TSTA: Texas could face teacher-shortage crisis

■ Teachers group says state must do more to attract, keep qualified teachers starting with pay increase.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas will face a teacher shortage of crisis proportions unless it does more to attract and keep qualified educators, starting with better salaries, a state teacher group said Friday.

The state ranks 36th in the nation in average teacher salary, says the annual pay survey by the Texas State Teachers Association. Texas teachers made an average of $32,000 in 1995-96, the latest figures available. The national average was $37,846.

The average teacher salary in Midland is $32,866, according to Susan Webb, Midland Independent School District spokeswoman.

With a booming economy making other professions more inviting, one-third of new teachers leave the profession by their third year, and half are gone by their fifth year.

That will be exacerbated in the next 10 years as one-third of current teachers become eligible for retirement, while public school enrollment continues to grow, said TSTA President Richard Kouri.

"If we don't start to address teacher recruitment and retention, we're going to be dealing with a very severe crisis in the very near future, and we're going to have an increase in the number of classrooms in

Drop in AIDS deaths

WASHINGTON — AIDS deaths dropped 30 percent last year in New York, the U.S. city hardest hit by the epidemic, demonstrating the stunning power of new treatments to control AIDS. Across the United States, AIDS specialists have noticed a dramatic improvement in the survival of their patients since the introduction of protease inhibitors, a new class of drugs that has revolutionized AIDS treatment. Suspicious car

KERRVILLE — A week before Darlie Routier's two young sons were fatally stabbed, the driver of a suspicious black car parked and stared at the Routier home, a neighbor testified Friday. "I was going to approach him to see if there was a problem and he sped off very quickly," Karen Neal said. "I was very concerned." Ms. Neal, a nurse whose family lives across the street from the Routiers in Rowlett, testified she also saw the black car about a month before the killings and again hours after the slayings.

TAMPA, Fla. — Publix Super Markets agreed Friday to pay $81.5 million to settle a class-action lawsuit by 150,000 women who accused the grocery chain of relegating them to dead-end, low-paying jobs. Publix, the nation's ninth-largest groce and Florida's biggest private employer, also agreed to allow the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to monitor hiring and promotions for up to seven years.

MHS administrators urge students not to panic over news of meningitis diagnosis

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

A Midland High School student has been diagnosed with meningoccal meningitis, but administrators are urging students not to panic or overreact.

Administrators gave the warning because the disease, also known as spinal meningitis, it not easily transmitted, Susan Webb, MISD communications specialist said.

"Meningitis carries a stigma of being very serious, which it is; however, it is not easily passed to others," Ms. Webb said.

The disease is contagious only if there is close contact with the infected individual, such as eating after the individual or living in the same home, according to a MISD statement released Friday. The disease is a bacterial infection of the brain and spinal cord, which can lead to serious illness.

Parents concerned about their child getting the disease may continue to keep their child in school, because the risk of catching the disease at school is very small, according to the Texas Department of Health and Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Students who had classes with the infected student supposedly have a low risk of getting the disease because it cannot easily be passed through the air, Ms. Webb said.

However, each student at Midland High School on Thursday was notified and given information about the disease and ways to prevent it, Ms. Webb said.

Students were encouraged to closely monitor their health and contact their family physician or the Health Department if they develop any of the disease's symptoms, she said.

Symptoms of the disease — fever, severe headache and stiffness of the neck — usually appear suddenly. Other symptoms are nausea, vomiting, a purplish skin rash, confusion and drowsiness.

The symptoms might appear anywhere from two to 10 days after close contact with the infected individual, she said.

To avoid getting the disease, students were encouraged to use good personal hygiene, such as frequent hand washing, not sharing foods or eating utensils, covering the nose and mouth when sneezing or coughing and avoiding overcrowded conditions.

The name of the student has not been released, but administrators report that the student's condition is improving. Family and friends of the student have been notified and are being treated with

Police Department says goodbye to 'Bulldog', 28 years of detective experience

The Midland Police Department lost 28 years of detective experience Friday as they said farewell to retiring Sgt. B.G. "Bulldog" Johnson.

During his career, Johnson has investigated more than 150 murder cases, and found suspects in more than 95 percent of them, he said.

It's because of his investigative tenacity in solving crimes that he received the nickname, "Bulldog," Chief Richard Czech said.

While in Midland, he was one of the first detectives in the country to help send a man to jail on two life sentences — without the evidence of a body and using a federal conspiracy charge.

Kenneth Wayne Parker was convicted of conspiring to sell June Gilkerson into prostitution. Ms. Gilkerson left her home in November 1986 and was never seen alive again.

Without a body, investigators didn't have enough evidence for a murder charge, but they did for the federal charges. Johnson asked a U.S. attorney in San Antonio, Tom Beery, to review the case.

"I remember he was doing nothing. He was on his back recovering from an injury and after a couple of weeks, he took it to a federal grand jury," said Johnson, who has a total of 33 years of law-enforcement experience.

Parker was found to have conspired to sell Ms. Gilkerson and an Austin woman into prostitution. His accomplice, David Russell Alderink, pleaded guilty to aggravated kidnapping and was sentenced to 20 years.

Johnson remembers every detail of the case, calling it the "pinnacle" of his career as a detective. But finding the body of Ms. Gilkerson, who is believed dead, has eluded him. According to a police video shown during Parker's trial, Parker wrote a note stating he had cremated her body for $15,000; he said he threw the note away.

"We searched everywhere for that note," Johnson

Post-war giant lands at Midland's airport, to be on display at CAF through October

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

The Confederate Air Force in Midland has a new, long-term guest for its display — a post-war giant known as a Shackleton Mark II, or by its military designation, AVRO 696.

The propeller plane entered service in the Royal Air Force in 1953 and its primary mission at the time was submarine hunter.

The Shackleton that landed at the Midland International Airport Friday, however, bears a bulbous undercarriage where it was refitted as an early-warning radar aircraft, according to instructor pilot and co-pilot, John Hess of Houston.

The aircraft has a wingspan of almost 120 feet and a maximum takeoff weight of 110,000 pounds. It is powered by four 2,450-horsepower Rolls-Royce Griffin engines with counter-rotating propellers, or "contra-props," Hess said.

Designed with "long legs" in the military vernacular, the aircraft can stay aloft for 15 hours at a time. This Shackleton was flown into the United States

Kremlin says Yeltsin too sick to return to office

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin acknowledged Friday that Boris Yeltsin is too sick to return to his office any time soon and postponed an upcoming regional summit, deepening political uncertainty caused by his fragile health.

The president's aides, who have portrayed a steady recovery from both heart surgery and pneumonia, divulged no new details about his condition and refused again to release photos or videotape of him.

The Russian leader, recuperating at his country home after a 12-day hospital stay, hasn't been seen in public or on television since Jan. 6.

Just as with Yeltsin's whirlwind trip to the Kremlin on Wednesday to defuse a parliamentary debate on whether he's fit to rule, the latest statements and CIS summit postponement left more questions than answers.

"The president has preserved his hallmark political will but he has not recovered fully after his very serious illness, double pneumonia," Yeltsin press secretary Sergei Yastrzhembsky told reporters.

"The president's state is not so good as to expect an immediate, hurried return to the Kremlin," he said, despite Yeltsin's "burning desire" to get back to work.

That was in line with what Yastrzhembsky said Monday, before Yeltsin's surprise Kremlin visit. But the continuing refusal to provide video footage or even a snapshot of Yeltsin is fueling widespread speculation that he's worse off than officials say.

Dr. Michael DeBakey, the renowned heart specialist who consulted on Yeltsin's Nov. 5 bypass surgery, said he hasn't gotten his usual phone call from Yeltsin's doctors this week, which he takes as a good sign. He expressed puzzlement at the lack of public information.

"The doctors told me (last week) he was doing fine," DeBakey said in a telephone interview from Houston. "Why don't they come out and say so? ... I don't know why they're so secretive."

The American surgeon said his last report was that Yeltsin no longer had pneumonia and but that he hadn't recovered his strength, which DeBakey said is to be expected.

Yeltsin's latest disappearance from public view has prompted intense political jockeying and even campaigning. Public confidence in Yeltsin, already low, has nose-dived.

"President Yeltsin's illness, or rather his permanent absence from work, is a huge political problem for the country," Vitaly Tretyakov, editor of the moderate daily Nezavisimaya Gazeta, wrote in a front-page commentary Friday.

He said the Communists are trying to capitalize on Yeltsin's political weakness to get a piece of the government.

Next Wednesday's meeting of leaders of the Commonwealth of Independent States, an alliance of 12 former Soviet republics, had been regarded as a key indication of Yeltsin's condition.

Yastrzhembsky said at a Kremlin briefing that there was no change in Yeltsin's agenda for upcoming events — which includes a Feb. 4 trip to the Netherlands and a March U.S. summit with President Clinton.

But an hour later, the president's press service announced that the CIS summit had been put off indefinitely.

Zaire's army moves deeper into rebel-held territory, officials say

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — The army said Friday its soldiers were advancing deep into rebel-held territory toward the eastern cities of Goma and Bukavu and had killed at least 70 enemy fighters on the way.

The statement from army chief Gen. Marc Mahele Lieko Bokungu came a day after the government claimed to have retaken the eastern town of Walikale in a two-day battle that killed more than 100 rebel fighters.

Neither that claim nor Friday's could be independently confirmed, and there was no mention of casualties on the government side. If the claims were true, they would mark the first time in the 4-month-old rebellion that the government has shown more than a lethargic response.

The rebels, who say their goal is to overthrow Zairian President Mobutu Sese Seko, quickly seized the key cities of Goma and Bukavu after the incursion began in September and now control a 440-mile corridor along the eastern border.

Any Zairian army successes are likely to be attributed in part to assistance from foreign mercenaries, who are reported to be active across the rebel-held region. The French newspaper Liberation said Friday a 280-man European mercenary force had been deployed to bolster the Zairians.

The force is led by Christian Tavernier, a Belgian with a long history of mercenary activity in Africa, and includes Serbs, Croats, Russians, Poles, Belgians, Italians and French, the left-wing daily reported.

Liberation did not identify its sources, and the French government has denied involvement in any mercenary force.

Journalists in Kisangani, the largest city in eastern Zaire, also have seen white men in uniforms, believed to be mercenaries, at the airport where Zairian soldiers and military hardware are being gathered.

Aid agencies in eastern Zaire have expressed fears that new fighting will make things worse for thousands of refugees trapped by the war. The U.N. refugee agency said Friday it was considering whether to set up humanitarian corridors or safe areas for trapped civilians.

"The area is a logistical nightmare. It's simply not possible to get enough supplies in," said Pam O'Toole, a spokeswoman for U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees Sadako Ogata. Ogata was to contact authorities in the region to discuss helping the refugees.

S. African panel orders scientists to stop AIDS research pending review

Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Three scientists who stunned medical experts this week by announcing development of a drug that kills the AIDS virus were ordered Friday to halt testing on humans until their work has been evaluated.

The Medicines Control Council, a government panel that registers drugs, said human testing would be stopped until it can review research on the drug, called Virodene P058. The council set a Feb. 5 deadline for its review.

Researchers from the University of Pretoria announced development of Virodene on Wednesday when they went before South Africa's Cabinet to ask for $800,000 to continue their work.

They said they had tested the drug on about a dozen people who were infected with HIV or had full-blown AIDS — and claimed that it had reversed the effects of AIDS in at least one person.

Scientists and AIDS groups reacted with shock and skepticism. They denounced the trio for not following standard research practices, such as subjecting their work to peer review, and also for conducting human trials apparently without approval.

Under standard procedures, the researchers should have permission from either the medicines council or the university's ethics committee before experimenting on humans. Neither group has acknowledged giving its permission, although no one has directly accused the scientists of malpractice or unethical behavior.

The council's statement announcing the suspension of testing on Friday did not make any specific accusations against the three: researcher Olga Visser and cardiothoracic surgeons Dirk du Plessis and Callie Landauer.

The three are hardly known in the AIDS research community, although Visser and du Plessis made news in 1995 for successfully restarting a rat's heart after it had been frozen. It was considered a breakthrough in frozen tissue research, a field know as cryo-preservancy.

Visser said she discovered the anti-viral properties of Virodene while conducting cryo-preservancy experiments.

The Institute of Virology, a state- and privately funded agency that studies viruses, expressed doubt Friday that Virodene reverses AIDS.

"I would say this is just one of the many so-called cures that various people come up with every now and again," institute chief Barry Schoub said.

Report: Tutsi-led army attack kills more than 400

BUJUMBURA, Burundi (AP) — Backed by Tutsi civilians, Burundi's Tutsi-led army attacked and killed hundreds of Hutus in a dispute over land in central Burundi, according to a radio report Friday.

The assault killed at least 400 people, making it the deadliest attack so far this year in increasing ethnic violence in the troubled country, independent radio Studio Ijambo said.

The attack occurred Jan. 5, but there was no word on why it wasn't reported sooner.

The slaughter took place at Bukeye, 32 miles north of the capital, Bujumbura, the radio station said. The area has been the scene of an ongoing struggle between majority Hutus and minority Tutsis for land.

Studio Ijambo cited unidentified witnesses as its sources on the massacre. Military officials denied any knowledge of the killings, as did U.N. officials.

Hutu-Tutsi violence has claimed more than 150,000 lives in Burundi since 1993, when Tutsi paratroopers assassinated Burundi's first Hutu president.

Saying he was taking control to stop the violence, Tutsi Maj. Pierre Buyoya seized power from another Hutu president last July. Despite the avowed purpose of the coup, fighting has killed at least 10,000 people since then, international human rights groups say.

Tutsis have held power since Burundi's independence from Belgium in 1962.

Owners of "Ribs on Wheels" have done catering from the shopping center at Lamesa Highway and Scharbauer Drive for the past 20 years.

In the Business Scene column on Wednesday's Business page, the caterer's previous location was incorrectly reported.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Coming Sunday

■ Have you ever said to your parents, or maybe even your grandparents: "You really ought to write down your childhood memories. I'd loved to read them." Now a group of Midlanders are doing just that. Read all about those special memories in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

■ Students aren't the only ones who get report cards. So do presidents. In Sunday's edition, there will be a comprehensive look at this country's leaders and how a group of scholars rate them from a historical perspective. Read Sunday's Reporter-Telegram and see if you agree with the rankings.

■ It is Super Bowl Sunday and that means parties will be held all over town. But just as important as the game itself is, "What's on the menu?" If you need some ideas, read Sunday's Lifestyle section.

LOSE: Texas could face teacher shortage without pay increase this state that don't have a certified teacher in them," Kouri said.

In 1995-96, 31 percent of Texas public school teachers weren't certified in the areas they teach, according to a recent report to the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board.

More than 25 percent of Texas public schools had vacancies that they couldn't fill with a qualified teacher, compared with the national average of just over 15 percent. Such vacancies may be filled by giving emergency teaching permits to people who haven't been certified to teach.

"If we don't begin to address teacher salaries ... that number is going to continue to increase as the veteran teachers leave and we're unable to recruit new teachers in Texas to replace them," Kouri said.

As a minimum, the teacher group wants the Legislature to increase the state salary schedule by at least 5 percent.

Lawmakers addressed teacher salaries in their last regular session in 1995, when they raised the minimum salary scale for teachers and tied it to the state expenditure per student.

House Public Education Committee Chairman Paul Sadler, D-Henderson, said he wants to see what that does for teacher salaries.

Particularly if Gov. George W. Bush's push to relieve local school property taxes and increase the state share of education funding succeeds, that clause would mean an increase in the salary scale.

A spokesman for the Texas Association of School Boards didn't immediately return a telephone call from The Associated Press.

GOODBYE: Detective to retire after 28 years

said.

The Gilkerson case was originally classified as a missing person, but Johnson also has worked many murder scenes. Some were grizzly, but they didn't upset him, he said.

"I work it as a job and get it out of my mind. The adults don't bother me a bit, but kids ...," Johnson said.

Scenes where a child has been murdered are the worst, he said and the case of 10-year-old Julianne Powell stands out. Julianne was found in February 1995 in the apartment of her murderer, Henry Ortiz. She had been kidnapped, sexually assaulted and slain before being stuffed into a laundry hamper.

"It was a brutal situation. I could see the terror she went through before she died. It gets to you," Johnson said.

Her killer was convicted.

In other cases where there hasn't been a conviction, justice has been served differently, or police have a suspect but wait for stronger evidence, Johnson said.

He points to the case of Perry Guthrie, whose body was found in a field in September 1986. Even though there was no trial for his killers, Johnson said his murders met their justice.

"They were in a drug ring in Ojinaga, Mexico, and got into a shoot-out with the 'federales' down there. All of them were killed," he said.

In other cases, like that of Carolyn Kolas, whose body was found in May 1995, he said police have a suspect, but wait on evidence. In the March 1996 death of Jill Yvonne Madrid, the the most recent slaying in Midland, police have a suspect. They believe he is in Mexico and are working with authorities there to arrest him, Johnson said.

Johnson is ready to retire and after nine months without a slaying, he said he hopes the trend continues for at least another week.

"I want to enjoy life more now and work at the shop I have at my house."

He takes with him valuable years of experience, but has confidence in the other detectives.

"They have a lot of qualified people and they won't suffer without me one bit," he said.

Leaving the people he has spent half his lifetime working with will be the hardest part of retiring, he said.

"I love them more than words," he said. "It's natural that I'm going to miss it. I will miss them very much."

antibiotics by the Health Department, Ms. Webb said.

While being treated, the student has not been at school for "a while," Ms. Webb said.

The bacterial case of meningitis is the first reported in Midland in well over a year, Sheila McCright, Health Department nursing supervisor said.

Children's choir from Mexico to perform

"Heavenly Voices," "Voces Celestiales," will be heard 7:30 p.m. today at Grace Presbyterian Church, 2801 N. Garfield St.

The 30-member children's choir — ranging in age from 6 to 18 — is from Piedras Negras, Mexico.

"A couple of years ago I took my bell choir down there, and we performed in their service and did a concert," said Jan Mouton of Grace Presbyterian. "So we invited them back up here.

"This is quite an undertaking for them to come up here," Ms. Mouton said. "They are from our mission church in Mexico. We're putting them all up at host homes with the church."

Also, the children's choir will perform during the 11 a.m. worship service Sunday at the church.

The public is invited to attend both.

Drop in AIDS deaths shows power of new treatments

WASHINGTON (AP) — AIDS deaths dropped 30 percent last year in New York, the U.S. city hardest hit by the epidemic, demonstrating the stunning power of new treatments to control AIDS.

"It's good news, which we haven't had a whole lot of in the AIDS epidemic," said Dr. Harold Jaffee of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Across the United States, AIDS specialists have noticed a dramatic improvement in the survival of their patients since the introduction of protease inhibitors, a new class of drugs that has revolutionized AIDS treatment.

But the latest New York City statistics, released Friday, represent the first firm evidence that treatment breakthroughs are truly having a broad impact on deaths from the disease.

Jaffee said he expects 1996 national figures to show the same drop seen in New York City.

The city's AIDS figures began to improve even before the advent of protease inhibitors, so other factors must also be playing a role. Just what they are is a matter of speculation, but doctors suggest better access to treatment through federal and state programs may have contributed.

New York City has 3 percent of the country's population but 16 percent of its AIDS cases. Over the years, more than 90,000 New Yorkers have been diagnosed with AIDS. The number of cases reported annually is about four times higher than in Los Angeles, the city with the second highest figures.

AIDS is New York's third leading cause of death. Indeed, among people age 25 to 44, it is the top killer.

The city's AIDS deaths rose sixfold between 1983 and 1986 and then by about 11 percent a year through 1994. In 1995, deaths leveled off at 7,046. Then, last year, they fell to 4,944.

"AIDS deaths dropped precipitously in 1996," said Dr. Mary Ann Chiasson of the city health department, who presented the figures at the 4th Conference on Retroviruses and Opportunistic Infections.

Nationally, data show that the number of AIDS deaths leveled off for the first time in 1995.

Month by month figures in New York City are especially dramatic. In November 1995, 21 New Yorkers died of AIDS each day. By last November, this had dropped to 11 deaths a day. The average rose slightly in December, perhaps because of the flu outbreak, but appear likely to return to about 11 when January's figures are complete.

Health officials wondered at first if the drop in AIDS deaths was a statistical fluke, so they looked for other things that could have explained it, such new record keeping methods. But they concluded that only a true reduction in AIDS deaths could account for the change.

DISPLAY: CAF gets long-term visitor from Coventry, England. Its journey to Midland began in Reykjavik, Iceland. The flight from Reykjavik to Bangor, Maine, took 11 hours, Hess said.

This is the only Shackleton in flying condition, Hess said. The eight others in existence are on static display in Europe and South Africa.

This aircraft will be part of the CAF display and will participate in AirSho'97 in October before leaving Midland.

During its stay at the CAF, the aircraft will be repainted and prepared for display at the museum.

The big plane, which carried a crew of 11, saw service around the world until the last Shackleton was decommissioned in 1991.

The aircraft at CAF is owned by the English cargo company, Air Atlantique, and during its military service was stationed at Lossiemouth, Scotland.

This Shackleton still bears the squadron logo, an Arabic dagger on the nose of the aircraft indicating it was flown by the RAF's 8 Squadron, which was awarded a ceremonial dagger by the sultan of Aden in Yemen, according to engineer Pete Jolly, of England.

Chechnya returns to fundamental Islamic teachings after Russians depart

Associated Press

GROZNY, Russia— Since Muslim separatists captured Chechnya's capital five months ago, they've banned alcohol, established Islamic courts, cracked down on prostitution and instituted religious instruction in their schools.

And as Monday's presidential election nears, candidates take pains to stress their Islamic credentials during speeches in mountain villages and in posters plastered all over the war-ravaged capital.

"Islam, independence, order," read the banners of Aslan Maskhadov, one of the front-runners.

Chechnya has been a predominantly Muslim territory for centuries, but Soviet rule placed strict limits on all religions, and Moscow was particularly wary of the Islamic people to the south, both in the Caucasus Mountains and farther east in Central Asia.

Now that the Russians are gone, Chechens are looking to Islam for direction — in life and in politics. And when politicians tout Muslim values, the message is pro-independence for Chechnya, and anti-Russia.

"Islam is playing a larger and larger role in Chechnya, and people are happy with this," Mullah Shahid Yunus declared after delivering the midday sermon Friday at a packed mosque on a hillside overlooking Grozny.

Islamic practice here has traditionally been mainstream and moderate, and it appears unlikely that the independence sought by the Chechens would result in a fundamentalist state.

At present, religious figures do not hold any senior political or military positions in Chechnya, and the presidential and parliamentary elections are expected to be dominated by men who made their names in the guerrilla war with Russia.

"If Russia and other countries want stability in the Caucasus, they must understand that it's only possible through Islamic order," said Chechen Vice Premier Movladi Udugov, a presidential candidate. "We now have thousands of people with weapons and only Islam will be able to keep this problem under control."

Unlike the rest of Russia, Chechnya has for some time kept to the Muslim practice of setting aside Fridays for rest and religious services, while Saturdays and Sundays are working days.

After the Chechen rebels captured Grozny in August and signed a peace deal with Russia, Chechen leader Zelimkhan Yandarbiyev moved quickly to introduce many more Islamic practices.

Alcohol was officially banned, something unthinkable elsewhere in Russia, with its well-deserved reputation for heavy drinking.

Sharia, or Islamic law, was introduced in November in Chechnya and courts have been established in Grozny and other towns.

The Sharia courts have sentenced some convicts to 40 lashes, though the practice has been suspended.

Netanyahu encourages quick investigation of appointment

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu told his Cabinet on Friday that he is willing to have police investigate his government's appointment of a political crony as attorney general.

The attorney general, Roni Bar-On, was appointed in exchange for a promise to end the corruption trial of one of Netanyahu's political allies, former Interior Minister Arye Deri, Israel TV reported this week.

In addition, Deri agreed that the two Cabinet ministers of his religious Shas Party would vote for the Hebron agreement and thus assure a thin majority for Netanyahu in the Cabinet, the report said.

Netanyahu vehemently denied the allegations Thursday, accusing the Israeli media of "smear campaigns against me, my wife, Sarah, and my children." On Friday, in the weekly Cabinet meeting, he again insisted the accusations were unfounded, but added, "It is impossible to leave these things hanging."

"I call for speedy police investigation to find the truth quickly," the prime minister said in a Cabinet statement, according to the TV report.

Bar-On resigned Jan. 12, just two days after his appointment was announced and hours after the Supreme Court temporarily barred him from formally taking office because of other questions about his credibility. Critics had charged that Bar-On was chosen for his political loyalties and close relationship to Justice Minister Tsachi Hanegbi.

The Bar-On scandal follows the resignation of Netanyahu's first justice minister, Yaacov Neeman. Neeman resigned amid charges he attempted to tamper with a witness in the Deri trial.

In addition, Netanyahu's wife is being sued by a nanny she dismissed. The nanny claims Sarah Netanyahu owes her tens of thousands of dollars in back pay.

Gingrich attempts to change subject from ethics

N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — Just two days after receiving an unprecedented sanction for ethics violations, House Speaker Newt Gingrich held a news conference to talk about a balanced budget amendment and take the first step toward what he hopes will be political recovery.

But even as the speaker moved to repair his public image, the two-year ethics investigation into his activities left several legal questions that are unlikely to be resolved in the near future.

The Internal Revenue Service is looking into the financing of the class he taught at two Georgia colleges and a television workshop series. The IRS is also likely to examine a series of financial transactions between the Abraham Lincoln Opportunity Foundation (ALOF), a charity founded by a Gingrich ally, and the speaker's former political action committee, GOPAC.

The speaker also has told House members that he plans to sue Jan Baran, the lawyer first hired to handle the ethics case.

But Gingrich's immediate problems are political, and that is what he began focusing on this week.

Rep. Mark Foley, R-Fla., a Gingrich supporter, said that Republicans did not develop a "backup" plan in the run-up to Gingrich's re-election as House speaker, because if another candidate had emerged, support for Gingrich "would have collapsed."

At a GOP leadership retreat this week, Gingrich hoped to begin mending the fissures in his leadership and his conference while also changing the subject publicly.

At his Thursday news conference, the speaker called for support for a balanced budget amendment and said that Republicans will spend this weekend trying "to focus the nation" on the issue.

That is the strategy that several Republican political consultants said will best enable the speaker to restore his image.

"I don't think he ever came to power because of charisma, personality or debating skills," said Charles Black, who worked on former Sen. Bob Dole's presidential campaign.

"It was because he had the vision to craft an agenda and could articulate that agenda. If we now turn from controversy to substance, we'll be playing to his strength," Black said.

Rich Bond, a former national Republican Party chairman agreed.

"I think he has again learned another life lesson. He has learned the virtue of less exposure and playing the inside game," Bond said.

Democratic consultant Robert Shrum was less certain that Gingrich could change his style so abruptly.

"He's going to have to go from being Arnold Schwarzenegger to Alan Alda," said Shrum.

Armey seems likely heir to speaker position

N.Y. Times Service

■ News analysis

WASHINGTON — History would say that the next person in line to be Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives is a Merle Haggard-quoting former economics professor who got into politics because he liked Ronald Reagan but would rather go fishing than attend Republican conventions, except for last year, when he showed up on a Harley-Davidson motorcycle.

Actually, history doesn't say anything about Merle Haggard or Harleys. But for the last 64 years, all but two House Speaker moved into the job after serving as House majority leader, which places U.S. Rep. Richard K. Armey, R-Texas, directly in line for the job.

Armey, 56, has plenty to say about Haggard, Harleys and his preference for fishing poles over politics. He has plenty else to say about a conservative philosophy of government, which, over 12 years, moved him from being a political nobody to the second-most powerful seat in the House.

Armey's position as heir-apparent to current House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., came into sharper focus last week after the House voted 395-28 to reprimand Gingrich for ethics violations.

Republicans who had voted to re-elect Gingrich as speaker on Jan. 7 also voted to sanction him, and several were quoted as saying that any more foul-ups by Gingrich would endanger their support.

Nevertheless, the party line is that Gingrich will keep his job for two more years — if not longer.

Armey has "very little chance" of becoming speaker before the next Congress convenes in January 1999 "because I know Newt Gingrich is going to survive," said House Majority Whip Tom DeLay, another Texas Republican. At the same time, he said, it is "pretty fair to say" that Armey would be speaker if Gingrich weren't.

The support that would turn Majority Leader Armey into Speaker Armey would have to come from a broader base than the conservative core of Gingrich-backers that he now appeals to. Moderate Republicans, in particular, would have to be convinced that Armey can suppress his most conservative and bombastic tendencies to be an effective leader.

Just as important to Armey's chances is the rarity of the job opening: Republican majorities in the House have been so unusual in the past 64 years that many other members might want a shot at being speaker.

Armey, who first ran for Congress in 1984 partly because he admired the young Rep. Gingrich on C-SPAN, is careful when asked about the possibility of succeeding his close colleague.

"This is a delicate subject for me," he said in a recent interview. "I pretty much expect that my entire career of public service will be in the House. Like anybody else," he said emphatically, "I would like to be Speaker."

And, he added, "I am fully confident of my ability to do anything my colleagues ask me to do."

Republican governors seek restoration of federal aid to legal immigrants

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Gov. George E. Pataki of New York and other Republican governors urged Congress Friday to restore some of the benefits taken away from legal immigrants under the new welfare law, signed just six months ago by President Clinton.

The Republican governors' appeal was strongly endorsed by Democratic governors and by the National Conference of State Legislatures. This groundswell of concern virtually guarantees that Congress will reopen the bitter debate on welfare legislation, though there is no assurance that any benefits will be restored.

Pataki said that 80,000 immigrants in New York State would lose food stamps or Supplemental Security Income because of the law. The statute, he said, will shift $240 million a year in costs from the federal government to the state, because New York will provide assistance through its home relief program to many people losing federal benefits.

Republican congressional leaders have repeatedly said that they do not intend to make any significant changes in the welfare law this year. But they may be forced to reconsider in view of concerns now being expressed by governors of both parties, including influential Republicans like Pataki, Jim Edgar of Illinois, George W. Bush of Texas and William F. Weld of Massachusetts.

In an interview Friday night, Gov. Lawton Chiles of Florida, a Democrat, said he was delighted to have Republican governors join him in opposing the restrictions on benefits for legal immigrants. "Better late than never," he said.

Chiles said Republican governors seemed to ignore the issue in 1995 and 1996, perhaps because they assumed the cuts in benefits would affect only illegal immigrants.

"We never could get their attention," Chiles said. "I couldn't understand it. Where were New York, New Jersey, Texas and California?" Those states have Republican governors, "all of whom should have a lot more influence in Congress than I do," Chiles added.

Top Senate Republicans promised to work with the governors, but refused today to make any financial commitments.

"We don't see a whole lot more money coming from Uncle Sam," said Sen. Don Nickles of Oklahoma, the assistant Republican leader. "I'm concerned about opening up the bill before the ink is dry."

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, the New York Democrat who led opposition to the welfare bill on Capitol Hill, said there was some chance, but no guarantee, that Congress would restore benefits for some legal immigrants. Chiles said, "It will be very difficult."

The restrictions on benefits for legal immigrants account for more than 40 percent of all the money to be saved under the welfare law: $24 billion of $55 billion over seven years, according to the Congressional Budget Office.

When Clinton signed the welfare bill, he voiced "strong objections" to denying aid to legal immigrants. Those provisions, he said, "have nothing to do with the fundamental purpose of welfare reform" and "will shift costs to states."

The governors' position provides unexpected support for Clinton, who in his new budget will ask Congress to restore some benefits for immigrants. The governors do not yet have an estimate of the cost of their proposal, nor have they said how Congress should pay for it.

Pataki, Edgar and Gov. Lincoln C. Almond of Rhode Island, a Republican, expressed their concerns at a meeting here Friday with Trent Lott, the Senate Republican leader.

Under the welfare law, immigrants are generally ineligible for federal benefits like food stamps and Supplemental Security Income, a form of cash assistance for poor people who are elderly, blind or disabled.

New policy statements drafted for the National Governors' Association, which meets here on Feb. 1, say that Congress should restore such benefits for some legal immigrants, particularly those who cannot be expected to work or to become United States citizens because of their age or physical or mental impairments.

Republican governors, working with Speaker Newt Gingrich, helped write the welfare bill and lobbied successfully for its passage. "They had a party position, and they all had to stay with it," said Moynihan, who tried, with limited success, to rouse concern in Albany last year.

Another Democrat on Capitol Hill, speaking on the condition that he not be named, said: "Republican governors who were clamoring for this bill six months ago are now urging the repeal or softening of some of its biggest money-saving provisions. Where were they last summer?"

Hingis rips Pierce for first Grand Slam title

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia — Martina Hingis claimed her first Grand Slam championship as if it were her birthright, becoming the youngest winner of a major title in 110 years by thrashing Mary Pierce 6-2, 6-2 Saturday in the Australian Open final.

Displaying a dazzling array of shots, the 16-year-old named after Martina Navratilova fulfilled a lifetime of expectations and training by overwhelming the 1995 champion.

So light on her feet while Pierce plodded heavily, Hingis showed off all her precocious talent with overheads, lunging volleys and groundstrokes that clipped the lines.

From the first two points she won, both on overheads, to the final forehand she ripped into an open court to complete a run of 10 straight points, Hingis exhibited a variety and maturity far beyond her years.

A few days after she fell off a horse named Magic Girl, Hingis played as if that ought to be her nickname. Of all her shots against Pierce, none captured that quality more than a backhand drop shot Hingis flicked from the baseline that hit the net cord and trickled over to give her a 3-0 lead in the first set.

Though Hingis started off nervously, fending off three break points in the opening game, she yielded only two points in winning the next four games to take a 5-0 lead.

Pierce finally held serve and broke Hingis, but the Swiss teen broke back and breezed through the second set to close out the match in 59 minutes and complete a perfect run through the tournament without dropping a set.

"It's tough when the person on the other side of the net is there for every ball, making great shots off my great shots," said the 22-year-old Pierce. "It's weird because you don't think she's going to get to some balls, and she does and hits great shots.

"I was just one level too low to compete."

Hingis' mother, Melanie Molitor, who named her for Navratilova and has coached her to become a champion like her, leaped from the stands to embrace her daughter.

Midland Lee girls eye playoff berth; Rebels stop OHS

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The Midland Lee boys and girls basketball teams swept Odessa High at Chaparral Center Friday night, leaving the Lady Rebels within one victory of clinching a state playoff berth while the boys moved to within one game of making a run for a playoff berth.

The Lady Rebels, bombed in 27 fourth quarter points for a 61-57 win over the Lady Bronchos in a battle for second place. The Lee girls are now 8-2 in the District 4-5A race and owners of sole possession of second place as OHS fell to 7-3 and into third place.

The Rebel boys finally had a fourth quarter that didn't turn sour, bombing the Bronchos 20-7 in the final period of play to move to 3-5 and one game out of third place where Odessa Permian resides at 4-4 after a loss to 8-0 Midland High.

The Lee girls trailed OHS by as many as 10 points, 38-28, with 2:58 left in the third quarter, but took complete control of the game in the fourth quarter as Tamika Thurman scored nine of her 11 points and Keke Strambler scored eight of her 10 points in the final quarter to seal the win.

"It's just that we want to go to the playoffs," Thurman said. "We've now got sole possession of second place and we now go to work for first place. When we were down by 10, I think everyone put it in perspective and just went and got the job done."

Leading scorer Jamie Rhoads canned 16 points, and she's chomping at the bits for a return to the state playoffs.

"I got to go to the playoffs as a sophomore, but I didn't get to go last year," Rhoads said. "It's not fun sitting at home when the other teams are playing. I rather go (to the playoffs) than not. I think we came out a little overconfident, but we got it (the lead) back."

MHS boys clinch playoff spot with overtime win at Permian

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Perhaps it's appropriate that in a season where everything has seemed to go right for the Midland High boys basketball team that the Bulldogs clinch a playoff berth in a place where everything has seemed to go wrong.

If the Bulldogs were due for a fall from their lofty perch atop District 4-5A, the perfect time and place would have been Friday night at Odessa Permian, the last team to defeat Midland High. The Bulldogs have been historically snake-bit in the Permian gym, and that tradition looked likely to continue in the final minutes when the Panthers appeared to have momentum before Midland High forced overtime.

When it reached overtime, not only did the Bulldogs have to forge ahead without suspended leading scorer Kirby Lemons, but senior Jon Stephenson, whose 3-point basket tied the game, fouled out midway through the extra period.

No problem. After a pair of three-pointers, Midland High hit nine of 12 free throws to come out of Permian with a 67-62 win which clinched no worse than a third-place district finish for the Bulldogs, now 23-3 overall and 8-0 in 4-5A.

"We've been over here 976 times and (the Panthers) have beaten us 975," said Midland High coach Jack Stephenson, obviously exaggerating, but nonetheless making apparent his frustration over past failures at Permian.

While the Bulldogs were clinching a playoff berth, the MHS girls were keeping their playoff hopes alive with another hard-fought win, beating Permian 69-63. The Lady Dawgs are now 5-4 in district and a game-and-a-half out of a playoff spot.

The MHS boys still have four district games left, including a rematch with second-place Abilene Cooper on the road, but the victory over Permian might be as symbolic of their season as any game. Neither team enjoyed much of a comfortable lead in a physical, anything goes contest in which one player fouled out and another was removed after drawing a technical foul.

Lady Chaps hope to keep rolling tonight vs. Odessa

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Since their stunning 23-point loss at Howard College more than a week ago, the Midland College Lady Chaparrals have been rolling over the competition.

A 101-53 blowout of Frank Phillips College Monday and then a 98-76 rolling at New Mexico Junior College Thursday are examples of their recent march through Western Junior College Athletic Conference competition. One can say the Lady Chaps got a major wake-up call with the loss and are making opponents pay.

Seventh-ranked Midland College (18-3, 8-1 WJCAC) would like to continue that roll when it faces Odessa College at 7:30 tonight at the OC Sports Center in a WJCAC battle.

Team defense has been a key to the Lady Chaps' recent success, and that defense has enabled the MC offense to prosper, especially the inside game where Fatou Cisse and Ndiasse Ndiaye have capitalized. Cisse lit up NMJC for 33 points, while Ndiaye added 18 in the win.

MC coach Ron Jones was on a recruiting trip in Austin and could not be reached for comment Friday. He has said that no matter who the opponent is, every game is an opportunity to show some improvement.

"We have to concentrate on ourselves. We can't worry too much about other teams. Obviously we make adjustments for different teams but I want to see us compete and I want to see us play with the intensity we should and I want to see it for 40 minutes," Jones said.

"It's been a rough year," is the way first-year OC coach Stephie Thomas described the 3-18 season.

The bumpy road for OC (2-7 in the WJCAC) continued Thursday when it lost a 66-61 decision to Frank Phillips College. A game in which the Lady Wranglers started off slow but then made a comeback, only to come up short. Just another bad break in the long season.

"It seems like we always have adversity," said Thomas, who didn't make the trip to Frank Phillips because of recent knee surgery. "It's like we either have somebody injured or somebody land in the hospital where we have to play short. When we played

Favre knew all along he would take Green Bay to Super Bowl

By Peter May
The Boston Globe

NEW ORLEANS — He is so close not only to where he wants to be, but where he said he should be and would be. The Super Bowl has been a means to an end this year for Brett Favre, not simply an unexpected mid-winter treat. He is not simply happy to be playing in it. He never once considered the unpalatable alternative. He belongs here.

The derring-do Packers quarterback, perhaps more than anyone else on the team, embodies Green Bay's season-long quest to win the Super Bowl. His January itinerary always included a week in New Orleans. His motto all season has been 'Super Bowl or Bust.'

Before going into drug detox last summer for an addiciton to painkillers, he told anyone who'd listen, "I'm going to beat this, I'm going to win the Super Bowl and if you don't believe me, bet against me. Because you'll lose."

Sunday evening, Favre will finally get the opportunity to deliver on his promise. Most are not betting against him.

"I'm ready for anything," he says. "I know what I have to do. It will be the biggest game I've ever played in and I'm not going to screw it up."

Favre is coming off his second straight MVP season despite the problem with the painkillers and some well documented difficulties his siblings had with the law. Football became his escape, his cocoon. He channeled everything into it and the results were stunning.

He led the Packers to an NFC-best 13-3 record. He threw 39 touchdown passes and oversaw the game's most prolific and productive offense. He has gotten them to the league's marquee game

Goodwin breaks two 4-5A marks

Staff Report

ODESSA — Midland Lee's Amber Goodwin broke two district records as the Rebel and Midland High swim teams made impressive showings on preliminary day of the District 4-5A Swimming Championships Friday at the Odessa Permian Swimming Pool.

Goodwin, a junior, busted her own marks in the Girls' 50-yard freestyle and the 100-yard backstroke. Goodwin's time of 24.62 in the freestyle broke the standard of 24.66 set in February of 1996. Goodwin's time of 58.73 in the backstroke cut down the record time of 59.05. That record had also been established in February of 1996.

Goodwin also helped two Lee relay teams qualify for today's finals which start at 11 p.m. In all Lee and MHS claimed 60 spots in the 22 event finals.

Joining Goodwin with best marks after the first day included another two-event top qualifier. Midland High's Kristin Carson was finished with the fastest times in the Girls' 200 Free and 500 free. Other winners included Midland High's Paul Uriquita (100 Butterfly), Matt Sullivan (Boys 200 Free) and Lee's Scott Strauss (100 backstroke).

Two other winners were two freshmen. Lee Freshman's Greg Strauss, competing for Lee's varsity won the Boys' 500 Free. Midland Freshman's, competing for the Lady AquaDogs, Erin Irons took the top qualifying mark of the Girls' 200 individual Medley.

Mustangs fall to Lub. Christian

So close.

The Midland Christian Mustangs blew a 17-point lead midway through the second quarter and saw their chances of wrapping up a district title take a slip in a 60-56 loss to Lubbock Christian Friday night.

Midland Christian can still win the district if the Mustangs can beat Lubbock Trinity on Tuesday.

"We have our work cut out for us," said MC coach Byron Myers about winning the district title.

The Mustangs fell into a tie for first place with Lubbock Christian as both teams have a 2-1 mark in district play.

John Koss was the only player in double figures for the Mustangs with a game-high 26 points.

Trinity boys lose to Faith Christian

The Trinity Chargers dropped their first district game to El Paso Faith Christian, 68-55, Friday.

The Chargers only trailed 33-28 at halftime but then were outscored 24-7 in the fourth quarter to make the difference.

Brad Glasscock led Trinity (0-1) with 13 points, Mark Stoltz had 11 and Duncan Roberts added 11. Marc Deshayne led Faith Christian with a game-high 26 points.

Lady Chargers prevail in district

The Midland Trinity Lady Chargers defeated El Paso Faith Christian Academy, 65-17, Friday in TAPPS 1-2A basketball action.

Midland Trinity (17-3, 1-0 in district) got double-digit points from three players, headed by Erica Rougeaux's 17. Heather Bartlett added 14, and Catherine Durbin scored 11.

"We played extremely well from beginning," Trinity head coach Bill Coombes said. "We scored 20 points in the first quarter. That meant it was over early. It was consistent play from all my people."

A win Tuesday against El Paso Jesus Chapel will most likely give Trinity a trip to the TAPPS bi-district round and the lead in the district title race.

Big Spring loses to Sweetwater

SWEETWATER — The Big Spring Steers dropped a 69-48 decision to District 4-4A leader Big Spring Friday night despite 26 points by John Smith.

The Steers weren't helped by a slow start that saw them down 22-7 after the first quarter. Smith was the only player in double figures for Big Spring, which dropped to 12-14 overall and 3-3 in district. Sweetwater remains unbeaten in district with a 6-0 mark.

In junior varsity action, Big Spring won 47-30 over Sweetwater.

King gets second in Tae Kwon-Do

Chris King, a junior at Midland Lee High School, recently took second place in Patterns at the United States Tae Kwon-Do Federation Black Belt National Championships in Denver. King will be an alternate for the USA Team, competing in St. Petersburg, Russia in July.

Also, promoted recently to first degree black belts at Jimenez Takewon-Do Studio were Caleb Graham and Clinton Caudle. Both attend Midland Christian School and will compete at the Junior Black Belt National Championships.

Abilene Cooper at Midland Lee

When: 2 p.m.
Where: Lee Soccer Field in Midland.
Records: Midland Lee is 2-3 overall and 1-1 in District 7. Abilene Cooper is 5-4 and 0-1
Coaches: Midland Lee — John McCulloch; Abilene Cooper — Joel Bundick.
Opponent: Cooper has been the district's cellar dweller with last place finishes over the past two years. The Cougars are 4-28 over that time. That includes a 3-21 district record over that time. This season CHS started the district season with a loss to Abilene High. Tuesday, Cooper lost to Wichita Falls Hirschi in non-district action. Cooper's top three scorers are Brian Foster, Memo Guzman and Courtney Anderson. Keeper Brent Camp has posted three shutouts this season.
Last action: Lee fell for the first time in school history to OHS Tuesday in Odessa. The Rebels outshot OHS, 23-7, but could not convert those shots into goals. "We had 23 shots and didn't score," McCulloch said. "We couldn't the ball in goal and that is a big problem."... The coach said that the Rebs also had a problem adjusting after OHS scored its first goal seven minutes into the game. He said that "We (Lee) weren't in it, mentally."
Notes, quotes: In McCulloch's two years at Lee, the Rebels have outscored the Cougars 16-2 and posted three shutouts in four games... Adrian Castresana leads the team in scoring with three goals... The lack of scoring was a concern for McCulloch coming into today's game. The third year coach also knows that the Cougars will be motivated to kick a Rebel team when it appears to be down. "I'm sure they (the Coogs) heard about the loss to OHS and they will be fired up," McCulloch said. "We have had good practices and are anxious to get on the field."... Lee's striker (forward) Troy Henry has two yellow cards, one more means he will have to sit out a game...
Next game: Lee has the open date next Tuesday. Next Saturday, Lee will travel to Abilene to play Abilene High.

Midland High at Abilene High

When: 2 p.m.
Where: Lee Athletic Complex in Abilene.
Records: Midland High is 5-3 overall and 1-1 in District 7. Abilene High is 5-3, 1-1.
Coaches: Midland High — Tom Esikhati; Abilene High — Hugh McNzies.
Opponent: Abilene High suffered a shootout loss to San Angelo Central on Tuesday. The 1-0 loss (3-1 in the shootout) saw few shots in regulation. AHS features one of the top players in the district, Ahmad Brooks. Marty Palmer, Patrick Garcia and Josh Stearns are tied for the team lead in goals scored (3). Keeper Tony Marquez has four shutouts and has allowed just three goals this season.
Last action: MHS got a huge win over Odessa Permian 2-1 Tuesday. MHS' Scott Kamis broke open a 1-1 tie with a penalty kick in the 67th minute and then withstood a Permian rally for the win. MHS also got a first-half goal from Jerad Fain...
Notes, quotes: Both teams come into the game with identical 5-3, 1-1 marks. This game may very well have implications on the future playoff race. Both MHS and AHS are playoff teams from one season ago and among five teams tied at 1-1 in district play... It is also the second in what is a very demanding three-game stretch (Permian, AHS, Central) for MHS... Getting a win will be big as it was against Permian... "It was a big relief for me," Esikhati said after Tuesday's game. "It is a must win for us because the next game will be tough. We just have to take them one at a time." ...The Bulldogs got off just 12 shots in the win over Permian. Making their own scoring opportunites has been stressed over the past few weeks. "We're still struggling on finishing our shooting," Esikhati said. "That is something that we still have to work on."... Kamis leads the team in goals scored (3) and assists (3)...
Next game: Midland High will host San Angelo Central next Tuesday at 4:30 p.m.

GIRLS

Abilene High at Midland High

When: 2 p.m.
Where: Midland High Soccer Field
Records: Midland High is 5-2-1 overall and 2-0 in District 7. Abilene High is 2-6 and 0-2.
Coaches: Midland High — Scott Hodkinson; Abilene High — Rene Barbee.
Opponent: Abilene High has struggled in their last two district games, going scoreless while allowing five goals. The team's nucleus is strong with two first all-team all-district performers, Andrea Gilbreath (five goals and one assist) and defender Suzanne Bates.
Injuries: MHS — Sweeper Meg Bennett (pulled quadricep), Ann Smith (leg injury) are probable. Illnesses have taken MHS club storm, Jodie Nicholson is questionable.
Last action: Midland High snapped a two-game scoreless streak of their own in the 4-1 win over Permian on Tuesday. Freshman Melinda Baca, scored two goals for MHS. Becky Salgado and Heidi Moore added goals. Hodkinson after the game that the gave the team a needed boost.
Notes, quotes: MHS is 4-0 in the last four games with Permian... AHS will pose problems for MHS, offensively. The Lady Bulldogs' goal tally of four on Tuesday was the most scored since the season opener against SA Lake View... The game is also a must-win with tough battles at San Angelo Central and at Abilene Cooper looming in the not-so distant future... "We have played big in big games," Hodkinson said. "The games are all big in district. That's is what I reminded them of. We have to keep the offense rolling."... Right now the illnesses and injuries have Hodkinson wondering about what his team will look like... "I warned the players about taking it for granted," Hodkinson said. "We have been working on getting some shots off and that is beginning to show. Our numbers haven't been great (at practice) but they are putting in quality time."... With all the injuries and illnesses, Baca and Kim Elger have stepped up their play for MHS. The freshman and sophomore join a senior, Becky Salgado, as performers who stepped up their level of play recently.
Next game: MHS will travel to San Angelo next Tuesday for a 5:30 p.m. battle with Central.

Midland Lee at Abilene Cooper

When: 2 p.m.
Where: Lee Athletic Complex in Abilene.
Records: Lee is 7-2 overall and 1-1 in District 7. Cooper is 7-1, 1-0.
Coaches: Lee — Mike Simpson; Cooper — Claudia Blea.
Opponent: Cooper off the open date on Tuesday. The Lady Cougars defeated Abilene High in district-opening action 3-0. Leading the offensive attack for Cooper are Staci Metcalf with seven goals and Carolyn Poyner and Rachel Welch with five each.
Injuries: Lee - None. Cooper sophomore Abby Clark had surgery Wednesday to remove scar tissue from her ankle. Clark is out for two months.
Last action: Lee defeated Odessa High, 9-0 on Tuesday. Ritha Belizaire scored four goals to raise her season total to 22 for the season. Five other Lady Rebs scored goals for Lee, who has 54 goals in the nine games this season. Lindy Penick and Kristina Farmer are also in double digits in scoring.
Notes, quotes: The game is between two of the tri-champions in District 7 last year. ... Cooper is the three-time defending district champ and with the loss of Clark, Crickett (Holt) will be the third player to play goal for Blea. Cooper's all-district keeper of a year ago, Catherine Weir is still in basketball. ... Cooper has not lost a district game in Abilene over the last two years. Midland Lee or Midland High has never defeated Cooper in Abilene. That will be a factor. "That is a tough place to play," Simpson said. "Anytime you go to Abilene, it is like you start coming from behind.I feel good about our defense. If we play smart soccer we will generate offense."
This is a very important game for the Lady Rebs. A loss today would put Simpson's team in a 1-2 district hole... Belizaire is leading the district in goals by 14... The Rebs and their high-powered offense should come into play. Blea is expecting that. "We will not take them lightly," Blea said. "In every game, everybody will want to beat us. I want to beat the other schools. We want to beat at the top."
After graduating four seniors (including two-time MVP Melissa Butz and Monica Noto) from last year's team and the injury to Clark, Cooper will have to be on its game. "We are concentrating on not making mistakes that we made last year," Blea said. "Not taking teams for granted and communicating more. We want to keep the mental game the entire time."
Next game: Midland Lee gets the open date in district and will not play until Nov. 1 against Abilene High in Midland.

LEE: Senior Rhoads leads Lady Rebels' to victory with 16 points

(From 1B)

OHS super freshman Chanie Sutherland had 24 points while teammate Linda Garcia added 14. Lee did have some problems on the boards as OHS' Shelby Fitzgerald hauled in 17 rebounds.

Nisha Washington scored seven of her 13 points in the first half for Lee to keep the Lady Rebels in the game. Keke Strambler's two treys to open the fourth quarter when Lee was trailing 38-34 set the tone for the stretch run.

"We still have two more games to go," said Lee coach Elise Kail. "I won't be happy until we finish the second half at 6-0. But we do have a little room to breathe right now with two games to go."

Lee's girls, however, are in the playoffs with one more victory.

The Lee boys, on the other hand, had a dog fight with the Bronchos, falling behind by nine points in the first quarter and scored only eight points in the second period. But junior Charncy Ephriam scored 12 of his 21 points in the fourth quarter as Lee ended with a blitz.

The Rebels have had problems holding fourth quarter leads and have been tumbling in the fourth period.

"All we had to do was run our plays," Ephriam said. "Coach (Jon House) told me to stay low and for us to get the ball inside and they got it to me."

Coach House added, "We had our bad period in the second quarter. But that's better than in the fourth. We had 16 minutes to figure it all out and that's better than trying to figure it out in the last two minutes."

Robert House had 11 points and Amron Washington had 10 points, all in the first half. Dreyfus Andrews was playing with a broken rib. He was sore after the game while removing tape from his battered body. He took a punishing charge early in the game.

Matt Meyer, coming off an ankle injury, scored 12 points, eight in the second half.

"I'm starting to come back. The ankle isn't 100 percent, but it feels better than it has in a long time," Meyer said. "The leadership hasn't always been there on this team and I'm an emotional type of player. I hope I can help in that area and do something when the chance is there on the floor."

Guard Brandon Skiles, who is getting better as the season goes along, scored 21 points for the Bronchos while Derric Workman, the league's MVP a year ago, popped in 20. But Lee hammered OHS on the boards, 30-20, with Ephriam coming away with nine, just missing the double-double.

The Lee girls can clinch a playoff berth with a win over Abilene Cooper Tuesday at home while the Lee boys could really climb back into the race with a win over second place Cooper since Permian will still have to play the Cougars. But Lee will have to do that miracle on the road. Still, there is a road for the Rebels after Friday night. That road is almost gone for the Bronchos.

MHS: Bulldogs clinch playoff berth with win over Odessa Permian

(From 1B)

"This is the roughest game I've ever seen in my life," said Stephenson, who has been coaching Midland High for 18 seasons. "I felt comfortable when I looked up there with 30 seconds left and we were up seven points. That's the only time I felt comfortable."

Stephenson couldn't have felt too comfortable in the final minute of regulation when Permian went up 52-49 after Duane Chapman grabbed an offensive rebound and put it back in. On the next possession, though, Jon Stephenson, the coach's son, hit a three-pointer to tie the game. The two teams turned the ball over on ensuing possessions and a 3-point shot by Permian's Cornell Hicks was off the mark to force the extra period.

Midland High won the tip to open overtime and on its first possession sophomore Charles Tatum hit a 3-pointer for a 55-52 lead. Chapman answered with a layup for Permian, but after Ross Nobles hit a trey to give the Bulldogs a 58-54 advantage, the Panthers (15-11 overall, 4-4 in district) couldn't pull any closer than five points.

Permian's Jovant Green was called for a technical after arguing with officials with 2:28 left in overtime and from there the game went to the free-throw-line. Tatum hit three of four free throws while Stephenson, Russell Gardner and Nobles all hit both of their attempts to give the Bulldogs a cushion.

"I have never, ever had a good game in this gym," said Gardner, the senior center who led Midland High with a season-high 20 points. "I wanted to go out with a bang as a senior. When we get Kirby back we'll have all our big guns and it'll be tough to handle us."

Tatum had 17 points for the Bulldogs while another sophomore, Jay Christian, added 12 points and led Midland High with seven rebounds. Hicks led Permian with 23 points.

The girls game was just as competitive and the win probably more significant to the Lady Dawgs, who will probably have to run the table to even merit consideration for a playoff spot. A repeat of Tuesday's debacle against Midland Lee when MHS never found any rhythm didn't appear likely, but the Lady Dawgs trailed 36-34 at halftime and were without two starters due to illness.

Trailing by three early in the third quarter, Midland High turned up its pressing defense and went on a 15-0 run which lasted into the fourth quarter. by the time it was over, the Lady Dawgs led 51-39. Permian did score eight straight points late in the fourth quarter to close the gap to 62-58, but Kim Paschall scored on an offensive rebound and Midland High hit five of six free throws in the final 1:09 to seal the win.

"I feel a lot better," said Midland High coach Jim Raughton, who was dissatisfied with his team's effort against Lee, particularly the Lady Dawgs' shooting. "We needed this. We came out and shot the ball a whole lot better."

A good deal of that shooting came from senior forward Jamie Nicholson, who hit all five of her shots in the first quarter on her way to a career-high 21 points. Nicholson replaced Deborah Landreth in the starting lineup after finding out Landreth was ill and couldn't start, even though she did eventually play.

The Lady Dawgs were also without point guard Jodie Mitchell, who suited up for the game but didn't play because she was recovering from oral surgery. But Nicholson more than picked up the slack for her absent teammates.

"If I can come out and start shooting right away, I usually do pretty well," Nicholson said. "I was open and the shots were just falling."

They were certainly falling with more frequency than against Lee. Midland High's 27-for-67 performance against Permian might not win any marksmanship awards, but it was a good sight better than the 12-for-73 performance against Lee.

Nicholson led four scorers in double figures. Paschall and Talitha Belcher scored 12 apiece while Tarhonda Belcher added 10. Amber Zenger led Permian with 11 points.

In junior varsity action, Midland High beat Permian, 67-53. Misty Browning led the way for the Lady Dawgs with 17, while Morgan Kelley and Sonia Castillo added 11 each. MHS is now 19-5 overall and 9-0 in district.

Spurs add weight to Mavs' sinking vessel

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Dominique Wilkins came off the bench to score 24 points and lead the San Antonio Spurs to a 97-87 victory over the Dallas Mavericks on Friday night.

Wilkins was joined in double figures by Vinny Del Negro with 21 points, Sean Elliott with 16 and Avery Johnson with 14.

Dallas, which has dropped three straight games, was led by Chris Gatling with 25 points. Jim Jackson added 22 and Michael Finley 17.

San Antonio, which came into the game as the NBA's second-lowest scoring team at 88.2 points per game, enjoyed its best first half of the season, leading 60-46 at intermission.

The Spurs stretched the lead to 63-46 on a Vernon Maxwell 3-point shot with 10: 18 to play in the third quarter

Kings 107, 76ers 92

PHILADELPHIA — Mitch Richmond scored 33 points, including 21 in the second half, as the Sacramento Kings sent the Philadelphia 76ers to their 12th straight home loss, 107-92 Friday night.

Corliss Williamson added 18 points for the Kings, who defeated the 76ers for the fourth straight time. Olden Polynice had 16 points and 14 rebounds.

Hawks 117, Bullets 105 OT

ATLANTA — Henry James made eight 3-pointers and scored a career-high 26 points and Steve Smith scored 13 points in the final 2: 57 of overtime to lead Atlanta its 18th straight home victory.

The Hawks outscored the Bullets 19-7 in the extra period to win their fourth overtime game, all at home, in the last 10 games.

Hornets 113, Knicks 104, OT

CHARLOTTE — Glen Rice scored 34 points and made a crucial 3-pointer to tie the game late in regulation as Charlotte defeated New York in overtime.

Rice tied the game by making a 3-pointer with 7.7 seconds left, then blocked a shot by Allan Houston at the final buzzer to send the game into overtime.

Trail Blazers 115, Suns 105

PHOENIX — Gary Trent had a career-high 24 points and 13 rebounds as Portland defeated Phoenix.

Kenny Anderson added 22 points and a season-high 15 assists in the Blazers' 10th victory in their last 13 outings.

Chicago's Belle promises new start, more cooperation

CHICAGO (AP) — Albert Belle, whose angry outbursts with the Cleveland Indians often overshadowed his powerful performances on the field, pledged Friday to be more cooperative in dealings with fans and reporters.

Will Belle, who signed a $55 million, five-year contract with the Chicago White Sox, actually be kinder and gentler? Or is it just talk during the winter days before spring training?

Belle did sit for an hour Friday during the team's winter convention and patiently answer all questions from all directions.

"It's a great opportunity to start over and try to work things out," he said. "There is definitely a happy medium out there. And I'll work hard to meet that happy medium."

Belle already has appeared in a team commercial with Frank Thomas to push season tickets and was greeted by loud applause when introduced to fans Friday.

Belle hit 98 home runs the past two seasons, but also kept getting in trouble for his behavior. He was sued last month by a photographer who said Belle threw a baseball at him last spring.

He's been fined $50,000 for screaming at a television reporter at the World Series and drew a suspension and fine for running over Milwaukee second baseman Fernando Vina in the basepath last season.

Belle has been suspended five times in his career. He pleaded guilty after chasing teen-age trick-or-treaters in his van in response to them throwing eggs at his home on Oct. 31, 1995.

Belle, signed not only to give the White Sox a shot at the postseason but to boost sagging attendance, said he believes the city's fans will embrace him.

After all, they've gone pretty much nuts over another player whose had his share of trouble — Chicago Bulls forward Dennis Rodman.

Randle bites AHS for 32 Lady Bobcats keep rolling

Staff Report

The San Angelo Lady Bobcats stayed in first place in the District 4-5A basketball race Friday night with a 58-49 win over Abilene High.

San Angelo climbs to 8-1 in the league race, one game ahead of second place Midland Lee. The two teams do not meet again this season after splitting games.

Lady Bobcat Kanesha Randle lit the boards with 32 points, hitting 13 of 16 free throws. Patrina Pearson added 17 points. Tracy Horrell had a great game for the stubborn Lady Eagels with 26 points.

On the boys side, Abilene High, with a narrow 62-58 win over San Angelo, moved to 3-5 to stay in the playoff hunt as John Lackey had 17 points and Odis Dalton 12. Terrance Fields had 17 for the Bobcats.

Abilene High is tied with Midland Lee for fourth place. Lee faces Cooper Tuesday while the Eagles travel to Midland High. Both AHS and Lee need to make up a game on 4-4 Odessa Permian, a loser to Midland High in overtime Friday.

Patriots humiliated in only other Super Bowl appearance

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS — As he rode in from the airport, Steve Grogan tried to recognize landmarks he had seen 11 years ago on his journey from exhilaration to embarrassment.

There it was, the Superdome. The scene of the crime. The place where New England failed miserably in its effort to overcome a powerful enemy and win its first Super Bowl championship.

"I still have to this day some great feelings of being here and being a part of it," Grogan said. "I don't know if anybody could have beaten that team that day."

That team was the Chicago Bears.

They lost just one game all season, and they shut out their other two playoff opponents. So it was hardly a shock when they beat the Patriots 46-10. To this day, only San Francisco's 55-10 win over Denver in 1990, also in the Superdome, was more decisive.

On Sunday, the anniversary of that loss, another Patriots team returns to that stadium for another Super Bowl against another great defense, that of the Green Bay Packers.

The current team has exceeded expectations, just like the 1985 club. That group defied the odds, becoming the first team to reach the championship game with three consecutive playoff victories on the road.

"It was an unbelievable feeling during warmups," said Grogan, who replaced an ineffective Tony Eason at quarterback during that game. "Then it was a long afternoon."

The Patriots got the ball for the first time on the Chicago 19-yard line after Walter Payton's fumble. But on the next play, tight end Lin Dawson suffered a knee injury that knocked him out of the game. And on their first three plays, Eason threw incompletions. So the Patriots settled for Tony Franklin's 36-yard field goal.

Then Chicago took over, scoring on four of its next five possessions to take a 23-3 halftime lead. By intermission, the Patriots had just one first down, two completions and minus-19 net yards. The lead swelled to 44-3 with three minutes left in the third quarter.

"We just played against maybe one of the great football teams that ever played in this league," said Dante Scarnecchia, the only Patriots assistant back for another shot at the Super Bowl.

Grogan entered the game with 5:08 left in the second quarter after all six of Eason's passes were incomplete. He was more accurate but paid a painful price. Richard Dent, Dan Hampton, Steve McMichael and William "The Refrigerator" Perry took turns pounding him to the hard artificial surface.

"Somebody told me they did a film study of the game," said Grogan, who arrived here Thursday for Super Bowl week events "I was told I was knocked down on 28 of the 33 times I threw the ball."

New England Patriots' quarterback Steve Grogan gestures in disgust after being sacked by the Chicago Bears in Super Bowl XX in New Orleans. The Patriots are back in the Super Bowl after an absence of 11 years.

"We were steamrolled," center Pete Brock said. "I was laying in the training room after the game with ice on my knees and I said, 'God, what hit us?' "

For some, the agony lingers.

John Hannah, the Hall of Fame guard, could barely lift his arms in that game because of shoulder problems. He took the loss particularly hard.

He hopes the Patriots beat the Packers on Sunday "and erase the memory of the '85 team ... and get this cloud away."

"There's still pangs of that loss that haunt you today," Brock said. "I think people go into insane asylums because they continue to have regrets about things that they did. Sometimes you've just got to put it behind you and forge on."

The day after the loss, there was another shock when the team voted to accept a voluntary drug testing program. And two days later, the Boston Globe published the names of six Patriots who reportedly admitted to coach Raymond Berry that they had used drugs.

"It tarnished all of us, even the guys that weren't involved," said linebacker Andre Tippett, now the team's director of player resources. "It hurt us even from an endorsement standpoint. A lot of guys had things going and they were put on hold because companies didn't know which names would come out."

Scarnecchia, now a defensive assistant, handled tight ends and special teams 11 years ago.

"It's hard to be satisfied saying, 'Well, we got there.' You want to win this game more than anything else," he said. "So whether you lose as badly as we lost in that game or whether you lose closely, it's a tremendous disappointment because you realize very quickly that this is really fleeting. You may never get back to one of these."

The Patriots went into that game as 10-point underdogs. The spread against Green Bay is 14, and the Packers have the NFL's highest-scoring offense and stingiest defense.

Will these Patriots, who have no players left from their other Super Bowl team, be humiliated again?

"They're two different teams. The only similarity is they're playing in the same building we played in," said Brock, pointing to the Patriots' strong offense and peaking defense. "I don't think it will get out of hand too soon."

"The Patriots match up very well against this team," Grogan said. "I'm concerned about them not being able to play a total game offensively to this point in the playoffs. If they fall behind early, the Packers' pass rushers will be tough to stop."

Grogan planned to watch the game on TV. He said he didn't try too hard to get tickets. Brock stayed home.

Yet both former players have some pleasant memories of that miserable day.

"The best was probably the touchdown pass I threw to Irving Fryar late in the game," Grogan said. "I just wanted to get us into the end zone one time."

"Yeah," Brock said, "we got beat, but if you give it everything you've got, there's no way you can tell me you don't have the attitude of a champion."

Local food perplexes Pats, Pack

By MARY FOSTER
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS — They come from places where fried cheese is exotic and baked beans are a claim to fame.

The Green Bay Packers and New England Patriots may not know a roux from a stew, but by now they're more than a little familiar with crawfish, crabs, oysters and alligators.

"Since I got here, I've eaten more reptiles than I ever knew existed," said Green Bay Packers guard Lindsay Knapp. "I even liked most of them."

Knapp, a 6-foot-6, 300 pounder, doesn't back down from much.

He put away turtle soup, boiled crawfish, seafood gumbo, and was surprised to learn that, except for the turtle, he wasn't really dining on reptiles.

"A lot of people don't know how to classify seafood," said chef Paul Prudhomme, of K-Paul's Louisiana Kitchen. "And when you have people who are suspicious of anything that's not oblong like a potato or round like a steak, some of our food can take a little getting used to."

At the Gumbo Shop, where 16-ounce bottles of Tabasco sauce are as much a part of the table top as salt and pepper, players could sample three kinds of gumbo: shrimp and crab, chicken and andouille (a heavily smoked and spicy pork sausage), and a specialty gumbo.

"Most of them started out kind of cautious," general manager Guy Telliteri said. "Once they tried it, they liked it and would end up getting other things. But I'd have to say a lot of them were a little suspicious at first."

Once they got rolling, many players were downright adventurous.

"My stomach may not hold out with all the spice, but my mouth is in heaven," said Packers tight end Keith Jackson.

Mike Jones, the New England Patriots' defensive end, couldn't get enough gumbo or crawfish etouffee — "mudbugs" in a rich brown sauce.

"It's got a taste I never tasted before," Jones said.

That could be a problem.

"Some of us may have trouble when we have to weigh in this week," said Dave Richards, a 6-5, 315-pound Patriots tackle. "We've discovered things like jambalaya and etouffee and gumbo and are trying to stock up while we can."

Some players weren't taking any chances.

"I got the cajun chicken at Popeyes," said Patriots tight end Lovett Purnell. "That's as adventurous as I got. I figure if it's not chicken or beef, we weren't intended to eat it."

Gilbert Brown, the 370-pound Green Bay tackle, agreed.

"I'll probably try some of the other stuff, but I'm pretty much a burger kind of guy," said Brown, who has a Burger King burger named after him.

On the other hand, teammate Gary Brown, a 6-4, 315-pounder, took a chance on everything.

"I didn't get this big by being picky," he said. "Put it on my plate and I'll eat it. This week, I've had brown food, red food, green food and multicolored food, and it was all good."

Pats' Tupa earns keep by imitating Favre

By PAUL NEWBERRY
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tom Tupa doesn't consider himself a quarterback anymore, although he still plays one in practice.

This week, he's Brett Favre.

If the New England Patriots somehow find a way to contain Green Bay's two-time MVP on Sunday and pull off an improbable Super Bowl upset, they'd better remember to call Tupa up to the podium to share the glory.

Tupa has been doing double duty since the playoffs began. Not only is he the New England punter, but he's been working as the scout team quarterback to give the Patriots a better chance at stopping one quick-footed quarterback after another.

First, it was Pittsburgh's Kordell Stewart, then Jacksonville's Mark Brunell and now Favre.

"It's just a part of the game," Tupa said with a shrug, sitting alone during a media gathering this week. "Somebody's got to do it. I could care less if I get any credit for it or not. I'm just trying to help the team."

It's not as if Tupa is a complete novice at quarterback. He played the position at Ohio State, and he started 11 games for Arizona in 1991. But after playing sparingly with Indianapolis in 1992, he began to focus on punting full time.

"Hey, that part of the game is behind me," said Tupa, who has thrown only three passes the last four seasons. "I'm a punter now."

Tupa began kicking full time with Cleveland in 1994, and signed with the Patriots this season solely to fill that role, although he could fill in at quarterback in a desperate situation. In fact, Tupa is listed as the backup to Drew Bledsoe to free up a spot on the New England roster for another player. Scott Zolak is actually considered the No. 2 quarterback and handled the scout duties during the regular season.

"I wouldn't say I'm as mobile as Brunell," the 30-year-old Tupa said, grinning at the obvious. "I just get back there and try to run around a little bit."

Everyone else on the Patriots says he's been doing a little more than just running around.

"He's given us a great look in practice this week. We know if we can stop Tupa, we can stop Favre on Sunday," linebacker Chris Slade said. "Tom is mobile. He used to be a quarterback, you know. He's experienced and he knows what he's doing back there. He's pretty athletic, pretty fast."

OK, so Tupa is hardly as talented as Favre, having thrown 24 interceptions and only 10 touchdown passes during his career. Still, Bill Parcells made a point to single out Tupa's unsung work during the coach's final news conference Friday.

"He's a very athletic guy himself. He's maneuverable," Parcells said. "He's tried to simulate Favre on the last seven or eight practices with the little idiosyncrasies he has. Tom has studied those and tried to bring them to the practice field and I think, in all honesty, he's done a good job."

Assistant head coach Bill Belichick said Tupa's work was uncanny prior to the AFC championship game against Jacksonville. Brunell was kept in check the entire game, and the Patriots won 20-6.

Bungee-jumper dies at Superdome

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — After a relatively calm week, the Super Bowl was jarred by the death of a bungee-jumper who plunged to her death while practicing for a halftime routine in the Superdome, where the Super Bowl will be held.

Laura Patterson of Sarasota, Fla., was pronounced dead of massive head injuries late Thursday. She was one of 750 people rehearsing for the halftime show.

Patterson struck her head on the stadium floor after leaping from the uppermost Terrace Level, more than 100 feet above the field.

"She jumped and, when she came back up, she was limp," said Eddie Chelette, a volunteer stage hand. "She hit her head hard."

Jones sizzles at Phoenix Open, ties mark at 16-under par for two rounds

By Mel Reisner
AP Sports Writer

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Steve Jones took a moment to acknowledge his new place in the PGA record book after two brilliant rounds at the Phoenix Open.

Then it was back to the business at hand — finishing well and winning his first title since last year's U.S. Open.

"It's kind of neat anytime you do something like that," Jones said Friday of his 16-under-par 126, tying the PGA Tour record for the first 36 holes. "That adds a little to your tournament. But the main thing is you've got to settle in and concentrate on each shot the next two days and wrap it up."

Tommy Bolt started a tournament with 126 strokes in 1954, Paul Azinger matched that in 1989, and John Cook and Rick Fehr did the same last year. The 72-hole record for the 6,992-yard TPC of Scottsdale, which opened in 1987, is 21-under by Mark Calcavecchia in 1989.

Jones had a 9-under 62 for openers, and led Nick Price by two shots. Other challengers emerged during the second round, and he outshot all but one with a 64, taking a five-shot lead.

"Hopefully it's tougher to follow one good round with a second one," Jones said. "I hope it's easier after two. But nothing is easy out here. You take what you can get."

Tommy Towles and David Duval, who started 5-under, each made a run.

Towles had nine birdies and reached 13-under at one point before bogeying two of the last three holes and falling into a tie with Duval at 131.

"I still gave myself the birdie putts; they just didn't seem to drop," Towles said about his closing moments on the front nine. "Coming down the last couple of holes there on (Nos.) 7 and 9, I had a couple of 4-footers for par — routine for most people — and somehow I seemed to screw them up."

Duval had a 65 on the strength of seven birdies and one bogey.

Azinger, the 1987 Phoenix winner, shot his way into contention with a 63, the only score better than Jones' on Friday. But he had too much ground to make up and was six shots off the lead in a tie with Jesper Parnevik.

"There are horse for courses, and maybe this is one of those for me," he said about his usual strong play at Scottsdale.

Calcavecchia, a two-time winner, Fehr, Fulton Allem and Woody Austin pulled in with 134s, with Jeff Maggert and Mark Brooks at 135.

Tiger Woods, trying for another title after winning the season-opening Mercedes Championships and then skipping the Bob Hope, shot a second straight 68 and was in an 11-player cluster at 136. The group also included Price, who shot 72.

Seventy-three players made the cut, with defending champion Phil Mickelson and 15 others bringing up the rear at 141.

Justin Leonard, who extended Mickelson to a three-hole playoff before losing last year, missed out this year by shooting 144.

Among others who missed the cut were 1988 champion Sandy Lyle, Tom Watson, Ben Crenshaw and Grant Waite, who set the Scottsdale course record with a 60 last year.

Those remaining faced the tall order of catching Jones, who has been in the top 10 of both tournaments this year.

Jones started on the back nine with three straight pars. His pace changed dramatically when he knocked an 8-iron within 4 1/2 feet with his second shot on the par-5 13th and holed the putt. He birdied the next hole, then eagled No. 15 with a 20-foot putt to shave four strokes in three holes.

Jones chipped in for birdie on No. 17 and reached 15-under on his first hole after the turn, when his approach shot landed 2 feet from the pin.

He took his only bogey of the tournament when he three-putted from 25 feet on No. 2, but finished strongly with short birdie putts on the sixth and ninth holes.

Stars shine in 5-2 triumph over Caps

By Mike Heika
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

LANDOVER, Md. — The challenged trio came through Friday night, answering the charges of coach Ken Hitchcock and leading the Stars to a 5-2 victory against the Washington Capitals.

Benoit Hogue, who has fast climbed out of Hitchcock's doghouse, had another strong game and contributed an assist.

Goalie Arturs Irbe, who has felt the nip of rookie Roman Turek at his heels for the past month, had 36 saves to push his record to 5-6-1.

And $3 million winger Pat Verbeek took his demotion off a scoring line in stride by chalking up two assists and helping the Stars' "fourth" line of Verbeek, Grant Marshall and Brent Gilchrist earn the title of top line for the night.

"I thought he was great and I thought that line was great," Hitchcock said. "We have four lines, but we don't really have a fourth line. They had a strong night tonight."

Chip in another solid performance by center Mike Modano, who had a goal and an assist to give him 41 points on the season; add a steady job by the third line of Dave Reid (goal and an assist), Guy Carbonneau and Todd Harvey; mix in a 2-for-6 night by the power play and you have a complete road game.

The Stars finish a road sweep (5-0-2) of the Atlantic Division after going 0-7 vs. the same teams last season.

"Everyone wants to talk about last season. Last season is over," center Joe Nieuwendyk said. "We played tonight like we have all season on the road, and we got results."

But a review of last season's dismal campaign is helpful in understanding why the Stars are successful this year. They yielded 33 goals in seven games to Atlantic Division foes last season. They gave up 12 in seven games this season. In raising their road record to 15-7-2 heading into another road game tonight against the Toronto Maple Leafs, the Stars saw their goals-against average on the road fall to 2.18 per game.

"We just seem to play a more conservative style (on the road)," Irbe said. "I don't know what it is, but we are all more careful, and we are all thinking to do whatever it takes to win."

Irbe clearly showed he was ready to do what it took, stopping a Capitals team that was bent on pushing the play up ice and pounding him with shots from in close.

He was also outstanding when Capitals coach Jim Schoenfeld surprisingly pulled goalie Olaf Kolzig with 2 minutes, 32 seconds remaining — coaches usually wait until the final minute — and the Stars leading 4-2.

Irbe helped hold off a six-man Capitals attack until Reid finally scored an empty-netter with 58 seconds remaining.

"I have had a little time to rest and think, and I think I got a little Windex on my windshield," Irbe said. "I can see more clearly now."

The Stars can say the same, as they are now 2-1-1 on their extended road trip.

Whitaker recovers to knock out Hurtado

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Pernell Whitaker, knocked down twice and his rich payday against Oscar De La Hoya apparently slipping away, knocked out Diobelys Hurtado with a savage barrage to the head in the 11th round at the Convention Center on Friday night.

Whitaker, trailing on all three official cards, retained the WBC welterweight title and will fight De La Hoya in a big-money match April 12 at Las Vegas.

Whitaker, knocked down five seconds into the fight and again in the sixth round, caught the Cuban against the ropes with a left to the head, then followed with seven more smashing lefts as Hurtado was caught on the ropes. Hurtado almost fell out of the ring and then slumped to the canvas. Referee Arthur Mercante immediately stopped the fight and ruled it a knockout.

"It's not over until we say it's over," shouted Whitaker, who for much of the fight showed every one of his 33 years.

It was a fast-paced, rough and dirty fight. Hurtado was penalized a point in the fifth round and again in the seventh for hitting behind the head. Whitaker was penalized a point in the ninth for a similar foul.

Trevino fills spot in Senior Skins event as Palmer battles Cancer

By Ken Peters
AP Sports Writer

KOHALA COAST, Hawaii — Lee Trevino won't be playing against old pal Arnold Palmer, a fixture in the nine years of the Senior Skins, this year.

He'll be playing for him.

Palmer, missing the event for the first time, is recuperating from surgery for prostate cancer.

Trevino, who was bothered by allergies when he has played in the two-day tournament on the Big Island in past years and hadn't planned to return, answered the call to replace Palmer.

"What happened to Arnold was not the way I wanted to play in the Skins Game," Trevino said. "But nothing would please me more than playing for him.

"Last year I didn't play, since I had a problem with my allergies when I came to Hawaii. I thought I'd probably had enough, didn't expect to play in the Skins again.

"Arnold requested me personally, as I understand it, and how could I turn him down?"

The 57-year-old Trevino, who has won a total of $305,000 in five Senior Skins, for players 50 and over, and $435,000 in four regular Skins Games, intends to support Palmer's favorite charity if he wins any money this time.

"I'll be giving money to the children's hospital in Latrobe (Pa.)," Trevino said. "I'm only a stand-in, not playing for myself."

He added with a chuckle, "But if I win any money beyond that, I keep it."

Trevino said that doctors had tested him thoroughly, trying to determine what triggered his allergies in Hawaii.

"You know what they found? That I was allergic to nothing," he said. "But they gave me some medicine to take if it starts bothering me again."

Three-time defending champion Raymond Floyd, Jack Nicklaus and newcomer Hale Irwin will be the other players in the foursome. They play nine holes Saturday and nine more Sunday, with $540,000 at stake.

Trevino sounded as if he didn't expect his game to be very sharp, since he hasn't had time to play much recently, and hasn't been able to shed 20 extra pounds that slow him down.

His mother-in-law has been seriously ill since November, and that family responsiblity took priority over golf.

"I never got in shape, never hit a golf ball," Trevino said. "I was 180, but I'm tipping the scales at 200 now. I'm driving long, putting good, but I'm not as pinpoint with my irons as I used to be. I don't think I have that flexibility. Every shot is a labor."

He has added incentive for the next two days, however.

"I'm going be trying extra hard because I'm playing for Arnold Palmer," Trevino said. "I don't know if I'm going to win anything, but I'm going to be a bulldog out there."

Palmer hopes to play at Masters

By Dan Bollerman
Bloomberg News

ORLANDO -- Legendary golfer Arnold Palmer said he hopes to return to competition at the Masters, less than three months after undergoing successful surgery for prostate cancer.

"I have every intention of being in Augusta," Palmer said. "I don't know if I'll play or not, but it's my intention to be playing."

If Palmer plays, it'll be his 40th Masters out of the past 43, although he hasn't made the cut since 1983. This year's tourney runs from April 10-13.

Palmer, 67, wouldn't be the first golfer to return after facing prostate cancer. PGA Senior Tour member Jim Ferree was diagnosed with the disease in 1991. After radiation therapy, the 65-year-old Ferree has won $956,270 in 118 events since 1992.

"I do expect to play some competitive golf in the future," said Palmer in his first public appearance since the Jan. 15 surgery. "How soon will depend on my recovery or my game."

NCAA officials impressed by D-FW campus proposal

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

GRAPEVINE (AP) — The NCAA's hunt for a new home wrapped up two days in the Dallas-Fort Worth area Friday with officials talking about building its headquarters near the nation's second-busiest airport.

Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport officials, working with the chambers of commerce for both cities, have offered the NCAA three undeveloped land plots. Each would be a campus-like environment featuring office space, meeting facilities and the Hall of Champions.

"We wanted the communities to be somewhat creative in their proposals, and the concept of putting them all together and having a campus environment certainly does that," NCAA executive director Cedric Dempsey said.

Dempsey and other NCAA officials toured the region for two days. They were in Denver earlier in the week and will visit Kansas City and Indianapolis next week. A decision is expected this spring.

While the facilities are a top priority, Dempsey said other major concerns are quality of living, cost of living and air access.

"The winning bid will rank high on those three criteria, but the deciding factor likely will be which city offers the best tax breaks and other financial incentives," Dempsey said.

The NCAA has been based in the Kansas City suburbs since 1951, currently Overland Park. Dempsey decided last year to use the February 2000 expiration of its lease as a chance to relocate, or maybe get a better deal in Kansas City.

"What we're trying to do is free as many resources as we can to give money back to the membership," he said.

Dempsey got the idea after seeing Kansas City and Dallas spar for the Big 12 offices. Dallas won, in part because the Big 12 was offered a $3.75 million incentive package.

Dallas Chamber of Commerce president Rick Douglas refused to compare the Big 12 deal to what's being offered to the NCAA.

"It's of a completely different magnitude," Douglas said. "The Big 12 uses less than 10,000 square feet. The NCAA would have about 300,000 square feet."

The NCAA initially considered 50 cities. About 30 proposals were received, and the pool was narrowed to 10. The four finalists were picked in August.

The NCAA has been in the Kansas City area since former executive director Walter Byers brought the operation from the Big Ten offices in Chicago. At the time, it was just Byers and a secretary, but it grew quickly. It now employs more than 250 people.

Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce president Terry Ryan said having the NCAA in the area would offer incredible benefits:

"The site of the NCAA would be reprinted tens of thousands of time through the print media and alluded to tens of thousands of time throughout the course of a year at all athletic contests, from swimming meets to football games," Ryan said.

Grapevine's biggest selling point is the airport. Only O'Hare International Airport in Chicago has as many daily flights.

The heavy traffic also would help the Hall of Champions, which Dempsey said the NCAA wants "to put in an area that will receive considerable exposure and visibility."

Graf's father sentenced

MANNHEIM, Germany (AP) — The judge who sentenced Steffi Graf's father to prison for evading taxes on her earnings says the world's top female tennis player had "no active part" in the schemes.

And Judge Joachim Plass recommended Friday that the investigation against her be dropped. But authorities are not ready to comply.

"... We decide on our own regarding that," said Prosecutor Hubert Jobski, who said the investigation is continuing.

"Steffi is a good ambassador for Germany," the judge said, adding that her father's role in helping her accomplish that "is recognized by the public."

"Peter Graf alone bears most of the responsibility," the judge said after finding him guilty of evading $7.31 million in taxes and attempted evasion of another $1.82 million. Peter Graf, who acted as his daughter's manager, and was accused of evading taxes on her earnings of $42.2 million between 1989 and 1993, was sentenced to three years and nine months in prison.

Chain settles sex discrimination lawsuit for $81.5 million

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Publix Super Markets agreed Friday to pay $81.5 million to settle a class-action lawsuit by 150,000 women who accused the grocery chain of relegating them to dead-end, low-paying jobs.

Publix, the nation's ninth-largest grocer and Florida's biggest private employer, also agreed to allow the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to monitor hiring and promotions for up to seven years.

"This settlement really goes to breaking the glass ceiling in the promotion of women," said Frederico Costales, the EEOC's Florida director.

The settlement applies to all women who worked at any of the 535 Publix stores in Florida, Georgia, South Carolina and Alabama since 1991.

Publix has maintained that it did not have a policy against promoting women and that the allegations arose from an effort by the Food and Commercial Workers union to organize at the nonunion company.

Publix Chairman Howard Jenkins said the settlement was reached "to avoid extensive and prolonged litigation that could have persisted for years, and to allow us to concentrate our efforts on our business."

The lawsuit was brought in 1995 by eight women who accused Publix of passing them over for raises and repeatedly denying them management jobs. They and four others who joined the lawsuit early on said they watched as men with less experience and less seniority got promotions. Some said their requests were met with unwanted sexual advances from managers.

The EEOC later joined the lawsuit, and it was expanded to a class action covering past and current employees. The women were suing for unspecified punitive and compensatory damages, back pay, future earnings and benefits.

Publix said $63.5 million has been earmarked toward paying claims, with the balance going toward training programs, the monitoring program and attorney costs.

Although it can't be determined how much each woman will receive until claims are filed, Publix said the 12 original plaintiffs will receive about $90,000 each. Four of those women are still Publix employees.

"All of them should be very proud of themselves for bringing this case," said Sam Smith, a lawyer for the women.

Administrators target students who register for wrong schools

EUCLID, Ohio (AP) — Five-year-old Quenten Kincaid used to get off the school bus every day and then climb into a car for the rest of his trip home.

That was all a bus driver needed to figure out the boy's secret: Quenten lived in Cleveland but was illegally attending kindergarten in the Euclid public school system.

The driver tipped off school officials, and the boy's mother spent five days in jail last month for fraud.

"I was just trying to put my son in a better environment, better education, smaller room size so he can learn," said Judy Kincaid, 36, a bus driver for the Cleveland schools.

For years, parents around the country have been sneaking their children into other school districts to avoid the often overcrowded, debt-ridden and crumbling urban schools in their own neighborhoods.

But as school funding becomes tighter, districts are cracking down to make sure they are educating only those children whose parents are paying for it with their taxes. It costs districts hundreds of thousands of dollars a year to educate kids who should be attending school closer to home.

In New Jersey, the state School Boards Association said 8,000 to 10,000 students statewide are illegally enrolled in suburban districts to avoid schools in Newark, Camden, Paterson and other urban areas.

In suburban Baltimore, county schools expanded their staff of investigators from three to five this month to hunt down violators.

"It's equivalent to theft," said Illinois state Rep. James Durkin, who has seen plenty of Chicago students enrolled in his suburban district of Westchester. He co-sponsored a law that took effect this month making fraudulent student registration punishable by 30 days in jail and a $500 fine.

"We are having a terrible problem in Illinois just establishing reasonable funding for schools," he said. "When we have people cheating the system, it makes it more difficult and more frustrating for the property taxpayer."

In Quenten's case, the district spent about $275 a month to educate him, most of it from local taxes. Cleveland schools spend $340, but Ms. Kincaid said Euclid offers more. For example, Quenten had his own workbook in Euclid; in his Cleveland kindergarten, he gets photocopies of worksheets.

In Cleveland, "it's a little bit harder because there are more kids in the classroom," Ms. Kincaid said. There are 6,000 students in the Euclid district, compared with 72,000 in Cleveland's schools.

Ohio state Rep. Michael A. Fox, chairman of the House Education Committee, thinks parents shouldn't have to shoulder the blame. Urban schools should be improved so that students have no reason to flee, he said.

Ms. Kincaid "should be given a commendation for caring enough about her child that she would do anything to give him a quality education," said Fox, a frequent critic of the Cleveland schools.

Still, educators say, there is no reason to break the law, and they warn parents they will be on the lookout.

Educators squirm over plan to teach Bible verses

N.Y. Times Service

BOSTON — In Massachusetts, new curriculum frameworks have some educators, school advocates and religious leaders squirming because its list of suggested readings includes various Bible passages.

For public school educators, the recommended curriculum poses the proverbial hot potato: how to teach the Bible as literature without violating the constitutionally mandated separation of church and state.

"It certainly makes people nervous because any little slant, any little nuance could just explode in a teacher's face and suddenly you have someone hitting you with a lawsuit because you were pushing religion on them," said Donna Jelten, a member of a parents' association involved in the Wellesley public schools and a Sunday school teacher at a Christian church in Newton.

'The Bible as a piece of literature has been extraordinarily influential on the literature of the Western world.'
— Sandra Stotsky, Mass. state curriculum writer

Still other educators and school advocates are concerned that the curriculum framework excludes other important religious texts. Why, they ask, teach the Bible, and not the Koran or the Bhagavad Gita, Hinduism's holy book?

But the frameworks' authors say studying the Bible is vital to students' understanding of Western literature. Well-known Bible stories, such as Jonah and the whale or David and Goliath, are necessary to fully grasp the meaning of famous authors who used Biblical stories as metaphors.

Herman Melville's "Moby-Dick," for example, considered by some literary critics to be one of the greatest American novels, is impossible to thoroughly appreciate without some familiarity with the Bible. Among many biblical references in the book: Before the whalers embark on their quest, a minister sermonizes about Jonah and the whale.

"This is a literary list, and the point is that the Bible as a piece of literature has been extraordinarily influential on the literature of the Western world," said Sandra Stotsky, a lead writer of the English portion of the state curriculum frameworks and a research associate at Harvard University and Boston University. "How do you help people understand the allusion to the grapes of wrath if you don't teach that it comes from the Bible?"

However, several public school officials who asked not to be identified said they feared that religious biases could unwittingly be introduced through the teaching of the Bible.

"I assume that there will be safeguards built in that will keep church and state appropriately separate," said June Kuzmeskus, associate director of the Massachusetts Field Center for Teaching and Learning at the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

Most civil libertarians have no qualms about teaching the Bible in public schools as long as it is used as a piece of literature.

"We did take a look at the curriculum frameworks and we had no problems with it as long as the Bible isn't used in worship or in a ritual sense," said John Roberts, director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts.

Stotsky acknowledged that she has heard English teachers say that they don't dare mention the Bible for fear that students will misconstrue them. But she noted that the Bible has already been taught as literature in many public schools, and added that teachers' fears must be "overcome."

Court to consider key religious disputes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Supreme Court that for the first time in history is not predominantly Protestant is poised to tackle two key religious disputes.

The court lost its Protestant majority last year, when Clarence Thomas left a charismatic Episcopal church and — after 25 years — again became an active Roman Catholic.

Justices Antonin Scalia and Anthony M. Kennedy also are Catholics. Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Stephen G. Breyer are Jewish. Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices John Paul Stevens, Sandra Day O'Connor and David H. Souter belong to Protestant denominations.

Justices rarely discuss their religion in public, but 1996 proved an exceptional year. In addition to Thomas' action, Scalia and Breyer spoke out.

In a series of speeches, Scalia urged fellow Christians to pray for "the courage to suffer the contempt of the sophisticated world."

Breyer, addressing a Capitol Hill gathering to commemorate the Holocaust, referred to himself as "a Jew, a judge, a member of the Supreme Court." And he invoked several passages from the Torah.

Do the highest court's decisions reflect the religious scruples of justices themselves?

"Certainly," answered Brent Walker of the Baptist Joint Committee for Public Affairs: "A justice's religious views are part of the decision-making process. It happens all the time."

"Judges come into the process with religious convictions they cannot, and probably ought not, shed," Walker said.

Two cases, one from New York and the other from Texas, will be argued and decided by July. In each, the court will help define Americans' religious freedom and try to clarify government's relationship with religious institutions.

In the New York case, the court will consider reversing its 12-year-old decision that banned public school teachers from offering remedial help at parochial schools.

A ruling in that case could have an impact on other church-state disputes, such as prayer in public schools and tax breaks for parents who send their children to church-run schools.

The Constitution's First Amendment bars the governmental "establishment of religion." But today's court is less likely than in the past to interpret that clause as requiring the strictest separation of church and state.

The amendment's other mention of religion guarantees its "free exercise" — people have a right to put their beliefs into practice. The Texas dispute will focus on the sweep of that right.

The justices will judge the validity of a 1993 law aimed at curbing government interference in the spiritual lives of Americans. The Religious Freedom Restoration Act gives more weight to claims that actions taken by government sometimes improperly restrict religious freedom.

A church in Boerne, Texas, invoked the law after the city thwarted its attempt to build an addition. But city officials say Congress unlawfully usurped power from state and local governments and from the Supreme Court itself.

Some are wary of what the justices may say in both cases.

"The court never has been very sophisticated about religion," said Barry Lynn, a United Church of Christ minister who leads Americans United for Separation of Church and State.

"The justices can make mistakes because they haven't fully appreciated the nation's growing religious diversity," he said. "Our culture largely has been Judeo-Christian, and the court's decisions reflect that."

Friends testify that Routier was a good mother, treated her sons well

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — A week before Darlie Routier's two young sons were fatally stabbed, the driver of a suspicious black car parked and stared at the Routier home, a neighbor testified Friday.

"I was going to approach him to see if there was a problem and he sped off very quickly," Karen Neal said. "I was very concerned."

Ms. Neal, a nurse whose family lives across the street from the Routiers in Rowlett, testified she also saw the black car about a month before the killings and again hours after the slayings.

She said she tried to point it out to police the day of the stabbings.

Mrs. Routier, charged with capital murder in her sons' deaths, says an intruder killed 5-year-old Damon and 6-year-old Devon on June 6 and stabbed her before fleeing through the garage of their suburban home.

Prosecutors allege Mrs. Routier, 27, killed the boys, wounded herself and staged a crime scene.

On the second day of defense testimony, more friends of Mrs. Routier testified she was a loving mother who treated her sons well.

"Darlie had a real good relationship with the boys," said her friend, Julie Clark. "She was very patient with them."

Ms. Clark also disputed the testimony of a prosecution witness who described Mrs. Routier as selfish and materialistic.

"No. Absolutely not," Ms. Clark said.

'She was very patient with them.'
— Julie Clark, friend of Routier.

After her sons were stabbed, Mrs. Routier tried to help Damon by placing wet towels on his wounds, Ms. Clark said, recalling what Mrs. Routier had told her during a hospital visit.

Earlier, prosecution witnesses testified Mrs. Routier hadn't tried to help the bleeding boys.

Though Mrs. Routier suffered from the blues and worried about her weight after her youngest son, Drake, was born in October 1995, she didn't seem extraordinarily depressed, Ms. Clark said.

But in cross-examination, prosecutor Greg Davis read from a passage in Mrs. Routier's journal.

"I hope that one day you will forgive me for what I'm about to do. ... Please do not hate me or think in any way that this is your fault," the journal entry said.

The defense witnesses said they saw Mrs. Routier grieving after her sons' deaths, including when she prepared for a graveside party for what would have been Devon's seventh birthday.

Prosecutor Davis asked LuAnn Black, Mrs. Routier's aunt, about the song "Gangsta's Paradise," being played at the boys' funeral.

"Are you aware that it's about violent crime?" Davis asked.

"No," Ms. Black replied.

But she and others testified the song by rap artist Coolio was a favorite of the boys.

Defense attorneys began the day saying they wanted to question Rowlett police officer Jimmy Patterson, who did not testify for the prosecution.

Patterson had returned to the Dallas area and wasn't available. That angered the defense lawyers, who now expect to call him Monday.

"It just gives (the prosecutors) a chance to prep him and get him ready to testify," defense lawyer Doug Mulder said outside the courtroom.

Mulder wouldn't say what testimony he hopes to elicit from Patterson or whether he considers him a hostile witness.

"I don't know if he's hostile or not," Mulder said. "He might be hostile when I'm through with him."

Lottery pays off for those with political connections, report says

DALLAS (AP) — The state's gambling enterprise has paid off for a who's who of former top state officials and political contributors who have gotten lottery-related jobs, The Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story Friday.

Several Democrats, including former House Speakers Gib Lewis and Billy Clayton, former Railroad Commissioner Lena Guerrero and several aides to former Democratic Gov. Ann Richards, have profited, the newspaper said.

Now that the GOP controls the governor's mansion, some Republicans are getting into the business as well.

Those who have become lobbyists, consultants or suppliers for lottery contractors or gained other Texas Lottery Commission business dismiss suggestions that politics played a big role. They say they were the best-qualified or won their contracts through competitive bidding.

Some contractors for the lottery acknowledge the importance of having partisan connections.

"With all elected officials Democrats, there are going to be Democratic vendors most of the time," said Gilberto Ocanas, a former Democratic National Committee staffer whose Austin company, Wintex International Inc., prints lottery play slips for GTECH Holdings Corp., the lottery's largest contractor.

GTECH defended its hiring as customary practice for companies in Austin.

"If you have a problem and want someone to talk to the administration, who would you send? You have to send people they will listen to," said GTECH spokesman Robert Rendine.

One of GTECH subcontractor's is Ms. Guerrero's sister, Mary Guerrero-Pelzel, whom GTECH pays $3,000 a month to help coordinate the hiring of minority subcontractors.

'If you have a problem and want someone to talk to the administration, who would you send? You have to send people they will listen to.'
— GTECH spokesman Robert Rendine

But one of GTECH's largest minority subcontractors, Ocanas of Wintex, said he has never met her.

Ms. Guerrero-Pelzel said she discussed minority hiring with Ocanas some years ago, though not recently.

Although she is being paid a monthly sum, she said, the payments are for work done five years ago, and not for anything since.

Ms. Guerrero-Pelzel said she is considered a "leading authority in minority participation" in public-sector contracting and that Gtech needed her expertise.

Lena Guerrero recently resigned as a lobbyist for Dittler Brothers, the scratch-off ticket supplier, amid questions about her ties with former lottery director Nora Linares. She also lobbied for International Lottery Inc., which provides lottery ticket dispensing machines. Her contract had lapsed earlier, a company spokesman said.

The political landscape has shifted since the lottery's early days. Today, George W. Bush is governor and the Senate is Republican-controlled, while Democrats have narrower control of the House.

GTECH's new interest in the GOP comes as no surprise to those familiar with the company's business strategy.

"My impression is that this is the type of company that goes into a state and determines who they need to take care of ... to get and keep the business," said state Republican Chairman Tom Pauken.

Reggie Bashur, a former deputy executive assistant to Bush, recently signed a lobbying contract with GTECH.

Rossanna Salazar, a former spokeswoman for ex-GOP Gov. Bill Clements, also has signed on as a GTECH media consultant.

GTECH has begun hiring consultants with GOP ties, while other lottery contractors still have executives and employees with Democratic connections.

GSD&M, an Austin ad agency run by Roy Spence, an unofficial adviser to Ms. Richards during her gubernatorial campaigns, beat out three competitors for a lottery advertising contract in 1992 and won the job again when it was rebid last year.

"It was a full-fledged shoot-out," said Spence, who has contributed at least $50,000 to state Democratic candidates since 1986. "We won it on merit."

One of GSD&M's principal lottery subcontractors is run by two top aides to former Governor Richards.

Cathy Bonner, the former director of the Texas Department of Commerce, and Richard Moya, who was Ms. Richards' deputy chief of staff, are employed by the company FIRSTeam. The company founded by former Travis County Democratic Party Chairman Ken Wendler interviews lottery ticket buyers and retailers who sell tickets in an effort to detect problems.

Wendler said he hired people for FIRSTeam because of their experience and expertise, not because of their political affiliations.

Others with links to the lottery include two former house speakers.

Lewis has served as a lobbyist for Media Drop-In Productions, which designed and sold to the lottery a scratch-off ticket game that awards noncash prizes.

Clayton has served as a lobbyist for TX-TV Corp., which received a license from the lottery to provide automated services for bingo contractors.

Southern Texas second most popular spot for illegal crossing

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — The Rio Grande Valley has become the second-hottest spot along the Southwest border for illegal immigration, surpassing Tucson, Ariz., for the first time in five years.

On Thursday, 88 illegal immigrants were apprehended in Harlingen in what U.S. Border Patrol agents describe as a disturbing trend.

So far this fiscal year, the Rio Grande Valley sector of the Border Patrol has apprehended 57,000 undocumented immigrants, second only to the San Diego sector, which has caught 68,000 illegal immigrants.

It is the first time in five years that the Valley sector has apprehended more illegals than the Tucson, Ariz., sector, which this year has caught 52,000 undocumented immigrants.

Border Patrol agents blame heightened enforcement along the border in San Diego, Tucson and El Paso for the increased traffic here, as illegals search for an easier route into the United States.

Harlingen is just one Valley city where activity has increased; Border Patrol supervisor Ismael Herrera said.

In addition to Thursday's apprehensions, agents two weeks ago rounded up close to 300 undocumented immigrants holed up in an apartment building in Raymondville, just north of Harlingen.

"We've been one of the busiest stations in the Valley along with Brownsville and Kingsville, but not to this scope," Herrera said. "This month has been unbelievable. I've been here since 1988, and we've never caught this many people in one month."

Acting on an anonymous tip, authorities on Thursday found 73 undocumented men, women and children hiding in a modest home in Harlingen shortly after noon.

That discovery came just hours after a utility vehicle packed with 15 undocumented immigrants crashed several miles north of Harlingen. Two of the passengers suffered minor injuries and were treated and released from a local hospital.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Seminar planned

The Family Ministry of Golf Course Road Church of Christ will hold its annual Divorce Recovery Seminar entitled "Some Answers to the Divorce Dilemma" Feb. 8 in the Family Center of the church.

Presenting the event will be Tom Vermillion, family minister for the church, who has been a frequent lecturer on the topic of divorce for the past 15 years. Vermillion has been a speaker for many singles groups throughout the nation and is considered an authority on the subject due to his biblical research and lengthy ministry to those who are divorced.

The day-long seminar will cover such topics as "The Adjustment Journey," "Coping with Loss," "God's Healing for the Divorced" and "Children and Divorce."

There is no charge for the seminar. Child care is available for those who register by Feb. 6. For more information or to register children, call the church at 694-8836.

Seminar conducted

"A Walk Thru the Old Testament" seminar will be conducted at the Fairmont Park Church of Christ, 3813 N. Midland Drive, Feb. 21 and 22.

The seminar uses interactive learning techniques to help people absorb and remember the key characters, geography and major themes of the Old Testament. Auditorium floors are turned into "maps" as people sit or stand near "Bible lands and waters."

In just five hours, from 7 to 9 p.m. that Friday and 9 a.m. to noon that Saturday, participants master a survey of the Old Testament, even if they have very little Bible knowledge, said a release from the church.

All interested parties need to contact the church office at 699-7064. The cost of the seminar, including supplies, refreshments and child care, is $10 per person.

"Walk Thru the Old Testament" seminars are conducted by teachers from "Walk Thru the Bible."

Of special interest to educators will be the fact that CEU credits are available to those who attend the seminar.

Revival held

An "Anglican-Style Revival" will be held at St. Nicholas's Episcopal Church, 2900 W. Princeton Ave., Sunday through Wednesday. Speakers will be the Rev. Gary Dalmasso and Kathleen Thomerson.

Services will be held from 7 to 9:30 p.m. each day at the church. Dalmasso, Canon Evangelist of the Diocese of Quincy, will focus his talks on the role of the liturgy and the sacramental life in promoting personal renewal and experiencing the Holy Spirit's healing power.

Ms. Thomerson is a noted church musician in the Episcopal and United Methodist congregations. She composed the well-known hymn, "I Want to Walk as a Child of the Light."

A healing Eucharist will conclude the events on Wednesday evening.

The public is invited to attend. A nursery will be provided. For more information, call the church at 694-8856.

Celebration set

STANTON — Pastors Leroy and Jannie Linney invite the public to join in celebrating the completion of the building of Hosanna Christian Fellowship, 2001 N. Lamesa Highway, here.

Services will begin at 10 a.m. Feb. 2 with praise and prayer, accompanied by words of testimony and encouragement by a number of guests.

Pastors John and Carolyne Redic of Victory Chapel in El Paso will begin the services with prayer, and the Rev. Richard Spencer of Cornerstone Christian Fellowship in Midland will deliver the dedication sermon.

Open house will be from 2 to 4 p.m. Feb. 2. For more information, call Leroy or Jannie Linney at 1-915-756-3688.

Revival planned

ODESSA — Life Unlimited Church, 4224 E. Loop 338 and Highway 191, will be hosting the Rev. Dale van Steenis of Los Alamitos, Calif., in a revival Sunday through Friday.

Van Steenis is an apostle who travels the world training pastors, establishing churches and taking grain and medical supplies and equipment to ministers and missionaries to be used in evangelizing their countries.

Services will be at 10 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Sunday and at 7 p.m. weekdays. The church's pastors, Don and Pat Palmer, invite the public to attend.

Banquet scheduled

The West Texans for Life second banquet is set for today at the Holiday Inn Country Villa Convention Center, 4300 W. Highway 80.

Guest speaker will be Dr. Stephen Arterburn, the founder and chairman of New Life Treatment Centers, a Christ-centered program for emotional problems based in Laguna Beach, Calif. He is the author of numerous magazine articles, pamphlets and 14 books, including "Hand-Me-Down Genes" and "Second Hand Emotions."

He has appeared as a guest on several television shows including The 700 Club, 100 Huntley Street and The Oprah Winfrey Show.

The auction begins at 6 p.m. Dinner and the program will be from 7 to 9 p.m. The attire is semi-formal. All are invited to attend.

Seminar planned

ODESSA — Loved Ones of Prisoners (LOOPS) is offering its annual training seminar from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. today.

The training is available for anyone who thinks he or she might be interested in being a volunteer in prison or jail. Cost of the seminar is $15 and includes all materials, a continental breakfast and lunch.

The meeting will be held at Temple Baptist Church in the Calvary Class Building, located at the southwest corner of 10th St. and Texas Ave., here. For more information, call Leland or Linda Maples at 580-5667.

New services set

First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Ohio Avenue, is starting two new worship services beginning this month.

A contemporary worship service will begin at 8:30 a.m. Sunday in Glass Memorial Chapel with the Rev. John Rech as the leader. Those services will feature contemporary music. The purpose for adding the service is to expand First UMC's ability to respond to the variety of worship needs within the community and to provide more inroads for people to become involved in the church and with Jesus Christ. Those attending are invited to dress casually. Glass Memorial Chapel may be entered from Main Street.

Also there will be a 6:30 p.m. Wednesday evening service of song and sacrament in the chapel, led by the Rev. Molly Krueger. This service is an informal and unstructured 45-minute time of worship which begins with song — familiar hymns and choruses — and continues with a devotional on topics suggested by the worshiping congregation. The service includes a time of personal and corporate prayer and the celebration of Holy Communion.

Other worship services available at First UMC include 8:30 and 10:30 a.m. Sunday services in the sanctuary which are led by the Rev. Lane Boyd and the Community of Joy, a contemporary Christian experience in a non-church setting at Cole Theatre, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., led by the Rev. Rech.

During the four weeks of February, Rev. Krueger will be teaching a series of lessons during the Sunday School hour on the Sacrament of Holy Communion.

For more information, call 682-3701.

Festival hosted

Asbury United Methodist Church will be hosting its first Spring Arts and Crafts festival from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. April 26 at the Midland County Exhibit Building, East Highway 80.

This will be the beginning of a new tradition for Asbury UMC. In November, the church hosted its 17th annual Fall Festival.

The Spring Festival also will coincide with the church's 50th anniversary.

At this time, there is booth space available for rent. For an application or more information, call Karen Hughes at 683-2867.

Workshop planned

ODESSA — The Emmanuel Lutheran Church, 6450 E. Highway 191, is presenting the "Weigh Down Workshop" beginning in February.

At 7 p.m. Feb. 2, a local coordinator will present a Weigh Down Workshop orientation.

The seminar is $103, and there are discounts for additional family members. Men as well as women are encouraged to attend.

For details about this specific class and orientation, call 1-915-366-2400 or 563-2255. For general information about the seminar or to offer the Weigh Down Workshop at your church, call 1-800-844-5208.

Workshop offered

The Weigh Down Workshop, a biblically based approach to weight loss, currently is under way at Midland Bible Church, 2800 N. A St.

The workshop uses video tapes, audio tapes, slides, group discussion and a workbook. For more information on the class at Midland Bible Church, call Judy McDaniel at 520-6914.

Bible study planned

Memorial Christian Church, 1001 Andrews Highway at Cuthbert Avenue, is presenting a special Adult Bible Study from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. Sundays.

The study uses Bill Moyers' video series, "Genesis: A Living Conversation." After viewing a video each week, there will be conversation about that portion of the book of Genesis. Moderator for the study will be Bill Bucy, an elder and Sunday School teacher at the church.

All are invited to attend.

Seminar presented

Charles Frost, the author of "The Possible You," will present a seminar on "Tools for Transformation" from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Monday.

Frost has presented workshops and seminars throughout the United States since 1989. Included in his presentations have been the Unity Heart of Texas Retreat, the Unity Great Lakes Lay Persons Retreat, Life Spectrums Rainbow Experience, Southwestern Conference Religious Science Retreat and the Long Island Spiritual Renewal Retreat.

He is a certified NLP practitioner with degrees in secondary education and American history.

The workshop is being presented by Nurturing the Life Process and the Discovery of Life Church. Suggested donation is $15. For more information, call 684-4230.

Jubilee planned

Midland Suburban Lions Club, 2250 Flynt, holds a Gospel Jubilee, the first Saturday of each month.

Midland Suburban Lions, will sell food from 6 p.m.. until 7 p.m. and there will be singing from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. Admission is free.

Study group meets

ODESSA — Unity Church of West Texas, 210 E. 12th St., presents J.C. Caston, Unity Licensed Teacher Candidate, teaching Charles Fillmore's book - "Atom Smashing Powers of the Mind" at 7:30 p.m. Thursdays.

A study group meets at 9:30 a.m. each Sunday, followed by church service at 11 a.m. Frank McFarlin is teaching "The Infinite Way" path using Barbara Mary Muhl's text, "The Royal Road to Reality."

By Tom and Ray Magliozzi, "The Tappet Brothers"

STOP SQUEALING!

Dear Tom and Ray:

I own a 1991 Ford F-150 XLT Lariat with a 302 V-8 motor. I've talked to other Ford owners and we all have the same problem. It seems that whenever it rains or the underside of the motor gets wet, the belts begin to squeal and won't stop until something dries out. I've tried belt dressing and that doesn't seem to help. — Jeff

TOM: What kind of belt dressing did you try, Jeff? You might want to give Paul Newman's a shot. We use his vinaigrette down at the shop.

RAY: The problem is that water is a darn good lubricant. And once it gets on the belts, they slip quite easily—until the friction from the slipping belts generates enough heat to dry everything out. New belts will probably help somewhat, but the real problem is the lack of a "splash guard".

TOM: Many cars have a metal or plastic shield under the motor that keeps water from splashing up onto the belts and causing this condition. But a lot of trucks don't.

RAY: So if you live where puddled water is a constant problem, and the squealing is really driving you nuts, I'd ask a machinist to "fashion" a metal splash guard for you. Make sure it covers the area under the belts. And make sure it's safe (i.e., it won't fall off or touch any moving engine parts). And if that doesn't work, you'll have to trade the truck or move to Arizona. Good luck, Jeff.

Dear Tom and Ray:

The mileage on my beloved 1989 Chevy Celebrity recently turned past 100,000 miles. The exterior is in good condition, no rust, no dents, I can easily get my 6-foot,4-inch frame in and out and, best of all, it's paid for. My problem: I'm afraid that on one of those cold, dark, rainy nights when I'm 100 miles from nowhere it's going to break down. I think I'd prefer to spend up-front dollars on some preventive maintenance BEFORE this happens.

My local Chevy dealer has quoted me a price of $4,300 to install a "Mr. Goodwrench" remanufactured engine, transaxle with fluids, water pump, radiator, hoses, clamps, etc. This price includes labor. In your professional opinion, is this a reasonable plan and cost? Or should I just spend $15,000-$18,000 On a new Chevy?
—Harry

RAY: I'd vote for none of the above, Harry. I don't think $4,300 or $15,000 are your only two choices.

TOM: If you're really worried about the car dying suddenly by the side of the road, replacing the engine and transmission is not going to help you that much. Engines and transmissions don't often die suddenly. They usually give a lot of warning.

RAY: The parts that cause cars to die suddenly and strand you are things like fuel pumps, water pumps, alternators, starters, belts, hoses and brake lines. All the little things that are tacked onto the outside of the engine. And you can replace all those things for a lot less than $4,300!

TOM: I'd take the car to a mechanic you trust and have him check out the car from stem to stern — as if you were thinking of buying it as a used car. If he gives it an overall clean bill of health (if the engine, transmission, suspension and underbody are basically in good shape), tell him you'd like to replace all of the "wear" items like the ones we listed above.

RAY: That's no guarantee that you'll never break down, but it certainly will decrease the odds of sudden failure.

TOM: And when the engine itself does wear out, you've got $3,300 in the bank. And at that point (if the rest of the car is still good) you can put in a junkyard engine for $1,000, or (if there are buzzards circling the vehicle every evening at sundown) you can put a down payment on a new car.

Retro Detroit: Plymouth Prowler looks like a souped-up Fifties street 'rod

by Bob Plunkett
Special to Reporter-Telegram

Prowling down I-94 on a fast track to Chicago, a driver spotted flashing lights of a red car in the rearview mirror — and closing fast, despite the test car's speedometer pegged at the legal freeway speed.

That chase vehicle, a crimson Corvette, suddenly popped up beside me. Its driver, scrutinizing the outrageous design of my prototype purple tester, wore an ear-to-ear grin as he signaled with both thumbs up.

"Cool!" He mouthed.

And so it is: Prowler, Plymouth's too-cool showcar, reaches production reality bearing high-tech components conformed with slinky curves and exposed front wheels capped by bicycle fenders in a package resembling a street 'rod lifted from the Fifties.

Styled with lines similar to Ford's '36 Roadster, Prowler comes with the world's first production chassis cast from light-weight aluminum. It packs a V-6 engine that applies power to humongous 20-inch rear Goodyears, sets a bathtub cockpit aboard with space for only two seats, then adds a knock-your-ears-off sound package and shows but a single color — Prowler Purple.

What's going on here?

Bob Lutz, Chrysler's president and the man who envisioned the Viper roadster to kindle a new spirit for Dodge, considers Prowler the vehicle that will for the near future embody the spirit of the once-stodgy Plymouth brand.

The idea for Prowler emerged from a 1990 idea fair at Chrysler's Pacifica Design Studios in Carlsbad, Calif. By 1993, a full-size mock-up debuted at the North American International Auto Show in Detroit.

As exciting as that concept looked, no one expected to see Prowler in production because that's the way with concept cars — few way-out ideas turn into on-the-street realities for sale at dealer showrooms.

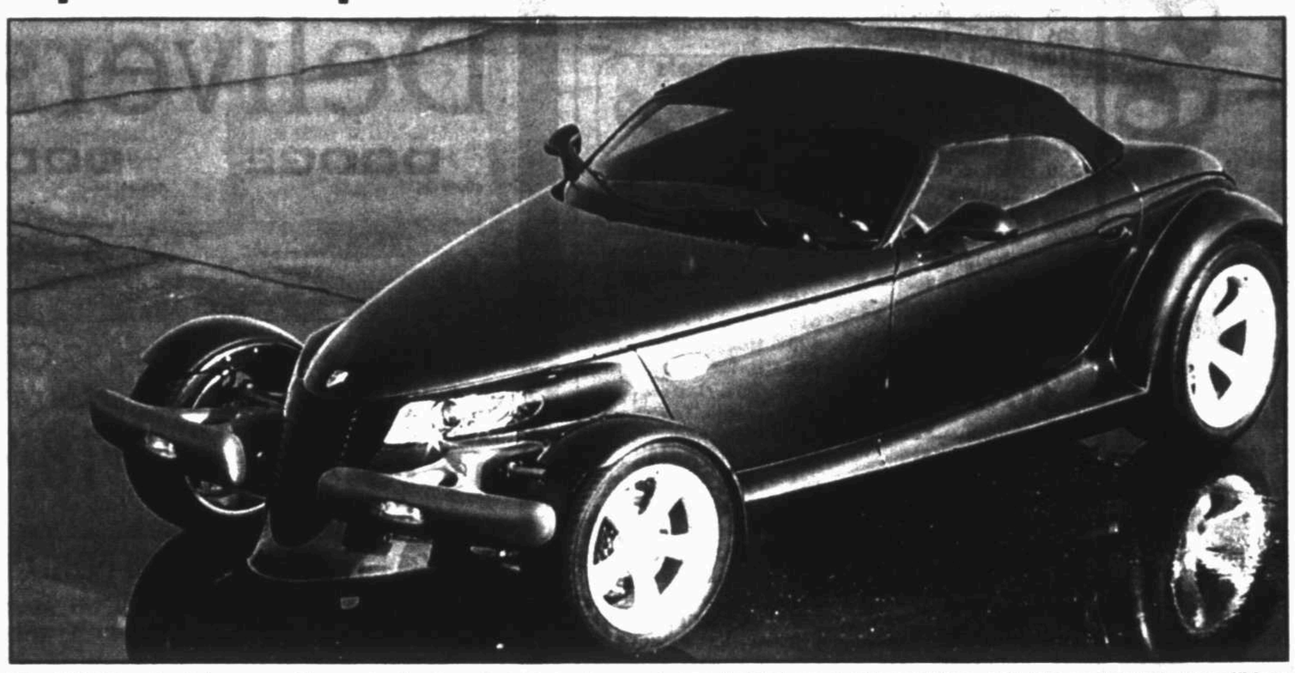
My first close encounter with Prowler occurred later in 1993 during a hands-on inspection of the concept car parked in an atrium of Pacifica's studio. It was so off-the-wall, so extreme — the exposed front wheels, high-back rear, bathtub cockpit and custom-capped convertible top — that the mind went wild imagining what it would be like to prowl the boulevards in this purple cruiser.

Two days of tests last summer in a prototype Prowler on back roads around Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, followed by a dash into the spotlight of Chicago's Loop, revealed that this new Plymouth will turn every neck on the street and draw a crowd no matter where you steer it.

It feels rock-solid to drive, takes tight curves in a flat stance that will surprise the uninitiated, and, despite the extreme exterior design, provides plush interior features for comfort on the boulevard.

Consider Prowler an ultimate exercise in design and production for Chrysler, which plans to apply many of the techniques devised for this hot-rod on future family cars.

Prowler scores a number of innovations, not the least of which comes out of the knowledge gained in developing the first aluminum production chassis. A new type of aluminum was coined for Prowler — Alcoa #6022 — that's highly malleable but provides the strength of steel.



The 1997 Prowler brings curvilinear design trends into a retro mode in a limited-production edition. But this nod to 50's "cool" has state-of-the-art innovations including the first aluminum chassis, AutoStick transmission and a powerful sound package. The V-6 powerplant delivers 214 hp to 20-inch rear tires. Definitely NOT a family car, the bathtub cockpit seats an intimate two.

The light-weight metal also appears in front suspension upper arms, seat frames and body panels for hood, side sections, twin doors and that humpback curved trunk deck, plus those wing-like bumpers proceeding Prowler.

Further, rear disc brake rotors of aluminum represent another first for production-car applications. Plastics also have their place in Prowler. Namely, sheet-molding compounds show up for front bicycle fenders, side rocker panels and the rear curved body.

Examine the list of components and you'll also discover that Prowler contains a number of parts borrowed and modified from other production cars in Chrysler's stable. The V-6 engine belongs to Eagle's sporty sedan, Vision, and ditto for the AutoStick automatic transmission with shift-it-yourself feature. Jeep Wrangler's nice new steering wheel also comes on Prowler, as does the air conditioning system from Chrysler minivans and power windows taken from Dodge's Ram pickup.

"Parts is parts", as they say, and there's nothing wrong with requisitioning the existing when borrowing seems efficient, yet Prowler also makes marks with innovations like its die-cast magnesium instrument panel and bolstered cockpit seats with interior foam padding injected only after leather upholstery is stretched across the aluminum frames.

The passenger compartment seems as radical as Prowler's exterior shape.

A bold purple oval on the dashboard clusters retro-look white-on-black gauges, save for the round tachometer that mounts to the steering column like after-market speed gear.

Seats feel firmly comfortable, and the cockpit provides ample legroom even for full-frame figures. With that bathtub design, door sills come clear up to your chin but visibility's excellent with the top down.

The black convertible top, simple to raise and lower manually, contains a glass rear window, and when up brings the look of a custom-made lid with arched back bow. Despite its slinky appearance, interior headroom is good.

What you don't get with Prowler is trunk space, as the unique design of that bent behind sets up a broad-but-shallow compartment suited strictly for a hanging bag. But who wants to haul luggage with this thing, anyway? (A look-alike trailer for those with too much gear has already been designed as one of few accessories.)

For power, the 3.5-liter V-6 out of Chrysler's LH cars pedals 214 horsepower. It won't pin your neck to the seat with drag starts in the manner of Viper, although with Prowler's light-weight package the plant serves adequately.

A 4-speed automatic transmission, positioned behind the cockpit to improve weight balance, adds a console lever with clutchless shift-it-yourself manual stick. The clever arrangement allows you to move from full automatic to selective shifting, gear by gear.

Prowler comes to market in only one trim, although you should expect an instant industry of after-market gadgets to emerge for custom modifications.

The rarest aspect of Prowler may be production numbers, because only 3,000 will roll out of Chrysler's Connor Avenue Assembly Plant in Detroit as 1997 issues. With prices pinned below $40,000, fans will fight for this 'rod.

1922 Richelieu

FAMOUS FRENCHMAN ON VINTAGE AMERICAN LUXURY CAR EMBLEMS

This rare automobile was named for Cardinal Richelieu (1585-1642), a famous French figure in religious, political and international circles. Richelieu actually ruled France from 1624 to 1642, in the Louis XIII era.

Richelieu bodies were built by Fleetwood, a coachbuilder later affiliated only with Cadillac and General Motors Corp. The engine was a prestigious Düesenberg powerplant, proven in many racing triumphs: a "hot" 4-cylinder engine and not the huge straight-eights of later Düesenberg fame.

President of the Richelieu Motor Car Corp. was N.G. Rost, vice president of Rochester Motors Corp. and a previous Düesenberg sales manager. Vice President was S.A. Reeves, also v.p. of Merchants National Bank of Asbury Park, N.J. (the city where the Richelieu was built). The Merchants National Bank cashier, R.G. Poole, was treasurer of the new automotive venture. Several other prominent businessmen were also involved.

The firm was launched with $3.5 million in capital. A Richelieu was displayed at the Annual Automobile Salon in New York City (Nov. 27 to Dec.3, 1921), where new 1922 automobiles of nearly all makes were exhibited before large crowds. The December 1921 issue of Vanity Fair carried a full-page ad (with illustration) for the new car.

It's estimated that 25 to 100 Richelieus were actually built and sold. Most were touring cars as illustrated, but other body types appeared as well in the short-lived early 1923 series. Records of any dealerships handling this marque are obscure. Rather than establishing any exclusive Richelieu dealerships it's quite possible that Richelieu wholesaled their cars to dealers who handled other expensive brands.

It would be interesting to know if any Richelieu cars have survived and where they are today!

In case you're wondering, Cadillac, La Salle, Lafayette and other American cars were named for noted French historical personalities.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SATURDAY, JANUARY 25, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: New methods and procedures are favored over old ones. Take advantage of a once-in-a-lifetime travel or educational opportunity! May brings public support for an innovative program. Buy real estate as summer gets underway. The more socializing you do, the more likely you are to find the perfect partner. Make your home a place of beauty and comfort. A career change next fall could be the start of something really fabulous. Let loved ones know your plans.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: poet Robert Burns, actress Dinah Manoff, actor Dean Jones, novelist Virginia Woolf.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A fresh approach will make a complicated project much easier. Refrain from saying anything negative. You need to distinguish between "love" and "like" if pondering a romantic commitment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You make a delightful new friend under unusual circumstances. Let go of old resentments; the future is in your hands. Partner needs to know what kind of assistance you would appreciate most.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Unexpected visitors could turn the domestic scene upside down. Say "no" to someone who makes unreasonable demands on your time or resources. You have every right to feel good about yourself and what you have achieved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Avoid speaking on impulse. Keeping your thoughts to yourself will prevent regrets later on. Meet annoying delays and interference with quiet patience.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You benefit from a sudden burst of inspiration. Curb a tendency to fly off the handle when thwarted. An arranged introduction turns out better than expected.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Someone could be telling you a tall tale. Resist the temptation to pass along gossip; it could come back to haunt you. Be willing to compromise if loved one asks for a change in plans.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Adopting a haughty attitude will only cause problems. Befriend those you meet by putting your best foot forward. Self-help activities enjoy favorable influences.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may have to make a decision that will upset others. Do not berate yourself for a bad habit. Real estate ventures are under beneficial influences.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take things nice and easy today. Your intuition may not be as reliable as usual. Entertaining at home is a good way to repay social obligations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Have faith in yourself and a fresh start will prove highly successful. Time is your best ally. Be willing to work hard and put in long hours. An understanding family member urges you on.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Financial security is a priority. Timely advice from an accountant or banker will save you money. Enjoy a fun night on the town with that special someone.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Start a savings program if hoping to make a major purchase in the near future. A newcomer's body language is revealing. Be careful not to come on too strong.

Tonya Harding is willing to skate for another country to compete again

PORTLAND, Ore. — Tonya Harding is willing to cross the globe to get back into competitive skating.

Harding is barred from competing for the United States, so her agent says the two-time Olympian is willing to skate for another country, such as Norway.

Tonya Harding is willing to skate for another country.

"They really like her a lot and with her blond hair and blue eyes, she looks Norwegian or Swedish," David Hans Schmidt said Thursday.

In 1994, the U.S. Figure Skating Association banned Harding for life from amateur competition after she pleaded guilty to conspiracy in an attack on rival Nancy Kerrigan.

Schmidt told the Oslo tabloid Dagbladet that Harding still remembers the great reception she got at the 1994 Olympics in Lillehammer and would consider skating for Norway in the 1998 Winter Games in Japan.

Olympic rules say Harding couldn't compete for another country until three years after changing her citizenship, though that could be waived or reduced.

The idea is getting a frosty reception from some.

"I just think it's silly," said Helge Ogrim, who covered Harding at the 1994 Olympics for the Washington, D.C.-based Norwegian News Agency. "I don't think Norway is desperate enough to recruit a convicted criminal from the U.S."

KINGSTON, Jamaica — Jimmy Cliff is working on a sequel to the 1971 cult classic "The Harder They Come," but his old partner is trying to put him down.

The reggae legend and star of the original film is reportedly producer of a follow-up that begins shooting in March and stars Wyclef, leader of the platinum-selling rap group The Fugees.

The problem is that the rights to the story still belong to Perry Henzell, who wrote the screenplay to the first film.

"I have not sold the rights to 'The Harder They Come II,' so there's no way he can do that," Henzell said. Cliff "told me he was making a movie with The Fugees, which I have no problem with. But if the story has any semblance of 'The Harder They Come,' I will have to sue him."

Henzell, in fact, is planning his own sequel. "It's great, better than the first, but the financing is nowhere in place," he said.

The first film was based on the real-life story of Ivanhoe Martin, a kind of 1950s Jamaican Jesse James. The movie, two years in the making, cost only $200,000, but won worldwide acclaim for Henzell and Cliff.

PARIS — France's favorite rocker, Johnny Hallyday, scrapped the leather and long hair for an important gig Friday: receiving the Legion of Honor.

"My dear Johnny, it's a great privilege for me to see you in a tie," said a smiling President Jacques Chirac as he greeted the 53-year-old singer, who sported a new, trim haircut as well.

Hallyday, whose real name is Jean-Philippe Smet, is little known outside France, where he introduced rock 'n' roll in 1959 with French versions of tunes like "Tutti Frutti" and "Let's Twist Again."

Last November, some 6,000 French fans paid $2,100 each to follow him to a performance in Las Vegas.

DUBLIN, Ohio — Fast-food tycoon Dave Thomas is taking it slow as he recovers from heart surgery.

The founder of and spokesman for Wendy's burger restaurants underwent quadruple bypass surgery Dec. 20. The surgery reroutes blood around blocked heart arteries.

Thomas, 64, is recuperating in Florida, where he has a home, and may be ready to work on his next commercial next month. He makes a few business telephone calls a day and walks twice a day, Wendy's spokesman Denny Lynch said Friday.

"No one's rushing Dave into anything," Lynch said. "He does check in every day."

ORLANDO, Fla. — On the golf course, Arnold Palmer always took the risky shot, the one between the trees instead of around them — an attitude that won seven major championships and created an Arnie's Army of fans.

He was just as aggressive dealing with cancer, and it looks like he's come up a winner again.

"The doctor told me my cancer in the prostate was contained," a tanned, fit Palmer said Thursday in his first public comments since his cancerous prostate was removed Jan. 15.

Palmer, 67, said he will not be able to swing a golf club for another six weeks but plans to return to competitive golf. "As for when, it depends on the rate of my recovery and the state of my game," he said.

He's making definite plans for the Masters tournament, which starts April 10.

"I have every intention of being at Augusta," Palmer said. "I plan to play."

Apple reports big loss

SAN FRANCISCO — Apple Computer Inc. posted a loss of $120 million for its first quarter Wednesday and said that it does not expect to return to profitability as quickly as it had predicted, with the first positive earnings not anticipated until the fourth quarter in September.

Separately, Sun Microsystems Inc., which a year ago entertained the prospect of acquiring Apple, reported record revenues and earnings for its second quarter, exceeding analyst estimates.

Both companies released their results after the stock market had closed. In Nasdaq trading, Apple shares fell 62.5 cents, to $17.25; Sun shares also slipped 62.5 cents, to $28.25. In after-hours trading, though, Sun traded as high as $28.75, while Apple shares were unchanged.

Earlier this month, Apple said it expected a loss of between $100 million and $150 million in the quarter, far higher than analysts had estimated. Wednesday's reported loss of $120 million was equivalent to 96 cents a share, much more than the average analyst estimate of 75 cents, according to First Call, though still within the range of 48 cents to $1.20 among the 19 analysts surveyed.

Microsoft profits up sharply

SEATTLE — Microsoft Corp. Friday handily beat Wall Street estimates by reporting a 45 percent increase in quarterly profits, but the Redmond software company once again warned that its fast-paced revenue growth is due to decline several quarters hence.

For its fiscal second quarter ended Dec. 31, Microsoft said its profit was $741 million compared to $575 million in the same period a year ago. Revenues increased 22 percent to $2.68 billion.

Strength across all lines of Microsoft's businesses, including Windows operating systems and desktop applications, drove per-share earnings to 57 cents, solidly above the consensus 51-cents-a-share estimate by stock analysts who follow the company.

The quarterly performance — which was particularly positive because Microsoft had recorded a 54 percent profit jump in the same period last year, following the launch of the Windows 95 operating system — had been anticipated by investors.

Cafe well-grounded in trends, cyberspace

He has been around the world a few times, parachuted from fighter planes, gone deep in a submarine, taken part in hostage rescues, been a part of Desert Storm and graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy.

But for John Nute, the biggest challenge of his life appears to be making a go of a coffee shop in downtown Midland.

The Ground Floor has had a problem getting off the ground, and Nute is hard-pressed to explain it.

He has incorporated several unique features, including amateur musicians; trivia questions which, when answered correctly, lead to student discounts, and access to the Internet.

In fact, The Ground Floor is Midland's first so-called cybercafe. Located on Wall St., just east of the Hilton, the cafe offers specialty coffees, cookies, all-day lunches and free surfing on the World Wide Web.

As a result, it has built a strong youth-oriented client base, but the

America Online moves to placate angry users

By Laurence Zuckerman
N.Y. Times News Service

With its network and the patience of its customers strained to the breaking point, America Online announced a series of new initiatives Tthis week to try to relieve the congestion that has led to at least four class-action lawsuits and thousands of complaints from frustrated consumers.

The on-line service has been flooded with complaints from people around the country who have been unable to dial into the service since it began offering unlimited use for $19.95 a month in December.

To help ease the strain, the company announced that it would suspend its television advertising campaign, spend an additional $100 million to expand the capacity of its network, and add more telephone representatives to field calls from angry customers.

But even these measures will not relieve the company's clogged modems until the spring at the earliest, said Bob Pittman, the president and chief executive of AOL Networks, the America Online unit that runs the on-line service.

"It will be the end of spring before we are where we want to be," he added. "Some cities will feel it sooner because this is about going from town to town putting more modems in."

The company has even resorted to a novel approach to solving the capacity constraints: asking customers not to use the service. In a letter posted to subscribers Thursday, Steve Case, the chair-

Good Ol' Boys of aviation find a hangout on the 'Net

Granted that things have changed in the international air warfare business since the end of the Cold War, such as Russia's offer to sell a few MiG-29 jets to the Pentagon, still there must be some secrets worth keeping.

Whatever those are, there's a chance that someone will blurt them eventually in a Usenet newsgroup called rec.aviation.military, the Internet equivalent of a pilots' ready room full of the chattiest flyboys of all the world's nations.

For example, in answer to a posting asking how one would re-work an F-16 warplane to make it more radar-repellent — in a word, stealthy — the helpful advice flowed in from fans everywhere.

"They'd have to completely redesign the engine-intake and ditch the vertical tail to make any real improvement," one

A happy ending for a writer's tales

By Michael Saunders
N.Y. Times News Service

Xander Mellish is a name not easily forgotten, especially after seeing it above an emerging collection of short stories. They are available only on the web and only because Mellish discovered herself elbowed away from the usual paths to publication.

She launched her web site, which is at www.users.interport.net/~xmel, in September 1995. "I started it out of frustration with this closed little literary world, the writing-school mafia who run all the literary publications in the country," she said. "I didn't want to be one of those people, but I wanted people to read my stories."

Her characters are the kinds of beautiful losers walking New York streets, people with lives and loves perpetually in flux. In one story, Mellish, 28, effectively conveys the passion of a bike messenger-musician whose life is divided between his two loves: music and an ambitious girlfriend.

Another tale lays bare the sad, complex bond of an ill young man and the noble woman who cares for him, leading readers to wonder what each one derives from the interaction.

Dear Amy: I'm designing my own Web page, but my mom says that it's not safe to put in my name, address, E-mail address, photos of me, and other "personal" info. How come?– Evan, Milpitas, CA

Dear Evan: Your mom is right to be concerned. Putting up a picture of yourself and your name seems OK but some bad people are really tricky. Here's what I would do. Use a cool nickname rather than your real name and list all of the things that interest you, instead of stuff about yourself. Things like your favorite music, hobbies, sports, movies and books. What's special about your interests will make for a special Web page. For some safety tips on how to use the Internet check out http://www.uoknor.edu/oupd/kidsafe/start.htm

Dear Amy: When I go to certain places on the Internet, I want to print some of the things out. I have no clue how to print anything out on the Internet. What do I do? —Sara, Delphi, IN

Dear Sara: It's easy to print things from the Internet. All browser software supports printing and will print out whatever is displayed in the active window or frame. Most browser software will even let you add page numbers to the printout. So when you are ready to print, just click the print button and you can print pictures and all. Check the whole Web page before you print because it could be really long.

AOL: Users start petition drive

man and chief executive of America Online Inc., said that many users were so worried about not being able to get on the network that they were simply staying on all the time.

"While that's understandable at one level," Case wrote. "It is obviously problematic at another."

Pittman said the company had anticipated some increased use after the new pricing plan was introduced, but the jump has been greater than expected. In December, American Online customers logged a record 102 million hours on line, up from 45 million hours in September. The average American Online member now spends 32 minutes a day on line, up from 14 minutes in September.

But judging from the number of complaints, one might conclude the average American Online subscriber spends more time trying unsuccessfully to dial on.

Since the beginning of the year, a petition has been passed by e-mail collecting scores of names. Its plea is simple: "We the users of AOL demand a dependable service."

"For the last month, it has been almost impossible to get connected after about 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon," said Judith Handelman, a free-lance writer and editor in Scarsdale, N.Y. "I wrote to them and I got this long letter full of claptrap."

Many customers use the service as part of their businesses, making the difficulty of gaining access to e-mail even more critical, but also making it harder to quit the service.

"I'd like to switch but I've got my AOL address on my business card," said Jean Wyman, an entrepreneur who lives in Los Angeles.

The company said Thursday that it was aware of four class-action suits that have been filed against the service in California, Illinois, New Jersey and New York. The New York suit accuses America Online of breach of contract, deceptive practices, deceptive advertising and unjust enrichment.

"If they didn't think that with 8 million subscribers they didn't feel that they would have a tremendous burst of usage, then they are incredibly naive — and I don't think they are that," said Edward Labaton, a partner with Goodkind Labaton Rudoff & Sucharow in Manhattan, which filed a class-action suit on behalf of four America Online members.

Attorneys general in several states, including New York and Wisconsin, are also alarmed by the complaints. Last month, America Online reached an agreement with 19 states promising to clarify its new pricing plan and offer refunds to consumers who ask to switch back to their old plan before April.

"We're taking very close look at it," said Marc Carey, a spokesman for New York state Attorney General Dennis Vacco.

Despite the many complaints, America Online said that it was still growing. The company had a net gain of 1.2 million subscribers in the quarter ending Dec. 31, for a total of more than 8 million. December was the service's best month ever, with 500,000 new subscribers. A spokesman said that the company would not say how many customers it has been losing in recent weeks.

Under its new plan, American Online will increase its spending on system capacity to $350 million from $250 million. Next month, it said it would break ground on a 180,000-square-foot data center in Reston, Va.

The service currently has more than 200,000 modems in cities around the country for subscribers to dial up. It promised to increase that number by 75 percent, allowing an additional 6 million sessions a day.

In addition, the company said it would hire 600 more customer support representatives, for a total of more than 4,500. It will also suspend its television advertisements and stop distributing its ubiquitous floppy disks offering a free trial in areas where access has been a problem.

The management, which has been denying the problem for weeks, has also become more humble.

"Am I bloody?" Pittman, the company executive, asked. "Yes. Do my eyes have circles under them? Yes."

Need the new chip? More than life itself

By Dr. Emilio Bombay
N.Y. Times News Service

DEAR DR. BOMBAY: What's so special about the new Pentium MMX chip? Should I think about getting a new computer with one? — Chip Chucker.

DEAR CHUCK: What's so special? WHAT'S SO SPECIAL?! ?! Why, it's new and improved! What more does any consumer need to know?! ?! And it even has an exotic-sounding new secret miracle ingredient, MMX.

Intel has optimized the old Pentium so it will deliver better graphics, video and sound. If you can believe everything in the glowing press release, your old programs will run a tad faster. New software written to take advantage of the chip's capability is supposed to scream.

Should you buy one? If you're in the market anyway, why not? Otherwise, you can safely hold off unless you're one of those anal-retentive gadget freaks who gets all wild-eyed and short of breath at the mere thought of not owning the most advanced technology on the planet.

Incidentally, in a refreshing display of honest marketing (or it could have just been a slip of the tongue), Intel says "MMX" doesn't stand for anything. It's just a trademark. Oh, sure, and next you'll be telling me that Retsyn, Techron and Scrubbing Bubbles are just made-up names for a few common chemicals and not wonder-ingredients at all. I'll never fall for that.

DEAR DR. BOMBAY: Is it possible to get the E-mail address of anyone in the world? I know my friend is working in Singapore and has Internet access. — Mail Call.

DEAR MAIL: Unfortunately, the most reliable way to find an E-mail address is to use one of those outmoded, hard-wired telephonic communication devices found in almost every home to contact your friend personally, for which service you will be overcharged by a monopolistic megacorporation that hasn't figured out exactly how to start overcharging people for using the Internet. Or you can make it a collect call.

Alternatively, you could try one of the "white pages" services on the Web: InfoSpace (http://www.infospace.com), Four11 (http://www.four11.com), Bigfoot (http://www.bigfoot.com) or WhoWhere (http://www.whowhere.com), to name a few.

But be warned that these listings are not necessarily up-to-date, complete or even accurate. For instance, a search for "Bombay" turned up dozens of faux-Dr. Bombays, none of whom was me. And remember, for the best in computing advice, accept no substitute, unless one of those other guys wants to take over for a couple of weeks while I jet down to the Caribbean at company expense so a platoon of obsequious poolside waiters can bring me a constant supply of powerful native beverages. I think my editors should know that this would really improve my attitude, therefore the content, of this column. Just a thought.

WRITERS: Online 'zine 'Slate' makes decision to stay free

(From 1F)

In "Extraordinary," a 19-year-old summer fashion intern from the Midwest reacts to Manhattan with a mix of excitement and quiet terror:

"I can remember everything about that first flight, everything I saw or felt. Right after one o'clock, I was drowsy and did go to bed, and as I was drifting off I thought about the bus ride from the airport, and about New York City. I thought about all the glamorous night spots, and how I could just get into a taxi and ask to be taken to them, and who I would meet there. But I was also afraid the taxis might drive me around and around, between the sirens, and not let me out and never bring me home."

The emotional depth of her stories and their whimsical cartoons offer a creative respite from her real-life work, writing about municipal bonds. "Not that municipal bonds aren't exciting," she says with a chuckle.

Some of the stories have been revised several times over the past year, occasionally prompted by readers' suggestions sent via e-mail. "It's like an evolving book. It's no different than an old-fashioned literary community where people bounce things off each other."

Thanks to the slow spiral of 'Net attention, she now has an agent and is working on a compilation of short stories to be published in the customary book form. When the first bound copies move off the presses, Mellish will have passed a career milestone.

"But it could never be as good as the Internet," she said, voice rising slightly. "Somebody who is nobody having access to all those readers. This is something that writers have wanted since Gutenberg."

Chippier chip: At the Consumer Electronics Show, the massive annual gadget-and-gewgaw exposition held last week in Las Vegas, chip giant Intel tried to command the early buzz by unveiling its multimedia-mauling MMX microprocessor chip.

Intel says it will speed the simultaneous handling of sound and video found in most new PC-platform entertainment applications that can make even a fast Pentium chip into a poky hunk of silicon. Hard-core gamers are happy, of course, but the MMX will likely have little effect for most people, except for a possible pocketbook bonus for anyone who delays buying a Pentium until later this year.

Free Slate: The free on-line magazine Slate, www.slate.com, will stay free for the indefinite future, according to editor Michael Kinsley. The web mag debuted last year as a freebie but planned to charge $20 yearly once it was established. Healthy advertising income is enabling it to exist without resorting to paid subscriptions.

AVIATION: Kind and gentle hazing offered in piloting newsgroups contributor said.

Bragging of successes against Arab air forces' MiGs, an Israeli admitted that there already is a delta-wing, tailless version of the F-16.

Then there would still be the problem of the right-angle panel joints, "patches" and rivet lines on the fuselage, said another contributor. "An F-16 is a virtual radar reflector," he said. "Couple this with the fact that an F-16 isn't worth any more than a lawn dart if it isn't carrying ordnance. Throw two Sidewinders, six bombs, a couple fuel tanks, and a pod, and you've added quite a bit of reflectivity — you'll see him for many, many miles."

Yeah, well, OK then, never mind hiding the fully-armed F-16 for now, but thanks for the tips.

Meanwhile another thread of conversation asked what nicknames are applied to pilots, particularly rookies, in the various air forces. In the Canadian Air Force and U.S. Navy, for example, newcomers are sometimes called Nuggets.

Rookie is popular for CH-124 Sea King helicopter trainees, a contributor responded, or FNG for Fairly New Guy, except military crews seldom say "fairly" when any other "F" word will do.

On the C-130 Hercules yard, newcomers are TWITs, for Transport Weenies in Training. Then there are the ever so much more important Fighter/Attack Guys, or FAGs. F-16 pilots call F- 15 pilots Coneheads, but that could be because the F-15 drivers refer to F-16s as Lawn Darts (see above).

Tanker crews are TOADs because so many are Temporarily on Active Duty. Bomber crews are Pukes. New naval aviators sometimes are called Butterbars because of their ensign's gold collar insignia. In the P-3 Orion community, trainees are No-Ps until they work up to the seat of 3-P, or Third Pilot.

All of this is kindly and gentle hazing, of course, and no one takes offense, at least on the Internet. For unlike a genuine ready room full of rival pilots, a computer keyboard connected to a Usenet forum is hardly the place where an offended flyboy would take a swing at anybody.

Firm posts web site in JonBenet Ramsey death

N.Y. Times News Service

When 6-year-old JonBenet Ramsey was slain last month, the case drew the attention of newspapers and television networks worldwide. It's not rare for a spectacular crime to draw so much media attention.

It is unusual for a victim's family to retain an elite crisis management firm to help them cope with the publicity spawned by the crime, and even more surprising that the crisis managers are using the Internet to tell the Ramseys' side of the story.

The firm is Rowan & Blewitt, founded in 1984 by former NBC News White House correspondent Ford Rowan. Hank Boerner, a senior vice president, said last week that the Ramseys' lawyers contacted the firm shortly after JonBenet's body was found Dec. 26 in the basement of their Boulder, Colo., home.

"They recognized what could happen with press coverage and they wanted people who could communicate with the media," he said.

The company sent two people to Boulder to coordinate media coverage. At the firm's New York headquarters, other experts analyzed coverage by TV networks, newspapers and on the Internet, he said.

The firm set up a site on the World Wide Web so that media outlets could obtain information from the Ramseys. The site was never intended for use by the general public, Boerner said, but when CNN reporters learned of it, they posted a link to it on CNN's site at www.cnn.com.

CAFE: Eatery tries to draw downtown crowd

(From 1B)

downtown business community has yet to embrace the cafe.

"Hilton guests who want to check their email back home come in," Nute said. "They can log on and call up their home server and check for or send email. Students can come in to do research."

In addition, introductory Internet classes are offered on occasion.

Nute has had a rough time keeping the business open, and has been forced to sell his car and take up residence in the building to cut down on expenses. It is not what he had in mind when he moved from Seattle to open the business.

"I envisioned that people in Midland would be interested in supporting a Seattle-style coffee shop," he said. "My assessment was that it would be a profitable business."

And it still may prove to be just that. The trendy cybercafe atmosphere may enable him to continue to pull in clientele that is attracted to the perks offered. At 8:30 p.m. today, Ruben, a Seattle-based acoustic guitarist and dulcimer player will entertain the Ground Floor clientele.

Nute, a Vietnam veteran who participated in the Iranian Hostage rescue on board the first battleship to respond to the area, says business has doubled in the last two quarters, but there's still work to do.

"The customers are the ones who keep me going," Nute said. "I have kids who come here who tell me they appreciate what I'm doing.

"(As for the Internet), I have friends in Hong Kong, Brussels, Seattle and Washington, and to be able to communicate with them in an interactive way whether it's simplex, as I call it, all the way up to and including videoconferencing, that's great.
