Nation mourns death of a civil rights giant

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Colleagues, politicians and scholars today mourned the death of Thurgood Marshall, the retired Supreme Court justice many said embodied the struggle for civil rights.

President Clinton said he was "deeply saddened" by Marshall's death from heart disease Sunday, calling the 84-year-old jurist "a giant in the quest for human rights and equal opportunity."

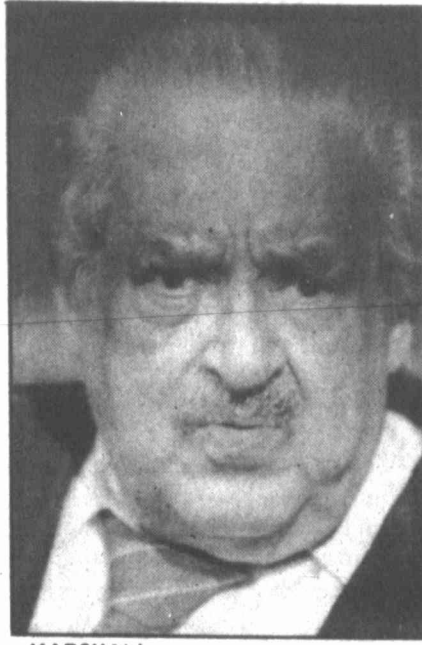

"Thurgood Marshall will be remembered as a leader, as a fighter, as a shepherd. This man was there when we needed someone to fight for civil rights," Rep. John Lewis, D-Ga., said today on "CBS This Morning." "He was a wonderful man, he inspired people, he stood tall and he spoke in a strong voice."

Vernon Jordan, a civil rights leader who headed Clinton's transition team, called Marshall a friend and a mentor. He said he was a youngster when he first heard Marshall speak in Atlanta.

"It was a memorable, awesome experience," Jordan said on the CBS program. "It was at that point that I said I wanted to be a lawyer like Thurgood Marshall."

"He changed the law in our country... in a very fundamental way," the Rev. Jesse Jackson said this morning on ABC's "Good Morning America."

Marshall, the first black on the Supreme Court, retired in 1991 because of ill health after 24 years on the court, but some scholars and friends suggested he may be best remembered as the lawyer who argued the historic 1954 school desegregation case and won.

MARSHALL

"He was the greatest lawyer in the 20th century," said Laurence Tribe, a constitutional scholar and professor at Harvard Law School. "He was to the law what Mahatma Gandhi and Martin Luther King were to social issues."

Retired Chief Justice Warren Burger, who shared the bench with Marshall for 17 years, spoke of "his great career as an advocate, when he literally took his life in his hands to try civil rights cases in the South."

All of the current justices praised Marshall and singled him out for his leadership in using the law to gain equal rights for all Americans, including blacks.

"All of us who served with him were the better for his counsel and his friendship," said Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, a conservative who often voted opposite from the liberal Marshall in court decisions.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor called Marshall "a true American hero... (who) left behind a legacy of hope for racial equality."

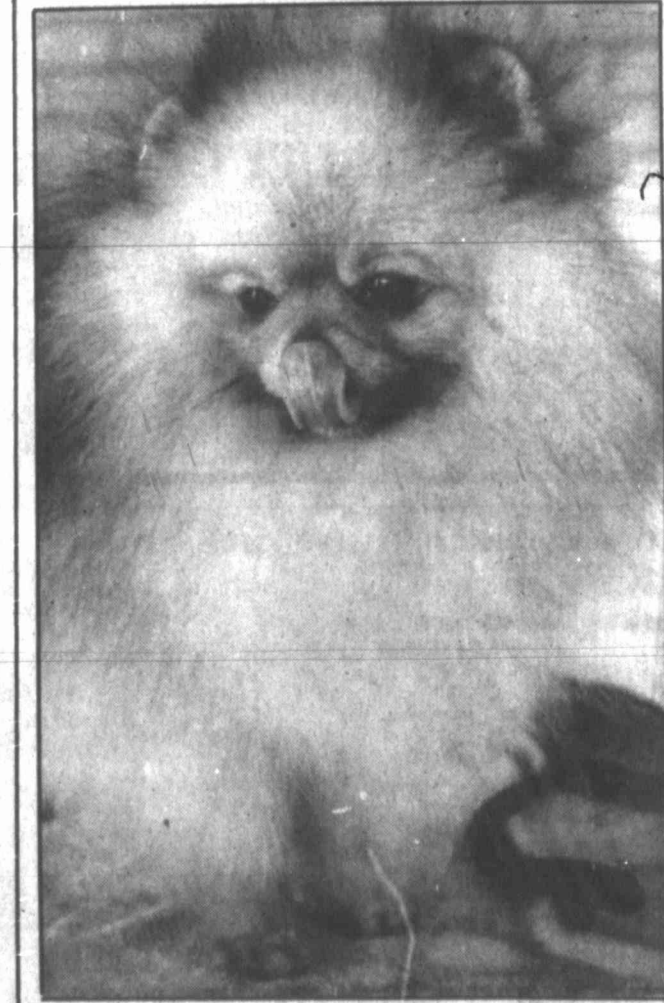

And Justice Clarence Thomas, a black who succeeded Marshall on the bench, called him "a great lawyer, a great jurist and a great man. The country is the better for his having lived."

Retired Justice William J. Brennan, a fellow liberal and for years Marshall's closest friend on the court, said his "commitment to making the Constitution a vehicle to protect the equal rights of all has no match in American history."

"I shall miss him terribly," Brennan added.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.,

Shooting incidents puts one in hospital

By MARTHA E. FLORES
Staff Writer

Two separate incidents involving firearms in public places occurred Saturday leaving one person injured.

A 14-year-old juvenile male was transported to Scenic Mountain Medical Center at about 10:30 p.m. from the Game Park, 1011 E. 11th Place, for treatment of a self-inflicted wound.

Early Big Spring Police Department reports indicate the juvenile accidentally shot himself in the groin area with a .25-caliber pistol. He is in stable condition at SMMC, said a hospital spokesperson.

No charges have been filed against the juvenile as of press time. "At this time, the case has not been assigned and no charges have been filed," said BSPD Sgt. Scott Griffin.

Less than an hour after the incident, police units responded to a disturbance call at 800 S. Gregg St.

The call resulted in a report of a round of gun fire released in the 7-11 convenience store parking lot. Big Spring residents Brent Newton and Brian Harbor filed a complaint against a known person who fired the round from a .22-caliber rifle.

The suspect has not been arrested and his name has not been released.

MLK Day now school holiday at Forsan ISD

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Forsan Independent School District trustees approved observance of Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday as a school holiday starting 1993-94, accepted a construction bid for a new tennis court and approved an amendment to a policy allowing removal of "inappropriate materials," during their January meeting, school officials said.

"The trustees felt it appropriate to recognize (King's birthday) as a school holiday," said in-coming superintendent George White. Trustees accepted a low bid for tennis court construction for the high school.

"Construction is scheduled to start in two weeks," White said.

A local policy allowing removal of "inappropriate materials" was amended to clear confusion about steps to take in the process.

"There are several processes to go through," he said. "Anyone interested in getting materials removed must go through the appropriate channels."

In other business, school board members rejoined the Texas Association of School Boards Legal Assistance Fund, discussed paving an additional parking area on school grounds, and discussed results of exit tests.

Local dog show draws more than 1,000 entries

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

The Big Spring Kennel Club hosted its January Dog Show on Saturday resulting in one of the highest entry of dogs, more than a thousand, in recent years and a best female honor for a local pet-owner, officials said.

"It was a very nice show," said Margaret Taylor, president of the Big Spring Kennel Club and show chairperson for the event. "We were so pleased because this was one of the highest entries that we've ever had." Last year, the event had about 800 entries.

Saturday's event showcased about 113 breeds from 30 states with two foreign dogs at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Local resident Carole Owen entered her six-month old Scottish terrier that won best female in classes of dogs not yet ranked as champion. The honor afforded Owen a point toward champion status; 15 points are needed to become a champion dog.

Taylor said one champion entry was present that had taken Best in Show at the Westminster Kennel Dog Show in New York in February 1992.

The wire-haired fox terrier from Florida was edged out for Best in Show locally by a pug from Utah.

The Big Spring Kennel Club, sponsors of the show, will use the proceeds of the local event for civic activities like pet-owner responsibility education, a scholarship for a veterinarian school student, donations of dogs for the deaf.

"The Big Spring Kennel Club is a non-profit organization involved in activities dealing with the Rescue Animal Shelters in Big Spring and Midland and volunteer work for the Humane Society.

Iraq names its suppliers

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq has turned over a list of most of the suppliers for its nuclear weapons program, complying partly with a key Security Council demand after balking for months, a top U.N. weapons expert said today.

Maurizio Zifferero, deputy chief of the International Atomic Energy Agency, said Iraq submitted what it said was a list of 90 percent of the foreign suppliers and agreed to answer questions about the list.

"As usual, we will press them" for the remainder, Zifferero said. • Please see IRAQ, Page 6A

Record lumber harvest expected

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — A pumped-up export market and a rebuilding surge prompted by Hurricane Andrew have caused East Texas loggers to cut nearly a record harvest.

Karl Lindberg, president of the Southern Forest Products Association in Kenner, La., predicts the Southern pine harvest will approach levels set 80 years ago when the South was the country's biggest source of lumber. The forests in the Northeast and Great Lakes areas were cut and the West had not yet come to prominence.

This year the South again is taking up the slack. Harvests are off in the Northwest at a time of increasing demand caused by an improving economy, increasing exports and new construction since last summer's onslaught of Hurricane Andrew.

Texas will share in the bounty because the state produces more than 1.7 billion board feet of lumber each year, Lindberg said. Texas' share of the industry, which employs some 61,000 workers including the production of pulp for paper, generates $6 billion a year in economic activity.

Southern pine this year will account for about one-third of all the lumber sold in the United States, up from about 20 percent in the early 1970s. Last year was the sixth straight year of increased production of Southern pine, Lindberg said. The 14 billion board feet forecast for 1993 comes close to the 14.8 billion board feet produced in 1913, he said.

In addition to strength in traditional markets, Southern pine has found new markets, including the West Coast where builders have begun using plywood and pressure-treated deck lumber from Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas suppliers.

Mexico also is a rapidly growing market for U.S. plywood and boards, particularly from Texas, having imported more than 19 million board feet of Southern pine lumber in the first half of last year. Its purchases more than tripled between 1990 and 1991, and may have grown that much from 1991 to 1992.

The South also exports major volumes of lumber to Spain, the United Kingdom, Venezuela and the Caribbean.

The stepped-up demand comes at a time when cutting has decreased in the Northwest as state and federal governments try to protect old-growth forests. Meanwhile, heavy rains and flooding in the Southeast temporarily have restricted logging there and reduced the output of lumber mills.

A year ago, heavy rains had forced some of Texas to shut down for a lack of logs, but supplies this year seem adequate despite wet weather, said Ron Hufford of the Texas Forestry Association in Lufkin.

Supplies of sawtimber — trees large enough to use as lumber — are a limiting factor, even for a big landowner such as Temple-Inland of Diboll, which owns 1.3 million acres in Texas and Louisiana and another 400,000 acres in Southeastern states.

Joe Sample, vice president for marketing in the company's building products group, doubts it will sell any more lumber in 1993 than in 1992 because it is limited by the amount of sawtimber available.

Enjoying the calm

After several weeks of cold weather, Saturday's warmth drew people to the outdoors. One place of activity in Big Spring was Comanche Trail Park, where Scott Talbert and son Steven, 2, have a picnic lunch. Both the playground and the softball field were kept busy also.

Student's death was result of gunshot wound to head

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN ANTONIO — A North Texas teenager who was first thought to have died in a traffic accident while visiting the city for a high school debate contest actually died of a gunshot wound to the head, police say.

Brian Michael Guynes, 19, of the Dallas suburb of Farmers Branch, was found in his car late Saturday after it careened through some construction barricades on an expressway, police said.

It was first reported as a traffic death, but police said Sunday that the victim had been shot in the left side of his head.

Officers said they have not been able to determine if Guynes was shot by someone pointing a gun out of a passing car or if he had run into some other foul play, such as an attempted carjacking.

"The car went through some construction barricades," homicide Sgt. Orlando Navarro said. "At first, we believed it was a traffic fatality. The traffic investigation officer noticed there was a head wound."

"He's got a gunshot wound to the left side of his head. As of today it's being carried as a murder, pending further investigation."

No weapon was found at the scene, Navarro said.

"There was a witness who saw the crash, but that was it," he said. "We are looking into the possibility of robbery as a motive because there was no money in his wallet," a detective said. "He was just a former student trying to help out the teacher and the students."

Guynes had accompanied eight participants of R.L. Turner High School's debate team from Carrollton to San Antonio, where he was a volunteer judge for a debate competition at Churchill High School.

The high school's debate coach, Gina Wilkinson, said Guynes, a 1992 graduate of the Carrollton school, had been invited to serve as a judge in the debate, which was sponsored by the Texas Forensic Association.

Debate squad members said Guynes was working at a Sears, Roebuck and Co. store and also at an aerospace parts distributorship to save money for college. Team members said he was attending the Brookhaven Community College in Farmers Branch and hoping to save enough money to enroll at the University of Texas at Austin and eventually earn a law degree.

Abducted baby returned home

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Police early today arrested a woman who posed as a nurse in a maternity ward to abduct a 2-day-old girl from her mother's arms. The baby, who suffered a variety of ailments, was returned to her mother.

"The baby's been found and the woman that took her has been found," FBI spokeswoman Marjorie Poche said early today. "That's about all we know at this point." The woman was arrested and the baby is back in the hospital.

Dallas police Detective Larry Heflin said, "We're fortunate that it appears in good condition."

Dallas police identified the woman arrested as Sherri Dale Owens. Officers said they planned to file kidnapping charges against her today.

Police said a family member called the FBI late Sunday and said a relative had brought home a baby, saying she gave birth to it earlier in the day at Baylor Medical Center. The relative was concerned because the woman had not looked pregnant.

Ms. Owens had worked as a housekeeper at Parkland Memorial Hospital, Jessie Blackwell, the woman's mother-in-law told The Dallas Morning News. Sheretta Lister, 19, was told her daughter needed to be taken for a blood test Sunday morning and she handed her over, said Parkland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman Esther Bauer.

About two hours later, a nurse arrived to tell the mother that the hospital was ready to discharge her and her child, Sheretha Aundria, and asked where the baby was, Ms. Bauer said.

The hospital issued an urgent plea for the baby's return because the infant needed medical treatment for an eye infection, a heart murmur and a blood ailment.

The FBI took the baby to Ms. Lister's hospital room for positive identification.

"She was of course thanking God that she had her baby back," Ms. Bauer said. "There's really no words to really say how she responded. She was more than delighted and happy and grateful."

The mother had described the abductor as a heavyset woman in her 40s, wearing hospital scrubs, a surgical cap and what appeared to be a hospital badge.

Employees said they had seen a woman matching the description in the maternity unit in the last two days. She was wearing the same hospital outfit and inquiring about newborns and discharge procedure.

"She was wearing what everyone else wears and had a badge, so no one had any reason to question her," Ms. Bauer said.

Federal prosecutors getting fit

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

TYLER — The U.S. Attorney's office for the Eastern District of Texas has purchased an estimated $49,000 worth of exercise equipment for its offices in Tyler, Beaumont and Sherman, a newspaper reported today.

The Tyler Morning Telegraph reported documents obtained under the Freedom of Information Act show that each of the offices installed almost $16,000 worth of equipment and spent almost $17,000 to install showers at the Tyler office alone.

The equipment is for use only by employees of the U.S. Attorney's Office, including 35 at Tyler, an estimated 45 in Beaumont and 13 in Sherman.

U.S. Attorney Bob Wortham of Beaumont said his attorneys do not receive many of the benefits given lawyers in the private sector, the equipment will last several years and the expense is justified.

Chili's owner recovering

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Dallas businessman Norman Brinker, who heads the company that owns the Chili's restaurant chain, has been recovering in a Florida hospital from injuries sustained in a polo accident last week.

Brinker, 61, was in stable condition in the intensive care unit of West Palm Beach's St. Mary's Hospital Sunday afternoon, said nursing supervisor Deidra Brown.

Brinker received trauma to the brain stem, which connects the brain and spinal cord, and lost consciousness Thursday afternoon when the horse he was riding during a polo match collided with another horse and fell on him.

Brinker, the chairman and chief executive officer of Brinker International Inc., also was injured in a 1978 polo accident.

"It is going to be a long process," said Dallas neurosurgeon Phillip Williams Jr., who examined Brinker this week and treated his 1978 injury. "I am confident that he is going to improve."

The businessman's family issued a three-word statement on Saturday that read, "We remain optimistic."

Warlord seeking U.S. assistance in disarm opponents

The ASSOCIATED PRESS
MOGADISHU, Somalia — One of Somalia's most powerful warlords said today that he has asked the U.S. military to disarm the fighters of another warlord who are violating a truce and attacking his forces in several regions.

Gen. Mohamed Farah Aidid told a news conference that he had informed U.S. special envoy Robert Oakley of the situation. He said the U.S.-led international task force "has the duty to intervene and disarm" his opponents since he has agreed to have his fighters lay down their arms.

A U.S. official today confirmed Aidid's complaint that Mohamed Said Hirsi — known as Gen. Morgan — had broken a cease-fire agreed to by 14 warring factions on Jan. 15 by attacking Aidid's forces and weapons' storage areas near Kismayu.

"We have passed a message to Morgan to pull back from the Kismayu area and from Birhane," a village about 30 miles from Kismayu where there was fighting on Sunday, said the official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

By his request, Aidid appeared to be trying to pull the United States beyond its original commitment of a humanitarian operation to secure Somalia to allow relief workers to travel around the country to feed the starving and tend to the ill.

Famine, civil war and lawlessness claimed the lives of 350,000 Somalis last year. Until the international forces of Operation Restore Hope arrived on Dec. 9, armed bandits were looting food aid with abandon.

Neither Oakley nor his spokesmen could be reached immediately for comment. But in an interview Sunday, U.S. Marine Col. Chip Gregson, deputy director of operations for the task force, was asked if U.S. forces would enforce the cease-fire through military intervention or by other means.

"We prefer to enforce it through political means because it's obviously less costly," he said, "but the cease-fire is very important to us and I think we've taken actions in the past to demonstrate that we're willing and able to take military action to enforce the cease-fire if we can isolate those breaking it."

The U.S. has nearly 25,000 troops in Somalia and 21 other countries have a total of more than 13,000. Aidid said the attacks, centered about 25 miles south of the southern port of Kismayu, had "inflicted considerable losses in life and property."

He said they were led by forces loyal to Gen. Mohammed Siad Barre, who was routed from power two years ago. Hirsi is Siad Barre's son-in-law.

Aidid said disarmament was occurring in the areas controlled by his forces, but this could not be independently verified by other sources.

He said his forces do not want to be disadvantaged and want disarmament extended immediately to all areas controlled by the warring factions.

Belgian and European Community development officials today called off a visit to Kismayu because of the escalating violence.

Clinton progressing on new AG selection

The ASSOCIATED PRESS
WASHINGTON — President Clinton and his advisers are "making progress" in their search for a new nominee for attorney general, his press secretary says.

Clinton spent part of Sunday afternoon in the Oval Office, meeting with his personnel director, Bruce Lindsey, White House Counsel Bernard Nussbaum and Thomas F. "Mack" McLarty, his chief of staff.

Casually dressed, Clinton looked over a black notebook containing recommendations for the post of top law enforcement official. He declined to answer reporters' questions.

On Saturday, he said he had asked aides to develop more information on "three or four" prospects. "They're making progress," said Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers.

The Wall Street Journal reported today that Patricia Wald, chief judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, would accept the post if Clinton offered it.

Wald, 64, had been Clinton's first choice for the Justice Department job. She turned it down, however, telling friends that she didn't relish competing for the post and would lose certain judicial benefits if she won it.

The nod then went to lawyer Zoe Baird, who asked Clinton to withdraw her nomination last week after she came under fire for hiring two illegal aliens to work in her home.

Some people who know Wald told the Wall Street Journal that she would now accept Clinton's nomination to be attorney general. "I do think Pat has changed her mind," according to an unidentified lawyer quoted by the newspaper.

Sessions accuses Barr of waging planned attacks

The ASSOCIATED PRESS
WASHINGTON — FBI Director William Sessions says former Attorney General William Barr waged a planned, personal attack on him in the closing days of the Bush administration.

A Justice Department report has accused Sessions of engaging in a pattern of misconduct including misuse of FBI travel funds, improperly charging the government for a fence at his home and improper use of FBI vehicles and agency personnel.

Barr released the report Jan. 15, his last day as attorney general.

"Mr. Barr's activities in this whole thing, at the last minute taking this, warning me, then releasing the report, all that was planned," Sessions said Sunday on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

"Done the way it (was) done, shows me that there is a contrivance," Sessions said, again defending his conduct and characterizing the report as biased and misleading.

Barr, however, rejected suggestions that he had waged a personal attack on Sessions, a former federal judge appointed FBI director during the Reagan administration.

He called Sessions' accusations a case of "diversion and obfuscation" and called the evidence in the report "overwhelming and unrefuted." Barr has said he was not personally involved in the investigation.

Sessions sought Sunday — as he did in a meeting with reporters Saturday — to rebut the specific accusations against him. He said that trips cited in the report were made primarily as part of his effort to visit all FBI offices around the country. He acknowledged that he also visited family members during some of the trips, but said that was incidental to the business activities.

"I wanted to be able to visit the field office, be with law enforcement people and talk with people in the community, including law enforcement people," Sessions said.

He acknowledged a dispute within the FBI over what kind of security fence to put up at his home, saying that he and his wife insisted on a wood fence rather than an iron one. The Justice report said the government was billed $10,000 for a wood fence that did not meet security needs.

Sessions said he and his wife considered the steel fence excessive. "We were not going to be entombed," he said.

He said he did not recall other incidents in the report, such as when he allegedly used an FBI car to carry the family dog or when agents were bumped off a flight to make room for his wife.

"I can never remember a single instance of bumping," he said, maintaining that such travel was always on a space available basis.

He said would rebut the charges point by point when he regains access to files taken as part of the internal investigation.

Asked whether someone is out to get him, Sessions replied: "I would think that's probably true."

He suggested at one point that the criticism may stem from investigations under way by the FBI or "because of my asserted independence." But when pressed, he declined to elaborate, saying only that such motives have been speculated in the press.

Police looking for a man who sold newborn for $10

The ASSOCIATED PRESS
TUSTIN, Calif. — Police today were searching for a man who drove into a shopping center parking lot, offered a newborn baby for drugs or money, then sold the child for $10.

The baby boy was in good health at a children's home after being hospitalized briefly for observation, police said.

He was just two to three hours old Saturday night when he was sold to Robert Garcia by a driver who offered the child in exchange for drugs or money, Sgt. Mike Petifer said.

"I thought I better take the baby from him because he was pretty messed up," said Garcia, 18, who carried the boy to a nearby church.

"If the baby would have stayed with him, he could have been in a lot of trouble. Who knows who he would have offered him to if I didn't take him?"

Investigators did not know whether the baby had been kidnapped or if the man who sold him was his father.

Garcia, a furniture store clerk, was walking home Saturday night through a shopping center parking lot in this town 30 miles south of Los Angeles when the man drove up and yelled, "If you give me (drugs), I'll give you this girl."

Garcia said the man apparently did not know the baby is a boy. The man's eyes appeared bloodshot and he looked as though he was high on crack, he said.

School finance bill necessary

Education is supposed to be a top priority for the nation's legislators along with Texas' legislators. But, with the lack of a school finance package, you have to wonder if education is a top priority in Texas.

Currently, the state is operating under the County Education District funding system that has been ruled unconstitutional. And they have yet to come up with a plan to fund schools here. The latest session on school finance ended up a failure, a failure which doesn't bode well for Texas' schools.

But, even with the lack of a funding system, teachers are working hard to teach the children. And trying new and innovative ways to bring out the want to learn in the students.

Moss Elementary, for example, recently conducted an art show, displaying the students work. This show allows the student's creativity to come out.

Kentwood students put out their own newspaper which was published in the Herald. The students at Bauer Magnate Elementary are working on putting together a monthly newsletter. The stories, drawings and advertisements were all done by the students themselves.

It is important that the state pass a school finance bill. It is important to help the teachers provide the best education possible for the children.

Letters to the Editor

Ideas for school finance

The Senate Education Committee are still wrestling with school financing. They still maintain that property owners should carry the major part of school financing, when property is already overloaded. A more equitable way to finance any system, activity or service for the benefit of the general public is to let the general public pay the bill. In October of 1989 the Texas Supreme Court ruled the finance system unconstitutional by a vote of 9-0 and ordered an overhaul of the system by 1 May, 1990. So, what did they come up with?

They came up with the County Education Districts (CEDs) — community clusters pooling property tax money and redistributing it within the CEDs. In January of 1992, the Texas Supreme Court ruled the CEDs unconstitutional because it implements a state ad valorem tax through the CEDs and no voter approval was obtained. The ruling allowed for the collection of the CED tax for 1991 and 1992. They must have a constitutional system in place by 1 June, 1993.

So — here we have not only one — but two (2) dilemmas! First, of course is making the property owners carry the major burden of financing schools, which serves the entire population of the state, but also (#2) comes close to being communistic. "From every man according to his ability, to every man according to his needs."

Our young people are the leaders of the future. An education is absolutely necessary for the advancement of civilization of our world. It is the only way we are going to eliminate poverty, discrimination and 'welfare' as a way of life. And no one student should be deprived of an equal education, regardless of their station in life. An equal education should mean just that — educating our young people to the right for life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Is all the gingerbread in our school system necessary?

Well intentioned organizations have deprived our teachers and students as well as necessary part of mature credibility. Teachers no longer have control of the classroom, and students are in affect being taught they can do anything they want to, that the rules do not apply to them. Prayer in the classroom in no way constitutes an invasion of church into state control. But I ramble.

There are several ways to finance the school system. The most equitable is an (X%) sales tax, titled school tax, wherein everyone pays their part. Even the tourist passing through help pay for the education of the future leaders of our country. This is the most reliable source of revenue, and the least painful. Then there is an income tax, which would target the middle to upper income class. This is the most talked about alternative, and the least popular. Then, if we must stay with the property tax as the major source, then include in this category church property and other so called non-profit property as well.

1 June 1993 is just around the corner, and the final solution to this problem should be cleared by you and I, the voters. It seems as though we are working for the government, both state and federal, instead of the other way around. It is up to us, the taxpayer to voice our opinions, our wishes and our dislikes to the people we elected to represent us — and not for them to dictate to us what they are going to do regardless. I urge you to call or write to our Governor and State Legislators and let them know your wishes. No contact from us to them means all is going the way we want it to. So, please take a part in this very important problem. What happens between now and 1-June 1993 will affect the entire school system for decades. We are at the crossroads of the future. We cannot afford to leave the decision of such an important matter as this to chance.

Politics and family, a volatile, combustible mixture

Home for a brief visit. A tense moment. Every other family member at the dinner table supported the loser in the recent presidential election.

I don't mention it. I'd rather choke on green congealed salad with marshmallows. Politics and parents don't mix. Politics and brothers don't mix. Politics and sisters-in-law don't mix.

But I know before I can store my baggage in the Ford and rear return to my life that somebody will goad me into comment. It has been 12 long years.

"Well, I guess you'll be going to Washington for the inauguration to write about your man," says mother in her where-did-we-go-wrong? voice. She packs as much contempt into "your man" as she is able. For a moment I wonder if she has me confused with Jennifer Flowers.

"I don't think so," I say. "Pass the rolls."

"You're going to wait and see if he gets to stay up there a while, aren't you?" smirks my father. He raises one eyebrow and in-

Dudley Stamps and I have been friends since the second grade. In baseball, Dudley caught and I pitched. If there had been anybody around to scream, "You da man!" in baseball games back then, that person would have screamed it when Dudley launched another home run. He hit five in one game.

Dudley was a legend by the time he was 12. He started shaving when he was 9, and in the 8th grade he fought the school bully, Frankie Garfield, who was two years his elder, to a draw. The fight was a moral victory for our side, since Frankie had many a field day picking on us wimps.

As Dudley got older, he developed a great interest in seeing how fast he could drive a motorized vehicle. When he turned 16 his parents lost their minds and gave him an earlier model Thunderbird. The rest is speeding ticket history. Parents warned their children: "Don't get in a car with Dudley Stamps."

After a high school baseball game one evening, I didn't have a ride home so Dudley gave me one back home, six miles away.

Dudley could do the trip in about 200 telephone poles an hour. The road curved for the first four miles, so Dudley had to keep it in the high double digits.

Then, however, came the Straight, a flat stretch of two miles that was Dudley's Bonneville Salt Flats. When we hit the Straight, Dudley floored it. The state patrolman who pulled him over just outside the city limit sign said, "Son, did you know you were going 108 miles an hour?"

"No I wasn't," protested Dudley. "I topped 127." A charge of merely going 108 in a 60-per-hour speed zone was an affront to the streak of lightning we knew as Dudley.

I begged Dudley to slow down that night. I equated speed, and still do, with death.

But Dudley just laughed at me and stepped down even harder on the accelerator.

So I'll keep this short: I played golf with Dudley recently. The course sits a wedge shot from the Straight.

We hit our shots on a downhill par 3. I was driving the golf cart. There was a sign near the cart path that read: Slow, steep grade. But I'm a bat-out-of-hell's-bunker in a golf cart. Full bore, we tooted down the steep grade. Dudley screamed "Slow down! You're going to turn this thing over!"

I hit the brakes and savored the moment. I had tugged on Superman's cape. I had taken the mask off the Lone Ranger. I had frightened Dudley Stamps in a motorized vehicle.

Thirty years later I had my revenge. I am a blur my very own self. I am the wind.

"You're a damned fool driving a golf cart like this," Dudley, slowed by maturity, had said. Now, come out, Frankie Garfield, wherever you are.

Singing memories flowing

As a child, I always wanted to be an opera singer. My mother had told me stories about Marian Anderson and Leontyne Price, two African-American divas.

Marian was considered the greatest contralto of her generation. In 1955, she became the first African-American soloist to sing at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York City.

Ms. Price received a 45 minute ovation when she debuted at the Metropolitan Opera House in 1961. She was the seventh African-American to make a Metropolitan debut.

The Metropolitan would have been O.K., but I could just see myself on the Ed Sullivan Show. I knew I only had to practice, practice, practice and wait on my flat chest to develop into a heaving bosom. While no one ever came right out and told me about the bosom part, it wasn't too hard to figure out after looking at pictures of the opera stars of that era.

I couldn't practice during the winter months because my mother said it got on her nerves. So every summer, I would drag, er, escort my brother outside for my concerts. First, I would stuff face towels down my undershirt, (you know the bosom part) then I would sing for hours. What I lacked in pitch and tone, I made up in loudness. My Italian wasn't too fluent. Well actually I made up the words. My brother didn't speak Italian either, so he didn't know the difference.

I gave up my dream when it became apparent I wouldn't ever have a heaving bosom or the accompanying soprano voice.

So imagine my dismay when I saw this beautiful woman named Kathleen Battle singing on PBS. This awesome voice was coming out of this woman and there was not heaving bosom in sight! If only I had kept on practicing who knows what would have happened. I expressed this to my brother over the holidays and he felt one result would have been he'd have ended up deaf.

So, as a former future opera singer, I like to recommend a CD to you. Its Baroque Due, featuring Kathleen Battle, soprano, and Wynton Marsalis, trumpet. Both artists have won numerous Grammy awards. Ms. Battle has won three. She was also the first American to be honored with the Laurence Olivier Award. Marsalis has won eight Grammys. He made history in 1983 as the first jazz and classical fields, as "Best Soloist" and Best Soloist with an Orchestra."

The CD contains the work of Johann Sebastian Bach, George Frideric Handel, Luca Antonio Predieri, Alessandro Scarlatti and Alessandro Stradella. The Orchestra of St. Luke's is conducted by John Nelson.

By the way, if you happen to drive by my house and hear this sound somewhere between a cat's wailing and fingernails on a chalkboard, it's just me practicing my singing again.

Rheta Grimsley Johnson

recently whacks at his turkey. "Oh, he'll be there for about eight years," I say, feigning a confidence I don't feel. "Then it'll be Hillary's turn."

"By then she should have had plenty of practice," he retorts. I know when to quit. Exchanging loaded quips with the gifts is one thing; getting into deep discussion about the role of the first lady is another. It can only lead to that morass of divided opinions about a Woman's Place.

And at this table I am Custer at Little Big Horn. A debate like that and soon the turkey won't be the only dead meat.

But there have been concessions. Under the Christmas tree from my parents was a copy of David McCullough's "Truman." Truman was the last Democrat my father liked.

I think it must have been impossible not to like Truman. He did for ordinary men what Babe Ruth did for baseball.

The book has 992 pages, which makes me wonder if it also had an editor. I am learning a lot about Truman.

So far the biggest revelation isn't about Harry, but Bess. I knew before turning the first page that I would have liked Truman; I had no idea I would have liked Bess.

McCullough concludes that Bess was the most important person in Truman's life. Harry said that without her he would have been "either a prominent farmer in Jackson County or a major general in the regular army."

But that might have been the kind of acknowledgment and compliment a grateful husband offers in the toast at his 40th wedding anniversary. It went much further with the Trumans.

Harry agonized over the finances and details of the Marshall Plan in a letter to Bess. During one month when she was away from Washington he wrote her 22 letters, most of them filled with exhaustive political deliberation. What's more, he considered her replies.

Only in Truman's first months in office did he exclude Bess from the decision-making rituals. Perhaps to spare her, he did not discuss with Bess the atomic bomb.

Daughter Margaret wrote that lone exclusion caused Bess "to build a smoldering anger that was tantamount to an emotional separation."

But Margaret stressed her mother's influence on her father and said he was "very conscious" of Bess' views and needed her approval.

"Have you ever noticed Father when he's with Mother at any sort of public gathering? He's always trying to catch her glance to see if she approves of what he is saying or doing."

Bess Truman cherished her privacy and never really wanted her husband to be president. But it is logical to guess that a man as smart as Truman would have a healthy respect for the opinion of the woman he loved.

Bess Truman might have seemed pale in following Eleanor Roosevelt, whose strength and leadership were legendary. But Bess was no yes-woman. Perhaps it's because few really smart men marry dishrags.

The debate over who and what Hillary Clinton should be in her husband's administration strikes me as ludicrous. She should be herself, let the Devil take the hindmost.

Just don't tell my folks I said that.

Seminoles overthrow No. 8 Duke

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Monday through Saturday, Duke is perfect. Sundays are an entirely different story.

The Blue Devils suffered their third straight Sunday defeat as Byron Wells sank a 3-pointer with 3.6 seconds left in overtime to give Florida State an 89-88 victory at Tallahassee, Fla.

Duke has now lost on successive Sundays to Georgia Tech, Virginia and the Seminoles. The Blue Devils don't play another Sunday game until Feb. 21 at North Carolina State, and they close the year with Sunday games against UCLA and North Carolina.

This Sunday's swoon didn't seem to faze coach Mike Krzyzewski, who said he was happy that his team played as well as it did.

"I don't judge things based on wins and losses. We judge things based on effort," he said. "I thought our effort was outstanding. I'm not going to fault my kids."

Florida State had set up its final play for Sam Cassell, but he couldn't shake loose and Wells wound up shooting from deep in the left corner with 6-foot-11 Cherokee Parks' hand in his face. The ball rimmed around once and kissed off the backboard before falling through.

Duke (13-3, 3-3 ACC) now has more losses this season than it had all of last year when it was 34-2 and won the national championship.

Florida State (13-5, 5-1) is a good bet to be back in the Top 25 when the Associated Press releases its poll at 6:30 p.m. EST tonight.

In other games Sunday, No. 2 Indiana beat No. 24 Ohio State 96-69, No. 3 North Carolina beat No. 10 Seton Hall 70-66 and California defeated No. 23 UCLA 104-82.

Super Bowl not war of words yet Bills claim 'America's Team' title

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

PASADENA, Calif. — It's not even close to a war of words. Maybe not even a skirmish.

Still, when the players aren't available yet and the Super Bowl hoopla is just beginning, it sure is refreshing to hear something unusual, different, even slightly controversial.

Not that Marv Levy meant to cause any headlines when, almost as an aside at the end of his news conference to open the week's festivities, he laid claim to a title that clearly has belonged elsewhere for decades.

That title, "America's Team," in fact has been the property of the Dallas Cowboys. And it is the Cowboys, of course, who will face Levy's Buffalo Bills for the NFL championship on Sunday.

"America's Team sometimes is what someone names themselves," Levy said. "We've had an outpouring of letters from all over the country since our Houston game, with people telling us we were America's Team."

The Bills staged the biggest comeback in NFL history in that wild-card game, coming back from 35-3 to win 41-38 in overtime. That victory might be more meaningful than any in club history because it displayed so obviously — to the players as well as the public — that this team can handle adversity. And adversity rarely was an obstacle for Buffalo the last two years — until it hit in the big game and the Bills couldn't deal with it.

Levy described those letters as saying, "You're the ones we're looking at as the underdog, the ones who fought their way back. You're the blue collar guys."

"I told our players, 'You know who will be wearing red, white and blue out there when we play that game? You are — the Buffalo Bills.'"

Levy has a point. In overcoming injuries to stars such as Jim Kelly, Bruce Smith and Cornelius Bennett, the Bills have shown a load of perseverance. After blowing the AFC East title by losing their season finale to Houston while undermanned and on the road, they staged that memorable rally the next week to eliminate the Oilers.

Then they won two playoff games on the road, a place they hadn't won in the postseason since 1981. They did it with dominating defense. They got the first two of their three January victories with Frank Reich, not Kelly, at the helm.

So if they want to call themselves "America's Team," let them.

"That's great for Marv Levy," Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson said when told of the fan mail — and Levy's claim. "I don't care. All I want to do is beat the team we play Sunday, and that's the Buffalo Bills. I don't get carried away with the 'America's Team.'"

After so much national television time in this decade — the Bills are the only AFC champion in the 1990s and are making a record-tying third straight trip to the Super Bowl — they might be America's Most Familiar Team.

"I see a lot of star players," Johnson said of the Bills, who would be the first team to lose three consecutive Super Bowls if they can't stop the AFC's slide in the big game, now at eight. "Bruce Smith is as fine a player as we've faced all year, maybe the finest. Cornelius Bennett ... Darryl Talley, who is one of the most underrated players."

"On their offense, the number of talented, experienced players in their entire lineup allows them to do some things other teams are not able to do."

"They have so much diversity on offense. They can do things probably across the board better than most teams."

"We're not that complicated."

Mustangs have the Cougars right where they want them — at home

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Southern Methodist won three of four road games to start their surprising Southwest Conference run, losing only to Houston. But now they've got the Cougars right where they want them — at home.

SMU (10-5, 3-1) faces Houston (11-2, 4-0) Saturday, trying to avenge the Cougars' 85-75 victory Saturday in Houston. David Diaz scored 24 points against the Mustangs as Houston won its sixth straight.

SMU is 6-0 at home this year and plays five of its next six games at home, beginning with Texas A&M (6-9, 1-2) Wednesday night.

The Cougars visit Texas Tech Tuesday. The Red Raiders (8-6) were expected to battle Houston for the SWC crown, but have dropped all three of their league games.

Texas also has faltered, although the Longhorns won their first SWC game in five tries with a 92-74 victory in Austin over the Red Raiders

Saturday. Texas, plagued by injuries and academic suspensions, is 7-7 overall.

Tony Watson scored 27 points for Texas with sizzling 3-point shooting. Will Flemmons led Texas Tech with 31 points.

Spurs set new club win record

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN ANTONIO — Suddenly, it's the San Antonio Spurs who are playing like champions, and the Chicago Bulls are their latest victim.

The Spurs won a franchise-record ninth straight game Sunday, beating Chicago 103-99 behind David Robinson's 24 points. Dale Ellis added 20 points as Spurs defeated the Bulls for the fourth consecutive time in San Antonio.

Michael Jordan led two-time defending NBA champion Chicago with 42 points, but missed a 12-foot jumper that would have tied the game with four seconds left.

"We had our chances," Jordan said. "It was a tight game. I feel good about the effort. We fought back in the second half."

The Spurs are now 14-2 since John Lucas became coach.

"It seemed like we were trying to find ways to lose the game for a while," said Lucas. "We just couldn't put it away. But we pulled it out down the stretch."

Chicago trailed by as many as 15 points in the first half as Scottie Pippen missed seven of his first eight shots, but outscored San Antonio 28-21 in the third period to get back in the game.

Chicago had gone ahead 96-95 with 1:49 to play after scoring six straight points, including a dunk by Jordan.

But Dale Ellis, who scored 20 points, hit a 3-pointer to put the Spurs up 98-96 with 1:06 left. Jordan then made one of two free throws and Avery Johnson, who finished with 15 assists, went 2 for 2 from the line to leave the Bulls in a 100-97 hole with 54 seconds remaining.

"I thought the critical play was Ellis' 3-pointer," Chicago coach Phil Jackson said. "It was in a game-turning situation."

"I thought once we got the lead we could make them panic," Pippen said. "But we weren't able to capitalize on it. We gave them the chance to win."

Petrovic shoots out the Rockets' streak

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

When you expunge the likes of Michael Jordan and Magic Johnson from the record book, you've had a pretty good game.

That's precisely what Drazen Petrovic did Sunday night when he made 17 of 23 shots and scored a career-high 44 points as the New Jersey Nets ended Houston's eight-game winning streak with a 100-83 victory.

NBA roundup

"I knew I was on as soon as my first two shots went down," Petrovic said after setting Meadowlands Arena records by scoring 32 points in the second half and 25 in the final period. "Mo (Cheeks) and Kenny (Anderson) were giving me the ball in the right place all night. All I had to do was catch it and shoot."

In the final period, he made 8 of 10 shots and scored 25 points, one less than the Rockets.

"In the fourth quarter, we saw he was capable of the record, so we just kept giving it to him, telling him to shoot it," teammate Derrick Coleman said.

That he did, in the process surpassing the record of 28 second-half points by Jordan, Johnson and Alex English. No one ever came close to scoring 25 in a period.

"He was upset when the clock was running out," Coleman said of Petrovic. "He felt like he could get 70."

Petrovic's game total was the most by a Nets player since Ray Williams matched a team record with a 52-point effort against Detroit in 1982. The previous high by Petrovic was 39 points, last season against Boston.

"When Petro has it going like that, you just try to get the ball into his hands," Anderson said. "He was on fire, so we just rode him."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was the Los Angeles Lakers 112, Washington 110 in overtime; San Antonio 103, Chicago 99; Portland 124, Utah 113; Miami 122, Dallas 106; Indiana 112, Charlotte 105, and the Los Angeles Clippers 116, Seattle 95.

Houston's Vernon Maxwell had a long night trying to guard Petrovic. "Petro shot the lights out," said Maxwell, who had 19 points. "He is one of the better standup shooters around."

Petrovic's performance was well short of his international best.

Marshall

called him "a living embodiment of our nation's highest ideals" and said that Marshall "inspired the country to embrace the great principle of equal justice for every citizen."

"His work and his vision changed America," said Vice President Al Gore, adding that Marshall "moved us forward to a new understanding and a new commitment to civil rights and equal opportunity."

Praise poured in from leaders of the civil movement.

"For most of us who grew up under segregation, we have never known a day without Thurgood Marshall hovering over us to protect us," said Jackson. He lauded Marshall's leadership as general counsel of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in the 1950s, including his successful challenge to school desegregation.

Benjamin Hooks, the NAACP's executive director, said Marshall "changed the face of America for all time" in his successes as a civil rights lawyer and later as a justice.

"The nation has lost an invaluable and irreplaceable asset, one we will not see again in our lifetime," said Hooks.

Past colleagues and friends remembered Marshall not only for his intellect, courage and perseverance, but also for his humor, humility and zest for life.

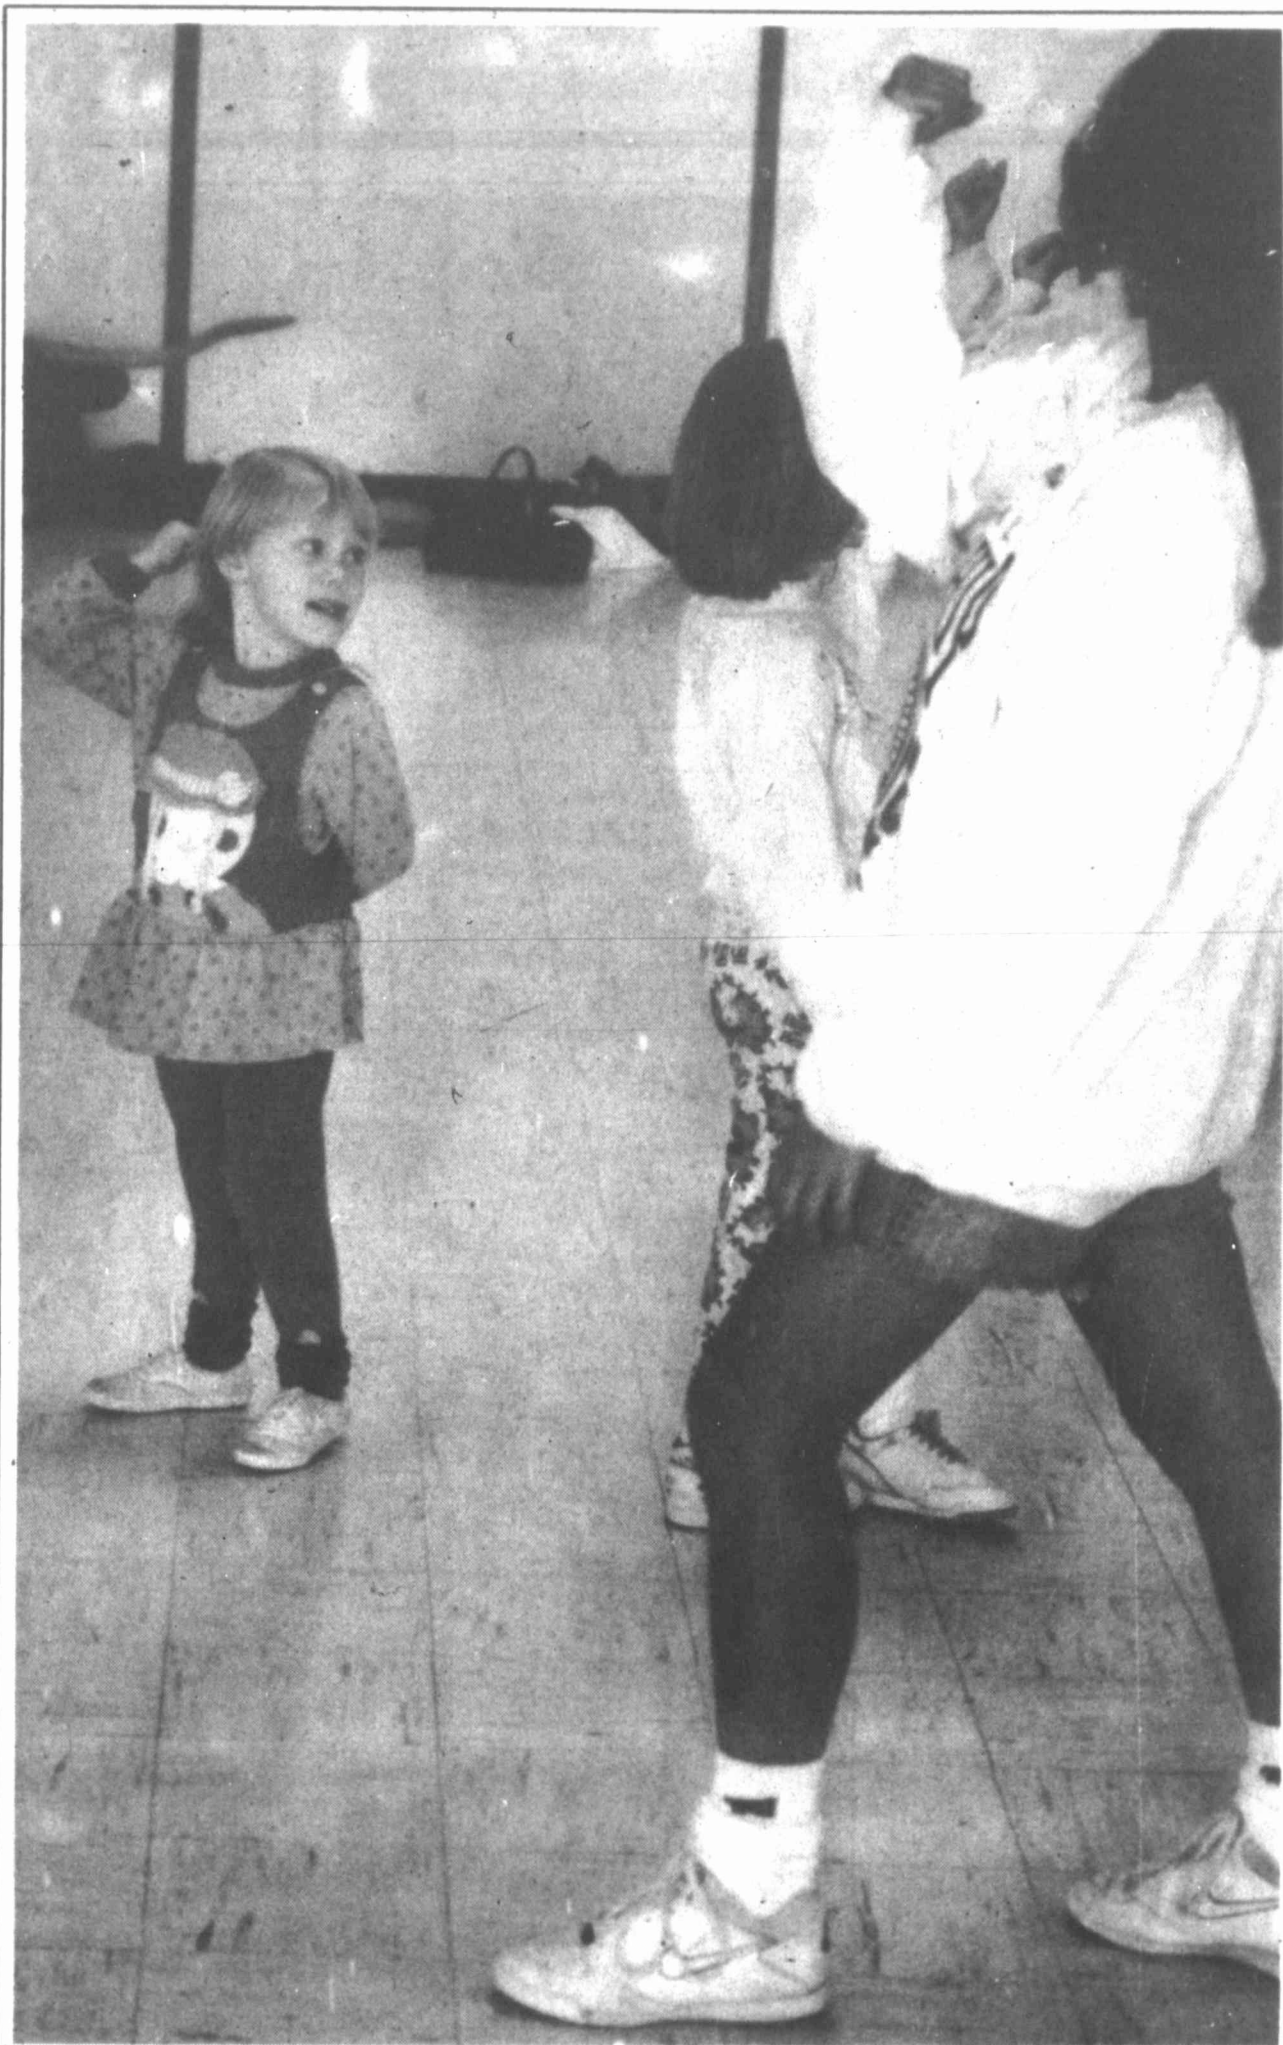

"He was a warm, engaging, incredibly funny person," recalled David Wilkins, a law professor at Harvard who was a clerk to Marshall in the early 1980s. "He had a profound insight about life ... He knew his place in history but he never let that get in the way."

Wilkins remembered Marshall often regaling listeners with stories about his experiences as a young civil rights lawyer, being chased out of towns in Mississippi and Alabama.

"He could tell a story that would have everybody in stitches. Yet when you walked away you would realize that he had made a profound point of life and how it ought to be lived," recalled Wilkins.

"He was courageous," remembered Enolia McMillan, 88, who worked with Marshall in the early days of the civil rights movement.

Bandleader Cab Calloway went to high school with Marshall in Baltimore and knew him for some 65 years. "He was a great man, there's no question about that," said Calloway. "He sacrificed himself for everybody and everything."

Iraq

Zifferero's eight-man team of nuclear experts and a team of ballistic weapons inspectors arrived in the capital today at a time when Baghdad is seeking better relations with Washington and a halt to U.S. air attacks.

Their treatment by Saddam Hussein's government will be considered a test of Iraq's compliance with Persian Gulf War cease-fire terms and its attitude toward U.N. teams. Baghdad has accused them to the U.N. commission that is overseeing the elimination of Iraq's weapons of mass destruction.

Zifferero, an Italian, and Nikita Smidovich, a Russian in charge of ballistic arms and other inspections, both said they had been well-received by Iraqi officials.

They arrived less than a week after Iraq ended a standoff with the United Nations over U.N. flights into the country from the special commission's regional headquarters in Bahrain.

Iraq had refused to guarantee the safety of the flights as long as they crossed the allied-imposed no-fly zones where U.S. warplanes have struck Iraqi military targets several times in recent weeks.

A chemical weapons destruction team came in Thursday and Friday. It and a three-man aerial surveillance team already are at work and have reported good cooperation.

U.S. warplanes repeatedly attacked Iraqi missile sites last week and bombarded a factory near Baghdad with cruise missiles in response to Iraq's refusal to honor Gulf War cease-fire conditions.

Iraq declared a unilateral cease-fire Tuesday, but the United States says Baghdad has not honored its own treaty. The most recent U.S. attack came Saturday night after anti-aircraft guns fired at three Navy planes, U.S. officials said.

After leaving Baghdad following an inspection trip last fall, Zifferero said that Iraq's program to develop nuclear weapons was basically defunct and that the major unresolved issues were obtaining the list of suppliers and securing long-term U.N. monitoring.

He said his group would work this week on a plan for long-term monitoring.

Under the Gulf War cease-fire, Iraq must permit U.N. inspection of its long-range missiles and nuclear, chemical and biological weapons and research programs and allow their destruction.

American sumo wrestles to top

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — A 23-year-old Hawaiian colossus today broke an ancient tradition by being named the first foreign grand champion of sumo — reaching the sport's pinnacle faster than any Japanese ever had.

Chad Rowan was unanimously recommended today by an advisory panel to the sport's ruling body, ending a long controversy over whether chauvinism and xenophobia would deny sumo's highest laurels to foreigners.

To become a grand champion — or "yokozuna" — requires winning two consecutive tournaments or having a record deemed of equal worth.

Another Hawaiian, Salevaa Atisano, was denied the rank last year despite an impressive record and afterwards was quoted as blaming racism.

But his record was easily outdone by Rowan. The sumo star of the moment, who wrestles under the name Akebono (Sunrise), won his second straight 15-day tournament on Sunday.

"I had always thought of grand champions like gods," the 455-pound Akebono, clad in a gray cotton kimono and wearing his hair in the traditional topknot, told reporters today.

"I never thought I would be able to reach this." According to legend, the first two sumo wrestlers were gods.

The 6-foot-8 Akebono, who played college basketball in Hawaii, will officially become grand champion after a three-hour Shinto ceremony Saturday at Tokyo's Meiji Shrine.

Although resistance to the idea of a foreigner as grand champion remains — particularly since two other Americans are right behind him in the rankings — Akebono's successes and soft-spoken manner have won over most of the critics.

"He is awesome," sumo's head official, former grand champion Dewanoumi, said after watching over whether chauvinism and xenophobia would deny sumo's highest laurels to foreigners.

News of his pending promotion was the top story in most major newspapers today, and was generally treated as welcome and well-deserved.

Most noted that it will come only

30 tournaments after Rowan's sumo debut in 1988, the fastest climb to the top ever.

But the more gossipy sports newspapers instead featured Takahanada, who is up for promotion to champion rank, on their front pages.

Some conservative supporters of the sport, meanwhile, have expressed displeasure over Akebono's rise.

"Promotion can't be helped if you let foreigners in," former Grand Champion Selection Committee chairman Yoshitaka Takahashi told reporters. "I don't have any complaints about ability. But I don't feel good about this."

Sumo is a bastion of ancient ways. Apprentice wrestlers must endure grueling training sessions at live-in sumo "stables."

Dedication has its rewards

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Big Spring resident Pete Trevino hasn't missed a day of work in almost 45 years. He's never been late, either.

His exemplary work record, he said, is a reflection of his philosophy: Live by a solid work ethic.

He currently commutes to Midland each work day to work in the postal service.

Born in Ricardo, a South Texas rural community, in 1933, Trevino was one of 12 children who cultivated a vegetable and dairy farm.

"We naturally worked before and after school," he said. "I still have that drive and have always felt if I worked anywhere I want to be 100 percent or better."

Ankle surgery for a job-related accident caused him to miss two days of work in the 1960s. But Trevino said his devotion to companies and desire to work consistently has motivated him to always be present and punctual otherwise.

"This started since I was little. We knew if we did not gather vegetables on time, they would spoil," he said. "We knew work had to be done on a scheduled time everyday — all of the time."

He added, "I've been a supervisor most of my life, and I've heard every excuse for absenteeism. I feel like if you're going to work — work, and if you don't like it, leave it."

After graduating from a class of 10 students at Riviera High School in 1951, Trevino jumped into the cotton baling industry.

He launched a career as a supervisor for Littlefield's West Texas Industries by 1952, transferring to Big Spring 20 years later. He retired in 1980.

All the while, Trevino would

'If you don't do much you'll never amount to much. You're going to have to produce if you want to amount to anything.'

Pete Trevino

manage to have jobs to supplement his income.

From door-to-door shoe salesperson and part-time car salesperson to weekend restraint manager and Amway entrepreneur, Trevino believed there was no time for idle time.

He found time to marry his wife, Margaret, though, in 1955 and raise seven children: Connie, Alice, Martha, Carl, Brenda, Alan and Mary Anita.

After his retirement from West Texas Industries at age 47, Trevino felt he had much energy left to keep on working.

"From there I went into business for myself," he said. "I didn't like it because I wasn't making as much money as I wanted."

He and Margaret worked together stocking natural snacks in 24 stores in the area from 1980-81.

Trevino said his first choice was to work locally, but postal officials at the time would only hire a military retiree.

"Back in those years, the oil boom was failing and they were hiring a lot of people," he said. "More people were trying to stay with the postal service."

He said he didn't want to move to Midland because of the roots he had developed locally with his home and family.

"I owned my home, and we still had children in school," he said. "I also didn't want to move there because the real estate was high in Midland."

His current job at the general mail facility at Midland International Airport requires Trevino to work overnight. But, "Working nights has not disrupted my life too much," he said.

Being in fairly good health prevents more disruptions in his work schedule, he said.

"I guess my wife's a good cook, and we've never been sicklings," he laughed. "I've had minor problems, but nothing to keep me from work."

He added he uses accumulated vacation time for special family occasions. The Trevinos once took their children to Disney Land, the Chicago Zoo and Six Flags, all in one summer.

"If you deliver, then you will be compensated for it — pay raises, merit increases, bonuses," he said. "If you don't do much you'll never amount to much. You're going to have to produce if you want to amount to anything."

He plans to retire in March 1995 and travel with his wife.

True stories, fiction New books are mixed bag

New books this month at the Howard County Library include the following:

Who Will Tell The People by William Greider

Greider turns his investigative savvy to a subject of vital concern to all Americans — that of the faltering democratic process. He presents a realistic picture of power in Washington and shows how modern methods of persuasion have created a new hierarchy of influence over government decisions.

Greider shows us how the system can still be made to work for the people as he tackles issues such as who pays taxes, who escapes them; who breathes bad air when industries manipulate environmental organizations and who'll suffer the biggest losses as the world economy goes global and our national economy shrinks.

Exposing Myself by Geraldo Rivera

Now, for the first time, one of America's most candid and controversial broadcast journalists brings us his own compelling story in an autobiography as bold and courageous as his journalism.

Born as the son of a Puerto Rican cafeteria worker and his Jewish wife, Rivera was raised in a loving and hardworking family of mixed ethnic tradition. He developed an engaging, extroverted and aggressive personality that has become his trademark.

How To Be Happier Day By Day by Alan Epstein

Each of us want to be happy but too often we look outside ourselves and wonder why life is not bringing us the satisfaction that we seek. Epstein believes that the key to happiness lies within us and that it comes from the attitude that we bring to everything that we do and every action that we take.

His unique format offers 365 mindful actions, one for each day of the year, that promise to turn happiness into a habit!

Naked Beneath My Clothes by Rita Rudner

This is a collection of stories by a dancer turned stand-up comedian. Winner of the 1990 American Comedy Award for funniest female stand-up, Rita doesn't share any dark secrets from her pre-celebrity past because she doesn't have any.

Instead she writes about love, parents, old boyfriends, marriage, men and their cars, having children and anything else that can happen while you are awake.

Betty Condray

The Custody Revolution by Dr. Richard Warshak

When parents divorce, child custody is the most difficult and complex issue they face. In his book, Warshak offers not a panacea but a prescription for alleviating much of the suffering of divorced families and demonstrates why so many of the problems attributed to divorce are often the results of our custody practices.

He shows why handling the custody decision with responsibility, wisdom and sanity is the single most important the parents can do to help their children cope with a divorce.

Our House Divided by Tomi Kaizawa Knaeffer

How does a man serving in the Imperial Japanese Army feel when he suddenly sees his brother in the uniform of the enemy United States? How does a Japanese mother, surrounded by barbed wire in an American internment camp for "enemy aliens," feel when her only son writes: "I am now an American soldier. I must fight and, if necessary, die for my country?"

The book focuses on seven such personal stories of families as they struggled with the emotions and events brought on by war — stories of first generation Japanese-Americans who were strongly attached to both countries.

McKendree by Douglas Hirt

After his parents were slaughtered by Shawnee in the War of 1812, Josh McKendree moved west to Missouri, married and built a new life. As a homesteader and proud father, he has put his unhappy past behind him.

A fierce-hearted half-breed trapper forces McKendree into a dispute over land rights and ends up killing McKendree's wife and son. McKendree pursues the trapper into Shawnee territory but rides into a trap.

Two of the Guerrilla Girls, who wear gorilla masks to remain anonymous, talk to audience members after giving a lecture recently in Boston. The group combats themes of racism and sexism in the arts.

Gorilla-masked guerrillas Women protest racism, sexism in arts

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Times are changing for women artists but not fast enough, say the Guerrilla Girls, crusaders in gorilla masks who delivered a lecture while sitting at a table piled high with bananas.

They're out to end discrimination against women and minority artists in an art world dominated by white males. Their cause is just and their tactics justified, they say, but the masks are necessary.

"The masks give us the ability to speak out without fear of reprisals," Guerrilla Girl No. 1 told about 350 people packed into the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum on Tuesday.

"Women who complain about sexism in the art world are attacked as being not good enough, not talented enough to make it," added No. 2. "It's the same as when a woman complains of sexual harassment and is attacked for somehow inciting it."

Their targets are museums, galleries, art magazines, critics and collectors who neglect women artists and artists from minorities. Their weapons are sarcasm, statistics and posters.

"You're seeing only half the picture without the vision of women artists and artists of color," said one placard.

"Do women have to be naked to get into the Met Museum?" asked another, which featured a nude woman wearing a gorilla mask.

That poster takes issue with the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, where 95 percent of the modern artists displayed are men. There are women, but mostly as nude subjects, No. 1 said.

"We literally walked around and counted them all," she said.

Desperate acts Australia battles growing rate of suicides among teens

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SYDNEY, Australia — Matthew Dickson, 15, got off the bus at his usual stop, as he did at the end of every school day. But instead of walking home, he hanged himself from a tree.

No one is sure why, and he did not leave a note to explain.

"He knew how to tie the proper knot," a friend recalled. He said the boy even bound his own hands so he could not change his mind and save himself.

Dickson's death in 1990, near the small town of Kyneton in Victoria state, was among a dramatically growing number of suicides by Australian teen-agers.

According to the Bureau of Statistics, 462 people aged 15 to 24 killed themselves in 1991, or 17 per 100,000.

Suicide is the second leading cause of death among the young after road accidents. More than four times as many young males as females take their own lives.

In the United States, the 1991 rate in the same age group was 13.8 per 100,000 and the ratio of male-female suicides was similar, according to U.S. government figures.

The problem is worst in rural Australia, where recession and a trend to corporate farming have attacked family life and left the young with little hope.

Brent Waters, a Sydney psychiatrist, estimates the suicide rate for males in some rural areas has increased fivefold in less than three decades, while the urban rate remained fairly constant.

"Things are really tough in the bush nowadays," said Waters, a professor at the University of New South Wales. "This is where the image of Australia's self-reliant character was forged. Now it is under threat and people feel helpless."

World prices have declined for wool and wheat, Australia's main agricultural exports. Many farm families, burdened with large debts, are selling out to agricultural companies or losing their land to banks and other creditors.

Small towns established generations ago to serve the family farms are losing their reason to exist.

There are few jobs and few opportunities for the young. For some, the problems seem insurmountable when combined with the loneliness of country life.

"Some communities are like ghost towns, but with living people," said Waters, noting that rural areas have few counseling services.

Riaz Hassan, a sociologist at Flinders University in Adelaide, said the suicide rate among young males in both rural and urban Australia has more than doubled in a generation, much as in the United States.

In 1964, the suicide rate among males aged 20 to 24 was 16 per 100,000. By 1990, it had risen to 36. Figures for women of those ages declined in the period from 7.7 in 100,000 to 3.9.

Virtual reality hits theme park

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SINGAPORE — Disneyland in miniature? Not quite, but the thrills of roller coasters and other rides at vast theme parks are promised by a new generation of much smaller playgrounds.

Using "virtual reality," the high-tech equipment that began with programs to train jet pilots, theme parks one-tenth the size of Disneyland will be able to offer the same variety of thrills, the promoters say.

The interactive technology developed in the United States uses computer-generated images and sound to create an illusion of reality while the user is adventuring in another world.

Visitors to the still unnamed park will be made to feel they are soaring in space, stepping back in time or engaging in combat — all while watching a big curved screen or wearing special headsets and electronically wired gloves.

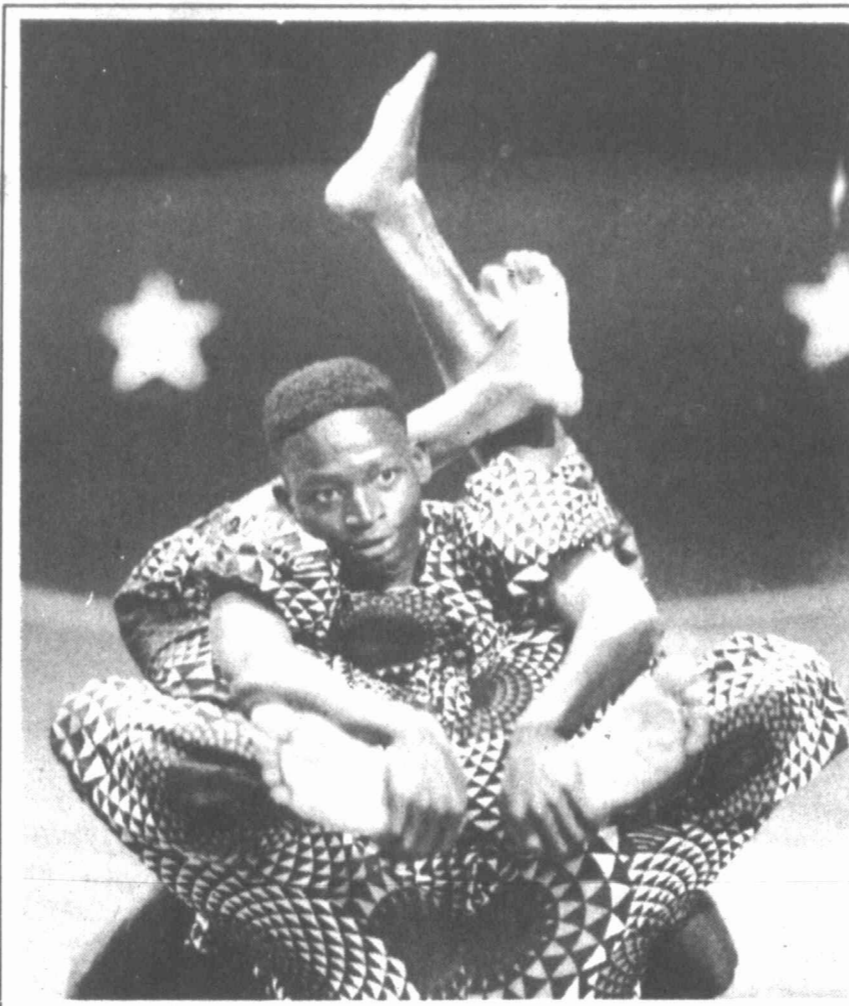

Hassan said the data suggest young Australian men are "emotionally weaker" than women.

"Males tend to focus their roles on their jobs and studies," he said. "When they fail, they have little to fall back on. Women see themselves as having more in life."

Many women who do attempt suicide fail because they use "passive" methods, such as drugs or poison, that can be reversed by modern medicine, Hassan said.

Men, by contrast, prefer such violent means as hanging or shooting. Hassan estimated that suicides account for 10 per cent to 30 percent of fatal single automobile crashes involving young men.

In Kyneton, 35 miles northwest of Melbourne, 20 young people have killed themselves in two years, prompting references to a "suicide epidemic."

Dear Abby - Letters

Gas company's holiday cheer

DEAR ABBY: I am an 84-year-old lady, living alone. On Christmas Eve, I bought a Christmas tree. The lady I bought it from said, "It's not very heavy" as she put it in the trunk of my car.

When I got home, I tried to lift it out of the trunk. It wouldn't budge, so I used a pole for leverage and flipped it out onto my driveway. I tried pushing it, I tried pulling it. It still wouldn't budge. I tried a "dolly"; then I tried a rope. It simply would not budge. I bowed my head, clasped my hands, and prayed, "Dear God, please send someone to help me."

I heard a car, looked up, and saw a Palm Springs Gas Co. truck pull up and stop across the street. The driver got out, walked toward me and said, "Can I help you? Where do you want that tree?"

I said, "If it's not too much trouble, I would like it in my house," so he carried it into my house, set it up and made sure it was straight.

I asked him, "Do you believe in the power of prayer?" With tears in my eyes, I thanked him. Then I thanked God. Abby, do you believe in the power of prayer? — OLIVE B. IN PALM SPRINGS, CALIF.

DEAR OLIVE: Yes, I, too, believe in the power of prayer. You found an angel — employed by the Palm Springs Gas Co.

DEAR ABBY: You recently suggested that at Christmastime we should not forget our postal carriers — we used to call them "mailmen." (You said, "Be a deer" and slip them a couple of bucks.)

Well, Abby, postal carriers are now paid

$28,000 a year, plus added perks that include health insurance, paid holidays and pensions. In our area, they no longer walk their routes — they deliver the mail in jeeplike cars. And the people on their route are required to provide an approved mailbox at the curb. (These boxes are a favorite target of young vandals. I have replaced our box four times.)

Fifty years ago, I was dating a girl at a college 70 miles away. On weekends when I was unable to visit her, I wrote to her. If I dropped the letter in the corner mailbox before 5 p.m., she received it before noon the following day — and it only cost 3 cents. Today it costs 29 cents, and you're lucky if it takes less than four days.

I give what I can to my church, the Salvation Army and the United Way, and I suggest that you advise your readers to forget additional gifts to those who are well-paid, and give where it will do the underprivileged some good. — FED UP IN INDIANA

DEAR FED UP: According to a spokesman for the U.S. Postal Service, the entry-level salary for a mail carrier is about $26,000, increasing to about $31,000 after several years.

It is not your carrier's fault that the cost of postage has gone up and the volume of mail has increased.

You and I belong to different schools of thought: My philosophy is that those who put forth extra effort all year to make my life easier should be remembered at holiday time. Without the U.S. Postal Service, I'd have to rely on carrier pigeons.
