'Macbeth' bound for state now

Long day pays off for cast, crew

It was 5:30 in the morning when members of Snyder High School's "Macbeth" troup left for regional competition Friday and midnight when they returned home. But they'll have plenty of time to sleep and dream of yet another trip to Austin.

"We won!" said a tired but jubulant Jerry Worsham, Snyder drama instructor.

"Macbeth" stole the show at the Region I-4A One-Act Play Contest in San Angelo Friday and will advance to the state contest next month.

Eight of the 15 "Macbeth" cast members were singled out by critic judge Susan Longrehen for acting awards. Included among them was Sam Grimes, named Best Actor at the regional level for the second year in a row.

Longrehen, of St. Edwards University in Austin, was lavish in her praise of the SHS production, calling it "visually stunning, something I couldn't take my eyes off of" and a "very strong production."

Joellen King was named to the All-Star Cast. Kevin Alejandro, Sam Cain and Katie Thornton received honorable mention. Amy Beaver, Sara McDonald and Amy Patterson, who play witches in the William Shakespeare play, received a group honorable mention award.

A large number of Snyder citizens made the trip to Angelo State University for the contest, including some ex-students who have appeared in previous SHS one-act productions.

Also moving on from Region I to state is Plainview's "Shadow of a Man" — the play that has advanced along with SHS through district and area competition.

The state contest will be at Bass Concert Hall in the Performing Arts Center at the University of Texas on Friday, May 7. It will be Snyder's 26th appearance in the state one-act competition; 24 under Worsham.

In addition to those receiving all-star recognition, additional cast and crew members of "Macbeth" are Marc Sparlin, Craig Row, Michael McQuerry, J. Parker, Steven Bollinger, Mark Bullard, Jannica Northerns, Jennifer Hancock, Steve Taylor, Valerie Sanchez, Jason Miller, Josh Palmer and Mike Baker.

Early voting ends soon

Early voting continued at a less-than-rapid pace this past week in the May 1 school funding amendments, U.S. Senate, city council, mayoral and county school board elections.

Voters have just two more days, Monday and Tuesday, to cast their ballots during the early voting period.

As in the previous week, the school funding amendments and U.S. Senate elections — all on one ballot — continued to draw the most attention from early voters.

According to the county clerk's office, 289 people had cast ballots in person by 5 p.m. Friday. Fourteen mail ballots were still out.

The funding amendments are Proposition 1, equalizing school finance; Proposition 2, funding for future state mandates; and Prop-

Proposition 1 meeting slated

A Town Hall Meeting concerning Proposition 1 has been scheduled for 4 p.m. Monday in the Ira Gym. The public is invited.

Weather info available on 'Talking Newspaper'

Beginning Monday, Snyder area residents may get current weather information by calling "The Talking Newspaper."

In cooperation with KCBD TV, Channel 11 in Lubbock, a weather forecast will be available on the Snyder Daily News' Talking Newspaper.

The up-to-date forecast will be given by either John Robinson or Len Gilliard, both well-known weathermen who use the Doppler Radar.

To listen to the weather forecast, call 573-NEWS and then press extension 491.

The Talking Newspaper was begun April 1, and the response has been enthusiastic, said SDN Publisher Roy McQueen. "The weather forecast was a top priority, and we were able to work out arrangements this week to provide Scurry County citizens with a weather forecast which will be updated as needed."

Persons interested in weather, or bargains or information listed by some 40 Talking Newspaper clients can call 24-hours a day, 7 days a week.

"We have other ideas for addition to the Talking Newspaper," McQueen said. "We will made these changes one at a time to make sure the system works as planned."

Coming soon will be the ability for the SDN news department to conduct call-in polls on questions and issues of interest to Scurry County citizens.

A Talking Newspaper directory is published each day in the Snyder Daily News as well as in the weekly TV Spotlight. This coming week, a directory on postcard stock will be made available to readers.

Annual May Day fund-raiser for Senior Center set May 1

Scurry County Senior Citizens Center invites community residents to the county coliseum on Saturday, May 1, for the annual May Day festivities.

May Day features a barbecue, entertainment and an auction.

The coliseum will open at 2 p.m. to allow prospective bidders to look over the quilts and other items for the auction, which will begin at 6:30 p.m. Admission to the coliseum is free.

About 20 quilts, all made in the Center during the past year, will be in the auction. Also included are donated items such as lace table cloths, four afghans, a yo-yo coverlet, nine baby quilts, ceramic pieces, and collector's plates and dolls.

To be auctioned again is a white buffalo bronze sculpture, which will spend the next 12 months with the successful bidder and then be returned to be auctioned once more in 1994.

Also opening at 2 p.m. will be booths featuring baked foods and arts and crafts, all donated by senior citizens. Entertainment will begin at that time and continue until the auction begins.

Barbecued beef and all the trimmings will be served from 4:30-6 p.m. Tickets for the meal are $5

Resignation, trash on county's agenda

Resignation of the airport's interim manager and a request to seek bids for rural trash collection are top items on Monday's commissioners court meeting.

Dewey Thames, airport employee who was elevated to interim manager earlier this month, has submitted his letter of resignation.

The court appointed Thames as interim manager for Scurry County Airport in its April 12 meeting. The airport is currently without a manager-mechanic. The court is advertising for the position, however.

Thames has been the only full-time county employee at the airport since manager Darrell Mize resigned in February.

At the April 12 meeting, commissioners said they felt as if they should give someone authority until the position is filled.

County Treasurer Charlie Bell will provide the court with his office's first quarterly report. Julie Strunk, loss prevention officer, will discuss the safety program, and minutes are expected to be approved.

FFA banquet set Thursday

Snyder FFA chapter will hold its annual parent/member banquet April 29 in the First Baptist Church Family Life Center.

The banquet, set for 7 p.m., will honor junior and senior members, as well as people in the community who have helped the chapter grow.

Officers for the chapter are Dell Blackwell, president; Robert Kimmel, vice president; Bobby Cawthron, secretary; Tommy Henderson, reporter; Duffy Galloway; treasurer; Jennifer Trevey, sentinel; Danielle Vernon, student advisor; and Kristi McGuire, historian.

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Free speech may be guaranteed, but the constitution doesn't guarantee anybody has to listen."

We've tried to keep an open mind about the so-called "Robin Hood" plan to finance public school education in Texas. Voters in Texas on May 1 are being asked to approve a constitutional amendment that supporters say will equalize educational funding.

We've listened and we simply cannot see passage of Proposition 1 as the answer to the difficult question of adequate funding for public education.

Passage may be a short-term solution, but it falls far short in the long run. In our opinion, passing the school finance amendment won't necessarily get the question out of the courts.

The Supreme Court ruling wasn't about equal spending per student, it had to do with equal revenue for equal tax effort. Some school districts simply aren't willing to tax themselves in order to insure an adequate level of education for their children.

We've lived in West Texas all of our life, and we're well acquainted with inequality. Some parts of Texas have water and trees and we have sand storms and oil. (There's still some left.)

If we use state leaders' logic about equal funding, the city may have found a nifty way to pay for increased landfill and sewage cost. Refuse to tax ourselves, and seek a constitutional amendment for the people with money to help dispose of our trash.

One can easily see the ridiculous nature of the argument. We're in favor of local control of our public schools, and passage of Robin Hood is a step toward more control out of Austin.

Some scare tactics are being used, such as talk about school consolidation. With or without Robin Hood, school consolidation one day will be an unfortunate reality.

We do, however, suggest a favorable vote for proposition two. We like the idea of the ones who mandate certain programs having to come up with the money to implement 'em.

Proposition 3, selling state bonds to help build school facilities, is bad public policy.

Being for one of three ain't bad.

Widow suing skinheads, record firm

FORT WORTH (AP) — The widow of a black man murdered by three skinheads has filed a [illegible] unspecified damages from the teen-agers.

Carolyn Thomas, 29, also is suing Elektra Records, alleging that lyrics from Metallica's "Kill 'em All" album compelled the youths to murder her 32-year-old husband, Donald.

In addition, the lawsuit includes the parents of the white supremacists and a gas station allegedly [illegible] before the killing.

William George "Trey" Roberts III, 18; and Joshua Hendry, 17, pleaded guilty and are serving prison terms in connection with the June 1991 drive-by shooting.

The two testified against Christopher William Brosky, 18, whose murder conviction and subsequent 10-year probationary sentence earlier this year prompted demonstrations in Fort Worth.

Mrs. Thomas could not be immediately reached for comment Friday. Her attorney, Bobbie Edmonds, said she is optimistic about winning damages from the skinheads. But she added that the lawsuit's goal is not money.

"Hopefully there is going to be some justice done," Ms. Edmonds said.

The lawsuit, filed in Fort Worth state District Court, claims that the teen-agers violated Thomas' civil rights and acted with malice in killing him.

Elektra is accused of being negligent and liable for producing and recording Metallica's album, which the trio allegedly listened to immediately before the murder.

The lawsuit claims that the al[illegible] dency to cater or appeal to morbid interest in violence" and that the songs "incited, encouraged violence, profanity, death and the killing of Donald Thomas."

The Metallica song "No Remorse" includes the lyrics, "Only the strong survive, no will to save the weaker race, we are ready to kill all comers like a loaded gun right at your face."

Both Elektra and Warner Music Group, Elektra's parent company, refused comment Friday.

Hendry testified during Brosky's trial that the three teens bought 36 beers and went to a park with a 16-gauge sawed-off shotgun. They later decided to go out and kill a black man, Hendry testified.

The lawsuit claims that the skinheads' parents are liable for their children's action.

Further, the suit claims that the [illegible] drink beers and associate with "a racist ganggroup or other related white supremacy group."

Hendry's father, Charles Hendry, refused comment Friday. The other parents could not immediately be reached.

WICHITA FALLS — Teresa McLaughlin, a senior at Midwestern State University, will have a senior recital May 3, at 8 p.m. in Akin Auditorium at Midwestern University.

She plays percussion and Alan Black is her instructor. She is working toward her bachelor of music degree.

WTC faculty awards two scholarships

The Western Texas College Faculty Association recently announced its two scholarship winners, each receiving a $200 award for the 1993-94 school year.

Debra Kristine Burke and Toni Evans will receive $100 for both the fall and spring term.

Burke is an Ira resident and a PTK executive board member and was elected this past week as student body president for next year. She is a staff photographer for the campus newspaper and the daughter of Lee Burke.

Evans is a Snyder resident and a freshman telecommunications major. She is a staff writer for the campus newspaper and a member of Kappa Chi. Her parents are Billy K. and Wenona Evans of Snyder.

Each applicant had to submit a 300-500 page essay on the theme, "What you as an individual can do to have a lasting effect on the West Texas environment."

They were chosen by a committee of WTC Faculty Association members comprised of Bill McGlothing, David Kattes, Rockford Burris, Jim Durham and Ty Brunson.

Besides having to compose an essay, the winners of the scholarships had to meet other requirements as well. These included achieving sophomore status by the fall of 1994 and remaining a full-time student at WTC while under scholarship.

Funds for the scholarship are generated by an annual golf tournament and the sale of aluminum cans on campus. Both scholarship winners will be recognized at the annual spring Awards Day scheduled Tuesday on campus.

McDuff indicted

AUSTIN (AP) — Convicted killer Kenneth Allen McDuff was indicted Friday by a Travis County grand jury on charges of capital murder, aggravated kidnapping and aggravated sexual assault in the December 1991 disappearance of an Austin woman.

McDuff, 46, was sentenced to death in February for the 1992 robbery-slaying of Waco convenience store clerk Melissa Northrup.

Friday's indictment charges McDuff with killing Colleen Reed. Ms. Reed disappeared Dec. 29, 1991, from an Austin car wash. Her body has not been found, authorities said.

Hank Alva Worley, who is also charged in the disappearance, was indicted on charges of aggravated sexual assault.

Worley, 34, of Temple has told authorities he and McDuff abducted Ms. Reed from the car wash, took turns raping her as they drove north along Interstate 35 and then McDuff left with the woman in his trunk, promising to "use her up."

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Valuable information can be gleaned today through stimulating discussions with smart friends. Spend time with people you think are bright, and ask a lot of questions.

Your Birthday

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Have fun and enjoy yourself today, but don't treat serious matters too lightheartedly, especially those pertaining to your career and household.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be careful with whom you discuss confidential matters today. If you let your guard down, you might tell too much to the wrong person and do yourself a disservice.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be expectant [illegible] your hopes on an unrealistic premise. Use your imagination to your advantage; don't cause it to be an instrument of disappointment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This can be a rewarding day for you, provided you don't take things for granted. Something you think is a shoo-in could prove far more difficult than you had anticipated.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Even though you might not want to hurt another's feelings, sometimes it's more constructive to be as forthright as possible instead of painting an unreal, rosy picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Commercial dealings could be a trifle more complicated today than they appear on the surface. If you are prudent and cautious, you should do OK. If you're not, that's another story.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you start seeking easy outs today, they might prove to be more detrimental than facing a testy development. Don't duck challenges.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Usually you're an individual who always likes to plan a few steps ahead. Today, however, you might imperil your productivity because you lack a blueprint.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your reasoning in a joint venture might be a shade sounder than your counterpart today. Listen to his or her views, but don't discount your own judgment.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) For reasons beyond their control, people you depend upon today could let you down. It might be a bit tough, but you can handle things unaided.

Agency hadn't received new complaints

WACO, Texas (AP) — A state probe into child abuse allegations lodged against Branch Davidian a year ago were the last made to Texas authorities, officials say.

The first allegation that some of the [illegible] living with parents at David Koresh's sprawling home were being abused came to the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services on Feb. 26, 1992.

Both David and Rachel Koresh were summoned to the state's Child Protective Services offices in Waco for an interview about alleged abuse, the Texas agency said on Friday.

Stewart Davis, a PRS spokesman, said the anonymous tip was unsigned and delivered — not mailed — to child welfare workers in Waco.

"An anonymous statement was given to the office claiming child abuse," Davis said Thursday. "It claimed — it got real fuzzy — in general you could say it was physical and sexual abuse. It just said he (Koresh) spanked children and he took young girls as wives."

President Clinton said that he believed that Koresh's abuse was uncontested.

"Well, first of all, I don't know what — we know that David Koresh had sex with children. I think that is undisputed, is it not. Is it not? Does anybody dispute that?," said President Clinton.

"Where I come from, that qualifies as child abuse. And we know that he had people teaching these kids how to kill themselves. I think that qualifies as abuse."

In February and March 1992, McLennan County Sheriff's deputies accompanied child welfare workers on two visits to the Mount Carmel compound.

During those visits, child abuse investigators interviewed both children and adults.

Despite their efforts, none of the complaints could be confirmed, Davis said. The children denied being abused [illegible] in the compound. The children also denied knowing about other children being abused.

The adults also denied both participation in, or knowledge of any abuse to children. Investigators also were unable to find any evidence of previous abuse.

The case was closed by Child Protective Services on April 30, 1992.

WTC's PTK chapter brings awards home

Western Texas College's Phi Theta Kappa chapter and one of its students were singled out for the highest awards given at the national level April 15-17 in Dallas at PTK's 75th Anniversary International Convention.

Winning the 1993 Bierkoe Distinguished Member Award was regional vice-president Anita Brown of Snyder.

One of the approximate 1 million PTK chapter members nationwide only 25 Bierkoe Awards are given to students throughout the organization.

The campus chapter also received a 1993 Leadership Hallmark Award, an honor given to only five chapters nationwide.

Contributing entries to the Hallmark Award contest were Fred Sawtelle with a poem and a short story; Brown with a poem, art piece and essay; Ginger Alexander with a drawing; Naomi Gutierrez with a pin; Van Scott with a collage; Debra Burke with a photograph; and Naomi Gutierrez and Norma Gutierrez with yearbook work.

The region which WTC's Psi Zeta chapter belongs to was also honored with a 1993 Distinguished Region Award, one of only three given out of 27 PTK regions in the U.S.

Students attending were Naomi Gutierrez, Norma Gutierrez, Debra Burke, Bryan Mauldin, Greg Combs, Jake Carriker, Sharon Bigham, Wes Hardin, Eddie Onofre, Jeff Corkran, Anita Brown and Van Scott.

PTK sponsors are Duane Hood and Mary Hood.

The event attracted approximately 3,000 members from across the nation as well as from Canada and Germany.

FBI's lead negotiator relives standoff, fiery end

WACO, Texas (AP) — Byron Sage couldn't watch. After 51 days of pleading with the Branch Davidians to leave their compound, they now were being forced out by fire and he was hoping to use his voice as their guide.

But Sage, the FBI's lead negotiator, couldn't face it. To do his job, he had to stay calm. Looking out the window or at the television screen wouldn't work.

Facing a corner of his tiny office, he clutched a microphone and began pleading.

"Those of you remaining inside the compound, attempt to exit by any means possible," he said 25 minutes into the blaze. "Walk toward the voices. Exit in any fashion that you can. ...

"Get in a position of safety and the agents will attend to you. Exit the compound as readily as you can."

Sage looked back in time to see the second story collapse and the watchtower tip over.

He turned off his machines and walked outside to view the horrible destruction. He believes cult leader David Koresh murdered 86 of his followers, including 17 young children.

The heat burning his face, Sage felt it all: anguish, anger, frustration, pain and, especially, disbelief.

"I knew those people were dying," Sage said. "You just wish there was something you could do. You felt so helpless."

Four days after the deaths, Sage's hands still tremble and his eyes redden when talking about the scene.

"I can remember saying a prayer," he said Friday, reliving the frustrations he felt during more than seven weeks of round-the-clock discussions.

"I guess it represented everything that I have always set my career to oppose — the senseless loss of lives, the needless destruction of innocents."

Sage, a 24-year bureau veteran and the agency's Austin-based supervisory senior resident agent, was the first FBI negotiator on the scene Feb. 28 and was the last person to speak with the cult.

Days after the stalemate's tragic ending, he's still trying to sort out the pieces of one of the toughest cases in FBI history.

"We were faced with a very unique challenge," said Sage, a member of the FBI's Critical Incident Negotiation Team.

"How do we talk him out of a situation where he has everything that he possibly needs inside that structure and everything that he doesn't want is waiting for him outside?"

Most of their tactics failed, all because Koresh, whose negotiators called by his given name Vernon when they wanted to tweak him — never really planned to give up, Sage said.

"We're not dealing with a messiah here, we're dealing with a con man," Sage said. "This guy is an absolute master of deceit and delay."

Their first lesson in his wickedness came March 2, when Koresh broke a promise to surrender following a 58-minute radio broadcast of his preachings. Koresh claimed a "message from God" stopped him.

After that disappointment, negotiations [illegible] when Oliver Gyarfas and Kathryn Schroeder, both considered part of Koresh's inner-circle, left the compound.

The FBI promised to let both report back to the cult on what life was like outside. When they sent word that they were being treated well, it infuriated Koresh, Sage said.

"They're getting it from their own people that they're being treated properly," he said. "This [illegible] all of a sudden, he makes comments like, 'Well, they've obviously gone over to the other side.'"

Three days later, Sage and McLennan County Sheriff Jack Harwell had a face-to-face meeting with cultists Schneider and Wayne Martin, a Harvard-educated lawyer.

WTC plans annual Awards Day here

Western Texas College's top academic students will be recognized Tuesday at the annual Awards Day ceremony sponsored by the Faculty Association.

The program will begin in the Fine Arts Theater beginning at 10:30 a.m., with a reception following in the Scurry County Museum lobby.

Highlight of the event is the traditional naming of the Outstanding Male and Female Student, indicating the top academic students at WTC for the year.

To be considered for either the Outstanding Male or Female Student Award, the student must have:

—Attained sophomore class standing and completed three long semesters as a full-time student.

—Maintained a 3.75 GPA.

—Completed their freshman year at Western Texas College.

—Been involved in campus and/or community activities or organizations.

Students are nominated by instructors and then submitted to an Awards Day committee. The committee consists of chairman Mary Hood, Joann Snider, Mickey Baird, Jerry Corkran, Jim Judah and Tammy Wesson. From the committee, the eligible nominees are voted on by the full WTC Faculty Association.

Along with the Outstanding Student Award, departmental awards will be presented to outstanding students in each of WTC's seven disivions for accomplishments during the 1992-93 school year.

Also honored will be WTC students included in the book, "Who's Who In American Junior Colleges."

Financial Focus

If you are among the thousands of workers covered by an employer-sponsored pension plan who lose their jobs, change employers or retire after 1992, you need to know about a new tax rule that could eat up a large part of your retirement benefits.

When Congress extended jobless benefits last year, it paid for the extension in part with a 20 percent federal income tax withholding requirement on lump-sum distributions from qualified retirement plans. You can avoid the withholding, though, if you know the rules.

Prior to 1993, when employees left employment, they typically took their money from their company pension plan and either paid the taxes due or rolled the distribution over within 60 days into an Individual Retirement Account (IRA), where it continued to grow tax-deferred. Now, a miscalculation could wind up costing you a fifth of your retirement nest egg.

If you leave your employer, there are three ways to avoid the mandatory 20 percent withholding of your pension distribution: (1) have your employer complete a "direct rollover" into an IRA of your choice, (2) have your employer do a "direct rollover" into your new employer's plan or (3) arrange to leave the money in your present plan. The key is that your employer handles the direct rollover for you; therefore, you don't take direct distribution of the money.

Here are your options and their consequences:

1) Leave your pension with your former employer. If your employer allows this, the money will continue to grow tax-deferred. Remember, make certain your employer will allow you to leave your money in the plan.

2) Cash distribution. If the distribution is made directly payable to you, it will be reduced by the new mandatory 20 percent withholding. Additionally, the total amount will be taxable, and if you're under age 55, there may be an additional 10 percent penalty for early withdrawal.

3) Receive payment and re-deposit it into an IRA or new employer's plan. Again, your distribution will be reduced by the 20 percent withholding. This can be recovered if you deposit an amount equal to the entire distribution into an IRA or other qualified plan within 60 days. For example, a $100,000 distribution would leave you with $80,000 after the mandatory $20,000 withholding. To recoup that $20,000, you must roll over the entire $100,000 distribution. This means that you must come up with $20,000 in cash to make up for the amount withheld.

If you can't make up the difference, that $20,000 is treated as a taxable distribution. Plus, there may be a 10 percent penalty if you are under 55 years of age.

4) Begin receiving periodic payments from your employer's plan. Some employer plans allow you to select a monthly lifetime benefit or a benefit payable for a certain number of years. This is taxed as ordinary income as it is received.

5) Have your employer roll the distribution directly into an IRA or another qualified plan for you. Your money will continue to grow tax-deferred with no immediate withholding penalties. This option is similar to the old rollover, except your employer must handle the transaction on your behalf or must give you a check made payable to your IRA or qualified retirement plan trustee or custodian (e.g., "XYZ Trustee for the IRA of John Doe").

These new pension payout regulations can be confusing as well as costly. If you leave your employer for any reason and have retirement funds coming to you, consult your tax professional. An informed decision about what to do with your distribution will help ensure that you enjoy the retirement lifestyle you've worked so hard to achieve.

NASA scrubs shuttle launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA canceled Saturday's launch of the space shuttle Columbia because of a problem with its navigation system, the postponed in the final hours before liftoff.

The launch was rescheduled for Monday at 10:50 a.m. EDT.

NASA spokesman George Diller said the problem concerned equipment critical to maneuvering while in orbit and during re-entry.

This was NASA's second attempt to launch Columbia with seven astronauts on a laboratory research mission chartered by Germany. The attempt last month ended abruptly three seconds before liftoff when the main engines shut down.

This time, the astronauts had not yet boarded Columbia and NASA had not yet begun to fuel the shuttle.

Saturday's liftoff would have followed the last shuttle flight by just seven days. That would have been the shortest interval between missions in 32 years of U.S. human space flight.

If Columbia lifts off Monday, NASA still would set a record for the shortest gap between flights — nine days. The present record of 10 days was set in 1985.

Discovery returned last Saturday from the year's second shuttle flight.

surement device, which acts like a gyroscope, was operating intermittently because of a problem with the power supply, Diller said. The shuttle is equipped with three of the devices, including two backups.

"If we launched ... we could not assure a normal nine-day mission, and we want that," Diller said. "So we decided to replace the unit completely. We will put a brand new one in and fly in 48 hours."

Meteorologists had issued a [illegible] percent chance of good weather for the 10:52 a.m. liftoff.

Germany has been waiting for years for this mission, which features mostly German experiments and two German astronauts. The flight originally was targeted for 1988.

Richards signs immunization shots bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards signed into law Friday a bill that aims to ensure all Texas children are immunized against disease during a ceremony before those who will be most affected by the legislation.

Surrounded by children at the Creative World Capitol Complex Child Care Center, Richards said the measure is an example of the state's growing interest in improving health care programs.

"The effort here is where the effort should have been and will be in the future — on the prevention side of medicine," she said. "What we're trying to do is treat kids while they're well, to try to keep them from getting sick."

The bill requires hospitals and physicians to immunize a child under age 18 who is not current on vaccinations for such diseases as measles and polio. It is estimated to cost $56 million over the next two years.

The bill exempts children from immunizations if they have a religious conflict.

Sen. Judith Zaffirini, a sponsor of the measure, noted that children will now be guaranteed immunizations for diseases that, if not prevented, can cause death.

"It is so important to recognize that this bill will save lives. With immunizations, we are talking about protecting our little ones, little ones like we see here today," said Ms. Zaffirini, D-Laredo.

Funding for the bill is on hold until a legislative conference committee hammers out differences in the House and Senate versions of the state budget.

However, Richards said she is confident the measure will be properly funded, and that once the program is in place, it will save the state money.

Snyder golfers set to battle old rivals at regional tourney

Both Snyder golf teams are headed to regionals and both face old rivals when play begins Monday at Riverside Country Club in San Angelo.

Andrews, perennial District 3-4A champions, will be the team to beat in the girls' division of play.

coach Matt Glenn. "I'm not going to say that they're a shoe-in, but everybody else could be playing for second place.

"There are some other good teams that are going to be there, too," he said. "Hereford's bringing a good team and Borger is always good.

"What we have to do," Glenn said, "is to play our game. We play a shorter, more of a finesse-type game, where some of the other teams have big hitters.

"If we play within ourselves and do what we've been doing all season, we'll be all right."

The Lady Tigers are the only champion District 2-4A has had since UIL realignment in 1990.

Snyder's top threat is sophomore loop medalist Brooke Lowrance. Lowrance shot a 412 in five district stops in 1993, 65 shots better than the 2-4A individual runner-up, Becca Emmert of Plainview.

Four of the five members of the SHS squad were named to the all-district team, including Lowrance on the first team, Kelli Lacik and Kayla Drain on the second team, and honorable mention Paige Bell.

Coach Bob O'Day's boys' team will also have to beware of a dangerous Andrews squad, as well as District 3 champion Monahans, led by medalist Jatournament.

The Tigers, coming off their first district title since 1976, are led by loop medalist Chad Jacobi.

Jacobi fired an even-par 72 at Lubbock at the final stop in the Tigers' district season to wind up with a five-round 380, 13 shots ahead of last year's individual winner, Chad Huddle of Lamesa.

The Tigers set a school record at Lubbock, combining for a 303 on 18 holes, dethroning defending champion Lamesa and pushing Plainview to second place.

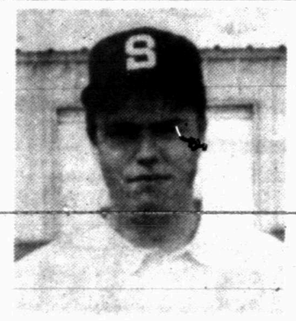

All five members of the boys' crew earned all-district recognition. Jacobi and freshman Carl Strelecki were first-team picks, while senior Cody Wunderlich, junior Jeff Armstrong and freshman Page Patterson were named to the second team.

Teams will tee-off at 9 a.m. Monday and will play 18 holes, then will follow on the same schedule on Tuesday.

WTC golfers play at Region V event at Sugar Tree CC

The Western Texas College golf team knows what it has to do to earn a second consecutive spot in the National Junior College Athletic Association national golf tourney.

The Westerners have to place no lower than third in the Region V tourney today through Tuesday in Weatherford to guarantee themselves a bid.

"That's it," said WTC golf coach Milton Ham. "That's what we have to do."

The top two teams in the region will automatically qualify for nationals and one at-large bid will be issued a Region V team.

"Sometimes there are two at-large bids," Ham explained, "but you can't count on that. We have to go out there and play well.

"We've done pretty well our last couple of tournaments. We seem to be peaking at just the right time."

The No. 20 Westerners finished in a fourth-place tie at last week's Texas State Juco Championship at Midland. Coach Ham's squad fired a 922 to trail defending national champion and regional favorite Midland College's 870, Odessa College, which wound up 39 shots behind at 909, and New Mexico JC, which fired a 921.

The WTC team will consist of sophomore Mike Torres, who had a team-best 226 on 54 holes last week, sophomore Daryl Weldon, Corey Adams, also a sophomore, and freshmen Jimmy Flores and Chris Rogers.

A Midland team led by last week's medalist Steve Dundas and a tough Sugar Tree Country Club course will severely test the Westerners.

Dundas, from Scotland, recently played in The Masters as the British amateur champion. His 74-67-76--217 was a 2-under effort at Midland.

Ham describes the Weatherford layout as one that "will try everybody's soul".

"You just have to see it to believe it," he added. "It's a tough, tough course."

Teams will shoot a practice round Sunday, then follow with 36 holes Monday and conclude Tuesday with one 18-hole round.

WTC boosters schedule meeting

Western Texas College athletic boosters will meet Monday at 6 p.m. at the American Restaurant.

Anyone interested in sports at WTC is invited to attend.

Bowhunters plan Sunday shoot

Snyder Bowhunters Association will host its fourth monthly outdoor shoot of the 1993 season Sunday at 2 p.m. at the club's range near Ira.

Archers will shoot 20 3-D animal targets at unmarked distances.

Entry fees are $3 for individual members, $5 for family members, $6 for individual non-members and $9 for non-member families.

The club also hosts a weekly indoor shoot on Thursdays at 7 p.m. at its indoor range on Old Lubbock Highway.

Pokes prepare for NFL draft

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Since the JJ boys took over at Valley Ranch, draft day with the Dallas Cowboys has been a circus.

One year coach Jimmy Johnson traded up to draft running back Emmitt Smith. Last year the Cowboys traded down to get cornerback Kevin Smith, who was signed, sealed and delivered by owner Jerry Jones that very day. The Cowboys also got safety Darren Woodson, a projected star of the future.

This year the freewheeling and dealing Cowboys would appear shackled since they are the Super Bowl champions and will be picking 29th, 84th, and 96th.

Ordinarily, Dallas would have the 28th pick as the last NFL team to make a selection, but compensatory picks awarded Philadelphia and Phoenix dropped the Cowboys a notch.

But don't count out Johnson's imagination or his ability to manipulate other teams into his bidding. In his four NFL draft days, Johnson has made 16 deals, four of them last year.

"We'll always be active traders," Johnson said.

Johnson's first round draft picks have been solid. They include Smith, quarterback Troy Aikman, defensive lineman Russell Maryland, wide receiver Alvin Harper, cornerback Kevin Smith and linebacker Robert Jones.

The Cowboys are without a second-round pick this year. It went to San Francisco for Charles Haley, who helped improve the Dallas pass rush.

Johnson may not gamble. "I look at our pick as the first one in the second round and there are a lot of good players in the NFL who came out of the second round."

The Cowboys need to find a tight end, a quality offensive lineman, outside linebacker, a cornerback, and perhaps a quarterback. Also, punter Mike Saxon had a poor postseason and the Cowboys are looking for competition, although it will likely come from the free agent ranks.

Dallas will also be looking at wide receivers with the loss of Kelvin Martin to free agency, although second year player Jimmy Smith is expected to be given a chance to jump into the role.

A tight end would seem to be a necessity since Jay Novacek will be 31 this year and Alfredo Roberts will be coming off major knee surgery. Derek Tennell, the emergency playoff signee, and Fallon Wacasey, a 1992 sixth-round draft pick who spent the season on the injured list, will also be on the roster.

The Cowboys like Penn State tight end Troy Drayton, who visited Valley Ranch.

Johnson said it's a good year for offensive linemen and the Cowboys feel they could use another good one.

Right guard John Gesek will be 30 and left guard Nate Newton, 31, has battled knee problems. Left tackle Mark Tuinei is 33.

Because the draft is only eight rounds, there will be a premium on hustling free agents after everything is over.

That's where Larry Lacewell, director of college scouting, will come into play.

"It will be like recruiting high school players to come to a university," Lacewell said. "Jimmy and I have some experience in that department."

HHS places two at Jayton

JAYTON — Hermleigh's Lady Cardinals had two tracksters place at the district track meet in Jayton recently.

Lori Anderson captured first in the shot put with a 24-4 effort, and Connie Payne finished fifth with a 20.30 time in the 110 meter hurdles.

Hermleigh's girls, who accumulated a second-place 102 points, also claimed honors in several events in the junior high division of the meet, including firsts by Brandy Bates in the 200 meter dash and the 100 meter hurdles, top finishes by Michelle Roemisch in the 100 meter dash, and Libbey Herl's first in the discus.

Also, Kelly Gonzales came in second in the 100, Esther Martinez took second in the 800 meter run and Bates wound up second in both the triple jump and the long jump.

Gonzales also snagged third in the high jump, the HJHS sprint relay team of Brandi Smith, Gonzales, Martinez and Roemisch took fifth, as did the 1600 meter relay team of Herl, Martinez, Amanda Berry and Smith.

Hermleigh's junior high boys grabbed its share of honors here, as well, rolling for 66 total points.

Jason Hernandez finished first in both the 800 and 1600 meter runs, Ricky Luna took top honors in the 400 meters and came in fourth in the 200 meter dash, and Larry Lambaren wound up third in the 400 meter run and sixth in the high jump.

In addition, Michael Guzman took fourth in the mile and sixth in the 800 meters.

Hermleigh's sprint relay team of Lambaren, Guzman, Hernandez and Luna claimed fourth place here.

'Dogs thump C-C JV, 11-1

IRA — Wyatt Webster went five innings, giving up just three hits and striking out six, to lead the Ira Bulldogs to an 11-1 non-district baseball win over Colorado City's JV Friday.

The game was called after the sixth inning on the 10-point rule.

Jason Hartley came on for one inning of relief, allowing a hit and fanning two.

Toby Haynes and Mike Hughes led the 'Dogs' offensive attack. Haynes was 2-for-4 on the night, scoring three times and driving in a run, and Hughes was 1-for-2, a two-run triple, and three RBI.

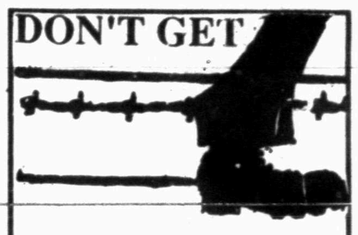

Webster finished with a hit in four at-bats and a pair of runs knocked in; Hartley had a hit in three tries and Ricky Stroud went 1-for-4 for the Bulldogs.

"I was real proud of the boys," said IHS coach Lynn Cauley. "They went out there and they made things happen. We put the ball in play 20 times out of 27 at-bats."

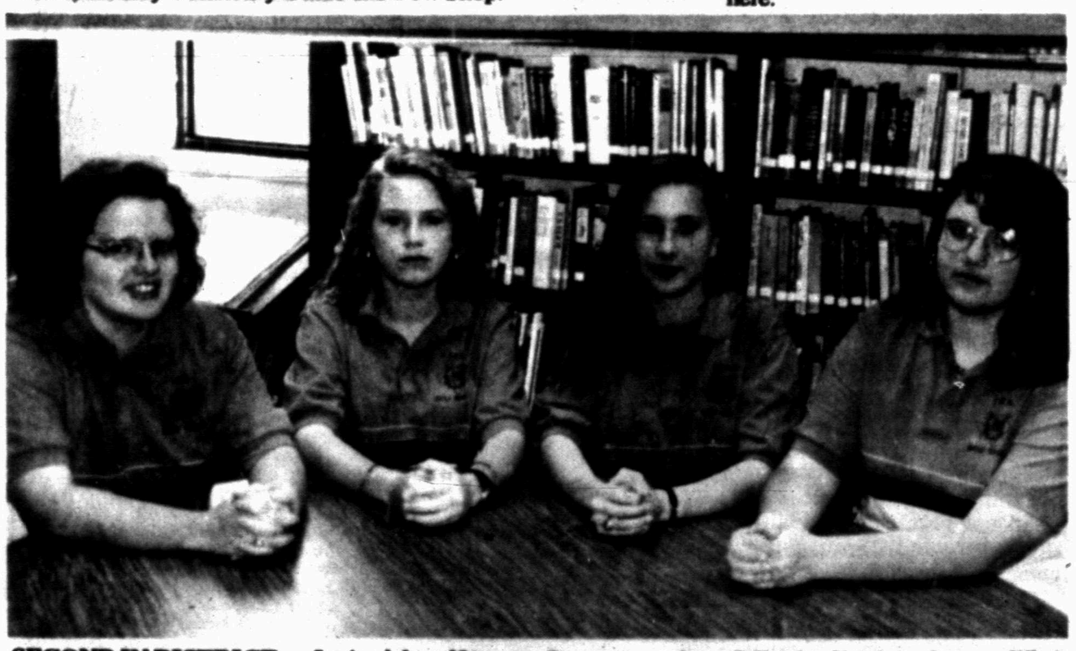

"And," he continued, "we only had one error. It was a pretty good game for us."

The win lifts Ira to 4-7 on the season. The Bulldogs resume their loop schedule Tuesday with a visit to Loraine for a 6 p.m. contest.

Region 1 tourney at ASU to feature Snyder qualifiers

Snyder will have one entrant in boys' singles and one in boys' doubles when the first matches begin Monday at the Region 1 Tennis Tournament at Angelo State University in San Angelo.

Senior Jason Warren placed second in District 2-4A in last week's loop tourney to earn his first regional berth.

Warren opened the 2-4A tournament in Lubbock with a 6-0, 6-0 whipping of Plainview's Matt Miller, then beat Jacob Guzman of Estacado, 6-0, 6-4 before handing No. 2 seed Robbie James of Levelland a three-set 2-6, 6-2, 6-3 upset loss.

Warren lost to top seed Zach Gibson of Plainview, one of the favorites at the regional event, 7-6 (7-5), 6-1 in Saturday's championship match.

Chris Gayle and Tracey Chavez will represent SHS in boys' doubles play at ASU.

Gayle and Chavez defeated Snyder teammates Jeronimo Ruiz and Jim Pat Griffin, 5-7, 7-5, 6-3, in a Saturday playback for the district runner-up berth.

Ruiz and Griffin had teamed up to stop second seeded Stacy Ward and Joshua Pitts of Plainview before falling to Levelland's Chad Craddock and Ray Pierce, the eventual loop champs.

The playback rule, which states that the third-place entrant in each event will have the chance to play the No. 2 finisher, if they didn't meet during the tournament, to decide the runner-up, gave Gayle and Chavez the shot they needed to get to regionals.

Other favorites at the regional tourney include Levelland's Paige Parker, who cruised through the 2-4A tournament without losing a set, and the Estacado duo of Becky Hernandez and Susie Gomez, who captured the district girls' doubles crown.

A draw will be held Sunday night by the competing coaches to determine opening round matchups.

Matches are set to begin at 8 a.m. Monday. The tournament will conclude with finals in all four divisions on Tuesday.

Mavericks avoid NBA record

DALLAS (AP) — Rookie Jim Jackson scored a career-high 32 points Friday night and the Dallas Mavericks avoided association with the 1972-73 Philadelphia 76ers as the worst team in NBA history with a 103-100 victory over Minnesota.

The Mavs earned their 10th victory of the season to get out of a tie with the 76ers with just one game left. Philadelphia was 9-73 in 1972-73; Dallas is now 10-71.

But there's nothing the Mavericks can do about the worst season in club history. The previous low win total was 15 in the expansion year of 1980.

Jackson, the No. 1 pick from Ohio State who didn't join the team until March, scored 20 points in the second half as the announced sellout crowd of 17,502 celebrated the team's escape from NBA infamy.

Micheal Williams was 11 for 11 from the free-throw line to pass Larry Bird for third place in NBA history with 74 free throws in a row. The record is 78 straight by Calvin Murphy of the Houston Rockets.

Williams scored 31 points to pace the Wolves, who pulled to a 102-100 deficit with 9.2 seconds left. Jackson made a free throw for Dallas and Chris Smith missed a shot at the buzzer for Minnesota, the NBA's second-worst team at 18-63.

The Wolves went 9-18 in the third quarter without a field goal as Jackson scored 10 points for Dallas, which won only its seventh home game of the season.

The Mavs built a 52-39 lead with 4:29 to play in the first half, but were outscored 11-2 as the Timberwolves trimmed the halftime deficit to 54-50.

Doug West, the Timberwolves' leading scorer with a 19.3 point average, was suspended for the game without pay after pushing an official in Thursday night's 112-110 overtime loss to Houston.

WTC riders hold top slots

ABILENE — Western Texas College maintained control over the top spots in three events after Friday's round of competition at the Hardin-Simmons University NIRA Rodeo here.

Troy Thomson, who scored a 74 on opening night Thursday, remained in first place, Thad Little's 79 from Thursday was still the top score in saddle bronc riding after Friday's go-round, and Leslie Greer was in a first-place tie in goat tying with her Friday 9.2.

The rodeo was to have continued with a 2 p.m. Saturday matinee, then concluded with the finals at 8 o'clock Saturday night.

The finals featured the top 10 qualifiers in each event.

Travis Whiteside, who racked up a 72-point bareback ride Thursday, slipped from second to third place following Friday's performance, Fletcher Tigner earned a 73 Friday night to take fourth in saddle bronc riding, Trey Griffin's Thursday 66 fell to sixth in the same event, and Dwayne Evans, who led the bull riding after one performance, was bumped to second place Friday.

In women's competition, Greer's 17.97, posted Thursday, is second in the barrel race, followed by WTC teammate Brandye Bitters' 18.12, and Jonell Cardwell snagged fourth in breakaway roping with her 4.6 clocking.

Thompson sets record at qualifiers gathering

ODESSA — Snyder senior Trina Thompson set a meet record in the 100 meter dash Friday at the Odessa Regional Qualifiers Meet at Ratliff Stadium.

Thompson, one of four SHS thinclads at the meet, flashed a 12.15 in the event, beating the old mark, a 12.24 by Greenville's Leigh Dickson.

Todd Iglehart, the only member of the SHS boys' track team to advance to regionals, finished second in the shot put Friday with a 50-0 heave.

Iglehart trailed only Hereford's Steven Blea, also to be an opponent at the regional meet, who tossed a 58-31/4.

Snyder's other entrants here were shot putter Kristi McClure and discus thrower Vicky Green, who each finished in fourth position.

McClure's 36-21/2 was almost 11 feet off a meet record 47-11/4 thrown by Reagan County's Alicia Thompson.

Green tossed a 104-8 in the discus. The event winner was Colorado City's Christi Halme, one of Class 3-A's state favorites, who went 124-5.

Friday's meet was a warm-up for the Region 1 gathering to be held at Angelo State University in San Angelo April 30 and May 1.

Hermleigh set to face Weatherford

Hermleigh's Lady Cardinals will open the softball post-season Thursday when they battle Weatherford in a bi-district tilt at 5 p.m. at Nelson Park's Field No. 3.

The Lady Cards enter the playoffs as the District 1 runner-up with a 5-2 record. The Lady Kangaroos, District 2 champs, sport a 16-0 mark on the season.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1992 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 30-year-old female sailor in the U.S. Navy, stationed in Europe. I recently became acquainted with a 19-year-old American girl who told me there was this really cute guy she had the "hots" for. This "cute guy" is a 21-year-old sailor who, in my opinion, is going on 16 himself.

I had several heart-to-heart talks with her, explaining that sex was something precious that should be saved for marriage.

Well, needless to say, she didn't take my advice, and a month later she joyfully told me that she had been to bed with him. I asked her if this guy was protecting her. She answered, "Oh, I'm taking birth control pills!" I explained that that was not the question — was the fellow responsible enough to protect her from sexually transmitted diseases by using a condom? She then told me he had said condoms were only for one-night stands!

Abby, I just about passed out! We in the military were given a series of lectures about the dangers of unprotected sex. I tried my best to educate this girl. Two months later she said she thought she might be pregnant.

Of course, she was. I urged her to consider adoption, but she wants to keep the baby. Her immaturity is scary — she thinks it will be really "neat" to have a baby; she's told all her friends at school and they think it's "neat," too. All I can do is pray for her and the unborn baby.

Because of a careless relationship on the part of an irresponsible young man and a teen-ager with the "hots" for a cute sailor, a child was conceived. This is neither "neat" nor wonderful. It's a tragedy that has robbed a young girl of her childhood. Sign me ...

BROKENHEARTED FRIEND

P.S. Abby, please do not use my name, rank or station. It would be apparent to persons here who know her, and I don't want to hurt her family any more than they already are. They are decent, churchgoing people.

DEAR BROKENHEARTED: It's unfortunate that you couldn't save your young friend. (Doesn't the baby's father have any responsibility in this matter?)

Sadly, your young friend's fate can be multiplied by a million in the United States.

DEAR ABBY: Re the sign a reader had posted on her front door stating "NO SOLICITING, NO WITNESSING, NO KIDDING!": May I tell you about the way my husband handled that situation?

Last week, a pleasant young woman was in our neighborhood, going from door to door collecting money to "save the whales" — save the Earth, or save whatever.

After telling her several times that he was not interested, she refused to take no for an answer. Finally, my husband said, "Why don't you give me your home phone number, and I'll get back to you if I change my mind?"

Her face dropped, and she became indignant, saying, "Why, that is impossible!" When my husband asked, "Why?" she replied, "Because I do not want to be bothered at my home!"

My husband said, "Well, you are bothering me at my home; what's the difference?"

The young woman turned and left. This may not keep solicitors from coming to your door, but it sure gives the homeowner a little satisfaction to have a ready response to solicitors.

(Postage is included.)

DEAR ABBY: It happened again. Another church wedding ruined by a screaming, undisciplined 2-year-old (uninvited) child. (The parents could well afford to have hired a baby sitter.)

The wedding was mine. We were married in the Methodist Church. We hired three musicians, and there were two professional photographers videotaping the wedding.

My sister brought "Monica," her 2-year-old spoiled brat, to the wedding. It's not the child's fault. She has never been disciplined. If she doesn't get her own way, she screams! Monica screamed through most of the ceremony. The minister kept glaring at her — and so did everyone else. Meanwhile, her parents did nothing to quiet her.

Now we will have to crop the part of the video showing Monica lying on top of the church altar, facing the camera with her dress up, and her panties showing.

After the ceremony, Monica's parents took her to the reception and let her run loose. Thank God, they took her home early.

Some guests asked me why I didn't stop the ceremony and ask Monica's parents to take her home so others could enjoy the wedding. Well, I didn't think it was my place to do that. How could this have been avoided?

WEDDING RUINED IN MINNESOTA

DEAR WEDDING RUINED: When Monica started to scream during the ceremony, the minister should have stopped the service and asked the parents to please remove her from the church sanctuary. Since he failed to do so, you should have done so.

Children act up because they are bored and want attention. To have allowed a 2-year-old to ruin a wedding was unspeakably insensitive on the part of the mother.

DEAR ABBY: This is a second marriage for both of us. I was a 47-year-old widow, and my new husband is a very handsome, twice-divorced, 66-year-old man who looks no older than 50.

We've been married for a year, but there is one problem. When we eat out (which is often), if the waitress is halfway decent-looking, he kids around with her in a flirty manner, then stares at her behind when she walks away. (He is not even subtle about it.) When I tell him to quit leering, he insists there's nothing wrong with "looking." He says "That's why women wear tight pants and skirts — especially if they have something to show off."

Abby, when I was younger I was a waitress, and I turned a few heads myself, but even though I had a beautiful figure (I still have), I never flaunted it with tight-fitting uniforms.

Today, men still look at me. I look at least 10 years younger than I am and I dress stylishly — but never outlandishly. I have seen attractive men when I'm out with my husband, but never would I show the slightest interest in any of them.

Am I too critical of my husband's obvious interest in other women? Or is his behavior out of line?

A LADYLIKE LADY

DEAR LADY: Your husband's behavior is out of line; furthermore, he shows an appalling lack of respect for you when he leers at other women in your presence.

* * *

Here's everything you need to know about wedding planning. To order, [illegible] business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Gayle to raise money

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Crystal Gayle will help raise money to restore a local replica of the Parthenon in time for its 100th anniversary in 1996.

"There are a lot of people in Nashville who give their time and money, and they're going to give more," Gayle said.

The original Parthenon was built in Athens, Greece, as a temple to the god Athena. Nashville's smaller version was built to commemorate the city's centennial and its self-proclaimed nickname "The Athens of the South."

"GOOD GIFTS TO YOUR CHILDREN"
By Homer Anderson

A farmer with a nearly grown son asked a minister, "Can you explain why this boy has lost interest in the church?" "Well Tom" replied the minister, "I have seen you teach that boy how to plow, how to master his school lessons and even how to play ball. But never once did I see you guiding him in the word of God and the duties of a Christian. When you put so much emphasis on physical things and omit stressing the spiritual, you should not expect the boy to take a great interest in the church."

In the Sermon on the Mount, Jesus gave a great lesson for thoughtful parents on our heavenly Father's great love for His children, "Or what man is there among you, when his son shall ask him for a loaf, will give him a stone? Or if he shall ask for a fish, he will not give him a snake, will he? If you then, being evil, know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more shall your Father who is in heaven give what is good to those who ask Him!" (Matthew 7: 9-11, NASB).

Wise parents will plan extra time with their children during summer vacation. The best gift we can give our children is an exemplary life of devotion to God and to Christian principles.

Vets meet ex-admirals

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — David Gonzalez left Vietnamese battlegrounds 25 years ago disillusioned and hurt by what he called a political war.

Gonzalez's healing went one step further Friday when he shook hands with a former South Vietnamese admiral.

"I just made my peace with him," said Gonzalez, a 47-year-old retired soldier.

Gonzalez and others presented a medal to former South Vietnamese Rear Adm. Tran Van Chon, a prisoner for 12 years of the communist North Vietnamese. Retired U.S. Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt, who served as chief of naval operations in Vietnam from 1968 to 1970, also received a medal.

"We all went through this together," Gonzalez told Chon.

Chon and Zumwalt visited with veterans as part of a three-day conference marking 20 years since the signing of the Paris Peace Accords. "Vietnam: Paris Plus 20" is sponsored by the Center for the Study of the Vietnam Conflict at Texas Tech University, one of the nation's largest repositories for materials on the conflict.

Zumwalt heads an Agent Orange Council that tries to win compensation for veterans who are suffering health problems because of the chemical. The complaints he hears most often, he said, center on Agent Orange disabilities.

"People should write their congressmen and senators about the fact that it took half a century to recognize we had wronged the Japanese-Americans," Zumwalt said. "It's time we recognize the wrongs to Vietnam veterans."

The comments Chon said he frequently hears from veterans are simpler: "They love Vietnam. They still love Vietnam."

Earlier, Zumwalt told historians at the conference that the Clinton administration should be in no rush to ease sanctions against Vietnam.

Zumwalt based his wait-and-see stance on a new document indicating Hanoi lied about the number of American prisoners captured. The so-called Quang report, dated September 1972, was unearthed in Communist Party archives in Moscow.

"We have a terrible responsibility to deal with this document," Zumwalt said. "I think it would be a great mistake for the president to make that decision until all POWs and MIAs are accounted for."

Two to marry

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Charlie Dell, who portrays wagon-pushing Nub Oliver on television's "Evening Shade," will be tying the knot in one of Arkansas' two towns by that name.

Dell and actress Jennifer Williams are to be wed July 4 at the Evening Shade United Methodist Church in the Evening Shade in Sharp County.

The wedding is expected to draw some of Dell's co-stars on the series, which stars Burt Reynolds. Dell will be grand marshal of the town's annual holiday parade.

Ms. Williams has appeared in "As The World Turns," "Another World," and "Cheers."

The town invited Dell, of Corpus Christi, Texas, and Ms. Williams, of Houston, after learning of their wedding plans.

That Evening Shade, population 400, is about 120 miles north-northeast of Little Rock.

The clerk's office, located in the courthouse, is open from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. for those wishing to cast ballots for or against the three school funding amendments as well as their choice for U.S. Senator.

Seventy-five ballots, up from 33 the previous week, have been cast at City Hall for Snyder residents voting in the mayoral and city council elections. Voting is conducted from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Three men are seeking two at-large places on the Snyder City Council. They are Ron Shaw, Dayton Robertson and Brady Bynum.

Running unopposed are Paul Zeck for mayor and I.E. Martin for District 4 councilman.

Voters residing in District 4 have three ballots; those residing outside of District 4 will complete only two ballots.

There are three separate ballots in the Snyder public schools board of trustees race. Voting takes place from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. at the school administration building on 37th Street.

Capturing the least attention has been Place 1, where Joe G. Hernandez is challenging incumbent Glenn Clarady. Only five ballots have been cast since early voting began.

Sixty people have voted in the election for Place 4, where Mark McCormick is opposing incumbent Billy Bob McMullan. And in Place 5, 45 voters have cast ballots for either incumbent Ann Walton or challenger Janet Stribling.

Eight men are running for two at-large places on the Hermleigh school board. They are James Rinehart, Andres Rodriguez Jr., Milton Adams, Randy Bates, Joe Roemisch, Jimmy "Chip" Roemisch Jr., Brian Blair and Nelson Eckert. "Chip" Roemisch and Blair are the incumbents.

Some 20 people have taken advantage there of the early voting period. Early voting is held in the Hermleigh business office from 8 a.m. until 3:30 p.m.

Ira school board has one contested race but no early voters so far. Lance Autry and Eddie Nettles are contesting for Place 3. Incumbents Darryl Calley, for Place 1, and Kirby Sterling, for Place 2, are unopposed.

Early voting in the Ira ISD races is held at the Ira administration office from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Authorities regain control of state detention center

GROESBECK, Texas (AP) — Authorities regained control of a minimum security prison early Saturday after up to 200 of 475 inmates seized two of three wings in the facility for nearly 11 hours.

Only minor injuries related to several blasts of tear gas were reported to inmates at Limestone County Minimum Security Detention Center, said Sheriff Dennis Walker. Assistant Warden Karen Medik said one inmate was hospitalized for respiratory problems. No guards were injured.

The inmates, who began rioting about 5 p.m. Friday, began giving up in groups of five about 3:40 a.m. Saturday, said Walker, who added that no shots were fired before the surrender.

"Everything's under control," Walker said.

All of the inmates were evacuated from the building by 6:30 a.m., Ms. Medik said.

Clinton to regroup following first major legislative defeat

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — President Clinton, trying to regain momentum after a trying week, Saturday urged the Washington establishment to "get on the bus" and back his economic program.

In his weekly radio address, taped a day earlier in Washington, Clinton told Americans that in the opening days of his presidency, "we've begun to change the direction of America."

"Our economic program has been adopted in its broad outlines by Congress," he said. "That's brought an end to trickle-down economics."

Paradise Valley quiet in wake of fire

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — When the compound of the Branch Davidians burned to the ground in Texas, some townspeople in tiny Gardiner, Mont., just north of Yellowstone National Park, looked nervously out their windows and wondered.

Nearby is the sprawling ranch of the Church Universal and Triumphant, a New Age religious sect that some call a cult, complete with underground fallout shelters and disturbing rumors of hidden arsenals.

"Anybody who thinks that what happened in Waco could not happen here in Park County is kidding themselves," said Richard Parks, owner of a Gardiner sporting goods store. "It's inherent in the nature of an organization to see threats everywhere.

"It's not really a question of why, but of when."

Others say comparing the two is ridiculous.

"What happened in Texas doesn't have anything to do with the group here," said Albert Otis, whose Emigrant General Store caters to dozens of local church members.

The church first arrived in Montana in 1981, from California, when it bought the 12,000-acre Royal Teton Ranch. Relations among the church, its neighbors and the government have often been uneasy.

In March 1990, a state lawmaker asked then-Gov. Stan Stephens to call out the National Guard in response to a church drill that sent thousands trooping into underground shelters. The church said members were preparing for a possible nuclear war or accident.

The furor over the drill, and the April 1990 spill of diesel fuel from a cracked tank into a tributary of the Yellowstone River, died down in time. The Paradise Valley is quiet these days. Neighbors say church members are going about their business as they always have: privately.

"I certainly haven't noticed anything different this week," said Julia Page, president of a watchdog group, the Gardiner-based Upper Yellowstone Defense Fund. "But you have to remember that we don't talk to the church people much because they are isolated. They are not part of this community."

Comparisons of the church and the Branch Davidians in the last month of the Texas standoff brought quick denials from church officials.

Church spiritual leader Elizabeth Clare Prophet scoffed at media reports comparing her to [illegible].

"You have to judge people by their actions," she told The Associated Press. "We do not have a history of violence. We have religious teachings that are firmly against violence."

Added church spokesman Murray Steinman: "There are some superficial similarities. But there are also profound differences, starting with the fact that we are not armed, isolated or expecting the end of the world."

But fresh in the minds of Parks and others is the 1989 conviction on federal weapons charges of two church members, including [illegible] who is married to Prophet.

Francis and another church member were charged in an attempt to buy $150,000 worth of munitions, including weapons described by the manufacturer as suitable for assaulting armored vehicles. Francis served a brief prison term.

Prophet described the incident as an overzealous and independent attempt by Francis to provide security for his family and his home.

Vehicle safety tips

As the weather gets warmer, people will be traveling more. Now is the time to get your vehicle in shape for those spring trips.

In addition to oil changes and tune-ups, have your mechanic check your vehicle's belts, hoses, tires and wiperblades. Make sure all your lights are working and that your windshield is clean.

Allow yourself plenty of time to reach your destination. And please, don't drive when you are tired or sleepy.

Assistant DA to speak

Dana Cooley, assistant district attorney, will be the guest speaker at Thursday night's meeting of the Law Enforcement Explorer Post.

Ms. Cooley will speak about the role of the district attorney in the criminal justic system.

Last week, Price Daniel Unit Warden Les Woods spoke to the group about the role of correctional facilities. Snyder Police Corp. Carl Plock said the Explorer group is currently involved in studying the various parts of the criminal justice system.

Scurry County Folks

By Shirley A. Gorman

Jan McCathern is such an accomplished high school and junior college speech instructor, speaker and debater, it's hard to believe she was ever shy. But according to her mother, Jan was a very shy girl in elementary school.

All that changed when Jan entered high school and discovered plays. Surprisingly, though, she never debated in high school.

Her interest in debate and speech did not surface until she was in college. Today, she feels that communication is one of the most important tools for leading a successful life.

As an assistant professor of speech at Western Texas College, Jan not only teaches regular students, but one night a week she also holds a class at the Price Daniel Unit.

To keep her skills sharp, she also joined Toastmasters, a local organization which encourages people to speak in public.

Jan, a former high school speech teacher, UIL coach and one-act play director, also stays active at the high school level by serving as a UIL play critic and a certified state UIL judge. She judges from two to three high school contests each year.

Added to that busy schedule, Jan also attends debate competitions with her youngest son, Kurtis. "I'm just like a father watching his son play ball," Jan explained. "I get a thrill every time my son competes. It's a parental joy for me when he wins."

Kurtis, a junior in high school, recently qualified for nationals.

An older son, Levi, also competed in UIL debate when he was a senior in high school.

Jan is also active in the West Texas Speech Communicators Association and was recently named president for this year.

Jan, who has an undergraduate degree from the University of North Texas and a master's degree from Texas Tech University, first came to WTC five years ago as a full-time instructor. Several years ago she had taught there part-time.

Though it was hard to give up her teaching position (speech, English and UIL coach) at Borden County High School, Jan said yes to the challange of building a separate speech program at the local junior college.

Previously, Jim Rambo, a former WTC instructor, had been teaching both speech and drama.

Jan teaches basic speech courses which are requirements in many degree plans. She also teaches an interpersonal communication class popular with full-time and part-time students. No speeches are required. Rather, students learn techniques such as "fighting fair," how to develop relationships and a positive self concept.

Jan said this particular course is quite popular, even with WTC's international students who also like to take interpretative reading which requires some reading aloud. An added bonus is that both cultures "get to know each other better," she explained.

This class gets to present programs to the public.

In addition, Jan formed a speech squad which numbers five students this school year. All five, including three freshmen and two sophomores, are attending WTC on partial speech scholarships.

Each year, these students participate in two college-level speech tournaments. They also assist with the Ben Brock Speech Tournament, which the college has sponsored annually since Jan has been at WTC.

Recently, this group performed live readings at the annual chamber of commerce banquet. The event featured a live radio type show, with performers culled from the college and community.

They also prepare a program for Scurry County Museum's annual Christmas Happening and stage public speaking performances. In past years, they did one for "Dark Room," a suspense novel by local writer Deanie Francis Mills. A Dr. Zeuss program they put on is very popular with elementary students, Jan said.

Another program called "The Wall" was tied to the fall of the Berlin Wall and included poetry by Robert Frost.

"We usually do an 'Aquifer' reading also, but we ran out of time this year," Jan said.

However, an "Aquifer" production is planned for the fall semester. The "Aquifer" is the literary magazine which WTC publishes each school year.

Jan said she had two main reasons for starting the Brock Tournament at WTC. She knew Dr. Brock and worked with him on speech tournaments. Another reason was to give area high school speech teachers a nearby contest.

"As a former high school speech teacher I know how important it is to have competitions close enough to participate in," she said. "This also gives me a chance to recruit potential students for WTC," she added.

In the years since the tournament was organized, Jan said she can now see how it also "benefits the community."

Jan appreciates her high school speech background because it enhances her current job and membership in the WTSCA.

Though she taught at high schools in other cities, she refers to her Borden County stay as "the last perfect place to teach." Oil revenues then meant good salaries for teachers and there was a tremendous amount of support from parents, she explained.

Though Jan took a salary cut when she came to WTC, she said she has never regretted her decision. It was a challenge "I could not turn down," she said. However, it took her a couple of school years before she stopped taking students' absences personally, she added.

"I kept thinking I must be doing something wrong or the students wouldn't cut classes. I finally realized that that is the way some college students are in all their classes," she said with a laugh. "Attendance isn't as important to them as performance is."

One of Jan's greatest joys is to see a student "perform, improve and develop confidence," she said. "When people can express themselves they feel good about themselves. Communication is so very important in life."

[illegible] in her speech classes learn how to observe others as they learn what makes a good communicator. She said they critiqued speakers during the presidential campaign and attended public hearings in 1992 concerning the current realignment of elementary schools in Snyder.

It is important for students to observe other speakers because "speech and communication is something you use all of your life," she said.

In her third year of instruction at Price Daniel, Jan also enjoys teaching the inmates. Their success means a great deal to her. However, she had to make some adjustments in the beginning.

One of the biggest, was getting used to the sound the doors made as they closed after her. Another was the realization that the inmates are just like her other students.

In the beginning, Jan skipped the lesson on dealing with stage fright, anxiety and jitters because she didn't think they needed it since they were able to talk in class.

She soon learned her error when several inmates confessed that they didn't know how to deal with all the pre-class anxiety they were experiencing. Jan went back and included the lesson.

She said her students at Price Daniel "want to learn" and are so eager that they "thoroughly prepare class assignments."

Other adjustments Jan had to make included getting used to teaching her first all-male class, learning how to talk to the inmates and discovering that she could maintain her authority in the classroom.

As far as the class itself goes, Jan uses the same texts and assignments that she does with her WTC students.

The inmates at Price Daniel who graduate "are a real joy to me," she said. "It makes me feel as if I have accomplished something."

Future projects she envisions at WTC include a speech forum where outside speakers will be brought in to speak at the college and other programs such as poetry readings and cowboy poetry, featuring local talent.

"I think our speech department should be a channel through which programs can be arranged each semester," Jan said. "I think the history, English and speech departments can work together on this. I think the candidate forums which have been held in the past are good ideas."

A native of Pampa, Jan attended Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene her freshman year. Financial need prompted her to apply for a debate scholarship, though she had not debated in high school.

"Since I knew how to debate I thought I could do it," Jan said. She was right. She later tranferred to the University of North Texas where she received a full debate scholarship. While there, she and Jackie Dean, a Snyder resident, were debate partners. Ironically, Jan, who had never heard of Snyder before, learned a great deal about her future home.

"Jackie always said the best debaters come from Snyder," Jan said. "I learned a lot about Snyder years before I ever moved here."

[illegible] degree through Texas Tech University. While there, she joined the West Texas Speech Communication Association whose members are the junior high, high school and junior college speech teachers throughout the Panhandle.

She later dropped out for a few years, renewing her membership five years ago when she came to WTC.

Among its many projects, the organization gives two scholarships to West Texas high school students every school year.

Before being elected president, Jan held a variety of other positions, including program personality where she presented programs and she was a member of the scholarship committee. She served as president-elect in 1992 before automically assuming the presidency this year.

As president, Jan holds workshops, arranges play festivals for high schools and serves as the training person for this area. She said her experience at both the high school and university level has helped her be more effective in her role as president. She also said she is very fortunate to have the backing of college administrators who encourage her participation.

"I remain active in WTSCA because it helps me be a better teacher," Jan said. "I would get stale if I did not stay in touch with my peers and keep current of the changes."

She is also the chairman of the community/junior college committee of the Texas Speech Communicators Association. A current project included lobbying for common course numbering to help transfer students.

Years ago, she had dropped out of WTSCA for a few years and "stayed home to be a momma." Jan is married to Glenn McCathern, minister of education at Colonial Hill Baptist Church. Prior to that, he was at First Baptist Church for three years. They moved to Snyder 18 years ago from Van Buren, Ark. where Glenn was with the First Baptist Church there.

The two were high school friends who later became college sweethearts, but they actually "fell in love" during a special summer when they were both employed at Glorietta, N.M. That city also has special significance for son Levi, who met his future wife there.

Jan said both her sons have taken to public speaking naturally because they grew up seeing their parents do it all the time. At one time, she said they thought everyone did it too.

When they were first married, Jan said she would click into her "debate mode" every time they discussed something. By that, she meant that she always gave Glenn three reasons to support her position. Now, she said, Kurtis sometimes does the same thing.

Jan also teaches Bible classes at Colonial Hill, something she enjoys. In addition, she likes to read, sew, snow ski, travel, attend dramas and musicals, support the local community theatre project and catch up on the current movies each summer.

Last summer, she and Glenn were part of a mission trip to Brazil. She enjoyed observing the other culture, she said, because [illegible] talkers."

For their 25th wedding anniversary, Jan said Glenn took her to see three Broadway plays.

Spring makeup is a natural

By FRANCINE PARNES
For AP Special Features

Spring's new face is well scrubbed with a slight blush on the cheeks, pale lips and brows re-[illegible] parted in the center.

"Everyone is looking for a fresh look, and here it is," says Bobbi Brown, a New York makeup artist.

But don't go to extremes. A pale face is one thing, a washed-out look is another. Pluck your brows bare like fashion model Kristen McMenamy and risk them not growing back.

Opt, instead, for a variation on the theme originally devised by fashion designers to complement the airy, body-skimming styles for spring and summer. "At the spring shows, the '60s looks were very theatrical and strong," Brown says. "Though they might look good on the runway, they're not for everyday."

After all, not everyone is blessed with youth or beauty. Most have to learn to make the best of what's there.

"Women have to learn how to incorporate color back into the face in a modern way," Brown says. "The '60s look has a very pale eye that you can create with white shadow on the upper lid, some light gray on the lower lid for definition and a few light coats of black mascara.

"False eyelashes look silly unless you're on the runway. They're a very dramatic look that's not for a woman of the '90s."

Emphasize one feature, Brown says. "You have to focus somewhere, and brighter cheeks work with a lighter eye."

Use a liner to define a lighter lip, she advises, and stay away from the heavy pink and white frost of the '60s.

"It makes most women disappear," she says. "It fights your skin color and is not particularly flattering."

For hair, the bed-head is out. The wet — or greasy — look is in. Better yet are long, straight, squeaky-clean tresses with center part. But proceed with caution.

"Not only do you have to have a perfect face, you need really good bone structure, too," says Frederick Fekkai, a premier New York stylist.

But there's a solution for the masses who don't look like Cher.

"Have a middle part with a little more fullness and bounce to your hair," Fekkai says. "Keep it straight and smooth, and it looks a little more 'happening.'"

There's plenty of short hair, too. Though there's no part and a lot of light bangs, it's more gamin than shag. Jane Fonda in "Klute," it's not.

"Though influenced by the '70s, it's a modern version, not a repeat, not as stringy or chopped off," Fekkai says. "It's an approachable haircut for women. It's wispy. It's soft. It's layered. It blends."

What about banishing your brows?

"It's very sophisticated but looks a little strange," Fekkai says. "It's a trend that we can be sorry for later on."

In today's deal, West leads the club king against six spades. Things look good to South, but when he puts up dummy's club ace, East ruffs it. Back comes the heart nine. Suddenly there is a guess to make in the trump suit. Without peeking at the diagram, should you finesse, assuming East got a ruff with a singleton spade, or should you play for the drop?

North, under pressure from West's jump to five clubs, felt that five spades wouldn't do justice to his hand. As he had to bid at least six spades, he made a six-club cue-bid. Now, fortunately, the brakes were put on below the seven-level.

How should you play the trumps? You shouldn't! You should try to get a count of the West hand. This involves no risk, because if at any point West ruffs, you overruff in the dummy and draw the final trump.

Put the heart ace on East's return and lead out your other three top hearts. While West is discarding, throw away dummy's three diamonds.

Now play out the A-J of diamonds. At this point, you will have a complete count of the West hand. You will know that he began with two hearts, one diamond and eight clubs. By a process of elimination, this leaves him with two spades. Take a confident trump finesse and claim.

Readers are invited to send card-play questions to Phillip Alder, in care of this newspaper. They can be answered only through the column.

How to survive unscratched

Ed Gardner said that in opera a guy gets stabbed in the back and instead of bleeding, he sings. By the same line of thought, in bridge a declarer is stabbed in the back but instead of going down, he finds a riposte and makes the contract anyway.

Hospital receives pajamas

The apparel and textiles production, management and services class members at Hobbs Alternative Co-op recently made and delivered 20 garments for babies [illegible] less than five pounds. Students made the delivery on April 1 to University Medical Hospital in Lubbock.

Students involved in the project were Christina Chavez. Nicole Hunt and Misty Lynch, all of Sweetwater; Alvin Gardner and Vernon Jones, both of Stamford; and Sandra Davis of Snyder.

The purpose of the project was to teach the students mass production techniques. Two types of garments were constructed, a gown for under-three-pounds and pajamas for four to five pounds. The infants garments were bias-trimmed and made of flame resistant flannel. Students were able to finish the 20 garments in seven class days. Each student was responsible for a certain stage in the production.

The next undertaking is the construction of six items for a business or entrepreneurial project.

For more information, contact Susan W. Bolen, 735-2850.

Not born in America

WASHINGTON (AP) — Of the 56 signers of the Declaration of Independence, eight were not born in America.

The eight were born in the British Isles and had come to America as immigrants. They were Button Gwinnett and Robert Morris from England; Francis Lewis, Wales; James Smith, George Taylor and Matthew Thornton, Ireland, and James Wilson and John Witherspoon, Scotland.

The Republic of Texas approved a constitution in 1836.

Polly's Pointers By Polly Fisher

Cornstarch removes grease stains

DEAR POLLY — In trying to get grease stains out of a nice garment, I generally ended up with a larger different kind of spot. Now I use this method: Lay the part of the fabric with the spot on it on a flat, slick surface, such as a glossy magazine on a countertop. Sprinkle the spot thickly with cornstarch and lay a heavy, flat weight on it such as another slick surfaced magazine with a pot of water on top of it. Leave it all there for about a day. When you remove the items from the garment, the cornstarch will have absorbed and taken out the spot. Brush off the cornstarch. You may have to get the last bit off with a damp cloth, but the grease spot should be gone. — KAY

DEAR POLLY — When my carpets do not need a complete vacuuming, I use a piece of masking tape to pick up small trash and lint. This is particularly handy around my sewing-machine area for picking up thread bits or dropped pins. — JOSEPHINE

DEAR POLLY — Last winter when my 2-year-old grandson was staying with me, he liked to do exercises with me and wanted leg warmers like mine. I took a new pair of knee socks and cut them off above the heel area to make leg warmers for him. Later, I sewed elastic thread around the top of the foot part that was left, added a pompom at the back heel and wore them as "footies" in my tennis shoes.

In the spring it got warmer, and my arms were becoming more and more uncovered as I went out, so that by summer my arms were tanned and my shoulders were still white. Putting on my halter, I used the "leg warmers" plus my garden gloves to keep my arms from becoming more brown as the rest of me started to tan. Everytime I went out I wore these stocking-top sleeves until finally I had the most even tan I've ever had.

I even wore them when it became quite warm. I rung them out in cool water, and they kept me cooler than wearing nothing on my arms in my average 87-degree summer weather.

A couple of my gardening friends are going to try this themselves this spring. — CONNIE

DEAR POLLY — We have very hard water and my steam iron has become clogged with the lime deposits from the water. I know there is an easy method for cleaning it but for the life of me, I can't remember what it is. Can you help? — NANCY

DEAR NANCY — Vinegar should come to the rescue here. Fill the water chamber with a solution of half water and half vinegar. Set the iron on a thick pad of absorbent fabric, such as an old towel, to catch any drips. Turn on the iron to the highest "steam" setting and leave it on for five minutes or so. Then unplug the iron and let it stand until it is cool. Empty the vinegar solution from the iron, along with any loose particles of lime that have become dislodged. If the iron still seems clogged, repeat the treatment using full-strength vinegar. Finally, wipe the iron with a damp cloth.

Vinegar solves many simple household cleaning problems. DEAR POLLY — When I mentioned to my daughter-in-law that I was thinking of buying some light exercise weights, she suggested that I make a beanbag out of dried beans, since I'd only be lifting one or two pounds at first, anyhow. I bought a two-pound bag of lentils and loosely filled a corduroy beanbag with them. I can drape the bag over one ankle when I'm seated on a chair or table and straighten that leg to strengthen the knee. And I can hold it in my fist while I am doing arm exercises. It works fine and it was inexpensive. — CLAIRE

'Jazz Jubilee' fun time

One-hundred-ten guests and members were entertained as Vivace Jr. Music Club met recently at the Heart of West Texas Museum in Colorado City for a program entitled, "Jazz Jubilee."

Vivace members played an old vintage piano dated 1891 which has an unusally fine tone, said Lynn Bethel, piano teacher and sponsor.

The party animals opened the program with Wipe Out. Other selections were I Got Rhythm, Frankie and Johnnie, Shades of Blue, Moochie Poochie Blues, Boogie Woogie Band, Make Mine Jazz, Leroy Rogers and Angie Sue, Rockin' Robin, Come Go With Me, Surfin Safari, Off Beat, Good Time Boogie, Spot, The Jazz Dog, Walman Blues, Blue Jeans and Boots, Jazz Cat, Comin' From the Jam Session, The Hustle, Last Date and Fiddle Faddle. The special angels sang their own version of You Are My Special Angel while the group enjoyed Boot Scootin Boogie.

Guests from Fort Worth, Jimmy Upshaw and his daughter, Billy Joy, played the guitar and hammered dulcimer as guests were being served refreshments by hosts and hostesses, Jami Thackerson, Sarah Ann Cox, Ashley Sanders, Jennifer Petty, Amber Kelley, Faith Feaster, Stephanie Hoyle and Andrea Helm.

Carrie Perkins, club president, welcomed guests and conducted a brief business meeting.

Vivace is sponsored by Bethel Studio of Music, Texas and National Federated Music Clubs.

Snyder pupils performing were Ellen Strayhorn, Trey Gorman, Karomy and Kelby Drum, Jonathan Pennington, Jacinda Judah, Dancey Hopping, Shana and Casey Blackard, Elizabeth Rollins, Jenny Chandler, Cara Best, Whitney Rogers, Bailey Stoker and Starling Shields.

Paprika potatoes make good dish for any meal, barbecue

By The Associated Press

Potatoes Paprika is a zesty side dish that combines the flavors of potatoes, tomatoes, onions and green pepper. The potatoes cook in the microwave oven. Saute the onions and green pepper; season. Add the tomatoes and the cooked potatoes to the skillet, heat and serve. Top with sour cream, if desired. Serve with grilled chicken, pork chops or sausage.

POTATOES PAPRIKA

4 medium potatoes (about 1 and 1-3rd pounds)

11/2 tablespoons butter or margarine

1 cup coarsely chopped onions

1 medium green bell pepper, seeded and cut into 1-inch squares

1 tablespoon paprika

11/2 teaspoons caraway seeds (optional)

2-3rds cup diced tomatoes

Salt and pepper, to taste

Halve potatoes and cut into 1/2-inch wedges; combine in a 2-quart microwave bowl with 21/4 cups water. Cover and cook in a microwave oven on high (100 percent power) just until tender, about 12 minutes.

Meanwhile, melt butter in a large, nonstick skillet. Add onions; saute over medium heat for 3 minutes. Add green pepper; saute 3 minutes. Mix in paprika and caraway seeds. Drain potatoes; add to skillet with tomatoes. Toss gently until heated through, about 5 minutes. Season with salt and pepper. Top each serving with sour cream, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

Note: This recipe was tested with a 700-watt microwave oven. Cooking time for the potatoes will vary depending on the wattage of the microwave oven used.

Butterflies wings contest subject

WASHINGTON (AP) — The delicate detail and shimmering color of butterflies' wings are the subjects of Vichai Malikul's watercolor paintings.

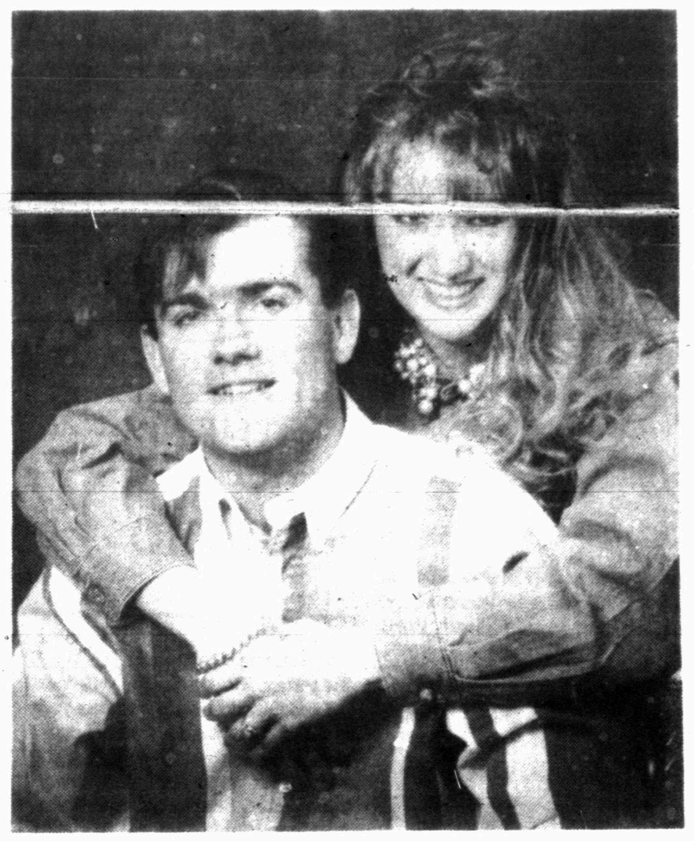

He's a scientific illustrator, and 200 of his works will be on show at the Smithsonian over the next six months in an exhibition titled "Painting Wondrous Wings."

The works are a selection from the 514 illustrations Malikul produced for the recently issued "Peterson's Field Guide of Eastern Butterflies." It took him about six years to create the finely detailed depictions — a simple drawing takes about three hours, but an intricate wing can take more than 15 hours to reproduce in watercolor, he says.

Malikul is a scientific illustrator at the National Museum of Natural History. A video acccompanying the exhibition shows him at work illustrating moths so tiny they could fit n the head of a pin — he does this work with the help of a camera lucida, a microscope that magnifies the moth 50-100 times.

The exhibition will be on show at the museum through Oct. 15.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank Gary Patterson, principal of Snyder High School, and staff for letting the high school students have an opportunity to see Our Drug Program and Concert.

It is designed to help young people in the schools and I think we did just that. I would also like to thank Mr. Worsham for all his help in the auditorium with the electricity, curtains, etc. I want to also thank Mrs. Burleson, Mr. Martin, Ann Walton and Glenn Clarady from the shool board and Deputy Sheriff Charlie Reynolds for supporting our program, as well as the principals and staff from Ira and Hermleigh and Mr. Sollis from Snyder Junior High.

I am very sorry that our junior high and 6th grade students were not able to attend the program, but not because of Mr. Sollis. A special thanks to Jerald Garner, Glenn McCathern and Bryan Franks at Colonial Hill Baptist Church for the great lunch.

A situation came up over the junior high not being able to attend the program due to, who knows? I would like to say that the situation could have been easily handled and gone on to let the students see a valuable pogram, but it wasn't.

I'd also like to say to Mr. Billy Bob McMullan, who is on the school board; that everyone involved followed the "correct procedure" set forth by the administration office, therefore I would like to know how people would know which policy to follow if one policy is what you call an "unwritten rule."

I believe that Snyder Junior High and 6th grade students should have had the opportunity to see the program at Snyder High School. If the program helped only one student out of 600, that would have been better than not seeing the program at all.

Thank you,
Billy Tim Atwood

It's Earth Day, isn't it? Well, not today. But a day or two ago.

I celebrated Earth Day this year by building a garden bench. I don't have a garden, mind you. Just the bench. You gotta start somewhere.

Actually, I had a garden a couple of years ago. I get asked pretty frequently, "Got a garden this year?" Nope. No garden.

I honestly considered it. But I remember that the last time I laid out a garden and dug and scraped and hoed and planted and all that stuff, I decided that if I was to ever have a garden again, I would buy a tiller first.

Not a tiller that beat me half to death, and left me huffing and puffing with my tongue hanging out and my arms feeling like spaghetti. No. I was going to get one of those tillers that they show in the ads. Those kind that a 98-year-old great, great grandmother can control with one hand while she sips on a Mint Julep.

But I can't afford one. So, no garden this year.

I built a bench instead. I got the plans from a book at the county library. "A place to rest your weary bones after a long day of chores," the description read.

I built the bench. I rested.

My contribution to Earth Day. A bench. For conservation. To conserve my energy. And yours, if you want to sit a spell.

It's not much, but I feel it is necessary — to recognize Earth Day that is. Personally, I do my part to conserve. I take out the trash, for instance, as infrequently as possible, therefore, putting less strain on our landfill.

If I go grocery shopping alone, I insist on paper sacks. My wife likes the plastic ones, which she uses to line small trash cans. That's her small contribution to conservation; not conservation of the Earth, but money.

I realized long ago that she wasn't into Earth Day. Afterall, the hoe I gave her two years ago for Earth Day (or was that Mother's Day?) has never been used.

But believe me, I have always practiced conservation. I support "Don't Bag It." People who rake up grass clippings after every mowing aren't stable. It's a fact. Trust me. If you are one of these people, get help.

So that's my contribution to Earth Day. Not anything very special. But a it's a bench. A good bench. A vantage point from which I can survey the clouds and the trees and all the things God made.

On Earth Day. Or any other time I feel like it.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

Funny thing about completing a book manuscript; I wander the house from room to room, dazed and exhausted, with TVs on everywhere to which I pay little attention. And that is how I found myself Monday afternoon, standing horrified in front of the set, watching dozens of men, women, and children burn to death in the "Koresh Compound."

I wept for those babies, those poor sacrificial lambs, who were doomed from birth — even conception — to be martyred to the cause of their father's insatiable ego.

Like my editor, Bill McClellan, noticed so succinctly a few weeks ago, I too watched as the news media rushed to jump on the "Let's Crucify the Government for Screwing Up" bandwagon. Even the rather tame "Good Morning, America" supposedly devoted a half-hour of its programing the following morning to "examine" the tragic event and its consequences, but chose as their guests the defense attorneys for David Koresh and his right-hand man, a Republican congressman on the House Judiciary Committee, and Koresh's own grandmother. The consensus was, naturally, that the FBI had made a horrendous mistake and had thus caused the deaths of all those people.

There is something we are all going to have to accept eventually: David Koresh caused the deaths of all those people. The adult followers who chose to wed themselves body and soul to this man caused their own deaths and the deaths of the children he condemned when he ordered the fires to be set.

It was going to happen, sooner or later. He "prophesied" it, you see. He predicted that the world would be destroyed in a hail of bullets and fire, and the only world they knew was that building. The "hail of bullets" came from them. They set the fire.

His prophesy was fulfilled.

Now all he has to do is rise from the dead, something else he promised.

If the FBI made any mistake at all, it was in underestimating the mind-control at work in that bizarre setting. They believed that, as soon as the mothers saw their children choking from tear gas, they would gather those babies to their breasts and run out of the building. This is a logical, rational thing to expect.

But these were not logical, rational people. Koresh had brainwashed those women, most of who were girls themselves, barely out of or still in their teens, that the children had to be kept in the compound, no matter what, so that they could all die together, meet in heaven, and then come back to rule the world after Armageddon. This was Armageddon.

Besides, if they wanted to run, he had a "Praetorean Guard" of armed thugs, waiting to shoot them.

Those who weren't devoted to him were terrified of him. They were doomed the minute they gave over control of their own [illegible], to do with as he wished.

Make no mistake: from the beginning, Koresh was in control. He manipulated everyone, especially the government. He broke promises, lied, bullied, and otherwise toyed with the exhausted hostage rescue team. If anyone really believes for one minute that he actually planned to write a book on the "seven seals," and that he was going to come walking out of the compound when he was finished, trailed by his faithful followers like Moses out of Egypt, then that shows just how good he was at manipulating, right down to the bitter end.

The last thing he promised hostage negotiators was that the children were safe in the underground bunker. Fire fighters and FBI agents rushed to cool down the buried schoolbus, which they found cool and survivable — and filled with three corpses left over from the ATF attack on the first day.

He never intended to make those children safe. Never.

He never intended to let any of his truly faithful out alive. Never. He had engulfed them in his massive ego; to let them leave would have been a dismemberment.

If you have a hard time understanding how anybody could ever allow themselves to come under the sway of such an individual, how anybody could be so stupid as to believe his lies and to take seriously his claims, then sit back and watch the feeding frenzy of the worldwide media, as they attack and slash and, in the end, set up Vernon Howell — that IS his real name — as an unfortunate victim who was crushed beneath the heel of the big, bad United States government.

In the end, it will be his resurrection.

Editorial Roundup

El Paso Times on spousal support requirements:

It looks as if Texas may remain the only state where a man doesn't have to provide any support for his unemployed ex-wife after a long marriage ends.

Unbelievably, the House Calendars Committee voted for the second time in a month to keep the full House from voting on a limited alimony bill. And once again it was seven men who did it.

El Paso's Nancy McDonald, the one woman on the committee, cast the only dissenting vote.

Clouding this issue were some sore feelings toward the bill's sponsor, Rep. Senfronia Thompson, D-Houston. As chairwoman of the House Judicial Affairs Committee, she has been sitting on some legislators' bills in an apparent effort to force their support for her spousal support measure.

But that doesn't diminish the need in Texas for what House Bill 33 would do: Provide up to $1,500 a month in support for an ex-spouse — almost always the wife — who hasn't worked outside the home during a marriage that lasted at least 10 yea. s. The actual amount of support would depend on how much the working ex-spouse makes and would rarely last more than three years.

That the Calendars Committee would keep this bill from a vote is an unforgivable and unforgettable outrage. ...

Orange Leader on the school finance issue:

With a school finance proposition on a special election ballot May 1, Texas' educational funding is a source of great debate. Proponents of reform long have cited Texas' lowly ranking among the states in education expenditures as a source of shame that all Texans should be eager to change.

But there's a wait-a-minute here. School-spending figures virtually always are calculated in terms of dollars-per-student. But using Census Bureau figures, Governing magazine tried a different approach: spending in relation to per-capita state income, that is relating spending on education to the total relative wealth of the state's citizens.

By this measure, Texas does not rank between 37th and 48th, as it does on most spending scales, but 12th. That also happens to be a higher ranking than any of the top 10 industrialized states.

...Proposition 1 on the May 1 ballot would make legal the system we've had the past two years. That is certainly not perfection, but neither has it been an utter disaster for the state. Rejecting Proposition 1 has the frightening consequence of expecting the state Legislature to do in 30 days (a constitutional plan must be in place by June 1 or state funds for schools could be cut off) what it has not been able to do in three years of court orders and special sessions.

...What a "yes" vote on Proposition 1 will do is vote for the status quo. Under the comparisons shown here, we could do a lot worse. Some of us think putting our fate back into the hands of a heavily-pressured Legislature is a lot worse.

The Brazosport Facts on homeowner equity:

Sen. Jerry Patterson, R-Pasadena, proposed letting voters decide if they want to have access to their home equity as backing for a loan, an idea endorsed by Sen. Buster Brown, R-Lake Jackson, and others active in the current Legislature.

Currently Texans are not allowed to access the amount they have invested in their home in order to secure a loan. They must sell their home first.

Patterson's resolution would allow homeowners to borrow against their equity to buy appliances, cars, college tuition, etc.

Using an investment to free up a loan to be used for improving that initial investment is an idea with merit.

Amarillo Daily News on value-added tax:

Advisers to President Clinton are proposing a value-added tax, a kind of national sales tax, as the best means to finance his health reform program. That kind of tax is guaranteed to make taxpayers ill.

VATs are popular in Europe. They tax each level of the production process, increasing the tax as the value of the product increases. One reason European political leaders like the VAT so much is because it is an invisible tax. It's not taken out of workers' paychecks or paid by sending in a check directly to the government. Consumers pay the tax every time they buy something. And since the tax is part of the price, it is easy for consumers to not notice the tax they are paying.

That's the problem. VATs are easy to raise, and, given its record, Congress will raise any tax that is easy to raise. That means taxpayers will end up paying a larger chunk of their income to the government. That's not needed. ...

However he decides to go, Clinton must avoid the VAT. Of course he probably won't. Given his penchant for raising taxes so far, he's probably salivating over the chance to enact such a "promising" tax. Still, taxpayers beware: Unless you want another burdensome tax, you must let Congress know how you feel. VATs are the last things Americans, especially those with lower incomes, need.

Airline service from Snyder to Dallas was inaugurated at Winston Field after officials came to Snyder to provide "courtesy" flights for local business and civic leaders. Jake Amato was back-up pilot and director of the White Buffalo Travel Agency, booking passengers and freight.

Woman rescued from cult

By The Associated Press

When her son wanted martial arts lessons, the young mother found a school in suburban Chicago that so impressed her she took lessons, too.

She liked the atmosphere, the camaraderie, the philosophy.

"They start with speeches about materialism vs. spiritualism," says the woman, who asks not to be identified.

"I'm an idealistic person and it was very appealing."

Within eight months, she was ready to divorce her husband and become a devotee of Chung My Kuan, which turned out to be a cult investigated by the Illinois attorney general.

The woman's husband took action: Two counselors moved into the couple's home, and by the end of the week the woman had left the cult.

Those who do understand say the woman was the victim of classic cult programming. More importantly, they say, her husband took the right steps to save her.

Steven Hassan, a former cult member in Massachusetts who has counseled hundreds of others, says it's a mistake to get angry with a relative under a cult's sway.

"When they see a radical personality change, they are bewildered and try to argue with the person," he said. "That just builds a bigger wall between them. Cult members are indoctrinated to stay away from any negative influence."

Hassan and others who help ease people out of cults offer these suggestions:

—Don't argue or cut ties. "Have them tell you all about the group. Act interested and concerned," he said. "They will stay in contact as long as they have hope a family member might join them."

—Don't send money. Instead, keep contact with non-cash gifts of clothing and non-refundable airline tickets.

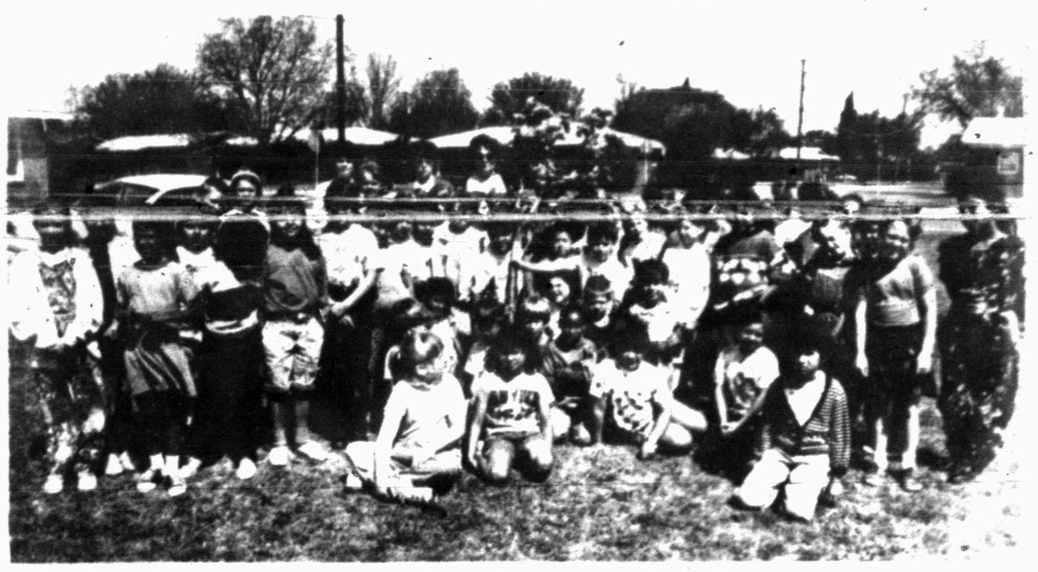

—Seek out professional counselors. Their technique is often to talk about other cults. "If you approach them and say, 'Have you heard (about) Texas?' and ask a lot of questions, you can lay down the backdrop of what thought-control is," Hassan said.

Bill introduced to study, treat cult's children

AUSTIN (AP) — A state lawmaker from Waco has introduced a bill that would provide for a five-year study and treatment of children who lived in the Branch Davidian cult compound during a siege by federal authorities.

"I think we can utilize the findings for other children who have gone through trauma of various types," said Rep. Betty Denton, a Democrat, Thursday.

She said her bill would permit the governor's office to use state funds to contract with Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. Bruce Perry, an associate professor of psychiatry at the college, heads a treatment team that has been working with children who were released from the compound before it was destroyed by fire Monday.

Legislating love: UVA eyes roles of teachers, students

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — The University of Virginia faculty voted to draw the line on professor-student romances by establishing this test:

If the student's academic career is in your hands, then it's hands off.

The Faculty Senate approved the compromise 31-4 rather than impose the total prohibition on sex between students and faculty that a Women's Concerns Committee had advocated as a way to protect students from sexual intimidation.

Women's committee members said they were satisfied with the compromise.

"We just weren't going to win," third-year student Angela Kline said. "We wanted something to protect the students."

The policy will be sent to university President John T. Casteen III, who will make a recommendation to the board of visitors. The board sets policy at the 18,000-student school, which was founded by Thomas Jefferson in 1819.

"We've gone to a lot of trouble and I'm certain that he'll pay a great deal of heed to our advice," said Robert H. Kretsinger, president of the 98-member Senate, which represents the school's 2,000 faculty members. Many members of the Senate left before the vote or did not attend the session.

Kretsinger said the women's committee proposal went further than any policies he was aware of at other public colleges and universities.

The compromise is similar to codes at a few dozen other schools. Among them: the College of William and Mary, the University of Iowa, the University of Wisconsin at Madison and the Minnesota State University system.

The women's committee had proposed a ban on romances between undergraduates and faculty; between professors and graduate students in the same department; between teaching assistants and their students; and between financial officers and any students they could affect through scholarships or grants.

But some faculty and students said that proposal amounted to an unconstitutional ban on love.

The compromise states: "Faculty shall not engage in amorous or sexual relations with, or make amorous or sexual overtures to, any student over whom he or she holds a position of authority with regard to academic or administrative judgments and decision."

Violators would be subject to sanctions ranging from reprimand to dismissal.

Still, the American Civil Liberties Union said such sanctions against relations between consenting adults are unconstitutional.

And engineering professor Fulvio A. Iachetta said a ban on teacher-student romances would be about as effective as the school's efforts years ago to stop students from having sex at fraternity houses: They simply moved to the back seats of cars.

"You are not going to legislate a different human behavior," Ianchetta said. "It doesn't work."

House postpones handgun proposal

AUSTIN (AP) — The House has put off until next week [illegible] to carry concealed handguns, after being faced with a load of proposed amendments to the measure.

Lawmakers discussed the bill for more than an hour Thursday before Rep. Ron Wilson, a sponsor of the measure, moved to postpone further consideration until Monday. It was late in the day, and Wilson, D-Houston, noted that there were more than 40 proposed amendments pending.

Lawmakers had already considered and turned down two amendments, including one by Democratic Reps. Debra Danburg of Houston and Karyne Conley of San Antonio that would have changed the bill to allow exposed rather [illegible] agree with arguments that concealed handguns would deter crime. She said an exposed weapon would be a greater deterrent than that of a hidden gun, "You're sitting there holding a secret ... and the macho stuff starts flowing." The amendment was voted down 72-54.

An amendment by Rep. Mario Gallegos, D-Houston, would have increased training requirements in the bill from 15 hours to 75 hours — including 10 hours on multiculturalism and race relations. Opponents said 15 hours is insufficient.

But Rep. Bill Carter, R-Fort Worth, also a bill sponsor, said, "This is about training for self-defense. It's not about training to be a law enforcement officer." The amendment was voted down 74-63.

In presenting the bill, Wilson caled it "The Citizen Protection Act of 1993."

He recounted stories of a drive-by shooting outside his home when he and his young son were inside, and of his wife being attacked and stabbed, also while she was with his son.

We ought to allow our loved ones the opportunity to protect themselves," Wilson said. He said that 37 other states have similar laws.

To be eligible for a license to carry a concealed gun under the bill, an applicant would have to be at least 21, a Texas resident for at least six months and have completed a training course of at least 15 hours.

He or she could not have been convicted of a Class A or B misdemeanor in the five years before applying; ever have been found guilty of a felony; be under indictment; or be chemically dependent or of "unsound mind."

The Texas Department of Public Safety would perform a criminal history records check and investigation of the applicant. The fee for a four-year license would be $140.

House oks bill that would create lottery commission

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill to create a state lottery commission has won preliminary House approval after being overwhelmingly defeated earlier this week.

But the House again defeated a proposal to set aside lottery revenue for public education.

The bill by Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, would remove lottery oversight from the state comptroller and create a six-member lottery commission to operate the game.

It was defeated 110-23 on Monday after several lawmakers objected to certain portions of the bill. The House approved the measure 85-58 Thursday after Wilson reworked the legislation.

Changes from the earlier version included doubling the number of commissioners from three to six; requiring the governor to conduct background checks on prospective commissioners; and restoring a prohibition on selling tickets on publicly-owned land.

The new bill also removes a restriction on selling tickets at a licensed racetrack. The earlier version would have prohibited such sales.

The proposal to dedicate some lottery revenue to education was pushed unsuccessfully by Rep. Nancy Moffat, R-Southlake. A similar proposal was also defeated Monday.

Ms. Moffat said that while the revenue would not be enough to solve the state's school finance crisis, it would nevertheless "establish a base" of funding.

She also said the public had approved a lottery because they thought the revenue would go toward education. The amendment was defeated 92-50.

Rep. Paul Sadler, who voted against the bill Monday and again on Thursday, said the measure wasn't significantly changed.

"This was a bad, bad idea Monday and it still is" said Sadler, D-Henderson. "This is garbage here, pure garbage."

Sadler, who supports the idea of one gaming commission to oversee the lottery, horseracing and other means of gambling in the state, said creating a separate commission on the lottery would be neither efficient nor cost-saving.

Little new information among 1,100 pages released so far

WACO, Texas (AP) — Miles away from the compound site, federal agents have been busy recounting their steps and filing their story in more than 1,100 pages of court documents during David Koresh's 51-day standoff.

Despite the volume released Wednesday by the U.S. District Court in Waco, little new information was revealed.

Among the flood of records unleashed, two affadavits stand out.

When released on Tuesday, they showed for the first time that Koresh never intended to be taken alive and that he knew the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms intended to arrest him, perhaps months before the Feb. 28 search warrant was delivered.

The affadavits made two mentions of child sexual abuse. The tales of abuse came from two former cult members, and both victims are now adults.

Struggle continues year after explosion

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — The world exploded a year ago for Monica Cervantes de Mendieta and thousands of her neighbors.

A gasoline leak turned the 6 miles long, demolishing a thousand homes and killing at least 210 people, including her parents and 3-year-old son.

A year after the April 22 blast, thousands of survivors remain haunted by horror and personal loss. They report being harassed by some fellow citizens and the government.

Monica and her husband now care for four of her siblings, her 20-month-old toddler and an 88-year-old grandmother in a tiny, two-bedroom apartment donated by the British government.

The 22-year-old has managed to remain almost cheerful. But on Thursday's day of mourning, she will attend Mass in her old neighborhood to read a prayer on the meaning of death.

One year ago, city officials had been investigating complaints of a gasoline smell. At 10 a.m. the radio announced there was no danger.

She headed toward the family store two blocks away. "But I forgot my keys," she recalled, and returned to her house.

The blast hit at 10:10 a.m. as she was reaching for her key chain.

A ravine 30-40 feet deep still snakes through the city not far from downtown, shadowed by shattered husks of masonry and adobe houses.

The officials say they hope to finish the new drain pipes by the end of June. Politicians walk in fear of reviving public rage that toppled Gov. Guillermo Cosio Vidauri and Mayor Enrique Dau Flores. The city council resigned en masse.

Dau Flores and eight other officials face trial for criminal negligence.

regain the confidence of the citizens in their institutions," acting Gov. Carlos Rivera Aceves said in an interview.

"We can modestly say that in general terms we have achieved something of that."

Citizens still blame Pemex, the federal oil monopoly, which paid tens of millions of dollars "to mitigate the disgrace," according to a company statement.

Gov. Rivera said the government so far has spent about $189 million on rebuilding and aid.

But residents surrounding the blast zone say the government is ignoring some damage, delaying aid payments and failing to help some at all.

"There are very many who have not received aid," said Rev. J. Trinidad Razo of La Madre Santisima de la Luz Church two blocks from the blast zone.

Hundreds of residents worked mightily in rescue efforts but a few exploited the victims.

Sandra Rios said all of her family's belongings were looted.

Mrs. Mendieta saw a soldier remove the cash box from her family grocery shop, although the looters also discovered and saved her two brothers buried in the ruins.

Her own house was stripped of its furniture while officials guarded it.

Maria del Rosario Varisa remains dazed by the disaster that killed her 20-year-old daughter.

Mrs. Rosario, who used to sell hamburgers from a street cart, said neither she nor her husband, a taxi driver, has been able to work since the blast.

They got only minor housing aid because they had been living with relatives.

The house they rented while recovering from the blast was stripped by robbers. With rent aid terminated she is again living with her mother-in-law.

"I'm ... said in a groggy voice. "Everything is ended."

Book planned on cult standoff

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A book focusing on the 51-day standoff between members of a religious cult and federal agents is expected to be released the second week in May, a Fort Worth book publisher announced Wednesday.

"See No Evil: Blind Devotion and Bloodshed in David Koresh's Holy War" will contain more than 250 pages, The Summit Group said in a prepared statement.

Fort Worth Star-Telegram investigative reporter Tim Madigan will examine such issues as:

—What possessed Branch Davidian cult members to submit to Koresh?

—Why would men in the cult allow their spouses to be controlled and seduced by the cult leader?

—What promise of salvation did Koresh use to convince his followers to perish in an inferno at the compound?

Koresh and his followers held law enforcement at bay for almost two months after federal agents attempted serve search and arrest warrants at the compound near Waco Feb. 28.

On Monday, the standoff ended as the compound burned to the ground. Cult leader David Koresh and 85 others, including 17 children 10 or under, were believed to have died in the fire.

Judge to hear voting lawsuit

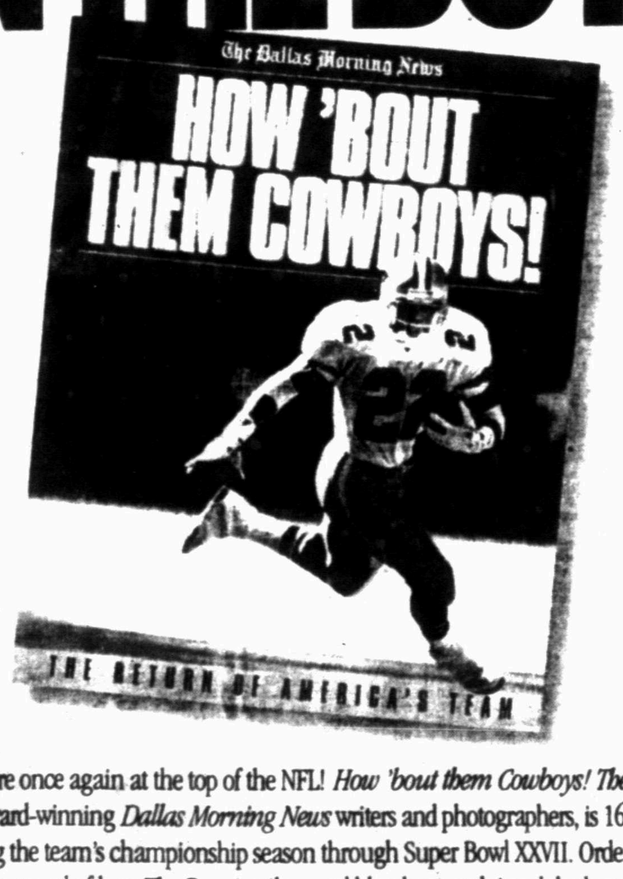

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge will consider complaints by Hispanics that a new configuration of the Houston city council to be presented to voters this fall is unfair.

U.S. District Judge David Hittner's decision Thursday to hear the 2-year-old case nullifies a settlement between Hispanic plaintiffs and city officials and places in jeopardy a November referendum.

The ballot proposal would replace the current council makeup of nine single-member districts, five at-large seats and a mayor with 16 single-member districts and the mayor.

Hittner's pronouncement Thursday came after Hispanic plaintiffs' argued council members violated a settlement in January when they appointed Cynthia Canales Gorczynski to a vacant council seat.
