Accused U.S. journalists stand fast in Soviet court

MOSCOW (AP) — Two American correspondents accused of slandering the Soviet television service told a Moscow court today they stand by the news stories that brought on the suit. The court president told them this was an improper response but gave them more time to answer.

The journalists, Craig R. Whitney of The New York Times and Harold D. Piper of The Baltimore Sun, also said after the 30-minute hearing they were not yet sure whether they would participate in their eventual trial.

The two handed in nearly identical statements to the court president, L. E. Almazov, maintaining they had "acted properly within the scope of (their) professional responsibilities."

Whitney said that Almazov treated their statement "as not the proper response" but that he agreed to give them until Monday for a new reply, and re-scheduled a court hearing from Monday to Wednesday. Both reporters said this was not enough time to prepare a defense.

The State Committee of Radio and Television had asked them to retract stories they wrote about Georgian dissident Zviad Gamsakhurdia in which they quoted his friends and relatives as saying a televised confession he made had been "fabricated" by the authorities.

The committee, which brought the slander suit, accused Whitney and Piper of publishing "slanderous information denigrating the honor and dignity" of its employees.

In their written replies today, Whitney and Piper said they needed more time to consult professional colleagues, legal counsel and their newspapers' managing executives on the case.

After the hearing, Whitney told reporters his newspaper wants to send Yale University Professor Leon Lipson, a Soviet law expert, to Moscow to consult with him, but that it appeared Lipson would not be able to get a visa in time.

"If we are not able to defend ourselves in the manner in which we should be able to, then the aim of this trial is clearly not justice, or determination of fact, but some other obscure political purpose," Whitney said.

"I think the way our response was treated raises serious doubts as to whether participation in the trial at all is advisable," he said.

Piper said he told the judge a Soviet lawyer his paper wants to hire is on vacation for two weeks, so he would need more time to prepare his case. He said the judge seemed unconcerned.

The two face possible fines and a court order to retract their articles. Because the proceeding is a civil suit, there is no provision for a jail term.

Pravda and 10 other Moscow newspapers published a Tass article today

Green gives warning in new Lozano probe

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — District Attorney John Green said he will cooperate with a federal grand jury investigation into the death last January of Ector County jail inmate Larry Ortega Lozano, but predicted the probe will result in an accidental death finding.

"There had better not be any story-changing going on. If there is, I personally will prosecute them for perjury, and the federal government can't give them immunity from that," Green said.

Lozano, 27, died in his padded cell last January. Mexican-American leaders claim he was beaten to death by law enforcement officers and have requested federal prosecution on civil rights charges.

Ector County officials, however, claimed Lozano was mentally ill and beat himself to death on the thick glass of his cell door. A coroner's inquest jury ruled in April that the death was accidental.

Records in the U.S. District Clerk's office in Midland indicate that prosecutors have called 12 prisoners now serving sentences in the Texas Department of Corrections and three Ector County jail inmates.

U.S. Attorney Jamie C. Boyd and his assistant, Fred Rodriguez, spent much of Thursday in Green's office preparing for a July 17 federal grand jury investigation into Lozano's death.

Green said they examined evidence he and his assistants gathered during their own investigation. He denied a report that he himself was being subpoenaed.

"We went over all the evidence we had in the case — pictures, anything they might need," said Green. "They want the evidence I've accumulated during my investigation," Green said, adding that Boyd and Rodriquez said they will return July 10 to go over the evidence in more detail.

Ector County Sheriff Elton Faught and Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee also have been subpoenaed to furnish the grand jury with their records and reports on the incident.

Officials said the federal government considers the investigation only as a fact-finding session at this point. They said no decision has been made whether to seek indictments in the case.

The Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Justice Department authorized the investigation earlier this month. Boyd spent two days in Midland and Odessa last week.

TEA criticizes federal decision to hold funds

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Education Agency is unhappy about the federal government's decision to withhold federal money from 50 Texas school districts, including Midland and Lamesa, for "non-compliance" with regulations on bilingual education, desegregation and hiring practices.

"They have continually delayed or not gotten back to us on our proposals. Now they turn around and say we are not in compliance," said William C. Bednar Jr., legal counsel for the agency.

Dick Ewell, a spokesman for the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, said the districts' share of $3.3 million in funds under the Emergency School Aid Act will be placed in legal hold until the schools meetthe regulations.

Texas had been scheduled to receive $16.9 million in funds under the Emergency School Aid Act, but Ewell said only $3.296 million is available. A large amount of the federal money was earmarked for use in training teachers and developing language testing programs.

Of the 50 districts, 37 were declared unfundable because of the HEW's view their bilingual education programs are inadequate. Midland is among these. Six districts were told they have an inacceptable desegregation plan or racially identifiable schools, and seven districts, one of which is Lamesa, were told they discriminate in their hiring, promotion or education programs.

School districts declared unfundable because of failure to comply with bilingual education regulations are Aldene, Alice, Amarillo, Austin, Beaumont, Coiulla, Donna, Eagle Pass, Edcouch-Elsa, Edgewood, Edinburg, Fort Worth, Galena, Galveston, Harlindale, Houston, Lamar, Lock, Lubbock, Lyford, McAllen, Mercedes, Midland, Mission, North Forest, Pharr-San Juan-Alamo, Port Arthur, Rio Grande City, Rio Hondo, Robstown, San Antonio, Southside (in Bexar County), Taylor, Waxahachie, Weslaco, West Oso and Zapata County.

School districts excluded for discrimination in hiring or promotional practices are Alto, Berkville, Corsicana, Elysian Fields, Lamesa and Honey Grove. The HEW said Waco schools exclude minorities from special education classes.

Districts excluded because of racially identifiable schools or no desegregation plan are Denison, Dallas, El Paso, La Joya, Corpus Christi and Southpark.

Bednar called Thursday's announcement "an arm-twisting game. They want school districts to admit they have discriminated and get better position in the suit against the state, which is scheduled in November."

The Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund filed a suit in 1975 against the State of Texas, alleging that thousands of students are being deprived of bilingual programs they are entitled to.

WIPP hearing here set

By JIM STEINBERG

The Department of Energy has scheduled a public hearing in Midland on July 11 concerning the proposed Waste Isolation Pilot Plant, according to a spokesman for that agency.

It will be the first of three public hearings held in the state on a proposal involving the long-term storage of nuclear wastes in underground salt deposits located 25 miles southeast of Carlsbad, near New Mexico State Highway 128.

Three public hearings were held in New Mexico in mid-April on the proposed WIPP project. Following those hearings, Texas Attorney General John Hill requested the DOE conduct similar hearings in several West Texas cities on the basis that the site is closer to them than to any urban areas in New Mexico.

Midland has a special interest in the project because of the city's rights to 920,000 acre-feet of water beneath the T-Bar Ranch in Loving County.

The hearing in Midland will be held at 1 p.m. in the Fine Arts Building at Midland College. Other Texas hearings are scheduled in Amarillo on July 12 and in El Paso on July 13.

The proposal for this "pilot project" calls for a demonstration of permanent disposal of 1,000 highly radioactive fuel assemblies discharged from commercial nuclear power plants in addition to storage of four million cubic feet of low-level nuclear wastes and 100,000 cubic feet of intermediate-level nuclear wastes.

At the public meeting in Carlsbad, N.M. on April 11, Department of Energy Deputy Secretary John O'Leary said that the fate of nuclear power as a viable energy alternative for the

He's gone, but the legend lives

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

RANKIN — J.C. Carroll looked so much out of place lying in repose there in the cool, gray steel coffin. It just didn't suit him at all.

Had he been prepared for dying, he probably would have preferred to make his own casket out of scrap lumber, such as pine, native mesquite or, if he wanted to really go out in style, rosewood. That would have suited this sentimental soul. This time, he didn't have his druthers.

Maybe it's just as well. He would have put it off 'til the last possible moment, anyway. There were so many things that he was going to get around to.

He was struck down too soon. He didn't belong in that oblong box.

It's sad he couldn't be a modern-day Lazarus.

Were he, he'd be right back in the Mule Train; that's where his life was. That's he belonged . . . in that ol' pub, that ol' museum that's cluttered with relics he found or dug up on the range and oil patches, just traded for or took in with a kind thanks.

The minister, who knew Jacob Carol Carroll by reputation, probably was more of a stranger to Carroll than anybody else in the sanctuary. They had met just "in passing." He was doing his job, a minister's duty.

Carroll was a good man; he wasn't a church-goer.

The preacher told Carroll's mourning widow, Georgia, and relatives that "life has dealt you a cruel blow" and that "we search for words of wisdom and understanding in times like these."

The widow was dressed in black, was sobbing, occasionally wailing, and very much hurt, deeply hurt. What she was going through is one of life's irreversible dramas experienced countless times the world over.

It was a sad occasion.

She sobbed. Her son held her.

The minister's words, except for a reference to the the Apostle Paul, to Psalms 23 and to the "great spirit" in Indian lore, sounded like an obituary. That was the intent; that's what the family wanted. Make it short, not too sentimental, and no embellishments, please.

There was no eulogizing. That will come later, when Carroll's friends talk about him over a beer, at home, out in the field, and on the job. He'll grow into a legend.

The service was brief, just like the family wanted. From the opening prayer and solo ("He walks with me, and He talks with me") to the final amen, only 15 minutes elasped.

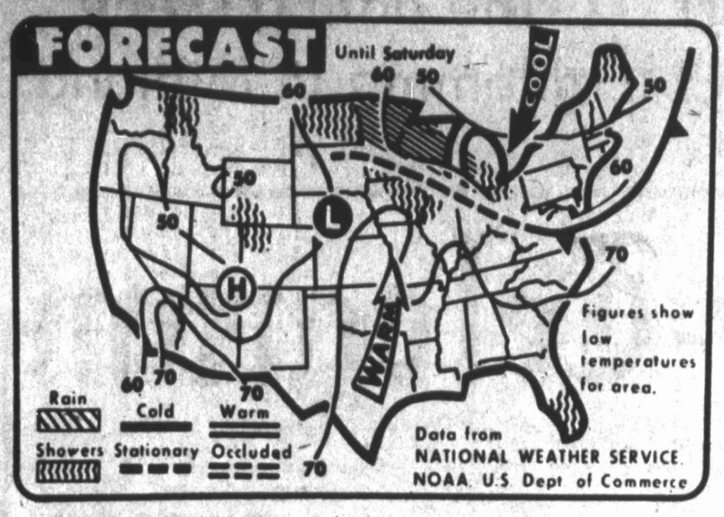

The funeral director, Larry Sheppard, and his top hand Neal Cook quietly motioned for Carroll's friends to file up to the altar and to the bier to

Tears were in the eyes of grown men.

Soon, the church was emptied.

Pallbearers respectfully placed the coffin in the silver-and-black hearse. A caravan of cars followed the funeral coach to uptown Rankin and then south on Main Street. The street bled into the road to the cemetery.

The graveside rites were brief, just like the family requested. No frills.

The family and kin were under the shade of the pavilion.

And Carroll's friends, one by one, passed by the open grave personally offering condolences to the widow and relatives.

Many were there, and some, like old-timers Paul Patterson of Crane and Grimm Taylor of Rankin, had far out-lived the gentle man in the grave.

And the preacher spoke.

"There's a lot of things that could be said (about Carroll) that wasn't said," he said.

The undertaker said Carroll was a "colorful character." He smiled and chuckled. Carroll would have liked that. Just by being himself and pretending to be nothing else, J.C. Carroll gave moments of happiness to many folks, friends and strangers who became passing friends.

Carroll was an individual. The preacher knew that. "He marched to the tune of a 'different drummer,'" he said.

Carroll would have appreciated that, too. The words of transcendental philosopher Henry David Thoreau befitted him:

"Why should we be in such desperate haste to succeed, and in such desperate enterprises? If a man does not keep pace with his companions, perhaps it is because he hears a different drummer."

J.C. Carroll is a legend. He's a character out of folklore.

The legend will grow with the Mule Train, that pub-museum of Carroll's own creation. That place, built of rock, was opened in 1956, and Carroll started collecting relics from the countryside and filled his place.

Carroll, who was nearing his 55th year when he died in his tin-sided house about 150 steps from the Mule Train, had cowboyed and worked in the oil fields.

"Yeah," he had said, "(I) sure got tired of working for the other fellow. Had to move around too much."

So, this man with the kind heart and tender blue eyes devoted the remaining years of his life to the Mule Train, which is now a part of the rural landscape.

He had hospitality. Each Thanksgiving and Christmas since 1956, Carroll would throw free-for-all feasts for friends and strangers alike. He had planned on continuing the tradition this year "if I hold together." He had been ailing somewhat.

Mostly, he liked to piddle, tinker, spin tales and make friends and pals at his work haven, the Mule Train.

"Well, I guess I was born to work," he'd say. "I'm a creator of it, . . . of work for myself. I'll create something new one of these days. The story of my life is creating something out of pieces of junk."

So long, J.C. All of your friends, including those who never met you, will be thinking and talking about you, about your darling Georgia and about your home, The Mule Train.

You're a legend.

Journalists stand firm

with the headline "Held Responsible For Slander" and calling the reporters' stories on Gamsakhurdia "concoctions."

In Washington, the State Department cautioned the Soviet Union to "reflect very carefully on the broader implications" of charging the two American correspondents with slander. Spokesman Hodding Carter said U.S. concern focused on the ability of American journalists "to function freely" in the Soviet Union.

In another development, the Soviet newspaper Sovietsky Sport accused ABC correspondent Charles Bierbauer of attempting to disrupt a news conference with former world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali earlier this month by asking "provocative questions." Ali was on a tour of the Soviet Union.

"The representative of ABC is of the type that come to our country not to establish friendly ties among peoples," the newspaper said. "Such journalists specialize in inventions, mystification, petty sensations and simple canards."

The newspaper claimed that during his trip Ali "had more than once to put his compatriot in his place for asking provocative questions."

Bierbauer, in Moscow, was quoted by ABC as saying in reaction to the charge: "The Soviet press has accused me of asking probing and provocative questions. As a professional journalist, I feel that asking probing questions is part of my job."

U.N. action seeks expansion of Geneva disarmament fold

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. General Assembly's special session approved a proposal to enlarge the Geneva disarmament commission and eliminate the joint Soviet-American chairmanship in a bid to bring France and China into the 19-year-old arms talks.

The assembly's working committee of the whole approved a final document for the session without a vote early today, assuring its adoption. The assembly, which began the special session on disarmament on May 23, hoped to adjourn before midnight.

The document will increase the 31-nation Geneva committee to 37 or 40 members. The chairmanship will rotate each month among all committee members on an alphabetical basis. A permanent secretary will be appointed by U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to organize the committee's business and timetables and take care of other administrative details handled in the past by the co-chairmen.

The United States and the Soviet Union both agreed to give up the co-chairmanship of the committee they reorganized in 1961. France refused to participate because of the superpower domination, and China's Communist government after its admission to the United Nations also refused to participate for the same reason.

'Hogan's Heroes' star Bob Crane's beating death baffles police

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Loud voices were heard sometime Thursday morning coming from actor Bob Crane's apartment, where the star of the television series "Hogan's Heroes" was later found bludgeoned to death. A piece of electrical cord was wrapped around his neck.

Police said athough one neighbor reported hearing the voices, no one was seen leaving the apartment.

Investigators continued today to question neighbors, Crane's local acquaintences and people who worked with him in the play, "Beginner's Luck," which he had been appearing in at the Windmill Dinner Theather here since June 6.

The body of the 49-year-old Crane, clad in shorts and undershirt, was found curled beneath a sheet in the master bedroom of his ground-floor apartment, which he had been using while appearing in the play. He had been dead several hours, authorities said.

"Nothing seems to be missing, there was no forced entry," Lt. Ron Dean, who is heading the police investigation, told a news conference late Thursday.

"So far no motive has been determined," Dean said.

Police were checking to determine whether more keys to the apartment were available or whether Crane slept with the door unlocked.

Dean said Crane was struck twice with a blunt instrument. "Either a man or woman could have used it," Dean added.

"It's possible someone who knew him could have done it," he said.

Dean said it appeared that one person committed the murder. "We have speculated that the killer either knew him or surprised him," he said.

Dean said some fingerprints had been found in the room, but have not yet been identified.

"He was a popular person and had been frequently seen in night spots around town," Dean said. He said Crane was quite often approached for autographs, which he readily provided.

"It just looks like somebody walked in on him while he was in bed and smacked him in the head a couple of times," said Eloy Ysasi, investigator for the Maricopa County medical examiner's office. "He was covered up in a sheet, as though you would retire, with his knees drawn up in the position like people sleep."

A piece of electrical cord had been tied around Crane's neck, but "it didn't strangle him ...," Ysasi said. "It was put on after he was dead, but was put on tight."

Police said Crane was seen about 2 a.m. Thursday in a local coffee shop a short distance from the apartment.

Lilly Reder, the night supervisor, told The Arizona Republic that she saw Crane drinking coffee with a woman and a second couple. She said the group seemed "very congenial and there was no indication of anything negative."

Dr. Heinz Karnitschnig, county medical examiner, said Crane had been dead several hours before his body was found by actress Victoria Berry, who went to the apartment when Crane failed to appear for a noon cast party at the theater.

Police said there were no signs of a struggle in the two-bedroom apartment and that none of Crane's personal possessions was missing.

Crane, a glib, former disc jockey, was best known as Col. Hogan on "Hogan's Heroes," which appeared on CBS from September 1965 to July 1971 and is still being seen in reruns. Hogan led a wily group of World War II war prisoners who each week outwitted their German guards, Col. Klink and Sgt. Schultz.

He also had his own show, "The Bob Crane Show" on NBC in the 1974-75 season, and earlier played the next door neighbor on "The Donna Reed Show."

In recent years, Crane had appeared in guest roles on television and on the regional theater circuit.

Crane was born July 13, 1928, in Waterbury, Conn., where he studied music with ambitions to become a drummer. He was with the Connecticut Symphony Orchestra from 1944 to 1946, then with several dance bands traveling the East Coast.

Diet and cancer studies needed, says doctor

SEATTLE (AP) — Scientists should devote more energy studying how diet can cause or prevent cancer in humans than investigating sources of the disease in laboratory rats, says the president of the American Health Foundation.

Dr. Ernst L. Wynder also urged the food industry to work with scientists to discover ways to modify diets by reducing fats and cholestorol — two suspected causes of breast, colon and prostate cancers.

"We have spent so much of our energies identifying carcinogens that we have really lost sight of how nutrition can operate (in relation to cancer)," Wynder said Thursday at a news conference during a three-day conference on nutrition and cancer.

"What we are finally doing is not studying cancer in animals, but trying to prevent cancer in humans. We have to go forward and back between animals and humans," checking laboratory findings against actual situations, he said.

He said diet seems to play a major role in cancer, although it may be related not as a specific carcinogen "but rather as a modifying factor" that allows cancer-causing substances to take hold and grow.

Researchers at the meeting offered examples of possible links between diet and cancer. A glass of orange juice or a green salad at every meal may protect against stomach cancer, one scientist said.

Slight chance for rain tonight

Midlanders can keep hoping for rain, but the weatherman said the chance of thundershowers is slight.

The 20 percent chance of rain the weatherman with the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is predicting for tonight should be accompanied by light and variable winds and temperatures in the upper 60s.

If any Tall Town residents have plans to be outdoors on Saturday, they should not have to worry about rain, the weatherman said. Temperatures should be in the low 90s with only partly cloudy skies.

The weather service reported a trace of rain at the airport Thursday night and Lamesa reported receiving at least half an inch of rain.

Area towns reported partly cloudy skies early today.

Nuclear wastes hearing slated

United States — and ultimately the world — is resting with the pilot proposal.

Public acceptance of the WIPP project is "tactically important" for the success of light water reactors in this country, O'Leary said at the Carlsbad session. During those New Mexico hearings, DOE officials were faced with heavy opposition to their proposal and stung by open disbelief of their statements by many persons in attendance.

Information from the public hearings — including Midland's — will be included with the DOE's application with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for the WIPP site. That application is not expected to be made until Spring 1979.

DOE officials have said that it would take two-and one-half years for the NRC to decide whether or not to grant the license.

Well, dog gone it!

But the words below the two photos were talking about a another dog, a miniature collie.

There was a mix-up.

The caption should been describing Jet, the black retriever, owned by Guy and Renee Richards. Jet won first place in the contest held Wednesday in a city park.

Runner-up, and last year's winner in the contest, sponsored by the city of Midland's parks and recreation department, was Kiester, the 5-year-old miniature collie owned by Mitch Ritter.

American scientists cancel Russian trips in mass

By EARL LANE
Newsday

The Soviet Union's continuing crackdown on dissidents, particularly the trial and imprisonment last month of physicist Yuri Orlov, has led to an unprecedented spate of postponements or cancellations of visits to Russia by American scientists. There have been at least seven instances recently in which American scientists, individually or in groups, have decided not to visit the Soviet Union.

Whether the actions will have any lasting impact on scientific exchanges between the two countries is still unclear. But American scientists are said to be increasingly troubled by the human rights issue. The concern is not limited to the Soviet Union, since efforts also are under way to support scientists living under other authoritarian regimes as well.

But it is the Soviet situation that has brought some long-simmering discontents into the open. "The Orlov case began getting uglier and uglier," said Joseph Wenesser, a nuclear physicist who was among a delegation of American scientists scheduled to visit eight Soviet research institutes during late May and early June. "We found the treatment of Orlov to be very offensive."

During the closed trial, Orlov's wife was stripped and searched before being allowed to enter the courtroom. Orlov, who was charged, with slandering the Soviet state, was not allowed to examine documents used against him nor to question witnesses adequately.

The members of the physics delegation decided last month, after several telephone conference calls, to postpone their visit, which had been scheduled as a part of a bilateral physics program established under 1972 detente accords.

Several days earlier, another group of American physicists also had decided to postpone a scheduled trip to the Soviet Union. More recent postponements have included trips scheduled this month by a delegation of immunologists and by a delegation of cancer chemotherapists. Several individuals also have cancelled trips, including Robert Marshak, president of City College of New York. Marshak, a nuclear physicist, has been a staunch supporter in the past of Soviet-American exchange programs.

Within the past two years, the National Academy of Sciences, the most prestigious scientific organization in the United States, has been taking a more active role in support of individual scientists abroad. The academy, which usually prefers to make private appeals on behalf of Soviet scientists, formed a committee on human rights in 1976. The committee has taken up the cause of individual scientists, in the Soviet Union and elsewhere.

Murray Todd, staff officer for the committee, said last week that the academy takes no official position on whether American scientists should boycott scientific meetings in the Soviet Union or elsewhere. "Every individual has to make up his or her own mind," Todd said. "There are reasons to go and reasons not to."

American scientists have always had a difficult time trying to decide the best course of action when Soviet scientists are being harassed. "On the individual level, we would like very much to maintain contacts with Soviet colleagues," said Edward Stern, a physicist at the University of Washington. "In most cases, they are not the ones who are responsible for their government's policies. But at the same time, we feel we cannot go on with business as usual when there are flagrant violations of human rights."

Some scientists argue that the human rights issue is a political problem, one which should not be allowed to interfere with strictly scientific exchanges between nations. "I think it is terribly important that we do speak out," said Harrison Brown, a geophysicist who was foreign secretary of the National Academy of Sciencies for 10 years. But he added that "there's a severe danger of overreaction on the part of the scientific community (to the Orlov trial). No matter how horrible a regime is, these exchange programs are terribly important. Particularly if the regime is a bad one, the programs are necessary just to keep open channels of communication. Scientists in the Soviet Union are crying for more personal contact. There is a danger that contacts may cease."

A prominent California scientist, who asked that his name not be used, said that "the recent cancellations of trips were entirely spontaneous. They were not instrumented by the government. It is important for the Russians to understand that. Some senior Soviet scientists have already sent me telegrams expressing their resentment." Were the Soviets to consider the trip cancellations part of a well-planned program of pressure, he said, the science exchange programs might become a political football.

Such concerns have always put the National Academy of Sciences in a ticklish position. It has been called both the Vatican and the Hall of Fame of American science. Election to the academy is considered an honor second only to winning the Nobel Prize. But the academy, although a private organization, also performs a variety of quasi-governmental functions, including the administration of some scientific exchange programs. When the academy takes public stands counter to government policies, it runs the risk of criticism from political leaders and federal agencies. When the academy goes along with administration policies, it often stands to take some heat as well from its diverse, vocal membership. Academy officials are understandably concerned that the organization's prestige be used in a balanced fashion for maximum effect.

On the human rights issue, however, many scientists are convinced that the Soviets respond only to public pressure. Academy president Philip Handler has been criticized in the past for preferring private diplomacy on behalf of Soviet colleagues. He had a feud of sorts two years ago with Jeremy Stone, director of the Federation of American Scientists, an activist group that lobbies for such causes as arms control. The dispute centered on whether or not it was fruitful for Handler to meet personally with dissident Soviet scientists during a trip to Russia.

Hamdler argued for the value of quiet diplomacy, while at the same time noting that the academy has made some public protests, such as a strongly worded appeal by Handler in 1973 on behalf of dissident Soviet physicist Andrei Sakharov. At the time, press attacks on Sakharov were building and it appeared he might be in danger of going to prison.

Stone considers the academy's more visible stance regarding human rights to be greatly due to his organization's prodding. Academy officials disagree and say that the impetus came largely from within the academy itself.

Several scientists said that President Carter's stand on human rights has made it easier for the academy and other scientific organizations to take more vocal positions regarding harassment of scientists abroad.

Another reason for the increasing attention to human rights by scientists may be simply the fact that they are more aware of the plight of their colleagues. Groups such as the Federation of American Scientists and the New York-based Committee of Concerned Scientists have been monitoring human rights cases closely and disseminating information about them to working scientists. The same is true for the human rights committee of the National Academy of Sciences and a similar panel of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the nation's largest scientific organization.

Mark Mellman, executive director of the Committee of Concerned Scientists, said there are about 50 to 60 Soviet scientists who are outspoken human rights advocates. Another 300, most of them Jewish, are being harassed because they have applied for exit visas, he said. Mellman said that the atmosphere has worsened noticeably in the recent months. The Orlov trial was the most publicized incident, but many dissident scientists, having been already fired from their jobs, are now being arrested and accused of the crime of "parasitism" for having no means of income, Mellman said.

It's now 'cool war'

The deteriorating U.S.-Soviet relationship is perhaps the most significant single development in the world today. It has enormous ramifications in every continent.

Some critics, mostly congressmen and commentators of liberal persuasion, seem to blame President Carter and, more specifically, Zbigniew Brzezinski, his national security adviser, for the growing chill with Moscow. They even suggest the administration's toughening stance is a politically inspired ploy to reverse the President's sagging standing in the opinion polls.

President Carter's public support has, indeed, been on the rise. But the fact to remember is that the Soviet Union primarily is responsible for worsening relations. Soviet-Cuban intrusions in Africa gave Mr. Carter little choice but to show some U.S. backbone.

In retrospect, the invasion of Zaire's Shaba province by Katangan troops based in neighboring Angola was one of those occurrences with consequences far exceeding what anyone had a right to expect at the time. Certainly the Russians and Cubans could not anticipate that Zaire, for which they were blamed, would be a pivotal point in world diplomacy at this time. After all, they had occupied Angola and intervened in Ethiopia with minimal repercussions.

But Zaire brought a swift intervention from France and Belgium with active American cooperation; it brought defeat for the invading rebels; and it brought a semi-NATO involvement. It also elevated Mr. Brzezinski's pragamatic influence in the White House and eclipsed such accommodationists as United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young and the more passive State Department.

The President was moved on June 7 to warn the Soviet Union to choose between confrontation or cooperation. His address to Naval Academy graduates at Annapolis perhaps was the best speech of his presidency and, in fact, the clearest definitions of U.S.-Soviet differences ever uttered by any president. Mr. Carter's offense in the realm of ideas produced a rabid Russian response that, in itself, has been a cause of growing international tension.

The bitter, worldwide propaganda campaign Moscow has mounted against the United States is without parallel in recent times. Pravda has singled out Mr. Carter for the most vitriolic personal attacks ever remembered against a president of the United States.

Even more disturbing was the recent arrest of an American businessman in Moscow on charges of smuggling and currency violations, charges which U.S. officials and the international business community believe to be completely fabricated for political purposes. The purposes are completely puzzling.

F. Jay Crawford, the person arrested, represents the International Harvester Co., which has sold $300 million worth of badly needed farm equipment to the Soviet Union during the last four years.

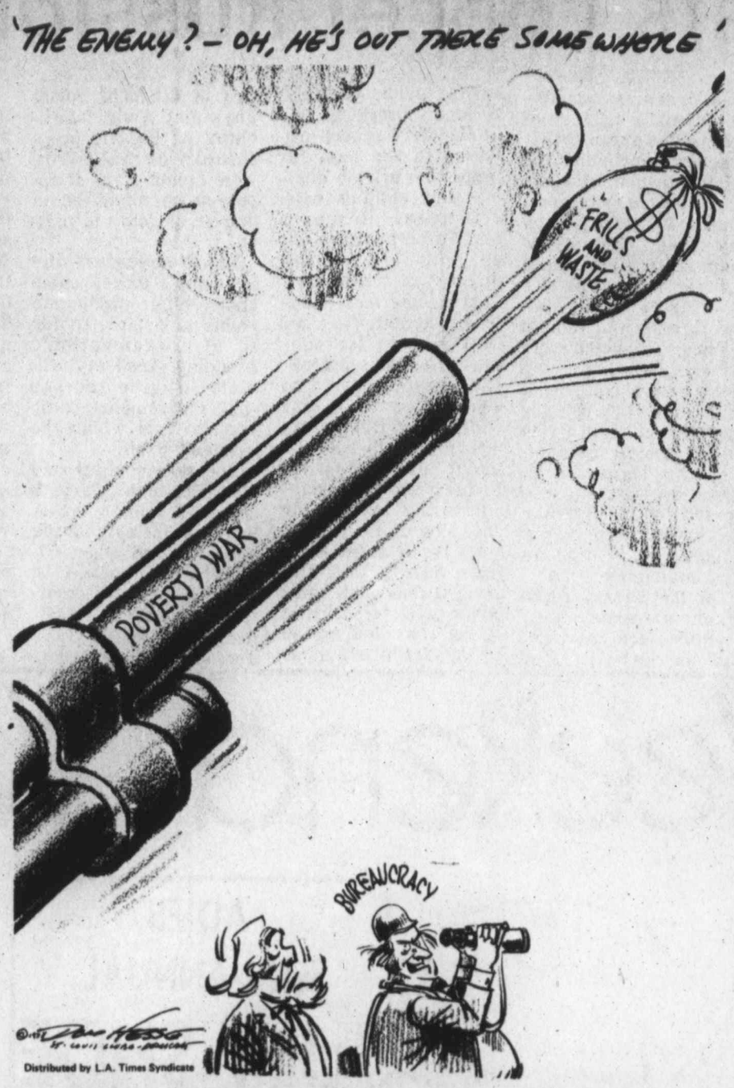

But one thing is certain; the detention of a prominent U.S. citizen refutes the long-held theory that Soviet behavior would be tempered by more trade and closer cultural ties, which is not at all surprising to many observers of Soviet tactics through the years.

Other consequences flowing from the present "cool war" include a correspondingly warmer relationship with mainland China and a lessening chance for agreement on strategic arms limitations.

Conditions between Washington and Moscow may get worse before they get better. But in view of the aging hierarchy in the Kremlin, chances are that nothing will get dangerously bad.

Meanwhile, because the big, bad Russians have a way of pulling back whenever their thrusts are blunted, confrontation may offer more promise for the West at the moment than cooperation.

It is next to impossible to do business with the Reds under this or any other circumstances, just as it always has been. It seems that the United States would learn sometime.

CHARLEY REESE

Foreign policy can't be based on human rights

Charley Reese

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — You can't base foreign policy on human rights. It's unworkable, irrational, and damaging to the national interests of the country.

President Carter's outburst at the Organization of American States meeting in which he threatened reprisals against nations which do not meet his standards was a display of hypocrisy and of stupidity.

In the first place, the internal affairs of other nations are none of our business. Even the United Nations Charter, which nobody observes, least of all the United Nations, recognizes this principle.

Think about it. Suppose prior to 1964, Great Britain had announced a trade embargo against the U.S. because we were practicing apartheid in several states. Suppose the United Nations has passed a resolution condemning us because they thought the Chicago police violated human rights when they responded to the riot in 1968.

We would have told them to mind their own business. Yet Carter is presuming to tell other nations, many of which are having to deal with terrorists and armed revolutionaries, how they must conduct their police investigations and how they must run their court systems.

Using a liberal definition of the word, you can count about 20 democracies in the world. All the rest of the nations have some type of totalitarian government. That means they violate human rights.

If Carter intends to launch a crusade to impose the Anglo-Saxon traditions of common law and individual liberty on the rest of the world, then we had better ban the pill and cut down the abortion clinics because we are going to need a tremendous amount of cannon fodder.

Of course he doesn't intend to do that. He's just blowing smoke up the nose of the American Left. So he shakes his finger at Nicaragua. Big deal. It's a small, powerless country. You don't see the Great Crusader shouting at the Soviet Union or Red China which just happen to be history's all time champs at abusing human rights. Or even at Saudi Arabia where they still have chattel slaves.

In fact, the same day Carter made his blustery speech, the White House instructed the State Department to back away from pressing for an OAS resolution calling for an investigation of Cuban human rights violations. How phony can a guy be?

There is only one rational basis for a foreign policy and that is the nation's self-interests. As Tom Jefferson and George Washington pointed out, the rational basis for a policy toward any foreign nation is how that foreign nation treats us. In short, a tit for tat.

What we can do to advance the cause of mankind is to maintain our own standards and provide the world with an example. We do not provide an example when we do something so obviously phony as condemn Brazil and praise Nigeria whose government exterminated a whole people. The world knows Nigeria is a major supplier of U.S. oil. They can see through the sham.

A friend of mine just returned from a European trip and reports that U.S. prestige is at rock bottom. Even the London cab drivers are laughing at us.

I'm not sure what Carter's game is, but he is laying the groundwork for international interference in our internal affairs and he is endangering our survival by systematically alienating allies while courting enemies.

Who does he think is trying to overthrow the Latin American governments? Certainly not the spiritual descendents of Thomas Jefferson and Simon Bolivar. They are grimy little communists who hope to enslave the Latin American people and then direct Latin American resources into the war against us.

What could be more insane than to condemn in the name of human rights the jailing, with or without a trial, of assassins and terrorists? What could be more ridiculous than for our State Department, which doesn't even know what is going on in our country, to sit in judgment of other nation's internal affairs?

I fear we may have elected a fox to watch our hens.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Kremlin confused by Mr. Carter

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Kremlin leaders are so perplexed by Jimmy Carter that they have undertaken a "major reappraisal" of Soviet-American relations. This is the informed opinion of State Department analysts who confessed they are sometimes puzzled themselves by the signals coming from the White House.

Sometimes Carter comes on strong, condemning Soviet human rights abuses and warning against Soviet imperialism in Africa. Other times, he appears weak and conciliatory, like a watchdog wagging its tail while barking.

The analysts believe that the Soviets are genuinely confused, that they are trying to figure out Carter. This apparently has led the Kremlin to conduct a complete review of the whole range of Soviet-American relations. The State Department strategists believe it is urgent, therefore, to impress upon the Kremlin that the United States sincerely wants better relations with Moscow.

On Feb. 27, the president's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, gloomily detailed behind closed White House doors "a pattern of deterioration in U.S.-Soviet relations." The State Department's experts agree that Carter cannot achieve the same warm relationship that Presidents Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford had with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev. But the analysts believe that a dangerous breakdown can be prevented.

They have advised the White House to emphasize a desire to reach an arms limitation agreement. The president, however, instructed Secretary of State Cyrus Vance last April not to confine the issues at the arms negotiations but to take up with the Soviets their other actions, particularly their intervention in Africa. This infuriated the Soviets who took a harder line in the talks.

Carter has assured his subordinates, nevertheless, that he is eager to sign an arms pact with the Soviets this summer. "The basic question," Brzezinski explained at a secret briefing, "is how the United States and the Soviets define detente."

But the Soviets apparently believe the basic question is Carter himself; they don't understand where he's heading.

THE SMUGGLERS: The bootleggers of the Roaring Twenties, with their fast boats and machine guns, were amateurs compared to today's sophisticated smugglers.

The drug traffickers sneak tons of marijuana, cocaine and heroin into the United States on boats slipping into fog-sheathed coves and small private planes landing at remote fields. But the most enterprising are the couriers who have developed some ingenious hiding places for contraband. Here are a few that the harried Customs agents have discovered:

— An intelligence report from Bangkok warns that couriers are "utilizing shaving cream cans to smuggle No. 4 heroin into the U.S." These aerosol cans actually dispense shaving foam, with the heroin concealed under the lather. They are manufactured for the smuggling trade, according to the report, by an "unidentified Danish national residing in Bangkok."

— Customs agents at New York's John F. Kennedy airport discovered 1,100 kilograms of marijuana concealed in the hollowed-out legs and sides of chess tables.

— On three recent occasions, agents have found drugs packed inside fire extinguishers aboard ocean-going ships.

— Thirteen wire coat hangers were seized recently at the Los Angeles airport. Inside the hollow paper rolls, agents found 480 grams of cocaine from Bolivia.

— A smuggler arrested in Toronto had five pounds of cocaine concealed in a body-pack corset.

— A passenger from Colombia was arrested at the Miami airport the other day with cocaine concealed in book covers.

— It is common for smugglers to carry drugs in the false bottoms of suitcases or strapped to their bodies.

In this deadly game of hide-and-seek, the best estimate is that the smugglers win most of the time.

TOOTHLESS RULES: A presidential task force has decided that the federal program to provide better safety for American workers is too toothless. The group has recommended a system of fines and rewards be used to keep employees in line.

Their confidential report to the White House said at present a plant with more than 250 workers faces inspection by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration on an average of once every four years. For small companies with fewer than 250 employees, the likelihood of a federal inspection is once every 125 years.

The panel recommended that violators be hit in the pocketbook with fines while the government would offer low-interest loans and tax-incentive rewards to firms which make safey improvements. Strangely enough, the labor unions argue against the idea on grounds it is morally offensive to place a price tag on human injuries and deaths.

Recent OSHA inspections have shown eight federal agencies, including the Central Intelligence Agency, among the worst safety offenders. Inspectors found 9,400 fire and electric hazards, 3,000 mechanical hazards and 1,300 health hazards among the eight agencies, but OSHA has no authority to crack down on them.

INSIDE REPORT:

Standing up Jimmy marks problems on Capitol Hill

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

Evans Novak

WASHINGTON — Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter waited in vain one hour for House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill to show up for dinner in a downtown Washington restaurant the evening of June 21, an embarrassing incident which symbolized power realities in Washington but more importantly pointed to problems on Capitol Hill.

"I guess that shows who stands where in the pecking order when the speaker stands up the president," commented one Democratic insider, a sentiment widely expressed by those who heard about what happened. The symbolism might have been accurate, but the slight was not intentional.

Instead, O'Neill's office blamed the speaker's absence on an innocent mixup; Leo Diehl, the speaker's administrative assistant, thought the dinner was Thursday instead of Tuesday and so advised his boss. But that reflects the way leadership in the House has been functioning lately, say some congressional critics.

The dinner was the idea of anti-inflation czar Robert Strauss, an increasingly close adviser to the president. Strauss proposed that he, the president, O'Neill and Senate majority leader Robert Byrd, along with their wives, publicly dine in the main room at Paul Young's Restaurant — a favorite haunt of congressmen, especially Tip O'Neill.

It would give the president a break from routine while also exposing him to the public. In the meantime, congressional affairs could be discussed informally.

But O'Neill did not show up at 8 o'clock. The president and the other guests waited a full hour before giving up and ordering.

Byrd, one of the capitals incurable workaholics, left before 9:30 — returning to work at the Senate. The president, fortified by two pre-dinner martinis, stayed on with the first lady and the Strausses until nearly 11 o'clock. His departure was marked by standing applause from the other diners.

PRESIDENTIAL NON-CLOUT

The diminished power of the presidency was vividly demonstrated by President Carter's failure to budge Sen. Dale Bumpers, a first-termer from Arkansas, with two telephone calls pleading for his vote on labor legislation.

Time was when a personal call from the president to even the most senior senator would have immediate impact. But in his two calls to Bumpers, Mr. Carter could not get the senator to vote for cloture to end the filibuster against the labor law revision. A vote for cloture by Bumpers would have had the effect of sending the union-sponsored bill to the president's desk.

Bumpers denied to us the report, spread through the Senate cloakrooms, that he had replied to the president he would change his vote when public opinion on the labor bill changed back in Arkansas. But there is no doubt that Bumpers' refusal was popular at home; Gov. David Pryor's anti-labor bill position was helpful in winning the recent Democratic primary for the state's other Senate seat against Rep. Jim Guy Tucker wo had voted for the bill.

The Bumpers rebuff to Carter cannot be attributed to the old Southern affection for unlimited debate in the Senate. Rather, Bumpers is a new-breed Southerner who favors limitation of debate and until the labor fight had voted for cloture every time it came up since his election to the Senate in 1974. Indeed, he hopes failure to break the anti-labor law filibuster may lead to Senate rules changes making it easier to invoke cloture.

ANGOLA'S WAR

Contrary to published reports the Cuban expeditionary force is not getting ready to invade South African-ruled Namibia (Southwest Africa) from Angola but has its hands full with Lucas Savimbi's UNITA guerillas in Angola.

Savimbi's irregulars would probably topple Angola's Communist government if the Cubans left. Savimbi might be giving the Cuban troops themselves a run for their money if he had sophisticated anti-aircraft missiles to cope with Fidel Castro's Soviet-supplied helicopters.

The London newspaper report hinting at a possible Cuban thrust into Namibia was correct in reporting the arrival of some Russian generals in Angola. But there is not sufficient intelligence information to determine what their roles will be. The guess is that they will try to improve the coordination of the war against Savimbi's insurrection.

Manpower trial ends in acquittal

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The first trial of charges stemming from a court of inquiry investigation of federal manpower programs has resulted in the acquittal of a Harlingen electrician.

State District Judge Harry Lewis found John Gilday innocent of charges that he stole $1,321 in vocational education funds from the Harlingen Independent School District.

It has been alleged that Gilday used phony invoices to bilk the district for electronic components he did not deliver. However, Lewis ended the two-day trial by saying, "This man is not a criminal and I so find."

The judge said he did not find any intent to deceive the district.

Gilday had been indicted after State District Judge Darrel Hester's court of inquiry here earlier this year. The judicial investigation resulted in indictmetns against 19 persons. Gilday's case was the first to come to trial.

Mondale arrives for Israel visit

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Hailing a "special bond" between the United States and Israel, Vice President Walter F. Mondale arrived here for a four-day visit today to demonstrate American commitment to the Jewish state and to urge concessions to restart peace negotiations with Egypt.

In a 25-minute airport ceremony, Prime Minister Menachem Begin greeted Mondale as "a friend of our country" from a nation "with whom our people and our land are so deeply linked."

Mondale, the first incumbent vice president to visit Israel, is accompanied by his wife Joan and daughter Eleanor. They will stay in Jerusalem, 30 miles from Tel Aviv.

Security here was tight following a bomb explosion in a Jerusalem market Thursday that killed two persons and wounded 47. Mayor Teddy Kollek said he believed the bombing, which the Palestine Liberation Organization said it was responsible for, was linked to the vice president's visit.

Largest payment made in history

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The Travelers Insurance Cos. has made the largest claim settlement in their 114-year history by awarding over $11.3 million to the city of Hartford for the collapse of the Civic Center coliseum roof.

The roof collapsed Jan. 18. There were no injuries.

Raymond W. Stahl, Travelers' senior vice president, said the award was the largest individual claim payment ever made by the company. He said other disasters had resulted in larger total payments, but those were spread out over a number of policy holders.

The insurance firm already had paid the city $1 million so that cleanup operations on the collapsed roof could begin.

The payment clears the way for legal action to recover damages from those who ultimately may be found at fault in the disaster.

A tentative date for completion of reconstruction at the civic center is set for October 1979, city officials said.

DEMONSTRATORS from an organization calling itself the Anti-Bakke Decision Coalition carry signs Thursday as they march before the Federal Courthouse in Foley Square, New York. They were protesting the U.S. Supreme Court decision that the University of California medical school had no right to bar admission to Allan Bakke, who had argued his rejection was due to reverse discrimination. Development cited as among the top chamber goals

The chamber of commerce has three projects under way that President Harrell Feldt would like to see accomplished by the time he leaves office at the end of the year.

He told the board of directors at its meeting on Thursday that he has "made it my personal commitment to see that these three matters get accomplished in 1978."

And at the top of the list he has put the need for a new major industrial development to be brought to Midland. Joe Kloesel, director for industrial development, said there were several prospects, but nothing definite at this time.

Director of the Aviation Committee Bill Mewhorter gave a report on another of the three projects — getting a major trunk air carrier for the area.

"We need the additional service as you well know," said Mewhorter.

He said Braniff Airlines filed a brief with the Civil Areonotics Board on June 15 for travel between Midland and Dallas-Fort Worth, and he hopes the CAB will act upon it quickly.

According to Mewhorter, Braniff already has scheduled three flights that would connect to worldwide flights from Dallas-Fort Worth. The one-plane flights would continue from Dallas-Fort Worth to Chicago, New Orleans and New York.

But he added that until CAB gives its approval a date for the new service to begin cannot be set, although he has hopes for the fall.

Feldt said, for the third item, he would like to have a firm announcement and commitment for a large first-class shopping mall to be built in Midland.

Also Thursday, the chamber budget was discussed and treasurer Ray Moudy said that "all in all we have spent $2,000 over what we budgeted" for the year. He added that the income from dues was less than had been expected, and the chamber probably will need a membership drive.

A plaque was presented to Jim Hall in honor of his winning car in the Indy 500, and Feldt said it is through the achievements of Midland's citizens that the chamber can publicize the community.

County Commissioner Durward Wright reported that the county has concluded its budget study and the tax rate will not change. He added that the Board of Equilization has also concluded its hearings, and there was only limited disatisfaction.

Precautions urged

Persons who own pets are urged to take precautions for the animals' safety on July 4, according to a spokesman for the Animal Control Department of the city of Midland.

Firecrackers not only can frighten an animal, but also can injure its ears if exploded close enough to the animal. Frances Holt of animal control said the department receives numerous calls after the holiday from animal owners looking for their lost pets.

She explained the flashing lights and loud noises associated with July Fourth frighten animals and cause them to flee in panic. It also may change the animal's temperament. "While normally friendly, the animal may become dangerous," Ms. Holt said.

Senator Tower speaking in Midland Saturday

U.S. Sen. John Tower will be in Midland Saturday to speak to the district B'nai B'rith convention and attend a community-wide reception in his honor.

Tower is scheduled to speak at 8:30 p.m. Saturday in the Midland Hilton ballroom. The speech, to be on the topic "Energy Independence," is open to the public free of charge.

At 6:30 p.m., the reception will be held at the Midland Hilton Yates Room and at poolside. Tower is expected to report on recent legislative developments in Washington, D.C.

Secrets debate persists

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says his revision of the government's system of keeping secrets will tighten the ground rules for classifying information and "increase openness in government."

But the appearance of the Carter executive order on Thursday did not end the debate over how much information should be classified and by whom and for how long.

The order regulating the classification of official documents is the result of long negotiations involving both the executive branch and Congress.

In attempting to tighten controls, Carter restricted classification authority to fewer officials, set quicker deadlines for automatically declassifying information, and stripped the authority to classify from 11 departments and agencies.

Sen. Joseph Biden, R-Del., chairman of the Senate Intelligence subcommittee on secrecy and disclosure, said that while not completely satisfied, he believes the Carter order is "definitely a net gain."

An aide to Rep. Richardson Pryer, D-N.C., chairman of the House subcommittee on government information, said Pryer will hold hearings on the final order and issue a detailed report before it goes into effect in December.

Pryer had criticized an earlier draft of the Carter order as "weighted toward secrecy" and "notably deficient in detecting and correcting abuses in the system."

Biden said the order is superior to existing policy in that for the first time it brings the entire intelligence community under the general coverage of a government-wide classification policy which rules which will make that coverage hard to avoid.

But the classification order also has congressional critics who say it doesn't narrow the scope of information that can be classified in the first place.

"Their definition of national security is everything in the universe," said one House expert in the field who asked not to be identified by name.

Long eviction fight ends in defeat

HOOKSETT, N.H. (AP) — Forty-one families who lost a two-year battle to save their mobile home park are leaving behind little more than memories as they rush to move in the face of a court-ordered eviction deadline.

"We've lost and there's nothing we can do about it but cry a little, get out and try to salvage what we can of our lives," said Linda LaLiberte, manager of what next week will no longer be Joyland Trailer Park.

Eviction of the 200 residents followed a lengthy but unsuccessful attempt to obtain a sewer connection for the park. The nearby towns of Manchester and Hookset, which the park straddles, both refused to extend sewer lines to the four-acre park, which opened in 1954.

That rejection was the end for the park. Because the park's overloaded septic tank system frequently backed up and sewage seeped up through the ground, health officials asked Merrimack County Sheriff Ronald Daniels to evict park residents.

Those who could afford to move found few nearby places to relocate their homes. Zoning for mobile home parks has become more restricted in recent years, requiring large tracts as well as modern sanitary facilities.

"The court has ruled that these people must be out of here next week and it's my job to see they do it. But they're human beings with problems and feelings and that can't be forgotten," Daniels said Thursday as he walked among the cracked concrete pads and disconnected electrical outlets that are about the only reminders of what once was a neighborhood.

The sherriff said he has made hundreds of telephone calls and spent weeks of his own time trying to find places for the people to live.

Clair Lowman, a 67-year-old retired Salvation Army brigadier and his wife, Ella, were dismantling a white picket fence that had surrounded their property.

Pointing to a towering maple tree he had planted when he moved in 15 years ago, Lowman said, "We can take the fence but there's no way to move the tree."

"This is a very sad place now. All most of them took with them were their memories and for some that may not be enough," he said.

Mrs. LaLiberte sat in front of her home and made no attempt to brush away tears rolling down her cheeks. "I cry a lot these days," she said. "I just can't help it.

"We still haven't found any place to move the mobile so all we can do is store it somewhere and live in a tent for a while."

She said many park residents were forced to sell their homes at low prices so they could obtain other housing.

"As soon as the newspapers reported we were evicted, these fast-talking salesman rushed in and started offering everyone peanuts for their homes," Mrs. LaLiberte said.

Horticulture talk given Rotarians

The practice of horticulture in Midland and elsewhere was talked as the program highlight at the Thursday noon meeting of the Downtown Rotary Club in the Midland Hilton.

David Larsen, Midland landscaper, who is a student of horticulture at Texas Tech, was the speaker. He was introduced by Jack Swallow.

Larsen explained that horticulture, one of the world's oldest industries, has developed through the years from "family operation" status to big business. He said the scope of the industry now ranges from residential landscaping to state and regional planning.

Discussing various phases of the business, he said the present trend in landscaping is to make it much more functional than previously.

Seven points which should be considered in landscaping were cited by the speaker, as follows: privacy; comfort; beauty; convenience and safety; easy maintenance; flexibility, and limiting factors of the geographical area.

He also mentioned major problems facing Midland horticulturists and suggested possible solutions.

Detroit coming back

The Washington Post

DETROIT — Detroit's Latin motto, adopted after a 19th century fire, sums up the current hopeful mood in the city: "We hope for better things, it rises from the ashes."

There are still plenty of skeptics around who think the city boosters are really singing that blues refrain: "Been down so long, it looks like up to me."

But leading indicators suggest that the optimists are right — that Detroit hit bottom two or three years and is now modestly improving for the first time in at least 15 years.

Detroit lost more than 10 percent of its population and fully one-third of its jobs from the mid-1960s to the mid-1970s. The decline in the city's labor force was steady and ruinous during that decade, even when the auto industry was prospering.

In 1976, the decline stopped. The following year, when the Renaissance Center opened with its thousands of new jobs, the city's labor force grew modestly, for the first time in a decade, up 2 percent. This year, it is slightly larger still, while unemployment is down considerably. Detroit this March had a working population of 626,000 up 6 percent from the low point of '76.

Crime in Detroit, never quite as bad as the city's reputation as "murder city," peaked in 1975-76 and began dropping sharply. Last year, there were 24,000 reports of violent crimes — murder, rape, assault, robbery — down 20 percent from the previous year. The overall crime rate was still slightly above the 1973 level, the year before Coleman Young became mayor, but officials predict 1978 will show continued decline.

The property assessments for the downtown district increased in 1976 after a long decline. The improvement was modest, but assessment officials explain property assessments usually lag 18 months behind any increased business activity. The city's total property assessment continued to decline last year, but the assessor's office predicts that too will turn around next year.

Governmental change doesn't end race laws

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Most Saturday afternoons crowds of blacks gather in athletic stadiums or open field to listen to speakers tell them freedom from white domination is near.

They raise their fists in black-power salutes, chant "Zi-Zi-Zimbabwe" and sing their anthem, "God Bless Africa."

Then they go home to segregated townships.

Three months after the biracial transition government took office as a prelude to Rhodesia's becoming a black-governed Zimbabwe by year's end, much of the country's discriminatory laws remain in force.

These include a large part of the Land Tenure Act which divided the country into black and white areas, with the 6.7 million blacks and the 263,000 whites each getting around 45 million acres.

As happened in other African countries, the first promise of black rule has done more to raise expectations than change basic realities.

In Rhodesia, the proposed changeover is more complicated and hazardous because the very survival of the transition government is imperiled by a deteriorating military and economic situation as the nationalist guerrilla war and world economic sanctions continue.

Black unemployment, now running at almost 250,000, is steadily rising and the average individual income has dropped by 20 percent in the past three years to the equivalent of $254 a year. Economists expect it to fall by another 8 percent this year.

There is not much the transition government or a moderate black government destined to inherit the hard-hit economy can do to change this so long as the million-dollar-a-day war and trade sanctions go on.

But the economy, the military and the civil service remain under white control with Zimbabwe less than seven months away.

The transition government — the biracial Executive Council — has been slow in acting to abolish discrimination, although it as said a program will be implemented "soon."

There have been no signs — apart from some private companies now anxious to get blacks on executive payrolls — of appointing blacks to top jobs.

Black co-minister Byron Hove was fired in April for advocating accelerated black advancement in the judiciary and police — a prospect which both threatened white jobs and heightened fears expressed by whites of a total break down in law and order.

The civil service remains the most obvious reflection of the old order. Of its 39,000 members, 27,000 are blacks whose annual earnings total $17.3 million in contrast to $67.5 million earned by whites.

There are no black departmental secretaries or deputy secretaries.

The predominantly white civil servants union, the Public Services Association, says, however, it expects widescale Africanization after black rule.

The national airline has no black pilots and none is being trained. Air Rhodesia's ground-technician courses are biracial, but, said an airline spokesman, "considerably less than half the of our apprentices are blacks."

Racial bars no longer exist, at least officially, in such public places as movie theaters, cafes, hotels and restaurants. Unlike neighboring South Africa, discrimination in Rhodesia always was less rigid and more discreet.

Movie theaters and expensive hotels, for example, opened to all races 20 years ago. At about the same time, most discriminatory notices disappeared — sometimes to be replaced by equally effective signs reading: "Right of Admission Reserved."

Other changes have come about within the past 18 months, some since the transitional government took office.

The 36 million acres of previously white-reserved farmland, which produces more than neighboring Zambia and Tanzania combined, have been thrown open to black buyers. About a dozen blacks have found the average $120,000 needed to buy white farms.

In fact, only about 2 percent of the country is now reserved for whites. But it is a crucial 2 percent — the commericial centers and plush suburbs of seven major cities and towns.

Several hundred blacks have bought houses in white suburbs in the past year. Although the deals are still technically illegal under the land laws, officials have turned a blind eye.

State schools and hospitals remain segregated.

The Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, one of the three blacks serving with Prime Minister Ian Smith on the governing Executive Council, says that under the antidiscrimination program all land will be open to purchase by anyone, except for the 42 percent set aside since the first days of white rule as black tribal reservations.

B'nai B'rith convention scheduled here this weekend

Delegates from seven states of the South and Southwest will converge on Midland this weekend for an annual district convention of B'nai B'rith, Jewish men's philanthropic and service organization.

The conclave, hosted by the Permian Basin Lodge No. 2409 of B'nai B'rith, will be held in the Midland Hilton. Some 200 delegates from B'nai B'rith units in Oklahoma, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, Tennessee and Texas are expected to attend. Also attending the convention will be David M. Blumberg, international president of B'nai B'rith for the past seven years. Blumberg, retiring from the office this year, is well-known for his youth leadership work.

The official opening session at 8:30 p.m. Saturday in the ballroom of the Midland Hilton will be preceded by district officers' meetings and committee sessions this afternoon and a special religious service tonight in Odessa's Temple Beth-El. Preliminary events Saturday afternoon will include open forums presented by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, the B'nai B'rith youth organization and B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation. The forums will begin at 2 p.m.

At the Saturday night opening session, greetings will be brought by the mayors of Midland and Odessa and a welcome will be extended by David Hoff, convention chairman. The keynote address will be delivered by U.S. Sen. John Tower. The public is invited at no cost to hear him.

A reception will follow the gathering.

Sunday's events will be initiated with a breakfast meeting, followed by convention committee meetings at 10 a.m. A luncheon paying tribute to Blumberg, outgoing international president of B'nai B'rith, is scheduled for 1 p.m., and a plenary session will begin at 2:30.

Caucuses introducing the three candidates for the international presidency, Herbert Setlow, Murray Shusterman and Jack Spitzer, are scheduled for 4:30 p.m. Sunday, with a dinner scheduled to begin at 6:30 p.m. A B'nai B'rith public affairs program is planned for 8:30 p.m. as the final Sunday event.

An awards breakfast is announced for 8 a.m. Monday, with a plenary session scheduled to begin at 9:30, followed by a noon luncheon. Another plenary session will be held beginning at 1:30 p.m., and at 5:30 p.m. a young leaders reception is planned.

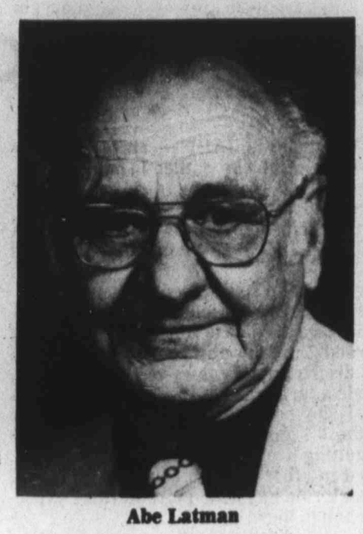

At 8:30 p.m. Monday, U. S. Congressman Bob Krueger of New Braunfels will address delegates, and he will be honor guest at a reception following the meeting.

Krueger's address will be open to the public.

Tuesday events will include a breakfast at 8 a.m., plenary sessions at 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. and a banquet beginning at 7:30 p.m., at which new district officers will be installed. A reception will follow.

The convention will conclude Wednesday morning with an executive committee breakfast meeting.

Joining convention chairman David Hoff in making arrangements for the convention are Harold Schneider of Midland, and Dr. Bob Gerry and Dr. Sam Fisher, both of Odessa. A special guest at the convention will be Warren Eisenberg of Washington, D.C., director of public affairs for B'nai B'rith International.

Proposition 13 spells no fireworks Fourth

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The fallout from California's Proposition 13 is spreading through the skies over San Francisco.

For the past 20 years, the San Francisco Chronicle has sponsored a Fourth of July fireworks display at Candlestick Park that draws 15,000 to 20,000 people annually.

But the Chronicle has canceled Tuesday's display — leaving the city without a major Independence Day celebration — because "San Francisco just doesn't have the funds to back us up," said Chronicle spokesman Phelps Dewey.

The Chronicle took over the event in 1958 when the city was strapped for funds. But the city continued to pay the cost of police and fire protection and post-celebration cleanup.

Dewey said that since the San Francisco Giants baseball team is playing at Candlestick the following day, municipal cleanup crews and policemen would have to work overtime at significant expense to the city.

Referring to the tax-cutting initiative, Dewey said, "In view of the restrictions that accompany Jarvis-Gann, we realize it would be ridiculous to pressure the city into spending extra money on this type of activity."

Garner Ted gets the ax

The Los Angeles Times

PASADENA, Calif. — Herbert W. Armstrong, 85-year-old patriarch of the Worldwide Church of God, has excommunicated his son, Garner Ted Armstrong, in what appears to be the final severance of ties between the two.

The 48-year-old radio-television evangelist said he is "bewildered" by his father's action that was announced in a letter to church members.

Armstrong, currently in Colorado, has been asked to return all church credit cards. He said he is uncertain what he will do.

"To seek some kind of secular employment," he said, "is something I find difficult to contemplate, but if God opens a door for me to preach his truth in whatever form then I will have to follow where He leads."

In the parlance of the 65,000-member church, the young evangelist has been "marked" which, in effect, makes him a pariah to his brethern. Any member of the church contacting him is also subject to being put out of the church.

The excommunication is the latest development in the rift between father and son. The elder Armstrong, founder of the Pasadena-based church, Ambassador College, and Ambassador International Cultural Foundation, last month imposed a six-month banishment on his son and ordered him to contact no one outside his immediate family.

The younger Armstrong and his wife, Shirley, were barred from church-owned homes in Pasadena and Big Sandy, Texas.

Armstrong's father, among other things, had accused his son of imitating commercial broadcasters on his radio and television programs and of not having enough religious content in them. The son has denied these accusations.

The excommunication of the younger man came within days of an interview in which he told the Los Angeles Times that his father's theocratic empire was ridden with fear and facing serious financial difficulties.

Armstrong also said he believes that ultimately all that will be left of his father's organizations will be the cultural foundation, and Quest Magazine.

North Yemen accuses South

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Conservative North Yemen formally accused the Marxist government of South Yemen of assassinating North Yemen President Ahmed al Ghashmi "with unprecedented brutality," Saudi Arabia's official radio station reported today.

The broadcast said a committee headed by Justice Minister Qadi Ali al Samman investigated the murder last Saturday in San'a, the capital of North Yemen. Its report will be submitted to an emergency meeting of the Arab League in Cairo Saturday.

Ghashmi was killed when an envoy from South Yemen sent to confer with him opened his briefcase and a bomb inside exploded. The envoy was also killed.

Houston crime grows

HOUSTON (AP) — Morale problems on the police force, coupled with a shortage of officers and a burgeoning population are responsible for a 7.1 percent increase in serious crime in the nation's fifth largest city, according to Assistant Police Chief B.K. Johnson.

Statistics for the first quarter of 1978 released by the FBI Thursday show a dramatic increase in crime in all major Texas cities while serious crime actually decreased 4 percent in the rest of the country.

In April Johnson had virtually the same comments to make about the crime rate in a city long noted for its high incidence of murder and, more recently, for its mushrooming population. He said since then reported crime has risen another 3.6 percent.

"What I said before is correct and still holds true," Johnson said. "We are not out of the woods yet. The tide of morale has not turned."

According to statistics compiled by the chamber of commerce, about 1,000 persons move into Houston or its metropolitan area each week. Johnson said because Houston is being transformed into a high-density residential area, crime will increase.

"I'm disappointed the crime statistics are running the way they are," he said, "but they are going to get worse."

The undermanned Houston police force has come under increasing criticism since the death last year of a 23-year-old Mexican-American while in police custody. Three former officers were subsequently convicted in federal court of violating Joe Campos Torres' civil rights.

Several other former officers are under federal indictment in connection with the shooting deaths of two teenagers after high-speed chases. And a former police chief has pleaded innocent to federal charges of obstruction of justice in connection with an alleged extortion attempt.

Johnson said morale was just beginning to improve on the force when a decision was made to take city cars from about 400 officers who drove them home at night.

Figures for the first five months of 1978 show murder rose 16.4 percent over the same period in 1977, from 152 to 177 homicides. Reported rapes rose 42.1 percent during the same period.

Spring in the desert provides mountain of memories

By JACK SCHREIBMAN

DUCKWATER, Nev. (AP) — In the hazy distance of the high desert a feather of campfire smoke rose from the sage and pinyon and stood like a plumed pillar in the still, morning air.

The motorcycle bumped and skidded giddily on the eastern Nevada dirt. Sadly, the end was near to a mad combination of spring adventures that mingled 4,000 miles of motorcycle riding with a goldfield burro trek and a wild run on the booming Colorado River.

Shortly, Highway 50, and a turn west for a final 600-mile run. Back to the Golden Gate, through the high-rolling traffic of boomtown Reno, then past Truckee to the stifling heat of the Sacramento Valley. Finally, the chilly fog of San Francisco, and suddenly memories were replacing realities.

The desert in March was an artist's palette of color from epic winter rains when the vacationers from across the country gathered at a dot on the map at the foot of the Panamint Mountains. This lonely range, dominated by 11,000-foot Telescope Peak, forms the western edge of the desolate salt cradle of Death Valley.

The staging point — Ballarat — is a ruined ghost town that once was jammed with prospectors who, for a brief few years, clawed gold from the rocks and streams. Ancient miners still go there to talk over old, hard times with "Miss Lil," a Ballarat resident.

The burros snorted and argued among themselves as our leader, Jack McClure, a nuclear scientist who prefers climbing mountains, directed the loading of supplies to support 20 of us for a week. As the sun kissed the Sierra Nevada to the west, we ate our campfire supper, toasted each other with red wine, and slept under the stars.

At daybreak, we stowed away a huge breakfast, packed our amiable animals, and trudged onto the steep, rough trail that winds up South Park Canyon. Over the next two days we would make only five miles — some of it on bunion-busting 25-degree grades of polished rock.

Up, up we went to 6,200 feet, past the Suitcase and Thorndyke mines, among pinyon pine, green and purple sage, juniper and yellow poppies. McClure, who had scouted these mountains many times, shook his head in wonder at the profusion of plant life.

He pointed to a delicate flower. "See, the seed that came from probably waited 30 years to do that." We looked at the brave sprig, and its cousins, and felt a deep appreciation for the tenacity of the living things of the desert.

Near Cotter Spring we came on the remains of a small rock structure. Eighty, maybe 90 years ago, a prospector seeking gold with a jackass and a poke of flour, a few beans and a blanket, headquartered here as he searched for El Dorado.

Two days later, we came to Stone Corral, at the head of Pleasant Canyon. And that night, crisis. It rained nine hours straight.

Most of us fled our tents for a rickety tin shack put up by a prospector 70 years ago. It was wall-to-wall soaking sleeping bags as the rain pelted the leaky roof all night.

The next day we hiked out, waving our burros goodbye.

Near the end of May, fickle nature hurled towering sandstorms, high winds, rain and temperatures down to 20 degrees at this lone motorcyclist. Surviving the storms, I met a score more of souls at Moab who took off in rubber rafts through the canyonlands of Utah.

The Colorado River was deceptively calm as we pushed off for our 100-mile run, in the hands of the water gods and the experts of the American River Touring Association.

For two days we drifted sedately through red sandstone and slickrock canyons carved by rain, wind and slicing water over 200 million years of ceaseless erosion.

The mighty Colorado lulled us as the rafts coursed among redrock cliffs, buttes, spires, pinnacles, daintily balanced rocks and towers. At one point we hiked into an area called The Maze, a kind of adult playground of some 200 convoluted, interwoven canyons that defy man's imaginings.

At lunchtime, our five rafts tied up on shore. Often we used the hour or two for a quick hike into the canyons. It had rained here, too, and the trails dazzled with cliff roses, flowering cacti, delicate yellow princess plumes and yucca rapiers.

On the fourth day, the Colorado showed a different side — it suddenly became our enemy. Swelled by runoff from historic winter snows in the Rockies, the Colorado was a wild and booming thing.

For two days we hit some three dozen rapids. The tiny rafts were flung off wild, white cliffs of raging water that hurled us about like grains of wheat.

Hidden under rainsuits and ponchos, we clung to ropes and each other to keep from being tossed into the raging river. One boat did capsize but everyone was rescued with no injuries.

Then, Lake Powell, the miniscule airstrip at Hite, and a flight back over the canyons to Moab. At night, at a beer party, we pledged to keep in touch forever.

Austin teacher faces arrest following complaints on dogs

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The head of an Austin teachers group faces an arrest warrant, following complaints about her dozen Doberman pinschers.

Officials cannot find Earlene Wright, president of the Austin Association of Teachers, who lives with the dogs in a small frame house. A spokesman at the teachers organization office said she was not expected in Austin until July 10.

Municipal Judge Alberto Garcia issued an arrest warrant Wednesday after the woman failed to submit a plea to a neighbor's barking dog complaint.

District sanitarian Al Bankston said he plans to recommend a city ordinance that would restrict the number of dogs at a residence. Building inspectors have said the woman's house is in substandard condition and infested with fleas.

Writers still nash teeth on Solzhenitsyn remarks

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

Mulligan's Stew

RIDGEFIELD, CONN. (AP) — To Alexander Solzhenitsyn, the bearded Russian exile who rarely ventures beyond the security fence of his Vermont dacha, goes the golden mortarboard for delivering this year's most memorable commencement address, a seasonal brand of oratory usually characterized by more pomp than circumstance.

Editorial writers, columnists and broadcast pundits are still gnashing their metaphors over the megaton blast the Nobel laureate delivered against Western morals, materialism, mass living habits, "TV stupor and intolerable music" on the sanctified ground of Harvard Yard, the mother house of U.S. culture.

Somewhere along the way, as the 18,000 assembled dons, parents, graduates and guests sat in awed silence in the fallout of his fury and through intermittent showers, the 59-year-old novelist also gored the sacred cow of a free press, which is one sure way of reserving space for yourself on both the ed and op-ed pages.

The right to know everything "is a false slogan, characteristic of a false era," maintained the man who risked his life to let the world know in detail the horrors of the Soviet slave labor camps in his three-volume "Gulag Archipelago."

But, wait, the prophet from beyond the banks of the Volga, and lately the Connecticut, was reaching for a higher truth:

"People also have the right not to know, and it is a much more valuable one. The right not to have their divine souls stuffed with gossip, nonsense, vain talk. A person who works and leads a meaningful life does not need the excessive burdening flow of information."

Somewhere in this favored land the sun was probably shining bright that very day on a commencement platform adorned by Liz Smith, Earl Wilson, Rona Barrett, Russell Baker, Art Buchwald, Dear Abby or a similar syndicated soul stuffer of gossip and nonsense, plus occasional vain talk when the muse does a cop out.

Were their ears burning bright red as they inclined the head to receive the cowl for the honorary degree that serves in lieu of an honorarium on occasions like these?

I know Erma Bombeck was delivering a graduation speech somewhere in the hinterland that week because she salvaged most of it later for a column, which is about as good as you can hope for these days on the parchment and chicken salad circuit.

I would like to assure Alexander Solzhenitsyn, whom I greatly admire as a man and a literary giant, that the fanatical followers of this column, most of them close relations, need never fear that their right not to know is being trampled upon. From these random paragraphs emanates no excessive burdening flow of information that would keep them from leading meaningful life, if the notion to do so ever struck any of them. The speaker's scorn cannot fall on this arid acre of journalism for resorting "to guesswork, rumors and suppositions to fill the voids." The voids are there daily, flaring, unadorned, unfilfilled.

I remember when Eisenhower had his heart attack, press secretary Jim Hagarty denounced columnist Stu Alsop for writing "unmitigated rot" about the president's health. The younger Alsop promptly added 26 new papers to his syndication. Art Buchwald accused the administration of favoritism. He said he had been writing unmitigated rot for more than a decade and never had been recognized by the White House.

I wonder if Solzhenitsyn realizes how sensitive nonsense writers are about their craft, their drudgery, and how most of them secretly despise what they do. Gilbert; of Gilbert and Sullivan fame, could lament: "I have been scribbling twaddle for 35 years to suit the public taste." All his fame and fortune, he wept en route to the bank, "represents the folly of the British public."

Robert Bencheley also could ruefully look back on a lifetime misspent in stuffing the divine souls of his readers with nonsense. "It took me 15 years," he said, "to discover I had no talent for writing, but I couldn't give it up because by that time I was famous."

Only Washington Irving could search his professional conscience and answer the questions put "by my graver readers: to what purpose is all this? How is the world to be made wiser by all this talk? Alas, is there not wisdom enough extant for the instruction of the world?...

"What after all is the mite of wisdom that I could throw into this mass of knowledge? Or how am I sure that my safest deductions may be safe guides to the opinion of others? But in writing to amuse, if I fail, the only evil is my own disappointment. If however, I can, by any lucky chance, in these days of evil, rub but one wrinkle from the brow of care, or beguile the heavy heart of one moment of sorrow; if I can now and then penetrate through the gathering film of misanthropy, prompt a benevolent view of human nature, and make my reader more in a good humor with his fellow beings and himself, surely, surely, I shall not have written entirely in vain."

But then Irving, like Solzhenitsyn, was a genius, although the legatees of a Swedish munitions maker weren't around then to recognize him.

One can eat wisely on $1.30 a day

By JEANNETTE BRANIN
Copley News Service

Food prices have risen by a compound annual rate of 18.4 percent in the last three months, but Dorothy Wheeler suggests there are many ways consumers can cope.

"They can't do anything about the high cost of homes, the high cost of mortgages, the high cost of gasoline. But they can do something about the high cost of food. They have a choice," said Wheeler in an interview. She is home economist for the University of California Cooperative Extension.

Wheeler works with food prices daily. She is supervisor of aides who work with poverty-level persons in the Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program, which is federally funded under the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"Our aides work on welfare allowances and can show a person how to eat on $1.30 a day and still get all the nutrients needed. There are lots of people living on a lot less than that."

A Labor Department report indicated consumer prices rose by 0.9 percent in May, reflecting a record 6.6 percent increase in the price of beef. The food price rise of I8.4 in three months was largely responsible for a 10 percent rise in all consumer prices during the period.

The President's special counselor on inflation, Robert Strauss, said a beef boycott was not advisable. "Buy the cheaper cuts of beef," he said. Wheeler agrees.

"You can live the rest of your life without T-bone steaks," said Wheeler. "If you're really serious about cutting food costs, look at the price of pot roasts...89 cents a pound. Put potatoes and onions and carrots, all of them plentiful and cheap, around the roast. You have a fine, nutritious and economical meal."

Another thing people can live without forever is lettuce, she said. "They screamed like mad when lettuce went to $1 a head. Why? Cabbage was cheap, carrots were cheap, and both make good salads, and are superior nutritionally. People have a choice. They don't have to buy the expensive foods."

Wheeler suggests the use of "stretchers" to make a little go a long way. "Use rolled oats, cornmeal, bread and cereal.

"To make it a complete protein, just add a little animal product, anything that comes from anything that lived, like eggs, poultry, fish and meat."

She offered an alternative for those who consider tuna and canned salmon too expensive. "A can of mackerel priced at 59 to 60 cents can serve 8 persons, fixed up in a mackerel loaf with extenders, or in a pattie with cottage cheese which extends the protein, or in any casserole recipe calling for tuna or salmon.

"And half a chicken can feed 8 people when it's cooked with black-eyed peas; the cost is very inexpensive. Extend meat loaves with rolled oats; tuna with rice. Rice is a great extender. Buy the least-expensive white rice that's enriched."

Wheeler said that people who buy sour cream, grated or sliced cheese, and cut-up chickens are spending more money than necessary.

"First and one of the best ways to save money is to switch to non-fat dry milk instead of whole milk," she said. "It's as good as whole milk in flavor and probably a lot better for you because there's less fat. Most people get too much fat in their diet, anyway.

"Non-fat dry milk costs about half what is paid for fluid milk in the store and it can be whipped, too."

To cut more costs, Wheeler said to buy mild, not sharp, cheese by the piece and do your own grating and slicing; to buy nuts in the shell, and do your own shelling. "Why pay all that extra money for somebody else to slice a piece of cheese or crack a nutshell?" she said.

Ice milk or imitation ice milk have the same food values, the same calories, as ice cream. "Instead of butter fat, you get vegetable fat; the values are the same, but it's much less expensive."

Other money-saving suggestions are to bypass the sourdough dinner rolls and buy bread instead; cut up whole chickens and save 10 cents a pound; never buy canned beans, peas, lentils, buy them dry, soak and cook them. Make your own soup instead of paying the price for canned soup.

Wheeler urges cooks to get good recipes for beef and pork liver, heart, kidney and tongue. "There's no waste, you get about five servings a pound and they have tremendously high food value."

Top blinding disease needs early detection

If your eyesight is good or eyeglasses are all you require to read, drive a car, watch television, or appreciate the joys of nature, you are fortunate. It has been estimated that eight million Americans suffer from glaucoma, a condition of the eye that is generally characterized by an abnormal increase in intraocular pressure. Glaucoma can result in irreversible blindness through progressive loss of the field of vision. Because the disease doesn't give any warning symptoms, two to three million people are unaware they have the disease.

The most prevalent type of glaucoma is known medically as either open-angle glaucoma, chronic simple glaucoma, or glaucoma simplex. It accounts for 60 to 70 of all adult glaucomas and effects 0.4 of persons over the age of 40. But it can occur in all age groups—even in newborn infants. Diabetics are more prone to the condition than the general population. More than one-third of patients with open-angle glaucoma have relatives similarly affected. Both eyes are usually involved and both sexes equally. The disease may be far advanced before the patient notices extensive visual field loss.

Glaucoma is the leading preventable cause of blindness in the U.S. and the second leading cause in the world.

Early diagnosis depends in large measure on certain routine measurements:

TONOMETRY—measures intraocular pressure. This is the most important test for establishing the diagnosis.

FUNDUSCOPIC EXAMINATION—utilizes the ophthalmoscope to look at the optic nerve head (optic disc) in back of the eye. One of the first signs of impending danger in glaucoma is a change in the optic disc.

VISUAL FIELD EXAMINATION—uses a hemispheric pattern to help detect early nerve fiber defects and enlargement of the blind spot. Early detection of changes in the visual field and appropriate treatment can usually prevent visual loss entirely.

GONIOSCOPY—helps to diagnose the specific type of glaucoma. There are 32 varieties, with primary open-angle and primary closed-angle the most common.

The physician may also wish to perform a "slit-lamp examination," a meticulous microscopic examination of the eye which also determines the depth of the anterior chamber.

A full patient and family history will be needed.

When a diagnosis of glaucoma is confirmed, treatment can usually be achieved medically, surgically, or by a combination of both, and for the most common form of the disease, open-angle glaucoma, with medication.

The drug most often prescribed for increased intraocular pressure and open-angle glaucoma (the two are not necessarily synonymous) is pilocarpine. The drug is taken either through eyedrops four times a day or a relatively new medical device that is placed in the eye by the patient for continuous therapy for a full week.

DEAR ABBY

Mother avoids scenes

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I and our four children (ages 7 to 13) were invited to a relative's home for supper recently. She had one large table set for the adults and another one for the children.

My daughter, age 13, came to me and said she wasn't going to sit with the "babies." (Two of her 12-year-old cousins were sitting at that table and they didn't complain.) I told her not to make a fuss and to go sit down and be quiet. Being a very headstrong child, she raised her voice a bit and said she would rather go home.

Well, I wasn't about to take her home, and I couldn't let her walk home alone at night, so in order to avoid a scene I told her to go get her chair and to sit by me, which she did.

I dislike scenes in public and I still think I did the right thing. My husband said I should have told the spoiled little stinker to either sit where she was put or to go into the bedroom and sulk. What is your opinion?—NAMELESS IN JERSEY

DEAR NAMELESS: With such a smart husband, why are you writing to Dear Abby?

DEAR ABBY: I am one of those who has accepted many invitations but never reciprocates. I, too, have talked of having a party, but it never materializes. Would you like to know why?

I'm frightened to death of having people in because when the conversation lags, I'm tongued-tied. I can never think of anything clever to say. I am not sure that what I cook will be good enough, and I'm not sure I'll serve it right.

In school I was the quiet type who earned the reputation of being "stuck up" because I was so shy. I know I should have people over, and I really want to, but I'm scared. How does one overcome such fears? I am almost 35.—INEPT IN INGLEWOOD

DEAR INEPT: Many people don't entertain because they're afraid they won't do it to perfection. Nonsense! Perfection isn't expected of anyone. There are any number of good cookbooks with suggested menus and full instructions on serving.

And get over the idea that everyone in the room is waiting for pearls of wisdom to drop from your mouth. Say anything. If it's audible, kind and honest, you'll get by. The longest march in the world started with one step. Forward—march!

DEAR ABBY: I need your opinion on something. My mother tells me it is not right for a girl to go to her boyfriend's apartment when just the two of them are there alone. She says it will ruin the girl's reputation for good, even if nothing happens.

Mom says that even nice girls can get into trouble by going to their boyfriends' apartments—that being together all alone too much is just tempting fate and pressing your luck.

Miss Abby, I've been brought up to obey my parents, but lately I'm confused. My friends at college say "everybody does it," and they laugh at me for my old-fashioned ideas. Can you help me?—LISTENS TO MOM AT 18

DEAR LISTENS: I don't know who's luckier, you or your mother. You, to have a mother who cares enough to warn you against the seemingly harmless temptations to which so many girls yield. Or your mother, who has a sensible 18-year-old daughter who still listens. Keep listening. You'll never regret it.

Don't permit seasons to dictate colors chosen for your abode

By CAROLE EICHEN
Copley News Service

Summer is the perfect time to put a little color in your life, to get set for fall when the leaves will change in most parts of the country.

But don't let the seasons dictate the colors you choose for your apartment or condominiums.

Just let them remind you of the power of color to change your moods, uplift your family, give you an entirely new outlook that friends and visitors can share with you when they drop by.

Before you venture off to the paint store, keep this in mind: some colors can by physically exciting like reds, oranges, bright yellows, bold purples.

Others such as beiges, blues and greens can be calming, neutralizing.

It's important, therefore, to assess your moods and your life-style. If you work all day in a pressure-packed environment, say a busy office or a department store, you probably want to relax when you come home. Therefore, your surroundings shouldn't look like some vibrant discotheque. Natural colors or pale shades of blues plus white will help.

On the other hand, if your job is a little on the quiet side or routine or, let's face it, boring, you need a rush of excitment when you come home. A cheery, bright color scheme using paint, fabrics and lighting is the best permanent pepper-upper you'll ever find. It's pure visual excitement.

If you are home during the day keeping tabs on energetic children, you may want to pick a room in the house that can be your very own retreat and where the color scheme is tailored specifically to your desires — lively, carefree, or subdued. You decide: color can make it happen.

Take a small room for instance. A rich red lacquer on all paintable surfaces gives it plenty of color impact and a white ceiling gives it added visual height. You don't feel closed in despite the tight dimensions. Carry the color through to include the doors, molding, in anything that can be painted.

A soothing color combination is achieved by teaming bright blue walls with white molding and draperies. That way you are free to select white fabrics for your furniture if you don't have any small children with sticky hands.

Or reverse the scheme and use white walls with blue moldings and either white or blue draperies. Blue furnishing fabrics would fit in nicely.

The natural greenery of live plants adds a color accent that does not become a permanent part of your room and can be moved around as you redecorate.

OK, you've considered red and white and blue and white. Why not the inevitable combination or red, white and blue, never ageless, always exciting? Any of the three colors can work well on the wall but for drama use one of the bold colors and this time cover all the moldings and window sills with the single solid color. But for depth, if you have windows, use either a white shade or drape-curtain.

Naturally the carpet can be either white or the remaining bold color — red if the walls are blue, and blue if the walls are red. Then you can set up the rest of the room: a blue-and-white floral fabric on the sofa, a white ottoman with a blue-and-white floral chair, a red coffee table that matches the wall. Stick with the three colors even right down to the flowers but you can add some sunshine colors such as yellow mums or tulips.

And don't forget the greenery. Boston ferns, grape ivy, creeping Charlies — no matter what you use it will add a glorious dimension of life to your home.

These are only some suggestions on color. Take a tip from nature, look out your window. If you're near water, consider blues. If you're in the country, golds, wheats, greens and other nuetral colors might help you bring the outdoors in.

MINI RECIPES

Tuna Bites Superb

2 cans (7 oz. or 199g each) solid white albacore tuna, drained
4 oz. (110g) cream cheese, softened
1 oz. (28g) blue cheese, crumbled
2 tbsps. (15g) green onion, minced
¾ cup (11g) parsley, minced
Cherry tomatoes

In a large bowl, combine tuna with cream cheese, blue cheese and green onion; blend well. Chill mixture one hour. Form into small balls; roll in parsley. Place in a flat dish; cover, chill until serving time. Arrange on a platter; garnish with cherry tomatoes. Makes a dozen appetizers.

HOME EC NOTES

When a recipe calls for cocoa, use the unsweetened kind. Do not use an instant cocoa mix (unless it is called for), because it is usually a blend of cocoa, sugar, flavoring and sometimes nonfat dry milk.

Celebrate Hot Dog Month

Fun to fix, neat to eat, and great for the grill—what better way to celebrate National Hot Dog Month than with Dogs in a Sesame Blanket. They'll all love them, because they're a twist on that old favorite—the hot dog on a bun. You'll love them too, because they're practically an all-in-one meal. (An optional dress-up is the addition of sesame seeds on the outside.) Just serve with raw carrot sticks or radish circles alongside, and you're all set.

In addition to preparing a quick, economical meal, you'll also be providing a nutritious one too. Just two hot dogs supply one-third of a child's daily requirement of protein and one-fourth of the adult daily requirement. Hot dogs also contain iron, thiamine, riboflavin, niacin, phosphorus, zinc, Vitamin C, Vitamin B6 and Vitamin B12.

DOGS IN A SESAME BLANKET

2 4-oz. packages wiener-wrap
5 hot dogs
1 oz. Colby Cheese
2½ slices of a medium onion
1 large dill pickle (cut into 5 equal portions
1½ teaspoons chili sauce
Sesame seeds (optional)

Open wiener-wrap packages and unfold. Press alternate seams together, making 5 wraps. Slice hot dogs down the center (but not all the way through). Cut Colby cheese into juliene strips and place in the center of each hot dog. Top with a long juliene slice of onion and strip of dill pickle. Brush inside of wiener-wrap with chili sauce and fold wrap over stuffed hot dogs; pinching dough to seal. Sprinkle wiener-wrap with water and dip into sesame seeds. Grill over medium coals (about 6 inches from the source of heat) turning several times for about 25 minutes or until sesame seeds are toasted and dough is nicely browned. Yield: 5 servings.

Sausage In A Blanket is a great way to acquaint your friends and family with other kinds of economical sausage products. The National Hot Dog & Sausage Council suggests substituting thuringer, bratwurst or frankfurters—or for a real summer surprise, use all four kinds of sausages.

GRILLED SAUSAGE IN A BLANKET

3 cups of Biscuit mix
¾ cup water
Mustard
4 ozs. Swiss cheese, cut into strips
1 8 oz. can sauerkraut, well drained
1 large dill pickle, cut in strips
Caraway seeds

Add water to biscuit mix and knead about 15 minutes. Let dough rest about 30 minutes. Divide dough in half and roll into two 10-inch squares. Cut each square in half, and each half into thirds. (You'll get 6 pieces approximatelty 3" by 5" from each 10" square.) Place a sausage in the center of each. Spread with mustard. Add pickle and Swiss cheese which have been cut into strips. Put approximately 1 tablespoon well-drained sauerkraut on each. Wrap up, sprinkle lightly with water, and roll in caraway seeds. Grill over medium coals (about 6 inches from source of heat) turning several times for about 25 minutes, or until dough is lightly browned. On rainy days you may wish to bake in a preheated 425 degrees F. oven for 15 minuts. Yield: 12.

Easy to prepare, Hot Dog Pizza is perfect for camping trips, picnic or fishing outings. Quick, too, because it uses a no-yeast crust.

HOT DOG PIZZA

2 cups buttermilk biscuit mix
½ cup water
1 8-oz. can pizza sauce
4 hot dogs, sliced
4 thin slices of medium size onion, separated into rings
½ cup (1 2¼-oz. jar) sliced black olives
½ cup (1 2½-oz. jar or can) mushrooms, sliced
8-oz. (2 cups) Mozzarella cheese, grated

Light your coals, then mix biscuit mix and water until it forms a soft dough. Knead 20 to 25 times. Divide dough into fourths and gently smooth into four balls. Let set for half an hour. Roll or pat dough into 8-inch circles. When coals become gray, place dough on grill about 6 inches above coals and cook for about three minutes—or until just crispy. With spatula, flip dough and spread generously with pizza sauce. Arrange sliced hot dogs, onion rings, olives and mushrooms evenly over the 4 circles. Sprinkle with mozzarella cheese and top with remaining pizza sauce. Grill for 10 minutes and then cover with foil and continue cooking for an additional 15 minutes. Yield: 4 generous servings.

RAINY DAY VARIATION: Don't let rainy weather keep you from enjoying this quick and easy treat. Bake on a cookie sheet (2 pizzas to a sheet) in a preheated 425 degrees F. oven for 15 minutes, or until nicely browned.

No matter whether they're cooked on the grill or skewered, sausages provide a quick, convenient way to keep cooking chores at a minimum yet provide a hearty nutritious meal.

BAR-B-QUE SAUCE

1 8-oz. can tomato sauce
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
¼ cup dark corn syrup
3 tablespoons vinegar
3 tablespoons minced onion
1 tablespoon Worcestershire Sauce
¼ teaspoon celery seed
Dash hot pepper sauce

Combine mustard in a small amount of tomato sauce in a saucepan, mixing well. Then add remaining ingredients. Cook over medium heat until boiling. Brush sausages and franks lightly with sauce and broil over medium coals until heated through. Serve with extra sauce. Yield: 2 cups (Enough sauce for 2 lbs. of sausages or franks)

BAR-B-QUED FRANK ON SKEWER

Cut franks at a slant and thread olives and franks on skewers. Broil over medium coals, brush lightly with sauce, for about 12 to 15 minutes until sausages are heated through.

Wouldn't you like to "travel" halfway around the world? With this easy curry sauce, you can...and for a lot less than the cost of an airplane ticket. Nutritious franks team up with this nippy sauce to give you the experience of exotic Indonesia. Try it with some crusty bread and a variety of crisp, fresh vegetables, suggests The National Hot Dog Council.

INDONESIAN CURRY SAUCE

½ cup mayonnaise
½ cup sour cream*
1 teaspoon tarragon vinegar
1 teaspoon garlic salt
1 teaspoon curry powder
1 teaspoon white horseradish
1 teaspoon grated onion

Combine all the ingredients and serve with a large platter of grilled frankfurters and a large platter of chilled vegetables such as cauliflower, julienne sliced green peppers, celery sticks, radishes, cherry tomatoes, cucumber and carrot sticks. Yield: 1 cup sauce.

*Cut calories by substituting sour half-and-half or yogurt instead of sour cream.

Strange noises in plumbing system may be cry for help

By AL CARRELL

Strange noises in your plumbing system may bug you, but they may also be a blessing. The noise may really be a cry for help.

For example, if you hear a sort of knocking when water is running, it means that the force of the water is moving a pipe or fixture and causing it to hit something. Even if it has a good beat, you should stop the movement before it breaks a joint loose.

Another noise happens only when the water has been running and is suddenly shut off. This is called "water hammer." It shouldn't happen because each pipe leading to a fixture should have an air chamber. This is just a hollow pipe that's capped so air is trapped. When the water is running and then suddenly stopped, the air absorbs the shock waves so there's no water hammer.

If that air chamber becomes water logged, there's no cushion, and you hear the results. Often you can shut off the water supply, drain the pipes and open taps so air can get into the line and refill the chambers. If that doesn't do it, you may have clogged pipes and may have to add an auxiliary air chamber.

Dear Al:

We had pipes banging when the water was running, so after crawling around under the house, I found that the pipes were well braced, but that the U-shaped pipe clamps were bigger than the pipe. This left room for movement. I solved the problem by cutting small sections of old garden hose and slitting them end to end. Then I slipped these over the pipe and forced them under each strap. No movement and no noise.--A.B.

Deal Al:

When a run of pipe in a water supply line makes a right-angle turn, it can move as water passes through because there's no resistance as there is with a straight pipe. We had such a problem in our basement, and there was nothing to nail a brace to. I solved the problem in a unique way. I used a turnbuckle and wire. The wire runs from the bend in the pipe to the wall in which the pipe goes. It's looped around the right angle part of the pipe and attached to the wall through a screw eye. The turnbuckle in the center allowed me to get the wire taut. Now there is no movement.--W.J.

A SUPER HINT—One plumbing noise that really bugs a lot of people is the whistling john, that toilet that screams while the tank is refilling. This usually indicates that the valve that lets the water in is restricted. The first suspect is the washer. You have to cut off the water supply to get to it, and then remove some usually corroded thumb screws. After you've used penetrating oil and finally removed the plunger to examine the washers, take the bad one in to the hardware store for exact replacements. Of course, if you can get it to whistle a tune, maybe you can get your toilet on the Gong Show.

Deal Al:

If there is a screeching noise when you turn the handle on a faucet, it's an easy matter to quiet it down. This means the metal threads are crying for a little lubrication. Petroleum jelly smeared over the threads will silence the noise, make it easier to turn, and cut down on the wear. Be sure to cut off the water supply before removing the spindle, or the next screeching sound will be your own screams as you get hit in the face with a geyser.--A.L.

SHOP TALK—Some houses are built without air chambers at all fixtures. There are add-on types available at plumbing supply stores. There are several types. If you don't have air chambers, talk to your plumber dealer about adding these cushions of air for quieter living.

Check features

COLLEGE STATION – To find an apartment with lower utility bills, look for one that has energy-saving features outside.

Outside--or exterior--factors are a key to energy-efficient apartments, says Glenda Moore, a housing and home furnishings specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

IDEAL ENERGY-SAVING APARTMENT

An ideal apartment is this: downstairs location, faces south, has light-colored exterior (walls and roof), protected by seasonal leaf-shedding shade trees, and its position permits breezes to blow through it.

Of course, how residents use energy and other factors also affect utility bills, Miss Moore adds.

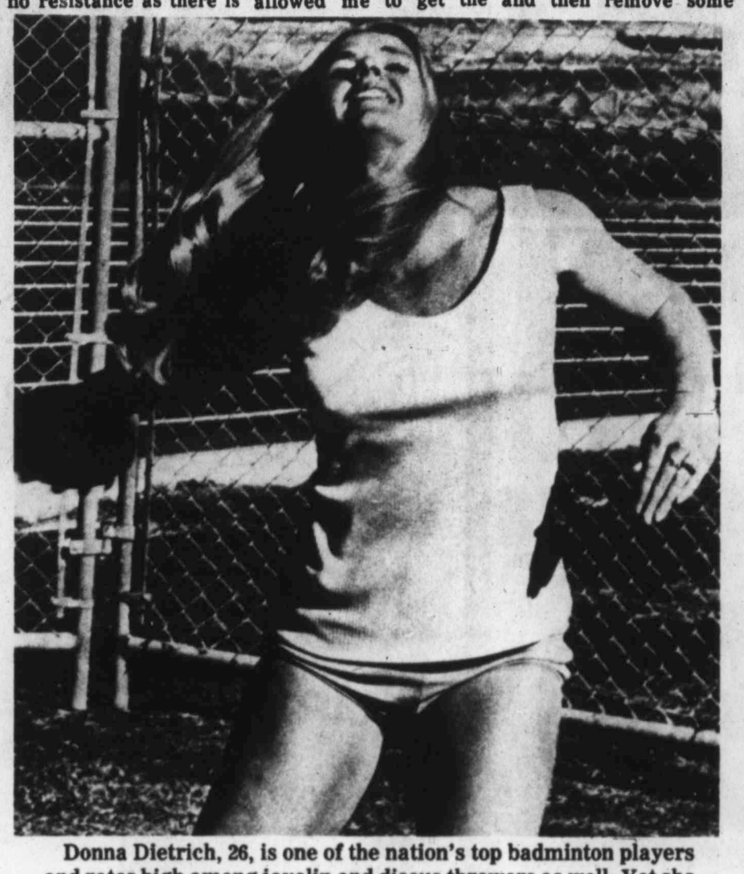

DOWNSTAIRS LOCATION

Downstairs is more energy-efficient than an upstairs location or a two-level apartment, because less energy can escape throught the ceiling which is protected by an upper-level apartment.

FACING SOUTH SAVES ENERGY

An apartment that faces south uses less heating energy, since cold north winds do not hit its front wall, which is usually the outer wall.

During the summer it avoids warm sunlight from the east and hot sunlight from the west.

Donna Dietrich, 26, is one of the nation's top badminton players and rates high among javelin and discus throwers as well. Yet she must work her way through San Diego State as a security officer at a nearby high school. The unhappy Donna says she thinks government funds to aid amateur athletes are discriminating.

Dietrich does it all, but it's difficult way

By NICK CANEPA
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — The average day in the life of Donna Dietrich — when put up against the standards of mere mortals — is not at all average.

First, and foremost, Dietrich is a student at San Diego State. But the similarity between her and the other 32,000 students attending State ends right there.

At 26, Dietrich is one busy lady.

On Tuesdays and Thursdays she attends classes at State. Each weekday from 1:30 to 4 p.m. she attends track practice. Each weekday from 7 to 10 p.m. she attends badminton practice.

Plus, as is the case with most women athletes, she has to earn a living. "I don't even get a full scholarship," she said. "Just tuition. No books ... $96 — that's it."

So, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, she works. What does she do?

"I'm a narc at Santana High," she said. A 'narc' is what students term high school security agents. "Yeah, they know who I am, all right. They say, 'There's that narc,' when they see me coming. Heck, it's a job."

Dietrich is a mild-mannered person. Until the subject of women's athletics is brought up. That, to say the least, brings out her competitive spirit.

In an interview, a male tennis player walked into an outer office. "Just look at that," she said with a frown. "Just look at that tennis player who just walked in. New sweats, new shoes.

"Do you know we even have to buy our own shoes? It's terrible. We work just as hard as the men. Look at me. I have to work. I don't know; it's just hard for me to accept. It just isn't fair.

"Do you know we'll probably have 12 girls qualify for the nationals in track? We have $200 to split up — $200!"

Title IX, the legislation designed by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to set women athletes free, has spent most of its brief existence mired in bureaucratic red tape and has not been as effective as it one day will be.

As a result, some schools have plenty of money to spend on women's athletics, some don't.

"I don't get a full scholarship and it's really hard to compete in a conference with USC and UCLA," said Dietrich. "All these people get full rides.

"And until they enforce Title IX, it's going to continue to be that way. I don't get shoes — I don't even get spikes for my shoes.

"Hey, I really don't want to sound like a big radical or anything like that. It's just that it makes me mad.

"Things are going to get better. Mary (Aztec Women's Athletic Director Mary Alice Hill) has really been a tremendous help to our program. Before she came here we had virtually nothing."

A senior, Dietrich has had a rather colorful athletic career.

At Santana High (yes, she also attended school there), she played just about everything but primarily was a tennis player.

"But I took four years off," she said, going into another part of her rather interesting life. "I ran a stable. I bought 15 horses to rent out for packers.

"But it wasn't too profitable. I've sold all but one of the horses. I worked on the ranch as foreman — forewoman, I guess. I learned how to run heavy equipment. I drove skiploaders. It was fun."

From there she went on to college, where she got into badminton.

"I probably wouldn't have stayed with it, but two girls who weren't good athletes beat me and that made me mad. I decided to stick with it until I became good."

She became good. Two years ago, she was fourth in the nationals. She didn't play the game last year ("A girl has to make a living, you know.") but is back at it this season and will attend the nationals in Mississippi soon.

She also will be competing in the track and field nationals in Tennessee.

She has thrown the javelin before, but the discus is something new to her.

Copely News Service

"Gluttony slays more than the sword," reads an old English proverb. In the early 18th century Thomas Fuller wrote, "More die by food than famine."

Gluttony is a learned habit. No one was born with the need for excessive amounts of food. They were taught to eat, and to expect large quantities. The onset of the gluttonous appetite usually begins in early childhood and it is taught by one or both parents, or members of the immediate family.

A child brought up in such an atmosphere will be saddled with a destructive compulsion to eat that may last a lifetime.

It has been said that the basic emotion that lies behind gluttony is fear. It is often not recognized by the victim and he may not even be the source of the emotion. It may have originated in the parents.

The fear of not getting enough to eat grows into a neurosis that is easily transmitted from the parent to the impressionable child.

Even a baby can be trained to overeat in his first year of life. The mother presses food upon him to make him roly-poly and starts his battle forever with obesity.

Gluttony is not a sign of robust good health, nor is a huge appetite a trait to be proud of. A "healthy" appetite has too long been considered one of prodigious amounts. A truly healthy appetite is one of restraint.

A woman came to my office for a reduction in weight and complained bitterly when told that a chop, in addition to a meal, as an example, vegetable, salad, fruit consisted of one lamb and beverage.

Edith designs for celebrities

By LUCRETIA STEIGER
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The long white car turns in between the pillars on Coldwater Canyon Road in Beverly Hills. Green plants along the driveway form a refreshing sea of color, light-years away from the dusty traffic outside.

The small woman with dark hair cut in bangs and horn-rimmed glasses walking down the brick path from the adobe house looks familiar. She wears a beige pantsuit and brown turtleneck sweater with an intriguing necklace of ivory theater tickets. She smiles, which is not familiar — she refuses to be photographed smiling — and extends her hand.

"Hello, I'm Edith Head," she said.

Ginger Rogers, Ava Gardner, Natalie Wood, Carole Lombard, Jean Harlow, Grace Kelly, Rudolph Valentino, Paul Newman and Robert Redford — those are some of the stars for whom she has designed clothes, Head said.

Taking down Shirley MacLaine's green chiffon pom-pon studded robe that kept a man home in "What a Way to Go," Head also chooses a heavily beaded black evening gown and coat once worn by Joan Crawford.

Decorated by her husband, set director Wiard Ihnen, a two-time Academy Award winner, it is a delightfully warm, appealing, comfortable home the Ihnens have enjoyed since 1925.

She's 5 feet 1 and weighs, allowing for an occasional chocolate soda, about 100 pounds. Staying at that weight, and wearing those famous bangs and those particular glasses is part of her style, her stamp of individuality, Head says. And that's something every woman must develop on her own. It's also something she learned early in a half-century with motion pictures, because clothes help form characterization, she said.

"I have a theory," she said, "that if you're not a great beauty, you can at least be individual. I realized early that I had hair like a horses's tail, which never would curl, and that I would have to wear glasses. Today I get letters saying, 'Honey, why not change?' and I love them. But I'm a fence-sitter. I never go to extremes.

"Every year fashion designers have to hatch out something new and controversial, a blimp or a sack, for instance. Every year there's a freak.

"I don't think the average woman is going to want to look like a football player, as they're predicting for fall. There'll be buyer resistance. A woman is not about to throw away everything she has to go from the soft look to padded things. I don't think it will go.

"I got caught after World War II. The government told us to save fabric — no pleats or pockets, and short skirts — and then Christian Dior came out with longer, bigger things, and everybody bit it.

"What I work on is the theory of looking in a mirror and criticizing as if that's a stranger, not yourself, reflected there. A psychiatrist once told me that an average woman or man has a difficult time trying to buy clothes because he or she finds it hard to be absolutely analytical.

"Take a brown paper bag, shoulder length, and cut holes for your eyes in it. With that over your head, you can look at yourself as a body and analyze what you need and what looks good. Then when you wear it and people say you look good, you're on the right track.

"Everybody cannot wear every fashion. Right now, there are more fashions and styles than ever before to choose from and it's very difficult, even for a trained person."

"You should have something personal about yourself. Gloria Swanson, a charming actress, always wears a fresh carnation. That's her trademark; that's Gloria Swanson as a type.

"Your type. Very few women are born types, but types can be developed. Clothes are magic. You can do anything, get anything with clothes. The woman who can sew has all the advantages. She can alter a neckline or change a hemline to make it more her. If I were president, and I've never even been nominated, every woman in this country would know how to sew. The woman who can sew can develop individuality, and that's it, the big thing.

"Types? Well, Grace Kelly, elegant, blonde and beautiful. Sophia Loren, sultry and exciting. Marlene, glamorous. Every star has had a type. Some wore simple clothes, others sophisticated clothes. Actresses have been my guinea pigs.

"Elizabeth Taylor, for instance. I'll be working with her on a television special for Hallmark soon. She changed in size from 8 to 14. If a person is well proportioned, it doesn't make any difference. I saw her translate herself into a large size for a role — and she carried it off.

"What clothes do for men — make the man, they say — well, you can double that for women."

Mabel Reed displays a prized piece from her large collection of cardinal figures. She has been collecting cardinals since her childhood days in Kentucky. Her collection includes cardinal purses, pictures, figures, cups, decorations, ashtrays, cream pitchers and even a mailbox.

Collector believes the cardinal is most symbolic bird on earth

By CRAIG MACDONALD
Copley News Service

Mabel Reed thinks the cardinal is the most beautiful and symbolic bird on earth.

"I grew up admiring all kinds of birds in Kentucky, but none affected me like the cardinal," says the Lakeside, Calif., resident who has one of the largest cardinal figure collections anywhere.

"As a girl I spent most of the winter indoors, looking out the window at snow and the cardinals. There they were with total freedom, and I had to stay inside and watch them.

"Even today, friends in Kentucky I grew up with see a cardinal and think of me. It's even the state bird of Kentucky!"

As a result of her love for cardinals, Reed began collecting figures of the red bird. Friends contributed anything they came across with a cardinal on it, and gradually her collection grew to several hundred items.

Reed has cardinal purses, pictures, figures, cups, Christmas decorations, ashtrays, cream pitchers, cards, music boxes, socks, bikini pants, pin cushions, bells, flashlights, lamps, thimbles, coasters, house signs and even a mailbox.

The cardinal figurines range in size from 11 inches high to one-fourth-inch high. They are made of cement, wood, porcelain, plastic and cloth.

Most of her collection is displayed in a living room curio cabinet.

"I love just to sit and look at the cardinals because each provokes a special memory — not only of my youth but of the people who gave them to me."

The male cardinals are painted red, with tints of gray on their backs. There is also a black marking around the bill's base. Females are olive gray and buff-colored with a bit of red on their crests, wings and tails. They both have red or orange bills.

Reed really got a case of "cardinal fever" when she walked into a florist shop in 1972.

"I saw the most beautiful ceramic cardinal — it reminded me of the real thing in Kentucky," she recalled. "I just had to buy it for myself.

"I never quiver over the price of a cardinal — I just buy it. And once I get one, I refuse to trade or sell it."

Reed is proud of her birds and once carted an eight-pound concrete cardinal 10 inches high home with her from Kentucky.

"I took it on a plane with me and put it under my feet like carry-on baggage. The stewardess let me keep it there as a footrest."

She never runs out of space for her cardinals — "there's always room for one more" — even though most of her presents from friends and family are cardinal-related.

"Even my 3-year-old granddaughter, when she sees a cardinal figure or picture says, 'Buy it for grandma'?"

She said her son used to tease her by looking at the collection and saying, "Have anymore of those birds hatched little ones?" Usually they had!

Reed knows the value of the birds her figures symbolize. They are members of the finch family and feed on insects, worms and seeds. Cardinals are popular with some farmers because they eat boll worms and potato beetles. They once were trapped and sold as songbirds and their feathers used to decorate women's hats. However, now federal law protects them.

Known mostly to inhabit the eastern United States, cardinals gradually are migrating westward, Reed said.

"Once they get here, I'm really going to be able to call California my home!"

Bottle comes with request

LOS ANGELES (AP)-While on a cruise in the Caribbean two years ago, Bernice Magedman decided to throw a bottle overboard every night.

She threw a total of 11 bottles, each containing a note advising the finder that if he sent a reply, a $5 reward would follow.

Mrs. Magedman received a letter from the tiny island of Siquijor in the Philippines recently.

"It was a very exciting incident that while I was on shore picking seashells I found a buried bottle," wrote Jose Quilicot. He concluded his letter by saying, "Regards and hoping religiously your reward will alleviate my very poor miserable conditions."

Mrs. Magedman sent him $25, plus a camera and some film, so she and her husband can get to know him better.

Woman oil executive addresses press

SAN ANTONIO-When Dr. Jayne Baker Spain addressed the "energy breakfast" at the 1978 convention of National Federation of Press Women held here, her message to the press women was that "women in communications are very important people in the world. Women are going to have to be involved in bringing about a change for the better. As a group of communicators, each of us has a very legitimate interest in what is evolving these days in the areas of public information and public policy information."

The breakfast was sponsored by The First National Bank of Midland.

"In a recent Supreme Court decision," said Mrs. Spain, "Chief Justice Burger established that the First Amendment does not belong to any definable category of persons, but to all who express its freedoms. In his concurring opinion, Justice Powell wrote that the press has a 'special and constitutionally recognized roll in informing and educating the public, offering criticism and providing a forum for discussion and debate; but, the press does not have a monopoly on either the First Amendment or the ability to enlighten.' An increasing number of the major forces affecting corporate business are social and political...therefore, it is essential that business become an assertive claimant in what has been coined 'the marketplace of ideas'. The press, too, is having its problems with public confidence. Faced with the challenge of pressure by public interest groups and the trend toward 'advocacy journalism,' the press must not lose sight of the need for objective reporting.

"Business persons don't always recognize that the media are business, too, with a product to sell, and a bottom line not unlike their own. Packaging the news is in many ways like packaging a product; it is important to establish that trust in a positive one-on-one relationship with the packager wherever possible," she continued.

"Unfortunately for our industry, it appears that alongside unparalleled public interest, public misconceptions and mythology about the petroleum business—what we do and how we do it and how much money we make while we're doing it—is at an all-time high.

"I must say that much of the blame for this public perception can be placed on the industry itself. The oil industry is an excellent example of an institution that has always done a technical job, but at the same time failed to communicate effectively with the consuming public, or even those who influence the consuming public...the press," she said. "Oil companies traditionally concentrated their communication efforts on employees, investors and federal legislators from the oil-producing states. They felt no apparent need to communicate with the public...other than to compete for gasoline sales. When the industry started communicating, too often defensively...we were not believed," explained Mrs. Spain.

"The phenomenal growth of information and technology of information access, while making everyone an expert on everything, also makes genuine competence in all subjects impossible. So journalists are increasingly specializing in specific areas, ...energy takes its proper place among national priorities and I believe that women can and will take the initiative in sorting fact from fallacy, reason from rhetoric, in deciding energy issues," concluded the speaker.

Dr. Spain, who was introduced by Estelleen Nelson of Midland, a member of the convention's development committee and news and oil editor of The Midlander Magazine, was, in January 1976, elected senior vice president of public affairs for Gulf Oil Corp., where her talents are directed toward acquainting the public with the many facets of the petroleum industry.

She is listed in "Who's Who in the United States," "Who's Who of American Women," "The World Who's Who in Community Service," "Encyclopedia of the American Woman" and "Community Leaders and Noteworthy Americans."

Mrs. Nelson, in her introduction, said "Petroleum energy is one of the great benefactors to mankind; yet, it can weaken and destroy through indescriminate use. It can oil your wheels, fly you to the "blue yonder," clothe you, warm you and cool you--or blow you to kingdom come. It cannot be regenerated, planted from seed, born or cloned. Its drops of oil are numbered as the drops of water and the grains of sand, and, it is found among the earth's rocks of ages.

"Our speaker this morning, has proven that one of the prime requisites for success in any number of professional areas, is the degree in which communications between persons are established. She has developed the art of communicating in the upper echelons of the business world to the point of becoming one of the top achievers among women in business," Mrs. Nelson said.

She continued by saying that Mrs. Spain "also has received national and international recognition for her efforts toward proving that the blind are capable of functioning to a satisfactory degree in the industrial world. In so doing, she has been instrumental in opening new employment vistas for the handicapped.

Sponsor representative at the program was Mike Bradford, assistant vice president, business and development, The First National Bank, Midland.

The meeting of the National Federation of Press Women was hosted by the Texas Press Women. District 2 of TPW was represented by members from Midland, Crane, Monahans and Big Spring.

'Woman calling shots in hockey

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP)-Candice Kotcher, 23, has been calling the shots on the ice for two years now in youth hockey games. An ice hockey referee, she recently "graduated" to an adult men's game at the Saginaw Civic Center.

Harvey Packard, referee-in-chief of the Saginaw Valley Hockey Officials Association, believes she is the only female referee working adult games in the state.

"There are a couple other women refereeing in the Detroit area," Packard said, "but they don't officiate men's games."

Miss Kotcher has been skating since age 3 and owns numerous speed skating trophies.

Muralists paint visible dreams

LOS ANGELES (AP)-Mexican-American muralists are painting visible dreams of the future for Los Angeles school children.

Artists from the Chicana Service Action Center, Inc., are working on murals at two elementary schools, showing women as doctors, teachers and astronauts.

Celia Luna, coordinator for the project, said the muralists' goal is to portray the contemporary Chicana in a positive role in society.

Sofia MacIsaac, a teacher at one of the schools, said, "The students have it so ingrained that women can't do certain kinds of jobs, the murals really make them think."

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market lapsed into a slow decline today against a background of adverse news on inflation and interest rates.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 3.29 at 818.35.

Losers held a 6-5 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Trading was slow on the eve of what for many Americans will be a four-day Independence Day weekend. The markets will be open on Monday, with only light trading activity expected, and will be closed Tuesday.

The government reported this morning that the consumer price index climbed at a 10.8 percent annual rate in May, setting a two-digit pace for the second straight month.

And several of the country's largest banks raised their prime lending rates from 8¾ to 9 percent.

The basic charge banks impose on blue-chip loans has been in a steady uptrend lately with borrowing demand reported strong and the Federal Reserve acting to tighten credit.

Inland Container climbed 1⅞ to 32⅛ in active trading. The company and Time Inc. approved a definitive merger agreement.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost .13 to 53.56. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .49 at 145.20.

Volume on the Big Board totaled only 6.83 million shares by noontime, down from 9.90 million at the same point Thursday.

High prices climb higher

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation continued at a rapid pace in May as the cost of food, housing and transportation drove consumer prices up 0.9 percent, the Labor Department said today.

The increase matched the 0.9 percent rise in April, which had been the largest jump in more than a year. In the past three months, consumer prices have gone up at a rate that would average 11.3 percent if spread out over the entire year.

Food and beverages rose 1.5 percent in May, after climbing 1.8 percent in April and about 1.2 percent in each the three previous months.

In a companion report, the Labor Department said the average worker's purchasing power declined 1.3 percent in May, the first drop since January. Employees increased their hourly earnings by 0.4 percent, but that was less than half of the 0.9 percent increase in prices.

More than one-third of the May food increase was attributed to a 6.3 percent rise in the price of fresh fruits and a 7.5 percent jump in the cost of fresh vegetables. Beef prices, which have moved up steadily since last August, increased 2.5 percent, well below the 6.6 percent gain in April.

Consumers spent 1 percent more in May on housing costs, about the same increase as in the previous two months. Charges for electricity rose 1.9 percent and natural-gas costs were up 1.5 percent.

The combined costs of homeowner taxes, financing and insurance rose 1.8 percent, slightly more than in previous months. The average tenant paid 0.7 percent more in rent.

Transportation costs climbed 0.7 percent after going up only 0.2 percent in each of the two previous months.

The Labor Department said the price of new automobiles went up 1.2 percent, the biggest rise this year. Many dealers increased their prices as the decline of the dollar made imported vehicles more expensive.

The cost of clothing rose 0.6 percent, a smaller increase than the 1 percent gains in March and April.

Medical care costs went up 0.6 percent in May, comparable to increases in other months. Entertainment costs rose 0.2 percent, an improvement over the 0.6 percent rise in April.

The back-to-back 0.9 percent increases were the largest since a 1 percent increase in February 1977 during severe winter weather. The inflation rate improved quickly later in 1977 but has continued at a high level into the summer this year.

In the past three months, food prices have gone up at an annual rate of 19.8 percent, while housing costs have climbed by 12 percent and transportation expenses have climbed by 4 percent.

Despite the big increases in the first five months, consumer prices are still only about 7 percent higher than they were in May 1977, the department said.

The Carter administration predicts that the Consumer Price Index for June will show improvement and that inflation for the year will be between 6.5 percent and 7 percent.

The index for May was 193.3, meaning that it cost $193.30 to buy the same consumer products and services that $100 bought in the base year of 1967.

On Thursday, the Agriculture Department released new figures showing that retail food prices will rise at least 8 percent to 10 percent this year.

The department said a typical three-person, wage-earning urban family that spent $53.21 a week on food last year will spend $58.46 a week this year.

A similarly bleak forecast was made Thursday by economists at the Brookings Institution, a non-profit research organization.

"The outlook is very bleak. We have a serious risk of recession," said Arthur Okun, a Brookings economist.

Okun blamed Federal Reserve Board Chairman G. William Miller and his agency for risking a recession by making credit scarce in an attempt to fight inflation.

The consequences could show up in a recession late this year or early next year, he said.

"I would say it was 55 percent on the recession side at this point. That is assuming no change in policies by the Federal Reserve and the administration," Okun said.

While sticking with its predictions of an 8 percent to 10 percent jump in food costs this year, the Agriculture Department said much of the increase has already occurred.

"This fall, prices are not expected to show much change from the summer" because of lower farm prices, it said.

The report showed that prices in the first half of 1978 averaged about 12 percent higher than those of the same period a year earlier.

Even though food prices may improve in the fall, Miller said, little relief is in sight from other price increases.

At a joint congressional committee hearing Thursday, Miller predicted prices of all products will go up an average of more than 7 percent this year — higher than the administration's predicted increase of 6.5 percent to 7 percent.

"Unless inflation is brought under control, business and consumer confidence will be undermined, distortions and imbalances in the economy will develop, and ultimately recession will be the result," he said.

In his testimony, Miller said he favors postponing for two years the coming increase in the minimum wage from the current $2.65 an hour to $2.90. That increase is to become effective Jan. 1.

Poerner suggests tax hike

DEL RIO, Texas (AP) — Texas should consider raising its severance tax on oil and gas to keep up with other producing states, Texas Railroad Commissioner John Poerner said Thursday.

"We have failed to review our system of taxation in the broad sense and usually try to play catch-up after the natural resources have been produced or mined and production is on the decline," he told the South Texas County Judges and Commissioners conference.

"It has been estimated by using data filed with the comptroller that this state gives away millions of dollars every year to states in the East because our level of taxation is far below that of our sister states with hydrocarbon production," Poerner said.

If Texas raises its severance tax to that of Louisiana, tax revenue would increase by $900 million, he said.

Lightning fires tanks

Four firemen suffered minorinjuries.

About 100 persons who were evacuated from their homes Thursday night in a four-block area of this south Alabama bayou village returned today after the fire was brought under control.

Witnesses said some of the fireballs shot about 150 feet into the air.

Dawsey Boone, dispatcher for the Bayou La Batre Fire Department, said that considering the size of the fireballs it was a miracle no one was seriously injured by them. "It could have been really bad. It was quite an explosion."

There was no immediate estimate of damage at the Standard Oil dock, a "jobber" operation run by Wade E. Bosarge. But at least five 5,000-gallon tanks were left in ruins, a hardware store and a shrimp trawler were destroyed and other boats and property in the area were damaged.

Police Sgt. Curtis Orensch said he was near the scene when "I saw a streak of lightning scrape one of the tanks and it burst into flames."

The explosion was the second in Bayou La Batre within three days. On Tuesday, an explosion ripped through a shrimp boat under construction, rocking the bayou area and killing a worker.

No-hitters like NBA and No-Doz

By NORM CLARKE
AP Sports Writer

Y-A-W-N.

This rarity of sport is regarded as baseball's ultimate event. Try ultimate bore.

No-hitters, like National Basketball Association television games, are to be treated in similar fashion. Tune in for the last three minutes and you haven't missed a thing.

Imagine if the same concept applied to bullfighting or boxing:

PAMPLONA, Spain (AP) — Luis de Loco, without mussing his ducktail, disposed of three bulls today using only his red cape. A sitting-room-only crowd of seven left early to avoid rush-hour traffic. One bull died from boredom, stadium officials said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Alonzo "Pug" Noze, dedicating his victory to Arthur Murray, captured the over-50-and-overweight division of the Boxers United for Mythical Stiffs (BUMS). There were no hits and no errors, just 10 rounds of running.

On second thought, television boxing has had more no-hitters lately than baseball.

Purists, of course, will point to the classic pitchers like Nolan Ryan and Tom Seaver and speak of their no-hitters in terms of art form or cerebral confrontations.

If one must be subjected to the dreadful monotony, you take the Ryans and Seavers. we'll take the Bo Belinskys and Bobo Holomans, who proved that even the mediocre have their moments.

Belinsky, an eccentric sort who became better known for his extra-curricular activities, became only the second rookie to throw a no-hitter when he stopped Baltimore in 1962.

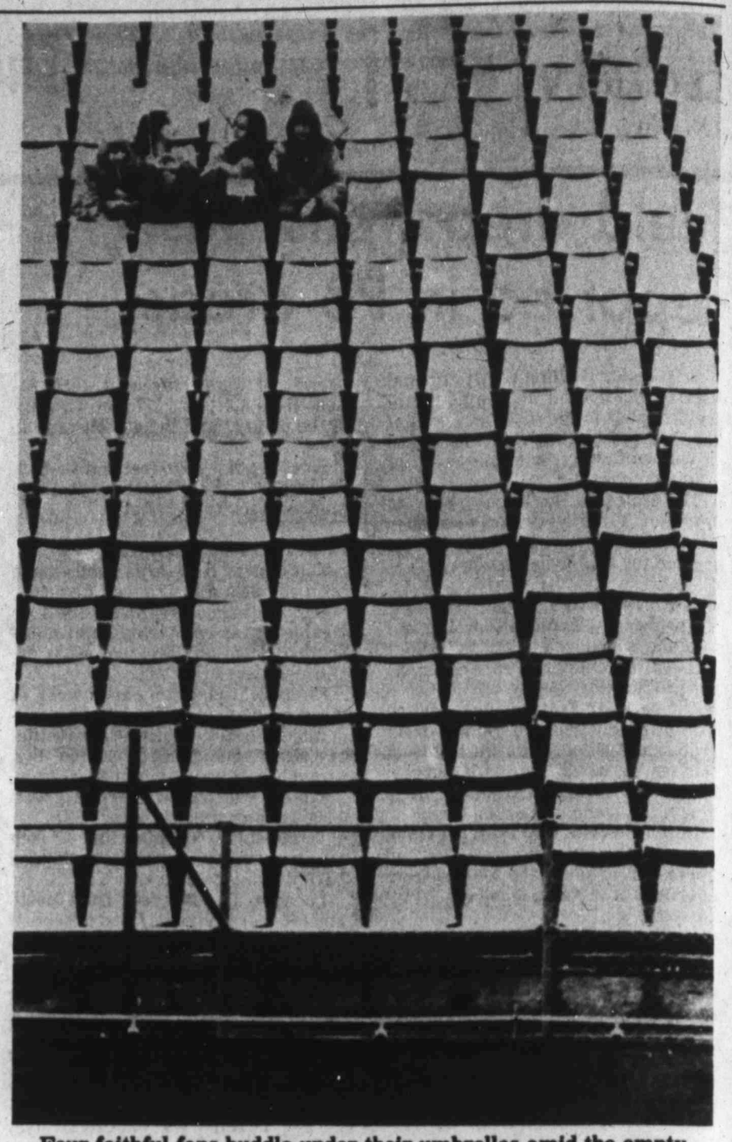

After winning the first four games of his career for the Los Angeles Angels, he lost 51 of his 75 career decisions. Never mind that he also beat up a 64-year-old sports writer and a young actress.

The career of Bobo Holloman, the only modern-day pitcher to toss a no-hitter in his big league debut, was sweet but short. The St. Louis hurler lasted one season after no-hitting Philadelphia in 1953. His major league totals: three victories, seven defeats and a 5.23 earned run average.

Don Larson of the New York Yankees will not be remembered as a great pitcher. But he was perfect for nine innings one October afternoon in 1956. Larson, who was 3-21 for Baltimore two seasons earlier, tossed the only perfect game in World Series history, beating Brooklyn.

It's been difficult to get too excited about single no-hitters

Four faithful fans huddle under their umbrellas amid the empty seats at Wimbledon's Center Court Thursday as heavy rain postponed play in the world's premier tennis tourney. The four were awaiting the start of the men's singles match between Guillermo Vilas and Tom Okker, which will be played another day. (AP Laserphoto).

Okker upsets Guillermo Vilas

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Dutchman Tom Okker pulled a surprisingly easy upset over fourth seed Guillermo Vilas today, and defending champion Bjorn Borg won his long-delayed second-round match over Australian Peter McNamara in the Wimbledon tennis championships.

Okker, who hasn't been seeded here in two years, served and volleyed strongly to beat the Argentine 6-3, 6-4, 6-2.

Resuming play after a rain washout Thursday, Borg, who is seeking his third Wimbledon crown in row, beat McNamara 6-2, 6-2, 6-4.

Okker, 34, sped about the court, seeming to explode at 3-3 in the first set, winning the next five games.

Vilas, 25, finally broke back to level 2-2 in the second set by luring Okker forward into volleying errors.

BUT THE Dutchman broke back for 5-4 after Vilas double-faulted twice. He took the set when Vilas, hopelessly out of place, failed to return a high, looping forehand.

By the third set, a drizzling rain had started, and in the seventh game, leading 4-2, Okker dazzled his young opponent with a forehand passing shot and then a glorious backhand down the line. Vilas seemed dispirited, double-faulted on the next point and offered little resistance thereafter.

Vilas appeared to be near tears later.

"I don't know what happened," he said, wiping his eyes. "I was slow. I had trouble with everything.

"I practiced a lot. I thought I was playing well. I thought I had a chance to win."

Although he had considered not playing here this year because the World Cup soccer tournament was going on his own country until last Sunday, Vilas said Wimbledon is one of his greatest goals.

"I want to win this," he said. "I come back next year — maybe four weeks early."

It was the second year in a row that Vilas has fallen in the third round here. The Argentine had a spectacular season last year, amassing a record 51 consecutive match victories, including the French and U.S. open titles.

But after a break of several months from tour tennis early this year, Vilas has had difficulty finding his old form. He played almost listlessly and lost his French Open title to Borg last month in the final.

BORG, MEANWHILE, continued little-tested in his quest to emulate Fred Perry, the last man to win three consecutive singles crowns here. Perry did it in 1934-36.

Borg was first scheduled to play Wednesday night but play was suspended by darkness before he could get on court. Rain kept him from playing Thursday.

Play resumed on time at the All-England Club this morning after Thursday's matches were abandoned because of rain that didn't let up all day.

Chamber honors Hall's victory

One way for Midland to be recognized is through the outstanding achievements of it's citizens, said Chamber of Commerce President Harrell Feldt.

The man he was referring to is Jim Hall, who gave Midland a boost when his car won the Indy 500 several weeks ago. As one board member said, "it is a great satisfaction for the whole town."

Hall was given a plaque from the chamber in honor of his achievement and to show the city's appreciation of his victory.

HALL SAID it is nice to be recognized and that something like this does give the city publicity. He laughed and said others at the race were "surprised the country boys" did it. But his manner showed that he was joking.

Looking at him as he stood there tall and sure of himself it would be hard to believe that anyone was surprised.

Hall told the chamber that his racing team has had some real lows and some real highs this year.

"WE'VE WON two major races," he said, referring to the Indy 500 in May and Pocono 500 last weekend. But he explained that the driver, Al Unser, couldn't have done it without the crew.

"The team deserves an awful lot of credit," said Hall.

All six mambers of Hall's Chaparral team are residents of Midland. They are chief mechanic, Hughie Absalom, and crew members Troy Rogers, Ben Hall, Franz Weis, Dennis Swan and Gene Grimm.

The Midland racer has competed in six of the scheduled 18 races.

Lisi's home leads Drillers

By The Associated Press

Rick Lisi's two-run homer in the fourth inning provided all the offensive punch the Tulsa Drillers needed Thursday night for a 5-2 Texas League baseball victory over the Shreveport Captains.

In other Texas League action, El Paso swept a doubleheader from San Antonio by scores of 5-2 and 12-0, and Arkansas edged Jackson, 5-4. Midland's game against the Gold Sox at Amarillo was postponed because of rain.

Mike Griffin was the winning pitcher for the Drillers, allowing only two runs in the seventh inning while going the distance for Tulsa.

Steve Whitehead's home run was the deciding factor in the Diablos' 5-2 victory in the opening game of the doubleheader with the Dodgers.

Midland will play a doubleheader at Amarillo tonight to make up for the rain postponement of Thursday night's contest.

Borg good bet for No. 3, but Connors is ready

BY TED BATTLES

Can Bjorn Borg become the first player since Fred Perry turned the trick back in 1936 to run off a string of three straight Men's Singles titles at Wimbledon?

"I believe he can, but he'll have to beat a Jimmy Connors who is better prepared for this Wimbledon than ever before," qualifies Ron Houdek, who comes as close as a resident tennis pundit as anyone in Midland, and perhaps West Texas.

Ron has, in effect, grown up with tennis on the mesquite-studded, wind-swept plains of the Permian Basin, arriving in the years when it was shrugged off as minor sport, riding herd on young players through the formative years and sticking around for the boom years of the late 1960s and the current decade.

"Connors has been working out on grass courts to prepare for Wimbledon and I think it showed in the first round matches when he won easily while Borg, who has been playing on clay courts, struggled to dispose of Ruben Amaya. That could be the difference," warns Ron.

Houdek ranks Borg, Connors and Guillermo Vilas as the three top players in the world "depending on the courts. Borg probably has a slight edge overall. On clay, he has overpowered his nearest opponents."

EVIDENCE THAT tennis is no longer just another sport in Midland is that Ranchland Hills Country Club, long a steadfast citadel of golf only, is joining the mania and has named Houdek and his wife Marlene to operate the soon-to-be-completed complex.

"They expect completion sometime between Aug. 1 and Sept. 1 and it will really be a tremendous set up," enthuses Houdek. "The six-court complex will be located on the west side of the swimming pool and will overlook the city."

"The pro shop will be in the center and, like Midland Country Club's complex, will have a covered observation deck. The architect and RHCC golf committee did all of the planning and I couldn't have done a better job if I had planned it myself."

Houdek pointed out that the planners got a lot of good ideas from former Midland College tennis Coach Neill McClung, one of Ron's proteges, now working as a pro in Odessa.

"The court surfaces will be Chevron 300. It's Laykold, an asphalt mixed with sand, supplying uniformity and slowing the bounce of the ball, which is important in this altitude," Houdek said.

RAISED IN Kansas, Ron has been head coach for 11 years at San Angelo Central High and then six at Midland High, before he was pressured out of the position for reasons that still remain somewhat hazy to some. However, Ron retains no visible bitterness.

"I was reassigned from coaching to teaching," Ron informs, "and that's what I've been doing since."

One of the beauties of his new assignment at RHCC is that it won't interfere with his teaching. "I will continue to work at Alamo and Austin, trying to help improve the Midland Independent School District program at the junior high level. Since I have been coaching adults after school and on weekends for the last three years, I'll be continuing to do that, only at RHCC."

Ron's wife, Marlene, will handle the women's lessons and tennis program in the morning.

"Barry Welton, who as a member of the RHCC tennis committee, was taking lessons from me and we had lunch one day with Win Farquhar (former Racquet Club pro) to discuss RHCC plans. Barry mentioned that they needed a pro and Win suggested 'I was his man'"

Ron relates, "I said fine, if they can use my wife, too. With the two of us working morning and evening, we will be able to handle more this way and do it more efficiently."

HOUDEK'S TRAIL to Texas was blazed by current University of Texas tennis coach David Snyder. Ron went to Southwestern College in Winfield, Kan., a small church school and followed David to Texas when Snyder took the San Angelo Central coaching job.

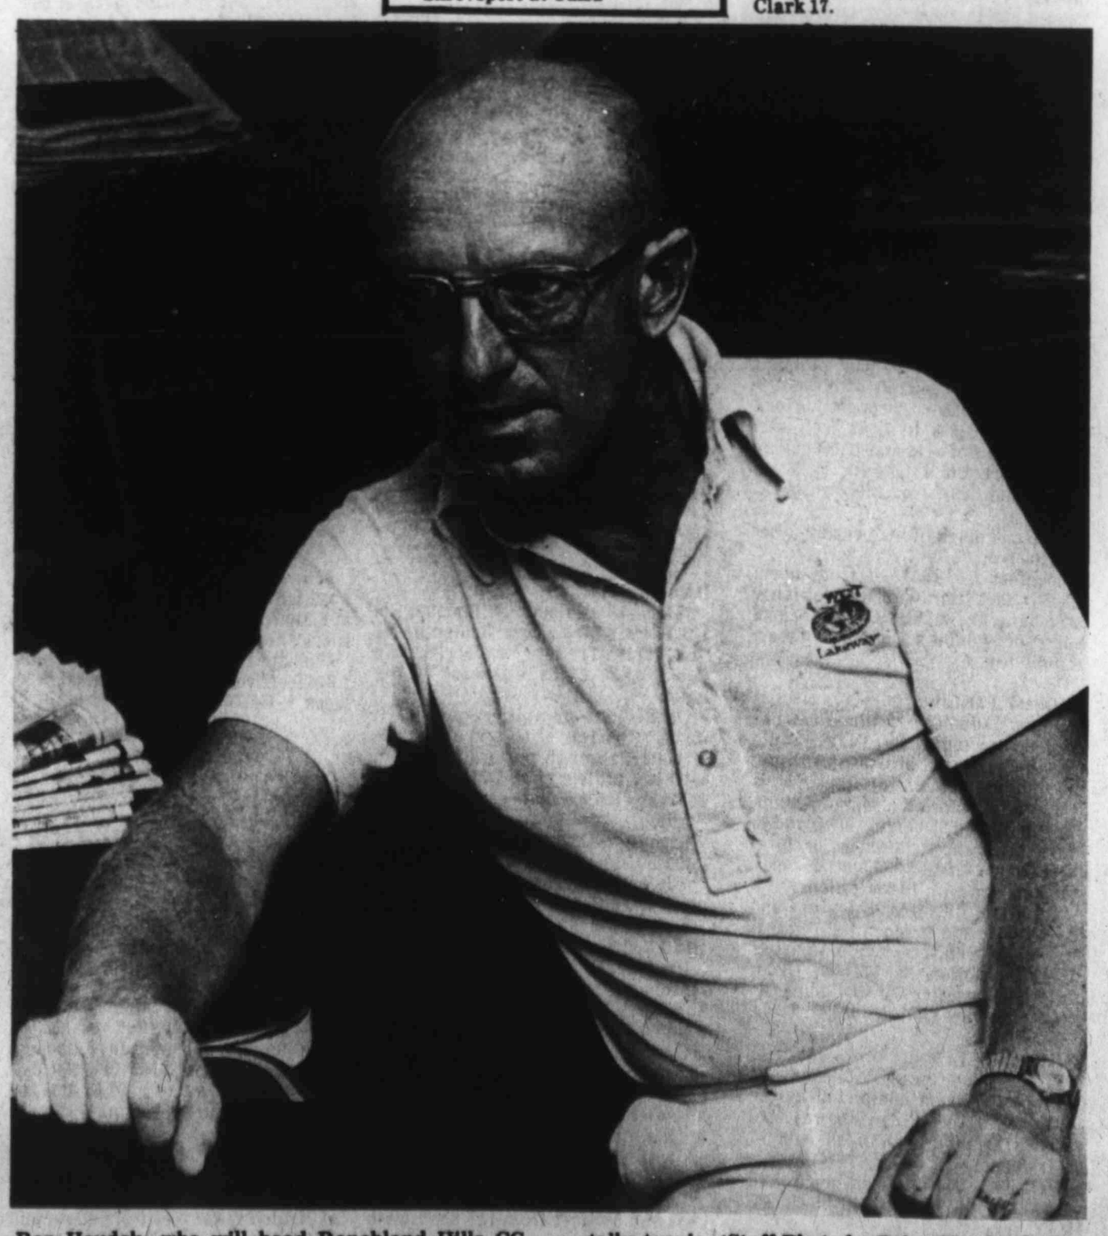

"I had dated his sister and knew him all my life. When he offered me a job as junior high coach fresh out of college, it was a case of following my idol. Only it didn't turn out that way. Snyder was offered the University of Arizona job, which he kept for 15 years, before he ever got a chance to coach at Central, so at 21 I wound up as head coach."

In those days, hiring an unknown out of college wasn't that big a deal. That was the state of tennis in West Texas in the mid-1950s.

For Houdek, it was a strange new land, but now that he's a Texan, Ron wouldn't consider leaving. "This is where the tennis action is," he insists. "You don't have the water sports and big league competition in West Texas that you have,say in Fort Worth-Dallas."

Houdek feels the biggest break he got as a neophyte coach came when

Unruly mobs roam baseball

By JIM MURRAY
The Los Angeles Times Syndicate

The wire story had a familiar theme: the officials at an athletic contest, alarmed by the unruly actions of a large crowd — bomb-throwing, bottle-throwing, drunkenness — pulled both teams off the field and threatened forfeit of the game, fearful for the safety of the visiting team unless conditions changed.

South America? A soccer game? No. That most North American of all cities, San Francisco, and that most North American of all games, baseball.

In a parking lot, fans attack a star right fielder of a championship team. They smash his windshield, break a beer bottle over his head, and a miniriot ensues.

A ghetto-engulfed ballpark in a high-crime area? No. Dodger Stadium, as isolated as a castle in Scotland, the most easily-policed athletic edifice in the world because of its location. And in a city where passions do not normally run high, where patrons frequently leave by the seventh inning of a 2-1 game so as to beat the traffic.

What has happened? Baseball used to be a bourgeois sport, popularized by the middle class, the intellectuals, the quiet, the sober. Now, it's getting like a rock concert.

The game hasn't changed. It's still a stately procession of 27 outs per side, each accomplished at the unhurried pace of a German opera. It doesn't incite the passions of a football game or a prize fight. Adrenalin flow doesn't help you hit or throw the curveball better.

It's a game that really encourages a kind of reverse cheering. Instead of "Take 'em in, John!" or "All the way, O.J.!" baseball inspires more the "Swing, ya dummy! Don't just stand there!" or the "Hey, Don, show 'em yer gopher ball, it's the best in the big leagues!"

So, why has baseball become two weeks in Indian country, a walk through Central Park at midnight? Why does Reggie Jackson have to run for his life after the final out of the World Series, or Chris Chambliss have to straight-arm somebody to complete his home run trot when he wins a playoff? Why do the umpires have to empty the field at Candlestick? Why does Reggie Smith need a bodyguard to go to his car in the parking lot? Only a year ago, hoodlums attacked the car of the broadcaster, Vin Scully, in a similarly senseless outburst of violence. Does the game need a moat? Barbed wire?

Psychologists say the sports fan has always gone to the ballpark to take out his aggressions in a socially-accepted way. If he fights with his wife, the neighbors call the cops. If he yells at his boss, he's fired. If he yells at Reggie Smith, however, everybody laughs.

But if he breaks Reggie Smith's windshield, what's funny? If he throws a cherry bomb at George Foster, who's laughing? "Kill the umpire!" has always been a tongue-in-cheek part of baseball's vocabulary — but "maim the right fielder?!"

Midlander nabs berth

The other four to earn berths were Scott Barrett, Pampa, 73; John Slaughter, Abilene, 74; Chris Johnson, Seminole, 77; and Mike Stanley, Abilene, 78.

The qualifying was on the Big Spring Country Club course, and was part of the West Texas Junior Golf Tour. Age group winners in the WTJGT were Cole Thompson, Abilene, 13-12 division; Louis Wilkes, Sweetwater, 14-15; and Scott Barrett, Pampa, 16-18. Lamesa's Sam Hansard placed second in the 14-15 age competition.

"I feel like I'm going to reach my peak in about two years," said the attractive 26-year-old who has won three times since joining the U.S. tour in 1974. "I'd like to work at my game until then. After that, well, I'm really sick of traveling.

"I'd like to be able to pick my tournaments like Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson, although I'm not comparing myself to them. I'd go only to the tournaments where I like the money, like the course or like the people," said Stephenson Thursday.

"I'd like to not have to feel like I have to play every week. The girls tend to do that. I feel like it hurts their performance. If I want to play at a tournament by choice, I feel I'd play better than if I was just in it because I have nothing better to do," she said.

STEPHENSON is one of 10 women to win one LPGA tournament this year. The other seven tournaments have been won by 21-year-old rookie sensation Nancy Lopez, whose record streak of five consecutive victories ended last week in Hershey, Pa.

"Nancy has done a lot for all of women's golf," said Stephenson. "Her success has made things easier for someone like myself. I think she's just learning about the pressure that can come from the media with interviews. Her success has allowed myself and others to concentrate more on our game.

Lollar picked as SWC MVP

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Tim Lollar, who hit. 423 and compiled a 7-1 pitching record for the University of Arkansas, has been selected player of the year and named as the designated hitter on the All-Southwest Conference baseball team.

Lollar was one of three Arkansas players named to the squad.

By The Associated Press

While the Boston Red Sox are making a shambles of the American League East pennant race, the Western Division is getting tighter each night.

The Red Sox extended their AL East lead over idle Milwaukee to nine games with a come-from-behind 4-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Thursday. It was Baltimore's eighth loss in a row, dropping them 12½ games behind the rampaging Bostonians, who have won 16 of their last 19 games.

IN THE West, six teams are closer to the top than the second-place Brewers are in the East, with Texas holding a one-game lead over Kansas City and California. The Rangers remained in first place despite an 8-7, 10-inning defeat at Oakland, while the Angels stopped the Royals 3-1 to move within .001 of second-place Kansas City.

Fifth-place Chicago blew a chance to move closer in the Wild West when Bob Stinson's grand slam homer in the eighth inning boosted Seattle past the White Sox 9-7. Idle Minnesota, although 11 games below .500 at 30-41, is just eight games back.

Red Sox 4, Orioles 3

Dennis Martinez breezed into the ninth inning with a three-hitter and a 3-1 lead before Fred Lynn singled, George Scott tied the game with a two-run homer down the right field line and Dwight Evans followed with a game-winning homer.

"I was mad at him," Evans said of Martinez. "He woke me up. He called me a name as I ran to first base in the fifth inning."

Evans referred to when he grounded back to the mound and, according to the Boston outfielder, Martinez mocked him by holding out the ball before throwing to first.

Last season, Scott was involved in an argument with Martinez when the Baltimore hurler hit Scott with a pitch. Scott chased Martinez towards second base but fell in pursuit and was grabbed.

"I WENT after him but that was last year," said Scott. "It's over. He's a good kid."

"You don't know what this team is going to do next," said Boston Manager Don Zimmer. "This is a different club from last year. With 10 new faces after we won 97 games, it's a better club with better pitching."

One of those better pitchers, at least Thursday night, was Allen Ripley, who stopped Baltimore on two hits over 5 2-3 innings and struck out five.

"Nothing like that could have happened last year," said Zimmer. "I couldn't have taken (Boston starter Bill) Lee out that early because we were operating with a one-man bullpen — Bill Campbell."

Angels 3, Royals 1

Ron Fairly singled off first baseman Pete LaCock's glove for two runs to lead the Angels past Kansas City.

"Whichever team gets healthy first will win the division," said California Manager Jim Fregosi. "If we win all the rest of our games, we'll win it."

"It might get down to whichever team gets hot in the last two weeks winning it," said Fairly. "I can't see anybody running away with it. If somebody gets five games ahead, they will lose four or five in a row and come back to the pack."

Royals Manager Whitey Herzog, whose team was favored to lead the pack, knows why Kansas City isn't on top.

"We have to start making the plays," he said. "We are 13th in the league in defense. We just haven't done the job.

Mariners 9, White Sox 7

Stinson's grand slam offset Chicago homers by Jorge Orta, Bill Nahorodny and Lamar Johnson. Bill Stein also homered for Seattle.

Indians 6, Tigers 3

Gary Alexander hit his third three-run homer of the week against Detroit. Alexander has hit five homers and has 17 RBI since joining the Indians June 15.

A's bounce back into AL pennant chase

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland A's are right back in the American League West pennant race, thanks to timely hitting by Mitchell Page.

Page gave the A's an 8-7 victory over the Texas Rangers in 10 innings Thursday afternoon to move Oakland to within three games of the lead in the West. Page hit a sacrifice fly that scored pinch-runner Del Alston with the winning run.

"We've got a lot of young players who will benefit from the experience," Manager Jack McKeon of the A's said. "The way the race is going in the West, we have as good a chance as anyone if we get the hits when we need them."

THE VICTORY was the second straight for the A's in extra innings. Wednesday night they beat the Rangers 2-1 in 15 innings and then Thursday came back from a 6-3 deficit after three innings to win.

"I was looking for a pitch I could hit far enough to get the run home," Page said. He came to bat in the 10th inning with the bases loaded and one out.

Jeff Newman opened the 10th inning with a triple off losing pitcher Paul Lindblad, 1-1. Manager Billy Hunter of the Rangers ordered the next two batters to be walked intentionally to set up a force play at any base.

The strategy worked as Tito Fuentes forced pinch-runner Miguel Dilone at the plate for the first out. But Page then ended the game with a line drive to right field that scored Alston. "We gave them too many chances to come back," Hunter said. "When you get a lead like we had, you have to wrap up the game."

FERGUSON JENKINS, the Rangers' best pitcher, took a 6-3 lead into the fourth inning, but an error by right-fielder Bobby Bonds opened the gates for four unearned Oakland runs.

Former Midland Cubs outfielder Joe Wallis was the big hitter in the inning with a double to drive in one run, and then he scored on a single by Page.

Wallis, who came to the A's in a trade with Cleveland earlier this month, had a home run, double and two singles and also scored twice and drove in two runs.

The Rangers tied the score in the eighth inning at 7-7 on a double by Bobby Thompson, a single by pinch-hitter John Ellis and a single by Bert Campaneris.

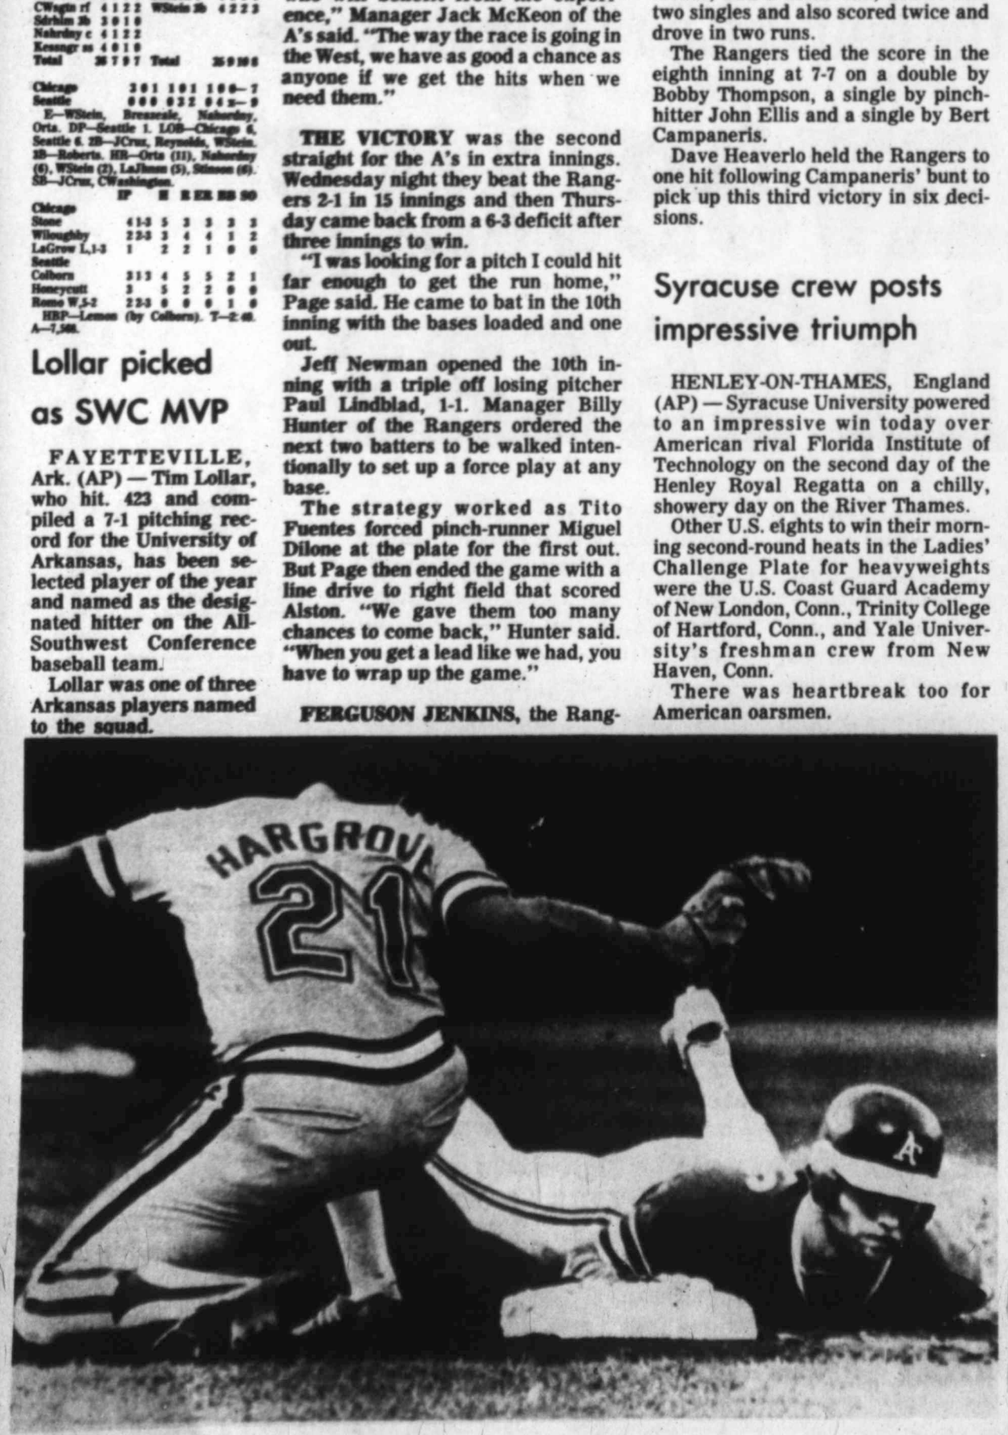

Dave Heaverlo held the Rangers to one hit following Campaneris' bunt to pick up this third victory in six decisions.

Syracuse crew posts impressive triumph

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England (AP) — Syracuse University powered to an impressive win today over American rival Florida Institute of Technology on the second day of the Henley Royal Regatta on a chilly, showery day on the River Thames.

Other U.S. eights to win their morning second-round heats in the Ladies' Challenge Plate for heavyweights were the U.S. Coast Guard Academy of New London, Conn., Trinity College of Hartford, Conn., and Yale University's freshman crew from New Haven, Conn.

There was heartbreak too for American oarsmen.

Bannister hurls Astros past Cincy, 5-0

HOUSTON (AP) — After toiling in the bullpen during the first few weeks of the season and missing several starts because of rainouts and nagging injuries, Floyd Bannister says shutting out Cincinnati is like a shot in the arm.

"It's a real big boost for me," said Bannister, after firing a four-hitter in Houston's 5-0 triumph over the Reds Thursday night.

"I felt as strong in the ninth inning as I did in the first. I had some great plays behind me and I tried to stay with my game." Jose Cruz drove in a pair of runs with two singles and pinch-hitter Jesus Alou added a two-run eighth inning base hit as the Astros recorded the first back to back shutouts over Cincinnati since Philadelphia accomplished the feat on May 13-14, 1975.

BANNISTER, 3-3, survived a shaky first inning as he surrendered back to back doubles to Pete Rose and Ken Griffey to open the game. Rose stopped at third on Griffey's hit, which skimmed off the top of the glove of Houston shortstop Mike Fischlin into shallow left field. Bannister then came back to retire Joe Morgan on a foul pop before striking out both George Foster and Dave Concepcion to end the inning.

Houston used singles by Dennis Walling and Enos Cabell and RBI base hits by Cruz and Bob Watson to score a pair of first-inning runs off losing pitcher Tom Hume.

A THIRD-INNING walk to Cabell, a balk by Hume and Cruz' second run-scoring single of the game led to another Houston run as the Astros tagged Hume with his eighth consecutive loss.

"I can't remember the last time we were shut out twice in one week, let alone back to back, " said Joe Morgan.

Sutton closes in on marks

By The Associated Press

Don Sutton certainly doesn't have modest goals.

Starting the season, Sutton already had more victories (190) and more shutouts (47) than any Dodger pitcher in Los Angeles history. And Thursday night, he set a Los Angeles career strikeout record while pitching the Dodgers to a 7-3 triumph over the Atlanta Braves.

"Until last Saturday," said Sutton, "the strikeout record was just another step to where I wanted to go — that is, break all the Dodger records. But last Saturday against the Reds, when I tied the record, the fans in Los Angeles gave me a standing ovation.

"Then it became very important for me to get the record."

He got it in the first inning Thursday night when he struck out Gary Matthews for his 2,284th career strikeout, surpassing Don Drysdale's previous record for the Dodgers since they moved to Los Angeles in 1958. Sutton finished with four more strikeouts to put his career mark at 2,288.

THE VICTORY, incidentally, was the 198th of his career, just two from another milestone and a stone's throw from Drysdale's all-time Dodger record of 209 victories, which were fashioned in Brooklyn and Los Angeles.

"It's exciting to think about that," said Sutton. "There aren't that many of the old-timers still around that have been with me all the time, but we're going to have a nice get-together the night I get that one."

Sutton not only pitched well, but also supplied a two-run single to cap a five-run first inning when the Dodgers roughed up Atlanta starter Preston Hanna, 6-4, for five hits and two walks.

REGGIE SMITH, Ron Cey and Rick Monday each drove in a run before Sutton's bloop single over first scored the final two.

After struggling through the first inning and yielding a leadoff walk to Dave Lopes in the second, Hanna gave way to Buddy Jay Solomon. Lopes promptly stole second for his 18th straight steal and later scored on a single by Cey.

The Braves got their first run in the third on Jeff Burroughs' RBI single. Dale Murphy drove in the Braves' last two runs, one with a grounder in the seventh and another with a ninth-inning homer.

Phillies 9, Cubs 3

Jose Cardenal's three-run double in the first inning, Bob Boone's two-run double in the eighth and Greg Luzinski's three-run homer in the ninth led Philadelphia over Chicago.

Jim Kaat pitched six innings to boost his record to 5-1 and gain the 258th victory of his career. Ron Reed pitched the seventh, then Tug McGraw finished up for the Phillies. Dave Roberts, 3-3, took the loss.

"That's the first time in my career I can honestly say I felt the heat," said Kaat in reference to the muggy, humid 80-degree day in Chicago. "I was sucking wind from the first inning — and I'm in shape."

Pirates 4, Mets 3

Pinch-hitter Rennie Stennett drove in the winning run with a bloop triple in the eighth inning to lead Pittsburgh over New York. With the score tied 3-3 going into the Pirate eighth, Phil Garner singled off loser Skip Lockwood, 7-6, and was sacrificed to second by Mario Mendoza.

Lauda rules qualifying

LE CASTELLET, France (AP) — World Formula I driving champion Niki Lauda of Austria dominated the first qualifying session today for Sunday's French Grand Prix in his "legal" Brabham.

The rain-shortened session saw Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa., escape uninjured from a crash at more than 150 mph on the slippery Paul Ricard circuit.

Bosox' Rice carries 'the Book'

By THOMAS BOSWELL
The Washington Post

Since the day Jim Rice arrived at Boston's Fenway Park, he has carried what he calls "the Book" with him everywhere.

For Cincinnati's George Foster that book would be the Bible, for New York's Reggie Jackson a little black book of phone numbers. However, for the Red Sox' Rice it is Ted Williams' autobiography, "My Turn At Bat."

Like Williams, Rice is one of those sternly self-motivated, easily insulted and moody artists who has come to live for his turn at bat and wishes to be judged by his batting work alone.

"What I do here is what matters," said the forbiddingly handsome Rice recently, standing by his batting cage office. "Hitting is the most important thing in my life right now."

Rice no longer has to go by "the Book." When Williams signed as Boston's spring training batting coach, Rice was a constant pupil. The Williams canon is stamped all over the New Improved Rice.

"I'm more dedicated now," says Rice. "I want to get better every year. I'm studying how the pitchers work on me. I struck out too much in the past (365 times in three years). Now I'm being more selective. I'm concentrating on making contact, not on hitting homers."

Those sentences could be Williams' chapter headings. And they seem to be producing the sort of across-the-board statistics that have not been seen in the American League since Williams' prime.

Rice, whose 382 total bases last season were the most in the AL since 1940, completed a month of May in which he had 13 homers, and 33 RBI giving him 18 HRs and 50 RBI.

In addition to a power pace that would bring him 57 homers for the year and 158 RBI (previous highs 39 and 114 in '77), Rice is hitting a Williams-like .340.

Surely this cannot continue. Or can it?

"I have no goals," says Rice. "The way I'm going right now, goals could only hold me back. Why put a limit in my own mind on what I can do?"

"Last year (when Rice had a 29-for-54 June binge), hitting was with me all day. It actually started when I woke up in the morning. It's almost like a trance, a total awareness."

What will happen if Rice rediscovers that groove?

These are the self-delighting days when Rice lives in a world of constantly expanding expectations . . . his own. Rice, perhaps even more than workaholic Pete Rose, can't get enough batting practice.

"He just loves to drive the ball," laughs Bosox coach Johnny Pesky. "If I had his body, I would, too."

"You can't get the monster out of the cage," says teammate Fred Lynn.

Under the Fenway stands or on the field, before or after games, day or night, off day or on, Rice is searching for the groove.

"Willie, I'm going for that .407," answered Rice.

It took Binette, former sports editor of the Anderson (S.C.) Mail, a minute to realize that Rice meant that he wanted to top Williams' career-high batting average of .406.

"If I get that .407," responded Rice jovially, "I might hit 70."

The Red Sox, who hit 213 homers last year, no longer are shocked by any Rice feat. They just keep their eyes peeled.

The Yankees park an ambulance at the back of their bullpen behind Death Valley in left center. Rice hit it. Fenway Park has a flag atop the deepest part of The Wall in the center. Rice grazed it.

The apocryphal tales about Rice's 450-yard golf drives strain credibility. However, witnesses abound who saw Rice check his swing in Detroit two years ago with such sudden force that the bat snapped in two, three inches above his hands.

Aside from the strength in his sculpted 6-foot-2, 205-pound, Rice has two hidden allies: intelligence and temper. Because Rice frequently gives a brusque cold shoulder to everyone except teammates and old friends, most fans do not understand that he has been a Williams-style student of the game since his minor league days.

Every opponent, however, especially pitchers, knows about Rice's much-feared short fuse. Rice once got in a shoving fight with his own teammate, Rick Burleson, after Burleson needled him about taking extra batting practice swings.

"I thought I was going to be 'Riceroni'," said Colburn.

However, Rice sometimes is surrounded by is own self-imposed wall of silence off the field. His relations with the Boston press have been frigid since his rookie year.

"Jim Ed was hurt that Fred Lynn got all the attention in 1975," explains Binette, whom Rice visits in the off-season and calls for chats when he is depressed.

When Rice would not say a word to the Boston writers, he would phone the Anderson Mail so the home-folks could keep track of him.

After one standing ovation last September, Rice stood stolidly in right field without tipping his cap. The next time an ovation came — for a three-homer game — Rice's cap came off three times.

"Corrine told him she wouldn't let him back in the house if he didn't tip his hat to those nice people," said Binette. "She teases him about being too shy to 'act right'."

Rice, one of only four black players in the Red Sox entire organization — major and minor league — does not feel entirely at home in Boston, still known for its racial epithets at Fenway.

"I get the feeling there aren't too many people in Boston to help him when he's confused," sympathizes Binette. "He'll call my wife and say, 'I need to talk to Willie'."

Just three months ago, Rice was telling friends he might play out his option this year and leave Boston, despite the fact that his batting stroke seems perfect for Fenway. In the last two years, Rice has 127 RBI at home, 72 on the road.

Now, however, Rice says he never wants to leave Boston, so long as the Red Sox offer him a suitable multi-year, multi-million dollar contract that will be "the last I ever have to sign."

Pac-8 becomes Pac-10 Saturday

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. (AP) — The Pacific-8 Conference officially becomes the Pacific-10 Conference Saturday with admission of Arizona and Arizona State.

As a result of reshuffling of football schedules, both Arizona and Arizona State will be immediately eligible for both the conference championship and the Rose Bowl game against the Big Ten representative.

The round-robin formula had to be abandoned, but each member will play at least seven games against conference opposition.

"There is no doubt the prestige of joining the Pac-10 has helped our recruiting," said Arizona football Coach Tony Mason. "The Arizona schools are now much more attractive to West Coast kids who might not have considered coming here before."

Arizona State's Coach Frank Kush, entering his 21st season, fretted some about whether his Sun Devils would have sufficient depth. But Kush should be able to manage. He ranks third among the nation's active college football coaches in winning percentage at .769 with a 164-49-1 record.

Pac-10 basketball teams will play a full 18-game round-robin conference schedule next winter.

Coach Fred Snowden of Arizona predicts, "We should be very competitive as we begin our Pacific-10 affiliation. I think we will bring something to the conference."

The new members, each with enrollment exceeding 31,000, will make the Pac-10 without question the strongest college baseball conference in the nation. Arizona won the NCAA championship in 1976, Arizona State in 1977 and Southern California this year by beating Arizona State in the championship game.

Arizona State won the NCAA track title in 1977 and was second in NCAA gymnastics and golf this year, and Arizona has been outstanding in recent years in cross country and water polo.

The Pacific-8 Conference began in the summer of 1959 as the Athletic Association of Western Universities with California, Southern Cal, UCLA, Stanford and Washington as members. Washington State joined July 1, 1962, and Oregon and Oregon State two years later. The name was changed to Pacific-8 Conference Sept. 3, 1968.

In each of the last nine years, Pacific-8 Conference members have won at least five NCAA team championships. No other major college athletic conference has won five national team championships in a single year.

In football where no NCAA champion is determined, Southern Cal has topped the Associated Press poll three times in the last 16 years.

The Trojans have won 63 NCAA team championships and been dominant in baseball, track and swimming. UCLA has earned 36 NCAA team championships, including 10 in basketball in the last 15 years, 12 in tennis and six in volleyball. Stanford, the only conference member with an enrollment of less than 16,500 — it has 6,345 — has 16 NCAA championships, including six in golf and the last two tennis crowns.

Western tops Cubs in City LL playoffs

Eric Ezell pitched his Western Mallard Exploration squad to a 5-1 win over the North Central Commercial Bank Cubs in Little League at the North Central Diamond No. 1 at Rusk Elementary Thursday night.

Mallard started out fast in the first inning with a triple by Smedley that drove in two runs. In the second inning, Mallard scored again after a flurry of singles sent Doug Daehling to home plate.

Mallard score two more times in the third, on singles by Stovall and Mike Timlin, and a double by Birj.

The last run of the game came in the bottom of the fourth when pitcher Eric Griffin scored after singles by Walter Hickman, Mike Sutherland and Mike Dobrey.

In the last two innings, North Central's Cubs held Western's Mallards scoreless, but were unable to sustain the offensive punch they had in the fourth inning.

Western takes on Mid-City today in the last game of the season, and unless Western wins it, Mid-City will be declared the winner of the tournament.

Braves move to San Diego

By The Associated Press

BASKETBALL

LOS ANGELES — Buffalo Braves managing partner John Y. Brown and Boston Celtics owner Irving Levin agreed to swap ownership of their basketball teams, with the Braves moving to San Diego.

According to Levin, the swap was a straight trade with no cash involved.

HOCKEY

DENVER — The majority owner of the Colorado Rockies has reached agreement to sell the National Hockey League franchise to Arthur Imperatore, a New Jersey trucking company operator, for $5 million, the Denver Post reported.

Imperatore hopes to move the team east and split its home schedule between New York's Madison Square Garden and the Philadelphia Spectrum for two seasons until the 21,000-seat Meadowlands Arena in East Rutherford, N.J., is completed.

Any move of the franchise would have to be approved by the NHL Board of Governors.

YACHTING

LOS ANGELES — The 61-foot sloop Sorcery became the first two-time winner of the 3,571-mile Los Angeles-to-Tahiti yacht race at Papeete Harbor.

Sorcery finished the race approximately 18 days and 23 hours after it began, averaging a speed of 7.8 knots.

CREW

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England — The first day's rowing in the Henley Royal Regatta centered on the Ladies' Plate and the Thames Challenge Cup for eights and proved to be a good one for American crews.

There were eight wins for the eight-man boats and only two losses.

In an all-American clash in the Ladies' Plate, Florida Institute of Technology scored a 2¾-length win over the Harvard University junior varsity lightweights.

Yale University's freshmen rowed to an easy win over Selwyn College of Cambridge University, and the varsity heavyweights from Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., finished 21-3 lengths ahead of England's Exeter University.

In the Thames Cup, a junior varsity heavyweight crew from the University of Washington lost to the Neptune Rowing Club, who turned in the best official time of the day, 6 minutes, 59 seconds.

U.S. winners in the Thames Cup included Potomac Boat Club of Washington, who beat Aberdeen University; Northeastern University's freshmen had a 31-3-length margin over Norwich Rowing Club of England, and Hartford's Trinity College varsity lightweights finished 2¾ lengths ahead of Crowland Rowing Club of England.

BALTIMORE — Princess Jan R., $12, defeated Sleepytime Gal by three-quarters of a length in the $10,000 feature at Pimlico.

OCEANPORT, N.J. — Qui Native, $4.60, scored a two-length victory over Dan Horn in the feature at Monmouth Park.

Steinbrenner finds peace, another war

NEW YORK (AP) — George Steinbrenner may have made his peace with Manager Billy Martin but the New York Yankees' maverick owner didn't take long to start another war.

This time the opponents are none other than American League President Lee McPahil and the American League schedule.

Steinbrenner, who this week ended speculation that he would fire Martin, made a number of angry statements following the Yankees double-header loss to the Milwaukee Brewers Wednesday night.

The controversial owner, incensed by the double loss, blamed the setbacks on his veteran players "who didn't hit" and on the AL leadership that "has us playing a crucial game wth the Red Sox one night and a double-header with Milwaukee the next."

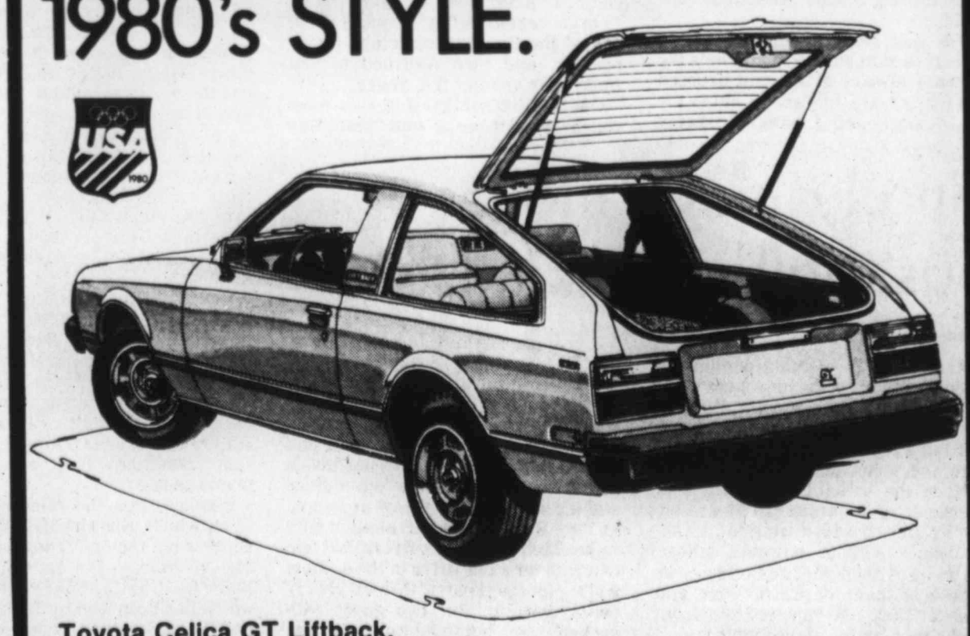

McPhail didn't take kindly to Steinbrenner's comments and issued a statement Thursday.

"I read Mr. Steinbrenner's statement attributing the loss of two games in Milwaukee to the American League schedule maker. The 1978 schedule made up by the league and originally submitted to the Yankees had open dates for New York June 28 and 29.

Don't take your eyes off the bouncing ball...or Barry

Rick Barry

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The original basketball gypsy has done it again.

Rick Barry, who was switching teams and jumping leagues back in the 1960s before free agency made such action fashionable, has bolted the Golden State Warriors for the second time in his far-flung career, this time heading for Houston and a two-year contract for a reported $1 million.

In the meantime he'll be furthering his broadcasting career, working for CBS this summer as a commentator on a number of events, including golf and tennis. But the agreement with the Rockets means he won't be taking to the airwaves on a full-time basis for awhile, even though at the age of 34 Barry concedes his "future is in broadcasting, not basketball."

"This is a new life for me and a tremendous opportunity," Barry said of his decision to play out his option with the Warriors, test the free-agent waters and then sign with Houston.

"I was very happy over the last six years at Golden State," said Barry. "But basketball is a business just like everything else and we were unable to work out a contract with the Warriors."

THAT SURPRISED most basketball people. According to the Warriors, they had reached a verbal agreement with Barry on at least two occasions. What's more, Barry lives in the Bay area and had said he wanted to end his playing career there.

Warriors guard Phil Smith, however, was not surprised at losing a teammate.

"Rick is a businessman type," observed Smith. "You know he was going to do the best he could for himself. After all, he was the first to do this kind of thing."

If there is one word to describe Barry, it is businesslike. He is a cool, calculating individual who weighs all the angles before making a move or issuing a statement. No player in the National Basketball Association can sit in a locker room, just minutes after playing a rough 48 minutes, and analyze a game the way Barry does.

That ability to put words together clearly and concisely and provide instant analysis that makes sense has served Barry well in his TV work. He has done the sports segment on local news shows in the past, but now seems headed for bigger things as a network commentator.

"He's very glib, he reads well and he ad libs well," said Don Wiedereche, a spokesman for CBS Sports. "He likes to talk. He has a very good on-air presence and he knows how to handle himself."

Which is exactly why the Rockets wanted him.

"Very few players have what I call 'presence,'" said Rockets Coach Tom Nissalke. "By that I mean a great overview of what's going on. Oscar Robertson had it. Maybe two or three other players today have it. But Rick Barry obviously knows the game of basketball."

BARRY'S ABILITY to express that knowledge has made him one of CBS' top basketball commentators, even on a part-time basis. His work during the recently completed playoffs was outstanding, both his analysis during play and his capsule summaries of a team's strengths and weaknesses before and after the game.

"He works hard at it," said Wiedereche. "He's always in town a couple of days before an event, doing his preparation. He's a bright guy. There's almost no limit to where he can go in this business."

For now, Barry will be working the Greater Hartford and Westchester Open golf tournaments as well as the tennis tournament in North Conway, N.H., in August. He'll also be taping the Gold Cup hydroplane championships for an upcoming segment of CBS Sports Spectacular.

Barry is more than just another jock who turns to television when his playing days are over. He has worked hard to learn the broadcasting business through his summer efforts for CBS.

But couldn't a man who jumps basketball leagues also jump networks?

"We have no real hold on him," conceded Wiedereche, noting that Barry's commitment to CBS is only for the summer and he is free to sign with another network after that. "But I think CBS giving him these assignments shows our confidence in him. He's definitely in our plans."

Sanudo's 5-under leads Western Open tourney

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Many of the big names on the professional golf tour regularly pass the Western Open because of the tough Butler National golf course.

But the way some of the lesser-known members of the tour handled the 7,083-yard, par-72 links in the first round of the $225,000 Western on Thursday may prompt some of the game's big money winners to give playing the tournament extra consideration in the future.

In all, 28 golfers, led by Cesar Sanudo's 5-under 67, broke par on the course while 18 others were at even-par after 36 holes.

"There's no doubt the course isn't playing as difficult," said Allen Miller, who recorded a 4-under 68 to finish one stroke behind Sanudo. "I discovered it in practice and it gave me a little more confidence starting out."

BOB GILDER, whose only victory on the tour was in the 1976 Phoenix Open, joined Miller with a 68 while Rod Curl, John Schroeder and Craig Stadler were all two shots behind with 3-under 69s.

"I haven't been here in a few years because the course has just been too tough," said Curl, a 10-year veteran of the tour. "But the way it's set up now, it's a much more enjoyable course. Nobody wants to come to a tournament and see the golfers bogey every hole. They want to see birdies."

Sanudo, who is playing the tour regularly for the first time since 1975, was 1-over for the first five holes but went on to birdie six of the next 10 to go 5-under. He bogied the par-4 17th after landing in a bunker and finished with a birdie on the 18th where he used an eight-iron out of the rough to drop to within a foot of the hole.

"I was just looking for par on the 18th, but I hit the eight-iron just right and there I was," said Sanudo, who played in only eight tour tournaments in 1976 and four in 1977.

The 34-year-old native of Mexico said his failure to find a sponsor kept him off the tour for a prolonged time. He launched his comeback as a regular by paying his way to his first eight tournaments this year before finding a group of sponsors in San Diego.

SO FAR, he has finished in the money in only two of his 13 tour appearances, winning just $189.38 for his 33rd-place tie in the Magnolia Classic and earned $320 for a 39th-place tie in the Tallahassee Open.

Seven golfers, among them Andy Bean, winner of the Kemper Open and Memphis Classic, finished with 2-under 70s. Bean was 6-under after 10 holes but bogied the next four.

Ron saw WT tennis boom

George Richey moved to San Angelo. "He had 20 years experience as a coach, so most of my coaching background came from him."

Houdek still considers George one of the leading coaches and pros in the world.

"He was semi-retired. He had a cancerous skin condition and he's the reason I always douse any exposed skin with cream and wear a hat in the sun. George and I have the same reddish complexion and he warned me then, 'I'll save you a $40,000 job in 20 years, if you'll protect yourself'. And he was right."

NANCY WAS 16 and Cliff 11 and "I made our facilities available to George. After four or five years, George went to Dallas' Brook Hollow, one of the finest tennis clubs in the country, and then returned to San Angelo for another five years."

One of Ron's biggest thrills as a coach came three or four years ago when he was in the stands at Dallas for the CBS Tennis Classic when "Cliff beat Rod Laver, the greatest tennis player of all time, and then beat Illie Nastase."

As for the turnabout from tennis as the little used plaything of the well-to-do to the national rage, Houdek credits "TV and opening the game up to professionalism. And the Billie Jean King-Bobby Riggs match on TV caught the imagination and showed everyone the game could be fun."

"A lot of people turned to tennis because in the growing physical fitness awareness, they found you could more conditioning value in a shorter time from tennis than golf. In turn, a lot of tennis players took up jogging. Running and situps , that's where the third sets are won."

Houdek believes Midland had a big headstart on the boom, "Largely through coaches like Bob Mapes and David Kent at Midland High and pros like Les Berkes and Win Farquhar at MCC and the Racquet Club in the early years. And Jim Hill and Keith Diepraam are carrying on in the same tradition. They are all good tennis people."

Houdek cites the Midland Tennis Clbu, which uses the MHS courts, as another big factor. "They have 400 to 500 members. It's open to all and their fall invitational tournament, which has been won by Dick Stockton and Brian Gottfried, is one of the best around, anywhere.

"And Midland College is going to help tennis here in the future," Ron predicts."Coach Brian Gilley is bringing in outstanding talent and that means more competition and that's good for high school players."

Houdek goes on, "The community has worked together on this from different angles and it has all paid off."

Unruly mobs make baseball stands unsafe

flow of beer by banning pending in critical sections of the bleachers when violence reached flash point. But this not only restricts the American baseball fan's right to have a traditional beer and a hot dog, it restricts the right of the ballclub to hundreds of thousands of dollars of profit a year. San Francisco added wine to its concessions — without, however, following it up with pompano-in-a-bag, or tripe a la mode de Caen. Wine and Cracker Jack, and you need help from the bullpen by the eighth inning.

What do we do, put blockhouses around the field? They say there is envy over the swollen salaries that translates into belligerence by fans. But ballplayers always outearned truck drivers. They say the game is now a night affair, and night belongs to the muggers, the burglars and the footpads, and a man does things in the dark he wouldn't do in the sun. You lob cherry bombs at night, not noon.

It's a distressing state of affairs, but there's a simple solution: if the fan wants to turn it into an audience-participation event, we'll get Monty Hall to emcee, and let 'em come on the field. Let 'em stand in there and face Vida Blue's high hard one inside and under the chin. Give 'em a glove and let 'em take the throw at second as Pete Rose comes barreling in with spikes high and elbows flying. Let 'em camp under a line drive in the outfield while George Foster throws cherry bombs at him. Put two goons with broken beer bottles in the factory parking lot to work him over when he gets through work. Or find his place of business and get a hundred beered-up spectators to look over his shoulder all day and call him names and criticize his judgment.

No-hitters are like NBA

since Johnny Vander Meer of Cincinnati had two in a row in 1938. Nine years later his teammate, Ewell Blackwell, was two outs away from duplicating it — with Vander Meer in the dugout — before Eddie Stanky singled.

The strangest, perhaps, came in 1917 when a hotheaded young pitcher named Babe Ruth was ejected after walking the first Washington batter. After Ernie Shore relieved, the baserunner was caught stealing and the Boston pitcher retired the last 26 batters in a row.

The hard-luck award goes to Harvey Haddix, who retired 36 straight Philadephia batters in 1959 but lost his perfect game — and the no-hitter and the game itself as well — when Philadelphia scored a run in the 13th.

But for pure legend, go back 98 years to professional baseball's first perfect game. John Richmond of Worcester, Mass., had his gem preserved when his right fielder fielded a sharply hit ball and tossed out the slow-footed runner at first.

Now that's entertainment. —

Bierbauer given blast

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet newspaper accused ABC correspondent Charles Bierbauer today of attempting to disrupt a news conference with Muhammad Ali this month by asking "provocative questions."

"The representative of ABC is of the type that come to our country not to establish friendly ties among peoples," the newspaper Sovietsky Sport wrote in a back-page article.

Bierbauer accompanied Ali during most of his visit to the Soviet Union from June 12-21, including a tour of the Moslem centers of Tashkent and Samarkand in Soviet Central Asia.

If USSR likes it, maybe they'll invent it

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Visitors to the office of Moscow Mayor Vladimir Promyslov look suspiciously at the big red bag sitting in the corner with all those funny-looking objects sticking out.

They are too small to be rakes or hoes. They don't have sharp blades, so they can't be rapiers or epees. They don't look dangerous enough to be weapons. No place to put the powder.

The mayor finds it hard to explain.

After all, the ancient game of golf is just beginning to peek its head into the Soviet Union, and the proletariat doesn't quite know whether it is an insidious plot to poison the minds of the working class or a pleasant diversion introduced by the western world to promote detente.

"For years the Russians resisted golf as a bourgeois pasttime for the indolent and idle rich," says Robert Trent Jones, famed international golf course architect who presented the Moscow mayor the red bag of golf clubs. "Now officials are telling their people that it is a game to be enjoyed by the common man."

JONES HAS been commissioned to build the first golf course ever in the USSR, carving out a 7,000-yard stretch of greens, bunkers and water hazards over a wooded 200-acre plot on the outskirts of the Russian capital.

It is the pet project of Dr. Armand Hammer, chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corp., an American industrialist with many business interests in the Soviet Union and with the trust of the country's leaders, including President Leonid Brezhnev.

Hammer conceived the idea four years ago, hoping the course could provide a recreation facility for personnel from western nations who will staff the World Trade Center, now under construction in Moscow.

He also felt it a shame to deny the Russians the frustration and agony that inflict millions of Americans in their weekend struggles with "Old Man Par."

It took a hard sell.

HE HAD to convince Brezhnev and his Kremlin associates that golf was not the invention of the capitalist nations, a subversive tool aimed at encouraging dalliance and drinking, but had been played by little Dutch girls centuries ago.

He had an advocate in one of the USSR's most respected senior officials, Vladimir Kuznetzov, who had taken up the game while serving as ambassador to Malaysia and had honed his handicap down to 14.

Kuznetzov regularly can be seen practicing his five-iron shots in a vacant meadow.

People, strolling by, gape in wonderment. What is that man doing out there hitting those little round objects with such oddly shaped sticks?

In 1960, the Russians built a fairway and a green on an island in the Volga River in anticipation of a visit by Dwight Eisenhower. Then came the U-2 spy plane incident and Ike's visit was cancelled.

JONES, WHO has built more than 400 golf courses in all parts of the world, returns to Moscow next month to lay final plans. The layout is expected to be completed in the late summer of 1980.

Construction has suffered from bureaucratic red tape. The Russians balked at first because the course would swallow up a small farm. They wanted every tree accounted for.

The idea of the Russians being bitten by the golf bug has aroused whimsical editorial comment in the American press.

"If the CIA isn't behind this, it ought to be," says the Birmingham Post-Herald. James Reston commented wryly in the New York Times: "This may be Moscow's biggest mistake since the Ribbentrop-Molotov pact."

Russia is not the first country to accept the sport reluctantly. In the Middle Ages, British kings banned golf because it kept soldiers from practicing their archery. Some 70 years ago, President Howard Taft had to sneak away to practice in privacy. He feared public scorn.

Maybe Brezhnev will do the same.

Death knell again forecast for Aeros

HOUSTON (AP) — The World Hockey Association Houston Aeros have been cliff-dwellers since the close of the 1978 season, hanging onto life by their fingertips.

The financially strapped franchise likely would have been a bleach-boned carcass at the bottom of the canyon by now had it not been for the tireless efforts of Kenneth Schnitzer, the majority owner.

The death knell was forecast once again Thursday when Schnitzer called a news conference one day after the WHA and National Hockey League broke off merger talks and a move by Schnitzer to bring the NHL Colorado Rockies to Houston had failed.

Since all efforts to enter the NHL had apparently fallen through and Schnitzer had said many times he would not be a part of the WHA next season, speculation was high that the two-time WHA champions would fold.

Instead, Schnitzer announced the Aeros had applied to enter the NHL as an expansion team and if that failed, there still was a remote chance of getting the Rockies here and if that failed, they might even play in the WHA next season.

The Aeros offered the NHL $2.5 million plus an indemnity against any possible litigation from the WHA to let them compete in the NHL next season.

'Eternity' to return in original form

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The New Congress Hotel was a bawdy house, not a dime-a-dance hall, Pvt. Robert E. Lee Prewitt's true love worked there, but rarely was she upright about it.

Yet such changes were in the movie version of James Jones' classic soldiering novel, "From Here to Eternity," lest the film be banned in Boston and other bastions of decency.

Well, 25 years later, Boston has a "combat zone" Prewitt might have liked, NBC has a TV version of "Eternity" afoot, and stuff changed for the 1953 model sure will be in original form for 1978.

"We're going back to the book," vows producer-director Buzz Kulik, who on July 17 gathers his 500-man prewar Army, their '03 Springfield rifles and starts filming for 11 weeks.

He sounded ready to roll, even though when interviewed last week he'd cast but one major role, 1st Sgt. Milt Warden, with William Devane in the part superbly played by Burt Lancaster in the movie.

Openings still existed for Pvt. Angelo Maggio (the role saved Frank Sinatra's career), Prewitt (the late Montgomery Clift) and the sadistic stockade-tender, Sgt. Fatso Judson (Ernest Borgnine).

"It's amazing how things have changed in 20 years," Kulik said of the fact he now can show, right on TV, the novel's original depiction of a bawdy house and Prewitt's fair lady.

And, because the TV version runs six hours, compared to 105 minutes for the movie, he said he's able to put in scenes the movie had to delete because of time limitations.

Such as the brutal beatings Fatso Judson gave Maggio in the stockade. It was compressed in the movie to Maggio's arrival at the stockade and his death shortly after he escaped from the slammer.

Will there be the famous surf scene where Sgt. Warden and his mistress, an officer's wife (Deborah Kerr played her), got all wet while smooching on a deserted Hawaiian beach?

"Sure," Kulik laughed. "We'll do our variation of it. Still, with the whole movie, I know some will say, 'Geez, you screwed it up, the old picture was so much better.'

"But there's so much in Jones's book that was left out of the film (for time and censor reasons). And with the six hours we've got, we'll be able to put it in. To a great extent, it'll be an altogether different story."

A big problem in his remake: Actors he auditioned tended to mimic the acting they saw in the 1953 "Eternity," particularly Clift's depiction of proud, sensitive Pvt. Prewitt.

"They kept imitating him," Kulik said. "His performance was extraordinary, to have you believe this born-and-bred New Yorker was from the coal mines of Kentucky and a boxer.

BRIDGE

Many duffers enjoy what experts miss

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Bridge experts lead a sheltered life. They seldom make the wild bid that goes for a 2600-point ride, nor do they make the silly play that jeopardizes an unbeatable contract. Perhaps they're missing all the fun.

Opening lead — ♠ Q

Today's hand would be a colorless affair if an expert were at the helm. The play be over in about two minutes, and everybody would go on to the next hand with never a thought of what had been missed.

The expert South would take the king of spades and finesse with the queen of diamonds. East would refuse this trick with never a quiver, in the hope of deceiving South.

Undeceived, South would take the ace of diamonds and give up a diamond. Then he would take ten tricks.

SHAMEFUL TRICK

The inexpert declarer refuses the first trick. Many a player thinks there's something vaguely shameful about winning the first trick.

East continues spades, but that is the last time spades are led. When South tries the diamond finesse East holds off. East wins the third diamond, and South never gets to his hand for the ace of spades or the rest of the diamonds. Down two.

For two of the players, this is much more exciting than the expert's method of playing the hand.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player passes. You hold: S-AK5; H-64; D-J10983; C-653. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid 1 NT. You cannot afford to bid two diamonds with only 8 points in high cards and no particular fit for partner's suit. You would bid one diamond if partner had opened with one club.

uperstar Bette Midler finally makes it to 'big screen'

OB THOMAS

LLYWOOD (AP) — That most fully managed of superstars, Midler, is finally making it to g screen.

has conquered almost every um, starting in a gay New York bathhouse. Her concerts have socko, her record albums have gold, her Broadway revue broke rds and the TV specials have acclaimed. Now she is starring 0th Century-Fox in "The Rose." e Midler career appears to have well-calculated, even the inter- to recharge her enormous ener-

And even though her perfor- ces seem wildly impromptu, e is evidence of strong discipline erneath. The same elements ap- in "The Rose."

We started out in rehearsals play- the script very cautiously," explained director Mark Rydell ("The Reivers," "Cinderella Liberty"). "Then Bette herself pulled up short and said 'We can't be too cagey, too cautious; let's go all the way.'

"It was very brave of her. She has more to lose than anyone. But she elected to play the role full force, and it works. She is absolutely fearless. She played a scene in front of a crowd of people on a New York street in which she cried hysterically. She can be wild, yet she also has the power and dignity. An amazing talent."

"The Rose" concerns the last eight days in the life of a self-destructive rock star in 1969. Her frantic activity involves an ambitious manager, played by Alan Bates, and a Vietnam War deserter, Frederic Forrest.

The other day "The Rose" was filming in downtown Los Angeles at a rundown basement bar which had been converted into a nightclub featuring female impersonators. There were male replicas of Mae West, Barbra Streisand as well as Rose, the character Midler plays.

The star was unavailable, but the co-producers explained how the project developed. Marvin Worth, who produced "Lenny" about another tragic star, Lenny Bruce, was first struck by the Midler talent four -and-a-half-years ago.

"I saw her perform at the Troubadour," the producer-writer recalled. "I went with Peter Gruber, who was then head of Columbia Pictures, and I proposed a picture for Bette. It didn't work out because Columbia was in turmoil at the time.

"Then I thought, 'Why not have Bette do the life of Janis Joplin?' I made a deal with 20th Century-Fox, and did a great amount of research on Joplin. But it seemed to me the story should go beyond Joplin.

"I was interested in how certain performers reflect their times. Certainly if Frank Sinatra, Rudy Vallee or Elvis Presley came along now, they wouldn't be as popular as they were in their own eras. Janis Joplin, Jimi Hendrix and Jim Morrison were all products of an hysterical period in our history, and their music reflected it. They also died at the same time."

Aaron Russo is co-producer of "The Rose," and he has been Midler's mentor since 1972.

"I've waited six years for a movie for Bette," he remarked. "The scripts I read and discarded either lacked quality or weren't important enough for her. I wanted a role that only Bette Midler could play. In other words, if she couldn't make the picture, the project would have to be abandoned.

"The toughest one to turn down was 'The Fortune.' She would have co-starred with Warren Beatty and Jack Nicholson with direction by Mike Nichols. But I read the script and decided it was a role any number of actresses could play (Stockard Channing did). I was almost holding my breath until the picture came out. I shouldn't say this, but I was happy when it failed."

Russo finally selected "The Rose" even though the role offers little chance for Midler to display her comedic talent.

Bakke not to affect UT system, says Walker

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — University of Texas System President E.D. Walker said Thursday the Allan Bakke decision probably will not affect admissions at the system's 12 campuses and medical branches.

"The long-range implications of the decision of the U.S. Supreme Court. . . . are not yet clear," Walker said in a prepared statement. "However, we believe that our admissions practices are proper under the ruling."

The U.S. Supreme Court ordered Bakke admitted to the University of California at Davis medical school Wednesday and said the school had discriminated against him in denying Bakke admission because he was white. The court said the medical school could take race into account in future admissions programs.

Quota systems are not used on UT System campuses and a candidate's total qualifications are considered for admission, Walker explained.

"We will continue to seek those applicants, including members of minorities and disadvantaged groups, best suited to the realization of equal educational opportunity for all those who apply to the University of Texas System," he continued.

"We do not think, therefore, that the Bakke decision will have any effect on the University of Texas System admissions policy," Walker concluded.

The system has four-year campuses at Arlington, Austin, Dallas, El Paso, Odessa and San Antonio. It operates medical schools in Dallas, Galveston, Houston, San Antonio and Tyler, in addition to the University of Texas System Cancer Center in Houston.

Ruling political party plunges into crisis

Agence France-Presse

NEW DELHI — The ruling Janata Party was plunged into its worst political crisis here Thursday with the decision of the Indian Cabinet to ask for the resignations of Home Minister Charan Singh and Health Minister Raj Narain.

Lal Kishan Advani, minister of information, who briefed reporters after an emergency Cabinet meeting, said the ministers had unanimously left it to Prime Minister Morarji Desai to deal with the situation "in an appropriate manner."

Advani would not elaborate, but informed sources said Desai had made it clear to his colleagues that he would ask both ministers to resign.

The differences between Desai and Singh on various issues for the past several months have already tarnished the image of the Janata government which came to power in March 1977. They reached a climax Wednesday night when Singh, 76, issued a statement calling for the immediate arrest of former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, and her trial by a special court for alleged excesses committed during a national state of emergency. Singh issued the statement from Suraj Kund, near Delhi, where he has been convalescing after a heart attack early last month.

The home minister's statement was generally considered a slap in the face of Desai, who had repeatedly stated that he was not in favor of a special court to try Gandhi and that action should be taken only by an ordinary court under the prevailing laws.

Singh's demand came at a time when the party leadership was busy trying to resolve a previous crisis provoked by the statements of Health Minister Raj Narain calling for the resignation of party President Chandra Shekhar.

Both Singh and Narain belong to the Bharatiya Lok Dal (BLD) Party which merged with the Janata Party last year. It was generally thought that Narain's remarks had the full blessings of Singh who reacted sharply when the Janata Parliamentary Board decided to censure Narain for his remarks.

According to Advani, the Cabinet meeting, which lasted more than three hours, only discused Singh and Narain.

If both Singh and Narain quit the Cabinet, observers predict, it would cause a major split in rank-and-file of the Janata. Singh's BLD party, with 90 members, forms the largest component of the Janata parliamentary group of 270 members. The other four Janata partners — Jana Sangh, Congress Organization, Congress for Democracy and the Socialists — all appear to be backing Desai for the moment. Singh and his BLD also control the state governments in Uttar Pradesh, Haryana and Bihar, where the chief ministers have already made statements denouncing the Cabinet decision.

Probe asked in helicopter deal

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has been asked to determine if a Bell Helicopter official lied about questionable overseas payments at Senate hearings to confirm G. William Miller as head of the Federal Reserve Board.

The perjury investigation was requested by the Senate Banking Committee after Textron Inc., Bell's parent company, in compliance with a subpoena, gave the panel documents directly contradicting the sworn testimony of Frank M. Sylvester, Bell's vice president for international marketing.

Sylvester said he would have been surprised to learn in the early 1970's that Gen. Mohammed Khatemi, commander of the Imperial Iranian air force, had an ownership interest in Air Taxi, the sales agency which represented Bell in connection with a $500 million helicopter sale to Iran.

Miller, the former president and board chairman of Textron, had his confirmation delayed for six weeks last winter as the Banking Committee investigated the possibility that a $2.9 million payment made by Bell to Air Taxi might have been a bribe funneled to Gen. Khatemi to clinch what became one of the largest sale's in Bell's history.

Gen. Khatemi died a few years ago in an accident.

Among the most recent documents provided by Textron is a "Confidential, Eyes Only" report to Sylvester dated March 16, 1971 on sales prospects in Iran.

The memo, written by Bell represenative C.P.B. Horsley contains an organizational chart placing Gen. Khatemi just under the shah. A dotted line connects his name to that of Air Taxi.

"... The real influence behind the company is Gen. Khatemi, the Air Force commander in chief," the Horsley memo said. "As a serving officer he officially is not allowed to hold offices outside his military capacity, but in reality, anything that flies he has an 'interest' in."

During questioning by committee staff members, Sylvester was asked: "Would it have surprised you to learn that Gen. Khatemi had an ownership interest in Air Taxi?"

"Yeah, I think it would have," he replied. "I don't know, but I think it would have ... certain knowlege would have put a very different complexion upon our relationship, that's for sure. If we'd had pre-knowlege of that kind I think I can pretty clearly say to you that Jim Atkins (Bell's president) wouldn't have permitted the relationship to exist, to continue. ... ."

When Sylvester was asked what Gen. Khatemi's influence was over aircraft purchases or whether he had figured prominently in deciding which helicopter would be bought, he replied, "I don't know."

At his confirmation hearings, Miller testified that he did not know of any ownership interest by Gen. Khatemi in Air Taxi.

Committee investigators say no evidence ever has been found which in any way links Miller to such knowlege.

As the hearing closed, Miller said, "If Gen. Khatemi did have an undisclosed ownership interest in Air Taxi, then Mr. Atkins and I have been deceived."

"Deception by others shouldn't be the basis for impugning the integrity of innocent parties," Miller said.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Diet links to cancer exist

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: Is there any truth in all the claims being made now that diet can cause cancer? There so many scare stories, you don't know what to believe and what not to after a while.–Dora L.

DEAR DORA: A growing number of authorities do feel that the high-fat, high-calorie, low-residue diet found in the United States and other affluent countries is a factor in several major kinds of cancer, such as a breast and colon. Worldwide statistics show there is much less cancer in regions where the fare is a leaner and simpler.

The link between diet and cancer isn't as definite as that between smoking and cancer or diet and heart disease, but it is there. And although researchers haven't figured out exacity how it works, the best course is to shift to a more prudent diet—on the basis of what we know at present.

Changing our national food habits is all the more important because they contribute to so many other serious diseases such as altherosclerosis, hypertension, diabetes and obesity.

In recent congressional testimony, Dr. D.M. Hegsted of the Harvard School of Public Health summed things up well: "Americans should eat less food but specifically less meat, less fat, especially saturated fat, less cholesterol, less sugar. They should increase their consumption of unsaturated fat, fruits, vegetables, and cereals, especially whole grain cereals."

If you would like to follow my diet you can find it in my paperback book published by Warner Books called "Dr. Solomon's Easy, No-Risk Diet."

(Dr. Solomon has authored several best-selling books on diet and weight loss. For his booklet, "Plain Talk About Weight Loss," send $1 plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope in care of this newspaper, to WEIGHT LOSS BOOKLET, P.O. Box 2000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.)

32 4-Wheel Dr. Vehicles

Face the Facts... and you'll buy a Jeep Pickup

There are 4-wheel drive pickups and there is the 4-wheel drive Jeep J-10 Pickup. If you think they're the same, you're in for an education. Jeep Pickup has 4-wheel drive that's built-in, not added on like an option — that's the only way we make them. Jeep Pickup is the only pickup to offer optional Quadra-Trac, Jeep's exclusive automatic 4-wheel drive, the system that's unsurpassed by the competition — to give you super traction. Jeep's load capacity is 2199 lbs. Jeep has a higher ground clearance than all its competitors so rocks won't stop you. Jeep Pickup does not have to recalibrate its springs like the competition to gain greater ground clearance, so you get a more stable ride without that "on-stilts" look. Jeep Pickup has a long wheelbase for a smoother ride on road or off. It has a lower tailgate loading height for convenience and a short hood for better visibility. Jeep Pickup has more engine choices than the competition. You pick the size you need. Face the facts — the 4-wheel drive Jeep Pickup has no competition!
