Russians 'will have their hands full'

Soviets send fresh troops

By The Associated Press

Soviet tanks and armored personnel carriers were rolling back into Kabul Saturday and fresh troops were being ferried in to the Afghan capital by air from the Soviet Union, American journalists reported after leaving the war-torn nation.

In Washington, Defense Department officials said thousands of Afghan army troops have defected to the side of the Moslem Afghan rebels, who have been fighting what they call a holy war against a succession of three Marxist governments for the past 20 months and against Soviet occupation troops for the past 3½ weeks.

"The Soviets have their hands full," one U.S. defense analyst said. U.S. reports have estimated Russian casualties at more than 1,000 killed or wounded.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said in a dispatch from Kabul "there is information" Moslem insurgents in the northeastern province of Badakhshan staged raids "with the direct participation of Chinese 'advisers'." The Tass report also claimed the Afghan army had routed rebels in nearby Takhar province.

United News of India had reported Friday that some 900 Chinese had "infiltrated" Badakhshan, where some of the heaviest fighting has been reported since the Soviets sent up to 100,000 troops into Afghanistan and helped install a new government Dec. 27.

China said Saturday it was breaking off talks designed to normalize Chinese-Soviet relations. A Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman said the decision stemmed from the Soviet action in Afghanistan. The talks, which began Oct. 30, had been expected to resume early this year in Peking.

A Chinese Foreign Ministry official said the Soviet action in Afghanistan "threatens world peace and China's security, creating new obstacles for normalizing relations between the two countries."

American reporters who left Kabul Saturday in compliance with a government expulsion order reported seeing about 10 tanks and armored personnel carriers in the center of the ancient, mile-high city. Few Soviet troops or vehicles had been seen in Kabul during the past two weeks.

The reporters, who flew from Kabul to New Delhi, India, also said they saw several Soviet Antonov transport planes unloading troops at the airport in Kabul in a scene reminiscent of the Christmas airlift that signaled the start of the Soviet military intervention.

The new Soviet troops arriving Saturday boarded vehicles but it was not known where they were going.

The Afghan government on Thursday ordered American reporters out of Kabul, accusing them of biased reporting and "interference in the country's internal affairs." The expulsion order did not affect journalists in Kabul who were not American citizens.

Music teacher fired after marijuana arrest fights back

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Teacher Bill Adams was fired after being charged with possession of marijuana, although he was neither prosecuted nor convicted. These days, he plays violin in a posh restaurant while his union fights for his job.

"All the publicity attached to his arrest would have done great harm to his teaching ability," says Cecil Waldron, assistant superintendent of Lee County schools of Adams' firing.

Waldron maintains that because students are not allowed to have marijuana, teachers shouldn't either, and to keep him on would be tacit approval of marijuana.

Ron Meyer, general counsel for the Florida Teaching Profession-National Education Association, charges the Lee County School Board was unreasonable in firing the 36-year-old Adams.

The teachers' union has hired attorney Phil Padovano, who last week filed an appeal to the state Board of Education. Being sought are Adams' reinstatement and back pay dating from his April 2 suspension. He was fired last month after 10 years as a music teacher.

The dispute began in April 1979 after Lee County sheriff's deputies pursuing youths suspected of vandalism at a construction site looked into a greenhouse in Adams' yard. They reported they found 50 marijuana plants inside.

Prosecutors declined to press charges against the couple.

"... The evidence was seized in violation of Fourth Amendment rights — illegal search and seizure," Padavano said. "Also, they never proved the legal elements of possession — that he knew about its existence."

A hearing officer for the Professional Practices Counsel, which has not revoked Adams' teaching license, concluded that because the evidence was illegally obtained, it couldn't be used against Adams.

State Education Commissioner Ralph Turlington will name a hearing officer to hear arguments from both sides, then present them to the governor and Cabinet, which comprise the state Board of Education.

New controversy hits scandal-ridden GSA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The transfer of several top investigators at the General Services Administration is creating fresh turmoil and controversy in the scandal-ridden agency.

The moves have even prompted charges from some disgruntled GSA officials that the corruption probe is being "throttled" to prevent embarrassing disclosures during the 1980 election year.

GSA Administrator Rowland G. Freeman III flatly denies those charges, contending the personnel shifts are to improve coordination of the investigation by the GSA's inspector general, Kurt Muellenberg. He said there was nothing political in the moves.

"There have been absolutely no pressures placed on me," he said in a telephone interview.

Freeman also strongly endorsed Muellenberg's actions. "I have the greatest confidence in my I.G.'s integrity," Freeman said. "He hasn't done anything but actively pursue the investigation."

The most controversial transfer last week was given to William A. Clinkscales Jr., 52, the deputy inspector general for investigations who was credited with helping uncover widespread corruption at GSA in 1978.

Clinkscales was ordered shifted to an office overseeing security classifications, a move that strips him of his investigative duties. Clinkscales appealed his transfer to the Merit Systems Protection Board, which was created to help protect government "whistleblowers."

Widespread corruption at the federal government's $5-billion-a-year building and supply agency came to public attention in 1978. Since then, more than 100 government officials and contractors have been convicted, mostly for kickback and bribery schemes.

Amarillo standoff

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A man police described as "mentally unstable" was arrested late Saturday, after he barricaded himself in his house — with 2,000 rounds of ammunition — for eight and a half hours.

Patrolman Robert Chapman said the man had been taken to a hospital to have his stomach pumped of Valium, a depressant, and alcohol.

He said the man was a Vietnam veteran and "kind of a gun nut. He was supposed to be a crack shot."

Officers said they were called to investigate a family disturbance at the house shortly before 11 a.m.

"He went off the deep end and fired two shots at his wife's vehicle and one shot at an officer, then barricaded himself in the house" with a handgun, a semi-automatic rifle and 2,000 rounds of ammunition, Chapman said.

Chapman said police set up a telephone hotline with the man about 1:30 p.m., and tactical officers "just tried to talk him out" for the rest of the afternoon.

The man had consumed 175 milligrams of Valium and a fifth of alcohol, Chapman said, adding police were not sure if he was trying to kill himself. He said the man's doctor told police at the scene that he had been depressed.

Auto theft ring broken

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Investigators were looking for a third suspect Saturday in an organized auto theft ring that spanned four states.

At least one of two suspects in custody would be brought to Lubbock from Oklahoma Monday, said Lubbock County Criminal District Attorney John Montford.

Ronny Lynn Scott, 30, of Del City, Okla., agreed Friday to return to Lubbock to face charges in the "salvage switch" auto theft ring, Montford said.

Scott's wife, 29-year-old Barbara Jean, also was arrested but had not decided whether to fight extradition, he said. A third suspect, Ralph Baez, 42, of Los Angeles, remained at large.

Montford said 14 stolen autos had been linked to the ring in Texas, Oklahoma, California and Kansas.

"It's just continuing to bulge," he said.

The district attorney said the operation, "definitely an organized theft ring," involved switching vehicle identification number plates from salvaged wrecks into stolen cars. The stolen autos then were sold to wholesale dealers, he said.

Fierro charged with murder in Monje case

Frank Fierro, 1803 Hamilton, was arrested Friday afternoon on suspicion of the murder of Gerardo "Jerry" Monje.

Bond was set by Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin at $30,000. Fierro was released on bond after his arrest Friday.

Fierro is the second suspect in the murder. Orlando "Lonnie" Chavez, 202 Nolan, was also arrested Friday on a murder warrant. He was also released on $30,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin.

Monje was pronounced dead Wednesday due to collapsed lungs caused by a blow to his midsection.

Pot possession count against Lozano axed

A marijuana possession charge against Milton Lozano has been dropped in the court of Justice of the Peace Bobby West. However, the discharge didn't negate the future possibility of a 118th District Court handling of the case and Lozano was later indicted there.

The justice court undertaking of the case would have provided an examining trial for Lozano had not defense attorney George Gilkerson and District Attorney Rick Hamby signed the agreed order with West to drop the matter in West's court.

An examining trial may be requested by a defendant in a justice court to determine if the justice of the peace thinks there are sufficient cause to hold the defendant for indictment proceedings.

Lozano said he had not been aware of the possibility of a future grand jury indictment.

Lozano also complained of a night spent in jail without bond. He blamed West for the detention. Lozano claimed West used bond denial as punishment. Bond simply holds a defendant until a jury can determine punishment.

A warrant was issued for Lozano's arrest Nov. 27 on a complaint filed the same day for delivery of marijuana.

First drawing of blood at prison camp lauded

First drawing of blood at the Federal Prison Camp was determined a tremendous success by Shirley Goetz, Director of Donor Resources of United Blood Services and David Huff, Camp Hospital Administrator and Coordinator. We had an enthusiastic response by staff and their spouses says Huff, with 36 units donated during the one-day drive Jan. 17. This represents a one-third participation by camp employees.

Huff emphasizes the concern felt by Camp employees for the needs of this community for this vital gift of life and as a part of this community, we want to take every means to help meet this need. We are a part of this community, says Huff, and very proud of it and challenge other businesses and the community as a whole to come forth and sacrifice that half hour it takes to donate a unit of blood — you never know when you will need some.

Mrs. Goetz announced that with the success of this first drive at the Camp, it will become a regular quarterly event at the Camp and will coordinate a date with Mr. Huff for mid-April.

Hunger strike ends in Austin

Hefty farmer finally apologies to Hill for supporting Clements

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — His ample girth still ample despite a weeklong hunger strike, farmer Charlie Fitts finally has apologized to John Hill for supporting Bill Clements in the 1978 governor's race.

Fitts, a bearded Rockdale farmers, camped outside Clements' door and denied himself solid food until Hill could make time to talk with him.

Hill showed up about 5:30 p.m. Friday and said he would have come sooner but for legal duties on behalf of a client in a Dallas court room.

Fitts, who had been standing up or sitting in a chair talking to people all day, lay flat on his back on a sleeping bag when the time came for Hill's arrival. Television crews, radio reporters, photographers and pencil-toting news writers were alerted of the precise time of the media event.

"Is that you, John?" Fitts said, as the former attorney general, his face illuminated by television lights, looked down into his face and said, "Mr. Fitts, how are you?"

"I feel weak. Did you bring some cooked crow?" said Fitts.

Hill said he hadn't brought food of any kind.

Fitts asked for forgiveness, and Hill replied, "You don't owe me an apology. I'm sorry you had to torture yourself like this. Let's just be good Democrats together."

Fitts said Clements "is not a man of his word" because he had not kept a promise to find money somewhere in the state budget for gasohol research.

Many farmers view gasohol as their economic salvation because it would create a market for many crops that can be converted to grain alcohol, which would e used to stretch gasoline supplies.

Fitts referred to rancher friends of Clements when he said, "I'm not interested in the Tobin Armstrongs and the King Ranches of Texas. I am interested in the small farmers."

"One of the things you can always think of when you think of the Democratic Party is they care about all the people. ... I hope we can all work together to elect good Democrats to office," Hill said.

He championed the right to dissent

Douglas dies at age 81

WASHINGTON (AP) — William O. Douglas, who during a record 36 years as a Supreme Court justice maintained as his goal taking "the government off the backs of the people," died Saturday. He was 81.

Douglas, who retired from the nation's highest court in 1975 following a paralyzing stroke, had been hospitalized since Christmas Eve for "progressive" lung and kidney failure.

There was no immediate word from the Walter Reed Army Medical Center as to the cause of death. The Associated Press was told Douglas died shortly after 10 a.m.

The outspoken and individualistic Douglas consistently championed the rights of all to speak their mind. He was praised as a legal giant and attacked as a dangerous radical.

His personal life also aroused controversy. He was married four times. He spoke out on issues — particularly the environment — rather than retreating behind the solemnity of the court. There were three separate attempt to impeach him.

Appointed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1939, Douglas had by the time of his retirement served with more than a third of the 99 other justices who ever sat on the nation's highest court.

He became an articulate and prolific dissenter as his views for decades often varied with his more conservative peers.

But the Supreme Court of the 1960s, under the leadership of the late Chief Justice Earl Warren, gave Douglas a chance to see many of his early dissents become the "law of the land."

Douglas became a spiritual and intellectual leader of the Warren court's liberal and activist majority — and the rights of the individual often won out over the needs and concerns of government or big business.

"The purpose of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, unlike more recent models promoting a welfare state, was to take the government off the backs of the people," Douglas wrote.

As more conservative justices were named to the court in the early 1970s, Douglas again found himself a dissenter.

In all, his Supreme Court career — the longest in history — accounted for 532 published dissents. Of those, 181 were written during his last four years on the bench.

Endowed with the talent to write quickly and with passion, Douglas authored 21 books. On the bench, his most fervent writing was saved for his views on freedom of expression, the right of privacy and the environment.

"A censor can always find what he's looking for," Douglas once wrote. In another opinion, he said, "The First Amendment says 'Congress shall pass no law abridging freedom of speech or press.' I take it to mean what it says."

Douglas also was a champion of privacy. It was he who wrote for the court in 1965 when the striking down of a state law prohibiting the use of contraceptives served as the court's most thorough exploration of the individual right to privacy — a right not specifically mentioned in the Constitution.

Carter calls Douglas 'lion-like defender'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter on Saturday called the late William O. Douglas a "lion-like defender" of freedom who fought "with equal vigor" to maintain the nation's environment and its constitutional heritage.

Carter ordered that flags at federal institutions be flown at half-staff in honor of the former Supreme Court justice, who died Saturday at age 81.

"William O. Douglas was a lion-like defender of individual liberty, Carter said in a statement. "He was fiercely certain that the simple words of the Bill of Rights were meant to protect the humblest citizen from any exercise of arbitrary power, and he never deviated from that passionate conviction.

"Individual freedom in this country has no mightier champion," Carter said.

"Justice Douglas loved the outdoors with the same intensity he brought to his love of political liberty. He defended the natural and the constitutional heritage of his country with equal vigor. On the Supreme Court bench or in the mountains, William O. Douglas breathed the bracing air of freedom."

Reverse custom

PEKING (AP) — Reversing the custom by which Chinese brides went to live with their husband's family, the government is now encouraging newly married men to move in with their wife's family.

Parents with daughters will now acquire by marriage the sons who can take care of them in old age.

The move is an effort cut China's birth rate, with the government hoping the new arrangement will encourage parents to be content with one child only.

Newscaster's caper flops

GRAZ, Austria (AP) — Television newscaster Jakob Erhardt, contending a particular bank robbery was like "child's play," decided to rob the same bank in a carbon copy of the crime a year later.

Masked and armed with a toy pistol, he managed to get $15,000 and made good his escape, but the bank manager recognized Erhardt, who told police:

"You didn't catch the robber last year. I hoped you wouldn't catch me, either."

Tito's leg worsens, new surgery required

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Doctors announced Saturday that the afflicted leg of President Josip Broz Tito needed a second operation, increasing speculation that it would be amputated.

The 87-year-old Yugoslav leader's team of eight doctors issued a bulletin saying his general health was "good" but that the circulatory blockage in his left leg had worsened and required new surgery.

They did not what kind of operation would be performed or when.

Amputation can be the only remedy if such blockages cannot be relieved by medicine or other surgery. Tito has already undergone one week-long medication program, followed by surgery last weekend, which also failed.

Serious blood-vessel blockages must eventually be relieved in order to prevent gangrene — the decay of body tissue, which leads to blood poisoning. In Tito's case, it is expected that only the lower part of the leg would be removed.

The daily bulletin announcing the new surgical plans had been delayed four hours beyond the usual time of delivery.

"Further worsening of the condition of the left leg of the President of the Republic Josip Broz Tito requires the undertaking of a new surgical intervention," it said. "The general condition of health of President Tito is good."

Despite the decision to operate again, the urgently delivered news service advisory appeared to dispel growing speculation that the overall condition of the near-legendary Yugoslav leader had seriously worsened.

Tito remained at a hospital in the northern city of Ljubljana, where he underwent last weekend's surgery.

The Communist president's illness has aroused international concern about the nation's political future. Some in the West believe that if he dies the Soviet Union will try to restore its influence over Yugoslavia, which broke from the Kremlin line under Tito in the lae 1940s.

Weather

Freezing rain, snow reported

A cold front brought threats of freezing rain and snow to the Texas Panhandle, and icy drizzle was reported in the Amarillo area Saturday.

A winter storm watch was issued for parts of the Panhandle, where temperatures dipped into the 30s Saturday afternoon. Temperatures elsewhere in the state were mostly in the 40s and 50s at 3 p.m., although South Texas, ahead of the front, had readings in the 70s.

Extensive clouds and fog covered all of the state east of the mountains, with light rain and drizzle reported in central and north central Texas.

The clouds, fog and rain were predicted to remain over the state, with freezing rain in the northwest and heavy rains in central and north central Texas.

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast for today predicts snow for eastern New Mexico and parts of Colorado and the Texas Panhandle. Rain is forecast for much of Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Southwest Airlines strike ends

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Airlines officials say a shortlived mechanics' strike probably ended early because the Texas airline continued to operate during the walkout.

More than 100 mechanics, stock clerks and cleaners voted overwhelmingly Friday night to accept a contract rejected only six days before when the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers voted to strike.

IAM President Lanny Rogers said in a prepared statement that the contract offer grants a $3.05 an hour pay raise over a 3-year period.

"We will meet again next week with the company and the union to iron out the final language," said federal mediator Bob Martin. "but for all intents and purposes, the strike is over."

Some of the mechanics returned to work late Friday, after the IAM vote, and the rest were to return early today. Southwest did not fly Saturday, but will resume curtailed service today, a company spokesman said.

"We are pleased and delighted," said Southwest President Howard Putnam. "They have accepted the identical offer they had voted down ... I think they saw what was happening.

The airline was forced to cut 745 of its 1,646 weekly flights and ground six of its 18 jets during the strike, the spokesman said. The airline will resume full-schedule operations Feb. 1, said Southwest vice-president Gary Barron.

Barron said union members probably reconsidered the company's "final" offer because the airline continued to operate during the strike, using supervisory personnel to handle routine maintenance.

"I think it's the fact we were able to continue operations as successfully as we did," Barron said.

Southwest also hired E-Systems to do periodic maintenance required by the Federal Aviation Administration.

"I think when they (striking workers) saw how we were operating it was becoming obvious the strike was not as effective as they had hoped," Putnam said.

"A lot of our folks wanted to come back," he said. "There was no opportunity to make progess with what they were doing. We were prepared to keep on operating."

Barron said striking employees crossed picket lines in small numbers from the first day of the strike and a total of 15 had returned to work by Friday.

Rogers, who released a written statement on Friday's vote, could not be reached for comment.

Barron said the "final" contract offered the union called for $11 an hour base pay during the first year, $11.50 the second and $12.15 the third. He said the package would cost $1.6 million.

Union spokesmen said the IAM accepted the first year base pay, but was seeking $13.65 an hour in the third year, the scale for mechanics at national airlines.

Custom Homes

A Unique Idea—
In 1946, Capp Homes created the Finish-It-Yourself House™ program. Since then, over 60,000 Capp families have built their dream home and saved a bundle. You can too. Whether we build from your plans or ours, you get exactly what you want. Flexibility in custom-design is our password.

You Become the General Contractor—
General contractors buy the basic materials to build a home. They do some of the work themselves and hire sub-contractors for the rest. They mark up all their costs and pass it on to the buyer. They manage the project. We say you can do the same. Maybe better.

After Capp custom erects and encloses your home on the lot and foundation you provide, you take over. Do the finishing you want, and hire tradesmen for the rest. Of course, the more you do, the more you save.

Quality Finishing Touches—
The kitchen cabinets are magnificent. Appliances and bathroom fixtures are coordinated to your taste. The lighting, carpeting and everything you select from Capp will say quality. And they're all included in the price you sign for.

Construction Financing

Stop Waiting—
To stay ahead of inflation, you want to build now. Waiting for interest rates to drop next year may be a losing game. Today, your building lot and a small deposit may be all you need to get started with Capp.

Construction Money—
As a qualified buyer, Capp can provide you with all the construction money you need to finish your home. This loan covers all the materials Capp provides, including all structural materials and our full complement of finishing materials, appliances and fixtures. It also includes extra funds to buy things that Capp doesn't sell, like your foundation, masonry work, landscaping, or paying off your building lot.

Delayed Payment Feature—
Your construction loan works like a bank account. You draw on it as you need it, and you only pay interest on what you use. Then too, there's our liberal delayed payment feature. In fact, some Capp customers finish their new home and convert the total construction loan into permanent financing, before any construction loan payments fall due. Ask your Capp Representative for details.

Mortgage Money

Complete "One Stop" Home Financing—
Capp Homes total financing program is one of the best available. In addition to a construction loan, Capp offers qualified buyers a firm commitment to obtain a long term, permanent mortgage at competitive rates.

Capp Mortgage Money—
When you have completed the finishing work on your Capp Home, we can recertify you to convert your construction loan into a Capp permanent mortgage. Our full staff of financing experts will help you with all the details. We make it easy to build.

Your New Home—
It's something you shouldn't wait for any longer. Next year, housing prices will inevitably go up. But if you order now, Capp will protect your price for six full months, provided you start building within that time. Act now. Society less severe on company crooks

Compared to people who take advantage of their jobs within the business community to defraud, steal and embezzle, the criminals who use a gun or a knife for a quick holdup are pikers.

Not only that, the nickle-and-dime bandits run a far greater risk of getting caught. Society doesn't easily forgive the cheap hoodlum but may secretly admire or, at least, respect the boldness of the white-collar criminals who bilk employers out of millions.

Furthermore, juries are far more apt to deal out severe punishment to the burglar who flashes a weapon in the execution of his crime than they are to vice presidents or bookkeepers who systematically dismantle a company through embezzlement.

CORPORATE CRIMINALITY is very big in this country, according to a report issued recently by the Justice Department Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

The analysis evolved from a study that embraced the legal records of the nation's 582 largest publicly-owned corporations.

"Corporate crime costs run into the billions of dollars," the report noted, although it was conceded that precise figures are next to impossible to obtain. (Some concerns had rather write off a half-million-dollar loss to an employee than admit to the world it was naive enough to trust a money-hungry lieutenant.

The Justice Department estimates corporate crime milks up to $20 billion annually from American businesses. A Senate sub-committee insists the bill business pays is much higher than that.

The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration concedes that few members of corporate management ever go to prison, even if convicted. The agency's study found, for example, that 12 of 21 executives convicted of making illegal campaign contributions (and that is a no-no in the eyes of the Justice Department) were holding on to their positions 12 months later. Two others were retained as consultants. The other seven either retired, resigned or were shown the door.

WHAT CAN BE done to establish a more equitable and uniform system of justice? The report makes a number of suggestions, including use of consumer pressure and publicity as sanctions. The government's recent actions, however, do not bode well for the future.

None of the publicity which often accompanies the public distribution of routine LEAA reports was offered in this study.

The Greek historian Herodotus once proclaimed: "For great wrongdoing, there are great punishments from the gods." No such equities exist today, mainly because mere mortals are in charge of the criminal justice system. Where is Bacchus in our great time of need?

New broth, old cooks

Evans, Novak

WASHINGTON — President Carter has dismantled most of three years' foreign policy accumulation in reaction to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, but a private intercession by a recent White House guest pointed up his problem: He is using the architects of the discredited old policies to shape drastically different new designs.

The intercession, clearly heard by more than a score of former high officials of past administrations invited to the White House on Jan. 8, came from James R. Schlesinger. Schlesinger has special credentials as an expert in national security and Cabinet member under Presidents Nixon, Ford and Carter.

When Secretary of State Cyrus Vance told the former high officials that the Soviet invasion was "a test" of whether "the international community" could muster the strength and fortitude to prevent such Soviet conduct, Schlesinger rose and said, in effect: Cy, that's not the test. It's the leadership of this nation that's being tested.

SCHLESINGER'S INTERCESSION obliquely addressed a question being heard as the new foreign policies forced on Jimmy Carter become visible: Can the same principals who sponsored and carried out the now discarded and flawed policies of the first three Carter years switch in midstream and look good on a reverse course? This is not a case of changing horses in midstream but of changing streams without changing horses.

Four other guests of Carter voiced agreement with Schlesinger: John J. McCloy, the establishment Republican who goes back to Harry Truman's and Dwight Eisenhower's administrations; Donald Rumsfeld, defense secretary under Jerry Ford; Joseph J. Sisco, long-time State Department Mideast expert; Professor Sam Huntington of Harvard, close friend of national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

That many of the most cherished policies Carter brought to the White House have been jettisoned, at least for now, is spectacularly clear. The long effort to discourage arms sales to Third World nations is down the drain flushed there by Pakistan's dire need; the policy of refusing all arms to states suspected of building nuclear weapons has met the same fate for the same reason; so has the president's sometimes self-defeating emphasis on human rights.

Closer to home is the president's decision ("We told him again and again it just had to be done," said one White House aide.) to shelve his important issue of the first term: the strategic arms limitation agreement (SALT II). That installs the despised Kissingerian "linkage" as high policy. Also gone are early hopes for major reductions in military spending and top priority on courtship of the Third World.

YET, OFFICIALS responsible for carrying out all the old policies remain in place. A symbolic case in point is the new head of the Voice of America (VOA), Mary Bitterman. She was named only weeks before the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan elevated the VOA to new importance as the carrier of news about Carter's toughened foreign policy.

But Bitterman is an unlikely head of VOA to perform that new mission. Presidential aides say she was picked for only two reasons: her political clout in Hawaii, where she has headed public radio broadcasting; and her avid support of George McGovern in the 1972 presidential campaign.

Malignant hypertension doesn't mean cancer

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Two years ago my husband had malignant hypertension. His blood pressure went up to 300 and he was hospitalized for a month and since then has been on lots of medication. What is the difference between malignant and regular hypertension? Would this cause him to have leg cramps?—Mrs. M.H.

Some medical terms are scarier than others. "Malignant" is one that is so associated with cancer that the layman may see it almost exclusively in that context.

However, the word is used in many other ways. Malignant hypertension, in its strict sense, means elevated blood pressure that causes changes in the eye — swelling of optic discs (nerves) and bleeding into the retina area.

In a looser sense, malignant hypertension refers to any sudden sharp increase in pressure. "Regular" high blood pressure is featured by a moderate sustained rise. There are no sudden sharp increases.

The hypertension itself should not cause leg cramps. Associated circulatory problems or a lowering of potassium might. Some blood pressure medication may produce cramps.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have a continuing problem with athlete's foot. Every time I turn around it seems like I have another case. What steps, actions, precautions can be taken to help reduce the frequency of recurrence? I usually wash my feet every night, dry them thoroughly and then apply an anti-fungal powder. I also try to wear sandals as much as possible for better ventilation. — J.R.V.

Athlete's foot is so named because the fungi causing it thrive in a warm, moist environment to which the athlete's feet are usually exposed.

You are doing all the correct things to prevent it: keeping the feet clean and dry and dusting with an anti-fungal powder. Sometimes, an oral medication, griseofulvin, is necessary to eradicate the fungus completely. Even after the skin has healed the fungus may still be present, ready to blossom as soon as circumstances are right. This may be happening to you. The booklet, "Relief and Care of Your Feet," discusses this and other foot-related problems. For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me care of the Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Quite a while back there was a column about some kind of non-prescription powder that could be added to milk so that a person who could not drink milk normally could drink it.

Could you please make a note of this again, and give the name of the product? — J.D.B.

People who lack the ability to digest milk sugar (lactose) may have bloating, flatulence and even diarrhea from it. The enzyme (lactase) is lacking. That is the substance that breaks down the sugar normally.

It is possible to obtain the missing enzyme and add it to milk before drinking so that the sugar is predigested, so to speak. This is now available in a commercial product. Perhaps a health food or drug store can advise you. I try to avoid using commercial names, but one is "Lact-Aid." For all I know it might be the only one. If it isn't, I will hear about it.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I was admitted to the hospital and was told I had cellulitis. Please tell me what cellulitis is. — Mr. P.M.

Cellulitis is infection of the skin and loose tissue under it. It is usually caused by one of two bacteria — strep or staph. These bacteria may get into the skin by unnoticed scratches or puncture wounds. Once there they spread quite rapidly. Treatment is with one of the pencillin drugs.

This has nothing to do with the so-called "cellulite," a non-medical term in current use to describe the pocked fleshiness some women may develop on thighs or under arms.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Is it true that use of the birth control pill can cause a yeast infection in women? — Mrs. T.W.

A recent study of this in England apparently refutes the idea. According to the study of 1,498 women attending a family planning clinic, vaginal swab tests found yeasts and fungi in 311. The organisms were found to be no more prevalent in pill users than in those not using the pill.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Do Chinese really seek zero growth?

The Chinese government has embarked upon a campaign to control its population.

In discussing the campaign recently, the Christian Science Moniter used as its headline: "China encourages men to live with wife's parents."

If the Chinese want to be truly effective, they should also suggest that the wife live with his parents.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Do you believe God can bring about instant healing? If so, how can I get it? — P.K.

DEAR P.K.: There certainly may be some occasions when God gives healing immediately, although I believe these are rare. However, there is nothing in the Bible which promises that this will always be the case, or even that we can expect God to heal us every time. What we are promised is that God will be with us when sickness comes and, even if death comes, He is with us if we trust Him.

The greatest need any of us faces is the need of spiritual health. The Bible says we have a sickness of the soul — a sickness brought about by sin. We are separated from God, and we are under His judgment because we have sinned against Him. Only God can heal this sickness. We cannot heal it ourselves. And that is what God has done for us in Christ. He has made it possible for us to be reconciled to God because of what Christ has done for us on the cross. Christ, the sinless Son of God, took our sins upon Himself when He died on the cross. By faith and trust in Him we can be saved and restored to fellowship with God.

Have you ever invited Jesus Christ into your life? Have you ever confessed your sins to Him, and asked Him to cleanse you and become Lord of your life? This is your greatest need, for without Christ you will spend all eternity separated from the presence of God. I urge you to turn to Him by faith, and trust His promise of salvation.

It may be God's will to heal you; He also may use modern medicine to bring physical health to you. But if not, He is still with you and surrounds you with His love. Some day you will go to be with Him forever in heaven, where "there will be no more death or mourning or crying or pain, for the old order of things has passed away" (Revelation 21:4).

What they'd do?

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON—Jimmy Carter's rivals for the presidency have criticized his handling of the Iranian hostage crisis without saying publicly what they'd be doing differently if they were sitting in the White House.

Privately, though, it's a different matter. Most of the candidates have told their closest associates what they think Carter might have done, or could still do, to extricate the United States from its predicament in Tehran.

If Carter works things out successfully, these private plans will never be heard of; if he botches things, we can expect the Monday-morning quarterbacking from his opponents to run something like this:

Teddy Kennedy backed off from his blast at the former shah in November, which political observers almost universally interpreted as a tactical blunder. Aides say, though, that he still feels that a promise to investigate the abuses of the shah might ease the situation. The investigation should not be started before the hostages are released, however.

"You don't rely on regimes that don't have popular support," a top Kennedy aide told my reporter Hal Straus. "That was the lesson of Vietnam. We over-identified with the shah and his circle, with SAVAK..." Interestingly, in the weeks since Kennedy's widely perceived booboo, public opinion has swung around dramatically to support of the senator's expressed view of the shah's regime.

California Gov. Jerry Brown has sniped at Carter's management of foreign policy in general and in certain specifics. If he has any secret plan for ending the Tehran crisis, however, he hasn't confided it to his aides.

Ronald Reagan's private view—that our troubles in Iran prove we should have kept the shah in power—was hinted at when he spoke up in favor of granting the deposed ruler asylum in the United States. Reagan regards the shah as a good ally who shouldn't have been ditched, and "once the hostages are freed, you'll hear that again" from Reagan, a campaign official said. Luckily for the hostages, Reagan has kept quiet lately.

As befits a candidate with a macho image, John Connally privately favors tough action against Iran. According to sources within the Connally organization, the Texan would support a blockade of Iran and a takeover of its oil fields even before the hostages' fate is decided. That's what he's been telling conservative backers privately.

Both Bob Dole and Phil Crane have privately criticized Carter's decision to rule out force unless the hostages are harmed. Neither has said, even privately, that he'd use force if he were in Carter's shoes. But one Crane aide did say this: "None of the options is without risk to some or all of the hostages. They aren't what you'd call safe right now."

George Bush privately concedes that Carter has done a creditable job in a frustrating situation. His disappointment with Carter's handling of the crisis is that all the president's actions, like asking the United Nations for economic sanctions, should have been taken sooner.

Sen. Howard Baker also admits privately that the president is handling the situation about as well as anyone could under the circumstances.

The Republican "up-front" candidate, Rep. John Anderson, characteristically was the only one to offer Carter specific, positive advice on the situation, suggesting an indirect blockade by pressuring maritime insurers to refuse coverage of shipments to and from Iran.

SCANDAL SPREADS: The State Department frequently takes its lumps for goofs on foreign policy, but Foggy Bottom's administrative bureaucrats have always managed to keep their striped pants unspattered by the mud of scandal. Until now, that is.

The FBI is busily looking into the dealings between officials of the State Department and the scandal-ridden General Services Administration. While the extent of the financial finagling is not of the multimillion-dollar magnitude of earlier GSA revelations, sources told my associate Les Whitten that the cost to the taxpayers has been substantial and the scandal appears to involve kickbacks.

State Department personnel act as liaison with GSA, which lets the actual contracts for office space needed by the department in Washington and other U.S. locations. GSA also handles cleaning, heating and any needed remodeling, painting or other construction work for the department.

Misuse of federal funds has already been uncovered by the FBI agents, who have scoured State Department files and questioned a dozen or more employees of both agencies.

According to insiders, at least two middle-level officials, one in GSA and one in the State Department, have chosen to retire in the midst of the FBI investigation. Justice Department officials are now considering the possibility of seeking criminal indictments in the case. A decision on the matter is expected within the next few weeks.

GOP candidates fighting elements in Iowa

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Republican presidential candidates, hampered by bad weather, campaigned throughout Iowa on Saturday while the top Democratic contenders got help from the leaders of two major unions.

Snow, sleet and fog forced cancellation of some campaign appearances just two days before Iowa voters take the first step toward choosing delegates to the Republican and Democratic National conventions this summer.

Republican campaigners concentrated their fire on President Carter's conduct of foreign policy, even while party Chairman Bill Brock was saying in Washington that he believes inflation and energy will be the major issues for GOP candidates in November.

Scheduling campaign appearances in corn-producing state were Ronald Reagan, George Bush, Sens. Howard Baker and Bob Dole, Rep. Philip Crane and John B. Connally, all seeking the Republican presidential nomination.

In the Democratic race, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy kept up his criticism of Carter's decision to halt most grain shipments to the Soviet Union in retaliation for its military move into Afghanistan.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale, stumping for Carter, who has remained in Washington since the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, defended the partial embargo, but ran into a demonstration in Mason City by farmers who carried signs reading "Embargo Carter."

Kennedy and Mondale wound up their personal campaigning in Iowa on Friday.

The Iowa Democratic race has seen the same dramatic shift in the positions of Carter and Kennedy as is reflected in national public opinion surveys.

Once the underdog, Carter now leads Kennedy by a wide margin in Iowa opinion surveys. Among Republicans, Reagan still leads, but by a smaller margin than a month ago.

And no one is certain whether polls are accurate indicators of how the caucus voting will go, because only a small percentage of voters attend the precinct meetings.

On Saturday, Carter picked up the endorsement of the 420,000-member Operating Engineers union.

J. C. Turner, president of the union, called Carter "a consistent champion of America's working people."

A major Kennedy ally in Iowa is the United Aito Workers union with 47,000 members in the state. The UAW was a key factor in Carter's 1976 victory in the Iowa caucuses, but this year local and national UAW leaders are backing Kennedy.

Douglas Fraser, national president of the UAW, scheduled campaign appearances in Iowa over the weekend.

The Iowa caucuses take place Monday night with Republicans and Democrats meeting separately in each of the state's 2,531 precincts.

The precinct caucuses are only the first step in a process that moves through county and congressional district conventions before climaxing in June at state conventions, where the final makeup of the state delegations to the party nominating conventions will be determined.

Delegates elected at the Democratic precinct meetings will be apportioned to reflect the overall turnout. If 60 percent of the people at a caucus back Carter, for instance, the president would receive 60 percent of the delegates at that caucus. If one candidate has 85 percent of the vote in any precinct, he receives all the delegates. A candidate must have at least 15 percent of the vote to receive any delegates.

A major factor is the tradition of electing uncommitted delegates. While Carter finished ahead of other candidates in the 1976 caucuses, he ran well behind the uncommitted slates.

The Republicans will take a straw poll at their caucuses to determine sentiment in the presidential race, but the delegates elected won't be required to follow the results.

Most observers are predicting a larger turnout this year than in 1976, when some 36,000 Democrats and nearly 25,000 Republicans went to caucuses. In any case, the turnout for either party would represent only a small percentage of the registered voters.

Bad weather probably would lower the turnout, especially in rural areas.

Non-profit energy fund

CHICAGO (AP) — A group of Chicago foundations has established a special monetary fund to help nonprofit agencies save energy, according to an industrial journal.

The Joint Foundation Energy Conservation Fund is making grants and loans to charitable organizations that are finding larger chunks of their operating budgets eaten up by rising energy costs, reports Energy User News.

The foundation has funds available to divide among applicants who propose projects ranging from educational programs to building improvements.

Eligible agencies include museums, hospitals, schools and small community organizations in the Chicago area.

Dealers searching for sellers

Texas land sales sizzle, Realtors say

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer

Realtor E.P. "Buster" McCall of Palestine has a list of eager investors waiting to buy small tracts of East Texas wilderness.

Land dealer Brent Purden of Brownsville has a client with a standing offer of $2,000 an acre, cash, for 10 rural acres — "but I can't find him anything at any price."

Realtors throughout the state say a land boom is under way as more and more Texans, including many small investors, join a stampede to buy up the countryside, and frustrated dealers search for sellers.

"A year ago people were more cautious," McCall said. "They looked longer. They were more skeptical. They wanted a fence, or mineral rights.

"Now it's just 'Show me what you have. Get me in somehow.'"

Statistics compiled by Texas A&M's Real Estate Research Center show that since 1970 the median price for an acre of rural land in Texas more than doubled, from $240 to $600, by last July.

Statewide statistics since then are not available, but a random check of realtors indicates land prices have leaped sharply, with land priced at $600 an acre or less being offered mostly in the form of large parcels of West Texas ranchland.

An AP survey showed today's prices of rural land ranged from under $100 in parts of far West Texas an to $2,000 an acre — and that does not include some farmland priced at $20,000 an acre and up lying in the path of certain urban growth areas.

Realtor W.K. "Skip" Shumpers of El Paso said he sold land for as cheap as $60 an acre as recently as September. But it was a 10,000-acre ranch in the arid Sierra Blanca mountain range of far West Texas inhabited mainly by scorpions, buzzards and coyotes.

Middle-income investors seeking rural land as a hedge against inflation are up against one of real estate's most basic rules of thumb: the smaller the purchase, the higher the price per acre.

That means big time buyers who pay $150 to $175 an acre for large parcels of land in the Davis Mountains of West Texas, for instance, can subdivide and sell small tracts at $500 to $1,000 an acre, according to Shumpers.

Even at that, it's a good buy, he says. "I have yet to have a client lose money on a land purchase."

But the price is higher in other areas of the state. Prices vary greatly from area to area, and realtors were reluctant to quote "typical" prices. But generally, the survey showed land prices ranging from $800 to $1,250 for tree-covered East Texas wilderness to $1,500 and up for rural land in the Hill Country west of Austin and the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

McCall, who owns his own land office in Palestine, believes the soaring price of gold is partially responsible for the land rush.

"I'm trying to find land now for people who want to buy — not rich people. Working people are scraping the bottom of the barrel to come up with the money to buy land," he said. "They want to put their money on something real — a house, or land.

"Raw, unimproved land (in Anderson County) now starts out at about $1,000 an acre. Three or four months ago the price was ranging $650 to $850 an acre," McCall said.

"It's directly proportional to the price of gold. When gold was $35 an ounce, you could find land in East Texas for $35 an acre. When gold went to $200, so did land. Gold may come back down. Land won't."

Broker Jack Cook of Big Spring said sellers are getting harder to find.

"I hear from people wanting to put money in land and asking, 'Do you have any?' Very little is being sold."

Realtor Bill Echols of Austin said, "Since the second day of January I've had more ranch business than I've had in the last year and a half."

He said most of the land deals were large tracts going to wealthy investors. "Seventy-five percent of my clients now purchasing land are in the energy field of some kind," he said.

"They want, first of all, a working ranch. These people want 2,000 acres or more. The ranch just pays for itself — the taxes and other expenses."

Texas A&M real estate Professor Ivan Schmedemann said contrary to past trends, the large tracts are appreciating at a faster rate than the smaller parcels. He cited spiraling gasoline prices.

"The smaller buyers want to go out and use that property, and they're concerned about whether they can get out there and how much it will cost them," he said.

The energy crunch has also increased the premium on mineral rights.

Key to eating fast food is moderation

There may be some hope, but not much, for fast food addicts. Instead of totally condemning those munchy morsels loaded with calories and salt, some nutritionists are saying fast food can have a place, but just a small one, in people's diets.

The key to eating fast food is moderation. Since a typical fast food meal of a burger, shake and fries is packed with fats, sugar and salt, overloading on these substances would be easy if you ate fast foods a lot, Consumer Reports magazine says. Only eating fast food occasionally and having a balanced diet the rest of the time is the best way to avoid an overload.

Fats, sugar and salt, the ingredients easiest to overload on, all have been blamed for contributing to medical problems. For instance, excess salt may help cause high blood pressure and too much fat or sugar can cause a weight problem, the Texas Medical Association says.

To have a balanced diet that includes fast foods, other meals need to make up for any nutritional shortages. It is hard to make broad statements since the definition of fast food can include everything from tacos to pizza, but often fast food meals lack fiber and some nutrients found in fruit and vegetables. So if you eat a fast food meal, be sure and eat plenty of fruit and vegetables at other meals that day. You also need to eat dairy products if you do not have a shake with the fast food meal.

Fast food usually has enough protein and some vitamins and minerals but you get a big wad of calories along with them. Three San Antonio dietitians, writing in Medical Times magazine, estimate just one fast food meal provides about half of the needed daily calorie requirement. Obviously a steady diet of fast food could cause a calorie overdose that the body would store as unwanted fat.

The fast food shake is one of the biggest calorie culprits. Substituting a lower calorie drink (such as water, tea or coffee) could knock out several hundred calories and a surprising amount of salt from the meal, according to the September issue of Consumer Reports, which did an analysis of many varieties of fast food.

The analysis showed the high calorie leader was burgers, followed by fish, chicken and roast beef sandwiches. But they all have high calories. People especially concerned about vitamins, minerals and salt should check nutritional information because the different companies' products vary and the lower calorie fast foods do not necessarily have the lowest salt content or the most vitamins and minerals.

For instance, burgers generally have more vitamins and minerals than roast beef sandwiches but burgers also have more salt. Roast beef sandwiches have roughly as many vitamins and minerals as chicken and fish fast food items.

Stenholm's district bit small

Congressional remap task 'tough'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas' population shifts since 1970 show up in wildly divergent congressional district sizes, which will make the redistricting task of the 1981 Legislature that much harder.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby mailed each of the 24 Texas congressmen a report Friday on redistricting, including 1980 population estimates for each district.

He said Texas should get two additional congressmen, for a total of 26, as a result of the state's population growth since 1970, when this year's census is complete.

Based on a projected population of 13.5 million and allocation of 26 congressmen to Texas, the ideal congressional district will have 519,000 people, Hobby said.

Several inner city and rural districts are below the ideal population while a number of heavily suburban congressional districts have far more people than the average.

Using that guideline, Hobby said the district represented by House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, is short of the ideal population by 47,000 people.

Other congressmen whose districts would have to be enlarged to reach the ideal are Jim Mattox, D-Dallas; Jack Hightower, D-Vernon; Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford; Mickey Leland, D-Houston; and Henry Gonzalez, D-San Antonio.

Leland's inner city district will have the biggest shortfall, according to Hobby's figures — 95,000 below the ideal population.

On the other hand, Congressman Bill Archer, R-Houston, will have 281,000 more constituents than he should have; Jim Collins, R-Dallas, 150,000 too many; Jake Pickle, D-Austin, a surplus of 120,000; and Ron Paul, R-Lake Jackson, 141,000 more than the ideal.

Congressmen and legislators a sensitive to such changes because a politician's future is jeopardized if new people bring different political leanings from those of his present constituents.

Under U.S. Supreme Court rulings, districts must be of equal population unless variations can be justified or shown to be unavoidable.

Man kills wife, dad, himself

MUSTANG, Okla. (AP) — A man being treated for mental problems shot his wife and father to death and attempted to kill his 7-year-old daughter before committing suicide here Saturday, authorities said.

The little girl, Stephanie Moore, told investigators she was awakened at about 5:50 a.m. by the sound of numerous gunshots coming from her parents' room.

"She went in and found her mother's body laying on the floor," said police Sgt. Mike Thompson.

"Her grandfather came in and took her out into the den where they were then confronted by Earl Moore, who still had a .38-caliber gun..."

"The grandfather attempted to talk to his son, at which time he was shot once in the chest and killed instantly," Thompson said.

"Earl then grabbed his daughter by the head and put the gun to her face," the sergeant said. "Before he could fire she pulled away from him, at which time he put the gun to his head and fired one shot into his right temple."

Thompson said the body of Barbara Sue Moore, 32, was found next to her bed in the couple's bedroom. The bodies of Earnest L. Moore, 69, and his son, Earl, 32, were found in the den of the Moore home in this Oklahoma City suburb.

Mrs. Moore's father, Allen Legg, discovered the bodies and called police.

Family members said Earl Moore was undergoing psychiatric treatment at a local Veterans Hospital.

Four flee Travis jail

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A statewide alert was posted Saturday for four potentially dangerous Travis County jail escapees who fled through an air conditioning duct, according to Sheriff Raymond Frank.

All four men have previous convictions and are considered dangerous, Frank said. The prisoners were awaiting trial.

One of the escapees recently had done maintenance work on the air conditioning system through which the men escaped, according to the sheriff. They also used a hacksaw to cut through an iron gate.

The escapees were identified as Donald Sellers, 24, of Austin; Gary Shannon, 31, of San Saba; Bobby Joe Turner, 31, of Austin; and Antonio Gutierrez, 25, of Austin.

Frank said the four fled at about 5:30 a.m. Saturday.

Law enforcement officials consider Frank a "very, very dangerous person," according to the sheriff.

Indictments name seven in Cee City

COLORADO CITY — A Mitchell County grand jury returned seven indictments, one of them sealed, here Friday.

Oscar Armando Baeza, 27, Colorado City, was indicted for injuring two police officers when they were attempting to arrest him last Dec. 16.

He allegedly kicked officer Bobby Calloway in the left leg and Peggy Smith in the body when he was stopped for investigation of driving while intoxicated.

Two other policemen who drove up to the scene had to help subdue Baeza.

Other DWI indictments named Carrol Henry McKamie, 39, and Antonio Gonzalez, 23, as defendants.

James Wallace, 20, and Kenneth Mosley, 17, both of Colorado City, were indicted for the alleged burglary of the Sam Forbes building Dec. 17.

Charlie Molina, 32, of Colorado City, was indicted on two counts of possessing controlled substances. He was arrested Dec. 6.

AMERICAN MUSIC AWARD WINNERS — Singer Donna Summer, triple winner, and Andy Gibb, younger brother of the Bee Gees, accept American Music Awards in Los Angeles Friday. Miss Summer was named favorite female vocalist in both pop and soul categories, and her rendition of "Bad Girls" was named favorite pop single. Gibb accepted the trophy for his brothers, the Bee Gees, for favorite pop group and favorite pop album "Spirits Have Flown."

Summer, Jackson triple winners

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Good things came in threes for pop music stars Donna Summer and Michael Jackson at the 7th annual American Music Awards.

Miss Summer and Jackson each won three awards during the nationally televised awards ceremony Friday night. And while Barry Manilow only walked off with one trophy, it was the third time in as many years he had been named favorite pop male vocalist in the popularity poll.

Miss Summer, who won three American Music Awards last year in disco categories that no longer exist, beat such female recording stars as Olivia Newton-John, Barbra Streisand, Gloria Gaynor and Stephanie Mills to capture favorite female vocalist in the pop and soul categories.

Her recording of "Bad Girls" was also named favorite pop single.

"It's incredible," Miss Summer said at a post-show party. "I'm so happy to be winning these awards, at last."

Jackson, resplendent in a rhinestone-studded shirt and tuxedo, dominated the soul categories with awards for favorite male vocalist, favorite single ("Don't Stop Till You Get Enough") and favorite album ("Off the Wall").

"Three really makes me happy," said the once pint-sized star of the Jackson Five, now 21, tall and a successful soloist.

There also were two double award-winners, Kenny Rogers and The Bee Gees. The three Gibb brothers won favorite pop group and album ("Spirits Having Flown"), while Rogers was voted favorite country male vocalist and picked up the favorite country album mention for "The Gambler."

Crystal Gayle was named favorite female country vocalist.

Other winners were the Statler Brothers, favorite country group; Barbara Mandrell, favorite country single for "Sleepin' Single in a Double Bed;" and The Commodores, favorite soul group.

Award winners were determined by a poll of 30,000 record buyers nationwide.

The show was highlighted by a 20-minute tribute to Big Band-era clarinetist Benny Goodman, who won a special Distinguished Merit Award.

Clements treats reporters

'Thanks for memories'

By JIM DAVIS
Hearst-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — 'Twas the week before Christmas, and Gov. Bill Clements had invited capitol reporters to a party. The drinks were strong, and everyone was feeling mellow.

A reporter for a Dallas paper chatted with Clements and added: "Well, governor, thanks for an interesting year."

It was an appropriate comment from those of us who judge events on their news value.

Clements undoubtedly has provided more headlines in his first year in office than his predecessor, Dolph Briscoe, did in two or three years.

That's not surprising. Briscoe felt uneasy around reporters and liked his privacy. It was difficult even to find out if he was in town. And he was dull.

In contrast, Clements encourages reporters to follow him on his trips around the state. His office puts out an advance schedule of activities each week, and the governor generally has kept his pledge to hold weekly news conferences.

And Clements definitely is not a dull governor.

Pick almost any major state issue or controversy of 1979, and you'll name something in which Clements was involved to some extent.

He even jumped into some national and international controversies, such as presidential politics, relations with Mexico and the SALT II debate.

Then there were those that he was pushed into, such as the Gulf oil spill and related suits against the drilling company he founded.

Supporters admire what they see as Clements' open and honest style; critics say he "shoots from the lip."

Reporters without making judgments, just follow the Governor with pencils and tape recorders poised, ready to pass on his comments to a public apparently interested in its first Republican governor in 104 years.

Some Democratic leaders have complained privately that Clements and the press have a love affair going, but that isn't heard much these days.

If the new governor and the capitol press had a honeymoon, it ended during the oil spill controversy last fall.

Clements maintained that the spill's effects were blown out of proportion by the press.

Reporters kept writing about how Clements retained significant financial interest in the company whose rig had been used at the blow-out site.

It is debatable whether the governor's high press visibility will aid him politically in the long run.

Journalists report bloopers as well as wisdom from public figures. Clements learned that lesson several times last year, such as when he jokingly advised pregnant homen to go deep-sea diving as a birth-control measure.

Even if he holds such comments to a minimum, there is a danger of over-exposure in the media.

Several polls last summer showed Clements was highly popular among Texans.

Stenholm appoints four new members to his staff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Congressman Charles W. Stenholm has announced the appointment of four new members to his Washington staff.

"Two of the positions are filling vacancies created on my staff, Stenholm said, "while two additional people have been added due to the increased workload we have experienced during the past year. We have continually been trying to increase our services to constituents and are pleased to be able to offer a broader range of services to the 17th District.

Included are Brent Bolding, Lisa Brachman, Paige Parker and Debbie Schwertner.

Bolding is a December graduate of the University of Texas with a B.S. in advertising. The son of Mr. and Mrs. D.A. Bolding of Stamford, he will serve as staff assistant for Small Business. Stenholm was recently named to the Small Business Committee and said Bolding will work primarily with the small businesses of the District through the Small Business Committee and the Small Business Administration. In addition, Bolding will assist local governments and non-profit agencies with applications for federal grants and loans. He will also be assisting with casework in energy-related areas.

Brachman, a native of Dallas, is a staff assistant, handling legislative research, correspondence and special projects. She graduated from Yale University in 1979, receiving her B.A. in Diplomatic History. Prior to joining the Stenholm staff, she served as an intern with Senator John A. Durkin of New Hampshire, covering the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Also working in the legislative research area and on energy problems, Parker is currently attending George Washington University. He studied government, history and economics at the University of Texas. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Parker of Abilene and is a graduate of Cooper High School.

Schwertner will handle all types of casework, with specialties in veteran's affairs, military and academies. She is a native of Schwertner in Central Texas and worked with the State Soil Conservation Service office in Temple prior to joining former Congressman Bob Poage's Washington staff as a caseworker in 1976. Upon Poage's retirement, she became a general caseworker for his successor, Congressman Marvin Leath, before coming to work for Stenholm.

"I am pleased to have these new staff members," Stenholm said. "The variety and depth of their experience will undoubtedly prove beneficial as we try to fully meet the needs of the people of the 17th District."

ONE KILLED — SEVENTEEN INJURED — This chartered bus carrying 36 young skiers home from the Wintergreen resort overturned near Wintergreen, Va., Friday and one of its teen-age passengers was killed and 17 others injured. A youth group from Walnut Grove Baptist Church in Mechanicsville, a Richmond, Va., suburb, was on the bus when it apparently took a wrong turn, backed up and flipped over, police said.

Atmosphere almost frivolous

'Witchcraft' trial lags

PLAINVIEW, Texas (AP) — The atmosphere in State District Judge John T. Boyd's courtroom was almost frivolous.

For nine days, in tedious hour-long interviews with dozens of prospective jurors the attorneys slowly picked those they believed could give a fair trial to the high priest of a witches coven.

By Thursday, prosecutors and attorneys for murder defendant Loy Dean Stone could see a glimmer of light at the end of the long and monotonous jury selection process, and the prospect of beginning the trial proper was making everyone punchy.

Momentum built as the last three of the 32 panelists — plus an extra — were selected one after another Thursday.

The cautious Boyd planned to add one or two more panelists as "insurance" Friday, choose the final jury of 12 and then proceed with opening arguments.

Almost 27 months since 15-year-old Roxanne Casas was killed, Stone finally was going to trial.

However, even as Boyd joked with attorneys, journalists and the defendant, court employees learned some bad news. While notifying panelists to appear in court Friday, they found one was in Oklahoma and would not return until Friday night.

A frustrated Boyd called the attorneys into his chambers to see if they would agree to dismiss the wandering juror. They would not.

So Boyd, who had not specifically told the panelists to stay in town, ordered another delay. The trial — already postponed twice — was reset for Monday.

On Friday, attorneys picked another two "emergency" jurors, bringing the panel of prospects to 35 — 18 men and 17 women.

Stone, sporting a broken right wrist from a fall in his barn, sat stolidly through jury selection while his wife, Louise, took copious notes. Mrs. Stone, a high priestess in the Church of Wicca, also is charged with murder, but Boyd has granted a separation of the two trials.

The Stones stayed at their home near Dimmitt on Halloween 1977 for a quiet celebration of the witches' new year. Teenagers in the Panhandle towns of Dimmitt and Hereford, however, had heard of the "witch couple" and said later that the night had appeared perfect for observing a little Satan worship.

While the Stones practice what some witches call "mailorder witchcraft," they say the Church of Wicca does not even believe in Satan, much less worship him. They say they believe in reincarnation and that one's actions are returned threefold. They also say that an action is acceptable if it harms no one.

The Church of Wicca is scorned by members of other covens because members do not believe in an earth goddess and because members can join only after taking a $100 correspondence course.

The night of Oct. 31, 50 to 100 local teen-agers "were coming in droves" to the Stones' house, "spinning their wheels, yelling threats and obscenities; some of them firing guns," said defense attorney Travis Shelton.

The Stones called Castro County Sheriff Granville Martin to chase the teen-agers away about an hour before Miss Casas and four of her friends sought directions to the house.

Their pickup was pulling into the driveway when two shotgun blasts rang out, killing Miss Casas and wounding two others.

The Stones were arrested the day of her funeral.

Stone, 50, and his wife, 49, say they never heard the shots and have pleaded innocent.

The case set off a scandal in the town's Hispanic community, and offers of justice came from such groups as the militant Brown Berets. The trial was moved to nearby Plainview, in Hale County. Martin says Dimmitt still is "sitting on a powderkeg."

Prospective jurors were questioned closely about their possible prejudice for or against Hispanics, witches, and law enforcement officers — whose testimony will make up the bulk of testimony in the case. Four of the male jurors are Hispanic.

Prosecutors Jimmy Davis, the Castro County district attorney, and Ron Felty, assistant Hale County district attorney, have called 22 witnesses. Defense attorneys Shelton and James Doores have subpoenaed 22.

Davis and Shelton said teenagers involved would round out the slate of witnesses.

And both said witchcraft probably would not enter into testimony except to establish a reason for the teen-age procession to the Stones' house.

Shelton said Stone's religion had not affected his case. "In fact, I believe there has been only one (juror) that has been disqualified for the specific reason that she would have difficulty not being prejudiced," he said.

That woman, a Southern Baptist, told attorneys: "You're either for God or you're against him."

"The evidence shows that Mr. Stone belongs to the Church of Wicca," Shelton said. "Both sides, I think, are trying very hard to not try the case on the basis of religion, but on the facts of the case."

A conviction would be punishable by five to 99 years or life imprisonment.

Shelton said the law regarding deadly force "may very well be involved in this case." That law, he said, prescribes "ways in which a person can use force and deadly force in the protection of their property in certain prescribed acts such as malicious mischief."

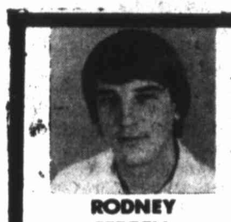

The driveway into which the youths drove divided the Stones' house and that of Stone's elderly mother, who since has died, he said.

Our Chamber presidents

By CAROL HUNTER

There will be an exciting display accompanying the Chamber Banquet next week. One will not want to miss it, even though there will be changes, beautiful decor and much to catch the eye as the Chamber moves the site of its Banquet and the Annual Meeting to the Garrett Coliseum. Our Historical Society has combined with the Chamber in framing the pictures of the Chamber Presidents, dating back to the founding, 1919. We are missing only two pictures of those 58 Howard County residents who donated one concentrated year to the efforts of building a better community. Every President has an outstanding record as a civic leader in many other areas also.

Formed from an outgrowth of the Commercial Club, begun in 1907, the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce has been instrumental in helping our community acquire everything from the Experimental Farm and the Crawford Hotel to the Bombadier School and the Permian Building. Landing the State Hospital, 1937, and the VA, built 1946, as well as CRMWD and Howard College were high priorities and, obviously, successes of the Chamber, its managers and these volunteer leaders, the Presidents. Many of its managers were instrumental in the progressive attitude of our community. We had the first woman Executive Secretary in Texas, Nell Hatch. Many still remember J.H. Greene, longtime leader. The chamber's work was aided for many years by its Secretary, Edith Gay, who worked off and on from 1937 to the early 1970's. She recalls the various Chamber locations, from the Settles Hotel to the Permian Building and then into its present locale. She also worked closely with many Presidents.

The pictures were, in large part, preserved and perpetuated by Bradshaw Studios, whose co-owner, Tot Bradshaw Sullivan's husband was President in 1943.

Many of the early Presidents were the same names one sees in the history of Howard County. J.E. Mundell who was with the Experimental Farm was the first President, 1919. Shine Phillips, the pharmacist, humorist writer and "one of a kind," as well as B. Reagan, our first School Superintendent, banker and druggist, are examples.

It is amazing how many physicians and dentists, all with busy practices, have seen the necessity of working for a better community to the extent that they served as President of the Chamber. One is impressed to see such names as Dr. P.W. Malone (1938), Dr. M.H. Bennett (51), Dr. R.B.G. Cowper (53), Dr. John Hogan (58), Dr. Carl Marcum (63) and Dr. M.W. Talbot (68). Dentists were Dr. E.O. Ellington (30), Dr. W.B. Hardy (34), and Dr. Lee Rogers (67).

The largest represented industry in the Presidential group is oil. Many were with Cosden, who has been a marvelous supporter of our Chamber, according to Edith Gay. Serving from Cosden and other oil companies were Joe Edwards (31), T.W. Ashley (32), R.F. Schermerhorn (37), Ted Groebel (40), B.L. LeFever (42), K.H. McGibbon (47), Doug Orme (49), Marvin Miller (55), Paul Meek (70 and 71) and Ken Perry (75). Bankers are the second largest group. From First National, B. Reagan (26), R.T. Piner (45), Ira Thurman (56) and Horace Garrett (61) served as Presidents as well as John Currie, State National (66), J.D. Nelson, Security State (76) and Ray Don Williams, Big Spring Savings (77).

Men connected with our utility companies have been active even though some did not live in our community very long. Edwin Kelly (39), with Texas Electric, Champ Rainwater (54) Empire Southern Gas, Jimmie Beale (57) Texas Electric and Cliff Fisher (60) with the Telephone Company were also Presidents.

The Big Spring Herald has been a strong supporter of our Chamber. Publishers and Editors from the paper who have served as Presidents are Wendell Bedichek (33), R.W. Whipkey (41), and Joe Pickle (46).

One of the prime drives of the Chamber has been the downtown area, working to keep it strong, the hub and a strong tax base. From our down town merchants have come many of the Chamber leaders. D.W. Webber (35) managed J.C. Penney. G.C. Durham (36) owned the City Cafe, the most popular spot in town. Everyone met at the City Cafe. Many remember Willard Sullivan (43) and his Settles Hotel Pharmacy where the famous "Coffee Hours" were held. Calvin Boykin (39) managed the Crawford Hotel, while A.S. Darby (44) owned a baker on Main Street. Elmo Wasson (48) was an avid downtown supporter and owned a men's clothing store. Adolph Swartz (50) has been visionary for downtown and our total community. Truman Jones (52) owned an auto agency and Ike Robb (65) continued the family tradition with downtown theaters. Both Roy Reeder (62) and M.R. Koger have insurance agencies.

Other merchants who have served as President are Clyde McMahon, McMahon Concrete (59), John Taylor (64) Taylor Implement Co., George McAlister (73) founder of Gamco and Ralph McLaughlin (74) owner of Saunders Company.

Two attorneys have presided over the Chamber. R.H. Weaver (72), who will be this year's emcee at the Banquet and Roger Brown (77). George White (35) was a County Commissioner. Johnnie Lou Avery has been our first woman President (79) and has turned her successful year over to Jimmy Taylor, another banker, who will preside at next week's Banquet.

The pictures are marvelous. Once can see from the dates served that the pictures of our active citizens of today will be fun, to see the them as they were in earlier years. The eye catcher has to be Mr. Orme (49) whose picture was taken in his Centennial get-up. The Chamber was instrumental in planning and implementing the Centennial. Find the display, look for these men and women who have led our community in this special way.

Coyote fur 'fashionable'

Trappers perform valuable service?

By BILL GREER
Associated Press Writer

OROGRANDE, N.M. (AP) — Paul Brunson, his arms red to the elbows with blood from a coyote he was skinning, paused for a moment to talk about the economics of coyote trapping.

"I'm going into the hole can't get any more than they're paying right now, said Brunson, 54.

Brunson and his brother, Perry, trap coyotes — wily prairie hunters that are the bane of those men who make their livings raising cattle and sheep on windswept Texas rangeland.

Early last week, government scientists, environmentalists and representatives of the livestock industry met in Austin for a "summit conference" on the coyote problem in the Lone Star State. The livestock industry places losses to coyotes at approximately $21 million in 1979.

The Brunsons represent a partial solution, but the brothers say business isn't good even though coyote coats sell for up to $8,000.

Paul checks a line of 110 traps daily along an 80-mile dirt road in this southern New Mexico desert area, near El Paso, Texas.

Perry says, "During the past few years it's been very profitable. But, coyote skins that last year we were getting $65 to $80 for, this year we're getting $5 to $15.

"It's not a profitable occupation anymore to trap these coyotes."

Seymour Kafoff, director of a Fort Worth fur shop, says coyote fur is "fashionable," although coyote fur sales "are just a small fraction of the fur business" and "nowhere near" the sales of mink, fox and other animals.

Charles Bifano, a Dallas fur dealer, says, "We were using wolf primarily until it became an endangered species. Then we switched to coyote.

"After wolf was put on the endangered species list, coyote became very popular. But the popularity is dwindling because the price has gone up."

The Brunson brothers average one coyote a day. Paul says it costs him about $8 a day for gas to run the traps. On top of that, they face additional costs to pay for stolen traps, and coyotes.

They bury the steel traps to hide them from thieves.

"We lose quite a few traps to theft," says Paul, "by the time we get a trap, chain and drag we have about $15 into trap — not counting labor."

Paul, who boils each trap in a greasewood concoction to prevent rust, adds, "Those traps belong to me just as much as the shoes on my feet. Ninetynine out of 100 people who see a trap will steal it — and the coyote too."

The traps have a five and one-half inch jaw and will not break the animal's foot unless the coyote fights it, which it does, says Perry.

"This old blue dog I've got — I've caught her several times and she doesn't fight it."

Paul points at a brown hound and says, "I caught that dog today. You can see he's not hurt. I mean he's not even limping."

The traps present little danger to humans. "I've had them snap on my fingers lots of times. But there isn't going to be anybody out there walking around on their fingers," Perry says.

A liquid bait is used on the traps. "It stinks real bad," according to Paul, "the worse it smells, the better it will draw them."

Coyotes in the Orogrande area normally feed on rabbits and rats. "But they can wipe out a whole flock of sheep," says Perry.

During an emergency or time of war

What options are open to beef up military forces?

States News Service

WASHINGTON — The hostage situation in Iran and the Soviet Union's recent invasion of Afghanistan have again raised the possibility of U.S. military intervention on foreign soil.

But if fresh troops are needed for a national emergency, no method exists to quickly find them once the ready Reserve is called up.

Draft calls ended in 1973 with the onset of the all-volunteer Army. And draft registration was suspended indefinitely in April 1975.

Currently, only a skeleton staff of less than 100 Selective Service employees keeps the system on standby status in half a dozen Regional offices across the United States. But their caretaking duties do not include keeping tabs on draft-age men or women.

In Congress last year, two measures to restore draft registration were shelved in the Senate and the House.

Instead, a study of the current Selective Service operation was authorized as part of the Defense Department's fiscal 1980 budget. The report is due in mid-February.

So, what options are open to President Carter to beef up U.S. military forces during an emergency or time of war?

"It's our interpretation that the president can order the resumption of draft registration at any time," according to Brayton Harris, a Selective Service spokesman.

Harris noted, however, that the president could not reinstitute the military draft itself without the approval of Congress.

In the meantime, the cadre of Selective Service specialists keeps busy by training National Guardsmen to put the system back in gear if need be, according to Harris.

A majority of the House Armed Services Committee last year indicated their desire for renewed draft registration. In fact, the committee approved a registration provision for inclusion into the 1980 Defense budget.

The proviso was substituted on the House floor last September with a call for a Selective Service mobilization study. But the entire draft measure, introduced by Rep. G.V. (Sonny) Montgomery, D-M Miss., is still in committee and could be reconsidered this year, according to a Montgomery aide.

In addition to registration of 18-year-olds, Montgomery's complete bill would authorize the induction of up to 100,000 men per year. After six months' basic and specialty training, the draftees would be placed in the ready Reserve to finish a six-year obligation.

Another draft registration bill, sponsored by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-GA, was withdrawn and placed on the Senate's future calendar after brief debate last year.

Snowless Michigan looks to government for help

By The Associated Press

A dismal shortage of snow for skiing in the Midwest and East has led to $100-an-hour snow-making operations in New Hampshire and a move in Michigan to ask the federal government for help.

Michigan Lt. Gov. James Brickley said Friday the state's ski business is being devastated because of no snow, estimating that receipts at lodges and ski-related businesses have been cut in half from the $200 million earned at the same time last year.

Snow removal operators and people who sell winter merchandise such as snow blowers and snow tires also have had seen business grind to a halt.

"I'm never gonna depend on snow again," said Johnny Welsh, owner of a Detroit snow removal service that is stuck with 40 idle trucks and 20,000 bags of rock salt. "It's cost me about $100,000 so far."

Brickley said the federal government would be asked to declare an "economic emergency" to allow resorts and ski-related businesses to get low-interest loans of up to $100,000 each from the Small Business Administration.

The lieutenant governor was acting in place of vacationing Gov. William Milliken, who was expected to make the formal request for aid.

Although the ski season started slowly in some parts of the Rockies, resorts in Colorado, Utah and Montana are now reporting ample snow with more on the way this weekend.

Operators in Washington state said business was slow due to limited snowfall in late November and December, but a massive storm last week brought abundant snow to all areas in the state.

In the eastern half of the nation, however, the absence of snow has cut sharply into tourism, and many areas in New England without artificial snow have remained closed, officials say.

Jerry Sadler weighing challenge of 'stooges'

By JACKIE CALMES
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — At 72, former Texas politician Jerry Sadler hasn't given up on a comeback.

He admitted Wednesday that he's weighing a third consecutive challenge of the "stooges" at the Texas Railroad Commission, the powerful regulatory body for energy and transportation industries.

"I've had more people urge me to run this time than I ever have in any races before," the crusty Sadler said from his East Texas home, which doubles as law office.

His supporters, he said, are "Mr. and Mrs. Average Citizen."

"I'll decide before 6 p.m. on the fourth of February," he said, referring to the filing deadline for the May 3 primary.

"I don't have to have money," he said. "I can run on my record and the people I know."

Sadler was a railroad commissioner for three years prior to World War II and a Texas legislator during the 1950s. He served a decade as land commissioner but received in 1969 a reprimand by the legislature for a deal he made with a company salvaging treasure from a sunken Spanish galleon.

Then his political and personal fortunes fell: He was defeated by Bob Armstrong for Land Commissioner in 1970, declared bankruptcy in 1972 and lost railroad commission races in 1976 and 1978.

The third time could be a charm, Sadler said.

In the 1980 primaries, he said, the two openings on the three-member commission will get unusual attention as the only nonjudicial statewide races, and more voters will be attracted by the presidential preference polls.

Three other challengers — Jim Hightower, Buddy Temple and John Henderson — are "all good men," Sadler said, but only he has the name identification and connections to unseat incumbents "stooges" John Poerner and Jim Nugent. Sadler wouldn't say which incumbent he might challenge.

He said his age is no drawback: If the older Bob Hope can stump for Exxon, Sadler reasons, he is certainly young enough to regulate the oil giants.

DUSTY DRILLING — Once considered a dying oil field, the Monahans Sandhills, 60 miles west of Midland, is now expected to have 64 new wells drilled in 18 months. (AP LASERPHOTO)

Dying oil patch revived by big boost in prices

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Several years ago, Exxon Co. USA could not find a buyer for its dying oil patch, Sand Hills.

But time resolved the problem and Sand Hills is now a thriving oil field. A rig is drilling a new well about every nine days now and Exxon may drill as many as 64 new wells the next 18 months.

Since the days a declining Sand Hills was up for sale, the field's oil production has been increased from about 850 barrels a day to 2,200 and natural gas output has moved from about 50 million cubic feet to 60 million.

Russ White, a division supervisory engineer, says Sand Hills is more of a study of new economics than new technology.

"Under the old prices, we couldn't afford to drill this field," White said.

Since the Arab oil embargo of 1973-74, prices of $3 a barrel for oil and 15 cents a thousand cubic feet of gas have risen to $11 a barrel and $1 a thousand.

"Sand Hills is a classic example of higher prices making possible higher production," White said.

The higher prices, he said, are financing the $19 million stepped-up drilling program and an $8 million gas processing plant expansion.

Each well in a field frequently tells geologists and engineers something about the characteristics to be expected of the next well to be drilled in the area.

But geology at Sand Hills is said to be so complex most wells drain only small areas in that pores in the webbed carbonate formation are so poorly connected pockets of oil are often left between wells.

"What you learn from one well doesn't necessarily tell you anything about the next one you'll drill," said Joan Williams, senior project engineer.

The problem is being resolved in part by reducing well spacing from 80 acres to 40 acres and there may be one well every 20 acres in some sections of the field by the time the drilling program is completed.

Engineers say each Sand Hills wells taps from 25,000 to 30,000 barrels of oil in its lifetime.

Example of hatred in world

Dallas shopkeeper slain

DALLAS (AP) — Samuel Einhorn fought to survive the Jewish persecution in his native Poland in World War II.

He fought to make a living for his family in the United States, first as a junkyard laborer and then as a shoe store owner.

This week he fought to keep what he had earned when a robber entered his store. This time he lost.

His slaying is an example of hatred in the world "which has made merely living a frightening experience," said the rabbi at his funeral.

"Again and again, I shudder in shock and disbelief as I recall the utter suddenness, and the unspeakable crime, that severed his life," Rabbi Max Zucker said.

Einhorn, 65, was stabbed to death by a man using a pair of scissors Wednesday afternoon. Police said the assailant escaped without taking anything from Einhorn's shoe store.

"We, even we who are contemporaries with the slaughter of innocent millions, cringe at the manifestation of hate and bestialty which has engulfed society and which has made mere living a frightening experience," Zucker told a hushed group of about 200 mourners.

"I find it so difficult to accept the tragic reality of the infamous and foul deed which separated Sam Einhorn from his family, his loved ones and his congregation."

Einhorn spent five years in a Russian labor camp before emigrating with his wife to Dallas in 1949. He worked in a junkyard until he was able to buy a small shoe store in 1952.

"He was a man who had survived the desperate years of man's worst holocaust," Zucker said. "He is now deprived of the harvest that comes from that effort."

Police said Einhorn apparently resisted the robber and they struggled. Einhorn's son said that sounded like his father.

"He was always a fighter. He fought through those years in Poland and once chased a man who'd stolen one shoe — not a pair, one shoe — a half mile and got the shoe back.

"Then, he died fighting," Richard Einhorn said.

Friendly reward

LONDON (AP) — A Housewife's years of kindness to an elderly neighbor have been rewarded with a gift of $110,000.

Retired factoryworker Jim Wilkinson, who died in August at the age of 98, made the bequest to Marjorie Kennedy, who gave up her job to look after him when his wife died four years ago.

PEKING (AP) — China and West Germany have agreed on a project of cooperation in agriculture.

The countries have agreed to carry out several pilot projects in which West Germany will supply the technical equipment. China will pay for the project mainly with soya products, a West German diplomatic source said.

Beaten, roughed up, threatened by girl

Big D priest robbed again

DALLAS (AP) — The month of January has not exactly been lucky for The Rev. Thomas B. Collins. In fact, it's been the sort of month to try the infinite patience of even the most gentle of priests.

Since New Year's Day, the rectory at St. Anthony's Catholic Church has been robbed three times. And the third time, Collins was beaten, roughed up, threatened by an adolescent girl and robbed of his birthday money, his car, bed linens, television sets, radios, lamps and food.

The robberies run so close together, the 66-year-old priest has to concentrate when describing the details.

"Now where was I?," he said. "Robbery No.1 or robbery No. 2? I know it wasn't robbery No. 3. We haven't gotten that far yet."

"Robbery No. 1" occured New Year's Day, when Collins returned from dinner to find the rectory ransacked and cash he thought "sure to be concealed" missing, he said.

"Robbery No. 2" took place last Wednesday, when the rectory again was ransacked and a safe partially cracked, Collins said.

Hours later, "robbery No. 3" occured, an event Collins likens to "a fairy-tale story."

Collins said he spent the night at the rectory in spite of the broken windows from "robbery No. 2" so he could wait for a window repairman.

"I would hear noises once in a while, but I figured my nerves were getting the best of me," he said. About 1 a.m., he went downstairs and was confronted by a wiry girl, about 11 years old, he said.

She apparently had crawled in through a broken window, Collins said and when he began chasing her, someone else starting banging on the door, demanding to be let in.

The girl escaped when the door opened, and Collins said he picked up an ax left behind by the Wednesday burglar and began to chase the pair down the street.

About the time he thought he had them cornered, Collins said, a woman of about 30 jumped out of the bushes and threw a sack over his head.

"By this time, my glasses had been broken, the ax was being held over my head and the man was telling me to open the safe," Collins said.

So the priest said he did as he was told.

The robbers took about $42 from the safe, then marched Collins upstairs, tied him in a closet, slapped him around, poured beer on his head, then threw him on the bed where he was "belted a few more times," he said.

"It looked like they were getting ready to depart when the little girl said, 'We haven't tried his pocket yet,'" Collins said. The search netted the robbers $250 in birthday cash — including $5 from a nun who taught Collins in school—and a 75-year-old watch given to his father, the priest said.

The trio "threw up to me the fact that I had called the police earlier, and I got slapped a few more times for that," he said. All the while, the young girl was saying "Let's kill him, let's kill him," Collins said.

The fragile priest escaped serious injury. The rectory, however, was robbed of bed linens, televisions, radios, lamps, food and Collins' car was stolen, he said.

"You know, it's not really the robbery or the way they handled me that disturbs me the most," he said. "What disturbs me most is this young child. She had so little regard for human life.

"I've thought about her a lot, and I can't understand how a child could have so much hate in her heart. She apparently was brought up in an atmosphere of unbelievable violence.

"You know, I found myself saying prayers for that little girl. I was praying for her even while all this was going on."

$3 million sought from Texan

Parents of slain coed file suit against girl's boyfriend

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — The parents of a slain Miami University coed have filed a $3 million wrongful death suit againt the girl's boyfriend, who was found innocent of murder.

Charles Andes II, father of Elizabeth Andes, 23, of Rocky River, filed the suit in Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Court against Robert Young of Baytown, Texas.

Miss Andes was found dead on Dec. 28, 1978, in an Oxford apartment she shared with Young, who was a football player at the university, and another young woman, police said.

The two had recently graduated from the university. The prosecution claimed the pair had argued because Miss Andes planned to take a job in Cincinnati, while Young, who is a native of Fairborn, wanted her to go west with him.

Police said the victim was strangled and later stabbed and her wallet was taken to make the death look like a robbery-homicide.

A jury found Young innocent of the charges on March 20 after he testified that he had admitted the crime to police under duress.

"I was confused ... and didn't know what to do. I felt that was the only way I could get out of the (interview) room ...," Young testified.

Young said he returned from his parents' home to find Miss Andes dead.

The victim's father said he reviewed the case for months with his lawyer, Morris Levin, a law professor at Cleveland's Case Western Reserve University.

"I'm convinced that Young is guilty. It's taken me that long to come to that conclusion," said Andes in a telephone interview from his Rocky River home Thursday night. The suit was filed on Dec. 26.

The Cuyhoga County clerk of courts office said it was not certain whether Young had been notified by registered mail of the suit.

Matthew Crehan of Hamilton, who represented Young in the murder trial, said Young had not contacted him. He said he believes Young would have called him if Young had been notified of the civil action.

Nader's consumer watchdogs nip Stenholm with low marks

States News Service

WASHINGTON — Ralph Nader's pack of consumer watchdogs has issued its annual report card on Congress, and if the report were a class photo, most of the Texas delegation would be wearing dunce caps.

Congress Watch, the lobbying arm of Nader's Public Citizen organization, rated Texans the worst collection of legislators in terms of 40 consumer votes monitored by the group in the House of Representatives.

In 35 consumer-related issues the group traced through the Senate, the Texas delegation fared better, finishing the first session of the 96th Congress with only the sixth-worst consumer rating by the group.

But if Texas is judged as poor on consumer issues, the state is only representative of what the Nader group has pegged as "the Congress that couldn't," a group that has "often been unprincipled and impulsive, as deliberative as the floor of a commodities futures exchange."

The votes surveyed by the consumer group include more than a dozen energy and environmental matters including nuclear waste disposal, windfall oil profits, and strip mining. Other issues include limits on congressional salaries and filibusters, welfare reform, and changes in the food stamp law.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, is listed as having voted with the consumer position 29 percent of the time, and Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, 18 percent of the time. The figures compare to an 89 percent rating for Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wisc., and nine percent for Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., who missed more than half the votes surveyed.

Several House Texans earned special mention in the 24-page Nader report, as examples of legislators "who cared the least about consumer interest." The group, all of whom scored only a three percent pro-consumer rating, includes Reps. Ray Roberts, D-McKinney, Marvin Leath, D-Marin and Joe Wyatt, D-Bloomington.

Reps. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, and Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, each received eight percent pro-consumer ratings from the Nader group. Rep. Thomas Loeffler earned a 10 percent rating.

Despite the generally low Texas consumer rating, there were some exceptions, the group reports. Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Harris County, scored a 90 percent rating. Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Houston, earned an 83 percent rating, and Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, 70 percent.

The man responsible for compiling the voting records is Howard Symons, who feels the overall Texas consumer rating probably suffers from the large number of energy and environmental issues surveyed by Congress Watch.

"There appears to be a general Texas attitude to what they consider to be their own industry, the oil industry, and environmental matters. They are very hesitant to do anything that might restrict development," said Symons.

"This session saw a lot of consumer attempts to recontrol the oil business and products in the consumer interest."

VA will pay $566 million in dividends during 1980

The Veterans Administration will pay a record $566 million in dividends during 1980 to 4.1 million veterans holding G life insurance policies, Jack Coker, Waco VA regional Office Director, has announced.

The figure is an $81 million increase over the amount paid in 1979.

VA will make the payments throughout the year on anniversary dates of individual policies kept in force from World War I, World War II and the Korean Conflict.

All VA insurance dividends are made automatically and there is no need for policyholders to apply for them or to contact VA about them, Coker said.

Coker reported that 3,304,000 veterans still holding World War II GI insurance policites will receive dividends of nearly $491 million, an average payment of $149. The 1978 average dividend on these policies was $128.

Payment to 517,000 Korean Conflict veterans who kept their GI insurance in force will total nearly $32 million, an average payment of $62, up from $48 in 1979.

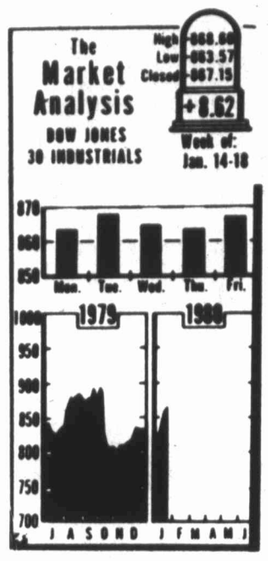

The 93,300 World War I policyholders will receive $27.8 million, an average of $298 each. The 1979 figure was $256.

Certain World War II and Korean Conflict veterans with service-connected or serious non-service-connected disabilities will receive dividends for the first time on their insurance policies in 1980. A total of $15.75 million will go to 168,000 holders of these special policies, an average dividend of $94.

Coker said the amount of dividends paid during the year will vary with each veteran according to the type of policy, amount of insurance, age at issue or renewal and the time the policy has been in force.

Dividends on VA insurance policies represent a return of funds not needed to pay the cost of the insurance. Dividends on most VA insurance programs have increased in recent years because the funds have been earning higher interest.

The higher interest rates have been of greatest benefit to those veterans who have converted their insurance plans to permanent type policies, rather than continuing to hold the original term policies, Coker said.

Rams decided underdogs today

Will it be a laugher?

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Super Bowl, climax of the professional football season and one of America's top sporting events, crowns the National Football League's 1979-80 champion Sunday when the Los Angeles Rams, champions of the National Conference, challenge the Pittsburgh Steelers, king-pins of the American Conference.

Super Bowl XIV will pack the Rose Bowl, perhaps the most famous football stadium in the country, for the confrontation which has been termed a mismatch by almost everybody except the teams involved.

The awesome Steelers, shooting for their second straight title and seeking to become the first four-time Super Bowl winners, are rated 11-point favorites over the Rams, who are playing in the big game for the first time.

Los Angeles struggled to a 9-7 regular season record, winning a record seventh straight NFC West title despite an inordinate number of injuries which ofted decimated the team. Then in the playoffs, the Rams eliminated Dallas' perennial NFC champs and beat Cinderella Tampa Bay to qualify for the Super Bowl.

Pittsburgh, Super Bowl champions in 1975, 1976 and 1979, won the AFC Central title with a 12-4 season and then eliminated Miami and Houston in the playoffs.

Both clubs sneer at the 11-point betting line for this game.

"Lines are something you stand in, or try to avoid standing in," said Chuck Noll, coach of the Steelers. "I can tell you about offensive lines or defensive lines. Betting lines? That's strictly for suckers."

Coach Ray Malavasi, who was under fire through much of the season when the Rams were losing with alarming regularity, agreed with Noll.

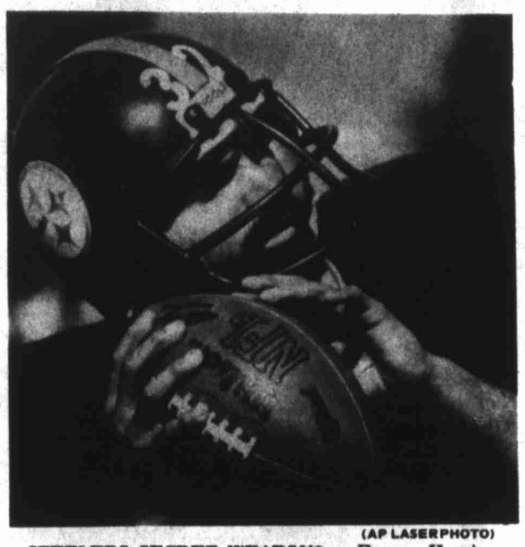

"I've never gone into a game I didn't think I could win," he said. "This team has waited a long time to get to the Super Bowl and to get there and not win is a lot like not getting there at all."

Ironically, there are many factors that could play into the hands of the underdog Rams Sunday. They are, essentially, the home team — the first time in history a Super Bowl club has had that advantage. They worked all week at their regular practice facility and the players were permitted to live at home instead of moving into a hotel. All four Pittsburgh losses this season have come on the road.

The game will be played on grass, a surface much more familiar to the Rams than the Steelers. Los Angeles played all of its home games and five of 10 road contests on natural turf this season. Pittsburgh played on grass just twice, beating Cleveland 51-35 and losing to San Diego 35-7.

Then there is the matter of the Rams' uncanny domination of the Steelers. Since moving to Los Angeles in 1946, the Rams hold a 10-1-1 edge, the last three victories coming in 1971, 1975 and 1978.

All those factors weigh on Noll's mind.

STEELERS SECRET WEAPON? — Franco Harris, veteran Pittsburgh Steelers running back, took this tack during workout this week, as he's ready to let go with a pass. The Steelers meet the Los Angeles Rams today in Super Bowl XIV at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena.

'Happy and frustrated'

PASADNA, Calif. (AP) - "It's agonizing — I am both happy and deeply frustrated," Pat Haden, sidelined No.1 quarterback of the Los Angeles Rams, said as he resignd as he resigned himself to watching today's Super Bowl XIV from the stands.

This was the scene that the watch-fob field general out of Southern California had dreamed about ever since he joined the Rams in 1976. Now, struck down by a midseason injury, he must squirm while a strong-armed young backup, Vince Ferragamo, attempts to unseat the champion Pittsburgh Steelers.

"I am trying to be philosophical," Haden explained after leaving his law class Friday at Loyola University, "but I can't help being disappointed. It is particularly depressing for me because I am now 100 percent fit.

"I could play today. In fact, I've been well enough to play the last four games, including those against Dallas and Tampa Bay. But I got caught up in the injured reserve rule."

Haden was put on the injured list after suffering a broken little finger.

Big money is on Pittsburgh

LAS VEGAS, Nev (AP) — Las Vegas bookmakers say Los Angeles Rams fans are placing more bets on their team in the Super Bowl, but the big money is riding on Pittsburgh.

One oddsmaker said the "sentimental money" is on the Rams, but only in small bets, mostly in the $20 to $200 range. The big bettors, those putting up $5,000 to $10,000 a crack, are favoring the Steelers.

But many bookies around town are moaning about the relatively lackluster performance Super Bowl bettors are putting forth for the big game. Most say betting is running behind last year's total, although some heavy betting right before the game is expected.

Most Las Vegas books have lines favoring the Steelers by 10 to 11 points, and oddsmakers say the wide point spread, along with the Rams reputation for mundane football, have kept the wagering down.

Lubbock Christian was led by Gary Morris, who settled for 27 points.

The Hawks return to play at home Monday night in Western Conference play against Clarendon College. HC is 1-4 against league opponents. Game time is 8 o'clock.

Hawk game is rescheduled

The Howard College Hawks basketball team have made a schedule change with its game against New Mexico Military Institute, according to head coach Harold Wilder.

The New Mexico Military game was originally scheduled for next Friday, but has been re-scheduled for Wednesday, said Wilder.

The team will leave Wednesday for a two-game road tour against New Mexico Military in Roswell and New Mexico Jr. College in Hobbs.

In Phoenix Open

Mitchell leads by one

PHOENIX (AP) — Longshot Jeff Mitchell, who has yet to win in four years of PGA tour activity, birdied two of his last three holes for a 69 and a 1-stroke lead Saturday in the $300,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

Mitchell, 25, who never has before led after three rounds, had a 54-hole total of 205, 8 shots under par on the rain-drenched, storm-lashed 6,726-yard Phoenix Country Club course.

"It's a new experience, but it's an experience I like," said Mitchell, a Lubbock, Texas, product who won some $38,000 last year, his best season as a touring pro.

Playing in the last threesome on the course, he took the lead alone with a birdie on the last hole, moving out of a tie with veteran Hubert Green.

Green, well established as one of golf's more accomplished performers, shot a 68 in the chilly weather that occasionally produced drizzling rain from gray, gloomy clouds. He was a single shot back at 206 going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $54,000 first prize.

"It was cold and wet and the ball always seemed to have mud on it," said Hubert, who won two titles last season and had 16 for his career. "It didn't make it a lot of fun.

"And I have a touch of flu. I'm not complaining, however. I'm playing pretty good with it."

It came under difficult conditions. In addition to the chilly showers, the course was dotted with pools and puddles of casual water, a residue of a Friday storm that caused an overnight postponement in the completion of the second round.

That round was finished Saturday morning and the third round started about an hour later. As a result, the national television cameras had ended their coverage for the day when Mitchell's last-hole birdie gave him the lead.

Tied for third, 3 shots back at 208 were Rod Curl, second-round leader Jack Renner, Mike Sullivan and veteran Charles Coody. Coody and Curl matched par 71, Sullivan shot 72 and Renner 73.

Gene Littler, a three-time winner of this old event, and Leonard Thompson were next at 209. Thompson shot 68, Littler 71.

Mitchell admitted he played a "fairly conservative round," but finished boldly. He'd matched one birdie with his only bogey and was even par for the day going to the 16th hole.

He got his approach about 15 feet below the cup and dropped the putt.

Topple Mustangs

Frogs break streak

DALLAS (AP) — Freshman guard Darrell Browder scored a season high 24 points and the Texas Christian Horned Frogs earned their first Southwest Conference road victory since 1976 with a 92-89 verdict over the Southern Methodist Mustangs in a regionally televised game.

TCU had not won a SWC game on the road in its last 33 attempts until Saturday. The Horned Frogs had only won two of their last 60 games in other teams' gymnasiums.

The Horned Frogs jumped to a 14-point lead in the first half as they shredded the Mustang press with a 52.5 shooting percentage. TCU led at halftime 51-43.

The Mustangs, who were led by Richard Harris' 19 points and Brad Branson's 18 points, tied the game 79-all, with 4:34 to play on a long-range basket by freshman Dave Piehler.

But at that point, Browder, and transfers Deckery Johnson and Eric Summers took charge.

Johnson's lay-up put the Horned Frogs ahead to stay with 14:17 to play. A basket by Summers and two baskets and two free throws by Browder set the stage for Ed Wineinger's clinching free throws with two seconds to play.

Summers scored 21 points and Johnson had 19. Wineinger also was in double figures with 16.

The other Mustangs in double figures were Ollie Hoops with 14, Piehler with 12 and Billy Allen with 10.

TCU is now 1-5 in SWC play and 6-9 for the year. SMU is 1-5 and 9-7.

It was TCU's first win in Moody Coliseum since 1970. The Horned Frogs shot 61.3 percent from the field and connected on their first six shots of the second half.

SMU shot only 51.5 percent from the field, but Allen, who did not core a field goal in SMU's last game, was only 1-8 from the field.

New TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth said: "I feel just great. That's our first conference win. We really shot well.

"Everything we did turned out right. This should help our confidence to win a close one on the road like that."

SMU Coach Sonny Allen, who is under fire from athletic director Russ Potts, said: "You've got to give them credit. They were shooting the eyes out of it and we couldn't stop them."

Abilene went out in front again on a bucket by John Berrera but Bishop countered for San Angelo. A short time later, Paul Hayes picked up a loose ball, put it through the hook and was fouled on the play. When he made good on the free toss, that put the contest out of reach.

Decision may come today

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter may announce Sunday whether he will seek a U.S. boycott of the Olympic Games in Moscow this summer in retaliation for Russian military intervention in Afghanistan.

What difference a year makes

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — What a difference a year makes.

Last year, horsemen and horses at Oaklawn Park were in the barns, shivering. This year, the horses haven't missed a day of training since the track opened Dec. 3.

The horses that were stabled at Oaklawn last year missed 17 days of training because of a frozen track. In fact, the opening of Oaklawn's 50-day racing meeting was pushed back a week because of the weather.

This year, the season has been expanded to 56 days for the first time and opening day is set for Feb. 8. The season ends April 12 with the Arkansas Derby.

There are about 500 thoroughbreds stabled at Oaklawn, but the barn area holds about 1,450 horses.

Frank Arsenault, Oaklawn racing secretary, says many of the horsemen stayed in Florida or New Orleans, anticipating bad weather. He says they will begin arriving about Feb. 1.

"Three years in a row, the weather has been bad," Arsenault said, "Economically, they couldn't afford to take a chance."

He said the worst thing about 1979 was that the horses were unable to train in the critical period just before the season began.

"When you lose even a week near the meet, it sets them back three weeks," he said. "We had horses that should have run the first two weeks but didn't run until the end of the meet because they weren't ready. Horsemen won't take a chance with a good horse."

The National Weather Service has good news for Arsenault and horsemen.

A Weather Service spokesman says the chance of an extended period of cold weather in the next few weeks is very unlikely.

Last year, temperatures in January were running 12-14 degrees below normal. So far this month, temperatures have been a couple of degrees above normal.

Arsenault was asked about the quality of horses expected for the Oaklawn meeting.

In boys' competition, Abilene High defeated the locals, 47-34, and Abilene Cooper routed Big Spring, 48-27.

16-year pact pays $5 million

Sundberg in big bucks

DALLAS — Texas Ranger catcher Jim Sundberg will become a team broadcaster when his playing days are over, according to a reported $5 million contract now being negotiated.

All that's left is some minor work and Sundberg's signature on the 16-year contract which reportedly calls for the popular catcher to play through 1986 and then become a member of the broadcast crew. Sundberg, his lawyer and club majority owner Brad Corbett have been negotiating seriously the past several months and the club is expected to call a news conference next week to announce the package.

The Dallas News reported Friday the contract is for $5 million, making it one of the richest in Ranger history. Only some minor paper work and Sundberg's signature remain.

"Everything should be cleared up within the next couple of days and it'll be official then," Sundberg said. He refused comment on the financial aspects of the contract.

However, the News reported that the deal includes six years as a player, with options to continue playing after the 1986 season. When he does retire, he will move into the broadcasting booth and become a regular announcer for the team.

"I will be one of the regular members of the broadcast crew," Sundberg said. "It's not as a color man or doing pre-game shows for TV. Sparky Lyle also has the radio-TV clause in his contract but it's just for a pre-game show before the TV games."

Sundberg has never retained an agent, but did have an attorney aiding him in these negotiations because, he said, "I'm so personally involved with Brad on a friendship basis that I needed someone to come in and keep a straight head. He said the lawyer was in charge.

In Winter Olympics

American family bolsters US hopes

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — They look like a ragtag bunch of Scandinavian outlaws — flowing blond hair, a mixture of mustaches and beards and enough gall to steal the crown jewels from under the king's nose.

They are, as a matter of fact, in search of gold ... but of the Olympic variety.

They are the Morgans, spawned actually of Irish ancestry in the hills of the Adirondack North Country and bred on hard knocks and competition.

Five of the seven brothers and one of the four sisters have turned out for the U.S. Olympic teams in bobsled and luge, an Olympic record for sheer numbers.

Jim Morgan, 31, and brothers John, 29, Sean, 24, and Bryan, 19, have a four-man bobsled team. Jim, a 1976 Olympian, and John also have a two-man team. All four went to college on football scholarships, and there is not a weak knee among them.

Terry, 26, and Bridgette, 21, meanwhile, turned out for the U.S. luge team. Terry was a standout halfback at Western State in Gunnison, Colo., before he was cut as a rookie by the pro New York Giants. Bridgette is in the Marine Corps, formerly stationed in Japan.

They are the sons and daughters of Forrest "Dew Drop" Morgan, legendary in these parts, and his wife Sheila of Saranac Lake, N.Y., a small town about 20 miles north of Lake Placid. Dew Drop is a former bobsledder himself, a national champion in the late 1950s and early '60s, but he is better known for his hairy driving and countless crashes.

"Nineteen-sixty was the year I got cheated out of the Olympics," Dew Drop says. "That year the Games were in Squaw Valley, where they didn't have a bob run, so there was no Olympic bobsled team that year."

Stargell is ~~Steelers~~ number one fan

By The Associated Press

When the champion Pittsburgh Steelers square off against the Los Angeles Rams Sunday in football's Super Bowl XIV, you may blink twice when you see a hulking man in a wild plaid sports jacket running up and down the sidelines snapping pictures.

No, it's not a camera bug who slipped through the steel ring of security. Nor is it just another of the scores of pro photographers from the newspapers, magazines and wire services.

It's the Steelers' No. 1 fan and the greatest booster of Pittsburgh's newest label, "The City of Champions" — old Willie Stargell, the most decorated athlete of the season.

"Sure, I'm a big Steeler fan," said the 38-year-old first baseman of baseball's World Series champion Pittsburgh Pirates. "I saw every game I could on television and the playoffs from the stands.

"Since I was coming to the West Coast for the game anyhow, I got a job shooting sideline pictures for Sports Illustrated."

Every time you turn around these days, there is old "Pops," as his teammates call him, picking up another trophy or endorsing some product for a good wad of cash. He is sports' hottest commercial commodity at the moment.

"I'm friendly with most of those Steeler guys — Bradshaw, Franco, Mean Joe Greene, you name 'em," he said. "Man, they are family, too."

Stargell, the Most Valuable Player of the World Series, was named "Male Athlete of the Year" last week by The Associated Press and shared Sports Illustrated's "Sportsman of the Year" honor with his gridiron counterpart, Terry Bradshaw.

"The Steelers, they're like us," said the hulking slugger. "They've got pride and determination. They're willing to go that extra mile."

Stargell was in New York over the weekend to do a recording bit with the disco group Sister Sledge, and to announce an out-of-season job.

Lake Spence bass biting

A near record size striped bass for Lake E.V. Spence was reported among catches for the week at Lake E.V. Spence, where white bass also were biting like mad.

S.V. Box, Roscoe, landed a striper weighing in at 25 lbs. 6 ozs. This was only four ounces off the record reported by Rocky Gipson, Big Spring, last July.

During the week several other sizeable stripers were reported, lending substance to Texas Parks and Wildlife findings that the winter is a prime time for catching the stripers, which are naturally a cold water fish. A party from Clovis, N.M. reported real results with white bass, stringing 237 of them weighing up to 2 lbs. Here are some of the reports:

Paint Creek Marina — Charles Heffington, Danny Short and Jerry Roberts, Littlefield, seven stripers and 30 white bass; Bill Flippen and party from Denver City, 45 white bass and a 21-lb., 7 oz. striped bass; Charles Travis and Bill O'Rand, Odessa, 50 white bass and five stripers to 6 lbs.; Mr. and Mrs. Sellers, Midland, four stripers and four white bass; S.V. Box, Roscoe, a 25-lb., 6-oz. striper.

Wildcat Fish A Rama — W.A. Taylor, J.B. Hatley, W.N. Hatley and party of Clovis, N.M., 30 striped bass to 6 lbs. and 127 white bass to 2 lbs.; Cecil Sudduth, Winters, four stripers to 11 lbs.

Triangle Grocery — Gene Berry, Big Spring, three stripers to 14½-lbs., two blue catfish to 16½ lbs.

Note: the record for Lake Spence striped bass is a 30-pounder which was netted by the Texas Parks and Wildlife biologists in April 1978 while conducting a fish census.

But only as a reporter in 1975

Dryer has Super Bowl experience

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The sea of writers and broadcasters who annually descend on the Super Bowl and make it the kingpin of media hype are assembled. Microphones, notebooks and cameras dominate the California landscape. The exercise in journalistic excess has begun.

Missing from the scene, however, are two reporters who left an indelible imprint on the Super Bowl press in their lone appearance. Scoops Brannigan and Cubby O'Switzer have not shown and are not expected. That information comes directly from defensive end Freddie Dryer of the Los Angeles Rams, who was intimately involved with Brannigan and O'Switzer when they made their first and only Super Bowl appearance at the Pittsburgh-Minnesota game in New Orleans in 1975.

Dryer, who occasionally views the world of professional football with something less than the total reverence expected of its devotees, recalled the Brannigan-O'Switzer scam which he hatched with wide receiver Lance Rentzel, a Ram teammate in those days.

"Lance was Brannigan and I was O'Switzer," said Dryer. They were fully accredited reporters for a national magazine with all kinds of credentials.

And, it might be added, they were equipped with all kinds of questions, as well, determined to discover the ultimate truths about this game of games.

"That was the year everybody was questioning Terry Bradshaw's intelligence," recalled Dryer. "So at one of the press conferences, I asked, 'Is it true that hat size is indicative of IQ and if so, what is your hat size?'"

Before Bradshaw, who was bright enough to recognize Dryer in his journalistic disguise, could answer, a wag interrupted.

"Somebody blurted 'Fourand-an-eighth,'" said Dryer. "See that, there's humor in you guys if only you knew how to bring it out."

The National Football League didn't think any of it was funny and came down hard on such carryings-on. But not before Brannigan and O'Switzer made it into one of Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll's breakfast press conferences, the same type that began today.

"Somebody had just asked a three-part question about Astroturf and the guy next to me passed out in his eggs," Dryer said with a touch of nostalgia in his voice. "Then I asked Noll if he thought the zone defense was here to stay and if not, where was it going."

Noll, of course, gave a straightforward answer to the slightly curving question. No danger of a sense of humor there.

Dryer said he and Rentzel played their parts to the hilt.

"We were in full regalia and we acted just like regular beat reporters would," he said, aiming a dig at the writers with whom the Rams have been feuding lately. "We had credentials all over the place. We ate and drank free all week, but we were unbelievable tippers. We slept in our suits. We jangled change in our pockets. We blurted questions. We weren't interested in answers and we didn't wait for them."

So while the rest of the Rams are making their Super Bowl debuts, Dryer comes into Sunday's game with experience. This is a return trip and he intends to enjoy it every bit as much as his first visit. After all, he's had his journalistic trial by fire and survived. What can happen to him now?

Super Bowl TV coverage a worldwide affair

By the Associated Press

There is nothing in American sports or television that has more viewer interest than the Super Bowl.

—It will be broadcast to 19 foreign countries, including Brunei in the Malaysian peninsula. The National Football League may not know much about Brunei but these football starved fans know about the NFL.

—Nicaragua contracted for the Super Bowl for its station owned by then president, Anastasio Somoza. The government that overthrew Somoza says it will honor the deal.

—Japan, which will get a live transmission but show it 12 hours later, is sending a crew of 16 people for a TV booth at the Rose Bowl that only holds 10. Kentaro Watanabe will handle the play-by-play and Kaoru Kubota will provide the color.

—Those hardy souls in the Arctic watching out for nuclear attack on the Distant Early Warning System (the DEW Line) will receive a tape of the game.

—Sailors who can do without many things won't be doing without Super Bowl XIV. A company called "Ships at Sea" will peddle tapes to the itinerant oil tankers in the Atlantic and Pacific.

—American workers in ex-patriate communities, like Aramco's compound in Saudi Arabia and Phillips Petroleum in Staavanger, Norway, won't be missing this annual piece of Americana, either.

—Even someone stuck in the Australian outback community of Puckapunyal will see the Steelers and the Rams. That community is so far away from modern civilization that a TV signal is unavailable. But one can get a video-cassette recorder and Trans World International (TWI) will send in a cassette of the game.

TWI, a world-wide producer and distributor of TV shows, holds the foreign rights — except Canada and Mexico — for the Super Bowl. Some of TWI's international clients for this game include Australia — the only one to ask for the halftime show — Venezuela, Guatemala, Saudi Arabia, Hong Kong, Thailand and Korea.

Marathon ace favors boycott

HOUSTON (AP) — British marathoner Chris Stewart has been training rigorously the past eight years for a chance to represent his country in the 1980 Olympics.

Stewart missed chances to compete in the 1972 and 1976 Olympics because of untimely injuries and now at the age of 33, he may be facing his last chance.

Despite those gruelling years of preparation and disappointment, Stewart says his country should boycott the Olympics in Moscow if the United States carries out such a threat because of the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan.

"It would be a terrible disappointment not to run in the Olympics this year," said Stewart, scheduled to compete Saturday in the Houston Marathon.

"But what is happening now in our world is too serious for athletes to put too much emphasis on their minor goals. If the farmers of Iowa are willing to sacrifice for the sake of a grain embargo, surely we athletes should be willing to sacrifice."

Stewart says his travels throughout the world to run in marathons has given him a first hand view of world politics.

Linda Fratianne wins 4th title

ATLANTA (AP) — Linda Fratianne skated tentatively but still beat Lisa-Marie Allen for her fourth consecutive women's national title at the U.S. Figure Skating Championships., collecting seven ordinals and 150.74 points.

Three-time defending champion Charlie Tickner was nearly flawless in the short program with 72.04 points to establish a commanding lead in the men's event. David Santee moved into second place with 70.68 points.

MEMORABLE MOMENT -- Japanese teenage girls in high school uniform pose with a big smile for a picture, making their hands look like a shape of "wings", British rock group, whose leader is in trouble. They waited patiently outside the Tokyo District Public Prosecutor's Office in hope to take a glance at their super star Paul McCartney Friday as McCartney was questioned at the office for marijuana possession. The unidentified fans with the now useless tickets for a Wings' concert, for which they paid about $20 each, said they love Paul and Wings but don't know about Beatles.

Baylor student attends leadership lab

A Big Spring resident was one of 63 Baylor University students who attended the Leakey Leadership Lab Jan. 2-6 at the H.E. Butt Ranch near Leakey, Texas.

Roanne Kay Riley, P.O. Box 54, was a delegate to the five-day session sponsored annually by Baylor's student government. Delegates were selected from applicants who have demonstrated leadership potential on the Baylor campus.

Based on the assumption that leadership is primarily a learned behavior, the lab is structured to help each delegate learn more about his or her personal leadership qualities. Self-evaluation, planning and goal setting are also stressed to help students develop potential in problem-solving and decision-making processes.

Get ready for spring projects at library

By REBBECCA TAYLOR
Reference Librarian

The spate of Spring-like weather in Big Spring has turned many thoughts in the direction of gardening, Spring cleaning and home repair and improvement. Rather than retreat to your favorite fishing hole, drop by the Howard County Library and pick up some sound help with those Spring projects. The time to plan is now. The library has just received 19 volumes of the new "Time-Life Home Repair and Improvement" series.

Two volumes have been devoted to the touchy subject of electrical wiring. "Basic Wiring," goes into such fundamental topics as how to identify a "hot" wire without being "burned". Simple safety rules combined with a basic understanding of how electricity works are emphasized. Easy projects such as changing light fixtures and switches and adding outlets are covered in detail with clear illustrations.

Other basic skills volumes include: "Advanced Wiring," "Working With Wood," "Plumbing" and "Masonry." From these foundation volumes, the series expands to "Roofs and Siding," "Heating and Cooling," "Paint and Wallpaper," and "Floors and Stairways."

Although the entire series is project oriented, the ten remaining volumes combine learned skills into such projects as adding a bathroom, in "Kitchens and Bathrooms," and installing a burglar alarm, in "Home Security." Other books include, Weatherproofing, "Doors and Windows," "Built-Ins," and "Space and Storage."

The most extensive of the project guides include: "Outdoor Structures," "Adding On," "The Old House" and "Cabins and Cottages." Some of the projects included in this series are: building storage and patio structures; making both minor and major additions to your house; buying and refurbishing the older home; and building small cabins or cottages of a variety of materials.

Cliff Richard: Perrenial rock 'n roller in England

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock 'n' roll sure has changed in the last two decades, or has it? Veteran British pop idol Cliff Richard has been watching the competition come and go since the late 1950s and the current crop of new groups is giving him a definite case of deja vu.

"The crowd in England — the punk crowd, new wave — who came out and said, 'This is new,' I mean, they're just kidding themselves, really," says Richard, who's been churning out hit records everywhere but in the United States since he started swiveling his hips ala elvis more than 20 years ago.

"When I heard some of the early punk stuff, I thought, The Who did this stuff 10 years ago. People want to find something new and basically there isn't anymore, really.

"I don't think we need anything new," he adds. "I think rock 'n' roll is such a wide spectrum of music that there's no way you can ever get bored or run out of it. There's only good and bad stuff, that's all."

If record sales are any indication of quality, Richard's recordings certainly fall into the former category. He's reportedly made more money for the giant British record company, EMI, than any other act except the Beatles — and Richard had almost no help at all from Americans.

"I suppose I've been the most consistent artist they've (EMI) had," he says. "The Beatles had so many fantastic smash hits. I mean, my career's not been peppered by No. 1s. They did tally up the score and I think it was like 70 Top 30 hits.

"We're talking about Europe and the rest of the world, because the U.S. has remained elusive for me," he adds. "I've really only had, as far as I'm concerned, two record successes here."

One, "Devil Woman," reached No. 5 on the U.S. charts in 1976; the second, the title cut from his current album, "We Don't Talk Anymore," has prompted Richard's current assault on American shores. When he was interviewed at the Hollywood offices of his American label, the single had cracked the Top 10.

At 39, Richard — whose boyish good looks these days are more evocative of John Denver than of Richard's early inspiration, Elvis — has a take-or-leave-it attitude towards the American market.

It's an attitude he can well afford. Aside from all those hit records and lucrative concerts, Richard also has starred in films, plays and, at one point, his own television series. Making it in the U.S. would pretty much be icing on the cake.

Snooky Lanson recalls 'Your Hit Parade' show

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — It's Saturday night in the mid-1950s. Dad's in his easy chair, Mom has finished the dishes and the kids are lounging on the living room floor.

The family has settled down for a weekend ritual — watching "Your Hit Parade" on television.

Snooky Lanson, a regular on the show from 1950 through 1957, is 65 today, sells outdoor advertising and has Medicare. Lanson, who replaced Frank Sinatra on the program, recalls the show with affection he usually reserves for his five grandchildren.

"I remember the good times we had," the white-haired, personable Lanson said in a luncheon interview. "We had a lot of fun; I couldn't wait to get back to work again every Saturday. I was always anxious to see what songs I'd do the next week."

Lanson was the show's only male star, except for Russell Arms. Female singers included Dorothy Collins, Polly Bergen, Gisele MacKenzie, Eileen Wilson and June Valli.

After Lanson and other regulars on the show were dropped from the cast in 1957, he sang in nightclubs and was host of television variety shows in Atlanta and Shreveport, La.

He still sings at tea dances and similar functions, and has a syndicated radio show that plays big band music. For the past 12 years,, he's lived in Nashville, where people still recognize him from his "Hit Parade" days.

"I have a face you can't forget," he chuckled.

He said he believes the show was successful because it was family oriented and because those on the program worked well together.

"The show didn't have any stars per se and we all got along well," he recalled. "It was very clean and there was no suggestive dancing; a 5-or 6-year-old could watch it. And of course a lot of people watched it to see what song was No. 1 that week."

The show counted down the top songs of the week and included "extras." Among the songs Lanson recalled singing were "Ebb Tide," "He" and "Mr. Sandman."

"I sang 'Mona Lisa' 13 straight weeks because it was a man's song and I was the only man on the show then," he said.

The program was revived a few years ago but didn't last long.

"They did it just as we did it and the consensus was they should have updated it," Lanson said. "I saw it twice and thought it was very good, but of course I'm prejudiced."

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, JANUARY 20, 1980

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good time to go directly to those who are in a position to help you reach financial goals. Let them know what you have in mind and then carry through with their suggestions. You are able to gain advancement by applying yourself mentally, too.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Let your contacts know what they can do to help you more in your endeavors and get good results. Do the research work necessary for the information you need, but pay particular attention to details.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Getting a new plan in operation that will improve your monetary and practical structure is wise now. Consult with an expert if you have any doubts. Take no chances with one who talks too much.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Know what it is you want from others and you can get it with less trouble than usual. A good time to either extend or accept social invitations.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) People in the business world who were cool to your ideas and desires are now willing to listen. Take advantage of it. Take time to be with loved one more.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Let friends and loved ones know how you feel. Don't take them for granted. Avoid an unscrupulous associate who could cause you trouble.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Pleasing a bigwig could get you the support you need at this time. Avoid unnecessary expenditures of money.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Put those ideas to work that will give you a chance to improve conditions around you. Make new contacts who have the information you need.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get the support of one who means a great deal to you and increase mutual happiness. Keep promises you have made to others. Unexpected but welcome invitation is likely to come.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do what you can to improve relations with co-workers. Be more willing to do what they want. A public affair arises that is favorable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Put that organizational ability you possess to work and get ahead faster in your routine work. Have talks with co-workers and gain their cooperation. Spend some time with loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Use spare time for recreational endeavors. Cultivate friendships that could lead to more success. Take the lead with others.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Find a better way of handling affairs at home so that all is more comfortable there. Entertain at home with good results.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY...he or she will be very articulate and will need a fine education in order to put this gift to work. Plan now for academic work required. The mind here roams the universe and the interest in everything is so pronounced that almost anything can be mastered.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, JANUARY 21, 1980

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Spend time taking care of routine chores. There is an influence that is sudden and dramatic that can lift your spirits today so accept and make the best use of it as possible.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have many chores to take care of so don't waste the day on frivolous things. Listen to suggestions of an experienced person.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) In trying to attain a wish, you get the assistance of a dynamic friend and it is yours. Be more consistent in all of your pursuits.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have been procrastinating on obligations but must not do so any longer, so get busy on them. Check home for needed repairs.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be sure you have all the facts and figures before you enter into a new enterprise. A new contact gives you the right advice

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You are now able to carry through with promises made to others. Loved ones are most helpful to you. Avoid gossips.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Your partner knows best how to improve mutual affairs, so be sure to listen to ideas. Don't neglect responsibilities that are yours.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Show more thought for others and they become more friendly, helpful to you. Be careful not to lose your temper with others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A newcomer could bring happiness into your life today and help you to ease burdens. Avoid spending too much money.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A close family tie offers to back you in a project. See out the cause of disharmony at home and get rid of it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Look to a family member not living at home for the information you need now. Be alert in conversations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A higher-up gives you the right idea how to get out from under pressures. Much happiness possible at home with friends this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study new methods to help you become more organized. Stick to your principles, but try to be impartial in a family dispute.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY...he or she will do well either in business or in artistic endeavors. One who can whittle big projects down to a workable and logical level. This child will not care too much for sports but will love music.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Farm
Cotton ginning remains active

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Unseasonally warm winter weather is allowing farmers to get land in shape for spring planting and is also taking some of the pressure off livestock feeding, says Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Farmers have been making good progress with land preparation and the application of fertilizer and chemical weed killers, Pfannstiel said in his weekly crop report. But he said shortage of soil moisture is delaying some field work, particularly in South and West Texas.

Some farmers are also concerned about possible changes in government programs that could affect their planting decisions in the month ahead, Pfannstiel said. This could cause some delay in final land preparation.

While cotton harvesting is virtually complete, gins continue to run at full speed, with thousands of bales still fieldstored in modules in West Texas and the Plains, he said. Harvesting of sugar cane and soybeans remains active in the Rio Grande Valley along with some harvesting of winter vegetables and citrus.

The state's livestock picture remains generally stable, with most animals in fair to good condition. Although dry conditions have hampered green grazing on small grain pastures and fields, livestock generally have fared well so far due to the mild winter. Supplemental feeding continues widespread over the state. Many ranches are getting stock prepared for the upcoming livestock show circuit.

Reports from district Extension agents showed the following conditions:

PANHANDLE — Cotton harvesting is virtually complete, but ginning continues since some cotton was field-stored in modules. Dry conditions are hampering wheat growth so livestock have little grazing. Cattle are in fair to good shape, with feeding active. Farmers are beginning to prepare cropland for the spring planting season.

SOUTH PLAINS — Lack of moisture across the area continues to restrict growth of dryland wheat. Irrigated wheat is providing grazing for cattle. Livestock and range conditions are generally fair. Cotton ginning remains active, with thousands of bales still field-stored in modules. Some land preparation is starting.

ROLLING PLAINS — Livestock feeding is generally heavy due to lack of green grazing of small grains. While the cotton harvest is complete, ginning will continue for some time as a lot of cotton has been field-stored in modules. Farmers are beginning to get land prepared for spring planting. Soil moisture is short in southern counties but is good over northern sections.

FAR WEST — Cotton ginning remains active due to the large amount of the crop that was field-stored in modules. Carrot-processing is in full swing in Reeves County. Farmers are busy getting cropland in shape for spring planting while ranchers continue to feed livestock. Calving and lambing are making good progress.

WEST CENTRAL — Recent scattered rains gave some life to small grains. Some farmers have just planted wheat due to the rains.

SAN DIEGO WILD ANIMAL PARK — Preserving and reproducing endangered species of exotic and rare animals of Africa and Asia and providing family entertainment of the highest order is their calling.

Endangered species saved

Wild Animal Park duplicates Africa

By MICKIE DICKSON

A visit to the San Diego Wild Animal Park on Dec. 28 proved to be a lesson in conservation and afforded a vicarious visit to Africa that is unforgettable. The park is an 1,800-acre preserve where many species of exotic animals may be seen in surroundings like those of their native homelands.

The park is located 30 miles north of San Diego, Calif., in San Pasqual Valley, yet still within the city limits. The park not only offers superb family entertainment but is a major scientific animal research center where 17 of 25 endangered species of animals, have reproduced, with a 75 percent success rate. Numerous births have been recorded among endangered species such as Lowland Gorillas, South African Cheetahs, Arabian Oryx, Addax, Slender-horned Gazelles, Scimitar-horned Oryx and Przewalski's Wild Horses, all animals that are extremely rare in the wild. The Jerene Appleby Harnish Wild Animal Station for Medical Care and Research is dedicated to the maintenance of health and scientific observation of Park residents.

The Zoological Society of San Diego broke ground in 1960 for development of the Park which opened to the public in May 1972. The Zoological Society has a long history in conservation of animals and the wilderness places in which they live. This second campus of the San Diego Zoo, one of the world's finest, operates as an integral part of the Zoo in Balboa Park.

Nairobi Village, with the circular, domed entry patterned after a unique African structure, the tomb of a Uganda king, is the visitor's first experience in the Wild Animal Park. Here, among African-inspired structures on this 17-acre expanse, are animal and special interest exhibits, food services, gift shops, amphitheatres for animal shows, the entrance to the Kilimanjaro Hiking Trail and Tropical America and a jungle biome with animals native to Central and South America. Enter the Village by walking through a towering Aviary which is a free-flight cage housing over 100 exotic birds mostly from East Africa, in a lush African setting of flowers, ponds and bridges.

The exotic waterfowl lagoons are the next exhibit with the Lesser Flamingos of the Great Rift Valley of East Africa, and three species of pelicans displayed.

The Congo River Fishing Village, like the primitive African structures which were used to support fishing traps and provide living platforms for a Congo River family's daily activities was created from native materials, and built over a torrential cataract which surges 10,000 gallons of water a minute into the lagoon below. The upper walkway leads to the plains of East Africa.

The fishing village's lower walkway is a vantage point for other lagoons which are home for many types of shore fowl and aquatic plants. Cross the fishing village to reach one of the Park's most popular exhibits, the Lowland Gorilla Colony, the animal who has been called a "gentle giant," from Central and West Africa.

Visitors can watch food preparation and the care of infant animals at the glass-fronted Animal Care Center. At the Kraal, young animals may be petted.

Along the banks of the main lagoon a variety of domestic and exotic fowl from Black Swans found only in West Australia to Bar-headed Geese which have been seen flying high above Mt. Everest, may be seen swimming together in complete compatibility.

Set amid the waterfowl lagoon is the Primate Island which is home to small primates such as monkeys throug[illegible]e year. These playful little [illegible] often reach down and scoop up a waterfowl, squeeze him, pulls some feathers and put him back in the water.

The Kilimanjaro Hiking Trail offers a delightful one-and-a-quarter-mile trail for a walking safari into East Africa. This is a photographer's paradise that leads to vistas of natural terrain with view of lions, tigers, cheetahs, giraffes and rhinos.

Four playful but very endangered Sumatran tigers, two male and two female which were received Oct. 17 from the East Berlin Zoo, may be seen. These animals, a little over a year old, will mature in two to three years, then the Wild Animal Park will acquire another female Sumatran tiger to round out the breeding group. A 1978 study, according to Dr. James Dolan, general curator of the Wild Animal Park, showed only 400 to 500 Sumatran tigers exist in their native habitat on the island of Sumatra. Only 142 are in captivity in zoos, and, until these four arrived in San Diego, only eight of these were in zoos in the United States.

Both sexes of Sumatran tigers are noted for the beautiful and distinct facial marking of bright black and orange stripes and their characteristically heavy tufts of hair around their jowls.

These youngsters can be seen on a three-acre parcel with plenty of bushes and trees to provide plenty of camouflage for them to practice their stalking techniques and a new pond. In addition, the trees will enable the male tigers to mark the boundaries of their personal domain by spraying urine, a natural and necessary aspect to reproductive behavior.

The Amphitheater is the home of the Elephant Revue, the 1,500 seat shaded arena which hosts daily shows free to visitors in the Nairobi Village. Don, the elephant trainer, put several Asian and African elephants through their paces. Talking constantly to them and working very slowly with them, he had them lifting logs with their trunks, pushing a cart, and balancing and walking around the eight inch wide ring curb, even turning around on it then lifting their hind feet up while standing on their fore feet. The oldest elephant was Nita, 30 years old and the youngest was Connie, 5½ and five-year-old Breezy, an African elephant.

The Mombasa Cooker with its dramatic, African-inspired towers and domes houses a snack bar and dining terrace with an adjoining picnic area, overlooking the main lagoon.

The International Shopping Bazaar is a world of beautiful handcrafts made by Asian and African artisans.

A trip on the Wgasa Bush-Line is one of the high points of a visit to the Park. This 50-minute, five-mile safari travels through East, North and South Africa and Asian Swamps and Plains, riding along in silent, electric monorail cars, viewing a total of 3,000 animals.

Visitors pass a large pride of nine African lions, lounging in a canyon enclosure, and African and Asian Elephants each in their own compounds. An experienced guide operates each of the Bush Line trains and points out the animals as the train moves along. The major animal enclosures, averaging 100 acres or more in size, enable the animals to live much as they would in their homeland. Part of the high veldt in East Africa are similar to the Park site, and people who have visited Africa say there is just one main difference in animal viewing, they can see more species (81) and see them far better at the Park than in Africa. Cape buffalo, several species of rhinoceroses, and the Sumatran tiger who is really the 'king of the jungle' instead of the lion, according to our guide, are viewed. Peacocks and peahens, antelope, topi, the Southern Grevy's Zebra, Northeastern Africa, Grant's Zebra of Eastern Africa and Hartmann's Mountain Zebra of Southern Africa are seen.

Further on the monorail passengers view the Indian Swamp Deer, the Malayan Sandbar Deer who is a good swimmer, the Siberian Elk, the Armoured Rhinoceros and the Bison from India that weigh up to 3,500 pounds and run 30-35 miles an hour.

An endangered species, the Arabian Oryx, subject of a centuries-old legend about the mythical unicorn, is seen. These are a part of the World Herd of nearly 100 animals in herds at the San Diego Zoo, the Phoenix Zoo and the Gladys Porter Zoo in Brownsville, Tex. as well as at the Park.

Since the herd was established in 1972 there have been 44 Arabian oryx births at the Wild Animal Park. The goal of reintroducing this beautiful desert animal to its native habitat, the Jordanian desert, can now be realized through the efforts of conservation groups worldwide.

The Nilgai, largest of Asiatic antelopes who are referred to as Blue Bulls, appear next. The females are tan in color and have no horns. The Persian gazelle is next from East and North African desert areas. The Wildebeest or Gnu, the largest of the 41 species of antelope and the Impala appear next, the giraffe grow 18 feet tall.

The South African, the world's largest bird, Ostrich flock is viewed next. Contrary to popular belief, these birds do not hide their heads in the sand when danger approaches for they would suffocate just like other animals if they did.

The Przewslski's Horse, an ancestor of the domestic horse, native to the Mongolian foothills, is the next endangered species encountered. Several of these wild horses have been born at the Wild Animal Park where a herd of the stocky, light-colored horses lives on a five-acre expanse.

The Adax, a true desert animal and an endangered species who never needs to drink water, getting what he needs from plants; the Cape Hartebeest of South Africa, the Rhinoceros which weighs 90 to 130 pounds at birth, the Sable Antelope and the South African Gudu appear next.

Up in the surrounding rocky hills of the Wild Animal Park is "Maternity Rock" where many of the animals prefer to have their young.

The Giraffe, the tallest animal in the world which can grow to 18 feet, appears next. Giraffes have extremely keen vision and live throughout East and southern Africa where the acacia provides their favorite food.

The Waterbuck, White Rhinoceros, Cape Buffalo, the Eland of Central and southern Africa which is the largest of all antelopes, the Ellipsen Waterbuck and Senegal and Chad Dama Gazelle, the largest of the true gazellas and the Topi all appear.

The African elephant, the world's largest land animal and the Southern White Rhinoceros, a once endangered species which has been saved from extinction due to conservation efforts, the Roan Antelope and the Sable Antelope, the Springbok, the Northern White Rhinoceros and the Lowland Nyala along with the Whitetailed Gnu are in evidence. Another endangered species is the Slender-horned Gazelle.

The North African Ground Hornbill, an intelligent and handsome bird and the Sacred Ibis, once worshipped by ancient Egyptians as the god Thoth who hatched the earth as an egg, are two of the birds on display.

In the Asian area of the park is found the Siberian Ibex which is found in the Himalayan Mountains and in Central American mountains. The Formosan Sike Deer from the island of Formosa and the Indian Rhinoceros sometimes called the armored Rhinoceros because of its heavy folds of skin which give the animal its distinctive armor-plated appearance. It is an endangered species. The original pair of Eld's Deer at the Pak has produced a female calf. The trio is one of only two groups of Eld's Deer in the U.S.

The Sarus Crane and the Hooded Crane are on the list of endangered species. The Sarus, the largest of all cranes (50 inches) lives in India, Burma and Thailand. A few hundred Hooded Cranes still live in Japan and Siberia.

The Saiga Antelope, once almost extinct on the Russian Steppe, has increased into the tens of thousands because of protection. The Indian Elephant, smaller than its African relatives, has been domesticated for centuries. It has played both work and religious roles in Asian societies.

The original home of the Bengal Tiger is in North and Central Asia. All species of tigers are considered endangered.

Several species of deer, including the Pere David's Deer which has been extinct in the wild since time immemorial, appear here. The Malayan Sambar, the Luzon Sambar and the Indian Axis Deer with its spotted coat and the Indian Blackbuck which never shed its horns as do the others, are here.

The Javan Banteng and the Indian Gaur are both true wild oxen and are among the endangered animals. The Water Buffalo, or Carabao, has been domesticated for thousands of years and are native to Asia.

Many more exotic animals are in the Wild Animal Park than there is space to mention here.

A significant study of the reproductive patterns of Cheetahs, an endangered species, and one of Africa's great and most unusual cats, is progressing successfully in an area separate from exhibits open to the public. Other breeding programs are underway with the white rhinoceros, lowland gorillas and the Nene Geese, a native of Hawaii.

Only 600 acres of the 1,800 acres available to the Wild Animal Park are being used at this time which seems astounding for the number of animals displayed there.

Wedding vows recited before fireplace scene

Jennifer Renee Jennings became the bride of Harmon Ray Rye in a double-ring wedding ceremony performed Jan. 11 in the home of the bride's parents.

Phillip Burcham, Knott, read the 7:30 p.m. rite before a circular fireplace flanked on either side by brass candlesticks holding white tapers. Baskets of greenery set atop the hearth and mantel enhanced the nuptial setting.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie R. Jennings, 810 Kent. Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Montgomery, 1510 State Park, Big Spring, and Mr. and Mrs. David Earl Rye, Clovis, Calif., are the parents of the groom.

The bride chose to wear a white floor-length gown of Victorian style which featured a sheer yoke trimmed with a wide lace ruffle. The bodice was accentuated by a lace-edged stand-up collar and long sleeves which ended in lace ruffles. The three-tiered skirt was embellished with satin ribbon inserts at the waistline, ending in a bow at the back.

She carried a cascading bouquet of white glamelias atop a white Bible that belonged to her late grandfather, B.Y. Dixon, and a seed-pearl handkerchief with a penny holder which was made by her aunt, Mrs. E.G. Locklar, Odessa.

Mrs. Lane Brewster, Van Horn, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. She carried a floral bouquet of white glamelias. Ricky Acuff attended the groom as best man.

Immediately following the rite, Mr. and Mrs. Rye were feted with a reception in the home.

The bride's table was covered in light blue overlaid with white lace. Appointments of crystal and silver were used at the table accented by a centerpiece of light blue carnations and white spider mums.

The three-tiered wedding cake was decorated with iridescent pearl grapes, birds and bells featuring a cherub and hanging iridescent bells between the first and second layers.

Serving were Mrs. Brewster and Tammi Burcham.

Out-of-town guests attended from Van Horn, Abilene and Andrews.

The bride is a Big Spring High School graduate and employed by K-Mart in the Advertising Department. The groom is attending Big Spring High School and is presently employed by Furr's Supermarket.

The couple will be at home in Big Spring upon returning from a wedding trip to San Angelo.

FEMINIST HEROINE AND RELIGIOUS OUTCAST — Sonia Johnson who five weeks ago was excommunicated from the Mormon church for her beliefs in the Equal Rights Amendment is shown at her home in Sterling, Va. recently looking at the large amount of mail she has received in the weeks since her split with her church. Mrs. Johnson says that her life as a Mormon-in-exile is not a comfortable one but she still goes to her old church.

Mrs. Huff feted at baby shower

Hostesses presented mother-to-be Amy Huff with a car seat when they honored her with a recent baby shower in the home of Gail Zilai, 4041 Vicky.

Other hostesses, in addition to Mrs. Zilai, were Tammy Thompson, Patsy Pettitt, Donna Campbell, Ruby Englert, Patty Caffey and Doris Harris.

The guest of honor and her mother, Mrs. Dolores LeVeir, received corsages of pink, yellow and blue carnations.

The refreshment table was decorated with pink, yellow and blue cloth decorated with baby blocks. Yellow cake and baby bootie mints were served to those attending.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Huff, 2406 Alamesa, are expecting baby Huff near the end of February.

'Illegal' birds are now sold legally

Healthy birds brought illegally into the United States may now be sold at public auction under amendments to U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) import regulations. Until now, rules called for the destruction of such birds because of inadequate quarantine facilities where they could be tested for foreign poultry diseases.

USDA facilities at Mission, Tex., Miami, Fla., and New York, N.Y. will be used to quarantine these birds. Those found healthy will be allowed to enter the country and will be sold to recover quarantine costs. After Jan. 15, new bird quarantine stations at nine ports will also be used. That is the date USDA's new rules requiring a 30-day quarantine of personally owned pet birds takes effect.

Birds on the U.S. Department of the Interior's threatened or endangered species list will also be allowed entry under the amendments. While they cannot be sold to private individuals, they can be transported to permanent quarantine facilities, such as zoos designated by the Department of the Interior.

Veterinarians with USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service say the rule changes will save the lives of thousands of smuggled birds.

The amendments were proposed on March 30, 1979, and all comments received were in favor of it. They will become effective upon publication in the Jan. 15 Federal Register. Copies of the rule are available from the Import Staff, APHIS, USDA, 6505 Belcrest Road, Hyattsville Md. 20782.

Entry of exotic birds is restricted to prevent the introduction of contagious diseases of poultry and other birds — especially exotic Newcastle disease. This fatal and highly contagious disease has been brought into the country several times in recent years. Each outbreak was eliminated by State-Federal task forces.

School nurse can help abused friend

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: Please, please answer my letter in the newspaper. My good friend is being physically abused by his parents. He has told me things they have done to him, and I'm shocked (I can see the bruises and cuts). It's getting worse but he is afraid to tell anyone and doesn't want me to do anything, but I feel I should. Hurry, please write your answer. — Tom, Colorado Springs, Colo.

Tom: Go to your school nurse and share with her your friend's physical condition. She will know what to do. School nurses rank with the best in educational circles. If you are not fortunate to have a nurse at your school, talk to your principal.

Dr. Wallace: I'm a 13-year-old girl who is very confused. At school, I really like a certain teacher and I want to go out with him even though I know that he is married.

I know this sounds stupid but that's how I feel. My friends think that I'm crazy but I think I love him. He is so cute and foxy. — C.R., Columbus, Ohio

C.R.: You're not crazy. Many young ladies have crushes on a particular male teacher. But let me assure you that it is only a crush. Nothing will ever come of your infatuation except that this teacher probably likes you as a student and wants you to excel academically.

Dr. Wallace: I like this certain guy and finally got him to ask me out. Last year I also liked him and sent him notes signed "your secret admirer."

He never found out that I was the one who was sending the notes. Should I tell him or should I keep quiet? — Maria, Elizabethtown, Ky.

Maria: As long as you got what you wanted, why take any chances? I say, keep quiet.

Marriage breaks up

Ex-Mormon suffers yet another crisis

STERLING, Va. (AP) — Excommunication from the Mormon Church has brought Sonia Johnson triumph and strain. Her latest trauma is the breakup of her marriage.

She is a heroine to feminists, yet the object of scorn at her church.

"It's grim," Mrs. Johnson says. "I feel spiritually amputated."

Suddenly, all the world is knocking on her door: She's had to install a second telephone; the letters arrive 100 at a time; she is in constant demand to speak out for the proposed Equal Rights Amendment.

But at home, life as a Mormon-in-exile is not comfortable. She still goes to her old church, she says, "but it's painful."

When the bishop's wife stood up at services and thanked everyone for sustaining her and her husband during the excommunication ordeal, Mrs. Johnson says she wondered, "What about my ordeal?"

"Excommunication is just the ultimate rejection," she says with a shake of her head. "It just says, 'We don't want you,' no matter how much they say they love me."

And, adding to her torment, she and her husband, Richard, a statistics professor, have separated.

It is a coincidence, she says, that the rift in her marriage and the rift within her church occurred together.

"I guess we just both had crises at the same time. This whole family has been under tremendous pressure. I don't want to attribute it to the excommunication business," she says. "But it didn't help."

Mrs. Johnson, 43, president of Mormons for ERA, college English teacher and mother of four, feels she is in "a terrific battle" with church authorities in Salt Lake City, who portray the ERA as a threat to the family.

She fears her enemies will use her marital strains as an object lesson of what feminism does to a family.

That wasn't the case in her home, she says.

"He really is a feminist," she says of her husband. "He stuck it out when it was almost unbearable. He still stays with the children when I'm traveling around for ERA. He couldn't be better."

Odessa will have its Spring Art Show in March with J. Warren Cullar as judge. Entry date is March 10 with a luncheon at Holiday Inn in Odessa for participants on March 12, at which time Cullar will give a watercolor demonstration.

Four workshops are available in the near future. Bill Huffaker will be at The Hitchin' Post on Feb. 1 and at The Treasure Chest on Feb. 2. J.D. Keel will conduct a workshop at The Treasure Chest Feb. 9 and 10 and Sherry Nelson will be at The Treasure Chest March 11 and 12.

Members were urged to visit the Diamond M. Museum in Snyder. The museum is open 9-12 a.m. and 1-4 p.m. each Monday through Friday.

Bess Wagner introduced Gilbert Webb who gave a demonstration on stretching canvas on stretchers so that it is unusually tight. Artists received several pointers on "how-to-do-it-yourself." Members then drew for the completed canvas which was won by Martha Conway.

Tipping of the Brush went to Paul Warren, first; Linda Rupard, second; and Letha Lewis, third.

Hostesses for the meeting were Pat Klotz and Jean Hensley.

Retired teachers to meet

The Big Spring-Howard County Retired Teachers Association will hold its January luncheon in the Howard College Cactus Room on Jan. 21 at 11:45 a.m.

Guest speaker will be Richard Doane of the Big Spring Police Department. He will speak on crime prevention.

Solar energy today's dream

President Mrs. Bert Affleck presided when members of the Modern Woman's Forum met Jan. 11 in the Men's Bible Class Room at First United Methodist Church.

Mrs. Woody Smith, Veteran's Administration Volunteer Service representative of the Western District, received a letter from Annie Branson, VAVS representative for the American Legion Auxiliary thanking the club for its contribution to the Christmas Gift Shop at the Veterans Administration Medical Center.

Mrs. Fred Whitaker, federation counselor, reported on the International Affairs Department and said the club's aim is to unite and become more knowledgeable and vocal in the foreign policy of our country in international affairs generally.

A program on conservation was presented by Mrs. C.R. Moad who chose as her topic "Solar Energy — Today's Dream, Tomorrow's Reality."

"To meet its energy needs," Mrs. Moad said, "America's long-range goal must be to make itself self-sufficient as possible. This was one of the chief aims of the National Energy Act passed in October."

She continued saying current energy resources consist largely of fossil fuel — coal, oil and natural gas — which are the more plentiful but exhaustible and come at a much high price.

Various approaches have been suggested to provide for the future needs of a healthy U.S. Economy, including the development of an inexhaustible resource such as solar energy.

Mrs. Moad explained that energy from inexhaustible resources can be harnessed by converters directly from the sun's rays as by solar satellites which will transmit electricity to earth by microwave.

The fuel from solar energy is free and inexhaustible. Its development as a resource will free the planet from pollution and from dependence on foreign energy sources.

Solar energy, according to Mrs. Moad, is one of the most talked about 'exotic' energy forms, a source which virtually hasn't been tapped in contrast to its abundant supply.

"But it's happening in here and now — it's today's dream and tomorrow's reality," Mrs. Moad concluded.

Mrs. B.M. Keese conducted an "Enviro Quiz" at the end of Mrs. Moad's presentation. Each member participated.

The next meeting will be Jan. 25 at K-Bob's Restaurant with Mrs. Fred Whitaker as hostess.

Morrison guest speaker

The Big Spring Credit Women's Club met Jan. 17 at Alberto's Cafe for a noon meeting. Twelve members were present.

President Mary Lynn Welch presided.

Helen Mahoney introduced the guest speaker, Walton S. Morrison, who spoke on "Legislation — So You Want To Pass A State Law."

Sara Beth Read won the Capsule Fund.

Handcraft club invites Newcomers

Newcomers to Big Spring are invited to the next meeting of the Newcomer's handcraft Club which will be held Wednesday at 9 a.m. in the home of Mrs. Mildred Beckom, 2809 Navajo.

The agenda will include 1 election of new officers; planning of projects for 1980; and planning of the Annual Coffee offered every year to newcomers.

Members are urged to bring friends who may be interested in joining the Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Campbell, Hobbs, N.M., announce the birth of their first child, Craig Alan, in the Lea County Hospital.

The infant made his debut Jan. 14 at 6:40 p.m. weighing 6 pounds 15 ounces and measuring 22 inches in length.

Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Collins, Big Spring. Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Campbell, also of Big Spring, are the paternal grandparents.

Craig also has great-grandparents including Bess Walston, Big Spring; Mr. and Mrs. J.C. Allmand, Abilene; and Mr. and Mrs. C.A. Campbell and Mrs. W.A. McDonald, all of Pudacah.

The new mother is the former Karen Collins. Both she and her husband are former Big Spring residents.

Longs to celebrate Golden Anniversary

The Golden Wedding Anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Kim W. Long will be observed with a reception Jan. 27 from 2-4 p.m. in the Cap Rock Electric Auditorium, Stanton.

Hosts and hostesses for the occasion will be the couple's children and grandchildren, including Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Stroud, Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Hale, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Ballard, Mr. and Mrs. Kimmie Long and Dr. and Mrs. Julian McDonald.

Kim Long was born in Brady, Tex. to the late Mr. and Mrs. R.W. Long, Knott. He married the former Vallie M. Shugart on Jan. 2, 1930. She was born in Albany, Tex., the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. T.M. (Tom) Shugart.

The couple were married in their pastor's yard in the Knott Community. They are the parents of Jerry Stroud and Clairese Hale, both of Stanton; Ethel Lee (Peggy) Ballard, Big Spring; Betty Lue McDonald, Abilene and Kimmie J. Long, Big Spring.

They have 14 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

Before retiring, Long was involved in ranching, farming and service station operating. The two have been residents of Martin, Howard and Glasscock counties.

All friends and relatives of the couple are invited to help them celebrate the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary.

MR. AND MRS. KIM LONG

Engagement announced

Mr. and Mrs. H.C. Blackshear, Sterling City Rt., Box T15, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Debra Elaine, to Jimmy Boyd Wallace.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Barney Wallace, Roscoe, Tex. The wedding date has been set for Jan. 26 in the Blackshear home on Jeffery Rd.

Chaplain Lee Butler will officiate.

Dear Abby

She's Jiving Them Crazy

DEAR ABBY: After being a very lonely widower for four years, Dad married last year. He is 87 and in good health. His wife (I'll call her Maria) is 80. Maria is good-natured, pleasant, and not a stupid woman, but she is a non-stop talker. This woman can talk indefinitely unless someone rudely interrupts her and takes over. (I clocked her once, and she talked incessantly for an hour and 55 minutes!)

Everyone in the family has run out of excuses to avoid being in Maria's company, which means staying away from Dad, too.

We passed up Thanksgiving and Christmas with Dad because we couldn't take Maria.

She does make a nice home for Dad, and being a rather quiet and patient man, he seems happy with her.

We feel slightly guilty for not seeing Dad because of his wife, but we don't know how else to handle it. Any suggestions?

This letter is signed by his two daughters and their husbands.

ANONYMOUSLY YOURS

DEAR ANONYMOUSLY: Nothing in this life is free. If you want to give your father the pleasure of your company (and you should), the price is tolerating Maria.

Non-stop talkers usually talk compulsively because silence embarrasses them. Don't hesitate to break in and good-humoredly ask Maria to yield the floor to someone else. Don't let a talkative woman deprive your father of the company of his children.

DEAR ABBY: I received a phone call yesteday from my sister-in-law who returned last week from a trip to the Orient.

She said, "I brought you a gift — when can you come over and pick it up?

Abby, we both drive, and it's no easier for me to pick it up than it is for her to deliver it.

I don't like misunderstandings or ill feelings with relatives, so I went over and picked it up. Not that it matters, but it was some cheap little thing (made in Hong Kong) that you see in every gift shop in town.

My husband said I was foolish to have picked it up — I should have just let it sit over there until SHE delivered it. What do you think?

STEAMED IN PHOENIX

DEAR STEAMED: To have let the gift "sit there" indefinitely would have made an awkward situation worse.

DEAR ABBY: Your letter to INTIMIDATED BY SALESPEOPLE reminded me of something funny that happend to my daughter and me last Christmas.

We were leaving the house to go shopping and I decided to take one of my plastic shopping bags. We had quite a bit of shopping to do, so my daughter took one, too.

If you want to get waited on in a hurry, just carry a large empty shopping bag into a department store! The salespeople were coming out of the walls offering their assistance. But when we had filled the bags, locked them in the car and returned empty-handed, we were virtually ignored.

Try it sometime. It's hilarious.

DARING IN DENVER

Good typing a career plus

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Knowing how to type doesn't mean you'll forever be typecast as a secretary. In fact, the ability to type could be the key to unlocking a number of career opportunities, says the January issue of Seventeen Magazine.

Jobs such as library aide, public relations assistant, travel agent or cub reporter require the ability to type quickly and accurately. The ambitious worker shouldn't feel that flawless typing will keep her at the bottom of the corporate ladder. "The psychology of corporations is changing," says Irene Cohen, president of Irene Cohen Personnel Agency, in New York. "Many employers expect college grads to move on, so they build promotions into entry level jobs. A motivated employee may get first crack at openings within the company.

Berry's book covers administrative topics

AUSTIN — During the eight years Dr. Margaret Berry has served as editor of the Journal of the National Association for Women Deans, Administrators and Counselors, the most discussed topic in the journal has become that of women in educational administration.

In view of the growing concentration of interest, Dr. Berry was asked by the organization's board to collect and edit articles on the topic. The result is "Women in Higher Education Administration," a book of readings published recently by the association.

A longtime administrator at The University of Texas, Dr. Berry explains in the book's preface that the journal has reflected surges of social change throughout its history.

"Viewing human development and learning as lifelong processes, the leaders of our association have insisted on quality service at all levels of education through performance of functions such as guidance, counseling, advising, administration, research or teaching in an educational institution or agency," she writes.

The book of readings includes articles concerning all those levels of education.

Many of the articles had been published in the journal; however, some additional manuscripts also were added.

The 29 articles cover a wide range of administrative topics including performance of women principals; upward job mobility for women in elementary education; roadblocks to women's careers in educational administration, and interest and involvement of women in university governance.

Dr. Berry is currently director of the University Writings Collection and has wide range of administrative experience including service as associate dean of students and then director of developmental programs in the UT Austin office of the vice president for student affairs.

The book is designed for use in educational administration classes and women's studies.

From your answers she will be able to determine your specific problems and needs. And specify a simple and effective treatment ritual with their exclusive formulas.
