Tornado kills 2, injures 12

■ Travelers from Del Rio and Canyon Lake are killed as funnel clouds destroy homes and livestock in the McCamey area Friday.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

McCAMEY — A four-member Del Rio family traveling to Crane to visit a relative perhaps suffered the most from a killer tornado which left two dead, many injured and more than a dozen families without homes.

A Pecos County sheriff's office spokesman said as many as three funnel clouds were spotted in the area between McCamey and Iraan Friday afternoon.

Pat Dingler died Friday after a twister struck his vehicle as he traveled north on Farm-to-Market Road 305 between Iraan and McCamey, Texas Department of Public Safety officials said Saturday.

His wife and two sons, who also were riding in the 1985 Chevrolet pick-up truck, were seriously injured, officials said.

Odessa Medical Center Hospital officials said Rebecca Dingler, 37, was still there in fair but guarded condition, while her son, Lance, 15, was in stable condition.

The other son, Jake Dingler, 13, was taken to Shannon Medical Center in San Angelo, where he is in critical condition in the hospital's intensive care unit, Shannon officials reported. The boy was suffering from severe head wounds, officials said.

Officials at Fort Stockton Funeral Home, where the father's body was taken, said the family was headed toward Crane to visit a relative.

Overall, the Friday afternoon tornado apparently left two dead and 12 injured, officials reported.

Robert Musick, 70, of Canyon Lake, also was killed by the tornado as he was traveling on FM 305, DPS officials said. Dingler and Musick each were pronounced dead at the scene, officials said.

Bonnie Burton, McCamey Hospital nursing director, said only one person injured by the tornado remained in the hospital there Saturday.

McCAMEY — The day afer a tornado destroyed her family's mobile home, Gail Johnson rummaged through a pile of muddied clothes in the back of a pick-up truck.

"I shouldn't say that," she added. "We've got our life."

Mrs. Johnson broke into tears as she held up a black graduation gown.

The gown belonged to Mrs. Johnson's 17-year-old daughter, who missed her McCamey High School graduation Friday night because of the tornado.

Pat High, a family friend, took Mrs. Johnson in her arms and assured her that they would stage their own graduation.

"When she (Ms. Johnson's daughter) graduated she got a round of applause even though she wasn't there," Ms. High said.

Mrs. Johnson, her husband Ronny, their two teen-age daughters and 15-year-old son have been staying with Johnson's grandmother since the storm.

"We're going to stay here till we can find out what we are going to do," Ms. Johnson said, shaking her head in disbelief. "Sure was a big tornado," she added.

She said her family took shelter in a culvert after fleeing from their doomed home.

The Johnsons were among 14 families in the McCamey area who reportedly lost

Bush, Gorbachev 'loosen up' as summit visits Camp David

■ In the third session of a four-day summit, the Soviet and American presidents roll up their sleeves — as much for fun as hard work.

By Matt Quinn
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

THURMONT, Md. — President Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev spent a sunny Saturday in the relaxed surroundings of Camp David in what Gorbachev described as "very instructive" talks on Germany's future, world troublespots and Soviet human rights policies.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the two leaders spent a "relaxing and productive day" at the presidential compound nestled in Maryland's Catoctin Mountains near here.

As the two men left to return to Washington at day's end, Gorbachev told reporters, "Today's discussion was very instructive."

"I think there is really ample opportunity for cooperation even though there are real problems that neither the president nor I can turn a blind eye to," Gorbachev added.

Bush agreed that his views "closely paralleled those of the president.'

Both men shed their ties and jackets and the all-business Soviet president even tossed a few horseshoes with his wife Raisa. Bush and Gorbachev tooled around the sprawling grounds in a golf cart, with Gorbachev at the wheel.

Bush and Gorbachev, seated with aides around a table under a umbrella on the patio of log cabin-style Aspen Lodge, put off until the late afternoon a discussion of the sweeping changes in Europe.

Soviet spokesman Arkady Maslennikov said at their final session the two leaders "discussed everything around the world," including Germany.

In their earlier sessions at the woodsy retreat, the two presidents nibbled at the margins of superpower relations, focusing on such regional flashpoints as Afghanistan, Central America, the Middle East, India and Pakistan, Cambodia and Angola and the Kremlin's emigration policies for Soviet Jews. Fitzwater said the two men discussed the history of their respective nations in such conflicts, but no new agreements were reported.

Bush complained that the Soviet-backed orthodox communist regime of Cuban leader Fidel Castro was "out of step" with the times. Bush also called on

Boulter pledges backing on NARO issues

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Texas Railroad Commission hopeful Beau Boulter of Amarillo Saturday told attendees of the Texas Convention of the National Association of Royalty Owners (NARO) that he fully supported the organizations plans to prevent abuses of oil and gas leases by division orders.

Boulter told the royalty owners and managers he would pledge his help on a number of royalty-related issues of concern to the state's 800,000 royalty owners, including the correlative rights of natural gas producers and royalty owners, and drainage problems associated with horizontal drilling.

Boulter called horizontal drilling a bright spot on the horizon, but voiced concern that current state laws and regulations were adequate to protect royalty owners from possible drainage of horizontal projects.

He said he would take a close look at the technology as railroad commissioner to prevent any possible abuses.

The former Amarillo congressman called natural gas the fuel of the future and a means of breaking the import deadlock, but he warned that TRC must continue an aggressive campaign to expand its use and take a more "serious" role in overseeing the gas business to protect correlative rights.

"The mission of the Texas Railroad Commission must expand quickly," he said. "Not only must look out for the small producers and royalty owners of the state, but we must work in a national

Buried treasure

PARIS, Texas (AP) — Recent flooding along the Red River unearthed a remarkably well-preserved canoe that had been buried for centuries beneath tons of silt, archaeologists said.

The nearly 25-foot long dugout is carved out of a single log of what appears to be a cottonwood tree. It has a square hull, and only a part of the bow and a section of the canoe's bottom are missing.

Dale Moore, a farmer in this community about 100 miles northeast of downtown Dallas, discovered the canoe during a Memorial Day picnic with his family. Moore and his daughter were fishing when they found the canoe upside down on the bank, he said.

He is keeping the canoe soaked down under a cover of burlap. Eventually the canoe will undergo a process by which moisture is slowly removed and replaced by a strengthening solvent.

"This is a phenomenal find," said Bonnie McKee, a board member of The Archaeological Conservancy in Dallas.

Harrison dies

LONDON (AP) — Fellow actors lamented the death of Rex Harrison on Saturday, saying the gentle actor-knight will be remembered as much for his civility and urbanity as for his versatility and skill as an actor.

Actor Edward Fox said Harrison's talent was like the sun: "It's difficult to give a name to, (but) you know when it's out."

Casino candidate unseats incumbent Mohawk chief

ST. REGIS INDIAN RESERVATION, N.Y. (AP) — A Mohawk Indian who views casino gambling as an economic boon to the reservation unseated the tribe's anti-gambling incumbent chief in an election Saturday.

The election amounted to a referendum on gambling, an issue so divisive among Mohawks it led to bloodshed May 1, when two Indians were shot to death in a clash between pro- and anti-gambling factions. Since then, New York state and Canadian police have occupied the 28,000-acre reservation, which straddles the international border.

Norman Tarbell received 637 votes to defeat his distant cousin, incumbent Harold Tarbell, who got 538 votes in his attempt to win a second, three-year term, according to acting tribal secretary Stacey Terrance. Twelve votes were ruled invalid, she said. Harold Tarbell said he would appeal, alleging voting improprieties.

With Norman Tarbell's election, the three-man tribal council ruling the U.S. side of the St. Regis Indian Reservation will unanimously support casinos on Mohawk land. The other council chiefs are Lincoln White and L. David Jacobs.

Norman Tarbell is to become junior chief on the council on July 1; at that time Jacobs becomes head chief and White second chief.

Norman Tarbell said Saturday that his first priority as a chief would be "to put our people back to work."

Traditionalists such as Harold Tarbell claim the eight casinos on the U.S. side of the reservation breed drug-running, prostitution and other crime. White, Jacobs and Norman Tarbell say the casinos bring badly needed jobs to the reservation, where the unemployment rate is about 30 percent.

About 3,400 Mohawks were eligible to vote in the election on the St. Regis Indian Reservation.

Harold Tarbell said Saturday night he would contest the election on the grounds that Jacobs and White excluded U.S. Mohawks living on the Canadian side from voting. In past elections, Mohawks living there were allowed to vote.

"Well, I haven't quite lost yet, because there were so many improprieties ... we're going to have to sort that out in the next couple of months," Harold Tarbell said. He characterized the voting as "chaos," and said, "It made no sense to protest ... so we're going to have to appeal it."

Jacobs and White adopted a list of eligible voters based on tribal rules that allow only Indians living on the U.S. side to vote. A state Supreme Court judge upheld the list Friday.

Former mental patient receives execution stay

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — A murderer scheduled to die for killing a bus driver won an unwanted stay Saturday from the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals until the court can rule on his parents' plea to keep him alive.

The Nevada attorney general's office immediately appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court to allow the execution of Thomas Baal this weekend and cancel the stay issued by a three-judge panel of the circuit court based in San Francisco.

Baal, a 26-year-old former mental patient, seemed somewhat resigned when advised of the stay, Nevada State Prison spokesman Glen Wharton said. "He reiterated that he wants the execution to go forward."

The three-judge panel ruled 2-1 that a U.S. District Court judge in Reno erred by not holding an evidentiary hearing on the parents' claim that Baal has suffered brain damage and tried suicide several times.

The court, ruling about 11 hours before the scheduled 10:05 p.m. PDT execution, scheduled a hearing July 31 in Pasadena, Calif., and ordered prosecution and defense lawyers to submit written briefs in advance.

Doris and Edwin Baal of Mesa, Colo., said their son's long-term mental problems prevented him from making a rational decision about his appeals. Baal insisted he wanted no further appeals. "I just want to go die and be free," he said Thursday.

Justice Alex Kozinski dissented, stating in the 9th Circuit Court's 21-page order that there's nothing in the record to support the conclusion of the majority.

Kozinski said Baal's request to die by lethal injection should be honored, The judge added the inmate otherwise faces long years of prison where "he will die, by natural causes or a shiv. ... The people of Nevada want their punishment exacted. Baal has accepted their verdict. Why do we stand in the way?"

> 'I just want to go die and be free.'
> — Thomas Baal, Condemned inmate

The formal stay follows a temporary stay issued Thursday night only 1½ hours before Baal was to be executed early Friday. If the appeals court had allowed the temporary stay to lapse, state officials had planned to execute Baal on Saturday.

Warden Pete Demosthenes said Baal had calmed down following an outburst when he was advised of the temporary stay issued by the 9th Circuit.

When Baal heard about the temporary stay, he threatened to escape and commit more crimes if he was sent to a mental institution, according to State Prison Director Ron Angelone.

Baal, 26, was sentenced to die for the knifing death of a woman bus driver during a 1988 robbery in Las Vegas.

Baal's execution would have been Nevada's fifth and the 129th nationally since the U.S. Supreme Court in 1976 cleared the way for states to resume use of the death penalty.

Nevada's last executions were in June 1989. In the same week, confessed murderers Sean Flanagan and William "Bud" Thompson were given lethal injections after both said they wanted no further appeals.

Politics heat up with 9 primaries Tuesday

Associated Press

A bitter primary campaign for governor of California is winding down in a flurry of television commercials while North Carolina Democrats are choosing a challenger to Republican Sen. Jesse Helms. All told, candidates in nine states are vying for support Tuesday, 1990's busiest primary election day so far.

Democrats Dianne Feinstein and John Van de Kamp have spent months attacking each other's positions on abortion, the death penalty and how to deal with California's $3.6 billion budget deficit.

Polls suggested their race was a dead heat as they entered the last weekend of the primary campaign.

On the Republican side, Sen. Pete Wilson faced only token primary opposition and sat on a huge campaign war chest as he waited to learn which Democrat would be his opponent in the race to succeed retiring Gov. George Deukmejian, a Republican.

In North Carolina, Harvey Gantt and Mike Easley were in a runoff for the Democratic Senate nomination. Gantt, the former mayor of Charlotte, finished first in a six-way primary May 8, but failed to get the 40 percent necessary to avoid a runoff with the second-place finisher.

VOTERS ALSO will go to the polls Tuesday in Alabama, Iowa, Mississippi, Montana, New Jersey, New Mexico and South Dakota.

In Alabama, five Democrats were battling for the right to challenge Gov. Guy Hunt, the first Republican elected governor of the state since Reconstruction. The contenders were state Attorney General Don Siegelman, former Gov. Fob James, U.S. Rep. Ronnie Flippo, state Sen. Charles Bishop, and Paul Hubbert, executive director of the Alabama Education Association.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., and Republican state Sen. Bill Cabannis were assured of their party nominations, setting up a face-off in November.

Abortion was the big issue in Iowa, where three Democrats were vying to take on GOP Gov. Terry Branstad, an opponent of legalized abortion. The Iowa chapter of the National Abortion Rights Action League endorsed Don Avenson, speaker of the Iowa House, a move that provoked an angry response from banker John Chrystal, who, like Avenson, supports legal abortion.

NARAL's decision to weigh in on the race was believed aimed at the third Democrat, Attorney General Tom Miller, an opponent of abortion. Miller was an early favorite in the race and NARAL leaders were concerned the fall election would be between two opponents of abortion.

In the Senate primary in Iowa, incumbent Democrat Tom Harkin and his GOP challenger, Rep. Tom Tauke, were assured of their party nominations.

ANOTHER CROWDED field was battling in Democratic and Republican gubernatorial primaries in New Mexico, where incumbent Garrey Carruthers, a Republican, was ineligible to seek a second term.

For the first time in the state's history, the governor elected in 1990 will be allowed to serve two consecutive four-year terms.

The leading contenders on the Democratic side were Albuquerque lawyer Paul Bardacke and rancher Bruce King, who already has served eight years as governor, elected first in 1970 and again in 1978.

Regarded as the top GOP contenders were Frank Bond, a former legislator and education commissioner, and Les Houston, the Republican leader of the state Senate.

Four Republicans were competing in Montana to challenge Democratic Sen. Max Baucus. Two years ago, underdog GOP challenger Conrad Burns toppled Democratic Sen. John Melcher, and the Republicans are hoping to repeat that success this year. Vying to take on Baucus were Lt. Gov. Allen Kolstad, state Sen. Bill Farrell, and businessmen John Domenech and Bruce Vorhauer.

Abortion was an issue in a three-way congressional primary in New Jersey. State assemblyman Rodney Frelinghuysen and state Sen. Richard A. Zimmer, supporters of the pro-choice position, were competing with professional football player Phil McConkey, an abortion opponent, for the GOP nomination. The winner will face Democrat Marguerite Chandler in November for the House seat held by James Courter, the defeated GOP candidate for governor in 1989.

THE LEADING candidates in the Democratic primary to fill the House seat formerly held by Democrat James Florio, the winner of last year's campaign for governor of New Jersey, were Linda Bowker, president of the state chapter of the National Organization for Women and Camden County official Robert E. Andrews. Gloucester County official Daniel Mangini had no opposition in the Republican primary.

The November lineups were virtually assured for Senate races in New Jersey and New Mexico, where Democrat Bill Bradley and Republican Pete Domenici were heavily favored for re-election. In South Dakota, Republican Larry Pressler will be challenged in November by Democrat Ted Muenster. In Mississippi, no Democrat filed to oppose Republican Sen. Thad Cochran.

The California governor's office was the biggest prize in the 1990 elections. The Democrats control the legislature and if they can recapture the governor's office, the party will have the political advantage next year when lines are redrawn for the state's congressional districts. With 45 seats, California already has the largest House delegation and the state is expected to gain six more as a result of the 1990 Census.

The Republicans recruited Wilson, re-elected to the Senate in 1988, to run for governor. Van de Kamp, the state attorney general, was the early favorite for the Democratic nomination. But Feinstein, the former mayor of San Francisco, surprised many observers

A SUPPORTER OF the death penalty, Feinstein contrasted her position with Van de Kamp's opposition to capital punishment. She also suggested that as a woman, her pro-choice credentials were stronger than Van de Kamp's.

Van de Kamp said he personally opposes capital punishment but would uphold California's death penalty, and countered with a commercial saying he had put or kept 277 murderers on death row. His most recent ad features an endorsement from consumer advocate Ralph Nader, who labels Feinstein "a Republican in Democratic clothing."

While the Democratic contenders were spending millions on commercials in the primary, Wilson has raised close to $10 million while facing only token primary opposition.

Also on the ballot in California were two Republican-backed propositions designed to dilute the legislature's power of redistricting. One would require any plan to pass by a two-thirds vote of both chambers, the other would remove it entirely and place it in the hands of a non-partisan commission.

In North Carolina, Gantt, bidding to become the first black Democrat ever elected to the Senate, and Easley have spent more time attacking Helms than each other.

And now the Republican senator has responded with an animated television ad that shows a wooded scene with flowers blooming and birds chirping. It then shifts to a bullet-riddled photo of Helms nailed to a tree and closes with a blob of mud hitting the picture. A voice then says, "Isn't it nice that Mike Easley and Harvey Gantt aren't running negative campaigns?"

Jesse L. Coleman, M.D.

WEATHER SUMMARY

At least two persons dead as tornadoes hit Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A band of tornadoes cut through Indiana on Saturday night, killing at least two people and injuring dozens of others, authorities said.

Elsewhere, thunderstorms swept across Wisconsin and Minnesota, knocking down trees, destroying barns and damaging homes.

At least six tornadoes were reported in the Indiana counties of Pike, Martin, Vermillion, Greene, Parke, Daviess, Hendricks, Boone, Lawrence and Montgomery counties.

One woman was killed in Putnam County when her mobile home overturned, said Hendricks County sheriff's Lt. Steve Golden.

The woman, whose name was not immediately released, was dead on arrival at Hendricks Memorial Hospital in Danville, said hospital Vice President John Komenda.

Komenda said many people had been brought to the hospital for treatment of injuries, but he did not know how many.

"It's just been pretty hectic here all night," he said.

Bedford Police Chief Dean Duncan said one person was killed and several were injured when a tornado struck the Pride Estates mobile home park southeast of Bedford.

Dozens of people were taken to the Dunn Memorial Hospital after a tornado whipped through that area shortly after 8 p.m., a hospital spokeswoman Evelyn Williams said.

Indiana State Police in Lafayette reported extensive damage in Montgomery County, where a tornado cut through an area northeast of Crawfordsville to the southwestern tip of Clinton County.

"We've got homes down and people we're trying to locate," a Montgomery County sheriff's dispatcher said.

"Houses are downs. Vehicles are overturned. Powerlines down," state police Cpl. Dave Murray said of Montgomery County. "Some houses are reported down."

Murray said authorities were going door-to-door along Indiana 47 to check on residents after at least two tornadoes touched down in Boone County near the highway.

In Wisconsin, several thousand residents of Fond du Lac, an eastern Wisconsin city of 36,000, were temporarily without electric service as tree limbs tore down transmission lines. No serious injuries were reported.

Vern Myren, who lives in Eau Claire County in northwestern Wisconsin, said wind uprooted trees and blew down a garage, causing an adjoining garage to collapse.

Thunderstorms with wind gusts up to 70 mph and hail moved across parts of southeastern and east-central Minnesota.

A tornado damaged four farms Saturday one mile east of Goodhue in southeastern Minnesota, but no injuries were reported, authorities said.

High in lower 90s expected

Staff Report

The National Weather Service in Midland forecasts sunny skies today with a high in the low 90s. Winds will be from the southeast at 5 to 15 mph.

Tonight is expected to be fair with a low in the mid-60s and a less than 20 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Monday's will be fair with a high in the mid-90s.

Saturday's high was 89 compared with the record high of 100 in 1977. Overnight low 67. Today's record low was 47 in 1947.

STATE

Seven counties in Northeast Texas were under a tornado watch late Saturday afternoon. The National Weather Service reported a line of thunderstorms was moving toward the region from Southeast Oklahoma, bringing possible heavy rains, strong gusty surface winds, dangerous lightning and perhaps some large hail.

The tornado watch extended from extreme Northeast Texas over much of Arkansas and across a small part of Northwest and North Central Louisiana.

The service also warned of a risk of severe thunderstorms southeast of a Coleman-Stephenville-Kaufman-Clarksville line, including the Tyler-Longview area.

Flood warnings were issued for the Sabine and Neches rivers in East Texas and the Trinity and Brazos rivers in the north.

NATION

An unseasonably strong storm raced across the central United States Saturday, dumping heavy rains and spinning off high winds over Iowa and Minnesota.

Thunderstorms boomed from Minnesota through the Mississippi Valley into northeast Texas.

Minnesota and Iowa had the worst storms. Gusts of up to 80 mph were clocked at Estherville in northwest Iowa, and 67 mph in Des Moines in the central part of the state. High winds downed trees and power lines in Marshalltown, about 50 mph northeast of Des Moines.

The Associated Press contributed to this story.

STORM: Many victims shaken by experience

(From 1A)

Fla., was in stable condition, suffering from fractured ribs, back strain and multiple bruises, Ms. Burton said.

She said most people who came to her hospital in the tornado's aftermath had only minor injuries such as cuts, abrasions and bruises.

"We were getting the doctors to the people who were bleeding," Ms. Burton said. "Most of them were just dirty and scared.

"Some people showed up just for shelter. The weren't necessarily treated. They just needed a little TLC."

Those treated and released from the hospital were: Ramon Martinez, 45, of Monahans; Jeanette Mardell, 45, of Iraan; and Marilyn McKenzie of Bakersfield.

Also treated and released were Tammy Johnson, 24, of McCamey; Charles Comm, 46, of Iraan; Sharon Lee, 27, of Iraan; Pasqual Zuniga, 52, of McCamey; and Gionizy Myslikowski, 29, of St. Petersburg.

A Pecos County General Hospital spokesperson said two people injured in the storm were admitted there Friday night and were released today. They were identified as James Adams, 66, and Judy Davis, 51, of Baton Rouge, La.

"I believe they were in a pick-up truck, and I believe it rolled several times," the spokesperson said. She said one other person was treated an released.

She said several people were treated for minor cuts and bruises in the General Hospital emergency room.

Two DPS troopers were slightly injured while they were traveling on FM 305 and the tornado picked up their car and blew out the windows, DPS officials said. Jess Malone and David Martinez received only minor cuts, officials said.

McCamey City Judge Jimmy McClure said 14 homes were destroyed by the tornado and about 30 people displaced. McClure said nine or 10 of the destroyed homes were trailer houses.

Area residents and McCamey officials said virtually all of the people displaced by the storm had found lodging with family or friends in the community.

McClure said he could not put a dollar value on the property lost and damaged in the storm.

Mrs. McKenzie, 56, and her husband, Roy Neal, got a hard meteorological lesson of their own Friday when the tornado ground their two-story rural home into a pile of domestic rubble.

The McKenzies, who received only minor injuries in the weather melee, spent Saturday searching for belongs on their ranch property about 10 miles south of McCamey near Farm-to-Market Road 305.

"I wish I was an artist," Mrs. McKenzie said. "I would have loved to have painted a picture of it before it hit."

The couple barely had time to dive for cover in a hallway when the twister descended on their home like a swirling jackhammer, she said. The two desperately clung to each other for what seemed like an eternity, she said.

"The bedroom door flew off and hit me in the back," Mrs. McKenzie said. "The tornado would take stuff off and throw stuff back on. It was trying to pull us apart."

She said the twister hovered above the house for what seemed like 8 to 10 minutes.

"It stayed so long, we thought it would never go away," Mrs. McKenzie said.

"When it was gone, my husband looked up and said, 'Honey, we don't have anything left.' I told him he still had me."

However, four horses, about 40 goats, a dog, a number of cats and an unknown number of cattle were killed, she said. The couple also lost three cars and two barns, she said.

Meanwhile, her husband, a rancher, stood grinning in defiance of the devastation around him.

"I'm in good shape," McKenzie said. "I'm unhappy, but there's no reason for me to be sad. I'm alive."

Mrs. Foster, 43, and three relatives hid under a sofa in the den while the tornado violently gnawed away at the house.

The four — including Mrs. Foster's 49-year-old husband, J.C., 17-year-old daughter, Kelli, and 4-year-old grandson, Justin Sharp — escaped with only scratches, she said.

"God was looking out for us," said Mrs. Foster, pointing to a barely visible nick on her left cheek. "We never saw the tornado. The house just exploded."

The family had to crawl out of the wrecked home through holes in the rubble, Mrs. Foster said.

SUMMIT: Session described as 'relaxing day,' 'very instructive'

Gorbachev to settle the cases of a number of Soviet Jewish refuseniks; Gorbachev agreed to work on those cases, Fitzwater said.

Fitzwater said Bush also called once again on Gorbachev to allow direct flights to Israel for Jewish emigrants, but got no commitments from his guest.

It was the third day of a four-day summit between Bush and Gorbachev that has emphasized the positive in superpower relations as communism crumbles in Eastern Europe and democratic and tumultuous economic reforms sweep the Soviet Union.

With Bush declaring "the Cold war must end," the two men on Friday signed a series of arms control, commercial, and cultural agreements, most notably a long-expected joint declaration recording major progress toward a treaty that would slash superpower strategic weapons by 30 percent over seven years.

Bush also relented and signed a new U.S.-Soviet trade treaty despite his concerns over Lithuania. The agreement will not be sent to Capitol Hill for approval until the Soviet parliament enacts legislation making permanent startling reforms of emigration policies for Soviet Jews.

Fitzwater said that when the emigration law is enacted, Bush will urge the U.S. Congress to approve the trade agreement, seen as mostly a symbolic backing of Gorbachev's economic reforms.

Even then, Fitzwater said, the president feels it will be "difficult" to win approval because of congressional concern about Lithuania.

Bush invited Gorbachev to Camp David for an open-ended talk on the issues they face in a post-Cold War world.

Bush and Gorbachev began their day on the sun-drenched White House South Lawn, boarding a green-and-white presidential helicopter for a majestic 30-minute flight to Camp David that took them over the white marble monuments of the capital and into the Maryland countryside.

A second Marine helicopter carrying their wives Barbara and Raisa took off from the White House after the two presidents had left but it arrived at Camp David ahead of them because Bush and Gorbachev let the ladies land first.

Mrs. Bush and Mrs. Gorbachev have evidently struck up a friendly relationship since their joint appearance before graduates of Wellesley College near Boston on Friday.

Cancer claims actor Sir Rex Harrison, 82

NEW YORK (AP) — Oscar-winning actor Sir Rex Harrison, who taught the king's English in "My Fair Lady" and talked to animals as the lovable Dr. Dolittle during a 66-year career, died in his sleep Saturday. He was 82.

The actor, a stage and screen star in the United States and his native England, died of pancreatic cancer at his Manhattan home, said his attorney, Harold Schiff.

"To watch him and to work with him was a joyful experience," said Julie Andrews, who played Eliza Doolittle to Harrison's professor Henry Higgins in "My Fair Lady" on Broadway for three years.

"I doubt there was anyone before like him. ... The theater has lost an extraordinary one-of-a-kind."

Harrison won a Tony award for his Broadway portrayal of Higgins and earned a best-actor Academy Award for his screen version opposite Audrey Hepburn.

"He was the essence of a great actor, a fabulous technician. ... He had a wonderful sense of humor, fabulous diction," Miss Hepburn said. "He was the personification of a superb actor, the quintessential actor.

"He was always thoughtful and helpful and fun, and I really adored every minute I worked with him."

Harrison had been ill only a short time and did not know he had cancer, Schiff said. Doctors told him he was suffering from gall bladder trouble, the lawyer said.

"He just thought he was not well. He didn't want to know," Schiff said.

Harrison, who debuted on Broadway in 1936, died three weeks after his latest appearance there May 11. He played Lord Porteous in W. Somerset Maugham's 1920s comedy "The Circle," which is vying for "best revival" honors at Sunday night's Tony Awards ceremony.

"He died with his boots on, no question about it," said "Circle" producer Elliot Martin, referring to Harrison's decision not to retire.

"He wanted to be on the stage. That was it. That was his life," Schiff said. "He didn't care about ... retiring, he didn't care about anything else but the theater."

"Mr. Harrison is perfect in the part — crisp, lean, complacent and condescending until at last a real flare of human emotions burns the egotism away," New York Times critic Brooks Atkinson wrote.

The musical version of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" opened on Broadway in 1956, with the film coming out eight years later. Harrison reprised his role in a 1981 Broadway revival that earned him $50,000 a week.

Harrison, who characterized his vocal range as "one and a half notes," half-spoke, half-crooned "I've grown accustomed to her face" hundreds of times as the stuffy language professor who falls in love with a Cockney waif after teaching her how to overcome her lower-class accent and speak proper English.

"I could have played Higgins for 20 years, but I wanted to do other things," Harrison said in 1985. "And I did, in fact."

Among them was his role as Dr. Dolittle, the fanciful jungle gentleman who conversed with wildlife. The film introduced Harrison to a new generation of young moviegoers.

"He had the best sense of humor of almost any actor I have ever known," said his agent, Lawrence Evans, who worked with Harrison for more than 40 years. "He was a lovable, irascible man."

Harrison was born in Huyton, near Liverpool, on March 5, 1908, and joined the Liverpool Repertory Theatre in 1924.

In addition to his awards for "My Fair Lady," Harrison won a Tony for his portrayal of Henry VIII in Maxwell Anderson's "Anne of the Thousand Days" and a special American Theater Award for his overall stage achievements.

He was knighted last year by Queen Elizabeth II and described the event as "a marvelous moment."

Harrison, dubbed "Sexy Rexy" by the late columnist Walter Winchell, was married six times. He is survived by his wife, Mercia Tinker; a sister; two sons by previous marriages; and several grandchildren.

He first married in 1934 to Collette Thomas, a French teacher. He married actress Lili Palmer in 1943 and she accompanied him as he extended his career to the United States.

In 1957, Harrison married actress Kay Kendall, who died of leukemia in 1959. Rattigan said of those times: "I realized Rex's great courage. He made the last two years of Kay's life the best years."

Years later, Harrison starred in Rattigan's "In Praise of Love," the story of a man whose wife is dying of an incurable disease and is forbidden by doctors from telling her.

Harrison married English actress Rachel Roberts in 1962. He then married Elizabeth Harris, and then Miss Tinker.

The funeral will be private, but there will be a public memorial service June 18 at the Little Church Around the Corner in Manhattan. Harrison requested that the service feature jazz music, Schiff said.

In lieu of flowers, the family asked instead for contributions to establish a Rex Harrison Scholarship in Drama at Boston University and to benefit collections at the school and at the Actor's Fund in Englewood, N.J., or the Little Church Around the Corner.

context for an energy policy. Without a priority for both goals, the energy future of the state is bleak." Boulter said he was concerned about the continuing squeeze-out of small producers and royalty owners by pipelines and major oil companies.

He noted that if he were elected to the TRC, he would urge greater involvement by the TRC in the formation of national energy policy.

Boulter was honored by NARO in 1985 for his role in establishing a national energy security policy.

at the Hubbard Museum at Ruidoso Downs racetrack. Hubbard also owns the racetrack.

"He wants it to become an important event on the national art calendar," said Julian Reed, spokesperson for the Hubbard Museum.

The International panel of judges who selected the finalists included Tair Salakhov, first secretary of the Union of Artists of the Soviet Union; Fred A. Myers, director of the Thomas Gilcrease Institute of American History and Art in Tulsa, Okla.; Nina Zucker, formerly director of the Arts Council for the United Nations; Michael Duty, director of the Eiteljorg Museum, Indianopolis, Ind.; and Mark Flieschner, a collector and chief executive officer of the Franchise Finance Corp. of America.

The original plan was to narrow the field to five finalists.

"Since the five judges picked their top three and first, second and third were ranked by points, there were two entries with enough points to be the fifth finalist," says Becky Tillson, spokesperson for the Hubbard Museum. "And so they chose to go ahead and have six finalists from which Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard chose the winner."

Child with AIDS receives $28.7 million

PHOENIX (AP) — A jury awarded $28.7 million to a 5-year-old boy, who contracted AIDS through an unauthorized blood transfusion, and his parents, in what his attorney believes is the largest award of its kind.

The Maricopa County Jury on Friday awarded $26.7 million to Alex Edwards and $1 million to each of his parents, Roy and Pat Edwards.

The jury on May 23 found Dr. Abraham Kuruvilla and the Neonatology Associates Ltd. liable for Alex's AIDS infection through the unauthorized transfusion shortly after the boy's birth in 1985.

Duane Olson, the Phoenix attorney representing Kuruvilla and the clinic, said he would file an appeal immediately. Olson said the award was "worse than I ever could have dreamed."

Alex can neither walk nor talk and needs 24-hour care due to damage to his nervous system from the disease.

Jurors said they didn't know how long the boy would live but that they wanted to make sure he had enough to provide for his needs.

'We're just real happy and pleased that the jury worked together and came up with a reasonable sum.'

— Roy Edwards, Father of victim

"What's going to happen if he lives to be 30 or 40?" asked jury foreman Ray Howell. Alex's parents "won't have the money to care for him," he said.

"We're just real happy and pleased that the jury worked together and came up with a reasonable sum," Roy Edwards told reporters.

The boy, dressed in blue jeans and a yellow T-shirt, was cuddled by his mother as jurors announced their decision. Holding her son on her lap, she sometimes kissed his forehead and stroked his blond hair.

Kuruvilla was not present.

Judge David R. Cole had dismissed two other defendants — Blood Systems Inc., the parent company of the firm that provided the blood, and Samaritan Health Services, which runs the hospital where the transfusion was administered — after a settlement was reached in February.

Alex was born suffering from severe respiratory problems due to fluid in the lungs when he was transferred to Good Samaritan Hospital, where Kuruvilla ordered the transfusion. That corrected the fluid-related problems, Olson said during the trial.

Olson argued that Mrs. Edwards signed a consent form allowing doctors to treat her son as they saw fit.

But the Edwards' attorney, R. Douglas Dalton, argued that not enough was known about the risk of AIDS by transfusion and that Kuruvilla should have received consent from the boy's parents for the procedure.

The boy's father testified that the couple expressed concerns about AIDS and offered to donate their own blood when the boy was given a previous transfusion.

The boy tested positive for the AIDS virus in 1987.

Dalton said the largest previous jury award he was aware of for an AIDS-related case was $12 million awarded March 8 in Columbus, Ohio, to an 8-year-old girl who received the AIDS virus in a 1985 blood transfusion.

Rock star, wife abandon yacht

MIAMI (AP) — The rock band Foreigner's drummer and his wife jumped into the Atlantic Ocean as fire engulfed their yacht Saturday, and were rescued after a Coast Guard jet spotted them and dropped a raft into the water.

The 43-foot yacht Charisma III exploded and sank as Dennis Elliott and his wife, Iona, were picked up in good condition by the crew of a nearby freighter, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Terry Johns.

The couple, who were alone on the yacht, said they noticed the fire in the engine room around 3 p.m. Saturday during a trip from the Bahamas to Fort Lauderdale, when they were about 45 miles east of the Florida coast.

Naked intruder killed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A homeowner shot and killed a naked man who charged through a glass door during a neighborhood rampage, police said Saturday.

The man earlier smashed his head or hand through windows at three other homes late Friday, terrorizing residents but not harming them.

There was no explanation for the bizarre assault on the San Fernando Valley neighborhood. Police were awaiting the results of coroner's tests to determine if the man was on drugs, said Detective Rick Swanston.

The dead man was identified as Gene Brian Hollaway, 23, who lived about a mile away from the neighborhood where he was killed and did not know any of the people who were terrorized, Swanston said.

The rampage ended when homeowner James Bruner, 38, shot Hollaway as he reportedly advanced toward Bruner's wife, Elizabeth, after breaking into their house.

Serial killer feared

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bodies of the women keep turning up. Two in one weekend. Nine over the past 14 months.

Eight were white. Seven were known prostitutes.

Three young women were suffocated within five days of each other last week, their bodies found in suburban Virginia.

Every new murder renews the question: Is there a serial killer on the loose targeting prostitutes who work several blocks from the White House?

SUMMIT SPOTLIGHT

Minnesota spiffs up for Gorbachev visit

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Red ribbons were tied to trees in front of the governor's mansion and neighbors mowed their lawns Saturday as Minnesotans made last-minute preparations for Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's historic visit.

Tom Knutson, part of a five-member crew installing a snow-fence barricade across the street from the mansion, said he didn't mind working overtime to prepare for Sunday's event.

"It's great; it's once in a lifetime," said Knutson, 52.

The nearly 2,000 feet of fence will be used to confine reporters and photographers to an area across the street from the mansion, where Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, are to dine with Gov. Rudy Perpich and his wife, Lola, during his 6½-hour stopover in Minnesota.

Inside the mansion, tables were set and flower arrangements were in place.

"I'm very confident that when he leaves here, he'll leave feeling good about Minnesota, and he'll probably have a warmer welcome than he's received anywhere in the world," Perpich boasted.

According to the unofficial itinerary, the Soviets are to arrive at 1:25 p.m. today from the summit conference with President Bush in Washington.

After landing at Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport, they are to travel by motorcade to the mansion, eat lunch and take a limousine tour of the Twin Cities.

Perpich said the luncheon guest list, which is expected to total about 50, was still unfinished late Saturday.

Lola Perpich said lobbying for luncheon invitations had been intense. "It's very difficult, because there are so many people that should be coming," she said.

Both sides of the route from the mansion to the state Capitol, which is expected to be on the tour, were lined Saturday with orange- and white-striped highway barricades laced with yellow rope to hold back the thousands of people expected to line the street.

A yellow-and-black highway sign saying "Welcome" in Russian and English hung over Interstate 94 between St. Paul and Minneapolis, where Gorbachev is to meet with 145 business and agricultural leaders while Mrs. Gorbachev visits a Minneapolis family.

The family, Steve and Karen Watson and their four children, had been assigned a public relations person, Jeff Remsik, to coordinate press access to them. He said the Watdons did some media interviews and rehearsed for the visit Saturday morning but followed a regular routine the rest of the day.

"We've tried to help them lead as normal a life as possible," he said.

He said Mrs. Watson wanted some time to bake something special to serve Mrs. Gorbachev with tea.

Both Gorbachev and his wife are to tour a dairy farm in Farmington about 20 miles south of Minneapolis and Control Data Corp. in suburban Bloomington. The Soviets are to depart for San Francisco at 8 p.m., according to the unofficial itinerary.

Americans cashing in on summitry

By Jill Lawrence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whether it's making money, spreading democracy or boosting morale, Americans want to do it with the Soviet Union — and they weren't shy about exploiting the summit to say so.

Fax machines whirred throughout summit week with announcements from investors and philanthropists and educators eager to publicize their new partnerships.

"Everybody is trying to use the summit to promote their projects. This is obvious. This is capitalism," says Edward Lozansky, an emigre physicist setting up a Soviet-American University in Moscow and the United States.

One company that lucked out was Radisson Hotels International. The Minneapolis firm has signed an agreement with Intourist, the Soviet travel agency, to operate the first American-managed hotel and business center in the Soviet Union.

Long before the summit was announced, Radisson and Intourist scheduled the signing for May 22. "It worked out very nicely for us. It couldn't have been nicer," said Jeurgen Bartels, president of Carlson Hospitality Group Inc., Radisson's parent company.

Radisson billed the project as "a historic joint venture" and said the 165-office business center would offer the first commercial direct-dial telephones and fax machines in Moscow.

Two unidentified Palo Alto, Calif., residents hold up a sign on the Stanford University campus Friday asking for tickets to see Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev Monday at Stanford. Seven thousand students, faculty and staff have been randomly selected by computer to greet the president during his two-hour visit to the school.

AP Laserphoto

The new marble building, designed by a team of Soviets and Yugoslavians, also has 430 hotel rooms. It was nearly complete when Radisson came on board and is expected to open in December.

Lozansky's Soviet-American University was formally announced at a summit-week reception. He said the event netted a raft of business executives offering money and a top Soviet scientist anxious to discuss joint research projects.

Roland Schmitt, president of Rensselear Polytechnic Institute in Troy, N.Y., acknowledged that "the idea is in a very early and very nascent stage."

Lozansky admits the summit sped up the announcement "a little bit" but says he has enough money to launch the private university — the first in the Soviet Union — this fall.

He said five Soviet professors will teach at U.S. universities and five American professors will lecture up to 75 Soviet students at Moscow State University. Eventually the school will grant its own degrees, he said, and next year maybe there will be enough money for a separate building in Moscow.

Lozansky, who was forced out of his job and his country for publicly criticizing the government, said educating Soviet students American-style is a way to nudge the Soviet Union toward democracy. "We want to pull them further and maybe a little bit faster," he says.

Among the other U.S.-Soviet ventures that surfaced during summit week were the American edition of Commersant, the first Soviet business weekly; Operation USA-USSR, a global relief organization that will send teams of U.S. and Soviet doctors to work in developing countries; and the Heart-to-Heart Association, a partnership between Soviet television and TV preacher Robert Schuller's Crystal Cathedral Ministries.

Texas executive has meeting with Soviet president

RICHARDSON, Texas (AP) — An executive of a Richardson computer company will meet with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev today in Minneapolis, the company said.

Officials of Convex Computer Corp. say board chairman Robert Paluck is among a handful of U.S. computer industry leaders invited to discuss a new era of technological cooperation with the Soviet Union.

A Convex spokeswoman says Paluck will attend a 7 p.m. reception at Control Data Corp. in Minneapolis. Spokeswoman Alison Peoples says Paluck will be in the receiving line for Gorbachev, who is in this country for summit talks with President Bush.

Convex builds high-performance supercomputers for scientific, engineering and other technical users.

Soviets not sold on Gorbachev's domestic policies

By Andrew Katell

MOSCOW (AP) — Many Soviets agreed Saturday that President Mikhail S. Gorbachev deserved praise for his foreign policy achievements at the summit, but some said he didn't deserve humanitarian awards and doubted his trip would improve their lives.

"Shame! Again he has sold out all Russia!" one woman shouted to a sidewalk crowd around her on Pushkin Square, a kind of Moscow "speaker's corner" a few blocks from the Kremlin.

She was referring to the five American humanitarian awards Gorbachev received Friday in Washington for striving for peace and freedom.

Her comments reflected the contrast between Gorbachev's wild popularity abroad — where he is treated like a hero for loosening up Soviet society and helping bring peace and democracy to many parts of the world — and his unpopularity at home, where he is accused of ruining the economy and stifling freedom.

The woman said she was from Lvov in the Ukraine but refused to give her name "for a variety of reasons." Many Soviets believe Gorbachev's glasnost, or openness, campaign is limited and they are fearful of being quoted in the foreign press.

A man in the crowd explained many people's mixed views of Gorbachev's foreign trips.

"He did much on the international arena, he earned points. But in domestic policy, he tramples on progressives," said Anatoly Bogudinov, 40.

If the awards were presented for Gorbachev's humanitarian actions, Bogudinov said, the sponsors forgot about the basics.

"The least we want is sausage, but he doesn't give it to us, and you ask whether he deserves these awards!"

Bogudinov asked a question of his own: What would the American people do if they had a president like Gorbachev?

"If Bush did everything on the international scene but nothing for his own country, the people wouldn't support him," Bogudinov said.

Even criticizing the country's president, he noted, has been outlawed. The Supreme Soviet legislature passed a bill last month imposing a fine and jail sentence for insulting the Soviet president.

Diagonally across Pushkin Square, at McDonald's, Soviets sinking their teeth into America's classic family fare were generally more positive about their leader and his policies.

"We're very glad our relations are improving," said Oksana, a 23-year-old housewife eating ice cream on the second floor of the McDonald's.

"We're anxious for improvements in trade and anticipate that friendship with America will bring improvements in our lives," said the woman, who refused to give her last name.

President Bush and Gorbachev Friday approved the outlines of a landmark treaty for the first-ever cuts in long-range nuclear missiles and signed a pact to slash chemical weapons.

The United States, Oksana said, should help the Soviet Union not with handouts but with cooperation, for instance with joint business ventures.

Another customer in the crowded restaurant said the simple fact he was talking to an American reporter was a sign that glasnost was real.

"Five years ago we wouldn't be talking to you," said Sergei, a 28-year-old radioman for the Soviet military who also refused to give his last name.

Watergate figure Haldeman to meet Gorbachev

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — H.R. Haldeman, a former Nixon aide who went to jail because of the Watergate scandal, is among the business and agricultural leaders who will meet with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev today.

Haldeman recently helped the Minneapolis-based Radisson Hotels International chain get approval to start a hotel in Moscow. It will be the first U.S.-managed hotel in the Soviet Union.

Gov. Rudy Perpich's administration said Friday after the guest list of 145 names was made public that Haldeman was not one of the suggested names it submitted to the Soviets but was added by them.

Haldeman was in Moscow last month to take part in a signing ceremony during a meeting of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economic Council. He and former astronaut Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin were representing Americom International Corp.

WEST TEXAS TORNADOES

Recent tornado activity in area nothing unusual

Staff Report

Although tornadoes have lashed paths of destruction recently in West Texas communities like McCamey, Hamlin and Spearman, the rash of violent storms is not unusual for the area, a National Weather Service officials said Saturday.

Meteorological technician Rick Davis of the NWS' Midland office said the number of twisters spawned from the skies this year is no more than in past years.

"It's kind of a normal spring-time situation," Davis said. "There's really nothing unusual about it."

During spring conditions, warm Gulf of Mexico air meets hot, dry desert air in the West Texas area, making conditions ripe for a twister, he said.

"You get kind of a war zone where thunderstorms build," he said.

The Midland-Odessa area is located in the NWS's southwest Texas zone, whose borders are just north of here to as far east as San Angelo, as far south as the Rio Grande and as far west as the Pecos River, Davis said.

There is a 1 percent to 5 percent chance during each year that there will be one tornado per 10,000 square miles in the southwest zone, he said. During the 1980s, there were four severe twisters per 10,000 square miles in that zone, he said.

The chances reduce greatly for any area in Texas west of the Pecos River, he said. In that zone, there is a yearly average of only one tornado per 100,000 square miles, he said.

"There's a very low probability of a tornado happening west of the Pecos," Davis said.

Additional tornado facts compiled from Associated Press files and the National Weather Service:

- May is the most dangerous month for tornadoes in Texas, including the Saragosa storm of 1987, the Lubbock tornado of 1970, the Waco tornado of 1953 and the Goliad twister of 1902.
- Never try to outrun a tornado in a car. At least half the 46 fatalities in the 1979 Wichita Falls tornado were people killed in their cars. Both victims of Friday's storm near McCamey were in vehicles.
- Most tornadoes track southwest to northeast, but their paths can spiral and be erratic.
- The portion of a thunderstorm adjacent to large hail is where tornadoes are most likely to occur.
- Most injuries and deaths in tornadoes result from flying debris.
- Tornadoes can occur in any month, but are more frequent between April and June and between 3 and 6 p.m.
- Less than 2 percent of all tornadoes are classified as violent, with wind speeds of more than 200 mph and a path averaging 26 miles in length.
- Tornadoes travel at an average speed of 30 mph, but can stand still or sprint at 70 mph.
- Tornadoes have killed more than 1,000 Texans this century, an average of about 11 per year.
- The two deadliest twisters in Texas history, in Waco and Goliad, came nearly half a century apart. Each killed 114 people.
- The longest tornado on record traveled 219 miles across Missouri, Illinois and Indiana in March 1925.
- The largest single outbreak of twisters was in April 1974, when 148 storms killed 300 people in 13 states during a two-day period.

Community hit by storm 'taking care of its own'

By David Morris
Staff Writer

McCAMEY — By the time Red Cross and Salvation Army volunteers arrived in the wake of Friday's killer tornado, local residents were already scrambling to provide home-grown disaster relief.

"They were surprised that we weren't in need of shelter and everything," the Rev. Sheldon Johnson said of out-of-town helpers. "Our people took care of their own."

Johnson, who helped set up the Red Cross and Salvation Army command center at his First United Methodist Church, said family members and friends took in virtually all of the 14 families left homeless by the storm.

"By the time the Red Cross and the Salvation Army showed up, everything was taken care of ... except for getting coffee and food for people out in the field," Johnson said.

City Judge Jimmy McClure said local restaurants pitched in to help feed volunteers, ambulance drivers and rescue workers.

Some 200 people volunteered to help with rescue efforts, take in the stranded and the homeless, or contribute food and clothing to affected families, McClure said.

Salvation Army and Red Cross officials in Midland and Odessa could not be reached for comment Saturday night. McClure said about 11 Salvation Army volunteers and nine Red Cross volunteers were sent to McCamey in the wake of the tornado.

Johnson commended McCamey, a community of about 2,400, for an outstanding relief effort.

"I think the situation was assessed and dealt with very quickly and very professionally," he said.

"I think that's just a sign of old West Texas — these are good, strong country people who like to take care of themselves and their own, and that's basically what happened."

Johnson said he housed one man overnight whose truck was overturned by the tornado as he was driving to Odessa.

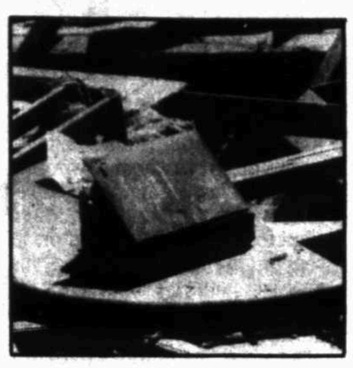
Johnson and Judge McClure put the number of families without homes at 14. Some 30 people lost homes in the storm, they said.

Gail Johnson, a mother of three who lost her mobile home in the storm, said neighbors had been helping with salvage operations all day Saturday and providing generators for those without power.

Family friend Pat High said such behavior is typical in this part of the country.

"This community, when something happens, everybody pulls together," she said. "It's just like one family involved. You don't see that very many places."

Staff writer Michael Kashgarian contributed to this report.



Items were strewn about haphazardly by the destructive force of Friday's tornado. Here, a battered book rests on a coffee table in what was once a family home.

Beverly Shilling/Reporter-Telegram

Crews work to restore services

By David Morris
Staff Writer

McCAMEY — Laundromats and car washes were idle here Saturday as residents continued to conserve water in the aftermath of a tornado which cut off power to the city's water well field, City Judge Jimmy McClure said.

Meanwhile, utility crews worked to restore power and Marathon Oil Co. workers repaired pumpjacks damaged in the storm which were reportedly leaking toxic hydrogen sulfide gas.

Ron Keisler, Marathon Oil Co. regional director, said the leaks never posed a danger to residents or the environment.

"The field is secure, there's not any danger there at all," Keisler said. He said 57 Marathon pumping units in the Iraan area were damaged by the tornado, and that crews had worked through the night to repaired or seal off all the damaged wells.

"These are oil wells — they produce very little gas and the gas associated with them does not contain a lot of hydrogen sulfide," Keisler said.

McClure, meanwhile, was hopeful that water from city wells would begin flowing into town by late Saturday afternoon.

"If West Texas Utilities gets electricity to us this afternoon sometime, we can get some temporary breakers set up" and restore power to the city water pumps, McClure said Saturday.

A county fire department pumper truck was being used to pump water from the city's wells southeast of town to a McCamey storage tank. He added he did not anticipate a need to truck in bottled water for residents to use.

Connie Elliott, a WTU spokesperson, said the tornado cut power to a number of homes and oilfield equipment along Farm-to-Market Road 305 between Iraan and McCamey.

"We have electric lines down everywhere," Ms. Elliott said.

She said WTU crews from San Angelo have been working nonstop to restore power.

Electricity to oilfield operations should have been restored by late Saturday, while power should be restored to the entire area by today, Ms. Elliott said.

McClure said he was not sure what would be done to dispose of the hundreds of head of livestock killed in the twister. He said area ranchers were being contacted to determine the best method for disposal.

"That's going to be a problem, because I understand that some of them are already swelling and starting to deteriorate," he said.

He said some ranchers spent Saturday morning searching for and destroying livestock — including sheep, goats, horses and cattle — severely injured in the storm.

A Southwestern Bell repair division spokesperson said company employees had been "working overtime" to restore phone service to affected areas in Upton County.

"We had a lot of people out of order," the spokesperson said, but she did not know how long it would take to completely restore phone service.

Staff writer Brian Pearson contributed to this report.

Texans lose much to tornadoes

Liberian rebels advance on capital

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Rebel troops seeking to topple the government of President Samuel Doe advanced on the capital Saturday and appeared to be meeting little resistance from government forces.

Correspondents who drove the 35 miles from Monrovia to the airport, where the rebel advance had stalled earlier, said the only government troops in sight were 20 men manning a roadblock between the airport and the capital.

The rebels were seen fanning out, traveling off the roads straight toward the capital. By avoiding the winding roads and marching through the bush, the insurgents would cut the distance from the airport to 25 miles.

The only significant military presence in the capital was around Doe's executive mansion, where 2,000 Israeli-trained troops of his elite Special Anti-Terrorist Unit were stationed.

No fighting was reported Saturday, and it was not immediately clear what happened to the remainder of Doe's 5,300-man army.

A diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the latest developments could mean that many soldiers had deserted, or that the fighting had stopped because a deal between Doe and the rebels was being worked out.

Hundreds of Doe's mainly untrained, ill-equipped and poorly paid troops are known to have deserted during the 6-month-old civil war, according to Liberian military and Western diplomatic sources.

The government again broadcast orders for troops who had returned from battle to assemble at the Barclay Training Center, the main barracks in Monrovia. A similar call last week mustered only 70 soldiers, diplomats said.

In any case, residents of the city of 500,000 braced for a heavy battle. Rice, a staple, was in short supply, many market shelves were empty, power outages were frequent and there had been no running water for two days.

More than 1,000 people have been killed since the fighting broke out in December, most of them civilians slain by government troops.

Workers were seen topping the walls of the Italian Embassy compound with barbed wire, while the French Embassy was reinforcing its iron-grid gates with sheets of heavy metal.

The rebels — led by Charles Taylor, the head of the rebel National Patriotic Front of Liberia — accuse the Doe administration of corruption, economic mismanagement and human rights abuses.

The rebels claim up to 10,000 people belong to their insurgency. Diplomats here put the number at about 4,000.

In a last-ditch effort to end the fighting, Doe said Friday that he would not seek re-election in next year's presidential voting. He asked the United States, which has sent warships toward the Liberian coast to evacuate U.S. citizens, to help negotiate an end to the fighting.

The rebels rejected Doe's concessions but offered their own terms: If the president leaves the country the rebels would work with the Liberian government and National Assembly to set up an interim government.

Rebel troops already control the country's main port of Buchanan, 60 miles southeast of the capital, and have been advancing from Buchanan and Kakata, 35 miles to the northeast. Before Saturday's advance began, the main rebel column had encamped near the international airport.

U.S. Navy warships, meanwhile, were en route from the Mediterranean to Liberia to evacuate Americans if necessary, Pentagon sources said. U.S. military officials said 2,100 Marines were aboard the four ships of the 6th Fleet, which were expected to arrive off Liberia this weekend.

"These units should be in place in the international waters off Liberia shortly," Pentagon spokeswoman Maj. Shelley Rogers said Saturday night.

U.S. Embassy officials said about 2,000 U.S. citizens, including 110 embassy personnel, and many missionaries and people of Liberian origin, remain in the country. Last month, there were about 6,000 U.S. citizens in Liberia but most chose to leave as the fighting worsened.

The British frigate Andromeda and a tanker arrived off the Liberian coast Friday to help in any evacuation, said the Ministry of Defense in London.

British officials said 220 British citizens remain, plus 88 British passport-holders and 189 citizens for whom the British have responsibility.

Spain honors Sephardic Jews with noted prize

OVIEDO, Spain (AP) — The world's Sephardic Jewish communities, scattered by their expulsion from Spain almost 500 years ago, have received the 1990 Prince of Asturias Cooperation Prize.

The prize is awarded annually to a person, group or institution that makes an outstanding contribution to peace, solidarity or progress among men or to the struggle against poverty, illness or ignorance or to the protection of world heritage.

Asturias regional government head Pedro de Silva, who led the prize jury, praised the Sephardi for their conservation of their links to Spain over the centuries.

"Far from their homeland, Sephardic Jews converted themselves into an itinerant Spain, and with incomparable fervor conserved the cultural and linguistic legacy of their ancestors," de Silva said in announcing the award Friday.

"This prize seeks to contribute to an already initiated process of restoring harmony after five centuries of separation. We call on them to reinforce their links to their land of origin and we throw open the doors of their ancient country to them," de Silva said, reading the jury citation.

The prize consists of $48,000 and a sculpture by Spanish artist Joan Miro. The foundation giving the award is named for the heir to the Spanish throne.

An estimated 2.5 million of the world's 16 million Jews are Sephardic — descendants of the estimated 250,000 Jews who fled Spain in 1492 after Queen Isabella offered them an alternative of converting to Christianity, leaving the country or being killed.

Mandela says he's fine after having cyst removed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Nelson Mandela announced Saturday he had a benign cyst removed from his bladder but expected to leave this week on a 13-nation tour to fight apartheid.

His news conference came after five days of speculation on his true condition. Officials at the Park Lane Clinic in Johannesburg had said he underwent a minor operation there Monday, but they refused to provide any details.

"He is a very fit young man for his age," said the 71-year-old black leader's doctor, Gus Gecelter, Saturday.

The African National Congress leader was admitted to the clinic May 27 for what ANC officials described as a routine physical examination. Aside from the announcement he had undergone a minor operation Monday, no other details were provided until Saturday by doctors, his family, or ANC representatives.

Mandela, though looking at bit tired at the news conference that day, "I feel on top of the world, and I'm looking forward to the trip with eagerness."

Gecelter, Mandela's doctor since 1985, confirmed at the news conference the cyst on Mandela's bladder was benign.

Mandela said he was eager to begin his six-week, 13-nation tour to tell the world no significant changes have been made in South Africa's apartheid system of racial separation.

President F.W. de Klerk, who freed Mandela from prison in February and launched other reforms, has been arguing that other nations should lift sanctions on South Africa because of the changes it is making.

A pair of Beijing motorcycle policemen patrol around Beijing's Tiananmen Square Saturday afternoon. Security in China's capital city has been stepped up because of the approaching first anniversary of the violent crackdown on the pro-democracy movement.

Force fails to deter lone Chinese man

BEIJING (AP) — Truckloads of soldiers roared through Tiananmen Square Sunday in a show of force to head off any demonstrations marking last year's June 3-4 army attack on student pro-democracy protesters.

Despite heavy security at the square and elsewhere in Beijing, a man tried to unfurl a protest poster near Tiananmen but police immediately dragged him off, witnesses said.

On Saturday, sources in Shanghai said Wang Ruowang, a leading 71-year-old writer who participated in last year's protests, was arrested in September. He has not been seen in public since last summer.

In Beijing, one student was seen Saturday wearing a T-shirt emblazoned with the pro-democracy movement's V-for-victory symbol. But there were no other signs outwardly marking the anniversary that day.

"The Chinese are very practical. They're not going to do anything that clearly will fail," said a student at Beijing Normal University, which was one of the protest centers.

Security guards patrolled Beijing campuses, and armed sentries were posted at a major intersection next to the main foreign residential compound in Beijing Saturday.

The government warned foreign radio stations against broadcasting a taped program made by exiled Chinese dissidents. The dissidents had planned to broadcast from a ship off China's coast, but they abandoned the project when Taiwan refused to allow the ship to load its transmitter and Japan wouldn't allow the boat into Japanese ports.

The protester Sunday approached Canadian Broadcasting Corp. journalists as they stood beneath Tiananmen Gate just north of the square, where the protesters had their headquarters last year. The man wore ordinary workers' clothes and appeared to be in his 50s, the journalists said.

He unrolled a yellow poster for the journalists to see. But they were able to read only the opening words: "To all foreign journalists: we have invented a new philosophy ..." when police grabbed him and the poster, the reporters said.

"Rise up!" the man shouted to bystanders as police hauled him into one of their many posts on the edge of the vast square.

Twelve trucks of soldiers, each holding about 40, drove through the square in the early morning in a show of force.

More than 100 soldiers practiced drills with riot sticks, truncheons and shields in front of the history museum on one side of the square, where soldiers have been quartered since May 1989.

The square, where last year's protesters had their headquarters, was closed to the public, but dozens of official buses, vans and cars were parked on it.

Security around the square was unusually tight, with dozens of police vehicles parked on the edges and paramilitary police patrolling in pairs. A shiny new water cannon was parked on one side.

On Saturday, authorities turned the square into a carnival ground for selected grammar school children.

Filipino troops enter Communist areas

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Hundreds of Filipino troops drove through Communist-held neighborhoods near a U.S. military base Saturday in a show of force after U.S. troops were restricted to the garrison for security reasons.

The military also warned foreign aid workers to watch for terrorism. Five days ago, guerrillas suspected of belonging to the New People's Army kidnapped a Japanese development official on the central island of Negros.

In Angeles, 50 miles north of Manila, 500 troops and police backed by armored personnel carriers motored through the streets brandishing M-16 rifles and carrying banners denouncing the Communist rebels.

The motorcade passed before Clark Air Base, where rebels killed two American airmen May 13.

Philippine police Lt. Col. Julius Yarcia announced the formation of neighborhood vigilante groups to help fight the rebels.

"We just want to convince the people that we are willing to fight and that we have the manpower and the firepower to fight the enemy," Yarcia said.

The New People's Army, the military wing of the outlawed Communist Party of the Philippines, has waged a 21-year-old insurgency to establish a Marxist state.

Friday, U.S. officials announced renewed restrictions on the 20,300 troops, Defense Department civilians and military dependents at Clark, largest of the six U.S. bases in the Philippines.

Air Force spokesman Lt. Col. Ron Rand said military personnel living there were restricted to base and that those living off-post were told to confine travel to "essential" business.

In a statement broadcast Saturday by the U.S. military's Far East Network, Rand said there had been no incidents involving Americans but the restrictions were ordered because of "current threat conditions."

He said security patrols around the sprawling base have been doubled to protect American lives.

Pro-Palestinian leader says U.S. may be target

JERUSALEM (AP) — A pro-PLO Palestinian leader in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip said Saturday that U.S. targets in the region might be attacked as anti-American sentiment intensifies.

"I'm thinking of people who will just want to express their anger, both against American symbols and American institutions," Palestinian intellectual Sari Nusseibeh said in an interview.

He said he and others who have urged restraint are becoming increasingly isolated.

Palestinians are angered by Washington's veto of a U.N. Security Council resolution calling for a council-appointed team to be sent to the occupied lands to report on Israeli abuses.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Don Cofman said U.S. officials "are aware of the mood in the territories," but he declined comment when asked whether additional steps had been taken to protect Americans.

The U.S. State Department issued a travel advisory for the Middle East on Thursday, urging Americans to use "extreme caution." The advisory cited the recent upsurge of violence.

Cofman also refused comment on reports confirmed by Israeli officials that the U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv's beachfront hotel district was one of the targets of Palestinian guerrillas intercepted by Israeli forces off the coast Wednesday. Four guerrillas were killed and 12 captured in the failed sea raid.

The Palestine Liberation Front of Mohammed Abbas claimed its guerrillas were involved.

The Front is a faction of the PLO and on Saturday Kuwait's al-Watan newspaper quoted Abbas as apologizing for not informing PLO leader Yasser Arafat in advance of the failed attack. Abbas said, however, that more attacks will be launched against Israel.

WORLD IN BRIEF

IRA claims killings of 2 more soldiers

LONDON (AP) — The Irish Republican Army Saturday claimed responsibility for the shooting deaths of two British soldiers, striking less than a week after it killed two tourists in the Netherlands.

Gunmen of the group fighting British rule in Northern Ireland killed a British army major Saturday outside his home in Dortmund, West Germany, and wounded a police officer when they got away during a chase.

In the central English town of Lichfield, police hunted for two men who shot and killed a soldier and wounded two others waiting for a train Friday afternoon.

"While British troops remain in Ireland such attacks will continue," the IRA said in a statement distributed to news media in Dublin, Ireland.

Sunday, IRA gunmen killed two London-based Australian lawyers in the town square in Roermond, the Netherlands. The IRA later said it had mistaken the men for soldiers.

"There is no argument or reason in this. It is simply that they are out to kill," Defense Secretary Tom King said Saturday in an interview with Press Association, the domestic news agency.

"They are out to cover the humiliation of their mistake in killing two young Australians in Holland," he said.

Rebels blow up store

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Leftist rebels armed with a grenade launcher tried to blow up an armored police vehicle but missed their target and instead blew up a furniture store in downtown Lima, police said Saturday.

The attack sparked a gunfight between the rebels and police and one bystander was killed and three people wounded, police said.

Friday, two guerrillas with the Maoist-inspired Shinning Path shot to death the manager of a Lima stove manufacturing company as he was walking near the factory, police said.

Shining Path guerrillas reportedly have infiltrated the company's union, which has been on strike since May 3.

Westminster broken into

LONDON (AP) — A thief broke a 13th century stained glass window and stole $2,200 from a collection box at Westminster Abbey, where Britain's monarchs have been crowned for more than 900 years, police said Saturday.

The box was put out for donations to restore the abbey. The police said they believe the thief reached the window at night by climbing scaffolding for the building work outside St. George's Chapel.

Scotland Yard police headquarters said the burglary took place Tuesday, but they would not say why news of it was initially withheld.

Evidence destroyed in probe of Salvadoran priests' killings

N.Y. Times News Service

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Despite President Alfredo Cristiani's vow to push the investigation of the killing of six Jesuit priests, the Supreme Court has disclosed that a central piece of evidence in the case was destroyed and that the judge took evidence from the wrong soldiers.

Whether the judge, Ricardo A. Zamora, was deliberately misled by the military or whether the mistake grew out of the complexity of the case is not clear.

But several diplomats said the incident would certainly have been avoided if the Salvadoran army had cooperated.

"This isn't going anywhere fast," said a diplomat monitoring the case, which is increasingly being viewed as a test not only of the judicial system but also of the value of continuing U.S. support for the government.

"It's not going anywhere slowly. It probably isn't going anywhere."

In a statement, the Supreme Court said a defendant had burned a logbook that could have provided the names of co-conspirators.

The court also said four cadets questioned last week on the assumption that they were on guard duty on the night of the slayings were actually on duty a month after the killings.

The Jesuits, whom many army officers regarded as the intellectual mentors of the leftist rebellion, were slain in November along with their housekeeper and her daughter.

In what Cristiani has called a "historic" step, a colonel and seven lower-ranking military men were arrested and charged with the killings in January.

In disclosing the latest setback, however, the court may have linked the killings to another officer, Lt. Col. Carlos Camilo Hernandez, who is accused of ordering the destruction of the logbook.

At the time of the killings, Hernandez was the acting commander of the military school that was the meeting spot for the accused soldiers.

The lieutenant in charge of the unit has testified that he received a radio call ordering him to assemble his men at the school.

The new setbacks in the case come after the collapse of two other prominent cases involving charges of human rights abuses.

The latest in high-tech laser technology is coming to Midland Memorial Hospital with the hospital auxiliary's donation of a $90,000 laser capable of incising, vaporizing and cauterizing tissue.

The KTP/532 Laser System will supplement the hospital's two carbon dioxide surgical lasers and be an improvement on them, said Dr. Luis Montaldo. He called the KTP part of the second generation of lasers.

"The advantage is not only that it can cut and dissect, but it can cauterize and prevent bleeding," Montaldo said. "It's real fast, I don't have to cut and cauterize, cut and cauterize. A three or four hour surgery can take 40 minutes."

"It's easier and more fun too," he said.

Currently surgeons have to use separate electrocautery equipment to coagulate tissue when working with the carbon dioxide laser.

Gynecologists and general surgeons will be the KTP's main users, performing delicate laser operations for endometriosis and cholecystectomy. The precise tool can also be a help in urology, neurosurgery, gastroenterology, pulmonology, otorhinolaryngology, dermatology and plastic surgery.

Montaldo, an obstetrics/gynecology specialist, said gynecologists are using lasers for almost every surgical procedure. "We do non-invasive surgery through a scope (a small opening in the skin) and the patients are home the same day." He has performed 1,000 laser surgeries.

Changing places

Retired State District Judge Vann Culp is adjusting to life in front of the bench after more than a dozen years behind it as the only judge the 238th District has ever had. It's not his first time to plead his case, as he spent 21 years as a trial lawyer before entering the judicial realm.

Judge makes transition to practicing attorney

■ After 13 years on the bench, Vann Culp "retires" to return to the world of trial law with Midland-based firm.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

When Vann Culp was first appointed judge of the newly formed 238th State District Court in 1977, he thought he would stay in the position for only a year or or two.

Thirteen years and a month later, Culp, 60, retired from the bench on April 30.

"I felt like I wanted to return to actively practice the law," said Culp, who worked as a trial lawyer for 21 years prior to sitting on the bench.

One day after his retirement Culp was back on the job. The former judge is employed with Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder Inc., a Midland-based law firm, that deals largely with oil and gas matters.

Culp feels that his time as a judge has helped make him a better lawyer. "It's been a very valuable experience. I learned first hand what a judge is concerned about, which trial lawyers should know," he said.

But serving as a judge is quite different from being an attorney, Culp pointed out. "When a lawyer takes an oath to be a judge, he must become a different person — no longer an advocate of one side or another," he said.

And Culp seems to have made the transitions smoothly, according to people he worked along side in the justice system.

"He was very knowledgeable and very patient. He was always fair to both sides ... very fair, he didn't have any tendencies," Tom Morgan, a local attorney, said. Morgan has worked in the capacity as both a prosecutor and defense attorney in Culp's courtroom.

Fair is how lawyers and fellow judges described Culp as a judge.

"I don't think you can find an attorney in Midland that didn't have respect for him," said Vincent B. Conklin, who worked as bailiff in Culp's 238th District Courtroom for about five years.

Culp not only had a good rapport with his coworkers, he strove to be fair and straighforward with everyone who came before him.

"He went into depth to make sure people knew their rights," Conklin said.

Asked how the transition back to practicing law feels, Culp replied, "it feels fine."

"They first put me in a very complicated case. I barely got into the office and I started working. It was very interesting and fasinating because I like complicated cases," Culp said.

the feeling one gets as a lawyer is very different than presiding as a judge.

Artistic honor

The first Hubbard Art Award for Excellence, a $250,000 purchase award, went to Howard Terpning of Tucson, Ariz., for his oil 'Transferring the Medicine Shield." The award was presented Saturday night at a black tie gala in Ruidoso, N.M., by R.D. and Joan Hubbard, owners of Ruidoso Downs and the Hubbard Museum at Ruidoso Downs.

Staff Report

A group of special Midland citizens could have used an extra trailer to haul back all the medals and ribbons they earned at a late May athletic event.

A local group of 20 mentally retarded citizens took part in the May 22-25 Texas Special Olympics in San Marcos. The athletes qualified for the event after successfully competing in regional olympics held April 22 in Odessa.

At the state level, where 333 teams competed, the Midland olympians won numerous gold, silver and bronze medals.

"I think we did real well," said Weldon Claxton, track and field coach. "We had a lot of fourth places that were close to being thirds.

"It was a good event. We all had a good time."

The awards harvest was the result of hard training which began in mid-March, Claxton said. The Midland Association for Retarded Citizens sponsored the team.

The state olympics were highlighted by appearances by former Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry and movie star Randy Quaid.

Museum celebrates first birthday

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

The Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum was packed with party goers Saturday. Many fell into two age groups — under 5 and over 60.

"Once again Midland has proved to be different," museum director Jean Hagman said. Jane and George Jerry, museum consultants from Houston, told planners at the Museum of the Southwest that a children's museum needed to be aimed at children ages 7 to 12.

"Just today, the bulk of youngsters are under 7," Ms. Hagman said. "The adults who get most involved are the grandparents. It's almost like we have an under-7 and over-60 crowd. The grandparents teach more with the youngsters. The parents say, 'Do this,' and don't show the child. The grandparent shows the child by doing it themselves. One thing that tells us is to look to older volunteers for assistance in the children's museum."

Saturday, the children's museum celebrated its first birthday at a party sponsored by the museum and Texaco Philanthropic Foundation.

"It's been wonderful," Ms. Hagman said of the turnout, which numbered close to 400. She credits recent publicity concerning the removal of a "corset kite" as increasing the numbers.

It was reported Thursday by the San Antonio Light that the museum staff had removed this kite — made from women's lingerie — because it was offensive. Museum officials denied there was anything controversial about removing the display, which came down along with other items to make room for the participatory elements in the kite exhibition.

Due to the publicity surrounding the item and the phone calls to the museum, the staff re-hung the display case containing the corset kite for the birthday party only.

"So few people have gone over to look at it, we probably would have had this turnout without the controversy over the corset, but not without the publicity," Ms. Hagman said.

Birthday cake, clowns, magicians, games and prizes lent a festive air to the three-hour celebration.

Perfect cocktail party with ideal guest list described

There was a survey in one of those women's magazines — probably McCalls or Redbook — that asked readers to describe the perfect dinner party, complete with the ideal guest list.

Ott

Respondents were encouraged to list celebrities and give the reasons why they would be included.

It sounded like fun, so I decided to participate — with one minor change. I hate dinner parties. They're generally very stuffy and invariably someone will be offended when you blow cigarette smoke in their face while they are trying to eat something delectable like spinach and mushroom pie.

So, in our case, we'll forego dinner. It'll be a cocktail party, instead. All that is required is the ability to sit around a large table in a convivial saloon and laugh at people.

My guest list is as follows.

Dan Jenkins. This guy, who has written such books as "Semi-Tough," "Life Its Ownself" and "You Call It Sports, But I Say It's a Jungle Out There", is absolutely essential to making our little get-together a success, mainly because he has a marvelous reputation for "hanging out." That means he can sit at a table for hours and never repeat the same story twice.

And, since he has hoisted a few with such legendary late-nighters as Bobby Layne, Don Meredith, Sonny Jurgeson and Alex Hawkins, it goes without saying that Mr. Jenkins will be the captain of our team. He'll be seated at the head of the table.

Likewise, he is known for being a world-class check-grabber, so the rest of us can indulge to our heart's content and know ol' Dan will cover the tab. What the heck, if he'll do that, I'll take care of the tip.

Guest No. 2 will be Lewis Grizzard. You're probably familiar with this fellow. He writes a column that appears on the editorial pages of this paper twice a week. Like Jenkins, he specializes in humor, which means he'll fit in with our group just fine, thank you very much.

He's also written several books which have great titles, the best of which is "Elvis is Dead and I Don't Feel So Good Myself." Among his other works are, "If Love Were Oil I'd Be About a Quart Low" and "My Daddy Was A Pistol and I'm a Son of a Gun."

If he contributes nothing else, he can at least tell us where he came up with such dandy titles.

He's also been divorced three times, which for some bizarre reason appeals to me. Maybe that's because divorced people tell the funniest stories.

Enough said. Let's move right along. It's time to add a little female companionship. What we need is someone with breathtaking beauty who also happens to have a wisecracking style of humor.

I vote for Candice Bergen, but only if she promises to bring along Murphy Brown. The sassier, the better. She also needs to promise not to talk about children, redecorating the house or the latest Junior League activities. In other words, she needs be one of the boys.

Our fourth guest will be Fran Lebowitz, the queen of caustic New York humor. She's a perfect fit for our group because her stinging wit will put others in their proper place — which, of course, is anywhere beneath us.

My favorite one-liner from her is, "Great people talk about ideas, average people talk about things, and small people talk about wine."

Others include "Spilling your guts is about as charming as it sounds" and "The only appropriate reply to the question, 'Can I be frank?' is 'Yes, if I can be Barbara.' "

So there you have it. My guest list. There could be others, of course, but why let it get unmanageable? A small, intimate get-together is always best.

MUSEUM: Grandparents join fun

(From 1B)

1985. "Joint Ventures," a community workshop held then, explored the concept of a children's museum in Midland. The workshop, organized by the Junior League of Midland, was attended by 40 community leaders.

When the results of the workshop were presented to the Board of Trustees of the Museum of the Southwest Dec. 18, 1985, the response was positive and a steering committee was formed. A generous gift for the immediate development of a children's museum from long time museum supporter and trustee, Fredda Turner Durham, set the project in motion.

The facility, designed by local architect Lawrence H. Connolly, is a participatory museum where children have numerous opportunities for hands-on activities. The birthday celebration allowed museum officials the opportunity to observe children's reactions to the current exhibit by San Antonio artist Pat Hammond, "To Catch the Wind," which features kites and kite making.

"We've been evaluating just by observing," Ms. Hagman said. "We watch how much time the child spends in each area. Does he read the labels? Does he look at the kites? That's going to help us in designing components in the future."

Ms. Hagman said their observations have confirmed the theory that everyone learns differently.

"Some are watchers. Some are doers."

Some of the doers Saturday were crowded around an outside table creating objects out of glue and wood.

Shaina Zellars could do little more than nod about the fun she was having making kites and a bird house. Four Mitchell boys — Jamil, Haswan, Bryson and Jasmon — who said they were not related — were busy showing off the items they had made. None of them agreed what any of the items were. Gary Fitzgerald and his daughter Charity did agree they were making was a plane.

"We've only been here about an hour or so," Fitzgerald said. "But it's been real nice."

Survey predicts Texas' resurgence

DALLAS (AP) — Four hundred real estate executives and economists polled in a nationwide survey have predicted that Texas will enjoy one of the nation's strongest commercial real estate investment markets during the 1990s.

As real estate conditions decline in many East and West Coast cities, the Dallas-Fort Worth and Houston property markets have great potential during the next five years, according to a study to be released Monday by the accounting firm Ernst & Young.

Ernst & Young asked industry leaders and analysts to identify the biggest problems facing the commercial real estate sector, as well as bright spots for future investment.

"When asked what single market offered the most potential (as opposed to merely the likely best performer) over the next five years, two Texas markets — Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth — were chosen by a total of nearly 30 percent of the respondents," Ernst & Young said in the report.

The five markets with the highest potential, according to poll respondents, are Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth, Los Angeles, Seattle and Washington, D.C., in that order.

In-depth interviews with top industry executives identified the factors underlying their optimistic outlook for the Southwest.

"The Southwest is indeed showing positive signs of recovery, particularly in Houston and Dallas," said Claude Zinngrabe, president of Prudential Real Estate Investors.

"By 1995, it will emerge as a regional economy blessed with the newest infrastructure and the lowest cost of doing business, allowing it to be highly competitive with other regions of the United States," Zinngrabe said.

Michael Miles, a professor of urban development at the University of North Carolina Business School, said he sees Texas emerging as one of the country's most important business and manufacturing centers.

"My favorite region is Texas for a host of reasons," Miles said. "Texas has been down and is now priced right. Texas culturally favors growth and business."

Miles said Texas also will benefit from growing concerns about maintaining the natural environment, and predicted that manufacturing will increase in the state.

"Environmentally, there is not a whole lot you can do to make parts of West Texas uglier," he said. "In short, Texas has the right prices, the right people, the right attitude and the right amount of land."

The executives were less optimistic about prospects for the nation's overall commercial real estate markets. Nearly 90 percent of them listed widespread overbuilding as the chief reason for the industry's decline.

Potential recession, the savings and loan crisis, changes in federal tax laws and inflation were other factors expected to have the greatest impact on investment real estate performance during the next five years.

Vaccine shields chimps from human AIDS virus

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A biotechnology company that nearly gave up looking for an AIDS vaccine three years ago now says it has made a vaccine that protected chimpanzees from the human AIDS virus.

"Our scientists just didn't give up," Jack Murphy, spokesman for Genentech Inc. of South San Francisco, said Friday.

"We have fairly high hopes for this, but it will take years to develop anything that could protect humans from AIDS," Murphy said. "This, right now, is more of a scientific development and certainly not a breakthrough."

Dr. Daniel F. Hoth, who directs the AIDS division at the National Institutes of Allergy and Infectious Diseases in Bethesda, Md., called the Genentech findings "a potentially very important step."

"It's another brick in the wall we are building to show that an AIDS vaccine is feasible," Hoth said.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration must approve the vaccine for testing on humans before further research can begin, Genentech officials said.

The company had virtually abandoned similar research in 1987 after making no headway. Until recently, researchers were only able to protect chimpanzees from a simian form of the AIDS virus, but not the human virus itself, Murphy said.

The Genentech vaccine is among several being developed in hopes of finding a way protect people from contracting acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which leaves victims vulnerable to deadly cancers and ailments.

More than 80,000 Americans have died from AIDS.

The Genentech vaccine is genetically engineered, as are two other vaccines the FDA has approved for testing in people to protect them against the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, which causes AIDS.

One of the vaccines, approved for testing in August 1987, was developed by MicroGeneSys Inc. of West Haven, Conn. The second, developed by Bristol-Myers-Squibb Co., of New York, was approved for human trials in November 1987.

Dr. Jonas Salk, who developed a vaccine for polio, also is testing an experimental vaccine made from inactivated AIDS viruses that are replicated and don't contain anything that could be infectious.

"The hardest part about developing these vaccines is they're very specific and work against only one type of virus," Murphy said. Eventually, he said, a vaccine must be developed that protects against all strains of the disease.

Phillip W. Berman of Genentech and Jorg Eichberg of the Southwest Biomedical Research Center of San Antonio developed the Genentech vaccine for chimpanzees that were housed in Texas during the experiment.

The research is to be published in the June 14 issue of the British medical journal Nature.

LASER: Surgery made quicker, 'cleaner' patients," he said. "There's less scar tissue, the healing process is faster and you save money on the hospital stay."

The KTP will make the surgeon's job easier. It has a visible green laser beam, unlike the carbon dioxide laser's invisible infrared one. The beam travels through a flexible fiber, allowing the surgeon to place the tool on the area to be incised. Its handpiece is lighter weight than the bulky arm of a carbon dioxide laser.

Tissue absorbs the KTP beam, generating less steam and smoke during surgery and improving visibility, a problem with other laser techniques. The operation is viewed on a video screen by the surgeon and nurses.

"We've had laser surgery here for several years; we just feel that this is one we need to move up to," said Laurie Johnson, a spokeswoman for the hospital. Physicians and Surgeons Hospital and Surgi-care Center of Midland already have KTP lasers, she said. Lasers have been in use in Midland since 1983, when the process was introduced at Physicians and Surgeons.

The hospital auxilary committed the money for the KTP and offered it to the board of directors, who accepted the donation at their May 30 meeting. Johnson said the KTP would arrive in about six weeks.

DEATHS

Mina Z. Jordan

Graveside services for Mina Z. Jordan, 73, are set for 2 p.m. Monday at Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. J.B. Stewart of First United Methodist Church officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Jordan

Mrs. Jordan died Saturday at her Midland home.

Born Sept. 27, 1916, in Abilene, she graduated as valedictorian of the Abilene High class of 1933. She married L.E. Jordan in San Angelo Sept. 4, 1937.

The couple lived in Pecos during World War II and moved to Midland in 1945. They owned Jordan's Garage for many years.

Mrs. Jordan was a member of First Methodist Church of Abilene.

Willie Mae Hawkins

Services for Willie Mae "Muzzy" Hawkins are set for 11 a.m. Monday at Golf Course Road Church of Christ with Douglas Parson officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Friday at her Midland home.

She was born Dec. 5, 1912, in Clint. She grew up in Roscoe and Seminole, where she married Olan Hawkins. The couple retired to Midland in 1976.

A homemaker, she was a member of the Golf Course Road Church of Christ and was active in children's ministries.

She was preceded in death by her husband in December 1981.

Survivors include: three daughters, Rose Jones of Lakeland, Fla., Lucy Moss of Carlsbad, N.M. and Brenda Sorrels of Midland; two brothers, Emitt Whitaker of Cabot, Ark., and Dan M. Whitaker of Bakersfield, Calif.; one sister, Ola Maye Hawkins of Bossier City, La.; 12 grandchildren, four great-grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews.

Kary Hollingsworth

Graveside services for Kary D. Hollingsworth are set for 11 a.m. Wednesday in Fairview Cemetery with the Rev. Bernard Degan of St. Ann's Catholic Church officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Saturday in Biloxi, Miss.

He was born Aug. 20, 1937, in Marks, Miss., where he grew up. He enlisted in the U.S. Air Force in 1955 and served in Vietnam, Panama, Turkey and Hawaii, among other locations during his 23-year career prior to his retirement in 1978.

He lived briefly in Florida before moving to Biloxi. He worked in telecommunications and insurance sales.

He was preceded in death by a daughter, Mary Cecilia Hollingsworth in 1981.

Survivors include: two sons, Kary Hollingsworth II and Sean Hollingsworth, both of Sarasota, Fla.; one daughter, Michelle Hollingsworth of Sarasota; his mother, Mary Wood of Midland; one sister, Helen Hodge of Midland; and several nieces and nephews.

DEA officer charged with DWI

HOUSTON (AP) — A charge of driving while intoxicated has been filed against the head of Houston's Drug Enforcement Administration office, who was recently acquitted of drunken driving charges.

Marion Hambrick, 49, was charged with driving while intoxicated Friday after officers said his car struck a man riding a bicycle in northwest Houston.

Rup Tandan, 66, a part-time clerk at a Circle K store, was in serious condition Friday at Hermann Hospital, where he is being treated for a broken leg and ankle, four fractured ribs and a cracked vertebra.

Officers said Tandan was on his way home from work at 11:06 p.m. Thursday, when his bicycle was hit from behind by Hambrick's car.

CULP: Former judge finds experience helpful tool

(From 1B)

"Most of the work is very different. If an attorney wins he is in a state of elation, if he loses it's a depressing situation for a while. If you lose you feel like nobody likes you when your walking down the street," Culp said.

"As a judge, you don't have those emotions. That is the thing I missed the most, prevailing in cases," he said.

Culp, who describes the American legal system as "the best in the world," has no plans of retirement from the justice system anytime soon.

Culp began practicing law in 1956 after attending St. Mary's Law School in San Antonio. He worked his way through law school as a teacher.

Raised in Crockett, Culp married his wife Marilyn shortly after entering law school. Today, he and his wife have three grown children, two daughters and a son.

Culp, who moved to Midland in 1962, also practiced in San Antonio and Ector County.

When he is not working, Culp enjoys hunting, fishing and reading.

As judge, Culp was elected three times to the office after his initial appointment.

Polish journalists recount problems

DALLAS (AP) — Although the shackles of Communist censorship have fallen, Eastern European journalists still face many hurdles before true press freedom is achieved, two Polish reporters said Saturday.

"Now the changes started and now we can see this collapse of Communism but it is probably very easy to destroy concrete of Berlin Wall, but it is very difficult to destroy this mental wall in people's minds," said Jan Pieklo, a Polish journalist interning with the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Both Pieklo and fellow intern Wacek Radziwinowicz said Poland and other Eastern Bloc countries face many challenges unknown to American journalists.

They spoke at the final sessions of the Freedom of Information Foundation of Texas' two-day 1990 Henry W. Faulk FOI Conference.

The two journalists said the country has no formal means of disseminating information, which hampers the flow of information to the public.

As an example, Radziwinowicz said, when he tried to determine whether mushrooms in a forest had been contaminated by radiation from the Chernobyl nuclear power plant disaster in 1986, no government official would confirm his information.

Radziwinowicz said he took the "risky" course of publishing the story saying the mushrooms may have been poisoned and waiting for confirmation later.

In a previous incident, Radziwinowicz said, he was unable to confirm that the Chernobyl disaster had occurred. Polish officials waited several days before alerting the public to the disaster, and later to the hazard of radioactive clouds sweeping over the country, he said.

Press freedom in Eastern Bloc countries must be achieved immediately, he said "to protect us against the slavery of information, which sometimes hurts, sometimes kills the people."

Pieklo said reporters who have been operating under censors for many years now find themselves unable to factually report the news.

"Everybody now would like to be a columnist but nobody would like to be an editor, a reporter, to write simple information."

Other problems facing Eastern European journalists are the shortage of newsprint and a lack of capital to create or strengthen publications, Pieklo said, cautioning that his country's steps toward freedom "may be very painful."

The session continued Saturday afternoon with a tribute to John Henry Faulk, the late Austin humorist and author who successfully challenged the blacklists of the 1950s.

Faulk, who died in April at the age of 76, became an honored advocate of free speech and civil liberties after he began a lengthy legal battle against blacklisting in the entertainment industry. The lawsuit, which he won in 1962, effectively ended blacklisting.

FOIFT President Jack Loftis said all future FOIFT conferences will be named in honor of Faulk, who was presented the foundation's James Madison Award in 1988.

"No one I ever met believed in the First Amendment as passionately as John Henry Faulk," said Southern Methodist University professor David McHam.

"He didn't just teach me to go freedom fighting," Dallas Times Herald columnist Molly Ivins said Saturday. "He taught me to have fun doing it."

The candidates for governor, lieutenant governor and attorney general were invited to participate in a panel discussion Saturday, but only Dan Morales, the Democratic nominee for attorney general appeared.

Morales said he supports political candidates disclosure of all financial records.

"I believe every Texan has the right to know where the public officials are deriving every single penny of their income," he said.

Morales, a San Antonio state legislator, also said he is a strong defender of the state's Open Meetings and Open Records legislation.

ARMED FORCES NEWS

Carlos E. Camarillo, son of Mr. and Mrs. E.M. "Lalo" Camarillo of Midland, received his commission as a 2nd Lt. into the United States Air Force Reserve on May 11 through the Air Force ROTC program. He also received his bachelor of business administration in business management from Angelo State University on the same date.

He will enter active duty through the undergraduate Pilot Training Program.

Camarillo enlisted in the Air Force in 1984 as an inventory management specialist where his first duty station was RAF Upper Heyford, United Kingdom. He was then assigned to the White House Communication Agency in Washington, D.C., as a special duty assignment. He received an honorable discharge in 1988 to complete his education and pursue a commission. He is married to the former Sarah Mathison of Coahoma.

Sergeant Eric Doggett, Army recruiter in Midland for the past two years, was recently awarded the Army Achievement Medal with Third Oak Leaf Cluster.

Doggett received the Army award for exceptional service in working with Midland area young people in career planning this spring. His wife, the former Tricia Saegesser, graduated from Midland High School in 1988 and is the daughter of Terry and Ann Saegesser.

Sergeant Doggett moved to Midland as an Army recruiter in November 1988. He was previously stationed at Fort Carson, Colo., as an infantry squad leader, and Fort Hood, working with the Dragon antitank weapon. The infantryman also was assigned overseas in Germany for two years.

Passive smoking prodding action

More bad news for the tobacco industry: A federal study to be released soon is said to estimate for the first time the number of lung cancers suffered by non-smokers subjected to smokers' fumes. If the study is as damning as preliminary reports suggest, it should prod the federal government to get much tougher on tobacco smoke.

The tobacco industry already was under siege, fending off efforts to ban cigarette advertising at the same time it was trying to deflect criticism of its more odious marketing practices. Now the cigarette manufacturers are scrambling to rebut the study, in which scientists for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency supposedly disclose that secondhand or passive smoking causes 3,000 cases of lung cancer in non-smokers annually.

Among other things, the EPA may decide to list tobacco smoke as a known carcinogen, a move that scientific evidence certainly supports. The agency estimates the health risks from sidestream cigarette smoke to be about double those of radon gas, a relatively common indoor air pollutant.

The implications of the EPA's study could be far-reaching. No longer would cigarette smoking be simply a personal choice, as the tobacco industry euphemistically describes it. Once the health of others is put in jeopardy, the choice to smoke cigarettess becomes a good deal less personal.

A study conclusively establishing a link between secondhand smoking and lung cancer in non-smokers should serve as ammunition for the feds, who could choose to regulate tobacco smoke much the way they do other pollutants. The Occupational Safety and Health Administration, for example, could set limits on tobacco smoke levels in the workplace. The EPA could do much the same thing for other types of environments.

Many details, including the responsibility for enforcement, would have to be worked out. The key element, though, would be recognition by the feds that tobacco smoke jeopardizes more than just the person who lights up. Personal choice, indeed!

High court reigns in FERC monster

A recent U.S. Supreme Court decision should slap some sense into Congress about the Frankenstein monster of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Voting 9-0, the court struck down California regulations aimed at assuring survival of trout in the American River and Rock Creek, a small tributary.

The court said the Federal Power Act preempts California's stream-flow regulations.

So, with one fell swoop of the pen, California, its citizens and its elected representatives have no say over their wildlife or streams or the environment they live in if FERC has an interest in the matter.

That cannot possibly be the intent of Congress. That FERC can decide the fate of fish and wildlife in a state without the citizens' input runs counter to the most basic notions of civil government. That's fascism.

Wellesley seniors consistent

A group of seniors at Wellesley College gave the nation's newspaper columnists an early Christmas a few weeks ago by expressing their patrician outrage at the selection of Barbara Bush as commencement speaker at the Massachusetts school. They petitioned school officials to boot the first lady off the platform arousing a furious chorus of howls from the columnists.

How exactly did they do it? They said this:

"Wellesley teaches us that we will be rewarded on the basis of our own merit, not that of a spouse. To honor Barbara Bush as a commencement speaker is to honor a woman who has gained recognition through the achievements of her husband, which contradicts what we have been taught over the last four years at Wellesley."

The customary response to this irritating sneer has been to point out that Mrs. Bush left Smith College to become a wife and mother and a homemaker, and if that isn't what America's all about, by golly, then what is?

If the Wellesley seniors are saying they'd never stoop so low to marry a millionaire and don't want to listen to a lady who did, well, fine. They're certainly more intellectually consistent than their college's administration. If they're saying that they wish to consider only the sort of futures and realities in which they, not husbands, will be at center stage, well, that's their prerogative.

More should pay for S&L fraud

How much is $300 billion? Look at it with all its 11 zeros: $300,000,000,000. Counting once a second, it would take you 9,520 years to count to 300 billion. About 9,500 years ago human beings were just discovering the wheel.

Federal bank regulators have sent 20 fraud cases to the Justice Department for prosecution in recent weeks and they are preparing 100 more.

Now if only those key members of Congress and the Reagan administration who let the S&L mess fester for so long could be put on trial too. They share blame with unscrupulous bankers for this unprecedented fiasco.

Some bureaucrats will go extra mile

WASHINGTON — When a bureaucrat goes the second mile, it's news. In fact, judging by the list of nominees for a national "My Favorite Bureaucrat" contest, it's news when a bureaucrat does his or her job, plain and simple.

Anderson

The contest was sponsored by Matthew Lesko and Information USA Inc. of Chevy Chase, Md., the publisher of an encyclopedia of government services called "Lesko's Info-Power." Lesko devotes himself to teaching people how to use the government they pay for. His 1,986-page directory is due out this month.

Lesko received more than 1,000 nominations from people who, wonder of wonders, had a pleasant encounter with a government bureaucrat. The ordinary citizens who wrote about their experiences with the bureaucracy seemed genuinely amazed that they got help when they needed it, without a fuss. The nominations are replete with accounts of bureaucrats who answer their own phones, return phone calls, give information when asked and get the job done in a reasonable amount of time.

Even the Internal Revenue Service got a slew of nominations for surprising taxpayers by being helpful. And in a few rare cases, the bureaucrats acted on common sense and bent the rules to answer a reasonable request.

There was the clerk at a Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles who told a woman that she couldn't change the address on her husband's motor vehicle registration without the husband's signature. The woman explained how her husband worked out of town. The clerk responded as though she had not heard the problem. "Go outside, get your husband's signature and bring it back to me," the clerk said. The confused woman repeated her story, and the clerk repeated the instructions. Finally the woman got the hint. She went out, forged her husband's signature and came back.

A Kansas taxpayer confessed to the IRS that he owed $750 with his tax return, but he didn't have the money. He found an IRS agent with a heart. The agent advised him to wait until the last minute on April 15 and mail a check for as much money as he could spare with a promise to send the rest. "If you wait until the last minute to send in your return ... they probably won't get to it until October," the agent told him.

A Brooklyn, N.Y., man had his radio stolen while his car was parked in a commercial garage. The garage refused to compensate him, so he filed a complaint with the Department of Consumer Affairs and chalked the whole experience up to a loss. A few months later, the man got a call from the Consumer Affairs office asking if he had ever received his money. The owner of the garage was standing in the office asking for a renewal of his business license. The man got his money and the garage got its license.

A postal worker from Brooklyn, N.Y., struck up a conversation with an aging hippie from California while both were in the audience at the Morton Downey Jr. TV talk show. The hippie complained that the Lenox Hill, N.Y., post office was refusing to cash his postal money order because he had only one form of identification. The postal worker knew that the rules required only one ID, so he called the manager of the Lenox Hill post office and read him the regulation. The hippie got his money.

GEORGE WILL

'Electoral Fairness Project' revolutionary

WASHINGTON — The revolutionary has a disarming name: Skip Roberts. ("Skip" Lenin? Somehow, no.) Do not be deceived. He means to topple civilization or, what is much the same thing, the Electoral College as it currently functions.

Will

He is head of the Electoral Fairness Project. He wants states to legislate an end to the custom of winner-take-all allocations of states' electoral votes. Instead, they would award one vote to a presidential candidate for each congressional district she or he carried. The two additional votes each state has would go to the candidate who has the most votes statewide.

Many Americans will be startled to learn that the current system, under which a candidate receiving a majority or even just a plurality of a state's votes gets all that state's electoral votes, is not a constitutional requirement. This practice, so central to the success of our constitutional arrangements, is only a custom.

In 1968, Maine abandoned this system in favor of the idea Roberts favors (others have favored it, perhaps even James Madison). So far the results in Maine have been just what the old system would have produced. In 1988, for example, Bush beat Dukakis in Maine 55.3 percent to 43.9 percent, but won all four votes because he carried both congressional districts.

So, as Maine goes, so shall go the nation? A reasonable first reaction is, Heaven forfend! America's system for electing an executive is the most successful in the world. And this is the rule of life: Most improvements make matters worse. But hear Roberts out, even if he is a Democrat and open to the charge that losers try to change rules. (From time to time Republicans have flirted with Roberts' idea.)

If Roberts' rules had obtained in 1988, Dukakis would still have been trounced, but probably would have won at least 155 rather than 112 electoral votes. One cannot say for sure, because both candidates would have campaigned quite differently — which is Roberts' point.

He says his reform would increase voter interest and activism by multiplying the number of contested constituencies in which both candidates could consider themselves competitive. In many presidential years, the outcome in many states — sometimes in more than half of them — is not seriously in doubt by September. Naturally, voter interest and turnout decline. But within many such states, some districts might be hotly contested under Roberts' plan.

He notes that the Dukakis campaign shut down in Florida on Sept. 10. But there are eight Florida districts that generally vote Democratic in national elections. Dukakis only (and barely) carried one. But, then, under the winner-take-all system, with Florida's statewide result a foregone conclusion, he had no reason to "cherry pick" for electoral votes in promising districts.

Roberts thinks his reform would diminish candidates' dependence on television and increase reliance on grass-roots organization. For example, he says Democrats are usually competitive in four of the eight districts in Houston's expensive media market. Democrats would have an incentive to use on-the-ground activism to target those districts, rather than saturate the area with expensive over-the-air campaigning.

By discouraging ideological and charismatic fragmentation, the statewide winner-take-all practice makes for moderate majorities. And it usefully magnifies the decisiveness of elections when popular vote totals are close (as in 1960, 1968, 1976).

The lower houses of the legislatures in Connecticut and North Carolina have passed Roberts' plan. They did so over the objection of politicians who argued that by making their electoral votes divisible, the less populous states will become less interesting to presidential campaigns.

If these and a few more states (Roberts is targeting New Jersey and Louisiana) take the plunge, they will be laboratories testing whether Roberts' idea produces the political churning he desires. And Democrats will have to figure out how to lose under a new system.

'Lavoro affair' felt in international banking

WASHINGTON — "The Lavoro affair" is what some of us call the government of Iraq's manipulation of the American and Italian banking systems to help Dictator Saddam Hussein finance the building of a missile with a nuclear warhead.

Safire

In Atlanta, a grand jury has been investigating the running of $3 billion through a U.S. branch of Italy's Lavoro bank, a large chunk of which was ostensibly for commodity loans guaranteed by the ever-trustful U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Like the savings and loan scandal, this case is too complex for media scrutiny (Alan Freedman of The Financial Times excepted), and Attorney General Richard Thornburgh slowed the investigation by easing out the U.S. attorney in Atlanta.

Reverberations from the Lavoro probe made our Secretary of Agriculture, Clayton Yeutter, nervous enough to dispatch a team to Baghdad to find out about "possible irregularities" in our billion-a-year guarantee of loans to Iraq. As predicted here, these bureaucrats returned with indications of corruption and kickbacks that they hastily unloaded on the department's inspector general.

Because the Bush administration does not want to upset the Iraqi dictator, who will be anointed next week in Baghdad as "the new Nasser" by the Arab leaders, no questions are being asked of the National Security Agency about why it failed to spot the huge transfers of dollars; nor has the FBI yet asked the Export-Import Bank which of its officials knew of the illegal transfers.

But Atlanta's Lavoro leads are making some investigators here and in Europe nosy: where else has Hussein been getting the money for his costly weaponry? And who is providing him with the Western technology to terrorize the world?

All fingers point to France, which was the leading weapons supplier to Iraq during its war with Iran. Six months ago, a scientific delegation from Paris met with Saddam Hussein after visiting his secret missile base at Mosul; four French companies turned out to have received payments through the Lavoro Atlanta "paymaster."

France has already helped Iraq concoct its own AWACS, placing a radar dish 10 yards in diameter built by Thomson-CSF on the top of an Ilyushin-76 bought from the Soviets. The French technicians, who maintain and operate the advanced command reconnaissance aircraft, have boasted that their Adnan I is better than Moscow's own version.

Bankers know how that made Hussein all the stronger in the dealing; the dictator found $158 million to pay Thomson-CSF cash for new orders and thereby drew Chevenement into advancing much more new debt; most important, he agreed in principle to provide the Dassault Mirage 2000 — and have it produced in Iraq.

That's not all; the Iraqis want a modern long-range ground-to-ground missile. They took the old Soviet Scuds, with a range of only 200 miles, and with the help of a score of French technicians upgraded these to 500 miles; they are called Al-Abbas and Al-Hussein. What then became vital was a sophisticated inertial guidance system — the missile system's "brain."

The French company Sagem makes those guidance systems, but by EEC treaty — the Missile Technology Control Regime — France is bound not to export this destabilizing warmaker.

While France's technical expertise is bolstering the Nasserite pretensions of Iraq's dictator, U.S. loan guarantees have helped him free money for leverage for more French credit.

Congress wants to impose sanctions, but President Bush — supported by Pennsylvania Republican Sen. Arlen Specter — thinks Saddam Hussein is a closet moderate.

We could learn more about the buildup of a menace to peace by unraveling the Lavoro affair. But Thornburgh's Justice is timorous; television news finds it all too complicated; and France's arms merchants have an investment that pulls them deeper into the pit.

Stockholders should control firms' giving

George Will's column discussing Michigan's censorship law pertaining to corporations is enlightening. He does point out some injustices, but never touches on other issues which have to do with corporation excesses.

The issue of corporate donations to tax-exempt, charitable organizations is complicated. No one criticizes such groups as The Smithsonian Institution, America's attic, which has recently initiated a drive for corporate backing. However, let's look at tax-exempt groups in the news today, such as political action committees, Planned Parenthood, and others which have polarized large segments of our society. Corporate giving to such as these is wrong, as it is not the corporation's money that is being donated, but the stockholders' equity. And it is being donated in spite of the fact that many of these shareholders are opposed to the recipients of their funds.

In practically every case, the shareholders were never polled as to their views on the matter. Corporate management has frequently misappropriated the stockholders' earnings and donated it to controversial partisan groups.

Getting to the crux of the matter, when corporate officers give away the property of others, (i.e. the stockholders' earnings), without specific permission of the owners, it constitutes misappropriation of funds, malfeasance of duty, and a severe violation of fiduciary trust, all punishable by law. It is surprising that the Securities and Exchange Commission and Financial Accounting Standards Board do not object to this practice.

It has been asked, "Did you ever expect a corporation to have a conscience, when it has no soul to be damned, and no body to be kicked?" Application of the punishment to the blameworthy officers is the proper action to solve this problem. And this type action has recently been upheld by several courts of law. When will America's corporations start showing some responsibility to their owners, America's shareholders?

Cigarette smoke not only carcinogen in air

As I read the headline "City may expand public smoking ban" in the May 23 Reporter-Telegram, I couldn't help but see red. Yes, cigarette smoking has been proven to cause lung cancer, and the second-hand smoke has been connected to lung cancer in nonsmokers.

Come on people, let's get real. What about certain industrial chemicals, natural food chemicals, and chemicals used in drugs. These are all prime contributors to cancer. These carcinogens are everywhere and pollute the air we breath and the water we drink. Such chemicals as aniline dyes, arsenic, asbestos, chromium, iron compounds, lead, nickel, vinyl chloride, certain products of coal, lignite, and petroleum are also contributors to the impurities in our atmosphere. So much so, look at what these things are doing to the ozone layer.

Yes, we can limit some of these carcinogens, but there is absolutely no way in our present environment to rid the atmosphere of all this toxic material unless we ban the use of all the contributors. Why continually add insult to injury toward all smokers, when we are not responsible for all these carcinogens.

What next, will be ban the driving of automobiles, flying of aircraft, and having our backyard cookouts. All these too contribute to the impurities in the atmosphere and bodies of water.

Think about it folks, there is not a one of us in this world that can honestly say, "I have not contributed to the destruction of our environment." Why try to remove the splinter from my brothers eye until I remove the board from my own.

Lithuania not properly 'state' of Soviet Union

Some people, including our president, are saying that the United States should not help Lituania or its people because Lituania is a state of Russia, just like Texas or Oklahoma are states of the United States. They argue that any involvement by the United States would be interference in the internal affairs of Russia.

According to Funk and Wagnalls Encyclopedia, the basis of their argument is not true. The encyclopedia points out, "The Soviet Union recognized the independence of Lithuania in July of 1920, under the terms of the Treaty of Moscow." It also says, "In August of 1922, the Lithuanian Constituent Assembly ... approved a constitution which proclaimed the country as a democratic republic."

In 1939, Soviet troops were stationed in Lithuania supposedly to protect its sovereignty from Hitler who had just invaded Poland. Instead of protecting Lithuania, Red Army troops seized control of the country along with Latvia and Estonia.

The Soviet government then banned all political parties except its own puppet communist party. All dissidents were rounded up and jailed. The new Soviet puppet government then voted a resolution requesting the incorporation of Lithuania into the U.S.S.R. without the approval of the Lithuanian people.

What is really interesting is that the United States, Great Britain and other democratic powers denounced the action by the Soviets and refused to recognize the Soviet annexation of the Baltic countries.

According to the encyclopedia, "... in 1953, the U.S. State Department reiterated its policy on nonrecognition of Soviet regimes in Baltic countries." To put it another way, as late as 1953, the United States was still recognizing Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia as independent sovereign democratic republics.

Has that policy been changed? If so, by whom? Even if U.S. policy has been changed, there is plenty of proof that the Baltic States mentioned are not legally part of the U.S.S.R.

Our government is all uptight about the blacks not being represented by a democratic election in South Africa; why are they not concerned about democratic elections in the Baltic countries? Do we have a double standard? Why?

I say yes, we should support the moves toward freedom of the people of Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia.

It's typical for teen to blame others

My letter is in response to quotes made by Lee High School senior Meredith Rentz in a recent (May 17) Reporter-Telegram article regarding high school commencement ceremonies. Being the parent of two teen-agers, I recognized a "typical teen-age attitude" when Ms. Rentz blamed the commencement audience for last year's senior behavior. I don't remember seeing beach balls in the audience — I saw them being batted around among graduating students.

My daughter was in Lee's graduating class last year, and the principal was correct when he said all of us witnessing the ceremony had an investment in the culmination of 12 years of our sons and daughters lives. Each senior should be proud enough of his/her own achievements to sit and listen thoughtfully to peers and administrators.

What angers me most is teenagers not accepting responsibility for their own actions, preferring instead to blame the people who attend graduation to wish them well. Because of the behavior of a few seniors last year, succeeding graduating classes will now pay the price for their actions.

If the senior class were polled, few students might share Ms. Rentz's misinformed opinion. And I'm certain many parents share mine.

It's only humane to neuter our pets

Thank you for your service of "For Free" to help people place unwanted animals. Today the list has 21 entries. Most advertisements have more than one animal listed. A few have neutered animals seeking new homes, which is good.

I want to relate one of the many horror stories which are told to or shown to people involved in humane societies. A man's female Doberman had a litter of mixed-breed puppies. He took the puppies one by one and bashed their little heads in with the heel of his foot in front of the mother dog. I suppose he was showing her how displeased he was with what she had done! Being a good mother she attacked him for his action. He in turn had her put to sleep. What a tragic story, just one of many. Animals respond to the call of nature. We, as their keepers, need to remember how few homes are available for unwanted animals. The Humane Society of the Permian Basin and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals urge you to neuter your pet. Let's put a stop to the pet "over population."

It seems that an over abundance of anything dilutes its value. You can contact the HSPB for information on spaying or neutering your pet. Please take the time to help your pet be a loving companion animal by altering it today. The pet over-population is a human problem. We can make a difference.

SPEAKING OUT

Fathers' rights tend to be overlooked in divorce court

By Harry K. Leventhal

Harry K. Leventhal has lived in Midland for nine years, is a CPA and controller at Greentree Country Club, and serves as the 1990 T-Ball Commissioner. He has joint conservatorship of his two children, ages 6 and 9.

A troubling aspect of the divorce situation today is the apparent lack of meaningful reform concerning fathers' rights with respect to their children. The status quo is maintained by allowing the use of the judicial system to incur unwarranted interference and delays. Not only are the parties deprived of a speedy resolution of the matter, but thousands of dollars are expended in the interim. Such an enormous waste of resources is mind-numbing when one considers the educational use such money could be put for the benefit of the children in question.

It is difficult to reconcile current court and legislative actions, given the fact that more than one-half of the female, working-age population is currently employed outside of the home. Courts still adhere to the old "at home" concept when it comes to awarding custodial rights and monetary compensation to the women in question. A growing percentage of these women are college graduates who are immediately marketable.

Those whose inherent laziness or psychological instability inhibit their capabilities should not be given sole managing conservatorship of their children and should not be allowed to receive "temporary" support handouts for an indefinite period as a proceeding drags on. Often, these types of women initiate a divorce proceeding claiming that they have to "find themselves" or because there has been "control" on the part of the husband. While this may or may not be true, it should not be allowed to be used as a vengeful tool to restrict the equal rights of fathers who are just as committed to the social, educational and religious welfare of the children as the other parent.

The courts, however, seem to have chosen to reward this type of woman not only by awarding continuing temporary support to her, but also by limiting the access of the children to the father. This judicial denial of equality to the father often leads to a disturbing choice between potential bankruptcy fighting the system or giving in to what, in effect, is nothing more than the legalized kidnapping of his children. A loving, caring father should not be treated in this manner.

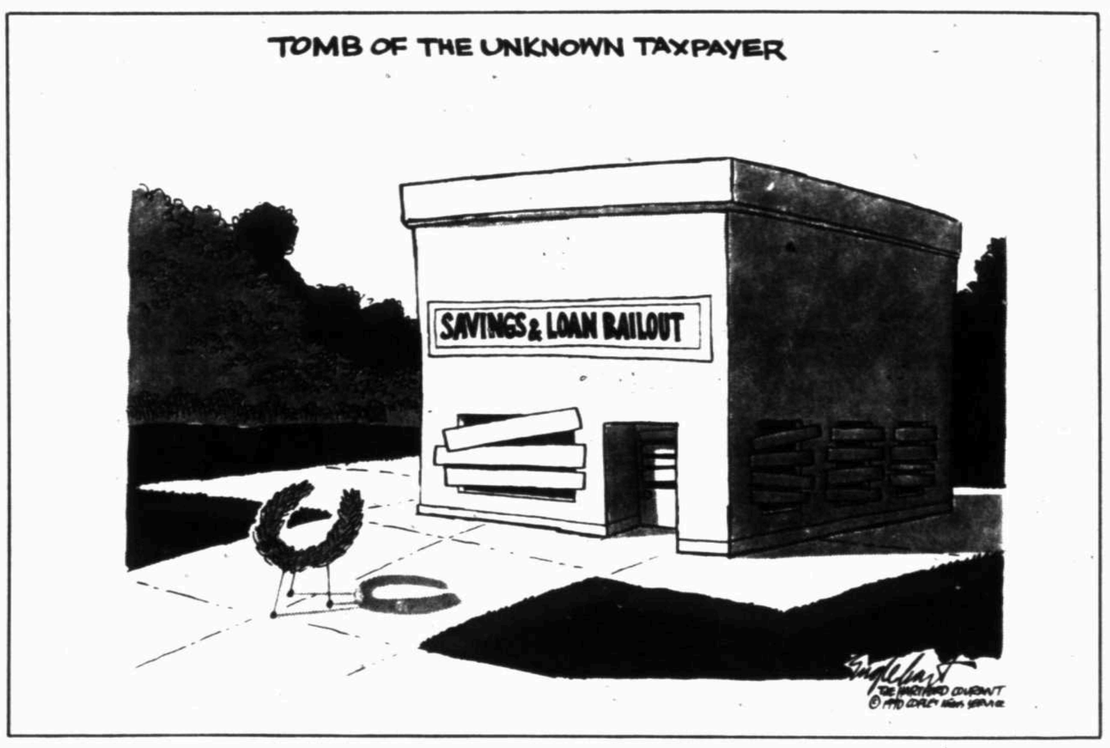
I am concerned with the custodial fate of the children of those fathers who are loving and caring individuals and who actively share and participate in all aspects of their childrens' lives. The court and legislative systems are stacked in such a way as to allow the woman who instigates the proceeding (as happens 65.7 percent of the time, according to a recent study by the National Center for Health statistics) to prolong it through legal delays, to enjoy all of the benefits of the discord she has created by the proceeding, to hide behind lawyers' charades and to deny fathers' adequate contact with their children. This scenario reeks of judicial and legislative overkill in favor of the woman and is a shameful affront to fathers who desire equal rights. A great deal of press was given to new laws that went into effect Sept. 1, 1989 supposedly enhancing fathers' rights. Those changes appear to be more form than substance.

Fathers, in the absence of strong evidence to the contrary, should be granted joint managing conservatorship with both parties sharing equally in responsibilities for the children. Mediation procedures should be established for dispute resolution when disagreements do occur. Finally, fathers should have equal rights of physical custody of their children when distances between the parties are small and transfers of the children from home to home can be achieved with a minimum of difficulty.

It is time that equal rights for fathers in divorce proceedings be given more than the cursory treatment accorded to them until now. It is my hope that enough concerned fathers will unite and attempt through strong lobbying efforts and publicity to put to rest the old, outdated concepts regarding divorce proceedings. These efforts should be directed toward influencing the courts and legislature to recognize the legitimate rights of fathers to share equally in all decisions that affect their childrens' futures. Concerned fathers deserve nothing less and should use all available legal means to achieve their goals. The automatic relegation of a divorced father to a part time parent should become a thing of the past. Legislators and elected judges should modernize their thinking or be retired with their antiquated ideas of fairness.

The time to speak out and fight for equal rights for fathers in divorce proceedings has arrived.

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 700 words or less.



Summit historic for cuts in strategic missiles, warheads

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — Whatever lack of progress there was on some contentious issues, history will, I believe, record the Bush-Gorbachev summit meeting in Washington as one of the most momentous events of the nuclear age.

Hearst

The press paid more attention to President Mikhail Gorbachev's adamant opposition to inclusion of a united Germany in NATO without security guarantees for the Soviet Union and to the failure to agree on conventional force reductions in Europe as well as Gorbachev's precarious position at home than it did to the agreement in principle to slash strategic missiles and nuclear warheads by 30 percent.

But the importance for mankind of this first cut in the ultimate weapons of destruction far transcends the shaping of a new European order.

The signing at the White House Friday of the agreement was the highlight of the summit meeting. It was based on settlement by the two superpower leaders of all key issues blocking a START I (strategic arms limitation) treaty.

U.S. and Soviet negotiators are under orders from the two leaders to complete the treaty in time for its signing by presidents Bush and Gorbachev in Moscow before the end of the year.

That, of course, is conditional on Gorbachev's survival in power. However, the political rival considered most likely to succeed Gorbachev if he is not replaced by a military dictatorship is Boris Yeltsin, new president of the Russian republic, who strongly supports arms cuts. Therefore, we can be reasonably confident that if Gorbachev should be overthrown in the near future, his successor would respect the treaty commitment, especially if it has been ratified by the Senate and the Soviet parliament.

So don't let the skeptics and self-serving political critics disillusion you about the successful nature of this just ended summit in lessening the danger of nuclear war and the cost of an arms race.

The other historic event at the Bush-Gorbachev summit was the first international agreement ever made to gradually reduce stockpiles of chemical weapons and stop all production of them. The accord will require the United States and the Soviet Union to slash their stockpiles to one-sixth of the current U.S. level of 30,000 tons. The Soviets are believed to have at least 50,000 tons, but U.S. officials are hopeful they will be brought down to a much lower level when other European countries agree on a production ban.

Numerous other agreements were concluded, including nuclear-testing controls, slowing the spread of nuclear and missile technology to Third World nations, opening up 42 ports in each country to ships flying the other nation's flag, and doubling to 1,500 the number of students who can spend at least a semester at colleges and universities in each country.

There was also an apparent breakthrough in the Soviet-Lithuanian crisis. Fedor Burlatsky, Foreign Affairs Committee chairman in the Soviet parliament, told our foreign editor, John Wallach, that Gorbachev will start direct talks with Lithuanian leaders "within weeks." Bush, according to Burlatsky, told the Soviet leader he welcomed this decision. So don't let anyone lead you to believe this was not a successful summit.

The two summiteers did not, of course, reach agreement on every item on the agenda. The most serious issue on which they failed to achieve a breakthrough was inclusion of a unified Germany in the NATO military organization. This led to failure to agree on conventional force reductions in Europe. Gorbachev was not prepared to set any date for the withdrawal of all Soviet troops from Eastern Germany until a new European security system, including the Soviet Union, has been established, which will limit the size of German military forces, prohibit German possession of nuclear weapons and guarantee existing German borders.

The tired, older-looking Soviet leader is convinced that if he acquiesced to participation of a unified, militarized Germany in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization without security guarantees, thus leaving the Soviet Union virtually defenseless against the West, he would be overthrown.

I think he is probably right. Soviet military leaders have said they would not "swallow that." A Soviet Communist Party leader publicly warned it could lead to a bitter U.S.S.R. compared with the bitter Germany in the 1930s that brought Hitler to power.

However, both presidents showed some flexibility on this crucial issue. Gorbachev proposed that a military role for a united Germany be decided by a new "council of all Europe" with direct U.S. and Soviet participation. Bush agreed that the top U.S. and U.S.S.R. aides should jointly pursue this concept next week in Copenhagen and again in Berlin two weeks later.

This decision averted a breakdown and was a conciliatory gesture by Bush to meet, at least half way, the Soviet leader's position that "time and patience" is needed to settle the question of security and economic issues involved in a united Germany's integration into a new European order. That strikes me as reasonable.

EDUCATION

Meeting techniques, swing/push dance among topics

Staff Report

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer nine short courses beginning this week.

Effective Meeting Techniques will be taught by Ken McFall Monday and Tuesday from 6-8 p.m. Participants will learn how to plan and organize effective meetings. The course will give a basic understanding of Robert's Rules of Order and other techniques necessary to conduct and participate in productive meetings.

Setting goals and objectives for a meeting and how to accomplish them within time constraint also will be included. Course fee is $12.

Becky Speight will teach Aerobic Dance on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7-8:30 p.m., June 5 through June 21. Directed toward increasing cardiovascular endurance, decreasing body fat, increasing stamina, and improving body tone, exercise and dance movements are accompanied by disco, ballroom and ballet music. Students should wear comfortable clothing and bring a towel. Course fee is $19.

Calculating Machines will be taught on Mondays through Thursdays from 8-10:05 a.m., June 5 through July 10. This course provides familiarization in the operation of the electronic calculating machines. The student will gain skills in dealing with computation, calculations, speed drills, percentages, discounts, net values, chain discounts and business forms. Text available at Midland College bookstore. Course fee is $78.

Introduction of Computer Usage in Business will be offered in three sections: Tuesdays and Thursdays from June 5 through July 5 — from 9-11 a.m., 5-7 p.m. or 7-9 p.m. Designed to remove the mystique from the world of computers, the course is appropriate for individuals who have purchased a personal computer or those who are interested in learning about computers. Upon completion of the course, students will have a knowledge of the vocabulary associated with computers and some experience with BASIC language. In addition, students will acquire an understanding of the planning and development processes required for computer applications. Class limited to 14 students. Course fee is $45.

Job Hunting & Career Development on Tuesdays from 7-9 p.m., June 5 through June 26. Students will learn business-planning and goal-setting skills to help focus on future plans and measure individual progress. Students will discover ways to "sell" themselves effectively. This course also will help develop self-confidence to overcome interview fears and ways to create and maintain a high, positive profile. A portion of the course will focus on techniques for avoiding speech habits, mannerisms, and appearance mistakes that keep job-hunters from being taken seriously. Counseling and guidance on resume preparation will be available. Course fee is $25.

Beginning Swing/Push Dance will be taught by Barbara Elliott on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7:30-9 p.m., June 5 through June 21. Ten basic steps including the throwout, push break, tucks, whip and bumps are taught. Class limited to 20 students. Course fee is $19.

Beginning Typing will be taught on Mondays through Thursdays from 10:25 a.m.-12:30 p.m., June 5 through July 10. This course is designed to teach the keyboard, machine parts, basic letter forms, copy placement, and tabulation. Students are given timed drills during class meetings to encourage speed and build accuracy. Textbooks and typing paper are needed at the first class meeting and are available at the Midland College Bookstore. Enrollment is limited to eight students. Course fee is $78.

Intermediate Typing will be taught on Mondays through Thursdays from 10:25 a.m.-12:30 p.m., June 5 through July 10. The student will further develop skills and techniques acquired in Beginning Typing, which is a course prerequisite. The student will type mailable correspondence, technical business papers and reports, tables, legal forms, and other office type problems. Course fee is $78.

Quilting I will be taught by Jean Roberts on Thursdays from 7-9:30 p.m., June 7 through June 28. Basic skills using traditional hand methods for pattern drafting, cutting, piecing, applique and finishing techniques will be taught. Two blocks which may be used in pillows, wall hangings, or tote bags will be completed during the course. Students should bring scissors and thimble. Other supplies will be available the first night of class for approximately $10. Class limited to 15 students. Course fee is $21.

For information, contact the Office of Continuing Education in the Administration Building, 685-4518.

MISD lists its summer schedule

Staff Report

The Midland Independent School District's summer school program for grades 1-6 and for special education students ages 6-13, will be at Emerson Elementary this year.

Registration will be Wednesday and Thursday, in the school library, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. each day.

Summer school classes will be from 8-11:30 a.m. from June 11 through July 20, with July as a holiday.

The $105 cost covers the three-hour class period which will include individualized instruction in reading, language arts, and mathematics.

The special education program is designed for children assigned to self-contained units, other learning disabled children will attend the regular school program.

MISD's bilingual summer school for limited English proficient students eligible for admission to kindergarten or first grade next school year will be at De Zavala Elementary.

Classes will meet daily from 8-11:30 a.m. from June 18 through Aug. 10, except July 4. Information on the bilingual program is available at 689-1007.

Registration for secondary summer school, for 7th through 12 graders and special education students ages 14-21, will be 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. June 11 and 12 at the Midland High School cafeteria.

Classes will meet from June 18 through July 25, taking off the July 4 holiday.

Only classes for which at least 12 students enroll will be offered. Unless circumstances dictate otherwise, courses will be offered on a one-semester basis, with students earning one-half credit hour each.

Cost will be $105 for a one-semester course or $210 for a full-year course.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

MC's schedule includes registration, session's opening

By H.A. Tuck

Tuck

The official registration is taking place in the Physical Education Building from 1-4 p.m. and 6-8 p.m. Classes start on Tuesday, along with a limited period of late registration.

Those who pre-registered have gotten time permits and assigned times to come for registration.

Those who didn't pre-register should come to the P.E. Building between 6-7:30 p.m. to be processed. If you didn't pre-register, you'll need to provide a transcript from high school or the last college you attended. If you don't have one, please call the Student Services Office at 685-4501 on Monday morning for instructions about what to do about a transcript.

Classes start Tuesday. The session ends July 10. There will be late registration through June 11. And remember that the college is closed on Fridays during the summer. Coming July 12-Aug. 15 is Summer II, for which pre-registration starts June 25.

Chaparral golfers are off to the national tournament this week at Scottsdale, Ariz. They'll be playing at the McCormick Ranch Golf Club Tuesday through Friday, seeking to win the first men's National Junior College Athletic Association golf title for MC.

Chap Dean Robertson, the Region V medalist, also gets to play in Monday's East vs. West Tournament. Teams play 18 holes each on Tuesday and Wednesday. A cut after that is made for the top 15 teams and those teams within 15 shots of the lead. The survivors play an additional 36 holes, 18 each on Thursday and Friday, to determine the 1990 champion.

Host Scottsdale has won the past two national titles. Midland will host the 1991 NJCAA championships.

Reba McEntire is coming to Chaparral Center on Friday for a great concert, which also features Don Williams and Garth Brooks. Tickets are priced at $17.50 each with all seats reserved. For an extra handling fee either at the box office or by calling 685-4584, you can use your credit card to pay for the tickets. The concert begins at 8 p.m.

First session of Teens On Campus, the new programs exclusively for students who have completed seventh and eighth grades, is scheduled June 11-14. There are openings in many of the classes, which meet for about two hours. Teens On Campus offers special classes Monday through Thursday, either 1-3 p.m. or 3-5 p.m., at a cost of $20 each.

Other TOC sessions are July 9-12 and Aug. 6-9.

You can register for these at the Continuing Education Office in the Administration Building or call 685-4518 for more information.

This summer's Basketball Camp is slated July 9-13, headed up by MC coach Reggie Franklin and assistant coach George Walker. The fee is $95 for the session. Those in the camp will be practicing, playing, talking, or watching films about basketball from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. all four days.

If you have the opportunity, drive through the campus this week and see the gleaming copper sheets on the roof and fascia of the new Student Center addition. They are beautiful but, unfortunately, will turn dark and dull in a short time. The installers used gloves in order not to create uneven oxidation on the copper.

Construction and remodeling is on schedule. The bookstore will be moving into its new facilities about June 15. That is the only move until the building is finished. The bookstore has to move early in order that its original facilities can be remodeled.

Chaparral Cheerleaders are having a special camp for girls and boys from second grade through high school. The training is scheduled July 30-Aug. 2 from 1-3 p.m. Fee for the camp is $40.

Continuing Education has a number of class offerings this summer, many of which begin this week. Some of the computer and typing classes are being offered in the morning, but most of the classes meet at night.

Your choices for classes beginning this week include: Effective Meeting Techniques, Aerobic Dance, Calculating Machines, Computer and You (one section 9-11 a.m., one 5-7 p.m., and another 7-9 p.m., all on Tuesday and Thursday), Job Hunting and Career Development, Beginning Swing-/Push Dance, Beginning and Intermediate Typing, and Quilting I.

In following weeks, there will be Ballroom Dance, Bridge I, Pottery, Accessorizing Your House, Concrete Masonry, Beginning Country-Western Dance, Retail Management, Beginning Lotus 1-2-3, Success Skills for Office Managers, Organizing an Effective Day, Tax-Saving Answers for the Self-Employed, Telephone Courtesy and Reception Desk Skills, Intermediate Country-Western Dance, Business Communications, and Financial Planning and Budgeting.

Registration for any of these classes is in the Continuing Education Office, Administration Building. You can call 685-4518 for more information.

MC sets registration for summer session

Staff Report

Registration for Midland College's first summer session is slated Monday in the Physical Education Building. Time permits have been issued for pre-registering students for 1-4 p.m. Persons without time permits should come to the P.E. Building between 6:30-7:30 p.m.

Summer I classes begin Tuesday and continue through July 10. Summer classes meet Monday through Thursday.

"Since we usually have a large number of summer session students from other colleges as well as first-time students from the 1990 high school graduating classes, we need to emphasize the importance of transcripts," said Dr. Don Cates, associate dean of students and registrar, "State law now requires that students furnish public colleges and universities with transcripts from the last school attended. This applies to transferring university students, transient students taking classes with us after having been enrolled at other universities, high school graduates, or high school seniors enrolling as early-admission students."

More than 1,500 students are expected for Summer I classes, many of which are offered at night. The session ends July 10, except for those students enrolled in Welding, which lasts eight weeks, and Cobol or Advanced Basic Computer Programming, each of which lasts 11 weeks.

Summer II enrollment is scheduled July 11, with classes starting July 12 and ending Aug. 15.

General subjects being offered during Summer I include: Air Conditioning and Refrigeration, Architecture, Art, Automotive Technology, Biological Science, Business Administration, Chemistry, Computer Information Systems, Criminal Justice, Diesel Mechanics, Economics, Electronics, English, Geology, Government, History, Journalism, Legal Assistance, Management, Music, Office Education, Physical Education, Photography, Physics, Psychology, Reading, Real Estate, Sociology, Spanish, Speech Communication, and Welding.

Copies of the Summer Course Bulletin are available in the Midland County Library. More information is available Monday morning by calling 685-4501.

Library hosts reading club

Staff Report

Midland County Public Library is giving every child in Midland an equal chance at sharpening his reading skills or at maintaining her reading level this summer with the Texas Summer Reading Club, "The Secret Code is READ."

The children may receive their reading logs for the program immediately by making a contract with library on how many books they will read before Aug. 4.

Supporting a code theme, the library will distribute a coded message about a particular book weekly from June 18 to July 27. When a message is deciphered (parents may help) and returned, the child will be given a McDonald's food coupon and may sign his name on a winner's scroll.

Programs include storytelling by teachers, singing with a musician, learning about dinosaurs from the Petroleum Museum staff and seeing dinosaur fossils found in West Texas.

A second program concerns the environment. "Aunt Ritzie" from "Aunt Ritzie's Art Park" has used recycling as a teaching theme for a number of years and will show how to use throw away items in useful fashion for an art project

Bonnie Boulton, fifth grade science and math teacher at Bowie Elementary, will direct a mini-workshop in creative writing using the Broadway show "Cats" as the theme for the children's compositions.

For further information on children related activities at the library, call 683-2708.

Sammy Aguirre, 4, of Buenaventura, Chihuahua, is placed in an ambulance by medical personnel at the Providence Hospital in El Paso early Saturday for transport to Dallas for a liver transplant. Doctors in Dallas determined that the child, whose liver had failed, could not survive transplant surgery. Sammy died Saturday shortly before the surgery was scheduled to begin.

Boy dies hours before liver transplant

DALLAS (AP) — A young Mexican boy who was hours away from a liver transplant died Saturday before Dallas surgeons could begin the operation.

Sammy Aguirre, 4, died between 12:30 and 1 p.m. Saturday, hospital spokeswoman Sylvia Bodell said.

A hospital employee who refused to give her name said earlier in the day that the boy was undergoing surgery, but Ms. Bodell said he "never made it that far."

"He arrived at 4 a.m. and was beginning acute liver failure at that time," she said. "He was immediately put into the intensive care unit...but quickly took a turn for the worse."

His surgery was scheduled for 1 p.m., but Ms. Bodell said surgeons determined he would not survive a liver transplant operation.

Sammy's parents, Rosa Lilia and Armando Aguirre of Buenaventura, Chihuahua, were by his side when he died, Ms. Bodell said.

Parents and physicians were elated but anxious when they learned Friday that a liver had been found for Sammy. But doctors said the boy's condition had seriously deteriorated.

The donated liver came from a Florida child who was slightly larger and a little older than Sammy, his doctor, Dr. Troy Reyna, said. The organ was sent to another liver transplant patient, Ms. Bodell said.

On Thursday, Sammy was moved to the highest priority for patients awaiting organ transplants because his liver had failed. The boy remained in a coma.

The long ordeal began May 7 when Sammy was admitted to Providence Memorial Hospital. Because Sammy is from Mexico, he is ineligible for U.S. programs that could have helped with the operation. Buenaventure is about 100 miles southwest of El Paso.

Sales, cigarettes, mixed drinks targeted

Governor Clements agrees to tax hikes to speed up approval of school reform bill

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas House and Senate leaders will try to put a school equity bill on a fast track Monday after Gov. Bill Clements agreed to a quarter-cent sales tax increase and "sin" taxes on cigarettes and mixed drinks in exchange for school reforms.

With a state court threatening to take control of state public school finances later this month, Clements called key lawmakers to the Governor's Mansion Thursday morning for face-to-face negotiations.

They continued to talk Friday afternoon while Travis County District Judge Scott McCown, in court one block away, gave the state until June 25 to come up with an acceptable plan.

Otherwise, McCown said, he will order special master William Kilgarlin's remedy for what the courts have found is an unconstitutional gap in educational resources between rich and poor school districts.

Kilgarlin's plan would redistribute $540 million in current state aid from wealthier districts to poor school districts.

Clements previously vetoed two school reform bills that called for half-cent increases in the sales tax, but shortly after Kilgarlin unveiled his plan, Clements announced the $633 million compromise that had eluded the Legislature and the governor's staff through three months of special sessions.

The revenue package includes a quarter-cent sales tax, which would raise $298 million and put the state portion of the tax at 6.25 percent, increases of 15 cents on packs of cigarettes, worth $193.5 million, and 2 percent on mixed drinks, worth $25.7 million, as well as $100 million in budget transfers and $14.7 million in fee increases.

In return, Clements got some concessions, including the right for future governors to appoint the state education commissioner, relaxation of state regulations for "exemplary" schools and an overhaul in the next Legislature of the formula for enriching "special" programs for handicapped, gifted and talented, and bilingual students.

Clements, a Republican, said he reluctantly agreed to seek new taxes Friday because Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis, both Democrats, convinced him there was "no other way to do it."

But the Legislature, which will return at 2 p.m. Monday for a record sixth special session (the fourth to deal with school finance) must pass the sales tax by a two-thirds majority to put the taxes into effect July 1, which is needed to pay for the $528 million school equity plan as well as $100 million to bail out underfunded health and human service agencies.

To do that, Clements and the legislative leaders will have to overcome resistance from other lawmakers, mainly Republicans and conservative Democrats, who remain opposed to the tax increases, and Hispanic lawmakers who would rather let the court master's "Robin Hood" plan take effect.

Midland Rep. Tom Craddick, chairman of the 60-member House Republican Caucus, said he still opposes higher taxes and he knows other Republican lawmakers who feel the same way.

Craddick may find allies with the 20 Hispanic House members, many of whose South Texas school districts would benefit from the court master's plan.

Al Kauffman, the attorney for the poor school districts whose lawsuit forced the school finance overhaul, said Friday the plaintiffs probably would prefer the master's plan, since it comes closer to addressing the inequities in the system.

Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, chairman of the House Mexican-American Caucus, also was upset that no Hispanic members were included in the negotiations, which included the governor, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, House Speaker Gib Lewis, the chairmen of affected legislative committees, and their staffs.

But Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, a member of the Mexican-American Caucus by virtue of her South Texas district, participated in the discussions as chairman of the House Public Education Committee. She said she believed the compromise protects the interests of black and Hispanic lawmakers.

While Craddick plans to continue the fight, other Republican legislators said the tax increase is more palatable when the alternative is a court master's plan that would cost their affluent districts millions of dollars.

The Dallas Independent School District would lose nearly $99 million under the court master's plan, while Houston would lose nearly $70 million. Suburban districts also would be hit hard.

Much of the $528 million in tax revenue under the legislative compromise would go to the rich districts to replace money that is redistributed to the poor districts in closing that gap.

Midland Independent School District could get $2.9 million in additional state aid under the legislative formula, as opposed to $1.2 million under the court plan, while Greenwood Independent School District ISD would get $381,000 under the legislative plan and $965,000 under the court plan. Ector County Independent School District stands to gain $4.7 million under the legislative plan and $3.19 million under the court plan.

Valley needs rain to save cotton crop

WESLACO, Texas (AP) — Rainfall, something that has not been in short supply across most of Texas this spring, is needed in the Lower Rio Grande Valley to help fuel the growth of the area's multi-million dollar cotton crop.

Cotton growers are hoping for rainfall and cooler night-time temperatures.

But lack of recent rainfall has lowered earlier expectations to the point that now many are predicting below average yields if rains do not come within the next week.

On land that is not irrigated, growers expect average yields of about 550 pounds per acre and yields on irrigated fields average about 750 pounds.

About half of Valley cotton fields are farmed using dryland methods, and half are irrigated.

John Norman, cotton entomologist with the Agricultural Extension Service in Weslaco, said Friday blooms coming out the top of cotton plants throughout the Valley indicate stress on the plants caused by extreme daytime heat, lack of moisture and temperatures that do not dip low enough at night.

Under ideal conditions, these blooms should not be seen for another two or three weeks, Norman said.

He said the blooms are evident mainly in dryland fields, but this problem can also be found is some irrigated fields.

Early estimates indicate that cotton has been planted on 349,000 acres this year in Cameron, Willacy, Hidalgo and Starr counties — a 27 percent increase over the 275,000 acres planted in the four-county area last year.

The increase in cotton-acres planted is due to government programs allowing growers to plant more acres, prospects for higher cotton prices and a disappointing season for corn growers last year.

Dating service match has storybook ending

DALLAS (AP) — What an angry father put asunder more than three decades ago a modern matchmaking service has restored.

Judy Musso and William Vogue plan to be married years after they stopped seeing each other because her father disapproved.

"It's almost a storybook thing," said the Rev. Douglas Stearns of the DeSoto Presbyterian Church who will preside over ceremonies on Sept. 1.

Ms. Musso said her mother is happy she has found Vogue again, and so are her two sons and his two daughters. Her father died in 1979.

The couple fondly recalls when they first met 32 years ago at a charity ball in San Diego.

"I was 31 and she was 19," said Vogue. "I'll never forget it. It was May 17, 1958. She had on a light blue formal gown overlaid with lace. And she had a tiara on her head."

But after nine months of secret meetings, Vogue left the state and lost contact with her.

They both married three times and raised families.

Their paths crossed in March when they became members of a Dallas area dating service.

Ms. Musso, 51, picked Vogue's voice recording, but had no idea she had met him before, even after talking an hour on the phone with him.

"We knew each other by different names," Ms. Musso said.

Vogue, 63, had changed from Ray Wilhelm Voge to William Ray Vogue, and he knew Ms. Musso by her maiden name, Hotchkiss.

But when Vogue picked her up for dinner, she instantly recognized him.

NO SUCH THING AS FREE MONEY?

TRY COUPONS

For many, a part time job outside the home is the answer to earning extra money. We have a better suggestion . . . COUPONS! Every week newspapers distribute more than $75 worth of coupons and other offers to the doorsteps of 52 million households across the U.S.

HOW BIG IS COUPONING?

More than 229 billion coupons, found in free-standing inserts and food day ads, are distributed industry-wide yearly, each with the average coupon value of 49¢. In total, U.S. consumers saved $2.68 billion using coupons in 1989 . . . THAT'S A LOT OF MONEY!

For each household, that adds up to nearly $4,000 of tax free income a year. Based on the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, the average American would have to work 14 weeks to earn the same amount in gross income.

THE POSSIBILITIES ARE ENDLESS!

STATE in brief

Teen receives 90-year term

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A prosecutor says a 90-year prison sentence given to a 16-year-old girl in a murder sends a "good message," although life in prison would have been better.

A seven-woman, five-man jury took nearly three hours Friday to decide on the 90-year term given to Donise Shavon Cherry for the killing of 23-year-old Lisa Pete.

Miss Cherry also received a concurrent 50-year sentence for aggravated robbery.

Shooting investigated

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Police were seeking clues Saturday in an apparent drive-by shooting that left a teen-age boy dead and a girl wounded in Arlington.

Officers are investigating the possibility that the attack late last night was related to an Asian gang.

Witnesses say the attack occurred at a youth recreation center. Authorities identify the dead youth only as a 17-year-old. Police spokesman Dee Anderson says the teen was pronounced dead at the scene and a 14-year-old girl was wounded.

Mystery illnesses up

DALLAS (AP) — Health officials investigating a mystery illness striking Texas children now say the number of confirmed cases may be 24. Only seven were confirmed as of a few weeks ago.

The illness, dubbed "Palestine Fever" after the town where the first cases were confirmed, causes high fevers, severe joint pain and a rash, was first spotted in Central and East Texas in early April.

Some victims, between the ages of 3 and 12, have been hospitalized for up to a month. None of the cases has been fatal.

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — San Francisco 49ers owner Eddie DeBartolo denied a report that quarterback Joe Montana had agreed to a contract extension worth $14 million over four years.

"I know nothing about that," DeBartolo said in Saturday's editions of the Peninsula Times-Tribune. "I have not talked to Joe about that."

DeBartolo, hosting his Super Bowl-champion 49ers in Kauai, Hawaii, for a five-day vacation, said "nothing has been negotiated" with Montana or his agent, Bob Woolf.

"I assure you, when something is done, people will be told. Like I said, nothing has been negotiated," DeBartolo told the Times-Tribune. "If it's that good a deal, I'd take it myself."

It was reported Friday in The National that Montana, who has led the 49ers to four Super Bowl titles.

Capriati wins on tourney's glamour court

■ Fourteen-year-old Jennifer Capriati, undaunted by center court attention, led a pack of teens into the French Open's fourth round with a straight-set Saturday win.

Associated Press

PARIS — So much for stage fright.

Walking onto center court in a Grand Slam tournament for the first time Saturday, 14-year-old Jennifer Capriati knew she had made the big time.

She walked off with a spot in the record books.

"I couldn't believe they put me on center court," the Florida eighth-grader said. "I was really happy about it. I thought, 'This is where all the great champions have been.' "

Capriati showed she was worthy of the honor, beating 12th seeded Judith Wiesner of Austria 6-4, 6-4, to lead a quintet of teen-agers into the fourth round of the French Open.

Capriati, who turned 14 on March 28, became the youngest woman to reach the round of 16 in a Grand Slam tournament. The previous mark was held by American Kathy Rinaldi, who was four days older when she reached the quarterfinals here in 1981.

"She doesn't seem like 14," Wiesner said. "She seems physically grown up. Ability-wise, she's in the top 10."

Wiesner was the first of two seeds eliminated Saturday. Aaron Krickstein, the men's fifth seed, was upset 6-2, 6-3, 3-6, 7-6, by unseeded Karel Novacek of Czechoslovakia.

Trail Blazers rest, ponder opponents

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — The weary Portland Trail Blazers finally are getting some rest as they wait for an opponent in the NBA finals.

After 13 playoff games in 26 days, Coach Rick Adelman's team was off on Saturday, a second consecutive day of rest. The only activity was a brief meeting.

"We really needed this," Adelman said. "It's been hectic both emotionally and physically. For us to get two days off and get our legs back will help."

Portland, a finalist for the first time since winning the NBA title in 1977, returns to practice on Sunday while the Detroit Pistons and Chicago Bulls decide the Eastern Conference finalist. The deciding game of that best-of-7 series will be played Sunday at the Pistons' home court.

If the Pistons win, the Blazers plan to fly to Detroit Sunday night for the Tuesday night opener of the Finals. If the Bulls win, Chicago will play at Portland Tuesday night.

Forward Buck Williams said the Blazers were exhausted after their series-clinching victory at Phoenix Thursday night. The team stayed up most of the night and was greeted by a wildly enthusiastic crowd estimated at 10,000 when they arrived at Hillsboro airport at 1:35 a.m.

"It's helped me out tremendously," Williams said of the time off. "There comes a time in the season when you need this. Eight months of playing the game and the fatigue factor starts to set in. This will be good for all of us."

Guards Terry Porter and Drazen Petrovic were the only Blazers who ventured onto the court Saturday, devoting 30 minutes to some long-range shooting.

"Just trying to keep my touch," Porter said.

The days off will mean Portland will be the better rested team in the Finals. That's something unusual for a team that hadn't had more than a day between contests since the second game of the Western Conference semifinal series against San Antonio.

"When you play every other day with a high intensity level, it takes something out of you," Porter said. "This gives us a chance to get our legs back and a day to enjoy" winning the conference championship.

In public, at least, the Blazers insist they don't care which team makes it to the Finals. It would seem, however, that it would to Portland's advantage to face Chicago, since that pairing would give the Blazers the home-court advantage.

Bulls set to charge

■ Detroit has the home court edge, but Michael Jordan is just one win away from the cherished NBA finals as the best-of-seven Eastern Conference title series concludes today.

Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Forget all those brilliant All-Star games. Forget the slam dunk contests. Those are mere sideshows.

Michael Jordan now is one game away from the NBA Finals, an event he has coveted since helping North Carolina win an NCAA championship in 1982.

But first, Jordan's Chicago Bulls must eliminate the defending NBA champion Detroit Pistons on Sunday at The Palace. The winner meets the Portland Trail Blazers, Western Conference champions.

For all of Jordan's greatness, though, the Bulls have never played in the finals.

"It feels good looking forward to the challenge," said Jordan, who scored 18 third-quarter points to spark the Bulls to a 109-91 victory in Friday's sixth game. "But we still have to go through Detroit.

"Once you get to the final series, you realize we might not get there again. We played well at home all season long. Detroit has been our nemisis."

The Pistons were 4-1 against the Bulls during the regular season (2-0 at home, 2-1 in Chicago). But the playoffs have been another matter altogether, with each team winning three games on its home court.

"Whatever is left for the seventh game, we have to throw it out on the floor," Jordan said. "In the seventh game, it must be a whole dedicated effort."

JIMMY PATTERSON

Parks superintendent responds to criticism

Mike Casey was a little concerned over statements made in last Monday's Reporter-Telegram concerning the condition of a certain soccer field at Hogan Park ("Shootin' Stars Call 'Playground' Home).

Patterson

Doug Mello, head coach of the Permian Basin Shootin' Stars and Joe Kuchinski, the semi-professional soccer team's general manager, were, to put it mildly, a little upset at the shape the field was in for their 1990 home opener.

To refresh the memory a little, the Shootin' Stars, in danger of forfeiting either all of their home games or the team itself, reached an agreement with the Permian Basin Soccer Association — the adult soccer outlet here — and wound up with one of the PBSA's fields located just south of Angels Stadium.

Honestly, the field is in a state of disarray. There was a patch of overgrown weeds and brush in one corner of the playing field, stickers throughout and what seemed like more dirt than grass.

But, assures Casey, the Superintendent of Parks for the City of Midland, there is reason for the field's condition.

The field is in use nine months out of the year by soccer associations and private citizens. So when the Shootin' Stars hosted the Lubbock Lazers last Sunday, the two teams stepped onto a field that had been in almost constant use since last September.

Casey, a graduate of Texas A&M who got his start in the nationally recognized College Station parks system, points out that the PBSA field has been used with such frequency that there is not ample time for parks workers to refurbish its surface.

"The growing season is right around the first part of June," Casey said. "It's not made up of a tough turf. In a month's time you're not going to get a very good root."

The soccer fields normally require at least three months to be properly replenished, reseeded and tended to.

"At least the whole summer," Casey said, when asked how long a field needs to be cared for so it can take root each year. "Ideally, if they can stay off the field it'd be great."

The Stars' last regular season home game is July 28. Provided the team misses the playoffs, that would give the parks department roughly six weeks before PBSA teams begin play in mid-September. Not enough off-season time for proper reseeding, Casey said.

"I think what got me going was that (Mello and Kuchinski) seemed so unappreciative of what we were able to do in the short run," Casey said. "It's sort of like looking a gift horse in the mouth, but it's also looking him in the eye and slapping him, too."

Casey noted that the Shootin' Stars schedule will put the parks department behind in their efforts to tend to the field, which could in turn delay the PBSA's season.

"And it'll be worse next year," Casey said.

The City of Midland's Lamesa Road project will cut right through Hogan Park by the end of the summer. The soccer fields just west of the Angel Stadium parking lot will be history.

When the work is being done by the road crews, water to the park area will be cut off, expected in late July. Right when the Shootin' Stars season is scheduled to end and the parks department would've started work on replenishing the field in question.

"We'll do the best we can with what we've got," Casey assured. "But the condition of that f d is going to keep getting worse and worse. There's nothing we'll be able to do for it to show improvement for next season."

Chaps hit links in nationals

Staff Report

The Chaparrals received an at-large invitation to the tournament, which is being hosted by Scottsdale Community College at the McCormick Ranch Golf Club in Scottsdale, Ariz.

The Scottsdale Artichokes have won the past two national golf titles and are among the favorites for the 1990 crown. MC will host the 1991 championships.

"All the teams in the field are strong, but we feel we can play with anyone right now," said MC coach Delnor Poss. "The Chaps finished behind Odessa College and New Mexico Junior College in the Region V tournament as well as the conference tournament and not many teams are any better than those two. We've played tournaments in Florida, Arizona, and Texas this season and have defeated some of the teams ranked in the Top 10."

MC sophomore Dean Robertson was the Region V medalist, which earned him a spot in Monday's special East-West 18-hole tourney that's restricted to the 24 regional medalists.

Play begins Tuesday and Wednesday on McCormick Ranch's Palm and Pine courses. The five-man teams will play 18 holes each day. After Wednesday's round, the field will be narrowed to the top 15 teams, as well as teams within 15 shots of the lead. The survivors then will play 36 more holes, 18 each on Thursday and Friday, for the championship. Midland last year finished sixth.

Four scores from among the five players on each team are counted each day. Participating with Robertson, a Scottish junior champion, are sophomores Mike Johnson of Midland, Brad Wells of Graham, and Mark Kochan of Canada, plus freshman Mark King of Scotland. All four sophomores played in the 1989 championships. Johnson and Robertson made the NJCAA All-American list as a result of their play in the 1989 tourney.

"Since only two at-large invitations went out this year, we feel fortunate to be in the tournament. But we went in 1988 as an at-large team and finished 13th, so we don't feel we are in over our heads," Poss said.

Miami-Dade North of Florida received the other at-large berth this year. Among the top teams, along with OC and NMJC, are Central Alabama, Florida Community College, Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College of Georgia, Anderson College of South Carolina, San Jacinto Community College of Pasadena, Tx., Brevard of Florida, Western Nebraska, and Bossier Parish Community College of Louisiana.

For the first time, this year's tournament has three divisions with Midland, Odessa, and NMJC playing in the top Division I bracket.

Rangers call Reimer

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers have purchased the contract of Oklahoma City 89ers first baseman-outfielder Kevin Reimer.

Reimer has hit .277 with four home runs and 32 RBIs in 50 games this season with the American Association ballclub.

The 25-year-old Reimer also was with the Rangers for portions of the 1988 and 1989 seasons, hitting .100 with one homer in 15 games.

To make room for Reimer, outfielder Thad Bosley has been put on irrevocable waivers so that he may be given an unconditional release.

Reimer was scheduled to join the Rangers in time for Saturday night's game with the California Angels.

Chi Chi Rodriguez celebrates a birdie putt on the 13th hole in Saturday's seniors golf play at the Commemorative Tournament in Scarborough, N.Y.

Seniors Golf

SCARBOROUGH, N.Y. (AP) — Two-time defending champion Bob Charles birdied three of the final five holes on the way to a 64 and a one-shot lead over Lee Trevino after Saturday's second round of the $350,000 Commemorative senior golf tournament.

Charles completed two rounds over the par-70, 6,545-yard Sleepy Hollow Country Club course at 131. Trevino, a four-time tournament winner this season and the tour's leading money winner, shot his second 66 and was at 132.

Chi Chi Rodriguez matched Charles' 64, highlighted by a hole-in-one on the 10th hole. He missed a chance at 63 when he bogeyed the 18th and was at 133 with Walt Zembriski and Jimmy Powell. Zembriski shot 66, Powell 69.

First-round leader Dick Rhyan, who has yet to win in four years on the tour, had a 1-over 71 for 134. He was joined at six under par by Gary Player, who shot 69.

"I hit every green," said Charles, the tour's top money winner the last two years, who had six birdies and no bogeys. "I missed three short putts, otherwise I might have had a 59.

"This wasn't a great putting round. There were no lucky shots and no lucky putts. It was just a solid round of golf.

"I love this course," he said. "It's a treat to get on a real course instead of those real estate courses.

"My putting has been off since I had to change to a new grip," said Charles, whose old grip was banned by the U.S. Golf Association. "I'm still searching, but I'm not doing too badly."

Trevino, who had one bogey and three birdies to go with an eagle, explained, "I didn't miss a fairway and I only missed one green.

"I don't think Bob will shoot over 67, so I'm going to need a 64 or 65. The secret tomorrow is the iron shots. That will get the ball into position for the putts."

Rodriguez hit his tee shot on 18 into a pine tree, landing on a branch about seven feet high.

"Easter came late for me," he said. "I found my Easter egg in the tree. The round could've been worse and it could've been better."

Rodriguez used a 2-iron for the hole-in-one, the 25th of his career and second this year, on the 174-yard 10th hole. "As soon as I hit it, J.C. (Goosie) said it was an ace," said Rodriguez, who had five birdies to go along with one bogey.

The hole-in-one dropped Rodriguez to five under and he admitted thinking of 59.

"Then I had a couple of bad shots on the next two holes and, even though I made par, that killed my chances," Rodriguez said.

"If I shoot 64 again, I'll win. I don't play to finish third or fourth. I'd like to see Rhyan win. He needs the money more than the rest of us."

Bears could have new roof over heads

CHICAGO (AP) — Officials who want to expand the McCormick Place exhibition center and add a domed sports stadium said Saturday they believe they are near an agreement to have the Chicago Bears as tenants.

Officials of the Metropolitan Pier & Exposition Authority planned weekend talks with the management of the National Football League team and scheduled a special meeting with the authority's board for Monday.

"I hope to be able to tell the board that we have an agreement with the Bears," authority chairman John Schmidt said Friday.

On Saturday, Schmidt visited the Consumer Electronics Show at McCormick Place and said he planned a meeting later in the day with Bears president Michael McCaskey.

Kemper Open

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — Steve Jones rode a hole-in-one to a 6-under-par 65 Saturday and a three-stroke lead over four players after three rounds of the Kemper Open.

Jones, seeking his first victory of year, completed three trips over the 6,917-yard TPC at Avenel course at 11-under-par 202.

He used an 8-iron to ace the 162-yard, par-3 ninth hole, then reeled off three birdies over the next four holes. After four straight pars, he closed his round with a birdie at 18.

"It just happened to be my day today," he said. "We'll just find out if it's my day tomrrow."

Clark Burroughs, Joel Edwards, Scott Hoch and second-round leader Gil Morgan shared second at 205. Hale Irwin, who shot 65, and 1987 champion Tom Kite were among five players at six under.

Burroughs eagled two holes and birdied three others, but also had two bogeys on the back nine for a 66.

Burroughs opened the round with a birdie and then eagled No. 2, a 622-yard, par-5. After three straight pars, he eagled the par-5 6th, then made three pars to turn at 8-under.

Birdied at Nos. 10 and 13 were negated by bogeys on 12 and 16.

He missed a two-footer for par on 16 before closing the round with pars.

"I'm playing with new clubs and a new putter. ... Maybe I should do that more often," he said.

Edwards tied a course record with a 64. After starting the day tied for 27th, he put together eight birdies against a lone bogey.

"I was hitting it well and putting it well," he said. "It was one of those days when you get it going and the holes starts looking a little bit bigger as you go along."

Edwards, who joined the PGA Tour last year, has never finished better than eighth. He admitted that he would be a bit tense vying for the lead on the final day.

"I'll be nervous, but it's going to be fun. It's going to come out good no matter what," he said.

Jones, who won three tournaments last year, has finished second and third this season. He was disqualified from last week's Bell-South Atlanta tournament for playing the wrong ball.

"My game isn't where it was last year," he admitted. "The season's 10 months long, and I'm trying to be patient."

Gerring takes lead

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Cathy Gerring birdied three of the final five holes Saturday to build a two-shot lead over Elaine Crosby and Mary Beth Zimmerman after two rounds of the $300,000 LPGA Lady Keystone Open.

Gerring's 5-under-par 67 gave her a two-day total of 137 on the 6,348-yard West Course of the Hershey Country Club. Crosby added a 69 to her opening-round 70 and Zimmerman had a 72.

Dawn Coe, Cathy Marino and Barba Mucha were at 140 while the group at 141 included Pat Bradley, Kathy Postlewait, Maric Bozarth, Lisa Walters and Caroline Pierce. Coe and Mucha shot 69s and Marino a 72.

Stephanie Farwig, who started the day tied for the lead, hit her first tee shot into a trap. She took a double bogey on that hole and had a triple bogey on No. 3 when she hooked two fairway irons into the woods. She shot 78 and was at 145, eight strokes off the lead.

Kate Rogerson, who was tied with Farwig after the opening 18, fared little better on Saturday. She shot 76.

Gerring pulled away from the pack with birdies on 14, 15 and 16 to get to eight under. She gave a stroke back at No. 18 with a bogey after her tee shot rolled under a tree.

Zimmerman broke par on only one hole, chipping in from 20 yards for eagle on the 16th.

This plant is totally computerized with in house data base of all film and documents for Midland County from sovereignty to current date. Our filming and key punch is done in house for more accurate and efficient access in preparation of title policies and abstracts.

These records and documents are, also, available to financial institutions and law firms for copy and reproductions.

The courthouse is filmed daily and all records as filed including court and probates key punched to our data base.

Our title underwriter is Title Resource Guaranty.

Joan Neagle is manager of the title and abstract division and has many years experience in the Permain Basin.

For faster, accurate, and more efficient real estate closings, try our modern computerized plant. Closings are arranged to suit realtors and clients needs at any time of day, week, or holiday.

Give us a chance to serve you.

Mears nabs Miller 200 pole

CART

WEST ALLIS, Wis. (AP) — Rick Mears, outrunning teammate Danny Sullivan by 3½ mph, captured the pole position Saturday in his bid to win a third consecutive Miller 200.

The two-time defending champion on the flat one-mile oval at Wisconsin State Fair Park turned a lap of 157.446 mph for his third straight pole here, his second of the season and 33rd of his Indy-car career.

Sullivan, driving an almost identical Penske 90 Chevrolet, took the outside spot on the front row for Sunday's 200-lap race with a lap of 153.919.

There will be four Andrettis in the race. John, Mario's nephew, qualified 11th at 148.650, while Jeff, Mario's younger son, earned his first Indy-car start at 143.301, good for 16th in the 21-car field.

Jeff, a year younger than Michael, failed to make the field for last week's Indianapolis 500, but has had previous experience at this track, where he won a Super Vee pole and race in 1985.

It is the first time four members of the same family have run in an Indy-car race.

Bobby Rahal was fifth fastest at 152.873, followed by Emerson Fittipaldi 152.717 in the third Penske Racing entry, Scott Brayton 151.394, Teo Fabi 151.184, CART-PPG series point leader Al Unser Jr. 149.396 and Raul Boesel 149.007.

Roberto Guerrero crashed both of his Alfa Romeo-powered Marches, hitting the wall with his primary car during the morning practice session and tagging the wall on the first lap of his qualifying attempt with the team backup.

The Colombian-born driver was not injured and the team was expected to repair the less-damaged backup and get it ready to start last in the field.

Rookie Michael Greenfield also walked away uninjured from his second crash of the weekend, but his only car will not be ready in time to race.

Mears, whose best lap in practice was 151.579 on Friday, said: "We ran it at the limit. We had it as close as we could get it without losing it.

"It was the first time this weekend we've had everything in place. We were at full boost and there was no traffic."

Mears, who set a qualifying record and won the season-opener at the slightly-banked one-mile oval at Phoenix, made his fast run only moments after Sullivan had posted his best lap to move briefly to the front of the lineup.

When Mears' speed was announcedm, his teammate winced and mouthed the word "Ouch!"

"I was pretty happy with my time, but I've been there a few times before with Mears," Sullivan said. "I wasn't going to get too excited. I knew he was probably going to go faster. I just didn't think he was going to be that fast."

Stock cars set for Dover

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Morgan Shepherd has come a long way from running moonshine in rural North Carolina.

But he's just as careful, and that has put the NASCAR journeyman in position to move to the top of the Winston Cup standings Sunday in the $542,000 Budweiser 500 at Dover Downs International Speedway.

Dick Trickle has the pole, his first in Winston Cup racing, and four of the top five drivers this year follow in the lineup. The only top-five driver starting further back is Shepherd, who will start 14th, but 500 laps on the high-banked 1-mile oval give him plenty of time to move up.

Shepherd trails leader Dale Earnhardt, who dominated last year's two races here, by 21 points. He conceivably could take the lead by finishing only three places ahead of Earnhardt.

Although he has no wins this year and Earnhardt has three, the Winston Cup points system rewards consistently high finishes. Nobody has been more consistent this year than the 48-year-old Shepherd, from Conover, N.C.

Shepherd is the only driver to finish in the top 10 in all 10 races, with 19 races still to go. He has four top-five finishes, including a second at Atlanta March 18.

"If you knock on the door long enough, sooner or later someone's going to open it," Shepherd said. "And we're right there knocking."

By contrast, Derrike Cope won the biggest race of the year, the opening Daytona 500, but has finished in the top 10 only once since and is 23rd in the points.

Earnhardt leads with 1,533 points, with 185 possible in one race. Defending champion Rusty Wallace, who is fifth at 1,359, on Thursday was discussing the points race when he stopped himself.

Young Waltrip wins 200-miler

Waltrip led 131 of 200 laps on the high-banked, 1-mile oval at Dover Downs International Speedway, including the final 53. He took home $10,975.

The fifth caution of the day, caused by a wreck involving Patty Moise and Dave Rezendes, set the stage for Waltrip's duel with Gant over the final 29 laps.

Waltrip, Gant and pole-sitter Bobby Labonte moved out from the field on the way to a 1-2-3 finish. Waltrip's Pontiac averaged 108.141 mph.

"It was a great run for us," said Waltrip, who earlier in the day had been the fastest second-round qualifier for Sunday's Budweiser 500 at 143.016 mph.

"We got out in front where we wanted to be. We elected not to stop early, which I was afraid was going to hurt us, but we came in and got fresh tires."

Gant said he ran "about as good as I could go."

"I don't know why I keep saying Earnhardt because Morgan Shepherd's right on (him). And there's a lot of races that I know Earnhardt's going to go to that he's not going to run well at that Morgan's going to run good at," Wallace said.

Shepherd has taken a colorful path to this point. Once married at the start-finish line before a race, he remembers buying his first car for $12.50, a gray squirrel, two flying squirrels and a 20-gauge shotgun.

He said he also ran moonshine, but never after one episode when he was about 21. He and a friend went to pick up some moonshine, and a horde of agents closed in on them along a rural road.

"We had a Pepsi bottle with moonshine in it sitting between the seats," he said. His friend driving the car slowed while Shepherd eased a door open to get rid of the evidence. Then they stopped.

"They were all over our car and if we hadn't gotten that Pepsi bottle out of the car they would have had us," he said. "That was the last time that I hauled any."

Always fascinated by cars, he didn't start racing until he was 26 years old. In 1975 he was second on the Busch Grand National circuit and won it in 1980.

He moved up to Winston Cup as a regular in 1981, narrowly missing rookie-of-the-year honors. Since then, he has driven for as many as seven car owners in one season. He has two career wins.

This year, he is driving for owner Bud Moore.

NCAA Track

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — California's Sheila Hudson fulfilled a promise by smashing her American record in the triple jump and Wisconsin's Suzy Favor completed an illustrious career by winning a record ninth NCAA track title Saturday night.

Louisiana State swept the men's and women's titles for the second year in a row, the only team to achieve such a sweep. The men had 44 points to 36 for indoor champion Arkansas and 34 for Baylor. The Lady Tigers, led by sprinter Esther Jones, took the women's title with 53 points to UCLA's 46 and Wisconsin's 42.

Hudson, in her final college meet, leaped 46 feet, ¾ inches to complete a horizontal jump double. She won the long jump Friday.

Jones led LSU to the women's title by sweeping the 100- and 200-meter races Saturday night, after anchoring the Tigers to victory in the 400-meter relay Friday night. She took the 100 in a wind-aided 11.14 seconds and the 200 in 22.49, the fastest by an American this year.

Jones' double matched the two sprint golds achieved by her more renowned former teammate, Dawn Sowell, in last year's NCAA championships.

After winning the long jump Friday night, Hudson said she would take a serious shot at the triple jump record of 45-5¼ she set in 1987 at San Jose, Calif.

She made good on her promise twice. On her second attempt, she sailed 45-7¾, improving the record by 2½ inches. On her fifth jump, she became the first American to jump 46 feet, adding five inches to her second-round jump.

"I knew I had the capability to break the American record," Hudson said. "I didn't think of it as going out on a limb."

The record jump was the fourth-best ever by a woman outdoors. Only world record-holder Galina Chistyakova of the Soviet Union, who jumped 47-7¾ last year, and Li Huirong of China have gone longer.

Hudson's jump was the best in the world outdoors this year.

The triple jump title was Hudson's third in an outdoor championship. After winning in 1987 and 1988, she redshirted last year to concentrate on her studies and graduated last month with a degree in architecture.

Hudson also swept the triple jump and long jump titles in the NCAA indoor meet in March, when she set an American indoor record of 45-9.

She won the long jump title Friday night at 22-1, the best by an American this year and her career best.

Favor, a senior with a cross-country season of eligibility remaining, swept to an unprecedented fourth straight title in the outdoor 1,500 meters. She pulled away down the final straightaway for a seven-meter victory over Tennessee's Jasmin Jones in 4 minutes, 8.26 seconds, the fastest by a collegian this year.

The remarkable Favor, who never has lost in the NCAA championships, won her first outdoor 800-meter title Friday night. She also has won three NCAA indoor titles in the mile and one indoors at 3,000 meters. In four years at Wisconsin, she won 54 of 56 races against college competition, the last 40 in a row.

LSU's men were sparked by Llewellyn Starks' victory in the long jump. Simon Williams' third place in the shot put was worth six points and Bengt Jarlsjo's fifth in the decathlon netted another four.

TENNIS: Seles struggles in tie-breaker

From 1C

Krickstein saved two match points in the 10th game of the fourth set but dropped five straight points in the tiebreaker to lose it 7-2. That left three Americans in the round of 16: No. 3 Andre Agassi, defending champion and No. 11 Michael Chang and No. 13 Jim Courier.

Capriati, who will reach at least No. 17 in the next world rankings, is just one member of the women's teen brigade charging through this year's field.

Also advancing were 16-year-old Monica Seles, 18-year-old Mary Joe Fernandez and 19-year-olds Natalia Zvereva and Ann Grossman. Conchita Martinez, 18, reached the round of 16 on Friday.

Seles, the second seed, struggled against Leila Meskhi of the Soviet Union and escaped with a 7-6 (7-4), 7-6 (7-4) victory, her 28th straight win.

No. 7 Fernandez downed Isabel Cueto of West Germany 7-6 (7-3), 6-2, No. 10 Zvereva beat Stacy Martin 6-4, 6-1 and the unseeded Grossman beat Kirrily Sharpe of Australia 6-2, 4-6, 6-1.

BULLS: Stamina could be factor

From 1C

Jordan — and the home court — have been the key to every game. He has averaged 25.3 points in the three games in Detroit, down from 39.3 in the three games at rowdy Chicago Stadium.

He hopes that will change.

"It is the same court and the same dimensions," Jordan said. "We just have to block out the surroundings playing on their home court."

Chicago has lost its last seven in Detroit, dating back to Game 1 of last year's conference finals.

If the Bulls win Sunday, they would be the fifth club in NBA history to overcome an 2-0 deficit and win a seven-game series. Portland was the last, beating Philadelphia in the 1977 NBA Finals.

Chicago's comeback began in Game 3, as Detroit squandered a 14-point lead — a game the Pistons have come to rue.

"It shouldn't have come to this," said Detroit's Dennis Rodman, playing with a sprained ankle. "But they hung in and now we've got to play a seventh game."

The Pistons found themselves in a similar spot Wednesday. After losing two games in Chicago over Memorial Day weekend to tie the series, the Pistons beat the Bulls 97-83 in Game 5.

"Our backs are to the wall," Detroit's Vinnie Johnson said. "Usually we rise to meet those challenges. We must win and we're confident that we will."

Because it will be the fifth game in eight days between the two teams, stamina could be a factor. Detroit's bench has outscored Chicago's 180-115

FIELD: No ready-made solution

by his team's coach and GM last Sunday. Late last week, Dyer faxed a letter to the Reporter-Telegram concerning the "criticizing reviews" of the Stars' home field. The letter was entitled "It ain't perfect, but it's home."

"The Shootin' Stars, however, are happy just to have a place to play," the letter read. "Considering the fact that our local version of the Southwest Indoor Soccer League was in serious doubt of a home field just 24 hours prior to the first home game, some special people did a tremendous job finding a place to play outdoors, and without a lot of help we could have lost it all.

"With time and continued cooperation our community soccer fields will improve, but for now we will be satisfied to play where we are."

Taking into account Casey's prognosis for the future of the field and Dyer's willingness to be patient and wait for improvement of the city's soccer fields, it's hard to see a ready-made solution to this problem in the foreseeable future.

Sunday Silence's return anxiously awaited

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Sunday Silence returns to the races Sunday, nearly alone but with eyes of the entire racing world upon him.

He will face just two opponents in his first race since he won the Breeders' Cup Classic last Nov. 4 and locked up 1989 Horse of the Year honors over Easy Goer.

His 4-year-old debut comes in the $300,000-added Californian at Hollywood Park, some six months after he underwent arthroscopic knee surgery to remove bone chips.

"He's plenty fit," said trainer Charlie Whittingham, who co-owns Sunday silence along with Arthur B. Hancock and Dr. Ernest Gaillard.

Assigned 126 pounds, the same weight he carried in beating Easy Goer in last year's Kentucky Derby and Preakness, Sunday Silence will be ridden by his regular jockey, Chris McCarron. The distance is 1⅛ miles fo. 3-year-olds and up.

Others entered are Stylish Winner, 115, who will be ridden by Corey Black, and Charlatan III, 111, with Julio Garcia up.

With three starters, The Californian will have a total purse of $309,400 and the winner will earn $174,400.

After he won the Derby and Preakness, Sunday Silence lost the Belmont Stakes to Easy Goer by eight lengths, so he needed the Breeders' Cup Classic victory to win the Eclipse Award.

His recent words indicate he's back to form. He went a mile in 1:34 3-5 on May 26 and a half mile on Thursday in a very quick 46 3-5.

In his career, Sunday Silence has eight wins and four seconds in 12 starts with earnings of $4,600,154.

One of Sunday Silence's second-place finishes came at Hollywood Park last July when, as the 1-5 favorite, he was upset by Prized in the Swaps Stakes.

Stylish Winner and Charlatan III have only one win between them since 1988. Stylish Winner won the On Trust Handicap at Hollywood Park last November.

Both horses competed in the Mervyn LeRoy Handicap on May 20. Charlatan III went off at 35-1 but finished second by a head to Super May. Stylish Winner was fifth.

"I like Charlatan III," Garcia said. "If he runs anywhere like the Mervyn LeRoy, he'll be tough."

Stylish Winner, a 6-year-old California-bred gelding who is trained by Bruce Headley, has won five of 35 lifetime starts and has earned $690,200.

Before the Mervyn LeRoy race, Stylish Winner finished second behind Criminal Type and ahead of Ruhlmann in the San Antonio Handicap at Santa Anita. Ruhlmann later won the Santa Anita Handicap.

Charlatan III, a 5-year-old Chilean-bred horse who is trained by Hector Palma, has six wins in 24 lifetime starts and has earned $205,185. Charlatan III hasn't won since 1988, going 0-for-12 since.

Wrangler rally stymies Angels

Staff Report

WICHITA, Kan. — Tim Meeks, Midland's top reliever, gave up three runs in the bottom half of the ninth inning Saturday, and the Wranglers defeated the Angels 8-7 here.

Meeks, who fell to 6-2, held a 7-5 lead entering the ninth inning. But Tim McWilliam's pop up dropped for a double, and Kevin Flora's throwing error allowed Will Taylor to score the tying run.

Mike Humphreys followed with a double down the left-field line, and McWilliam crossed with the game winner.

Midland took a 4-0 lead in the first inning and had a 5-4 lead after six, then added insurance runs in the seventh and eighth.

But Wichita managed runs off all three Angel hurlers, including four off starter Kyle Abbott.

The win was Wichita's ninth in 11 tries against the Angels this season. And Midland has now lost all six games versus the Wranglers in Wichita.

Wichita moved to 29-21 with the win, while the Angels dropped to 20-31.

Midland first baseman Mark Howie hit his fourth homer of the season, and he was 2-for4 with three RBI and two runs scored to lead the offense.

Holyfield near title shot against Douglas

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Evander Holyfield is on the brink of a title shot against James "Buster" Douglas, while two former champions appear headed for a big-money match against each other.

"The WBA will conduct purse bids Sunday, June 10 at 4 p.m. at the Plaza Hotel" in New York, James Binns, counsel for the World Boxing Association, said after Holyfield stopped Seamus McDonagh in the fourth round Friday night.

That's because Douglas now is in a position where he must make a mandatory defense for the WBA.

A heavyweight champion must defend every nine months against the highest available contender. If such a fight is not made within 30 days after the completion of the nine-month period, the match is put up to purse bids.

Meanwhile, King is expected to announce a fall match between Tyson and George Foreman, if Tyson beats Henry Tillman and Foreman defeats Adilson Rodrigues on the same card June 16 at Las Vegas.

Many boxing people think Tyson and Foreman is the biggest money match on the horizon.

There has been speculation that the title might be split because of political wheelings and dealings that are so much a part of boxing.

Binns, however, said he thought the World Boxing Council would go along with the WBA purse bid, and Bob Lee, president of the International Boxing Federation, has said his group would.

Ruddock appeared set for a challenge to Tyson last November, but Tyson pulled out because of illness, then fought Douglas.

Large lump threatens Mr. Frisky's existence

CLARKSBURG, N.J. (AP) — Kentucky Derby favorite Mister Frisky, unable to eat because of a grapefruit-sized lump in his throat, was being treated with antibiotics Saturday to combat a life-threatening condition, veterinarians said.

"It's a situation where there won't be any rapid improvement or decline, hopefully," said Dr. Scott E. Palmer, surgeon at the New Jersey Equine Clinic.

Mister Frisky, who had won his first 16 lifetime starts, finished eighth in the Derby, then ran a tired third in the Preakness. His condition probably affected his performance, and he has lost 100 pounds since it was diagnosed, Belmont Park veterinarian Dr. Robert Fritz said.

"The prognosis is guarded, and it remains guarded until further notice," Fritz said. "This is a very complex condition. It is life-threatening. The horse remains in serious condition."

Mister Frisky arrived at the clinic in western Monmouth County early Thursday morning after Fritz determined the horse needed more care than he could provid at the track barn, Palmer said.

Mister Frisky was slated to start in the Belmont Stakes on Saturday until he became ill. Trainer Laz Barrera announced last week that the horse would not run in the last of the Triple Crown races.

Although a Louisville-based veterinarian detected an elevated white blood count before the Kentucky Derby on May 5, Fritz said no doctor would have been able to identify the illness at that time.

"The horse didn't run to his true ability," Fritz said.

Fritz said he believes the growth "started out very small before the Kentucky Derby and continued to grow. On Tuesday night, it was the size of a grapefruit."

Fritz, whose office is at Belmont Park, said he was hired by trainer Laz Barrera after Mister Frisky arrived in New York on May 21 and developed a fever.

Two days earlier, the horse finished third in the Preakness.

Switzerland leaves U.S. wondering about World Cup chances

ST. GALL, Switzerland (AP) — Switzerland scored two-second half goals and edged the United States 2-1 Saturday in the U.S. soccer team's last warmup before the World Cup.

The loss broke a three-game winning streak and came eight days before the Americans' first game in the World Cup finals in 40 years, against Czechoslovakia in Florence, Italy.

Coach Bob Gansler said while good showings "in the last five or six games" left him satisfied, he was aware there was a lot of work to be done.

"We wanted to practice holding the lead and play counter-raids," he said. "That didn't quite work out."

"It's something we're going to have to work on next week in Tirrenia," the Italian town near Pisa where the Americans are setting up camp Sunday.

"We can utilize this defeat as is a motivator," said Paul Caligiuri, whose goal against Trinidad and Tobago in last fall's World Cup qualifier sent the Americans to the finals.

YOUNG-looking 49 year old Caucasian man seeks friendship or relationship with unattached, slender, professionally-employed, positive-thinking, cheerful, affectionate, outgoing, independent, but dependent lady (40-50) who has a pretty smile. I'm 6'2", 230 lbs. (heavy set). Enjoy hunting, fishing, camping, gardening, cooking and ordinary homelife. (MP-388)

34 YEAR Old male caucasian professional with very good job. Constant travel makes relationships tough. Looking for charming witty woman with lots of patients for a traveling man. I'm very passionate for life. I love dancing and the arts, very athletic, but not a jock. Weekend Pilot, 5'11" 180#. I'm in the proces of moving to Midland. So I don't know many folks in town. I'll answer all replies.(MP-395)

TO Any female who enjoys dancing; I'm interested in meeting someone up to 35 years old who will teach me to dance or who will join me in taking dance lessons. I'm 31 years old, 5'6", 135 lbs. If interested, write soon. (MP-396)

THIS Early 40's male would like to meet a cheerful lady who would enjoy being treated like a queen and would treat her mate like a king. She should enjoy receiving flowers and cards, caring, sharing, laughing, living and loving. Age and race are not important. I enjoy cuddling, caring, living, loving, life, crazy movies, reading and (if weather dictates) being a couch potato. No alcohol, tobacco or other drugs. All replies answered. (MP-398)

33 Y/O PROFESSIONAL caucasian male, 6'1" tall, heavy build, blue eyes, short beard, new to Midland. Looking for women interested in movies, racquetball, bowling and just about anything that sounds like fun. Ex-jock that needs help motivating self to get back into shape after knee surgery. (MP-400)

HI! I'm a single male of 28 years old. I'm looking to meet a fun-loving, good humored female of 25 to 30 years old. Also I'm looking for one who enjoys sports, movies, exercising and reads books, but I do not have to go out all the time. I'm an avid reader and work out when possible. I will respond to all letters I receive. (MP-402)

DIVORCED Caucasian male, very much a gentleman, attractive, very clean and neat, gray hair, blue eyes, 5'6", 160 lbs., social drinker/ smoker, homeowner, financially secure, enjoys life very much, gardening, cook-outs, dining out, c/w music, drug free. Wishes to meet, slim, attractive, financially secure, lady with a sense of humor, 43-48, who appreciate a thoughtful man, very discrete and confidential, letter and phone number please. (MP-407)

WIDOWER Caucasian looking for one honest woman that can relocate to Arizona or Nevada if friendship leads to alter of Luthern Church and marriage, if you like to go prospecting that is a plus. I have a handicaped son and 2 dogs. I love home things and want to build a new life. I love to go on picnics. Do not use drugs or smoke, do drink one or two beers. (MP-406)

I'M Caucasian male 5'7", 215 lbs., brown eyes, dark hair. My interest are concerts, movies, walks, cooking dinner at home. I'm looking for a Caucasian female 21-25. Please send name and phone number when replying, I want to share my life with someone special. (MP-409)

FEMALE PERSONAL ADS
The following ads have been placed by females looking to meet males

ROMANTIC, chivalrous, blue-eyed, tall, assertive, passionate, affectionate, unpredictable, sense of humor, witty, professional, intelligent, charming, adventurous, c/w music, dancing, non-smoker, light/ non-drinker, not shallow minded, 28-35, friendship/ relationship interest. If this describes you, let's get together. I'm pretty, personable, overweight, honest, 29 and interested in a lasting relationship. (MP-384)

LOOKING for "Mr. Satisfaction", not "Mr. Take care of me," or "Mr. Use me." If tired of lies, games and empty promises, maybe we've been looking for each other. She's used to being alone. Are you the one to change that? Please include phone number, all replies will be answered. (MP-389)

WIDOW 47 years old, brown eyes, gray hair, 5'7", 150 lbs., financially secure, own home. Looking for a new friend, 40 to 60 years old. Must have a sense of humor. I love to travel, c/w music, movies, non-smoker, non-drinker, no drugs. Lets get acquainted. (MP-390)

PRETTY Caucasian widow of impecable reputation seeks gentleman 56 plus, who's young at heart and enjoys life, to spend my golden years with. Looking for someone who is as lonely as I am. Although I'm ill at ease placing this ad, I know of no other way to meet you. Enjoy either City or Country living. (MP-391)

WANTED Companion, friend, love for witty, intelligent unencumbered, female. Prefer medium to large 40-60 Caucasian male, that enjoys camping, fishing, parties and queen sized women. You've been hard to find, but I know you are out there just dying to meet me. Will answer all replies. No married men please. (MP-393)

I CAN'T believe there isn't a Christian Caucasian gentleman in his 60's or lower 70's that is alone and would like the friendship of a widow in her later 60's, well educated, 5'5", 155 lbs. I like music, c/w dancing, table games, dominos, cards, like to laugh and have a good time. I'm very outgoing and can dress from western to formal, prefer casual. Will answer all replies. (MP-394)

HI! I'm 30, 5'7", brown eyes, blonde hair, & have a 10 year old son. I'm fun, outgoing, obnoxious; I smoke, drink, talk, laugh, love animals except cats (unless it's a lion). I like the "Good Ole R&R", water/snow skiing, back packing, camping, & watching football (I miss the Monday Night-A Foootball). I've started going back to school, it's not too bad. I'm not looking for love at 1st site - If it's gonna happen - It'll happen without looking for it. (MP397)

I'M interested in meeting a man that is affectionate, fun loving, outgoing, sexy and large build. I enjoy dining out, dancing, movies and just quiet evenings at home. I'm flexible and independent. I'm 45, 5'3", 120 lbs., dark hair and hazel eyes. If this describes you please write. All responses will be answered. (MP-405)

FEMALE PERSONAL ADS

30 Y/O SINGLE, Never married, caucasian female looking to meet a 30ish single, tall (5'11" and up), secure (emotionally and financially) caucasian male who isn't intimidated by a woman's independence, job, or home (I own my own). No smokers, cowpokes, lonely hearts, painfully shy or bankrupt men need reply. (MP-399)

ATTENTION guys 35-49, black female would like to have fun, laugh, go to the movies, walk in the park, sit around together. Do you need a friend? Then you need to meet me. No head games or drug users, please. Honesty and humor a must. (MP-401)

MIDLAND seems like a hard place to meet someone! Thought I would give this a try. Attractive and fun lady would like to meet a great guy from 30 to 40 years old. Who likes to exercise, water sports, the blues, movies, volleyball, dancing - looking forward to a great summer. (MP-403)

CAUCASIAN Female 34 with good sense of humor and easy going, looking for a gentleman 40-55 with same qualities, who is stable and ready to settle down to the simple things in life. All replies answered. (MP-404)

LONG red hair, dark green eyes, 23 years old, 5'9", a little overweight. Rainy days, snowy nights, moonlight walks, cuddling picnics for two. Teddy bears, c/w & r/r dancing, reading, aerobics, bowling, movies. Are you 5'9" or taller, male Caucasian 25 to 36 and like the same things, lets some fun together. Please respond with descriptive letter and number. (MP-408)

One part of the living room focuses on a brick fireplace. A tile flooring and painted paneling have given this area an updated appearance.

By JILL HANCOCK

A home's interior can change as often as the seasons by exhibiting a stylish expression of design and furnishings that fit our changing lifestyles.

Owners can achieve a new look by knocking out a wall, replacing carpeting with tile, adding a butcher block island in the kitchen, not to mention the addition of new paint and wallpaper, an older home's appearance can be transformed into a stylish one for the '90s.

Continually being updated during the past three years, this week's featured home is centrally located in Midland and includes a livable floor plan. The front entrance of the home is framed by a short brick wall. Terra cotta pots that are filled with blooming flowers are placed along the top of the wall. A front porch serves as the ideal place for neighborhood friends to gather on a summer evening.

Sunlight pours into the formal dining room through a wall of windows and a French door that leads to a private patio.

As soon as a person enters the living area, it is immediately evident that a lot of renovations have taken place. A white ceramic tile flooring and painted paneling have transformed this room into one that are found in newly constructed homes. The fireplace is inset in the left corner of the room and a brick mantle is ideal for displaying a favorite art objects. A wet bar is situated on the adjacent left wall and can either be used when hosting a party or can be altered as an entertainment cabinet. A window and a door to the right of the fireplace overlook the patio in the back yard.

Furniture in this spacious area can be arranged in order to divide this room into two parts. The second part, to the right of the foyer doorway, cane be furnished as an intimate sitting area in front of the large window that frames the front yard.

An opening to the right of this sitting area leads to the formal dining room. The main attractions in this room are the tall windows that view the front yard and the French door that opens onto a private patio. This area is lined with landscaped beds and is the perfect place to read the paper in the morning with a cup of coffee.

The kitchen and breakfast room are situated to the right of the living area and behind the formal dining room. A flame stitch paper in shades of teal, rose, blue, tan and beige covers the walls in this area. The design of the kitchen is very functional and a moveable island updates the kitchen immediately. The appliances include a gas range and a dishwasher. A window above the sink overlooks the side patio.

A window in the breakfast room frames the back yard and the utility room and rear-entry, two-car garage are situated next to the breakfast area.

The tile corridor, to the left of the entrance, leads to the home's three bedrooms. The first bedroom has a tall window that views the front yard and a spacious closet. This spacious room can easily accommodate more than one child.

A hall bath features a two-sink vanity, storage cabinets, a bathtub and a window that frames the side yard.

The second bedroom is highlighted by a hand-painted border of bears that is placed along the top of the ceiling. This room also has a walk-in closet and a window that frames the side yard.

Deep green walls and an oriental wallpaper border update the master bedroom which is situated at the end of the hall. A French door opens onto the back patio and two windows on the opposite wall overlook the side yard.

The master bath is papered with in a pattern that compliments the oriental border that is also used throughout the bath. A two-sink vanity, an oversized shower with a seat and a spacious closet are the amenities of the bath.

The other amenities in this updated home are ceiling fans, mature landscaping, a spacious corner lot and brick-edged flower beds. Adobe Realtors is offering this home for $93,900

Lanier & Co. has a variety of 'old Midland' homes available

By Jill Hancock
Advertising Feature Writer

To sell "old Midland" is easy for Lanier & Co. Lori Lanier, a native Midlander, was reared in "old Midland" and because her roots are there she knows the appeal that this area has to homeowners. "This area is centrally located and minutes from downtown," said Lori Lanier. "The boundaries are loosely defined as Club Drive to Garfield Street and from Gold Course Road to Illinois. This area was once part of the Midland Country Club Golf Course."

Being developed in the 1940s and the 1950s, many of the homes were built on pier and beam. According to Lanier, these homes have the charm of hardwood floors and a warm homey feeling. It is not unusual to see a two-bedroom, one-bath home next to an enormous estate with 5,000 plus square feet. As the '50s came slab foundations and modern construction developed. This style can still be found in new construction of the 1980s. With the variety of price ranges and sizes in "old Midland", it is possible to update baths, kitchens and color schemes and still maintain a market value comparable to newer homes," said Lanier.

The neighborhoods are established with mature landscaping and wonderful trees. "People, such as myself, who grew up here and have been away for a while and are back again and returning to their old neighborhoods to rear their families, as well as be a part of the community. Pride of ownership is obvious while driving through these areas," explained Lanier.

Lanier & Co. has several homes in "old Midland" and some of these are featured today. Each has a variety of amenities for every potential home buyer.

2106 Oaklawn is a three bedroom, two bath home that has two large living areas and a formal dining room. It is situated on a cul-de-sac in a quiet neighborhood. The yard is well-maintained and is a great family home. The home is priced at $99,900.

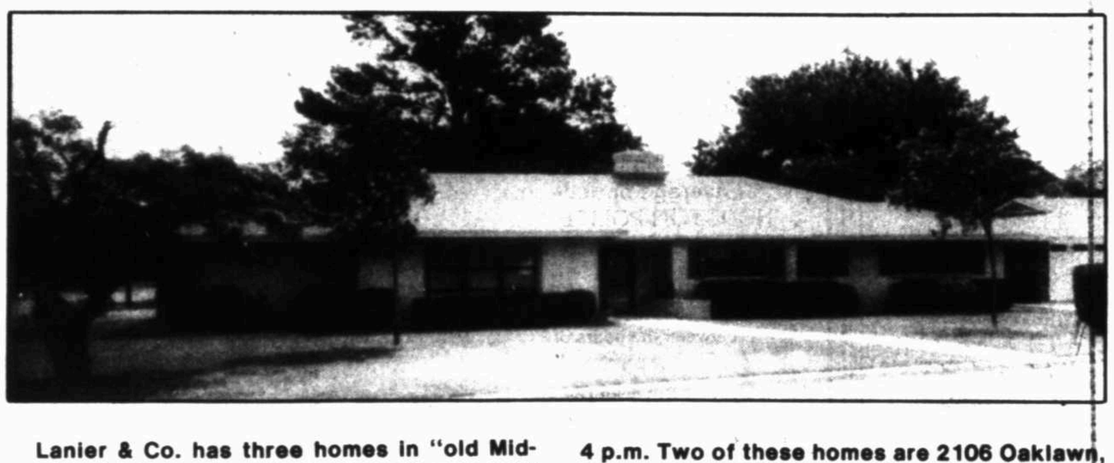
An updated, immaculate home at 804 W. Kansas is a great buy for a couple who need the right home to show off their favorite antiques. In addition to a living room, there is a sun room with a fireplace and a formal dining room. Hardwood floors, Mexican tile, paned windows, a back yard shaded by towering trees and a spa are some of the extras to be enjoyed in this lovely home offered for $85,000.

The owners of 1610 North "L" will lease purchase and at this price, $59,900, a couple can add their special touches. There are three bedroom, two baths, one living area with a dining combination.

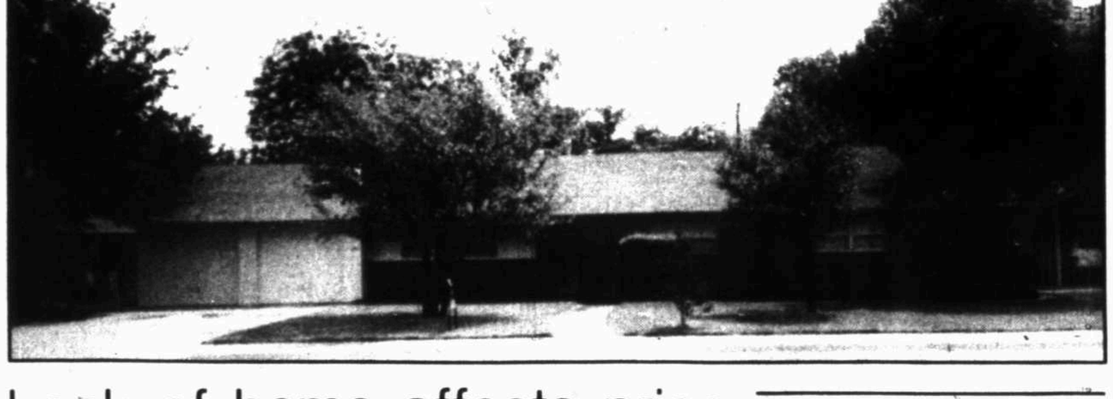
1602 North "C" is a four bedroom, three bath home that features one living area, formal dining room, an updated kitchen with hardwood floors. A sequester bedroom could be used as the master bedroom or as a guest room. The exterior displays a beautifully maintained lawn and a work shop is perfect for a handyman. This home is priced at $90,000.

A bachelor's pad waiting for a women's touch is located at 1702 Harvard. This home has three spacious bedrooms and two baths and hidden hardwood floors. Other extras include a great back yard with a spa and a double car garage which could be converted into a guest house if needed. This would be a great re-do for the right person, the indicated home is being offered for $60,000.

All of these homes are conveniently located to San Jacinto Junior High and Bowie Elementary. Open houses today, from 2 p.m. until 4 p.m., are 2100 Oaklawn, 1610 North "L" Street and 1602 North "C" Street or call Lanier & Co., 682-1144, for your private showing.



Lanier & Co. has three homes in "old Midland" which are open today from 2 p.m. until 4 p.m. Two of these homes are 2106 Oaklawn, above, and 1602 North "C" Street, below.



Foster addresses relocating needs

Foster

Fifty-three million people will change residences in 1990. Some will move across town, others across the country; many will be transferred by their companies; all will be facing challenges that relocation presents. When this happens there are five relocation needs that are of significant importance according to Karen Foster, associate of Don Harvey, Realtors.

The first is to have a market appraisal of the home being sold. "it only makes good sense," Ms. Foster said, "to know what your home is worth so that you can set a realistic selling price."

The second is to know the cost of living differentials in the area where you are moving. "How else will you know if you can afford it?" Foster asked.

The third is to take community orientation tour with a broker and/or relocation counselor. "Common sense dictates that you really should know that area under consideration before the decision to purchase a home is made. You also want to be sure you have had the opportunity to look at all areas that could possibly fit your needs and objectives. It can be terribly disappointing to complete your move and later come across an area that you would have preferred but never had the opportunity to see," Foster said.

The fourth is to get home-finding assistance. The help of a professional in the search for a new home being purchased is the only way to make sure you are getting your money's worth," said Ms. Foster.

The fifth is mortgage financing for purchase of the home you select. It is very important before you leave your present home, to determine what the availability of the money is for getting a mortgage at the destination.

The key to a successful transfer begins with making sure you've got the best available people to assist you. Don Harvey, Realtors is the largest volume real estate company in Midland. When you have the assistance in real estate matters, compare Don Harvey's track record and let us know why we achieve the highest average productivity per associate of any company in town.

Look of home affects price

By The Associated Press

Regional history influences the popularity of home styles throughout the United States, says a New York-based home building and remodeling magazine.

According to Practical Homeowner, the architectural style of a house can affect its value by as much as 15 percent.

A survey of real estate industry professionals indicates that traditional, classically styled homes are good investments because they have a higher resale value and are easier to sell, the magazine reports.

Many of those polled said homes with hard geometric lines, made primarily with concrete, glass and steel, were trendy a few decades ago but seem dated and faddish to today's typical buyer.

"The English tradition is strong in the eastern United States because that is the style that was prevalent when the region was settled," the publication adds. "Similarly, Southern California and Florida were first colonized by the Spanish, so Spanish style is strong there."

The survey showed that New Englanders prefer the traditional English center hall colonial, typically two stories and made of wood. The estimated added value of that style was 10-15 percent.

In the mid-Atlantic and southern states, the favorite style is the neoclassic brick colonial typical of Williamsburg, with an added value of 5 percent.

Other prevalent regional styles, with estimated added value:

■ Florida and Southern California: Spanish, with white stucco walls and tiled roofs, 0-5 percent.

■ Midwest and parts of Texas: a traditional mix of Tudor, French, Victorian farmhouse and colonial, 3-10 percent.

■ Southwest (New Mexico, Arizona and Nevada): adobe, 5-15 percent.

■ Plains and mountain states: conventional split-level contemporary with wood siding, 1-3 percent.

Determining closing costs when purchasing a home is essential

Many home buyers, especially first time purchasers, are unaware of the cost to close a property — but these terms and costs are important for both the first-time and repeat buyer.

"First-time buyers probably have the toughest time with closing costs partially because they don't know what to expect. Closing costs can add up and, therefore, prospective home buyers need to plan ahead so they don't get caught with fees they hadn't planned for," according to Bill Jackson, owner of Adobe Realtors.

Bill Jackson

Adobe Realtors is a member of the RELO/The International Relocation Network, the nation's oldest and largest referral network of independent real estate brokers, headquartered in Chicago.

The RELO network provides a wide range of relocation services to assist transferees and their families sell a house in one community and purchase a new home in the new community. It will be celebrating its 30th anniversary this year.

Jackson noted some of the closing costs that prospective home buyers should be aware of:

■ Appraisal — an expert judgment or estimate of the quality or value of real estate as of given date.

■ Attorney's fee — the cost to receive legal counsel in order to complete the home buying transaction.

■ Credit report — a statement of the borrower's credit history and ability to pay a bank loan. The cost is usually less than $75.

■ Discount points — on a range of zero to four points, discount points reflect the difference between the loans' face value and it's current cash value. Each point is one percent of the loan.

■ Escrow — money or other valuables left in trust with a third party until the fulfillment of a specific art or condition.

■ Homeowners Insurance — the cost of insuring a home is usually paid one year in advance.

■ Interest per diem — this reflects the prorated interest or mortgage payment which starts with the date of closing and runs until the first mortgage payment.

■ Mortgage Insurance — protects the lender if the buyer defaults on mortgage payments. The premium for mortgage insurance varies with the type of mortgage.

■ Origination fees — this fee covers the lender's cost for processing a loan. The cost is usually one percent of the total loan.

■ Recording fee — the fee paid for making the real estate transaction a matter of public record.

■ Transfer taxes — the fee paid to a city for transferring ownership of property.

■ Title Insurance — protects the home buyer from any loss that may be incurred as a result of a defect in the title.

Jackson noted that fees for these various documents, transactions and legal assistance will vary upon the community, the property and other variables. "A good attorney will be able to assist homeowners in deciphering the route to purchasing a home."

In addition to providing a wide range of relocation services, the RELO network has entered into an agreement with the Dallas-based Associates Corporation of North America, allowing Adobe Realtors and other RELO members to further help home buyers as well as sellers by offering a variety of expanded financial services, including mortgage services, homeowners insurance and a special mortgage program for transferees.

Adobe Realtors has 15 sales associates and has served the Permian Basin for 12 years.

Prudential Ruth Young agent was essential in helping buyers with home

By Jill Hancock
Advertising Feature Writer

Realtors play an important role in helping families select a new home and this task is made more difficult when they are also relocating to a different community. From sending information about the new community to computer print outs of the properties available, often times Realtors are the first connection a person might have with a new comminity.

Gaylord and Madeline Worley know how important one Realtor, Sandra McGill, was to them when they recently moved to Midland from St. Petersburg, Fla. The Worley's had lived in Florida and were returning to west Texas after 23 years. "We decided we needed to get back to the home folks," stated Mr. Worley. "We had lived in west Texas for many years and just liked Midland. When it came time to retire, we knew Midland was the place where we needed to go because our son Larry and his family live here."

The Worley's son told Ms. McGill of The Prudential Ruth Young Realtors that his parents were going to relocate to Midland as soon as they were able to sell the apartment complex that they owned in St. Petersburg. In December, Ms. McGill mailed the Worleys a computer print out of the homes available in the Midland market which they looked over before coming to Midland in January.

"At first we just looked around Midland and we called Sandra to tell her that we weren't ready to buy a home, but would call her when we were ready. Our daughter-in-law forwarded us another print out before we returned in April.

"I knew that Gaylord and Madeline had to sell their Florida property before they moved here, so I tried to keep them updated on the Midland market. When they called to say that they were ready to look, I showed them five homes the first day. We put a contract on one, but it didn't work out," explained Ms. McGill.

The Worleys were told about another house, which McGill showed them and it turned out to be the one they purchased. Three weeks after arriving in Midland, the Worley's furniture arrived from Florida and they moved into their new home on May 7.

"Sandra really gave us a lot of moral support during those three weeks. After moving here we had a few days of turmoil and Sandra was a big help to us," added Mr. Worley.

"Now if she could just help us find some people to help with the renovations that we want to make! I have been busy buying new furniture and we want to have a few things done around the house, but we are having a terrible time finding workers," said Mrs. Worley.

Realtors also become friends with their clients after working so closely with them during this transition period and this definitely was the case with Ms. McGill and the Worleys. "These folks are just like family to me now. Finding them a new home was just too easy since the Worleys were such fun to work with," concluded McGill.

Ms. McGill is only one of the professional associates of The Prudential Ruth Young Realtors that are ready to assist families with buying or selling a new home. Call them today at 682-7884.

LIVING WITH CANCER: DYING FOR A CURE

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a six-part Sunday series giving an in-depth look at the fight against cancer. The series is a special Hearst project which was written by Faith Keenan of our Washington bureau with photographs and graphics prepared by staff members of the San Antonio Light. The series has a wide scope, from stories on the state of medical research and the human suffering brought by the disease to the politics of federal research money.

Next Sunday's presentation will focus on the research areas of genetics and molecular biology, along with a glossary of terms and information about how cancer spreads.

By Faith Keenan

In the time it takes to read this story, five to 10 Americans will have died of cancer.

With each passing minute, health officials chalk up another victory for the merciless disease. And besides telling people to stop smoking and eat less fat, there is not much they or the wonders of modern medicine can do to save more lives.

Two decades and billions of dollars into the war then-President Richard Nixon declared against cancer, science's masterminds have — at best — crept to a standoff against the 100-odd diseases that society calls, simply but chillingly, cancer. They may have learned more about the cell in the last 20 years than they did in the previous 200, but that knowledge will not rescue the 500,000 Americans expected to die of cancer this year or millions more in years to come.

A GRUDGING ACCEPTANCE has emerged from laboratories nationwide that there will never be a "magic bullet," or single cure, for cancer. Malignant cells are just too diverse to make it possible for one or even several drugs to kill them all, researchers say.

Treatments are therefore becoming more individualized as cancer specialists attempt to target malignant growths with tumor-specific drugs. The race continues worldwide to find those drugs — whether in nature or the body.

But not all the news from the cancer front is bad. Many people who develop a form of the disease today will probably survive longer than they would have 20 years ago. Certain cancers such as childhood leukemia, Hodgkin's disease, and testicular cancer are almost 100 percent curable if caught in early stages.

"We have to say we've made considerable progress, but we have to use that progress as a stimulus to redouble our efforts," said Dr. Samuel Broder, director of the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md. "The bad news is that there are clearly some areas where we have not made progress to the same extent."

Those areas include rising cancer death rates among minority and elderly populations and a lung cancer death rate that has increased ninefold since 1930.

Scientists and physicians attribute the progress that has been made to such advances as:

- New and more widespread diagnostic techniques that catch cancer during its early stages, when it is more likely to respond to treatment.
- Improved surgical techniques that have reduced mortality on the operating table and permitted the removal of previously inoperable tumors.

Gene research closes in on cancer

By Faith Keenan

BOSTON — Two framed pictures hanging about five feet apart in Philip Leder's office sum up the work of the noted geneticist.

One is a simple bar graph with three sloping curves. To the casual observer, it's nothing but a bunch of lines, dots and letters. But to the knowing scientific eye, it reveals the long-held secret of human cell growth. It's dated 1963 — the National Cancer Institute.

The other is a newspaper cartoon depicting a mouse waiting in line at the U.S. patent office. The rodent wears a sweatshirt with the letter "T" emblazoned on the front. In this cartoon, the mouse is the invention. The "T" stands for "Transgenic" — a mouse that carries foreign genes. The cartoon is dated April 1988.

This is not the futuristic work of a mad scientist, but that of the head of Harvard University's genetics department — a man with his feet planted firmly in fundamental science.

Leder, 55, is applying 30 years of experience and significant breakthroughs in understanding DNA and antibody diversity to the search for genetic causes for cancer and other diseases. He hopes his findings will one day reveal ways to prevent and treat those diseases. It all began with an attempt to avoid the draft.

When Leder finished medical school at Harvard in 1960, all physicians were subject to service.

"I sought out NIH (the National Institutes of Health), where I would be in biological research as part of my military service," he said. "It was a coveted position because alternatives were Fort Sam Houston and things like that."

He entered Marshall Nirenberg's laboratory, who was

Minuet Club debs honored with tea

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

To honor this year's Minuet Club debutantes, the club's board of directors hosted a beautifully appointed tea recently in the home of Lissa (Mrs. Cy, Jr.) Wagner.

McKnight-Harrison

The ladies of the club were greeted by Lissa, board members and the honorees. Colorful arrangements of spring and summer flowers provided a festive setting for the event.

The 1990 debs are: Anne Embrey, daughter of Raye Ann and Boley Embrey; Heather Fergeson, daughter of Donna and Ted Fergeson; Meridith Geiselman, daughter of Sandra and Randy Geiselman; Marisa Gibson, daughter of Nancy and Richard Gibson; Julie Greaves, daughter of Elizabeth and Bryon Greaves; Kristen Henry, daughter of Janice and Bob Henry; Caroline Hissom, daughter of Kelly and Ronny Hisson.

Also, Kristine Kelly, daughter of Sally and Bill Stella and Mike Kelly, and who is being sponsored by her grandparents, Patti and Curtis Inman; Emily Kleine, daughter of Ann and Bill Kleine; Lesli Lamb, daughter of Carol and Jim Lamb; Meredith Secker, daughter of Sue and Dan Secker; Sheri Sport, daughter of Lynne and Charles Ray; Catherine (Taffy) Staley, daughter of Sandra and George Staley and Smyth Swanson, daughter of Marsha Swanson and the late Bob Swanson.

Parties have already begun in their honor. Carole and Johnny Warren and Patti and Watson LaForce hosted a swimming party recently at the LaForce home for Meredith Secker, Marisa, Smyth, Taffy, Heather and Kristen.

In addition, a manicure party was held at Back Stage to honor all the debs. Hostesses were Nancy (Mrs. Barry) Beal, Susie (Mrs. Don) Evans, Kaye (Mrs. Bill) Franklin, Bettye (Mrs. Don) Jones, Carol (Mrs. Jack) Steele and Barbara (Mrs. Ralph) Way.

The annual Presentation Ball will be held Dec. 22 at the Petroleum Club, continuing a tradition begun in 1956 when Eileen (Mrs. M.T.) Stallter was president. The dance club was organized in 1933.

The new officers are Sandra Staley, president; Nancy Gibson, vice president; Eileen Stallter, secretary-treasurer; and board members Susie (Mrs. Gary) Burnett, Lucy (Mrs. John) Woodside, Tommie (Mrs. Dean) Strack, Donnette (Mrs. Ron) Schwisow, Kaye Franklin and Susie Evans.

BRIDGET BURLESON, who has graduated from Lee High School, was the honoree at a swimming party and cookout at the home of Wanda and Roy Campbell immediately following Lee's Baccalureate on May 20.

In addition to the Campbells, host couples were Carole and Steve Betton, Margaret and Bill Ortloff and Bay and Tommy Ortloff.

Thirty-eight guests, all graduating seniors from Lee High, attended the event.

The daughter of Cindy Burleson, Bridget plans to attend The University of Texas-Austin in the fall. A National Merit finalist, Bridget will take part in "Career Discovery" at the Harvard Graduate School of Design this summer. She will be looking at architecture as a possible career choice.

A BRIDAL DISPLAY shower honoring the former Karen Prigmore of Dallas was given recently in the home of Bobbie (Mrs. George) Buescher. The co-hostesses were Joan (Mrs. Gene) Nivens, Janet (Mrs. Tommy) Grace, Evelyn (Mrs. T.J.) Portele, Deidra Swindell, Terri (Mrs. Randy) Durrossett and Betty (Mrs. Gilbert) Naert.

Karen and Joseph Blaha of Dallas were married Saturday in Big D.

Since Lena is a member of the MHS golf team, guests included her teammates as well as other friends. The daughter of Bente and Peter Ditlev, she plans to attend The University of Texas-Austin this fall.

A seated buffet supper was served. The clever table arrangements featured various colored Gerber daisies and golfing paraphernalia.

THE WEDDING of Heather Yowell of Midland and Dave Wyrwich of Texas City, which took place May 26 in Dickinson, was preceded by a number of parties.

Festivities in Midland began with a kitchen and recipe shower and coffee given by Frances (Mrs. Evetts, Jr.) Haley and daughter, Sabrina, at their home.

A Mexican Fiesta Supper and "Honey-Do" Party was given for the couple by Frances and Larry Stapp and daughter, Stacey, in their home.

A miscellaneous display shower was held at the home of Sue Anne (Mrs. Richard) Campbell, with Jody (Mrs. Jerry) Green, Louise (Mrs. Paul) Rains, Faye (Mrs. Copper) Daughtery, Josie (Mrs. Joe) Birdwell and Donna (Mrs. Joe) Campbell as co-hostesses.

Heather also was honored with a miscellaneous shower in Texas City given by friends of the groom's mother, Joyce Wyrich and a lingerie shower in Lubbock hosted by Heather's sister and maid of honor, Blake Yowell, and Keri Haines, a Pi Beta Phi sorority sister and bridesmaid.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents, Joyce and Al Wyrwich, at the Lakewood Yacht Club in Seabrook overlooking Galveston Bay. The bride's parents, Brenda and Alton Yowell, hosted the reception in the Holiday Inn Ballroom in LaMarque.

Special guests were the bride's grandparents, Marge and Charlie Butler of Midland and former Midlander Frances Jean Yowell of Glen Rose. Midland friends atending were Chris and Fred Newman, sons Jim and Steve and daughter, Nancy (Mrs. Jon Marc) Goodnight, now of San Antonio; Jody and Jerry Green and Frances and Evetts Haley Jr. and Sabrina.

CANCER: Genetic engineering is key point

(From 1E)

■ Continually improving radiation and chemotherapy — the two standard cancer treatments besides surgery.

■ Combining treatments to attack a tumor from multiple fronts. Researchers credit the 1971 National Cancer Act for making these small strides possible. When Nixon signed the bill, the nation virtually waged an all-out war against the dreaded disease by pumping billions of dollars into cancer research and treatment.

Science was undergoing a revolution at the same time. New technology exposed the intricate workings of the cell, spawning the field of molecular biology. A decade later, researchers discovered how to mass produce proteins — essential substances that control cell growth — and biotechnology firms moved in to supply them to laboratories nationwide.

"Genetic engineering was the turning point," said Dr. John Mendelsohn, chairman of the Department of Medicine at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York. "The mixture of new biologic knowledge and new technology has enabled us to get these molecules in quantities that 10 years ago we would have had to purify hundreds of liters of urine to get a very tiny amount."

Researchers can now produce bulk quantities of a substance from trace amounts by using recombinant DNA technology to spur cell growth. Previously they had to retrieve trace amounts that appear naturally in body fluids.

An entire new field of inquiry had opened that would little by little reveal the myriad molecules and genes responsible for cell growth and development — especially runaway growth that is cancer. "Our understanding of the biological, molecular, genetic mechanisms of cancer is more profound now than any other disease that afflicts mankind," said Dr. Richard Rifkind, chairman of the Sloan-Kettering Institute of the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center.

Researchers generally believe cancer's root lies in a person's genes. Missing, misplaced, or mutated genes can alter the enzymes, proteins and other growth factors that make up the high-fidelity workings of the cell. They say a thorough understanding of the cell could reveal ways to block or control unwanted, possibly deadly, growth.

But those prospects are years of research away, say the experts. Meanwhile the overall cancer death rate continues to rise and cancer holds tight as the No. 2 cause of death (behind heart diseases) in the United States. More than 1 million Americans will develop cancer in 1990, according to the American Cancer Society.

Broder and other cancer experts emphasize that progress can't be measured by death rates alone.

"Quality of life must be considered also," he said, citing new treatment techniques that spare organs and limbs from disfiguring surgery.

Until about 15 years ago, a woman routinely lost a breast if she developed breast cancer. Now less than 1 percent of breast cancer patients undergo a radical mastectomy that removes the entire breast, underlying muscle and nearby lymph nodes, said Dr. Emil Frei, director and physician-in-chief of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston.

'We're trying desperately to develop a new approach to treat cancer.'

— Dr. Steven Rosenberg
chief of surgery at National Cancer Institute

"Now simple removal of the lump, with radiation and chemotherapy is as effective as the old radical procedures," Frei said.

New surgical and radiation techniques and novel combinations of chemotherapy often spare the bladder in patients with bladder cancer and limbs in those with bone cancer.

Still, the brutal reality that half of all cancer patients will die because their tumors resist standard treatments has fueled the desperate quest for new, more effective therapies.

Some cancer specialists hope that biological therapy, immunotherapy, and gene therapy will eventually triumph over stubborn tumor cells. Biological therapy involves the use of natural hormonal substances in the body to stimulate natural defense mechanisms. Immunotherapy focuses on how immune system cells can be used to target cancer cells. Gene therapy is a young field that includes manipulating genes to thwart those responsible for causing cancer.

"We're trying desperately to develop a new approach to treat cancer," said Dr. Steven Rosenberg, chief of surgery at NCI and a pioneer in immunotherapy. "Now it's very much in its infancy and it's hard to say how far it will go."

Other researchers, meanwhile, are trying to beat cancer before it strikes. The field of prevention has sprouted beyond the anti-smoking drive as more studies link diet, sun exposure and environmental carcinogens to cancer.

Smoking, however, remains the primary bane of cancer specialists.

"Thirty percent of cancers in the U.S. derive from smoking," said Frei. "The most important single thing we could do to reduce risk and incidence of cancer would be to curtail smoking."

"The second largest factor is diet," said Dr. Peter Greenwald, director of NCI's Division of Cancer Prevention and Control. Chemoprevention studies that look at how nutrients can increase or decrease an individual's cancer risk will be a new wave of the 90s, he said.

"There will be a growing emphasis on diet and cancer research because we think it's one of the major determinants for a substantial number of cancers."

The NCI hopes cancer education and prevention efforts will help cut cancer mortality rates in half by the year 2000. It may turn out to be the institute's wisest investment since even the most optimistic forecasters don't expect a major turnaround in cure rates for years, possibly decades.

That's 5 million deaths — and counting — away.

No cancer link found

Copley News Service

A study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association reported that depression is not linked to increased cancer-related deaths. Researchers at the National Institute on Aging found no significant difference in mortality rates between those who were or were not depressed.

Improved communication may reduce risk of malpractice suits

NEW YORK (AP) — Better communication between patients and doctors can reduce the risk of malpractice suits should something go wrong, say medical specialty organizations.

Some insurance carriers sponsor "risk management" programs that include teaching doctors better communication skills.

"Although there is no proof that risk management programs reduce physician exposure to malpractice, the importance of developing better rapport with patients cannot be overlooked," says James T. Dorigan Jr., executive vice president of Northwest Physicians Mutual Insurance Co.

In Oregon, more than 150 doctors received lower malpractice insurance rates by taking part in a workshop on physician-patient communications developed by Miles Inc., the health care company of Bayer USA Inc.

Cancer rate may increase with latitude

Copley News Service

Cancer rates increase with latitude, and the lack of available fresh fruits and vegetables in northern climates may be the reason.

Researchers from the University of Utah report people living in northern areas of the world, where fresh produce is less plentiful, have higher rates of cancers of the stomach, liver and rectum than those living at southern latitudes.

CANCER: Where it strikes

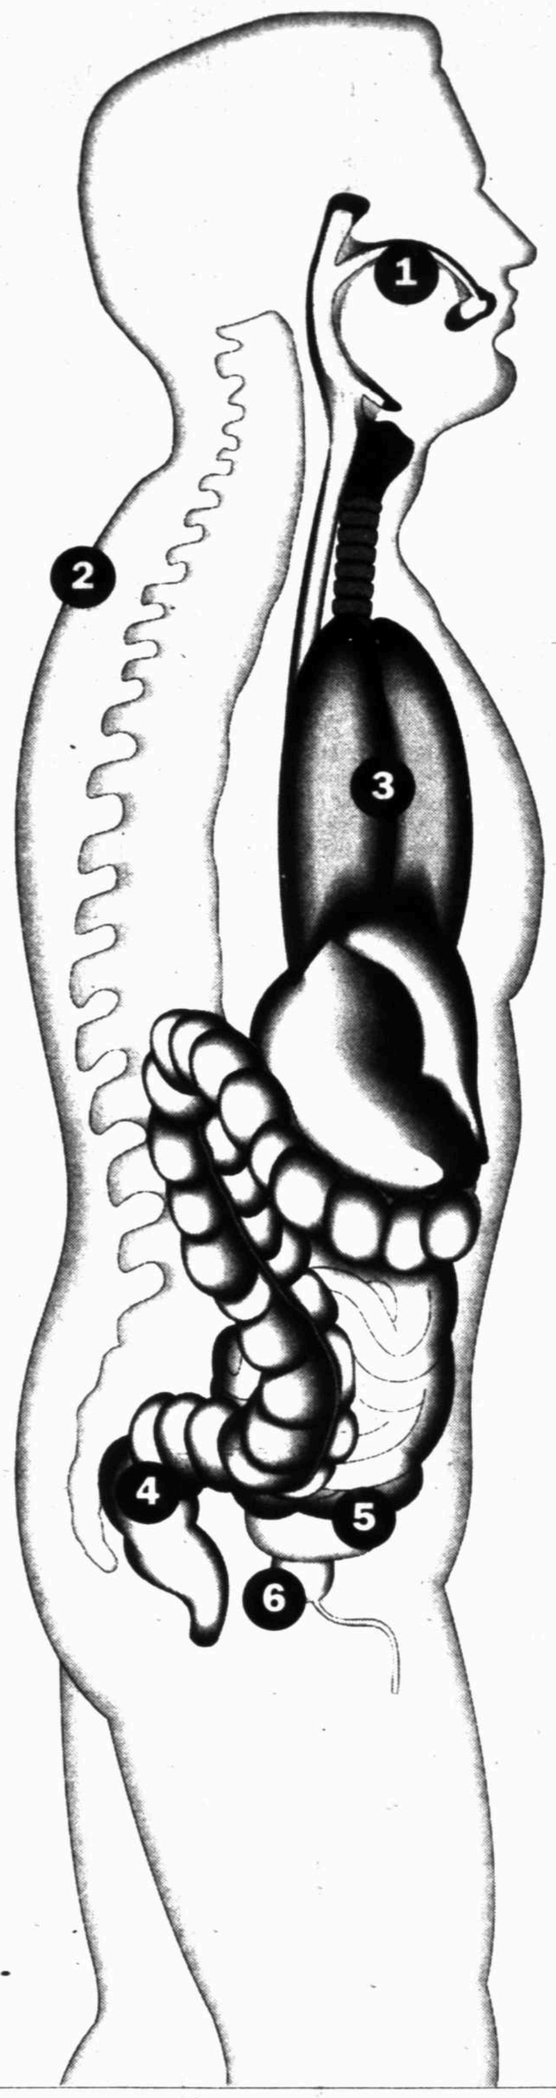
A reader's guide to incidence rates, death rates and the warning signals of the major cancers in men and women.

MARK HARLIEN/SAN ANTONIO LIGHT



1 MOUTH

Incidence: Occurrence is more than twice as high in men as in women, and is most frequent in men over age 40.

Warning signals: A sore that bleeds easily and doesn't heal; a lump or thickening; a red or white patch that persists. Difficulties in chewing, swallowing, or moving tongue or jaws are late-stage symptoms.

2 SKIN

Incidence: The majority of cases are highly curable basal cell or squamous cell cancers. They are more common among individuals with lightly pigmented skin who live at latitudes near the equator. The most serious skin cancer is melanoma, which will be diagnosed in about 27,600 persons in 1990.

Warning signals: A change in the size or color of a mole or other darkly pigmented growth or spot. Scaliness, oozing, bleeding, or change in the appearance of a bump or nodule, the spread of pigmentation beyond its border, a change in sensation, itchiness, tenderness, or pain.

3 LUNG

Incidence: An estimated 157,000 new cases in 1990. The rate has begun to decline in men, but is increasing for women.

4 COLON/RECTUM

Incidence: The combined incidence is second only to that of lung cancer (excluding common skin cancers.)

5 BLADDER

Incidence: The fifth most common form of cancer in men, the ninth most common form in women.

6 PROSTATE

Incidence: Approximately one of every 11 men will develop prostate cancer. This is the second most common cancer in men, after skin cancer.

Warning signals: Weak or interrupted flow of urine; inability to urinate, or difficulty starting or stopping the urine flow; the need to urinate frequently, especially at night; blood in the urine; pain or burning on urination; continuing pain in lower back, pelvis, or upper thigh. Most of these symptoms are nonspecific and may be similar to benign conditions.

7 LEUKEMIA

Incidence: Leukemia will strike 25,300 adults and 2,500 children this year.

Warning signals: Early signs may include fatigue, paleness, weight loss, repeated infections, bruising easily and nosebleeds or other hemorrhages. In children, these symptoms can appear suddenly. Chronic leukemia can progress slowly and with few symptoms.

8 BREAST

Incidence: Approximately one of every 10 women will develop breast cancer at some time.

Warning signals: Breast changes that persist, such as a lump, thickening, swelling, dimpling, skin irritation, distortion, retraction or scaliness of the nipple, nipple discharge, pain, or tenderness.

9 PANCREAS

Incidence: The fifth leading cancer killer.

Warning signals: No symptoms until late stages.

10 OVARIES

Incidence: An estimated one of every 70 women will develop ovarian cancer during her lifetime. It causes more deaths than any other cancer of the female reproductive system.

Warning signals: Shows no obvious symptoms until late in its development. The most common sign is an enlarged abdomen, which is caused by the accumulation of fluid. Rarely will there be abnormal vaginal bleeding. In women over 40, vague digestive disturbances (stomach discomfort, gas, distention) that persist and cannot be explained by any other cause may indicate the need for a thorough evaluation for ovarian cancer.

11 UTERUS/CERVIX

Incidence: The incidence of invasive cervical cancer has steadily decreased over the years. Carcinoma in situ rates have risen slightly in women under 50 in recent years.

Warning signals: Bleeding outside of the normal menstrual period or after menopause, or unusual vaginal discharge.

12 LYMPHOMAS

Incidence: An estimated 43,000 new cases in 1990.

Warning signals: Swollen lymph gland, usually in the neck that lasts three weeks or longer; persistent fatigue, back or abdominal pain, weight loss, fever, itchy, night sweats, nausea or vomiting.

Summer tours scheduled

Copley News Service

The University of California at Los Angeles Extension is offering several educational tours this summer, which travelers can join for college credit or for personal edification.

A bus tour of Europe's favorite gardens is scheduled for June 27-July 14. The trip begins with four nights in London with tours of Hampton Court and Kew Royal Botanical Gardens. Paris is the next stop, with trips to Versailles, Vauxle Vicomte and Giverny, the garden made immortal by Claude Monet. Stops in Lausanne, Venice, Florence and Rome round out the tour.

The other European tour offered by UCLA Extension is "The Heartland of Hungary," Aug. 8-24. The trip will focus on the art, architecture, music and cuisine of Budapest, with excursions to the medieval town of Szentsendre, Pecs and Lake Balaton.

For those who want something more exotic, renowned botanist Mildred Mathias will lead a travel study tour to the Amazon basin, June 19-July 13. The 84-year-old Mathias heads an adventurous itinerary, including travel by canoes and accommodations in open-sided thatch roof structures in nature reserves. Destinations will include the Tambopata Nature Reserve in Peru, Machu-Picchu and Rio Sucusari.

For more information contact UCLA Extension, 10995 LeConte Ave., Suite 414, Los Angeles, Calif. 90024; (213) 825-1901.

The couple plan to marry 6:30 p.m. June 23 at Calvary Baptist Church in Mississippi. Miss Johnson is the granddaughter of Gradie Sue Fowler and Julia Johnson, both of Waynesboro, and the late Wilton M. Fowler and Houston R. Johnson.

The future bridegroom is the son of H.E. McCoy Jr. of Shubuta, Miss., and Edna Fike of Waynesboro. He is the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. H.E. McCoy Sr. and the late Mr. and Mrs. Pad Beech of Chatam, Ala.

Miss Johnson is a graduate of Pecos High School. She attended Midland College and is employed at Western Auto in Waynesboro. Her fiance is a 1981 honor graduate of Wayne Academy, attended Jones County Junior College and received his chemical engineering degree from Mississippi State University. He is employed with Wayneboro Building Supply.

Wendy Carol Johnson

ANDERSON-CAMPBELL

Jodi Lynn Anderson and Colin Thomas Campbell, both of Midland, plan to be married 3 p.m. June 16 at Hope Lutheran Church. The bride-elect is the daughter of Elwood and Barbara Anderson of Midland. Parents of the future bridegroom are Les and Anne Lancaster of Midland.

The couple graduated from Midland High School.

Jodi Lynn Anderson and Colin Thomas Campbell

LUSK-POWELL

Buffy Marie Lusk of Midland will become the bride of Elmer Corbin Powell III of Dallas 7 p.m. Aug. 11 at St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Dallas. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Lusk of Midland. The future bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer C. Powell Jr. of Dallas.

Miss Lusk is a graduate of Midland High School and is attending Texas A&M University. Her fiance is a graduate of Jesuit High School in Dallas and also is attending Texas A&M where he is a member of Lambda Chi fraternity.

ANNIVERSARIES

Reception hosted to honor couple

Mr. and Mrs. Hershel Benton of Rising Star were honored with a 50th anniversary reception at Dellwood Baptist Church Fellowship Hall in Midland. Hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Ted Benton, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Wes Benton, Mr. and Mrs. Randall Benton, Laurie Lawson and Mrs. Morgan Benton.

The Bentons were married June 1, 1940 in Brownfield. They have four children, Ted Benton of Midland, Irma Williams of Waco, and Wesley Benton and Randall Benton of Ashville, N.C., as well as 11 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

They lived in Brownfield until moving to Midland in 1950. In 1989 they retired and moved to Rising Star. They were associated with B&W Welding and the U.S. Postal Service. They are members of Dellwood Baptist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Hershel Benton

Storms celebrate 60th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Clark E. Storm of Midland celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary with a reception Saturday at Memorial Christian Church.

The couple was married June 2, 1930 in Uvalde. They lived in Roswell, N.M., where Storm was an instructor at the New Mexico Military Institute. They later moved to Artesia, N.M., in 1943 and were active in First Christian Church and the school board. The couple moved to Charlotte, N.C., before moving to Midland in 1972.

The reception was hosted by their children, Marijo Hinton of Plano, Ann Lane of Woodlands, Susie Wilmeth of Midland and Gale Simonson of Denver, Colo.

They are the grandparents of seven grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark E. Storm

Midlanders observe silver anniversary

Jimmie and Cheri Kemp of Midland will celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary today at their home. Hosts of the party will be Barbara Pitchford, Vonnell Lindsey, Paula Beshears, Josie Norwood, Bea Garza, Nancy Holt and their children, Donald Kemp of Midland, Melissa Kemp of San Diego, Calif.; and Timothy Kemp and Joseph Kemp, both of Midland.

The former Cheri Grow married Kemp June 6, 1965 in Muleshoe. The couple, who are both employed at Furrs Super Markets, are both members of First Christian Church. Mrs. Kemp is also a member of Beta Sigma Phi.

The couple lived in Lubbock, Plains, Denver City, Brownfield, Amarillo and Phoenix, Ariz., before moving to Midland 10 years ago.

GARLITZ-BOLGER

SANTA FE, N.M. — Christa Adams Garlitz of San Antonio, Texas, became the bride of John Barr Bolger, also of San Antonio, at noon Saturday at Archbishop Lamy's Chapel in Santa Fe. The Rev. Dr. Joseph Hastings Schley Jr. of Laguna Park, Texas, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gary Garlitz of Midland, Texas, and the granddaughter of Mrs. Clay Addison Adams of Ozona, Texas, and Charles Garlitz of Fort Worth, Texas. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Perry Bolger of Midland. He is the grandson of Jack O'Donohoe of Wichita Falls, Texas.

Jane Ann-Caroline Garlitz of Midland was maid of honor for her sister. Edward Perry Bolger served his son as best man. Ushers were Edward Perry Bolger Jr. of Arlington, Va., brother of the bridegroom, and Charles Clay Garlitz of Midland, brother of the bride. The couple was also attended by Catherine Bolger Graham of Memphis, Tenn., and Caroline Elizabeth Bolger of Midland, sisters of the bridegroom, and William Wade Garlitz of San Antonio, brother of the bride.

After a honeymoon in Jamaica, the couple will live in San Antonio.

RESEARCH: Work is 'clear high'

trying to decode DNA to show how genes create proteins. The two years that Leder would have otherwise spent giving physicals in the Army eventually led to a Nobel Prize for Nirenberg.

Their research showed that it takes three chemical sub-units (bases) arranged in specific order in a gene to make an amino acid, and that a series of amino acids creates a protein. The entire process regulates cell growth and development — the basis of life.

Leder describes his work then, which now touches every aspect of biology, as a "delirious experience" and a "clear high" that was nothing more than "great good luck."

Could it get any better than that, to be part of a Nobel-worthy effort at age 29?

Leder said he thought about that a lot. "I thought I really better take the best job I could get," he said. "Having done that experiment, I did have a lot of job opportunities for a young person. And I thought a little longer and thought that well, if this is the only decent thing I do in science, then it won't be worthwhile spending a life in science."

His work since has not only been decent, it has been spectacular. Leder contributed 15 years to unraveling the mystery of human antibodies. Susumu Tonegawa of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a partner on the project, won the 1988 Nobel Prize in Medicine for the research that explained how the immunoglobulin gene regulates the body's ability to produce antibodies.

Colleagues claim that Leder was cheated from sharing the coveted prize for the second time. Leder dismisses the suggestion and modestly continues to talk about his work.

In the early 1980s, his research merged the study of antibodies with the emerging field of oncogenes — genes that go awry and cause cancer. He wanted to test his oncogene theory in a living organism, combining the transgenic technique with the study of oncogenes.

"We wanted to test the notion in a context in which cancer normally occurs," Leder said. "You can do a lot in a tissue culture dish, but cancer doesn't occur (there). It occurs in a living organism ... that is just a different and far more demanding system."

Thus, the birth of the oncogene-bearing transgenic mice. The transgenic technique inserts a copy of the gene into mouse ovum so every cell in the offspring should have a copy of that gene. This allows study of the gene in different cell types.

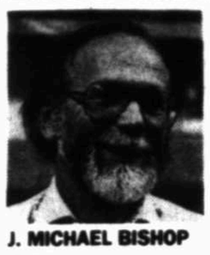
Leder's subsequent research has revealed genes that are involved in the development of breast cancer and has shown whether they act alone or with other genes and growth factors.

"We've given a mouse cancer — exactly the opposite of what one would like to do," he said. "Although by doing it, we understand more about how people develop cancer.

"The more we understand about the action (of a particular gene), the better we are in a position to devise rational treatments for malignancy," Leder said.

"Even if they were discovered tomorrow, they would be years away because of the trials involved. It's a long process; it's not going to come overnight."

CURRENT LEADERS IN CANCER RESEARCH



J. MICHAEL BISHOP

SUSUMU TONEGAWA

STEVEN ROSENBERG

HAROLD VARMUS

BERT VOGELSTEIN

ROBERT WEINBERG

■ J. MICHAEL BISHOP — Professor of microbiology, University of California at San Francisco. He shared the 1989 Nobel Prize in medicine with Harold Varmus for their finding in the late '70s that oncogenes — normal genes that can cause cancer when they run wild — exist in animals ranging from fish to humans as normal components of chromosomes. Their work revealed that humans can carry the seed for cancer in their genes and thereby ushered in a new era in cancer research.

■ SUSUMU TONEGAWA — Professor of biology, Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He received the 1987 Nobel Prize in medicine for his discoveries of how the body can produce new antibodies to combat millions of disease agents that it has never previously encountered. His research could lead to better vaccines and help in the development of anti-cancer therapies based on the body's immune system.

■ STEVEN ROSENBERG — Chief of surgery, National Cancer Institute. He's a pioneer in the field of adoptive immunotherapy — bolstering the body's immune system to fight cancer. Rosenberg has achieved limited success using a combination of interleukin-2 and immune system cells to treat patients with progressed kidney cancer and malignant melanoma, a deadly skin cancer.

■ HAROLD VARMUS — Professor of microbiology, University of California at San Francisco. He shared the 1989 Nobel prize in medicine with Michael Bishop for their oncogene research (see above). Current research focuses on how viruses may cause cancer.

■ BERT VOGELSTEIN — Professor of oncology, The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine. His research on the causes of colo-rectal cancer has uncovered a gene — likely a new suppressor gene — involved in its development. Vogelstein's studies have also shown that four or five gene mutations are necessary for colon cancer to develop.

■ ROBERT WEINBERG — Member, Whitehead Institute, Cambridge, Mass and professor of biology, Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He discovered the gene that blocks retinoblastoma, a rare and often hereditary eye cancer that usually occurs in children. The finding expanded the study of suppressor genes that suppress errant cell growth and may cause cancer when they are missing.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle sections of the Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographes will be published only for winners, not runner-ups. These announcements are published Thursdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Monday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

BLINDED BY THE LIGHT

By Elizabeth Edwin

Summer weather seems to have finally come to stay for a while, and most of us are lathering on the sunscreen and heading for the great outdoors. But what some folks don't realize is, just as the sun's rays can burn your skin, they can also harm your eyes. So as you smooth on the sunscreen, remember to slide on the shades.

However, warns Dr. Chuck Phillips of Phillips Eye Clinic, be aware that not just any shades will do. Although sunglasses are a fashionable accessory this summer, it is important to look for sunglasses that protect the eye from invisible radiation such as ultraviolet (UV) and infrared (IR).

"The eye works like a camera lens. When you get out in the sun, your eyes naturally close or squint, which reduces the amount of light admitted," Phillips said. Wearing ordinary sunglasses, which are dark but not capable of absorbing invisible radiation, can be worse than wearing no sunglasses at all. The reason is, dark lenses will force the openings of the eyes to allow more light in for vision. This is similar to the way a camera lens must open wider in dark conditions for a photograph to be taken. Thus, ordinary sunglasses can allow the eye to open and receive damaging invisible radiation, such as UV or IR, according to Phillips.

Since most people don't like to squint — besides, squinting enhances wrinkles around the eyes — the logical alternative is a pair of quality sunglasses that will absorb invisible radiation.

The main problem associated with sun damage to the eye is that what you don't see can hurt you; UV radiation cannot be sensed until the damage is already done.

Sunburns are caused by the excessive absorption of UV rays in the skin. In the eye, according to information from Phillips, UV can produce short- and long-term damage.

Some UV can be absorbed by the cornea, the clear "window" in the front of the eye, and cause painful blistering in as little as one day's time, Phillips said. UV also can be absorbed and accumulated deeper in the eye by the lens and, although it takes time, can contribute to the formation of cataracts.

Continual exposure of the eye to near UV — 300-400 nanometers (nm) — may result in photochemical eye damage. As the human eye ages, penetration of this near UV increases, generating more and more pigments which cause brown or sunshine cataracts as it becomes progressively more discolored, according to a brochure produced by Brain Power Incorporated (BPI).

The brochure states that reports say 10 percent of all cataract operations are due to this type of UV exposure. Other adverse effects of UV reported by leading experts include macular degeneration, solar retinitis and corneal dystrophies. Treated lenses for UV absorption can help prevent these problems.

Although UV and IR are commonly referred to when talking about damaging rays from the sun, many people may not understand what UV is.

ULTRAVIOLET LIGHT is that portion of the spectrum of invisible light below 286 to 400 (nm). (Wavelengths of visible light range from 400 to 800 nm.) While the primary source of UV is the sun, other sources include video display terminals, fluorescent lighting, high intensity mercury vapor lamps (for night sports and high crime areas) welder's flash and xenon arc lamps.

Because most of these UV rays cannot be directly seen by the human eye, they are sometimes referred to as black light. Unlike visible light, these UV rays can penetrate clouds, therefore sunglasses and sunscreen should still be worn on cloudy days.

UV is divided into three segments designated as A, B and C. UVC (below 286 nm) is effectively filtered by the earth's ozone layer; UVB (286-320 nm) is that solar energy which is the cause of sunburn and snow blindness which is absorbed by the cornea. UVA is that part of the invisible spectrum (320-400 nm) of particular concern to eyecare professionals as it is the most damaging of UV radiation, and is the radiation transmitted to the crystalline lens of the human eye, according to the BPI brochure.

According to information from Phillips, the cornea of the human eye absorbs the lower portion of UVB below 300 nm. This causes the cornea to be vulnerable to pterygia, pingueculae, snow blindness and photokeratitis caused by UV. Patients with UV-treated lenses minimize the effects of those problems.

Infrared radiation, although invisible, is sensed as heat. Of the sun's energy that reaches the earth, about 50 percent is heat, or infrared. IR can be absorbed in two areas of the eye, according to Phillips. Some IR can be absorbed in the lens, and by heating the lens, make it more sensitive to absorbing UV. Absorption of other IR can cause dryness and fatigue of the eye muscles.

When thinking about protecting the eyes, the first thought is to protect them from the sun. However, there are many indoor areas where the eyes need protection from the harmful effects of UV and IR, too.

Of course those who do work outdoors — such as utility workers, police officers, farmers, life guards and drivers — and those who play outdoors — such as snow or water skiers, golfers and beach goers — require protective eyewear from solar UV radiation. But those who work in an environment brightly lit with fluorescent fixtures or operating rooms lit with special bilirubin lights, or who spend hours working on a computer terminal also will benefit from wearing UV-absorptive lenses.

Lighthouse aids visually impaired

By Ron Berthel

NEW YORK (AP) — There's nothing unusual about wearing glasses or contact lenses to bring vision up to or close to normal. In fact, nearly 100 million American adults wear some form of prescriptive eyewear.

But there are at least 4 million visually impaired Americans whose sight cannot be improved medically or with conventional lenses.

"An ordinary pair of glasses does not give these people sufficient vision to do everyday visual things — reading a newspaper, filing their nails or recognizing a person's face," says Dr. Eleanor Faye, ophthalmological director for the Lighthouse Low Vision Services since 1965.

The Lighthouse, founded in 1906 aas the New York Association for the Blind, is a not-for-profit organization that helps the visually impaired make the most of the sight they have. It offers a number of special low-vision aids to help the visually impaired become more functional and less dependent on others.

Among these aids are devices such as magnifiers and telescopes that are prescribed to meet individual needs. There also are everyday items — wall clocks, telephones, playing cards — with extra-large markings, special reading lamps, talking clocks, video magnifiers and various large-type magazines and books, including a dictionary, atlas and the Bible.

One of the visual aids the Lighthouse fits is a device to help visually impaired motorists see distant objects such as highway signs, traffic signals and street signs. What looks like an ordinary pair of spectacles actually has two small, cylindrical telescopes mounted in the upper portion of each lens.

Dr. Bruce P. Rosenthal, clinical director of the Lighthouse Low Vision Continuing Education Program, says the motorist, while driving under normal conditions, looks through the regular lenses. He glances into the telescopic part only when something distant needs to be brought into his field of vision.

According to Rosenthal, the device is legal in several states.

The purpose of the Lighthouse, Faye says, is to rehabilitate people who have vision problems. They are brought to the Lighthouse, she says, "with the possibility that something can be done to help them."

She says patients with low vision are faced with hazards from things that don't faze people with normal or corrected sight. Such otherwise simple tasks as shaving, setting a thermostat, negotiating sidewalk curbs and steps, and dealing with traffic can be hazardous to those with low vision.

Low vision can cause social problems, too. "People who have trouble seeing faces feel socially out of it, and they end up staying home," says Faye.

The Lighthouse serves more than 4,000 people, from infants to the elderly. Dr. Barbara Silverstone, executive director, says that over the years, "the profile of blindness has changed. Only 5 percent of the 4,000 we serve are totally blind."

Faye stressed another problem the visually impaired face: While the public can often understand the handicap of a blind person, "partial sight is not simple to understand."

SHADES: Protect your eyes from sun's harmful rays

(From 1F)

Another high risk group — often overlooked — according to Phillips, are those taking certain medications. The BPI brochure states, "There are many photosensitizing drugs on the market today in general use, such as certain tranquilizers, diuretics, anti-diabetic and anti-hypertensive medications, oral contraceptives, antibiotics, even artificial sweeteners, such as cyclamates. If you take any of these on a regular basis, you should consider UV filtering lenses."

Some acne medications that contain tetracyclines, as well as some antibiotics, laxatives and antihistamines also are examples of photosensitizing drugs. Your optometrist, pharmacist or physician can tell you if medication he prescribes for you is photosensitizing.

Even those who use a sunlamp or tanning bed need to use protective lenses.

The UV coatings can be applied to clear lenses — as well as tinted lenses — for those who need protection for indoor work or activities.

If you have had cataract surgery on one or both eyes, then your eye's lens was removed. That lens provided most of your eye's natural protection from UV radiation. Therefore, you should be concerned about UV radiation in indoor lighting as well as in sunlight, according to the American Optometric Association. Your lens implant may provide UV protection — some of the newer ones do — so you should check with your doctor.

So as you head for the great outdoors to enjoy the summer weather, don't forget your sunscreen, and remember, as the song says, "You Gotta' Wear Shades."

New eyedrops may replace sunglasses for UV protection

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Researchers at the University of Southern California are investigating chromophores, a chemical that dramatically absorbs ultraviolet rays, according to Drug Topics.

Used as eyedrops, the medical journal notes, the liquid could protect users from ultraviolet exposure from the sun as well as light from computer terminals, car headlights and fluorescent lights.

Once placed in the eyes, the drops form a clear coating that lasts several hours. The drops could be available in three years, the publication notes.

Diabetes leading cause of blindness

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Diabetes is the leading cause of blindness in the U.S., with 6,000 new cases of severe visual impairment occuring each year. The cause of blindness, called diabetic retinopathy, is often exacerbated by pregnancy.

Glaucoma is a thief of sight

NEW YORK (AP) — Even though there are about 300,000 new cases of glaucoma each year — and 95,000 people lose some degree of sight — a recent Gallup survey revealed a majority of adults incorrectly believe that a feeling of pressure in the eyes is experienced during the early stages of the disease.

Results of the survey, sponsored by the National Society to Prevent Blindness, also showed that 54 percent of those polled wrongly believed it is possible to correct eye damage caused by glaucoma.

According to eye specialists, the facts are that glaucoma can cause vision loss without warning symptoms and cannot be restored.

Coolest shades come in hottest colors

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

This season the coolest shades come in the hottest colors.

Sunglasses have become an indispensable accessory.

Maybe that explains why the newest are colored as brilliantly as parrots.

Not only are frames made in two-and even three-color combinations, mirrored lenses are also tinted such pulsating shades as rosy purple, greenish blue, violet, gold or orange. These colorful coatings reflect trends in clothes.

A quick way to get the look is to pick up a pair from a street vendor. The price is usually $5 or $6. This is throwaway chic.

For those who are more serious about their style, and really have to use their glasses to see, optical boutiques are the places to go.

Even prescription lenses can be mirrored in the choicest colors at specialists like Gruen Optika, Third Avenue and 64th Street.

Some of the handsomest frames there look as if they had been dipped into combinations of metallic car finishes.

The average price for frames is $195, with prescription lenses starting at $70. Not cheap, but a nice way to look at the world.

Sarasota is Florida's west coast escape

By Tom and Joanne O'Toole
Copley News Service

Stretched along a magnificent bay and an inviting intercoastal waterway, protected by keys with miles of white sand beaches, and acclaimed as Florida's cultural mecca, Sarasota has evolved into a fast-growing, affluent community.

The town began with the arrival of 68 Scottish immigrants in 1885. By 1910, the population had zoomed to 840.

Circus impresario John Ringling and his wife Mable wintered here in 1911, and it was their vision that is credited with providing the impetus for molding the city into much of what it is today. If they could see it now they would have reason to be proud, yet a little sad.

John and Mable left their mark in the form of their original 38-acre compound along Sarasota Bay. They built a stunning mansion patterned after the Doge's Palace in Venice, and a splendid museum to house their massive collection of paintings and art objects.

Ringling, considered the most significant personality in Sarasota's history, bought up huge tracts of land, poured millions into the local economy, and in 1927 made the city the annual winter home for his circus.

He purchased St. Armands Key, then detailed plans for developing it into residential lots and a shopping complex laid out in a circle. The only problem was finding a way to get to the little mangrove island from the mainland.

THAT WAS easy for a man with elephants. The lumbering beasts hauled the timbers needed to build a causeway, which Ringling himself opened by leading a circus parade across. First-day sales of Ringling property topped $1 million. Talk about showmanship.

When John died in 1936 (seven years after his wife), he willed his waterfront estate, museum and art treasures to the state of Florida. The Asolo Theater and Circus Galleries were built after Ringling's death, and were not part of his grand plan.

One ticket admits visitors to the buildings and the walled grounds, and although the complex is Sarasota's No. 1 tourist attraction, the mansion itself is its biggest draw.

As part of the annual five-day Sarasota International Circus Festival and Parade, the greatest performers of the big top are inducted into the Sarasota Circus "Ring of Fame." A bronze circus wheel and plaque embedded in concrete is dedicated to each of the recipients, and placed along the perimeter of parklike St. Armands Circle.

Charter inductees in 1988 were circus owner John Ringling North, the flying Wallenda Troupe, animal trainer Clyde Beatty, clown Lou Jacobs and band leader Merle Evans. Honored in '89 were fabled clown Emmett Kelly, acrobat Franz Unus, the Cristiani Family bareback riders and aerialists Lillian Leitzel and La Norma.

Sarasota has developed into one of the foremost cultural centers in the Southeast, with the Van Wezel Performing Arts Hall (designed to resemble a scallop shell, then painted purple) as its centerpiece. Leading performers, theatrical and ballet companies, and the symphony orchestra appear on its stage. A meal and a professional musical or comedy liven the Golden Apple Dinner Theater; classic and modern plays are performed at the Florida State Theater Company, while local thespians pursue their talents at the Players of Sarasota and a number of smaller theaters in the community.

EACH SPRING the students at Sarasota High School stage the "Sailor Circus," pulling in capacity crowds to see their acts, and getting rave reviews for their professionalism.

The Marie Selby Botanical Gardens near the city marina contains 14 acres of greenery, and is the international research center for epiphytic (air) plants. At the Sarasota Jungle Gardens there are 16 acres of trails, bird shows, flamingos and lush growth simulating a rain forest.

On a patch of sand between St. Armands and Longboat Keys is the Mote Marine Science Center, internationally recognized for its marine research, with an emphasis on shark studies. The center is largely devoted to exhibiting and providing information about sea and plant life, and has interesting displays.

CNS Photo

These children build a castle along Siesta Beach in Sarasota, Fla.

For other activities, deep-sea and bay fishing are usually excellent, evidenced by the fact dive-bombing pelicans never go hungry. Greyhounds race at the Sarasota Kennel Club track from about Memorial Day to Labor Day, and dinner in the clubhouse while watching the evening races is always enjoyable. In the early spring the Chicago White Sox get in shape for baseball season here.

Where the downtown meets the Tamiami Trail is the city marina, home for sleek yachts, local fishing charters, little sailboats and popular Marina Jack's Restaurant where you can watch water traffic over a cup of chowder, or the fresh catch of the day. Providing a shelter for the marina is Island Park, a small man-made spot of land dredged from the bay bottom.

SARASOTA IS well protected from the Gulf of Mexico by the barrier keys Siesta, Lido, St. Armands and Longboat — all fashionable little vacation and residential snug-aways in their own right, and connected to the mainland via drawbridge causeways. Hotels, resorts, apartments and high-rise condominiums flourish along the beachfronts, adding annually to the already overbuilt, high-priced locations.

Twelve-mile-long Longboat Key is an incorporated community, with its own police and fire departments, post office and government services.

Although the keys are lined with beaches, the most popular (best sand, most pretty girls) is Siesta Beach, followed by Lido Beach (where the sand is not near as fine, and too many idle adolescents and young toughs hang around the pavilion and walk the water's edge).

Siesta Key also has Crescent and Turtle Beach, Lido Key has South Lido and North Lido beaches, and Longboat Key has a continuous stretch of sand, but much of it is difficult to approach because of the many hotels, resorts and condominium projects.

For a different perspective of Sarasota, bay cruises take you along the intercoastal waters. The paddle wheeler Marina Jack II makes its way around the bay on lunch and dinner cruises, but go at lunchtime if you're really interested in seeing anything. Romance your favorite person at dinner when all you want to see is each other.

CULINARY DELIGHTS are no flash-in-the-pan in Sarasota. Some of the restaurants are well established, and even the new kids on the block strive for excellence. There are more than enough outstanding restaurants to keep the fussiest tourist satisfied for weeks.

No. 1 on everyone's list is the award-winning Cafe L'Europe on St. Armands Circle. Another offering exceptional cuisine and charm is Euphemia Haye on Longboat Key.

Sarasota is 50 miles south of Tampa, with a number of airlines serving the Sarasota/Bradenton Airport. The direct (but congested) route from Tampa is U.S. 41. Interstate 75 is the faster way, with a number of exits funneling into the city but they, too, often are clogged. The Sunshine Parkway (U.S. 19) leads from St. Petersburg across Tampa Bay, and links up with the Tamiami Trail north of Sarasota.

Information and literature are available by writing the John and Mable Ringling Museums, 5401 Bayshore Road, Sarasota, Fla. 34243. The local telephone is (813) 355-5101.

BROCHURES AND a map of the area are available from the Sarasota Visitors Bureau, 655 North Tamiami Trail, Sarasota, Fla. 34236, and the telephone is (813) 957-1877.

Literature on surrounding attractions, and other areas of the state, are free by contacting the Florida State Tourist Office, 507 Collins Building, 107 W. Gaines St., Tallahassee, Fla. 32399-2000. The local telephone is (804) 488-3058.

Baby boomers feel the stretch

By Erma Bombeck

For the last 40 years, everyone has been trying to track the trends and buying habits of the baby boomers. Just because there are 77 million of them out there, they're all we hear about. The baby boomers are entering school. The baby boomers are starting families. The baby boomers are having plastic credit card implants in both hands.

Bombeck

If you're as breathless about their next move as I am, you should know that any minute now they will stop eating garlic bread and move on to English muffins.

Most of the habits of these people born from 1945 to 1960 are based on the history of those who are older than they are. As they move from one decade to the next, it's relatively easy to trace where they will spend their money and what they will be putting into their shopping carts. Publishers of magazines, car manufacturers, lending institutions, insurance companies, colleges and producers of consumer products hover over them like hawks, waiting to see where they can clean up on the next trend.

Well, forget the year 2000, when it is predicted that baby boomers will buy bug spray, cleaning products to save them time, bran laxatives and environment-friendly cloth trash bags. I have seen their future — and I'm it! And my insider's tip is, "Buy elastic!"

By the year 2000, we're going to have 77 million people looking for their waistlines. The zippers that used to slide up and down easily will no longer come together. The thirtysomethings who bought a Stairmaster after the birth of each baby could climb Mount Everest and still wouldn't lose a pound. Never before in the history of the world will we have 77 million people retaining water at the same time. Everything will have elastic: waistbands on slacks and skirts, belts, bathing suits, diapers, fanny packs, even pantyhose.

I know you think they have elastic now, but in the future I'm talking about elastic that gives.

It is predicted that dieting will still be a major trend. Think about it. Here's a generation born to skim milk, sent to camps for the overweight in grade school, weaned on gyms, food pouches, powdered formulas and quick-weight-loss programs, seduced by marathons and 10 K's, and who invented a whole new vocabulary, including "lite," "non-cholesterol," "no fat or caffeine," "reduced calories" and "less filling." Don't tell me they're not going to kick back finally and let it all hang out. Buy elastic!

Maintain health while visiting tropics

By Robin and Patricia Harris
Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — A new brochure produced by a group of Long Island doctors, "Traveling Healthy," contains some very useful nuggets of advice.

The entry on the Caribbean firmly recommends that before departing, regardless of age, all immunizations should be updated, even those for childhood ailments. Ask for some tablets to take once a week to avoid the most serious types of malaria.

Elderly folks bound for the islands occasionally run the risk of influenza, so vaccination is recommended for visits during summer because the previous fall and winter shots for the disease may have worn off.

On the airplane, hyperventilation — marked by deep and rapid breathing, extreme dizziness and tightness in the chest — can always occur. If it does call a stewardess for oxygen immediately.

Hyperventilating could be a heart attack warning sign, but most of the time the symptom is the result of temporary concerns about flying at high altitudes. So the oxygen, while it may worsen the symptoms at first, should bring the victims around in a few minutes.

On arrival, travelers will find that drinking water is generally chlorinated except in the smallest and most remote islands. However if the micro-organisms in the purified water differ from those at your home you could still suffer an intestinal upset. So the safe solution is simply to stick to bottled water, always obtainable. This is particularly helpful after natural disasters like hurricanes, which usually damage reservoirs and pipe lines.

Before going on a Caribbean junket take hot baths as often as you can to help your body adjust to the tropics and try to exercise for an hour or so. Once there, don't wait until you are very thirsty to take a drink — sip water, soft drinks and fruit juices. Tomato juice also is good.

The importance of liquids is stressed by the tale of 80 travelers touring India in two busses. One contingent drank water and soft drinks only at regular scheduled stops, while the other was encouraged to take liquids all day from the bus refrigerator. The first group had four times the headaches, faster pulses and higher temperatures than the second group at the end of the day.

The physicians advise against taking extra salt tablets during the day, even in the hottest weather. Instead travelers are advised to eat and drink items that contain salt.

In the tropics never swim in fresh water, which is likely to contain parasites that may cause serious skin ailments.

Coral cuts can always bring trouble because coral has a natural ingredient that can work its way into cuts and bruises and cause poisoning which aggravates wounds.

Jelly fish often have long tentacles resembling sea weed, but they can inject poisons causing severe pain. If you notice a jelly fish tentacle on your skin don't try to rip it off with your bare hands, but use a cloth. Wash itching or discolored flesh with sea water and soap and then apply rubbing alcohol for several minutes. When you have finished, apply cortisone cream to relieve the itching.

When on the beach, never lie directly on the sand to avoid insect bites. And always wear glasses in the tropics. They reduce the chances of future cataracts and minimize the risk of harming the retina of the eyes, not to mention possible sunburn of the skin of the eyelid.

In very hot climates take your pulse in the morning before starting your day. Then try it again in a few hours. If it has increased by 20 percent get out of the sun at once and drink plenty of liquids. Again some tomato juice is especially helpful.

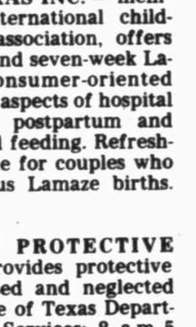
DEAR ABBY

TV viewers are privy to more than they really care to see

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: It happened again last night. It must be "the place" to meet and talk on several otherwise excellent TV shows. I'm referring to the men's restroom. The most offensive show in this respect is "L.A. Law," and now the premiere of "Capital News," too. I am very uncomfortable and offended while watching TV with friends and/or young people when men are filmed literally going through the motions of using the urinal as they talk to one another.



Van Buren

On "L.A. Law" last week, two men in two stalls dropped their pants and tossed toilet paper between stalls — all the while the camera photographed this from the floor. Is this really an acceptable area for filming? I find it very embarrassing to have to share in such a private (or it should be) act.

Abby, you have more clout than viewers boycotting advertised products. What is your opinion? I don't think I'm a prude; I just believe this is in extremely poor taste. — MIDWEST R.N. AND MOM

DEAR MIDWEST R.N.: I agree with you, and I don't consider myself a prude either. Perhaps we're lucky. It could have been worse.

DEAR ABBY: I need your help concerning something that happened to me many years ago. I am now 23 years old and have a very good memory. The trouble started when I was about 3 or 4 years old. My grandfather would pick me up and put me on his lap; then after a while, he would put his hand under my dress and rub me in a private place. With a little girl's mind, and because I was so fond of him, I never thought he would do anything wrong. I would tolerate it as long as I could, then I'd get down. This went on until I was about 7 years old. I remember trying to stay off his lap because it made me feel uncomfortable and ashamed.

When I was 10, my grandfather died. I kept remembering what he had done to me, and I couldn't bring myself to feel sad. Meanwhile, my mother loved her father very much and cried for a long time every time his name was mentioned. Once she asked me if I ever thought of Grandpa and if I missed him. That really got to me, Abby, because I remember what a terrible thing he did to me, and I was glad I didn't have to sit on his lap.

Should I tell my mother what happened and destroy the good memories she has of her father, or keep it to myself since he is now dead? He doesn't deserve to be well thought of after violating my body as a child, but I don't want to hurt my mother.

What should I do? — BITTER MEMORIES

DEAR BITTER MEMORIES: Call the toll-free National Child Abuse Hotline, (800) 422-4453. In addition to information and referral services, telephone crisis counseling is provided to child abuse victims, abusers and others closely involved in such situations. Your local mental health society can recommend a therapist who specializes in counseling adults who have been molested as very young children and still harbor the bitter memories of sexual abuse.

Counseling will help you work through these painful memories, so that you can finally put them to rest. No good purpose would be served in telling your mother.

DEAR ABBY: This is a very long story, but I'll try to keep it short. I've been married for 20 years to a man I have been very happy with. We have a family we are proud of.

Last June, my husband went to Mexico to see his mother. (We live just over the border.) Well, he ran into his childhood girlfriend. She was expecting a baby from a man who had left her, so she asked my husband if he would marry her. He thought nobody would find out that he was already married because she lived in Mexico, so he agreed to marry her, not knowing he was going to be in hot water later.

This girl came to the United States to have her baby (a boy), and she gave the baby my husband's last name. She is not a citizen of the U.S., but her son is.

The baby is not my husband's. I still love him — that's why I don't report him to the authorities. Please tell me what to do. — DO NOT USE MY NAME

DEAR DO NOT: There is nothing you can do, but your husband should be aware that by allowing this woman to name him as the father of her child, legally he is the child's father, and as such, he is responsible for child support until the child is 18 years old. Your husband is also guilty of bigamy, having married this woman while being married to you.

Your husband should see a lawyer. He needs to know exactly what his legal obligations are, and if possible, how he can extricate himself from this mess.

Here is an up-to-date guide for formal church weddings, at-home weddings or second-time-around weddings. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage is included.

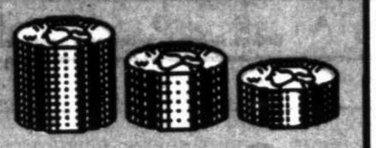
BUSINESS DIGEST



Dollar coin?

WASHINGTON — The General Accounting Office said that the United States could save $318 million over a 30-year period if a dollar coin replaced the dollar bill. But the agency warned that such a switch would probably be unpopular with the public.

The report from the GAO congressional research agency was presented at a hearing of the House Banking Committee's Subcommittee on Consumer Affairs and Coinage.

The report said there were no compelling reasons to eliminate the penny, as has been proposed by retailers and some other groups. The report noted that the government makes money on the penny, since it costs only seven-tenths of a cent to produce.

A dollar coin, featuring a likeness of Susan B. Anthony, was introduced in 1980, but it proved unpopular and was soon withdrawn from circulation.

The GAO report cited a Gallup survey last month showing that only 15 percent of respondents would favor abolishing the dollar bill and replacing it with a coin.

But it said there would be signficant savings from the dollar coin.

Each paper note costs 2.6 cents to produce and lasts about 1.4 years. The GAO study estimated the dollar coin would cost 6 cents to make but last for about 30 years.

MagiCan fizzles

ATLANTA (AP) — The Coca-Cola Co. is scrapping its much ballyhooed "MagiCan" promotion after bad publicity over mechanical problems with some of the prize-filled soft drink cans.

The company had intended to distribute 750,000 of the special cans throughout the summer, but spokesman Randy Donaldson said Thursday that shipments had been halted. The move came a week after Coke took out full-page ads acknowledging the defective cans and explaining how they work.

Books galore

SARASOTA, Fla. — The book industry's trend toward bigger stores may have reached its pinnacle in a bookseller which stocks 135,000 titles, and discounts most of them, and usually ships within a day.

The computer has made it possible, and the computer at this bookseller does even more: In one minute, it scans everything in print and much that isn't -- about 1,250,000 titles in all. So a caller learns immediately what is available, at what price.

Discount Booksource's free phone number for orders is 800/833-0720.

With 135,000 titles in stock, it is clearly a giant, even compared with the largest book stores. The Tattered Cover store in Denver and the Borders book stores in the Midwest both carry inventories of more than 100,000 titles.

Midlander takes car wash to the car

■ Randy Crook is cleaning up with his Power Spray mobile car wash, and he hopes to do even more.

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Randy Crook, who has lived in Midland since 1968, washes a customer's Mercedes earlier this week. He says he's earning a good living with his mobile car wash, and enjoys the work.

In today's busy world, it's hard for a car owner to take his car to the car wash on a regular basis.

That's no problem for Midlander Randy Crook. He simply takes the car wash to the car.

Crook owns Power Spray Mobile Wash, and he's definitely not singing those "Working at the Car Wash Blues."

Since he acquired the business from a friend two years ago, the former ad salesman for a real estate magazine has made a good living washing cars.

"It was real lean at first," he admits, "but my wife and I did some praying over it, and it's been good since." He acknowledges that his earnings are better with Power Spray than they were with the magazine, which makes it easier to support his wife Valerie and two sons, Josh, 2, and Collin, nine months.

"You can make good money if you get out and hustle," he says.

And he enjoys the work more, saying "I'm an outdoorsy kind of person."

He also enjoys managing his own business — putting his degree in business management from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin to good use. He's lived in Midland since 1968, when he moved here with his family at the age of 7. He graduated from Lee High in 1979.

Services range from a simple $5 exterior wash to a $135 job that includes exterior wash, engine wash, detarring the car, detailing, the seats and carpet cleaned and vacuumed, dash and tires dressed, and the car waxed.

He says he washes every day it's not raining, and has washed cars in 28 degree weather and with an inch of snow on the ground.

He uses softened, reverse osmosis deionized water with 12 parts per million, and washes with 100 percent cotton cloths that are laundered nightly and uses a soft mitt.

The Power Spray, which he tows on a trailer behind his truck, is actually a 300-gallon agricultural tank. He estimates he uses two-and-a-half to four gallons per

Information byproduct of Dallas firm's sales leads

■ Businessman's dealings lead to conclusion that owner's egos are a bigger factor in small business than suspected.

By John A. Bolt

HURST, Texas (AP) — Small business — very small business — equals large ego and much more interest in independence than wealth, according to surveys conducted for a company that specializes in small business insurance.

Small businesses are not simply miniatures of their big brothers, according to Neal Kay, a former insurance agent who is now president of United Group Information Services.

"Ego's a much, much bigger factor in small business. The thing that most small business people want is recognition," Neal said. "Most small businesses don't want to be large businesses, (their owners) want to control their own destiny."

Kay's conclusions are based on information gleaned as a by-product of millions of telephone calls UGIS makes each year to find potential customers for United Group Associates, one of the nation's largest marketers of small business insurance.

Although there are numerous statistics dealing with small businesses, Kay said most are based on government definitions.

The Small Business Administration, for example, says a business qualifies as "small" if it is individually owned, not dominant in its field and meets applicable size limitations: in manufacturing, it must employ less than 500 people; in wholesale, less than 100 people; in retailing and service, have annual sales less than $3.5 million; or in construction, have annual sales less than $17 million.

Kay's target group is 12.5 million businesses with 20 or fewer employees, most of them with 10 or fewer.

"These are really undocumented," he said. "You have to dig awfully hard to find small business."

With a $10 million annual budget, UGIS uses telephone listings, occupational licenses, sales tax records and any other place to search for small businesses.

From those records, 400 UGIS telephone operators call the business to expand on the listings, find out more than just the owner's name. Operators ask questions about their background, opinions and experiences.

The findings serve a double purpose: first they present a market for United Group Associates insurance salesmen, but UGIS also sells the information to other companies looking for contacts in the small business world.

The secondary use brings in about $1 million in revenue a year — not even 1 percent of United Group's overall revenue, but "as an add-on, it's a very nice business," Kay said.

Still, by early 1992, Kay anticipates the sideline will be profitable on its own because "the ability to produce information is far more valuable than the information itself."

A&M training center proposed for Basin

■ A proposed training facility could provide the Permian Basin much needed training in drilling and well service, and become a major tourist attraction at the same time.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

A proposed oilfield training center could become a major tourist attraction for Midland.

Texas A&M has proposed the establishment of an oilfield drilling and well service training center in Midland, and one of the locations suggested is in the vicinity of the Petroleum Museum.

The training center, which would be operated by the Energy Training Division of A&M's Texas Engineering Extension Service (TEEX), would consist of a fully operational drilling rig and well service rig and classrooms.

Will McNair, head of the Energy Training Division, said the facility would be open to public tours and could complement the Petroleum Museum as an additional educational facility and tourist attraction.

"To our knowledge," said McNair, "it would be the only place in the nation where the public could tour an active drilling rig and workover rig. It could serve as an attraction to get a lot more visitors off Interstate 20 to visit the rigs and the Petroleum Museum."

Ed Rowland, director of the Petroleum Museum, says the training facility could contribute to making Midland a tourist destination. He said the coming of the Confederate Air Force to Midland, coupled with the Petroleum Museum and the possibility of being able to tour an active drilling rig and watch crews making connections would all work together to make Midland a tourist destination.

McNair says the Permian Basin Training Center would have the primary purpose of hands-on training for drilling and well service crews. He said there was a definite need for such a facility in the Permian Basin given the shortage of trained personnel, the stability of oil prices and increased well service and drilling activity.

In addition to training crews in basic proficiency, he notes that the training center would also be used to teach new technology, safety courses and management courses to oilfield personnel, and to provide orientation courses for non-field personnel.

McNair said the training center would have many applications and develop many custom courses once it was in operation and the training needs of the Permian Basin were assessed. He said the training center would not compete with PETEX production training facilities in Odessa and would stick strictly to training in well service and drilling operations. With the addition of a training school for drilling and well service, McNair said the training needs of the Permian Basin would be fully rounded out.

"The facility would be self-sustaining, with income derived from training activities," he said, "but as long as the market for trained petroleum industry personnel is maintained, there should be sufficient income from the facility."

He estimates that it would require approximately $600,000 to construct classrooms and the site and sustain it for the first year of operation. He would also seek to have a drilling rig and well service unit donated by the industry. The first scale programs could begin during the summer or fall of 1991.

In the interim TEEX has already scheduled a number of courses to begin July 16. Among the courses are Advanced Horizontal Drilling Technology, Introduction to Horizontal Drilling Management and Economics and Introduction to Horizontal Drilling Technology.

Also to be taught is a course in Refinery Safety. McNair says that with a number of refineries and a petrochemical complex in the area, there is also a need

Baker Hughes Inc. reports that the U.S. rig count passed 1,000 for the first time this year, climbing 29 to 1,001.

At the same time, the Permian Basin tally fell five to 130.

Among major oil-producing states, Colorado posted the largest increase with nine, followed by Louisiana, seven; North Dakota, six; Texas, five; New Mexico, three; Michigan, two; and Ohio and Pennsylvania, one each.

Meridian reports Austin Chalk discovery

SEATTLE (SWN) — Burlington Resources Inc. announced that its gas and oil producing subsidiary, Meridian Oil Inc., has completed tests of a wildcat discovery well in the Austin Chalk Trend in south and central Texas.

Meridian's No. 1H E.E. Smith well flowed at an average rate of 12,254 barrels of oil per day, 4.9 million cubic feet of gas per day and 3,032 barrels of water per day through two 2-1/16 inch chokes at a flowing tubing pressure of 300 pounds per square inch during a four-hour test period.

The water produced was declining during the test period and was analyzed to be drilling and completion fluids.

The tests were observed by representatives of the Texas Railroad Commission and the results will be filed with that state agency in order that an appropriate allowable can be determined for the well.

The well was drilled as a medium radius, extended reach horizontal drainhole to a total measured depth of 11,368 feet. At total depth, the well extended a distance of approximately 2,900 feet from the vertical portion of the well.

Although initial test results are favorable, the Austin Chalk Trend has historically experienced significant production decline rates in some areas of the Trend. In view of this fact, Meridian will continue to evaluate the potential of this well. Meridian has a 100% working interest in this well which is located in Gonzales County, Texas.

Meridian has approximately 20,000 net acres under lease in the immediate vicinity of the well and has a total in excess of 100,000 net acres under lease in the Wilson, Karnes and Gonzales County area. Meridian also has a significant leasehold position in other parts of the Austin Chalk Trend.

Wainoco reports Austin holdings

HOUSTON (SWN) — In response to inquiries concerning its recent Austin Chalk discovery in LaSalle County, Texas, and regarding questions concerning its leasehold interests in the Austin Chalk Trend, Wainoco Oil Corp. reports that it has approximately 64,000 gross and 31,000 net acres under lease or with agreements to lease in the Austin Chalk Trend. Included in these leases are approximately 4,500 gross and 900 net acres in the lease block of its recent discovery. Wainoco also announced that it currently has two test wells drilling in the general vicinity of its discovery on leases that total 12,935 gross and 2,620 net acres.

In addition, Wainoco noted that its lease position in the Austin Chalk Trend includes approximately 6,740 gross/3,370 net acres either leased or with agreements to lease in Gonzales County in the vicinity of the wildcat oil discovery, Meridian Oil Inc.'s No. 1 HEE Smith well announced yesterday. The discovery by Meridian Oil was reported to have flowed at an average rate of 12,254 barrels of oil and 4.9 million cubic feet of gas per day.

Local 7-Elevens to offer MoneyGram

Staff Report

American Express and 7-Eleven stores in Midland and Odessa have come together to test the new American Express MoneyGram service, an automated version of its worldwide money transfer service. The service allows customers to transfer money around the world from participating 7-Eleven stores that are open 24 hours per day, year round.

The expansion follows a successful six-month test of the automated American Express MoneyGram service in Colorado Springs and Pueblo, Colorado 7-Eleven stores, according to Bill Esslinger, vice president, American Express MoneyGram. "We entered the money transfer business partly because the industry needed a better way of doing business. We reduced the time it takes to transfer funds from days to minutes and now we've further simplified the process by introducing automation," Esslinger said.

The automated American Express MoneyGram service allows customers to initiate send or receive money transfer transactions through a computerized point-of-sale terminal. Once a customer has competed a brief form, the transfer is initiated on a computer terminal and through telephone contact with operators at American Express MoneyGram's 24-hour customer service center.

For receive transactions, funds are paid in either cash, depending on availability, or by an American Express MoneyGram draft which is printed immediately in the store. All cash disbursements by 7-Eleven clerks are repaid immediately by American Express through the same check printing process.

"7-Eleven is the perfect partner for this service too because most of their stores are open 24-hours every day of the year. As we expand this service, MoneyGram will be available to people across the county in those stores anytime during the day or night, 365 days a year," Esslinger said.

Customer fees for automated MoneyGram transfers in 7-Eleven stores are the same as through non-automated agents. MoneyGram is available at more than 8,800 agent locations in 35 countries around the world and is available to everyone. The service is fast and flexible and does not require a sender to specify where funds are to be picked up.

Funds are available for pick-up within 10 minutes (except at certain international locations and through Mexico banking and telegraph system) at any agent location by showing identification or answering a predetermined question for add security.

Customers can pay for a MoneyGram with cash, American Express cards, Visa, MasterCard and Discover. American Express cardmembers have the advantage of paying for the service with a personal check at any American Express Travel Service Office. American Express Optima Cardmembers can initiate money transfers from home.

Eighty-nine Texas and Colorado 7-Eleven stores are now being added to the test, bringing the total number of test stores to 112.

For more information call American Express's 24-hour toll free number 1-800-543-4080 in English or 1-800-955-7777 in Spanish.

BJ Services files registration with SEC

HOUSTON (SWN) — Baker Hughes Inc. has announced that BJ Services Co., currently a wholly-owned subsidiary of Baker Hughes, has filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission covering the initial public offering of nine million primary shares of common stock. The primary shares constitute approximately 69 percent of the common stock of BJ Services. Baker Hughes has granted an option to the underwriters to purchase a maximum of an additional 1,350,000 shares of BJ Services common stock owned by Baker Hughes to cover over-allotments. Depending upon the exercise of this option, Baker Hughes will own 20 percent to 31 percent of the common stock of BJ Services following completion of the offering.

BJ Services participates in the pressure pumping segment of the oil field service market and is primarily involved in the cementing, fracturing and acidizing of oil and gas wells.

CARS: Mobile wash convenient, economical car wash. "I try not to waste the water since I have to pay for it."

Crook numbers approximately 100 individuals among his customers, along with such businesses as Friendly Pontiac, Sewell Ford, Permian Toyota, Sloan Brothers Buick, Texas Refreshment, Federal Express and the U.S. Post Office.

There are various reasons why customers like Crook's mobile car wash. One is the convenience of not having to drive to a car wash. And Crook says dealerships find his service economical.

He also observes that, with car prices rising and the new finishes manufacturers are putting on the new cars, a number of his customers don't trust mechanical washes. After all, he points out, a car is the second largest investment a person can make, after a house.

He says he can handle an infinite number of customers, it's just a question of adding a second unit — which he's planning to do soon, and he usually hires temporary help during the busy season — which starts with warm weather.

Other future plans, besides adding a second mobile wash unit, include branching out into "Dealers Choice," which would provide car washes to auto dealerships who want their own.

And, because he would like to franchise the power spray technology, Crook is also looking for investors and advisors for assistance.

While he faces competition from other mobile car washes as well as traditional car washes, Crook isn't worried.

As he puts it, "once I've done your car, I've got you."

Midland firm, Teledyne sign agreement

Staff Report

Midland-based Microgravity Research Associates, has signed an agreement with Teledyne Brown Engineering of Huntsville, Ala.

The agreement calls for Teledyne to contribute certain facilities and expertise, under a teaming arrangement with Microgravity, to develop exotic electronic materials such as Gallium Antimonide, Gallium Arsenide and Indium Gallium Arsenide.

Under the agreement, Microgravity will contribute its science and technical capabilities.

The teaming arrangement will have an initial period of two years after which it is contemplated a further relationship will be defined in light of the results of the first two year period.

Microgravity and Teledyne envision this arrangement will lead to other opportunities to join forces where they have complementary expertise.

Teledyne is a leading subcontractor to Boeing for the laboratory module on the U.S. Space Station "Freedom" and the prime contractor to NASA for the Crystal Growth facility.

Microgravity, in conjunction with MIT, is the developer of a unique crystal growth process that is believed to hold promise for the development of several new and advanced electronic materials for use in lasers, sensors and detectors, solar cells, integrated circuits and optical switching.

Teledyne Brown is a leader in advanced systems for defense, aerospace and space activities and is a major contractor to the Department of Defense and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

STATISTICS: Information serves two purposes

(From 1G)

Earlier this year, the company began a one-page newsletter to report some of its findings.

Although Kay admits the surveys don't qualify as scientific polls, he said the size of the samples gives them authenticity. The questions come more from Kay's own curiosity about small businessmen than from a scientific effort to develop a profile, although Kay holds a master's degree in psychology from Rutgers University.

In one recent survey, UGIS found small business is a man's world, with males accounting for 72.9 percent of 20,400 business owners surveyed.

Computers also are used widely, with 29.2 percent of the owners saying they use a personal computer.

A second survey of 1,080 owners found:

- Only 283, or 27.1 percent, had started more than one business.
- Most, 70.1 percent, believed it is better to start a business than to buy one.
- Small businessmen start young, with males' average age at startup 27.8 years and females' at age 30. Overall, the average age in the survey was 38.
- The hours also are long, with the average small businessman putting in a 52.5-hour workweek.

Kay was most surprised at the response when the business owners were asked the greatest benefit of being self-employed.

Only 3.15 percent cited financial rewards alone, while 63 percent said the greatest benefit was independence or being their own boss. The rest said a combination of all the factors was the best reward.

"There's more here than just sales leads," Kay said. "We have a better sense of what a small business is."

SCOTT BURNS

Charting the future of home prices

By Scott Burns

Burns

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. — Inside the National Bureau of Economic Research it is referred to as "Working Paper No. 2794." To the outside world its release in December, 1988, was a shocking proclamation.

Everyone's favorite investment, home ownership, would decline in real value.

"If I had known how much this paper would be discussed in popular circles, I wouldn't have used the 47 percent figure," Gregory Mankiw said, referring to his projection that real home values would decline by 47 percent by the year 2007.

"The 47 percent figure isn't nearly as dire as most people think... it occurs over 20 years. It's also a risky projection because we have no historical precedent."

If that was so, I asked the young Harvard economics professor, was he certain of his conclusion.

"... I feel more confident about the direction than the magnitude," he said, adding that his co-worker, David Weil, felt the same way.

"Current inflation is running about 5 percent," Professor Mankiw said, "so if real prices fall by 2 percent a year, nominal prices will still be rising 3 percent a year. That's a doubling in value in about 23 years. It (housing) won't be as great an investment as it has been... but this isn't a dire projection. Most people are better off when basic necessities are cheaper."

That can be debated.

With 90 percent of the population having about 80 percent of its net worth tied up in one asset — their home — what Mankiw and Weil predicted is a major reduction in wealth accumulating capacity for most Americans. If housing is relatively less expensive and buying it takes a smaller portion of income than it does now, much of that income will have to be saved and invested just to recoup the lost wealth from higher appreciation?

We are not talking about a minor effect here. If you assume that the average homeowner buys a house that is worth about two years of income and its rate of appreciation declines by 2 percent (the actual shift is larger), then he would need to increase his saving from income by about 4 percent to compensate for the lower appreciation of housing. That's about DOUBLE the average savings rate in recent years.

The foundation for the Mankiw/Weil paper is an examination of demography and housing prices. Specifically, they found that the number of people in the 20- to 30-age range was the single most powerful determinant of housing prices, not family size, interest rates, or any of the factors often discussed.

If the maturing of the baby boom led to rising housing prices, they reason, the coming baby bust will lead to falling housing prices. Since the number of people in that age range can be accurately predicted it is also possible to predict housing prices.

The baby bust we are now entering translates into a long period of declining demand for housing. Real prices are expected to decline at 2 percent a year.

Can it, I asked, be offset by increased immigration?

"The shift in births is over 1 million a year." Professor Mankiw said. "So you need to do that in immigration to compensate. Immigration has never been that high."

What about regional shifts?

Here Professor Mankiw was less certain. "Our figures are national. I wouldn't be surprised if regional differences dominated future discussions."

Scott Burns' column, syndicated by King Features, is a new feature of the Reporter-Telegram business pages and appears each Thursday and Sunday.

Kemper Corp. restructuring brokerages

N.Y. Times News Service

CHICAGO — The Kemper Corp. announced Wednesday that a restructuring of its troubled regional brokerage operations would result in a $126.5 million charge against second-quarter earnings.

The company plans to reduce the number of its brokerage firm employees by more than 600, or about 12 percent of its work force of 5,200, by the end of the year.

The move signals Kemper management's mounting frustration over the performance of its network of regional brokerages, which were acquired in the early 1980s.

Kemper's chairman, Joseph E. Luecke, called the operations "our biggest sore spot" at the annual meeting earlier this month.

In a year when several regional brokerages, including Legg Mason, A.G. Edwards and Raymond James Financial, bounced back from the 1987 crash and posted record profits, Kemper's network of medium-sized firms has continued to lose money.

Kemper's brokerage group lost $7.2 million in 1989 when trading losses in the fourth quarter wiped out three quarters of gains.

Kemper's securities group, which includes Blunt Ellis & Loewi Inc. in Milwaukee and Prescott, Ball & Turben Inc. in Cleveland, lost $4.2 million in the quarter ended March 31. Kemper also owns brokerages in Denver, Houston and Los Angeles.

The restructuring is intended to make its brokerages profitable by cutting expenses and controlling risk through the consolidation of administrative activities in Chicago.

"First and foremost, we will be able to control our risk a little more thoroughly than we have done before," said James R. Boris, chairman of Kemper Securities Group Holding Inc., the unit formed in January to run the regional brokerages.

Boris said the fourth-quarter loss was largely attributable to trading losses by Prescott, Ball's arbitrage unit in New York.

He said trading in takeover stocks would be done in Chicago in the future.

Kemper entered the regional brokerage business in part to have a sales force to sell the financial giant's mutual funds and other financial products.

The securities firms accounted for 17 percent of Kemper's mutual fund sales in 1989, but have not been consistently profitable.

Space anchors Houston economy

By John A. Bolt

HOUSTON (AP) — The Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center has poured billions of dollars into the Houston area since 1962 but its true economic value has only recently been recognized, and now the center is viewed as a key to prosperity.

Stripped of 225,000 jobs when the energy industry collapsed, the nation's fourth biggest metropolitan area suddenly found itself without an economic anchor and sought another. What it found in part was aerospace, most of it connected somehow to the space center 25 miles southeast of town.

"We frankly have never really focused on it until five or six years ago," said John Brock, president of economic development for the Greater Houston Partnership.

The space center has pumped almost $40 billion directly into Houston, and even with a reduced space program, the center spends about $3.7 million each working day.

"The impact might be 10 — maybe even 20-fold — on the general economy in Houston," Brock said.

Economist Robert Hodgin of the University of Houston-Clear Lake, said the space center, while an important contributor to the region's economy, provided only a piece of the recovery.

"What it did do, however, was to serve as ray of optimism, served as a magnet for other endeavors and served as a PR (public relations) tool for city leaders," Hodgin said.

AP Laserphoto

The Lyndon B. Jonnson Space Center has poured billions of dollars into the Houston area economy, but its true value has only recently been recognized.

THE NATIONAL Aeronautics and Space Administration officially opened the facility on 1,620 acres of donated land in 1963 as the Manned Spacecraft Center, directing the Gemini, Apollo, Skylab, space shuttle and other programs. It was renamed in 1973 to honor Johnson, who as vice president had a lot to do with its location in Houston.

The space center has served as both an employer of thousands: there are 3,250 federal employees on the payroll, plus another 9,650 contractor personnel work at the center or support its operations. The center also spent $16.1 million last fiscal year on public utilities.

Besides the basic operations, however, Brock said the center has been a draw to other aerospace companies such as Grumman Corp. and McDonnell-Douglas Corp., both of which have major aerospace operations nearby.

Grumman came to Houston in the early 1970s to build the lunar module for the Apollo program, but in 1986 brought in its civil space operations because "Houston was still in the woes of the oil and real estate slump, so that made it very, very favorable for business coming in," said Grumman spokeswoman Miriam Reed.

Plus, "there's a terrific local labor force. Because of NASA and the universities, there are lots of high-tech people there in terms of engineering and technical personnel."

THE SLUMP, NASA and labor benefits helped Houston beat out metropolitan Washington, southern California and Colorado for the facility, Ms. Reed said.

Grumman had hoped to land the main contract for the Freedom space station, but stayed in Houston when it failed, and now is a subcontractor on the project, working on the crew quarters and a "space tug."

McDonnell-Douglas also set up shop in Houston a few years to supply parts for the Freedom space station.

Brock said Houston is hoping to land an aircraft maintenance base being planned by Continental Airlines Inc.

Houston also is home to Space Services Inc., which earlier this month sent its second commercially launched rocket into space and plans to launch 12 more this year. SSI is headed by Donald K. "Deke" Slayton, one of the original seven Mercury astronauts.

"The Fortune 500 20 years from now is going to have a number of companies that do business in space," said Art Dula, a self-described "space lawyer" who has helped incorporate several space-related businesses including SSI.

"Houston, since it has a very strong energy industry — which is high-tech and R&D (research and development) oriented — has the kind of technical expertise" to be home to those companies, some of which have yet to be founded, he said.

WHILE THE oil collapse pitched many workers out of a job, Brock and Dula said their skills — from sheet metal working to computer programming — easily can be used in the aerospace industry.

"And as a result, we are trying to take the Johnson Space Center and the activities based there and let that whole industry blossom," he said.

NASA pitched in three years ago as it helped establish a program called Partners In Space to aid companies in learning how to do business with the space agency and benefit from its presence.

"Partners ... believe that the center must be integrated into the business, educational, research and technology goal of the state," states a Partners publication. "As such, Partners work in their respective communities to ensure that America's space program, and especially the portion that could come to Texas, enjoys broad support."

Houston's plans could be undermined, however, by problems with Texas's educational system.

At a recent symposium sponsored by Partners in Space, every speaker worried about those shortcomings.

"Space travel and technology ... is a highly sophisticated business," said Thomas M. Stauffer, president of the University of Houston-Clear Lake. "It requires, indeed demands, a significant fraction of the nation's technical manpower in order for the space shuttle to fulfill its mission.

"WITH THE upcoming space station project, moon and Mars missions, that fraction will grow," he said. "The perfect U.S. space program is dependent upon a steady supply of highly educated individuals."

But Stauffer and others said the Texas schools are not producing enough of those individuals. Arguments over court-ordered education funding show "education leadership does not appear to be high on the agenda in Austin," the state capital, he said.

While recruiters have focused on aerospace, Daniel Nebrig, an associate director of the center, says future space explorations mean more than just a one-industry impact.

Projects such as the space shuttle and the space station require specialized knowledge best found at NASA, Nebrig said.

But to figure out how to live on the Moon, or mine Mars, Nebrig said, "We need new technology. ... We need people who are used to making concrete, mining, agriculture."

"Houston plays into that hand very well," Brock said. "Somewhere we will be involved with, if not space exploration, then space engineering as it continues to advance."

MEETINGS

SPE computer users group meets Wednesday

The Computer Users Group of the Society of Petroleum Engineers will meet Wednesday at Ranchland Hills Country Club beginning at 11:20 a.m.

Guest speaker will be Reid Stringer of PC Works, who will discuss the hardware components and other considerations that go into building or mail-ordering a personal computer.

Cost of the luncheon is $10, which includes the buffet lucnh, and reservations should be made by Monday by calling 686-7329.

Freed Eastern Europe suffers energy predicaments

By Matthew L. Wald
with Marlise Simons
N.Y. Times News Service

For the nations of Eastern Europe, freedom may be far dirtier than they expected.

The nations' desire to curb their dependence on Soviet oil and gas, a legacy of the region's satellite status, is colliding with another goal — cleaning up the environment by burning less of its native dirty brown coal.

Eastern Europe's energy predicament has become increasingly obvious in recent weeks, officials in the region and Western analysts say.

Moscow has told its former satellites that it wants to be paid for oil and gas in hard currency, rather than bartered goods, turning what had been an energy subsidy into a burden.

Then last month, the Soviets unleashed their "oil weapon" in response to independence moves in the republic of Lithuania.

The Russian strategy in Lithuania — sending out the valve turners rather than the tanks — has served as a chilling reminder to the countries of Eastern Europe that they are also extremely dependent on the Soviet Union, which supplies 80 percent of the region's energy imports.

Even though the dependence is to some degree mutual, since the Soviets need a market for their exports, Moscow already sells large amounts of oil and gas to the West for hard currency and could sell much more, experts say.

Moscow's tough new approach to energy exports to Eastern Europe could also seriously hamper the region's efforts to clean up pollution.

Since the Eastern European nations are short of hard currency, the new Soviet requirement that oil be paid for with cash may give the countries of the region no choice but to become even more dependent on brown coal, their main domestic fuel.

Even the uranium for nuclear reactors in Eastern Europe comes from the Soviet Union.

Moreover, officials in Eastern Europe say Moscow has told them it plans to raise fuel prices sharply in January and charge a portion of the cost in hard currencies, like U.S. dollars or West German marks, which can be readily exchanged on international markets.

Soviet cutbacks in oil deliveries may drain Eastern Europe of its reserves of hard currencies by forcing the nations to buy OPEC oil on the open market, as some have already done.

In addition, it may deprive them of an indirect source of hard-currency revenue.

Christina House, an independent oil consultant, says some Eastern European countries have resold Soviet oil at market prices to Western countries, a practice that has annoyed Moscow.

The energy changes in the East are important to the West, because for years the availability of oil — and hence its price — has been heavily affected by huge Soviet exports.

The Soviet Union is the world's largest oil producer, although its production is sharply dropping, partly because of continuing unrest in Baku, a petroleum center.

Ms. House said that if the trend set in the first quarter of 1990 continues, the decline by the end of the year will be 500,000 barrels a day, to less than 12 million barrels a day.

Suddenly, the new economic ministers of Eastern Europe are confronting a host of problems their communist predecessors never had to face.

They have to grapple not only with the uncertainties of dealing in the world energy market, but also with possibly seeking new buyers for a wide range of goods that had long been swapped with the Soviet Union for oil.

"We knew this was coming, but we needed more time," a Czech official said, noting that much industry in Czechoslovakia and other nations was geared to supplying the Soviet Union with goods in exchange for oil, rather than selling products on the world market.

"We are in the middle of very complicated negotiations with Moscow," said Laszlo Lang, deputy director of the Hungarian Institute for International Relations.

But, he said, Hungary's dependence on the Soviet market for industrial exports was perhaps an even greater problem than the country's dependence on Soviet energy.

In fact, the region's total energy needs are not large by the standards of Western industrial countries.

Individually, the Eastern European countries are energy midgets, experts say, so even large-percentage changes in production and consumption will have a small global effect.

Combined, the former satellites use only about as much oil and gas as does West Germany, and about one-seventh as much as the United States.

British businessman trying to break negative stereotype

By Cotten Timberlake

LONDON (AP) — Images of arrogant, conniving, miserly and piggish businessmen have been ingrained in Britain's class-conscious culture since the days of Dickens.

Now a prominent member of this maligned group is stepping forward to do something about it.

The former chairman of Imperial Chemical Industries PLC, one of the largest British manufacturers, has used that image in a television series to give Britons "a different perspective on what businessmen actually do."

"I think we have an anti-industrial bias in this country and have had for many years," Harvey-Jones said.

"People think that business is just about money and figures and that management is about administration and bureaucracy. I actually think that business is about the totality of life and finally about people."

Harvey-Jones, 66, is widely admired for turning Imperial Chemical into a multinational giant with products that range from artificial carpet fiber to household paints.

Contrary to the arrogance and aloofness commonly ascribed to many British business types, he goes for loud, expensive ties, drives a donkey-pulled carriage around his 13th century manor house and boasts a flair for cooking curry.

Perhaps another reason Harvey-Jones defies the British executive image is his political leanings. He's not enamored with Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who has alienated many working people with her strident free enterprise strategies that have reshaped Britain's economy this past decade.

"I believe that our society has become more divisive in the past 10 years rather than less," Harvey-Jones said.

Thatcher doesn't much care for Harvey-Jones, either. The British press says he's her least-favorite industrialist.

But the Independent newspaper has called him the "Field Marshal Montgomery of Manufacturing," referring to Britain's World War II hero, Viscount Montgomery. "He runs on the same mixture of surface flamboyance and underlying caution," the newspaper said.

Harvey-Jones' latest effort to win Britons over to the industrialists' side was a six-part BBC-TV series called "Troubleshooter." In it, he called on businesses ranging from a pottery to a carmaker, helping solve problems.

Although the documentary-style program looked like a course on basic management, it was a surprise hit, attracting between 2 million and 3 million viewers each week.

AP Laserphoto

"I hoped in the series that we would be able to give a different perspective on what businessmen actually do, the sort of problems they are trying to deal with and the reasons why management is, I think, a very worthwhile career and a very important career," Harvey-Jones said.

"A well-organized, well-functioning, efficient factory gives me the same pleasure, albeit in a different way, as when I go into a very nicely tended garden," he said.

Harvey-Jones is the only child of an Army captain who later served as a hired prime minister to under-age maharajahs in India. He led a pampered childhood, and once had his own ceremonial elephant.

He was wrenched away at age 6 and sent to the Tormore boarding school in Kent, England, attended the Royal Naval College at Dartmouth when he was 13, and served in the Navy during World War II. He spent a dozen years in Navy intelligence doing secret work that won him the Order of the British Empire.

At age 32, he joined Imperial Chemical Industries as trainee, rose through management for nearly four decades and became chairman in 1982.

The company had just reported its first quarterly loss. Harvey-Jones funneled money into the company's growth areas and cut back on the poorly performing plastics, fiber and petrochemicals business.

Imperial Chemical turned profitable again within two years. The reversal became part of the reason Harvey-Jones was awarded with knighthood in 1985.

He retired from Imperial Chemical in 1987, and has taken on about 32 part-time paid and unpaid jobs since, ranging from charity events to his BBC series.

Harvey-Jones is a director of several major British companies, as well as the Economist magazine, and is Chancellor of Bradford University.

"I think the day when you stop doing anything and you just lie back in your deck chair, you're ready for your box," Harvey-Jones said during a recent interview at the Mayfair, a posh London hotel favored by rock stars.

His accessibility is unusual in a country where most executives are tight-lipped and publicity shy.

"I'm probably better-known than most," Harvey-Jones said, but "if the best you can do is to have a sort of old-age pensioner as a business hero, I think we're in trouble."

Harvey-Jones blames Britain's anti-business attitudes partly on what he calls the bias of the national education system, which exalts professions such as medicine and dramatic arts but seems to steer students clear of business careers. Few of Britain's managers are trained, he said.

"There is still a very considerable degree of snobbery in this country. People are judged by their birth and are judged by the type of career they follow," he said. "Certainly, business success in this country doesn't open doors for you."

Group protests car rental insurance

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Rental car agencies are using fright tactics and coercion to persuade unwary customers to buy exorbitantly expensive insurance, a national consumer group charged Wednesday.

"It's a classic consumer rip-off," said Lucinda Sikes, staff attorney for the U.S. Public Interest Research Group.

In a survey of 10 major rental car agencies, U.S. PIRG found that insurance policies — known as collision damage waivers — can increase daily rental fees up to 48 percent, yet often offer minimal coverage.

The consumer group found that none of the rental car companies included the collision damage waiver (CDW) cost when quoting the rental fees, but encouraged drivers to buy coverage when they went to rent the car.

"That means when cost-conscious vacationers call around about the price on a car, they're being misled," Sikes said. She said the best way to end the abuse was to ban CDWs.

The PIRG study also found that many rental car agents failed to mention that many personal automobile insurance policies and some credit cards offer the same or better coverage. About 60 percent of personal car insurance policies cover liabilities for rental cars, Sikes said. All American Express cards provide rental car insurance and — depending on the issuing bank agreement — many Visa and MasterCards offer similar coverage.

The survey found that rental car firms typically offer weekend rates of about $25 to $40 per day, but that collision damage waivers can increase the daily rate by about $7 to $13. The survey did not assess the 10 companies individually.

Some car rental companies aggressively market CDW policies by warning customers — either orally or with written signs — that they may be liable for the entire value of the rental car, regardless of whether they were at fault in an accident.

Yet Sikes said that in many cases CDWs do not provide insurance coverage if a person not authorized under the rental agreement is driving or if the driver has had even one drink.

Harried vacationers — frustrated by long lines at the car rental agency, luggage piled around their feet and children screaming for attention — are in no position to read the fine print explaining CDW coverage, or understand it even if they bother to read the policy, Sikes said.

Musical Magic

Williams bringing show to Midland

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

His quarter century career includes 22 albums — five certified Gold by the Recording Industry Association of America — and more than 40 singles — 36 reaching Top 10 or higher on national charts.

Born and raised a Texan, singer and songwriter Don Williams paints moods with words. Through the decades he's been traveling this country and foreign shores, he's had a constant factor in his life, his wife, who, along with life, provides the inspiration for the songs he writes.

"I know I get a lot of what I feel from just people around me because, goodness knows, there's enough at any point in time if you want to avail yourself to it," Williams says. "There's enough stories or real life situations going on around you that you can certainly feel from, but my wife is just a great, great part of it all. No doubt about it." He laughs and adds, "Especially the ones that are a little more positive."

Briefly quiet, he adds, "In writing songs and choosing songs, I don't like to write or choose songs with specific situations in mind, but she definitely is, without a doubt, my biggest inspiration."

The two have been married for 30 years.

"It doesn't seem possible, really. And, we're still working on it," he says, his deep voice melodic on the telephone.

Relationships are of paramount concern for Williams, who will be performing on the same bill with Reba McEntire and Garth Brooks Friday at Chaparral Center. Tickets may be purchased at Chaparral Center or Endless Horizons.

"I don't think there's anything in the world that's more important than how we are to each other and how we deal with that," Williams says.

"I feel like we're really missing the boat with relationships. I don't think that we go into a lot of relationships with the right attitude about what we're supposed to be to each other. I guess really I talk more about that than anything. I hope that in what I say (in my songs) people think about what they're doing and how they're feeling. I hope I make somebody feel something and in feeling it maybe something will be a little clearer."

"That's kind of different for me. I just never have really teamed up with anybody quite like we're doing this. So far, it seems like it's going along pretty good. I've really been pleasantly surprised that as many people are as excited about Reba and me being on the same show. So, that's really good."

"I usually wish that whatever I had to say was a little more intelligent and interesting," he says. He laughs. "I never like to read what I've said because it always seems so boring."

Certainly, his plentiful fans would disagree. This American has earned Silver, Gold and Platinum records in Canada, England, Holland and West Germany. Readers of the United Kingdom's Country Music People voted him the "Artist of the Decade." Williams attributes the popularity of his music in diverse cultures to universal human qualities.

"I've talked with people from Soviet Bloc countries, Australians, Swiss — there's no difference. We all have the same feelings, the same desires and questions."

His latest album, "One Good Well," is the first in many years to contain his songs. The album has two — "Cryin' Eyes" and "We're All The Way." Both address the importance of communication in a relationship.

Don's love of music dates back to childhood.

"I can't honestly remember when I didn't listen to a song and try to figure out what the person was trying to say to me. I've been doing that and singing people's songs as long as I can remember. The first song I wrote I was in high school and had a real frustrating little romance so I wrote a song about that. But that's about it. I've just kind of being doing it all my life, really."

In addition to music, Williams has acted in one movie, "W.W. and the Dixie Dance Kings" with Bert Reynolds.

"That was really challenging," he says. Williams is open to making other films but "so far the things that have been offered to me were just not the kinds of things that I want to do. I haven't done anything else so far, but you never know."

He is particular about what kinds of roles he plays.

"I don't feel like I could go in and just do all manner of things just under the guise of, 'Well, I was just acting.' I would have to feel as responsible to that as I do to my music. I don't feel like you can explain some things away."

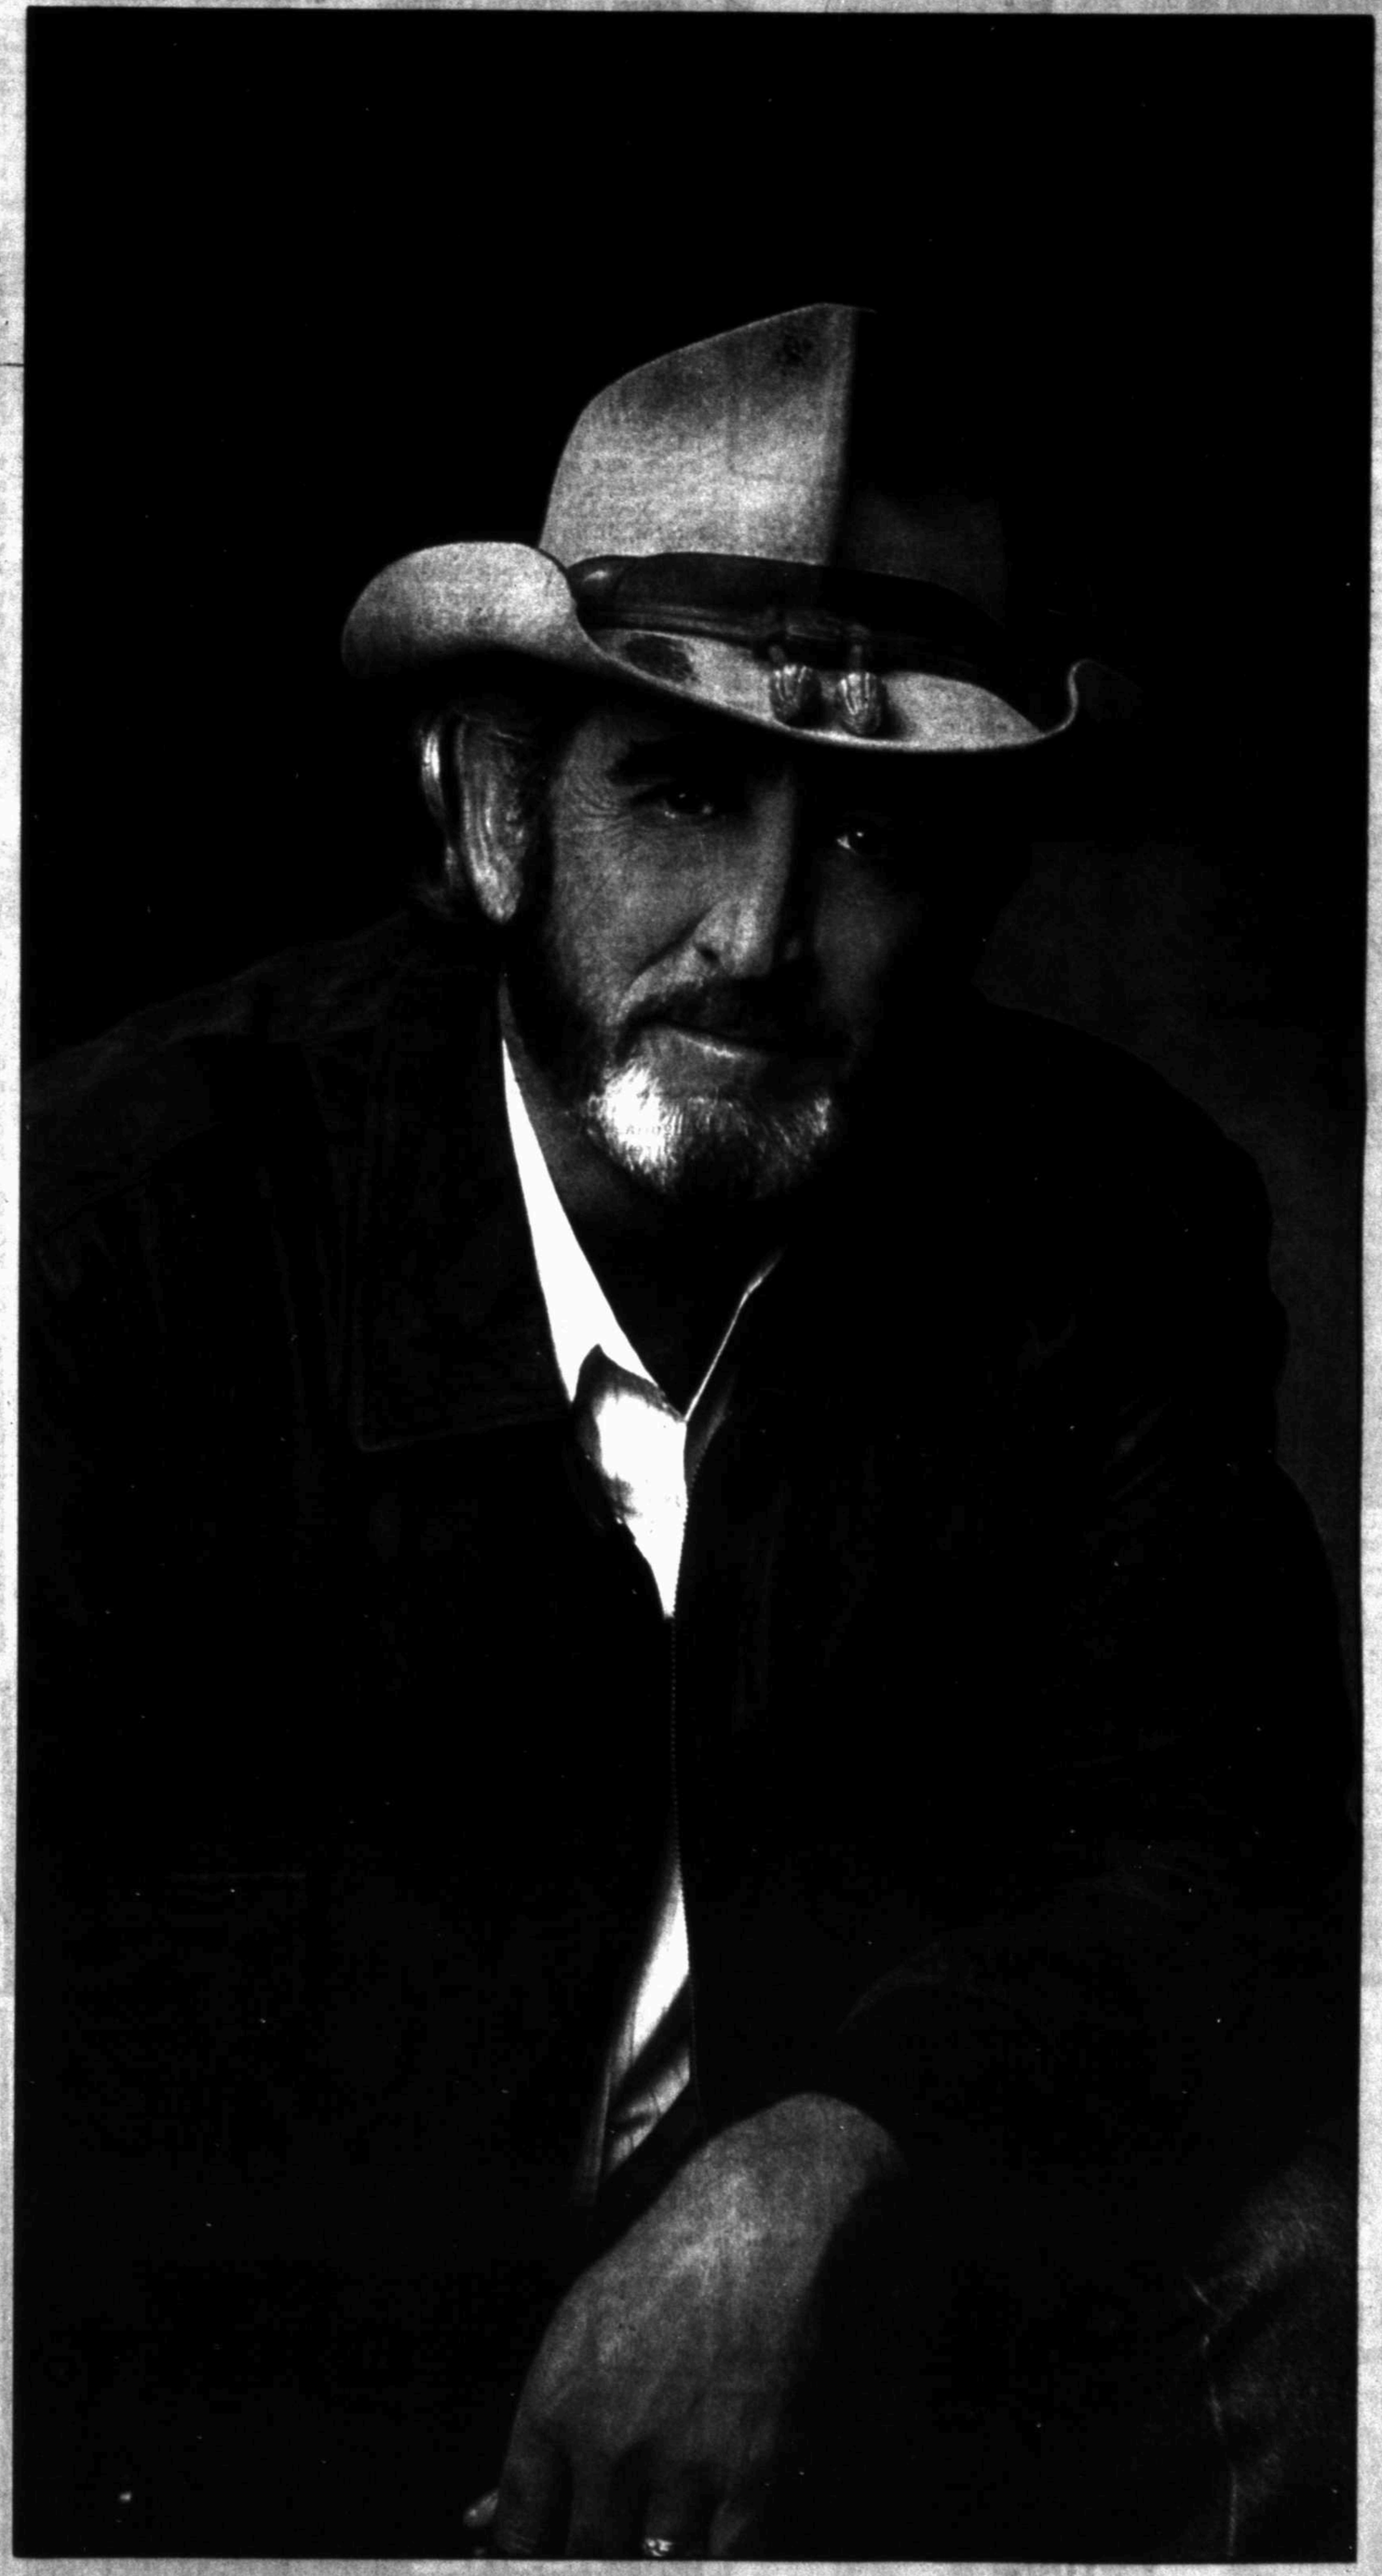
Williams, who is finishing his next album between engagements, describes how he views the different aspects of the music business — writing, recording and performing live.

"Writing is probably at the top of the heap as far as the creative process. And working in the studio would stand almost right beside it because that's where whatever degree of creative ability that you're blessed with at that time in your life, that's where it kind of surfaces.

"And doing the road work, the live shows, is in a lot of ways just an echo of what you did in the studio. So, there's times that that is not as fulfilling plus the fact the traveling and all the time spent for just those few minutes on stage gets a little tough sometimes.

"But when you hit a live performance where everything kind of just jells and you can really feel that electricity. Once in a while you hit a situation like that that is so special it will carry you for quite a while.

"The way I usually say it — 'It's playing us; we're not playing it anymore.' Something just takes over, and there's no way you can mess up. It's just magic."



Texas troubadour

Texas singer and songwriter Don Williams will appear with Reba McEntire and Garth Brooks in a show Friday at Midland College's Chaparral Center.

'Back to the Future III' opens summer season

By John Horn
AP Entertainment Writer

HOLLYWOOD — "Back to the Future Part III" opened the summer movie season in a robust way, grossing $23.7 million to claim first place at the box office over the holiday weekend, according to figures released Tuesday.

Although Universal Pictures placed the debut of the latest time-travel sequel among the Top 10 four-day weekends of all time, "Back to the Future Part III" earned $20 million less than "Back to the Future Part II" did last year over the five-day Thanksgiving weekend.

"It won't be the biggest opening weekend this summer, but we're very happy," said Tom Pollock, chairman of MCA's motion picture group, makers of the "Back to the Future" trilogy.

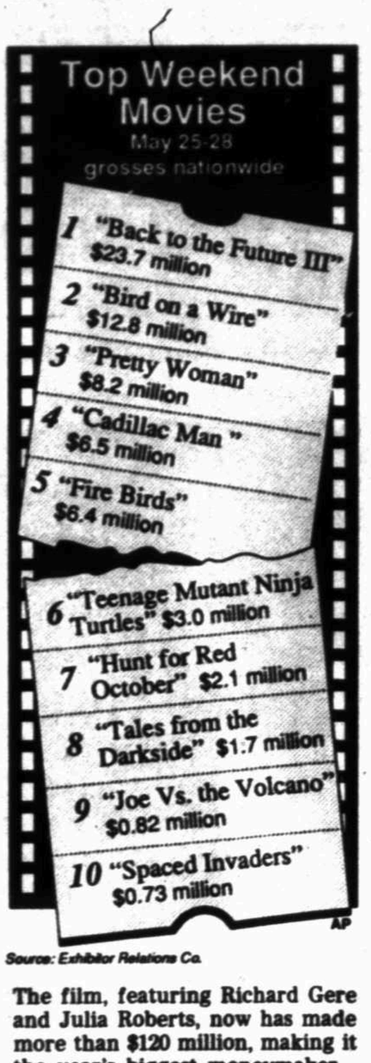
"Movies are not judged on opening weekends. They have to be judged on how long they play and how much money they earn in relation to their cost."

Starring Michael J. Fox as Marty McFly, the movie has been greeted with better reviews than its immediate predecessor, which even Universal admits was not a very good film.

"Back to the Future Part III" did not open as well as the Memorial Day films from the last three years. In 1989, "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" made $37 million; in 1988, "'Crocodile' Dundee II" grossed $24.5 million; and in 1987 "Beverly Hills Cop" took in $33 million.

According to figures compiled by Exhibitor Relations Co., "Back to the Future Part III" easily outdistanced second-place finisher "Bird on a Wire," with Goldie Hawn and Mel Gibson. The latter film, also a Universal release, grossed $12.8 million.

In third place was the prostitution comedy "Pretty Woman" with ticket sales of $8.2 million.



Source: Exhibitor Relations Co.

The film, featuring Richard Gere and Julia Roberts, now has made more than $120 million, making it the year's biggest moneymaker.

"Cadillac Man," which looks like an Edsel from Robin Williams, landed in fourth with sagging revenues of $6.5 million. With an anemic opening weekend of $6.4 million for fifth place, "Fire Birds" looks like the summer's first clear flop.

"Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" was sixth with $3 million, and "The Hunt for Red October" was seventh with a turnstile take of $2.1 million.

In eighth was "Tales From the Darkside" on $1.6 million, followed by "Joe Versus the Volcano" in ninth with $821,125.

The Top 10 was rounded out by "Spaced Invaders" on a gross of $734,724.

Here are the top movie ticket sales for Friday through Monday as tallied by Exhibitor Relations, with distributor, weekend gross, number of theater screens, average per screen, total gross and number of weeks in release.

Figures are based on a combination of actual box-office receipts and studio projections where actual figures are not immediately available.

1. "Back to the Future Part III," Universal, $23.7 million, 2,019 screens, $11,740 per screen, $23.7 million, one week.

2. "Bird on a Wire," Universal, $12.8 million, 1,949 screens, $6,565 per screen, $33.4 million, two weeks.

3. "Pretty Woman," Disney, $8.2 million, 1,803 screens, $4,542 per screen, $120.2 million, 10 weeks.

4. "Cadillac Man," Orion, $6.5 million, 1,844 screens, $3,509 per screen, $15.3 million, two weeks.

5. "Fire Birds," Disney, $6.4 million, 2,006 screens, $3,170 per screen, $6.4 million, one week.

6. "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles," New Line, $3 million, 1,970 screens, $1,516 per screen, $118.1 million, nine weeks.

7. "The Hunt for Red October," Paramount, $2.1 million, 1,061 screens, $2,006 per screen, $110.8 million, 13 weeks.

8. "Tales From the Darkside," Paramount, $1.6 million, 1,025 screens, $1,598 per screen, $14.5 million, four weeks.

9. "Joe Versus the Volcano," Warner Bros., $821,125, 746 screens, $1,101 per screen, $37.6 million, 12 weeks.

10. "Spaced Invaders," Disney, $734,724, 949 screens, $774 per screen, $13.7 million, five weeks.

By David Crosson
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A new art exhibit provides the American public a rare opportunity to see how the Japanese viewed the first encounters of the two nations in the 1850s, when the United States prodded Japan out of 200 years of isolation,

The show, entitled "Yokohama: Prints from Nineteenth Century Japan," is now on display here at the Smithsonian Institution's Arthur M. Sackler Gallery of Asian Art. When it leaves Washington Sept. 9, it will go to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Underwritten by Japan's Yamanouchi Pharmaceutical Company, the exhibit is due to open at San Francisco's Asian Art Museum on Oct. 10 and continue through Dec. 9. It will be on display at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art from Jan. 10 through March 10, 1991.

When the show opened here Memorial Day weekend, it drew about twice the museum's normal number of weekend visitors, according to Sackler spokeswoman Susan Bliss.

The 85 color woodblock prints that make up the exhibit were collected over 40 years in a dozen countries by retired Ambassador William Leonhart and his wife Florence. Leonhart served in a variety of diplomatic posts in Japan in the 1950s and 1960s.

The prints reflect Japan's fascination with Americans and things occidental. Ironically, many of them depict Americans and Europeans in Japan with Asian features.

With Japan ripe for change after deliberately keeping the world at arm's length since 1639, the arrival of Americans spurred progressive forces in Japan that were pushing for an end to the isolation and for development of foreign trade.

The first formal arrival of Americans in Japan was on July 8, 1853, when a squadron of naval vessels under the command of Commodore Matthew C. Perry dropped anchor in Tokyo Bay.

Perry's mission was clear. With a burgeoning China trade and the acquisition of California from Mexico five years earlier, U.S. policymakers had concluded that commerce with Japan was essential for America to fulfill its mercantile ambitions in the Pacific.

The Americans found that in trying to open trade with Japan the steam-powered vessels in Perry's squadron were crucial. They reflected advanced American technology and helped convince Japan's ruling Tokugawa shogunate that broader commercial ties with the outside world were necessary.

Japan agreed to limited landing rights for U.S. vessels in 1854. Soon afterward, it negotiated similar accords with Great Britain, France, Russia and the Netherlands.

When the shogunate designated Yokohama as one of the few places where foreign traders could establish land-based facilities, Japan's printmakers flocked there to detail the hubbub.

The Leonhart prints — which are dramatic, whimsical and vivid — detail the comings and goings of the foreigners' ships and the lives of their crews and passengers, including their boisterous carousing in Miyozaki-cho, the entertainment district set in the middle of rice paddies on Yokohama's outskirts.

According to the retired ambassador, the genial spirit of the prints has been a diplomatic icebreaker. During sensitive talks with the Japanese during the 1950s and '60s, Leonhart said, the presence of the prints in a negotiating room provided a "moderating perspective."

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

'Wally's Cafe' coming to stage

The comedy "Wally's Cafe" opens Friday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The story of Wally, his wife and a star-struck waitress takes place in a small hamburger-shaped diner so far off the beaten path that not even coyotes can find it. All three characters are searching for the secret to success and find their answers in some funny ways.

Wally is played by newcomer Gary Long. Suzan Brame is his wife and Kim Young portrays the young woman who hopes to become a movie star. Brian Lieske is directing the show and Carolyn Sutton is stage manager.

This is Midland Community Theatre's fourth membership show of the 1990 season. Tickets are available individually or by membership. There will be a REACH OUT! performance Sunday, June 10, at 2:30 p.m. Through corporate sponsors El Paso and Meridian, REACH OUT! provides free tickets for people who are handicapped or disadvantaged and the person who transports them to the theater.

For reservations or information call Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

Poetry contest open

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. — Deadline for entering the American Poetry Association's contest is June 30.

The contest is open to everyone. The entry is free. The grand prize is $1,000 and first prize is $500. In all, there are 152 prizes worth $11,000.

"This contest is dedicated to discovering new and unknown poets," said Robert Nelson, publisher for the association. "You do not have to be a professional poet to win."

Poets may send one original poem, no more than 20 lines, name and address on the top fo the page, to American Poetry Association, Dept. CO-53, 250-A Potrero St., P.O. Box 1803, Santa Cruz, Calif., 95061.

Poems postmarked by June 30 are eligible to win. A new contest begins July 1.

Poems are judged on originality, sincerity and feeling. Each poem is considered for publication in the American Poetry Anthology, a collection of contemporary verse.

Submissions sought

Poems are now being accepted for entry in Sparrowgrass Poetry Forum's new "Awards of Poetic Excellence" poetry contest. Contest closes July 31.

Cash prizes totaling $1,000 will be awarded, including a $500 grand prize. The contest if free to enter.

Poets may enter one poem only, 20 lines of less, on any subject, in any style. Poets are encouraged to send their work as soon as possible since poems entered in the contest also will be considered for publication in the Spring 1991 edition of "Poetic Voices of America," a hardcover anthology. No fee or purchase is required to enter or win the contest. To ensure publication of non-winning entries, however, anthology purchase is required.

Prize winners will be notified by Sept. 30.

Poems are to be sent to Sparrowgrass Poetry Forum, Inc., Dept. G, 203 Diamond St., Sisterville, W. Va., 26175.

Music awards given

At a recent meeting of the Midland Music Teachers Association, two piano students were presented with the Wallace Wimberly Scholarship award.

Those students are John Sikes Johnson, student of Pamela Bristol, and Christine Watson, student of Joy Finley. This award is given to students planning to major in music or its related fields of pedagogy, church music, composition, music education, music literature and theory, with a keyboard instrument as the applied music instrument.

Before being accepted, they must pass a performance test given by the guild judge. Both Johnson and Miss Watson, a Midland College piano major, have been active in all MMTA activities.

Johnson will attend the University of Miami in the fall. He is majoring in music technology.

Theater camp offered

LAS CRUCES, N.M. — High school students may study with theater professionals this summer at the American Southwest Theatre Company's fifth annual High School Theatre Camp June 24 through July 1.

Students in grades 9 through 12 will experience all aspects of theater with a staff of professionals including award winning playwright and screenplay writer, Mark Medoff.

The camp director is Ruth Cantrell, New Mexico State University theater arts faculty member.

Cost for the week is $300. If room and board are included on campus, the cost is $375. A $50 deposit is required with the application. Cancellation fee is $25.

For more information or to obtain an application call 1-800-525-ASTC.

Show to end June 28

The work of Danny Holeva and Jean Cappadonna Nichols is on display at Gallery 1114 through June 28.

Holeva, an art instructor at Odessa College, is showing new mixed media pieces.

Ms. Nichols, who is exhibiting drawings and sculpture in mixed media, won the grand prize in The State of Texas Drawing and exhibited in Salon Printemps, both at B.R.A.G. in Odessa.

In addition, the gallery has several prints by Dianne Kuzans of New York. The prints feature the Chaparral cars designed by Jim Hall.

Gallery 1114 is a co-operative center for contemporary art. Located at 1114 N. Big Spring st., the gallery is open Wednesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 1 to 5 p.m.

Museum sets Fun Run

ODESSA — The Art Institute for the Permian Basin is sponsoring a 5-K Fun Run and a One Mile Children's Run June 16 on the campus of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Registration begins at 7:30 a.m., rain or sun. T-shirts are guaranteed to the first 100 entrants. All children will receive ribbons.

Entry fees are $10 for those 13 and younger, $11 for adults who register Monday through June 15, $13 for adults who register the day of the race, $30 for a family entry Monday through June 15 and $35 for a family entry the day of the race. For family entries, T-shirts are limited to two.

Mummers opens soon

Villains, heroes and heroines will soon come to life on stage at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave., when the annual Summer Mummers opens June 29.

"Mayhem at the Movieola" or "I Have a Nasty Film All Over My Body" will be produced by Doug Heck and directed by Harry Harrison. The script was written by Mark Eells.

Tickets are $8.00, $6.50 and $4 and may be reserved by calling 682-4111. The production closes Sept. 1.

Keltons to sign books

Authors Steve and Elmer Kelton will participate in an autograph party from 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday at Pages and Prints, Plaza Shopping Center.

Copies of Steve Kelton's "Renderbrook: A Century Under the Spade Brand," with a foreward by his father, Elmer, will be available for sale and to be autographed.

The book signing is being held in honor of Father's Day, June 17. For more information call Pages and Prints.

LaBelle hosts brunch

NEW YORK (AP) — Pop star Patti LaBelle will lead a celebrity-filled brunch to benefit the Black Health Research Foundation.

Other hosts of the brunch, to be held June 9 at B. Smith's, include actress-singer Melba Moore, Clarice Taylor of "The Cosby Show" and Harry Carson of the New York Giants.

Networks reveal fall 'game plans'

N.Y. Times News Service

When CBS and Fox Broadcasting announced their fall schedules this week, the past and future seemed to bump into each other.

CBS's lineup, with four new sitcoms and five new dramas, was conservative. Fox not only added two nights of programming to its three-night schedule, but also scrapped five lukewarm shows and added nine new series.

Fox is coming off a breakthrough season in which the "fourth network" placed two series — "Married ... With Children" and "The Simpsons" — in the Nielsen Top 20 for the first time. Fox didn't get where it is by playing it safe, and the fall schedule indicates no change in tactics.

Perhaps the biggest gamble Fox is taking is moving the hugely successful "Simpsons" from Sunday to Thursday night, where it will go head to head with NBC's longstanding hit "The Cosby Show." Does surly Homer Simpson and his bug-eyed family have a prayer against the sweet-natured Huxtables? Fox executives think so, and they may be right.

"Cosby's" ratings slipped last season, pushing the sitcom behind "Roseanne" for the first time. After six seasons with "Cosby," viewers may be ready to switch. If the gamble pays off, Fox will have a foothold on Thursday nights.

A tactic that could backfire down the road, however, was Fox's decision to drop the ax on last season's favorably reviewed but low-rated "Alien Nation" and "The Outsiders." Also dropped were "21 Jump Street," "Booker" and "Open House."

Also low-rated but critically praised, comedians Tracey Ullman and Garry Shandling took their shows out of the Fox lineup.

To take advantage of the slow summer season, Fox plans to introduce some of its new programs as early as July. Many of the newcomers sound suspiciously ordinary, except one — "American Chronicles" from "Twin Peaks" creator David Lynch and his partner Mark Frost. Described in press material as "a breathtaking video novel of our country's most extraordinary people, places and events," the half-hour show will air Saturday nights, before "Twin Peaks" on ABC. A night to howl for the Lynch mob.

The hourlong dramas include "D.E.A.," about the life-and-death battles of the Drug Enforcement Agency; "The Class of Beverly Hills," about a middle-class Midwestern family in a filthy-rich town; and "Against the Law," with Michael O'Keefe as an unorthodox trial lawyer.

The new and not-so-intriguing sitcoms include "Babes," about three overweight sisters; "True Colors," about an interracial couple that sounds like a black and white "Brady Bunch;" "Parker Lewis Can't Lose," with Corin Nemec as "the coolest kid in high school;" "Get a Life," with comic Chris Elliott as a 30-year-old man living with his parents; and "Good Grief," about a couple of undertakers.

If Fox can establish its lineup before NBC, ABC and CBS return in September, the fourth network will be a real threat to the Big Three.

Once the dominant force in network television, CBS is struggling to put three third-place seasons behind it. In announcing his first prime-time schedule since becoming entertainment president, Jeff Sagansky showed no tendency toward risk-taking in his rebuilding season.

CBS has been short on comedies for several seasons, so Sagansky added four new sitcoms plus "The Hogan Family," a marginally successful reject from NBC.

The big news was "Evening Shade," starring Burt Reynolds (whose "B.L. Stryker" was canceled by ABC) as an ex-pro football player who decides to coach high-school football in his Arkansas home town.

Other familiar faces on CBS next season include Lucie Arnaz in "The Hammersmiths," a drama about a single mother raising an adopted Korean daughter; former "Equalizer" star Edward Woodward as a crime novelist in "Over My Dead Body;" former "Trapper John" star Gregory Harrison as a widowed fireman raising four kids in the comedy "Four Alarm Family;" and Gil Gerard as the head of an ecological hit squad in "The Green Machine."

The decision to relegate "Wiseguy" to back-up status sounds like a trouble-on-the-set situation. If the show returns, Steven Bauer will replace Ken Wahl after two episodes. Other casualties included "Falcon Crest," "Paradise," Valerie Harper's "City," Valerie Bertinelli's "Sydney," "His & Hers," "Tour of Duty," "Sugar & Spice" and "The Amazing Teddy Z."

A couple of surprise renewals included Whoopi Goldberg and Jean Stapleton's sitcom "Bagdad Cafe" and Matt Frewer's bizarre "Doctor, Doctor," which was considered a goner. The only new series renewed from last season were "Rescue 911" and Gerald McRaney's "Major Dad."

One of CBS's few unusual-sounding new shows is likely to be one of its first cancellations. "The Flash," an hourlong adventure based on the comic-book hero Flash Gordon, could be a lot of fun — but it's scheduled for Thursday night opposite "The Simpsons" and "Cosby." Say g'night, Flash.

In response to last season's Sunday night assault by Fox, CBS is holding firm with no changes in its lineup of "60 Minutes," "Murder She Wrote" and a movie.

Unlike ABC and NBC, which are running neck and neck in the ratings, both CBS and Fox have a long way to go if either is to become a dominant network. CBS seems to be meeting the challenge with trepidation, while Fox seems to be having a whale of a good time shaking up the complacency of network television.

Film critcs suggest new rating

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Society of Film Critics on Wednesday recommended a new rating for non-pornographic, adults-only movies.

The rating, "A," is needed "because of the alarming increase in the application of the 'X' rating to films of non-pornographic intent," the society said in a letter to Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, and Richard Heffner, head of the Ratings Board.

The society said the rating would promote "more equitable access and distribution of serious, adult-themed movies."

Last week, Pedro Almodovar, producer-director of "Tie Me Up! Tie Me Down!" filed suit in Manhattan against the Motion Picture Association, seeking to have the Spanish movie's rating changed from "X" to "R."

New E! Network now in Masters' hands

By Deborah Hastings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — MTV's most popular executive caused a bit of a stir when he abruptly quit last fall.

Lee Masters, adored by the music industry and credited with making the cable network solvent, walked out because, he said, "The new structure didn't give me much room for growth or authority."

Translation: MTV's new owners wouldn't let Masters run the show.

Now he does, for a different, brand-new cable network that he predicts will become MTV for adults.

This weekend, the E! entertainment network became the first 24-hour all-entertainment cable channel on television. Bankrolled for the most part by Home Box Office, E! will transmit celebrity news, interviews, movie picks, television features, fashion tips and just about anything and everything related to Hollywood.

"People watch this kind of stuff," Masters said. "They're certainly not going to watch it every day, but the idea is to have something for adults to watch the way youngsters and kids watch MTV."

Isn't that what "Entertainment Tonight" is for? Or "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous?" Or, better yet, the Movietime channel, which E! replaces?

Yep, said Masters, but there's plenty to go around because Americans have insatiable appetites for inside glimpses of beautiful people and their seemingly beautiful lives.

And Movietime, with its own version of 24-hour entertainment programming, obviously never had Lee Masters at the helm or a huge infusion of capital.

E! already has interviews with Mel Gibson, Michelle Pfeiffer and Darryl Hannah in the can. The round-the-clock programming will be divided into two-hour segments hosted by a male and female "anchor."

Complementing the glitz of Hollywood is a media blitz of E!'s own. At the recent National Cable Television Association convention in Atlanta, E!'s lavish display (long on "bells and whistles" according to one attendee) wowed many.

No expense has been spared on extravagant press kits or on the network itself. According to Masters, E! has a $43 million "war chest," most of it from HBO.

Although HBO is only one of 10 equity partners in E!, it is the managing partner and chief financial backer. Other equity partners include Comcast Corp., one of the country's biggest cable operators, Warner Cable, Cox Cable and Continental Cablevision. Many of these same backers were behind Movetime before it was replaced with E!.

Masters, whose programming ideas helped bring game shows to MTV, is quick to point out that managing partner or no, HBO doesn't run E!. Masters does.

"They don't really run the show," he said. "There are a lot of players and a lot of conflicting interests" — meaning the number of equity partners.

'Newhart' finale tops chart, but NBC still ratings leader

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Newhart" went out on top, finishing with its first No. 1 rating since 1983, but NBC easily won the prime-time ratings.

The peacock network had an 11.1 average, well ahead of ABC with 10.4 and CBS with 10, according to figures released Wednesday by the A.C. Nielsen Co.

Each ratings point represents 921,000 households.

The last episode of "Newhart" on CBS — which saw the Stratford Inn in danger of being purchased by Japanese investors and Bob Newhart awakening next to Suzanne Pleshette (his wife from "The Bob Newhart Show" in the 1970s) — drew an 18.7 average. "Newhart" ran for eight years.

Although CBS had four of the top 10 shows on television last week, it wasn't enough to boost the struggling network out of its usual last-place spot.

Instead, NBC dominated the Nielsen struggle with reruns of mega-hits such as "Cheers," which finished second, "A Different World," which landed in sixth place, and "The Cosby Show," which came in eighth.

"America's Funniest Home Videos," which has consistently placed in the top five, plummeted to No. 18 last week as viewership fell with the onslaught of rerun season.

The season finale of CBS' "Murphy Brown," which married off the nasal, annoyingly cheerful Corky, was third. This season's last original episode of "Designing Women," also on CBS, was fourth. The CBS Tuesday night movie, "A Killing in A Small Town" was seventh and a repeat of "Roseanne" on ABC was fifth.

The ABC Monday night movie, part two of "Voices Within," and a rerun of NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries" tied for ninth place.

More than half of the top 50 television shows last week were repeats.

Here are the top 10 shows, their network and rating: "Newhart," CBS, 18.7; "Cheers," NBC, 18.3; "Murphy Brown," CBS, 17.7; "Designing Women," CBS, 17.2; "Roseanne," ABC, 16.1; "A Different World," NBC, 15.9; CBS Tuesday Movie "A Killing in A Small Town," 15.8; "The Cosby Show," NBC, 15.7; ABC Sunday Night Movie tied with Unsolved Mysteries, NBC, 15.5.

In the evening news race, ABC was No. 1 for the 20th consecutive week with an average of 9.3. CBS averaged an 8.5 and NBC 7.8.

It's award time again on TV

By Diane Joy Moca
N.Y. Times News Service

Mix a little corny clowning around, some singing and a multitude of stars uttering "thank you," and you've got the standard formula for the three shows honoring the best in American theater, country music and rock 'n' roll.

Although they appeal to diverse audiences, the Tony Awards (at 9 p.m. tonight, June 3, on CBS), the TNN Music City News Country Awards (at 6 and 9 p.m. Monday on The Nashville Network) and the International Rock Awards (at 9:30 p.m. Wednesday on ABC) rely on loyal fans and star-gazers who tune in to see celebrities.

"All of the award shows have problems to settle," said Peter Stone, playwright and president of the Dramatist Guild, who wrote this year's Tony Awards show. "The fact that theater now is a national art — that's the one the Tonys has to settle. We want to inform the public that these nominated plays have come from lots of American cities beside New York."

Kathleen Turner, nominated as best actress for "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," hosts the live event from the Lunt-Fontanne Theater in New York City. Other celebrities performing and presenting awards include Dustin Hoffman (nominated for best actor), Tyne Daly (nominated for best actress in a musical), Timothy Hutton, Joan Rivers, Lily Tomlin, James Earl Jones, Jessica Tandy and Morgan Freeman.

In addition to the 21 awards, the show includes a scene from each of the four best-play nominations: "Lettice and Lovage," "Prelude to a Kiss," "The Grapes of Wrath" and "The Piano Lesson."

"Past Tonys had conformed too much to other award shows. The banter between presenters was forced, unbelievable and a waste of time. Actors hate it. Everyone knows it's not real. So I got rid of it," said Stone, who has won two Tonys, an Oscar and an Emmy in his 29-year career.

On the country-music front, this is the first year the TNN Viewers' Choice Awards and the Music City News Country Awards have merged to create a program whose winners are determined by mailed-in ballots from Music City News and phoned-in ballots from 900-numbers announced on TNN.

"The people we really work for are fans who buy concert tickets and compact discs. It's neat when they call the shots," said co-host Barbara Mandrell.

The public is voting on 13 categories, including entertainer of the year nominees Ricky Van Shelton, the Statler Brothers, Alabama, George Strait and Randy Travis (who received five nominations).

The presence of Mandrell and co-host Jimmy Dean, who have each starred in their own successful television variety series, is expected to boost interest in the live telecast from the Grand Ole Opry House in Nashville.

"I think the show would have appeal outside of country music. My sole audience is not all die-hard country fans. And look at Jimmy Dean. He's a household word," Mandrell said.

Another form of music that has produced a loyal following over the years is rock 'n' roll. Favorites David Bowie and Dave Stewart plus newcomer Melissa Etheridge will perform at the second International Rock Awards, which will be seen in more than 60 countries.

The presenters include Debbie Harry, Adam Ant, Christie Brinkley, Bo Diddley, Iggy Pop, Katey Sagal, Paul Shaffer, Patty Smyth and Ronnie Spector.

The show will be hosted by actor Gary Busey and comedian Sam Kinison. The comic wants to perform both "songs and comedy" during the show. "I'm a rocker and I love to sing, but comedy is what I do best and what I'm grounded in," Kinison said.

Kinison added that Living Legend Award winner Eric Clapton "was always my ultimate guitar idol. At 15, I started playing guitar and bought my first Cream album."

"I think heavy metal is gaining a lot more acceptance," Kinison said.

Children asked to draw autos for new exhibit

ODESSA — Children ages 5-12 are invited to visit the Art Institute for the Permian Basin with their families to draw their own designs of "The Car of the Future" today. These designs will be on display in the Art Institute during the exhibition, "The Auto: America's Love Affair."

The eclectic exhibition, courtesy of the Auburn-Cord-Dusenberg Museum, Auburn, Ind., will include original drawings and photographs of designs from the 1920s and 1930s by Alan Leamy as well as other fine art pieces with the automobile theme.

Also on display will be paintings of classic and contemporary automobiles by such nationally known artists as Hector Luis Bergandi, Mark Stehrenberger, William A. Motta and Bill Neale. Bill Wiggins' sculptures constructed from hood ornaments, steering wheels and other automobile parts will be exhibited, along with early vintage gasoline pumps and memorabilia pieces.

From 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday, June 10, an antique car rally will be held in the Art Institute's parking lots. In case of rain, the rally will be held Sunday, June 17, from 2 to 4 p.m.

The Art Institute is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. No admission is charged. For more information call Marilyn, 1-368-7222.

Shandling drives series to funny closing

By Diane Joy Moca
N.Y. Times News Service

Garry Shandling's four seasons of breaking the rules of television came to a screeching halt Friday when he bids adieu in his final episode, titled "Driving Miss Garry."

The groundbreaking comedy series ended with a takeoff on this year's Academy Award-winning film, "Driving Miss Daisy," featuring guest stars Paul Winfield as Garry's chauffeur Hoke and Dan Aykroyd in a reprisal of his Oscar-nominated role of Boolie.

At the start of the show, Shandling crashes his trademark mini-car into the bushes. After seeing the wreckage, Boolie (who Shandling announces is his brother) hires Hoke to drive Shandling around.

Though he initially refuses help, Shandling is coerced into riding in his own car when Hoke follows him around and threatens him with a tire iron. Periodic music resembling "Miss Daisy's" score further enhances the parody as Shandling adopts the stubborn demeanor of an elderly woman. The two are later shown leading the Indy 500 in one of the show's typical "silly dream sequences," as Shandling described.

The episode follows the pair over the years as they become friends and grow old together. When Hoke drives Shandling past all of his familiar sets, the star wraps up the series by waving goodbye to the other characters and his fans in a suitable close to a show that often dropped the fourth wall by addressing home viewers and the studio audience.

Shandling said the innovative half-hour comedy series worked well on Showtime because "it had a specific sensibility. I'm not sure if it would appeal to a mass audience. The few fans I had will get by without it, I hope," he joked. Shandling added that about 100 of those "die-hard fans" remained in the studio until the final scene was shot at 2:30 a.m.

"It's Garry Shandling's Show" was nominated for four Emmy Awards and won five other awards and honors since its premiere in September 1986. Shandling's dry wit defined this series that also gained a reputation for regularly bringing in guest stars, including Tom Petty, Sheena Easton and Gilda Radner, in her last appearance on TV.

Although Shandling admitted that he grew "tired of it after 72 episodes," he cited a lack of creative growth as the main reason for ending the series.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, JUNE 3, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The months just ahead will be filled with excitement and challenge. You find that luck favors you in the area of finance. Stay on your toes in November. Your consistency will determine how far your career progresses this year. There is room at the top for those willing to work long hours. In December, be on the lookout for opportunities to travel. Although outside tensions affect romance at times, the happy moments prevail. Your partner may soon display renewed interest in settling down.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Confusion may slow you down this morning. Count on an extra burst of energy to help you catch up by late afternoon. A sermon could inspire you and your mate to revise your plans.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep your wits about you if someone tries to upset your applecart. A social event is far more fun than you anticipated. Your sense of humor wins you a new romantic admirer.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Trips by car are best postponed. Rely on public transportation. Children should be encouraged to be thoughtful. Afternoon hours favor self-improvement projects. Romance is happier than in the recent past.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may need to combine business with pleasure today. Keep entertainment costs within reasonable limits and choose your guests carefully. A good book can be better company than a dull date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Look forward to a family gathering. You will be in an affectionate mood, willing to overlook someone's foibles. Be more discreet regarding romance. Call those who are confined to home or hospital.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Information you receive from a relative or neighbor can be helpful to a business enterprise. A surprising social development may be the highlight of your afternoon or evening. Curb everyday spending.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You will find it easier to handle any problems that arise if you enlist your loved ones' help. Refuse to take on more responsibility than you can comfortably handle. Give romance another chance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Heed your intuition if trying to make a difficult decision. Romance will fare best during evening hours. Those involved in long-term relationships are pleased with the commitment they have made.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be sure to keep spending in check today. Friends and neighbors will be more congenial than in the recent past. Devote more time and attention to the needs of your loved ones.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your mate or romantic partner will be sympathetic to your financial woes. Do what you can to get on better terms with other family members. Be willing to apologize for past mistakes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Loved ones will be unpredictable on this topsy-turvy Sunday. Early hours are best for errands. Postpone romance until things settle down. A financial agreement can be negotiated.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Use your leisure time constructively. Rest and relaxation will leave you fit to face the busy week that lies ahead. A good book can be entertaining. Phone friends.

Flogging a dead horse is an exercise in futility. If you can see a line is doomed to failure, cast around for a reasonable alternative.

With 16 points in high cards and a singleton in the enemy suit, South felt his hand was too good for an invitational raise. He was delighted with his dummy.

West led the king of clubs and found an excellent defense by shifting to a trump. With the ace of hearts marked offside by the overcall, declarer had intended scoring a heart ruff for his 10th trick, but this defense jeopardized that possibility. Declarer would have to surrender the lead twice and the defenders might be able to use those entries to remove dummy's remaining trumps.

The only alternative was to engineer an endplay. Declarer drew trumps in three rounds, cashed the ace and queen of diamonds, then overtook the jack of diamonds with the king to strip the defenders of that suit. Next came the ten of clubs and, when East followed low as declarer had expected, the contract was secure.

Instead of ruffing, declarer discarded a heart and West was helpless. That trick could be captured with the jack, but no matter what West returned, declarer would be presented with his contract. Cashing the ace of hearts would set up the king as the fulfilling trick. Leading the ace of clubs would permit declarer to ruff, cross to dummy with a diamond and score the queen of clubs as the fulfilling trick.

The Museum of Fine Arts in Houston has opened its gallery of Far Eastern Art after a closing of more than two years because of space limitations.

The gallery, which opened on May 12, includes more than 60 paintings, sculptures and ceramics from Japan, China and India. Recent acquisitions are a 6th century Japanese Haniwa Warrior of terracotta, and a pair of Japanese six-panel screens illustrating the "Tale of Genji" from the late 17th and early 18th century.

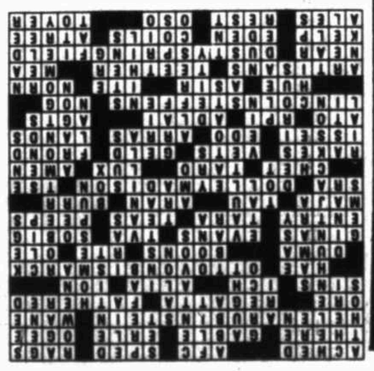
PUZZLE ANSWER



Irving exemplifies star-style parenting

By Bob Thomas

Irving

She already was the mother of one of the most famous — and richest — boys in the world, Max Spielberg, whose father is her former husband, film tycoon Steven Spielberg. Irving and Spielberg were divorced last year.

Max now has a half-brother, Gabriel Davis Baretto, born May 4 to Amy and Bruno Baretto, director of her new film. Max also has another half-sibling, since Spielberg and Kate Capshaw became the parents of a daughter, Sasha, on May 14. But that's a different story.

Like Spielberg-Capshaw, Baretto-Irving are not married. "But we plan to be," declares Irving.

Her new movie is a Paramount Pictures release, "A Show of Force." Based on Anne Nelson's book "Murder Under Two Flags," it delves into the political intrigue surrounding the murder of two young men in 1978 in Puerto Rico. The alleged coverup caused a government scandal that apparently still has reverberations.

"The script is very close to the facts of the case," Irving said. "There was some license that we took in telling the story, and there were some demands that we do not use real names. There were rumors that the American government is trying not to expose this film too much because it does come down pretty heavily on them.

"The fact that the two boys were set up to look like Cuban-backed terrorists and then murdered in cold blood has been proven. How high up the influence goes and who was involved is still under investigation."

The actress admitted her own ignorance of Puerto Rico before making the film — "I even asked what currency they used." Her stay there provided an education, and she concludes with understatement: "I don't think that the situation there is one that America has helped."

Like many of today's film heroines, Irving plays a television reporter. A widow with two children, her investigation "puts her life in jeopardy, puts her family's life in jeopardy and makes her question her own vision of what America was; she seeks the truth and comes into her own strength in seeking the truth."

Her role as Kate Ryan de Melendez is the mainstay of the plot, which also involves Andy Garcia as the prosecutor, Lou Diamond Phillips as an undercover agent and Robert Duvall as the television station manager. Also in the cast is Irving's mother, Priscilla Pointer.

With an actress mother and a father who was a distinguished stage director, Amy Irving grew up in the theater. The late Jules Irving was artistic director of San Francisco's American Repertory Theater when Amy was born in Palo Alto, Calif., 37 years ago. She made her stage debut at 9 months in "Rumplestiltskin," trained at her father's theater and later at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art.

Over the years, Irving has divided her time between stage ("Amadeus," "Heartbreak House") and screen ("Carrie," "Yentl," "Crossing Delancey").

Children's book trade sees growth

By Kathy Hogan Trocheck
N.Y. Times Cox News Service

Dr. Seuss is on the best-seller list — again — with his latest, the inspirational "Oh, The Places You'll Go!" So is British author Martin Handford, creator of the "Find Waldo Now" books, which have sold more than 3 million copies worldwide. And the Babysitter Club series, the work of New York author Ann M. Martin, with 35 million copies in print, never seems to go off The New York Times Best-Seller List.

Children's literature has come of age.

You could give most of the credit for this renaissance to authors, artists and book publishers, who are unleashing a torrent of appealing children's books at the rate of about 4,500 a year. The children's fiction they're publishing is often reality-based and features children of multicultural origins in believable settings.

Thank educators, too, who have started using children's trade books in classroom reading curricula in place of those dusty old basic readers. You can even applaud yuppie parents, the ones who contributed to the baby boomlet of the 1980s and who don't mind spending $14.95 of their disposable income for a high-quality picture book for little Ashley or young Taylor.

"We have so much to choose from today," said Eleanor Johnson, media specialist at Mableton Elementary School in Cobb County, Ga., a 27-year veteran of public education. Although she finds that students are enthusiastic about classics such as "Treasure Island" and "Black Beauty," Mrs. Johnson said she is greatly impressed with contemporary children's literature. "We have fantastic authors being published today and they are covering subjects that concern our children of today."

Kids themselves say they can't get enough of their favorite authors, writers such as Judy Blume, of "Super Fudge" fame, and Beverly Cleary, author of the "Ramona" books, whose sensitive yet humorous books tell about life through a contemporary child's perspective.

Adults are responding to children's enthusiasm by providing them with good books. "Today's parents are book buyers," said Caron Chapman, executive director of the Association of Booksellers for Children. "They realize how important literacy is, and they read for information as well as entertainment."

Back in 1982, 150 million hardback and paperback juvenile books were sold, for a total of $456 million in sales, according to the American Bookseller's Association. By 1988, the most recent year for which statistics were available, children's book sales had ballooned into a $1.3 billion-a-year industry, with more than 252 million books sold.

Those numbers have grabbed the attention of American book publishers in a time when mergers and buyouts of some of the largest publishing houses have enforced a bottom-line mentality.

"Across the industry more attention is being focused on juvenile books," said Kathleen Fogarty, a publicist for Random House books, which publishes both Dr. Seuss and the best-selling Berenstain Bears series. "Juvenile is such a stable segment. If you have a strong backlist you'll always have sales. Today, the jfvenile lines are the real moneymakers."

Dr. Seuss, for example, has sold more than 50 million copies of 47 titles. The Berenstain Bears series, started in the 1960s for preschoolers and kindergartners, now has 33 titles with more than 30 million copies sold. Bantam Books' paperback "Sweet Valley" adolescent romance series has sold a phenomenal 55 million copies of more than 100 titles since Francine Pascal created them in 1983. By comparison, best-selling author Judith Krantz has sold 15 million copies of her five steamy adult novels.

Book details fight for ranching empire

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Sarita Kenedy East was the last Kenedy, mistress of a 400,000-acre South Texas cattle kingdom called La Parra and overshadowed only slightly by the neighboring King Ranch.

Her life and death, and the battle over her estate, is the stuff of Texas legends. And books.

The Kenedys and Kings, and later the Klebergs, were in fact more than neighbors. Sarita's grandfather, Mifflin Kenedy, and Richard King were friends, partners and 19th century steamboaters on the Rio Grande.

Before Parra, Kenedy helped his friend establish the King dynasty.

And like the storybook King Ranch, La Parra sprang from the wilderness along the Texas Gulf Coast known as the Wild Horse Desert. Half a century later, there was but one "town" in all of Kenedy County: Sarita.

Today, Sarita is still the only town, population 185.

Six decades after Captain Kenedy's death, Sarita East, the "melancholy mistress" of La Parra, ruled her grandfather's empire with a velvet glove and a remarkably vague idea of its true worth.

Counting oil reserves, some put the figure at half a billion dollars.

Widowed and childless, Sarita's death in 1961 touched off a legal battle that, had it occurred anywhere other than Texas, "you probably wouldn't believe a word of it."

That is the claim made by the publisher of a new book entitled "If You Love Me You Will Do My Will," co-authored by Stephen G. Michaud of New York and Hugh Aynesworth of Dallas.

A principal in this lengthy, high stakes saga wanted to write a book on the subject and call it "The Rape of an Empire."

The authors should have snatched that title.

"This is the story," says a jacket blurb, "of a vast cattle and oil fortune left hanging by the thread of a widow's dying wish; a story of prodigious egos and ambitions competing for the fortune before the widow was even buried; a story about a legal battle that has lasted a quarter-century and has swept like a range fire from dusty cow-town courtrooms to the marble halls of the Vatican, pitting captains of industry against princes of the Church."

Foremost among the "princes" was a young and charismatic Trappist monk, Brother Leo, who showed up at La Parra in 1948 while searching out sites for monasteries and rich Catholic donors to finance them.

The alleged Svengali of the whole sordid affair, he became Sarita's spiritual counselor and, on her deathbed, a trustee of a charitable foundation over which he and, seemingly, a cast of thousands sought control.

For the most part, it is impossible to tell the good guys from the bad guys in this strange tale, but Brother Leo was both.

Says the son of a man who considered killing the monk:

"I don't believe Brother Leo is evil. He is wrong-minded...Brother Leo has always been strange to me. I don't know what he gets out of what he does. He is a very funny mixture of Rasputin and the pope. I don't know. He's a strange mixture. He's transparent, and he's black. He's ingenuous, and he's complicated. He's kind, and he's bad.

"He has all these personalities."

A man of obvious complexity, Brother Leo was only a bit more enigmatic than the patrona of La Parra, the aging Sarita.

For instance, there is this haunting passage:

"On these eerie crimson evenings, when the gloomy Headquarters house at La Parra felt most like a tomb, Sarita Kenedy East would put on her black-lace mantilla, genuflect before her bedroom altar, and then slowly make her splay-gaited way up into the gun tower atop the Headquarters, where she sat alone, surveying her endlessly flat, 400,000-acre domain.

"The servants reported that the widow often remained in the tower well past dark, sipping her tumblers of scotch and sometimes boozily yodeling the exuberant country-and-western dance tunes of her youth. But most of the time — and this was what touched and saddened the ranch's vaqueros and their families — La Parra's barren patrona made no sound at all."

That moving excerpt also reflects the perfect blend of two diverse talents: Michaud is a superb writer and Aynesworth a splendid reporter, working together for the second time.

Their first book was "The Only Living Witness," the story of serial killer Ted Bundy.

Brother Leo and Sarita Kenedy East hardly possess the serpentine peculiarities of Bundy, but they are decidedly more interesting. And it is the Byzantine characters of the Texas saga that make the book entertaining.

If it ever makes it to the big screen, look for Faye Dunaway and Jack Nicholson in the leading roles.

"If You Love Me You Will Do My Will" is published by W.W. Norton & Co. at $19.95.

BEST SELLERS

King, Pilcher, Cussler still topping book lists

N.Y. Times News Service

The listings below are based on computer-processed sales figures from 3,000 bookstores and from representative wholesalers with more than 28,000 other retail outlets, including variety stores and supermarkets. The figures are statistically adjusted to represent sales in all such outlets across the United States. In Advice and How-to, five titles are listed because, beyond that point, sales in this category are not generally large enough to make a longer list statistically reliable.
