MISD convocation kicks off school year

Warren reminds staff members of district's priorities

By Meredith Moriak
Staff Writer

During Midland ISD's annual convocation ceremony, Superintendent Ryder Warren stressed the importance of having a district-wide academic philosophy.

"If we do things in 37 ways, we will never move forward," Warren told the district's 3,000 employees Friday morning at Midland College's Chaparral Center.

Making sure teaching and learning are consistent in each of the district's campuses is his top priority this year and something he was concerned with when he took the job last summer, Warren said.

Warren, who is starting his 21st year in education and his second year as MISD's superintendent, used the morning to talk with district employees about expectations and goals for the school year.

To get everyone excited, cheerleaders and drill teams from both high schools performed while teachers — dressed in their school's colors — clapped along to "March Grandioso" and "Hey Baby" played by the Lee band.

After students left, Warren told everyone to remember the district's 22,000 students should be the focus of every decision.

Warren asked staff members to work together as a team, respect each other's roles and communicate inside schools and throughout the district.

"I don't like the word problems. ... We have so many challenges we have to get over this year, and they only become problems if you shut up about them," Warren said.

Professionalism was a key topic, and Warren reminded staff it is not their job to be a student's friend.

"We have kids who have no friends," Warren said. "... They don't need you to be their friend; they need you as their mentor and guide. Protect yourself."

One of Warren's main points was that academic expectations should be nonnegotiable.

"We have to look the kids and the parents in the eye and say 'No, we're

Students intern in Conaway's D.C. office

By Meredith Moriak
Staff Writer

Three Midland students raised as constituents in U.S. Rep. Mike Conaway's district spent the summer interning at his Washington, D.C., office.

Dearen

Folger

Answering phones, logging letters and emails and giving tours of the U.S. Capitol were daily tasks for Midlanders Wesley Dearen, Christine Folger and Allison Ellis.

As part of the internship program, they were able to attend briefings, hearings and lectures to learn more about government.

Dearen, a senior at Hardin-Simmons University majoring in political science and history, said he's always been interested in politics and current events. The internship allowed him to experience things firsthand in Washington.

"Being in D.C. is fascinating because you're right in the middle of it all," Dearen said. "They talk all about the debt ceiling crisis and everything."

For Folger, who described herself as "disillusioned with government," the internship gave her a new perspective.

"It's been inspiring to work for him and to work with his constituents," Folger said.

Although politics is not on the career agenda for Folger, an economics and theology double major at Georgetown University, she felt like it was important to experience things firsthand.

"Any job you go into, the government is going to affect," said Folger, who

Appeals court strikes insurance requirement

By Greg Bluestein
Associated Press

ATLANTA — A federal appeals panel struck down the centerpiece of President Barack Obama's sweeping health care overhaul on Friday, moving the argument over whether Americans can be required to buy health insurance a step closer to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The divided three-judge panel of the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals concluded Congress overstepped its authority when lawmakers passed the so-called individual mandate, the first such decision by a federal appeals court. It's a stinging blow to Obama's signature legislative achievement, as most experts agree the requirement that Americans carry health insurance — or face tax penalties — is the foundation for other parts of the law.

The 207-page opinion, written by Chief Judge Joel Dubina and Circuit Judge Frank Hull, found that lawmakers cannot require residents to "enter into contracts with private insurance companies for the purchase of an expensive product from the time they are born until the time they die."

In a lengthy dissent, Circuit Judge Stanley Marcus accused the majority of ignoring the "undeniable fact that

On Monday, football coach Roberto Padilla, of Bowie High School, points to the place where a shooting happened the previous Saturday across the border a few hundred feet from the school during practice in El Paso. The shooting left a Mexican police commander dead and many students shaken.

West Texas high school shaken by border gunfire

By Juan Carlos Llorca
Associated Press

EL PASO — Gunfire broke the calm of the summer morning outside Bowie High School just as the football team was preparing for practice. A few hundred yards away in Juarez, Mexico, another shootout between drug cartels had begun.

No one on campus was injured in the shootout last weekend; gunmen who killed a police commander fired more than 400 rounds. But the bullets that witnesses say slammed into the high school's walls and ricocheted off its stadium lights reminded teachers and students yet again about the dangers of a campus that sits so close to the violence-plagued Mexican city.

"We never thought it would happen so near here. ... I'm a little worried it could happen again," said 17-year-old student Gerardo Pedroza, gazing at the fence across the highway that separates the football field from the order.

Pedroza was among the players who fled the football field when gunmen began firing their AK-47-type assault rifles on Aug. 6 in Juarez. Visiting volleyball players also rushed inside the school's gymnasium as they arrived for a scrimmage.

School administrators are relieved most classrooms were empty because of summer vacation, but they are considering ways to improve campus safety when classes resume this month. Among the ideas: beginning drills to help prepare students for more shootings at the border.

"It felt as if the shooting was happening here," Bowie Principal Jesus Chavez. He said several students told him they heard bullets whizzing through the air and hitting stadium lamps and walls, but school staff have not found any ammunition or property damage that would confirm the students' reports.

A levee along the Rio Grande blocks the campus' first floor from a direct line of sight into Juarez, but classrooms and hallways on a second floor are visible from the park where the shooting happened.

"With the wall and the Border Patrol agents, (drug cartel members) can't get to this side," said parent Teresa Tostado, who was at Bowie three days after the shooting to register her son for classes. "But the bullets sure do."

Juarez has seen nearly 6,000 killings in the last three years as bloody turf battles have escalated between warring drug cartels and the Mexican security forces along the country's northern border.

Spillover violence has been rare in neighboring El Paso, but there are often scares. Last summer, bullets from Juarez hit an office in the University of Texas at El Paso, and in a separate incident gunshots pelted a city hall building in downtown.

Mexican authorities have said they believe a local drug cartel was behind the latest border shooting, which left Cmdr. Victor Nazario Moreno Ramirez dead on a road near the Rio Grande. Three arrests have been made in what police suspect was a retaliation for a police sweep in downtown Juarez.

Teachers and coaches relied on a drill they practiced in the event a gunman opened fire on campus, ushering the football team into a locker room and putting the school on lockdown until the shooting ended.

Football coach Roberto Padilla said coaches initially thought the gunfire were firecrackers brought by a visiting volleyball team as a prank. His players were the first to realize the danger.

"Sadly, their ears are trained to recognize gunshots," said Padilla, adding that his team tried to persuade him to resume practice minutes after the shooting.

"It was a surprise. You don't know when it will happen again," said Eduardo Hernandez, 17, one of the football players on the field when the shooting started. "It used to be you felt safer in El Paso, but not so much anymore."

Inside the gymnasium, the volleyball teams played on "to take their minds off what happened," said coach Roel De Anda.

Chavez said he plans to bring up school safety with other administrators and consider implementing drills specifically for cross-border gunfire. He said the shooting was the first Juarez incident that forced Bowie to lockdown, but he knows many of the students are already familiar with the violence in Mexico.

"What worries me is that they have developed an emotional callus," Chavez said. "It used to be that they would get all emotional when they talked about a killing in Juarez. 'Now it's more like, 'Meh, they killed 10, 15 people, it's OK. Just 10, 15 more to the thousands that have died so far.'"

Jerry Lynn Tarpley, Jr.

Jerry Lynn Tarpley, Jr. was born September 12, 1969, in Midland, Texas, and passed away August 12, 2011, in his parent's home. Jerry spent his life involved in music and the outdoors. Those were his greatest passions. He was a fantastic guitar player and loved all types of music. Jerry could spend all of his time alone with nature. If he could have lived in a cabin by the lake all by himself, hunting and fishing, he would think that was Heaven on Earth. He also had a soft heart for the little creatures in the world - from saving baby squirrels, relocating the occasional rattlesnake, to feeding any stray dog or cat on his doorstep.

Jerry is survived by his father, Jerry Tarpley Sr.; his brother, Shannon Tarpley; as well as several cousins, aunts, and uncles.

Rain is a symbol for forgiveness and renewal. Thursday night's rain washed away Jerry's pain and suffering, leaving only his soul in its' purest form. Hand in hand, he and his mother, Cheryl, watched the sun rise in Heaven with God on Friday morning, August 12.

Family will receive friends on Monday, August 15, 2011, from 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m., at Ellis Funeral Home. A funeral service is scheduled for Tuesday, August 16, 2011, at 10:30 a.m., at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel. Interment to follow at Resthaven North.

Pallbearers are: brother, Shannon Tarpley, and cousins, Casey Smith, Tanner Smith, Dan Edwards, James Bailey, and Larry Barr. Honorary pallbearers are: cousins, T.L. Horton, Matthew Horton, and Calvin Horton. Officiant is still pending.

MPD: Man assaults officers at hopsital

By James Cannon
Staff Writer

A Midland man remained in custody Friday evening after he was arrested for assaulting officers and a security guard at Midland Memorial Hospital emergency room.

Vincent Paul Tran, 23, is being held on a third-degree felony charge of assault on a public servant and a misdemeanor charge of terroristic threats against a public servant.

Officers were dispatched to the hospital about 8 p.m. Wednesday because a patient was causing a disturbance. While en route, officers were told the patient, later identified as Tran, was "becoming more out of control," according to the affidavit of probable cause.

When Midland police officers arrived, they could hear Tran yelling and threatening to kill a security guard. Officers intervened and attempted to place Tran in handcuffs. He told the officers, "I'm not going in (expletive) cuffs." After a struggle, officers eventually placed Tran in handcuffs, according to the arrest report.

When Tran was being escorted out of the hospital, he continued to be violent and resisted officers' commands. He then kicked the security guard who he was yelling at, police said.

He continued to yell, calling the security guard "derogatory names," police said. Officers wrote in the arrest report that Tran said he was trying to get a rise out of the security guard.

Tran is being held on a $30,500 bond for the third-degree felony and misdemeanor charges. If convicted of the felony, he could serve up to 10 years in prison.

Court upholds conviction in Enron-related case

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HOUSTON — A federal appeals court panel on Friday upheld a former Merrill Lynch executive's conviction on perjury and obstruction charges that stemmed from a bogus 1999 deal involving Enron.

A three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected James A. Brown's contention that federal prosecutors improperly withheld favorable evidence in his case.

Brown's attorney, Sidney Powell, said she would ask the full appeals court for a rehearing.

"We're not all done because this just isn't right," she said. "We remain convinced the government failed to meet its disclosure obligations."

The charges centered on Enron Corp.'s sham 1999 sale to Merrill Lynch of three power barges moored off the Nigerian coast. Brown was a managing director at Merrill Lynch and head of its strategic asset and lease finance group at the time.

In 2004, he and two other executives, Robert S. Furst and Daniel Bayly, were convicted of helping push through the deal to make the earnings of Enron's energy division appear larger. Bayly was Merrill Lynch's former head of investment banking and Furst was the company's Enron relationship manager.

Enron filed for bankruptcy protection in December 2001 after years of accounting tricks could no longer hide billions in debt or make failing ventures appear profitable.

In his appeal, Brown argued prosecutors failed to provide to his lawyers before his trial FBI notes of an interview with Andrew Fastow, Enron's former chief financial officer, notes of congressional investigators' interview with Jeff McMahon, Enron's former treasurer, and transcripts of pretrial grand jury and Securities and Exchange Commission testimony from Katherine Zrike, chief counsel for Merrill Lynch's investment banking division.

In its ruling, the three judges said evidence submitted by Brown was not sufficient to convince them of a "substantial probability of a different outcome" of his trial.

"There was considerable evidence of Brown's guilt," the appeals judges said.

Brown was initially convicted of five counts and sentenced to four years in prison, but three of the counts — conspiracy to commit wire fraud and two counts of wire fraud — were overturned on appeal. Brown, who had served a year in prison when the counts were overturned, was freed on bond until they could be resolved.

Prosecutors decided last year to not retry Brown on the three counts. They dismissed charges against Bayly in January 2010 and agreed that May to dismiss charges against Furst after he first serve a year of probation.

Powell has said Brown has already served the maximum possible sentence for the perjury and obstruction counts.

Body recovered, likely missing football player

Associated Press

RICHMOND — Divers have recovered from the Brazos River southwest of Houston a body believed to be a 17-year-old high school football player who failed to surface during a swim after practice.

Richmond Police Sgt. Lowell Neinast said divers using sonar in the murky waters retrieved the body late Friday afternoon.

Fort Bend school district spokeswoman Nancy Porter said Benjamin Ola was among five Travis High School junior varsity players who went swimming Friday morning.

Porter said the players finished practice about 7:30 a.m., and a 911 call was made about 2 1/2 hours later.

School nurse accused of fire at workplace

Investigators say a nurse has been accused of setting fire to the Central Texas school where she's worked for more than a decade.

Mary Lucille Gutierrez was jailed Friday in Waco on an arson charge, with bond set at $250,000. McLennan County Jail records did not list an attorney for Gutierrez, who was arrested Thursday.

Sheriff's Chief Deputy Randy Plemons said video surveillance shows a woman, later identified as Gutierrez, going in and out of Speegleville Elementary School about 2 a.m. Tuesday when the fire broke out. No damage estimate has been provided by the Midway Independent School District.

Investigators are seeking a motive for the blaze.

Students and staff will attend nearby River Valley Intermediate while the school is repaired.

Rockport woman starts community garden

By Laura Garcia
Corpus Christi Caller-Times

Corpus Christi Caller-Times

On Aug. 10, members of the board of the Aransas County Community Garden Inc. Serapio Garza Jr, Vicky Rice, Judy Sanders and Richard Snyder gather at Mathis Park in Rockport where they plan on building a 10,000 square foot community garden this fall.

ROCKPORT — The seeds planted in Judy Sanders' youth growing up in Three Rivers have grown into a community garden that soon will take root in Rockport.

Sanders, 61, was watching a TV program in which a woman described being down on her luck, losing her job and managing to sustain her family because of a community garden. Then a friend of the family asked for gardening lessons.

A few months later she created a nonprofit group, Aransas County Community Garden, and organized an effort that ultimately would bring 10,000 square feet of elevated bed gardening to the community.

"It's not a hobby for me," she said. "It's a way of life."

She called her county's Texas AgriLife Extension office for advice and later talked to County Judge Burt Mills about conducting a survey to see if there was any interest. She then collected more than 250 signatures in support and went to the Rockport City Council.

There was much discussion on an appropriate site for the garden and she rallied a group of volunteers who went to work with Rockport's Park and Leisure Services Advisory Board.

About six months later, the council unanimously approved a five-year lease agreement, which would allow the group to start gardening on public land in Mathis Park.

"It just snowballed," Sanders said while sitting a few yards from the future site of the community garden.

Mathis Park wasn't being used, so converting part of it into a garden made sense, said Tom Staley, director of parks and leisure services. He said the city hopes the group will bring more vitality to the park.

The nonprofit will provide most of the tools, soil and plans to help teach the community how to garden.

Sanders said that space in the garden is open to everyone in the community.

Richard Snyder, a director with the group, said the group will give the plots to individuals or families on a first-come first-serve basis.

Most of the plots will be about 4 feet by 8 feet and be raised 18 inches above the ground to avoid damaging the land. Snyder said there will be gardening beds accessible for people in wheelchairs and about 100 available plots depending on the size of the beds.

Families will be able to garden for a modest yearly fee that would help pay for water usage. He said if families can't afford the fee they can volunteer extra time in the garden.

Growers can keep fruits and vegetables their plot yields for their household, donate the produce or sell them at a farmers market.

The garden would only be open a few hours a day.

Snyder said the garden will help gauge the community's interest. If it's successful, the group could open additional locations in Rockport.

Sanders said this is just the start. She said the group is accepting donations and looking for volunteers.

Summer made worse by air conditioner thieves

By Juan A. Lozano
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Intense heat Texas and other parts of the country have experienced this summer has made thefts of air conditioning units by criminals looking to sell their metal for scrap into a literally unbearable crime.

The thefts themselves aren't related to the weather, but to the high prices thieves can get for the copper and other metal parts inside the units, said Houston police Sgt. Michael McGinty, who runs a metal theft squad in operation since 2007.

And the theft of one air conditioner may even have contributed to the death of an elderly Dallas woman last month.

The crime isn't new, but McGinty said he and his team of five investigators have seen an increase in the number of thefts involving air conditioners this summer in Houston. The squad is handling 230 metal theft cases each month, with 90 to 95 related to air conditioning units. Other parts of the country, including Georgia, Chicago and Philadelphia have also dealt with similar crimes this summer.

"Right now it's making the most detrimental effect because of the intense heat we are having," McGinty said Friday. "Now it's getting more attention as far as all these people are living without it because they just don't have the money to replace it."

In Dallas, 79-year-old Dolores Grissom was found dead in her home two days after she reported her unit stolen. Authorities say her death was heat-related.

"If the heat ain't killing you, somebody else is," neighbor Caroline Ware said Friday as she sat on her front porch and tried to enjoy a bit of cool morning shade. "It's getting so we can't even live."

Today in history

Today is Saturday, Aug. 13, the 225th day of 2011. There are 140 days left in the year.

Today's highlight:

On Aug. 13, 1961, Berlin was divided as East Germany sealed off the border between the city's eastern and western sectors and began building a wall that would stand for the next 28 years until it finally came down in 1989.

On this date:

In 1521, Spanish conqueror Hernando Cortez captured Tenochtitlan, present-day Mexico City, from the Aztecs.

In 1932, Adolf Hitler rejected the post of vice chancellor of Germany, saying he was prepared to hold out "for all or nothing."

In 1981, in a ceremony at his California ranch, President Ronald Reagan signed a historic package of tax and budget reductions.

One year ago: Weighing in for the first time on a controversy gripping New York City and the nation, President Barack Obama endorsed allowing a mosque near ground zero, telling a White House dinner celebrating the Islamic holy month of Ramadan that the country's founding principles demanded no less.

Today's birthdays: Former Cuban President Fidel Castro is 85. Actor Danny Bonaduce is 52.

Library hosting 2nd genealogy workshop

By Kathleen Thurber
Staff Writer

Whether a genealogical expert or a beginner starting family research, staff at the Midland County Public Library say there's plenty to be learned at its upcoming workshop.

Lloyd de Witt Bockstruck, author and former supervisor of Dallas Public Library's genealogy section, will speak Aug. 20 at the downtown library.

"He is the Texas guru of genealogy," said Marie Humphrey, head of special collections. "He gears his program so everyone walks away with something new."

Bockstruck's presentation is the second in the library's new series "Genealogy off the Shelves."

Library Director John Trischitti said while the library has and will continue a myriad children's activities, the genealogy workshops are an example of adult programming the library is working to establish.

At last month's event, he said staff saw double the number of people attend from what was expected.

"It was a success," he said.

With expanding resources online and TV spots that focus on genealogy, Humphrey said the topic is continuing to become popular.

"We see a lot of people that are doing genealogical research. We also see people who want to connect with someone they knew years and years ago," she said.

"It's really our privilege and joy to help them."

At the Aug. 20 workshop, Bockstruck will host a morning session called, "America's Lesser Known Wars."

Humphrey said often people assume their ancestors had to fight in the Civil or Revolutionary wars for there to be records, but some of the smaller battles also have been greatly documented.

Before lunch, Bockstruck will speak about civilians in military records and after lunch he'll host a session called, "Pitfalls in Research."

Humphrey said new researchers aren't necessarily doing anything wrong, but they might not know how to access all of the available information.

For example, at the Midland library, patrons can use ancestry.com, which they'd have to register and pay for if accessed from home.

Others may assume if they're not from Texas, area libraries won't have any information on their relatives. Humphrey said they've built a collection of books from throughout the country in Midland, meaning even those whose heritage traces back to New York might find what they're seeking.

Some people come from counties where the courthouse and its records burned in a fire decades ago. Humphrey said even that shouldn't stop someone from researching because there are ways to go around roadblocks that pop up.

When the Daughters of the American Revolution began Midland County's collection, it was relatively small, Humphrey said. After it was endowed by Rosalind Redfern in the late 1980s, it has continued to expand and now is one of the top collections in the state, she and Trischitti said.

"It was Rosalind's dream to one day have at least one book from every county in every state in our collection," Humphrey said. "We work to try to fulfill that."

Aug. 20's workshop is free and open to the public.

Congress' commerce power has grown exponentially over the past two centuries." He wrote that Congress generally has the constitutional authority to create rules regulating large areas of the national economy.

The White House argued the legislative branch was using a "quintessential" power — its constitutional ability to regulate interstate commerce, including the health care industry — when it passed the overhaul law. Administration officials said they are confident the ruling will not stand. The Justice Department can ask the full 11th Circuit to review the panel's ruling and will also likely appeal to the Supreme Court.

"Individuals who choose to go without health insurance are making an economic decision that affects all of us — when people without insurance obtain health care they cannot pay for, those with insurance and taxpayers are often left to pick up the tab," said White House adviser Stephanie Cutter.

Texas AG praises ruling against health care plan

AUSTIN — Texas Attorney General Greg Abbott is praising a federal court ruling that part of the federal health care plan is unconstitutional.

The 11th Circuit Court of Appeals said the new federal requirement that virtually all Americans must buy health insurance exceeded the government's authority. Texas was one of 26 states to sue the federal government over the law.

During a second meeting for instructional staff, Warren discussed the importance of preparing students for life after school. would like to work in private banking.

Being in a professional setting has been beneficial, Folger said.

"This is my first big professional job that I've experienced and you learn a lot in the first couple weeks, just getting up to speed," Folger said. If her schedule permits, Folger will extend her internship through December.

For Dearen, welcoming home wounded service members at the Pentagon was the most memorable part of the internship.

"I actually teared up because there were a lot of amputees, and they were really young and close to my age," Dearen said.

Dearen also enjoyed sitting in on debt deal debates in the House of Representatives.

Fall, spring and summer internships are offered in the Washington D.C., Midland, Odessa, San Angelo, Brownwood and Llano offices.

"If you go (to D.C.), be ready to work and do whatever the staff asks you to," Dearen said. "You'll have opportunities to do interesting and fascinating things you wouldn't have the opportunity to do somewhere else."

Internships are unpaid, but both said it's been a worthwhile experience they would recommend to anyone with an interest in politics.

"You learn so much more about our government, your government," Folger said. "I feel much more involved than I've ever felt after working here."

Although some tasks like answering phones may not be exciting, Dearen said it's been a worthwhile experience working for the congressman and helping constituents.

Donations help reactivate SETI's search for aliens

MOUNTAIN VIEW — An array of 42 radio telescopes seeking signs of intelligent life in the universe will continue that work after private donors raised enough money to keep them going.

The Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence, or SETI, Institute received more than $200,000, including donations from actress Jodie Foster, to keep operating, The San Jose Mercury News reported.

The array was originally a joint project between the SETI Institute and the UC Berkeley Astronomy Laboratory, which pulled out earlier this year because of the loss of National Science Foundation grants and state budget cuts.

Senior SETI Institute astronomer Seth Shostak said he was gratified the money could be raised during these tough economic times.

Honda to build new factory in Mexico

Honda Motor Co. plans to build an $800 million factory in Mexico to make small cars for customers in North America, the company said Friday.

The plant, near Celaya, Guanajuato, north of Mexico City, is expected to open in 2014 and will employ 3,200 workers from the region, Honda said in a statement. It will make up to 200,000 subcompact cars and engines per year, the company said.

"With growing demand for fuel-efficient vehicles, this plant will increase Honda's ability to meet customer needs for subcompact vehicles from within North America," Tetsuo Iwamura, president of American Honda, said in a statement.

Honda now sells the subcompact Fit in North America, importing it to the U.S. from factories in Japan. The company would not say if it will build the Fit at the new factory, but said it tries to build vehicles in regions where they are sold.

Shoppers lift economy, but will they keep spending?

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The economy might not be on the brink of another recession after all.

Consumers, who drive most economic growth, spent more on cars, furniture, electronics and other goods in July — and more in May and June than previously thought. That burst of activity is encouraging because it shows many Americans were willing to spend despite high unemployment, scant pay raises, steep gas prices and diminished wealth.

If it keeps up, the economy might rebound after growing at an annual rate of just 0.8 percent in the first half of 2011.

Whether Americans remain willing to spend freely despite the stock markets' wild swings will determine whether the second half of the year is any better than the first. Their 401(k) retirement accounts have shrunk.

A sustained stock-market decline tends to slow consumer spending because it reduces wealth, especially for upper-income Americans. The richest 10 percent of Americans own 80 percent of stocks. And the richest 20 percent drive about 40 percent of consumer spending, analysts say.

That loss of wealth may help explain a report Friday that consumer sentiment hit a 31-year low in August. The Thomson Reuters/University of Michigan's survey, completed early this week, showed that market turmoil and the political strife over raising the federal debt ceiling rattled consumers.

Associated Press

Gary Hartwig, of Gretna, Neb., fuels his car Aug. 9 at a Costco gas station in Omaha, Neb. Consumers spent more on autos, furniture and gasoline in July, pushing up retail sales by the largest amount in four months. The gain could signal that Americans are a little more confident and help dispell fears that the country is in danger of toppling into another recession

"The fact that retail sales held up over the last few months ... is a positive economic development," said Joseph LaVorgna, chief U.S. economist at Deutsche Bank. "However, the true test will be to see if consumer activity held up in the face of recent financial market gyrations and slumping economic confidence. So the August data will be of much greater significance."

The Dow finished Friday with a gain of 125.71 points, or 1.1 percent, to close at 11,269.02. That means the turbulent week in the end dragged the market down just 1.5 percent after it had plummeted as much as 6.3 percent.

The Dow is still down about 11 percent since July 21.

Worries about the markets and the economy already seem to have caused some shoppers to pull back. The International Council of Shopping Centers-Goldman Sachs index, which tracks revenue at stores open at least a year, has shown two straight weekly declines.

Claire Sanders Swift, a Washington media consultant, said that after the stock market plunged, she "sent her baby sitter home early and called her broker."

"I keep trying to remind myself we've been through this rodeo before," she said early this week. "The fear is making me not want to spend."

It's a pivotal moment for the nation's retailers. They're in the midst of back-to-school season and are planning for Christmas sales. Together, the two shopping seasons represent up to half their annual revenue.

Retailers are concerned the weak economy and stock market turmoil could cause shoppers to retreat as they did when the financial crisis hit in 2008. Back then, spending plunged so much that some retailers slashed prices up to 80 percent just to draw shoppers to stores. Others sold jewelry and clothing to liquidators for pennies on the dollar. Some went out of business.

This time, retailers seem better prepared. They've kept inventories lean to avoid being stuck with huge piles of marked-down products.

Jeff Landis, of Chicago-based Montopoli Custom Clothiers, said because business has been quiet the past few weeks, he's decided to delay stocking up on fabric for custom suits for fall. And Geoff Stern, owner of Toy Professor, a toy store in Summit, N.J., said sales this week were down about 25 percent from a typical August week.

Until late this week, a batch of poor economic data and a gloomy outlook from the Federal Reserve set off fears that the economy might be about to slide into another recession.

Still overhanging the financial markets and the U.S. economy is concern that Europe's debt crisis will spread through the U.S. financial system. Investors worry that Italy and Spain, two of Europe's biggest economies, might be unable to pay their debts.

If they couldn't, big European banks that hold huge amounts of government debt would be at risk of failure. That possibility, in turn, could harm many large U.S. banks with close relationships with their European counterparts.

The mildly positive economic figures in recent days have given economists cause for hope. Layoffs are down. Retail sales are up. Gas prices have fallen. Employers added 117,000 jobs last month. That isn't enough to significantly lower the unemployment rate, now at 9.1 percent. But it was more than expected and was an improvement after two dismal months for hiring.

As presidential candidate, expect Perry to talk jobs

Down the corridor, not far from where Rick Perry had just road-tested what's about to become the central theme of his presidential campaign, a Democratic legislator was ready with an instant review.

"That S. O. B. may just have a message that resonates," he told me, using "S. O. B." in that sort of positive way one man can use it about another. (He used the "S. O. B." words, but, reacting to a good point made recently to me by a reader, I'm cleaning up my act.)

The Perry message is jobs. We need more of them, he often says and probably will say today in Charleston, S.C., when he's expected to make it clear he's running for president.

As I chatted with the Democratic legislator, who is not likely to be a Perry backer, a Republican state lawmaker chimed in with this about Perry: "Jobs isn't the answer to every question." So here was a Democrat saying Perry might have the right message and a Republican saying it's an incomplete message. Curious.

Perry confidantes believe jobs might be about the only answer he'll need. Without jobs, without a solid domestic economy, there can be no successful foreign policy, they believe. I believe many Americans, particularly those without jobs, also believe that.

Here's what Perry told Time magazine about that: "I think the most important thing that we can do from a foreign policy standpoint is to be strong economically. Because if we're not strong economically, we cannot have the resources to be strong militarily."

Governors who run for president always face questions about their foreign policy knowledge. In Texas, our governors basically have a two-river foreign policy to worry about: how to keep Mexicans from illegally crossing the Rio Grande to pick up paychecks in Texas and how to keep Texas high school football players from crossing the Red River to pick up paychecks at OU.

It will be interesting to see how much foreign policy we hear in Perry's Charleston speech today. We're sure to hear themes he's long touted and repeated in San Antonio on Wednesday in addressing the National Council of State Legislatures.

"You all know you weren't going to get out of here today without hearing a little bit about what's working well in Texas," Perry told the state legislators from across the nation.

They also knew they weren't going to get out of there without hearing about what's not working well in Washington, home of what Perry has damned as "a reckless culture that has refused to confront spending." The solution, Perry is prepared to tell America, is reduced federal spending and regulation, lower federal taxes and, in general, getting government out of business' way.

"Simply put, our country's in trouble. Our fiscal house is built on shifting sands," he said. "The federal government has tried to spend our way out of this economic spiral, which has only deepened the crisis and deepened our debt."

He talked about a nation in "one of our darkest hours," but insisted that he is a "West Texas optimist" who "sees our brightest hour is just around the corner."

Reaganesque, don't you think? Perry's people do. In fact, they're counting on that.

That, and, as the Democrat told me, the fact that the S. O. B. may be on to a message that resonates.

Perry becomes instant GOP contender

Thomas Beaumont
Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — Months behind other GOP candidates, Rick Perry has something most of them don't: buzz. The Texas governor will enter the race today with splashy appearances in South Carolina and New Hampshire.

At the same time, he is putting together what looks a lot like a traditional presidential campaign. The path he hopes will lead to the Republican nomination starts here, in the leadoff caucus state of Iowa, with a message of jobs and values as he tries to set himself apart from GOP front-runner Mitt Romney.

The Texan's team is working to expand what it says is already a robust fundraising network and to hire veteran campaign operatives in early primary states. The campaign, as many before it, aims to march through early states, court a broad coalition of conservatives and stress an economic message backed by the candidate's home-state job growth.

"We cannot and must not endure four more years of rising unemployment, rising taxes, rising debt and rising energy dependence on nations that intend us harm," Perry is to say today in Charleston, S.C., according to remarks prepared for delivery.

Still, his hurdles on the way to the GOP nomination are high, given that Perry is later to the game than his rivals, some of whom have been campaigning and fundraising for months.

"We have a consensus that we can do it — and no one's 100 percent convinced it's going to work," Perry's longtime strategist Dave Carney told The Associated Press.

Perry is working quickly to assemble a network of operatives nationally and in key early-voting states Iowa, New Hampshire and South Carolina. He's attracting staff from former House Speaker Newt Gingrich's imploded campaign as well as the aborted presidential bid of Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour.

Analysis

Rob Johnson, who left Perry's office early this year to be Gingrich's campaign manager, is expected to be central to the Texan's presidential campaign and was headed to South Carolina on Friday.

And Perry's even started siphoning staff from current candidates. GOP fundraiser Gary Slayton in New Hampshire shifted from supporting former Minnesota Gov. Tim Pawlenty to Perry this week, saying of the Texan, "He clearly sees the peril facing our beloved nation and has decided to answer the call."

Perry is courting establishment Republicans, economic conservatives and business leaders as he tries to knit together a coalition that spans the GOP spectrum. His team believes that his support among social conservatives already is strong and that he helped himself last week by hosting a national prayer rally. It drew 30,000 people to a Houston arena and the attention of more than 1,000 churches nationwide.

His inaugural campaign trip as a full-fledged candidate provides a window into his strategy for winning the nomination.

It starts Sunday with a three-day trip to Iowa, where he will appear at iconic state venues, including the Iowa State Fair and Iowa City's Hamburg Inn, where the walls are covered with photographs of past presidential candidates.

He'll share the spotlight at one stop — Waterloo — with Minnesota Rep. Michele Bachmann, who changed her schedule after it was announced that Perry would attend a county GOP fundraiser in the city, her birthplace.

While in Iowa, Perry also plans to hold several meetings with elected officials, as well as headline a business round-table in Dubuque.

He'll travel to New Hampshire on Wednesday, and is scheduled to headline the traditional Politics and Eggs breakfast in Bedford Village near Manchester. Stops in six other cities also are planned.

From there, he heads back to South Carolina, a conservative state where Perry's evangelical background, punctuated last week with the day of prayer he headlined in Houston, can serve him well.

He'll spend his time meeting with potential supporters and financial backers, including Barry Wynn, who met with Perry in Austin three weeks ago to start building a national finance operation.

"He has plenty of running room and available staff in South Carolina and will be popular," said Jim Dyke, a Republican strategist in Charleston who is unaffiliated with a 2012 campaign.

Iowa test could make or break Pawlenty, Bachmann

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

AMES, Iowa — Tim Pawlenty and Michele Bachmann, their presidential hopes on the line, made last-minute appeals Friday along with a slew of other Republican contenders ahead of a big weekend test in Iowa that could winnow the large field of GOP candidates. But the pack was expanding, too.

Today's Iowa Straw Poll results will be the first important measure of the GOP pack — just as Gov. Rick Perry officially makes it a bit larger and former Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin works energetically to keep her door open.

"I don't want to step on anybody's feet," she said Friday — even as she did just that with a visit to the Iowa State Fair that was timed to keep her in the conversation as she weighs whether to enter the race.

Elsewhere, Perry was putting the final preparations on his announcement set for the weekend. He gave a preview Friday night with a speech in Alabama.

In Iowa, it was a frenetic day of campaigning in the hours before the straw poll. Thursday night's debate, though pointed at times, didn't fundamentally change the dynamics of the race.

Four months before the leadoff Iowa caucuses, Mitt Romney leads national polls and many states' surveys for the chance to challenge President Barack Obama next fall. But there is no shortage of rivals looking to emerge the top alternative to the former Massachusetts governor who lost the GOP nomination in 2008.

Among them are Pawlenty and Bachmann, Minnesota rivals who have the most at stake in today's straw poll.

They went after each other during Thursday's debate, and the tit-for-tat continued on Friday.

"We're not going to have a nominee or we're not going to put somebody in the Oval Office who hasn't achieved results during their service in Congress," Pawlenty, the former Minnesota governor, said of Bachmann as the day began. "Nobody's questioning her spine, we're questioning her lack of results."

The Minnesota congresswoman, in turn, defended her record in an interview on NBC's "Today" show, casting herself as a top opponent in the debate over Obama's health care plan and "the leading voice, almost the lone voice in the wilderness of Washington, fighting against raising the debt ceiling."

Pawlenty, who has been languishing in early Iowa polls, is out to prove he's a strong player in the GOP race with a victory today, while Bachmann hopes to build on momentum she's enjoyed since entering the race earlier this summer.

"For some people this is make or break," tea party activist Ryan Rhodes said.

Seven other candidates are on the ballot in voting that runs for six hours during the daylong political festival that doubles as a fundraiser for the Iowa GOP. They include Romney, who won the straw poll four years ago but isn't actively competing this time in the nonbinding contest, and former Utah Gov. John Huntsman, who has been bypassing Iowa almost entirely in his hunt for the nomination. Perry and Palin aren't on the ballot, but their supporters are waging write-in campaigns.

Others on the list, including former House Speaker Newt Gingrich of Georgia, Texas Rep. Ron Paul, former Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum and businessman Herman Cain, hope for surprise showings at the event on the campus of Iowa State University.

"It's fairly wide open," said Republican strategist Kellyanne Conway.

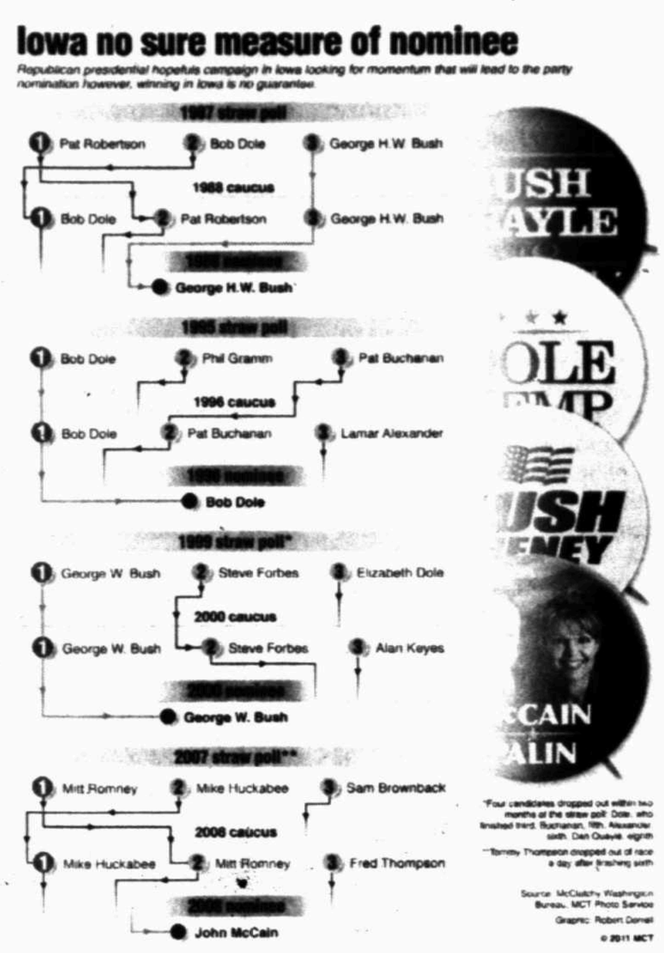

A day before the vote, a circus-like atmosphere already was emerging as campaigns erected giant tents where they will bring in live music and serve up tangy barbecue to court activists. Republicans wouldn't speculate how many people will spend $30 each to attend the event, but turnout in past cycles has ranged from 14,000 to 23,000.

The straw poll has a mixed record of predicting the outcome of the precinct caucuses.

In the past election cycle, Romney won the straw poll but the big news was the surprising second-place showing of Mike Huckabee. Huckabee won the Iowa caucuses but dropped from the race soon after. John McCain, who eventually won the nomination, didn't compete in the straw poll and finished in 10th place.

Poor showings usually force some candidates — mostly those who are not well-known and are struggling to raise money — to abandon their bids, and that could happen this year, too.

"Some of them may have to face the cold, hard facts of campaign life," said Drake University political science professor Dennis Goldford.

US skier tossed off team over in-flight urination

An 18-year-old was dismissed from the U.S. Ski Team's development squad after he was accused of getting drunk and then urinating on a fellow passenger aboard a JetBlue flight.

Robert "Sandy" Vietze, of Warren, Vt., was detained by police at New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport on Wednesday morning after arriving on a red-eye flight from Portland, Ore.

He faces a federal misdemeanor charge of indecent exposure, according to the U.S. Attorney's office in Brooklyn.

A Port Authority Police Department detective wrote in court documents that Vietze told him he had consumed five or six beers and two rum and cola cocktails before boarding the flight. He said he passed out in his seat and awoke to find himself being yelled at by the father of a 12-year-old girl.

The girl's father told the detective that when he returned from a trip to the bathroom at 2:30 a.m., he found Vietze urinating on his daughter.

Starbucks CEO cancels church speech

Starbucks CEO Howard Schultz cancelled an appearance at one of the most prominent megachurches in the country after an online petition condemned the congregation as anti-gay — a charge the church denies.

Schultz had been scheduled to speak Friday at The Global Leadership Summit organized by the Willow Creek Association, based in South Barrington, Ill.

Stick-on patch proposed for patient monitoring

By Randolph E. Schmidt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — One day monitoring a patient's vital signs like temperature and heart rate could be a simple as sticking on a tiny, wireless patch, sort of like a temporary tattoo.

Eliminating the bulky wiring and electrodes used in current monitors would make the devices more comfortable for patients, says an international team of researchers who report their findings in Friday's edition of the journal Science.

"What we are trying to do here is to really reshape and redefine electronics ... to look a lot more like the human body, in this case the surface layers of the skin," said John A. Rogers of the University of Illinois. "The goal is really to blur the distinction between electronics and biological tissue."

The researchers embedded electronic sensors in a film thinner than the diameter of a human hair, which was placed on a polyester backing like those used for the temporary tattoos popular with kids. The result was a sensor that was flexible enough to move with the skin and would adhere without adhesives.

The researchers said the devices had remained in place for up to 24 hours. Rogers said in an briefing that, while normal shedding of skin cells would eventually cause the monitors to come off, he thought they could remain in place as long as two weeks.

Other uses for the devices could include monitoring brain waves, muscle movement, sensing the larynx for speech, emitting heat to help heal wounds and perhaps even being made touch sensitive and placed on artificial limbs, Rogers said.

Rogers is a founder of the company MC10, based in Cambridge, Mass., which is working to develop commercial uses of the devices, but he declined to speculate on how soon the electronic skin would be ready for market or what it would cost.

The monitor looks rather like a bandage and contains an antenna that could be used to transmit data, though a radio to do that transmitting has not yet been tested, Rogers said.

The current design has a small coil and could be powered by induction — by placing it near an electrical coil — Rogers said. That would permit intermittent use, he said, and for longer-term monitoring a tiny battery or storage capacitor could be used.

The monitor doesn't use an adhesive, relying on a weak force called the van der Waals force that causes molecules and surfaces to stick together without interfering with motion. The ability of geckos to climb smooth surfaces has been attributed to the van der Waals force. For longer-term use the electronic skin could be coated with an adhesive.

Rogers and co-lead author Dae-Hyuong Kim, have been working on the technology for several years. They earlier worked together to develop flexible electronics for hemispherical camera sensors and other devices that have complex shapes.

Regents to meet about 'conference alignment'

By Brent Zwerneman
San Antonio Express-News

COLLEGE STATION — The Aggie War Hymn is nearly a century old, but the lyrics "Goodbye to Texas University, so long to the orange and the white" today resonate more timely than ever.

Texas A&M intends to bolt the Big 12 for the Southeastern Conference, multiple insiders said Friday, in abruptly ending its nearly century old league affiliation with rival Texas, and 15-year union with the Big 12, which includes longtime in-state rivals Baylor and Texas Tech. A&M has called for a telephonic regents meeting for 3 p.m. Monday to discuss "conference alignment."

Agenda item 15 reads in part, "Authorization for the President to Take All Actions Relating to Texas A&M University's Athletic Conference Alignment." An A&M official said Friday night that the Aggies hope to begin play in the SEC in 2012, but it's too early in the complex process to determine if that will happen.

A&M pushed up its regularly-scheduled regents meeting from Aug. 22 apparently to stay in front of a hastily-called Tuesday hearing by the Texas House Committee on Higher Education on potential league realignment. SEC school leaders also intend to meet this weekend to essentially rubber stamp A&M's admittance, according to a Big 12 school official.

Earlier Friday, an A&M official said Big 12 commissioner Dan Beebe had told A&M president R. Bowen Loftin that the Big 12 would survive without the Aggies, and that UT holds the key to the long-term future of the Big 12. The A&M official added that the Big 12 believes Houston would be a viable candidate to replace the Aggies.

Beebe couldn't be reached Friday, but Big 12 spokesman Bob Burda dubbed the A&M official's claim "patently untrue information from an unnamed source." Late Friday, the A&M official stood by his claim.

A&M athletic director Bill Byrne is overseas with the Aggies men's basketball team and couldn't be reached for comment. Meanwhile over in Austin, UT athletic director DeLoss Dodds said in a statement, "At this point we do not know if Texas A&M is leaving the Big 12. All we know is what we read and hear in the media. We are actively looking at every possible option we have, and have been talking to other Big 12 schools.

Tiger Woods reacts after missing a birdie putt on the sixth hole Friday during the second round of the PGA Championship at the Atlanta Athletic Club in Johns Creek, Ga.

Woods heads home after missing cut in Atlanta

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

JOHNS CREEK, Ga. — Tiger Woods' stunning downfall has gotten worse: He missed the cut at the PGA Championship.

And it wasn't even close.

The player who once dominated golf headed home Friday after shooting a 10-over 150 at Atlanta Athletic Club, coming up short of the cut by a staggering six strokes.

With no one seizing control of the tournament, this became another day to focus on Woods' collapse, his career in tatters because of personal failings and a broken game.

Consecutive double-bogeys at the 11th and 12th holes ruined any hopes he had of making it to the weekend. He finished with a 3-over 73 on the heels of an opening-round 77.

"I hit 20 bunkers in two days. I had four or five water balls," Woods said. "That's not going to add up to a very good score."

This was only the third time he's missed the cut in a major as a professional, following the 2006 U.S. Open at Winged Foot (shortly after the death of the his father) and the British Open at Turnberry two years ago.

Woods finished in appropriate fashion at the 18th, putting his tee shot in the bunker, his second shot in the water and finishing with a bogey.

He was on the sideline for three months — missing the last two majors — because of an injured leg. Woods returned a week ago at Firestone, proclaiming himself fully fit and ready to go for his 15th major title.

That will have to wait.

Woods is dropping out of public view again for another long layoff. He won't attempt to qualify for the FedEx Cup playoff, so his next tournament will be in November when he heads to Australia.

His next shot at a major is eight months away, at the Masters.

"I get some time off again," Woods said. "But now I'm healthy enough to work on my game. It's going to be good. Sean (Foley, his coach) and I did not really have an opportunity to sit down and do a lot of work. This will be our time."

Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Raymond Radway (86) celebrates with fellow Cowboys wide receiver Dwayne Harris (14) after Harris caught a 76-yard touchdown Thursday during the second half of a preseason game in Arlington.

Cowboys rookies off to good start

By Tom Orsborn
San Antonio Express-News

ARLINGTON — It's unclear whether the Dallas Cowboys rookies will have stars on their helmets when practice resumes today, but there is one thing they've already earned:

The respect of the veterans.

"The younger guys, they just had us fired up," Dez Bryant said after the Cowboys' 24-23 come-from-behind win over Denver on Thursday night. "It was real great to see."

Indeed, the preseason opener was a promising start for several rookies, especially sixth-round wide receiver Dwayne Harris.

Seeking to motivate the youngsters, Jason Garrett instructed the equipment crew at the start of training camp in San Antonio to issue to the rookies practice helmets without stars on them. The coach wants the rookies to earn the decals, and it would seem Harris is well on his way to doing just that.

The East Carolina alum was the headliner against the Broncos, recording five catches for 127 yards and two touchdowns, including a 13-yarder with 15 seconds left that set up the winning 2-point conversion.

"Big-time players make big-time catches in big-time situations," Harris said. "That's what happened."

Harris' first TD catch came on a blitz adjustment. After picking up a block from tight end Martin Rucker, Harris turned Texas A&M alum Stephen McGee's short toss into a 76-yard TD early in the fourth quarter.

"I turned around expecting a hit and nobody was there," he said. "I just saw green grass and the first thing that came to my mind was, don't get caught from behind. Just keep running."

Harris wasn't perfect. He needed some tutoring from McGee and Garrett. But in the end, both were impressed.

"He has a long way to go in terms of understanding how to be a receiver in the NFL and how to consistently get away from people, but I think you'll see he has a knack for playmaking," Garrett said. "That's what we saw on tape when he was coming out of school, and we saw some of that tonight."

Said McGee, who passed for three TDs, "He's had a lot on his plate with no OTAs (because of the lockout) and an offense to learn. A lot of young guys' heads are spinning. He stepped up and made plays. I was proud of him."

The Cowboys were also proud of first-round right tackle Tyron Smith and

RockHounds sweep doubleheader to pull within 3 games of San Antonio

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Thanks to some clutch defense and some gutsy pitching during a Friday doubleheader against Tulsa the Midland RockHounds are right on the heels of the San Antonio Missions in the Texas League South Division standings.

The RockHounds extended their winning streak to eight games with 5-1 and 2-1 victories over the Drillers at Citibank Ballpark and moved within three games of San Antonio in the South after the Missions lost 3-1 at Springfield.

Because the RockHounds trail Frisco by double-digit games in the wild card standings, it's likely that they will have to win the second half South title to get in the playoffs.

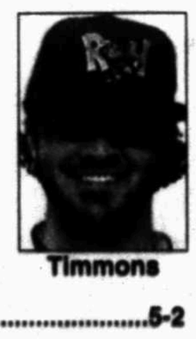

Midland manager Steve Scarsone said with the way his team has been playing, the RockHounds are at least giving themselves a chance with 23 games left in the regular season.

"That's the challenge you want. It's up to us," Scarsone said. "If we continue to play like obviously we're going to be in most games. And when we get close to the end of the season, we'll have an idea where we're at."

The first game saw the Double-A debut of Sonny Gray, the Oakland A's first round pick (18th overall) in June's draft. Gray was on a strict pitch count against the Drillers but showed why he was a highly-touted pitcher coming out of Vanderbilt University as a junior, as of the 46 pitches he threw, 31 of them went for strikes.

Scarsone

Timmons

RockHounds	5-2
Drillers	1-1

Gray's first batter was Tim Wheeler, one of Tulsa's best hitters and a touted prospect in the Colorado Rockies organization. Gray struck out Wheeler swinging and then got a pat on the back from second baseman Wes Timmons, in a sense to welcome him to Double-A ball and give him a boost of confidence.

Gray went 2 2/3 innings, allowed no runs, two hits, struck out five and walked one in only his second professional appearance. His first came in the Arizona Rookie League where he went two innings, allowed one earned run, didn't walk a batter and had two strikeouts in a loss to the Arizona Rangers.

"It was good to see Sonny Gray come out and get some stuff done," Scarsone said. "It looked like he had a good idea of what he was trying to do. I didn't see any nerves or anything like that kept him from staying within his game plan."

The 21-year-old right-hander got all the run support he needed in the first inning when Timmons came through with a bases-loaded single to left against Cory Riordan (1-12) to score Stephen Parker. But Tulsa left fielder Mike Mitchell misplayed the groundball and that allowed both Michael Spina and Shane Peterson to score to give Gray and the Hounds a 3-0 lead.

After the RockHounds extended their lead to 4-0 on a Michael Spina RBI single in the fifth, the Drillers got on the board in the sixth when Wilin Rosario hit a leadoff triple to left and then scored on a Tommy Field single.

But other than that inning, Lenny DiNardo (1-0) was strong in relief, allowing the one run on three hits, didn't allow a walk and struck out three in 4 1/3 innings.

Timmons, who was 2 for 3, added some insurance in the bottom of the sixth with a solo home run into the left field bullpen.

The second game saw both teams score a run in the first inning. Tulsa got an RBI single by Mike Zuanich, while the RockHounds tied the game at 1 when Matt Sulentic scored on a double play groundout by Stephen Parker.

After that first frame, Midland's Anthony Capra and Tulsa's Joe Gardner were locked in a pitcher's duel through the majority of the next four innings.

Gardner (0-2) settled down after that first inning, and at one point retired 10 of the next 11 batters he faced.

Meanwhile, Capra scuffled at times and went deep in counts, but somehow managed to get out of jams by making the right pitch or having his defense — led by third baseman Parker — come up with some key plays behind him.

"(Parker) not only made the routine plays but he gathered up hard-hit balls and made the plays. He's come a long way," Scarsone said.

The RockHounds finally got the go-ahead run in the fifth against Gardner. Adam Heether was hit by a pitch for 20th time this season to lead off the inning. He then moved to second and third on consecutive groundouts by Shane Peterson and Jeremy Barfield, before scoring on a single up the middle of the infield by Mitch Canham.

Tulsa threatened in the sixth and seventh innings but Brett Hunter (3-2) got out of a jam in the sixth, then Jared Lansford got out of a one-out, bases-loaded jam in the seventh when he got Mike Mitchell to hit into a game-ending 4-6-3 double play.

Oscar LeRoy can be reached at oleroy@mrt.com.

'HOUND BITES: Thursday night's rainout was the first rainout this season by a Texas League South Division team. The game between Arkansas and Corpus Christi in Little Rock, Ark., also got rained out, marking the 15th rainout of the season for a North Division team. ... RHP Jon Meloan (oblique) has been placed on the seven-day disabled list. ... RockHounds center fielder Grant Green now has an 11-game hitting streak after going 3 for 6 in the doubleheader. ... LF Matt Sulentic made a great catch to save some runs in the fourth inning of the second game. With two outs and the bases loaded Tulsa's Tim Wheeler drove a ball to deep left-center field but Sulentic ran it down at the warning track and did a little pivot to the wall to end the inning on a highlight. "That catch by Sulentic was a game changer," Midland manager Steve Scarsone said.

TODAY'S PROBABLES: The RockHounds welcome Northwest Arkansas for a three-game series at 7 p.m. today at Citibank Ballpark. RHP Shawn Haviland (6-9, 7.50 ERA) is the probable starter for Midland while the Naturals starter is to be announced.

FRIDAY'S MLB ROUNDUP

FROM WIRE REPORTS

Darren Calabrese/The Canadian Press

The Los Angeles Angels' Erick Aybar, right, turns a game-ending double play over Toronto's Jose Bautista on Friday in Toronto. The Angels defeated the Blue Jays 5-1.

American League

ANGELS 5, BLUE JAYS 1: At Toronto, Ervin Santana won his fifth straight start. Vernon Wells homered against his former club and the Los Angeles Angels beat the Toronto Blue Jays 5-1 Friday night.

Santana (9-8) was working on a shutout before Eric Thames homered with one out in the ninth. But he recovered to complete a seven-hitter for his third complete game in four starts.

The right-hander struck out six and walked two while improving to 6-0 with a 1.50 ERA in his last nine starts, a stretch that includes a no-hitter at Cleveland on July 27.

Wells went 1 for 4 in his first game back in Toronto after 12 seasons with the Blue Jays. The crowd of 24,731 gave him a standing ovation when he came to the plate with two outs in the second, and he stepped out of the box and tipped his batting helmet in gratitude. After stepping back in, Wells swatted Brandon Morrow's first pitch over the wall in left-center for his first homer since July 23 at Baltimore and No. 17 overall.

Morrow (8-7) lost his second straight start, allowing five runs, four earned, and four hits in seven innings. He walked four and struck out three.

RAYS 5, YANKEES 1: At New York, Johnny Damon, Casey Kotchman and Kelly Shoppach all connected in the third inning for three of Tampa Bay's five solo home runs against CC Sabathia, and David Price again came out on top in a matchup of the elite lefties.

Light-hitting Elliot Johnson and Evan Longoria also homered in Tampa Bay's fifth straight win.

The five homers were the most Sabathia (16-7) has allowed in his career. The Rays' previous high for home runs in a game this season was three.

Price (10-10) improved to 3-0 in the five times he's faced Sabathia, pitching eight dominant innings of six-hit ball.

TIGERS 5, ORIOLES 4: At Baltimore, Wilson Betemit homered, rookie Andy Dirks had a career-high four hits, and Detroit overcame two home runs by J.J. Hardy.

Dirks went 4 for 4 with a walk and singled in the tiebreaking run in the sixth inning. Acquired in a July 20 trade with Kansas City, Betemit had three hits and is 9 for 17 in his last five games.

Alex Avila had two hits and scored twice to help the first-place Tigers maintain their four-game lead over Cleveland in the AL Central.

Brad Penny (8-9) allowed four runs and seven hits in 5 1-3 innings to snap a personal three-game losing streak and Detroit received 3 2-3 innings of one-hit relief from a stellar bullpen that has an 0.84 ERA over the last eight games.

INDIANS 3, TWINS 2: At Cleveland, Matt LaPorta and Carlos Santana hit RBI doubles in the eighth inning to rally Cleveland to the win.

The Indians won in their last at-bat at home for the 14th time this season. Minnesota has lost 10 of 12.

Cleveland trailed 2-1 when Travis Hafner singled with one out in the eighth off starter Carl Pavano. Glen Perkins (4-3) relieved and Santana hit a booming double to right-center to score pinch-runner Michael Brantley with the tying run.

With two outs, LaPorta's blooper dropped in front of diving left fielder Ben Revere for the go-ahead run.

Rafael Perez (5-2) got the final out in the eighth for the win and Chris Perez worked a perfect ninth for his 24th save in 27 chances.

ROYALS 5, WHITE SOX 1: At Chicago, Billy Butler and Melky Cabrera homered to lead the Kansas City Royals to a 5-1 win over the Chicago White on Friday night.

Bruce Chen continued his mastery of the White Sox, holding Chicago to one hit over six innings. Chen (7-5) is 2-0 with a 0.90 ERA in three starts against the White Sox this season.

Butler homered in the sixth and had an RBI single in the first. Cabrera broke the game open with a three-run homer in the ninth.

Alex Gordon singled, doubled, walked twice, scored a run, stole a base and reached on catcher's interference for the Royals, who snapped a four-game losing streak.

Rookie Zach Stewart (1-2) pitched well in his home debut as a member of the White Sox. He held the Royals to two runs and seven hits in 6 1-3 innings.

National League

BRAVES 10, CUBS 4: At Atlanta, Dan Uggla belted a pair of solo homers off Carlos Zambrano to extend his hitting streak to an Atlanta-record 32 games and lead the Braves to a 10-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs on Friday night.

Uggla passed Rico Carty's 31-game streak in 1970 for the longest in Atlanta Braves history when he led off the second with his 25th homer.

BREWERS 7, PIRATES 2: At Milwaukee, Ryan Braun and Prince Fielder hit back-to-back homers and Zack Greinke remained perfect at Miller Park to lift the NL Central-leading Milwaukee Brewers to a 7-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates on Friday night.

Braun and Fielder homered in the eighth after the Pirates had chased Greinke (11-4) with two runs earlier in the inning. Milwaukee won its 10th straight at Miller Park against Pittsburgh and is a major league best 42-15 at home this year.

NATIONALS 4, PHILLIES 2: At Philadelphia, Livan Hernandez pitched 6 2-3 strong innings and drove in two runs with a pair of singles, helping Washington beat streaking Philadelphia.

Hernandez (7-11) outpitched All-Star Cole Hamels (13-7) to rebound from a rough outing at Colorado last Saturday. He gave up one unearned run and four hits.

MARLINS 2, GIANTS 1: At Miami, Ricky Nolasco allowed one run in eight innings and Florida snapped a seven-game losing streak and improved to 4-0 this season against the defending World Series champions.

The erratic Marlins had been 0-7 on their homestand, but Nolasco (9-8) outpitched All-Star Matt Cain (9-9). Nolasco struck out four, walked one and gave up six hits.

REDS 5, PADRES 3: At Cincinnati, Jay Bruce hit a three-run homer with two out in the eighth inning to propel Cincinnati to its third straight win.

Logan Forsythe's tiebreaking RBI single put San Diego in front in the top half of the eighth, but the Reds rallied in the bottom half against Josh Spence (0-1).

MHS 6-0 in Monahans

MONAHANS — After two days of play in the Monahans Tournament, Midland High is a perfect 6-0 and yet to drop a set.

On Thursday, the Lady Bulldogs had three dominant victories against Van Horn, Andrews and El Paso Austin. They followed that performance with another three wins on Friday, knocking off Midland Christian, 25-18, 25-20, El Paso El Dorado, 25-11, 25-11, and District 3-5A rival Odessa High, 25-17, 25-16.

Through six games, the Lady Dawgs have had a balanced offensive attack with five players registering at least 20 kills in the tournament. Junior Alexa Griggs is leading the way with 29, while senior Riley Downing has 28.

Setter Leigh Collier had a team-high 73 assists along with 23 digs, three blocks and seven aces.

The Lady Dawgs continue play in Monahans at 11 a.m. today against El Paso Montwood.

Emotional Rodman caps Hall of Fame ceremony

By Brian Mahoney
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Thanking his coaches and apologizing to his family for his shortcomings, Dennis Rodman has been enshrined in the Hall of Fame.

Choking up often during an emotional speech, Rodman said his regret was not being a better father, and praised his coaches for being the father he never had a relationship with.

The enshrinement of the flamboyant five-time champion capped the enshrinement of the 10-member class of 2011 on Friday night. Chris Mullin, the two-time Olympic gold medalist, opened the night as the other headliner.

Rodman wore two outfits to the event, but said his many looks were an "illusion" and that he loved "to just be an individual that's very colorful."

NFL PRESEASON

FROM WIRE REPORTS

REDSKINS 16, STEELERS 7: At Landover, Md., Rex Grossman completed 19 of 26 passes for 207 yards and a touchdown to help the Washington Redskins beat the Pittsburgh Steelers 16-7 on Friday night in the preseason opener for both teams.

LIONS 34, BENGALS 3: At Detroit, Matthew Stafford threw touchdown passes on his two drives, backup quarterback Shaun Hill ran for a score and Jason Hanson kicked a field goal to give Detroit a 24-3 lead at halftime.

SAINTS 24, 49ERS 3: At New Orleans, Mark Ingram had a spinning, tackle-breaking touchdown run in his NFL debut, and New Orleans beat San Francisco.

DOLPHINS 28, FALCONS 23: At Atlanta, Phillip Livas scored on a 75-yard punt return in the third quarter to help Miami overcome a difficult start by quarterback Chad Henne in the Dolphins' victory over Atlanta.

BUCCANEERS 25, CHIEFS 0: At Kansas City, Mo., Josh Freeman was smooth and efficient while leading Tampa Bay to points on three of the four series he played, and the third-year quarterback helped the Buccaneers take advantage of every bobble and blunder that the Chiefs made.

fourth-round left guard David Arkin. Both started and played through the first half.

A botched blitz pickup by Smith led to a sack of McGee in the second quarter, but it was the Southern Cal alum's only major error.

"One of the things that we were pleased with is they didn't seem like (the game) was too big," Garrett said. "They seemed to play with a little confidence."

The same was true of undrafted wideout Raymond Radway. A former track star at Abilene Christian, Radway caught a 6-yard TD pass from McGee and also returned a punt for 40 yards.

NCAA hears Ohio State violations case

By Rusty Miller
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Ohio State has made it through its meeting with the NCAA committee on infractions. Now the Buckeyes have to play the 2011 season knowing that just before their annual showdown against rival Michigan, they could get slapped with a bowl ban.

School officials appeared Friday before infractions committee, which heard how players received improper benefits from a tattoo-shop owner and how ex-coach Jim Tressel learned of those NCAA violations and covered them up. The bottom line: Tressel used players throughout the 2010 season he knew were ineligible.

"We look forward to the committee's report in eight to 12 weeks," athletic director Gene Smith said in a statement afterward. Most such decisions are rendered in six to eight weeks.

If it takes three months, that would mean Ohio State will receive word on penalties in the second week of November — shortly before the Buckeyes travel to Ann Arbor for their annual all-or-nothing game with Michigan on Nov. 26.

Friday's meeting took only four hours, with the 10-member committee not even breaking for lunch. That could be a sign the panel, chaired by Mideastern Athletic Conference Commissioner Dennis Thomas, had few questions and largely accepted Ohio State's version of events following months of investigation.

The school also announced it will repay the $338,811 it received for playing in the Sugar Bowl, a 31-26 victory over Arkansas. Previously, Smith had said Ohio State's proposed sanctions — the departure of Tressel, player suspensions, vacating the 2010 season including the Sugar Bowl win and going on two years of NCAA probation — were severe. But Ohio State changed its self-imposed penalties shortly before the hearing.

Not only could the NCAA committee tack on a bowl ban, it could also limit the Buckeyes' number of recruits, among other possibilities. The NCAA has informed Ohio State that the two most serious findings it could hit the school with — lack of institutional control and failure to monitor players and coaches — are off the board based on information it has received so far.

No one from the public or media was permitted into the hearing room, a hotel ballroom which had 38 microphones placed on tables set up in a square. Guards were stationed outside the doors.

Tressel, eschewing his customary sweater vest for a gray suit, declined to answer questions as he hustled with his attorney through the hotel's lobby and slipped into an elevator.

He did leave behind a news release.

"I had an open and constructive exchange with the committee on infractions," the statement read. "They were well prepared and will now go about their work in deliberations. Again, I would like to apologize to the Buckeye nation, most especially to the players, staff and fans who remain so dear to me."

Ohio State President Gordon Gee also weighed in.

"I appreciated the opportunity to appear today," he said in a statement. "The committee treated us fairly and gave us ample time to share our perspective. Throughout, we have been determined to do what is right in responding to the information we discovered."

AGGIES

From 1B

"We are strong supporters and members of the Big 12. We'd be disappointed if Texas A&M leaves but, if they do, we wish them well."

An A&M official said Friday the Aggies hope to continue playing UT on Thanksgiving in nonconference action, but whether that annual rivalry continues, of course, is to be determined.

The Big 12 barely survived in June 2010, when Nebraska and Colorado announced their intentions to split the league for the Big Ten and Pac-12, respectively. A promise then by Beebe for more money for the remaining members kept the league intact with 10 members, with the new era starting this fall.

Meanwhile ESPN has paid UT $300 million for the groundbreaking Longhorn Network, set to start on Aug. 26. After ESPN announced the LHN's intent to show high school games and at least one Big 12 football game, Loftin on July 21st described the Big 12 as suddenly enveloped in "uncertainty" based on the network's intentions.

Since then, wheels have been in motion for the Aggies to join the SEC, and the Big 12's announcement on Aug. 1 that a one-year moratorium had been placed on the Longhorn Network showing high school games didn't slow down A&M. Neither did the NCAA's ruling this week that branded networks can't air high school games. Privately, A&M's brass has said a potential move to the powerhouse SEC was more about "security and stability" in the new league as opposed to any knee-jerk reaction to the Longhorn Network — and that the LHN simply got the ball rolling (again) for a shift to the SEC.

The Aggies competed in the now-defunct Southwest Conference from 1915-1995, and have been members of the Big 12 since. A&M football, coming off a 9-4 season and ranked ninth in the preseason coaches poll, hasn't defeated an SEC team in its past six tries, including last year against Arkansas in nonconference action and against LSU in the Cotton Bowl.

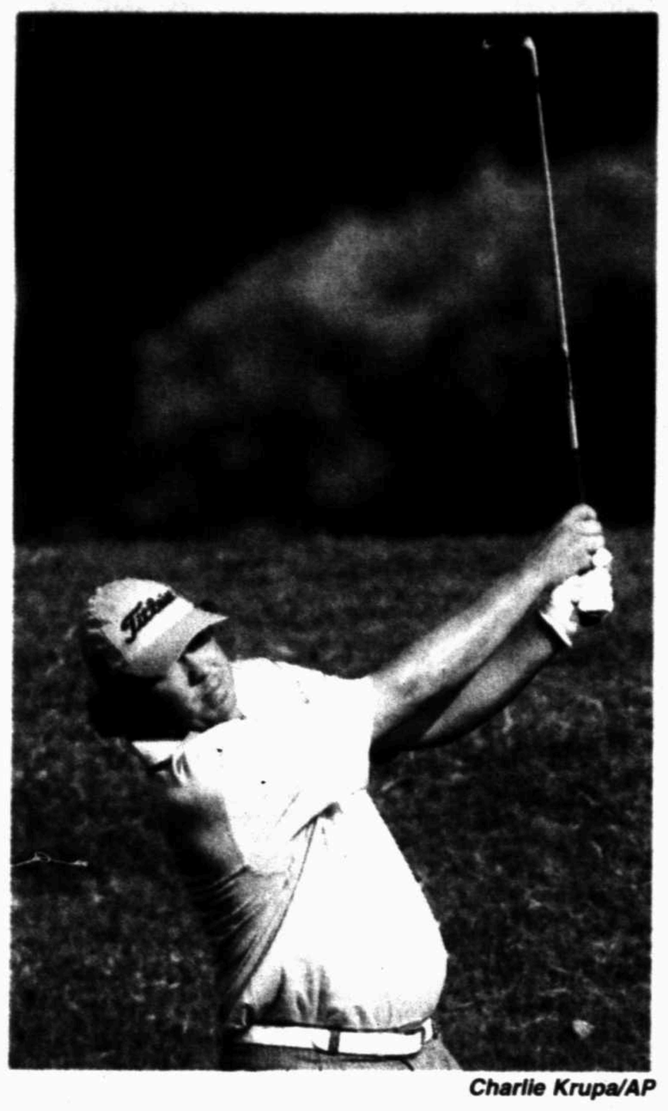

The SEC has won the last five football national titles, and Loftin recently said he understands why A&M fans would want to compete in arguably the nation's top football conference. A&M football coach Mike Sherman said this week he's for any league his bosses decide to compete in.

WOODS

From 1B

There's a lot of work to do, though Woods believes it largely has to do with trusting the changes in his swing.

"My cut shots don't cut as much and my draws don't draw much," he said. "You think it would be pretty easy, but I've played for years a certain way, and I'm going to have to kind of get my sight lines where I feel comfortable with it."

Woods had a glimmer of hope after closing the front side with back-to-back bilmost sympathetic — applause. Hardly the roar he once heard.

Forget making the cut; Woods didn't even beat five of the 20 PGA of American club pros who were in the field.

Even so, he tried to put a positive spin on his miserable performance.

"It's a step back in the sense I didn't make the cut," Woods said. "But it's a giant leap forward in that I played two straight weeks and I'm healthy. It's going to be great for my practice sessions coming up. Now I'll be able to work and get after it."

If Woods missing the cut was the biggest surprise, the golfers at the top of the leaderboard were close behind.

Keegan Bradley, playing in his first major, shot a 64. Jason Dufner, who had missed the cut in five of his last six events, made 65. Both were at 5-under 135.

"I'm playing some good golf," said Bradley, the nephew of LPGA Hall of Famer Pat Bradley. "When you're playing well, it seems easy. I'm hitting a lot of greens and putting some of the best I've putted all year."

Steve Stricker came into the round with a two-stroke lead after a bogey-free 63 — tied for the lowest score ever in a major and just a hair away from having the record all to himself. He missed a 10-footer for birdie and a 62 at his final hole Thursday.

There would be a lot more of those on Friday. Suddenly, one of the game's steadiest putters couldn't make one, lipping out a couple of short attempts and ceding the lead with four bogeys on the front side. He slumped to a 74 and was two shots off the lead.

Jim Furyk (65), D.A. Points (67), John Senden (68) and Scott Verplank (69) were one shot behind at 136.

Rory McIlroy hasn't given up challenging on the weekend, even after struggling to a 73 that included a triple bogey. He was eight shots off the lead.

Just making it through the first two days was an accomplishment for McIlroy, given what he did on his third hole of the tournament. The 22-year-old from Northern Ireland strained a tendon when he foolishly took a swing with his ball sitting against a thick tree root Thursday.

He considered quitting a couple of times, but felt comfortable about carrying on after getting an MRI and being told by the medical staff that he couldn't do any more damage. With a heavily taped arm and wrist, he carried on another day — and did well enough to make it to the weekend.

"If it wasn't a major," he said, "I probably would've stopped."

Girl whiles away summer waiting for phone to ring

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I am 12 years old and I have a boyfriend, "Zak." Because it's summer, we don't communicate with each other as much as usual. Most people would think we'd be more in touch, but because we're both on vacation, we haven't been. I always text his phone, but most of the time I never get an answer back. Or he'll text, "I'm busy, I'll text you later," or "Sorry, can't talk. I'll call you later." But he never does.

Not long ago, I talked to Zak on the phone for a short time and he said he'd call back the next day around noon. He never called at all that day. Sometimes I don't hear from him for days on end.

Do you think I'm overreacting? Do you think he thinks I'm annoying? Maybe he feels I'm obsessing over him. I'm pretty sure if he wanted to end our relationship he would just come out and say it, but do you think he really does but doesn't want to hurt me? Help, Abby! — CRAZY ABOUT HIM IN ARKANSAS

DEAR CRAZY: Zak appears to be a normal adolescent boy who has many interests -- and possibly parents who keep him busy. That would account for his not calling you later or returning your texts.

Rather than worrying about why he's not performing up to your expectations, you should develop some other interests and activities so you won't have so much time to worry about Zak. That way you'll appear less needy, clingy and insecure, and you'll be more attractive and interesting to be around once school starts again.

And one more thing: Think positive! Dwelling on the negative will only make you feel more unhappy and insecure than you're feeling right now.

DEAR ABBY: Last fall, a horrible car accident claimed the life of a young local man. A roadside memorial of wreaths and memorabilia was erected. Since then, no one has tended the site, and the elements have take their toll on it. The offerings look like litter now. Would it be appropriate to remove the battered items? Or would a respectful cleanup of the site be in poor taste? — PASSERBY IN MAINE

DEAR PASSERBY: Roadside memorials are usually placed there by the family or friends of the deceased, who also tend to them. They are sometimes removed by street cleaning or highway maintenance crews when they have reached the stage you have described. A report made to the city or state department that's in charge of maintaining the road would be better than attempting to do the job on your own, and it's safer.

DEAR ABBY: My sister is an alcoholic and prescription drug abuser who causes a scene at every family gathering. There will be an important family event soon, and we don't want to invite her for fear she'll ruin it by showing up drunk or high. My mother is angry and says it's not right to ostracize my sister, and if she's not invited, my mother will not attend, either. What should we do? — NO DRAMA, PLEASE IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR NO DRAMA: You have two choices. Invite your sister with the clear understanding that if she shows up drunk or high, your mother will remove her from the premises and see she gets safely home. Or, refuse to give in to your mother's blackmail and tell her that if she chooses not to come, all of you will miss her. Period.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Aug. 13, 2011:

This year, you juggle many different people, feelings and issues. You seek a midpoint or resolution. Issues of guilt and resentment could arise. Reaching a place where both parties in a marriage can feel that they have enough say or dominance will be important. If you are single, knowing your boundaries remains instrumental when dating. Your charisma shines this year. You have many options in your life. AQUARIUS often expresses the other side of the issue.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Remember a friend. Make plans to get together — if not today, then soon. This person cares a lot. Why not bring loved ones together for a spontaneous party? Tonight: Where the action is.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ Be aware of an implicit demand from an authority figure. Though you might want to spend your day as planned, you might not have much of a choice right now. Follow through on an obligation. Tonight: As late as you want.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Respond to a distant drummer and follow that voice. You will enjoy the adventure and change of scenery. In some sense, you will want to walk out of your life for a short time. Where is the grass greener? Tonight: Go exotic.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ You might want to understand your limitations and choices. A partner could be stressing you out by asking too much from you. Establish limits and boundaries. Ultimately, it will make your relationship work better. Tonight: Who is going to treat?

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ You might want to rethink a personal issue, as you might not have a choice. Many people around you cannot help but play devil's advocate, no matter what. A serious attitude colors a moment or two. Tonight: Just don't be alone.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ Complete a project before you decide to go out. Your sense of humor comes through, though some people might not get your wit. Consider adding to your health routine to make yourself better. Tonight: Disappear. Say little.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Others try to lighten the moment. You will lighten up, but you like the friendly coaxing from friends and loved ones. Don't go to extremes if you can avoid it. Stay within your immediate social routine. Just do what comes naturally. Clearly, someone wants you to join in. Tonight: Fun and games.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Don't hesitate to step back a little. You might be tired or overwhelmed by what you have to do. Not everyone responds to stress like you do. You can stand a lot before you have to take a break! Consider taking a nap. Tonight: The action is at your pad.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ You might be juggling a lot of changes, calls and discussions. Look at the situation as invigorating as opposed to aggravating. You will fare well. In the end, recognize what a good time can be had. You enjoy hearing from all quarters. Call someone if you haven't heard from him or her of late. Tonight: Enjoying where you are.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ Watch what you do, and be aware that some actions will draw strong reactions. Chill if you can, but put a stop sign out if someone tries to cross a financial boundary. The word is "no." You cannot make a decision in this atmosphere. Tonight: Indulging doesn't mean overspending.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ Today's Full Moon hits you. Depending on how you handle energy, you could use this moment to expand your horizons, solidify a relationship or make a move toward growing your immediate circle. Certainly what this day is about is socializing, commitments and caring. Tonight: You ultimately make the call.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ You need some downtime. You often give so much of yourself that you tumble into exhaustion and fatigue. Even in the best of worlds, everyone needs a break from the here and now. Take yours with grace. Tonight: Play it low-key.

best BBQ in Texas

BBQ Posse lists Texas favorites

By Gary Jacobson
The Dallas Morning News

As the Texas BBQ Posse, a small group from the Dallas Morning News, and friends, have traveled nearly 2,500 miles over the past year and a half searching for the best barbecue in the state.

For us, real Texas barbecue means using real wood. We haven't visited every region yet — a Houston trip is scheduled soon — but we have eaten at a lot of great places. Here are our don't-miss joints so far, in alphabetical order.

BABY J'S BARBECUE & FISH, Palestine — Owner and pitmaster Jeremiah "Baby J" McKenzie will make you feel like family. He might even give you samples right off the pit. It's worth the drive just to see his 20-foot-tall smoker, the one he calls "Big Baby." Don't forget to try the fish.

Open 11 a.m.-8 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday; FM 2419 at U.S. 287, Palestine; 903-729-8402.

FRANKLIN BARBECUE, Austin — Young Aaron Franklin is the reigning rock star of Texas barbecue, praised by everyone from the BBQ blogs to Bon Appetit. His

The Alamo: Phil Collins and 15 more things to remember

By Helen Anders
Cox Newspapers

SAN ANTONIO — Some folks just love the heck out of the Alamo. They not only remember it; they know everything about it, and they revel in hanging out on its grounds. You may place rocker Phil Collins in this category. More on him later.

For a second group of Alamo visitors, the Alamo is but an item on a checklist of Things To Visit in San Antonio. They visit. They move on. You might place Ozzy Osbourne in this category. More on him later.

Finally, there are people who remember the Alamo, but about all they remember is that the Texians lost to the Mexicans shortly before Texas won its independence at San Jacinto on April 21, 1836. (It stayed independent until 1845, when it joined the United States. Most people remember that part, too.)

These visitors — and they are legion — approach the Alamo wanting to know more.

So, in honor of the 175th anniversary of the Battle of the Alamo, as well as Texas' independence, here are some things you might not know about the 'Mo:

1. The Alamo recently changed hands — sort of. In June, Gov. Rick Perry signed legislation putting the General Land Office, instead of the Daughters of the American Revolution, in charge of the Alamo. However, the land office is signing a contract with the DAR so that the daughters can continue to take care of the Alamo.

2. The Alamo has a Facebook page. Aw.

3. There is graffiti at the Alamo that appears to date to the early 1800s — that is, if whoever scrawled 1802 on the wall really did it in 1802. The Alamo's staff has been working on identifying and preserving this old graffiti (as opposed to the new graffiti, which includes "Tom" carved onto the front of the chapel — nice going, Tom).

The Alamo, by the way, is under surveillance 24 hours a day, and anyone caught putting graffiti on it now gets to check off a visit to the San Antonio jail.

4. It's not always the same old Alamo. "People think there's nothing new at the Alamo," Bruce Winders, its curator and historian, says. "There's always something new at the Alamo." For example: There's an Alamo day camp where kids learn what it was like to livei n the 1830s and 1840s.

5. Speaking of the 1830s and 1840s, Winders says that people inside the Alamo at that time ate mostly beef and corn.

6. The history of the Battle of the Alamo is being recast, Winders says — into what it really is: "It's a combination of U.S. history and Mexican history. The Battle of the Alamo

Beale Street in Memphis MCT

Take a walk through tragedy, barbecue, music of Memphis, in the heart of downtown

By Dianna Hunt
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

MEMPHIS — You can't escape the blues on Beale Street. It beckons from every little club, street corner, bar and restaurant.

Once the center of African-American culture in Memphis, Beale Street today is an entertainment destination, a little like the French Quarter in New Orleans, but with a different beat. Not unlike Sixth Street in Austin, but with a little less flash.

It's a place to wander up and down, in and out of the bars, restaurants and open courtyards, which all feature live music. There's the original B.B. King's Blues Club, the Hard Rock Cafe Memphis and dozens of other little places mixed in among the shops. Dig into a plate of barbecue while you're at it.

But Memphis is more than blues and barbecue, despite an act of Congress that made this city officially the Home of the Blues. Although it sits in the shadow of Nashville, its sister city to the east, Memphis is a destination all its own.

Only a seven-hour drive from Fort Worth, it is home to the powerful National Civil Rights Museum at the Lorraine Motel, where Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated April 4, 1968; the Peabody Hotel and its world-famous ducks; Sun Studio, where Elvis and others first recorded; the Stax Museum of American Soul Music; the Memphis Rock 'n' Soul Museum; the Gibson guitar factory; professional basketball team the Memphis Grizzlies; and, of course, Graceland.

Here are some things you won't want to miss.

Beale Street

Memphis traces its distinct sound to musician W.C. Handy, who in 1909 published a song that came to be known as The Memphis Blues. Beale Street still embodies that sound, although you'll also find jazz and rock scattered among the clubs along the way.

Beale Street is an easy destination. If you stay at the Peabody or the Westin Hotel, you're just a block away. Otherwise, park your car in one of the lots and follow the sounds and energy. Sections of Beale Street are blocked off, making it easy for pedestrians to crisscross the street.

Have a drink, cool off, maybe eat some dinner, and enjoy the music. It'll bring a smile to your face.

Peabody Hotel

You shouldn't miss the ducks in the fountain at the Peabody.

The historic hotel has beautiful rooms and an ideal location, just one block from Beale Street. But the ducks are what draw several hundred people a day to the hotel's luxurious lobby.

Not unlike the way the Fort Worth Herd parades down Exchange Avenue in the Stockyards, the Peabody ducks march from their rooftop perch at the hotel, down the elevators and through the lobby to spend each day in the fountain. With the help of a red-coated Duckmaster, they return to the roof at the end of each day.

Crowds push right up to the red carpet to catch the mallards on parade at 11 a.m. and 5 p.m.

"Who would think about ducks in a hotel?" says current Duckmaster Jason Sensat. "It's great to see the excitement in their eyes."

As the official hotel story goes, the ducks first landed in the fountain in 1932, after the Peabody's general manager had returned from a weekend hunting trip to Arkansas. Alcohol was reported to have been involved when the man and his friend decided to deposit their live duck decoys (they were legal then) into the hotel fountain.

The ducks were a hit, and eventually a former circus animal trainer was brought in in the 1940s to streamline the marches. They continue today with four or five farm-raised ducks that spend about three months in the limelight before being rotated back to the farm.

The Peabody also has a lovely rooftop deck, where you can see the ducks in their Duck Palace and look out over the Mississippi River and Beale Street.

And don't even ask — duck is not on the menu at any of the Peabody's restaurants.

Rates at the Peabody start at about $185. Check the website for special deals and packages (www.peabodymemphis.com). You should stay there if you can, if only to get a look at the beautiful rooms. But if you can't, you're still welcome in the lobby for the duck march.

National Civil Rights Museum

A burned-out bus that the Freedom Riders once rode and other symbols of the 1960s civil rights movement are among the items in the National Civil Rights Museum at the Lorraine Motel.

The Lorraine — once one of the only places where African-American travelers could spend the night in Memphis — appears largely unchanged. To stand in front of it is to take a step back to 1968.

A wreath hangs on the balcony outside the room where King had spent the night, and a white Cadillac is parked beneath it, just like the one that was waiting for him on the day he died.

The museum explores the rise of the civil rights movement, from the 1600s to modern-day efforts. It is custodian of the police and evidence files associated with the manhunt of convicted assassin James Earl Ray. Among the questions it explores is whether Ray worked alone in the assassination; the courts held that he did, but many believe otherwise. An exhibit area across the street features the boardinghouse room where Ray is believed to have stayed before shooting King.

The civil rights museum is a somber experience, not unlike the Sixth Floor Museum in Dallas. People of all ages wander quietly through, pondering a world very different from today. It's an experience that shouldn't be missed.

Music museums

There's no shortage of music history in Memphis, and three museums are worth a look.

Just a block from Beale Street and on the same plaza as the FedExForum, where the Memphis Grizzlies play, the Memphis Rock 'n' Soul Museum was the first permanent Smithsonian museum outside of Washington, D.C. The museum showcases the growth of music from sharecroppers to Sun Studio, including W.C. Handy, with photos, recordings and memorabilia. Perhaps the best part of this small museum are the early recordings that captured the budding genre.

You may also want to see the Stax Museum of American Soul Music, which features memorabilia and exhibits from Stax Records and celebrates the rise of soul music from the tiny studio, whose artists included Isaac Hayes, Otis Redding and Wilson Pickett. It's housed on the original site of Stax Records.

Sun Studio should also be on your list of places to see. This iconic Memphis studio gave starts to Johnny Cash, Elvis Presley, B.B. King and Jerry Lee Lewis. For an extra fee you can make your own recording.

The rub on barbecue

You can't travel to Memphis without sampling its world-renowned barbecue. The city is known for its dry-rub style (without a heavy sauce), and Charles Vergos' Rendezvous restaurant is credited with making it famous by offering to ship ribs overnight. The downtown restaurant is just a block from the Peabody and near Beale Street. Vergo died last year, but his restaurant still operates. And yes, it will ship ribs — visit www.hogsfly.com.

Another barbecue restaurant not to miss is Neely's, whose owners include Patrick and Gina Neely, of the Food Network's Down Home With the Neelys. The Neelys' barbecue features a sauce perfected by Patrick Neely's uncle Jim Neely and an ample meat selection.

Bat on Wisconsin flight prompts rabies probe

By Mike Stobbe
AP Medical Writer

ATLANTA — Health officials say a bat on a flight from Wisconsin to Atlanta last week has sparked a national search for passengers to protect them against possible rabies.

Officials don't know if the bat had rabies. It escaped. But they want to alert passengers of the risk just in case. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention says it is trying to reach all 50 people who flew on Delta flight 5121, which departed from Madison, Wis., to Atlanta at 6:45 a.m. on Aug. 5.

If the animal was rabid, people could catch rabies from a bite or exposure to the bat's saliva.

CDC officials asked anyone on the flight to call 1-866-613-2683. The airline didn't retain the records for all the passengers.

The jet was in the air when the winged animal emerged and a passenger shot a video. Operators of the flight said it could have been a bird. But CDC says its rabies expert believes from the video that it was a bat.

ALAMO

occurred within an ongoing Mexican civil war. We've kind of broken off with pop culture and become a real history."

7. The shape of the Alamo, as a set of buildings, is being recast. Winders says look for a book by Gary S. Zaboly called "An Altar for Their Sons: The Alamo and the Texas Revolution in Contemporary Newspaper Accounts" (Texas A&M University Press) in September.

Winders says this book will change the way kids make models of the Alamo, so don't let your kid make his or her model until then. The book jacket includes a friendly blurb from Phil Collins.

8. Why do we care what Collins thinks? Because he is, as previously mentioned, an Alamophile — perhaps the biggest ever. He has amassed what's believed to be the world's largest private collection of Alamo memorabilia, including things like a book signed by Davy Crockett.

9. There may or may not be ghosts at the Alamo. The Alamo's handlers won't commit. "I've never had a ghostly experience," Winders says. Visitors around dusk, he says, sometimes see backlit workers inside the Alamo and leap to the conclusion that they're ghosts.

Ghost hunters, sometimes from the Discovery Channel and other TV shows, often ask to film at the Alamo. They always get a no.

"We try not to do it in a hateful way," Winders says. "We don't acknowledge ghosts. We don't deny them. It's just not our focus."

10. On a vine-covered wall next to the Alamo's courtyard, Winders says (when pressed for something weird about the Alamo), is a place where it looks like there's a face in the rock. "It looks like some rock cutter was bored," he says. He's seen it in the past. However, when Winders goes to the wall on a recent day and pulls back the vines, he can't find the face. (Is he sure there aren't ghosts?)

11. The round indentation on the planter just to the right of the entrance to the Alamo's chapel is, indeed, a cannonball hole.

12. The battle wasn't about a fort. It was about the city. San Antonio was 100 years old then, Winders says. The city was a center of commerce with about 2,500 people. Whoever controlled the Alamo controlled the city. That's why the Texians thought it was worth taking, Winders says, and Mexico thought it was worth getting back.

13. Few visitors these days ask whether Davy Crockett really died at the Alamo. But the answer is: Yes. Rumors of his escape persuaded Crockett's son to go looking for him in Mexico, where he was said to have been seen working in the salt mines, according to Winders. The junior Crockett did not find his dad.

14. It's rare, Winders says, but occasionally people still think the Alamo was moved to the middle of San Antonio from someplace else. For those few: It's always been exactly where it is.

15. In 1982, Ozzy Osbourne urinated on — no, not the Alamo — the cenotaph, just outside the Alamo's walls, that honors the men who died there. The errant rocker said he didn't mean to mess with Texas; all he saw was a wall. He was really, really, sorry. In fact, he was $10,000 worth of sorry to the Daughters of the American Revolution.

16. You can see the Alamo at night and look for ghosts if you book an overlooking-the-Alamo room at a number of hotels nearby. My favorites are the Emily Morgan, the Menger and the Indigo because they're all in historic buildings near the Alamo.

The Emily Morgan (705 E. Houston St., 210-225-5100, emilymorganhotel.com), which has the best views because it hovers over the Alamo from across the street from the chapel, is its official hotel. Recently renovated Alamo-view rooms start at $119.40. The 1920s building includes a bar and restaurant.

The Menger, on the other side of the Alamo at 204 Alamo Plaza (210-223-4361, mengerhotel.com), was built in 1859 and has a nice pool and a good bar, as long as you don't order the overly sweet margaritas. Its rooms start at $129.

The Indigo Hotel Alamo (104 N. Alamo St., 877-270-1394, bit.ly/n13To0) opened two years ago in a 1909 office building. (The old elevator facade is still there to confuse you until somebody tells you quit pressing its buttons and walk behind it to the new, working elevators.) Contemporary rooms with good beds start at $89, and the restaurant has a good, affordable breakfast.

If you go ...

The Alamo is at 300 Alamo Plaza. (Actually, it's in the center of Alamo Plaza.) It's free to visit. It usually closes at 5:30 p.m., but on summer Fridays and Saturdays, until the end of August, it's open until 7 p.m. Find out more at thealamo.org.

BARBECUE

brisket hits a 10 on a scale of 10 every time we eat there. And to think he started from a trailer less than two years ago. Warning: Get there early because the lines are long and meat runs out fast.

Open Tuesday-Sunday, 11 a.m. until sold out; 900 E. 11th St., Austin; 512-653-1187; www.franklinbarbecue.com.

Hard Eight BBQ, Stephenville — We've eaten better smoked meats, but this place is hard to beat for barbecue as performance art. The pits are lined up right outside the entrance. You can watch the pitmasters shovel burning coals and load their briskets on the cooking racks. The beer is cold and free.

Open 10:30 a.m.-9 p.m. Monday-Thursday, 10:30 a.m.-10 p.m. Friday-Saturday, 10:30 a.m.-8 p.m. Sunday; 1091 Glen Rose Road, Stephenville; 254-968-5552; www.hardeightbbq.com.

Loco Coyote Grill, Glen Rose — If there were a perfect place to end a barbecue tour, this might be it. Harvest moon rising over the patio. Willie and Waylon on the sound system. The BBQ poor boy sandwich alone might be worth the trip.

Open 5-8 p.m. Thursday, 4-9 p.m. Friday, noon-9 p.m. Saturday, 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Sunday; 1795 County Road 1004, Glen Rose; 254-897-2324.

Louie Mueller Barbecue, Taylor — Easily among the top three joints in Texas. Decades of smoke coat the walls and the food is terrific, especially the giant beef ribs. Don't be surprised if owner Wayne Mueller stops by your table to see how you enjoyed your meal.

Open 10 a.m.-7:30 p.m. Monday-Saturday; 206 W. Second St., Taylor; 512-352-6206; www.louiemuellerbarbecue.com.

Meshack's Bar-B-Que Shack, Garland — There's nothing fancy about this small joint, run by Travis and Donna Mayes. He may be the top pitmaster in the Dallas area. Their place looks like a cross between a drive-up snow cone stand and a doughnut shack. There's nowhere to sit, and service can be slow. But try the pork ribs and we'll bet you'll be back.

Open 10:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Tuesday, 10:30 a.m.-7 p.m. Wednesday-Saturday; 240 E. Avenue B, Garland; 214-227-4748.

Pat Gee's Barbecue, Tyler — Nestled between a pasture and pine trees in rural East Texas, this small wooden shack has more atmosphere than any other joint we've visited. The late, legendary pitmaster Pat Gee first fired up his smoker in the early 1970s. His sons keep the tradition alive.

Open Friday-Sunday, 11 a.m. until sold out; 17547 Jamestown Road, Tyler; 903-534-0265.

Pecan Lodge, Dallas — Justin and Diane Fourton are newcomers to the Texas barbecue scene, but they're quickly making a mark. On a couple of occasions that we've eaten there, Justin's brisket has rivaled Aaron Franklin's. And Justin uses only mesquite wood.

Open 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Thursday-Friday, 9 a.m.-3 p.m. Saturday-Sunday; 1010 S. Pearl Expressway, Farmer's Market, Shed No. 2, Dallas; 214-748-8900; www.pecanlodge.com.

Smitty's Market, Lockhart — Tourists use the front door, locals use the back, where you walk just past an open wood fire to place your order. Eating at Smitty's is like stepping back 100 years in the history of Texas BBQ. It's an experience you won't forget.

Open 7 a.m.-6 p.m. Monday-Friday, 7 a.m.-6:30 p.m. Saturday, 9 a.m.-3 p.m. Sunday; 208 S. Commerce St., Lockhart; 512-398-9344; www.smitsmarket.com.

Snow's BBQ, Lexington — If you love barbecue, then watching the sun come up on a Saturday morning as you wait for Snow's to open is almost a religious experience. Splash just the tiniest bit of Snow's sauce on a brisket sandwich and you might have one of the best breakfasts you've ever eaten. Every Central Texas barbecue tour should start here.

Open Saturdays only, 8 a.m. until sold out; 516 Main St., Lexington; 979-773-4640; www.snowsbbq.com.

Stanley's Famous Pit Bar-B-Que, Tyler — Last year, Texas Monthly declared Stanley's pork ribs to be the best in the state. No arguments from us. Pitmaster and owner Nick Pencis bought the joint a few years ago and continues a 60-year tradition. Try the brother-in-law sandwich and you'll never scoff again at eating cheese with brisket and sausage.

Open Monday-Saturday, 11 a.m.-2 p.m. or until sold out; 525 S. Beckham Ave., Tyler; 903-593-0311; www.stanleyspitbbq.com.

Taylor Cafe, Taylor — Walk through the doors of this run-down joint near the railroad switching yard in downtown Taylor and you'll probably find owner Vencil Mares, the patriarch of Texas BBQ, ready to greet customers as he has just about every day since he opened in 1949. Vencil cooks BBQ the old-fashioned way. We like it like that.

Open 7 a.m.-10 p.m. daily; 101 N. Main St., Taylor; 512-352-8475.Finding barbecue-When it comes to finding great BBQ joints, we gather tips from everywhere: friends and readers, food blogs (especially Daniel Vaughn's Full Custom Gospel BBQ blog; http://fcg-bbq.blogspot.com) and Texas Monthly's Top 50 rankings (www.texas-monthly.com/preview/2008-06-01/feature10; a new list comes out every five years, the next one in 2013).

On tours, if we run into a place that is off the main highway, has a homemade sign and is belching lots of wood smoke, we'll probably stop.

In judging the quality of barbecue, we want taste (a spice rub and solid wood flavor), tenderness (which also means moistness) and appearance (including a nice crust on brisket).

Orbitz names travel consultant to board

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Online travel agency Orbitz Worldwide Inc. said Friday that it added a travel-industry consultant and former executive to its board this week.

The company said Kenneth S. Esterow replaced William J.G. Griffith IV, a buyout firm executive who resigned from the board to spend time on other professional responsibilities. Griffith had been on the board since 2007.

The appointment of Esterow, 47, took effect Tuesday. He has held several positions at Orbitz's largest shareholder, Travelport Ltd., and at Cendant Corp. He was president and CEO of Travelport's Gullivers Travel Associates unit from 2007 until this year.

8300 Dunblane

Who knew there was an oasis in Midland? That is exactly what you will find when you arrive at 8300 Dunblane in Pecan Acres. Welcome home to tall palm trees, a luxury swimming pool and one of the most spectacular views of the sunset that can be found in Midland. From the view off the patio balcony, you can relax and watch as the sun touches the horizon each evening. Built in 2005, the two story home is on 2.507 acres and features 5,018 square feet of living space with six bedrooms, five full baths, two living areas, two dining areas, a four car garage, three fireplaces, a swimming pool, outdoor kitchen and a barn or stable. Schools for this area include Scarbauer Elementary, Goddard Jr. High and Midland High School.

Breathtaking is the word to describe this stucco and tile roof home. Massive windows light up from the inside as dusk approaches, sparkling from the gorgeous decorative lighting both inside and out. This is a custom built home and all the cabinetry, built-in cabinets and anything made of wood was created by Crystal Cabinets in Midland. Oversized crown moulding and baseboards outline all the walls, tall ceilings including several that are two-story and wrought iron accents on the stairway and landing add to the elegant appeal of this home.

As you enter, your eyes are drawn to the two-story window looking out to the backyard and luxury pool. Beautiful Saltillo tile covers the floors and golden hues accent the walls. Step down one step to the formal dining area on the right, which has a view of the front yard. A modern chandelier hangs down from the second floor over your dining table; move over to the formal living area after dinner and relax on the couch as you enjoy the view out the back . . window. A custom built mantle surrounds the gas log fireplace. Look up to see the landings leading to bedrooms and a balcony.

From the formal dining area is an entrance to a chef's dream kitchen. No expense has been spared and it shows in the granite countertops, decorative backsplashes, beautiful cabinetry, beveled glass inlay in the cabinets and built in china cabinet and lights on the top as well as the bottom of the cabinets. An island offers prep space for making your favorite recipes as well as storage in drawers and shelves. Pull up a barstool to the counter or take a seat in the informal dining area and enjoy the magnificent view out the window to the backyard. The laundry room is by the kitchen and features more storage, a sink and space for a washer and dryer.

Entertaining in this house can be inside as well as out in the back as you enjoy the large covered porch with flagstone flooring, a flat-screen television and areas for tables and chairs. You will be even more excited to invite friends over when you see the outdoor kitchen. A grill with a rotisserie, refrigerator, sink and drawers in addition to a fireplace may make this outdoor space your favorite area. The swimming pool is fiberglass and features decorative tile and seating at both ends.

Back inside, to the left of the front door is the first of six bedrooms. Architectural details appear in the bedrooms and bathrooms in this house in addition to the main rooms. All bedrooms have Plantation shutters, ceiling fans and large walk-in closets. The bathroom here opens to the hallway as well as the bedroom.

Down the hallway, is the gameroom and wet bar area. A tiered ceiling adds to the height of the room and built in wine racks, cabinets and tile countertops make this a perfect playroom. Continue on to the TV room where there is a wall of built-ins as well as a gas-log fireplace and mantle.

A wrought iron curved stairway by the front door leads up to the remaining bedrooms. Two rooms are connected with a Jack and Jill bathroom, which has a separate shower and tub as well as his and her sinks. Another bedroom could be used as an office as it has a built in desk. The fifth bedroom has a built in corner cabinet for extra storage.

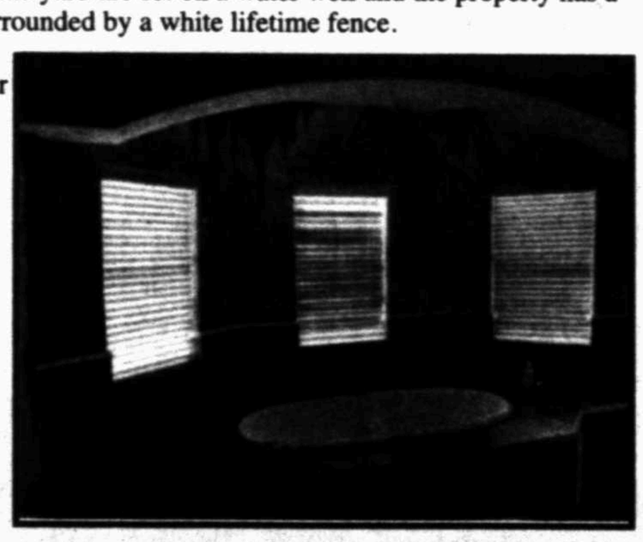

The master suite is more than a bedroom—it is a destination! Relax in this elegant and well-appointed retreat. A three-tiered ceiling adds to the airy feeling, and the bathroom offers a raised jetted tub, extra large shower, his and hers sinks and spacious dressing area. Want coffee as soon as you wake in the morning? Look no further than your own wet/coffee bar in the bathroom. There is even a sink to rinse your cup! Enjoy your drink out on the balcony and enjoy the view of West Texas and your pool area.

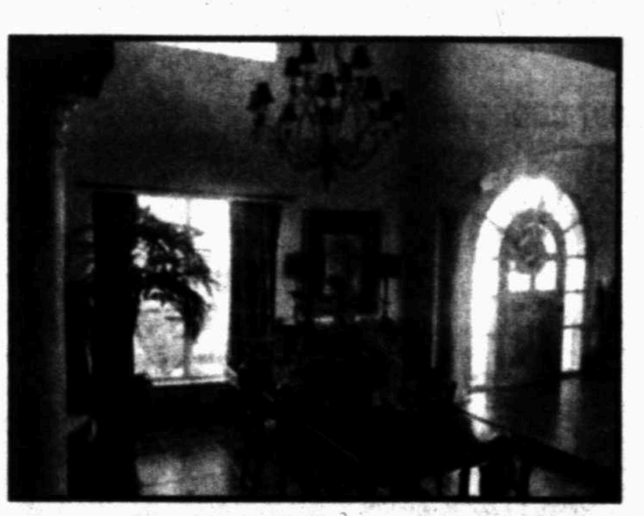

An extra large walk-in closet with shelves and hanging areas will keep you organized.

In addition to an oversized two-car garage, you will also see the barn or stable area. This has another two-car garage as well as three horse stalls with electricity. The sprinklers for the yard are set on a water well and the property has a 500 galloon holding tank. The house is on city water and is surrounded by a white lifetime fence.

Additional amenities to this home include: automatic garage door opener, jetted tub, satellite system, smoke detectors, water softener-owned, wet bar, sequestered master, RV parking pad and pool.

This is a must see home! Listed at $950,000, more information may be obtained from Thomas Johnston with the Real Estate Ranch at (432) 934-3333 or (432) 688-8200 or e-mail realestateranch@aol.com <mailto:realestateranch@aol.com> . MLS#87258.

STYLISHLY VERSATILE:
2011 Chevrolet Traverse crossover

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corporation

Expressively styled and well-equipped, Chevrolet introduced the Traverse crossover to the American motorist back in 2009. The Traverse gives customers people-hauling and cargo-carrying capabilities typically found in larger SUVs – delivered with better-than-expected efficiency.

Offered in 1LS, 1LT and 1LTZ trim levels and available in front and all-wheel drive configurations, changes for the 2011 model year include: two new exterior colors - White Diamond Tri-Coat and Steel Green Metallic; heated cloth seats available on LT models, and the USB port for the radio is moved to upper instrument panel storage bin.

Power for the Traverse is provided by a direct injection 3.6L V6 with variable valve timing (VVT). Torque is delivered to the wheels via a Hydra-Matic 6T75 six-speed automatic transmission.

On the road, the sophisticated Traverse is quiet, smooth and responsive at speed. This crossover is easy to drive, with manageable handling and control characteristics. As the fourth model of GM's midsize crossover family (Buick Enclave, GMC Acadia and Saturn Outlook), the V6 equipped Traverse strikes the right balance between power and response. The advanced six-speed automatic transmission delivers seamless shifting.

Suspension hardware includes coil-over-MacPherson struts, direct acting stabilizer bar and a full perimeter isolated engine cradle in front; linked H-arm independent suspension and coil springs with twin tube shock absorbers mounted on an isolated subframe at the rear.

Like the exterior design, Traverse's interior exudes style and refinement. A carlike "low and away" instrument panel enhances the feeling of openness in the front-row seats and provides a commanding view out of the windshield. The instrument panel houses a pair of large gauge binnacles that are accented with bright trim rings, and for so-equipped vehicles, the available navigation system screen is integrated prominently at the upper-center of the instrument panel.

Traverse can be configured for seven or eight passengers, including two front bucket seats, a 60/40 split second-row bench (three passengers) or two second-row captain's chairs (two passengers) and a 60/40 split third row bench seat (three passengers). Leather seating surfaces are an available option.

GM's Smart Slide feature is standard on all second-row configurations, allowing quick and easy access to the third row seating area. The second-row seat cushion flips up while the seatback slides forward, effectively compressing the space occupied by the seat. It operates with one hand and enables adjustable fore/aft positioning of the second-row seats when unloaded cargo and the second-row seat provides more legroom for taller passengers, when adjusted for [illegible]

Hand grips in the [illegible] while the truck center console features a deep storage bin and an armrest that slides fore/aft to suit comfort for tall and short drivers [illegible]

items to be stored out of sight beneath the rear cargo floor. Traverse's second and third row seats also fold flat for even more cargo-carrying capacity.

Safety features

Dual front airbags, front seat-mounted side-impact airbags, head curtain side-impact airbags, four-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock, traction control, StabiliTrak electronic vehicle stability control, automatic headlamps, daytime running lamps, automatic power door locks, remote keyless entry, tire pressure monitoring system, Driver communications system, and theft deterrent system. LT adds ultrasonic rear parking assist. LTZ adds Bluetooth hands free phone system, universal garage door opener, remote engine start, and rearview camera.

Warranty

Basic: 3-year/36,000 mile, bumper-to-bumper.
Powertrain: 5-year/100,000 mile.
Corrosion: 6-year/100,000 mile.
Roadside assistance: 5-year/100,000 mile, 24-hour.

Pricing

The base manufacturer's suggested retail price (MSRP) [illegible] for the 1LS FWD; $31,695 for the 1LT and $37,975 for the 1LTZ. Destination charges add $795.

Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,
I run a house cleaning service that I named after myself, "Al's Housecleaning". Kind of catchy, I thought. Since my name began with an "A", I expected to be listed at the top of the business service directory in my newspaper. Boy was I wrong. Everyone else named their business "ABC Housecleaning" or "AAA Housecleaning". Last week I even read one that said, "AAA111222333 Housecleaning". Are they kidding me? How important is it to be listed at the top of the classifieds column? And any suggestions on how I can get there?

Cash: It's too bad your parents didn't think to name you AAAlbert. Then maybe you'd be right at the top of the page.

Carry: Many businesses like to be at the top of the column in hopes of being selected first. While that can be true in some cases, it starts to negate itself when the business names are drastically altered to get there. What reader can choose between "AAA Housecleaning and "AAA111222333 Housecleaning"?

Cash: When so many businesses are fighting for the same space, it may make more sense to be unique in your approach. Consider advertising at the bottom of the column. Believe it or not, I know a lot of people who read classifieds from the bottom up.

Carry: Of course, then you're competing with "ZZZ's Housecleaning".

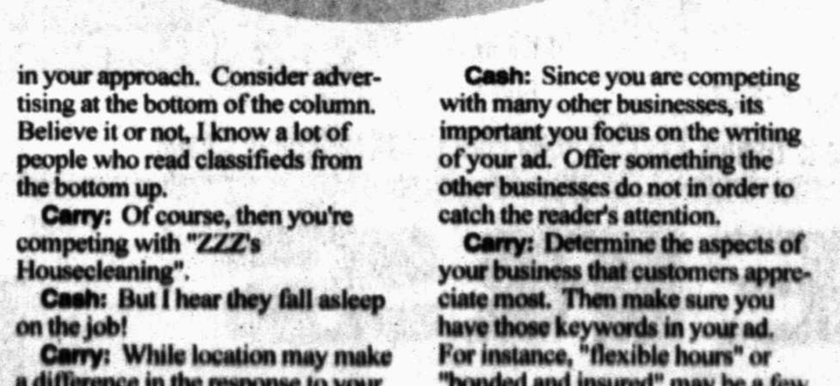

Cash: But I hear they fall asleep on the job!

Carry: While location may make a difference in the response to your ad, there are other approaches that can be equally productive. Consider advertising in a small display ad in the business directory of your paper. Readers may be more prone to respond to your display advertising than sort through all the listings.

Cash: Since you are competing with many other businesses, its important you focus on the writing of your ad. Offer something the other businesses do not in order to catch the reader's attention.

Carry: Determine the aspects of your business that customers appreciate most. Then make sure you have those keywords in your ad. For instance, "flexible hours" or "bonded and insured" may be a few phrases that readers like to see.

Cash: If you're not getting the response you expect, change your ad slightly each week until it's working perfectly. You may find that listing "reasonable rates" works, but "free estimates" gets the phone to ring off the hook.

Fast Facts

Mr. & Mrs. Clean

What type of cleaning personality are you? According to a survey by the Soap and Detergent Association, people fall into one of five cleaning personalities. The "Clean Extremes" are the types who clean where people don't see. The "Mess Busters" don't even think about cleaning, they just do it. "Mop Passers" like a clean home, but they hire someone to do it. "Strugglers" are those of us who don't consider housework to be an important part of our day-to-day lives, and "Dirt Dodgers" clean only when it is absolutely necessary.

Cleaned Out

Today with both parents working 40 hours a week, the average household is busier than ever. Most families can barely find time to make dinner, let alone clean the house. The average household spends 10 hours per week on miscellaneous housework and the vast majority of that falls to the woman of the house. It's no wonder that 20% hire some sort of housecleaning service. Though, it does lead us to ask the question: "Husbands, are you helping out your wife around the house enough?"

Suck It Up

When I was in college, I took all sorts of odd jobs. One summer I even became a door-to-door vacuum salesman. While most people closed the door on me, one older woman was very happy to invite me in.

After I demonstrated the model on her living room carpet, she asked if I would try it on her tiled kitchen floor. Happy to oblige, I demonstrated the hardwood floor setting and vacuumed the area.

When I asked for her thoughts, she told me to try it on her bedroom carpet. Rather confused I asked, "Is your bedroom carpet a different type?"

"Oh no," she replied honestly, "But if you do the last room, I can cancel the housecleaner this week."
