Poland's martial law will be lifted Friday

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Council of State, acting on orders of the nation's military leaders and Communist Party chief Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, has ordered the lifting of martial law in Poland beginning Friday, President Henryk Jablonski told Parliament today.

On Wednesday Parliament, acting to insure the government's grip on the country, granted broad emergency powers to Poland's Communist leaders so they can act quickly to silence any political threat once martial law ends.

Today, shortly before the announcement, Parliament approved a series of tough new regulations that further secure the government's control.

In a nationally televised speech today, Jablonski said "At the request of the Military Council for National Salvation, the Council of State has lifted martial law on the territory of the whole country, starting July 22."

Jaruzelski, who addressed Parliament immediately after the Jablonski speech, said: "martial law was a necessity, an act of defense. The lifting thereof is a conscious choice."

The government's new powers, contained in a constitutional amendment, were proposed by the Communist leadership and were designed to allow the government to impose a state of emergency, swiftly re-imprison dissidents, and keep key leaders of the outlawed independent union Solidarity interned. The amendment was passed 386-1 with one absention.

Before the announcement that the military decree will be lifted on Poland's national day, the 450-member Parliament approved several special regulations designed to crush opposition to the Communist government, in effect extending some martial law curbs for an 18-month transition period.

The new bill, and a conditional amnesty for political prisoners, was passed without its harsher, permanent provisions after criticism by Roman Catholic primate Cardinal Jozef Glemp, according to non-Communist Party deputies at the Sejm, or Parliament.

Only three deputies, Karol Malcuzynski, Romuald Bukowski and Ryszard Reiff — all non-party members abstained from voting on the two bills, reporters at Parliament said. There were no "no" votes. An official count of the "yes" votes was not given.

Earlier, Janusz Zablocki, one of a handful of non-party deputies, called on Parliament to allow students and university employees fired for political activity to return to work, and he said Glemp wrote a letter to the Parliament criticizing permanent changes in the penal code.

"The laws we are discussing today were met with numerous objections and criticism," Zablocki said before the vote in remarks heard by an Associated Press reporter at the Parliament building.

"This criticism was and still is shared...by the primate of Poland who expressed his critical remarks in a letter," Zablocki said.

Zablocki said Glemp's protest had delayed until next week consideration of permanent changes called for in the special regulations bill, such as tightening censorship and a toughening the penal code. He said this would allow time for possible amendments or changes.

The influence of the church has grown since Pope John Paul II visited his homeland last month. The church role as a dissenting voice in Polish society also has increased since the demise of the independent Solidarity union, suspended by military rule and formally outlawed last October.

The amnesty bill would free or pardon violators of martial law and make sure they avoid political protests or strikes in the future by providing for re-imprisonment.

Parliament has little real power and has always approved whatever proposals the Communists submit. When Jaruzelski decreed martial law Dec. 13, 1981, Parliament endorsed it afterward.

The amnesty measure covers all women, all people under 21, and anyone sentenced to three years or less. Those with longer sentences would have their terms cut at least in half and possibly revoked.

However, government officials have said that the amnesty will not apply to seven fugitive Solidarity leaders.

Odessan's conviction inflicts wound on pornographers

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — It was the first slap of leather at the gunfight at the Odessa Corral to see who gets run out of town by sundown.

When the smoked cleared Wednesday, decency forces had drawn first blood, inflicting a wound on the pornographers who long have stood with feet comfortably propped on fence rail.

One wound. One victory. And many shootouts to follow before one gang or the other drops to the dust.

Thirty-eight-year-old Jimmy Wayne Wright was the target Wednesday, and his conviction on a commercial obscenity charge in a test case could blaze a trail for intensive prosecution of accused pornographers in this county.

"We've gotten one conviction, but one conviction is not going to cause the pornographers to pack up and leave town by any means," said John Cope of Odessans for Decency.

"But if there are continued arrests and continued convictions, then eventually it's going to soak through that the people of the community do not want them here. And it also will raise their fixed cost of doing business by having to hire defense attorneys and go to trial."

See related story, Page 1C

But at the opposite end of the shotgun are the opinions of those who peddle sexually explicit magazines and sexual paraphernalia.

"Hey — what I do is a service," said Wright after his conviction. "If it wasn't for me, can you imagine what in the hell we'd have on the streets...all the peeping toms?"

Four women and two men who found Wright guilty and assessed him a fine of $2,000 and six months' confinement in county jail obviously didn't feel he provided such an important service.

"We just felt the line had to be drawn somewhere," said one female juror who asked not to be identified.

The foreman, who also asked not to be identified, concurred. "There has to be a line drawn — a statewide standard," he said, adding that the magazine which Wright was charged with selling — Swedish Erotica No. 26 — served no beneficial purpose. "It had nothing else but sex — that's all it was. There was nothing else to be appreciated about it...no political, no science or art value....There was nothing in there that would do anything for anybody."

Nevertheless, said the foreman, deciding Wright's guilt or innocence was "a tough decision." Jurors, he explained, carefully considered whether Wright's actions were markedly more offensive than those of convenience store managers who sell soft-core material. They examined samples of each type of magazine and decided that those "in Colonials and 7-Elevens are not on display...and the content is not as bad."

Despite defense attorneys' pleadings that a jail sentence was not warranted in the case, jurors believed a mere fine levied against someone who operates such a lucrative business was not punishment enough.

"Anybody could come up with $2,000," said the foreman of the maximum fine allowed for the Class A misdemeanor. "We felt one year (in jail) would be too much for the offense, since he is trying to keep minors out of the store, and six months would be time enough to let him think about it."

Bear killers sentenced to 179 days, fined $6,000

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton chastised two convicted bear killers, sentenced them to 179 days in federal custody, placed them on three five-year probations and fined each $6,000.

"I can put you in federal corrections institutions for some 30 years," Bunton had told the Midland men, Steve Dudley Quain, 40, and Frankie Keller, 30, at sentencing Wednesday.

Quain and Keller, who operate a construction business here, were convicted by a federal jury in Midland July 1 of smuggling and conspiracy to smuggle a live, unweaned cub and three dead adult bears from Mexico to Texas and for not getting a U.S. Department of the Interior permit to cross the border.

The government contended the men shot the bears in Mexico from an airborne helicopter in June 1981.

The defendants, however, said they stalked and shot the bears after spotting what they thought were javelinas in a ravine in Texas — just north of the Rio Grande. They testified they had hired Midland pilot J.C. Short to fly them over the river to look for a fishing lease. Short had contracted with Sanderson rancher Pinky Carruthers to kill coyotes from the air on Carruthers' sheep ranch.

See related story, Page 1C

Both men testified they killed the bears in Texas. However, they said they told the rancher and their friends they had shot the bears in Mexico, for fear they would get in trouble for shooting the bears on the Texas ranch. At the trial, the rancher said he would have been "very happy" had the bears been killed on his ranch, but that he had never seen bears on his property. Likewise, Texas Parks and Wildlife Deparment biologist Bill Russ testified he had never seen bears or bear tracks in Texas.

"I didn't have any idea I'd be in trouble," Quain said Wednesday.

"By saying that (they killed in bears in Mexico), I didn't think we'd get into trouble," said Keller.

The judge said the jury obviously thought they were lying during the trial and so did he.

Bunton said this "old thing 'we didn't know how much trouble we were in after we killed the bears' " was nonsense.

"You had the temerity, the audacity, to come in and tell the jury you killed the bears in Terrell County," the judge said sternly.

Even at sentencing, Quain and Keller still maintained they killed in bears in Texas.

"I didn't believe you then (at the trial)," said Bunton, "and I don't believe you now. I think you were lying at the time and still think you're lying."

Bunton, who grew up at Marfa in ranch country, told the men, "This is a very serious offense."

The unemployment rate rose in Midland and Odessa for the second month in a row as high school and college students again sang the summer looking-for-a-job blues. But overall statistics show an improvement in the job picture when compared to June a year ago.

Midland's jobless rate rose to 6.4 percent in June from 5.7 percent (revised) in May. A year ago the figure was 7.7 percent, however, indicating that the labor picture in Midland has gotten better since that time.

Other statistics bear that out: the total labor pool in Midland in June was 67,000, down by just 200 from the same month a year ago when the recession first began to affect Midland. The labor force has grown by 2,400 from May 1983.

The number of people actually employed is up 1,800 from May and up by 700 from June a year ago, in spite of the number of students seeking work.

"It is improving from year-ago results," said Paul Adams, labor market analyst in the Texas Employment Commission's Midland office.

"It's nothing we can put numbers on; it's just a few more people here and a few more people there (being hired). If it were just in one area, we could call it a fluke, but we feel it (the economy) is starting back up."

Adams said improvements in Midland's job picture fit the national pattern of increases of small numbers across the board in different job categories.

The traditional summer increase in young people looking for work pushed Odessa's unemployment rate to a new high of 10.3 percent in June, up from 9.8 percent in May. A year ago, it was 8.0 percent.

The increase in the number of persons out of work was not unexpected.

"This happens every June," Adams said. "It usually goes up by half a point."

The number of initial claims filed for unemployment benefits in Midland remains fairly stable. As of June 20, there were 354 new claims filed; as of July 20, there were 373. The number of continued claims on file was 2,781 as of June 20 and 2,623 as of July 20, according to Charm Carl at the Midland TEC.

"We cannot see any real trend in the claims department," Carl said. "Actually, it doesn't look as grim as it did a couple months ago."

Texas' jobless rate was 8.5 percent, up from 8.0 percent in May. The June unemployment rate in selected metropolitan areas of Texas varied greatly, from the low of 4.1 percent in Bryan-College Station to the state high of 26.6 percent in Laredo. The rate in Dallas-Fort Worth was 5.7 percent; in Houston it was 10.1 percent and in San Antonio it was 6.3 percent.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts showers for Friday from the southwest to the northern Plains, for the upper Midwest and most of the Gulf.

No relief forecast for dry plains

There doesn't seem to be any relief — or rain — for the dry, parched plains as the rainfall measurement for the year dips 3½ inches below normal for this time of year.

Sunny skies and hot temperatures are expected to continue through Friday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The promise of light showers have shied away from the area, stablizing the total rainfall at 2.36 inches for the year.

While tonight's low should hover in the upper 60s, Friday's high is expected to heat up to the mid-90s. Southerly winds are expected to breeze through at 10-15 mph.

Wednesday's high of 93 didn't match the record 104 reading in 1936, and the overnight low of 69 was 9-degrees short of the record low of 60 set in 1970.

Administration praises proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, which has said nothing positive about Nicaragua since taking office, is praising a Sandinista proposal for regional peace talks in Central America.

While calling the proposal a positive step, the administration also said in a statement that it contained "a number of serious shortcomings," among them a failure to "deal with Nicaragua's military buildup."

The statement, issued Wednesday at the White House by deputy press secretary Larry Speakes and at the State Department, represented perhaps the least hostile reaction the administration has had to the regime in Managua.

It followed by one day the suggestion by Daniel Ortega, head of the three-man ruling junta of Nicaragua, that peace talks should be held involving Nicaragua, its neighbors, and the foreign ministers of Venezuela, Panama, Mexico and Colombia, known as the Contadora group.

Previously, the Sandinistas had insisted on individual talks with their neighbors and the Reagan administration, as a way of refuting accusations that Nicaragua's close military ties with Cuba and the Soviet Union threatened Central American security.

Meanwhile, the president picked the U.S. ambassador to Argentina, Harry W. Schlaudeman, to be the executive director of a bipartisan commission on Centri America. Reagan on Tuesday announced creation of the panel to advise him about long-term policy options for the region and to help build a national consensus about Central America.

Schlaudeman is a former assistant secretary of state for Latin American affairs.

Speakes, responding to Ortega's proposal, said "we welcome any sincere and verifiable proposal to lessen tension in Central America."

"Taking Mr. Ortega at his word, we believe the Nicaraguan proposal is a positive step in that it acknowledges the regional nature of the problem and the need to address external support for insurgencies and terrorist groups," Speakes said.

As for the shortcomings, the spokesman said "the proposal seeks to put the insurgents in El Salvador on the same level as the democratically elected government.

"It fails to take into account the need for true democracy as a means to resolve internal problems of the countries of the region," Speakes said. "It does not deal with Nicaragua's military buildup and there are no clearly articulated provisions for effective verification" of any agreement.

He said the administration hopes the proposal, and others advanced in the region, will be "considered, refined and expanded as necessary" by the Contadora group.

Meanwhile, the president, who gave public speeches Monday and Tuesday on Central America, met in private Wednesday with a group of Jewish leaders who discussed what they said was persecution by Sandinistas that has led to the exile of each of Nicaragua's 50 Jews.

Rabbi Morton M. Rosenthal, director of the department of Latin American affairs at the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, said that the Sandinista government, reflecting its ties with the Palestine Liberation Organization, had driven the Jews from the country.

"The president deplored this manifestation of discrimination against Jews and the influence of the PLO in this matter," Rosenthal said.

Isaac Stavisky, one of the president's visitors, said he was forced into exile in Miami shortly before the Sandinistas took power four years ago. He said his life was threatened by a Sandinista and he fled later that day, leaving behind his house and three factories.

Two hours after the verdict, Wright was biting the bullet and licking his wounds. "For what evidence they had, I don't see how they convicted me," he contended. "It's a crying shame what a group of people can do to the state of Texas. The jury sat there and decided the standard for the whole state of Texas and not just my case. They set the morals for everyone...See, by setting standards they could knock Penthouse, Playboy and everything out. The next step would be to go to massage parlors, topless bars."

Prosecutor and county attorney Steve Groh found in the conviction encouragement for further prosecutions of obscenity violations.

"This case is no precedent in a legal case," he said, "but as far as whether six people in Odessa will convict a person for selling pornographic magazines, I think we have the answer today." He called the punishment assessed by jurors "a fairly stiff sentence," one which has significance. "I believe it's hard for anyone to send anybody to jail. It's a momentous decision for any human being to send another human being to jail...The most obvious message is that an Ector County jury has enforced the law, and there is a law against selling obscene material. I would hope that would have some impact."

Cope of Odessans for Decency believes it will. "(Jurors) issued a very strong message to Mr. Wright and gave a very strong warning to other pornographers, so they'd better beware," he said. "We've always felt that once these things were brought to trial, the people of Odessa would find these things obscene. The problem in the past has been they haven't been brought to trial. Most people don't realize what's sold in a so-called adult bookstore; they don't know the extent of degradation and explicitness shown in these materials. When they are finally confronted with it, they're shocked."

Wright's conviction was the first obscenity conviction in Odessa or Ector County since 1980 when another Odessan heard "we find the defendant guilty" — a verdict which recently was overturned by an appellate court.

"It's just guaranteed the (Wright) case will be appealed also," admitted Groh. "And appellate courts are notorious for overturning these kinds of convictions. Assuming his conviction's upheld, it's assured at least a year will pass before he walks into jail."

Even before his punishment had been decided, Wright already was planning to take the case before a higher judge. "We're working on that right now," he said.

But his defense attorney John Cliff was still dwelling on the fact jurors failed to understand that Wright never "shoved anything down somebody's throat," as only consenting adults enter his store. "Availability of these materials is directly proportionate to demand," he maintained. "No one has to go in there; no one has to see this stuff unless they want to. The big fear if you don't crack down on this stuff, they're going to be all over the place is (a falsity). But I think there's a line to be drawn as far as how public you are, how available you make it to minors."

Wright, who only minutes before had been convicted of peddling obscenity in B&L Bookstore, agreed. "I don't want any of that crap in my home," he said. "I wouldn't have it — I've got kids in my house. And I don't sell beastiality, no kiddie porn."

Erotic magazines and books, peep shows, sexual paraphernalia shops. All have been deeply entrenched in this city for years with little formal opposition — until Odessans for Decency started its campaign to stop their sale. The modern-day posse has made headlines, arousing the ire of rock singers and pornographers alike, but the impact its members have had is a matter of debate.

"The little praying done by the moral majority didn't have a damn thing to do with the jury's decision," claimed Wright.

Prosecutor Groh believed the jury's verdict stemmed primarily from the collective understanding of six individuals. "I don't really think the action of any group or organization had an effect on the minds of these jurors," he said. "I think they applied the law as the evidence was presented to them."

"We're just grateful that we've got a man like Steve Groh in the county attorney's office willing to bring prosecution against the pornographers in our city," said Odessans for Decency's Cope. "And we're pleased that we have a sheriff willing to go out and make arrests. We take no credit for it — they're out on the firing line, not us."

But vanquished defense attorney Cliff admitted the group's power. "I feel these prosecutions are an attempt to quieten down the people, Odessans for Decency," he said, charging that the county attorney position "is a political office...People who want to have these materials available don't organize — we don't have an Odessans for Pornography."

Wright, for one, thinks decency forces don't have a chance: "As long as there's sex, men and women in the world, there's gonna be pornography, because there's always going to be somebody who thinks it's dirty." He then added what he believed to be the clincher — "I don't want to go to jail, but the store's still going to be open."

As for county attorney Groh, a lot of work lies ahead: "Over 90 (obscenity) charges have been filed against 12 to 14 individuals and we will proceed to try these cases."

Members of Odessans for Decency, meanwhile, aren't planning to give up anytime soon in their opposition to pornographers. "They won't go down easy — it'll be a long battle," said Cope. "But we are confident that there will be continued arrests and convictions and that these people of Odessa will be able to reclaim their city again."

Heat wave grips nation

By The Associated Press

A summer heat wave gripped the nation today from the Rockies and the Southwest to the East Coast, while scattered thunderstorms with high winds and hail erupted across the Plains.

The mercury Wednesday hit 107 in Pierre, S.D., 104 in Des Moines, Iowa, 103 in Palm Beach, Calif., and 101 in St. Louis.

In Missouri, the heat was blamed in the deaths of two elderly men and one woman Wednesday. St. Louis County declared a heat emergency and set up 50 air-conditioned shelters for the elderly.

Recent temperatures in the 90s and 100s have been blamed for 21 deaths nationwide, including eight in Georgia and eight in Missouri.

The heat will last through the weekend, said Joan Murray of the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo. The chief cause is a high pressure system stalled from the Tennessee Valley to the Gulf Coast, blocking out cooler air to the north, she said.

Thunderstorms struck the central Appalachians and northern Plains late Wednesday and early today.

Bear killers sentenced to 179 days, fined $6,000

He said the men acted childishly in refusing not to cooperate with investigators of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Both had declined to tell of others who had hunted game while airborne. Such an act is a federal offense.

"You acted like a couple of third-graders," Bunton contended, by saying " 'I don't want to rat or be a tattle-tale on my friends.' "

"You acted like fools," the judge said.

Earlier, the two men had pleaded for mercy — for mitigated sentences — and asked for probation to take care of their business and family responsibilities.

The judge said he had "sympathy" for the men's families but not for them.

He addressed Quain, who admitted he had "a past record" but didn't specify any offense or offenses. "It's pretty bad, I know," Quain said. but claimed he had straightened out his life.

"You had to turn your life around (to avoid going to prison)," the judge said. "Somebody did. I think the Lord did, but you slipped back."

Bunton noted the men "purported to be sportsmen."

"If there's any sport in using a helicopter to kill," said the judge, "I fail to see it."

"The jury didn't believe your (bear) story," Bunton said. "Your story didn't hold water and still doesn't hold water."

Bunton also referred to the bear cub, which escaped from the defendants' pickup truck while they were eating at a cafe in Sheffield. The bear got loose in "sheep country," noted the judge.

"I will not condone for a minute your activities in this particular case," he said.

Quain and Keller are to begin serving their sentences Aug. 15.

Censured lawmakers say voters will render verdict

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two lawmakers censured by the House for sexual relations with teen-age pages say voters will render the final verdict, and one already plans a month of town meetings in his Illinois farm district to ask forgiveness.

Reps. Daniel B. Crane, R-Ill., and Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass., were forced to stand in disgrace before the House in separate rituals on Wednesday while Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. read the censure resolution.

"The ultimate judge of this matter, however, will be the people of the 10th congressional district of Massachusetts," the 46-year-old Studds said in a statement he read to television cameras on the Capitol lawn. He refused to answer questions.

Crane's aides said the 47-year-old Republican insisted on pushing ahead with 32 town meetings starting Aug. 10 in his southeastern Illinois district, despite their advice to cancel the tour.

"There's some question as to whether we can talk him out of it," press secretary William J. Mencarow Jr. said. "We don't think it's a good idea. We're going to take a little more time and see if we all believe what we believe now."

Crane eluded reporters after the vote. Aides said he did not want to talk.

Studds, who told the House earlier he is a homosexual, was censured after admitting he had sexual relations 10 years ago with a 17-year-old male page. Crane confessed he had relations in 1980 with a 17-year-old page girl.

In both cases, the House upgraded the punishment from the reprimand recommended Thursday by the ethics committee — the lightest possible penalty — to censure. It did not act on a demand by Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., for the expulsion of Crane and Studds from Congress.

"I've lived in terror of someone preying upon" the pages, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., declared in urging the House to invoke a penalty tougher than reprimand. "I never dreamed it would be a member of Congress."

Studds, whose censure means he loses his post as chairman of a Merchant Marine and Fisheries subcommittee, did not apologize. He faced O'Neill, his back to fellow lawmakers, while the speaker read the censure resolution.

Before debate began, Crane apologized in a choked voice "for the shame I have brought down on this instituion."

Crane said he already has been forgiven by his wife, Judy, and six children, who learned of the affair when he dropped his normal schedule at noon Thursday and abruptly flew home to Danville four hours before the ethics committee named him.

Crane voted for his own censure but "present" on the censure of Studds, who voted "present" both times.

The votes on the censure resolutions were 420-3 in the case of Studds and 421-3 in that of Crane.

Aside from Studds' loss of his chairmanship, the only visible difference between the two penalties was that the lawmakers had to stand before the House while the speaker read the censure move. They could have been absent for a reprimand.

Larry Keith Robison leaves the courtroom in Fort Worth after being convicted of capital murder in the death of Bruce Gardner last August 10. The defense argued that Robison was insane at the time of the murder.

Alternate juror says murderer will 'get what he deserves'

FORT WORTH (AP) — An alternate juror, who sat through a week of testimony but did not participate in deliberations, said he is sure that convicted murderer Larry Keith Robison will "get what what he deserves."

Robison, a 25-year-old former mental patient, was convicted Wednesday of capital murder in connection with a killing spree at two cottages near Lake Worth last Aug. 10.

Afterwards, alternate juror Homer Lee Kempe declined to reveal how he would have voted on the life-death issue, but said, "I'm sure he'll get what he deserves. I'm sure he's guilty."

State District Judge Charles Dickens directed the jury to return today for the punishment phase of the trial. The only choices were life in prison or death by lethal injection.

The jury deliberated less than three hours Wednesday before convicting Robison of what prosecutors and defense attorneys agreed was the most savage multiple slaying in the area in recent memory.

The jury rejected the defense contention that Robison was insane when he shot and slashed Bruce Gardner, 33, to death.

In their closing arguments, prosecutors described Gardner as a "poor guy" who "showed up at the wrong time and the wrong place."

Prosecutors said Gardner was killed because Robison needed a "getaway car" to escape the two cottages where four others — including an 11-year-old boy and Robison's 31-year-old roommate — were shot, stabbed and slashed.

Robison also faces capital murder charges in the deaths of Georgia Ann Reed, 34; her son, Scott Reed, 11; her mother, Earline Barker, 55; and Rickey Lee Bryant, with whom Robison had been living in the house adjacent to the Reed residence.

Robison's younger brother, Steve, 23, said the guilty verdict was unexpected.

"I thought he was insane. He was insane. That's all there is to it," the brother said.

Steve Robison said the family would like to see Robison committed to a mental institution for long term treatment.

Members of Gardner's family were present, but declined to comment on the verdict. Prosecutor Larry Moore said he believes the "sheer brutality" of the crimes convinced the jury.

"It's one of the most savage and brutal crimes that I've ever seen," Moore said, noting pictures that show blood smeared on the walls and on the nude body of one of the victims.

Prosecutors said they would introduce evidence today of Robison's past conviction on a theft by check charge, as well as a witness who would testify that Robison sold her drugs several weeks before the five murders at Lake Worth.

Vendors try to cash in on 'Pecos' cantaloupes

PECOS (AP) — Imposters have been trying to cut in on a bumper crop of cantaloupes that producers in this West Texas community say could be one of their best markets ever.

Tom Hardwick, who owns one of only two cantaloupe farms in Pecos, said he noticed roadside peddlers selling vine-ripe, "Pecos" cantaloupes a month ago, even though he won't begin harvesting until August.

"They just label them that because Pecos cantaloupe has always been a choice melon," Hardwick said Wednesday. "But it's not right because none of them were ripe in Pecos then. If there were, seems like someone in Pecos would know about them."

A.B. Foster, whose Pecos Cantaloupe Co. began harvesting last week, said his company probably will produce more than 250,000 cantaloupes this season, slightly more than last year.

But because of adverse weather in California, he expects this year's market value to be exceptional.

Foster said roadside cantaloupe vendors "feel like they sell them better" by using the name of this West Texas town.

The recent dry weather has improved the quantity of cantaloupes, Foster added.

Airplane misses house

ROMINES MILLS, W.Va. (AP) — A Texas pilot's final effort to control his failing aircraft averted greater tragedy, according to witnesses to a plane crash that took the lives of the craft's four occupants.

The twin-engine Piper Navajo caught fire shortly after takeoff Wednesday and crashed in a remote area of Harrison County. As it fell, it skimmed over a house occupied by the family of Cheryl McCormick.

"When I looked out my window I could see the tail coming up. It was right by my bedroom window," she said.

"I figure he saw the house and pulled it back just in time, because he almost came into the house," added Ms. McCormick.

Investigators from the Federal Aviation Administration and National Transportation Safety Board were to begin work today picking through the wreckage.

Four Texans were killed in Wednesday's crash, which occurred shortly before 11 a.m.

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts showers for Friday from the southwest to the northern Plains, for the upper Midwest and most of the Gulf.

No relief forecast for dry plains

There doesn't seem to be any relief — or rain — for the dry, parched plains as the rainfall measurement for the year dips 3½ inches below normal for this time of year.

Sunny skies and hot temperatures are expected to continue through Friday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The promise of light showers have shied away from the area, stablizing the total rainfall at 2.36 inches for the year.

While tonight's low should hover in the upper 60s, Friday's high is expected to heat up to the mid-90s. Southerly winds are expected to breeze through at 10-15 mph.

Wednesday's high of 93 didn't match the record 104 reading in 1936, and the overnight low of 69 was 9-degrees short of the record low of 60 set in 1970.

Administration praises proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, which has said nothing positive about Nicaragua since taking office, is praising a Sandinista proposal for regional peace talks in Central America.

While calling the proposal a positive step, the administration also said in a statement that it contained "a number of serious shortcomings," among them a failure to "deal with Nicaragua's military buildup."

The statement, issued Wednesday at the White House by deputy press secretary Larry Speakes and at the State Department, represented perhaps the least hostile reaction the administration has had to the regime in Managua.

It followed by one day the suggestion by Daniel Ortega, head of the three-man ruling junta of Nicaragua, that peace talks should be held involving Nicaragua, its neighbors, and the foreign ministers of Venezuela, Panama, Mexico and Colombia, known as the Contadora group.

Previously, the Sandinistas had insisted on individual talks with their neighbors and the Reagan administration, as a way of refuting accusations that Nicaragua's close military ties with Cuba and the Soviet Union threatened Central American security.

Meanwhile, the president picked the U.S. ambassador to Argentina, Harry W. Schlaudeman, to be the executive director of a bipartisan commission on Centrl America. Reagan on Tuesday announced creation of the panel to advise him about long-term policy options for the region and to help build a national consensus about Central America.

Schlaudeman is a former assistant secretary of state for Latin American affairs.

Speakes, responding to Ortega's proposal, said "we welcome any sincere and verifiable proposal to lessen tension in Central America."

"Taking Mr. Ortega at his word, we believe the Nicaraguan proposal is a positive step in that it acknowledges the regional nature of the problem and the need to address external support for insurgencies and terrorist groups," Speakes said.

As for the shortcomings, the spokesman said "the proposal seeks to put the insurgents in El Salvador on the same level as the democratically elected government.

"It fails to take into account the need for true democracy as a means to resolve internal problems of the countries of the region," Speakes said. "It does not deal with Nicaragua's military buildup and there are no clearly articulated provisions for effective verification" of any agreement.

He said the administration hopes the proposal, and others advanced in the region, will be "considered, refined and expanded as necessary" by the Contadora group.

Meanwhile, the president, who gave public speeches Monday and Tuesday on Central America, met in private Wednesday with a group of Jewish leaders who discussed what they said was persecution by Sandinistas that has led to the exile of each of Nicaragua's 50 Jews.

Rabbi Morton M. Rosenthal, director of the department of Latin American affairs at the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, said that the Sandinista government, reflecting its ties with the Palestine Liberation Organization, had driven the Jews from the country.

"The president deplored this manifestation of discrimination against Jews and the influence of the PLO in this matter," Rosenthal said.

Isaac Stavisky, one of the president's visitors, said he was forced into exile in Miami shortly before the Sandinistas took power four years ago. He said his life was threatened by a Sandinista and he fled later that day, leaving behind his house and three factories.

Two hours after the verdict, Wright was biting the bullet and licking his wounds. "For what evidence they had, I don't see how they convicted me," he contended. "It's a crying shame what a group of people can do to the state of Texas. The jury sat there and decided the standard for the whole state of Texas and not just my case. They set the morals for everyone...See, by setting standards they could knock Penthouse, Playboy and everything out. The next step would be to go to massage parlors, topless bars."

Prosecutor and county attorney Steve Groh found in the conviction encouragement for further prosecutions of obscenity violations.

"This case is no precedent in a legal case," he said, "but as far as whether six people in Odessa will convict a person for selling pornographic magazines, I think we have the answer today." He called the punishment assessed by jurors "a fairly stiff sentence," one which has significance. "I believe it's hard for anyone to send anybody to jail. It's a momentous decision for any human being to send another human being to jail...The most obvious message is that an Ector County jury has enforced the law, and there is a law against selling obscene material. I would hope that would have some impact."

Cope of Odessans for Decency believes it will. "(Jurors) issued a very strong message to Mr. Wright and gave a very strong warning to other pornographers, so they'd better beware," he said. "We've always felt that once these things were brought to trial, the people of Odessa would find these things obscene. The problem in the past has been they haven't been brought to trial. Most people don't realize what's sold in a so-called adult bookstore; they don't know the extent of degradation and explicitness shown in these materials. When they are finally confronted with it, they're shocked."

Wright's conviction was the first obscenity conviction in Odessa or Ector County since 1980 when another Odessan heard "we find the defendant guilty" — a verdict which recently was overturned by an appellate court.

"It's just guaranteed the (Wright) case will be appealed also," admitted Groh. "And appellate courts are notorious for overturning these kinds of convictions. Assuming his conviction's upheld, it's assured at least a year will pass before he walks into jail."

Even before his punishment had been decided, Wright already was planning to take the case before a higher judge. "We're working on that right now," he said.

But his defense attorney John Cliff was still dwelling on the fact jurors failed to understand that Wright never "shoved anything down somebody's throat," as only consenting adults enter his store. "Availability of these materials is directly proportionate to demand," he maintained. "No one has to go in there; no one has to see this stuff unless they want to. The big fear if you don't crack down on this stuff, they're going to be all over the place is (a falsity). But I think there's a line to be drawn as far as how public you are, how available you make it to minors."

Wright, who only minutes before had been convicted of peddling obscenity in B&L Bookstore, agreed. "I don't want any of that crap in my home," he said. "I wouldn't have it — I've got kids in my house. And I don't sell beastiality, no kiddie porn."

Erotic magazines and books, peep shows, sexual paraphernalia shops. All have been deeply entrenched in this city for years with little formal opposition — until Odessans for Decency started its campaign to stop their sale. The modern-day posse has made headlines, arousing the ire of rock singers and pornographers alike, but the impact its members have had is a matter of debate.

"The little praying done by the moral majority didn't have a damn thing to do with the jury's decision," claimed Wright.

Prosecutor Groh believed the jury's verdict stemmed primarily from the collective understanding of six individuals. "I don't really think the action of any group or organization had an effect on the minds of these jurors," he said. "I think they applied the law as the evidence was presented to them."

"We're just grateful that we've got a man like Steve Groh in the county attorney's office willing to bring prosecution against the pornographers in our city," said Odessans for Decency's Cope. "And we're pleased that we have a sheriff willing to go out and make arrests. We take no credit for it — they're out on the firing line, not us."

But vanquished defense attorney Cliff admitted the group's power. "I feel these prosecutions are an attempt to quieten down the people. Odessans for Decency," he said, charging that the county attorney position "is a political office...People who want to have these materials available don't organize — we don't have an Odessans for Pornography."

Wright, for one, thinks decency forces don't have a chance: "As long as there's sex, men and women in the world, there's gonna be pornography, because there's always going to be somebody who thinks it's dirty." He then added what he believed to be the clincher — "I don't want to go to jail, but the store's still going to be open."

As for county attorney Groh, a lot of work lies ahead: "Over 90 (obscenity) charges have been filed against 12 to 14 individuals and we will proceed to try these cases."

Members of Odessans for Decency, meanwhile, aren't planning to give up anytime soon in their opposition to pornographers. "They won't go down easy — it'll be a long battle," said Cope. "But we are confident that there will be continued arrests and convictions and that these people of Odessa will be able to reclaim their city again."

Heat wave grips nation

A summer heat wave gripped the nation today from the Rockies and the Southwest to the East Coast, while scattered thunderstorms with high winds and hail erupted across the Plains.

The mercury Wednesday hit 107 in Pierre, S.D., 104 in Des Moines, Iowa, 103 in Palm Beach, Calif., and 101 in St. Louis.

In Missouri, the heat was blamed in the deaths of two elderly men and one woman Wednesday. St. Louis County declared a heat emergency and set up 50 air-conditioned shelters for the elderly.

Recent temperatures in the 90s and 100s have been blamed for 21 deaths nationwide, including eight in Georgia and eight in Missouri.

The heat will last through the weekend, said Joan Murray of the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo. The chief cause is a high pressure system stalled from the Tennessee Valley to the Gulf Coast, blocking out cooler air to the north, she said.

Thunderstorms struck the central Appalachians and northern Plains late Wednesday and early today.

Bear killers sentenced to 179 days, fined $6,000

He said the men acted childishly in refusing not to cooperate with investigators of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Both had declined to tell of others who had hunted game while airborne. Such an act is a federal offense.

"You acted like a couple of third-graders," Bunton contended, by saying " 'I don't want to rat or be a tattle-tale on my friends.' "

"You acted like fools," the judge said.

Earlier, the two men had pleaded for mercy — for mitigated sentences — and asked for probation to take care of their business and family responsibilities.

The judge said he had "sympathy" for the men's families but not for them.

He addressed Quain, who admitted he had "a past record" but didn't specify any offense or offenses. "It's pretty bad, I know," Quain said. but claimed he had straightened out his life.

"You had to turn your life around (to avoid going to prison)," the judge said. "Somebody did. I think the Lord did, but you slipped back."

Bunton noted the men "purported to be sportsmen."

"If there's any sport in using a helicopter to kill," said the judge, "I fail to see it."

"The jury didn't believe your (bear) story," Bunton said. "Your story didn't hold water and still doesn't hold water."

Bunton also referred to the bear cub, which escaped from the defendants' pickup truck while they were eating at a cafe in Sheffield. The bear got loose in "sheep country," noted the judge.

"I will not condone for a minute your activities in this particular case," he said.

Quain and Keller are to begin serving their sentences Aug. 15.

Censured lawmakers say voters will render verdict

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two lawmakers censured by the House for sexual relations with teen-age pages say voters will render the final verdict, and one already plans a month of town meetings in his Illinois farm district to ask forgiveness.

Reps. Daniel B. Crane, R-Ill., and Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass., were forced to stand in disgrace before the House in separate rituals on Wednesday while Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. read the censure resolution.

"The ultimate judge of this matter, however, will be the people of the 10th congressional district of Massachusetts," the 46-year-old Studds said in a statement he read to television cameras on the Capitol lawn. He refused to answer questions.

Crane's aides said the 47-year-old Republican insisted on pushing ahead with 32 town meetings starting Aug. 10 in his southeastern Illinois district, despite their advice to cancel the tour.

"There's some question as to whether we can talk him out of it," press secretary William J. Mencarow Jr. said. "We don't think it's a good idea. We're going to take a little more time and see if we all believe what we believe now."

Crane eluded reporters after the vote. Aides said he did not want to talk.

Studds, who told the House earlier he is a homosexual, was censured after admitting he had sexual relations 10 years ago with a 17-year-old male page. Crane confessed he had relations in 1980 with a 17-year-old page girl.

In both cases, the House upgraded the punishment from the reprimand recommended Thursday by the ethics committee — the lightest possible penalty — to censure. It did not act on a demand by Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., for the expulsion of Crane and Studds from Congress.

"I've lived in terror of someone preying upon" the pages, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., declared in urging the House to invoke a penalty tougher than reprimand. "I never dreamed it would be a member of Congress."

Studds, whose censure means he loses his post as chairman of a Merchant Marine and Fisheries subcommittee, did not apologize. He faced O'Neill, his back to fellow lawmakers, while the speaker read the censure resolution.

Before debate began, Crane apologized in a choked voice "for the shame I have brought down on this instituion."

Crane said he already has been forgiven by his wife, Judy, and six children, who learned of the affair when he dropped his normal schedule at noon Thursday and abruptly flew home to Danville four hours before the ethics committee named him.

Crane voted for his own censure but "present" on the censure of Studds, who voted "present" both times.

The votes on the censure resolutions were 420-3 in the case of Studds and 421-3 in that of Crane.

Aside from Studds' loss of his chairmanship, the only visible difference between the two penalties was that the lawmakers had to stand before the House while the speaker read the censure move. They could have been absent for a reprimand.

Larry Keith Robison leaves the courtroom in Fort Worth after being convicted of capital murder in the death of Bruce Gardner last August 10. The defense argued that Robison was insane at the time of the murder.

Alternate juror says murderer will 'get what he deserves'

FORT WORTH (AP) — An alternate juror, who sat through a week of testimony but did not participate in deliberations, said he is sure that convicted murderer Larry Keith Robison will "get what what he deserves."

Robison, a 25-year-old former mental patient, was convicted Wednesday of capital murder in connection with a killing spree at two cottages near Lake Worth last Aug. 10.

Afterwards, alternate juror Homer Lee Kempe declined to reveal how he would have voted on the life-death issue, but said, "I'm sure he'll get what he deserves. I'm sure he's guilty."

State District Judge Charles Dickens directed the jury to return today for the punishment phase of the trial. The only choices were life in prison or death by lethal injection.

The jury deliberated less than three hours Wednesday before convicting Robison of what prosecutors and defense attorneys agreed was the most savage multiple slaying in the area in recent memory.

The jury rejected the defense contention that Robison was insane when he shot and slashed Bruce Gardner, 33, to death.

In their closing arguments, prosecutors described Gardner as a "poor guy" who "showed up at the wrong time and the wrong place."

Prosecutors said Gardner was killed because Robison needed a "getaway car" to escape the two cottages where four others — including an 11-year-old boy and Robison's 31-year-old roommate — were shot, stabbed and slashed.

Robison also faces capital murder charges in the deaths of Georgia Ann Reed, 34; her son, Scott Reed, 11; her mother, Earline Barker, 55; and Rickey Lee Bryant, with whom Robison had been living in the house adjacent to the Reed residence.

Robison's younger brother, Steve, 23, said the guilty verdict was unexpected.

"I thought he was insane. He was insane. That's all there is to it," the brother said.

Steve Robison said the family would like to see Robison committed to a mental institution for long term treatment.

Members of Gardner's family were present, but declined to comment on the verdict. Prosecutor Larry Moore said he believes the "sheer brutality" of the crimes convinced the jury.

"It's one of the most savage and brutal crimes that I've ever seen," Moore said, noting pictures that show blood smeared on the walls and on the nude body of one of the victims.

Prosecutors said they would introduce evidence today of Robison's past conviction on a theft by check charge, as well as a witness who would testify that Robison sold her drugs several weeks before the five murders at Lake Worth.

Vendors try to cash in on 'Pecos' cantaloupes

PECOS (AP) — Imposters have been trying to cut in on a bumper crop of cantaloupes that producers in this West Texas community say could be one of their best markets ever.

Tom Hardwick, who owns one of only two cantaloupe farms in Pecos, said he noticed roadside peddlers selling vine-ripe, "Pecos" cantaloupes a month ago, even though he won't begin harvesting until August.

"They just label them that because Pecos cantaloupe has always been a choice melon," Hardwick said Wednesday. "But it's not right because none of them were ripe in Pecos then. If there were, seems like someone in Pecos would know about them."

A.B. Foster, whose Pecos Cantaloupe Co. began harvesting last week, said his company probably will produce more than 250,000 cantaloupes this season, slightly more than last year.

But because of adverse weather in California, he expects this year's market value to be exceptional.

Foster said roadside cantaloupe vendors "feel like they sell them better" by using the name of this West Texas town.

The recent dry weather has improved the quantity of cantaloupes, Foster added.

Airplane misses house

ROMINES MILLS, W.Va. (AP) — A Texas pilot's final effort to control his failing aircraft averted greater tragedy, according to witnesses to a plane crash that took the lives of the craft's four occupants.

The twin-engine Piper Navajo caught fire shortly after takeoff Wednesday and crashed in a remote area of Harrison County. As it fell, it skimmed over a house occupied by the family of Cheryl McCormick.

"When I looked out my window I could see the tail coming up. It was right by my bedroom window," she said.

"I figure he saw the house and pulled it back just in time, because he almost came into the house," added Ms. McCormick.

Investigators from the Federal Aviation Administration and National Transportation Safety Board were to begin work today picking through the wreckage.

Four Texans were killed in Wednesday's crash, which occurred shortly before 11 a.m.

Presidential hopefuls promise elderly aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan, the oldest president in American history, has been a poor chief executive for the nation's elderly, Democratic presidential hopefuls say, adding that they can do better.

Four of the men chasing the Democratic nomination said specifically that they oppose Reagan's proposed changes in the Medicaid program.

Reagan's proposals are an effort to repeal the health care program "by stealth," Walter Modale told the National Council of Senior Citizens on Wednesday. Alan Cranston added that the cuts are "cruel and callous."

Cranston and Mondale shared the stage with Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina and former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, the first time the candidates have shared the stage.

Previously, the candidates have appeared separately, even when speaking to the same group.

Two of the announced contenders missed the senior citizens' legislative conference, attended by about 3,000 delegates.

SEN. GARY HART OF COLORADO sent his regrets, skipping a another campaign chance to stay on the Senate floor to fight the MX missile.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio was leading a parade in Mondale's home state on Wednesday, as the grand marshal of the Aquatennial Parade in Minneapolis, an event whose theme is space travel.

Reagan, 72, came in for harsh criticism from the candidates who hope to replace him in the Oval Office, particularly for proposed changes in the Medicare program, sought generally with an eye to holding down costs.

Currently, the administration wants a freeze on physician fees and higher premiums for supplemental Medicare coverage in a legislative package designed to save $700 million in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

"Our most immediate and pressing task is to defend Medicare against a ruthless raid by Ronald Reagan and (budget director) David Stockman," said Cranston, who at age 69 is the oldest Democratic contender.

Mondale, 55, also attacked Reagan administration proposals, echoing one of Reagan's favorite lines from his 1980 debate with then-President Carter.

"You might say, 'There he goes again.' He's trying to repeal Medicare by stealth. And we're not going to let him get away with it," Mondale said.

"We need Social Security and we need to keep our hands off. Just keep a good solid program and keep it coming. We need Medicare, not a cheapened reduced version, but a strong Medicare that will pay those hospital bills," the former vice president added.

Subcommittee, White House talks suspended

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a week of negotiations with the White House, a congressional panel investigating alleged political espionage has not obtained permission to search 1980 Reagan campaign files.

The discussions between House subcommittee and Reagan administration representatives were suspended Wednesday amidst reports the negotiations were close to either breaking down or succeeding.

The panel, headed by Rep. Donald Albosta, D-Mich., was scheduled today to discuss the status of the talks, said Joe Grimes, a subcommittee spokesman.

Albosta wants permission to search the collection of campaign files at the Hoover Institution on the campus of Stanford University for any documents from the Carter White House that may have reached the Reagan campaign.

The White House offered to give the subcommittee copies of any Carter documents found in the files by the Justice Department, which is conducting a criminal investigation.

Albosta had threatened to seek congressional subpoenas if subcommittee investigators were not given direct access to the Reagan campaign files.

A source close to the negotiations said that as of late Wednesday afternoon the talks were "very near breaking down or succeeding."

A Lebanese woman weeps as she waits by the entrance of the Summerland hotel for word of family members who were at the hotel when terrorist drove a bomb laden car into the hotel grounds.

Three terrorists detonate car on hotel grounds killing six, wounding 18

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Three terrorists shot their way into Beirut's most luxurious hotel and exploded a bomb-laden car, killing six people and wounding 18, including an Italian peacekeeping soldier, police said today.

They said two bodies were dug out of the rubble this morning, raising the death toll to six in Wednesday's night's attack on the Summerland hotel, packed with guests who had fled sectarian violence in the nearby mountains.

In southern Lebanon, guerrillas shelled settlements in northern Israel Wednesday for the first time in the 13-month-old war, but no injuries were reported.

Police said the hotel terrorists machine-gunned two guards to death and detonated a car packed with explosives, killing two parking lot attendants, starting a raging fire and shattering the hotel's windows. The killers fled, and police said they had no clue as to their identities.

AMONG THE 18 WOUNDED by the blast were an Italian soldier in Beirut's multinational peacekeeping force, and an undetermined number of other people were missing.

Firefighters struggled for three hours to control the blaze, which came only hours after Druse gunners in Lebanon's central mountains shelled Christian east Beirut, killing at three people including a young girl, wrecking five cars and shattering chandeliers at a Greek Orthodox church.

By early today no group had taken responsibility for bombing the hotel, where many residents of the central mountains had sought refuge from the deadly feuding between Druse and Christian militias.

"They escaped the fighting only to be bombed by explosives," said a hotel employee who asked to remain anonymous. He said most of the 102 rooms at the hotel — which is owened by a wealthy Druse family — were occupied.

In Tel Aviv, the Israeli military command said two mortar shells apparently fired by guerrillas in Lebanon exploded near the Israeli border settlements of Hanita and Adamit Wednesday, but caused no casualties.

It was the first time shells fired from Lebanon have landed in Israel since the Israelis invaded Lebanon in June 1982 to smash Palestine Liberation Organization guerrilla bases.

THE SHELLING CAME AFTER the Israeli Cabinet approved a partial pullback of Israeli forces from the central mountains 20 miles south to the Awali River in attempts to reduce guerrilla ambushes that have caused scores of Israeli casualties in recent months and raised opposition to the war at home.

Israeli military commentator Zeev Schiff said Israel would relinquish about 200 square miles of the roughly 1,200 miles now under its control and eventually reduce its 30,000 troops in Lebanon to about 20,000.

Guerrilla group vows to boycott elections

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas seized two radio stations and forced disc jockeys to play cassette recordings declaring their faction would boycott general elections scheduled for the end of the year.

The Popular Liberation Forces, one of five guerrilla groups fighting the U.S.-backed government, declared Wednesday that "elections are not the solution to war." It was not certain whether the other factions also planned to abstain.

"We repeat our proposal for a direct dialogue with imperialism and the dictatorship but give a 'No' in relation to our possible participation in December's electoral farce," said the broadcast.

"The enemy is attempting through the use of the electoral maneuver to prepare conditions for a massive and direct Yankee intervention," said the broadcast from Radio-1080 and Radio Cadena Central, both in the same building in downtown San Salvador.

The guerrillas left the building after the broadcast.

USUALLY, guerrilla policy statements are announced by Radio Venceremos, the clandestine radio station of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, a coalition of the five guerrilla groups.

The Liberation Forces, the most radical of the five, claimed responsibility for the May 29 assasination of Navy Lt. Cmdr. Albert Schaufelberger III, deputy chief of the 55 American noncombat military advisers assigned to El Salvador.

Leftist leaders boycotted the election for the Constituent Assembly, the country's provisional legislature, in March 1982, claiming their candidates had no protection from rightist death squads.

Interim President Alvaro Magana plans to hold elections late this year for a new president, a legislature and local offices. Both his government and the Reagan administration have been trying to induce the leftists to participate.

President Reagan's special envoy to Central America, Richard Stone, failed to meet with leftist leaders July 9-10 because they insisted on negotiations to share power with the government while Stone wanted to discuss their participation in elections.

IN ANOTHER development, a Salvadoran court ordered the former Treasury Police chief to testify in the murders of four American churchwomen on Dec. 2, 1980, according to the court secretary in Zacatecoluca, 35 miles southeast of San Salvador.

Extremists acquitted of charges

BOLOGNA, Italy (AP) — Three right-wing extremists have been acquitted of charges that they placed a bomb aboard a train in 1974 that killed 12 passengers and wounded 47.

The Bologna court, finding there was insufficient evidence after a 29-month-long trial, Wednesday acquitted Mario Tuti, Luciano Franci and Piero Malentacchi.Several spectators whistled disapproval when the judge, Mario Negri, announced the verdict, which the prosecution requested because of lack of evidence.

Malentacchi was set free, but Tuti is serving a life term for killing two policemen in 1975 and Franci is serving a 17-year term for a series of bombings in Tuscany.

The bomb exploded on a train between Florence and Bologna on Aug. 4, 1974, as the northbound express was leaving a tunnel.

Civil commissioner knighted

LONDON (AP) — Falkland Islands Civil Commissioner Sir Rex Hunt, who was detained at gunpoint by Argentine troops invading the disputed British colony in April 1982, has been knighted by Queen Elizabeth II.

"The queen said she was happy things had settled down in the Falklands," Hunt told reporters after the ceremony Wednesday at Buckingham Palace.He flew 8,000 miles from the South Atlantic archipelago to be present.

Hunt was pinned down in Government House in the capital, Stanley, when the Argentine troops landed April 2.His force of 72 Royal Marines — outnumbered 10-1 by Argentine commandos — reported killing 15 Argentines and wounding 17 before surrendering.

The Argentines expelled Hunt and other top British officials three days after the invasion, and he returned after Britain's victory in a 74-day war which cost nearly 1,000 lives. Britain now has a 4,000-man garrison guarding the islands.

Army patrols kill 28 guerrillas

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — The army says its troops killed 28 guerrillas in two clashes in northern Guatemala.

An army patrol killed 23 rebels near the village of Quixal in Alta Verapaz province 78 miles north of the capital, according to a communique issued Wednesday by the armed forces press office.

The clash occurred Tuesday and soldiers confiscated weapons, supplies and documents belonging to an unidentified "clandestine faction," the communique said.

In a separate clash in Quiche province, 160 miles northwest of Guatemala City, soldiers killed five guerrillas and freed 33 peasants who had been held captive by rebels and forced to work for them, the army said.

The army also said guerrillas attacked two police stations Tuesday night.

Storms kill 24 persons

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Flash floods and landslides have killed 24 people along Turkey's Black Sea coast since Tuesday, the state radio reported today.

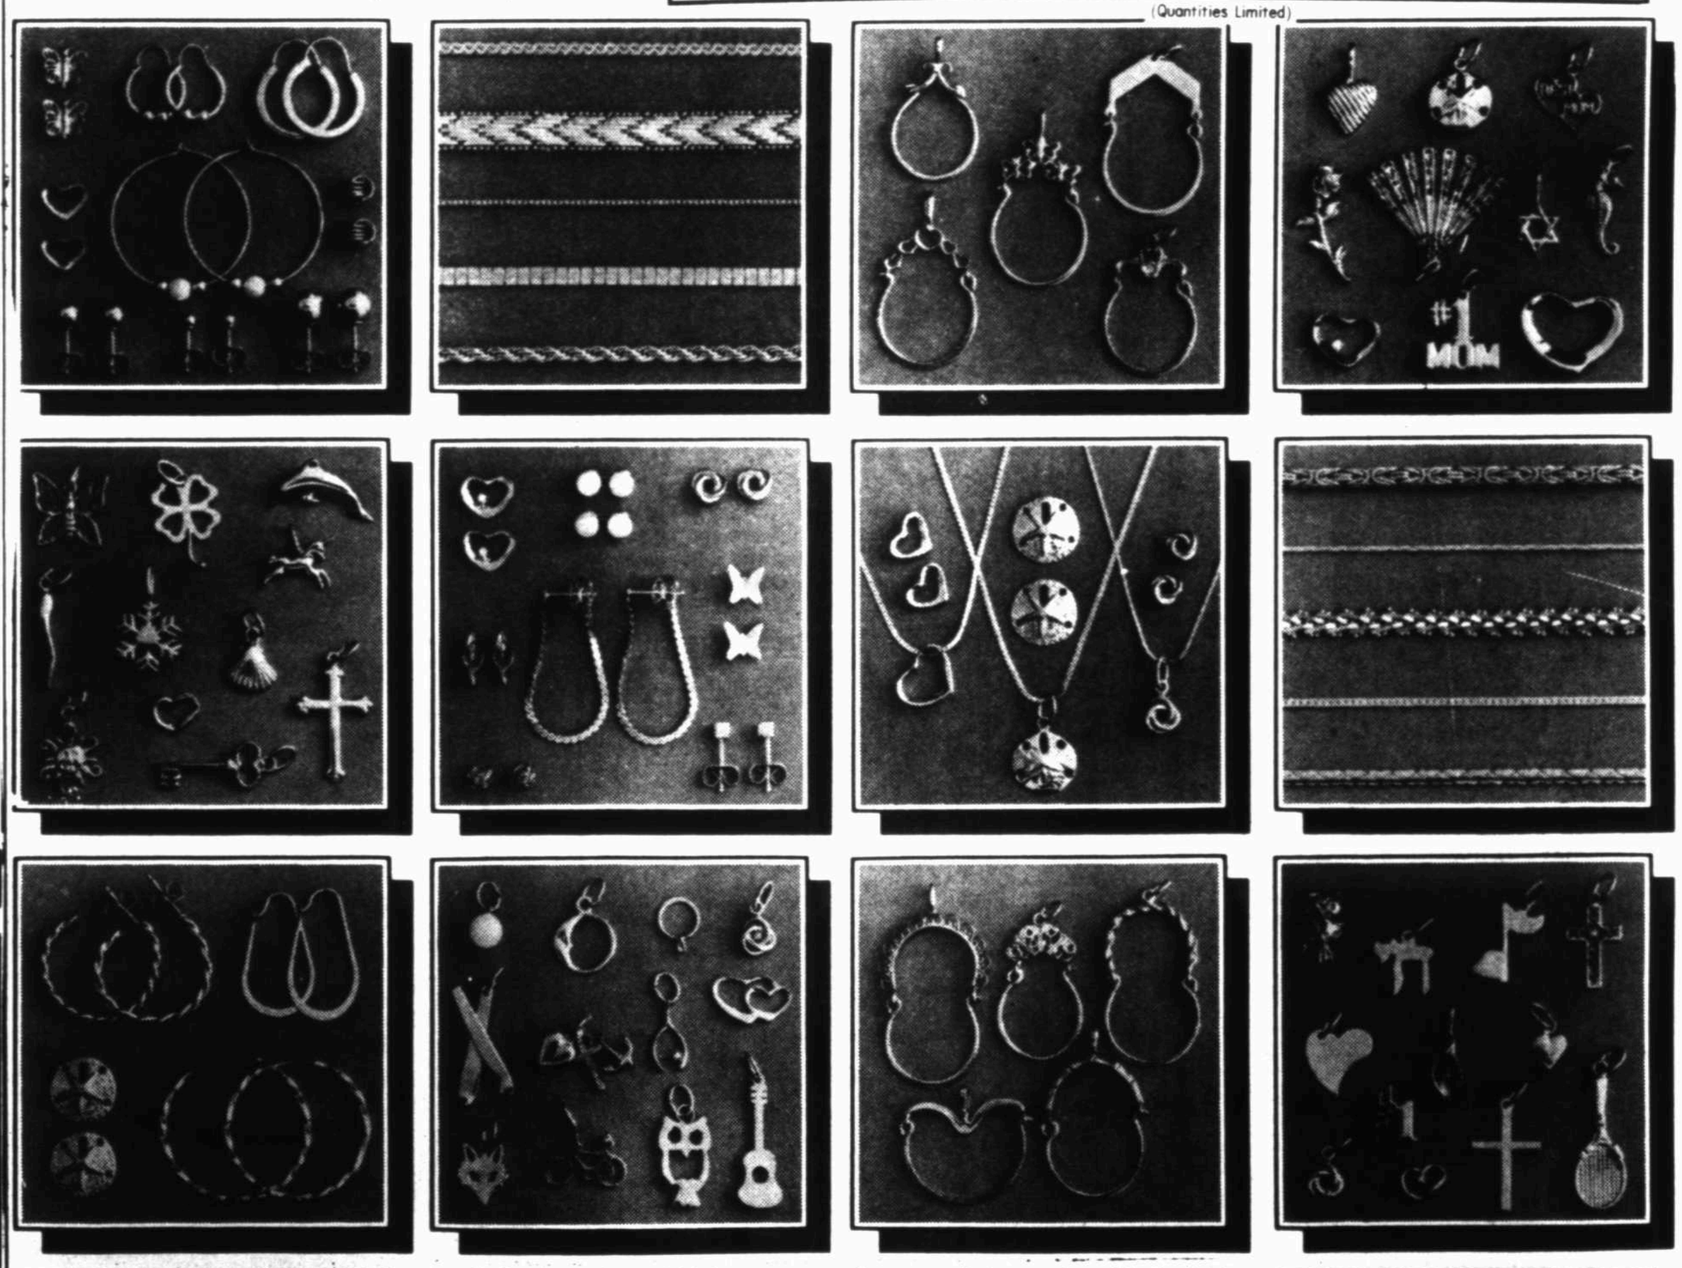

Officials told the radio they fear the death toll will rise as rescue teams reach remote communities in the tea-growing region around Rize.

At least 44 people have been reported killed this month in Turkey, particularly in northern coastal areas, as a result of rain storms.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, July 22, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Fashion designer Oscar de la Renta, Rose Kennedy, actor Terence Stamp, jockey Ron Turcotte and Montreal pitcher Scott Sanderson share this birthday with you. Also born on this date: psychiatrist Karl Menninger, writer Stephen Vincent Benet and sculptor Alexander Calder. Surround yourself with positive thinkers and there will be no career or business mountain too high for you to climb. Strangers judge you by the company you keep. Greater understanding is needed if romance is to succeed. Do not ask others for more than you are able to give in return. Your suspicions are unfounded. Loved one has only your best interests at heart.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Individual effort brings the best results now. Something is going on behind the scenes that explains the boss' present mood. Lie low until you know how the wind is blowing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone asks too many questions. Keep your cool. Find a way to help a friend who is going through a rough time without robbing him of his dignity.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A rejection will not sting long. Keep your eye on your long-range goals. Ask for promises in writing even if good pals are involved. They will thank you later!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do what you know is best for you and the money picture brightens. Lend a friend a shoulder to cry on, but do not take his troubles for your own.

LEO (July 23-Aug.22): You gain widespread support when you take a stand on someone else's behalf. Others try to twist your words. Choose them carefully. A family member's good luck rubs off on you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You find that you have been doing things in spurts and overlooking certain details. Slow down before you make a costly mistake. A friend is sensitive about a particular subject. Avoid it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do your homework before making a presentation or attending an important meeting. You must read the fine print if signing contracts. Plan to spend more time on domestic activities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You seem to be putting the cart before the horse where romance is concerned. Scale down any exaggerated hopes. Loved one may not be willing to make the commitment you want.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make a serious attempt to stick to a schedule today. Someone whose feelings are hurt could set off fireworks. Pay attention to details at work. Higher-ups reward your professionalism.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A romance takes on deeper meaning. Meet your obligations and credit payments promptly. A computer could lighten your work load. Adopt a responsible course of action in settling family disputes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An important family or career transition is featured. Discuss your plans and mutual responsibilities with partner. Dress stylishly for an evening out. You make an excellent first impression.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Plan to accomplish as much work as possible early in the day. Routine tasks may not be very exciting but they are necessary. Get out and socialize tonight!

Peppard tastes success

NEW YORK (AP) — There is a lot of gunfire, but nobody gets shot. There are enormous explosions, but nobody gets burned. There are countless fistfights that could put a guy on a stretcher, but nobody gets bruised.

Move over for "The A-Team," the one substantial hit of the past television season and an important building block in NBC's plan to improve its ratings position in the fall.

It's a success that "A-Team" star George Peppard says he knew would occur, especially after reading the scripts and working for a week with other actors in the show.

"What we're playing is a fantasy. That's the key to it," Peppard said during a recent interview. "The audience knows that we're out for fun. No matter how dreaded the circumstances, they don't have to anticipate anything else but entertainment."

On "The A-Team," Peppard plays Hannibal Smith, leader of a group of renegade Vietnam veterans who go underground in Los Angeles and try to help the underdog. They're urban Robin Hoods rescuing the downtrodden.

"I would say none of the A-Team is looking for a confrontation but if they find one, they are not at all displeased," he said.

"There is something very gratifying (for an audience) about a group of really bad people menacing some poor innocent victim by pulling out a .38, and then our response is to pull out two AR-15 rifles, an M-60 machine gun and grenades," Peppard said. "We're scratching an itch there."

"The A-Team" was a mid-season replacement. The 14 episodes of its first season, including the pilot, were rushed into production. There were 14, 16 and even a few 18-hour working days.

"I got into exhaustion in just the half year we did it," said the 56-year-old Peppard who refers to himself as an ex-jock. "After I'd been working for about a month or two, I realized that I was too tired, so I initiated an exercise program in the morning before I went to work and started pumping iron to build up my stamina."

What keeps him coming back is the role of Hannibal Smith.

"The character lifts me. Hannibal has such a vivid imagination, such a wicked sense of humor, especially in the sense of getting the bad guys," Peppard said. "He just doesn't want to get them, he wants to make it hot for them.

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

"We do the impossible. Miracles take a bit longer!" That could well be the credo of the bridge expert, as this hand testifies.

Both East and West took advantage of the vulnerability to force North to make a decision at a high level. His cue-bid of six clubs was much too aggressive—we would have been content with a double of five clubs. But watch an expert technician at work at a contract which seems to have no play.

West led the top of his club sequence. Declarer perforce won in dummy, came to hand with the king of diamonds and finessed in trumps. When the king dropped under the ace, life was beginning to look up.

A careless declarer would come to hand with the jack of trumps and take a spade finesse. But our South realized that that would lead to defeat—East would return a club after winning a spade honor, and declarer would be locked in dummy and would have to concede a spade.

Instead, declarer elected to play on the chance that East held a doubleton spade honor. He led the jack of spades from the table. East won the queen and forced dummy with a club, but declarer was in command. He accepted the ruff, came to hand with the jack of trumps, in the process drawing the last outstanding trump, and took a spade finesse. When that succeeded, the slam was home.

JIM SERVATIUS, EDITOR

Playing the game

George Will, whose syndicated column appears on this page twice each week, has been the topic of sharp criticism in recent days because of his role in helping prepare Ronald Reagan for his 1980 debate with then-President Jimmy Carter and afterwards critiqueing Reagan's performance.

The columnist has discussed his transgression saying wild horses couldn't drag him to do it again. Will was wrong to do what he did. Response to his act has been swift and harsh, with some newspapers even cancelling his column. He will suffer the consequences of his act: he should.

News people occupy a most unusual niche in American society. We are the holders of the public trust when it comes to both factual information and commentary. When a person agrees to become a journalist, that person knowingly relinquishes the right to participate in "the game" as a player. Instead, that person is required by the ethical standards of the profession to hold himself or herself above reproach in transmitting information to the public.

There's a very basic reason for that philosophy. The American people depend on the news media to keep them informed of significant events in an atmosphere of truth and impartiality. If a news person steps over the line and becomes one of the participants in an event, that person's impartiality is subject to question.

That individual has become one of those shaping the news and not merely reporting it. The line isn't always clearly defined and different news organizations approach the subject in different ways.

It certainly isn't uncommon for those in public office to seek the advice and counsel of journalists. But for a working journalist to oblige is professionally improper and bring into question the ethics of all journalists.

For Will to first "coach" Mr. Reagan for his debate with Carter and then, only hours later, to critique Reagan's debate performance for an American public unsuspecting of his role in the debate was clearly wrong.

Even if Will believed the circumstances surrounding the debate and upcoming election at that time made his actions justifiable, they didn't. You can't play the game and remain an unbiased observor, too.

Cheerful upturn

The economic health of many countries depends on the economic health of the United States. A statement like this has to be properly qualified, for economic interdependence can be a rather loose relationship, and nations that do follow America's economic cycles often do so after a considerable time lag.

The good news of this summer of 1983, however, is that the continuing recovery in the United States has a contagious quality. It is infecting stagnant economies in other parts of the world, and causing them to recover.

West Germany is a good example, and so is Japan. When this nation was down in the economic dumps for 18 months, so were Great Britain and Canada, and other industrial nations. Now that the United States is springing back, at a speed faster than predicted by many economists, so are these other nations.

As President Reagan frequently points out when discussing the American economy, we still have a way to go. So do the above-mentioned nations.

But a realistically optimistic Reagan always points out that we already have come a long way. He says the recovery is real and uses the word "sparkling" to describe our economy.

What has happened since last November bears witness to the validity of his cheerful conclusion. So does what is happening to the economies in West Germany, Great Britain and Japan. The USA can be pleased with its leadership in this economically interdependent world.

Another View:

A turn at fraud

Debates over the defense budget usually focus on big new weapons like the MX missile and the B-1 bomber. The need for thinking big is self-evident in a world where Caspar Weinberger's Defense Department dreams of spending more than $1.8 trillion over the next five years — that's almost a billion dollars in military expenditures every day of the year — to beef up our defenses. But the evidence mounts that mismanagement and shady dealings, both by the Pentagon and by defense contractors, are costing taxpayers a tidy sum.

Consider these stories, all brought to light in recent months:

— Savings of $18 billion for major weapons programs, claimed by the Pentagon, turned out to be phony. The Pentagon had resorted to such tactics as renaming seven submarines, then saying that they had been cut from the budget.

— Nearly $33 billion in new weapons systems has been put into production that drives up procurement costs.

— The Naval Air Systems Command bought four minor replacement parts for F-18 aircraft radar test stations from McDonnell Douglas, paying almost half a million dollars more than the list price for the same items. This isn't an isolated case; since 1980, the price of spare parts for aircraft engines has ballooned by as much as 1,000 percent.

— The Navy's attempt to fudge the books on the F-18 fighter-bomber program, concealing cost overruns, may wind up boosting the price tag of the plane by nearly a billion dollars.

It wasn't supposed to turn out this way under "Cap the Knife" Weinberger, the man who went to the Pentagon with a reputation for cost-cutting efficiency. But a report on defense spending requested by President Reagan found that things were "crazy," in the words of J. Peter Grace, who chaired the commission. The study concludes that the government could save $92 billion over a three-year period simply by managing the defense system less wastefully.

Ninety-two billion dollars. Numbers like that numb the mind, but consider this: The military savings projected by the Grace Commission would pay for the federal portion of Aid to Families With Dependent Children for the next 15 years. Just imagine what this administration would say if similar stories of deception, chiseling and bungled management and old-fashioned fraud appeared not about the Pentagon but about welfare or food stamps.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

About-face worries allies

WASHINGTON — Is the Reagan administration going "soft" on the Polish communist regime? This may seem out of character for President Reagan, but our European allies are worried about just that.

Jack Anderson

The issue is whether to lift the economic sanctions imposed on Poland after Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski promulgated martial law in December 1981. Administration sources say that for months the West Europeans have been urging the U.S. government to go slow in resuming friendlier relations with the Polish military regime.

Then last week, as a result of judicious leaks to the press, it was disclosed that the United States had unilaterally negotiated a secret deal with the Poles that would thaw the chilly relations of the past year-and-a-half. Undersecretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger and Polish Charge d'Affaires Zdzislaw Ludwiczak were trying to work out a quid pro quo: lifting of some U.S. sanctions in return for release of Polish political prisoners.

Eagleburger is a leader of the so-called "detentist" group in the administration, which has been pushing for normalization of U.S.-Polish relations. The detentists were devastated by the premature revelation of the secret negotiations; the result may be that the deal will fall through — to the immense satisfaction of administration hardliners.

The hardline vs. detente argument within the Reagan administration has its counterpart in discussions with the West Europeans. Though our allies were initially slow to heed the U.S. call for sanctions against Poland, they are now showing the true convert's zeal and opposing what they see as the Reagan administration's sudden about-face.

Administration sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado the Europeans feel the United States is naive if it believes Jaruzelski will do anything he doesn't have to, and would be foolish to give anything away without fundamental changes by the Polish regime — in advance.

Interestingly, it is France's Socialist president, Francois Mitterrand, not the more conservative British and West German leaders, who is urging caution. The old World War II underground fighter is worried about the effect that detente with the Polish military regime will have on the outlawed Solidarity movement. The French argue that Pope John Paul's visit to Poland last month revived the opposition.

They believe Solidarity leaders' morale and determination to persevere were bolstered by the pope's pointed references to "solidarity" in his speeches, and his not-so-subtle criticism of the military regime and the suffering it has caused the Polish people. They fear that any premature accommodation between Jaruzelski and the West could shatter the resistance movement's morale.

This isn't the first time the Europeans have tried to cool the administration's ardor. Even before the pope's visit, an interagency group headed by the State Department persuaded President Reagan to sign a secret options paper that would have allowed a conciliatory gesture toward Poland at that time. The Europeans persuaded the administration to wait at least until after the papal visit.

Now they're continuing to urge the White House not to rush into detente willy-nilly.

FOXY FRITZ: Sen. Ernest "Fritz" Hollings, D-S.C., is a shrewd businessman, no doubt about it. According to his income tax returns, which he made available to me, the Democratic presidential hopeful made more than $1 million in the stock market last year.

Between 1976 and 1980, Hollings bought 45,000 shares of stock in an electronics and machine-tool firm called Giddings and Lewis. He hung onto the stock until the company merged last year; then he sold his shares for a grand total of $1,350,000. That left him with a tidy capital gain of more than a million.

• • •

UNDER THE DOME: Capitol Architect George White laid out $71,578.26 for three marble and cherrywood "security desks" in the fancy-shmancy Hart Senate Office Building. A scandalized Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., demanded to know why, and got this gem of bafflegab from White: "The fundamental design principle for these security stations... was that they should provide a level of appearance, quality and durability commensurate with the stature of the building and the need to endure." Baucus isn't satisfied; he wants an investigation.

— Two Manx cats, Abigail and Emily, have lived in Sen. John Melcher's office for years, and when the Montana Democrat moved into the new Hart building, the tailless felines went along, but with evident misgivings. For weeks they hid in the senator's inner office, and only recently have ventured out. One now beds down regularly in the office computer room, soothed by the electronic purring.

— Sen. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, likes to keep 'em happy at home. When a visiting constituent presented the senator with a Vanda orchid lei and asked him to wear it on the Senate floor, as is the custom in the Hawaiian legislature, Matsunaga obligingly strolled onto the floor wearing the floral neckpiece, and sat silently at his desk for five minutes while the constituent beamed from the gallery.

GEORGE F. WILL

Raising Hollings' dander

WASHINGTON — An NAACP official says the candidates are "six of the dullest, non-charismatic, unattractive white men the Democratic Party could run." That is silly. But the NAACP is abusing the right to be silly when it gives Fritz Hollings an "F" on its "report card" rating senators' voting records.

George F. Will

At its convention, the NAACP treated two persons shabbily. George Bush was booed by persons who do not remember, or perhaps care, that in 1968 he was one of only five Southern congressmen who voted for open housing legislation. And Hollings was denounced for having voted "wrong" all but 39.8 percent of the time as a senator.

Hollings' dander is rarely far down, and when it is up it is stimulating. The fellow who said that the absence of honest emotion is a characteristic of professional wrestling and national politics should have seen Hollings advising the NAACP that its report card is a "travesty."

Part of his problem is, properly understood, an asset in a national leader: He has been in politics for eons — 34 years. He was governor (1959-63) when race relations in South Carolina more closely resembled those in 1883 than in 1983. He integrated Clemson University, the State College Board of Trustees and the state law enforcement division. He was the first Southern governor to endorse John Kennedy — when even Kennedy's Catholicism was a problem in the South.

(A footnote on how far we have come: Kennedy offered to make Abe Ribicoff attorney general. Ribicoff — then Connecticut's governor, later a senator — declined, arguing that if the first Catholic president had a Jewish attorney general that might generate unnecessary turmoil, especially in the South, in the coming civil rights controversies. Ribicoff became secretary of health, education and welfare.)

The NAACP's report card is, like all such rating systems, misleading. In a single year a senator can cast 500 recorded votes on the floor (the Senate has averaged 505 such votes per year during the last four years) and 2,000 more in committees. Any rating based on a few dozen votes obscures more than it reveals.

For 1982, the NAACP said Hollings' grade rose to 74.1 percent correct. His sins included support for a balanced budget amendment, for a less-than-the-most-expensive jobs bill (the bill he supported passed), and four busing-related votes (he opposes busing). He missed two votes about which the NAACP cared, and the NAACP counted missed votes as votes against its positions.

For 1981, Hollings' score was 66.7 percent. In addition to four busing-related votes, four "wrong" votes were on budget questions. One concerned school lunches and child nutrition. Hollings fought in the Budget Committee to preserve existing levels of funds. On the floor, Ted Kennedy tried to add funds exceeding the budget resolution. Hollings, having made commitments in the struggle to maintain funding levels, opposed Kennedy. So Hollings (author, by the way, of the WIC program — women, infants and children nutritional program) was criticized by the NAACP for doing what was necessary, and what Kennedy was not in a position to do, to protect an existing program.

The NAACP opposes tuition tax credits, as does Hollings. But he has cast six "wrong" votes for such credits for college tuitions — usually in exchange for votes against credits for primary and secondary school tuitions. He has been the foremost opponent of those credits — yet the NAACP has given him six "wrong" votes and only one "correct" vote on the issue. The NAACP opposes a lower minimum wage for teen-agers — in spite of overwhelming evidence that a lower minimum would increase teen-age employment. Hollings favors the "youth differential," and so has 11 "wrong" votes.

The NAACP has counted votes against cloture (shutting off debate) as "wrong." In 1980, Hollings cosponsored a fair housing bill but opposed imposing cloture on opponents. He did the same thing in 1972 regarding the Equal Opportunity Enforcement Act. In both cases his and the NAACP's side prevailed in the end, but the NAACP recorded two anti-cloture votes against him.

A private research organization says the median income of black families, which was 55 percent of white families' in 1960, was just 56 percent in 1981. This is primarily because the portion of black families headed by women has more than doubled to almost 50 percent, and only 55 percent of black men over age 16 are employed today, down from 74 percent in 1960. Surely the best president for blacks is whoever can restore economic health, period. The NAACP's report card is an exercise in irrelevancy.

SPEAKING OUT

Dallas LULU's alive in Midland

A Midland resident since 1976, Lawrence H. Connolly holds a degree from the University of Texas at Austin School of Architecture.

By LAWRENCE H. CONNOLLY

I have been watching with interest the Greenville/Matilda Street LULU (locally unwanted land use) in Dallas newspapers for several months to see how another community would resolve a conflict that Midland had also. It involved changing two streets with restaurants, shops and residences into a one-way couplet. East Dallas homeowners and merchants bitterly opposed the plan and asked their pro-neighborhood city council to defeat it.

The issue involved in this LULU was that East Dallas is a revitalized older neighborhood between the suburbs and downtown and acts as a bottleneck for commuter traffic. Greenville and Matilda homeowners and merchants banded together and contended that the proposed one-way couplet through their neighborhood would adversely affect their quality of life. They feared the plan would: increase speed and volume of traffic, increase noise and pollution, present a danger for school children and hurt the visual character of their neighborhood.

The Dallas City Planning Commission had two defenses for their proposal. Their first line of defense was that it had been on the books for a long time. Jim Schutze in the Dallas Times Herald spent a commentary responding to that rationale. He concluded that a truly conservative power structure should do everything in its power to maintain the viability of a neighborhood and not act like liberal social scientists cramming a lot of inflexible central planning down the throats of East Dallas residents.

The Planning Commission's second defense was that "the interests of the entire city had to be considered and not just the individual neighborhoods." Mark Leach in the Dallas Observer countered this logic by noting that "turning East Dallas streets into highways will not benefit everyone. If you weaken a part of the city, you weaken the whole city."

Mr. Leach further commented that "when people who shape this city, especially developers, consistently put technical proficiency above aesthetic needs, the result is a sterile environment. East Dallas is not a wealthy area, but it is a successful community and it should be protected. Dallasites should recognize a good thing when they see it."

The result of this LULU was that the proposal was unanimously defeated by the Dallas City Council along with other proposals to widen East Dallas streets.

Greg Marcy of the Lower Greenville Merchants Association hailed the council's action as a wise decision for the whole city. "Sometimes the hallmark of a great city is when it has the sense to keep what it has already created."

Substitute Louisiana/Michigan Avenues for Greenville/Matilda Streets, East Dallas for Midland High area, Midlanders for Dallasites and you have the issues surrounding our own LULU. Given the above, what amazes me is that Midland's City Council, in a 4-2 vote in favor of the one-way streets, arrived at an opposite solution to the same problem. The result is that the worst possible fears of East Dallas residents have been realized in Midland.

Bill Modisett in the Reporter-Telegram recently noted that normal drivers on Texas' one-way portion experience a Jeckyl and Hyde sort of transformation and become Indy racers. This sort of driver metamorphosis is not the exclusive territory of Illinois and Texas. Venture north to Michigan's one-way and witness a 24-hour road race through a residential neighborhood. Pickup drivers test the limits of their vehicle's road adhesion on the S curves at Broadway. Normally docile family sedans become airborne at the intersections of "B" and "N." The deteriorating asphalt at these intersections substantiates this.

It is not a simple matter of enforcing the speed limit, rather as Mr. Modisett has observed, the one-way street designation adversely affects otherwise normal drivers. I just hope that it doesn't take the tragic death of a child, in crossing the neighborhood expressway, for the Midland City Council to realize the monster they have created not only for my neighborhood but for all of Midland.

Soldier hospitalized after shell explodes during test firing

EL PASO (AP) — A soldier remained hospitalized in satisfactory condition today as investigators tried to determine why a cannon shell exploded during the test firing of an air defense artillery weapon, Army officials said.

The accident took place Tuesday night about 30 miles north of El Paso on the Dona Ann range and injured five New Mexico National Guard soldiers, said Sgt. Maurice Butler, a Fort Bliss spokesman.

Spec. 4 John Lucero, of Socorro, N.M., was reported in satisfactory condition today at Beaumont Army Medical Center after undergoing surgery Wednesday to remove a fragment from his eye, Butler said.

Pfc. David Alarid, also of Socorro, was released from the hospital Wednesday after undergoing treatment for minor burns and shrapnel wounds, the spokesman said.

Mexicans will boost enrollment

HOUSTON (AP) — Mexican immigrants hungry for an education will boost the enrollment at Texas colleges in the next 10 years, the former commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service says.

Leonel Castillo said Wednesday that Mexican-Americans must bring the immigrants "into our educational institutions...and with them, we can build a much stronger presence for La Raza in this country."

Castillo, who delivered the keynote address at the two-day convention of the Texas Association of Chicanos in Higher Education, said most aliens contribute in both cultural and monetary terms to Texas and American society in general.

Texans honor Challenger crew

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Texas congressmen honored Robert Crippen of Beaumont, Sally Ride and other astronauts of the Challenger crew at an early morning reception Wednesday, arranged at the capitol by Rep. Jack Brooks.

The NASA space center is in Brooks' district. Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, and Rep. Solomon Ortiz, D-Corpus Christi, were among the 20 congressmen who showed up.

"The astronauts wanted to meet some congressmen on an informal level so I arranged the event," said Brooks.

Lots of beer brewing in Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas produces more beer than any state except Wisconsin, but Texans' per capita consumption ranks only sixth, according to a University of Texas researcher.

Economist Joseph Pluta said Texas' per capita consumption is 30.1 gallons. Nevada is the top beer drinking state, downing 39.6 gallons per capita. The other states drinking more beer than Texans are Wisconsin, New Hampshire, Montana and Wyoming.

The UT Bureau of Business Research report — called "Regional Change in the U.S. Brewing Industry" — documents the shift of the beer industry to the South and West.

Texas brews 16.7 million barrels of beer a year, second to top-ranked Wisconsin's production of almost 23 million barrels.

"The South has experienced a rate of growth in per capita beer consumption triple that of the United States as a whole, twice that of the rapidly growing West region, and over 7½ times greater than that of the Northeast," he said.

Circus to perform in prison

SUGAR LAND (AP) — Clowns, elephants, show horses and other circus stars have volunteered to perform in an arena their audience is compelled to live in — the central unit of the Texas prison system.

Performers from the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus were to put on a 75-minute show for inmates today, officials said.

Circus spokesman Joe Gold said a 42-foot ring had been built for the performance, which was to feature parts of 14 acts.

The show will mark the first time the circus has gone behind Texas prison walls, Gold said.

Gold said a clown, ringmaster and elephant rider were to be picked from the audience.

Texans named to VA committee

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Two Texans have been named to the first Veterans Administration Committee on Women Veterans.

They are Carlos Martinez of San Antonio, executive director of the GI Forum's National Veterans Outreach program, and Sarah McClendon of Tyler and Washington, journalist and author.

First panda born in United States

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ling-Ling gave birth to a panda cub today at the National Zoo, the first born in the United States and the sixth born outside China. But zoo authorites said the baby hadn't moved in more than an hour and fear it may have died.

The giant panda gave birth at 3:18 a.m. EDT, to the tiny cub, about the size of a stick of butter, said Mike Morgan, a zoo spokesman.

But, at 7:40 a.m., Dr. Robert Hoag, special assistant to the zoo director, said, "We suspect it may be dead. ... It doesn't look good right now."

Morgan said that the cub, which Ling-Ling was cuddling to her breast, hadn't moved since 6:30 a.m. and that a medical team would attempt to remove the baby from its mother's grasp.

He said the team would try to distract Ling-Ling and scoop up the cub with a net or, if the mother goes into her den, lock the door to the den and take the cub.

"Everyone is very somber," he said.

Earlier, he had told a reporter, "It is impossible to determine the weight, sex and size of the cub, but it appears to be normal."

The paternity of the baby is uncertain. The father is either Hsing-Hsing, the male panda that mated with Ling-Ling last March or Chia-Chia, whose frozen sperm was used the same week to artificially inseminate Ling-Ling.

Morgan said the cub was born 124 days after Ling-Ling mated with Hsing-Hsing. She was also artificially inseminated during the same heat period with semen obtained from Chia-Chia.

Morgan said that Ling-Ling had held the baby to her breast but it could not be determined if she were actually feeding it.

"Ling-Ling is an inexperienced mother," Morgan said, adding that the zoo would conduct an around-the-clock watch "to make sure Ling-Ling continued the excellent care she is already providing."

If there ever was a planned birth for man or mammal, this was it.

For seven years now, zookeepers have been hoping that Ling-Ling and Hsing-Hsing would start a family. Every spring Ling-Ling, now 12, would come into heat. But each time, Hsing-Hsing, six months younger, couldn't figure out what was expected of him.

Consulting with panda experts from around the world, zookeepers analyzed Ling-Ling's health, charted her moods, put her on a diet, imported lovers, televised her trysts and — when all else failed, inseminated her artificially.

At one point, zoo public relations officials issued a press release explaining that the pandas "have been unable to align themselves in an effective breeding posture." At another, they solemnly assured reporters the pandas were not homosexuals.

When it was determined three years ago that Hsing-Hsing had a low sperm count, zoo officials had frozen semen from the British panda flown in from London, and Ling-Ling was inseminated artificially.

That didn't take. So zoo officials brought in not just panda sperm, but Chia-Chia, the panda himself.

But like many an arranged mating, the animals did not get along. Ling-Ling became so bruised and battered that even artificial insemination was impossible.

Finally last March, Hsing-Hsing figured it out. To the delight of long-frustrated panda watchers, he and Ling-Ling mated.

Ling Ling, Washington's female giant panda is shown at Washington's National Zoo in March shortly before she was artificially inseminated. Ling-Ling gave birth early Thursday. The baby is the first born in the United States and the sixth to be born outside China.

Photographers recorded the event with X-rated pictures.

As an extra precaution, doctors artificially inseminated Ling-Ling with sperm from both Hsing-Hsing, as well as imported sperm from Chia-Chia. The medical team consisted of nine doctors, including an anesthesiologist from Children's Hospital, a reproductive physiologist from the National Institutes of Health and a reproductive biologist from London.

Morgan explained before the birth that paternity will be determined by comparing tissue samples of the cub and both sperm donors when the baby is old enough to have tests made.

Three pandas have been born in Mexico City; two survived. Twin pandas were born last year in Madrid, and one survived.

Because panda babies are so small and their mothers so big and furry, it is difficult to tell when a panda, like 250-pound Ling-Ling, is pregnant. And zoo officials have been reluctant to disturb Ling-Ling with medical tests.

House votes to keep MX money in defense bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second time in nearly two months, the House has approved money sought by President Reagan for the controversial MX missile, this time by a much closer vote.

By a vote of 220-207, the House refused Wednesday to cut from a 1984 defense authorization bill $2.56 billion to build 27 of the planned 100 MX missiles.

The proposal to delete MX funds drew support from moderate Democrats led by Majority Leader Jim Wright, who expressed concern over Reagan's commitment to arms control and the need to curtail defense spending.

"I have concluded that the nation which cannot afford to educate its young cannot afford every new military gadget it craves," Wright said.

A measure to authorize $625 million to test the 10-warhead weapon passed by the much wider margin of 239-186 on May 24. Opponents will get another chance to block production when the House votes on an appropriation bill for the weapon, probably in September.

The Senate leadership, meanwhile, moved to shut off debate on the MX missile that has been waged for nine days by opponents led by Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo. Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., needed votes from 60 of the Senate's 100 members to limit debate to an additional 100 hours.

Court rules against lawyer

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The Iowa Supreme Court has ruled that a convicted child murderer who became a jailhouse lawyer does not deserve special privileges and will have to consult with clients at the law library, in the prison yard or at mealtimes.

Robert A. Williams was initially allowed to use a counseling area to meet other inmates, including those in protective custody or maximum security. But when Charles Higgins became the prison's supervisor for counseling, Williams' privileges ended.

Williams was twice convicted of first-degree murder in the slaying of a 10-year-old girl more than a decade ago.

No flight plan filed for plane

CLEVELAND (AP) — No flight plan was filed for a small plane that crashed at Hopkins International Airport, killing five people, a federal official says.

The plane, a twin-engine Aero Commander Model 685, crashed in an industrial park as it approached the airport Wednesday, said George Doughty, director of port control for the city.

Parts of the plane hit three buildings, forcing their evacuation, officials said. There were no injuries to people on the ground.

George H. Seidlein, a National Transportation Safety Board investigator, said no flight plan had been filed for the plane, which was registered to a Charles Wessinger of Portland, Ore.

Liquor store owner sues youths

MANVILLE, N.J. (AP) — A $200,000 lawsuit filed against two teen-agers who allegedly bought alcohol using fake identification should "stop all these kids from coming in and lying," an attorney says.

"If you bang a kid for $50,000, he's going to realize you're serious," attorney Donald Chase said Wednesday.

Liquor store owner Irene Cyburt, whose business was closed five days for selling beer and brandy to two 18-year-olds, filed the suit Monday in Superior Court in Trenton.

Executives to comply with law

DOVER, Del. (AP) — News executives have indicated they will comply with a new law that requires newspapers in Delaware to publish the names of criminals released to a supervised custody program.

"No one at our newspaper has expressed moral opposition" to the law, said Lee Ann Walling, news editor of the Delaware State News.

Brian Donnelly, publisher of the Wilmington News-Journal newspapers, the largest in Delaware, said, "If it's the law, we'll comply with it, but we haven't looked at it closely enough to know what we're going to do.

Ex-EPA official goes to trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rita M. Lavelle, the former Environmental Protection Agency official in charge of toxic waste cleanup, faced a federal trial today on charges of contempt of Congress.

Ms. Lavelle's attorney James Bierbower said he would demand a jury trial in the case to be heard by U.S. District Judge June L. Green.

The former EPA official was cited by the House of Representatives for contempt in May after she defied two subpoenas to testify before the House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee.

That panel was one of a half-dozen committees investigating EPA's handling of the $1.6 billion "superfund" program to clean up abandoned chemical waste dumps. Ms. Lavelle was the assistant EPA administrator in charge of that program until she was fired by President Reagan on Feb. 7.

Throughout the process, Ms. Lavelle has insisted that she wants to cooperate with congressional investigators and is willing to testify.

She has attributed her problems to the committee's failure to schedule an appearance between job-hunting trips to California. However, committee investigators have said Ms. Lavelle made no attempt to schedule an alternate date.

After she was indicted on the contempt charge by a federal grand jury, Ms. Lavelle sought to have the charge dismissed, arguing that the committee had failed to guarantee to pay her air fare from California to appear.

She also charged that the government was engaged in selective prosecution since a similar contempt of Congress citation against her boss, former EPA Administrator Anne M. Burford, was never presented to a grand jury.

Her motion to dismiss the charge was rejected by Judge Green with the comment; "See you on the 21st."

No Names have coach

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — San Antonio's new United States Football League team doesn't have a name yet, but now it has a head coach to go along with a steaming controversy surrounding the team's ownership.

Gil Steinke, former Texas A&I coach and athletic director, was named Wednesday to head the expansion team, which begins play in 1984.

Steinke, 63, was working in real estate in Kingsville before South Texas rancher Clinton Manges talked him into joining the team as executive vice president of South Texas Sports Inc., the investment group.

Manges has put up $6 million for the local USFL team, which still has not been given a name.

Meanwhile. the verbal battle between Manges and San Antonio attorney Pat Maloney, who had been listed as one of the franchise's owners, took a new twist Wednesday night as Maloney threatened to sue Manges.

Maloney's anger stemmed from a brief statement Manges made Tuesday night, saying Manges was "the sole owner" of the club.

"No one other than myself has a financial investment in the USFL San Antonio franchise," Manges said.

Maloney earlier said the franchise could be "dead" if a group of environmentalists sued to halt the expansion of Alamo Stadium, leased by Manges' investment group from the San Antonio Independent School District.

The group later denied making the threat, the San Antonio Express-News reported.

Manges' statement included a list of people authorized to speak for the franchise, which did not include Maloney's name.

Upon returning Wednesday from Jackson, Miss., Maloney called Manges "a despicable liar and a fraud" and said he would file suit.

On Tuesday, Maloney said Manges "is a liar and a fraud to suggest that I am not part of South Texas Sports.

"There would be no South Texas Sports without Pat Maloney," he said. "There would be no USFL team without Pat Maloney. That statement must be one of self-deception and hallucination."

Maloney said he owns 25 percent of the team and that Manges earlier tried to reduce the share to 15 percent.

"Now he waits until I'm out of town..." Maloney said. "That's his style of business.

"Our commitment is to the city of San Antonio and not to this small, insidious man," he said. "I have been totally committed to bringing pro football to San Antonio. It's a shame that one man can destroy it. I hope he doesn't."

Barbara Steen, the public relations spokeswoman for the USFL team, said Manges did not plan to comment beyond his Tuesday night statement.

West shatters East, 10-4

Midland's Hatcher helps with homer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — San Antonio Dodger lefthander Sid Fernandez struck out seven and gave up two hits in four innings to lead the West to a 10-4 victory over the East in the 45th annual Texas League All-Star Game Wednesday night.

Fernandez, the league's strikeout leader, was named most valuable player. He picked up the win before 8,093 fans at Dudley Field.

The win was especially gratifying to the 220-pound fireballer because "it was my first All-Star game," he said.

It may not be his last.

Fernandez, touted by some baseball experts as the "next Fernando Valenzuela," is the TL's leading strikout artist, with 137 in 104 innings. He also has a slim 2.59 ERA.

El Paso third baseman Bill Max knocked in three runs with three singles as the West pounded out 20 hits. The East managed only seven hits.

Tulsa lefthander Rob Clark took the loss, giving up four runs and seven hits in two innings.

Jackson's Joe Georges started the contest for the East and gave up three runs on nine hits in 2 1/3 innings.

Shreveport first baseman Mark Schuster went 2-for-4 to lead the losers.

Midland's Bill Hatcher, Beaumont's John Kruk and Arkansas' Mark Salas each clubbed homers.

Hatcher, Kruk, Beaumont's Mark Gillaspie, El Paso's Carlos Ponce, Earnest Riles and Max had three hits apiece.

El Paso, Midland, Beaumont and San Antonio made up the West. The East squad was comprised of the best from Jackson, Shreveport, Tulsa and Arkansas.

Fernandez gave up one run in the fourth on a bloop double and Jackson third baseman Kevin Mitchell's single.

The West got four of its runs in the fifth inning, with a two-run single by Max off reliever Rob Clark the key blow.

The West scored first, getting a run in the bottom of the first. Riles singled and scored after consecutive singles by Kruk and Gillaspie.

Four hits in the third, including Hatcher's 450-foot solo homer, padded the West lead to 3-0.

The East nicked Fernandez for the fourth-inning run, and closed to 3-2 in the fifth on an RBI single by Arkansas' Rod Booker after Shreveport's Randy Gomez had doubled off Midland's Darrel Banks.

The West's four-run explosion in the bottom of the inning put the game out of reach.

Cowboys' Walls retires

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The agent for Everson Walls says Dallas' All-Pro cornerback, unhappy with his contract negmtiations, has announced his intention to retire in telegrams sent to National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle and the Cowboys.

The Cowboys say Walls has made a big mistake and they don't plan to change their contract offer.

"He's a little young to be retiring, don't you think?" was the reaction of Tex Schramm, president of the team. "Our last offer stands."

WALLS, WHO must report to training camp by today at 7 p.m. or face at $1,000-a-day fine, wasn't returning reporters' telephone calls. He was scheduled to go on a radio talk show in Fort Worth Wednesday night.

The second-year pro who has led the National Football League in interceptions both years handled his announcement through agent Steve Weinberg.

"He sent letters to the Cowboys and Pete Rozelle," said Weinberg. "He has convinced me he is 100 percent sincere. He does not want to talk to the media at all right now."

Tex Schramm said the decision was " a mistake on his part. He's a victim of bad advice."

Teammate Drew Pearson said,"Walls is using the wrong ploy. He should come to camp. To retire is the wrong strategy."

Tight end Billy Joe DuPree said,"That kid is worth his weight in gold. Pay him whatever you have to. This team needs Everson."

Everson Walls

Walls is being offered $175,000 this year as part of a five-year, $1.25 million package.

The former free agent from Grambling wants a three-year contract at $900,000.

He played for only $37,500 last year and has two years remaining on his current contract.

Walls would still have to play for the Cowboys should he decide to lay out a season and then come back.

Dallas hasn't had a camp holdout since Efren Herrera in 1978.

Weinberg said,"It is a career decision the Cowboys have forced him into retirement. He didn't want to sign a contract that he didn't want."

He added,"The risk of injury is too much for $60,000 (which is what Walls would be paid if he reports without signing a contract."

Weinberg said he didn't believe Walls would have a change of mind.

"There is no chance," Weinberg said. "He has convinced me that it is permanent. He has his accouting degree from Grambling unless something comes along in public relations.

"HE HAS never been more serious about anything in his life."

Dallas Vice President Gil Brandt, who has been handling the contract negotiations, offered Walls a four-year contract at less money per season but it was turned down.

"It's a big mistake on Everson's part," Brandt said. "We just can't wreck our salary structure for one player."

Coach Tom Landry said "the contract offer to Everson is fair."

Ron Fellows immediately becomes the No. 1 candidate for Walls' cornerback post along with second-year man Rod Hill.

Cannon remains fameless

Counterfeiting scheme closes door

NEW YORK (AP) — Former teammates and members of the college football Hall of Fame were saddened by the announcement that Billy Cannon will not be inducted into the Hall because of his guilty plea in a recent counterfeiting scheme.

Cannon, 45, a two-time All-American running back from Louisiana State, was elected to the Hall last February and had been scheduled to be inducted in a ceremony here Dec. 6. But on Wednesday, Vincent Draddy, board chairman of the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame, issued a two-sentence announcement through a spokesman here.

"As a result of Dr. William Cannon's recent plea of guilty to a felony charge, he will not be inducted to the foundation's College Football Hall of Fame," the statement said. It also said the 10 other coaches and players elected would be inducted.

Cannon, the 1959 Heisman Trophy winner who became an orthodontist after 10 years in the pros, was supported by former teammates Warren Rabb and Tommy Neck.

"I feel like he deserved to be in the Hall of Fame and there may have been other ways to do things," said Rabb, the quarterback on LSU's 1958 national champions. "He's paying very dearly for his mistake. What are they going to do, make him pay more?"

Added Neck, a halfback for the '58 Bengal Tigers, "I thought it was judged on credentials as a player. Maybe at a later date, they'll reconsider."

Hank Lauricella, a Louisiana state representative and one-time All-American at Tennessee, was inducted into the Hall last year. He said, "I'm sad to see it come about that it was taken away from him. You have to show some responsibility and progress and Billy has shown all of it. He was a perfect candidate and then this comes along."

Paul Dietzel, who coached Cannon at LSU, said, "One of the great tragedies in this type of situation is the youngsters who consider athletes heroes. It knocks down that pedestal."

Draddy, contacted in West Palm Beach, Fla., said the vote of the foundation's 18-member board was unanimous.

"We never had it happen before," he said. "It is the first time in our whole history that a candidate before induction turned out to be troublesome."

Draddy said it is the foundation's practice to do a "very good research job before anyone is voted in," and there was nothing in Cannon's background to indicate a problem would arise.

"It took everyone by surprise," Draddy said. "He was an All-America, a Heisman Trophy winner, a dentist, then an orthodontist, apparently with b very good reputation in Baton Rouge.

"It is one of those very unfortunate things that happen, and you don't know about it until it happens."

Neither Cannon, who lives in Baton Rouge, La., nor his attorneys were immediately available for comment.

Cannon was arrested in Baton Rouge July 9 in connection with a $6-million counterfeiting operation. He plea-bargained with the government a week later, pleading guilty Friday to a charge of conspiracy to possess and deal in counterfeit $100 bills. In return for his testimony, he received immunity from further prosecution in the case.

"I'm not saying I haven't or won't touch marijuana anymore. As long as I don't do it on the football field or in public or distribute it, I think that's all right. At home, it's all right. That's my feeling," said Denver Bronco wide receiver Rick Upchurch after spending 28 days in a treatment program for smoking marijuana.

Billy Sims rejects $3.5 million offer from NFL Lions

By The Associated Press

Detroit runnung back Billy Sims might be interested in joining the United States Football League while the Cincinnati Bengals very definitely are interested in raiding the new league.

Sims, the star running back of the Detroit Lions, rejected a $3.5-million, five-year contract offer by the National Fmotball League team and will play out his option this season. Sims' agent, Dr. Jerry Argovitz, is part owner of the Houston Gamblers, a USFL expansion team which begins play next year.

LIONS' OWNER William Clay Ford spoke with Sims last week and said he is not optimistic that Sims will sign with Detroit. Sims reportedly makes a $181,500 base salary.

Ford also charged that Arogvitz is in a "conflict of interest" because of his dual role as agent and owner of a football team.

Another Detroit running back, Dexter Bussey, was happy with the team's offer and signed a multiyear contract Wednesday.

The Bengals, winners of the American Football Conference Central Division the last two seasons, will be losing receivers Cris Collinsworth and Dan Ross to the USFL. Collinsworth signed a contract with the Tampa Bay Bandits for the 1985 season and Ross agreed to join the Boston Breakers next year.

Mike Brown, assistant general manager of the Bengals, said the team has spoken to the agent for Bandits receiver Eric Truvillion. Cincinnati also is interested in Boston linebacker Marcus Marek.

"We would consider signing a player on any team that signs a player on our team," Brown said. "We're not starting anything but anyone who starts with us will hear from us."

TRUVILLION, WHO led the USFL with 15 touchdown catches, caught 66 passes and gained 1,080 yards this season. His agent, Jim Neander of St. Petersburg, Fla., said the Bengals have offered a six-figure contract over several years, starting with the 1984 season. Truvillion has only an option year remaining with the Bandits.

John Elway, the No. 3 pick in last spring's draft, completed 10 of 14 passes for 176 yards in a Denver Broncos scrimmage, but came down with a sore arm and will be see limited throwing work for a while.

San Diego wide receiver Wes Chandler, who was the only NFL player to gain more than 1,000 yards with passes last season with 1,032 on 49 catches, has not recovered from a sprained foot and will undergo X-rays.

"I'm skeptical," he said. "I haven't been in this situation before.

The injury occurred May 7 at a Chargers' mini-camp.

Cleveland Browns' safety Judson Flint broke his right ankle during practice Wednesday and is out indefinitely.

The Philadelphia Eagles have decided to switch their 1981 top draft choice, Leonard Mitchell, from defensive end to offensive tackle.

Elsewhere, the New York Jets reached agreement with first-round draft pick Ken O'Brien, a quarterback from Cal-Davis, and traded wide receiver Bobby Jones to Cleveland for an undisclosed draft choice.

ATLANTA WAIVED punters Rick Mashburn, Scott Vernoy and Greg Lowery; Buffalo cut cornerback Riley Washington; Houston waived James Davis, a wide receiver and San Francisco released linebacker Jerry Floyd, defensive backs Steve Harris and Admiral Larry, offensive lineman Kevin McGill and defensive linemen Joe Vertucio, Greg Sykes and Mike Barbee.

The Chicago Bears reached terms with veteran safety Gary Fencik, tackle Jim Covert and cornerback Mike Richardson. Cleveland signed linebacker Dale Carver;New England signed Clarence Weathers, a wide receiver, and released placekicker Tom Skoruppa; Philadelphia signed nose tackle Ken Clarke and offensive tackle Stan Walters; Pittsburgh agreed to terms with nose tackle Gary Dunn, and center Jeff Bostic signed a series of three one-year contracts with Washington.

The Kansas City Chiefs announced the retirement of nose tackle Don Parrish.

Tyler conducts fish tournament for kids

BY RODNEY RIEHLE

A two-month long fishing tournament just for kids four to 16 years of age is underway at Tyler State Park. Competition is in three age divisions and 30 trophies will be awarded at the conclusion of the tournament Sept. 4.

Competitors must register and weigh fish at the park concession between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. All fish entered must have been caught at Tyler State Park lake. Categories include bass, catfish and sunfish. For information, contact Warren Woodcock (214 592 9312)...

Camp Texarkana has scheduled its first Big Bass Tournament for Sept. 3-4 on Lake Wright Patman with $100,000 cash prizes guaranteed. First prize is $50,000. Mail-in entries must be post marked no later than July 30 (214 838 9731)...

Sales of hunting and fishing licenses are sailing along at a record pace, says the Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept. During the first five months of fiscal year 1982-83, 664,299 licenses were sold, bringing in $5,650,869, an increase of more than $500,000.

Dry weather is hurting cattlemen and farmers in the Permian Basin and it isn't helping West Texas' antelope herd either. "Range conditions right now are about as bad as any time during the past 18 years," says Herb Kothmann, TWPD biologist at Big Spring. "Actually, it's fairly surprising to me that there are any fawns at all this year."

Kothmann said "We have seen about 300 to 400 deer while flying our antelope surveys, and we have yet to see a fawn among them."

While conditions are grim, this year's drought follows two years of excellent pronghorn reproduction.

Philadelphia pitcher Charles Hudson pitched no-hit ball for eight innings against Houston Wednesday before giving up three hits, two of them homers, in the ninth inning.

Phils' Hudson loses no-hitter

By The Associated Press

Craig Reynolds broke his bat and broke up Charlie Hudson's chance for glory.

Hudson, a 24-year-old rookie right-hander for the Philadelphia Phillies breezed through the Houston lineup Wednesday night and had a no-hitter after eight innings.

As he trotted to the mound with a 10-0 lead to start the ninth, the crowd of 21,052 on a steamy Philadelphia night cheered. Third baseman Mike Schmidt stood near the young hurler as he warmed up, thrust the ball into into Hudson's glove and wished him good luck.

Pinch hitter Harry Spilman was the first batter, and he struck out looking at a 1-2 pitch.

That brought up Reynolds, a reserve infielder who had entered the game in the seventh inning and had just 11 hits all season.

Hudson threw two strikes past Reynolds, and then missed with a ball. Then Reynolds fouled off a pitch.

And then Hudson threw a pitch down and in, and Reynolds broke his bat as he looped the ball to center field, where it fell safely for a single, out of the reach of shortstop Ivan DeJesus, second baseman Kiko Garcia and center fielder Bob Dernier.

Hudson, admittedly a bit shaken, got the next out before Denny Walling cracked his first homer of the season. Dicke Thon followed with his 13th homer before Hudson made Phil Garner his ninth strikeout victim in a three-hit, 10-3 victory.

"It was a good pitch," Reynolds said of his single. "It was a cut fastball, I think. He got it in on me and I just fought it off.

"It broke my bat severely. He made a good

Petroplex leads S&L pack down fine line

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

After being in business just 13 months, Petroplex Savings of Midland has out-performed other savings and loans in Midland, in Texas, and in the nation, industry analysts have disclosed.

This record was achieved by walking a fine line between net interest income and expense in a world of changing interest rates, and in spite of the alleged "bust" economic climate in Midland.

Petroplex was the fastest growing savings and loan in its size category in the nation in 1982, an independent study by a financial consulting firm indicates.

Kaplan, Smith and Associates reports Petroplex attracted $106 million in assets during its first year in operation. Since June 30, assets have climbed further to $110 million. The S&L was capitalized with $1.5 million when it opened its doors to the public June 21, 1982.

Data from industry organizations which regularly track savings and loan financial progress show that Petroplex has routinely out-performed savings and loans in its industry peer group (savings and loans with assets of $100 million or less), and frequently has out-distanced other S&Ls in Midland and Texas.

According to the U.S. League of Savings Associations, Petroplex's mortgage portfolio yield was 13.19 percent in May, the latest month for which figures are available. This compares with an average of about 10.5 percent for S & Ls in the Federal Home Loan Bank (FHLB) Ninth District, which includes Texas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Arkansas and Mississippi.

Profit margins at Petroplex — around 12 percent — have been almost twice what have been reported for other local S&Ls, according to the study.

Petroplex's record comes in spite of a downturn in the Midland economy due to the oil industry and the recession, and in spite of the increasingly difficult task of managing the net interest margin between deposits and loans. Data shows that fully 68 percent of the nation's S & Ls were operating in the red at the end of 1982.

Many of the S & Ls losing money were older institutions, and they were profoundly affected when money costs went up. Some lenders are pressured by many older loans, such as a large group of mortgages financed at seven or eight percent. New S & Ls don't have to cope with the problem.

What's more, Petroplex is the first savings and loan in the U.S. to attain more than $100 million in assets in its first year of operation.

Seasoned officials in the statistical division of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Washington, D.C., do not recall a first-year performance of this magnitude, said spokesman Jamie Jackson.

Jim Everett, Petroplex president and chief executive officer, said last June he hoped for initial assets of $15 million in the first year, but Petroplex's performance exceeded his expectations by $91 million. The institution had shown a profit just eight days after it opened in the Paragon Building.

"I'm sure somebody else will break that record," he said, "like when runners finally broke the four-minute mile barrier and now they are trying for three."

Petroplex is still growing. Just last week, Everett moved his loan department out of the home office and into new space across the lobby on the first floor of the Paragon.

During its first year, Petroplex received a shot in the arm when it acquired the $20 million branch of Gibraltar Savings at Plaza Center on West Wadley.

Everett attributed the firm's record to Petroplex's aggressive posture of seeking a solid portfolio of loan and investment opportunities. About 60 percent of the assets portfolio is in mortgages and 40 percent in investments.

"From the beginning," he said, "we were well aware that to succeed, it would be necessary to accept, and adjust to, the harsh reality of interest rate and market fluctuations."

Everett said he has spent much time managing the difference between Petroplex's earning assets (mortgage loans and investments) and its cost of funds. The key to Petroplex's growth has been managing the interest spread, which is currently at about 2.2 percent, he said.

"The loan-investment-volume mix will change as interest rates change. You can't predict it," he added.

Tacties change in response to the situation. Recently, Everett coverted the S&L's long term investments into short term, floating ones in anticipation that interest rates will rise gradually through the rest of this year.

"This is not what we hope will happen, but it is what we think will happen," based on inflationary pressures and actions of the Federal Reserve Board.

In his first year, Everett emphasized building up the deposit side of the S&L with some new products unique to Midland: He promoted the institution as a viable alternative to the feeling 'Your bank doesn't know you.'

This year he will concentrate on better relations with real estate and builder interests and in being more aggressive in loan activity.

Twenty-six percent of Petroplex's assets are deposited in money market accounts and another 25.4 percent are in jumbo certificates of deposit and mini-jumbos (those which require a $20,000 minimum balance).

The growth in deposits has been so rapid Petroplex has had to do more business in construction and development loans than it originally intended. Petroplex and a major Midland developer have entered into a joint venture for developing acreage on the northeast corner of Loop 250 and Midland Drive with plans for a retail condominium project. Petroplex has also financed John Williams and Associates' shopping center under construction on Midland Drive near M-System, and a restaurant to be built on Big Spring Street.

Everett sees Petroplex, he said, as a 'hybrid' S&L combining traditional savings and loan business — mostly for home mortgages — with commercial banking services.

Volcker says Fed's going to do it all over again

Paul Volcker, Federal Reserve Chairman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paul Volcker, while acknowledging his policies had at least something to do with the recession, says the Federal Reserve will again hold down growth in the nation's money supply this year and next.

Modest restraint, he says, can help avoid conditions that led to the painful downturn.

Fed Chairman Volcker made his comments to the House Banking Committee on Wednesday as he began two days of congressional testimony on the economy and the Federal Reserve's handling of monetary policy. He was to talk to the Senate Banking Committee today.

Many Federal Reserve critics have accused Volcker of worsening or even causing the 1981-82 recession by restricting the availability of money and credit too severely. And Rep. William Patman, D-Texas, asked the Fed chairman on Wednesday if there wasn't something to that contention.

In more direct language than he normally uses to answer such questions, Volcker said, "We certainly had restrictive measures to control inflation in the conviction that that was necessary for the long-term health of the economy. And that affected economic activity in the short term, yes."

He argued the moves were necessary to slow inflation that had reached 13.3 percent in 1979.

Volcker said the Federal Reserve's efforts to slow growth in the money supply since late May of this year probably had pushed interest rates upward again at least slightly.

But he also noted that at least one measure of the money supply had been rising very strongly for more than six months, raising fears that easy availability of money could lead to newly surging prices.

He said that with the economy rebounding strongly, "limited, timely and potentially reversible measures now (to slow monetary growth) are clearly preferable to the risks of permitting a situation to develop that would require much more abrupt and forceful action later."

"Forceful action" would mean more-drastic efforts to slow the money supply. And Wall Street investors reacted quickly and positively to Volcker's indications Wednesday that he felt no need for abrupt tightening and the sharply higher interest rates likely to accompany it.

In New York, stock market prices soared in heaving trading as Volcker's testimony appeared to calm fears that the Fed would adopt a more restrictive stance and thereby pressure interest rates high enough to choke off economic recovery.

Specifically, Volcker said the Federal Reserve would try to slow down growth in the nation's narrowly defined basic money supply, which is mostly cash and money in checking accounts.

He said growth in that measure — known technically as M1 — should slow to an annual rate of between 5 percent and 9 percent the rest of the year. That's a bit faster than the Fed's original target of 4 percent to 8 percent for the entire year, but it represents a significant slowing from the 13.8 percent burst of growth recorded for the first half of the year.

Volcker also said the Federal Reserve was far from confident that M1 was still a reliable measure of how the economy as a whole was doing and so was planning to put more emphasis on broader measures such as M2, which includes savings accounts and most money market mutual funds.

The Fed will aim to hold M2 growth to 6½ percent to 9½ percent next year, one-half percentage point less than this year's target range, he said.

Congressmen agree on watered-down bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional negotiators, eager to repeal a law withholding taxes from interest and dividends, have agreed on a watered-down substitute that would have little impact on the average taxpayer.

But the new plan would require banks and other financial institutions to withhold 20 percent of the interest and dividends earned by people who are identified as tax cheats. Instead of the $13.4 billion in extra taxes that withholding would have produced over the next five years, the substitute would bring in only about $2.6 billion.

Before the House and Senate can take final action on the repeal bill, however, negotiators must dispose of an unrelated amendment. It would make permanent a program, due to expire Dec. 31, that allows a tax exemption for certain bonds issued to help first-time homebuyers with their mortgages.

The Reagan administration and other opponents of the mortgage-revenue bonds say $3 of every $4 in the program goes to lawyers and other middlemen, rather than homebuyers. The House negotiators refused to accept extension of the program and senators refused to sign the withholding bill without the extension. Extension would cost $2.8 billion over the next five years.

The panel rejected another unrelated amendment, President Reagan's plan for special tax and regulatory relief to lure businesses into inner-city slums and other depressed areas. The "enterprise-zone" legislation is likely to become law on its own later this year.

Another Reagan project was approved as part of the repeal bill. It allows tariff-free imports from most Caribbean nations in an effort to build up the economies of the region.

Backers of withholding repeal hope the Caribbean initiative will entice Reagan to sign the entire package, even though he earlier had pledged to veto any measure that repealed withholding.

Final congressional action and Reagan's approval would bring an end to withholding before it is due to start on Aug. 1.

Withholding of 10 percent of interest and dividends was enacted last year as part of a package to cut the federal deficit. It became the target of a massive mail campaign after banks convinced millions of people that the new tax-collection measure would erode their savings.

The House voted to repeal withholding and offered no other way to collect a part of the estimated $8 billion that the government loses each year to people who don't fully report their interest and dividends. The Senate also called for repeal, but offered a plan aimed at catching some of the 20 million couples and individuals who cheat on such income.

Poetry replaces falcon as method of killing time

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HELSINKI, Finland — There are many ways to kill time at boring meetings. Some people like to play imaginative games of tick-tack-toe on ceiling tiles. Others stare at a green felt conference table and envision tricky cue shots. President Reagan is known to doodle caricatures of cowboys and horses.

When the 13 oil ministers from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries gather these days to ponder the world's energy scene, several of them usually find solace from the drudgery of discussing the depressed oil market in a number of exotic pastimes.

Mana Said Otaiba, the United Arab Emirates representative who also now doubles as chairman of OPEC, used to bring his prized pet falcon to the gatherings. The bird accompanied him in a first-class airplane seat.

Since becoming chairman of OPEC, Otaiba has decided to leave his falcon home and pursue more sophisticated forms of whimsy while the tedious talk of spot-market-price fluctuations and relative viscosity of crude oils flows around him.

Otaiba has cultivated the habit of composing poems about OPEC's plight, allegedly with the help of a well-versed Palestinian aide. After long contemplation of OPEC's weakened state at the latest meeting here, Otaiba was moved to write:

"It's a buyer's market — a flexible fluidity
And the buyers are now quite changed,
Sometimes showing coyness, at others cupidity,
No longer fearing boycotts, or shortages in supply,
They now dictate conditions, and harsh rules apply."
"The market, alas, is stagnant,
To the whims of buyers over-pliant.
For sellers, that's a heavy care,
A great predicament."

The consensus view about Otaiba's oeuvre in the realm of rhyme was said to be less than enthusiastic. There was even talk about urging him to bring the falcon back.

Saudi Arabia's minister, Ahmed Zaki Yamani, who refrains from public displays of poetry, is still considered among OPEC hands to be the best exponent of bedouin prose.

Once, when a reporter pressed him about whether the price of oil would rise or fall, Yamani ducked the question with the serene reply: "I do not wish to rob you of the ecstasy of your curiousity."

For those oil ministers less inclined to literary adventure, the Finnish hosts tried to be as accommodating as possible, although the rigid anti-terrorist precautions cramped the style of some of the more flamboyant OPEC delegates.

Those who tried to return to the hotel late at night with new female acquaintances were brusquely rebuffed, regardless of rank, at the hotel gate by security guards. In Geneva, where most OPEC sessions are held, "The hotel people are more understanding about such things," as one delegate put it.

During the interminable hours while the delegates talk business, reporters and oil industry analysts pitch camp in the hotel lobby where gossip and data bits are traded with the contagious flair of an oriental bazaar.

Within the space of a half hour, you can expect to hear all sorts of contradictions. A rumor that Yamani has abruptly walked out of the conference is traced to the fact that the pilot of his private plane vanished inexplicably, only to buy cigarettes, as it turns out.

The long stretches of boredom, waiting for ministers to emerge from closed-door sessions with piecemeal accounts, tend to exacerbate the flow of falsehoods. The longer the wait, the more catastrophic the predictions become.

Three or four times in the course of OPEC meetings, just when a few reporters' heads begin to jerk with drowsiness, tedious spells are broken by doomsday cries that the cartel is on the brink of collapse. The ministers, it is said, must be shouting and scheming how to cover up the fiasco.

Such dire predictions have not, as yet, been fulfilled, but OPEC's problems in recent months of dividing up a glutted oil market have given rise to more doubts than ever about the cartel's chances for survival.

Even Otaiba, the falcon master turned poet, has adopted a more somber tone in his most recent verse:

"To strengthen a market that's meek,
No surer way than to seek,
Through agreement by each on a modest share.
But if you then again come back
To disputes, then too come setbacks,
And disaster will loom in the air."

Seismic crew count higher

The number of seismic land crews and marine vessels searching for oil and gas in the United States and territorial waters in June increased by 22 crews and vessels over May figures. The June total was 471, compared with 449 in May. This represents the largest monthly increase since August 1981.

The June total represents an increase of 5 percent over May 1983 and a 23 percent decrease from June a year ago.

During June, nine contractors were operating 17 of the 387 land crews and four of the 37 vessels on a speculative basis.

Seismic exploration worldwide continued to decrease during the first quarter ended March 31, 1983, according to the Society of Exploration Geophysicists. A total of 968 land and marine crews were active. This figure was down by 15 from the previous quarter ended December 31, 1982.

Gains were reported in Canada, Central and South America and Africa, however.

Wallace says crises alive

AUSTIN (AP) — The energy crisis is not past and forgotten, says Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace.

"The energy crisis is alive, it's well and it will be back with us when we have cold weather, when we have extremely hot summers, when the economy goes back to what we need to keep reasonable employment in the nation,' Wallace told reporters after Wednesday's monthly oil allowable hearing.

"You're going to see energy demands rise. Your're going to see the crisis back with us."

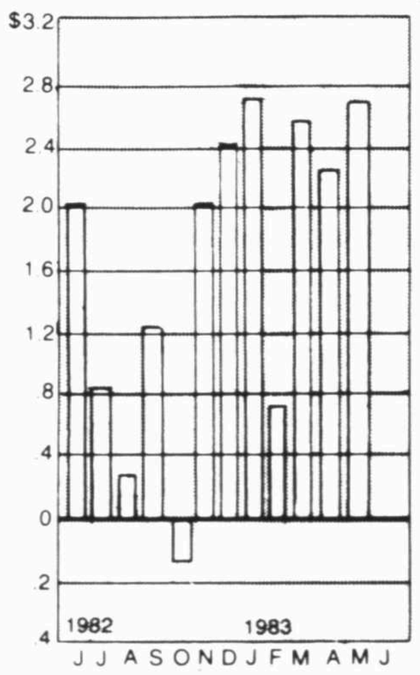

Wallace noted that the United States imported 4,891,000 barrels daily of crude oil in June.

"We're still in a dangerous situation when we have to import 30 percent of our crude," he said.

At the monthly allowable hearing, Wallace and Commissioner Jim Nugent set the Texas oil production rate for August at 100 percent.

Shamrock earns more

DALLAS (AP) — Increased second-quarter income for Diamond Shamrock Corp. is a clear sign that the economy is recovering, the company's chairman says.

Second-quarter income of Diamond Shamrock Corp. increased to $26.3 million, or 38 cents per share, from net income of $4.6 million, or 7 cents per share, reported in the first three months of 1983, the company announced Tuesday.

But the latest figures were down from after-tax income of $31.9 million, or 51 cents per share in the second quarter of 1982, said W.H. Bricker, company chairman and chief executive officer.

A gain of $3.2 million from the exchange of stock for debentures brought second-quarter 1983 net income to $29.5 million, or 43 cents per share, Bricker said.

"As we expected, improved second-quarter performance brought first-half earnings from operations to about 50 percent of last year's first-half levels," Bricker said. "We expect Diamond Shamrock's overall performance to continue to improve through the year."

Wildcatters do it less, PI says

DENVER — Exploratory drilling for new oil and gas fields in the United States dropped 21.2 percent below its 1982 level during the first half of this year, Petroleum Information Corporation reports.

New field wildcats, or purely exploratory wells, completed during the January to June period totaled 4,181, PI reported. Wildcat completions during the same period in 1982 totaled 5,303.

Of the wildcats completed during the six-month period, 399 found oil and 304 were new gas field discoveries. The wildcat success rate for the period was 16.8 percent. Those totals compare to 595 oil discoveries and 380 gas discoveries for the same period a year ago. The first-half 1982 success rate for wildcats was 18.4 percent.

The downturn in both wildcat activity and success rates mirrors the level of rig employment activity during the period. The number of rigs at work during the first half of the year averaged 2,108, according to Hughes Tool Co., compared to 3,637 during the same period in 1982.

The count of active rigs dropped to a low of 1,807 in late April and has since climbed at a relatively steady rate indicating an apparent reversal of activity. If conditions persist, the reversal should be reflected in increased new field wildcat completions during the third and fourth quarters of the year.

Total compltions, for all wells drilled for oil and gas, also fell behind the record 1982 rate during the first six months, PI noted. The total dropped by 3,355 completions, or 7.5 percent. A total of 41,371 completions were reported for the period, compared with 44,726 for the same time in 1982. Of the total, 20,431 were completed as oil wells and 7,967 were completed as gas wells for a success rate of 68.6 percent. The first-half 1982 success rate was 69.2 percent.

Completions in the "other exploratoy" category, including field extensions and deeper or shallower pool tests, were also off slightly from the 1982 pace. PI reported a total of 3,825 completions in the category, including 929 oil and 736 gas discoveries. During the first half of 1982, the total completions for other exploratory work was 4,008 with 999 oil and 815 gas discoveries. The comparative success rates in the category were 43.5 for the first half of 1983 and 45.3 percent for the same period in 1982.

The three top drilling states, ranked by total completions were Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas. All three had declining activity from the comparable period in 1982. Texas, with 12,243 completions, was down 1,975 or 13.9 percent. Oklahoma, with 4,986 completions, was down 1,098 or 18.0 percent. PI reported 3,635 completions in Kansas, down 736 or 16.8 percent.

Other top drilling states and their first-half completions were: Ohio, 2,610; Louisiana, 2,605; Kentucky, 2,585; Pennsylvania, 2,415 California, 1,2;81; Illinois, 1,216 and West Virginia 1,198. Of the top states, only Pennsylvania and Kentucky showed an increase in completions from the first half of 1982.

Odessan gets jail term, fine in obscenity trial

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Jimmy Wayne Wright, 38, was assessed six months in county jail and fined $2,000 Wednesday by an Ector County Court-at-Law jury which earlier had found him guilty of commercial obscenity.

The class A misdemeanor carries with it a maximum jail term of one year and a fine of $2,000.

Wright was charged with being in control of B&L Bookstore at 5930 University Ave. when undercover lawmen purchased Swedish Erotica No. 26 on Jan. 13.

The four-woman, two-man jury deliberated 50 minutes before assessing the sentence. They had spent only 30 minutes Wednesday morning in finding Wright guilty.

In the punishment phase of the trial, prosecutor and county attorney Steve Groh introduced three lawmen as character witnesses, all of whom testified that Wright's reputation is "bad." Groh then called upon jurors to assess the defendant the maximum sentence.

"A fine would just about be meaningless in this case," he said. "From documents and testimony, I think you can see this is an ongoing business and a fairly lucrative enterprise. Testimony showed (B&L) took in $500 in a half-day of business...So what if it took him maybe five working days to pay out the fine? Is that a deterrent? Is that a punishment?"

Punishment, Groh explained to jurors, "is supposed to be just that — it's supposed to hurt. Its purpose also is deterrence...In the setting of the sentence, there is conveyance to others breaking the law, or thinking about breaking the law, that this won't be condoned."

The prosecutor added that all evidence had indicated that Wright "was not just some righteous person who slipped up — this is how he makes his living...The only way you're going to affect it, make a dent in it, is to give him the maximum sentence."

Defense attorney John Cliff called for jurors not to assess a jail sentence because the case dealt with one individual operating a single adult book store in which minors were not allowed.

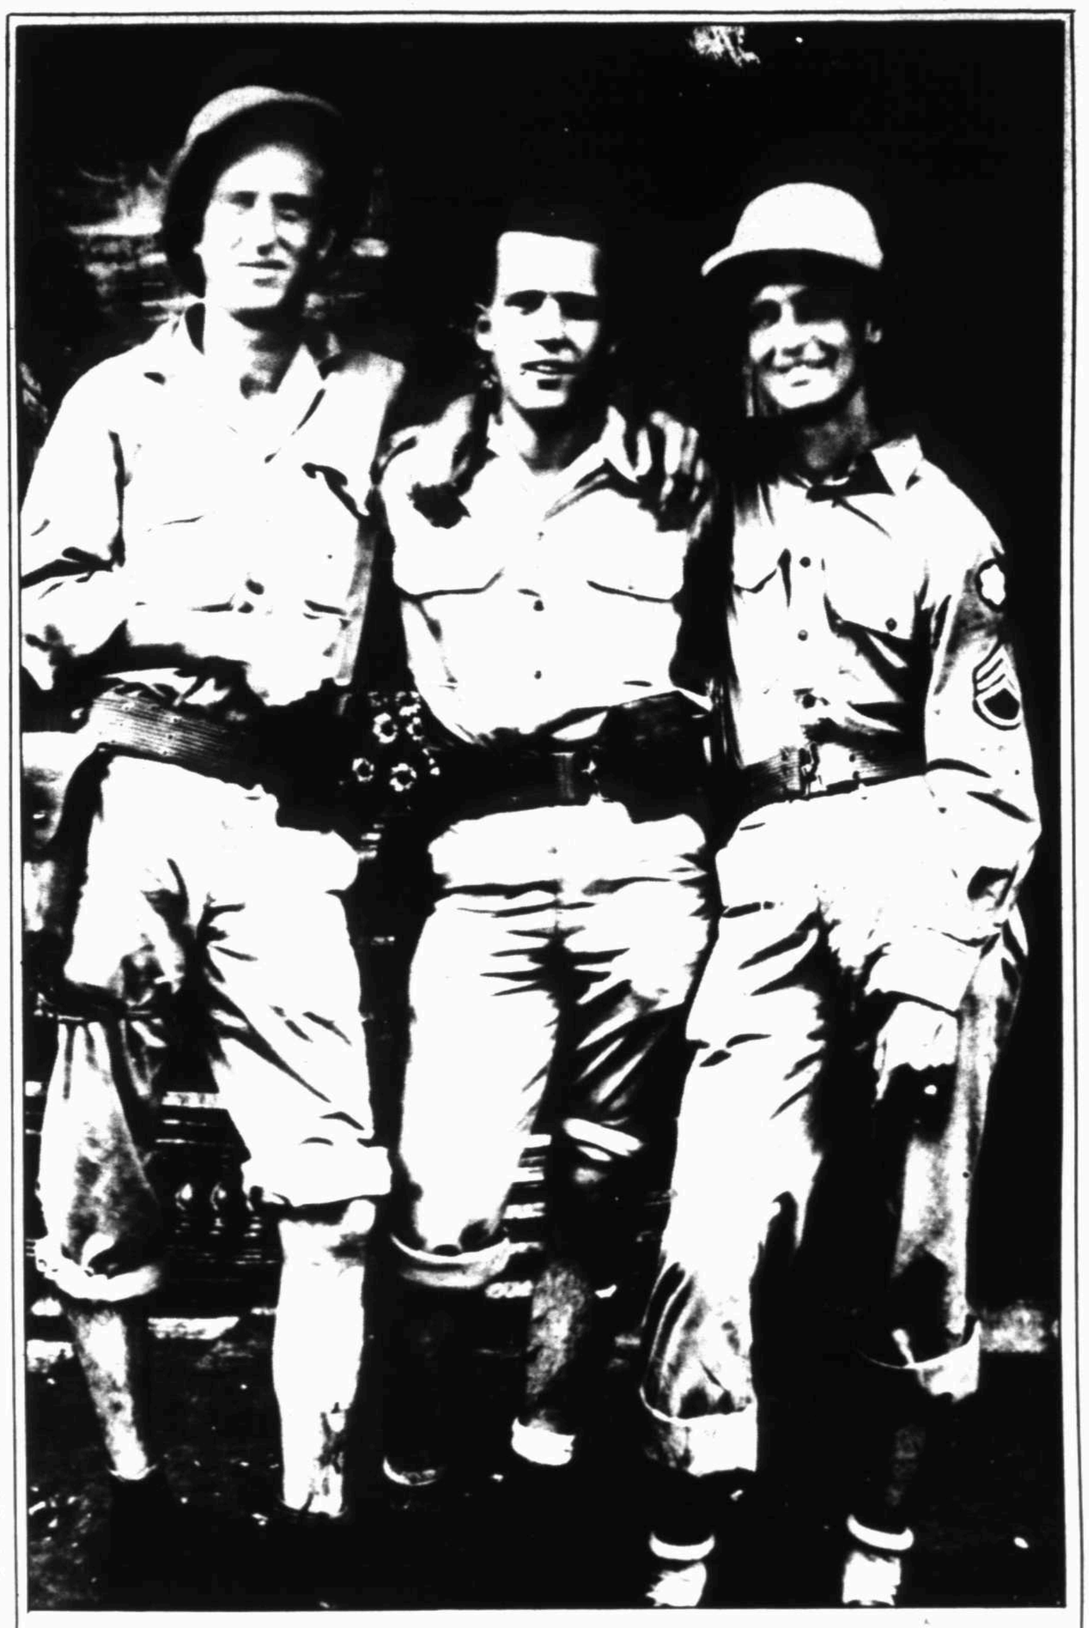

"At best, Mr. Wright operates a business where he makes available materials that certain individuals might want," said Cliff. "I don't think Mr. Wright is shoving anything down anybody's throat."

Cliff added that jurors should also consider whether Swedish Erotica No. 26 was decidely different from magazines readily available in local convenience stores.

"The nature of the material itself is a relevant factor," he said. "This is not a case that deserves the maximum penalty. There is no reason to put Jimmy Wright in jail."

Second defense attorney John Smith told jurors he would "find it hard to believe" they could assess Wright a jail term when erotic magazines are readily available at convenience stores frequented by children.

"Can you imagine," he asked, "Mr. Groh taking on Colonial or the Southland Corporation?"

James E. Winter, 59, of Midland enters the George Mahon Federal Building Wednesday for a preliminary hearing on charges he threatened and assaulted Internal Revenue Service agents.

Midlander 'happy' in city jail

Midlander James E. "Jim" Winter, accused of threatening and assaulting Internal Revenue Service agents, has been placed in Midland City Jail under bonds totaling $25,000.

He can afford to bail himself out, but hasn't. He can afford an attorney, but hasn't retained one yet.

"I'm happy over in jail," Winter said Wednesday after he had appeared before U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith for a preliminary hearing. He didn't say why but indicated he found the company of federal prisoners enlightening.

The magistrate postponed the hearing in the George Mahon Federal Building until Tuesday.

"I'm critically concerned about the status of your retaining counsel," Smith told Winter, a 59-year-old world-traveled retired electrician who lives at 4104 Harlowe Drive in Midland.

Winter is charged with intimidating Katherine Lewis, an IRS supervisory tax technician, in telephone conversations on July 12 and 13 and with assaulting IRS Inspector Dick Sherwood on July 14 when Sherwood and other agents went to Winter's home in far west Midland.

The latest Winter-IRS conflict gained impetus after Winter telephoned the IRS office to schedule an appointment for an examination — an audit.

Agents continue hunting probe

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Federal and state wildlife agents are continuing their investigation into the illegal airborne hunting of wildlife in West Texas, U.S. special prosecutor Jose Toro of Washington, D.C., said Wednesday following the sentencing of two hunters.

"The United States will continue to enforce its laws until we can get everyone who has been violating the law," Toro said. "This is not the end of the investigation."

Toro, who prosecuted Midland bear killers Steve Dudley Quain, 40, and Frankie Keller, 30, said he was "very satisfied" with the sentences meted out by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton. The judge sentenced each defendant to 179 days in federal custody, placed each on three 5-year concurrent probations, and fined each $6,000.

The judge could have sentenced the men up to 30 years in prison

"We are not against hunting," said James M. "Jim" Stinebaugh, Fort Worth-based U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service agent, who is investigating airborne game hunting allegations in West Texas. "Hunting is a useful tool in wildlife conservation."

The U.S. Airborne Hunting Act, which prohibits airborne hunting, stemmed from the killing of wolves and polar bears in Alaska in the early 1970s.

"There is a great deal of interest in stopping this kind of abuse," Toro said of airborne hunting.

Animals — from coyotes to deer to mountain lions — are defenseless from an aerial onslaught. Stinebaugh cited instances of aircraft, especially helicopters, pursuing animals until they are exhausted, hovering over them for "the kill" or just running them to death. There's no escape, even for the sheep-killing coyote, unless the predator can crawl into a hole, he said.

Jesus V. Bustamante, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service agent-pilot, and Stinebaugh have joined Texas Parks and Wildlife Department game wardens Gary Mitchell of Odessa and Terry Lloyd of Midland in investigating airborne hunting violations in West Texas.

"I am familiar with what helicopters can do, especially if they're armed," said Bustamante, who flew attack helicopters in Vietnam.

Stinebaugh calls the airborne hunters "gene-killers."

"They're taking the best out the herd." Eventually, he said, a species could be weakened and wiped out by such selective killing. In nature, wolves and eagles, for example, prey on the sick or weak in a herd or flock and do not attack the stronger, healthier animals.

Mitchell noted that some trophy hunters will ferret out the prize animals, shoot it and "cut off the head and leave the carcass." Rather than hunters or sportsmen, such "hunters" are slaughterers, the game warden said.

Though airborne hunting is generally outlawed, a predator-control permit can be issued to permit the killing of coyotes and other predators from the air, Stinebaugh said.

"There is no shortage of coyotes," he said.

World War II railroaders fought tigers, malaria

By FRANK CLARK
Summer Intern

Gary Tate spoke quietly but the sparkle in his eyes showed the excitement of those long ago days.

"We left Los Angeles Dec. 10, 1943, aboard an unescorted ship routed 'the long way around,' across the Pacific and Indian oceans to Bombay, India. With luck, we managed to avoid Japanese subs and warships, getting into Bombay on Jan. 11, of '44, and from there, railroaded northeast for two weeks to Upper Assam, our base of operations. It was there the 748th Railway Operating Battalion began its work."

The Second World War was fought on many different fronts in remote areas all over the world. For 700 railroaders from the southern U.S., the battleground was here in northeastern India; the enemy was heat, malaria, monsoons, tigers and, occasionally, the Japanese. Their objective was to move personnel and supplies by rail across 150 miles of jungle to airbases at the foot of the towering Himalayan Mountains.

From there, airmen would fly supplies "over the Hump" across the treacherous Himalayas and into China to supply Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists in its dual war with Japan and China's own Communist Party.

Tate, the organizer behind this weekend's reunion in Midland of the old 748th Railway Battalion, has many memories of the 22 months spent in the Indian jungle.

"Running trains in India was awfully different from running them in Texas. We'd use elephants to move railcars in the switching yard. To make it even more exciting, every so often pointmen wouldn't be able to switch the tracks over to the right rails because tigers were prowling the area. Unless you had a quick running pointman, the tigers delayed the train."

Wildlife wasn't the only thing to be dealt with by the transplanted railroad men. A fierce guerrilla war was raging in nearby Burma and sometimes spilled over into India.

"The Japanese were able to cut our supply lines only once," said Tate. "They came through with infantry and light armor and tore up a few rails, stopping us for a day. Allied troops came through in a hurry and pushed them back."

As in most wars, however, it is the friendships and camaraderie that are most fondly remembered, even as the years grow longer and the letters far between.

"We had a fine group of men doing a heck of a job in our company," said Tate warmly. "For two years we ran the rails in the wilds of India against the heat, the monsoons and the tigers. It's an experiance I'll not easily forget."

Keeping the memories alive is the reason behind this weekend's reunion of 15 to 20 former railroaders of the old 748th. Beginning with a banquet at noon Friday, the reunion will run through Sunday.

Honored at the reunion will be James Weatherby and Emmett B. Jones, former company commanders in the 748th Railway Battalion. Kenneth D. Hestes, former first sergeant, also will be honored.

Renewing old friendships and reminiscing are at the top of the weekend's agenda.

Stealing from self insidious form of thievery

The other day, a dear friend suggested I was a thief.

I resented that.

I've been preached to enough, told I was a sinner over and over, was in danger of hell fire and damnation but really figured I didn't ruffle the Ten Commandments on a regular basis.

I do avoid revivals, though.

Now, I'm not pure. No one has said otherwise. But a thief? Surely not.

(But one matronly lady in church years ago told the minister, "Isn't Edwin nice." It was for my benefit, I suppose, but I was offended. I didn't want to be milquetoast.)

In all the preaching I've been subjected to from the pulpit, sidewalk, kitchen table and study, I never connected myself to the commandment "Neither shalt thou steal." I didn't. I thought I didn't.

I was wrong.

I'm a thief.

I steal time — time from myself.

The reason I never caught myself stealing until recently was because, I guess, there's no immediate punishment when you steal from yourself.

As I reflect, I detect that my biggest means of thievery was putting things off: "I'll get around to it later." Sometimes I got around to it; oftentimes, I didn't. In one word, I "procrastinated."

In doing so, I've stolen but never — until now — felt the slightest tinge of guilt. Well, that's probably not true. I likely ignored any nudge of conscience, lied to myself, and went on my merry putting-off way.

Initially, the aspect of stealing from myself didn't seem very important. In fact, it seemed trivial and totally insignificant. It didn't even seem like larceny of any sort or degree. But to steal from myself is to take from a person — my person. And if there is no fault in that, then I am nothing — worthy of no self-respect. That would be a pity — true or merely imagined.

So, friends of Earth, beware of the thief in your midst. He's insidious.

It's a pity to be so stealthy.

Of all my defects, it seems — right now — that thievery is so pernicious. There are many forms:

—Theft of time. Procrastination.

—Theft of intellect. Ignorance.

—Theft of emotion. Fear of love.

—Theft of health. Poor nutrition, poor habits.

—Theft of spirit. Denial of God.

—Theft of friendship. Stand back.

—Theft of talent. Fear of failure.

—Theft of ambition. Cowardice.

—Theft of love. Selfishness.

—Theft of cash register. Petty theft!

—Theft of honesty. Deceit.

There's probably more than enough kinds and degrees of thievery to fill a tome. But only a fearless search of self can uncover these and other defects of character and rid them of self.

Since there's no perfection in mankind, there can be no perfection in self. The best a fellow can do is to strive for progress in aiming for perfection. Headway toward that can be made via self-examination.

"The unexamined life," said Socrates, the Greek philosopher and teacher, "is not worth living."

CRMWD president elected at meeting

BIG SPRING — A new president for Colorado River Municipal Water District was elected during a meeting of the board of directors last week. The board also paid $200,000 to modernize and speed up operations.

John L. Taylor, civic and business leader in Big Spring for the past three decades, was elected president of the regional CRMWD. He replaces P.C. "Codie" Harbour of Odessa, last of the founding directors, who resigned.

Taylor, a former city councilman and mayor pro tem, has served on the board since Aug. 14, 1964, and as vice president since 1974. He has chaired the personnel committee and served on the water rate committee. He came on the board prior to the Lake Spence project and has shared in direction of more than $40 million of district expansion.

A native of Ralls, he graduated from Rotan High School in 1946 and from Texas A&M University in 1950. He was a Distinguished Student and member of the honor Ross Volunteers.

Taylor worked briefly with Proctor and Gamble before serving as a first lieutenant and tank platoon commander in the Korean campaign. Upon his return in 1952, he joined his father, the late W.F. Taylor, in the John Deere dealership, subsequently acquiring the business and farming operations himself. He has served as director of Fiber Glass Systems since its organization.

Also elected to posts were Clyde Yarborough, Odessa, vice president; Rex D. Fields, Snyder, vice president; Joe Pickle, Big Spring, secretary-treasurer; and Richard Gillham of Odessa, director.

CRMWD directors paid $100,000 for replacement of a microwave, the last tube-type developed before the transistor and chip generation, installed in 1964. This particular unit controlled the Big Spring and McWhorter pump stations from Martin County. Since then the cable has been laid with pipelines to connect the stations and those to the west. O.H. Ivie, general manager, said plans also included tying the Snyder pump station to the central controls from Big Spring. This would automate the entire system.

John L. Taylor

The board also approved paying $100,000 for a computer and software. Another $10,000 was approved for site improvements at the Big Spring pump and central control station.

CRMWD's interest in a potential low-level radioactive materials disposal in the area will be to check final reports and satisfy by its own tests that such would not offer any possibility of contamination of water supplies, directors said.

Progress is being made to obtain additional ground water reserves on the west end of the system to protect it in periods of peak demand, said Ivie. Also, the district is exploring the possibility of exchanging acreage with the University of Texas System for a different pattern of development in the Ward County well field.

Rod Lewis and Ernest Lilliard of the administrative staff said studies for upgrading efficiency of the Martin County pump station and developing another diversion on Beals Creek should be completed in two months.

Midlander says he's 'happy over in jail'

"'I'm not coming to your office,'" Ms. Lewis, in a signed complaint, said Winter told her on July 12. '"You come to my house. If I come in there (to IRS), I'll whip somebody's a--. You people have been harassing me for years. If you come to my house, I'll be waiting with a shotgun.'"

Winter called the next day, the IRS tax technician said.

"'You sent me a notice to appear at your office at 1300 hours,'" Ms. Lewis quoted Winter, "'but you didn't send me my refund for $5,000 in 1981, so I am serving you notice to appear at 4104 Harlowe with my refund check at 1300 hours. If you send a man with a gun, I'll kill him.'"

On the afternoon of July 13, the tax technician called Winter "to clarify" the appointment date and to tell him that "the audit would be conducted at the IRS office."

Ms. Lewis said she told Winter she was concerned about the safety of the IRS agents and about his having the shotgun.

"'I have a bunch of them,'" he replied, said Ms. Lewis.

In turn, Ms. Lewis said she asked Winter if the IRS agents were to come to his house to conduct the audit, would he use the firearms against them.

"'If you bring a gun, yes; if you don't bring a gun, no.'"

Armed with an arrest warrant, IRS Inspectors Sherwood, Edward-Dally and Ernest Goode and Special Agent Michael Massengale drove to Winter's house. Sherwood and Dally approached the house; Sherwood knocked. A son answered and called his father to the door.

Winter declined to come outside. But after Sherwood said he reached for Winter's left hand, Winter snapped: "You son-of-a—" doubled his right fist and struck Sherwood on the left side of the face. A scuffled ensued in the house after Winter ran down the hallway. Ten minutes later, the inspectors had Winter handcuffed.

"'I should have hit you twice,'" Sherwood said Winter told him.

Shortly afterward, Winter was processed in the U.S. Marshal's Office and was booked into the federal section of Midland City Jail.

Before the magistrate had entered the courtroom for Wednesday's thwarted hearing, Winter was greeted by his two sons, David, 25, and Jim, 26, who handed their father his mail.

Among the letters was a delinquent tax notice from Dallas.

"Dallas is going to put me in jail now," quipped Winter.

"Are you worried?" asked Deputy Marshal Steve Balog.

Winter said he paid for the house and sold it years ago.

"They keep sending me the tax bill," he allowed. "I just ignored it. You can't tell them anything."

Winter, in a seemingly casual and nonchalant mood, asked the marshal if he had "any writs of habeas corpus."

Winter opened up his issue of the day's "Wall Street Journal" and turned to the stock market page.

"Just playing the game," he mused.

"I envy you," said the prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Bock. "I wish I could read it."

Winter stopped scanning the newspaper.

"They took me to see the doctor when I had a heart attack the day before yesterday," he said. "No one believed me.

"What I need to do is to see my witch doctor in Victoria Falls...He can tell me what's wrong with me."

Afterward, the magistrate appeared, and re-scheduled the hearing.

"We'll run you back to the jail," U.S. Deputy Marshal Gail Boggs told Winter.

"No hurry, no hurry," Winter said.

Afterward, his sons said their father was not involved with any tax-protesting movement.

"No, he's independent," said Jim Winter. "That's probably his trouble."

DEATHS

Bertha Johnson

Services for Bertha A. Johnson, 93, of 2800 W. Illionis Ave., will be at 11 a.m. Saturday at the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home with Dr. Charles Lutrick of the First United Methodist Church, officiating. Burial will be at Resthaven Memorial Park Mausoleum.

She died Thursday in a Midland hospital.

Mrs. Johnson was born Oct. 20, 1889, in Gustine. She grew up in Comanche County, where she met and married the late R.E. Johnson. They moved to Ward County, where they homsteaded. In 1914, they moved to Midland and Mrs. Johnson established her own beauty shop in the early 1930s. She ran the shop at 709 W. Ohio St. for many years before retiring in 1971. She lived in Trinity Towers for the last 10 years. She was a member of the First United Methodist Church.

Survivors include two daughters, Mrs. E.C. (Nita) Heikkila of Midland and Mrs. J.E. (Anna Bell) Hammond of Midland; five grandchildren; 14 great-grandchildren and a great-great grandchild.

BIG SPRING — Services for Mrs. Dave (Nita M.) Inglish, 56, of Hobbs, N.M., and formerly of Big Spring, are pending under the direction of Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home.

Mrs. Inglish died Tuesday in an Albuquerque, N.M. hospital.

Odessan in critical condition after hitting highway truck

ODESSA — An Odessa man is in critical condition at Medical Center Hospital today after his pickup truck rammed the rear of a highway departmemt truck in a fiery crash on Texas 302 about 15 miles west of here late Wednesday morning.

In the intensive care unit of the hospital suffering from internal injuries was 49-year-old Jack Freeman. He was the driver of a 1983 Ford pickup that ran into the rear of a highway department truck operated by Elias Aguirre, also of Odessa, according to the Department of Public Safety.

A DPS spokesman said Aguirre, who wasn't injured, was westbound on 302 at about 15 to 20 mph with his flashing signals on when the accident occurred.

Both vehicles burst into flames and Freeman was freed from the wreckage by highway department personnel and passing motorists. The accident occurred about 11:15 a.m. Wednesday.

Investigators: No evidence of foul play in man's death

From staff and wire reports

ODESSA — A 23-year-old woman remained in critical condition today after apparently inhaling carbon monoxide fumes that invaded a motor home and killed former city councilman Houston Seabolt on Wednesday.

Investigators said there was no indication of foul play, and a spokeswoman for Ector County Justice of the Peace Jimmy Harris today said his office was still awaiting the results of an autopsy ordered by the judge.

Seabolt, 30, and Norma Mattingly were discovered about 7 a.m. Wednesday inside a motor home at the Basin Packers plant, according to an Ector County sheriff's deputy who asked not to be identifed.

The motor home's engine was running, the deputy said. Ms. Mattingly was unconscious when the pair was found by plant employees. Seabolt was pronounced dead at the scene by Harris.

Harris, who ordered the autopsy, said there was "no indication of foul play whatsoever...There's no bruises or anything like that."

Harris estimated that when Seabolt was found, he "hadn't been dead over an hour, if that long."

He said Seabolt was living in the recreational vehicle while his house was for sale.

Ronnie Lawler said he and two other employees discovered the two in the motor home parked in a work area at the rear of the plant. Lawler declined to comment further.

Seabolt, who had been an Odessa police officer for eight years, stepped down from the Odessa City Council last April after serving a two-year term, saying he needed to spend more time with his job and family.

In 1982, Seabolt ran as a Republican candidate for state Rep. Jay Gibson's seat, but withdrew from the race when the state attorney general ruled he was ineligible to run because he held a paying public office.

'Speculation' fund-raiser held for Texas congressman

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A "Speculation" fund-raising breakfast in Washington Wednesday honoring Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock has political overtones for Texas.

Several hundred lobbyists, mostly young men, and a number of Texas Democratic congressmen attended.

Although Hance is planning to run for the U.S. Senate against Sen. John G. Tower, R-Texas, if indicators prove favorable, no mention was made of that at the program.

However, there was considerable reference to Hance as a formidable candidate, successful lawyer and working congressman.

Hance is known for his wit and the theme of the breakfast was satirical humor. Rep. Tom Vandergriff, D-Fort Worth, as master of ceremonies, read a poem about Hance written by Rep. Jake Pickle. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Chicago, chairman of the House Ways and Means committee, which writes the nation's tax bills first in Congress, and where Hance serves as a member, gave a humorous account of how he had found Hance a slow learner, steadily improving in Chicago-style politics. Dickey Grigg, Austin lawyer and former student of Hance at Texas Technological University "roasted" the congressman. Grigg was here attending the National Trial Lawyers convention.

Hance gave each guest a bottle of Texas hot sauce which he said was bottled by his office staff. It was labeled "Uncle Kent's Speculation Sauce," and warning instructions, designed to waive liability for partaking, included such descriptions as "spunky and spicy, full of surprises, En-hances even your cooking, good for any campaign, any year."

Odessan dies after losing control of his automobile

ODESSA — An Odessa man is dead after his car went out of control and overturned about 1:15 a.m. today.

Pronounced dead at the scene by Ector County Justice of the Peace Jimmy Harris was James Allen Mason, 32.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Mason was northbound on FM-1936 when his 1978 Chevrolet left the road, struck a stop sign and embankment, became airborne and skidded 40 feet on its top after landing.

Mason was thrown from the vehicle and his body was taken to the Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home. The accident occurred about 2½ west of Odessa.

Doctors study practicing emergency space surgery

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Doctors at the Johnson Space Center are studying techniques and equipment that may one day be used to perform emergency surgery in outer space.

Dr. Bruce A. Houtchens, an associate professor of surgery at the University of Texas Medical School at Houston, said Wednesday that an experimental space surgery kit is now being manufactured.

He said it will be tested soon aboard an airplane and later, perhaps, aboard the space shuttle.

The tests are a part of a program to develop emergency medical procedures for treatment of patients aboard a space station proposed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

A team of 20 physicians is meeting this week at the Johnson Space Center to develop a program for medical problems in orbit.

Houtchens said surgery in space presents unique problems because of weightlessness.

The absence of gravity would permit blood, body fluids and instruments to drift freely inside the spacecraft, Houtchens said.

He said a group of instruments especially designed for space surgery will be tested aboard a KC-135, an aircraft that can develop short periods of weightlessness.

If the equipment works well, he said, it may be tested later aboard the space shuttle.

Asked if the development could eventually include experimental animal surgery in space, Houtchens said, "That's a possibility."

Hobbs man dies of injuries from Wednesday collision

WINKLER COUNTY — A Hobbs, N.M., man has died of injuries suffered in a near-headon collision on a rural road here Wednesday afternoon.

James F. Turnbow, 52, of Hobbs, died at 10:20 a.m. Wednesday in Odessa's Medical Center Hospital, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Turnbow was critically injured when his 1978 GMC pickup and an 18-wheeler collided on East Butane Road just north of Texas 302 in Winkler County about 2:20 p.m. Wednesday.

The driver of the semi, Billy Wayne Miles, no age or address available, was not injured. Three passengers in Turnbow's pickup, all residents of Hobbs, were released following emergency hospital treatment.

A DPS spokeswoman said Turnbow was southbound when the northbound tractor-trailer driven by Miles crossed the center line and struck Turnbow's pickup almost headon.

His body was taken to the Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home in Odessa.

YMCA to offer scuba course

The Midland Central YMCA is now taking registration for a four-week scuba diving course which will begin Aug. 2. The classes will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. The instructor will be Dave Wheeler.

Fee for the course, which includes a student kit, is $220 for Y members and $250 for limited members. More information may be obtained by contacting the YMCA at 800 N. Big Spring St., or by calling 682-2551.

AT WIT'S END

Sitting at kids' table better

By ERMA BOMBECK

Looking back on it, my entire life changed the first holiday I was allowed to eat at Grandma's "big table."

Up until then, I could only speculate on what it was like to be an adult by listening from the kitchen and occasionally getting a glimpse of them as Grandma's swinging door thumped in and out.

Then one Easter, when I was 13, Grandma pointed to a vanity bench brought down from her bedroom that was sandwiched in between my mother and an uncle, and said, "You can sit at the big table."

It was awful. They passed things and took a little bit of everything whether they liked it or not . . . just to be polite.

They never laughed with food in their mouths even when something was funny and needed laughing at. When they talked, they argued usually about things they couldn't do anything about . . . the Germans marching into Czechoslovakia and the high cost of living.

They had a real thing about napkins and dabbed the corners of their mouths when there was nothing there. With every bite, they looked depressed and kept saying, "I shouldn't be eating this. My weight, you know."

Everyone was always shooing the dog away from the table and saying, "Go away, I just washed my hands."

Sometimes when the door swung open I could hear the rest of the kids in the kitchen laughing and screaming. I knew my cousin Billy was blacking out his front teeth with black olives and acting crazy. And my cousin Pat was scraping the grease with her spoon for hunks of chicken that stuck to the skillet. When they wanted seconds, they just brought the pots to the table and ate what was left with the big spoons still in them. Someone would belch and they'd laugh until someone choked and had to be hit on the back. Then they'd hit back and someone would start a fight with cold mashed potatoes and Grandma would say, "If you kids don't settle down out there, I'm going to make you all go outside."

Every Easter Sunday I think about the big table. It never changes . . . only the name of the war changes and the names of the adults. But as I hear the laughter from the children in the kitchen, I yearn to shed the yoke of responsibility, decorum and discipline . . . and be a child once more.

Habits should change after vasectomy

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Many men who have vasectomies should change diet and exercise habits because there is evidence the operation may aggravate heart and blood circulation problems that plague American males, a researcher says.

Gary Curtis, associate professor of obstetrics, gynecology and biochemistry at the University of Nebraska Medical Center, said doctors should use more care in screening vasectomy patients, particularly with men who have a history of cardiovascular problems.

Curtis, some of whose work has been published in the journal Fertility and Sterility, also stressed that men should be fully informed of the potential health risks of the operation.

"I would bet that 95 percent of them don't know of the problems or the risks," he said in an interview last week.

Eating disorders psychological problem

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered Dietitian
Copley News Service

Anorexia nervosa and bulimia, the frightening eating disorders that are appearing on the American scene in near epidemic proportions, were reviewed at a recent seminar that I attended at the University of California at Los Angeles (my alma mater), and some interesting research observations were revealed.

Anorexia, according to Dr. Peter Vash, a clinical instructor, Department of Medicine, UCLA School of Medicine, is actually a misnomer. The word "anorexia" implies a lack of appetite, but patients with this disorder do not suffer from a lack of appetite. They willfully and deliberately restrict their food intake and overexercise in a wicked effort to achieve the ultimate in thinness and as a protection against the dreaded fate of becoming fat.

While our society's current strong cultural bias toward thinness is blamed for creating an environment that promotes the development of these eating disorders, the basic illness is a psychological disturbance in the individual and in the family relationship.

Long before any illness appears, the young patients feel helpless, ineffective and powerless in conducting their own lives. They suffer from a deep fear of not being competent and of not getting or even deserving respect. Their sense of self and their own identity are deficient, and the severe discipline they impose upon their bodies is a misdirected solution to their personality and family maladjustments.

The flaw in the parent-child relationship of the individuals who choose to withdraw into their own bodies and follow the path of starvation is that the parents impose their own decisions and convictions upon the life of the child, and pay no attention to the child's own ideas, needs or desires. The child's accomplishments are not his own, but his parents'.

The child care in such families is usually excellent, with everything amply provided, except that the child is not allowed to be himself or think for himself. Rather he is merely an extension of the parents. The child feels, and is totally controlled by external forces.

Anorexia nervosa sufferers are 90 percent young women; the 10 percent who are males are mostly homosexuals, if not all.

The basic defect for anorexia is now recognized as failure of the parents to encourage the child's own self-concept and self-expression early in life. Such defects in normal development, especially in a tense or hostile family relationship, produce an immature, fragile psychological defense in the child, which is easily shattered at the time of puberty.

Self-doubt and unworthiness engulf the child, and the full force of early years of tension and emotional trauma begin the cascade of events that lead to the state of anorexia nervosa.

The altered sense of self-concept and depression can result in the inappropriate and phobic overcontrol of hunger that leads to self-starvation. The resulting state of malnutrition further worsens the problems because the metabolic changes that occur only serve to aggravate the illness.

More mathematics wanted in schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American people want more science and mathematics taught in the nation's high schools, according to a national opinion survey conducted for the American Chemical Society.

The people believe such training "is most important in determining whether the United States remains world leader in research, development and technology," findings from questions submitted by the society to Cambridge Reports Inc. show.

Seventy-five percent of the survey's 1,027 respondents said three-to-four years of science and math education should be required for graduation from high school.

Paraplegics have babies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women paralyzed below the waist by spinal cord injuries can go through normal pregnancy and deliver healthy babies if their chronic health problems are continuously monitored, say medical researchers.

Scientists at New York University Medical School, in a report to be published today, say paralysis from spinal cord injury does not affect fertility or menstruation in women.

The condition also does not affect their ability to have a normal, vaginal delivery unless the injury also caused a deformity in the pelvis, said the report. In this case, surgical delivery may be required.

Because of advances in medicine and emergency care, increasing numbers of people are surviving accidents.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Dwarf citrus trees bear giant fruit

By ELVIN McDONALD

One group of plants I promise will give you great pleasure are the dwarf citrus. These come in every flavor and can be grown in pots or tubs as bushes, small standard trees, hanging baskets or bonsai.

Ponderosa lemon is good for beginners. It's not unusual for a 12-inch plant in a 6-inch pot to bear grapefruit-size fruit. Citrus Meyeri bears smaller but better quality lemons.

You can also grow Citrus aurantifolia on a dwarf bush that will produce Key limes to flavor the pies for which it is famous. The Persian lime also makes an excellent house plant.

Fortunella Hindsii, the Formosa kumquat, and Citrus myrtifolia, which has small mytle-like leaves, make excellent subjects for bonsai that can be grown all year indoors, or outdoors when the weather is warm. Sources include Logee's Greenhouses, 55 North St., Danielson, Conn. 06239 (catalog $2.50) and Country Hills Greenhouse, Route 2, Corning, Ohio 43730 (catalog $2).

If you live in the East, a major source for improved citrus is Adams Citrus Nursery, Inc., Box 1505, Haines City, Fla. 33844. In the West, leading specialists are Four Winds Growers, Box 3538, Fremont, Calif. 94538 (their booklet on growing dwarf citrus is $1.50). Stock from these suppliers is sold through local retail nurseries and garden centers.

The only difficult thing about growing citrus is starting from a seed or pit collected from a fruit you've just eaten. It will sprout but isn't likely to bear for many years. The answer is to invest a little money in a known producer.

To succeed with potted citrus, use a mix such as two parts humus to one of sand. Water and fertilize freely in warm, sunny weathr. Keep on the dry side and don't feed in fall and winter. If leaves turn yellow between veins, apply an acid fertilizer such as Miracid.

This Ponderosa lemon can bear fruit the size of a grapefruit when the tree itself is only a foot tall.

Q. Is there a mail source for geraniums such as 'Grey Lady Plymouth,' 'Prince Rupert' and the Deacon hybrids? I can't find them locally.

A. The geraniums you seek and several hundred others are in the current catalog ($1 per copy) of Shady Hill Gardens, 821 Walnut St., Batavia, Ill. 60510. Summer is an excellent time to establish young geranium plants for blooms indoors next fall and winter.

The cheap way to have a quantity of flower-covered potted geraniums in winter is to sow hybrid seeds in summer. These sprout quickly and soon show typical leaves. Packets of many different kinds are in the Shady Hill catalog.

All the answers to what makes geraniums bloom are in my newsletter: Send 50 cents coin and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope with "Gernanium" written on the back flap to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, Box R, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14305; in Canada, 4141 Glenayr Ave., Niagara Falls, Ont. L2E 6K1.

Q. Why do the leaves of my summer phlox turn yellow, starting at the bottom and creeping up the stem?

A. Powdery mildew and a number of other diseases frequently attack phlox. Pick and destroy badly infected leaves. Then apply a fungicide such as Acti-dione, Benomyl, Folpet (Phaltan), Lime Sulfur, Karathane or Sulfur Dust, following label directions. It will also help to situate your phlox in maximum sun with the best air circulation possible. When watering, soak the soil but keep the leaves dry.

Gardeners who prefer not to use chemicals report promising results from Judd Ringer's bio-organic fertilizers. No miracle is claimed but it appears that healthy soil produces healthy plants that have built-in resistance to diseases and insect pests. (A free catalog is available from Ringer Research, 6860 Flying Cloud Dr., Eden Prairie, Minn. 55344.)

Quick Take: Sow seeds of hardy perennials in summer for blooming-size transplants next spring. Kinds include delphinium, dianthus, candytuft, lupine, forget-me-not, painted daisy and many others. Check local seed racks and catalogs such as Burpee and Park.

Q.T.: One of the world's most beautiful perennial borders is at Old Westbury Gardens, Box 430, Old Westbury, N.Y. 11568. Details about visiting this heavenly spot on Long Island, a short distance east of New York City, are in a free leaflet.

Q.T.: A host of rare flowering plants for garden, home and greenhouse are in a new catalog ($1 per copy) from Kartuz Greenhouses, 1408 Sunset Dr., Vista, Calif. 92083.

Diet drug helps autistic

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Researchers who have found the diet drug fenfluramine relieves some symptoms of autism plan to expand their testing to 150 children this fall, a scientist says.

Betty Jo Freeman, a researcher at the University of California-Los Angeles, told reporters Monday that the drug caused significant improvements when administered to 14 children over four months.

"We know we can't cure autism," Ms. Freeman said. "What we hope the drug does in some autistic children is maximize their potential."

Autism, a neurological disorder, impairs development of verbal, physical and social skills.

Doctors busy in summer

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans visit their doctors more often during the summer, and especially during August, than at any other time of the year, according to a study by a provider of optometric care.

Pedodontists, who specialize in children's dental needs, see more patients in the second half of August than at any other time, the study by Pearle Vision Centers showed.

Osteopaths' patient loads peak in August, and pediatricians report their busiest periods are August and September, plus January — the flu season. General physicians and podiatrists, too, are busiest during the summer.

Doctor accuses FDA of errors

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading researcher charged the Food and Drug Administration on Wednesday with committing "a series of systematic errors" in approving use of the Today Contraceptive Sponge.

Nathan Mantel of the American University, who formulated the first statistical method of assessing cancer risks, said FDA officials weren't as careful in calculating a safe dose of the drug as they would have required outside researchers to be.

"(They) have not been exercising the same scrupulous care that they expect in reports from outside organizations — and even scrupulous care is frequently not effective in getting a favorable decision from the FDA," Mantel told a House subcommittee.

But Dr. Arthur Hull Hayes, commissiiner of the FDA, defended the decision. "The safety of the Today Contraceptive Sponge was evaluated and considered extensively by FDA reviewers prior to approval," he said.

Dr. Hayes said FDA estimates of exposure to contaminants that are known to cause cancer in animals are well under one-millionth of the doses that cause cancer in animals.

Mantel, who teaches mathematics and computer science, said data may not permit calculation of any safe level for 2,4-Toluenediamine. This substance is used in the sponge and some researchers believe it to be a possible cause of cancer.

He said use of the contraceptive sponge "would allow direct contact with highly sensitive tissues like the cervix and the vagina, extremely important sites of cancer in women."

Dr. Hayes cautioned, "It is important not to overestimate the precision or superiority of so-called qualitative expressions of risk."

He said that all risk assessments made for the sponge tend to overstate the risk. "The assessments are based on estimates of the amounts of contaminants in the product that are almost certainly highly excessive," Dr. Hayes said.

He also said that women do not need contraception throughout their lives and do not need it daily even when they do need it.

Another critic of the FDA was Susan Seidler of the National Women's Health Network, which she said is the only national consumer group concerned solely with women's health.

"Additional tests should be conducted on the safety of material used in the contraceptive sponge," Ms. Seidler said.

She said the sponge's label tells of a risk of Toxic Shock Syndrome for users for more than six hours during menstruation. This warning "may not be adequate warning for the thousands of young women across this country who are at highest risk for Toxic Shock Syndrome."

Vet questions answered

By The Associated Press

Here are some questions often asked of the Veterans Administration, and the answers:

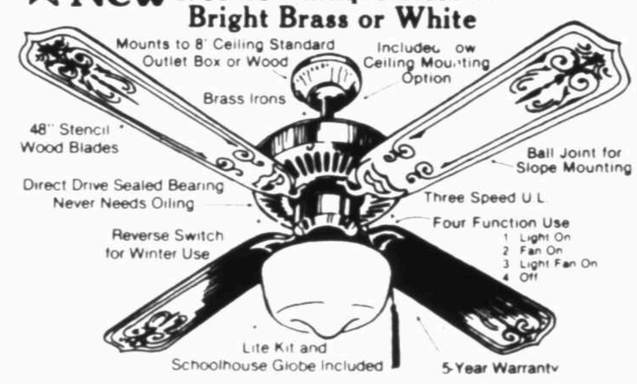

Q. I was a prisoner during World War II and wonder if I am entitled to any dental benefits?

A. Veterans who were prisoners of war for six months or more are eligible for dental benefits and may apply at any VA office or medical center.

Q. My husband was a Marine killed in Vietnam. Am I eligible for a GI home loan?

A. Spouses of service personnel who died on active duty are.

DEAR ABBY

Unwed mother still grateful

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for publishing my letter concerning Booth Hospital for unwed mothers. We've received some lovely donations and even some inquiries from people wanting to adopt one of our 10-year-old pregnant girls. (Booth doesn't have a license for adoptions, so we had to discourage that.)

One woman who had been in Booth 54 years ago wrote:

"I came to your hospital in 1929, a young, unmarried girl, 8 months pregnant. Everyone was wonderful to me. I had no money, but was treated the same as those who could pay something. I decided to keep my baby and I'm glad I did, because two years later I fell in love with a gentleman who knew my story and said he loved me even more because I kept my baby. He married me, adopted my child and a year later we had another child.

"I had always wanted to send Booth Hospital at least $100 to show my gratitude, but times were tough, we were on welfare and lucky to feed ourselves.

"I am now a 71-year-old widow and can finally send you $5 a month. I hope it helps. Except for a few close family members, nobody knows I was an unwed mother, so I beg you not to use my name.

"God bless you folks at the Salvation Army. May the Lord watch over, comfort and guide all of you always." — Name Withheld

We were very much touched by this letter, and I thought you might want to share it with your readers. — ALICE GRAHAM WINTERS, BOOTH HOSPITAL, CHICAGO

DEAR ABBY: For the last year or so, when I go into a store I take a few small things and put them in my purse or pocket. I have the money and could easily pay for them, but I still do it. Some of the items I have taken I throw away because I have no use for them.

Why am I doing this? I am a respectable 42-year-old married woman. Please tell me soon, as I'm very much ashamed. — OTHERWISE HONORABLE

DEAR HONORABLE: You could be afflicted with "kleptomania" — a compulsion to steal. If you can't bring yourself to ask your physician to recommend a therapist, consult your local mental health facility. It offers confidential counseling.

(You're never too old (or too young) to learn how to make friends and be popular. For Abby's booklet on Popularity, send $1, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Aspirin makers told put up or shut up

NEW YORK (AP) — Whether you call it Bufferin, Anacin, Alka-Seltzer, Dristan or Midol, it all contains the same pain reliever — aspirin.

No clever name or high-priced ad campaign is going to make it any better at stilling your aches and pains.

The Federal Trade Commission underscored that point recently by ordering two companies not to say their aspirin products were better than anyone else's, unless they could prove it.

The companies, Bristol-Myers and Sterling Drug, are unlikely to be able to do that, says Dr. Sidney Wolfe of the Public Interest Health Research Group founded by Ralph Nader. While some of their products contain other ingredients besides aspirin, the added substances "are totally worthless as a pain reliever," Wolfe says.

"There are only two ingredients approved by the Food and Drug Administration as safe and effective over-the-counter pain relievers," Wolfe says. "One is called aspirin and the other is acetaminophen."

Both are available in inexpensive no-frills or store-brand varieties, at costs far lower than the name-brand products.

"Conservatively, at least $300 million or $400 million a year are being wasted by consumers because instead of buying store-brand acetaminophen or aspirin they are buying Bayer or Anacin or any of the other (brand-name) products," Wolfe says.

He adds that the consumer may well be getting unknown or unwanted ingredients in a brand-name pain killer.

Anacin, for example, contains caffeine. It was once advertised as containing the pain reliever doctors recommend most, until the FTC in 1981 ordered its maker, American Home Products, to stop saying so. The pain reliever doctors recommend most is, of course, aspirin. An Anacin tablet contains 400 milligrams of aspirin and 32 milligrams of caffeine.

Maximum strength Anacin is no different, except that it contains a little more aspirin, 500 milligrams, and the 32 milligrams of caffeine.

The 1982 edition of the Physicians' Desk Reference, a standard guide to drugs, lists 48 products that contain aspirin. The information in the PDR, as it's called, comes from the manufacturers of the products. Here are the ingredients in a few common brands:

Bufferin: 324 milligrams of aspirin that has been "buffered," chemically treated in a way that, its maker had claimed, makes it less likely to upset the stomach. The FTC said in its decision there is no proof that buffering works.

Excedrin: It contains aspirin and acetaminophen, 250 milligrams of each. Wolfe says that combination "doesn't make very much sense at all."

Bayer Aspirin: 325 milligrams of aspirin.

Dristan Decongestant-Antihistamine-Analgesic Capsules: 325 milligrams aspirin, 12.5 milligrams phenylpropanolamine, 16.2 milligrams caffeine, 2 milligrams chlorpheniramine maleate.

Midol: 454 milligrams aspirin, 32.4 milligrams caffeine, 14.9 milligrams cinnamedrine hydrochloride.

The FTC's ruling was concerned only with the following products, all containing aspirin: Bufferin, Excedrin, Excedrin P.M., Bayer Aspirin, Bayer Children's Aspirin, Cope, Vanquish and Midol.

Caffeine not so bad, scientist says

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — The caffeine in a glass of cola probably isn't as harmful as the self-imposed guilt some people feel when they drink it, a food scientist says.

The public has overreacted to the potential dangers of caffeine, which is seldom harmful in moderate quantities, said Manfred Kroger, professor of food science at Pennsylvania State University.

Kroger also is a spokesman for the Chicago-based Institute of Food Technologists, which completed a study in April on the effects of caffeine consumption.

The study concluded that although questions remained about the ultimate safety of the stimulant, "the available data do not seem to support a judgment of hazard to mankind from moderate intake."

"Living with the self-imposed guilt of drinking a glass of cola containing caffeine is probably more harmful than the 6 ounces of cola," Kroger said.

VD causes infertility

BALTIMORE (AP) — Gonorrhea and other sexually transmitted diseases, which can lead to pelvic inflammatory disease in women and low sperm counts in men, account for more than half the infertility in many geographic areas, according to a new report.

The report from Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health noted that documented cases of gonorrhea, based on a population of 100,000, increased by nearly 180 percent between 1965 and 1975. During that period, infertility among women between the ages of 15 and 29 increased about 3 percent, said the report, released Monday.

"Prompt treatment of sexually transmitted diseases is essential to avoid the risk of infertility," said Dr. Jacqueline Sherris, co-author of the report.

Since 1975, the number of reported cases of gonorrhea has remained at about 470 cases per 100,000 people annually. Pelvic inflammatory disease affects nearly 1 million American women annually, causing pain, infertility and tubal pregnancies.

Wife's work affects health of husband

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Men whose wives have attended college and are working are more than three times as likely to develop heart disease than men whose wives have had only a grade-school education and do not work, according to a new study.

The study, published in the July issue of the American Journal of Epidemiology, found that men whose wives had completed the eighth grade or less had an 8.3 percent chance of getting coronary heart disease. The rate of heart disease in those whose wives had nine to 12 years of education was 15.4 percent, while in those whose wives completed 13 years of school or more, it was 21.7 percent.

"If you're a man married to a working woman with more than 13 years of education, the rates jumped up to 31.8 percent," Dr. Suzanne G. Haynes, of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the principal author of the study, said Tuesday.

Children appeared to aggravate the situation, she noted.

"The more children that they had, the higher the rate," she said. "They went from a low (risk) of 7.9 percent for men with no children, 15.2 percent for men with one."

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Dwarf citrus trees bear giant fruit

By ELVIN McDONALD

One group of plants I promise will give you great pleasure are the dwarf citrus. These come in every flavor and can be grown in pots or tubs as bushes, small standard trees, hanging baskets or bonsai.

Ponderosa lemon is good for beginners. It's not unusual for a 12-inch plant in a 6-inch pot to bear grapefruit-size fruit. Citrus Meyeri bears smaller but better quality lemons.

You can also grow Citrus aurantifolia on a dwarf bush that will produce Key limes to flavor the pies for which it is famous. The Persian lime also makes an excellent house plant.

Fortunella Hindsii, the Formosa kumquat, and Citrus myrtifolia, which has small mytle-like leaves, make excellent subjects for bonsai that can be grown all year indoors, or outdoors when the weather is warm. Sources include Logee's Greenhouses, 55 North St., Danielson, Conn. 06239 (catalog $2.50) and Country Hills Greenhouse, Route 2, Corning, Ohio 43730 (catalog $2).

If you live in the East, a major source for improved citrus is Adams Citrus Nursery, Inc., Box 1505, Haines City, Fla. 33844. In the West, leading specialists are Four Winds Growers, Box 3538, Fremont, Calif. 94538 (their booklet on growing dwarf citrus is $1.50). Stock from these suppliers is sold through local retail nurseries and garden centers.

The only difficult thing about growing citrus is starting from a seed or pit collected from a fruit you've just eaten. It will sprout but isn't likely to bear for many years. The answer is to invest a little money in a known producer.

To succeed with potted citrus, use a mix such as two parts humus to one of sand. Water and fertilize freely in warm, sunny weathr. Keep on the dry side and don't feed in fall and winter. If leaves turn yellow between veins, apply an acid fertilizer such as Miracid.

This Ponderosa lemon can bear fruit the size of a grapefruit when the tree itself is only a foot tall.

Q. Is there a mail source for geraniums such as 'Grey Lady Plymouth,' 'Prince Rupert' and the Deacon hybrids? I can't find them locally.

A. The geraniums you seek and several hundred others are in the current catalog ($1 per copy) of Shady Hill Gardens, 821 Walnut St., Batavia, Ill. 60510. Summer is an excellent time to establish young geranium plants for blooms indoors next fall and winter.

The cheap way to have a quantity of flower-covered potted geraniums in winter is to sow hybrid seeds in summer. These sprout quickly and soon show typical leaves. Packets of many different kinds are in the Shady Hill catalog.

All the answers to what makes geraniums bloom are in my newsletter: Send 50 cents coin and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope with "Gernanium" written on the back flap to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, Box R, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14305; in Canada, 4141 Glenayr Ave., Niagara Falls, Ont. L2E 6K1.

Q. Why do the leaves of my summer phlox turn yellow, starting at the bottom and creeping up the stem?

A. Powdery mildew and a number of other diseases frequently attack phlox. Pick and destroy badly infected leaves. Then apply a fungicide such as Acti-dione, Benomyl, Folpet (Phaltan), Lime Sulfur, Karathane or Sulfur Dust, following label directions. It will also help to situate your phlox in maximum sun with the best air circulation possible. When watering, soak the soil but keep the leaves dry.

Gardeners who prefer not to use chemicals report promising results from Judd Ringer's bio-organic fertilizers. No miracle is claimed but it appears that healthy soil produces healthy plants that have built-in resistance to diseases and insect pests. (A free catalog is available from Ringer Research, 6860 Flying Cloud Dr., Eden Prairie, Minn. 55344.)

Quick Take: Sow seeds of hardy perennials in summer for blooming-size transplants next spring. Kinds include delphinium, dianthus, candytuft, lupine, forget-me-not, painted daisy and many others. Check local seed racks and catalogs such as Burpee and Park.

Q.T.: One of the world's most beautiful perennial borders is at Old Westbury Gardens, Box 430, Old Westbury, N.Y. 11568. Details about visiting this heavenly spot on Long Island, a short distance east of New York City, are in a free leaflet.

Q.T.: A host of rare flowering plants for garden, home and greenhouse are in a new catalog ($1 per copy) from Kartuz Greenhouses, 1408 Sunset Dr., Vista, Calif. 92083.

Diet drug helps autistic

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Researchers who have found the diet drug fenfluramine relieves some symptoms of autism plan to expand their testing to 150 children this fall, a scientist says.

Betty Jo Freeman, a researcher at the University of California-Los Angeles, told reporters Monday that the drug caused significant improvements when administered to 14 children over four months.

"We know we can't cure autism," Ms. Freeman said. "What we hope the drug does in some autistic children is maximize their potential."

Autism, a neurological disorder, impairs development of verbal, physical and social skills.

Doctors busy in summer

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans visit their doctors more often during the summer, and especially during August, than at any other time of the year, according to a study by a provider of optometric care.

Pedodontists, who specialize in children's dental needs, see more patients in the second half of August than at any other time, the study by Pearle Vision Centers showed.

Osteopaths' patient loads peak in August, and pediatricians report their busiest periods are August and September, plus January — the flu season. General physicians and podiatrists, too, are busiest during the summer.

Doctor accuses FDA of errors

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading researcher charged the Food and Drug Administration on Wednesday with committing "a series of systematic errors" in approving use of the Today Contraceptive Sponge.

Nathan Mantel of the American University, who formulated the first statistical method of assessing cancer risks, said FDA officials weren't as careful in calculating a safe dose of the drug as they would have required outside researchers to be.

"(They) have not been exercising the same scrupulous care that they expect in reports from outside organizations — and even scrupulous care is frequently not effective in getting a favorable decision from the FDA," Mantel told a House subcommittee.

But Dr. Arthur Hull Hayes, commissiiner of the FDA, defended the decision. "The safety of the Today Contraceptive Sponge was evaluated and considered extensively by FDA reviewers prior to approval," he said.

Dr. Hayes said FDA estimates of exposure to contaminants that are known to cause cancer in animals are well under one-millionth of the doses that cause cancer in animals.

Mantel, who teaches mathematics and computer science, said data may not permit calculation of any safe level for 2,4-Toluenediamine. This substance is used in the sponge and some researchers believe it to be a possible cause of cancer.

He said use of the contraceptive sponge "would allow direct contact with highly sensitive tissues like the cervix and the vagina, extremely important sites of cancer in women."

Dr. Hayes cautioned, "It is important not to overestimate the precision or superiority of so-called qualitative expressions of risk."

He said that all risk assessments made for the sponge tend to overstate the risk. "The assessments are based on estimates of the amounts of contaminants in the product that are almost certainly highly excessive," Dr. Hayes said.

He also said that women do not need contraception throughout their lives and do not need it daily even when they do need it.

Another critic of the FDA was Susan Seidler of the National Women's Health Network, which she said is the only national consumer group concerned solely with women's health.

"Additional tests should be conducted on the safety of material used in the contraceptive sponge," Ms. Seidler said.

She said the sponge's label tells of a risk of Toxic Shock Syndrome for users for more than six hours during menstruation. This warning "may not be adequate warning for the thousands of young women across this country who are at highest risk for Toxic Shock Syndrome."

Vet questions answered

By The Associated Press

Here are some questions often asked of the Veterans Administration, and the answers:

Q. I was a prisoner during World War II and wonder if I am entitled to any dental benefits?

A. Veterans who were prisoners of war for six months or more are eligible for dental benefits and may apply at any VA office or medical center.

Q. My husband was a Marine killed in Vietnam. Am I eligible for a GI home loan?

A. Spouses of service personnel who died on active duty are.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for publishing my letter concerning Booth Hospital for unwed mothers. We've received some lovely donations and even some inquiries from people wanting to adopt one of our 10-year-old pregnant girls. (Booth doesn't have a license for adoptions, so we had to discourage that.)

One woman who had been in Booth 54 years ago wrote:

"I came to your hospital in 1929, a young, unmarried girl, 8 months pregnant. Everyone was wonderful to me. I had no money, but was treated the same as those who could pay something. I decided to keep my baby and I'm glad I did, because two years later I fell in love with a gentleman who knew my story and said he loved me even more because I kept my baby. He married me, adopted my child and a year later we had another child.

"I had always wanted to send Booth Hospital at least $100 to show my gratitude, but times were tough, we were on welfare and lucky to feed ourselves.

"I am now a 71-year-old widow and can finally send you $5 a month. I hope it helps. Except for a few close family members, nobody knows I was an unwed mother, so I beg you not to use my name.

"God bless you folks at the Salvation Army. May the Lord watch over, comfort and guide all of you always." — Name Withheld

We were very much touched by this letter, and I thought you might want to share it with your readers. — ALICE GRAHAM WINTERS, BOOTH HOSPITAL, CHICAGO

DEAR ABBY: For the last year or so, when I go into a store I take a few small things and put them in my purse or pocket. I have the money and could easily pay for them, but I still do it. Some of the items I have taken I throw away because I have no use for them.

Why am I doing this? I am a respectable 42-year-old married woman. Please tell me soon, as I'm very much ashamed. — OTHERWISE HONORABLE

DEAR HONORABLE: You could be afflicted with "kleptomania" — a compulsion to steal. If you can't bring yourself to ask your physician to recommend a therapist, consult your local mental health facility. It offers confidential counseling.

(You're never too old (or too young) to learn how to make friends and be popular. For Abby's booklet on Popularity, send $1, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Aspirin makers told put up or shut up

NEW YORK (AP) — Whether you call it Bufferin, Anacin, Alka-Seltzer, Dristan or Midol, it all contains the same pain reliever — aspirin.

No clever name or high-priced ad campaign is going to make it any better at stilling your aches and pains.

The Federal Trade Commission underscored that point recently by ordering two companies not to say their aspirin products were better than anyone else's, unless they could prove it.

The companies, Bristol-Myers and Sterling Drug, are unlikely to be able to do that, says Dr. Sidney Wolfe of the Public Interest Health Research Group founded by Ralph Nader. While some of their products contain other ingredients besides aspirin, the added substances "are totally worthless as a pain reliever," Wolfe says.

"There are only two ingredients approved by the Food and Drug Administration as safe and effective over-the-counter pain relievers," Wolfe says. "One is called aspirin and the other is acetaminophen."

Both are available in inexpensive no-frills or store-brand varieties, at costs far lower than the name-brand products.

"Conservatively, at least $300 million or $400 million a year are being wasted by consumers because instead of buying store-brand acetaminophen or aspirin they are buying Bayer or Anacin or any of the other (brand-name) products," Wolfe says.

He adds that the consumer may well be getting unknown or unwanted ingredients in a brand-name pain killer.

Anacin, for example, contains caffeine. It was once advertised as containing the pain reliever doctors recommend most, until the FTC in 1981 ordered its maker, American Home Products, to stop saying so. The pain reliever doctors recommend most is, of course, aspirin. An Anacin tablet contains 400 milligrams of aspirin and 32 milligrams of caffeine.

Maximum strength Anacin is no different, except that it contains a little more aspirin, 500 milligrams, and the 32 milligrams of caffeine.

The 1982 edition of the Physicians' Desk Reference, a standard guide to drugs, lists 48 products that contain aspirin. The information in the PDR, as it's called, comes from the manufacturers of the products. Here are the ingredients in a few common brands:

Bufferin: 324 milligrams of aspirin that has been "buffered," chemically treated in a way that, its maker had claimed, makes it less likely to upset the stomach. The FTC said in its decision there is no proof that buffering works.

Excedrin: It contains aspirin and acetaminophen, 250 milligrams of each. Wolfe says that combination "doesn't make very much sense at all."

Bayer Aspirin: 325 milligrams of aspirin.

Alka-Seltzer Effervescent Pain Reliever and Antacid: 324 milligrams of aspirin, 1,904 milligrams sodium bicarbonate and 1,000 milligrams citric acid.

Dristan Decongestant-Antihistamine-Analgesic Capsules: 325 milligrams aspirin, 12.5 milligrams phenylpropanolamine, 16.2 milligrams caffeine, 2 milligrams chlorpheniramine maleate.

Midol: 454 milligrams aspirin, 32.4 milligrams caffeine, 14.9 milligrams cinnamedrine hydrochloride.

The FTC's ruling was concerned only with the following products, all containing aspirin: Bufferin, Excedrin, Excedrin P.M., Bayer Aspirin, Bayer Children's Aspirin, Cope, Vanquish and Midol.

Caffeine not so bad, scientist says

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — The caffeine in a glass of cola probably isn't as harmful as the self-imposed guilt some people feel when they drink it, a food scientist says.

The public has overreacted to the potential dangers of caffeine, which is seldom harmful in moderate quantities, said Manfred Kroger, professor of food science at Pennsylvania State University.

Kroger also is a spokesman for the Chicago-based Institute of Food Technologists, which completed a study in April on the effects of caffeine consumption.

The study concluded that although questions remained about the ultimate safety of the stimulant, "the available data do not seem to support a judgment of hazard to mankind from moderate intake."

"Living with the self-imposed guilt of drinking a glass of cola containing caffeine is probably more harmful than the 6 ounces of cola," Kroger said.

Handy health, beauty information available free

Copley News Service

Taking care of your good looks and your good health isn't always an economical proposition. But here are some freebies to help, including the new 1983 Height and Weight charts, a complete exercise program, answers to your questions about menopause and crucial information on heart attacks.

HEIGHT AND WEIGHT TABLES

Privately we all know when our clothing becomes slightly more difficult to get into. But publicly, thanks to the people at Metropolitan Life, we still can hold up our heads while we suck in our vindicated (extra!) inches.

The reason is the revised version of the Metropolitan Height & Weight Tables. This 1983 revision has added a significant number of pounds to each category — more for the diminutive among us — and made a big splash in the press for slackening the reins.

Metropolitan will send you a convenient 3-by-7-inch card of the tables, so that you can put it in an equally convenient spot for easy reference.

One side of the card describes how to make an approximation of your frame size; the other delivers the good news. So give yourself a break and send for this freebie. Offer good through Aug. 31, 1983.

Directions: Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

APPROACHING MENOPAUSE

Most women have similar questions about the onset and the effects of menopause: When? What are the symtpoms? Are emotions affected? Is there such a thing as a male menopause?

Approaching the Menopausal Years is designed to answer those questions. Published by the makers of several feminine hygiene products, among them Carefree panty shields and Stayfree minipads, the fold-out leaflet also includes cents-off coupons for those two products.

The leaflet is written in a clear, concise style, answering a series of the 10 questions asked most often by women nearing the menopausal years. The emphasis is on the positive, assuring women that menopause need not be a traumatic time of life. Offer good trhough Aug. 31, 1983.

Directions: Send a postcard.

HEART ATTACKS

Heart attacks are no laughing matter. The more you and your loved ones can learn about them — their causes and their symptoms — the better your odds at surviving one will be.

The booklet Heart Attacks, from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, is one of the "Medicine for the Layman" series and will get your education started.

The 32-page cleverly illustrated monograph starts the reader off with the sobering information that cardiovascular disease is responsible for 54 percent of all deaths in the United States. This is more than all other causes of death combined and almost three times more than cancer, the second major cause of death. Heart attacks account for nearly two-thirds of all those cardiovascular deaths.

This booklet will prove a valuable resource if heart attack happens to strike your family. Coverage is given to where to go for help, post-heart-attack options and prevention. Prevention may just be the most important chapter you will read. Offer good through Aug. 31, 1983.

Good nutrition and physical fitness. They're linked together like pain and gain, cottage cheese and peaches, or banana splits and size 18.

A Recipe for Fitness gives a booklet full of reasons why both diet and exercise have an effect on how your body shapes up over the years. Beginning with seven guidelines to maintaining a healthy diet, the 40-page, full-color publication summarizes the essence of good eating habits.

What follows is a 76-step, fully illustrated exercise program that constitutes a workout for the entire body. Warm-up, aerobic and concentrated joint exercises comprise the three-phase workout guaranteed to make you fit, wear you out and generally improve your life.

Don't forget your exercise/cook-booklet when you drag your aerobicized body from the exercise floor into the kitchen. Seven pages of recipes that match your newfound, low-calorie menality also are included. Offer good through Aug. 31, 1983.

Premenstrual stress hard to diagnose

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — The following quiz is about women, but it is not just for them. It is also for men since they live, love, play and work with women.

What condition or disease might the following symptoms indicate in a woman? Anxiety, crying, depression, mood swings, irritability, aggression, food cravings, headache, dizziness, faintness, lethargy?

It could be a number of things, but let's add more pieces to the puzzle to make it easier. These symptoms recur regularly every month in the two weeks prior to menstruation.

And this mixed bag of symptoms might include cold sweats, nausea, aching joints, blurring vision, forgetfulness, increased drinking or drug taking, intolerable itching and a host of other mood, behavior and physical changes.

GOT IT? A growing number of people recognize the symptoms and timing as premenstrual syndrome, a hormone disorder that is gaining recent national attention due, in part, to publicity generated when a British woman was acquitted of killing her husband during a time when she was suffering from the syndrome.

The physician who treated the woman, Katharina Dalton, is a leading expert on PMS, as it is called, and has been treating women sufferers in London for more than 30 years.

She calls it "the world's commonest disease," and estimates that 40 percent of women suffer from PMS, to varying degrees, at some time during their lives.

MICHELLE O'NEILL believes the figure is probably even higher.

O'Neill, 41, a registered nurse who is also a marriage and family counselor and a clinical psychologist, runs the Pre-Menstrual and Menopausal Syndrome Treatment Center, with partner Deborah Nicholas. The center's in the offices of Dr. William Merrit, a nearby Culver City gynecologist. At present they have some 80 patients, ranging in age from 16 to 46.

O'Neill herself has PMS and, until a few months ago, was untreated. As she describes it, she "would wake up and be like a raving lunatic. It was like a Jekyll and Hyde situation. ... One day you're feeling fine and the next day everything is black."

She'd yell at her family, she felt suicidal, she was in analysis for years and she sought the advice of a neurologist because she thought she had a brain tumor.

O'NEILL SAYS many women suffering from PMS end up seeing specialist after specialist — allergists, psychiatrists, neurologists — for many years seeking help for their symptoms.

O'Neill, following Dalton's method of treatment, uses a combination of diet, vitamins and progesterone to control the condition.

Progesterone is not widely prescribed in the United States for PMS, probably because it has not been tested here.

But O'Neill believes that has more to do with the attitude of doctors than with the effectiveness of treatment.

"For the most part the medical community is male. They don't care. And our society places such a premium on control and rationality that women who have PMS hide their symptoms. They hide their irrationality."

And if a woman seeks medical advice about PMS, often she isn't taken seriously because emotional symptoms are invariably a part of the syndrome and doctors assume psychological problems are the cause.

"The cause is physiological, not psychological. We're told these symptoms are normal, that all women get this. And while you're having symptoms you're not going to go for treatment because you feel so bad about yourself. You don't care."

IN ADDITION, because the symptoms are transient a woman may make no connection between them and her period.

Timing is one of the keys to diagnosis, O'Neill says. A woman who comes to her for help is asked to chart her symptoms for three months before O'Neill decides if the patient has PMS.

If the symptoms fall in a pattern the two weeks before the onset of a period, PMS may be at fault and O'Neill recommends a multivitamin that contains high concentrations of B vitamins and magnesium and a diet that calls for no (or reduced) salt, caffeine, alcohol, calcium and red meat consumption. She also is convinced that regular exercise will help to lessen the symptoms.

IF SYMPTOMS CONTINUE, O'Neil recommends progesterone therapy. The dosage differs for each person and can be administered rectally, in a suppository, by injection or under the tongue.

But some feminists see PMS as a larger issue than merely a health problem, and would rather ignore it.

Dads get morning sickness

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Morning sickness, backache, fatigue — these and other symptoms of pregnancy are more likely than not to afflict an expectant father, says a nurse-scientist who is researching the mysterious male reaction to the condition of pregnant wives that Western science knows as "couvade."

"Even abdominal swelling — all the men we've seen have experienced that, too," adds Dr. Jacqueline Clinton, an associate professor at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee Center for Nursing Research and Evaluation.

Ms. Clinton and two UWM assistant professors of nursing, Rita Beck and Eileen P. Sheil, have interviewed 60 fathers-to-be in Milwaukee and plan to include 200 more in their study.

According to Ms. Clinton, more than half the expectant fathers in the Western world join their wives in suffering clear signs of pregnancy. The symptoms include headaches, depression, irritability, cravings for particular foods and weight gain.

"IN SOME COUNTRIES — Britain, for example — the figure is higher. I think it would be a lot higher everywhere if men didn't hide what's happening to them — if they would 'fess up," said Ms. Clinton, who came to UWM from the University of Michigan in 1981.

She combines the teaching of graduate courses in nursing with broad research in the fields of mental health and ethnic responses to modern professional health care. She and her colleagues, who began collecting data early in 1982, expect to continue the work for another three years. Recently their project was approved for funding by the National Advisory Committee of the National Institutes of Health.

THEY PLAN TO USE their research to expand maternity care to fathers. "We want to identify the hard months and the easy months, what the men can expect and what they can do about it," Ms. Clinton said.

"Ultimately we will develop a plan of self-care for expectant fathers based on how the men we talk to have dealt with their problems. The interviews are a long-term process. We talk to the men periodically over the term of their wives' pregnancies and beyond. We have a series of 10 interviews in all for each subject."

Ms. Clinton plans to put together health literature for expectant fathers that describes couvade and advises them on treatment of the symptoms. This might include diet, medication, exercise and alteration of habits to reduce stress, she said.

COUVADE, a French word meaning "to brood or hatch," seems to have been observed first in the Western world in England early in the present century. yet it is nothing new, says Ms. Clinton, who also has studied cultural anthropology. Scholars have been noting couvade in non-industrial societies since the 19th century.

There it is often displayed openly in ritual form. Expectant fathers in parts of Africa or New Guinea might don special dress, eat special foods and limit the amount of work they do. In some societies these practices are believed to extract evil spirits from the mothers. They also serve as a means of claiming paternity.

Ms. Clinton believes that couvade is a more or less natural way for a father-to-be to express a bond of sympathy with the woman approaching motherhood and a change of roles for himself.

"In our society, it's often interpreted as psychotic behavior," she says, "but in our work we're looking at it as a normal developmental phenomenon." The condition should be regarded as a sickness only if the symptoms become disabling, she said.

Government offers food info

More and more Americans are gardening, and that often leads to a surplus of vegetables in the summertime.

For grandma "putting up" food was the answer, and that usually meant drying or canning. Today freezing is also a good choice, and the government has some helpful booklets for people who want to save some of their produce.

All of the booklets can be bought from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo., 81009. Among them are:

—"Freezing Combination Main Dishes," item number 139L, $2.25.

—"Home Freezing of Fruits and Vegetables," item number 141L, $3.50.

—"Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables," item number 140L, $2.50.

—"How To Make Jellies, Jams and Preserves at Home," item number 238L, $2.50.

—"Making Pickles and Relishes at Home," item number 144L, $4.50.

—"Storing Vegetables and Fruits," item number 145L, $2.25.

Ad matches McEnroe's head with another man's body

John McEnroe

NEW YORK (AP) — An ad campaign to promote John McEnroe's switch from a wooden racket to a nylon-and-graphite frame has joined the tennis star's head to the body of a muscle-bound student — loaning the slender McEnroe a rippling 45-inch chest.

The campaign for a new Dunlop racket features a composite photo of a bare-chested man — half McEnroe, 24, and half Ted Matia, a 22-year-old student from DeKalb College outside Atlanta.

Matia said he was paid $250 to model for a photo which was matched with a headshot of McEnroe made months earlier in New York.

Matia, who is not a professional model, was invited to try out for the ad after he was spotted working out in a gym.

Matia has a 45-inch chest, 30-inch waist and 17½-inch biceps.

James Watt

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — It won't be a Western-style showdown the day the Beach Boys appear in Albuquerque and Interior Secretary James Watt speaks in Carlsbad.

The state, unlike the town of Washington, D.C., is clearly big enough for all of them.

Watt created a minor brouhaha by cancelling the rock 'n' roll group's appearance at the White House on the Fourth of July.

While Watt is in the town famous for its caverns on Sept. 17, the Beach Boys will be hanging ten at the New Mexico State Fair.

State Fair Manager Steve Anaya, who is Torrance County Democratic Party chairman, said he hopes Watt will attend the Beach Boys concert with him.

"I know the interior secretary is a Republican, but that shouldn't keep him from having fun at this show," Anaya said.

State Fair Commission Vice Chairman Odis Echols said the altercation between Watts and the pop group boosted the Beach Boys' popularity and, incidentally, doubled their fee.

LONDON (AP) — Hundreds of screaming pop music fans gave a rousing welcome to Prince Charles and Prince Dianana as they arrived for a concert of her favorite groups — Duran Duran and Dire Straits.

The couple was cheered wildly as they entered the packed Dominion Theatre on Wednesday night.

The gala was for the benefit of the Prince of Wales' Trust, a charitable fund.

Charles, 34 and Diana, 22, greeted members of the two British groups on arrival.

Duran Duran led off the concert with their hit "Is There Something You Should Know."

B.D. Williams

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — When actor Billy Dee Williams got a sore throat while shooting the CBS-TV miniseries "Chiefs," he discovered getting a doctor to make a set call was "kind of like finding a friendly undertaker."

Bud Ferillo, deputy to state Lt. Gov. Mike Daniel, said when he got a telephone request Wednesday to find a doctor for the 46-year-old Williams, he did his best to oblige.

"Finding an available doctor is kind of like finding a friendly undertaker," said Ferillo. "Not many doctors make house calls, much less trailer calls, on a movie set."

He made a couple of unsuccessful phone calls before finding Dr. Walt Roberts of Columbia.

While Roberts waited in a trailer, Ferillo went to get the actor, but fed him some slightly inaccurate information.

"I told him I had good news and bad news. The good news was I had a doctor. The bad news was that he was a veterinarian," Ferillo said.

Williams survived both the joke and the examination.

CBS plans to lay off 300 people

NEW YORK (AP) — "Nightwatch," CBS News' overnight broadcast, will feel the brunt of the ax when CBS lays off 14 staffers next week.

The Associated Press learned Wednesday that CBS News make the staff cuts as part of the CBS Broadcast Group's overall cost-trimming measures. Most of the lost jobs will come out of "Nightwatch," which debuted last fall and averages less than a million viewers a night.

A CBS source, who asked not to be identified, said the news positions range from senior staff members to secretaries. In addition, there will be about 35 layoffs in CBS' owned-and-operated stations next week, the source said.

The parent CBS Broadcast Group's goal is to drop nearly 300 jobs by Dec. 31. The Broadcast Group, with 8,500 staffers, is made up of the news division, entertainment, sports, radio and the five TV stations.

In a move the source said was not related to the dismissals, anchor Mary Jo West has decided to return to Phoenix, Ariz., where she will work for the ABC affiliate.

Except for the departure of Ms. West, even avid "Nightwatch" viewers won't be aware of the missing behind-the-scenes personnel. However, those who watch more than two hours of the broadcast will see the program soon repeating the features and interviews from the first two hours in the second two hours. Only the newscasts at each half hour will be new in the later half.

In another economy move, "Nightwatch" and the "CBS Morning News" will share the same set beginning Aug. 29, the source said. The "CBS Morning News," which has been using the set of "Sports Saturday" and "Sports Sunday," will move into the "Nightwatch" set when that show signs off at 6 a.m., Eastern time, each weekday morning.

Edward Joyce, executive vice president at CBS News, said: "We have no comment at the time about any layoffs."

In recent years, the Broadcast Group's revenues have grown by $800 million while its profits have only increased by $30 million, said a CBS insider who requested anonymity.

Last week, ABC News' "One-On-One," which is broadcast from 12:30-1, was canceled because of low ratings.

Young actors ponder their future

Don Stroud, left, Carl Yowell and Elizabeth Hewlett rehearse for Midland Community Theatre's production of "The Shadow Box." Reservations for the four performance run — July 29-30 and Aug. 5-6 — may be made by calling 682-4111.

Taking a break during rehearsal for Midland Community Theatre's production of Michael Cristofer's "The Shadow Box," Elizabeth Hewlett, Don Stroud and Carl Yowell, while joking comfortably with one another, listened attentively as each talked about the path he or she hopes to pursue.

Miss Hewlett is studying acting at Tulane University where she won "Best Actress" awards in "Love's Labors Lost" and "The Curse of the Starving Class." Stroud, who is currently playing the hero in the 35th annual Summer Mummers, is studying acting at The University of Texas at Austin. He was last seen onstage at Theatre Midland as Jesus in "Godspell." A recent graduate of Corpus Christi State University, Yowell has played leading roles in "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," "Man of La Mancha" and "Look Back in Anger."

They spoke tentatively at first, qualifying each statement with comments which indicated their awareness of the difficulties of staying with acting as a full-time profession.

"I'd very much like to reach the top of the profession," Miss Hewlett said slowly, "I think anybody would." Then, her words picking up momentum, the 21-year-old said, "But that's not my ultimate goal. My ultimate goal is to be able to please myself and to be satisfied with what I'm doing, knowing that I'm doing good work, not necessarily in a large company. There's good theater in a lot of places besides New York."

SHE PAUSED briefly as if reflecting on her words before adding, "If not, then I'd like to teach. There's not a whole lot in between actors can do."

Miss Hewlett, who has been acting since the first grade, used to think she had a preference for stage until she "realized how much money there was in screen work." That comment received a round of laughter and affirmative nods.

"It's very noble to want to be a starving actor on the stage, but I really think that I'm not quite that noble," she said, her laughter filtering in with the others.

Yowell, however, feels he "leans more toward being a starving actor."

"I'd just like to work and make a living at it. Beyond that, how much I make at it is really inmaterial," he added.

But Yowell, who has been in acting for eight years and is 23 years old, is approaching his career in a pragmatic manner. He plans on attending graduate school, saying, "In case a professional career as a working actor does not make a living for me I can teach. That's an alternative."

Stroud does not view teaching as an easy alternative.

"I will teach, if it comes to that," Stroud said, adding in a not-resigned-to-it tone, "And it probably will in the end. I am planning on accepting whatever happens and doing the best I can with it."

After six years in acting, Stroud's attitude comes not from a lack of interest in teaching, but rather from his appraisal of his limitations, an assessment which set off the laughter again.

"I HAVE NO patience and I'm afraid I would hurt someone if I didn't get what I wanted," said the 19-year-old.

In "The Shadow Box," which opens July 29, Miss Hewlett, Stroud and Yowell represent the cast in one of three hospice-type situations set up on the stage. Yowell has been in this production before, playing the role Stroud now has.

"I'm watching Don...And I think, 'Boy did I make a lot of mistakes.' It makes me realize that I've come a certain way as far as developing my craft," Yowell said. "It's also made me realize, when I think about the fellow who played my part a couple of years ago, how far I've go to go yet."

Ugandan artist finds refuge, success after fleeing country

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — In 1977, a 23-year-old Ugandan who wanted to become a successful artist, fled his country as its economic and cultural life collapsed under the chaotic rule of then-dictator Idi Amin.

Today, Dan Sekanwagi has had shows here, a successful one-man exhibit in West Germany and invitations to present his unusual batik paintings later this year in London and Washington.

Now 29, he says he could not have continued as an artist under the Amin regime. While still in Uganda, he had drawn illustrations for a Ugandan book publisher and donated paintings to raise money for his favorite soccer team, but he dared not exhibit.

"What I wanted in the first place was to become an artist, not just an illustrator," he says. "And to do that, I had to exhibit my work, show it to the public. But in those days of Idi Amin, you would do much better keeping a low profile.

"If my art happened to appeal to the people, and the press wrote about it, Amin's henchmen would say, 'This guy was getting so much fame.' They would get you — get you fixed — one way or other."

Tens of thousands of Ugandans simply disappeared during Amin's rule in 1971-79. Many others were known to have been tortured and killed in a reign of terror that didn't end until the regime was finally overthrown through Tanzanian military intervention in 1979.

Sekanwagi came to neighboring Kenya because it was one of the few countries he could enter without a passport, which then cost thousands of dollars in bribes to acquire.

He found the country in the throes of a tourist boom. But free-spending American and European visitors were more interested in buying mass-produced batik pictures from sidewalk vendors than Sekanwagi's oil paintings.

"I was in a bit of a fix," he recalled. "I couldn't do what I wanted to do, I had to do what they wanted."

To earn a living, Sekanwagi reluctantly turned to batik, an ancient Indonesian art form that used dyes and wax baths to produce a picture on cloth. But instead of the traditional metal drip pot, he used brushes to apply both color and wax to canvas, thus creating a "batik painting."

The colors are vivid, although the delicate shading is reminiscent of 19th-century Japanese woodblock prints. It is this style that sets his works apart.

MCT to hold auditions for 'Foxes'

Auditions will be held at 7:30 p.m. Sunday and Monday in the Redfern Room at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., for Midland Community Theatre's production of Lillian Hellman's 1934 masterpiece "The Little Foxes."

Roles are available for six men, ages 20-60, and four women, ages 20-45.

Male roles include three brothers, Ben, Oscar and Leo Hubbard, who connive to gain power and wealth; Horace Giddens, their brother-in-law and Regina's wealthy husband; William Marshall, a northern businessman; and Cal, the Giddens' black butler.

Female roles include Addie, the Giddens' black maid; Birdie Hubbard, Oscar's wife; Alexandra, Regina's daughter; and Regina, one of the best roles written for a woman in modern American theater. This role was played on Broadway by Tallulah Bankhead and Elizabeth Taylor, and on screen by Bette Bavis.

The production will be directed by Michael Spicer, MCT's children's theater director. For more information call Spicer, 682-2544.

Young actors ponder their future

All feel that the play, which deals with three terminally ill patients and their families, is "not about dying, it's about turning the page and going on."

While Stroud is rehearsing for "The Shadow Box," he is also playing the hero for the second time in the annual Summer Mummers.

"The Mummers thing was a commitment from a while back. I told them, 'I'm not going to be able to make auditions, but I really want to so please consider me.' " After he got the role, he heard about "Shadow Box."

"I couldn't pass it up because it's such a wonderful script," he said.

ALTHOUGH NONE of the three feel there is a style — musical, comedy or drama — that they would not work in, as Yowell said, "There are moments and times on stage in anything where you don't feel comfortable at all.

"I've worked in almost all those styles (drama, comedy and musical) and I really can't say that I prefer one over the other. I do have a preference for modern realism — that can fall into either a serious or a comic vein."

Yowell particularly remembers playing Jimmy Porter in "Look Back in Anger."

"That was one of those roles that once the play started it kind of took over. I felt like I was really inhabiting this other person. As far as growth as an actor, I feel like that was probably my favorite part."

Miss Hewlett enjoys playing "bitchy roles, rather than nice roles. I think just because that's a side of me that I don't let out in real life." But she feels that an actor's favorite role "is the one that you felt the most successful in and the one where people come up and pat you on the back afterwards.

"I THINK THAT'S really why we're in it, for the recognition and the self satisfaction of knowing that you just have done something very well. I did a couple of good things at Tulane for which I was rewarded. They weren't necessarily my favorite roles as far as fun goes, but as far as my sense of satisfaction they definately were," she said.

Stroud doesn't "like musical comedy as much" as drama or comedy. "I like the stranger things; I love dark stuff," he said, referring to dark humor.

"If I had my druthers about the whole thing," Stroud said, "I would end up in a Shakespearean company somewhere making enough money to eat."

Acting is certainly not an easy profession and for most not a profitable one. Eighty-seven percent of the members of Actors' Equity make less than $2,000 a year.

"That's something I've thought about a lot," Yowell responded when asked why he wanted a career in acting. "The answer made itself apparent to me over the last, I would say, year and a half or so.

"It's not so much the end result and the applause and the reviews and letting all your friends and the people you respect tell you how good you are; it's the process. From the moment you're cast in the show until the final curtain and even beyond that, the things you find out about yourself sometimes are enlightening. They will either scare you or make you feel good about yourself.

Then he added, "It's also the thrill of working with other creative people. You invariably meet people who are very bright, very observant and teach you a lot just by being around them."

The others agreed.

"I'VE ALWAYS held that it takes an intelligent person to be as perceptive as a good actor has to be," Miss Hewlett said, laughing as she commented, "I'm really getting myself into a hole here, aren't I?"

Everyone nodded as she continued, "It's stimulating to be able to work with good actors because you're also working with what I consider intelligent people. Not necessarily nice people — a lot of people in the theater are not nice at all, but they're intelligent and stimulating.

"It gives you a chance to be in situations you'd never be in again or you'd never been in before and you might be thankful that you would never be in them," Miss Hewlett said, pausing before she added, "To be able to grasp a character that's so different from yourself is a real accomplishment."

Stroud best summed up how they all felt when he said, "I think acting is an exercise of life. It's the study of life. You watch people. You learn from people. You learn from everything you do. That's why so many actors are waiters. Acting is just getting down to the nitty gritty of being a human being."

Beaumont Brazos (Don Stroud) tells Dinwoody Dinsmore (Mike Minces) that his daughter, Daphne, has been captured by the villainous U. Bertie Dastard in this scene from the 35th annual Summer Mummers. Midland Community Theatre's production of "Ripsnorting on the Roaring Fork" will be onstage at the Yucca Theatre Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. through Labor Day. For reservations call Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

Sunday last chance to see 'Dirty Work at Crossroads'

The Pickwick Players's production of "Dirty Work at the Crossroads" closes this weekend at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

The production will be staged at 1:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

"Dirty Work" is a classic melodrama. Adam Oakland (Josh Jones) is engaged to Nellie Lovelace (Lynn Granberry) until that dastardly villain, Munro Murgatroyd (Stuart Williams) intervenes, assisted by the nefarious Ida Rhinegold (Jennifer DeLong). The day is saved by the faithful, though not too bright, Mookie MaGuggins (Stan Williams).

Others in the production include Elaine McKinney as Mrs. Asterbilt, Maria Bakke as Leone Asterbilt, Julie DeLong as Fleurette, Christi Irish as Little Nellie and Sharon Graham as the Widow Lovelace. Scott Innes is the stage manager.

Soft drinks and refreshments will be sold in the lobby, novelties will be on sale and booing of the villains is encouraged. Tickets, priced at $3, are on sale at Theatre Midland. Reservations may be made by calling Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

Collecting toy soldiers popular

The number of toy-soldier collectors is growing, says Frank G. Frisella, director of the American Model Soldier Society, founded in 1960, which has more than 500 members. There are many similar groups in the United States.

Female director says first day on set is hardest one

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — During a recent day of filming on "National Lampoon's Joy of Sex," a set worker answered the director's order with "Yes, sir — I mean ma'am."

The slip was natural. For generations, movie crews have worked for male directors. Now that women are beginning to break into a profession that long was denied to them, the crews are reprogramming their language.

"I think I get along better with crews than do most directors," says Martha Coolidge, who's been directing films for 11 years. "Of course, there sometimes are personality clashes; if you start getting on each other's nerves, then it's best to get away from each other. But that has nothing to do with being male or female."

The first day is the hardest, says Miss Coolidge, who is directing the National Lampoon movie. "When I did a low-budget film called 'City Girl,' the cameraman told me there had been some discussion among the crew about how a woman director would work out. After the first day, he said, they decided 'She knows what she's doing.' "

Until this year, the 36-year-old Miss Coolidge's work has largely been devoted to highly praised, but little seen, documentaries and failed projects for features. Then came "Valley Girl."

It seemed like one of those exploitation movies on the order of "Rock Around the Clock" or "Let's Twist" — a movie designed to cash in on a music fad. Film critics were astonished to find "Valley Girl" a funny, energetic and ultimately endearing account of tribal customs in the San Fernando Valley.

Audiences also responded to "Valley Girl," which has already sold $12 million worth of tickets.

She recently was directing scenes in the new movie at the massive old Elks Club in midtown Los Angeles.

'El Vaquero' continues on display

The hot, dusty world of vaqueros is captured in "El Vaquero: Genesis Del Cowboy Texano," on display at First Cirty National Bank of Midland this month.

"El Vaquero," a traveling exhibit from the University of Texas Institute of Texan Cultures at San Antonio, consisting of more than 100 photographs and the text, in English and Spanish, presents an intimate view of Mexican vaqueros, and their everyday work on a large ranch in northern Mexico.

The exhibit's striking photographs, taken by William D. Wittliff, document the everyday reality of the vaqueros life on the range. They were taken when Wittliff lived and traveled with a group of vaqueros on a roundup.

The exhibit is in the bank's main lobby. For more information call Cindy Ford, 685-5439.

'English si, Espanol no' rule for employees

ELIZABETH, N.J.(AP) — The mayor of this city where one in four residents is Hispanic has ordered municipal employees to speak only English, even in private conversations, unless they have to use another language to conduct business with the public.

He said it's rude to have a conversation other people can't understand.

But Jeffrey Fogel, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union in Newark, said Friday that the rule is "preposterous" and a sign of "paranoia."

Mayor Thomas Dunn said he issued the order last month after several complaints from employees and people coming into City Hall who heard some of the 1,500 workers speak to each other in foreign languages.

"I just wanted the girls to know if you want to tell the other girls about the night before, don't do it in Spanish, do it in English," said Dunn.

Dunn said public employees in this city of 106,000 people speak a number of languages, including Spanish, Portuguese, French, Chinese, Polish and Vietnamese. A quarter of the city's people are Hispanic.

"Suppose you had two Chinese girls jabbering away in Chinese all day in front of the other girls. It's not polite," said Dunn.

The mayor said he is certain the order is legal, but Rosa Esperon, an attorney with the Puerto Rican Legal Defense and Education Fund in New York, disagreed.

Maine schoolgirl Samantha Smith, who has been visiting the Soviet Union at the invitation of Soviet leader Yuri Andropov, displays a Russian folk costume given her by schoolchildren in Moscow Wednesday.

'Samantha is a good example of hometown'

MANCHESTER, Maine (AP) — Samantha Smith, the globetrotting 11-year-old whose Soviet trip captured world attention, is "a good representation of what Manchester is all about," says the owner of a general store on the town's main street.

"But we can't help but wonder," says Lloyd Smith at Daggett's Country Market, "has all this attention changed this little girl?"

Smith is not related to Samantha, who has been touring the Soviet Union with her parents, Arthur and Jane, since July 8 at the invitation of President Yuri V. Andropov.

Samantha received a "formal apology" in Moscow on Wednesday that Andropov himself had been too busy to meet with her during the two-week visit. The tired and overwhelmed girl told reporters: "I can't wait to get back home. I'm so ready."

She left the Soviet Union this morning for Montreal, where she was to stay overnight before returning home.

Andropov invited her to visit the Soviet Union after she wrote him expressing her concern that the Soviets want to conquer the world.

Manchester residents appeared eager to welcome her back.

"We're all tickled to death over this," said Smith. "Everybody's particularly happy with the way she is. Speaking for the majority, we feel she's a pretty composed girl who handles herself with dignity."

The welcome-home festivities are to begin Friday, with local Elks and Lions joining Samantha's family and friends at Augusta State Airport. On Saturday, Samantha is to be guest of honor at the Old Manchester Day Parade in the town of 600 people.

"Before Samantha became Manchester's most prominent citizen, we used to honor the Daggetts, the former owners of the general store," Smith said.

He said Andropov's invitation to Samantha and her parents "terrified me at first. When the Soviet newsman came in here to buy sandwiches, I expected a goon in a red jacket with a sword in one hand and a knife in the other."

He now thinks the trip was only "a real upstage production. Samantha got to see a lot of nice real estate, but not a lot about communism."

And townspeople "believe she should be home playing with dolls instead of playing with politics," Smith said.

Veteran guerrilla becomes leader

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A battle-toughened admirer of Cuban President Fidel Castro has taken command of the Colombian leftist guerrilla group M-19, which attempted to incite a revolution two years ago.

Ivan Marino replaces James Bateman, who died April 28 in the crash of a light plane in the northern Colombian jungle, according to an M-19 communique seen recently in Bogota.

Details of Marino's life are not well known, though the Colombian military has long claimed Marino was the M-19's chief military strategist.

M-19's full name is the April 19 Movement, named after the date on which ex-dictator Gustavo Rojas claimed he was cheated out of victory in the April 1970 presidential election.

Rojas' young followers went underground, and began carrying out popular measures Rojas had practiced after a 1954 military coup, such as giving away milk or food in poor neighborhoods. The group eventually evolved into a radical leftist guerrilla organization.

In the few interviews Marino has granted, he describes a background closely tied to his country's violent history.

Marino says he became a guerrilla at age 12, when his father and three uncles were killed in a war.

The savage conflict was marked by atrocities in which men women and children were loaded in dump trucks and dropped alive off high cliffs.

Marino joined a civilian commando unit of the Conservative Party. At 15, he was an experienced fighter when the war ended in 1955 with more than 200,000 people dead.

Ex-official denies oil corruption

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Sen. Jorge Diaz Serrano, the highest official to be targeted in an investigation of alleged corruption during the previous administration, denies he committed or even knew of fraud in the state oil monopoly he headed.

Diaz Serrano, who headed PEMEX from 1976 to 1981, was scheduled to appear today in the fifth of a series of hearings by a four-man House of Deputies panel. It is considering whether he should be stripped of his legislative immunity to answer charges that he participated in a $34 million fraud.

In an interview Wednesday with The Associated Press, he rejected speculation he was being used as a scapegoat in President Miguel de la Madrid's campaign to show it is ridding the country of the chronic problems of skimming public funds, bribes, payoffs and other abuses.

A member of the Institutional Revolutionary Party that has ruled Mexico for half a century, Diaz Serrano says he believes instead the opposition parties, which formed the investigation which-pled to the allegations against him, "directed their attacks at an area where there was great progress in the past administration." And he was accused as "the highest ranking man in that area."

Opposition political parties insist on a broader probe, apparently hoping it would lead to his ex-boss — former President Jose Lopez Portillo.

Members of the Mexican Labor Party, a leftist group, picketing outside the congressional office building during one of the hearings, carried signs saying "Legislators: And Lopez Portillo, When?"

The Attorney General's Office said in June it had evidence that Diaz Serrano and others were involved in the fraudulent purchase of two natural gas tankers for the PEMEX fleet.

The Liberia-based Navigas Internacional bought the ships from the Belgian shipbuilding company Boelwerf in 1980 for $124 million and immediately sold them to PEMEX for $158 million, the Attorney General's Office has said.

"They are good ships and they were acquired in a period of great speculation in the oil world," Diaz Serrano said,

"I have never participated in a fraud in the 42 years that I have been working, least of all in something so coarse," he said. "If my intention was to make easy money, it would have been much more simple in other areas than to inflate the price of some ships with many other people. It's absurd.

80 Houses for Sale

5007 San Antonio
I'm a lonely 3 bedroom, 2 bath, 1 year old home with a nice kitchen with built in appliances, nice wallpaper and miniblinds. My living room is large with cathedral ceiling, ceiling fan, skylights, custom drapes and mini blinds and a nice fireplace. My master bedroom is big enough for king size furniture with hip ceiling and walk in closet. My yard is green and manicured. I even have a 2 car garage. Come live with me.
