Congress to receive $850 billion budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, urging a so-called freeze on domestic spending but an increase of nearly $30 billion for defense, will submit a $848.5 billion budget for 1984. It envisions steady economic recovery but unemployment remaining at 10 percent or more into next year.

A summary of Reagan's tax and spending plan, sent to congressional leaders Friday, foresees a record deficit of $208 billion for the current year and only slight declines to $189 billion in 1984 and $194 billion in 1985.

Reagan campaigned in 1980 on a promise to balance the budget in 1983 — a pledge he later amended to 1984.

The budget summary, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, calls for spending overall of $848.5 billion in the fiscal year that begins on Oct. 1, an increase of $43.3 billion over estimated spending for the current year.

Related Stories, 10A

THAT INCREASE represents what Reagan referred to in his State of the Union speech Tuesday as a freeze in "real spending," allowing an increase of 5 percent for inflation.

Beyond the $30 billion for defense, the balance of the increased spending would go to benefit programs such as Social Security. Even those would be squeezed, however, as part of an overall deficit reduction package totalling $558 billion through 1988.

That $558 billion plan includes a bipartisan Social Security rescue plan estimated to save $79 billion over five years and an ambitious $58 billion package of changes in Medicare and Medicaid that will provide catastrophic health insurance coverage to Medicare recipients at the same time it cuts costs.

Other changes would include six-month delays in cost-of-living increases, not only in Social Security, but Supplemental Security Income, Railroad Retirement, veterans' pension and compensation, food stamps and child nutrition.

Spending on hundreds of domestic programs would amount to $115 billion for the next fiscal year — $1 billion less than the figure for the current year and a savings calculated at $4.8 billion when inflation is taken into account.

REAGAN'S PLAN actually calls for a selective freeze, with law enforcement and anti-drug efforts and the National Science Foundation receiving increases while energy research and development, mass transit and Amtrak would be cut.

The plan calls for standby tax increases beginning in the 1986 fiscal year to raise $146 billion over three years.

The taxes — which would be triggered only if the economy was in recovery and if the spending freeze enacted — are likely to include a $5 a barrel excise tax on domestic and imported crude oil, which would increase the retail price of gasoline by about 12 cents a gallon, and an extra standby income tax.

Although the budget will not be formally delivered to Congress until Monday, copies of the summary were provided to leaders of both the House and Senate.

The Congressional leaders who got a preview of the budget during the day made it clear immediately that Reagan would have to accept changes.

"I HOPE THERE is some room for negotiation" in Reagan's proposals for defense and benefit programs, said Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker repeated earlier predictions of a "donnybrook" as Reagan sought to defend his defense increase, even though it is a cut of $8 billion from his original plan.

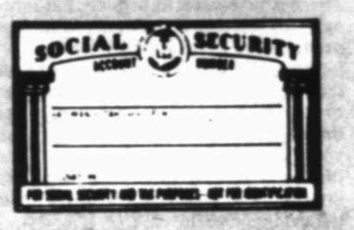

Baker added some kind of public work jobs bill — opposed by the president — would be added by Congress. However, he said, "the budget has a

Fourth storm to hit California this week possibly worst

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The week's fourth and potentially fiercest storm walloped the battered California coastline Friday as people tried to dig out of more than 1,000 smashed homes and braced for more of the worst flooding in years.

The storm, packing wind gusts of up to 60 mph, hit first in central California and into areas still reeling from heavy rains that sliced through piers and levees, damaged more than 1,000 homes and threw tons of sand and debris onto the shore.

The new storm came from the Gulf of Alaska and the brunt of it made a loop, missing the Pacific Northwest and Northern California but plunging full steam into the central and southern part of the Golden State.

Electrical power outages were reported in the Grapevine area 70 miles northwest of Los Angeles. The National Weather Service issued gale warnings for the Southern California coastline and posted flash flood watches.

At least 11 people have died statewide in the storms and high tides this week, according to updated figures released by the state Friday.

The state said 1,964 people have been forced to leave their homes.

The storms have damaged 2,660 homes — destroying 24 of them — and have damaged 496 businesses, the state said.

Preliminary damage figures from several hard-hit areas Friday neared $60 million, and authorities said the total could rise much higher.

After Thursday's onslaught from the Pacific Ocean, Gov. George Deukmejian declared the counties of Los Angeles, San Diego, Marin and San Mateo disaster areas.

"The potential for additional flooding this Friday, Saturday and Sunday is great," said forecasters for the National Weather Service, who expected the new storm to be the most intense of the series.

The brunt of the new storm will hit Southern California with as much as 5 inches of rain, westerly winds 20 to 30 mph and more than 7-foot tides, the weather service said.

The rain, on top of already saturated ground, was expected to create heavy runoff that will flood streets and underpasses, and mudslides and rockslides, forecasters said. Skies were expected to clear up by Sunday, however.

The Super Bowl isn't expected to be affected by the rain because the Rose Bowl field in Pasadena is covered by a tarpaulin, officials said.

Shoreline homes all along the 840-mile California coast were pounded by

Woman found guilty of patient injury

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A former nursing home aide who was charged with injuring an 84-year-old woman patient while trying to feed her water at Terrace Gardens Nursing Home last July 20 was found guilty Friday afternoon of injury by recklessness — not by intent — by Judge Pat Baskin of Midland's 142nd State District Court.

The ex-aide, Sherry Sims, 29, testified Friday that she was unaware that she had scratched the bedridden patient while trying to give her water with a plastic syringe.

Under cross-examination by prosecutor Jim Rex, Ms. Sims said she didn't know how the patient suffered additional bruises and scratches.

"I don't know; I can't answer that," she testified.

A week ago, another aide, 20-year-old Patricia Portillo, testified that she heard and saw Ms. Sims slap and hit the elderly patient when she declined to drink additional water.

On Friday, Penolia Pardue, 24, a former nurse at Terrace Gardens, said Ms. Sims told her of a scratch on the patient's mouth but related no more injuries.

"She (the aide) was always kind and very nice to them (patients)," the nurse said.

The nurse said she was fired from the nursing home because of her failure — "oversight," as she put it, — to report the incident. "It was an oversight on my part, and I failed to document it (the scratch) on my chart," she testified.

The nurse said the patient was not hysterical shortly after the incident. However, the patient's 51-year-old daughter last week testified otherwise. She said her mother was bruised and scratched when she had arrived at the nursing home at 7:15 a.m. on July 20 to bathe her mother. Another nurse had testified that the patient was "extremely upset" and "hysterical."

The defendant said she was unaware when the patient received the scratch, but surmised it might have happened as the patient "turned her head" in declining additional water early in the morning of July 20. She said patients

Kloesel presented Gold Awards to 30 businesses and organizations that contributed an average of $75 or more per employee. Silver Awards were bestowed on 25 organizations that contributed between $50 and $74.99 per employee. Bronze Awards went to 89 organizations that gave $25 to $49.99 per employee. A host of "Thanks to You" awards were also presented to organizations that recorded significant increases in contributions while not qualifying for another award.

Kloesel and Steele swapped plaques, each commending the other for outstanding service to United Way efforts.

Sarah Smith, who resigned this year as the United Way's executive director after 3½ years in the position, offered thanks and a salute to staff and volunteers in a farewell message.

Budget proposal ready for scrutiny

Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee, commented, "I hope this is going to be a give-and-take year, not a take-it-or-leave-it year."

Republicans and Democrats alike expressed satisfaction that Reagan had based his tax and spending assumptions on "realistic" assumptions about the economy.

THESE INCLUDE an economic recovery at the rate of 3 percent this year and 4 percent a year beginning in 1984. Unemployment is expected to peak in the middle of this year but still remain in double digits well into 1984. Joblessness would still be 6.2 percent at the end of 1988.

Inflation, which the administration has succeeded in reducing sharply, is forecast to increase slightly from the 3.9 level of last year. Interest rates, as measured by 91-day Treasury bills, are pegged at an average of 8 percent this year and 7.8 percent in 1984.

According to officials who spoke on condition that they not be identified, senior officials told a group of columnists at a Friday White House briefing:

—The prime interest rate, the rate banks charge their best business borrowers, is expected to be around 10 percent this year. Currently it is 11 percent.

—Long-term Treasury rates are expected to drop to 9 to 10 percent from about 11 percent now.

—In the education-saving fund Reagan is proposing, parents could set aside $1,000 a year with no taxes on the interest or dividends it earns. Families making $40,000 a year or more would get less than the full tax break; families making $60,000 or more would get no advantage from using the funds.

—The extra standby income tax would be a 5 percent surcharge on tax liability. Thus, those who owed $200 in income tax would be charged an extra $10 under the proposal.

ONE OFFICIAL said it would be equivalent to a 1 percent surcharge on taxable income, but fairer. "If you had a one percent surcharge on taxable income, percentage-wise, not dollar-wise, obviously, it would fall most heavily on the low and middle incomes rather than on the high incomes."

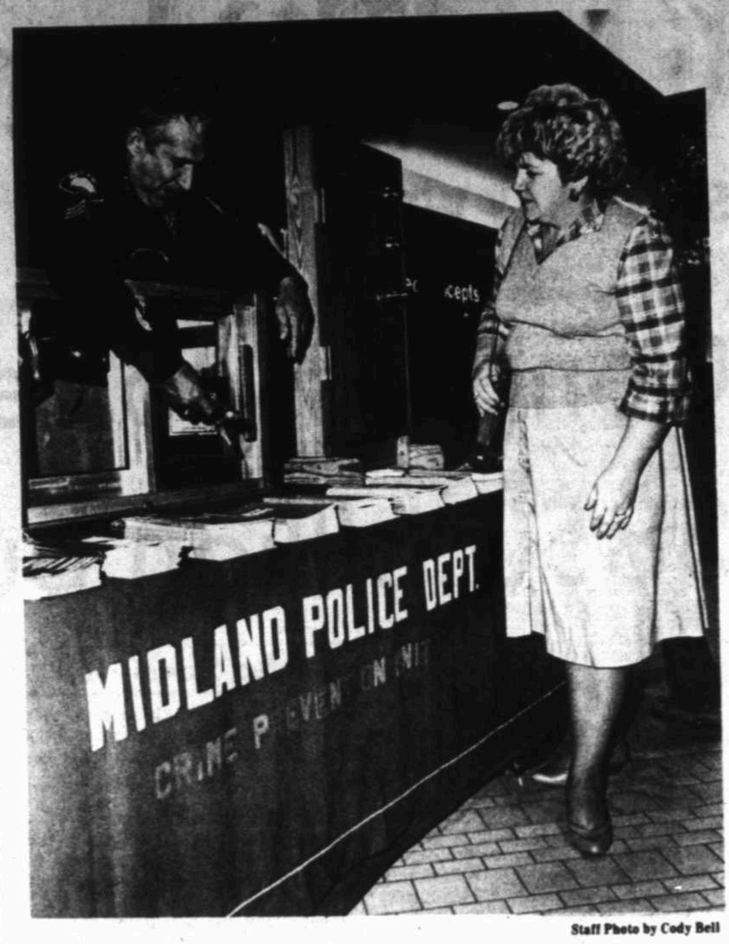

These officials said they believed the budget would be well-received in Congress.

These are other details of Reagan's tax and spending plan:

—Increase defense spending from an estimated $208.9 billion in 1983 to $238.6 billion in 1984 and $277.5 billion in 1985. While a sizable increase, these figures represent an $8 billion reduction from Reagan's original plan in 1984 and again in 1985.

—Mandatory "workfare" for recipients of food stamps, welfare and Supplemental Security Income, as well as a tightening of eligibility for recipients of subsidized housing. The "workfare" program would require able recipients to take public service jobs.

Jury hung, released in office theft case

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The jury trying to decide the guilt or innocence of 23-year-old Lori Reese in an office theft case remained deadlocked and wound up in a hung jury Friday.

The six-man, six-woman jury in 142nd State District Court deliberated about eight hours Thursday afternoon and night and Friday morning before they were locked in a stalemate: seven jurors for acquittal, four for conviction and one undecided.

The defendant had been charged with pilfering $455.85 in cash July 14 shortly before she resigned, due to her pregnancy, as a clerk from Cox Marketing, a subsidiary of Taco Villa, at Midland Regional Airport.

The state, which had relied on circumstantial evidence to win a conviction, maintained that Ms. Reese had taken at least $1,000 from the office by altering computer records. State witnesses included a Cox Marketing executive, the office manager and office clerk. None had seen Ms. Reese steal any money but apparently suspected that she did so. Ms. Reese denied the allegations.

About three hours after the jury had begun deliberations Thursday afternoon, the jury foreman said the jurors had deadlocked. However, the judge suggested the jurors try to resolve their differences. Later that night, the jurors were still in disagreement, so the judge ordered them to go home and sleep and to resume their deliberations the next day.

They did, and the judge admonished them earnestly to try to reach a unanimous verdict.

"It is your duty to agree if you can do so without violating conscientiously held convictions that are based on the evidence," the judge said in reading the Allen charge, designed to goad jurors into reaching a verdict.

No juror should refuse to agree on a verdict just out of "mere pride of opinion hastily formed or expressed," the judge said.

"Yet, no juror simply for the purpose of terminating the case should acquiesce in a conclusion that is contrary to his own conscientiously held view of the evidence," the judge said.

"You should listen to each other's views, talk over your differences of opinions in a spirit of fairness and candor and, if possible, resolve your differences and come to a common conclusion so that a verdict may be reached."

The judge noted that the case was "important" and that "another trial would be a heavy burden on both sides."

"There is no reason to believe that the case can be tried again any better or more exhaustively than it has been. There is no reason to believe that more evidence or clearer evidence would be produced on behalf of either side.

"Also, there is no reason to believe that the case would ever be submitted to 12 people more intelligent or more impartial or more reasonable than you...You are not partisan. You are judges, judge of the fact. Your sole interest is to ascertain the truth from the evidence in the case."

Despite the judge's exhortations, the jurors remained deadlocked, told the court so, and the judge dismissed them from the case.

Fourth storm of week hits California

the ocean Thursday. State public assistance officer Jake Hopp said no statewide dollar damage estimate was available Friday, but 1,099 houses were already reported damaged, "and that number is increasing."

Authorities estimated damage to the hard-hit Rincon stretch of the Ventura County coastline near Los Angeles at $10 million, said John Flynn, chairman of the county board of supervisors. Orange County spokesman Tim Doyle placed the damage toll at $10 million for the Sunset, Surfside and Seal Beach area alone.

In the Sacramento-San Joaquin River Delta on Thursday, the highest tide in 58 years — 10.34 feet — broke through levees at Mildred Island, Fay Island, Disappointment Slough and Shima Tract.

IN NORTHERN California, Friday morning's 7.1-foot tide washed in under clear skies, and authorities reported damage no more severe than some sandbags washing away.

A mild earthquake measuring 3.6 on the Richter scale shook storm-weary Malibu at 6:54 a.m. Friday, but no damage was reported. "We checked all our canyon roads and everything," said Los Angeles County sheriffs' Deputy James Skiman. "As far as we know it didn't do any damage."

Among the damaged homes were 100 in Malibu, some owned by film stars including Bruce Dern and Dyan Cannon. Reports that actor Burgess Meredith's home was damaged were not true, officials said Friday.

"It was just one big wave that washed straight through the house," Dern said while sweeping muddy water and broken glass from the oceanside home he bought for $2.7 million 12 years ago.

The storm was expected to churn out snow as it moved eastward into the Rockies, with up to 6 inches of new snow expected in Colorado late Friday and up to 8 inches forecast in Arizona.

TEN PEOPLE died Thursday in light-plane accidents that authorities suspected were caused by bad weather. A Cessna 210 crashed into snow-covered hills just south of Minersville, Utah, killing four people, and a Mitsubishi MU-2B crashed during a thunderstorm at Scottsdale, Ariz., killing six and injuring another.

In Northern California, up to 500 homes were inundated in Santa Venetia, along with 17 expensive homes bashed in by a single wave in Aptos.

"Look, there was a wall there," he said, surveying the damage as clouds gathered Friday. "I got here too late."

Jack Overstreet, 50, a painting contractor in Aptos, lost the front wall of his home to one huge wave.

"My sons and I were in the back of the house when the section of wall blew in. It blew all the way, like a bomb. From that point on, when the waves came up, they would just wash right in."

A single wave smashed 10 swank homes at Aptos and seven others were damaged so badly they may never be fixed, the sheriff's department said. Damage at Aptos and nearby Rio Del Mar was estimated at $30 million.

ORANGE COUNTY spokesman Tim doyle said 650 homes were damaged in Surfside, Sunset Beach and Seal Beach and six homes at Capistrano Beach, where urgent sandbagging efforts were underway Friday after barriers were washed away by Thursday's high tide.

"Seventy-five homes (in Capistrano Beach) still are directly threatened by anticipated rains tonight," Doyle said. "Many of these homes are said to be worth $1 million."

Rainwaters washed out a section of Southern Pacific track in Santa Barbara County, halting rail travel on California's only north-south coastal line. Travel resumed Friday after the section was repaired.

Just south of Los Angeles, the historic Santa Monica Municipal Pier was still standing Friday after one-third of it was demolished by Thursday's surf. But city spokesman Dave Shirey said a partial inspection of damage to the pier's 100-foot tip wasn't promising.

"Up to half of the pilings in that area have been washed out," he said Friday. "I really don't know what's keeping it up there."

The surf also tore away two sections of the Seal Beach Pier in Orange County, undermined about 100 feet of the landmark 725-foot Crystal Pier in San Diego's Pacific Beach, washed away part of a Standard Oil pier in San Luis Obispo County and wrenched seven pilings loose on Ventura County's fishing pier.

Stolen goods found in man's home

ODESSA — Odessa police were hoping to resolve as many as six or seven unsolved burglary cases after arresting a suspect in his home Friday afternoon and discovering a treasure trove of stolen goods.

A police detective said Officers Sharon Lawrence and Jim McDonald executed a search warrant on an Odessa man at his residence Friday afternoon. The officers discovered a cache of stolen property which included stereos, cassette players, video recorders, television sets, guns and jewelry.

Detective C.B. Choate said Friday night that the suspect was in custody and would likely be charged with burglary sometime today. Choate said police were searching for another man in connection with the stolen property and hoped to have the second suspect in custody sometime early this morning.

Choate said some pieces of the recovered property have already been linked to an unsolved business burglary and two unsolved residential burglaries. He said police may have recovered about $8,000 worth of goods stolen from the Trinity Baptist Church, 1228 S. Jackson Ave., in May 1982.

are required to take water, "so they won't get dehydrated and their urine stays clear."

"When I go in a patient's room," the aide said, "I talks to them to see what kind of state they're in. You've got to have understanding with them...I wouldn't hurt no patient."

The judge, however, determined that the aide was reckless in caring for the patient and thereby caused her injuries. He did not find that the injuries were intentionally inflicted, as the prosecution had contended.

The state had sought a third-degree felony conviction, which could have netted the former aide up to a 10-year prison sentence and a $5,000 fine.

Instead, the judge reduced the offense to a Class A misdemeanor, sentenced the woman to a one-year jail term and fined her $1,000 but suspended both sentence and fine "during your good behavior." The woman was placed on probation.

However, Baskin told the defendant that the offense of injury to an elderly person is serious because "the victim is usually helpless to defend" himself. The offense is similar to abuse of children, "who don't have the ability to defend" themselves, he said.

Baskin told the defendant that her "anger must simply be controlled." He noted that people working with young children and with the elderly "must not vent their anger, for anger will come."

And if she should sense that there's another chance of her again getting angry in a similar situation, "for goodness sake, find another line of work," the judge admonished the ex-aide.

Earlier, Rex argued that "some type of incarceration would be justified.

"It is a violent crime, though the injury wasn't debilitated, and the patient did recover." Rex said that those who violate laws concerning care of the elderly "should be punished" to deter such offenses happening over and over.

Defense attorney Edward T. Garza argued that "this lady is going to live with this conviction and will be barred from being a nurse's aide." He said that was sufficient punishment. His client, who said she wanted in her heart to do good, was remorseful and said she felt sympathy for the elderly patient.

Police investigating call-respond time

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Police Department has started an internal investigation to determine why it took officers 28 minutes to reach the home of a woman who reported someone was trying to break in.

Jackye Patrick, 29, had been stabbed to death by the time officers arrived at her residence in surburban Oak Cliff.

"Last year it took us an average of 4½ minutes to answer a call. We were late on this one," said Dallas police spokesman Ed Spencer. "Right now we have all kinds of questions on it and not very many answers."

The woman called police Thursday night.

"She sounded calm when she called in," Spencer said. "She said she wanted the police because prowlers were in her yard. Then, I don't know what happened. It was a shift change, maybe the dispatcher had trouble getting a car available to go, then it took 15 minutes to get there...By the time we did get there, they'd gotten her."

Spencer said a window in the woman's house had been forced open.

Clements resting after surgery

DALLAS (AP) — Former Gov. Bill Clements was resting comfortably Friday after undergoing hip replacement surgery here, a spokeswoman said.

"He came through the operation beautifully and is doing very well," said a spokeswoman at Clements' office at SEDCO, an oil exploration company.

The spokeswoman, who asked not to be identified, said Clements underwent the two-hour operation at Gaston Episcopal Hospital on Wednesday to correct damage from an injury he suffered while playing handball in Dallas 16 years ago.

Clements, Texas' first Republican governor since Reconstruction, was defeated in the Nov. 2 general election by Democrat Mark White. The tough campaign, however, did not aggravate the hip problem, the spokeswoman said.

"He just decided to get it done now, while he had the opportunity," she said.

Two to represent state in Mexico

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, said Friday that he and Good Neighbor Commissioner Jose Alvarado Jr. will be Texas' representatives next week at ceremonies installing the new chief of Mexico's railway system.

Uribe also said he and Alvarado will present letters of congratulations and a pledge of continued cooperation to Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid from Texas Gov. Mark White.

"I'm pleased that Gov. White is placing such a high priority on improving relations between Texas and Mexico," Uribe said. "The troubled Mexican economy is one of the major reasons why South Texas is suffering and why unemployment on the border is at depression levels."

Uribe said he also planned to meet with other Mexican economic and energy officials to discuss ways to strengthen the border economy.

Drug abuse center gets grant

AUSTIN (AP) — A $50,000 grant to prevent younger students from getting hooked on drugs will be awarded to an Edinburg drug abuse center next month, says Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville.

Director Don Herzing of the Tropical Texas Center said the money would be used to provide a drug abuse prevention program for about 180 elementary and junior high school students.

Attorney says Wilson thought shipments legal

HOUSTON (AP) — Former CIA agent Edwin Wilson was working for the CIA on a "deep cover assignment" when he arranged a shipment of more than 21 tons of plastic explosives to Libya, a defense attorney said Friday.

Attorney Herald Fahringer said his client also alerted CIA officials of a plot to assassinate President Reagan and that he provided U.S. officials with documents listing Soviet military equipment that was in Libya.

"We will attempt to prove that Mr. Wilson believed that it was legal to send the explosives over there and that it was authorized by the CIA," Fahringer told a federal court jury in an opening statement.

Fahringer said Wilson was not being paid by the intelligence organization, which expected him to earn his money from his company.

Wilson, 54, faces four charges that he smuggled plastic explosives in October 1977.

U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling sequestered the jury and ordered its members to return at 9:30 a.m. Saturday for the second day of testimony.

Prosecution witness Jerome S. Brower, an unindicted co-conspirator who owned the California explosives firm J.S. Brower & Associates, testified that at Wilson's request, he bought 54,000 pounds of the plastic explosive C-4 in 1977 and shipped 21 tons of it to Tripoli, Libya.

He said he charged Wilson for the entire amount but held out seven tons because the former agent "had not paid me for other supplies he had bought."

The explosives, bought from three plants in the United States and Canada, were transferred from boxes into more than 800 five-gallon cans, then shipped to Houston to be flown overseas, Brower said.

Brower said he bought the explosives after Wilson deposited $588,000 in his Swiss bank account.

He said the explosive, a white powder, was covered with a layer of a dark compound used in drilling wells and that the cans' labels showed they contained drilling mud.

Once the shipment was in Libya, Brower said, he complied with Wilson's request by changing an invoice to show that each can contained 60 pounds of explosives, rather than the 50 they actually held.

"Mr. Wilson told me he had told the Libyans I had stolen this (shipment) from U.S. military installations," Brower said.

Fahringer argued that Wilson was working for the CIA on a "deep cover assignment" and had established a company named International Consultants as well as two other firms which he did not name.

Fahringer acknowledged that Libyan officials discussed weapons with Wilson frequently.

"If you're selling apples and oranges in Libya, you don't learn anything," Fahringer said. "When you're selling military equipment you learn a lot."

U.S. Attorney Dan Hedges said the government would provide evidence of Swiss bank accounts which showed Wilson's payment to Brower, owner of a California explosives firm, and the Libyan government's payments to Wilson.

Hedges said the government will provide testimony to show Wilson asked Brower to teach Libyans to make bombs out of household items like toaster ovens.

The trial got under way after a morning of closed-door meetings and the selection of two alternate jurors.

A seven-woman, five-man jury was seated Thursday.

Two other men, Edward Bloom, 74, of Pomona, Calif., and Donald Thresher, 41, of Houston, also are charged in the shipment of explosives.

Convicted shooter extradited from Canada

EL PASO (AP) — Eugene Tafoya, convicted of shooting a dissident Libyan student, was arrested Friday by federal agents on a Canadian extradition warrant charging him with firebombing an auto.

The warrant stems from Tafoya's alleged 1979 burning of a car in Kitchener, Ontario, that belonged to a former business associate of ex-CIA agent Edwin Wilson. Wilson now is on trial in Houston for conspiring to ship 20 tons of explosives to Libya.

Tafoya, 46, is being held in lieu of $1 million bail at La Tuna Federal Correctional Institution near El Paso following arraignment Friday before a U.S. magistrate, said federal district clerk Roy Jean.

Tafoya was convicted of wounding a Colorado State University student with two shots to the head in an alleged murder-for-hire plot. Faisal Zagallai lost an eye in the attack and now lives in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia.

A former Green Beret for five years in Vietnam, Tafoya alleges at the time of the Fort Collins, Colo., shooting that he was employed as an agent and demolitions expert for the CIA under the direction of Wilson.

The CIA says Tafoya applied for an intelligence position with them upon his 1976 retirement from the U.S. Army but was not accepted.

Tafoya, free on appeal of his 1981 shooting conviction, was arrested in his car outside the apartment of his wife. He "is kind of a mysterious guy. He's got some interesting background," FBI agent Ron Hoverson said.

Tafoya told The Associated Press this month, "the feds may have other plans for me." Federal grand juries in Denver and Austin are currently investigating Tafoya on possible tax and firearms violations.

Nature's ways to blame for state of California

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A full moon, stiff winds off the Pacific Ocean, low atmospheric pressure and other vagaries of nature are to blame for the record-setting tides battering the California coast, weather experts say.

The rare combination of natural elements has boosted tides more than 2 feet higher than predicted levels in the past few days.

The result is destructive, 20-foot breakers from Eureka to San Diego, tidal flooding in the flatlands throughout the San Francisco Bay area and frenzied repair work on eroding levees in the Sacramento-San Joaquin River Delta.

Thursday's peak tide of 10.34 feet at the Delta town of Rio Vista was the highest ever seen there since record-keeping began in 1925 and measured more than 2 feet higher than predicted, according to weather officials.

"Everything has worked together to run these tides up," said Bill Helms at the state's emergency flood control center.

Southern California's high tide Friday morning measured 7.1 feet, up from the usual 3 or 4 feet.

The primary tidal force is the moon's gravitional pull on the Earth, which causes seas to go up and down daily. A full moon creates even higher tides because the earth is lined up with the moon and the sun, a phenomenon known as syzygy, in which the gravitational tug on the oceans is at its strongest. Gravitational forces are stronger when the moon is closest to the Earth and the Earth is closest to the sun.

Coupled with this week's storms was a gravitational triple play: The moon was full before dawn Friday, it was closest to the Earth Friday afternoon and the Earth was closest to the sun just 26 days ago.

Winds off the Pacific, clocked at more than 90 mph in some places during the week, have exaggerated the tides. They drive the water against the coast "like a big drift of snow," explained state flood worker Cliff Gregory.

The sea also tends to flow from regions of high pressure toward low-pressure areas like the repeated storm fronts that have pushed ashore.

In estuaries and bays, the runoff from rain-swollen rivers and creeks has combined with the tides to raise the sea level.

Helms said the extra 2 feet, 4 inches of tide at Rio Vista could be attributed to barometric pressure, inflow from upstream rivers and wind.

Ed Gonsalves was one of many Aptos, Calif., residents who saw their beachfront homes wholly or partly swept away by the force of waves spurred by the third storm in a week that has ravaged the state's coast. Gonsalves was happy about one thing, however: "Look at that. It didn't get away," he said in speaking of the soaked-but-still-there mounted marlin he holds above.

Scouts ensure delivery of supplies

NICEVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Six teen-age volunteers and five adult advisers from Eglin Air Force Base hauled tons of clothes and food to Louisiana flood victims Friday, side-stepping military rules.

After the Air Force refused to airlift the aid package, Explorer Post 500, a scouting group sponsored by an Eglin police squadron, volunteered to rent a tractor-trailer and deliver the cargo.

The Explorers, accompanied by uniformed military chaperones, left Niceville at 6:30 a.m. Friday en route to Jonesville, La., about 55 miles south of Alexandria.

The truck was loaded with about three tons of clothes and food donated by people who responded to appeals broadcast by Niceville radio station WFSH.

"Most of the clothes are like new," said station manager Red Gilson. "There's even a brand-new leather jacket."

Louisiana Gov. David C. Treen was putting the group up overnight in Jonesville, Gilson said. But the Explorers paid about $500 to rent the truck with money they earned in a fund-raising drive.

Treen planned to send a representative to meet the group in Jonesville, Gilson said.

On Tuesday, local Air Force officials at Hurlburt Field here agreed to fly the charity load to a military base in Louisiana, Gilson said.

But on Wednesday, Air Force officials rescinded the offer, saying regulations barred them from flying the items because President Reagan has not declared an emergency in that part of the state. Such charity flights are allowed only under such emergency measures to keep the Air Force from depriving commercial carriers of cargo, they said.

Sections of Louisiana were flooded after heavy rains Christmas weekend. Most of the flooding has since receded.

Beachfront residents hang in

APTOS, Calif. (AP) — Celeste Goscila gratefully watched the sun come out Friday, crediting a miracle with saving her life when a wave the size of a building reduced her home to rubble.

"I was pinned against the wall," the shaken young woman said after crawling from the wreckage of her parents' beachfront home in this quiet coastal community about 70 miles south of San Francisco. "I don't know how I got out. I said a prayer. Somebody up there was looking out for me."

The violent storm, third in a string which began last weekend and was expected to continue into next week, destroyed 10 homes and damaged seven more, perhaps beyond repair, in Aptos. High tides, driving rain and howling winds battered most of the state's coastline, and another storm was expected late Friday to continue the onslaught.

Leroy W. Johnson, 66, a retired architect, watched the huge wave smash into the Goscila home and several others on Thursday. He says their preparations ironically may have been their undoing.

"There was one big wave that came first," he said Friday. "It hit the Goscila home and because they were so well boarded-up...the wave went up and lifted the roof, dropped the supporting column, came back down and pushed the walls out."

Edward Newman lives across the street from the Goscila home, and he watched as the huge wave pounded it down.

"It just exploded," he said. "Exploded. One wave just delivered the coup de grace."

Martha Bogetti and her husband, George, were in the Goscila house when it collapsed.

"The force of (the wave) knocked the front door closed, the roof came in," she said, adding that 4 feet of water surged through the falling structure. "It just tumbled us around. We were out of control and the furniture was flying around and all the windows were broken."

Rebuilding, including a stronger seawall, will probably begin pretty soon, he said.

"I don't think anyone on the beach will accept the idea that they can't protect their homes," DeSilva said.

"Look, there was a wall there," he said, surveying the damage as clouds gathered again Friday. "I got here too late." He was able to smile, however, while pointing to a mounted marlin, which lay in a puddle on the soggy living room floor.

> "The whole ceiling can collapse at any time. My sons and I were in the back of the house when the section of wall blew in. It blew all the way, like a bomb. From that point on, when the waves came up, they would just wash right in."

"Look at this," he said. "It didn't get away."

Jack Overstreet, a 50-year-old painting contractor, lost the front wall of his home to the huge wave, and he doesn't know if he can save the rest.

"The whole ceiling can collapse at any time," he said. "My sons and I were in the back of the house when the section of wall blew in. It blew all the way, like a bomb. From that point on, when the waves came up, they would just wash right in."

From inside Overstreet's A-frame home, the missing wall provides a panoramic view of the sea, waves pounding a few feet away and the wind swirling through the sodden living room.

Sgt. Carl Kuebler, spokesman for the sheriff's department, said Friday the county advised people in low-lying areas to vacate their homes, but did not issue an official evacuation order.

"Some did (leave) and some elected to stand by and watch their property be destroyed," he said. "There's not...a lot you can do to stop a raging sea."

Eight people were found dead in a four-room duplex in Prichard, Ala., Friday, apparent victims of fumes caused by a faulty space heater. Here rescue workers and curious neighbors gather outside the duplex. One person was in serious condition Friday night as a result of the fumes.

Asphyxiation apparently kills eight

PRICHARD, Ala. (AP) — The bodies of eight people, most of them teen-agers or younger, were found strewn around an apartment Friday, apparent victims of fumes from a faulty space heater, police said.

An 18-year-old found unconscious was in critical condition.

Officers said the bodies of one adult, four teen-agers, two other children and one infant were discovered in the four-room duplex when an 11-year-old girl in the family, Mary Rorex, returned from a playground trip.

Police Sgt. J.C. Crenshaw said the girl ran to the landlady, Rosie Liles, who called police at 11:34 a.m. Ms. Liles opened the door to the apartment and turned off the heater, and two neighbors helped pull some of the bodies onto the porch, the sergeant said.

A neighbor, Aubrey Van Osdol, said he was working on his car when he heard screams. "The girl said, 'Help. Get them out. They're all dead.' "

He said he ran into the house and found one body on the couch, with another in a bedroom and one in a hallway. He said he tried to revive one of the victims and opened two windows.

"By then the fire department arrived and got the remaining bodies out," he said. "I smelled a little gas in the house, but it was mostly heat, about 70 to 80 degrees or hotter in the back bedrooms."

A man living in the apartment, Clendon McNeely, told police that he had left for work at 6:50 a.m. and there appeared to be no problem then, Crenshaw said.

Police said the gas heater in the living room apparently didn't have proper ventilation, causing death by asphyxiation.

It was not immediately clear at what time the deaths occurred.

Officials at the University of South Alabama Medical Center, where the victims were taken, said Carol Elaine McGugin was listed in critical condition.

Crenshaw said the bodies were found at various points throughout the modest, $85-a-month apartment, which had two bedrooms.

The dead were identified as Shelia T. Whiteley, 34, and two of her daughters, Leslie Speese, 11, and Angie Taylor, 16; Perry Rorex, 17, his sisters Deanne Rorex, 9, and Paula Rorex, 15, Paula's 3-month-old daughter, Chrissie Rorex; and Danny Taylor, 17.

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — Racing against high tides, rescue workers built a barrier of sandbags and rocks Friday to shield a suburban housing tract from floodwaters unleashed by storm-smashed levees.

More than 150 workers brought in some 40 truckloads of earth and concrete to block water surging from an 18-foot gash in a rain-soaked levee west of Stockton. The floodwaters were nearing a northern Stockton residential neighborhood, said a spokeswoman for the state Office of Emergency Services.

She said high tides were expected at 3:30 p.m. PST, but that the newly made barrier was expected to hold. She said dangerously high tides and more rain could threaten the housing development and nearby Interstate 5.

Authorities said they also were focusing rescue efforts on other farm tracts in the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta threatened by rising waters. Along one levee, water was only 4 feet from the top, compared with the usual 12 to 15 feet.

Several tracts were flooded Thursday after heavy rains and high winds weakened earthen levees in the agriculturally rich Delta.

There were no reports of injuries or estimates of damage. The flooded land was almost entirely agricultural and no inhabitants were immediately threatened by the flooding.

"The fog is coming in, the wind is picking up and we expect heavier rains this afternoon and early this evening," said Col. Arthur Thompson of the Army Corps of Engineers.

Thompson, who made an aerial survey of the stricken area with Rep. Vic Fazio, added, "You're going to get an onslaught back in the Delta area tonight," but he said it would not be as severe as the last two days.

Bear Bryant's death won't stop plans for movie of his life, producer says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The death of former Alabama football Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant won't stop a planned movie version of his life, with John Wayne Jr. considered for the role of the young Bryant, a movie producer says.

Bear Bryant

Larry Spangler, who announced with Bryant last July that the film would be made, said Bryant's death Wednesday won't change that plan.

"We still expect to start filming between March 15 and the first of April," Spangler said Thursday.

Before Bryant's death, he said, "we were talking to only one distributor. But now everybody is calling me. The whole world. I've literally got hundreds of phone messages...My agent is negotiating around the clock."

Spangler said Wayne, the 20-year-old son of the late movie star, is being considered to play Bryant as a young adult. He declined to say who might be cast as the older Bryant.

Most of the footage will be shot in Alabama, at Tuscaloosa and Birmingham, although some film will be shot in Bryant's native Arkansas and in Texas, where Bryant coached before going to the University of Alabama.

LONDON (AP) — Soviet leader Yuri Andropov is secretly an avid collector of abstract art, officially frowned upon in the Soviet Union since the 1930s, the Times of London reported Friday.

Yuri Andropov

The newspaper quoted George Costakis, perhaps the world's foremost collector of avante-garde Russian art, as saying Andropov is "deeply interested in abstract art," as are the Communist Party chairman's daughter and son-in-law.

Costakis is quoted as saying he expects that within a few years, abstract art will no longer be labeled "decadent" by party ideologists.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Larry Hagman, television's ruthless J.R. Ewing of "Dallas," has won permission from the state Coastal Commission to remodel his Malibu house despite complaints from neighbor Burgess Meredith.

Larry Hagman

Meredith, who played Sylvester Stallone's trainer in the series of boxing movies, objected to Hagman's remodeling in the star-studded Malibu Colony, claiming he violated coastal act guidelines because the finished product would be higher and extend too far seaward.

"The staff reported that those weren't problems and that it (the remodeling) did in fact comply with the Coastal Act of 1976," said Kati Corsaut, spokeswoman for the Coastal Commission.

Meredith was the only neighbor that objected to the remodeling.

'Shazam scam' aimed at researchers

NEW YORK (AP) — Call it Shazam Scam: Two teenage magicians working undercover, conning scientists into believing that their ability to contort silverware was proof of their psychic powers.

James "The Amazing" Randi, a magician and self-styled debunker of psychics, calls it "Project Alpha." He claims his four-year scheme proved that parapsychic research is "claptrap science."

"A substantial number of persons who believed themselves simply too smart to be fooled were literally hornswoggled," Randi said.

But Washington University in St. Louis, the major target of Randi's hoax, says he is trying to con the public. Researchers never claimed to have conclusive evidence that the magicians were psychic, according to university officials.

The fraud began in 1979, when the university opened its McDonnell Laboratory for Psychical Research, funded by a $500,000 grant from the McDonnell Foundation.

Randi said two magicians, Steve Shaw, 18, of Washington, Pa., and Mike Edwards, 17, of Marion, Iowa, had written separate letters to him, praising his efforts against psychics and offering their help.

He dispatched them to St. Louis, and testing began.

McDonnell researchers watched as Shaw bent wires by stroking them — unaware that Shaw had bent the wire beforehand. Shaw and Edwards took photographs that had images superimposed on images — surreptitiously arranging the double exposures.

Shaw knocked a clock off a table, apparently without touching it. Actually, he pulled the clock with a thin nylon thread.

A report of the experiments was published in the journal Research in Parapsychology. Word of their exploits circulated and were featured in articles in the National Enquirer.

Shaw and Edwards talked with reporters Friday in connection with an article that is appearing in Discover magazine next month and a television show scheduled for Feb. 8 on NBC.

Before the cameras, they demonstrated some of their tricks and scoffed at the scientists they claimed to have fooled.

"Do you know what's really scary? They're the ones who are teaching your kids," Edwards said.

Fred Volkmann, spokesman for Washington University, said researchers had never gone on record in academic journals subject to peer review with any claim that the two were psychic.

He said papers in Research in Parapsychology are not subjected to that kind of review, and in fact are drawn from discussions of work that are conducted at parapsychology conventions.

In fact, said Volkmann, in 1981, the lab released a statement in which it said "ordinary explanations exist for these effects, given the conditions under which they have been observed ....

"We do not claim that evidence conclusive of psychic ability has yet been demonstrated," the researchers said.

And though Randi said Shaw and Edwards were told to admit their deception if they were ever confronted, Volkmann said such a confrontation did occur and the two did not own up.

The foundation that established the unit at Washington University was set up by James McDonnell, the chairman of the board of McDonnell-Douglas Aircraft. McDonnell, who died in 1980, was a man of "eclectic interests," among them psychic phenomena, McDonnell-Douglas spokesman Ray Geffry said. The foundation is not connected with the company.

Randi said other researchers fell for the stunt, allowing Shaw and Edwards to create surprising photographic effects by spitting on a lens and to turn the numbers of a digital watch to gibberish by putting it in a microwave oven.

Randi, of Rumson, N.J., says there should be more research into psychic phenomena, and magicians should be brought in to expose charlatans. But Volkmann said magicians have been reluctant to reveal their tricks to researchers so they themselves could uncover fakes.

"That's his trade. The magic of not knowing has to be there, or he's out of business," Volkmann said.

'World's filthiest person' won't be seen at UTEP

EL PASO (AP) — Should an X-rated cult film starring the "world's filthiest person" be shown at the University of Texas-El Paso?

University provosts have banned "Pink Flamingos" because they say a film showing couples dueling for title of grossest person on Earth has no redeeming qualities.

Babs Johnson stars in the John Waters movie as an overweight transvestite who holds the title of Earth's filthiest person, but faces competition from another couple who try to out-do her.

The movie, produced for $20,000, includes scenes of bestiality, the eating of excrement and ends with the public execution of Miss Johnson's challengers.

Because of the "tasteless" nature of the film's contents, school authorities banned the movie, which was scheduled to be shown twice on March 25.

University President Haskell Monroe may overturn the Dec. 6 decision to delete the film from UTEP's movie series because of an appeal filed by students, Dean of Students Jose Avila said Friday.

Earlier this week, Criminal Justice professor Ernest Guinn Jr. told UTEP's student newspaper he agreed with Avila that the movie should be withdrawn because it was in the student's "best interests."

Avila announced last month that "Pink Flamingos" was being canceled, but UTEP's film committee strenuously objected, saying students should decide whether they wish to see the movie.

Luis Patino, appointed mediator in the issue, said attempts to ban the film from the campus could violate student's constitutional rights to freedom of speech and expression.

The student's appeal could result in the American Civil Liberties Union's filing of a lawsuit, Patino said.

Undelivered letter brings $35,000 price

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A piece of undelivered mail dating to the Civil War fetched $35,000 at auction, and some experts say the high price is a good economic sign for stamp dealers.

An Arizona collector, who declined to identify himself, bought the envelope Wednesday. It had been mailed from Griffin, Ga., to New York City, but was returned by Union authorities stamped 3 cents postage due.

The return of the envelope was consistant with the Union's policy of not delivering Confederate mail, according to Richard Wolffers, the dealer who conducted the auction at his electronically guarded store in San Francisco.

People arrested for books

WARMINSTER, Pa. (AP) — Five people were arrested after they failed to return overdue library books despite repeated notices from the library and an order by a district justice.

"These people have been given seven to 10 notices from the library to return the overdue books," District Justice James M. Kelly said. "They failed to respond to any of them. I sent them a letter Dec. 27 and they even failed to respond to that. We can't let this continue."

In a crackdown last summer, Kelly had about a dozen people arrested.

On Thursday, four Warminster Township book borrowers were arrested. The fifth, Linda DiNenno, also of Warminster Township, was brought before the judge Friday. She had not responded to 12 notices to return three books to the Warminster Township Free Library, Kelly said. One of the books had been out since 1980, he added.

Arrested Thursday were Joyce Smith, Susan Burry, Linda Frazier, and William Ferry. All were released on $500 bail for a hearing before Kelly next Wednesday.

"Most of them were pretty polite about it," Kelly said. "Only one was a little bit hostile, and I'm a bad person to get hostile with."

Kelly said the arrests were made under an article of the township criminal code that he described as "retention of library property after notice to return." Violators face fines of up to $300 each in addition to library fines.

Township Librarian Caroline Gallis said about 4,000 books out of a collection of 65,000 had been long overdue last year when Kelly began his crackdown. Since then, she said, more than 3,000 of the overdue books have been returned.

Man who spent eight years in prison granted new trial, released on bond

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A man who served more than eight years in prison for a murder and rape he swears he didn't commit was granted a new trial and freed on bail Friday after the district attorney said new evidence may prove the man is innocent.

"I'm always thinking, in jail, that the truth will come out in the open, and that hope kept me going," Miguel Rivera said as he walked out of the sheriff's cell room on the seventh floor of City Hall into the arms of his brother, Gilberto, for a tearful embrace.

A crowd of supporters from Philadelphia's Hispanic community, which has led the fight for a new trial, cheered as Rivera raised a fist in a victory sign and thanked them for standing by him.

"It's our day," said Rosa Sauris, a member of the Legal Defense Committee. "Today we've shown how the system can be wrong. He's been innocent for 10 years."

District Attorney Edward Rendell didn't oppose a new trial for the 1973 crime that occurred on the grounds of Philadelphia's Museum of Art, contending that new evidence apparently withheld from the defense indicated Rivera may have been a mile from the scene.

Common Pleas Court Judge Edward Blake, while noting the prosecutor wasn't saying that Rivera was innocent, said he had no choice but to grant a new trial.

He fixed bail at $50,000, and said 10 per cent cash was all Rivera needed to walk out free on Friday. His supporters brought in the $5,000 two hours later.

After stopping to talk to reporters, Rivera led a brief march three blocks to the Cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul to say a prayer of thanksgiving.

Rendell has 120 days to decide whether to try the 35-year-old Rivera again on charges he helped kill Kevin Wolf, 18, on the night of June 27, 1973, and participated in the gang rape of Wolf's teen-age girlfriend.

Asked his plans, Rivera said, "it all depends what the court is going to do to me."

"Nine years ago they should have let me go," he added.

"I think I'm going back to my country (Puerto Rico) when it is all over," he said. "I feel like I did 20 years in prison. When you haven't done anything, every day feels like double. But I feel great now."

His brother, who operates a hardware business in San Juan, said there was a job waiting for Miguel in his office.

Rivera was one of six people found guilty in the case, mainly on the testimony of Juan Garcia, who cooperated with police and received an eight-year sentence.

It is probable, according to sources in Rendell's office, that Rivera may not be tried again mainly because the key witness, Garcia, has recanted, and Rivera now has alibi witnesses.

One other defendant, Paul Valderamma, was freed in 1979 after showing evidence that he was in Puerto Rico when the crime occured.

Garcia served a little over five years. After he was released he changed his confession, alleging that neither he nor the others were involved. He blamed police pressure for getting him to lie, and claims he is telling the truth now to relieve himself of guilt for giving false testimony.

Rendell, however, said Garcia's assertion "that he was not a witness to or a participant in the crime at the art museum is unworthy of belief."

Two other men sentenced to life in the case are seeking new trials, but the district attorney is opposing their motions.

Fidel Santiago and Juan Marrero were in the courtroom when the judge fixed Feb. 14 for a hearing on the new trial request.

Marrero cried out as he was being led out in handcuffs.

"It's a frameup, man," he said, while Santiago nodded vigorously in assent and others members of the Hispanic community in the courtroom called out, "Si, Si."

"I didn't kill anybody, man," Marrero said. "I didn't kill anybody. I've been in jail 10 years and I'm tired of all this."

Truckers' groups warn of strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of groups representing thousands of independent truckers said Friday they see little chance of heading off a shutdown Monday.

Mike Parkurst, president of the Independent Truckers Association, told reporters it would take a "miracle" to avoid a nationwide strike.

Parkhurst, who called for a Jan. 31 shutdown three weeks ago, said he expects most of the estimated 100,000 independent driver to take part in the strike. His association claims to represent 30,000 truckers, a contention that has been challenged by other trucking groups.

But leaders of several other organizations agreed that the drivers are determined to vent their anger over recently enacted increases in fuel taxes and truck fees.

Independent drivers represent less than 15 percent of the trucks on the nation's highways. But they haul 90 percent of the fresh food, most of the household goods and half of the steel.

While independents traditionally have gone their own way, leaders of the most influential trucking groups say the momentum for a strike has not diminished despite the Reagan administration's urging against it.

"If anything it's escalating," said Jim Johnston, president of the Owner-Operators Independent Drivers Association of America. In a telephone interview, Johnston said he is not in favor of a shutdown, but that to argue against a strike "would be suicide for our association."

George Sullivan, head of the Independent Truckers Unity Committee headquartered in Gary, Ind., said the strike has widespread support.

"If they (the truckers) do what they say they're going to do there is going to be a very big shutdown," said Sullivan, whose group includes a cross-section of independent drivers including many of the steel haulers.

The strike is opposed by the majority of the trucking industry, represented by the American Trucking Associations, and also has failed to get the support of the Teamsters union.

Bennett Whitlock, the ATA's president, said regulated freight carriers will not participate in the shutdown and "I urge independent operators not to participate either."

Whitlock noted that the federal truck-use tax that has angered the drivers doesn't take effect until July 1985 for independent truckers. He urged independents to join the ATA in seeking legislation to reduce the fees.

Parkhurst predicted that consumers should begin to feel the effects of a strike in three to seven days. He said such things as fresh fruit and vegetables will be the first to disappear from store shelves in an effective shutdown.

Parkhurst said the truckers want a lid on state highway taxes, a rollback of the new federal levies and a "meaningful discussion" of the 55 mph speed limit.

The key demand, however, is repeal of the highway use taxes enacted as part of recent legislation that increased the gasoline tax from 4 cents to 9 cents per gallon. Under that bill, the user fees increase from $240 a year to $1,900 a year by 1989.

Parkhurst said he is urging the members of his group to park their trucks, return to their homes and remain there until a settlement can be reached. The group is not planning large convoys or other mass demonstrations, he said.

Clarinetist causes disharmony

BERLIN (AP) — A backstage dispute over a gifted young clarinetist has turned to public warfare between the Berlin Philharmonic and its conductor, Herbert von Karajan.

After a 28-year musical marriage, the maestro refuses to speak to the orchestra and has threatened to cancel millions of dollars worth of recordings and television appearances.

Both sides agree the case of Miss Meyer is a symptom of the crisis in relations between Karajan and the 116-member orchestra. Both sides deny sexual discrimination is an issue.

"He has a picture in his mind now of the orchestra as his enemy," Wilhelm Nordemann, the musicians' lawyer, said in an interview.

Berlin's state government is trying to mediate the widely publicized battle, but no progress has been reported since Karajan returned Wednesday from a Swiss holiday. Karajan, 74, was not available for comment on the dispute despite repeated telephone calls to his office.

THE CRISIS CAME last week when the orchestra's manager Peter Girth signed Miss Meyer to a year's contract against the orchestra's will.

Like all new musicians with the world-renowned Berlin Philharmonic, Miss Meyer is on a year's probation, which began in September. After 12 months, the orchestra has the right to decide whether she stays.

Girth acknowledges this is the first time in the orchestra's 100-year history that a probationary seat has been filled without the musicians' consent, although it is not legally required.

The state-owned orchestra accuses Girth of "grossly abusing" its rights and has demanded that the city fire him. Karajan has voiced his "full support" for Girth.

"The government fears Karajan would walk out, that he would take it personally if Girth were fired," Nordemann said.

The city government debated the issue last week but postponed any action.

Sabine Meyer has had little to say about the uproar but has accepted her controversial appointment with a twinge of regret.

"I'M SORRY I CAUSED all this fuss," she said. "I didn't mean to."

The trouble began last November when 60 percent of the musicians voted against hiring her as first clarinet, saying the young Munich soloist discovered by Karajan is very talented but needs more orchestral experience to blend with the Berlin sound.

Incensed, the maestro canceled a New Year's Eve television concert and threatened to boycott all recording and TV dates with the orchestra unless Sabine Meyer were hired.

The orchestra cried blackmail and retaliated by giving Girth a vote of no confidence.

Germany's more sensational newspapers were swift to brand the conflict a case of sexism but none of the parties involved did so.

"That battle is finished," Nordemann said, referring to last June's fracas over hiring violinist Madeleine Caruzzo, 26, whose appointment broke the philharmonic's men-only tradition.

Girth dismissed the cries of sexism and said the philharmonic was so impressed with Miss Caruzzo that "she has no problem" in getting a permanent seat when her probationary year ends in June.

SINCE UNDERGOING surgery for a pinched nerve in his back three years ago, Karajan has cut back on the number of records and outside appearances with the orchestra, Girth said in an interview.

"They are trying to get rid of Mr. von Karajan and make more money," he charged.

"But this is not the time to prove what is the orchestra without Mr. von Karajan," Girth declared. "The only thing which has to be proved now is that the orchestra is grateful to a great man — and that's what they don't understand."

Nordemann denied that money is motivating the musicians. The real problem, he contended, is that Girth has driven a wedge between the orchestra and Karajan.

"Herbert von Karajan is an old man," Nordemann said. "It's easier for him to talk to one man than to all, so he became accustomed to talking only to Girth."

Before Girth was hired four years ago, the orchestra and Karajan always managed to settle their differences through discussion, Nordemann said.

New coalition to create fund to help elderly meet utility bills

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A new coalition will create a volunteer fund to help the elderly in Louisiana and Texas with utility bills, Gulf States Utilities Company announced Friday.

"This program is not just for those who are GSU customers," Jim Moss, a division vice president of the company, said.

Moss, a division vice president, said GSU's board of directors is contributing $100,000 in shareholder money to help kickoff what will be called Project CARE.

The coalition includes GSU, the Urban Ministry Coalition and the Capital Area Agency on Aging here.

Beginning Feb. 1, Gulf States customers will be able to make voluntary contributions by adding $1 to their monthly payments.

Anyone wishing to donate more must write a separate check, Moss said.

"The agency on aging sees the need for such a program on a daily basis as we deal with senior citizens facing real-life financial crises, and is looking forward to administering this program," said Sandra Adams of the agency, who joined Moss at a news conference to announce the program.

The program involving donations will encompass the entire GSU service areas of Louisiana and Texas, which includes roughly 500,000 customers, Moss said.

However, any needy people outside the GSU can get financial help, he stressed.

The program will cover heating and cooling bills.

Long-sought particle discovered

NEW YORK (AP) — A giant atom-smashing machine in Switzerland has produced clear evidence of the sub-atomic W particle, sought for 40 years and believed to carry the "weak force," one of the four basic forces of nature, scientists say.

Researchers believe the discovery is the strongest support so far for a theory that says two of nature's basic forces — electromagnetism and the weak force — are really the same phenomenon showing itself in different ways.

It may be a step toward formation of a "grand unification theory," which postulates that all four basic forces evolved from a single force.

Professor Carlo Rubbia of Harvard University, head of a team working at the giant particle accelerator near Geneva, Switzerland, operated by the multinational CERN consortium, disclosed the discovery Wednesday at a meeting here of the American Physical Society.

The CERN machine is a hollow ring four miles in circumference in which billions of protons — components of the atom's nucleus — are fired at high speed against a beam of antiprotons, mirror images of protons.

Rubbia said a computer examination of billions of particle collisions in the machine last month showed five "clean" events providing clear evidence of W particles.

"This is indeed a major step forward in contemporary physics," the CERN report said.

Modern physics postulates four fundamental forces in nature: the electromagnetic force that binds atoms and molecules together; the strong force that holds an atom's nucleus together; gravity, and the weak force, which is responsible for certain forms of radioactivity.

Ever since James Clerk Maxwell showed in 1865 that electricity and magnetism were different manifestations of the same phenomenon, physicists have tried to show that all forces could be tied together in one theory.

In the early 1930s, physicists showed that the force involved in electromagnetism could be thought of as being carried by photons, the basic massless particles that make up light.

Over the years this led to theories that a particle of some kind carries all forces.

In 1967 Steven Weinberg and Abdus Salaam proposed that the weak force and electromagnetism were identical. The W particle, which they called the "intermediate vector boson," should carry the weak force — but it should be extremely heavy and thus detectable only in the decay products of extremely energetic collisions of other particles.

The W particles, about 60 times as heavy as the proton, were found in the fallout of a fireball that released 540 billion electron volts, among the most energetic bursts ever attempted. One electron volt is the energy gained by an electron accelerated by one volt.

Theorists now are trying to tie the "electro-weak" force to the strong force — believed to be carried by massless particles called gluons — in a single theory. No one yet has convincingly been able to bring gravity into theoretical union with other forces.

The Rubbia team's report, to be published in the Feb. 25 issue of Physics Letters, said the work had confirmed "the idea of unification of the weak and electromagnetic forces."

Rubbia said that in addition to the five "clean" cases with strong evidence of W particles, three other possible ones had been identified so far.

Study of the computer data will continue, and beginning in April, another three-month search for W particles will get under way.

Midland Lions Club member speaks at Panhandle meeting

Duke Jimerson of Midland spoke recently at the Lions Panhandle convention held in Snyder.

Jimerson received the International Key six months ago for bringing 200 persons into the Lions organization. There are about 12 living Lions throughout the organization's 157 member countries to have received the International Key. International membership totals 1,348,988.

In May 1982, he received the International President's Award from Kay Murakami of Japan, international president.

Jimerson is a former director of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, honorary member of Downtown Kiwanis Club, past state president of the State Mental Hospital Development Association of Texas, past recipient of Midland's Most Outstanding Young Man Award, and serves as a trustee for the First Baptist Church.

Midland has 575 members in Lions clubs and two new clubs are being started in 60 days.

'SWAT teams' Pennsylvania's solution

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Union truckers will use unarmed "SWAT teams" to help them through picket lines if independent truckers go on strike Jan. 31, a Pennsylvania Teamsters official says.

"If there is a problem somewhere on a picket line...our guys will go there and tell them (strikers) as nicely as we can not to block our people from running," Ty McCue of the Teamsters Joint Council 40 in Pittsburgh said this week.

The Independent Truckers Association, which claims 30,000 dues-paying members, has called for the nationwide strike to protest increased federal taxes and federal regulations.

Water beds going to dogs, cats, monkeys...

A Chinese wild dog, also called a dhole, got the first one by pretending to be pregnant. The animal didn't have any offspring, but got to keep the bed.

"She's attached to it," said zoo physiologist Andrew John Phillips. "She likes it so much that when she conks out at 7 p.m., she just stays there until morning.

"It would be very hard to take it away," he said, apparently referring to the dhole's sharp teeth.

The zoo's waterbeds are thin sandwiches of flexible aluminum packed with water. Tiger claws can't puncture the material and the beds can be hosed off with water.

Covered with hay, they are comfortable and are kept at 75 to 80 degrees, said Phillips, the inventor.

Jill, an Indochinese leopard that really is pregnant, has been nesting on a waterbed for two weeks. "She's so attached to it, she will actually drag her food onto it," Phillips said. "She won't chew her food until she's on the waterbed. She thinks that's her den."

Although some zoo enclosures have central heating, most are inefficiently warmed with heat lamps, Phillips said, and the animals sleep on cold concrete.

On chilly, wet nights in the zoo canyons, baby animals have sometimes become separated from their mothers and died. That happened a year ago when Jill bore two cubs. One got separated and died the next day, partly because it didn't stay warm enough, said Phillips.

Steven Prock, left, and his associate David Medford help a sandhill crane named Bonaparte stand on his new legs, made from plastic plumbing pipe and wire. The crane was found near Corpus Christi a few weeks ago and was flown to Sherman earlier this week to be outfitted with the artificial limbs. Bonaparte returned to Corpus Christi Friday and the legs were removed, as he did not seem to know what to do with his new limbs.

Crane's artificial legs to come off; Specialist to advise on next step

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Bird lovers who have been trying to fit a sandhill crane with artificial legs decided Friday they would remove the first legs made of plastic and steel, and call in a specialist to advise them on the next step.

Bonaparte, whose legs probably were either caught in a trap or snapped off by an alligator, was fitted Thursday in Sherman with new rubber, plastic and steel legs and feet. But he didn't seem to know what to do with the new limbs, and would not try to stand up.

"These things were made by someone who had no background in birds, and I just think a lot more study on the bird needs to be done before a decision is made about a prosthetic device," said John Karger of San Antonio, a veterinary technician who directs Last Chance Forever Inc., a non-profit group that rehabilitates and — usually — releases birds of prey into the wild.

Karger said he has had some success with making artificial feet for hawks and eagles, but he added that none of his patients have had no feet at all.

"What you do about a prosthesis depends entirely on what is going to happen to the bird. A bird with no feet is going to die a horrible death in the wild," Karger said.

Karger said the legs must be precisely the right length or the bird would not be able to eat, that the legs must be flexible, and designed so that the tender stumps are not chafed or injured.

The artificial legs made by Steven Prock of the Texoma Health Care Center in Sherman — a company that makes artificial limbs for humans — were removed Friday and Bonaparte was flown on an American Airlines flight to Corpus Christi.

There, Debbie McReless, 27, a mother of three who treated 452 sick and injured wild birds last year, will continue her care of him.

Mrs. McReless said that when she got Bonaparte two weeks ago from the farm woman who found him about 15 miles from Corpus Christi, experts advised her to have the bird destroyed.

But Mrs. McReless said that she loved the big bird and would not allow it to be killed.

"I wouldn't kill that bird if somebody paid me," she said. "I keep things that other people would destroy. Right from the start, the wildlife hotline, the zoos, vets, everybody said, 'Kill the bird. It's better that it doesn't suffer.' That's not my attitude. He's not suffering. He's a nice bird. I would never put him to sleep."

"We help birds both ways. If a bird wants to live, even if it can never be released, we'll help it live," Karger said. "But if it's obvious that a bird is trying to die, we help it die. From what I've heard, this bird is pretty inspiring, I'm willing to help him go for it."

Karger said he would go to Corpus Christi next week to look at Bonaparte and help decide what can be done for him.

"Another reason I want to do it is that if this had been a whooping crane or some other endangered bird, you'd have all the wildlife foundations falling all over each other to fund the project," he said. "But since it's a common bird, the little man has to bear the cost. I'm for all animals, not just glamorous animals."

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Convicted narcotics trafficker Jimmy Chagra angrily interrupted his murder trial Friday, denouncing as "all lies" a prison informant's testimony linking him to the killing of a federal judge.

In an outburst that brought a warning from U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions, Chagra, on trial for the murder of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood of San Antonio, Texas, attacked the testimony of Jerry Ray James, an habitual criminal who turned informant for $250,000 and parole from a life sentence.

James said Chagra confessed to him that he was responsible for the Wood slaying while the two men were inmates at the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan.

Chagra's outburst, in front of the jury, came after James testified that Chagra told him his late brother, Lee Chagra, had once told him to contact another Leavenworth inmate, who was a friend of convicted hit man Charles V. Harrelson, if he "needed any business taken care of."

"They're all lies," Chagra said. "This is a joke, your honor."

At the next recess, Sessions cautioned Chagra about his right to remain silent and said the jury might interpret his courtroom statements to mean that he had given up that right.

Earlier, as James testified outside the presence of the jury that Chagra had approached him about a contract killing, Chagra yelled from the defense table, "You're a liar!"

As prosecutor Ray Jahn tried to continue questioning, Chagra flung a harsher name at James.

Chagra, 39, is accused of paying Harrelson $250,000 for the May 29, 1979, murder of Wood, who was known as "Maximum John" for the harsh sentences he handed down. Harrelson was convicted of murder and conspiracy last month in San Antonio. Chagra's trial was moved to Jacksonville because of pretrial publicity in Texas.

The government claims Chagra wanted Wood removed from a narcotics case, which after the judge's murder resulted in a 30-year prison sentence for Chagra.

James, 42, was sentenced in 1977 to life in New Mexico for being an habitual criminal and was moved to Leavenworth after prison riots in New Mexico. He supplied information to the FBI which led to court-approved wiretaps of conversations between Chagra and his relatives in late 1980 and early 1981.

James also taped conversations with Chagra under the direction of the FBI, which was trying to link Chagra to Harrelson and the judge's murder.

Sen. Laxalt tells cheering crowd that Reagan must run in 1984

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada took over Friday as general chairman of the Republican Party and told cheering GOP officials that President Reagan hasn't "any real choices" but to run for re-election in 1984.

"He just can't get the job done in four years," said Laxalt, who is one of Reagan's closest friends.

Without a murmur of dissent, the Republican National Committee named Laxalt to the newly created, part-time job of general chairman and Frank J. Fahrenkopf Jr. to the full-time post of regular party chairman.

A 43-year-old Reno, Nev., lawyer, Fahrenkopf has been Nevada GOP chairman for the past eight years. He said he would have the same authority and same prerogatives as past party chairman.

Laxalt's role will be to coordinate activities of the national committee and the Senate and House campaign committees as well as those of any Reagan re-election organization that is formed.

Laxalt was chairman of the 1976 and 1980 Reagan presidential campaigns.

He told a party luncheon that before he agreed to accept the post "I had to determine within my gut" that Reagan planned to run for a second term.

"Off the conversation I had with him, eyeball-to-eyeball, with every political instinct left to me, I came away with the firm conclusion that Ron Reagan very definitely will be a candidate for re-election."

At that point the audience erupted into loud cheers and applause.

But Laxalt gave no indication that Reagan had flatly told him he would run.

The president's political plans were clearly the main thing on the minds of the politicians assembled for the party meeting.

Earlier, former Gov. James Rhodes of Ohio, a member of the national committee, offered a resolution, unanimously adopted, endorsing Reagan and Vice President George Bush for a second term.

Later, Rhodes said he acted entirely on his own and had talked to no one at the White House. He said his resolution was directed, in part, to any Republicans who might be thinking about challenging Reagan in 1984.

In his speech after being elected party chairman, Fahrenkopf said the GOP must alter its image.

"We are not the party of the rich and elite as our Democrat opponents have falsely attempted to label us," he said.

"Another challenge, one of perception over reality, faces our party among black Americans, who feel that the Republican Party and this administration does not care about them and their problems, which have evolved from years of unjustified discrimination," said the new chairman.

The committee also decided to meet June 8-11, in Dallas, Texas, which will be the site of the 1984 Republican National Convention.

Reagan's 'light' thrills toymaker

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, using a novel visual aid, told Republican leaders Friday his 1984 budget is "The light at the end of the tunnel." One Republican leader called it a "bitter pill" instead, but an Arizona toymaker was overjoyed at the president's show.

Reagan opened his a budget meeting by pointing to a model railroad tunnel and said "here's light at the end..."

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., heard the president out and said the budget, freezing domestic programs while still projecting a $189 billion deficit, is "going to be a bitter pill for a lot of people."

House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., meanwhile, reported the story about the toy tunnel.

The expression "light at the end of the tunnel" was used by Lyndon B. Johnson's administration during the Vietnam War to describe the prospects for the elusive settlement to the conflict. That phrase gave birth to another in the political lexicon: "credibility gap."

But a Phoenix toy company, Trinkets Ink., thinks it scored big with Reagan's display. His "The Light at the End of the Tunnel" was a pre-production novelty item — one of several sent to "influentual people" across the United States, said production manager Mike Buehrly.

Other samples of the tunnel were sent to network television personalities, for example, but Buehrly said Reagan was the main target.

"We were hoping for a big break. That break happened today," Buehrly said in Phoenix. "When the president showed our product, it was the best publicity possible. That's exactly what we were looking for."

Invented by a Califrnia man, the toy is made of a pressboard base, plywood railroad ties, injected foam, spray paint and a light bulb arranged in such a way as to give a three-dimensional effect of entering a darkened tunnel.

It will list for $19.83 when made available to department stores nationwide in the upcoming months, according to Buehrly, whose company owns the rights to the product.

"We feel there's a market for it and it fits in nicely in these economic times," said Buehrly.

"We thought it would fit into a businessman's office or on his desk at home. Why a toy tunnel? Why did the pet rock come into existence? Who knows?"

Cover good news, Speakes tells media

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes proposed on Friday that the news media, especially the television networks, begin covering "good news" as a regular feature on the evening news programs and in newspapers.

In a speech to the National Association of Government Communicators, an organization of career public affairs officers, the deputy White House press secretary said, "I'd like to take a moment to tell the press how to cover the news...Let's have a good news segment on the nightly news. Let's have Dan (Rather) and Frank (Reynolds) and Roger (Mudd) turn around in their chair and look dead into the camera and say, 'Now, folks, for some news on the bright side.'

"Lets report on what's right about this great country of ours," Speakes said. "Let's look at the heroes. Let's create a new beat for the newspaper reporter who's been covering the stories about gloom and doom. Let's free the television reporter who's been reporting the bad economic news. Let's call this new beat 'the upbeat,' and let's put the reporters to work."

Speakes complained, "It seems today that 10.8 percent unemployed is big news while 89.2 percent of the Americans who have jobs and enjoy the highest standard of living in the world are not news."

The spokesman acknowledged that the news media gave considerable coverage to the announcement by General Motors that it is rehiring 21,000 workers who had been indefinitely laid off, but he charged that the media failed to report the sharp decline in inflation since Reagan took office.

"In the first year we were in the White house, Reagan victories were news," Speakes said. "During the second year, winning was no longer the stuff that makes headlines. But a loss — any loss — by the president was news...A few months ago inflation was the No. 1 problem on the public mind. We heard double-digit inflation so many times that we thought it was one word instead of three.

"Well, we reduced inflation. We cut it in the last two years from 13 percent to 3 percent and in some months, prices went down, not up. But public opinion polls show the public does not realize that prices are no longer going up.

"We've cut inflation down to one third of its '79 level, but the public doesn't know that because the media hasn't told them."

Workers' bodies taken from wreckage of B-52

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) — The bodies of five Air Force maintenance workers were recovered Friday from the wreckage of a B-52 bomber which exploded and burned.

The bodies were found in the upper fuselage of the B-52G plane.

Lt. James Stratford, information officer at Grand Forks Air Force Base, said there were no classified documents on the plane and an earlier statement to that effect attributed to him was wrong. The report said the information was recovered from an ejection seat.

The explosion occurred about 9:30 a.m. Thursday as maintenance workers checked valves and other parts of the fuel system. It was under control in 15 minutes, but only the tail of the bomber was left intact, civilian fire officials said.

"All night the fire department was pumping out residual fuel that was left in the aircraft unburned," Stratford said. "Then the explosive ordnance team from Ellsworth Air Force Base (South Dakota) deactivated the explosive cartridge that fires the ejection seat. And then it was safe for the recovery team to go in and recover the bodies."

The dead, one woman and four men, were identified by the Air Force as: Airman 1st Class Robin D. Rise, 20, of Fremont, Neb.; Airman 1st Class Michael F. McDonald, 23, of Bloomington, Ill.; Senior Airman Robert W. Gray, 23, of Alexandria, Va.; Airman 1st Class Anthony M. Salva, 21, of Chicago; Senior Airman Scott A. Wicik, 24, of Tony, Wis.

Col. John Fairfield, commander of the 319th Bombardment Wing to which the plane was assigned, said an interim board at the base would immediately investigate. He said the 15th Air Force, of which the Grand Forks Air Base is a part, would conduct a more detailed investigation.

Col. Frank Horton, commander of the 321st Missile Wing, said the plane had flown a training mission Wednesday night and was undergoing routine maintenance when its fuel exploded. He said the plane, built in the late 1950s, was not carrying nuclear weapons.

Damage was estimated at $38 million, the plane's replacement cost.

"We had work going on the fuel quantity indicator gauge, and other people were giving it regular service and repair," said Col. Frank Cheshire, deputy maintenance commander.

"We had a big effort to clear the airplanes from both sides," Cheshire added. "I'm really proud of how fast we got that done." The ramp holds eight planes and three were near the bomber, Horton said.

Proposed budget highlights listed

Spending: $848.5 billion, an increase of $43.3 billion, with $30 billion of the increase going for defense.

Revenues: $660 billion, an increase of about $63 billion.

Deficits: The budget foresees a fiscal 1984 deficit of $189 billion, down from the 1983 deficit now estimated at $208 billion. A deficit of $194 billion is predicted for fiscal 1985.

Spending cuts: The budget anticipates savings by delaying for six months cost-of-living increases for people who get Social Security, food stamps, child nutrition aid, railroad retirement, veterans' pensions and veterans' disability compensation.

Taxes: The plan calls for tax increases of $146 billion over three years starting in fiscal 1986 if the economy is in a recovery and a selective "freeze" is enacted. The new taxes would include a $5-a-barrel levy on oil, increasing gasoline prices by 12 cents a gallon, and a surcharge on either income taxes or income.

Assumptions: Reagan's plan assumes that the economy will grow by 3 percent this year and 4 percent in 1984, that unemployment will peak in mid-1983 and remain high well into 1984. Inflation, measured by the change in the Consumer Price Index, is forecast to increase slightly from last year's 3.9 percent.

Defense: The budget calls for a $30 billion increase in defense spending to $239 billion in fiscal 1984.

Reagan: Solving MIA puzzle atop federal government's priority list

WASHINGTON (AP) — Finding out what happened to the 2,494 Americans missing in Southeast Asia is of "the highest national priority," President Reagan told their families Friday.

"Your government is attentive and the intelligence assets of the United States are fully focused on this issue," Reagan said, a declaration that brought a standing ovation from 550 people at a meeting of the National League of Families of POWs and MIAS.

"We are...working to achieve an accounting of our missing men," the president told the group. "The government bureaucracy now understands that these goals are of the highest national priority... "

Ten years after America officially ended its involvement in Vietnam and 591 U.S. prisoners were released, 2,494 servicemen remain listed as missing in action.

Many were pilots whose planes or helicopters were shot down in the jungles. A large number have been declared legally dead because so much time has passed without evidence of their fates.

But hopes some still might be found have been kept alive due to periodic reports from refugees in Southeast Asia who claim to have seen live American servicemen.

The Pentagon says it has looked into more than 478 such reports which have surfaced since 1975, when North Vietnam completed its takeover of South Vietnam.

Pentagon officials said Wednesday that they still must determine whether there is any basis to 220 of the 478 reports. Defense Intelligence Agency officials must inform Congress periodically about the status of their attempts to pin down whether the reports have any validity.

"I pledge to you that we will take decisive action on any live sighting reports that can be confirmed," Reagan told the gathering.

Many of the relatives were flown free by the Air Force to and from the meeting, which was held in a suburban Virginia hotel.

The president acknowledged that for a long time, the families received little sympathy.

"You were sometimes unfairly and cruelly branded as an emotionally distraught group that ignored reality and simply hoped against hope," Reagan said.

"Instead of being a full partner with your government in attempting to learn the fates of your loved one, you were confronted with legal rulings that presumed your loved one dead," he said. "You found yourselves quite literally on the outside, driven in some cases to demonstrate for attention in front of the White House gates."

League officials said they organized the meeting to coincide with the 10th anniversary of the Paris peace accords in an effort to draw public attention to the MIA issue. The organization also has prepared a number of television ads that will be broadcast soon.

"We hope the publicity will help," said Patti Sheridan, a spokeswoman for the group. "The issue is back on the front burner, where it should have been for years."

Vietnam has thus far refused to help, administration officials have said. The government of Laos, which is allied with Vietnam, has been more cooperative in recent months.

Some of the missing American flyers were shot down over Laos.

"We are fully prepared to take additional, concrete steps with the Lao government to improve relations," Reagan said.

Reagan told: Be ready for change

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders who got a preview of President Reagan's $848.5 billion budget Friday indicated that he had better be prepared to accept changes.

"I hope there is some room for negotiation" on proposals for defense spending and reductions in benefit programs, said Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

Although the budget will not be submitted to Congress until Monday, copies of the summary were provided to leaders of both the House and Senate.

The comments of those few who have seen the budget or learned of certain details made clear that the president's recommendations will have to be modified.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., repeated earlier predictions of a "donnybrook" over a virtual freeze on domestic spending but a $30 billion hike in military outlays.

Baker added that some kind of public works jobs bill — opposed by the president — likely would be added by Congress.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., has made the passage of a multibillion-dollar jobs program a top priority for House Democrats.

Nonetheless, Baker said, "the budget has a good chance to survive essentially as the president submits it."

But House Budget Committee Chairman James R. Jones, D-Okla., indicated that Reagan should be prepared to compromise.

"I hope this is going to be a give-and-take year, not a take-it-or-leave-it year," Jones said.

House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said he expected Democrats to use the record deficits projected in the budget as ammunition in a fight to repeal tax indexing that would adjust income tax rates to account for inflation beginning in 1985.

Reagan's spending blueprint forecasts deficits of $208 billion for the current year and only slight declines to $189 billion in 1984 and $194 billion in 1985.

Included in the budget is a program to cut health care costs with a freeze in physician payments and hospital reimbursements under Medicare, as well as a permanent reform of the hospital reimbursement system. In addition, tax deductibility of employee health care costs would be limited to $175 per employee per month.

India's illegal alien issue soon to come to a head

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW DELHI, India — A three-year, occasionally violent ethnic movement in the far northeastern state of Assam to expel nearly a million illegal immigrants from neighboring Bangladesh is headed for a showdown next month with the government of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

The student-led movement has vowed to block an election called to replace extraordinary central government rule with a new legislature and to disrupt life in the remote but economically important Indian state in an effort to protect the indigenous Assamese population's ethnic and cultural identity from the immigrant influx.

The new campaign could cause national economic disruption, and it threatens to add more turmoil to India's troubled northeast as the ethnic protectionists try to regenerate the massive popular support that their protest commanded at its apex in 1980.

HOWEVER, MS. Gandhi's government, bound by the Indian Constitution to restore legislative rule that was dissolved in March and replaced by an emergency "president's rule," says that it will go ahead with state assembly elections anyway and provide as much security as needed.

Already, scores of militant students have been arrested under national security regulations, and the balloting has been scheduled to be spread over three days beginning Feb. 14 to allow for the deployment of security forces.

State administrators appointed by New Delhi have placed police forces on alert and have ordered preventive arrests to maintain order.

Three political parties in opposition to Ms. Gandhi's ruling Congress-I Party have said they will boycott the vote, and the leader of the student protest predicted that only 5 percent of Assam's voters will turn out.

While the genesis of the conflict can be traced back to a flow of immigrants to Assam from the eastern part of then-undivided Bengal that began at the turn of the century, the bulk of what the Assamese call "foreigners" arrived in three waves, beginning in 1947 when the Subcontinent was partitioned into India and Pakistan; in 1965 during the Indo-Pakistani war over Kashmir; and since 1971, when the new nation of Bangladesh was created out of war-torn East Pakistan.

THE INDIGENOUS Assamese — a distinct ethnic and linguistic group that traces its origins to the ahom nomads from Thailand in the 12th century, but who are primarily Hindu — say they are in danger of being culturally and economically overrun by the influx of mostly Moslem immigrants across the porous border from what is now Bangladesh.

Precise figures on the number of illegal aliens in Assam are hard to come by and depend upon what definition is used to describe indigenous Assamese. Western journalists are prohibited from entering the irregularly shaped state that is connected to the rest of India by a narrow neck of land at the northeast corner of Bangladesh. Nonetheless, estimates range from between 800,000 and 967,000 Moslems and Hindus who settled illegally between 1961 and 1971, of whom 215,000 have refugee status.

Mindful that Bangladesh has refused to accept the immigrants, the student agitators have demanded that all "foreigners" who entered after 1961 be relocated in other parts of India, while the government has countered by saying that it would expel only those who settled illegally after 1971.

At its peak in 1980, the Assam unrest had turned into one of the largest mass demonstrations since the "Quit India" movement that ended with independence from Great Britain in 1947. The flow of oil from Assam to the rest of India was interrupted, and occasional bomb blasts rocked the state, including one in the capital of Gauhati that killed 20 persons. By official estimates, the three-year protest has cost nearly $1 billion in lost oil and industrial production. Assam provides about 30 percent of India's domestic oil production.

Since 1980, the intensity of the protest has waxed and waned, but popular support for the movement was sufficient to force Ms. Gandhi's government into protracted and ultimately unsuccessful negotiations after an attempt to crush the student-led agitation resulted in massive defiance of a ban on public meetings.

PROTEST LEADERS charged that local Congress-I (for Indira) Party officials tacitly encouraged immigration from economically blighted Bangladesh, assisted the aliens' settlement and then put their names on the electoral rolls to gain political support. They claim that 2.3 million illegal immigrants entered Assam between 1971 and 1979 to escape hunger and political instability and that the influx is continuing.

P.P. Nayar, Indian Home Affairs Ministry special secretary for Assam, ridiculed the students' claims, saying in an interview that there was no historical precedent in the world for such a mass expulsion.

Alien check set up

McALPIN, Fla. (AP) — For years, the U.S. Border Patrol has been fighting the flood of illegal aliens pouring over the Rio Grande from Mexico.

Now the federal agency has set up a new line of defense — this one at the fabled Suwannee River.

"All Mexicans coming to Florida come through here," Truman Carr, criminal investigator for the Border Patrol, says of the thousands of aliens smuggled to the state's migrant labor camps from the West.

Interstate 10 is the main east-west artery that passenger-laden pickup trucks and vans use to transport aliens from the Mexican border to work on farm labor crews in the Sunshine State.

While most arriving aliens head toward the lower part of the state, the Suwannee River — which snakes southwest from the Georgia line to the Gulf of Mexico — is a natural barrier where vehicles suspected of smuggling aliens can be intercepted, Carr said.

"I'd expect there might be as many as 10,000 in transit (during a year) and another 10,000 already living here," Carr said.

Carr, normally assigned to Miami but temporarily based in the small North Florida farming community of McAlpin in Suwannee County, said a recent five-day survey revealed 16 incidents in which 200 illegal aliens from Mexico were arrested entering Florida.

Duke Austin of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Washington said his agency deliberately avoids estimating the number of illegal aliens from any specific country as a courtesy.

"Every year we apprehend about a million aliens," Austin said. "In excess of 90 percent are Hispanic."

Carr said organized gangs are taking over the cross-country taxi business with aliens becoming little more than chattel to be bought and sold by crew leaders.

Transporters sell their cargoes to crew leaders for $300 to $600 a head, he said, and the alien often becomes trapped.

With a special network that includes informants at pick-up points on the route from the Mexican border to Florida, the Border Patrol will be able to anticipate the arrival of the smugglers, Carr said. Some will be stopped, and others will be tracked to their destinations, he said.

Nomination pushed

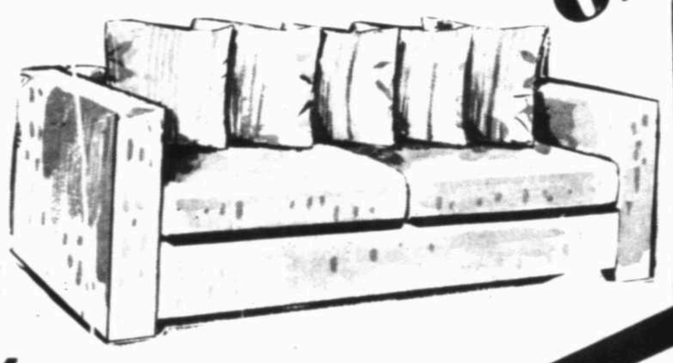

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Senate Subcommittee on Nominations has unanimously recommended that District Attorney Michael L. Fostel of Winkler County be reported favorably to the Senate for final confirmation.

Fostel was appointed to the post in the 109th Judicial District in April 1982 until the next general election. He was not present at the meeting to give testimony.

Woman works for abolition of fuel adjustment charge

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Louise Green said the increase in her electric bill finally hit her last summer after some friends came for a visit and she received a particularly large bill.

It wasn't that month's bill that bothered her as much as the next month's, when she said she "cut down drastically" on consumption.

"Yet my next month's bill was four cents higher," she said.

Now Mrs. Green, a retired advertising businesswoman and former local television show host, is trying to do something about those bills.

Not just for herself, she said, but for everyone in Texas.

Since September, she and numerous volunteers have been circulating petitions throughout Texas calling for abolition of the fuel adjustment charge, the portion of an electric bill passed along to consumers based on the increased cost the utility must pay for the fuel it requires to produce electricity.

Gov. Mark White, while campaigning last fall, expressed much the same sentiments as Mrs. Green.

She said she has approximately 90,000 signatures on petitions which have been circulated around the state, but she thinks as many as one million may be required to get the Texas Legislature's attention.

Now she's calling for a return of signed petitions that volunteers have taken out, so she can possibly present them to the governor in Dallas early next month.

In fact, she's still seeking more volunteers in what she calls a "grass roots" campaign by Texans who are against the fuel adjustment cost.

The petition states it this way: "We the citizens of Texas, petition for a change in the law governing electric untilities companies of Texas.

"We contend that the present fuel adjustment cost allowed by the PURA (Public Utilities Regulatory Act) regulations is unfair to the people.

"Presently, the fuel adjustment cost often equals or exceeds the basic rate cost allowed by the PUC (the state's Public Utility Commission). This forces the customer to purchase electricity before knowing the price. We believe that continuation of the practice is un-American and unacceptable.

"We request that the Public Utilities Commission and the Texas Legislature discontinue the fuel cost adjustment regulation and require public electricity utility companies to operate on a basic rate cost that prices the product prior to use."

Mrs. Green said she doesn't see that the PUC does anything for the people. She said the utility companies ask for about twice what they expect to get and the PUC gives them about half that — or just what they wanted in the first place.

"Any fifth grader can figure that out," she said.

Her suggestion is that the utility ought to be put on a basic rate — "and they'd have to use some of their lobby money to bargain for better gas prices."

She was referring to the price of natural gas that the electric utilities pay for the fuel, which in turn runs their electricity-producing boilers.

"I'd like to see the rate put back in the hands of local communities and the Texas Legislature," she said.

"Local people would be closer to the situation."

Mrs. Green said greed is the primary motivation of those who run the big businesses that control "the things that the elderly need." Those things are "inflated," she said, from "utilities, doctors, insurance, taxes...all have gone up.

"What I'm seeing is an incline back to where it used to be, the robbers barons and the poor guys.

"The question is, if I have oil or something else that everyone needs, do I have a right to price it so high that those who absolutely have to have it cannot afford it?"

And she said she believes it's time the big companies had to bear some of the burden which particularly the elderly and others on fixed incomes are having to bear.

West Texas Utilities is familiar with the petition and the issue, said Sherwyn McNair, spokesman for WTU.

"We face the facts and think every intelligent person would face the facts that fuel is the biggest expense in producing electricity," he said, "and we have to recover the cost some way.

"This automatic fuel adjustment clause for many, many years has been the accepted way to recover the cost throughout the nation.

"And now," said McNair, "we realize that with the current political climate in Texas, that some changes appear more than likely. Although we think the current plan is the best possible method yet conceived, we of course will cooperate with any method the PUC comes up with."

McNair said WTU realizes that it's difficult for consumers to plan when they don't know what they're going to pay month by month, but that WTU itself doesn't know what the cost of fuel will be from month to month.

"New methods could be worse," said McNair, giving the example of the possibility of the PUC requiring utility companies to estimate their rate for a quarter.

He said there could be a "great shock" at the end of the quarter if the utility then had to go way up in its rate in order to recover expenses.

Grand Canyon's El Tovar hotel retains historic air

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (AP) — It was Francisco Vasquez Coronado who discovered Arizona in 1540 when he was trying to find the legendary seven cities of Cibola. And it was Garcia Lopez de Cardenas who verified that tales of a magnificent Grand Canyon bordering old Tusayan (Hopiland) were true.

But it was conquistador Don Pedro de Tovar, one of Coronado's lieutenants, whose name was chosen by Santa Fe in 1905 for El Tovar, its new hotel at Bright Angel on the South Rim.

It was Tovar who first heard of the canyon from the Indians and told his commander about its vastness and its beauty.

Today, though the majestic structure retains its historic air, it also offers many comforts for the traveler — electric lights powered by El Tovar's own steam generator; fresh water via railroad tank car from Del Rio, 120 miles away; fruit and vegetables from greenhouses on the premises; milk fresh from the hotel dairy.

As the years sped by and the canyon drew more and more visitors from all parts of the globe, El Tovar became fabled as one of the finest hotels in the West — and there was that incomparable view.

But time also brought changes and the wear and tear of decades of year-round use.

Consequently, in 1971, with funding from the Fred Harvey Co., which manages El Tovar, and approval of the National Park Service, renovation began on the landmark facility.

Interior and guest rooms were refurbished first. Bathrooms were redone and new furnishings installed, but the design held true to the original architecture.

Said Richard A. Naille II, Harvey president, recently, "This hotel is 77 years old. We owe it to the public and future visitors to retain its historical integrity."

So, despite the smoke detectors and sprinkler systems, room service, televisions, forced air heat and summer air-conditioning — all modern additions — the feeling throughout is that El Tovar has retained its early-century, warm Western ambience.

Renovation of the hotel's exterior was the most difficult of projects, but it's what recreates the harmony between the rugged structure and its magnificent natural surroundings.

Old photographs from the University of Arizona, the National Park Service and the Fred Harvey archives helped the architect, Alton Lee of Menlo Park, Calif., to make the plans.

A few of the early blueprints were found but were time-worn and not too detailed. Mysteriously, one complete set of blueprints disappeared shortly after being discovered in the basement of the hotel.

Finding hand-peeled fir logs to match El Tovar's 1905 outward appearance took months, the process is seldom used now. Finally, a supplier was located in Elk City, Idaho, and the logs were shipped to Grand Canyon a few at a time to be carefully put in place.

There were delays and some surprises in the hotel's structure which constituted problems that had to be solved, but at last the $2 million exterior renovation has been completed and again, as in 1905, is ready for visitors both winter and summer.

Couple sells mail-order automobiles

FOREST CITY, N.C. (AP) — This little town known as "Little Detroit" has become the home of a unique spinoff — a mail-order car business.

The building and lot of R&H Motors is typical of Main Street in Forest City. The owners are lifelong residents and the business is family-operated.

Bob and Kay Harris specialize in special-interest automobiles. The majority of customers are out-of-towners who can't drive by frequently to look at the current selections.

Some never do drop by. Instead, they read their mail to find out what's available — in body styles, colors and prices. If they find a listing they think matches the car they want, they either make a special trip to check it out or have it delivered sight unseen.

Some customers fly down to look at a car, and, if they don't like it, they fly back, returning again when they think they've found the car they want.

The couple has sold Mercedes to individuals as far away as Texas and Colorado, and even sold one car to a man in Germany, where the cars are built.

Artist may not be winner

AGANA, Guam (AP) — Rick Duke's name was drawn for the $50,000 grand prize in December's Guam Lottery, but he may not be a winner.

Duke, an artist, did contract work drawing posters for Guam Productions, which operates the lottery for the Guam government. Company employees are barred from even buying a $1 lottery ticket.

The Guam attorney general's office cannot decide whether Duke should be considered an employee, said Bob Schnabel, a lawyer for Guam Productions, and it told the company to bring the matter before Superior Court.

Permian upsets Midland,60-52

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Odessa Permian's Rodney Hendrix went on a rampage in the first quarter, hitting six-of-seven field goals to lead the Panthers to an 18-13 lead and eventual 60-52 victory over Midland High Friday night at Chaparral Center.

Hendrix' shooting clinic didn't end after the first period. In the remaining three quarters, the 5-foot-7 guard added seven more in a 13-of-19 effort plus two free throws for a game-high 28 points.

"Rodney Hendrix," said Midland High coach Jack Stephenson when asked about his team's loss to Permian. "Our defense was fine. I just don't know what we could have done to stop him."

The loss kicked Midland High out of a share for the District 4-5A lead as both Odessa High and Abilene High won Friday. MHS is 5-3 in the league race while OHS and AHS own 6-2 marks with six district games for each team left on the schedule.

MHS started the first half race the same way by losing to Permian, but posted a 5-1 mark the rest of the way before falling again to Permian. They will have to equal that first half record again if they are hoping for one of the two playoff berths available to the district.

The Bulldogs and Panthers were exchanging buckets early in the game with Midland High taking the lead five times before a pair of three-point plays by Paul Logan and Hendrix set up a five-point lead, 16-11, a lead the Bulldogs could never overcome.

In the second quarter, Permian stretched the margin to 26-17 with 4:30 left to play and the best the Bulldogs could do the remainder of the game was pull within three, 36-33 with 6:50 left in the third quarter.

"We had a shot at them right after the half when we got within three," said Stephenson. "We made some mistakes. I'm not taking anything away from Permian, they played a heck of a ball game. They deserved to win the game with the way we played."

One of the problems Midland High had throughout the game was an inability to hit its shots, 33 percent in the first quarter which improved to 43 percent at the half. Permian, largely on the strength of Hendrix' near-flawless aim, hit 57 percent in the first quarter and 54 percent for the half.

Turnovers was a second key area that helped do in the Bulldogs.

"We had 24 turnovers, but that's down from 27 in our last outing (against Midland Lee)," said Stephenson, finding the bright lining in a dark cloud.

The Bulldogs did manage to win the battle of the boards, 39-32 but that wasn't enough to beat the Panthers.

Permian coach Charles Pattillo was happy with his team's performance all around, but especially in the shooting percentages. "We had a real cold night Tuesday against Odessa High and we were due to shoot the ball well. At the half against Odessa we shot 29 percent and we hit 44 percent tonight.

Our defense played really excellent," he added. "It was the first time we've played the 1-3-1 well. We didn't give (Doug) Hixon and (Johnny) Pannell time to shoot. We took Pannell's shot away from the base line."

Despite the Panthers' defensive efforts, Hixon was able to pick up 15 points on seven-of-13 field gials and one free throw. However, Pannell was kept scoreless in the first and fourth quarters and shot a dismal three-of-11 from the field for his six points.

One final area Coach Pattillo was pleased with was in assists. "We had 15 assists for a season high," he said, "and that can always make the difference."

On Tuesday, the Bulldogs will try to get back on the winning track when they travel to Big Spring to take on the Steers at 8 p.m.

Odessa edges Lee in OT

Bronchos retain grip on first

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Odessa High Bronchos are wiping their collective brow while the Midland Lee Rebels are feeling the strain of coming close and still losing.

For the third straight game, the victory starved Rebels made a run at a District 4-5A victory only to show a 40-36 overtime loss. Lee's misfortunes proved to be a bonanza for the Bronchos as they maintained their league leadership role by moving to a 6-2 district record. Abilene High, by virtue of its win over Big Spring Friday, shares the league lead with OHS.

However, the Bronchos did not play well and Lee played as well as they can. It was game Lee could have, and maybe should have won. But the strain of coming close may be getting to the Rebels.

IT WAS easy to see in the Rebel locker room after the game, that the Rebs thought they should have won this one. The pain and frustration was evident.

Even Lee coach Paul Stueckler, who has taken this miserable 3-21 season in perfect stride, had tears in his eyes after this loss.

"I'm tired of hearing and talking about how close and how well we played. I want to win one," Stueckler said.

The Rebels, who don't belong on the same floor with the back street alley fighters of OHS, forced the Bronchos to play Lee's game. The Rebels slowed the action with success and even produced an early lead. Lee held a 16-8 lead with 5:42 left before the half and limited the Bronchos to a mere six first quarter points. The upset looked possible.

LEE LED by a 24-17 margin at the half after hitting 11 of 16 shots from the field with Alvin Henry getting eight of his 10 points and Derek Westbrook six of his 11.

But as has been the case all year for Lee, the good shots disappeared in the second half as the Rebels hit only three of eight shots in the third period and two of six in the fourth period. The result was only 12 second half points and that included overtime where the Rebels failed to score while OHS won it at the free throw line with a poor four of eight charity tosses.

OHS coach Jerry Tubb was concerned about the game before it ever started. "You better be ready to play every night in this league. I'm just as worried about playing the Rebels tonight as if I were playing Midland High in Midland. Lee is not that far behind everyone else and they can beat you if you aren't ready to play."

But OHS was obiviously not ready to play this one. They hit only seven of 21 shots in the first half against Lee before coming back with an eight of 15 effort in the second half. Still, they let Lee control the tempo of the game and didn't catch up until the 1:04 third quarter mark when Howard Harris gave the Bronchos a 30-29 lead.

THE LEAD changed hands five more times before Thomas Taylor tied the game at 36 with an inside layup with 1:42 left in regulation. Lee then worked for the final shot, but Tyrone Thurman missed a 25-foot bomb as time ran out, obiviously not the shot Lee wanted to end the game with.

In overtime it was all OHS as Taylor hit three of six free throws and Harris one of three. Lee got off only one shot in the entire overtime period.

The saving grace for OHS was Taylor. He scored 15 points and was the only Broncho the Rebels couldn't handle. Lee held the high scoring Joe Terry to a mere 10 points while holding rough and tumble Harris to five and Charles Hunter to six. That group looks more like the Denver Broncos instead of the OHS Bronchos.

Lee will host San Angelo Tuesday at Chaparral Center and one wonders just how long the Rebels can suffer through these close battles before caving in. It's obivious that Lee will have to pick itself up by the boot straps between now and Tuesday.

Lee did win the junior varsity outing by a 69-66 score as Victor Brown led the way with 12 points while Earl Davis and Alton Davis each canned 10. Reggie Jones led OHS with 15 while Sammy Lopez and Manuel Saucedo both had 10.

Midland Lee (36): Alvin Henry, 5-0-5-10; Tod Brown, 2-1-1-5; Sylvester Johnson, 1-0-4-2; Bryan White, 2-0-0-4; Tyrone Thurman, 1-2-2-4; Derek Westbrook, 5-1-2-11; Eric Griffin, 0-0-1-0; Tim Hill, 0-0-0-0. Totals: 16-4-15—36.

Odessa High (40): Willie Adams, 2-0-1-4; Howard Harris, 2-1-4-5; Thomas Taylor, 6-3-3-15; Joe Terry, 4-2-1-10; Charles Hunter, 2-2-3-6; Albert Cruz, 0-0-0-0; Boyd Cowan, 0-0-0-0. Totals: 16-8-12—40.

Super Bowl game catches attention of Mexico, too

The "Pieles Rojas" of Washington against the "Delfines" of Miami in the "Super Tazon" will be broadcast live here — another indication of the phenomenal growth in popularity of American pro football in Mexico.

Fernando Schwartz, a sportscaster for the Televisa network that will broadcast a two-hour season wrapup and then the Super Bowl between the Redskins and Dophins on Sunday, said the sport has picked up a considerable number of fans in the past five years as the rules and complexities of the game become better known.

"The ratings for the games are always high," he said.

The sport is called "futbol Americano" here to distinguish it from "futbol" — soccer, the national sport of Mexico — and broadcasts of American college and pro games are standard fare throughout the season.

It's collegiate on Saturday, pro on Sundays and Monday nights — the same as in the United States. A trio of snappily dressed sports broadcasters voice the play-by-play and commentary in Spanish, with the crowd sounds and English soundtrack often audible in the background.

Its entire centerfold the day before was filled with news about Washington's win over "Los Vaqueros" of Dallas, who may call themselves America's Team but are Mexico's as well.

Jose Roberto Espinoza, who does the football play-by-play for the government television station, said the sport in Mexico was played as far back as the turn of the century.

He said it became more popular with college teams in the 1940s but did not really take off here until the 1960s when TV broadcasts started with the Dallas Cowboys.

He said the team always has had a Mexican star — most recently kicker Rafael Septien — and it already was familiar to Mexicans because of broadcasts by Texas stations that infiltrated across the border.

NFL coaches like Miami

By Associated Press

The coaches who didn't make it to Super Bowl XVII overwhelmingly favor the Miami Dolphins over the Washington Redskins on Sunday. But they say it will be close and defense will be the difference.

In a confrontation of one team on a roll offensively and one team on a roll defensively, 10 of 13 coaches willing to make a prediction in an Associated Press survey said Miami's "Killer Bees" should buzz by Washington "Hogs." Seven coaches declined to pick a winner and six could not be contacted.

"The Washington Redskins offensively are carbon copies of the San Diego Chargers," said Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano, recalling that the Dolphins swamped the Chargers 34-13 in the second round of the playoffs. "I think Miami will be able to stop the one-back offense as far as John Riggins is concerned.

"IF YOU'VE looked at the playoffs closely, you've seen Washington, particularly quarterback Joe Theismann, have a great deal of leverage because of the tremendous production from Riggins. You'll see Miami control that and stop it in the Super Bowl. ... I think defense will prevail, but I also think Miami will have enough offensively to be able to control the game, as the Dolphins did against the New York Jets. ... I don't think, though, that Miami is so dominant that it's going to be easy."

Miami beat the Jets 14-0 for the American Conference championship, and that was enough to convince Cincinnati's Forrest Gregg. The Bengals, who lost 26-20 to the San Francisco 49ers in last year's Super Bowl, missed a return trip when they were eliminated 44-17 by the Jets this season.

"Miami beat the Jets three times to get where they are and we certainly have a lot of respect for the Jets," Gregg said. "And I think Miami defensively is on a roll right now."

ALSO PICKING the Dolphins are Ron Meyer of New England; Dan Reeves of Denver; Frank Kush of Baltimore; Tom Landry of Dallas; Mike Ditka of Chicago; Tom Flores of the Los Angeles Raiders; Mike McCormack, who was interim coach of Seattle last season but has resigned to become general manager; and Ray Malavasi, fired as coach of the Los Angeles Rams after a 2-7 season.

Picking Washington were Bum Phillips of New Orleans, Ed Biles of Houston and Marion Campbell, who became Philadelphia coach after Dick Vermeil resigned following a 3-6 season that included two losses to the Redskins.

Meyer said the Super Bowl may be decided by a field goal.

"I really like Miami's defense and I believe the successful teams are the ones that play sound defensive football," said Meyer, whose team plowed through the Dolphins 3-0 in the regular season but lost 28-13 in the playoffs. "I think that Miami will win in a close one, something like 20-17."

Flores also saw a close game, dictated by a battle of the league's top two defenses, with Miami winning something like 24-17 or 24-21.

"Miami's defense has played tremendously in recent weeks against some very good offenses, five interceptions in each of the last two games and against a couple of teams (the Chargers and the Jets) that haven't thrown a lot of interceptions," Flores said. "I think their overall team concept is excellent — offense, defense and special teams. ... As an overall team, I'd have to give an edge to Miami."

BUT CAMPBELL said the Redskins' emotion may overcome the Dolphins' edge.

"I just have a hunch about the Redskins," he said. "I've seen their emotions because we played them twice. I witnessed their enthusiasm with everything clicking, and the way they enjoyed playing a good game."

Biles had similar reasoning.

"My mind tells me Miami, but my heart says Washington," Biles said. "I'm going for Washington because of the momentum they've got. They're on a roll. They may be this year's San Francisco."

Bears accuse Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Bears have accused the city Park District of breaching its Soldier Field leasing agreement with the National Football League club.

Super Count Down

Coaches hedge on predictions

LOS ANGELES (AP) — While the Miami Dolphins and Washington Redskins drew within two days of Super Bowl XVII, the coaches of both teams were reluctant to predict the game's outcome.

"I don't think you can forecast a game like this," said Gibbs, whose Redskins have the best record in the National Football League at 11-1.

"I think both teams have gotten here playing balanced football — offense, defense and special teams all have played a big part for us all year. But how the game will go? I don't think you can ever tell that."

Shula, whose 10-2 Dolphins are his fifth Super Bowl team, agreed.

"I'm not a predictor as such," the Miami coach said. "Both teams have strong defenses, physical and emotional. There are similiarities there. We've opened up offensively in the last few weeks and challenged defenses."

One of the major differences between the clubs is at quarterback. Miami will start young David Woodley, who was rated 27th among the league's passers. The Redskins use nine-year veteran Joe Theismann, who was the leading passer in the National Conference last season.

"Each and every game, we are learning about Woodley," Shula said. "People say look at his ratings. They're important because they chart a quarterback's progress. But you have to look at the whys and ifs of an incomplete pass. There are two sides to that story.

"This guy is in his infancy as an NFL quarterback. When you think of the number of balls he's thrown and you think of some other quarterbacks, say the number of times a Dan Fouts has thrown, it's mind-boggling."

Shula said that because of his inexperience, Woodley was hurt by the eight-week strike in mid-season.

"That really hurt," he said. "It was detrimental to his development. We struggled after the strike ended."

Miami went through seven quarters without a touchdown following the end of the strike before Shula got the offense untracked. Washington, meanwhile, pushed its record to 4-0 after the strike before losing to Dallas. The defeat — the Redskins' only one all year — stuck in Gibbs' craw.

"That's why it was important for us to beat Dallas in the championship game," he said. "We had lost six straight times to them. If we had beaten Green Bay in the championship game, it wouldn't have meant as much. This was like a boxer avenging his only loss."

Thank You, Bear, for the Memories

By WILL GRIMSLEY

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A hotel sign with one-foot letters said it for everybody:

"Thank You, Bear, for the Memories. God Bless You."

A woman tightly holding the hand of a wide-eyed tyke of 6 leaned down and whispered, "I only wish, Bobby, that you could have met him."

Her eyes moistened, apparently at the thought that this now was impossible.

There are many ways to say "goodbye" and worshipful thousands used them all to pay final respects Friday to Alabama's celebrated football coach, Paul "Bear" Bryant.

They crowded around the old stone First Methodist Church on the corner of Greensboro Street and Eighth in Tuscaloosa to gape at all the celebrities who were the Bear's friends and to solemnly watch the casket, covered by a blanket of red carnations, lifted through the church portals.

After a 20-minute service conducted by the Rev. Joe Elmore, with many of the visitors having to lap over into neighboring churches, a mile-long procession of cars made the 60-mile, 90-minute trip to Birmingham for interment at a family plot in Elmwood Cemetery.

IN TUSCALOOSA, the home of the Crimson Tide, they jammed the streets on the route of the cortege — men, women and children, babies in arms.

Some of the men wore houndstooth hats out of deference to the old coach who made that headgear a national symbol. Women held babies in their arms. School children, given the morning off of school, gazed at this bit of American history that few of them understood.

In the long and tedious drive over Interstate 20, people gathered at the roadside in clusters. They crowded the numerous overpassess, stood on automobiles and small hills, straining for a view.

Hand-made signs hung from the numerous bridges:

"We Love You, Bear."

"God Bless You, Bear. We will ign that said:

"God Needed An Offensive Coordinator."

As the procession moved into populous Birmingham, it looked as if every office and business establishment had closed for the occasion.

HUNDREDS packed the streets, some four and five deep. One group of about 20 held up printed cardboard signs which said, "We Love You, Bear."

"There must have been a million people, counting those in Tuscaloosa, at the cemetery and on the route," said Jack Perry, Alabama's assistant athletic director.

Most estimates were in the range of 500,000 to 700,000.

The largest group turned out at the cemetery, shoving and pushing for vantage points, standing on tombstones and grabbing seats on tree limbs.

It was an imposing spectacle.

It was a funeral that in emotion and breadth of its impact was matched only by those of a martyred president or other revered figure, as in the case of Elvis Presley in neighboring Tennessee.

"There will never be another like him," said Bud Wilkinson, the one-time successful Oklahoma coach and adviser to presidents.

Frank Broyles, former coach and present athletic director at the University of Arkansas, agreed, adding:

"The Bear had something beyond a knack for winning. He was a special man with a charisma that set him apart. Even his peers — his fellow coaches — never envied his success and records."

BRYANT WON an all-time record 323 games in a 38-year career at Maryland, Kentucky, Texas A&AM and finally 25 years at his beloved Alabama.

Alabamans were stunned by his death from a massive heart attack last Wednesday.

"I thought he was indestructible," said Charley Thornton, an associate of Bryant for 18 years as head of publicity and assistant athletic director.

Others thought the same. His followers gave him status little short of deity and once even had portraits made of the Bear walking on water.

This embarrassed the earthy old coach who always insisted he never won a game — "my players did" — and who took blame for all his 85 losses.

Elmore "Scoop" Hudgins, longtime assistant commissioner of the Southeastern Conference, recalled that Bryant grew up in farm country in Fordyce, Ark., and never forgot his roots.

"He said if he ever retired, he would croak in two weeks," Hudgins said. "I think he had the year's crop laid by now and then just relaxed — and released it all to the Lord."

Dignataries, coaches and football heroes whose lives Bryant had touched turned out in numbers. The funeral gathering looked like a rollcall of the game's Hall of Fame.

JOE NAMATH, Richard Todd and Marty Lyons represented the cast of ex-pupils. Coaching peers included Duffy Daugherty, Woody Hayes, John McKay, Darrell Royal, Jackie Sherrill, Steve Sloan, Charlie Pell and Bobby Dodd.

"Love was the key to Bear Bryant," said Royal, the former Texas coach. "He never met a stranger. Coaches, players, plain people — everybody loved him. You can't be loved without having given a lot of love.

Midland netters beat Big Spring

BIG SPRING — Led by a sweep of the boys division, the Midland High Bulldog tennis team won its first practice dual match Thursday against the Big Spring Steers 12-7.

"This is one of the youngest teams I've ever had here," coach Pete Barizon said. "Most of the team is made up of sophomores and these kids are the kind that will stay and put in that extra practice time. I would say this group has the best attitude of any team I've coached."

The boys won all seven singles and three doubles matches in straight sets The girls won two of their nine matchups.

"We're going to be competitive and surprise a few people," he said. "I would say there will be a few upsets when district begins."

Bettor is getting desperate

The voice at the other end of the line was the same one that had called earlier in the week, urging me to make my Super Bowl pick so he could place his bet the other way.

This time he sounded desperate. After all, kickoff is approaching.

"I know there was a prediction, but it was by Dr. Langford," he said in what sounded like a high whine. "You don't expect me to bet on the opinion of an ex-coach, do you, a fly-by-night. How dependable can he be? I want someone I know and can trust...to be wrong."

I'M A sucker for flattery, so here's a prediction. It comes courtesy of former Washington Redskin coach Jack Pardee. He's a guy who has literally been there before and Sunday's Super Bowl game in Pasadena, Calif., almost gives him a severe case of deja vu.

"I remember it was just 10 years ago," relates the ex-Redskins' linebacker. "We played our best game of the season to beat Dallas in the NFC championship and then lost to Miami in the Super Bowl. It was the game made memorable by Washington's lone touchdown, an interception off a field goal attempt by Garo Yapremian.

Last week, the Redskins probably played their finest game of the year to again beat the Cowboys in the NFC final and now it's the Dolphins in the Super Bowl.

"The Dolphins are playing so well right now, I'm afraid they are a little too strong," says Jack. And like this corner, he's a bit apprehensive about how the Redskins may bounce back from the emotional binge following the win over Dallas...

THE CHICAGO Cubs, now that they've decided to stay, admit they were seriously thinking of shifting spring operations to Florida from Mesa, Ariz. The Cubs scouted several possible sites in Florida, but refused to admit it was anything more than courtesy calls from Citrus state communities who wouldn't mind having the Cubs as spring time guests.

Chicago Cubs General Manager Dallas Green couldn't really be blamed. Florida, where the sweat flows free, was his spring home for years, with the Phillies and before. It's difficult to change old habits.

But after a year in Arizona, he has had a change of heart. "We'd be stupid to pull out, not after the way these people ran things and treated us. Besides you can't find a better complex than that."

"These people" are the Ho Ho Kams, a volunteer civic group, named after an old Indian tribe, that sells tickets, directs traffic, ushers, polices the grounds and entertains press and dignitaries.

Pat Patterson of the Ho Ho Kams says Mesa isn't worried about finding a major league team, if the Cubs did decide to move. It happened once before in 1965 when the Cubs moved to Scottsdale. The A's moved in.

"Shoot, we didn't want them to go. We're Cub country down here."

PATTERSON SAID, "We know they got a lot of inquiries from Florida, but a lot of Florida communities are going broke. Teams are looking to get out of there. I know Toronto wanted to come here...but we don't want anybody else. We want the Cubs."

Before World War II, Chicago trained at Catalina Island, off the southern California coast. For opposition, there was the Los Angeles Angels, the Cubs Coast League farm club, and, if memory serves, the Pirates trained at San Bernadino.

After the war, the Cubs came to Mesa as Arizona made a strong pitch for major league clubs to go with Cleveland and the Giants, the lone teams training in the desert sun.

After many years, Chicago felt Mesa was dragging its feet on some improvements so when the Red Sox left Scottsdale for Florida, the Cubs jumped the usually dry Salt River bed in 1965.

When Scottsdale delayed several springs promises to upgrade its minor league facilities, the Cubs moved back to Mesa, where not only had a fine minor league complex had been built, but picturesque Rendezvous Park, the downtown ball field with a name more fitting a race track, was replaced by a new park.

Chance of rain still exists for Super Bowl

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The National Weather Service says a slight chance of showers remains for Super Bowl Sunday. The forecast for the game calls for variable cloudiness with winds of 10 to 15 mph and temperatures of near 60 degrees about gametime. The NWS says no major storm system will be threatening southern California on Sunday but the air mass above southern California will be moist and unstable.

Five Syracuse players sign

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Former Syracuse University placekicker Dave Jacobs is among five one-time Orangemen who have signed with the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League.

Others include Ted Cirillo, an offensive tackle from the 1982 squad; defensive back Warren Harvey; defensive end Fred Lang, and middle guard Jose Saint-Victor.

Jacobs, 25, holds Syracuse records for career points-after-touchdown (75), field-goals attempted (101) and made (58) and scoring (278 points). In the last four years, he has tried unsuccessfully to hold a kicking job with Denver, Cleveland, New England, Philadelphia and the New York Jets, all of the National Football League.

Nets defeat Mavericks

DALLAS (AP) — Buck Williams scored 22 points, including two free throws with nine seconds left, to give the New Jersey Nets a 115-110 NBA win over the Dallas Mavericks.

Dallas had pulled to within a point at 111-110 on a shot by Kelvin Ransey, who led all scorers with 35 points, but Williams was fouled while shooting on the next New Jersey possession. Rolando Blackman missed on a desperation 3-point field goal try, and Mickey Johnson added a final pair of free throws for the final margin.

The triumph was the 15th in 18 games for the Nets, now 28-16 and in third place in the Atlantic Division. Dallas, now 20-23, saw its franchise record winning streak come to an end at five games.

76ers 114, Kings 99

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Moses Malone scored 26 points to lead the Philadelphia 76ers to a 114-99 victory over Kansas City Kings before the largest crowd in the city's pro basketball history, 16,896.

Clint Richardson had 17 points for the 76ers and Julius Erving 15. Mike Woodson led the Kings with 16.

Celtics 111, Suns 104

BOSTON — Kevin McHale and Nate Archibald combined for 17 fourth-quarter points to lead a Boston comeback that lifted the Celtics to a 111-104 victory over Phoenix Suns.

Phoenix, which dropped its third straight game, led 86-83 after the third quarter of the closely played contest. The Suns regained a three-point edge, 94-91, when Walter Davis sank a jumper with 8:17 left in the game.

But two free throws by Archibald launched a 7-0 spurt that propelled Boston to its 12th victory in 14 games.

Cavaliers 107, Pistons 106

PONTIAC, Mich.— Rookie guard John Bagley sank a basket and two free throws in the final six seconds to lift the Cleveland Cavaliers to a 107-106 NBA victory over Detroit Friday night.

It was only the eighth victory in 43 starts this year for Cleveland.

Caps, Sabres post victories

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Craig Laughlin and Bengt Gustafsson scored during a seven-second span in the first period, a Washington club record for fastest consecutive goals, as the Capitals defeated the Pittsburgh Penguins 7-2 in the NHL Friday.

The defeat extended a club record winless streak for the Penguins to 11 games.It was the eighth consecutive loss on the road for Pittsburgh, just one shy of another club record. The Penguins have won only once in their last 17 road games, and only twice in 24 away games all season.

Laughlin scored at 3:19 and Gustafsson put another shot past Michel Dion at 3:26 after Dennis Maruk won the ensuing faceoff. Bob Gould scored again at 7:47 to give the Caps a 3-0 lead.

Sabres 6, Black Hawks 2

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Buffalo's Ric Seiling scored one goal and set up two others as the Sabres coasted to a 6-2 NHL win over the Chicago Black Hawks.

Buffalo's balanced scoring attack also produced goals by Andre Savard, Mike Foligno, Larry Playfair, Phil Housley and Gilles Hamel. Denis Savard and Bill Gardner had goals for Chicago, which suffered its second straight defeat.

Rozelle asserts NFL has retained claim on fans

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The National Football League has kept its hold on the public, despite a "roller-coaster year" that included a strike and a drug scandal and made more headlines off the field than on, Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Friday.

And, in any event, the players and the game itself, including the Super Bowl, seem to transcend the NFL's many and varied problems, he added.

Rozelle, at a news conference, ran through the litany of good and bad events — the $2.1 billion television contract, the 57-day strike, the Raiders defiant move from Oakland to Los Angeles and attendant court cases, inception of the United States Football League, the drug scandal, the recent public television program implying gambling links with the league, and the restructured playoff system.

Lewis, Tabb track winners

NEW YORK (AP) — Carl Lewis came within three-quarters of an inch of breaking his world indoor best in the long jump, and Eamonn Coghlan and Mary Decker Tabb scored convincing victories in the men's and women's miles Friday night in the Millrose Games.

It was the third best indoor long jump in history. Lewis also has the two best — 28-1 and 28-0¾, both accomplished last year.

"I'm very satisfied," he said. "Anytime you jump 28 feet, you've got to be satisfied."

Kush sees Miami defense as key

By FRANK KUSH

BALTIMORE (AP) — Defense is what got the Miami Dolphins to the Super Bowl, and defense may well make the difference in Sunday's game with the Washington Redskins.

They've had 12 interceptions in their three playoff games, including five apiece against Dan Fouts and Richard Todd the last two weeks. Most of those were forced by a cohesive unit.

The defensive players are knowledgeable and experienced, and the key to everything is their great anticipation. That comes from experience, the coaching and extensive preparation.

Offensively, the Dolphins have a solid passing team. They may not be considered flashy or outstanding, but they execute well and have few breakdowns. They get the maximum out of what they're trying to do.

After watching the Dolphins play the Baltimore Colts twice in the season (losing 24-20 and 34-7), I feel they have no obvious tendencies, especially on defense where they conceal coverages well and change frequently.

On offense, even when you know what to expect, it does little good because of their fine execution.

A couple of keys to look for early in the Super Bowl may be where they play A.J. Duhe on defense and how accurate quarterback David Woodley is on that particular day.

AHS, OHS hold on to 4-5A lead

Abilene High and Odessa High remained on top of the Distrcit 4-5A boy's basketball standings, ahead of Midland High and San Angelo after league play Friday night.

The Eagles, easy winners over Big Spring, 80-51, improved their record to 6-2 on the season to remain tied with the Bronchos who escaped Midland Lee 40-36 in overtime.

Leading by a 36-25 count at half time, Abilene High tore apart the Big Spring defense in the third quarter and nearly held them scoreless as the Eagles upped their lead to 60-29 with only one period remaining.

Mike Simmons set the pace of a four-man AHS attack with 22 points while Shannon Daniel, Les Hines and Tim Robinson each added 11. For Big Spring, Jerald Wright-sil scored 19 points and Jinx Valenzuela scored 16.

SAN ANGELO remained in the district hunt with a 60-51 victory over Abilene Cooper, one game behind the league leaders with a 5-3 record, tied with Midland High, 60-52 losers to Odessa Permian.

The game was close most of the way with the Bobcats leading after one, 16-12 and holding a 33-28 lead at the half. Cooper took back a point in the third quarter by outscoring San Angelo 9-8, but the Bobcats came through in the fourth to claim the victory.

High-scoring Lorand White came away with 22 points to lead the Bobcats while Jeff Kasner added 16 and Michael Pfluger 10. Sammy Lowry led Cooper with 17 and Bob Estes scored 14.

On Tuesday, San Angelo will be at Chaparral Center against Midland Lee while Midland High travels to Big Spring to take on the Steers. Odessa High will travel to Abilene to face Cooper with Abilene High coming into Odessa to take on Permian.

"I coached junior varsity basketball at Lubbock Christian and was a assistant at Millsap High School before that," he said. "But this is my first head coaching job."

Facing even the smallest of public schools can posed problems since most schools have been working on basketball programs for a long time while the Mustangs have had a varsity team for only three years.

Johnny Belcher leads the Mustangs in scoring

The Mustangs are 7-7 with wins over Garden City, 48-46, Grady, 54-51 and 63-47, Central Lubbock, forfeit, Union 48-35, Garden City, 48-35, and Rankin, 53-52. Losses have come at the hands of Abilene Christian, 45-46, Eunice, N.M., 44-60; Grandfalls, 45-61; Jal, N.M., 60-73; Grandfalls, 40-2; Wink 49-70 Lubbock Christian 42-54, and Grandfalls 38-46.

Miller shares first place

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Johnny Miller adopted a new, strange-looking putter, shot a 6-under-par 65 with it and climbed to within one stroke of leader Jack Renner Friday in the second round of the $350,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

Renner, who has won a title and more than $180,000 in each of the last two odd-numbered years, toured the rain-dampened Phoenix CC course in 66 and reached the halfway point — at least the scheduled halfway point — of the tournament at 131.

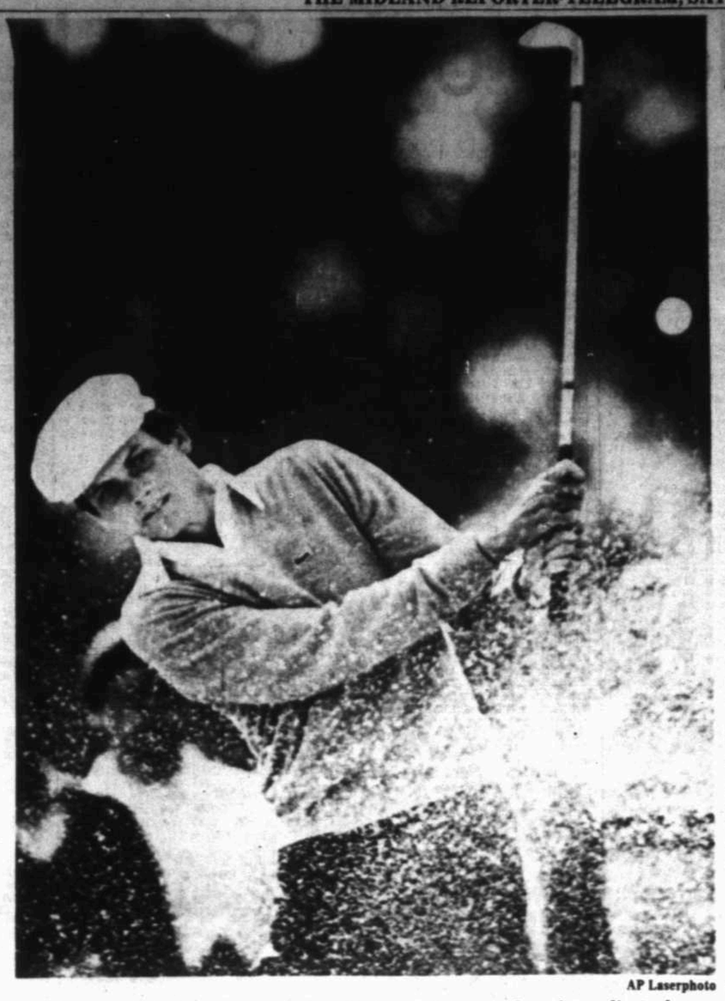

"You never feel anything but uneasy in a tournament like this," said Renner, who has followed his good 1979 and 1981 campaigns with off-years. "Barring a hurricane, you know you have to keep shooting low numbers to stay close, and that puts pressure on you."

A hurricane is not in the forecast, but storms are. Rain, possibly heavy, and thunderstorms are forecast for the remaining two days of the tournament.

Renner, at 11 shots under par for two rounds over the course that was lashed by heavy rains Thursday night, led by a single shot over Miller and his strange-looking putter.

Miller, frustrated by some putting problems in the first round, went to the new putter that carries the brand name Basakwerd. The shaft joins the clubhead at what normally would be the toe, with the blade extending back toward the player's feet.

Hal Sutton, the 1982 rookie of the year and one of four men who shared the first-round lead, was another stroke back at 133 after a 68 that included bogeys on two of his last three holes. He was tied for the lead before he three-putted the 16th. Attempting to make up lost ground, he used a driver from the fairway on the par-5 18th, but put it in the water and made bogey-6.

Bradley, Fergon share first

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. — Vicki Fergon shot a tournament record 65 Friday to tie Pat Bradley for first at 7-under-par 137 in the Mazda Classic of Deer Creek.

Fergon, 27, carded seven birdies over the 6,079-yard, par-72 Deer Creek Country Club, and credited positive thinking for her success.

"It's the best round of golf I ever had, the lowest score I ever had and it's the first time I was ever in the lead, including the time I won a tournament in 1979," Fergon said.

Bradley turned in a 3-under par 69 to add to her first-round 68, as she and Fergon took a 3-stroke lead over Stephanie Farwig and Jo Ann Washam, the first day leader.

"My confidence builds more and more each day," said Bradley, who needs only $53,866 in earnings to become the LPGA's youngest millionaire.

Etosha National Park in Namibia is an area larger than the state of Massachusetts. It is home to 50,000 large animals, from giraffe to impala. Its heart is the Ethosha Pan, a flat efflorescent salt basin that is dry much of the year.

Frummox, Austin-based entertainers Daniel McCrimmon, left, and Steven Fromholz, will perform today at the Polo Grounds Restaurant and Pub, 3327 W. Wadley Ave. The two reunited again last year following a 12-year hiatus to once again produce what they call "Frummox Music." The duo has recently released its first album, "Frummox II," since its 1970 release "From Here to There." Music begins Saturday at 7:30 p.m. with Bill Ervin. Cover charge is $6.

Lawyer Bailey sends liars into alligator pit

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The American Bar Association must be just wild about F. Lee Bailey, the lawyer-turned-actor, actor-turned-lawyer. Now he's got his own show, an update of the Spanish Inquisition.

The program is called "Lie Detector." If guests fail the tests, Bailey drops them into a pit filled with alligators.

As usual, Bailey appeared in his three-piece pin-stripe suit. His first guest, if you can call a visitor to an extermination camp a "guest," was Melvin Dummar, the Utah lad who claims he once gave Howard Hughes a ride in his pickup and that later a will put him in line for $150 million.

In fact, it was all quite unreal. Howard told his story (frequenty prompted and interrupted by Bailey) for the zillionth time, just as he did before a Utah jury which tossed his claim out of court. Then Bailey and the rest of us watched as a technician attached Dummar to the polygraph.

Dummar was doomed. After all, nobody in the real world ever had believed the guy. Why should Bailey's lie detector back him up? Also, he was wearing the identical suit as Bailey, his first big mistake after he agreed to appear.

Bailey, in a hushed voice as though he were covering the 18th hole at Pebble Beach, told us how the lie detector works as the technician finished hooking up Dummar. In few places are a lie detector's answers regarding truth or falsehoods given much credence, but Bailey didn't dig too far into that. Why ruin television's newest gimmick with a lot of legal mumbo jumbo?

Bailey showed several scenes from the movie "Melvin and Howard," without telling viewers their origin. "He reminded me of somebody you'd find on skid row," Dummar said, repeating his story of the night he said he found Hughes lying by the roadside on the desert.

"I steamed the envelope open," Dummar continued, recalling the visit of a stranger to his gas station, when he said he was handed the will. The paper said Dummar had been put down for one-sixteenth of the Hughes fortune. "It scared the hell out of me."

As the test got going Bailey explained the reasons for the various questions. In a minute or two came the zinger. "The question directs itself like a shotgun at almost anything Melvin knows," Bailey whispered. The lie detector's needle almost jumped off the paper and Bailey shook his head. It was alligator time for Dummar.

"You're not even close," Bailey said. "You, sir, have lost. It is the opinion of myself and an expert reading charts that even a child could read."

Dummar by now was showing his mettle, the stuff of a swell guest who surely will be invited to return. He lost his temper. "Bull----!" Dummar snarled, comparing the polygraph to stuff that is found in pastures where bulls are kept.

Bailey's next subject was President Reagan's ex-barber, who said the president does not color his hair. The polygraph backed him up. Whew! Let's ask the lie detector if Bailey colors his hair.

Finally, a man who pleaded guilty to murder moments before a Richmond, Va., jury came in with an innocent verdict, was tested in prison. He flunked the test twice, but this time it wasn't funny.

Rivers wants to make people feel good

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — There's another side to Joan Rivers, the queen of comedy insults. Onstage she pokes her well-manicured fingernails into the famous, gleefully bursting pompous balloons. Offstage her brash image ducks behind another self — warm and anxious to please.

She's one of us, she's saying, even onstage. She's not glamorous or smart, despite the designer dresses and the college degree. There's a vulnerable shyness in her and an uncertainty. Yet Ms. Rivers is also an astute businesswoman who handles many of her own deals; an actress, writer, director, and a devoted wife and mother.

She coughs. She has a cold. She can't sit outside in the sunshine because of a recent operation for a deviated septum. "My surgeon says I'm the only princess who's ever had a nose job and had it come out looking the same," she says, laughing.

The staccato excitement that usually drives her voice at 90 purrs along under the speed limit at a relaxed 50. She puts herself down "so the audience doesn't do it first. I let them know I'm not so hot," she explains. "That way when I knock somebody really gorgeous like Christina Onassis or Elizabeth Taylor, they can't say, 'who's she to talk?'

"Nothing on me is real if it can be bought," she says, her usual nervous cackle a fuller, more genuine laugh. Her long fingernails? "Four bucks a nail. Anybody can have them. I try to look as good as I can from what I'm starting with. Life is real. This is not a dress rehearsal. If you can do something to fix yourself up, do it. It makes you feel good."

She believes her function in life is to make people feel good. "People are scared now. I want them to forget their worries." When she's performing, she forgets too. "I have the best time of all. I've got a room full of friends," she says happily.

Paper says Reagan story untrue

BOSTON (AP) — Federal officials denied a newspaper report on Friday that President Reagan's unexpected visit to a Boston working-class pub foiled a stakeout by armed FBI agents, and the paper later said its story was inaccurate.

"There were no FBI agents," said Peter Rush, special agent in charge of the Secret Service Boston office. "If there's one thing a fed can do is spot another fed. We all wear the same kind of shoes."

The Boston Globe reported early Friday that six undercover agents were waiting to arrest a suspect at the Eire

Globe Managing Editor Matthew V. Storin at first said his paper stood by the story, but later released this statement: "Based on our reporting today, the Globe has concluded that its story this morning about a mixup between the FBI and the Secret Service was inaccurate. Although it is true that the FBI undertook a surveillance in the neighborhood of the Eire Pub, it appears that our source — though one that would seemingly have to know the facts — either misunderstood them or was misunderstood by our reporter."

The newspaper originally had reported that agents had spent several weeks on the case and visited the pub regularly in various disguises. The newspaper quoted federal sources who asked not to be named. It was not known why the suspect was being sought.

The Globe originally reported that some time after 1 p.m. on Wednesday a carload of Secret Service agents came through the door of the bar and that agents from both federal agencies were shocked to see each other.

The White House, the Secret Service and the FBI denied that any FBI agents were in the bar.

William H. Webster, director of the FBI, denied that his agents were even near the pub, and said the FBI and the Secret Service coordinated on the president's visit.

Edward Hickey, head of the White House military office, said there was a stakeout in the neighborhood, but not in the bar.

"There were no FBI agents in the pub," White House deputy press secretary Pete Roussel said. "It just wasn't so."

Clark sitting up during day

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Artificial heart recipient Barney Clark followed a mild exercise program of sitting up in a chair and short wheelchair trips Friday, his 58th day with the mechanical device.

Doctors took Clark on a wheelchair trip around the hospital with the 375-pound wheeled unit that drives his heart, officials said.

University of Utah Medical Center spokesman Ken Johnson said the 62-year-old retired dentist was sitting up in a reclining chair near his bed most of the day.

He was able to get up and turn around to sit in the chair with the aid of doctors and nurses, but was not taking any steps on his own, Johnson said.

U.S. treasurer delivers new 'bill'

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Treasurer Angela M. "Bay" Buchanan issued on Friday a new Bill weighing 9 pounds, 6 ounces.

Her first child, William Buchanan Jackson, was born at an Orange County, Calif., hospital, a spokesman said.

Ms. Buchanan, 34, whose name appears on the nation's currency, thus added a new achievement to her status as the youngest-appointed treasurer in the nation's history. Now she's the first to give birth while in office, said spokesman Robert Nipp.

Our building will be a tool to prepare us to serve.

Judge denies part in alleged scheme

MIAMI (AP) — U.S. District Judge Alcee Hastings took the witness stand Friday in his federal trial and denied that he was part of a $150,000 bribery conspiracy arranged by an attorney friend.

Hastings, who spent most of the day on the witness stand, also denied that he told Washington attorney William A. Borders Jr. that he planned to return $845,000 in money seized from two racketeers, as alleged in the two-count indictment.

Prosecutor Reid Weingarten claims Hastings was to reduce the sentences of the racketeers and return money and property seized from them in exchange for $150,000.

The testimony by the first federal judge ever charged with committing crimes while on the bench drew several hundred spectators, who lined up outside the courtroom up to a half hour early.

ONE OF THEM later complimented Hastings' courtroom demeanor, to which he replied, "The truth is easy to tell."

Asked if he had told Borders of his decision to return $845,000 to the defendants, Hastings said, "Absolutely not."

"I revealed nothing to Bill Borders or anybody else because I didn't know the contents of the order until Jeff Miller presented it to me," Hastings said. Miller is the law clerk who prepared the order.

Hastings contends Borders somehow found out about the ruling and traded on his name while dealing with FBI Special Agent H. Paul Rico, who was posing as convicted racketeer Frank Romano.

The judge has argued that, if he were part of the deal, he would have made sure Borders actually was negotiating with Romano and would have canceled it had he discovered otherwise.

Both Romano and Rico appeared on the stand in defense attorney Patricia Williams' attempt to show jurors the two men resemble each other only slightly.

"MIGHT YOU mistake Paul Rico for Frank Romano?" Miss Williams asked the judge.

"No way. You could wake me up at four o'clock in the morning and I wouldn't have any problem making that determination," said Hastings, who saw Romano every day during a month-long trial in December 1980.

In earlier testimony, Hastings countered key government wiretap evidence by saying he wouldn't have used his telephone for any talk that "would have been listened to" because he thought it was bugged.

The judge has been handling much of his own defense in federal court, but on Friday he switched roles from lawyer to witness. On Thursday he said of his planned testimony, "Now the trial begins."

Weingarten contends that when Hastings called Borders on Oct. 5, 1981, the two men talked about a $150,000 bribery deal in which the judge was to reduce the sentences of two convicted racketeers.

THE CONVERSATION was taped — not from Hastings' phone, but from Borders' Washington law office — and the government is using it in Hastings' trial.

Hastings, under questioning by defense lawyer Patricia Williams, said he had called Borders to discuss letters for a mutual friend.

Borders, sentenced to five years in prison on a March 1982 conviction, was arrested collecting the final payment Oct. 9, 1981, from an undercover FBI agent.

In the Oct. 5 call, Hastings told Borders he would "ship the stuff off to Columbia in the morning." Hastings said "the stuff" was letters for a friend in South Carolina who had been suspended from law practice.

Weingarten charges the judge was referring to an order issued the following day that returned $845,000 to the racketeering defendants.

At the same time, Borders was collecting $25,000 from an undercover FBI agent with the promise that Hastings would return much of the $1.2 million cash and property seized from the defendants, Weingarten said. The remaining $125,000 of the alleged bribe was to buy lower prison sentences for the convicts, Weingarten said.

BUT HASTINGS SAID he wouldn't have been foolish enough to discuss such a deal on the telephone. He and his secretary both testified that Hastings had cautioned his staff in August to watch what they said because he believed the phones were tapped.

"On Oct. 5, I would not have spoken on my telephone about anything that...would have been listened to," said Hastings.

Miss Williams asked if that meant he thought his phones were being tapped.

"In my mind, there was no question about it," the judge replied.

As he re-entered the building, he said, "Me and the Dolphins — No. 1." Miami's National Football League team plays Sunday in Super Bowl XVII.

U.S. District Judge Alcee Hastings said he and the Miami Dolphins would be No. 1 after his Friday morning testimony at his bribery-conspiracy trial in Miami. The Dolphins play in Super Bowl XVII Sunday and Hastings returns to the stand Monday to continue testifying.

Democrats plan telethon for holiday broadcast

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Democratic Party plans a 17-hour Memorial Day telethon, which promoters say will be a TV "Woodstock" with rock concerts and comedy routines to raise money for 1984 campaigns.

"We are seven years behind the Republicans in professionalizing our fund raising," said Congressman Tony Coelho of Fresno, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. "The telethon could be the thing that propels us in great leaps over where we are today."

The event, to be called "The Democratic Memorial Day Show," is to be carried live on the NBC television network, and the party hopes to net at least $7 million from 600,000 donors.

Sacramento reveals metals' interest

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The City of Sacramento's $1.4 million investment in gold and silver — believed to be a first in California — has earned $862,000 since March, says Treasurer Thomas P. Friery.

He said Thursday the earnings, a 71.1 percent rate of return, "far exceeded our expectations."

He said the city holds purchase certificates for 1,200 ounces of gold and 70,000 ounces of silver, but does not physically stockpile any gold bullion or silver bars.

Court says signature-gathering OK

BOSTON (AP) — A suburban shopping center improperly barred a 1980 congressional candidate from collecting nomination signatures on its property, the state Supreme Court ruled Friday.

The 4-3 ruling overturned a Superior Court decision and upheld the claim of Donald P. Batchelder of North Reading that he had a constitutional right to collect names at the private shopping center.

Batchelder was denied permission to ask for nomination signatures at the North Shore Shopping Mall in Peabody, the nation's 15th largest. Despite this setback, however, Batchelder collected enough signatures to qualify for the ballot as a Citizens Party candidate.

Governor's plane struck by lightning

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Gov. Bob Graham said Friday his plane was struck by lightning while flying from Tallahassee to Tampa, but no one was hurt and the plane was only slightly damaged.

"About 30 minutes out of Tallahassee we heard a loud noise like a large gun discharge and a bright flash of light off the left side of the cabin," Graham said of the Thursday incident.

The state-owned twin-engine Beechcraft King-Aire was slightly damaged but was able to fly on to Tampa. Graham had to return to Tallahassee on a commercial flight.

'Crawly things' result in settlement

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A woman has been awarded a $25,000 settlement after claiming she found salty, gritty, crawly things in a box of candy she was eating at a movie.

Karen Edmunds, 40, sued Ward Foods Inc., the maker of Goobers Chocolate Covered Peanuts, and American Multi-Cinema, theater operators, over the January 1981 incident.

Mrs. Ward said she was eating candy-coated peanuts while watching a movie, but stopped eating and put the box in her purse because the candy tasted salty and gritty. Later, she found caterpillar-like creatures in the box.

Job seekers advised not to look in New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Unemployed workers lured here by preparations for the 1984 world's fair will find job prospects as bleak as in any other recession-ravaged city, a travelers' aid group warned Friday.

Joel Rus, executive director of the Chicago-based Travelers Aid Association of America, joined with local officials to discourage the unemployed from coming to New Orleans in search of world's fair work.

"I think we're dealing with a national tragedy," Joel Rus said of the 3 to 5 million Americans he estimated are traveling the nation in search of work.

"We're beginning to see individuals with college degrees wandering the country, people who once earned $30,000 to $35,000 a year. We're seeing families living in automobiles, pitching tents, living in campgrounds," Rus said.

C. Michael Moreau, director of the local Travelers Aid Society, said the city's shelters and missions already are strained to capacity and the world's fair planners already have a long list of problems, including unemployment.

New Orleans has a huge supply of drifters even when there isn't a world's fair to draw them, Moreau said. New Orleans Travelers Aid helped 7,543 stranded people last year — 40 percent more than in 1981 — and most were "economic exiles" looking for work, he said.

He estimated the 11 million people expected here for the 1984 Louisiana World's Exposition will include thousands who will be looking for jobs. Moreau said they've already begun to arrive.

He said transients are finding no jobs here and none in Louisiana's once thriving but now depressed offshore oil industry.

"It isn't just a question anymore of men wandering around sleeping in doorways, trying to find jobs. It's entire families with no place to sleep and nothing to eat, with children subsisting on dog food," said Elizabeth Selley, president of the national Travelers Aid group.

"Going from city to city isn't the answer," said Mrs. Selley. "If they're traveling in a car, it runs out of gas, its tires wear out and it breaks down. Pretty soon, the people begin to look like what they're accused of being — bums."

Travelers Aid is advising people without jobs to look for them at home, or close to home, because the national economy is such that a more prosperous future elsewhere is merely an illusion.

Non-smoking airline passengers' rights returned

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court on Friday restored protections for non-smokers on airliners 16 months after the Civil Aeronautics Board dropped them in favor of self-regulation by the airlines.

The three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals here ruled unanimously that the CAB improperly rescinded protections against cigar and pipe smoke, poor ventilation and drifting smoke.

The board was obligated to provide an adequate explanation when it rescinded the protections Sept. 2, 1981, and did not do so, the court said.

One provision restored by the court requires the segregation of cigar and pipe smokers while another rule bans smoking when ventilation systems are not fully functioning.

Another restored rule would prevent airlines from placing non-smokers too close to smoking sections so they would not receive smoke that drifted toward their non-smoking area.

When these rules were set aside by the CAB, the agency retained the provision guaranteeing a non-smoking section on flights — but only when check-in requirements were met. The airlines were told to decide how to apply the protections removed by the CAB.

Removal of the protections was challenged by Action on Smoking and Health, a legal group.

The court agreed with the organization that no adequate explanation was given for the change. Senior U.S. Circuit Judge David Bazelon wrote, "The agency offers no reasoning to support its conclusion that the matters covered by the rescinded provisions are 'better left to carrier discretion.' "

Woodsman part of package deal

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

PINE COVE, Calif. — When lawyer Oscar Lawler gave his 80-acre mountain estate to Riverside County as a park, he stipulated that his caretaker go with the gift.

"That's me," says bearded woodsman Walt Grayum, 83.

Mile-high Lawler Park in the San Jacinto Mountains came into existence 25 years ago. Before that it was the deceased lawyer's weekend and vacation hideaway.

Over the years the mountain man blazed miles of trails through the heavy timber in the rugged terrain. The 80 acres is criss-crossed with a network of trails built and maintained by Grayum.

"It was tough getting up the mountain in the early days. The only way in was by horseback," recalls Grayum.

Lawler was assistant U.S. attorney under President William Howard Taft. He served as chief counsel for several corporations including Standard Oil, South Pacific and Bell Telephone. He was Will Rogers' next-door neighbor in Beverly Hills.

The attorney entertained numerous film celebrities and political leaders at his huge lodge in his Shangri-La near Pine Grove. The woodsman knew them all.

In 1957, Lawler presented his lodge, guest cabins and the 80 acres to Riverside County as a memorial to his wife for the exclusive use of youth groups. Lawler died at the age of 90 in 1966.

Fifteen years ago Grayum retired as caretaker of Lawler Park. Now a park ranger and an assistant ranger are in charge.

"But Old Walt is the heart and soul of Lawler Park. He's part of the mountain," says Roland Perales, 35, district ranger for Riverside County Parks and a close friend of the woodsman for 10 years.

LAT Photo

Walt Grayum was part of the deal when lawyer Oscar Lawler deeded his 80-acre mountain estate to Riverside County in California.

"Walt is a rugged individualist. He gives himself haircuts by putting his hat on and cutting all the hair off beneath the rim. Walt has taught all of us in the park system how to be woodsmen. He still cuts firewood for the lodge and cabins with his chain saws."

The only time Grayum leaves the park is to make a run for groceries down the mountain to Banning or to go to a Dodger game.

He has an old cigar box filled with stubs from every Dodger game he has attended, going back to when the team came out from Brooklyn and played at the Coliseum.

"I'm never going to leave the park. Hell, I can't. I came with the deed," laughs the lifelong bachelor.

Agencies may face CAB wrath

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board is beginning a crackdown on charter travel services that do not place payments for vacation tours into escrow accounts as required by federal regulations.

The requirements have been in place for years to protect customers who have paid for a vacation through a charter company and then see their tour cancelled or the company go out of business. The money is required to be kept in the escrow account until the trip is completed.

But last summer more than 1,000 travelers were left stranded in Europe wher a Chicago-based charter company stopped operations and filed for bankruptcy. It also left more than than 100 creditors in eight states as well as many customers who had made down-payments on travel that was cancelled.

CAB Chairman Dan McKinnon last month ordered the agency's enforcement division to step up its investigations into a half-dozen cases where travelers complained they were unable to obtain a refund when their tours were cancelled or markedly changed.

The agency is in the final stage of approving an agreement with one Washington-area travel company that will require the company to pay a fine and reimburse customers "several thousand dollars" because of cancelled charters, agency sources said.

The settlement is about to be announced, although the company denies any guilt, said one CAB official who spoke on the condition he would not be identified by name.

CAB investigators alleged that the company did not establish an escrow account and when tours were cancelled refused to give the money back.

CAB staff members said the settlement is expected to be the first in a series of such agreements to be reached by charter travel companies in the coming months.

Under the law, the CAB can issue a fine of up to $1,000 per violation against any travel company. In most cases, however, the agency is trying to seek a settlement that would clear the way for companies to reimburse customers.

In cases where a company goes bankrupt, such as was the case with the Chicago company, travelers may still have trouble getting their money since they must compete with other creditors.

But complaints have been reported in other cases as well when companies continued to operate.

Good deed goes unrewarded

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — An unemployed mechanic who found $6,800 on a street, then turned it over to police, says he isn't sure if his honesty paid off.

Charles Cossin said the money's owner has never even thanked him, let alone provide a reward, and friends scoff at him for not keeping the cash himself.

"You wouldn't believe the ridicule I've gotten about turning the money in," said Cossin, 31, who has been out of work for three months. "My in-laws thought it was nice I turned it in, but I still get the impression a lot of people think I was a fool.

"Next time, I think I'd keep it," he said. "I've thought a thousand times since then about why I turned it in. I could have started my own business with that kind of money."

A week ago Tuesday, Cossin spotted a brown leather briefcase on an East Side street, picked it up and put it on the dashboard of his car.

A little later, he stopped and looked inside, finding a wad of money held by a rubber band. After counting 67 $100 bills and two $50 bills, he notified Columbus police, who gave it to the organized-crime division.

The briefcase included a birth certificate and a few receipts. Police soon got a frantic call from Robert Smith, 22, who said he had left his briefcase next to his car.

Sgt. Paul Miller, who said officers were "a little suspicious" about someone carrying that much cash, checked with the FBI and U.S. Secret Service to make sure the money was not counterfeit or stolen. Then, after Smith identified the briefcase and its contents, they were turned over to him.

Cossin said he has not heard from Smith, who had given police a relative's address and could not immediately be reached for comment.

The Newspaper BIBLE

BAPTIZED WITH FIRE--AND THE HOLY SPIRIT!

Everyone was expecting the Messiah to come soon, and eager to know whether or not John was he. This was the question of the hour, and was being discussed everywhere.

John answered the question by saying, "I baptize only with water; but someone is coming soon who has far higher authority than mine; in fact, I am not even worthy of being His slave. He will baptize you with fire--and with the Holy Spirit.

"He will separate the chaff from grain, and burn up the chaff with eternal fire and store away the grain."

He used many such warnings as he announced the Good News to the people.

(But after John had publicly criticized Herod, governor of Galilee, for marrying Herodias, his brother's wife, and for many other wrongs he had done, Herod put John in prison, thus adding this sin to all his many others.)

Then one day Jesus Himself joined the crowds being baptized by John. And after He was baptized, and was praying, the heavens opened, and the Holy Spirit in the form of a dove settled upon Him, and a voice from heaven said, "You are My much loved Son, yes, My delight."

Jesus was about 30 years old when He began His public ministry. Luke 3:15-23

Jehovah's Witnesses convene at Chap Center today, Sunday

Jehovah's Witnesses in Midland will be convening with members of some 20 other congregations of the West Texas area at Al G. Langford Chaparral Center today and Sunday.

Frank Davis, spokesman for the group here, said that 2,400 attended their annual gathering last October and about the same number are expected to attend this upcoming two-day session of Bible related instruction and fellowship.

"Our program theme is based in the Bible book of Luke Chapter 12 verses 15 and 21, wherein we as Christians are encouraged to center our lives on spiritual things rather than material gains," Davis said.

The principal address of the assembly will be delivered Sunday at 2 p.m. by F.R. Bartell, district overseer, who works out of the World Headquarters of Jehovah's Witnesses in Brooklyn, N.Y. His subject will be "Is This World Doomed to Ruin?"

Chapel begins in Northeast Midland

A new Baptist Chapel began serving the Northeast Midland area several months ago with "dinner on the grounds." In this case, the "grounds" were the backyards of some of the new members. Attendance at the dinner was 26.

The new church is now holding several services a week, Sunday at 9:45 a.m., 11 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. and Wednesday at 6:30 p.m., at the corner of East Highway 80 and FM 1130 N. The services are held, courtesy of Tesoro Crude Oil Company, on the second floor of Tesoro's office building.

The new church's minister is the Rev. Lenard Leftwich. Special speakers this Sunday will be Alvin Doell and his wife, Kathleen, who are missionaries to Spain. Both are associated with Life Line Ministries in Denver, Colo. They began their work in European Missions in 1966 and have started two churches in Spain.

First Methodist responds to media

The January 1983 issue of The Readers Digest carried an article on "Do You Know Where Your Church Offerings Go?" which raised some questions about the integrity of the National and World councils of churches and the United Methodist Church. This was followed Sunday evening by the CBS network's "60 Minutes," which contained much of the Readers Digest material.

In response to these presentations Midland's First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Illinois Avenue, will address the issues at the Vesper Services Sunday at 7:15 p.m. in the Chapel.

Dr. Charles E. Lutrick, First UMC's pastor, will speak on "A Response to the Media's Representation of the Church," followed by an open forum so that church members may ask questions concerning First UMC's relationship to the National and World councils of churches.

The public is invited to attend.

St. Ann's to have prayer vigil

The public is invited to attend the prayer ceremony Feb. 5 at 8:30 p.m. at St. Ann's Catholic Church, 207 N. M St., when the renowned Pilgrim Virgin Statue of Fatima will be on display.

This statue, which is from Portugal, has been on tour throughout the United States.

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP) — University of Washington sociologist Rodney Stark says religious cults appear stronger where traditional religions are weakest.

He says that ratio shows up on the west coast where church membership is lowest but where cult activity is high.

Pindar transforms himself into a whitefaced mime in baggy knickers and tattered top hat to comfort the afflicted in cancer wards, psychiatric units, prisons, senior citizen's homes and children's hospitals.

"It is a legitimate form of ministry," said Pindar, 43, pastor of the Old Pine Street Presbyterian Church, a 215-year-old Greek revival-style church in the Society Hill section of town.

"Our intention is deeper than just making people laugh. A clown is an art form that has social feedback. It has therapeutic powers. It grabs the natural child in all of us," he added.

Pindar, a native of West Virginia, became a clown quite by accident when his daughter was born 10 years ago. To celebrate, he went out on the street to hand out roses; his surgical mask and gown were his first costume.

In time, he discovered that a clown in funny clothes and whiteface can reach people in a way that a black-robed minister can't.

"The clown is a mirror. People see a reflection of something they might be feeling," said Pindar, who has occasionally preached in whiteface to his 250-member congregation.

"The clown is a bridge between what is and what might be, between the ordinary and the extraordinary. It gives you access. It breaks down barriers. It's a permission slip," he said.

In the past decade, several thousand clown ministries have sprung up in the United States, according to social worker and pastor Pam Hayden, who, along with Pindar, founded the Clown Institute last year to instruct others in clown ministry.

"I see clown ministry as a unique, creative way to minister to people who are hurting the most," said Mrs. Hayden, 26, a campus minister at St. Joseph's University who did her master's thesis on the healing powers of the clown.

"The people most receptive to clown ministry are the people who are the most vulnerable — the sick, the mentally disabled, people in jail for life, drug addicts," she said.

She and Pindar have found ways to reach these tough audiences without speaking a word. A wink, a blink, a nod, a raised eyebrow or a tear can open communications. Pindar uses a yellow feather duster and a stethoscope as props.

"These people have been shut out by society," Pindar said. "They've been pushed behind the stage because they have tubes running out of their bodies or their bodies stink from cancer or they're in jail for life because they killed their parents.

"The clown brings them back and restores their humanity. These people are still capable of growing right up until their last breath. It's life longing for itself," he said.

"For a brief moment, I just like to stop what's going on around them to open for a moment the door of a new possibility or to wipe off some of the crud and show some of the flower," he added.

He has evoked some powerful responses.

An 18-year-old lifer in a New Jersey prison refused to remove a mask Pindar had made for him. "Oh, no, Rev, I want to go back in there. I liked what I found in my silence," the prisoner said. "I don't want to come back out. I'm free in there."

And after his performance at a Christmas party for deaf people, a woman gestured animatedly in sign language. "She's not asking you a question," said an interpreter. "She's shouting, 'I love you!' "

Seventh-day Adventists discipline officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Seventh-day Adventist Church has taken disciplinary action against 95 officials in connection with their involvment with church loans to a California surgeon and building developer, Donald J. Davenport.

Davenport filed for bankruptcy in Los Angeles in July, 1981, and owes various units of the Seventh-day Adventist church $18 million in loans to him and $3 million in accured interest, officials say.

Emerald Buddha sits enthroned in Bangkok

Hearst Feature Service

In exotic Bangkok, the capital of Thailand, there sits enthroned in splendor the Emerald Buddha, a priceless object of veneration which attracts thousands of worshippers every day.

"The Emerald Buddha is considered so sacred," Connoisseur magazine reports in the January issue, "that visitors are forbidden to take photographs. The only person to get physically close to Thailand's most precious relic is the king himself."

"Smooth as water, precious beyond price," the article says, "the Emerald Buddha perches serenely atop a solid-gold throne inside a vividly-painted chapel amid the bustle of downtown Bangkok. The treasure is small (about 19 inches wide, 26 inches high, but its aura is immense. It is guarded by ancient bronze lions and surrounded by murals depicting Buddha's life (ca. 623-543 B.C.)."

West Germany tells U.S. it supports zero option

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany's conservative government reiterated its support of the U.S. zero option proposal Friday, two days before Vice President George Bush's arrival.

But it said it does not rule out "other concrete improvements" at the Geneva talks to reduce the Soviet nuclear arsenal.

"The clear position of the Federal Republic of Germany remains unaltered," government spokesman Diether Stolze told a news conference. Chancellor Helmut Kohl's government supports "the mutual 'zero solution' as a goal of the negotiations; a Soviet monopoly (of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe) is not acceptable."

However, his government "has at no time supported the zero solution as an all-or-nothing position," Stolze said, and its approach includes the possibility of "other concrete improvements."

The U.S. proposal, which the Soviets have rejected repeatedly, calls for the Soviet Union to dismantle its arsenal of more than 600 medium-range missiles that can reach Western Europe in exchange for cancellation of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's plan to begin deploying 572 new American Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe in December.

Although Kohl, a Christian Democrat, has continued to support zero option, other West German political leaders have called on the United States to abandon it and seek a compromise. And this week the chancellor and other spokesmen for his government have been backing off, saying zero option is the ultimate goal but all possibilities should be explored.

The Reagan administration is also beginning to show signs of a retreat. Chief U.S. arms negotiator Paul Nitze on Tuesday said the United States is "certainly not locked into the zero option," and the next night the president told a news conference the United States is "prepared to carefully explore serious Soviet proposals."

Kohl's chief opposition, the Social Democratic Party, said in a statement Friday that Bush's visit gives the West Germans a chance to make clear their "great interest in reaching a solution at Geneva, through readiness to compromise, that will hinder a nuclear arms race."

Bush arrives Sunday night in Bonn for the first stop on a West European trip that will also take him to the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Britain, the four other NATO countries in which the new American missiles are to be stationed, and to France.

The vice president meets Kohl on Monday, and Stolze said their talks will focus on the "East-West relationship," particularly disarmament. He said the chancellor would also reiterate his support for a meeting between Reagan and Soviet Communist Party chief Yuri V. Andropov to discuss disarmament and other questions.

Bush will give a speech in Berlin Monday at a dinner given by Mayor Richard von Weizsaecker. Stolze said the West Germans consider the visit to the divided city a sign of "solidarity" with the Berliners.

Cabinet officials quit posts

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Most of the 59 members of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Cabinet offered their resignations Friday in a move to strengthen her Congress Party after losses in two state elections.

Mrs. Gandhi, 65, told reporters none of the resignations has reached her and she will discuss the possibility of Cabinet changes with her senior advisers.

The party newspaper, the National Herald, said Tripathi was installed as the party's "working president," but Mrs. Gandhi will remain as president.

Tripathi's task is to revitalize the party following humiliating election defeats earlier this month in the states of Andrha Pradesh and Karnataka and the rise of dissident movements within the party.

Mrs. Gandhi had been directing party work personally with the assistance of her son, Rajiv, 37, who quit his job as an airline pilot two years ago to help her. Tripathi posed no direct challenge to Rajiv's political future, but his appointment was a gesture to the party's old guard that has been on the decline since Rajiv became his mother's main lieutenant and heir apparent.

Disgruntled Indians set fires

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Demonstrators opposed to new state elections in Assam set fire to a railroad station, buses, a court and a district office of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Congress Party, the United News of India and local press reports said Friday.

The news agency said one person was injured in a bomb explosion at Nowgong, 385 miles northeast of Calcutta.

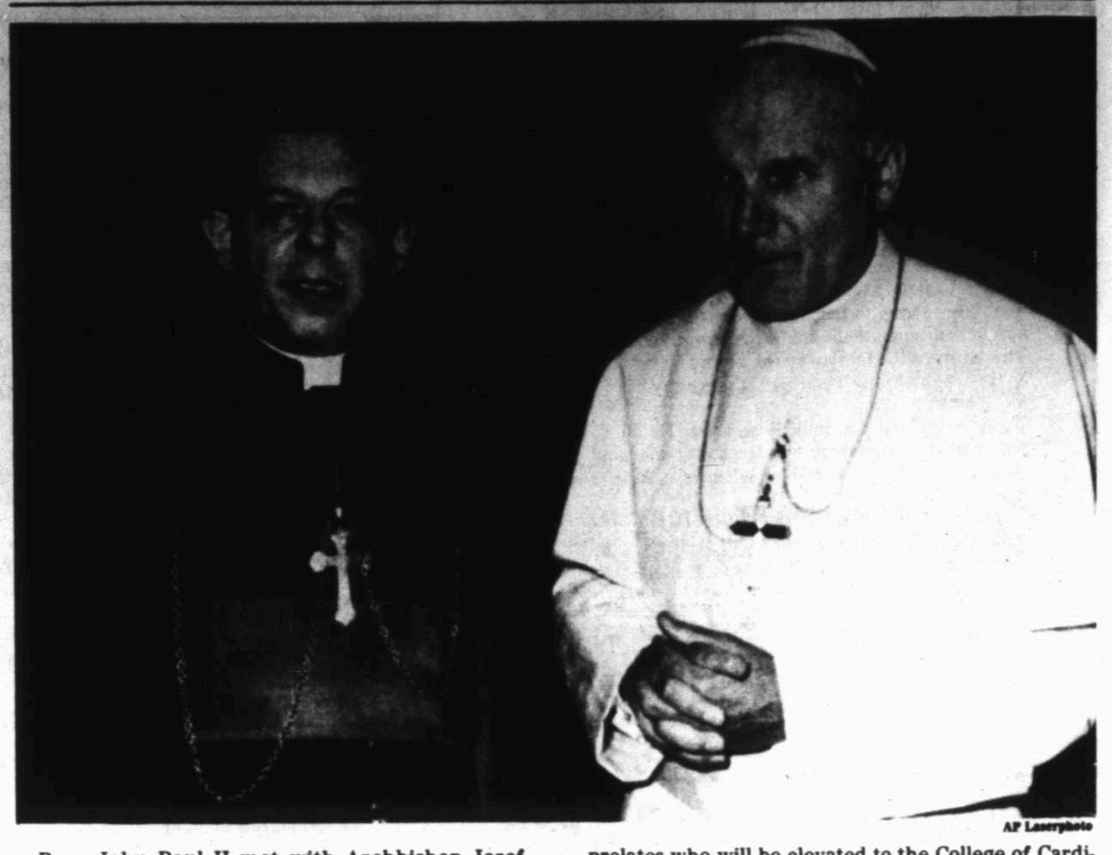

The attacks were part of a civil disobedience campaign in the northeastern Indian state, aimed at stopping a government attempt to hold assembly elections, the reports said.

The agitators blocked voting in Assam in 1980's nationwide parliamentary elections.An estimated 325 people have been slain in clashes since the agitation began in late 1979.

Two passenger trains collided head-on in Assam, killing three people and injuring seven, authorities reported. It was not immediately known if the crash was connected with the dispute.

Pope John Paul II met with Archbishop Jozef Glemp, Poland's Roman Catholic Primate, in a private audience Friday. Glemp is among a group of 18 prelates who will be elevated to the College of Cardinals next Wednesday.

Pope, Glemp discuss planned trip

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II conferred for half an hour Friday with Archbishop Jozef Glemp, Poland's Roman Catholic primate, who arrived Thursday to be made a cardinal. The pontiff also received Bishop Bogdan Sikorsky of Plock, Poland, in a separate audience.

Vatican sources said the pope and Glemp probably discussed the situation in Poland and the pontiff's projected visit there in June. Glemp told reporters when he arrived he is "sure" the pope will make the trip as planned and preparations for it are under way.

Glemp and 17 other prelates will be elevated to the College of Cardinals at a consistory next Wednesday.

The opponents of the deployment of new U.S. nuclear missiles in Britain said the line would stretch from Burghfield Royal Ordinance Factory, where British nuclear weapons are manufactured, to the U.S. Air Force base at Greenham Common, 50 miles west of London. Ninety-six new American cruise missiles are to be installed there if the United States and the Soviet Union don't reach an arms agreement.

Jewish emigration urged

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — The parliamentary assembly of the 21-nation Council of Europe passed a resolution Thursday night calling on the Soviet Union to allow more Jews to emigrate.

A council report said there has been an 82 percent decline in the emigration of Soviet Jews since 1979, when 51,320 — a record number — were allowed to leave.

China makes high-tech plans

DAVOS, Switzerland (AP) — China plans to buy $66 billion worth of Western computers and other high-technology equipment in the next three years, Vice Chairman Ma Yi told reporters Friday.

He said about 3,000 items are to be imported, most of them for use by small and medium business enterprises. He said a convention would be held in Peking for Western businessmen to discuss proposals.

Anti-computer group acts

TOULOUSE, France (AP) — The Committee to Liquidate or Stop Computers claimed responsibility for three bombs that badly damaged the Toulouse government's computer center Friday.

Police said the bombs went off simultaneously just outside the building, blowing a large hole in one wall and damaging some of the equipment. It was the first bombing of the year by the committee, which began attacking computer centers in the Toulouse area in 1980.

Group plans human chain

LONDON (AP) — The Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament announced plans Friday for 40,000 people to link arms on March 31 — Holy Thursday — in a 14-mile "human chain to break the nuclear chain."

Chinese oust party member

PEKING (AP) — Zhao Wenru, a Communist Party member, said he would rather have a son than his party membership, so his party card was lifted when his wife had her third child in defiance of the party's one-child policy, the People's Daily reported Friday.

The report said Zhao, who lives in the northeast city of Shenyang, was warned after the birth of his second child in 1980 and "ignored persuasion to send his wife for an abortion" to terminate her third pregnancy.

The newspaper said Zhao threw a large celebration after the birth, indicating he got the son he wanted.

Defying the Chinese tradition of having large families with lots of sons to insure the parents being taken care of when they are old, the party is insisting on only one child per couple in an effort to keep the population, now at a billion, from exceeding 1.2 billion by the year 2000.

Asian border talks resume

PEKING (AP) — A five-member Indian delegation arrived in Peking Friday for the third round of talks about the disputed border where India and China fought a war in 1962. The delegations are also expected to discuss expansion of trade and cultural, scientific and technological exchanges, the official Xinhua news agency reported.

The talks began in December 1981, and progress has been reported in such areas as trade. But there apparently has been none toward settling India's complaint that China is occupying 14,500 square miles of Indian territory and wrongfully claims 90,000 square miles more. China contends that the disputed areas were taken from it by the British when they ruled India.

Italian captive released

PESCARA, Italy (AP) — A 72-year-old toy manufacturer, Aldredo Capacchietti, was freed unharmed near a highway outside Pescara Friday after his family paid $410,000 ransom, police said. He was kidnapped on Dec. 7.

Fifty people were kidnapped in Italy last year. Two were killed; 33 were freed, and 15 are missing. Four people have been kidnapped this year.

Rescue workers search through rubble following the Friday bombing of a building housing the Palestine Liberation Organization and Syrian Army in the Bekaa Valley town of Chtaura. Officials say at least 30 people were killed and 15 wounded. Many guerrillas were buried under the rubble following the explosion, caused by a car bomb.

Underground leaders urge solidarity

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Underground leaders of the outlawed Solidarity labor federation urged Poland's workers Friday to prepare for a nationwide sit-in strike and to continue boycotting the Communist government's new unions.

Solidarity's clandestine "temporary coordinating commission," in an eight-page leaflet delivered to Western correspondents, also called for observers from such international organizations as the International Labor Organization and Amnesty International to attend the trial of seven Solidarity leaders who are being held on sedition charges.

The statement broke a two-month silence for the five-man committee, which had been keeping quiet since its call for nationwide demonstrations on Nov. 10 failed and it cancelled a week of strikes and protests in December.

By urging preparations for a general strike rather than setting a date for one, it appeared to be testing its support among the workers as well as urging its supporters to organizational work.

Solidarity chairman Lech Walesa said he agrees with the aims of the underground but does not favor a strike.

"The objective is the same, but there are many ways of reaching it," he said. "At present (a strike) is not part of my program, but some day I may decide that such a method is needed."

The committee took over the leadership of the independent labor movement after Walesa and other national leaders of Solidarity were interned when martial law was declared Dec. 13, 1981.

Charging that the authorities "are strangling democratic movements" and "a totalitarian dictatorship is being born," the leaflet said a nationwide occupation strike "is the only way to break down the existing dictatorship and create conditions leading to democratic reform."

The committee conceded after the failure of its protest in November that the workers were unwilling to risk being fired or jailed by directly challenging the government.

However, "the time is coming," its new appeal said, "when the strike weapon again becomes a realistic form of struggle, when the decision to use force against striking workers could entail great danger to the survival of the dictatorship.

At least 30 dead following bombing of building in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A car bomb set off an explosive chain reaction in a basement ammunition dump of the PLO's headquarters in the Bekaa Valley Friday, killing at least 30 guerrillas and Syrian soldiers, police said.

At least 15 people were wounded in the blast and rescue workers said many other people were screaming for help in the rubble of the three-story building.

A Palestine Liberation Organization ambulance and a Syrian army jeep collided near the blast scene shortly after the explosion and guerrillas and Syrian troops exchanged fire, the Christian Voice of Lebanon radio said. It gave no other details, and there was no official confirmation of the clash.

The French news agency Agence France-Presse in Beirut said callers claimed the car-bomb was set off by the Lebanese Cedars Force, which set off another bomb Friday in Beirut, and The Front for the Liberation of Lebanon from Foreigners, which bombed several PLO targets before Israel's June 6 invasion.

Lebanon's civil defense director, Nazih Chamoun, told The Associated Press at least 30 bodies had been recovered from the rubble of the devastated building on Chtaura's outskirts, and that reports he received said the car was packed with an estimated 300 pounds of explosives.

Chamoun said civil defense rescuers were digging through the piles of twisted iron and concrete for more victims, including a family whose screams for help could be heard from beneath the rubble of the building that housed both the PLO and Syrian army security offices.

He said four people, including two Syrians, were recovered alive from the debris, according to reports he received from civil defense teams. Fifteen other people, mostly Palestinians and Syrians, were wounded in the blast, he added.

Police said the building housed security offices for Fatah, the largest PLO guerrilla group, in Chtaura, which is 21 miles east of Beirut and eight miles west of the Syrian border.

Chtaura, on the main Beirut-Damascus highway, is the headquarters of Syria's 30,000-man army stationed in northern and eastern Lebanon under an Arab League mandate to police the armistice that ended the 1975-76 Moslem-Christian civil war.

Ten minutes before the Chtaura blast, a bomb caused minor damage but no injuries in the west Beirut office of the magazine Al-Rassed that speaks for the Murabitoun, a former PLO ally that once fielded the largest leftist Moslem militia in the Lebanese capital.

A Murabitoun statement said the group's leader, Ibrahim Koleilat, received a telephone call minutes after the bomb exploded, warning him to flee Lebanon or risk assassination.

The statement quoted the caller as claiming responsibility for the Al-Rassed blast on behalf of the Lebanese Cedars Force, which vowed it would "purge saboteurs throughout Lebanon."

Meanwhile, the commanders of the U.S. Marines in Lebanon's multinational peacekeeping force and the Israeli troops around Beirut agreed to establish telephone links to avert further friction between the two forces.

The agreement was worked out in a meeting in suburban Baabda by Marine commander Col. Thomas Stokes and Maj. Gen. Amir Drory, commander of the Israeli occupation army in Lebanon.

The Marines, based at Beirut's international airport, previously had radio links with the Israeli forces stationed on the hills overlooking Beirut.

It was the first meeting between the two commanders since the Marines, along with French and Italian troops of the 4,200-member multinational peacekeeping force, were deployed in the Lebanese capital last September.

Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan said, meanwhile, that he would meet PLO chairman Yasser Arafat in Tunis next week to discuss withdrawal of the PLO's estimated 6,000 to 10,000 guerrillas remaining in northern and eastern Lebanon.

Runs on a budget.

The 1983 Honda Civic 1300 Hatchback is our lowest priced car. But that doesn't mean we've scrimped on quality or engineering.

*The 1st year's payments and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 8¼% loan to value. Interest will be charge at a rate of 12 1/4% for the 1st 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payment 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period the graduation in payment will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage or amortize the remaining balance over the 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATLEY 12 750% Principle and interest only is calculated in monthly payments.
