Clinton turns administration to right on little, big matters

By Nancy Benac
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In the aftermath of the Republican election landslide, President Clinton is turning his administration to the right on everything from Pentagon spending and tax cuts to a range of moral and cultural questions.

On matters as diverse as postal stamps, medical research and pornography, the president has personally intervened in ways that could help him avoid further inflaming conservative critics.

No one expects Clinton to win over his enemies with limited steps that some see as little more than symbolic gestures. But the president may at least deny his critics new rallying points.

Clinton graphically demonstrated his determination to avoid incensing the right on Friday when he abruptly fired Sur-

Midland, Lee bands to march in Bush inauguration parade

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The Midland and Lee High School bands have been invited to march in George W. Bush's gubernatorial inauguration parade in Austin on Jan. 17.

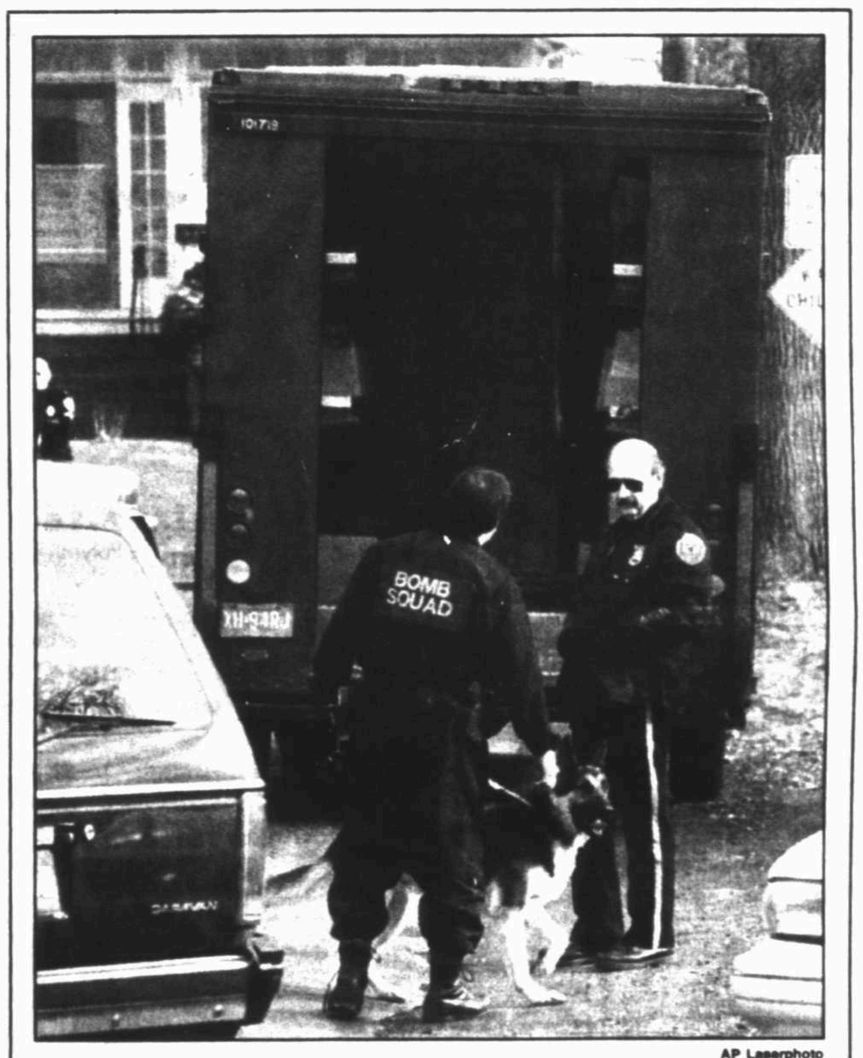

Band directors held a news conference Monday to announce the invitation and to publicize efforts to raise an estimated $30,000 for transportation, one night's lodging and meals for the approximately 280 students in the two bands.

An initial $5,000 has been contributed by the Abell-Hanger Foundation.

The trip — and hopefully some funding — are expected to be approved by the Midland Independent School District board at its regular meeting tonight, the band directors said.

The two bands plan to leave for Austin on the morning of Jan. 16

Police bomb squaders stand by a delivery truck in North Caldwell, N.J., Monday. The truck had a package for the house where a mail bomb killed a man.

Bomb package information chillingly familiar — postmark: San Francisco

By Clifford J. Levy
N.Y. Times News Service

NEWARK, N.J. — It did not take long for federal agents to conclude that the mail bomb that killed an advertising executive over the weekend was sent by the shadowy figure who has unleashed similar attacks 14 times before.

Federal agencies that have searched for the bomber for 16 years once again find themselves poring over pieces of evidence from one of his grisly assaults, certain of the suspect, but baffled by the choice of victim.

Not only was this bomb designed like the others. The information still legible on the shredded package was also chillingly familiar, the agents said today.

The postmark was San Francisco, long a center of activity for the suspect. And the return address was San Francisco State University, an indication that the bomber's violent fascination with academia had not ebbed in the 18 months since his handiwork maimed one professor in Connecticut and another in California, senior law-enforcement officials said.

Two days after the executive, Thomas J. Mosser, was killed in North Caldwell, N.J., the federal

1 in four try drugs before high school

■ Study finds continuation of a trend its authors attribute to glamorization of drugs by the entertainment industry.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Marijuana use among eighth graders has more than doubled since 1991, and researchers blame a more relaxed attitude toward drug experimentation and abuse.

One in four eighth graders said they had used an illicit drug at least once during their lifetimes, 10 percent more than last year, according to a University of Michigan survey released Monday. The 1994 figure rises to 35 percent when inhalants are included.

Thirteen percent of all eighth graders surveyed said they had used marijuana at least once in the preceding 12 months. That was up sharply from 9.2 percent in 1993 and more than twice the 6.2 percent just three years ago.

Increases in use of harder drugs such as LSD and other hallucinogens, stimulants, cocaine and crack were less dramatic.

Although this year's overall abuse rates remain below those of the 1970s, there is clear evidence of a gradual upward swing, Lloyd D. Johnston, the study's lead researcher, said during a Washington news conference.

About 52,000 eighth, 10th and 12th graders from 420 public and private secondary schools filled out questionnaires for the yearly survey.

Among the most alarming findings was evidence that drug abuse is growing among students who have not yet reached high school.

"We're talking about 13-year-olds," Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala said at a news conference. "We're not just here to sound the alarm. We're here to issue a call to action. . . . We have a chance — right here and now — to lock arms and send a powerful anti-drug message to our children."

The aggressive anti-drug messages of the 1980s have receded into the background, Johnston said. "The arduously woven fabric of attitudes, beliefs and

Sale-tax rebates: City pulse strong

Staff Report

The city of Midland has received its December sales tax rebate check for $659,099, representing a healthy 12.09 percent increase over the same time last year.

The latest payment beings Midland's year-to-date total to $10,056,622, or 4.64 percent more than than the $9,610,406 that received was received in 1993.

The December payment was for taxes collected by monthly filers on October sales and reported to the state comptroller in November.

Sales tax rebates are considered a strong and accurate indicator of a city's economic strength.

Meanwhile, Midland County also received good news.

Its December check was for $401,411, or 5.14 percent more than the $381,772 it received in December of 1993. The latest check brings the county's year-to-date total to $5,996,137. That represents a robust 7.34 increase over the 1993 total of $5,586,060.

IBM suspends sales of PCs with Intel chip

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — IBM stopped shipments Monday of personal computers with Intel's flawed Pentium chip, dealing another blow to Intel as it struggles to cope with the problem in its flagship product.

International Business Machines Corp., the world's largest PC maker and co-developer of a rival processor, said Pentium's problems are worse than earlier believed.

Analysts said it remained to be seen whether IBM's move would hurt Intel, the world's biggest manufacturer of computer chips. Most still consider the bug itself a minor problem, and sales so far have not suffered despite the public relations nightmare for Intel.

"It's potentially serious," said Mark Edelstone, an analyst with Prudential Securities Research in San Francisco. "It's the first indication we have had that demand . . . could be adversely impacted by the Pen-

Richard and Helen Brown wanted to leave their $10 million to charity.

Elderly couple commit suicide to preserve money for charity

By Laura Baenen
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The day Richard and Helen Brown were found dead in their garage, letters of explanation began arriving in their friends' mailboxes.

The ailing, elderly couple had chosen suicide so they could leave their entire $10 million fortune to charity, rather than spend some of it on medical treatment.

"They were taking the high road to death," their former pastor, Charles Heuser, said Monday.

The Browns, married 53 years, had made their money in radio stations and from a broadcasting school they founded.

In recent months, Richard Brown, 79, had to use a wheelchair because of arthritis and asthma. Helen Brown, 76, had Alzheimer's disease. Both had polio as children.

The Browns' bodies were found Dec. 5 in their Cadillac Eldorado in the garage of their Fort Lauderdale, Fla., retirement home. Both died of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Their will specified their mon-

France ends threat to withdraw peacekeeping troops in Bosnia

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — One week after Western European proposals to withdraw peacekeeping troops from Bosnia created a diplomatic furor, France reversed course on Monday and said it wanted not only to keep its soldiers in the former Yugoslavia, but also to expand their mission.

"My government does not wish to see this withdrawal take place," the French defense minister, Francois Leotard, told reporters at a Pentagon news conference after a meeting with Defense Secretary William J. Perry. "It would undermine the credibility of international organizations, namely the United Nations and NATO."

A Pentagon official said Perry supported Leotard's position and would try to persuade other Western European defense ministers to go along at a NATO gathering in Brussels on Tuesday and Wednesday. A senior American official said Washington hoped that the defense ministers would endorse a tougher stand.

Last week, France announced that it had asked the United Nations and NATO to draw up detailed plans for the withdrawal of U.N. peacekeeping troops from Bosnia, leaving the impression that the allies were about to abandon their commitment to that country.

American officials said France's threat appeared to have been partly a bluff aimed at scaring the Muslim-dominated Bosnian government and the Bosnian Serbs into making concessions at the bargaining table. It may also have been a a signal to Washington, they say, not to take France's efforts for granted.

On Monday, outlining a new, more aggressive stand on the eve of the NATO meeting, Leotard said the U.N. peacekeeping mission in Bosnia and Croatia must be made more credible by demonstrating that it did not operate at the tolerance of the Serbs.

The French official outlined some specific suggestions for how to do this. These include establishing a ground corridor from the Adriatic to Sarajevo for delivering aid that would be protected by U.N. troops and improving the security of the Sarajevo airport.

Signaling his approval, Perry told reporters that the United Nations should consider expanding the size of its force, equipping it with heavier arms, allowing it to operate under more liberal rules of engagement, and redeploying the troops to more defensible positions.

Russia, rebel republic open peace talks; tanks rumble

GROZNY, Russia (AP) — Russian troops pushing toward the heart of Chechnya clashed with forces inside the breakaway republic for the first time Monday, overshadowing the start of peace talks.

Despite widespread opposition and several anti-government demonstrations in Russia, there was no sign Moscow was easing up in its biggest military action since the invasion of Afghanistan in 1979.

But the Russians met with much fiercer resistance than when they rolled into the Caucasus Mountains republic Sunday with jets, helicopters, tanks, paratroops and infantry — reportedly as many as 40,000 troops all told.

Forces loyal to the Chechnya government fired rockets at a Russian column of about 250 military vehicles as it advanced toward the regional capital, Grozny, from the northwest. Several Russian soldiers were wounded, the Interfax news agency said, contradicting an earlier report that two were killed.

Russia responded with helicopter attacks, destroying the Grad rocket-launcher, the report said.

Russian and Chechen ground forces also battled about 25 miles northwest of Grozny near the village of Dolinsk, Chechen officials said. There were no reports of casualties.

Kremlin officials swore there would be no assault on Grozny, and denied they bombed the city of 400,000 people the night before, as some reports said.

But President Boris Yeltsin's credibility and political support have been seriously undermined by the offensive. Only four months ago, Yeltsin said forceful intervention in the volatile, mostly Muslim republic of 1.2 million was "out of the question."

Thousands of hard-liners, Communists and liberals protested his actions at snowy rallies in Moscow and St. Petersburg and moderates renewed calls for him to be impeached.

Yeltsin lashed out at his critics in an address to both houses of parliament, saying the Chechen crisis "demands an urgent solution."

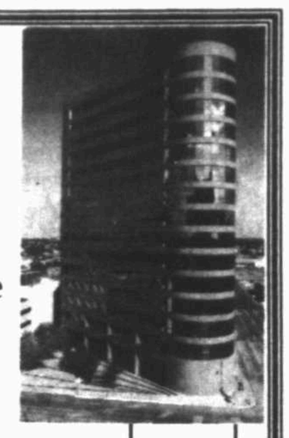

Representatives from Moscow met for several hours with a Chechen delegation in Vladikavkaz, the capital of the neighboring province of North Ossetia, but only after a Chechen opposition group was excluded at the regional government's insistence.

Mercury to peak in 60s today

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the low 60s and south winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low near 40, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Sunday should be partly cloudy with a high in the upper 50s.

After an overnight low of 26, Monday's high reached 53, compared to the record high for that date of 79 set in 1937. The record low is 10 set in 1989.

STATE

Texas was generally cloudy and cool Monday, and there's a chance of rain for parts of South Texas and North Texas through today, according to the National Weather Service.

Most of South Texas was partly cloudy, with temperatures generally in the 60s. McAllen had the region's high at 77, while Beaumont recorded the low of 60. Today should be cloudy again in the region, with a slight chance of rain in the Hill Country and South Central Texas. Highs are expected in the 70s.

North Texas was mostly in the 50s, with some high clouds. The region should be mostly cloudy through tonight. Lows should be in the 30s, and highs are forecast in the 50s. There's a chance of rain in the western portion of North Texas tonight.

West Texas was mostly cloudy, with temperatures generally in the 50s. Amarillo had the West Texas low of 47 and Sanderson recorded the area's high of 60. Cloudy conditions should continue through Wednesday. Today's lows should be in the 30s and highs are forecast in the 70s.

NATION

Snow spread across the mountains of the West on Monday, with up to a foot falling in the Sierra Nevada.

High pressure dominated the eastern half of the nation, producing mostly clear weather except for the possibility of a few light snow showers in the upper Midwest.

Snow fell early in the day over the northern Sierra Nevada in California. Donner Summit had received 8 inches by midday and 6 to 12 inches accumulated elsewhere at higher elevations.

Snow tires or tire chains were required on some highways crossing the Sierra between northern California and Nevada.

The same weather system also produced snow at lower elevations of southwestern Idaho and northern Nevada. Winnemucca, Nev., had more than 4 inches, and less than 2 inches fell at Reno.

The snow was expected to spread across much of southern Idaho, western Montana, western Wyoming, northern Nevada and northern Utah.

At lower elevations, Brookings, Ore., got 0.74 of an inch of rain. Locally heavy rain was possible along the coast and in the valleys of central California.

More chilly air was flowing into the north-central states behind a cold front. Temperatures early today are expected to be in the single digits as far south as northern Nebraska and northern Iowa.

Elsewhere, wind gusted to 50 mph in the mountains of Hawaii, and high surf pounded west-facing beaches.

Atop New Hampshire's Mount Washington, the highest peak in New England at 6,288 feet, the wind gusted to 97 mph.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

RIGHT: Clinton begins to turn administration

(From 1A)

geon General Joycelyn Elders, long a target of conservatives, after she said school children should be taught about masturbation.

That got a lot of attention. But Clinton's shifts on moral and cultural issues have generally gotten less notice than his decisions on economic issues.

Campaigning for the White House, Clinton advocated a tax cut for the middle class but shelved the idea after he was elected. He revived the issue after Republicans made tax cuts a centerpiece of their campaigns last month and seized control of Congress for the first time in four decades.

On defense spending, Republicans also promised a big buildup. Clinton hurriedly proposed a $25 billion spending increase. And, sparring with the GOP over spending cuts, the administration has floated the possibility of eliminating a Cabinet department or slashing operations.

On lower-profile matters, in the past month alone, Clinton has:

■ Pressured the Postal Service to keep alive the tradition of an annual "Mother and Child" Christmas stamp.

■ Barred the government from moving to finance the creation of human embryos for research.

■ Scrapped government attempts to overturn a child pornography conviction.

■ Offered positive words about allowing school prayer, or at least a daily moment of silence, in class.

Earlier, in the weeks leading up to the election, Clinton had unceremoniously yanked the Justice Department out of a case in which it was to argue against a church's claims of religious freedom.

The White House maintains such actions are simply the result of an activist president moving to keep policy in line with his principles.

"When he sees an issue about something he feels fundamentally or morally strongly about, he steps in," says presidential adviser George Stephanopoulos. When Clinton moved to save the Madonna stamp, for example, "I don't know if that's right or left, to him that just didn't make sense," Stephanopoulos said.

Some others, however, see the actions as a response to pressures from the right and as part of an effort to reposition Clinton closer to the center of the political spectrum.

"The White House must be aware of how easily small moral and cultural policy issues can become huge political liabilities," said Alan Brinkley, a professor of history at Columbia University. "It doesn't surprise me that they're trying to walk on eggshells as they try to thread their way through these issues."

Clinton need only remember the grief he took for trying to lift the ban on gays in the military or how Michael Dukakis' presidential campaign got bogged down in a controversy over flag-burning.

ey should go to United Church of Christ organizations.

"We have the means to afford the best doctors, hospitals and around-the-clock home care to the end our lives, but neither of us wants that kind of life," the Browns wrote in letters that began arriving Dec. 5. "It would also consume a substantial part of our money, which through our will and through the mission work of our church is destined to help many young people throughout the world who may one day be able to help many more.

"We have no immediate family or heirs. In a sense, this legacy represents the final purpose of our lives."

"To them, it would be a poor use of money" to spend it on care for their deteriorating bodies, said Heuser, who had advised them to leave their wealth to United Church of Christ missions.

Heuser, of Gold Beach, Ore., said that he didn't know they would commit suicide but that he can't fault them for doing so.

The Rev. Dave Hohmann, who will preside at a memorial service Thursday, said their religion teaches against passing judgment on people who commit suicide. "Our job is to remember the good," Hohmann said.

And there are many who recalled the Browns' kindnesses. Connie Wester, a secretary at the broadcasting school, recalled Brown's reaction when she and her husband adopted a baby.

"Mr. B wanted me to determine whether I wanted to be a full-time mother," she said. "So he gave me a month off with pay and said I was welcome to come back but said he would understand if I wanted to be home full time. I think that was pretty special that he would do that."

Mrs. Wester, who still works at the National Education Center-Brown Institute campus, was among several people who received the farewell note from the Browns. It arrived at home when she was at work.

"It was extremely emotional. My daughter read it to me over the phone. She was crying and I was crying. It's very hard to know they're never coming back," Mrs. Wester said.

The Browns founded the American Institute of the Air in Minneapolis in 1946 with money they made selling a few small stations in Minnesota.

The school, renamed Brown Institute, was sold to CBS in 1972, and the Browns continued to run it until 1982.

tium flaw."

Analysts didn't think IBM's decision was aimed at boosting the PowerPC microprocessor the company developed with Apple Computer Inc. and Motorola Inc. to rival the Pentium.

Santa Clara-based Intel called IBM's decision unwarranted and reiterated its position that people who use Pentium-based computers at home and in the office were extremely unlikely to encounter any problems.

Gateway 2000 and Dell Computer Corp., among the leading users of the Pentium, said they had no plans to halt shipments of their Pentium-based PCs. The companies said that while customers have expressed concerns, no one has reported any problems.

The IBM announcement pushed down Intel's stock price. Intel shares closed down $2.37½ at $60.37½ on the Nasdaq Stock Market. IBM closed at $70.62½, down 87½ cents, on the New York Stock Exchange.

Intel spent hundreds of millions of dollars developing the Pentium, a high-end microprocessor that serves as the brain of personal computers. It expects to sell nearly 6 million Pentiums by the end of the year; about 2 million flawed chips had been shipped by the time Intel discovered the error.

DRUGS: Authors blame a relaxed attitude peer norms that brought about that decline (in the 1980s) is beginning to unravel," he said.

The Partnership for a Drug-Free America, which sponsors advertising, sees fewer anti-drug news stories and television themes. "Conversely, we're seeing drug abuse, and specifically marijuana use, talked about positively in rock and rap music, in television programming and in other areas like fashion."

Drug abuse also is sending more people to hospitals for emergency care. The number of drug-related emergency room cases increased 8 percent from 1992 to 1993, according to data gathered by HHS's Drug Abuse Warning Network.

Heroin-related emergency room visits increased by 31 percent in the same time period. "Speed," or methamphetamine, sent 53 percent more people to emergency rooms.

Michigan's Institute for Social Research began studying teen-age drug abuse rates in 1975. It tracked an expansion of drug abuse into the late 1970s, a substantial decline that lasted through 1991, and a resurgence since then.

"The numbers really aren't that surprising, except for the maybe the eighth grade. A lot of the 10th graders I know do do drugs," said Micky York, a junior in Pembroke Hill High School, a Kansas City, Kan., private school.

"I would say definitely a fourth or more of the sophomore class at my school have used marijuana. . . . I know quite a few people who do it every weekend."

And don't forget alcohol, said Joseph Podgorski, principal of Amherst Central High School in suburban Buffalo, N.Y.

"There is certainly a lot of drinking going on, especially on the weekends, and I'm sure there is casual drug use," Podgorski said. "The biggest problem is trying to get kids' parents to admit that their kids have a problem. A lot of it is just not wanting to deal with it."

The number of 10th graders who used marijuana during the 12 months before the study increased by two-thirds to 25 percent. Among high school seniors, it increased by two-fifths to 31 percent.

"In addition, active daily use of marijuana climbed by even larger proportions, reaching 3.6 percent among high school seniors in 1994 — up by half from the 1993 level," the university said.

Almost 7 percent of seniors acknowledged use of LSD in the past year, while 3.6 percent said they had used cocaine and 2 percent crack cocaine.

The survey has an error margin of one to two percentage points.

MARCH: MHS, Lee bands receive invitations and visit some historical sites at the state capital. The next day, the bands will participate in the parade and return to Midland that evening.

"I feel they are the very best goodwill ambassadors Midland has," said Randy Storie, Lee High School band director.

Cody Myers, Midland High School band director, agreed and added that marching in the parade allows the students "an opportunity . . . to actually participate in a historical event."

The bands are expected to play together a medley of Texas songs titled "Texas Tribute."

"We need to practice a lot," said Mandy Poage, 17, French horn player and MHS band captain.

"We're going to be practicing with Lee. This is one of the first non-competitive things we've done together," she said.

Ryan Cochran, 17, tuba player and LHS band captain, expressed enthusiasm about the opportunity.

"We think it's a very great honor to do this," he said. "It doesn't happen that often that we get to march in something this great."

The honor goes beyond the governor-elect's ties to Midland and Midlander Donald Evans chairing the inaugural committee and Texas Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland also on the committee, said Ernest Angelo, recent vice-chairman of the Republican National Committee.

"I think we need to give the credit where it's due: to the young people in those organizations," Angelo said.

The group has its sights set on raising the needed funds before the Christmas break.

Contributions to help pay for expenses can be sent to: March on Austin, 410 N. Main St., Midland 79701.

BOMB: Information is chillingly familiar agencies that have searched in vain for the bomber for 16 years once again found themselves poring over pieces of evidence from one of his grisly assaults, certain of the suspect but baffled by the choice of victim.

The suspect, who apparently has anarchist leanings, has now killed two people and wounded 23 others with pipe bombs that typically shatter into a hail of shrapnel upon detonation.

"He has been targeting a broad spectrum of the population," said Jim R. Freeman, the head of the FBI office in San Francisco, which has been leading the investigation.

"This has made it difficult to articulate to our investigators links between victims."

Federal agents Monday interviewed co-workers of Mosser, 50, and combed through lists of the clients that his companies have worked for, seeking a connection to what are believed to be the bomber's obsessions: universities, airlines, computers and the influence of technology in society. From those first two fields, the FBI has given him the nickname Unabom.

Mosser had recently been promoted to general manager of Young & Rubicam, one of the world's largest advertising companies. He is the only victim from the advertising business.

But before he was promoted, Mosser had long been an executive at Young & Rubicam's public relations subsidiary, , which has represented numerous computer and high-technology companies, including IBM, Digital Equipment Corp., Microsoft, NEC, Apple and Motorola.

Federal agents were also checking whether Mosser received any sort of message from the bomber before the deadly delivery arrived, a tactic that was used before, apparently to allay suspicions that the victims might have about receiving packages with return addresses that they did not recognize.

Mosser received a call recently from a man who asked for his help on a research project, said senior law-enforcement officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity. They said they had thought that the call might have been related to the bomber, but Monday were discounting that theory.

Many of the earlier bombs were stamped with the initials "FC," which seems to stand for an obscene phrase about computers, but investigators said they had not determined whether that signature was on the bomb that killed Mosser on Saturday in the kitchen of his home. The most recent bomb was the most powerful yet, the investigators said.

Though the package had San Francisco State University as its return address, that does not necessarily mean that it was mailed from there, officials said. The suspect has used universities as return addresses before, perhaps because they make the packages seem less suspicious or perhaps as some kind of symbolic gesture.

Of the two parcels that wounded professors at Yale University and the University of California at San Francisco last year, the return addresses for both were professors at California State University in Sacramento. Neither knew the victims or is suspected of sending the packages. It was not immediately clear whether the return address on the most recent package included a professor's name.

Ligeia Polidora, a spokeswoman for San Francisco State University, said that the FBI had not contacted the university about the case.

Freeman said that at least 7 of the 15 attacks attributed to the bomber have some connection to northern California.

■ Fleiss attorneys to request new trial

LOS ANGELES — Lawyers for Hollywood madam Heidi Fleiss will ask for a new trial on grounds five jurors behaved improperly, a defense source said Monday.

The motion might be filed today, said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

It will include affidavits from five jurors who said they discussed deliberations outside court and misunderstood the elements of entrapment, the source said.

Superior Court Judge Judith Champagne would have to decide whether the discussions outside of court were prejudicial. If so, the Fleiss convictions would be thrown out.

Fleiss lawyer Anthony Brooklier didn't return telephone calls to The Associated Press.

■ Elders to return to Arkansas' payroll

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Dr. Joycelyn Elders, the outspoken U.S. surgeon general fired by President Clinton, is going back on the state payroll, as a teacher and medical researcher.

Elders was on unpaid leave from the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences and will return to teach and do research at the state's only medical school, school Chancellor Harry Ward said Monday.

He said Elders will be on the payroll by the end of the year.

She was professor of pediatrics at the school for 26 years before being appointed state health director by then-Gov. Bill Clinton in 1987.

Her pay will be comparable to the $105,000 salary she gave up in August 1993 to become surgeon general, school officials said.

■ Reviews prompt discipline for scientist

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — A Yale scientist who was infected by a rare South American virus after a bottle cracked in the lab was reprimanded for not immediately reporting the accident to his superiors.

A university report, and a report by the government's Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, blamed Dr. Jean-Paul Gonzalez on Monday for the Aug. 8 accident with the Sabia arenavirus, which was discovered in Brazil in 1992.

Both reports recommended that Yale adopt better safety standards to prevent a similar accident. The university said all the standards will be in place within two months.

Yale officials didn't learn of the accident until Aug. 19, after Gonzalez was hospitalized with a 103-degree fever and was questioned by doctors. He was released from the hospital Aug. 29 and has made a full recovery, Yale said.

Officials said no one else caught the virus, either in the laboratory or in the 11 days when Gonzalez was unknowingly carrying it.

■ Agency won't complete three reactors

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — The Tennessee Valley Authority, one of the country's staunchest supporters of nuclear power, decided Monday to leave three reactors unfinished in the face of a debt that is $26 billion and rising.

TVA, whose once-grand plans for a 17-reactor system now are reduced to three operating, one unfinished and one recovering reactor, had not canceled a nuclear project since 1974.

"This decision reflects a major change in TVA policy," TVA Chairman Craven Crowell told employees of the giant federal utility assembled at Knoxville headquarters and watching TV monitors elsewhere.

TVA's commitment to nuclear power dates from its authorization of the three-reactor Browns Ferry Nuclear Plant near Athens, Ala., in 1966.

■ California warns hikers after lion attack

SAN DIEGO — Two days after a woman was mauled to death by a mountain lion, California issued blunt warnings to hikers.

"Don't go hiking alone. Don't roam around at dawn or dusk — that's when lions are looking for something to eat," Jeff Weir of the state Fish and Game Department said Monday.

The Saturday morning death of Iris Kenna, 58, of San Diego was the second fatal mauling by a mountain lion in California since April, when a 40-year-old woman was killed while jogging in the Sierra foothills near Sacramento.

Kenna was killed in Cuyamaca Rancho State Park, a popular recreation area about 50 miles east of San Diego.

Weir said a growing cougar population means more contacts between animals and humans. His department said it will try to publicize the dangers of hiking in the wild.

The most important thing to remember: Don't run.

Orange County financial crisis spreads

■ Risky investment strategies of other municipalities come to light.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — From Texas to Ohio, local treasurers sought Monday to reassure investors and taxpayers unnerved by the Orange County financial crisis — even as some governments awoke to fresh threats to their fiscal stability.

The Southern California trauma, triggered by steep losses in the county's investment fund, also brought to light risky investment strategies employed by municipalities far beyond Orange County's borders.

Hit hardest were the roughly 185 Southern California cities, school districts and other governments that invested taxpayer money in the county fund, whose woes forced the county to file for bankruptcy protection last week.

Anaheim, Calif., said Monday the crisis may hurt its campaign to keep the Los Angeles Rams football team from bolting to St. Louis. Anaheim is one of the largest investors with $169 million, or 20 percent of its investment portfolio, tied up in the Orange County fund.

The city, home to Disneyland as well as professional hockey and baseball teams, had offered to renovate the city stadium for the Rams with a $60 million bond issue. Last week it imposed a hiring freeze and stopped capital improvement projects such as road repairs and new sewers due to losses in the fund, which was used to finance day-to-day operations of the city.

Meanwhile, the market for bonds issued by local governments with investments in the Orange County fund has braked to a near standstill amid intense investor skepticism.

Bob Gore, head of municipal bonds at Crowell, Weeden & Co. in Los Angeles, said buyers were offering as little as 40 cents on the dollar for bonds sold by municipalities with investments in the fund.

The debacle is unearthing risky investment strategies outside Orange County similar to the failed techniques spearheaded by Orange County treasurer Robert Citron, who quit last week.

In Texas, investors continued to flee a short-term investment pool run by the Texas State Treasurer's office for more than 1,300 different municipalities after it became clear the $3.7 billion TexPool fund borrowed heavily to invest in securities, the same risky strategy used by Orange County.

By Monday, withdrawals doubled to $655 million even as the government tried to soothe local investors. The state denied that its strategies were the same as Orange County's.

In Ohio, Cuyahoga County officials have outlined a plan to slash 11 percent, or more than $35 million, from next year's county budget, after losing $115 million on a $880 million investment fund that borrowed heavily for its investments. Spending will be frozen for three years after that.

O.J. jurors to return Jan. 4, ready for sequestration

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The judge in the O.J. Simpson case told jurors Monday to return to court on Jan. 4 and be ready to be sequestered, an indication the defense may drop its pre-trial challenge of the prosecution's DNA evidence.

After a closed meeting with lawyers, Superior Court Judge Lance Ito told the jurors to come back on the day the defense had asked for a DNA admissibility hearing, which does not involve jurors.

Ito told the 12 jurors and 12 alternates to put their affairs in order before they return, indicating they might be sequestered at that time.

"Just like the Boy Scouts, I would like you to be prepared," he said.

The defense will file a motion on DNA hearings today, Ito said. Neither he nor the lawyers would elaborate.

CNN said Sunday the defense has decided not to challenge the admissibility of genetic evidence, the crux of the prosecution's case.

But prosecutor Marcia Clark said Monday she understood the defense would propose "several alternatives."

Those could range from abandoning the DNA challenge entirely to holding a scaled-back hearing on the odds of potential genetic matches in blood samples — but not the general acceptability of DNA evidence by scientists.

Even if the defense concedes admissibility of all DNA evidence, it still could attack the evidence on grounds that messy police procedures made results unreliable.

Simpson is accused of killing his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Much of the prosecution's case is built on DNA evidence, with prosecutors hoping to link Simpson to the killings by genetic matches between his blood and blood found at the crime scene.

Earlier Monday, Ito refused to remove a prosecutor from the case, rejecting arguments that his work on the investigation of Simpson's friend Al "A.C." Cowlings gave him an unfair advantage.

Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden headed the grand jury investigation of Cowlings, who drove the white Ford Bronco with Simpson inside last summer while police followed and much of the country watched on television. The grand jury did not indict Cowlings.

"There appears to be no conflict of interest" stemming from Darden's role in both cases, Ito ruled.

Justices rule for disability pay to vets injured at VA hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government must pay disability benefits to veterans injured by treatment at veterans' hospitals even if the hospital was not at fault, the Supreme Court ruled Monday.

The unanimous decision invalidated the government's longstanding policy of denying such benefits to some veterans unless they prove their disabilities were caused by hospital negligence or an accident.

Justice David H. Souter wrote for the court that federal law contains not "so much as a word about (hospital) fault" being required for veterans who seek payment for injuries caused by non-service-related treatment.

The government had said that paying disability benefits to such veterans would cost about $1 billion over five years.

Korean War veteran Fred P. Gardner of Bryan, Texas, underwent back surgery at a Department of Veterans Affairs Hospital in June 1986. The condition was not related to his military service.

Gardner later filed for disability benefits, saying the operation caused severe nerve and muscle damage to his left leg, and that he now must use a leg brace and a cane.

The government routinely pays disability benefits for injuries caused by veterans hospital treatment for service-related health problems. But the government denied Gardner's application.

Veterans whose treatment was not for a service-related health problem may receive benefits only if the injury was caused by hospital negligence or an accident, the VA ruled.

The Court of Veterans Appeals reversed, saying federal law does not require such veterans to prove the hospital was at fault. The veterans court ordered Gardner's case reconsidered without that requirement.

Silent night... hungry night.

During this holiday season, hundreds of families in the Permian Basin face the grim possibility of having little, if any, food to eat.

To those families, the colorful sights and smells of Christmas are darkened and grayed by hunger. As in past years, volunteers from Memorial Hospital and KNFM Radio are asking for your generous donation of food to benefit the Permian Basin Food Bank.

The collection area will be in front of the Abell-Hanger Medical Pavilion, 200 Andrews Highway.

The food drive begins at 3:00 p.m. December 12.

Because we care, we'll work all night until 10:00 a.m. December 13th to accept your donation of food.

You can bring joy and brightness to some special people this holiday by giving generously.

Specific use permit is 'just' solution

Midge and Woody Erskine are expected to go before the Midland City Council in January to learn whether their Eos Wildlife Refuge Center will be granted a specific use permit to continue operations primarily as a bird rehabilitation center.

That issue has been hotly debated for months and has sharply divided a number of Midlanders into two camps: supporters of the Erskines and opponents of their wildlife refuge center at 3306 W. Golf Course Road. It even resulted in the Erskines being sued by an adjacent property owner opposed to the wildlife refuge being maintained inside the city limits and a countersuit that was filed by the Erskines.

A guideline was written for any future wildlife rehabilitation facilities, but city officials are considering granting a specific use permit to the Erskines, who have operated their facility at the present location for 20 years without a permit.

The controversy over operation of the Eos Wildlife Refuge Center has caused many Midlanders to consider the local environment more closely than ever before. It seems that many residents want to be supportive of the work done on behalf of birds and animals by the Erskines, but many others point out the dangers inherent in having wild animals, birds and snakes in close proximity to thousands of people. The question almost comes down to whether urban man can live in peaceful coexistence with the wildlife of this region or whether we must remove the wildlife for our own well-being.

The possible remedy being considered by the City Council would require the Erskines to clean up their property. The Erskines seem to be complying in that regard.

They also now say they would confine their wildlife rehabilitation efforts to a 460-square-foot structure along with some outdoor conditioning cages for birds before their release.

That hasn't completely satisfied all of the Erskines' neighbors, but it did gain the approval of the Planning and Zoning Commission, which is now recommending to the City Council that the specific use permit be granted to the Erskines.

We agree. As long as the Erskines are complying with the mandate to clear their property of tall weeds and other materials that are creating a potential health hazard, this seems to be the best solution for Midland residents and the wildlife that the Erskines rehabilitate.

GATT should be made better for U.S. benefit

The Senate did the right thing in agreeing to legislation that clears the way for the United States to participate in the new world trade agreement.

The Senate action sets the stage for international economic competition over the next decade, stretching into the 21st century. . . .

But, as the Senate debate made clear, the new agreement under the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs (GATT) is not the coming of the fabled millennium. It should be improved upon in the future. . . .

The U.S. card in the negotiations traditionally has been access to the world's largest market. But now, the European Union can in some respects claim that distinction, and it was less amenable to U.S. demands than we would have liked.

The government, under three presidents from two parties, did make some important gains. But it has far from exhausted the possibilities in such areas as entertainment, financial and other services, agriculture and investment. . . .

Still, it must be noted that freer trade means that some will lose their jobs, including textile workers in this state (South Carolina). Certainly those workers have a right to expect government to redouble its efforts to help them — through education and training — so they can continue to compete effectively in an increasingly global marketplace.

Business-environmental link can help protect habitats

The huge timber company Georgia Pacific and The Nature Conservancy have joined to protect 21,000 acres of North Carolina forests. The hardwood bottom land areas on the lower Roanoke River comprise one of the most valuable ecosystems in the Southeastern United States. . . .

One of the good things likely to come of the recent Republican takeover of Congress is an end to the crazier kinds of business-busting environmentalism. Government involvement in environmental protection should be moderated, but this does not mean there is no need to protect valuable habitats. Arrangements like this one will become even more important in the future.

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, still shellshocked from the battle between business interests and environmentalists in the Pacific Northwest over the spotted owl and old-growth forests, called the North Carolina agreement "unique and unprecedented." In fact, it is not a new idea.

Abortion decree leads to culture war

I am certainly guilty of no crimes . . . " says Paul Hill. "My actions are honorable."

"He shot my father in the head with a shotgun," says James Barrett.

Both men cannot be right. Which one is?

Barrett is right.

Hill is wrong.

Murchison

He thought to protest abortion by killing an abortionist and his escort.

He flew in the face of moral theology and also of folk wisdom, which instructs us that two wrongs don't make a right.

Now he will pay — if the state of Florida gets around to making him pay — with his life.

To this state of affairs the state of our culture has brought us.

It's a symptom of deep decay — but also perhaps of reawakening.

Who'd have thought, 25 years ago, it would come to this?

Not the well-intentioned folk I met while covering the first legislative hearings in Texas on the abortion of deformed babies. Even those whose louder, more insistent clamor for unlimited abortion rights soon pre-empted the debate — even those could not have foreseen a time when abortion doctors would be shot down in cold blood.

The opponents of abortion couldn't have foreseen it, that's for sure.

I was with these, too, at their earliest organizational meetings. The concern shared by all was for the lives of the unborn and not at all, at that stage, with the civilizational crisis the U.S. Supreme Court had introduced by extending virtually blanket permission for abortion.

We are 21, almost 22, years down the road now, and the terms of the debate have wiped away both the gloating and the shock.

We see more clearly than ever what it means to overthrow by judicial decree 2,000 years of moral tradition. It means not just liberation and joy but pain and anguish and, yes, murder.

Paul Hill is deeply confused, and sadly mistaken, about his obligation — as he sees it — to defend life.

But so are most others confused today — about the defense of life and about its taking; about what to do and where to stand. We are in the midst of a culture war.

American society no longer believes, as it believed until very recent years, in the integrity of unborn life.

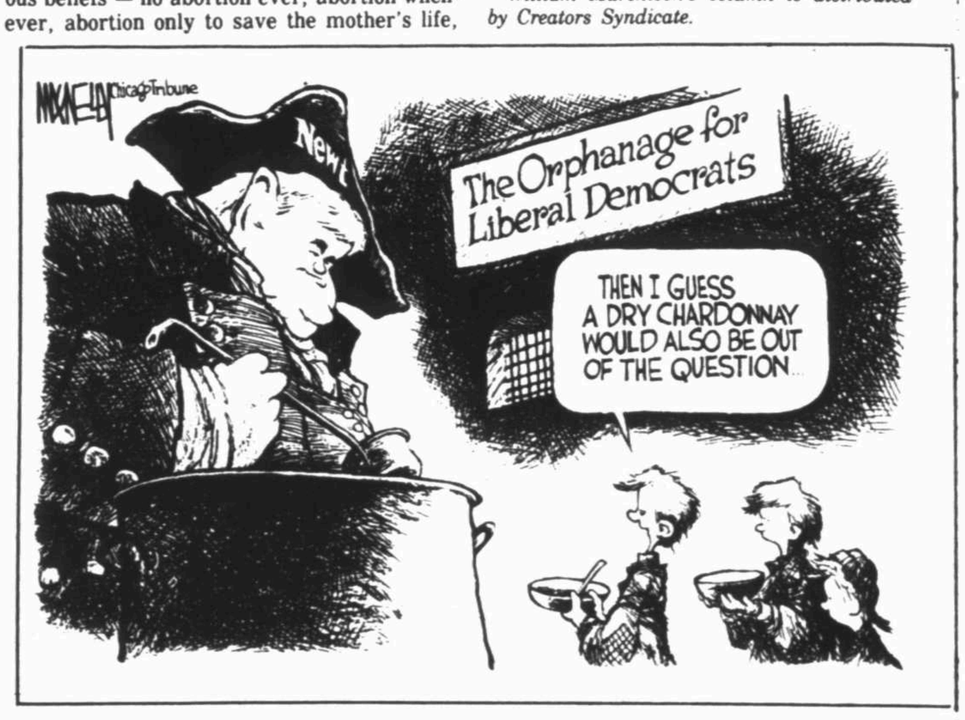

Or to the extent it believes, it entertains various beliefs — no abortion ever, abortion whenever, abortion only to save the mother's life, abortion only to save the mother's life and in cases of rape and incest, abortion for birth control, and so on.

A great tragedy is before us nonetheless — just such a tragedy as could be expected when a civilization's moral consensus collapses. No common understanding of right and wrong, good and evil, binds the various citizens.

Such an environment inevitably breeds Paul Hills — men with anger in their hearts and guns in their hands. The guns point at us all.

Either we rebuild the moral consensus, or the courts and the society they supposedly protect should brace for an onslaught of Hill-style violence.

Presidential race is open for contenders

WASHINGTON — The latest Gallup Poll shows President Clinton losing in a two-way race; even losing a three-way race with Ross Perot taking away Republican votes; and certainly losing a four-way race with Jesse Jackson cutting into Democratic support.

That linear polling reflects the winter of voter discontent. It presupposes the same old lineup representing the forces of resentment.

Safire

But let's blue-sky the options opened by Democrats treating their president as an albatross, and the G.O.P. hot with ideological hubris.

First, the easy part. A month or so ago, Newt Gingrich was answering questions about running for president with a straightforward "no." Today he has changed that to "I have no plans to run."

In political lingo, no plans means "my options are open and I can make plans in a hurry." If the speaker declares next summer that his first contract has been carried out and announces for president, he can say he was not being disingenuous or misleading with his "no plans" statement because no plan was actually on paper at the time.

In reality, Newt and Bob Dole and Pete Wilson are neck-and-neck front-runners coming out of the starting gate for 1996, with Phil Gramm, Jack Kemp, Lamar Alexander and Dick Cheney hoping the early-footers will run out of steam.

Democrats afflicted with can't-win blues can expect a primary challenge to the president (assuming Clinton runs no matter what, which I do). The renegade will garner at least a third of the Democratic vote, as Pat Buchanan did against President Bush, further weakening the party in the general election.

Now comes the interesting part. If Ross Perot runs again, and matches his 1992 vote of 19 percent — and if Jesse Jackson or whoever carries the liberal banner can be persuaded not to run as an independent — then Clinton has a good chance to be re-elected, despite polls taken at today's nadir. (Ross is central to Clinton's chances; that's why Clintonites are belatedly grumping at Al Gore for whipping Perot in NAFTA debate.)

But consider this dynamically, rather than statically, as budgeteers say. With a Perot candidacy adjudged as likely to re-elect Clinton, and with the mad-as-hells to be doomed again to frustration, will Perot and his followers be content to circle the political drain again?

Not necessarily. Perot's personality is a drag on his ticket, and he may be cocky but he's not crazy: 19 percent is his high-water mark, and Ross cannot relish being remembered as the next Stassen, running with greater futility every time.

That makes it Warwick time, as they used to say on the Elizabethan stage: Perot as kingmaker, financier of a centrist changemaker, with solid anti-government credentials in government and acceptable to the respectable center.

If Republicans move sharply rightward with Gingrich or Gramm, or if the tug to starboard produces a more-right-wing Dole or an "Immigration Wilson"; and if Clinton's call to disaffected Democentrists to stay "in the arena and not in the peanut gallery" somehow keeps them in the liberal party tent; then a hole would open for a third-party movement to run to daylight.

The guy who worries the White House most in this far-out scenario is the respected anti-partisan David Boren, 52. He retired as a popular Democratic senator from Oklahoma.

Pie in the blue sky? Probably. But a hole is opening in the antipolitical spectrum; the glory of our system is that you never can foretell.

DOS could turn Christmas into nightmare

Every year at this time we hear about the many people who become depressed because of stress brought on by the psychological overload of the Christmas holidays.

All sorts of factors are said to contribute to this emotional mopiness: troubling memories, eccentric relatives, demanding kids, frenzied shopping and being forced to eat fruitcake.

Royko

And this season it could be even worse. Tens of thousands of otherwise happy people will find themselves falling into deep gloom or explosive with rage.

They are among the many who have given in to our national hunger to possess the very latest high-tech doodad that promises to make our lives easier while filling us with joy.

This year the hottest doodad is the personal computer. Hordes of shoppers are rushing to computer stores and feverishly waving their credit cards. They want RAM, even if they don't know what it is. And ROM, especially CD-ROM. They want to be like the families in those computer ads. You've seen them — a happy dad and happy mom and two happy kids beaming at their new computer screen.

What are they supposed to be smiling about — the bliss of a spreadsheet or database?

For some men (women are less obsessed by technology), it's almost a macho duel.

"I just got a Pentium powerhouse."

"Yeah. Well, I got a Pentium powerhouse, too."

"My Pentium powerhouse is bigger than your Pentium powerhouse."

"Oh, yeah? Well, I'll show you my Pentium powerhouse if you show me yours."

"My fax-modem is 14,400 baud."

"Weenie. My inkjet printer will do six pages a minute."

"Wimp. My printer is a laser with a 29,200 RISC processor."

"How big is your hard disk?"

"You tell first."

But soon this enthusiasm will fade. It will happen after the crates are unpacked and the new computer owners encounter reality — not virtual reality but the real stuff.

They will find themselves sitting stunned in the midst of a heap of thick manuals, a snake pit of cables, warranty cards and all those puffy white packing beads.

I know. It happened to a close friend, and it was a terrible thing to see.

When his new computer arrived a couple of Christmases ago, he smiled confidently as he closed his rec room door behind him. And why not? This was a man who changed the spark plugs on his own car and could fine-tune a snow blower. It was even rumored that he could program a VCR.

In only an hour or two, he promised his family, they would enter the new age. With a few clicks of the mouse, he said, the family checkbook would be balanced to the penny, the children would leap from addition and subtraction to calculus, his wife's favorite recipes would be cross-referenced and itemized down to a pinch of salt, and the knowledge of the world would leap from the modem to the color monitor and into their eager brain cells.

Five days later his wife called the medics. They broke down the rec room door and he was dragged out, a gaunt, tattered, raving, red-eyed lunatic with shaggy hair down to his shoulders, no front teeth, and foam dripping from his lips.

It was a month before he spoke to an attendant. And it was only one whispered word: "DOS."

He's now recovered. Or so the doctors say. But if he hears or sees the word "DOS," he quietly weeps. And even the sight of a $5 pocket calculator is enough to make him tremble.

All because of a college prank.

Yes, that's where it began. Harvard, I believe, which spawns much that is weird.

A couple of students were idling away an evening, when one said: "Let us play a practical joke."

"Such as?" the other yawned.

"Let's invent a computer program that will drive people who use it bonkers."

One of those student pranksters was named Bill Gates, or so I am told by highly unreliable sources.

And the nasty thing he created made him the richest man in America — net worth about $10 billion — before he turned 40. A massive fortune built on the addled brains of people like my friend.

Woman recounts being stalked, raped twice by same man

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press

Ms. Skalias recounts in graphic detail the sadistic attacks and the telephone taunts and threats of an assailant as vile as he is vicious. She also exposes the flaws in an often cruel and insensitive system that seems weighted in favor of the criminal.

FORT WORTH — It began with anonymous phone calls and escalated to obscene threats.

The target: a divorced, single mother.

She complained to police, who were powerless.

Then, on a hot summer night in 1977, an intruder broke into the woman's suburban Fort Worth home and raped and brutalized her and threatened her 5-year-old daughter.

Captured and convicted, the assailant was assessed a 20-year prison term.

"I'll get you and kill you when I get out . . .," he warned her.

Unknown to the victim, he was quietly released six years later. And soon he was back, even more deranged than before.

SUCH IS the chilling theme of "Stalked," a new book by La Vonne Skalias about her terrifying ordeal that, in a sense, continues to this day. A cover quotation slashes to the heart of the story:

"I was stalked and raped by the same man twice . . . and the system didn't protect me."

Told with the aid of freelance writer Barbara Davis, "Stalked" is a first person account of a story that seems almost too grotesque to be true.

Ms. Skalias recounts in graphic detail the sadistic attacks and the telephone taunts and threats of an assailant as vile as he is vicious. She also exposes the flaws in an often cruel and insensitive system that seems weighted in favor of the criminal.

You meet kind and competent investigators and prosecutors, but rarely.

THE BOOK suffers slightly when the authors stray from the facts for an occasional melodramatic flourish, which, given the cold, raw truth, is not only unnecessary but mildly disruptive.

But it is a minor defect.

The anonymous calls began in 1974, when Ms. Skalias was married, but the book opens with the first attack, in June 1977. She is divorced and living with her young daughter, Michelle.

She is awakened at 2 a.m. by the sounds of shattering glass.

"You either cooperate and satisfy me," hisses the knife-wielding man, "or I'll go rape and kill your little girl, and you can watch me do it."

Later, in a photographic layout, she identifies her assailant, Lanny Gene Bevers Jr., a young soldier who shipped out to Germany the day after the attack.

Investigators also find Bevers' fingerprints on a kitchen door window.

IN MARCH 1978, after a week-long trial, a jury convicts Bevers of aggravated sexual assault with a deadly weapon and assesses 20 years in the state prison.

"I am appalled that the sentence is so light," Ms. Skalias says.

On Sept 7, 1984, La Vonne Skalias is working for the local school district and still living in the same home with her daughter, nearly 12.

Sometime after 3 a.m., an intruder with a stocking over his head kicks in the door of her bedroom, pounces on her and begins slashing at her with a knife. He has a pistol in the other hand.

"It can't be Bevers," she would recall thinking. "He is still in prison. This is just a dream. It cannot be happening again . . . not to me . . . not to me."

But it is.

This time, the attacker slices off her thumb, breaks her leg and sexually abuses her repeatedly, all the time threatening to kill her and rape and kill her daughter.

"LISTENING TO my screams, Michelle huddles in the bed in her room and cups her hands over her ears to drown out the horror of it all," she writes.

After the prolonged attack, Ms. Skalias crawls to the home of a neighbor, who summons police.

"He came back," she mumbles. "It was the man who raped me before. He said he would come back, and he did."

Incredibly, police routinely check out Lanny Bevers, but focus on another suspect arrested near the Skalias home. Traumatized and sedated, she identifies a photograph of the man who resembles Bevers and whom she believes is Bevers.

The suspect is arrested, charged and indicted, but later released.

Meanwhile, in October, a month after the second attack, the anonymous calls begin again. If his sexual demands are not met, the caller warns at one point, he will blind Michelle and burn down the house.

SEEKING HELP, Ms. Skalias meets Barbara Davis, a coordinator in the District Attorney's Victim Assistance Office. Besides befriending the victim, and eventually helping write her book, Mrs. Davis plays a key role in Bevers' arrest on Jan. 29, 1985.

The taped phone calls result in a "retaliation" conviction and a 15-year prison sentence in 1987.

"Everyone knows Bevers raped me, but the tainted identification and mishandling of physical evidence has doomed a rape trial — for now," Ms. Skalias writes.

Miraculously, five years after the second attack, Tarrant County's top prosecutor, Alan Levy, finds the evidence to bring Bevers back to trial.

A heavy smoker at the time, Levy thought to have investigators take a second look at a cigarette lighter found in the Skalias home. They discover Bevers' fingerprint on the cylinder that holds fluid in the lighter.

He is convicted in November 1989.

STATE DISTRICT Judge Harry Hopkins, calling this one of the most brutal rape cases ever, sentences Bevers to life in prison.

In time, La Vonne Skalias came to grips with her ordeal, if not totally overcoming it. She began working with state legislators and others for an anti-stalking law.

On March 19, 1993, with pen in hand and flash bulbs popping, Gov. Ann Richards turned to her during an Austin ceremony and whispered: "I think we should call this the 'La Vonne Skalias Anti Stalking Bill.' "

The governor then smiled, winked and signed the bill into law.

Journal editor's defense of breast implants sparks debate

By Daniel Q. Haney
Associated Press

When Dr. Peter H. Schur helped write an article defending breast implants, he failed to mention he is consultant to lawyers who work for implant makers.

BOSTON — Dr. Peter H. Schur is a nationally known rheumatologist, a full professor at Harvard Medical School and the editor of a prestigious medical journal.

But when he helped write an article defending breast implants, then had it published in that journal last February, he failed to mention another credit: He is a $300-an-hour consultant to the lawyers who work for implant makers.

This year's service to the lawyers has included critiques of medical reports, reviews of patient records and trial testimony. Schur estimates he has put in about 100 hours, worth roughly $30,000, for four law firms.

At the same time, Schur edits Arthritis & Rheumatism, the official journal of the American College of Rheumatology and a logical showplace for studies in the debate over whether breast implants cause rheumatologic diseases. In his 4½ years as editor, he has published nothing critical of implants.

Ethical standards for medical journals state that authors of articles should disclose conflicts of interest and editors should never pass judgment on work involving areas of personal financial interest.

The issue is of more than academic interest in the multibillion-dollar litigation over breast implants. Lawyers on both sides welcome published studies that support their arguments, hoping to use them to sway juries.

Some attorneys who represent women with implants even contend the manufacturers' law firms have tried to stifle unfavorable articles by hiring Schur and other journal editors.

"In my view, the evidence suggests that the manufacturers have attempted to control science by hiring experts who are key players in the decision-making about what gets published," said Frederic L. Ellis, a Boston attorney.

Schur denies any conflict of interest. He said he saw no need to disclose his ties with the implant industry because, he insisted, he has not been biased by them.

"I don't think working with any attorney has influenced my medical judgment, my scientific judgment or my editorial judgment," he said.

Members of the American College of Rheumatology's publication committee, which oversees the journal, said they were surprised to learn of Schur's consulting work.

"He should have disclosed it," said one member, Dr. Bruce N. Cronstein of New York University Medical Center.

Dr. David A. Fox of the University of Michigan, the committee's chairman, promised to investigate. "We will take the appropriate actions," he said. "This is not an issue that we will ignore."

The question of whether silicone seeping from breast implants triggers immune system diseases is hotly debated.

Despite the medical uncertainty, manufacturers have agreed to pay $4.25 billion to women who believe they have been harmed. About 8,000 women have rejected that settlement, however, and are suing the companies on their own.

Facing billions of dollars of potential liability in these suits, the manufacturers have lined up experts to support their case that the implants are harmless. At the same time, the women's attorneys are making consulting arrangements with rheumatologists who say implants may be damaging.

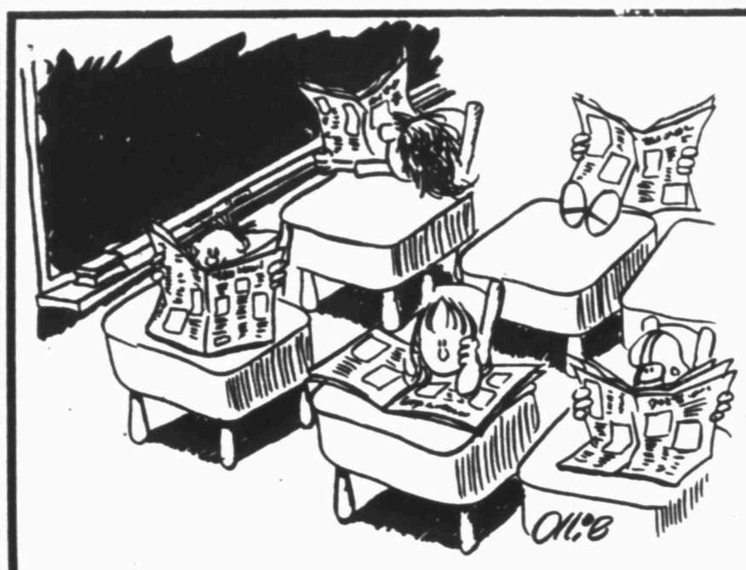

In 1992 and 1993, doctors who believe implants cause disease submitted at least two articles to Arthritis & Rheumatism. One concluded the silicone evidence "is compatible with the hypothesis" that the implants are harmful.

Schur rejected both papers, which later were published in other journals.

Video dealers

MOUNT PLEASANT — Three videotape dealers are pulling unrated adult fare from their shelves in an agreement with prosecutors not to press charges. Police seized about 400 adult tapes from McVideo Movie Rentals, Movies Plus and Imaginations earlier this year, alleging they violated community obscenity standards. Titus County District Attorney Charles Bailey, who asked for the police investigation, was to have turned the material over to a Titus County grand jury Monday for review. Instead, the dealers agreed to pull the tapes from circulation.

Fire destruction

MANOR — Fire destroyed the East Rural Community Center and Manor Clinic, a hub of community activity. The blaze broke out about 1:30 p.m. Sunday during a party, said Sunny Williams, a dispatcher with the Manor Volunteer Fire Department. Everyone escaped from the building unharmed, she said. Investigators were trying to determine the cause of the fire, which gutted the building. While the center is the site of many community activities, the immediate concern is for residents who use the clinic. Shirley Brown, manager of health clinic services for the Austin-Travis County health department, said clients in need of attention would be referred to other clinics.

County reviews alcohol policy

Commissioners seek beverage vendor for Exhibit Building

■ If successful, BYOB would no longer apply to functions at facility.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midland County commissioners, in trying to ensure a peaceful, safe and convenient setting for community functions, are seeking a vendor to sell and serve alcoholic beverages at functions in the Midland County Exhibit Building.

If the vendor route is successful, policy would prohibit people from bringing in their own drinks, including wine, beer and liquor. The BYOB acronym for "bring your own bottle" would not apply to functions at the facility. No drinks would be sold or served after 1 a.m.

Commissioners on Monday also authorized a maximum of 1,000 people in the 20,000-square-foot building when there are tables and chairs in events such as weddings and dances. The county's fire marshal, Dale Little, is to ensure fire exits are not blocked at events.

Revisions to the Exhibit Building policy were considered after Commissioner Louisa Valencia noted that the facility has been visited by "problems" associated with drunkenness and heavy crowds. The revisions would help "to prevent problems."

A role of the bartender-vendor would be to make certain that "consumption (of alcoholic beverages) will be controlled," Mrs. Valencia said, and the practice would "resolve problems with consumption."

"At least," said Commissioner Henry Goulet, "it would have some measure of control."

Commissioner Guy McCrary noted that with control over consumption of alcoholic beverages at the Exhibit Building, most of the social problems there would be "mitigated."

As a matter of course, the Commis-

Mother eases pain with help to other drunken driving victims

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

A death in the family — particularly of a child — can cause an understandable amount of grief, pain and anger.

For some, dealing with the grief is an internal process. For others, reaching out to others may be the only way to overcome the pain.

Faye Higgins is one who has reached out to hundreds who share her same pain and anger.

"I'm not sure where I would be today if I had not gotten involved in MADD," said Mrs. Higgins, who serves as the victim coordinator for Mothers Against Drunk Driving in Midland. "This has been my therapy."

Mrs. Higgins has served as victim coordinator for three years. Prior to that position, she was president of the organization for six years.

What prompted her service at MADD happened on Aug. 18, 1983. Mrs. Higgins' youngest son — 24-year-old Joseph — had left the University of Texas at Arlington to move back home. With his moving van, still packed with belongings, sitting in the driveway of his parents' house, Joseph went out riding. He would not return home.

He was hit by a drunken driver on Highway 191. The car that hit his vehicle was clocked at 109 mph. Joseph died instantly.

"His injuries were so brutal we weren't even able to say good-bye," she

Legislature to see push for changes in education

AUSTIN (AP) — Sex, taxes and high school football are at issue in education proposals filed by lawmakers for the upcoming legislative session.

"It makes you wonder what's going to happen when the session actually starts" in January, said Richard Kouri, president of the Texas State Teachers Association.

Among measures already put forth by lawmakers are proposals to:

■ Abolish school district property taxes and dedicate all lottery revenue, some sales taxes and "certain other statewide taxes" to education. The bill by Rep. John Shields, R-San Antonio, contains no further detail. His staff says he's still working on the measure.

■ Ease the no-pass, no-play rule, which prevents students who fail a class from participating in extracurricular activities such as football. The bill by Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, would bar a student from extracurricular activities if his or her grade average in academic classes was lower than 70 on a 100-point scale.

■ Require school districts to teach students that abstinence from sex outside of marriage is the only sure way to avoid out-of-wedlock pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases. The measure by Rep. Ted Kamel, R-Tyler, would allow school boards to decide which grade levels would be taught.

■ Prohibit sale or distribution of condoms on school property. This bill also is by Kamel. The Texas Education Agency doesn't collect information on whether condoms currently are sold at

Scouts make families' holiday greener

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Two dozen families who wouldn't have a Christmas tree can now gather 'round their very own this holiday season, thanks to the generosity of a local nursery and the Midland Girl Scouts.

Geriann Green has headed "O' Christmas Tree" for the Girl Scouts for seven years. Daisy and Brownie Scouts also participated in the program.

Lanham's Nursery and Landscape Supply provided the Girl Scouts with 24 live trees for the youngsters to decorate, Ms. Green said.

The trees were distributed Saturday to families in need. Several local charitable organizations determined who the trees would be given to, she said.

The Girl Scouts made Christmas tree ornaments last week; various troops participated.

Michelle Long helped Ms. Green with the program. Ms. Long said the girls were making a variety of ornaments from reindeers to God's eyes and snowflakes.

said. "We couldn't see him at the hospital and there was a closed casket at the funeral. We couldn't see him one last time."

The driver who hit Joseph Higgins pleaded guilty and was out on probation after serving 13 months.

"His family sent flowers to the cemetery and a letter to the family saying that he had changed his life," she said. "But I feel like Joseph and my family were let down. The driver was sentenced to five years in prison, and he only served 13 months."

Mrs. Higgins said her son's death took a tremendous toll on her, her husband, her four daughters and other son.

"It was just a shock," she said. "One of my daughters in still in counseling."

Mrs. Higgins found a way through her pain when she was contacted by Cynthia Grubb, then-president of MADD.

"She and MADD extended their help, and it helped a tremendous amount," she said. "It helped with my grief process."

Mrs. Higgins said she felt so grateful to MADD that when Ms. Grubb stepped down as president, she agreed to fill the position for three months.

"I was just a mother," she said. "I thought I would only serve for three months. I ended up there for six years."

In her work, Mrs. Higgins meets with residents who have been where she was 11 years ago. She listens to the victims' families, she counsels them, she supports them as they go through the court process and she continues her contact after justice has taken its course.

Although her work is hard at times, she maintains it has been the best therapy for dealing with her grief over her son.

"I feel very strongly that I was given this work by God to help others and to do it as a memorial to Joseph," she said. "I don't want anyone to think that I am doing this for praise. I do everything I do humbly. Joseph and God have helped me every step of the way."

Mrs. Higgins said she plans to continue her work at MADD as long as she is able.

"As long as I can make a difference and as long as I am needed, I'll be there," she said.

PUSH: Lawmakers propose changes in education

any schools, according to department spokesman Joey Lozano. "It would be, I guess, a local decision" currently, he said.

■ Require a moment of "quiet reflection" by students at the beginning of the school day. The bill by Rep. John Cook, D-Breckenridge, says the moment may not be conducted as religious exercise. Rep. Tom Ramsay, D-Mount Vernon, also has filed a measure to require a moment of silence.

■ Create a pilot program allowing low-income students to have tuition paid at a private school with public funds. This measure is a bipartisan one sponsored by Wilson, Rep. Henry Cuellar, D-Laredo, and Rep. Kent Grusendorf, R-Arlington. They say the measure would give disadvantaged students the same opportunities as middle-class pupils.

Gov.-elect George W. Bush — who made reforming education to increase local control of schools a centerpiece of his campaign — hasn't reviewed the legislation, according to his spokeswoman, Karen Hughes.

But she said he supports creating a pilot program on school vouchers; allowing school districts to decide for themselves on establishing a voluntary moment of prayer, and on adjusting the no-pass, no-play rule if they believe it will help their students; dedicating lottery money to education as a complement to less potentially volatile funding sources; and working to reduce education's reliance on school property taxes.

"I think overall what you'll find during this legislative session is that one of his top priorities, and one of the reasons he was elected, was to de-control schools, to reduce state regulatory authority over local school districts," Ms. Hughes said. "So I think what you'll see is a push toward new freedom for local schools to determine what works best in local classrooms."

Kouri said his teachers' group opposes spending public money in private schools; supports the current no-pass, no-play rule; favors allowing school districts to decide on issues such as condoms and a moment of silence before classes; and would want to see what happens to total school revenue under a proposed funding change.

POLICY: Commissioners seek vendor for building

sioners' Court requires that organizers of functions there retain certified law-enforcement officers to patrol parties and other functions.

After the session, Mrs. Valencia noted that the county has been "lucky so far" in renting out the Exhibit Building.

If a vendor is selected to sell and serve alcoholic drinks there, then people using the building would not be allowed to bring their own alcoholic beverages.

"They (vendor or vendors) can refuse to serve somebody who has had too much to drink," Mrs. Valencia said.

Without control, a person could bring in a "whole ice chest full of beer and get as drunk as you want to."

Mrs. Valencia recalled a couple of incidences in which the party-goers got "out of control" and law-enforcement officers had to use tear gas to quell the disturbance.

"One was a wedding," she said. "We've had lots of fights" in the over-crowded building.

If the county is unsuccessful in locating a vendor to handle alcoholic beverages at the Exhibit Building, Mrs. Valencia said the Commissioners' Court "may revise" its policy and outlaw alcoholic beverages there.

"We're providing the people the use of the building" at bargain rates, Mrs. Valencia said. The Exhibit Building is leased for $100 a day, or for a period of more than four hours, to private, non-profit functions and for $300 a day to profit-making functions.

Additional fees include a $50 per-day utility fee and $100 clean-up fee.

Profit-making organizers are to pay the county 5 percent of the gross revenue "charged for any operation, activity or function which contemplates a profit from the use of the premises," according to county policy. Gross revenue includes the sale of tickets, merchandise and services.

Lottery revenues would not help education as much as most think

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — If Texas had taken all the lottery revenues it received in fiscal 1994 and used it directly to fund public schools, the amount would have educated fewer than 200,000 students, out of an average daily attendance of 3.3 million.

Yet, many Texans still believe if all the lottery money were dedicated to education, it would go a long way toward solving funding problems.

Lottery revenues currently go into the state's general fund, and around 50 percent of the state budget goes to public education. In that sense, about half the lottery money goes to schools.

In fiscal 1994, the lottery put $869.1 million into the state treasury, up from $609.2 million in fiscal 1993, said state lottery spokesman Keith Elkins.

Texas gave $7.25 billion to public schools in fiscal 1994, or $4,408 per student based on average daily attendance of 3.3 million, said Joey Lozano, a Texas Education Commission spokesman.

Thus, the lottery would have paid for an average daily attendance of 197,164 students in 1994.

Texas schools had a total enrollment of 3.5 million students in 1994, but state funding is based on the average number of students attending class each day, which was 3.3 million.

The state provided only 41.6 percent of the total spent on public education in 1994. Local school district property taxes, and a small amount of federal money, provided the rest.

Gov.-elect George W. Bush criticized school funding during his successful campaign this year and said the state should put up the majority of school financing. Bush has not said where the state would get the money to increase its share.

A healthy aproach to investing

Van Pearcy, Investment Representative and Cheryl Werner, Branch Office Administrator, in front of their Midland office of Edward D. Jones & Co, 2020 West Cuthbert. For a no obligation appointment, call them at 683-1516.

Common sense tells us it would be bad for our health to only eat one type of food. Just as it is better for our health to choose a variety of foods, it is better for our 'fiscal fitness' to choose a well-balanced variety of investments. Investors who diversify among different types of investments, as well as among various industries, are in better shape to handle the inevitable economic ups and downs.

"The recent decline in utility stocks illustrates the downfall of putting all of your eggs in one basket," stated Van Pearcy, one of Midland's investment representatives with Edward D. Jones & Co.

"Risk adverse investors often look to utility stocks for above average income and safety. But from late 1993 into 1994, the Dow Jones Utility Index declined about 30 percent, one of the biggest drops ever in such a short period. Even the strongest companies were dragged down by this unprecedented decline.

Some of the best know utility companies ended up cutting dividends because of lower earnings. Many individual investors looking for stability and income through utility stocks and utility mutual funds were surprised."

Pearcy explained that there were two important lessons learned from this decline. First, no industry is immune o the affects of adverse economic conditions on market reaction. Therefore, diversifying investments not only among securities, but among industries, is the best way to buffer your investments from unexpected declines withing one industry.

Second, when an industry suffers a downturn, most securities within that industry are usually affected. However, higher-quality companies are better able to protect earnings and dividends during market declines. For instance, it is not uncommon for well-managed, financially stable utility companies to pay out only 70 to 80 percent of company earnings as dividends, even during bad times. Weaker companies on the other hand, may be forced to pay out virtually all of their earnings or--even worse--cut dividends during rough economic periods.

"Wether investing in individual stocks or other types of securities, the key is to fill your plate with a variety of wholesome choices. "Diversify and buy quality! It's the battle cry of serious investors," commented Pearcy.

Pearcy operates one of the three Edward D. Jones & Co. offices in Midland. He has been with Edward D. Jones & Co since 1987 and has his office at 2020 West Cuthbert. Nintendo World Class Service®

Delta Electronics has sent two of its technicians to Nintendo of America's headquarters in Seattle, Washington. Their extensive training has resulted in Delta being classified as a Nintendo World Class Service Technical Team.

According to statistics published by Nintendo of America In., one out of every three households in the United States currently owns at least one Nintendo electronic game such as the Nintendo Entertainment System®, Super Nintendo Entertainment System®, and the Nintendo Gameboy®.

This extremely large number of video games means that there has to be a highly trained and qualified support service available to do the routine maintenance and servicing.

Don Baker, one of the technicians at Delta Electronics, said "Nintendo computer games are as complicated as small personal computers. They are packed full of integrated circuits and microchips which are relatively delicate."

Couple this with the fact that children are notoriously bad at looking after their toys (even grown-up children subject the games to a great deal of abuse) and it is easy to see why Delta Electronics has sent Baker and Ed Huwa of San Angelo to Nintendo's headquarters in Seattle.Washington to receive detailed training in the repair and care of these complex machines.

The games may look sleek and uncluttered on the outside, but inside they are highly sophisticated units full of advanced circuitry. Repairing them is no for the untrained, which is why Baker and Huwa (already very experience technicians) spent a week learning the finer points of game repair.

Delta Electronics is perhaps better known in the MIdland area for its reliable, high quality repairs on general household electronics such as televisions, stereo systems, video cassette recorders, microwave ovens and camcorders. Now Delta has received certification as a Nintendo World Class Service Technical Team.

Because Delta works to Nintendo's own rigorous quality standards, every game unit that is brought in undergoes highly detailed testing by computer both before and after repair. Diagnostic testing programs can quickly identify problems, enabling a fast turn around of repairs.

Each unit id then tested for eight hours with another program to double check all the systems. All machines must be functioning as good as new before they will be returned to their owners. This kind of attention to detail comes naturally to Delta's team of electronic technicians who have a real understanding of a subject most people know nothing about.

If a piece of your electronic equipment breaks down or if it needs servicing: be it a computer game or a video camera, call Delta Electronics at 683-3582, or take the equipment to the service center at 1308 S. Midkiff, Suite 303 and let them take a look.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Greater selectivity is the key to achieving your goals. Be more choosy in business and romance. Joint financial enterprises are favored in 1995. Taking your career in a new direction will bring widespread attention next summer. September produces a rich harvest of professional gains. A golden opportunity comes from out of the blue. Emphasize your organizational talents when promoting a pet project.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Dick Van Dyke, TV host John Davidson, singer Ted Nugent, boxer Archie Moore.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Private meetings can help you make a wise decision. An optimistic outlook on romance could be your signal to take action. Move forward with confidence.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Refuse to be treated like a pawn! Visualize yourself in control, then take steps to get what you want. An unusual trip could bring you wonderful insights and happy romance. Loved one shares a secret.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Influential people will rate your job performance as "excellent" today. Keep up the good work! Partnership activities will receive a jumbo-sized boost. Your ESP is especially powerful in romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your stock rises with an employer when you display an ability to deal with unknown factors. New work methods will pay off. A raise or promotion is possible.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone may be trying to hide certain facts and figures; heed your intuition. A behind-the-scenes investigation will shed light on recent puzzles. Good timing is essential. Keep any sensitive information to yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may need a partner to achieve maximum success. Choose this person with great care. Eating right will keep your energy level high. Bold moves attract positive feedback in romance. Show your imaginative side.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You could score a big win by emphasizing teamwork today. Someone influential is impressed by your leadership qualities. Mate wants a 50-50 deal in handling household duties. Try to agree on child-care matters.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A meeting or phone call will bring news that boosts your ego. Your energetic leadership will inspire others to take calculated risks. Happy romance makes you feel blessed. Wear your heart on your sleeve.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A financial turnaround is near at hand. Your determination to build savings bodes well for the future. You could find yourself attracted to a real daredevil. Keep your standards high in business and career matters.

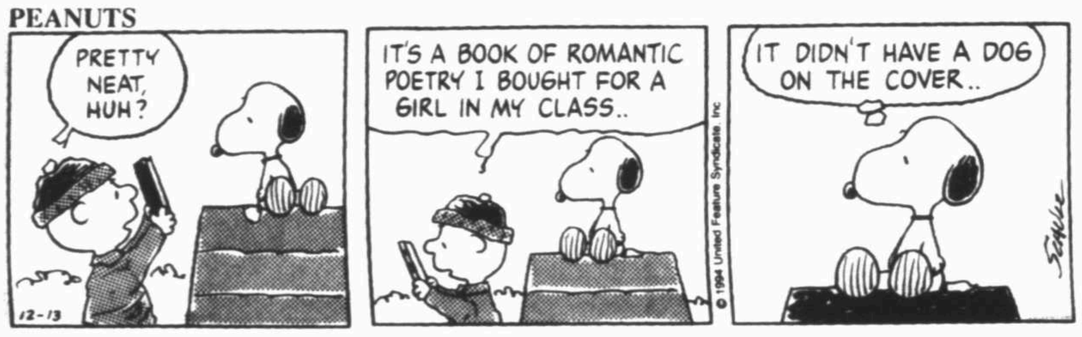

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Forget about following a rigid schedule and tackle things as they arise. You are often your own worst critic. Lighten up! Give yourself credit for being a good person. Replace harmful habits with healthy ones.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Use common sense to settle a matter that has been on hold for too long. A child or parent may be feeling neglected. Pay a visit right now. Show how much you really care.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not be taken in by someone who flashes their money around. A good reputation is the key to making a favorable deal. A romantic relationship could be somewhat tense. A dream proves prophetic.

Opening lead: King of ♣

A transfer squeeze is a rare animal indeed, usually found in double dummy problems. This one occurred during a team match at the World Olympiad in Albuquerque.

North's bid of four no trump in this competitive auction was key-card Blackwood. Since North held nothing in hearts, the minimum that player could have to look for slam was ace-king of spades or diamonds and ace in the other suit, so South was not selling out to any opposition contract. Seven hearts became the contract at both tables.

At one table declarer cashed the ace of diamonds early in the hope that the long spades and king of diamonds were in the same hand, in which case that player would be squeezed on the run of the hearts. Unfortunately that was not the case — down one.

Sitting South at the other table was Gerald Caravelli of Des Plaines, Ill. He decided that West's failure to sacrifice at seven clubs was based on some hope of defense, and that could only be the king of diamonds. So after winning the ace of clubs at trick one, declarer drew trumps in one round, then led the queen of diamonds, intending to run it if West played low.

When West covered, declarer took the ace and cashed out the heart suit, coming down to four spades in dummy and three spades and the ten of diamonds in hand. East could not keep four spades and the jack of diamonds, and whatever card he elected to discard gave declarer the fulfilling trick.

Easton, who went from sweet to sexy, changes tunes again

MINNEAPOLIS — Sheena Easton, who went from sweet Scot to sexy vamp faster than the "Morning Train," is changing tunes again.

Easton takes part in touring, family-type holiday concert.

Easton is taking part in the Colors of Christmas, a touring, family-type holiday concert that begins this week in St. Paul. It features Roberta Flack, James Ingram, Peabo Bryson and the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra.

"Kids' songs, lullabies and lots of crying. The only thing I'll ever do from now on," said Easton jokingly, who became a single mother after adopting a baby last month. "I'm going to call the album 'Diapers.'"

Easton had her first American hit, the bouncy "Morning Train," in 1981. She took on a sexier image in 1985 with the suggestive "Sugar Walls." Last year, she recorded a collection of jazz standards.

Her next album, due in February, is called "Straight Ahead Pop."

Radu, personal trainer to the stars, who collaborated with Cindy Crawford on her exercise video, told People magazine that he knew her relationship with husband Richard Gere was foundering last April, when he and Crawford were working on the tape.

After spending weekends with her husband, Radu revealed, Crawford would return to work fatigued. "Usually on Monday your body is recharged," said the crunchmeister/ marital observer, "but hers was not. She was not as happy."

LOS ANGELES — Garth Brooks has become the first solo artist ever to have two albums sell more than 10 million copies each.

He set the record with "Ropin' the Wind" and "No Fences."

Whitney Houston has "a couple of albums over 10 million, but one of them is a soundtrack ("The Bodyguard") so they don't count that. And the Eagles did it, but as a group," the country music sensation said in an "Entertainment Tonight" interview for broadcast Tuesday.

Brooks said he's been too busy to enjoy his success.

"As long as you've got the jersey on, I think you play your ass off," he said. "And when it's over, you hang it up. And that's when you live with what you've done — and not while you're doing it."

WASHINGTON — Her dad, Ronald Reagan, might not appreciate the gesture, but when has that ever stopped her?

Patti Davis will appear in the buff for an anti-fur ad.

Patti Davis will appear in an "I'd-rather-go-naked-than-wear-fur" ad. It will feature Reagan's rebel daughter seated in the buff, with legs crossed and a puppy in her lap.

The ad, backed by People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, will debut in the Jan. 4 Washington Times, Davis said Monday.

Among other stars who have taken part in the ad campaign are Kim Basinger, Naomi Campbell and Cindy Crawford.

Davis, 41, also said she plans to donate half the proceeds from her July nude layout in Playboy to the animal rights group. Also expect Davis to appear in a nude kick-boxing video in early 1995.

LOS ANGELES — Spousal abuse charges against Mickey Rourke were dismissed Monday because his estranged wife, model and actress Carre Otis, wouldn't testify against him.

Otis had claimed that Rourke — a boxer and actor — slapped her, knocked her down and kicked her at a Hollywood office July 18. He could have received up to a year in jail.

Otis "was the one who contacted police in the first place. We interviewed her and she was very cooperative and at some point we were unable to contact her," said Mike Qualls, a spokesman for the city attorney's office.

Rourke's movies include "Barfly," "Diner," "9½ Weeks" and "The Pope of Greenwich Village." Otis and Rourke appeared in "Wild Orchid."

PARIS — Steven Spielberg will be the guest of honor at the 20th annual Cesar awards, the French equivalent of the Oscars.

The Feb. 25 ceremony in Paris coincides with lavish celebrations of the 100th anniversary of the birth of cinema.

Spielberg won the Academy Award this year for directing "Schindler's List."

COURT: Brown to end 24 years as commissioner

(From 1B)

tired, and friends and family members who visited Brown at his retirement party in the Commissioners' Courtroom.

"There is a lot here I haven't seen in quite a while," he said.

Brown, who opted not to seek re-election to the post which he has held since 1971, is being succeeded on the court in early January by James "Jim" Brezina, who was among his well-wishers.

Among the greeters were former Commissioner Durward Wright, who retired in 1992 after serving 24 years on the court; former County Judge Barbara Culver-Clack, who later became a Texas district court judge and a justice on the Texas Supreme Court; and former Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr.

Of leaving office, "I don't think I'll get sentimental," Brown, 67, said. If I feel a little lonesome, I'll come down to the courthouse and make my rounds."

When he started his service on the Commissioners' Court in 1971, "I had no idea I'd ever go this long," Brown said. "Lou (his wife) tried to talk me out of it four years ago.

"It's been fun; I've enjoyed it," Brown said. "I'm tired now."

Besides, he said, "the courthouse has changed. The attitudes have changed."

The once-prevalent reference to the "courthouse family" is not as common as before.

"Other things have just kind of evolved," Brown said. "I don't know if it is good or bad. It just evolved. It's time that I moved on and let someone else come in."

So, Brown, a landman and rancher, plans to spend more time with his family on his ranches in Tom Green and Schleicher counties southeast of Midland and in casting his new fishing rod-and-reel rig — a gift from his friends in county government. His home place is at Christoval near San Angelo.

"I'll be down there quite a bit," Brown said. "We really do plan to go fishing. Lou grew up on the lakes up there in Minnesota. We're going to enjoy it."

He ranches by pickup truck rather than by horseback.

"I got off that horse in 1945, went to the (military) service, and that was the best day of my life," Brown quipped. "I pickup."

In briefly reflecting on his public service, Brown said he worked "to keep the taxes down, and we did.

"But, finally, you get to a point in time that you can't keep things down any more. County government has grown so much" — from a $2.5-million general-fund budget in 1971-72 to a general-fund budget exceeding $18 million in 1994-95.

Midland County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer, who is leaving office this year after serving a four-year term, characterized Brown as a "moderator, a peacemaker, and an individual who could find a reasonable compromise where there didn't appear to be any apparent compromise at all."

GREEN: Girl Scouts, nurseries give trees to area needy families

(From 1B)

Ms. Green said the theme behind the ornaments was taken from the story of a young girl who was away at school and could not afford gifts for her family. In the story, she made a paper fan for her grandmother as a present.

"These are inexpensive decorations they can make . . . it improves their hand-eye coordination, and they are quick and easy crafts," Ms. Green said. "They are successful at making the various decorations and they feel good about what they're doing."

A group of Brownie Scouts stood circled around a table cutting out snowflakes to adorn some of the trees.

The idea of helping others was one the girls understood and enjoyed.

Casey Casstevens, 8, said the whole purpose behind the service project was to help people. Eight-year-old Aleese Hawkins agreed.

"We're making these for other people who maybe don't have Christmas trees," Aleese said. "We have all different kinds of ornaments to make."

Kimberlie Meece, 9, nodded in agreement. "We're helping other people."

"Helping people who probably don't have any (trees or decorations)," was the reward 8-year-old Meagan Floyd said she reaped from the project.

And the youngest of the group summed up the lesson they were all learning while they had fun:

"We're learning to help people and that makes me feel good," said 7-year-old Kathleen Burleson.

Inmates escape from Mexican prison through elaborate tunnel

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — For months, the cramped, refuse-littered cell tucked away in a far corner of Cellblock No. 7 harbored a secret.

As inmates played billiards a few yards away in a guard-patrolled recreation area or slept unassumingly, a group of prisoners in cell No. 4 were laboriously carving a sophisticated tunnel to freedom.

The tunnel wasn't uncovered until Sunday after 17 gunrunners, rapists, drug traffickers and at least one murderer crawled and squirmed down the 80-yard shaft to slip away into the night.

"Nobody knew about it, except the guys who got away," said Walter Klassen Fast, an inmate at the CeReSo state prison in Ciudad Juarez, across the border from El Paso.

But it was common knowledge by Monday as the search continued for the missing prisoners.

Even residents living near the prison, an old, decaying gray complex sprawling on the outskirts of this teeming border city, knew enough to describe the escape route in detail.

Yet, many questions remained about how so many inmates assigned to different cells in one wing of Cellblock No. 7 managed to devise and execute such an elaborate escape plan under the noses of prison officials.

Bartender wins big in Lotto Texas, promptly quits job

AUSTIN (AP) — Diane Leiding didn't make any tips at her job tending bar at a Weatherford VFW hall on a slow Saturday night. Now she's rich enough to buy the town a round.

Ms. Leiding, 39, won half of the $40.39 million Lotto Texas jackpot drawn Saturday night. She promptly quit her job and said that as a former "poor person," she plans to buy a home and a car to replace a "nightmare" vehicle she bought for $400.

She rented a Cadillac to drive to Austin Monday to claim her winnings, which included an initial installment of just over $1 million. It's the first of 20 such payments she'll get over the next two decades.

"I want to buy a new car and buy a house and help my friends out, and there's some charitable things that I want to do," said Ms. Leiding.

She said winning the jackpot means she will get to spend Christmas with her sister because she can now afford to fly her from Georgia to Texas for the holidays.

Ms. Leiding said she was raised in New York and spent time in California before she "kind of blew into Weatherford (and) didn't have enough gas to get back out."

The town has turned out to be an "absolutely wonderful place to live," she said.

Ms. Leiding, who quipped to reporters that she wanted them to include the fact that she's unmarried in their stories, was accompanied to the news conference by several friends.

Even though she cried as she said she wants to repay those who made her feel at home, she joked that those on her gift list need not expect her to redo her Christmas shopping just because she's now a millionaire.

"They're still getting the same old rinky-dinky gifts. I'm not rewrapping a bunch of presents," she said.

A second winning ticket was purchased in Houston. Lottery officials are still waiting for it to be redeemed.

4-5A girls start loop war

■ Lady Bulldogs host Abilene High while Lee travels to Abilene Cooper to start district basketball play.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

The Midland High girls are hoping to continue their 16-game winning streak in District 4-5A while the Midland Lee girls are hoping to make right where their season went wrong last year as both teams open league play today.

Midland High (11-1) hosts Abilene High (9-4) while Lee (7-4) travels to Abilene Cooper (4-6) for the loop openers. Both games tip off at 8 p.m.

The boys do not begin 4-5A play until Dec. 20 but both Midland and Lee have non-district games on the slate for tonight. Lee travels to Lubbock Monterey at 7:30 p.m. while MHS hosts Lubbock High at 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center.

Coincidentally, the last time the two-time district champ Lady Dawgs lost in league play was to Abilene High on Jan. 23, 1993. Since then, MHS went on to win the 1993 title and then went 12-0 last year. It was the first time since 1986 a 4-5A girls team has finished league play unscathed. In the last two years, the Lady Dawgs have a 22-2 district record.

Not so coincidentally, the Lady Rebels' season went down the tubes last year after losing their opener to Cooper, the team picked to finish last in 1994. Lee lost five straight to begin district before recovering for a 4-8 record and a fifth-place finish.

"I still remember it vividly," recalled MHS coach Jim Raughton.

MHS was undefeated heading into the Jan. 22 game against San Angelo Central, which was rescheduled from a Tuesday to a Thursday because of inclement weather. The Lady Dawgs fell 51-48 and then headed to Abilene the next day where the Lady Eagles topped them 61-54.

"Coach brought that up during practice," said two-time district MVP Amy Alcala, who was the only player on the team in 1993 for its last loss. "Every time we step on the court, they're going to be gunning for us. So we've got to go out and prepare for a team like they prepare for us."

The 16-game streak puts the Lady Dawgs in an enviable position, but not neccessarily in a comfortable one.

"I said a long time ago that I want people to know that when they play Midland High, they were going to have to play to beat us," Raughton said. "But they're (district opponents) after us. It's like one guy said today, 'We're the hunted rather than the hunter.'"

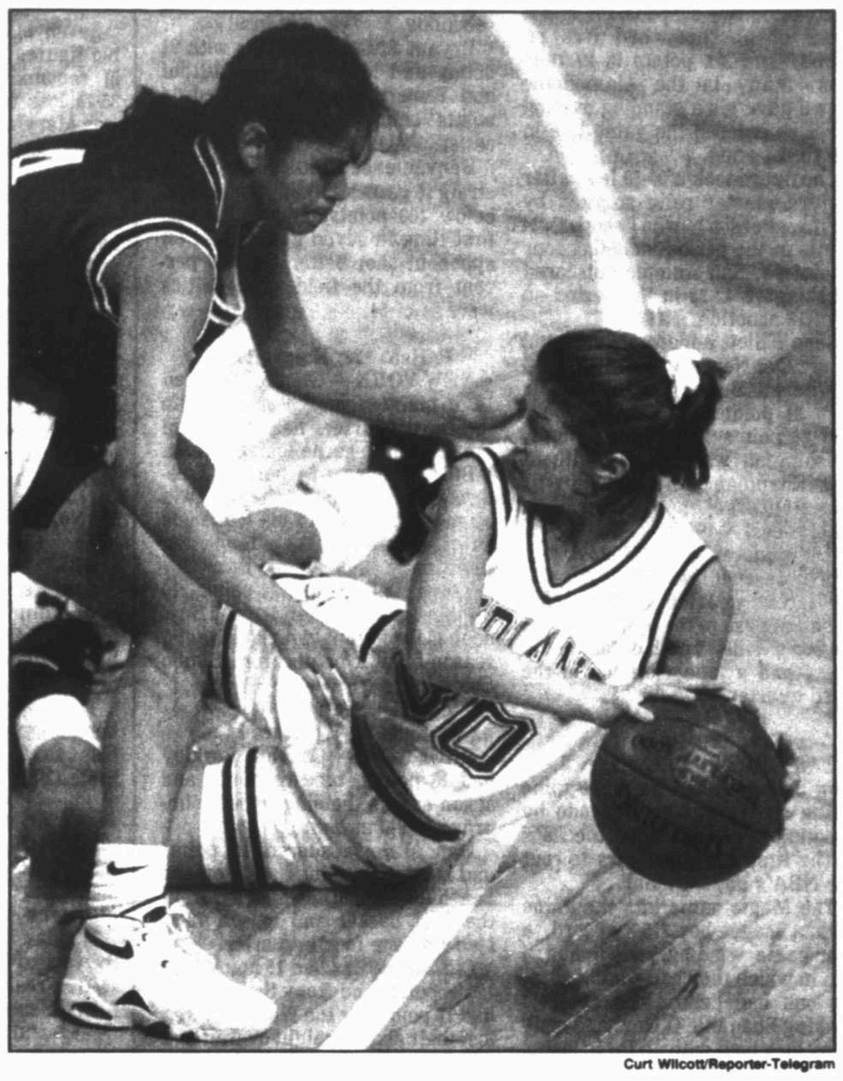

One of the main Dawg hunters will be Abilene's 6-foot senior post Tasha Newman, who averages 15 points a game. Newman averaged 20 points over four games to lead AHS to a fourth-place finish in the recent Polk Key City Classic in Abilene. The Lady Eagles dropped games to 4A powers Waco Midway and Cleburne. Julie Massey leads the AHS attack at the point guard and the Lady Eagles have a similar style to the run-and-gun Lady Dawgs.

The size disadvantage is not unfamiliar to the Lady Dawgs, who faced a fistful of 6-foot-plus posts across the league last year.

"We know we have big hearts and athletic people and we've stopped big people in the past," said MHS senior guard Jamie Rand.

Senior guard Veronica Poage added, "They do have a serious height advantage over us, but if we move our feet quickly like we can and keep our hearts in the game, then we'll come out on Johnson an Eagle?

DALLAS — The man who coached the Dallas Cowboys to back-to-back Super Bowl championships may soon be joining a former NFC East rival — the Philadelphia Eagles.

The Dallas Morning News reported Monday that Jimmy Johnson will announce Sunday whether he plans to coach the Eagles or remain with the Fox network as a broadcaster.

Johnson has narrowed his choices to one team, the Eagles, or staying out of coaching for at least one more year, the newspaper said, citing an unidentified source.

In Fox's national pre-game telecast, Johnson said he would announce his decision on next weekend's show. Johnson did not specify what his choices were.

Kelly out

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — If the Buffalo Bills are going to make the playoffs, they'll probably have to do it without Jim Kelly.

Kelly said Monday he was likely finished for the season, the result of a sprained knee suffered in a 21-17 loss to Minnesota. He was scheduled to have an MRI exam on Monday to determine the extent of soft tissue damage.

"I probably, definitely wouldn't be back, even if we did make the playoffs," Kelly told radio station WGR-AM in Buffalo.

Tech's young pups growl

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — So many young recruits joined the Texas Tech offense this season that coach Spike Dykes branded his players "the Pups."

Four freshmen start on an offense that turned inexperience and error tendencies into a scoring force headed to the Cotton Bowl.

"They overcame a lot of things. They were not very cohesive," Dykes said of his freshmen. "Before long they developed into a pretty good unit."

The Red Raiders, preparing to meet Southern California on Jan. 2 in Dallas, rely heavily on a cast of teen-age standouts.

Zebbie Lethridge of Lubbock Estacado won the Southwest Conference's consensus newcomer of the year honor after completing 132-of-261 passes for 1,596 yards. Lethridge debunked another redshirt freshman, Tony Darden, from Tech's starting quarterback job after three games.

I-back Byron Hanspard of DeSoto ran for a team-high 761 yards on 173 attempts and broke James Gray's 1986 rushing record for Tech freshmen.

Wide receivers Sheldon Bass of Odessa Permian and Stacy Mitchell of DeSoto lead the Red Raider receiving corps.

49ers impress Switzer

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Barry Switzer, given a stunning loss by the Cleveland Browns, says the San Francisco 49ers impress him more now than they did when they beat the Dallas Cowboys last month.

"That team is a machine," Switzer said. "I believe they are playing even better now than they did when we saw them. Their offensive execution is pretty incredible."

Switzer, still queasy from Saturday's 19-14 loss to the Browns, watched the 49ers tear apart the San Diego Chargers Sunday.

"I was just sick after the way we lost to the Browns," he said. "Watching the 49ers didn't help me much."

San Francisco's 38-15 victory put the defending Super Bowl champions in a deep hole concerning homefield advantage throughout the NFC playoffs. Dallas lost 21-14 to San Francisco on Nov. 13.

Dallas is 11-3 and San Francisco is 12-2. The 49ers would have to lose their last two games against Denver and Minnesota and Dallas would have to defeat New Orleans and the New York Giants — both on the road — to regain the homefield edge.

The Cowboys have already clinched the NFC East but still need a win or a Minnesota loss in one of its last two games to get a first-round bye and host a divisional playoff game on Jan. 7 or 8.

Dolphins make playoffs with rout of Kansas City

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI — Thanks to nifty running by Bernie Parmalee, a pair of wily defensive backs and even Dan Marino, the Miami Dolphins charged into the playoffs.

The Dolphins scored three touchdowns during a six-minute span Monday night to beat Kansas City 45-28 and clinch just their third playoff berth since 1985.

First-place Miami (9-5) can win the AFC East with a victory in one of its final two games against Indianapolis and Detroit.

Kansas City (7-7), playing again without Joe Montana, was eliminated from the race for the AFC West title. The Chiefs have lost four of their past five games and could miss the playoffs for the first time since 1989, but they still have a shot at a wild-card berth.

Miami cornerback Troy Vincent and safety Gene Atkins combined on a stunning 76-yard interception-lateral-touchdown to help break the game open. Parmalee rushed for 127 yards and scored twice, while the gimpy Marino surprised the Chiefs on a 4-yard touchdown run.

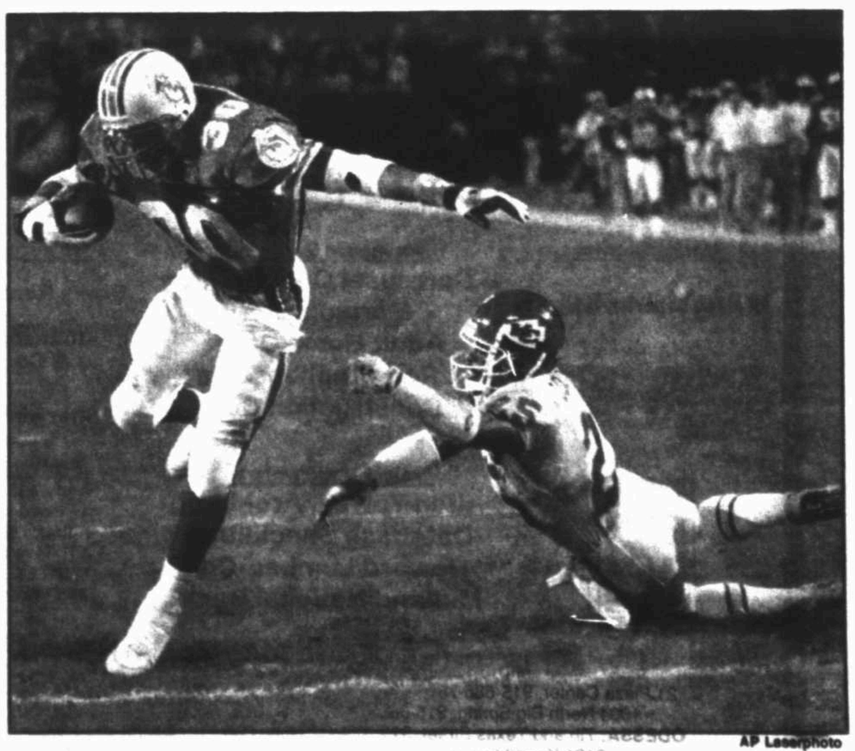

The Dolphins' point total was their highest since 1986 and the most allowed by Kansas City since 1984.

Montana remained sidelined by a sore left foot. Replacement Steve Bono directed touchdown drives of 83 and 81 yards on the Chiefs' first two possessions, but those were their only offensive points until the final 3½ minutes.

Don Shula improved to 1-0 when coaching from a golf cart. Shula, recovering from surgery last week to repair a ruptured Achilles tendon, kept his leg elevated as he was driven up and down the sideline by an aide.

The game turned when Miami outscored Kansas City 21-7 during a wild stretch at the end of the third quarter to take a 35-21 lead. The sequence included Vincent's touchdown, Jon Vaughn's

Spurs blast Bullets as Rodman returns

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson had 21 points and 12 rebounds and Dennis Rodman got a warm welcome in his first regular-season game as the San Antonio Spurs defeated the Washington Bullets 122-101 Monday night.

Rodman, who returned to the team after two suspensions and a leave of absence, had five rebounds and six points in 27 minutes. Many in the Alamodome crowd gave his a standing ovation when he entered the game late in the first period.

The Spurs took a 99-69 lead after a third-quarter rally sparked by Chuck Person, who scored 14 points in the period including four 3-pointers. San Antonio outscored Washington 42-23 in the period on 15-of-18 shooting.

Sean Elliott added 18 points and Vinny Del Negro scored 17.

Mitchell Butler led the Bullets with 24 points and Chris Webber had 21 points and nine rebounds. Washington was playing without Rex Chapman (sore right groin) and Don MacLean (tendinitis in both knees).

Rodman, who dyed his hair green, dazzled fans with a dunk in the second quarter and a behind-the-back pass in the fourth. On the negative side, he had four turnovers and a lane violation in the third quarter.

Nets 128, Magic 101

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — New Jersey ended an eight-game losing streak against Orlando by shooting 61 percent from the floor in the first three quarters to rout the NBA's hottest team.

The Magic came into the game with a league-best 15-3 record, a four-game winning streak and a run in which they had won 13 of 14. No one had even come close to making Shaquille O'Neal and company look bad, with all three losses by two-point margins.

But the Nets succeeded where everyone else failed as Derrick Coleman scored 22 points on a night when almost everyone made contributions in the New Jersey's first win over Orlando since March 4, 1993.

Celtics 113, Nuggets 103

BOSTON — Pervis Ellison scored 19 points in his debut for the Celtics and five other Boston players had at least 12 points in a victory over Denver that ended the Nuggets' four-game winning streak.

■ NBA Roundup

Dee Brown also had 19 points, Dominique Wilkins added 18, Derek Strong 15, Rick Fox 13 and David Wesley 12 for Boston, which beat Denver at home for the fifth straight time. Ellison, who hadn't played all season while recovering from knee surgery, also had 10 rebounds.

Bryant Stith led Denver with 21 points and Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf and Robert Pack contributed 14 points each. Pack also had 19 assist.

Denver ended its streak of five straight games holding opponents below 100 points, and it was the first time in seven games that an opponent shot better than 50 percent from the field. The Celtics were 44-of-84.

Heat 122, Knicks 111

NEW YORK — Glen Rice scored 14 of his season-high 38 points in the third quarter, helping Miami break a three-game losing streak.

Billy Owens, a 54 percent free-throw shooter, helped the Heat win by making all six of his foul shots down the stretch. As a team, the Heat made 39 of 47 free throws.

Kevin Willis added 28 points, 10 in the final quarter, and 17 rebounds for Miami, which also got a season-high 21 points from Bimbo Coles.

Suns 90, Warriors 84

PHOENIX — Charles Barkley had 18 points, nine rebounds and seven assists, helping Phoenix improve to 8-0 at home.

Dan Majerle scored 15 points and Danny Manning had 14 off the bench for Phoenix, which led from the first basket and took a 70-57 lead into the fourth quarter.

Clifford Rozier had 16 points and 12 rebounds and Rony Seikaly also had 16 points for the Warriors, who lost their sixth straight overall and eighth in a row on the road. It was their 19th consecutive loss at Phoenix, where Golden State hasn't won since March 21, 1987.

Jazz 101, Trail Blazers 89

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 27 points and Felton Spencer added 17 as Utah snapped a three-game home losing streak by beating Portland.

Utah jumped to a 34-10 lead after one quarter, and the Blazers never got closer than 12 the rest of the way. Rod Strickland led Portland with 17 points and Harvey Grant added 16.

Maryland nails 120

Associated Press

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Keith Booth had 18 points and No. 12 Maryland had its highest-scoring game in 16 seasons, beating Towson State 120-73 Monday night.

Seven players scored in double figures as the Terrapins (7-2) rebounded from Saturday's 85-74 loss to Massachusetts. It was Maryland's highest-scoring game since a 129-103 victory over Canisius in 1978-79.

Booth tied his career high, scoring 15 in the decisive first half, Exree Hipp had 16 points and freshman Sarunas Jasikevicius 14. Maryland built a 60-33 halftime lead, its highest-scoring first half since November 1991.

Booth made six of nine shots and was 6-for-7 at the line to match his previous high, set last year against Towson State. He also grabbed nine rebounds.

No. 18 Michigan St. 111, Cleveland St. 68

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Shawn Respert scored 27 points and Jamie Feick had career highs of 20 points and 13 rebounds, leading No. 18 Michigan State over Cleveland State.

The Spartans (3-1) bounced back from Saturday's overtime loss to Nebraska. Cleveland State (2-3) lost its third in a row.

No. 7 Arizona 92, La Salle 76

TUCSON, Ariz. — Ray Owes scored 21 points and Damon Stoudamire had 19, leading No. 7 Arizona over La Salle.

Stoudamire scored 15 points in the second half for the Wildcats (6-1). Freshman guard Miles Simon finished with 17 and Reggie Geary and Joseph Blair added 12 apiece.

For La Salle (5-1), Kareem Townes scored 24 points while Romaine Haywood and Paul Burke added 20 each.

La Salle, down 40-37 at the half, trailed by 14 before pulling to 73-66 with 6:43 remaining. But the Wildcats outscored La Salle 19-10 over the final six minutes to put the game out of reach.

Arizona coach Lute Olson missed the game because of back problems caused while weightlifting.

TECH: Pups lead Raiders' attack

(From 1C)

counted for 16 of 36 total touchdowns.

"All of us on the team have strived to get better, and it showed every week," Lethridge said.

"It's been a big improvement since two-a-days," he said. "In the spring we didn't know what our offensive team was capable of."

Nebraska, Oklahoma and others made the Red Raiders look clunky and erratic at first. But Tech found a groove by midseason and outscored opponents 161-47 in the last five games.

Such progress proved especially gratifying for a team that lost eight offensive starters from 1993.

The departure of such players as quarterback Robert Hall, who set 16 school records, and I-back Byron "Bam" Morris, who won the Doak Walker Award, left Tech devastated, Dykes said.

"We felt like we had good young prospects, but they had never played," he said. "You feared the worst, that you wouldn't be very competitive."

Dykes called his players unselfish, mature and hard-working.

The freshmen talk about a bonding process that stretched off the field from classes to the dorm cafeteria.

"We're all pretty close-knit outside of football," Hanspard said. "We're pretty much good friends, and I feel that is a great part of our success."

Bass said the young offense has great potential now that everyone knows the playbook and has adjusted to each other's style.

"We're capable of anything," Bass said. "There's no telling what this offense can do. It can explode at any time."

NFL: Dolphins roll to wild victory

(From 1C)

91-yard kickoff return for Kansas City and a 47-yard touchdown run by Parmalee.

Marino threw two touchdown passes and scored his eighth career touchdown, rolling to his right and beating safety William White in a race to the pylon. Marino's rare sprint gave Miami a 21-14 lead.

The Dolphins scored again two minutes later on the stunning interception and lateral.

Atkins stepped in front of a long pass intended for Willie Davis, made the pickoff at the Miami 24, barely avoided stepping out of bounds and cut back to the middle of the field. As he was being tackled at the Miami 42, Atkins laterraled the ball over the head of an official to Vincent, who broke to the sideline, eluded Bono at the Chiefs' 30 and continued to the end zone.

Vaughn reached the end zone 17 seconds later, breaking into the clear at the 40 and scoring the first touchdown on a kickoff return against Miami since 1975. It was the first for the Chiefs since a 92-yard return by Paul Palmer in 1987.

SMU players charged with sexual assault

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Denton police remain tight-lipped Monday about the weekend arrest of three Southern Methodist football players on charges of sexual assault.

The three athletes, among them a former senior class president and an honoree in Who's Who Among American High School Students, were being held in the Denton County Jail on $50,000 bond each. Each is charged with one count of aggravated sexual assault.

Charged were Weldon G. English, 19, a cornerback from Houston; Calvin Robinson Jr., 18, a defensive back from San Antonio; and Eric D. Yarbrough, 19, a wide receiver from the East Texas town of Timpson.

"We're following up all the leads and just doing a general investigation," said Denton police Sgt. Lonnie Flemming, declining to provide additional details about the alleged attack.

English, Robinson and Yarbrough were arrested about 5 a.m. Sunday after leaving the Desert Sands Motor Inn on Interstate 35E in Denton. Police were called to the motel after receiving reports that a nude woman was screaming from a second-floor balcony.

James Meyers, the motel's night manager, said other people at the hotel reported seeing "somebody dragging the girl up the stairs."

Another witness, Warren Loyd, who lives in the inn, said he heard the girl at 4:25 a.m.

"She was screaming, 'They raped me! They raped me!,'" Loyd said.

Police said the men met the 16-year-old Austin girl at a popular Denton nightclub.

The teen-ager was treated and released from a Denton hospital on Sunday.

A written statement issued by SMU Sunday said school officials would determine whether any disciplinary action should be taken against the three players, none of whom are starters.

SMU spokesman Gary Shultz said Monday, "There have been no new developments, so there's no statement beyond that."

Jim Caswell, SMU's vice president for student affairs, said the three men are innocent until proven guilty.

"To be fair, we've got to look at this thoroughly," Caswell said.

SMU football coach Tom Rossley did not return a telephone call from The Associated Press.

Robinson and Yarbrough are freshmen who played minor roles on this year's team. Robinson was an All-District player at Jay High School in San Antonio.

top."

For the Lady Rebels, the game with Cooper is a crucial one after losing 39-36 to the Lady Cougars in their home opener last year. This time, Lee won't be in the cozy Lee gym when they begin their second season.

"Oh yeah, we've talked about that," said Lee coach Elise Kail. "It's important that we beat Cooper and that we beat them soundly. We've got to play on the road like we're starting out down 10-0 and overcome that. And to win district, we're going to have to win on the road."

Second-year CHS coach Annette Jacobson should have a better season after working her systems into the program. The Lady Cougars are led by 5-11 post LaQuinta Pollard, who averages about 12 points a game. Cooper lost to Quanah in the consolation semifinals of the Polk Key City tourney after beating Sweetwater. Cooper's point guard Kristin Wildner had 15 points against Quanah.

Three Lee seniors — leading scorer Krissy Woodard, Michelle Benson and Farrah Fisher — are well aware of what the opener with Cooper means to their season.

"We're trying to forget last year," Woodard joked. "It was very embarrassing to lose to them because they were picked to finish last in district."

Fisher added, "It's very important to start off district with a win. It's a big motivation because of how bad we were last year and how much potential we had. We want to use our potential to our biggest advantage this year."

Benson said the team has been having meetings all season long about the importance of getting the district campaign off right.

"We've talked about how we weren't happy with how we played last year and how we felt and we're not going to let it happen again."

The Midland High boys improved to 8-3 with a three-game sweep in winning last weekend's Tall City Oilman's Invitational over a class crowd of nine other teams. Two of their three wins came after double-digit rallies including a 16-point comeback against cross-town rival Lee in the opening night. The Bulldogs host Lubbock High (9-2).

Lee fell to 4-9 with a 1-3 record in the tournament and travel to Lubbock Monterey (6-6) which was also in the tournament. The Plainsmen, who the MHS boys knocked out of the playoffs last year, dropped an overtime semifinal game to Lubbock Coronado on Saturday. Coronado ended up losing to Arlington Martin for third place in the tourney.

League play for the boys begins Dec. 20 when Lee hosts Abilene High at Chaparral Center and MHS travels to defending champion Abilene Cooper.

Cardinals ink Henke

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals moved Monday to strengthen one of the worst pitching staffs in the National League, signing free agents Tom Henke and Danny Jackson.

Henke was hampered by back problems last season but led the Texas Rangers with 15 saves in 21 opportunities. Overall, he was 3-6 with a 3.79 ERA in 37 games. He's seventh on the career save list with 275, including eight consecutive seasons of 20 or more from 1986-93.

Torre, who used a couple of players in save situations, was happy to have an established closer.

"He will be given every chance to be successful," Torre said.

Jackson, 32, signed a three-year deal and Henke, 36, signed for one season to be the team's closer. Terms were not disclosed for the signings, which new general manager Walt Jocketty said were a clear sign that the team would be aggressive under his leadership.

In the strike-shortened season, the Cardinals had a 5.14 ERA, ahead of only league-worst Colorado. The team previously changed pitching coaches, replacing Joe Coleman with Mark Riggins and Bob Gibson.

"I think this is a major step in the right direction for the organization," Jocketty said. "One of the main areas we wanted to address was our pitching and we're well on our way.

"It should be an indication to all of the fans that we're doing whatever is needed, whatever possible, to put a winning and competitive ballclub on the field next year."

Manager Joe Torre said he'd like the team to sign at least one other starting pitcher.

Then, all they'll need is a labor agreement.

"I don't know what's going to happen," Henke said. "I told them, I'm going to go home on the farm. When you're ready, call me back."

Jackson was 14-6 with a 3.26 ERA in 25 games with the Philadelphia Phillies last season. He led the league's left-handers in victories and was third in the league overall.

Jackson has a career mark of 107-109 with a 3.77 ERA, including previous stops with Kansas City, Cincinnati, the Chicago Cubs, Pittsburgh.

Prices retreat

Gasoline futures prices plummeted Monday after the government said it would not require 28 Pennsylvania counties and one in New York to make higher-priced reformulated gasoline available to consumers Jan. 1.

Wholesale unleaded gasoline for January delivery fell 1.63 points on the New York Mercantile Exchange to 51.06 cents a gallon.

Weakness in gasoline prices dragged crude oil and heating oil lower as well. January light sweet crude fell 22 cents to $16.91 a barrel; January heating oil fell 0.42 cent to 48.85 cents a gallon; January natural gas rose 7.1 cents to $1.913 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Chamber meetings

The Midland Chamber of Commerce will host two meetings this month.

The first is the Chamber's President's Round Table on Midland manufacturing, set for December 14 at the Chamber's boardroom beginning at 11:30 a.m. Dr. Christopher Jacobs of Jacobs Electronics will present "real world" sales and marketing techniques and Lee Black, owner of Duo Delights, will sponsor a presentation by United Parcel Services on shipping and receiving.

Downtown revitalization will be the subject of a breakfast on December 21 in the lower level of the Midland Center, beginning at 7:45 a.m. Cost is $6. The speaker will be Kenneth Devero, president of Downtown Fort Worth Inc.

Dollar slips

NEW YORK — The dollar fell modestly against most other key currencies on Monday, weakening on possible indications that the Federal Reserve won't raise short-term U.S. interest rates until next year.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 99.98 Japanese yen, down from 100.11 late Friday.

The dollar also was changing hands in New York at 1.5725 German marks, down from 1.5771.

In New York, the dollar advanced to 1,637 lire — the highest level in eight months — from 1,630 late Friday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.3335 Swiss francs, down from 1.3370; 5.4075 French francs, down from 5.4160; and 1.3873 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3836.

The British pound was quoted at $1.5650, up from $1.5605.

Markets gain

NEW YORK — Investors waiting anxiously for a year-end rally in stocks had to wait some more on Monday.

Although last week's sharp declines due to the investment turmoil surrounding Orange County, Calif. led some bargain hunters into the market, they had to fight against uncertainty on the inflation front and weak technology issues.

Williams, Transco agree to merge

Combined company to deliver annual 4 trillion cubic feet of natural gas

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Williams Companies Inc. will buy Transco Energy Co. in a $3 billion merger agreement announced Monday between the two natural-gas pipeline companies.

Williams operates natural-gas pipelines in the Northwest and Central parts of the country, while Transco does most of its business in the Midwest, Northeast and Gulf Coast areas.

Under the agreement, Williams will buy up to 24.6 million shares of common stock and related common stock purchase rights for $17.50 each. Williams would buy the rest of the company with 0.627 share of its own stock for each Transco share.

The merged company will deliver an annual 4 trillion cubic feet of natural gas, making it the nation's largest such provider, a Transco spokeswoman said.

The announcement had a mixed effect on the companies' stock Monday on the New York Stock Exchange. Transco rose $3.625 to close at $16.25, while Williams was fell $2.875 to $24.

Keith Bailey, Williams' president, chairman and chief executive officer, said he believes the merger will make the two companies "substantially stronger together" than either business would be alone.

Transco, which has been working to reduce a debt that now is about $1.9 billion, found the deal to be the "best available option to our shareholders," said John DesBarres, Transco's chairman, president and chief executive officer.

However, one analyst said the lower closing stock price showed that not everyone was convinced it was the right move for Williams.

"I think the guys from Williams have a lot to prove to the investment community," said John Raymond of Howard Weil Labouisse Friedrichs Inc. in New Orleans.

Williams in August agreed to sell the long distance operations of WilTel to LDDS Communications Inc. for $2.5 billion.

Raymond said Williams has said it would generate about a 15 percent rate of return from whatever it invested the Wiltel money in, but he doesn't expect Transco to generate that kind of money in the near future.

"Strategically, they're (Transco) doing the right things, but nothing is going to get them to $17.50 a share for the next two to five years," he said.

"I just don't see the logical step in this one," he said.

But Williams' spokesman Jim Gipson said Monday night that company officials did not promise to reinvest all the Wiltel money in business ventures that would provide returns in the 15-20 percent range.

"We think this is a great project obviously, or we wouldn't have proposed it to the board," Gipson added.

New cold front turns Texas weather, holiday sales brisk

Associated Press

A cold front that has turned Texas weather brisk is having the same effect on holiday sales.

One of those getting a boost from the cold snap is the Boots 'n Jeans western store in Amarillo, manager Ronnie Morrow said on Monday.

"It needs to stick around," said Morrow, whose merchandise includes jackets. "We need some snow."

Sales at the store have equaled last year's level, to Morrow's surprise.

"I thought it would be off," Morrow said. "We were flat most of the year, and some months were down."

Customers are watching for bargains and buying practical gifts like clothes, he said.

The news is also good at Collectible Trains & Toys in Dallas, where sales are up about 10 percent to 12 percent from last year, owner Cheri Neil said.

"This year the shopping started early. We've been really busy since the first of November — it didn't wait 'til after Thanksgiving — and people's attitudes are a 180-degree turnaround from the last two years," Ms. Neil said. "People's attitudes are much, much happier — much."

No markdowns are planned, Ms. Neil said. "We're running out of merchandise, and we're real happy with the way things are going. We're real optimistic," she said.

"Optimistic" also fits the mood at Neiman Marcus, which has six Texas stores — in Houston, Fort Worth and Dallas — as well as 21 other stores nationwide and a well-known mail order business.

"I know they've been good, strong, trending well," spokeswoman Jodie Pogue said about holiday sales. "We're very optimistic and happy."

The cold snap helped in the past week, especially in outerwear sales, Ms. Pogue said.

"We're never sorry to see a little cold spell come through. So that helps us, especially in the Northeast," she said.

Sales figures in the past week have been about even with last year for national department store and catalog retailer J.C. Penney Co. Inc.

"I was in the Louisville store on Saturday, and they mentioned that business had picked up this week and obviously aided by the cooler weather," said Duncan Muir, spokesman for the Plano-based business. "The women's outerwear has improved quite a bit."

There also should be good news for customers looking for price cuts.

Coverage exists for oil shippers, but importers aren't buying, insurers say

NEW YORK (AP) — Shipping insurance executives say policies are available for oil-spill coverage and premiums are falling, but importers aren't lining up to buy the insurance despite a Dec. 28 deadline.

The federal deadline and the lack of tankers with the necessary paperwork have raised concerns of an oil shortage and higher prices for fuels like heating oil this winter.

The American Petroleum Institute has written President Clinton complaining that too few ships have the coverage. The International Association of Independent Tanker Owners has sought to delay the deadline, saying its members can't get policies.

"I think a lot of owners are leaving it to the last minute. They're saying 'We'll apply when we actually have a ship coming in,'" said Hugh Bryant, attorney for Shoreline Mutual, one of two companies newly formed to sell the spill insurance.

The two companies recently got U.S. Coast Guard approval to issue the insurance and say they have the ability to write policies to cover all ships affected by the new rule. As part of the Oil Pollution Act, tanker operators have to prove they can pay to clean up any oil they might spill in U.S. waters.

The law was enacted after the Exxon Valdez dumped 11 million gallons of crude in Prince William Sound in March 1989.

"There's no need for any shortage or disruption," said D. Darby Duryea, a managing principal of brokers Johnson & Higgins, which set up First Line, the second of the two spill insurers.

After First Line won the cooperation of other shipping insurers last week, making its policies more practical, Shoreline cut its premiums about 25 percent.

Rexene pencils in new Odessa plant

DALLAS (AP) — Rexene Corp. said Monday it will build a new plant in Odessa that will employ 30 people when it's finished.

The plant will make Rexene's REXflex brand of flexible polyolefins, or FPO. Construction is scheduled to start next year on the plant, which is due to come on line in mid-1996.

In April, Rexene announced a new line of developmental polymers called REXflex FPO, now being produced in a pilot plant in Odessa.

"REXflex FPO is a next generation polymer that has received excellent response from the marketplace," Andrew J. Smith, chief executive officer for Rexene, said in a news release.

The polymer is being tested in medical, personal care, automotive and specialty industrial markets, Smith said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Investor can identify which stock shares to sell

By Bill Doyle

Q: We have been investing in a stock dividend reinvestment plan for many years. While all the reinvesting has been going on, the stock has gone from $14 a share to $36 a share and, recently, slipped back to $22 a share.

Doyle

Can we sell some of the stock we received between $30 a share and $36 at the current $22 price and declare a loss for tax purposes?

A: Yes, you can sell those shares and declare a loss. When you sell the shares, you can identify the ones you wish to sell so you can control your capital gains and losses. You can do that whether reinvesting in dividend reinvestment plans, mutual funds or individual stocks.

However, you should be careful that you don't wind up with more than a $3,000 loss, because that's the limit for one year. If necessary, you might be able to sell a mixture of winners and losers to net a $3,000 loss.

Q: My husband plans to retire in June at age 55 and, at that time, will receive $250,000 in a lump-sum pension payment. To avoid the 10 percent tax penalty for early withdrawal before age 59½, we plan to roll over the lump sum into an IRA until he reaches age 60.

We are considering having a bank purchase U.S. Treasury notes in increments of $10,000. It's my understanding that the IRS will allow a time frame of approximately 10 years to withdraw this money.

If all the Treasury notes mature at the same time, may we cash in only the required minimum amount, or can we cash in more? How many years does the government allow you to reinvest?

Finally, after all this explanation about Treasury notes, do you think this is a foolish way to invest the money?

A: You seem to be a bit confused about the age deadline for being able to start withdrawing money from an IRA without penalty, as well as the deadline for beginning a compulsory withdrawal plan.

Your husband would be wise to roll over the lump-sum disbursement into an IRA to avoid the 10 percent tax penalty for withdrawing money before age 59½. From 59½ to age 70½, he can leave the money accruing interest in the IRA, take some out, put more in — whatever. Any money he takes out would be taxed as ordinary income.

IRA investors are required to begin taking out a certain amount of money, based on life expectancy, by April 1 in the year following the year they turn 70½. You cannot invest more money in an IRA after age 70½.

As far as your plan to purchase Treasury notes, it might be a mistake to put all your eggs in one basket. You might want to invest some of the money in a fixed-income vehicle, such as the Treasury notes. But since you are in your 50s, you should consider investing some of the money in stock mutual funds to give you a chance to earn considerably more over the long haul.

With your fixed-income investment portion, you might consider "laddering" the Treasury notes. That way, you buy them at various maturities — two years, three years, four years and so on — giving you more flexibility. If rates go up, you can roll over a maturing note. If rates are down, you can invest in something else, including a longer-term note that pays more interest.

You also might consider investing in zero-coupon bonds. You can ladder those, too, as they mature.

For more specific information and timing strategies, you would do well to consult with an experienced financial adviser.

DEAR ABBY

Forcing mom to smoke outside puts chill in holiday celebration

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have just completed our dream house. Where we live, the days are warm and sunny, but it can get downright cold in the evenings.

Here's my problem: We have invited my sister, her family, and my mother for Christmas. Mother will be staying with us, and I have told her that she may not smoke in our house. This has created a real furor.

My sister thinks I'm being unreasonable because Mother has emphysema, congestive heart failure and bleeding ulcers — and she's an alcoholic and weighs about 90 pounds. She also uses a walker.

We have an outside fireplace on the patio that emits a great deal of heat, and we'd gladly light it for her while she smokes outside.

Abby, am I unreasonable to forbid smoking in my home? My sister and mother have put a real guilt trip on me. — SMOKELESS IN ARIZONA

DEAR SMOKELESS: In view of your mother's condition, it's unrealistic to expect her to huddle by an outdoor fireplace to smoke. Perhaps her physician would prescribe nicotine patches to tide her over during her visit with you. Obviously, your mother is very frail, so enjoy her while you can.

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter signed "Bugged" from the reader who resented having to chip in for the boss's Christmas gift.

Well, Abby, I am the boss, and I have a message for my employees:

Please skip the collection this year. I am already rich because I have a competent staff who make my job a pleasure. Just give me a card with your good wishes for me and my family — and spend your money on your loved ones!

The only gift I want is another year of "bossing" such generous people, and I will consider myself blessed indeed.

Please sign my name. I want these great people to know I mean them. — PAM KOCH, LAWRENCEVILLE, N.J.

DEAR PAM: What a lovely idea. It's a first. (And something tells me it won't be the last!)

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I aren't speaking, and I need some unbiased advice.

Our 24-year-old daughter got herself arrested and is sitting in jail because she couldn't come up with her bail. The judge gave her 90 days.

She has been calling, begging us to come down and get her out. She broke a restraining order and will be in jail for Christmas.

My husband and her brothers and sisters all say she needs to learn her lesson, but every time she calls me crying, I get so upset I go to pieces and do whatever it takes to rescue her.

Abby, how can a mother enjoy the holidays knowing her daughter is sitting in jail? Mind you, she has been in trouble many times, but this time, she couldn't get off.

Have you any words of wisdom for me? — STRESSED-OUT MOM

DEAR MOM: Yes. One of her problems was knowing that her family would always come to her rescue. Let her sit.

To receive a collection of Abby's most memorable — and most frequently requested — poems and essays, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's "Keepers," P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

In a society where you can attain fame and fortune by turning letters and selling vowels to game contestants or breaking into David Letterman's home on a regular basis, it is no surprise that the newest media darling is a man who takes his shirt off.

Bombeck

I've watched the Diet Coke commercial several times and the man doesn't say a word. He's a construction worker-hunk who downs his drink while a windowful of sex-deprived maidens watch his muscles ripple.

Ordinarily, that wouldn't give anyone the cover of Psychology Today, but it happened to Lucky Vanous because "he represents an important social change. Men are now the objects of desire as women have been."

Get outta here. Ogling men is as old as dirt. What do you think women watched Tarzan movies for? To look at Cheetah's yellow smile? My mother didn't watch Victor Mature conquer Rome in short leather pants because she was religious either. We were just a little more subtle than men.

What is different is that for the first time, men are marketing their sensuality. Women have been doing it for years. Burt Reynolds broke new ground when he appeared for a centerfold, and Jim Palmer will always be remembered as the baseball player who modeled men's briefs.

A few years ago I attended a very tony style show. It was the first time I had seen men hit the runway. The women whistled, screamed and shouted their phone numbers like Peg Bundy on "Married With Children."

Don't look for men to stand on a subway grate while the air billows their night shirts to reveal their underwear a la Marilyn Monroe, but beefcake is definitely on the menu for the '90s.

Most men don't realize it yet, but being a sex symbol is not an easy profession. (You do understand I'm not reading from my diary, don't you?) It triggers eating disorders, constant dieting and exercise, and pursuit of youth like an Olympic gold medal. It's an obsession with how you look or how much cosmetic surgery you can afford to get that look.

The beefcakes are falling into the trap. Eating disorders are reportedly on the rise; there are ads for rear-end enhancements in magazines; and pumping iron has become a national pastime.

A lot of people believe sensuality has gone too far. They say nothing is left to the imagination. I'm not sure. I saw a Calvin Klein ad the other day, and not only did I not recognize any of the body parts — I didn't even know what was being sold.

Bicycle program proves community's trust

N.Y. Times News Service

PORTLAND, Ore. — In New York City, it would be madness. But here, where cars slow for pedestrians and trolley car fare is collected on the honor system, urban whimsy has become reality.

One hundred lemon-yellow bicycles have been scattered along downtown sidewalks by a local community group, free and available to anyone who needs one. Dangling from the back seat of each single-speed two-wheeler is a license plate that reads: "Free community bike. Please return to a major street for others to reuse. Use at your own risk."

What has been remarkable since the program began about four weeks ago is that, as far as anyone knows, all the bicycles have indeed been returned, something that might not happen in other cities.

"Would it work in New York? I doubt it," said Joe Keating, the Manhattan-born director of the United Community Action Network who started the Portland bike project with a friend.

He said that while it is impossible to keep track of every bike, he believes none has been stolen. "But if someone needs a bike that bad, let them have it," he said.

No one is more delighted by the peaceful distribution of low-tech vehicles than the mayor of Portland, Vera Katz, a former Brooklyn resident who has never learned to drive.

'If these bikes were left in midtown Manhattan, they'd disappear instantly. That's why I love this city.'

— Vera Katz, mayor

"If these bikes were left in midtown Manhattan, they'd disappear instantly," Mayor Katz said. "That's why I love this city."

Keating said he got the idea for the bike project after he and a friend saw a documentary, "Sex, Drugs and Democracy," about life in Holland.

"There was this wonderful scene about the free community bikes in Amsterdam," Keating recalled. "We looked at each other and said, 'OK, let's do it.' "

Keating and some comrades scouted neighbors' garages, acquiring 10 somewhat damaged bikes, which they took to a nonprofit center that teaches children the art of bicycle maintenance. The bikes were free and an auto shop donated buckets of yellow paint.

Since the bikes hit the streets, Keating said he has been flooded with donations of even more of them. And government officials up and down the West Coast have inquired about how to launch similar programs.

"So I'm putting together a packet of instructions — can you imagine, instructions?" Keating said. "It's more like a haiku sort of thing. Really, this is the essence of simplicity."

So far, the only problem has been an occasional flat tire. There is a telephone number to call, but some riders fix the tires themselves and return the bikes to the street.

Portlanders now exchange stories about odd sightings of cyclists, offering social commentary.

"Last week someone was surprised to see an elderly woman in a smart tweed suit hop on," Keating said. "She wobbled a bit and clearly wasn't an avid cyclist."

This week Keating received a call from a perplexed new Portland resident who seemed overly anxious about the bike she had found.

" 'Take a ride and leave it for someone else,' " Keating said. "She was utterly befuddled."

Cynicism was the immediate response of Portland Police Chief Charles Moose, who was born in Harlem. "See any cops ride away with one?" he asked. But soon he became as nonchalant as the mayor. "It's just an Oregonian kind of thing," he said.

Students' club helps disabled hunters fulfill dreams

By Frank Fisher
Associated Press

REND CITY, Ill. — Larry Muzzy thought his hunting days were over after he lost the use of his legs in a 1979 car wreck.

But for the last five years, he has been riding into the forest on the strong, young shoulders of teen-agers.

"Without these kids, I wouldn't be able to do what I love doing, and that's getting into the woods," said Muzzy, 40, who weighs about 150 pounds. "When I got paralyzed, I never thought I would hunt again."

A high school club is helping disabled hunters like Muzzy go into the woods, build hiding places, track wounded deer, and skin and gut the animals.

Before dawn one chilly day at Rend Lake in south-central Illinois, 17-year-old Jeff Patchett waited to take Muzzy out of a wheelchair and onto his back for a half-mile hike into the forest.

With a grin, Muzzy grabbed his rifle: "I'm ready to rock 'n' roll."

The Outdoorsmen's Club at the 200-student Sesser-Valier High School has gotten national recognition for helping disabled hunters pursue their passion. Its supporters include guitarist and hunting fan Ted Nugent. The group also recycles, studies wildlife and maintains an apple orchard.

And it's competitive. Freshman can't join, sophomores must do a long list of projects, and upperclassmen have to stick to an environmental code of conduct or get the boot.

"Our goal is to teach kids how much work is involved in taking care of our planet," said Gene Morgan, a biology teacher and club founder. "If they do all their work, then they get to do the fun things, like working the deer hunt, snow skiing, mountain climbing, whitewater canoeing."

Taking hunters out into the woods at 5 a.m. is fun?

"Yeah, that's considered one of the fun things," Morgan said, laughing. "The kids wouldn't miss it for anything. It's an unbelievable rush."

During the November deer season, about 30 handicapped hunters were helped by 50 club members. In December, more than two-dozen youngsters waited on 11 hunters.

Members can develop strong bonds with their hunters.

"When your hunter leaves and you hug him and he's all excited, you're kind of sad," said Deidra Dame, 17. "They're just so happy you helped them."
