Five Midland high school seniors have been named national merit semifinalists by the National Merit Scholarship Corp. The semifinalists are Thomas Fleming of Lee High School and Sean Eckerty, Lezli Herman, Justin Merritt and Jason Whiles, all of Midland High School. Only 15,000 students advance to semifinalist out of the 1.8 million who participate in the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT). The semifinalists will now compete for designation as a National Merit Finalist.

Court strips award

HOUSTON — A federal appeals court has vacated a $175 million judgment awarded to a Midland company that had sued several oil-field service companies, one of the defendants said Friday. The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans issued the decision Thursday to vacate and dismiss the judgment handed down in October 1990 by a federal jury in Midland, said Dow Heard, a spokesman for BJ Services Co., one of the companies sued by Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co./6A

Lewis takes heat

LAS VEGAS — Jerry Lewis concentrated on rehearsals Friday for his annual Labor Day telethon while some muscular dystrophy victims, including a Bush administration official, rapped what they called his "pity" approach. Others defended the 66-year-old entertainer, saying the $1 billion he has helped raise for the Muscular Dystrophy Association provides help and hope for millions. Lewis twice declined a pre-telethon interview with The Associated Press, the first time in more than a decade that he has done so. Lewis was too busy with last-minute rehearsals for the 21½-hour show, which begins at 8 p.m. CDT Sunday, said Muscular Dystrophy Association spokesman Jim Brown./8C

Employers slash payrolls

Jobless rate dips; Fed cuts key interest rate

Economic numbers add up to trouble for Bush

By John King
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Poverty is up and payrolls are down, especially in manufacturing areas that are major presidential battlegrounds. In politics, the only numbers that count are on Election Day, but the latest economic figures cannot help President Bush's re-election effort.

"I'd say President Bush ought to be running scared," said Jeffrey Rosenweig, an Emory University finance professor and economic forecaster. "People seem to be hurting now more than they have in a generation."

■ Analysis

It has been obvious for months that the economy would be the central election issue. Unclear, however, was whether it would show at least modest steam as summer turned to fall, giving Bush evidence for his case that things are getting better.

Some data and many forecasts suggest better days ahead, but the bulk of the numbers show an economy stuck in a rut and taking a painful

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate edged down to 7.6 percent in August because of a temporary summer jobs program for teens, but adult joblessness worsened slightly and the economy lost thousands of crucial manufacturing jobs.

In response to the unexpectedly grim report Friday, the Federal Reserve cut a key short-term interest rate by a quarter of a percentage point, the third reduction this year and the 24th since the economy turned sluggish in 1989.

The move was intended to stimulate borrowing and buying but analysts said the most immediate effect may be yet another drop in bank deposit rates.

Administration officials tried to put a good face on the unemployment report, but Democrats and economists were dismayed by an 83,000 drop in U.S. payrolls. The unemployment rate, which declined from 7.7 percent in July, is

The first lady will christen the Midland Bush/Quayle headquarters at 9:30 a.m. Thursday at 3 Oak Ridge Square.

The facility, located at the northeast corner of Wadley Avenue and Garfield Street, will be called Texas Victory '92 phone bank. Workers will spend the two months before the election reminding Midlanders to vote.

Next Saturday, Henry Bonilla, candidate for the U.S. House of Representatives, 23rd District, will follow Mrs. Bush's appearance with a 10:30 a.m. appearance at the headquarters.

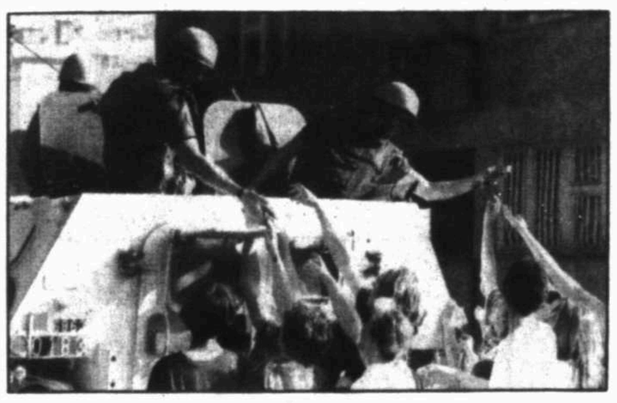

"We're very thrilled to have the first lady help with our ceremonies. We think it will be a big success," said organizer Billie Ross. "Mr. Bonilla, as well, will be a welcome guest."

Airlines delay ticket price increases

■ Number of Americans expected to travel during Labor Day weekend hits 7-year high.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Millions of Americans hit the road this Labor Day weekend, but airlines want more travelers to take to the skies. What better way than delaying fare increases until the end-of-summer getaway ritual has passed?

Although the economic climate may only be marginally better this year, the number of Americans expected to travel during the three-day holiday weekend was the highest since 1985, the American Automobile Association said.

At least 28 million motorists said they would travel 100 miles or more, while 4.4 million people said they would travel by air, train or bus, said AAA spokesman Geoff Sundstrom.

"There's pent-up demand for travel," he said. "People can defer holidays for awhile but eventually they feel they owe themselves one."

Because of the recession, fewer people took trips last Labor Day weekend than in any year at least since 1985, when the auto club began its holiday travel survey.

This year, motorists will pay the lowest average Labor Day gasoline price since 1988, AAA said. The nationwide average price for self-serve regular unleaded gasoline is $1.157 per gallon, down from $1.162 per gallon last year, AAA said.

Another part of the reason for the increase in travel is the interest generated by the airlines' half-price ticket sale this summer, Sundstrom said.

Indeed, the dollar amount of airline tickets

Superman meets his match in comic

■ DC Comics confirms that super hero will die in Nov. 18 issue.

By Larry McShane
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Deader than a doornail. Unable to leap anything from 6 feet under. It's a corpse. It's a cadaver. It's Superman!

Clark Kent's alter ego is headed to the superhero hereafter.

"It is going to happen. Superman is going to die in issue No. 75, in a fight with this Doomsday guy," a despondent DC Comics spokeswoman, Martha Thomases, said Friday.

What? The Dead Man of Steel? Curtains for the last Kryptonian? Holy funeral ... oops, wrong comic.

But don't close the coffin on Metropolis' main man just yet. Yes, he will die, says DC Comics Superman Editor Mike Carlin. But who knows what will happen after that?

"He's the only Kryptonian left. We don't know what death means to a Kryptonian," Carlin told Advance Comics, an Illinois-based trade publication that broke the story. "Death is final for Earthlings, death has been final for the Kryptonians whose planet blew up, but you never know.

"Like I said, never say never. Never say we wouldn't kill Superman, never say we wouldn't bring him back."

Citadel closes day classes to all veterans

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The Citadel, battling a lawsuit to admit women veterans to all-male day classes, said Friday that instead of letting the women in it would keep all veterans — including men — out.

Three female veterans sued the state military college in June trying to get into day classes. They do not want to join the all-male corps of cadets, only attend classes with them as male veterans do.

While women may attend summer and evening classes, course offerings are greater during the day.

President Claudius E. Watts III said The Citadel didn't want to risk losing the lawsuit, which could mean losing a federal Education Act exemption to operate as a single-sex college.

"That would threaten the very survival of The Citadel as we know it today," he said. "It would effectively eliminate the role and contributions of a single-gender college."

The college also could lose federal loan and grant aid, which makes up about 10 percent of its $40 million budget, he said.

"These consequences, in our judgment, are not worth keeping the Citadel veterans' day program the way it is," he said.

The program will close at the end of this semester, affecting 78 male veterans. The college has about 2,000 cadets.

Attorney Robert Black, who represents the women veterans, said he would review the action to see whether they should continue with their lawsuit.

The lawsuit claimed limiting day classes to male veterans violated the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment.

U.S. District Judge C. Weston Houck refused last month to issue an injunction allowing the three women to enroll this semester but scheduled trial for Nov. 9.

The male veterans were told of the school's decision during a meeting on campus. Some expressed unhappiness at losing the program.

"This is the only electrical engineering program in this area of the state," said Ted Blumstein, who left a job at a nuclear power plant in North Carolina to attend. "I have nowhere else to go."

Another student, James McClellan, said the college should allow veterans already in the program to graduate.

College officials said they would help students complete their studies through either the evening program or courses at other local colleges.

Emergency teams sample destroyed palm trees as source of cancer, AIDS drugs

NEW YORK (AP) — Hurricane Andrew's devastation of the world's largest collection of rare palms and related plants has provided a unique opportunity to search for potential new cancer and AIDS drugs, researchers said Friday.

The National Cancer Institute dispatched a research team to the Fairchild Tropical Garden in Miami in a race to collect samples from downed and dying palms before the palms began to decompose, said team leader Michael Balick of the New York Botanical Garden.

"What we have here is a priceless opportunity to collect palms from around the world, a real once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to look at palms that no one has ever looked at," said Balick, a leading authority on palms.

Samples from 25 palms were shipped to cancer institute laboratories in Maryland on Friday morning, Balick said.

The samples will be tested against the AIDS virus and 60 kinds of cancer to see whether they have any potential as drugs, Balick said in a telephone interview. The sounds of chainsaws and helicopters could be heard in the background.

After the hurricane thundered through southern Florida on Aug. 24, Balick asked the cancer institute if it would be interested in emergency collection of the samples. The cancer institute said yes.

"In the light of the destruction, I felt we certainly could take some of those materials and see if there were any potential uses," said Gordon Cragg of the National Cancer Institute.

About 1 percent to 2 percent of materials screened by the cancer institute have been shown to have some activity worth further study, he said.

Before Hurricane Andrew's arrival, the Fairchild Tropical Garden contained 700 species of palms and 150 relatives called cycads, palm-like "living fossils" that have been on Earth for some 200 million years, said William Klein, the garden's director.

It was the largest palm and cycad collection in the world, he said.

"Our estimates are that between 60 percent and 70 percent of the collection has been seriously damaged or destroyed," Klein said. "I really don't know how to put a value on a collection like this. In some cases, it's an absolutely irretrievable loss."

About 50 downed palms have been righted, and may survive the damage, he said.

"On those plants that cannot be saved, we are undergoing a massive salvage operation of the information that these plants contain," he said.

Cloudy skies bring heat

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-90s and south winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the mid-60s, according the National Weather Service in Midland.

Sunday should be sunny with a high in the low 90s.

After an overnight low of 64, Friday's high reached 95, compared to the record high for that date of 99 set in 1989. The record low was 53 set in 1988.

STATE

Thunderstorms appeared across South and West Texas Friday as fog and low clouds hovered over the North.

In West Texas, isolated thunderstorms were seen in the southwest mountains. Otherwise skies were mostly sunny over West Texas with temperatures in the 80s and 90s.

Showers and thunderstorms continued over much of the eastern half of South Texas with some heavy rains. High pressure kept sunny skies stationed over the rest of the region with readings in the 90s and 100s.

Low clouds and fog gave way to clear and partly cloudy skies this afternoon over north Central Texas. Partly cloudy skies continued over the northeast with some lingering scattered thunderstorms and temperatures in the 80s and 90s.

NATION

Rain showers moved across much of the nation for a third straight day Friday, while hail pelted parts of the upper Midwest. Heavy rain caused streets to flood in parts of Hawaii and Texas.

Thunderstorms also produced hail in several Minnesota cities, including some hail the size of golf balls.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over parts of the southern Atlantic coast, the eastern Gulf coast, the Tennessee Valley, Kentucky, West Virginia, northern Maine, eastern Texas and the Texas Panhandle, the Oklahoma Panhandle, the Plains, the Great Lakes region, the Rockies and Oregon.

JOBLESS: Unemployment rate dips slightly

derived from a survey of households while the payroll information is collected directly from businesses.

White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the drop in the jobless rate "is an encouraging sign that the economy is improving."

However, Sen. Donald W. Riegle, D-Mich., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, pointed to a decline of 97,000 jobs in manufacturing, the worst in 18 months, and said, "The situation is getting worse, not better."

"The high-wage, high-skill manufacturing jobs are the centerpiece of our middle class and the loss of those jobs is grinding down the middle class," Riegle said.

The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate in August marked the second consecutive small drop after the rate hit an eight-year high of 7.8 percent in June. But the Labor Department attributed all of the August improvement to a youth jobs program created after the Los Angeles riots.

The jobless rate for adult men edged up to 7.3 percent from 7.2 percent in July. The rate for adult women held steady at 6.5 percent. The rate for teen-agers fell to 19.8 percent in August from 21 percent in July and 23.6 percent in June.

Last month's 83,000-job drop in payroll employment, the biggest in nine months, followed a 177,000 increase in July and a 76,000 decline in June. Economists had been expecting a 150,000 gain in August.

Labor Department officials attributed 75,000 of the July jobs gain to the youth program and said the program provided 100,000 jobs in August, mitigating the slump's severity.

"August was a month of total jobs destruction," said economist Allen Sinai of Boston Co. Economic Advisers Inc. "Business was firing, not hiring."

Businesses are avoiding hiring and are even laying off workers while asking remaining employees to work more, Sinai said.

The average workweek for nonfarm workers was 34.7 hours in August, up from 34.3 the month before and the highest since October 1989.

Job losses last month were widespread, except for gains of 84,000 in government and 25,000 in services. Retailers shed 71,000 jobs and construction firms, 7,000.

Joblessness increased in four election battleground states: California, Florida, Ohio and Pennsylvania. California, with the most electoral votes in the country, had the highest rate among 11 industrial states, 9.8 percent, up from 7.5 percent a year ago.

The next unemployment report — for September — will be the last voters see before they choose between President Bush and Democratic nominee Bill Clinton on Nov. 3, and it could be even worse than Friday's.

The end of the summer jobs program and Hurricane Andrew's destruction of businesses in Florida and Louisiana may well send the September rate back to its June peak, economists said.

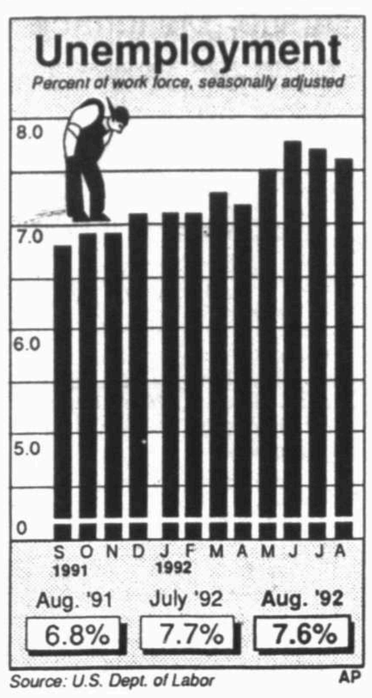

Hours after the release of the employment figures, the Federal Reserve added money to the nation's banking system, a move interpreted by economists as intended to lower a key interest rate by a quarter of a percentage point.

Analysts said the new target for the federal funds rate — the rate charged among banks for overnight loans — appeared to be 3 percent, the lowest since June 1963. That matches the discount rate, the rate the Fed itself charges on loans.

Economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. in New York said the Federal Reserve probably decided against the bolder move of cutting the discount rate, last reduced on July 2, for fear of roiling world currency markets.

The dollar is trading near post-World War II lows against the German mark because of the gap between high German rates and low U.S. rates.

Jones said the federal funds rate cut probably will not be enough to prompt banks to reduce their prime lending rate, now at 6 percent, which serves as the base for many consumer loans. But, analysts said deposit rates now near 3 percent probably would decline further.

ANALYSIS: Economic woes spell trouble for Bush

(From 1A)

toll on many Americans.

For Bush, that spells double trouble.

The bad economic news alone is a major obstacle to his re-election. And it fits perfectly Democrat Bill Clinton's claim that 12 years of Reagan-Bush economics lifted the rich while harming the "forgotten middle class."

Consider the economic news from this week alone:

■ Friday's unemployment report showed a slight drop, from July's 7.7 percent to 7.6 percent in August. But that was due to a summer jobs program. Overall, payrolls declined by 83,000 jobs, with modest growth in some sectors helping offset a 71,000-job decline in retail and a 97,000-job decrease in manufacturing, the steepest in 18 months.

■ Factory orders fell by 1.1 percent in July, giving manufacturers little reason to think about hiring new workers.

■ The ranks of the poor swelled to a 27-year high, with the recession pushing 2.1 million more Americans into poverty.

■ Median household incomes fell 3.5 percent in 1991. The drop between 1989 and 1991 — the data for Bush's presidency — was the most severe decline since the 1973 recession.

And, for Bush, it gets worse.

The unemployment rate went up in four November battlegrounds, California, Florida, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

It did improve in Texas, New Jersey, Illinois and Michigan. But in both Michigan and New Jersey unemployment was still 9 percent or higher. And Illinois, where the rate dropped from 8.4 percent to 6.5 percent, is considered Clinton's strongest industrial state.

As he attacks Bush's economic record, Clinton has the benefit of good recent news in his state: manufacturing jobs in Arkansas were up 11.2 percent in the 1980s while decreasing nationally, and the state ranked fifth in wage and salary growth last year.

But Arkansas wages are still well below the national average and its poverty rate, while improving, is higher than the national average, giving Bush ammunition to fire back.

Even economists who support Bush's policies as medicine the economy needs say there's no time between now and November for any significant improvements in the numbers.

"I don't think there are a lot of happy campers out there but virtually every forecaster, Republican or Democrat, predicts a much stronger 1993," said Murray Weidenbaum, who served as chairman of President Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers. "It will be ironic if Clinton gets to enjoy the fruits of the Bush policies."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater tried to shift the burden of bad news onto Congress, saying the economy would rebound quicker if lawmakers passed a Bush economic plan that includes business incentives and a lower tax on capital gains.

But nothing in that plan is new, and poll after poll shows low voter confidence in Bush's handling of the economy. "He can't run on his record so he needs to come up with some kind of plan for the future and hope that it sells," said Rosenweig.

Campaigning Friday in Virginia, Bush took a different approach. Never mind voter unrest with his economic stewardship, Bush argued things would be worse under "the Clinton-Gore tax-and-spend ticket."

"He talks a good game," Bush told small business owners. "But his policies threaten to tax and spend and regulate you right out of business."

The tax-and-spend label has worked for Republicans before, and the Clinton camp is trying feverishly to keep it from sticking to their candidate.

As they try, they're banking on the premise that no matter how good a game Bush talks between now and November, the state of the economy under his administration will run him right out of office.

FARE: Airlines delay increases until after holiday

(From 1A)

booked through travel agents from January through July was $30.67 billion, said the Washington-based Airline Reporting Corp. That was higher than $28.02 billion in the same period in 1991. But airline executives still weren't smiling. The fare wars have eaten into revenues this summer, traditionally the most profitable season.

The discounting helped put more people on airplanes in the summer, but the industry still lost hundreds of millions of dollars in the first six months of 1992 and billions in the last two years.

"Because so many people bought tickets during the half-price sale in June, sales were in the doldrums throughout most of the rest of summer," said Philip Davidoff, president of the American Society of Travel Agents.

Many airlines said bookings were up for Labor Day weekend and could set travel records. Davidoff said, however, many of the bookings were made early when prices were low and they wouldn't mean extra profits for airlines.

"Labor Day seats were about the first to go," Davidoff said.

In other cases, people pushed up airline travel plans to take advantage of the low fares and now the typically slow fall months are expected to be even slower.

Hoping to generate more fall travel, the airlines in late summer offered 30 percent discounts, which ended Monday, and then coupons worth $35 to $50, which expire today.

Carriers have not been able to help restore profits by raising prices. Several times this summer attempts were made to raise fares by up to 33 percent, but each time plans failed because one airline or another chose not to match the increases.

That seems to have happened again this week. A $10 to $40 increase on most airlines scheduled to take effect today, was postponed late Thursday for about a week.

SUPER: Hero to die, DC Comics spokeswoman says

(From 1A)

The superhero, whose death battle with Doomsday will arrive in stores Nov. 18, is definitely dead through March 1993, Thomases said.

"I don't know the schedule through all eternity, but I know it through March, and there's no Superman," she said.

Superman fans are not pleased. Thomases has received calls from England, Germany and all over the world about the Super-slaying.

Their hero has been on the case for DC since 1938, splitting his time between saving the world and writing for the Daily Planet. He recently became engaged to Lois Lane. And suddenly he's just DEAD?

"Somebody's already called and said they're going to organize a boycott of Time Warner," said Thomases, mindful that the last guy to elicit that response was Ice-T. "But we're not advocating the killing of Kryptonians. We're just representing it."

Earlier this year, media conglomerate Time Warner Inc. — which owns DC Comics — was criticized and threatened with a boycott over Ice-T's rap song "Cop Killer," released under one of the company's record labels.

After years of defeating bad guys like Lex Luthor, Superman meets his match in Doomsday, a nasty purveyor of death and destruction. Doomsday has escaped from a cosmic lunatic asylum; Superman goes down saving as many people as possible from Doomsday's wrath.

The good news: Superman is not going out a loser. Doomsday is destined to bite the dust in a draw with Superman, Thomases said.

The comic book will go on with a storyline called "Funeral for a Friend," which will have Superman's friends and associates in mourning.

Great Caesar's ghost! Does this mean crusty old Perry White is going to outlast the Man of Steel?

"He stopped smoking recently," Carlin said. "He'll outlive Superman."

BARBARA: Bush plans campaign trip to city

(From 1A)

Barbara and George Bush were married on Jan. 6, 1945, the same year he was honorably discharged from the service as a lieutenant and started college at Yale University.

After college in 1948, Bush took his first job in Odessa as an equipment clerk for the International Derrick & Equipment Co. The family lived in a duplex on a dirt street.

After working in California for one year, the family returned to West Texas, living in Midland from 1950 until 1958. Five of the couples' six children were born in Midland. Their second child, Robin, died of leukemia in 1953.

Bush co-founded Bush-Overbey Oil Development Co. in 1951. Two years later, the company was absorbed into Zapata Petroleum Corp. In 1954, Bush co-founded Zapata Off-Shore Co.

In 1952, Bush helped raise campaign funds for the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket, eleven years before he first ran for the Senate, unsuccessfully.

Bobby Fischer takes center stage, thanks to Jezdimir Vasiljevic

By Roger Cohen
N.Y. Times News Service

SVETI STEVAN, Yugoslavia — Things got off to an awkward start here at the exhibition chess match between Bobby Fischer and Boris Spassky. The cover of the glossy program prepared by the players' Yugoslav host referred to Fischer as "the world shess champion."

Now virtually nobody, apart from Fischer himself, believes the U.S. grandmaster is still world champion, a title currently held by Gary Kasparov of Russia. But even Fischer apparently agreed that he was not "world shess champion," for harried hordes of staff could be seen placing correctly spelled stickers on programs the night before the first match.

The mistake must have mortified Jezdimir Vasiljevic, the bustling, stocky, pipe- and cigar-smoking Yugoslav entrepreneur who coaxed the reclusive Fischer back to competition after a 20-year absence with the lure of $5 million in prize money.

Nobody knows how the shadowy Vasiljevic (pronounced vass-ill-YAY-vich) made the millions he is throwing around, but he has been going out of his way to satisfy every whim of Fischer, surrounding him with muscle-bound bodyguards in Ray-Bans and hiring a tailor to fit him out with a new wardrobe.

"I just accept all Fischer's conditions," Vasiljevic confessed in an interview, taking a break from his cigar and Sherlock Holmes-style pipe in order to smoke a cigarette. Apart from tobacco, he also has a marked taste for neat Campari, served chilled, and bright ties that he casually loosens, with the knot midway down his chest, when the heat at this Adriatic resort becomes overwhelming.

Although the main sounds here are the splashing of the waves and the barking of Vasiljevic's orders to his terrified minions, the mortar and artillery fire of the Balkan war are only 70 miles away over the mountains. One aspect of Vasiljevic's task in making Fischer and Spassky comfortable is ensuring that they are completely shielded from the war.

When it comes to the bloodshed, this is not difficult: The subject is simply taboo. But gasoline is a problem.

There is almost none left in the country as a result of U.N. sanctions; getting gas now involves waiting in line for about 12 hours. Naturally, this might have been irksome to the chess players, who travel a couple of miles by car every day from a luxurious waterfront hotel where they live to a rather seedier waterfront hotel where they play.

A resourceful man, Vasiljevic took it upon himself to solve this problem. He had his own gas pump installed in the midst of the beautiful park surrounding this resort. The resort has been acquired by Vasiljevic for $500 million.

The pump provides gas for the players as well as for anyone with Vasiljevic's authorization and enough dollars or German marks to pay for the fuel. The current rate: $2.50 a liter, about a quarter of a gallon.

For such enterprise, Vasiljevic likes to take credit. His crafty face appears next to that of the players on the "world chess championship T-shirt" — available in black, green or blue — that has been selling briskly for $8.

But it was at an extravagant prematch party that Vasiljevic really took a starring role, described in one of the "bulletins" put out by his company. "During the evening," it said, "the great masters Fischer and Spassky sat with Vasiljevic on a special throne symbolizing the kings of chess and finance."

In part, the prematch party last Tuesday was also a birthday celebration. Zita Rajcsanyi, Fischer's chess-playing Hungarian girlfriend, turned 19 years old that day. She is now 30 years younger than the grandmaster, whom she met last April in Los Angeles after she had written to him about her love for chess.

Appeals court reverses award to Parker & Parsley Petroleum

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal appeals court has vacated a $175 million judgment awarded to a Midland company that had sued several oilfield service companies, one of the defendants said Friday.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans issued the decision Thursday to vacate and dismiss the judgment handed down in October 1990 by a federal jury in Midland, said Dow Heard, a spokesman for BJ Services Co., one of the companies sued by Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co.

Heard said the federal appeals court dismissed the ruling, saying that the federal district court had no jurisdiction in the case.

The jury had assessed damages against BJ Services, Dresser Industries and their subsidiaries. Jurors had determined that between 1983 and 1988, Dresser and BJ Services cheated Parker & Parsley out of millions of dollars worth of fracturing materials used to boost well productivity.

Parker & Parsley claimed that the companies, because they did not use the requisite amount of fracturing materials, adversely affected production among some 523 of Parker & Parsley's Permian Basin wells.

BJ Services of Houston said it was provided an indemnity by Houston-based Baker Hughes Inc. when it was divested in 1990 for any judgment against it in excess of $6 million in the Parker & Parsley case.

"The company is obviously pleased with the results of the appeal, but cautioned that Parker & Parsley still have appellate alternatives or could refile its claims in state court," BJ Services said in a statement.

Parkey & Parsley officials could not be reached for comment Friday evening.

Disaster officials ponder Texas' plans

HOUSTON (AP) — Disaster preparedness officials along the Texas coast are reassessing their ability to cope with a storm of the magnitude of Hurricane Andrew, which ravaged southern Florida with 160 mph winds.

A top National Weather Service official warns that Texas would suffer even more damage than Florida did because of less stringent building codes. Experts give Texas good marks for its evacuation plans, but some fear there won't be time to execute them.

"I don't think anybody could be prepared for what happened out here," said Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center in South Florida.

Sheets said destruction in such a storm is inevitable, but he fears it will be worse than it has to be in Texas.

Most cities along the Texas coast require that structures withstand winds of 110 mph.

If a storm like Andrew hits Texas, Sheets said, "clearly, you'd have more damage because of the different building codes and practices."

Unemployment dips after seasonal changes, department says

DALLAS (AP) — The state's unemployment rate dipped to 6.9 percent in August, the second consecutive decline and the lowest figure this year, the Labor Department said Friday.

"Both the direction and size of these minimal movements ... were fairly typical for the month of August," said Labor spokesman Nic Santangelo.

The rate, compared with 6.6 percent in the same month a year ago, was down from 7.2 percent in July. About 606,000 Texans were out of work in August, 18,000 fewer than in July.

Last month's Texas figure was a full-point decline from June. Labor officials said a rate of 8.2 percent in that month was a statistical anomaly.

Aside from the June figure, the Texas jobless rate hasn't fluctuated far from the 7.8 rate in January.

"There are some positives in that bit of data," Santangelo said.

The State

"We've basically seen a flattening in the rate of unemployment since about February and March. The unemployment rate has been relatively consistent."

But, he added, "We really don't want to make too much of that until we get September's figures."

The Texas civilian labor force expanded 2.8 percent during the past 12 months to a level of 8.73 million.

August's three-month average, considered a better measure, was 7.4 percent, up from 6.4 percent during the same three months in 1991.

The national jobless rate also dipped slightly in August to 7.6 percent, down from 7.7 percent in July.

Losses in the oil and gas industry offset increases in construction, costing the Texas economy more than 10,000 jobs from July 1991 to July 1992, Santangelo said.

The health and food service industries, however, contributed 54,000 new jobs and service industries posted an overall gain of 81,000.

National Operation Rescue leaders say farewell to Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — After a nearly monthlong stay marked by raucous protests, lengthy court hearings and unexpected jail sentences, several national leaders of Operation Rescue gathered Friday to say goodbye to Houston.

Randall Terry, founder of Operation Rescue, along with the Rev. Pat Mahoney and Bob Jewitt, said they and several other national leaders planned to leave Houston for their respective hometowns Saturday.

But they also had one final warning to the abortion rights activists they fought in court before, during and after the Aug. 17-20 Republican National Convention.

"They will dread the day they ever got involved with us in the judicial process," promised Terry.

Terry said his group planned to file a lawsuit next week against Planned Parenthood of Houston and other local abortion clinics that requested and received a temporary restraining order preventing anti-abortion protesters from getting too close to clinics.

Seven Operation Rescue members, including Terry, were jailed for violating the order, which they claimed violated their right to free speech.

"We were imprisoned illegally," he said.

Attorneys for the clinics have argued that the protesters had every right to free speech, but they had to do it at least 100 feet from clinics' doors and 25 feet from patients.

Terry said his group planned to file a lawsuit next week against Planned Parenthood of Houston and other local abortion clinics that requested and received a temporary restraining order preventing anti-abortion protesters from getting too close to clinics.

Six jailed protesters, including Terry, were freed Monday after the Texas Supreme Court said they could be released on $100 bond each pending a review of the order. The seventh was released under similar circumstances last week.

Several of them had been jailed for 19 days. Terry was incarcerated for five days.

Planned Parenthood Inc. sought the restraining order after anti-abortion groups, including Operation Rescue, announced they would protest clinics before and during the GOP convention. State District Judge Eileen O'Neill issued the order Aug. 6.

Terry and the others were found guilty of violating the order in connection with protests staged outside clinics. Ms. O'Neill fined them each $500 and jailed them for up to six months unless they swore in court not to violate the order again. They all refused.

Trial begins in El Paso serial killings

EL PASO (AP) — Desiree Wheatley would have been 21 this month. The only thing her mother could do for her was put flowers on her grave and hope that the long campaign to find her killer is finally near an end.

Jury selection begins in Dallas next week in the trial of a 35-year-old convicted rapist accused of killing Desiree and five other girls and young women in 1987 and burying their bodies in the desert outside of El Paso.

It is the sixth trial date set for David Leonard Wood, who has pleaded innocent to a charge of serial murder that could result in the death sentence if he's convicted.

Marcia Wheatley prodded police and prosecutors to pursue their investigation into her daughter's slayings until Wood's arrest in 1990. She then sat through countless court hearings during nearly two years of legal wrangling.

Ms. Wheatley, who has become an outspoken advocate of victim's rights, said she'll be in court for the trial.

"I want him to know I'm there," she said after the trial was moved from El Paso in June because of publicity surrounding the case in the city of more than 600,000 on the U.S.-Mexican border. "Just because they moved it doesn't mean they are going to get rid of me."

Ms. Wheatley last saw her 15-year-old daughter alive as she dropped her off the last day of school on June 2, 1987. Desiree's grandmother let her stay out after curfew that day and she was never seen again.

On Sept. 4, 1987 — two days after what would have been Desiree's 16th birthday — a utility worker digging in the desert uncovered the decomposed body of a woman who had also been reported missing.

During the next six weeks, police searching a 10-square-mile area using state prison dogs and heat-sensing equipment mounted on airplanes uncovered the remains of four other missing women and girls, including Desiree.

Police had given up the search when aluminum can collectors stumbled on another body five months later. Three other missing women have not been found.

Authorities could only determine the cause of death for one of the women, who had been stabbed.

Fear gripped the city as the body count rose and El Paso Police Chief John Scagno was forced to acknowledge that a serial killer could be stalking young women.

Wood was indicted in July 1990, three years after the last body was found. But he had long been a suspect.

The young women, who ranged in age from 14 to 24, had started disappearing in February 1987, a month after he returned to his hometown of El Paso when he was paroled after serving seven years of a 20-year sentence for raping two teen-agers.

In September, soon after the first bodies were unearthed, a prostitute came forward and told authorities she'd had been raped sometime during the summer near where the bodies were found. She identified Wood as her attacker.

A former cellmate of Wood's has said he provided the information that led to Wood's indictment. In an interview with the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, Randy Wells said Wood told him he lured his victims to the desert with drugs and killed 15 women. He said he thought one of his victims was buried alive.

Democratic ticket wins Sierra Club nod

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas chapter of the Sierra Club on Friday joined the national organization in endorsing the Democratic presidential ticket of Bill Clinton and Al Gore.

Ken Kramer, director of the Lone Star chapter of the Sierra Club said President Bush's administration has been an "environmental disaster."

"The Sierra Club firmly believes that the environment of our state, country, and our world cannot stand four more years of the failed environmental presidency we have experienced under George Bush," he said.

"He (Bush) has broken every single promise and his administration has been an environmental disaster," said Kramer.

'The Sierra Club firmly believes that the environment of our state, country, and our world cannot stand four more years of the failed environmental presidency we have experienced under George Bush.'

— Ken Kramer

The Bush-Quayle campaign, however, said it welcomed comparisons between Bush's record and Clinton's record as governor of Arkansas.

"Clinton's record on the environment is appalling," said Brian Berry, a spokesman for the Bush-Quayle campaign.

He said Arkansas is among the leaders in the nation in air and water pollution.

Berry noted that the Sierra Club's only other presidential endorsement in its 100 year history was in 1984 when the non-partisan group picked Walter Mondale over Ronald Reagan.

"Some of their positions and policies reflect more of Mondale than Reagan," Berry said.

But Kramer slammed Bush, and Vice President Dan Quayle as "Bush's environmental hatchetman."

He said Clinton has become more committed to the environment in recent years.

Proof of that commitment was his selection of Tennessee Sen. Gore as his running mate, Kramer said.

Gore has gained a reputation as an environmentalist and is the author of a best-selling book called "Earth in the Balance."

Bush and Quayle have accused Gore of being an environmental extremist.

Gore has responded that the Republicans "are trying to stir up a fear that somehow a clean, beautiful environment will cost American jobs."

Canadian sweetheart swindler draws 20-year prison term

DALLAS (AP) — A Canadian native on Friday was sentenced to 20 years in prison for bilking about $40,000 from two Dallas County girlfriends during courtships in 1985 and 1990.

Alfred Barakett, 52, of Louisville, Ky., had faced 120 years in prison after his April 30 conviction on nine counts of bank fraud, bank theft and transporting stolen securities.

Prosecutors charged during Barakett's trial that he stole and forged checks from women across the country.

Investigators said Barakett, using several names in nearly 30 states, would tell women he was widowed, wealthy and could take care of their financial needs. He later would propose to them before depleting their bank accounts. The amounts were usually in the thousands of dollars, police said.

"The defendant, using a different name with each victim, used personal and business opportunities to gain their confidence," Assistant U.S. Attorney Candina Heath told jurors during the trial.

"He would then go out and deposit a check in their account that had been stolen from a previous victim, then receive 'less cash or a withdrawal.' Then he would disappear."

Farm groups highly critical of trade pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration has given away the farm in its negotiations to create a North American free trade zone, sugar and dairy producers charged Friday.

But Assistant U.S. Trade Representative Kathy Lydon rejected the contention, saying, "I think the U.S. farm will be greatly benefited by the export opportunities within the North American Free Trade Agreement."

The proposed treaty liberalizing trade between the United States, Mexico and Canada would seriously erode a decades-old U.S. price support program for peanuts, sugar, milk and other commodities, the agribusiness groups said.

It was expected all along that the price support program, known as Section 22, wouldn't survive the U.S.-Mexico talks. But the organizations fear a precedent will be set for the ongoing global trade talks under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

"We could be setting the stage for a bad GATT agreement in the future," said Jim Eichstadt of the Farmers Union Milk Marketing Co-Operative in Madison, Wis. The co-op represents some 10,800 dairy producers in eight upper midwestern states.

But Ms. Lydon said: "This is only an agreement reached between Mexico and the U.S. For them to jump to that conclusion is wrong."

In agriculture, the North American trade agreement is essentially a bilateral accord between the U.S. and Mexico. The U.S. and Canada negotiated a free trade agreement several years ago.

A draft copy of the pact's agricultural provisions obtained by The Associated Press shows that Mexico could gain substantial access to the U.S. sugar market.

"It's certainly not going to be any benefit to us and the long-term effect of it probably will end up destroying a major part of the domestic sugar industry," said Jack Nelson, president of the Rio Grande Valley Sugar Growers Association in Texas.

Sugar and dairy producers offer a similar argument — their industries are competitive yet need price supports to compete against other countries that subsidize their commodities.

"We have been warning the administration at every opportunity that it would be unfair and inappropriate to lower our Section 22 protections," said Jack Roney, vice president of the Hawaiian Sugar Planters Association.

"The only reason we need a sugar program and we need this protection is because of the uniquely distorted world market," he said.

Ms. Lydon noted that the sugar transition program would be phased out over 15 years, giving American producers ample time to adjust.

"We believe that within reason we've offered the best possible protection for them," she said.

Sugar growers aren't the only ones upset with the proposed accord, which must be ratified by all three nations' legislatures before it takes effect.

The pact, concluded last month, would hurt U.S. dairy and meat producers and encourage American dairies to relocate to Mexico, the farm advocacy group Rural Vermont said.

"We are struggling right now with a domestic dairy surplus," Eichstadt said. "Just the prospect of new milk coming into our market at this critical time through NAFTA raises deep concerns."

But Ms. Lydon said that Mexico is the world's leading importer of powered milk. "For them to be concerned about sudden surges when the country is the biggest importer seems a little odd."

The trade pact is expected to face a bumpy journey through Congress. But at least one Capitol Hill agricultural expert was pleased by the agreement.

Irvin rockets by Dogs

MHS shows signs of improving in 36-16 season-opening defeat

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Midland High's losing streak climbed to 10, the statistics look lop-sided in the favor of the 36-16 winning El Paso Irvin team and Ronnie Reeger was a loser in his Bulldog coaching debut Friday night at Memorial Stadium.

But — was that a glimmer of light at the end of the tunnel? The MHS faithful hope so.

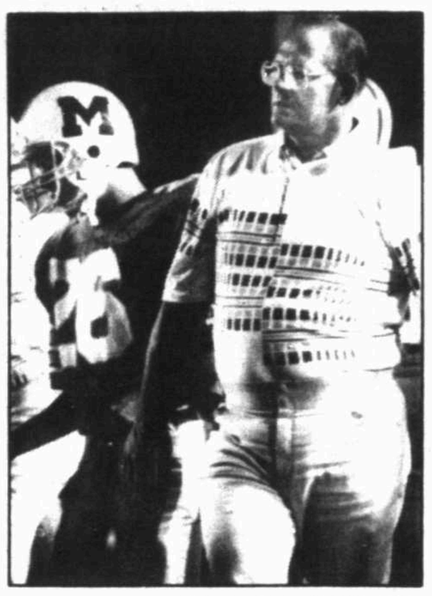

Down 19-2 at the half, MHS came roaring back with two third quarter touchdowns to cut the margin to 19-16 and it looked like the 'Dogs were perched to pull off an upset and end the losing skid of 0-9 a year ago. Then it fell apart again.

MHS even produced a 2-0 lead in the first quarter when Michael Jones blocked an Irvin punt into the end zone for a safety. The Bulldogs got the ball back and marched to the Irvin 18-yard line before Jeremy Hernandez hit the crossbar to miss a 35-yard field goal.

MHS produced a fumble and then marched to the Irvin two-yard line, but quarterback Brad Heidelberg was intercepted. Two golden opportunities went by the boards.

"That was the key to our win," Tony Shaw, Irvin coach said. "We played in our own backyard in the first quarter, but didn't let them score. It gave our offense time to get the jitters out. Then we started hitting those passes. I was glad to see that."

Irvin quarterback Enrique Casas guided the Rockets back into the lead with three TD marches, hitting seven of 11 passes for 149 yards in the second quarter as Irvin produced a 19-2 lead.

Lee rolls to 200th win

By Bill Price
Staff writer

EL PASO – There's no way it could have not been Labor Day weekend, because the Midland Lee Rebels worked awefully hard for their 21-7 football win over El Paso Andress here Friday in both teams' season opener at Andress Stadium. It was the 200th victory in Lee's storied history.

The Rebel defense watched sophomore Andress back Tiant Eddings run for 148 first-half yards, but held him to three in the second half. The Lee offense, passing more as promised, looked brilliant at times, but had to overcome three turnovers and 75 yards in offensive penalties.

"We looked like a young ball club, and we are. I was really proud of the defense (it held the Eagles to 212 total offensive yards while the Rebs rolled up 345) because we adjusted well. But we just made too many mistakes offensively," said Lee head coach Earl Miller.

But on those times the Lee wishbone clicked, it definitely showed promise.

Junior quarterback Courtney Turner hit big tight end Ryan Tucker (6-5, 225) three times for 79 yards and finished the game 6-for-10 passing for 141 yards. And that was all in the first half, as Lee didn't attempt a pass in the final 24 minutes.

But it was the defense that shined the brightest for Lee Friday. Though Eddings had a career in the first two quarters of his first start, the rest of the Andress offense accounted for only 23 additional first-half yards. In the second half, Eddings was stopped and the Eagles gained only 41 yards.

Not that Andress didn't move the ball some, but quarterback sacks kept pushing the team total backward.

In the second half, the Rebel defensive front was credited with at least five rushed passes and three sacks. And junior linebacker Cory Haynes chalked up one solo sack and had a piece of the other two.

"I was moving a lot quicker in the second half," Haynes said. "We just got together and said we were going to do it, and we did it."

The Rebel secondary also tallied its share of blows on Andress and quarterback Joe Hayward, chief of which were interceptions by Brian Henderson in the first quarter and John Robinson in the fourth.

Robinson's was crucial, because with Lee ahead 14-7, the Eagles were moving the ball and had advanced to the Lee 40. But on a first-down play Hayward went downfield and unintentionally found Robinson near the 20, where he hauled it in for a 24-yard return to the Lee 44 with nearly 10 minutes left in the game.

"In the defensive huddle we were just saying we needed to stop them and to try to get a turnover as soon as possible," Robinson said. "We started playing some hard ball."

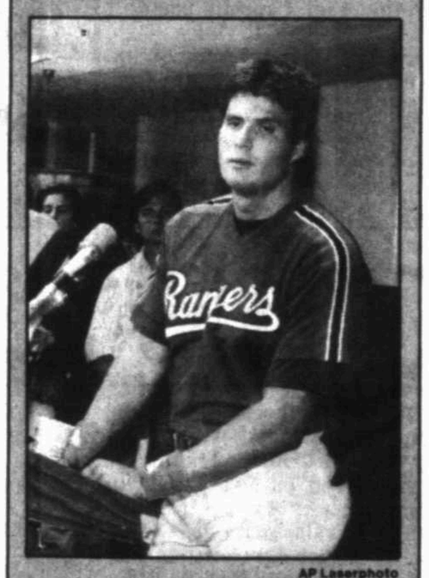

The Reb offense then found its footing on the ground, reeling off a 12-plsy drive that culminated with Turner's 6-yard jaunt into the end zone with 5:52 to play.

Lee got on the board first, as the Rebs converted an Andress fumble into seven points. With 5:15 left in the first quarter, the Eagles' Jackie Oree left the ball on the ground at midfield.

When Turner hit Tucker for a 29-yard completion on the next play, the Rebels

MCS wallops Abilene Christian

By Pete Herndon
MRT Correspondent

Six-man football is not supposed to be a "three yards and a cloud of dust" type of game.

With 15 yards to go for first downs, screens, misdirection draws and quick-hitting passes to the wideouts are generally featured in the stereotypical six-man offense.

James Blake, in his first game at the helm of defending Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools state champion Midland Christian, tried to change that image in just over a half of football Friday night.

The Mustangs needed only five passes to score their first six touchdowns en route to a 61-16 victory over Abilene Christian in the season opener for both teams at Mustang Field.

"Well, we were able to get outside on them early," Blake said of 43 and 41 yard touchdown runs by Wes Adams and a 22-yard scoring run by Clay Gunter — all in the first quarter. "It didn't make any since to throw the ball that much."

Adams, a 130-pound junior, finished the night with 130 yards on 10 carries with three touchdowns. He outrushed the entire Abilene team by 19 yards.

Mustangs fullback Kyle Jackson, who ran for a pair of touchdowns in the second half to help the Mustangs finish with 291 rushing yards, readily admitted he was a little surprised at his team's success on the ground.

"We were planning to use the spread," Jackson said, referring to a more pass-oriented offense. "We wanted to get the running game down first. It worked pretty well.

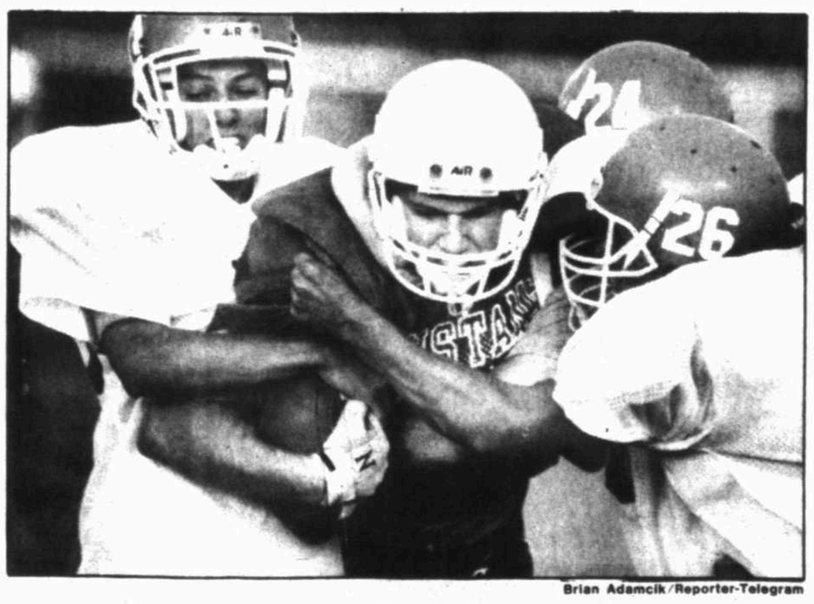

"We haven't added alot of passes yet."

Blake credited several linemen with not letting Abilene force Midland Christian into passing situations.

"I thought Gary Welsh and Toby Welsh both played well," Blake said. "Jody Duncan did a good job at end. Anybody else, I'd be guessing until I saw the film."

With the ground game established, the MCS defense took care of the rest.

With Midland Christian leading 21-0 at the half, Glen Bishop's 15-yard interception return for a touchdown on the Panthers opening possession was the first of three consecutive Abilene turnovers.

Braves rally past Red Devils

By Joe Wyatt

RANKIN — The Iraan Braves used a pair of fourth quarter touchdowns to overcome Rankin's explosive 18-point third quarter and defeat the Red Devils 30-24 here Friday night in the 1992 season opener for both football teams.

Iraan quarterback Shay Elkins brought the Braves to within two points of the lead with a 13-yard bootleg for a touchdown on the first play of the fourth quarter.

And fullback Cameron Holifield, who plowed for a game-best 146 yards on 26 carries, put the Braves in front for the first time since they led 7-6 at halftime, on a one-yard TD dive with 1:13 showing on the game clock.

"You have to give them (Braves) credit for coming back," said Rankin head coach Raul Sanchez, whose debut at the Red Devil helm was spoiled by the late rally.

"They toughed it out and we turned the ball over at the wrong time," Sanchez said.

Iraan's game-winning drive began when Brandon Vaughn recovered a fumble by Juan Bautista at the Braves' 26-yard line, turning away the Red Devils and breathing fresh life into an attack that trailed, but never faded throughout the hard-fought second half.

Iraan marched 74 yards in 12 plays to

Jen-Jen says bye-bye at Open

■ Little known Cambodian Patricia Hy sends Jennfer Capriati packing with a straight-set win in Friday's third round.

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

NEW YORK — From Olympic gold to U.S. Open dross, Jennifer Capriati ended one of the happiest of summers with a listless loss to Patricia Hy.

■ Friday's Results/3B

Capriati swatted balls into the net almost as often as Hy, a Cambodian-born resident of Toronto, put away winners with deep groundstrokes and soft touch volleys in a 7-5, 6-4 victory in the third round Friday.

Monica Seles, who beat a chunkier but better Capriati in the semifinals a year ago, fell behind 1-4 to Claudia Porwik but quickly dashed any notions of an upset by taking the next 11 games to win 6-4, 6-0 before Jimmy Connors and Ivan Lendl took the stadium court.

Capriati, 30 pounds lighter than last year, lacked the energy and strength to chase down Hy's shots around the perimeter of the court.

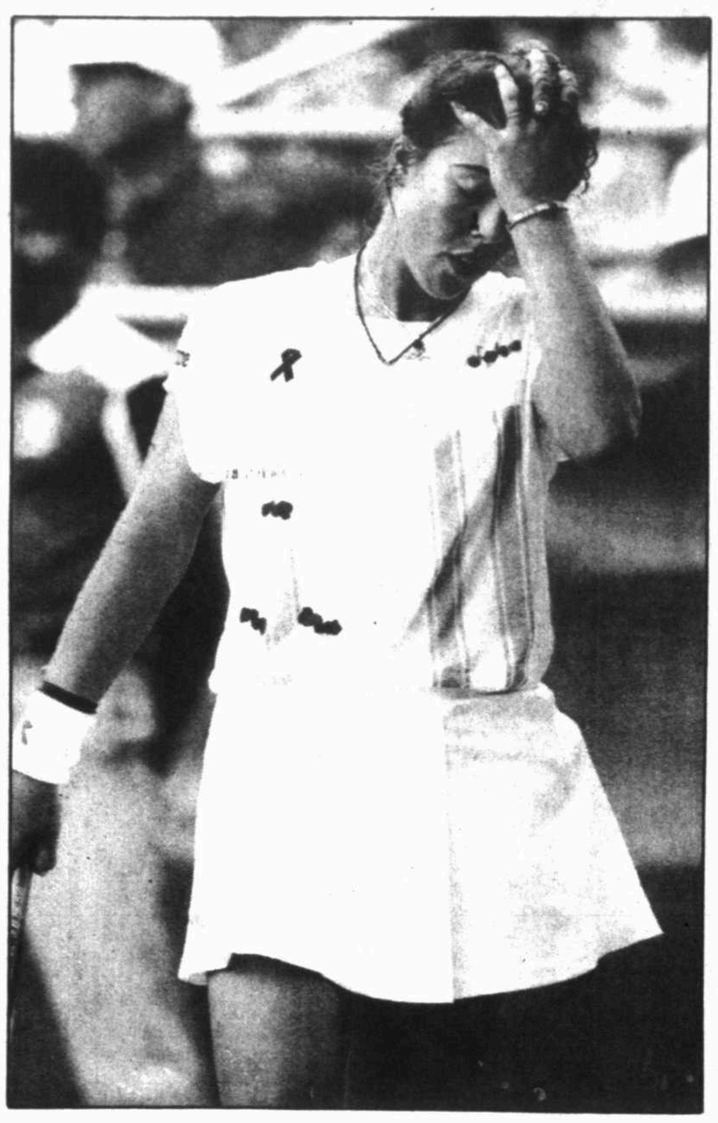

Capriati, ranked No. 6, had just come off a victory in a tournament in San Diego last week and had every expectation of reaching the finals again. But she seemed at times like a spectator on the court against Hy, No. 36, who pressed the action. Hy had more unforced errors, 40 to 30, but nearly twice as many winners, 21 to 11.

"It took awhile to sink in that I won the Olympics. It was so great," Capriati said. "It's taking a little while to sink in I lost. It's just a major disappointment to me."

Then she paused, smiled, and added, "I guess stuff happens."

Hy, pronounced "Hee," broke Capriati three times in the second set, the last time to make it 5-4 with a fine forehand drop volley that Capriati couldn't touch. She held to close out the match 40-15 with another unreachable backhand drop volley cross court.

Hy celebrated the moment leaping up with both arms raised. Capriati signed a few perfunctory autographs, then walked slowly off the court with her hand covering her eyes and embraced her father.

AP Laserphoto

"She seemed to have a little problem returning my serve," Hy said. "I'm not sure if it was she was not moving well. She usually pounds the return."

Hy had lost to Capriati in straight sets in each of three previous matches, including in the Open the previous two years. Hy, who turned 27 two weeks ago, said she's matured mentally, getting over her tendency "to be a perfectionist" and recognizing that tennis is only a game. That allowed Hy to develop as a player, concentrating on her strengths to force the action.

"I have been practicing that way, playing more aggressively," Hy said. "I was able to keep her on her toes in the match, not let her get into her rhythm. Because she loves rhythm, and she usually runs me around on the court.

"It was not a matter of strokes; it was mental."

An ace and a crisp volley, the hallmarks of Pete Sampras' style, closed out his first set Friday and began a rout that inched him closer to the U.S. Open title he so willingly gave up last year.

Sampras, the hottest player in tennis since Wimbledon, appears to be peaking at just the right time to reclaim the Open championship he won at 19 in 1990.

His 7-5, 6-1, 6-2 defeat of Martin Damm wasn't so much a demonstration of power — Sampras had only seven aces to Damm's 15 — as it was a show of smooth, efficient, smart play.

He anticipated shots as if he knew where they were going in advance, and sent them back across the net with a precision and confidence he lacked a year ago when he crumbled under the pressure of defending his title.

Now ranked No. 3, coming off three victories in his last four tournaments, Sampras is among the leaders of the changing guard that John McEnroe sees taking over tennis.

Wimbledon champion Andre Agassi is right up there, too, and he displayed all his awesome baseline power as he advanced to the third round, beating Francisco Roig 6-1, 6-3, 6-2.

Agassi and Sampras could meet in the semifinals next week, though both face dangerous foes along the way. No. 1 Jim Courier, runnerup last year to Stefan Edberg, is in Agassi's quarter of the draw, as is McEnroe. Sampras has Wimbledon runnerup Goran Ivanisevic in his quarter.

"I think it is fair to say that that looks like what is happening," Agassi said of McEnroe's perception of the power shift in tennis — Courier, Agassi, Sampras and Ivanisevic pushing past Edberg, Boris Becker, Ivan Lendl and McEnroe.

"But to say that is going to happen wouldn't be giving enough credit to guys like Edberg and Becker," Agassi said. "Lendl, being a few years older and having a family now, I think he is probably a little more distracted than he used to be. So I don't think he is much of a threat to stay up top. As far as Edberg and Becker go, I think any time they focus their minds they could play as good, if not better, than any of us. It is just a question of where their heads are at."

Agassi said that despite his own reliance on a power racket and power game, he thinks the ever-increasing pace of shots could be ruining interest in the sport.

"Unfortunately, it is coming down to people who can just serve," he said. "Courier and I probably are going to be the last of the players that can really hit from the ground and depend on their groundstrokes. I don't think we are going to see another (baseline) player who is going to come up through the ranks. It certainly surprises me the way I see tennis heading."

Still mystified, Canseco arrives

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The red, white and blue jersey of the Texas Rangers looked a little odd, Jose Canseco admitted, although it fit just fine. It's the spikes, he worries, that might be too big.

■ Baseball Roundups/8B

Not surprisingly, Jose Canseco strikes out in his first at bat as a Texas Ranger.

Still wondering why the Oakland Athletics traded him when they did, Canseco joined his new team Friday night. He met briefly with manager Toby Harrah, mingled with a few familiar teammates and then went to work, hitting a few balls into the Yankee Stadium seats in batting practice.

Canseco, who has not played since the stunning trade Monday night that sent him to Texas for Ruben Sierra, Jeff Russell, Bobby Witt and $500,000, was in the starting lineup against New York. Wearing his favorite No. 33, he was batting third as the designated hitter.

"It's strange, it's different," Canseco said. "I haven't looked at myself in the mirror yet."

"It's like the All-Star game, where you get to play with other players, and then you go back to your team," Canseco said. "Only I'm not going back."

Instead of preparing to possibly appear in the playoffs with the green-and-gold Athletics, Canseco will finish out the final month with the fourth-place Rangers. Instead of getting a chance to perhaps improve his .156 average in three World Series, he'll be at home.

"A lot of friends have said it would be nice to see the Athletics fail now," he said. "I don't feel that way. My feeling isn't one of anger. I wish them well. But it would be extremely difficult to watch them on TV or in person."

Even more difficult for Canseco is understanding the deal. His salary, bad back, celebrity status and the problems it caused are all possible reasons, but he's not sure.

"The timing was extremely poor. I mean, I was called back from the on-deck circle and told I'd been traded," he said. "These things don't just come up. They could have at least told me that week that they were trying to trade me."

"I'm going through a tough time understanding why the trade was made," he said. "Maybe I'll never know."

Canseco talked it over with Walt Weiss, his best friend on the A's, at his house this week. But, there have been other things to worry about, including his off-season home in Miami, which was damaged by Hurricane Andrew.

"It's been havoc lately," he said. "Selling my house in California, looking for a new house in Texas."

The one place he's always been comfortable is the batter's box.

Canseco, the only player to hit 40 home runs and steal 40 bases in the same season, has hit 226 homers since becoming a starter in 1986, the most in the majors. He's had 100 RBIs every year except 1989, in which he was injured.

Still, he said, it wasn't enough.

"Maybe the Athletics did me a favor trading me," he said. "I think I out-wore my welcome in Oakland."

"It seems the shoes to fill there were getting pretty big," he said. "How do you boo a guy who hits 40 home runs and drives in 123 runs? After awhile, I'm not sure I could fill them. I fell into a trap where the expectations were too high."

In Texas, he joins Nolan Ryan on a team that, along with Seattle and Cleveland, are the only major-league clubs never to reach the playoffs. He moves to Arlington Stadium, much more friendly to power hitters than the Oakland Coliseum.

The Rangers plan to move into a new ballpark in 1994. And with a lineup that includes major league home run leader Juan Gonzalez, Rafael Palmeiro and Julio Franco, Texas is building for the future.

Canseco, in the second year of a five-year, $23.5 million contract, can demand a trade at the end of the season. If the Rangers are unable to deal him, he becomes an automatic free agent; if Texas does trade him, however, he loses all rights to become a free agent for the next five years.

"Right now, I'm in on a trial-and-error basis," he said. "I'll see how I like it in Texas."

Rangers general manager Tom Grieve said he planned on Canseco being with Texas next year.

Irvin signs, says he's ready for 'Skins

Associated Press

IRVING — Who needs training camp? Not Michael Irvin.

Irvin, who missed summer workouts and all five exhibition games because of a contract dispute, said Friday that he's ready to play in Dallas Cowboys' opener against the Washington Redskins on Monday night.

The Pro Bowl receiver ended his holdout late Thursday night, signing a three-year contract that makes him the team's highest-paid player.

"All I need to do is see a few plays to see the speed of the game," Irvin said. "I should be OK."

Irvin, who led the league in receiving last season with 1,523 yards, said he has been running routes in full gear and quarterback Troy Aikman faxed him playbook pages throughout training camp. But he admits being ready for full-speed NFL contact is different.

"I never look forward to taking a hit," he said. "Not today, not Monday, not next Sunday or the next Sunday."

Friday's news conference, with Irving and Cowboys owner Jerry Jones back-slapping and smiling, was a stark contrast to contract negotiations.

Jones said he would pay no more than $1.25 million per year. Irvin would accept no less than $1.4 million. As late as Thursday evening, the two sides reported a stalemate.

The settlement they reached is believed to be worth between $3.75 million and $4.2 million, surpassing Aikman's $1.064 million annual salary. It was a $1 million raise for Irvin.

"My smiles say it all," he said. "I'm definitely happy to be out on the field."

Jones said although the holdout lasted throughout training camp, he was pleased with the outcome.

"Under the circumstances ... I give our negotiations an A-plus," Jones said. "When you get into something that complicated, it takes some time."

Irvin caught 93 passes for eight touchdowns last year in his first All-Pro season. He was a first-round draft choice out of Miami in 1988.

This week, the Cowboys gave Irvin the 1991 team offensive MVP award.

Dallas is still without starting center Mark Stepnoski, who wants $750,000 per season for two years. Dallas has offered $650,000 for three years.

Stepnoski's agent, Ralph Cindrich, has rejected the offer.

Jones said he doesn't expect Stepnoski to play against Washington.

Sherill doesn't relish trip to UT

Associated Press

Jackie Sherill wonders who made out the Mississippi State schedule that has his Bulldogs opening the season Saturday in Austin's Memorial Stadium. He'd rather be in Starkeville.

"I don't want to go to Texas," he said bluntly. "Texas is not an easy place to play. It's not easy to go there and win. You want to open with a game that's going to be more relaxing."

Sherrill should have some kind of comfort zone playing the Longhorns. He's got a six-game winning streak against the Longhorns, dating back to his seasons as head coach of the Texas Aggies.

The Longhorns and Bulldogs help initiate the first full weekend of Southwest Conference games Saturday amid a myriad of changes that include new coaches and new philosophies.

Texas Christian (Pat Sullivan) and Texas (John Mackovic) have new coaches, TCU has returned to real grass for Amon Carter Stadium and how often is SMU favored to win a game?

Sullivan will bring a new offense and new demeanor to the TCU coaching position.

Sherrill beat the Longhorns five-straight years when he was coach at Texas A&M and he resumed last year with a 13-6 victory in his first year with the SEC Bulldogs.

"I don't disregard there are feelings for the personalities in the game," Mackovic said. "But the game should never revolve around personalities as much as the players on the field."

In other games: No. 7 Texas A&M plays at Louisiana State; Texas Christian plays at New Mexico; Southern Methodist hosts Tulane; Rice is at Air Force and Houston plays at Tulsa.

The oddsmakers have made favorites of the Air Force by 6 points; Texas A&M by 8; Tulsa by 3; Texas by 2; Baylor by 11 and TCU by 15 and SMU by 3 1/2.

The Longhorns already have been involved in enough controversy without raising the Sherrill issue.

Running back Butch Hadnot was dismissed from the team and then declared scholastically ineligible. Prize quarterback prospect Shea Morenz toyed with signing a pro baseball contract before finally deciding to play football.

The Longhorns are trying to learn Mackovic's system and his philosophy, quite different from his predecessor, David McWilliams.

Sherrill, starting his second season at Mississippi State, defers credit to his teams.

"I don't beat Texas, players beat Texas," Sherrill said. "Coaches don't play. I think it's kind of a misnomer. But I wish I knew the answer, I'd probably be a little more comfortable.

"Of six (games), three I had the better team, but three of them, you didn't. So, it's 50-50. Coaches lose football games but they don't win football games."

The Aggies, who beat Stanford in the Kickoff Classic, will be trying to improve their national ranking and coach R.C. Slocum certainly won't be thinking of the SWC's honor.

"I don't have a lot of time to really worry about the league's image," he said. "In the summertime, when you're talking to coaches, those things are important.

"But I'm not going to LSU thinking we've got to beat these guys for the SWC. I'm thinking we have to beat them for Ol' R.C. and the Aggies."

Colorado Springs will be the launch site for Rice running back Trevor Cobb's senior season. Cobb rushed 1,692 yards last year and is the top returning runner in NCAA Division I-A.

They were beaten 56-17 in their last visit to the Air Force.

Quarterback Rob Perez has departed from the Air Force's wishbone offense, but key interior linemen return from the nation's No. 2 rushing offense in 1991.

Tulsa upset the Aggies last season en route to a 10-2 season and would like to continue the trend against the Cougars, who have beaten the Hurricane 100-6 and 88-26 during the lengthy series.

Grant Teaff is feeling better about opening his final season as head coach Baylor before taking over as athletic director.

"Two things have occurred that make me feel good," he said. "One is the progress of tight end Mike McKenzie, who I always thought to be a great tight end. If he plays the way he's practiced, he'll have a profound impact on the games and the season.

"Second, our offensive line personnel have developed more quickly than I thought they could."

Sullivan will be facing another first year coach against New Mexico's Dennis Franchione.

"Dennis has been successful and he's going to do thing he's done to get him where he is," Sullivan said.

Vincent unshaken by owners' vote

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Commissioner Fay Vincent, having rejected the notion of resigning, said Friday he saw no need to meet with owners who want him to quit.

Vincent, who left for a weekend trip to Cape Cod, remained committed to fulfilling his term, which runs through March 31, 1994. Owners voted 18-9 on Thursday on a resolution of no confidence that urged him to leave office. They will meet again Wednesday at St. Louis, when they may attempt to fire him.

Vincent maintains he can't be dismissed because the Major League Agreement says a commissioner's power can't be diminished and his term can't be shortened.

"I guess I can't say I was surprised," Vincent said of the vote. "I've known for awhile that they were inclined in that direction."

An attempted firing would provoke a court battle between owners and Vincent, who has vowed to fight an attempted removal all the way to "the highest court of this land."

Chicago White Sox owner Jerry Reinsdorf said Friday that he expected some owners would attempt to pursuade Vincent to resign.

"I have no interest in seeing a delegation," Vincent said.

It wasn't clear if all 18 owners favoring his resignation would vote to fire him.

Tornadoes blank Pecos Eagles, 12-0

By Tom Ruiz
MRT Correspondent

■ More Sports/8B

LAMESA — The year was 1973, on the national scene a thing called Watergate was on the verge of exploding into a U.S. President's nightmare, in the state, a team from Odessa would open its football season as defending Class 4A champ, and it would be the last time the Lamesa Tornadoes beat Pecos in what was then known as District 2-3A, that was until Friday when the Tors blanked the Eagles, 12-0, in the season opener for both teams.

Then last time these two teams met was in 1986 before the district was realigned and Lamesa was sent packing.

"When they moved out, we began scheduling schools from El Paso and we didn't get around to playing Lamesa again unitl this year now that they're in 4A again," said Pecos head coach David Whitehurst whose in his 13th year as head honcho at Pecos.

Back in 1973 Garland Fleming was nothing but a twinkle in his daddy's eye, last night the senior running back rushed for the game's only touchdowns of 80 and 86 yards respectively in the third quarter.

"I don't know what it was...we kept hearing all week that we couldn't beat Pecos. But we stopped them tonight didn't we?" said Fleming, who finished with 211 of his team's 301 total rushing yardage.

Indeed they did. The Tor defense held Pecos to a meager 103 yards of total offense. But a key injury to two-way starter Dominque Tellez to start the third quarter hurt Pecos even more.

With the game still scoreless, Tellez burst 25 yards from the Lamesa 32 to the seven-yard-line where he was dragged down from behind. On the play, however, Tellez sustained an injury to his knee.

The injury added insult to an already tragic day. Earlier Friday a five alarm fire destroyed his grandfather's long time grocery store in Pecos.

Tellez' future could be among ashed ruins also depending on what the team physician discovers today.

Taking full advantage of the situation, the Lamesa offense exploited the strongside linebacking position where Tellez was All-District last season.

"I am not going to say that was the difference in the game, we started blocking better in the second half," said Lamesa coach Gary Yoder.

From that point, the Lamesa defense became more aggressive to preserve the shutout.

The Tors next face San Angelo Lakeview, while Pecos travels to New Mexico to play Carlsbad.

BRAVES: Late rally sinks Rankin in opener

(From 1B)

get the winning TD, then turned back Rankin's final bid when Wade Hartman intercepted his second pass of the game, this one near the Braves' goal line with three seconds to play.

The Braves ended up with 293 yards rushing as tailback Kurt Hanna chipped in with 99 yards on 13 totes. And Elkins hit on 6-of-10 passes, including all four attempts in the first half, for 61 additional yards.

The offensive outburst made a winner out of Larry Hanna in his first game as head coach of the Braves.

But Rankin, down by a mere point at halftime, blasted out of the gates and took apparent control of the game in the second half when Roy Abalos picked up a Holifield fumble on the third play of the third quarter and raced 23-yards for a TD that gave the Red Devils their first lead, 12-7.

It was the second TD of the game for the Rankin speedster, but not his last big play.

Abalos also recovered a fumble on the kickoff that followed, and quarterback Jo Jo Guerra needed just one play — a 17-yard scoring toss to Joey Varela — to put the Red Devils up 18-7 just 1:10 into the second half.

But the game got somewhat sloppy after that outburst, and the teams traded turnovers and penalties — Iraan was flagged eight times for 90 yards — before the Braves mounted a five-play drive that brought them to within three points of the lead. Hanna got the points, breaking loose for a slashing 25-yard TD run that closed the gap to 18-15.

Guerra got the points right back, though, hitting senior receiver Jeff Jones with a 33-yard scoring strike over the middle out of punt formation. That surprise play put the 'Devils up 24-15 with 3:02 left in the third period.

Iraan just dug in, however, and the Braves now own a 7-6 lead in games played between the two teams since 1980.

Abalos finished the game with 71 yards on 15 carries, leading a Rankin ground attack that earned 118 yards rushing. Guerra completed 6-of-18 passes for 124 yards and the two TDs.

DISTRICT 4-5A REPORT

Bobcats lose 'Roo rematch

SAN ANGELO — The San Angelo Central Bobcats, 1991 state semifinalists, mounted a furious comeback effort in the second half Friday but fell just short, losing to Class 5A Big School state champion Killeen, 40-36.

Killeen quarterback Mark Humble threw for 327 total yards and five scoring passes in the high scoring games.

Humble's touchdown passes were from 16, 61, 14, 94 and 23 yards.

Humble completed 13-of-25 passes on the evening; San Angelo's Ben Montgomery was 10-of-28 for 253 yards.

Killeen's Gerald Patterson, the recipient of three of Humble's touchdown passes, caught five of Humble's passes for 222 yards. Ryan King led Bobcat receivers, snaring three for 138 yards.

The game's leading rusher was San Angelo's Bennie Jones, who carried 14 times for 70 yards.

San Angelo was eliminated from the 1991 state playoff race with a loss to the same Killeen team.

OHS falls to 1-1 with loss

AMARILLO — Todd Barnes ran for two of his three touchdowns in the fourth quarter to lead Amarillo Palo Duro to a 34-25 win over the Odessa High Bronchos in a Class 5A non-district football game Friday night.

Odessa fell to 1-1. Palo Duro is 1-0.

With Odessa High trailing 26-25 after quarterback Erik Hartman hit Bryan Jones on a 9-yard scoring strike with 6:40 remaining, Barnes answered with a 1-yard run with 2:26 left. With 22 seconds remaining, he scored from eight yards out to put the game away.

Barnes finished the night with 67 yards on 15 carries as four Dons rushed for better than 50 yards.

Hartman threw for 124 yards and two touchdowns for the Bronchos. He also ran for a score in the first quarter.

Odessa had taken a 19-14 lead in the third quarter on a pair of Tim Tolbert field goals, one from 25 yards and one from 28.

The Bronchos failure to get into the end zone on those drives, however, proved to be the difference as Amarillo scored 20 fourth-quarter points.

Arilee Marsh scored two touchdowns and quarterback Rusty Oglesby threw one TD pass and ran for another. Oglesby completed 11 of 15 passes for 209 yards.

LEE: Turner, Tucker duo works wonders for Rebels

were within striking distance. Marlon Henry carried for five yards to put the ball at Andress' 8-yard line, then fullback Scott McLeod, who led Lee rushers with 96 yards, got the ball from Turner on the option and dashed across the goal line with 4:58 remaining in the first quarter.

On the Eagles' next possession, quarterback Joe Hayward tossed the interception to Henderson, who returned it from the Andress 45 to the 11-yard line. But then a procedure penalty and Turner's only passing miscue, an interception by Eagle Mike Wright, cost the Rebs a chance at going up by two touchdowns in the first period.

Andress then began a drive from its own 2-yard line and made it to the Lee 25 in six plays. But the Rebel defense held, forcing a 42-yard field goal try by Steve Guardado. The snap from center Russell Branum was over holder Hayward's head though, and Lee recovered at its own 38.

That started a 12-play drive that began with 47 seconds left in the first quarter. Turner hit Tucker for 22 yards right off the bat, and the Rebs were off to the races. By the time Sherman Dedrick crossed the line with 8:12 left in the first half, the Rebels were ahead 14-0.

Andress gained its only score in the second quarter also, as the Eagles answered Lee's drive with an 80-yarder of their own, highlighted by a 45-yard run by Eddings and his 5-yard TD run.

"Overall we had a pretty good football game. We dropped a lot of passes (seven), but Eddings did a heck of a job," said Andress head coach Allan Sepkowitz.

Marlin takes fifth pole win of year

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Sterling Marlin came up with his series-leading fifth pole victory of the season Friday, taking the top qualifying spot for Sunday's Southern 500.

His lap of 162.249 mph, easily the quickest of the day, gave Marlin a sweep of the two poles at Darlington Speedway this year.

Marlin had to wait through a nearly two-hour rain delay before being assured of the seventh pole of his NASCAR Winston Cup career.

Rain began falling during Wally Dallenbach Jr.'s run around the 1.366-mile oval, but Dallenbach was able to get his Ford Thunderbird around the track at 160.748, which put him 12th among the 20 drivers who nailed down starting spots for the 500-mile race.

"It was raining pretty good in (turns) one and two, but I didn't slide any," Dallenbach said. "The water was hitting the windshield pretty hard and, when I got through one and two, it stopped by the time I got to three and four. I figured I'd just better stay with it."

Bobby Hillin Jr. went out next and wasn't as fortunate, turning a disappointing lap of 158.539 before NASCAR officials stopped the session with only Davey Allison, Harry Gant and Jimmy Means waiting to run.

By the time the track had dried and qualifying resumed, the sun was out. Hillin was allowed to requalify and jumped up to 160.449, putting him 16th, Allison came up sixth at 161.662, Gant 11th at 160.811 and Means failed to make the top 20.

"I really thought it was all over the for the day and we'd have to wait until morning," Marlin said. "That would have really been bad. Then, we didn't really know how much conditions had changed after the rain. But after Davey didn't beat us, I thought we might be OK, though I hadn't had a watch on Harry all day.

"We held 'em off, though, and it was a relief for us."

Ernie Irvan, who ran early in the session in cool, cloudy conditions, was second to Marlin at 161.992, followed by Ken Schrader at 161.923, Marlin teammate Bill Elliott at 161.705 and Darrell Waltrip at 161.602.

"We got a good lap in," Irvan said. "I had to get out of the gas in turn four because the car didn't turn just right. It surprised me we still ran that good despite me getting out of the throttle."

Marlin said the Ford Thunderbird he'll start Sunday is the same one he drove in the spring race at Darlington.

MHS: Bulldogs hold back Norris to 66 yards

(From 1B)

gin slipped to 19-16.

Irvin answered, however, with an 80-yard, back breaking drive, recovered the ensuing kickoff to produce three more points and then gave up a 33-yard TD run to David Wick with 20 seconds left in the game.

"We had two opportunities in the game, but we didn't take advantage of them," Reeger said. "That's something we're going to have to learn to do. We get something going, but any thing that causes adversity for our team seems to compound our problems. We made a run at them, but we can't do what we did two times in one night and let it get away.

"These kids want to do the right thing, but it's the small things that are killing us. We're not that far out of position, but we're not playing the ball on defense. We're not staying on our feet and we're not running our scheme.

"We're asking a lot of these kids, and we're tough on them, but we're going to get there if they hang with us. We may lose some along the way, but we will get it done."

Irvin blasted out 166 yards rushing, but MHS held 1,000-yard rusher Patrick Norris to only 66 yards rushing. It was the 204 yards of passing offense that hurt the 'Dogs. MHS had 93 yards rushing with Chambers leading the way with 65 yards. Heidelberg, making his debut as the starting quarterback, hit three of eight passes for 24 yards. However, Irvin's defensive blitz left Heidelberg with little time to throw.

Reeger often says that he wants Midland's "intensity" level to rise. He saw moments of it Friday.

"We need intensity for a full game," he said. "Some of our fans mentioned that they hadn't seen that last year, but we can't see it just part of the game."

The Bulldogs will host Lubbock Monterey in an 8 p.m. Saturday game next week.

MUSTANGS: Game stopped early

(From 1B)

Midland Christian needed to drive only 21 total yards for its next two touchdowns and led 41-0 with eight minutes, 36 seconds left in the third quarter.

"That ball is free territory as far as we're concerned," Blake said. "We get the tackle first, then we go for the fumble."

Needing one more score to invoke the 45-point rule, a six-man rule which stops a game if one team has a 45-point led in the second half, Blake backed off a little.

It wasn't out of pity for Abilene, though.

"I felt like we could have ended the game early, but we had some kids who needed the playing time," Blake said of his team, referring to only having three seniors on the roster.

Abilene took advantage of the situation by scoring on its next two drives, closing the gap to 41-16.

Midland rebounded on a 31-yard touchdown pass from reserve quarterback Neil Truex to Andy Awtry. Awtry, the starting quarterback, had moved to a slot position for most of the final quarter.

Following Jackson's second TD, Awtry invoked the 45-point rule by running 37 yards for a touchdown with just over a minute remaining in the final period.

Olajuwon, agent say they'll sue

HOUSTON (AP) — Hakeem Olajuwon's agent has threatened legal action against the Houston Rockets unless his client is traded and the team retracts statements it made about him during an injury controversy, according to a published report.

Rockets general manager Steve Patterson confirmed Thursday he received the letter from agent Leonard Armato a couple of months ago, The Houston Post reported Friday in a copyright story.

Olajuwon was out for five games this spring after the center said he could not play because of a left hamstring injury.

After club medical officials evaluated Olajuwon, Rockets management concluded Olajuwon was physically able to play and suspended him for failing to render services under his contract. Speculation surfaced that Olajuwon was faking the hamstring injury to gain leverage for a contract extension.

Sources told The Post that Olajuwon wants two things: A trade and the clearing of his name.

But Patterson said he would not retract any statement made about Olajuwon during the controversy even if Olajuwon sues.

"We're very comfortable with our position," Patterson said. "I was very careful with my quotes. We've fulfilled our obligation to be truthful to the media and the fans."

Rockets' management has not spoken with Armato or Olajuwon since the end of the season.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Houston second baseman Andujar Cedeno, left, awaits a throw as Montreal's Delino DeShields slides in safely.

Expos win 6th straight

Associated Press

MONTREAL — Ken Hill allowed seven hits over six innings as the Montreal Expos won their sixth straight by beating the Houston Astros 5-2 Friday night.

The Expos started the night three games behind front-running Pittsburgh in the NL East.

Hill (15-7) struck out three and walked one. John Wetteland recorded the last four outs for his 32nd save, as the Astros lost for only the second time in nine games.

Jimmy Jones (8-6) took the loss after four-consecutive wins. He allowed six hits, struck out two and walked two.

The Expos took a 1-0 lead in the first when Delino DeShields singled, stole second, was sacrificed to third by Marquis Grissom and scored on a groundout by Moises Alou.

The Expos made it 3-0 in the third after Tim Wallach led off with a walk. Darrin Fletcher doubled to score Wallach, took third on Spike Owen's single and scored on a wild pitch by Jones.

The Astros came back with two runs in the fifth with the help of Jones' double with one out. Craig Biggio singled to move Jones to third and Steve Finley hit an RBI single. Luis Gonzalez reached on an error by third baseman Sean Berry to load the bases and Biggio scored on a groundout by Jeff Bagwell.

The Expos padded their lead in the sixth when Larry Walker hit a one-out triple and scored on Wallach's sacrifice fly. Walker added an RBI double in the eighth.

Phillies 2, Braves 1

ATLANTA — Tom Glavine failed for the third consecutive time to gain his 20th victory as Curt Schilling outpitched the Atlanta left-hander to give the Philadelphia Phillies a victory over the Braves.

Glavine (19-6) gave up five hits, two runs, one earned, walked three and struck out five in seven innings before leaving for a pinch hitter as the Braves lost their third in a row and 10th in 15 games.

Glavine, who set a franchise record by winning 13 straight games with a 4-2 win over Montreal on Aug. 19, hasn't won since in three starts.

The Phillies, who snapped a three-game losing streak, scored in the second on an RBI groundout by Tom Marsh.

NL Roundup

Mets 5, Reds 2

CINCINNATI — Eddie Murray hit his 17th career grand slam and Sid Fernandez pitched seven strong innings to lead the New York Mets over the slumping Cincinnati Reds.

Murray's grand slam off Tim Belcher (11-13) highlighted a five-run sixth inning and sent the Reds to their eighth loss in nine games.

Fernandez (12-9) improved to 5-1 in his last six decisions by allowing three singles by Bip Roberts and Glenn Braggs' triple in 7 1-3 innings. Jeff Innis gave up a solo homer to Chris Sabo in the ninth.

Padres 7, Cubs 5

CHICAGO — Darrin Jackson led off the 14th inning with his 16th home run of the season and Tim Teufel homered one out later, lifting the San Diego Padres over the Chicago Cubs.

It was Jackson's third game-winning home run this season.

Jeremy Hernandez (1-1), the fifth Padres' pitcher, worked two innings for the victory. Hernandez, recalled from Triple-A Las Vegas last Saturday, has pitched five shutout innings in three appearances since joining the Padres.

Pirates 6, Dodgers 5

PITTSBURGH — Don Slaught's pinch single with two outs in the ninth capped a three-run rally that allowed the Pittsburgh Pirates to overcome a pinch grand slam in the top of the inning by Todd Benzinger and beat the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Pirates extended their winning streak to six games and maintained their three-game lead over Montreal in the NL East.

Giants 4, Cardinals 3

ST. LOUIS — The San Francisco Giants broke a nine-game losing streak Friday night — their longest in seven years — as Mark Leonard doubled home the tie-breaking run with two outs in the 10th for a win over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Leonard's hit, his third of the game, drove in Robby Thompson.

Canseco 0-for-4 in debut

Bosio still hot as Tigers stumble again

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Jose Canseco got all of the attention, but everyone else got all the hits.

Canseco went 0 for 4 in his debut for the Texas Rangers and didn't hit the ball out of the infield in a 6-3 loss to the New York Yankees on Friday night.

He played for the first time since Oakland traded him Monday for Ruben Sierra, Jeff Russell and Bobby Witt, and was called out on strikes twice, popped out weakly and managed an RBI groundout with the bases loaded.

The crowd booed loudly each time Canseco came to the plate, as it always did when he played for the Athletics. The fans did not get to razz Canseco in right field, however, because a late lineup switch left him as the designated hitter.

Canseco had not batted since last Sunday. He is in a 1-for-15 slump.

Don Mattingly homered, singled twice and drove in three runs for the Yankees. Danny Tartabull and Andy Stankiewicz each doubled, singled twice and drove in a run for New York, which had a hit in every inning and finished with 15.

Rafael Palmeiro, who homered, and Dean Palmer each had three hits for Texas, which had nine hits in all.

Rookie Bob Wickman (2-0) gave up three runs on seven hits in five innings, and won in his third major league start. Steve Farr pitched the ninth for his 23rd save.

Jose Guzman (12-11) lasted only 3 2-3 innings and allowed five runs on nine hits. He had pitched at least seven innings in his last seven starts.

AL Roundup

Mattingly hit his 12th homer in the third inning and hit a two-out, two-run single in the fourth. Tartabull followed with an RBI single that made it 5-2, and Stankiewicz singled home a run in the fifth.

Brewers 6, Tigers 3

DETROIT — Chris Bosio won his seventh straight decision as the Milwaukee Brewers beat Detroit, sending the Tigers to their fifth consecutive loss.

Bosio (13-5) allowed three runs and eight hits in eight innings, striking out five and walking two. He is unbeaten in 10 starts since July 9. Dan Plesac got two outs for his first save since July 1991.

Robin Yount went 1 for 4, singling in the first inning for his 2,993rd career hit. Darryl Hamilton drove in three runs for the Brewers.

Detroit manager Sparky Anderson was ejected in the fifth inning by third base umpire Larry McCoy for arguing a checked swing by Hamilton. Tigers starter Bill Gullickson (14-9) gave up five runs and 10 hits in 5 2-3 innings. He is 6-7 at home, but 8-2 on the road.

Yount singled in a run in the first and Scott Fletcher singled in a another in the second. Hamilton his his fourth homer of the season in the fourth for a 3-0 lead and added an RBI single in the fifth.

Detroit scored in the of the fifth on singles by Rob Deer and Scott Livingstone and Tony Phillips' foul sacrifice fly.

Kevin Seitzer singled in a run in the sixth, but Mickey Tettleton hit his 27th homer in the bottom of the inning as Detroit closed to 5-2. Lou Whitaker singled in a run in the seventh, and Hamilton hit a run-scoring single in the ninth.

Indians 7, Mariners 0

CLEVELAND — Jose Mesa pitched his second career shutout and Carlos Martinez doubled, tripled and homered as the Cleveland Indians beat the Seattle Mariners.

Mesa (6-10) gave up eight hits, struck out five and walked two in his first shutout since May 6, 1991, when he was with Baltimore. He's 3-2 with a 2.97 ERA in 10 starts since Cleveland acquired him in a July 14 trade.

The Indians, coming off a 2-7 road trip, tagged rookie Dave Fleming for five runs in the first three innings. Martinez doubled and scored on Paul Sorrento's double in the second and hit a bases-loaded triple to cap a four-run third. He hit his fourth home run in the eighth off Jeff Nelson.

Red Sox 8, Athletics 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Wade Boggs hit a two-run single and Scott Cooper hit his first big league home run Friday night as the Boston Red Sox beat the Oakland Athletics 8-3, sending the AL West leaders to their fourth straight loss.

Oakland's lead remained at 4½ games over the Minnesota Twins, who lost to Toronto 16-5. The A's are winless and have scored only five runs in the four losses.

Danny Darwin (8-6) allowed nine hits, struck out two and walked two in 7 2-3 innings.

Blancas leads Senior Classic event

Associated Press

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — Homero Blancas shot a 6-under-par 65 to take the lead after Friday's first round of the Senior PGA Tour's $400,000 First of America Classic at the Elks Country Club's Highlands course.

Blancas' round, two strokes off the course record held by Miller Barber, held a one-stroke lead over Barber, Lee Trevino, Tommy Aaron and Isao Aoki. The 54-hole, no-cut tournament runs through Sunday.

PGA Seniors

Blancas, whose lone win on the senior tour came in the 1989 Doug Sanders Kingwood Celebrity Classic, split his six birdies between the front and back nines. He finished Friday's round by sinking an 18-foot uphill putt on the 398-yard, par-4 18th hole.

"This was probably the best putting round I've had this year," Blancas said. "I hit the irons close and made the putts.

"I hit the ball pretty close," the Tucson, Ariz., resident said. "It is where you put the ball and you want to put it below the hole. From below the hole you can give it a good rap."

Barber's 66 featured an eagle on the 522-yard, par-5 10th hole.

Former Hogan pro leads Milwaukee Open

Associated Press

FRANKLIN, Wis. — Tom Lehman traveled a long road to regain his tour card, but the distance he may remember most is 80 feet.

That's the length of the birdie putt he made Friday to take the second-round lead in the Greater Milwaukee Open.

"You make one of those a year. It goes over the hump and breaks in — it was ridiculous," Lehman said. "In this game you take it when you can get one like that."

Lehman had a 4-under-par 68 on Friday and completed two rounds at 135 for a one-stroke advantage over first round co-leader David Frost, Tom Sieckmann, Dudley Hart, Dick Mast and defending champion Mark Brooks. Brooks shot a 66, Sieckmann and Hart had 67s, Mast a 69 and Frost a 70.

Four other golfers were two shots back, including Mike Springer, whose 65 was the low round of the day at Tuckaway Country Club.

Lehman lost his PGA Tour card in 1985 and moved to the Ben Hogan Tour, winning once in 1990 and three times last year. His four Hogan victories are a record for that tour and he's among three players to win $100,000.

"The Hogan Tour is a good place to test things you're working on," Lehman said. "I've played in a lot of out-of-the-way places."

Last year he missed by a stroke of regaining his PGA Tour card in the qualifying tournament, then earned it by being named Hogan Tour player of the year.

"Sometimes my wife and I would say, 'Should we quit?' We'd feel like it was the end of the road," Lehman said. "I'd go to tournament school in the fall and miss, but at that time I wasn't really ready to get back out here."

"I didn't really have the belief in my game," Lehman said. "It took years for those beliefs to develop. This is the right time. Any sooner I would not have been ready."

PGA

Lehman is 32nd on the money list with seven top-10 finishes this year. He was fourth in the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am in February and was fifth in the Hawaiian Open and Anheuser-Busch Classic.

After sinking the 80-footer on the par-5 second hole for a birdie, Lehman double bogeyed No. 3. But he came back with three more birdies on the front nine and then added three against a lone boegy on the back.

"I hit a lot of bad shots but I made up for it by hitting some great ones," Lehman said. "I had a couple of really bad 7-irons and tee shots, but I made up for that with good putting."

Frost lost a chance to share the lead when he bogeyed the par-4 13th.

"I kind of came back to earth," Frost said. "I started out very shaky today. I wasn't very settled all day long. I ended up hitting a lot of good shots but some mediocre shots too and it cost me out there."

Political chaos raises concerns that violence could spread

■ Fighting between supporters and opponents of President Nabiyev continues.

Associated Press

DUSHANBE, Tajikistan — Four former Soviet republics said Friday they would send troops to police Tajikistan's border with Afghanistan to prevent the smuggling of arms and drugs into the politically troubled country.

Opposition lawmakers in Tajikistan failed in an effort to oust President Rakhmon Nabiyev, a Communist hard-liner opposed to reform. Only 80 lawmakers showed up for an emergency session, far short of the 154 needed for a quorum.

Nabiyev was elected president in November 1991 with 60 percent of the popular vote. He agreed to a power-sharing agreement with the opposition in July and promised free elections would be held.

But opposition groups say he has not introduced political and religious freedoms quickly enough and has failed to curb tribal violence.

Fighting between supporters and opponents of Nabiyev reportedly eased Friday in the southern city of Kurgan-Tyube. More than 100 people reportedly have been killed there in violence, which broke out after the Cabinet and senior lawmakers demanded Nabiyev's resignation on Wednesday.

Nabiyev's whereabouts remained unknown Friday. Rumors persisted that he fled to a government retreat or the commonwealth's army garrison in Dushanbe.

The growing political chaos in Tajikistan has raised concern that the violence could spread to other Central Asian republics of the former Soviet Union.

Russia, Kazakhstan, Uzbekistan and Kyrgyzstan announced Friday they were sending troops to the Tajikistan-Afghanistan border to prevent smuggling of arms and drugs.

"We know many weapons are being brought from there so brother can kill brother," said Akbar Shah Iskanderov, speaker of the Tajikistan parliament. "We need to find someway to strengthen the border."

Iskanderov said no member of the Commonwealth of Independent States could send troops to Tajikistan without its agreement, but he added that Tajikistan might ask the commonwealth to help guard the border.

In a strongly worded statement, the four nations warned that political instability in Tajikistan was threatening security throughout Central Asia.

"Southern borders of the commonwealth must not be violated," said the statement, issued by the Kazakh foreign minister.

"The escalation of the civil war in the republic, which is threatening the security of our nations and upsetting the political stability in the region, must not be permitted," it said.

In an interview published Friday in the Russian newspaper Izvestia, Nabiyev said he went into hiding because his residence had been seized by armed oppositionists, but he did not say where he was or when he would come appear again in public.

Nabiyev complained the opposition was not allowing him to appear on television or on the radio and insisted he would remain on the job.

"I remain president of the republic," he told Izvestia.

The republic's foreign minister, Khudoberdi Kholiknazaroda, said if Nabiyev does not resign and the legislature is unable to force him out, senior government leaders might form a collective presidency.

Somalia's elite flee war, famine

By Greg Myre
Associated Press Writer

MOGADISHU, Somalia — As Dr. Aweys Omar entered the emergency room, filled with bloodied victims of the latest fighting, he bemoaned the hospital's lack of staff.

"There is a terrible brain drain in Somalia," said Dr. Aweys, the chief surgeon at Digfer Hospital. "We had 20 doctors here last year, now we have only eight. All our best people are leaving."

That was last month. Dr. Aweys has since gone to Saudi Arabia. Now the hospital has only seven doctors.

Somalia's small professional class has used its wealth and resources to escape devastating war and famine, an exodus that has robbed the country of those whose skills it desperately needs.

In the country's chaotic state, it is impossible to determine what percentage of skilled, educated Somalis have fled, but some experts believe it could be close to half.

"Many have left. Those who have remained don't have much to do. All the institutions they need to function are gone," said Seifulaziz Milas, a Mozambican consultant to the U.N. Children's Fund, UNICEF.

Doctors don't have enough medicine, and they aren't being paid. There are no schools for the teachers. Businessmen had their stores looted, and the fighting obliterated the commercial heart of Mogadishu, the capital.

Annalena Tonelli, an Italian charity worker who has spent 23 years caring for Somalis, is desperate for trained staff at the hospital, clinic, school and feeding center she runs at Merca, a seaside town south of Mogadishu.

"I would pay anybody to work here, but there are no qualified people," she said.

Rich or poor, Somalis want out of the nightmare that has engulfed their country, leaving 2 million of its 6.5 million people in danger of starvation.

About 1 million Somalis already have fled, mostly to neighboring Ethiopia and Kenya, where they are tolerated but hardly welcome. Most live in squalid refugee camps.

'There is a terrible brain drain in Somalia. We had 20 doctors here last year, now we have only eight. All our best people are leaving.'

—Dr. Aweys

Those with a little money have paid for a boat voyage to Yemen, across the Gulf of Aden. Yemen has barred some boats from docking and some fragile sailing ships have sunk with loss of life.

Those with more money manage to find their way to comfortable refuge in Kenya, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, Europe and elsewhere.

For those with skills and connections, one of the most popular destinations is Canada, which has absorbed some 40,000 Somali refugees over the past three years.

The professionals who have stayed behind have had to scramble to make a living. Some have set up small stalls in the informal markets, the only part of the economy still functioning. Others work as drivers, interpreters or security guards for international aid groups, virtually the only way one can draw a regular salary.

During the Cold War, Somalia received large amounts of aid from the Soviet Union and later from the United States. But with that rivalry over, the Horn of Africa nation has virtually no prospect of finding a patron to provide the massive assistance that will be needed for reconstruction.

Abdi Hassan, 36, is an aid agency employee who has permanent resident status in the United States, as well as the money to leave Somalia any time he wants.

He decided to stay after dictator Mohammed Siad Barre was overthrown in January 1991 because "I thought I would have the chance to help build a better country.

Now, though, he may leave at the end of the year.

Harlem troupe introduces dance to South Africans

By Tina Susman
Associated Press Writer

ALEXANDRA, South Africa — In a dusty warehouse far from the glitter of New York, Cassandra Phifer of the Dance Theater of Harlem urged a horde of children to scatter across the floor.

"Why are you all bunched together? Give yourselves some room," she said repeatedly Friday as the world-renowned dance group held a class aimed at boosting confidence and cultural aspirations among young South African blacks.

The cajoling needed to loosen up the huddle was an indication of the life most children lead in the country's impoverished black townships. Most live in cramped houses or shacks with little room to move, much less wave their arms and spin across the floor.

The predominantly black Harlem dance group hopes its visit will give the youngsters — many of whom have never been in a theater — self-confidence and hope for their future.

"Dance is the universal language," said Phifer, who led about 90 children through a series of simple steps.

The ballet company also has come to Johannesburg to perform for two weeks, starting on Sept. 17. In an effort to give township children a look at dancers on stage as well as in class, some tickets to performances have been subsidized, and bus transportation has been arranged for people in outlying regions.

Unlike the January visit of American singer Paul Simon, which drew opposition from militant black groups demanding the continuation of an international cultural boycott, the troupe's trip has been free of controversy.

That is due largely to the classes it has been giving in black townships around Johannesburg, said its founder and creative director, Arthur Mitchell.

Mitchell obtained a written endorsement for the tour from South Africa's black political leadership before agreeing to the visit. "It was not the performances that swayed it, it is the community outreach and education program," he said.

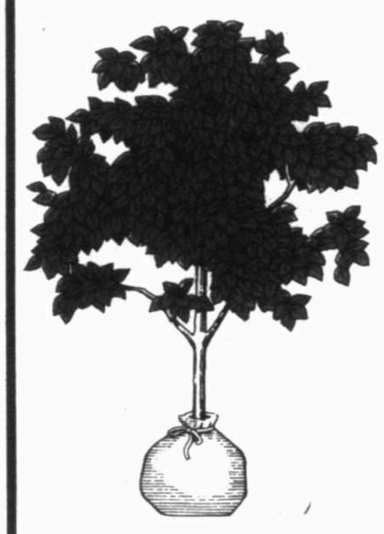

Mitchell said he would not have made the visit before President F.W. de Klerk began dismantling apartheid in February 1990.

Still, Patrick Johnson, a black dancer originally from the Bahamas, said that despite de Klerk's reforms he had some initial reservations about the tour.

"I knew the laws of apartheid, and I wondered if it was the right thing for us to be here," he said. "But I realized the good it could do. I'm the same color as those kids, and it's got to mean something to them to see me up there."

A 12-year-old girl who gave her name as Michelle said between shuffles across the floor that most of her knowledge of dance had come from watching music videos on television.

The World

■ Three people hijack airliner, then surrender

DJIBOUTI — Three people armed with grenades hijacked an Ethiopian jetliner to Djibouti, released the 46 passengers and surrendered after holding the four-member crew for several hours, officials and witnesses said.

The two men and a woman gave up after receiving assurances that they would be allowed to seek exile, officials said. It was not clear where they sought asylum.

No injuries were reported.

The Ethiopian Airlines Boeing 727 was on a domestic flight from Diredawa to Addis Ababa when it was commandeered by the trio armed with two grenades. Earlier reports said there were five hijackers.

Flight 551 landed Friday evening in Djibouti, capital of the East African country by the same name, at the mouth of the Red Sea.

The hijackers' nationalities were not immediately known. But the incident comes one week after five Ethiopians commandeered an Ethiopean Airlines Boeing 737 on a flight from Diredawa to Rome via Aden and Cairo, claiming to be victims of political persecution.

■ Passenger train disaster kills 41, injures 100

NEW DELHI, India — A passenger train rammed into a stationary freight train in central India Friday, killing 41 people and injuring 100 others, officials said.

Mohammad Siddiqui, a spokesman for the national railroads, said most of the victims were in two passenger cars that overturned after the impact.

The accident occurred at Kirorimal station, 560 miles southeast of New Delhi.

The passenger train, which had slowed down to stop at Kirorimal, hit the freight train from behind and knocked the last wagon off the rails, Siddiqui said.

He said incorrect signaling may have caused the accident.

■ Right-wing extremists attack shelters in 3 towns

BERLIN — Right-wing extremists attacked shelters for foreigners in three towns before dawn Friday, and in one confrontation more than 100 police clashed with rock-throwing radicals.

Police said radicals also threw two firebombs at homes for ethnic Germans who recently immigrated from eastern Europe.

The attacks marked two full weeks of violence aimed at refugees who are flooding into Germany.

Public criticism has been growing over the cost of caring for refugees, particularly in eastern Germany, where unemployment is running about 15 percent. Rightists say the money should be used to help bolster the eastern economy.

State refugee officials urged the federal government on Friday to help relieve the huge financial burden on communities swamped by asylum-seekers. More than 274,000 refugees have poured in already this year, surpassing last year's record of 256,000.

The latest wave of attacks on shelters started on Aug. 22 in the Baltic port of Rostock.

Officials believe relief plane was shot down

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Evidence in the crash of an Italian relief plane indicates the aircraft was shot down by a missile, Italian officials said Friday. They called for warplanes to escort future mercy flights.

Meanwhile in Belgrade, Yugoslav Premier Milan Panic survived a no-confidence vote in the federal parliament late Friday. The Serb-born former California businessman has sought to end the Bosnian conflict by pressing for Serb territorial concessions.

Outrage over the loss of the plane and its four crewmen was widespread. But it was unclear if the anger would scuttle the international airlift to besieged Sarajevo or widen Western involvement in the Bosnian war, raising the chances for foreigners to come under fire.

Troops of Bosnia's Muslim, Croat and Serb factions all operate in the area where the plane went down Thursday, and there was no evidence to link any to the incident, U.N. officials said. Serb fighters and Muslim government forces blamed each other.

U.N. officials have suspended the international airlift while they investigate the crash.

In Geneva, a U.N. conference appealed for $434 million in international donations to help feed and house refugees in former Yugoslavia. But U.N. officials warned that the $194 million earmarked for Bosnia was far short of what would needed this winter.

More than 8,000 people have died — some estimates say up to 35,000 — and tens of thousands are missing in Bosnia's civil war that began after Muslims and Croats voted for independence from Serbian-dominated Yugoslavia. An estimated 2 million people are refugees.

U.N. soldiers found the bodies of the Italian airplane's crew Friday after searching through wreckage strewn across a mile-wide area of a mountain 36 miles west of Sarajevo. Blankets scattered from the plane's 9-ton cargo hung from trees.

The Pentagon said two Marine helicopters may have been shot at Thursday while searching for the downed airplane, in the first use of U.S. aircraft over war-torn Bosnia. Officials said Friday that the pilots saw muzzle flashes from small arms but were not certain the shots were aimed at the helicopters.

Italy's defense minister, Salvo Ando, said in Rome that he had no formal confirmation that the plane was shot down but that that was the most likely explanation. He called it a "criminal action."

Ando said fighter planes should escort transport planes when the airlift resumes. But when asked when the flights would start again, Mike Aitchinson, a U.N. official in Zagreb, Croatia, said: "Maybe never."

Capt. Pascal Szyhczxszyn, a French doctor, checks the wreckage of an Italian G-222 cargo plane which crashed on Mount Zec Thursday near Sarajevo as it was carrying relief supplies from Split to the besieged Bosnian capital. U.N. troops removed the bodies of four Italian airmen Friday.

In New York, Jan Eliasson, head of U.N. humanitarian programs, said the incident was an example of the "law of the jungle."

"The sad state of affairs is that the people in need are the ones paying the price," Eliasson told reporters. "We have to do something about this."

Izumi Nakamitsu, director of U.N. refugee operations in Sarajevo, said the plane was flying at 7,000 feet, and there was evidence that indicated it exploded in the air.

The search team found a hole in the plane's fuselage and pieces of what could be an anti-aircraft missile, Nakamitsu said.

Loggers Mato Javran and Anto Behrcic told The Associated Press they were chopping wood in a forest when they saw what looked like a rocket hit the plane.

U.S. Navy pilots take break from Iraqi patrols

ABOARD USS INDEPENDENCE, in the Persian Gulf (NYT) — After patrolling the skies over southern Iraq for what seemed like eight days a week, the pilots of this aircraft carrier did not fly Friday, giving themselves, their planes and the ship's crew a brief respite from the operation to exclude Iraqi warplanes from the area south of the 32nd parallel.

Instead, the whole burden of monitoring Iraqi activities in the Shiite marshlands of Iraq was carried for a day by United States and allied warplanes based in Saudi Arabia, a favor the Navy will return later so the Air Force can take a full day off.

A military official in the region said that between 3 a.m. local time Friday and 3 a.m. today, 56 American warplanes would fly over southern Iraq, joined by a few British Tornado reconnaissance planes and for the first time by French Mirages, which recently joined the coalition.

That is a lower rate of sorties than in the early days of the operation. In the first week of the operation, the Americans flew 566 times over Iraq, evenly dividing the task between the Navy and the Air Force. Counting planes like Awacs surveillance radar aircraft and fighters on defensive missions outside Iraq, there were about 900 flights in the first week.

The change in the operating tempo, Navy officials said, indicates two things: that the air exclusion zone is firmly established, but also that accomplishing that job has taken a definite toll on people and equipment alike.

It is important not to overextend themselves, they said, because even in the face of no Iraqi opposition they are here to stay indefinitely under the plan, which was announced with the stated goal of protecting Shiite Muslims in the south of Iraq from attacks by the Baghdad government of President Saddam Hussein. The United States has charged Iraq with carrying out a campaign of repression over mainly Shiite inhabitants of the marsh areas near the Iranian border.

"From our point of view, we see this as a long-term commitment," Rear Adm. Brent M. Bennitt, the commander of the fleet of warships in the gulf, said in an interview Friday.

But Navy officials on the ship also said they were watching carefully for dangerous signs of fatigue setting in.

On Thursday evening, as the steady roar and thud of planes taking off and landing shook his stateroom on the Independence, the commander of the ship's air wing, Capt. Arthur N. Langston, spent a half hour with his flight surgeon analyzing the performance of the pilots and the flight deck crew, just as the two men do every night.

Court finds former Soviet leader guilty of corruption

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — The first post-Communist court to judge a former Soviet bloc leader found Todor Zhivkov guilty on Friday of corruption during his 35-year rule and sentenced him to seven years in prison.

The 81-year-old Zhivkov was convicted of embezzling nearly $1 million and letting Communist cronies buy cars, apartments or villas at near-giveaway prices.

Lawyers for Zhivkov, who maintained he was being railroaded in a political trial, said they would appeal the conviction. The prosecution, which had sought a 10-year punishment, planned to appeal the sentence.

Zhivkov had said he expected to end his days behind bars and was defiant during the 18-month-long trial. He gazed vacantly while the verdict and sentence were pronounced, clasping his hands first across his belly then behind his back.

Zhivkov's critics charge that under his leadership Bulgaria plunged into an economic crisis that left it one of Europe's poorest countries. Nearly three years after the end of dictatorial Communist rule, Bulgaria remains crippled in its attempts to build a market economy from the ruins of central planning.

His defense argued that all decisions during Zhivkov's rule were made collectively so he should not be held solely responsible.

He still faces charges of inciting ethnic hatred through the forced assimilation of Bulgaria's ethnic Turk minority; creating several harshly run concentration camps; and embezzling and misappropriating state property. No trial dates have been set.

The misappropriation charge he was convicted on alleged he permitted 72 Communist officials to buy cars and homes at low prices. He also was convicted of embezzling nearly $1 million and ordered to pay it back.

A former aide, Milko Balev, was found guilty of illegal hard-currency transactions and sentenced to a two-year prison term.

The two were acquitted of falsifying documents.

The verdict was read by Chief Judge Stefanka Stoyanova as Zhivkov and Balev stood facing the panel of three professional and four lay judges in a courtroom decorated with mosaics and marble. The 72-year-old Balev, bent nearly double, clutched a dais for support.

Three of the judges had dissenting opinions, but it was not known if they disagreed with the verdicts or sentences. The dissents are to be published within a month.

Zhivkov was the first former Communist leader to be tried in a regular court since the Communists were swept from power in eastern Europe.

Erich Honecker, the longtime Communist boss of East Germany, could go on trial next month on manslaughter charges for ordering border guards to shoot to kill East Germans trying to escape to the West.

Romania's Nicolae Ceausescu was summarily tried by military officers and executed during that country's December 1989 revolution.

Zhivkov's defense complained about procedural irregularities, such as questioning people without defense attorneys present during his trial, which began Feb. 25, 1991. Zhivkov scorned what he called the court's "lawlessness."

Child sex-abuse cases erode trust in ministry

NEW YORK (AP) — New research finds that the reputation of churches and their ministers has been seriously damaged by the numerous, recently disclosed cases of clergy sexual abuse of youngsters.

It was termed the first study of its kind. The findings "should sound an alarm bell throughout the church," the report says.

While such sexual abuse cases have turned up in various denominations, the research focused on Roman Catholics. Questionnaires were completed by 1,810 of them across the country, mostly active lay people.

"They are very angry, very sad, and very disappointed," the report said.

It said there has been extensive "erosion in confidence, trust, support and satisfaction with the priesthood," and also that "Catholics have lost confidence in the church" to deal with such misconduct.

While some "saw signs the church is beginning to act," the report concluded: "The phenomenon of clergy-child sexual abuse appears to be damaging seriously the credibility of the Catholic Church to police its own ranks."

The study was sponsored by Twenty-Third Publications of Mystic, Conn., a publisher of Catholic books and other materials, with results reported in the September and October issues of its national monthly, Today's Parish.

The Rev. Stephen J. Rossetti, a Chestnut Hill, Mass. priest-psychologist who directed the study, says there has been no previous scientific research on effects on church life of child sexual abuse by clergy.

"The surprising thing is that the effect has been so strong and consistent," he said in a telephone interview. He said the reaction prevails "among the active lay people, those who are leading the parishes.

"If the cream-of-crop feels that way, you could suppose that ordinary people in the pews have been even more strongly affected."

Commenting on the study, the Rev. Eugene Hemrick, research secretary for the U.S. Catholic Conference, said people "naturally have been upset" and many hurt, but measures are being strengthened against the problem.

"Dioceses definitely are addressing the question more vigorously, and going after such cases directly, rather than trying to cover them up," he said. Such aggressive steps were urged in June by the leadership of U.S. bishops.

Rossetti, who specializes in treatment of victims and perpetrators of child sexual abuse cases and conducts workshops around the country on the subject, said the impact doubtlessly was similar in other denominations.

Those surveyed were chosen randomly from names on various Catholic mailing lists. Among the 1,810 respondents, 1,013 were lay people, while the others included 391 sisters, 314 priests, 46 deacons and 10 brothers. The survey has a margin of error of two percentage points.

Overall, 58 percent felt the church is not dealing adequately with the problem and 62 percent feel they have not been kept adequately informed. Seventy percent want the problem dealt with openly and not concealed.

Among the lay people, "child sexual abuse by clergy is having a significant and deleterious effect on their attitudes toward the priesthood," the report said.

In parishes where a priest has been charged, only 44 percent felt priests could be trusted, but this proportion rose to 48 percent in dioceses where such cases have occurred, and 59 percent in dioceses without such cases.

"The closer the incident, the greater the harm done," the report says.

Indications were found of priests becoming wary of expressing affection for children or being alone with them.

In the analysis, lay respondents were divided for comparative purposes into three groups: (1) those in dioceses where no priest had been charged with child sexual abuse, (2) those in dioceses with reported abuse cases and (3) those in local parishes with abuse cases.

While 69 percent of those in group 1 are satisfied with priests, the figure drops to 50 percent in group 2 and falls sharply to 34 percent in group 3, where parishes have experienced accused priests.

Only 50 percent of lay people in group 1 felt the church would safeguard children entrusted to its care; the percentage dropped to 38 percent in group 2 and only 28 percent in group 3.

"After experiencing their own parish priest being charged with child sexual abuse, few trust the church with their children," the report says.

However, large but sequentially declining majorities in each group still would trust the church enough to send a child to a Catholic summer camp.

The study found that the generally low support for the church's requirement of clerical celibacy dropped even further — to less than a third — as a result of sex abuse cases.

Such support fell from 32 percent in group 1 to 23 percent in group 2 and only 18 percent in group 3. Many respondents felt priestly celibacy contributed to the problem, although no clinical evidence shows such links.

The report says that while the church recently has moved toward responding to the "hurt and pain" of sex-abuse victims and their families, the data suggests the healing efforts should be extended to the entire church.

"Indeed, it is not just the victims and their families who have been harmed by these incidents of clergy-child sexual abuse," the report adds. "The entire community has been wounded."

Oldest Episcopal seminary hopes for fresh, new start

Associated Press

NEW YORK — After completing a $21 million restoration project, General Theological Seminary in Manhattan will celebrate its 175th birthday next month with a new president and with the daunting challenge of reversing years of declining enrollment.

The new president and dean, Bishop Craig Barry Anderson, will succeed The Rev. James C. Fenhagen, who has led the seminary, the oldest Episcopal seminary in the nation, for 14 years.

Anderson said in a telephone interview from his home in Columbus, Ohio, that he would not take up his post at the seminary until next spring. Until then he will be on sabbatical at Ohio State University, writing on how the church can shape public policy to help minorities.

John Koenig, the seminary's sub-dean for academic affairs, will be acting head until then, it said.

Anderson, 50, has served for the last eight years as the bishop of the Diocese of South Dakota, where 75 of the 111 Episcopal congregations are on reservations of the Sioux Nation. "This experience with the Sioux has profoundly influenced my understanding of interfaith dialogue and institutional racism and the need for significant reform in church life and ministry," Anderson said last week.

Founded in 1817, the seminary held its first classes in St. Paul's Chapel of Trinity Church in lower Manhattan. It moved to New Haven in 1820, returning to New York — St. John's Park in Greenwich Village — in 1822.

Dr. Clement Clarke Moore, the biblical scholar and author of the Christmas classic "A Visit from St. Nicholas," donated the land for the seminary's permanent home, the block in the Chelsea area bounded by 20th and 21st Streets and 9th and 10th Avenues.

Today there is a timeless quality about the area, which is known as Chelsea Square, a tree-lined ensemble of 20 red-brick and brownstone buildings.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Bear down in business and financial progress will come by leaps and bounds. Your special combination of talents wins you an audience with prominent people in November. Act self-assured but avoid bragging. Quiet confidence is the image you want to project! In early 1993, a loved one will help you find something you thought lost forever. Take the initiative in romance as summer approaches. Ask for a serious commitment.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Raquel Welch, actor William Devane, football player Willie Gault, cartoonist Cathy Guisewite.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Morning hours are best for running errands and tackling household chores. Seek the cooperation of family member. Entertaining friends at home can be more fun than going out.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Let your loved ones set the social pace this weekend. Contact with people who share your long-term goals proves exhilarating. Jot down any original ideas on paper for future reference.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Avoid people who try to impose their beliefs on you. A budget revision will only work if you are realistic and consider everyone's needs. The romantic tempo picks up tonight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Get out from under the pressures of work. Taking a short trip with good friends provides a welcomed change of pace. Romance soars to new heights when you confide your hopes and dreams.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Juggling too many activities can be exhausting. Sort out your priorities and eliminate non-essential tasks. Spending time close to the earth renews your vitality.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Rest assured that others love you and want you in their lives. Even minor domestic adjustments can lead to greater family rapport now. Change your style.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): By staying home today, you will be able to complete an unfinished project. A night on the town would be the perfect reward for all your hard work. Try a new restaurant.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Move forward with confidence. Romance could progress to the stage where you are ready to set the date. Family and friends rejoice. Be more conservative where spending is concerned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Restlessness and a desire for fresh surroundings get you on the move this morning. Career matters will take care of themselves; try to avoid worrying.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If a friend or neighbor invites you to go somewhere, accept with alacrity. Adventure beckons! If your career no longer satisfies you, think about what you would rather do.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone at a distance offers excellent financial advice. Socializing can be fun without being expensive if you decide to entertain at home. Ask close friends to bring some of the food.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The lure of the unknown makes you eager for adventure. Follow that urge and do something out of the ordinary. You may want to visit another country on your next vacation.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are efficient and practical, strong believers in doing things thoroughly. There is nothing slipshod or haphazard about these Virgos' work. Their keen powers of analysis keep them from being fooled by superficialities. Count on them to quickly find the strengths and weaknesses of any plan. Although they take unexpected setbacks in stride, they are not big risk-takers. They tend to stick to the tried-and-true in both business and romance. They will want to date someone a long time before even thinking about marriage.

Mellencamp, 40, has been married twice before. It's Ms. Irwin's first marriage.

They met while shooting the music video of Mellencamp's single, "Get A Leg Up," earlier this year. Ms. Irwin, 23, is featured in the video and appears on the cover of his latest album, "Whenever We Wanted."

She has appeared in Vogue, Glamour and Mademoiselle magazines, and in ads for Almay and Revlon cosmetics.

The ceremony will be at Mellencamp's cabin along the White River north of Seymour, where he grew up. He lives in Bloomington, 60 miles south of Indianapolis. Ms. Irwin is from the Philadelphia suburb of Gilbertsville.

"It's a private ceremony between John and Elaine," said publicist John Reilly in New York, who declined to release further details.

Mellencamp's eight-year marriage to his second wife, Victoria, ended in divorce in 1989. They have two young children. He has an adult daughter from his first marriage; she gave birth to a child in 1989.

TRENTON, N.J. — Comedian Dennis Miller is still fuming at Jay Leno even though the two are no longer rivals for late-night television audiences.

"I don't like Jay and 'The Tonight Show,'" said Miller, whose talk show was canceled by Tribune Entertainment in July. Reruns of "The Dennis Miller Show" will be shown until Sept. 11.

"We just had problems, and I don't like the way they do business," Miller said in a telephone interview from his New York City apartment.

Miller has said in previous interviews with The Associated Press that he has problems with the way "The Tonight Show With Jay Leno" competed for guests.

"There are ways to book shows and be tactful about it," he has said. "Arsenio is very classy about it. The other show is not very tactful about it."

Miller, who's scheduled to perform later this month at Trump Taj Mahal in Atlantic City, has no regrets about telling his fans to watch the Arsenio Hall show.

"I respect Arsenio," Miller said. "I don't feel the same for Jay."

NEW YORK — Talk about unforgettable — how about a "Santa Claus is Coming to Town" duet by Cyndi Lauper and Frank Sinatra?

It's true. Ol' Blue Eyes is getting together with Lauper by the electronic magic that allowed Natalie Cole to sing a duet with her late dad on "Unforgettable," which won seven Grammy Awards this year.

Lauper will record a new track to go with Sinatra's original 1947 vocal on "Santa Claus."

The collaboration will appear on "A Very Special Christmas 2," the Special Olympics benefit album due out Oct. 20, said Lauper's publicist, Michael Pagnotta. Among other artists taking part will be Tom Petty, Sinead O'Connor and Luther Vandross.

LOS ANGELES — Sophie B. Hawkins, who scored big with the seductive debut single "Damn (I Wish I Was Your Lover)," says she's perplexed by comparisons to pop superstar Madonna.

"In many ways, the comparisons are a compliment, but in other ways it shows that people don't listen," the singer-songwriter told the Daily News of Los Angeles in an article published Friday.

Miss Hawkins and her record label, Columbia Records, went so far as to re-shoot the video for the song when record executives felt the original version was too much like the work of the Material Girl.

The second version was a performance-oriented video that quickly won favor with MTV viewers and helped catapult the single to the top of the charts.

The Inner Circle of Advocates, known as the most exclusive bar association in the country, has accepted a woman as a member for the first time. She is Judith A. Livingston, a medical-malpractice and negligence specialist with the New York firm of Kramer, Dillof, Tessel, Duffy & Moore.

To join this closed circle of 100 members, a lawyer must have pursued at least 25 cases to a verdict and won at least one jury award of $1 million or more.

The members of the organization, founded 20 years ago, are among the shrewdest legal brains in civil justice. They meet once a year to exchange information about their profession and their cases.

How did Ms. Livingston, 37, penetrate this male stronghold, whose average age is 60? Easy. A soft-spoken trial lawyer, she has won seven jury awards exceeding $1 million and settled a dozen other cases for $1 million or more.

The founder of the Inner Circle, Richard Grand, a civil trial lawyer in Tucson, Ariz., denied that the group has been closed to women. He said no women had previously applied.

Muscular dystrophy victims criticize Lewis for 'pity' approach

By Robert Macy
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS — Jerry Lewis concentrated on rehearsals Friday for his annual Labor Day telethon while some muscular dystrophy victims, including a Bush administration official, rapped what they called his "pity" approach.

Others defended the 66-year-old entertainer, saying the $1 billion he has helped raise for the Muscular Dystrophy Association provides help and hope for millions.

Lewis twice declined a pre-telethon interview with The Associated Press, the first time in more than a decade that he has done so. Lewis was too busy with last-minute rehearsals for the 21½-hour show, which begins at 9 p.m. EDT Sunday, said Muscular Dystrophy Association spokesman Jim Brown.

The 27th annual event is broadcast live from the Sahara Hotel on the Las Vegas Strip, with dozens of stars expected to appear. Association officials say some 100 million people watch the telethon annually.

Lewis has been involved with the association more than 40 years and has helped raise more than $1.1 billion for the organization, according to association figures. The 1991 show raised $45,071,857 in viewer pledges, a telethon record, with corporate sponsors contributing another $65 million.

But 1991 marked another milestone as several former MDA poster children and others with muscular dystrophy demonstrated in various cities, claiming Lewis portrayed them as objects of pity instead of capable people worthy of respect. They plan to be back this year.

The Lewis adversaries have a high-profile backer in Evan Kemp, chairman of the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. He has a form of muscular dystrophy.

"I have always had problems with the pity approach to raising money," Kemp said Friday. "I think emotions can be turned on without pity stories. There's a fine line between compassion and pity. You know it in the way you're treated."

Kemp's criticism brought a quick response from MDA vice president Bob Sampson, who also has muscular dystrophy and has lost two grandchildren to the disorder. Sampson has become known for his emotional appeals on telethons over the past 25 years.

"If I didn't feel my dignity and my pride were being preserved, I would never have become involved," Sampson said Friday. "I believe in Jerry Lewis."

Sampson said some believe the government should assume the role that telethons now fulfill.

"I lived through the years when the government did it," said Sampson, who contracted muscular dystrophy at the age of 5 and could not walk by the time he was 8.

"They pulled me around in a wagon because we couldn't afford a wheelchair. The disease existed 100 years before then and the government did nothing in the way of research."

Lewis wrote President Bush in February, saying Kemp was making a "vicious attack" on MDA and was "misusing the power of his government office" in attacking the Tucson-based charity.

In the letter, Lewis said Kemp began attacking MDA "a decade ago after we were unable to provide his Disability Rights Center with a substantial grant."

Kemp and other muscular dystrophy victims are particularly critical of Lewis for an article he wrote in 1990 in which he envisioned himself as a muscular dystrophy victim and said the experience would make him half a person.

MDA spokesman Jim Brown denied Friday that the agency used "pity" as a tool in soliciting donations.

He said of the 70 profiles featured in the past nine years, 60 percent featured adults who had succeeded in a wide range of professions from surgeons to attorneys, musicians, coaches, firefighters and pharmacists.

"I question what the EEOC is doing to advance opportunities for the disabled," Brown said.

Bush boasts about his business experience, blasts Clinton's plans

FREDERICKSBURG, Va. (AP) — President Bush pitched his pro-business campaign themes to a receptive audience Friday, saying he knows the strain of running a company "even if I got ulcers to prove it."

Bush cast his policies as good for employers as well as workers, but many of the signs hoisted in the street-corner audience of about 2,000 suggested that some were unconvinced that his economic prescriptions would work.

"Lies! Lies! Lies!" said one sign. "Jobs, Not Rhetoric," said another.

Speaking on a corner outside Goolrick's Modern Pharmacy, a 1950's style drug store, Bush blasted his Democratic rival, charging that Bill Clinton's economic proposals would hurt business and eliminate 2.6 million jobs.

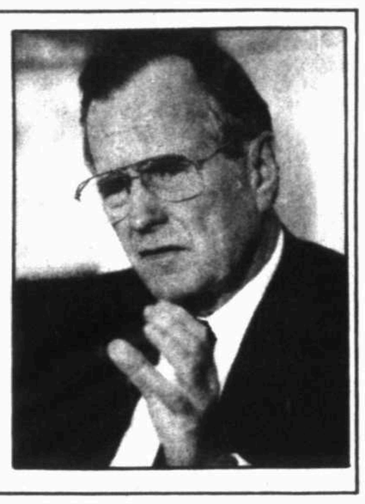

"He says he wants to soak the rich, raise taxes on the top 2 percent," Bush said. "What he won't tell you is this: two out of every three business people hit by that tax increase are small businesses or family farmers. And these folks aren't millionaires, they are mom and pop operators."

The Clinton camp hit back. "That's just wrong," said George Stephanopoulos, the campaign's communications director. He defended the Arkansas governor's proposal to raise the tax rate from 31 percent to 36 percent for individual incomes over $200,000, which represents about the top 2 percent of wage earners.

"Fewer than 3 percent of small businesses earn more than $200,000. Fewer than 1 percent of family farms earn more than $200,000," Stephanopoulos said. "The numbers don't lie."

'He (Clinton) says he wants to soak the rich, raise taxes on the top 2 percent. What he won't tell you is this: two out of every three business people hit by that tax increase are small businesses or family farmers. And these folks aren't millionaires, they are mom and pop operators.'

—George Bush

Bush spent about two hours in this historic city of 20,000 people, the scene of pivotal Civil War battles along the Rappahannock River, about 50 miles south of the nation's capital.

He popped into a Fredericksburg Hardware store and chatted briefly in front of TV cameras with owner Mac Janney and his son Hunter.

Then he walked through Goolrick's, past its old-fashioned soda fountain and into a downtown intersection filled with well-wishers — and no small number of Clinton backers.

Bush waved and smiled as some of his supporters chanted, "Four more years!"

"When it comes to renewing the American economy, my loyalty lies with small business," Bush said. "I've actually held a job in the private sector — something my opponent has not done... I know what it's like to sweat out a tough deal, to shop for credit, to try your darnedest to meet the next payroll — and even if I got ulcers to prove it."

After his speech Bush sat at a small wooden desk in the street and signed into law the Small Business Credit and Business Opportunity Enhancement Act of 1992, which is designed to make credit more readily available to small businesses.

"This bill gives more Americans the tools to create a job," Bush declared.

Health agency bars funds for study of crime's relation to genetic factors

By Philip J. Hilts
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The National Institutes of Health has withdrawn funds from an academic conference on the search for a genetic basis for criminal behavior, forcing its indefinite postponement.

The federal agency, which oversees government spending on medical research, acted after critics said the subject was veiled racism. But the University of Maryland, where the conference was to be held, contended Friday that the action was politically motivated and a gross violation of academic freedom.

The conference, "Genetic Factors in Crime: Findings, Uses and Implications," was to be held at the university in College Park, Md., beginning Oct. 9. It was one of a number of conferences on the potential effects of the agency's Human Genome Project, which seeks to identify all human genes.

The agency's objection to the conference, officials said, was that it accepted too readily the notion that violence and crime might have genetic causes. The topic sets off alarms in many quarters because of its long history as the centerpiece of eugenics, the movement to improve the human species through the control of hereditary factors in mating that has long been notorious for its declaration of white racial superiority.

Research has so far found no genetic predisposition to either violence or crime, and the suggestion that there might be one is still highly speculative. But the Bush administration has begun a research program, called the Violence Initiative, that is intended to identify such predispositions and seek treatments for them. The initiative has been criticized as a modern-day version of eugenics that would inevitably target minority children in the inner city in the guise of preventing future crime.

After the criticism was first raised, Dr. Bernadine Healy, the director of the institutes, met with senior staff members to discuss the conference. She said she decided to cut the financing unless changes de-emphasizing a genetic link to crime were made in the conference.

In a letter issued Friday to organizers of the conference, Dr. John W. Diggs, deputy director for extramural research at the institutes, wrote: "The NIH decided to re-examine this conference after substantial concerns were raised by the director's senior staff, the extramural community and later by the African-American community. The NIH will not release the restricted grant funds to support the conference as currently constituted."

He wrote that the conference brochure "touts genetic research as offering the prospect of identifying individuals who may be predisposed to certain kinds of conduct." He said statements like that "inflamed public opinion" and were a radical departure from the proposal that was the basis for the institutes' grant. —

In a telephone interview, Diggs said, "The NIH cannot condone the unjustified leap to the conclusion that there is a genetic predisposition to crime. The conference brochure and its structure seem to suggest those are scientific facts. There is no basis for that. And the suggestion that this is political is offensive to the NIH and personally offensive to me as an African-American."

Criticisms of the conference had appeared in New Dimensions, a new black-oriented weekly newspaper here, and on a Black Entertainment Television interview with Dr. Peter Breggin, a psychiatrist.

Judge sentences black supremacist to 18 years in prison for conspiracy

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (NYT) — A black supremacist who calls himself Yahweh ben Yahweh was sentenced to 18 years in prison on Friday for conspiring to use murder and arson to maintain a multimillion-dollar religious empire.

The penalty, which included a $20,000 fine, was two years short of the maximum sentence allowed by law for a conspiracy conviction. By law, the 57-year-old defendant will be eligible for parole after serving one-third of the sentence, or six years.

Yahweh ben Yahweh, Hebrew for God the Son of God, was convicted along with six disciples on federal charges of conspiracy after a five-month trial that ended here in May. They were charged with ordering the murders of 14 white vagrants and disobedient black disciples, the attempted murders of two others, and the burning of an entire block in Delray Beach, about 50 miles north of Miami.

Jurors acquitted seven other disciples and deadlocked on two.

Since the federal trial, Yahweh ben Yahweh, a native of Oklahoma who legally changed his name from Hulon Mitchell Jr., has been indicted in two first-degree murder cases in state court. A trial has been scheduled for Nov. 9 in Dade County Circuit Court.

In the hearing Friday, Chief Judge Norman C. Roettger Jr. of Federal District Court said he thought Yahweh ben Yahweh deserved a "reward" for refraining from criminal activity since 1986.

"From the evidence I heard, the crimes were so horrendous, so gross, that the 20-year maximum is simply not commensurate with the crimes," Roettger said. "Be that as it may, the nation of Yahweh, under the direction of the defendant, cleaned up its act or acts and tried to be a good citizen."

Roettger cited the sect's work in the Miami area, which included renovating motels formerly infested with drug dealers and establishing a supermarket in the inner city.

Prosecutors had sought the maximum, 20 years and a fine of $250,000.

"This man is a classic con man, a classic megalomaniac," said Richard Scruggs, an assistant U.S. attorney. "This is a man who has used religion as a shield to amass power and money and commit horrendous crimes."

Alcee L. Hastings, the defense lawyer, asked for penalties no greater than those given to Yahweh ben Yahweh's co-defendants in previous sentencings. Those ranged from 15 to 16½ years and included fines of $5,000.

Hurricane victims brace for more rain

By Micnael Fleeman
Associated Press Writer

HOMESTEAD, Fla. — Weary hurricane victims stubbornly holed up in their shattered homes Friday and braced for another dose of a tropical downpour, and more federal troops arrived to help.

In this hard-hit community, 75 percent to 80 percent of the homes and businesses were declared unsafe and officials say extensive renovation or demolition is necessary.

Residents who remain in their damaged homes are being allowed to stay but the city will not connect electricity until the buildings are repaired, said Ann Marie Gothard, a municipal spokeswoman.

"They're not trying to drag people out of their homes," she said. "It's just a matter of 'Do you want to live in the dark?'"

Streets were lined with 8-foot-tall piles of dead branches, logs and other debris from the Aug. 24 storm. Palm trees stood with fronds dangling. A military truck drove through the neighborhood, distributing free ice and soft drinks.

Residents prepared for more rain this weekend. The National Weather Service predicted that a tropical wave — a spinning storm system of rain and thunderstorms — would drench parts of South Florida, a normal condition this time of the year.

"I guess I'm going to be running back and forth from one side of the house to the other with pails and mops," said Doug Pracher, who was carrying logs from his side yard to a mound by the street.

Hurricane Andrew ripped away part of the roof over his kitchen and bathroom, but Pracher said he will stay put.

So will Mitch Underwood, 20, who was putting branches in a gas-powered wood chipper. The house he shares with his parents lost part of its roof and he has been eating at a tent city.

"We can't go," he said. "You have to understand that when it's all you've got and you've been there so long that you can't leave it."

Tent cities were virtually empty Friday as many people were out repairing their homes. More than 300 tents have been set up, all with lights and water, and officials say about 500 people used them Thursday night.

More than 1,000 military personnel arrived Friday, bringing to 17,000 the number of federal troops. Within days, that number is expected to increase to about 27,600. In addition, 6,300 members of the Florida National Guard have been deployed.

Military officials said one serviceman, Airman 1st Class Norman Burns of Patrick Air Force Base, was severely burned Wednesday when a stove exploded in a tent at Homestead Air Force Base. He was reported in stable condition Friday at a burn center in Jacksonville.

The Goodyear blimp Stars and Stripes was to begin flying over the hurricane area flashing color-coded messages on where to seek help: red for medical care, white for food and supplies, and blue for information and aid.

The massive cleanup and recovery continued on other fronts. Dade County officials said garbage pickup is returning to normal and no contamination has been found in the water system. A boil water order that still exists in some areas is expected to be lifted Saturday.

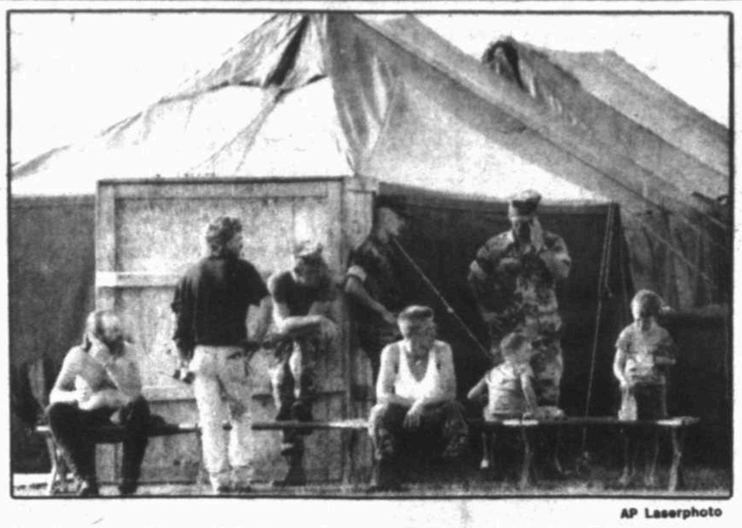

The American Red Cross said preliminary damage estimates show the hurricane damaged or destroyed 97,000 homes in Florida and 14,000 in Louisiana. The agency estimates its relief costs will exceed $65 million.

The Army Corp of Engineers said it will spend $100 million or more just to remove garbage or debris in the hurricane-ravaged area.

A different kind of cleanup occurred Friday at the Turkey Point power plant 30 miles south of Miami. A 415-foot-tall smokestack cracked by Andrew's winds along nearly half its height was demolished in a controlled blast that toppled it like a tree.

Florida Power & Light officials said the stack, which vented the complex's fossil-fuel generating plant, was a safety hazard to workers. The leaning stack had posed no danger to nuclear reactors 350 feet away, said utility spokesman Ray Golden.

The nuclear reactors, designed to withstand 250 mph gusts, survived the hurricane intact, but other buildings and nearby power lines sustained an estimated $100 million in damage, Golden said.

Part of the mission of the military will be to fan out across flattened suburbs to sell reluctant hurricane victims on the idea of leaving unsafe homes for the relative comfort of tent cities.

Religious groups give aid to hurricane victims

By David Briggs
Associated Press Writer

The Rev. John Roth slogged up the watery aisle of St. Thomas By-the-Bay Lutheran Church with sneakers under his liturgical robe the first Sunday after Hurricane Andrew barged through.

Christmas candles glowed in place of electric lights. The 40 families able to make the service were on one side of the pulpit because the roof was missing on the other half of the church in southern Dade County, Fla.

"Whatever they've lost, the church is still here. And we're still here supporting one another," Roth said in a telephone interview. The church now also serves as a distribution center for drinking water, food, and building materials.

The reasons for Hurricane Andrew and the misery it caused will remain a theological mystery.

But in contrast to the slower-moving government bureaucracy, religious groups around the country began meeting the spiritual and physical needs of the devastated area the moment the winds died down.

At San Joachim Roman Catholic Church in Miami, the Rev. Antonio Silio said that after the hurricane ripped through, "I was ready to cry because I felt there was nothing I could do for my people."

Two days later, he had set up a food distribution warehouse in the damaged church and a makeshift first-aid clinic in the parish hall. With contributions from churches as far away as California, San Joachim has cared for nearly 20,000 families.

Yet by Friday, Silio said, "From the government I have not received one aspirin."

In Charleston, S.C., Ron Holbert recalled that when Hurricane Hugo struck his city three years ago, religious groups there were a primary source of sustained relief.

"Churches are the first one on the line," Holbert said as he and his wife prepared to take a truck full of chain saws and fuel to join other Southern Baptist volunteers in south Florida.

A thousand out-of-state Southern Baptist volunteers have come to the region, and that number is expected to at least double by Monday, said the Rev. Cecil Seagle, head of the Brotherhood Department of the Florida Baptist Convention.

"We are here to stay until we are able the best we can to eliminate the suffering that we have seen as we walk among people," Seagle said.

A donation of 15,000 pounds of kosher food from Hebrew National of New York, the kosher meat company, was particularly appreciated by the Greater Miami Jewish Federation, which has helped many of the area's Jewish residents observe religious dietary laws.

Observant Jews may break the kosher laws in time of need, but "many Jews would really not eat non-kosher food unless they were on the verge of disaster," said Rabbi Solomon Schiff, chaplaincy director of the Jewish federation.

Clinton urges Bush to explain why he turns down debates

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Bill Clinton said Friday that President Bush should "fess up" and explain why he won't agree to debates, and Republicans shot back that Clinton was trying to divert attention from his Vietnam draft troubles.

"I've said I'm willing to debate — they want to haggle behind closed doors," the Democratic nominee said, responding to the Bush camp's rejection of debates proposed by a bipartisan panel.

The Commission on Presidential Debates proposed three matchups between Bush and Clinton, starting Sept. 22, and one between Vice President Dan Quayle and Democrat Al Gore.

The Clinton-Gore campaign accepted the invitation but the Bush camp has rejected the proposal.

"For some reason, open forum and free debates bother them," Clinton said. "They ought to fess up to it. Instead of saying it's not in the interest of the American people, they ought to say what it is they don't like about it."

"It's no mystery," Gore said. "If you were George Bush, would you want to try to defend the worst economic performance since the Great Depression? They're trying to figure out some way to get out of it."

Clinton's national campaign chairman, Mickey Kantor, wrote the bi-partisan commission Friday, saying the Democrats plan to be at the Sept. 22 debate in East Lansing. Mich.

"The Clinton-Gore campaign strongly believes that it is in the public interest ... to go forward this fall as scheduled," Kantor wrote.

Clinton and Gore picked up the endorsement Friday of the Sierra Club, a leading environmental group. Bush campaign spokeswoman Torie Clarke immediately said the group's support would not hurt the Republican reelection effort.

"Bill Clinton may have the endorsements of the special interests but the president's got the best environmental record and the best environmental policies for the country," she said. She described Clinton's record in Arkansas by contrast as "appalling."

"What he has done recently to make up for this is some wild appeasement of the special interests," she said.

The Bush campaign also said that in making an issue out of the debate schedule Clinton was seeking to draw attention away from a controversy over his uncle's efforts to get him out of the Vietnam draft.

It was disclosed this week that an uncle of the Democratic nominee, Raymond Clinton, now dead, obtained a Naval Reserve position for Clinton in the Vietnam era. Clinton responded that it was "news to me."

Clinton later acknowledged, however, that he had been told of his uncle's efforts last March in a brief conversation at a political fundraising event.

On Friday, Clinton said his comments from earlier in the week were meant to convey that he had not been aware of the lobbying campaign at the time it occurred in the late 1960s.

Republican spokeswoman Clarke, however, said complaints about debates were part of a "wild streak of diversionary tactics" to get the focus off of Clinton's tax hike proposals and the latest draft story.

"They're in a serious meltdown over this draft issue," Clarke said.

"This raises very serious questions about Bill Clinton's truthfulness honesty, and integrity," Clarke said.

Clinton spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers said Clinton did not think it necessary to reveal the brief conversation in March — when he was told about his uncle's efforts by Lt. Cmdr. Trice Ellis Jr. — because Clinton aides never found documentation that any Naval Reserve spot had been sought or secured for him.

Supreme Court rules that taxpayer can sue governor, see his records

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The Alabama Supreme Court ruled 8-0 Friday that a taxpayer can sue Gov. Guy Hunt for taking state planes to preach and get offerings. The court also said Hunt must provide his tax records to the man.

Hunt, a Primitive Baptist preacher, claimed citizens have no right to sue over alleged misspending by officeholders, but the state court rejected that argument.

The decision came in a lawsuit filed last year by Ralph Windom of Millbrook, after an August 1991 series of stories by The Associated Press disclosed Hunt's use of a state jet for preaching trips.

Circuit Judge Gene Reese ruled Windom should be allowed to sue, and ordered Hunt to release his tax returns to Windom and his attorney. Hunt appealed both rulings to the Supreme Court.

"I felt all along that we were in the right," Windom said. "Hunt talks like being governor gives him some kind of imperial power."

Hunt's attorneys claimed only the governor or the attorney general have authority to sue when state money allegedly is misspent.

But the justices cited previous rulings that said if "a taxpayer does not launch an assault, it is not likely that there will be an attack from any other source, because the agency involved is usually in accord with the expenditure."

'I felt all along that we were in the right. Hunt talks like being governor gives him some kind of imperial power.'

—Ralph Windom

The decision sends the case back to circuit court in Montgomery, where Windom sued. The high court gave strict instructions on the use of Hunt's tax returns to prevent them from becoming public.

Hunt was not in Friday, said press secretary Terry Abbott, who directed questions to the governor's attorneys. None of the four private, state-paid lawyers returned telephone calls.

Windom's lawsuit contends Hunt unconstitutionally promoted his ministry by using the state jet to fly to far-flung preaching engagements. After the AP reports, Hunt gave the state $9,724, saying it equaled the offerings he received on 18 trips.

Before the stories, Hunt aides had refused to say why he had taken several trips on state planes.

Musician pleads no contest to charges

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Musician Billy Preston pleaded no contest Friday to cocaine and assault charges stemming from incidents in August 1991 involving a teen-age boy and a man he hired to work at his home.

Sex charges filed in connection with both of the cases will be dismissed when Preston is sentenced Oct. 16, said Deputy District Attorney Loni Petersen.

Preston, 45, could be sentenced to a maximum of four years and eight months in prison.

He is also due in court Sept. 11 to admit a violation of his probation in a 1990 drunken driving case, Petersen said. The maximum jail term in that case is six months.

The felony cocaine possession charge stemmed from Preston's arrest for investigation of sexual assault on a 16-year-old boy police said he picked up at a spot where day laborers congregate.

The youth told authorities Preston took him to his Malibu home, smoked cocaine, showed him pornographic pictures and tried to assault him before he escaped.

The felony count of assault with a deadly weapon involved a man Preston picked up to do work at his home on Aug. 17, 1991, the day before his arrest in the case involving the boy.

Charges Petersen said will be dropped in the incident involving the teen-ager include additional drug counts and misdemeanor charges of child molestation and exhibiting pornographic material to a minor.

Related charges in the adult case that will be dropped include false imprisonment and sexual battery.

Fischer's companion is talk of match

By John Daniszewski
Associated Press writer

SVETI STEFAN, Yugoslavia — Bobby Fischer's teen-age companion, Hungarian chess whiz Zita Rajcsanyi, wasn't even born the last time he went up against Boris Spassky. At this matchup, though, she's attracting almost as much attention as the players.

For the better part of a month Rajcsanyi has been ensconced at this Adriatic resort with Fischer, who has broken his 20-year isolation to play a rematch with his old rival. Fischer triumphed in their opening game on Wednesday.

It's been a big week for Rajcsanyi, too. On Sunday, she won Hungary's junior women's chess championship, on Tuesday she celebrated her 19th birthday.

"It's hard to believe that it's happening to me, actually," she said Thursday in an interview with The Associated Press.

At an elaborate match-opening extravaganza Tuesday night, she and Fischer sat side by side: he tall, greying, and stern-faced at 49; she short, youthful and smiling, with straight brown hair and glasses.

They met in April, after they had been in touch by letter and telephone discussing their mutual passion, chess.

Is it serious between the two of them? Well, she's met his mother. But she avoided talking about the relationship except to say they are not engaged.

Fischer, Rajcsanyi said flatly, "is a genius." She wouldn't comment on his famed eccentricities, but said she likes "crazy people or geniuses."

"I sometimes thought about working in a mental hospital," she said.

Rajcsanyi didn't directly discuss Fischer's comments at a pre-match news conference on Tuesday, in which he lashed out at the chess establishment, Soviet publishers, Communists, Jews, Israel and the United Nations. But she said: "I love his honesty."

"He believes what he says 100 percent," she said. "It's wonderful."

Like Fischer, Rajcsanyi started playing chess at age 8 and discontinued her education to pursue it full-time. A high school graduate, she said she has no plans to go on to college.

Her parents back her decision, she said, adding, "I'm kind of stubborn, so they think it's better to support me."

Rajcsanyi, who speaks English with only a trace of an accent, says she lived for 10 months in Guttenberg, N.J., when she was 11 and attended an American school. Her father is a diplomat-turned-businessman and her mother a chemical engineer.

She's being credited with helping persuade Fischer to end his isolation and return to the chess world he abandoned after becoming world champion in 1972. But she says there's no real truth to that.

"I didn't really have to convince him. When I met Bobby he was already talking about it," she said. She only helped find the match organizer and sponsor, she said.

Rajcsanyi's getting the royal treatment from match officials, and organizer Jedzimir Vasiljevic has even agreed to bankroll her trip to Argentina in October to compete in the world chess junior championship.

Russians start first post-Soviet school year

By Bryan Brumley
Associated Press writer

MOSCOW — Going back to school was a little less grueling for millions of Russian children this year: for the first time in seven decades they didn't have to endure the long political speeches of the Communist era.

For the second year running, children were not required to wear uniforms.

At Moscow's school No. 1210, denim and bright shirts prevailed and almost every child carried a bouquet of red carnations or roses for favorite teachers, a Russian tradition.

At school No. 1289 in downtown Moscow, headmistress Tamara Abakumova gave a five-minute address welcoming the students Tuesday. In previous years, Communist Party officials gave addresses lasting as long as an hour.

But much of the stolid Soviet educational system remains entrenched at Russia's 67,000 schools, which serve 21 million children.

The Russian Minister of Education, Eduard Dneprov, said he faces political and economic obstacles in his effort to break from the Soviet past.

"Reducing everyone to the same level, the goal that school served in the totalitarian system, a goal that was in essence immoral, now makes no sense," he said in an interview published last Friday by the daily Izvestia.

"One of the root causes of the current torments of our society is our mentality, based on our system of 'leveled' values," he said.

"We cannot build new schools on the old foundation," he said, rejecting criticism that he has "destroyed" the schools by trying to break the inflexibility of the old system.

Under Dneprov's direction, the government will allow individual state-run schools to vary from the standard curriculum by specializing in literature, the humanities or other subjects.

Additionally, an estimated 300 private educational institutions have been founded over the past year. Those that qualify will be accredited, he said.

Reform of the school system "cannot be accomplished overnight, but is a movement measured in years," Dneprov said.

One step will be to revise and diversify textbooks.

"In the next four or five years, we need to prepare a new generation of 400-500 textbooks" to replace the 100 standard texts of the Soviet era.

On top of everything else, many Russian schools are impoverished, particularly in rural areas. Half the schools in Russia do not have indoor toilets, 29 percent do not have heating and 38 percent do not have running water, the Independent Gazette (Nezavisimaya Gazeta) quoted Dnepov as saying.

University program gives deaf foreigners link to other worlds

By Karen De Witt
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Pablo Pomeranec, an engaging young man from Buenos Aires and a freshman at Gallaudet University here, plans on being a revolutionary.

Because of his experiences in a special program at Gallaudet, Pomeranec said, he will return to Argentina some day and revolutionize the teaching of the deaf by getting schools there to teach sign langauge.

Pomeranec and his twin brother, Diego, are both deaf. And until they arrived in Washington last year for the English Language Institute at Gallaudet University, their link to the hearing world was oral and aural — lip reading and voicing sounds.

Many experts on educating the deaf now believe that making deaf children learn to lip-read and speak, instead of teaching them sign language at an early age, denies them the chance to communicate freely, at least with people who know how to sign, and therefore restricts their ability to learn language concepts.

But this view is not held everywhere. In some countries, using sign language marks a deaf person as being poor or from the lower classes. In these and many other countries, the preferred method of teaching the deaf is to integrate them into the hearing world by emphasizing lip reading and speaking. "My family didn't fully accept that I was deaf," said Pomeranec, who is 22 years old. "Though I knew the oral and aural method, it was very frustrating and confusing. I wasn't getting enough information."

In 1991, Pomeranec's upper-middle class family decided to send him and his twin brother to the English Language Institute at Gallaudet, the only university in the world primarily for deaf and hard-of-hearing students.

The purpose of the program, which this year has 26 students, is to teach foreign students English as a second language, American Sign Language and cultural studies, to prepare them for undergraduate or gradute programs in the United States or to enhance their employment potential.

But the toughest lesson for many of the students and their families is learning to accept deafness.

"There is a very prolonged negation of their child's deafness in some of these parents' lives and, of course, that is carried over in the student's life," said Francisco Martinez, the director of the 6-year-old program.

Martinez remembered one young man from an Arab country who was very bright and articulate on many subjects. "You'd ask him about being deaf, and it was like a shroud dropped over his deafness," said Martinez.

Getting both students and their families to accept the deafness can be a challenge that, until overcome, impedes all other learning, according to Holly Roth, the coordinator for new students and a teacher of American Sign Language, or ASL.

For a hearing person, listening to a deaf conversation is like watching a tennis match: the head does a lot of swiveling. And though many people who can hear assume that those flying fingers are a universal language — a kind of soundless Esperanto, equally accessible to a deaf person from France or Japan — that is not the case.

Until a foreign student learns ASL at Gallaudet, he or she is handicapped in learning English, said Ms. Roth.

"A lot of people still equate speech with intelligence" and want to learn to speak rather than to sign, said Ms. Roth, who is deaf. "So until the student acknowledges he is deaf, it is a real hurdle to learning sign. But once that is overcome, it is a revelation, a transformation for both the student and the parents."

For Fadi Misbah Abu-Shaaban, a 19-year-old from Jordan, learning sign language opened up worlds of languages. "I could speak and I could read, but it didn't open up my mind like sign did," he said. "Now that I can go to lectures in sign, it's all out there, all in my brain. I don't have to translate."

The program also opens up the world of the deaf foreign student to other deaf people, not only those his or her own age, but also deaf adults. Before learning sign language, the Pomeranec twins knew no adults who were deaf. All the teachers at the ELI program are deaf.

Having known few deaf people and almost no successful deaf professionals, some students arrive at the school intending to try it out for "just a couple of weeks."

Shovon Jamaly is at 24 the national tennis champion of Bangladesh. He arrived at Gallaudet the same year as the Pomeranec twins. He wanted to learn enough English and ASL to join the professional circuit in the United States.

He had been away from school for many years, but once in the program, Jamaly decided he could be as successful in academics as he was in tennis. Instead of embarking on the tennis tour, he returned for a second year at the Institute, to study business administration.

Americans help organize Vietnam surfing festival

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam is catching the surfing wave, with help from American surfers.

A delegation of U.S. surfing and beach management experts visiting Vietnam in August promised to help it finance and organize an international surfing competition in December, the official Vietnam News Agency reported recently.

The team also promised to help the Vietnamese Ministry of Information, Culture and Sports develop better beach management and water sports, according to the report monitored in Bangkok.

The American delegation is led by Bruce S. Hopping, chairman of the International Surfing Association.

It visited Ha Long Bay in northern Vietnam, the central coastal towns of Danang, Qui Nhon and Nha Trang, and the beach resort of Vung Tau at the country's southern tip.

Surfers from the United States, Indonesia, Japan and other countries have registered for the December competition, the news agency reported.

ALL DECKED OUT

A deck is ideal for relaxing, sunbathing, for parties and barbecues. And it's a perfect playground for children. For green-thumbers, a wood deck offers a great setting for flower gardens. 24 step-by-step photos and detailed instructions, along with scale drawings and a materials list, make it possible for amateurs to build this project. The deck measures 12" x 28", but can be modified to fit any area.
