was injured in what police described as "a very minor incident."

The Overtown rioting left two dead, 26 injured, including four police, and 43 under arrest. Angry mobs gathered quickly Tuesday evening folllowing the shooting of Nevell Johnson Jr., 20, while he was playing a game of Eagle in the Recreation Establishment video arcade.

Officer Luis Alvarez, who shot Johnson, said the man had a gun and moved suddenly when told to freeze. A gun was found at the scene but some witnesses told authorities they did not see Johnson with a gun.

While no less than six investigations were being launched, including ones by the FBI and the Justice Department's civil rights division, sporadic violence occurred in the blighted, 192-block neighborhood.

Following the shooting, two homicide detectives sent to investigate were trapped inside the arcade for about 30 minutes by a crowd estimated as large as 150.

A special weapons team was dispatched to free them. An angry crowd milled around and the core of Overtown was sealed off.

Several hours later, police shot and killed a suspected looter outside a meat warehouse.

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A police officer was shot and killed with his own revolver in an argument with his wife after a New Year's party, officials said.

Sgt. Clayton A. Jones, 38, a 16-year veteran of the force, was shot in the upper abdomen, Capt. R.B. Ward said.

No arrests were made immediately. Ward said prosecutors probably would take the case to a grand jury before deciding whether to file charges. An autopsy was scheduled.

Court to decide on race recount

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Chief Justice Howard Ryan of the Illinois Supreme Court says he and the associate justices are "on the phone constantly" with each other talking over whether to allow a recount of the closest governor's race in state history.

The court is considering whether to grant Democrat Adlai Stevenson's request for a statewide recount of Republican Gov. James Thompson's 5,074-vote victory Nov. 2.

A decision will not be announced until Tuesday at the earliest.

Baby born in Denver fire station

DENVER (AP) — A pregnant woman rescued from her stalled car by firefighters was taken to Fire Station 27 and gave birth there.

"It's not that hard, the woman does all the work," said paramedic Steve Wollenhaupt, who has delivered three or four babies. "It was a regular old baby being born, a real healthy baby. He's a beauty."

Born at 12:09 a.m. Friday was DeWayne Cole, son of Brenda Cole of Clarksville, Mo. "They did a wonderful job," Ms. Cole said. "I wasn't embarrassed at all with all those men around. The were trying to help. One held my head and some others held my hands."

Sentry hit again — for $225,000

NEW YORK (AP) — The Sentry armored car company, which lost a record $11 million cash in a robbery less than three weeks ago, has been hit again, this time for $225,000.

District attorney's spokesman Ed McCarthy said Sentry found the money gone at 8 p.m. Wednesday but did not report it to police until 3 p.m. Friday. "Apparently they didn't get too excited about it," McCarthy said. "They figured, 'Well, it's around here somewhere.'"

A person who answered the phone Saturday at Sentry said he would not comment and would not identify himself.

14-year-old girl arrested for murder

EAST NORTHPORT, N.Y. (AP) — A 14-year-old girl was arrested on a second-degree murder charge Saturday in the fatal stabbing of a teen-age boy at a New Year's party on Long Island, police said.

Police, called about 11:10 p.m. Friday to a disturbance at the home of the girl, said they found Robert Clayton, 14, stabbed once in the chest. He was pronounced dead an hour later at Huntington Hospital.

The characters in "Doonesbury," Gary Trudeau's irreverent comic strip, are going into hibernation for at least 20 months as Trudeau goes on sabbatical. "Doonesbury," whose last panel runs today, will be missed in 720 newspapers, many of which claim nothing can take its place.

New Year's rung in across U.S.

By The Associated Press

Tippling revelers got free rides home, breath tests and cups of coffee early Saturday after a happy celebration of the New Year, marred by four terrorist bombings in New York City and at least 87 deaths on the nation's streets and highways.

New York police were too busy with the bombings at the Brooklyn Federal Court to provide an official estimate of the crowd that jammed Times Square to watch a lighted apple drop at the stroke of midnight, signaling the end of 1982 and the beginning of 1983.

In Pasadena, Calif., an estimated 1 million people turned out in clear but chilly weather this morning to see more than 60 floats and 22 marching bands in the 94th Tournament of Roses Parade.

In Philadelphia, 25,000 costumed marchers pranced up Broad Street in the 83rd annual Mummers' parade, which traces its roots to colonial days.

A half-million people lined the streets of downtown Miami only blocks from the site of this week's slum violence to cheer the Orange Bowl parade and peacefully usher in the New Year.

"The crowd was well behaved and everything ran very smoothly," Miami police Sgt. George Misleh said Friday night after a burst of fireworks over Biscayne Bay signaled an end to the 49th annual parade.

AN ARMY OF 378 police officers patrolled the two-mile parade route which wound to within three blocks of the riot-torn Overtown neighborhood, and Saturday morning the barricades surrounding Overtown were removed.

No violence has been reported in Overtown since Thursday when rioters stormed a liquor store, causing an estimated $50,000 damage. The riots began Tuesday when a Hispanic policeman shot and killed a black man who was playing a video game.

About 15,000 people gathered in downtown Chicago as the city toasted its 150th anniversary with a salute of sounds and more than 7,000 fireworks gathered from around the world. The fireworks will give way to floodlights in the first stage of "Light Up Chicago," a plan to illuminate the city's bridges and major sculptures during 1983.

In Boston, 150,000 people gathered on the city's waterfront to celebrate with poets, puppeteers, mimes, dancers and fireworks.

It was the "biggest and best behaved crowd to date" for the annual First Night festivities, said police spokesman Martin Mulkern. Celebration began at 5 p.m. with a Boston Common parade that attracted about 15,000.

"This is a great crowd," said Police Superintendent John Geagan. "These people haven't even had time to have supper, never mind a drink."

ABOUT 3,000 people, many of them wearing costumes, jogged through Central Park for a five-mile midnight run, and 13 runners were injured by a carriage horse that bolted after being spooked by fireworks. News bulletins were flashed on an electronic ribbon around 1 Times Square for the first time in five years and fireworks were set off simultaneously at three locations.

Around the nation, The Associated Press counted 87 holiday traffic deaths as of 10 a.m. EST.

Meanwhile, volunteers in the Mississippi Delta planned to spend much of their holiday today fighting surging flood waters that already have left at least 10,000 homeless in Louisiana and Mississippi.

Countless Americans were spending the holiday quietly at home, ready to watch morning parades or any of five college football bowl games that were televised.

President Reagan ended 1982 in Palm Springs, Calif., the same way he began it, relaxing with old friends at a desert resort. He was the guest at a black tie dinner at the estate of publisher Walter Annenburg.

Barney Clark, who a month ago became the first person to receive a permanent, artificial heart, quietly rang in a New Year he wasn't expected to see.

"With a little luck, we're hoping he can watch a football game or two," said nursing suprvisor Barbara Crookston at the University of Utah Medical Center.

CLARK REMAINED in serious but stable condition.

A public inauguration was scheduled in Albany, N.Y., Saturday forMario Cuomo, 50, the son of Italian immigrants who became the state's 52nd governor. He took the oath of office on New Year's Eve and officially became the state's governor at 12:01 today.

With increasing attention focused on the problem of drunken driving, authorities beefed up their battle to slow traffic deaths on a holiday traditionally celebrated with alcohol. Many states have enacted tougher penalties for drunken driving.

Aided by volunteers who set up curbside coffee stops for weary, home-bound motorists, troopers operated sobriety checkpoints, monitored traffic with helicopters and handled special hot line telephone calls from citizens reporting suspected drunken drivers.

Terry Raisio, manager of a lounge in Tukwila, Wash., said barkeeps were "definitely more aware" of their legal responsibilities in cases of patrons who overindulge.

"There is more pressure to cut them off," said Nick Campo of the Soap Creek Saloon in Austin. "People are much, much more aware of the drunk driver."

MANY COMMUNITIES and businesses around the nation were in a giving mood during the New Year holiday.

In Milwaukee, the Pabst Brewing Co. paid for free bus rides until 4 a.m. today in an effort to keep over-imbibers off the streets while volunteers in Missoula, Mont., ferried party-goers to their homes.

Three restaurants in Creve Coeur, Mo., installed breath analysis machines for customers.

Many of the homeless and destitute people looking for emergency help during the holidays were the same people who had been doing the giving in previous years.

The response to their needs was gratifying in Cleveland, said Mylion D. Waite, director of the Hunger Task Force for the Interchurch Council.

"But in many instances, people waiting in line for food baskets told us that a year ago during the holiday time they had been contributors to the program now supplying their needs," Waite said.

Newspapers claim nothing can replace 'Doonesbury' comic strip

NEW YORK (AP) — Joanie Caucus, that beloved feminist who totters on the brink of cheerful gloom, is a mom again. That much we know. The last we saw of her, she was holding her infant son after her entire childbirth class helped her give birth.

But it will be at least 20 months before fans will see him toddle across a cartoon panel, or even learn his name. The characters in "Doonesbury," Garry Trudeau's irreverent comic strip, are going into hibernation as Trudeau goes on sabbatical.

"Doonesbury" enthusiasts are in a frustrated frenzy, fiddling with resolutions to other untidy situations: Will B.D. join the Dallas Cowboys? Is Uncle Duke in jail? Will campus radical Mark Slackmeyer move in with his establishment father? Will the nuclear-freeze newsletter put out by the Rev. W.S. Sloan be a success? Will Zonker Harris ever achieve the quintessential sun tan?

"Doonesbury," whose last panel runs today, will be missed in the 720 newspapers it has appeared in, and many of the papers say nothing can take its place.

"We're very unhappy about losing 'Doonesbury,'" said Stan Wyman, city editor of the Corona Daily Independent in Riverside, Calif.

"I don't think there's anything on the market right now that can replace 'Doonesbury' in the hearts and minds of those hardcore addicts and fans," added Tom Wark, associate managing editor for features at the Philadelphia Inquirer, which has carried the Trudeau strip for more than five years. "They're just going to have to suffer until it returns, and I think it will. I certainly hope so."

Still, there's a little cigar-chewing frog who's married to plump princess in the comic strip, "Conrad." His fans think he has a good shot at filling the "Doonesbury" void. There's also the brand new strip, "Rudy," which makes its debut Monday. Rudy is a talking chimpanzee who also fancies cigars and wants to make a comeback in show biz.

The Inquirer is adding two comic strips, "Marvin," about a precocious, urbane baby who seems to court trouble, and "Conrad." The paper will also redesign its comic package to give more space to its own panel, "Full Disclosure," a strip showing a lick of everyday life.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer also plans to use "Conrad," and The Los Angeles Times is printing "Rudy."

But The Chicago Tribune says all it plans to do is shift around the other cartoons to fill up the space.

For some communities, "Doonesbury" occupied an important slot in the town newspaper.

"'Doonesbury' was important to Wallace," said James Hail, editor and publisher of the North Idaho Press in Wallace, Idaho. The paper's circulation is only 3,159, but Trudeau's vacation has stilled a unique voice for the mining town.

"We never ran it on the editorial page," Hail said of "Doonesbury." "We always ran it on the comic page... People accepted it as a social comment on politics and life in general."

The North Idaho Press was one paper during the 1980 presidential election campaign that ran a particularly controversial series of strips about a cartoon trip to "the mysterious world of Ronald Reagan's brain."

The panels showed dimwitted television reporter Roland Hedley III leading readers through the president's "memory vault," a "storehouse of images of an idyllic America, with 5-cent Cokes, Burma Shave signs and hard-working white people." Several newspapers refused to print the strips.

The controversy did not halt Trudeau, the Greta Garbo of the cartoon world. A very private person who is married to NBC "Today" show star Jane Pauley, he refuses to talk to reporters. The announcement last September of his "breather" from the Pulitzer Prize-winning strip came in the form of a statement from Universal Press Syndicate.

The 34-year-old Trudeau has parodied public figures and national and international issues for 12 years with an array of characters who have delighted and maddened readers with their exploits and thoughts on everything from women's rights to nuclear arms to tanning.

But in announcing his sabbatical, Trudeau said his characters had remained lodged in another time and space.

"For almost 15 years, the main characters have been trapped in a time warp, and so find themselves carrying the colors and scars of two separate generations," he said. "The trip from draft beer and mixers to cocaine and herpes is a long one, and it's time they got a start on it."

In his absence, it remains to be seen if Conrad's castle escapades will keep the laughs coming, and if Rudy will warm us with his one-liners.

Town for sale brings in offers from all over

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The notebook is filling up with names, the inquiries keep coming, and Trish Franceschi is "ready to pull the phone off the wall" as offers pour in for the family's tiny town up for sale.

"It's just been overwhelming," Mrs. Franceschi said of the response to an Associated Press story that Drew, population minuscule, is for sale.

Drew is 1¼ acres in the Umpqua National Forest. Gus Franceschi bought all five buildings four years ago on a whim.

The post office is closed and the old store has seen better days. But, as Mrs. Franceschi says, $36,000 is "pretty cheap for a town."

"We just got a call from a lady in Colorado who said 'I'll be up in two weekends.' She was ready to rush right up here," Mrs. Franceschi, 28, said in a telephone interview from the family's home in back of what used to be the Drew Cash Grocery.

But like the other callers, Franceschi said he has a list over five pages long, she's being sent pictures of the place and asked to make an offer in writing.

Francheschi, a 31-year-old kindergarten teacher in Tri City, 37 miles up the road, said the calls have come from Georgia to California.

The "For Sale" sign went up in April, and Franceschi came a hair away from completing the sale once before.

Now, he said, "I'm not going to count my chips until the cabbage is in my hand."

"We're in no hurry," he said by telephone after his wife called him in from changing a flat tire.

The family, which includes a 15-month-old daughter, has no intention of leaving the rural life. They're thinking about New England, closer to their families in the Philadelphia area.

"I'll tell you, after living way out here, we can't even fathom the idea of living in a populated area," Mrs. Franceschi said. "When we go into Roseburg (population 16,575) or Medford (population 39,803), it's so hectic, the traffic and all, so far removed from our lifestyle right now."

A television camera crew from Portland was due any minute, and Franceschi said he had been interviewed by radio stations in New Orleans, Chicago and Roseburg.

Couple exchanges vows in hospital room

FOUNTAIN VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — The bride wore intravenous tubes and plaster casts. The witness was a triple-bypass heart patient in a nearby bed. Beeping monitoring systems supplemented the piped-in hospital music.

The marriage of 29-year-old car crash victim Stella Jenkin to 35-year-old Glenn Young took place in the intensive care unit of Fountain Valley Community Hospital.

"I'm just sorry I didn't wear my tux," quipped Robert Ellison, the 51-year-old heart patient who witnessed the six-minute ceremony last week from an adjacent bed.

There were flowers, borrowed by nurses from other patients, and tears when Young slipped a ring onto his bride's finger.

"I do feel a lot better," the new Mrs. Young whispered to her groom as he stood at her bedside.

With both legs in traction and intravenous tubes attached to her arms, she gingerly tossed a bouquet of red roses to a group of single nurses who broke into applause as the newlyweds exchanged vows.

The bride sustained abdominal injuries, multiple bruises and a broken pelvis, right leg and knee when she was thrown from a truck onto a freeway in a Christmas Eve traffic collision. Young was in the car too, but escaped injury.

Officials estimated that as many as 100,000 people crowded into Trafalgar Square in London to greet the New Year. A London Ambulance Service spokesman reported that two women were crushed to death and at least 36 others were injured. The accident occurred at about 1 a.m. London time, when the crowd had diminished to some 20,000 people.

Doomsday scenario troubles minds of money men as new year dawns

By CHARLES J. HANLEY

A doomsday nightmare troubles the minds of money men around the world as the new year dawns:

A Third World nation, crushed by debt, declares default — it will not pay off its foreign loans. This pushes one of its lenders, a bank in free-wheeling, unregulated Hong Kong, toward insolvency. That bank's own creditors — other banks around the world — swiftly call in debts or fail. Other governments declare default. The intricate global banking network seizes up like a worn machine.

Banking experts maintain this scenario is only a remote possibility. But much depends on the psychology of the international financial markets.

"Defaults by several major borrowing countries could...trigger a general panic that would threaten the entire international banking system," analyst Hang-Sheng Cheng of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco warned last month.

None of the heavily indebted developing nations has defaulted. But a move last week by Brazil, the Third World's biggest debtor, could darken the gloom among bankers.

Unable to negotiate an agreement with its foreign lenders, the Brazilian government unilaterally set its own schedule for stretching out loan repayments. Argentina made a similar announcement in November.

THE FOREIGN DEBT load of these and other Third World nations is now estimated at $626 billion. This is money owed by governments, companies and individuals in the world's less-developed countries, two-thirds of it borrowed from commercial banks, mostly the great money-center banks of the United States and Europe, and the other one-third from foreign governments and international lending institutions.

This total has almost doubled in just four years, and, because recession has shrunk developing countries' earnings, and high interest rates have swollen their loan payments, the problems in paying off these debts have multiplied.

In 1982, about $140 billion was due to be repaid, but an estimated $45 billion was not, the research firm Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates reports. Twenty-two countries had to reschedule their debt payments last year, compared with two or three a year in the 1970s, and Wharton Econometric's Robert F. Westcott says 1983 promises to be even worse.

"The end result...is the rise of an adverse market psychology on the part of creditors," Westcott said in a December report. "This expectational problem is causing even more banks...to consider reducing their foreign lending exposure."

THE GLOOM IS not confined to bank boardrooms in world capitals. It hits ordinary people in the debtor countries as well.

Mexicans are suddenly paying double, $1.04, for a gallon of gasoline; Romanian workers will get only a $16 raise, instead of a promised $30, on their $200 average monthly wage; middle-class Argentines find they can no longer afford to buy an imported television.

These are the ripple effects of tough new economic programs — currency devaluations, government budget cutbacks, limits on imports — imposed on debtor nations by the International Monetary Fund in exchange for emergency loans.

Bankers are looking to the 146-nation IMF for still greater involvement in bailing out the big borrowers. The Reagan administration, after initial hesitation, has backed a proposal to increase the IMF's $67 billion in lending capacity by 40 to 60 percent.

But some banking leaders say stronger, quicker action is needed, since the IMF expansion would not be completed until late 1983. Some propose that governments establish a huge reserve fund to back the entire international banking system, even a shaky bank in Hong Kong.

BRAZIL

Foreign debt of $90 billion, built up in an aggressive industrialization campaign in the 1970s that included construction of such "white elephants" as the $14-billion Itaipu hydroelectric project, which produces much more power than Brazil needs. The world recession hurt Brazilian exports — sales were off and prices down for such key commodities as coffee.

As the year ended, Brazil announced it would not repay almost $1 billion in debt principal when it is due in January and February.

MEXICO

Foreign debt of $83 billion — or $1,200 for each man, woman and child, the highest per-capita level of the major debtors. Mexico's hopes for development were pegged to oil, but when world oil prices dropped in 1981, its dollar reserves began drying up.

Mexico is negotiating for a $3.9 billion IMF loan, is trying to delay repayment of $20 billion in short-term commercial loans, and wants $5 billion in fresh commercial loans. Consumer prices are being raised sharply and wages held down. "All will have to pay a price," the Mexican planning minister said.

Britain's Nationality Act called racist law

LONDON (AP) — Britain's controversial Nationality Act took effect Saturday in a tangle of new rules on citizenship criticized by many as a racist attempt to clean up the non-white "debris of empire."

The act, a principal feature of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's election platform, creates three separate categories of British subjects to replace the old Citizenship of the United Kingdom and Colonies statute.

In so doing, it consigns some 4.5 million of Her Majesty's loyal subjects — most of them non-white, the majority in Hong Kong — to a limbo of citizenship without any right of living in mainland Britain.

It also ends the seven-century-old legal tradition of "ius soli," or "right of the soil," by which any child born in Britain automatically was eligible for citizenship.

"We are doing nothing new in suggesting our citizenship should be given a better idea of where people actually belong," said Home Secretary William Whitelaw in January 1981 when the legislation was introduced in Parliament. He called it a long-needed rationalization of the laws.

But opponents called it a blunt message to non-whites to keep out of the British mainland.

"The act will result in injustice, greatly increase the number of stateless men, women and children, create uncertainties and feelings of insecurity and exacerbate racial tensions," said Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, spiritual leader of the Church of England.

Ann Dummet, whose Action Group on Immigration and Nationality vowed Saturday to fight the new law, added: "It is being seen even by people who won't be worse off as a gesture against them."

Under the new rules, all citizens of Britain, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man plus colonies "closely connected" with Britain become British citizens, with the right to live in Britain and pass this right on to their children.

By special vote, the 1,800 residents of the Falkland Islands were included in this category following the war last summer to reclaim the colony from Argentina. In an earlier vote, Gibraltar — the disputed rock at the southern tip of Spain — and its 30,000 people gained the top status.

The other two, lesser categories have no automatic right of residence.

Citizens of British Dependent Territories include some 3 million people in Hong Kong, Bermuda, Belize, the British Virgin Islands and a handful of other far-flung island and Antarctic territories.

For Hong Kong's enterprising residents, the right of moving to Britain is a crucial issue, with the lease of the New Territories from China running out in 1997 and Peking apparently determined to reclaim sovereignty.

Africa enters new year divided

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Africa's race separation in South Africa, despite South African half-dozen wars are relatively quiet but the continent are in the British and French nuclear arsenal. enters 1983 more divided than ever after the Organization of African Unity twice failed to convene its 1982 summit.

Issues splitting the OAU — the legitimacy of the presidency of Hissene Habre of Chad and Morocco's claim to Western Sahara — likely won't be resolved soon.

The United States, Marxist Angola and South Africa appear poised for movement on bringing South-West Africa to independence as Namibia. This could end two bush wars, remove Cuban troops from Angola and trim Soviet influence in black Africa.

South Africa hopes the gold price keeps rising, while analysts say 1983 is when the country will feel the world recession. The white-minority government plans to push constitutional reforms permitting power-sharing with Asians and coloreds (people of mixed race), but not with majority blacks.

The black nationalist African National Congress says it will intensify its guerrilla war against apartheid.

U.S.S.R. faces 1983 with stagnant economy

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union faces 1983 with its economy nearly stagnant and differences persisting with the United States over nuclear missiles.

Yuri V. Andropov said upon taking over as the nation's new leader after Leonid I. Brezhnev died Nov. 10 that he had "no ready recipe" for putting things right.

Andropov's thorniest internal problem is the economy. Corruption — that has grown out of a flourishing black market born of a system unable to provide many goods and services — is rampant. What can't be found in state shops — nearly everything desirable — is usually readily available from unofficial sources, but at astronomical prices.

Among his first acts were to order tougher discipline in workplaces and a crackdown on crime and corruption.

The missile question was the foremost international issue facing Andropov as 1982 ended. In late December he reaffirmed Soviet determination to block the deployment by NATO of 572 new U.S. medium-range rockets in Western Europe.

Speaking on the 60th anniversary of the Soviet Union, Andropov offered to withdraw hundreds of rockets from Soviet Europe, leaving only as many medium-range missiles as there are in the British and French nuclear arsenal.

His proposal was rejected by the United States and France which contended it would preserve the Soviet nuclear advantage. Implicit in Andropov's offer was the threat of NATO's deployment plan.

The United States has offered not to deploy its missiles if Moscow agrees to dismantle 333 new multi-warhead SS-20s, two-thirds of which are targeted on Western Europe.

Western analysts believe that the Soviets will not make concessions in the medium-range missile talks until the eve of NATO deployment late in 1983.

For that reason, Soviet foreign policy toward the West in 1983 will likely be much the same as it has been in recent years. The objective: divide the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and split the Europeans from the American connection.

Andropov's ascendancy after Brezhnev's death offers the opportunity, however, for a U.S.-Soviet summit conference. But the Americans insist that Moscow alter its global behavior before any such meeting, particularly on Poland and Afghanistan.

Region ensnared by strife

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Pauperized by debts and violence, Central America faces the threat of war between Honduras and leftist-ruled Nicaragua in 1983. Civil strife continues to plague Guatemala and El Salvador as the year begins.

The conflicts already involve the United States, which may have to extend military aid to Guatemala and increase current military assistance to Honduras and El Salvador.

Even placid Costa Rica and Panama — which considers itself a part of South America — are affected by the rising tension.

Costa Rica, which has a 30-year record of civilian governments and no armed forces, is quietly strengthening its national police. Panama complains the violence is ruining its trade with the area and its tourism industry.

The foreign ministers of Honduras, Guatemala, El Salvador and Costa Rica twice last year condemned Nicaragua's three-man junta for using Soviet equipment to build an armed force they claim is far beyond Nicaraguan needs.

Since they seized power three years ago, the Nicaraguan Sandinistas have built a 17,000-man army and a fully trained militia of 30,000 to 40,000 with Soviet assault rifles and tanks and Cuban advisers.

By comparison, El Salvador's security establishment, the second largest in the region, has been fighting a war against leftist guerrillas since 1979 with 26,000 men, including police forces.

In 1982, Nicaragua placed its armed forces on alert, proclaimed a national emergency and declared large areas along the Honduran border and the Caribbean coast "military emergency zones."

President Reagan underscored his concern with developments by meeting with the presidents of Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador and Costa Rica during his Latin American tour in December to discuss regional security.

The United States provided $81 million in military aid and 50 American noncombat military advisers to El Salvador in 1982 but the civil war there continues stalemated and observers predict it may intensify.

Reagan said he wants to resume aid to Guatemala, which was suspended five years ago because of alleged human rights violations. Reagan claims there has been improvement by that country's military regime in eliminating abuses.

Guatemala has been battling an increasingly bloody leftist insurrection for years and leftists terrorists have become active in Honduras, which got its first civilian government in 1982 after 17 years of military rule.

Violence has virtually paralyzed trade in the area, scaring off investors who took $15 billion out during the past three years. Economies have been shrinking as a result and jobs will continue scarce, pay low and goods hard to find and very expensive.

The five Central American countries have accumulated $139 billion in foreign debts — up from $3.2 billion in 1970 — mostly importing oil. They cannot afford to repay these debts because of low world prices for their lumber, coffee, cotton, beef and other exports.

Europe will struggle with unemployment

LONDON (AP) — The struggle out of recession, especially high unemployment and inflation, and crucial nuclear arms decisions will dominate Western Europe in 1983 and be reflected in Eastern Europe.

Yuri V. Andropov, the new Soviet leader, will be watched closely for signs of new policies which could affect political, economic and defense considerations in both halves of Europe. Prospects are that any change will be gradual.

Poland will remain a potential crisis point with Moscow-guided moves toward liberalization of the martial law regime hinging on actions of the still influential but banned trade union Solidarity, and reactions from the West and the Vatican.

Relations between Western Europe and the United States will probably be smoother in 1983 following a December fence-mending trip to Europe by U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

But tough issues involving unemployment, which in the Common Market exceeds 11.5 million, or more than 10 percent of the work force, and the average inflation rate, which is above 10 percent, will force the trading bloc to push new initiatives to stimulate industry and create jobs, especially for the young.

Western Europe's economic troubles have spilled over to the Eastern bloc, heavily in debt to the West. Such closely planned economies as those in East Germany, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Hungary will attempt to hold on to slow advances in living standards.

There will be a run-up to new parliament elections in Britain, with Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher confident but cautious lest her dominating position erode.

The new Spanish premier, Socialist Felipe Gonzalez, faces the problem of high unemployment, and decisions are awaited on Spain's continued membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the status of its U.S. military bases.

In Turkey, President Kenan Evren has promised a return to a full parliamentary system in 1983.

Austria, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and even robust Switzerland all carry forward economic worries into the new year.

The new West German chancellor, Christian Democrat Helmut Kohl, has promised parliamentary elections March 6, with the main issues being fast-rising unemployment and the scheduled installation of U.S. nuclear missiles by the end of 1983.

During the coming year, big-power nuclear arms talks in Geneva will hold the key to whether Western Europe accepts the first of 572 American cruise and Pershing-2 missiles to counter Soviet missiles already in place to the east.

As the sensitive deploy-or-not deadline approaches, the burgeoning anti-nuclear movement is expected to take to the streets again in Western European cities.

1983 may see Middle East initiatives

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The new year is likely to be dominated by peace initiatives aimed at restoring stability in the Middle East where conflict simmered in Lebanon and on the Persian Gulf in 1982.

Peace efforts do not guarantee a non-violent year, especially in the Persian Gulf where the two-year-old Iran-Iraq war seems to have become an endurance contest.

In Lebanon, President Reagan's administration was embarked on a campaign to negotiate the withdrawal of Syrian, Israeli and Palestinian forces while building a strong central government.

At year's end Israel arranged peace talks with the government of Lebanon but said its aim was the "normalization of relations," rather than the withdrawal of Israeli forces that routed the Palestinian Liberation Organization from Beirut, the capital. PLO guerrillas remain, however, in other parts of Lebanon.

Reagan's venture is taking longer than originally expected and is likely to require a risky commitment of more U.S. troops and prestige in the coming year. Even then, Syria's army is expected to cling to east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley while Israel insists on a 45-kilometer (28-mile) deep slice of south Lebanon to ensure its security.

The Soviet Union viewed U.S. participation in the multinational peacekeeping force with "restraint growing into suspicion" and Moscow officials have not ruled out stationing Soviet troops in Syria as a counter move.

In the rubble of war, however, there is a glimmer of hope for a breakthrough in the 35-year-old Arab-Israeli conflict with Arab and U.S. peace plans on the table.

Moderate Arab states signalled their readiness to recognize Israel and Reagan proposed Palestinian "self-government" in association with Jordan — both of which were rejected as inadequate by Israel.

But an early general election looked certain for this year in Israel and the timing may depend on the findings of the commission probing September's Beirut massacre. But Prime Minister Menachem Begin's aides believe any blemish left by the massacre inquiry will be overlooked by the voters.

Kissinger says KGB behind assassination attempt on pope

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger says reports about the assasination attempt on the pope lead him to conclude the Soviet KGB was behind it.

"I think you ask yourself now who benefited from it," said Kissinger. "And if you try to square the known facts, it really leads almost to no other conclusion."

Kissinger made the comments in an interview with Cable News Network. The interview was taped Wednesday for broadcast Friday and Sunday.

Kissinger said he had been told by Richard Helms, former head of the CIA, that the assasination attempt, in which the pope suffered a gunshot wound, "had all the earmarks to them of a KGB operation."

"Here is a Turkish terrorist, who suddenly shows up in Bulgaria, which is not the normal thing for a Turk to do, lives in the best hotel in Bulgaria, emerges with $50,000 and a weapon, travels all over Europe. It cannot happen without the Bulgarian secret police," Kissinger said.

"It's nonsense to say, as I read somewhere, that maybe something got away from the higher levels. That does not happen in Bulgaria. Then it had to be the Soviets. The Bulgarians have no interest in coming after the pope."

He said the Soviets "must have concluded that they had to crush Solidarity," the Polish labor organization. "At that time in 1981, they must have thought that the possibility existed that the Red Army would have to go in (to Poland)," Kissinger said.

"In that case if there were a Polish Pope who did what he was alleged to have threatened, go to Poland and oppose them, that would be a formidable psychological problem," he said.

1983 to bring warmer relations between India, Pakistan, China

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Added international pressure on the Soviet Union to withdraw troops from Afghanistan, or at least discuss it, and warming of India's relations with the United States, Pakistan and China and other neighbors are prospects for 1983 in the Asian subcontinent region.

These trends, identified by diplomats and area analysts, all appear linked to efforts by the government of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of India to regain lost influence in the Third World and to shed its image as a member of the Soviet camp.

Indeed, at a time of generally bleak hopes for reducing East-West tension, prospects appear bright for a restoration of confidence between India and the United States and between India and Pakistan, who have fought three wars since independence from Britain 35 years ago.

President Reagan's talks with Mrs. Gandhi in Washington last summer set in motion more frequent high-level Indian-U.S. exchanges and appeared to create an atmosphere of intensified cooperation where possible and, where not possible, agreement to disagree politely.

The four-year nuclear fuel dispute between Washington and New Delhi was laid to rest with an agreement for France to replace the United States as provider of uranium for the American-built Tarapur reactor near Bombay.

At yearend, Pakistan and India exchanged lists of their citizens in each other's jails, set up a joint commission to promote cooperation across the border and came to grips with proposals for non-aggression and friendship treaties.

Mrs. Gandhi and President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq of Pakistan have agreed to enlarge their search for understanding during the summit of the 96-member non-aligned movement in March in New Delhi.

The New Delhi summit could be a sounding-board for Third World criticism of the Soviet military presence in Afghanistan, going into its fourth year with an estimated 105,000 troops.

The session will be attended by a majority of the countries that have already voted for three U.N. General Assembly resolutions favoring a Soviet pullout. It will find Mrs. Gandhi taking over the non-aligned chairmanship from Cuba's Fidel Castro, trying to regain Indian influence and to mend non-aligned unity after three years of pro-Soviet leadership.

Efforts toward a negotiated Afghan settlement in 1983 are expected to focus on moves by special U.N. envoy Diego Cordovez of Ecuador to bring together representatives of the Soviet-installed government of Afghan President Babrak Karmal with those of neighboring Pakistan and Iran.

Welch reflects on years in office

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

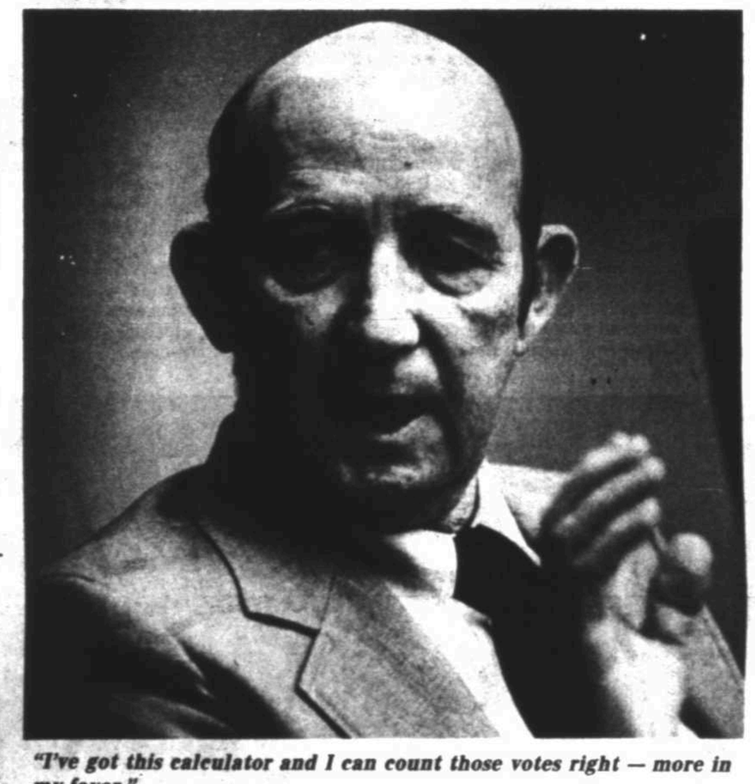
Even before Charlie Welch had been de-commissioned for at least four years, he was figuring on returning to politics.

"I sure don't have any intentions of not running (again for election)," said Welch who, at 57, had served 14 years on the five-member Midland County Commissioners' Court when he was defeated by his friend, Republican Wally Craig, in the November general election.

The electorate in Welch's Precinct 2 shooed him out of office by 84 votes: 2,974 to 2,890. Craig beat him by 1.4 percent. "I don't know how it would have turned out if I were on equal footing (with him)," Welch said in alluding to his 1982 mid-summer surgery which kept him from much active campaigning.

Craig will be sworn into office early Monday morning.

Welch, who has touted himself as a champion for the rural denizens, the farmers and the poor folks who can't afford high taxes, didn't say that he was irreplaceable. But he did suggest that no one would represent the people in the way he did.



"I've got this calculator and I can count those votes right — more in my favor."

— Charlie Welch

"I FEAR THAT these people won't have (proper) representation," said the controversial Welch, whose plain-spoken comments and obduracy often have pitted him against his fellow commissioners, the judge, the sheriff and city officials.

"The reason I'm considering running again is, in my opinion, the people of south and east Midland and the people in rural Midland County won't have representation on the Commissioners' Court."

In his years on the court, Welch, a farmer, has advocated keeping taxes reasonably low and governmental boards fiscally responsible.

Welch suggested that the progressive increase of property values and the addition of more items on the property tax rolls would stabilize the tax rate.

"They're hurt by tax increases, which makes it more difficult for them to own a home," Welch said of the less affluent Midland taxpayers.

In addition, Welch noted that the high, but now somewhat lowering prime interest rates, also prohibited many people from buying homes.

AMONG HIS causes while on the Commissioners' Court were:

—Lower Taxes. "We almost managed to keep taxes from being raising. In fact, they've been lowered more than they've been raised." The current tax rate is 18.03 cents per $100 assessment. "I don't care about the percentage," Welch said. "It's what you write your check out for that matters."

—The City's Waste Water. "They've just moved the problem." For years, Welch has been urging the city to more effectively clean up its effluent and to stop effluent from seeping or running into the underground water systems and polluting aquifers along Midland Draw and in the Greenwood area. Currently, the city of Midland is planning a $20-million project to pipe the effluent to an area about 15 miles southeast of Midland near Johnson Draw and the Midland-Glasscock County Line.

And Welch cited some of his recommended means to improve the county's functions:

—Expanded Courtroom. "The greatest need in the courthouse is a decent, respectable courtroom for Judge Barbara Culver's domestic relations court." Her courtroom, which adjoins the district attorney's office, is the former law library and is confining; it has no jury box or gallery for spectators.

"That courtroom is a disgrace in its present condition. It (the court) serves the good tax-paying citizens of Midland County. It's deserving of a decent, respectable courtroom." To provide space for Culver's 318th State District Court, Welch said he would relocate District Attorney Vern Martin's office from the courthouse's fourth floor to the eastside courthouse basement, which formerly housed the tax assessor-collector's and elections administrator's offices.

—Computers. "More computers (should be used) and less people in all the courthouse."

—Increase Jail Space. "Finish that other fourth" (part) of the courthouse's jail, he said in referring to the bull-pen area. "This is one of the finest jails in Texas."

Get Free Annex. "I would participate in a joint venture (with private enterprise) for a courthouse annex at no cost to the taxpayers." For example, the county would provide a prime downtown location for a hotel developer if the developer would, in turn, build the county an annex.

—Reorganize Justice of the Peace Precincts. "That's a farce," he said of the present set-up, which he admittedly supported for political reasons. Under the present system, the two peace justices, Robert H. "Bob" Pine and Charlie Sprayberry, represent Precinct 1, which takes in 99 percent of the county; the other three JP precincts are in unpopulated grassland in southeast Midland. As a result, the numbers of peace justices and constables are restricted.

—IN REFLECTING on the Commissioners' Court, Welch characterized the commissioners and the presiding judge:

—Durward Wright, Precinct 1 commissioner since 1969, a fellow Democrat, and a financial adviser: "He does deep research on any subject, and he makes decisions on very solid fact that he has been able to glean. We would not always agree. He's very dedicated. He's fiscally responsible and watches over the (tax) dollars very closely."

—C. DeWayne Davis, Precinct 3 commissioner since 1981, and a Democrat: "Schoolteacher, chamber of commerce. I'm finished."

Win Brown, Precinct 4 commissioner since 1971 and a Republican: "Oh, how would I describe Win Brown? Political, Republican Party builder regardless of community needs."

—William B. "Bill" Ahders, county judge since 1979 and presiding officer of the Commissioners' Court: "Bureau (FBI) investigator, good golfer."

Welch paid compliment to his successor, who has admitted that he supported Welch in past political races but not in the '82 elections.

In 1986, when Welch envisions his running again for commissioner, he predicted that he'll have a fair chance of winning the race.

"I've got this calculator," Welch jested, "and I can count those votes right — more in my favor."

Midlanders resolve to change their ways in 1983

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

January was named for the Roman god, Janus, who had two faces looking in opposite directions — one face looked into the past and the other into the future. And appropriately so, with the new year thought by many to be a time to tuck away the "old" and bring out the "new."

As 1983 came closer to rolling in, some Midlanders re-examined the past, reflecting on what they could do differently. Many more probed the future, resolving to change their ways.

New Year's resolutions originated in the English custom of cleaning the chimneys which was supposed to bring good luck to the household during the coming year. In time, the tradition was modified to "cleaning the slate," making resolutions to correct faults and bad habits — resolving to make the new year better.

Losing weight headed the list for several Midlanders who were interviewed Friday afternoon at Midland Park Mall.

They chuckled and shook their heads, vowing never to indulge in tasty treats "until those 20 pounds are gone."

Others were more specific. Larry and Mitzie Hoelscher attested to "eat better food," while Stuart Schmaling crossed his heart and promised to "leave the junk food alone," as he stuffed caramel-coated popcorn in his mouth by the handful.

Melissa Dimney took a practical approach: "I'm not making any resolutions because it never works," and D.L. Fenter of Odessa noted, "I'm not too strong on them (resolutions); they're just a passing fancy."

Touring the mall, David Thompson said with a shake of the head: "Don't make 'em; don't break 'em."

As one Midlander, Ulen North joked that his resolution is secret, he added, "...just like Christmas, you wait until the last minute (before making a resolution." Another Midlander, Larry Orlev quipped: "I haven't really thought about it...when you're perfect, you really don't make any."

But many people take their resolutions serious.

"I'm going to try not to work so hard, and take care of my family better," said Clifton Spears Jr.

After pondering a while, Brad Cox committed "to be a better Christian, and a greater service to other people around me."

And Michael Mosley stated, "Make myself more successful in certain situations, and not let people take advantage of me."

Because of a fear of letting everybody know their faults, a few Midlanders declined to say what their resolutions were. One Midlander emphatically said, "I have no plans to make any New Year's resolution."

However, others spouted:

"Oh gawd, more patience," said Jody Hensley.

"Work on keeping a better budget," David White said.

"Give my dog a bath more," Bonita Jameson said.

Young people also pledged to change. Seven-year-old Jeff Wilson said he will "work out on the farm."

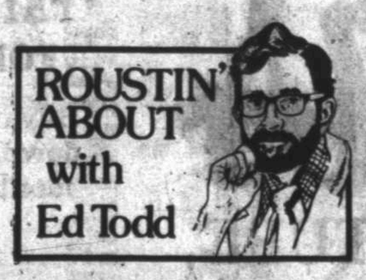
"Totally awsome," giggled Robin Ormand. "I'm going to lose 15 pounds...groudy to the max...I'm going to get rid of all of my zits."

On a romantic note, one Midland couple in matching jogging suits, holding hands, gazed into each others eyes, saying:

"I'm going to be happier than I ever have," said Geri Odom, while Don Smith added, "I resolve she (Ms. Odom) will be a Smith this year."

Man is often inclined to overlook wonders and drama of nature



If you were to stand off from afar — say, from the Black Hole — and behold the Earth as a mere fleck in an infinite Universe, you might be bemused or you might even fleer.

"How," you ask, "could those people down there be so concerned with the pettiness of their inconsequential problems, ambitions, aspirations and desires? They all are so fleeting."

How?

"If they could only see, they would marvel at the wonder, the splendor, the precision, the intricacy and simplicity of the limitless Creation. There's far, far more to the world than 'their world.'"

Mankind has but a glimpse into its grandiosity.

On a song of wings, you could forever fly throughout the Universe and never visit the same galaxy twice. You could forget the minor planet Earth and live and revel in the glory of God's unending Creation.

That's a dream, a fantasy, in this Earth-bound life — a life marked and marred by beginnings and endings. It would be an unfathomable experience. How can a mortal begin to comprehend and appreciate this Universe?

Now, if you, in your mind's eye, were to take light years to return to Earth and were to scrutinize the planet and its many marvels, you would be amazed. In its own peculiar and limited way, the Earth would seem at least as fascinating as the outer world to Earthlings who are bound to it. The Earth is a marvel: a self-contained, self-supporting sphere set into motion in space. Everyone of the zillions of details — from the unseen atom and molecule to the soaring eagle and lofty mountain — are wonders unto themselves. Even a lone snowflake can be a work of art; the spider has an innate gift for carrying out architectural and engineering schemes and feats.

Yet, man is inclined to overlook nature's drama and wonders. He hasn't the capacity, the intellect, the ability or the wisdom to fully comprehend even the familiar: a raindrop, a snowflake, a grain of sand, a birth, the flight of a bird, or his own physiological systems and his own psychological makeup. He is baffled by and in his own existence. How does he explain his own heartbeat, his thinking processes, his reasons whys, his quest for life eternal, his need for love?

Though maybe knowledgeable, man is ignorant. If he thinks he knows all there is to know about a subject, then he forgets his own limitations. Can an ant, a bug, a dog, a cat, a bird or fish contemplate you and your world? You no more have a jack rabbit, raven, bee or cricket figured out than the creatures have you sized up. The more you know, the more you realize your own limitation and, at the same time, the more you are aware of your own powers and potential.

You behold the world's libraries and ever-expanding banks of information. The knowledge therein is immense; it is astounding. Yet, it is but an iota of the unrevealed Knowledge that is in the world.

Earth-bound people are blinded. They often see no more than their confining world of problems, needs, desires and fears. They know not how to live in the glory of the Creation and to adore their Creator. They forget the gift of life and that it was not their making. Maybe that's why they've so many problems and worries.

A fleck? Within this Universe, the Earth is but an infinitesimal particle. Yet that speck is so wondrous and complex. To appreciate that is a beginning in understanding your own existence and learning the reasons for your being. If existence is not for the glory of God, then what is it for?

Canine heartworm occurring much more often in Midland

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Midland's burgeoning commercial and residential development of late has spawned — of all things — a sharp rise in the incidence of canine heartworm disease.

"We've seen a 100 percent increase — at least," said Dr. Robert Boyd of the Tall City Veterinary Hospital.

"We're seeing it now where we seldom saw it before," added a spokeswoman for the Shannon Animal Hospital. "We expect to be recommending that all dogs be put on preventive (medication) in the next year or two."

Dr. Tom W. Green of Green's Animal Clinic concurs that heartworm disease is fast becoming a problem that was virtually non-existent here in the past because of the relatively dry climate.

"From 1974 — when I came to Midland — through June of this year, I found two cases of heartworm in local dogs — that is, dogs that had lived their lives in Midland," Green said.

"But in the past six months alone I've treated 37 cases in local dogs."

THE CAUSE IS a combination of two major factors, according to veterinarians: infected dogs brought into the area by people moving here from other parts of the country where rainfall and mosquitoes are more prevalent, and construction projects that reduce the amount of surface ground available for rainwater absorption.

Decreased absorption leads to increased runoff into the fields and drainage channels in the city and county. In turn, the channels and fields harbor more standing water than before and become fertile breeding grounds for mosquitoes, an intermediate and necessary host in the life cycle of heartworms.

"The problem starts when a mosquito draws blood from an infected dog," says a heartworm pamphlet distributed by United Features Syndicate Inc.

"Circulating in the blood are tiny, immature worms called microfilariae. Interestingly, these microfilariae must be ingested by a mosquito before they can progress in their development."

AFTER A TWO OR three week maturation period, the microfilariae become infective larvae that are deposited by the host mosquito into a dog's circulatory system, where they become adult heartworms in about 200 days.

"Typically," notes the pamphlet, "the long adult worms collect in the right heart chambers and major pulmonary blood vessels, while the microfilariae are carried freely through the arteries and veins of the circulatory system.

"Together, the parasites increase the heart's workload and restrict blood flow to the lungs, kidneys and liver. Continued, untreated infection produces an increased strain on these vital organs, which eventually may result in death of the dog."

The worms do most of their dirty work in the adult stage. Fully grown, females attain a length of 10 to 14 inches, with males achieving about half that size.

As many as 5,000 microfilariae can be deposited in a dog's bloodstream by one adult female on any given day, according to the pamphlet. The parents live about five years and their offspring's lifespan is about three years.

The visible signs of heartworm may take a full year to show up after infection, thus allowing the disease to be in its advanced stages well before the animal displays any symptoms.

Symptoms, according to Dr. Green, are basically those associated with heart failure: coughing, lethargy, lack of stamina and weight loss.

"And because the signs vary," says the pamphlet, "the disease may be mistaken for another problem. Accurate diagnosis is accomplished in various ways. The technique most frequently used involves drawing a small blood sample which is examined under a microscope for the presence of microfilariae.

"WHILE THE TESTS are reliable, approximately 10 percent of the infections may go undetected because some dogs with adult worms in their hearts do not have microfilariae in their bloodstream.

"If heartworms are suspected in spite of negative test results, X-rays may be taken to obtain an accurate diagnosis. When (the) disease is confirmed, a treatment program is set up to remove both adult worms and microfilariae."

First, the adult worms are killed with twice-daily intravenous injections of a special arsenic compound for two to three days. Once the adults are dead, the dog receives daily, oral doses of dithiazine iodide for seven days to kill the offspring.

The animal is then re-examined and either taken off the medication if it's been 100 percent effective, or the treatment is continued until the blood is free of microfilariae — assuming the dog has had no adverse reaction to the medicine.

"Only after the adult heartworms and the microfilariae have been eliminated may the infected dog be put on a program to prevent reinfection," notes the pamphlet. "Retesting the dog in six months is advised, as this will verify whether all the various stages of the heartworm's development have been destroyed."

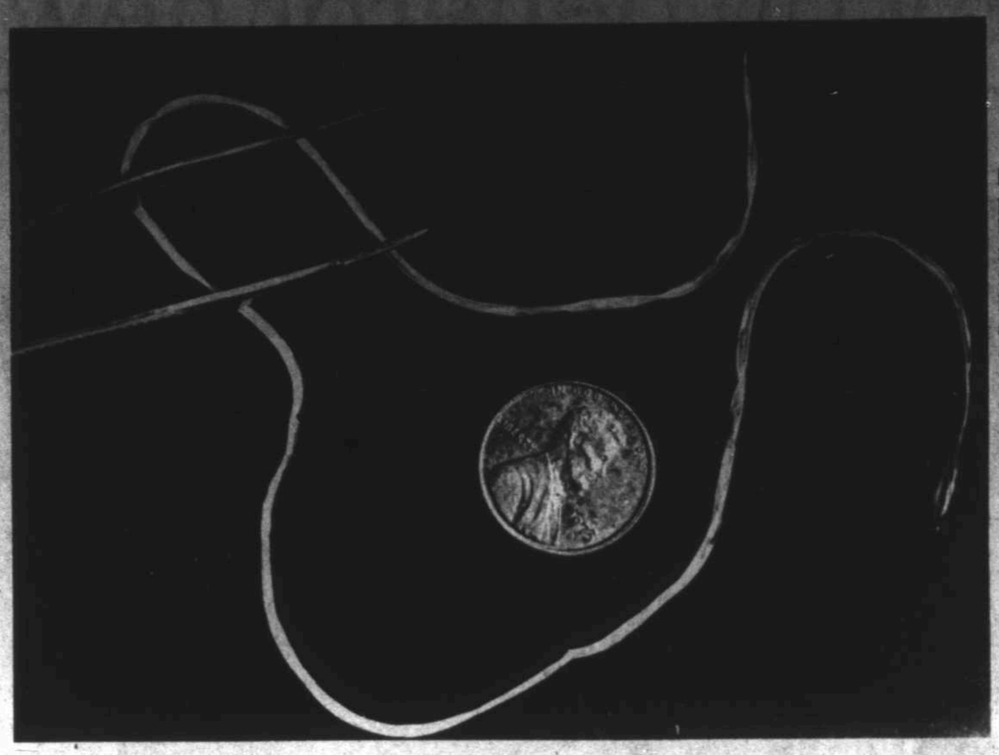
Once a dog is determined to be free of heartworms, it can be kept free of them by daily doses of special tablets, a year's supply of which costs about $22 for a 30-pound animal, according to Dr. Green.

CHEAPER FORMS of preventing heartworm are available, but they aren't very palatable and are therefore harder to administer, said Green, adding:

"The hardest part of (curing the disease) is that the dog has to be confined and totally without exercise for six weeks until the animal's body defenses consume the dead parasites. That is tough on a dog.

"I think Midland has been very lucky until this past year. Big Spring, Lubbock and San Angelo have had the problem for 10 years.

"But from now on we have the potential for an epidemic, especially in the rainy season when the mosquito population is high."



Canine heartworm has not been much of a problem in Midland because the parasite needs mosquitoes as an intermediate host. But heavy construction activity in the past year or two has led to an increase in the amount of standing water available for mosquitoes to breed in, and local veterinarians are concerned about a potential epidemic of heartworm disease in the near future.

Midland College Winter Interim Session to begin

College semesters generally last 13 weeks, but Midland College is compressing six three-hour college credit courses into two weeks for the Midland College Winter Interim Session.

The interim session, which begins at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday, will end Jan. 14. Students will attend class from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. and from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. each day in addition to daily homework assignments.

"We've found students take interim courses for various reasons," said Raymond Yell, dean of transfer and general studies. "Some want to take a course they had previously dropped or failed; still others want to take the course in order to reduce their course load during the following semester."

This year's list of classes being offered during the interim session include Economics 2302, Principles of Economics II; Government 2302, State and Federal Government II; History 2301, U.S. History to 1877; History 2302, U.S. History from 1877; English 2301, Masterpieces of the Western World I; and English 2303, Technical Writing.

Students who wish to enroll for the interim session should be at the Murray Fasken Learning Resource Center at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday to register and begin classes.

MC pre-registering for spring

Prospective Midland College students may pre-register for the spring semester weekdays through noon Jan. 11, beginning Tuesday.

"Pre-registrations before the Christmas holidays were quite high and we expect this trend to continue," said Dee Windsor, associate dean of students and registrar. "With increased numbers, it becomes even more important for students to pre-register and to do it as early as possible. Under our registration system, time permits are issued to students in the order in which they pre-register and those who come early have better choices regarding class schedules that fit their individual needs."

Pre-registration activities are conducted in the Office of Student Services in the Administration Building between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and Jan. 10. Pre-registration will be held from 8 a.m. until noon Jan. 11.

For those with time permits, official registration days are Jan. 12-13. Classes will begin Jan. 17.

"Due to our registration process this semester, with a computer system, and the increasing number of students, it will not be possible for us to process students who don't pre-register nearly as quickly as we have in the past," Windsor cautioned. "That's why we are urging all prospective students to come in for pre-registration and obtain a time permit."

Midland College offers a complete range of academic and vocational courses this spring semester during the day and night.

Noon hour courses also will be offered this year. The classes will be held from 12 to 12:50 p.m. each Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

"Some students who carry heavy course loads aren't able to get some of the classes at convenient times," said Dr. Don Hunt, vice president for instruction. "Others might be able to be free during the noon hour in order to take specific classes."

Courses which will be offered during the noon hour include Business Administration 2451, Principles of Accounting I; English 1302, Composition and Literature; English 2303, Technical Writing; Government 2301, State and Federal Government; and History 2302, U.S. History from 1877.

Information about credit courses being offered at Midland College during the spring semster may be obtained by visiting the Office of Student Services or by calling 684-7851, extension 166.

Spanish courses on tap at UTPB

ODESSA — Five Spanish courses will be offered at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin during the spring semester.

Spanish 302, Advanced Composition and Conversation, will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 2 to 3:15 p.m. The course is designed to improve oral and written Spanish.

Spanish 452, Mexican-American Literature, will meet on Tuesdays from 7 until 9:45 p.m. Knowledge of Spanish is not required. The literature in English, and some Spanish, will focus on Chicano authors and their perspectives of American and the Mexican-American community.

Spanish 489-01, Intensive Spanish Grammar for Reading, is a self-paced course. It is designed for students interested in developing their reading skills.

Spanish 489-03, Advanced Conversational Spanish, will meet Mondays and Wednesdays from 7:05 until 8:20 p.m. The course, which is designed for the student who wishes to increase his or her oral and aural skills, will include reading and discussions of selected topics from literature, history, religion, politics and current events.

Ped 361, Children's Literature in Spanish, will meet on Mondays and Wednesdays from 5:40 to 6:55 p.m. The course is designed to help the prospective bilingual teacher, as well as anyone interested in children's literature in Spanish, become acquainted with the methodology, selection and evaluation of such texts, and to familiarize students with the literature available for the bilingual child.

For more information on any of the courses, contact professor Genaro J. Perez at his office number, 367-2249, or at home, 362-8217.

County officers to be sworn

The Midland County Commissioners' Court is to activate the county's 1983 budget of $10.6 million on Monday after Commissioner-elect C. Wallace "Wally" Craig, District Clerk-elect Vivian Wood and nine county officials, including judges, are sworn into office at 8:15 a.m. Monday by 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin.

Craig, a real-estate broker, defeated veteran Commissioner Charlie Welch of Precinct 2, and Ms. Wood unseated District Clerk Madge Wallis in the November general election.

Re-elected officials to be sworn into additional four-term terms of office are 238th State District Court Judge Vann Culp, 318th State District Court Judge Barbara Culver, County Judge William B. "Bill" Ahders, County Court-at-Law Judge Willie DuBose, County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry, County Treasurer Dee Thompson, Commissioner Win Brown of Precinct 4 and Justice of the Peace Robert H. "Bob" Pine.

County Attorney Scott Henderson, who was appointed to the office by the commissioners after his predecessor, Robert Rendall, resigned from the post in 1981, also will be sworn into office. Henderson was unopposed in his bid for election.

The swearing-in ceremony will be in the 142nd State District Courtroom on the third floor of the Midland County Courthouse.

Afterward, the Commissioners' Court is to convene at 9 a.m. in the Commissioners' Courtroom on the second floor of the courthouse.

Business to be considered by the court includes:

—Authorizing County Auditor Johnnie Thompson to advertise for bids for a car for the Juvenile Probation Office.

—Approving elected officials' bonds and deputations of employees of the district clerk and county clerk.

—Approving county court terms.

—Appointing members of the Courthouse Flower Fund.

—Setting travel expense accounts for county trappers, county commissioners, county welfare worker, justices of the peace and for service to the law library.

—Adjusting the hourly rate of part-time employees.

—Consider amending the 1983 budgets of Constable Tom McGinnis, Peace Justices Charlie Sprayberry and Robert H. "Bob" Pine, Sheriff Dallas Smith, County Agent Earnest Kiker and Elections Administrator Janeice Builta.

Housing panel to review plan

An update on the housing rehabilitation program and applications for more work will be reviewed when the Midland Housing Authority meets at 2 p.m. Tuesday in City Hall Council Chambers.

The board will determine the priority in which remaining applications for rehabilitation of homes will be taken.

The rehabilitation program is being funded through Community Development Block Grant money. Susan Howell, CD coordinator, and Horace Berry, inspector, will report on the project's progress.

The board also will review bills and financial statement for November.

Midland College Chaparrals celebrate their national basketball champ

...but it had 'moving moments'

"Though it be honest, it is never good to bring bad news."
— From the play MacBeth by William Shakespeare

Though the news was honest and straightforward last year, it wasn't what Midlanders wanted to hear. In fact, 1982 could be marked down on the books as a year of a few ups and a lot of downs.

It was out-of-the-ordinary events which highlighted the year, those happenings which rarely, if ever, occur in Midland but which seemed to pop up more than once. There was more than one disastrous light airplane crash, more than one apartment fire, more than one airline pulling out, more than one person holding law enforcement at bay while holed up inside a house. But there were a couple of bright spots.

And of the top news stories in Midland in 1982, two of them made the city known nationwide — the Midland College national basketball championship and the plane crash into Warwick Apartments.

It was the latter of the two which ranks first at the top of the year's list of news stories as compiled by the news department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram. The warm, fall Friday afternoon on Sept. 25 was shattered shortly before 2 p.m. when a Beechcraft Baron taking off from Midland Air Park reportedly lost power in one engine and crashed into a building at Warwick Apartments, Garfield and Whitmire streets.

The pilot, Alex Sheets of Baton Rouge, La., had been carrying two prisoners back to Louisiana. Riding along with Sheets was Ken Hornsby. The four men were burned severely in the crash, and Hornsby died a month later from his injuries.

A crew snoots a scene from the Midland-based movie "Waltz Across Texas." The premiere showing was held in October.

Also burned severely in the crash was Midlander Randy Sellars, 20, who had gone home for lunch that day from his job at Albertson's. He heard the crash and ran outside into a wall of fire. Two months after the crash, Sellars was back in Midland resuming his recovery. And rebuilding of the burned apartments was under way.

The next major news item wasn't catalogued in one story, but rather in a variety of reports which slowly revealed the truth — Midland was in a recession.

The year had dawned bright for the petroleum-related companies here, but by summer the slump was evident.

Unemployment figures for April disclosed a 2 percent jump from the previous month, going from 4.9 percent up to 7 percent. The percentage of those unemployed ascended to 7.6 for June and then dropped to 5.2 for July. By October, the figure was hovering at 4.7 percent.

The higher unemployment figures also reflected the closing of offices or reductions in staff, such as reported at Geophysical Systems Corporation, Texas American Energy Corporation, Coquina Oil Corporation, Post Petroleum Co. Inc., and Davis Oil, to name a few.

THE SLOWDOWN brought still another effect. What had been an unshakably tight housing market in 1981 with prices that spiraled higher every month flip-flopped into a take-your-pick shopping center of abodes with lowering costs. And builders saw their houses sitting empty while potential buyers kept their money clutched tight in their palms.

Midland College put the Tall City on every basketball lover's map when Coach Jerry Stone's Chaparrals squeaked out a 93-88 double overtime win for the National Junior College Athletic Association Championship. In that fourth and final game of the championship tournament, the Chaps beat No. 1-ranked Miami Dade North.

One event toward the end of 1982 brought wide Cheshire-like grins to the faces of persons in the petroleum industry here. A federal judge ruled the Windfall Profits Tax, so hated by the industry, as unconstitutional because it didn't include new oil produced above the Arctic Circle in Alaska. By the end of the year, however, those wide grins began to fade as the Justice Department announced it was planning to file an appeal.

FOR MIDLAND Memorial Hospital, 1982 was a long year filled with battles. MMH began the year seeking approval to construct an alcohol/drug abuse facility. However, MMH's plan clashed with two other proposals by private groups. The battle progressed before the eyes of the Texas Health Facilities Commission, which ruled that MMH and West Plains could construct the facilities. Parkview Hospital's plan was turned down.

However, after the ruling, Parkview sued the THFC, so MMH is holding up on construction while considering another site.

And the year ended with MMH and Parkview in competition again — this time for more beds. MMH wanted to expand its facility, while Parkview's owners, American Medical Corporation Inc., sought to build a new hospital. Both was an unexpected end to bingo when Comptroller Bob Bullock's Raiders stopped an illegal game at a VFW post.

A stockade to hold an overflow of prisoners in the county jail was proposed for this site, above, in southeast Midland. But opposition of residents and a drop in prisoners killed the idea.

A security guard, left, keeps watch over the counter space abandoned by Braniff Airlines in an overnight pullout. Also leaving Midland was Continental Airlines.

1982 had multiple doses of several extraordinary events

cases were presented before the THFC and the decision is pending.

It was a year filled with elections and the accompanying gobbledygook from candidates aspiring to wield power and hear resulting criticism. Like a hunting season, the filing period opened in January for state and national offices, in February for city offices.

In April, Midland voters approved $7 million in bonds for city additions and improvements and gave the OK to $9.475 million for new schools.

For six months preceding the November general election, Midland was the target of what seemed like a never-ending parade of candidates.

In November, Midland voters ousted Charlie Welch and Madge Wallis from their county positions. And while voters went for Ernest Angelo for state senator, he lost support from the rest of the district. Midlanders stood apart from the rest of the state as voters here went Republican on state and national races, and the state went Democratic.

NEXT ON THE LIST of top stories is the bingo issue. Raiders from Comptroller Bob Bullock's office gathered their forces on Sept. 23 and struck down an illegal game being played at the VFW Post 7208. No one was indicted in the raid, which took about $1,200 intended for charitable projects, and an election to legalize bingo in the Tall City was slated for early 1983.

Tying for the next spot on the list were Sheriff Dallas Smith's proposal for a prisoner stockade and the raid on dog-fighting in the county.

When the prisoner count in the Midland County Jail rose above the recommended level last spring Smith suggested building a stockade out in the county. The plan was approved by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards and Smith said it would be in operation by the middle of August.

The plan never came to fruition, however, as every site chosen was opposed by nearby residents. And then the prisoner population dropped below the maximum, eliminating the need for the stockade.

On Aug. 30, sheriff's deputies arrested eight persons at a dog fighting arena in Midland County. The eight were charged with cruelty to animals. By the end of the year, two had gone to trial and judged guilty of their charges. A third pleaded guilty. The significance of the event is that it brought an outcry from numerous animal lovers who are working to see the misdemeanor charge turned into a felony.

Culmination of more than a year's work marched across the silver screen in October with the premiere showing of the Midland-based movie, "Waltz Across Texas." The brainchild of Terry Jastrow, a native of Midland who left to become an ABC sports producer, he returned with actress Anne Archer to tell the story of the oil industry that was part of his family.

The next major plane crash actually was the first one of the year. On a quiet Sunday morning in May, a light airplane took off from Midland Air Park and moments later both engines died. Pilot Fred Michna landed the craft on the street near the intersection of Edwards and Cedar. The plane skidded down the street, striking only a pickup. Miraculously, no one was injured, including the pilot.

Adding to the Midland economic problems were the demise of Braniff Airlines in May and pullout of Continental in June. With the death of Braniff, Midland was left with only one carrier to Dallas that had direct connections to the East Coast. Although Continental's slots were picked up by Texas International, smaller planes were utilized, cutting down the amount of cargo space to the West Coast.

A major apartment fire flared up the windy evening of Oct. 29 at the Polo Park Apartments. Five residents were evacuated without injuries from the complex that was still under construction.

In the space of four months, two armed men held law enforcement officers at bay for hours before coming out of their houses peacefully.

The first occurred July 30 in east Midland when an armed man barricaded himself inside a relative's home in 100-degree heat. The standoff lasted five hours before the man came out and was arrested.

The second incident happened Oct. 28 in west Midland when a man holed up inside his family's residence. This time officers waiting quietly four hours before the man gave himself up.

Unlike previous years when Midland was setting growth records, 1982 was a year for settling down.

Two of the top stories in 1982 made Midland known nationwide — the Midland College national basketball championship and the plane crash into Warwick Apartments.

DEATHS

Housing papers executed

President Don Hellinghausen and Secretary Fred Kester of the Midland Housing Finance Corporation have returned from Houston where closing documents were executed for two new apartment complexes in Midland. These multi-family projects are possible through the Loan-to-Lenders program of the housing corporation and were approved during a fall meeting of the MHFC's board.

Bonds totaling $17.47 million have been issued. The issue for the Manchester Development Group is for $10.4 million and will construct a 278-unit complex at the corner of Loop 250 and Manchester. The second issue, for $7.07 million, were issued for the Ranchland Development Group's 204-unit complex at the southeast corner of Wadley and Sage streets in northeast Midland. This is MHFC's first project in that area.

Managing partner for both complexes is Campbell & Co. of Houston. The developer said they are confident about the condition of the Midland market when these two projects will be completed, late 1983 and late 1984, respectively.

Hellinghausen said the board is concerned about the present market, and has delayed beginning of the Manchester's second phase until January 1984. Also, the board is putting all future applications on a waiting list, based on date of receipt.

Newborn worsens

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — A critically ill newborn baby, hospitalized with a lung disorder since his premature birth Christmas Day, grew worse Saturday and doctors feared the child might not survive, a hospital official said.

"He's not doing very well," said spokesman Don Nelson at Scott & White Hospital here. "There are no really new problems, but he's just not responding. The prognosis is poor."

"It's hard to say if he will last the day. You just never know. He is in extremely criticial condition," said Nelson.

The baby's condition had improved slightly on Thursday and he no longer required 100-percent oxygen from his respirator, doctors said.

However, the child was born two months premature, needed medication to maintain proper blood pressure, had difficulty eliminating body wastes and was born with hyaline membrane disease, a disorder that keeps his lungs from expanding properly.

Surgery scheduled

DEL RIO, Texas (AP) — A 4-year-old girl who suffers from a rare heart defect that enlarged her heart to the size of a telephone will undergo surgery next week because a state agency promised to pick up the $20,000 price tag, her parents said Saturday.

Angie Hinkle is scheduled for surgery Friday in San Antonio's Santa Rosa Children's Hospital. Doctors said she suffers from an atrial septal defect that causes her heart to pump blood at three times the normal rate.

Stanton jail under renovation

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

STANTON — The old Martin County Jail with its 96-year-old cell block is undergoing restoration at a cost of $80,000 and again will be trod by man in March 1984.

"If you're not interested in the past, you're not interested in the future — that's the way I look at it," opined Sheriff Dan Saunders, member of the Martin County Historical Commission which will monitor the structure for the county. "If someone doesn't take the initiative to preserve these historic landmarks, they're gone forever."

The red-rocked jail will not fall before the onslaught of so-called "advancement" because of a sensitive group of Martin County residents who saw in the 1906 building the promise of tomorrow. Upon completion, it will house the Chamber of Commerce and a visitor's center.

The jail was used until a new facility was completed in 1975, while the upstairs living quarters were occupied by every Martin County sheriff of the century until Saunders assumed the reigns in 1952.

The restoration is being made possible by a grant of almost $80,000 from Joe Mabee and Mabee Petroleum two months ago, while architect Jack Levin of Midland is handling the actual renovation under a one-year contract.

"The first thing they've got to do is work on the foundation," explained Saunders, "because it has started deteriorating."

Additional restoration work will include sandblasting, putting in new windows, lighting, plumbing and re-roofing.

Victory gives Ponies first unbeaten season since Walker era

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

DALLAS — Southern Methodist University generated a fourth-period touchdown as a result of a couple of clutch catches by split end Bobby Leach to go ahead and then free safety Blane Smith intercepted a Dan Marino pass in the end zone to preserve a 7-3 lead over Pittsburgh in chill, damp Cotton Bowl game Saturday.

The victory over the Panthers probably won't bring with it the hoped-for national championship, but it did enable the Mustangs to complete their first unbeaten season since the 1947 SWC of the fabled Doak Walker era. And, the 11-0-1 record gave SMU its most victories in a season since the 12-win national championship of 1935.

However, this year's Ponies did something neither of their predecessors could accomplish. They won their last game. Walker's twice-tied SMU team of 1947 played a 13-13 tie with Penn State in the Cotton Bowl. SMU's 1935 team lost to Stanford 7-0 in the Rose Bowl.

WITH A cast that included the prolific Marino on one side and the ground-devouring Pony Express tandem of Eric Dickerson and Craig James on the the other, it was the kind of script that promised lots of scoring. Instead, it turned out to be one of the lowest scoring of the season's bowl games.

Marino completed 19-of-37 passes for 181 yards and one (key) interception while Dickerson gained 124 yards on 27 carries and James added another 54 in 13 carries, but none figured directly in the scoring.

For Pitt, along with its third defeat in nine games came the additional indignity of its first game without a touchdown since being shutout by Navy in 1975.

ALL OF the scoring came in the final half as the Cotton Bowl suffered through its first pointless first half since 1961. Still, both teams had opportunities. Penalty-shackled Pitt reached the SMU one on its initial drive only to fumble. SMU countered with a 91-yard drive that reached the Panthers' seven only to be foiled by an errant pitchout that was recovered on the 14.

Eric Schubert, who had missed a 26-yard field goal attempt just before halftime, finally put the Panthers on the scoreboard with 4:34 left in the third period, drilling a 43-yarder through the slanting rain for a 3-0 Pitt advantage after the Panthers had come 36 yards in 13 plays to reach the Mustang 27.

Quarterback Lance McIlhenny, whose misguided pitchouts hampered the Mustang attack throughout the first half, sprinted in from the nine-yard line 1:17 into the final period to end an 11-play 80-yard drive. Jeff Harrell then kicked the extra point for a 7-3 SMU lead.

McIlhenny, voted the game's offensive MVP, kept the ball on what looked like a pitch wide to tailback James on his score, just the thing Pitt coach Foge Fazio had worried about before the game.

"If you over play the pitch on the option," said Fazio, "that leaves a lane for McIlhenny to run in and he can hurt you."

HOWEVER, THE two big plays of the drive were McIlhenny completions to Leach, the hero of the improbable victory over Texas Tech earlier in the season. Both were made with SMU facing long yardage situations.

The first came on third-and-12 at the SMU 29. "It was a twins right 18 curl. I'm supposed to go 18 yards deep and find an open spot. Only this time, I saw they (the Pitt defense) had penetrated on the other side and killed the play."

Leach came back and made the catch on the under-thrown ball for a first down at the SMU 49.

Then, with second-and-22, he made an over-the-shoulder catch of a perfectly thrown pass for 42 yards to the Pitt 17. Leach told coach Bobby Collins at half he could beat his man (Troy Hill) but admitted he always says that. "We were just waiting for the right time to use it." It was a 16 X and Z up.

"As soon as the ball left Lance's hand I knew it was well thrown. Then, I realized I was close to the sidelines, but didn't know how close. As it turned out, I think I could have caught it and stayed inbounds for more yardage."

How did Leach get open? "Hill is supposed to be fast, but in the movies I saw he had trouble turning sometimes. I faked inside with a weave move and then broke outside. It forced Hill to open his hips and gave me the step I needed."

MCILHENNY COMPLETED five-of-nine passes for 101 yards, not as impressive as Marino's figures, but Leach was impressed. "Lance did a super job handling the wet ball. Marino has those big hands so it was easier for him. Lance's hands are small so he did a good job of throwing."

Pitt was behind with 13:43 left in the game, but far from finished. The Panthers drove from their 25 to a first down at the SMU eight and the game's outcome hung in the balance.

After two incompletions, SMU's Smith, who pitched a lateral to Leach that resulted in a 93-yard kickoff return that beat Tech in the final four seconds, intercepted Marino to snuff out the threat.

"I didn't have any man on the play," Smith explained. "I knew they wanted to throw the alley oop to Dawkins (split end Julius) when that didn't open up, Marino tried to throw the ball to Collins (flanker Dwight) and that's where I headed."

Strong safety Wes Hopkins got his hands on the ball "but it hit his face mask and I was there to grab it when it deflected."

Smith felt SMU's variety of coverages gave Marino problems all day. We were playing three-deep, two-deep and then mixing in some blitzes. Dan never was really sure what we were in."

Marino blamed himself for not staying in the pocket more. "They didn't have as good a pass rush as you might think."

IN COMPLETING his first season at SMU unbeaten, Collins left no doubt as to his feelings.

"As far as I'm concerned, this is the No. 1 team in the nation. They seem to play best when things aren't going well."

As for Fazio, who inherited what many deemed was the prime contender for No. 1 honors from Jackie Sherill, it was a disappointing game. "Lots of times we had our chances but their defense was all over. They rushed Danny very well and did pretty good job at coverage. Still we had our chances. SMU and Penn State would be a great football game but I'd better not say who I think would win it."

Ramsey guides UCLA to 24-14 Rose Bowl win

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Quarterback Tom Ramsey scored the opening touchdown and marshaled two other scoring drives Saturday, sending fifth-ranked UCLA to a 24-14 Rose Bowl victory over a No.19 Michigan team that lost its quarterback in the first half.

Ramsey, who completed 18 of 25 passes for 162 yards in this 69th Rose Bowl, tallied the opening TD on a 1-yard run after completing all five of his passes in the first-quarter drive.

David Hall took over and threw scoring passes of 1 and 4 yards in the second half, but the Wolverines were unable to overcome the 10-0 first-half lead built by UCLA.

Hall, who completed only 7 of 40 passes in the regular seaason was 13 of 24 for 155 yards.

VICTORY FOR the Bruins marked the 12th victory for the Pacific-10 over the champion team of the Big Ten in the last 14 New Year's Day games.

It also provided the Bruins their second victory in three games with Michigan during the last year and a day. On Dec. 31, 1981, the Wolverines won the Bluebonnet Bowl game 33-14 and UCLA won 31-27 during the past regular season.

The Bruins' second score came on John Lee's 39-yard field goal, capping a drive that started at Michigan's 47 when All-American receiver Anthony Carter fumbled a punt and Mike Durden recovered at the Michigan 47.

The Wolverines pulled within three points after 9:44 of the third period when Hall hit Eddie Garrett on his 1-yard throw. Tailback Lawrence Ricks gained 27 yards in five carries during that 45-yard advance.

UCLA snapped back 80 yards in 13 plays with Ramsey completing four passes for 33 yards. Tailback Danny Andrews capped the drive with a 9-yard scorinbg run.

MICHIGAN STOPPED another UCLA drive at the Wolverines' 1 only to watch linebacker Blanchard Montgomery intercept a Hall pass and run 10 yards to score on the second play after the great defensive effort.

UCLA finished the season at 10-1-1 and Michigan 8-3.

In their Bluebonnet Bowl and regular season games, the Wolverines had held the Bruins to 33 and 41 yards rushing. But this time Andrews gained 48, Frank Sephous 46 and Kevin Nelson, the second-string tailback, also rushed for 48.

Michigan had averaged 30 points a game during the regular season, but the Bruins' defense shut them off with less than half that average. Carter, three times named to the All-America team, was limited to just five receptions for 59 yards.

Ramsey struck where the Wolverines had been weakest for the season, when they gave up an average of 263 yards per game via the air.

Ramsey hit all of his first seven throws and all of his last seven during the warm, sunny afternoon as the capacity crowd of 104,991 and a national TV audience watched.

Twice in past 15 years, UCLA had lost to Big Ten teams during the regular season but won Rose Bowl games. This year, they won both.

Oklahoma's Dupree sets record with 239 rushing yards

By WALTER BERRY
AP Sports Writer

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Alvin Moore's one-yard touchdown run and Todd Hons' 52-yard scoring strike to Ron Brown capped a 14-point Sun Devil fourth quarter as 11th-ranked Arizona State rallied to beat 12th-ranked Oklahoma 32-21 Saturday in the 12th annual Fiesta Bowl.

Arizona State's fifth Fiesta Bowl triumph in six appearances had to share equal billing with Oklahoma standout freshman tailback Marcus Dupree, who rushed for a record 239 yards before leaving the game with rib and thigh injuries.

Trailing 21-18, Arizona State recovered a fumble by Oklahoma quarterback Kelly Phelps at the Sun Devil 49 and marched 51 yards in eight plays with Moore's scoring plunge 28 seconds into the fourth quarter providing a 25-21 lead.

Hons, a junior quarterback who overcame a miserable first half, hooked up with Brown five minutes later as Arizona State celebrated the end of a two-year NCAA probation by capturing its fifth Fiesta Bowl in six appearances. It was the Sun Devel's first appearance on television since November 1980.

OKLAHOMA, WHICH won here in 1976, committed a Fiesta Bowl record four fumbles with Phelps having three of them.

Sun Devil sophomore placekicker Luis Zendejas tied a Fiesta Bowl standard with three field goals — including a record 54-yarder as time ran out in the first half. He missed a 52-yard attempt with 48 seconds remaining in the game.

Oklahoma led 13-11 at the half on two one-yard touchdown runs by fullback Stanley Wilson, offsetting Zendejas's field goals of 22 and 32 yards sandwiched around a safety as Jeffcoat tackled Phelps in the Sooner end zone.

A 15-yard touchdown run by freshman tailback Darryl Clack gave the Sun Devils an 18-13 lead early in the third quarter.

Oklahoma regained the lead shortly thereafter on Fred Sims's 19-yard touchdown run, coupled with a two-point conversion pass from Phelps to tight end Johnny Fontenette.

The victory ended Arizona State's season at 10-2, while Oklahoma wound up 8-4.

THE SUN DEVILS entered the game with the nation's top-ranked defense, but gave up 457 yards total offense to the Sooners's second-ranked rushing attack, with 417 of it coming on the ground. Arizona State had 429 yards in offense — 329 of it passing.

Hons, who hit on just eight of 22 attempts in the first half, finished with 17 completions in 35 tries.

Dupree, whose 17 carries included two runs of 56 yards and one of 48, broke the Fiesta Bowl rushing record of 202 yards set by Arizona State's Woody Green in 1972 against Missouri. Zendejas's 54-yard field goal bettered by four yards the previous record set by Oklahoma's Ewe Von Schamann in 1976.

Dupree hurt his ribs when he reportedly fell on the football early in the first quarter after his 56-yard run set up Wilson's first touchdown.

The 6-foot-3, 220-pound Dupree left the game at that stage and did not return until midway through the second quarter. He pulled a hamstring early in the fourth and did not play again.

Under sunny skies and 65-degree weather, a sellout crowd of 70,533 watched the game at Sun Devil Stadium — the second largest attendance in Fiesta Bowl history. It was the first-ever meeting between the Pacific-10 Conference and Big-Eight Conference schools.

Lions hold on to beat Bulldogs

Penn State may have ensured first title

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Todd Blackledge passed Penn State into position for two touchdowns and two field goals in the first half and the second-ranked Nittany Lions held on to defeat previously unbeaten and No. 1-rated Georgia 27-23 in the Sugar Bowl Saturday night, a triumph that may have ensured th ir elusive first-ever national college football championship.

The Lions, unbeaten three times in Coach Joe Paterno's 17 years at the helm but each time a bridesmaid instead of a bride in the final rankings, built a 20-3 lead on touchdown runs of 2 and 9 yards by Curt Warner and field goals of 38 and 45 yards by Nick Gancitano.

Then, they withstood a lightning Georgia strike that produced a touchdown with five seconds left in the first half, plus a 69-yard drive following the second-half kickoff.

However, Penn State safety Mark Robinson intercepted two Georgia passes in the third quarter and Blackledge took advantage of the second one, heaving a 47-yard touchdown bomb to wide receiver Gregg Garrity, who got behind freshman cornerback Tony Flack and made a sensational diving catch in the end zone with 13:16 left in the game.

That proved decisive when Georgia scored with 3:54 remaining on a 9-yard pass from John Lastinger to tight end Clarence Kay. However, Herschel Walker, Georgia's three-time All-American tailback, was stopped cold when he tried to run for a two-point conversion.

PENN STATE'S triumph left fourth-ranked Southern Methodist as the only unbeaten major college team. The Mustangs finished 11-0-1 by defeating Pitt 7-3 in the Cotton Bowl earlier in the day. Penn State and Georgia wound up with 11-1 records, while third-ranked Nebraska took an 11-1 record into Saturday night's Orange Bowl against Louisiana State.

The Associated Press will announce the 1982 national champion at 6:30 p.m. EST Sunday.

Blackledge, who completed his first five passes and was 9-of-16 for 160 yards in the first half, stunned the record Louisiana Superdome football crowd of 78,124 with an 80-yard scoring drive following the opening kickoff.

The Lions needed only seven plays and 2:51 on the clock, with Blackledge connecting on all four of his pass attempts for 74 yards, including consecutive strikes of 33 yards to tight end Mike McCloskey and 27 to Garrity as Paterno unveiled a formation with two flankers on the same side, plus with two tight ends.

That put the ball on the Georgia 9. Blackledge hit McCloskey for seven yards before Warner rambled untouched around left end. Warner finished with 117 yards on 18 carries.

GEORGIA, WINNER of 33 of 35 games in the last three seasons and seeking its second national crown in three years, promptly marched from its 20 to the Penn State 10, with Walker carrying six times for 40 yards. Kevin Butler's 27-yard field goal at 8:55 made it 7-3. Walker gained 103 yards on 28 carries.

Penn State dominated the rest of the half — Walker managed only 35 more yards in the first two periods — until a 10-yard touchdown pass from Lastinger to Herman Archie five seconds before the intermission got Georgia back in the game.

MIAMI (AP) — Turner Gill scored the go-ahead touchdown on a 1-yard sneak early in the fourth quarter as third-ranked Nebraska, stymied by mistakes, rallied to trim No. 13 Louisiana State 21-20 in the 49th Orange Bowl game Saturday night.

Nebraska, the nation's most prolific offensive machine, fell well short of its 41-point average after self-destructing. The Cornhuskers lost four fumbles, had two passes intercepted, failed on two fake kicks and also missed a field goal.

The Cornhuskers, finishing 12-1, drove only 47 yards for the winning touchdown after LSU punter Clay Parker, forced to change position under a rush, elected to run rather than kick on a fourth-and-19 and got only 12 yards.

The key play in the drive was Gill's short pass over the middle to Irving Fryar for 29 yards to the LSU 4. Gill got the touchdown with 11:14 to play, giving the Huskers a 21-17 lead.

Nebraska had trailed 17-7 before Gill hit Mike Rozier on a flare pass to the right for an 11-yard touchdown that put the Cornhuskers within range.

The Gill-Rozier pass capped an 80-yard drive that got a big boost at the start when LSU had the Cornhuskers in a third-and-10 situation at its 20 before LSU's Bill Elko was stuck with a 15-yard personal foul for shoving Rozier too far out of bounds.

Nebraska drove 51 yards on its first possession in the game to take a 7-0 lead on Mark Schellen's 5-yard run, but couldn't score again until Gill's pass to Rozier with 1:25 left in the third quarter.

LSU, a 10-point underdog which finished with an 8-3-1 record, got all of its points as a result of Nebraska turnovers.

Freshman Dalton Hilliard scored twice on 1-yard runs, and Juan Betanzos had field goals of 28 and 49 yards, the last with 5:05 to go after Lawrence Williams intercepted a Gill pass and returned it to the Nebraska 37.

The game drew a crowd of only 54,407, poorest for an Orange Bowl since 36,152 watched Rice and Tennessee in 1947. There were 14,306 no-shows.

Gill accounted for 45 yards in the Huskers' first scoring drive, hitting Fryar on a 22-yard pass and adding runs of 6, 14 and 3 yards.

Gill outdueled LSU's Alan Risher by completing 13 of 22 passes for 184 yards. Risher connected on 14 of 30 for 173. Each quarterback had two passes intercepted.

Rozier led all rushers with 118 yards on 26 carries, and the unheralded Nebraska defense limited LSU to only 38 yards rushing, the bulk of it by Hilliard, who had 29 on 18 carries, but showed the Huskers his quick feet on several pass receptions.

LSU drove to the Nebraska 19 on its second possession and Betanzos kicked a 35-yard field goal, but was roughed on the play. The Tigers took the points off the board and took an automatic first down at the 9, but lost the ball two plays later when Toby Williams intercepted Risher's pass.

Nebraska fell into its give-away program immediately when Rozier fumbled and Liffort Hobley recovered at the 11, setting up Hilliard's first score.

LSU's second drive covered only 45 yards after Fryar's fumble on a punt return was recovered by Gene Lang.

A bad pitch by Gill, recovered at the Cornhusker 40 by Lawrence Williams, set up Betanzos' 28-yard field goal that gave LSU a 17-7 lead with 6:40 left in the third quarter.

Gill had a 14-yard run besides his passes of 18 and 11 yards in the 80-yard drive that followed and cut the Bengal lead to only three points.

After evading the rusher, Parker appeared to have time to punt, but elected to run, opening the door to Nebraska's winning touchdown.

Clemente died 10 years ago Saturday

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Roberto Clemente was gone, suddenly and tragically.

It was 10 years ago Saturday that America's sports fans awoke to the news of the great baseball player's death in a plane crash in his native Puerto Rico.

But, a decade later, the Hall of Fame outfielder for the Pittsburgh Pirates is remembered for the style, grace and ability that made him one of baseball's greatest players for 18 years.

He also is remembered for his humanitarianism and his charitable ways, traits which would ultimately cost him his life.

Former teammate Willie Stargell, who recently retired after 21 seasons with the Pirates and is expected to join Clemente eventually in the Hall of Fame, says, "He truly was the Great One. It's still hard to believe he is gone."

Plans were announced in 1982 by the U.S. Postal Service for a stamp honoring Clemente.

In Philadelphia, a public school was named in his honor, the first time a school in the city has been named for a person of Hispanic descent.

Nets defeat Mavs, 111-105

Johnson comes off bench to score 21

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Mickey Johnson came off the bench to score 21 points, including nine in the fourth quarter, and Darryl Dawkins had 10 of his 18 points in the final six minutes to lead the New Jersey Nets to a 111-105 victory over the Dallas Mavericks in the National Basketball Association Saturday night.

It was the fifth consecutive victory for New Jersey, which has won 11 of its last 15 games to boost its record to 17-13. Dallas lost its fourth straight and eight of its last nine to fall to 12-17.

Dawkins scored 10 points in a 3:49 stretch in the fourth quarter before fouling out with 2:10 remaining. Dawkins made two free throws and hit a 15-foot jump shot to give the Nets a 107-98 lead with 2:20 remaining.

Johnson and Dawkins scored 23 of the Nets' 29 points during a stretch between the third and fourth quarters.

New Jersey took a 58-54 halftime lead behind Otis Birdsong's 10 points and eight points each by Buck Williams, Albert King and Clarence Walker.

Walker broke a 27-27 tie with a three-point field goal from 50 feet at the first-quarter buzzer.

Buck Williams added 17 points and had 12 rebounds for New Jersey.

Mark Aguirre scored 25 points to lead the Mavericks, while Jay Vincent added 23 and Rolando Blackman had 22.

King, New Jersey's starting forward, suffered sprained ligaments in his right knee in the final second of the first half and is expected to be sidelined for two to four weeks.

Knicks 98, Bullets 77

NEW YORK — Bernard King scored 31 points and the New York Knicks held Washington under 80 points for the second time this season to beat the Bullets 98-77.

King, who led the Knicks in scoring for the 14th consecutive game, had eight points in the first, second and fourth quarters and seven in the third period. He hit 11 of 18 shots from the field.

Washington, which lost to the Knicks 85-79 on Dec. 11, hit only 31.7 percent of its shots in the first half and 36.9 for the game. Jeff Ruland led the Bullets with 19 points, and Greg Ballard had 14.

Washington got the first basket of the game, but New York never trailed again after scoring the next 12 points, six of them by Bill Cartwright. The Knicks' center finished 10 of his 14 points in the first quarter which ended with New York leading 34-21.

Again, the Bullets scored two points to start the next period, but with Paul Westphal and King scoring four points apiece, the Knicks spurted to 1 51-30 lead with a 12-1 run.

The closest the Bullets got in the second half was 68-55 with 2:40 to go in the third period, but New York responded with nine points in a row to stifle the rally.

Denver 127, Pheonix 125

DENVER — Kiki Vandeweghe, who had a career-high 49 points, threw in a three-point basket, then converted a three-point play with 25 seconds left to put Denver in the lead, sparking the Nuggets to a 127-125 victory over the Phoenix Suns.

Vandeweghe hit the three-point shot with a minute left in the game, pulling Denver within two points, 125-123. After Phoenix failed to score, Vandeweghe scored on a driving layup, was fouled and made the ensuing free throw to put the Nuggets ahead by one.

Alex English's free throw provided the final margin as the Suns' Larry Nance missed on a field goal attempt that would have tied the score.

Issel added 23 points for the Nuggets and English 19. Nance led Phoenix with 26 points and Walter Davis added 23.

Denver Coach Doug Moe was ejected midway through the fourth quarter after receiving two technical fouls. The Nuggets' Dan Issel also received a technical.

Boston 127, Utah 112

SALT LAKE CITY — Robert Parish scored 23 points and Danny Ainge had 16 as the Boston Celtics rolled over the Utah Jazz 127-112 in a National Basketball Association game Saturday night.

The Celtics also got 14 points from forward Larry Bird, who keyed the Boston fast break, handing out 11 assists and collecting 15 rebounds. Guard Nate Archibald also scored 14 points.

Darrell Griffith had 27 points for Utah, which also got 17 points from guard Jerry Eaves and 16 from Rickey Green.

Boston had threatened to make a rout of it in the first quarter and led 39-31 at the end of the period.The Jazz, however, led by Griffith's eight points, came back to tie the score at 44-all midway through the second quarter.

A three-point play by Eaves gave Utah the lead moments later at 47-46, but the Celtics then reeled off nine straight points and took a 65-60 halftime lead.

Knicks' Williams needs surgery

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Knicks forward Sly Williams will undergo arthroscopic surgery Sunday on his sore left knee that has kept him sidelined for the last three games.

Team physician Dr. Norman Scott said that Williams, who is third on the team with an 11.5 scoring average for the Knicks, may be out only one or two weeks unless serious cartilage damage is discovered in the surgery.

Bullard's second period goal a winner

PITTSBURGH — Mike Bullard scored his sixth goal of the season late in the second period to give the Pittsburgh Penguins a 2-1 victory over the New York Islanders.

Bullard broke a 1-1 tie with 3:58 left in the period, taking a pass from Rick Kehoe and beating goalie Roland Melanson.

Pittsburgh took a 1-0 lead at 3:21 of the second period when Andre St. Laurent scored on a breakaway. Pittsburgh's Paul Baxter sent a pass toward the blue line, which Islander defenseman Thomas Jonsson failed to block. St. Laurent got control of the puck at center ice and skated in alone, flipping a backhander over Melanson's shoulder.

The Islanders tied the score at 10:28 when Clark Gillies took the puck away from Pittsburgh defenseman Randy Boyd behind the net and beat goalie Michel Dion with a rebound.

Rangers 7, Capitals 2

LANDOVER, Md. — Ron Duguay scored two goals and Robbie Ftorek had four assists to lead the New York Rangers to a 7-2 win over the Washington Capitals.

The victory raised the Rangers record to 19-16-3, bringing them to within three points of the third-place Capitals in the Patrick Division.

Duguay scored the game's first goal at 11:20 of the opening period to put the Rangers ahead for good.

Washington, 17-11-10, has won only once in four post-Christmas starts after going into the holidays with a 14-game unbeaten streak. The Capitals got goals from Dennis Maruk in the first period and Greg Theberge on a power-play in the second.

Washington twice pulled within a goal, but Duguay scored to make it 4-2 at 19:48 of the second period. Ranger Chris Kontos notched his first NHL goal at 4:50 of the third period on an assist by Ftorek.

THE NHL

Oilers 5, Jets 2

EDMONTON, Alberta — Defenseman Kevin Lowe scored twice as the Edmonton Oilers — despite star center Wayne Gretzky's failure to score a point for only the second time this season — cruised to a 5-3 victory over the Winnipeg Jets.

The Oilers increased their lead over second-place Winnipeg to 12 points in the Smythe Division by pouncing on the Jets with a pair of early goals by defensemen Paul Coffey and Lowe. Another Oiler defenseman, Randy Gregg, also scored for Edmonton, while Ken Linseman got the other Oiler tally.

Winnipeg got two goals by Thomas Steen and one from Brian Mullen.The Jets got goals from Steen at 10:04 and 15:47 of the final period to make the score closer.

Gretzky began the season with a 30-game point scoring streak, then was stopped by the Los Angeles Kings. He had at least one point in each of Edmonton's next seven games.

Coffey got his 15th of the season and Lowe his second only 23 seconds apart in the fourth minute of play. Coffey, who has nine goals and 21 points in the last nine games, blocked an attempted Winnipeg clearing pass and rifled a low slapshot inside the post.Lowe scored a power-play goal on an almost identical shot to Coffey's at 4:23.

Linseman made it 3-0 with seven seconds left in the period and Winnipeg's Norm Dupont in the penalty box. He put the rebound of Glenn Anderson's shot past Jets goalie Doug Soetaert.

The goal was Edmonton's 200th of the season and came in their 40th game. Last season the Oilers scored a league-record 417 goals.

Maple Leafs 7, Whalers 5

TORONTO — Two second-period goals by captain Rick Vaive helped wipe out Hartford's lead and start the Toronto Maple Leafs off to a 7-5 victory the Whalers.

Terry Martin, John Anderson, Frank Nigro, Greg Terrion and Walt Poddubny, into an empty net with 45 seconds left, also scored for the Leafs, who trailed 2-1 after 20 minutes but took control in the second period on Vaive's 16th and 17th goals of the season.

Michel Galarneau, Ron Francis, Mike McDougal, Doug Sulliman and Pierre Lacroix scored for the Whalers.

The Leafs' margin of victory would have been greater but for the goaltending of Hartford's Greg Millen, who was a one-man defense at times. Toronto, with Michel Larocque in goal, outshot Hartford 47-32, including a 20-7 edge in the second period.

The Tar Heels, who hit bottom with a loss to Missouri earlier this season, celebrated their return to form and gained revenge in the process with a 78-58 victory over the 12th-ranked Tigers in Thursday night's championship game of the Rainbow Classic.

North Carolina, the defending NCAA champion which dropped out of the Top 20 after losing three of its first six games, now is 8-3 with five straight victories heading into its Atlantic Coast Conference schedule. Missouri is 9-2.

"This shows us what we can do," said guard Michael Jordan, who scored 19 points in the championship game. "It shows us how much we've improved.

"Early in the year we were kinda slacking in practice, but since the loss to Missouri we've just worked hard and worked hard," he said.

The 64-60 defeat by Missouri on Nov. 30 marked the first time since 1919 that a North Carolina team had opened a season with two losses.

"It wasn't like we've had a bad season," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "I made a prediction that we could lose six games in December and still be a good team.

"When you play the kind of schedule we have, you have to expect a few losses," he said.

"Missouri is the best team we've beaten on the schedule, so it's an important win for us. Our goal is to get to the NCAA championships and every game we win along the way helps us there."

Then Missouri, which had 20 points from guard Jon Sundvold, hit nine of its first 10 shots in the second half.

A month ago, that might have broken the Tar Heels.

But North Carolina kept pace, hitting 14 of its first 18 from the field and finally pulling away from a 52-52 tie.

That impressed Smith, who marveled that the Tar Heels were "so confident even when Missouri came out in the second half and made all those shots."

First matchup between Sampson, Ewing; Dons quit; Changes top college scene

By DICK JOYCE
AP Sports Writer

In college basketball, 1982 will be remembered for the first matchup between Ralph Sampson and Pat Ewing, the first NCAA crown for North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, San Francisco dropping the sport and the widespread use of shot clocks and three-point field goals in conference play.

The fact that Sampson, a 7-foot-4, two-time College Player of the Year, returned for his senior season at Virginia was among the upsets. Such standouts as North Carolina's James Worthy, DePaul's Terry Cummings and Georgia's Dominique Wilkins — all would have been seniors for the 1982-83 season — left the college ranks for the big money of the National Basketball Association.

Sampson was certain of being the No. 1 pick in the NBA, but a coin flip would decide which team would land him — the champion Los Angeles Lakers or the lowly San Diego Clippers. The Virginia center decided to stay in school when he couldn't be assured of signing with the Lakers.

Entering his senior season, Sampson had led Virginia to an 83-18 record in three seasons, but the Cavaliers had yet to reach the goal which Sampson's presence would seem to dictate — the NCAA crown. The Cavaliers were upset in last season's NCAA Midwest semifinals by Alabama-Birmingham, finishing with a 30-4 record.

THE LOSS ruined a possible Final Four showdown between Sampson and Ewing, Georgetown's 7-foot freshman. That meeting wasn't to come until Dec. 11 at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md.

The Cavaliers, with all but one of their starters back from last season, began the the 1982-83 campaign as the top-ranked team and survived their toughest early season test by edging Georgetown, last season's NCAA runner-up, 68-63.

Despite the flu and a sore knee, Sampson posted better figures than Ewing by scoring 23 points, grabbing 16 rebounds and blocking seven shots. Ewing scored 16 points, had eight rebounds and five rebounds.

Although both teams employed man-to-man switching and zone defenses, there was enough slam-dunking and shot-blocking clashes between the two to satisfy the sel-out crowd and national TV audience.

Ewing's outstanding defensive ability and Sleepy Floyd's playmaking carried Georgetown to the Final Four at New Orleans in March. While the Hoyas knocked off Louisville 50-46 in the semfinals, North Carolina gained the final by eliminating Houston 68-63.

North Carolina was ranked No.1 in the final regular-season rankings, Georgetown No.6, Louisville No.20 and Houston unranked.

IN ADDITION to No.3 Virginia, second-ranked DePaul, No.4 Oregon State, No.5 Missouri, and Nos.7 through 10 — Minnesota, Idaho, Memphis State and Tulsa — were eliminated in the early rounds of the NCAA playoffs.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL '82

The Big East Conference, completing its third season, made the biggest noise in the NCAAs, landing three teams in the final eight — its regular-season champion, Villanova, Boston College and Georgetown.

But the 1981-82 season belonged to North Carolina and Smith, who was coaching the Tar Heels for the 21st season and had been to the Final Four six previous times without the ultimate triumph.

North Carolina trailed 62-61 with 32 seconds remaining and called a timeout. It was freshman Michael Jordan's 18-foot jump shot with 15 seconds left that pulled out the 63-62 victory over Georgetown before a crowd of 62,612 at the New Orleans Superdome, the largest attendance ever for a college game.

"I'm very grateful to my players," said Smith afterwards. "This is one of the toughest teams we have played all year. We feel fortunate to have won it on the last shot."

He missed both free throws with two seconds left, but it was all over for the Hoyas. Worthy also won the duel of dunks with Ewing, outscoring the freshman 28-23.

In addition to Jordan and Worthy, Sam Perkins, Jimmy Black and Matt Doherty led North Carolina to its 32-2 record.

WITH THE loss of Worthy and Black, North Carolina had a tough time getting untracked this season, losing its first two games before winning in triple overtime over Tulane.

Last season's NCAA playoffs also will be remembered for second-ranked DePaul's loss to Boston College in the second round of the Midwest regionals. DePaul had been the sentimental favorite because its coach, Ray Meyer, was in his 40th season and had never won the title.

Kentucky had to play without 7-1 forward Sam Bowie, who sat out the season with a hairline fracture in his left leg. Complications developed over the summer and Bowie won't play this season either.

Despite a 21-6 record last season, UCLA was ineligible for the NCAA playoffs and the Pacific-10 crown because of recruiting violations. The Bruins had made the playoffs every year before that since 1967.

Wichita State and St. Louis are ineligible this season.

San Francisco, which has a rich tradition including two straight NCAA titles in the days of Bill Russell and K.C. Jones, dropped basketball in July because of numerous recruiting violations in recent years. In addition, star guard Quintin Dailey was charged with sexually assaulting a female student. Dailey pleaded guilty to a charge of non-sexual aggravated assault and was placed on three years' probation.

IN AN effort to increase scoring and prevent delaying tactics this season, a dozen conferences are experimenting with three-point field goals and-or shot clocks. Thirty-and 45-second clocks are being used, and the three-point goals range from 19 feet to 22 feet.

A record high number of teams are competing in Division I this season. The field will be reduced to 52 for the NCAA playoffs, which culiminate in the championship game April 4 in Albuquerque, N.M.

Other men's champions in 1982 included the University of the District of Columbia in NCAA Division II, Wabash in Division III, and South Carolina-Spartanburg in the NAIA. Women's titlists were Lousiana Tech in NCAA Division I, Cal Poly-Pomona in Division II, Elizabethtown, Pa., State in Division III and Southwestern State of Oklahoma in the NAIA.

Metrodome replacement panel clamped into place

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The replacement panel for the torn and deflated roof of the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome was clamped into place Saturday afternoon, with reinflation set for late Saturday night, stadium officials said.

The timetable ensures that Monday night's National Football League game between the Minnesota Vikings and Dallas Cowboys will be played at the dome, stadium officials said Saturday.

The replacement panel arrived from Buffalo, N.Y. late Friday night. Saturday morning, the panel, which is 230 feet by 40 feet and weighs about 3,200 pounds, was lifted to the top edge of the dome for installation.

Stadium officials originally had thought the replacement panel would not be completed until Saturday and would arrive late Saturday night or early Sunday morning. But a spokeswoman for for Birdair Structures in Buffalo, the panel's manufacturer, said work on the new panel was completed Friday using workers called in on special duty.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Friday the game would be moved to the Superdome in New Orleans if the Metrodome roof was not reinflated in time for the 8 p.m. game.

The roof, which is made of fiberglass and coated with Teflon, was punctured by a crane used to help clear snow about 4 a.m. Thursday. Nearly 17 inches of snow fell in the Twin Cities Monday night and early Tuesday.

Officials said the tear occurred when a last chunk of snow was being removed. The pressure on the fabric then was gone, the roof inflated about six feet, striking a corner of the crane bucket.

None of the 20 men on the roof when it deflated was injured.

Thursday is the second time the Metrodome roof has deflated. When the roof went down on Nov. 19, 1981, a replacement panel arrived at 3 a.m. Nov. 23. The panel was in place by 5 p.m. that day and the dome was reinflated by 6:15 p.m.

Majority of Broncos favor NFLPA's Garvey's removal

DENVER (AP) — A majority of the Denver Broncos have signed a petition calling for the ouster of Ed Garvey as the executive director of the National Football League Players Association.

The petition, drawn up on Bronco stationery and passed around the Denver locker room, asked for Garvey's removal. It will be submitted by Bronco player representative Aaron Kyle at the NFLPA's winter meetings.

GARMISCH-PARTENKIR- CHEN, West Germany (AP) — Austrian ski-flying world record holder Armin Kogler edged Norwegian Steinar Braaten by one-tenth of a point to win the New Year's Day ski jumping competition at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, the second event of the traditional Four Hill Tournament.

Kogler received 242.3 points for jumps of 101.5 and 97.5 meters to hold on to victory although Braaten bettered the hill record by half a meter with his second jump of 103.5 meters.

Third was rising East German star Jens Weissflog with 241.5 points and jumps of 99.5 and 102.5 meters.

Canadian Horst Bulau, winner of the first event at Oberstdorf on Thursday, held on to the overall leadership after two contests with a total of 501.4 points.

Bulau placed sixth at the Garmisch Olympic Hill Saturday with jumps of 98 and 101.5 meters and 236.5 points.

The tournament moves on to Austria with events scheduled at Innsbruck on Jan. 4 and Bischofshofen on Jan. 6.

Oosterhuis nails six birdies, gets lucky bounce in Spalding victory

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Peter Oosterhuis shot a 4-under-par 68 in a round featuring six birdies and one lucky bounce to win the $150,000 Spalding Invitational golf tournament Saturday.

The tall, 34-year-old British golfer finished with a 72-hole total of 277 and beat Jay Haas, who won the non-tour event a year ago, by one stroke. Haas also posted a 68 on the final round, played in sunny and calm weather on the Pebble Beach course.

Danny Edwards, who held the lead before taking a double-bogey 6 at the 13th hole, settled for a 70 and finished third at 279, one stroke ahead of Rex Caldwell and hometown favorite Bobby Clampett.

The victory was worth $30,000 to Oosterhuis, who claimed his first U.S. tournament title. The winner of the 1981 Canadian Open won $95,000 on the PGA tour in 1982 and finished second in the British Open.

"This is a good warmup event for the tour, but with people like Jay Haas, Bobby Clampett, Craig Stadler and Johnny Miller playing, it doesn't seem very much like a warmup," Oosterhuis said.

Stadler, who will be defending his Tucson Open title when the 1983 tour opens Thursday, had final rounds of 77 and 73 to finish far back, at 289, in the Spalding. Miller closed with a 68 Saturday and finished eighth at 282, just behind Andy North and John Mahaffey.

Oosterhuis was in a four-way tie — with Clampett, Edwards and Mark Pfeil — for the lead when the round began. He did not take sole possession of the lead until the 14th, where he got a birdie with a six-foot putt a few minutes after Haas bogeyed the par-5 hole.

At the 16th, Oosterhuis saved a par-4, getting down in two shots after his approach to the green went long. The ball stopped about six feet behind the green but would have been further from the cup if it had not struck a spectator's back.

"Except for that shot, I played very well on the final holes," said Oosterhuis.

by Bob Howle
Rent an airless sprayer to spray-paint your home's exterior. The drudgery of painting will become more like waving a magic wand. After properly preparing the home to accept paint, select the proper spray tip for the job. The spray tip determines the spray pattern, width and thickness of coverage. The larger the tip orifice, the thicker the coverage. A large tip angle results in a wider spray pattern. Be sure to spray at a relatively slow gun speed to assure thicker coverage. The distance that the gun is held from the surface will also determine pattern width and coverage thickness. A spray gun beats a brush every time.
At BOB's RENTAL CENTERS, INC., 2700 Rankin Hwy., 685-1271 & 2909 N. Big Spring, 684-8294, we offer the tools for rent that help you get the job done more efficiently and more professionally. From beginning to end in hockey, it was year of Gretzky

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

From beginning to end in hockey, it was the year of Wayne Gretzky.

While the New York Islanders became the first United States-based team to win three consecutive National Hockey League championships, 1982 belonged to the 21-year-old center of the Edmonton Oilers.

He shattered eight scoring records during the 1981-82 season, then continued his phenomenal points pace at the start of the 1982-83 season.

As Gretzky and the Islanders sought their places among hockey's all-time greats, the sport again was plagued by violence on the ice, and officials tried to crack down on hooliganism.

Gretzky scored 92 goals, 16 more than the previous record; had 120 assists, 11 more than his own mark, for 212 points, a whopping 48 more than he collected in 1980-81. He didn't stop there, however, and by year's end he held or shared 27 NHL scoring records.

Perhaps the most impressive feat Gretzky accomplished in '82 was breaking Guy Lafleur's mark of scoring at least one point in 28 consecutive games. As 1982 neared an end, Gretzky was on virtually the same pace as the previous season — which would mean another 200-point season.

Gretzky earned the Hart Memorial Trophy as the league's most valuable player for the third straight year. But not even "The Great Gretzky" could keep the Oilers from losing in the opening round of the playoffs to the Los Angeles Kings.

THAT WAS one of several playoff shockers. The only division winner to escape the opening round was the Islanders, and they had to score twice in the final 5½ minutes and then in overtime of the decisive fifth game against Pittsburgh to advance. Minnesota fell to Chicago in four games and the Quebec Nordiques eliminated their archrivals, the once-mighty Montreal Canadiens, in overtime of the fifth game.

By the time the second playoff round began, there were no teams with winning records left in the Campbell Conference. The Vancouver Canucks, who had never won a playoff round in their 11 years, made it all the way to the finals behind a staunch defense and the sparkling goaltending of Richard Brodeur.

The Islanders, meanwhile, struggled past their New York rivals, the Rangers, in a six-game quarterfinal, then hit stride. During the regular season, the champions had put together a 15-game winning streak, snapping a 50-year-old record, and they found that form again against Quebec in the Wales Conference final. The Isles swept that series, then did the same to the Canucks for the Cup.

To underscore the power of their entire organization, the Islanders' minor league affiliates at Indianapolis (of the Central Hockey League) and Toledo (of the International Hockey League) also won titles.

NHL, 1982

SEVERAL CASES in which players slugged referees brought stiffer-than-usual punishment. Philadelphia's Paul Holmgren and Boston's Terry O'Reilly both hit referee Andy Van Hellemond last season, resulting in six-and 10-game suspensions, respectively. During the summer, a special NHL committee passed a rule calling for a 20-game suspension for striking an official.

But violence surfaced in another manner, as five players used their sticks to strike other players during the preseason or early in the regular season. NHL executive vice president Brian O'Neill handed out suspensions of as much as eight games then.

The major news of the offseason was a new collective bargaining contract between the NHL and the Players Association, thus averting a strike.

And the Colorado Rockies were bought by shipping magnate John McMullen, who also owns baseball's Houston Astros. McMullen then moved the team to the 19,500-seat Brendan Byrne Arena in East Rutherford, N.J., placing a third team in the New York City area. It cost McMullen approximately $28 million to acquire the team, move it to New Jersey and satisfy the indemnification claims of the Islanders, Rangers and Philadelphia Flyers.

Early in the 1982-83 season, the Kings made news when center Victor Nechaev played for them and scored a goal — becoming the first Soviet Union player in the NHL.

Ayala arrested in New Jersey

WEST PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — Tony Ayala, the No.1 contender for the World Boxing Association junior middleweight title, was arrested Saturday morning on charges of aggravated sexual assault, burglary and aggravated assault, police in this Passaic County community said.

Ayala, 19, was arrested shortly after 6 a.m. and arraigned later in the day before local Magistrate Joseph Weiner, said Police Detective Joseph Lambert.

Forty Niners, Bucs, Pats, Bills can gain playoffs if they win final game of season

By The Associated Press

If the National Football League's playoff picture sometimes seems like a mad scientist's dream, the prescription is simple for San Francisco, Tampa Bay, New England and Buffalo: win and they're in, lose and they're out.

This is the strike-imposed makeup weekend, 13 games Sunday and one Monday night, with two of the eight playoff berths in each conference still to be filled.

In the National Conference, Washington, Dallas, St. Louis, Green Bay, Atlanta and Minnesota are in. Only the 1-7 Los Angeles Rams are eliminated and six teams with 3-5 records are still alive.

But the easiest path to the playoffs belongs to Tampa Bay, 4-4, and the 3-5 49ers, the defending Super Bowl champions thought dead just a week ago.

The Buccaneers, who beat the Lions last week on Bill Capece's last-minute field goal, are home to the 3-5 Chicago Bears and have only to win or tie to qualify. If the Bears win, several other things would still have to happen for Chicago to make it.

The 49ers surged back into contention with a 26-13 victory over Kansas City keyed by Ronnie Lott's 83-yard interception return. They play the Rams at Candlestick Park and will almost surely make it to the playoffs with a win over the Rams. Only a tie between the Philadelphia Eagles and the New York Giants, both of them 3-5, could knock them out.

The Cleveland Browns, 4-5, are just about in, even if they lose to 5-3 Pittsburgh on Sunday. The only thing that could knock them out is if they lose and New England and Buffalo, both 4-4, tie their game at Foxboro, Mass.

Otherwise, the winner of the Bills-Patriots game is in, the loser is out.

The Giants, Eagles, Saints, Lions and Bears are all still alive in the NFC. But none of them can decide their own fate, depending instead on a combination of events in other games.

Eastland's Hess named Texas' Outstanding Football Player

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Jay Hess, who established an all-time Texas high school record for passing while leading Eastland to the state 2A championship, has been named the winner of the Texas High School Outstanding Football Player Award.

Hess, 18, completed 181 passes for 3,154 yards during his three-year high school career, eclipsing by 19 yards the previous record set by Todd Dodge of Port Arthur Jefferson in 1980.

The award is given annually by the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce. Previous winnners include two Heismann Trophy Winners — Earl Campbell of Tyler John Tyler in 1973 and Billy Sims of Hooks in 1974.

Lakers won NBA title, Sixers made big move

Malone could be player to help bring crown to Philadelphia

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

While the Los Angeles Lakers earned the championship rings in 1982, the Philadelphia 76ers made the big move that could affect the National Basketball Association for years.

The 76ers lost to the Lakers in the championship series for the second time in three years, extending a string of playoff frustrations through six seasons.

But in signing Moses Malone, the NBA's Most Valuable Player, in September to a six-year contract worth $13.2 million, the 76ers sought to guarantee that it wouldn't happen again.

It was a deal that not only could change the competition on the court for years, but also affect the league's already skaky finances. Many owners feared that the huge contract would accelerate the growth of salaries and lead more players into the free-agent market.

APPROXIMATLEY TWO-THIRDS of the NBA's 23 teams lost money in the 1981-82 regular season, despite a 5.7 percent increase in attendance and new television contracts with CBS and two national cable networks.

Before the end of 1982, the Denver Nuggets and Houston Rockets were under new ownership, and ownewrs Donald K. Sterling of the San Diego Clippers and Ted Stepien of the Cleveland Cavaliers announced they were trying to escape the torrent of red ink.

Sterling said after the season that he wanted to move to Los Angeles, an announcement that spawned a series of suits by the league, Sterling, the city of San Diego, the Lakers, Lakers owner Jerry Buss and the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission. The federal courts had the last word, stopping Sterling and the Coliseum Commission from going ahead with their suit.

Stepien went through five coaches in the 1981-82 season — Bill Musselman, Don Delaney, Bob Kloppenburg, Chuck Daly and Musselman again. On Oct. 21, just before the start of this season, Tom Nissalke replaced Musselman.

The Cavs finished 15-67 in 1982, losing their last 19 games and the first five of this season for a record 24-game losing streak. Stepien, who owns 82 percent of the team he bought in June 1980, put the team up for sale after claiming losses of $7 million the past two seasons.

AT THE end of the year, negotiations were in progress on a new basic contract with the players, as the league sought givebacks and budget caps. The players have been just as adamant about at least holding the line on benefits and salaries, which average well over $200,000 per player.

On the court, the Lakers hit their stride in the playoffs, winning their first nine postseason games, an NBA record. They also became the first team to post consecutive four-game series sweeps when they beat the Phoenix Suns and San Antonio Spurs 4-0 to capture the Western Conference tiue.

Then the Lakers had to wait 12 days while Boston and Philadelphia battled for the Eastern Conference championship for the third year in a row.

It was a series that will be remembered not for its close games — only one of the seven contests was decided by fewer than eight points — but for the emotional see-saw the two teams rode.

The Celtics humiliated the 76ers 121-81 in Game 1, then Philadelphia displayed the resiliency it would need later by capturing the next three games, taking Game 4 119-94.

HISTORY DID not repeat itself, however. In front of a hostile crowd at Boston Garden, the 76ers beat the Celtics 120-106 in Game 7.

But just when Boston appeared to be dead, it easily won the next two games, and the Philadelphia players and coaches heard the label of "choke" even before Game 7, just as they had the previous year when they blew a 3-1 playoff lead to the Celtics.

Philadelphia seemed to carry the momentum of the Boston series into the final round against the Lakers, leading 83-68 in the third quarter of Game 1. Los Angeles then outscored the 76ers 37-7, reversing the 15-point deficit with a devastating display of fast-break speed and trapping defense.

The 76ers again rebounded by winning Game 2, but they couldn't handle the Lakers at Los Angeles the way they beat the Celtics in Boston. The Lakers went ahead 3-1 with a two-game sweep at home, faltered 135-102 at Philadelphia in Game 5 as center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar failed to score in double figures for the first time in 420 games and captured the title by winning Game 6 114-104, as Earvin "Magic" Johnson displayed his versatility, with 13 points, 13 rebounds and 13 assists.

Before the 1982-83 season, several trades put yeteran players in new uniforms. In addition to the Malone deal — in which the 76ers gave up forward Caldwell Jones and draft choices in a trade after Houston matched the 76ers' free-agent offer to the center — perennial All-Star Artis Gilmore was acquired by San Antonio from Chicago, and high scorer David Thompson went from Denver to Seattle. Thompson helped the SuperSonics win their first 12 games of the season.

DAVE COWENS and Bill Walton, two stars from the 1970s who led Boston and Portland to championships, attempted comebacks after two-year layoffs, Cowens with the Milwaukee Bucks and Walton with the Clippers.

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

Rabbits, alligators, baboons, ducks, a Walrus and an eagle — double eagle, that is — all played a part in the season, and paved the way for an expanded men's pro golf circuit in 1983.

On the Ladies Professional Golf Association schedule, veteran Joann Carner won five tournaments and set a money-winning record.

"Rabbit" was the term applied to the 100 or so players who were in the qualifying ranks, who attempted to make their way into the tournament fields in the Monday morning qualifying rounds generally considered the toughest trial in the game.

The last qualifying round was held Oct. 25. That's the day the rabbit vanished.

IN 1983, the Tour will go to an all-exempt format, with the top 125 money-winners from the 1982 tour, plus some men with lifetime exemptions and another 50 from the qualifying school eligible for all Tour events. There is no more qualifying.

Some of those who failed to make the list of the top 125 money-winner will compete in a new Tournament Players Series, a set of 10 events. The Tour also will conduct some 20 seniors events next year, almost double the number last season.

The highlight of the season uas provided by Tom Watson, who produced what was the most dramatic single shot in major-tournament hitory.

That was in the U.S. Open, plyed on the picturesque Pebble Beach Golf Links. It was a tournament that had everything.

There was the setting, perhaps the most spectacularly beautiful course in the country. There was the event, the American national championship. There were the protagonists, the mighty Jack Nicklaus, perhaps the greatest player the world has known, and Watson, the dominant player in the game today seeking the title he said he must have to secure his place among the game's greats.

Nicklaus, playing well in front of Watson in the final round, shot a 69 and finished the tournament with a 284 total. When he holed out, he was tied for the lead with Watson, still on the course.

On the 17th, a par-3 which juts into the bay, Watson hit his tee shot into a terrible position — over the green, in deep rough, the ball above the putting surface which sloped away from him, the pin tucked in close.

It was a near-impossible shot.

It seemed a certain bogey.

"When I saw where he hit it, I thought, 'He'll have to birdie 18 to catch me,'" Nicklaus said.

But Watson chipped the ball into the hole for a birdie that sent him careening around the green, arms raised in jubilation. The shot turned a probable bogey into an unlikely birdie and made Watson the U.S. Open champion.

HIS VICTORY in the British Open, which made him only the fifth man in the game's history to win both major national titles in the same year, came by an entirely different route. He won this one, at ancient Troon, as a spectator, standing in the scoring tent with his ball in his pocket, his day's work done.

He'd finished that final round with a solid 70, but, with a 284 total, trailed struggling Nick Price by two shots.Price, still on the course and fighting his nerves as much as the chill winds, needed only to play the last six holes 1 over par to win it.

He couldn't do it. He played them 3 over, handing the title to Watson, an unexpected gift that provided Tom with his fourth British Open crown.

Watson won two other tournaments during the season (Los Angeles Open and Heritage Clasic) and a record-matching fifth Player of the Year designtion.

Carner won $310,399, an LPGA record for earnings in a single calendar year, while capturing five tournaments including the World Championship of Women's Golf. Beth Daniel also won five events, finishing fifth on the money list.

The other major women's tournaments were won by Jan Stephenson (LPGA Championship), Janet Anderson (U.S. Women's Open) and Sandra Haynie (Peter Jackson Classic).

BUT BACK to the PGA zoo.

The baboons romped across the fairways during the world's first $1 million tournament, a five-man shoot-out set up to publicize a posh resort-hotel-casino operation on the high veld in southern Africa, some 80 miles out in the bush from Johannesburg. Johnny Miller won the $500,000 first prize in a dramatic sudden-death playoff Jan. 3 against Seve Balesteros of Spain. A second edition was held in December, with Ray Floyd winning the $300,000 first prize againsx an expanded, 10-man field.

The Walrus was Craig Stadler, the PGA Tour's leading money winner. The pudgy golfer, with a walrus-like moustache, topped his year by winning the Masters at Augusta, Ga., the World Series of Golf and the Tucson and Kemper opens. Ray Floyd won the PGA.

The alligator made the national television cameras, glaring balefully while Tour Commissioner Deane Beman, architect Pete Dey and Jerry Pate splashed around in the lake by the 18th green at the new Players Club, site of the Tournament Players championship. Pate, who gained a measurre of attention by hs leap into a lake at Memphis the year before, won this one with a 280 title and celebrated by shoving Beman and Dey into the lake before he, too, took a dive.

The double eagle occurred at tne Westechester Classic, with front-running Bob Gider holing out a 3-wood second shot on the par-5 18th at the Westchester Country Club. He won with a 261.

The ducks had their days in the wettest Tour on record. Seventeen of the 41 events were interrupted by rain and two were reduced to 54 holes.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Air Force quarterback Marty Louthan figures the Falcons' 36-28 victory over Vanderbilt in the Hall of Fame Bowl was "unbelieveable," considering the circumstances.

In the New Year's Eve game, Air Force found 19 points in the fourth quarter to beat the favored Commodores. That was the happy culmination of a very difficult period for the Air Force team.

"This whole thing has been unbelievable," said Louthan. "We had trouble getting here (from snow-bound Colorado), and we've been off for a month and only had four practices.

"I don't know how much they (the Commodores) practiced, but they were picked to beat us, and they led until the fourth quarter. It's just been that kind of year."

Air Force Coach Ken Hatfield concured with his quarterback about the kind of year it has been.

"Every game we play seems to be like this," he noted. "It just comes down to somebody winning it for us late."

Vorwerk hooks record smallmouth

It's doubtfull if the smallmouth bass will take over as Texas' number one gamefish, while the largemouth is still much more plentiful and is found in almost all Texas lakes, but the scrappy gamester introduced in several Texas waterways a few years back is now making headlines.

David Vorwerk of Austin had a catfish on his mind while drifting a live crawfish in the 10-foot water at Canyon Reservoir earlier this month, but a smallmouth bass changed his viewpoint quite abruptly.

The six-pound, two-ounce smallmouth he landed on Dec. 2 has finally been certified by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department as a new state record.

"My friends and I had caught a few smallmouth on crawfish before," Vowerk said, "but we usually caught more channel cat than anything else."

VORWERL'S FISH replaced a smallmouth caught by another Austinite, Grant Hartman, in Austin's Town Lake in 1980, in the record book. Hartman's fish weighed five-pounds, 12 ounces.

Biologist consider the smallmouth record overdue since anglers at the deep, clearwater lake, west of New Braunfels, have been catching considerable numbers of four-pound-plus smallmouths during the past two years. The department has stocked smallmouths in the reservoir periodically since 1974, but in recent years it has been unecessary because of the fish's good reproductive sucess.

The new record fish was caught with an unweighted live crawfish on a single hook with eight-pound test line. It was 22 inches long.

I THINK the smallmouth bass is really going to make a hit in Texas. We have so many older lakes which suit the smallmouth's fancy, that I think the Parks and Wildlife Department will put more emphasis on stocking the little fish.

Besides Canyon Lake, you can also catch good numbers of smallmouth at Amistad, Stillhouse, Mackenzie, Whitney, Possum Kingdom, Town Lake and Lake Meredith.

As many times as I've fished lovely Amistad, I've never caught a smallmouth and have never been with anyone who has. But on my last trip to Del Rio I heard a secret for catching smallmouths.

YOU'RE NOT going to be able to catch them all over the lake. As a matter of fact you're only going to catch smallmouths out of a fraction of the hugh reservoir, the Rough Canyon area. That's where the majority of these fish were initially stocked and that's where they stayed. Sooner or later the fish will spread throughout the border impoundment but currently your best bet is the Rough Canyon region.

The smallmouth can be a good winter time fish. They perfer cooler water temperatures more than the native largemouth bass and they feed more frequently in the coller months. It's also better to fish a little deeper for this speciman of bass than for the largemouth.

Look for Amistad to produce some quality smallmouth fish and for the smallmouth catches to spread to other regions of this giant reservoir within the next few years.

FLOUNDER RUN — The annual migration of the southern flounder through passes along the Texas Golf Coast is underway.

Biologist Joe martin of the TP&WD in Rockport said anglers are catching flounders from boats and shoreline.

With the onset of cool weather each year flounders migrate to spawings areas in the Gulf. Martin said the winter movement normally begins when the temperature falls to around 70 degrees. The flounders return in the spring.

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Oral Roberts University, scheduled for a college basketball game Thursday against Kansas, now has an interim coach and only two players.

School officials have suggested revoking scholarships of the remaining players, who threaten to sit out the rest of the season because coach Ken Hayes was fired.

Starting center Chris Cantrell said the Titans met Friday and voted 9-2 to boycott the rest of the season. They were protesting the firing of Hayes, who led the team to the National Invitation Tournament last season.

Athletic Director Bob Brooks, however, said five team members have told him they would play this season. Brooks said he didn't think Friday's meeting indicated a boycott.

"I think that's an assumption since just two said they did want to play," he said. "I was not informed of a team vote. I just know that two had told me they wanted to play and the other nine had said nothing."

"We have a team and we will play Kansas. I don't know about the others, we'll just have to wait till the practice and see who shows up."

Lewis leaves hospital

"The sagebrush is beginning to look like orchids," said Lewis, 56, as he got out of a wheelchair and walked 30 feet to his waiting car, which took him to his condominium across town.

Lewis, who hasn't smoked since going into the hospital, said he would give up the two to three packs of cigarettes he has smoked each day for years.

"Orange juice used to taste like hush puppies. Now it tastes like orange juice," he said.

Lewis said he felt "terrific," and, tapping his chest, he added, "Once I am mended I will be back to normal."

"I never thought I would be so happy," Lewis said. "I plan to do everything I am told to do."

Hospital officials said they had wanted to keep Lewis until Monday, but the comedian insisted on going home New Year's Day.

Asked if he planned to do his annual Muscular Dystrophy Labor Day Telethon, Lewis said, "I would do it in this chair if I had to."

Lewis left the hospital accompanied by his fiance, Sandee Pitnick, 31. They plan to be married some time early this year, according to Lewis' long-time manager, Joe Stabile.

ENTERTAINMENT

Bringing along her puppet pal Lamb Chop, Shari Lewis will be conducting the Texas Little Symphony at 8 p.m. Thursday in Theatre Midland, 2001 W. Wadley Ave. Some of the music will be classical. For an added attraction she will be dancing with two life-size puppets. The performance is being brought to Midland by Renwood Inc., a non-profit organization which promotes the arts. Part of the proceeds will go to the Big Spring Symphony Guild. Tickets may be purchased by calling Renwood Inc., 697-7863, or the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce, 263-7641.

Celebrities disclose resolutions

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Christine Jorgensen, whose sex change operation was among the world's first, says her New Year's resolution is to write 30 pages every day on her second book, "about my life. The good, the bad, the fun, the not-so-fun, everything."

Her resolution was one of several made by celebrities in California.

Miss America, 25-year-old Debra Maffatt of Anaheim, said, "I'm giving up chocolate. And I'm going to start exercising at least 30 minutes a day."

"I'm going to get organized," Miss Maffatt said. "And I'm going to quit watching the news, I only watch the news, because I don't think TV's very good right now."

Reggie Jackson of baseball's California Angels, says he wants "peace on Earth and a pennant for the Angels."

John De Lorean, the maverick auto executive charged with putting together a $24 million cocaine deal to save his sports car business from bankruptcy, says he wants to be acquitted, according to his lawyer, Joseph Ball.

OSAGE BEACH, Mo. (AP) — George Richey, husband of country singer Tammy Wynette, suffered a heart attack at a New Year's Eve performance by his wife and was in stable condition today.

A spokeswoman at Lake of the Ozarks General Hospital in Osage Beach said Richey, 47, was admitted about 1 a.m., and taken to intensive care. Ms. Wynette and other members of the family were at the hospital today, officials said.

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — A reviewing stand full of blue suits and military uniforms applauds and cheers the unveiling of a new fighter aircraft. They bow their heads when a minister blesses the deadly machine. Fiction?

"This is all true!" says director William Friedkin ("The Exorcist") about his depiction of the military-industrial complex in "The Deal of the Century," a new film starring Chevy Chase as a used car dealer who becomes a used weapons salesman.

"It's a bizarre world; there is no way to exaggerate it," Friedkin says. "We took these remarks from actual opening ceremonies; even the minister!"

"Deal" is Friedkin's first comedy since "The Night They Raided Minsky's," although the director quipped: "That is if you don't count 'The Exorcist,' which I always thought was pretty funny."

Filming of "Deal," about a sophisticated new aircraft that doesn't work, is taking place at Northrup Corp.'s huge Chet Holifield Federal Building, a facility built in the early 1970s to house nearly 8,000 workers on the B-1 bomber. For political reasons, the B-1 didn't fly either.

Goldie Hawn and Burt Reynolds are screenwriting collaborators, live-in lovers, and ultimately, best friends in Norman Jewison's sensitive, lighthearted comedy, "Best Friends."

Written by Barry Levinson ("Diner") and wife, Valerie Curtin, "Best Friends" turns a reflective eye toward a subject that has more impact than trends and fads (in and out of movies) but is, nevertheless, affected by both — marriage.

On the other hand, Reynolds as Richard Babson wants to get married and can't face the prospect of "dating happily ever after."

So, they solve their dilemma with a quick elopement at a chapel that caters to Spanish-speaking clientele and in one of the movie's funniest scenes, repeat phonetically their vows, saying, "I dee endo," for "I thee endow." Then it is off to meet the respective parents and share the news.

As might be expected, the parents are stereotypical caricatures. There are Paula's northeast coast parents — her father's libidinous impulses curiously released by a stroke and her long-suffering but resigned mother, who insists on tucking Richard into bed and feeding him grits. And then there are Richard's southern parents — (Keenan Wynn as dad is obviously a transplanted southerner) with Audra Lindley as the family photographic chronicler, who denies no occasion, however small, the glare of flash bulbs.

But don't let the stereotypes put you off this delightful look at a venerable institution. There is enough truth in each view of marriage to show how different each one is, but how common is the tie that binds.

"Best Friends" is a treasure trove of casting and even with the emphasis on the distaff side, the men hold their own. Keenan Wynn is especially delightful when he has a "birds and bees" talk with his son, and sums up the whole meaning of a successful marriage with a twinkle of his eye.

Special, too, is Barnard Hughes as Mr. McCullen. He is what is often referred to as a "character" and though Hughes blends the old man's eccentricity with humanity, the underlying problem of his character is glossed over — no doubt too controversial a subject for treatment in this movie.

Notable, too, is Ron Silver as a relentless, self-serving movie producer, who drives Paula and Richard to distraction and then forces them back together again with his underhanded tactics.

As for the respective mothers, Jessica Tandy and Audra Lindley add depth to their families and are allowed to explore the range of motherly emotions which often include the soft and tough.

But the stars of "Best Friends" are Goldie Hawn and Burt Reynolds. Miss Hawn never has a false moment, whether she is fighting for the relationship or struggling to understand her family and his. And she is totally believable as the Eighties woman — wanting to preserve her identity in every way, leary of just accepting conventions and customs, but fearful of turning her back completely on tradition.

Reynolds, who looked terrific, was almost perfection. Having shown in "Starting Over" that he can put subtlety behind his comic characterizations, he only reinforces that here, but still has a moment when he appears to be stifling a laugh. It is during their fight to end all fights — a scene that is obviously meant to be his dramatically, but is given over to Miss Hawn cinematically as we see her react to his anger.

Rated PG, "Best Friends" is paced for ever-so-brief reflection, pausing long enough for the camera to linger on hands, torsos, and feet in close-up. But it is this loving attention to detail by Jewison that suggests to us it's those little things also in marriage that mean so much, especially when viewed from the vantage point of a lifetime of marital commitment.

"Best Friends" doesn't answer all the questions about itself, like how everyone has avoided meeting each other during the five year relationship of Paula and Richard and how love in marriage changes. But it is a very loving, sometimes poignant, often hilarious comedy that you won't want to miss.

El Greco presentation slated

A lecture and slide presentation on "El Greco: The Man, The Myths, The Magic," at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., will be highlighted by a special lecturer.

The presentation will start at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. This program, free to the public, has been planned to complement El Greco in Toledo — An International Exhibition on display at the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts.

Georgia Chamley-Brevik will discuss through an array of slides the historical context within which El Greco worked. She will assault many of the myths surrounding him to provide the public an opportunity to better appreciate his work and his place in the history of world art.

Ms. Chamley-Brevik is an instructor, slide librarian and director of the Resource Center at Texas Tech in Lubbock. With a master's degree from the University of Washington at Seattle, she has taught many college level courses, including medieval art (her specialty), modern art and a survey of art history.

In addition, she presented the Fall 1982 lecture series sponsored by the Women's Council of the West Texas Museum Association in Lubbock. During this 10-week series she concentrated on El Greco's work and the Dutch masters.

It was not until recently that El Greco's unique and vivacious style had been reconsidered and he has been acclaimed as one of the world's great masters. He had been admired by Cezanne, Manet and Kandinsky and compared with Jackson Pollack.

Once an enigma, El Greco's style has been evaluated in contemporary terms as an expression of great religious, political and philosophical importance. The slide program will explore the work of El Greco.

The museum will open at 7 p.m. Thursday to give the public a chance to view Open House and Focus: American Western Art, which will close Friday.

Memories haunt Martin

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Mary Martin, who flew to stardom as a little boy who never wanted to grow up, is still haunted by memories of the car accident that killed her manager and left the entertainer and two others seriously injured.

"The worst time comes about 3:30 in the morning," Miss Martin says. "That's when I wake up and all the memories come back again. So I read and do needlepoint until I can go back to sleep again."

The singing star of "South Pacific" and "Peter Pan" was in an auto accident in San Franciso Sept. 5. Her longtime manager, Ben Washer, was killed, actress Janet Gaynor almost lost her life and husband Paul Gregory was severely injured. Miss Martin suffered double pelvis fractures, broken ribs and a punctured lung and kidney.

Three months after the accident, the 69-year-old Miss Martin returned to performing, with a guest role in the television series, "Love Boat."

"I talked to Janet this morning, and she's going to make it," Miss Martin said recently. "When I saw her last week, she had pneumonia and a temperature of 104 and didn't remember that I had been there. But today, she sounded just like Janet, and she talked about working with her walker.

"She said it pained her so much she had to bend over at a 90-degree angle. I assured her that I felt the same way when I started. But now I've thrown the walker away, and eventually so will she."

Miss Gaynor, 76, the first winner of the Oscar as best actress, remains in San Francisco General Hospital.

Despite the early-morning terrors and the loss of Washer, Miss Martin retains the sunny outlook of Nellie Forbush ("I'm Just a Cockeyed Optimist") and Peter Pan ("I Won't Grow Up").

"The greatest thing to come out of it is the realization among many people that every city should have a trauma center," she said. "If we hadn't been taken to that hospital, neither Janet, Paul nor I would be alive today."

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Phyllis Diller is in love. At 65, the queen of self-deprecating comedy says she feels like a girl again.

"Romance," she sighs. "It's wonderful. I wish it for every woman my age. It keeps you young."

The phone rings in her elegant, rambling home and a secretary quietly inquires whether the star "has a minute" to talk with the man in her life who is calling from New York.

"Do I have a minute for him?" she exclaims. "I have my whole life for him!" And she dashes to the phone.

Seven years after her last divorce, there are new vistas for the blonde who rose to fame with hair that looked like an explosion in a mattress factory.

There are dreams to be fulfilled for Ms. Diller.

"All my life I dreamed of growing old with a man I loved," she says wistfully. "Then I blew two marriages and I thought, 'Oh boy, that's it.'

"But I didn't want to grow old with either of my husbands. And you don't give up a dream just because it hasn't worked out yet."

Not that she plans to grow old — ever. She can make jokes about her looks and age: "I'm not worried about 1983 because when I was 19 I looked 83." But beauty has become a belated interest.

She's had her second face lift — a touch-up on the first major plastic surgery which included reconstuction of her nose, badly broken when she was nine.

"They say a face lift should last five to 10 years," she says. "Mine lasted the full 10 and then it began to droop."

If it droops again, she says, she'll be running back to her beloved plastic surgeon, Dr. Franklin Ashley, for some repairs.

How many times can she keep having face lifts?

"Till they close the box," she says, bursting into her famous, raucous laugh.

It was a sun-blessed California winter day and Miss Diller, indulging her passion for cooking, had created a low-calorie lunch which she served on the white wicker furnished patio overlooking a lush lawn where birds chirped at her feeder.

"I've learned to take pleasure in the small things now," she says."There are 18 kinds of birds out there and I can identify most of them."

Her five grown children and three small grandchildren live within 30 minutes of her home and visit frequently.

"When you're 65, you know so much more," she says. "If you've played it right, you've reached a plateau of inner peace.

"My life was very hectic for many years and I didn't have time to relax and enjoy. Now, I'm just doing the things that make me happy."

For a time, Miss Diller, an accomplished musician, made guest appearances with symphonies. But she gave that up because "I didn't want to practice on the piano."

She still does television, most notably with her old friend, comedian Bob Hope. Her recent spot on the Hope Christmas special set a record for the most guest appearances by any star — 20.

"(I worked) New Year's Eve in Dallas," she says. "And I will be working in Tahoe in the spring. In February, I'm going to tour Australia for the seventh time. And I have a movie coming out — "Motel," in which my husband is played by Slim Pickens and I'm an ordinary, very sleazy housewife married to a motel owner."

Still, she tries to limit her engagements to half the year and spend the rest of her time at home, entertaining an army of friends in her gracious home with its fine china, silver and crystal — all the things she longed for when, as a poor housewife of 37, she set out to start a career in comedy.

"Professionally, I've done it all," she says. "I've built this beautiful life for myself, and I want to enjoy it."

As she wanders through the 22-room mansion, running her fingers lovingly over the fine woods and velvets, showing the room-size closet where she keeps her lavish array of furs, she is asked whether she is ever surprised at her fame and fortune.

"No," she says, "I'm not amazed because this was my dream and I believed it would happen or I wouldn't be here. So many people don't dare to dream."

'Boss' to direct episode

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Sorrell Booke, who plays Boss Hogg, the meanest man in Hazzard County, on "The Dukes of Hazzard," will make his directorial debut on the 100th episode of the CBS-TV series.

Booke, who earned a master's degree in fine arts at Yale University, where he majored in direction, will helm the "Coy vs. Vance" episode, starring Byron Cherry and Christopher Mayer as Coy and Vance Duke.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Buddy Ebsen, star of the "Barnaby Jones" and "Beverly Hillbillies" television series, is producing a play he's written on the famous Cabaret Dada in Zurich, Switzerland.

Ebsen traveled to Zurich in December to look at the caberet, which was a center of the Dada movement in the early 20th century, Ebsen's spokesman said.

Ebsen hopes to debut the new play, "Cabaret Dada," in Los Angeles in April.

Reporter remade for TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Stephen Aug had the perfect characteristics to be a faceless business writer: knowledgeable and hard-working and paunchy and balding, with a voice that echoed the sidewalks of New York City.

Then his newspaper, The Washington Star, folded, and he found a job — and his mug — on television.

"All of a sudden it mattered very much what I looked like," says Aug, a financial reporter who contributes three business segments to "ABC News This Morning." He's been at ABC News since September 1980.

It also mattered very much how he talked. "I can't help what I sound like," he says. "I grew up on 93rd and Amsterdam (in Manhattan). I'm never going to sound like I come from Iowa or Nebraska."

But ABC could help it. Aug went to a voice coach, who taught him to slow down his speech, although he still has nasal tones, a clipped delivery and a tendency to talk with his hands, shoulders and eyebrows. ABC suggested that he fold his hands on the desk to keep them off-camera.

"That happens to be me," he says. "I guess it was distracting viewers."

ABC also tried to make him look the part of a TV personality. "I have deep-set eyes," he says. "I need make-up, or else it would look like I had two black holes where my eyes should be.

"If someone told me two years ago that I'd blow-dry my hair, wear make-up and go to a voice coach, I would say he was out of his mind."

Aug represents a trend in news broadcasting, that of hiring financial specialists. At the same time that TV news was expanding around the clock, the economic story also became important to more Americans. The networks looked to the print media for experts to explain complicated issues.

CBS has Ray Brady, who worked for Dun's Review and Forbes magazine. NBC has Mike Jensen, who was a business writer for The New York Times, and Alan Abelson from Barrons, who does a business column on "Early Today."

When The Star folded in 1980, Aug was reluctant to audition for television.

"But I was 45 and not a kid anymore. Great offers weren't pouring in," he says. "When I did my test, ABC said they loved it. In the next breath, they said there would have to be minor cosmetic changes."

Aug's adjustment to TV journalism took time. "It's hard writing for pictures," he says. "When you write a TV story, you don't necessarily put the news at the top. The pictures might have cars and dignitaries arriving and departing, so your script must match that. Then, in the middle, you get to the news."

When Aug worked at The Star, where he was business editor in the paper's final days, he often wrote 1,000-word stories. "In television, I get a little more than a minute, which amounts to 200 to 250 words.

Solidarity's ideals live on, despite acts of Polish government

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WARSAW, Poland — "I believe that we have sown a seed that took deep root. We are not the same people as before..."

To many Westerners, still amazed at the apparent ease with which Polish authorities crushed an organization that once boasted 10 million members in a country of 36 million people, that statement by Solidarity leader Lech Walesa may sound like the empty rationalizations of a man unwilling to face defeat.

But here, where Solidarity is recognized as far more than a trade union or even a political movement, few — from Communist Party officials to average workers — doubt that the ideals it represented live on.

More importantly, judging from interviews with dozens of Poles and Western observers, there is little argument that the now-banned Solidarity has left a potent lasting heritage.

WHILE THE organization has been destroyed, one pro-regime journalist said, "the legend and the legacy of Solidarity will probably last for generations."

How that legacy will influence Poland's future is still open to question. But it is already clear that the experience Poles gained during the turbulent 16 months from Solidarity's emergence in the shipyards of Gdansk to the imposition of martial law a year ago has left a deep imprint.

— "I'm amazed at how politicized everyone is," a well-informed Gdansk professional man said the other day. "Even the farmers who were never interested in politics — now they quote from speeches on television."

— In southern Poland, industrial workers and farmers are organizing their own private links between city and countryside in an effort to become as independent of state institutions as possible.

In one recent exchange, farmers from dozens of villages collected 270 tons of potatoes, vegetables, eggs and dairy products for miners and factory workers in seven cities. The workers sent back truckloads of coal, cheese, shoes and workclothes to the villages. "Solidarity gave people the belief that it's possible to organize a system of self-assistance no matter what the government," commented one Pole involved with the project.

— WHILE THE regime has clamped down hard on unofficial publishing activity, Poles collected volumes of underground bulletins, magazines and books during Solidarity's heyday. More continue to circulate despite the crackdown, providing an alternative view of Poland's history, culture and current events.

"All these illegal publications are kept like family treasures," a Warsaw intellectual said.

"People's feeling of patriotism is increased because a part of our history which was falsified has been rectified," added a Warsaw priest.

— Despite a year of martial-law repression, Poles remain incomparably more outspoken than before Solidarity. A Polish radio commentator recently read on the air a bitter letter from a listener praising Ronald Reagan as "the best president Poland has" and asking the broadcaster rhetorically how long he had been "in the pay of the Russians."

The commentator dismissed the letter as the work of a fool and invited listener reaction. "Why don't you answer the question?" responded one caller.

POLITICIZATION, organization, heightened nationalism and outspokenness are new elements added since the summer of 1980 to the volatile mixture of traditions and trends that spawned Solidarity in the first place.

"Solidarity is not simply a political party which has many supporters," a group of eminent Polish social scientists concluded in a report drafted before the organization was outlawed last fall. "Its psychological sense is closer to that of a religious movement than of a political one."

"The birth of Solidarity was an outburst of hope that unacceptable reality could be changed," said Janusz Reykowski, head of the Polish Academy of Sciences' department of psychology. "It was a sudden surge of feeling that all of us, together, could perform great feats," from raising living standards to ensuring justice; from eliminating official hypocrisy to instituting genuine freedom.

"Rebellion against economic mismanagement and official corruption merged with traditional Polish nationalism, anti-Sovietism and a tendency to view the country's Communist leadership as an alien force.

"OVER THE LAST 200 years," Reykowski noted "the loss of freedom and the repeated, unsuccessful attempts at winning it back have been the dominating component of the history of a nation which not so long ago boasted what was probably the highest level of liberty in Europe."

Contrary to the popular Western view of Solidarity as a unified, 10-million-member-strong movement, it was actually badly splintered in its political outlook.

"The Solidarity movement was like a brushfire," commented Reykowski. "It was fast, but superficial. There was unity against something, not for doing any constructive work."

"Masses of people joined Solidarity without understanding what it was all about," agreed a factory worker and former union leader.

"SOME THINK that martial law was an act of divine providence for Solidarity," said a Warsaw priest who is outspokenly anti-regime but who nonetheless believes that divisions in the movement might ultimately have destroyed both Solidarity and the ideals it assimilated.

Pope prays for peace

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II celebrated New Year's Day with a prayer for simultaneous disarmament by the nuclear powers to staunch "the spring of evil, of hate and of destruction."

"All the people of God, all men and women of good will, must be constantly educated for peace," John Paul said in a homily before 10,000 faithful in St. Peter's Basilica.

"In war, two parties rise up, one against the other," he said. "In the question of peace, also, there are still two parties that must know how to become involved."

Dressed in white robes and a miter, the pontiff later stood at the window of his study overlooking St. Peter's Square and beamed broadly as he delivered a simple New Year's greeting to 30,000 tourists and pilgrims gathered below.

"Buono Anno a tutti (Happy New Year to all)," he said.

In his eight-minute homily, delivered in Italian, John Paul said New Year's Day was a good occasion for a "prayer for peace on earth."

"We think with a profound emotion, with anxiety and with a sense of responsibility, that in the history of man there may appear...the spring of evil, of hate and of destruction...

"The problem of disarmament occupies an important place in the search for peace, and the wish to see the dialogue (for peace) come to concrete results is indeed legitimate," the pontiff said.

"But, as in a dialogue, so also must the request for progressive reduction of nuclear or conventional weapons be addressed simultaneously by all the parties in dispute. The powers that confront each other must be able to go through the various stages of disarmament together, and involve themselves in each stage in equal measure...

"It is difficult...to imagine how the problem of peace in the world could be resolved unilaterally, without the participation and involvement of all," the pope said.

As is his habit, John Paul did not refer by name to the Soviet Union and the United States. The two superpowers are engaged in long-standing negotiations over reductions of nuclear weaponry, particularly medium-range missiles in Europe, with each side accusing the other of trying to force unilateral cuts.

Woman claims earliest birth

MONTREAL (AP) — A Canadian woman is claiming the earliest birth of 1983, a boy born 00:00:01 a.m. EST — one-hundredth of a second past midnight.

The six-pound-two-ounce boy was born to Jocelyne Bouchard, said nurse Judy Traynor of St. Mary's Hospital in Montreal.

"Nobody can top that," said the exultant nurse. "We really tried. The mother (Bouchard) wanted the first of the year as well and she was very co-operative...she was fantastic."

Kremlin publicly links missile proposals

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin on Saturday publicly linked the reduction of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe with U.S.-Soviet talks on limiting the superpowers' long-range nuclear arsenals.

U.S. and Soviet officials are conducting parallel negotiations in Geneva, Switzerland, on the reduction of medium-range nuclear missiles based in Western and Eastern Europe and also on the reduction of U.S. and Soviet missiles aimed at each other.

"The Soviet proposals presuppose that in a mutual reduction of strategic (long-range) nuclear forces, the U.S. will, at least, not build up its other nuclear means which are capable of reaching objectives in the Soviet Union's territory," the Communist Party daily newspaper Pravda said in a lengthy commentary.

It said that otherwise the United States "would receive a channel for bypassing and undermining the very fundamentals of a future agreement (on strategic weapons)."

The commentary, distributed in advance of publication Sunday by the official Tass news agency, apparently was timed to reinforce the latest Soviet offer on reducing medium-range missiles in Europe.

On Dec. 21, the Communisty Party leader, Yuri V. Andropov, said his country would reduce its medium-range arsenal in Europe to 162 missiles — the number deployed by Britain and France.

That offer was rejected by Washington, London and Paris, mainly because it would leave the Soviets free to pull their new SS-20 medium-range missiles into the Asian part of the Soviet Union but still within range of Western Europe.

The British and French also argued that their nuclear missiles were not tied to U.S defense strategy. The French said they were "shocked" that their missiles would be considered as part of the negotiations.

Washington has proposed cutting long-rang nuclear warheads by one-third to about 5,000 for each side, while Andropov has outlined a 25 percent reduction.

The Kremlin's immediate goal is to block plans by the North Atlantic Treaty Organizaion to deploy 572 new U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe beginning in December.

NATO leaders say the new missiles are needed to counter the 333 triple-warhead SS-20s Moscow has deployed against Western Europe and more than 250 older SS-4s and SS-5s.

The Soviets have argued that the deployment of additional missiles in Europe would make the continent more susceptible to an accidental nuclear war.

Linking the medium-range missiles to cuts in strategic weapons was viewed here as an attempt to pressure Washington on the European missile issue by connecting it to the strategic weapons issue — one that more directly affects U.S. public opinion.

Pravda said its article was a Soviet obligation "to give, when necessary, a true appraisal of the state of things at the (Geneva) talks. The public has a right to know the truth."

TORONTO (AP) — Even more than most Americans, Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and his fellow Canadians will be watching eagerly in 1983 for an upturn in the U.S. economy.

Most of the world would be eager to trade problems with Canada, a nation blessed with rich resources and a peaceful society. Dissension and separatist talk are commonplace, but rarely rise even to the level of harsh words.

Still, Canadians are worried about the lagging pace of their prosperity, troubled by rising unemployment, unsure of their future as a trading nation if Europe, Japan and the United States decide to play tough.

Trudeau's government is under pressure to do something to spur economic revival. The prime minister keeps saying that key elements of the Canadian economy — especially mining, timber and steel — simply cannot improve without a worldwide economic recovery, led by the United States.

If the long-awaited rebound is feeble, speculation will intensify about Trudeau's future. He has been in office since 1968, longer than any other head of government in a Western democracy.

Trudeau has said he will not be a candidate again, but his current term could last until early 1985. It is still not at all clear when Trudeau will step down or whom his Liberal Party might offer as a successor.

Economic woes have given the opposition Conservatives a big lead in the polls, but have not erased doubts about Tory chief Joe Clark, who was a fumbling prime minister for nine months in 1979-80. The Conservatives will decide in late January whether to stick with the leader whose failings they know or start a bloody battle for a new standard-bearer.

As Trudeau prepares to leave the political scene, he will also be trying to put the final touches on what he sees as his legacy — a made-in-Canada constitution.

Man throws grenade into crowd at tribal dance in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A man threw a hand grenade into a crowd watching a New Year's tribal dance at Manila's Rizal Park early today, wounding 42 people, police and hospitals said.

The explosion occurred about 1 a.m. while this capital of 7.5 million people was celebrating the New Year with a deafening roar of fireworks.

TOKYO (AP) — The Chinese say the Year of the Pig is a time of good fortune, and Asia should enjoy new political stability and economic vitality in 1983 when the pig steps forth from the 12-year-cycle Buddhist calendar.

Untroubled by any major land wars, the nations of Asia will continue channelling their work forces into economic expansion. The region as a whole can expect at least 5 percent economic growth during the year, according to numerous prognosticators.

A revival of markets in the recession-hit West will remain a key to the vigor of the East. Newly-industrialized countries like South Korea, Singapore and Taiwan could be hurt if the United States and Western Europe erect protectionist barriers against industrial imports.

Malaysia and Indonesia — which along with China have become net exporters of oil — and other resources-rich nations need a reversal in falling prices of such commodities as rubber, tin and oil to resume growth.

The year will see increased Asian interdependence. China, hoping to quadruple its economy by the year 2000, is becoming an important Asian market. Predictions are that Japan, with its trillion-dollar economy, will slowly emerge from its current business downturn, and this is likely to be a boon to the entire area.

If all goes well, the newly industrialized countries — called NICs — will continue their rapid shift to high-technology industries, providing new stimulation and strain for Asia's trade relations with the West.

The year should be quiet on the political front, despite worrisome pockets of tension. Anti-Vietnam forces formed a coalition in Cambodia in 1982, and the guerrilla war against its Vietnam-backed government there probably will continue.

Land values and public morale have slumped in Hong Kong and may remain low pending agreement between China and Britain on China's desire to regain sovereignty over the colony in 1997.

In the Philippines, President Ferdinand E. Marcos enters his 18th year of rule facing negotiations over the future of U.S. military bases, an issue that could give added fuel to his vocal opponents.

Taiwan is expected to seek a strengthening of ties with the United States, its principal ally and trading partner. Moves by mainland China to improve relations with the Soviet Union and Chinese-U.S. strains over U.S. military sales to Taiwan will be closely observed, but Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping is expected to keep the political fires banked in order to focus on improving the lot of China's one billion people.

Asians affected by Japan's past militarism will watch how Japan's new prime minister, Yasuhiro Nakasone, deals with U.S. demands that Japan strengthen its defenses. Nakasone's top priorities will be the economy, expected to grow by less than 3 percent in 1982.

U.S. tries to affect region

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — The Caribbean region begins 1983 with the United States trying to strengthen its influence in the area, the Soviet Union cultivating ties with the tiny spice island of Grenada and British colonialism fading out.

The region's English-speaking islands, faced with depressed world prices for bauxite, sugar and other traditional exports, as well as reduced earnings from tourism, are pinning their hopes on President Reagan's Caribbean Basin Initiative.

The initiative is intended to help revive regional economies by eliminating trade barriers for some traditional exports and by providing tax incentives to U.S. companies that invest in the region.

The heads of state of countries belonging to the Caribbean Community and Common Market will hold a summit meeting in Trinidad-Tobago on July 4 to commemorate the organization's 10th anniversary and to seek common solutions to regional economic woes.

By then, Reagan's initiative may be far enough along to assess its full potential.

It if falls short of expectations, it will likely hurt U.S. interests in the Caribbean and provide political capital to Cuba, Grenada and leftwing groups on other islands.

The People's Revolutionary Government of Prime Minister Maurice Bishop on Grenada broke the tradition of constitutional succession in the English-speaking islands by taking power by force in March, 1979.

Twenty years after Jamaica and Trinidad and Tobago became the first British possessions to gain full independence, St. Kitts-Nevis expects to become yet another new nation in 1983.

Queen Elizabeth II is scheduled to make a formal visit to Jamaica in February and then take a vacation in the neighboring Caiman Islands.

Pope John Paul II is expected to attend a Latin American bishops conference that same month in Haiti where the president for life, Jean-Claude Duvalier, promised at year's end municipal elections that he said would be "free, honest and democratic" in February.

Jamaica remains afflictes by high unemployment, a sick bauxite industry and heavy borrowing, but Prime Minister Edward Seaga, a fiscal conservative and political admirer of President Reagan, claims his austerity measures will bring results in 1983.

Nicaraguans seek refuge in Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — An estimated 2,000 Nicaraguans fled to Honduras in December, bringing the number of Nicaraguans now sheltered in this impoverished country to more than 29,000, according to the government.

Col. Abraham Garcia Turcios, coordinator of the National Refugee Commission, said Friday the government lists 21,000 Nicaraguan refugees in the country, but he accepted statistics of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees that place the figure at 29,000. He said thousands of Nicaraguans have crossed the ill-defined border without being registered by the government.

The Nicaraguans are among an estimated 50,000 Latin American refugees in Honduras, most fleeing political strife in their countries.

Honduran officials said international relief agencies provided about $7 million in refugee aid in 1982.

Two truckloads of Christmas mail brighten sickly woman's holiday

By ESTES THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

ROANOKE, Va. — Dorothy Ridgway, a sickly 31-year-old woman whose appeal for Christmas cards resulted in two truckloads of mail, says her winter has been brightened by the people who reached out to her.

"It shows they care and they have love in their hearts," she said Thursday in a squeaky voice. "I really can't believe it. I just love the people for thinking of me."

An estimated 1 million cards, letters and gifts have come from around the nation to her doorstep since an article about her appeared in the Dec. 19 Parade magazine, a Sunday newspaper supplement.

"I feel like a princess," said Miss Ridgway, who stands less than 5 feet tall and spends most of her time inside her parents' modest home because of allergies and her frailty, caused by a rare bone disease she once had.

"I wasn't looking forward to winter, but now I think it will go faster," she said as she opened a package containing a stuffed toy owl.

Miss Ridgway sat on a new couch — donated by a local furniture company — in her living room, opening gifts in front of reporters and photographers as the drivers lugged in more loot.

Packages came from all corners of the country. Eleven states — California, Washington, Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Texas, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and New Jersey — were represented by the first parcels Miss Ridgway opened.

"She would have been perfectly satisfied if she'd just got a Christmas card," said her mother, Mary, who suffers from epilepsy and had a spell when the gifts started arriving. "It's something. So many people are out of work."

Truck drivers Joe Verdigi and William Hagler drove through the night from New York, arriving in Roanoke shortly before noon Thursday, with 326 boxes of mail and parcels for Dorothy.

Before this happened, she said, "I cried a lot and felt depressed a lot because of my allergies and all I couldn't do like other people."

This wasn't the first time Miss Ridgway was the subject of national attention. Miss Ridgway, who suffered a rage bone disease that was arrested but stunted her growth, received an avalanche of Christmas cards and letters 22 years ago after an erroneous message saying she was dying went out on a weather service wire.

POSITIVE THINKING

Don't let resolutions fade

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Now that a new year has rolled around, what about those New Year's resolutions? Will they be for sure this time, or have we made them just because it's New Year's and the thing to do? Sadly enough, before the new year is far advanced, many new resolutins will likely have faded, and back we go into the same old rut.

We always start with good intentions, but unfortunately only with half-hearted resolution. And that half-heartedness gets half-hearted results. But just imagine what the new year 1983 would be like if we actually kept our resolutions. It could be the best year yet!

The resolution to do something creative this year means a determination to change yourself or a situation all the way. In effect, you are going to re-solve the situation, going at your problem with a fixed purpose. "Resolve" is a strong word when really meant, and adhered to it does indeed resolve things for the better.

So this year why not really resolve to be what you want to be, and then go on and be it? And do it now. Don't procrastinate. Get going and get with it.

Dale Carnegie once said, "One of the most tragic things I know about human nature is that all of us tend to put off living. We are all dreaming of some magical rose garden over the horizon — instead of enjoying the roses that are blooming outside our windows today."

That's the idea; live in the now. Be a now person. There are so many exciting new things you can do with yourself. Open your eyes and take a good look! And whatever you do, don't dully hang on the self-defeating attitudes of the old year. All mistakes, all the dumb things you did in the past — just leave them all and go forwad minus them. Never lug into the future the negative impedimenta of days gone by.

There is a movement a flow in time. Like a river, it carries away into the past all the mistakes of yesterday.

My old friend, the late Grove Patterson, for whom I once worked as a reporter on a Detroit paper, read me an editorial he had written for his newspaper. It's a classic:

"A boy a long time ago leaned against the railing of an old-fashioned bridge and watched the current of the river below. A log, a bit of driftwood, a chip, all floated past. Again the surface of the river was smooth. But always, as it had for a hundred, perhaps a thousand years, the waters slipped by — under the bridge. At seasons the current went more swiftly, and again quite slowly, but always the river flowed on — under the bridge.

"Watching the river that day, the boy made a discovery. It was not the discovery of a material thing, something he might put his hands upon. He could not even see it. He had discovered a great idea. Quite suddenly, and yet quickly, he knew that everything in his life would some day pass under the bridge and be done, like water. And the boy came to like those words, 'under the bridge.'

"All his life thereafter the idea served him well and carried him through, although there were days and ways that were dark and not easy. Always, when he made a mistake that couldn't be helped, or lost something that could never come again, the boy, now a man, said, 'It's water under the bridge.'

"And he didn't feel sorry about mistakes so much after that and he didn't let trouble get him down — because it was 'water under the bridge.'"

So at the outset of 1983 say to your failures and your mistakes, "So what? It's 'water under the bridge.'" Stop being a victim of what you did or didn't do in the past. The year 1982 has had it, and you have had it. Forget it. Your big opportunities are waiting for you in 1983.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I ate in a restaurant over the weekend and I had a touch of indigestion later that night. My wife wanted me to go to the hospital emergency room because she thought there might be something wrong in my heart, but I would have felt foolish. After a while I felt better and I'm alright now. What I would like to know is how to tell the difference between indigestion and something more serious so I would know what to do next time. — Paul, Duluth, Minn.

Dear Paul: Only a physician can distinguish between indigestion and angina pectoris, which occurs when the blood vessels that feed the heart are unable to carry enough blood to enable it to function normally. The important point for you to realize is that the condition is treatable if it is detected early enough, but can have serious consequences if it is neglected.

I can understand that someone might not want to appear foolish by going to an emergency room for every minor aches and pain, but feeling foolish is a much less permanent condition than being dead.

Dear Dr. Solomon: How does smoking marijuana compare with smoking cigarettes in relation to developing lung cancer? If marijuana is safer, I think the government ought to let it be used instead of discouraging people from using it. — Francine, Seattle, Wash.

Dear Francine: According to a report by Dr. Donald P. Tashkin to the annual meeting of the American Lung Association and the American Thoracic Society, marijuana smoke is even more irritating to the respiratory tissues than is tobacco smoke. Moreover, the combination of marijuana and tobacco smoke creates an especially high risk of lung cancer.

Dear Dr. Solomon: How effective are pacemakers? My doctor has spoken about the possibility that I might want to get one, but I don't like the idea of a hassle over something unless I know that it's going to do some good. Is there any information about this? — Mr. J.T., Chapel Hill, N.C.

Dear Mr. T.: According to Dr. Seymour Furman, professor surgery at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York, people who use pacemakers have a 50 percent survival rate from eight to nine years after they are implanted. This holds true regardless of the patient's sex, age, or health at the time the pacemaker was implanted.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS:
The Board of Trustees of the Midland Independent School District, Midland, Texas, is requesting bids on Dirt Work. Bid specifications, regulations & forms may be secured from Purchasing Agent, 801 South Moran, Midland, Texas. 683-6228.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS
NOTICE TO BIDDERS
Sealed proposals addressed to the Honorable Mayor and City Council of Midland, Texas will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 2:00 P.M., January 27, 1983, for furnishing all necessary materials, machinery, equipment, superintendence, and labor for constructing certain improvements at the Midland Regional Airport, Midland, Texas.
Immediately following the closing time for receipt of bids, proposals will be publicly opened and read aloud. Any bid received after closing time will be returned unopened.
This project consists principally of the reconstruction of approximately 21,100 square yards of rigid pavement on the terminal apron and perimeter taxiway, removal of existing pavement, construction of drainage structures, excavation work, and other related items of work.
A bid proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is hereby expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or, if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance bond and payment bond. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.
The successful Bidder will be required to furnish a Performance Bond and a Payment Bond each in the amount of the contract, written by a responsible Surety Company authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and satisfactory to the Owner, as required by Article 5160, V.A.T.C.S., as amended by H.B. 344, passed by the 56th Legislature, Regular Session, 1959.
All lump sum and unit prices must be stated in both script and figures. The Owner reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive formalities. In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating the prices in the bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most advantageous construction thereof, or to reject the bid. Unreasonable (or "unbalanced") unit prices will authorize the Owner to reject the bid. Bidders are expected to inspect the site of the work and to inform themselves regarding all local conditions.
This project is an AIP Project. The proposed contract is under and subject to Executive Order 11246 of September 24, 1965, and to the equal opportunity clause, and the Bidder must supply all the information required by the proposal form.
The successful bidder will be required to submit a Certification of Nonsegregated Facilities prior to award of the contract, and to notify prospective subcontractors of the requirement of such a Certification where the subcontract exceeds $10,000. Samples of the Certification and the Notice to Subcontractors appear in the specifications.
In all areas of employment women and men will be afforded equal opportunity for employment. The employment of women shall not diminish the standards or requirements for the employment of minorities.
Minimum wages and labor rates for the construction of the proposed work have been established by the Secretary of Labor. A schedule of labor classifications and wage rates to be paid are included in the specifications and will be made a part of the contract. The bid form shall contain a statement that the prices bid are based on such wage rates.
This project is subject to Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action paragraphs as well as all other requirements stated in the Instrcutions to Bidders in the project specifications and contract documents.
Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the Director of Aviation, Midland Regional Airport, Midland Texas, at the office or Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 4010 Avenue R, Lubbock Texas 79412, and at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5214 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703.
Copies of the Plans and Specifications may be secured from Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 4010 Avenue R, Lubbock, Texas 79412, or from Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5214 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703.

PROCESS ENGINEERS - MECHANICAL ENGINEERS

This Sunbelt small city based, high Tech Engineering and Construction Company is bucking the trend! We are hiring Engineers with proven track record and high potential. Our management policies emphasize professionalism and career development. Our medium sized organization strives for excellence in today's fast-track plant design and construction industry.

PROCESS DESIGN ENGINEERS

Two of our Engineering Groups have highly visible positions open to creative, self motivated Chemical Engineers. One group applies proven technologies in the design of plants for the energy industries. The other group develops, seeks, and licenses new technologies for implementation in the markets we serve. We will consider outstanding Chemical Engineers with three or more years of experience in conceptual design, process simulation, equipment sizing, P & ID's development, and plant start-up. Engineering experience should include gas treating, Claus sulfur recovery, and/or turbo-expander NGL recovery facilities.

MECHANICAL ENGINEERS

Our Mechanical Engineering Group has positions open for creative individuals who will be involved in our engineering projects from the preparation of reports and proposals to the completion of the P & ID's, purchase of mechanical equipment, and final checkout of all projects. We will consider outstanding Mechanical Engineers with a minimum of three years experience in the design of processing plants.

Engineering and construction company experience is preferred, but good operating company experience will also be considered. To explore these career-expanding opportunities, send a detailed resume, including salary history to:

The 1st year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 8 3/8% loan to value interest will be charged at a rate of 12 3/8% for the 1st 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payment 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period the graduation in payment will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 12.875%. *Principle and Interest only is calculated in monthly payment.
