MAVERICK MONSIGNOR

Msgr. Orville Blum isn't really a maverick, but is trying to boost the evolution of the church along

Editor's note: Monsignor Orville Blum will celebrate the 30th anniversary of his ordination at 7 p.m. Tuesday at St. Anthony's Church.

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Orville Blum is a man of many passions.

He may be the most devout baseball fan in Hereford. He misses being surrounded by baseball in his native Wisconsin.

He loves his motorcycle. It's not unusual to see him gliding down Interstate 27 on one of his many trips to and from Amarillo to see his family or his boss.

He's a stickler for correct grammar. You can listen to him talk for hours and never hear him end a sentence in a preposition. He doesn't go out of his way to avoid the error, either. Correct language flows from the man.

His main passion, though, is the passion of Jesus Christ. Orville Blum is pastor of St. Anthony's Catholic Church here. It's the largest church in town with well over 2,000 members. Blum, who received the title of Monsignor in 1985, must prepare for three large services every weekend, plus Mass and other services every day of the week.

Blum, compared to some priests, is something of a maverick.

"The church is continuing to evolve from Vatican II," Msgr. Blum said. That council, which lasted over two years, took the church from the days of the Latin Mass with ordained folk doing everything to the present-day church where the community is called on for more work.

St. Anthony's, though, is ahead of many other Catholic churches in trying new things. The church has gone from the strict days of the priests from Graymoor to shepherding by Msgr. Blum. He explains he lets the church go where the people want it to go. Sometimes, though, it takes a little prodding.

"The church is going to continue to evolve," he said. "With fewer and fewer people entering the priesthood all the time, you must allow the people, lay people, to take a larger role in the function of the church."

"It's the faith community carrying out the gospel."

Thirty years ago, when Blum was ordained at Pontifical College Josephinum in Ohio, there were still plenty of priests, especially in Hereford. Today, Msgr. Blum and the Rev. Darryl Birkenfeld at San Jose Church are the only priests in town.

"We are seeing the parish become much more attuned to the real needs of the people," said Msgr. Blum. "This is not a car wash where you put your money in and run yourself through and be bright and shiny for the next week."

"I see the day when the parish will need a counselor for hurting families and people. We need a staff social worker because our infrastructure is in sad shape. The church is going to have to deal with emotional and psychological needs."

"Perhaps at one time there were enough ordained people, enough priests, to handle all of that. That's not going to be the case at all in the future. These are going to have to be

High-tech babysitting

Hereford has some well-paid, highly-trained folks who do a lot of "child care" around town. Second of a 2-part series.

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

It's still Friday, May 8 in Hereford.

No, wait, we've been out longer than I thought. It's Saturday, May 9.

Officer Terry Brown is going to be very, very busy for a long time with reports, so I go out with other officers to find out what it's like with them.

Little do I realize I am going to become a high-tech babysitter before the weekend is over.

The officer I'm riding with now has been commended by his peers for his form in nabbing drunks. It's an art form.

We cruise the streets of Hereford with the lights off. It might be hard to "hide" a white car, but we follow several cars. The drivers show no signs of recognition as we stalk them, a block or two behind, waiting.

"We've got to wait until they do something illegal," the officer said. "You really can't stop someone because you think they might be

Carson bids 'a very heartfelt goodnight'

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) - Johnny Carson ended his 30-year reign on late-night TV on Friday, choking back tears as he closed his final "Tonight Show" by telling America, "I bid you a very heartfelt good night."

Johnny Carson

Longtime sidekick Ed McMahon yelled "Heeere's Johnny" at the start of the show and Doc Severinsen struck up the NBC Orchestra. But Carson abandoned most other traditions during his farewell broadcast, which had no big-name guests and an invitation-only audience of family and staff.

Carson, 66, acknowledged his wife, Alex, and sons Chris and Cory in the audience - and remembered his son Richard, who died in a car accident last year.

"It would have been a perfect evening if their brother, Rick, had been here with us. But I guess life does what it's supposed to do and you accept it and go on," Carson said.

Carson delivered his last monologue sitting on a stool instead of standing on the star that marked his spot on the floor of NBC's Studio One.

His usual retinue of political jokes, however, remained constant and he took a last shot at Vice President Dan Quayle, a frequent butt of his jokes.

Look what a buck will buy

By MICHAEL HOLMES

Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Beginning Friday, there's a chance for 12 Texans to become millionaires on a $1 wager this summer.

Odds are millions-to-1 it won't be you.

In fact, statisticians say the average person probably has a better chance of being struck by lightning than striking it rich on a single $1 lottery ticket.

But Texans are expected to spend more than $2 million a day anyway as the state becomes the 35th in the nation to begin playing the gambling game.

"The first day of ticket sales should be like the first day of Christmas shopping season," said lottery spokesman Steve Levine. The lottery is estimating opening-day sales of $17 million to $25 million.

"We expect that over the first three months, at least 60 percent of all adult Texans will buy at least one ticket," Levine said.

There will be one sure winner: the state Treasury.

Comptroller John Sharp, who oversees the game, estimated the lottery will clear $1 million a day, $461 million profit for the state during the rest of the current budget cycle.

The Texas Lottery has been a long time coming.

State constitutions from 1845 to 1876 all prohibited lotteries.

The Legislature repeatedly rejected lottery bills from 1983 until the budget crisis of 1991, when lawmakers finally voted to put a constitutional amendment on the ballot. It passed overwhelmingly last November, and preparations began immediately.

"Texas clearly has the most efficient lottery start-up in recent history," Sharp said.

Lottery officials are so confident the long-awaited game will be popular, they've printed 300 million tickets for their first instant-win game, called "Lone Star Millions."

Lottery director Nora Linares says a second game, with 200 million more tickets, is waiting in the wings.

Playing is easy.

For $1, a lottery player gets a red-white-blue-and-silver cardboard card that includes six latex-covered stars.

Scratch off the covering.

If three stars list a prize - ranging from $2 to $10,000 - it's a winner.

Also under the covering may be the word "entry." Three of those on a card make the player eligible for a million-dollar drawing.

Of the first 300 million tickets, 37.45 million are winners. But don't order that new Cadillac just yet. Most of the winning tickets - 29.9 million - will pay just a $2 prize.

Another 6 million will pay $5. Fewer, 800,000, will pay $10, down to 500 tickets that will pay holders $10,000.

Of the first 300 million first game tickets, 500,000 will qualify for the million-dollar drawings. Another 500,000 of the second game's 200 million tickets will qualify, Ms. Linares said.

The 12 drawings will be held weekly from June 18 through Sept. 3.

The best odds of winning are for a $2 prize, says Levine. That's 1 in 10.03.

Bigger prizes are tougher to win.

Odds of winning $50 are 1 in 2,399. To win $100, it's 1 in 10,000. To win $10,000, it's one in 600,000, Levine said.

Odds of winning $1 million from a single ticket are about 1 in 41.6 million, lottery officials say.

Under the lottery's current rules, 45 percent of the proceeds will go for prizes. The second-largest share, 40 percent, goes to the state. Those may eventually change, with a larger share to the prize pool, Ms. Linares said.

Another 10 percent will pay for administrative costs and 5 percent is the commission paid to lottery retailers.

And there are a lot of retailers.

Levine said the lottery expects to have licensed about 14,710 merchants to sell tickets by Friday's start.

The most likely place to find tickets is at a convenience store; 7,062 have been licensed. Groceries and liquor stores run second and third. State law prohibits convicted felons from selling tickets, and all licensed retailers must have another business - there are to be no lottery-only establishments.

Many lottery opponents raised moral arguments against state-sanctioned gambling.

Beginning with the lottery will be new a state program to assist compulsive gamblers, and a toll-free gambling hotline phone number will be printed on the back of each lottery ticket. Lottery officials are so sensitive about that, some of their early promotion material included the hotline number.

Many state lotteries offer multimillion-dollar "lotto" games. Texas will be no different.

Such games - which usually have players choose match six randomly selected numbers - require a statewide computer network. Sharp has said he hopes to have such a network completed and begin offering the lotto games by this fall.

Most of the 37.45 million winning tickets will pay only a $2 prize. Another 6 million will pay $5, and 800,000 will pay $10. What's everyone after? One of the 500 tickets in the state that will pay $10,000, or one of the 500,000 tickets that will be in the running for a $1 million prize in drawings this summer.

Q&A

Who runs the lottery?

The lottery is a division of the state comptroller's office. A lottery staff oversees the activities of private contractors, including the operator, ticket manufacturer and advertising agency.

Who sells tickets?

By opening day, lottery officials expect to have licensed 14,710 retailers around the state. Eventually, more than 17,000 may hold licenses. State law prohibits licenses from being issued to convicted felons, professional gamblers, anyone delinquent on their state taxes, businesses with no other purpose than to sell lottery tickets, bingo halls, race tracks, bars, private clubs or restaurants that serve alcohol for on-premises consumption.

When will the lottery begin?

6 a.m., local time, Friday.

How much will tickets cost?

$1 each.

How will the initial "Lone Star Millions" game work?

Players will scratch off the latex covering from all six stars on the front of the ticket. Under each star is a prize amount, ranging from $2 to $10,000 - or the word "entry." A ticket with three matching prize amounts wins that amount. A player who finds "entry" under three of the stars is entitled to enter a weekly drawing with a grand prize of $1 million in cash.

Who can play?

Anyone aged 18 and over except employees of the comptroller, their families, employees and families of the lottery's primary contractors.

How will the proceeds be divided?

The largest portion, 45 percent, goes to prizes for the winners; 40 percent is profit to the state government; 10 percent goes to administrative costs, and 5 percent goes as commission to retailers.

What about the multimillion-dollar "lotto" games that other states play?

Those games require a statewide computer network. The comptroller's office expects to begin them this autumn.

drunk. They've got to weave or run a stop sign or something obvious."

We stalk several cars before we find one that seems obviously drunk. The officer follows the car for almost a half-mile before stopping it. The officer explains the car has weaved across the road. The driver is asked to step out and a field sobriety test is administered. The test is almost fool-proof. The driver claims she hasn't had a thing to drink. Her claim is founded; nothing shows up in the test.

full-time people from somewhere to meet the needs of the parish."

Msgr. Blum says these, and other ideas he has, shouldn't mark him as a maverick, although other priests, and some in his parish, look askance at his pushing the church into today.

"I am not a maintenance man," Blum said. "I am definitely not a radical. In fact, I am a conservative in my theology. I am also a realist in the sense that I began telling people several years ago there are no miracles coming, that we won't see God sending us more priests. We have to find ways to promote the kingdom with different structures and styles."

Msgr. Blum misses the classroom a great deal. He served on the faculty of Alamo Catholic High School in Amarillo from 1966 through January 1987. He taught English and, while still in the classroom, was the school principal. At the same time he served at St. Laurence, Blessed Sacrament and St. Joseph's churches in Amarillo.

"I really miss the teaching," Blum said. "I have a thing about people trying to do away with the English language. Most of my kids came out liking English because I opened up literature and reading. Some went to college to become teachers because of my English classes, and I love that. I also love some of my students coming back and telling me English was a snap in college because of what I put them through at Alamo."

Sandoval sentenced to 4 years

A Hereford man, Timmy Sandoval, was sentenced to four years in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice institutional division on revocation of his probation Friday.

Judge David Wesley Gulley of the 222nd Judicial District also assessed Sandoval a $500 fine. He originally was sentenced to five years probation on Oct. 31, 1988 after pleading guilty to felony driving while intoxicated.

Judge Gulley granted probation to another defendant, Panfilo "Steven" Montelongo, and suspended his six-year sentence for aggravated sexual assault of a child.

Montelongo successfully completed a term recently in the TDCJ Special Alternative Incarceration Program, commonly referred to as "boot camp," after probation on the 1990 conviction was revoked. He was eligible to apply for a suspended sentence after finishing boot camp.

"That's not normal," the officer said. "One of the first things you learn is, if their lips are moving, they're lying."

Saturday is not so active. It was cooler, so maybe not everyone was out drinking all day, the officers feel.

During the briefing before the 11 p.m. shift, we hear about a few things that have happened and split up to cover areas of the city. Since Brown isn't usually a part of the shift, we get to cover whatever part of town we choose.

We choose Veterans Park.

The city's jurisdiction extends 1,000 feet beyond the city limits, which means the police department may patrol almost all of the Veterans Park area. We drive along the dirt roads on the east half of the park, along the bends of Tierra Blanca Creek.

One of the requirements for being a cop in Hereford must be better-than-excellent vision. Even though Brown has the spotlight working and has to pay attention to where he is going, he sees the car in the trees long before I do. He says let's check it out a long, long time before we get there.

When we arrive we see some kind of party, but it's on the wrong side of the creek for us. Brown drives all the way back around and through the park to the other side of the creek. We meet with another car.

Two of the four persons inside are under 21. All have been drinking, and the two younger ones are charged with minor in possession and consumption of alcohol. We call for help to take them to jail.

It's not the first jail run we make.

A little while later we get a call about a party in the Buena Vista area in west Hereford. The caller, according to the dispatcher, says it's kids drinking and playing loud music. They're so loud her baby's crying and can't go to sleep.

We drive through the area, along with two other cars. We hear nothing.

We leave Buena Vista, wondering what's next, when all of a sudden this lady appears from nowhere, waving us down.

"It was me that called but I didn't want to give a name. They live over there," she says, pointing out the house.

We drive to the house, get out and listen. Sure enough, there's loud music. We can hear screaming and yelling. A window is partially open and the curtain is back just far enough to take a look.

It's kids. None look old enough to be doing what they're doing. One of the officers knocks on the door with his flashlight. The rest of us watch through the window as everyone runs to the back of the house.

A young girl (we find out later she's 18) answers the door. No, she assures us, there's no party here. No one here but her, her baby and the other guy in the living room. She quickly relents when the rest of us are pointed out through the window. The others are found hiding in the bathroom, in closets and under the bed.

Of the nine people at the party, six are taken to jail. Also taken from the house are two half-empty cases of Budweiser and an almost empty fifth of El Presidente brandy.

The last call of the night proves to be the best. We get to do a little TV cop-style searching of a vacant house looking for some 14-year-olds. It was tragedy and comedy for awhile.

We received the call about the two runaway girls. Someone else gets the short straw of telling the other parents that their daughter isn't at the house where she was supposed to spend the night, but she snuck out and don't worry the other parents are just as hysterical as you.

We meet up for a little strategy session. Bruce Lee, the officer running the show for a while, tells us about a little gathering place popular among the junior high set. We head over there to look. The officers don't draw their weapons as they sneak up and TURN! around a corner, but they do step verry carefully. We find nothing and go looking again.

We haven't been back out 30 seconds when we see three small persons run across Ranger in behind some dumpsters. We're there almost as soon as they are, and one officer jumps out before the car is stopped.

With high-powered flashlights almost blinding them, the three kids come out. They had no idea they were officially listed as runaways. When they're told they could be arrested, they get almost as hysterical as their folks.

We find out they've come from Higgins and Ave. J and Nueces to meet with another kid from Elm over somewhere around the junior high. The three we have are taken to the police station so their parents can breathe again, and we go looking for the other one. We can't find him so we go to his house.

He's there, safe and asleep in his bed.

Terry Brown and I have decided that we, the irregular patrol of the HPD, should end the night with success.

Brandon's use of "SMILE" in the center of the Cardinal sets out the school's motto, "Students Meet Important Learning Expectations." The student received a gift certificate to McDonald's as a prize for his winning design.

CARSON

"I really want to thank him for making my final week so fruitful," Carson said of Quayle's headline-grabbing statements about single-motherhood and the sitcom "Murphy Brown."

Carson moved from his monologue to a montage of clips from memorable interviews with subjects ranging from Richard Nixon to David Letterman.

The next segment was a highlight of all the musicians who appeared over three decades, including Louis Armstrong, Richard Harris, Ella Fitzgerald, The Jackson Five and Luciano Pavarotti.

Carson took several opportunities to thank McMahon and Severinsen.

"It would have been impossible to do this show without these two guys," he said.

McMahon, who joined Carson in 1962, said, "I just found out there were seven other people up for that job. I thank you. My family thanks you."

Carson took one last jab at NBC's parent company, General Electric, saying, "G.E. named me employee of the month and God knows it was a dream come true."

He told the audience that the best thing to come of his retiring was that "you won't have to see or read one more story about the end of this show.... The end of the Soviet Union didn't get this much press."

At the end, Carson said, "And so it has come to this."

"I am one of the lucky people in the world. I found something that I always wanted to do and I have enjoyed every single minute of it."

Poster winners

Walker is top local Ambuc

Jerry Walker was named 1991-92 Ambuc of the Year for the Hereford Ambucs.

The honor was bestowed at the 1992 officer installation held recently at the Ranch House.

Walker was given the award by Kenny Henson, 1991-92 president. Henson said Walker was chairman of the house committee, one of the top sellers of playhouse tickets, procured material to build the playhouse, and was the only member to receive spurs at branding time.

Henson also pinned David Rettman with the president's pin. Joining Rettman as new officers include Walker, vice president; Jim Zetsche, second vice president; Oscar Williams, secretary; Randy Williams, sergeant-at-arms.

Baker honored by TDHS

A Hereford woman, Judy Baker, recently was honored at a dinner for volunteers, given by the regional advisory council and staff of the Texas Department of Human Services.

Mrs. Baker, who handles social services in the office of Deaf Smith County Judge Tom Simons, was the "citizen of the year," recognized for her volunteerism.

She serves on the child welfare board of Deaf Smith County and is a member of the Deaf Smith County Volunteer Board. Mrs. Baker also is active in programs for aged and disabled persons and foster children.

Two other Hereford residents received certificates of appreciation for their efforts. Larry Burrow volunteers with senior citizens and Peggy Daniels with aged and disabled programs.

During the dinner in Amarillo, adult volunteers in the 25-county region as well as youth and businesses were recognized for their work in community programs.

JSEC sponsoring seminar Thursday

The Hereford Job Service Employer Committee (JSEC), in conjunction with the Texas Employment Commission, is sponsoring a seminar Thursday in the lounge room at Hereford Community Center.

The seminar will cover two topics: How the Americans With Disabilities Act affects employers, and a drug-free workplace.

The seminar starts at 1 p.m. Sid Ham, local attorney, will be the speaker for the program on the Americans With Disabilities Act.

Following a break at 2 p.m., the second part of the program will feature Marilyn Hellums, Workplace Services Division director with the Workers Assistance Program of Texas. She will discuss the drug-free workplace.

There will be a small fee of $5, payable at the door, to cover expenses. Refreshments will be served during the break.

Attendees requiring special assistance should contact LaJean Henry, JSEC chairman, at 364-4680, or Suzanne Finch, TEC, at 364-8600.

J. Dziuk graduates from Texas

Jerry Dziuk, formerly of Hereford, was among graduates Saturday of the University of Texas at Austin.

Dziuk was awarded a bachelor of business administration degree with a major in finance.

A former employee of First National Bank of Hereford, he is the son of Al Dziuk of Hereford and Suzette Dziuk of Austin.

His grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Ed Dziuk Sr., of Hereford.

Burnet awarded

Burnet was awarded a 500-bed substance abuse treatment facility Friday afternoon by the Texas Board of Criminal Justice, it was reported by the Associated Press.

The board split 5-4 on the selection of Burnet. The losers favored Abilene, which had offered cash incentives of more than $1 million. Burnet dangled no cash incentive.

Hereford was among the cities whose bids remained in effect after El Paso declined the facility last month. El Paso offered an $8 million package and wanted a larger prison.

Hereford's Prison Task Force did not send a representative to the TDCJ board meeting in Huntsville. Selden Hale, board chairman from Amarillo, had indicated it was unlikely that the facility would be placed in the Panhandle.

CORRECTION

Information received from the office of Deaf Smith County criminal district attorney about a man indicted by the grand jury Thursday was in error in the Friday edition of the Brand.

John Betzen Jr., indicted for possession of marijuana, was listed as confined to jail, in lieu of bond. However, he had been freed after posting bail of $5,000 bond.

The Brand regrets the error.

YOUR EYES

SUNGLASS SEASON

Actually, our eyes need protection from the sun's rays all year around. But most people become more aware of this as the weather gets warmer, the sun gets brighter, and we spend more time outdoors. If you don't have well-made sunglasses with up-to-date protection against ultraviolet A -- closest to the visible spectrum -- and UV-B -- even more injurious -- get them now. A new rating system indicates the protection offered by any pair of sunglasses.

- Cosmetic lenses absorb 70 percent of UV-B, 20 percent of UV-A and less than 60 percent of visible light. They offer comfort but not much protection.
- General - purpose lenses absorb at least 95 percent of UV-B, 60 percent of UV-A and from 60 to 92 percent of visible light. They're good for most outdoor activities.
- Special purpose lenses, advisable for beach, ski slope or on the water, block at least 99 percent of UV-B, 60 percent of UV-A and 20 to 97 percent of visible light.

Grads, take care!

To most teenagers, May and June represent warm weather, graduation and freedom. We naturally expect a certain amount of exuberance to be exhibited by youngsters loosed from the daily grind of school. And, celebrations for graduates is a time-honored tradition.

However, the graduation "party season" and alcohol don't mix and there have been some well publicized tragic incidents in recent years to prove that message. Today's teens have been taught the dangers of alcohol abuse, but we need to remind them that alcohol is the number one killer of our nation's youth.

Parents, officers and perhaps most of the general public—while not condoning the actions of the young, are generally tolerant and inclined to dismiss some incidents as "wild oats." But things have gotten out of hand at times, here and elsewhere. The party season has led to a certain amount of uninhibited drinking, carousing, fighting and vandalism. When an errant few take things too far, they need to expect more than a wrist-slapping for their conduct.

We salute the Hereford High School Student Council for conducting a special assembly last week designed to make students more aware of the dangers of drinking, and of drinking and driving. Titled "The Grim Reaper," the program reenacted a party and showed how the lives of four teenagers and a young couple were changed by a drunk-driving accident. In addition the student council posted signs and other reminders as part of "Project Graduation" to encourage seniors, and others, to celebrate the end of their school years without alcohol.

Such programs reflect the responsibility and leadership being taken by many of our youngsters. We're proud of them!

Texas plans to start the lottery business in a big way May 29 when the first instant-win lottery tickets go on sale. Beginning June 8, the state will name a million-dollar winner every week for 12 weeks. Officials say Texas is the first state to offer such large prizes so fast.

But don't get the idea that your chances of becoming a millionaire are very good. Lottery officials estimate the chance of a single $1 ticket being a winner are about 1 in 41.6 million.

The "instant-win" tickets give players a chance to win amounts from $2 up to $10,000, as well as the chance to qualify for the drawing for $1 million.

We read a "Retailer Update" which was mailed out to stores that will be selling the lottery tickets. It encourages retailers to promote the sale of tickets in the store and in their regular advertising. However, the state has also adopted a policy statement and advertising guidelines for the retailers. Any false, deceptive or misleading advertising could result in loss of the license for ticket sales.

For example, the retailer cannot suggest that a player has an increased chance of winning by purchasing a ticket at a specific location. He must avoid language or visuals directed at the economically disadvantaged. For example, claiming that a lottery ticket is "your ticket out of poverty" is not allowed.

In addition, advertising cannot be targeted towards persons under 18 years of age in any manner, because they are ineligible to play.

Following is a portion of the state's policy statement: "No advertising for the Texas lottery will unduly influence any person to purchase a lottery ticket. While advertising may portray the benefits of play, dramatize the excitement of participation or depict the fun of winning, no advertising will directly suggest that lottery play is an important or necessary facet of life or that there is any disadvantage inherent in choosing not to play, except that one cannot win if one does not participate."

In other words, advertising is supposed to merely reflect the essence of a lottery: the chance to win. But, of course, that is the bottom line and that is why many people gamble. They feel they may be that 1 in 41 million!

THE WELFARE DEBATE.

An AP News Analysis

Perot runs strong in California

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

LAWDALE, Calif. (AP) - When the hands are dealt for the high stakes campaign showdown in California next fall, Ross Perot may hold the wild cards. His zealous volunteers and recruiters are at work on it, building the business, as one of them said.

Perot is running strong in the public opinion polls; one shows him preferred over President Bush or Bill Clinton in California. Talk with political leaders and they'll say it can't last. But Perot's people don't talk with political leaders.

They are volunteer missionaries, with the zeal of the converted, working door to door, on street corners, at card tables outside the shopping center to get the signatures that will put Perot's name on the Nov. 3 ballot.

"It's almost like building a major corporation in a few weeks," said Nancy Bush, an executive recruiter in San Francisco, coordinator of Perot's volunteer staff in California.

"...It's less recruiting people than people calling us."

On a sunny Saturday, Perot petitioners fan out from a storefront headquarters in Lawndale, a south Los Angeles community uncomfortably close to the area ripped by rioting.

Actually, the all-out petition drive may be more significant as an organizing tool for the fall campaign than as necessity now, since the Perot campaign sees no problem in gaining the ballot.

It will take 134,781 signatures by Aug. 7 to put Perot's name on the California ballot. "We should be getting close to it now," said Bob Hayden, a studious, quiet-spoken engineer from Ventura who is Perot's state coordinator. But Hayden wants a lot more than the minimum, to make the ballot spot secure and as a show of California support.

In a three-way contest with President Bush and Bill Clinton on Nov. 3, Perot's would be the swing vote, pivotal in the states that count most, California for one, Texas for another.

The unanswerable question, of course, is whether he could win them himself, or only alter the outcome between the major party candidates. In the past, third candidates have sometimes been spoilers, but not winners.

The electoral system, state by state, winner take all, tends to magnify the margin of the leading candidate in the popular vote. The candidate who can carry California by a handful of votes will have won 20 percent of the electoral college majority that chooses a president.

California has 54 electoral votes. Tip them and the election outcome could be tipped, too. Win them for a third candidate, and there's an increased chance of an electoral deadlock, with no majority winner and the choice sent to the House of Representatives.

An ironic footnote: Were the House to elect a president, which hasn't happened since 1824, each state would get one vote. So California's clout would go from one fifth of the vote to one fiftieth.

The election is still five months away, Perot hasn't formally declared his candidacy, and third candidates historically have been strongest in the early polls, not the last one. On the other hand, none has reached the ranking Perot has been gaining in national surveys that show him preferred over either Bush or Clinton.

While candidates and political managers agree on Perot's potential, they also believe that it will erode when he becomes an active candidate, takes his stands on issues, and faces the pressures and scrutiny of the campaign.

The Perot people say it won't happen. At Lawndale headquarters, amid the borrowed computer terminals, the donned streamers, the bales of "Perot for President" T-shirts, the volunteers say their dedication to the candidate is a matter of faith in the man, not concern about itemized proposals.

They use Perot's words to say so, scoring the standard campaign as sound-bite politics. "You end up with a lot of shallow promises, and it doesn't make a hill of beans anyhow," said Hayden.

Around the room, accounts of the way these people came to the cause are similar: distrustful or disinterest in politics - one volunteer supervisor said she'd not heard of the electoral college before - they saw Perot on television, heard him say he would run if helped, and believed in him.

And they're enlisting with no demand that the candidate spell out a detailed program.

"I was so mesmerized by his sound thinking and his clear-cut ideas," said Mrs. Bush in San Francisco. "...It doesn't matter so much what Ross Perot stands for doing now as who he is as a man, as his integrity."

That's echoed in Lawndale, by volunteers who say they see Perot as a man they can trust for clear, decisive leadership, and don't see the need for detailed proposals.

Contradictory, perhaps, but no more so than the sign over the pile of Perot T-shirts: free for a $10 donation.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor,

I'm writing to thank you for last Sunday's article on the police department.

This is a bad time for police officers all over the USA since the Rodney King incident and the aftermath. We have a very good police department and maybe after your article people will remember that not all police officers are bad. Most police officers go into this line of work to help people. That's what I feel our department goal is.

I know sometimes, maybe most of the time, people feel we are just writing tickets and picking on teenagers with alcohol. It is a rare occasion when people are glad to see a police officer because we often deal with people when they have done something wrong or they are a victim.

This department really does care about Hereford. We live here, work here, go to church here. This is my home and I love it here. I wish everyone in Hereford would like the police department. I know that will never come true but it is a nice wish.

In closing, thank you for showing us in a good light and I enjoyed you riding with me.

Texas budget: 84% mandated

The leadership of Texas government has laid down the law. Spearheaded by Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, and reinforced by Speaker Gib Lewis and Comptroller John Sharp, the message is clear. Texans do not want any more taxes, so services must be cut to meet the revenues available.

Ironically, over the next two-year budget cycle, the state will receive record revenues. More money will pour into the state coffers through population growth and economic expansion. Still, that will not be enough funds to finance the growth of state spending. What is the problem?

Simply put, the special interests of this state have done a very good job of taking funding for their projects out of the control of the elected legislature. Over 84 percent of the state budget is spent on mandated programs.

Over the years, the federal courts have gained control of prison spending. Lawyers for prison inmates have effectively argued that Texas was not providing humane living conditions for prisoners. As a result, billions of dollars have been spent to improve, repair and rehabilitate the prison system. More billions have to be spent to build more prisons to house the growing population.

The same tale can be told about the mental health and mental retardation facilities in the state. They were reconstructed to meet court orders. Other parts of the state budget are tied to federal spending. More than 17 percent of the budget is used to match various federal funds for spending on formal-driven programs such as Medicaid, welfare, highway construction, education, etc.

Over half of the money spent by various state agencies is required by either laws that have been passed by the Legislature or mandated by the Texas Constitution. A percentage of every dollar paid in fuel taxes is earmarked for repairing highways. Other revenue streams have similar restrictions.

In total, the current Legislature has control of only 16 percent of the state budget. As the major share not controlled continues to grow, it absorbs more and more discretionary dollars.

The challenge to the leadership of our state government will be to find a way to regain control of state spending.

...To be inducted into hall of fame this summer

Music pioneer to be honored

The late J. Ralph Smith and his son, Gerald, will be inducted into the Texas Bandmasters Hall of Fame this summer in Austin.

They will join Ralph Glenn Smith as the only father and sons to be inducted into the hall of fame. Ralph Glenn Smith, the long-time highly successful director at Dimmitt, was inducted into the hall of fame last year.

The hall is housed in the state headquarters of the Texas Music Educators Association and is administered by Phi Beta Mu.

J. Ralph Smith was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Smith, who moved to Hereford in 1905 and built up the Hereford Concert Band. J. Ralph, after World War I, toured with the Harley Sadler tent show for five years before returning to Hereford as the director of the school band. Hereford had one of the few school bands in the region at the time and began music instruction in the first grade. He also founded the music program in Dimmitt, where his son taught for over 30 years. J. Ralph Smith's bands consistently won top awards during his 19 years of teaching in the Hereford schools. He also served three terms as county clerk before passing away on April 17, 1960.

Gerald Smith was director of the band program in Panhandle for over 30 years and, like his older brother Ralph Glenn Smith, was a consistent sweepstakes winner in competition.

Game plan for new Herd basketball coach:

Have fun, win games you're supposed to, keep it simple

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Joe Main's game plan is to win all the games you're supposed to win. Oh, yes, have fun while you're doing it, and keep things simple.

"Not for the kids' sake, because kids are smart," Main said. "Keep it simple for the coach's sake, so I don't get confused."

Joe Main is Hereford's new boys' basketball coach. He's moving here from Cypress-Fairbanks, a Class 5A school in Harris County. Main didn't get run off or anything like that.

"We are just tired of Harris County," Main said during a visit here Thursday. "You would have to live there for a while to understand. My wife would like to be able to go to the grocery store after dark. You can't do that in Harris County. And this is out in the suburbs.

"We're just ready to get back to somewhere that values are still important, where we can renovate a program. We're not going to rebuild, because the building is already taking place."

Gone will be the days of multiple offenses and defenses. If you pressure Main to tell you what he will run on offense, he'll say the Buna Set. It's a fairly simple offense with rotating double posts and plenty of movement without the ball. It helped Cotton

Robinson win a slew of ballgames, including state championships in Class 2A in the 1960s.

Defensively, Main may run a zone or man-to-man, and he loves to press.

"I know the athletes are here in Hereford to play basketball well," Main said. "I'm not out to fight the football program, and I know coming in I may get the kids on a Monday after the season ends on a Friday sometime in late December. We have to keep things simple for them, and we have to make things fun for everyone."

Main, who won the Class 4A championship at Huntsville in 1978, isn't intimidated by the Pampas of the world.

"I know Coach Robert Haile very well," Main said. "I visited with him about this job. In fact, I was looking at the Dumas job and called Coach Haile about it. He told me the job in Hereford was even better, that the athletes were here."

"We can play with the Pampas, we can play with anybody. My first goal coming in is for us to win the games we are supposed to win. If we win the games we are supposed to win, then we can get some luck and win some others and watch it snowball."

"I'm not coming in here saying that we're going to go 25-14. We may go 16-14, but if we are good enough to win 14 games and we win 16, then we've had a very successful year."

UIL reprimanding coaches

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - One-year probation and public reprimands were issued to 138 high school and junior high coaches in Texas over the past year under a new program implemented by the University Interscholastic League to improve sportsmanship.

As of Thursday, there were 74 coach ejections in basketball, 46 in baseball, nine in football and nine in soccer, UIL athletic director Bill Farney said.

Under the guidelines implemented last summer, an ejected coach automatically receives a one-year probation and a public reprimand.

If a coach is ejected while on probation, he faces an automatic hearing before the state executive committee. That group may take more serious action against the coach, including suspension.

The UIL Legislative Council adopted its tougher stance in 1991, joining a national campaign to clean up high school sports.

One year into their experiment, coaches and officials are still at odds over the new guidelines.

"I think the intended purpose was good and it's going to get better. (But) call me this time two years from now when we have a three-year track record," said Bill Boyd, assistant executive director of the Southwest Officials Association.

Bruce Nichols of Garland, president of the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches, complains that the rule puts a coach's career in the hands of a game official.

"You've got to realize (coaching) is our life, how we feed our families. I don't want a guy (an official) who had a bad day at work taking a chance at my job," Nichols said.

The written notification of a coach's ejection, probation, reprimand or other sanction is listed in

The Leaguer, UIL's monthly publication received by more than 30,000 subscribers, including all member schools, officials associations and several educational organizations.

Some coaches said they fear that listing could scar a young coach's career. But officials countered by saying a coach who follows one write-up with a clean slate has proved he learned his lesson.

Another stumbling block is the quality of officiating in non-varsity games.

"On the varsity level it doesn't bother me because you're getting pretty competent officials. But on junior varsity and down, you're getting officials who are not properly trained," said Nichols, who also coaches boy's basketball at South Garland High.

Boyd countered that many younger officials may tolerate more abuse, thus giving coaches more leeway.

Although Farney said he sees no immediate changes to the rule, he would like to introduce a summer seminar bringing coaches and officials together.

"My concern is that we need more positive enforcement before the season starts," he said. "We can try to go over some case situations and some ideas so coaches and officials can get along better."

Almost as long as there have been sports events, there have been battles between coaches and officials.

"If you can arrive at two adults dealing with complex situations where they're both acting as adults, you're OK. But when one acts like an adolescent, that's when you have a problem," Farney said.

Increasing confrontations between coaches and officials played a key role in the new guidelines issued a year ago, Farney said.

"I think the motivating factor was just that there was a feeling that the time was right. We just needed to do something to reverse the trend, which (school administrators) saw as escalating," Farney said.

Texas officials rejected a plan, used by several other states, that suspended coaches for the game following their ejection. Instead, UIL staffers took input from several sources to create their rules.

Farney said this year's statistics will be the basis for future surveys. Since such records previously were not kept, he said there would be no way to gauge whether the new rules have helped.

UIL director Bailey Marshall is president of the National Federation of State High School Associations, which supervises governing agencies in 50 states and the District of Columbia. From that perch he has witnessed the trend toward improved sportsmanship.

"Society has lost the idea of what athletics is all about. They think winning is it ... at all costs, even cheating. They (coaches) have got to overcome these pressures to win," he said.

"In today's society, there is very little respect for authority or even anyone's life. These are things we are trying to control in the schools. They (students) see a coach throw a chair on the floor or his coat to the ceiling," Marshall said.

Bruised Angels lose; Rangers win

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The California Angels got back to playing baseball, even though their focus was far from the field.

The Angels lost 5-3 to Baltimore on Friday night in their first game since the team bus crashed on the New Jersey Turnpike, injuring 12.

"It might take more than one game to put it all behind us," first baseman Lee Stevens said. "If you can get it out of your mind in one game, that's a definite positive to you. But it will take more than one game."

Manager Buck Rodgers was the most seriously hurt when the bus, taking the team from New York to Baltimore, swerved off the road early Thursday about 20 miles from Philadelphia. Rodgers is expected to require at least two months to recuperate from a broken rib and injuries to his knee and elbow.

Infielder Bobby Rose was placed on the 15-day disabled list Friday because of a sprained left ankle incurred in the accident. First baseman Alvin Davis, who sustained a bruised kidney and hip, was released from the hospital on Friday, but was too hurt to play.

"I would have liked to have Alvin Davis, but other than that everything went as expected," said coach John Wathan, who managed in Rodgers' place. "The way he's hitting, he might have been in there."

"We started slow, but under the circumstances we did a pretty good job," Wathan said. "We made it a game."

In other games, Oakland beat Boston 5-3, Milwaukee outlasted New York 10-9 in 14 innings, Detroit downed Minnesota 6-3, Toronto topped Chicago 6-2, Texas defeated Kansas City 10-7 and Seattle beat Cleveland 2-1.

California lost its fourth straight game. Baltimore broke its season-long four-game losing streak. The Angels fell behind 5-1 and their two-run rally in the eighth inning fell short. Stevens said that although the team was trying to concentrate on the game, it was difficult not to think about the accident.

"It's definitely in the back of your mind," he said. "You're real close to not being out there, but then you're thankful you are. You realize the game goes on without you."

Ben McDonald (6-1) gave up five hits in seven-plus innings and Gregg Olson got his ninth save.

Randy Milligan became the first player to hit a ball off the 25-foot scoreboard in right field, delivering an RBI double in sixth inning off Julio Valera (2-3) that put Baltimore ahead 2-1.

Rangers 10, Royals 7

In Arlington, Bobby Witt limited Kansas City to two earned runs in eight innings and the Rangers held on for a rare win at home.

The Rangers began the day with a 5-13 home record, the worst in the major leagues. Texas' 17-8 road mark is the best in baseball.

Witt (4-4) gave up three runs, two of them earned, on eight hits. He struck out seven and walked one.

The Royals scored four times in the ninth against Floyd Bannister and Jeff Robinson. Rangers relievers, who wasted Nolan Ryan's seven innings of one-hit ball Thursday, have allowed 24 runs in their last 21 2-3 innings.

Mark Gubicza (4-3) had his four-game winning streak stopped. Ruben Sierra hit a two-run homer, a double and a single for Texas. Mike MacFarlane homered for Kansas City.

Athletics 5, Red Sox 3

In Boston, Dave Stewart beat the Red Sox for the 12th straight time despite Wade Boggs hitting his first two home runs of the season and a double. Oakland won its fourth in a row.

Stewart (3-4) has not lost to the Red Sox in 15 starts, including playoffs, since Aug. 19, 1988. He gave up five hits in 7 1-3 innings and Dennis Eckersley got his 17th save in 17 tries.

Jose Canseco hit a solo home run, his ninth, and an RBI single off Frank Viola (5-3) who had won five straight decisions. Rickey Henderson batted leadoff for the 1,729th time in his career, tying Eddie Yost's AL record, and had three hits, drove in two runs and stole his 20th base.

Brewers 10, Yankees 9

In New York, Greg Vaughn homered with one out in the 14th inning and Milwaukee won a game featuring seven home runs and a big comeback by the Brewers.

Dante Bichette, Franklin Stubbs and Dave Nilsson homered for Milwaukee, which tied the score at 9 with five runs in the eighth inning. Danny Tartabull, Kevin Maas and Charlie Hayes homered for the Yankees.

Vaughn's eighth home run of the season came against Rich Monteleone (2-1), the Yankees' sixth pitcher. Doug Henry (1-1) was Milwaukee's fifth pitcher.

The Yankees played their third straight extra-inning game. They did not go into extra innings in any of their first 37 games of the season.

Tigers 6, Twins 3

Cecil Fielder hit his first home run since April 22 and Rob Deer homered twice as Detroit won at Tiger Stadium.

Fielder hit a three-run shot in the third inning off John Smiley for a 5-2 lead. Fielder's eighth homer was his first in 65 at-bats, a span that included a stay on the disabled list because of an injured wrist.

Deer ended an 0-for-17 slump with a two-run homer in the second inning, and hit a solo drive, his 13th, in the sixth.

Mark Leiter (3-1) won for the first time as a starter this year and Mike Henneman pitched the ninth for his eighth save. Smiley (3-3) had won three straight decisions.

Blue Jays 6, White Sox 2

In Chicago, Juan Guzman stayed unbeaten with the help of Toronto's four home runs off Jack McDowell.

Guzman (6-0) gave up five hits, struck out seven and walked three. He left with two on and none out in the ninth, and Duane Ward shut out the White Sox for his sixth save.

McDowell (7-2), hit hard in a loss to Baltimore in his last start, allowed six runs on nine hits in 6 2-3 innings. Devon White and Roberto Alomar hit two-run homers and Kelly Gruber and Manuel Lee hit solo shots.

Mariners 2, Indians 1

In Seattle, Tino Martinez hit a two-run single in the seventh inning and the Mariners rallied to send Cleveland to its sixth straight loss.

Seattle took advantage of shortstop Mark Lewis' 16th error of the season and ended a three-game losing streak. Cleveland has lost 11 of 12.

Johnson (5-3) did not allow a hit for 5 1-3 innings. He gave up five hits and struck out nine in 8 1-3 innings. Mike Schooler closed for his ninth save in 11 chances.

Scott Scudder (2-5) gave up two hits in 6 1-3 innings. He yielded two runs, one of them unearned.

Alou wins first; Astros triumph

By The Associated Press

Once the game started, Felipe Alou felt right at home in his first game as manager of the Montreal Expos.

Alou was a winner in his debut as manager as Dennis Martinez pitched a two-hitter in the Expos' 7-1 victory over Tom Glavine and the Atlanta Braves on Friday night at Olympic Stadium.

Alou became the first Dominican manager in major league history when the Expos fired Tom Runnels earlier in the day and replaced him with the three-time All-Star.

"I was involved in so many games as a player, coach and minor-league manager," Alou said. "I'm just glad the day is over. It was a very difficult day. I went to sleep Thursday night with my fishing uniform on but I got up at 4:15 in the morning."

Some might have thought Alou didn't get quite enough sleep.

"When I go skin diving, I don't worry about sharks and when I put my uniform on, I don't worry either," Alou said.

Elsewhere in the NL it was Philadelphia 8, Cincinnati 2; Houston 3, St. Louis 1; San Diego 2, Chicago 0; Pittsburgh 6, Los Angeles 4; and San Francisco 7, New York 6.

The Braves had trouble dealing with Martinez and the scoreboard.

Martinez (4-4) walked none and struck out four en route to his third consecutive win, including two against Atlanta. He lost a shutout when Damon Berryhill homered in the eighth.

The Braves complained that the scoreboard was causing problems for them and asked that some adjustments be made in the top of the second.

"They were trying to get me off my concentration but I stayed within myself," Martinez said. "After the delay started getting longer, I went to the dugout to relax. I was getting lazy-standing around on the mound."

Ivan Calderon's RBI double in the sixth inning broke a scoreless tie and the Expos pulled away with six runs in the seventh, including an RBI single by Martinez.

Tom Glavine fell to 6-3 and 2-10 lifetime against Montreal.

Astros 3, Cardinals 1

At Busch Stadium, Mark Portugal gave up one run and two hits in 8 1-3 innings and Eric Anthony had a two-run double in the first inning off Jose DeLeon (2-3) as Houston beat St. Louis.

Portugal (4-1) retired the side in order in every inning but the fourth, when the Cardinals got their run, and the ninth, when he was lifted after Ozzie Smith singled with one out. Smith had both hits for St. Louis.

Doug Jones got the last two outs for his ninth save as Houston improved to 7-2 in Portugal's nine starts this season.

"Good Deals On Wheels"

Hollins' RBI double and John Kruk's two-run homer in the fifth inning helped Philadelphia beat Cincinnati.

Philadelphia snapped a 2-2 tie with three runs in the fifth on Mariano Duncan's one-out single followed by Hollins' RBI double and Kruk's third home run. The home run was only the third off Tim Lincecum (3-5) in 61 1-3 innings this season.

Winner Cliff Brantley (2-2) pitched seven innings, giving up four hits and two unearned runs.

Padres 2, Cubs 0

At Jack Murphy Stadium, Andy Benes pitched a three-hitter for his first complete game of the season and Gary Sheffield snapped a scoreless tie with an RBI double in the eighth inning.

Sheffield, who also had a ground-rule double in the third inning, extended his hitting streak to 15, tying Terry Pendleton of the Atlanta Braves for the longest streak in the NL this year.

Tony Fernandez opened the Padres' eighth off Greg Maddux (4-4) with an infield single, and moved to second on Oscar Azocar's sacrifice bunt before scoring on Sheffield's double into the left-field corner. The Cubs have been shut out in each of Maddux' four losses.

Giants 7, Mets 6

At Candlestick Park, Matt Williams had a two-run homer and pinch-hitter Mike Felder's triple scored the go-ahead run in a six-run sixth inning as San Francisco rallied past New York.

The victory was the Giants' fourth straight, and ninth in their last 11 games. The Mets' bullpen, meanwhile, collapsed for the second time this week.

The Mets roughed up San Francisco starter Bill Swift, who began the night as the National League's ERA leader. But New York was unable to hold a 5-1 lead after chasing Swift.

Trailing 5-1 entering the bottom of the sixth, the Giants moved in front by scoring six runs on five hits while sending 10 batters to the plate against starter Anthony Young and reliever Tim Burke (1-2).

On Wednesday at San Diego, the Padres rallied for six runs in the sixth inning on the way to a 12-6 victory against the Mets.

Pirates 6, Dodgers 4

At Dodger Stadium, Randy Tomlin ended a personal four-game winless streak and Pittsburgh's six-game losing streak. The Dodgers may have lost outfielder Eric Davis indefinitely because of strained ligaments in his left shoulder.

The three-time Gold Glove winner, hampered by a herniated disc in his neck since spring training, was playing his third straight game in right field for the injured Darryl Strawberry.

Tomlin (5-3) allowed six hits and one run in 6 1-3 innings. Stan Belinda - the Pirates' third pitcher - got the last three outs. Belinda gave up a three-run pinch homer to Stan Javier in the ninth.

Barry Bonds doubled in a first-inning run before the Pirates used four hits, an intentional walk and Davis' fielding error for a three-run fourth inning and a 4-0 lead against Tom Candiotti (4-3).

Fast field set for Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - The fastest field in Indy 500 history is set for Sunday's race with some of the drivers wondering whether their low-slung, high-tech driving machines have finally reached the outer edge of their speed limit.

The 33 drivers, including just the second woman to start this event in 76 races, averaged a record 223.479 mph in qualifying, almost 5 mph faster than last year. Roberto Guerrero won the pole at 232.482 - the first time the 230 mph barrier has been cracked officially.

To understand just how quick this starting grid is, consider that the slowest qualifying speed, rookie Ted Prappas' 219.173, is faster than last year's field qualifying average of 218.590.

At 220 mph, Indy cars roar, the sound of their engines routinely turning heads. At 230 mph, they sound different, making almost a whine as they hurtle around the Speedway, sweeping through the turns, coming perilously close to the walls, then slingshotting through the straightaways.

At 230 mph, it might be nice to have a little margin for error.

"I've really noticed the difference between 224 and 230," said Michael Andretti, who will start on the outside of the second row. "You use a lot more race track now."

That more than anything else seems to trouble the drivers. Bobby Rahal called it Russian roulette. There is a suspicion that at 230 mph, they are less drivers than they are passengers, robbed by the extra speed of the time they need to react to trouble.

And there has been plenty of trouble at the Speedway this month, including the first driver death here in a decade. Jovy Marcelo, attempting to become the first Filipino driver in Indy history, was killed in a crash during a practice run May 15. That was 10 years to the day after Gordon Smiley died.

Earlier, defending champion Rick Mears and Formula One driver Nelson Piquet were badly banged up in spectacular crashes. Pancho Carter broke his right arm in another of the 15 crashes during the month.

If the death of Marcelo and the other accidents dented the enthusiasm at Indy, it was only a temporary condition. And that changed when Lyn St. James became the second woman ever to qualify for this race. At 45, she will be Indy's oldest rookie ever and one of seven in the field. It will be the first oval race for four of them - St. James, Philippe Gache of France, Brian Bonner, and Jimmy Vasser.

Mario Andretti, back at Indy for the 27th year, was asked how he would describe race day to a rookie.

"I would tell them they never have experienced the experiences of race day at Indy. The whole month they've been here, they've never felt the turbulence of 33 cars on the track. It wakes everybody up. The car won't feel as good. They've got to expect that. There will be things in the corner that they are not able to do. This place is not as wide as some other places."

Any other advice?
"Yeah," Andretti said. "Keep your head up."

In all, the field includes a record 10 former champions. Among them is 57-year-old A.J. Foyt, not only the oldest known driver to race here but also about to take the green flag for a record 35th consecutive year.

The old man of Indy said, "I think after you run here so many years, you kind of know what to look forward to, knowing some of these cars and oil spots and things like that. It still can creep up on you and grab you."

"The first year I know you're more nervous about everything else and you're not paying attention."

Mud Bowl set May 30

The Hereford Youth Ministerial Alliance will sponsor "Mud Bowl II" on Saturday, May 30, at Community Church, 1508 Whittier.

The Mud Bowl games include volleyball, baseball and football, and games will be held for seventh graders and up. Free food will be served at the event, which is scheduled from 3 to 9 p.m. next Saturday.

Partnership Tourney to be played June 6-7

The annual Hereford Men's Partnership Golf Tournament is scheduled June 6-7, and Hereford Rotary Club will hold its Hole-in-One Contest in conjunction with the event.

The Rotary project is open to all interested golfers. Entry fee is $5 for three shots, and players can take their qualifying shots June 1 through June 6. Twenty-five finalists will try for the hole-in-one on June 7.

Golfers in the partnership tourney will have three shots at qualifying on No. 3 hole during Saturday's play. Entry fee is $70 a player for the partnership best ball tourney. Cart is included, as well as three qualifying shots in the Rotary contest, but green fees are separate.

The shootout with 25 finalists will be held at the end of the tourney Sunday, with a $20,000 cash prize being awarded for a hole-in-one.

In addition, the Rotary Club will offer prizes to tourney golfers for hole-in-ones on the other three-pars on Saturday. Prizes for the aces include: Hole No. 6--a set of Mizuno MSX metal woods; No. 9--four-day golf vacation for two at Sandestin Beach Hilton Resort in Florida; No. 10--two Lufthansa German Airline tickets to any destination in Germany; and No. 14--a half dozen Dirots Sportswear golf shirts.

Senior drivers tell thrill of Speedway

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Call it the Indy Seniors Tour.

A.J., Big Al, Mario, Gordie, and Gary B. - all over 50 and all still among the fastest race drivers in the world.

Among them, they own 11 Indianapolis 500 victories, have accumulated 127 starts and won more than $10 million in the world's richest and most prestigious auto race.

Any casual Indy-car fan could identify four-time winners A.J. Foyt, 57, and Al Unser, 52; two-time winner Gordon Johncock, 55; Mario Andretti, 52, frustrated for so many years since winning in 1969; and Gary Bettenhausen, 50, a member of one of the families most identified with Indy, survivor of terrible crashes and always a favorite of the throngs at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

They are heroes whose fame began before some of their competitors in Sunday's Indy race were born. What is it that brings these men - several of them multimillionaires - back year after year?

Johncock, who races only sporadically these days, said: "I'm here because this is the most important race in the world and I enjoy being part of it. Racing gets into your blood, I guess."

"For me, it's everything about the speedway," said Bettenhausen, whose father, Tony, was killed in a crash during practice in 1961, and whose brother, Tony, failed to qualify this year for his 10th start.

Gary B. is the only member of the Seniors Tour who had not won this race. But finished third in 1980 after starting 32nd - one of the great rides in speedway history.

"I grew up at this place," Bettenhausen said. "Some of the first things I remember revolve around the speedway. When it's May, you just want to be here."

Foyt, who was the first four-time winner, doesn't see anything out of the ordinary about a man approaching 60 driving cars at speeds above 220 mph.

"As long as your eyes are still good, your health is OK and you still want to do it, I don't see no reason to quit," Foyt said.

Unser, who will be 53 next Thursday, hasn't had a fulltime ride since 1985, but he has missed only one Indy 500 (1991) since 1970.

"I still feel like I can be competitive and it isn't that I didn't have opportunities, but I guess I get too choosy and too picky," Unser said. "After you've won this thing, you get spoiled and you want to do it again."

Andretti, the only member of the quintet racing fulltime, said: "There are people who age gracefully and others that age miserably. It's not my fault that I'm 52."

Alou is first Dominican pilot

MONTREAL (AP) - Felipe Alou became the first Dominican manager in major league history when the Montreal Expos fired Tom Runnels on Friday and replaced him with the three-time All-Star.

Alou, who has been in the Expos' organization for 16 years, became the third minority manager in the majors, joining Hal McRae of the Kansas City Royals and Cito Gaston of the Toronto Blue Jays. He also joined McRae as the second current manager with a son on his own team.

"I was one of the first Dominicans to play in the major leagues, and now I'm very proud to be the first Dominican to manage in the majors," said Alou, a career .286 hitter with seven teams from 1959-74.

Runnels, 37, was the youngest manager in the majors when he replaced Buck Rodgers on June 3, 1991. Montreal was 20-29 at the time and went on to go 51-61 under Runnels, finishing last in the National League East. This season, the Expos are 17-20 and in fourth place, five games behind the division-leading Pittsburgh Pirates.

"We feel we have an interesting and exciting ball club. We don't think the ballclub has jelled the way it should," Expos general manager Dan Duquette said. "I thank Tom Runnels for his discipline, work ethic and enthusiasm, but we felt we needed an experienced person to get us back to a contending level."

Alou, 57, had 2,101 hits, 206 homers and 852 RBIs for the San Francisco Giants, Milwaukee Brewers, Atlanta Braves, Oakland Athletics, New York Yankees, and Montreal. While with San Francisco, he made major league history by playing in the outfield with his brothers, Matty and Jesus.

With Montreal, he will be managing both his son, Moises, and his nephew, pitcher Mel Rojas. McRae is managing his son, Brian, in Kansas City.

"He's not going to play too much," Felipe said of Moises, an outfield backup to Marquis Grissom, Larry Walker and Ivan Calderon.

Alou, who said one of his first moves would be to move Tim Wallach back to third base from first base, was manager at West Palm Beach of the Florida State League from 1986 through last season, leading the team to first place in 1986 and 1990. His managerial record in 12 minor league seasons is 844-751.

"I was surprised I was asked to manage the team," Alou said. "Taking this man's job is tough. I worked very hard for this man to try to get things done his way. It still hurts that he had to leave. He was a gentleman. He always asked us coaches for advice."

Runnels, who was not immediately available Friday, was offered another position within the organization.

"I'm going to try and establish a relaxing atmosphere," Alou said. "As bad as we have been, I know we can be a lot better."

Kansas City was the 1990 National Football League leader in sacking quarterbacks with 60.

Lee Johnson of the Cincinnati Bengals twice had a 70-yard punt in 1990, the best in the NFL.

Eric Metcalf of the Cleveland Browns led the NFL in 1990 with two touchdowns on kickoff returns.

Cowboys' Johnson more relaxed

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Jimmy Johnson recently stood for 90 minutes before a room full of Texas sports editors and gave a thoughtful answer to every question asked.

A year ago, the Cowboys coach might not have stayed 90 seconds. NFL success has given Johnson a chance to relax around his critics. He no longer feels like he has to examine each question with a mine detector for hidden explosives.

Even when a questioner needled Johnson about some quick postgame exits after losses, the Dallas Cowboys coach answered with a smile and a sense of humor: "Sometimes I get a little hot after we lose. I'll try to hang around a little longer this year. I'll try not to get so hot."

He admitted dumb questions drive him up a wall.

"I'm a professional and do my homework," he said. "It irritates me to do an interview when the reporter doesn't do homework and comes in cold and doesn't know the subject."

It was a remarkable performance by the Port Arthur native who had the unsavory task of replacing that famous Texan from Mission, Thomas Wade Landry.

Not until the Cowboys had clinched a playoff berth last year with an 11-5 record, did Johnson finally admit how following Landry had ground him down.

"I could finally relax, I could finally get a good night's sleep," Johnson said last December.

Now you see the new Johnson. He's still intense. But he showed he's finally starting to enjoy life again.

He's slim and trim with a recent weight loss of 22 pounds. The diet consisted of running, lifting weights and starving.

"I hope I don't gain it all back like Oprah," said Johnson, who is a Tex-Mex food addict.

On this Sunday in the Austin American-Statesman meeting room he was model sharp in a designer suit, looking for all the world like the CEO of some worldwide company.

In a way, Johnson is the executive of a world famous product, the Dallas Cowboys.

Once billed by NFL Films, Inc., as "America's Team," the Cowboys are quickly regaining that label under Johnson and owner Jerry Jones.

The Cowboys recently became the top seller again for NFL Properties which markets caps, shirts, pennants, coffee mugs, etc.

They will open up NFL Monday Night Football in September at home against the defending world champion Washington Redskins.

They will be making a trip with the Houston Oilers to Japan this summer to play a preseason game. The Cowboys were in such demand that NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue asked Jones and Johnson to make the trip to Tokyo as a personal favor.

"I'll have to waive some team rules on this trip or I might lose my sanity," Johnson said. "We'll get back to work when we get back to Texas."

You could see Johnson is clearly relishing the role of being near the top of the professional mountain after he claimed a collegiate national championship at Miami.

"We will win," is the way he bluntly put it without such qualifying statements as "the good Lord willing and the creek don't rise."

"I don't have any concerns about the talent of the team," he said. "We can be very strong at the end of the year. It's important that we go farther than we did a year ago. That means going to the (NFC) championship game."

Johnson lives in a tight shell, but he gave the sports writers a show of candor in the relaxed setting.

For example, he admitted he used the newspaper printed word to get a message back to his players.

Most coaches do. Few admit it. In some cases, he said it was more effective than one-on-one talks.

"Sometimes you can get through to them easier when they read something in the newspapers," Johnson said. "Their friends and relatives read it to so you know it's getting back to them."

But what if a player uses the media the same way?

"A player is on thin ice there," Johnson replied. "I can cut them. They can't cut me. I've got a bigger hammer."

It was a rare Q-and-A with the intense Johnson who doesn't have press luncheons because he thinks they waste too much time.

Lake Meredith's fish falling for anglers who take it slow

By TROY FOOS
Amarillo Globe-News

AMARILLO (AP) - When local fishing guide Melvin Stovall got up at the Texas Parks & Wildlife meeting in March and called Lake Meredith a "fisherman's paradise," I'll admit I was a little skeptical.

A lot of anglers were saying fishing at Meredith had gone sour and were demanding answers. What was the truth? I certainly didn't know.

I'd only been out with fishermen who, on reflection, I don't think knew the intricacies of the lake.

When I headed out last week to fish, I didn't even bother to take a cooler. That was a mistake.

I can now honestly say the only thing slow about Meredith's fishing is the way you need to fish.

Tom Snow, Stovall and I went fishing for about five hours and caught about 40 walleye and crappie, with about 15 of them being keepers. We didn't go long without a bite.

We used small jigs, light line and minnows. Preferably, anglers should use line under 6 pounds, although I'll admit I was using 8-pound test. I never altered from my one-eighth ounce jig, although Stovall and Snow occasionally switched to a running weight, which consisted of a weightless hook on about 12 to 18 inches of leader below a slip sinker and swivel.

We fished slow, casting from an anchored position at two of our stops, running the jig and minnows across the bottom. At two other spots, we vertical-jigged. (Vertical jigging consists of slowly bouncing the jig along the bottom and using the trolling motor to slowly crisscross the area where you think there's fish).

We fished areas that weren't what most anglers would consider typical crappie havens - shallow areas or bars sometimes one-half mile out from the bank with no visible brush.

Stovall said he was showing that you could catch fish just about anywhere in Meredith.

During the trip, he talked about fishing this unique lake:

- Fish don't always bite. If you are confident you've fished an area thoroughly, you can probably leave. However, usually the bite will turn on eventually in the area.

- Fish finders rarely register walleye because they hang so close to the bottom. Crappie show up as spots in a horizontal line.

- There isn't another like like Meredith in Texas. Using heavy line and casting fast into the shallows, as done in prime bass lakes, rarely works in Meredith. Stovall suggested anglers after smallmouth get up as close as they can to one of the many rocky banks and cast into the lake at a 45-degree angle.

- Be willing to change baits. If minnows aren't getting any bites after about 30 minutes, switch to worms.

- Stovall isn't sure why, but he says fishing is tough when there's a southeast wind.

- As the day goes on, the bite gets lighter and lighter, requiring a soft and slow touch with the jig. I could feel the fish nibbling and nibbling, sometimes for several seconds, then the tip of the rod would bend steadily - that's when the hook is set. A moment sooner or later would have meant a lost fish.

- Most fish will follow the jig to the boat. So, most of the bites we got were right next to the boat. Stovall said walleye will take a stopped bait, although crappie will lose interest if a little motion isn't maintained.

- Look for big female walleye starting about June 1. Currently, they are scattered, Stovall said, because the spawn just finished.

- Similarly sized fish tend to hang together, although we didn't have to move more than 20 feet to get into bigger fish on our trip.

Tennis player's prayer

The following prayer, "The Tennis Player's 23rd Psalm," was brought to us by a reader. The author is unknown.

The Lord is my coach, I shall not lack his instruction.

He makes me rest during change-overs; He gives me chances to relax and recuperate.

He restore my strength; He leads me into new serve and volley strategies to bring Him glory.

Even though I half-volley in the middle of no-man's land,

I will fear no pegging; for You are my faithful doubles partner;
Your firm hand and gentle heart,
They put my arduous mind at ease.
You prepare an open court before me in the presence of my opponents;
You have appointed my racquet with finesse; my winning percentage overflows.
Surely patience and good sportsmanship shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will serve in the Lord's Center Court forever.

We Believe In You,

Farm and Ranch

Cotton farmers need good year after disastrous '91

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK (AP) — Every year is a critical year for farmers.

But 1992 is weighing especially heavy on South Plains cotton growers saddled with debt from a 1991 harvest that seemingly never had a chance.

"Make or break may not even describe it," says D.J. Moses, who farms 2,500 acres of cotton in Crosby County. "Most everybody had a major loss last year. This crop has to produce or we are all really in trouble."

Cotton still clinging to crusty brown stems in fields across the South Plains serves as a haunting reminder of a 1991 crop ravaged by drought, plant-munching aphids and an early freeze.

"By the time it finally came to harvest, that cotton was ruined, so it wasn't worth the cost of getting it out of the field," says Moses through a squint acquired from years of avoiding the sun. "It's eerie. I can't recall the last time there was so much cotton left in the field."

The 25-county area surrounding Lubbock grows a quarter of the nation's cotton annually. In 1990, a 2.9 million bale crop boosted the area cotton income to $952 million.

Last year's haul of just over 2 million bales saw income plummet to $500 million.

Farmers have mixed feelings as they head into the heart of this year's planting season over the next two weeks.

While most growers concur the subsoil moisture is the best it has been in years, there is a fear of attacks from destructive pests that likely survived a mild winter. And cotton prices remain low.

But like a blackjack player doubling his bet, the farmers are holding nothing back this year, even if it means more debt.

Nearly all the counties across the South Plains say they are planting the same acreage if not more than last year.

"It's going to be a tight year and farmers are going to have to watch what they spend," said Greg Jones, Martin County agriculture extension agent. "But they can't short their crop either. If we have a good crop, it may be good enough to get a lot of them paid back at the bank."

While the 1991 South Plains cotton harvest is not considered among the worst, experts agree it was one of the most expensive.

Farmers spent money to plant and replant due to a shortage of rains last May and then forked over thousands for repeated pesticide sprayings to kill the aphids, which feed on the nutritional juices of the cotton leaf and leave behind a yellow residue.

More chemicals were needed to treat the cotton due to an early freeze last Oct. 28.

"A lot of the farmers are having trouble with financing," said Wade Shackelford, Lynn County agriculture extension agent. "Those problems last year drained a lot of wallets and dropped morale pretty low."

Farmers are, however, optimistic about the soil moisture as they rig their tractors for planting. A wet winter and an abundance of rain this spring have raised hopes and saved many irrigated farmers about 67 cents an acre for watering.

"As far as water, we are in excellent shape," said Marvin Ensor, Gaines County agriculture extension agent. "We have had excellent rainfall and producers were able to save a lot of their underground water."

Victor Lucero, entomologist in

Martin County, says growers should beware of destructive pests such as the aphid, cotton flea hopper and boll weevil making an early debut this year.

"We did not have a severe winter, and severe cold temperatures are needed to cause high mortality rates among the insects," Lucero said. "The moisture is good and it's really prime conditions for all types of insects."

Don Johnson, executive vice president of Plains Cotton Growers Inc., said growers could stand to have prices come up about 15 cents a pound.

Johnson said the national inventory of cotton carried over from 1991 to 1992 is lower than expected. But the carryover worldwide "is going to set a record this year and that is of some concern," Johnson said.

The abundance of cotton has helped keep prices fluctuating between 40 and 50 cents a pound. Johnson said South Plains farmers need prices around 55 to 60 cents a pound to "help take some money to the bank."

Mike Morrow, the agriculture extension agent in Scurry County, which was among the hardest hit by troubles in 1991, says bluntly "1992 has to be good."

"There are some farmers that will be here a long time," says Morrow, whose county is comprised almost completely of dryland farmers, those without irrigation. "But others are not quite as established and need the crop to come through."

"Another bad year and a lot of farmers won't be coming back in 1993."

New agriculture seen in 'pharming'

BOSTON (AP) — Gene splicers have created barnyard animals that make large quantities of medicine in their milk, taking a big step toward the creation of a new branch of agriculture — "pharming."

The scientists already have transferred human genes into goats and sheep, turning these animals into pharmaceutical factories. And they are close to doing the same with the ultimate barnyard milk maker, the cow.

Genetic engineers now routinely shift human genes into bacteria, yeast and tissue cultures so they will produce usable quantities of otherwise rare human proteins for treating disease. The goal is to do the same with larger — much larger — creatures capable of churning out vastly greater amounts.

"We are very close" to having commercially useful quantities, said Dr. Vernon G. Pursel, a research physiologist at the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Beltsville, Md. "We may be there."

For instance, a genetically modified sheep in Scotland produced up to 2 ounces a day of a human protein used to treat a form of emphysema. This is four months' supply for one patient.

Three reports on the creation of so-called transgenic animals are being published in the Sept. 1 issue of the journal Bio-Technology, released Monday.

The first transgenic animals to make foreign proteins in their milk were mice created by scientists four years ago. Researchers have also designed other gene-altered farm animals, including cattle, but the goal has been to change the size and characteristics of the animals, not produce human proteins in milk.

Pursel, who experiments with transgenic pigs, said the latest reports "may be significant advances," but "there are other big hurdles" besides boosting production.

Among them are efficiently separating the proteins from the milk, making sure they are pure and testing them to see how they compare to genuine human proteins.

He and others predicted it could take five to 10 years to get animal-made proteins onto the market.

In one of the new reports, researchers from Tufts University veterinary school in Grafton and Genzyme Corp. of Cambridge described the first successful creation of transgenic goats that produce a human protein in their milk.

Their first female produced milk with tissue plasminogen activator, or TPA, a protein widely used to treat heart attacks. But the amounts of TPA were tiny — about three milligrams in each liter of milk.

Experts generally agree that transgenic animals must make one gram or more of human protein per liter to compete economically with other gene-splicing techniques.

Dr. Karl M. Ebert, director of experimental biotechnology at the veterinary school, said the researchers have since produced a goat that makes three grams of TPA per liter.

In another article in the journal, Dutch researchers from the University of Leiden and Gene Pharming Europe said they had produced the first transgenic dairy cattle intended to produce milk with human lactoferrin, an iron-binding protein. Their first animal was a bull, so it could not manufacture the protein.

Another team, from Pharmaceutical Proteins Ltd. and the AFRC Institute of Animal Physiology and Genetics Research in Edinburgh, produced three sheep that made human alpha-1-antitrypsin in their milk. This enzyme is used to prevent life-threatening emphysema in people who cannot make the substance on their own.

A Galago is a tree-dwelling African animal known for its ability to leap great distances — as much as 15 feet — among branches.

Checking sprinkler effectiveness

Personnel from the Texas Water Development board in Austin and the High Plains Underground Water District in Lubbock were in Deaf Smith County last week to conduct evaluations of pivot sprinkler efficiency and checking pumping plant efficiency. Tests by the agencies are provided to producers without charge. Interested persons may contact the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District office for details.

Extension News

BY BEVERLY HARDER

The future seems so far away. It will be 18 years before a child born today will need money for college or some other type of job training. It will be 20-30 years before the employee starting to work today will need retirement income. However, a manageable future starts now.

Future major expenses can seem beyond the reach of many families. The secret is to start early, save regularly and spend wisely.

Look at the challenge in small, manageable options. For example, it could take as much as $80,000 for a child born today to enroll in college. That may seem like more than you can manage. If you divide it by 18 years, it looks like $4,444 a year or $370 a month. By planning for the future now, you can cut that direct cost considerably.

First, come back to reality. What can you afford to set aside each month? Before you say "not much", think about it. Where does your money go now? Do you drink about one soft drink a day or have some other daily habit that uses at least 65 cents a day? In a year that equals $237. If both parents have this expense, that $474 a year. Over 18 years, putting this money ($18.94 per parent) into a low-risk passbook saving account that earns only five percent instead would add up to $13,320.76 in 18 years. Put the passbook savings account in the child's name with the parents paying income tax on the earnings.

If you can encourage your child to start making the same contribution from his or her allowance beginning with their first day in school, an additional $3,761.17 will be saved by graduation day. That totals $17,081.93 if two parents and the child save. If you are a single parent, encourage grandparents to join you in this manageable project.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Dana Carvey's impression of Ross Perot has won the comedian new fans - including Perot himself.

After the Texas billionaire and likely presidential candidate saw Carvey's impression of him on NBC's "Saturday Night Live," Perot called.

"I said, 'All right now, Dana, there's only one of me. ... With you, there's two of me,'" Perot told National Public Radio on Wednesday. "I said, 'You're more like me than I am. You and I could both hit the road and campaign.'"

Pioneer Study Club tours Canyon museum

Members of the Pioneer Study Club met recently for their final meeting of the club year at the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum in Canyon.

Michael Grauer, art curator, gave the group a guided tour of the Nicolai Fechin paintings and sculptures in the newly-created mini exhibition in the Alcove Gallery. After learning of the life and works of Fechin, who was born in Russia and moved to Taos, N.M., Grauer conducted the group to the European Art Gallery then to the pottery exhibit featuring Native American art from A.D. 900-1980.

The women then toured the American Art Gallery and also viewed the newly created furniture display that included furniture given to the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum by Judge James D. Hamlin who resided in Amarillo and Farwell. The display represented the Capitol Reservation Lands which included the XIT ranch lands.

Continuing on the tour, Grauer conducted the group to the exhibit of Harold Bugbee's art studio. Bugbee was an artist from Clarendon. Also, viewed was the Frank Reaugh exhibit as well as the historical Texas exhibit's recently completed gallery in the museum.

The art curator gave the club women an explanation of the panoramic view of the history of the Plains done in murals by Bugbee and Ben Carlton Mead.

Following the tour, the women met for a luncheon.

Those attending were Mary Jane Burrus, Jeannie Caison, Nell Culpepper, Maria Escamilla, Catherine Gripp, Oleta Hoffman, Billee Johnson, Helen Langley, Mary Panciera, Fern Sigle, Rosemary Thomas, Willie Wimberly and guests, Mary Stoy and Glenn Gripp.

Three recitals scheduled

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

Tomorrow (or Saturday, if you are a strict traditionalist) is Memorial Day. Originally intended as a day set aside to honor those fallen in battle, these days it is more often regarded as an opportunity for extra time off, a time for special sales, or just another day. Formal observance dates from 1868, when May 30 was established as a day to decorate the graves of fallen Civil War soldiers, though in some Southern States graves of soldiers of both sides were decorated by local women as early as 1863. Throughout the years, and wars, recognition was extended to all those that fell in the service of their country and, to some extent, any who have died. This Memorial Day, spend some time thinking about those who have made the ultimate sacrifice so that we may enjoy our backyard barbecues and special sales in peace, comfort and freedom. The Library will be closed Monday in observance of Memorial Day.

Kids and teachers are all ready for school to be out, if the message we get from them as we visit is any indication. The library Summer Reading Program will kick-off on June 8, and kids can begin registering June 1. More details next week.

While many of you have complimented us on this column, we have heard a couple of grumbings (or is that "grumbings"?) of dissatisfaction regarding the quality and quantity of the book reviews; so maybe it's time I explain a little about the process. At least twenty new books are put out every week at Deaf Smith County Library - ten fiction and ten non-fiction.

Obviously, not all of these are top-notch stuff, but we try to get a few "in-demand" authors out each week. It is my responsibility (sometimes a privilege, sometimes a chore) to determine which books to review and what to say. It's not easy to condense a five-hundred page book to two or three lines and expect anybody to decide whether or not they want to read it on that basis. Personally, I read anything that McManus or Barry put out, regardless of what some New York Times critic may have to say. Similarly, I figure that Steel, Clancy or McBain fans are going to read Steel, Clancy and McBain regardless of what this typewriter jockey says.

We try to get all the "hot" books and authors, but bear in mind that the publishers (and authors), while flattered that you want to READ their work, really want you to BUY it.

THEREFORE, the books designed for sale are available to the public a good while before books designed to loan (tougher binding) are offered to libraries. So, if you've heard about a new book or author, realize that it may be a while before we get it...but not because we aren't trying!

That's why you may have heard of Jewels by Danielle Steel some months ago, but why we just now have it...and there is already quite a waiting list on it. It is essentially the story of a society matron as she reflects on the past five decades, and the events that have brought her to her seventy-fifth birthday. The title comes from the business that she and her husband built after surviving the war in France.

Joyce Carol Oates is back with Black Water, told from the viewpoint of a young girl, a campaign worker for "The Senator," as the car he is driving plummets off the road into the black water below. A thinly veiled allusion to the Kennedy-Koepchne incident, Black Water is considered Oates' "boldest and most brilliant novel yet."

In non-fiction we offer some self-help and do-it-yourself books, plus a couple worth a special mention:

Doing What The Day Brought is an oral history of Arizona women and recounts the hardships they endured and the strength that pulled them through.

Heroes of the Horizon by Gerry Bruder relates flying adventures of Alaska's legendary bush pilots, and promises to keep the reader on the edge of his or her seat.

Times have changed since the 1960's and so have the styles for prom dresses. The Deaf Smith County Museum is now displaying several examples. Drop by for a look-see.

Garage sale shopping fun

When it comes to garage sales, kids and parents are hooked as indicated by the numerous garage sale ads in the newspaper.

Here are tips for family bargain hunters:

-This is a good time to get a jump on buying next winter's outerwear for your growing kids. Look for next-to-new jackets, raincoats, boots and ski wear. Even though storage may be a hassle, you won't regret buying costly clothing items at garage sale prices when next winter rolls around.

-You'll almost always find picture frames at garage sales. The prices can't be beat, since they generally range from 50 cents to $2 apiece.

-Check out garage-sale ads featuring sales-rep samples. You may find items ranging from shampoo and perfume to stationery and clothing at giveaway prices. Decorative combs, pen sets and small toys also are common and make ideal birthday-party favors.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Robert Redford's movie about an Indian activist convicted of killing two FBI agents in 1975 got a publicity boost from two members of Congress who want to reopen the case.

Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, and Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., on Wednesday joined Redford at a news conference calling for another look at the Leonard Peltier case.

"Incident at Oglala" questions whether Peltier received a fair trial. Redford produced and narrated the documentary.

Peltier, a leader of the American Indian Movement, received two consecutive life sentences for the shootings on the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota. He has been in prison for 16 years.

Couple exchanges nuptials Saturday

Misty Michelle Reed and Jason Neal Lueb, both of Hereford, exchanged wedding vows Saturday afternoon in St. Anthony's Catholic Church with Monsignor Orville Blum officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Loreta Reed of 121 Aspen and Mike Reed of Hart. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Neal Lueb of 500 E. Fifth St.

The church altar was decorated with two arch candelabra entwined with cream enchantment lilies, lavender spider mums, light blue irises and pink gladioli. A large basket of silk spring flowers was arranged in front of the communion altar and the unity candle was accented with mixed greenery and baby's breath. The parents' pews were marked by white lace and moire bows entwined with greenery and baby's breath and other pews were decorated with white lace and moire bows.

Nikki Reed served her sister as maid of honor and Ramon Long was best man.

Stacy White and Lynn Norris of Amarillo were bridesmaids, and the groom's brothers, Jeremy and Justin Lueb, were groomsmen.

Wedding guests were escorted by Aaron Burns and Philip Martin.

Catherin Fry, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Stan Fry, was flower girl. The groom's cousin, Avery Homer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mick Homer, was ring bearer.

Candles were lit by Emily Fry and the groom's cousin, Zachary Crawford.

Father Domingo Castillo, accompanied by Cheryl Betzen on the organ and Camille Betzen on the piano, sang "Walk Hand in Hand", "Only A Shadow", "March" by Rossini, and "Wherever You Go, Go As One."

Presented in marriage by Kevin Peck, the bride wore a full-length gown of white satin with schiffli lace beaded fichu off-the-shoulder collar which was delicately accented with pearl strands and seed pearls. The fitted bodice was heavily encrusted with beads, pearls and schiffli lace. The full skirt, which was marked at the back by a large designer's bow, was attached to a basque waistline and was accented with lace and seed pearls. The hemline, which swept into a cathedral-length train, was enhanced with scalloped lace.

The waist-length bridal veil of white netting was attached to a white satin sequined bow. The bride carried a cascading arrangement of gardenias, white roses, stephanotis and English ivy tied with white picot ribbon.

Her jewelry consisted of a strand of pearls and pearl earrings surrounded by diamonds.

Bridal attendants wore tea-length floral printed dresses fashioned with fitted bodices and lace accenting the waistlines. Each carried a blue iris and pink larkspur hand-tied with white moire ribbon.

The groom's sister, Julie Lueb, invited guests to register at the reception held at the E.B. Black House.

The bride's cousin, Anna Bartram of Tulia, served cake. The bride's aunt, Nancy Bartram, also of Tulia, poured punch and coffee.

The refreshment table was covered by an antique ecrú lace cloth. One of the focal points of the table was a silver champagne punch fountain featuring floating fresh flowers. Further enhancing the table was the bride's bouquet.

The bride's white cake was a Lady Windermere creation iced with white buttercream frosting. The bottom level consisted of four two-layer 10-inch cakes decorated with large shells, garland swirls and flowing scrolls. The second level was trimmed with large reverse shells, scrolls and large white icing roses and leaves. The top tier was separated with nine-inch pillars decorated with shells, garland and scrolls and the top of the cake was adorned with a Precious Moments bride and groom. The center of the cake was accented with fresh greenery and baby's breath.

The groom's 12-inch square three-layer cake was iced with chocolate frosting and sectioned into rectangles on top with each section containing different toppings of pecans, cherries, coconut, almonds, shaved chocolate, walnuts and brickle.

Leaving for the wedding trip, the bride wore a white skirt with a white fitted jacket.

The couple will make their home in Amarillo.

The bride is a graduate of Hereford High School and is attending Amarillo College.

The groom is also an HHS graduate and attended AC. He is currently employed by Affiliated Foods.

Out of town guests included Mrs. Louie Bonds of Tulia, the bride's maternal grandmother, and Mr. and Mrs. Glyn Reed of Hart, the bride's paternal grandparents.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Stan Fry.

Accent on Health

One of the most memorable moments of pregnancy is the first time you feel your baby move. This event, called quickening, usually occurs by about 16-20 weeks. From this point on, as your baby rolls, kicks, stretches and hiccups, you will constantly be reminded of your new life ahead and your new role as a parent.

Nobody can describe to a first-time mother exactly what she will feel when her baby moves. Many women in their first pregnancies mistake the earliest movements for stomach rumblings or muscle twitches. Often, the feeling is likened to "butterflies in the stomach."

As the fetus grows, activity becomes more regular and clearly defined. You should notice periods of rest and periods of activity. Unfortunately, many expectant mothers discover that the worst period of acrobatics is at night. This may be because the fetus is lulled by your movements during the day, or it may be that our are just too busy to notice the kicks and punches. Some women also report that eating seems to increase fetal activity.

Although you may enjoy sharing baby-kicking stories with others, keep in mind that no two fetuses have the same types or patterns of movements. An "average" fetus can show a wide range of activity. Don't become overly anxious if you don't feel movements as often or as strongly as someone else.

Toward the end of pregnancy, you may notice a drop in the level of fetal activity. This is because kicks, punches, and rolls are now restricted due to the cramped quarters of the uterus. You should still feel gentle movements throughout the day, however.

Some doctors recommend regularly checking fetal activity after about the 28th week of pregnancy. One way to do this is to pick a time period, for example three hours, and count the number of movements you feel over that time. Do this each day. If at any point you notice a dramatic drop in the number of movements, you should contact your doctor. This change may be the sign of a problem.

Although fetal activity is an important indicator of well-being, don't become obsessed with waiting for each movement. Very few babies actually have problems. Chances are that just when you fear your baby will never move again, you will get a strong kick in the ribs.

Is your safe safe?

A fire-resistant or burglar-resistant safe may be less safe, if located in the wrong place in your home.

Here's advice from the experts at the Associated Locksmiths of America, a trade association for locksmiths that tests and certifies them for their knowledge and skill regarding safes.

Fire-resistant safes which are portable should not be where they could fall and break open during a fire. A safe placed on the top shelf of an upstairs bedroom closet might have a three-story fall into the basement in a severe fire. Usually, fire-resistant safes are subjected to a drop test by Underwriters Laboratories.

Burglar-resistant safes are no good if they can be carried away.

Association honors parents

Parent of the Year awards were presented recently to, from left, Vivian Anglin, Donna Brooks, Donna Tice, Reta Reinart and Irene Weber. Also, receiving awards were Olivia Denning and Leander Reinart. The outstanding parents were selected by members of the Deaf Smith County Classroom Teachers Association.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You recently printed a bunch of responses from people commenting on the fact that the nation's 23 million college students each consume about 34 gallons of alcoholic beverages per year.

I almost choked when I read the letter from the Penn State student who said that the students there are too busy with their schoolwork to abuse alcohol or drugs. While I admire his loyalty to his school, I cannot let his letter downplay the problem of alcohol abuse on that campus.

I live in the Penn State college area and I'm telling you that it's never been as bad as it is today. The abuse is more blatant than ever and widespread. Is it just Penn State? Of course not. In a 1990 Time magazine interview, Donna Shalala, chancellor of the University of Wisconsin, stated that the biggest problem today on college campuses is alcoholism.

Every morning the streets in our town are strewn with beer cans and broken beer bottles. Penn State athletes wearing their team jackets are seen unloading kegs of beer from pickup trucks. Apartments that, according to the fire code, are only supposed to hold 25 people are jammed with four times that number for a party.

Don't tell me it's always been like this. I've lived here all my life and it gets worse all the time. And don't tell me it's a freshman thing. Many of these students are juniors and seniors who should have outgrown the immature party animal phase. Young lives are being changed by a whole range of problems associated with alcohol abuse—date rape, sexually transmitted diseases (including AIDS), unwanted pregnancies and abortions, drunken driving, and for some, a lifetime of alcoholism.

Something needs to be done. Alcohol awareness programs reach very few students, and the real drinkers would never attend them anyway.

Pennsylvania recently enacted new laws governing alcohol use and abuse. Penalties for all infractions include driver's license suspension and fines. Offending students should be arrested for underage drinking, providing alcohol to underage drinkers, and/or ignoring fire code regulations—to name a few. If law enforcement, with the full backing of college administrators and coaches, would begin large-scale arrests, we could send the proper message to students everywhere.

I reiterate the plea to you from the student in Michigan: "Please, dear Ann, don't add to the problem by playing it down or denying its existence." It's real, and it's heart-breaking. These kids need our help.

Cut this letter if you must, but please keep my name out of it. If my identity were revealed someone would surely sic the Nittany Lion on me and hang me from the goalposts in Beaver Stadium. Thank you.—Anonymous in University Park, Pa.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: You've written an unsettling letter, to which I can add nothing. If there is another point of view, I'd like to hear it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have read a lot of bellyachin' in your column from women who complain because their husbands spend too much time visiting "Mama." Tell them it's better than having her visit your home seven days a week for 23 years—uninvited, as my grandmother did. My mother was a saint.—Redondo Beach

DEAR REDONDO: Thanks for the mouth-closer.

Is that Ann Landers column you clipped years ago yellow with age? Classroom Teachers award Parent of the Year honors

Members of the Deaf Smith County Classroom Teachers Association have named outstanding parents for 1991-92. Receiving framed certificates at a recent HISD board meeting were Vivian Anglin, Donna Brooks, Olivia Denning, Reta and Leander Reinart, Donna Tice and Irene Weber.

Deaf Smith County CTA presents its "Super Parent" award annually to the local parents who make exceptional contributions to their children's academic achievement. This year's honorees were selected for the honor from among 68 exemplary parents nominated by area teachers. A resolution adopted by Gov. Ann Richards designated April 20-24 as Thank A Parent Week in recognition of the critical role parents play in successful public education.

"Committed parents like Vivian, Donna, Olivia, Reta, Leander, Donna and Irene make our classroom efforts so much more effective," CTA President Laurel Horton said. "Their kids are motivated to learn and achieve more. We appreciate all our parents who take an active part in their children's education."

Aparicio receives award

Gwen Aparicio received the Clinical Award and her associate degree in nursing from Amarillo College recently.

Aparicio received her nurse's pin in a candlelight ceremony May 13. She graduated with honors and will take her state boards in July.

Aparicio, her husband, Oscar, and two daughters live in Hereford.

Power of women

To be successful in America today, a company has to count on the power of women.

There are more than 127 million women in America these days; that's 51 percent of the population, some 6.2 million more women than men. Some 53.5 million of these women are in the work force—women with added buying power.

The power of women, it seems, can make a company a strong force in today's competitive marketplace.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

WHO'S THE BOSS?

Ask a group of self-employed persons why they chose to get into business for themselves and you'll get a variety of answers. One common response is that the entrepreneur wanted to be his own boss. That brings us to the question of the day: Who is the boss in a small business?

Perhaps it would be appropriate to define the term boss. According to the dictionary, the boss is the main decision maker or the person with final authority.

In a small business with only one owner, the decision of who is the boss appears obvious. In businesses with several owners or employees the obvious often becomes less so. In large corporations, the boss is sometimes ignored entirely.

Therefore, it is interesting that the founder of one of the world's largest corporations, never for a moment lost sight of who he worked for. Though he was listed as America's richest person, he knew who was boss. Because it is so appropriate to all businesses, we would like to share an essay written by the late Sam Walton. It is titled, 'The Boss'

The Boss

There is only one boss, and whether a person shines shoes for a living or heads up the biggest corporation in the world, the boss remains the same. It's the customer.

The customer is the person who pays everyone's salary and who decides whether a business is going to succeed or fail. And he doesn't care if a business has been around 100 years. The minute it starts treating him badly, he'll start to put it out of business.

The boss - the customer - has bought and will buy everything you have or will have. He's bought all your clothes, your home, your car. He pays your bills and for your children's education, and he pays exact proportion to the way you treat him.

The man who works deep inside a big warehouse or in a retail store might think he is working for the company that writes his paycheck, but he's not. He's working for the person who buys the products offered in Wal-Mart's stores.

In fact, the customer can fire everybody in the company from the chairman on down, and he can do it simply by spending his money somewhere else.

Some of the largest companies that had flourishing businesses a few years ago are no longer in business. They couldn't or didn't satisfy the customer.

They forgot who their real boss was.

The greatest measurement of our success is how well we please the customer, 'our boss.' Let's all support 'aggressive hospitality' and have our customers leave 100% satisfied every day.

Get to know the boss

I highly recommend getting to know your boss. The more you know about the customers you serve, the better you will be able to serve them.

If you work for someone else, this lesson still applies. Your job is dependent on company profits. Long terms profits come from satisfied customers.

If you work for a non-profit organization, your job security is still dependent on serving your customers. With the possible exception of the federal government, funding for non-profits is reduced if fewer services are rendered.

Get close to your customers and clients. Learn about their needs and wants, but also go beyond that. Learn about their families, hobbies, backgrounds and traditions. When you get close enough to your customers to be their friend, you may have a relationship that will last for life.

The only reason your business exists is to serve your boss, the customer. When every effort expended is to satisfy your customers, your odds of success are very, very favorable.

You may write to Don Taylor in care of "Minding Your Own Business," P.O. Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

Question and Answer

Q. - I have a crack running down the front of my fireplace from the mantle to the stone-faced, arched opening. I think the finish is plaster. The crack gets bigger the longer we have a fire. What's causing the crack and how can I fill it?

A. - According to the Brick Institute of America, the crack could be caused by too tight a fit of the steel damper assembly when the fireplace was built.

The steel damper gets hot and expands, cracking the fireplace. Wait until the crack is fully open (hot fire). Then point up the crack with mortar. Caution: Make certain you're not getting fumes or smoke through the crack. If you are, then call in a professional mason to repair your problem.

Note: Depending on the thickness of your plaster and the method of fastening to it, as the damper assembly cools and contracts, the now-filled crack may cause more plaster to break off.

1992 HHS GRADUATES!

It's Time To Fly Away!

CLASS OF '92--THE FUTURE IS YOURS

Valedictorian

David Bone

Salutatorian

Teresa Baker

He sits and he sings on a branch in the forest, sharing his soul with the woodland wild.
To all who would listen, he sends his song,
and then he flies away.

Songbird, the joy in your spirit has lifted my soul today.
Songbird, whenever I hear it,
I want to fly away.

A chill in the wind brings a warning of winter, telling the songbird he cannot stay.
So life is a lesson in movin' on.
It's time to fly away.

Songbird, the song that you sing now is here in my heart to stay.
Songbird, the message is clear now.
It's time to fly away.

'Jack's Place' no summer rerun; just looks that way

Hal Linden (seated) stars in Jack's Place, a new, hour-long comedy-drama series premiering Tuesday on ABC. Linden plays Jack Evans, the urbane proprietor of a small neighborhood bistro. Finola Hughes and John Dye also appear in the series, which producers describe as a "romantic anthology."

By Suzanne Gill

Love is silly. Shameless. Hopeless. For that matter, so is Jack's Place, a romantic comedy-drama debuting Tuesday, May 26, on ABC.

Hal Linden stars as Jack Evans, a piano-noodling Los Angeles restaurateur. Finola Hughes (Cats, Soapdish, General Hospital) and John Dye (Makin' the Grade, Billionaire Boys Club, Tour of Duty) co-star as Jack's cocktail waitress and bartender, respectively.

Chelsa (Hughes) is a whiz at baseball trivia, but romance generally leaves her stranded: She just can't read a man's signals after he's gotten to first base with her. Greg Toback (Dye) is a single father and something of a novice behind the bar. He likes Chelsa, and she pretends not to notice. They're both nice people. In fact, you won't meet anything but nice people on this show — except for a few ex-boyfriends who turned out to be cads.

Swirling around this core cast are the patrons and ancillary staff of Jack's Place, from the temperamental French chef who believes love and cooking don't mix to the long-lost daughter who comes looking for her father. Each hour-long show has three story lines, of which one is a boy-meets-girl romance. Guest stars will include Linda Purl, Michele Greene, Robert Guillaume, Mickey Rooney and Trevor Eve.

Jack's Place isn't so bad, but it would look better if one were tipsily infatuated with it, as executive producer Scott Brazil surely is. Brazil is a product of the esteemed MTM studios, where he worked on The White Shadow and won Emmys for Hill Street Blues, but his last two drama series, TV 101 for NBC and WIOU for CBS, flopped after they promised quirkiness yet proved merely derivative. It's a curse that's hard to shake. On paper, Jack's Place sounds charming — an affectionate anthology of romance in a neighborhood bistro run with a personal touch — but on screen it looks more like The Love Boat or Love American Style.

Indeed, Jack's Place might look better if it looked worse. This "bistro" has no red-checked tablecloths, no candles on the tables, no sawdust on the floor. Set and produced in a city where every good restaurant is distinctively decorated and trendiness is the only constant, Jack's Place has the visual appeal of a page from The Wall Street Journal. If there's to be any romance here, Jack's patrons will have to bring it with them.

Ten years after ABC retired Barney Miller, Linden is making his second attempt to return to series television (Blackie's Magic, with Harry Morgan, ran briefly in 1986 on NBC). Handsome as ever in a Hart, Shaffner and

JACK'S

Marx wardrobe, he looks far too debonair to be the Mr. Lonelyhearts of the prime-rib set. British-bred Hughes, a kind of soft-focus Joan Collins, needs to watch her diction: Her "last call" sounds like "law school" — hardly the invitation one wants to hear from a cocktail waitress.

Jack's Place replaces Civil Wars on the ABC schedule, a programming about-face from a cynical, experimental divorce-court drama audiences rejected to a proven format swimming in a sentimental sauce. With its solid appeal to viewers over 40, Jack's Place may be helped in the ratings by rumors of a backstage romance between Hughes and Dye, but it will likely prove to be nothing more than a summer flirtation for the network. © TV Listing Inc.

Cop glued on Shue

By Taylor Michaels

Q: If possible, I would like Elisabeth Shue's fan-mail address. I've seen all her movies: Cocktail, Adventures in Babysitting, etc. I would like to get a picture of her. Thank you for any help you can give.

P.S. Maybe she has seen me on TV. I've been on American Detective twice with the narco division. —Detective William Kallert, West Patterson, N.J.

A: After her breakthrough starring role in Adventures in Babysitting in 1987, Shue landed girlfriend roles in both Back to the Future sequels and in The Marrying Man, as well as a supporting bit in Soapdish.

You may write to Shue in care of Creative Artists Agency, 9830 Wilshire Blvd., Beverly Hills, Calif., 90212.

P.S. Maybe she could play your girlfriend in an episode of American Detective.

Q: How can colorization of old films be so precise? It fascinates me how it's done, right down to the color of the garments, automobiles, etc. that were in fashion at the time. —Anita Castillo, Casa Grande, Ariz.

A: Whenever possible, the colorization companies research the original costumes, sets, etc. used in the film (major studios keep a great deal of these in storage) or consult color photographs, sketches and/or written descriptions of the same. If there is nothing to go by, a computer program matches the varying shades of gray in each black-and-white frame with a corresponding shade from a color chart. Each frame is tinted individually, again by computer programs.

Colorization is a touchy subject in Hollywood, and some films, such as Citizen Kane, have anti-colorization protection under written contracts. A move is under way to label all "altered" films as such upon their release.

Q: How can I write Boomer Esiason of the Cincinnati Bengals? —Tye Butler, Big Spring, Texas.

A: Write the left-handed quarterback in care of The Cincinnati Bengals, 200 Riverfront Stadium, Cincinnati, Ohio, 45202.

Send your questions to Let's Talk, Features Dept., P.O. Box 961009, Fort Worth, Texas, 76161-1009. Please do not send return envelopes; all questions will be answered within this column.

Regional games come home on pay-per-view

By Steve Paschal

The once-icy relationship between cable and broadcast television got a little cozier this month when ABC Sports and Showtime Event Television (SET) announced plans to air selected college football games on pay-per-view cable next fall.

ABC tried to put together a pay-per-view package last year, but lack of time and affiliate reluctance nixed those plans. This year's package, however, looks like a win-win situation.

Under the terms of the agreement, ABC will offer affiliates and local cable systems a two- or three-game regional package featuring an over-the-air "local" game plus other games from outside the region as optional pay-per-view telecasts priced at about $10 each. Initially, affiliates feared that pay-per-view telecasts would hurt the ratings of the over-the-air game. But ABC has offered assurances that it will always offer the market's most attractive game to the broadcast affiliate. Meanwhile, the homesick Michigan fan living in Texas can watch the Wolverines take on Ohio State.

The ABC-SET venture is being called an experiment, but if this and NBC's pay-per-view Olympics package are successful, it won't be long before pay-per-view becomes a standard part of sports programming. Let's just hope it continues to be a win-win proposition.

SOAP TALK

Reader objects to Roman's charade

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: I only watch one soap, Days of Our Lives, and I'm about to stop watching it. I can't believe that the writers would have Roman dress up as a housekeeper named Hazel. If his kids had any intelligence at all, they would know that she/he is not for real. A 2-year-old could tell the difference.

My next complaint is about the sex scenes. Sometimes they will have three on a show and two of them are going on at the same time. I don't think the general public enjoys all this sex.

I also think making John and Lawrence brothers is a little far out. And Matthew Ashford is such a good actor, I don't understand why they insist on writing stupid lines for him.

If it doesn't improve, I won't be watching any soaps at all. —John Haskins, Manteca, Calif.

Dear Reader: I hate to say it, but sex sells on the soaps. There are other soaps that seem to handle this type of situation a little more delicately. I think it is great that John and Lawrence are brothers. What a great combination of good and evil! I personally can't wait to see the sparks fly!

Dear Candace: I would like to know the whereabouts of the talented actress who played Felicia on General Hospital. —L. Simpson, Ashland, Ky.

Dear Reader: Kristina Malandro (Felicia) is returning to the show, sans husband Jack Wagner (who was Frisco but now appears on Santa Barbara as Warren). She had originally left the show to spend time with their son Petey.

Dear Candace: I'm writing to ask if Jake (Joe Lando) on One Life to Live will be returning to the show, and if so when? —Mrs. Eulice Dunn, High Point, N.C.

Dear Reader: Lando is in California working on prime-time pilots. He just finished one for CBS tentatively titled Medicine Women with Jane Seymour and Diane Ladd.

He really has no plans to return to the soaps for a while, though he has expressed an interest in doing a summer or a couple of weeks at a time on One Life to Live.

Planetary woes addressed on cable TV

By Dan Rice

It's time to pitch in and clean house. In conjunction with the Earth Summit, which starts in Brazil next week, The Discovery Channel will run three weeks of special programming. This week the schedule includes the premiere of the third annual update on the State of the Natural World, a five-part survey of our beleaguered planet's welfare, beginning Monday, May 25.

Don't forget your sunscreen. It's been known since the '70s that certain man-made chemicals being released daily into the atmosphere are depleting the ozone layer, Earth's natural protection from the harmful ultraviolet rays of the sun. On Tuesday, May 26, CNN presents an update on the status of this global problem with A Hole in the Sky.

Take a free peek at The Disney Channel when the Mickey Mouse network offers free service to cable subscribers for five days starting Thursday, May 28. During this time you can catch Sting at the Hollywood Bowl: A Birthday Celebration in which the 40-year-old singer/activist performs his most popular ditties.

There'll be some furious peddling when The Great American Bike Race gets under way Saturday, May 30, on The Discovery Channel. Janet Harduvel lives with the 'Afterburn'

Air Force uncooperative with making of film

By Steven Alan McGaw

When Janet Harduvel received word of her pilot husband's death in the crash of his F-16, it was only the start of an ordeal that would challenge her character and painfully sour her trust in the nation he had pledged to serve. That struggle, still unresolved in the courts, is dramatized in Afterburn, premiering Saturday, May 30, on HBO.

Stunned that the Air Force would attribute the crash to "pilot error," and angered by officials' condescending ways, Harduvel became suspicious of the ready explanation for the crash; could the problem have been in the aircraft itself?

Her quest for an answer uncovered a problem familiar to both the Air Force and the aircraft's maker, General Dynamics Corporation of Texas. In some models of the F-16, a simple screw was known to be capable of literally sawing through crucial wires and dismantling the plane's electrical system. Yet these planes were cleared to fly and received no more than routine maintenance.

A powerful air-accident attorney agreed to represent Harduvel on the chance of a winning a generous settlement. But his support did not ease the hostility Harduvel encountered from many of her husband's friends and their wives, women whom she'd tried to befriend.

Laura Dern is thrilling as Janet Harduvel, a blast of truth-seeking air in a stale atmosphere of acceptance and duplicity. Robert Loggia is effective as her attorney, and Vincent Spano is winning in his early scenes as Harduvel's husband, Ted.

Producer Steven Tisch faced an uphill battle in the making of Afterburn, difficulty he attributes to refusals from both General Dynamics and the Air Force to cooperate in any way.

"They would have liked to have made things difficult to the point where I would have thrown up my hands and said I can't make this movie," Tisch says bluntly. "Well, I was not about to do that."

Recent Oscar-nominee Laura Dern heads the cast of Afterburn, premiering Saturday, May 30, on HBO. Dern plays Janet Harduvel, the widow of a pilot blamed for the crash of an F-16. Robert Loggia and Vincent Spano also star.

'Tonight Show' staffer recalls Sam Kinison

Sam Kinison, who died in an April 10 car crash, was remembered recently by Jim McCawley, who has booked comedians on The Tonight Show for 15 years.

"When I first saw him," McCawley says, "he was a very different fellow than he was at the end. He was very mild, trying hard to please everybody. He showed us some material, and it was quite funny. But when we pulled (six minutes out of his act), it wasn't funny. It was very strange. So I said, 'Sam, you're not ready for us. We have to wait on this.' After a time, he went over to HBO and he became the Wild Man. And he wouldn't listen to any censorship. It took several years before he finally came back and (performed on The Tonight Show) he did a musical piece, Elvis Presley's 'Are You Lonely Tonight?' And that was a big hit on the show. He came back the next

'Assignment' makes the grade

By Chris Carpenter

Ever since the first picture tube sparked to life, television has been trouncing schoolwork in an ongoing battle for kids' attention. Increasingly, instructors have given up trying to beat the system and decided to join it, adding video resources to the established curriculum.

The Discovery Channel has developed a program titled Assignment: Discovery, that, according to the network's Lori McFarling, was the first educational joint venture of cable operators, teachers and network television. It provides a tapable, commercial-free hour of non-fiction programming to schools each weekday.

"We were literally flooded with calls from teachers saying 'Can we get (Discovery Channel programming) without the commercials? Can we show it in class? Is this legal?' As corporate citizens, we had to respond to this and not only give them our programming, but present it in a format that works for them."

McFarling stresses that "none of the programming is meant to be a substitute teacher. Our program is really more of a snap-on tool for an already-devised lesson plan," she says.

In the everyday war on illiteracy and indifference fought in the modern classroom, Assignment: Discovery can be a powerful weapon.

To learn more about Assignment: Discovery, call 1-800-321-1832.

Earlier this season, Kinison, who developed his loud vocal skills as a preacher before taking up comedy, struck an uneasy middle ground in broadcast standards with his role as Tim Matheson's wisecracking alter-ego on Fox's Charlie Hoover.

She was the perfect housewife of the '60s, the quintessential career woman of the '70s. By golly, Mary Tyler Moore has earned her place in Nick at Nite's sitcom hall of fame. When The Mary Tyler Moore Show joins the Nick lineup next fall, you can revisit that uproarious Minneapolis newsroom with Moore and co-stars Ed Asner, Valerie Harper, Cloris Leachman, Gavin McLeod, Betty White and Ted Knight. All adults should have cholesterol checked for CHD

All American adults should have their HDL, the "good" cholesterol, checked when assessing coronary heart disease (CHD) risk in addition to total cholesterol, according to a recent National Institutes of Health (NIH) consensus panel report.

The NIH also recommends testing HDL and triglyceride (another blood fat) levels to assess the risk of cardiovascular disease among patients who have high total cholesterol, those who already have heart disease, and those with two or more heart disease risk factors, such as diabetes, being a man for being a post-menopausal woman.

"We have found that in addition to total and LDL-cholesterol levels it is important to know the level of HDL cholesterol to identify patients at risk, as well as those to at risk," says Antonio M. Gotto, Jr., MD, chairman, American Lipid Information Bureau and chairman, department of medicine, Baylor College of Medicine.

William P. Catelli, MD, medical director of the famous Framingham Heart Study, agrees. "At Framingham, we found that 20 percent of adults with 'desirable' total cholesterol suffered heart attacks. The same is true for another 40 percent in the 'borderline high' range."

The consensus panel notes that levels of HDL below 35 mg/dl constitute a high risk for developing coronary heart disease. The experts also caution that test for total cholesterol and HDL should be conducted in a setting that offers accurate measurement, appropriate counseling and follow-up.

The NIH panel recommends a low-fat diet, appropriate weight loss, regular exercise and stopping smoking as the first step in reducing heart disease risk. During therapy may be considered if these lifestyles measurers prove ineffective.

Margie's Notes

MARGIE DANIELS
Executive Director

This morning we had our first planning session for our Festival of Trees event. The festival will be held Nov. 19-22 and here it is the end of May. We have a great group for committee chairmen. Some have their workers but we will need a lot of volunteers in different areas. If you are willing to be a part of this, please come by the Center and tell us!

We're still working on details of our tours for this year. If you are interested in any of these, please call me. I don't have all dates pinned down, but the tours planned are:

August--Black Hills, Badlands, Minnesota, Wisconsin(The Dells), House on the Rock, Tulsa and see "Oklahoma."

October--Octoberfest in Brownwood.

October--Foliage tour to the Ozarks.

December 11-14--Christmas in Branson.

April 1993--The Southern Gardens Tour.

I was pleasantly surprised today when Kathy Acton walked in to my office. Kathy is our nurse with the Crown of Texas Hospice. She's a delightful lady and we are so fortunate to have her back in Hereford and working with Hospice. Welcome home, Kathy!

We had a good group sign up with ValuCare at the Center in May. This is a special program at Deaf Smith General Hospital with help from Methodist Hospital. Our hospital is working hard to improve the facility and offer more benefits. The hospital is looking great! You need to go by and see the changes...clean, shining and with beautiful decor!

See you at the Center!

Heart Association blow-out

Larry Summers tries to play "The Old Grey Mare" on the kazoo at the Celebrity Dinner a la Heart dinner recently at the Senior Center. Summers' kazoo playing may have been heard by any dogs in the neighborhood, but was unheard by human ears.

Your Hereford Senior Citizens Center has been very busy with many activities. It seems there are always "things going on" which is good for our seniors, as well as others in the community. A day hardly goes by that I don't wonder what some of our people would do without the Center. We are constantly trying to make improvements and planning new programs and activities. If you are a senior, come join us in the noon meals and other activities.

Senior Scene, a supplement of The Hereford Brand, is published in cooperation with and editorial contributions from the Hereford Senior Citizens Association, 426 Ranger, PO Box 270, Hereford, Texas 79045.

Funds sought for research

CHARLOTTE R. CLARK

In an unprecedented show of support for nutrition screening and improved nutrition care for older Americans, a diverse group of senior citizens and senior service providers joined members of the Nutrition Screening Initiative in a hearing before the U.S. Senate Labor and Human Resources Subcommittee on Aging on February 2, 1992. Through testimony and support-The American Dietetic Association, the American Academy of Family Physicians, and the National Council on the Aging-urged Congress to allocate federal funds to nutrition services and research.

The ADA's representative to the Initiative stated that 85% of America's older population has one or more chronic diseases that have been documented to benefit from nutrition intervention, and that 40% of older patients admitted to hospital and nursing homes today suffer from malnutrition. Nancy Wellman, past president of the ADA and their representative to the hearing said, "This level of malnutrition among America's older adults is not only unacceptable, it is preventable." It is the goal of all dietitians to find people who are at risk before they are suffering the effects of poor nutrition and help them take the steps to stay healthy.

Dr. Gerald Keller, MD, member of the American Academy of Family Physicians, and Paul Kerschner, PhD of the National Council on Aging reported on their own personal experiences with the older individual in the field from Ohio to Washington as providers working to identify those who need a wide variety of nutrition services.

One cannot work in a hospital critical care unit and not see many cases every year of people who would have been returned to their homes had they only been well-nourished before coming to the hospital; because they enter the hospital already nutritionally compromised, these people never regain their health. Many must live with assistance in a long-term care facility.

In response to the many presentations and testimony, Senator Brock Adams (D-Wa.) chairman of the Aging Subcommittee made a commitment to support funding for outcomes research to document the efficacy of nutrition screening and interventions. Owing to Adams' efforts, nutrition screening was included under preventive services of Part I in the OLDER AMERICANS ACT.

Key areas of nutrition intervention are social services, nutrition education, nutrition support, oral health, medication use, and mental health. The next segment of the Nutrition Screening Initiative will be an effort to develop a composite document that will summarize the most effective intervention to maintain and improve the nutritional status of older Americans. This document will then be used to develop and help educate other health and social professionals and guide policy makers about interventions.

It has been found that 75 through 85-year-old individuals have different nutrition attitudes, knowledge, and practices than the age group of 60-70-year old individuals. Nutrition education should focus on positive messages that are age appropriate, practical, and achievable. Specific topics should include information about beneficial outcomes of healthful eating behaviors. Often rural elderly are a poorly understood population with distinctive needs, but now interest in them has been increasing. Life-style behaviors of the rural elderly may differ from those of their urban counterparts, in most cases the rural seniors have not had as much access to health promotion services but never the less nutrition intervention outreach is needed in rural and small community areas.

Seniors comprise the fastest growing age group in the United States. By the year 2000, those aged 75 and older are expected to constitute half of the elderly. This growth affects all of society because of the resulting increased demand for health care and social services. Thus, it is crucial to encourage health promotion activities that have the potential for helping seniors remain in optimal health. Nutrition is one of the key factors. Appropriate nutrition education should be targeted to this rapidly expanding segment of our population, and special attention should be given to the large number of seniors who reside in rural areas and small communities.

Seniors need to be encouraged to make changes in eating habits and that they are quite receptive to making moderate dietary changes is recognized as essential. If the needs of the older seniors are to be met in appropriate nutrition education programs, it will be necessary to identify and characterize their needs.

Three points of focus for nutrition education for the older seniors include:

1-emphasize the benefits of optimal nutrition even for individuals over 75 years of age;

2-address the needs of the older age group by providing food-specific recommendations that enable clearer understanding of how to implement better eating behaviors;

3-present achievable goals to enhance attitudes of intention, self-efficiency and outcome expectation.

Never too late to stop smoking

I've smoked two packs of cigarettes a day for 40 years - what's the use of quitting now?"

How many times have you heard someone make that statement?

At any age there are many reasons to stop smoking. Smoking doesn't just cut a few years off the end of each smoker's life. Smoking affects the lungs and air passages, causing irritation, inflammation and excess production of mucus. Smoking effects can result in a chronic cough and, in more severe cases, the lung disease known as chronic bronchitis. Long term smoking can do lung damage leading to emphysema.

When a person stops smoking, the benefits begin right away. The risk of heart attack, stroke and other circulatory diseases drops. Circulation of blood to the hands and feet improves. Although quitting smoking won't reverse chronic lung damage, it may slow the disease and help retain existing lung function. Smokers have a higher risk than non-smokers of getting influenza, pneumonia and other respiratory conditions such as colds.

There are many ways to stop smoking. No single method works for everyone, so each try to find what works best for them. Withdrawal symptoms reported by some people who quit smoking include anxiety, restlessness, drowsiness, difficulty concentrating and digestive problems. Many people have no withdrawal symptoms at all. You can get help at clinics offering stop smoking programs, or ask your doctor for his advice on how to stop smoking.

Over 30 million Americans have been able to quit smoking, and recent surveys suggest that this decline in smoking is continuing. By giving up cigarettes, you can be healthier and feel healthier, regardless of how many years or how many cigarettes you have smoked.

Eye Openers

Much of the time we think of eye disease as some isolated condition that affects just that small area of the face called the eye. In reality, many eye diseases are caused by deficiencies in enzyme systems and the chemistry that is involved is affected throughout the body. In other words, there are many systemic diseases that affect the eye. Sometimes the eye effects are a significant aspect of the disease.

Let's take, for example, rheumatoid arthritis. Rheumatoid arthritis is a condition where there is inflammation of the membranes lining the joints. These membranes become red, swollen, and painful. The eye has membranes lining the inside of the lid and the front surface of the eye called the conjunctiva. In many people with rheumatoid arthritis, this conjunctiva becomes inflamed. These people may think that they have "pink-eye". The condition turns out to be chronic. Many of these people go on to develop dry eyes and have to be on artificial tears for the remainder of their lives. In severe cases, the membranes are so inflamed that they adhere to each other and the lids stick to the surface of the eye.

Rheumatoid arthritis can also lead to a condition called iritis which is inflammation or irritation inside the front part of the eye around the iris. This is a serious condition that requires a different treatment from the conjunctival inflammation. It is important for people with significant rheumatoid arthritis to be aware that their eyes may be involved in the condition. They should seek ophthalmic care.
