OPEC ministers seek British, Mexican support

LONDON (AP) — With the future of OPEC's power at stake, six of the cartel's 13 oil ministers are lobbying nonmembers Britain and Mexico to support a moderate and uniform oil price cut.

Today's meeting in London indicates the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' new dependence on competing producers for controlling world crude oil prices and production.

Until this year outside petroleum producers usually took their price cues from OPEC's benchmark price.

Now, faced with a supply glut, sagging demand from recession-hit consumers and dissension within OPEC ranks, most of the cartel's members say only a global agreement can avert an all-out price war.

Mexico appears willing and its oil minister agreed to participate in a meeting here today with OPEC delegates from Venezuela, Quwait, Algeria, United Arab Emirates, Nigeria and Indonesia.

But the Financial Times, a respected British business newspaper, said Britain is expected to tell the cartel ministers it will go its own way.

One British official was quoted by the Daily Telegraph of London as saying, "OPEC is a cartel and must run its own affairs. It must stop involving the British government."

According to the Telegraph, British officials said the choice of London as a meeting place was "a clumsy attempt to put extra pressure on Britain to fall in line with any new price and production pact."

Britain has become the world's fifth largest oil producer, and it joined with Norway on Feb. 18 in cutting the price of its North Sea oil by $3 a barrel to $30.50.

In hopes of inducing cooperation from Britain, the OPEC countries formed a three-member panel to consult with British officials, the official Saudi Press Agency said Wednesday.

Saudi Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, whose country is the major OPEC producer, was reported to be in Paris, ready to intervene if the London talks progressed to a point where he felt his presence would be useful.

Nigeria, which competes with North Sea crude on the European market, announced a $5.50 per barrel price reduction to $30 on Feb. 19, one day after Britain and Norway announced their price cut.

The sudden undercutting of OPEC's $34-a-barrel base price, plus internal rivalries and a declining petroleum market, have threatened to loosen the control which the cartel held over oil prices throughout the 1970s.

Venezuelan Oil Minister Humberto Calderon Berti heading efforts to avert a collapse in oil prices, has emerged as the peacemaker among OPEC members, non-OPEC producers and consumer nations.

On Wednesday, he said the group of ministers is close to reaching an agreement on a uniform price cut and must "work a little more on a production ceiling and quotas."

Asharq-al-Awsat, a London-based newspaper serving Arab readers, said today that the first task of the London talks would be "a final attempt to convince Nigeria to raise its price" from $30 to a level closer to the current OPEC benchmark price.

If this does not happen, the Saudi news media has predicted a move to lower OPEC's base price to about $29 or $30 per barrel.

Each drop of $1 in the price of a barrel of oil is expected to mean a drop of about 2½ cents in the price of a gallon of gasoline at the pump in the United States.

If the London talks make headway, Asharq-al-Awsat said, the way may be cleared for an emergency OPEC meeting in Lausanne, Switzerland, "despite the lack of any encouraging signs from extremist (OPEC) members," an evident reference to Iran and Libya.

In Iran, where the government needs oil revenues to finance its war with Iraq, Tehran Radio quoted the speaker of Parliament as warning of a "plot" to hurt Iran by cutting the price of oil.

House coalition offers alternatives to gas decontrol bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of more than 20 House members, opposed to President Reagan's natural gas decontrol bill, today unveiled an alternative which they said would hold future consumer gas prices below the level of inflation.

"The president's bill goes in exactly the wrong direction," said Richard Brandon of the Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition, which helped draft the alternative plan. "The president is long on decontrol and short on consumer protection."

Brandon's group contends the Reagan bill would yield price increases to consumers of 67 percent over the next four years, while favoring gas producers.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., a chief sponsor of the measure, said it would roll back gas prices to Jan. 1, 1982 levels. It also would extend federal price controls — due to expire for most categories of natural gas on Jan. 1, 1985, under current law — for two additional years.

The bill, to be introduced later this month, also would allow gas prices to fall if the energy component of the Consumer Price Index drops, but would limit any increases to 75 percent of the CPI. It also would limit the prices that can be charged for imported and other expensive deregulated gas.

A major difference with the Reagan plan is that the alternative would retain price controls on so-called "old" gas, which is gas discovered before 1978 that makes up about 40 percent of supplies. Reagan's bill would decontrol all gas prices, including those for old gas, on Jan. 1, 1985.

It also would cut off the opportunity for the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, which administers the present system of natural gas price controls, to use administrative action to decontrol old gas or to create new categories of high-cost gas.

The alternative plan also would limit or kill provisions in many current contracts between gas producers and pipelines that are forcing prices up. It would limit "take-or-pay" contracts which now require pipelines to buy expensive gas while cheaper gas goes unused.

Gephardt said the measure would require FERC to scrutinize pipeline requests to pass through higher costs to consumers by making sure that such increases are proven "just and reasonable."

Gasoline tanks burn at Big Spring plant

By VINCE GIORGI

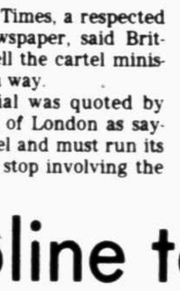
BIG SPRING — Two large gasoline tanks partially filled with unleaded gasoline caught fire and burned for several hours Wednesday night and early today at Cosden Oil & Chemical Co. east of Big Spring. Firefighters extinguished the blaze at about 5:30 a.m. today.

Big Spring police reportedly called for evacuation of residents within a mile radius of the refinery, but it is unclear how many residents left the area.



Whittington

Jimmy Woods, refinery safety officer, said the blaze ignited at about 10:40 p.m. while gas was being pumped from one tank into a pipeline. He said the flames spread to a second tank approximately 200 yards south of the first tank and within about five minutes, both were involved in flames.

Woods said "mechanical failure" probably triggered the blaze, but he declined to elaborate. "That's kind of broad, but that's the best (explanation) I can put with it," Woods said.

Carl Dorton, Big Spring fire marshal, said early indications are that the fire may have started when a pump malfunctioned, sending gasoline spraying against an electric motor. Dorton stressed, however, that the fire's cause has not been officially determined.

The plant manager, Wallace Whittington, said the 20,000-barrel tanks held a combined total of about 15,000-20,000 barrels of unleaded gasoline when the fire began.

He said the southern-most tank, which sits about 200 yards from U.S. Highway 80, was extinguished roughly between 12:30 a.m. and 1:30 a.m. and remains about five-eighths full of gas. He said the other tank was nearly empty and was extinguished at about 5:35 a.m.

Whittington said the possibility of the fire spreading at the time to other tanks was minimal. He said the tanks are equipped with floating roofs which minimize the chance of explosion.

Whittington said he could offer no estimate on the damages, but said "it looks to us like the north tank is completely non-salvageable."

Firefighters from Big Spring, Howard County and the refinery's own fire crews battled the blaze. Some local well service companies assisted with pumping equipment.

Although he said the fire did not interfere with general operations at the plant, Whittington said the company will not be ready to resume distribution of unleaded gas until sometime later today. He said any local gas stations expecting unleaded shipments early today could face temporary shortages.

Dorton said Highway 80 was closed and traffic was rerouted around the area for about five hours.

Early morning collision kills Iraan resident

An Iraan man was killed when his pickup truck collided with an 18-wheeler about a mile east of Midland on U.S. Highway 80 early this morning.

The Department of Public Safety identified the man as 25-year-old William Carson Knotts. He was northbound on County Road 1162 shortly before 6 a.m. when his 1982 GMC pickup ran into the side of a tractor-trailer rig driven by Charles L. Cockburn, 42, of Mena, Ark.

Cockburn, who was westbound on U.S. 80 at the time, was treated for facial lacerations at the scene and did not require hospital treatment, according to the DPS.

Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry pronounced Knotts dead at the scene and his body was taken to the Thomas Funeral Home.

Most candidates will be unopposed in council, school, hospital elections

A yawn from the voters may be the strongest reaction seen this year on the city, school and hospital elections. Out of eight places up for election, only two have challengers.

The first three places on City Council are on the ballot. Jesse Hatfield is seeking re-election to Place 1. Gordon Marcum II is going for a fourth two-year term in Place 2. Running against him is Raul Jimenez Salazar, who files for some position every year. David Godfrey is the only newcomer, going for Place 3 which is being vacated by four-term councilman Carroll Thomas.

One position for trustee on the Midland Independent School District board may cause the only excitement. Bill Jackson, who is vice president of the board this year, is seeking re-election to Place 2. He is being challenged by Gil Kenney, who filed late Wednesday. Ron Britton is seeking re-election to Place 1.

Midland Memorial Hospital District board of directors has three at-large places on the ballot and only three persons have filed. Wanda Mohr is seeking re-election. Newcomers are Frank Cahoon and Dr. Walter Parks Jr. Choosing not to run again are Dr. Henrie Mast and Ed Magruder.

The election will be held April 2.

Pope urges clergy to seek change without violence

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Pope John Paul II began his nine-day tour of this impoverished and war-ravaged region by urging Roman Catholic clergy to reject Marxism, capitalism and all violent paths toward change.

In a speech to Central American bishops Wednesday, he called instead for reconciliation within their divided nations and within the Church itself.

Today, the pope celebrates Mass outdoors in La Sabana Park. Church leaders have predicted as many as 1 million people — two-fifths of Costa Rica's population — will attend.

The Polish-born pontiff also meets this morning with the tiny Polish community in San Jose and with Costa Rican President Luis Alberto Monge.

John Paul told an eager, welcoming crowd at San Jose airport Wednesday he was making the eight-nation tour to "share the pain of a people...and leave a word of encouragement and hope, based on a necessary change in attitudes."

Later, he told 66 of the region's bishops that the church "cannot resort to methods of violence which are abhorrent to its Christian conscience."

"A lacerating clamor rising from these lands and calling for peace, the end of war and to violent deaths has sounded with accents of urgency in my spirit," the 62-year-old pontiff said.

"This clamor implores reconciliation ...and it thirsts for widespread and heretofore uselessly awaited justice.

"There is nothing more deplorable and alarming as the threat of war which would raze the countries involved and would become a deadly scenario for foreign interests."

The pope rejected both "a purely economistic capitalism" and "a materialistic collectivism (communism) that equally oppress human nature."

"The Gospel is a defender of man, especially of the poor and defenseless, of those who lack earthly goods and are ignored," he said.

The Pope's other stops will include three tortured lands: El Salvador, where a bloody civil war rages; Guatemala, where a rightist military government is trying to quell a stubborn guerrilla movement and Nicaragua, where the guerrilla-led government is trying to rebuild the nation after a bloody revolution.

Thunderstorms develop in state

By The Associated Press

Spring-like showers and thundershowers developed across Texas today as an upper level disturbance moved into the state, bringing the threat of violent weather.

The shower activity was expected to spread across most of the state through Friday and the National Weather Service warned that some heavy rains and high winds were possible.

Cloudiness increased over most areas before dawn as southerly winds brought moisture into the state ahead of the weather system. Winds were blowing at speeds ranging from 15 to 25 mph.

Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 37 at Marfa to 71 at McAllen.

Pacific storm still battering California

By KIM MILLS
Associated Press Writer

An earthen dam above California's Simi Valley threatened to break under the strain of a week of rain, while pounding surf crushed oceanside homes and 9,200 people had to flee as a stalled Pacific storm continued to torment the Golden State.

Officials issued an order late Wednesday to evacuate up to 1,200 people from the Simi Valley, northwest of Los Angeles, after deciding that the earthen Sinaloa Dam could give way.

"There's 6 inches of water coming over the dam and both sides of the dam are corroding," Ventura County fire dispatcher Kathy Whitman said.

"We have engineers out there cutting off the flow of water, trying to lower the level of water," said police Lt. Dorsey Cullen, who said the water behind the dam was 6 feet above normal.

The death toll from the West Coast storms that began over the weekend rose to 16, with more than 50 people injured. Forecasters predicted another powerful storm would hit California this weekend.

The storm has wrecked over $130 million in property since Monday, according to the state Office of Emergency Services said. Thirty-one counties were expected to ask Gov. George Deukmejian for emergency aid today, and the govoernor was expected to relay the request to President Reagan.

The foul weather rerouted the California tour of Queen Elizabeth II, who left Southern California by air Wednesday afternoon and arrived at San Francisco a day ahead of schedule.

The British monarch offered her sympathy to Deukmejian in a statement that said she and Prince Philip were "saddened by the loss of life and damage caused by the storm in California."

"The state is just absolutely soaking wet right now," said Alex Cunningham, director of the state Office of Emergency Services. "It's like a completely saturated sponge that can't hold another drop of water without a drop running out somewhere."

Forecasters said the storm also spread eastward today to Colorado and Arizona. Storm warnings were issued for Colorado.

In Southern California, 10 piers were undermined or sheared off by pounding surf and at least 1,124 homes and businesses were damaged or destroyed, including six wrecked by Malibu surf and 12 by a downtown Los Angeles tornado.

In northern California, flooding and mudslides swept houses from their foundations and trapped 90 people in a canyon.

The Sacramento River, which has already driven 2,000 people from their homes, was expected to crest at 10 feet above flood stage today.

Helicopters plucked more than 80 people to safety, 10 from a wayward barge off a San Francisco beach Tuesday and 28 from a narrow Monterey County canyon swept by a wall of mud that one witness said was 15 feet high. Another 43 were brought out by Army helicopters Wednesday, said Art McDole, emergency operations coordinator for Monterey County.

"There are still some people in there, we think around 20," McDole said. "But they are all safe and warm...well-stocked with food."

Among those killed in the storm Wednesday was a 3-year-old boy buried in Clear Lake, about 125 miles north of San Francisco, when a wall of mud 300 feet wide swept down a hillside and crushed his home.

Three other people died near Indio when their car skidded on a water-logged road and slammed into a tractor-trailer rig and exploded, the California Highway Patrol said.

The National Weather Service, noting that Wednesday was the eighth consecutive day of rain in California, said Mount Wilson, Calif., had received 8 inches of rain in 24 hours, bringing its total for the week to 16 inches.

"We've got bands of showers spinning off a weather system stalled offshore, and that pattern likely will continue into Thursday," said weather service forecaster Ron Wagner.

Among the homes destroyed in the exclusive Los Angeles suburb of Malibu was one owned by tennis star Billie Jean King and her husband Larry. The house was so damaged by surf that it was condemned and torn down. The Kings had retained the home in a celebrated "palimony" suit filed by Ms. King's former lover, Marilyn Barnett, who claimed she had been promised the house.

The man-made oil well island Esther, about three-quarters of a mile off Huntington Beach, was destroyed by surf, and 2,100 gallons of oil was floating on the surface, Coast Guard spokesman Tom Heflick said. Only one derrick remained of the 150-by-178-foot island and "all other structures and most of the landscaping...were toppled and washed away," he said.

In Santa Barbara, the Harbor Patrol abandoned its office on a jetty after 15-foot waves submerged cars in a beachfront parking lot, washed away pavement and broke a natural gas main, causing several small fires.

Half the pier at San Clemente, 65 miles southeast of Los Angeles, washed into the ocean Wednesday night and a 100-foot section was torn from the Imperial Beach Pier in San Diego County, authorities said.

Lava fountains reach 300 feet during an eruption of Hawaii's Kilauea Volcano.

Tongue of lava flows down street of Volcano, Hawaii, subdivision

VOLCANO, Hawaii (AP) — A three-mile long tongue of lava from the erupting Kilauea Volcano began creeping down a subdivision street, forcing residents from their homes for the second time this year, Civil Defense officials said.

The flow was about 500 feet wide and moving about 600 feet an hour late Wednesday, said Harry Kim, Hawaii county civil defense administrator. It was not known whether any houses had been damaged.

The residents of the Royal Gardens subdivision were ordered to leave their homes earlier in the day.

About 50 homes are scattered throughout the 500-lot subdivision, which has no electricity or telephones. Police had set up roadblocks around the area to limit access.

"Our priority is the lives and safety of people," Kim said. "Not only the flow, which is a slow-moving element, we're talking about fire, fumes and smoke."

The possibility of brush or forest fires sparked by the hot lava were a major concern, Kim said. The island of Hawaii is in the midst of a five-month drought.

The lava flow was being fed by 200- to 300- foot fountains from a vent in the volcano's east rift zone. The fountaining began Friday in the latest of a sporadic series of eruptions which began Jan. 3.

Kim also ordered the subdivision evacuated on Jan. 7.

Tennis player's Malibu home destroyed

By LILA LITTLEJOHN
Associated Press Writer

MALIBU, Calif. — The scream of chainsaws echoed across the Malibu coastline, a whirring death knell for posh beachfront homes shattered this week by the storm-whipped Pacific Ocean.

A home owned by tennis star Billie Jean King — the object of an unsuccessful palimony suit filed against Ms. King by her former lesbian lover — had to be bulldozed Wednesday.

Another house at the ocean's edge simply toppled into the Pacific when its pilings were undermined by 10-foot breakers.

"This is the worst I've seen," Los Angeles County Fire Department Battalion Chief Larry Rohrer said of the damage.

Nidia Cota said she watched as her tidy yellow Malibu Road home topple into the waves.

All that was left of Mrs. Cota's home were a few chunks of cement, the kitchen sink and some yellow boards. An uprooted palm tree was tossing about in the surf.

"We've seen it before, we know what can happen," Mrs. Cota said as she pushed her toddler in a stroller across the street to a neighbor's home in this prestigious community 25 miles west of Los Angeles. "We just have to do the best we can."

Next door, another small home groaned audibly as each wave struck its pilings.

"We're trying to get the furniture out just in case," said owner Lucy Parnell. "It's just too much for sandbags. There really isn't anything you can do."

The sea also claimed septic tanks beneath several houses, turning the air fetid as residents hoarded washing machines, clothing, bicycles and furniture beneath plastic tarps on the street.

Work crews frantically tore at Ms. King's home to try to save an adjoining structure. Chainsaws, bulldozers and other heavy equipment were used on the house.

"I'm sure we have insurance and probably won't get it all back, but that's life," Ms. King said later on Wednesday, after winning a tennis match in nearby Inglewood.

Pilings supporting the small wooden structure had been undermined, tipping it roof-first into neighbor Donald Peterson's residence.

Social Security plan may get approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $165 billion Social Security overhaul, powered by strong bipartisan support from House tax writers, is moving toward approval by the full House.

The House Ways and Means Committee voted 32-3 Wednesday night to approve the delicately balanced package of payroll tax hikes, a curb on benefits, a levy on retirees' benefits and mandatory coverage for new federal employees.

The full House will vote on the plan next week, and also decide whether a higher retirement age should be part of the package.

The Social Security portions of the legislation enjoyed strong support, but Ways and Means was unable to wrap up its two days of public sessions and behind-the-scenes maneuvering until striking compromises on unrelated provisions.

Those dealt with emergency extension of unemployment benefits for laid-off workers of up to 10 weeks and a change, phased in over three years, in the way Medicare pays hospital bills.

Rep. Barber B. Conable Jr. of New York, the top Republican on the panel, called the 32-3 vote "an historic event."

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the panel's chairman, indicated the strong bipartisan vote in favor of the measure signaled the support the package will have on the House floor.

"I think today we signed a peace pact that nobody envisioned happening a year ago," Rostenkowski said.

Only conservative Republican Reps. Bill Archer of Texas, Philip M. Crane of Illinois and Richard T. Schulze of Pennsylvania opposed the legislation, which embraced the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

The package is supposed to carry Social Security through its financing crisis in this decade and wipe out a projected $1.9 trillion deficit over the next 75 years.

Legislators said they had decided to bury their differences on the unemployment and Medicare provisions of the plan in order to keep up the momentum the Social Security bailout has had since January, when it was drafted and then endorsed by President Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.

By a voice vote, the committee approved the compromise extension of up to 10 weeks of jobless benefits starting April 1. This would apply to unemployed persons who have exhausted their benefits.

Those still receiving benefits could get up to an additional eight weeks of benefits, for a maximum of 63 weeks. The provision will cost about $2.3 billion.

Some Democrats had wanted more generous benefits and some Republicans had wanted less. But they stopped bickering and settled on the compromise.

Recession-relief bill first on Congressional agenda

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bipartisan Social Security bailout bill, after clearing the Ways and Means Committee, heads to the full House where a decision is expected on whether a higher retirement age should be part of the package.

But first the House was considering a $4.6 billion recession-relief bill, which some Democrats want to increase while some other lawmakers contend is too loaded down with regional "pork barrel" spending projects.

The $165 billion Social Security reform bill won approval in committee Wednesday night on a 32-3 vote, and full House passage is expected to come next week.

The bill, designed to get Social Security past its current crisis and wipe out a projected $1.9 trillion future deficit, includes a combination of payroll tax hikes, a curb on benefits, a levy on retirees' benefits and mandatory coverage for new federal workers.

Tax writers cleared the last obstacle in the measure when they agreed to phase in over three years a plan to change the way Medicare pays hospital bills. The change would set hospital fees in advance based on a patient's diagnosis.

The bailout bill closely follows the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. Its committee passage was praised as "an historic event" by Republican Rep. Barber B. Conable Jr. of New York, while the committee chairman, Democratic Rep. Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois, said it reflected a "peace pact" for the bill.

The committee accepted a provision to mix a 5 percent benefit cut for new retirees 25 years from now with a payroll tax increase in 2015. But Rostenkowski said that when it reaches the House floor, legislators will have a chance to vote on whether to raise the retirement age from 65 instead.

The recession-relief measure faced debate today, with House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. saying he hoped any additions to the bill would be small enough to avert a veto by President Reagan.

The measure includes money for projects such as repairing federal buildings, along with $1 billion for community development grants, and emergency shelter and food for those hardest hit by the recession.

"There is a lot of pork in here," complained Rep. Del Latta, R-Ohio. "It is not a national bill," said Rep. James Howard, D-N.J.

Panel wants documents on EPA official's contacts

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional panel is seeking all documents that passed between an Environmental Protection Agency official, who last year decided against regulating formaldehyde, and industry groups representing producers of the suspected cancer-causing chemical.

Assistant EPA administrator John A. Todhunter, who is responsible for controlling toxic chemicals, met with industry representatives at breakfast and dinner in the weeks before he decided not to restrict use of formaldehyde, according to government appointment books and participants.

Todhunter decided on Feb. 10, 1982, that existing scientific data was insufficient to justify immediate regulation of the widely used chemical that is found in products ranging from home insulation to diapers.

Todhunter's decision was criticized from environmentalists and some scientists who claimed it ignored laboratory evidence that the chemical causes cancer in rats and thus possibly in humans.

After an Associated Press report Wednesday about the dinner meetings, Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., chairman of the House Government Operations environment subcommittee, asked the EPA to hand over all letters, reports, telephone messages and other communications between Todhunter and four industry groups.

Two weeks before his decision, Todhunter, assistant administrator for pesticides and toxic waste, had dinner at a plush Washington restaurant with two industry representatives.

The dinner at the Prime Rib restaurant — on Jan. 26, 1982 — included Leonard J. Guarraia, lobbyist for the American Industrial Health Council, and William J. McCarville, an official of the Monsanto Co., a major formaldehyde manufacturer, according to the participants.

Also at the dinner were Donald Clay, EPA's director for the Office of Toxic Substances, and Rita Lavelle, who was fired last month as EPA assistant administrator for solid waste.

The dinner culminated a series of contacts — many of them outside working hours — between Todhunter and chemical industry representatives. These contacts, numbering about a dozen, date from Todhunter's arrival at EPA in mid-1981, according to his appointments calendar.

Todhunter said the off-hour meetings were proper because he never discussed specific chemicals under review by his office.

Queen Elizabeth II of Great Britain, with U.S. President Ronald Reagan, waves to wellwishers.

First hours in San Francisco eventful for Queen Elizabeth II

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II was feted at an exotic dinner, and booed by a handful of demonstrators during her first hours here, and she offered sympathy to California's governor for the fierce weather that has battered the state.

Savage Pacific storms dogged the British monarch in Southern California, but week sunshine broke through the clouds as she arrived in the north. Mayor Dianne Feinstein greeted the queen with a handshake as she stepped from Air Force Two onto a red carpet.

Apologizing for the weather, Ms. Feinstein quoted the queen as replying, "Oh, it doesn't matter. I'm so pleased to be here."

The queen later sent Gov. George Deukmejian a message saying, "Prince Philip and I have been very saddened by the loss of life and damage caused by the storm in California and we send our sincere sympathy to you and everyone in your state who has been affected," according to her press secretary Michael Shea.

The queen's 13-hour itinerary for today includes a civic reception followed by a limousine trip for lunch at Stanford University and a visit to Hewlett-Packard Co., and back again for a state dinner hosted by President Reagan.

The royal motorcade pulled up to the St. Francis hotel to cheers from 5,000 people hoping to see through lines of helmeted police. One man toted a 60-pound portrait of the queen crafted of jelly beans. About a dozen protesters chanted "England Out of Ireland Now."

Nodding and smiling to 700 spectators in the hotel's rosewood lobby, the queen and her party disappeared into their 46 rooms. The Presidential Suite, reserved for the queen, commands a stunning view of the city. Mrs. Reagan was in the London Suite.

Less than three hours later, they left unannounced for a private banquet with 60 people at the exclusive Trader Vic's restaurant, slipping in through a private entrance.

British tabloid cancels gossip column in response to queen's legal action

LONDON (AP) — Britain's best-selling tabloid The Sun bowed to precedent setting legal action by Queen Elizabeth II and announced today it had canceled a promised installment of palace gossip.

To all those readers who were looking forward to reading about Princess Diana, The Sun says, "We are very sorry." Its front-page story said, "But we think you will understand."

The Sun, read by 4 million Britons, conceded in an out-of-court settlement Wednesday that it had no right to print the disclosures of a 20-year-old former palace servant.

The paper will pay 4,000 pounds — about $6,000 — to the Newspaper Press Fund as well as Buckingham Palace's legal costs, which were believed to be several thousand dollars. The queen is patron of the press fund, which issues grants and pensions to newspaper workers.

The palace, which frequently has feuded with journalists but never before taken legal action, went to court on Feb. 22, one day after publication of the first installment of reminiscences of former palace kitchen worker Kevin Kelly.

Representatives of the queen obtained an injunction barring publication of the second installment, which was to have featured Princess Diana, the wife of Prince Charles.

Indian troops patrol Assam state

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Indian army troops vested with virtual martial law powers patrolled much of central Assam today in the boldest move yet to curb the bloodshed that has left nearly 1,400 people dead in the northeastern state.

"We have to be ruthless. We must tell them we mean business," Assam's newly elected chief minister, Hiteshwar Saikia, told an Indian news agency in Gauhati, the main Assamese city 330 miles northeast of Calcutta.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's central government Wednesday granted special powers to the army after a new outburst of violence left 40 people dead and nearly 500 injured.

Australian polls indicate landslide

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Bob Hawke, leader of the Australian Labor Party for less than a month, will rise with unprecedented speed to the prime minister's post if this Saturday's elections bear out opinion polls.

If Australia's 10 million voters choose as pollsters Wednesday said they would, Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser and his conservative, Liberal-National coalition face a landslide defeat.

Soviet carrier limps to port

WASHINGTON (AP) — The aircraft carrier Minsk, one of the Soviet Union's most powerful warships, limped home recently after more than three months in the Indian Ocean, U.S. intelligence sources say.

The 37,900-ton Minsk was seen to be leaking oil during a troubled voyage back to Vladivostok on the Soviet Siberian coast, said the sources, who spoke on condition they wouldn't be identified.

Romania losing special status

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is preparing to announce a suspension of Romania's preferential tariff treatment because the East European country is enforcing a law that restricts emigration, U.S. officials say.

The officials said diplomatic efforts to resolve differences between the two countries have not succeeded, and a formal White House announcement of the suspension is expected any day.

Guerrillas slay Irish policeman

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — IRA guerrillas ambushed and killed a policeman acting as a crossing guard as dozens of Catholic primary schoolchildren screamed and fled in tears, a police spokesman said.

Police Inspector Jim Boyd at police headquarters here said Constable Lindsay McCormack, 49, was shepherding the youngsters as part of his daily foot patrol in north Belfast when the guerrillas opened fire without warning.

The attackers jumped into a waiting car after the slaying.

West German joblessness may cost Kohl

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl, the frontrunner, risks losing some support in his election campaign after an expected announcement today that West Germany's unemployment rate has reached a new post-war high.

With the national election set for Sunday, the opposition Social Democrats were ready to seize on the unemployment figures as a late-campaign weapon against the incumbent Kohl and his Christian Democratic Party.

Unemployment reached a post-war high of 10.2 percent in January, and sources at the Federal Labor Office predicted the February rate would be close to 10.5 percent, with 2.5 million people out of work.

Since Kohl took office Oct. 1, joblessness has risen by 700,000. Social Democrat candidate Hans-Jochen Vogel has blamed the conservative fiscal policies of the Christian Democrats and their Free Democratic coalition partners for the rise.

Kohl in recent days has argued repeatedly that the increase in the jobless rate is slowing.

On Wednesday night, he tried to head off the effects of the joblessness announcement by telling a rally in Augsburg that the figures would show there has been an upswing in the West German construction industry.

Earlier Wednesday, government spokesman Diether Stolze told reporters in Bonn that the recession is bottoming out and that a revival of the economy on the way. He said industrial production and construction have experienced an upturn since Jan. 1.

Kohl's party slipped in a new public opinion poll published Wednesday, but the sampling indicated that his allies, the Free Democratic party, would win enough votes to return to Parliament.

In a survey of 2,000 voters taken two weeks ago, the Sample Institute of Hamburg found 43 percent supporting Kohl's conservative Christian Democrats and their Bavarian allies of the Christian Social Union while 42 percent favored the Social Democrats.

The survey showed 6 percent each favoring the Free Democrats and the anti-NATO Green Party.

The new poll conflicted with an Allensbach Institute survey released the day before which showed the conservatives with 50.4 percent to 37.3 percent for the Social Democrats, 6.3 percent for the Greens and 5.5 percent for the Free Democrats.

If the Free Democrats make it into Parliament, it will improve Kohl's chances of continuing in office. The small liberal party has pledged to support Kohl when members of the 497-seat Bundestag select the chancellor after Sunday's balloting.

Under the West German system, parties must receive at least 5 percent of the vote to gain seats in the Bundestag.

Meanwhile, the Greens filed a suit for slander against the general secretary of Kohl's Christian Democrats, Heiner Geissler, for implying that the environmentalist, anti-nuclear party was receiving money from East Germany.

Geissler, defending charges that his own party had accepted donations from large corporation, said, "All in all, I would rather receive a donation from a German firm than from Communist East Germany."

Reagan administration feels Kohl would allow missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials believe Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Christian Democratic Party will win in Sunday's West German elections, thus helping pave the way for deployment of new U.S. nuclear missiles.

Some officials fear a victory by Kohl's chief rival, Hans-Jochen Vogel of the Social Democratic Party, could provoke a costly delay in the missile installation, planned for later this year.

West Germany is scheduled to be one of the first European countries to install the U.S. cruise and Pershing II missiles as part of NATO's strategy for countering the threat from Soviet SS-20 missiles targeted on Europe.

While Kohl is firmly committed to the strategy, Vogel has suggested a review focusing on whether the United States has been sincere in efforts to negotiate an arms control agreement with the Soviet Union.

Senate may be tied up by filibusters on natural gas, Adelman

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate may be headed for a season of filibusters, with one nominee and one natural gas bill already targeted for talk by liberal Democrats. There may be more, because nowadays, everybody gets into the act that used to be the primary weapon of Southern conservatives bent on blocking civil rights bills.

Everybody includes even some senators who say they dislike the tactic.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., is one of them, and he is threatening to organize a filibuster against Kenneth Adelman's nomination to be arms control director.

"I have never in my life filibustered," Tsongas said. "I have a disdain for the process. But I am not sure I have a choice."

Tsongas and other foes of the nomination say Adelman is not qualified for the top arms control job. President Reagan says he is, and promises a fight.

The nomination is due for Senate action beginning in mid-March. It may take a while.

An Analysis

THE FOREIGN RELATIONS Committee sent it to the floor for a vote with a formal recommendation that it be rejected. Supporters didn't have the votes to recommend approval, and opponents lacked the strength to keep the nomination on the committee shelf. So they compromised and agreed to send it to the full Senate.

Reagan probably can win approval there. Even opponents acknowledge that. "The president will probably get his nominee," said Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D. Pressler said he wouldn't vote to end a filibuster, but didn't know whether he would join one. He said that "depends on the creativity of the filibuster and how it's formed."

That is a novel guideline. Filibusters are not creative; they are the last Senate weapon available to a minority seeking to block action that otherwise seems assured. What they create is delay.

It takes 60 votes to stop one, whereas a majority of the senators on hand for a vote is enough to pass on legislation or nominations.

THERE ALSO IS a filibuster threat pending against Reagan's proposal to remove all price controls on natural gas by 1986, a step he said would assure abundant supplies at reasonable prices.

That issue has been around the filibuster track before. Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said he'd take it there again. Metzenbaum said at least 10 and perhaps 20 colleagues would join him in trying to talk the gas decontrol proposal to death.

When President Carter proposed decontrol in 1977, Metzenbaum led a filibuster to block it. He said that one "will be like a Sunday school picnic" compared with the one he envisions against Reagan.

Metzenbaum does a lot of that. With adroit use of Senate rules and a determination to delay, he has mastered the lonely art of blocking — or stalling action on bills he considers to be special interest measures.

NEAR THE END of the last session of Congress, he wound up on the other side of the filibuster tactic. He proposed an amendment to require that steel and cement used in federal highway projects be American-made. Sen. John Chaffee, R-R.I., called it a supreme irony, for he said the amendment was "the ultimate in special-interest legislation." He launched a filibuster, but it didn't last long. Before the day was out the amendment was rejected.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is another master of the rule book and hence the filibuster. He waged one against the administration's gasoline tax increase and tied up the Senate almost until Christmas.

Now he is hinting he might filibuster against the proposed Social Security financial overhaul that is supposed to keep the system solvent. He calls it a monstrosity.

Seattle's Chinatown tense after killings

Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — Tension hangs over Chinatown like a raincloud before a storm in the aftermath of the recent killing of 13 Chinese at the Wah Mee club. Rumors swirl out of control that young Chinese street immigrants have been running roughshod over members of the community.

But nothing is certain, except the tension.

The 13 Chinese were all associated with the Bing Kung Tong, one of the largest, oldest tongs on the West Coast. A tong is a fraternal organization to which members are invited to join. In family associations, only family members can belong.

The two suspects in custody for the grisly murders, Kwan "Willie" Mak and Benjamin Ng, reportedly were associated with the Hop Sing Tong. The Hop Sing Tong has drawn younger members in recent years, many of them immigrants from Hong Kong. Both tongs reportedly have 300 to 400 members, although no one can, or will, say for sure.

The relationships between the tongs and their importance in the community are a Chinese puzzle. Secrecy still shrouds their activities. When Bing Kung held its national convention here last summer, the notes of the meeting were destroyed before the convention was over.

The tongs and family organizations have been in America since the Chinese immigrated in the 1850s during the California Gold Rush.

Opening lead: Jack of ♠ South made a most unusual play to the first trick. But it proved to be vital to a successful campaign.

A successful barrage can create bidding problems, but North-South coped well here. After South elected not to leave the decision of whether to double four spades or bid on to his partner, North decided that his three aces made slam a reasonable proposition.

West led the jack of spades, and declarer was faced with a problem at the very first trick – should he discard a club or a diamond from hand? Since declarer was not sure which suit he could spare, he made a rather strange decision – he ruffed dummy's ace!

Declarer cashed the ace of hearts, and when East showed out, declarer opted to give West his trump trick. If West led another spade, declarer could discard a minor suit in dummy while ruffing in his hand. He would then set up a long card in that minor suit by ruffing the third round in dummy, which would enable him to obtain a discard for the loser in the other minor.

So West chose to exit with a diamond, but that, too, was fatal. It ran to declarer's jack and, when the suit divided evenly, a club was discarded from dummy on the thirteenth diamond, and the slam was home.

Note that the slam fails if declarer discards a minor suit card on the ace of spades. When West wins the king of trumps, he can exit in that minor. Declarer won't lose a trick in that suit, but he will have to concede the setting trick in the other minor.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Your horoscope

Friday, March 4, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This was the birthdate of famed gridiron coach Knute Rockne, pitcher Dazzy Vance and artist Sir Henry Raeburn. Also sharing your birthday: actress Paula Prentiss, Theodore (Dr. Seuss) Geisel and singer Barbara McNair. Do not lose your enthusiasm when a special project lags behind schedule. You will meet the deadline on time and reap rich rewards for your persistence. Get in touch with old friends. You need to take the initiative in finding new romantic and business opportunities. Curb an urge to overprotect a child who is just beginning to spread his or her wings. Those in sales will have a banner year.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): This can be a period of great achievement if you apply yourself. Interruptions make it hard to concentrate. Consider new business ideas. Chance encounters prove lucky. Romantic relationship undergoes change.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Discuss finances even if it makes you uncomfortable. You dare not postpone it any longer. The evening may feature a happy surprise. Two old friends become romantically involved. Share your delight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Look your best today. Someone who is watching could help your career. A financial decision lifts a heavy load from your shoulders. Control your jealousy where romance is concerned.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A face-to-face meeting is essential if you are to reach an understanding today. Business considerations could influence your weekend social plans. Do not smother a new friend with your attention.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Get in touch with your feelings. You may be overlooking a special talent that could earn you more money. A change of scene helps revitalize romance. Be attentive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be diplomatic when discussing a sensitive subject with someone you must rely on in the future. A co-worker changes her mind and endorses your ideas for change. Enter contests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Postpone making a financial decision until more information is available. If you are honest, you triumph. Employment affairs shift in your favor. Ask friends to share the expense of a weekend party.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Handle family investments personally so that you can keep better track of your funds. Competition makes romance lively. You gain control of a partnership by asserting your rights.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If you can help a friend or relative without breaking the rules, do so. Foes succumb to pressure. Parents have a frank discussion with their children and clear the air.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make phone calls. You will be cheered by what you hear. Stop worrying about a business matter. An old friend is watching out for your interests. Concentrate on a family project.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A negative attitude is destructive. Think positive! The arrival of an old friend helps you solve a mystery. Special privileges are extended to you in return for past favors.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Avoid leveling criticism behind someone's back. Do it when he/she can respond directly. An old-fashioned romance brings you the greatest happiness. Relax with new friends this evening.

Couple finally marries after 26 years

AUSTIN (AP) — Virginia didn't think of Walt much, over those 23 years of marriage and children and tangled divorce proceedings. Except when she danced. The boyfriend of her youth had loved to dance. Her husband did not.

Walt did not think of Virginia terribly often, during his 23 years of marriage and children and divorce. Except when he skimmed through his high school yearbook and saw her picture. "Now there," he would say, "is one of the nicest girls I ever knew."

Theirs is a story of two young sweethearts who reached across the country and 26 years of silence to find each other again, beginning a trek that would lead them to Austin.

It was Walt's former wife who suggested he call their high school friend. Virginia was living in Dallas, working two jobs and spending an unpleasant amount of time in divorce court. At 10:30 on an April night, she answered the phone to hear a voice unfamiliar after 26 years.

"I am a deputy sheriff in Wyoming," the deep voice said. She tensed. "I have a suit against you for breach of promise."

"In 1948," the voice continued, "you promised to marry me. It's 1976 and I'm not married and you're not married." Virginia was not thinking clearly. "Who is this?" she asked.

It was Walt's turn to be taken aback. "How many men,' he asked,"did you promise to marry in 1948?"

It was two months before they saw each other; a year before that youthful promise was fulfiled and the couple became Virginia and Walt Moore.

That first night on the phone, the conversation went back and forth for 90 minutes. "I will write you a letter," Walt told her. "But if I don't hear from you first I will never mail it." She promptly sat down and wrote a 20-page letter. "I just spilled my whole life out, I think," she said. "I finally had somebody who would cry and listen to me."

They met in high school in a small Kansas town. In 1948, the 20-year-olds talked about marriage. But Virginia, the runner-up for Miss Kansas, was going to pursue a modeling career, while he was going into the Air Force. And they both agreed to wait three years.

"If we still feel the same and things are still the same," they told each other, "then we'll talk about getting married."

When those three years were finished, they were both married: Walt to a neighborhood girl, Virginia to the man who designed the clothes she modeled. He raised four children and worked alternately as a coach, sporting goods representative and deputy sheriff. She spent 23 years raising three children and modeling in Dallas. Their marriages broke up within a month of each other.

All this information was exchanged during the two months before Virginia flew to Wyoming for a 10-day reunion. "We talked over the phone about how difficult it was going to be to greet each other after 26 years. We agreed that what we would do was to touch hands," Walt said.

He had no problem recognizing his former sweetheart.

"She was still a fashion model," Walt said. "We don't get many of those in Cody, Wyo. I reached out my hands as we had planned. She came right through my hands and threw her arms around me. I thought, 'Wow, this poor woman is in love already.' Actually, she wasn't in love. Just airsick."

After that bumpy beginning, the reunion was more natural than either could have hoped.

"It just seemed like there wasn't any gap after 26 years," he said. "We seemed to be able to pick up exactly where it was before."

nation in brief

Earthquake risk great in Missouri

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The New Madrid Fault in southeastern Missouri poses the nation's greatest earthquake risk because 12.6 million people live in the potentially affected area, a new study says.

By comparison, only about 4 million people would receive the same amount of damage if the San Francisco earthquake of 1906 were to recur, according to the 200-page report released Wednesday by the U.S. Geological Survey.

The report said a quake centered in New Madrid, Mo., in 1811, was so powerful it tore apart stone houses in St. Louis, knocked chimneys off homes in Cincinnati and dumped people out of bed in Pittsburgh.

Court upholds slavery convictions

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal appeals court upheld slavery convictions against two migrant farm chiefs and reinstated the conviction of a third man for abuse that caused a death.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the convictions of John Harris and Dennis Warren on Wednesday and reinstated the conviction of Richard Warren.

Witnesses testified that migrant workers at the Wilson, N.C., farm were beaten with hoses, guarded at night, denied medical aid and much of their pay and were forced to work when ill. Migrant worker Robert Anderson died after being forced to work while sick.

Remains of missing child finally found

SOUTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (AP) — Eight years after their 5-year-old son disappeared, John and Joice Foreman have buried the child's remains, which were found in the home of their next-door neighbor.

H. Ronald Hawksley, a retired police detective who spent seven years looking for Jason, praised the Foremans at the burial Wednesday for their strength during their ordeal.

Police found Jason's remains while investigating the Foremans' neighbor, Michael Woodmansee, in an attempt to strangle a 14-year-old newspaper carrier.

Woodmansee, 24, was sentenced to 40 years in prison after pleading guilty to a reduced charge of second-degree murder.

Illinois governor wants taxes raised

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Gov. James R. Thompson has asked legislators to raise taxes to enable Illinois to pay off $650 million in debts it incurred while trying to stave off insolvency.

Thompson called his own $13.9 billion proposed budget "unacceptable" as he spoke to a joint session of the General Assembly on Wednesday.

Clark says he's happy to be alive

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Barney Clark says he's happy to be alive and that his three-month-old plastic heart is a success as doctors looked ahead to another artificial heart implant — conceivably "within a month."

Doctors at the University of Utah Medical Center released a videotape Wednesday in which Clark said his air-driven heart performs well and is comfortable.

"All in all, it has been a pleasure to be able to help people," said Clark, who made medical history when he received the world's first permanent artificial heart Dec. 2.

Dr. William DeVries, who performed the implant operation, played the videotape for reporters, then said he expects a second person to receive another Utah Heart in the next few months.

Dr. Lyle Joyce, who assisted in Clark's surgery, said a second implant could be performed "within a month if the need arose."

Before another implant can be performed, DeVries said, a patient would have to be chosen and permission for the operation obtained from the university's Institutional Review Board and the federal Food and Drug Administration.

Doctors also must study this first implant "so the next patient has the benefit of everything we've learned," DeVries said.

In a 2½-minute interview taped Tuesday night, Clark, in fair condition, was asked by DeVries what he might say to future artificial heart patients.

"Well, I would tell them that it's worth it if the alternative is they either die or they have it done," Clark said.

The 62-year-old retired dentist from the Seattle area said his new heart "doesn't bother me at all, even when I'm awake, it doesn't."

Clark, dressed in pajamas and a robe, remained mostly expressionless and spoke haltingly in a quiet, gravelly voice. His heart's drive unit could be heard in the background, softly clicking and whirring.

Although seated in a chair, Clark frequently paused to catch his breath. He said he's been bothered by shortness of breath from severe emphysema, but "I think it's getting a little better."

Shooting spree kills six in Alaska

MCCARTHY, Alaska (AP) — Bloodstains on hard-packed snow marred the beauty of the Wrangell Mountains, as horrified residents tried to make sense of a shooting spree that left six people dead — about one third of this isolated town's population.

Charged with six counts of murder Wednesday was Louis D. Hastings, 39, an unemployed computer programmer described by neighbors as "a loner" who had been regarded as "a decent enough human being."

"It would have never have crossed anyone's mind that this kind of thing could have happened here," said Rick Kenyon, one of the residents of this former mining town. "I'm sure he didn't even know some of these people."

"I never saw anything that would have brought this on," said Lynn Ellis, the air taxi pilot who flies the mail to McCarthy from Glennallen, 100 miles to the northwest. "He was a decent enough human being."

The shootings occurred Tuesday, mail day in McCarthy — ordinarily a festive occasion when the area's fewer than 20 residents gather to exchange news and await Ellis' plane.

Before the day was over, six were dead, two more were wounded and Hastings had been jailed.

Hastings "comes every mail day," said Kenyon, who lives several miles downstream on the other side of the Kennicott River. "But he didn't talk much. He's kind of a loner."

Kenyon said Hastings had been an off-and-on resident of the McCarthy area for about a year.

Maxine Edwards was gunned down as she went to pick up her mail, Kenyon said.

"I was going to mail, but Maxine stopped by and said she'd get it," said Kenyon. She and her husband, Jim, lived at the other end of a landing strip shared with the Kenyons.

Mrs. Edwards' body was found in a home just off the airstrip owned by Les and Flo Haglund, who took care of the mail as a community service. Their house, about 50 yards back in the trees, was the hub of what social life there was in the town at the foot of Kennicott Glacier.

With the body of one of the victims lying nearby, an unidentified Alaska State Trooper checks his notes Wednesday during the investigation of a bloody shooting at the old mining town of McCarthy in which six died and two were wounded.

Two bodies that have not yet been identified were found with Mrs. Edwards', said Capt. Jim Lansbery, the Alaska State Trooper in charge of the investigation.

"The bodies had been moved and stacked up in a bedroom," he said. "There was a lot of shooting that went on in the house. There were a lot of bullets sprayed around."

Power blackout paralyzes Boston's financial district

BOSTON (AP) — A massive power blackout triggered by a manhole blast and a fire paralyzed Boston's financial district and waterfront for a second day today, as crews laid surface cables to try to restore power.

Fifteen crews worked through the rainy night to lay 1,400 feet of surface cable to try to restore service by late afternoon to 6,500 Boston Edison customers, primarily businesses.

The city decided against closing down the usually congested financial district during repairs, with individual firms deciding whether to open for business, said John Vitagliano, Boston's traffic commissioner.

"We feel that shutting off the area is not necessary," Vitagliano said Wednesday night after a meeting of the municipal public safety committee. "We feel that should be a determination that should be left to the individual."

The flames, which shot 10 feet out of a manhole at Milk and Pearl streets, blacked out Boston's major banks, investment houses and federal courthouse, knocked out traffic lights at 36 intersections, cut power to computers and restaurant freezers, trapped people in elevators and forced hundreds of thousands to leave early.

Freeing natural gas

President Reagan's call for the decontrol of natural gas prices is right on target and, if his bill was enacted, would benefit both consumers and gas companies.

It isn't likely to come about anytime soon, though. Midland petroleum officials even expressed fears recently the Congress might move this session to enact a Windfall Profits-style tax on natural gas. Those officials are working to prevent that occurrence.

But any congressman who takes the time to look at what decontrol has done to domestic oil prices and production would be foolish to support such a counterproductive measure as a tax on gas producers. After decontrol of oil, prices dropped and domestic production increased.

The same result would be experienced, we believe, if natural gas controls were lifted. Between 1954 and 1978 wellhead prices were controlled by the federal government for gas sold across state lines. Since 1978 the federal government has been fixing the price of gas in Texas and other producer states. What has occurred has been rising prices and more bureaucratic entanglement than gas companies want or need.

It's difficult to comprehend why something as attractive and fulfilling as the freemarket system will not be allowed by politicians to work. If free from controls, gas companies can explore for and bring onto the market additional supplies which will drive down the price of today's natural gas. Competition will make the marketplace more abundant and fair.

At a news conference Monday, Secretary of Energy Donald P. Hodel stressed that under Reagan's bill consumers would benefit and producers would be saddled with slightly higher costs. That's understandable but it's also important to note that the controlled marketplace is working to the disadvantage of everyone.

It's time to follow oil's lead and get the government off the backs of natural gas producers.

Support appreciated

Queen Elizabeth II did not have to thank the United States for supporting Britain in its war to save the Falkland Islands. It is a matter of traditional principle in Washington to support self-determination, just as it was a matter of traditional principle in London not to take the invasion of the Falkland Islands lying down.

But Queen Elizabeth thanked us anyway, twice.

The first occasion was when President Reagan visited Buckingham Palace last year. Her Royal Highness expressed gratitude to the president in person. She repeated her nation's thankfulness in Los Angeles the other day, saying:

"We in Britain were called upon last year to defend the principle of self-determination in the Falkland Islands.

"The support of your government and the American people touched us deeply and demonstrated to the world that our close relationship is based on our shared commitment to the same values."

It was a gracious and in truth a queenly gesture for which all Americans will thank Queen Elizabeth. Her reference to a "shared commitment" to self-determination reminds us of the strong tie that binds our two nations.

Another View:

The insanity defense

The American Bar Association recently adopted a resolution recommending restricting or narrowing insanity defense in criminal trials. It is measured and prudent compared to proposals to abolish insanity pleas that Congress and at least 21 state legislatures are considering.

The clamor for doing away with insanity defenses arose out of the John W. Hinckley case. A Washington jury found him not guilty in the attempted assassination of President Reagan, in which Mr. Reagan and three other men were wounded. Instead of going to prison, Hinckley has been confined at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, a mental institution, and could be released in the future.

The ABA recommends that individuals who are able to distinguish between right and wrong and thus are aware of the wrongfulness of their act should be held criminally responsible and should not be able to plead insanity. The recommendation would remove the test of volition from the insanity defense.

The law in the District of Columbia and most other states allows for a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity for a defendent who knew he was doing wrong but could not control his behavior.

That was Hinckley's defense: that he should be found not guilty even though he knew he was doing wrong because mental illness prevented him from controlling his criminal behavior. After the verdict, the Justice Department contended that the jury was confused by the conflicting testimony of defense and prosecution psychiatrists over whether Hinckley had the ability to control himself.

(If Hinckley had been tried in Pennsylvania on state, rather than federal charges, the test of his insanity defense would have been whether he understood the nature of his act and whether he could distinguish between right and wrong. Pennsylvania and some other states have retained the time-tested M'Naghten Rule that does not allow for an insanity defense based on a determination that a defendent could not control his behavior.)

A second ABA recommendation dealt with the burden of proof in insanity cases. Federal practice and 24 states now require the prosecution to prove a defendant's sanity "beyond a reasonable doubt," while 27 states place the burden of proving insanity on the defendant with most setting "a preponderance of the evidence" as the standard.

The ABA proposed easing the prosecution's burden in federal courts and in the states that permit the volition test as a defense. It recommended that defendants be required to prove insanity by a preponderance of evidence.

The American Psychiatric Association has taken a position similar to the ABA, contending that psychiatry does not possess the scientific evidence to determine whether or not a person has the capacity to control his or her impluses.

The effect of the ABA recommendations probably would be to reduce the number defendents raising an insanity defense. But they would not prevent severly mentally ill criminals from being confined in mental hospitals rather than prisons or from being released at some point. Nor should they. What they would do is prevent more Hinckley verdicts and, thus, set standards that are more reasonable than simply not allowing for insanity as a defense at all.

ART BUCHWALD

'Our Town' taking on an EPA twist

STAGE MANAGER: The name of the town is Seven Corners. It's a nice town, you know what I mean? Nobody remarkable ever comes out of it as far as we know. We're just plain simple folk here and we can't claim to be nothing more than just another town along Route 16.

Art Buchwald

I better show you around a bit. That nice white house for sale on the corner belongs to the Jorgensons. It's a real good buy if you don't mind living over a landfill of dioxin. Oh, I forgot to tell you. About 10 years ago a fellow came through and sprayed oil mixed with dioxin on the roads to settle the dust. The dioxin's all over the place. That's why you see so many "For Sale" signs on people's lawns.

Over there is the school, and right behind it is where some chemical company dumped all its PCB in those big oil drums. The chemical company's out of business, and the stuff is now seeping into the playground. Funny, you don't ever see any kids playing there any more.

Well, as I said, it's just about morning. Here's the mayor. How's it going, Charley?

MAYOR: Not too good. I been calling the EPA for two weeks trying to find out what they're going to do about all our hazardous waste. They claim they still have no idea whether our soil samples are bad for human health or not. Even if they find the stuff is unsafe, they said they can't do anything about cleaning the waste up until they do a study. They also said if their study shows we got a problem, their first concern is to find the chemical company and make a deal with them to pay for the cleanup.

STAGE MANAGER: Well, have a nice day, Mayor. Here comes Doc Gibbs. You look kind of peaked, Doc.

DOC: I never saw so many sick people in a town in my life. Them that isn't sick is scared silly they'll get sick. I haven't slept in months.

STAGE MANAGER: What's going on at the hospital?

DOC: Mrs. Henigan gave birth last night to a premature baby. That's the 14th premature baby I've delivered this year. By the way, if you're still using well water, be sure and boil it before you let any of your family drink it.

STAGE MANAGER: Thanks for the tip, Doc. Fellow over there is Tad Jones. He's a farmer and has 100 acres of grazing land right next to the Cloverleaf Acid Pit. You look down in the dumps, Tad. What's up?

TAD: Five of my cows died last night.

STAGE MANAGER: What happened?

TAD: I don't know. They just keeled over and died, like my dog did last week. I'm on my way to the newspaper to put my farm up for sale, if anyone's stupid enough to buy it.

STAGE MANAGER: Good luck, Tad. Here comes the editor of the newspaper, Hiram Bonifal. Hiram knows everything going on in our town. What's the big news today, Hiram?

HIRAM: I just talked to the governor about our pollution problem. He says he'd like to help out, but he doesn't have enough money to tidy up every town in the state. He said the feds have a Superfund just for cleaning up places like ours and we ought to talk to Washington.

STAGE MANAGER: Well, you can't say the governor doesn't have a good sense of humor. You going to write another editorial about the sludge?

HIRAM: I'm too busy talking to reporters from out of town, who keep saying they're going to put Seven Corners on the map.

STAGE MANAGER: Excuse me, Hiram, I want to have a word with Sam Peters. (To audience) Sam's our undertaker, and I guess he's about the busiest man in town. Sam, can I have a word with you?

SAM: Sorry, I don't have time.

STAGE MANAGER: Don't let me stop you, Sam. Well, it's getting on to bedtime. Most of the folks are tucked in for the night after another uneventful day. Like I said, nothing much ever happens in Seven Corners. If it wasn't for the lead in the river which killed all the fish, Seven Corners would still be a real fine place to live.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Slick maneuver frees oil companies

WASHINGTON — One of the federal laws most detested by the oil consortiums is the one that requires them to report details of their financial dealings to the Energy Information Administration. In fact, the oil companies fought the reporting law all the way to the Supreme Court — and lost.

Jack Anderson

But now the Reagan administration has overruled the Supreme Court, in effect, by a simple ruse: It has cut off funds for the office that collects the financial information from the oil companies. No money, no way to enforce the law.

The legality of this slick maneuver has been questioned by the staff of the House Energy and Commerce Committee. A confidential memo to the committee chairman, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., minces no words.

"The administration appears to be at it again," the memo says, "doing favors for its oil industry friends at the expense of the consumer and, incidentally, breaking the law in the process."

So what if the financial reporting law is subverted? So this: The Financial Reporting System is "the government's only comprehensive and consistent source of financial information on the major oil companies," the memo notes.

It adds: "If the administration is successful in illegally eliminating the FRS, it will be much more difficult for the Congress to establish a sound energy policy, because it will lack major and objective information on the major oil companies."

Yet EIA Administrator J. Erich Evered recently admitted to Congress that he cannot comply with the reporting law because the Office of Management and Budget did not allocate enough money for it.

Since it began gathering information in 1977, the Financial Reporting System has provided Congress and the public with important data on the oil industry's investments and revenue trends. For example:

— The FRS showed that oil companies pay minimal taxes and that they pay more taxes to foreign governments than to Uncle Sam.

— The FRS disclosed that Big Oil, having persuaded Congress that it needed tax breaks for development and exploration, actually spent millions on mergers and corporate acquisitions — from copper mines to department stores. These did nothing to enhance the nation's energy production.

— As the only source of industry data that uses consistent definitions, the FRS permits reliable comparisons between oil companies to be made and thus presents a coherent picture of the industry's policies.

— By keeping track of just where the oil industry is concentrating its expenditures, the staff memo notes, the FRS makes it possible for Congress to determine "whether companies are engaging in anti-competitive practices such as subsidizing marketing activities with production profits."

If the FRS is allowed to lapse — or is "suddenly and needlessly trashed," in the committee staff's words — valuable continuity will be lost and the federal government will be seriously handicapped in dealing with future energy crises.

Yet the staff concludes that "when an administration chooses to serve the interests of its powerful friends by simply refusing to enforce the law, there is very little that Congress can do directly to compel action."

Footnote: Dingell's staff claimed that Energy Department general counsel R. Tenney Johnson had refused to sanctify the administration's decision to kill the FRS with an approving legal opinion. As a result, he "has been asked to resign," the staff memo claims. But Johnson denied any pressure on him, and told my associate Peter Grant he agrees that FRS need not be funded. He did acknowledge that some administration officials had wanted a stronger opinion than the one he gave them.

IMPOUNDED EXOTICA: The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has an inventory problem. It has accumulated perhaps $5 million worth of items made from species that are on either the endangered or restricted list. Like a pair of cheetah-lined slippers, a leopard coat, a polar-bear rug, several tons of walrus tusks, and a snuffbox made from a helmeted horned bill (a type of large bird).

The stuff was confiscated over the last few years and is gathering dust in various agency warehouses. Some items were palmed off on museums, but most are not the kind of things a museum director would want.

Recently, Fish and Wildlife auctioned off $250,000 worth of exotic but not endangered species trinkets, including an armadillo guitar, some python shoes and 36 elephant-hide beer mugs. These were seized because they arrived in the country without proper documents. Agency officials don't like the idea of a similar sale of items made from endangered species, it might encourage the very attitude toward such products that they're trying to discourage.

POLITICAL POTPOURRI: The Democrats have been trying to document the reports of President Reagan's less-than-grueling workday as ammunition against his expected re-election campaign next year. Former Reagan aides have confirmed for them that the president puts in about four hours at his desk, then rests for a couple of hours before a usually brief appearance at some evening function.

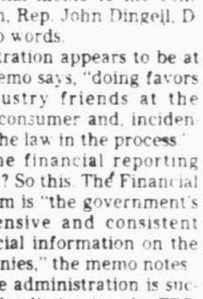
GEORGE F. WILL

Germany never distant from danger

WASHINGTON — Perhaps you remember freshman year in college, dozing through a Christ-to-Khrushchev survey course on Western history, when suddenly Prof. Whatwashisname mentioned the Peace of Westphalia and a groan rose from the soles of your penny loafers: Another damned date to memorize.



George F. Will

Why disturb the dust on such memories? Because Sunday's elections in Germany are among the most important in postwar Europe, and Germany's past is always tangled up in the present.

The Peace of Westphalia (1648, ended the Thirty Years War) ratified the existence of more than 300 sovereign German principalities. That suited the princes, and the national interest of Germany's rivals. But it retarded the evolution of a mature German nationalism. France and Britain were nations in the 1400s; the United States was a nation in the 1700s; Germany was not a nation until the second half of the 19th century. Today German nationalism, always problematic, is a force on the left, and is associated with neutralism — the escape from history and geography.

Most Germans do not think constantly about — or vote in consequence of — the proposed deployment of modernized intermediate-range missiles. But the Social Democratic Party under Hans-Jochen Vogel has moved radically leftward, partly pulled by competition with the Greens, partly by latent inclination. (Three decades ago the SPD opposed rearmament and the European Defense Community.) The SPD now opposes deployment by NATO of missiles to counter the Soviet SS-20s — a deployment first urged upon NATO by the last SPD chancellor, Helmut Schmidt.

It is unlikely that the SPD could do well enough for Vogel to govern other than in coalition with the Greens, who would deepen the SPD's neutralist predisposition. With some SDP members now talking about "security partnership" with Moscow, Moscow would seize upon a SPD-Green victory to connect nationalism and neutralism. Moscow would offer some form of cosmetic "reunification" of Germany in exchange for movement toward the left's fantasy of Germany-as-Switzerland. Even if Chancellor Helmut Kohl wins, one thing has been changed, radically and perhaps irrevocably, and one substantial danger will remain.

What has changed is the SPD. Schmidt held it to what can be called Bevinism, named for Ernest Bevin, foreign secretary in Britain's postwar Labor government. Bevin was a fiercely anti-Soviet socialist. (He favored using armor to break the Berlin blockade.) A decisive event in the growth of postwar German democracy was the SPD's adoption of the Godesberg platform in 1959. In it, the party formally disavowed its Marxist past and class orientation, put aside dogmatic anti-military doctrines and endorsed socialism compatible with "free enterprise and free competition."

But the current campaign has been a kind of anti-Godesberg, in the sense that the party of the left among the two natural governing parties has broken with the central tenets of Germany's postwar consensus. Those tenets are that modern Germany's identity is indissolubly linked to the West, and that German nationalism can find full expression within the transnational purposes of the NATO alliance.

Today the SPD is within striking distance of power that it would use to frustrate the most important decision NATO has made in a generation. Doing so would have the perverse consequence of strengthening the "peace" movement by making arms-control talks pointless. Why would Moscow negotiate about limits if NATO can not consummate deployment decisions?

If Kohl wins, extra-parliamentary extremism may follow. With an impertinence that reflects its growing contempt for Western Europe, Moscow, in a German-language broadcast, has warned Germans that Kohl's election would mean social disturbances. Imagine, say, 200,000 persons occupying the sites where the missiles are to be deployed beginning late this year. That is a tiny fraction of a nation of 62 million, where polls indicate a high level of affection and respect for America. But the media projection of the resulting riots and casualties would test Germany's composure, and would have an unpredictable effect on U.S. opinion.

Today many Europeans, and especially Germans, are preoccupied with the destructiveness of modern weapons. Thus, it is well to remember that in the war that ended with the Peace of Westphalia, Germany lost 35 percent of its population. Bohemia's population fell from 3 million to 780,000, and 30,000 of 35,000 villages were destroyed. By 1641, Wurtemberg's population had fallen from 400,000 to 48,000. This was at a time when people had to be killed one at a time, often with muscle power.

Today as then, Germany's inescapable fate is to be the cockpit of European history and never distant from danger.

Ozzy Osbourne pledges decency at concert in letter to Peoria officials

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Rock musician Ozzy Osbourne, notorious for biting off the heads of live animals during his act, has promised city officials he'll behave during his scheduled March 16 concert here.

Osbourne's planned concert has stirred protests, but he is expected to send a letter to Peoria Civic Center manager Harold Hansen this week to pledge decency, Hansen said Wednesday.

Osbourne

The letter, Hansen said, will guarantee that Osbourne, whose shoulder-length hair has been reduced to a crew cut, will do nothing more than sing and play.

"They (Osbourne's management) have been very willing to cooperate," Hansen said.

Osbourne is scheduled to appear in Odessa, Texas, on March 8.

PARIS (AP) — Isabelle Turpault, Miss France of 1983, is refusing to give up her crown and has denied ever being photographed "semi-nude, in transparent lingerie" in violation of contest rules.

The Miss France Committee announced it wants to reassign the title to runner-up Frederique Leroy, 19, because of the alleged photo of Miss Turpault.

But the 19-year-old Miss Turpault said Wednesday she is "delighted to be Miss France and I intend to remain so.

"I want to make clear that I have never posed nude in a magazine and that no photograph of me semi-nude has been published."

Miss Turpault, a former Miss Paris, said the Miss France Committee was "founded in 1920 and has rules dating from 1960, which don't seen very relevant today."

Niven

LONDON (AP) — Actor David Niven is suffering from a muscle disease which has impaired his speech and partially paralyzed his left hand, his wife says.

"He can still speak, but not very well, and he has lost some of the use of his left hand," his wife Hjordis said Wednesday. She refused to name Niven's disease, saying only "it is for David really to say what the trouble is."

Rumors about Niven's failing health have circulated and been denied for months.

The Oscar-winning actor, who observed his 73rd birthday Tuesday, arrived at London's private Wellington Hospital in St. John's Wood at the end of last week from his home in Gstaad, Switzerland.

Byrne

CHICAGO (AP) — Nearly 200 die-hard supporters shouting "Write in Jane" greeted Mayor Jane Byrne as she returned to the Windy City after a California vacation.

Mrs. Byrne was defeated in the city's Democratic primary last week, derailing her bid for a second term.

Her troubles continued after her return to the city Tuesday. When she tried to address the crowd at O'Hare International Airport, the loudspeaker provided by an airline would not work.

Although her greeters seemed unwilling to accept Mrs. Byrne's defeat to U.S. Rep. Harold Washington in the primary, the 48-year-old mayor said she has no plans for a write-in campaign in the April 12 general election.

Burger King fires opening salvo in new burger war

MIAMI (AP) — Burger King, the nation's No. 2 hamburger chain, returns to the airwaves tonight with a new comparative advertising campaign that already has its fast-food competitors steamed.

Undaunted by lawsuits generated by its last ad venture, the new TV commercials once again concentrate on the claim that people prefer the taste of Burger King hamburgers because they are broiled.

McDonald's, the firm's chief competitor, fries its burgers.

Dubbed project BIB for Broiled is Better, the new campaign cost the Miami-based chain at least $10 million and opens in some markets tonight and Friday night, Burger King officials said.

The campaign includes five commercials, all of which cite a new, company-sponsored survey of 1,200 people purporting to show that Burger King hamburgers are preferred over McDonald's.

Burger King asked them: "Do you prefer fried hamburgers or flame-broiled hamburgers in a fast-food restaurant?"

The campaign uses some of the same people who appeared in the fall ads and has the same light tone.

One ad goes like this:

"At this time, Burger King would like to suggest that everybody from McDonald's leave the room...." a counter worker tells the audience. "In a coast-to-coast opinion poll, flame-broiling beat frying by nearly three-to-one. Burger King flame-broils.

"OK. Everybody from McDonald's can come back in now. Break it to them (McDonald's) gently."

McDonald's and Wendy's International, the nation's No. 1 and No 3 hamburger chains respectively, call their hamburgers "grilled" rather than "fried."

"Frying is cooking on a flat metal surface in fat or oil," said Craig. "That's what they do."

Government donates buildings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government has donated two vacant buildings, southeast of the Washington Monument and adjacent to the national Mall, for a $30 million to $40 million museum in memory of Jewish and other Holocaust victims, officials said.

"My hope is that whoever will enter this museum will leave it a different person," said Elie Wiesel, chairman of the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Council, an independent federal agency set up by Congress in 1980 to raise private funds to create the memorial museum.

"Our hope is to create a living museum, not stones, but experiences, memorials, ideas, to keep the past alive...for the sake of future generations," said Wiesel, a survivor of Auschwitz and Buchenwald. He is now a Boston University professor.

Adoption charge reduced

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Hoping to get more people to adopt a wild horse and cut down the number of untamed animals roaming public lands, the federal government is reducing the fee from $200 to $125, starting Friday.

The fee to adopt a wild burro remains $75.

Connie Kingston, coordinator of the program at the bureau office here, says applicants must show they have space to keep a horse, have pasture to feed it or money to buy it hay, and have some experience in horse training or access to a trainer.

The adopter also must have a two-horse trailer to haul the animal.

The horse and burro adoption program was passed by Congress in 1971.

PROTECT YOURSELF FROM THE IRS WITH AN IRA. FROM FIRST CITY.

Why pay more now when you can pay less later?

With a First City Individual Retirement Account (IRA), you can set aside tax-deductible funds now to use for your retirement years later, when your taxes should be much lower.

As an individual wage earner, you can make a tax-deductible IRA contribution of up to $2,000 a year. $2,250 if your non working spouse is included, or $4,000 when both spouses work and file a joint return. Deposits made during 1982 are deductible on your 1982 return. And the tax will be deferred on the interest earned as long as it's reinvested in your IRA.

What's more, unlike arrangements with brokerage firms or regular money market funds, your First City IRA is insured up to $100,000 by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. This is in addition to the insurance you may have on other deposits.

So what it all boils down to is this: You can continue to pay the IRS more in taxes right now. Or you can save now, earn a higher interest rate, and pay a lot less later on. All you need is an Individual Retirement Account from First City.

Call Venita Gaston at 685-5292 or come visit with Venita in our personal banking lobby in First City Center.

Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal as well as an IRS penalty. If depositor is 59½ or over, withdrawal penalty is waived.

Governor requests bill sanctions

White wants those hiring illegal aliens punished

By PHILLIP SWANN
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Texas Gov. Mark White said Wednesday he wants the latest immigration reform bill before Congress to contain some kind of sanctions against employers who hire illegal aliens.

White, however, stressed that he still opposes the employer sanction provision in the Mazzoli-Simpson immigration bill that died in last year's lame duck session. Hispanic groups charge that the Mazzoli-Simpson bill, which was reintroduced last month, discourages businessmen from hiring any Hispanics.

"We need some kind of sanctions to have an effective immigration bill," said White, who was in Washington for a meeting of the National Governors Association. "But I'm very sensitive to their (Hispanics') concerns. We need some compromise."

White didn't offer any plans that would presumably satisfy Hispanic concerns and place some legal responsibility on an employer to ensure an employee is not an illegal alien.

"I don't have the answers," White said at a news conference here. "I oppose (sanctions) that will encourage discrimination against Hispanics."

The governor said he will soon call together a special immigration task force that will work to develop a compromise.

Arnold Torres, executive director of the League of United Latin American Citizens, expressed hope Wednesday that White will consult with Hispanic leaders before supporting an employer-sanction proposal.

Gov. Mark White Wednesday toured Vice President George Bush's office and asked his fellow Texan to request emergency aid for Texas' border towns from President Reagan.

"We don't need any more workers in Texas. We need jobs," White said.

In other matters, the governor:

—Said he still opposes inclusion of a guest worker program in the immigration bill.

—Met with Vice-President George Bush and urged his fellow Texan to ask President Reagan to authorize emergency aid for South Texas.

Senators OK bill making first-time DWI offense harder to expunge

AUSTIN (AP) — A Senate panel has approved a tough bill on drunken driving that would eliminate the current practice of allowing some offenders to clear their records after completing probation.

Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Hereford, sponsored the legislation which was approved by a Senate subcommittee Wednesday.

"I'm very pleased with the bill. I can't see any loopholes," said Sarpalius. He said he hoped to bring the bill to the full Senate by the end of next week.

The primary focus of Sarpalius' proposal is the elimination of "deferred adjudication," but it also raises minimum fines and applies them equally to adult and juvenile offenders and requires minimimum jail time on second and later offenses.

The proposal also allows law enforcement officers to ask people suspected of driving while intoxicated to take a blood test in addition to a breathalyzer test. Refusal to take either test would be admissible in court.

If the bill is enacted, a first-time DWI conviction would carry a minimum fine of $100 instead of the current $50. A second offense would mean a minimum fine of $300 instead of $100 and a third offense would cost at least $500 instead of $100. The maximum fine for all three levels would be $2000.

A second-offense DWI conviction would mean minimum jail time of 72 hours. Third offense would carry a minimum jail sentence of 30 days.

The bill makes no changes in current license suspension laws — 12 months the first time a license is suspended and 18 months the second time.

Sarpalius' measure would carry a mandatory six-month sentence for a second conviction of involuntary manslaughter with a motor vehicle.

Most states consider persons with blood alcohol level of .10 percent legally drunk. The Senate has just OK'd a bill which would make punishment for first-time drunken driving charges by such people harder to avoid.

Dad's 'hardship license' request displeases daughter

AUSTIN (AP) — A legislator whose daughter's popularity has dropped because he won't let her drive has persuaded a House committee to OK a bill to make it tougher for 15-year-olds to get licenses.

The House Transportation Committee voted 6-0 Wednesday for a measure — already approved in the Senate — to tighten restrictions on "hardship licenses" granted 15-year-olds.

Rep. Gerald Hill, D-Austin, is the bill's House sponsor. He said his 15-year-old daughter wants to drive now, but he won't let her.

"She's not too popular with her friends at school because of her dad," he told the committee.

The Department of Public Safety issued more than 72,000 "hardship licenses" to 15-year-olds in 1982. State law says DPS must approve the licenses for 15-year-olds who say they must drive for the "general welfare" of their family.

Chaps take on Ranger tonight

The Midland College Chaparrals are set to open defense of their Region V and national junior college championship today as the Region V basketball tournament gets underway.

The Chaps will face Ranger Junior College at 9 p.m. at Langford Chaparral Center in first round action. The tournament was scheduled to start at 2 p.m. today with Clarendon College taking on Southwestern Christian College of Terrell.

In other first round action today, Amarillo College will take on Cisco Junior College at 4 p.m. and Northern champion McLennan County Community College of Waco will face Big Spring's Howard College at 7 p.m.

Tickets for the tournament are $4 for adults and $2 for students per session. The 2 and 4 p.m. games constitute one session today while the 7 and 9 p.m. games make up another session. Tickets for the entire tournament can be purchased for $12.

The Midland College-Ranger winner will face the Clarendon-SW Christian winner at 7:30 p.m. Friday while the Howard-McLennan winner takes on the Cisco-Amarillo winner at 9:30 p.m. Saturday's finals are set for 7 p.m.

Winner of the Region V tournament will play the winner of the San Jacinto-Angelina series next week. Those two teams are playing this week to determine the Region XIV champion.

The winner of the bi-regional contest earns a national tournament berth in Hutchinson, Kan., March 15-19.

"This is the start of what we've been pointing toward all season, MC coach Jerry Stone said. "We know that in order to return to the national tournament we first have to win the regional title and then, this year, we would have to win another game. We also realize that winning the regional title is no easy task."

The Chaps have faced Ranger once previously this year, defeating them 84-69 in the Chaparral Classic in December.

"We're not taking them lightly," Stone said. "We remember last year's regional finals when we faced Cisco. We had beaten them early in the year, but they had improved and we just barely beat them (83-81.)"

The Region V tournament is seeded by the way the teams finished the season in conference. Today's play features the top four Western Junior College Athletic Conference teams against the top four from the Northern conference.

Since MC won the WJCAC title with a 17-1 record, the Chaps were paired against the No. 4 team (Ranger) from the Northern conference. McLennan, the Northern champion, faces Howard College, the No. 4 WJCAC team. Amarillo, the No. 2 WJCAC squad, drew Cisco, the No. 3 Northern team, while Clarendon, the No. 3 WJCAC team faces Southwestern Christian, the No. 2 Northern team.

All of the games involving Midland College will be broadcast over Quad K Radio, 99 FM.

The Region V tournament, although held at Midland College's Chaparral Center, is being promoted by Midland Sports Promotions, headed by Bill Williams.

King turns destruction on Nagelsen

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Billie Jean King didn't let a personal tragedy stop her from an outstanding performance on the tennis court.

King, who several hours earlier lost a home she owns because of pounding surf in the Malibu area, breezed to a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Betsy Nagelsen in a first-round match of the $165,000 Carta Blanca-FCT women's tennis tournament Wednesday night.

After her 50-minute match, King was asked how it felt to play not long after a home she owns was destroyed.

"I think it's a good idea to go play tennis after that," said the 39-year-old veteran who next meets fourth-seeded Bettina Bunge in second-round action Friday. "I'm sure we have insurance and probably won't get it all back, but that's life."

King and her husband, Larry, are living in nearby Marina del Rey. The Malibu home was being rented, King said.

The home in Malibu, about 25 miles northwest of Los Angeles, slid into a neighbor's house and was bulldozed apart in an attempt to save the other home.

"I hope my renter wasn't in the house," said King.

Heavy rain recently in the Southern California area has caused millions of dollars in damages.

Boston beans Hoyas, 87-85

College Basketball

By Associated Press

As a player with the Boston Celtics, John Thompson wasn't used to losing in the Boston Garden.

He still hasn't gotten used to it now that he coaches the Georgetown University basketball team.

"To be a coach or a player, you have to be a little crazy, a glutton for punishment," said Thompson after his 16th-ranked Hoyas were tripped up in the Garden by 15th-ranked Boston College 87-85 in overtime in an intense Big East game Wednesday night. "With the competition in this league, you have to be ready every day."

The Eagles had a distinct advantage at the foul line, sinking 37 of 46 shots while Georgetown was making just 17 of 26 free throws. It was a field goal by Michael Adams with 2:06 left in overtime that finally put Boston College ahead to stay, 86-85.

"I really wanted to give it to the big guys," said the 5-foot-10 guard. "But Georgetown just backed up and let me shoot it."

It was still nail-biting time, though.

After Michael Jackson, who led the Hoyas with 26 points, was called for traveling with 23 seconds remaining, Georgetown stole the inbounds pass. With four seconds to go, Jackson missed a 20-footer, and B.C.'s John Garris wrapped up the rebound and was fouled. He made the first of his two free throws, accounting for the final margin.

"Anybody could look for the penetration on that play, but we were a little apprehensive. We're young," Thompson said. "Still, it (Jackson's shot) wasn't bad. It hit the rim."

"They just got the breaks in the end," said Georgetown's Patrick Ewing, who had 16 points, 14 rebounds, six blocked shots and six steals before fouling out near the end.

Jay Murphy, whose basket with 24 seconds left in regulation forced the overtime, had 20 points for the Eagles and Adams added 19.

"We beat Georgetown, St. John's and Villanova, all fine ballclubs," said Garris, who led the Eagles with 25 points. "We're in the Top Twenty, we just want to stay there."

Boston College's 21-5 overall record and 11-4 conference mark include a two-point loss to the Hoyas, who fell to 19-8, 9-5 in the Big East.

Top Ten

Ralph Sampson scored 28 points to lead Virginia to a runaway victory over Wake Forest. The Cavaliers shrugged off an early seven-point deficit and raced to a comfortable 53-28 halftime lead behind their big man.

Charles Jones, Rodney McCray and Lancaster Gordon teamed for 49 points as Louisville whipped Virginia Tech for the 1,000th victory in the history of the Cardinals' basketball program.

Louisville led 38-31 at the half and put the game away with a nine-point burst early in the second half. The closest Virginia Tech got after that was five points at 65-60 with 1:20 left in the game.

Virginia Tech Coach Charlie Moir: "Louisville is so strong inside that we were intimidated by them. They cut off Perry Young, and he's been such a big scorer for us. They played him with a taller man and it was difficult for him to take the ball to the basket."

Michael Jordan scored 24 points as North Carolina downed Georgia Tech. Jordan had two baskets during an 11-0 Carolina spurt that stretched a 42-36 advantage to 53-36 with 11:18 left in the game.Georgia Tech never threatened thereafter as the Tar Heels eventually rolled up a 23-point lead, their biggest of the game, which they held on five occasions.

"I didn't like our shot selection in the first half," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, "(but) I thought we played very well in the second half."

"They simply had too much firepower," said Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins. "We couldn't get anything going. I'm disappointed. The last two games we've just played poorly."

Other games

Butch Moore scored a game-high 19 points, including five crucial free throws in the last 3:15, to lead Southern Methodist to a 61-56 victory over TCU and Kenny Holmes hit a 12-foot jumper from the baseline with three seconds remaining to give South Carolina a 52-51 victory over DePaul.

El Paso, Fort Worth boys fight for regional basketball title

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

This year's boys' Regional High School Basketball playoffs will pit Fort Worth's District 6-5A against El Paso's District 2-4A, thanks to the University Interscholastic League's decision to allow second place district finishers into the state playoffs.

Friday's opening game will be between the runners-up, El Paso Eastwood and Fort Worth Paschal, at 3:30 p.m., followed by a battle of the district champions, El Paso Bel Air and Fort Worth Dunbar, at 5:15. The winners will square off in the championship game at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Tickets, $4 for adults and $2 for students, are good for both games Friday.

THE BOBBY Lesley-coached Eastwood Toopers are no stranger to playoff competition. In 1976 the West Texas school took the whole ball of wax winning the state title. In 1981 the Troopers were Region I finalist at Chaparral Center, where they lost to Dunbar in the finals.

"El Paso has a lot of pride in both schools (Eastwood and Bel Air) and I think both of us getting this far will help the border people," Lesley said. "We've had some great games this year and naturally I'd like to see us both in the finals."

Eastwood is led by Johnny Gipson, a 6-foot-4 foward who was an all-city selection and the district MVP.

Nate Shepard, another 6-4 foward, also made all-district dispite missing six games with a leg injury.

The Troopers' record stands at 27-4, with their last victory an easy 72-67 over San Angelo in the area playoffs. Eastwood led by as many as 30 points before Lesley started substituting.

"Our bench didn't do a good job against San Angelo but San Angelo couldn't handle our starters," Lesley said. "We have a lot of team pride and I think we have a great starting five."

The other starters for Eastwood include a pair of 6-5 players, Dwight Smith and Arnold Ducre, and Kevin Sylvester a 6-1 guard.

Eastwood finished second in District 2-4A despite beating Bel Air two of three games this year.

"We had scouts at the Paschal-L.D. Bell game and I think we can play with them," Lesley said. "I have a lot of confidence in this team and I think we will do well."

PASCHAL'S JIM Wall is one coach who's happy to see the new playoff format. The Panthers have been district runners-up to Dunbar for seven consecutive years.

In 1975, the last year Paschal won the district title, the Panthers went all the way to the state finals, losing a two-point game to Houston Kashmere, 60-58.

This year's 27-7 record includes three losses to Dunbar.

Stephen McDonald, a 6-2 junior, will start at one forward spot with 6-2 senior Vernon Coleman, the team's leading scorer, at the other. At center for the Panthers will be 6-4 Horace Taylor.

George Davis and Keith Buckley, a pair of 6-foot seniors, will start at the guard positions.

Look for Paschal to play for the early lead then spread the offense forcing the opposition into a man-to-man defense. Wall has a disciplined club that plays that type of half-court offense well.

Paschal advanced to regionals with a 58-53 bi-district win over Weatherford and a 65-52 area victory over Hurst L.D. Bell.

In the last AP prep poll Paschal was ranked 20th, Eastwood 18th.

BEL AIR brings an impressive 27-2 record into the regional playoffs. The only two losses the Highlanders suffered this season were to district rival Eastwood.

Midlanders may remember Bel Air from the Tall City Invitational in whichthe Highlanders were tournament champions.

"I'm glad were playing Dunbar in Midland instead of Fort Worth," Bel Air coach Bob Haack said. "We won the Tall City tournament here and won again against Caprock. Our kids feel comfortable on this floor (at Chaparral Center)."

Bel Air features a balanced scoring attack as witnessed in its area victory over Lubbock Caprock.

Phil Larkin, 6-foot-4, 215 pounds, scored 18 against Caprock as did 6-1 Zeak Williams. Guard Robert Parham and Jaime Gallinar had 13 each. Joining them on the starting squad will be George Lopez.

"It will take one of our better efforts to beat Dunbar, who is always strong," Haack said. "It's just great to still be playing. A lot of teams don't make it this far."

It is Bel Air's first trip to the regional playoffs. The Higlanders are the 18th ranked team in Texas according to the final AP poll.

AT 32-2 Dunbar sports the best overall record of the regional teams.

The Wildcats have made the regional playoffs eight consecutive years and four times they have advance to Austin.

Coach Robert Hughes uses a pressing defense, a fast break offense and regularly uses 12 players to keep up the pace.

John Johnson, a 6-4 foward, and Lawrence Hudson, a 6-foot guard, are the only Cats averaging in double figures.

The only underclassman starter will be Rodney Washington, a 6-5 center. Joining Hudson at guard for the Wildcats will be 5-11 Wayne Mathis. Six-four John Hughes will be the other starting foward.

Dunbar's offensive potential was never more evident than in the area game against Irving MacArthur. MacArthur was undefeated at 31-0 before the Panthers exploded for a 73-41 victory. Dunbar broke MacArthur's back with a 19-2 outburst in the third period.

Dunbar finished the regular season as the second ranked team in the state.

Billie Jean King makes a return against Betsy Nagelsen.

Rangers' Rader is example of baseball's new mangers

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Is baseball's favorite old managerial game of "musical chairs" losing some of its charm?

Are fewer and fewer clubs steering away from recycled braintrusts and consigning their field fortunes to fresh, young talent brought up from the minors or coaching ranks?

"It looks that way," says the new rookie manager of the Texas Rangers, 38-year-old Doug Rader. "It may be just a cycle we're going through, but it seems to have started when Tony LaRussa signed with the White Sox five years ago."

The hulking onetime third baseman is one of three men making dugout debuts this season who have had no previous big league managing experience.

The others are Mike Ferraro of Cleveland and Steve Boros of Oakland, graduating from New York Yankee and Montreal coaching staffs, respectively, after serving apprenticeships down on the farm.

Joe Altobelli, who succeeds retired Earl Weaver at Baltimore, also came up from the Yankee coaching staff although he managed the San Francisco Giants briefly in the 1970s.

The game is still full of what they call in the trade "recycled managers," seasoned guys who always manage to land somewhere when there's a scramble for empty chairs,

Dick Williams, now of the San Diego Padres, is one of the most adroit at the art, having previously managed at Boston, Oakland, California and Montreal.

Billy Martin's tutoring tour has encompassed Minnesota, Detroit, Texas, Oakland and three different times with the Yankees, winning everywhere he hung his wide-brimmed Western hat.

Other interesting itineraries have been compiled by Whitey Herzog of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals, who previously left tobacco juice at Texas, California and Kansas City; Ralph Houk (New York, Detroit, Boston) and Chuck Tanner (Chicago, Oakland, Pittsburgh).

The "new breed" of intruders of whom Rader, Ferraro and Boros are newest members, also include Pat Corrales of the Phillies, Lee Elia of the Cubs, Billy Gardner of the Twins, Bob Lillis of the Astros, Renee Lachemann of Seattle and Russ Nixon of the Reds, all moving into major league posts within the last three years.

There are few professions in the country with greater lack of security, but this has never discouraged young Doug Rader.

"From the moment my playing career ended, I knew I wanted to be a major league manager," Rader said. "I was willing to go to whatever extreme necessary. I welcome the risks."

Rader is a big, pleasant fellow who appears completely unawed by the task of trying to revive a team of cripples and malcontents, who lost 98 games last season, and of placating a proud populace accustomed to success,

"It's true that Dallas — and Texas, for that matter — is football oriented, college football oriented mainly, and spoiled by the pro Dallas Cowboys," the new Ranger skipper said.

"But the Rangers drew more than a million at home and more than one and a half million on the road. They will support us if we give them something to cheer about."

Rader believes he can do it.

"Everything went wrong last year," he said. "The front office was in a state of transition. Bucky Dent (traded from the Yankees) never got his feet on the ground. Mickey Rivers wrenched his knee and played only 19 games.

"Buddy Bell played hurt all year with a bad knee. Mike Richardt got tonsilitis early, got hit on the wrist and suffered leg and neck injuries in two separate incidents. Rick Honeycutt lost his slider and the whole pitching staff collapsed.

The 6-foot-3, 230-pound Chicagoan, who spent most of his major league career with the Houston Astros, said he appreciated his three years as manager at Hawaii, a team he turned into a winner.

"Compared with the majors, it's like being a tenant farmer," he said. "None of the luxuries, all the problems, equipment, overnight flights to keep dates on the West Coast.

ATP computer ranks Lendl as tennis' best

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, has replaced Jimmy Connors as the top-ranked men's tennis player in the world, according to the Association of Tennis Professionals.

Lendl, who captured the Volvo Masters tournament in January, defeating Connors in the semifinals and John McEnroe in the finals, reached the No. 1 spot on the Atari-ATP computer for the first time.

Lendl is followed in the rankings by Connors, McEnroe and two Argentinians, Guillermo Vilas and Jose Luis Clerc.

BASKETBALL

NEW YORK — Terry Cummings of the San Diego Clippers, who averaged 26.8 points per game, has been named Rookie of the Month for February in the National Basketball Association.

Cummings scored 20 points or more in 11 of the Clippers' 12 games last month and shot 55 percent from the field. The 6-foot-9 rookie forward from DePaul ranked eighth overall in scoring with a 23.5 average.

GOLF

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — South African John Bland and American David Sann shot 7-under-par 65s to take the first-round lead in the $36,000 Kodak Classic golf tournament. Another American, Joe Carr, was third with a 66.

BOWLING

BASEBALL

HOUSTON — Pitcher J.R. Richard, whose major league baseball career was interrupted by a stroke almost three years ago, has complained of muscle fatigue in his lower left leg, the Houston Astros say.

Team officials sent Richard home Wednesday from spring training in Cocoa, Fla. He was expected to be examined today by his personal physician, Dr. William Fields. Officials were uncertain when Richard would return to spring training.

TAMPA, Fla. — The Cincinnati Reds will lose pitcher Charlie Puleo for at least two weeks folowing arthroscopic surgery on his right knee.

Puleo, who came from the New York Mets in the trade for Tom Seaver, has been trying to win a spot in the Reds starting rotation but has been hampered by the knee irritation.

TUCSON, Ariz. — Cleveland Indians' right-hander Len Barker is again able to throw batting practice after missing two turns on the mound because of an injury.

At the Indians' spring training camp, Barker had been suffering from a slight muscle strain on the right side of his rib cage. He said the injury was a minor one.

Also taking the mound Wednesday was right-hander Bert Blyleven, who pitched batting practice for the fourth time since camp opened last Thursday. Blyleven is making a comeback after elbow surgery which sidelined him for most of last season.

FOOTBALL

Johnson shows Bucks new bit of magic

By The Associated Press

Magic Johnson showed the Milwaukee Bucks a trick they didn't expect.

Rather than dish off slick passes to teammates for easy baskets, the 6-foot-9 point guard decided to put the ball in the hoop himself. The result was a season-high 34 points that paced the Los Angeles Lakers to a 127-117 National Basketball Association triumph over the Bucks Wednesday night in Milwaukee.

"The book on him (Johnson) has been that he always looks to thread the needle with the pass instead of shoot it, so they give it to him over the top," said Lakers Coach Pat Riley. "But he can drill it. He's worked hard on his perimeter game."

Besides his 34 points, Johnson added 15 assists, seven rebounds and five steals. He sank 15 of 20 shots, most of them high-arching perimeter jumpers.

In other games, the New Jersey Nets swamped the Houston Rockets 124-85, the Dallas Mavericks shaded the Seattle SuperSonics 108-105, the Phoenix Suns downed the San Antonio Spurs 110-106, the Portland Trail Blazers nipped the San Diego Clippers 104-102 and the Denver Nuggets trimmed the Golden State Warriors 128-108.

Johnson scored 24 of his points in the second half, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 30 points and Jamaal Wilkes scored eight of his 27 points in the last 6:15 as the Lakers broke a slump that saw them lose three of their previous four games.The Bucks, who had a three-game winning streak broken, were led by Alton Lister with a career-high 27 points.

The Lakers took control of the game by outscoring the Bucks 14-4 late in the third quarter and early in the fourth to open a 101-91 lead. Johnson had 10 points in thet surge.

"I can play a lot of different roles," Johnson said. "It depends on the nature of the situation. Tonight the situation called for me to shoot. I've got to start making people play us honestly. I'm going to continue to shoot it to make them play everybody."

Nets 124, Rockets 85

At East Rutherford, N.J., Albert King scored 17 points and had seven assists and Buck Williams had 15 points and 13 rebounds as New Jersey piled up its largest margin of victory this season. Darryl Dawkins, Darwin Cook and Mike Gminski each had 14 points, while Cook also contributed 11 assists.The Rockets have the worst record in the NBA at 11-47.

Mavericks 108, Sonics 105

At Dallas, Kelvin Ransey made two free throws with three seconds left, enabling Dallas to hold off a furious fourth-quarter rush by Seattle, which erased most of a 17-point deficit.Gus Williams, who scored a season-high 38 points, led the surge that brought the Sonics as close as 106-105 with 50 seconds to play. But Seattle's Jack Sikma, who finished with 18 points and 19 rebounds, missed a 10-footer with seven seconds left.Ransey, who had 20 points for Dallas, then made his free throws.Dallas was led by Jay Vincent's 24 points and also got a team-record 20 rebounds from Pat Cummings.

Suns 110, Spurs 106

Walter Davis' baseline jumper with 39 seconds left snapped a 104-104 tie.Davis, who scored 10 of his 21 points in the fourth period, hit his game-winner 48 seconds after San Antonio's Johnny Moore tied the score on a hook shot.Larry Nance, who paced Phoenix with 27 points, stole an inbounds pass at midcourt and went in for a slam dunk with 35 seconds remaining for a 108-104 lead. George Gervin scored 31 points for the Spurs, while Alvan Adams added 22 for Phoenix. The loss was San Antonio's ninth straight.

Trail Blazers 104, Clippers 102

At San Diego, Calvin Natt scored 24 points as Portland snapped a three-game losing streak. The Trail Blazers took the lead for good 68-66 midway through the third quarter on a layup by Jim Paxson that triggered a 7-0 spurt.The Clippers had several chances to tie or go ahead in the final 40 seconds. With the score 103-102, San Diego's Terry Cummings missed two free throws with 40 seconds to go.After Natt made one of two free throws, Cummings, who led the Clippers with 20 points and 14 rebounds, missed a jump shot with 10 seconds remaining.

Nuggets 128, Warriors 108

Sittler turns over new leaf with Philly

By The Associated Press

It wasn't the happiest homecoming in the world for Philadelphia's Darryl Sittler but its over with.

Sittler did not figure in the scoring in Philadelphia's 2-2 National Hockey League tie with the Toronto Maple Leafs, his former employer, but the veteran center was the center of attention after Wednesday night's game. Banners welcomed the former Leaf back, but there were loud boos every time he touched the puck during his first few shifts.

"I didn't know what the reaction would be," said Sittler, a former Leaf captain who played his first game in Maple Leaf Gardens since a Jan.20, 1982 trade ended his 11-year tenure in Toronto. "I'm just glad I've got my first game in this building under my belt now."

Black Hawks 5, Kings 3

At Chicago, Lysiak celebrated his return from a 12-game layoff by snapping a 1-1 tie in the second period as the Black Hawks maintained a five-point lead over second-place Minnesota in the Norris Division.

Oilers 5, Capitals 3

At Landover, Md., Glenn Anderson scored a tie-breaking power-play goal at 14:23 of the final period to disappoint a sellout crowd of 18,130 in the Capital Centre as Edmonton beat Washington, 5-3.

Canucks 3, Jets 0

At Winnipeg, John Garrett stopped 30 shots in recording Vancouver's first shutout of the season and Thomas Gradin scored two first-period goals.

North Stars 4, Blues 4

At Bloomington, Minn., Mark Reeds of St. Louis scored his first two goals of the season and assisted Brian Sutter on his second of the game to give the Blues the fourth consecutive tie between the two teams.

Bad times just around the corner for Kite

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — The only thing that Tom Kite is sure of is that things will change. And, unfortunately, that change probably will be for the worse. That's because things couldn't get much better.

"It won't last. It never does," Kite said before teeing off today in the first round of the $400,000 Honda-Inverrary Golf Classic. "But while it lasts, it's fun. Oh, my, but it's fun."

He was discussing the state of his game. And, at the moment, it's very good; perhaps as good as it was at any point during the two previous seasons. In each of those two seasons, the hard-working little man won the coveted Vardon Trophy for the low stroke average on the PGA Tour.

During those two seasons, he finished 10th or better in 36 of 50 starts — a level of consistency that is unmatched in the game.

And, right now, he's on another tear.

In his last three appearances, he's finished first, second and fourth and won $104,000.

"It's really fun to be playing that well," he said. "There's no indecision. You know what you have to do and, on every shot, you know how to do it. And the shots keep coming off. It's really fun. You know you're going to play the right shot at the right time.

"The only thing is, you know it won't last," he said.

But, in view of recent history, every indication is that Kite's high level of play will continue, at least for one more week. This tournament has been one of his most productive. He won the title in 1981 and was second, by a single stroke, to Hale Irwin last year.

Jack Nicklaus, a frequent winner here who had a solid performance last week, PGA winner Ray Floyd and Johnny Miller, a former winner on the 7,129-yard Inverrary Country Club course, are other leading contenders.

NBC will provide national television coverage of portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Baseball's spring training suffering from many ills

By The Associated Press

Sore knees and ribs and hamstrings. Even an appendix. A continuing contract hassle. A training camp no-show. A dispute between a player and a manager.

The inevitable arguments, injuries and ailments are bringing the inevitable clouds to the dreams of pennants and playoffs that major league baseball teams bring to spring training.

One blow fell on the New York Yankees, hoping to rebound under new manager Billy Martin from a fifth-place finish in 1982. Roy Smalley, a key man in Martin's infield plans underwent an appendectomy Wednesday and will be lost for at least three weeks.

Club officials said Smalley arrived at the Yankee training base in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. suffering from stomach pains and was hospitalized shortly thereafter. Smalley was operated on by Dr. Richard Schultz, who said he should be able to resume workouts in two weeks and be back to normal in three.

The Cincinnati Reds also temporarily lost pitcher Charlie Puleo, obtained from the New York Mets in the deal for Tom Seaver. Puleo, fighting for a spot in the starting rotation, underwent arthroscopic surgery and is expected to be lost for two weeks.

Seaver himself had his share of aches and pains in the Mets' camp at St. Petersburg — primarily a series of pulled calf muscles. But Seaver said Wednesday he had recovered and Met Manager George Bamberger said the 38-year-old three-time Cy Young Award winner was slated to start today in the first intrasquad game.

Then there were the Montreal Expos, where all-star catcher Gary Carter was chewed out by new Manager Bill Virdon for going after a popup Virdon believed belonged to an infielder. "You don't have any right to catch a popup that can be caught by an infielder," Virdon said, pointing a finger a Carter. "And I don't want to hear you calling the play."

Later, Carter told reporters that he would go along with Virdon. "But I don't know for how long," he added. "It's not my style to remain passive on that kind of play. The transition will be hard."

The no-show was in Bradenton, Fla., where the Pittsburgh Pirates were still awaiting the arrival of relief pitcher Enrique Romo. But Manager Chuck Tanner wasn't overly concerned. "He's late every year," Tanner said of Romo. "But when he does get here, he's ready to pitch."

In Tucson, Ariz., there were contract problems between second baseman Manny Trillo and his new team, the Cleveland Indians. Trillo, obtained from the Phillies during the off-season, was trying to agree on a new contract during spring training, so that, in his words, "I won't be bothered during the season."

On the brighter side for the Indians, however, was the work of Len Barker, who had been suffering from a slight muscle strain in his rib cage. He threw batting practice after missing his last two turns.

Appeals court kills Braniff-PSA operations plan

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court threw out a complex plan enabling Pacific Southwest Airlines to partially take over grounded Braniff International. Hours later, PSA's chairman proclaimed it dead.

"No doubt. It's dead. We don't think the (U.S.) Supreme Court would take it," said Chairman William Shimp, reached Wednesday night at his home in San Diego.

Even so, Braniff Chairman Howard Putnam and PSA financial vice president George Shortley expressed hope that something still might be worked out as they met with lawyers Wednesday night at Braniff's headquarters at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport.

But Putnam said the ruling left him "in a state of shock."

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said the Braniff-PSA arrangement simply did not conform to bankruptcy law.

CRUCIAL TO Wednesday's ruling was the 5th Circuit's reversal of a federal judge who had ordered the Federal Aviation Administration to provide 200 landing slots — times at which planes may land at designated airports — for Braniff planes that were to be leased by PSA.

After Braniff ceased operating last May under the load of a $1 billion debt, the FAA reassigned many of its 450 slots to other airlines so extra flights could fill the gap left by Braniff. Those airlines were among those opposing the deal.

Braniff contended in the arrangement with PSA that the slots were Braniff property that could be transferred as it pleased.

The FAA argued that it alone has jurisdiction over the issuance of airport time slots and a federal judge cannot treat them as property to be conveyed by contract.

U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon agreed with Braniff. He ruled in Fort Worth that the FAA had to return some of the landing slots to Braniff.

PSA HAD arranged to lease 30 of Braniff's 62 idle Boeing 727 jets and to hire some 2,000 Braniff workers. It set up a new PSA division to handle the Braniff transition.

"We cannot accept Braniff's characterization of the slots as its property," the 5th Circuit said. "The slots are actually restrictions on the use of property — airplanes; not property in themselves."

PSA had set a Tuesday deadline for approval of the deal. But as the appeals court shaped its opinion, the company extended the deadline, saying creditors had given them until March 15 to sign the papers with Braniff.

However, PSA, which said it had committed $1.5 million to the proposal, also said its new division had to begin flying June 15 so it could extend service to 16 cities previously served by Braniff.

They included such major markets as Miami, Newark and Washington.

EVEN HAD Braniff and PSA won at the 5th Circuit, they faced a threat by the venture's opponents to appeal any favorable ruling to the next highest court.

The 5th Circuit ruling sent the case back to Mahon for "further proceedings consistent with this opinion."

"Since certain portions of the transaction are clearly outside the scope of (a section of the bankruptcy code), the district court was without power under that section to approve it," the opinion said.

"Its order must be reversed."

THREE MAIN legal issues were presented in the appeal:

— Was the District court approval of the PSA transaction authorized under the bankruptcy code?

—"Did the District Court have the power to order the FAA to allocate certain landing slots at various airports to Braniff so that Braniff could transfewr them in the PSA transaction?"

—Third, could the judge approve Braniff's transfer of its lease on terminal facilities at Washington National Airport to PSA without FAA approval?

On each issue, the appeals court reversed Mahon.

IN A SEPARATE dispute involving Mahon and the airlines, the 5th Circuit judges — Thomas Gee of Austin, Reynaldo Garza of Brownsville, Texas and Henry Politz of Shreveport, La. — ruled Monday that the district judge was within his jurisdiction in upholding the agreement approved by the bankruptcy court judge.

Competitors, including American Airlines and Delta Air Lines, had argued that Mahon erred in getting involved in the case because only a federal bankruptcy court has jurisdiction in such cases.

After collapsing last May, Braniff filed for protection from its creditors in federal bankrutpcy court in Fort Worth.

U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge John Flowers said that with the PSA takeover, Braniff would be able to pay 12 cents on the dollar when liquidated — instead of the 9 cents that could be paid without additional revenue.

Immediate reaction to Wednesday's ruling was contradictory. Some said the deal was wrecked. Others said it might still be struck.

"We are disappointed, upset. The deal is dead. We gave it a good try," said PSA president Paul C. Barkley, reached in San Diego. "Our attorneys are discussing options, but it's highly unlikely there will be an appeal. The decision ends any hope of a transaction."

PUTNAM AND SHORTLEY told a news conference at D/FW Airport that lawyers would have to study the 5th Circuit ruling before a final decision is reached.

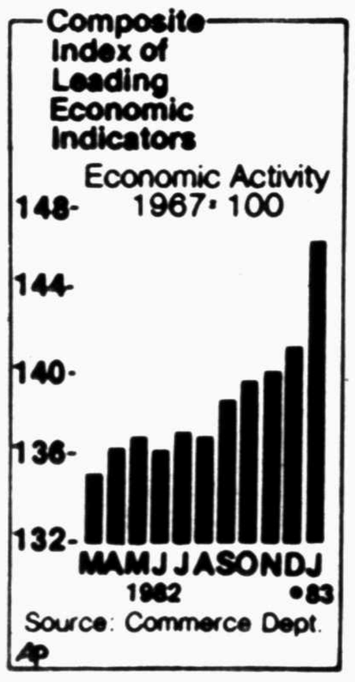
"At this time, we can't say what's going to happen. We have to review the opinion. We will be in meetings through the evening with our attorneys to determine what our alternatives are," Putnam said.

"We don't know if the deal is dead. But I have spoken with San Diego, and that's not what I have been told," Shortley said.

Economic indicators like school children

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Like children in a classroom, some key indexes of the nation's economic health can be divided into groups: Fast, average and slow.



The leading economic indicators are like fast learners, the coincident indicators are the ones in the middle and the lagging indicators trail behind.

The leaders tell you what will happen in the economy tomorrow, the coincident indicators tell you what is happening today and the laggers confirm what happened yesterday.

The Commerce Department said Wednesday that the Index of Leading Economic Indicators went up 3.6 percent in January, while the Index of Coincident Indicators rose 0.6 percent. The Index of Lagging Indicators dropped 1 percent.

"The difference among the three groups is essentially timing as it relates to the business cycle," said Edgar R. Fiedler, vice president for economic research of the Conferenee Board, a business group in New York. "The leaders move first and the coincident next and the laggers follow."

Larry Moran, an economist who is public information officer for the Bureau of Economic Analysis at the Commerce Department, said that on the average, the leading indicators start going up 2.6 months before a recovery gets under way although it has taken longer in the current recession.

The lagging indicators, by contrast, don't start rising until an average of 10 months after the recession hits bottom. "The laggers were designed to confirm the other two," he said.

There are 12 leading indicators, 4 coincident indicators and 6 lagging indicators. In most cases, Fiedler said, a rise in an indicator is good news. (The exceptions are the numbers relating to unemployment.)

Moran said analysts compiled the indexes by looking at a large number of economic measures. "Everything under the sun as a matter of fact."

He continued: "It was decided that some series had definite cyclical patterns. They would go up during expansions and down during recessions.

"Of those that had clear cyclical patterns, there were some that clearly were leaders. They would tend to turn down before you got into recession and up before you came out. There were some that were clearly coincident indicators. They'd turn down about the same time and up about the same time you came out. There were laggers — those that turned down after you're in and turned up after you're out."

A look at some individual components of the indexes shows why leaders are leaders, etc. Take the length of the average work week for production workers in manufacturing. That's one of the leading indicators. It is easier and faster for a company to put existing workers on overtime than it is to hire new employees or recall laid-off ones. When production turns up, therefore, one of the first signs will be an increase in the work week.

Other leading indicators are: the average number of weekly initial claims for unemployment insurance, the value of new orders for consumer goods and materials, vendor performance or the number of companies receiving slow deliveries, net business formation, the value of contracts and orders for plants and equipment, the number of new building permits for private housing units, the net change in inventories on hand and on order, the change in sensitive materials prices, the change in outstanding credit, prices of 500 common stocks and the money supply.

The coincident indicators — which generally measure production, Moran said — are the number of employees on non-agricultural payrolls, personal income, industrial production and manufacturing and trade sales.

The lagging indicators — a measure of costs, according to Moran — are the average duration of unemployment, manufacturing and trade inventories, labor costs per unit of output in manufacturing, the average prime rate, the volume of commercial and industrial loans outstanding and the ratio of consumer installment credit to personal income.

Wallace wants to put money in the ground

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas needs to spend more money and hire more people to battle oilfield pollution, says Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace.

He proposed fines of up to $10,000 a day to violators and said the Legislature should spend more money on the problem. At present the fine is $1,000 per day.

The main problem is abandoned, unplugged "leaking wells that pose serious health or pollution threats," Wallace said Wednesday. At present, the maximum fine is $1,000 per day for polluters.

"Tougher penalties will provide a more effective deterrent," Wallace told the Water Quality Committee of the Texas Water Conservation Association. "Additionally, the commission proposes that proceeds from any penalties collected be earmarked for the state's well-plugging fund."

At present, fines go to the state's general revenue fund.

When oil wells are abandoned without being plugged, shifts in underground formations can break the casing, and oil and other pollutants can leak into fresh water supplies. One method of plugging a well is to pour concrete down the hole.

Wallace said about 800,000 oil wells have been drilled in Texas, and only 300,000 are now in operation.

"It is estimated that thousands of wells remain unplugged without authority in Texas," Wallace said. He said the state's well-plugging fund was "simply not adequate to address the state's problem."

Wallace said he planned to ask the Legislature for more funds, more people and tougher penalties to fight the problem.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rolled up more gains in active trading today, hitting record highs for the third consecutive session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 5.90 to 1,140.96 by noontime.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 2 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the bull-market mood on Wall Street was heightened by Wednesday's news that the index of leading economic indicators jumped 3.6 percent in January, for its largest increase in 33 years.

The report inspired increasing hopes that the recovery from the recession would prove to be stronger and faster than most forecasters have been predicting.

Sony led the active list, up ⅛ at 13⅝. A 1.5 million-share block traded at 13⅛.

Other gainers among the volume leaders included AMR, up 1⅝ at 24⅞; Union Oil of California, up 1⅝ at 33⅝, and Continental Corp., up 1¼ at 29⅜.

The NYSE's composite index added .56 to 88.34. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.16 at 383.06.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 51.96 million shares at noontime, against 53.43 million at the same point Wednesday.

SEDCO to fight Texas' claims

HOUSTON (AP) — SEDCO Inc., a drilling company which agreed to pay $2 million to settle federal claims arising from the largest oil spill in history, has vowed to fight claims by the state of Texas and pursue litigation against a Mexican firm.

The government had sought recovery of clean-up costs estimated at $12.5 million, plus unspecified amounts for damage to natural resources from the June 3, 1979, blowout of the Ixtoc I well in the Gulf of Mexico.

But the Justice Department and SEDCO, a Dallas-based firm founded by former Texas Gov. Bill Clements, announced the agreement was filed Wednesday in federal court resolving all litigation between the company and the government over the spill.

The agreement said "neither party in any way admits or concedes fault," and the United States agreed not to sue Pemex, the Mexico's oil monopoly, or Pemargo, a Mexican firm holding an exploration contract.

However, SEDCO spokesman Irving Davis, said his company would continue ligitation against Permargo and will fight claims by the state of Texas and private litigants.

"Although Pemex and Permargo made no contribution to the settlement, SEDCO confirmed that it will pursue its rights to be fully indemnified by Permargo in accordance with its contract," said Davis, the company's vice president of taxation.

SEDCO and Pemex have been named in damage suits totalling $3.77 million filed in federal court by private groups connected with the southern Texas tourist business.

Texas beaches were stained with oil after the well blew up in the Bay of Campeche off the coast of Mexico and ran wild for several weeks.

The well was being drilled with a semi-submersible rig leased by SEDCO to Permargo, a Mexican firm holding an exploration contract with Pemex, the Mexican national oil company.

The well, being drilled in Mexican waters 50 miles offshore, blew out after reaching a depth of 6,207 feet beneath the seabed. An explosion and fire demolished the $22 million drilling rig.

High pressure oil and gas exploded to the surface and burst into flames.

The well dumped 1.2 million gallons of oil daily into the water. Half of the crude was burned, but the rest drifted north and west and eventually coated the beaches of southern Texas.

It took federal, state and private agencies about nine months to complete the clean-up.

The Ixtoc I spill totalled about 100 million gallons of crude oil. The worst previous spill was 65.5 million gallons from the tanker Amoco Cadiz, which ran aground and sank near Portsal, France, on March 16, 1978.

The settlement was "based on the Justice Department's judgment that there were substantial legal obstacles to recovery," said a news release.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rolled up more gains in active trading today, hitting record highs for the third consecutive session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 5.90 to 1,140.96 by noontime.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 2 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the bull-market mood on Wall Street was heightened by Wednesday's news that the index of leading economic indicators jumped 3.6 percent in January, for its largest increase in 33 years.

The report inspired increasing hopes that the recovery from the recession would prove to be stronger and faster than most forecasters have been predicting.

Sony led the active list, up ½ at 13⅜. A 1.5 million-share block traded at 13⅛.

Other gainers among the volume leaders included AMR, up 1⅜ at 24⅞; Union Oil of California, up 1⅝ at 33⅜, and Continental Corp., up 1¼ at 29⅜.

The NYSE's composite index added .56 to 88.34. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.16 at 383.06.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 51.96 million shares at noontime, against 53.43 million at the same point Wednesday.

SEDCO to fight Texas' claims

HOUSTON (AP) — SEDCO Inc., a drilling company which agreed to pay $2 million to settle federal claims arising from the largest oil spill in history, has vowed to fight claims by the state of Texas and pursue litigation against a Mexican firm.

The government had sought recovery of clean-up costs estimated at $12.5 million, plus unspecified amounts for damage to natural resources from the June 3, 1979, blowout of the Ixtoc I well in the Gulf of Mexico.

But the Justice Department and SEDCO, a Dallas-based firm founded by former Texas Gov. Bill Clements, announced the agreement was filed Wednesday in federal court resolving all litigation between the company and the government over the spill.

The agreement said "neither party in any way admits or concedes fault," and the United States agreed not to sue Pemex, the Mexico's oil monopoly, or Pemargo, a Mexican firm holding an exploration contract.

However, SEDCO spokesman Irving Davis, said his company would continue ligitation against Permargo and will fight claims by the state of Texas and private litigants.

"Although Pemex and Permargo made no contribution to the settlement, SEDCO confirmed that it will pursue its rights to be fully indemnified by Permargo in accordance with its contract," said Davis, the company's vice president of taxation.

SEDCO and Pemex have been named in damage suits totalling $3.77 million filed in federal court by private groups connected with the southern Texas tourist business.

Texas beaches were stained with oil after the well blew up in the Bay of Campeche off the coast of Mexico and ran wild for several weeks.

The well was being drilled with a semi-submersible rig leased by SEDCO to Permargo, a Mexican firm holding an exploration contract with Pemex, the Mexican national oil company.

The well, being drilled in Mexican waters 50 miles offshore, blew out after reaching a depth of 6,207 feet beneath the seabed. An explosion and fire demolished the $22 million drilling rig.

High pressure oil and gas exploded to the surface and burst into flames.

The well dumped 1.2 million gallons of oil daily into the water. Half of the crude was burned, but the rest drifted north and west and eventually coated the beaches of southern Texas.

It took federal, state and private agencies about nine months to complete the clean-up.

The Ixtoc I spill totalled about 100 million gallons of crude oil. The worst previous spill was 65.5 million gallons from the tanker Amoco Cadiz, which ran aground and sank near Portsal, France, on March 16, 1978.

The settlement was "based on the Justice Department's judgment that there were substantial legal obstacles to recovery," said a news release.

'Senior-Dent' will take bite from dental bill

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Three Midland dentists have agreed to reduce their fees for senior citizens on limited incomes.

Drs. Lewis Tanner, Rodney Spencer and Millard Kimery are preparing to participate in a senior citizen dental program, according to Kimery, a Midland periodontist and president of the local dental association.

Senior-Dent, a statewide dental fee reduction program, was endorsed by the Texas Dental Association in May 1982, according to Beth Brooks, director of commnications at the Texas Dental Association in Austin.

Because dental fees differ from dentist to dentist, Ms. Brooks said the reduced fees also will vary. But it is expected that Midland dentists will probably reduce their fees to qualifying senior citizens by 15 percent.

Ms. Brooks said only one Midland resident has inquired about Senior-Dent because "it (the program) has not been publicized in your area."

According to Dr. Jack Harris, president of the TDA, many elderly people throughout Texas do not have the income to pay for dental care.

"The Association has created Senior-Dent to fill a void that seriously affects the health of senior citizens," he said. "The dental profession in Texas is concerned and we have developed this program to assist the senior citizens of Texas in obtaining comprehensive dental care at a time when they need it the most."

Texas has about 1.9 million residents who are 60 years or older, with 340,519 of those having incomes at or below the poverty level.

> "The Association has created Senior-Dent to fill a void that seriously affects the health of senior citizens. The dental profession in Texas is concerned and we have developed this program to assist the senior citizens of Texas."

—Patient must be 65 years or older.

—Patient should not be receiving federal, state or other dental health assistance.

—Patient should not have private dental insurance.

—Patient's annual income should be $12,000 or less, with an exception allowed by the participating dentist in special circumstances.

Services provided to Senior-Dent patients include comprehensive dental care along with examinations, cleaning and full or partial dentures, Ms. Brooks said, adding that all services are on a volunter basis and no financial support is received from the state or federal governments.

To date, 1,440 Texas dentists have volunteered discount services to qualifying senior citizens.

Interested persons can call a toll-free number, 1-800-252-9377, to contact a participating Midland dentist.

Busy afternoon

Midland firefighters drive a "grass truck" through one of a series of fires that broke out Wednesday afternoon along the railroad tracks next to U.S. Highway 80. This fire was about a half-mile east of the Interstate 20-Highway 80 interchange. The truck douses grass fires by spraying water from a nozzle attached to the front bumper. Fire department officials said the fires were probably caused by sparks from passing trains.

Trinity Towers students learn how to use their eyes to hear

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The 11 women sitting in a semi-circle facing their instructor had several things in common.

All were elderly, had graying or white hair, a case of the giggles and an intense desire to hear what was being said in the world around them. None were deaf but they did share a hearing loss.

"Everyone in there is in there because of their own need," lipreading instructor Kay Phillips said. "No one has signed them up. They want to be there."

The course, sponsored by the Midland College Community Services Department and Trinity Towers with the support of the Regional Day School Program for the Deaf, helps people increase their "hearing" capacity by using sight.

"I have good hearing. But I read lips, too — sometimes to the point of embarrassment," Ms. Phillips, speech and language pathologist for the Regional Program for the Deaf, admitted to the class with a grin.

Drills which help students recognize words and sentences through situational, vocal, body and facial clues and mouth shapes are taught in the eight Monday afternoons of instruction.

"When I say vase or face, you can't tell the difference," Ms. Phillips said, demonstrating mouth positions for the letters v and f. "But if I say, 'Oh, no, I broke my favorite vase,' it's obvious I'm not talking about my face."

After Ms. Phillips whispered a sentence, the students were asked to answer it out loud.

"What kind of view do you have over there?" she continued with the f/v instruction.

"Very few," came the answer with a chuckle.

"Very clever," Ms. Phillips replied.

The students, who were urged to whisper to each other during short drilling sessions between classes, practiced more than she expected.

"Keep whispering so you don't distort your mouth shapes but don't practice more than three minutes at a time."

"Aw-oh," one woman mumbled aloud to herself.

"Did I catch you cheating?" Ms. Phillips teasingly asked.

"No, but someone else has been," came the reply. "She was talking to me and I know it was for more than three minutes."

"There must be some socially acceptable way to make someone quit talking," the teacher mused.

"Yeah, shut your eyes," the woman advised.

For many people, that's all it takes.

"Most of the people who sign up for lipreading classes are people who have some hearing loss," Ms. Phillips said. "Some sign up so that they can help others in the family.

"Sixty to 65 percent of information people say is available to lipreaders. But there is so much language made up of vocabulary that is not visible."

During the third class session Monday, ways to get around those obstacles were reviewed.

One way to help "hear" is to place the light behind the lipreader so the person speaking faces the light and his or her mouth clearly can be seen.

"But what about those dudes with mustaches — you can't tell what they're saying," one woman interrupted.

Mustaches or not, it is difficult to read the lips of people with certain characteristics or habits, such as those who hide their mouths, look down or speak when a lipreader is not looking.

County inmates back in construction business

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith, who recently has been giving Midland County taxpayers and the county commissioners bargain-basement deals, this week offered another "special."

Once again, he volunteered Sheriff's Lt. Bill Decker and six prisoners, who happen to be craftsmen, to remodel another section of the former Tax Office in the basement of the 1930-vintage courthouse.

"Their skills are improving," said the sheriff.

In a week's time in February, Decker's prisoners and several deputies remodeled about 3,000 square feet of the vacated 6,000-square-foot Tax Office for about one-tenth the cost which a commercial remodeler would have charged, according to the sheriff's estimation. Offices were built for Criminal Investigation Division Capt. Pat Fuller and Warrants Capt. Richard Sexton and their staffs.

This week, Decker's hands are remodeling the other half of the Tax Office for work areas for Constable Tom McGinnis and his staff, for an enlarged Law Library and for a media room for news reporters.

"It doesn't take any time putting up the studs, laying the (stud) tracks and sheet-rocking," observed Decker. "It takes time finishing it up — mudding, taping and bedding, painting."

The sheriff regularly drops by to oversee the progress of the work.

"This is peanuts here," Smith said of materials costs, as Decker and the prisoners were laboring away. "Labor is the big cost, and we've got the labor."

Labor cost is minimal. The sheriff just furnishes room and board.

Space for the Law Library, which now is cramped for space, will be sizably increased. Prosecutors, judges, practicing lawyers and law-interested laymen will reap the benefits of an expanded library.

By next week, the constable, his four deputies and two clerks will be shifted from the small room in the back of the Justices of the Peace offices to the cubbyhole now housing the law library, a sectioned-off hallway and the former coffee bar, which will be McGinnis' office.

"We'll have room to work now," said McGinnis.

"Amen," agreed Deputy Constable Bennie Matlock.

Earlier in the 1970s, Constable Jack Merritt was the loner in the constable's office. Later, Merritt hired a deputy and a secretary. Space was adequate.

After McGinnis took over the constableship in 1981, the constable's staff expanded with the rapid growth of rural Midland County. Today, McGinnis has four deputies: Monte Kay Cross, Hugh "Buzz" Buzzell, Ron Rice and Matlock. Working for them are two clerks: Jackie Ward and Rosemary Olguin.

"It's fun when everybody's here," said Matlock.

"Six desks, seven people and a three-by-three-(foot) column" sporting horseshoe-styled coatracks pretty well fill the office, observed Rice.

"Don't even have room for a moose head," said a lawman. Next door in Justice Charlie Sprayberry's offices is an assortment of wild game trophies — from a wild turkey's beard to a moose head.

"We've been thinking about putting double-decked desks in here," mused the constable, who noted that his new office is "sure an improvement."

"It's going up fast, it's inexpensive, and they (Decker and crew) are doing a good job."

Many people's feelings were inspiration for prayer day

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

It is believed that the idea began with the efforts of one woman.

Mrs. Darwin James witnessed not only the severe problems left in the wake of the Civil War, but also the plight of the European and Oriental people who came to the United States seeking a new life. The problems she saw those in such hard times encounter seemed beyond human solution.

At that time Mrs. James was, in addition to being the mother of seven children, president of the Women's Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A. and administrator of the Women's Executive Committee of Home Missions. She sought the only answer she knew:

Prayer.

Turning her thoughts into action, she established a national day of prayer for Home Missions.

Day of Prayer grew from feelings of many

At about the same time, Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery and Mrs. Henry Peabody, after returning from a visit to overseas mission fields, also turned to the same answer to aid them in helping others:

A national day of prayer.

As more denominations began to participate, the two days became closer and closer together. In 1919, they were combined and a national committee was established to prepare one celebration for the world.

The day was officially set on the first Friday in March.

In honor of the World Day of Prayer, Church Women United and the Midland Association of Churches are holding a special service Friday at 7:30 p.m. at First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave. A reception follows the prayer service.

This service has been observed worldwide since the International Committee for the World Day of Prayer was established in 1967, with CWU recognized as the official sponsor of this celebration in the United States. This year marks the first time the 18 members of the Midland Association of Churches have combined with CWU in sponsoring and performing this service.

"As people who pray regularly, it is joyously appropriate that we are joining the CWU who, over the years, has consistently been so helpful to the spiritual life of Midland," said the Rev. Joseph Schley Jr., president of the Midland Association of Churches.

The Midland Association of Churches is an ecumencial group which sponsors, among others, community Easter and Thanksgiving services and the annual School of Christian Living.

In addition to the World Day of Prayer, the Midland CWU chapter is actively involved in providing services for the Center for Battered Women and their Children, Meals on Wheels, Casa de Amigos and St. Andrew Mission.

Carol Hobbs, past-president of CWU, said of last year's observance, "There were 170 countries and regions that actually participated."

The message delivered each year is written by a different group. This year's message was written by Women of the Caribbean.

"No matter what your religious background, you will feel comfortable," Sheila Leggett said of this year's service. "We will have a prayer for the children of the world, then each will be asked to give his own personal meditation."

The short program centers around the life of Jesus Christ.

"We will use examples of Jesus Christ as a person — what he did, what he tried to accomplish. We will show the forgiving nature of Jesus," Ms. Leggett said.

Pausing, she added, "Without Him, there would be no basis for this (World Day of Prayer) at all."

AG wants to represent consumers before PUC

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox says he would like to take over the job of representing customers before the Public Utility Commission, but consumer groups say they prefer an independent counsel.

The Senate State Affairs Committee concluded on two days of testimony Wednesday on several measures tinkering with the controversial three-member board. It referred all the bills to a subcommittee for further consideration.

The agency has been criticized as being too favorable to the utility industry. Two of the commission members recently quit. Gov. Mark White appointed replacements and has called for election of the commission.

Carol Barger, a lobbyist for Consumers Union, said her group prefers an independent public counsel to Mattox' suggestion that his office take the job, which she said would only result in "a couple of lawyers" being assigned to the PUC cases.

An independent counsel would be able to concentrate more effort on the complicated rate cases and would be more directly accountable to consumers, Barger said.

Mattox told the committee that a public counsel at the PUC could only represent bill payers before that agency, not in courts of law if a case is appealed there.

"The simplest and best way would be to allow the attorney general to represent consumers," he concluded.

Senators hear pleas for better teacher pay

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A salary increase of at least 30 percent over the 1984-85 biennium for classroom teachers was suggested Wednesday to the Senate comittee on education by the Texas Classroom Teachers Association.

"There's more to providing quality education than simply assuring that someone with a teaching certificate is present in the classroom," said Betty Pyle, president of TCTA and a science teacher at Bonham Junior High School in Odessa.

Ms. Pyle presented a proposal to legislators calling for beginning teachers with bachelor of arts degrees to receive a base pay of $14,000 per year, and experienced teachers to receive 5 percent of the base salary amount of each subsequent step in the same pay grade.

"We are cognizant that the salaries of beginning teachers are not adequate, while not forgetting that consideration must also be given to rewarding and retaining those who have made a career of teaching," said Ms. Pyle, who has taught 11 years in the Odessa school system. "We must not only encourage talented people to enter the profession, but demonstrate to them that it's worthy of their dedication."

TCTA also supports legislation providing longevity pay for school district employees. Measures have been filed by Victoria Sen. John Sharp and Killeen Rep. Stan Schlueter authorizing payment of $4 per month to school personnel for each year of employment, Ms. Pyle told the committee.

Two other areas of concern to TCTA are a state-funded group health insurance program for public school employees and an improved state sick leave program for teachers, according to testimony heard Wednesday.

Sharp and Schlueter have also introduced bills which increase the number of sick leave days from five to eight days per year, and allow the use of sick leave days for either personal illness or family illness, Ms. Pyle said.

Testimony also was heard from the Association of Texas Professional Educators and other community action groups interested in education.

Elderly students learning to visualize lip-reading

"There is a little assertiveness training," Ms. Phillips explained. "One of the things I'm hoping to accomplish with these ladies is for them to take their own responsibility for hearing. It's hard sometimes to stand up and ask people to rephrase and repeat."

It also is difficult to lipread from certain positions and when more than one person is involved in the conversation, problems faced by the residents of Trinity Towers during mealtimes.

"It's hard to be facing everyone at the same time," Ms. Phillips agreed with the class. "It's hard to follow a conversation."

"What do you do when the conversation is bouncing back and forth?," she asked one resident.

"She just eats," another one joked.

"But what happens when you really want to know what's going on," Ms. Phillips persisted, "like if it's your daughter and son-in-law talking about you and your money?"

"Why, I'd jump right in," another exclaimed.

Despite the light barrage of jokes tossed around the class, the students learned the answer.

"When people are interrupting each other, pick out the guy with the most clout and stick with him," Ms. Phillips said.

One woman told the class she finally had enough nerve to stand up to her minister, whom she had had difficulty understanding previously.

"I couldn't understand a word so I made him spell it."

"What happened when you asked him?"

"Well, he misspelled it — but I got enough of what he meant."

China tourist's-eye-view at Museum of Southwest

Dr. Frank Samponaro will share his adventures in China at 7:30 p.m. today at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

Samponaro, an associate professor of history at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, spent three weeks in China last summer. His free lecture and slide program is in conjunction with the museum's current "China From Within" exhibit, which presents a look at contemporary China by its own photographers.

In addition to describing what being a tourist in China is like, Samponaro will also give a historical perspective on the recent changes in the Chinese government.

The museum will be open beginning with a 7 p.m. reception. The public is invited to see the "China From Within" exhibit as well as the second exhibit in the series of exhibits planned on the works of Merritt Mauzey. Refreshments will be served.

Other activities at the museum this week include a public lecture planned for Friday. This lecture is not in conjunction with the "China From Within" exhibit. Jerry C. Porter will speak on "Designing the Mid-America Center" at 3 p.m., not at 7 p.m. as previously announced.

A guided tour will be provided at 3 p.m. Sunday for the "China From Within" show.

Eighteen-year-old indicted for Midland woman's murder

Eighteen-year-old Dennis Goff has been indicted for the murder of a former San Angelo woman whose nude and beaten body was found along a dirt road near Midland Regional Airport Monday afternoon.

Goff, of 2501 Harvard Ave., was indicted by the grand jury Wednesday and remains in the county jail under $25,000 bond.

He is charged with killing 31-year-old Mickey Berry, who moved to Midland about a month ago and who went to work last week as a sales clerk for The Shoe Tree in Oak Ridge Square.

An autopsy disclosed she died of massive brain damage after being beaten with some type of blunt instrument, reportedly one of her own shoes.

Goff was taken into custody late Monday night at the airport. Law enforcement authorities say he was scheduled to board a flight for El Paso, where he reportedly was to have taken an Army physical sometime this week.

Witnesses told investigators Goff and Ms. Berry left a Wall Avenue club together late Sunday night. Her car was found parked at the nightspot Monday. No motive in the case has been established, according to authorities.

Grand jury indicts two for murder

BIG SPRING — Four felony indictments were returned Wednesday by the Howard County grand jury, according to District Attorney Rick Hamby.

Indicted for murder were 22-year-old Bobby Arista and 30-year-old Alfredo Torrez, both of Big Spring.

Arista is charged with the Dec. 9, 1982, death of Kim Alexander, 26, of Big Spring. Torrez is charged in the Feb. 5 death of 39-year-old Daniel Rios, also of Big Spring.

Other indictments were returned against Mark James Smith of Big Spring, felony possession of about 300 pounds of marijuana; and Clifford Bart Dunbar, a transient, for a Jan. 5 rape in Big Spring.

Woman reports parking lot robbery

Police Roundup

A woman reported to city police that she was robbed on the parking lot of Midland Memorial Hospital Wednesday night.

Virginia Melton of 607 Brooks Drive told officers she got out of her car about 8:30 p.m. and had locked the door when a man grabbed her from behind, clamped his hand over her mouth and said: "If you scream, I'll kill you."

She bit his hand, however, and he fled on foot with her purse containing personal papers, a small amount of change and a Midland National Bank checkbook.

He was described as black, in his early 20s, about 5 feet 3 inches tall and weighing 125 to 130 pounds.

Lewis' financial statement to indicate 'oversight'

AUSTIN (AP — Speaker Gib Lewis says he will be filing a new 1981 financial statement with the secretary of state today to correct what he says is an "inadvertent" oversight of some of his stock holdings.

One of the corporations involved is partially owned by Lewis and owns two planes that Lewis leases for his political travels.

Lewis, D-Fort Worth, told a quickly called news conference late Wednesday that he was making the disclosure on advice of legal counsel after he learned a news reporter was preparing a story on it.

"I assure you I am not trying to hide anything," Lewis said.

He said his 1982 report of financial holding that might conflict with his legislative duties was not due yet "but it will fully list these stocks."

He said the overlooked stocks included 3,300 shares of LL&M Aviation, 100 shares of Houston Oil, 16 shares of Seagull Pipeline, and 31 shares of Tenneco Inc.

Lewis said Tenneco, Seagull and Houston are big companies with thousands of stockholders.

Odessan critically hurt in shooting

ODESSA — Police are investigating a shooting that left an Odessa man in critical condition early this morning.

Placed in the intensive care unit of Medical Center Hospital following surgery for gunshot wounds to the chest and abdomen was 30-year-old William Kendall Dieu.

Police said they were called to the 600 block of College Street near Woodson Park about 12:45 a.m. and found Dieu lying face down along a curb. He had been shot twice with a small-caliber weapon.

A witness provided officers with a description of a Ford pickup and police were looking for two Hispanic men wanted for questioning in the case.

Survey reveals new round of supermarket prices increase

Bills boosted by higher meat, egg and milk costs at February's close

Associated Press

Today's consumers are spending more than twice as much as they were at the supermarket a decade ago, according to an Associated Press marketbasket survey which shows a new round of price increases last month.

The AP found that grocery bills at the end of February were boosted by higher meat prices, as well as by scattered rises in the cost of milk and eggs.

The survey is based on a list of 14 food and non-food items, selected at random and priced at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973. Prices have been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. The results are not weighted to reflect actual spending. Nor are they adjusted for seasonal variations.

AMONG THE highlights of the latest price check:

-The marketbasket total increased during February at the survey store in seven cities, decreased in five cities and was unchanged in one. The average increase was 1.8 percent; the average decrease was 1 percent. Overall, the marketbasket bills rose an average of six-tenths of 1 percent last month.

-The February jump was the biggest since last July when prices rose by seven-tenths of 1 percent. It followed two months of declines — three-tenths of 1 percent in December and one one-hundreth of 1 percent in January.

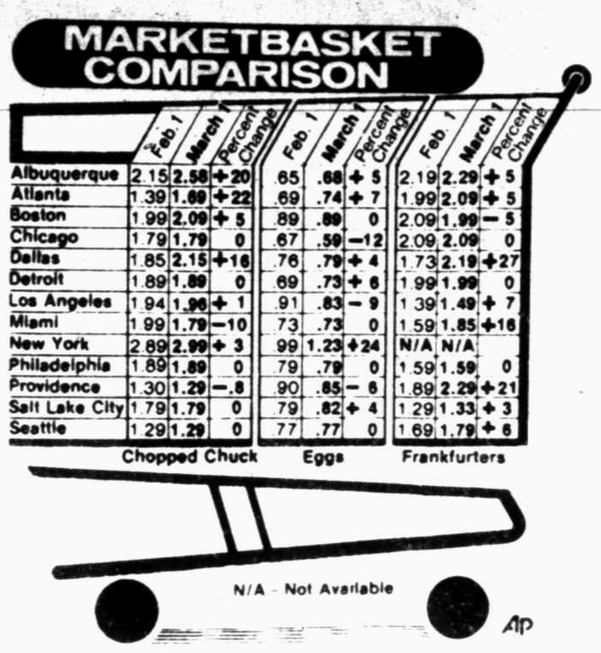
-A look at prices today and on March 1, 1973 showed that the marketbasket bills at the checklist stores increased by 105 percent. The rise was slightly less than the increase in inflation in general; the overall Consumer Price Index went up by about 120 percent during the same period.

SUPERMARKET PRICES rose sharply during the mid-1970s, but the increases have been relatively modest in the past two years, due largely to abundant food supplies and a slowdown in the rate of inflation. Over the last 12 months, the AP found that the marketbasket bill was up at the checklist store in nine cities and down in four cities, for an overall increase of 2.2 percent.

The February price rise was most evident at the meat counter. Meats represented for 23 percent of the items on the AP checklist, but accounted for 37 percent of the increases during February. The price of all-beef frankfurters went up last month at the checklist store in eight of the cities surveyed, chopped chuck was up in six cities and pork chops were higher in four cities.

Further increases in meat prices could be ahead. The supply of beef is expected to rise, but so is consumer demand, which has been weak because of the recession. As demand recovers along with the economy, prices are expected to go up.

Less than one-fifth of the items surveyed by the AP dropped in price last month, while over one-fourth increased. The cost of eggs went up in Feburary at the checklist store in six cities; milk was up in five cities and so was butter.



A LOOK AT the overall number of items in the AP survey showed more increases and fewer decreases during February than during January. Here are the percentages of increases and decreases:

The AP used standard brands and sizes or comparable substitutes for its survey. Items temporarily out of stock on one of the survey dates being compared were not included in the over-all totals.

The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that eggs cost more in one area than another. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease — saying a particular item went up 10 percent in one city and 6 percent in another.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar. A 15th item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list when the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, R.I., Salt Lake City and Seattle.

CITY-BY-CITY BREAKDOWN OF WHAT HAPPENED IN FEBRUARY

ALBUQUERQUE: The total went from $21.25 to $21.66, up 1.9 percent. Milk, eggs, chopped chuck, frankfurters, pork chops, sugar and coffee went up; orange juice, paper towels and detergent went down; fabric softener, butter, peanut butter and tomato sauce were unchanged.

ATLANTA: The bill for 13 available items went up 3 percent, from $17.78 to $18.31. Program offers diabetic participants sugar level monitor for pregnancy

Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — To Kathy Peterson, the act of giving birth is to risk death. Yet on Jan. 25, Peterson gave birth to her son Joel, and called the ordeal "a piece of cake." And Emily Holing hopes her first child, expected within two weeks, also will be delivered smoothly, although she too risks death.

Both women are diabetics, and diabetic mothers are three to five times more likely to bear a child with birth defects or to expose themselves to birth risks and even death as compared to a non-diabetic mother. For diabetic mothers, giving birth can lead to hypertension, kidney infections and liver complications.

But Holing and Peterson are beating those odds by participating in the University of Washington's Diabetes in Pregnancy Project, a program begun in 1980. Similar programs are run in Boston, New York and Pittsburgh.

The program offers no cure for the disease, but it does offer a system of intensive monitoring of the ailment that offers prospective mothers a means to carefully regulate their blood sugar level. Pregnant diabetic women experience acute variations in their blood sugar levels, a condition that leads to birth risks and birth defects.

Two UW physicians, Dr. Robert H. Knopp and Dr. Zane Brown, were prime movers in starting the program. Because diabetes is a problem from the moment of conception, potential parents undergo counseling when they decide to have a child. Along with weekly physical examinations, counseling continues after the mother gives birth and after she and her child have left the hospital.

Barbara Plovie, nursing coordinator for the program, said "the women definitely are not guinea pigs," but with all the monitoring of their blood their homes do "end up like a chemical laboratory." Plovie said the average cost of a diabetic mother's birth is $15,000 because of additional treatment required, but the UW program can cut that to $6,000.

Peterson and Holing faithfully use a Glucometer - a six-ounce, pocket-book-size diabetic medical marvel costing $250 that measures blood sugar level. The patient first lances or pricks her fingertip to obtain a blood sample. The samples are taken five to nine times a day, and then transferred to a special strip of treated paper that turns colors. The color changes are interpreted by the Glucometer into insulin needs. Insulin is a hormone that regulates the body's use of sugar.

"You become pretty flexible with this process," Peterson said. "I've taken blood samples in a shopping mall. Some people looked at me kind of funny, but when it's time to do that, it's time."

Joel was Peterson's third child. Their first, also a boy, survived only one day. Their second, daughter Katie, 2, was born after lengthy, non-diabetic-related complications during which Peterson was hospitalized and bed-ridden for two months. "I'd never carried a baby beyond 34 weeks before Joel," she said. "He was born after 38 weeks, and the next day I went home from the hospital."

Peterson, 27, didn't know she was developing diabetes when her first son was born. She didn't anticipate any birthing problems but was in labor three days and the boy, although he weighed 7 pounds, was too weak to survive. Her diabetes was in the later stages during her second pregnancy, but following Katie's birth her body reverted to normal and she did not need insulin treatments. In 1982, however, Peterson developed into a full-fledged diabetic and began taking two insulin shots daily. While pregnant this time, she gave herself three shots daily.

As for the Diabetes in Pregnancy Project: "If you have the problem and are thinking about pregnancy, this plan is a wonder. If anything goes wrong, this also is the best place to deal with the problem."

Since Joel's birth, she has continued the home monitoring of her blood sugar.

"I saw some hospitalized diabetics who had horrible control," she said, referring to the self-monitoring process. "I can't believe how careless some were. After my experiences, I don't think I would ever change my diabetic-control patterns."

Grammar close as phone

NEW YORK (AP) — You can dial R-E-W-R-I-T-E in New York City to learn how to write it right.

"Rewrite" is a grammar hotline that has been set up at York College, a senior college of City University of New York, to answer questions about grammar, punctuation and usage.

The service is available weekday afternoons, except during holidays and school vacations. It is staffed by English professors from York on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and on Tuesday and Thursday English teachers from nearby high schools field the questions.

Attached to the telephone is a tape recorder, activated with the caller's permission, to collect material for a half-hour local radio program broadcast twice a week. A log is kept of all calls and from it a faculty member selects excerpts from the tape and writes the radio script.

"Interest in REWRITE remains high," said Dr. Alan Cooper, chairman of York's English department. "College graduates who have long since paid their tuition and received their sheepskin get updated for a dime."

With calls coming as often as every 10 minutes, those seeking 30-second minilessons include secretaries, administrators, business executives, students and retired people, as well as professional writers with a menta' block, he said.

"Calls," Cooper says, "have come from a surprising variety of sources — student editors of law journals, business people writing reports, hostesses preparing invitations, legal secretaries, and writers of textbooks, brochures and public relations materials."

The greatest number of questions pertain to punctuation, particularly of quoted or parenthetical material, he reports. For instance, at the end of a quote, does one put a period inside or outside a quotation mark? (Inside, in American usage.)

Playpens may pose severe health hazards for infants

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission says dropside mesh playpens and portable mesh cribs used with a side down can pose a severe health hazard for infants.

At least seven children have died in accidents involving mesh-sided cribs and playpens since 1973, the commission said Tuesday. Six of the incidents involved children who were six weeks old or less.

Three infants suffocated last year after being left unattended in a mesh playpen or crib that had one of two dropsides in the down position, the commission said. After falling off the edge of the mattress pad, the infant's head or chest was compressed between the floor board and the mesh side so the child was unable to continue breathing.

"It is extremely dangerous to leave a child in mesh-sided playpens or portable cribs with the dropside in the down position," the CPSC said.

It advised parents to keep the dropside locked securely in an up position whenever a child is in the playpen or crib.

The commission said that when one side of the playpen is left down, the mesh forms a loose pocket that leaves a gap between the edge of the floor board and the mesh side. Many parents are unaware that an infant can fall or roll into the pocket and suffocate, it said.

The CPSC is working with the Juvenile Products Manufacturers Association to develop a warning label for playpens. Labels currently are on all mesh-sided cribs with dropsides that have been produced since 1980.

Playpens and portable cribs with mesh sides have been produced for about 23 years and have been distributed nationwide. About 6.5 million mesh playpens and 925,000 cribs may be in the possession of consumers, the commission said.

Celery with low-calorie dips combat aids for waist watchers

It has been said that the most effective excercise for dieters is shaking their head firmly from left to right when ordering food. When you're offered low-calorie celery to dunk in low-calorie dips, however, it is fitting to nod your head yes.

Let's start with the celery. There are only seven calories in a rib of celery, which is plentiful in the markets now throughout May. At that rate you could probably eat an entire stalk (bunch) and wind up with less calories than a slice of buttered bread. And that munching and crunching is good for your teeth and puts fiber in your diet.

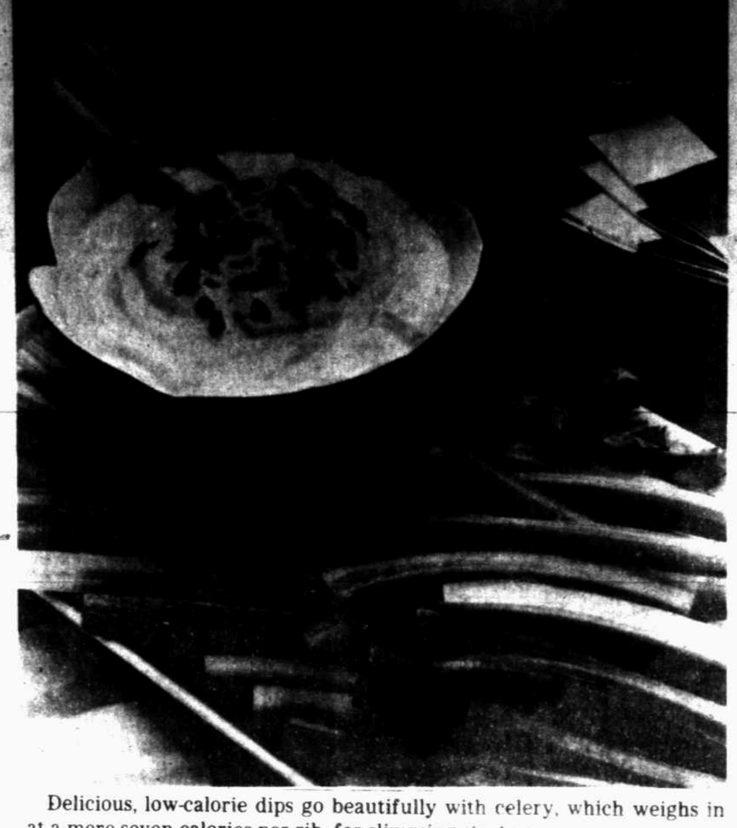
The dips add a special something to the celery, without adding many calories.

A spring-green spinach dip, weighing only 54 clories for the same amount is also made with yogurt — this one herbed with Italian seasoning and a bit of garlic powder.

CREAMY PINEAPPLE DIP FOR CELERY

1 stalk(bunch) celery
1 container (1 lb.) low-fat cottage cheese
1 can (8 oz.) crushed pineapple in natural juice
1 container (8 oz.) plain low-fat yogurt
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
1/2 teaspoon pure rum flavoring
1 tablespoon shopped walnuts

Remove leaves from celery; cut ribs into 4-x 1/2-inch lengths. Place in a bowl with cold water to cover; refrigerate until ready to serve. Place cottage cheese in the container of an electric blender; blend until smooth, scraping down sides of container. Pour into a medium bowl. Drain pineapple in a sieve pressing out as much liquid as possible. Add pineapple to cottage cheese along with yogurt, ginger and rum flavoring; mix well. Cover and refrigerate until ready to serve. Spoon into a serving bowl. Sprinkle with nuts. Serve with reserved celery sticks. About 3 cups. About 73 calories per 1/3 cup.



Delicious, low-calorie dips go beautifully with celery, which weighs in at a mere seven calories per rib, for slimming starters.

Playing games by mail is becoming popular pastime

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jim Dutton started a "play-by-mail" game company a year ago as a hobby.

But Dutton, 25, didn't count on the popularity of "Fantasy" games such as "Dungeons and Dragons." In a year's time, Dutton's company, Entertainment Concepts Inc., has more than 3,000 people all over the world playing games by mail.

Dutton quit his job as a systems analyst for a Charlotte computer company to devote full time to playing games. He has also had to hire five people to help him keep up with all the players.

"It has really gone over a lot bigger than I had counted on," says Dutton, who runs the company out of his home. "I thought it would be a good hobby, but it got too big for that in two months. The games have really caught on."

Entertainment Concepts features two "correspondence" games, Silver Dawn, patterned after "Dungeons and Dragons," and "Star Trek," taken from the movie. Dutton and two other "game masters" write a short adventure story, leaving the players in the midst of a crisis to solve. The players use the resources in the story, such as the crew in the space ship "Star Trek," to solve the problem.

Players write their solutions out and send them in to the company. Dutton and his employees then write another chapter in the story, again leaving the players to find solutions.

"It's a lot like writing a book," Dutton says. "It's like reading a chapter in a book, then imagining how you would like for the next chapter to come out, then writing it. It winds up being an episodic type adventure, with fantasy role playing."

Dutton says players send in their responses on everything from lined notebook paper to postcards. Dutton's stories are printed by a computer.

DEAR ABBY

Widow who steps out decides to stay home

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow, 60 years old. I look no more than 50 — at least that's what everybody tells me.

I have been a widow for two years, after being married for 35 years to a wonderful man. A friend asked me if I would go out to dinner with a friend of hers. She said he was an attractive widower, age 63, whose wife had died two years ago.

I accepted, and we found we had a lot in common — same interests, religion, etc. We laughed and talked and had a lovely evening. I really enjoyed the gentleman's company and felt so comfortable with him.

When he took me home he spoiled it all by asking if he could "stay over"! Imagine! To me that was an insult. What makes a man think that because he takes a woman to dinher she will let him stay over? Lots of my women friends tell me that's all the men want these days. I just can't get over the shock!

Now I won't go out with any man. I will just live alone with memories of what men used to be — gentlemen who had some respect for women. — INSULTED

DEAR INSULTED: Please don't judge all men by the one who insulted you. There are still some gentlemen around.

DEAR ABBY: Please let me know if we should send a thank-you note for a check we received as a wedding gift that was returned twice to us marked "N.S.F." (It finally cleared.) — NEWLYWEDS IN NEW CASTLE, PA.

DEAR NEWLYWEDS: A gracious thank-you note would be doubly appreciated after a double bounce.

DEAR ABBY: Having recently reached the "single" status, I am in a quandary over how to answer the question, "Are you divorced or widowed?" Either way, it is a very painful and unpleasant subject, and I don't care to discuss it.

I realize that this is a "natural" question, but I would like to know how to politely but firmly refuse to reply without offending, or provoking curiosity, suspicion or any leading questions. I am a very private person.

I do not like to lie, but I have done so in order to avoid disclosing my past. I realize this is wrong, and one day I will be caught and embarrassed.

I've tried to come up with a suitable solution, but I have been unsuccessful. Any help you can give me will be appreciated. — NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: You need more help that I can give you in a letter if you are unable to respond to the "natural" (by your own admission) question, "Are you widowed or divorced?"

To be divorced is nothing to be ashamed of. Neither is having been widowed. To try to sidestep this question is unrealistic and childish and is bound to provoke suspicion.

Answer truthfully. Then should a question follow that you feel is either painful or prying, respond, "If you don't mind, I'd rather not discuss it."

(Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

AT WIT'S END

High price of safety

By ERMA BOMBECK

Like most women I have become paranoid about crime.

I lock my house every time I go to the garbage can, set the burglar alarm when I go for the mail, and lock my car every time I get gas.

To date, I have been locked out of my house 14 times, have been charged for five false alarms, and required the services of a locksmith on eight occasions to get me into my own car. This proves something. The world is safe from me!

If there's one thing that ticks me off about the whole crime scene, it's the way other people whom I don't even know have had a profound effect on my life.

To begin with, I carry around more keys than a school janitor. I have a key for my luggage, a key for the gas tank, a key for the safety deposit box and a key to the box that holds all of my extra keys.

The keys have two things in common. They all look alike and they never open what I want to get into.

Secondly, I have been forced by bad people roaming the streets to get a dog that barks whenever he hears a noise. Unfortunately, this noise can be as inaudible as the sigh of a bored cricket at 3 a.m. This will cause the dog to jump higher than the window sill. The dog never barks at strange people. Only family.

Thanks to evil lurking around every corner, I have had to install dead-bolt locks on all our doors. Dead bolts were never meant to be taken seriously as a deterrent against crime. They were originally invented to measure the limits of human stress. At one point when I could not find a key I found myself on my hands and knees signing for flowers through a dog door.

Robberies have also turned me into a crazy person every time I leave the house. The house must look like it is occupied by five or six people who work from home. There should be no exposed windows but lots of lights. No newspapers in the driveway. A car in the garage ALWAYS. A sign on the front lawn that says this house will break your eardrums if you turn the door knob.

Possibly the worst thing crime has done for me is to turn me into an unlisted number in the phone book, living in a house without a name, who is afraid to open the door to a person who might need help.

Sometimes, I think the rats are winning.

Mental health care law challenged

California law called 'Catch-22'

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Ken Forbes wanted to salvage his marriage to his high school sweetheart — for their sake and the sake of their three children.

But the ever-increasing problems in the 11-year relationship were wearing Forbes down. And something else was bothering him: the memory of his 10-year-old daughter's face when she unexpectedly entered the bathroom and saw him masturbating.

Forbes felt he couldn't discuss his anxiety over the relationship or shame over the incident with family or friends. So he sought the services of counselor Robert C. Newman, believing Newman was required to keep the secrets of his inner turmoil.

That, says Forbes, was "the biggest mistake of my life."

As required by California law, Newman reported Forbes as having a "vague sexual contact" with his daughter to the local child protective services agency. Forbes was tried and eventually acquitted on criminal charges stemming from that report.

And now, in a unique civil lawsuit that may have significant ramifications for those who seek — and seek to provide — mental health care, Forbes is asking the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn a lower court decision in his case and rule that therapists must give Miranda-type warnings to their patients to protect them against self-incrimination.

"PATIENTS ARE constitutionally entitled to be warned in advance that not everything they say is going to be confidential; that there is a reporting law and the doctor is duty-bound to turn information over to the police," said Forbes' attorney, Myron Klarfeld.

Klarfeld believes that those who seek a counselor's aid in dealing with their relationships with their children should not be penalized for telling the truth.

"This law is a bear trap for the unsuspecting person who goes to a therapist seeking help and may instead land in jail," he said.

But a state appellate court found no basis for Forbes' belief in a constitutional duty to warn, and the state Supreme Court declined to hear the case. Forbes now awaits a U.S. Supreme Court decision on whether to hear his claim that Miranda-like warnings are required because therapists ire required by law to serve as agents of the state.

The 33-year-old construction worker has filed a separate lawsuit in San Bernardino County against Newman, claiming Newman's report was "unreasonable" and unauthorized by law at the time it was made.

Forbes — whose 28-year-old wife died of a pulmonary embolism shortly after his arrest in October 1979 — says he suffered substantially because of the therapist's "betrayal." He says the report had no basis and has left him "devastated."

HE TEMPORARILY lost custody of his children to the county because of the incident. For nine months after his wife's death, the children lived in foster homes.

"They couldn't understand why they'd been taken away. It took them several months to get over the nightmares," he said.

Forbes is still bitter about his experience.

"I believe it was my first visit," he recalls of his counseling session with Newman. "He asked me a lot of questions. He asked if the children had ever seen me nude. I told him about my daughter. And when the session was over, he told me he was bound by law to report his suspicions to the authorities. . . suspicions that there was a possibility of child abuse.

"I went to Newman for help. I ended up with mental anguish and torture," he said. "Even my friends at church turned their backs on me."

Newman refused to comment on the pending case. "My professional allegiance is to do what I can to make the world a better and safer place in which to live," he said through a spokesperson.

But Newman may have believed he had no choice about making the 1979 report. A state law, as revised in 1980, requires that "any child care custodian, medical practitioner, non-medical practitioner or employee of a child protective agency" who "knows or reasonably suspects" child abuse to make a report to a child protective agency — or face the possibility of criminal prosecution.

STATE LAW immunizes psychotherapists from legal action for the consequences of authorized reports. But Forbes says that Newman's report, which was based on his meeting with Forbes, was not authorized when made.

The appellate court, overruling a trial court, agreed. "At the time Newman made the report (prior to a November 1980 revision of the law), actual observation of the child appears to be a requirement," the court said. It ordered the trial court to reinstate the suit.

"We say he didn't have the right to report at that time, and even if he did, he didn't exercise it in a reasonable manner as required by law," said Klarfeld.

Klarfeld calls the reporting law a "Catch-22 situation" for therapists who, he says, risk lawsuits like Forbes' if they report their patients and criminal prosecution from the government if they do not.

The same statute is under another attack through a criminal case by attorney Ken Warner. The California Supreme Court has agreed to hear arguments in an appeal of client Carl Stritzinger's conviction on charges stemming from Stritzinger's alleged molestation of his stepdaughter.

"THE MAJORITY of the evidence to convict was the psychologist testifying against him," said Warner. "The (psychologist) informed the protective services agency of the county, they notified the sheriff and that got the criminal ball rolling.

"The court should deem the law unconstitutional because it violates a major public policy," Warner said. "Don't we want people to seek mental health?"

He believes his case, like Klarfeld's, is "a landmark. It asks the court to weigh the scales of justice for a society concerned about child abuse on the one hand and the privilege of the psychotherapist patient on the other," he said.

Society's concerns can best be met by keeping a patient's revelations confidential, Warner says. "If you know that information being disclosed can be used against you, most people won't seek help."

The psychologist who reported Stritzinger to the authorities and was later subpoenaed by the prosecution and testified shares some of Warner's concerns. Agreeing to discuss the case anonymously, he said he regretted meeting with Stritzinger after he talked with the stepdaughter.

"(Stritzinger) was distraught. It was my well-intentioned desire to help the family make changes. I would never have seen him if I knew I would be subpoenaed," he said.

THE PSYCHOLOGIST called the prosecution's ability to subpoena information about his session with Stritzinger "unfair."

"I now warn patients that everything you tell me can be subpoenaed whenever it involves child abuse," he said, adding that the warnings "have made a difference" in his ability to help patients. "I think it's a serious drawback to therapy," he said.

The ruling stemmed from a suit against the University of California Regents and others by the parents of Tatiana Tarasoff, a UC Berkeley student murdered in 1969 by 26-year-old Prosenjit Poddar, a graduate student receiving psychiatric care on campus.

The girl's parents said that the counselors, who had been warned by Poddar of his intention to kill Tarasoff, had a legal duty to warn the woman or her family. Although defense attorneys said disclosure would destroy the confidential therapist-patient relationship, the court held that the defendants could be sued for failure to give warning.

Plant placement requires thought

Copley News Service

The correct positioning of various plantings is a subject that often mystifies those whose gardening activities are restricted to apartments, balconies and patios.

Unfortunately, not all apartments have balconies and most have windows facing in just one direction. Gardeners who retire to apartments, for one reason or another, often find what grows best in their particular light exposure by trial and error. But here are a few guidelines.

First of all, whether you live in a house or apartment, your indoor plants will acclimatize best to your particular indoor conditions if you buy them young. I've seen gorgeous big palms die a slow but sure death where young ones adapted and grew into fine specimens. Starting out small gives you the best chance of enjoying large decorator plants. And even if they don't make it, your loss won't have been so costly.

For low-light conditions, at a north window or in the middle or back of rooms with a sunnier exposure, generally the plain green plants that suffer neglect will be able to sustain themselves.

SUCH PLANTS are pothos, nephthytis, philodendron, snake plant (sansevieria), bird's-nest fern, table fern, rubber plant, dracaena, Chinese evergreen, aluminum plant, fittonia and green ivies. I have found too that some others that are supposed to need brighter light or even some sun each day will tolerate low-light levels for most of the winter if given brief holidays in bright light — Norfolk Island pine, prayer plants and jade plants. Swedish ivy and grape ivy don't seem to mind too much where they sit either, and tolerate a good deal of neglect.

Plants in such dim light situations, where your hand will barely cast a shadow on a sheet of white paper, will not exactly thrive and grow very much but they will maintain a certain decorative value. Just remember that plants which are sitting in these low-light areas need little food and water. Keep them clean and fertilize them perhaps once a year unless you give them a brief holiday now and then in a brighter spot or outdoors. Most enjoy normal room temperatures, with a slight drop at night.

Many green plants in this first category of low-light tolerators can be renewed by cuttings — pothos, philodendron, the ivies. Making new plants in this way allows you to grow them even where you know they will become straggly, because you can keep replacing them with new ones.

Begonias, African violets and gloxinias need higher light levels than our first category of green plants. Ideal is an east window where they receive early morning sun. West windows with strong afternoon sun are often too hot.

LIGHT NEEDS in a specific location will vary with the season too. A general rule is that plants may need to be closer to a window in winter and moved a way a bit in summer. Or a window may have to be shaded a little in summer. I've grown African violets very successfully, for instance, in a west window. But as the sun became more intense with springtime, I shaded the window on the outside with an inexpensive bamboo curtain. The violets continued to thrive all summer shaded in this way, and they bloomed in the good light all winter.

Traditional interpretation of male superiority questioned

Hearst Feature Service

Being Adam's rib has been used by many anti-feminists to keep women as a sort of permanent Avis to Adam's Hertz. But if a biblical scholar who has been researching the matter is correct, the pendulum of interpretation may be swinging back to the woman's side.

David Freedman, a biblical scholar at University of California-Davis, has just published a study on the language of the sources of the Genesis myth of Adam and Eve, and he argues that the myth says woman was created by God as an equal of man, not his subordinate.

Writing in Biblical Archaeology Review, Freedman concludes that Eve, the biblical first woman, is better described as a "power equal to" Adam, rather than as a "fitting helpmate." Freedman bases his research on a study of ancient Canaanite and Hebrew derivations of the Hebrew phrase ezer kenegdo, in Genesis 2:18, which until now has been translated as "fitting helper," a description of Eve's relation to Adam.

As rendered in the Revised Standard Version of the Bible, the line reads: "It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him a helper fit for him."

FREEDMAN, who studied northwest Semitic languages at Columbia University, believes that in this passage, God is explaining that He created woman to be man's equal, not his subordinate. If Freedman's analysis gains widespread acceptance with translators of the Bible, no longer could social conservatives utilize a common religious argument that woman was created by God to play second fiddle to man. Freedman's paper can can be seen as a new step in a larger effort by modern historians to strip away old societal preconceptions from the real content of the Bible and other religious documents.

Freedman himself says that he was not approaching the question from a feminist perspective in reaching his conclusion.

"Basically, what this shows is that the literary basis for the Old Testament myth coincides with traditional Jewish commentary which always saw Eve as an equal to man," said Freedman. "Early Christians translated that story and overlaid a lot of philosophy toward women picked up from the Gnostic religious movement that was highly influential at the time."

And, as if to bolster the argument for equality of the sexes, a woman Bible scholar confronted the same dilemma of the phrase ezer kenegdo and came to the same conclusion — 10 years ago.

IN THE ARTICLE "Depatriarchalizing in Biblical Interpretation," in the March 1973 issue of Journal of the American Academy of Religion, Phyllis Trible of Union Theological Seminary at Columbia University worked with slightly different methods, based more on literary context than philological roots.

Said she: ". . . Ezer is a relational term — by itself the word does not specify positions within relationships; more particularly, it does not imply inferiority. My translation is this: God is the helper superior to man, animals are helpers inferior to man, woman is the helper equal to man."

Freedman maintains that the interpretation of the word kenegdo as "fit" or "appropriate" does not jibe with the account of the creation of Adam and Eve in another Genesis passage, 1:27. There the line "male and female He created them" does not, Freedman asserts, imply either superiority or inferiority of either party. Although the word has given translators problems, Freedman asserts that certain Jewish commentaries have translated the word to mean "equal to."

THE CHOICE of the passive interpretation for woman was not made arbitrarily, asserts Freedman, but reflected values that the early Christian religious leaders injected into the whole realm of their myths in translations of holy books.

"In Jewish commentaries," said Freedman, "Eve was created to be Adam's equal. God didn't take just a rib, he took a flank to make a newly separated person. So Eve was not only equal to Adam, she was him.

After Adam and Eve ate the fruit from the tree of good and evil and fell from grace, Freedman said, Eve's status changed. "As a result of their sin," said Freedman, "Eve then became subject to Adam's dominion over her. But many interpreters have let what occurred after the fall color their interpretations of the original status of man and woman, which was equal."

Jo Ann Hackett, assistant professor of religious studies at Occidental College, who is working on a book about the role of women in ancient Israel, said Freedman's work was a good addition in an already widespread effort to take the sex bias out of the Bible. She cited pioneering work in this field by noted feminist Elizabeth Cady Stanton a century ago. She mentioned as well the work of scholar Trible in her 1973 book, "God and the Rhetoric of Sexuality."

AT WORK

Novel ways to attract book buyers

By DR. ADELE M. SCHEELE

Q — I have a bookstore which is only doing fair. How do I get more business? I don't have lots of money to spend on advertising or marketing. I think if only customers would walk in, they would buy.

A — Because of low funds, the answer lies in getting free publicity, not advertising. Create activities that will bring in people — readings from novels, non-fiction and poetry; discussions; art exhibits; jazz concerts. All of these can be listed in the newspaper's calendar of weekly events, which serves to keep your bookstore's name in front of the public.

You can also start a book review newsletter to all your customers that announces and reviews new and old books. If you get stuck for reviewers, use your customers or college students, who will be glad to serve for the experience of being published.

In terms of advertising, organize other independent booksellers and jointly advertise yourselves or do a joint venture with publishers on new books. It's done all the time with major chains. Remember the old adage: If you can't beat them, join them!

Q. — Thanks for an answer to the woman who wanted to work at home. That helped me. Now I need to know — Can I deduct expenses and losses? How do I keep accounts right?

A — There are general rules of thumb. Make a chart each month with the following headings across the page: source of income or clients; expenses and parking; advertising and promotion; dues and subscriptions; legal and professional fees; office supplies and equipment; telephone, employees or special services; plus a miscellaneous column. Depending on your specific business, you'd have other categories.

But I'd be remiss if I didn't also tell you to consider getting particular counsel for promotion and marketing, even on a limited scale. If you are operating on a shoestring, then you might start by going to the local Small Business Administration and ask for a member of SCORE (Service Corps of Retired Executives) to help you. That member is a retired business person who could give you pointers about operations as well as finances to make a realistic business plan. Or, go to your bank and ask the manager or assistant for an appointment. Bank of America publishes Consumer Information Reports on preparing a financial statement.

Q. — I've been helping out in my family's grape-growing business for years in a support way. I'm tired of being a clerk and "go-fer," however, and want to go out on my own and start from scratch. Yet my family just got a new raisin account and want me to help out again. How do I say no?

A — You don't say no. There's no reason to reinvent the wheel and prove your independence when you haven't any real experience.

So use the venture right under your nose — raisins. Be creative about new markets for raisins: Hotels could use them instead of chocolates as gifts for guests; restaurants could serve raisins instead of after-dinner mints; supermarket check-out stands could sell them as small snacks while driving home; or invent a new wine drink with a raisin on a toothpick (to compete with the proverbial olive or onion martini match).

Learn to hustle, not just serve. You have the perfect place to practice. They obviously won't fire you, so the risk is all in your own heart. Try it.

Matt Friedman (Tim Ryan) knows what he wants, but Sally Talley (Robyn Rose) isn't certain marriage is the answer in this scene from "Talley's Folly" opening Friday in Theatre II at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Play 'Talley's Folly' opens at Theatre Midland Friday

The Pulitzer Prize-winning romantic comedy "Talley's Folly" opens the 1983 Theatre II season at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., Friday.

Scheduled for a nine-performance run, "Talley's Folly" stars Robyn Rose as Sally Talley and Tim Ryan as Matt Friedman. The production is directed by Don Bachmann, Midland Community Theatre's executive director, with set design by MCT's new designer in residence, Brett Batterson. Lighting design is by John Michael Warburton.

"Talley's Folly" is, above all, a love story. Author Lanford Wilson creates laughter by drawing on the humor from the foibles and revelations of the characters rather than one-liners.

Friedman is a Jewish accountant from St. Louis, who is personable and bright, but still a bachelor at 40. Miss Talley, at 30, is on her way to spinsterhood. As a teenager she was supposed to marry a prominent local boy, but the engagement ended disastrously. Although more liberal and outspoken than others of her family, she has become more reclusive. The play's action takes place a year after the two met when Friedman has returned to the Talley farm near Lebanon, Mo., to ask for Miss Talley's hand in marriage.

Reservations may be made by calling the theater's box office at 682-4111 or by going by the theater.

Opera singer to perform as part of concert series

Mary Jane Johnson will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday at Midland High School Auditorium as part of the Midland Community Concerts subscription season.

A winner of the first Luciano Pavarotti International Voice Competition, Miss Johnson made her debut with the Opera Company of Philadelphia. She performed the role of Musetta in "La Boheme" opposite Pavarotti in a performance telecast nationwide by PBS in August of 1982. She also sang the role of Adina in "L'Elisir d'Amore."

Miss Johnson made her Chicago Symphony debut in the 1982-83 season, appearing as Freida in "Das Rheingold," conducted by Sir Georg Solti in both Chicago and in New York at Carnegie Hall. She is engaged through 1985 for the San Francisco Opera's Ring Cycle, making her debut there in 1982-83 as Freia in "Das Rheingold." Later in the season she will return for Musetta in "La Boheme." This fall she is engaged for the American premiere of Sir Michael Tippet's "A Midsummer Marriage," singing the role of Jennifer created by Joan Sutherland.

In addition, Miss Johnson's 1982-83 season includes a concert "La Boheme" in Miami Beach, several orchestral performances and over 30 recitals throughout the United states.

Miss Johnson made her Santa Fe Opera debut last summer as Rosalinda in a new production of "Die Fledermaus" and as Xanthe in Strauss' "Die Liebe der Danae."

Mary Jane Johnson

She was featured in the July 1982 "Opera News" article "Keep Your Eye On...Young American Artists on the Rise."

A native of Pampa, Miss Johnson is a graduate of Texas Tech University and received her master of music degree from West Texas State University. In 1980, she was the regional winner of the Metropolitan Opera auditions, a National Metropolitan Opera semi-finalist and the recipient of the 1980 American Institute for Musical Studies scholarship.

First Presbyterian to host choir festival

The music department of Midland's First Presbyterian Church is conducting a two-day Mini-Children's Choir Festival concluding today. An 11 a.m. performance is planned Sunday. Guest clinician for the festival is Mrs. Thomas Roberts of Tucker, Ga.

Vernie Roberts is a diaconal minister connected with the North Georgia Conference of the United Methodist Church. She has been organist-director and graded choirs and bell director of several churches in the Atlanta, Ga., area for 23 years. She works at the First UMC at Tucker as director of five choral and handbell choirs.

Mrs. Roberts holds a degree in music education from Georgia State University and is a member of the National Guild of Piano Teachers, the Choirster's Guild, the Fellowship of United Methodist Musicians and Music Educators, and American Guild of English Handbell Ringers and American Guild of Organists.

Mrs. Roberts organized her first children's choir in 1959 and first bell choir in 1962, when bell choirs were still a new idea in church music programs in this country.

Her son, Tom Roberts, is director of music ministry at First Presbyterian Church here.

Art exhibit to open Sunday at MC gallery

A two-fold art exhibit opens Sunday at 2 p.m. at Midland College's McCormick Gallery located in the Allison Fine Arts Building.

One of the exhibits features contemporary works by John Gibson and Mike Thornton, art instructors at Western Texas College in Snyder. Both will be present at the 2 to 4 p.m. public reception Sunday.

Gibson will be showing a number of large oil paintings and Thornton will be displaying both paintings and sculptures.

The other exhibit features the Texas Fine Arts Association's circuit section from the TFAA's 1982 National Exhibition. Thirteen states are represented in the show. Juror for the national show was Howard Fox, assistant curator at the Hirshborn Museum & Sculpture Garden, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C.

Texas artists whose works are in the show include Pam Price of Odessa; Jeff Tabor of Abilene; Laurie Weller, Bobby MacPherson, Priscilla Robinson and Dan Schweers, all of Austin; Lee Cunningham of Longview, Kevin Marshall of Fort Worth, Oscar McNary of Richardson; and Judy Miller of Sherman.

Hours for the McCormick Gallery are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday-Thursday; 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday; 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday; and 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday. No admission is charged to view either show. Both close March 31.

Arnaz plays lawyer in 'Second Thoughts'

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Lucille Ball's house on Roxbury Drive is once again alive with the sounds of small children.

But not for long. The entertainer's houseguests, Simon Thomas Luckinbill, 2, and Joseph Henry Luckinbill, 6 weeks, must soon return to New York with their mother, Lucie Arnaz.

Still, says grandmother Lucy: "It's great to have children in the house again."

Miss Arnaz, Miss Ball's daughter with former husband, Desi Arnaz, was in California to help launch her new film, "Second Thoughts." She and the children live in New York with her husband, actor Laurence Luckinbill.

In "Second Thoughts," Miss Arnaz, 31, plays a Santa Fe, N.M., lawyer who gets a charmingly irresponsible musician played by Craig Wasson out of trouble with the law. Meanwhile, he gets her pregnant, and she is faced with the decision of whether to have the baby, marry Wasson or return to her stuffy first husband, Ken Howard.

"It's a story about choices in general, and that's why it appealed to me," said the actress, relaxing in the family den during the children's nap time. "After all, you are the sum total of the choices you make, and this woman had made no adult choices during her lifetime. At the end of the picture you see she is finally on course to make some important choices of her own."

An acting career is also an endless series of choices, and Miss Arnaz has been more fortunate than most. Instead of trading on a household name, she has worked hard to develop her craft, spending more time on the stage than in films and television.

"I've never tried to make choices for money or for what might happen to my career," she said. "I always tried to base my decisions on what I felt was right. I'm interested in projects that have something to say. I'd rather play good people than schmucks."
