Economic ills not 'cured,' Reagan warns Americans

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Now that he has signed his tax and spending reductions into law, President Reagan concedes that future deficits may be larger than expected and says he will just have to find deeper cuts to balance the federal budget.

After signing the tax-cut and budget bills Thursday, Reagan said Americans also should "watch for a sagging economy for the next few months."

Reagan said he remains confident interest rates will begin to decrease toward year's end but cautioned that the tax and budget bills won't take effect until October and added, "Our own projections have been that for the next several months this soft and soggy economy is going to continue."

The president, wearing faded blue denim trousers and jacket, said he still hopes to balance the federal budget by 1984 — but only after making further spending cuts for the 1983 and 1984 fiscal years.

The administration has projected a $55.6 billion budget deficit for fiscal 1981, which ends Sept. 30, and $42.5 billion for 1982.

"Now the possibility of increasing deficits in the coming years over our previous figures are due in part to not getting totally what we had asked for in the budget cuts," Reagan said Thursday.

Another reason for ballooning deficits, he added, is "that the tax package finally came out with additional reductions," which he embraced in an effort to outbid House Democrats for support.

Reagan said he would "continue to work on this and work for more budget cuts and it just means that we're going to have to try to get more additional budget cuts than we might have had to get before."

That drive begins next week when Reagan meets in Los Angeles with budget director David A. Stockman to begin plotting the next round of budget cuts.

At a signing ceremony at Reagan's fog-shrouded ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains, the president said the tax and budget bills represent a historic turnaround in the way government does business.

Under the legislation, a 25 percent cut in taxes begins Oct. 1, when the amount withheld from most workers' paychecks will drop about 5 percent. A 10 percent reduction in withholding will come next July, with another 10 percent cut a year later. Overall, individual and business income taxes will be slashed $749 billion through the 1986 fiscal year — the largest tax cut in the nation's history.

At the same time, planned spending on domestic programs will be reduced an estimated $130.5 billion in the next three years.

Reagan said he is counting on seeing "people begin to have more money in their pockets from their earnings (while) the lowered expenditures of government begin taking effect."

He said the foot-thick budget bill and two-inch-thick tax bill represent "a turnaround of almost half a century of a course this country's been on and mark an end to excessive growth of government bureaucracy and government spending and government taxing."

"This is only the beginning because from here on now we're going to have to implement all of these," he said. "It's going to be a job to make this whole turnaround work. It's going to continue to be the No. 1 priority of our administration."

The signing ceremony marked Reagan's first public appearance since he arrived at his ranch Aug. 6 for a four-week vacation.

Kicking up his heels

After signing his massive tax and spending cuts into law Thursday at a signing ceremony at his secluded California ranch retreat, Reagan kicks up his heels to show members of the press his foot gear. Reagan finds western boots appropriate for the terrain of the ranch, located in the Santa Ynex Mountains near Santa Barbara.

Plea for PATCO talks rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, flatly rejecting pleas by the world's air traffic controllers to reopen talks with striking American controllers, says the issue is law and order — not management against labor.

The executive board of the International Federation of Air Traffic Controllers Associations urged the president in a telegram Thursday to resume talks and "bring the matter to a speedy, amicable solution."

But Reagan, vacationing at his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., made clear he considers the dispute already resolved and the government's job one of replacing the controllers on illegal picket lines.

And the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll said Thursday that almost two of every three Americans surveyed approve of the way Reagan has handled the strike. Of the scientifically selected random sample of 1,601 adults contacted by telephone Monday and Tuesday, 64 percent supported the president and 14 percent were unsure. Only 22 percent disapproved.

While the executive board of the 61-nation controllers federation said it might consider further actions later this month, the group asked its members to cancel for the time being any actions in support of the U.S. strikers.

The air controllers union in Portugal was voting today on whether to go ahead with a planned boycott Sunday night of planes flying to and from the United States over the control center in the Azores.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said he welcomed the decision by the federation against any immediate protest action but reiterrated the administration's determination not to resume bargaining.

"We do not consider the current problem to be one of labor-management relationships. ... The issue has to do with individuals violating an oath and violating the laws of the United States of America," Lewis said in a statement.

And Reagan told reporters in California: "There is a law that federal unions cannot strike against their employers. In the view of the actions of those controllers who decided to violate their oath and to violate the law ... I just don't see any way that it could be expected that we could now just go back and pretend that they weren't breaking the law or breaking their oaths."

But Robert E. Poli, president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, said he still hoped contract talks might resume and claimed there were parties, which he refused to identify, working toward a resumption of bargaining.

However, Poli warned that the controllers might have to prepare for a long strike. "Everybody says after two weeks you're dead," he said. "There have been a lot of strikes in this country lasting longer than two weeks, a lot longer than two weeks. We realize that."

Lewis, in a Cable News Network interview taped today, said the government will save about $200 million over the next two years as a result of the controllers' strike. He said there will be fewer controllers and that replacements hired for the strikers will be paid beginning wages.

Federal jurors resume deliberations today in oil-theft case

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Federal jurors in an oil-theft case allegedly involving the taking of sweet oil from one lease and mixing it with sour oil from a less productive lease deliberated about 4½ hours Thursday afternoon but could not agree on a unanimous verdict of guilt or innocence for the three defendants in the case.

"At least, you've agreed that you disagree," observed Presiding Judge Lucius D. Bunton, who wouldn't settle for a hung jury so early into the guilt-innocent phase of the week-long trial. So, the judge gave the six-man, six-woman jury the option of contining deliberations into the night or resuming this morning.

The jurors opted for the latter.

The case against the three defendants involves an oil operator, a pumper and a oil-transport truck driver who allegedly schemed to steal more than $34,000 in oil in a 10-day period in August 1980 from a sweet oil lease operated by Sohio (Standard Oil of Ohio) Petroleum Co. and bought and hauled by Scurlock Oil Co.

However, evidence suggests that up to a half million dollars in oil may have been taken from the Sohio lease and pumped into a tank battery on a less productive lease owned by one of the defendants in less than a year.

On trial are:

—William D. Fikes, 47, the McCamey-Imperial Scurlock truck driver who allegedly took overages from the Sohio-Canon 63-2 sweet-oil in Pecos County and transported the crude oil to a tank battery owned by a co-defendant. Fikes was the only defendant who elected to testify. He is alleged to have made out false run tickets which reflect the amount of oil taken from leases.

—Kerry Bob Coleman, 31, the Crane oil operator who allegedly submitted fraudulent production reports to the Texas Railroad Commission and who received a $34,797.40 check from Scurlock from the allegedly stolen oil.

—Howard Leon Ramsey, 46, the Iraan contract pumper who is charged with falsifying production reports.

The three men are indicted for federal mail fraud rather than outright theft, which could have bound the case for trial in state court in Fort Stockton.

And Warren Burnett, defense attorney for Fikes, attacked that aspect of the case and assaulted the credibility of private investigator Jack Hubbard, a thwarted candidate for sheriff in Odessa.

Burnett, hailed as a master of courtroom oratory, said Hubbard maligned the people of Fort Stockton and cast aspersions on their character when he suggested that the case could not be tried fairly in Fort Stockton.

"He insulted the integrity of every one of them," Burnett said.

Burnett said he finds it "very difficult to believe that the people of Fort Stockton have compromised themselves in such a way that they do not measure up to the standards set up by Jack Hubbard."

Burnett said that Hubbard apparently "can't stand local politics unless it's helping him."

Hubbard had testified on his taking photographs at the leases and putting dyes in tanks of oil to trace the petroleum.

Burnett, alluding to Fikes' testimony that he had swapped oil and often had taken more crude oil from a tank than was reflected on his run tickets, said that the "major oil companies swap oil."

Burnett acknowledged that his cli-

Four federal fugitives indicted in jail escape

Four federal prisoners who used hack saw blades, toothpaste, makeshift rope, a pipe wrench and walkie-talkies to break out of the Midland City Jail last June 11 have been indicted for escape by a federal grand jury in Midland.

Bailbonds for the fugitives, who federal agents suspect are hiding in Mexico, have been set at $100,000 each.

Indicted were James Monroe "Cowboy" Crosson Jr., 36, of Odessa; William Anthony Dugan, 36; Glenn Eugene Stewart, 37, and David F. Wallace, 35.

Indicted for aiding the escape were Crosson's girlfriend, Mildred Sue Pittinger, 25, of Odessa; her friend, Donna Dotson, 29, of Odessa; Kathy Havner, and Tommy Crosson, 26.

The fugitives had been held in federal section of city jail, while they were awaiting transfer to federal prisons. Crosson had been convicted on a drug violation.

Dugan and Stewart were described by a federal prosecutor as "large-scale" importers of Mexican marijuana.

Last July, Ms. Pittinger and Ms. Dugan, who then were out on bail for aiding the escape, were arrested at the Juarez-El Paso border, as they were returning from Mexico presumably after visiting the fugitives.

Their bonds subsequently were revoked.

Strake may go after Bill Hobby's job

AUSTIN (AP) — It looks like the 1982 lieutentant governor's race might wind up being a battle of the Houston millionares.

Republican Secretary of State George Strake, an oilman who has never run for office, Thursday said he's just about decided to make the race against incumbent Democrat Bill Hobby.

Strake, appointed to his post by close friend Gov. Bill Clements, said he would not make a final decision until the fall. However, Strake sounded like a man who wants to see his name on campaign bumper stickers.

"I am considering a race for the lieutenant governor's spot," was as definite as Strake would get.

Strake, a conservative, said he has no "general complaints with the way Bill Hobby has run the office." However, he said "14 years is too much for any one man."

If Hobby, a newspaper executive, wins another four-year term, it would extend his stint to 14 years, a record for a lieutenant governor.

Strake said Clements, who is expected to seek re-election next year, would not campaign with him as a ticket. The governor has "indicated he would not say negative things about Hobby" if the election came down to a Hobby-Strake confrontation, according to Strake.

"I would not be in tandem with him," Strake, 46, said of Clements. "But there is no way you can split our common interests."

The Notre Dame graduate said his campaign would be part of the "rejuvenation of America" that started with Gov. Bill Clements' election and continued with the election of President Ronald Reagan.

"I personally think Republicans have come to represent the thinking of the average Texan better than the Democratic leadership," he said.

Strake discounted a published report that GOP leaders have promised him a clear field in the primary if he would run. The Texas Republican Party is not a "clubby affair" that can dictate who runs and who doesn't, he said.

"It's impossible to do. I don't know who is capable of cutting such a deal," he said.

Strake said two Republicans, Euless Sen. Bill Meier and Houston Rep. Milton Fox, have told him they might be interested in the nomination for the second spot in state government.

SS card scheme worries officials

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — A Mexican national caught trying to enter the United States with 1,000 bogus Social Security cards may indicate black marketeers are gearing up to take advantage of President Reagan's proposed amnesty plan for illegal aliens, a federal official says.

Gene Richardson, an official with the Inspector General's office of investigations in Dallas, said Thursday he thought July 26 arrest of Javier Alneiva Ortiz's could be a sign the black market sales of illegal documents are being stepped up.

Alneiva Ortiz, 32, of Monterrey, Mexico, pleaded guilty Thursday to possessing fraudulent documents after his arrest by Border Patol officials as he crossed the International Bridge at Laredo.

Border Patrol officials found the cards in the trunk of a car Alneiva Ortiz was driving.

Jurors still deliberating in oil-theft case

ent may have taken more oil from a tank than was reflected on the run tickets.

"My client has testified that they had better make your own salary," Burnett said.

Fikes, he said, did nothing out of the norm.

"Yes, he violated company instructions," Burnett said. "But there's not a truck driver who has not done it."

Bert Smith, defense attorney for Coleman, argued that evidence was insufficent to convict his client.

Ramsey's attorney, Bill Alexander, said Hubbard, who reportedly was hired by Sohio at $400 a day to spy on the Sohio-Canon lease and on Fikes and Ramsey, "needed somebody to be stealing" to earn his fee and tried to lay any thievery on the defendants.

The government prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Bock, charged that outright thievery had taken place in the oil fields and that Burnett, who is a "master of oratory," uses "words to paint pictures" to his client's advantage.

Burnett's forte is "taking the worst and trying to make you think it is the best," Bock said.

Bock said Fikes lied on the witness stand.

Bock, who earlier had alluded to widespread thievery in the oil patch, said the Fikes-Ramsey-Coleman case is "the first step in dropping that water level and seeing what that iceberg looks like."

About 15 government witnesses, including Scurlock and Sohio officials, postal inspectors and Texas Ranger Charlie Hodges, had testified in the trial.

Should the jury return guilty verdicts against the defendants, they could receive up to five years in prison for each of five counts alleged in the indictment.

Entry was gained by prying open a rear door.

Davis proposes county work program at Rotary Club meeting

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Though he admits to being "somewhat of a critic of government," Midland County Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis nevertheless outlined proposals to make a "good situation" better and solicited citizen "input" to get the citizenry involved in county government.

"It concerns me that we are not able to arouse much input...in local government," Davis told members of the Midland Downtown Rotary Club on Thursday noon in the Midland Hilton. Then, he promptly proposed a six-point work program which would permit the county to better serve the people.

"They (the programs) are not noteworthy," he understated, "but they are indicative of some progress. This county is big business, gentlemen," he said in alluding to the county's $8.6-million 1982 budget and various programs. But county government has "much catching up to do if we are going to play in the ball park."

Davis' six work programs ranged from proposing a taxpayers-funded bond issue to repair and pave county roads to accepting a bank's gift to build a new Midland County Public Library.

—Library: "...The First National Bank is to be commended" for its $5.5 million gift for the building of a three-story Midland County Public Library," said Davis, who termed himself "the reluctant dragon." "They (the bankers) have been first-rate citizens. They are good citizens."

The bank made a $701,240 bid on the half block making up the existing library site and adjoining parking lot and offered to contribute $5.5 million toward building a new downtown library. The area is to be part of the bank's Eagle Plaza, which is to feature one and, possibly, two 40-story bank towers on the proposed North Super Block.

Davis noted that the bank's bid on the library property at 301 W. Missouri Ave. was made jointly to the county and city, which claimed title to 2½ of the 12 lots making up the property.

"Somebody goofed," Davis said of a 1943 Schlumberger Well Services deed which gave the city part title to the lots, which in the late 1950s became site of the county library.

"I want the city out from under the library," Davis said.

The commissioner speculated that the library may be built within the next two or three years, but "that may be wishful thinking."

—County Roads: "I think we need a road-bond issue for county roads," Davis said. "We need help, and we need it badly," but he did not speculate on which and how many of the 600 miles of county roads might need repairing or paving.

"They are deteriorating. They are deteriorating fast" due to the heavy truck traffic, he said.

—Cooperation: Davis recommended increased cooperation between the city and county governments. "I think the sores have festered all too long."

—Car Parking: "Parking will be alleviated within the next several months." He didn't say how.

—Personnel: County government is into such a growth that it begs for a personnel director, who will be hired by Jan. 1, to keep track of the 250 county employees.

"We are going to pay them (competitive wages) to keep them," he said. Davis also cited the county's fringe benefits, which are "not outstanding but they are pleasing." The benefits, which include a retirement plan and health and dental insurance, are "nothing we can brag about, but our people can live with them."

—Courthouse: "We don't have enough room," he said of courthouse space. He suggested the building of a Courthouse Annex east of the courthouse square and on and along Baird Street between Illinois and Texas avenues. The annex might cost anywhere between $2 and $5 million. "That's not going to build much of a building" at $60 to $85 per square foot in construction costs, he said.

The commissioner seems to be opposed to additional building on the courthouse square.

"Maybe we ought to think about a little more greenery in downtown Midland," which is being filled in by asphalt paving and high- and low-rise buildings of mortar and brick and steel and glass.

Davis suggested that the county may be competing with the city for the voters' favor on bond issues to finance improvements. He mentioned the need for the city's sewage system expansion, which could cost between $10 and $20 million.

Whether the city or the county gets graced with the peoples' bond financing may depend on "who gets there first."

Again, Davis said that he wants the people to get involved in county government.

"We need your input," said Davis, a retired high school government teacher who is into his first year as a commissioner.

"I will be responsible for my decisions."

"I think we need a road-bond issue for county roads. We need help, and we need it badly."

Hostage released after 10 hours

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A 25-year-old Grand Prairie man who barricaded himself with a female hostage inside a warehouse snack room after his firing demanded that police investigate the business in return for releasing his prisoner after a 10-hour standoff Thursday.

Police pulled 25-year-old Cathy Reid of Grand Prairie through an opening in a false ceiling after they and a psychologist persuaded Michael Butler to release her during 10 hours of talks. Police Lt. Ronnie Shade, who aided the negotiations, said Butler insisted she leave the room through the ceiling for unknown reasons. He spoke to police through a door.

Mrs. Reid, who witnesses said was shaken but apparently uninjured, was taken to the Arlington police station. She is a company computer operator. Butler was in police custody today after his surrender at 11:38 p.m. Thursday.

Deputy Police Chief Marion Rettig said an argument between Mrs. Reid and Butler shortly before 7 p.m. caused officers to begin drawing their guns.

Banner Wholesalers Inc. officials said Butler demanded that the company be investigated, that he be reinstated to his job and not harassed, and that he not be prosecuted for his acts. Police say the man was not explicit about the proposed company probe.

But fellow workers said the three-month employee had become irritable and violent before police say he drew a gun inside the snack room at about 1 p.m. Thursday and vowed he would not let himself be captured alive.

Rick Swift, Banner general manager, said Butler had been fired about 30 minutes earlier because he had thrown a glass of water at another employee.

Swift said Butler "was never harassed that I know of." But he said the Army veteran had inexplicably complained of being bitten by dogs in the warehouse where he worked as a stager, preparing orders. There are no dogs in the warehouse, Swift said.

In an incident prior to Thursday, Swift said Butler had dropped a canister of yardsticks on a woman. She was uninjured, he said.

"He's always been a real quiet guy up until about a week ago," a co-worker who asked not to be identified said. "It was a complete turnaround. He started throwing boxes, started dropping boxes on women. He started kicking people, he started hearing things and having hallucinations," he said.

Cartoon character Donald Duck is a star among stars in the current Walt Disney animation exhibition at New York's Whitney Museum of American Art which focuses on the prewar and wartime years at the Walt Disney Studios.

Donald now a star among stars

NEW YORK (AP) — Born as a stiff, paunchy little water fowl, Donald Duck had become a spluttering, raving international star by the time he went to war in 1942.

Now the irascible duck is a star among stars in the current Disney animation exhibition at the Whitney Museum of American Art, which focuses on the prewar and wartime years at the Walt Disney Studios. In one phenomenal decade, the Disney animators created Mickey Mouse, Goofy, Pluto, the Silly Symphonies and the first feature-length cartoons.

"In animation, time is b.m. and a.m. — before Mickey and after Mickey," said Greg Ford, guest curator of the exhibition.

Referring to the evolution of Disney technique, he said: "You look at Steamboat Willie (the first Mickey Mouse talkie in 1928) and then Pinocchio (1940). It is absurd how much happened in just 10 years."

The Whitney's second floor has been transformed into a big, dark rumpus room where adults and tots jockey for position around television screens showing the Seven Dwarfs or Dumbo. Drawings cover the walls, and cartoons play twice a day in a small theater.

Ford, a 32-year-old New Yorker, said he wanted to demonstrate that Disney was not a one-man show, but a big band in which many talented animators played distinctive solos.

In the 1934 cartoon "Orphan's Benefit," animator Dick Lundy invented Donald's "fighting mad" pose, in which a squawking duck hops up and down, holding one arm out in a stiff jab and swinging the other menacingly.

Among Ford's favorite solos:

—Vladimir Tytla's sense of dramatic musculature and body mass in drawing Stromboli, the corpulent puppeteer in Pinocchio.

—The subtle arm motion of Mickey Mouse by Frank Thomas in "The Brave Little Tailor" (1938).

—Lundy's three-minute dance between the spider and the fly in "Woodland Cafe" (1937).

—Pluto tangled in flypaper in "Playful Pluto" (1934), drawn by Norm Ferguson. Ford said it is the first cartoon sequence which shows the cnaracter "thinking."

The flypaper scene is dissected in a series of sketches retrieved from Disney archives for the Whitney exhibit.

"Some people think I am taking the magic out of it. I don't think so," Ford said. "The more I look at it the more magical it seems, thelgreat pains to seem effortless.

"I have an interest in identifying as many animators as I can, because to this day people don't know what they did."

As a kid, Ford confessed, he preferred the Warner Brothers' Bugs Bunny and Daffy Duck.

"Disney always seemed too precious to me," he said. "I started getting interested in Disney when I got interested in animation, about 10 years ago."

The show includes very little of Disney's post-war work. A strike by animators in 1941 marked the end of the first golden era at Disney Studios, and although many animators returned to finish their contracts, they later drifted to other studios, Ford said.

"I like the wartime cartoons because everyone is at the height of his powers, but the films are very casual," Ford said.

Donald Duck drew several wartime assignments, but Ford could not recall Mickey ever going to war. Minnie Mouse did her bit by saving bacon drippings in "Out of the Frying Pan," and Goofy sank most of the Japanese navy, and the Rising Sun, too, in "How to be a Sailor."

In "The Old Army Game" of 1942, Donald is a GI who believes he's been sawn in half in a scrape with a sadistic sergeant. Reduced to tears by the illusion of his haloed hindquarters ascending to heaven, Donald contemplates suicide before locating his legs again.

The same Saturday afternoon audience which roared at Donald's double amputation was hushed after seeing "Education for Death," a 1943 propaganda film about Nazi education.

The animators make their case with riveting transmogrifications — a crucifix is warped into a swastika-studded dagger, a Bible becomes Mein Kampf. Worse, a big-eyed boy who loved bunnies becomes a little thug who cheers for foxes, finally to become a hulking robot in Hitler's legions. The last scene transforms the ranks of soldiers into ranks of crosses, stretching on to the horizon.

Donald was back that same year to play a German munitions worker in "Der Fuehrer's Face." Starving, overworked, goaded by loudspeakers, constantly interrupted by the imperative of saluting images of Hitler, Donald is captive in a state so totalitarian that six bayonets threaten every time he wavers.

An oafish German band puts music to his misery: "When Hitler says we are the master race, we go 'heil, heil,' in the Fuehrer's face" — a song which was a million-seller for Spike Jones.

But it's all a bad dream. Donald wakes up in America and plants a duck kiss on a little Statue of Liberty. The final image is of a tomato splattering — on the Fuehrer's face.

Tuna fish 'war'

The United States and Canada recently ratified a treaty that ends their "war" over tuna fishing rights in their respective offshore waters on the Pacific Coast. These successful negotiations should inspire a search for agreement in the more difficult talks about tuna coming up soon between the United States and Mexico.

Under the U.S.-Canadian treaty, tunaboats from each country can fish in the other country's territorial waters and sell their catches in either Canadian or American ports. That solution is possible because both the United States and Canada belong to the Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission and subscribe to its quotas regulating the size of the annual catch by each country's tuna fleet.

Circumstances are different in the U.S.-Mexican dispute. Mexico has withdrawn from the IATTC, and rejects the principle that because tuna are a migratory species they should be exempt from the licensing requirements that Mexico imposes on fishermen operating within 200 miles of its coast.

That is the main obstacle to be overcome in the new round of negotiations flowing from the June summit meeting of President Reagan and President Jose Lopez Portillo. The search is on for a formula — perhaps involving a "regional" licensing procedure — that would satisfy Mexico and other Latin American countries making similar claims without sacrificing the principles of fishery management with the IATTC is trying to uphold.

American fishermen must recognize that Mexico is serious about developing a tuna fleet that will compete for a growing share of the catch. Mexico must realize that a collapse of the IATTC quota system will lead to over-fishing and eventual depletion of the same tuna stocks which Mexico is counting on to justify its investment in an expanded fishing industry.

The tuna dispute is only one of the many outstanding issues to be settled between the United States and Mexico. If we can see an end to Mexico's seizure and fining of U.S. tunaboats and to the resulting embargo on imports of tuna from Mexico into the United States, it will help create the right atmosphere for progress in other areas of negotiation between our two countries.

Voting rights

President Reagan has let it be known he supports an extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act, which will expire next year unless renewed by the 97th Congress. This should put to rest any notion that Mr. Reagan plans to lead a retreat from the major civil rights achievements of the last two decades.

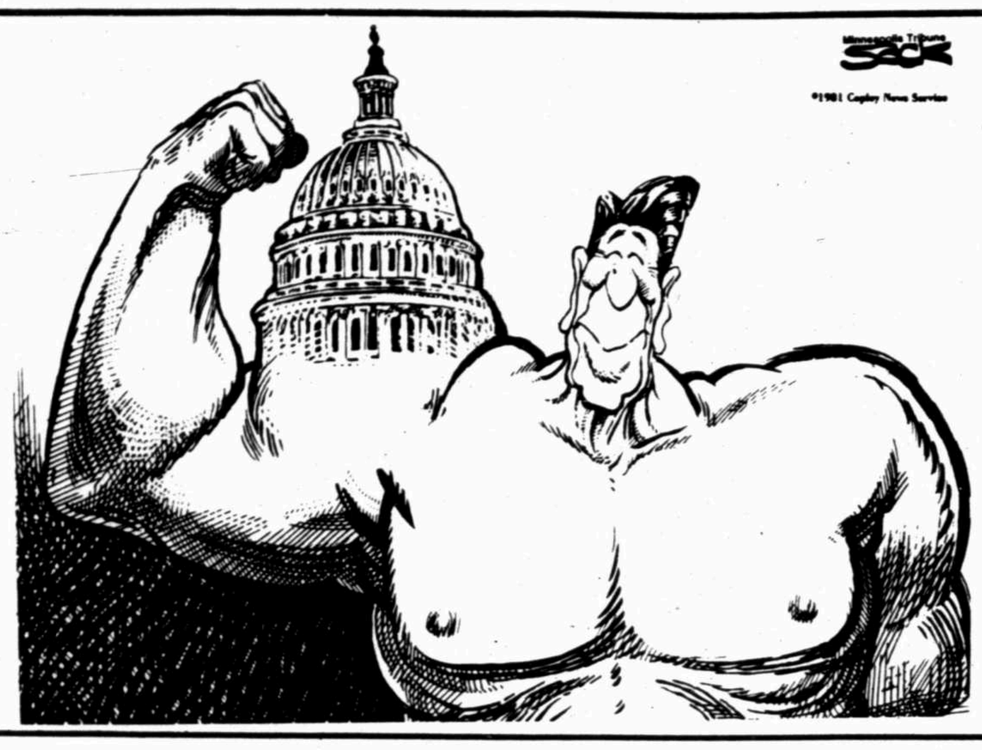

The Voting Rights Act has had a significant effect in opening up the political process in Southern states where state and local election laws had been keeping blacks from becoming voters and winning elective office. In spite of that progress, however, there appears to be no justification for abandoning the Act which makes the U.S. Justice Department a watchdog in areas with a history of discrimination in election practices.

A consensus is building in Congress around proposals to extend the Act for another 10 years, but on terms recognizing that the problem of discriminatory election laws is not as widespread as it was in 1965. The House Judiciary Committee recently completed a rewrite of the controversial Section 5, which has required that nine states and portions of 13 other states get Justice Department approval for any changes in their election laws.

The new version would allow states to "bail out" of coverage by the Act if they have had a clean record on voting rights for 10 years. This would satisfy those states which have been following federal standards in their election practices, but, under the law as it is now written, remain under the thumb of the Justice Department in managing their electoral affairs.

A state which has abolished literacy tests and other subterfuges that keep minorities out of the electoral system, and has shown for 10 years that it is fully recognizing the right of all citizens to vote, deserves to be cut loose from federal supervision. Those which have continued to arouse complaints of unfair voting practices do not.

The House Committee's proposed revisions of Section 5 would concentrate federal enforcement in areas where it is still needed, and remove it in cases where state and local officials can be left on their own. That's a fair basis for extending the Voting Rights Act, and we trust Congress will move along those lines.

A time to remember

Pop, as Mom and we five boys always called him, died 30 years ago this day (August 14, 1951).

There is no question but that time helps heal the wounds of sorrow in the heart caused by the passing of a dear one, but it is only a partial cure.

Whenever I think of him (which is often — perhaps several times a day), I miss him very much and hurt a little inside. To my mind, this piece of poetry which he composed while he was at his mother's summer place on the McCloud River at the foot of Mount Shasta, represents his philosophy of life and the hereafter. It has given solace to thousands of people who have read it.

— W.R. Hearst Jr.

THE SONG OF THE RIVER
By William Randolph Hearst

The snow melts on the mountain
And the water runs down to the spring.
And the spring in a turbulent fountain,
With a song of youth to sing,
Runs down to the riotous river,
And the river flows to the sea.
And the water again
Goes back in rain
To the hills where it used to be.

And I wonder if life's deep mystery
Isn't much like the rain and the snow
Returning through all eternity
To the places it used to know.

For life was born on the lofty heights
And flows in a laughing stream,
To the river below
Whose onward flow
Ends in a peaceful dream.

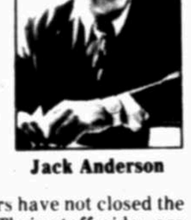

And so at last
When our life has passed
And the river has run its course,
It again goes back,
O'er the selfsame track,
To the mountain which was its source.

So why prize life
Or why fear death,
Or dread what is to be?
The river ran its allotted span
Till it reached the silent sea.
Then the water harked back to the mountaintop
To begin its course once more.
So we shall run the course begun
Till we reach the silent shore,
Then revisit earth in a pure rebirth
From the heart of the virgin snow.
So don't ask why we live or die,
Or whither, or when we go,
Or wonder about the mysteries
That only God may know.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Senate investigating Casey's dealings

WASHINGTON — With a brass-knuckled counterattack, CIA Director William Casey has fought the Senate Intelligence Committee to a standstill. The senators have made a public avowal that there's nothing in his past that should disqualify him from serving as the country's chief engineer of undercover activities.

Jack Anderson

But the senators have not closed the book on Casey. Their staff aides are still sifting through the documentation that he provided. What emerges is a portrait of a man who is as much a wizard at business manipulations as at undercover operations.

What he told the senators simply does not jibe with some of his previous testimony before other forums. Here are some of the contradictions:

— Regarding his role in Multiponics, Inc., a now-bankrupt firm, Casey told the committee behind closed doors that he was "an outside director" who "did not attend many board meetings." His position in the corporation, Casey assured the senators, was "largely ceremonial."

But that's not what he told the bankruptcy examiner at a hearing in New Orleans on Sept. 15, 1975. "I think the record will show," he said then, "that I had a great deal to say and a fair amount of influence in the basic decisions that the directors made."

— In October 1961, Casey was chairman, secretary and owner of 6 percent of the stock of Advancement Devices Inc. He lent the company $100,000. In the process of arranging a sale of stock in the company to repay the loan, Casey brought in a man who had been convicted of rigging security prices 13 years earlier and had been forbidden to take part in any stock market activity beyond investment analysis.

Yet the convicted finagler was permitted to prepare what turned out to be an overly optimistic economic forecast to lure investors into buying stock in the firm that owed Casey money.

At the time the stock was offered, Casey advised his company that the transaction didn't have to be registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission, because the stock was being offered to only a limited number of investors and thus constituted a private deal.

So the SEC was never given a chance to look into the stock offer. Less than a year later, Casey's company went broke. Yet 10 years later, testifying before the Senate Banking Committee, Casey admitted that the prospectus had been "outrageous."

One investor who had been sucked in by the "outrageous" prospectus sued to recover his investment. The case was settled out of court.

Casey refused to admit to the Senate Banking Committee that he had a conflict of interest because the stock offering was made primarily to repay his $100,000 loan to the company. But he did acknowledge that he had done nothing to correct the misleading prospectus.

— Casey told the Senate Banking Committee that the irate stockholder was "sophisticated" in the electronics field by virtue of his employment by Western Electric. Yet in 1963, Casey acknowledged: "It was untrue that (the investor's) experience and position with Western Electric were of a character which made him informed and able to evaluate electronic developments."

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan's political prowess brooding presence for Democrats

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — The political prowess of President Reagan dominated the National Governors' Conference here, a boon to Republican chief executives entirely unexpected six months ago but a brooding presence to the 27 Democrats, 22 of whom face re-election or retirement by next year.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Public debate swirled around traditional problems of federalism and block grants but the quiet talk in the suites of the Democratic governors overlooking the messy hodgepodge and fake glitter of Atlantic City's gaudy, new gambling casinos focussed on this question: how to deal with the stunning events of the past six months that have elevated Ronald Reagan and his economic revolution to unforeseen heights of popularity.

The failure of the Democrats to attempt any frontal assault on Ronald Reagan here was no fortuitous result of lingering presidential honeymoonitis. Rather, with a few conspicuous exceptions, it was motivated by fear and failure: fear that attacking Reagan and Reaganism would prove counterproductive with voters; failure of their party, groggy from defeat on Capitol Hill, to have come close to developing a national counterstrategy.

Indeed, nearly a year after the 1980 Reagan landslide, we found no Democratic governor with any clear identification of their party's leadership. Equally elusive was a precise definition of party goals or programs with which to blunt the Reagan onslaught. In a party that since 1932 has stood staunchly for the efficacy of Big Government, particularly the federal Treasury, to solve all problems, this lack of counterstrategy betokens the party's present misery and bolsters Reaganism.

"The strategy," said Gov. Bob Graham of Florida, who will run for re-election next year, "is wait and see what happens to the economy under Reagan, but one thing is certain. We will not return to our old tradition of large-scale federal intervention."

Graham and other Sun Belt Democratic governors whose weight and influence in the Democratic Party were fattened in the 1980 census claim that even if Reagan succeeds in holding onto the allegiance of the decisive middle-income voter, the Democrats will not duplicate political history of the post-FDR years. The Republicans then became known as the party of negative reaction, doomed to years of impotence.

"The old liberal approach that more money, a few Ph.Ds and a lot of new programs will cure what ails the nation is gone in our era," South Carolina governor Richard W. Riley, who also faces re-election next year, told us. "We Southerners have been aware of this for some time."

Sun Belt Democrats, never at home with Lyndon Johnson's Great Society and repelled by George McGovern's governmental panaceas, are moving hard to exploit within their party the current national mood that Reagan's stunning success has crystalized. North Carolina governor James B. Hunt Jr. is chairman of yet another of the party's now-routine Commissions to change the presidential nominating process. The Commission is certain to sharpen the focus of that process, vastly enlarging the power of elected party officials and carefully controlling minority interests.

But that does little for the party in its present wait-and-see predicament. Bolder than his colleagues, California governor Edmund G. Brown Jr., who is now running for the U.S. Senate, ridiculed the prevailing mood here that Reagan's prowess is to be feared by the Democrats. To the contrary, he told us in typically blunt terms, Reagan is riding a "temporary euphoria" that will soon dissolve in the political acid of high interest rates and a rising budget deficit that could reach $90 billion next year.

In the past, however, Jerry Brown's view is more unique than universal. A closer reflection of the opinion of the Democratic governors was a private remark to one of them by Walter F. Mondale. The Democrats, said Mondale, "must identify a new philosophy." But when the governor asked him what that might be, he said he was not yet ready to describe it.

CHARLEY REESE

Government cannot feed starving man

I don't know if you have been to Washington lately or even to your own state capital, but if you have, you will have noticed that they do not grow beans there.

Charley Reese

Now let us suppose you are hungry. When you are hungry, what you need is food — beans, for example. You can't eat a Federal Reserve note. You can't eat a copy of the statutes. You can't eat a speech or compassion or commitment to the poor or even concern. Nope, what your belly wants is beans.

There is one way you can get some beans. Some human has to produce them. Earth has to be plowed, seeds planted, the sprouting plants watered and fertilized and protected from insects. Then the beans have to be harvested, stored, transported, processed, and packaged.

The government and the politicians are not involved in this labor. Both are non-essential. You can have food but not government but you can't survive with government but no food. If it comes down to it, the politician is dispensable; the farmer is not.

I have made this explanation of the obvious because in our complex society today it is no longer so obvious. Most of our attention is focused on government. We act as if government were the source of wealth when government no more produces wealth than a salt flat produces lettuce.

Think about this while you hear all of these people and groups wrangling and fighting over the federal budget. Do you know what they are fighting over? Paper. The only thing the government can give away is what it produces and the only thing it produces is paper: fiat currency, notes, checks, drafts, purchase orders, and bonds. You can't eat them, wear them, or dig a hole with them. They don't even make good fuel for a fire.

The wealth of the United States cannot be found in Washington, in the New York Federal Reserve Bank or in the vault at Fort Knox. For a moment, forget statistics, dollar valuations, and definitions. These are all illusions — a collection of mental concepts.

The wealth of the United States consists of land, water, minerals, plants, tools, buildings, machines, crops, food stores, and manufactured products. It also consists of human beings, their knowledge, their skills, and their energy. The one common characteristic of this wealth is that it is finite — limited as to amount at any given moment.

The Congress can pass a law, the Supreme Court can uphold it, and the president can proclaim it: every American shall have one pound of beans, and you know what? Not so much as a single sprout would appear.. If you want beans, you need farmers, not senators, presidents and justices.

The truth is so simple we often can't see it. Our welfare depends on the private sector, not on the government. The government is parasitic. It's only legitimate role is to be a policeman and protect the private sector from raiders. Lately, it's gotten into the business of confiscating wealth and redistributing it. Nevertheless it can only confiscate and redistribute what the private sector produces. If you like to eat, you'd better be more concerned about the climate in the farm belt than the political climate in Washington.

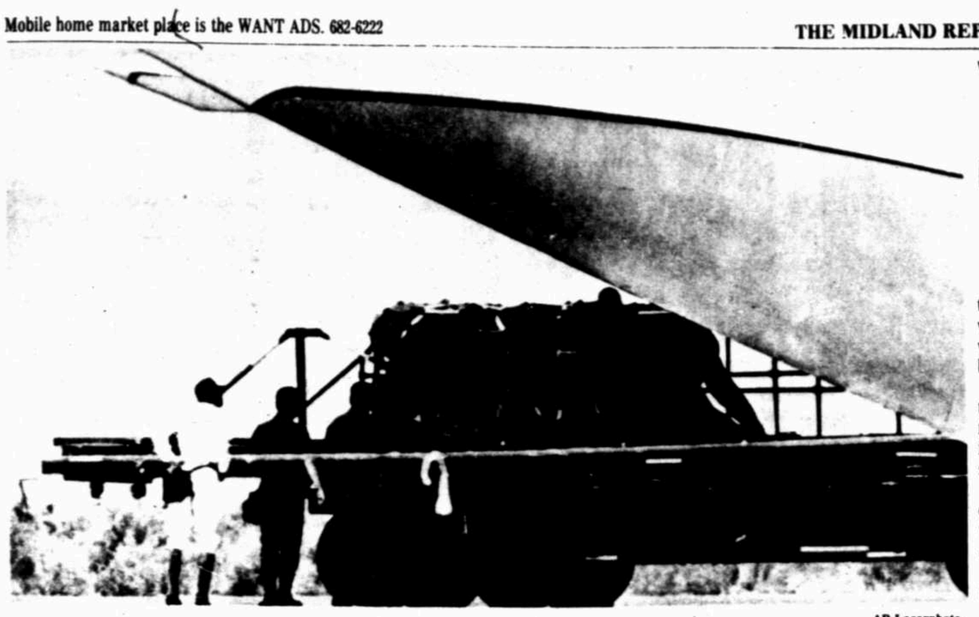

If there are no building materials and skilled workers, it doesn't matter what the government's housing policy is. If there are no doctors, it doesn't matter what the government's health policy is. If there are no farmers, it doesn't matter how many food stamps the government prints.

Americans, including the news media, have lost their perspective. They study the secondary and ignore the primary. Our destiny lies where it always has — in the private sector — not in the halls of government.

Weteye nerve gas bombs are taken from the back of an Air Force C-141 transport plane following their shipment to Provo, Utah, Wednesday from Colorado. The bombs, now stored at Dugway Proving Ground, will soon be moved overland to Tooele Army Depot, 35 miles soutwest of Salt Lake City.

Weteyes to be moved overland

By EDWARD C. NICHOLLS
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A convoy of 14 Army tractor-trailers will cross a desolate portion of the western Utah desert and the Onaqui Mountains within a week, bearing a cargo of Weteye nerve gas bombs capable of causing death within minutes.

The slow-moving convoy will be on the last leg in the first phase of the transfer of 888 Weteye bombs from the Rocky Mountain arsenal in Denver to igloo-like bunkers at Tooele Army Depot, 35 miles southwest of Salt Lake City.

Also to be transferred are three one-ton containers of the nerve agent GB. The containers were filled when a dozen bombs of the original 900 were drained after miniscule leaks were detected.

There will be three such convoys over the next three weeks, the Army says.

The first convoy is not expected to get under way until a fifth planeload of 64 Weteye bombs arrives at Michael Army Airfield, 65 miles southwest of here, from Stapleton International Airport in Denver.

The Army is withholding the timing of the Air Force C-141 Starlifter flights and of the convoy for security and safety reasons.

Four planeloads of the bombs, each of which contains 346 pounds of nerve agent GB, have arrived at Dugway Proving Ground, two Wednesday and two Thursday.

The move has been opposed by Utah Gov. Scott Matheson and others since it was proposed 3½ years ago, but Matheson says he is satisfied that the Army has made the move as safe as could be reasonably expected. Nonetheless, the governor said he would not utter a sigh of relief until the entire transfer is completed.

At Tooele, the Weteyes will join 122 million pounds of other debilitating and lethal chemical weapons in one of the world's largest storehouses of such weapons.

Manufactured in the 1950s and filled with GB at the arsenal in 1969, the Weteyes never have been used in warfare. They were declared obsolete in 1973, but the Army decided to keep them in the arsenal. Congress ordered they be moved or detoxified by Oct. 10.

Japan should 'step up defense'

By RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Japan must step up military efforts to counter a growing worldwide Soviet threat which could soon outstrip American defense capacity, the Defense Agency said today in its annual White Paper.

The document, a yearly analysis of defense issues and Japan's military posture, cited an increased Soviet presence in the Middle East, the Far East and Europe which could soon outstrip American defense capacity.

As in previous years, the report focuses sharply on the Soviet buildup over the past two decades and warns the Soviet Union will attain military superiority over the United States by the mid-1980s "if this trend continues."

It also pointed to an enhanced Soviet naval capability which is "acquiring the power to affect seriously the Western countries' command of the seas."

The report said it was noteworthy that the Reagan administration allocated a total of $184.8 billion for national defense spending in fiscal year 1982, some $4.8 billion over the budget proposed by former President Jimmy Carter.

Japan's arbitrary defense spending ceiling of less than one percent of the gross national product has prompted U.S. officials to urge a "significant" spending increase rather than rely entirely on the U.S. nuclear umbrella to deter outside aggression.

The government recently endorsed an $11.5 billion defense spending budget — a 7.6 percent boost over fiscal 1980.

Ban on nuclear arms in Middle East sought

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States will seek an agreement to ban nuclear arms in the Middle East, the director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency says.

"We've started preliminary diplomatic talks," Eugene V. Rostow said in an interview published in The New York Times Friday.

He said the agreement with Middle Eastern countries and powers outside the area would be based on the 1967 Treaty of Tlatelolco, which prohibited nuclear weapons in Latin America. But he said the Reagan administration has no treaty draft yet.

"I think it has very high potential," said Rostow. "It is a natural response to the risks of proliferation which have become much worse in recent years."

The initiative comes in response to the Israeli bombing of an Iraqi nuclear reactor June 7, with President Reagan saying prevention of the spread of nuclear weapons had become critical.

The Treaty of Tlatelolco has been signed by 22 nations. But Brazil, which ratified the agreement, and Argentina, which signed it, have reserved the right to detonate nuclear devices.

ON THE ROAD

Your children need training on traffic

By SUE ALFORD
Traffic Safety Planning
Midland College

School will be starting in about two weeks for Midland students and it's time parents began preparing children, especially the very young ones, for their daily trek through traffic to school.

Statistics on school related traffic accidents show that the greatest number occur 45 minutes before and within two hours after school closes for the day. School age children tend to be in traffic accidents on a week day, in an area without traffic controls, often in midblock (not at an intersection or a crosswalk) where the pedestrian was running or crossing from behind a parked car.

So, whether our children are entering elementary school for the first time or are returning, and whether our chilren will be driving a bicycle or walking, we need to help them select the safest route to school. The safest route would be a route with the most sidewalks, designated crosswalks, controlled intersections and designated school speed zones.

Afer selecting the route, we need to walk the route with our children, explaining why this is the best, though not necessarily the shortest, route to school. In our talks, we need to explain crossing at crosswalks or at least at intersections, where motorists most expect pedestrian traffic (bicyclists should walk their bikes across intersections); explain the importance of looking in all directions, before and during the cross, to be aware of on-coming cars; explain the meaning of any traffic signs and signals and how to check for turning cars; and explain the importance of going directly to and from school without playing along the way.

We need to repeat often to our children why they should use this route so they understand it and follow it daily. Then, we must let our children go to school along the designated routes. If we drive our children to school, even in bad weather, we only add to the traffic students must contend with around the school. It creates the accident situation of children darting between parked cars to get to and from their buildings. So, for bad weather, we should give our children proper clothing and let them go to school along the route we have carefully chosen for and taught them.

Eventually, our children will go to school alone. We must prepare them to do so from the very start. Then, we will not need to worry and our children will have a feeling of self-confidence.

JUST FOR FUN: When the police in Tampa, Fla., responded to reports of a two-car wreck, they found the autos but no drivers. Witnesses told the officers the drivers had scrambled from their cars right after the crash and fled on foot. On making a routine registration check, they found both cars were stolen.

PARENTS! CHILDREN LEARN BY EXAMPLE: Times have changed for safety rules. Did you know to walk against traffic, not with it; but, to bicycle with traffic, not against it? In some cases these are laws (local or state) and should be taught and followed just as should speed limits, stop signs, traffic signals and other regulations. If we parents don't do these things, how can we expect our children to? They learn by watching us,do!

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Cystic fibrosis is a hereditary disorder

Dear Dr. Solomon: One of my neighbors has a child with cystic fibrosis, and is now pregnant once more. I don't like to ask her about a subject as personal as this, but I was wondering about the possibility that she might give birth to another child with the same condition. What are the chances that this might happen? — Mrs. K.V.

Dear Mrs. V.: Cystic fibrosis (CF) is a hereditary disorder that occurs in about one of every 2,000 Caucasian (white) babies. The gene responsible for CF is recessive, which means that if a child is going to inherit the disease, he or she must get one such gene from each parent.

A person who inherits only one CF gene is a carrier, but will not have the disease. However, if two carriers have children, each child will have a one-in-four risk of having CF.

Research is presently under way in two areas — to help identify carriers of the CF gene and, if two carriers conceive a child, to detrmine if the fetus is normal. Although these tests must still be refined for widespread use, they hold promise of permitting genetic counseling which may help parents avoid having an affected child.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A few days ago while using a chemical spray to clean out my oven, I noticed that my eyes were becoming irritated. I immediatley stopped cleaning and stepped into the shower, and the irritation soon passed. I intend to be more careful in the future, but I'd like to know if what I did was an appropriate form of treatment. — Ruth

Dear Ruth: First aid in the event a chemical comes into contact with the eyes — which is what seems to have happened to you — is to immediately flush the eye with water for at least 15 minutes. This can be done either by holding the head under a faucet of gently running water while keeping the eye wide open, or by pouring water into the eye from a clean container. By stepping into a shower, you apparently accomplished the same purpose.

Since you suffered no after effects, we may conclude that you did the right thing. However, I would suggest that to be on the safe side, anyone who has a harmful chemical come into contact with the eye should see a doctor after flushing the eyes as I described. The reassurance a doctor could offer would be well worth the time and expense.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What causes corns and calluses to develop on the feet? I've always been bothered with them, while other people seem to be immune. I have a desk job during the week, but do try to get out for some tennis or walking on weekends. — Bruce

Dear Bruce: Corns and calluses are protective growths that are found in areas subjected to repeated friction and pressure. They usually are symptomatic of some underlying disorder, and therefore cannot be permanently eliminated unless the disorder itself is corrected.

New Right uncomfortable about O'Connor nomination

With BOB TIEUEL

From a Black Point of View: The New Right leaders who supported Ronald Reagan's election apparently want to support his administrative decisions, but they appear uncomfortable about his nomination of Judge O'Connor to the Supreme Court.

Richard Viguerie, chief fund-raiser for the New Right and Cal Thomas, an associate of Jerry Falwell's Moral Majority, are reported withholding their support until they see evidence that O'Connor has experienced a "conversion" on their priority issue, abortion.

In the meantime, Spurgeon Dunnam III, editor of the Texas Methodist/United Methodist Reporter, a national news publication serving the United Methodist Church recently commended Ronald Reagan for the nomination. Dunnam said:

"He surely applauds, as we do, her insistence that she will issue no substantive comments on those or on similar subjects, except as may be called for during her confirmation hearing. She obviously, and appropriately, is unwilling to compromise the integrity of the court by publicly prejudging how she would vote on specific issues. Justice, she seemed to say, demands that a member of the court retain an open mind...until all evidence is presented and all arguments are heard by the court.

NEIGHBORHOODS SUFFERING from high crime rates have their own apathy to blame, since a neglected residential area's very appearance invites criminals. This full view of Staurn was taken by NASA's Voyager 2 in July at a distance of over 26 million miles. Scientists are anticipating much more detailed pictures during the spaceship's closest approach of 70,000 miles on Aug. 25.

Voyager 2 nears Saturn encounter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Man's last chance in the foreseeable future to look closely at Saturn is nearing as the Voyager 2 spaceship rapidly closes in on the famous ringed planet, scientists say.

Voyager 2, heading for an Aug. 25 close encounter, will send back even better pictures and more details of the rings than were produced by the spectacular fly-by of its sister craft nine months ago, project scientists said Thursday.

The hardy little craft, launched almost four years ago, is almost 950 million miles from Earth, heading toward Saturn at 35,000 mph.

The scientists, promising more than just a repeat of Voyager 1's successful pass, said they will look in detail at some of the previous, puzzling discoveries.

They also will try to gather all the new data they can can before the craft moves back into the void because, as far as they know, it is their last chance.

The United States has planned no new deep space missions to follow the successful $500 million Voyager program, and the Soviet Union has never sent a craft to the outer planets.

Dr. Edward Stone, chief Voyager scientist, said Voyager 2 is the last planned mission to Saturn and there may not be another opportunity to study the planet in detail for a generation. But in this case, the last may be the best, he added.

"This time we are coming in above the ring plane on the lighted side of the rings," Stone told a National Aeronautics and Space Administration briefing.

"The pictures should be even more spectacular than the ones from Voyager 1, which went beneath the ring plane and got images mostly from the dark side of the rings," he said.

Scientists said Voyager 2 will get closer, more detailed pictures of some of the moons seen only at a distance by the first craft. It also will get pictures of the moon Phoebe, which was missed on the first mission.

"We are fortunate to have another spacecraft to look at Saturn," said Dr. Bradford Smith, leader of the picture-taking team. "With the second spacecraft, we have an opportunity to plan the mission better and get details of things only hinted at in the first mission."

But the encounter won't be the last stop for Voyager 2. If all goes well, Saturn's powerful gravity will fling the robot ship onto a path that will take it to Uranus in 1986 and onward to Neptune in 1989, the first visits to two of the solar system's most distant, unknown planets.

Midland College pre-registration nearing end for 1981 fall term

Pre-registration for Midland College is nearing an end for the 1981 fall term and, according to Dee Windsor, registrar, early registration assures class enrollment.

"It is important that students pre-register if possible, since it saves them some time and also helps assure them of getting in the classes they want at the most convenient times for their own personal schedules," Windsor said.

Early registration and counseling will be handled from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Aug. 13-14, Aug. 17-21 and again on Aug. 24-25. Pre-registration will be in the Office of Student Services, located in the MC Administration Building.

At the conclusion of pre-registration and counseling, students will receive time permit cards, which assign them a specific period to report for registration, Windsor said.

Official registration dates are Aug. 26-27, with classes beginning Aug. 31. No late registration will be permitted on Aug. 28 and students must pay late registration fees beginning Aug. 31.

Beginning Aug. 17, MC will return to its regular schedule with offices opened from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. For the past 13 weeks, the college's offices have been closed on Friday.

During the fall term, MC offers a wide range of academic courses, designed to provide university-parallel programs for students who plan to transfer to four-year colleges and universities, Windsor said.

It also provides one-year certificates and two-year associate degree programs in many vocational and technical areas.

Copies of MC's fall semester class bulletin may be obtained from all Midland banks, the Midland County Library or the Midland College Office of Student Services.

American slain by guerrillas

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Leftist rebels killed a hostage American before government troops stormed their hideout and killed the five guerrillas, the government said.

Troops reported finding the pajama-clad body of Clifford Bevens, 56, lying beside a letter telling his wife how he hoped to be freed soon, a government spokesman said.

Bevens, of Portland, Ore., was kidnapped Dec. 7, 1980 and had not been heard from in months. He was manager of Ginza, a Guatemalan subsidiary of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co.

The soldiers killed the five guerrillas holding Bevens in a shootout Thursday at the rebels' hideout in Santa Maria Cauque, 25 miles west of here, said the spokesman, who asked not to be named.

The government did not identify Bevens' abductors, but said two of them were women. It gave no other details of the shootout.

Kidnappings of foreign and local businessmen have become common here in the last year. Western diplomats say most of the abductions are carried out by leftists who have extorted huge ransoms to build their arsenals.

The left is battling the military government of Gen. Fernando Lucas Garcia, while right-wing paramilitary "death squads" are gunning for the guerrillas in campaign that is claiming more than 200 lives a month, human rights groups and diplomats say.

Motorists on Interstate 40 in Oklahoma City, probably did a double-take recently when they spotted this vehicle traveling west. With westbound traffic blocked, the plane taxied up the ramp and took off from the highway. The plane was one of two displayed at the Airborne Law Enforcement Association conference nearby.

Ulster still bloody 12 years later

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — This angry province, where ancient battles are remembered with violence, marks a grim milestone Friday — the 12th anniversary of the day British troops marched in to restore peace between feuding Protestants and Roman Catholics.

The troops are still here. Peace is not. And there is no sign it's coming.

The first soldier slain by the Irish Republican Army's hardline "Provisional" wing was 20-year-old gunner Robert Curtis of the Royal Artillery, shot dead by a sniper as he patroled Belfast's Catholic Turf Lodge district Feb. 5, 1971.

Since then the army has lost 344 dead and 3,464 wounded — many blinded or maimed in its costliest campaign since the Korean War.

The army's locally recruited Ulster Defense Regiment has lost 101 men and women. The Royal Ulster Constabulary police force has lost 154 men and women.

Police statistics put the overall death toll on both sides since August 1969, at 2,135. More than 22,000 people have been wounded, there have been 7,250 bombings and nearly 29,000 shootings.

The figures do not include guerrillas secretly buried by their comrades, soldiers mistakenly shot by their own men or nine guerrillas who have died since May while on hunger strike in the Maze prison near Belfast demanding political prisoner status.

The army was ordered to Northern Ireland the afternoon of Aug. 14, 1969, to quell a two-day-old riot in the Catholic Bogside quarter of Londonderry, the province's second-largest city.

A 300-man company of the Prince of Wales Own Regiment, bayonets fixed, marched across Craigavon Bridge spanning the River Foyle as clouds of riot-control gas drifted over the city.

They formed a line across William Street, the storm center of the fighting between Bogsiders hurling gasoline bombs and the green-uniformed Protestant RUC.

Gradually peace returned to the city but the calm was short-lived. Violence exploded in other parts of the province. That night, 30-year-old Sean Gallagher, a Catholic, became the first fatality of "the Troubles" when he was shot to death by policemen in Armagh, ironically Ireland's ancient ecclesiastical capital.

The next night in Belfast, five Catholics and a Protestant were shot to death in sectarian clashes that raged for hours. Four hundred people were wounded, 100 by gunfire.

These days, the "interface" as the military calls it, is a four-mile wall of 25-foot-high corrugated iron dividing tough Protestant and Catholic areas of Belfast. Snipers on both sides still take potshots into the streets opposite.

In 1969, the Catholics, ringed by hostile Protestant areas, greeted the British as saviors and heros. Women brought them cups of tea and for a while it looked as if the province had been pulled back from the brink of civil war.

But that did not last. The IRA, dedicated to uniting Northern Ireland with the neighboring, mostly Catholic Irish Republic, became active again and the army raided Catholic areas they had been defending to look for gunmen and weapons.

What harmony there was soon turned to hate and it is still there. Riots flare nightly in Catholic areas. Youngsters not yet born when the army arrived in 1969 now attack with milk bottle Molotov cocktails and home-made acid bombs in ritual violence that has become a way of life.

Little has changed since 1969. Death still waits in the grubby streets of Belfast and the leafy country lanes of South Armagh "bandit country."

Every attempt to find a way to stop the bloodletting has sunk in the quagmire of Ireland's bloody politics.

Military strength, which peaked at 22,000 in mid-1972, has been reduced to half that level as the RUC and UDR take over security under Britain's "Ulsterization" policy.

But Protestant extremist groups, quiescent in recent years, are showing signs of reactivating as IRA attacks continue and support for the guerrillas grows with the climbing death toll in the Maze hunger strike.

Police statistics show violence again on the increase. Since March 1, when the hunger strike began, 54 people have been killed, double the death toll for the equivalent period last year.

Celebrated Austrian conductor dies

SALZBURG, Austria (AP) — Celebrated Austrian conductor Karl Boehm died here today after a lengthy illness, his family announced. He would have turned 87 in two weeks.

Boehm suffered a stroke in Vienna last March during a television recording of Richard Strauss' opera, "Elektra."

The maestro's health deteriorated earlier this week and doctors said two days ago that he had lapsed into coma at his Salzburg home.

His illness had forced Boehm, known as an outstanding Mozart interpreter, to cancel most plans to conduct at festivals in Bregenz and Linz and at the famed Salzburg summer festival of music. He still had planned to conduct one concert at Salzburg later in the summer despite his illness.

Boehm, Austria's only general music director, an honorary citizen of Vienna and Salzburg, received many national and international honors during a career that spanned more than 60 years. He appeared before audiences in 140 cities.

His great merit, experts say, was that besides promoting Mozart's music, he was a champion and leading interpreter of music written by Alban Berg. Strauss and Richard Wagner.

Born in Graz on Aug. 28, 1894, Boehm was the son of a lawyer and a pianist. He studied law and music and after graduating from law school, he became chief conductor of the Graz Opera.

He performed at the annual Salzburg Festival for more than 40 years and was associated with the Vienna Philharmonic for 48 years. Boehm conducted at Munich, Hamburg and Dresden before World War II and saw the Vienna State Opera bombed in 1944, a year after he had taken over as director.

Impending negotiations cause shift in Israel's West Bank policy

HEBRON, Occupied West Bank (AP) — In its most significant policy shift in years, Israel has cracked down severely on PLO supporters in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip. At the same time, it is encouraging moderate Palestinians to join the Middle East peace effort.

The new carrot-and-stick policy comes as Israel, Egypt and the United States prepare for a fresh round of negotiations on plans for granting self-rule to the 1.3 million Palestinians of the West Bank and Gaza.

Acting with top-level Cabinet approval, occupation authorities have banned West Bank and Gaza notables from meeting with officials of the Palestine Liberation Organization, accepting PLO money or even speaking out in support of the PLO.

At the same time, the Israelis are showing readiness for the first time to seek out an indigenous Palestinian leadership in the West Bank and Gaza — men who are not under the sway of the PLO with which Israel has vowed never to negotiate.

Earlier this week, Ariel Sharon, Israel's new defense minister, put out word that he aims to create "a new atmosphere" in the occupied territories under his administration. His objective: to coax moderate West Bank and Gaza leaders into dumping the PLO and negotiating for whatever they can get in the way of self-rule.

The clampdown on PLO sympathizers has aroused outcery not only in the West Bank but also among Israeli liberals who call it an attack on free speech.

But Israelis close to occupation affairs insist that the only way to bring the moderates to center stage is to break the PLO's control of West Bank and Gaza politics, in which assassins stifle virtually all independent thinking.

Maj. Gen. Danny Matt, the coordinator of occupation affairs and author of the new policy, has made sure the people under his control realize that he means business.

His first target has been Kerim Khalaf, mayor of the town of Ramallah north of Jerusalem and an outspoken pro-PLO radical. Matt called in Khalaf for interrogation after the Jerusalem Arab newspaper Al Fajr printed an interview in which he was quoted as expressing pro-PLO sentiments.

After Khalaf claimed he was misquoted, the interviewer was detained for questioning. Now the newspaper is threatened with closure.

The Israelis face an enormous task in trying to stamp out all the overt signs of PLO support that have taken root in the West Bank press and other forums in the past decade. But they already have managed to silence many PLO supporters.

Yehuda Litani, West Bank affairs writer for the influential daily Haaretz, reports that mayors no longer speak freely to him.

"The look on their faces as I walk through the door says: it would have been better if you had not come. You are embarrassing me and making it difficult for me," writes Litani.

Mustafa Natshe, mayor of this town of 50,000 south of Jerusalem, said of the new restrictions, "It is not fair. Israelis who support the PLO are not being punished. Why Arabs?"

Zvi Elpeleg, a man of deep sensitivity toward the Palestinian plight and close friend of Matt, says that after centuries of foreign domination, West Bankers tend to adapt to whichever political climate prevails. If they feel the PLO has the upper hand, they'll go with the PLO, he says. They will deal with Israel only if convinced that Israel is firm in its intentions.

Elpeleg blames past military governments for failing to grasp that free speech, while nice for Israel's image as an occupier, creates a vacuum in which the most ruthless force inevitably will triumph.

Continental lowers Midland fares

Continental Airlines has abandoned its "Proud Birds with the Golden Tails" in favor of "Proud Armadillos" and the result will be savings for Midland travelers.

According to an airlines spokesman, beginning Saturday, Continental Airlines will be flying Texans to any of Continental Airlines' non-stop destinations in Texas from Midland for $19.99.

Continental has retired the "Bird" in favor of the "Armadillo" to bring travelers the lower fare on non-stop flights between Midland and El Paso, Austin and Houston.

Armadillo fares are for standby space on Continental's regular non-stop flights from Midland to the three cities served on a non-stop basis. If space is available before flight time, the Armadillo fare goes into effect for the number of available seats.

On flights which continue to other destinations, such as Continental's one-stop flights from Midland/El Paso to Houston via Austin, the standby passenger would have to leave the flight at the interim destination, but could standby for the continuing flight to Houston for $19.99.

Iranians capture missiles

PARIS (AP) — Supporters of the late shah of Iran claimed today to have seized three French-built missile boats on the high seas off Gibraltar. Spain said two of the craft were diverted to a Spanish port and the third to Morocco.

The raiders, who described themselves as "loyalist" supporters of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, said 100 men stormed the vessels Thursday and diverted them to international waters off Morocco to block delivery of the cutters to Iran's Moslem fundamentalist regime.

There was no immediate word on the fate of the vessels' Iranian crewmen, who reportedly were seen at one point lying face down on the deck of their commandeered craft.

Spain's Foreign Ministry today confirmed the takeover and said the raiders overpowered a Spanish tugboat captain and used his boat to board the three Iranian cutters. A spokesman said the seizure was being investigated by Spanish authorities.

After learning of the takeover, Spanish navy and air force units trailed the Iranian boats until one of them dropped anchor at Tangiers and the other two docked in Algerciras, a Spanish port across the bay from Gibraltar, the Foreign Ministry spokesman said.

Is eliminating bugs possible in assembly-line housing?

By CLYDE SMITH
Copley News Service

A manufactured house on a $25,000 lot, delivered at a retail cost of as low as $47,900 — is that possible? Is it the future answer to affordable housing?

Yes, it is a reality, at least in Florida, where the Dan Knoebel Corp., after more than 10 years of research and experimentation, has developed a system, using the assembly-line techniques of a factory plant, that permits tight control of quality, costs, materials and production of all housing components.

The savings on costs are amazing, according to Sanford R. Goodkin of Del Mar, Calif., who heads his own real estate research corporation, and who believes manufactured housing offers "a substantial solution" to today's housing affordability dilemma.

The example cited in the opening paragraph is for a small house (800 square feet with two bedrooms and one bath).

But the savings would be at least comparable, actually even more per square foot as the size increases, for the larger house of say three bedrooms, two baths, dining area and family room. Such a house might be packaged, including the cost of a $25,000 site, for say, $70,000 to $80,000.

Contrast that with today's "average" price in California of $120,000 or more for a new single-family dwelling.

Two important things have occurred which will greatly accelerate manufactured housing, says Goodkin. First, the velocity in inflation of money, labor, materials and median pricing — second, the growing acceptance by the consumer of efficient, energy-conserving and functional products.

Knoebel Homes can be completed for occupancy in two to three weeks, says Goodkin. Time is critical to the builder's profit. This produces significant savings in construction financing compared to the time and cost of a site-built house, cutting the effective cost of interest by at least 50 percent.

Labor savings stem from increased production. Goodkin says a false notion is that manufactured housing is based on the concept of cheap labor and cheap materials. The savings are not from cheap labor — employees earn better than average trade wages — but savings are achieved in the total number of man-hours required to produce and deliver.

For example, a typical 2,200-square-foot, site-built house uses 2,609 man-hours. The Knoebel Homes take 989 man-hours including factory and field time, which means a savings of 1,620 man-hours. At $10 an hour, this translates into a saving of $16,200.

In constructing homes, plant work is used in lieu of field work. This provides a controlled environment for production where the systems approach can be effectively applied to achieve maximum efficiency. Since the process is repetitive, each stage of production can be carefully monitored and measured. Thus, Goodkin says, inefficient materials, equipment and techniques are eliminated, refining production processes to the point that maximum output is achieved at the least cost.

Production output is geared to demand. All Knoebel Homes are sold prior to production, and the speed of construction and delivery, about two to three weeks, ensures that material inventory is always tied to a backlog of orders. Materials can be purchased at highly favorable prices due to volume purchasing direct from the manufacturer and repetitious purchasing of the same product. All raw materials are stored in the factory in close proximity to the area of use.

The system has also established strict quality control, thus meeting national standards and code requirements, often exceeding some of these standards.

Knoebel Homes are wood and steel frame, with a variety of attractive exteriors. Knoebel uses steel instead of wood studs. The load capacity for each unit exceeds building code standards for wind, rain and snow resistance, making the product adaptable anywhere in the country. All models are 2-foot post and beam construction, giving added integrity to the quality of construction.

The company manufactures 38 components, ranging from duct work to dimensional components, the average size being no larger than 8x8x2 feet, although some are much larger.

Standard features include air conditioning and heat pump, which give the homes high energy-efficiency ratings. There are options — at extra cost — such as raised hearth fireplace, hardwood ceiling beams, barrel-tile roofing, vaulted ceilings, bay and bow windows, built-in stereo and tape-deck storage. And exterior brick, stone and stucco are available.

Fresh shine for quarry tile

By GENE GARY
Copley News Service

Q. We built a new home about two years ago. Our front terrace and porch have quarry tile as the flooring. It is exposed to sun, wind, rain and dirt.

Since the quarry tile is in full view because of large sliding glass doors, I would like to have my husband put some kind of glaze or shiny finish on it, so that dust will not adhere to it so easily. And I want to give it a fresher look.

Would you please suggest a product or procedure for giving me this shiny finish.

Also, how do you remove this finish when required after years of wear and tear?

My husband is in construction and is very handy. Therefore, any procedure you suggest would not be beyond his abilities. — Mrs. D.S., El Sobrante, Calif.

A. After thoroughly washing the quarry surface and when it is completely dry, we suggest you apply one or two coats of the new acid-removal finishes. These are water based, but when dry are quite water resistant. They give a good gloss and are usually durable.

A colorless, solvent type terrazzo sealer should also serve, though worn places are not as easily repaired as with the acid-removal finish. A special acid stripper is required for removal of this finish.

If terrazzo sealer is used, a special remover for this type of sealer is needed. Consult your local paint store forthese products.

Military beset by waiting lines

By ELIZABETH BRAFFORD
Copley News Service

CARLSBAD, Calif. — Members of the military unit stationed here are shorter than the average Marine or Navy man, some of them not more than 4 feet 11 inches tall. Most don't shave yet. Some still have high-pitched voices and think that girls have cooties.

Yet, when the 310 cadets of the Army and Navy Academy stand at attention in formation, they have as much spit and polish as men with three times their years.

The cadets, who range in age from 13 to 18, may still be boys at heart, but all outward appearances indicate that they have a very grown-up sense of discipline, values and morals instilled by the 70-year-old military preparatory school.

While some military schools were closing their doors for good during the Vietnam War years, the Army and Navy Academy survived with only a 10 percent drop in enrollment, said school president Col. Gilbert N. Brookhart.

Today, the academy is the last military prep school on the West Coast, according to the Association of Military Colleges and Schools of the United States.

Brookhart attributed the temporary decline in enrollment to "anti-military" sentiment during the turbulent Vietnam era. Other school employees said privately that the academy might also have folded during the mid-1970s had it not been for its tax-exempt status as a non-profit corporation.

The school's recovery was quick, and by 1977, enrollment again was at capacity. According to academy officials, there is a waiting list of parents who would spend more than $6,000 a year for their sons' tuition, uniforms and room and board.

A "renewed sense of patriotism" is once again spurring interest in the nation's military secondary schools, said Maj. Gen. W.D. Crittenberger, executive director of the Association of Military Colleges and Schools.

Americans are "looking around the world and seeing that we're in trouble, that we need a strong defense and that one way to get it is having young men in military schools," Crittenberger said.

Maj. Pete Brunhaver, the academy's senior Army instructor, said that parents send their children to military prep schools as an alternative to the public school system's "poor discipline," busing to achieve racial integration, and "extraneous basket-weaving classes."

According to Brookhart, the increased interest in military schools is "part of a return to traditionalism that we see not only in education, but in all phases of life."

The Army and Navy Academy is a place where the traditional values include studying hard, respect for superiors and elders and discipline with "everything organized in a military manner," said Brookhart, former non-commissioned officer during the Korean conflict whose current title is honorary, bestowed by the school.

Although the cadets lead a military life at the academy, few go directly into the armed services or to military colleges after graduation. Of last year's 44 graduates, only one went to West Point and one to the Air Force Academy.

All cadets in grades nine through 12 are enrolled in the Army's Junior Reserve Officer's Corps, although none is committed to service in the armed forces after graduation.

To a degree, life at the academy separates the cadets from the outside world.

DEAR ABBY

Daughter's lifestyle saddens mother

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you made the statement in your column that lesbians are born, not made.

Abby, I have a beautiful, talented 30-year-old daughter who is a lesbian, and I have always blamed myself for that. When she was a little girl, she hated dresses, so I let her wear blue jeans and T-shirts just like her brothers wore. I didn't think a thing of it at the time, but now I realize I helped to make a tomboy out of her. I blame myself for not insisting that she dress and act like a girl instead of putting her in boys' clothes and encouraging her to play boys' games with her brothers and their friends.

So, my question is, if I didn't contribute to the way she turned out, how in the world did it happen? — PUZZLED IN HOPE, ARK.

DEAR PUZZLED: Don't blame yourself. Millions of little girls are tomboys and prefer jeans to dresses, yet the vast majority of them do not become lesbians. The causes of lesbianism, like those of male homosexuality, are complex and not fully understood as yet, but there is growing evidence that many lesbians are born with a predisposition in that direction.

The important thing to remember is that sexual preference is not a matter of choice; it is determined at a very early age. Children who grow up to be homosexuals need their parents' love and understanding no less than other children do. In fact, they need it more.

DEAR ABBY: I'm always impressed with items about rewards, so let me tell you about an incident that recently happened.

As a professional organist, I was entertaining the family Easter brunch crowd at a local dining club. After several hours of working, a boy of about 7 came up to me and said, "Please play raindrops, mister."

I responded by playing "Raindrops Are Falling on My Head." The lad was obviously pleased to hear his favorite song.

Later as he and his family were leaving the club, he ran back and handed me three coins — a dime, a nickel and a penny - still warm from being clutched in his hand. Then he ran from the club.

I still have the coins, framed with the caption, "Please play raindrops, mister." They probably represented the boy's entire fortune, given willingly as a reward for a favor. — FRANK FROM FLORIDA

DEAR FRANK: I predict that lad will go far. He's not afraid to ask for what he wants, and he's prepared to pay for a favor.

DEAR ABBY: To get right to the point, I do not care for dogs in my house. This goes for big dogs, little dogs, and even the hairless kind that are not supposed to smell, but do. They are all dogs to me. We reared our children and had dogs for them, but they were never allowed in the house. They slept in doghouses or out in the garage.

My problem: We have relatives who are dog-crazy. They love their dogs more than some people love their children. These relatives have visited us and brought their dogs along - knowing how I feel about them. They even took them into their beds! Abby, we have just redecorated our rooms, installed new carpet and re-covered our furniture, and I do not want dogs in my house!

Those relatives are coming again. How can I let them know that they are welcome but not their dogs, without having them think I am an old crab? - NO DOG LOVER

DEAR NO DOG LOVER: You can TELL them before they arrive that they are welcome, but their dogs are not. But don't be surprised if you get the "love me, love my dog" bit. They WILL think you are an old crab, but you'll have kept the dogs out of your home, and that's the object, isn't it?

Parents doubtful of effectiveness of recent child snatching laws

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Eunice Munford says the police would have shown more concern if her purse had been stolen — instead of her four children.

Mrs. Munford was granted custody of the children in her divorce settlement, but she said police treated their disappearance as a "domestic squabble" because they had been snatched by their father, her ex-husband.

The American Bar Association says 100,000 children are snatched from their mothers or fathers each year by ex-spouses who refuse to abide by legal custody orders. Only 10 percent of the children are ever returned to the parent who was granted legal custody, the ABA estimates.

If an adult snatched any child not his or her own, it would be a violation of the federal kidnapping law and the FBI would help track the culprit down.

But most officials agree that law enforcement agencies treat child snatchings as family quarrels, reluctant to spend time, resources and taxpayers' money to help distraught parents track down and seize custody of their children.

But as one of his last acts in office, former president Jimmy Carter signed a child-snatching law that, for the first time, put the federal government on record as frowning on the phenomenon of child snatching.

The law, which took effect July 1, does three things:

—Standardizes child custody orders throughout the 50 states.

—Allows the federal Parent Locator Service, originally aimed at locating parents who skip out on child support payments, to find child snatchers as well. The service is part of the Office of Child Support Enforcement, operated by the Social Security Administration.

—Empowers the FBI to handle arrest warrants which charge unlawful flight to avoid prosecution in such cases.

Mrs. Munford, who lives in Austin, said the law still leaves parents mostly to their own devices to track down their children and retake custody.

"It doesn't have much teeth," she said of the law. "Even if the Parent Locator Service can assist these people, there's nothing they can do as far as enforcement."

Mrs. Munford was luckier than most. Using mostly her own resources, she found her children in California and regained custody. She had searched for a year.

"I found in my own experience that it would have been much easier (to get help 0rom the police) if my ex-husband had taken my car — much easier," she said.

Mrs. Munford, who works for the state Department of human Resources, is Texas coordinator for Children's Rights Inc., a Washington, D.C.-based organization made up of parents whose children were snatched.

The new law empowers the FBI to act when state felony warrants are issued, but only six states, including Texas, have felony child-snatching laws, and even in those cases, local prosecutors are often reluctant to act.

Charles Conaway, first Assistant District Attorney in San Antonio, explained that it's up to the complaining parent to find the missing child, and prove that the ex-spouse has taken custody, before the state can file felony charges.

"There's not a lot you can do if you're dealing with someone who doesn't have any roots, any close ties to anywhere," Conaway said. "It's awfully easy to take a small child and get on Greyhound and say 'bye. How are you going to find them?"

John Warren, 29, a San Antonian who works for the state welfare department, said he paid $20,000 to have a lawyer and private detective help him gain physical custody of his 5-year-old daughter.

Warren obtained a "writ of attachment" for the arrest of his ex-wife and return of his child, but he said no law enforcement agency would help him find her.

"Everybody has a lot of sympathy for you, but nobody will enforce the law," Warren said after seeking help from police, the district attorney's office, the Dallas court that granted him custody, the sheriff's department in Corpus Christi and the FBI.

Warren won custody of his daughter last Dec. 8, but didn't see the child again until June, when his ex-wife voluntarily surrendered her to him in front of a Dallas church.

"She told me she gave up, that she couldn t run any more, that she didn't have any money," Warren said.

Mrs. Munford said she hired a lawyer in California and the police went along in an unofficial capacity when she removed her four children from school and her ex-husband's home a year after she gained custody.

"It's just a helpless situation," she said. "I couldn't believe something like this could happen and the law wouldn't help me and protect me. The children are the real victims of this. The kids love their father and their mother. They don't want to be pulled between one and the other."

Craig Hatchett, head of the Parent Locator Service in Austin, said it's difficult for his office to enforce the new federal law.

Hatchett said people who use the service to locate their children will be charged a fee to cover the cost of manpower and time. He said he's not sure how far the state can go to validate custody orders, and noted that in some cases both parents have been awarded custody — in different states.

"The Parent Locator Service is not worth very much, anyway," Warren said. "It's very unsuccessful in finding even fathers who don't pay child support."

Delayed birth may protect baby from virus

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Pregnant women who catch summer flu may lessen the threat of passing a fatal viral infection on to their newborn children if they delay the birth a few days, a study shows.

Common germs called enteroviruses cause mild, flu-like symptoms in adults. But the sickness can be a killer if it is acquired by a child during birth.

In a new report, researchers recommend that mothers who catch the infection in the last days of pregnancy delay their birth for a week, if possible, to ensure that the child will receive protective antibodies from the mothers' blood.

When attacked by viruses, healthy adults produce many different kinds of antibodies that combine with the microbes and destroy them. However, if the child is born before he receives antibodies from his mother, a usually harmless disease can be deadly.

The doctors caution, however, that their advice may be difficult to put into practice. Delaying birth may not be possible, and the disease is often so weak that half or more of its adult victims do not realize that they have it. Even when the symptoms emerge, they vary greatly and can include muscle ache, upset stomach, fever and sore throat.

"It's a real problem," Dr. John F. Modlin, who directed the study, said in an interview. "Unfortunately, there is no specific set of symptoms that would really lead one to think they were infected with this particular virus."

Modlin's study was conducted during a widespread outbreak in Boston two years ago of echovirus 11, one of the enteroviruses. The work was performed at Beth Israel and Brigham and Women's hospitals in Boston and published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Modlin says that infants suffer the ill effects of enteroviruses about as often as they are harmed by genital herpes, which also can be fatal if transmitted during birth from mother to child. Although no precise estimates of their frequency exist, experts believe that they complicate far fewer than one percent of all births.

During a three-week period in 1979, the researchers examined 194 women who gave birth at one hospital.

Former Rep. Michael Myers, D-Pa., arrives at U.S. District Court in Brooklyn Thursday. Myers, found guilty of bribery and conspiracy in the first Abscam trial Aug. 30, 1980, was sentenced to three years in prison and fined.

Government will sue to recover bribes

By RICHARD T. PIENCIAK
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — With four congressmen and two other Abscam defendants fined and sentenced to jail terms, the Justice Department now plans to retrieve $200,000 in bribes paid by undercover agents, according to published reports.

Basing its story on unidentified federal sources, the New York Daily News reported today that the government intends to file civil suits to recover the money.

U.S. District Court George Pratt on Thursday sentenced former Reps. John Murphy, D-N.Y., Michael Myers, D-Pa., and Raymond Lederer, D-Pa., to three-year prison terms and fined them $20,000 each on convictions stemming from the Abscam investigation.

Another former congressman, Democrat Frank Thompson Jr. of New Jersey, was given the maximum 15-year sentence on his bribery conviction, a technicality to enable the judge to order a medical study to determine whether prison would endanger his life.

Pratt freed the six on their own recognizance, pending appeal.

Former Camden, N.J., Mayor Angelo Errichetti drew the stiffest sentence, a six-year term for his bribery conviction and an overall $40,000 fine. He immediately lost his seat as a New Jersey state senator when sentenced. He also was sentenced to concurrent five-year terms for conspiracy and interstate travel in the aid of racketeering.

Philadelphia City Councilman Louis Johanson was given concurrent three-year terms for convictions on charges of conspiracy, bribery and the interstate travel count. He also was fined $20,000.

Errichetti's lawyer, Raymond Brown, called the sentencings "mass condemnation proceedings" and described his client as "a creature of abject shame."

When lawyer John Duffy called Johanson "a thoroughly decent human being" and "a good family man" in the Brooklyn courtroom, his client began to cry.

Federal prosecutor Thomas Puccio asked for heavy prison terms and fines. He said the defendants had displayed an "utter contempt for the law."

In the Abscam investigation, undercover FBI agents posed as an Arab sheik and his representatives, offering bribes in return for introduction of immigration bills that would guarantee the shiek residency in the United States if he needed it.

Myers was removed from office by his colleagues; Murphy and Thompson lost re-election bids and Lederer resigned, facing expulsion.

Pratt made all of the multiple sentences concurrent. He said the defendants would be permitted to apply for parole after serving between 14 and 20 months.

Last month, Pratt rejected the defendants' claims that their due-process rights were violated during the investigation.

Myers, who was expelled from Congress after his conviction last Aug. 30, was sentenced to three-year prison terms for convictions on conspiracy, bribery and interstate trave for racketeeing.

Murphy, former chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee and an 18-year House veteran, was given a three-year sentence for a conspiracy conviction and two-year terms for conflict of interest and acceptance of an unlawful gratuity.

Lederer, the only congressman indicted in Abscam to be re-elected in November, was sentenced to three three-year terms for conspiracy, bribery and interstate travel for racketeering, and a two-year term for accepting an unlawful gratuity.

Pratt ordered Thompson, a 26-year House veteran and former head of its Administration Committee, to undergo medical study because of a doctor's report that said the former congressman's cardiovascular system cannot withstand prison life.

The sentencing of Philadelphia lawyer Howard Criden, convicted with Myers, was postponed from Thursday until Oct. 2 because he recently suffered a heart attack.

Sentencings for nine other Abscam defendants, including Sen. Harrison Williams Jr., D-N.J., and former Reps. John Jenrette, D-S.C., and Richard Kelly, R-Fla., are being held up pending rulings on possible due-process violations by the government.

It will cost Nixon to drop suit

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon whistle-blower Ernest Fitzgerald has been paid $144,000 by former President Nixon and may receive an additional $34,000 to drop a $3.5 million damage suit, a Nixon aide says.

Morton Halperin, a national security aide in the Nixon White House, said in legal papers Thursday that the payments to Fitzgerald jeopardize Halperin's chances for recovering damages from Nixon in a separate suit.

In a brief filed with the Supreme Court, Halperin's lawyers said Nixon "has already paid Fitzgerald $144,000" and will pay an additional $34,000 if the Supreme Court decides Fitzgerald's suit against Nixon should go to trial.

The brief stated that Fitzgerald would take the $34,000 and drop the suit if the Supreme Court rules against Nixon.

Nixon "bought his way out of that trial," Halperin's attorneys said. They said the former president's plea for the Supreme Court to throw out the Fitzgerald suit "represents little more than a $34,000 wager on how" the Supreme Court will decide the question of Nixon's immunity from such suits.

Lawyers for Fitzgerald and Nixon could not be reached for comment on their out-of-court agreement.

Halperin is suing Nixon and other Nixon administration officials for authorizing illegal wiretaps on the Halperin family's home telephone for 21 months from May 1969 to February 1971. The taps were prompted by suspicions that Halperin was leaking foreign policy documents to the press.

Fitzgerald sued Nixon for $3.5 million because he lost his job in 1969 as a cost analyst for the Air Force after telling Congress the C-5A transport plane would cost $2 billion more than originally estimated.

Fitzgerald claims that the firing was illegal and Nixon should have to pay for it.

Fitzgerald was rehired with back pay in 1973 but since has claimed that the Air Force refuses to give him duties that match the job he had before.

The two Watergate-era cases involving Fitzgerald and Halperin are linked because they raise questions about whether presidents and high-ranking federal officials can be forced to pay damages for abuses while in office.

The Supreme Court ruled last June 22 that Halperin and his family can bring Nixon and his top aides to trial in an effort to force them to pay for violating the Halperins' constitutional rights.

The court was split 4-4 in that case, with Justice William Rehnquist, a Justice Department official in the Nixon administration, removing himself from consideration.

The Supreme Court also said June 22 that it will resolve in the next court term, beginning in October, the immunity question in the Fitzgerald case. The court agreed to hear the case on a plea from Nixon, who is appealing a lower-court ruling.

The statement that Nixon has paid $144,000 to Fitzgerald in partial settlement of their case was raised by Halperin's lawyers in an effort to convince the Supreme Court to reverse itself and throw out Nixon's petition in the Halperin case.

Halperin's lawyers also asked to take part formally and present their client's viewpoint if the court hears arguments in the Fitzgerald case.

Mark H. Lynch of the American Civil Liberties Union, an attorney for Halperin, argued that Nixon's real object in seeking Supreme Court review of the Fitzgerald case was, in effect, to win the Halperin suit through a back door.

Lynch contends that if the Supreme Court rules Nixon is immune from Fitzgerald's suit, Nixon could use that as a precedent to defeat Halperin's chances of winning damages in a jury trial.

Lynch said Nixon may be entitled to immunity from Fitzgerald's claims, but that the abuse of the Halperin family's rights was more severe.

Blanton, aides go to court

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Former Gov. Ray Blanton and two of his former aides were going to court today to ask that their convictions in a liquor license scheme be set aside.

Arguing that their trial was improper and the jury prejudiced, they have requested that U.S. District Judge Bailey Brown set them free or schedule a new trial.

Unless Brown agrees, Blanton will have to serve a sentence of up to 70 years in prison and pay fines totaling $29,000. Those convicted with him, his 1974 campaign manager James Allen and ex-special assistant Clyde Edd Hood Jr., face up to 35 years and $16,000.

Brown, of Memphis, was assigned to the case after a colleague on the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, John Peck, withdrew when his wife suffered a fatal stroke. All Tennessee trial judges stepped aside.

Blanton was convicted June 9 of extortion, conspiracy and mail fraud.

The 'water cure' loses popularity

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Thoroughbreds still race here every August and sightseers enjoy the Revolutionary War battlefield, but the pungent mineral water baths that once drew flocks of peope hoping o be healed are themselves in need of a cure.

The pipes in the baths, which drew 175,000 people a year in the 1930s, are rusty and clogged with mineral deposits. State officials are considering closing most of the baths and transferring the rest to a private health club.

And next month, the famous bottled waters from the springs that gave this community of 23,901 north of Albany its name will carry a label warning they contain an unhealthy amount of minerals and "should not be used as a principal or sole source of drinking water."

Iroquois Indians reputedly made the waters famous in 1771 when they brought British Indian agent Sir William Johnson to High Rock Spring to ease the pain of an old wound.

"There is no longer any doubt of their ability to cure human diseases, to eke out human life, to mitigate human suffering and to increase human happiness," a doctor, R.L. Allen, concluded in 1844.

Forty years later, the Artesian Lithia Co. touted the spas as the "perfect panacea" for liver complaints, dyspepsia, biliousness, acidity of the stomach, constipation and piles.

Vacationers poured in to take the "water cure," staying in palatial hotels and sampling waters from two dozen springs, each tasting slightly different.

Then, as now, many of the mineral-laden waters tasted terrible and the carbonation led to foul-smelling belches. The laxative varieties earned nicknames like "Three-Minute" and "10-Minute."

But pilgrims tolerated those drawbacks in the face of scientific opinion that the waters were truly curative.

In the late 1920s, hydrotherapy expert Simon Baruch convinced Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt to build a treatment and research center at the baths. The Simon Baruch Laboratory, equipped with Bunsen burners, test tubes and lead-lined chambers, employed an X-ray researcher and a staff of 14.

But medical director Dr. Walter McClellan never pinned down evidence of the baths' curative effect despite 20 years of research. Most of the staff left at the onset of World War II and never returned.

The number of baths given annually had dropped to 60,000 by the mid-1960s and leveled off around 25,000 in recent years.

When the physicians and registered nurses left in the early 1970s, the spas were forced to drop the physical and inhalation therapy and hot-wax treatments they once provided according to doctors' orders.

"From what we can see, there's no major market for therapeutic mineral baths in the future," according to William Kelly, manager of the Saratoga-Capital District State Park and Recreation Commission.

The state Health Department has drawn up the warning label that will appear next month on 19 brands of bottled water in the state.

Charles Sterling, president of Waters of Saratoga Springs Inc., which bottles water under license, fears the warning will hurt business.

The Federal Food and Drug Administration prohibits bottlers from making health claims for mineral water, and state park officials generally emphasize the relaxing aspects of the baths rather than possible curative effects.

Some experts say bicarbonates in Saratoga's mineral waters are good to drink in hot weather, while the water's calcium and magnesium help avoid leg cramps. Magnesium salts also help constipation.

"It won't hurt you, that's for sure," said Richard Cherry, a concessionaire at the downtown Hathorn No. 1 spring.

Customers' checks returned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service is returning thousands of uncashed checks to customers of an Atlanta-based mail-order company accused of selling 15 health products that don't work.

Athena Products Ltd. claimed in the ads that its products would "dissolve ugly, lumpy fat deposits," "slow down the aging process forever," "raise intelligence and memory" and "make your sex life become everything you ever hoped for."

Judicial Officer James A. Cohen of the Postal Service ordered 4,500 letters containing checks returned to Athena's customers when the firm did not contest a finding by an administrative law judge that it violated the law by using the mail to misrepresent a product.

He also ordered Athena, which sold health products from 14 different mailing addresses, to stop the practice.

Richard Blumberg, spokesman for the company, could not be reached for comment.

Daniel Lewis, the Postal Service attorney in the case, said the 4,500 letters containing checks from consumers around the country had been impounded pending resolution of the case.

At a hearing, the Postal Service produced a pharmacologist, a nutritionist and a physician who testified that the Athena products could not perform as claimed in the ads.

They said the 15 products offer unnecessary, and often excessive, supplementation of vitamins and metals.

In seeking the order, Postal Service attorneys said Athena advertising "artfully blends scientific fact with exaggerated claims. ... Twisted medical logic consistently appears in the promotion of products sold."

Here are the Athena products that no longer can be sold by mail: RNA, RX for Aging, Euzinc-D, Cellulite PM, Cellulite TRE, Ex-Sel, Food for Thought, Meta E, Natural Calm, Athena Nutrition for Women, Chromill GTF, Power Tabs, Athena Stay Young Program, Youth Factor and In-Trim or Control.

Church leader charged in child slavery case

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A jury is deliberating in the trial of a church leader charged with holding eight teen-agers in slavery and conducting forced marriages, beatings and theft.

Jimmy Conyers, described by witnesses as a "deacon" in the Church of God and True Holiness, conspired to help hold the youths in "child slavery...all under the guise of working in the name of the Lord," prosecutor Richard Roberts said during the trial.

Church leaders relied on fear, beatings and public rebukes to deprive the faithful "of their normal life force" and of more than $100,000, Roberts said. Testimony indicated that many of the children in the church had joined with their mothers. The mothers sometimes were directed to beat their own children, according to testimony.

The youths were forced to work for free and a young woman and two young men in the church testified they were forced to marry at early ages. One man said he was forced to go on a fast and that he gave his earnings to a church leader because he feared being beaten.

The jury, which began deliberations Thursday in U.S. District Court, was to resume work today.

Conyers, 39, is accused of conspiring with three others to holding eight teen-agers in involuntary servitude from 1974 to 1978. He is the last of the four to be prosecuted.

Robert Allan Carr, leader of the all-black church, and Asanthia Carr Cain and Larry Cain, Carr's daughter and son-in-law, were indicted with Conyers in October 1979 after a two-year investigation by state and federal officials. Carr and the Cains pleaded guilty to similar charges connected with the church, once located in Durham and Wilson, N.C., and Florence, S.C., and they were sentenced to prison.

Federal agents said they were not able to find Conyers until May, when he was arrested in South Carolina.

Conyers' lawyer, Steve Allen, said Conyers did anything Carr told him to. Allen acknowledged that Conyer was involved in the beatings of church members, but said that didn't prove Conyers was involved in slavery.

Terry Daniel Sauls, now 20, said that in 1977 he was in the ninth grade when he and his mother went to Durham for church services. Both had been members of Carr's church in Wilson for several years, he said.

Sauls said he was taken from Durham to Florence, where he was to live in a room behind the church with "quite a few others."

"Jimmy Conyers was there guarding the door at night so we couldn't get out," Sauls testified.

During the day, Sauls said, the youths were forced to do menial work for which they received no pay.

After one confession meeting, Sauls said, Carr "put oil on my head and told me not to eat nothing, that he would tell me when to eat." Others who testified said a fast could last up to three days.

Sauls said he once had a paid job at a Florence car wash, but gave all of his earnings to Carr because he was afraid he would be beaten.

When he learned the group and the others were going back to Durham for a weekend, Sauls said, he held $7 from his pay, hoping to escape from the church and catch a bus from Durham to Wilson.

But at a confession meeting in Durham, Sauls said, Carr called him to the front of the church, made him empty his pockets and found the money. He said Carr told him, "you ain't never going back," then had Conyers hold him while Carr beat him severely with a heavy rope.

World not listening to words of wisdom

By TOM EASTHAM
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON -- It seems so plaintive, this letter from the mayor of Hiroshima, Japan. A distant voice, calling to a world that does not listen.

"This morning," the letter begins, "on the occasion of the 36th anniversary of the atomic bombing, before the Memorial Cenotaph where the souls of more than 200,000 A-bomb victims are resting, the Peace Memorial Ceremony was conducted with solemnity."

Forty thousand people attended, writes Mayor Takeshi Araki, including Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and Dr. Jan Martenson, director the United Nations Center for Disarmament.

"At the height of the ceremony," the mayor says proudly, "I was given the privilege to read the Peace Declaration which conveys the Spirit of Hiroshima."

I met Mayor Araki a year ago in the gracious city hall of Hiroshima. In this of all cities, an American does not expect to be greeted with open arms. But the mayor had surprised us -- sending two limousines and opening his office on Saturday to greet four American newsmen as distinguished visitors.

Shortly before, the mayor had been through another of his city's annual peace rituals, in which the first city to feel the horror of an atomic bomb pleads with the world to heed its warnings and put aside weapons.

I wondered then in the mayor's office, and I wonder now, if anybody really listens.

As Americans who must wrestle with the 1981 realities of MX missiles and neutron bombs -- can we take time to think about the message from Hiroshima, and Nagasaki, and Mayor Araki?

"Let all the souls here rest in peace, for we shall not repeat the evil," is the Peace Declaration's pledge to the lost loved ones of Hiroshima.

This year's document observes that today the nuclear powers, led by the United States and the Soviet Union, "continue the ever-expanding arms race which serves to strengthen their rivalry," and adds disconsolately: "Consequently, mankind today is confronted with the real possibility of self-extinction."

But is mankind interested? Is it listening?

In his letter, the mayor expressed the hope I would "respond to the Spirit of Hiroshima and convey the message of this Peace Declaration to as many people in the world as possible."

That I may do, but will the people of the world listen?

When the bomb hit, Mayor Araki was working in the Mitsubishi shipyard, about two kilometers from hypocenter -- which means ground zero, the point above which the bomb exploded.

He survived, and saw it all.

"I was treated in the countryside," he said undramatically. "The radiation victims went hairless and died, one after another. Two of my sisters died of radiation. My brother-in-law and sister-in-law and their parents were all radiated. Many people died although they had no apparent injuries."

In the years since, the mayor has become a fervent advocate of disarmament. He has made four visits to the United States, and twice addressed the United Nations. Though he has seen the world's weapons grow larger and more numerous, Araki believes concern about the atomic disaster experience is growing.

Understandably, Hiroshima has its own perspective. Seven million tourists come there each year. They see the city's special horror in films, defaced artifacts and morbid memorabilia in the Peace Memorial Museum. They pay silent homage at the Peace Flame. They stare at the one ghostly remnant, The Atomic Bomb Dome.

But do they listen?

Our party to Hiroshima included John Patrick Hunter, a Madison (Wis.) newspaper reporter who in 1945 became the first American writer to reach Hiroshima. Only a month after the bombing, he made the unauthorized trip from Tokyo -- because "I am a newsman."

"I came here early enough to be horrified by what I saw," Hunter recalled as he and the mayor compared their recollections. "You could still see the smoke and fire, and people were still lining up for treatment. The city was like a desert. I felt great regret. I said to myself that never again should any country use the atomic bomb as an instrument of war."

The visit converted him from a war correspondent to a peace correspondent, Hunter said.

Despite the benign nature of today's Japanese, it remains a mystery to Americans in Hiroshima why they don't experience any semblance of resentment.

"Because of our religious background, there is not a strong grudge against Americans," an interpreter explained. "Right after the bombing, I was told, many people here were thinking about retaliation. But after the surrender, people obeyed the government orders."

Ironically, a kind of diserimination exists in the city for the one out of eight citizens who is a bomb-blast victim.

Our luncheon host was Katsukuni Tanaka, deputy news chief of JOGM-TV in Hiroshima. He was not quite two at the time of the blast, and almost three miles away. But his neck is heavily scarred from radiation burns.

Tanaka said many people of Hiroshima who were not there during the bombing actually avoid contact with bomb-victims. They are considered "infected" with radiation poisoning. Parents will not allow their daughters to go with bombing victims, fearing birth defects or genetic problems.

And so the indescribable suffering of the bomb's victims goes on, even today.

At 37, Tanaka is married to a girl from the countryside, and they have two normal children.

"My wife didn't care...she cared about me," he said, head held high.

In his peace declaration, Mayor Araki expresses optimism about the forthcoming special session of the United Nations General Assemby, which will be devoted to disarmament. The mayor wants to see total abolition of nuclear weapons and eventually complete disarmament.

"The possession of nuclear weapons can no longer guarantee the security of the human race," his declaration states. "Only total nuclear disarmament can guarantee security and thus pave the way for peace. We must recognize this truth."

Latest attack on regulations draws protests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is drawing cries of protest from consumer, environmental and women's groups over its broadest attack yet on government regulations governing everything from sex discrimination in sports and jobs to help for the handicapped.

Vice President George Bush announced Wednesday that 30 more rules have been targeted for possible elimination or easing in response to 2,500 individual suggestions for regulatory relief. That swells the administration's regulation "hit list" to 91.

"It's another signal to big business that there will be no law and order applied to them under the Reagan administration," consumer advocate Ralph Nader said. "It's just another installment in withdrawing the health and safety protections for the American people that have been in place for years."

Women's groups were particularly unhappy with the review of regulations prohibiting sex discrimination in school athletic programs and sexual harassment by employers.

Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, called the review "outrageous" and said NOW would "make sure that the message gets out to women and girls that this administration, under the guise of trying to simplify, is really taking away women's rights."

The Education Department's "Title IX" rules enforce a 9-year-old law that bans federal aid to the country's 16,000 public school districts and 3,000 colleges if their sports programs discriminate against women. Because of the law, schools have been upgrading women's athletics.

In announcing the review, the administration said concern had been raised over requirements that force schools to spend comparable amounts on men and women's sports programs for coaches' salaries and equipment.

The administration said it was reviewing rules prohibiting sexual harassment on the job because it felt the current guidelines prohibiting "unwelcome sexual advances" and "verbal sexual conduct" were too vague.

"How can they call that language too vague?" asked Carol Bros of the National Women's Political Caucus. "Sexual harassment in the workplace is a terrible problem for women."

Guidelines prohibiting discrimination in hiring because of race, color, religion or sex were singled out for review on the grounds they may be imposing needless "record-keeping" requirements on businesses.

Bush said the administration expected some "special interest" attacks on its efforts but added, "We really believe that the American people are saying with a rather united voice that we have gone too far in the federal government regulating things."

The list announced Wednesday was the third group of rules the administration has singled out for study because they may be "burdensome, unnecessary or counter-productive." Most are still under review.

The first group of 27, announced in March, included regulations governing hazardous chemical wastes and requirements for utility-run energy conservation programs in private homes. A second package of 34 rule changes proposed in April to help the auto industry included relaxing various emission standards and dropping requirements for air bags.

Administration officials said Wednesday that some regulations may be retained in present form after the review, but most probably will be eased or eliminated.

The latest list, covering regulations enforced by 17 different government agencies, included:

—Rules that bar discrimination against the handicapped and require buildings receiving federal assistance to insure that the handicapped have access. The rules also require schools and colleges to provide special equipment and courses for the handicapped.

—A rule requiring that each time a drug prescription is filled, pharmacies supply customers with printed information on appropriate uses and possible side effects. The administration said this rule would force the printing of 120 million pieces of paper annually and lead to increased drug prices.

—Environmental Protection Agency review procedures governing the registration of new chemicals and pesticides. The administration said the current procedures seem to "delay unnecessarily" the introduction of new products. Environmentalists say the review is essential to keep harmful products off the market.

—Rules requiring further reductions in the amount of lead used in gasoline as an anti-knock additive. Small refiners have complained they will be driven out of business if this requirement is not eased.

—Environmental regulations governing protection of endangered species and wildlife in wetlands. The administration also said it was reviewing procedures for environmental impact statements on the grounds that these assessments may be causing "excessive delay in publicly and privately funded construction projects."

Lewis Regenstein, Washington representative of the Fund for Animals, said the administration "is in the process of dismantling the whole endangered species program."

In addition to the 30 rules, the administration also announced it wants to reduce paperwork requirements for businesses and local governments in the areas of food stamps, school lunches, clothing flammability standards, nuclear power plant licensing and transportatin grants.

NOTHING ELSE MATTERS!

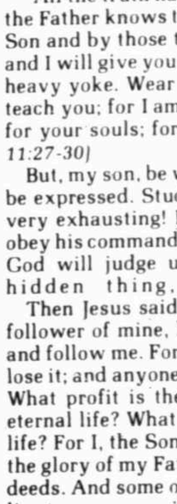

"All the truth has been entrusted to Me by My Father. Only the Father knows the Son, and the Father is known only by the Son and by those to whom the Son reveals Him. Come to Me and I will give you rest - all of you who work so hard beneath a heavy yoke. Wear My yoke - for it fits perfectly - and let Me teach you; for I am gentle and humble, and you shall find rest for your souls; for I give you only light burdens." (Matthew 11:27-30)

But, my son, be warned: there is no end of opinions ready to be expressed. Studying them can go on forever, and become very exhausting! Here is my final conclusion: fear God and obey his commandments, for this is the entire duty of man. For God will judge us for everything we do, including every hidden thing, good or bad. (Eccl. 12:12-13)

Then Jesus said to the disciples, "If anyone wants to be a follower of mine, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me. For anyone who keeps his life for himself shall lose it; and anyone who loses his life for me shall find it again. What profit is there if you gain the whole world and lose eternal life? What can be compared with the value of eternal life? For I, the Son of Mankind, shall come with my angels in the glory of my Father and judge each person according to his deeds. And some of you standing right here now will certainly live to see me coming in my Kingdom." (Matthew 16:24-28)

The man who made budget process work

By JAMES CARY
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON -- They call him "Mr. Reconciliation," the "Reconciliation Workhorse" and the man who made the budget process work by riding herd on the myriad changes that produced $35 billion in spending cuts for fiscal 1982.

But he'd like some basic reforms adopted before attempting to make the complicated procedure work again.

"We need legislation to prevent committees from making a budget bill into a vehicle for policy changes. One budget resolution instead of two would be enough also, and I personally favor moving to a two-year, instead of one year budget."

The speaker is Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif., chairman of the House Budget Committee's Reconciliation Task Force, who has recently emerged from an exhausting two-week ordeal of tracking250 conferees and 58 conference sub-groups that produced the $772 billion budget President Reagan will sign at his California ranch Thursday.

Panetta, 43, a converted Republican, said in a telephone interview from his Carmel Valley home, his basic concern is the budget process known as reconciliation, not be abused.

Reconciliation is the awkward word coined in the Budget Act of 1974 for the process of making Committees fit their apropriations into overall budget ceilings set by Congress for each area of budget activity.

"The tool of reconciliation was designed to implement savings," Panetta said, but it became a vehicle to enact policy changes, a Christmas tree...loaded with policy changes that had nothing to do with dollar savings.

While many were eliminated before final action, others were enacted without being subjected to Committee scrutiny or debated on the House floor.

"One example," said Panetta, "was the teenage chastity bill ($30 million was appropriated annually for three years to promote teen-age chastity). Another involved efforts to deregulate broadcasting. We got most of that out but remnants survived."

He said he has discussed with House leaders the need to either work out an agreement with Committees not to enact policy in budget legislation or to adopt legislation that would outlaw such actions. He said he favors the latter.

His objections don't end there. Under the 1974 Budget Act a second budget resolution must be adopted by Congress soon. Panetta says he belives one resolution is enough and would like to see the Act amended to require only one.

He also is sponsoring legislation that would permit Congress to adopt two-year budgets, thus providing time for tough committee oversight of existing programs.

Born in Monterey, Panetta is a 1960 Magna Cum Laude graduate of Santa Clara University, where he also took two law degrees. He first came to Washington in 1969 as legislative assistant to former Sen. Thomas Kuchel, was elevated to the Office of Civil Rights in the Justice Department only to be fired by President Richard Nixon when he objected to the slow pace of desegregation policy, and then returned to Monterey to practice law and switch parties.

He was elected to the first of his three terms in Congress in 1976 and when appointed to the Budget committee suggested a Task Force be formed that would deal speciffically with the reconciliation process. Others agreed and Panetta was made chairman.

Reconciliation was used in a minor way last year. This year it became a buzzsaw as Reagan worked his special magic and carved $35 million from the 1982 budget.

Although Panetta thought the Reagan-endorsed bill eventually adopted by the House a bad product, he threw all of hs considerable energy into making the budget process work when the legislation went to a Conference Committee to reconcile its provisions with those in a Senate budget bill.

Reporting daily at 7:30 a.m. he scrambled from sub-group to sub-group checking on progress, kept Speaker Thomas (Tip) O'Neill, D-Mass., updated on progress, reported the same on the House floor and to the press, attended other meetings, dropped in at his own office occasionally to catch up on his duties there, met with Committee staffers and eventually got out about 11:30 p.m. or midnight.

He was widely praised by both Republicans and Democrats for his efforts. "A superb job...," said Ralph Regula, R-Ohio, the ranking Budget Committee Republican. "Very effective," said Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, his opponent within the Committee sponsoring the Reagan budget package.

Panetta, now spending the August Congressional recess catching up on constituent contacts in his California 16th district, finds people there are deeply concerned about high interest rates.

He blames in part the recently adopted $732.8 billion Reagan tax cut just adopted that will reduce federal revenues $732.8 billion by fiscal 1986. He preferred much lower cuts targeted toward savings and investment.

"We'll have a hel of a battle balancing the budget in 1984 as President Ragan promised," he said.

Indeed he predicts budget deficits of $50-$60 billion in fiscal 1982, the same in fiscal 1983 and $70 billion in fiscal 1984. Such deficits will make it difficult for the Federal Reserve Board to lower interest rates, he believes.

Accounts should be examined

By DAVID DIETZ
Hearst Feature Service

The savings and loan industry, along with banks, will soon be offering special tax-free accounts in order to attract your dollars. Before you're tempted, however, financial advisers recommend that you examine the arrangement closely. Although being promoted as "All-Savers" certificates, the accounts are geared principally to wealthy persons.

Actually certificates of deposit, they are a cornerstone of the Reagan administration's effort in the recently enacted tax-cut bill to encourage Americans to save more. And, although the industry discourages the view, the tax-exempt certificates are widely seen as helping bail savings and loans out of their financial calamity.

The tax-cut legislation, which President Reagan is expected to sign within a week, permits government-insured one-year accounts that will allow individual savers to earn $1,000 in tax-free interest, and $2,000 for married couples filing joint returns.

Although the accounts, available in $500 minimum amounts, won't be available until Oct. 1, a number of savings and loans have been tempting savers with so-called "holding" accounts paying up to 18 percent interest until the new accounts become effective.

Unlike the certificates, however, the holding accounts offer neither tax-free interest nor government insurance. And the expected rate on the tax-exempt certificates will be substantially lower. The rate will be pegged to 70 percent of the most recent yield on the government's auction of one-year Treasury bills.

At the most recent auction, the average annual return on the bills was 14.542 percent. At that level, the annual rate on the tax-free certificates would be 10.179 percent. The accounts appear attractive primarily to persons in higher brackets -- those in the taxpaying minority.

The popular money-market mutual funds now return about 17 percent annually. Assuming current interest rate gaps between the two instruments, only money-market fund shareholders who next year surpass the 40 percent tax bracket, an annual taxable income of about $30,000, would do well to shift funds to the tax-exempt certificates.

Pale Pope returns to Vatican

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II left the hospital today, pale and walking slowly, blessing hundreds of patients, doctors, nurses and nuns who burst into song as he returned to the Vatican three months and a day after he was shot in St. Peter's Square.

Back at the Vatican, the 61-year-old pontiff smiled and waved at several thousand faithful waiting in the Square. He prayed at the tomb of St. Peter in the grottoes beneath St. Peter's Basilica, where John Paul's three immediate predecessors are also buried.

"I wanted to honor and thank St. Peter for having wanted to keep alive his successor. As I was praying over the tombs I thought there could have been an additional one but the madonna, that May 13, thought differently," the Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli, quoted the pope as saying.

The pontiff shook hands with doctors and nurses in the Gemelli Hospital then stepped into his black Mercedes for the 15-minute trip home. After a few days' rest at his apartment overlooking St. Peter's Square, the pope will go to his summer retreat in Castel Gandolfo in the Alban Hills south of Rome.

The pope was discharged a day after his doctors said in a medical bulletin he was completely healed and could leave the hospital any time he wished. They prescribed six weeks of convalescence.

"He has to act like a man who is waiting to return to the man he was before," Dr. Francesco Crucitti, who performed the two operations on the pope, told reporters.

About 300 people — doctors, nurses, nuns and other patients — pressed against barricades in the lobby of the modern hospital to get a glimpse of the pope. They broke into applause and sang the hymn "Crist Reigns As King."

Flanked by Crucitti and the Vatican secretary of state, Italian Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, the pope walked slowly down the line, shaking hands. He then gave his apostolic blessing, broadcast over loudspeakers throughout the hospital.

In a 10-minute message he read to patients, John Paul thanked all who had prayed for his health and expressed hope that his fellow patients would also be able to leave the hospital soon.

"Today, after three months that I have spent for the most part among you ... I can return home. After having recovered my health in the clinical sense, I may recover the indispensable strength for the exercise of my ministry ...," the pope said.

Before leaving the hospital, the pope gave a warm hug to Crucitti. The pontiff, wearing white robes and skull cap, climbed into his limousine convertible and stood up in the back to wave. The convertible top was then closed for the trip.

Doctors said the pope was already up and dressed when they arrived to give him a last-minute checkup this morning. He then thanked the staff members and celebrated Mass in his 11th floor suite.

The pope looked drawn, but his voice was strong and firm. Crucitti said John Paul was in fine health and had gained back all but seven of the 22 pounds he lost since he was shot May 13.

Crucitti said the pope was slightly overweight at the time of the shooting, and now is at a good weight — 187 pounds.

"The pope will be 100 percent himself," Dr. Luigi Candia, director of the hospital, said Thursday. "His physical condition is very good and his spirits are high." He said the spiritual leader of the world's estimated 600 million Catholics probably will not make any public appearances during his convalescence.

Mehmet Ali Agca, a convicted Turkish terrorist, shot the pope at the beginning of John Paul's weekly general audience. Two Americans were injured — Ann Odre, 58, of Buffalo, N.Y. and Rose Hall, 21, formerly of Shirley, Mass., and now a resident of West Germany.

In a 5½-hour emergency operation, doctors removed part of the pope's large intestine and performed a temporary intestinal bypass to give the wounds a chance to heal.

Doctors later said the pope's life was in serious danger when he entered the hospital.

The pope left the hospital June 3, but returned 17 days later suffering from pleurisy, an infection of the membrane surrounding the lung, and a viral infection. On Aug. 5, doctors operated again, reconnecting the Pope's intestine, restoring his normal bowel functions.

"Until the end of September he must rest and vacation and after that he can gradually resume his regular work," Crucitti said. He said the pope could start to travel again after September, but advised against a long, grueling trip too soon.

Agca, 23, is serving the maximum life sentence in the Marino del Tronto high-security prison 115 miles northeast of Rome, near the Adriatic coast.

England calls off search for helicopter survivors

GREAT YARMOUTH, England (AP) — The Royal Air Force called off its search today for possible survivors of the North Sea's second fatal helicopter crash in 24 hours, saying there is "no hope now of finding anyone alive."

Four men were still missing in Britain's worst helicopter disaster in 16 years of North Sea oil and gas exploration.

Nine bodies were recovered from the British-owned Wessex that plunged into a calm sea Thursday, carrying two crewmen and 11 gas rig maintenance workers employed by Amoco (U.K.) Exploration Co., a subsidiary of the giant American oil corporation. All 13 men aboard were British.

The pilot radioed for help as the helicopter returned to the mainland from a gas rig in the Leman field 40 miles from the Norfolk coast but the chopper crashed seconds later, rescue coordinators said.

"Mayday. Mayday. Mayday. I am ditching," were the last words heard from the pilot of the helicopter called Whisky India, officials said.

Two RAF rescue helicopters found the Wessex broken up in the water. One man was seen to sink with the debris, an RAF rescue spokesman said.

Divers from two salvage vessels were going to try to recover the wreckage from a submerged sandbank so government inspectors could determine the cause of the crash.

The four missing men probably were trapped inside the craft and are presumed dead, the RAF said.

The helicopter ferried personnel to and from the platforms daily from the North Sea gas terminal at Bacton near here, according to Brendan McKeown, the company's exploration divisional manager.

"We have no idea what happened. There have been no other incidents involving helicopters in this area," McKeown said. "It must have been something catastrophic. All men were wearing survival suits and life jackets."

Doctors contend they have been 'railroaded' into taking clerical jobs

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal agency here plans to pay three filing clerks $50,000 a year this fall — making them perhaps the best-paid paper shufflers in the nation.

But the clerks-to-be aren't pleased. They are doctors at the Railroad Retirement Board and they say they've been railroaded into the clerical jobs.

"I think it stinks," said Dr. Paul Kelley, who for seven years has examined patients and written evaluations for the board.

"It's a joke to me," said Dr. Hans Jalakas, a veteran of 42 years in the medical profession and 10 years at the retirement board. He doesn't think filing papers is the most impressive way to wind up his career.

"I just took it (the clerical job) to dramatize the stupidity of it," Jalakas said.

The board, which handles retirement, unemployment and disability programs for the nation's railroad workers, eliminated the medical jobs of Jalakas, Kelley and Dr. Franklin Streitfeld because of President Reagan's cuts in federal spending, said board aide John Thoresdale. The personnel cuts are effective Aug. 24.

However, the law requires that the three civil service employees be offered another job for which they are qualified, Thoresdale said.

"I think everyone agrees it was somewhat demeaning for them to be offered a job like that," he added. "But that is the only other job they were qualified for."

"If we made them computer operators, or claims processors, they wouldn't do it well," said William Poulos, spokesman for the board. "Those jobs are too specialized."

The law also requires that the displaced employees be paid their current salary — in this case, $50,000 — for the next two years. The clerks doing the job now, who will be bumped out on the street, make only $10,000 a year.

At the same time, the Railroad Retirement Board plans to spend roughly $85,000 to contract private physicians to do the work the doctors used to do.

Add it all up, and the "budget cuts" over the next two years will cost the board money instead of saving it, Thoresdale said.

"It does make a ridiculous situation," he said.

However, after the second year, the board hopes to save at least $65,000 annually, Thoresdale said.

As of Thursday, two of the doctors — Streitfeld and Jalakas — had indicated they would take the clerical jobs, and Kelley had not informed the board of his decision.

Kelley alleged the cuts were "retaliatory" because some board members didn't always like the recommendations of the doctors, but Thoresdale denied that, saying the board slashed 160 jobs.

By law, the displaced employees must be paid their current salary for the next two years. Dr. Jalakas is shown in his Chicago office.

Spraying of pesticide under way in California

LIVERMORE, Calif. (AP) — Helicopters have started spraying pesticide over this gateway to California's farming heartland in an effort to stop the eastward creep of a Mediterranean fruit fly "explosion."

The bombardment of malathion over the city of 48,500 began at dusk Thursday, five days after discovery of a fertile medfly here and hours after identification of an egg-laden fly to the south.

The medfly discovered Thursday was bearing 78 eggs and was trapped near Milpitas, less than a mile outside the spray zone. The area will be included in a new 9-square-mile area where spraying will be begin Saturday morning. The spraying zone now covers 535 square miles.

In addition, 9 square miles around Boulder Creek in the county will be sprayed Monday.

Eighty-one square miles of north Santa Cruz County were placed under state quarantine following a medfly find there, bringing the total area under state and federal quarantine to 2,163 square miles.

In Florida, meanwhile, agriculture department officials said Thursday they would resume aerial spraying next week over the same 17-square-mile area around Tampa doused with malathion Wednesday. Ground spraying resumes today in a six-block area around a tree in southeastern Tampa where Florida's fourth medfly was found.

State agriculture spokesman Frank King said documents were distributed in the Florida quarantine zone, which covers 48 square miles of east Tampa, to all 40 produce firms affected by orders that no medfly-host crops leave the area without being checked.

"This fruit fly explosion ... is totally unprecedented, totally unlike anything experienced anywhere else in the world," California medfly project chief Jerry Scribner said of the bug's emergence in June and subsequent finds a year after the initial outbreak. "Everybody thought we had won."

Livermore is only 14 miles from the San Joaquin Valley, part of the bountiful, 600-mile-long strip that supplies over half the nation's fruits and vegetables.

The region is rich in host crops, which comprise more than a third of the state's $14 billion farming business.

Traffic leaving Livermore was delayed up to an hour at produce checkpoints on Interstates 580 and 680. But some authorities feared infested fruit and vegetables could be carried out of the area by other routes.

Texas officials guard against spread of pest

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — The routine checking of traps for the destructive Mediterranean fruit fly has become serious business in Texas as agriculture officials try to guard against the pest's spread from California.

State and federal workers monitor 2,200 medfly traps in the four-county Rio Grande Valley, home of the state's $70 million citrus industry. Thousands of traps are spread throughout the state.

"As it stands now we have a heavier concentration along the border, the ports of entry, airports and tourist courts," Otis Mullins of the U.S. Agriculture Department office here said Thursday.

"We did increase the number of traps several months ago and there's a move underfoot to put out some more traps," said Mullins, who works in the state-federal cooperative program to prevent medfly infestation here.

California has been battling a medfly outbreak more than a year. It has spread from a residential area around San Jose. Fertile flies recently were found 14 miles from the San Joaquin Valley, a major commercial agricultural area.

The flies lay eggs in over 200 varieties of produce, destroying all commercial value.

Three medflies have been found near Tampa, Fla., although officials are not sure they came from California.

"It's an excellent chance they came from California. They were found just outside a truck terminal where fruit from California comes in all the time," said Mike Wallace, executive vice president of Texas Citrus Mutual, a growers' organization based in McAllen.

Wallace and three other industry officials recently visited California to check eradication methods.

"They in fact, do not know where this fly is," Wallace said of California officials. "It's going to go underground this winter, in the cooler weather," he said.

Texas legislators appropriated $1.5 million Monday to give Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown more authority to protect state produce from the threat.

Traffic entering Texas is being stopped and checked for California produce. Fruit is spot checked at warehouses and markets for maggots.

"There's not much more we can do," said Wallace.

Wallace and others had urged California and the U.S. Agriculture Department to spray the pesticide Malathion aerially last year. However, citizens protested large-scale spraying of the residential area where the outbreak occurred.

California Gov. Jerry Brown ordered aerial spraying this year after faced with a possible national quarantine against all California produce.

Evidence reportedly shows fluorocarbons deplete ozone shield

NEW YORK (AP) — Measurements taken by the space agency from weather satellites confirm that fluorocarbons, once widely used as repellants in aerosol sprays, deplete the Earth's ozone shield.

"This is the first evidence that a change appears to be taking place," Donald Heath, a National Aeronautics and Space Administration researcher, said Thursday.

"It represents a partial validation of the theory that fluorcarbons will destroy ozone," he said.

Scientists have predicted for years that the substance, also used in refrigerators and air conditioners, would have that effect, but measurements had not been avilable, NSA said.

Heath, analyzing data from two satellites, said there has been about a 4 percent decrease in ozone at an altitude of about 24 miles.

"It's small, but we feel it's significant," he said.

Heath has not published his results in a scientific journal so they have not undergone scientific review.

The ozone layer, centered at an altitude of 15 miles, absorbs the sun's harmful ultraviolet radiation and keeps it from reaching Earth. Loss of ozone allows more ultraviolet radiation through and will cause an increase in skin cancer, researchers say.

It also can change temperatures in the atmosphere, altering wind patterns, according to Shelby Tilford, chief of atmospheric sciences at NASA headquarters in Washington. Scientists do not know how much the weather could change as a result, Tilford said.

Attorney general plans to prosecute 'strangler' defendant

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The state attorney general's office says it will prosecute "hillside strangler" defendant Angelo Buono even though a star witness's shaky testimony had prompted local prosecutors to seek dismissal of the case.

"If we did not believe we could try the case and be successful, we would not prosecute it," Deputy Attorney General Roger Boren said Thursday.

In his statement to Superior Court Judge Ronald George, Boren added: "The attorney general has determined we will proceed with this case to trial."

But Buono's attorney, Gerald Chaleff, said he believed political considerations — rather than any evidence against Buono — may have motivated Attorney General George Deukmejian's decision.

"Obviously the people involved feel there are some benefits to be had in proceeding with this," Chaleff told reporters outside court. "I definitely feel there are politics involved in this case."

Chaleff did not name any individuals, but Deukmejian is expected to seek the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Los Angeles District Attorney John Van de Kamp said the case against Buono was unwinnable because of star witness Kenneth Bianchi's conflicting statements about the strangling murders of 10 young women whose nude bodies were found on Los Angeles hillsides in 1977-78.

Acting on the recommendation of two trial deputies assigned to the case, Vam de Kamp had sought dismissal. But in an unusual move, George refused to grant the request. At that point Van de Kamp brought in the state prosecutors.

Boren, who said he had interviewed Bianchi, declined to comment on his credibility, although he told reporters Deukmejian's assessment of evidence in the case had led him to conclude it could be won.

"We examined all of the police reports in the case, most of the transcripts from the preliminary hearing, spoke with the police officers and examined the physical evidence," Boren said.

Bianchi, Buono's cousin, had pleaded guilty to five of the killings and two other strangulations in Bellingham, Wash., in exchange for guarantees he would not be executed.

Since then, however, Bianchi has wavered between admissions that he and Buono committed the crimes and denials they were involved at all.

If convicted, Buono faces the gas chamber.

Chaleff described state prosecutors' consultation with four trial experts who also had recommended proceeding as "a public relations exercise."

"I think there's a tremendous public pressure to convict somebody of being the 'hillside strangler,'" said Chaleff's co-counsel, Katherine Mader. "So why not prosecute Angelo Buono? He's in custody. He's as good as anybody."

Both defense attorneys declined to discuss the emotional state of their client, who appeared pale and emaciated at the hearing and stared straight ahead as he heard the decision which dashed his hopes of avoiding trial on the 10 murder charges.

Boren said he would file a motion to delay for 60 days the trial date of Sept. 15 in order to give the new prosecutors a chance to catch up on the voluminous transcripts and other documents filed in the two-year-old case.

Beef may contain illegal horse meat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal hamburger sleuths are trying to run down shipments of Australian beef that may contain illegal horse meat, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

Officials said some of the suspected meat has turned up at one company's fast-food distribution points in six western cities. The meat was from a slaughter plant near Melbourne, Australia.

Australia is the major foreign provider of meat allowed to enter the U.S. market under a quota system. Although the quota covers fresh, frozen or chilled beef, veal, mutton and goat meat, most of the meat is lower-grade beef used for hamburgers and other processed items.

"We have seized all suspect meat that has been found and we are actively tracing the remainder," said Donald L. Houston, administrator of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service.

Further, he said, the department's Office of Inspector General has begun "an intensive investigation" to determine how much horse meat may have illegally entered the United States.

The horse meat was first discovered July 27 among 605 cases of imported boneless beef at Foodmaker Inc., a meat processing plant in San Diego, Calif., owned by Ralston-Purina.

"Subsequent testing revealed that a second shipment of the Australian firms' boneless beef, awaiting entry into this country at the Port of Los Angeles, also contained equine meat," Houston said.

The second shipment of 600 cases, however, was not consigned to Foodmaker Inc., a spokesman said. But he would not disclose the buyer, adding that the information was linked to the investigation.

Each box of frozen meat weighs approximately 60 pounds.

"Since Jan. 1, 1981, some 45 shipments of meat from the plant (in Australia) have been imported into the United States," Houston said.

Products from those shipments are being sought with the help of the private meat industry, he said.

John McClung of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service said some of the suspected meat had been channeled by Foodmaker to distribution points in Dallas, Houston, Denver and San Diego, as well as Hayward, Calif. and Phoenix, Ariz.

The distribution was to provide meat for Jack-in-the-Box fast-food restaurants, which gets frozen hamburgers and cooked taco mix from Foodmaker, he said.

In St. Louis, a Foodmaker statement said the company was working closely with the USDA in the investigation. The statement said that there was no evidence that anything other than 100 percent beef has been used in its hamburger products and it said it has maintained rigid quality standards.

McClung said that of the 605 cases in question at Foodmaker, only three were suspected initially by an inspector and held. They were later found to contain horse meat. The other 602 cases, he said, were processed and sent on their way.

At the Los Angeles port, the 600 suspected cases were held, with tests confirming horse meat in two. However, McClung said another 100 cases or so are suspected.

Earlier, the Australian government announced the suspension of all exports from a meat plant in Victoria after allegations that horse meat had been sent to the United States as beef.

McClung said the official Australian announcement identified the plant as Profreeze, Richmond, Victoria, and that meat from seven other nearby plants was also being put under special inspection to see if they were including horse meat in their beef.

Woman shot

HOUSTON (AP) — A 29-year-old woman accidentally shot to death with a gun her husband was cleaning was the victim of a weapon the man borrowed to protect his family, officials said.

Esterida Cappola Holmes died shortly after midnight Thursday after being hit by a .44-caliber bullet that ripped through four walls, ricocheted off a table and pierced her abdomen, Harris County Sheriff's Corporal A.D. Jordan said.

Mrs. Holmes died aboard a Life Flight helicopter taking her to Hermann Hospital in Houston, Jordan said.

Doctors said the woman was standing in the kitchen of the couple's home in Humble when the incident occurred.

Fans aren't flocking back; even Phils feel pinch

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "Baseball is in for its worse financial year," predicts Bill Giles, executive vice president of the World Champion Philadelphia Phillies.

"We're going to have to sweat it out," Giles says of attendance problems the 26 major league teams face in the second half of the shortened 1981 season following the 50-day players' strike.

"Last year, eight teams made money," he said in an interview Thursday. "This year there will be fewer than eight that draw well."

The Phillies already are feeling the crunch.

They drew a sellout house of 60,561 fans Monday in the opener after the strike because of Pete Rose's was about to break Stan Musial's National League career hit record.

But the next three nights, the Phillies drew 8,200, 9,100 and then 5,700 less fans than their daily pre-strike average of 32,000.

"I think hard times (in baseball) are pretty much the pattern," Giles said, adding that he figures the Phillies will be off 25 to 30 percent for the rest of the season.

Giles said the average attendance for all 26 major league teams for the first three days of the second half of the season was between 16-and 21,000 fans, 20 percent less than the average before the strike.

Supporting Giles' views is a report in the Battle Creek (Mich.) Enquirer and News which determined ballpark attendance is down since the strike and is dropping each day.

The newspaper said the two major leagues had a combined average attendance of 20,477 per game before the players' strike. On Monday, attendance at major league games averaged 25,737 — boosted by the crowd at Veterans Stadium — but dropped to 17,777 Tuesday and 14,238 Wednesday. Wednesday's attendance represented a drop of 30.4 per cent from the pre-strike games and 44.7 from Monday, the newspaper said.

The newspaper used attendance information recorded in the Sporting News to compute the pre-strike figures. For the first three days of the resumed season, attendance figures from The Associated Press box scores were used.

"Generally, I expect rough times for the next six weeks," said Giles, who heads a group that is negotiating to buy the Phillies from owner Ruly Carpenter.

"I think there's a chance within 10 days or so, that things might bounce back, but I kind of doubt it," Giles added.

The Phillies aren't the only team affected in the early games of the newly-established split season, but such draws as the New York Yankees, Los Angeles Dodgers and Cincinnati Reds were also feeling the pinch, Giles said.

The Phillies executive blamed the strike and the split season, which he said is unpopular with many fans.

"Where we're getting killed is in group sales," Giles said. "Normally, we have 8-to-10,000 at this time."

But because of the strike, people couldn't get organized to make their annual pilgrimmage to the ballpark, he said.

"We're losing 6,000 (fans) a game in the group sales department."

Offering a glimmer of hope, Giles said: "I think within a few weeks, some interesting second-half races will be brewing.

"But unfortunately, school will start and we'll get hurt in attendance without the kids," he added.

Giles said a few cities could be helped by the split season, naming such clubs as the New York Mets, Houston and Atlanta in the National League and defending champion Kansas City in the American League. All were far behind their division leaders in the games played before the strike.

"There are two pluses. The fans that are here are very enthusiastic. They appear hungry to get out and get involved," Giles said.

And by 1982, Giles said he expects baseball to get back to normal.

The Phillies will have to go all the way to the World Series again to make money this year, Giles said. "That's the only way we'll get in the black."

Comes the revolution

CFA TV ambition shake up major networks

By DOUG TUCKER

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Like a trio of wealthy art collectors, America's three major television networks have come home bleary-eyed from the auction only to discover something they never bargained for — themselves, trapped in a nasty, emotion-charged fight they little understand and can do little about.

Everything right now is in such a state, CBS, ABC and NBC don't even know if they'll get to keep the college football and basketball telecasts they've agreed to pay millions for. And depending on the outcome of the sharply-escalating feud between the NCAA and the College Football Association, everybody might have to tear up their new contracts and start all over again.

Money-wise, NBC has the most to gain. From a public image standpoint, at least at this point in the struggle, NBC also has lost the most.

CBS is rightly worried about the $49 million deal it made last spring to wrestle away from NBC the rights to the lucrative NCAA Basketball Tournament.

STRIPPED NAKED, the networks' find themselves caught up in this issue: Can Wichita State reasonably hope to ever play football on a level with Oklahoma? It's that simple. Yet, it's amazingly complex.

You bet we can, says Wichita State.

No way, says Oklahoma, and you'd be smart to face facts.

By casting its lot with the CFA, NBC has agreed with Oklahoma. While this could gain NBC exclusive rights to major college football if the CFA prevails, it most certainly will NOT make friends in Wichita. Or at the NCAA. Or at hundreds of institutions of higher learning across the land where people believe the well being not only of their football team, but their university and intercollegiate athletics as a whole is being threatened.

THE STRUGGLE between the haves and the have-littles in college football has grown and festered for more than 20 years Last month, ABC and CBS were pleased to announce a four-year, $263 million agreement with the NCAA to televise football.

A few days later, Charles M. Neinas, chief spear-carrier for CFA interests, announced the CFA had made a four-year, $180 million deal with NBC for the same period, 1982-85, which included an enticing new wrinkle — prime time Saturday night telecasts. The 61 CFA schools will meet a week from today in Atlanta to vote on whether to go with their NBC contract. If they do, say the NCAA and the smaller schools, they will be put on NCAA probation, effectively forced out on their own. If this happens, the CFA schools will find themselves in the position of sacrificing the welfare of all their other sports, at least for the foreseeable future, to advance their main money-maker, football.

CFA HARD-liners say the NCAA is bluffing, they won't boot the most successful programs out of the organization. The NCAA, obedient to the wishes of its majority members, insists it is not bluffing.

While the small schools accuse the majors of greed and selfishness and the big-timers fire back with charges of selfishness and refusal to face reality, ABC, NBC and CBS sit on the sidelines cheering their teams on.

As the popularity, and consequently the profitability, of the college game mushroomed through the 1960's and '70s, the big-time schools became increasingly aliented from their little brothers. In a bitter, divisive cost-cutting meeting of the NCAA in 1975, the big-timers were too disorganized to keep the numerous smaller programs from, they felt, ramming unwanted new rules down their throats, including restrictions on recruiting and reduced limits on scholarships and coaching staffs.

A year later, the CFA was born, a loosely defined dissident group of major and would-be major powers. The next year, at the NCAA convention in Atlanta, a carefully orchestrated campaign by the big-time schools and the policy-making NCAA Council to separate the big-timers into an NCAA division of their own failed by the tiniest of margions.

THE SMALL schools fought it with eveything they had. "The football team is the front door of the university," explained one of their spokesman. Many said if the large programs create a "major league" of college football while banishing them forever to the "minor leagues," their enrollment might drop, their alumni support would dry up, and their state appropriations might even suffer.

"I honestly believe that if the CFA package goes through, you'll find a lot of schools dropping football," said David Price, commissioner of the Missouri Valley Conference. "If the CFA shuts out the schools that are trying very hard to maintain college football programs, the end result will be very embarrassing to the CFA. Once you remove the hope, you remove the heart."

"I've seen those comments, one or two," said Art Watson, president of NBC Sports, adding that his network offered the same basic package to the NCAA that was accepted by the CFA.

"I can understand their concern. But that is beyond our scope. If they did decide to expel, or whatever words you want to use, the CFA schools, I do think it would have ramifications for them from the standpoint that those schools are very much a part of the other sports programs. I think to throw them out is in neither party's best long-range interest. Both sides would be affected."

IF THE CFA hard-liners muster 31 votes in Atlanta, and make them stand up, CBS and ABC would naturally invoke escape clauses in their NCAA contracts.

In the end, somebody among the networks almost has to lose. Van Gordon Sauter, president of CBS Sports, says there is virtually no chance of a three-network arrangement for college football.

"At the level of money now being discussed, that money just doesn't exist in the advertising market place," said Sauter, who agrees with the NCAA that prime-time college football would be too risky.

At least two networks are reported making private surveys to see which way the Atlanta vote will go. For the present, they can only wait. But millions of dollars are riding on the outcome and in Watson's words, "It ought to be interesting."

"As they say in television," Watson added, "stay tuned."

McEnroe upset in Canadian Open

MONTREAL (AP) — Tenth-seeded Vijay Amritraj of India scored a major upset in the third round of the Canadian Men's Open tennis championship Thursday when he knocked off No.1 seed John McEnroe, 5-7, 7-6, 6-1.

That left Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, seeded No.4, as the top-ranked player in the competition. Lendl advanced to the quarterfinals when he defeated Vijay's brother, Anand,, 6-0, 6-3.

The defeat of McEnroe was the latest in a series of upsets and misfortunes that have stalked the Canadian Open tournament.

Bjorn Borg of Sweden, the No.2 seed, was forced to pull out before play got under way because his wife was in the hospital. While the announcement of Borg's withdrawl was being made Monday night, a two-hour power blackout forced postponement of four matches.

Rain forced postponement of play for several hours Tuesday and when it resumed, No.3 seed Jimmy Connors was knocked out in a first-round match by fellow American Trey Waltke.

Sixth-seeded Eliot Teltscher of the United States stayed in the running for the $32,000 top prize with a 6-3, 6-4 victory over Czechoslovakia's Tomas Smid, seeded 11th.

After his victory over Anand Amritraj, Lendl said he had hit the ball well throughout.

"The way Anand plays is with a lot of drop balls and the wind helped him."

Lendl described the officiating as "not very good" with some line calls "a foot out."

Vitas Gerulaitis, eliminated in the second round by unranked fellow-American Steve Denton, basically a doubles player, also had vigorous complaints on the same subject after his elimination.

McEnroe described the defeat as "disappointing, but not the end of the world.

"In the third set I wasn't moving that well, but I had no excuse for losing," he added. "I played a lot more defensively than I should have."

He said he found the wind was a problem, and psychologically he felt he suffered a letdown because of the absence of Borg and Connors.

When asked about the officiating, McEnroe, noted for his official-baiting in other tournament, refused to become involved.

"It was the same as it has been," he curtly replied.

Players from India continued their success as Ramesh Krishnan knocked off American Tom Gullickson 6-1, 6-3.

In other matches, Brian Teacher of the United States defeated Brad Drewett of Australia 3-6, 6-3, 6-3; Heinz Gunthardt of Switzerland beat Christophe Roger-Vasselin of France, 6-3, 6-2; Shlomo Glickstein of Israel handed Pater McNamara of Australia a 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 defeat, and Denton ousted Bernie Mitton of South Africa, 4-6, 7-5, 7-6.

Idle Cubs gain ground on San Antonio

Luis Tiant is back in the majors, but Montreal's Andre Dawson spoiled his debut with the Pirates. See story Page 3C.

Rained out for the second straight night, the Midland Cubs, nevertheless, inched to within a half game of San Antonio's Dodgers in the Texas League West Division race Thursday when El Paso dumped the first half champions, 3-1.

The Cubs were rained out of their final three games with Amarillo and headed for El Paso today, hoping to find clear skies at Dudley Field in a resumption of their pursuit of the second half flag tonight.

Midland goes into the series a half game behind San Antonio and Manager George Enright will have a rested staff to throw at the Diablos.

The Cubs will make up the rainouts with the Gold Sox when they go to Amarillo after the El Paso series. Midland has five home games remaining.

Johnny Evans drove in two runs as the El Paso Diablos took a 3-1 victory over the San Antonio Dodgers.

Dale Holman's solo homer accounted for all of San Antonio's scoring.

Jerry Ako, 1-1, was the winning pitcher. Rich Rodas, 13-4, was the loser.

Shreveport Captains second baseman Doug Wabeke had a chance to make up for two errors earlier in the game Thursday night when he came to bat with two out in the bottom of the ninth and his team tied with the Jackson Mets at 1-1.

Wabeke took advantage of the situation and drove home Bob Cummings with a single to give the Captains a 2-1 Texas League baseball victory.

In other Texas League baseball action, Tulsa whipped Arkansas, 5-1.

Wabeke's single helped give Alan Fowlkes, pitching in relief, his 13th victory. Fowlkes is 13-6. The losing pitcher was Dave Smith, 2-4.

Bobby Hall and Dave Stockstill each had solo homers as the Tulsa Drillers whipped the Arkansas Travelers, 5-1.

Dave Kable's 19th homer of the season kept the Travelers from being shut out.

Eskimos snow Toronto, 22-12

TORONTO (AP) — Dave Cutler booted four field goals, three singles and added a conversion on Warren Moon's 34-yard touchdown pass to lead the Edmonton Eskimos to a 22-12 Canadian Football League victory over the winless Toronto Argonauts Thursday night.

Each team scored a touchdown in the second quarter — Edmonton's Wardell Smith on the pass from Moon and Toronto's John Kinch on a 13-yard pass from Tom Rozantz, who replaced Condredge Holloway briefly in the second quarter.

Baseball today

Friday, August 14

On this date in baseball in 1969:

One day after they had lost their third straight game to Houston, the New York Mets fell into third place in the National League East, 9½ games behind the pace-setting Chicago Cubs. The "Miracle Mets" were about to begin an incredible stretch drive that would take them to the World Championship.

Mistrial declared

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After long and tense deliberations, a federal jury has proven incapable of unraveling the dispute between the National Football League and it's Super Bowl champion Oakland Raiders.

A mistrial was declared Thursday night, and a new trial set for Sept. 21 in the battle between Oakland's Managing General Partner Al Davis and the other 27 NFL teams.

Bear pursues victory mark

Tide, Dawgs teams to beat in South

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — It won't take another national championship to keep the Southeastern Conference in college football's 1981 spotlight.

Bear Bryant's chase of the all-time record for coaching victories will be one of the most closely followed stories this season.

A great deal of attention also will be paid to Herschel Walker, coming off a sensational season in which he led Georgia to the 1980 national title and received All-American recognition after smashing Tony Dorsett's record for yards rushing by a freshman.

The SEC has an opportunity to become the first conference ever to capture four consecutive Associated Press national championships.

Bryant's Alabama Crimson Tide garned the No.1 ranking after the 1978 and 1979 campaigns.

ALABAMA generally is regarded as the team to beat in the SEC, but the Tide could get a severe test from Mississippi State, which ended Bama's 28-game winning streak with a 6-0 triumph last year.

The presence of Walker and All-SEC quarterback Buck Belue makes Georgia a contender, although the Bulldogs lost 12 starters from last year's team.

Another Southern team to watch this fall is North Carolina, heavily favored to repeat as champion of the Atlantic Coast Confrence after rolling up an impressive 11-1 record last year, including a Bluebonnet Bowl victory over Texas.

THE STATE of Florida should provide the area's two top independents — Miami and Florida State.

FSU, which has been in national championship contention in each of the last two years, probably will have a better team than its record might indicate.

Coach Bobby Bowden's Seminoles face a deadly schedule that includes consecutive road games against Nebraska, Ohio State, Notre Dame, Pittsburgh and Louisiana State. "When you lay your schedule on the table and the table tilts, you're in trouble," said Bowden.

Defending champion Furman and Tennessee-Chattanooga are favored in the Southern Conference race.

Bryant, who has steered Alabama to seven SEC crowns in the last nine seasons, owns 306 career victories, only eight shy of the all-time record held by Amos Alonzo Stagg.

"I wish everyone would forget about it," Bryant says of the record chase. "I think it's going to be hard for me to coach my team this year with all the hullabaloo going on."

Bryant must replace 14 starters from last year's Cotton Bowl champions, including All-American defensive end E.J. Junior.

Ken Coley came out of spring practice as the top quarterback in the 'Bama Wishbone, which should feature more speed among its running backs than in previous years.

SOPHOMORE John Bond triggers the Mississippi State Wishbone, an offense created by Bulldog Coach Emory Bellard.

Walker rushed for 1,616 yards last year and added another 150 in Georgia's Sugar Bowl triumph over Notre Dame.

Vince Dooley, last year's national Coach of the Year, must rebuild the offensive line and defensive secondary if he hopes to make a run at a second straight league title.

Florida, with sophomore quarterback Wayne Peace and all-conference tight end Chris Faulkner, and LSU, moving into its second season under Jerry Stovall, are the darkhorse contenders in the SEC race. Tennessee could be a contender if it knocks off Georgia on Sept. 5.

Pat Dye has taken over at Auburn as the SEC's only new coach this year and the Tigers will be operating without their leading all-time runner, James Brooks.

Fran Curci has 40 lettermen back which should help Kentucky improve and Steve Sloan took a preseason blow with his Mississippi Rebels when quarterback John Fourcade broke his hand in a softball game and may not be ready for the start of the schedule.

DESPITE the presence of Ken Hammond, one of the top offensive tackles in the SEC, Vanderbilt appears headed for another cellar finish in the SEC.

Carolina is solidly entrenched as the ACC favorite and Coach Dick Crum says, "I think we can again be a pretty good football team. I think our offense has the potential to be an exceptionally good one." The Tar Heel attack will be built around quarterback Rod Elkins and All-ACC running back Kevin Bryant.

There should be a three-way battle for second among Clemson, North Carolina State and Maryland.

Clemson features an excellent receiver in Perry Tuttle, N.C. State has 15 starters back and Maryland counts all-conference running back Charlie Wysocki among its four returning offensive starters.

Virginia expects to be better, Duke has 18 starters returning and Wake Forest will be in a transition period under new Coach Al Groh.

Georgia Tech, which again faces a tough slate, is still not eligible to compete for the ACC title.

COACH HOWARD Schnellenberger lifted Miami to a No.18 ranking last year and the Hurricane should be improved behind quarterback Jim Kelly.

Bowden lost 14 starters at FSU, but returns an experienced leader, quarterback Rick Stockstill.

Sammy Winder and Reggie Collier are back to lead Southern Mississippi and John Holman, who threw for 2,444 yards last year, is back at Northeast Louisiana, which has a new coach, Pat Collins.

Dils returns to scene

By The Associated Press

Last year, quarterback Steve Dils made his first — and only — National Football League start for Minnesota against the Redskins in Washington. It was an auspicious debut.

He threw two touchdown passes and the Vikings, with a 39-14 victory, turned what might have been a disastrous season into one which ended with a trip to the playoffs (albeit a brief one, compliments of the Philadelphia Eagles).

Dils returns to the scene of his triumph tonight in an NFL exhibition — and he'll be starting again.

Also tonight it's St. Louis at Seattle. On Saturday night it's Houston at New Orleans, Cleveland at Buffalo, Cincinnati at Detroit, New England at Tampa Bay, the New York Jets at Atlanta, Pittsburgh at Philadelphia, Oakland against Green Bay in Milwaukee, Baltimore at the New York Giants, Denver at Miami, Chicago at Kansas City, Dallas at Los Angeles and San Diego at San Francisco.

It'll be an interesting matchup in Washington of an air-oriented team (the Vikings) against a Washington team which led the league in pass defense in 1980.

"The whole team is better this year," No.1 Vikings quarterback Tommy Kramer said of the Redskins. "We will have to play much better than last year to win."

One thing which makes the Redskins so different, of course, is the backfield, where John Riggins, Terry Metcalf and Joe Washington make up what could be key parts of an explosive attack.

Riggins is back after sitting out 1980 over a contract dispute.

Top seeds advance in Over-40 tennis play

NEW YORK (AP) — The four top seeds all advanced to the semifinal round of the American Dairy Association National Men's over-40 tennis championships Thursday at the East River Bath and Tennis Club.

Top-seeded Gene Scott defeated George Gill, 6-1, 6-4, and No.2 seed, Rauno Suominen ousted Bill Tully, 6-2, 6-2.

Aussie sets Irish golf pace

PORTMARNOCK, Ireland (AP) — Australian Roger Davis fired a 6-under-par 66 to take a one-stroke lead over Ireland's Eamonn Darcy after the first round of the $150,000 Irish Open golf championship Thursday.

Davis, from Sydney, ended the day a stroke within the course record. He had seven birdies in the first 17 holes. But at the 18th, he hooked his drive and bogeyed the hole.

Darcy is a local hero who was born only a few miles from the course. He is fighting for a place in Britain's Ryder Cup team to play the United States.

Britain's Nick Faldo and American Ed Sneed headed a logjam of five players tied at 68.

Special Effort moves closer to rich goal

RUIDOSO DOWNS (AP) — Special Effort, the colt who's threatening to become the first Triple Crown winner in quarter horse racing history, moved another step closer to that goal Thursday. The unbeaten 2-year-old easily won his first round elimination trial for the $1.5 million All American Futurity which will be run on Labor Day.

The top three finishers in each trial Thursday advanced into the final elimination round on Aug. 27. The top 10 horses on the basis of time trials on that date will advance to the futurity on Sept. 7.

The All-American Futurity offers the winner $528,000 out of a gross purse of $1,530,000.

Earlier this summer, Special Effort easily captured the first two legs of the Triple Crown. He won the $787,350 Kansas Futurity in June, then came back to score a 1½ length victory in the $669,370 Rainbow Futurity last month.

Only one other horse has won both the Kansas and Rainbow Futurities. That was Tiny's Gay, who pulled it off in 1974. Tiny's Gay, however, was beaten in the All American Futurity that year by Easy Date.

In winning his Thursday trial, Special Effort extended his winning streak to seven straight races. He now has earned $497,643, thanks to his vitories in the Kansas and Rainbow futurities.

The colt was purchased for $1 million on the eve of the Kansas Futurity by Dan and Jolene Urschel of Canadian, Texas. That was the biggest price ever paid for a quarter horse

Dawson home run spoils return of Tiant

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Andre Dawson, Luis Tiant, Tommy Boggs and the St. Louis Cardinals are up, Steve Carlton is down and Victor Cruz is out, all due to a trio of National League games Thursday night.

Dawson belted his first major league grand slam home run, spoiling Tiant's return to the from the minor leagues as Montreal topped Pittsburgh 7-2. Gary Carter followed Dawson's blast with another homer, both off Pirates reliever Cruz. After the game, Cuz was sent to the same minor league team — the Portland (Ore.) Beavers of the Pacific Coast League — that Tiant hurled for prior to being purchased by Pittsburgh earlier this week.

Boggs, who had lost nine straight decisions, gave up just three hits in six innings as Atlanta bombed Los Angeles 9-1.

Expos 7, Pirates 2

"Andre is hotter than a firecraker," said Carter after he and Dawson broke the game open with their seventh-inning homers.

"Andre is the best there is," said Expos Manager Dick Williams, who claimed the same thing the night before when Dawson, who is hitting .333 and is tied witn Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt for the homer lead with 16, went 4 for 4 with another homer.

Dawson's grand slam was his 16th homer of the season and, oddly, his first with anybody on base.

Larry Parrish singled with one out in the seventh for Montreal and took second on a single by Mike Phillips. Rogers, attempting a sacrifice bunt, then forced Parrish at third base but an errant throw by Berra to first put Phillips at third and Rogers at first.

After Tim Raines doubled Phillips home, Tiant walked Rodney Scott to load the bases. Then Cruz came in and yielded the two homers.

"That's all anybody talks about, how old I am, and how they are not sure I am 40 or not," said Tiant. "But nobody looks at my record," said Tiant, who was 13-7 at Portland.

"Last year, a sportswriter in New York said I was 139 years old. To me, that's some kind of stupid. I wish I could live 139 years and forget about pitching for a living."

"It looks like he never left the big leagues," said Williams.

Braves 9, Dodgers 1

Boggs, 2-10, won for the first time since April 21, when he defeated Cincinnati. Chris Chambliss slugged a two-run homer in support.

"I was really happy for him," said Chambliss. "He's pitched a lot of 2-1 and 1-0 games. I'm glad we finally got him some runs."

The crowd of 27,418 was the smallest at Dodger Stadium since September 22, 1980 and lowered the Dodgers' 1981 average to 44,855.

Cardinals 5, Phillies 2

"Maybe this is the start for us beating him. From now on, maybe his luck has run out," Cardinals shortstop Garry Templeton said of Carlton, who is 30-9 against St. Louis. It was Templeton's two-run single that highlighted a four-run second inning for St. Louis, the Cards' biggest inning against Carlton since Sept. 17, 1979.

St. Louis took three of four games from the World Champion Phillies, whose Pete Rose saw his 17-game hitting streak stopped.

Padres 9, Astros 1

The Padres won their first game of the post-strike "second season" as catcher Terry Kennedy drove in three runs with a single and a double and scored three runs despite feeling "tired."

"I was catching well before the strike. Now it's like I haven't been out there for a year," said Kennedy. "There is no way to practice catching but to get out there and catch."

Cubs 6, Mets 1

Jody Davis, who was a Met farmhand, and Jerry Morales, who played for New York last season, did in the Mets with home runs. Davis, a catcher, slugged a three-run homer in the fourth inning and Morales came through with a two-run pinch homer an inning later.

Lonnie Nielsen leads

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — When the power went off in Lonnie Nielsen's motel room on the eve of the first round of the $300,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Great Hartford Open, he was afraid he might miss his early morning start.

The only alarm clock he had was electric and his telephone was out of service, eliminating the possibility of a wake-up call.

Nielsen didn't miss his Thursday morning start, but he left the rest of the 156-man field undoubtedly wishing he had.

The 28-year-old Ceder Rapids, Iowa, resident shot the best round of his five-year career, an 8-under-par 63 that was just one stroke short of the tournament's opening-round record.

His round of six birdies, one eagle and no bogies gave him a three-shot lead in the tourney being played at the par-71, 6,534-yard Wethersfield Country Club course.

"I played extremely well," said Nielsen. "The whole round revolved around my putting, as most 63s do."

After finishing, Nielsen then watched to see whether someone would overtake him, but only four golfers were able to come close.

American League boxes

Zisk homers in 11-1 romp over Minnesota

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Break up the ... Seattle Mariners?

And make that the first-place Seattle Mariners of the American League West, if you please.

What's this, the Seattle Mariners in first place on Aug.13? Well, okay, so it really isn't midseason, after all, and the Mariners wouldn't be in their exalted position but for the baseball strike that forced a split season upon the national pastime. Just let them enjoy it while it lasts.

And how long might that be?

"It's a cliche, but it's the truth — anyone can win this thing now," Rene Lachemann, who replaced Maury Wills as Seattle manager in early May, said Thursday night after the Mariners took over sole possession of the top spot by bombing the Minnesota Twins 11-1 behind a club record 19-hit assault. "I've been involved in short seasons in winter ball before so I know it can be done. If we play .750 ball over the last 50 games, I like our chances."

RICHIE ZISK belted a three-run homer — his 11th of the year but his first with anyone on base — while Tom Paciorek and Bruce Bochte each had three hits and Jeff Burroughs delivered a tie-breaking, two-run single to lead the Seattle attack that boosted the Mariners' second-half record to 3-1. They were 21-36 in the first part of the season and trailed Oakland by 14½ games when the strike began.

"I was just hoping to be around on Aug.13," Lachemann admitted. "To tell you the truth, during the strike I didn't even think there was going to be any baseball on Aug.13."

"We've got a good lineup," added Paciorek. "I think we can make it interesting the rest of the way. It's a matter of who gets hot early."

Brewers 8, Indians 5

Milwaukee's Cecil Cooper is red-hot. Cooper continued his torrid poststrike hitting with a home run, double and two singles and Roy Howell also homered to pace a 15-hit attack. Cooper, who hit .352 a year ago, rapped out 13 hits in 23 at-bats for 26 total bases in the five-game series against the Indians, lifting his average from .270 to .300.

"You get locked in a groove, the hits start to fall and it just kind of steamrolls," Cooper said. "I'm seeing the ball well and thinking. I feel like I did last year.

"The guys around me, that really helps. You knew we'd hit sooner or later because we're a good hitting team. It's just kind of surprising that it happened so fast. I thought the pitchers would have the advantage, but it doesn't seem that way. I feel like I can hit the ball hard every time up there."

Yankees 3, Tigers 0

Ron Guidry pitched five innings of one-hit ball while Oscar Gamble and Graig Nettles rapped RBI singles in the first inning as the Yankees defeated Detroit for their seventh victory in as many meetings with the Tigers. Guidry struck out eight and walked one before turning the pitching chores over to three relievers, who gave up one hit apiece.

"Guidry throws the slider so hard you can't pick up the rotation," said Detroit outfielder Lynn Jones. "That's why you see so many hitters swinging at bad balls. I think I can read pitches pretty well, but I don't know if I'll ever pick up his slider when he gets it down and in. I'm glad he only went five innings. It could have been really embarrassing out there."

Orioles 2, Royals 1

A two-run, first-inning single by Doug DeCinces and a clutch relief job by Tim Stoddard were the highlights for Baltimore.

"I'm usually a power pitcher, but tonight I was more of a control pitcher," said Stoddard, who choked off threats in the eighth and ninth innings despite a tender elbow. "I tried to hit spots. I knew I couldn't blow the ball past znybody."

Kansas City third baseman George Brett suffered a severe bruise of the right thumb while making a stop of a hard smash by DeCinces in the sixth inning. X-rays proved negative but Brett could miss a week or more.

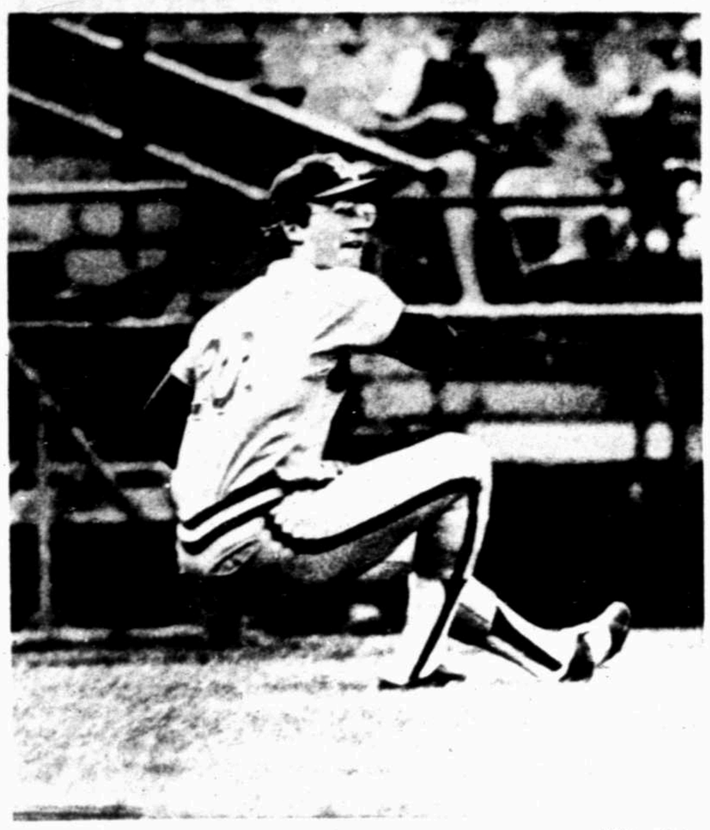

"The ball got me on a short hop," Brett said. "I was going crazy. The hand wouldn't stop shaking. I was praying the next batter wouldn't hit me the ball. If he had, I was thinking about taking off my glove and throwing left-handed."

Red Sox 9, White Sox 6

Carl Yastrzemski, who will turn 42 next week, drove in three runs with a homer and double, moving into a tie with Paul Waner for 10th place on baseball's all-time hit list with 3,052.

"He looked like the Yaz of old. The way he swung the bat was like when I was against him," Boston Manager Ralph Houk said. "He's just an amazing athlete who has kept himself in condition throughout the years. He doesn't have a very high average this year, but he's the most productive of all our hitters for driving men in from second base. He also never seems to leave a man at third."

Chicago's Reggie Patterson, a 22-year-old right-hander, learned the facts of major league life quickly in his debut as Yaz drilled a two-run homer in the first inning.

SWC is anybody's race with edge to Steers

DALLAS (AP) — This is the year you need to throw a dart at a board to pick the Southwest Conference football champion.

As Texas Coach Freddie Akers so candidly put it, "We have a chance to be good, but there are five or six others who can say the same thing. It'll be a real battle."

The Longhorns, who possess an experienced, deep defense anchored by All-American tackle Kenneth Sims, will be favored. However, despite a huge offensive line led by tackle Terry Tausch, another All-American, Texas has a giant question mark at quarterback.

Will Rick McIvor, strong-armed and inconsistent, be the answer? Donnie Little has been moved to split end, but will he stay there? Will freshman sensation Todd Dodge take over?

Given a steady hand at the wheel, the Longhorns could be excellent, particularly if tailback Johnny "Jam" Jones can stay healthy. Sophomore Terry Orr provides a quality backup for Jones.

Defending champion Baylor, who swept unbeaten through the league last year before taking a Cotton Bowl licking from Alabama, will be dangerous.

Coach Grant Teaff has moved sophomore flash Alfred Anderson to wingback to bolster a solid backfield of Walter Abercrombie at tailback and Dennis Gentry at fullback.

The Bears must replace their great corps of linebackers headed by graduated All-America linebacker Mike Singletary.

Southern Methodist is on probation and will be playing for pride. The Mustangs are loaded with such backfield talent as Craig James and Eric Dickerson at running back. Defensively, SMU is solid, and its kicking game ranks as one of the best in the country.

Houston and Arkansas are also title threats. The Cougars have an experienced defense and if Coach Bill Yeoman can find a heady quarterback they could be dangerous.

Arkansas has an excellent schedule and Coach Lou Holtz's moves of Billy Ray Smith to defensive end from tackle and putting Gary Anderson at running back instead of a wide receiver will make the Razorbacks a team to fear.

Dockery has gut feeling about Memphis State

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — "Some of my friends may think I'm crazy for doing this," Rex Dockery said soon after he accepted the football coaching job at Memphis State.

"But I have a gut feeling about Memphis State. There's something about it that I like," he said.

Dockery left Lubbock, Texas, last December after three years at Texas Tech and returned to his home state of Tennessee to try to resurrect the Tigers' troubled football program.

MSU finished 2-9 in 1980, sending supporters reeling and ending Coach Richard Williamson's six-year stint.

Memphis State is touting Dockery's debut season as "a whole new ball game," and fans are calling it a rebuilding year — both euphemisms for what may be more bleak times for the Tigers, who are short of experience and talent going into this campaign.

Memphis State returns 37 lettermen — 21 on offense and 16 on defense — including five seniors. Only 11 had starting assignments a year ago.

Dockery, 39, was born in Cleveland, Tenn., played college football at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville and was a successful high school coach at Harriman and Morristown before becoming a college assistant.

He was an assistant at Georgia Tech and Tennessee, and was Steve Sloan's offensive coordinator at Vanderbilt and Texas Tech. When Sloan left Texas Tech for Mississippi, Dockery took over, compiling a 15-16-2 record before answering Memphis State's call.

Dockery's new job finds him a rival of Sloan.

Rice quarterback rich, but then...

HOUSTON (AP) — One glance at his offensive backfield can give Rice Coach Ray Alborn simultaneous reactions — chills of fright and a confident smile.

The Owls, coming off their most successful season since 1973, may have the most quarterbacking depth in the Southwest Conference with three legitimate starting contenders in Michael Calhoun, the early leader, and sophomores Doug Johnson and Phillip Money.

Then comes the horror show.

"RIGHT now our running back situation is not very stable," Alborn said. "I think the only guy in the spring that showed any signs of being capable of playing Southwest Conference football was Tim Sanders."

Sanders, the top returning rusher, and a group of untested freshmen may have to carry the running brunt for the Owls, who hope to improve on last year's 5-6 record and fourth place tie in the SWC.

"We had nobody else with any consistency," Alborn said. "And I'm worried about Sanders. He's never made it through a season without injury.

"It's somewhat frightening to think you might have to start freshmen running backs in those first three ball games but based right now on what we've got, unless somebody really comes to the front, those freshmen will have to jump in there."

FRESHMEN contenders include Antonio Brinkley, Wharton; Herbert Payton, Aldine MacArthur; Charles Hester, Navasota; Larry Collins, Houston Yates and Mark Hatch, Brazoswood.

Johnson and Money were expected to duel in spring training for the No. 1 quarterbacking job. But it was Calhoun, a junior college transfer, who emerged as the heir apparent.

Rice coaches noticed Calhoun during a recruiting foray to California and convinced Alborn to sign the former Wichita Falls Hirschi product.

"Last year we went with three and started the guy with the hot hand," Alborn said. "That's not too bad a situation."

Rice scored upset victories over Arkansas, Texas A&M, Louisiana State and Houston and defeated Texas Christian on even terms last year.

THE LOSS of 16 starters, eight each on offense and defense, plus a rugged opening slate of Texas, Missouri and LSU, will make 1980's successes difficult to repeat. In fact, the Owls are generally considered to be the SWC pre-season cellar-dweller.

All-SWC tight end Robert Hubble and senior flanker Hosea Fortune head up the Owls' receiving corps. Hubble, 6-6, 250, caught 38 passes last season.

Defensively, the Owls must replace their entire secondary, four-year lettermen safeties David Darr and Mike Downs and two-year letter winners Freddy Johnson and David England.

Pat supporters control stadium

BOSTON (AP) — A group favorable to the New England Patriots has won control of the trust holding the lease to Schaefer Stadium, effectively giving the National Football League team management control of its home field in Foxboro.

The team failed, in the same stockholders vote, to win approval of its proposal to buy all outstanding shares of Stadium Realty Trust. But Chuck Sullivan, the Patriots' vice president, predicted he will get the needed support now that a friendlier board controls the trust.

"The main significance of it is that these (new) trustees indicated they were committed to the sale of the trust," he said Thursday.

The Town of Foxboro owns the stadium where the Patriots play, and leases it to Stadium Realty Trust. Sullivan said it was the only situation in the NFL where a team did not hold the lease on its own stadium.

Joseph P. Healey, the managing trustee, said 190,452 shares were voted in favor of the new five-man slate of trustees, while 129,304 shares were voted to retain the present board.

Healey, who opposed the sale to Sullivan, said the vote was swayed by large shareholders, including the Sullivan family which controls 38,252 shares. He said a majority of the trust's stockholders — some 1,500 — voted to keep the present board.

"We regard this majority action as an endorsement of the present trustees and their record," he said.

Cancer benefit slated

The third annual Walter Hagen Memorial golf tournament, sponsored by the Midland chapter of the American Cancer Society, will be held at Green Tree Country Club August 20.

The field in the two-man partnership event is limited to 36 teams and deadline for entry is Tuesday, it was announced by tournament chairman Gordon Marcum.

Many prizes, including two hole-in-one awards, have been donated for the event and money raised will go to the ACS.

Midland High sets tee trials

Midland High School golf coach John Ford has announced that qualifications for the team will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday at Hogan Park Golf Course.

Registration will begin at 8 a.m. on Tuesday with tee off scheduled for 8:30 "for all those wishing to qualify for the team," said Ford.

Ex-Wreck Rodgers plans light recruiting expose

ATLANTA (AP) — Former Georgia Tech Coach Pepper Rodgers said Thursday he's working on a "light expose" of college football recruiting that may stir some controversy in the business.

"I'm not out to rip anybody," Rodgers told a news conference. "It has to be a little controversial, but I hope it's a light controversy."

Rodgers, who was fired as the head football coach at Georgia Tech in December 1979, said he is writing a book, which he hopes to spin off into a movie script.

Rodgers said the book has no official title, but he said he would like to call it, "The Seduction of 17-Year-Olds."

"This doesn't have anything to do with football; this has to do with the other side — how we get 'em."

Writer Neil Bayne, who is working on the book with Rodgers, said it will be an examination of techniques used by college athletic clubs to lure high school seniors into signing with their teams.

In one case, Bayne said, a college was trying to sign a player who wanted to major in dentistry, but the school had no such program. So recruiters pretended the school had a dentistry program and the player found out the truth only after signing up.

Inkster takes two matches

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Defending champion Juli Inkster of Los Altos, Calif., won two matches Thursday to advance to the quarterfinals of the U.S. Women's Amateur golf tournament at Waverley Country Club.

Inkster beat Helen Kirkland of Colorado Springs, Colo., 3 and 2 in the tournament's second round of match play, then defeated Penny Hammel of Decatur, Ill., 4 and 3 in the third round.

Hammel eliminated Kim Simmons of Mount Pleasant, South Carolina, 1-up on the 19th hole of a second-round match.

Patti Rizzo of Miami, Fla., the runner-up in last year's tournament, beat Dorothy Lasker of Medinah, Ill., 2 and 1, then defeated Jane Geddes of Summerville, South Carolina, 2 and 1.

Geddes had survived to the third round.

Kelly McCormick wins diving

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (AP) — Kelly McCormick took the lead on the next-to-last dive en route to winning the women's 1-meter springboard championship Thursday, while Greg Louganis won his second men's title in the U.S. Outdoor Diving Championships.

The 21-year-old Louganis, from the host Mission Viejo club, captured the 3-meter championship by an overwhelming margin after winning the national 1-meter title on Tuesday.

McCormick, 21, of Seal Beach, Calif., had an overall score of 484.89 for the competition. Her ninth dive in the day-long event was an inward 1½ pike somersault, earning judges' scores of 9.5 or 10 for a total of 77.68. Her 10th and final dive was a forward 2½ pike to score 57.92 and maintain her lead.

Zisk homers in 11-1 romp over Minnesota

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Break up the ... Seattle Mariners?

And make that the first-place Seattle Mariners of the American League West, if you please.

What's this, the Seattle Mariners in first place on Aug.13? Well, okay, so it really isn't midseason, after all, and the Mariners wouldn't be in their exalted position but for the baseball strike that forced a split season upon the national pastime. Just let them enjoy it while it lasts.

And how long might that be?

"It's a cliche, but it's the truth — anyone can win this thing now," Rene Lachemann, who replaced Maury Wills as Seattle manager in early May, said Thursday night after the Mariners took over sole possession of the top spot by bombing the Minnesota Twins 11-1 behind a club record 19-hit assault. "I've been involved in short seasons in winter ball before so I know it can be done. If we play .750 ball over the last 50 games, I like our chances."

RICHIE ZISK belted a three-run homer — his 11th of the year but his first with anyone on base — while Tom Paciorek and Bruce Bochte each had three hits and Jeff Burroughs delivered a tie-breaking, two-run single to lead the Seattle attack that boosted the Mariners' second-half record to 3-1. They were 21-36 in the first part of the season and trailed Oakland by 14½ games when the strike began.

"I was just hoping to be around on Aug.13," Lachemann admitted. "To tell you the truth, during the strike I didn't even think there was going to be any baseball on Aug.13."

"We've got a good lineup," added Paciorek. "I think we can make it interesting the rest of the way. It's a matter of who gets hot early."

Brewers 8, Indians 5

Milwaukee's Cecil Cooper is red-hot. Cooper continued his torrid poststrike hitting with a home run, double and two singles and Roy Howell also homered to pace a 15-hit attack. Cooper, who hit .352 a year ago, rapped out 13 hits in 23 at-bats for 26 total bases in the five-game series against the Indians, lifting his average from .270 to .300.

"You get locked in a groove, the hits start to fall and it just kind of steamrolls," Cooper said. "I'm seeing the ball well and thinking. I feel like I did last year.

"The guys around me, that really helps. You knew we'd hit sooner or later because we're a good hitting team. It's just kind of surprising that it happened so fast. I thought the pitchers would have the advantage, but it doesn't seem that way. I feel like I can hit the ball hard every time up there."

Yankees 3, Tigers 0

Ron Guidry pitched five innings of one-hit ball while Oscar Gamble and Graig Nettles rapped RBI singles in the first inning as the Yankees defeated Detroit for their seventh victory in as many meetings with the Tigers. Guidry struck out eight and walked one before turning the pitching chores over to three relievers, who gave up one hit apiece.

"Guidry throws the slider so hard you can't pick up the rotation," said Detroit outfielder Lynn Jones. "That's why you see so many hitters swinging at bad balls. I think I can read pitches pretty well, but I don't know if I'll ever pick up his slider when he gets it down and in. I'm glad he only went five innings. It could have been really embarrassing out there."

Orioles 2, Royals 1

A two-run, first-inning single by Doug DeCinces and a clutch relief job by Tim Stoddard were the highlights for Baltimore.

"I'm usually a power pitcher, but tonight I was more of a control pitcher," said Stoddard, who choked off threats in the eighth and ninth innings despite a tender elbow. "I tried to hit spots. I knew I couldn't blow the ball past znybody."

Kansas City third baseman George Brett suffered a severe bruise of the right thumb while making a stop of a hard smash by DeCinces in the sixth inning. X-rays proved negative but Brett could miss a week or more.

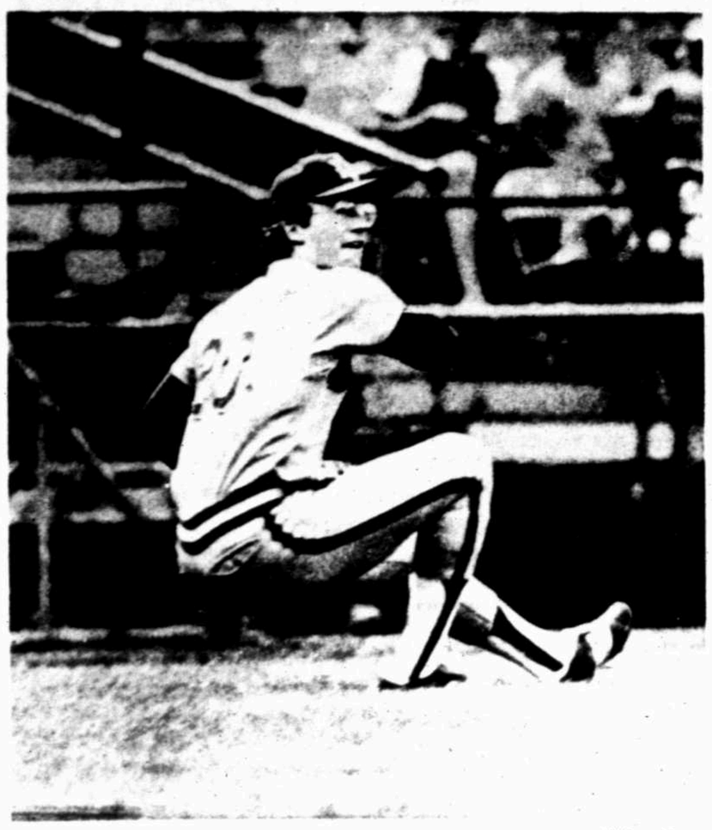

"The ball got me on a short hop," Brett said. "I was going crazy. The hand wouldn't stop shaking. I was praying the next batter wouldn't hit me the ball. If he had, I was thinking about taking off my glove and throwing left-handed."

Red Sox 9, White Sox 6

Carl Yastrzemski, who will turn 42 next week, drove in three runs with a homer and double, moving into a tie with Paul Waner for 10th place on baseball's all-time hit list with 3,052.

"He looked like the Yaz of old. The way he swung the bat was like when I was against him," Boston Manager Ralph Houk said. "He's just an amazing athlete who has kept himself in condition throughout the years. He doesn't have a very high average this year, but he's the most productive of all our hitters for driving men in from second base. He also never seems to leave a man at third."

Chicago's Reggie Patterson, a 22-year-old right-hander, learned the facts of major league life quickly in his debut as Yaz drilled a two-run homer in the first inning.

SWC is anybody's race with edge to Steers

DALLAS (AP) — This is the year you need to throw a dart at a board to pick the Southwest Conference football champion.

As Texas Coach Freddie Akers so candidly put it, "We have a chance to be good, but there are five or six others who can say the same thing. It'll be a real battle."

The Longhorns, who possess an experienced, deep defense anchored by All-American tackle Kenneth Sims, will be favored. However, despite a huge offensive line led by tackle Terry Tausch, another All-American, Texas has a giant question mark at quarterback.

Will Rick McIvor, strong-armed and inconsistent, be the answer? Donnie Little has been moved to split end, but will he stay there? Will freshman sensation Todd Dodge take over?

Given a steady hand at the wheel, the Longhorns could be excellent, particularly if tailback Johnny "Jam" Jones can stay healthy. Sophomore Terry Orr provides a quality backup for Jones.

Defending champion Baylor, who swept unbeaten through the league last year before taking a Cotton Bowl licking from Alabama, will be dangerous.

Coach Grant Teaff has moved sophomore flash Alfred Anderson to wingback to bolster a solid backfield of Walter Abercrombie at tailback and Dennis Gentry at fullback.

The Bears must replace their great corps of linebackers headed by graduated All-America linebacker Mike Singletary.

Southern Methodist is on probation and will be playing for pride. The Mustangs are loaded with such backfield talent as Craig James and Eric Dickerson at running back. Defensively, SMU is solid, and its kicking game ranks as one of the best in the country.

Houston and Arkansas are also title threats. The Cougars have an experienced defense and if Coach Bill Yeoman can find a heady quarterback they could be dangerous.

Arkansas has an excellent schedule and Coach Lou Holtz's moves of Billy Ray Smith to defensive end from tackle and putting Gary Anderson at running back instead of a wide receiver will make the Razorbacks a team to fear.

Dockery has gut feeling about Memphis State

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — "Some of my friends may think I'm crazy for doing this," Rex Dockery said soon after he accepted the football coaching job at Memphis State.

"But I have a gut feeling about Memphis State. There's something about it that I like," he said.

Dockery left Lubbock, Texas, last December after three years at Texas Tech and returned to his home state of Tennessee to try to resurrect the Tigers' troubled football program.

MSU finished 2-9 in 1980, sending supporters reeling and ending Coach Richard Williamson's six-year stint.

Memphis State is touting Dockery's debut season as "a whole new ball game," and fans are calling it a rebuilding year — both euphemisms for what may be more bleak times for the Tigers, who are short of experience and talent going into this campaign.

Memphis State returns 37 lettermen — 21 on offense and 16 on defense — including five seniors. Only 11 had starting assignments a year ago.

Dockery, 39, was born in Cleveland, Tenn., played college football at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville and was a successful high school coach at Harriman and Morristown before becoming a college assistant.

He was an assistant at Georgia Tech and Tennessee, and was Steve Sloan's offensive coordinator at Vanderbilt and Texas Tech. When Sloan left Texas Tech for Mississippi, Dockery took over, compiling a 15-16-2 record before answering Memphis State's call.

Dockery's new job finds him a rival of Sloan.

Kansas City's McRae is ready for a trade

(Compiled from R-T wire services)

DH Hal McRae, after nine season with Kansas City, wants to be traded. "Maybe a new team would be better for me. Maybe it wouldn't. I'd like to give it a shot, though." Since the end of the strike, McRae is 7-for-14 to raise his average to .260...

Rookie right-hander Andy Rincon, 3-1 at St. Louis and 1-3 for Springfield, American Association this year, was recalled by the Cardinals after pitcher Jim Otten was placed on the 21-day disabled list because of an inflamed shoulder...

The 2½-year-old son of Yankee pitcher Tommy John was critically injured Thursday evening when he fell out of the second-story window of a home in which he was staying...

Tests on the Mets' Craig Swan's injured pitching shoulder reveal no new damage to the rotator cuff which he first injured last year, but the club still has no idea when Swan will be able to ytart throwing again. "This conceivably could be a temporary aggravation of something that has healed over the past year," said Dr. Fiske Warren. "But from that point of view, it really is a bit of guesswork."...

Jerilyn Britz defends her Mary Kay Classic title beginning beginning today at Dallas. The 38-year-old has won just two titles on the LPGA tour, here last year and the U.S. Open in 1979. This year she has won only $27,169 and is 44th on the money list...Betsy Rawls will leave the LPGA tour Sept. 15 to become tournament director of the LPGA McDonald Classic in Malvern, Pa. She won 55 titles in 24 years...

Lee Corso, Indiana University's glib football coach, doesn't talk much about his freshmen "because you really never know just what they might do, despite their high school credentials. This year, we signed a kid who is 6-3, 210; a kid who is 6-5, 240; a kid who is 6-7, 265; and a kid who is 6-9, 300. "Boy are they big — and slow. But I figure it's much better to have a big, slow team than it is to have a little, slow team."...

Wyoming football coach Al Kincaid says he is tired of hearing about the past glories of the Cowboy football team and wants fans to think about the future. "I'm sick and tired of hearing about Bowden Wyatt and Bob Devaney and Phil Dickens and Lloyd Eaton and Fred Akers and Pat Dye and what they did. 'I don't care what they did, I'm concerned about the present."...

A state administrative judge has upheld a former St. Louis running back Steve Jones' claim for payment of $5,300 in medical bills by the NFL team. Jones suffered a non-practice neck injury July 15, 1979, diagnosed as a ruptured disc that ended his career...

A six-man American-British relay team swam across the English Channel Thursday but failed to break the relay record of 7 hours, 50 minutes...

Liz Lukschu scored 16 points to lead the University of Kentucky women's cagers to a 75-73 win over Japan... Roy White's eighth homer powered the Yomiuri Giants to a 4-3 win over the Hanshin Tigers while Terry Whitfield's 17th homer led the Seibu Lions over the Nippon Ham Fighters, 7-0, in Japanese baseball...

Rice quarterback rich, but then...

HOUSTON (AP) — One glance at his offensive backfield can give Rice Coach Ray Alborn simultaneous reactions — chills of fright and a confident smile.

The Owls, coming off their most successful season since 1973, may have the most quarterbacking depth in the Southwest Conference with three legitimate starting contenders in Michael Calhoun, the early leader, and sophomores Doug Johnson and Phillip Money.

Then comes the horror show.

"RIGHT now our running back situation is not very stable," Alborn said. "I think the only guy in the spring that showed any signs of being capable of playing Southwest Conference football was Tim Sanders."

Sanders, the top returning rusher, and a group of untested freshmen may have to carry the running brunt for the Owls, who hope to improve on last year's 5-6 record and fourth place tie in the SWC.

"We had nobody else with any consistency," Alborn said. "And I'm worried about Sanders. He's never made it through a season without injury.

"It's somewhat frightening to think you might have to start freshmen running backs in those first three ball games but based right now on what we've got, unless somebody really comes to the front, those freshmen will have to jump in there."

FRESHMEN contenders include Antonio Brinkley, Wharton; Herbert Payton, Aldine MacArthur; Charles Hester, Navasota; Larry Collins, Houston Yates and Mark Hatch, Brazoswood.

Johnson and Money were expected to duel in spring training for the No. 1 quarterbacking job. But it was Calhoun, a junior college transfer, who emerged as the heir apparent.

Rice coaches noticed Calhoun during a recruiting foray to California and convinced Alborn to sign the former Wichita Falls Hirschi product.

"Last year we went with three and started the guy with the hot hand," Alborn said. "That's not too bad a situation."

Rice scored upset victories over Arkansas, Texas A&M, Louisiana State and Houston and defeated Texas Christian on even terms last year.

THE LOSS of 16 starters, eight each on offense and defense, plus a rugged opening slate of Texas, Missouri and LSU, will make 1980's successes difficult to repeat. In fact, the Owls are generally considered to be the SWC pre-season cellar-dweller.

All-SWC tight end Robert Hubble and senior flanker Hosea Fortune head up the Owls' receiving corps. Hubble, 6-6, 250, caught 38 passes last season.

Defensively, the Owls must replace their entire secondary, four-year lettermen safeties David Darr and Mike Downs and two-year letter winners Freddy Johnson and David England.

Pat supporters control stadium

BOSTON (AP) — A group favorable to the New England Patriots has won control of the trust holding the lease to Schaefer Stadium, effectively giving the National Football League team management control of its home field in Foxboro.

The team failed, in the same stockholders vote, to win approval of its proposal to buy all outstanding shares of Stadium Realty Trust. But Chuck Sullivan, the Patriots' vice president, predicted he will get the needed support now that a friendlier board controls the trust.

"The main significance of it is that these (new) trustees indicated they were committed to the sale of the trust," he said Thursday.

The Town of Foxboro owns the stadium where the Patriots play, and leases it to Stadium Realty Trust. Sullivan said it was the only situation in the NFL where a team did not hold the lease on its own stadium.

Joseph P. Healey, the managing trustee, said 190,452 shares were voted in favor of the new five-man slate of trustees, while 129,304 shares were voted to retain the present board.

Healey, who opposed the sale to Sullivan, said the vote was swayed by large shareholders, including the Sullivan family which controls 38,252 shares. He said a majority of the trust's stockholders — some 1,500 — voted to keep the present board.

"We regard this majority action as an endorsement of the present trustees and their record," he said.

Cancer benefit slated

The third annual Walter Hagen Memorial golf tournament, sponsored by the Midland chapter of the American Cancer Society, will be held at Green Tree Country Club August 20.

The field in the two-man partnership event is limited to 36 teams and deadline for entry is Tuesday, it was announced by tournament chairman Gordon Marcum.

Many prizes, including two hole-in-one awards, have been donated for the event and money raised will go to the ACS.

Midland High sets tee trials

Midland High School golf coach John Ford has announced that qualifications for the team will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday at Hogan Park Golf Course.

Registration will begin at 8 a.m. on Tuesday with tee off scheduled for 8:30 "for all those wishing to qualify for the team," said Ford.

Ex-Wreck Rodgers plans light recruiting expose

ATLANTA (AP) — Former Georgia Tech Coach Pepper Rodgers said Thursday he's working on a "light expose" of college football recruiting that may stir some controversy in the business.

"I'm not out to rip anybody," Rodgers told a news conference. "It has to be a little controversial, but I hope it's a light controversy."

Rodgers, who was fired as the head football coach at Georgia Tech in December 1979, said he is writing a book, which he hopes to spin off into a movie script.

Rodgers said the book has no official title, but he said he would like to call it, "The Seduction of 17-Year-Olds."

"This doesn't have anything to do with football; this has to do with the other side — how we get 'em."

Writer Neil Bayne, who is working on the book with Rodgers, said it will be an examination of techniques used by college athletic clubs to lure high school seniors into signing with their teams.

In one case, Bayne said, a college was trying to sign a player who wanted to major in dentistry, but the school had no such program. So recruiters pretended the school had a dentistry program and the player found out the truth only after signing up.

Kelly McCormick wins diving

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (AP) — Kelly McCormick took the lead on the next-to-last dive en route to winning the women's 1-meter springboard championship Thursday, while Greg Louganis won his second men's title in the U.S. Outdoor Diving Championships.

The 21-year-old Louganis, from the host Mission Viejo club, captured the 3-meter championship by an overwhelming margin after winning the national 1-meter title on Tuesday.

McCormick, 21, of Seal Beach, Calif., had an overall score of 484.89 for the competition. Her ninth dive in the day-long event was an inward 1½ pike somersault, earning judges' scores of 9.5 or 10 for a total of 77.68. Her 10th and final dive was a forward 2½ pike to score 57.92 and maintain her lead.

Inkster takes two matches

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Defending champion Juli Inkster of Los Altos, Calif., won two matches Thursday to advance to the quarterfinals of the U.S. Women's Amateur golf tournament at Waverley Country Club.

Inkster beat Helen Kirkland of Colorado Springs, Colo., 3 and 2 in the tournament's second round of match play, then defeated Penny Hammel of Decatur, Ill., 4 and 3 in the third round.

Hammel eliminated Kim Simmons of Mount Pleasant, South Carolina, 1-up on the 19th hole of a second-round match.

Patti Rizzo of Miami, Fla., the runner-up in last year's tournament, beat Dorothy Lasker of Medinah, Ill., 2 and 1, then defeated Jane Geddes of Summerville, South Carolina, 2 and 1.

Geddes had survived to the third round.

Carter family planning fishing trip to Montana

WEST YELLOWSTONE, Mont. (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter, an "extremely good fly fisherman," will try his luck on the trout streams near here while vacationing with his family, the president of the local chamber of commerce says.

Tony Breen said Thursday that Carter plans to fly into West Yellowstone on Tuesday with his wife, Rosalynn, daughter, Amy, and possibly his son, Chip, for a five-day stay.

The family will stay in a condominium at Yellowstone Village.

Carter and his family vacationed in the Jackson Hole area of Wyoming south of here in the summer of 1978 when he was president.

"He's coming in low profile to do some fishing and we don't want to bother him," Breen said.

•

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan was bantering with reporters at his wooded, mountaintop ranch when someone asked him how he'd feel if Interior Secretary James Watt happened to show up and strike oil in the corral.

"I'll cut him in," the president kidded back.

Reagan was showing off the beauty of his ranch Thursday and signing landmark legislation cutting the federal budget and taxes.

Watt, who has been criticized by environmentalists for pushing for oil leasing off the California coast, "does not want to destroy the beauty of America," Reagan said. "He just wants to recognize that people are ecology, too."

•

SAO PAOLO, Brazil (AP) — Frank Sinatra, who is performing this week at a luxury hotel in Brazil's industrial center, is planning to travel the world at the end of next year — singing as he goes, of course.

A spokesman, Lee Solters, said Thursday that the entertainer "will try to go to some of the places he has always wanted to visit but has never been able to, and he'll go back to places he has already been to."

If Sinatra had any little-town blues before, chances are they melted away with his current tour, which began in South Africa and included Argentina before Brazil. He returns home to the United States after finishing his engagement in Sao Paulo on Sunday.

•

ANDERSON, S.C. (AP) — Pilot Dick Willis said he almost dropped his teeth when television star Larry Wilcox of NBC's "CHiPs" series, called wanting Willis's airplane.

"That's who I made the bill of sale out to," Willis said Thursday.

Willis recently advertised his 1951 model North American Navion — what he calls "a civilian version of the P-51, ' a World War II fighter — in a newsletter for pilots.

Wilcox's pilot and bodyguard, Arnold Stone, had a Navion and Wilcox decided he wanted one, too, he told Willis.

Stone flew the plane out of the Anderson County Airport on Thursday afternoon, headed for Los Angeles.

Wilcox had called Willis the day before and wired him a $1,000 "binder" deposit when the two agreed on a purchase price, which Willis wouldn't disclose.

"He sounded like a real nice guy," the 55-year-old Anderson resident said. "He was very business-like and called me 'Mr. Willis.'

"I always liked to watch him on 'CHiPs.'"

IRS asks more taxes from Elvis' estate

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is seeking $14.8 million in additional taxes from Elvis Presley's estate, claiming the estate failed to report all revenues generated from the singer's enterprises, a newspaper said Thursday.

The Commercial Appeal, Memphis' morning newspaper, reported that the IRS has challenged everything from the valuation of Presley's Graceland estate to the amount of a divorce settlement granted Presley's former wife.

The additional IRS claims were filed in U.S. Tax Court in Washington on April 22.

Attorneys representing the estate and the co-executors petitioned the tax court July 21 to set aside all of the tax deficiencies alleged by the IRS.

Attorneys for the estate hinted at the IRS problems, but did not mention them specifically when they filed a sealed report in Probate Court in Memphis on Thursday.

That report dealt with business dealings between Presley and his longtime manager, Col. Tom Parker, and came in response to allegations by an attorney for Presley's daughter that Parker and RCA Records defrauded Presley of millions of dollars.

Claiming that much of the material contained in their report could be involved in other litigation, the estate attorneys asked Judge Joseph Evans to issue a protective order barring disclosure of the report's contents. Evans approved the request.

Friday's hearing comes just two days short of the fourth anniversary of the entertainer's death at his Graceland Mansion of what was officially recorded as a heart ailment.

Blanchard Tual Jr., a lawyer appointed by Evans to represent the interests of Lisa Marie, Presley's sole surviving heir, has charged that Parker defrauded Presley and the estate of more than $2.7 million by negotiating agreements with RCA Records without requiring audits or independent legal advice.

Tual said in his report that Parker's share of Presley's earnings — reportedly 50 percent — were excessive and unreasonable.

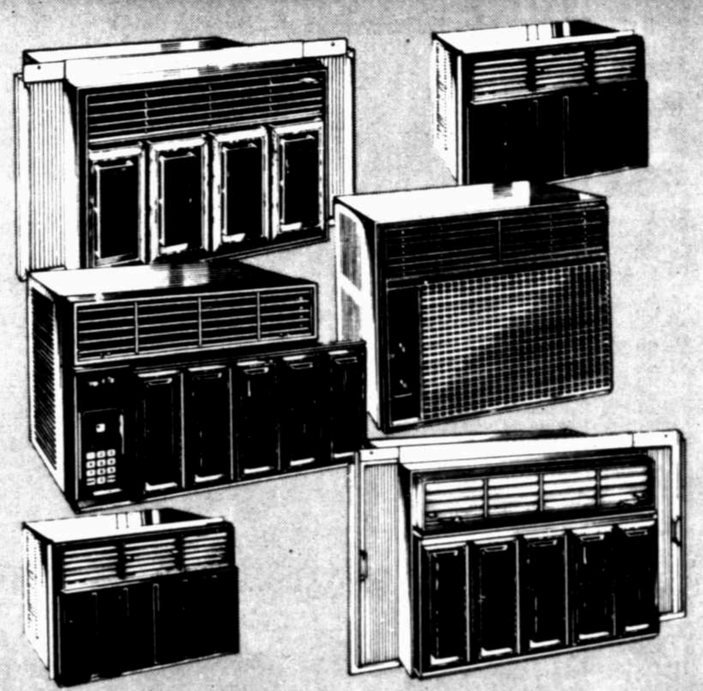

Parker has refused to comment on the allegations.

Tual is asking the court to invalidate Parker's contract to handle the estate's business dealings, along with a full accounting of the business manager's profits from his relationship with Presley.

The estate is being held in trust for Lisa Marie.

Two Midland students accept academic scholarships to MC

Two 1981 high school graduates from Midland have accepted academic scholarships to attend Midland College this fall.

Shawn Marchman Freeman from Midland Christian High School and R. Preston Ross IV from Lee High School will receive grants covering tuition, books and fees. The scholarships may be renewed for a total of four semesters.

Freeman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross E. Freeman, was on the MCHS honor roll each term during high school, receiving special honors in English, history, science, speech and journalism. He served as a Student Council member for two years, was in the band three years and on the annual staff. Active in his church choir, he also plays drums and guitar.

Ross is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy P. Ross Jr. He had a 4.04 grade point average and was an honor graduate this spring. He was a member of the National Honor Society and received three academic letters and the PTA academic award. In addition, he was a member of JETS, FFA, president of Calumet and band captain. He was named "Mr. Academic" on the Rebelee Court.

Three art classes added

ODESSA — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin is adding three new art classes to its Saturday art class schedule this fall.

Dr. Stanley Marcus, chairman of art at UTPB, said two of the classes, Art 337, Clay and Glazes, and Art 452, Metal Jewelry, are offered 9 a.m-5 p.m for eight weeks.

Clay and Glazes, taught by David Heath, will meet the first eight weeks of the semester and the jewelry making class, taught by Sally Tripp, will meet the last eight. Students may take both classes if they wish.

The third class added to the schedule is stained glass. The class is taught by Dee Casstevens and will meet 8 a.m. to noon throughout the semester.

Marcus said the Saturday classes provide a good opportunity for non-art majors who want to try their hand at various art forms.

In the ceramics class, both beginning and advanced students will be provided the opportunity for wheel throwing, hand building and raku. In the jewelry class students will be doing casting and other techniques. Some students may be able to experiment with enameling. The stained glass class will include the techniques of composition and assembly of stained glass works.

Other art classes available at UTPB this fall during the week are drawing, photography, sculpture, ceramics, elementary art education, illustration, modern art concepts, painting and printmaking.

Enrollment at UTPB is open to persons who have completed at least 60 hours of college-level coursework at a community college, college or university. Students may take courses for credit or on a noncredit basis in the university's no-grade Encore program.

Registration is Aug. 27 and 28 at 9 a.m.-noon and 2-7 p.m. in the UTPB student lounge. For further information or class schedules, contact the UTPB Office of Admissions.

Sign language course planned

The Department of Community Services at Midland College has scheduled a ten-week course in sign language at 7-9 p.m. each Tuesday beginning Sept. 8.

Classes are limited to 20 students and pre-registration must be completed prior to Aug. 25 in room 156 of the MC Administration Building between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m Monday-Friday. The course fee is $25.

United States is doubling bilateral energy aid

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The United States told the world Thursday it will continue to rely on private enterprise to develop and market new sources of energy.

The Reagan administration's position at the First United Nations Conference on New and Renewable sources of Energy displeased two Democratic congressmen in the U.S. delegation here.

Chief U.S. Delegate Stanon D. Anderson, saying the United States was "especially conscious of the energy needs of the developing countries" announced Thursday a doubling of bilateral energy aid to more than $70 million in fiscal 1982. But he opposed developing multilateral projects to fight the energy crisis, one of conference's key goals.

"We must guard against the replacement of crippling dependence on imported (oil and gas) with an equally debilitating collection of subsidized and uneconomic new and renewable energy projects," Anderson told the conference.

"We believe that the solution lies in the long-term reliance on open energy markets in which ingenuity and enterprise can flourish. In the U.S. energy transition, private industry will play the major role."

Most of the more than 140 nations attending the conference want to create an independent body to coordinate world energy policy. America's Western allies advocate creation of an energy affiliate to the World Bank.

Rep. Richard L. Ottinger, D-N.Y., told a news conference Thursday he personally disagreed with his delegation's position. "The marketplace does not provide assistance to the poor and developing peoples of the world who can hardly afford the next day's bread, much less an efficient stove," he said.

"The role of government is to fill the gaps the marketplace ignores, providing a stability which will ensure global opportunity for marketplace activity rather than poverty and revolution."

Ottinger and Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, said they had tried unsuccessfully to get the U.S. delegation to increase its support for international energy development projects.

On Wednesday, Bedell argued with Deputy Assistant Secretary of Energy Halsey Handiside, whom he accused of arbitrarily cutting funds for alternative energy projects that in many cases were near completion.

"We're chopping off a large number of energy research projects without even checking the files," Bedell shouted.

Handiside noted that, considering his department's budget had been cut this year from $8 billion to $5.6 billion, "Our track record is not that bad."

Saudi oil minister expects OPEC to unify prices

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — OPEC will unify prices at its meeting in Geneva next week, and Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest oil exporter, is expected to cut its production in the next two years, the Saudi oil minister said today.

"What weakened OPEC was the decrease in demand as a result of high prices," Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani said in an interview with the Saudi news agency. "And the only remedy is by reducing and freezing the benchmark price until demand soars again."

There was no indication what new standard price Yamani expected the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to set at its Geneva meeting Wednesday. Speculation has centered on a figure between $34 and $37 a barrel.

"The conference will succeed in unifying prices. But the organization faces two crucial years which will prove very difficult," Yamani said.

Yamani said Saudi Arabia expected to reduce its daily production levels now running at a near maximum 10.3 million barrels per day within the next two years. But he added, "the current glut on world markets will continue even if Saudi Arabia produced less oil."

OPEC has not had a unified price policy since early 1979 and an attempt by OPEC in May to resolve the issue was unsuccessful.

The price of oil currently ranges from a low of $32 per 42-gallon barrel, charged by Saudi Arabia for its light crude, to over $40 a barrel charged by Libya and some African producers for their top premium oil.

Yamani blamed the current glut, which he estimated at 2.5 million barrels a day, on diminishing demand by consuming nations and high prices charged by certain OPEC members which he did not name.

"It is enough for us to know that OPEC members two years ago were producing more than 31 million barrels per day," Yamani said. "But demand has been reduced and this reduced output to less than 24 million barrels per day."

The oil minister then predicted that over the next two years the OPEC output would fall to "less than 22 million barrels daily"

"The difference between 31 million and 24 million is the surplus which has forced the decrease in demand and not Saudi Arabia's production levels," said Yamani, defending his country against charges that it had purposely flooded the market to force down prices.

"Our stand regarding prices is clear," said Yamani. "Our reasons were to soften the burden of the poorer nations and more recently to protect OPEC itself but while we always try to keep our prices down and unify OPEC prices, others raise their prices. This forces us to raise ours and so it goes. Had it not been for or stand the price problem would be a catastrophe."

Saudi Arabia, which accounts for 40 percent of OPEC's total production, has also argued that high prices would force industrial nations to turn to other sources of energy.

Yamani defended his oil kingdom against charges that its high production had allowed importing nations to fill their reserves.

"This is an ignorant assumption and anyone who knows anything about the oil industry should know that stocking of reserves has now stopped and that companies are now using oil from their reserves," Yamani said. "This has led the world energy agency to launch a campaign to halt this draw on reserves."

He said that Western consuming nations stockpiled reserves in 1979 and 1980 when the kingdom was producing at relatively low levels and other OPEC members were pumping at full capacity.

Two jungle oil fields discovered in east Peru

LOS ANGELES — Occidental Petroleum has reported the discovery of two new oil fields in the Amazon jungle of Peru. Each of the new fields was discoovered by wells drilled on searate structures twelve miles apart on Occidental's 3.9-million-acre exploration and production blocks in the Amazon, where the company currently produces 112,000 barrels of oil per day. The addition of these two fields brings the number to 15 fields discovered on the Occidental block.

The first field was found by the Ceci No. 1 well which was completed from two separate zones in the Chonta formation, flowing at a combined rate of 1,700 barrels per day of 44.0 and 42.4 API degree gravity oil, respectively, from a depth of approximately 11,600 feet. The ceci structure is located 7.5 miles from Occidental's nearest producing field. Further drilling to determine the size of the discovery will begin immediately.

The company noted that this is unusually light oil for Peru and when mixed with heavy Peruvian crude, offers the addded bonus of facilitating the flow of oil by pipeline.

Paraplegic awarded $9 million settlement

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A Corpus Christi man paralyzed after a fall from an oil rig received a damage settlement from an Oklahoma firm that could total almost $10 million if the man lives to be 71, his attorney says.

An out-of-court agreement was reached Thursday when John Morgan, 24, agreed to an initial payment of more than $2 million from Lee C. Moore Corp. of Tulsa, according to Morgan's attorney, David L. Perry.

The company also agreed to pay Morgan $13,333 a month for the next 47 years, Perry said.

He said the settlement, reached after five weeks of court testimony, means his client will receive a total of $9.5 million if he lives to the age of 71.

Morgan filed suit against the company after a Nov. 26, 1978, accident left him a paraplegic.

In the suit, Morgan said he was working on a Corpus Christi oil rig trying to remove a safety pin from a hydraulic jack when a piston rod broke and knocked him from the rig.

He fell from the 40-foot platform and struck a large piece of pipe before he hit the ground, suffering numerous internal injuries and paralysis, the suit said.

It alleged the jacks, manufactured by the Tulsa firm, were defective and dangerous.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, August 15, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Celebrated cook Julia Child shares this birthday with you. Those born on this day are generous, sympathetic and very outgoing. The coming year will be a busy and productive one. Employment affairs show steady improvement and you are able to expand your area of influence. A pay raise or promotion is possible. Investigate exciting new business propositions. Although long-distance travel will not be especially useful, shorter trips help advance work goals. Do not let others receive the impression that you are lording it over them. Cooperation, consideration are the keys to greater success in both career and romance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your company will be very much in demand this weekend! Member of opposite sex will give you unexpected support. Continue to do what you can to cheer up an older individual.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It would be wise to spend some time alone today. You enjoy your privacy and can use it to good advantage now. Seek a second opinion on whatever is bothering you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Watch your temper today! Otherwise, it could get you into trouble with family members or even put off a romantic suitor. Do the things you enjoy with people who share your interests.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Beautify your surroundings, and increase the value of your property. Family members are delighted to pitch in and help: A social outing later today brings new happiness.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A trip to the countryside or seashore will add excitement, and perhaps a touch of romance, to the day. Seek the company of a close and understanding friend. Devote more thought to your future.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A better day for creative ventures than for financial affairs. Use your imagination. Family matters will require a gentle hand. Spend more time with a young child and learn how to play again!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Avoid all forms of gambling today. Your social life accelerates but you may prefer to spend more time alone with a new romantic interest. Keep entertainment costs within reasonable limits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): To beat the heat, take care of your shopping, errands early in the day. Do not rely too much on others. Your own efforts are your most promising source of income, prestige.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not get involved in the personal problems of your friends or neighbors. Money can be made through overseas contacts. Write letters or send cables. Romance is dazzling!.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Set aside some time to relax. Catch up on any household jobs you have been postponing due to work pressures. Do someone a good turn; it will be returned many times over.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Expand your circle of business contacts. Someone you meet for the first time today can be helpful in the near future. Your evening could take an interesting turn if member of opposite sex is involved.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your imagination may be working overtime today. Put your natural talents to work to earn additional income. Evening plans may be exciting but costly. Pay more attention to your personal appearance.

Murphy's Law states: "If anything can go wrong, it will!" Declarer obviously never heard of this "law" because he overlooked a simple precaution that would have permitted him to make his slam.

Six no trump would have been proof against any quirk of distribution, but South, with his highly distributional hand, can't be blamed for preferring a suit contract. South was aware of slam possibilities the moment North jump raised the opening bid. However, his doubleton club was a warning against launching into Blackwood. Instead he cue-bid his ace of spades. When North showed his club control in response, South settled in a small slam after discovering that one ace was missing.

West led the queen of clubs, and declarer was delighted with his dummy. Since it seemed that the only loser was the ace of trumps, declarer grabbed the ace of clubs and hurriedly led a trump off the table. West won the ace and continued with the jack of clubs to dummy's king. East ruffed for a one-trick set.

A 5-1 club split is considerably against the odds, so South could consider himself unlucky for running into such a foul distribution. But he had only himself to blame – he should have taken steps to guard against that possibility. Declarer failed to make the most of his assets.

At trick two, declarer should have led a spade to his ace, and then followed by cashing the ace of diamonds and ruffing a diamond in dummy. Now declarer can discard a club from his hand on the king of spades. The contract would then be secure against any break.

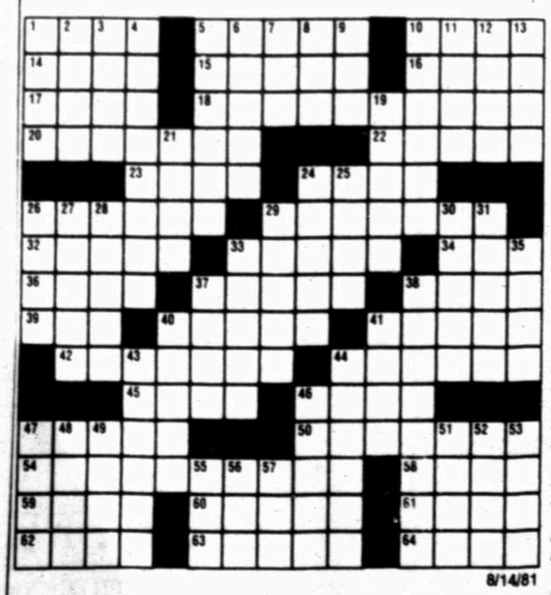

Declarer now turns his attention to drawing trumps. It makes no difference which defender wins the ace of trumps or how the suit divides. Since all of declarer's and dummy's trumps are high, no return can do any harm.

U.S. to place B-52s on Indian Ocean base

LONDON (AP) — Britain is allowing the United States to put B-52 long-range bombers on the tiny Indian Ocean island of Diego Garcia, an official publication has revealed.

News of the decision, reported in the United States last March but denied at that time by the British Foreign Office, was released Thursday in a delayed issue of Hansard, the official record of parliamentary business.

The London Times reported today that the giant, eight-engined B-52s already are using the island and that Whitehall sources declined to discuss whether nuclear weapons would be stored on Diego Garcia.

Joan Lestor, a Laborite opposition lawmaker, said the government had used a "backhand method" to reveal the decision, which suggested "there is something to hide."

Reacting to the news, the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament in London said, "The decision by the British government to allow the United States to further develop the joint base at Diego Garcia drives the world another step toward nuclear confrontation."

Diego Garcia is a horseshoe-shaped coral atoll, 5 miles by 12 miles, about 1,000 miles northeast of Mauritius and some 900 miles south of India. Both Mauritius and India have criticized the military buildup on Diego Garcia.

The island has been developed into an important base for U.S. Naval forces operating in the Indian Ocean. About 2,000 Americans are stationed there under a 50-year lease from Britain made in 1965, while only a handful of Britons are there for liaison.

Pentagon sources said last March that the base would cut the time it takes to fly the B-52s over the Arabian Sea and Persian Gulf on surveillance missions and return to base in Guam.

Diego Garcia would be a key base if the Western allies wanted to deploy forces to block any move toward the oil-rich gulf by the Soviet Union.

Military use of the island has been hotly contested for years by conservationists because Diego Garcia is the home of rare birds and animals.

Britain removed about 1,000 native islanders from Diego Garcia to Mauritius between 1965 and 1971 to allow the military to enter. The islanders have been campaigning to go home ever since.

U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., charged in 1975 that Britain and the United States conspired over the eviction and that "insult is compounded by reports that these islanders are now living in abject poverty."

Polish communist heads to visit Soviet Union

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's Communist Party leader and premier left Friday for a "short working visit" in the Soviet Union, where they will meet Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev for talks expected to focus on this nation's mounting unrest.

The Polish news agency PAP said party leader Stanislaw Kania and Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski, a general who also serves as defense minister, left Warsaw to visit the Soviet Union at the invitation of the Soviet Communist Central Committee.

Warsaw Radio said Thursday that Kania and Jaruzelski will visit Brezhnev soon at his Crimean summer retreat. Their visit had been expected and is in the context of regular visits by Eastern bloc leaders.

Brezhnev has been meeting with leaders of other Warsaw Pact allies, many of them critics of Poland's labor unrest, and some of them involved in military maneuvers in or around Poland.

The Soviet Union, already conducting large-scale maneuvers on its Baltic frontier near Poland, announced another round of exercises next month near the Poland coast, the official news agency Tass reported Thursday.

A Western military source said the exercises Sept. 4-12 probably will involve more than 25,000 troops. Tass said land and sea maneuvers are scheduled in Byelorussia, bordering Poland, and in the Baltic military districts.

Meanwhile, the independent Solidarity union heeded the Communist Party's back-to-work call, and ordered its chapters across the country to end strikes, demonstrations and protests for two months. But the union demanded worker self-management and a halt to the regime's anti-union "propaganda" attacks in return for labor peace.

The self-management issue has sparked sharp debate between unionists favoring workers owning the means of production and the government, which insists on retaining control.

The year since the Soviet bloc's first independent labor union was formed during massive strikes last summer has been marked by flurries of protests that peaked last week with warning walkouts that paralyzed the nation's industrial heartland.

In their latest demonstrations, Poles have been protesting scarce food supplies, proposed price hikes and a 20 percent cut in this month's meat ration.

Despite its support of the back-to-work call, Solidarity threatened newspaper strikes next Wednesday and Thursday if the government refused to give union leaders media time or continued trying to blame Solidarity for the surge of public unrest.

The union said workers should staff factory production lines for the next eight free Saturdays, but only if they are allowed to make production and distribution decisions on those days. The Saturday holidays were won during strikes last winter.

Extra products manufactured on Saturdays would go to "relieve the most acute shortages, of meat first and foremost," Solidarity said.

The party paper Trybuna Ludu hailed the union's endorsement of the back-to-work call as possible evidence of "a partial return to realistic thinking," but was perplexed by the threat to paralyze printing and delivery of national newspapers.

"How can it be reconciled with a willingness to act to mitigate public moods?" Trybuna Ludu asked.

THE NEW DATSUN SPORTS TRUCKS.

Sports Truck 4x4

Sports Truck 2-wheel drive with standard 5-speed*

27/36 EPA EST MPG/EPA EST HWY

Meet our new sports machine that's powered by the amazing NAPS-Z hemi engine. A modern wonder of power and efficiency. Datsun Sports Truck works like a truck. Moves like a car. And looks like a winner.

A super graphic S/T stripe treatment and black sport mirror set it apart. Inside, there are bucket seats with special new upholstery design and door trim to match. And there's a sporty 3-spoke wrapped steering wheel.

Choose 2-wheel drive or 4x4. Dress it up any way you like, then get going in the new Datsun Sports Truck.

Datsun Sports Truck Standard Equipment:
• 2.2-liter NAPS-Z hemi engine • 5-speed transmission • Full instrumentation • Low-maintenance solid-state electrical system • Power-assist front disc brakes • White spoker wheels with chrome lug nuts and wide steel-belted radial tires with raised white letters • AM/FM radio • Cut-pile carpeting • Map-pocket • And lots more, all at no extra cost.

*Remember, use estimated MPG for comparison. Your mileage may differ, depending on speed, weather and trip length. Your actual highway mileage will probably be less.

Many Customers Think It's Just Sound Business To Buy A Used Car.

Year in and year out, we have certain steady customers who buy nothing but used cars.

To them, it makes good business sense to buy a good used car. In many cases, aside from the mileage...the only difference between a new car and a late model used car is the price!

And if you'd like to pay hundreds of dollars less, we'll be glad to show you how.

Economic ills not 'cured,' Reagan warns Americans

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Now that he has signed his tax and spending reductions into law, President Reagan concedes that future deficits may be larger than expected and says he will just have to find deeper cuts to balance the federal budget.

After signing the tax-cut and budget bills Thursday, Reagan said Americans also should "watch for a sagging economy for the next few months."

Reagan said he remains confident interest rates will begin to decrease toward year's end but cautioned that the tax and budget bills won't take effect until October and added, "Our own projections have been that for the next several months this soft and soggy economy is going to continue."

The president, wearing faded blue denim trousers and jacket, said he still hopes to balance the federal budget by 1984 — but only after making further spending cuts for the 1983 and 1984 fiscal years.

The administration has projected a $55.6 billion budget deficit for fiscal 1981, which ends Sept. 30, and $42.5 billion for 1982.

"Now the possibility of increasing deficits in the coming years over our previous figures are due in part to not getting totally what we had asked for in the budget cuts," Reagan said Thursday.

Another reason for ballooning deficits, he added, is "that the tax package finally came out with additional reductions," which he embraced in an effort to outbid House Democrats for support.

Reagan said he would "continue to work on this and work for more budget cuts and it just means that we're going to have to try to get more additional budget cuts than we might have had to get before."

That drive begins next week when Reagan meets in Los Angeles with budget director David A. Stockman to begin plotting the next round of budget cuts.

At a signing ceremony at Reagan's fog-shrouded ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains, the president said the tax and budget bills represent a historic turnaround in the way government does business.

Under the legislation, a 25 percent cut in taxes begins Oct. 1, when the amount withheld from most workers' paychecks will drop about 5 percent. A 10 percent reduction in withholding will come next July, with another 10 percent cut a year later. Overall, individual and business income taxes will be slashed $749 billion through the 1986 fiscal year — the largest tax cut in the nation's history.

At the same time, planned spending on domestic programs will be reduced an estimated $130.5 billion in the next three years.

Reagan said he is counting on seeing "people begin to have more money in their pockets from their earnings (while) the lowered expenditures of government begin taking effect."

He said the foot-thick budget bill and two-inch-thick tax bill represent "a turnaround of almost half a century of a course this country's been on and mark an end to excessive growth of government bureaucracy and government spending and government taxing."

"This is only the beginning because from here on now we're going to have to implement all of these," he said. "It's going to be a job to make this whole turnaround work. It's going to continue to be the No. 1 priority of our administration."

The signing ceremony marked Reagan's first public appearance since he arrived at his ranch Aug. 6 for a four-week vacation.

Kicking up his heels

Plea for PATCO talks rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, flatly rejecting pleas by the world's air traffic controllers to reopen talks with striking American controllers, says the issue is law and order — not management against labor.

The executive board of the International Federation of Air Traffic Controllers Associations urged the president in a telegram Thursday to resume talks and "bring the matter to a speedy, amicable solution."

But Reagan, vacationing at his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., made clear he considers the dispute already resolved and the government's job one of replacing the controllers on illegal picket lines.

And the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll said Thursday that almost two of every three Americans surveyed approve of the way Reagan has handled the strike. Of the scientifically selected random sample of 1,601 adults contacted by telephone Monday and Tuesday, 64 percent supported the president and 14 percent were unsure. Only 22 percent disapproved.

While the executive board of the 61-nation controllers federation said it might consider further actions later this month, the group asked its members to cancel for the time being any actions in support of the U.S. strikers.

The air controllers union in Portugal was voting today on whether to go ahead with a planned boycott Sunday night of planes flying to and from the Unied States over the control center in the Azores.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said he welcomed the decision by the federation against any immediate protest action but reiterrated the administration's determination not to resume bargaining.

"We do not consider the current problem to be one of labor-management relationships. ... The issue has to do with individuals violating an oath and violating the laws of the United States of America," Lewis said in a statement.

And Reagan told reporters in California: "There is a law that federal unions cannot strike against their employers. In the view of the actions of those controllers who decided to violate their oath and to violate the law ... I just don't see any way that it could be expected that we could now just go back and pretend that they weren't breaking the law or breaking their oaths."

But Robert E. Poli, president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, said he still hoped contract talks might resume and claimed there were parties, which he refused to identify, working toward a resumption of bargaining.

However, Poli warned that the controllers might have to prepare for a long strike. "Everybody says after two weeks you're dead," he said. "There have been a lot of strikes in this country lasting longer than two weeks, a lot longer than two weeks. We realize that."

Flights across the North Atlantic, meanwhile, were back at normal levels Thursday after two days of long delays and many cancellations because Canadian controllers at the Gander control center in Newfoundland refused to handle planes in and out of the United States.

Federal jurors resume deliberations today in oil-theft case

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Federal jurors in an oil-theft case allegedly involving the taking of sweet oil from one lease and mixing it with sour oil from a less productive lease deliberated about 4½ hours Thursday afternoon but could not agree on a unanimous verdict of guilt or innocence for the three defendants in the case.

"At least, you've agreed that you disagree," observed Presiding Judge Lucius D. Bunton, who wouldn't settle for a hung jury so early into the guilt-innocent phase of the week-long trial. So, the judge gave the six-man, six-woman jury the option of contining deliberations into the night or resuming this morning.

The jurors opted for the latter.

The case against the three defendants involves an oil operator, a pumper and a oil-transport truck driver who allegedly schemed to steal more than $34,000 in oil in a 10-day period in August 1980 from a sweet oil lease operated by Sohio (Standard Oil of Ohio) Petroleum Co. and bought and hauled by Scurlock Oil Co.

However, evidence suggests that up to a half million dollars in oil may have been taken from the Sohio lease and pumped into a tank battery on a less productive lease owned by one of the defendants in less than a year.

On trial are:

—William D. Fikes, 47, the McCamey-Imperial Scurlock truck driver who allegedly took overages from the Sohio-Canon 63-2 sweet-oil in Pecos County and transported the crude oil to a tank battery owned by a co-defendant. Fikes was the only defendant who elected to testify. He is alleged to have made out false run tickets which reflect the amount of oil taken from leases.

—Kerry Bob Coleman, 31, the Crane oil operator who allegedly submitted fraudulent production reports to the Texas Railroad Commission and who received a $34,797.40 check from Scurlock from the allegedly stolen oil.

—Howard Leon Ramsey, 46, the Iraan contract pumper who is charged with falsifying production reports.

The three men are indicted for federal mail fraud rather than outright theft, which could have bound the case for trial in state court in Fort Stockton.

And Warren Burnett, defense attorney for Fikes, attacked that aspect of the case and assaulted the credibility of private investigator Jack Hubbard, a thwarted candidate for sheriff in Odessa.

Burnett, hailed as a master of courtroom oratory, said Hubbard maligned the people of Fort Stockton and cast aspersions on their character when he suggested that the case could not be tried fairly in Fort Stockton.

"He insulted the integrity of every one of them," Burnett said.

Burnett said he finds it "very difficult to believe that the people of Fort Stockton have compromised themselves in such a way that they do not measure up to the standards set up by Jack Hubbard."

Burnett said that Hubbard apparently "can't stand local politics unless it's helping him."

Hubbard had testified on his taking photographs at the leases and putting dyes in tanks of oil to trace the petroleum.

Burnett, alluding to Fikes' testimony that he had swapped oil and often had taken more crude oil from a tank than was reflected on his run tickets, said that the "major oil companies swap oil."

Burnett acknowledged that his cli-

Four federal fugitives indicted in jail escape

Four federal prisoners who used hack saw blades, toothpaste, makeshift rope, a pipe wrench and walkie-talkies to break out of the Midland City Jail last June 11 have been indicted for escape by a federal grand jury in Midland.

Bailbonds for the fugitives, who federal agents suspect are hiding in Mexico, have been set at $100,000 each.

Indicted were James Monroe "Cowboy" Crosson Jr., 36, of Odessa; William Anthony Dugan, 36; Glenn Eugene Stewart, 37, and David F. Wallace, 35.

Indicted for aiding the escape were Crosson's girlfriend, Mildred Sue Pittinger, 25, of Odessa; her friend, Donna Dotson, 29, of Odessa; Kathy Havner, and Tommy Crosson, 26.

The fugitives had been held in federal section of city jail, while they were awaiting transfer to federal prisons. Crosson had been convicted on a drug violation.

Dugan and Stewart were described by a federal prosecutor as "large-scale" importers of Mexican marijuana.

Last July, Ms. Pittinger and Ms. Dugan, who then were out on bail for aiding the escape, were arrested at the Juarez-El Paso border, as they were returning from Mexico presumably after visiting the fugitives.

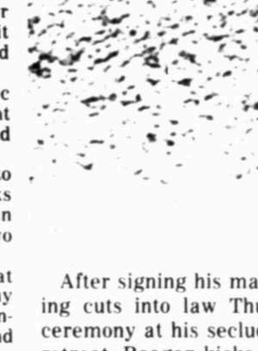

Their bonds subsequently were revoked.

Former Rep. Raymond Lederer, D-Pa., was among four former congressmen and two others sentenced Thursday in the Abscam investigation. The government now will file civil suits in an effort to retrieve bribes.

Police investigating traffic fatality

Police are investigating an unusual traffic accident that took the life of a Midland man early this morning.

Phillip William Wright, 25, was killed when the 1976 Monte Carlo he was driving struck a traffic sign and guard rail in the 600 block of South Big Spring Street shortly after 1 a.m.

A witness told officers Wright was northbound at a slow rate of speed when he suddenly accelerated in the left turn lane and struck the objects.

Wright lived at 2300 North A St., Apt. 125, and was employed by Core Laboratories of Midland. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry, who said it appeared he died of a broken neck when his throat hit the steering wheel.

Witnesses said he made no attempt to slow down. An autopsy has been ordered to determine if he suffered a heart attack or stroke prior to the wreck. His body was taken to Thomas Funeral Home, where services are pending.

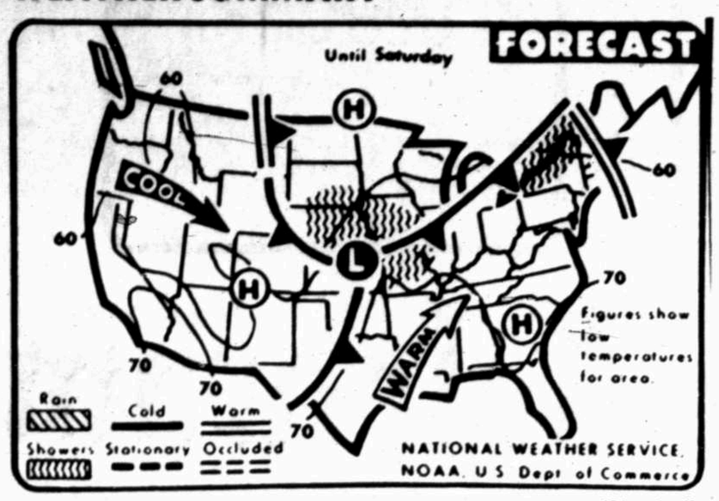

Ruling of accidental death returned

ANDREWS — A ruling of accidental death has been returned in the death of Reyes Garcia, 46, of Mexico who was killed Wednesday in a drilling rig accident in Andrews County.

According to the Andrews County Sheriff's Office, Garcia, an employee of Nick's Casing Crews Inc. of Odessa, was killed instantly in the accident which occurred at 11:20 p.m. Wednesday.

Services for Reyes are tentatively set for 8 p.m. today in Easterling-Wilson Funeral Home in Odessa. Burial will be in Mexico.

Strake may go after Bill Hobby's job

AUSTIN (AP) — It looks like the 1982 lieutentant governor's race might wind up being a battle of the Houston millionares.

Republican Secretary of State George Strake, an oilman who has never run for office, Thursday said he's just about decided to make the race against incumbent Democrat Bill Hobby.

Strake, appointed to his post by close friend Gov. Bill Clements, said he would not make a final decision until the fall. However, Strake sounded like a man who wants to see his name on campaign bumper stickers.

"I am considering a race for the lieutenant governor's spot," was as definite as Strake would get.

Strake, a conservative, said he has no "general complaints with the way Bill Hobby has run the office." However, he said "14 years is too much for any one man."

If Hobby, a newspaper executive, wins another four-year term, it would extend his stint to 14 years, a record for a lieutenant governor.

Strake said Clements, who is expected to seek re-election next year, would not campaign with him as a ticket. The governor has "indicated he would not say negative things abaout Hobby" if the election came down to a Hobby-Strake confrontation, according to Strake.

"I would not be in tandem with him," Strake, 46, said of Clements. "But there is no way you can split our common interests."

The Notre Dame graduate said his campaign would be part of the "rejuvenation of America" that started with Gov. Bill Clements' election and continued with the election of President Ronald Reagan.

"I personally think Republicans have come to represent the thinking of the average Texan better than the Democratic leadership," he said.

Strake discounted a published report that GOP leaders have promised him a clear field in the primary if he would run. The Texas Republican Party is not a "clubby affair" that can dictate who runs and who doesn't, he said.

"It's impossible to do. I don't know who is capable of cutting such a deal," he said.

Strake said two Republicans, Euless Sen. Bill Meier and Houston Rep. Milton Fox, have told him they might be interested in the nomination for the second spot in state government.

SS card scheme worries officials

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — A Mexican national caught trying to enter the United States with 1,000 bogus Social Security cards may indicate black marketeers are gearing up to take advantage of President Reagan's proposed amnesty plan for illegal aliens, a federal official says.

Gene Richardson, an official with the Inspector General's office of investigations in Dallas, said Thursday he thought July 26 arrest of Javier Alneiva Ortiz's could be a sign the black market sales of illegal documents are being stepped up.

Alneiva rtiz, 32,of Monterrey, Mexico, pleaded guilty Thursday to possessing fraudulent documents after his arrest by Border Patrol officials as he crossed the International Bridge at Laredo.

Border Patrol officials found the cards in the trunk of a car Alneiva Ortiz was driving.

Jurors still deliberating in oil-theft case

ent may have taken more oil from a tank than was reflected on the run tickets.

"My client has testified that they had better make your own salary," Burnett said.

Fikes, he said, did nothing out of the norm.

"Yes, he violated company instructions," Burnett said. "But there's not a truck driver who has not done it."

Bert Smith, defense attorney for Coleman, argued that evidence was insufficent to convict his client.

Ramsey's attorney, Bill Alexander, said Hubbard, who reportedly was hired by Sohio at $400 a day to spy on the Sohio-Canon lease and on Fikes and Ramsey, "needed somebody to be stealing" to earn his fee and tried to lay any thievery on the defendants.

The government prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Bock, charged that outright thievery had taken place in the oil fields and that Burnett, who is a "master of oratory," uses "words to paint pictures" to his client's advantage.

Burnett's forte is "taking the worst and trying to make you think it is the best," Bock said.

Bock said Fikes lied on the witness stand.

Bock, who earlier had alluded to widespread thievery in the oil patch, said the Fikes-Ramsey-Coleman case is "the first step in dropping that water level and seeing what that iceberg looks like."

About 15 government witnesses, including Scurlock and Sohio officials, postal inspectors and Texas Ranger Charlie Hodges, had testified in the trial.

Should the jury return guilty verdicts against the defendants, they could receive up to five years in prison for each of five counts alleged in the indictment.

Davis proposes county work program at Rotary Club meeting

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Though he admits to being "somewhat of a critic of government," Midland County Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis nevertheless outlined proposals to make a "good situation" better and solicited citizen "input" to get the citizenry involved in county government.

"It concerns me that we are not able to arouse much input...in local government," Davis told members of the Midland Downtown Rotary Club on Thursday noon in the Midland Hilton. Then, he promptly proposed a six-point work program which would permit the county to better serve the people.

"They (the programs) are not noteworthy," he understated, "but they are indicative of some progress. This county is big business, gentlemen," he said in alluding to the county's $8.6-million 1982 budget and various programs. But county government has "much catching up to do if we are going to play in the ball park."

Davis' six work programs ranged from proposing a taxpayers-funded bond issue to repair and pave county roads to accepting a bank's gift to build a new Midland County Public Library.

—Library: "...The First National Bank is to be commended" for its $5.5 million gift for the building of a three-story Midland County Public Library," said Davis, who termed himself "the reluctant dragon." "They (the bankers) have been first-rate citizens. They are good citizens."

The bank made a $701,240 bid on the half block making up the existing library site and adjoining parking lot and offered to contribute $5.5 million toward building a new downtown library. The area is to be part of the bank's Eagle Plaza, which is to feature one and, possibly, two 40-story bank towers on the proposed North Super Block.

Davis noted that the bank's bid on the library property at 301 W. Missouri Ave. was made jointly to the county and city, which claimed title to 2½ of the 12 lots making up the property.

"Somebody goofed," Davis said of a 1943 Schlumberger Well Services deed which gave the city part title to the lots, which in the late 1950s became site of the county library.

"I want the city out from under the library," Davis said.

The commissioner speculated that the library may be built within the next two or three years, but "that may be wishful thinking."

—County Roads: "I think we need a road-bond issue for county roads," Davis said. "We need help, and we need it badly," but he did not speculate on which and how many of the 600 miles of county roads might need repairing or paving.

"They are deteriorating. They are deteriorating fast" due to the heavy truck traffic, he said.

—Cooperation: Davis recommended increased cooperation between the city and county governments. "I think the sores have festered all too long."

—Car Parking: "Parking will be alleviated within the next several months." He didn't say how.

—Personnel: County government is into such a growth that it begs for a personnel director, who will be hired by Jan. 1, to keep track of the 250 county employees.

"We are going to pay them (competitive wages) to keep them," he said. Davis also cited the county's fringe benefits, which are "not outstanding but they are pleasing." The benefits, which include a retirement plan and health and dental insurance, are "nothing we can brag about, but our people can live with them."

—Courthouse: "We don't have enough room," he said of courthouse space. He suggested the building of a Courthouse Annex east of the courthouse square and on and along Baird Street between Illinois and Texas avenues. The annex might cost anywhere between $2 and $5 million. "That's not going to build much of a building" at $60 to $85 per square foot in construction costs, he said.

The commissioner seems to be opposed to additional building on the courthouse square.

"Maybe we ought to think about a little more greenery in downtown Midland," which is being filled in by asphalt paving and high- and low-rise buildings of mortar and brick and steel and glass.

Davis suggested that the county may be competing with the city for the voters' favor on bond issues to finance improvements. He mentioned the need for the city's sewage system expansion, which could cost between $10 and $20 million.

Whether the city or the county gets graced with the peoples' bond financing may depend on "who gets there first."

Again, Davis said that he wants the people to get involved in county government.

"We need your input," said Davis, a retired high school government teacher who is into his first year as a commissioner.

"I will be responsible for my decisions."

"I think we need a road-bond issue for county roads. We need help, and we need it badly."

Hostage released after 10 hours

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A 25-year-old Grand Prairie man who barricaded himself with a female hostage inside a warehouse snack room after his firing demanded that police investigate the business in return for releasing his prisoner after a 10-hour standoff Thursday.

Police pulled 25-year-old Cathy Reid of Grand Prairie through an opening in a false ceiling after they and a psychologist persuaded Michael Butler to release her during 10 hours of talks. Police Lt. Ronnie Shade, who aided the negotiations, said Butler insisted she leave the room through the ceiling for unknown reasons. He spoke to police through a door.

Mrs. Reid, who witnesses said was shaken but apparently uninjured, was taken to the Arlington police station. She is a company computer operator. Butler was in police custody today after his surrender at 11:38 p.m. Thursday.

Deputy Police Chief Marion Rettig said an argument between Mrs. Reid and Butler shortly before 7 p.m. caused officers to begin drawing their guns.

Banner Wholesalers Inc. officials said Butler demanded that the company be investigated, that he be reinstated to his job and not harassed, and that he not be prosecuted for his acts. Police say the man was not explicit about the proposed company probe.

But fellow workers said the three-month employee had become irritable and violent before police say he drew a gun inside the snack room at about 1 p.m. Thursday and vowed he would not let himself be captured alive.

Rick Swift, Banner general manager, said Butler had been fired about 30 minutes earlier because he had thrown a glass of water at another employee.

Swift said Butler "was never harassed that I know of." But he said the Army veteran had inexplicably complained of being bitten by dogs in the warehouse where he worked as a stager, preparing orders. There are no dogs in the warehouse, Swift said.

In an incident prior to Thursday, Swift said Butler had dropped a canister of yardsticks on a woman. She was uninjured, he said.

"He's always been a real quiet guy up until about a week ago," a co-worker who asked not to be identified said. "It was a complete turnaround. He started throwing boxes, started dropping boxes on women. He started kicking people, he started hearing things and having hallucinations," he said.

Ulster still bloody 12 years later

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — This angry province, where ancient battles are remembered with violence, marks a grim milestone Friday — the 12th anniversary of the day British troops marched in to restore peace between feuding Protestants and Roman Catholics.

The troops are still here. Peace is not. And there is no sign it's coming.

The first soldier slain by the Irish Republican Army's hardline "Provisional" wing was 20-year-old gunner Robert Curtis of the Royal Artillery, shot dead by a sniper as he patroled Belfast's Catholic Turf Lodge district Feb. 5, 1971.

Since then the army has lost 344 dead and 3,464 wounded — many blinded or maimed in its costliest campaign since the Korean War.

The army's locally recruited Ulster Defense Regiment has lost 101 men and women. The Royal Ulster Constabulary police force has lost 154 men and women.

Police statistics put the overall death toll on both sides since August 1969, at 2,135. More than 22,000 people have been wounded, there have been 7,250 bombings and nearly 29,000 shootings.

The figures do not include guerrillas secretly buried by their comrades, soldiers mistakenly shot by their own men or nine guerrillas who have died since May while on hunger strike in the Maze prison near Belfast demanding political prisoner status.

The army was ordered to Northern Ireland the afternoon of Aug. 14, 1969, to quell a two-day-old riot in the Catholic Bogside quarter of Londonderry, the province's second-largest city.

A 300-man company of the Prince of Wales Own Regiment, bayonets fixed, marched across Craigavon Bridge spanning the River Foyle as clouds of riot-control gas drifted over the city.

They formed a line across William Street, the storm center of the fighting between Bogsiders hurling gasoline bombs and the green-uniformed Protestant RUC.

Gradually peace returned to the city but the calm was short-lived. Violence exploded in other parts of the province. That night, 30-year-old Sean Gallagher, a Catholic, became the first fatality of "the Troubles" when he was shot to death by policemen in Armagh, ironically Ireland's ancient ecclesiastical capital.

The next night in Belfast, five Catholics and a Protestant were shot to death in sectarian clashes that raged for hours. Four hundred people were wounded, 100 by gunfire.

These days, the "interface" as the military calls it, is a four-mile wall of 25-foot-high corrugated iron dividing tough Protestant and Catholic areas of Belfast. Snipers on both sides still take potshots into the streets opposite.

In 1969, the Catholics, ringed by hostile Protestant areas, greeted the British as saviors and heros. Women brought them cups of tea and for a while it looked as if the province had been pulled back from the brink of civil war.

But that did not last. The IRA, dedicated to uniting Northern Ireland with the neighboring, mostly Catholic Irish Republic, became active again and the army raided Catholic areas they had been defending to look for gunmen and weapons.

What harmony there was soon turned to hate and it is still there. Riots flare nightly in Catholic areas. Youngsters not yet born when the army arrived in 1969 now attack with milk bottle Molotov cocktails and home-made acid bombs in ritual violence that has become a way of life.

Little has changed since 1969. Death still waits in the grubby streets of Belfast and the leafy country lanes of South Armagh "bandit country."

Every attempt to find a way to stop the bloodletting has sunk in the quagmire of Ireland's bloody politics.

Military strength, which peaked at 22,000 in mid-1972, has been reduced to half that level as the RUC and UDR take over security under Britain's "Ulsterization" policy.

But Protestant extremist groups, quiescent in recent years, are showing signs of reactivating as IRA attacks continue and support for the guerrillas grows with the climbing death toll in the Maze hunger strike.

Police statistics show violence again on the increase. Since March 1, when the hunger strike began, 54 people have been killed, double the death toll for the equivalent period last year.

Celebrated Austrian conductor dies

SALZBURG, Austria (AP) — Celebrated Austrian conductor Karl Boehm died here today after a lengthy illness, his family announced. He would have turned 87 in two weeks.

Boehm suffered a stroke in Vienna last March during a television recording of Richard Strauss' opera, "Elektra."

The maestro's health deteriorated earlier this week and doctors said two days ago that he had lapsed into coma at his Salzburg home.

His illness had forced Boehm, known as an outstanding Mozart interpreter, to cancel most plans to conduct at festivals in Bregenz and Linz and at the famed Salzburg summer festival of music. He still had planned to conduct one concert at Salzburg later in the summer despite his illness.

Boehm, Austria's only general music director, an honorary citizen of Vienna and Salzburg, received many national and international honors during a career that spanned more than 60 years. He appeared before audiences in 140 cities.

His great merit, experts say, was that besides promoting Mozart's music, he was a champion and leading interpreter of music written by Alban Berg, Strauss and Richard Wagner.

Born in Graz on Aug. 28, 1894, Boehm was the son of a lawyer and a pianist. He studied law and music and after graduating from law school, he became chief conductor of the Graz Opera.

He performed at the annual Salzburg Festival for more than 40 years and was associated with the Vienna Philharmonic for 48 years. Boehm conducted at Munich, Hamburg and Dresden before World War II and saw the Vienna State Opera bombed in 1944, a year after he had taken over as director.

Impending negotiations cause shift in Israel's West Bank policy

HEBRON, Occupied West Bank (AP) — In its most significant policy shift in years, Israel has cracked down severely on PLO supporters in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip. At the same time, it is encouraging moderate Palestinians to join the Middle East peace effort.

The new carrot-and-stick policy comes as Israel, Egypt and the United States prepare for a fresh round of negotiations on plans for granting self-rule to the 1.3 million Palestinians of the West Bank and Gaza.

Acting with top-level Cabinet approval, occupation authorities have banned West Bank and Gaza notables from meeting with officials of the Palestine Liberation Organization, accepting PLO money or even speaking out in support of the PLO.

At the same time, the Israelis are showing readiness for the first time to seek out an indigenous Palestinian leadership in the West Bank and Gaza — men who are not under the sway of the PLO with which Israel has vowed never to negotiate.

Earlier this week, Ariel Sharon, Israel's new defense minister, put out word that he aims to create "a new atmosphere" in the occupied territories under his administration. His objective: to coax moderate West Bank and Gaza leaders into dumping the PLO and negotiating for whatever they can get in the way of self-rule.

The clampdown on PLO sympathizers has aroused outcry not only in the West Bank but also among Israeli liberals who call it an attack on free speech.

But Israelis close to occupation affairs insist that the only way to bring the moderates to center stage is to break the PLO's control of West Bank and Gaza politics, in which assassins stifle virtually all independent thinking.

Maj. Gen. Danny Matt, the coordinator of occupation affairs and author of the new policy, has made sure the people under his control realize that he means business.

His first target has been Kerim Khalaf, mayor of the town of Ramallah north of Jerusalem and an outspoken pro-PLO radical. Matt called in Khalaf for interrogation after the Jerusalem Arab newspaper Al Fajr printed an interview in which he was quoted as expressing pro-PLO sentiments.

After Khalaf claimed he was misquoted, the interviewer was detained for questioning. Now the newspaper is threatened with closure.

The Israelis face an enormous task in trying to stamp out all the overt signs of PLO support that have taken root in the West Bank press and other forums in the past decade. But they already have managed to silence many PLO supporters.

Yehuda Litani, West Bank affairs writer for the influential daily Haaretz, reports that mayors no longer speak freely to him.

"The look on their faces as I walk through the door says: it would have been better if you had not come. You are embarrassing me and making it difficult for me," writes Litani.

Mustafa Natshe, mayor of this town of 50,000 south of Jerusalem, said of the new restrictions, "It is not fair. Israelis who support the PLO are not being punished. Why Arabs?"

Zvi Elpeleg, a man of deep sensitivity toward the Palestinian plight and close friend of Matt, says that after centuries of foreign domination, West Bankers tend to adapt to whichever political climate prevails. If they feel the PLO has the upper hand, they'll go with the PLO, he says. They will deal with Israel only if convinced that Israel is firm in its intentions.

Elpeleg blames past military governments for failing to grasp that free speech, while nice for Israel's image as an occupier, creates a vacuum in which the most ruthless force inevitably will triumph.

Shah supporters seize missiles

PARIS (AP) — Supporters of the late shah of Iran claimed today to have seized three French-built missile boats on the high seas off Gibraltar. Spain said two of the craft were diverted to a Spanish port and the third to Morocco.

The raiders, who described themselves as "loyalist" supporters of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, said 100 men stormed the vessels Thursday and diverted them to international waters off Morocco to block delivery of the cutters to Iran's Moslem fundamentalist regime.

There was no immediate word on the fate of the vessels' Iranian crewmen, who reportedly were seen at one point lying face down on the deck of their commandeered craft.

Spain's Foreign Ministry today confirmed the takeover and said the raiders overpowered a Spanish tugboat captain and used his boat to board the three Iranian cutters. A spokesman said the seizure was being investigated by Spanish authorities.

After learning of the takeover, Spanish navy and air force units trailed the Iranian boats until one of them dropped anchor at Tangiers and the other two docked in Algerciras, a Spanish port across the bay from Gibraltar, the Foreign Ministry spokesman said.

The Spanish navy command in Madrid said today that two of the missile boats would remained tied up at Algerciras until the government's investigation was completed. It said the third was believed still anchored across the Straits of Gibraltar.

The navy said it had no further information on the crew, but said no injuries had been reported.

The initial report of the seizure came from a man who identified himself as "Mr. K." and said he was a former general under the ousted shah.

In a communique read to The Associated Press, the man said the missile boats were boarded and captured by the opponents of the clergy-backed fundamentalist regime. The Islamic flag was brought down and the Iranian flag of the lion and sun was hoisted as they chanted the Iranian national anthem.

Continental lowers fares to Midland travelers

Continental Airlines has abandoned its "Proud Birds with the Golden Tails" in favor of "Proud Armadillos" and the result will be savings for Midland travelers.

According to an airlines spokesman, beginning Saturday, Continental Airlines will be flying Texans to any of Continental Airlines' non-stop destinations in Texas from Midland for $19.99.

Continental has retired the "Bird" in favor of the "Armadillo" to bring travelers the lower fare on non-stop flights between Midland and El Paso, Austin and Houston.

Armadillo fares are for standby space on Continental's regular non-stop flights from Midland to the three cities served on a non-stop basis. If space is available before flight time, the Armadillo fare goes into effect for the number of available seats.

On flights which continue to other destinations, such as Continental's one-stop flights from Midland/El Paso to Houston via Austin, the standby passenger would have to leave the flight at the interim destination, but could standby for the continuing flight to Houston for $19.99.

Carter family planning fishing trip to Montana

WEST YELLOWSTONE, Mont. (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter, an "extremely good fly fisherman," will try his luck on the trout streams near here while vacationing with his family, the president of the local chamber of commerce says.

Tony Breen said Thursday that Carter plans to fly into West Yellowstone on Tuesday with his wife, Rosalynn, daughter, Amy, and possibly his son, Chip, for a five-day stay.

The family will stay in a condominium at Yellowstone Village.

Carter and his family vacationed in the Jackson Hole area of Wyoming south of here in the summer of 1978 when he was president.

"He's coming in low profile to do some fishing and we don't want to bother him," Breen said.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan was bantering with reporters at his wooded, mountaintop ranch when someone asked him how he'd feel if Interior Secretary James Watt happened to show up and strike oil in the corral.

"I'll cut him in," the president kidded back.

Reagan was showing off the beauty of his ranch Thursday and signing landmark legislation cutting the federal budget and taxes.

Watt, who has been criticized by environmentalists for pushing for oil leasing off the California coast, "does not want to destroy the beauty of America," Reagan said. "He just wants to recognize that people are ecology, too."

SAO PAOLO, Brazil (AP) — Frank Sinatra, who is performing this week at a luxury hotel in Brazil's industrial center, is planning to travel the world at the end of next year — singing as he goes, of course.

A spokesman, Lee Solters, said Thursday that the entertainer "will try to go to some of the places he has always wanted to visit but has never been able to, and he'll go back to places he has already been to."

If Sinatra had any little-town blues before, chances are they melted away with his current tour, which began in South Africa and included Argentina before Brazil. He returns home to the United States after finishing his engagement in Sao Paulo on Sunday.

ANDERSON, S.C. (AP) — Pilot Dick Willis said he almost dropped his teeth when television star Larry Wilcox of NBC's "CHiPs" series, called wanting Willis's airplane.

"That's who I made the bill of sale out to," Willis said Thursday.

Willis recently advertised his 1951 model North American Navion — what he calls "a civilian version of the P-51," a World War II fighter — in a newsletter for pilots.

Wilcox's pilot and bodyguard, Arnold Stone, had a Navion and Wilcox decided he wanted one, too, he told Willis.

Stone flew the plane out of the Anderson County Airport on Thursday afternoon, headed for Los Angeles.

Wilcox had called Willis the day before and wired him a $1,000 "binder" deposit when the two agreed on a purchase price, which Willis wouldn't disclose.

"He sounded like a real nice guy," the 55-year-old Anderson resident said. "He was very business-like and called me 'Mr. Willis.'

"I always liked to watch him on 'CHiPs.'"

IRS asks more taxes from Elvis' estate

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is seeking $14.8 million in additional taxes from Elvis Presley's estate, claiming the estate failed to report all revenues generated from the singer's enterprises, a newspaper said Thursday.

The Commercial Appeal, Memphis' morning newspaper, reported that the IRS has challenged everything from the valuation of Presley's Graceland estate to the amount of a divorce settlement granted Presley's former wife.

The additional IRS claims were filed in U.S. Tax Court in Washington on April 22.

Attorneys representing the estate and the co-executors petitioned the tax court July 21 to set aside all of the tax deficiencies alleged by the IRS.

Attorneys for the estate hinted at the IRS problems, but did not mention them specifically when they filed a sealed report in Probate Court in Memphis on Thursday.

That report dealt with business dealings between Presley and his longtime manager, Col. Tom Parker, and came in response to allegations by an attorney for Presley's daughter that Parker and RCA Records defrauded Presley of millions of dollars.

Claiming that much of the material contained in their report could be involved in other litigation, the estate attorneys asked Judge Joseph Evans to issue a protective order barring disclosure of the report's contents. Evans approved the request.

Friday's hearing comes just two days short of the fourth anniversary of the entertainer's death at his Graceland Mansion of what was officially recorded as a heart ailment.

Blanchard Tual Jr., a lawyer appointed by Evans to represent the interests of Lisa Marie, Presley's sole surviving heir, has charged that Parker defrauded Presley and the estate of more than $2.7 million by negotiating agreements with RCA Records without requiring audits or independent legal advice.

Tual said in his report that Parker's share of Presley's earnings — reportedly 50 percent — were excessive and unreasonable.

Parker has refused to comment on the allegations.

Tual is asking the court to invalidate Parker's contract to handle the estate's business dealings, along with a full accounting of the business manager's profits from his relationship with Presley.

The estate is being held in trust for Lisa Marie.

Two Midland students accept academic scholarships to MC

Two 1981 high school graduates from Midland have accepted academic scholarships to attend Midland College this fall.

Shawn Marchman Freeman from Midland Christian High School and R. Preston Ross IV from Lee High School will receive grants covering tuition, books and fees. The scholarships may be renewed for a total of four semesters.

Freeman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross E. Freeman, was on the MCHS honor roll each term during high school, receiving special honors in English, history, science, speech and journalism. He served as a Student Council member for two years, was in the band three years and on the annual staff. Active in his church choir, he also plays drums and guitar.

Shawn Marchman Freeman

Ross is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy P. Ross Jr. He had a 4.04 grade point average and was an honor graduate this spring. He was a member of the National Honor Society and received three academic letters and the PTA academic award. In addition, he was a member of JETS, FFA, president of Calumet and band captain. He was named "Mr. Academic" on the Rebelee Court.

Three art classes added

ODESSA — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin is adding three new art classes to its Saturday art class schedule this fall.

Dr. Stanley Marcus, chairman of art at UTPB, said two of the classes, Art 337, Clay and Glazes, and Art 452, Metal Jewelry, are offered 9 a.m-5 p.m for eight weeks.

Clay and Glazes, taught by David Heath, will meet the first eight weeks of the semester and the jewelry making class, taught by Sally Tripp, will meet the last eight. Students may take both classes if they wish.

The third class added to the schedule is stained glass. The class is taught by Dee Casstevens and will meet 8 a.m. to noon throughout the semester.

Marcus said the Saturday classes provide a good opportunity for non-art majors who want to try their hand at various art forms.

In the ceramics class, both beginning and advanced students will be provided the opportunity for wheel throwing, hand building and raku. In the jewelry class students will be doing casting and other techniques. Some students may be able to experiment with enameling. The stained glass class will include the techniques of composition and assembly of stained glass works.

Other art classes available at UTPB this fall during the week are drawing, photography, sculpture, ceramics, elementary art education, illustration, modern art concepts, painting and printmaking.

Enrollment at UTPB is open to persons who have completed at least 60 hours of college-level coursework at a community college, college or university. Students may take courses for credit or on a noncredit basis in the university's no-grade Encore program.

Registration is Aug. 27 and 28 at 9 a.m.-noon and 2-7 p.m. in the UTPB student lounge. For further information or class schedules, contact the UTPB Office of Admissions.

Sign language course planned

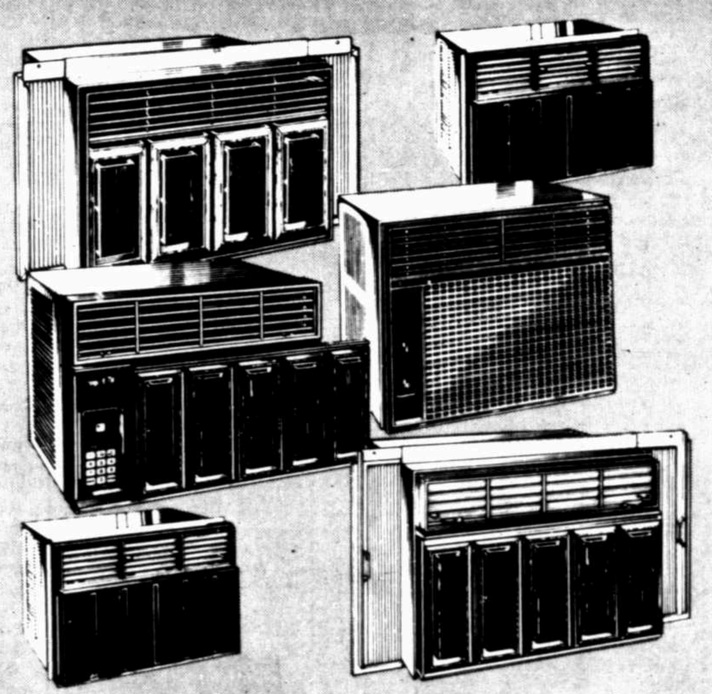

The Department of Community Services at Midland College has scheduled a ten-week course in sign language at 7-9 p.m. each Tuesday beginning Sept. 8.

Classes are limited to 20 students and pre-registration must be completed prior to Aug. 25 in room 156 of the MC Administration Building between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m Monday-Friday. The course fee is $25.

Sign Language I, a basic course in mannual communication, includes fingerspelling drills and a vocabulary of 500 signs. By the end of the course, the student should be able to carry on a simple conversation with a deaf person. For more information call 684-7851, extension 147 or 216.

Stroube Exploration, Inc., Midland, will cut the 5,800-foot wildcat No. 1 Jackson/Terry, 19 miles north of Sterling City.

Apparently, there are no other wells of similar depth within many miles of this location. The drillsite is one location west of a wildcat, the No. 1 Becky Terry, drilled to 8,150 feet, April 15, 1981.

This one spots 1,980 feet from the south, and 860 feet from the west line of section 86, block 2, H&TCRR survey.

****

InterNorth, Inc., Midland, will take a chance on the 4,200-foot wildcat No. 1 Smith Trust, to be drilled 18 miles south-southeast of Sterling City.

This one will be drilled in a virtually untested area. Aparently, there are no holes of similar depth within many miles of thie site.

It's staked 1,505 feet from the north, and 1,100 feet from the west line of section 125, block 6, H&TCRR survey.

WARD LONGSHOT

Gulf Oil Co., Monahans, will try to undercut the competition with the 15,900-foot wildcat No. 1226 G.W. O'Brien et al, to be drilled 2 miles north of Wickett.

On the map this looks like a field well, or, perhaps, an outpost, but, it appears, it will actually be two to six times deeper than any other well in the vicinity.

The stake is driven 660 feet from the north, and 1900 feet from the west line of section 23, block F, G&MMB&A survey.

WINKLER WILDCAT

Bob Yeats Oil & Gas, Inc., Midland, apparently plans to drill a No. 2 Superior State as a 7,000-foot Cherry Canyon Wildcat, 9 miles southwest of Wink.

On our map, this one spots right on top of another another No. 2 Superior State. The Railroad Commission says this is a new well though, and not a re-entry.

The drillsite is 1,980 feet from the north, and 660 feet from the west line of section 48, block 20, ULS.

LEA WILDCATS

Florida Exploration Co., Midland, will drill the No. 1 Inexco-Federal, an 8,700-foot wildcat in Lea County, two miles west and slightly north of the opener and lone produceer of the Arena Rojo (Pensylvanian gas) field and 15 miles southwest of Jal.

Location is 330 feet from the south line and 2,310 feet from the west lines of section 18, township 26 south, range 35 east.

****

Alpha Twenty-One Producing Co., Midland, has scheduled the No. 1 Toni, an 8,000-foot wildcat, four miles south of Hobbs in Lea County.

Location is 1,980 feet from the north line and 660 feet from the east line of section 22, township 19 south, range 38 east.

CHAVES VENTURES

Viking Petroluem Inc., Tulsa, will drill the No. 1-S Federal, a 5,600-foot wildcat in Chaves County, 11 miles northeast of Dexter.

Location is 1,980 feet from the south and wst lines of section 5, township 12south, range 27 east.

****

Stevens Operating Corp., Roswell, will drill the No. 1 Slayton-Federal, a 5,000-foot wildcat, 12 miles southwest of Elkins in Chaves County.

The site is 660 feet from the north and west line of section 1, township 8 south, range 26 east. The project will test the Abo formation from a ground elevation of 3,864 feet.

EDDY PROSPECTOR

Cibola Energy Corp., Albuquerque, will drill the No. 1 Carthel-Federal, a 13,400-foot wildcat, six miles northeast of Loving in Eddy County.

Location is 2,030 feet from the north line and 2,080 feet from the east line of section 5, township 23 south, range 29 east.

EDDY DISCOVERY

Anadarko Production Co. has announced completion of its No. 1 Bradshaw Communitized, a Canyon discovery in Eddy County, eight miles northwest of Lakewood.

Finaled to pump 30 barrels of oil plus 260 barrels of water, production was gained through perforations at 7,758 to 7,794 feet which had been acidized with 2,000 gallons.

It was drilled to 9,252 feet with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 9,247 feet.

Location is 660 feet from the south and east lines of section 4, township 19 south, range 25 east.

Power plant girds for big protest

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — In a valley with a view of long-dead volcanic peaks, rows of tents and bare wooden lean-to frames await the "troops" in the next major battle against atomic power.

An army of protesters organized by the Abalone Alliance vows to blockade — by land and by sea — the 735-acre site of the Diablo Canyon nuclear plant when a license is issued, possibly within the next several weeks.

They hope to keep Pacific Gas & Electric Co. from loading fuel, igniting the nuclear chain reactor and beginning a series of low-power tests at the $2 billion twin-reactor complex.

"We will do everything we can nonviolently to stop the plant from operating," Joyce Howerton of the alliance told a Los Angeles news conference Wednesday, which included remarks by actor Robert Blake and singer Jackson Browne.

Alliance members oppose all nuclear energy as inherently unsafe. But Diablo, they say, raises the specter of a potentially devastating disaster due to earthquakeH— the Hosgri Fault is located just 2½ miles offshore.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission, however, has concluded that the plant can withstand any earthquake likely to strike the area.

Alliance organizers are training recruits in non-violent protest and advising blockaders to bring provisions for 30 days.

"We are telling people to be prepared for the possibility of arrest," spokeswoman Pam Metcalf said earlier. "Our intent is to actually obstruct operation of the plant physically and non-violently with our bodies."

PG&E remains confident that it will be ready for tests soon after the NRC issues a license, and all sides expect the NRC to approve the plant.

"There's no doubt in my mind or in the company's mind whatsoever," PG&E spokesman Greg Pruett said. "Two weeks after the NRC rules ... we will be ready to load fuel."

Fuel rods have been on the site for years. PG&E says it will bring workers in by helicopter and house them inside the complex if necessary.

No electricity will be generated by the tests. The application for a full-scale operating license will be considered separately.

But what will likely ignite the Abalone Alliance protest is a ruling on PG&E's security plans, which in turn would clear the way for granting the interim testing license.

The NRC's Atomic Safety and Licensing Appeal Board is expected to rule on the safety plan "anytime at all," according to NRC spokesman Jim Hanchett. Approval would permit th3 NRC to consider the test license application, a process that could take up to 10 days.

"As soon as the security decision comes down, we will put out an alert," Ms. Metcalf said Wednesday. "People should start coming to San Luis Obispo and the blockade should begin shortly."

Ms. Metcalf said protesters will block all gates into the property, others will hike into the hills and still more are to swim ashore from a mini-armada led by a 70-foot schooner provided by The Greenpeace Foundation.

Sheriff George Whiting of San Luis Obispo County said his deputies, along with the state Highway Patrol and potential support services from the National Guard, are prepared to handle whatever develops. A mounted patrol will comb the hills on horseback, he said.

"People have a right to demonstrate," he said, "unless they break the law. And if they break the law, they'll be arrested and hopefully they'll be convicted and sent to jail."

In past demonstrations, Whiting and the protesters have discussed ground rules. Each side has kind, if cautious, words for the other. Past demonstrations havetmeant hundreds of arrests, but they have been free of violence.

Although the Alliance promises to break a few laws, such as trespassing, Ms. Howerton said, "At no time, under no circumstances, will we penetrate the security fences around the reactor itself." The double fences are patrolled by guards and dogs.

Browne, the singer and a longtime opponent of the plant, told reporters at the news conference: "The plant at Diablo Canyon is the most important one in the country right now. If they can open one on an earthquake fault, they can put one anywhere."

PG&E's Pruett countered: "I believe it's the safest nuclear plant in the United States because it has been the most thoroughly reviewed" through 13 years of hearings and study.

Browne is one of a number of celebrities publicly allied with the Abalone Alliance. The list includes President Reagan's daughter, actress Patti Davis, and former President Gerald Ford's son, Steven, although neither plans to take part in the blockade.

Actor Blake has no such reservations.

"When the thing is issued, I'll get in my car and drive up there and get in front of the gate," he told reporters. "I'll do everything I can to stop it.

"We ain't commies or loonies," he continued. "Maybe these sane, reasonable people have a point of view that needs to be heard."

Blow out in Lea County

According to a story making the rounds, an Amoco well in Lea County, New Mexico, recently blew 19 drill collars out of the hole. During a telephone interview today, Bill Davis, Amoco's scout in Odessa, wouldn't say for sure how many drill collars were blown out, but he did say there had been a blow out, which damaged the rig.

Davis said he didn't want to give out much more information on the incident, until partners in the operation hau been informed.

Davis said the crew was making a trip, and most of the pipe was out of the hole, when the blow out happened.

"We hit a little drilling break down there that came back to see us," Davis said.

The hole was to a total depth of 15,935 feet, supposedly in the Marrow, Davis said.

"Outside of that, that's all we know," he said.

Davis wasn't sure how much damage had been done to the rig. He said the well was shut in, and repairs are being made. It is believed, Davis said, that two or three drill collars are still in the hole, and a fishing trip is planned.

The well is the No. 1 Perro Grande, in section 6, township 26, range 35, Lea County.

United States sticks to bilateral aid

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The United States told the world Thursday it will continue to rely on private enterprise to develop and market new sources of energy.

The Reagan administration's position at the First United Nations Conference on New and Renewable sources of Energy displeased two Democratic congressmen in the U.S. delegation here.

Chief U.S. Delegate Stanon D. Anderson, saying the United States was "especially conscious of the energy needs of the developing countries" announced Thursday a doubling of bilateral energy aid to more than $70 million in fiscal 1982. But he opposed developing multilateral projects to fight the energy crisis, one of conference's key goals.

"We must guard against the replacement of crippling dependence on imported (oil and gas) with an equally debilitating collection of subsidized and uneconomic new and renewable energy projects," Anderson told the conference.

"We believe that the solution lies in the long-term reliance on open energy markets in which ingenuity and enterprise can flourish. In the U.S. energy transition, private industry will play the major role."

Most of the more than 140 nations attending the conference want to create an independent body to coordinate world energy policy. America's Western allies advocate creation of an energy affiliate to the World Bank.

Rep. Richard L. Ottinger, D-N.Y., told a news conference Thursday he personally disagreed with his delegation's position. "The marketplace does not provide assistance to the poor and developing peoples of the world who can hardly afford the next day's bread, much less an efficient stove," he said.

"The role of government is to fill the gaps the marketplace ignores, providing a stability which will ensure global opportunity for marketplace activity rather than poverty and revolution."

Ottinger and Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, said they had tried unsuccessfully to get the U.S. delegation to increase its support for international energy development projects.

On Wednesday, Bedell argued with Deputy Assistant Secretary of Energy Halsey Handiside, whom he accused of arbitrarily cutting funds for alternative energy projects that in many cases were near completion.

"We're chopping off a large number of energy research projects without even checking the files," Bedell shouted.

Handiside noted that, considering his department's budget had been cut this year from $8 billion to $5.6 billion, "Our track record is not that bad."

DOE confirms oil talks with Mexico underway

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department confirmed Thursday that talks are underway with Mexico about the possibility of buying oil for the U.S. stockpile.

Three days of discussions were held in Mexico City this week between Harry Jones, DOE official in charge of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, and officials of Pemex, the Mexican oil monopoly, the department said.

However, officials refused to confirm reports in a Mexico City newspaper that the United States is seeking to buy 100,000 barrels of oil daily for $32.60 a barrel.

Richard Furiga, a DOE official working on the reserve, said that the talks this week were the second round of discussions which began after Mexico expressed an interest in selling oil for the reserve.

He said no final agreements had been reached and that Jones was returning to the United States Thursday to report to DOE officials.

Meanwhile, the government continues to fill the reserve, located in salt domes in Louisiana and Texas, at a rapid clip, taking advantage of the current world oil glut.

The fill rate in August has been averaging 350,000 barrels a day and a total of 177.5 million barrels are now in storage. Furiga said DOE hopes to reach 200 million barrels in storage by the end of September.

Hinckley plans to sell Vanderbilt Energy Corp.

DENVER (AP) — The energy company headed by J.W. Hinckley, whose son John W. Hinckley Jr. is charged with shooting President Reagan, is negotiating a possible sale of the company, the company announced Thursday.

Hinckley, chairman and president of Vanderbilt Energy Corp., and his wife own about 6.9 percent of Vanderbilt's 3.6 million outstanding shares of stock, spokeswoman Ivonne Ellison said.

Hinckley, who lives in suburban Evergreen, said the decision to seek an offer had nothing to do with charges pending against his son John, who was arrested after the president and three other people were shot and wounded outside a Washington hotel in March.

Ms. Ellison said Hinckley had been considering selling the company for over a year and was negotiating with several parties.

Asked if Hinckley were thinking of retiring, Ms. Ellison said that Hinckley has been thinking about taking a rest, noting that he "has been under a strain."

In its 1981 annual report, Vanderbilt reported proven oil reserves of 762,227 barrels, compared with 520,368 barrels a year earlier. The company said it had proven gas reserves of 14.3 billion cubic feet of natural gas, compared with 12.9 billion last year.

The first American appearance of the Beatles generated enormous interest and excitement — and in a movie concerning that historic performance, the discovery of a young girl in the Beatles' hotel suite creates similar curiousity.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, August 15, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Celebrated cook Julia Child shares this birthday with you. Those born on this day are generous, sympathetic and very outgoing. The coming year will be a busy and productive one. Employment affairs show steady improvement and you are able to expand your area of influence. A pay raise or promotion is possible. Investigate exciting new business propositions. Although long-distance travel will not be especially useful, shorter trips help advance work goals. Do not let others receive the impression that you are lording it over them. Cooperation, consideration are the keys to greater success in both career and romance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your company will be very much in demand this weekend! Member of opposite sex will give you unexpected support. Continue to do what you can to cheer up an older individual.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It would be wise to spend some time alone today. You enjoy your privacy and can use it to good advantage now. Seek a second opinion on whatever is bothering you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Watch your temper today! Otherwise, it could get you into trouble with family members or even put off a romantic suitor. Do the things you enjoy with people who share your interests.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Beautify your surroundings, and increase the value of your property. Family members are delighted to pitch in and help. A social outing later today brings new happiness.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A trip to the countryside or seashore will add excitement, and perhaps a touch of romance, to the day. Seek the company of a close and understanding friend. Devote more thought to your future.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A better day for creative ventures than for financial affairs. Use your imagination. Family matters will require a gentle hand. Spend more time with a young child and learn how to play again!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Avoid all forms of gambling today. Your social life accelerates but you may prefer to spend more time alone with a new romantic interest. Keep entertainment costs within reasonable limits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): To beat the heat, take care of your shopping, errands early in the day. Do not rely too much on others. Your own efforts are your most promising source of income, prestige.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not get involved in the personal problems of your friends or neighbors. Money can be made through overseas contacts. Write letters or send cables. Romance is dazzling!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Set aside some time to relax. Catch up on any household jobs you have been postponing due to work pressures. Do someone a good turn; it will be returned many times over.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Expand your circle of business contacts. Someone you meet for the first time today can be helpful in the near future. Your evening could take an interesting turn if member of opposite sex is involved.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your imagination may be working overtime today. Put your natural talents to work to earn additional income. Evening plans may be exciting but costly. Pay more attention to your personal appearance.

Murphy's Law states: "If anything can go wrong, it will!" Declarer obviously never heard of this "law" because he overlooked a simple precaution that would have permitted him to make his slam.

Six no trump would have been proof against any quirk of distribution, but South, with his highly distributional hand, can't be blamed for preferring a suit contract. South was aware of slam possibilities the moment North jump raised the opening bid. However, his doubleton club was a warning against launching into Blackwood. Instead he cue-bid his ace of spades. When North showed his club control in response, South settled in a small slam after discovering that one ace was missing.

West led the queen of clubs, and declarer was delighted with his dummy. Since it seemed that the only loser was the ace of trumps, declarer grabbed the ace of clubs and hurriedly led a trump off the table. West won the ace and continued with the jack of clubs to dummy's king. East ruffed for a one-trick set.

A 5-1 club split is considerably against the odds, so South could consider himself unlucky for running into such a foul distribution. But he had only himself to blame — he should have taken steps to guard against that possibility. Declarer failed to make the most of his assets.

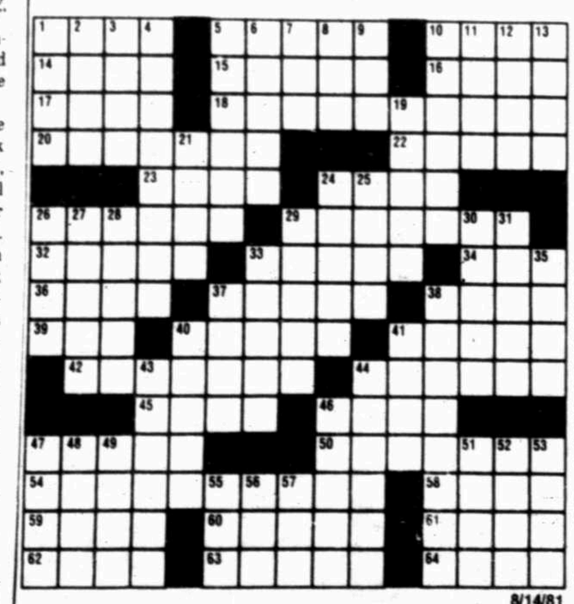

At trick two, declarer should have led a spade to his ace, and then followed by cashing the ace of diamonds and ruffing a diamond in dummy. Now declarer can discard a club from his hand on the king of spades. The contract would then be secure against any break. Declarer now turns his attention to drawing trumps. It makes no difference which defender wins the ace of trumps or how the suit divides. Since all of declarer's and dummy's trumps are high, no return can do any harm.
