'Yankee go home' gets tiring to some Texas transplants

DALLAS (AP) — Lonesome strangers in the Lone Star State, tired of being told "Yankee go home," are organizing their fellow expatriates to fight homesickness and culture shock.

Damn Yankees clubs are sprouting up in Texas.

It was the idea of Irene Konig, who was born and raised in the South Bronx section of New York City, just three blocks from Yankee Stadium. She said she moved to Austin six years ago at age 30 and went into culture shock.

"I thought I'd like to start a club for Yankees," she said.

The Damn Yankees got together for the first time in 1976 on the campus of the University of Texas at Austin, where Ms. Konig was a student.

"The very first meeting was like heaven," she said. "It was joyous."

Now statewide interest is growing in clubs that unite people of non-Texas backgrounds, she said.

Missing New York is more than just adjusting to a slower pace, Southern drawls and people who wait for "walk" signs at intersections, Ms. Konig says.

Northerners also have to endure anti-Yankee sentiments.

"I thought I'd meet some people from up North who wouldn't hate me just because I'm a Yankee," said former Michigan resident Kathleen Mengot, who moved to Texas last summer and joined the Dallas chapter of Damn Yankees.

Mrs. Mengot, 22, says she remembers pulling into gas stations with her out-of-state license plates and being told, "Yankee go home."

Ms. Konig expanded her Damn Yankees club last year by opening the Dallas chapter, which now has almost 40 members. Membership is open to anyone from a state other than Texas and to Texans who are friends of Yankees. Dues are $10 a year, for which members get a newsletter telling them of club activities.

"There are many Yankees who blend in very well in Texas," Ms. Konig said, "but not all Yankees mix that well. We have a number of members who have lived in Texas quite a while, but they also spent a lot of years in the North. They don't want to give up all their heritage."

Later this month, a fourth annual reunion for people who hail from Michigan is expected to draw about 500 people. And the New York Circle, a club for expatriate New Yorkers, started last year and has 100 people on its mailing list.

"I'm not interested in getting people wishing they were back in New York," said New York Circle organizer Jeanette Vota. "That's not the point. The point is to help people get more acclimated to Dallas and to make the transition."

During the first Michigan reunion at a North Dallas delicatessen, people tended to cluster around the signs denoting different high schools in Detroit, according to one woman who attended.

"I said to no one in particular that my sister went to Central High School," Myrna Green said. "A man overheard me and said, 'Who was your sister?' I told him, and he said, 'Oh my God, she was my first love in junior high.'"

Cease-fire talk grows, but shooting continues

By The Associated Press

West Beirut shuddered under yet another heavy bombardment today as Israeli and Palestinian gunners traded punishing salvos of artillery, tank, rocket and mortar fire. Israeli warplanes also bombed Palestinian artillery positions 19 miles east of the Lebanese capital.

The latest shelling came amid reports that Israel has agreed to a phased withdrawal of PLO fighters from west Beirut. But completion of an agreement was stalled by Syria's continued refusal to accept any guerrillas until Israel agrees to withdraw its army from Lebanon, and by nettlesome details about the timing of the withdrawal and the arrival of an international peacekeeping force.

Sporadic shelling overnight picked up intensity after dawn, driving residents back into basements and shelters after a brief weekend respite, during which the Israelis turned on the taps, allowing water into west Beirut for the first time in two weeks.

In today's exchanges, witnesses said Israeli tanks fired massive barrages at PLO positions near the National Museum checkpoint on the Green Line, dividing Christian east Beirut from the Moslem western district. The guerrillas battled back with mortars and bazookas.

Two Associated Press correspondents, watching from a rooftop vantage point close to the museum line in Christian east Beirut, said there was no sign of an Israeli armor advance despite the intensity of the tank fire.

Blaming PLO fighters for sparking the latest exchange, Israel said its gunners fired at guerrillas who launched Katyusha rockets at Israeli forces near the city's race course. The Tel Aviv command also said its troops "consolidated" their positions around the PLO enclave at the Bourj al-Barajneh refugee camp on the southern edge of the city.

The military command also reported that Israeli jets bombed Palestinian artillery positions in Syrian-controlled territory 19 miles east of Beirut. The command charged that the guns had shelled Israeli positions east of Beirut. It was the first Israeli air raid in three days.

On the political front, Prime Minister Menachem Begin expressed optimism Sunday that the Palestine Liberation Organization's forces "will leave soon and we will not have to enter Beirut."

Begin in a speech in Jerusalem said that up to 2,500 guerrillas could remain in west Beirut to protect the Palestinian civilians there until a multinational Western peacekeeping force is deployed. Previously Israel demanded that all the estimated 6,000 to 9,000 guerrillas leave before the peacekeepers from the United States, France, Italy and Greece came in.

Begin added that Israel would evict any guerrillas who refused to leave after the multinational force started moving in.

However, Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon denied a deal had been struck.

"There is no arrangement, agreement or deal possible at the moment," he told Radio Israel after meeting with U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib at his headquarters in the Baabda suburb of Beirut.

Sharon said the main problem was that Arab countries were not willing to give refuge to the bulk of the PLO forces.

"Since no state is ready to take them, there is no agreement, no arrangement," he said. He added: "The terrorists are on the verge of being rooted out of Beirut in one way or another."

Sharon said Israel also demanded guarantees that the deployment of the multinational force would not "serve as a screen behind which the terrorists could go on operating."

There were reports in the Israeli press of friction between Begin and Sharon over the negotiations, with Begin reported more willing than Sharon to accept the withdrawal plan offered by Habib.

According to those reports, Begin criticized at Sunday's Cabinet meeting those who, behind a cloak of anonymity, were telling the press the Habib plan was "a fraud."

Textbook hearings commence with protest of ERA treatment

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A week-long public hearing on millions of dollars worth of textbooks proposed for Texas schools began today with complaints that some books undermined home values and gave a favorable bias to the Equal Rights Amendment and the American Civil Liberties Union.

Sheila Haralson of Kilgore told the Texas Education Agency's textbook selection committee that certain civics texts under consideration erred by mentioning the Equal Rights Amendment without also presenting opposition.

She also complained that the books mentioned the American Civil Liberties Union without pointing out that some people find the group "offensive."

Mrs. Haralson also opposed a homemaking text called "Today's Teen" because it "undermines values set in the home."

The book wrongly defined a family as any group of people living together in the same house, Mrs. Haralson said. "It implies that traditional family homes are outdated."

Mrs. Haralson represented Mel and Norma Gabler of Longview, well-known conservative critics of textbooks. She was the first of 55 protesters scheduled to appear.

Texas textbook selections are of particular importance to publishers because of the volume purchased by Texas schools, about $60 million annually.

The hearings this year have drawn the attention of television situation comedy producer Norman Lear's anti-censorship group, People for the American Way.

"Texas is the second-largest market for textbook sales, accounting for about 8 percent of the nation's textbook purchases," said People for the American Way state coordinator Michael Hudson at a July 29 news conference.

Symbol of optimism historically marked

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland's Petroleum Building, which in 1929 was the symbol of optimism for a town not yet a city, on Sunday officially was dedicated to its builder, rancher-statesman T.S. Hogan, and his family and was bestowed with a Texas Historical marker.

"What kind of vision T.S. Hogan must have had to come to West Texas in 1925," historian Gary Askins said at the dedication of the marker in the marble-walled lobby of the 12-story building. Hogan and his son, Fred T. Hogan, had ventured to Midland only two years after the Santa Rita — "Patron Saint of the Impossible" — oil well had been brought in southeast of Midland and signaled the opening of the Permian Basin oil field.

Hogan, an enterprising financier, had envisioned Midland as "the center of a vast petroleum empire" and set out to build the building, which was designed by Fort Worth architect Wyatt C. Hedrick and became a prime example of Woolworth Gothic architecture.

Askins, who was instrumental in getting the Petroleum Building and the adjoining Yucca Theatre of Assyrian design declared historic landmarks, told the gathering of 40 to 50 Midlanders that today "we worship the young, the smooth-skinned." But, he observed, that preservation of historic monuments, such as the Petroleum Building, helps "keep our children from being lost for all time."

THE PETROLEUM Building was opened in a 1929 Fourth-of-July celebration, which Askins described as "one of the grandest celebrations." Hogan was honored in a black-tie dance in the Crystal Ballroom of the "unfortunately-gone" Scharbauer Hotel.

But, by October of 1929, the stock market crashed, the Great Depression was under way and Hogan's grand dream of a building later became known as "Hogan's Folly."

The building's leased office space waned due to the economic slump and to the discovery of the East Texas oil field and the resultant drop in the price of oil to 15 cents a barrel. And Hogan, who was unable to make payments on the building, lost it to the "back East" bond company of Robert Garrett. Since then, the building's ownership fell to architect Hedrick, then to his heirs and, in 1977, to Midland Southwest Corp., which purchased Hogan's 1929 "million dollar building" for $500,000.

In the 1930s, noted Askins, the building was virtually vacant. But the outbreak of World War II brought with it a demand for oil and fuel and opened up the "vast petroleum empire."

"T.S. Hogan's dream has been realized and undoubtedly exceeded," Askins said.

The cattle town of the 1920s today has been transformed to a city nearing the 100,000 population mark and is known as "the Tall City" due to its mass of towering office buildings. The Governors considering own version of "new federalism"

AFTON, Okla. (AP) — The nation's governors are quietly debating the balanced budget amendment President Reagan wants and openly considering bypassing him with an appeal to Congress for the kind of "new federalism" they want.

The proposed constitutional amendment that would require a balanced federal budget is an election year embarrassment for many of the governors attending their annual convention.

But it was scheduled for discussion today during the governors-only work session, where it could be argued freely behind closed doors without putting the body on record one way or the other on the issue.

Meanwhile, the group's executive committee approved a preliminary proposal calling for the governors to draft a "new federalism" program of their own after failing in six months of negotiations to reach agreement with the White House.

Despite the National Governors' Association's reluctance to take a formal position on the balanced budget measure, its chairman, Republican Gov. Richard Snelling of Vermont, was among those willing to express a personal opinion.

"I think it's nonsense," Snelling said in an opening news conference on Sunday. "My own view is that you ought to have balanced budgets almost all the time, but I personally do not think it is a worthy idea to try to enshrine the call for a balanced budget in the Constitution. I think rather we should elect congressmen and senators who have the political guts to make those decisions necessary to have a balanced budget."

On the other hand, host Gov. George P. Nigh of Oklahoma, a Democrat, said, "in Oklahoma it's required to have a balanced budget. I think it should be mandatory at the federal level."

Snelling said before today's the meeting there would be a discussion but no resolution.

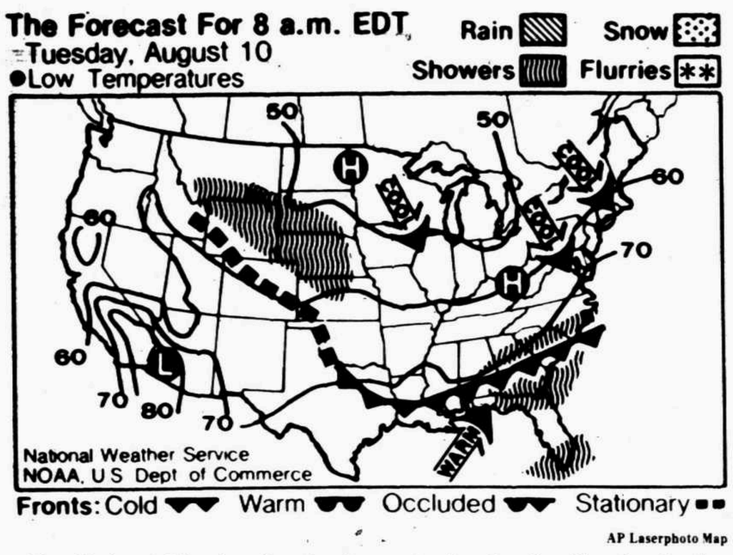

Conference leaders otherwise agreed to keep the question off the public agenda and there were no signs of any maverick governor trying to force the issue onto the floor.

The balanced budget amendment, which won Senate approval last week, is a problem for governors because many of them fear the federal budget would be balanced largely at their expense.

They already complain that too much of Reagan's budget trimming has come from programs of aid to state and local governments.

But while some governors fear the movement, they also feel it is popular with the voting public in a year when 36 of the 50 states are electing governors. Some who might find it wise to speak for the amendment individually don't want their national association to fuel the fire with a formal endorsement.

Odessan killed in plane crash

HAILEY, Idaho (AP) — An Odessa, Texas, man was among two people killed in a light-plane crash Saturday near Galena Summit in central Idaho's Sawtooth Mountains, authorities say.

The victims were identified as Voris Lee Riley, 43, of Odessa, and Mary Ellen Pederquist, 33, of California.

Federal Aviation Administration investigators examined the wreckage Sunday. Blaine County Chief Sheriff's Deputy Gene Ramsey said pilot error may have caused the crash.

Riley was flying the plane when the crash occurred. He and Pederquist were licensed commercial pilots, officials said.

Sheriff's deputies said a U.S. Forest Service pilot spotted smoke Saturday afternoon about four miles off Idaho 75, near Galena Summit in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

The Forest Service pilot and a fire crew checked the smoke and found the wreckage of a Cessna Hawk 172 just above Horse Creek, deputies said.

Authorities said the plane was on a flight from Odessa to Spokane, Wash., and had refueled in Hailey about a half-hour before the smoke was sighted. The plane crashed about 25 miles northwest of Hailey.

Forest Service firefighters took 30 minutes to reach the wreckage on foot and about two hours to extinguish a small fire at the scene.

Ramsey said it appeared that Riley had been flying low and that a wing tip caught a tree as the plane banked. He said it looked as if the plane flipped over and collided head-on with another large tree.

Ramsey said his account was speculation, and FAA investigators had not finished their inspection of the crash site or the plane.

The plane was broken apart, and the fire was intense enough to melt aluminum parts, Ramsey said.

Riley and Pederquist apparently were shooting photographs during the flight, he said.

Shooting rampage kills at least seven

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — A truck driver on a shooting spree in the downtown warehouse district today killed at least six people and injured four others before he burst out of the 18-wheel truck at a barricade and died in a barrage of police gunfire.

Witnesses said the man spoke to no one when he walked into the three warehouses in a 15-square-block area of this southwest Dallas suburb. He fatally shot three people at one building, one at another, and one at a third, police spokeswoman Alexia Griffin said. The rampage started at 8:02 a.m., she said.

The man, identified as John F. Parish, 46, of Dallas, apparently knew some, if not all, of his victims, police said.

After felling his victims, the man got into an 18-wheel semi-trailer truck and drove away. The violence ended about 8:27 a.m. after a running gun battle with police when the man ran the truck into a police barricade, seriously injuring an officer who was standing outside his car.

Wayne Standifer, who owns Wayne's Custom Automotive across the street from the barricade, heard the gunfire and saw the truck hit the police car.

"I heard gunfire going off," Standifer said. "The truck hit the squad car and the officer went flying across the pavement. It sent the car about 75 feet backward."

Violence, burglary keep police busy

A shooting, a stabbing and a major house burglary topped the list of complaints filed with city police over the weekend.

In critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning with gunshot wounds to the abdomen and hand was Ricardo Baeza, 23, of 705 N. Lincoln. He was shot with a .25-caliber handgun wielded by a man who entered the Mie Cantarito Lounge at 200 E. Kentucky Ave. about 9:30 p.m. Sunday, according to police, who said the shooting climaxed a two-week argument over a woman.

Released following treatment for stab wounds to the right hand and right leg was 16-year-old David Noel Ramos of 1514 S. Atlanta. Police said he was stabbed during an argument with three or four other youths outside a food store at 211 E. Florida Ave. about 11 p.m. Sunday. Ramos also had been hit on the head with a rock.

Morgan Howell of 4701-A Dentcrest told officers he returned home from vacation Sunday and found his home had been burglarized. Entry was gained by breaking a window on the east side of the residence. Guns, stereo equipment, ammunition and assorted other items worth a total of $3,447 were taken.

Police Roundup

Robbery probable motive for death

ODESSA — Police suspect robbery as the motive for the Saturday night shooting death of Odessan James Gary Boyle.

Boyle, about 40, was found lying in an alley in the 200 block of West Ada Street about 10:40 p.m. Saturday. He had been shot several times in the head, neck and right shoulder. He died shortly before 1 a.m. Sunday as he was undergoing treatment at Medical Center Hospital.

Police said Boyle had been drinking and shooting pool at an Odessa lounge earlier Saturday night. Witnesses said he left the bar alone. His wallet was missing when he was discovered in the alley. Services are pending at an Odessa funeral home.

Odessa man run over on highway

ODESSA — An Odessa man is dead after being run over by a tractor-trailer rig in rural Odessa early this morning.

Pronounced dead at the scene by Ector County Justice of the Peace Manuel Valles was Primera Holguin, 19. He was lying in the southbound lane of FM-1936, two miles north of Texas 302, about 2:50 a.m. today when he was run over by a southbound semi driven by Dale Burl of Odessa.

Burl told Department of Public Safety troopers he was unable to stop in time to avoid hitting Holguin, whose body was taken to the Easterling-Wilson Funeral Home in Odessa. Services are pending.

Georgian victim of traffic accident

STERLING CITY — A man killed in a one-car traffic accident near here early Saturday night has been identified as 39-year-old James D. Barrington of Covington, Ga.

According to the Department of Public Safety, the car Barrington was driving left the northbound lane of U.S. 87, hit a culvert and overturned on top of him. Three passengers were treated for relatively minor injuries.

The accident occurred two miles south of the Glasscock-Sterling County line about 7:15 p.m. Saturday. Barrington's body was taken to the Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home in Big Spring.

Jack Kemp to speak in Midland

U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., will be the featured speaker at a campaign rally in Midland on Sept. 13 for Ernest Angelo Jr., who is seeking the 25th State Senatorial District seat.

Angelo made the announcement this morning during a news conference at his office, 410 N. Main St.

Kemp, who represents the Buffalo, N.Y., area, has been re-elected numerous times, said Angelo. "He is one of the key leaders and organizers behind the federal three-year 25 percent tax cut."

Angelo, a Republican, has been campaigning in the 38-county district since last March. But the rally will be the first major event for his campaign in his hometown.

Angelo said he had lunch with Kemp about two months ago in Washington and Kemp volunteered then to help with the campaign. "Jack Kemp and I have been friends for many years. I am glad he has volunteered to come to Midland to help get our campaign in Midland County off to a good start," said the candidate.

Kemp will speak at 11:45 a.m. that day at the rally, which will be held in the Midland Center. A press conference will follow at 1:30 p.m.

The rally will be a noon luncheon, but the cost per person hasn't been determined yet, said Angelo. In charge of the rally will be Mrs. Cooper (Sarah) Robbins.

Angelo is campaigning for the senate seat held by Midlander W.E. "Pete" Snelson, a Democrat who dropped out to run for the state land commissioner's post. The 25th District runs south to near San Antonio and west to include an edge of El Paso. Opposing Angelo on the Democratic ticket is Bill Sims of San Angelo.

Man arrested for bombing

NEW YORK (AP) — Officers investigating a cookbook bomb that arrived in the mail and killed a woman in Brooklyn this spring have arrested the woman's son.

Craig Kipp, 28, was arrested Sunday night in front of his home in the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn, said U.S. Postal Inspector Daniel Mihalko.

Kipp was to be arraigned today in Brooklyn federal court on a charge of mailing an injurious article. Mihalko declined to suggest a motive for the killing.

The charge carries a life imprisonment penalty when a death is involved, Mihalko said.

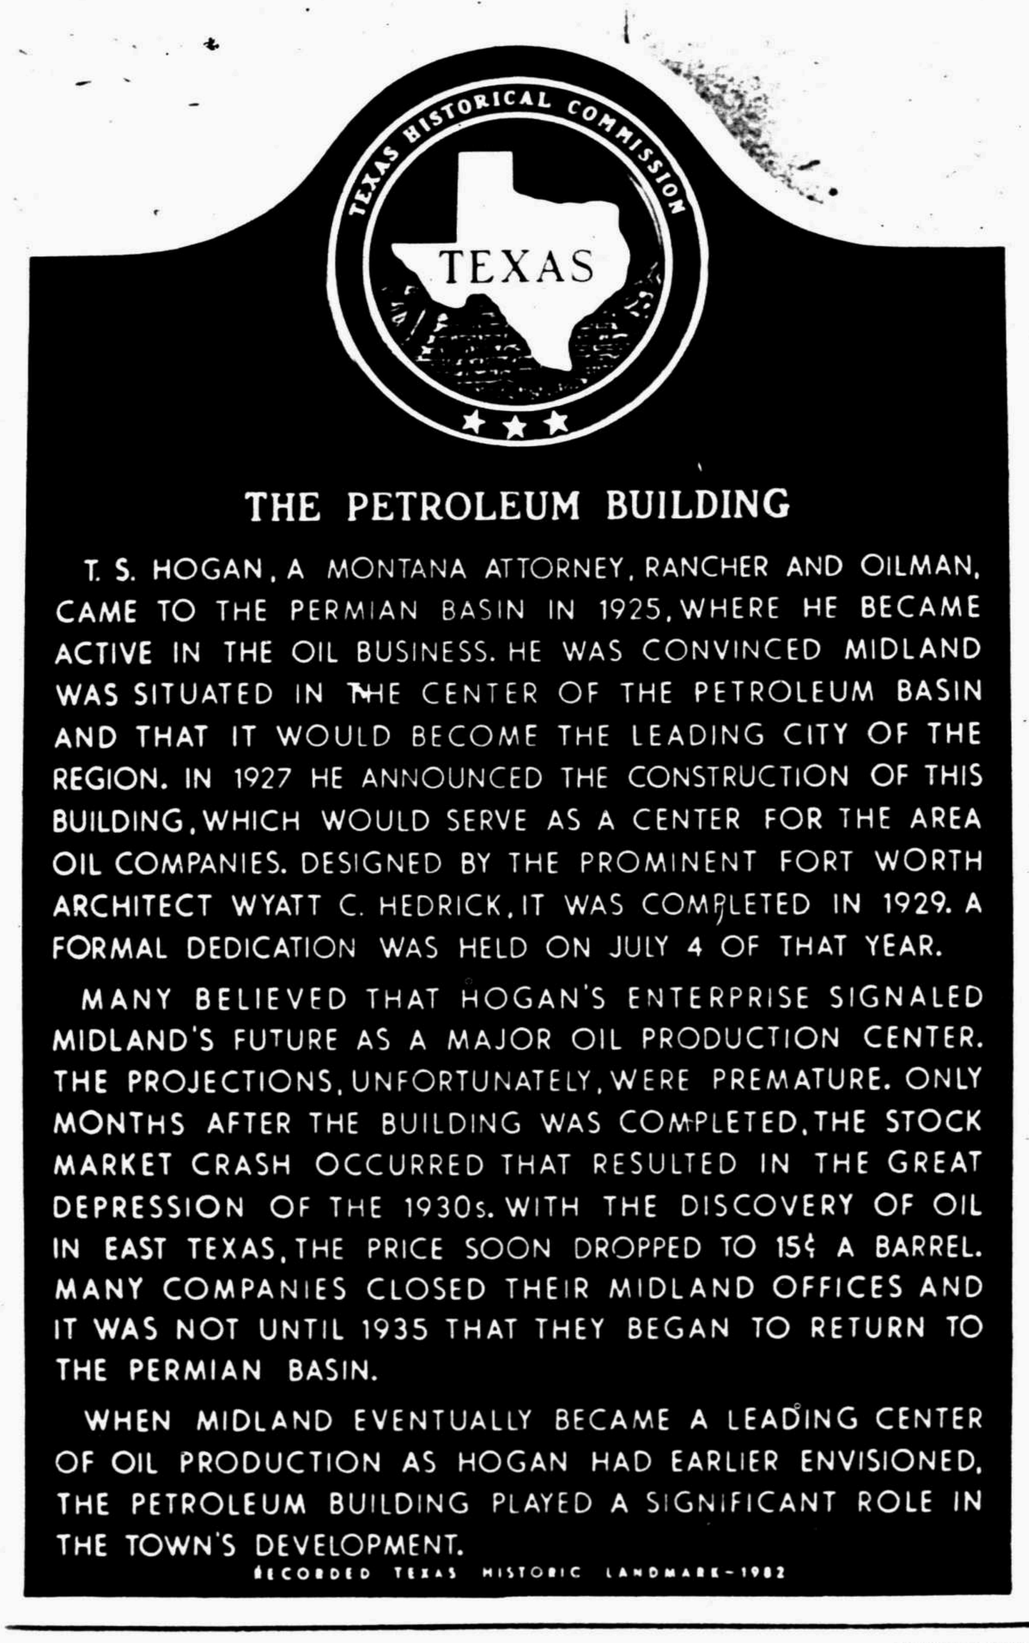

Joan Kipp, 54, who lived elsewhere in Bay Ridge, was killed when a hollowed-out cookbook containing a homemade bomb was delivered to her through the mail May 7.

"Upon opening the book, the device functioned, firing .22-caliber bullets into her body," Mihalko said. The community leader and guidance counselor died a few hours later.

Mrs. Kipp, who lived with her husband, Howard, was a member of the Bay Ridge Community Council and was a school guidance supervisor in School District 20 in Bay Ridge.

A note on the inside flap of the hollowed-out cookbook contained a message. "Dear Howard: You're next." It also threatened other members of the family, including a daughter, Doreen.

Sunday night's arrest was the result of a three-month investigation by a special task force headed by Mihalko.

This Texas Historic Landmark marker was unveiled Sunday afternoon at the Petroleum Building in downtown Midland. The marker is in the building's lobby.

Midland building historically honored

"graceful and ornate" Petroleum Building is "the ancestor to them all," Askins said.

Today, Midland ranks third in Texas in office space and is exceeded only by Houston and Dallas, he said.

"THIS BUILDING," noted Tom Linebery, a former elevator boy and later the building's night engineer, "has stood the test of time — windstorms and earthquakes."

"In spite of all those tests," he said, "not one crack have I known to come to any part of this building," which "probably is the strongest building in Texas."

"Certainly, I hope 200 years from now the building will be standing — should be," Linebery said, unless "somebody with bad judgment" comes along and razes the old edifice.

Linebery likened T.S. Hogan's Petroleum Building to Guadalupe Peak.

"Both of them are strong and durable and the same when you go by."

In reviewing the tributes to T.S. Hogan, who was a man of "strong character," Linebery noted that Hogan was a Montana lawyer, rancher, statesman and oilman. And "we could well add to that: T.S. Hogan, the prophet."

FOLLOWING Linebery's dedicatory remarks, John P. Butler, senior chairman of the board of The First National Bank of Midland, and Art Donnelly, president of Midland Southwest Corp., unveiled the marker, which was draped by a blue velvet cloth.

"It has veiled many, many markers," said Nancy McKinley, chairman of the Midland County Historical Commission and president of the Midland County Historical Society, "and I hope it will veil many more."

"So do I, Miss Nancy," Butler agreed.

Afterward Donnelly accepted the marker.

"I'm pleased to accept this plaque and the dedication of this building," he said. "We're very proud and pleased to be owner of this building," which, Donnelly said, "will be deep in the future of Midland" and has been "deep into the past" of the city. Donnelly referred to the booming prosperity of recent years and to the current economic slump, which he likened to the dismal depression which Hogan experienced in late 1929 and early into the 1930s, but expressed optimism for renewed prosperity.

Thereupon, Ms. McKinley remarked that "Preservation is progress, too, and there's very little preservation in Midland."

Afterward, Ralph Geisler, Hogan's friend and the Petroleum Building's building manager for 40 years, said that "I spent 40 of the happiest years of my life here."

Meese no longer riding high in Washington politics

EDITORS: One year ago, Edwin Meese III was riding high, apparently the first among equals on the White House staff. Now, his work is criticized within the White House, and other senior aides to the president have taken over some of the work he once performed. "I hear that, but I can't understand it," Meese responds in this story of the role of the presidential counselor in the evolving Reagan White House.

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — In 1981, presidential counselor Edwin Meese III was Washington's hottest political commodity. It was said the California attorney was America's unelected deputy president.

Not long ago, the Chicago Tribune put in print what has been whispered around Washington for months: Meese had been "squeezed out" in a struggle for power at the White House, according to "well-placed sources."

The problem, says Meese, is this. He was never first among equals, he never tried to be deputy president, and he never wanted to be.

"That was never an accurate concept. The news media exaggerated this. Having built up a false impression, some elements felt a need to tear it down," he says.

MEESE REALIZES, though, that descriptions of his diminished influence are emanating from within the White House. Some staffers have the long knives out for Meese, ridiculing his absences from Washington and criticizing his management style.

"I hear that, but I can't understand it," Meese said in an interview. "I have responsibility for dozens of organizational things that make the government go and (we) don't have problems." He added: "I think the president feels it has worked."

Sitting in an armchair in his corner office looking toward the front lawn of the White House, Meese said there was never a reason to rank him above the others in Ronald Reagan's White House inner circle.

"I've never regarded anyone of us as being preeminent."

MEESE, ALONG with chief of staff James A. Baker III, deputy staff chief Michael K. Deaver and national security adviser William Clark, make up Reagan's Big Four. There's no sign that the boss, Ronald Reagan, is dissatisfied with Meese.

But some White House staffers are willing to snipe at Meese — not for attribution:

—"He is inclined to take too much on his plate."

—"His strength is not really administration or management. I'm not being critical. Objectively, that's not his strong point."

—"If you forced him to go to a library for six hours, he'd be happy, and what he'd come out with would be pretty good work."

EIGHTEEN MONTHS into the administration, Meese's job has evolved largely into that of top domestic policy adviser. He is described by friends as the first person Reagan turns to in a crisis, but increasingly, those crises involve foreign poilicy — and Meese gave up his foreign policy portfolio last January during a reorganization that culminated with the appointment of Clark.

Clark's ascension affected Meese two ways: Meese lost control of the crucial foreign policy staff, and the Big Three became a Big Four.

Meese has maintained his position as coordinator of the Cabinet, but a source in the White House says the job just hasn't amounted to much.

Meese has been criticized for being out of town too much, returning too often to California for speaking engagements. But his office says that during the first six months of 1982, he was absent for 73 out of 960 working hours, not counting travel time with Reagan.

"MOST OF MY time is spent with the president," Meese says. "I sit in on every meeting he holds," with the exception of some ceremonial sessions.

"People who say he does not engage in important activities are confusing newsworthy with important," says his top aide, deputy counselor James E. Jenkins. Asked to assess Meese's weaknesses, Jenkins declined, saying "there are enough people sniping at him who are anxious to do that."

The Tribune quoted sources as saying that Meese had been eclipsed by Deaver and Baker. An unidentified senior official was quoted as saying Meese's power was so diminished that, "We're just waiting for the opportunity to make a move. The problem is, there's no place for him to go."

Jenkins was incensed and wrote a seven-page rebuttal, questioning the veracity, motives and reliability of "the leaker."

BAKER, IN an interview, said of Meese: "There's no diminution of Ed's standing as the chief domestic policy adviser to the president. The president has confidence in his judgment."

He added, "Ed Meese has been advising Ronald Reagan for 15 or 16 years. Ronald Reagan has been relying on that advice for 15 or 16 years and he still values that advice as much today as he did in the past."

A typical Ed Meese day begins at the White House at about 7 a.m. when he meets with members of his staff. At 7:30 a.m., he has breakfast with Baker and Deaver. There are more meetings with other White House staff members and then at 9 a.m. he is in the Oval Office with Baker and Deaver to preview the day's work with Reagan.

His shift often ends with a one-hour policy meeting, beginning at about 5:30 p.m. One recent session dealt with job training, the Law of the Sea negotiations, uranium enrichment, and child labor laws.

Cranston has right stuff, supporters say

By W. DALE NELSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — He is bald. He is skinny. He is 68. Outside his native California and the halls of Congress, he is little known. But Alan Cranston is off and running as a potential candidate for president.

Cranston, the assistant Democratic leader of the Senate, insists he is serious. Others, watching the exploratory effort that has taken him to more than half of the 50 states since January, say they believe he is.

Still the question persists in political circles: Is the gaunt, shiny-domed Cranston a believable candidate in a field that includes a freckled former astronaut, a Kennedy, an ex-vice president and a wavy-haired senator who won't hit 45 until November?

Cranston's supporters concede that glamour is not his strong suit, but insist that after 14 years in the Senate and eight years as California state controller, he has the stuff to be president.

"We can't make him younger and we can't make him prettier," said Sergio Bendixen, director of Cranston's exploratory campaign. But while some might see Cranston as the ugly duckling of the field, Bendixen said, none of his dectractors has claimed "that he isn't substantive enough to be president."

"There is no question that he is a candidate of real substance," said Allyn O. Kreps, chairman of the Cranston Presidential Advisory Committee. "Part of the job facing us this year is to convince people he can be a credible contender."

"If you look at the pictures of all the presidents, you have quite a wide variety," said Cranston. "I think the people want maturity, wisdom, proven capability. They are much more concerned about that than about how somebody looks."

Cranston is expected to announce after this November's elections whether he will be a candidate for the nomination in 1984. Many observers expect him to make the race.

"In my own judgment, he is a very serious candidate," Rick Gabriel, city Democratic chairman of Manchester, N.H., said recently after Cranston's fifth trip this year to New Hampshire, which holds the nation's first presidential primary. "He is doing all the right things."

In Iowa, where precinct caucuses start off the delegate-selection process even before the New Hampshire primary, Mike Tramontina, executive director of the State Democratic Party, said Cranston "is intelligent and people like him." But he added, "I haven't seen anything of a structural organization." Cranston plans his third trip to Iowa in August.

A presidential advisory committee formed by Cranston in January filed its first financial report in July, reporting it had raised $68,000 and spent $62,000. Aides say Cranston plans to step up the pace of activity for the rest of the year, spending about $50,000 a month.

Bendixen says Cranston will make special efforts in Iowa and New Hampshire, traditionally liberal Wisconsin, populous New York and Illinois, and Alabama and Washington to give him an early leg up in the South and West.

If his homespun looks bother people, few will say so publicly, although one guest at a luncheon for teachers in Manchester did ask him if he didn't think a toupee would be a good idea. He said he didn't.

Cranston has said he thinks the age issue "has been pretty well disposed of" by President Reagan's election at 69. Reagan, however, still has more than a trace of the good looks that helped make him a movie star. And Cranston will be past 70 by the time the Democrats hold their convention.

"I must say it crossed my mind," said Ken Morgan, research and education director of the Maine AFL-CIO in Bangor, who heard Cranston speak at a state labor convention there. "But he certainly doesn't give the impression to me of a 68-year-old man."

"I certainly did not know him," said Julian Oliver, director of a Franco-American educational materials center that Cranston visited in Manchester.

Gunmen kill at least six, injures 15

PARIS (AP) — Gunmen sprayed automatic weapons fire into a lunchtime crowd at a popular Jewish restaurant today, killing at least six people and wounding 15 others before escaping, police said.

Between two and four attackers opened fire shortly after 1 p.m. (8 a.m. CDT) near Jo Goldenberg's Restaurant on the Rue des Rosiers in central Paris, then ran down the street shooting wildly at passers-by and fled on foot down a sidestreet, police and witnesses said. Earlier unconfirmed reports said the gunmen opened fire near a synagogue.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for the attack — which appeared to be the fourth incident of anti-Semitic violence in Paris in a week. A left-wing anarchist group claimed responsibility for the earlier attacks, saying they were retaliations for Israel's two-month-old invasion of Lebanon to rout the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Police said at least three attackers were involved, but it was unclear if the shooting started inside or near the restaurant. Witnesses said between two and four gunmen escaped.

Pools of blood soaked the floor of the popular restaurant, which has has a yellow-and-black facade decorated with stars of David. An emergency medical teams erected a makeshift hospital across the bloodstained street to treat wounded. One of the dead was a plainclothes police officer, police said.

"Don't cry for me," wailed restaurant owner Jo Goldenberg, who was uninjured. "Cry for the others. It was horrible, horrible."

A witness told The Associated Press she was walking her dog when she heard gunfire and saw "two small thin men running into the street. They kept shooting as they ran, shooting at everything and everybody. I thought for sure I'd be killed."

It was the bloodiest attack against a Jewish establishment in Paris since Oct. 3, 1980, when a bomb left on a parked motorbike blew up outside a synagogue on fashionable Rue Copernic. Four people were killed in the blast and nine were wounded, all passers-by. Police have made no arrests in the case.

The head of the PLO's Paris office denounced the restaurant shooting. Ibrahim Sous, whose aide was assassinated several weeks ago when bombers blew up his car, said his organization is against "all blind violence."

"The PLO firmly condemns this attack, deplores that it has taken innocent victims and transmits its condolences to their families," Sous said in a statement.

After the shooting spree, police teams roamed the predominantly Jewish area and began clearing the neighborhood after receiving reports that bombs had been planted. The officers often encountered angry residents on the street who said they have been threatened in the past.

"If you can't protect us, we'll protect ourselves!," screamed one heavyset man.

Ex-slaves' land going for a bundle

DALLAS (AP) — The land in far north Dallas was settled by a generation of ex-slaves who got it from a former slaveowner or bought it for a cow, a few chickens or a few dollars.

White businessmen have come bearing watermelons and covered-dish dinners, hoping the descendants of slaves would sell their land cheap. It didn't work. Some of the plots in the old freedman's towns are now going for more than $600,000 an acre.

"The land was so sorry, they could make a living on it, but that was about it. The ticks were so bad, you could hardly stand it in the summer," said Milton Neoll, whose grandfather owned a plantation near the freedman's town on White Rock Creek.

It is golden land now, lying in the exploding north Dallas corridor, surrounded by ritzy shopping centers. It is some of the most expensive land in Dallas, and it's making descendants of former slaves rich.

Ruby Hervey remembers when developers became interested in the property in the 1960s.

"The real estate men would come out here, and they'd be carrying these big watermelons," she said. "And then they'd tell us we should give them our land for nothing near what it was worth. I guess they thought black people liked watermelon or something."

Mrs. Hervey's grandfather, a former slave named Herbert Keller, owned 640 acres in the old Upper White Rock community.

"They tried every story they could to buy our land," said Fletcher Allen, who also owned property in the area.

"They'd lug around covered dishes and go to church and exchange ideas, but their motives were to get the land, and everybody knew it," said Elbert Winn, deputy director of the Dallas regional office of Housing and Urban Development.

Joan Winn, an attorney and former judge, said that her mother, Willie Mae Sowell, told one developer she would sell a parcel of land for $1 a square foot.

"He said she could eat the black dirt before he'd pay that. And she said that was fine, that next week the price would be $2 a square foot," Ms. Winn said.

The parcel eventually sold for more than $1 million, she said.

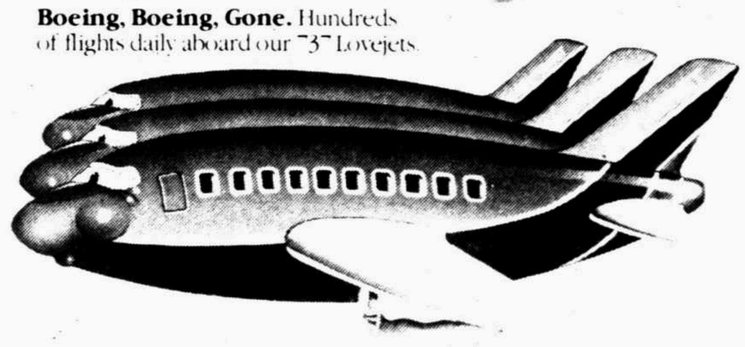

"I think everyone there sold for market price. The longer they waited, the higher it was," Ms. Winn said. "I don't think anybody sold for a watermelon."

When the Sowells sold their last 42 acres in 1981, it went for almost half a million dollars an acre.

Now the highways are clogged with traffic, old friends' houses have been replaced with stores, and apartment complexes surround the pockets of wooden farmhouses that still stand.

Q.1 – Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q93 ♡109 ◇AQ842 ♣KJ3
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A. – Partner has told you that he does not like no trump particularly, probably because he has 6-4 distribution in hearts and clubs. To persist with no trump on a shaky spade stopper in light of that information would be foolhardy. We suggest that you give partner a little breathing room by simply returning to three hearts. If he has a sound opening bid, he will go on.

Q.2 – As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠5 ♡AQ1095 ◇KQJ5 ♣AQ7
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ♠	2 ♠

What do you bid now?
A. – Since it seems that few, if any, of partner's values are in spades, your hand looks very slammish. However, there is no need yet for drastic action. Be content with a bid of three diamonds to continue the description of your hand. Since partner made a free response at the two-level and you are now introducing a new suit at the three-level, this auction must be forcing. You can show your club support later.

Q.3 – Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A10985 ♡A7642 ◇7 ♣83
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A. – Don't even think of passing – partner's jump shift was a game force. There is no point in rebidding your hearts – partner surely has ten, possibly eleven, cards in the minor suits and cannot have more than a doubleton in either major. We would opt for a quiet raise to five clubs, and play in what we know to be at least a 5-2 fit.

Q.4 – As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ7 ♡J872 ◇KJ852 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♠	Dble	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?
A. – Since partner has shown a good hand by first doubling and then introducing his own suit at the three-level, you surely want to be in game, despite the fact that you have no fit for clubs. In view of your positional stoppers in spades, the obvious choice is three no trump.

Q.5 As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠5 ♡A109752 ◇Q76 ♣954
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A. – Despite the fact that you have only six points in high cards, you have a very good hand after partner's takeout double. You have a good six card suit, a singleton in the opener's suit and a working queen. We suggest that you jump to three hearts. That is not forcing, but it is highly invitational. A bid of two hearts simply doesn't do your hand justice.

Q.6 – East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ4 ♡AQ1063 ◇8 ♣752
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	2 ♠	2 ◇	?

What do you bid now?
A. – You want to be in game – it's only a question of which suit. The first thing to do is to make partner aware of your intentions. Do this by cue-bidding three diamonds. That does not guarantee first-round control of the suit you cue-bid. It simply establishes a game-forcing auction and allows the partnership to explore all possibilities.

Despite the strike

It has been a year since the airline traffic controllers staged an illegal strike, but flying is as safe as ever, perhaps more so.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, one of the ablest members of the Reagan Cabinet, says so, but we do not have to take only his word for it. Pilots and many other observers concur.

One of the reasons for this is that Secretary Lewis has insisted that no chances be taken. Well-trained and competent replacements have been found for many of the 11,500 controllers who struck and then were fired by the Reagan administration. More are being trained by the government. One hundred and forty more will be assigned to the nation's airport towers this month, 280 in September and as many as 500 a month after that.

It is difficult to see why the controllers struck a year ago this August. Median salaries were $33,000. Overtime boosted some to $45,000 and more. Regardless of pay and the strain of their jobs, the controllers had taken an oath not to strike, so their action was clearly illegal. The government had no choice but to punish those who broke the law.

The strike caused airlines to lose millions of dollars. Many thousands besides the controllers were thrown out of work. It has been an unhappy year in many ways, but it had a happy ending in terms of safety in the skies.

Secretary Lewis has insisted throughout the crisis that the government's primary obligation is to the air passengers, and promises to so insist in the future. Let us hope no more illegal walkouts interrupt his plans.

Your turn to 'speak'

"Speaking Out," the Sunday column devoted to the presentation of public views on a wide-ranging variety of topics, has grown continually in reader interest since it was begun last March.

To date, "Speaking Out" guest columnists have discussed the federal income tax bite, a rare neurological disease called "Gilles de la Tourette Syndrome," secular humanism, plans for Midland's wastewater piping system, the proposed Midland County jail stockade, the city street situation, congressional pay and a host of other topics. That's possible because "Speaking Out" was designed to be a public forum. Any information can be presented — scientific, political, humorous, controversial.

In fact, about the only information that must be restricted is that which is libelous, false or presented in poor taste.

"Speaking Out" columnists are those who have information on a particular topic and want to present it to others. Columns usually are either offered to The Reporter-Telegram editors by the writers or the newspaper solicits the columns from those in the community with recognized expertise in a certain field.

The willingness of those contacted by The Reporter-Telegram to prepare articles has been overwhelming. We are appreciative. But "Speaking Out" is YOUR column. Use it accordingly.

Any topic can be addressed. Columns should be limited to 800 to 850 words. For more information regarding the column, please contact the editor's office at The Reporter-Telegram.

Another View:

Child labor laws

Under pressure from Congress, the Reagan administration is delaying action on its proposed changes in the child labor law. This is good news. The proposals show a marked insensitivity to the plight of 10.4 million unemployed Americans. They would increase the competition for scarce, low-skill jobs by making it easier for 14- and 15-year-olds to fill them.

The administration proposed permitting these youths to work as late as 9 p.m., instead of the present 7 p.m. deadline, on school nights, extending the work hours on other days to 10 p.m., from the current 9 p.m., permitting youths to work 24 hours in a school week, rather than 18, and increasing the maximum work hours in a school day from three hours to four hours. These changes would make it considerably easier for businesses to employ youngsters in place of older workers. And since these young students can be paid less than the minimum wage for adults, there is considerable incentive to do so.

At the request of the restaurant and amusement park industries, the proposals also would remove many restrictions on employing youths in such areas as cooking and baking, and they would drop the requirement that employers apply annually to the Labor Department for the certification which allows them to hire students at sub-minimum wages.

These changes would undermine the protective purpose of the child labor law. University of California at Irvine Professor Ellen Greenberger, who has done research on the effects of working on school-age children, has testified that some work experience is good for adolescents, but those who work long hours have poorer grades, less contact with their parents, and show increased use of cigarettes, alcohol and marijuana compared to students who don't work. Permitting youths to work later in the evening also would expose them to added danger. Given that they are not old enough to drive, they must walk home from work or wait in the dark, for buses or rides.

Industry, of course, would reap financial rewards by being permitted to replace older workers with sub-minimum wage students. But as Lane Kirkland, president of the AFL-CIO said, "At a time when their older brothers and sisters cannot find work, it is preposterous to lower the working rules for school-age youngsters."

Fortunately, Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., immediately introduced measures to prohibit the Labor Department from implementing the proposals. And they gathered enough support to force the administration to back off. The Labor Department has now added five months to the period of public comment on the proposals after which it may modify them. If Congress keeps up the pressure, the worst parts of the current proposal may yet be axed.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Wick connects heating plant and ICA

WASHINGTON — Most rational people would have a hard time making the connection between a 84 million heating plant in Minnesota and the International Communication Agency's desire to move its scattered offices into a single building in downtown Washington.

Jack Anderson

But there is a connection, and his name is Charles Z. Wick. He is not only the director of ICA, but a close friend of President Reagan. And he desperately wants congressional approval for the agency's consolidation into one building, instead of having the various offices housed all over the capital in rented space.

So Rep. Arlan Stangeland, R-Minn., is using Wick and the ICA as a lever to pry support for a heating plant in his district out of a reluctant administration. As the ranking minority member of the House buildings subcommittee, Stangeland has a lot to say about whether the president's buddy Wick gets his consolidation plan okayed by Congress.

When he brought up the Minnesota heating plant to the astonished ICA director, Stangeland said later, he was just trying to get the administration's attention — like the man with the two-by-four and the recalcitrant mule. Under a little pressure, the administration "takes not just a cursory look, they take a good look" at his cherished heating plant, he explained to one associate, Peter Grant.

Stangeland wasn't the only one to hear opportunity knocking when Wick approached the subcommittee for help. Rep. Elliott Levitas, D-Ga., told the president's friend his consolidation proposal would be approved "in 24 hours" if the administration would do just one small favor: support legislation that would let the General Services Administration borrow from the Treasury to construct government buildings.

Levitas insists that this bill would save the taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars. It would also, of course, substantially increase the subcommittee's power — and Levitas could be in line for the chairmanship when Rep. John Fary, D-Ill., retires this year.

Levitas candidly acknowledged that he broached the GSA plan to the ICA director because Wick is "a very influential person in this administration." The congressman said he's "always looking for intermediaries to get messages back to people."

It seems that Wick will never be lonely as long as he has the president's ear — and wants something from Congress. Even Fary, the outgoing chairman, twice mentioned to Wick his deep interest in having the government waive postal fees for packages to Poland. Fary brought up the matter first in Washington, then again at a Fourth of July ceremony Wick attended in Fary's heavily Polish Chicago district.

The thing to remember is that none of the subcommittee members seems to have any serious reservations about the ICA consolidation plan, which government auditors have estimated would increase the agency's efficiency and save the taxpayers more than $10 million over 10 years.

But because Wick is regarded as an influential confidant of President Reagan, the proposal was "like manna from heaven," as one administration official put it.

Footnote: An ICA spokesman said the agency had made one phone call to the Commerce Department about Stangeland's heating plant, but beyond that had carried no water for the subcommittee members.

SOVIET STEEL SLUMP: Josef Stalin, the "man of steel," must be turning in his grave. The Soviet Union, with 40 percent of the world's reserves of iron ore and manganese, is suffering from a severe shortage of steel, according to an unpublished CIA report.

The title of the report says it all: "Sluggish Soviet Steel Industry Holds Down Economic Growth." The report concludes that "during the early 1980s at least, lagging steel production could well be the most important bottleneck undercutting Soviet plans to provide steady increases in the production of military hardware while satisfying the demand for consumer durables."

The reasons for the Soviets' dramatic backslide in steel output since 1970 are transportation difficulties, lack of ability to produce high-quality steel and failure to modernize their equipment, according to the CIA analysts. The solutions are probably unpalatable to the Kremlin: either cut production and exports, increase imports or work out a combination of the two.

Meanwhile, our allies are helping the Soviets to overcome their steel problem. The French are building a plant at Novolipetsk that will produce 7 million tons of specialty steel a year. The West Germans are building a plant near Kursk that will produce 4 million tons of high-grade steel.

PARTISAN PUNCHLINE: By rights, President Reagan is supposed to be the facile quipster, not the straight man. But it doesn't always work out that way in unrehearshed, partisan situations. At a recent White House briefing for congressional leaders, Reagan had to excuse himself to attend a meeting with disabled veterans. He explained his departure by telling the congressmen how sympathetic he had always been to veterans.

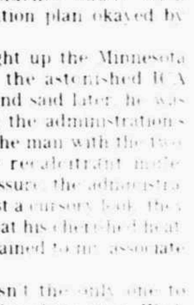

It was an opening House Speaker Tip O'Neill couldn't let pass. "Mr. President," he said, "please remind them that poor old Tip O'Neill is still trying to save their compensation benefits from this administration."

INSIDE REPORT:

Koch attempts to win Democrats' hearts

NEW YORK — Behind his insistently non-ideological television commercials, the answer to why Mayor Ed Koch's campaign for governor is a battle for the heart of the Democratic Party is given by his appraisal of his foe for the nomination, Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo.

Rowland Evans

"I believe Mario has become the spokesman for the ultra-liberal view," Koch told us in his city hall office. "I mean it's that crowd that asks: What difference does it make what a program costs? Spend it!"

Robert Novak

No serious Democratic candidate for high office in the past half-century (not even Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, no knee-jerk liberal) has engaged in such liberal-baiting. It explains the passion behind organized labor, black and Hispanic activists and the Democratic Party's left-reform wing to keep the flamboyant mayor out of Albany — even at the risk of electing conservative Republican Lewis Lehrman in a three-way race.

Koch is too eclectic to be called even a neo-conservative, much less a conservative (while vocally anti-communist, he opposes President Reagan on arms to El Salvador and defense spending). His importance is not so much what he expounds as whom he opposes. He is running as a New York Democrat without trimming his ideology to black and labor specifications, wooing a broader constituency whose support would remove the party's ideological constraints to the left.

Koch as governor of New York would instantly become a national figure, pressing his party to abandon left-of-center, special-interest politics. Koch's longtime political handler, media master David Garth, is aiming at a national ticket with Koch as running mate for former Vice President Walter F. Mondale.

Even hints that Koch's calls for law and order and fiscal conservatism might be transferred to a national stage bring this state's liberal establishment to a state of frenzy. Vic Gotbaum, head of the biggest city-employees union, would support Koch as Democratic nominee against Lehrman even though he favors Cuomo for the nomination, but he is the exception. Militant labor leaders are committed to Cuomo as Liberal Party nominee even if he loses the Sept. 23 Democratic primary.

That's why the first three Koch television spots, which began July 30, are intentionally bland. While Garth has no doubt Cuomo will run as a Liberal, he wants to reduce the level of passion by Cuomo's supporters. Only if Koch seems on the brink of primary defeat will any anti-Cuomo material be aired.

But the first four candidate debates have been sufficiently filled with mutual invective to undermine post-primary reconciliation. Differences between Koch and Cuomo are based less on specific issues than on a cultural confrontation of their constituencies — symbolized by Koch's support for and Cuomo's opposition to the death sentence.

Whether to restore the electric chair to New York is a codeword issue that explains why the mayor's greatest popularity is not in his city but in surrounding suburbs. The typical Koch suburban voter is a former city dweller who is probably Jewish (like Koch) and fled the city to escape crime, blacks and the cost of the non-working poor.

Many voted for President Reagan in 1980, but are ready to resume Democratic loyalties amid the wreckage of Reaganomics. Ed Koch intends to ride their support into the governor's mansion while taking hard-line crime and fiscal stands and declaring that government-worker unions back Cuomo because "he'll give them everything they want." The lesson nationally if he succeeds would so menace the party's dominant left that panic in New York is understandable.

CHARLEY REESE

Learning not accomplished in schools

One of the reasons I am opposed to sex education in schools is that far more graduates know where their body parts are located than can find the United States on a world map.

Charley Reese

It seems to me that a public education system that cannot teach basics like math, geography, reading and grammar should not further burden and confuse itself by branching out into personal values, basket weaving, driver education, sexology, psychology, and so forth.

The blunt truth is that today "educated" and "ignorant" are no longer mutally exclusive descriptions.

Item: A survey of 3,000 students on 185 campuses found 65 percent of the seniors could answer only 50 percent of a series of questions on foreign affairs.

Steven Muller, president of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, said the study demonstrates "a nearly catastrophic ignorance on the part of the American people."

The lowest scorers were education majors (39.8 percent correct answers). Social science majors averaged 52.8, math majors 54.1 and engineering majors 59.3.

John R. Silber, president of Boston University, said, "The quality of education that graduates get today is substantially inferior to that of students 50 or even 20 years ago. Quite simply, today's high school diploma is a fraudulent credential. It doesn't guarantee a level of literacy for the graduate. It doesn't imply anything about a person's ability to do ordinary arithmetic — much less algebra, solid geometry or trigonometry. It doesn't certify competence in science, world or American history or anything else. What the high school diploma tells you is that a student was institutionalized for 12 years. That's all. You wouldn't know whether the student had been in a prison colony, a reform school or a place for mental defectives."

That's enough. The empirical evidence of the failure of public education in America is beyond question. The question is what, if anything, are we going to do about it.

The first step is to assess responsibility. Contrary to the barnyard caliber of excuses offered by educationists, the blame does not lie with television or parents. The blame lies with those who control the education process — the educators, most specifically the colleges of education that conspire to set the alleged standards for teacher certification.

By law, parents are compelled to turn over their children to the educators. Parents and other taxpayers provide billions of dollars. (Only a product of modern education could argue that the answer is more money, since, demonstrably, results have declined as expenditures have increased.)

The penalty of mass ignorance is the same as always, a decline in the standard of living, the loss of freedom, the end of a nation. Ignorant people in a society float to the top.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger justified arms sales to Jordan because Jordan was squeezed between Syria and Iran. Jordan is nowhere near Iran.

President Jimmy Carter did not know that Jordan was created by the British out of the Palestine Mandate.

Congress cannot grasp the most fundamental rules of economics.

The Supreme Court and most federal judges cannot understand the difference between reconciling facts to existing law and legislating new law.

Unless someone puts on labels, most Americans cannot tell if a speaker or a writer is proposing socialism, capitalism, communism, or fascism because they are ignorant of the defining principles of each.

A person ignorant of history, geography and simple rules of logic cannot determine truth from falsehood if presented with conflicting claims. Like any peasant, he must rely on either his wishes (that is true which I want to be true) or authority (that must be true because of the position of the person who told me).

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Aug. 9, the 221st day of 1982. There are 144 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 9, 1945, the United States dropped its second atomic bomb, destroying much of Nagasaki, Japan, near the end of World War II.

On this date:

In 1902, Edward VII was crowned King of England following the death of his mother, Queen Victoria.

In 1942, Britain arrested Indian nationalist Mohandas Gandhi, not releasing him until 1944.

In 1975, two river boats collided near Canton, China, 500 people were reported drowned.

In 1978, a truce was announced in Lebanon, in fighting between Lebanese Christians and Syrian troops.

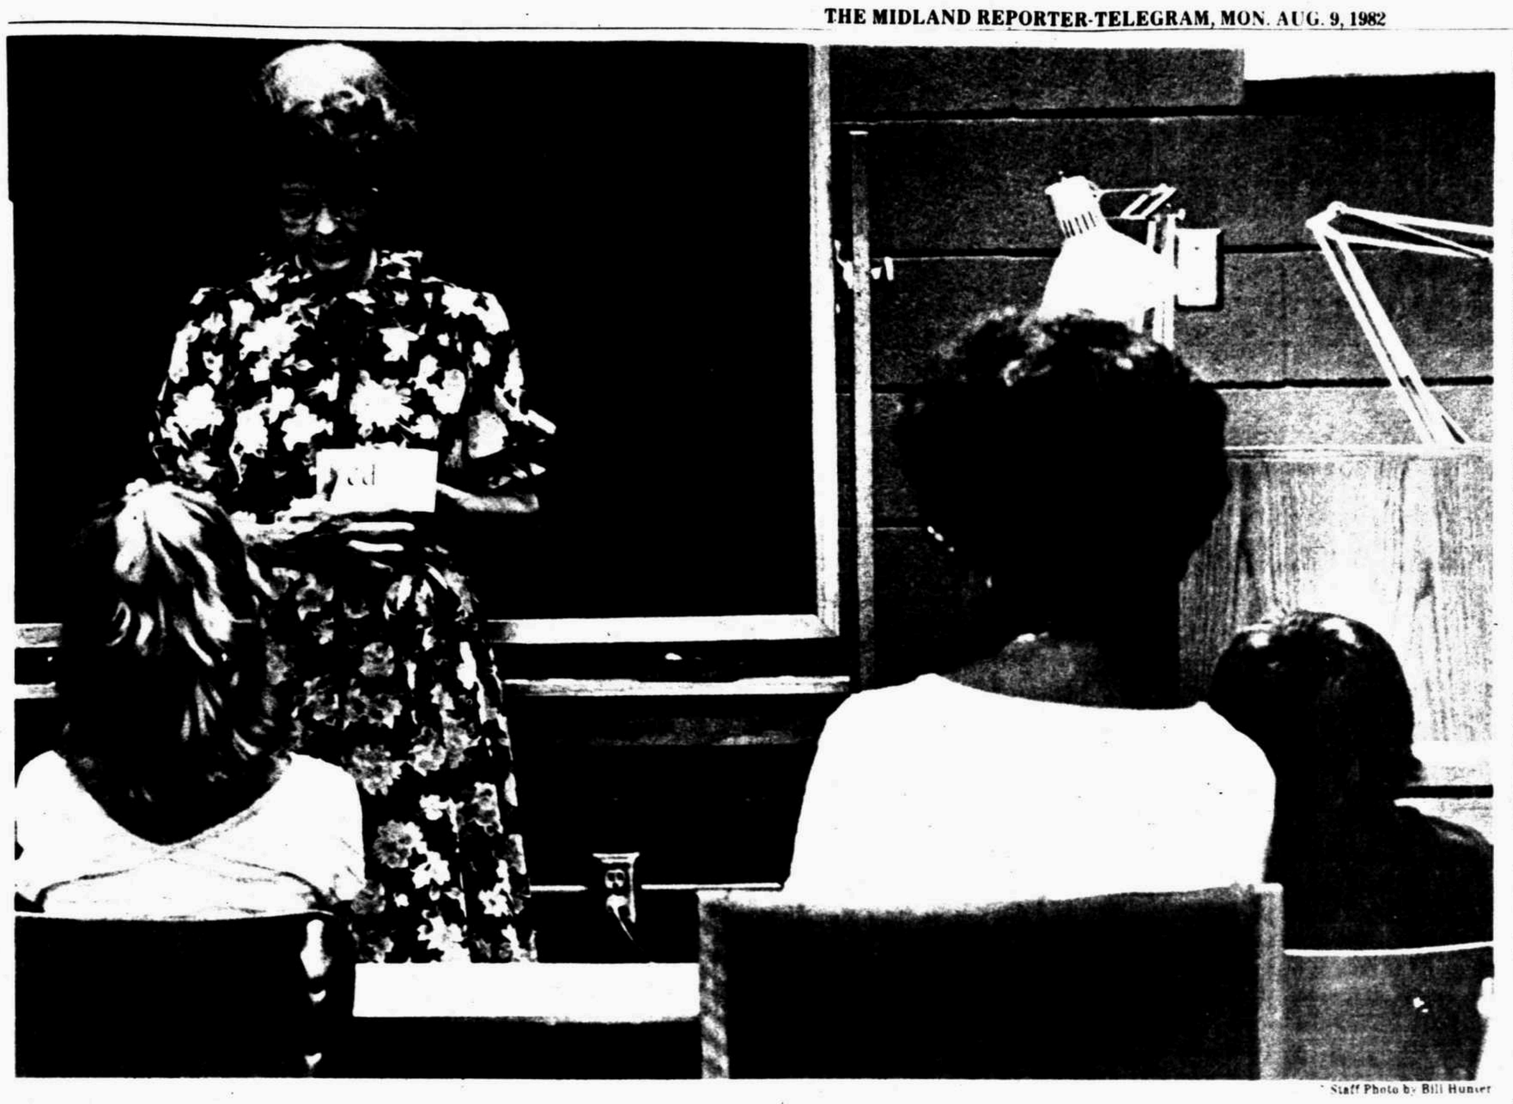

Ten years ago: The death toll from Hurricane Agnes, which lashed the East Coast, was placed at 118, with more than $3 billion in damage.

Five years ago: Three major fires spread out of control in Dayton, Ohio, during a strike by firefighters.

One year ago: After a seven-week players' strike, the major league baseball season resumed with the 1981 All-Star Game, which the National League won by a score of 5-4.

Today's birthday: Former Georgia Sen. Herman Talmadge is 69.

Thought for today: Judge a man by his questions rather than his answers. — Voltaire, French writer (1694-1778).

The back to basics approach was explained to teachers at Trinity School last week. Aylett R. Cox, director of the Alphabetic Phonics Teacher Training Program in Dallas, demonstrated drill cards and other methods of learning to read, write and spell, with volunteer students while teachers observed.

Alphabet Phonics stresses seeing, saying, writing

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

If you remember first grade and standing in front of a blackboard with a large letter "o" written on it in chalk, tracing it with a straight arm in one gigantic loop, and repeating "The big 'o'," as your arm swung around, then you were taught to read in a different way than students presently are being instructed.

The basic method of reading taught in America's schools today only reaches about 80 percent of the students, according to advocates of Alphabetic Phonics.

Aylett R. Cox, director of the Alphabetic Phonics Teacher Training (APTT) programs at Dean Learning Center in Dallas, told teachers at Trinity School in Midland last week she remembers being taught reading through seeing, saying and writing — at the same time.

The method used today is the "look-say" method.

While some students have no difficulty remembering whole words and their meanings without first being taught the structure of words, others do.

Students who have these problems in school today, referred to as three dimensional or 3-D students, tend to have more trouble remembering and grasping abstract symbols, according to Mrs. Cox.

THEIR COUNTERPARTS, the two dimensional students, have a quick understanding of numbers, letters and other abstract symbols. These are the students that tend to do well in the classrooms of our society.

According to the APTT, when the present method was put in operation about 50 years ago, educators were trying to establish a "modern, streamlined technique" to teach reading, writing and spelling.

The newest research, according to Mrs. Cox, indicates that 2-D children, with the ability to retain the meanings of whole words, have low 3-D characteristics such as creativity and intuition.

Students high in 3-D characteristics are usually lacking in 2-D gifts. According to the studies, Mrs. Cox said that words seen or heard are processed in the left hemisphere of the brain, while space perception, form, creativity and intuition are guided by the right hemisphere.

With the present method of teaching reading, writing and spelling, the 3-D children are left out.

That's why the Alphabetic Phonics educators are screaming for the "back to basics" method.

And that's why Trinity School plans to instigate Alphabetic Phonics in the first, second and third grades.

The program, which began as a remedial program for children with learning difficulties, will be established as an enrichment course.

Mrs. Cox stressed that Alphabetic Phonics incorporates several methods. The system, which was based on Anna Gillingham's technique, similar to the Montessori method, also incorporates studies done by Jean Piaget and other psychologists.

"THE PROGRAM was based on Anna Gillingham's work," Mrs. Cox said. "But while we (APTT teachers) were working toward our doctorates, we found many things that she didn't have access to and we've incorporated that since. All of the most advanced findings have been incorporated."

A study done by Socony-Mobil Oil Co. showed that 50 percent of what people see and hear simultaneously is retained, while 70 percent of what people say as they talk is retained. Ninety percent of what a person says while he does something is retained.

By using visual, auditory and kinesthetic involvement, the child will learn more, and retain more, than when he listens and watches only.

"It is a curriculum that combines a number of methods," Mrs. Cox said. "That way, you use whatever method you wish to reach the child."

One method used is that of teaching cursive hand writing to all students, including those in first grade. According to Mrs. Cox, there are several reasons to teach cursive instead of concentrating solely on printing.

"In first grade, it's a sensitive time to learn to write," she said. "The students are eager and they are slaves for practice. But in the second and third grade, we tell them 'Now we're going to teach you how to write like grownups.' But they don't want to anymore."

CURSIVE WRITING also requires less fine control, she said, explaining that when printing, the student picks up the point of the pencil after every letter and then has to decide where to go. Cursive also always begins on the base line, whereas many printed letters begin in the middle or at the top of a space.

Some printed letters, such as "b," "d," "p" and "q" are indistinguishable to the 3-D student, she said. That student, with all of his creativity, can see a chair turned upside down or around and still recognize it as a chair. In this same way he perceives any of the four above letters, she said.

With the Initial Reading Deck, cards with the printed letter and a symbol that contains the appropriate speech sound are shown to the child who practices saying the letter, and naming the symbol, while looking at the card. For example, a card with the letter "n" on it might have the symbol of a bird's nest.

In alphabetic phonics, a student also learns how letter clusters stand together. According to Mrs. Cox, there are about 44 speech sounds in the English language. There are many letters that represent more than one sound and that can confuse many students.

Other drill cards, such as the C-G Situation Cards, depict the differences between the hard and soft "c" and "g."

Affix and Root Cards, which study the base form of a word and its additions, help the child in learning more difficult words.

"WORDS ARE MADE UP of a number of different pieces," Mrs. Cox said. With a computer count that produced 33,000 of the most frequently used words, only 85 percent of those words were "regular and reliable," she said.

"That means 15 percent are left that the child has to memorize by wholes," she pointed out.

Also used are the Missing Letter Cards. ("People laugh at us because we are always shuffling cards," she said, smiling.) These cards show two letters with a blank at the beginning, middle or end of the sequence. For example, one card may read "a_" (Answer: b). A more difficult one may read "_a" (Answer: h).

"When they can use these cards successfully, they can look up words in the dictionary in less than 60 seconds," Mrs. Cox said. "You know your alphabet is more heavily based on the alphabet than you realize. Everyone thinks we do everything by sounds, but we really don't."

With the first focus of the program on success, Mrs. Cox stressed the need for a series of accomplishment for beginning students. "It is difficult to change the self-image of a child who feels successful at the end of the first grade."

Supporters of Alphabetic Phonics say that all children can learn through the program.

"If you present it through multi-sensory structure and sequence, then every child can learn," Mrs. Cox said. "Not at the same amount, of course, but no one will fail."

Walkers see Bronx in new light; Moonlight over 'Ft. Apache'?

NEW YORK (AP) — Derelicts stared and late-night revelers laughed as 300 people took a traffic-stopping 2 a.m. walking tour of the Bronx, where the quiet streets and parks didn't resemble the "Fort Apache" of movie fame.

The group walked four miles for five hours early Sunday — past renovated brownstones, boarded-up apartment buildings, bustling all-night delicatessens, ghostly wooded parks and lush green gardens.

The surprised observers saw things in a new light — the moon's.

"Walking at night makes the city seem more mysterious, more magical," said Susan Thomas of Berkeley, Calif., who learned of the tour from a friend. "You don't see the dirt and the garbage."

"We're very proud of ourselves. We're still young enough to be crazy," said middle-aged Jack Adams of Hackensack, N.J., who joined the tour with his wife, Jan.

The tour was sponsored by a coalition called Friends of the Parks, which has organized 10 annual middle-of-the-night walks through the five boroughs of New York City. Sunday's walk was the first one through the Bronx, and the coalition charged $1 to raise money for tree planting around the city.

Planning for the event began about six months ago, according to organizer Bob Makla. "When the police were notified, they couldn't believe it at first," he said.

Sgt. Philip Romano, one of several police escorts with the group, said he hoped the walk would help dispel the public's "Fort Apache mentality."

The 1981 film starring Paul Newman, entitled "Fort Apache the Bronx," was a police drama that depicted the South Bronx as a frontier of urban lawlessness.

The group saw a variety of neighborhoods, and Romano conceded it would be unwise to walk alone at night through those bordering on blighted areas.

Portland's evening paper dies

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The morning Oregonian will become an all-day newspaper Sept. 6, when publication of the evening Oregon Journal will be halted, the publishers announced today.

Fred Stickel, president of Oregonian Publishing Co., said in a statement in today's editions of the Oregonian that no employee of either newspaper will be laid off in the change.

Oregonian Publishing Co., an arm of the Newhouse Newspapers group, publishes both newspapers.

Stickel said the expanded Oregonian will include all features of the Oregon Journal, including columns and comics, and it will have 40 percent more editorial content than either paper has now.

Dallas-area man's death brings better lives to six other people

DALLAS (AP) — A young man who asked that his ashes be strewn from the cliffs of Hawaii also wanted to donate his organs to people who needed them — and his death gave six people in four states a better chance to walk, see or survive.

David Glisson, 19, died of massive head injuries after he fell from a marquee at a theater where he worked.

Ever since he had a kidney removed three years ago, he had told his parents that donating his organs "was something he really wanted to do," his mother, Dorothy, of suburban Duncanville, said Sunday. "It was very important to him."

Organ transplants are not rare — the Southwestern Organ Bank alone expects to arrange 850 this year through a nationwide network — but Glisson's story showed the difference one person can make.

After he was pronounced dead July 23, the transplant service at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School immediately began matching requests from local doctors and other transplant banks in the nation.

A cornea was flown to Youngstown, Ohio, where a 28-year-old welder feared losing his job because of deteriorating eyesight.

In a Dallas-area hospital, doctors restored vision to a 62-year-old woman blinded by an eye disease that had destroyed her cornea.

From Mullin, Texas, and Columbia, S.C., patients needing bone transplants to walk normally again flew to Dallas.

Brian Henderson of San Diego was readied for knee transplant surgery.

And surgeons at Parkland Memorial Hospital here worked anew to save the life of a 34-year-old man who had been burned over half his body in an explosion.

Knowing other people were helped "doesn't make losing someone you loved any easier ... except that what he wanted is happening," Glisson's father, James, said.

But Henderson, recuperating from knee surgery at Southwestern Medical School here, said, "That family gave me a new start at life."

"They must be fine, caring people. I would like to thank them. I would like to tell them what a happy person I am because of what they did," he said.

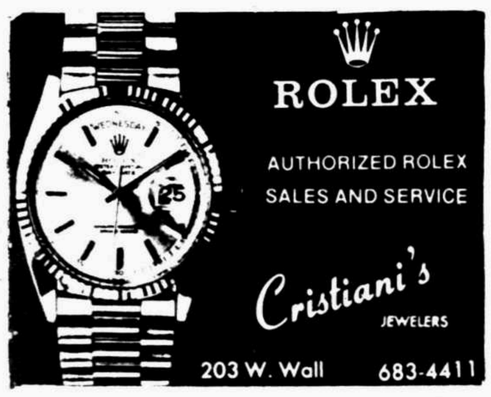

The medical school's organ bank is one of the oldest and largest of 15 such facilities in the nation.

Last year, 650 people benefited from organ transplants arranged through the Southwestern facility, officials said. Jim Pratt, organ preservationist at the bank, said it uses the United Network Organ Sharing computer and the telephone to find recipients.

The computer "has on file all the recipients listed with specific data. We'll key in the donor and then it'll key out and show all the matches across the country, where they're located and a telephone number," Pratt said Sunday. "The computer also prints an urgent list of people in need."

The family couldn't have made the decision on its own, James Glisson said. "It wouldn't have been a rational decision. The hurt was just beginning to sink in. If the decision hadn't been made before that night, we wouldn't have been able to make it.

Mountain recluse charged with murders

HILLSBORO, Texas (AP) — A reclusive wanderer who mainly lived outdoors was charged with three counts of murder today after the grisly discovery of human bones in an abandoned well.

Henry Burton Merrill, who authorities say is about 50, appeared before Hill County Justice of the Peace R.F. Wallace about 9 a.m. Bond was set at $50,000 on each count.

Merrill said he could not afford a lawyer, and asked that one be appointed for him. He was taken back to the Hill County Jail.

After a year-and-a-half-long investigation, authorities were tipped by an informant that the bodies were in the well. Searchers burrowed 25 feet into an abandoned, dirt-filled well Sunday to recover the remains.

Wallace said that Merrill, who often was called "Mountain Man," lived in the woods outside Blum, moving from place to place along the river, taking a mattress with him, and "if he needs some money, he'll go chop some wood. He gets along."

"He turned this way several years ago — he became kind of a hermit. It's just hearsay, but I understand it was over a spurned love," Wallace said.

Hill County Sheriff Brent Button said Merrill was arrested at his house Saturday.

"The man is pretty much a mountain man who lives all over these hills," Button said. "He's quite a character."

The sheriff said his office began its investigation after hearing widespread and persistent reports that several missing people had been slain and their bodies dumped in a well.

"Some rumors had them shot and others had them hit in the head with an ax," he said.

Button said investigators believe four more bodies may be concealed in the wooded, remote area of Central Texas.

The sheriff said the only motive so far appears to be a series of "fights between drinking buddies."

He said the victims apparently had been dumped into the well over a long period of time, but authorities could not immediately pinpoint the cause of death.

Button said one intact skeleton of a man and bone fragments of at least two other people were sent to forensic experts in Dallas for analysis. He said the fragments possibly could come from three bodies.

Minica murder trial testimony continues

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors were expected to wind up their case today in the murder trial of Jack Lee Minica accused in the killing of his business partner and her daughter.

Defense lawyers are expected to take at least two days to present their witnesses after prosecutors wrap up their case.

Tandy Bennett, her mother, Molly Jo Farr, and a house guest, former Brady High School football star Robert Shirl Gandy, were shot to death near Brady on Aug. 2, 1979.

Minica, 49, is being tried now only in the slaying of Ms. Bennett, but he is charged with all three slayings.

Ms. Bennett, asleep in the same bed with her mother, died instantly from a single shotgun blast into the lower left back, investigators said. Her mother was killed by a single gunshot blast to the right side of her neck.

Both women had been shot at close range with a 12-gauge shotgun loaded with buckshot, according to Texas Ranger Bob Favor of Brady. The third victim, Gandy, sleeping alone in an adjoining bedroom, had been shot through the head with a .243-caliber rifle bullet.

Prosecutors presented 36 witnesses during the first five days of testimony that began last week in their attempt to prove that Minica wanted to kill only Mrs. Farr, but shot her daughter and Gandy to cover the crime.

District Attorney Ron said Sutton said Minica planned to collect about $50,000 on an insurance policy on her life.

The trial was moved here on a change of venue from McCulloch County.

Gay board member has conference upset

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The election of an avowed homosexual to a church board has split the Southwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church, and a bishop says he may call an unprecedented special session to reconsider the vote.

Methodist Bishop Earnest Dixon of San Antonio, leader of the conference, said he never expected the election of layman Trox Stokes of Austin to create such an uproar, including resolutions from several churches rescinding the vote.

Dixon said he will decide this week whether church delegates may reconsider the June 2 vote that elected Stokes to the 30-member Board of Church and Society.

Homosexual Methodists have demonstrated at annual meetings since 1971, when San Antonio minister Gene Leggett was stripped of his credentials after he said he was homosexual.

"Some members warned me that Stokes' election was a foot in the door, and they asked me if I did not see it as the beginning of an invasion of gay people who would eventually take over the conference," said Dixon.

"Well, I tell them we are not affirming, we are not condoning. We are trying to do what Jesus would do when he met people with life styles not in accordance with his teaching," Dixon said.

After his 1980 election, Dixon met with homosexual Methodists in Austin and agreed on a program to include the homosexual community in the conference structure.

"Some accused me of personally rigging the election," Dixon said. "They accused me of waiting until some of the delegates left on the last day and seating alternate delegates."

Late-arriving post card no surprise to Dallasite

DALLAS (AP) — Bernie Niederer says he's no longer surprised by anything the post office does.

Niederer got a postcard in June from his brother, Charlie, bearing a 6-cent Roosevelt stamp. It was mailed in New York on Jan. 30, 1969.

The card conveyed good news — everyone in New York was just fine and Bernie's son, Russell, was doing well with the FBI.

In the 13 years since the card was written, Niederer's son died after being shot by a robber in 1980, and Charlie Niederer developed terminal cancer.

In the hospital, Charlie told Niederer he remembered dropping the card in the mailbox, but the postmark showed the card didn't leave the New York post office until June 1982.

"I could write a book about the post office," said Niederer, 68.

When he built his house in Dallas in 1977, he said the postal service assigned him number 2620 Pearson Drive, even though his was the only house on the street.

Judge declares mistrial in Midland theft case

A six-man, six-woman jury in Midland's 142nd State District Court deliberated more than five hours Friday afternoon and night before deadlocking at 9-3 for acquittal in the theft case against Eddie Lee "Bud" Johnson of Midland.

Judge Pat Baskin declared a mistrial.

Johnson, 32, was charged with stealing about $10,000 worth of plywood, shingles and 2-by-4- and 2-by-6-inch planks of lumber on April 8 and 9 from Midland Home Lumber Co., where he was the company's shipping and receiving foreman.

Jurors were exposed to conflicting testimony from witnesses, who included former co-workers and lumber deliverymen under Johnson's charge.

Johnson was accused of ordering his help to deliver the lumber to a certain south Midland location. The lumber allegedly then was to be picked up and hauled elsewhere. The lumber, however, was recovered by the lumber company.

Prosecuting the case was Assistant District Attorney Jim Rex. Johnson's defense counsel was Michael Williams.

Protest finishes

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Workshops and a prayer vigil outside the gates of the Pantex nuclear weapons assembly plant capped a weekend of protests here against nuclear arms.

John Backe of the Lutheran Peace Fellowship in New York City gave a homily, and about 20 people outside the plant finished the hour-long Sunday morning prayer service by forming a circle and joining hands to sing, "Will the Circle Be Unbroken?"

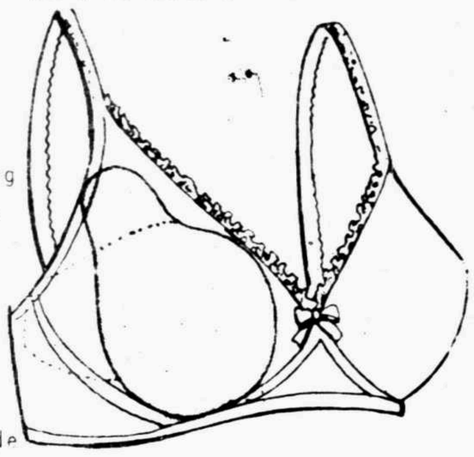

"Instead of singing about our home in the sky, let's sing that we can have a better home on earth if we try," said Steve Schroeder, director of Northwest Texas Clergy and Laiety Concerned.

The group sang the song several times and then opened the circle to include Pantex employees to show the protestors condemned the plant but not the employees, Schroeder said.

Five workshops also were staged Sunday.

Family finds at-home wedding confusing

By MARIE DOTY
Copley News Service

Let us consider the planning of a home wedding.

My advice is: Don't!

Right off hand, I can't think of anything more fraught with work, confusion, anxiety, panic, — not to mention expense — than a home wedding.

The entire world is geared to church weddings paired with receptions at some civilized club or hall or restaurant.

I'm convinced that only children with an innate desire to see their parents cry ever have weddings at home.

THE SINGLE PHRASE I never want to hear again is: "I just want a simple wedding at home."

My youngest daughter's wedding was planned down to the last detail. However, we made two tactical errors at the rehearsal. First of all, I decided to give our two bathrooms a final cleaning rather than watch the rehearsal. Advice to the mother-of-the-bride: to heck with bathrooms. GO TO THE REHEARSAL.

As it turned out, I was not the only one missing. My husband was still milking, one of the bride's brothers (and usher) was running errands while the other brother-usher was waiting at a train station for a bridesmaid.

"I guess we're lucky you could be here," the minister told the bride and groom with a sigh.

Later he asked my daughter, "What kind of flowers are you and your bridesmaids carrying?"

"None," she said.

"Oh! Well ... ah ... er ... a simple wedding is nice."

WHAT SHE DIDN'T TELL HIM — because she wanted to surprise her husband-to-be — was she and the three attendants were carrying parasols. The ceremony was planned for a garden area where roughly 3,000 pink petunias were planted, so at the FLORIST'S suggestion she wore only a single camellia on her hat.

Advice to the bride: It's OK to surprise the groom but it's a mistake to surprise the minister.

BECAUSE I WAS GRIMLY determined that, for just this once, our family was going to be on time — and, besides, it was threatening to storm and I wasn't about to waste all those damned petunias — I sent our youngest son down to ring the ship's bell. It was five minutes before the ceremony was scheduled, just time enough for the guests, who were wandering around the farm, to be seated. (And, no, the ceremony was NOT on the hill by the bell. The folding chairs were, more or less, on an even keel.

What neither of us realized — because we had not been at the rehearsal — was that it had been decided to ring the bell just as the bride and her attendants arrived in the garden area. And the Arriving In The Garden was to have been preceded by:

- The vocalist's first song and,
- The entrance of the minister, groom, best man and groomsmen.

IT'S HARD TO SAY who was the most surprised when the bell rang: the wasps, who had built a nest inside the bell; our son, who had to run for his life when all those very cross wasps swarmed out; the groom and entourage, who thought the bride was on her way; the bride and bridesmaids, who thought they had somehow missed the entrance of the men; or the minister, who was just driving in as the bell sounded and thought the entire wedding had started without him.

I will say it certainly whipped everyone into shape without any dilly-dallying around. The girls and the bride's father lined up by the house while the groom's group quickly gathered around the shaken minister out behind the lilac bushes.

My sons, the ushers, hustled the groom's parents and me down the aisle in nothing flat.

I SAT SMILING AND NODDING to all the guest who were still trotting up breathlessly. However, I was having a problem with the soloist who kept asking, "Shall I start now?"

Shaking her off, I waited for the minister and groom to show up at the sundial — er, altar. They were still huddled out in the bushes.

Turning to the nearest guest, I hissed, "Tell the minister we're ready to start. Pass it along."

When the message reached the lilacs, the minister, who must have felt he had completely lost it by now, meekly trudged in, followed by four thoroughly confused young men.

THE VOCALIST, DECIDING IT WAS now or never, leaped to her feet and with a nod to the accompanist, launched into the first song. Up at the house, the bride, my husband and the bridesmaids, who couldn't hear a thing, saw the groom and minister waiting and came out to meet them.

As it turned out, all the guests thought is was a lovely innovation to have the wedding procession while the vocalist sang. We did not tell them the organist had to scrap his processional.

Then there was the matter of the parasols. The groom looked surprised all right.

The minister appeared stunned.

MY DAUGHTER AND HER BRIDESMAIDS had practiced lowering the parasols all in unison. Reaching the sundial — altar — they smartly whipped the parasls down and closed them in one smooth motion.

Only fancy footwork saved the minister from being gored in the eye by the bride's descending parasol.

"It was a beautiful wedding ... so well organized," several guests told us. "But is the minister well? He was trembling."

DEAR ABBY

Senator seeks return to gay old times

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am an Illinois state senator. Regardless of how anyone else feels about homosexuality, it galls me that sexual deviates are called "gays."

The word "gay" means joyous, merry, happy and cheerful, as opposed to gloomy, melancholy, dejected or miserable. Therefore, to describe homosexuality as "gay" is a perversion in itself, and I respectfully request that you discontinue the use of the word in that context.

Instead of "gay," the word "queer" would be more appropriate. "Queer" means to deviate from the normal or expected.

In my opinion, the truly "gay" people of the world are heterosexuals who have relations with persons of the opposite sex.

Won't you join me in an effort to retrieve the word "gay" from ignominy? And if "queer" is unacceptable to describe deviates, then confine their definition to "homosexuals." — NAME WITHHELD ON REQUEST

DEAR NAME WITHHELD: Few are aware of how homosexuals came to be known as "gays."

For hundreds of years, women were not allowed to work in the theater, consequently all the roles were performed by males. In France, the men who played women's roles were known as "les gai."

That word crossed the English Channel, and homosexuals used it as a code word to identify themselves.

Most homosexuals find the label "queer" offensive, and only an ignorant, ill-mannered person would call another by a name that's insulting. (Blacks do not like to be called "niggers," Hispanics don't care for "spic," Jews dislike "kike" and Italians resent "wop.")

When you, sir, are willing to have yourself described in print and in introductions to your family, friends, strangers, etc., as "Heterosexual (Name Withheld)," then you may insist that gays be identified by the clinical 19th-century term, "homosexual."

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago you had a letter in your column criticizing doctors who told their patients not to smoke while they themselves were puffing away. You also had some harsh words for fat doctors who could barely get their shirts buttoned while handing their patients the Mayo Clinic diet.

Well, according to Dr. Stephen Goldfinger, chairman of the Harvard Medical School Health Letter, doctors have changed.

His survey, which was mailed to 1,013 Harvard clinical faculty members and drew a 60 percent response, disclosed that only 8 percent of the respondents smoked cigarettes, and nearly 40 percent had quite smoking entirely. (About 33 percent of the general public smokes.)

When asked if they felt that they were overweight by 10 pounds, only 29 percent of the doctors said yes. — KAREN

DEAR KAREN: Thanks for the update. I feel better already. But I wonder what happened to the other 40 percent.

Lifestyle is often more dangerous than disease

By DON BRANNING
Hearst Feature Service

Lifestyles — not infectious diseases — are the death killers in this country today.

"Health will always be high on the list in surveys of what people value most in life. But when you look at how they live, it seems not to be important until they lose it. We feel immortal until something happens," Dr. William H. Foege, director of the National Center for Disease Control in Atlanta said.

Foege pointed out that in 1900 the major cause of death in America was infectious disease. Last year, there was a record low in reports of polio, measles, mumps, rubella and tetanus. And there were great record lows for diphtheria and whooping cough.

BY CONTRAST, today's major killers — heart disease, cancer, stroke and auto accidents — are essentially the consequences of the way their victims live. Auto accident deaths and injuries may be the result of not fastening seatbelts; other deaths are largely the result of long term lifestyles.

The U.S. Surgeon General's "Healthy People" report of 1980, which uses 1977 figures, confirms that lifestyles give rise to major health hazards. The report gave the following figures for deaths, diseases and disabilities which can be related to the way people live — the stresses they endure, their smoking, eating, drinking, driving and working.

- A TOTAL of 1,250,000 people had heart attacks and 700,000 died of heart disease in the 1977 period covered by the report. More than 500,000 had strokes and 183,000 died. Cancer caused 380,000 deaths.
- MOTOR VEHICLE ACCIDENTS killed 49,000 and disabled 1,800,000.
- SUICIDE CLAIMED 29,000 lives; 5 million Americans have tried to kill themselves. There were 21,000 homicides, and it was estimated that 25 percent of the population suffers mild to moderate depression, anxiety or other emotional disorders.
- THERE WERE 100,000 deaths from occupation illness and 400,000 new cases of occupational disease.
- ALCOHOL IS ESTIMATED to be a factor in more than 10 pecent of 200,000 U.S. deaths annually.

Dr. Jeff Newman of the health promotion and education division at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta said that ultimately the individual must take responsibility for his own lifestyle. But Dr. Trevor Hancock of the Toronto Department of Public Health said the conventional medical establishment is not doing enough to help people find healthier lifestyles.

IN AN ARTICLE in Futurist magazine, Hancock said: "We have grown accustomed to thinking of our health care system as playing a vital role in our health and well-being. Nothing could be further from the truth. The health care system is actually an illness-care system which for the most part tries to patch people up and return them to the battle from whence they came."

Dr. Gershon Lesser, a Los Angeles cardiologist who has made heroic efforts to change his patients lifestyles, said he did not believe Hancock should place the onus on physicians. Since a friend and patient died of his hard-driving, self-destructive lifestyle nine years ago, Gershon has met twice a year with up to 300 of his patients to try to answer their questions and help them toward healthy lifestyles.

"YOU CAN'T BLAME IT on we docs," he said. "The truth is that many people take no responsibility at all for their own health. Life in the fast lane is killing us. We go to fast-food restaurants and they play fast music so you will eat fast. We're killing ourselves with 'quick.'

"Smoking is the number one health hazard, but underlying smoking are these unhealthy ways of living."

Now's time for bollworm troubles

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

Midland County cotton producers are advised to be on the alert for developing cotton bollworm problems, expecially on late-planted cotton just beginning to fruit heavily. The IPM cotton insect survey scouts have reported heavy egg laying in some fields, along with worm damage and low population of beneficials. The situation could potentially be as serious as that experienced during the 1980 season, when some fields were almost totally destroyed. Statistically, 80 to 90 percent of the cotton yield comes from those forms set in the late-July-to-mid-August period. If insects destroy that fruit set, yield potential plummets. Producers desiring assistance in determining insect pressure and control recommendations should contact County Entomologist David Foster (756-2251) or the County Extension Office (682-9481, Ext. 433).

...

Cicadas, often miscalled "locusts," have become very troublesome again this year in West Texas. They have become annual pests in this section of the state; some years their numbers are heavier than others. This appears to be a heavy emergence year in some local areas.

The adult cicada is about 5/8 inches long and has a dark brown or black body with reddish legs, eyes and wing margins.

The cicadas' presence is announced by the cadence of high pitched, shrill sounds. This sound is considered noise pollution by many people.

Only the male cicada makes noise. The sound is produced by vibrating membranes on the underside of the insect's first abdominal segment. The females have no sound-producing organ — hence the saying, "Blessed are the cicadas' lives, for they all have voiceless wives."

The female cicada normally lays eggs in small slits in small branches or twigs. They have a long, curved, saw-like ovipositor on the rear of their abdomen which they use to open a series of slits in the small twigs, into which the eggs are laid. The egg-laying process is the only apparent damage that cicadas cause to trees and shrubs. The injured branches often bleed, die back and break off. The adult female usually lives about six weeks and normally starts laying eggs about two weeks after emergence.

When the eggs hatch, the tiny nymphs crawl down or drop to the soil, where they enter and feed on young tree, plant or grass roots. Usually they cause little injury to the roots. The nymphs may remain in the soil one, two, three or more years before becoming full-grown nymphs. A full-grown nymph emerges from the soil and crawls up a tree trunk, side of a building or plant and settles down. The adult cicada then emerges from the nymph skin. Cast skins are light brown in color and can be seen for months on the tree or object where the adult emerged.

Small trees and shrubs may be protected from cicadas by covering them with open-weave cloth such as heavy cheesecloth or netting.

Spraying, unless it is a community-wide effort, usually does not give dramatic results. Carbaryl (Sevin) may be used on ornamental plants, shade trees and those fruit trees that are listed on the container label. Three to five applications are generally necessary where heavy infestations of cicadas are present throughout the area. High temperatures and rains reduce the protection.

Prepare a carbaryl spray by mixing two pounds of a 50 percent wettable-powder Sevin with 100 gallons of water. For one gallon of spray, use two tablespoons of 50 percent wettable powder. Always read the label instructions before mixing an insecticide spray.

Americans reportedly consuming more fat

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — Despite the advice by many authorities to cut down, Americans are eating more fats than ever, according to the Agriculture Department.

Last year, new statistics show, per capita fat consumption averaged 57 pounds, up 1.1 pounds from 1980. Based on figures going back nearly 50 years, that is the highest per capita fat consumption on record.

In 1934, Americans each consumed an average of 44.5 pounds. That rate was fairly steady for some years, with the 1941 rate shown at 47.5 pounds per capita. During World War II, however, fats became relatively scarce and by 1945 the consumption rate dropped to 39.1 pounds.

The latest upturn in fat consumption was attributed to greater use of both shortening and salad oils, along with a slight increase for lard and other edible fats.

According to a new fats and oils situation report by the department's Economic Research Service, butter consumption dropped to an average of 4.4 pounds per person last year from 4.5 pounds in 1980. That was only one-tenth of a pound more than the record low.

AGRICULTURE

Act seems to be beneficial

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department report released today says that deregulation of rail and motor carrier transportation has resulted in some benefits for farmers, but that it's too early to predict what will happen in the future.

Martin F. Fitzpatrick Jr., director of the department's Office of Transportation, said the study "indicates an almost universal perception by agricultural carriers and shippers" that deregulation of the trucking industry by the Motor Carrier Act of 1980 has been beneficial.

Fitzpatrick said that among the more significant effects of the Staggers Rail Act of 1980, which deregulated the railroads, are:

—More direct marketing of grain from country points to points of use.

—Adjustments of facilities at country points to accommodate larger shipment sizes.

—More searching of routings, market outlets and origin territories by shippers and receivers "to make sure that trade arrangements and relationships are efficient."

—Assumption of more risks by grain companies.

Fitzpatrick said the study team concluded "that while there are some concerns about the freedoms given to railroads by the Staggers Act, there have been many positive effects."

Poultry output rate about as expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest slaughter figures show that poultry output is increasing at about the rate forecast by Agriculture Department experts.

In June, says the Crop Reporting Board, the total live weight of poultry inspected for slaughter was 1.83 billion pounds, up 1 percent from June 1981.

The inspections included 1.47 billion pounds of young chickens, primarily broilers, which showed a 2 percent increase from a year earlier.

According to a recent outlook report, total meat and poultry supplies this year are expected to decline about 3 percent from 1981. But all of the decline will occur as a result in the sharp cutback in pork production.

"Supplies of poultry and beef will likely increase moderately," it said.

Illegal to sell part in multi-level distributorship

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, Inc.

In recent years, many Permian Basin residents have been approached to become involved with "multi-level" marketing programs utilized by a growing number of door-to-door sales companies. Some multi-level operations provide reasonable part or full-time employment to persons who want to sell products. Other such operations, however, assume a "pyramid" approach, which concentrates more on bringing people into the operation rather than on the sale of a product.

These chain distribution plans look very attractive on the surface, as most deceptive schemes do, but they have cost countless thousands of unsuspecting and trusting investors millions of dollars. Even worse, they have robbed some retired persons of their life savings.

Unless you recognize their selling tactics and approach, you may find yourself tempted, if not involved in a phony scheme after it is too late. Here is a typical situation.

You have just been invited to attend an "opportunity meeting," with a friend, neighbor or business associate. You are told how easy it is to realize fabulous profits on only a small investment. Testimonials from neighbors and smooth-talking salesmen will just about convince you that theirs is an exciting short cut to affluence, easy living and early retirement.

You are confused. You are not really sure what the product or service is, or how it's going to be sold. The emphasis has been on the fact that all you have to do, aside from investing your money in the program, is to get others to invest. You are encouraged to believe that you will receive enormous sums in profits from the product or service you sell, in rebates paid for each person you recruit, and in "over-rides" on all sales. The plan focuses more on the recruiting of their participants than on selling the product or service.

It is illegal in Texas to sell or offer to sell a right of participation in a multi-level distributorship, according to the Texas Consumer Protection Act, is defined as a sales plan for the distribution of goods or services in which promises of rebate or payment are made to individuals, conditioned upon those individuals recommending or securing additional individuals to assume positions in the sales operations, and where the rebate or payment is not exclusively conditioned on or in relation to proceeds from the retail sales of goods.

Legitimate multi-level selling plans stress the only way you can succeed is to sell the products, establish repeat business, and provide the kind of service that keeps customers happy. Their dishonest counterparts, however, concentrate mainly on the quick profits to be earned by recruiting others to invest...who in turn will recruit still others, and so on. Commissions and bonuses are paid for recruiting other investors. The merchandise or service to be sold is largely ignored. However, little or no mention is made regarding market saturation as the ever increasing number of participants attempt to recoup their investment by recruiting from the ever decreasing number of potential investors in a given area.

If you are asked to participate in a multi-level sales program use the following guidelines before investing:

—The basis for the company's promotion should be the retail sale of the product, NOT the unending recruitment of distributors.

—Investors should be wary of promises of high potential earnings.

—The company should accept the responsibility of checking the qualifications of potential distributors and remove those who violate company policies or local laws.

—The recruitment of additional distributors or sales personnel should be based upon the potential market, population of the specific community, or prior sales competition. Limiting the total number of distributors in a state on the basis of the entire state population may not be adequate protection for a distributor in any given community within the state.

Ozzy Osbourne baldly meets his audience

Osbourne

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Rock star Ozzy Osbourne, who has startled his audience by biting off the head of a bat, gave them another kind of shock at a performance at City Park.

He cut his hair.

Shortly before taking the stage Sunday, Osbourne peered out of his dressing room door, displaying a freshly-shaved bald pate. And he held up his long blond locks in his fist.

"New Orleans," he said, "is a great place to let your hair down."

Authorities said Osbourne's act was performed without incident.

Connors

Richie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Wrapping up his first solo album, Lionel Richie of the Commodores decided he needed a real pro to back him up on the track titled, "Tell Me."

So he called on a string specialist — tennis player Jimmy Connors.

"McEnroe will eat his heart out," Connors said, according to the Aug. 16 issue of People magazine, referring to tennis star John McEnroe.

Connors also said he would return the favor someday to Richie, the Commodores' lead singer, composer and sometime saxaphonist.

"Lionel, you can tour with me," said this year's Wimbledon champ, "as a warmup boy."

Trudeau

SALMON ARM, British Columbia (AP) — Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau upset at a protest during a train stopover, made a vulgar hand gesture in response, according to a British Columbia radio station.

The incident Sunday at the Salmon Arm railway station, 217 miles northeast of Vancouver, came as Trudeau was en route to Banff, Alberta, for a vacation.

Shouting demonstrators carrying placards confronted the prime minister, said radio station CKXR. One demonstrator, Doug Hughes, said they were protesting Trudeau's use of a government rail coach during a period of economic restraint.

Several hours later, Trudeau's train was pelted with tomatoes by about 10 placard-waving protesters at the east end of the Connaught Tunnel near the British Columbia-Alberta border, the station said.

The signs read, "Help the economy" and "Trudeau resign."

Plane loses its parts

MISSISSAUGA, Ontario (AP) — Mumtaz Walji, a ticket agent for Wardair Canada Ltd., was hosting a dinner party when part of her employer's assets landed on her roof.

Police said a 4-foot-long piece of metal from a Wardair DC-10 jet on a Toronto to Montreal flight fell to earth Saturday evening, denting the roof of Ms. Walji's home and sending her guests outside wondering what had happened.

The piece of an auxiliary airfoil from the edge of one of the plane's wings was recovered from the rooftop by regional police and flown to Mirabel airport near Montreal, where it was reattached to the plane.

First day's business was light at Abilene's 'new' bank

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — The first day of business for Abilene National Bank under new ownership was light, after its acquisition by a Dallas-based holding company which donated $20 million in capital to the institution to ensure its stability.

Customers at Abilene National, which a federal agency said was in "imminent danger of failure," came and went in small numbers Friday among packing boxes as bank employees who came to work awaited word of the takeover by Mercantile Texas Corp.

Federal regulators expedited the transaction to permit continuous operation of Abilene National, which lost about $50 million in deposits in mid-July.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said Friday it is providing an estimated $11 million in financial assistance to facilitate the acquisition. FDIC officials said the aid is in the form of a five-year, $50 million deposit at Abilene National.

"The FDIC board acted following notification by the comptroller of the currency that Abilene National's financial condition had deteriorated and the bank was in imminent danger of failure," the FDIC said.

Acquisition of Abilene National will ensure uninterrupted service for all deposit and loan customers of the bank, which has two offices in Abilene.

Bank officials and federal and state officials said that Abilene National remained solvent despite the withdrawals that the bank blamed on a story The Dallas Morning News published concerning loan problems at the bank.

The Federal Reserve Bank lent Abilene National $50 million to help meet the withdrawals.

The acquisition by Mercantile was approved by its board of directors after a six-hour meeting Thursday, and Consolidated Bancshares Inc., Abilene National's parent company.

Bank secretaries said they had been told earlier Friday that none of their old bosses would be there after the weekend.

Don Earney, former Abilene National board chairman, spent Friday at his home, an elegant Tudor residence. His successor, Robert W. Semple, an executive vice president of Mercantile National Bank in Dallas, was elected to the position on Thursday.

Semple began reviewing some of the bank's more difficult loan problems, officials said.

Secretaries told callers wanting appointments with Earney and former bank officers not to seek firm commitments, but to "call back next week."

Bank employees spent several hours moving cardboard boxes containing files for Consolidated Bancshares. The boxes were moved to a one-story building three blocks away where Consolidated will continue its data processing, lease operations and merchant banking.

"I know it is going to change, but when?" one loan secretary said before the purchase was announced to employees. "The suspense is killing me."

Semple later told employees that the time of confrontations was over and encouraged them to help correct the problems that had led to the bad publicity about the bank.

"He thanked us for our cooperation during what he called the past difficult six weeks," one employee said. "He told us that we shouldn't be worried about the bank now, that it was very strong and very secure."

M. Carl Rose, terminal manager, checks over some figures while inspecting Diamond Shamrock Corporation's new Justin, Texas LP-Gas pipeline Terminal. The facility, located north of the Dallas-Fort Worth metro area, is the first pipeline-supplied LP-gas terminal operating in Northeast Texas. Diamond Shamrock will sell 2,000 barrels of propane daily from the facility to Mallory's LP Products Inc. of Mineola, Texas.

M1 rises, little effect likely

NEW YORK (AP) — The amount of cash in circulation has risen $900 million, but economists say the increase should have little effect on interest rates this week.

"It's essentially a neutral number," David Jones, economist with Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., said after the Federal Reserve Board reported Friday that the money measure, M1, rose to a seasonally adjusted average of $451.4 billion in the week ended July 28.

Credit analysts said the increase generally was in line with market expectations and still was well within the Fed's targets for money growth.

They said rates will be more affected this week by concerns over the heavy amount of borrowing by the Treasury Department to finance the national debt.

Purchasers see weak economy

NEW YORK (AP) — The economy weakened further in July with "no evidence at all of any pickup in the industrial sector," according to a survey by an organization of executives who buy raw materials and other supplies for industry.

The National Association of Purchasing Management said Sunday in its July survey that "incoming new orders remained weak, a condition that has existed for over a year."

But despite industrial declines, some economists said the overall economy has stabilized and is beginning modest recovery.

"We'll see another increase in real GNP (the gross national product adjusted for inflation) in the second half of the year," said Bernard Schoenfeld, an economist with Irving Trust Co., a New York bank. "But that is at the aggregate level. For many industries, the deterioration will continue."

The survey, which queries 250 corporate purchasing managers, showed employment fell for the 13th consecutive month. Only 5 percent of the agents reported higher payrolls in July, down from 8 percent in June.

Congressional action urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic and labor leaders are calling for congressional action to stem rising unemployment.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said the latest rise in the number of jobless "is a call for the Congress to take steps immediately to reverse the devastating, discredited economic policies of the Reagan administration."

The Labor Department said Friday unemployment soared to a record 9.8 percent in July. The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate jumped 0.3 of a percentage point last month, it said.

That translates to an additional 360,000 Americans out of work, bringing to 10.8 million the total number of unemployed, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"These statistics cannot begin to convey the dimensions of this economic disaster that continues to unfold across the United States," Kirkland said.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., issued a statement saying the report "reinforces the need for immediate action in creating jobs."

Interest ceiling 15 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting today, a 15 percent interest-rate ceiling takes effect on federally backed single-family home loans.

The 0.5 percentage point decline affects loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration and those guaranteed by the Veterans Administration, according to an announcement from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Ceilings on interest rates for other FHA-insured loans also are being lowered in the next two weeks, Friday's announcement said.

Interest rates charged by many private lenders have dropped in recent weeks, with economists generally saying weakness in the national economy was responsible.

But HUD officials claimed their ceiling-rate decrease is a sign of better economic times to come.

Private lenders were charging average rates of 17.22 percent on long-term home loans in early July, according to government surveys announced last week.

Antitrust laws foil merger

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp. has ended a $4.8 billion offer to merge with Cities Service Co. because it was unable to reach agreement with the Federal Trade Commission on antitrust matters.

The aborted deal would have been the third-largest corporate takeover in U.S. history, eclipsed only by Du Pont Co.'s $7.8 billion buyout of Conoco Inc. and the $6.3 billion paid for Marathon Oil Co. by U.S. Steel Corp.

The FTC went to court to block the merger, which would have made the combined firm the fifth largest oil company in the United States.

Gulf is the seventh largest marketer of gasoline in the country and Cities Service is the 16th largest.

Harvard man heads council

WASHINGTON (AP) — Martin Feldstein, an economics professor at Harvard University, has been selected by President Reagan to replace Murray Weidenbaum as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Weidenbaum resigned last month to return to Washington University in St. Louis and teach economics.

If confirmed by the Senate, Feldstein, 42, will take a two-year leave of absence from Harvard, where he has taught since 1967, according to a written White House announcement.

He is president of the National Bureau of Economic Research, a member of the National Productivity Advisory Committee and the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control in Government.

"The president is satisfied that he is the best man for the job," deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said in announcing the nomination Friday.

USAir, machinists avoid strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tentative agreement between USAir and the machinists union that averted a strike today now faces a ratification vote among the union's nearly 2,000 members.

No details were released about the pact hammered out shortly before a 12:01 a.m. strike deadline set by the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

Shamrock opens propane sales terminal

DALLAS — Diamond Shamrock Corporation last week initiated sales of propane from a newly constructed pipeline distribution terminal in south Denton County, Texas, to supply dealer markets in the Northeast Texas area.

The terminal, located about two miles south of Justin and north of Dallas-Fort Worth, is the first pipeline-supplied propane distribution facility in Northeast Texas.

"The Justin LP-Gas Terminal not only enables Diamond Shamrock to expand propane sales into dealer markets in the growing Dallas-Fort Worth and Northeast Texas area, but it provides our customers with reliable supplies of a quality product which is especially important in preventing shortages during winter peak demand periods," said Allan J. Tomlinson, president and chief operating officer of Diamond Shamrock, at the opening of the terminal.

The Justin Terminal has 20,000 barrels of storage capacity and is supplied product from Diamond Shamrock's McKee Gas Processing Plant in the Texas Panhandle through the company's existing 360-mile Southlake refined products pipeline.

Diamond Shamrock's expansion into the Northeast Texas market is part of the company's strategy to increase propane sales into dealer markets.

"By expanding into the Dallas-Fort Worth and Northeast Texas area, we are building a much stronger dealer market while reducing our exposure to the spot markets," he said.

Initial propane sales through the Justin LP-Gas Terminal will be about 2,000 barrels per day, which he expects Diamond Shamrock's sales to double in 10 percent. Tomlinson said besides supplying Northeast Texas, Diamond Shamrock also sells propane to dealers in the Texas Panhandle and parts of Colorado, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri.

Typical lawyer frets about money, boredom, ethics

By JIM MANN
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The typical American lawyer of 1982 frets about money problems and about the boredom and ethical dilemmas he or she occasionally confronts at the office.

The lawyer is interested in weighty social and economic issues, but can be star-struck in the presence of show business personalities.

That, at least, is the portrait of the legal profession that emerges from the programs of the American Bar Association at its week-long convention that began here last Thursday. By Sunday, 10,846 lawyers had registered to attend the proceedings.

The official work of the convention does not get under way until Tuesday, when the ABA's House of Delegates, its policy-making body, starts to meet. But the ABA is, as usual, sponsoring a series of seminars, speeches and other programs for the conventioneers.

The topics discussed at the sessions provide a sometimes-revealing glimpse at what lawyers have on their minds these days.

American businessmen — and, for that matter, ordinary financially strapped individuals — may find it a bit scary to learn that at an open seminar later this week, the lawyers will discuss "Bankruptcy in the '80s: Our Biggest Growth Industry."

Similarly, it may be disconcerting to those Americans facing criminal charges to learn that in another program, ABA members will thrash out the problem of "How to Practice Criminal Law and Still Send Your Kids to College."

Those sessions are among several in which lawyers are trying to figure out how to maintain or increase their incomes in these hard economic times. One ABA session has this particularly gloomy title: "Survival Tactics for Lawyers in the '80s."

For attorneys who wish to debate questions of broad national scope, there are available panels and speeches on subjects ranging from human rights to the United Nations, from the technology of childbirth to the problems of dying, from civil rights to video arcades.

Yet the ABA apparently realizes that some lawyers are at least as eager to see a famous name or face as to talk about lofty issues.

The ABA's criminal justice section invited Veronica Hamel, the TV star who plays public defender Joyce Davenport on the show "Hill Street Blues," to speak at a brunch on Sunday. Several TV news figures are also appearing before the ABA convention during the week.

One group meeting at the convention, the American Judicature Society, gave its annual honorary awards to two prominent jurists — and then handed out a third award to veteran film and television actor E.G. Marshall.

At recent conventions, the ABA has begun to offer special seminars for those lawyers who believe their long days poring over codes and statutes do not add up to the most exciting work in the world.

This year was no exception. At one panel discussion, a psychiatrist, a man described as a "personal growth counselor," and a member of the self-help EST organization were all asked to help ABA members in "Coping With the Law Office Blues."

Overriding the lawyers' other concerns is the one problem on which the ABA could take formal action at this convention — the problem of legal ethics.

For five years now, the ABA has been working on the development of a new model code of ethics for the legal profession to replace the existing Code of Professional Rsponsibility, adopted in 1969. A draft version of a new code will be presented to the ABA's House of Delegates on Tuesday.

A special ABA commission has rewritten the proposed new code several times, but it still contains some sections that are highly controversial within the legal profession.

One part of the new code would allow lawyers to "blow the whistle" on their clients under some circumstances. An attorney could do so if his client was engaging in conduct that might result in death or serious bodily injury, or in criminal or fraudulent activities resulting in substantial harm to another person's property.

Some members of the bar, particularly trial lawyers, say that provision places too much importance on the attorney's ethical obligations to the public and not enough importance on his ethical duty to represent his client as vigorously as possible.

Others at the ABA convention have objected to a separate section of the proposed code that would require lawyers to spell out their fees in writing any time they start to represent a new client. Those opposed to this say there is no need for such a written agreement.

Because of those disputes, there is talk of postponing approval of a new code of ethics once again, even though the ABA has done so on several earlier occasions.

Bryan area oilmen plan Woodbine development

BRYAN — A group of oil and gas operators active in the Bryan area has conducted initial studies of the highly productive Woodbine Sand lying some eight thousand feet beneath the surface here - and has concluded that the nature of the reservoir calls for production coordination and an overall program of enhanced recovery techniques.

The group also plans a "town hall type meeting" of land owners and other interested parties within the next 45 days.

"If we are to realize the maximum possible recovery from these wells", said Marvin C. Zeid, President of MCZ, Inc., "it's imperative that Woodbine reservoir in the Bryan area be developed in a coordinated, controlled manner, utilizing secondary and or enhanced recovery techniques."

"This could result in more than twice the anticipated primary recovery of the contained hydrocarbons that might be realized with haphazard development of the reservoir." Zeid is chairman of the group's recently-established Working Interest Owners Operators Committee.

Some 38 oil wells have been completed in the Woodbine formation in the Bryan area since MCZ made the initial discovery in March, 1981, setting off a rush by operators to secure mineral leases in the area. MCZ has completed 12 wells in the Woodbine formation, and has an interest in 10 others, initially potentialing 400 to 1,100 barrels per day each. Other leading operators in the reservoir include Getty Oil, Amoco Production, Lyons Petroleum, Champlin Petroleum, Chaparral Minerals, Robert P. Lammerts, Prodeco Oil & Gas, Inco Development, and North Central Oil.

At a late June meeting of the Bryan area Woodbine operators group, held in Houston, the operators reviewed and generally accepted the engineering committee's analysis which indicated that unitization of the reservoir - for the purpose of operating and developing it as a unitized single lease with the goal of maximizing ultimate recovery of its contained oil and gas - would be to the advantage of all working interest and royalty interest owners. They further concluded that the Bryan Woodbine structure should respond favorable to a coordinated enhanced-recovery program utilizing an artificial "drive" via injected fluids to push the oil toward designated producing wells. The driving fluids - introduced through injection wells - could be water, petroleum gases, carbon dioxide, other fluids, or a combination thereof.

"What this boils down to," Zeid explained, "is that all concerned would realize greater long-range income - and more needed hydrocarbons ultimately would be recovered - by pooling all leases and developing the structure as a single entity. Unitization and pooled oeration is a costly undertaking for the working-interest owners. But it will benefit them, the royalty/land owners, and the public who needs the hydrocarbons."

Zeid alos pointed to the importance of initiating a controlled enhanced recovery program for the reservoir - whose limits should be defined (by drilling) by the end of 1982 - before the bottom hole pressure of the wells declines to the "bubble point", after which enhanced techniques are less effective.

The group's efforts began with a February organizational meeting. Reporting to the Operators Committee - composed of all of the working - interest

Parker Drilling reorganizes

TULSA — A reorganization of Parker Drilling Company's manufacturing operations was announced recently by company President and Chief Operating Officer Robert L. Parker Jr. The move, which consolidates the company's rig manufacturing capabilities, affects two Parker subsidiaries - OIME, located in Odessa and Parco Masts and Substructures located in Del City, Oklahoma - and one of Parker's operating offices, the International Service Center (ISC) also located in Odessa.

In the reorganization, Parco became a wholly owned subsidiary of OIME. The consolidation will coordinate the marketing and accounting functions and expand the field service work for both OIME and Parco. Contract mast building and service work will continue at both locations. And, in order to concentrate the maintenance of Parker's rig fleet, the [illegible] International Service Center will now be under the [illegible] supervision of Parco.

Three promotions also were announced by the company. Lowell Reed, former Parco vice president, was promoted to executive vice president of Parco and vice president and director of OIME. Frank Meyer, manager of ISC, was named a vice president of Parco. Chuck Atchison, former OIME rig up superintendent, also was named a vice president of Parco.

John Brown Engineering is in a bind

By RUTH MARCUS
Los Angeles Time-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — John Brown Engineering Ltd. is in a bind.

The old-line British firm, builder of the Lusitania, the Queen Elizabeth and generations of British battleships, has a $182 million contract with the Soviet Union to supply 21 turbines for the Siberian natural gas pipeline. It wants to fulfill the contract, has more or less been ordered to do so by its government and faces the loss not only of business but of performance bonds and possible costly court cases if it does not.

But the United States government, which wants to block the pipeline, has warned John Brown and companies like it not to ship pipeline goods to the Soviets and has threatened them with penalties if they do.

The turbines are to be made with rotors from General Electric in the United States and are dependent to some extent on licenses John Brown holds from GE. The Reagan administration says this gives it jurisdiction over John Brown's decision.

If John Brown goes ahead with the contract, it could face millions of dollars in U. S. fines, which the government could collect by seizing assets of its 16 U. S. subsidiaries; jail terms for its officers if they set foot in the United States; and a kind of blacklisting which would prevent the company from importing further goods from the United States and could ruin its engineering operations, which depend on GE goods.

"We have no option but to comply" and fulfill the contract, Sir John Mayhew-Sanders, chairman of John Brown, said after the British government ordered compliance Aug. 2. But, he said, "It is a source of deep regret to us" that compliance with a British government order and our decision to try to honor legally binding commitments should in any way appear to put this company at the center of an international political difference of views." John Brown, he added, isn't "some dishonest cowboy company."

"This situation might be a marvelous law school or business school examination question," said Arthur T. Downey, former Commerce Department deputy assistant secretary for East-West trade and a Washington lawyer representing several of the companies involved. "Unfortunately for all concerned, it is a present dilemma."

The pipeline is the No. 1 sore spot in the United States' current ragged relationship with Europe. The Europeans look on the project mainly in economic terms, as a source of jobs and eventually energy. The Reagan administration, however, has moved to block it for ideological or political reasons, in retaliation for last winter's imposition of martial law in Poland. The administration also fears the fuel line will increase European dependence on the Soviet Union while helping the Soviets earn needed cash.

So far the two sides have just argued — the indignant Europeans saying the United States has no business poking into what is their affair. But John Brown, in fulfilling its contract, intends to send the Soviets six turbines containing GE rotors by the end of August. Then the Reagan administration will have to act.

Decisions on the penalties to be imposed on John Brown or other defiant companies are expected to come from the White House, after consultation with the State Department, where Undersecretary James L. Buckley has been the leading defender of the sanctions, and the Commerce Department, where the issue falls under the jurisdiction of Lionel H. Olmer, undersecretary for international trade.

John Brown isn't alone in its dilemma. The president, who in December banned exports to the Soviet Union of American-made oil and gas equipment or technology, in June expanded his order to include sales by overseas subsidiaries of U.S. firms and foreign companies producing such goods under U.S. licenses.

The United States asserts that it has authority over foreign subsidiaries through their United States parents and over foreign companies manufacturing goods under U.S. licenses because such companies must pledge to abide by U.S. export laws to obtain licenses.

Among the companies affected are Italy's Nuovo Pignone, which had agreed to sell the Soviets 19 compressor stations for $650 million, Germany's AEG Telefunken, which has a $270 million contract to build pipeline turbines, and Alsthom-Atlantique, a subsidiary of the French government-owned electric company, with a $60 million contract to supply 40 spare rotors.

In all, the Commerce Department estimates, the June extension of the pipeline sanctions could cost $1.6 billion over the next three years, affecting more than 16 overseas subsidiaries of U.S. firms and 8 foreign licensees.

Those companies find themselves in the middle of not only an international political dispute but a raging international legal battle.

Great Britain, Italy and France have said they will order their companies to fulfill their commitments to the Soviets. West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, terming the conflict a "family dispute," has said his government will not take such drastic measures but rather "encourage" companies there to honor their contracts.

"Whose laws do we break?" asked Ronald G. Turner of California-based Baker International, whose British subsidiary has about $10 million in oil and gas equipment ready to go and an additional $15 million in sales at stake. With the equipment due in September, he said, "We're not up against a wall right now, but we could be" if neither government backs down.

Another such company is Cameron Iron Works of Houston, which has a $100 million contract with the Soviet Union for oil and gas well equipment that it says is unrelated to the pipeline. Cameron sidestepped the December prohibition against direct trade with the Soviets by contracting through its German subsidiary and having subsidiaries in Germany, Scotland and France assemble the equipment.

Deliveries were scheduled to begin in July. "The big work is done, we've spent a lot of money, and we have still more that's committed," Cameron Chairman M.A. Wright said. "We're one of the needlessly harmed companies caught in the middle."

Cameron is facing the loss of its contract (about 10 percent of its annual sales), several hundred thousand dollars in cancellation charges and potentially huge liabilities to the Soviets and subcontractors for losses they would incur as the result of a cancellation — along with any sanctions the United States might impose.

"Have you read what the penalties could be?" Wright asked. "I'm not looking with great favor on making the decision."

Still, Wright will have to decide soon. "We're working under a very short time frame, " he said. "We just don't have time for the Polish situation to get solved in a matter of months."

The legal situation of Cameron and the other companies affected by the sanctions is murky.

"Neither the Congress nor the executive lightly subjects transactions abroad to U.S. rules and the risks of conflict with local law," Olmer told a House hearing last week.

With the pipeline sanctions, however, "the necessary links to the U.S. are present, and sufficiently important U.S. interests are at stake," he said, noting that the United States exerted similar power in the seizure of Iranian assets, the response to the Arab boycott of Israel and the ban on exporting high-technology items to Libya.

"We have the legal authority to carry out the president's policy," Olmer said, "and we are prepared to enforce the controls to the extent necessary."

The Europeans and the affected companies, however, argue that the host country, not the United States, has authority over companies incorporated under foreign laws. The law the administration invoked to support the sanctions, the Export Administration Act, gives the United States power only over American exports, they contend, not continuing ability to control exported products once they are overseas.

Even if the United States wielded such authority, they add, it cannot apply it retroactively, forcing companies to comply with export bans imposed months after they signed binding contracts.

The sanctions, British Trade Secretary Lord Cockfield said in announcing the government order, are "an attempt to interfere with existing contracts" and "an unacceptable extension of American extraterritorial jurisdiction ... repugnant in international law."

Downey said the best way to look at the U. S. decision was from the other end. Suppose France, for some reason, ordered American Motors not to sell cars abroad, on grounds that a French company, Renault, has an interest in American Motors.

"Consider the reaction in the United States if the French government asserted that the American company was ... 'subject to the jurisdiction of France' and ordered that it not export those vehicles," Downey said.

Former undersecretary of state George W. Ball put the matter more bluntly. "Nothing could be more harebrained than for the Reagan administration to attempt countermeasures as it is talking of doing," he said. "For our government to reach its long arm into foreign countries and try to force local subsidiaries to disobey the policies of the countries where they are domiciled undercuts the vitality — even the existence — of the whole multinational system."

Administration officials last week downplayed the possibility of throwing corporate officials in jail. They emphasized instead their power to put companies that violate the trading ban on a blacklist that would bar them from buying goods or technology in the United States.

That sanction might be particularly effective, since many of the companies involved are dependent on products or licenses from GE and other companies for much of their manufacturing operations.

But it would also further tilt the balance of trade in favor of Europe and inflict extra damage on American firms, which have already lost at least $850 million as a result of the December sanctions, according to State Department figures.

Whatever the United States chooses to do, it seems inevitable that the issue will end up in court. Administration officials, in a bit of what may have been wishful thinking, expressed hope last week that no conflicts would occur.

But former Commerce Department official Stanley J. Marcuss, a Washington lawyer, said, "Any company in the chain of companies that's involved in production for the pipeline is going to be concerned about any company in that chain not fulfilling their commitment. And that concern itself translate into a lawsuit."

Imported cars 37 percent of market

DETROIT (AP) — Imported cars made up a record 31.7 percent of the U.S. market in July, an auto industry trade journal reports in today's edition.

The figure is the highest for any month in history, surpassing the 31.6 percent of the market taken by imports last December, according to Ward's Automotive Reports.

The record was attributed to improved sales of Japanese makes, several of which ended incentives July 31, and record-setting performances by many of the most expensive European sport-luxury cars such as Volvo, Saab and Jaguar Marque, Ward's said.

Woolard wins second City title

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

Royce Woolard couldn't remember when he won his first Midland City Golf Championship but his second came Sunday at Hogan Park Golf Course.

"There wasn't anything fancy to it," the 39-year-old Woolard said, after shooting an one-over par 71 in the final round.

Woolard won The Midland Reporter-Telegram sponsored event as he rose from a pack of four players who were tied for second place after Saturday's rain-shortened opening round with a 36.

Grant Spencer, who shared the first round lead with David Teichmann after a nine-hole round of 35 Saturday, finished second following a playoff when five players tied for the runnerup spot.

Dale Delay, Steve Hammell and Harry Bettis fell by the wayside on the first playoff hole as Spencer and Robert Upham birdied the first hole. Spencer turned the trick again as he birdied the second playoff hole to break the deadlock.

TEICHMANN SETTLED for seventh spot as he shot a 74 on the final day of play.

Joel Jackson, Hogan's assistant professional, said the rain didn't effect play in the final round. "It didn't start raining until the second playoff hole," he said.

"Spencer and Upham were running off the second green as the rains started coming down."

Woolard won the title in workmanlike fashion as he hit twelve greens in regulation and didn't three putt any greens.

"My iron play was the best part of my game," he said, "and my putting was the weakest."

The oil field supply salesman made some tough putts for par but he couldn't put away the kind of putts that make a difference.

"I had my putting oportunities, but I just couldn't take advantage of them," he said.

THE MIDLAND High graduate previously won the event when it was still a three-day tournament, but he couldn't rmemeber if it was 1970 or '71.

Woolard had a difficult start in the tournament as he boggied the first hole he played. Sunday he boggied holes eight and nine but his birdie on 415-yard, par-4, twelfth hole proved to be the difference.

The lowest score in the tournament came from Orlando Montanez as he won the first flight with a 106 total for 27 holes. Richard Corbell was second with a 110 while Tim Hanley and David Crow tied for third position.

Don Hughes came in with a 155 to edge Tommy Johnson by one stroke for the second flight title.

In the third flight Frank Flournoy took a two stroke victory over Cisco Perales, 160-162.

JIM WARD had the largest margin of victory of the flights that played two full rounds as he carded a 168 to win the fourth flight. John Daugherty was second with a 172 total.

Gerald Nobles and Clyde Payne were guaranteed to finish in the money as they were the only two entrants in the fifth flight. Both finished with identical two-round totals of 190. Nobles was declared the winner on a card playoff, and in gentlemenly fashion, the two sportsmen agreed to split the $80.00 purse.

In the seniors flight, Blackie Coffman won the low gross trophy and Clyde Payne won the low net trophy.

Gold Sox add to Cubs' woes with 5-2 win

AMARILLO — The Midland Cubs contiuned their Texas League Western Division skid here Sunday with a 5-2 loss to the Amarillo Gold Sox in the start of a brief five-day road trip.

The Cubs committed five errors in this one as Midland dropped its ninth game in the last 12 outings. Amarillo's Joe Long handcuffed the Cubs on five hits, tossing a shutout until the eighth inning when he gave up two runs, one unearned.

Midland's Randy Clark (2-8) took the loss with five innings of work where he gave up four runs, three earned, and 10 hits to the Sox.

Amarillo took a 2-0 lead in the second inning when George Henshaw singled, stole second and scored on a single by Pat Casey. Casey later scored on a single by Luis Quinones.

THE SOX struck for two more runs off Clark in the sixth before Tim Milner came on in relief. Quinones and Joe Purpura had back-to-back singles, but a throwing error by Midland catcher Mike Diaz, who had three errors in the game, threw wild to second in a pickoff attempt allowing Quinones to score. Mark Galaespie followed with a single to plate Purpura.

Amarillo's final run came in the seventh. Jeff Ronk walked off Milner and stole second before Pat Casey drew another walk. On a double steal, Diaz bounced a ball off Casey's helmet and Ronk scored.

Long, who picked up his 10th win of the year against eight defeats, had a two-hitter going until the eighth inning when Javier Fierro opened the inning with his seventh homer of the season. With one out, Henry Cotto and Mike Kelley both singled. Cotto later scored when a ball hit by Joe Carter went through the legs of Quinones at shortstop.

The Cubs had another chance in the ninth to dent the defeat, but Fritz Connally grounded out with the bases loaded.

The two teams continue the series at 6:30 p.m. today with a doubleheader to make up for a game previously lost to rain.

Floyd recovers form to win PGA Championship

Pride adds an extra edge in final holes at Southern Hills

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The potential humiliation of it all drove Ray Floyd to the 64th PGA Championship.

The man all the other players said couldn't lose was giving it away Sunday among the trees, rough and bunkers of Southern Hills Country Club.

"I don't know if I could have lived it down," said 20-year veteran Floyd. "All I would have read in the newspaper headlines would have been how Ray Floyd blew it ... I have a lot of pride."

The 39-year-old Floyd said he gave himself a talk on the 12th tee that was the kind of stuff that would get you committed.

"They'd put me in one of those places if I told you what I said," Floyd laughed.

At the time a fat five-shot lead had dwindled to two strokes as Fred Couples eagled the par-5 16th hole.

Determined to be more aggressive, Floyd birdied the 12th, 15th and 16th holes to build the lead to five shots and coasted home despite an 18th hole double bogey to earn his second PGA title and third major conquest.

EVEN THOUGH he had a three-shot victory at 8-under-par 272 over runnerup Lanny Wadkins, Floyd's final round 2-over-par 72 wouldn't let him enjoy it.

"I made a lot of bad mental errors," he said. "I was in the trees, the rough, the bunkers. But my play from the 12th on in was equal to any during the week."

Floyd's first major tournament triumph in six years, will be remembered for 54 holes of pure shotmaking precision including a record opening round of 7-under-par 63 and a record three-round score of 200, 10 under par.

But the pressure built as everyone assumed he was a sure winner.

"I took all the pressure away from the field," he said. "They know I usually play well from the front so they relaxed and free-wheeled it. 'Ole Ray Floyd won't blow it,' they said. It's not easy to win under a situation like that."

The struggle in the 94-degree heat, the pressure, the nerves, all hit home as Floyd stood over his second shot on the 434-yard par-4 closing hole.

"The awe of it all hit home," he said. "I was looking up the fairway at all the people and realized the tournament was mine ... it all happened too quick.

"I don't remember even standing over the ball. I just know the shot squirted right, low and bad."

From a horrendous lie in the steel wool-thick Bermuda rough, Floyd dumped his next shot into a bunker, exploded out and two-putted for a six.

"The victory means a helluva lot to me," said Floyd. "It was my first major since 1976 (the Masters) and it puts me winning a major in all three decades, the 60s, 70s, 80s."

Floyd earned $65,000 while former PGA champion Wadkins, who sizzled with a final round 7-under-par 67, bagged $45,000 for his 275.

'Couples' 66 tied him for third place with steady Calvin Peete, who posted a 69, at 276. Each earned $27,500.

At 277 were Jim Simons, who shot 69, Greg Norman, a 72 final round shooter, and Jay Haas, who shot 72.

Bob Gilder was alone at 278 with a final round 72.

At even par 280 were Tom Kite, 67, Tom Watson, 68, Jerry Pate, 69, and Lon Hinkle, 71.

Jack Nicklaus, seeking to become the first player to win six PGAs, fired a final round 67 and was at 3-over-par 283.

Floyd said "Some day I'll be able to look back at this tournament and I'll be proud to say I was able to gather it up."

It was Floyd's 18th tour victory, giving him $305,409 this year and $2,097,396 lifetime.

His goal is to win the British and U.S. Opens.

"I will not ever be happy with what I've done unless I win both the British and U.S. Opens," he said.

Kenty admits Montes put up a good fight

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Even though he won a unanimous if controversial decision, former lightweight boxing champion Hilmer Kenty had to admit John Montes put up more of a fight than Kenty expected.

"In all honesty, I didn't think he was going to be that good," Kenty said of previously unbeaten Montes.

"He was in a no-lose situation, but I didn't think he was wise in going against a fighter of my caliber at this time," Kenty said.

Kenty, ranked No. 6 by the World Boxing Council, overcame a first-round cut over one eye and he hopes skeptics who thought he was washed up as he won the decision Sunday in a 10-round nationally televised bout.

"I guess this win should answer all those skeptics who doubted I could come back," Kenty said. "I feel I'm still the best lightweight." He handed Montes his first defeat in 23 outings.

Montes, a 21-year-old from Whittier, Calif., said he was not disappointed at this his first loss.

"I feel I won it," Montes said. "I blocked most of his punches and he never hurt me."

Kenty, 27, was making his second appearance in the ring since he lost his title to Sean O'Grady in April 1981. He suffered a detached retina in that fight and underwent eye surgery.

Each fighter weighed 133½ pounds.

An estimated crowd of 1,000 at the University of New Mexico arena booed the decision loudly, and several minutes after it was announced, many milled around the ring shouting their disapproval at ring officials.

Neither boxer scored a knockdown, but Montes opened a cut over one of Kenty's eyes in the first round. The cut quickly closed, however, and Kenty said he felt his jab did the trick in piling up enough points to take the decision.

Referee Mike Klaub and judge Hugh Bishop scored the fight 97-96, while judge David Baker gave Kenty the win 98-96.

Kenty, who now holds a 23-1 record, did most of his scoring with his jab and an occasional left-right combination.

U.S. coach feels trials to close to World meet

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador (AP) — U.S. swimming officials gambled and lost when they scheduled the trials for the World Swimming Championships just a week before the meet in Ecuador.

"We need to have the trials three weeks before a big meet so we can put in some work in between," U.S. coach Mark Schubert said after a disappointing performance by American swimmers here.

East Germany won 12 events to eight for the United States and four for the Soviet Union. In the last world championships at West Berlin in 1978, the United States won 20 of 29 gold medals, while no other country had more than four and the East Germans had one.

"I definitely think the trials were too close to this meet," said Mary T. Meagher of Louisville, Ky., a world-record-holder who on Saturday night lost her first butterfly race in four years in a 50-meter pool.

"Not only is it hard to get psyched for two meets in a row, it's hard to have your taper work well," Meagher added.

In swimmers' terms, they 'taper' their grueling training before a meet in order to maximize their performance in big meets. If a swimmer is in top shape, the 'taper' can last for weeks, but in this case, the 'taper' didn't last for many Americans.

Schubert, who admitted to having a hand in the decision to hold the U.S. trials just before the world meet, said, "We were scared to have the trials earlier because we were afraid the swimmers wouldn't be in shape for long course (50-meter pools) so soon after the short-course season (25-yard pools that swimmers use in high school and college)."

The United States and East Germany both won 25 swimming medals, but the latter's gold-silver-bronze totals of 12-8-5 were far more impressive than the U.S. standings of 8-8-9.

"Our goal was to win more men's golds, more women's golds and more medals overall," Schubert said. "If we start relating to what we did here as a good meet, then we're in trouble."

"After the 1976 Olympics, we came back strong (after the U.S. women won one of 13 events), and the East Germans have come back after 1978, so I'm sure we can come back again," Meagher said. "Thank goodness this happened here and not in the Olympics."

The United States had medal totals of 13-11-10 in the four-sport World Aquatic Games, which included competition in diving, water polo and synchronized swimming as well as swimming. The United States swept the four men's and women's diving events as Greg Louganis of El Cajon, Calif., won both the springboard and the platform titles.

Clemson already has '82 bowl berth

By WILL LESTER
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Clemson's defending national-championship football team will play a bowl game this season no matter what happens.

The Tigers meet Wake Forest Nov. 27 in the Mirage Bowl in Tokyo — a regular-season game arranged and paid for by several Japanese businesses in a yearly effort to bring college football to Japan.

But plenty of questions face the 1982 Tigers after their most successful season. They won the championship with a 12-0 record last year, including a 22-15 win over Nebraska in the Orange Bowl. They also brought home an Atlantic Coast Conference Crown with a 6-0 record.

ONE QUESTION the coaches would rather not discuss is an investigation of the school's athletic program by the National Collegiate Athletic Association. Allegations that Clemson alumni offered money to recruits surfaced last year and had Clemson officials holding their breath, hoping the probe wouldn't spoil their Cinderella season.

The results of the probe are still not known, and the NCAA is mum. But as Bob Bradley, Clemson sports information director, put it, "No news is good news."

Coach Danny Ford concedes that the investigation is on his mind, but he said his first priority is trying to match last year's performance. Ford, 34, said the team, which lost 18 seniors including six offensive starters, will have to develop quickly.

The Tigers face Georgia at Athens, Ga., Sept. 6 in a nationally televised rematch of last year's Clemson upset of the then-defending national champs.

"We have to be the best we can be, opening with Georgia," said Ford. "We try to improve week to week. But we're down there at night. We've got to be first rate that night."

THE SCHEDULE includes the usual lineup of ACC teams, as well as Boston College, Western Carolina, Kentucky and South Carolina.

The offensive line was the hardest hit by graduation, losing four starters. But Ford notes that backup offensive linemen played some last year and won't be totally inexperienced. Star wide receiver Perry Tuttle is now with the pro Buffalo Bills, and newcomers will man the wide-receiving posts.

The best news for Clemson is the return of its entire backfield corps, including senior quarterback Homer Jordan, last year's ACC passing leader. Jordan will have seniors Cliff Austin and Chuck McSwain at tailback and senior Jeff McCall and junior Kevin Mack at fullback. Austin and McSwain combined for 1,500 yards last year.

The nation's eighth-ranked defense last year also has lost key players. Jeff Bryant, second-team All-America defensive tackle, and All-America linebacker Jeff Davis are gone, as well as both cornerbacks. But senior All-America safety Terry Kinard is back, along with all-ACC senior tackle Dan Benish and senior linebacker Danny Triplett.

The kicking game should be strong with the ACC's leading punter, Dale Hatcher, and place-kicker Donqld Igwebuike, both sophomores, back for another year.

The preseason forecasts have not been overly optimistic, with Clemson picked to finish second in the ACC, behind North Carolina.

But Ford isn't worried about rankings.

"You can't win one 'til you get out and play," he said. "Where they pick you doesn't matter."

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Lackey first U.S. world champion

MOTORCYCLING

ETTELBRUECK, Luxembourg (AP) — Brad Lackey of the United States became the first American to win a world motorcross championship when he rode his 500cc Suzuki to second and third places in the two heats of the Luxembourg Grand Prix.

His performance Sunday earned the San Franciscan 22 points for a season total of 228, or 11 more than runner-up champion Andre Vromans of Belgium.

"Americans are a special breed," Lackey, 28, said after the event, the last of 12 racing meets that count for the April-August motorcross season. "It has taken 10 long years, but she (the United States) has her first world champion. I'm proud to be the American who was first."

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — Robbie Knievel, son of daredevil Evel Knievel, was injured Sunday when he tried to jump 15 cars without holding his motorcycle's handlebars, a spokesman said.

The 20-year-old had completed the stunt successfully once while holding the handlebars, but was trying it again "no hands" when the accident occurred, said John Shultz, spokesman for the Evel Knievel II Show.

The front wheel of Knievel's motorcycle turned and the bike slid into a guardrail and hay stack, throwing Knievel about 100 feet, said Shultz.

BASEBALL

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Former Houston Astros pitcher J.R. Richard, felled by a stroke two years ago, received three standing ovations Saturday night as he pitched his first game in Class AAA competition since 1974.

Richard left the game in the sixth inning with a 4-3 lead, but the Spokane Indians came back to beat his Tucson Toros 5-4 in extra innings and complete a sweep of their Pacific Coast League doubleheader. The Indians won the opener 4-3. Tucson is the Astros' farm team.

The 6-foot-8 right-hander threw a total of 85 pitches, including 38 in a rocky first inning when he gave up three runs. He retired the side in nine pitches in the second inning and threw only seven pitches in the third, setting down seven batters in a row.

TENNIS

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Spain's Jose Higueras, slowed for two years by hepatitis, continued his comeback with a 7-5, 5-7, 6-3 victory over Jimmy Arias for the men's singles championship in the U.S. Open Clay Court tournament at the Indianapolis Sports Center.

Romania's Virginia Ruzici won the women's singles championship, rolling past Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, 6-2, 6-0.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Jimmy Connors rolled to a 7-5, 6-0 victory over Brian Gottfried in the finals of the $100,000 National Revenue tennis tournament.

Tom Gullikson and Bernie Mitton upset Victor Amaya and Hank Pfister 4-6, 6-1, 6-4 to win the doubles crown.

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Harvard and Yale won all nine matches to complete a 20-1 victory over Oxford and Cambridge in the biennial Prentice Cup tennis competition.

AUTO RACING

HOCKENHEIM, West Germany (AP) — France's Patrick Tambay, in a Ferrari Turbo, won the German Grand Prix. Frenchman Rene Arnoux finished second.

A day earlier, Grand Prix world championship leader Didier Pironi of France was seriously injured in an accident during a practice session. Doctors said Pironi's racing career is over after operating to avoid the amputation of his lower right leg.

BOATING

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Malcolm Harden of Portsmouth, Va., completed an American sweep in the Union of International Motor Boat Racing World Championships at Dayton's Eastwood Lake.

Harden scored 752 points to take the Class OA world championship, while Dan Kirts of Elkhart, Ind., won the World Class OB title.

Harden finished fifth, third, and first in three heat races to pile up the needed points.

ROME, N.Y. (AP) — Jimbo McConnell defeated John Sherlock by 4.2 seconds in the Miller High Life Outboard Performance Craft Marathon Nationals at Delta Lake State Park.

BASEBALL

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The Louisville Redbirds of the American Association set an all-time minor league total attendance record, drawing 19,251 fans to their 5-2 victory Sunday night over the Iowa Cubs for a total of 681,479 fans through 55 games.

The old mark of 670,479 was set by San Francisco in 1946.

BICYCLING

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Sue Novara-Reber won the National Championship women's bicycle road race over Jacque Bradley. The race determined the U.S. World Team for the World Championships next month at Goodwood, England.

Qualifying for the team were Novara-Reber, Bradley, Rebecca Twigg, Connie Carpenter, Eileen Furey, Cindy Olavarri and Rebecca Daughton.

Sandra Palmer embraces her caddie after winning the LPGA Boston Five Classic at Radisson Ferncroft in Danvers, Mass., Sunday.

Palmer holds on for BFC victory

DANVERS, Mass. (AP) — Sandra Palmer, a native Texan, has come a long way since she became interested in golf as a $2 a round caddy when she was 13 and her family lived in Bangor, Maine.

Palmer, now 41, moved up another notch among all-time greats Sunday as she posted her 20th victory in 19 years on the LPGA tour, outduelling rookie Terri Moody down the stretch for a one-stroke triumph in the $175,000 Boston Five Classic.

"Experience certainly helps, but you never stop learning," Palmer said after firing a 3-under-par 69 for a 72-hole total of 281, seven under regulation on Radisson Ferncroft Country Club's short (6,008 yards) but exacting course.

"I don't care how many wins you have, you're always learning," she said. "I learned patience this week. I shot a 74 in my first round, but could very easily have had a 76. I had birdies on the last two holes and they got me going, at least psychologically.

"Then, after a 67 in the second round, I had a 71 Saturday. I could have shot much higher, but I hung in there although not hitting the ball well. So, tied for the lead going into the final round, I felt confident, knew I had a good chance to win. I was in control of myself all day, even though I got a little nervous when Terri just missed an eagle 3 on the last hole. I wasn't expecting Miss Moody to lip the cup."

Moody, a 21-year-old blonde who looks more like a high school cheerleader than the 1981 national intercollegiate golf champion from Georgia, fired a fourth consecutive sub par round, a 70, for 282 but just missed in a dramatic bid for her first LPGA victory.

"I'm just happy to be here and playing so well," said Moody, who recently returned to action after suffering a shattered cheekbone and 180 stitches in an automobile accident May 17 in Georgia. "On the last hole, though, I just wanted to clear the water with a wedge shot from about 91 yards. You just don't think of an eagle, but I almost got lucky and got one."

Palmer collected $26,250 for her first victory in 19 months, becoming the 15th player to go over the $800,000 mark in LPGA history. Moody who had won nearly $12,000 this year, more than doubled her earnings with a payoff of $17,150.

Muffin Spencer-Devlin, a former fashion model, also collected her biggest paycheck. After fighting an apparent flu bug Saturday night, and visiting a hospital emergency ward, she birdied four of the last five holes for a 69 and a 283. Her third place finish was worth $12,250.

Judy Clark, who shared the 54-hole lead with Palmer and Moody, slipped to a par 72 and 284, tying Vicki Tabor for fourth place. Tabor had a final round 69.

Palmer pocketed a check for $26,250 and a new car for her one-stroke victory over rookie golfer Terri Moody.

Huskies should be near top in '82

SEATTLE — Coach Don James of Washington is cautious when discussing the Huskies' chances in the coming college football season, even though he has 17 starters back from last year's Rose Bowl-winning squad.

"We're not talking about a national championship or conference championship, but of course every red-blooded American would like to be No. 1. I would think the championships would be among the players' goals," says James.

The Huskies are expected to be at or near the top for 1982.

They wound up No. 10 in the final Associated Press poll last season after defeating Iowa 28-0 on New Year's Day. Their 10-2 record included a 6-2 Pacific-10 Conference mark for the league title.

While the Huskies don't appear to have the toughest schedule in the nation this year, it does include UCLA and Arizona State — the teams that beat them last season.

One concern James had in spring practice was the offensive line, where both starting guards were lost to graduation. An injury caused senior offensive tackle Eric Moran to miss most of the spring workouts.

"That gave us a chance to play some younger players," says James. "We still have some shoring up to do. We're not quite as big and physical as in the past."

Moran, however, at 6-foot-6, 288 pounds, and Don Dow, 6-foot-6 and 280, should be among the biggest offensive tackle pair in the country.

Graduation losses include star linebacker Mark Jerue and top defensive tackle Fletcher Jenkins, but the Huskies have at least one returning letterman at each position. That includes punter Jeff Partridge and placekicker Chuck Nelson, the Pac-10's leading scorer the past two seasons.

Among the returnees are running back Jacque Robinson, who rushed for 142 yards and two touchdowns against Iowa to become the first freshman to be named Most Valuable Player in the Rose Bowl.

Junior running back Ron Jackson also returns. He led the running attack with 623 yards on 159 carries last season.

Quarterback Steve Pelluer is back, along with backup Tim Cowan. Pelluer took over the starting role early last season when Cowan was injured.

Pelluer passed for 1,138 yards and nine touchdowns last season, completing 110 of 234 throws with eight intercepted.

But James, a great believer in team depth, finds the situation at other positions even more encouraging.

"Our greatest strength is at wide receiver and outside linebacker," he says.

Wide receivers include Anthony Allen, who grabbed 29 passes for 389 yards and two touchdowns last year, and Paul Skansi, who made 24 catches for 295 yards and two TDs.

Among returning outside linebackers James has speedy Mark Stewart, a 6-foot-3, 230-pound senior who made 60 unassisted tackles last year.

NORTHGATE $75,200

$673.30 Per Month

You can't afford NOT to buy any longer!

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $71,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivas lent to a rate of 10 7/8% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be changed at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the princ ipal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage bases upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. Annual percentage ate approximately 16.575%.
