California race among primary surprises

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

Sen. James Abdnor survived a political shootout in the South Dakota Badlands while a moderate congressman from northern California outstripped conservative rivals from the southern part of the state to become the GOP nominee against Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston.

Rep. Ed Zschau, who spent $3 million on the California primary campaign, finished on top of a 13-candidate field.

With 91 percent of the statewide vote counted, Zschau had 640,360 votes, or 36 percent, while televison commentator Bruce Herschensohn had 523,393 votes, or 30 percent. Herschensohn conceded at 2:02 a.m. (PDT) and told Zschau: "Congratulations. Our job is to get behind you."

Los Angeles County Supervisor Mike Antonovich was third with 9 percent, Rep. Bobbi Fiedler had 7 percent and state Sen. Ed Davis had 7 percent. Eight other candidates split the remaining 13 percent.

As the votes were tallied from primaries in nine states Tuesday, the winners included Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, and Reuben Anderson, the first black to sit on the Mississippi Supreme Court.

Rodino defeated Newark Councilman Donald Payne, who argued it was time the district, which is nearly 60 percent black, had a black congressman.

Anderson easily turned back a challenge from arch conservative Richard Barrett.

The busiest primary day so far this election year set the field in two states — Alabama and South Dakota — where Democrats were most optimistic about unseating Republican senators.

Republicans name Cranston as the most vulnerable Democratic senator facing re-election.

Republican Gov. George Deukmejian of California and Democratic Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles brushed aside token opposition to square off for a repeat of their 1982 contest, in which Deukmejian won the governorship on the strength of a strong write-in vote.

California voters also approved an initiative that would limit liability claims in multi-defendant lawsuits.

Other states choosing candidates for governor were Alabama, Iowa, New Mexico and South Dakota.

Abdnor received 54 percent of the vote to fight off a challenge from Gov. William Janklow and now must face Democratic Rep. Tom Daschle in the general election in a state hit hard by the downturn in the farm economy.

Janklow had argued that he was challenging his former political ally because he didn't believe Abdnor could defeat Daschle.

In his victory speech, the South Dakota senator described the governor as "a formidable opponent."

"When the voters tell you it's time to quit, it's time to quit," Janklow said, adding that he had offered to help Abdnor in the general election.

In Alabama, Republican Sen. Jeremiah Denton was renominated over token opposition. Rep. Richard Shelby captured 52 percent of the vote against four opponents to win the Democratic Senate nomination.

In a gubernatorial primary shadowed by the retirement of Gov. George C. Wallace after nearly a quarter century as the dominant figure in Alabama politics, Lt. Gov. Bill Baxley and Attorney General Charles Graddick were forced into a June 24 runoff to determine the Democratic nominee.

Baxley received 36 percent of the vote and Graddick 30 percent to emerge from a five-candidate field.

Guy Hunt easily won the GOP primary, but the Democratic nominee will be heavily favored in a state which hasn't elected a Republican governor in 112 years.

TRC runoffs pit old names against interesting ones

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Is John Thomas Henderson a quixotic "mystery candidate" or simply a 78-year-old political nightmare for state Rep. Milton Fox, his GOP runoff opponent in the Texas Railroad Commission contest?

A low-key yet hard-hitting dialogue on that issue is dominating the Saturday runoff contest after Henderson, a four-time loser for a Railroad Commission seat who nearly upset Commissioner Mack Wallace in 1984, shocked Republican regulars by leading a strong four-man field in the May 3 primary.

Fox says Henderson "does not campaign actively. A Republican cannot win statewide office with a 'front porch' campaign."

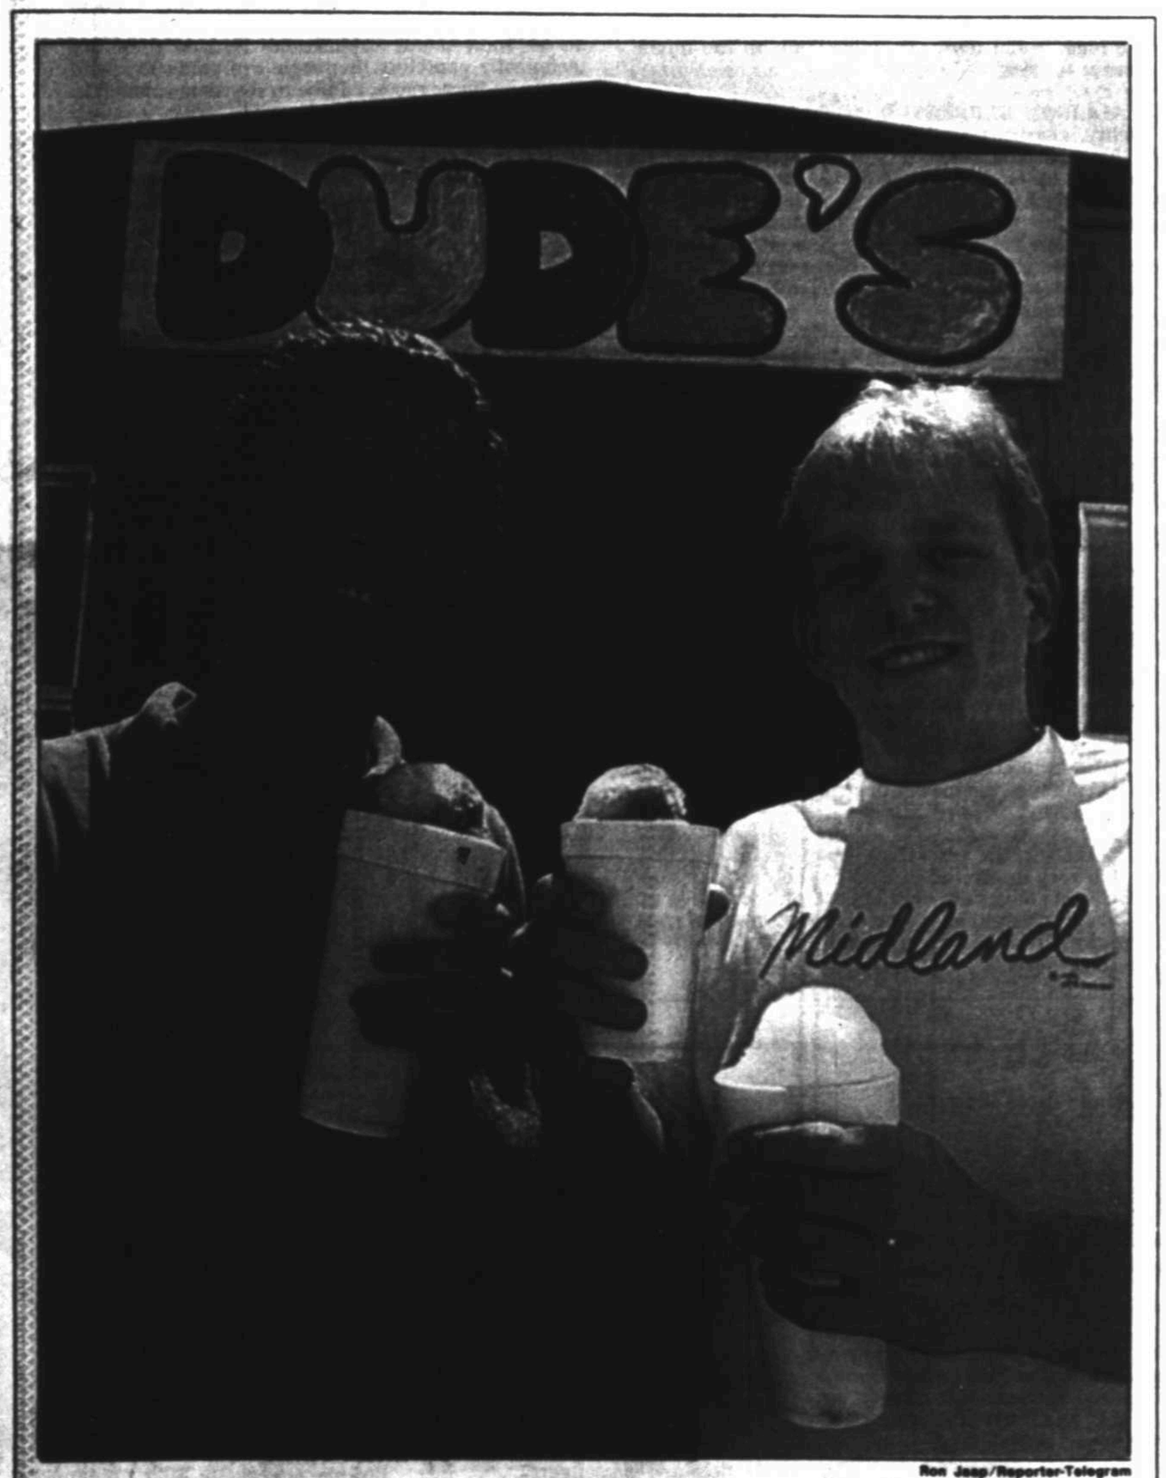

Fox, who says Henderson has "a nice soft-sounding Anglo name" that drew votes, says his experience as an oil engineer and legislator makes him better qualified than Henderson.

Henderson counters that he has earned good will, name recognition and a steadily rising number of votes during his four losses.

The one-time beauty supply wholesaler says he does not run high-profile campaigns because he refuses to accept campaign contributions on principle and does not believe he is important enough to call news conferences. He also says the recent illness of his wife, with whom he celebrated a 50th anniversary last month, has cut his campaigning time.

Fox, who earned 25.8 percent of the vote May 3 compared to Henderson's 29.9 percent, has picked up the endorsements of the third and fourth place finishers in the first primary: Kingwood state Rep. Ed Emmett, who had 25.1 percent, and Ralph Hoelscher, a farmer-rancher from Miles who had 19.2 percent.

Perry McIntosh, 20, left, and Dude Martin, 19, are paying their way through college by running their summer-time Dude's Snow-Cone Stand in Midland. Dude, who is keen on politics, entertains the idea of becoming president of the United States next century.

It started with a snow cone...

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Which president of the United States launched his ambitious career with a snow-cone stand at age 16 in Midland, Texas?

The answer, of course, is Edmond "Dude" Martin. He was first elected in 2004 at age 38 on a conservative platform which was packed with governmental, social and tax reforms.

Dude and his economic adviser, Perry McIntosh, paid their way through college and bought "wheels" (cars) with proceeds from their snow-cone stand, which was located off of a busy thoroughfare in northwest Midland.

In 1986, Perry was 20, and Dude was 19.

Midland, a phenomenon on the West Texas plains, was known as "The Tall City" where "The Sky's the Limit" in the boom-to-bust oil heydays in Texas in the 1900s. It also was a politically active town. It was also where Dude and his economic adviser were born, reared and introduced to politics.

The two formed a partnership in the late summer of 1983, when they bought the snow-cone operation.

Even then, back in the mid-1980s, Dude was a "very proud member" of the Republican Party and was aligned with the ultra-conservative Students for America at The University of Texas. At age 19, he became vice president of Beta Theta Pi, national fraternity. At UT, he majored in finance and minored in economics before he barreled through law school and returned to Midland to practice law and to delve deeper into politics. "I like money, I guess," he said.

Republicans lead absentee ballots in primary run-off

From Staff Reports

The Republicans turned out in relative force, but the Democrats just trickled in during absentee balloting for Saturday's run-off elections.

All told, 1,090 voted absentee in the primary run-off — 1,018 Republicans and 72 Democrats, according to the Midland County Elections Administrator's Office.

The Republicans had the edge in interest: a locally-contested race and a contested Congressional race. The Democrats here had neither.

The Republicans will select either C. Wallace "Wally" Craig, 62, or Guy McCrary, 32, as the party's nominee to run against Democrat Don Boydstun, 39, for Midland County Commissioner of Precinct 2 in the Nov. 4 general elections. Craig, the incumbent, is a real-estate broker. McCrary is a marketing consultant. Boydstun is a design technician.

Running for the Republican Party's nomination for U.S. Congressman of the 21st Congressional District are Van Archer and Lamar Smith. Winner of that race will oppose Democrat Pete Snelson in the November general elections.

In the primary elections last May, 1,791 Republicans and 364 Democrats voted absentee.

Absentee voting began May 28 and ended Tuesday.

'Martyrs' Day' rally held at Sikhs' Golden Temple

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — More than 5,000 Sikhs rallied at the Golden Temple today, the second anniversary of the bloody army assault on their holiest shrine, denouncing the government and demanding the ouster of Punjab's chief minister.

The "Martyrs' Day" rally was the first public forum shared by Sikh moderates and extremists in several years. Authorities responded to the rally and to what the Sikhs called "Genocide Week" by deploying some 3,000 police and paramilitary officers around the temple and on the highways leading to it.

In a rare show of unity, the Sikhs gathered today demanded the ouster of Punjab Chief Minister Surjit Singh Barnala for ordering a second raid on the temple April 30, calling it a "brazen sin." They also passed resolutions calling for a political settlement of the Punjab crisis.

"Barnala cannot be the leader of the Sikh masses," said one resolution. "Now it is Barnala's turn, but who will kill him remains to be seen," said Kuldip Singh, leader of the Damdami Taksal religious school, one of several speakers at the rally.

The speakers also called for the removal of the high priests who forgave Barnala for the April raid on the temple.

"There can be no peace in Punjab unless there is a political settlement of the crisis," said a resolution. "Such a settlement is possible only if the government stops its repression in Punjab."

The rally selected a fugitive wanted for terrorist killings as the highest priest of Sikhism. Gurbachan Singh Manochail, whose arrest carries a reward of $8,000, was not present. But at least a dozen other fugitives were at the noisy but nonviolent gathering.

The rally frequently was interrupted by shouts of, "We will create Khalistan," the name given to a separate state demanded by radical Sikhs.

Texas is 'Open for Business'

AUSTIN (AP) — An advertising and marketing program by Texas officials will counter negative publicity about the state's economic problems and attract new industry, officials said.

Titled, "Texas — Open for Business," the campaign will be funded by $275,000 in state economic development money and up to $600,000 in private contributions, said Jay Kayne, deputy director of the Texas Economic Development Commission.

The Bright Side

"We are trying to respond to some of the negative information that has been going around about Texas in the national press," Kayne said Tuesday. "We also want to explode some Texas myths, like Texas is all oil and cattle.

"We don't think that a lot of people know that 8 percent of the employment in the Dallas-Fort Worth area is directly related to the aviation business," he said. "That's a good relocation area for folks in that business."

He said Bonner Inc., an Austin marketing and communications company, was selected by the state agency to develop and coordinate the 14-month campaign.

Private fund-raising will be the responsibility of the Texas Alliance for the Next Economy, a Dallas-based non-profit group headed by Harden Wiedemann, a former director of the state Economic Development Commission.

Kathy Bonner, marketing company owner, said advertisements targeting certain industries that may expand or move to Texas will appear in business and trade magazines and on television this fall.

She said the defense industry, desk-top computer publishing industry and other manufacturers with employment and growth potential will be targets of the campaign.

She said her office will conduct marketing research, design the marketing plan, produce the advertising and generate press information. The Austin company won the state contract in competition with 12 other marketing companies.

TIPRO members share tactics for survival in lean times

FORT WORTH (AP) — Wildcatter Dan Abbott says he won't dig in and wait until tumbling oil prices regain their balance but plans instead to strike out and drill new wells while costs are low.

"I'm branching out. I am getting aggressive," said Abbott, a member of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association meeting in Fort Worth.

Although few other members exhibited Abbott's optimism Tuesday, the tactics of survival during the lean times predicted for the industry were discussed during a seminar held on the final day of the group's 40th annual convention.

Oil producers can survive the present pricing doldrums by cutting costs, sticking to basics and planning carefully, the panel industry leaders said.

Dallas oilman Jim Hunt urged producers to reduce oil lease housekeeping costs.

"Now is not the time to paint the tanks and mend the fences," he said.

Richard Langdon, moderator of the seminar, told the audience of about 150 that current oil and gas surpluses probably will not dissipate until the end of the decade.

In the meantime, gas prices will remain depressed and oil prices will be unstable, bringing more hard times for independents.

"At the rate things are going, it seems like there's only going to be three oil companies left in business: Exxon, Shell and the FDIC," Langdon said.

Abbott agreed that prices will gradually increase over the next five years, and he said that's what makes exploration an attractive option for longterm profits.

"We don't intend to make any money (during the next five years). We intend to make a living," Abbott said.

By the end of the decade, if the domestic industry recovers, Abbott said he will be in a comfortable market position.

Chamber 'didn't endorse' anti-apartheid suggestions

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The American Chamber of Commerce in South Africa circulated a proposal that its members defy apartheid laws, but said today it has not endorsed the suggestions.

The chamber's action was prominently reported here. The pro-government daily Citizen newspaper gave the story a banner headline declaring, "U.S. Chamber in S.A. Backs Civil Disobedience," and described it as a "shock move."

The chamber confirmed it sent the proposals, which were drafted by a private black foundation, last month to about 300 member companies doing business in South Africa.

But Frank Lubke, president of the chamber, said today that the suggestions were sent merely for consideration, and that the association was not asking members to implement them.

The proposed actions amount to a sweeping challenge of several principle tenets of apartheid policy on housing, business, health and the movement of blacks.

The chamber has issued protests against apartheid and encouraged affirmative action, but never has suggested outright defiance of segregation laws.

The proposal was circulated at a time when U.S. companies are under growing pressure in the United States to step up action against apartheid or get out of South Africa.

Lubke said the Citizen and other newspapers misinterpreted the chamber's action to mean approval of the package. He said some of the association's members oppose civil disobedience, and that the organization could not endorse such practices.

Business Day, a financial newspaper, said civil disobedience itself is illegal in South Africa, and anyone convicted of encouraging others to break laws as an act of protest can be fined or imprisoned.

The chamber's cover letter noted that the intention of the proposal is "to ease the life of black employees" in South Africa, and that the ideas should be "carefully considered" by chief executives.

Among the suggestions are that companies should:

— "Encourage the slow movement of blacks" into white residential areas, which would be in direct defiance of neighborhood segregation laws.

— Devise alternative housing in black areas, such as controlled squatting, to counter overcrowding in official housing, "and not necessarily to await administration board approval" for such alternative plans.

— Refuse to register their black workers under "influx control" laws restricting the right of blacks to live and work outside the 10 tribal homelands.

— Pay the legal costs of anyone charged with violation influx control laws or any laws put forward as a substitute control system following the repeal of the laws, proposed by the government last month.

— Give long-term contracts to migrant workers, and not one-year contracts allowed under law, and arrange permanent housing for migrants and their families. Most migrants leave their families behind in the homelands while they work in the cities.

— Organize "front" licenses for blacks who want to set up businesses in white areas where apartheid laws bar blacks from operating, and make funds available for prospective black businessmen even if they don't have proper permits.

— Pay legal costs of blacks charged with traveling illegally on white buses and trains to shorten the long hours of commuting on transport for blacks only.

— Bring charges if any employees are refused health care because of race.

— Encourage integration of private schools, and even work to "integrate white state schools," despite the government's firm pledge never to allow such integration.

The proposals were drafted by the Get Ahead Foundation at the request of the chamber's Social Justice Committee, and approved by the full chamber before being mailed to members. The foundation's directors include Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu and Soweto activist Dr. Nthato Motlana.

The 59-year-old Fox tiptoes, tongue-in-cheek, around the question of Henderson's age by saying, "Throughout the primary, I anticipated (36-year-old) Ed Emmett would be my runoff opponent. I stressed the importance of the wisdom and maturity that you can only get as years go by. Now I'm re-examining that, and I'm more concerned with youth and vigor."

Henderson highlights his refusal to accept contributions, saying all other candidates have compromised their fairness by taking money from the industries they would regulate.

But Henderson says that unlike his years as an unknown, he could have raised at least $200,000 in 1986, adding, "A lot of people have had checks returned to them in the mail."

Henderson, who has criticized the commission's environmental record, says that accepting contributions would prevent him from giving an average working person the same treatment as a large oil company.

Henderson also says he is the only candidate who is raising the issue of low female and minority representation on the Raiload Commission staff. He says that at the top state salary category of $33,000, 118 white males hold jobs, compared to only 11 white females, six Hispanic males and one black male.

On the Democratic side, state Sen. John Sharp of Victoria faces surprise candidate P.S. Ervin, whose name appeared on the May 3 primary ballot as P.S. "Sam" Ervin, but will be without the "Sam" on Saturday.

Ervin, 72, admittedly filed as Sam in an attempt to make voters "make the connection" between him and his distant cousin, former U.S. Sen. Sam Ervin of Watergate fame. But state Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle told Ervin he couldn't use Sam in the runoff because it is misleading to voters.

Sharp's campaign manager, Greg Hartman, said, "We're glad we're no longer running against a dead senator."

Ervin, however, says that if he comes within two percentage points of Sharp, "I'm going to find a lawyer to sue the damn Democratic Party" for taking the Sam out of his name.

Since the first primary, Sharp has kept a low profile, although his campaign workers say voter complacency could hurt his chances. Sharp will air television ads starting several days before the primary.

Sharp's campaign themes include tightening safety standards for trucks under Railroad Commission regulation and improving rail safety. Calling himself the "truck buster," Sharp insists the commission has the power to increase safety standards but hasn't used its authority.

Ervin says Sharp doesn't have any qualifications for the commission other than having served in the Legislature. He points to his 47 years of work in the oil and gas business and as chief engineer for Louisiana's equivalent to the Railroad Commission.

Sharp says his legislative experience in transportation and energy issues qualifies him for the job.

The two candidates who did not make the runoff — Austin attorney Bill MacNaughton and Dallas attorney and political organizer John Pouland — have come out for Sharp, who took 46 percent of the vote may 3. Pouland missed making the runoff by about 4,000 votes despite spending more than $100,000 on his campaign.

West German nuclear reactor to shut down

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP) — A nuclear reactor which leaked radiation last month will be shut down pending completion of an investigation, a state government official said Tuesday.

DUDE

THE QUEST FOR MONEY was the reason why the snow-cone stand appealed to Dude and Perry, who majored in accounting at Texas Tech University and then did graduate work in finance at Duke University.

Before they went into the snow-cone business, Perry mowed lawns, and Dude was a busboy at a restaurant, Zentner's Steakery, and worked at an old water playground then known as Wild River Canyon.

They pooled their resources and got into the snow-cone business. Three weeks later, they paid off their indebtedness and were well on their way to becoming stalwarts of the free-enterprise system.

"Really," Marsha Fairchild had said in 1986, "they are two fine young men. They have paid their way through school (with the summer-operated snow-cone business). This is free-enterprise at its best."

The snow-cone stand "is where all the high-school kids congregate," Mrs. Fairchild noted, "but it's a lot of good, clean fun. Some of the biggest customers are policemen."

Said her daughter, Allison, who then was 12: "Oh, they just taste good. They are cold, and they are good on hot days, and that's all we have to do here."

The stand promoted 38 flavors of snow cones, from wild fruit and bubble gum to the $1.25 Dude, the biggest and most profitable cone on the menu. Cream topping costs extra.

ALLISON EXPRESSED insight into Dude's likeability, charisma and persuasive powers.

"People come in for the smallest cone (at 70 cents) and end up buying a Dude (for $1.25)," Allison said.

Explained Dude: "That's our largest, and, of course, you get all of that good stuff on it."

Stephanie Rouser, who was 17 in 1986, said that the "snow cones are good, but everybody comes here, and it's good to see your friends. When Dude comes, summer is here."

Dude was a natural campaigner.

"Everybody asks me if I'm a politician," he said. "I tell them 'no.' I'm a statesman. I don't like the connotation (of politician)."

While he was in high school, he debated, was the nation's outstanding senator in the National Student Congress in his senior year in 1984, and played the piano, saxophone, organ and Fun Machine. At age 2½, he was playing "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" on the table organ, recalled his mother, Zella Martin.

"He's strictly a politician," his mother said in 1986. "I think he's probably the most pleasant, most likeable individual to be around. If things get testy, he tends to laugh his way out of it. He's going to be president of the United States."

His father, Vern Martin, former Midland County district attorney, early on had pegged Dude for the Texas governorship.

"Sounds like him" to reach for the presidency, his father said. "I would say he's a politician right now. I certainly think the seeds of a statesmen are there. He certainly is the most industrious young man I've ever known."

AT AGE 19 IN 1986, Dude was well into politics.

"I'm very interested in national politics," he said, "but local politics are very important, too. I keep up with everything that's going on. I feel that the grass roots of our party system is changing and mostly at the local level."

OK, so much of the above scenario may be fictional, but Dude did launch the snow-cone business in Midland and he does have strong views on a wide-range of issues. Some of them are:

— Political system: "I like the party system. I think that's what made America great — two opposing ideologies that have to compromise."

— Conservatism: "I am very conservative, but I am a realist. This is one of those deals — 'I am, but....'"

— Voter apathy: "It's not that people don't care. I think that being a Democrat or a Republican is not that big of a deal today." However, he noted that Midland, a Republican stronghold, was a notable exception.

— Midland: "Midland still is a strongly conservative city and a Republican city, but I think the old establishment is changing quite a bit. They definitely are strong. They are just taking more silent roles. Midland is very cosmopolitan."

— Taxes: "I'm for more for a flat-type tax rate, rather than a steepled, progressive rate — slightly graduated rather than straight up with all of the loopholes."

— More taxes: "I'm very much against a state income tax. I think that's the craziest thing they could do. People are burdened with taxes. Most definitely, I'm tired of taxes, and I haven't even been hit hard by them yet."

— Raising revenue: "I lean more to other ways to raise tax money: pari-mutuel betting and lotteries. I do see some moral implications. Both of them are technically gambling. If people are going to spend money on horse races, I'd like to see them spend it in Texas."

— Tariffs: "I'm against tariffs, but I also see the problems of national security" posed by America's dependence on imported oil. "The United States has so much economic power that I feel we could press OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) to raise their prices on oil. We're forced to put on a tariff. Everybody in the United States is hurt because of the defense implications" of America not being energy independent.

— Revolution: "I think right now we are in the middle of a social revolution. We are coming into an era of big social and political realignment. We are moving to much more patriotism and to much more conservatism."

— Ronald Reagan: "Reagan is very appealing to college students. We have a man who has brought back strength and pride (to the nation.)"

— Values: "I think we are having more of a return to Christian lifestyle."

— Education: "I'm very interested in education. They've got the right idea, but they've got the wrong approach."

— Federal programs: "I would like to move away from federal-government programs" and place more emphasis on state and local social programs "to get to more people who really need it."

— Presidential aspirations: "That's more of a joke-type deal. I plan to be (politically) very active by then (2000). I don't know if I want to be president or not."

— Teachers: "It doesn't matter if they (teachers) can pass the test. What matters is 'Can they get across to the students the subject matter?' They call it a competency test, but it was a literacy test."

— Economics: "I'm very much laissez-faire."

In his political climb to statesmanship, Dude said that money and power have "nothing to do with it."

"I always feel I'm the devil's advocate. I should be helping people."

The Dude is a thinker and a doer.

TEMPLE

Bimal Kaur Khalsa, widow of Beant Singh, who was shot while assassinating Prime Minister Indira Ghandi to avenge the army attack on the temple, was given a place of honor as a "martyr's widow."

"June 4 is a black day in Sikh history and we are here to honor the martyrs," Mrs. Khalsa told the cheering crowd. She had gone underground because she is sought by police for allegedly stirring anti-government sentiment.

Soldiers assaulted the temple June 4, 1984 to flush out armed separatists who were using it as a base for armed attacks. A four-day battle followed, and an estimated 1,000 Sikhs and 200 soldiers died.

Five months after the attack, two Sikh bodyguards assassinated Mrs. Gandhi. Her son, Rajiv Gandhi, then became prime minister.

Security was stepped up this week in Punjab, where Sikhs are a majority, and in New Delhi. State authoritie/ said more than 1,000 Sikh militants had been arrested under preventive detention laws in police sweeps across Punjab.

Militants and the more moderate Sikh Akali Dal party dissidents claimed police stopped buses, trucks and tractor-drawn trolleys carrying Sikhs to today's rally and intimidated or detained passengers.

"There is large-scale police repression today," said Prem Singh Lalpura, spokesman for the Akali Dal dissidents. The group broke away from the state's elected Sikh government to protest the April raid on the Golden Temple. It does not support radical demands for a separate Sikh nation.

Soldiers and police set up roadblocks and searched vehicles and pilgrims headed for the Golden Temple. Amritsar Police Chief H.K.S. Kahlon said authorities would act firmly to quell any violence during the rally in the temple's main convention hall.

He said 3,000 paramilitary soldiers and hundreds of police were deployed around the temple complex and on highways and bridges leading to the shrine.

Posters put up by Sikh militants said today's rally would be a "mass protest against the repressive and tyrannical policies of New Delhi rulers who are treating Sikhs as second-class citizens."

Sikhs make up about 2 percent of India's 750 million people.

Wallace, confined to a wheel chair since he was shot while campaigning for president in 1972, watched the returns in the governors mansion where he has lived for 17 of the past 23 years and said, "All things come to an end."

In neighboring Mississippi, Mike Espy was fighting to avoid a runoff in the race for the Democratic nomination for the House from the 2nd District. With only seven precincts left to count, Espy, a black attorney, was receiving just short of 50 percent of the vote against two white opponents, Pete Johnson who had 26 percent, and Hiram Eastland who had 24 percent.

If Espy's total failed to top 50 percent he would be forced into a June 24 runoff against Johnson.

The winner would face Republican Rep. Webb Franklin in the general election. Despite the fact the district is nearly 60 percent black, Franklin defeated black state Rep. Robert Clark in 1982 and 1984.

Mississippi Reps. Jamie Whitten and Wayne Dowdy easily defeated primary opponents.

Rodino, who became a national figure when he presided over the impeachment hearings against President Nixon in 1973, received 58 percent of the vote against 37 percent for Payne.

Virtually assured of re-election over Republican Alvin K. Terry in the overwhelmingly Democratic district, Rodino chastised the Rev. Jesse Jackson for campaigning for Payne.

In a brief interview after his win, Rodino, a long-time champion of civil rights, said the issue of race during the campaign had bothered him.

"But I knew that the people were going to put aside any thought of race. They rejected it," he said. "Jesse Jackson talks about a coalition, he talks about bringing people together. This is no way to bring people together."

In other results:

— In Iowa, Gov. Terry Branstad and Sen. Charles Grassley, both Republicans, had no opposition for renomination. Former state Senate Majority Leader Lowell Junkins won the Democratic nomination to challenge Branstad, who is regarded as vulnerable because of discontent among economically pressed farmers. John Roehrick, a Des Moines lawyer, won the Democratic Senate nomination by easily defeating Juan Cortez, a follower of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche.

Actor Fred Grandy, who played Gopher Smith, the bumbling purser on TV's "The Love Boat," sailed past two opponents, despite being labeled a carpetbagger, to win the GOP congressional nomination in Iowa's 6th District.

The Democratic nomination went to Clayton Hodgson, longtime aide to retiring Rep. Berkley Bedell.

— In Montana, Sheriff Johnny France, who gained national attention when he single-handedly captured "mountain men" Don and Dan Nichols, was turned out by Madison County voters. Deputy Dick Noorlander defeated France in the GOP primary. No Democrats filed for the job.

France caught the Nichols, who had eluded authorities for months after they kidnapped a young Bozeman woman in 1984. Noorlander accused the sheriff of not spending enough time at his job.

Texas universities, congressmen ready to 'rattle tin cup' for grants

By KATHRYN BAKER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas universities and the congressmen who represent them have decided it's time to starting "rattling that tin cup" for federal research money.

The state may be experiencing troubled economic times, with dropping oil prices and ailing agriculture, but it doesn't want a handout, says Sen. Lloyd Bentsen. It just wants its fair share — the piece of the pie it used to be able to afford to leave behind.

Bentsen, D-Texas, recently organized a luncheon to discuss strategy.

"One of the problems has been, we simply haven't been hungry enough," said Frank Vandiver, president of Texas A&M University, who attended the luncheon. "There's been a lot of state money put into research and a lot of industrial money, and we just haven't gone out and rattled that tin cup like we need to do now."

Bentsen's meeting was attended by his Republican counterpart Phil Gramm, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Dallas investor Peter O'Donnell, 22 of the state's 27 congressmen, presidents and chancellors of state universities and representatives of the governor's office.

"We got a commitment out of the delegation that we would all work together — Democrats and Republicans — for something that was for Texas in the way of research grants," said Bentsen. "You find that you get a lot more of those things accomplished as long as you don't worry about who gets the credit for it — which is not an easy thing to accomplish in this atmosphere up here."

Texas universities are among the first to feel the pinch of the state budget crunch because there is little else to cut from a state budget light in social programs. Faculty salaries are already lagging behind the national average.

In federal research money, Texas continues to trail California and even Massachusetts.

In 1984, according to the National Science Foundation, California received $9 billion in federal research and development money. Massachusetts received $2.9 billion. Texas got $1.5 billion.

Of university research paid for by federal dollars, Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md., received more in 1985 than did the entire state of Texas — $318,374 to $250,655.

The University of California system received three times the federal R&D money that the University of Texas received.

Texas ranked 10th in the nation in defense R&D money in 1984, receiving $968 million. California was first, getting $6.3 billion.

Massachusetts is the success story to which Bentsen points for inspiration.

Ten years ago, when Texas, was in the bloom of the oil boom, Massachusetts had the highest unemployment rate of all the industrial states. It campaigned for research and technology and now has the lowest unemployment rate of the industrial states.

"Look at California at the end of World War II," Bentsen adds. "Didn't have a lot out in California. But you had some great universities. Those great universities and the research that went on there and the emphasis on it helped spawn Silicon Valley and the high tech.

"I'd like to see Texas in the '90s become the lead research state. That's a very tall objective, but you might as well have it, try for it," Bentsen said.

This is what Bentsen hopes to see in a few years:

New jobs created by an industry that came into the state to be near the university where a product was invented from research funded through a federal grant. The grant would be won with a successful proposal that had the support of the entire Texas congressional delegation and went before an advisory board whose membership included a fair number of Texas scientists and academics.

Research grantsmanship is one area where competition is a two-edged sword, Bentsen said.

"If we go out there fighting for five different universities for one grant, our strength gets so diffuse, it goes to California," he said.

He also wants the universities to get organized behind candidates for openings on advisory boards, which he said often tailor grant offerings so certain universities are most likely to qualify for them.

As an example, Bentsen said, of the 24 members of the National Science Board, California has 10. Texas has one member.

"I said you've got to tell us who you have that's qualified. If A&M has one (candidate) that's better qualified, let's all get behind that one. And if it's the University of Texas, or SMU, Rice, someplace else, let's try and settle it so we all get behind one and try and get them on those boards," he said.

It will take some time for the strategy to work, said Bentsen.

"But we can get the research grants hopefully quite soon," he said. "The payoff comes obviously from that research and that takes more time."

"I suspect it's a matter of years," said Vandiver. "I wish I could guess how many. I hope it's not too many. You don't turn an economy around overnight, but we've got to make a start."

Backers, foes disagree on impact of concert ordinance

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — How well a first-of-its-kind city ordinance is working to shelter children from obscene lyrics at rock concerts depends entirely on who's talking.

Conservative groups who pressured City Council to pass the ordinance in November — and who won support from Mayor Henry Cisneros — say the new restrictions have forced rock groups to clean up their act.

But opponents counter that the only thing the new ordinance has done is drain attendance and rock-group bookings.

Passed under a barrage of controversy in November, the ordinance sparked debate on parental responsibility, the constitutionality of such a law and how it would be enforced.

"We have seen a cleanup," said Bobbie Mueller, whose Community Families in Action spearheaded the drive for the city to crack down on lurid rock concerts.

"They (rock groups) are taking their own steps in cleaning up their mouths. The ordinance is working," she said after attending a concert by the heavy metal group Black Sabbath. "They are aware that there are bunch of monitors in the audience — parents."

But Jack Orbin, San Antonio's largest promoter, argues that rock groups have not changed their lyrics.

"The only thing they've accomplished besides the legislators showing their ignorance by passing a worthless piece of legislation is they hurt our attendance," Orbin said.

Orbin also claimed the ordinance has kept some entertainers from appearing in San Antonio.

The city law restricts unescorted children younger than 14 from attending rock concerts with obscene language. The ordinance affects only performances at city-owned facilities.

From the beginning, enforcement has been a big question.

Promoters have the responsibility of advertising a concert as unsuitable for children. If they offer such a disclaimer on their advertising, they must monitor the attendance.

City Police Sgt. Robert Rudewick said he has been involved in rock-concert security for 18 years, and he has yet to see one that would be affected by the ordinance.

Rudewick is charged with reporting any concert obscenity to the city attorney's office. That office, in turn, would file action against the promoter if an unescorted, underage youngster was present at the show.

U.S. violations of SALT II pact could jeopardize summit plans

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet deputy foreign minister warned today that any U.S. violation of the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty will jeopardize chances for a superpower summit this year, but he declined to completely rule out a U.S.-Soviet meeting.

Alexander Bessmertnykh was asked at a news conference whether President Reagan's plan to abandon the unratified 1979 agreement constituted an insurmountable obstacle to a Washington summit this year.

"A meeting of leaders of these two countries cannot be isolated from developments in the world, from developments in Soviet-American relations, particularly in the field of security," Bessmertnykh said.

Reagan said last Wednesday he would not be bound by the SALT II treaty in future military decisions. But he suggested the United States might stay within the SALT limits if the Soviets take "constructive steps" to correct alleged arms violations and negotiate seriously on a new arms treaty.

Soviet officials have said repeatedly that progress toward an arms control agreement and the appropriate political atmosphere are necessary before Communist Party chief Mikhail S. Gorbachev will meet with Reagan.

The two leaders agreed during their Geneva summit in November to hold a second meeting this year in the United States.

Bessmertnykh accused Reagan of ruining the SALT II treaty, but declined to say that the Kremlin has no faith in reaching agreement with the current U.S. administration.

"We are dealing with the administration elected by the American people and we will be dealing with it as long as it is in house," Bessmertnykh replied when asked if Soviet officials had given up hope of another summit with Reagan.

The task at hand, Bessmertnykh said, is to revitalize the tendency toward better U.S.-Soviet relations that was apparent during the Geneva summit.

"The general situation in relations between our two countries does not lead to optimism at present," Bessmertnykh said.

Bessmertnykh and army Chief of Staff Marshal Sergei Akhromeyev held the news conference to discuss the SALT II agreement and Reagan's statement last week that the United States would no longer comply with the treaty once more B-52 bombers are equipped with air-launched Cruise missiles.

Akhromeyev vehemently denied Reagan's claims that the Soviet Union violates the treaty with its SS-25 and RS12m missiles or its construction of a radar station in Krasnoyarsk.

Echoing previous contentions by Soviet officials and the state-run media, Akhromeyev said Washington deliberately distorted the real situation to draw attention away from its own violations and its long-planned torpedoing of the treaty.

Both Akhromeyev and Bessmertnykh warned that any violation of SALT II agreement by the United States will result in reciprocal action by the Soviet Union to maintain parity between the superpowers.

"Should the United States deploy strategic offensive weapons, we will have the legitimate right to undertake countermeasures," Akhromeyev said, and warned hat the Kremlin would not feel obligated to restrict its violations to the same categories dropped by the United States.

In London on Tuesday, Soviet Ambassador Leonid Zamyatin said that as soon as the United States violates SALT II in any way, Moscow will take steps to prevent "the undermining of military strategic parity."

"In view of the U.S. admiiistration's decision not to comply with the SALT agreement, the Soviet Union certainly will have to take necessary retaliatory measures," Zamyatin said in a briefing with reporters at the Soviet Embassy.

However, Zamyatin did not link SALT II to a possible superpower summit this fall. He said Soviet Communist Party leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev had made clear he wants a meeting, and that the Soviets had set no preconditions.

In Washington, the administration acknowledged that Reagan's decision to abandon SALT II had created "vigorous debate" among the allies in Western Europe.

Both leftist and conservative leaders in West Germany responded with dismay. Hans-Dietrich Genscher, the foreign minister, said Reagan's decision "must not be the last word" and urged a determined effort stick by the treaty's terms.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher backed Reagan in urging the Soviets to observe SALT II, telling the House of Commons that the United States has "left the door open" for the Soviets to comply with the 1979 arms accord.

But she also said she hoped both sides would continue to observe the treaty.

In neutral Sweden, the liberal Dagens Nyheter said: "Without the good will of the superpowers we do not have much to hope for."

WORLD IN BRIEF

ANC begins campaign

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Riding a crest of insurgent attacks and black uprisings, the African National Congress is staging its broadest assault ever against white rule in South Africa.

The government has responded with a campaign that portrays the ANC as a communist-backed terrorist group that kills civilians.

Despite guarded hints from both sides on possible negotiations, neither the military confrontation nor the war of words shows any sign of abating.

After nearly two years of unrest and increasing sabotage, ANC President Oliver Tambo reflects a new sense of ANC confidence, declaring that "the historic conditions necessary to ensure the collapse of the apartheid system have taken shape in greater measure than ever before."

In a major radio address in mid-May from exile in Zambia, he said the ANC has now shifted its goal "from ungovernability to people's power" — underscoring the ANC's claim to broad popular support.

Pastora granted asylum

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Former Nicaraguan rebel leader Eden Pastora today began a new life in Costa Rica, which granted him political asylum for as long as he is willing to live in peace.

The 49-year-old Pastora, known as Commander Zero, gave up his three-year fight against Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government on May 16 and crossed the San Juan River from southern Nicaragua into Costa Rica, which has a long-standing policy of neutrality and no standing army.

The former rebel leader was not available for comment Tuesday night. The Ministry of Public Security said he would be released today from the Civil Guard post in Cartago, 10 miles east of the capital, where he has been held since his surrender.

The Foreign Ministry said Tuesday night the decision to grant asylum to Pastora came after the rebel leader agreed to abide by the nation's laws and halt hostilities against the Sandinistas while living here.

'Dirty spots' evacuated

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party daily Pravda indicated today that more people were evacuated from isolated "dirty spots" of radiation contamination beyond the 18-mile evacuation zone around the stricken Chernobyl nuclear power plant.

The newspaper gave no figures for the number of people moved from areas of the Gomel region of southern Byelorussia, or the exact locations of the contaminated areas.

But in an article entitled "A Red Line On The Map," Pravda said a thorough review of the 18-mile danger zone and areas beyond it "allowed us to make significant corrections in which people may return to some areas, but from others additional evacuations were needed."

Soviets officials said 92,000 people were evacuated from an area within 18 miles of the power plant after the April 26 explosion and fire at its reactor No. 4. The four-reactor power station is 80 miles north of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev, the Soviet Union's third largest city with 2.4 million people.

On Tuesday, a Soviet doctor revealed that disaster had claimed two more lives bringing to 25 the number who have died, including two men killed at the scene. Dr. Leonid Ilyin, director of Moscow's Hospital No. 6 where the most seriously ill patients were taken, said about 30 patients remained in critical condition.

Durate plan accepted

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels accepted President Jose Napoleon Duarte's proposal for a third round of peace talks, and called for a "a real advance for peace with justice and dignity."

The rebels, in a Tuesday broadcast over their clandestine Radio Venceremos, suggested the talks be held in the capital of San Salvador, and that the government publicly announce the topics to be discussed.

Duarte, in a surprise move Sunday, ended a two-hour speech marking his second anniversary in office by calling for another round of talks to be held at the end of July or the beginning of August.

The two sides met in October 1984 and again one month later, but talks broke off without producing any progress toward ending the civil war the rebels have waged for 6½ years against the U.S.-backed government.

Lebanese fire exchanged

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Moslem militiamen who crushed a Sunni faction in a 15-hour showdown on the streets of west Beirut today pounded nearby Palestinian refugee camps with mortar fire.

Palestinian guerrillas retaliated by spraying Shiite slums surrounding Sabra, Chatilla and Bourj el-Barajneh camps with rocket-propelled grenade and machine gun fire, police said.

They said two people were killed and seven wounded on the 17th day of fighting in the shantytowns, raising to 83 dead and 370 wounded the known toll in the current round of war for control of the refugee camps.

Police also reported 13 more deaths from the Shiite-Sunni confrontation Tuesday.

Bonner boards train for Gorky

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet dissident Yelena Bonner said farewell to friends in Moscow at the end of a six-month respite from internal exile and boarded a train for Gorky to be reunited in isolation with her husband, Andrei D. Sakharov.

Mrs. Bonner, 63, told Western reporters before she left Moscow late Tuesday that she was very tired, but felt much better after undergoing heart surgery and receiving treatment for glaucoma in the West.

She said she was "very happy to be going back to my husband," who has been living in forced exile in Gorky, 250 miles east of Moscow, since 1980.

Sakharov, a renowned physicist who helped develop the Soviet hydrogen bomb, won the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize for his human rights activities and was sent to Gorky for speaking out against the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan in December 1979.

C. WALLACE CRAIG

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR MIDLAND COUNTY COMMISSIONER PRECINCT 2

It has been a privilege to serve as your County Commissioner for the past three years. I am proud to have played a part in the many positive achievements during that time.

In my judgment the two most important issues facing the County are taxes and the jail. My position on each is as follows:

1. TAXES. The declining property and mineral values in Midland Couny will cause a severe reduction in tax revenues at the present tax rate. My intention is to set a budget which requires no additional tax dollars and, if it is possible to do so without too drastically reducing needed services, to set a budget requiring fewer dollars.
2. JAIL. The temporary renovation to the jail as approved by the voters in 1985 will get us by for a few years but at the appropriate time in our economic life we will need a new jail. After much study I am still convinced that the greatest savings in tax dollars will be realized by building one jail on the County owned 7 acre tract east of Midland. The land cost is minimal ($7,000) and the site is excellent and large enough for any future expansion. (A downtown site would add several million dollars to the cost of the project). Another major advantage of a new jail will be the opportunity to create a joint City/County facility. I believe this is a must.

I trust this will be helpful to you as you choose between the candidates. Thank you for your continuing support. I will appreciate your vote in the Republican Run-Off on June 7th.

Yours very truly,

C. WALLACE CRAIG

Guitarist strums way into records book

CHICAGO (AP) — After strummin' for 276 hours, the new claimant of the world record for continuous playing of the guitar said he felt supercharged. And Michael Buckley downed a few glasses of champagne in celebration, but said he was heading straight for a few days in his waterbed.

"It's been great," said Buckley early Sunday, just after midnight.

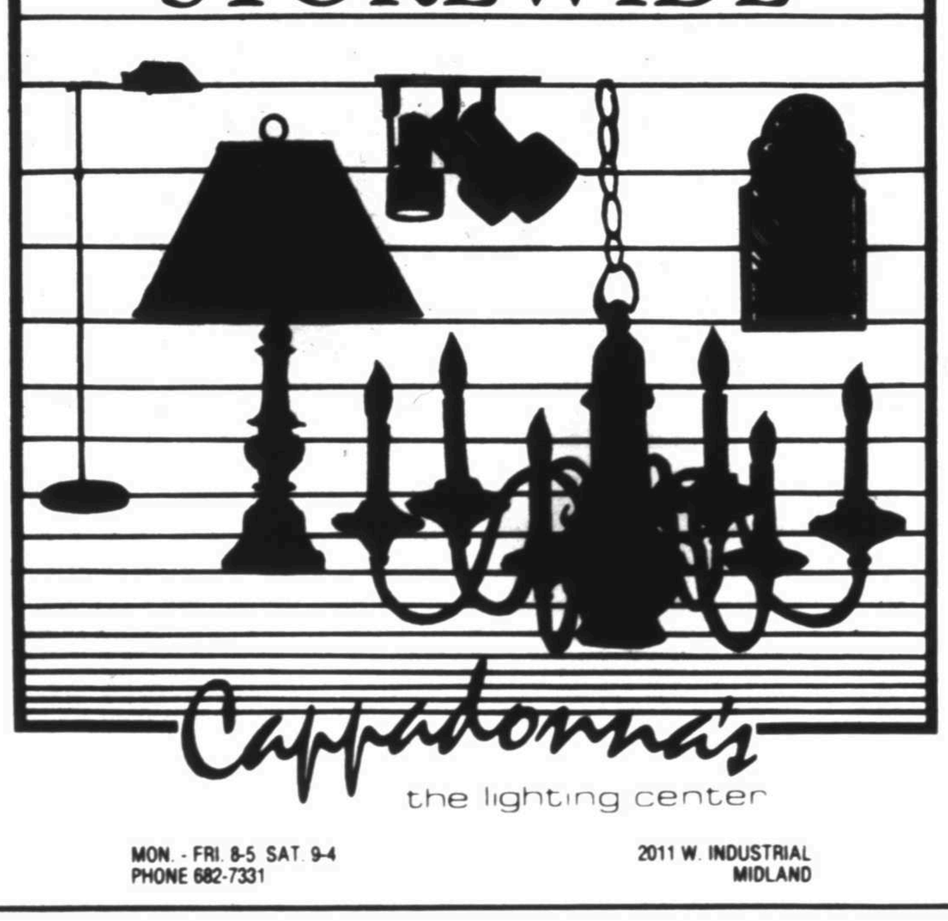

Around noon on Saturday, the 31-year-old Buckley had strummed his way past the mark of 11 days listed in the Guinness Book of World Records. Calluses had formed on the fingers of his left hand and under them little red blood blisters.

But he decided to keep at it an extra 12 hours, for good measure, so as to keep would-be competitors at bay.

Buckley started the marathon at noon on May 20 at a Northwest Side music shop. He strummed everything from '60s music to heavy metal in the storefront window of the Guitar Center, but admits boredom nearly broke him half-way through.

As a reward the shop gave him a champagne bash and a $7,000 custom-made electric guitar.

Mixed blessing

Major rains that have fallen on Midland County in recent days once again have driven home the point that what is typically viewed as a blessing in this part of the country really can be a double-edged sword.

While the 3.98 inches of rain that fell on Midland beginning May 24 and continuing for several days was largely appreciated by area farmers and city dwellers alike, the unusually heavy rains played havoc with city streets and the motorists who travel them, electric service suppliers, some farmers and others.

Rainfall amounts varied with locale, of course. Sections of Midland received 5 or 6 inches or more over several days. And in particular locations around the county, Greenwood especially, the unofficially recorded 9-plus inches of moisture resulted in flash flooding with water reportedly getting into some houses in low-lying areas north of Greenwood School and high winds damaging some fences and structures in that vicinity .

But for all the hardship and damage resulting from the recent rains, most residents of Midland and outlying regions probably will concur that the drought-breaking storms were sorely needed. Literally months had passed since the Midland area had received significant amounts of precipitation and dust storms were becoming frequent occurrences.

The rains have brought relief — regardless how temporary — from not only the dryness but also the hot seasonal temperatures. The cloudiness that continues to linger throughout this region is keeping temperatures at least bearable.

What's more, this "break" in the hot dryness has also given farmers and gardeners the added boost of an underground water supply that should last well into the summer.

Perhaps it's true that every blessing must have a "dark side." The rains that hit Midland County certainly have been a blessing, with reservations. Still, it's difficult to wish the rains would end when the long dry spell just past is fresh in one's memory.

Vote for prudence

Primary elections in Midland County typically draw a relatively small percentage of registered voters. The figure for runoff elections is often even lower. This small group elects the officials controlling our tax dollars ... the significance of this should not be overlooked.

For this reason we hope that the active voters of Midland will take the time to study the platforms and/or past performance of the candidates. Now more than ever, prudent officials who effectively represent your needs are essential.

As concerned voters we are throwing our support behind Guy McCrary in the runoff election for county commissioner. Over the years Guy has more than proved his concern for Midland through his outstanding voluntarism and civic devotion. Moreover, Guy is informed, energetic and an excellent manager. We are confident of his ability to make the right decisions on tough issues for effective representation, and think he is the best choice for the job.

Please take the time to vote on June 7. Please be informed before you do so. Candidate rhetoric and yard signs are legitimate means of communication, but we hope you will go one step further and study the issues and the candidates that will effect us all.

Help for little ones

The phrase "during these trying times" seems to enter every conversation these days, but this time it is truly applicable. The Developmental Disabilities Center (DDC) is a non-profit school that has been serving developmentally disabled children for nearly three years.

Recently we received a donation of much-needed office furniture from Mobil Producing Texas and New Mexico, Inc. (Midland Division) and were thrilled to know that someone so big could remember and offer help to someone so small! Mid-Tex of Midland has also donated enough vinyl flooring to cover our kitchen and bathroom floors!

Thank you seems inadequate to express our gratitude, especially "during these trying times" but we feel fortunate to be the recipient of their generosity. It's companies like these with the true spirit of West Texas that make it easier for organizations like ours to educate and help our special children.

Officer 'commended'

My car was recently hit by an unknown motorist. Officer Kay Therwhanger of the Midland Police Department took the case of finding out who did it. After several days of work, she was able to find and gain a confession from the man who had done it.

I understand that hit-and-run accidents are rarely rectified and it is next to impossible to solve the mystery of "who done it". Officer Therwhanger's persistence with my case was deeply appreciated. I want to thank her for her endurance and for not having given up on it in my behalf.

Her proficiency, tact and skill are to be noted and commended.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On June 4, 1940, the Allies' military evacuation at Dunkirk, France, came to an end. British Prime Minister Winston S. Churchill told the House of Commons, "We shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills; we shall never surrender."

On this date:

In 1647, the English army seized King Charles I as a hostage.

In 1878, Turkey turned Cyprus over to the British.

In 1896, Henry Ford made a successful test run with his car in a nighttime drive through the streets of Detroit.

In 1942, the Battle of Midway began. The result would be America's first significant victory over the Japanese in World War II.

NRC weakens nuke fire safety rules

WASHINGTON — Sometimes it takes a tragedy to prove a point. The Chernobyl disaster, caused by a fire and an explosion in a nuclear reactor, occurred just 51 days after we reported federal safety inspectors' complaints that U.S. nuclear power plants were inadequately protected against fire.

Jack Anderson

At the time, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's director of inspection and enforcement, Richard Volmer, assured us that the nation's nuclear plants are perfectly safe. He told our associate Corky Johnson that nuclear plants' fire protection is "far above" that of other industries. So, of course, is the danger posed by nuclear power plants, as the Soviet tragedy made appallingly clear.

You might think Chernobyl would have taken some of the smugness out of the commission, and perhaps caused it to pay closer attention to the complaints of its own safety inspectors. Unfortunately, this didn't happen. We have learned that, since the hideous accident in the Ukraine, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff called in the inspectors and informed them that new, more lenient interpretations of fire-safety regulations had been approved by the commissioners over the inspectors' vehement protests.

The government has tirelessly repeated its assurances to the American public that a Chernobyl-type disaster can't happen here, because of design differences. This is true, but it is also beside the point.

As safety inspectors explained to us, many U.S. nuclear plants have their own unique sets of hazards that could lead to fires, subsequent runaway control rooms and ultimate catastrophe. The fact that a nuclear tragedy won't be a carbon copy of Chernobyl will be small comfort to the victims.

One commission source said the new guidelines deliver an ominous message: "Fire safety is just a minor issue." Even after the horrible example of Chernobyl, the commission has now confirmed this message.

A fire last month at the Browns Ferry, Ala., nuclear complex raises renewed concern over fire safety. The latest fire didn't affect any safety systems, but one in 1975 did, nearly causing a meltdown. Inspectors told us that the Browns Ferry operators — the Tennessee Valley Authority — are still resisting the safety standards adopted after the 1975 fire.

The near-disaster in 1975 wiped out vital control room functions. Eleven years later, several inspectors said, the new guidelines permit a similar mishap by not fully protecting key controls.

Incredibly, the new guidelines let nuclear plant operators sidestep the protection of redundant control systems by planning fire safety for the first set of controls only.

"I can only postulate the failure of one valve, although there might be six valves on a control panel," an inspector told us. "It's ridiculous."

The guidelines permit partial fire barriers between the first control system and the backup system, which can be in the same room. This means that a fire could short-circuit both systems.

"The redundant system is the key, but if redundancy is compromised by fire the risk is (another) Chernobyl," an inspector said. One source estimated that 50 or 60 of the nation's 100 nuclear power plants use only partial fire barriers, sprinklers and detectors.

In a dissenting report protesting the new guidelines, a group of inspectors wrote: "If serious safety problems are discovered during an audit, an inspection team will not be in a position to efficiently resolve or cite the utility because they (the plant operators) have done what the new interpretations require."

And the commission's general counsel wrote in a memo that the NRC staff's interpretation of the safety regulations "would substantially undo much of what the commission wanted to accomplish." Despite this, the commissioners rubberstamped the new interpretations.

FUDDLE FACTORY: Things are even foggier than usual these days in Foggy Bottom. An apparent foul-up in printing orders has given the State Department's new internal telephone book a value somewhat akin to blue diamonds. The shortage of phone books is aggravated by a recent major change in departmental phone numbers. So drastic has the situation become that the handful of undistributed directories has been put under lock and key in case a VIP needs one. As might be expected in this hotbed of Kremlinology and other analytical arcana, there are conspiracy theorists claiming a deliberate plot to suppress information.

FRACTURED FAIRY TALE: President Reagan probably doesn't realize it, but when he excoriates Libyan dictator Moammar Gadhafi he's playing the role of an international Sheriff of Nottingham. According to Columbia University professor Lisa Anderson, Gadhafi fancies himself as a latter-day Robin Hood, whose mission is to help the world's poor by attacking the rich — especially the United States. "When the Big Bad Countries condemn him, he thinks he is doing good," Anderson explains. As a classic megalomaniac, Gadhafi relishes Reagan's attention, which reinforces the dictator's enormous self-importance, says Anderson.

JAMES RESTON

Everybody's playing 'the protection game'

WASHINGTON — "Protection" is the word in Washington these days, but it takes a little time to sort out who is protecting whom from what. You have to take the issues one at a time.

James Reston

The Democrats in the House of Representatives, with an election coming up in November and trying to protect their majority and the jobs of American workers, passed a bill that would punish "unfair" competition from abroad. It won by a vote of 295 to 115, with the help of 59 Republicans who also were trying to protect themselves on Election Day.

The National Association of Manufacturers is trying to protect its right to produce goods in the cheapest labor markets abroad and sell them in the richest markets everywhere, while demanding that foreign competitors accept "voluntary" quotas here — meaning "involuntary" quotas.

President Reagan is trying to protect Big Business, Big Labor and himself by arguing that "the so-called omnibus trade bill is really an ominous anti-trade bill that could send our economy into the steepest nose dive since the Great Depression ... and throw millions of Americans out of work."

This did not, however, prevent him from taking protectionist measures against Canadian wood products, or protect him from Canada's threats of retaliation.

Any number of people can play the protection game on any subject. All you need is a weak case and a strong voice.

In the foreign policy field, for example, the hawks in the Pentagon have been trying to protect the president from a Contadora peace in Nicaragua, while the State Department has been trying to protect him from the hawks. No need for protection, the White House says: No difference; no problem.

The game is a little more complicated in the case of nuclear arms control, because as it's played out the players seem confused about whether they're trying to protect the country from the Russians or from one another.

During the presidential campaign of 1980, Reagan thought he was protecting himself against President Carter, who had signed the second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty with the Russians. Reagan protected his right flank by announcing that the treaty was "fatally flawed."

This reassured the hawks but infuriated the doves; but once he was in the White House, Reagan said he'd abide by the treaty anyway if the Russians behaved. This infuriated the hawks and immobilized the doves, thus keeping both sides off balance.

On the first time around, this strategy mystified officials here and in the allied capitals, and now he has done it again. The president announced the other day that to protect the United States he would no longer be bound by the terms of the unratified SALT II treaty. But he didn't exactly bang the door, he just left it open a crack.

He indicated that he would scrap a couple of old submarines and stay within the treaty limits over the summer, but by the end of the year would feel free to deploy cruise missiles on bombers even if this exceeded the limits. Of course, if Moscow changes its policy he might think it all over.

This course requires the mastery of protective official gobbledygook. One administration official said "the idea was to build in as much automaticity as possible"; but while nobody knew what this meant, there is always the possibility that it didn't mean anything and might be changed next week or next month.

George Shultz explained the SALT II switch by saying the president was merely "shifting gears" — which could mean anything from going into high or into reverse.

Meanwhile, there was a lot of talk about what or who was obsolete around here and what could be done to protect the nation from politicians and policies that are out of date.

Even the educators weren't happy about the outlook for the coming generation. We are, they insist, training our children for a world that is gone or going fast, not protecting them for the world of the next century where they'll spend most of their lives.

Those young people are coming into the adult world without a common knowledge of the history of the civilization they came from, taught mainly so they can protect themselves but leaving them poorly equipped to do so.

In short, everybody seems to be trying to protect the people from the facts, and the interesting thing about that is that the people don't seem to mind. It's enough to make a man build up "as much automaticity as possible," or even give up the protection game altogether.

ART BUCHWALD

Desperate doesn't mean THAT desperate!

According to last week's Newsweek, single educated women over 35 will only have a 5 percent chance of getting married.

Art Buchwald

Since their careers had precedence over marriage, the working women start looking around for "Mr. Right" much later in life. Too late in many cases because he has already been captured by Little Miss Muffet, who couldn't care less for a title on her door.

How do I know so much? I have been serving as a volunteer matchmaker for my friends over the years. The hours are long and the work isn't easy.

Some weeks back a lady friend said to me, "I'm looking for 'Mr. Right' and I want you to handle my case."

"You have to take a number. I now represent seven women, all of whom have asked me to find them a man."

"I must have priority. I'm turning 40 next week," she said.

"All right, but first I have to get a profile on you. I would like to ask you a few questions. What kind of man are you looking for?"

"I'm not fussy," she said. "Any superachiever will do."

"How about something on the order of a vice president of a large insurance company?" I suggested.

"He doesn't have to have a title as long as he is financially independent. I don't want to get involved with someone who looks up to me only because of my income or position."

"That sounds reasonable."

"Find me a caring, loving man who understands my many moods and will adjust to them."

"That sounds fair."

"And I don't want anyone who is still in therapy."

"Now you're making it harder."

"I have very good administrative talents. Three hundred people answer to me. They say I'm firm but fair," she said.

"Yet the word on the street is that you carry the iron fist you use all day home with you at night."

"People are jealous because of my fast rise to the top which prevented me from competing for the man of my dreams. I'm confident you can find 'Mr. Right' now because he is probably unhappily married and at this very moment searching intensely for someone like me."

"It's not as easy to find an eligible man over 40 as one would think."

"Who says he has to be over 40? Anyone 21 years and up may apply."

"I don't have too many suitable 21-year-olds on my Rolodex," I told her.

"All I ask is that he be emotionally secure."

"You just made my task impossible."

"I want to make it perfectly clear that I am not desperate. I'm very happy with my situation. I have a lovely apartment, a large office, an American Express credit card and a cat named Sophie."

"I'm glad to hear that," I said, "because your case, while not the most difficult, is not the easiest either. Could you give me any idea of how determined you are to find 'Mr. Right'?"

"I'd go out with my UPS truck driver if he asked me."

"One more question. What sports do you like?"

"I adore tennis. I can wipe up the court with almost any man I play with," she said.

"Would you consider letting 'Mr. Right' win just a few games until you know each other better?"

"I'm not that desperate."

More rain possible

From Staff and Wire Reports

Area residents could see additional rain this evening as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal predicts tonight will be cloudy with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms with a few possibly severe.

Tonight's low is expected to drop into the mid 60s and southerly winds will blow at 5 to 10 mph.

Thursday will be sunny with a high near 90. Winds will be from the south at 10 to 15 mph.

Tuesday's high of 82 was 20 degrees cooler than the record of 102 set in 1956. The overnight low of 62 was 12 degrees warmer than the record of 50 set in 1970.

STATE

Thunderstorms dumped more than six inches of rain in parts of Central Texas early today, flooding streets and water crossings, while the storms moved northward across the Lone Star State, bringing the threat of more high water.

The National Weather Service posted flash flood warnings for parts of Central Texas, including San Antonio and Bexar, Comal, Guadalupe and Medina counties. Watches were in effect for eastern and south central portions of North Texas, South Texas, the Permian Basin and Concho Valley.

The weather service said extremely dangerous flooding occurred in and around San Antonio and Bexar County, with as much as six inches of rain falling since midnight in some parts of the city and county.

More rainfall was on the way, moving in from the west, the weather service said.

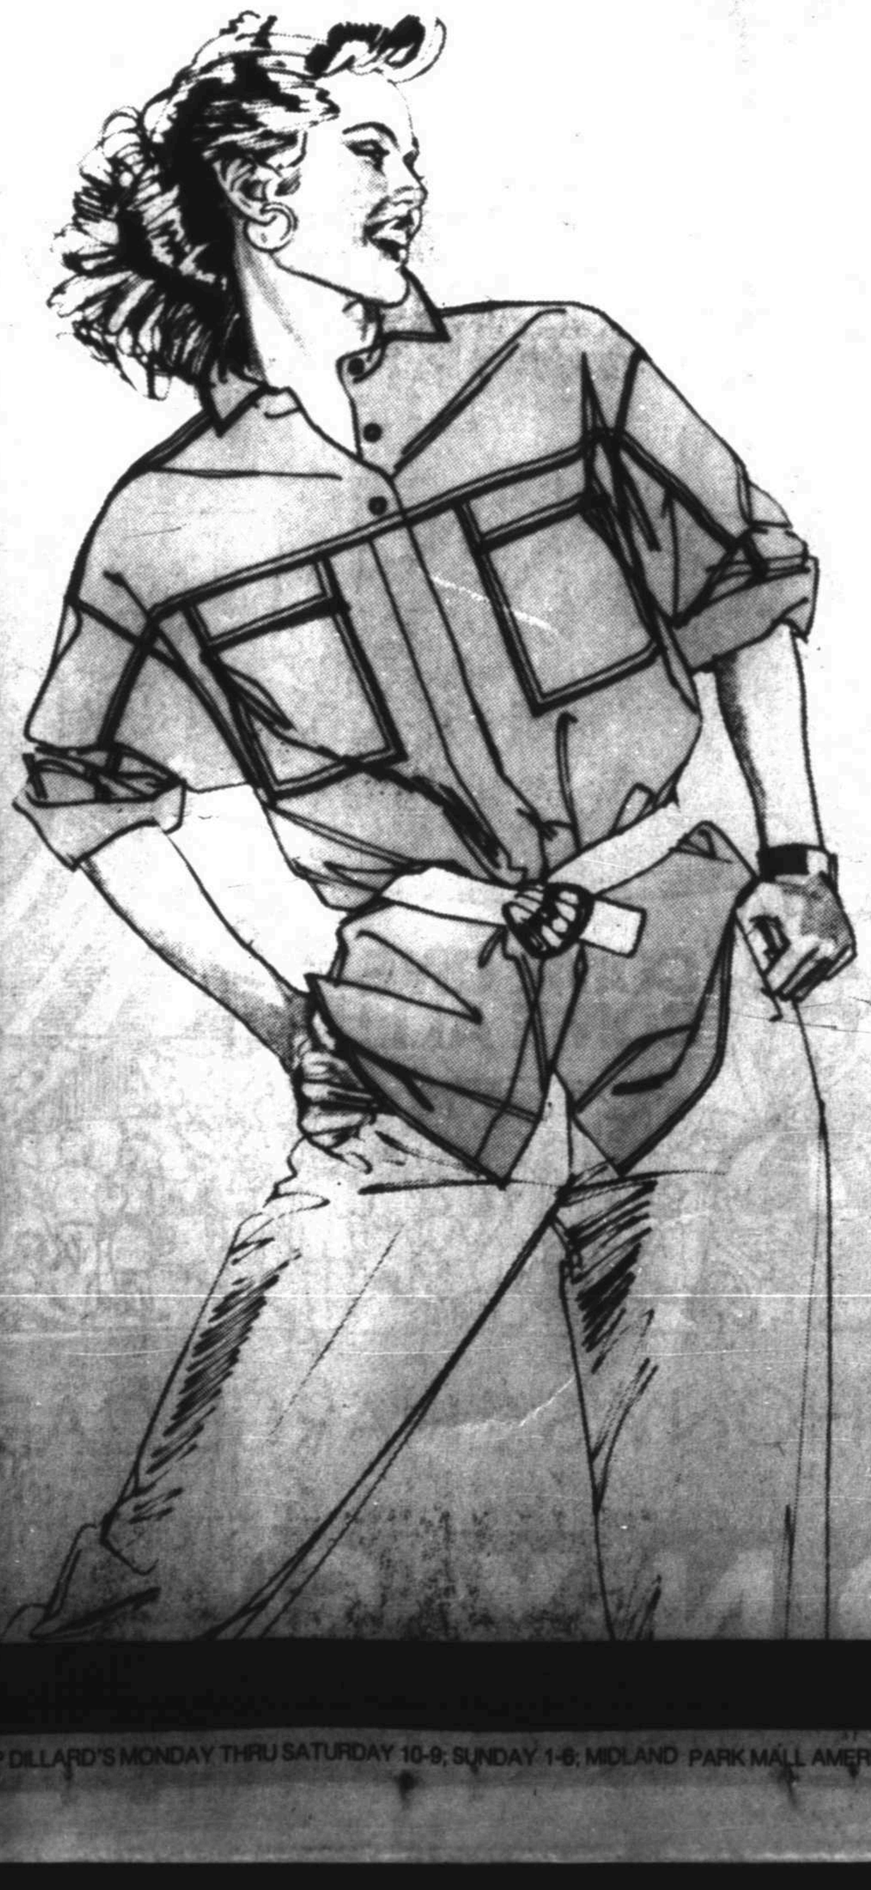

A flood warning was in effect for the Cibolo, Salado, Olmos and Leon Creeks in Central Texas.

Scattered thunderstorms developed over the middle Rio Grande plain and spread into Central and Southeast Texas. Rain also fell over the Panhandle and South Plains. Skies were clear only in the lower Rio Grande Valley as warm Gulf air flowed into Texas.

Winds were south at 10 mph or less in the northern half of the state and light in southern sections.

Low temperatures were mainly in the 60s and 70s, except for 50-degree readings in the higher elevations of Southwest Texas. Extremes ranged from a warm 80 degrees at the Corpus Christi Naval Air Station to 52 degrees at Marfa.

The weather service said it should remain mostly cloudy across Texas through Thursday with scattered to numerous thunderstorms across most regions through tonight.

Celtics just one win away

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD

HOUSTON (AP) — Larry Bird, quiet for most of the second half, hit a three-point shot from the top of the circle with 2:26 left, to give Boston the lead for good and the Celtics pulled within one victory of their 16th NBA title with a 106-103 victory over the Houston Rockets Tuesday night.

The Celtics take a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven championship series into the fifth game at The Summit Thursday night.

No team has ever come back from a 3-1 deficit in the finals, although it has happened four times in earlier playoff rounds.

After Bird gave Boston a 104-101 lead with his three-point bomb, only two baskets were scored the remainder of the game. Rodney McCray scored on a rebound with 2:04 left to make it 104-103 but those were the last points for the Rockets.

Bill Walton scored on a rebound at 1:39 and the Celtics stifled Houston with steals by Danny Ainge and Kevin McHale in the final seconds.

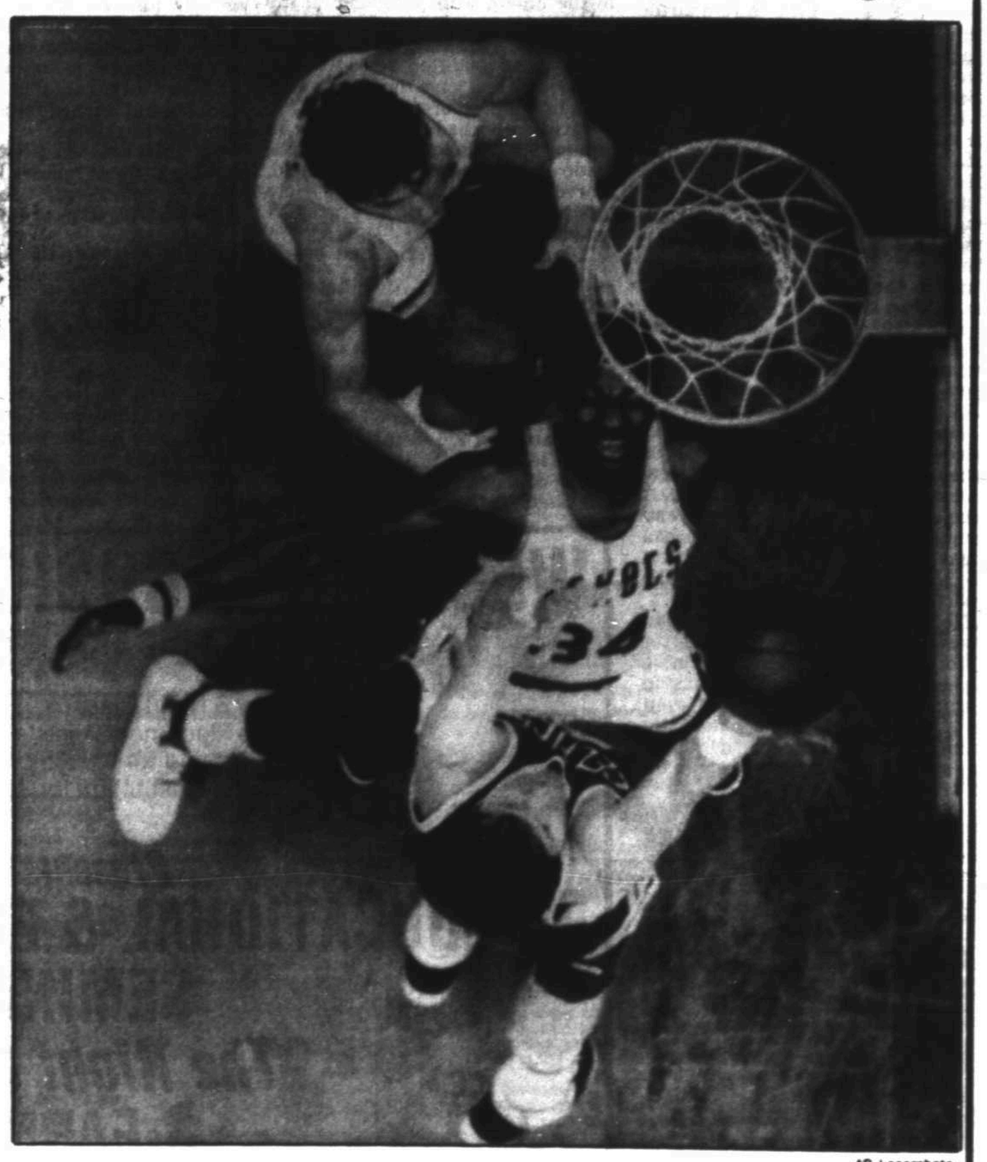

Bird scored only seven of his 21 points in the second half. Dennis Johnson and Robert Parish led Boston with 22 points each while McHale had 19. Ralph Sampson had 25 points, Akeem Olajuwon 20 points and 14 rebounds and Robert Reid 19 points for Houston.

The fourth quarter was incredibly close, even closer than the game as a whole, which had 19 lead changes and 13 ties. The final period started with the Celtics holding a one-point lead and it wasn't until Bird's three-pointer that either team led by more than two points. There were six lead changes in the first three minutes of the final quarter alone.

Boston, which beat the Rockets 4-2 in 1981 in the teams' only previous meeting in the finals, can win the title on Thursday. Even should the Celtics lose, they will have two games at home, where they have won 40 in a row.

While Houston was taking advantage of Boston turnovers in the first half, the Celtics stayed close by hitting 13 of 16 second-period shots. At the same time, the Rockets got 31 field-goal attempts but made only 14.

Angels blank Gators, 5-0

From Staff Reports

BEAUMONT— Urbano Lugo, who was 3-4 with the California Angels last year before arm miseries got the best of him, came to Midland this spring for rehabilitation.

He departed for Anaheim this morning, but left the Midland Angels with something to remember him by, combining with Dwayne Buice for a 5-0, four-hit shutout of the Beaumont Gators Tuesday night.

The win left the Angels just a game and a half behind the El Paso Diablos in the Texas League West Division race.

First baseman James Randall also gave the Gators a reminder that he was still around, breaking out of a slump with two singles, two doubles and an rbi to pace an eight-hit attack.

The win squared the series between the teams at 2-2 with two games to go before Midland comes home Friday night.

Lugo went the first six innings in three hit style to square his record at 1-1. Buice pitched one-hit ball over the final three innings to gain his fifth save.

Midland got just one earned run and that would have been enough. It came in the sixth when Randall singled, Billie Merrifield singled and after Glenn Walker was hit by a pitch to load the bases, Mike Brady plated the run with a sacrifice fly.

Midland scored three in the seventh with Doug Davis reaching on third baseman Bill Wrona's error. Jeff Schaefer doubled him home, Mark McLemore walked and Walker doubled home two more runs.

In the ninth Schaefer reached on catcher's interference and trotted home when Randall doubled.

Elsewhere, San Antonio southpaw Jeff Edwards, 2-4, scattered seven hits with eight strikeouts and one walk as the Dodgers whipped the El Paso Diablos 10-4.

Jackson edged Tulsa 8-6. Shreveport's contest at Arkansas was postponed due to rain.

The Dodgers' offensive end provided a 15-hit attack. Chris Chapman and Chris Gwynn gave San Antonio its sixth and seventh home runs in the past three games.

Chapman, hit his second homer of the week, a two-run blast over the right field fence in the first inning. He went 3-for-5 with three RBI.

The Dodgers chased El Paso starter Dan Murphy, 4-1, with a five-run outburst on five straight hits two innings later. Ken Harvey, Felipe Gutierrez and Chapman loaded the bases with singles.

After Tracy Woodson slapped a two-run base hit into left, Gwynn's liner over the right field fence cleared the bases.

Jackson scored five runs in the top of the first inning on three doubles, two singles and walk.

The Mets, who won 12 of their last 13 games, added three more runs in the second, two runs scored on a triple by first baseman Randy Milligan.

No. 1 seeds struggle, but reach semifinals

PARIS (AP) — Having proven they are human, Ivan Lendl and Martina Navratilova want to prove they deserve their No. 1 seedings in the French Open.

The top seeds both struggled a bit Tuesday before advancing to the semifinals.

Lendl lost his first set of the tournament before rebounding to beat ninth-seeded Andres Gomez of Ecuador 6-7, 7-6, 6-0, 6-0.

"I was a little nervous at the beginning and didn't want to give him easy points," Lendl said. "However, in the second set, I felt there was a barrier, and once I broke through it was easy for me."

On a cloudy, blustery day at Roland Garros, Gomez sounded like a pitcher who had just given up the lead run in the top of the fifth inning.

"I was hoping for rain," he said.

Navratilova stumbled before maintaining her perfect record in the tournament with a 7-5, 6-4 victory over seventh-seeded Kathy Rinaldi of the United States.

"I wasn't happy with my game but I was happy I fought for it," Navratilova said. "I didn't play well. I started out serving badly and it went from bad to worse."

In the next round, Lendl, of Czechoslovakia, plays one of the biggest surprises of this surprise-filled tournament — Johan Kriek, the only remaining American man, who upset 1977 French Open champion Guillermo Vilas 3-6, 7-6, 7-6, 7-6 in a match that lasted 4 hours, 16 minutes.

A match that was over in just 1:06 advanced Cezechoslovakia's Helena Sukova, the sixth seed, into a semifinal match with Navratilova and ended 14-year-old American Mary Joe Fernandez's upset string, 6-2, 6-4.

The last two semifinal berths were to be filled today, as men's No. 3 seed Boris Becker of West Germany was to play unseeded Mikael Pernfors of Sweden and another unseeded player, Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union, was to meet No. 8 Henri Leconte of France.

Fernandez, who still has three years of high school remaining back in Miami, had registered upsets over Helen Kelesi, Andrea Temesvari, Anne Hobbs and fourth-seeded Claudia Kohde-Kilsch before falling to Sukova.

Florida State rocks defending champion

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Richie Lewis struck out 10 and Eric Mangham had three hits and two runs batted in to lead Florida State to a 7-2 victory over defending champion Miami in the NCAA College World Series winners bracket semifinal Tuesday.

The two teams had billed the game as the Florida state championship. The teams split six games during the regular season.

The top-ranked Seminoles take their 59-11 record into Thursday's winners bracket final at 7:10 p.m. against No. 5-ranked Arizona, 47-18 after a 7-5 win over Loyola Marymount Monday. The winner of that contest earns a spot in the championship game Saturday or Sunday.

Miami, third-ranked, drops into the losers bracket with a 47-16 record to meet second-ranked Louisiana State, 55-13, at 7:10 p.m. That game follows another elimination game matching No. 4 Oklahoma State, 55-14, and No. 6 Loyola, 50-14, at 4:10 p.m.

Florida State picked up a pair of runs in the first inning on Bien Figueroa's RBI single and a bases loaded walk to Steve Taddeo before Dan Davies relieved Miami starter Will Vespe to end the rally.

Miami's Rick Richardi singled, went to second on a wild pitch, stole third and scored on a ground out in the bottom of the first.

The Hurricanes evened the score in the third when Greg Vaughn walked and advanced to third on an errant pickoff attempt. Richardi then lined an infield hit off the FSU shortstop and Vaughn scored when another pickoff try at first went into right.

In the seventh the Seminoles finally went to work on Davies, who faced the minimum 15 batters in his first five innings. A hit batsman, a single by Barry Blackwell and bunt by Greg Clayborne that left Miami no play loaded the bases.

Jose Marzan singled in one run. Paul Sorrento's fly to left scored another and Luis Alicea's single scored a third to chase Davies from the mound.

The Hurricanes came in with relief ace Rick Raether, who got a strike out but then yielded a two-run single to Mangham for a 7-2 FSU lead.

Lewis, 13-2, scattered 11 hits in picking up his eighth complete game of the season. Three of the hits were by Richardi.

Lewis, who lost to Miami earlier this year, led the nation with an average of 14.9 strikeouts per game this season. He struck out 10 or more in nine different games coming into the CWS.

Davies, 9-2, picked up the loss.

Hogan was Jimmy's pet project

Back in the early 1950s, Ranchland Hills Country Club played host to the City tournament once a year. It was the only opportunity the non-club member had to play. There was no public course for the Midland golfer.

City fathers decided to rectify the situation at the urging of a sometime pro, sometime greens expert named Jimmy Gamewell, who was on the staff at Midland Country Club.

Midland, a city of more than 50,000, pushing toward 60,000, was ripe for a public course and Van Ligon, Roy Minear and Fred Hogan agreed with Gamewell. They did more than agree. They picked Gamewell, who must have been one of the original "flat bellies" we hear so much about, to get the job done.

At the time, the professional ball park, built in 1954, was all there was north of the Hogan Park swimming pool. It was indeed deserted, desolate and, most suspected, rattlesnake infested.

"I branched out into golf agronomy and architecture because of something that happened when I was a pro," Jimmy, who got his start on the Woodrow Wilson High team and then hustled Tenneyson and Randall munies in Dallas, once related. "I saw a prominent pro lose his job as a club pro in Hollywood and a young golfer was named to take his place.

"I decided if his experience wasn't worth any more than that, I'd better do something else."

As a result, Jimmy developed a reputation as someone who would come in and build a course, run it for three years and then move on.

"I don't believe there is a course in West Texas or New Mexico that I haven't been in on as a consultant or trouble shooter," Jimmy related.

But it was always obvious that Midland and Hogan Park were special to Jimmy. Hogan opened Sept. 2, 1958 and the first green fee ticket was sold Nov. 21, 1959. Instead of the standard three years, he stayed around for almost 20 years.

If Jimmy liked Midland, the feeling was mutual.

He was here back in the years when the LPGA stopped for the Tall City Open, and after Mickey Wright shot her world record 62, he got requests of the hole-by-hole score from all over the world.

Gamewell had a way with a good yarn, whether it was about a Titanic Thompson or one of the legends like Ben Hogan. More than once a golf round became victim of a Gamewell story.

One of his favorites concerned the movie about Hogan, "Follow the Sun", made after the Bantam's come back after the near fatal auto accident near Van Horn.

Gamewell said the story depicted a scene where Hogan, early in his career, was literally down to his last orange. That's all Ben and Valerie, his wife, had to eat for supper. "It's true, Ben was just about ready to give it all up."

"What they didn't show in the movie," said Gamewell, "was that when Ben went out to his car for the final round the next morning, someone had taken all of the tires."

"Ben went out that day and won $600, which started him on his way."

When Gamewell left Hogan in 1975, he admitted, "The growth of the course made it too much for one man." That and his longtime battle with crippling arthiritis just wasn't getting any better.

When he left, Hogan ranked as the top muny course in West Texas.

Over the years we lost touch with Jimmy until Ray Jenkins called Monday to inform that, "We lost Jimmy down in Harlingen today...cancer."

Fans convinced pros on drugs

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Perhaps the most frightening statistic uncovered in Sports Illustrated's comprehensive investigation of Americans and their attitudes about athletics is that 86 percent of the respondents believe professional athletes use illegal drugs.

That is a devastating statistic, a huge number that could ultimately undermine this fragile house of cards.

For sports to succeed, fans must care about who wins and who loses. But why should they care if 86 percent of them believe the athletes are on heroin or cocaine, uppers or downers, or some combination of these performance-altering illegal substances?

Pollster Seymour Lieberman, who conducted the survey for SI, said his findings indicate "some erosion in the feeling that athletes are role models and heroes. We begin to see some chinks in the fans' affection (with sports). It remains to be seen if this turns to disaffection."

That spells trouble.

Within the drug section of the poll, Lieberman published some other interesting findings. One is that younger respondents were less concerned with the use of drugs by athletes than older people. But more young people than old —93 percent in the 18-34 category compared to 64 percent of those over age 65 — believe athletes are involved with drugs.

The poll named pro football and baseball as America's most popular sports — no surprise there. But those same sports also led the poll in the perception of drug usage with 62 percent and 54 percent, respectively. That means more than half of all Americans believe that athletes on the country's two most popular sports are using drugs.

Timing is important here. The poll was conducted last November and December, well after the Pittsburgh drug trials in which baseball's dirty laundry was embarassingly aired, but before the post-Super Bowl drug charges involving the New England Patriots. Would a later survey have increased pro football's numbers?

Seventy-three percent of those polled favor compulsory random drug tests for athletes while o¾ 14 percent opposed them. Only 20 percent, however, favored the strongest form of punishment, a ban for offenders. Steve Garvey of the San Diego Padres would have fallen in that category.

"We need hard, firm rules for abusers," Garvey said. "Rehabilitation plus one year (suspension) for the first time. The second time, it should be three to five years. It's a privilege to play professional sports and the right to play should be upheld by those who don't use drugs."

It may seem almost grandiose to question 2,000 people and then issue generalizations based on their responses. But Lieberman said that with a plus-minusmargin of error of 3 percent — routine for these kinds of surveys — his results are accurate.

"We do these polls with different samples and there is very little change in the results," he said. "You don't need a larger poll."

There was a light side to the survey, too. It inquired about what the respondents' greatest sports fantasy would be and discovered that more men, 35-32 percent, would prefer to throw the winning touchdown in the Super Bowl than to get the winning hit in the final game of the World Series.

Cardinal rookie tops Giants, 3-1

Associated Press

Ever since 20-game winner Joaquin Andujar was traded, the St. Louis Cardinals have been holding auditions for a starting pitcher. On Tuesday night rookie Greg Mathews may have claimed the part.

Mathews, making his major-league debut, pitched eight shutout innings before needing relief help in the ninth and Jack Clark hit a two-run homer as the Cardinals extended their winning streak to four games with a 3-1 victory over the Houston Astros.

Mathews, who was called up from Class AAA Louisville on Friday, took a four-hit shutout into the ninth. But Billy Hatcher led off with a single, stole second and scored on a two-out single by Kevin Bass. Phil Garner followed with Houston's seventh hit of the game before Todd Worrell relieved for his eighth save.

"I wasn't nervous, just excited and anticipating getting to pitch," Mathews said. "I just wanted to keep the game close. Every ball they hit hard went at somebody."

Mathews also contributed a suicide-squeeze bunt for St. Louis, which managed just three hits in the game.

"He only threw 97 pitches," Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog said. "He got his breaking ball and changeup over and in the right location."

Houston's Jim DeShaies, 1-2, took the loss despite allowing only two hits in six innings and striking out eight.

Andy Van Slyke singled with one out in the fourth for the Cardinals' first hit of the game. Clark, who had struck out in his previous four at-bats against Deshaies, followed with his sixth home run of the season. St. Louis added a run in the fifth when Ozzie Smith walked, advanced to second on a balk, took third on a grounder and scored on Mathews' bunt.

NATIONAL

Padres 5, Mets 4

Carmelo Martinez hit a two-run homer and Steve Garvey had a solo shot as visiting San Diego broke a four-game losing streak by beating New York.

Trailing 4-2, Tony Gwynn started the Padres' sixth inning with a single and scored on an RBI double by Kevin McReynolds. One out later, Martinez hit his fourth home run of the season off starter Sid Fernandez.

Braves 8, Pirates 5

Pinch-hitter Ted Simmons hit a grand slam that capped a seven-run outburst in the sixth inning, powering host Atlanta over Pittsburgh.

Simmons' first home run of the season marked his ninth career grand slam. It was the second pinch-hit grand slam for the Braves since moving to Atlanta in 1966, with Biff Pocoroba hitting the other one in 1977. Simmons was batting for Rick Mahler, 5-5. Paul Assenmacher recorded his fifth save.

Reds 5, Cubs 3

Nick Esasky hit a two-run homer that capped a three-run rally in the eighth inning and lifted Cincinnati over visiting Chicago.

Eddie Milner led off the eighth with a triple and scored the tying run on a single by Dave Parker, who had a two-run double in the sixth. Esasky, after fouling off a sacrifice bunt attempt, connected for his sixth home run of the season against Jay Baller.

Dodgers 11, Phillies 4

Greg Brock homered twice and doubled to drive in four runs and Fernando Valenzuela overcame a shaky start to lead visiting Los Angeles over Philadelphia, breaking the Phillies' seven-game winning streak.

The Dodgers had 15 hits in their highest-scoring game of the season as they broke a three-game losing streak.

Giants 7, Expos 6

Dan Gladden singled twice, stole two bases and scored a run and Vida Blue allowed two runs over five innings, helping visiting San Francisco beat Montreal.

The Giants won their third straight game but lost rookie first baseman Will Clark, who suffered a hyper-extended left elbow in a collision in the third inning. Clark will miss 10 days, team spokesman Duffy Jennings said.

AMERICAN

Orioles 4, Mariners 2

Larry Sheets drove in three runs and Mike Boddicker allowed five hits over seven innings as host Baltimore defeated Seattle.

Sheets and Fred Lynn each hit bases-empty homers for the Orioles, who have won 17 of 22, while the Mariners had their longest winning streak of the season snapped at three. Boddicker, 6-1, struck out eight. Don Aase pitched the final two innings for his 14th save, equalling his total of last season.

Red Sox 5, Indians 1

Don Baylor hit a two-run homer in the seventh to help streaking Boston over Cleveland at Fenway Park.

The Red Sox improved the American League's best record to 35-15 with their fourth consecutive victory, and 14th in the last 16 games.

Royals 4, Royals 1

Steve Balboni hit a solo homer and a run-scoring double and Bret Saberhagen broke a personal three-game losing streak with a seven-hitter to lead Kansas City over host Milwaukee.

Saberhagen, 3-5, won his first game since May 2, striking out five and walking one.

Blue Jays 6, Twins 5

George Bell snapped a tie with a run-scoring single in the seventh inning and Lloyd Moseby keyed a Blue Jays' rally as Toronto defeated visiting Minnesota.

With the score tied 5-5 and two out in the seventh, Moseby walked, stole second and scored on Bell's single to center off Keith Atherton, 2-3. Bell has an 11-game hitting streak. The victory was the fifth in the last six games for Toronto, while the Twins lost their fourth straight.

Rangers 4, White Sox 1

Gary Ward doubled in two runs to cap a four-run third inning and rookie Edwin Correa scattered four hits over seven innings Tuesday night to lead the first-place Texas Rangers over the Chicago White Sox.

It was the fifth triumph in the last eight games for the Rangers, all at the expense of the White Sox, who have lost nine of their last 10 games.

A's 6, Tigers 4

Dave Kingman hit his 16th career grand slam in the first inning as Oakland held on to beat Detroit, sending the Tigers to their fifth straight defeat.

Kingman's homer tied Babe Ruth and Hank Aaron for fifth place on the all-time grand slam list. Lou Gehrig is the all-time leader with 23. Kingman is the leader in grand slams among active players.

Angels 4, Yankees 2

Bob Boone hit a three-run homer in the seventh inning — his first at Anaheim Stadium in nearly two years — and Don Sutton earned his 298th career victory as California downed New York.

Sutton, 3-5, allowed six hits, walked two and fanned five over eight innings. Terry Forster pitched the ninth inning for his second save.

CELTS— Walton rescues Boston

Houston got 21 points in the first half from Ralph Sampson but led by only one point at halftime as the Celtics hit 63.4 percent of their shots. Houston made only 46.3 percent of its shots but managed to take the narrow lead because of a 12-7 advantage in offensive rebounds and a 9-3 margin in turnovers that resulted in 13 additional shots and a 14-0 margin in scoring after turnovers.

The Celtics, who routed Houston twice in Boston with third-quarter blitzes and nearly did it again in Game 3 with a 17-3 run at the start of the second half, continued that pattern Tuesday.

Boston outscored the Rockets 19-10 in the first 7¼ minutes of the third quarter for an 82-74 lead, the largest of the game for either team.

But Houston came back with seven consecutive points and trailed only 86-85 at the end of the period. The Rockets' 23 points was the first time in the series that had scored more than 20 in the third quarter.

After Houston led 10-5, McHale scored 10 of his 13 first-quarter points during a 21-11 streak that gave Boston a 26-21 advantage with 3:25 left.

The Rockets then scored the next seven points, regaining the lead when Lewis Lloyd grabbed an offensive rebound and hit a five-footer. A rare outside basket by McHale and jumpers by Reid and Bird, who had eight points apiece in the period, left the score tied 30-30 at the end of the quarter.

Neither team led by more than three points in the second quarter until Sampson got two consecutive three-point plays for a 50-45 Houston lead with 5:10 to go. Sampson went on to score 10 points in less than two minutes but a jumper by Parish with one second left cut the margin to 64-63 at halftime.

Walton rescues Boston

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

HOUSTON (AP) — Bill Walton figured his performance early in Game 4 of the NBA finals had earned him a spot on Boston's bench for the remainder of Tuesday night's game against the Houston Rockets.

However, Boston Coach K.C. Jones thought his starting center, Robert Parish, had earned a rest.

Enter Walton.

Jones put a refreshed Walton back in the lineup with the game on the line in the closing minutes and he responded with a key rebound and basket that solidified a 106-103 Boston victory and gave the Celtics a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

Parish, who had played poorly in Sunday's 106-104 loss to the Rockets, made 10 of 15 shots from the field, scored 22 points and ended the game on the bench in a state of exhaustion.

"I was so out of sync that everybody that played against me was getting the offensive rebounds so I was surprised when K.C. put me back in," Walton said.

"But at that point, nothing that's happened in your life to that point matters. You just have to go out and give it all you have."

Walton, who came to the Celtics in an off-season trade wth the Los Angeles Clippers in exchange for forward Cedric Maxwell, didn't have a bad game from a statistical point of view. In his 19 minutes of play, he made all five of his field-goal attempts for his 10 points and grabbed four rebounds. None was bigger than the offensive rebound he grabbed and turned into a basket with 1:39 remaining.

"At this time last year, I was watching these games from my home in San Diego," Walton said. "Now I'm playing again and I'm excited."

Walton, who led the Portland Trail Blazers to the NBA title in 1977, likes the close view of the championship series.

"After nine years, it is very nice to be sitting here," he said. "This is my life. I'm so excited because we are so close to accomplishing what we have worked so hard for all season."

Parish welcomed the rest and said he had already erased memories of his poor performance in Sunday's Game 3.

"I ran out of gas with two minutes left, everyone could see that, I don't think I could have done it," Parish said his 40-minute performance Tuesday. "It was a big, big game for us. We needed this win to get us on the right track.

"It was time for me to surface. I was almost invisible in Game 3. The defense was the key down the stretch."

Jones had no hesitation about returning Walton to the lineup.

Brevard CC seizes juco golf lead

CONROE (AP) — Fred Simons of Brevard Community College of Florida fired a 3-under-par 68, and Brevard carded a 286 to take the first-round lead Tuesday in the national junior college golf championship at Del Lago.

John Linberg from Florida Junior College and Andrew DeBusk, competing as an individual from Odessa College, also had 68s to share the individual lead with Simons.

The only other first-round score under par was Donnie Yrene of New Mexico Junior College, who managed a 70.

Florida Junior College is second with a 289, followed by Wallace State from Alabama, 296; New Mexico Military and New Mexico Junior College, 298.

The Florida teen-ager had a big chance right off. She had Sukova at break point three times in the second game, only to let the Czechoslovak hold serve and break back.

In the second set, Fernandez fought off a match point and held serve on the fourth try to make it 4-5, but Sukova then served out the match at love.

"I tried to win points at the net," Sukova said. "I beat her because I came in. Claudia should have come in more."

Mets' Hernandez makes 'em forget

Sports Analysis
By JOHN NELSON

Keith Hernandez has made the fans forget.

Off to one of the best starts of his career, the New York Mets first baseman has shed the label of druggie.

Baseball is once again foremost in his public life.

"He's an iron man out there," New York Manager Davey Johnson says. "He's been the one consistent factor on the team. I call him Mr. Consistency."

Since accepting conditions of a penalty imposed by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth earlier this year, Hernandez has refused to discuss the cocaine involvement he confessed during a federal drug trial in Pittsburgh last fall.

In what amounted to a plea to fans to forgive him, Hernandez issued a statement last Sept. 7 that said, in part: "Since early 1983, I have not used the drug. It's a chapter in my life that is closed, one that I am not proud of. ... Cocaine is a dead-end street. If I can be an example for young kids, as far as drugs are concerned, then don't mess with them."

THREE DAYS later, in his first post-testimony appearance at Shea Stadium, Hernandez received a standing ovation. In his recently published book, "If At First," he said he didn't believe "fans were saying, 'Well done, Keith, we approve.'" Rather, he hoped they were saying, "You made a mistake. It's over. ... We're OK, you're OK. Play ball."

On the road, there was a smattering of boos, and these continued as the Mets opened the 1986 season at Pittsburgh. The question easily could have nagged at him. How long would he have to live with the past? But he never gave his own fans a chance to boo him, to wonder whether drugs had cost him his skills. It was apparent from the very start they hadn't.

NOT ONLY has 1986 provided a fresh start for Hernandez, but it also has been what he calls his "best start ... since 1980."

"I've been a better second-half player my whole career, so this is really nice," Hernandez says. "It's been six years since I had a good start, and it's nice."

Going into tonight's game against San Diego, Hernandez was among the National League leaders in batting average (.347), hits (61), runs (32) and doubles (13). He also had 24 RBI, and had played in every game this season.

The best is yet to come, though, Hernandez says.

"I'm not really hot yet," he says, "not like I was last July."

Last July, Hernandez had 40 hits in 102 at-bats for a .392 average. He had 29 RBI, a .475 on-base percentage and an 11-game hitting streak.

"RIGHT NOW, I'm trying to be consistent, trying to stay away from slumps, and so far I've been successful," Hernandez says. "I'm not really in a groove. ... It's that feeling you get when everything is in synch and you know it.

"If I was in a groove, I'd be swinging at more first pitches, and I haven't been," Hernandez says. "I'm pleased with the way I'm swinging now, but there is a difference between being red hot and swinging the bat well."

There's no doubt in Hernandez's mind that he will get hot. It's only a matter of time.

"It's inevitable that you get hot, and it's inevitable that you get into a slump. I know I'll get hot sooner or later. Hopefully, I'll get into a hot streak before I get into a slump."

USFL blames troubles on prof's report

NEW YORK (AP) — United States Football League Commissioner Harry Usher told a federal jury that the problems of the fledgling league stem from a study made and presented by a professor at Harvard Business School.

Usher's reference to the study, presented in February 1984 to a group of NFL officials by professor Michael Porter, was made under cross-examination by NFL attorney Frank Rothman during Tuesday's session of the USFL's $1.5 billion antitrust suit against the NFL.

"What happened," Usher said in reply to a question by Rothman on why the USFL had moved teams from NFL cities, "is that once competition was really realized as to players salaries by the NFL ... it went up to Harvard and got exactly the strategy of what to do and that strategy has been followed, namely interrupt the flow of television moneys so that we cannot compete. It was a brilliant move, a brilliant strategy and it worked.

"The net result is we are dying. ... We have been pushed and shoved by the NFL and by the networks into this situation because of NFL pressure and there is nothing we can do except to survive in a marketplace where we hope the revenues from the gate will be sufficient to entertain it."

Usher was followed to the witness stand by Jim Spence, the former senior vice president of ABC sports and a man whom Usher described as "like a glacier" in his dealings with the USFL.

Spence, who will be followed by CBS Sports president Neal Pilson, testified that he advised the USFL against signing Herschel Walker, although that answer was stricken following an objection by USFL counsel Harvey Myerson.

But the main focus of the day was on Usher, who continued to emphasize his contention that the NFL had followed the recommendations of the Porter study to the letter, particularly in putting pressure on the television networks. One of the suit's demands is for a court order that the NFL be barred from one of the three major networks.

It was a contention from which Rothman could not shake him on Tuesday.

This Day In Baseball

June 4

1940 — The St. Louis Cardinals played their first night game at Sportsman's Park and lost to the Brooklyn Dodgers, 10-1.

1964 — Sandy Koufax of the Dodgers pitched his third no-hitter, striking out 12, as Los Angeles beat the Phillies 3-0 in Philadelphia.

1968 — Don Drysdale of the Dodgers blanked the Pirates 5-0 for his sixth straight shutout en route to a record 58 2-3 scoreless innings.

1974 — The game between the Cleveland Indians and the Texas Rangers at Cleveland's Municipal Stadium was forfeited to Texas. Umpire Nestor Chylak had problems with the fans throughout the evening — primarily because it was 10-cent beer night at the park — as they got out of control when the Tribe tied the score 5-5 in the bottom of the ninth.

Mexico whoops it up after World Cup win

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexican soccer fans flocked to Aztec Stadium to support their national team's World Cup debut Tuesday, then celebrated the 2-1 victory over Belgium by dancing, singing and partying in the streets.

Before a crowd of 110,000 which rocked the massive stadium every time the Mexicans did something positive, Fernando Quirante and national soccer hero Hugo Sanchez scored goals. Mexico then held off the Belgians, who got a goal by Erwin Vandenbergh late in the first half but could not produce anything more.

When the game ended, the street parties began. Within minutes of the conclusion, about 400 people had flocked to the Angel of Independence landmark to shout "Mex-i-co, Mex-i-co," and "Ganamos (We won!)." Others who were headed to the monument's steps to cheer, sound trumpets, wave flags and generally express their joy at the victory called on those passing by to join in the celebration.

Cars beeped their horns to the same rhythm as the cheers. By nightfall, thousands more were expected to jam the streets, blocking traffic with their reveling.

AT THE game itself, tens of thousands of Mexicans dressed in green, red and white — some with their faces painted in the Mexican national colors — created a constant din. The fans waved flags, chanted, and one banner high in the inexpensive seats proclaimed "Ayer Rationes Hoy Campeones" — "Yesterday Little Mice, Today Champions." A Mexican sports writer once referred to the Mexican soccer team as "little mice."

The fans whistled and yelled derisively when Belgian players appeared on the field, which was wet from a morning rain that stopped an hour before kickoff.

When the host team took the field, it was met with a thunderous ovation. That roar grew even louder when Quirante, a defender who moved up to attack, headed home a free kick by captain Tomas Boy at 23 minutes.

AT GUADALAJARA, Northern Ireland tied with Algeria 1-1, while Portugal stunned England 1-0 at Monterrey.

The Irish took an early lead when Norman Whiteside's free kick went off a defender in the Algerian wall and into the net.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Romance arises from nowhere and becomes very important. Pay attention to an urge to start or expand a family. Your social life will be busier than ever this summer. Investigate the background of someone who comes to you with a too-good-to-be-true business proposition. Your reputation could be at stake. The best investments reflect your interests. Routine and repetition are your pet peeves. Look for a job that has many different facets.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: actor Lee Horsley ("Matt Houston" and "Crossings"), news commentator Bill Moyers, actor-singer Bill Hayes, former Canadian P.M. Joe Clark, hockey's Andre Lacroix.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not make a job change until later in the year. An opportunity to boost your income may not be what it seems. Display your special talents to best advantage. Travel with family.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your warm heart unites you with someone who can be a source of inspiration and joy. New job opportunities surface. Romance is tied to a vacation plan.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You should get the response you have sought before the weekend. Refuse to remain in a hurtful relationship. New financial benefits come your way when you volunteer to help a business associate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take a more lighthearted approach and you will win the love and admiration you seek. A college student is motivated by encouragement from loved ones at a distance. Extra studying pays off.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A permanent relationship becomes possible. Know the difference between infatuation and true love. A major personal decision cannot be postponed.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You find a new creative challenge at work and decide to stay put. Good news arrives late in the day. You can tell romantic partner the truth if you have enough faith in your relationship.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Although memories seem real, time may have altered some important details. New financial backing is available. Investigate options. Home and family become more important to you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Put your own needs first. As long as you keep your temper under control, you should be able to make substantial gains. You are strongly attracted to a newcomer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make certain you handle family responsibilities in a mature way. Take stock of a parent's or child's needs before making any firm decisions. Romance is somewhat predictable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not let a financial backer dictate what you should do in regard to other business opportunities. Gratitude should not cancel out common sense. Avoid putting all your eggs in one basket.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The investment picture looks rosy. Spend within reasonable limits. Real estate offers may sound better than they really are. A false accusation against you will be disproved.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your healthy optimism will take you a long way. Plan a romantic weekend for two and see if you can leave work early tomorrow. You need to spend more quality time with mate.

Take a cruise Down Under and you may get to play against Paul Marston, Australia's entry in Royal Viking Line's Player of the Year competition. A theorist who is a staunch believer in the new Strong Pass artificial systems, he is also a player of rare ability. Here is an example of his skill from the 1985 Australian National Open Teams Championship.

The bidding given is what might take place at a table where normal methods were being employed. Suffice it to say that Marston reached the same contract in his methods, where the only information available to the defenders was that South held at least 13 points and that North held a minimum of 11 with a six-card or longer club suit and no singleton.

Since the ten of hearts appeared in dummy, West's lead of the jack marked East with a six-card suit headed by the ace-king and probably the king of spades—West was unlikely to lead from a short suit if he held a possible entry in the king of spades. Therefore, declarer needed to develop two extra tricks without surrendering the lead. The only hope was an endplay.

East signalled on the jack of hearts and declarer won the queen. He crossed to the ace of diamonds and took a winning spade finesse. When he cashed the king-queen of diamonds he was interested to note that East sluffed a heart. Next came the jack of clubs, which forced West to cover, and the table's king won. A spade to the ace stripped East of his last safe exit card, and he was then presented with the lead in hearts.

The best East could do was to take his four heart tricks. Then he had to lead away from his ten of clubs into dummy's A-9 tenace to give declarer his contract.

Rivers honored at Cambridge

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Comedian Joan Rivers has been singled out for a special award by the Hasty Pudding Theatricals, a Harvard University club that named her Woman of the Year in 1984.

Miss Rivers on Tuesday received an "Instant Pudding Award" while at the Harvard Coop department store during a book-signing appearance.

Peter Ocko, a producer for the club, said the award was "Hasty Pudding's way of saying 'Welcome back to Cambridge, Joan,'' and was "invented just for this occasion."

Ms. Rivers got the 1984 award for "a lasting and impressive contribution to the world of entertainment."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Prince protege Morris Day married his back-up singer Judy Jones in a Las Vegas wedding that featured Lou Rawls serenading the bride and groom, a publicist said.

Day, 29, originally from Minneapolis, acted and performed with his band the Time in Prince's 1984 movie "Purple Rain."

The only guests at Sunday's wedding at the Golden Nugget Hotel in Las Vegas, Nev., were the couple's parents, said spokesman David Brokaw.

At the time of the wedding, Miss Jones, 27, was working a temporary musical engagement with Rawls at the Golden Nugget, Brokaw said.

Miss Jones worked with Rawls for three years, and they recorded "Forever I Do (The Wedding Song)," which Rawls performed after the wedding, Brokaw said.

Along with his success in "Purple Rain," Day's group in 1984 had a top-10 album, "Ice-Cream Castles," and a hit single, "The Bird," which was performed in the film. Other hits by the group include "Cool" and "The Walk."

Gish

NEW YORK (AP) — Lillian Gish, whose stage and film career has spanned more than seven decades, has been given the Star Award for distinguished lifetime achievement in the theater.

Miss Gish tearfully accepted the honor Tuesday from actress Helen Hayes.

"She was magic to me and that magic stuck in your heart," said Miss Hayes.

Miss Gish, best known as the heroine of D.W. Griffith's 1915 classic film "Birth of a Nation," appeared on Broadway as Ophelia to John Gielgud's Hamlet and in the original stage version of Horton Foote's "A Trip to Bountiful."

The award is given annually by the Friends of the Theater Collection of the Museum of the City of New York.

Barrows

NEW YORK (AP) — "Mayflower Madam" Sydney Biddle Barrows has been allowed to keep quiet about potentially lucrative book and movie deals stemming from her guilty plea in a prostitution case.

A judge said Tuesday that Miss Barrows, a descendant of Pilgrims, does not have to tell the state Crime Victims Board about the deals because prostitution is a victimless crime.

Miss Barrows pleaded guilty in July to fourth-degree prostitution. Authorities said she ran three escort agencies whose employees were expensive hookers.

After the plea, Miss Barrows signed to write a book and movie screenplay about her experiences. The Crime Victims' Board moved to see whether any money from these deals could be seized to compensate "victims" of her crime, under a state law designed to keep criminals from profiting from their crimes.

CLEVELAND (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan is expected to visit the Cleveland Clinic next week for routine tests, a clinic spokesman says.

The spokesman, Gary Weiland, said Tuesday that the clinic had been contacted about Hussein's visit, but has not received official confirmation.

Hussein was in Paris on Tuesday to meet with French President Francois Mitterrand. He is to go on to Britain and the United States, where he will meet with President Reagan on Monday.

Hussein, accompanied by his American-born wife, Queen Noor, visited the clinic for three days in February 1984.

CHICAGO (AP) — A bridge over the Chicago River will be renamed this week in honor of longtime Chicago Sun-Times columnist Irv Kupcinet, Mayor Harold Washington announced.

"Kup has served the city of Chicago and the Sun-Times for 50 years," Washington said Tuesday. "Now it is the city's chance to honor him with the renaming of a Chicago landmark."

One end of the Wabash Avenue Bridge is in front of the newspaper's building. The span was built in 1930, five years before Kupcinet began his journalistic career. Kupcinet, now 73, began writing his column for the Sun-Times in 1943.

The City Council passed an ordinance in December renaming the bridge. Washington plans to make it official Thursday by unveiling a plaque bearing the columnist's name in a ceremony featuring a band of Police Department bagpipers.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Robert Davis, R-Mich., has been moved out of a hospital coronary care unit as he continues to improve from a heart attack, an aide to the lawmaker said.

Davis remains in satisfactory condition, Fairfax Hospital spokeswoman Brenda Baird said today. His condition was upgraded from serious to satisfactory on Tuesday.

Davis, 53, who suffered a mild heart attack Saturday, was expected to remain in a suburban Virginia hospital for several more days for rest and tests, said aide Mark Ruge.

"He's sitting up and doing very well," Ruge said.

Davis was elected to Congress in 1978 and is seeking a fifth term. His district covers all of Michigan's Upper Peninsula and part of the northern Lower Peninsula.

LONDON (AP) — Dame Anna Neagle, the famed British actress who had a 69-year stage and film career, died Tuesday at age 81.

Dame Anna made her stage debut as a dancer in 1917. Her rise to stardom began in the chorus line of impresario C.B. Cochran at the Theater Royal in London's Drury Lane in 1925. Dame Anna appeared in Charlot and Cochran revues in London and New York until 1930, when she began getting roles in musicals and plays. Dame Anna formed a partnership with film producer Herbert Wilcox, who starred her in 33 of his 300 films. Her films included "Victoria the Great," "Sixty Glorious Years," "Spring in Park Lane" and "Odette." Dame Anna was created a Dame of the British Empire in 1969.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Augusto Ruschi, 70, the naturalist witch doctors tried to cure of a liver disease, died Tuesday.

Two Indian witch doctors offered in January to treat Ruschi, whose work in the wilderness had included cataloguing 80 percent of the known species of Brazilian hummingbirds. Ruschi said he had touched poisonous toads in the jungle 10 years earlier, and since then his liver had gradually ceased to function.

Authorities in southern Illinois say 50 children were injured, four critically, when their school bus collided with a truck on Route 16 near Jerseyville.

Truck carrying logs slams into school bus

JERSEYVILLE, Ill. (AP) — A school bus filled with children slammed into a log truck Tuesday on a state highway, injuring 50 youngsters, two teachers, and both drivers, authorities said.

"The brakes on the truck failed, it ran a stop sign and the bus broadsided it," said Jersey County Sheriff Frank Yocum.

Three students and the driver of the bus, 29-year-old Monica Woelfel, were taken to St. Louis hospitals, where the children were listed in satisfactory condition. The driver's condition was being evaluated, said a St. Luke's Hospital nursing supervisor.

Of the 50 victims treated at Jersey Community Hospital, three students and truck driver David Krause, 31, of Jerseyville, were admitted and listed in satisfactory condition, authorities said.

"The kids ranged in age from 7 to 15, but I don't know how many of each there were — what grades or ages," Yocum said.

The accident occurred on Illinois Route 16 just after 12:30 p.m., the sheriff said.

The bus was taking children from Hardin, a village of 1,100, to swimming lessons at Lewis and Clark Community College, Yocum said. The truck belonged to Krause and Sons Implement Co. and was carrying small logs, he said.

Yocom said Krause was charged with running a stop sign and driving a vehicle with faulty equipment.

Reagan criticizes defense cut advocates

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — President Reagan today criticized advocates of defense cuts, saying they should "tell it to the Marines," and campaigned for tax revision and his views on fair trade.

"To all of those who say we must always cut defense first, that America can't afford a strong military, I have just one thing to say: Tell it to the Marines," Reagan told about 200 graduates who have completed an 11-week training course at Parris Island Marine Recruit Depot near Beaufort, S.C.

In an address later for a fund-raising event for Rep. James T. Broyhill, R-N.C., who is running for the Senate, Reagan lauded Broyhill as a supporter of his plan to overhaul the federal tax code.

Turning to trade, however, he conceded that he and the GOP senatorial nominee may not always see eye to eye.

"I know there have been pains and strains here, pockets of industry that have not only not recovered but have gotten worse in some respects," the president said.

"There have been plant closings, and there have been farmers who've had it rough. We're not unaware of this back in Washington.

"We may not always see things eye to eye but we have the same desire — to make life better for the people of our country and the people of this region . . . That's why we will continue to press for that level playing field through fair trade actions in every area," Reagan said.

Senate OKs higher student loans, grants

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Expressing support for an end to court-ordered school busing in desegregation cases, the Senate has voted to authorize higher education student loans and grants for the next five years.

The non-binding procedural vote on Sen. Jesse Helms' proposal to curb the power of federal judges to order school busing came Tuesday evening before the Senate voted 93-1 to pass the higher education bill.

The higher education bill authorizes $6.5 billion for Pell Grants, direct and guaranteed student loans and other federal programs in the 1987 fiscal year to help financially needy students attend college and graduate school.

The Senate bill cuts $2.1 billion from the $8.6 billion authorized in the current fiscal year and imposes an income eligibility standard for Pell Grants.

Senators voted 50-45 against tabling the amendment by Helms, R-N.C., to prohibit federal judges from ordering students to ride 15 minutes or five miles past their neighborhood school as part of racial desegregation plans.

"For 15 years, we have had this folly imposed by the courts," Helms said. "For 15 years we have had the courts trying to be a school board. I say enough is enough, and 80 percent of the black parents in this country say the same thing."

Helms, who cast the only negative vote against the education bill, withdrew his amendment after receiving assurances from Republicans on the Judiciary Committee that a similar measure that is being blocked by opponents on the panel would be passed.

But Helms used the non-binding vote to demonstrate support for the measure.

"The U.S. Senate has spoken once more on this issue," Helms said, recalling a 1982 vote to approve a similar measure, which later died in the House.

The education bill limits Pell Grants to students whose families have annual incomes of less than $30,000 after taxes. An estimated 35,000 students would become ineligible to receive the grants if this provision became law.

The Senate also approved on a 60-34 vote an amendment by Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., to cut $100 a year from proposed increases in maximum Pell Grants.

Under the amendment, Pell Grants would increase in five steps from the current $2,100 to $3,100 in 1991. The original language would have increased the grants to $3,200 over the same period.

Dole said he proposed the change in an effort to win Reagan administration approval of the bill, which must be reconciled with a different measure passed late last year by the House.

During the debate on school busing, Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., called Helms's amendment "a pernicious attempt to undermine basic constitutional rights" of citizens to win protection from courts.

"If you could move into an area of pending litigation and deprive the courts of litigation you would absolutely violate any concept of what is right and what is fair in our judicial system," said Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md.

"The Congress created the inferior courts and the Congress can do anything it wants to about the inferior courts, including abolishing them," Helms said.

"The courts are not competent to run the schools, but that is precisely what has happened," he added.

As part of the higher education bill, the Senate adopted language proposed by Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, to allow the sale of defaulted student loans to collection agencies, which are currently hired to seek repayment of unpaid obligations.

Gramm's amendment, which was passed on a voice vote, also would require the education secretary to attach up to 25 percent of the wages of federal employees who are in default of their student loans.

At one point several years ago, 35,000 federal employees owed $47 million on defaulted student loans. Since then, the government has collected about $15 million, Gramm said.

The Gramm amendment also would require the government to withhold benefits to recipients who are in default. Exempted from this provision would be Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Supplemental Security Income and Medicaid.

Americans have defaulted on $4.3 billion worth of direct or guaranteed student loans, Gramm said.

Bennett visits school that's no longer 'tough'

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — Education Secretary William J. Bennett has often cited Eastside High School as a shining example of what no-nonsense discipline can do for a tough inner city high school.

On Tuesday, he finally visited Eastside and its principal, former military drill leader Joe Clark, who during his four years at the school has gained national attention for freely suspending hundreds of students and roaming the corridors with a bullhorn.

Bennett greeted upperclassmen at an assembly and was visibly impressed by the apparent orderliness and enthusiasm in a place that only a few years ago was just another tough, drug- and violence-ridden high school.

"When your principal and teachers decided that drugs had no place here, it was because they knew that drugs are the enemy of life itself, and that people can't concentrate on the best things if drugs are in the way," Bennett said.

> "When your principal and teachers decided that drugs had no place here, it was because they knew that drugs are the enemy of life itself, and that people can't concentrate on the best things if drugs are in the way."
>
> — William J. Bennett

Even a visiting education secretary had to abide by Clark's strict security rules. When Bennett arrived at the school door, a visitor's pass was pasted on his lapel, and he cheerfully complied.

"I don't want that bullhorn in my ear," he said. "We'd heard so much about this school, we wanted to see the reality."

Bennett asked the gathering: "Is this a good school? Is Joe Clark a good man? Are you learning something here?"

After each question, the students bellowed back: "Yes!"

"I applaud and praise Eastside High not only for Eastside's sake, but for the sake of others, in hopes that other schools will learn from what you have done," he said.

Clark, in introducing Bennett, told cheering students: "Eastside has come from disgrace to amazing grace!"

Clark suspended 525 students for various infractions in January, and has freely removed or disciplined hundreds of others since becoming principal four years ago.

Bennett has repeatedly lashed out at student drug-use lately. In an appearance before Congress several weeks ago, he suggested that federal aid should be withheld from schools or colleges that fail to make a good effort to eradicate the drug problem.

Clark's harsh methods have been criticized by some. Local fire officials, for instance, removed chains and padlocks Clark had placed on the school doors to increase school security.

Still, state-administered test scores have improved. In 1982, only 39.6 percent of ninth graders scored at the state average on standardized reading tests; by 1985, 66.7 percent scored satisfactorily.

"I have heard a great deal about Eastside High, about you, about your accomplishments," said Bennett. "Seeing your school in person bears out all that I've heard. You have many reasons to be proud."

Dollar falls

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell in thin, nervous trading today with dealers voicing disappointment at U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker's latest assessment of exchange rates. Gold was slightly down.

"Right now the market is very uncertain," said a Frankfurt dealer. "The statements yesterday by Baker were disappointing. People were hoping for a better indication of U.S. policy on the dollar."

In a speech Tuesday in Boston, Baker said the considerable move in exchange rates since September "should play an important part in reducing external imbalances." He called on West Germany and Japan to boost domestic growth, warning that otherwise exchange rates would increasingly become the means of easing trade imbalances.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4935, compared with $1.4925 Tuesday.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar lost another 0.65 yen to close at 171.50.

Japanese officials are worried that the strong yen is hurting their exports. A survey by Japan's Economic Planning Agency released Tuesday says Japanese business chiefs see an exchange rate of 207 yen to the dollar as the minimum level needed to guarantee export profitability.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $341.50 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $342.50. At mid-morning today the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $341.40.

California, Massachusetts will lead the way in creating jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — California and Massachusetts communities will lead the nation in new jobs through the turn of the next century, according to a private study that predicts that nearly half of all new jobs will be in just 30 metropolitan areas.

The National Planning Association said Tuesday that the Los Angeles metropolitan area will have the most new jobs between now and the year 2000, followed by the Boston metro area.

"The trends we are seeing are for continuing growth in the South and West ... but we are also starting to see a little larger growth in the northeastern, traditional industrial areas," said Carlton N. Strong of the Planning Association.

There are expected to be just over 26 million new jobs available for Americans by 2000, with more than 12 million of them occurring in 30 metropolitan areas, says the study by the Planning Association, an independent economic research group.

The anticipated job growth in Los Angeles parallels the overall growth of that region. A study by the Commerce Department's Bureau of Economic Analysis projects that Los Angeles will become the nation's most populous metro area by 2000, surpassing New York.

That government study, released last December, also picked Los Angeles as the region with the greatest potential for job growth, followed by Houston and Boston.

The Planning Association study anticipates that Los Angeles will add just over a million new jobs for a total of 5.3 million in 2000.

But the association said Boston will add nearly 755,000 new jobs for the second largest growth, followed by Anaheim, Calif.; San Jose, Calif. and Phoenix, Ariz.

Houston is expected to gain nearly 498,000 jobs by 2000 to rank seventh in growth.

Project aims to match workforce and workplace needs

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business Oil/Writer

A major research project, funded by the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission and headed by Big Spring businesswoman, Johnnie Lou Avery, is underway to determine the education and training necessary to match workforce to workplace needs for the remainder of this century.

According to Avery, between now and the end of the century, experts predict that dramatic economic and demographic shifts could create severe mismatches between the needs of the workplace and workforce capabilities.

"The Permian Basin cannot afford to have large segments of the population unemployed, unemployable, underemployed, displaced or dislocated. Business people are finding it increasingly important that business, education, community agencies and government join hands to anticipate and meet workplace/workforce needs," said Avery.

She said groups throughout the state would be watching the Permian Basin closely to see how the research project resolves these basic problems, because it is the first such project in the state and will be used as a pilot project for other areas and communities in the state.

Funds have been provided through the Job Training Partnership Act to the Private Industry Council of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission to help coordinate and plan an approach to employment training and educational activities in the Permian Basin.

Avery says the five key problems that will be addressed are:

- illegal aliens and their impact upon the area job market;
- the lack of entry level personnel with basic skills;
- the increased dropout rate among teenagers as schools strive for excellence;
- the dramatic increase in teenage mothers who are becoming permanent welfare fixtures and will never enter the job market;
- the fact that, shortly, more women that men will be eligible for the job market; and,
- drugs in the workplace.

Project leaders have set out three goals:

- To form a partnership of business, education, community resources and government to pool problems and ideas for constructive planning.
- To develop a coordinated master plan of action for employment, job training and education activities on a continuing bases to meet the needs of the Permian Basin in the next decade and beyond.
- To eliminate duplication and provide for unmet needs in the delivery system between education and job training to the job market so that limited resources will be used most effectively.

Avery, the owner of a consulting firm and former nominee for 1984 Outstanding Business Advocate by Texas Business magazine, has formulated some steps that she feels will help accomplish the goals set out.

Step one of the project will involve gathering of data to be used as a foundation for future direction of the study according to predictions and projections. Information from all 17 counties in the Permian Basin, as well as statewide and national data, will be thoroughly examined.

After the information is compiled, a 'super conference' is planned in September for leaders to study the data base and chart the course for job training and vocational rehabilitation to meet future employment needs. At the end of the conference, a Directions Committee will be formed to meet every two years for review and modification of the project to cope with unforeseen developments and fast-changing needs.

Finally, the findings and recommendations of the 'super conference' will become the master plan submitted for final acceptance to the Education Advisory Subcommittee of the Private Industry Council.

Gulf refiners urged to produce unleaded gas

HOUSTON (AP) — Gulf Coast oilmen should only produce unleaded gasoline as leaded gasoline faces a diminishing market with most cars on the road today using unleaded gasoline, according to speakers at a Houston seminar.

The seminar Tuesday, sponsored by the New York Mercantile Exchange, featured five oil trading officials who talked of trends in gasoline trading.

By 1987, most refineries will only produce unleaded gasoline, Arnold Safer, president of the Energy Futures Group, predicted.

As a result, the exchange will trade only unleaded gasoline as of November, said Frank Capozza, chairman of Century Resources Corp. and a member of the NYMEX Board.

Federal regulations also make leaded gasoline as costly to produce as unleaded, the speakers added.

Gasoline accounts for about half the use of crude oil, Capozza said.

Exchange officials sponsored the seminar to encourage Gulf Coast oilmen to trade on their market instead of selling among themselves as they have traditionally done, NYMEX President Rosemary McFadden said.

In particular, independent or small oil companies have shied away from making gasoline because six or seven major oil companies have dominated the market, she said.

But that is changing as the market opens and more large oil companies trade gasoline on the exchange, she said.

The oilmen could help control the price of their products by trading on the Exchange, she added.

That's because producers of unleaded gasoline trading on the exchange could negotiate prices months before they refined their oil, said Steve Errera, president of Energy Futures Inc.

He and other speakers said unleaded gas producers could use a variety of options on the exchange to profit — even in a sluggish market.

Overall, the exchange continues to grow in trading oil commodities — from crude oil to heating oil to unleaded gasoline, McFadden said.

Two companies merge oilfield supply divisions

HOUSTON (AP) — Armco Inc. and United States Steel Corp. will combine their oil field supply divisions in a joint venture to cope with the overcapacity in the equipment and service sector, the companies announced.

The companies have agreed to merge Armco's National Supply Co. and U.S. Steel's Oilwell division in an equal joint venture expected to be in place by the end of the year.

Both firms manufacture and distribute oil field drilling equipment and supplies. National Supply and Oilwell both are operating at about 25 percent of capacity, company executives said.

"It makes a lot of sense to put the organizations together," said John Tumazos, a steel industry analyst at Oppenheimer & Co. in New York. "The oil field is a small shadow of what it used to be."

Oilwell has 1,200 employees, including 560 in Texas and 85 in Houston. It operates plants in Garland, Texas, as well as Oklahoma, New Mexico and Pennsylvania. It also operates about 75 supply stores.

National Supply has bout 2,400 employees, with more than 250 workers in Houston. Its major Texas plants are in Gainesville and San Marcos, and it also has about 60 supply stores.

Hispanic chamber hears proposal on loan fund

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

At a meeting of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Tuesday, the Eastside Economic Development task force reported on several proposals between the task force and the Midland city council.

The task force's finance committee will meet with the city's planning and zoning commission to propose a revolving loan fund, according to Nancy Vickrey, manager of the task force. She said the proposal, which includes $150,000 in funds for loan money and $60,000 for administrative expenses, was presented to Assistant City Manager Mike McGregor.

Vickrey noted that the plan was well received by McGregor, who asked that the task force include in the proposal a plan for a small business incubator program. She told members of the chamber that the city council is very interested in an incubator program and wanted a proposal to review.

Manuel Carrasco, chairman of the task force, informed the members that the Midland Housing Corp. has a substantial amount of money for housing development, and is seeking ideas on how to use the money. Maria Antonieta Soto, first vice president of the chamber, suggested using some money for emergency house payments, for those who have lost their jobs and can't make their house payments. Ms. Soto also stated that the Jaycees have scheduled July 19 as a "Clean Eastside Midland" day.

Other business included planning of the Midland Ethnic Folk Festival, a sanctioned Sesquicentennial event scheduled for June 28 at the Midland County Exhibit Building.

Sam Flores, chairman of the Festival committee, announced that Coors has pledged $2,000 towards the festival, and Chevron is getting a check ready for presentation. The chamber has gotten a commitment for a carnival for the festival, and is seeking entertainment for the 12-hour event. "Music is fine, but we want other things, like magicians, jugglers," noted Roger Robles, president of the chamber.

Decline doesn't deter dream

Energy library up and running

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

What started out as a dream of the West Texas Geological Society is now a full-fledged reality that promises to become a "dream" energy library.

A brain child of the society, the Midland Energy Library, which opened to the public May 1, is now up and running under the leadership of new director Marvin Harges. It has over 300 members and promises to be one of the largest and most complete regional energy libraries in the country. He said that six months ago, the library looked like a warehouse that had been bombed. "There were boxes and piles of files everywhere, but today it's mostly under control, except for the data we are still receiving."

To date the geological research facility has over 3 million well completion cards; 200,000 electric logs; 37,000 sample logs. On microfiche, the library contains all of Geomap logs for Texas Railroad Commission districts 7B, 8, 8A, and 7C and is working to put historical New Mexico data on microfiche. Also contained on microfiche are Dwight's production data and TRC production data.

Director Harges, a Gulf geologist for 30 years, says material is still flowing into the library from a variety of sources: "We just received a ton of material from Oklahoma, some from the Williston Basin and Illinois."

He said the library had been allowing membership to some volunteers for helping organize the boxes of geological materials pouring into the research facility, which now occupies half of the 11th floor of the Midland Savings Building.

The first quarter average sales price for domestic oil was $17.38 per barrel in 1986 and $23.03 per barrel in 1985; the average sales prices for foreign oil was $24.17 and $28.01 during the first quarters of 1986 and 1985 respectively. The average natural gas sales price was $2.36 per Mcf in 1986 versus $2.94 per Mcf in 1985.

The 1985 results were restated to give effect to an affiliate's restatement of its prior results to reflect a change from the full cost to the successful efforts method of accounting for its oil and gas operations. The effect on Adobe was a reduction totaling $734,000 from the previously reported first quarter 1985 amount.

Louisiana rig count hits new low

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Louisiana's drilling industry continued its long slide and set a new round of record lows last week with the active rig count dipping by six.

Hughes Tool Co. records show 110 rigs were active in the state last week, down from 116 the previous week. The monthly average for May was 118 working rigs — a new record low.

Last week was the 12th consecutive week the rig count in Louisiana has hovered below 200. The decrease continued the downturn that has been underway for most of 1986.

Throughout the nation, the rotary rig count dipped to 772 last week, a drop of 22 from the week before.

Offshore Data Services of Houston said 78 rigs were under contract or drilling in the Gulf last week, while 168 rigs were idle.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Lower first quarter earnings reported by Mitchell

HOUSTON (SWN) Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. earned $4,156,000, or nine cents per share, in the first quarter of its current fiscal year, down from $10,393,000, or 22 cents per share, in the same period a year earlier.

Revenues for the quarter, which ended April 30, amounted to $168,495,000, compared with $207,472,000 in the corresponding prior-year period.

Chairman and President George P. Mitchell said the decreases in revenues and earnings were primarily caused by the sharp drop in energy prices. In addition, he noted, earnings were reduced by about $975,000, or two cents per share, as a result of a write-down of oil and gas properties by a partnership in which the company participates.

Mitchell said the company's cost-cutting efforts are continuing and that its capital spending is being held to the reduced level previously announced. Some of the expense-reduction measures became effective after the first quarter had ended, he added.

Raymond Fabricators' Louisiana facility sold

HOUSTON (SWN) Raymond Fabricators Inc., a subsidiary of Raymond Offshore Constructors, Inc., has announced that its offshore fabrication facility in Houma, Louisiana has been sold for an undisclosed sum to Park Corp. of Cleveland. Raymond Fabricators had announced earlier this year that the fabrication facility would cease operations mid year, when all client contractual obligations were met.

All of Raymond Fabricators' moveable assets and real estate, which includes machinery and a pipe mill, are included in the sale. Park Corp. will not continue the present operations, and plans to seek appropriate uses for the on-site pipe mill, docking facilities, and other assets. Park Corp., headed by President Raymond P. Park, is a private industrial company involved in equipment, land and real estate sales activities, including the development of several million square feet of property in the industrial North East. Park said that the purchased assets will be leased back to Raymond Fabricators through early August, with all client contractual obligations scheduled for completion at the end of July.

Summit votes to defer dividend payment

DALLAS (SWN) Summit Energy, Inc. announced that as a result of lower oil prices the board of directors of Summit has voted to defer the dividend payment on the company's cumulative preferred stock for the next quarter. The dividend would have been payable June 30, 1986 to all holders of record of the preferred stock on the close of business on June 16, 1986.

The Company said it will make a determination on future dividends depending on financial conditions prevailing at the time.

Triton extends offer for Cambridge stock

DALLAS (SWN) Triton Energy Corp. announced that its wholly-owned subsidiary, CRC Acquisition Corp., would purchase all shares of common stock and preferred stock of Cambridge Royalty Co. tendered prior to the original expiration date of 12:00 Midnight, New York City time on June 3, 1986, pursuant to its May 6, 1986 offer for any and all outstanding shares of common stock and preferred stock. Triton noted that a nominal number of shares have been tendered to date under the offer. Triton and CRC also announced that the offer was being extended until Tuesday, June 24, 1986, at 12:00 Midnight, New York City time. All shares of common stock and preferred stock of Cambridge tendered prior to such expiration date, will, subject to the terms and conditions of the offer, be accepted for payment as they are properly tendered.

Triton, headquartered in Dallas, is an independent oil and gas exploration and production company with oil and gas interests in 11 countries.

Houston chosen as site for $20 million plant

HOUSTON (UPI) — Houston's focus on energy and transportation put the city ahead of other Gulf coast cities as the location for a new $20 million plant to blend, package and distribute lubricating oils, developers said.

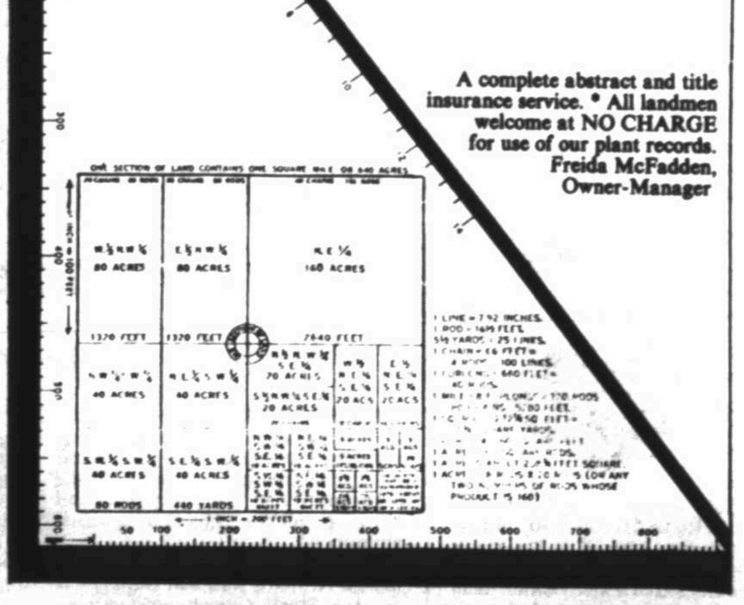

Texaco USA, GATX Terminals Corp. and Republic Services Corp. will build and operate the plant under the name Lubripac, a subsidiary in which each corporation holds an equal interest.

"Houston, as the international energy capital of the world, offers a valuable combination of rail, marine and over-the-road transportation that can serve both domestic and international markets," said James Lee, Lubripac general manager.

"This new 'grass roots' facility will represent a substantial investment in the greater Houston business community," Lee added Monday.

The plant is slated to include 100 tanks representing 12 million gallons of capacity, 150,000 square feet of warehouse space and complete batch and automated in-line blending capability. Raw materials will be received by ship, barge, rail or truck, officials said.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

You only pay tax on amount of interest earned

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Earlier this year, I bought a 12 percent $10,000 corporate bond. In addition to my purchase price, I paid the broker $349.65 for "accrued interest." The bond pays interest semi-annually. My first interest check, for $600, arrived May 1. Of course, I'll get another $600 interest check on November 1.

When I file my 1986 income tax return, will I have to pay tax on $1,200 interest?

Doyle

A. No. You'll be required to pay tax on $850.35 interest from that bond — the amount you earned.

Like most "marketable" bonds — those bought and sold in the marketplace — the one you own trades on an "and interest" basis. That means you, as buyer, get the interest from the time of purchase. Whoever sold the bond gets the interest up to that date.

Although the bond pays interest twice a year, interest accrues on a daily basis. The $349.65 accrued interest you paid went to the previous owner who sold that bond.

Next January, the bank acting as interest paying agent for that bond will send you a Form 1099-Int, showing that $1,200 interest was sent to you. But, on your income tax return, you can adjust for the $349.65 accrued interest you paid when you bought the bond.

List the entire $1,200 as interest income on Schedule B, along with all your other taxable interest income. Add it up as a subtotal. Then subtract the $349.65 with the notation "Accrued Interest." Report the resulting number as taxable interest income.

Q. I have figured out a way to collect interest from corporate and U.S. Treasury bonds and never pay income tax.

I'll buy a bond immediately after its semiannual interest payment date and sell it shortly before its next interest payment date. I'll be entitled to, say, five months' interest. The buyer of the bond will have to pay that interest, which I'll receive from my broker.

Because the interest won't come to me from the bond's paying agent, the IRS will have no record of my receiving it. What are your comments on my idea?

A. Besides being tax fraud, which could put you in the slammer, it won't work.

All payers of taxable interest and dividends — including brokerage firms — are required to send Forms 1099 listing the amount. One copy of each 1099 goes to you, as the interest or dividend recipient. Another copy goes to the IRS in "machine readable" form, to be fed into computers.

In your ploy, that in-between-interest-dates interest would be listed on 1099s sent to you and the IRS by the brokerage firm or bank through which you bought and sold the bond. The revenooers would nab you.

• • •

Q. Owners of municipal bonds do not receive Forms 1099, because municipal bond interest is "tax free" for most people. But people on Social Security have to pay federal income tax on part of their SS benefits when their adjusted gross income, plus half of their SS benefits and all of their municipal bond interest exceeds $32,000 for married couples filing joint returns, $25,000 for individuals and zero for married people filing separately.

My wife and I are on Social Security. We have bought and sold municipal bonds between their semiannual interest dates, paying accrued interest on purchases and collecting accrued interest on sales. Does the IRS have any record of the accrued interest in these transactions?

A. No. It's up to you or whoever prepares your income to do those calculations. That's not too difficult. You should keep records of the municipal bond interest you collect, the accrued interest you pay when you purchase bonds and the accrued interest you receive when you sell bonds.

If the calculations aren't done correctly, you'll be in trouble if the IRS audits your tax returns.

• • •

Q. I am concerned that the management of a mutual fund might abscond with the fund's assets. What likelihood is there of that?

A. Virtually none. A mutual fund's management does not hold the fund's assets. The Investment Company Act of 1940 specifies that those assets must be held by an outside custodian bank.

All mutual fund management people are covered by fidelity bonds. In the handful of cases in which Light-Fingered Louies in management contrived ways to get their hands on mutual fund money, fidelity bonds covered the loss. The funds and shareholders suffered no loss.

An important point to keep in mind is that no mutual fund has gone bust since the passage of the '40 Act. The value of every stock and/or bond in which a mutual fund has invested would have to fall to zero before the fund's shares would become worthless. That's just not going to happen.

JOBS

That is a substantial change from the last Planning Association study issued just over a year ago, which called for Houston to be the biggest gainer through the end of this century.

The new study anticipates that Houston will have 2,191,500 jobs available in the year 2000, down from the 2,949,000 predicted in the 1965 study.

Job growth is continuing in Houston and similar areas, but with declining oil prices, energy-dependent areas are "less booming" than in the past, Strong said.

On the other hand, the lowered energy prices are a benefit to older industrial areas which are more dependent on oil and other energy sources.

Boston, a center for high-technology development in recent years, climbed from 10th in anticipated growth a year ago to second place in the new report. Some 3,056,800 jobs are expected in the year 2000, an increase of 754,700 from 1985.

The projections cover metropolitan areas, not just central cities. For example, Los Angeles includes the Los Angeles and Long Beach region, and Boston includes Boston, Lawrence, Salem, Lowell and Brockton, Mass.

The study also noted that considerable growth is likely in metropolitan centers near older centers, such as Long Island and New Jersey in the New York region, and the Anaheim-Santa Ana metro area, adjacent to Los Angeles.

European agreement could cut reliance on Soviet gas

New York Times News Service

BONN, West Germany — Several major Western European gas companies have announced a multibillion-dollar agreement to bring natural gas from Norway's North Sea fields.

The transaction would make Norway the main supplier of natural gas for Western Europe well into the next century. It would sharply reduce the region's reliance on supplies from the Soviet Union, a move favored by the United States.

The agreement between Statoil, Norway's state-owned energy concern, and six gas companies led by West Germany's Ruhrgas A.G. is expected to lead to Western Europe's biggest gas deal ever. Its total value, including everything from pipeline construction to actual gas purchases, is estimated by industry experts at more than $64 billion.

The agreement, Ruhrgas said in a statement, is for the delivery of 686.5 billion cubic feet of natural gas annually over a 27-year period. Partial delivery of the gas will begin in 1993, Ruhrgas said, and will increase gradually over several years to the full delivery amount.

"It is quite significant because you are looking at a contract to procure what will be 30 to 40 percent of European gas supplies," said Tom Cox, a director at Gaffrey, Cline Associates, the London-based energy consultants. "It will be expensive but hopefully politically reliable."

The United States has argued strongly in the past against making Western Europe too dependent on Soviet gas and thus vulnerable to political pressure from Moscow.

In 1981, when the Western European governments approved the Siberian gas pipeline to the West despite strong resistance from Washington, they promised to push development of European gas to limit reliance on the Soviet Union.

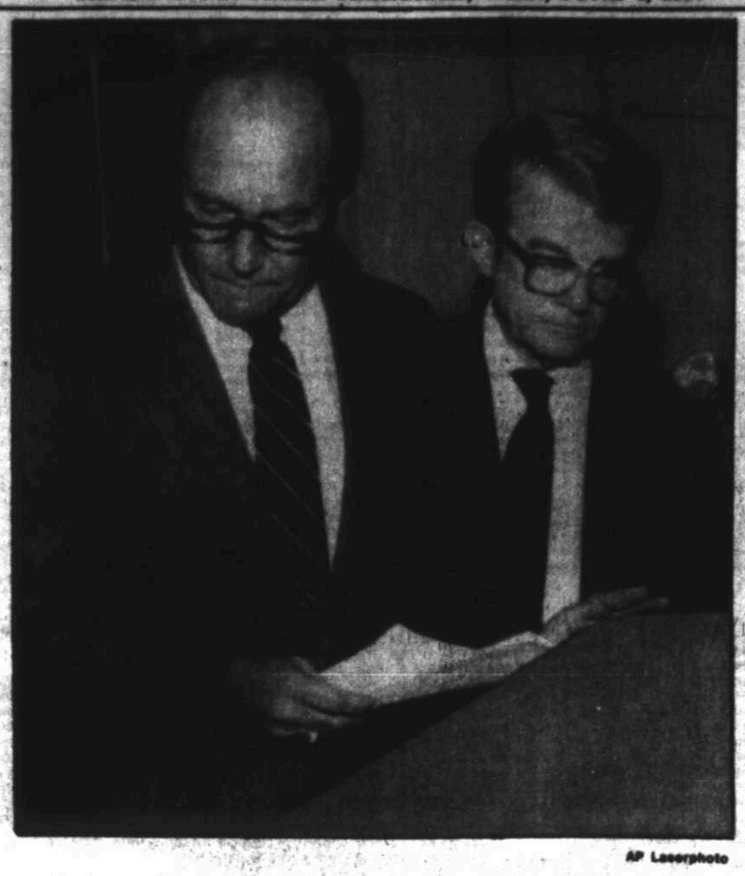

In Washington, a State Department official, requesting anonymity, said: "We've been anxious for the Norwegians to develop and sell natural gas to Western Europe. This will reduce Western Europe's dependence on Soviet gas — and that's good."

Norway, which now provides about 24 percent of Western Europe's natural gas, competes with cheaper gas from the Soviet Union and Algeria, which have abundant supplies. Industry analysts said Norway's secure position in the Western alliance helped it gain support for the deal. The agreement, reached after 18 months of arduous negotiations, needs Norwegian parliamentary approval, considered a formality.

Ruhrgas and France's state-owned company, Gaz de France, will receive the lion's share of the new gas supplies. Lesser amounts will go to two smaller West German gas companies, to Distrigaz S.A. in Belgium and to Nederlandse Gasunie in the Netherlands.

The company said the project involves developing the huge Troll gas field, about 65 miles northwest of Bergen, off the coast of Norway, and the Sleipner field, about 180 miles southwest of Troll. With proven reserves of 44.6 trillion cubic feet of gas, Troll is the second-largest European gas field, after Groningen, in the Netherlands, and the largest untapped gas field in Europe. The smaller Sleipner field has estimated reserves of about 7 trillion cubic feet.

The deal is also expected to give a major boost to European producers of steel pipe and other gas field equipment. They have been hard hit by oil exploration cutbacks caused by the slump in oil prices. Statoil officials in Oslo estimated that the deal would generate about $8 billion worth of investment.

Stockholders vote on recapitalization plan

HOUSTON (AP) — Anderson, Clayton & Co. shareholders will have until Thursday to vote or change their vote on a recapitalization plan proposed by the consumer-products company's management despite efforts by two investment firms to block voting.

"We have nothing to announce at this point," company spokesman Mark Addicks said Tuesday afternoon. "I would think (we would have some results) by Thursday, if not sooner."

Anderson Clayton's proposal would give holders $37 cash for each of their shares together with 0.534 of a "new" share in the recapitalized company.

Houston-based Anderson Clayton challenged a takeover attempt by two investment firms, claiming in a lawsuit filed Monday in federal court in Houston that the firms used confidential information and illegal tactics in their bid for the company.

Last week, the investment firms tried to thwart the recapitalization plan by offering to buy Anderson Clayton for $54 a share cash, or $655 million.

The investment firms complained on Monday that Anderson Clayton had so far refused to discuss their bid, prompting the group to intervene in a lawsuit initially filed by disgruntled Anderson Clayton shareholders.

The suit, filed in Delaware Chancery Court in Wilmington, sought to block the recapitalization plan on grounds it is inadequate and that Anderson Clayton's directors are breaching their duties to the holders by recommending approval of the plan.

Anderson Clayton, which produces several well-known consumer food products such as Chiffon margarine, is incorporated in Delaware.

The investment firms, which already down 5.93 percent of Anderson Clayton's 12.1 million total shares outstanding, said they wanted to block the recapitalization plan "to permit the shareholders to obtain a fair price for their shares."

In proxy material Anderson Clayton's advisers valued the plan at between $43 and $47 a share. But it also has noted that unlike the Bear Stearns-Gruss acquisition offer, the recapitalization would allow Anderson Clayton's holders to retain an equity interest in the company.

Quick & Easy BARBECUE Brunch

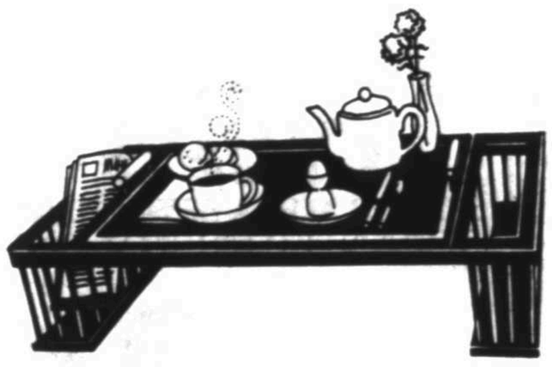

What's the answer to the eternal question, "What can we do that's different this weekend?" Well, why not try a barbecue brunch. It's an easy and reasonably inexpensive way to entertain friends or just bring the family a little closer.

Choose a balance of fresh and convenience foods to make the brunch barbecue quick and easy to fix – a wholesome change of pace for everyone. And what could be simpler and more appetizing than a menu of delicately flavored Skewered Pork Tenderloin Strips with Grilled Fruit, an appetizing and healthful Orient Express Sprout and Almond Salad and melt-in-your-mouth coconut macaroon cookies for a light dessert.

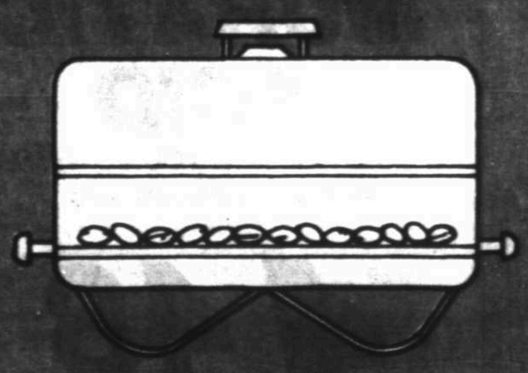

Succulent, moist, tender pork, especially when it is marinated, is a great treat for barbecuing. Use boneless cuts to make it easier on the cook. Many marinades complement pork's light flavor, but for this light meal try Apricot Barbecue Sauce for a special flavor delight.

Here's a fresh idea for a salad, Orient Express Sprout and Almond Salad. It is easy to prepare and has a special texture and flavor that will excite any palate.

Fresh, bakery-made macaroon cookies served with your favorite beverage makes a perfect ending to a quick and easy, great tasting barbecue brunch.

To Prepare Covered Grill

- Open all vents and leave open during cooking.
- Use less charcoal when preparing kabobs. One layer of charcoal should be sparsely spaced so heat will not be too intense.
- Heap New Match light® instant lighting charcoal in center of grill.
- Ignite briquets in several places to start. (Leave cover off grill while the charcoal is starting.)
- When the briquets have a light coating of gray ash (20-25 minutes) spread them into a sparse single layer.
- Put cooking grill in place.

From fried fish to French fries: Fast-food facts featured

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Only the most disciplined lunch or dinner patron can resist an occasional order of slightly greasy French fries, a double cheeseburger or plateful of fried fish.

So, resigned to the fact that nearly every American looks for a quick and convenient bite to eat now and then, the Center for Science in the Public Interest has published its survey on the nutritional content of fast foods in poster form.

Fast-food devotees may not be thrilled by some of the findings. At the same time, all the news is not nutritionally distressing.

To make the poster understandable, the center compiled a "gloom rating," which is a number derived from the total fat, salt, sugar and calories found in a single fast-food item. High gloom numbers indicate whether a food is meant to be avoided or approached carefully. The gloom numbers assigned by the center range from zero to as high as 105.

Another helpful guide is that the poster measures fat content for each food by teaspoons per serving rather than the more unwieldy milligram levels.

A few highlights from the "Fast Food Eating Guide" are worth noting.

Among those foods with low gloom ratings are Kentucky Fried Chicken's mashed potatoes with a gloom rating of 4 and no teaspoons fat, Carl's Jr. chicken breast with a 9 and one teaspoon fat, McDonald's plain hamburger with a 16 and three teaspoons fat and Wendy's omelet with mushrooms, onions and green pepper with a 16 rating and three teaspoons fat.

On the other end of the scale is Wendy's baked potato with bacon and cheese at a 41 gloom and seven teaspoons fat, Burger King's specialty chicken sandwich with a 54 rating and 10 teaspoons fat, Wendy's triple cheeseburger with a 85 rating and 15 teaspoons fat and Jack-in-the-Box scrambled egg breakfast with a 56 rating and 10 teaspoons of fat.

The highest rating of all comes under the category of entire meals. The leader in this category is a lunch or dinner at Wendy's consisting of a triple cheeseburger, French fries and a cola. Total damage is a 105 gloom rating and a meal equivalent to 19 teaspoons of fat.

The guide is available by writing the Center for Science, 1501 16th St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20036. Enclose $3.95 per poster.

THE BUTCHER

Beef bait for bait-and-switch meat sale scam

By MERLE ELLIS

One of the questions most often asked of this butcher is: "Can I save any money on a side of beef?" My answer has always been a very highly qualified - maybe! If you have a big backyard and can raise your own steer, or if you have an uncle who owns a cattle ranch and packing house, you certainly should be able to save a little.

If there is a good old-fashioned butcher shop or locker plant in your neighborhood that has been there since your grandmother was married, the chances are good that you can at least get a fair deal on a side of beef. But, unfortunately, all too often people looking for a bargain on meat for the freezer end up being ripped-off by unethical, if not illegal, "Bait and Switch" operators.

We've discussed the subject before, but recently a reader sent me a very carefully documented personal account of his experience and granted permission to share it with you. His letter to me read:

"Dear Sir,

"I just received an ad in the mail from a meat house which appeared to offer a great bargain. $100.00 off the meat price plus 25 lbs. of free frozen meat. The ad read ... 'We are happy to announce that you have been chosen by a computer as one of the participants in this month's giveaway bonanza.

" 'Enclosed you will find a credit voucher for your bonus amount $100 off any Freezer Meat Special. Please note that your voucher expires fifteen (15) days from today ...'

"Wanting to try buying in bulk (figuring if I saved just a little it would be worthwhile), I proceeded to the meat house ...

"The first thing the salesman did was to talk me out of buying the advertised $1 per pound meat because of the waste involved. He said the particular meat advertised would have about 100 pounds of soup bones and soup meat. He suggested a prime forequarter of beef which was pretrimmed of fat and coming from a younger steer but at a price of $2.59 a pound.

"I decided to go ahead with this meat since there would be less waste.

"After having taken the meat home, I decided to find out in detail what I was really getting. I weighed each cut of meat, then went to a local supermarket and asked the butcher for a list of current beef prices, not sale prices, so that a comparison of cost could be made.

"Your total loss is can be great when you consider that the prices at a local supermarket were regular prices, not sale prices. If you think buying from a meat house in bulk is a bargain, it is my experience that you would be well-advised to think again!

Sincerely,
Aldo Giardina"

Mr. Giardina's experience is fairly typical of what has come to be known and despised by honest meat men as "bait and switch." Unfortunately, he had to pay the price to document his losses, but I hope his story will make any of you contemplating buying bulk beef at least a bit more cautious.

If you would like more information on how to buy beef for your freezer, send a self-addressed, stamped, legal-sized envelope to "Freezer Beef," P.O. Box 907, Tiburon, CA 94920.

DEAR ABBY

Death a fact of life

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My mother has a terminal illness and does not have much longer to live. I am struggling to find the answer to this question and I hope you can help me. (Perhaps a reader who has had to deal with it can be of help.)

Should I let my 3-year-old son attend the funeral when the time comes? He is very close to his grandma. He spends a lot of time with her now because I go there daily to help out any way I can. He has trouble understanding why Grandma doesn't respond when he gives her hugs and kisses — and now she doesn't "know" him.

Should I take him to her funeral to say goodbye, or should I protect him from the pain? — A MOTHER'S LOVE

DEAR MOTHER'S LOVE: Let your son attend his grandma's funeral and explain that her life on earth has ended. Children need to know that all life ends in death — it's a fact of life. If they know the truth, they will not fear it. Give your son a chance to bid a final farewell to Grandma; it will make her death easier for him to accept.

DEAR ABBY: At what age should a sister and brother cease sleeping together? Our son is a little more than five years older than his sister, who is well-developed for her age. She says she becomes frightened during the night so she goes into her brother's bedroom and crawls into bed with him. (She sometimes stays all night.)

I've noticed a much closer bond between these two than with the other children in the family. I am concerned. My husband says he sees nothing wrong in this and becomes angry when I mention it.

I need advice. — CONCERNED MOTHER, COLUMBUS, GA.

DEAR CONCERNED: You do not say how old these children are, but a well-developed girl of any age should not be sleeping with her older brother.

If you suspect you have reason to be concerned, you should be. Quit speculating, and initiate some candid conversations with your daughter and your son, too. My mail tells me that there is far more "experimenting" among preteen siblings than most parents realize.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Henry from Freeport," who was astonished at how little most Americans knew about the Bahamas. Do you want to hear a better one?

A few years ago, while visiting some relatives in Napa Valley, Calif., I placed a long-distance telephone call to my husband in Newark, Del., and the operator asked me if Delaware was in the United States — or was it a foreign country! I assured her that Delaware was part of the United States — or at least it was when I had left it four days ago.

Later, on the same trip, I was in a restaurant with a cousin when a waitress, on hearing me mention Delaware, said, "Oh, I know where Delaware is — it's near Copenhagen!" (I nearly landed on the floor.) My cousin was so amused, she now refers to my state as "Dela-Where?"

Abby, don't the teachers in California teach geography? — SUE FROM DELAWARE

DEAR SUE: The teachers in California do teach geography — but not all the students learn.

CONFIDENTIAL TO G. IN ST. LOUIS: "What we have once enjoyed, we can never lose; all that we love deeply becomes a part of us." (Helen Keller)

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about sex, drugs and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Rose unfairly receives bad reputation

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

Medical science should look into a theory I have that anyone who drinks White Zinfandel is color-blind. That's because they speak all the time of the "white" wine they are having, and they clearly can't tell the stuff they are drinking is pink.

Rose. There, I've said it, that nasty word, the one most serious wine drinkers would never admit they ever consumed intentionally.

What the wine makers have done is found a creative way to make pink wine sell, and thus they don't even have to fight the problems associated with selling rose.

That is, rose has always carried with it the connotation of a little-old-ladies' wine, and no self-respecting connoisseur would ever admit to having voluntarily tried a rose.

"Oh, I once had a rose, but it was served to me at a brunch in a glass that was frosted, so I couldn't tell it was a rose. So help me, I never would have had four glasses that day if I had known it was a rose, for heaven's sake!."

Yes, it's true, rose has made a comeback, but it's masquerading as another product. Call it White Zinfandel, Cabernet Blanc or even the unfortunately ubiquitous "blush" wine, but regardless of the name, all we're talking about here is pink: pale rose.

What I perceive happening, however, is that real rose is destined to make a comeback.

I'm not the only one who thinks that is going to happen. So does Dr. Richard Peterson, the wine master of The Monterey Vineyard. Peterson feels strongly that one of the best wines he made every year was called Classic Rose, and yet it never really sold the way it should based on its quality.

"The problem was the word 'rose,'" he said late last year. "If we called it something else, maybe it would sell better."

Well, I'm happy to report that sales of the 1985 version of that wine are up over last year at this time. And the wine remains an excellent example of a light-styled wine.

One thing is different, however: it is called something else. Instead of calling it Monterey Classic Rose, Peterson persuaded the people at Seagram (the owner of The Monterey Vineyard) to call the wine Classic Blanc de Noirs, which translated from the French means "white from blacks," referring to the color of the grapes from which the wine was made.

Chutney made from peaches

DINNER FARE
Chicken Curry & Rice
Green Peas & Chutney

PEACH CHUTNEY

Two 16-ounce cans cling peach slices in fruit juice
1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1 cup diced (medium-fine) onion
1¼ cups cider vinegar
¼ cup Worcestershire sauce
½ cup currants
¼ cup slivered candied ginger
½ teaspoon ground cloves
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg

Drain juice from peaches into a large saucepan; add sugar, onion, vinegar, Worcestershire sauce, currants, ginger, cloves and nutmeg to juice. Bring to a boil and boil for 30 minutes. Add peaches and boil gently stirring often, until thick — 20 to 30 minutes. Store in refrigerator. Makes 2½ cups.

Survey: Breakfast menus changing

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Concern for calories and cholesterol is influencing American choices of breakfast foods, says Better Homes and Gardens.

Cereal and toast rank first and second as favorite breakfast foods. But less than half of the respondents to a survey said they would eat a full breakfast of eggs, meat and toast.

Nearly 75 percent of those surveyed said concern for calories influenced their choice of breakfast foods. Another 60 percent said concern for cholesterol influenced their breakfast food decision.

Early in 1975 Fay Krugh was faced with tremendous weight problems. She was 40 years old, wore a bulging size 16, weighed 168 lbs., had migraine headaches and wore a back brace.
Desperately needing professional help, she came to discuss her reducing problems with us. We told her how long it would take and the exact cost to reduce with our program.
She began losing weight and inches and in two months she was out of her back brace. Her doctor was happy with her progress and her migraines were few and far between. She reduced from size 16, shed all the unwanted pounds and inches to become a size 6 and found herself with no more health problems.
I'm glad that our reducing program played such an important role in all of it.

TEXAS ★ CELEBRITY ★ RECIPE

(By RUSSELL M. GARDNER and CHRIS FARKAS)

"There's no substitute for mesquite and nothing like Texas beef. Our fish, fowl and crustaceans are exceptional — not to mention vegetables from the winter garden or fruit from the valley. God could have created a state with better food, but he didn't." — William P. Hobby, Lieutenant Governor

CRABMEAT MOLD

1 can (10¾ oz.) cream of shrimp soup
2 packages (3 oz. each) cream cheese
¼ cup finely chopped onion
1 cup mayonnaise
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1 cup cold water
2 (7 oz. each) cans crabmeat, or 1 lb. fresh
1 cup finely chopped celery

In medium saucepan, combine soup, cream cheese and onion. Heat until cheese is melted, stirring. Blend in mayonnaise, remove from heat.

In another saucepan, sprinkle gelatin over water. Over low heat, stir until gelatin dissolves. Stir into soup mixture. Add crabmeat and celery. Pour mixture into 6-cup mold. Refrigerate 6 hours or until firm.

Unmold. Serve with crackers

Summer salad stars sardines

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Because sardines offer protein, vitamins and minerals in worthwhile amounts, they are good to use for summer salads.

SARDINE SALAD

Leaf lettuce
2 cans (each 3¾ ounces) brisling sardines in oil, drained
12 cherry tomatoes
1 small red onion, sliced and separated into rings
1 small cucumber, sliced
4 ounces sliced Provolone cheese, cut into narrow strips
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
Radishes
Caper Dressing, see recipe

Line serving platter with lettuce. Arrange sardines, tomatoes, onion, cucumber and Provolone on lettuce. Sprinkle with Parmesan. Garnish with radishes. Serve with Caper Dressing.

Caper Dressing: In an electric blender whirl together 3 tablespoons vegetable oil, 2 tablespoons red wine vinegar, 2 tablespoons water, 1½ tablespoons drained capers, 2 teaspoons basil, 1 large clove garlic (thinly sliced) and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Whirl until almost smooth — about 30 seconds. Makes about ½ cup.

Names sometimes 'fishy'

NEW YORK (AP) — What's in a name?

Enough, it's said, for some fish dealers here to be misnaming species to make them more alluring to buyers.

One example of this misnaming would be pollack being sold as blue snapper and mullet sold under the name of fresh bass.

A fish market officer in New York City says it is best to "shop for freshness and not for the name of the fish."

Barrera confident about being elected

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Roy Barrera Jr. said Tuesday that he is confident about ...ning out the Hispanic vote and becoming the first Hispanic ...cted to a statewide office.

Barrera was in Midland Tuesday on a 20-city tour this week ...ore his runoff election Saturday for the Republican Attor... General nomination. Barrera, who received 46 percent of ... vote during the May 3 primary, is running against fellow ...publican Williamson County District Attorney Ed Walsh, ...o received 34 percent of the primary vote. The winner of ...urday's race will face Democrat Attorney General Jim Mat... in November.

However, not all of his support is with Hispanic voters, Bar...a said. Less than two percent of the registered Hispanic ...ters cast ballots on May 3.

"As any Republican who runs statewide in this race knows, we have to reach out. The crossover vote is the key to winning in November."

Barrera has de-emphasized his race against Walsh and focused on Mattox's record instead.

"The enemy is Mattox, not Walsh," he said.

"Our goal is to take out of office an individual that has been an embarrassment to the state of Texas," Barrera said.

"The people of this state are not pleased with the incumbent Attorney General."

Mattox has embarrassed the state with his liberal political views, a weak stand on the death penalty and a refusal to uphold a law making sodomy illegal, Barrera said.

However, Barrera says he has more experience than Walsh with jury trials. Barrera said he heard 300 jury trials as a judge, while Walsh has prosecuted about 80 trials as an attorney. For the past 5½ years, Barrera has presided over the 144th District Court in San Antonio. He was appointed judge by former Gov. Bill Clements.

Barrera says he also provides a larger voter base of 500,000 registered voters in his home, Bexar County, while Walsh provides a voter base of 50,000 registered voters in Williamson County.

While he says he is not dependent on the Hispanic vote, Barrera does give that segment credit for his success.

"There's no way I could have outpolled Mark White in 1982 (when he was elected to the bench) unless many Hispanics had voted for me and they did," Barrera said.

Life imprisonment without parole is one piece of legislation, Barrera said he will work toward if elected. Most people sentenced to life end up serving only eight to nine years, he said.

"We have no 'life' today because of early parole. We must turn back the tide of crime. The only way to do that is by meaningful punishment. Punishment must meet the crime," Barrera said.

Leanna Lester and her cousin Jenna Martin wade through floodwaters still standing at Lester household on County Road 1083. The flooding was the result of heavy rains that fell last week.

Area homeowners waiting for floodwaters to recede

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

When Greenwood resident Margaret Lester drove up to her house last Thursday night, she said she couldn't believe her eyes.

The heavy rains that fell throughout most of the evening left her white brick home, located on County Road 1083, standing in more than a foot of water — destroying the carpet, linoleum, furniture and other personal belongings.

"I'll have to put it back together piece by piece," Mrs. Lester said. "I haven't talked to an insurance adjuster yet. I just found out that my homeowners insurance doesn't cover flooding."

Mrs. Lester is but one of a few unlucky Greenwood citizens still waiting for the floodwaters to recede so they can get on with the costly job of repairing their homes.

On Saturday, Mrs. Lester used three boats to carry the family's clothing to higher ground, but left the furniture behind.

"It's pretty scary," she said. "I've live here three years and never seen anything like this. My brother-in-law has lived here nine years and said he's never seen flooding like this either."

As the result of all that water, Mrs. Lester and several of her neighbors aren't able to stay in their homes.

"We have no water, no septic system and most of the wells are down. We do have the electricity on because that's the only way we can dry the floors," she said.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal reported the area officially received 2.54 inches of rain during the torrential downpour, but Greenwood residents said as much as 5 inches fell there.

Citizens who escaped the flooding considered themselves lucky.

"We had some water standing in the buildings after the storm the week before last," said Greenwood Independent School District Superintendent Sam Martin. "We managed to escape this one."

Martin also reported no standing water at Greenwood Baptist Church — a building accustomed to accumulating water during flash flood conditions.

"The church didn't flood this time," he said. "That's unusual because it did get hit a couple of times last year."

Slain man's family waits for execution

ODESSA (AP) — Relatives of a 26-year-old man shot to death during a convenience store robbery say their burden of pain will be lifted only after the man convicted of the shooting is executed.

Michael Dean Mason was shot to death Feb. 3, 1978, during a Dallas convenience store robbery. Larry Smith, 30, of Dallas, is scheduled to be executed later this month for the slaying.

Mason's mother, Carlyn Parker of Odessa, said it "seems like an eternity" since her son was shot.

"I think he (Smith) should have been executed eight years ago," she said. "He's been on death row and had chance after chance of appeals for eight years. My son didn't get a chance."

Smith's second capital murder conviction in Mason's death was handed down by jurors on Sept. 22, 1981, said Joe Keck, a Dallas County assistant district attorney.

Smith's first conviction on the same charge was reversed by the Court of Criminal Appeals, which ruled that jurors opposed to the death penalty were improperly excluded, said State District Judge Kelly Loving of Dallas, who prosecuted Smith.

Smith again was sentenced to death after the second conviction and has received several execution dates, but a stay was granted each of the previous times.

Family members said each trial and delay of Smith's execution brings a new round of suffering.

Keck said Mason was shot and killed while working as night manager at a Dallas convenience store. Smith and an accomplice robbed the store after ordering Mason and a 16-year-old clerk to lie on the floor behind a counter, he said.

The two grabbed the store's cash drawer and started to leave, but Smith stopped and fired one shot into the back of Mason's head, Keck said. Police arrested the two suspects about 33 hours after the murder.

Mason's sister — Karen Cherry, 38, of Odessa — said Smith must be executed so her family can start to erase the pain of her brother's death.

"I don't see any sense in dragging it out," she said.

Remembering Mason's death makes family gatherings and holidays painful, she said.

Mason, a former Marine, was an outgoing man "who loved helping people," said his sister, Carla Schumpert of Odessa.

Mason and his wife, Marilyn, were recovering from a personal shock at the time of the robbery after Mrs. Mason had delivered twins in December 1977. One of the boys died, and the other had cerebral palsy, Ms. Schumpert said.

She said Smith deserves to die.

"He's not predictable. He's dangerous to anyone who works around money. He's had enough chances. He knew the price he would have to pay. I feel that he should die," she said.

Ector commissioners may consider cost-cutting measures

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County commissioners will have some very hard decisions to make between now and about mid-August before approving a budget for fiscal 1986-87.

A committee comprised of County Judge Jan Fisher, Auditor Bill Hicks and Fiscal Services Director Tom Pace has reviewed preliminary departmental budget requests as the first step in preparing a proposed budget that will be submitted to Commissioners Court for consideration.

The budget for the current fiscal year is nearly $26.5 million and department heads were told earlier to cut 10 percent from their budgets for the coming year.

Net taxable revenues last year were nearly $5.8 billion. This year the total is slightly less than $4.9 billion, a drop of more than 15 percent. The decrease is due largely to a drop in the value of mineral reserves of about 22 percent and a decrease of about 4.4 percent in property values.

In the current fiscal year, with an anticipated collection rate of 95 percent, the nearly $5.8 billion in net taxable revenues was expected to produce close tp $17.9 million for general funds revenues. This year's slightly less than $4.9 billion, with a collection rate perhaps as low as 92 percent, would only generate about $14.8 million, which would produve a revenue shortfall of as much as $3.1 million for the 1986-87 fiscal year, officials said.

This shortfall could be made up by raising the effective tax rate from .33 cents per $100 of assessed valuation to about .382 cents without triggering the state law that allows voters to call for a rollback election. However, Pace said Tuesday he expects commissioners will try to leave the tax rate at .33 cents and seek other methods of decreasing county revenue requirements.

According to Pace, economy measures to be considered include curtailing some services and reducing personnel through the process of attrition. Pace suggested county expenditures might be reduced by operating some county offices, such as the tax assessor-collector, county and district clerks, only four days a week and allowing reduced staffs the fifth day to catch up with routine paper work and prosessing larger staffs would have handled during a normal five-day workweek.

Commissioners may also want to consider such service curtailments as reduced operating hours for the county library and the Presidentisl Museum, as well as reduced road maintenance schedules, officials said. The final decision on where budget reductions are made will rest with Commissioners Court members, Pace said. The fiscal services director said he doesn't anticipate the layoff of county personnel as a viable budget reduction option because, by the time accumulated vacation pay and unemployment compensation is paid, very small savings would be realized.

Hicks and Pace have both indicated asking county employees to take pay cuts has not been a consideration so far.

People drawn to old, empty house

By RICK SMITH

SHERMAN (AP) — It's an old empty house, 86 bedrooms or so. Nearly every night strange, dark shapes creep through the windows and go giggling down the halls.

Who you gonna call?

Bart Mitchell busts more than ghosts at the old Woodmen Circle home in west Sherman.

"I've arrested probably 15 to 20 juveniles and two adults out there for criminal trespass," said Mitchell, reserve officer chief at the Sherman Police Department.

"We've staked the building out on cold nights, hot nights, windy nights. It's a good training tool for my reserve officers. They learn how to do night time surveillance."

From all over the county and as far as McKinney teenagers flock to the three old buildings. Some, Mitchell says, have made 20 or 30 illegal late-night tours.

And who can deny the call of inky black basements and dumbwaiters, laundry chutes, attics and dark, endless hallways?

Plus, there are the told and retold stories of the religious cult that used the buildings from 1978 to 1980.

Mitchell understands a kid's fascination with the place. As a kid, he was fascinated with it, too.

"It intrigued me, a building that big. It's huge."

But vandalism has taken its toll on the site since the Woodmen of the World sold it in 1972: Windows are smashed out, doors kicked in, paint splattered on floors, hardware ripped from the walls.

"People are destroying the building for no reason. I talk to kids that come out here just to break windows. They come out here for no reason but to tear stuff up.

"To go out there, onto property that has historic value, and to tear it up, that would be like going over to the library and burning antique books."

Mitchell and his family lived in the home as caretakers for nine months just after the Rev. Ariel Sherman's group moved out in 1980, but the heating cost — the gas bills ran as much as $1,300 per month during the winter — drove them away.

The building was bought by an Arlington corporation in January and Mitchell contacted the property owners about vandalism problems at the home.

"They gave me free rein to protect the property any way I can."

Besides the stake-outs, Mitchell and a small band of volunteers also work on weekends repairing the damage done by nighttime visitors and years of neglect.

Approximately $1,380 taken from local fast-food restaurant

From Staff Reports

About $1,380 was taken by two men robbing a Midland fast food business late Tuesday night, police said.

The Hamburger Place of Texas, 810 North Big Spring, was robbed around midnight Tuesday. Two men, one armed with a knife and one armed with a pistol, followed an employee into the business and forced an assistant manager to open a safe, police reported. After the men took three money bags containing about $1,380, they told the restaurant's three employees to walk into a locker freezer, according to police. When the robbers departed, the employees left the freezer and contacted the police. No suspects have been arrested, police said.

In other law enforcement reports, a 32-year-old Midland woman told police a man attempted to sexually assault her in her backyard Tuesday night. The Midland woman was attacked around 11 p.m. Tuesday at her northwest home, she told police. The man fled after the victim bit him on the chest while he was attempting to assault her, officers said. Police are seeking a white male between the ages of 18 to 25 for the attempted assault.

Gery L. Klement, 3401 West Cuthbert, reported the theft of five firearms and a VCR from his home. The value of the items taken was not known. Klement told police the items were taken between 7 p.m. Sunday and 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The sheriff's office reported the theft of $760 in tools from Evco Fabrication Inc., 10250 West Industrial. A $470 air impact, a $275 drill and a $15 breadbrush were among the items taken from the shop during the past six weeks.

The Andrews Fire Department said lightning struck and caused a fire at three oil tanks located 25 miles west of Andrews around 10:30 p.m. Tuesday. Two 500-barrel tanks were destroyed and one 1,500-barrel tank was damaged by the fire. The tanks are owned by City Service Oil and Gas Corporation.

Train evacuated after bomb threat

EL PASO (AP) — An Amtrak train carrying 235 passengers was evacuated for two hours Tuesday after a bomb threat, authorities said.

The 10-car Sunset Limited was searched after Amtrak officials received a threatening telephone call at the Jacksonville, Fla., office, said Arthur Weber, district supervisor for Amtrak.

The train, which combines lines from Chicago and New Orleans at San Antonio, makes several stops through the Southwest before reaching Los Angeles.

The search by police and railroad security guards began as soon as the train arrived about 2:40 p.m. MDT, Weber said. Passengers were allowed back on the train shortly before 4 p.m.

"We were unaware of anything happening until we got off the train and I overheard the conductor say we have a bomb threat," said Rosario Torres, 66, who returned from a four-day stay in San Antonio with her husband, Reyes.

Their son, Hector Torres, 35, said Amtrak officials did not inform waiting relatives there was a problem.

"I came to pick up my parents and I saw these two guys from the police bomb squad," said the younger Torres. "They wouldn't say anything, either the Amtrak people or the officers."

Weber, who is based in Albuquerque, N.M., had come to El Paso to board the Sunset Limited for an Amtrak training course in Los Angeles, he said.

"Two of the officers I spoke to said they found nothing suspicious," said Weber.

The train then was checked by mechanics and departed an hour and 15 minutes behind schedule.

HOUSE

"My mother worked out here back when it was a home for elderly women and orphans and I worked here too," said one of the volunteers, Linda Robertson, who is a police department reserve officer.

"To me, this place is a part of the history of Sherman. I can't stand to see something I've seen so clean and nice so messed up. Hey, it may take me the rest of my life, but I'm going to get it cleaned up."

Part of the home's mystique is a story that one of the Rev. Sherman's followers, a 4-year-old girl, died in the main building after falling down an elevator shaft. The shaft was boarded up, but adventurers have ripped the boards away, exposing the shaft.

Mitchell has heard the story but can't say whether it's true.

Ms. Robertson says there may ghosts at the home, but not the kind midnight explorers seek.

"There may be all kinds of booger bears here," Ms. Robertson said, laughing. She spends her weekends working at the home.

"I worked out here as a nurse's aide and I saw several of the elderly ladies die. So this place has had death in it. And I don't know what it had in it when Mr. Sherman was here.

"When you're out here by yourself working, I don't know if it's the wind or what, but it seems like I can still hear laughter. I can feel the warmth. This was a good place, and I've never been afraid out here."

Mitchell says local residents should buy the building back.

"It needs to belong to Sherman. We need to get it back into Sherman hands, back to people who care about the building and won't use it just as a tax write-off."

He has heard the property last sold for $1.4 million and figures it would take another $150,000 to $300,000 to restore.

"When I started working out here in January, I felt like I was by myself. But, within a short period of time, I was contacted by several people who wanted to help. It really helps to know that there are other people out there who give a damn about the property.

"What I'd really like to do is get the building active again, get it looking like it did in 1940.

"It could be used as an office building, part of it, to generate income to fix up the rest. We could put in a museum, a library for students, something to help the community."

If there's a ghost story at the old Woodmen Circle Home, says Mitchell, it's a story about a building that refuses to die.

"The building is so tough. It's 56 years old and it doesn't want to die. People have tried to burn it, to tear it down, but it won't go. If it ever goes down, it's going to go down fighting."

White tours Brownsville colonias

LAS MILPAS (AP) — Ana Maria Redondo fears rain.

Everytime it pours, the unpaved street outside her home becomes a quagmire and threatens to flood her home in this colonia, an unincorporated subdivision that has no drainage system.

Some houses here also lack inside plumbing and electricity.

On Tuesday, Mrs. Redondo told Gov. Mark White she wished something could be done about the drainage problem.

"Everytime it rains it's like this," she said, pointing to the muddy street that had numerous puddles. "When it was like this and the children were in school, the buses wouldn't come and we had to take them to school."

White, joined by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and members of the Texas Water Development Board toured two colonias in Brownsville Tuesday morning and Las Milpas, southeast of McAllen, in the afternoon.

They heard from residents in the colonias who said they were tired of living in substandard conditions. The elected officials promised to help."So long as the people live here in this type of condition no person in Texas should be happy about that. We should be working to improve the conditions here, " White said as he stood outside Mrs. Redondo's home.

Gov. Mark White talks to residents of a Brownsville colonia, an unincorporated subdivision that lacks sewer facilities and paved roads.

The Texas Water Development Board has pledged $215,000 for a study which will eventually make the Texas Water Plan's long-term, low-interest loans available to bring water and sewers to the colonias.

The study, expected to be completed by November, will identify which entities can provide the water and sewer service because the unincorporatdd colonias are not eligible for direct loans.

In the Rio Grande Valley, an estimated 135 colonias are home to about 100,000 people.

The cost to improve about 29 of the colonias is estimated at $40 to $45 million, according to Valley Interfaith, a coalition of Valley churches which has worked to improve living conditions for the poor.

White and Hobby have pledged to the coalition that they would work to get $100 million in state monies to help improve the colonias.

"We're talking millions and millions of dollars if we don't (improve colonias) when you look at the wasted opportunities in the lives of these young children," White told reporters in Brownsville. "There's no reason to turn our backs on the opportunities of these people and when we deprive people of adequate water and adequate sewers and adequate schools then we've lost those opportunities."

As White and Hobby walked the muddy streets, residents told them that many people relied on water in ditches for drinking, cooking and bathing.

"We have a responsiblity to get the sewage out of the streets and get the water into your homes," Hobby told a crowd of about 150 that had gathered outside a home in the Cameron Park colonia outside of Brownsville.

"We're going to continue to see that people are going to be given humane living conditions," White told the same crowd.

Lawmaker: Afghan rebels may beat Soviets

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson says "in all probability" the forces in Afghanistan fighting the Soviets will win the war.

"Our big job in the United States and the western world is to arouse public consciousness as to the atrocities and the absolute brutality of the Soviet Union in this country," Wilson said Tuesday.

The Lufkin Democrat appeared at a news conference with members of the Texas Review Society, a conservative student organization at the University of Texas.

Society officers presented Wilson with a $100 check to help Afghanistan establish a "government-in-exile."

Wilson, who has made four trips to Afghanistan since 1983, said that country of 15 million was "brutally invaded by the Soviets six years ago, and much to the Soviets' surprise and to the surprise of the world, the Red Army has met with an absolutely fierce and frantic resistance.

"The fighting has been the severest the Red Army has faced since World War II. Their losses have been enormous."

Wilson said because so many Soviet forces are tied up on the Chinese border and in Eastern Europe, "they have the serious problem of having to draft the sons of the bureaucrats in Leningrad and Moscow to fight in Afghanistan, which none of them want to do."

He said the Afghans fighting the Soviets "control 80 percent of the country, and in all probability will win the war.

"The Soviet response to this has been brutality beyond anything we've seen since Hitler's gas ovens at Auschwitz...This is truly the first case of organized genocide the world has seen since the 1940s."

Big Spring voters OK sale of mixed drinks

BIG SPRING (AP) — Voters in this West Texas city approved the sale of mixed drinks in restaurants and non-private clubs almost two to one, election officials said.

In a special election Tuesday, the vote was 3,457 for and 1,818 against the sale of liquor by the drink in Justice of the Peace Precinct 1, which includes all of the city limits and four surrounding areas — the communities of Elbow, Jonesboro and Tubbs and the area west of Interstate 20.

About 35 percent of the precinct's registered voters turned out for the election, significantly less than officials predicted.

County Judge Milton Kirby said Howard County commissioners will canvass the votes Monday.

"We have three days to notify state agencies of the vote; restaurant and club owners can then apply for a license to sell mixed drinks," he said.

Also on Tuesday, voters in Seminole in Gaines County rejected a proposal to sell liquor by the drink, by a vote of 1,266 to 936, elections chief Patsy Williford said.

The Seminole proposal had called for liquor sales in an area defined as west of the city to the New Mexico state line, to the Dawson county line on the east, plus the west side of U.S. 385 except Seagraves.

In Howard County, the last liquor election was in 1951 when voters authorized the sale of liquor, beer and wine but restricted the sale of mixed drinks to private clubs only.

Pilot killed when small plane plunges into pasture

BARTLETT (AP) — Authorities found the wreckage of a twin-engine airplane that plunged into a rural pasture, killing the pilot and scattering wreckage across a field near this Central Texas town.

Officials of the Federal Aviation Administration said the pilot, David L. Osman, 41, of Dallas, had radioed he was in trouble before crashing at 9:45 p.m. Monday night.

"My children thought it was a falling star, but we knew better," said Eloise Fuentes Carranza of Granger. "There wasn't a storm, and it wasn't raining or anything like that. It just fell straight down and boom."

The pilot's body was found nearby the wreckage.

"Shortly after he leveled out, he reported to approach control that he had a possible autopilot malfunction and was descending rapidly. Shortly thereafter, they lost all radio contact with him," FAA spokesman Gerrie Cook said.

She said Martinaire Flight 245, a commercial air taxi, departed Austin at 9:44 p.m. The pilot of the Mitsubishi MU-2 turboprop reported he was alone at the time en route to Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, Ms. Cook said.

The craft was carrying Express Mail from Robert Mueller Municipal Airport in Austin to D-FW airport.

Some officials said severe weather could have caused the crash. But a Martinaire employee who did not wish to be identified said Tuesday it was not raining at the time of the crash.

"There were not thunderstorms at the time. Weather was not a factor," the employee said.

The plane disintegrated in the crash, said David Wells, a spokesman with the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Man arrested after he fires shot at school bus

EL PASO (AP) — A 21-year-old man was arrested and charged with attempted murder after a bullet was fired at a school bus in which children were riding, police said Tuesday.

Juan Hernandez was being held at the El Paso County Jail after bond was set at $100,000, said El Paso police spokesman Hank DiMatteo.

The bus, reportedly with 14 children aboard, was on its way to McArthur Junior High School and near a city housing project in south El Paso when the shot was fired early Monday.

Witnesses said a man pointed a blue steel handgun and shot once through a rear right window, DiMatteo said.

No weapon had been found as of early Tuesday afternoon.

An unidentified 14-year-old boy who was in the bus said he has been threatened by members of the Diablo gang, DiMatteo said. However, police could not positively say whether the incident was gang-related.

Woman dies in hit-and-run

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Since selling her car to help support her brother, Julia Cooper rode the bus to church and walked to the grocery store.

Until two years ago, she had never been across the Harbor Bridge here.

While pushing a shopping cart Monday night, Miss Cooper, 95, was killed in a hit-and-run accident, authorities said.

Miss Cooper was a former Corpus Christi High School student and graduated from the University of Texas at Austin in 1914. She taught three years at Cameron before returning to Corpus Christi.

Ex-officer denied bond

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A former Green Beret demolitions expert accused of delivering bombs to supposed terrorists has been denied bond by a judge who says "people are tired of terrorism."

Albert James Paxton, 43, is charged with delivering 19 bombs to federal agents posing as Mexican terrorists.

U.S. Magistrate Jamie Boyd decided against bond after a 34-hour hearing that ended Monday.

Two special agents of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms testified that Paxton, a former Special Forces officer, sold them the bombs for $4,000.

Farmer, tractor still together after 45 years of work

AP Laserphoto

Jim Washburn and his wife, Anna Laurie, of Ida, pose next to their 45-year-old tractor. The farmer and the tractor, both weathered by years in the field, seem made for each other and neither the 82-year-old man nor the tractor is ready to quit farming.

By JEFF LISSON

IDA, Texas (AP) — The old farmer and the tractor seem made for each other, like a worn glove to a baseball player. Both man and machine are weathered from years of sun and work, and newer models would suit neither.

The farmer's floppy straw hat has seen better days; the tractor's red paint is long-since covered with rust.

But they aren't ready to quit — not the 82-year-old man, nor the 45-year-old tractor.

Born and reared in Bells, Jim Washburn lives just west of this small community on Highway 697. His house sits on the same plot of land he and his wife bought in January, 1937.

"My people came into Texas in 1836. They settled right south of Bells," explained Washburn, whose roots run deeper than the crops he used to plow. "They're still scattered around out here.

"My grandaddy and his brother helped feed the widow women in that community (Bells) when the Civil War was going on."

His booted right foot rests on a plowshare, the only shiny part remaining on the machine. Covered in a blue work shirt, his left arm rests on a four-foot-high solid rubber tire. The front of his shirt is hidden by deep-blue overalls.

Parts of the tractor, though, are exposed. Wires hang from the block; valves are stopped in open or closed position. Chain belts used to run the various implements hooked to the machine lie dormant.

"I'm a machinist, so I can fix most anything. I just hope I can find a hose to fit it. "I've had very little trouble with them (the tractors). I've never even had the heads off this one (the Super C)."
— Jim Washburn, 82-year-old farmer

A rusted coil spring props up the rusted seat. It doesn't look comfortable.

Born in 1904, Washburn graduated from Bells High School in 1925 ("They finally threw me out — I went as long as they'd let me play basketball") and went to work for Washington Iron Works in Sherman. Along the way, he married Anna Laurie, a neighbor from Bells.

They lived in Sherman for a short while, then moved back "to the country."

In the throes of the Depression, Washburn had to find a city job since "I had to work somewhere before I could ever get started to farming. I didn't have any land, for one thing, and I didn't have any equipment. That was in the Depression years, and capital was hard to get."

At the Iron Works, Washburn spent 15 years as a molder, with an additional seven years as a machinist. He and his wife began buying land, "as much around here as we could get." They bought several tractors, and started farming their property and leased property.

Washburn bought the weary but solid-looking International Harvester Farmall Super C in 1941, to help in a custom hay-baling business. The tractor now tends a garden at his daughter's house next door.

Behind the Super C is a 504 of similar brand. It tows a mowing attachment with blades nearly six feet in diameter. The 504 is about 38 years old.

As he speaks, a loud bang sounds from the front of the Super C tractor. The line from the liquid petroleum tank bursts, and Washburn quickly runs to the front of the machine to stem the flow of gas. He doesn't seemed too concerned.

"I'm a machinist, so I can fix most anything," he said. Smiling, he added "I just hope I can find a hose to fit it.

"I've had very little trouble with them (the tractors)," Washburn said. "I've never even had the heads off this one (the Super C)."

Though Washburn and his wife are both retired, he's "still got a pasture up here with cows, just enough for bother." Most of the land the pair accumulated has been given to family, children and grandchildren.

The two oldest tractors, though, have stayed. "There's always someone stopping, wanting to buy these tractors. They see them and think they're just junk. Which they are," he said, gray eyes smiling.

But junk or not, the 504 still mows the grass, and the Super C continues to tend the garden.

Deukmejian, Bradley set for rematch in govenor's race

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Republican Gov. George Deukmejian and his Democratic opponent of 1982, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, are set for a rematch in November after defeating political unknowns by wide margins in their parties' primaries.

Voting was light throughout the state and election officials said the final turnout could be 40 percent or less, the lowest for a statewide election in 58 years.

Democratics Sen. Alan Cranston easily won renomination, while moderate Rep. Ed Zschau defeated conservative television commentator Bruce Herschensohn in the crowded Republican Senate primary.

Proposition 51, the complex statewide initiative limiting liability claims in multi-defendant lawsuits, was approved. With 70 percent of the ballots counted, the measure was winning 62 percent of the vote.

In San Diego, where residents of the nation's eighth-largest city were picking a mayor to replace Roger Hedgecock who resigned in December, former Councilwoman Maureen O'Connor defeated Councilman William Cleator in a runoff. Deputy Mayor Ed Struiksma, who had held office since December, chose not to run.

The ballot also included a sprinkling of candidates with Hollywood or sports ties.

Actress Jane Fonda's husband, former anti-war activist Tom Hayden, won re-election to the state legislature; comedian Bob Hope's son, Tony, was defeated by Simi Valley Mayor Elton Gallegly in his bid for a GOP nomination for a congressional seat; and former GOP lieutenant governor Mike Curb, a popular record producer, won re-nomination for the seat he held from 1979 through 1982.

With 73 percent of the precincts reporting, Cranston won 1,309,355 votes, or 81 percent, while his closest rival, political unknown Charles Greene, had 118,968 votes, or 7 percent.

In the Democratic gubernatorial race, Bradley won 1,320,839 votes, or 81 percent, while his closest competitor, businessman Hugh Bagley, had 105,462 votes, or 6 percent, with 76 percent of the vote counted.

Deukmejian won 1,411,102 votes, or 94 percent, while Saratoga electrical engineer William Clark won 97,771 votes, or 5 percent, with 76 percent of the vote counted.

In the San Diego mayor's race, O'Connor had 102,198 votes or 55 percent, to 82,804 votes, or 45 percent, for Cleator, with 88 percent of the 2,009 precincts counted.

With 91 percent of the statewide vote counted, Zschau had 640,360 votes, or 36 percent, while Herschensohn had 523,393 votes, or 30 percent. Herschensohn conceded at 2:02 a.m. (PDT) and told Zschau: "Congratulations. Our job is to get behind you."

Los Angeles County Supervisor Mike Antonovich was third with 9 percent, Rep. Bobbi Fiedler had 7 percent and state Sen. Ed Davis had 7 percent. Eight other candidates split the remaining 13 percent.

Other candidates in the Senate race included state Assemblyman Bob Naylor, economist Art Laffer, former Black Panther Eldridge Cleaver and former newspaper publisher Joseph Knowland.

Herschensohn, a former speechwriter for then-President Richard Nixon, advocates expelling the United Nations from the United States, opposes any nuclear arms treaty with the Soviet Union, and economic sanctions against South Africa.

Zschau, a former high technology entrepreneur who has represented the San Francisco Peninsula in Congress for 3½ years, describes himself as an economic conservative who votes to cut defense as well as domestic programs, and a moderate on social issues who opposes what he derisively calls "the Moral Majority agenda."

'Love Boat's' Fred Grandy sails to victory

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Fred Grandy of TV's "The Love Boat" overcame opponents' charges that he was an outsider in his home state and sailed easily into the Republican nomination for Iowa's 6th District congressional seat.

Grandy, 37, who hadn't lived in the district since he was 12, will face dairy farmer Clayton Hodgson in the November election.

With all but two precincts reported, Grandy, who played purser Gopher Smith on the popular television show, won 19,390 votes, or 68 percent, to easily outdistance Terry Jobst and George Moriarty.

Grandy said Tuesday his margin of victory "answers the question on whether I'm a native son."

"There came a point where people got tired of all the negativism," he said. "The more negative things they said about me, the more positive people felt about me."

In November, he will face Hodgson, who won the Democratic Party's nod over four rivals. Hodgson is a former assistant to incumbent Democratic Rep. Berkley Bedell, who is surrendering the 6th District seat for health reasons.

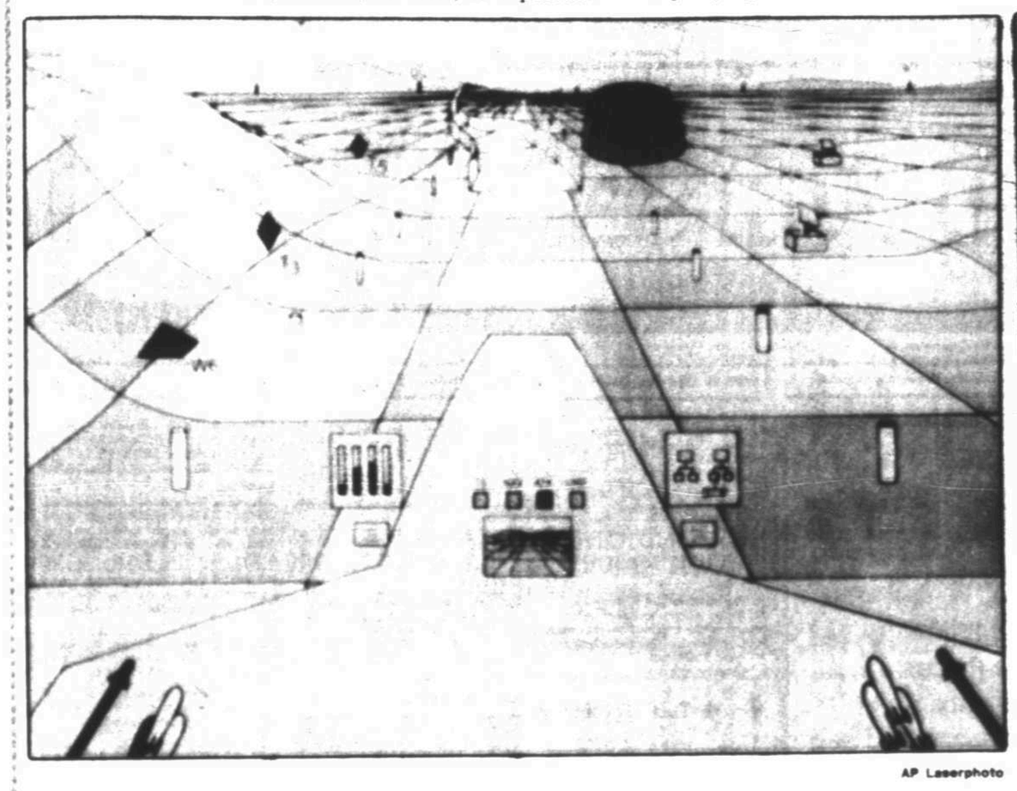

With 520 of 522 precincts reporting, Hodgson captured 10,080 votes, or 48 percent, to 4,143 or 20 percent for Jane Shey, another Bedell aide and a Roman Catholic Church activist. Sioux City lawyer David O'Brien had 2,877 votes or 14 percent; state Sen. Milo Colton of Sioux City had 2,252 or 11 percent, and Clear Lake lawyer John Ayers had 1,468 or 7 percent.

"I don't want to run a negative campaign," Hodgson said. "I want to tell people who Clayton Hodgson is.

"I look forward to the challenge of running against Fred Grandy. I plan to let people know that I've got deep roots here in Iowa. I understand problems they face."

During the campaign, Hodgson said he was outraged that someone who had not lived in the district for 24 years could claim ability to represent it.

In the Democratic gubernatorial primary with 94 percent of the precincts reporting, former Senate Majority Leader Lowell Junkins, 42, had 63,664 votes or 53 percent to Lt. Gov. Robert Anderson's 40,559 or 33 percent, state Sen. George Kinley's 13,554 or 11 percent and Readlyn physician Clinton Berryhill's 3,478 or 3 percent.

This is what a pilot wearing the new "Darth Vader" helmet would see on the helmet's face screen while attacking a target.

AP Laserphoto

Lt. George Sarmiento of Flushing, N.Y., demonstrates a new pilot's helmet dubbed the "Darth Vader," which has been developed by the U.S. Air Force. A pilot can aim at a target just by turning his head in the headgear, said Sarmiento, one of the engineers on the project.

New helmet lets pilot aim at target with head

NEW YORK (AP) — A pilot's helmet dubbed "Darth Vader" may mark a revolution in the operation of military aircraft as it lets pilots aim weapons at targets just by turning their heads, U.S. Air Force officials say.

Developed at the Wright Patterson Air Force Base in Ohio, versions of the helmet are used by pilots flying the Army's Apache helicopters and the Navy's F-4J jets, said Air Force 1st Lt. George Sarmiento, an engineer on the project.

The helmets have been operational for about two years, and versions have been depicted in such movies as "Blue Thunder," about an advanced police helicopter, and the TV series "Airwolf."

In the Army and Navy models, when a pilot spots a target, he flips a switch and an electronic system which senses the position of his helmet aims missiles or high-speed guns in the same direction he is looking.

"If he sees a target at 2 o'clock and looks at it, the sensors will register it and the missiles will follow," said Sarmiento.

Pilots aim with their heads about nine times faster than they do with hand-held controls, according to Air Force studies.

Sarmiento said the Air Force's version of the headgear, which is being used on classified projects, should be operational by early 1987. He said that version is taking more time to develop because it has to be very small and light; a large, heavy helmet could kill a pilot ejecting from a speeding fighter.

More advanced versions of the headgear are expected in the 1990s, assuming the Pentagon and Congress approve a $100 million research program, he said.

"Darth Vader," so named by laboratory technicians because of its resemblance to the "Star Wars" movie villain, was developed in an effort to revolutionize the cockpit, said Thomas A. Furness, head of the helmet research program at Wright Patterson.

The goal is to eventually turn the helmet into a kind of movie theater where the pilot is surrounded by three-dimensional pictorial and audio display of the outside world, day or night.

Further negotiations planned in phone strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators for striking telephone workers and AT&T are planning further meetings under the auspices of federal negotiators in an effort to end a walkout extending into its fourth day, but both sides acknowledge there is little progress so far.

"There's been a tiny bit of progress, but it's not enough to end the strike," Rozanne Weissman, a spokeswoman for the Communications Workers of America, said following two bargaining sessions Tuesday.

Sources indicated there were still major disagreements on three provisions that AT&T wants in a new three-year contract covering the workers.

They included AT&T's demand for an elimination of automatic cost-of-living adjustments to keep workers' wages in step with inflation, its desire to end piecework bonuses for 20,000 manufacturing workers and dividing 20,000 service technicians into three new categories.

Baptists going to Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Some 50,000 members of the Southern Baptist Convention will flock to Atlanta next week for their annual convention, and the city will become a difficult place to find a hotel room.

"They have booked up almost every hotel within a 10-mile radius of downtown," said Delores Sykes of the Atlanta Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Hotels have made special arrangements to handle the crowd. "We've done our homework," said Wayne Daniels, sales manager for the Atlanta Hyatt Regency Hotel, where the Baptists have booked 1,000 of the 1,282 rooms.

"We've talked to hotels where the Baptists have stayed in the past to learn what has and hasn't worked," Daniels said. "It's important just knowing their schedules so that we can add extra staff at..."

Some Baptists will not even check in at the inns. The Rev. Beverly Tinnin of the First Baptist Church of Meridian, Miss., plans to camp out at Stone Mountain Park.

For others, Rachel Howard of the Norcross First Baptist Church has found families who are willing to share their spare rooms.

Nancy to attend wedding

WASHINGTON (AP) — First Lady Nancy Reagan will attend the royal wedding of Britain's Prince Andrew and Sarah Ferguson in July, the White House announced today.

Elaine Crispen, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, said the first lady had received a formal invitation as well as a handwritten note from the prince asking her to come to the July 23 event.

Although thousnds of American tourists have stayed away from Britain due to the recent round of terrorist attacks in Europe, Mrs. Crispen said the first lady would not be deterred.

The press secretary said the first lady had not allowed the terrorism issue to interfere with her recent travels in Thailand and Malaysia and she did not intend to focus on such problems.

Mrs. Crispen said it had not yet been decided how many days Mrs. Reagan would stay in Britain for the wedding.

The press secretary said Mrs. Reagan would write a personal reply to the young couple and was looking forward to the event.

"Oh, she's very fond of them all," Mrs. Crispen said of Mrs. Reagan's fellings toward the British royal family.

Princess Diana attended an anti-drug seminar last year in Northern Virginia when she and Prince Charles came to open an exhibit of British treasures at the Smithsonian Institution.
