WHAT'S WRONG WITH THIS PICTURE?

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

(By Rodney Dutcher, NEA Service Writer)

WASHINGTON—This is an era of harsh feelings, according to Sen. J. Boonboom McWhorter.

If everyone who has been calling other people bad names were to have his mouth washed out, the senator suggests, most of the 6,000,000 unemployed would be assured of jobs in soap factories.

McWhorter will introduce a bill to wash all those mouths but has no hope that it will pass because a majority of the members of congress would be affected.

"It has been many months since the newspapers reported an instance where someone thought of something nice to say about anything or anybody," the senator observes.

"The Republican National committee is praising Mr. Hoover, radio announcers pay homage to certain toothpaste and rubber tires and both Washington and Lincoln came in for a moderate amount of commendation on their birthdays this year.

Everybody Is "Sore"

"But in both politics and business everybody is so sore and frazzled that there has been more general and whole-hearted panning than during any previous period within my memory.

"If every knock were really a boost the millennium would be here now, nobody would have to work and life would be just a beautiful bore.

"Diplomats are supposed to be the cageiest, most tactful people in the world and you get an idea how sour the world has turned on itself when even they begin to get nasty.

"We exchange ambassadors with Spain and the ambassadors exchange epithets. One day our ambassador there was attacked by the Madrid press because he was supposed to have said that the members of the new provisional government looked like a bunch of jailbirds. That same day the new Spanish government appointed an ambassador to us who was on record as accusing us of 'stark imperialism,' asserting that this country 'considers the whole continent its prey' and demanding that we apologize for starting the Spanish-American war.

"Meanwhile, the Haitian minister has got himself into a jam because he was said to have insinuated that General Snedley Butler was a fake hero. And Butler, who called Mussolini a hit-and-run driver and was accused of 'obscene' language when he said 'Hell' on the radio, is only one of our public men who gets into one duel of harsh words after another.

"No chapter of history displays so many adjectives used to adorn the word 'liar' as the republicans and democrats used in the big name-calling contest between Chairman Fess and Chairman Shouse. No president within the oldest inhabitant's memory has been castigated as has Mr. Hoover. And the anathema hurled at each other by republicans and democrats is only excelled by the imprecations and maledictions exchanged between regular republicans and progressive republicans and between wet democrats and dry democrats. When you hear republicans like Julius Barnes and Mr. Atterbury of the Pennsylvania railroad cursing the protective tariff you realize how good and mad everybody is at everything and everybody else.

Chicago Sets Record

"New records of invective were established in the Chicago mayoralty campaign and every day somebody is piling new abuse on Mayor Jimmy Walker and Tammany Hall, only to be branded as bolshevik in return.

"Even President Hoover forsook his accustomed calm the other day to deliver a fearless denunciation of Sandino, the Nicaraguan rebel.

"I call to mind the good old days when we were all comparatively happy and when we had any spleen in our systems we took it out on the Russians. Now we are razzing the Russians more enthusiastically than ever, the rest of the world is still razzing the United States and among our own folk nobody seems to find life bearable any more unless they are picking fights with each other.

"Incidentally, there's a dirty skunk out in my state who made a speech the other night and said the only excuse for the people sending me to Washington was that it made the state so much better a place to live in."

HOW'S your HEALTH

FRANKLIN'S ADVICE
We celebrate this year the 225th anniversary of Benjamin Franklin's birthday.
On each of these quarter-century memorials a diversity of groups extol the memory of this great American, for so broad was his genius that he left his mark on many fields of human endeavor.
Medicine is among these. Franklin was not a physician. But, then, neither was Pasteur, and, while there is no comparison between the revolutionizing discoveries of Pasteur and the homely observations of Franklin the latter are ingenious enough to have secured for Franklin a permanent place in medical history.

Franklin was largely instrumental in founding the first hospital in America, and later served as president of its board of managers. He founded the College of Philadelphia, parent body of the first medical school on the continent. As a publisher he printed many medical books. He invented bio-focal spectacles, made experiments on venereal disease, and the canker sores he was contending with, and both took and advised unorthodox.

Dietetics interested Franklin, and on this theme his writings were better than his practices. In his "Poor Richard's Almanac" he published many pithy observations. "Don't misinform your doctor nor your lawyer," "God heals, and the doctor takes the fees," "A full stomach is the mother of all evils." But that he did not take his amateur medicine too seriously may be judged from a letter to his "Honored father and mother" in which he wrote in part:

"I apprehend I am too busy in practicing and meddling in the doctor's sphere.
"But as I always employ a physician myself when any disorder arises in my family, and submit implicitly to his orders in everything, so I hope you consider my advice only as a mark of my good will, and not as more of it in practice than happens to agree with what your doctor directs."

EYE GLASSES

The history of spectacles reaches back into and is lost in antiquity. According to some, eye glasses were the invention of the Chinese, according to others they were the discovery of the Romans; while still others believe that they are the creation of the medieval monk and scientist, Roger Bacon.

In Florence there is a tomb bearing the inscription "Here lies Salvino d'Armato degli Armati." Salvino, the inventor of spectacles, May God forgive his sins. He died A. D. 1317.

What is the exact date of the invention or discovery of spectacles remains unknown and disputed. It is a fact that they were commonly in use by the 15th century.

The early spectacles as even in numerous paintings were clumsy affairs, consisting of heavy magnifying lenses held in crudely fashioned frames.

Their use was mainly confined to the presbyopic or far-sighted individual, usually the aged. They were costly and almost a luxury.

In the intervening years spectacles have become more refined in structure and more adapted to the needs of the imperfect human eye.

The greatest progress in this field was made during the last century, during which period the science of ophthalmology may be said to have been established.

Technical developments in the invention and manufacture of suitable glass, in grinding, polishing, and combining lenses have kept pace with the advance in theoretical knowledge, so that examining physician and producing technologist now make sight possible for many who formerly were condemned to partial or complete blindness.

Twelve cotton contestants in Lexington county, S. C., averaged 332 pounds of one-inch lint per acre and made a profit of $30.65 per acre.

About New York

(By Richard Massock)

NEW YORK—Many a play and movie opening we have attended.

But we just found out what it sounds like over the radio.

Uninvited as we were to the premiere of Tallulah Bankhead's first talkie, we listened in on the broadcast. We weren't missing a thing. We knew the whole routine. Here we were, comfortable, no stiff shirt on, while a block of people on Broadway were being shoved back by the cops.

First Night

The anonymous announcer got his facts straight about Miss Bankhead, which is more than the bystanders ever do. And there was an orchestra. We'll bet nobody there heard that.

George Gordon Battle and some woman told how honored Alabama was by its native daughter.

Then Fannie Ward arrived and spoke into the mike. She told how Tallulah "was a sensation in England and remained many years." Tallulah probably wouldn't like that "many" but she didn't seem to mind when she appeared and spoke her piece.

The announcer was right there, too.

"Cameras are clicking at a great rate, the lights are burning brightly," he shouted. "Everything is lovely." It must have been.

"Miss Bankhead is now milling around in the crowd." That was a neat trick, if she could do it.

After that three columnists and the sponsor of the broadcast, a women's clothing merchant, were introduced. Nobody had ever seen such a crowd.

Hullabaloo

Some more celebrities arrived and were cheeked off by the announcer. "Ruth Roland... Senator Copeland... Miss Anne Morgan... Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt." My, how those Vanderbilts get about.

"Confetti is dropping from the roof," said the announcer. Wonder how the crowd looked to the usher who was up there on the roof, sprinkling confetti "like a snow-storm."

"It's her first and needless to say her greatest picture," the radio told us.

"Now we are going to bid you 'Adios.' As they say in Alabama.

The noise of the crowd spluttered off and after a bit came the dulcet tones of Beatrice Fairfax. It was the hairnet hour and we stroked our thinning pate and went back to the evening paper.

The next day we learned that we did miss a few things. A police horse ate the hat off the head of one man. And Buddy Rogers seemed to have been the sensation. After the opening hundreds of women were gazing outside. Suddenly one said, "Oh, there's Buddy!" and the resulting riot bowled over six policemen.

Washington Daybook

(By Herbert Plummer)

WASHINGTON—If the Hon. Patrick Hurley, President Hoover's youthful and debonair secretary of war, has ever felt baffled when confronted with a situation, he certainly kept the fact concealed around these parts.

The "Hurley way" of acquitting one's self is well known to all those with whom the secretary comes into contact. An attempt at a description of the "Hurley way" is well-nigh impossible. One must be initiated to appreciate.

Take, for example, these inspection trips he makes from time to time for the war department. At most of the places he stops he is met by committees of all kinds. For the most part they are composed of groups interested in some local project that must have federal aid if it is to be realized.

The secretary of war must always be on guard against committing himself. Yet it is highly important that as little ill will as possible be left behind.

Hurley's adroitness in escaping what might possibly be an embarrassing situation has won for him no small reputation among Washington observers.

Informal

Perhaps it is his enthusiasm and the atmosphere of good fellowship he creates in such instances that explains it. Quite informal is his arrival, quite informal is his stay, and quite informally does he take his leave.

The Beau Brummel of President Hoover's official family, nevertheless he is as likely as not to prop his feet upon his desk while discussing a question with you. He is never at a loss for an interesting yarn to illustrate a point. He even likes to tell stories on himself and enjoys them hugely. And before you realize it, he has won his listeners over.

They leave him, unanimously voting him a good fellow, forgetting that he has made them no definite promises.

Paddles

Not so long ago Hurley went out to his home state of Oklahoma for a visit. While there he visited the local chapter house of his college fraternity.

The freshmen about to be inducted into the fraternity were introduced to him one by one. It was on the eve of an initiation and one of the members suggested that perhaps the secretary would like to do the usual thing and paddle some of the pledges.

"Certainly," said "Brother" Pat, and picked up a paddle.

There was a mad rush among the freshmen for the honor of being paddled by the secretary of war.

It would take "big money" to buy those paddles.

PAMPA TOPICS OF OUR CITY

Honor thy father and thy mother.

The love of a good mother is a greater factor for lawfulness and good citizenship than all the laws that have been passed to legislate morality.

Better Than Laws

It is not hard to break a law, as the newspapers show every day in recording the events which take place throughout the country. But it is harder to break a mother's heart. Few good men can do it, and those who do so in the heat of passion live to curse the day they did it.

If there is one thing in a mother's life which transcends all else it is unselfishness. It is a mother's province to give life, to nourish it, and to send it forth into the world to do good. Wise is the mother who can command love and respect which will guide her offspring when she is cut of their presence and, perhaps, beyond earthly contact.

Complex Problem

It has never been easy to be a mother. It is even harder in this age to be a counselor, a pal, a guide to impious youth. Mothers are busy while trying to help their children meet the problems of this age. Unfortunately some mothers relate some of their most important duties to the teachers, the preachers, and to the neighbors. This mistake sooner or later is discovered, and the mother fights intensely for the welfare of her children. It is the mother who sacrifices in order that son and daughter may uphold the family dignity and appear in splendor. It is she and father who work and think and plan that the youngsters may improve upon the standard of living the parents enjoyed.

Mother's days have too long been given to calico, while mothers lay dying in nearby hospitals or in miserable huts for want of proper attention. The nation is full of anxious mothers today, many of them hungry. More than 16,000 American women die in childbirth each year. Medical authorities say that ten thousand of these could be saved by adequate maternity care.

Sacred Work

It is further estimated that thirty thousand of the hundred thousand babies who die each year in the first month of their lives could be saved. While such conditions as these exist, Mother's day should mean a time to look over each community to ascertain whether a mother is in want. There is certainly a strong appeal in Mother's day, aside from the usual one of tribute, and that is to remove suffering and death from this most sacred of human activities.

Do you know the state flower, bird, and tree? The Kiwanis club did not the other day, as a questionnaire showed. The flower is the bluebonnet, as many know. The bird is the mocking bird, and the tree is the pecan. All three are typical of Texas, but the Panhandle is so far away from the geographical center that the connection between the emblems and the state is barely noticed.

See the Palo Duro

Decision to open one section of the Palo Duro section of the state park and thereafter is a fortunate circumstance for which the Canyon chamber of commerce should be thanked. Many Panhandle should see this portion of the scenic wonder, and they should take to the canyons any guests who may be available. It is well to show visitors that Panhandle is not far from what very definitely is not wheat lands.

Bernard Shaw: "One of journalism's difficult problems is to eliminate the time lag—the inability to recognize that a thing has happened when it has happened. . . . Most people take about 20 years to realize that something has happened. The world has not yet realized that the Russian revolution has taken place. The British press has not yet found out that the Soviet union has come to stay. In consequence, we have thrown away one of the most magnificent commercial chances we can ever hope to see in our lifetime."

Violence Fostered

There is much truth in what Mr. Shaw says. At the same time, this government and most other nations will reluctantly recognize a regime which has for its purpose the overthrow of the commerce of the so-called capitalistic nations. Moreover, the methods of violence sponsored by soviet agencies in this country recently have made recognition almost impossible. Russian leaders have virtually robbed their people in order to spend money in the United States and elsewhere to cause trouble for nations which have not extended recognition.

Americans hired to make Russia an industrial and agriculturally efficient nation are beginning a disgruntled trek homeward. Disgrist is their chief characteristic. Their promises of big salaries and good living conditions were not kept. They report a reign of misery and disorder under Soviet rule. They also declare that in order to offer a stimulus to workers that rewards and ownership once hated as significant elements of capitalism are being restored.

TO COLLEGE OR NOT?

It's again getting time for graduation 'sermons,' now that schools and colleges are preparing to hold commencements, and those who will receive the diplomas must undergo that period in which they're told how to be successful.

Two prominent educators write this month about the school and the boy, the one classifying the boys who should not go to college and the other counseling parents on the kind of school to which they should not send particular kinds of boys.

Dean Loomis, of New York university, warns parents against permitting their sons to choose a college on a basis of social contacts or athletics. Too many parents forget that colleges and universities are not like so many peas in a pod. The school must be fitted to the student, not the student to the school.

Frederick Winsor, veteran educator of boys, concerns himself with the boy who should not seek his "higher education" at a college or university. He calls this type the "unintelligent" and expresses great admiration for him. For this type he would like to see better facilities for his preparation for life and less effort exerted for preparing him for college.

His studies and deductions bear out the proposition that the ability to get through college does not mean the boy is in his right element, any more than that all who "flunk" are wasting their time. In the final analysis, sending a boy or girl to college is pretty much of a gamble. Neither the raw material nor the semi-raw material can be accurately assayed until the process is completed. THE HUMBLE PENNY

A business man in the middle west deplores the careless and even scornful attitude of this generation toward the penny. We are contemptuous of this humblest of coins, he avers. People drop pennies and don't bother picking them up. They deliberately leave them on counters in stores and banks. This merchant, a self made man who came up through hard work and practice of thrift, expressed not only dismay but indignation at such prodigality.

Well, there are not many penny-wise people today. Time was when a penny was a penny and women counted it. A penny today will purchase practically as much as it did 50 years ago, but where there was one penny then there are a hundred now. People spend recklessly. There is an extravagance in this country which startles visitors from the old world. We are the freest spenders on earth and are proud of it. A nation of tightwads would be deplorable, but a nation of spendthrifts is almost as bad.

The humble penny deserves to be treated with respect. It takes only from two to five of them to buy a newspaper. The penny may be humble when compared with quarters and half dollars, but it merits a decent regard, not contempt or scorn. Habits of thrift are not easy to form these days. The education of no child is quite complete until he is taught the value of money, what it represents, how it may be used not unwisely but well.—Altus Times-Democrat.

FOX KNOCKS HOMER TO CUT DOWN MARGIN

PHILADELPHIA CREW TAKES FIRST OF BROWN SERIES

ST. LOUIS, May 9. (AP)—A rally in the eighth inning featured by a home run made by Fox, enabled the Philadelphia Athletics to take the first game of a series with the St. Louis Browns, 6 to 4 today.

The Browns were leading, 4 to 1, when Simmons singled in the eighth to bring in two runs. Then after two Athletics were on the bases, Fox clouted the ball to bring in the winning runs.

SHORT PUTT... slight tap with elbows in—must be smooth.

The Johnny Farrell putting form. He shows the swing for both short and approach putts.

APPROACH PUTT... long, free backswing for smoothness—stroke is a swing, not a hit.

BY JOHNNY FARRELL Former American Open Champion As Told to ALAN GOULD NO. 9. PUTTING

In putting it is essential to be well anchored in a comfortable position.

After getting a smooth stroke, with an easy follow through (for distance putting) it is just a matter of practice and getting the proper line.

There are, however, really two types of putting, one for short distances, the other for anything beyond 10 or 12 feet.

The short putt is more of a tap-stroke, but it should be made nevertheless with a smooth motion, using the wrists only and with the arms well anchored to the sides or hips.

I have a habit myself of anchoring my right elbow to the side to give steadiness.

The long putt is a swing. For accuracy I usually try to pick a spot eight or 10 feet from my ball, using this spot as a direction guide.

Any golfer will find this a big help in keeping to the proper line.

Putting is at least 80 per cent psychology. Some days the hole looks as big as a barrel, most any other part of the green, probably because the players happen to roll in a long one at the start or get a few close enough so that he acquires early confidence.

I see good players, as well asuffers tighten up on the greens, making stabs at the ball, when all they need to do is take a good breath and relax.

Too much time spent on the putting practice greens is as bad as none at all.

Tournament players make a mistake by indulging in putting practice, before play starts. Anyone who hasn't his putting touch by the time a tournament comes along won't find it on the practice greens.

I remember one event I entered a number of years ago at Youngstown, Ohio. I felt confident I had a good chance to win. Before it started, however, I got into a syndicate game on the practice green with a number of other pros. We battled each other for fully two hours. When I went out to play I found I had left all my putts back there in practice. I finished nowhere.

Ten or 15 minutes' practice before any match or round of tournament play usually is plenty.

Tomorrow—Take the Penalty

Ed Ronkin, Maryland basketball star, counted 11 goals in four games for the old line lacrosse team.

Bill McIlwee, a right-handed outfielder on the Maryland baseball team two years ago, is a winning left-handed pitcher this season.

Rodriguez, high school runner of Tampa, Fla., broke an eight year old record by running a mile in 44.4 seconds at the state track meet held at Gainesville.

READY TO CHALLENGE ATLANTIC

Ruth Nichols scorned the drawing room for the thrills of flying, and now, with a number of women's aviation records to her credit, is planning a flight alone across the Atlantic.

DARING DEBUTANTE SOON WILL FLY LINDBERGH TRAIL ALONE

RUTH NICHOLS' LIFE IS ONE OF NUMEROUS THRILLS

NEW YORK, May 9. (AP)—Whirling propellers beckoned Ruth Rowland Nichols from the drawing room to a career in the skies — and she's glad of it.

Already she has left a trail of broken records replaced by the new ones opposite her name in aviation's daybook.

Now she's casting her eyes hopefully toward Europe as plans for her trans-Atlantic hop advance.

To this New York social registerite and Junior League, flying was a new and appealing sport.

She took to it as she had to tennis, polo and pulling an oar on the crew at Wellesley, from which she was graduated in 1924. They remember her there as college equestrienne champion.

First Ride in 1919
Her first plane ride back in 1919 — she was only 18 then — cast the die of her career.

During her student days at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., she visited Atlantic City and there paid Eddie Stinson $10 for an air trip.

Stinson threw in a few loops for good measure, just to give her her money's worth. Thenceforth she was air-minded.

Studying aviation under Capt. Harry Rogers in Miami, she made her first solo flight in a hydro-aeroplane in 1923.

In 1927 the United States department of commerce gave her one of the first two transport licenses issued to women, and the first mechanic's license to go to one of her sex.

When she made a non-stop trip from New York to Los Angeles three years ago, she declared that women have a place in the air.

Furthering this conviction, she flew 12,000 miles over the United States the next year promoting the establishment of aviation country clubs. She visited 96 cities in 46 states on this tour, and had not a single forced landing.

Sets New Records
Within the past six months, she has established new women's records for the New York-Los Angeles and return trips, and passed the altitude and speed records previously set by her sister fliers.

Her only crack-up occurred in the first women's transcontinental air derby. She has never been injured.

Flying is her business and she has been self-supporting while carrying it on. In 1927 she was sales promotion manager of a large airplane manufacturing company. At present she is aviation editor of a news reel.

She has never owned a plane. For her forthcoming venture she is expected to use the same Lockheed-Vega plane that has brought her all her present records. It was loaned her by Powell Croley Jr., Cincinnati radio manufacturer.

Miss Sadie Ellis and Mrs. J. P. West spent Friday in Amarillo.

OUTINGS ARE ATTENDED BY FRESHMEN AND SOPHOMORE CLASSES OF LOCAL SCHOOL

TWO HUNDRED FIFTY YOUNG PEOPLE PRESENT FOR PICNICS DURING LAST WEEK; ARE CLIMAXING EVENTS FOR YEAR

With commencement not far ahead, students of the Pampa high school are now attending their climactic social events of the year. The Junior-Senior banquet is set for Friday evening at the Schneider hotel, while both the freshmen and sophomores enjoyed lively picnics during the closing days of the last week.

Committees, under the general direction of Frances Finley, junior class president, are planning details of the banquet. The junior sponsors, Mrs. Lucille Massa, Miss Josephine Cariker, and Miss Zenobia McFarlin, are supervising the event. It is planned to entertain about 100 persons, including faculty members.

Sam Braswell, editor and publisher of the Clarendon News, will be principal speaker or the occasion. A few of the school officials also will be called on for short talks, and a musical program will be given.

The event is to be formal.

125 at Picnic
One hundred twenty-five freshmen left the high school Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, going in automobiles to a spot beyond Hoover for a gay outing. The event was very informal, and hikes in the canyons furnished the chief diversion.

Later winners were roasted and cold drinks served. The group made more than $56 at its hamburger stand.

Sophomores Play
A half-holiday was given the sophomore class Thursday, this being to reward them for their efforts in earning more money than any other class at the recent high school carnival. The group made more than $56 at its hamburger stand.

The sophomores met at the school at 1 o'clock and went in automobiles to the Mel Davis ranch, where games were played and boating enjoyed. A lunch was served to 120 persons between 5 and 6 o'clock, and the crowd returned to the city just before sundown.

Sponsors of the class are Mrs. Jimma Alexander, Miss Ethel Rice, and Miss Addie Lee Smith.

LIVING ROOM WINNERS ARE NOW CHOSEN

Mrs. J. T. Blakney of Alhambra and Mrs. Homer Taylor of Wayside were judged first place winners in the living room contest which has just closed for Gray county home demonstration club members.

The rooms were divided into two classes. Mrs. Blakney's being chosen best among those improved with less than $50, and Mrs. Taylor's best among those improved with more than $50. Miss Ruby Seal, home economics teacher of McLean, was judge.

The winning rooms will be entered in a district contest and will be judged by Miss Sallie F. Hill, district home demonstration agent, May 22.

Cheerful Coverings For Floors Made Of Gunny Sacks
BEAUMONT, May 9. (AP)—Gunny-sacks found in barns, under sheds and on fences are being utilized by home demonstration club women of Jefferson county to make cheerful floor coverings for their homes, while cast-off silk hose and underwear are being converted into mats for use on the furniture. The plan is to have 100 rugs and mats completed by June 6 when the clubs will celebrate an achievement day. Toward this end 400 rugs and 20 mats are already approaching completion, the home agent, Miss Jessie Murdock, reports.

MAY GARDEN HINTS GIVEN BY HOME DEMONSTRATION AGENT
EARLY BEETS, PINTO BEANS ARE DISCUSSED; WARM WEATHER VEGETABLES LISTED

By MISS MYRTLE MILLER, Home Demonstration Agent.

1. Farm Wife—I have had trouble in getting early beets; they make big tops but the beets are too little for use.

Home Agent—There are several seeds in each seed pod that come up and make a small clump of plants. To have early beets thin the plants when they are three or four inches high, leaving two to four inches of space between plants.

2. Farm Wife—What variety of beets is best for canning? The beets that I had last year had little white rings through the meat that disfigured them.

Home Agent—The Detroit Blood Red variety is best for canning, although it does not yield as heavily as the Crosby Egyptian variety.

3. Farm Wife—Can I grow Pinto beans in my garden and use them as green string beans before they get ripe?

Home Agent—In the more arid sections of our state Pinto beans will grow better than true green beans. Of course, Pinto beans are more stringy than true green beans but they are heavy bearers and very early.

4. Farm Wife—In case I want to grow enough Pinto beans to dry how can I keep the weevils from damaging them?

Home Agent—When the beans have matured on the plants harvest them and allow them to dry by spreading them in shallow trays in the sun for a week. Then heat them to 127 degrees for 10 minutes to kill the weevils in Canyon.

Members voted unanimously to add the following goal for the club: Work toward the extermination of flies, by trapping and destroying all breeding places, also urge disposal of all garbage, burial or cremation of all dead fowls and stock, immediately.

All members worked on finishing the club rug. Ten rugs are being made now.

Miss Rose Bohr assisted the hostesses in serving an enjoyable lunch of pie and coffee to Mesdames Gus and Paul Davis, P. F. Britten, R. J. Bohr, T. E. the weevil eggs laid on them and store in a tight container.

5. Farm Wife—Do you think I can make more plantings of vegetables this late in the season?

Home Agent—By all means make additional plantings of such vegetables as bush beans, mustard, radishes, lettuce, and spinach. Your carrots, beets, and parsnips will not likely go to seed and can be used for a good many weeks yet.

6. Farm Wife—How often should I cut asparagus? It is growing faster than we can consume it.

Home Agent—Asparagus should be cut at least every other day. For tips of best quality do not let any of the shoots grow up to make a plant until the cutting season is over.

7. Farm Wife—My tomato plants have been set back by the cold, wet weather. What can I do to them to make them grow off quickly?

Home Agent—Apply one to two tablespoonfuls of nitrate of soda of ammonium sulphate to each plant, working it into the soil within a radius of eight inches of the plant.

8. Farm Wife—What warm weather vegetables can I plant now?

Home Agent—Cucumbers, squash, okra, New Zealand spinach, eggplant, and peppers should all be planted within the next week. It is not too late to plant some early sweet corn that will come along several weeks before field corn will be ready for use. Golden Bantam and Evergreen are good varieties.

Vegetables

Italian Broccoli is making a place and name for itself in future years in almost every garden where it was tried this year. This plant is hardy, grows rather rapidly, and "sure does make good eating."

Parsley is slighted in most every garden. A nickel package of seed will furnish enough plants to garnish every meat dish or bowl of potato salad that goes on the table this summer. Let's "dress up" the dishes by planting a few feet next to the fence. Soak the seed in warm water for two days and plant. Extra Curled, Dwarf or Moss Curled are good varieties.

Hot weather makes head lettuce go to seed quickly.

Farm Wife—My lettuce that I planted in my fall garden has headed nicely, but is now going to seed. Can I plant more lettuce this late in the season?

Home Agent—It is too late to plant head lettuce, as hot weather makes this type of lettuce go to seed quickly. You can, however, plant some of the leafy varieties that will furnish fresh lettuce for salads until mid-summer. Black-seeded Simpson and Boston Curled are good varieties to plant now.

NEW BUICK EIGHTS

... an Owner Service Policy making generous provision for owner satisfaction

The faith of men and women in the Buick car becomes even more deeply rooted when they realize how generously Buick provides for owner satisfaction.

When you buy a new Buick Eight, your dealer hands you a written Owner Service Policy. It specifies such advantages as free replacement of parts, with no charge for labor, under the terms of a very liberal warranty—and free inspection and adjustment after 500 miles and after 1500 miles.

You may change your residence, or tour anywhere in the U. S. or Canada, and still share these benefits through the nearest Buick dealer.

This policy is not only your guarantee of satisfaction, but also an assurance of Buick's basic excellence. The new Buick Eight is, in fact, so sound and good that it wins more than 50 out of every 100 sales of the 14 eights in its price class.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list price when comparing motor car values.

HAIR WITH THE GLINT OF YOUTH

You've washed it frequently, you've tried innumerable shampoos... yet your hair is still a "problem." Lustreless, brittle hair, a dry or an oily scalp is not so much the result of lack of care as it is lack of PROPER care.

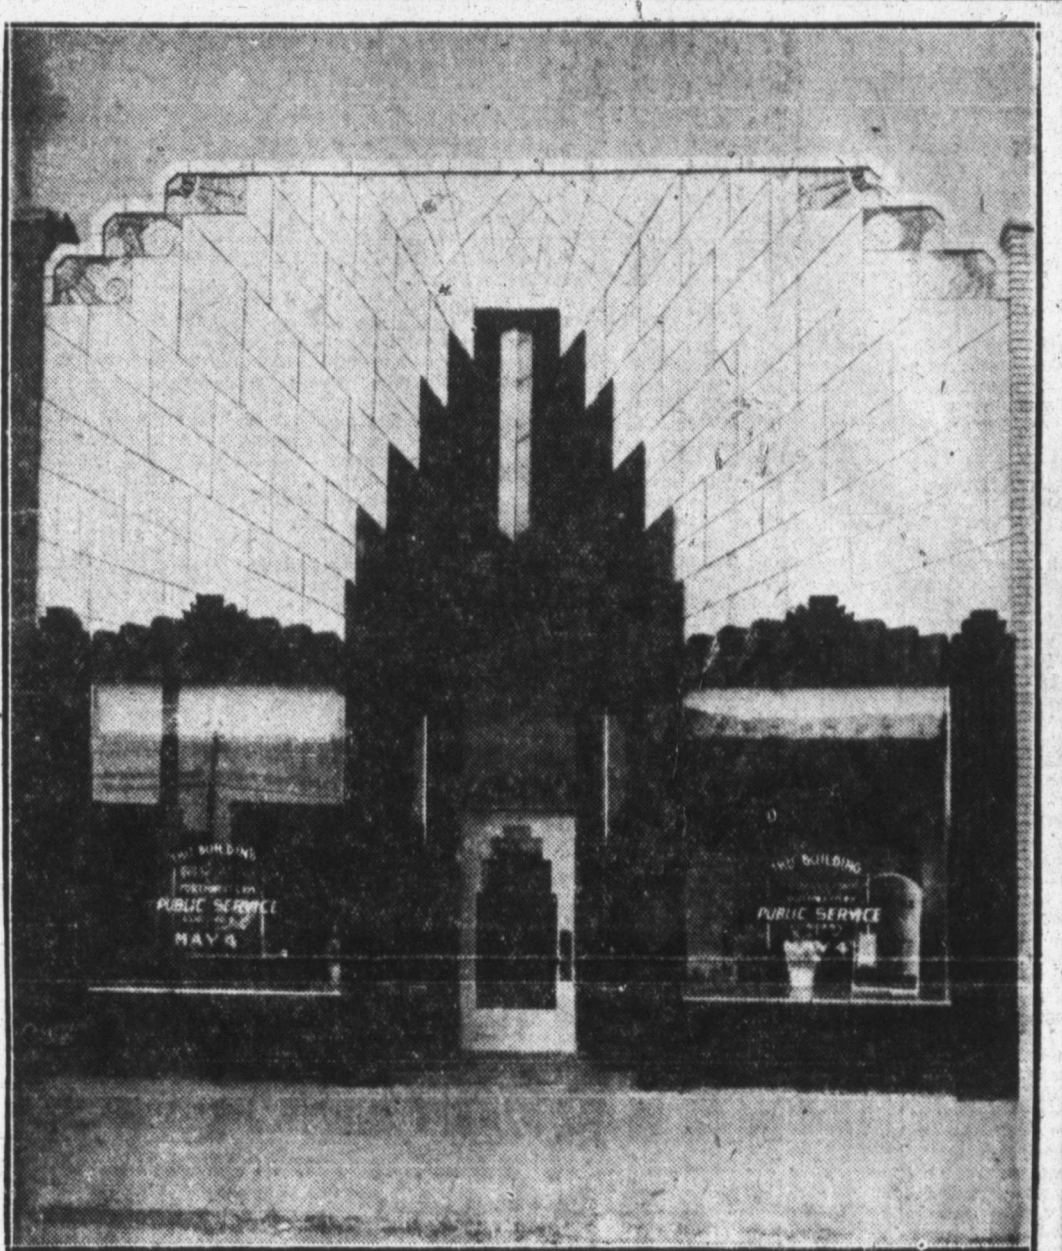

Such a condition can not be overcome by haphazard methods. Individually prescribed treatments offer the only possible remedy. At the Georgetown, a qualified hair and scalp expert will make her diagnosis after careful examination. Future treatments will follow the dictates of these suggestions. Hence, we will overcome scalp deficiencies by scientific, not haphazard means.

MORE EVIDENCE OF Pampa's Permanency

The new Gordon building at 209 North Cuyler street, occupied by the Southwestern Public Service Company, which completes the 200 block with modern brick structures.

At this time several fine brick structures are being erected in the business district, among them being the splendid Combs-Worley building at the corner of Russell and Kingsmill, the Guyer building at the intersection of North Cuyler and Francis, to be occupied by the Texas Garage, Inc., the Paul Kasishke building, where West Foster meets Somerville, and will be occupied by the Pampa Lubrication Service Station.

With these three buildings being erected in the business district and many new residences under construction there can be no doubt as to whether Pampa will continue on the upward trend to permanency. Soon the Denver railroad will be winding its way into Pampa, new industries will locate here, and if those with pessimistic minds will dismiss the thought of depression and boost for better times Pampa will continue to be the best city in the Panhandle.

PECOS COUNTY RESORTS HAVE FINE APPEAL

PEOPLE OF ALL PARTS OF NATION VISIT THERE

SANTA FE, May 9. (SP)—Visitors to Pecos, New Mexico, will find many new sites occupied and beautiful buildings either under way or already completed. Many of these are the summer homes of people from other states. Others are business places designed to care for the needs of the tourist who is attracted to this wonderful mountain region.

Good highways into this section have already brought about the development of the upper Pecos into one of the nation's most beautiful playgrounds. Extending up to the main river for 20 miles one may find the cottages of all who are prominent in business life outside this state. The Hibbords, Morrises, Fishers, et al. of Dallas, Texas; the Poeders and Bakets of Oklahoma City, and the Mrs. Olive Gersbach of Lancaster, Pa., who has these homes are in what is known as the Holy Ghost canyon. A few miles below the Holy Ghost one comes to the beautiful estate of Lindsay Nunn of Amarillo, Texas—sold now with New Mexico that he and his associates have added many New Mexico papers to their extensive news chain.

Farther down is another estate, that of Tom W. Wyles, of Chicago, Ill. This property, like the Nunn's, is one of the show places along the stream. The Wyles have been coming to the Pecos for many years and it is now rumored that they may establish year-long residence here.

The Harrisons at the Pecos post-office on the highway and gateway up the river have now completed and are opening for business one of the most unique places to be found along any line of tourist travel. Spacious and of Spanish and Indian type, the building is designed to lend every comfort and convenience to the traveler. The place will also be stocked with a general line of travel needs including camp supplies, fishing tackle, etc. At Harrison's Casanova they will be glad to supply the traveler with any information concerning the Pecos or direct one to desirable camping places along their river frontage where no charge is made for transient occupancy.

Besides the out-of-state summer settlers we find on the Pecos the cottages of many Albuquerque and Santa Fe people. Some of these really pioneered the region since their homes were built and occupied long before automobile travel was offered. Indeed there are many who have moved their cottages by the success of horses or mule teams to 20 to 25 years ago and are now able to reach their cottages after business hours either from Albuquerque or Santa Fe for the evening meal.

There is perhaps no place in the southwest where relaxation from business or mountain diversion is offered more cheaply than on the Pecos. The reason is the easy access now over the modern highways and the hotel, home or camping facilities at reasonable cost. If visiting at one of the river resorts one finds every modern comfort as in the city. As mentioned the Windsor Mountain View, Irvine on the Pecos and the Valley Ranch where each additional housing construction is necessary to take care of the increase in guest registration. In talking with the proprietors of these places one finds that some are already booked to capacity for the coming season.

The Pecos is, of course, one of the best trout fishing streams in the state. On account of the state hatchery being located on this river the same has a close and efficient supervision from the game department of the state. Experience has proven that the annual replacement from the hatchery easily offsets the removal through the open season catch.

The wily fisherman may feel assured that he can get the statutory limit each season on the Pecos.

LOVE STRONG

Edith Mason, Chicago Opera company star, divorced him for another man, but Gipsy Palacios, conductor, loved her so much that he made her new husband. Mr. Mason, a member of the board of directors of the Panhandle-Plains Historical society, is greatly encouraged by the action of the house of representatives in giving its approval to the appropriation of the $25,000 to be matched by an equal amount by the people at the Panhandle for the erection of a museum for the society.

Historical Society May Obtain Funds From Legislature

CANYON, May 10. (Special)—President J. A. Hill of Canyon Teachers college, who is a member of the board of directors of the Panhandle-Plains Historical society, is greatly encouraged by the action of the house of representatives in giving its approval to the appropriation of the $25,000 to be matched by an equal amount by the people at the Panhandle for the erection of a museum for the society.

The next big task upon members of the Historical society is raising the remainder of the money in order to make the museum a reality. L. F. Sherry, field secretary of the society, states that there is already in sight $17,000 of the $25,000 needed to match the legislature's appropriation and that another $3,000 has been tentatively promised.

Mr. Sherry added, "Should we be fortunate enough to receive financial aid from the legislature, we will have something that will enrich the entire Panhandle when we get the building erected. We have a collection of relics that we have never before been able to display that will surprise even one. It is almost impossible to realize the amount of valuable we now have and the special private collections that are being held for us until we can get a building of our own."

"We have received much communication from several museum foundations recently who want to aid us in carrying on our work. This section of the nation has not been touched by any other organization and we have a wealth of material that has never been imagined by the majority of the people. With the help of Floyd V. Stuber of Amarillo, we will unearth much valuable material when we have some place to put it."

Roberts Test For Oil Near Miami

MIAMI, May 9. (Special)—Drilling at 1,500 feet the Travis No. 1 Joe Cummings situated two and one-half miles from Miami has encountered no difficulty to date. The well is logging satisfactorily, drillers report. Drilling is with rotary tools.

The test is a rank wildcat, being more than 20 miles from production. It is the second test in Roberts county. The first location is in the center of the county and has been drilled below the mile depth. Several showings of oil were encountered but not in paying quantities.

ROTARY TO ELECT

Those nominated include: Clyde W. Warwick, president; Oscar Gano, vice-president; Earl Robbins, secretary-treasurer; Harry Brown, Travis Shaw, and J. W. Klein Schmidt, directors.

MAD MARRIAGE

LAURA LOU BROOKMAN, AUTHOR OF "HEART HUNGRY," ETC.

Gipsy McBride, 19-year-old New York typist, marries Jim Wallace the day after she meets him at the home of her wealthy cousin, Ann Trowbridge. Gipsy has been fitted by Alan Crosby, just returned from a year and a half in Paris studying art. Wallace's fiancée has broken their engagement to marry a richer man.

Jim and Gipsy go to Forest City where Jim has a thriving law practice. His relatives snub Gipsy. Alan Crosby writes to her but she returns the letters unopened. Marcia Loring, Jim's former fiancée, marries Brock Phillips, millionaire's son.

Marcia passes and Brock Phillips is killed in a fall from a horse. Marcia returns to Forest City. She consults Jim's largest financial adviser and later tells him her marriage to Phillips was a mistake. She declares she cares only for him. Jim tries to remain loyal to Gipsy but sees Marcia frequently. Gipsy is aware of the situation and writes. Marcia comes to see and asks her to give up Jim. Gipsy refuses.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XL

It happened in the casual way of so many heartbreaks. Gipsy was in Martin's, the town's largest department store on Thursday afternoon. The air outside was sultry but there was no sun. Men and women, mopping their brows and pausing to echo each other's complaints about the heat, wondered if the clouds would bring rain and conclude it was unlikely. There seemed to be no end to this scourge of hot weather.

Gipsy had hated to come down town. She made the trip because of a special sale of electric fans. They were cheap and a fan in each of the bedrooms would make the night less intolerable.

She made the purchase and was giving the clerk the address when she saw Abbie Manley at the next counter.

"What are you doing out on such a day as this?" she asked. "Gipsy! I haven't seen you for days—not since you and Jim were out at the house that evening. My dear, I'm worried. Look at me! Did you ever see such a sight?"

"I'm exactly the same. I wished after I got on the car that I hadn't tried to come in today, but I wanted two of those electric fans. Did you see them?"

Abbie, even in hot weather, was energetic. She nodded her head vigorously. "Bought three of them," she announced. "Look, do you think this enamel will chip off? The price is so low I'm wondering. I've already said I'd buy it."

She was holding up a large green mixing bowl. Gipsy inspected it carefully. "It looks perfectly all right to me," she agreed. "Take it. It's a bargain."

They chatted until the transaction was completed and then wandered away from the household department. Abbie paused to apply a handkerchief to her flushed cheeks. "Let's go down to the fountain room," she suggested. "It's actually cool there and I feel the need of a pineapple soda."

Gipsy agreed. They took the elevator to the first floor and passed innumerable counters until they reached a large room with green and silver walls and shining black tables. There was a soda fountain crossing one side of the room, behind which boys in white coats and caps were working. Waitresses in short green and white dresses moved among the tables.

"Oh, it is cool!" Gipsy exclaimed. "Blessedly cool!"

Abbie led the way to a table in the corner. Women and girls, a dozen in all, were sitting at the neighboring tables. Some artificial, unseen device supplied a cool, gentle breeze. The waitress returned and set their orders before them.

Gipsy took a sip from the tall frosted glass and sighed. "Our day has been ruined by the heat. Do you think it can last much longer?"

"It's hard to tell," Abbie said philosophically. She took a spoonful of ice cream and pineapple. "By the way, I said I hadn't seen you since you and Jim were out at the house but I did. I saw you at the Pine Grove Inn last Monday. I was with old Mrs. Reynolds and she was in a hurry so I couldn't come over and say hello."

"But I wasn't at the Pine Grove Inn," Gipsy began.

"Of course you were. Didn't I see you? You had on a blue dress and your back was toward me, so of course you didn't see me, but I recognized Jim. It was about two o'clock."

Gipsy's lashes were lowered. "I remember now," she said softly. "I'd forgotten about Monday."

"When is Jim going on his vacation?" Abbie asked.

"It's not quite decided. Next month, I guess. He wants me to go away earlier—to the lakes. I think perhaps I will."

"With I could go with you," Abbie said enviously. "Charles is such a bear. He says if he can endure the heat down town I ought to be able to stand it at home. Won't let us go without him. We're going east in September. Isn't it disgusting to have to wait so late? Why—Gipsy, what's the matter with you?"

Gipsy remembered Frank Gibson very well now. He was the young man with whom Jim had accused her of flirting. There had been something about Gibson being co-responsible in a divorce case. Oh, yes, she remembered very well.

"Oh, I'd love to see the west coast," Gipsy told him. "Were you in California too?"

Gibson nodded. "I like Washington and Oregon better myself. Make the trip out there usually twice a year. Selling hardware is my business. He paused and grinned. "Not with a pack on my back, you understand. My firm sells to retailers."

Gipsy smiled. "I didn't think you carried a pack," she said.

"Speaking of the heat wave look at this!" Gibson held out one hand. Raindrops as big as five-cent pieces had begun to fall. "Well, I guess the stage is broken at last. You'd better come up on these steps! You'll get wet."

"It doesn't matter," Gipsy said. "I'm going to have to run to catch my car."

Gibson took her by the arm and led her under the shelter of the entrance to the drug store.

"You'd be drowned if you tried to catch a car now. Even a taxi. Besides, there's no need. My car is just around the corner and if you'll let me get it I'll drive you home."

Gibson's heart pounded as she waited. If it were anyone except Frank Gibson it would have been a perfectly natural procedure. Jim had practically declared she should never speak to Gibson. Well—Jim Wallace was not a person to give her orders. When the trim brown coupe drew up to the curb before the drug store the girl ran out to it. Gibson swung the door open and she stepped inside.

"Going to be hard to drive, isn't it?" she asked.

"Not bad. With such big drops the shower can't last long. Too bad because the ground needs the moisture—to say nothing of us suffering humans."

The glass at each side of the car was drawn down. Gipsy took a deep breath.

"Oh, the air is so much fresher," she exclaimed. "I love rain storms."

"Do you? Like them myself. Always have like to drive in the rain."

There was a pause and then Gibson spoke again. "It's still early."

He said with sudden enthusiasm. "Suppose instead of taking you directly home we swing out on the Somerset road? We can get a real breath of fresh air out there. What do you say? Shall we do it?"

CATTLE TRADE LIBERAL

KANSAS CITY, May 9. (AP)—Cattle trade around the 11 market circuit this week was marked by a continued liberal movement of fed steers and yearlings. Trade on killing classes was further depressed by a weakening in prices at eastern dressed beef markets. Current quotations on steers, yearlings and fat stock are steady to unevenly lower than a week ago, most points reporting losses of 25-50 on the better grades of steers. Demand was especially narrow for the in-between grades of steers scaling upward from 1200 lbs. Stocker and feeder trade was rather quiet with limited supplies on a steady to easier basis. Aggregate receipts of cattle were estimated at 197,000 as compared with 196,000 last week.

Fat lambs prices advanced 50¢-51¢ the fore part of the week but late trade was slow with practically all the gain erased on woolled skins and springers and clipper steady to 25¢ lower with last week's close. Mature killing classes of sheep are unchanged for the week. The supply of around 500,000 was 45,000 short of last week.

Total offerings of hogs were around 427,000 against 423,125 last week and 480,567 a year ago. After fluctuating from day to day values finished the week unevenly 10-35¢ lower than last Saturday.

Corn closed nervous, 1/2-2¢ advanced, wheat advanced to 1 1/2¢ up, oats a shade to 1/2¢ higher, and provisions showing 2 to 5¢ gains. Producers were reported unwilling to part with their small reserve supplies until it was definitely known that the new corn crop gave promise of an average yield.

Unwelcome rains were general over the corn belt, and temperatures low for this season, retarding germination and hindering field work, especially planting. Traders who were short of corn needed to meet future delivery contracts were among the most active purchasers.

European continental countries were reported by Liverpool as buying wheat freely, and some advices said Germany had taken 2,000,000 bushels of hard winter wheat. Another bullish factor was talk that rains during the last week in domestic spring wheat territory and in Canada had been too light to give adequate relief from drought, and that moisture would have to be heavy and frequent hereafter to make a good crop.

Oats were firmer as a result of corn strength.

Provisions had an upward slant with hog values and cereals. Closing indimities: Wheat, July 62 1/2-3/4, 64 1/2-3/4, Sept. 62 1/2, 63 1/2, 64; Dec. 62 1/2-3/4, 67 1/2-3/4, Corn, July 60 1/2-3/4, 62 1/2-3/4, Sept. 59 1/2, 60 1/2-3/4, Dec. 51 1/2-3/4, 53 1/2-3/4.

Mad Pursuit

Chapter 14

LOST HAPPINESS

Frances left the room with Jonathan and as Nora heard his steps retreating down the stairs she sat down on the bed, completely wretched.

She would leave tomorrow and never return. Nora knew all the signs of poverty that brought back to her the memory of her own wandering and homeless life. These people were like her father, poor, gay, hopeful, living in a mean little brick house, from which they might move next week.

Nora slipped off her wrinkled dress and pulled the collar jacket out of her bag. When she went into the bathroom she found Frances picking up strings wet towels, and small underclothes that were scattered about. The water splashed spasmatically into the tub. A limp curtain hung at the window and the walls were of wood painted white.

When she returned to the attic room Frances was "breading" thin blankets on the bed. Aunt Emily looked at Nora's wretched small face. Nora attempted to smile.

"Don't try to be too brave, dear," she said.

Nora looked back at her aunt with her magnificent beak of a nose, and the deep lines on either side of her mouth. The eyes held an unquenchable zest for life.

She could see how sorry for her she was.

"All at once Nora longed to pour herself out to this dark sweet woman."

"Do you remember my father?" Nora asked.

"I remember he was an exciting person, with a voice you never forgot," she said, smiling, as Nora's heart rushed out to her.

A small painted figure appeared at the door. Frances, daughter, Alice, stood looking at Nora.

"Are you the bride?" she asked.

"Alice, go right back to bed!" Frances said, rising. She scuttled off but the question still hung in the air. Nora began to talk with a breathless hush. She poured out the whole story, from the night when she had first seen Nicholas coming up the path in the moonlight until that last bitter night when she lay down alone. She spared herself nothing.

"I hated it all, all the worry and the borrowing and the running away. When Julian was going to be married I felt desperate. When he—"

she could not say Nicholas' name, "asked me to marry him I was so thankful. He said he'd bring me home. I was a little afraid of him. But those last days I liked him. I really liked him."

Frances was looking at her with something strange and puzzling in her eyes.

"You don't understand! You have to live it to understand. All ways to hide from people because you owe them money. I would have married anyone at all, who would have saved me from that!"

"But there is one thing that is killing me. If I had loved him I could have saved him, couldn't I? I would have known what he was going to do!"

Suddenly Nora regretted bitterly that she had told this dark quiet girl about herself. And then Frances said impulsively:

"You think I don't understand. But perhaps I do," Frances went on steadily. "I thought my husband loved me. But he ran off with another woman."

"Do you still love him?" Nora saw a tremor pass over the still body.

"Not now. Not any longer. That's all gone. I have the children. You didn't see Dickie, did you? He was in bed when you came. We were poor, you see, and it was a fearful struggle. Alice was a delicate little thing and always sick. There were doctor's bills, and I was deadly tired all the time. Sometimes," Frances said, smiling oddly, "I used to be so tired by six o'clock, I would cry. I was 25 then, she went on reflectively as though she were speaking of someone long dead. "I could always see David coming home and the house quiet and peaceful, the children asleep and a delicious dinner smoking hot on the table."

"But as it was—" she smiled again. "Oh how young I was then! If I had it to do all over again—but I haven't." Her dark eyes brooded and then she looked up at Nora. "I never told this to anyone before. But the thing is, these days go by and something happens to you and you begin to be happy again. And you have something that you want dreadfully, just ahead, as you used to want money and all the other things," Frances ended on a breath.

Nora lay very still. What was that thing that Frances had found? The kind of happiness that swept over her sometimes under the open sky? Would she ever be happy that way again?

"You will be, you will be," Frances whispered, bending over her as though she understood.

Frances turned out the light and stood before the window pulling up the shade so that she could see the stars. How small and insignificant they were, their minute problems etched against the night sky. All the hot turmoil, the unrest, was quiet. When she turned back and bent over Nora she saw in the pale light that Nora was asleep.

The sunlight was sliding in through white blinds when Nora woke next morning. She felt as though she were waking out of a dark dream into this unfamiliar room.

"Someone had come tiptoeing in to open the blinds. It was her cousin Halie."

"Did you sleep well?" she asked. "I feel different—as though 'for the first time I was real."

Halie had stopped before the painting that Nicholas had given Nora.

"Did your father do that?" Halie asked.

"Nicholas did it," Nora said in a low voice.

The sunlight seemed to pour from the picture, to touch the small glittering blues, the brushed earth floor, the lines of the old peasant's dress. Halie stood looking deeply at the picture, her thin brown hands clasped before her.

"How happy he must have been to do that!"

"He was the most unhappy person I ever knew," Nora said.

She got out of bed and turned away. "Take it away, please. I can't bear to see it."

Halie stood looking at her with pity and understanding.

Halie Durant was a woman of strong feeling shut into a twisted shell of pain. She was not afraid of pain; she had met it too often and too slowly. But each day it must be conquered afresh. For as she stood looking at Nora she was frankly envious of that young strong body, the slim white rounded legs, the delicate wrists and splendid throat. To have a body like that so free and beautiful!

Nora said, "I have to go out to his people this afternoon. Do you think they'll like me?"

"Why do you care?"

"I care more than anything else in the world!"

Halie reflected that she would not like to be young again. It was the unhappiest time of your life. You suffered too much, expected too much, without either the philosophy or wisdom to guard you.

Seven Cars Are Stolen in Week

A 1929 black Chevrolet coupe was stolen early last night from in front of the First Methodist church. The loss was reported to city officers by H. J. Suttle, employee of the Magnolia gasoline plant. An Oklahoma license was covered by a 1931 Texas license, he told officers.

The loss of the car brought the total to seven during the last two weeks. Three have been recovered.

Capture Robber After Jail Break

HASTINGS, Neb., May 9. (AP)—James Thomas, 33, convicted bank robber, today escaped from jail here was recaptured, sentenced to 25 years in prison and placed in the state penitentiary at Lincoln.

Within 12 hours after Thomas of Amarillo, Texas, saw his way to freedom, he was in prison. His escape was discovered at 3:15 a.m., by night jailer Charles Sherman. Sheriff Crosson immediately spread the alarm. Radio stations broadcast the news and Nebraska and Kansas officers were requested to join the search.

When the court house was opened this morning Deputy County Treasurer Julius Ponessa found Thomas hiding behind some boxes on a shelf eight feet above the floor in his office. Officers rushed to the room and commanded the fugitive to surrender.

President Hoover At Rapidan Camp

ORANGE, Va., May 9. (AP)—The activities of the White House were transferred today to President Hoover's Rapidan fishing camp.

Leaving the White House early in the morning, President Hoover brought with him Secretary Hurley, Assistant Secretary Payne, the war department, and Chairman Wood of the house appropriations committee with a view to conferring on possible avenues of saving in the war department.

Shortly after arriving at his camp the president called the war department officials to his cabin and asked them to confer among themselves during the morning and report back to him at another conference in the afternoon.

Policeman Slayer Confesses Guilt

NEW YORK, May 9. (AP)—Francis Crowley, confessed slayer of a policeman, raised his head from a hospital pillow today and signified to a black-robed judge that he wanted to die quickly.

"How do you plead?" demanded County Judge Smith, who had come to Farnau county hospital for arraignment for the first degree murder.

"Guilty," murmured the wounded youth after a look at detectives standing grimly about his bed.

The judge said he could not read the plea and evidence must be presented in court. He appointed Charles R. Weeks to defend Crowley and set the trial for Monday.

ELECTED PRESIDENT

AUSTIN, May 9. (AP)—Miss Marjorie Nelson, editor of the Aggie, high school newspaper at Sam Houston State high school, Houston, was today elected president of the interscholastic league press association, sponsored by the University of Texas and including all high school newspapers in the state.

SCIENTIFIC—

that losses, as a result of the presence of this pest, have been far greater than supposed.

"Mr. Jones found that wire worm larvae are most abundant where land has been planted continuously in wheat and where the soil was medium dry. Examinations were made of more than 200 soil samples in the vicinities of Plainview, Canyon, Amarillo and Pampa. An average of 33 worms per square yard was found in seven fields near Canyon. At Amarillo, 20 worms per square yard were found; at Pampa 18; and nine at Plainview. Heavy rains when the insect was in the adult stage caused the death of large numbers of the beetles. From three and one-half to four and one-half inches of rain fell at Amarillo, Pampa and Plainview last June, and this probably had considerable influence in preventing a heavier fall infestation. Less than two inches of rain was recorded in Canyon at the same time.

"Where the land had been in row crops, even following the blowing away of wheat in spring, there was little or no infestation in fall. Clean summer fallow and use of row crops in the heavily infested fields is beneficial for reducing wire worm injury. The practice of dry planting in the fall is to invite less in infested fields. Where accessible, plowing machinery should be used that will aid germination by making the moisture available. No seed treatment is known that will kill false wire worms."
