Oil rises to $16.50

From Staff and Wire Reports

OPEC countries have broken a long-standing deadlock by unanimously agreeing to Iran's plan for a drastic temporary production cut to boost sagging oil prices. On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for September delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, responded by rising to $16.50, up $3.21 from Monday.

But it may not mean that much immediately to the area oil industry, according to a Midland geologist.

Rilwanu Lukman, Nigeria's oil minister and president of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, made the unexpected announcement on Monday following a late-night session with 12 other oil ministers in his hotel suite. Asked if the group had reached unanimity, a smiling Lukman replied: "Believe it or not, yes."

Iraq, although agreeing to the plan, will not participate in the cutback.

Oil industry analysts consider a unanimous accord by OPEC members on production cuts crucial to reversing a worldwide slump in world prices, which have dropped from $32 a barrel late last year to the $7 range for some grades.

Decision won't be windfall to state, Bullock spokesman says

By STEVE LEVINE

AUSTIN — Monday's OPEC decision to temporarily cut oil production in hopes of driving up prices "is not going to mean any windfall" to the ravaged Texas state Treasury, a spokesman for Comptroller Bob Bullock said Tuesday.

Meeting in Geneva, ministers of 12 of the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed to return to October 1984 production quotas, a plan which could reduce OPEC oil output to 16.7 million barrels a day. Recently, the cartel has been producing about 20 million barrels daily, glutting the market and forcing down prices.

The announcement triggered an immediate increase in the price of crude, but Bullock spokesman Tony Proffitt said the comptroller's staff had counted on a price increase for the fall anyway.

"If they get to $15 (a barrel), that's where we have it now," Proffitt said. "For the time being, we're right on target."

The dramatic drop in oil prices that followed OPEC's decision to flood the market last November has devastated the Texas economy and the state Treasury. The Legislature returns to Austin tomorrow for a special session.

Special session set to start

By STEVE LEVINE

AUSTIN — Nearly six weeks ago, when the stream of red ink became a torrent, Gov. Mark White said he'd call a special legislative session once lawmakers developed a plan to solve Texas' budget crisis.

White kept his end of the bargain — on his orders, the Legislature returns to Austin at 10 a.m. Wednesday — but so far legislative leaders have let him down. Several plans to address the $3.5 billion revenue shortfall have emerged, but none of the key players have rallied support enough to claim a consensus.

Ironically, many legislators are looking back at White to bridge the gap. With his campaign opponent trying to blame the governor for the state's sorry economy, White knows he must come up with an answer that satisfies political as well as budgetary considerations.

In the House, Speaker Gib Lewis and Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, favor what has become known as the "Band Aid approach." They prefer cutting $1 billion to $2 billion from the $18.5 billion 1987 budget now, enough to keep the state Treasury solvent through the early spring. They say a permanent solution will wait until the January regular session — after the November general elections — when they expect the economy to stabilize.

Some businessmen urging state lawmakers to raise taxes

By ROBERT REINHOLD
New York Times
News Service

AUSTIN — A fundamental credo of Texas business people is that taxes are bad for business. Now the state's business leadership is doing a most un-Texan thing: calling for higher taxes as the legislature convenes this week in emergency session to deal with a fiscal crisis.

A groundswell for higher taxes is emerging among Texas's conservative business elite in order to salvage hard-won gains in public education and human services, gains they say are essential to the economic future as Texas tries to find a new footing after the collapse of oil prices plunged it into deficit.

Last week Lt. Gov. William P. Hobby Jr., a member of a wealthy Houston publishing family, embarked on an unusual seven-city tour to promote broader and higher sales taxes and higher gasoline taxes. The Houston Chamber of Commerce also backs a rise. And Monday, 200 powerful leaders in business and education from all over the state gathered at the University of Texas as it mounted a drive to salvage its budget.

"We are asking you today to join the battle to defend Texas," said Jess Hay, chairman of the University of Texas system Board of Regents and chief executive officer of the Lomas & Nettleton Financial Corp. in Dallas. "The fundamental question is whether the state will crater in the face of current pressures," he went on, or continue "progress to greatness."

Lawmakers uncertain about how far drug testing should go

Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress are applauding President Reagan's vow to cleanse society of illicit drugs, but are voicing uncertainty about how far the nation should go toward universal testing of workers.

Reagan, in a nationally televised speech, outlined a six-point program Monday aimed at breaking people's reliance on drugs and declared creation of a "drug-free workplace" as his top priority.

He said his advisers are looking for specific ways to get illicit drugs out of offices and schools, but stressed that no decisions have been made on drug tests for federal workers.

"I think we're pretty much agreed that mandatory testing is justified where the employees have the health of others and the safety of others in their hands," the president said.

"But at the same time," Reagan added, "I think we're pretty much agreed that we should make it plain that we're not out to get people and fire them, and we're not out to get kids and kick them out of school for using it."

"What we're out to do is to see if they will not recognize that we want to help them, and they don't lose from that, so I don't see how it could become coercive."

Reagan's plan would aim at creating a drug-free workplace for all Americans, getting drugs out of schools, improving efforts to inform people of the dangers of drugs; stepping up law enforcement drug interdiction efforts; attempting to get other nations to cooperate; and ensuring drug treatment for people who need it.

A senior administration official, declining to be identified by name, said, "I don't think anyone has said make mandatory drug testing a condition of employment." However, he added, "We're going to ask corporate America to expand" drug testing.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, hailed Reagan's speech, telling reporters he favored mandatory drug testing for workers involved in public safety, including air traffic controllers, bus drivers and "people in the military involved in security matters."

Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, said, "I'm glad that he (Reagan) has said he has not come up with his strategy yet. That's what we lack, a national strategy."

Reagan suggested that top officials of his administration, including members of the Cabinet, voluntarily submit to drug tests, and said that a wide-ranging testing program among the government's 2.2 million civilian employees could serve as an example for others.

But this idea was not uniformly embraced by lawmakers.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, when asked whether he would request his staff members to undergo tests for illegal drug use, replied: "I haven't asked them yet, I'll tell you that, and I'm not sure I will."

"I don't think anybody on my staff takes drugs, to be honest with you, so I don't know that I have to ask them," he said.

Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., said, "I think the president stating that he wants law enforcement tested is a new great step forward. My office is one of the first that mandated testing."

Referring to a meeting she attended with other GOP lawmakers shortly before Reagan announced his new program, she said, "The president just said, everybody understands what happened at Pearl Harbor, and this time it's going to be Pearl Harbor for the drug traffickers."

Two Americans aboard plane believed crashed

KINGSTOWN, St. Vincent (AP) — A former foreign minister and two Americans were among 13 passengers and crew on a Twin Otter commercial plane believed to have crashed in the Caribbean, a LIAT airline official said Monday.

The pilot of the 19-seat plane "tried to come around for a third time" for a landing Sunday night during a rainstorm at Arnos Vale Airport near Kingstown, the capital of this eastern Caribbean island off Venezuela, said Phillip Abbott, sales manager for Leeward Islands Air Transport, or LIAT.

"The tower lost contact, and that's it really," Abbott said. "We believe that the plane may have crashed at sea and sank with no survivors, but we still can't be sure of that."

He said two coast guard vessels, one from St. Vincent and one from Trinidad and Tobago, and two helicopters were searching for the plane.

"We have found no debris and no aircraft," Abbott said. "It's likely the plane sank in deep water."

The official for the Antigua-based airlines said the plane twice attempted to land before attempting a third approach during "a reasonable (rain) shower. It was not a downpour."

He identified the former foreign minister as Hudson Tannis. Tannis' wife and their small son also were on board the airline, which is owned by 13 Caribbean Community governments, Abbott said.

Tannis was foreign minister of St. Vincent and the Grenadines from 1979-84.

Teacher says he'll consider voting for White after impromptu talk

White

AUSTIN (AP) — A high school teacher who bumped into Gov. Mark White in a Capitol hallway says he was impressed by the governor's answers in their impromptu discussion about teacher competency tests.

"He has changed my mind. I will now consider voting for him, whereas I would not have until I met him personally," said James C. Robertson, an 11th grade English teacher at Clear Lake High School in League City.

Robertson, who is entering his 33rd year of teaching, was touring the Capitol Monday when he unexpectedly saw White as the governor was leaving his second-floor office.

The chief topic of conversation was the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers, the mandatory competency test required under school reform legislation White pushed through the Legislature in 1984.

Although 99 percent of the 210,000 educators who took it passed the TECAT, the exam has angered teachers in this election year.

White's Republican opponent, former Gov. Bill Clements, says he opposes the test as given. Clements has said teachers with 10 to 15 years experience should not have been required to take such an exam.

Robertson told White the test was very unpopular among veteran teachers. White pledged that they won't face another exam.

"If I can go back and tell our faculty that you said there will never be another test during your administration, I think you'll get overwhelming applause from the faculty," Robertson said.

"You can tell them that," White assured him.

After their meeting, Robertson said he told White, "You must simply just believe he's in trouble with the teachers" because of TECAT.

"We were issued lifetime certification. Our argument is that when you are issued a lifetime certificate by the state of Texas, it should have meant lifetime," Robertson said, adding that he passed the TECAT on the first try.

Commonwealth nations adopt harsh sanctions against South Africa

LONDON (AP) — The summit of seven Commonwealth nations split early today over sanctions against South Africa, with six countries adopting harsh measures and Britain refusing to go beyond a limited package.

India's Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi accused Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of forfeiting her country's role as leader of the 49-nation association of Britain and its former colonies. Mrs. Thatcher said she made a reasonable compromise.

"It is not the Commonwealth that lost; it is Britain that lost," Gandhi said. "Britain is not the leader any more in the Commonwealth...because it has compromised on basic values and principles for economic ends."

Gandhi spoke to reporters at a morning news conference hours after the two-day London conference broke up.

It ended with the leaders of six countries agreeing to stringent punitive measures. They were Australia, Canada, India, the Bahamas, which have scant or no links with South Africa, and two African states, Zambia and Zimbabwe, which are heavily dependent on their powerful neighbor.

An isolated Mrs. Thatcher, after what was described by participants as hours of fruitless arguments, pledged to implement only a limited package. She said she compromised for the sake of Commonwealth unity.

Mrs. Thatcher agreed to voluntary bans on new investment in South Africa and on the promotion of tourism. She said she would go along with bans on imports of steel, iron and coal if these were agreed by the 12-nation European Common Market in September.

"The result is reasonable for all concerned and we ended up as friendly as we started. That is good," Mrs. Thatcher said in a radio interview, ignoring Gandhi's reaction and veiled threats of reprisals by Zimbabwe Prime Minister Robert Mugabe.

At an earlier news conference, Mrs. Thatcher reiterated her belief that further sanctions "will be counterproductive...but we have done things which certainly are a compromise to take into account our membership of the Commonwealth."

The six other countries adopted mandatory bans on new investment in South Africa, on the import of South African agricultural products, on the promotion of tourism and on new bank loans to South Africa, on all government procurement there and on government contracts with majority-owned South African companies.

In addition, they said they would bar the import of uranium, coal, iron and steel from South Africa, and end double taxation agreements and all government assistance to invest in trade with South Africa.

No deadline was set for implementing the sanctions.

In South Africa, the rand dropped following the sanctions announcement. It opened a 39 cents, then fell quickly to 38½ cents as financial experts tried to assess the effect.

The newspaper Business Day, which generally reflects the views of South African's business community, said sanctions "will make matters worse."

Bishop Desmond Tutu of South Africa, on a visit to Japan, welcomed the sanctions but said more pressure is needed.

"We are relieved that Mrs. Thatcher is proving persuadable, but over 2,000 of our people have been killed since 1984," said Tutu, referring to the deaths in violence related to apartheid.

Prime Minister Robert Hawke of Australia, commenting from London on NBC's Today show, said Britain would eventually implement the tougher measures because of pressure from other countries.

By law and custom, apartheid establishes a racially segregated society in which the 24-million black majority has no vote in national affairs. The 5-million white minority controls the economy and maintains separate districts, schools and health services.

Mrs. Thatcher said the measures agreed on by Britain, the biggest foreign investor in South Africa, would have more impact than the list adopted by the other countries — apart from the black African states, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

"We have a history of very considerable trade there, we have large investments and large trading interests. Other members of the Commonwealth will have little investment or trading interests," she said.

Mugabe, whose pledge to cut air links will likely bankrupt his country's fledgling airline, immediately threatened reprisals against Britain.

"We will have to examine in our own way whether those who support apartheid and those who have interests in our own country must be allowed to get away with it," Mugabe told a news conference.

But Zambia did not repeat its preconference threat to quit the Commonwealth unless Britain imposed tough sanctions.

OPEC

For the United States, which uses about 25 percent of the estimated 60 million barrels of oil consumed in the world daily, the OPEC agreement may raise prices, but when and by how much remains unclear. The cartel's oil accounts for about 12 percent of U.S. consumption.

If the agreement can raise world prices to the $20-a-barrel range, U.S. consumers could see gasoline prices eventually rise about 14 cents a gallon, by some industry calculations. But the domestic gasoline market is highly competitive, and it remains unclear whether OPEC's agreement will last.

Midland geologist and president of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, B.H. (Bruno) Hanson, expects that if member countries adhere to the OPEC agreement, prices are more likely to stabilize in the $15 per barrel range.

"A stable $15 price will help the West Texas industry somewhat — but it is more a panacea than a cure to our ills," Hanson says.

"If OPEC maintains the proposed quotas, in the 16 million barrel per day production range, it should help us to save our marginally productive wells. By eliminating some plugging of stripper wells, our industry will be helped.

However, Hanson does not expect to see any significant impact on exploratory drilling plans until prices rebound to the $25 per barrel range.

"Even with prices stabilized around $15, there will likely be a least a 60-day delay before there is a noticeable impact on the local industry because of surplus crude oil stocks already in the system," Hanson notes.

The OPEC agreement caused oil prices to surge Monday in hectic trading. On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for September delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, closed at $13.29 a barrel, up $1.74 from Friday. Today in Europe, October contracts for Britain's Brent crude, a key market indicator, jumped more than $2 a barrel to the $14 level.

The Iranian plan calls for OPEC to return to its combined daily output level of October 1984, and covers all 13 of the cartel's members except Iraq, Iran's enemy in the Persian Gulf war.

By dropping Iraq from the plan, Iran cleared a major stumbling block that had been holding OPEC deliberations hostage for months.

The October 1984 combined ceiling for OPEC was 16 million barrels a day. For 12 countries except Iraq, it is 14.8 million barrels a day.

With Iraq's current production estimated at between 1.9 million and 2 million barrels a day, OPEC's daily output under the new plan would be 16.7 million to 16.8 million 42-gallon barrels.

OPEC's July production was around 20 million barrels a day.

High-ranking OPEC sources said the cartels's experts would meet this morning to determine when the cutbacks should be implemented. They said either Aug. 15 or Sept. 1 were under consideration.

The ministers were then expected to meet in full session and issue a communique.

Iran and Iraq have been fighting for nearly six years, with the death toll on both sides exceeding 100,000. While both countries depend on oil revenues to finance their war efforts, it was not immediately clear what effects on the war the OPEC accord may have.

In previous talks, Iraq had demanded a quota equal to Iran's, while Iran had said it wanted two barrels for each additional barrel given to Iraq.

Iran's plan would theoretically leave its foe free to produce as much oil as it wants, but the Iranian delegation, without elaborating, warned that its country had other ways of controlling Iraq's oil output.

Iranian Oil Minister Gholamreza Aghazadeh, in outlining the plan earlier Monday, said it was a temporary accord.

Under the plan, all OPEC countries except Iraq would implement the lower production levels for two months, then hold another conference to discuss price structure. If any country were found to be producing more than its quota, the accord would automatically become invalid.

Nugent repeats call for 'sensible tax incentives'

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Claiming Americans are "walking down the same dangerous path we trod a decade ago," Railroad Commission Jim Nugent Monday repeated his call for "sensible tax incentives" for the energy industry.

While the country enjoys low prices at the gas pump, Nugent said in a press release, domestic exploration is declining and the United States is becoming increasingly dependent on imported oil. Those "alarming similarities" to the situation just before the 1973 Arab oil embargo are setting the country up for the "OPEC noose," he said.

"We are seeing rising demand, plunging exploration and smaller and smaller additions to reserves," Nugent said. "OPEC is slowly but surely putting itself back in the driver's seat, as vital segments of our domestic oil industry are being dismantled."

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, says he worries that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will continue to jolt the market with tremendous price swings until they "break us financially."

"The Saudis have played it perfectly, they're getting ready to destroy our stripper well production, which is 15 percent," Schlueter said in an interview. "It's a calculated move and Congress is stitin there fat, dumb and happy, hollering 'free enterprise, free market.' And there's never been such an animal in the oil and gas market."

Nugent cited statistics showing crude and product imports have increased 35 percent since January to 6.5 million barrels a day in June. He said imports now account for 40 percent of U.S. consumption.

Even if oil prices were to rebound immediately, Nugent said "it may take the industry two to five years to recover." He called on Congress to eliminate the windfall profits tax and maintain investment tax credits, accelerated depreciation and intangible drilling cost deductions to encourage domestic production.

"I'd like to think we're wise enough to learn the lessons of history and not be condemned to repeat our mistakes," Nugent said.

BULLOCK

In his latest revenue forecast, issued July 24, Bullock predicted the price of a barrel of oil would hover near the $15 mark through fiscal 1989. The Treasury depends heavily on direct taxes from the energy industry and from other tax revenue generated when oil money ripples through the economy.

Proffitt said the comptroller's staff would continue to monitor oil prices in the wake of the OPEC decision. "It's not going to mean any windfall" to the state, he said.

SESSION

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Senate Finance Committee Chairman Grant Jones, D-Abilene, say lawmakers would be abdicating their responsibilities if they took the House approach and cut hard into vital state services. Instead, they advocate a combination of spending cuts and tax increases to balance the budget during the special session. Hobby has proposed $650 million in cuts, including a salary reduction for state employees, and has spent the past week touring the state to drum up support for a broad range of taxes.

Comptroller Bob Bullock, who last week survived several informal challenges to his $3.5 billion deficit prediction, is working on a program which would impose the sales tax on most services now excluded and would permit lawmakers to raise new revenues and still reduce the current 4.125-percent state sales tax rate.

Article III, Section 33 of the Texas Constitution gives the House the upper hand in the tax debate. "All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives," the constitution says, "but the Senate may amend or reject them as other bills." House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, says he has no plans to invoke his constitutional authority during the special session.

Hobby, Lewis and eight key lawmakers met face-to-face late last month to discuss the deficit and the two chambers' conflicting plans to deal with it. "Neither side blinked," Schlueter said of the meeting.

About the only agreement any of them can reach is whom to blame: OPEC. Since the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries abandoned its defense of $28-a-barrel oil in November, the Texas economy and the state Treasury have followed the nose dive in the price of crude.

All parties now are looking to White to solve the impasse. The governor says he has a "precision" plan of his own, which he will present to the Legislature at noon Wednesday.

Lewis says the governor supports the Band Aid/no-new-taxes plan, but White has released only a few details of his agenda: Last week, with his hands on a Bible, he pledged to protect state aid to public education; the governor also told reporters he may propose closing a few state agencies and state parks, but no schools or hospitals. White's staff has repeatedly denied rumors that the governor will endorse a tax increase.

Some lawmakers say White's approach will determine whether the House and Senate can reach a compromise and leave town quickly or whether the stalemate will expand into a full 30-day session, or more. The governor has hired a quartet of legislative experts, including his former executive assistant and several former House members, to lobby for whatever plan he proposes.

With both White and Lewis embroiled in tough re-election battles, politics will play a major role in shaping the debate and the outcome. White faces a rematch with former Republican Gov. Bill Clements, who has lambasted the governor for not "scrubbing the budget" months ago and who stands to make considerable political hay if White stumbles at all.

For the first time in eight years, Lewis faces a Republican opponent in his conservative Fort Worth district. Although the speaker runs the House on a non-partisan basis, state GOP officials are going all out to help challenger K. Wayne Lee raise enough money to beat him. Lewis also knows he has to protect the interests of the 40 other House members with November opposition.

Other key players to watch as the session continues include:

— Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston, who has become the GOP's top budget expert in the House and favors cutting the entire $3.5 billion during the special session.

— Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen, one of the House's Hispanic leaders and an ardent opponent of the Appropriations Committee's budget cutting plans.

— Rep. Charles Evans, R-Hurst, Gib Lewis' best friend and a master of legislative maneuvering.

— Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, a conservative Democrat whose knowledge and reputation for fairness could swing a substantial number of votes.

— Sen. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, the Senate's "handy-man" with a flair for forging compromise.

— Republican U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, who has proven in the past that he can galvanize state House Republicans into a solid, 54-member voting bloc.

TAXES

The battle lines are thus drawn for the convening of the Legislature Wednesday, between Texas's urban future and its more conservative rural past. Voters in more rural areas deeply resist added taxes in a time of hardship, and raising taxes is politically risky. Gov. Mark White, a Democrat who faces a tough re-election battle this November against William Clements, a former governor, has not yet given his view, but associates say he leans toward higher taxes.

Just how dire the situation is remains unclear. Ten days ago, Comptroller Bob Bullock announced that the state faced a $3.5 billion shortfall in the budget for the two-year period ending Aug. 31, 1987.

But doubters have suggested that he has "cooked" the numbers to embarrass White, an old foe. Moreover, any improvement in oil prices, not impossible given Monday's news that ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries had reached a tentative agreement to limit production, would provide at least temporary relief.

But education leaders assume the worst for now. One proposal would cut all state appropriations by 34 percent. This would mean a cut of $270 million in the University of Texas system budget of $2 billion, nearly half of which comes from state appropriations.

Such a cut could be achieved by laying off 7,000 of the system's 40,000 employees and cutting research and salaries. Even closing down all 13 other campuses except the flagship campus here would save only half what is needed.

The situation is a dramatic contrast with the picture a few years ago, when oil money enabled the University of Texas at Austin and Texas A&M to gear up to compete academically with top East Coast and West Coast universities. "There is a very real danger we will be forced to retreat to third-rate standing," said Hans Mark, chancellor of the University of Texas system.

Indeed, business leaders told Monday's audience, which included Lady Bird Johnson, that building a solid educational structure was essential to the quest for new high-technology business in competition with California and Massachusetts. William Cunningham, president of the Austin campus, pointed to Massachusetts, which has turned around despite its high tax rates.

"We stand prepared, indeed anxious, to take the tax consequence as opposed to the education-slash consequence," said Larry Jenkins of the Austin branch of Lockheed Aerospace.

The business leaders were urged to press their representative and senators and assure them voting for higher taxes would not mean political suicide. Appeals were made to Texas pride: "Do we want to compete with California and Massachusetts or Louisiana and Arkansas?" one business executive asked.

Livingston Kosberg, chairman of the board of the Department of Human Services, who is chairman of Gibraltar Savings and First Texas Savings in Houston, said budget cuts might mean that welfare payments would drop from $57 a month for a child to $43, as against a national average of $110, making Texas 47 among the 50 states in welfare support.

WHITE

However, he said his chat with the governor made a favorable impression.

"I have always wanted to meet the governor and just tell him what I really thought. This casual meeting has given me an opportunity to do so. I am thoroughly impressed," Robertson said.

"He makes you feel he really has teachers at heart. And he convinced me when he said that teachers will not take another test during his administration."

PLANE

Abbot said the U.S. citizens who were on the plane were Alida Ollivierre and Rufus Nelson, both of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Also on board were Roberto Gorla, and Valda Caputo, both from Milan, Italy, Abbott said. The co-pilot, identified Keith Hobbins, was a Canadian citizen, who along with pilot, Capt. Phillip Roach, lived in Antigua.

The other passengers, all from St. Vincent, were identified as Robert Frazier, Ruth Babb, Buster Lockhart and Donnae Young.

Hightower: 'Texas-sized' load of hay will be contributed

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 14 million pounds of donated Texas hay will be shipped free to drought-plagued farmers in Georgia and South Carolina, the Texas Department of Agriculture says.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, calling it a "Texas-sized contribution," says the hay will be the largest donation from any state to assist farmers in the Southeast.

The 70,000 square bales and 5,700 round bales of hay, worth about $300,000, should fill some 530 boxcars being donated by four railroads, Hightower said Monday.

He said the hay is enough to feed 12,000 head of livestock for six weeks.

"I know what it's like — I'm a full-time farmer — to be in a bind, and those boys in the Southeast definitely need the help," said Tommy Davis, immediate past president of the Texas Young Farmers organization.

The 2,500-member Young Farmers group is one of several organizations helping with the relief drive, Hightower said.

The first trainload of Texas hay will be assembled on Saturday at Hondo, where a farmer has donated 8,000 bales, Hightower said.

The bulk of the shipments will be launched Aug. 23 from nine depots across the state where hay is being collected.

Hightower said he has been calling on farm groups and others — including the 4-H, Future Farmers of America and local chambers of commerce and civic organizations — for volunteer help to load the hay.

"The farmers are ready and the transportation is arranged. But the final thing we need now to complete the program is volunter muscle power, good strong backs, so we can get these bales out of the fields and into the boxcars," Hightower said.

"Instead of being a gift from a couple of hundred Texas farmers, the Texas Hay Drive will be a gift from Texans who are going to pitch in in the old-fashioned, neighborly way," he said.

OLDER AMERICANS EXPLORE SECOND CAREER WITH H&R BLOCK TAX COURSE

Thousands of older Americans take the first step towards a second career with the H&R Block Income Tax Course and earn money as income tax preparers.

H&R Block, the largest income tax preparation firm for over 30 years, is offering a basic income tax course starting September 8th and 9th with morning, afternoon, and evening classes available.

The course is ideal training for mature individuals who want to continue working after retirement or who are retired and want to go back to work. Classes are held over a 13 week period. An experienced Block instructor will guide students through various phases of income tax preparation. Classwork will include discussion, prasctice problems and actual experience preparing individual tax returns. New tax wil be explained.

Graduates of the course will leave with a practical skill they can put immediately to use. It's a challenging way to earn extra money and continue to be a productive member of the work force. Plus, there is always a need for people with tax knowledge.

Qualified course graduates may be offered interviews for positions with Block. Many of Block's employees find the flexible hours a plus. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

One low course fee includes all textbooks, supplies and tax forms necessary for completion of the course. Certificates and 7.5 continuing education units will be awarded upon successful completion of the course. The course also meets the continuing education requirements of the Texas State Board of Public Accountancy.

Registration forms and a brochure for the income tax course may be obtained by contacting the H&R Block office 1101 N. Midkiff, 561-8689. Courses are being offered in 3 area locations.

Rugged terrain hampers search for killer

BRECKENRIDGE, Texas (AP) — The rugged terrain around Possum Kingdom Lake hampered an intense search by authorities for condemned murderer Richard Donald "Stony" Foster.

Authorities said Foster, 33, escaped from the Stephens County Jail Sunday night with another inmate, Cindy Davis, 27. Ms. Davis was captured at about 8 a.m. Monday on the east side of Possum Kingdom Lake, about 25 miles northeast of Breckenridge.

About 50 officers resumed their search for Foster today at daybreak after the manhunt ended for the night about 12:30 a.m., said John Dunning, county jailer.

At the time of Ms. Davis' escape, she was being held on an attempted capital murder charge for allegedly shooting at a police officer.

Foster was armed with a stolen .22-caliber pistol, said James Cain, Stephens County sheriff.

Searchers Monday were hindered by heavy rains. Cain said the rough terrain of the large search area was impassable for some four-wheel drive vehicles because of the rain.

Foster, wielding a knife, locked a jailer in a cell during the escape.

"He was slipped a knife, probably by one of our trusties," Cain said. "The knife came from our kitchen."

Foster, whose execution date had not been set, was sent from death row to Breckenridge for a pretrial hearing on a kidnapping charge, said Charles Brown, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Corrections.

Foster was charged in connection with an incident in May 1984 during which seven people were held hostage at Citizens National Bank in Breckenridge. He had been convicted in November 1985 in Parker County for the murder of a Springtown man in April 1984.

He was scheduled to go on trial at Gainesville Aug. 26 and had a pretrial hearing recently in the case. He had been in jail for about a week, Cain said.

The sheriff said Foster confronted a guard with a knife and then tied him up inside a cell. He then took the jailer's keys, and went to the women's section of the jail, where he freed the woman, Cain said.

Her parents said they believe she was taken hostage by Foster and forced to escape. Cain said the question of whether she was taken hostage or escaped was under investigation.

The two left in the jailer's pickup truck, which contained a .22 caliber pistol, Cain said.

Roadblocks were set up Monday in the western part of North Texas, said Pat Kinnison, a deputy sheriff in Breckenridge, located about 100 miles west of Fort Worth.

Foster told the Abilene Reporter-News in November 1985 he had shot a man on May 10, 1984, before fleeing into Citizens National Bank and seizing the hostages, who were freed unharmed.

Attempted capital murder charges stemming from the shooting were dismissed when a judge ruled prosecutors failed to comply with the Speedy Trial Act.

Doctors may lower black homicide rate with staff aware of abnormal behavior

HOUSTON (AP) — The high homicide rate among blacks is at epidemic levels and doctors could help reduce that trend by training their staff to become more aware of abnormal behavior among patients, says the former president of the National Medical Association.

But the epidemic rate will not be arrested until other societal problems are resolved, says Edith Jones, a physician practicing in Houston's inner-city neighborhoods since 1953.

"It's not a question of how to correct behavior but how do we prevent it," Ms. Jones says.

Records show homicide is the leading cause of death for black males ages 15 to 44, Ms. Jones said.

"It's an epidemic," Ms. Jones said. "It is a disaster and one that much attention should be given."

She says the homicide rate among blacks in Houston is reflective of the national problem.

A federal report showed that since 1981, 40 percent of Houston's homicide victims were black, even though the black community makes up only 18 percent of the city's population. Whites, who make up 73 percent of the population, comprised 26 percent of the city's homicide cases. Hispanics, Orientals and other minorities account for the remaining 34 percent of the homicide victims.

Homicide figures from the Houston Police Department show that about 45 percent of the perpetrators of those homicides were black. The figures also indicate that the victim and the perpetrator knew each other in at least 60 percent of the cases.

At a recent NMA conference, made up mostly of black physicians, doctors suggested each physician spend more time routinely screening black patients for violent or homicidal feelings and help patients who are inclined toward violence.

Dr. Paris Bradsford, who attended the conference, said the suggestion is a practical one.

"Physicians need to understand what is going on behind the patient's eyes," Bradsford said. "There certainly are socioeconomic factors that should be looked at beyond checking a man's high blood pressure and giving him a bottle of pills."

XIT Rodeo to ~~attract~~ ropers from California

DALHART (AP) — A celebration that began with a few XIT Ranch cowhands who wanted to hash old memories has become an annual rodeo and party for as many as 20,000 people.

The 50th XIT Rodeo and Reunion will draw ropers from as far away as California and almost triple Dalhart's 7,500 population during its four days beginning Wednesday.

A barbecue billed as the "world's largest" will feed the whole bunch beef, pinto beans and onions free of charge. And thousands of dollars in prize money will be offered in the rodeo. But it's the people of Dalhart that make it special, said Ronnie Hanbury, president of the event's board of directors.

"It's the feel of it," Hanbury said. "It's not real commercialized, and it's put on by the people of the area."

The tradition springs from events of more than a century ago.

The state of Texas, searching for a way to fund construction of a new state Capitol building in 1875, decided to trade three million acres of state-owned land stretching from the Oklahoma-Texas border to Lubbock.

In return, brothers John and Charles Farwell of Chicago would build the Capitol, Hanbury said.

The XIT Ranch — it's name chosen because the branding mark was difficult to duplicate — was the largest in the world.

But by the early 1900s, it had been sold off in parcels.

"Some of the original cowboys from the ranch wanted to hold a reunion," Hanbury said, and as they gathered in Fort Worth for the state's centennial in 1936, the first XIT reunion was held.

The next year, and ever since, Dalhart has been the site.

Only three XIT Ranch cowhands are still alive, Hanbury said. Two plan to make the reunion.

"In spite of the fact that the cowhands aren't here, the reunion is for the people of this area," he said.

Rodeo events are scheduled daily, and include century team roping — two-man teams of cowboys over 50 years old — and a "Little Britches" rodeo for children as young as 6 and under.

Special legislative session to boost Austin's economy

AUSTIN (AP) — Wednesday's special session of the Legislature will bring a boost in business for Austin hotels and restaurants as lawmakers and lobbyists flood into town.

"When the Legislature is in town, we get about three times the business that we usually do — it gets real crazy," said Kathi Allison-Smith, who with her husband operates The Cloak Room, a popular tavern with lawmakers.

Whatever the Legislature finally does with the state budget, its 30-day special session will boost the Austin economy.

Steve Clark, owner of the Waterloo Ice House and Hamburger Bar, a Capitol-area restaurant, said that a regular legislative session means "anywhere from a 20 percent to 50 percent increase in business."

The Austin Chamber of Commerce didn't have figures available on how much this special session would mean, but president Lee Cooke said "it will definitely be good for the economy even if they stay only two weeks."

Cathy Haller, sales director for the Stephen F. Austin Hotel, said Austin hotels have a new competitor for legislators' dollars — apartments, condominiums and other empty places looking for business in the midst of a real estate slump.

Nevertheless, the hotel's business already has begun picking up for August, normally a very slow month, Ms. Haller said.

Work in the House will be a little slower for representatives in the special session, since remodeling work has knocked out the electronic voting machine.

Gordon "Doc" Arnold, assistant to House Speaker Gib Lewis, said House members will vote by a voice roll call, meaning each of the 150 members will have his or her name called by a clerk each time a vote is taken.

Texas comes to life on painter's canvas

By LINDA THORMAN

FORT WORTH (AP) — Chuckwagons, bluebonnets, longhorns and oil derricks. That is how painter Joan Tome sketches the Texas Sesquicentennial.

When a sponsor of the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train asked the Kennedale painter to capture the spirit of Texas history on canvas, Tome produced two acrylic paintings.

"I like to make people wonder what I'm thinking," Tome said. "I like to suggest an ideal — people's dreams."

One painting — her "happy" one — features an outline of Texas with a wagon train, pecan tree branches, a mockingbird, longhorns and bluebonnets on a light blue background. Ms. Tome spent a month working on the canvas — propped against her living room wall as an incentive to finish it quickly.

Ms. Tome said the second painting is similar to the "illusionism" style of Arlington painter Cecil R. Young Jr. It shows a stagecoach pulled by horses through a gray sky with white clouds. Each corner of the painting displays a different scene: a windmill, an oilfield, a cattle-branding scene and the Texas outline delineating the 3,000-mile Sesquicentennial Wagon Train route that culminated July 4 in Fort Worth.

Ms. Tome, 38, thought she would never be able to work again after an industrial accident in 1970, in which she lost three fingers of her right hand. But a few days later, she discovered that, even with the stitches still in her hand, she could roll her hair.

Ten years after the accident, Ms. Tome began sketching livestock and then wildlife using her right hand. Tome holds her brush between the stump of her index finger and thumb.

"I use my pinkie finger for balance," she said.

Ms. Tome grew up on a cotton farm in Maxey and graduated from Fort Worth's Trimble Technical High School. She said her early rural memories left an indelible stamp upon her drawings.

Nearly all of her two dozen or more sketches feature an outline of Texas as background. Why? "Well, I'm not from Oklahoma," she said.

Ms. Tome's sketches also are displayed in area post offices, thanks to the friends she made during her six years as a rural mail carrier. Her brother, Terry Templeton, is postmaster in Joshua and has put her works on display in his post office.

But probably her proudest moment came when President Reagan thanked her for her prints of a longhorn, an appaloosa, a quarter horse and a bull, the famous K-55 or "El Caporal Rojo."

New artistic challenges that Ms. Tome plans to meet are lettering, air brushing and gun engraving. She encourages aspiring artists to "pursue that something inside of you."

That "something" may lead her and her family to Arkansas someday, she confided, but for now, she's "strictly Texas."

State highway department target for Johnson award

AUSTIN (AP) — Six finalists have been chosen for the 1986 Lady Bird Johnson award presented to state highway department maintenance supervisors for outstanding work in highway beautification.

The $1,000 award will be presented Oct. 8 by Mrs. Johnson.

Announced Monday as finalists were Billy Rushing of Canton; Donald W. Wilson of Houston; Donnell Gowens of Floydada; Bobby J. Erwin of Bryan; Wallace B. Daily of Woodville; and Jack Blossman of San Saba County.

Also Monday, the highway department named William C. Garbade as chief engineer of the safety and maintenance operations division.

Court judgment obtained

AUSTIN (AP) — The state has obtained a $100,000 contempt of court judgment against Nicholas Bachynsky and Physician's Clinic of Dallas, Attorney General Jim Mattox announced Monday.

Each of the defendants was fined $50,000 because a clinic employee had told patients that a chemical herbicide was safe to use as a weight reducer. The employee violated a court order to make certain disclosures about the treatment, according to Mattox.

The contempt order was signed by State District Judge Leonard Hoffman of Dallas.

In March, Bachynsky was ordered to pay $86,000 in fines and fees and was prohibited from selling the herbicide — dinitrophenol — to patients.

A March court order forced him to tell patients the chemical was not safe and could cause death, Mattox said.

Is OPEC setting trap?

AUSTIN (AP) — The United States is walking into an energy trap set by OPEC, Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Jim Nugent said Monday.

He said the 35 percent increase in imports of foreign crude oil and products is "disturbing."

"We are walking down the same dangerous path we trod a decade ago and OPEC is again waiting, smiling and holding the noose," Nugent said.

"OPEC is slowly but surely putting itself back in the driver's seat, as vital segments of our domestic oil industry are being dismantled," he said.

Delta airliner lands safely

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Despite a damaged tire, a Delta Air Lines jet on a flight from Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport made a safe emergency landing, authorities said.

"Delta flight 332, a Boeing 727, had a tire failure on takeoff from Dallas this afternoon," airline spokesman Alan Burdette said Monday.

The jet flew by the San Antonio tower for a visual inspection and "no damage was observed from the tower," said Burdette.

Access-to-information fight could sidetrack Scalia hearings

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate confirmation hearings on the Supreme Court nomination of Antonin Scalia could be sidetracked briefly by an access-to-information battle over William H. Rehnquist's nomination as chief justice.

Scalia, a federal appeals court judge here, was to appear before the Senate Judiciary Committee today. But the committee first was expected to discuss an effort by its Democratic members to obtain Justice Department documents Rehnquist wrote as a government lawyer from 1969 to 1971.

The documents are memoranda Rehnquist wrote as chief legal adviser to then-Attorney General John Mitchell in the administration of President Nixon. They purportedly cover domestic wiretapping and the Nixon administration's plans for dealing with Vietnam war protesters.

The White House last week claimed executive privilege in refusing to surrender some of the requested documents, but committee members and Justice Department lawyers conducted weekend negotiations.

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., serving as President Reagan's intermediary in the matter, met with seven senators Monday, but no progress was made, said Bob Mann, a spokesman for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

"We remain hopeful that the negotiations will be successful," Mann said. "We remain hopeful we have the votes to pursue a subpoena if the negotiations do not prove successful."

In refusing to surrender the documents, Reagan cited the confidentiality of internal executive branch deliberations.

In a letter sent Monday to the judiciary panel's chairman, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., Assistant Attorney General John R. Bolton said Justice Department cooperation would be "consistent with preserving the department's ability to discharge its responsibility as legal adviser to the executive branch."

Kennedy and the committee's ranking Democrat, Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, indicated Friday that they had enough votes to force a legal showdown by having the committee subpoena the documents.

Even a subpoena, however, is not likely to postpone scheduled confirmation votes on Rehnquist and Scalia.

The 18-member committee, which last week conducted four days of often-stormy hearings on Rehnquist's nomination, has 10 Republicans and eight Democrats.

The committee is scheduled to vote on the nominations of Rehnquist and Scalia on Aug. 14. The full Senate plans to vote on the nominations Sept. 8.

Scalia, 50, is the first Italian-American selected for the nation's highest court. If confirmed, he would fill the vacancy left by Rehnquist's elevation to succeed retiring Chief Justice Warren E. Burger.

Called Nino by his friends, Scalia is known as a gregarious, witty and erudite champion of judicial conservatism.

After graduating with high honors from the Harvard law school in 1960, Scalia worked in a Cleveland law firm for six years before teaching law at the University of Virginia from 1967 to 1970.

He then joined the Nixon administration as general counsel in the president's Office of Telecommunications Policy, and later headed the Administrative Conference of the United States, an agency that recommends improvements in federal administrative and legal procedures.

In the administration of President Ford, Scalia was an assistant attorney general in the Justice Department's Office of Legal Counsel.

From 1977 to 1982, Scalia taught law at the University of Chicago. He was named to the U.S. Court of Appeals by Reagan.

Scalia's judicial record and perceived conservative views on such issues as freedom of speech and press, abortion and civil rights has sparked some opposition to his nomination.

Congress attacks 'Star Wars' defense plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's "Star Wars" anti-missile plan is under heavy attack as the House and Senate try to decide how they will reduce Reagan's defense budget.

Each chamber opened debate Monday on bills authorizing the Pentagon to spend money in the 1987 fiscal year, which starts Oct. 1.

Reagan sought $320 billion worth of defense spending in fiscal 1987, but Congress has already decided to cut that to $292 billion.

While the two bills propose the same overall defense budget, they would allocate differing amounts of money for dozens of the several thousand Pentagon programs. The differences will eventually have to be reconciled by a House-Senate conference committee.

The president wanted about $5.3 billion next year for Star Wars, which is known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative. The Senate bill would reduce that to $3.95 billion and the House would cut it further to $3.8 billion.

However, even deeper cuts are proposed in several amendments pending during the floor debate that will occur this week.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., sought more support Monday for his amendment to limit the increase in SDI spending to three percent after inflation, which would put the program at $3.2 billion. The current SDI budget is around $3.1 billion.

"This is not the time for a large increase in SDI spending," Johnston told his colleagues. "We are not saying no to SDI, we are saying a resounding yes, but we are saying let's don't make it a crash program."

Johnston's proposal has been publicly supported by 48 senators, or almost half the Republican-controlled Senate, but he admitted he doesn't know if it will pass, noting that the White House opposes his amendment.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., said he would vote for Johnston's plan, telling his colleague that Reagan's SDI program "is threatening a unilateral deployment of SDI. The president's course is tragic because the world would be safer if we and the Russians found a way to move jointly toward defense."

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., opposed deep cuts in SDI, saying "this would send a signal to the Soviets to dig in their heels" in the ongoing nuclear arms control talks. The Soviets have condemned SDI, arguing that it should be limited as part of a new atomic arms limitation treaty.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee and a strong supporter of Reagan's Pentagon buildup, told his colleagues that "with this budget, we are backwards, not forward, and we are undercutting the bipartisan achievement of the past five years."

Another major fight is expected over Reagan's May announcement that he will no longer be bound by the limits in the SALT II nuclear arms treaty when making decisions on building U.S. atomic arsenals.

Reagan said he would base such decisions only on national security considerations. Reagan has been a long-time critic of the unratified 1979 pact, although he had previously promised that his administration would honor its limits as long as the Soviets did likewise. He contends that the Soviets are continuing to violate the pact.

One pending Senate amendment was a non-binding measure urging the president to keep the United States within the SALT II limits.

NATION IN BRIEF

Defense contractors urged to disclose wrong-doings

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an effort to encourage defense contractors to voluntarily disclose wrong-doing, the Pentagon suggests that doing so may help the companies avoid being denied future Defense Department contracts.

The policy, outlined in a July 24 letter from Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV to 87 of the nation's largest defense contractors, does not offer contractors any guarantees if they report misconduct.

But it says "early voluntary disclosure, coupled with full cooperation and complete access to necessary records, are strong indications of an attitude of contractor integrity even in the wake of disclosures of potential criminal liability."

"We will consider such cooperation as an important factor in any decisions that the Department takes in the matter," said the letter, released Monday.

But Taft added that "any determinations of appropriate criminal and civil fraud sanctions will be the ultimate prerogative of the Department of Justice."

Benefits to aid veterans

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill authorizing a 2 percent increase in disability benefits to 2.3 million veterans moved through the House on a voice vote and was sent to the Senate.

The measure authorizing the cost-of-living adjustment of payments veterans receive for service-connected disabilities will cost an estimated $156 million for the 1987 fiscal year.

The increase, approved by the House Monday, would take effect Dec. 1. It would also apply to dependency and indemnity payments to widows and children of veterans who died as a result of service-connected injuries.

Rep. G.V. (Sonny) Montgomery, D-Miss., chairman of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, called the increase "a small-cost item but very important to the severely wounded service-connected veteran."

The Reagan administration, noting that the cost-of-living adjustment for Social Security beneficiaries is projected to be less than 2 percent, has indicated it will seek to lower the disabled veterans' COLA when the Senate considers the bill.

A provision that exempts certain disabled veterans benefits from future cuts under the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law has drawn a veto threat from the administration.

Sales royalty criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill to impose a royalty charge on tape recorder sales — to pay for the privilege of unlimited home copying of records and tapes — has run into heavy criticism in the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., the committee chairman, said he was glad the bill approved by a Judiciary subcommittee on May 21 eliminated a proposed royalty payment on blank tapes as well as taping equipment. But during hearings Monday he said he still had reservations about the bill.

"While I am sympathetic to the position the copyright owners are advancing, I am also concerned about the negative effects this will may have on other segments of the public such as consumers and retailers," Thurmond said.

The measure, sponsored chiefly by Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., is intended to provide compensation to composers, performers and music publishers for use of copyrighted works while assuring the public's right to tape audio recordings at home.

Although the legality of home audio taping is still a disputed issue, the widespread practice generally is considered lawful under copyright law if it is intended for personal use.

Officials: Two Mount Baker climbers buried in snow will never be found

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — Two mountain climbers buried under ice and snow by an avalanche on Mount Baker will probably never be found, and the site is too dangerous to keep searching, officials say.

"They are buried too deep," Rich Murphy, operations leader for Bellingham Mountain Rescue, said Monday.

Expedition guide Ian Kraabel, 23, son of Seattle City Councilman Paul Kraabel, and Steve Raschick, 21, of Enumclaw, were buried under car-sized blocks of ice and snow Sunday morning at the mountain's Roman Wall, 8,800 feet up the 10,778-foot North Cascades peak.

Their companions, Kurt Petellin, 21, and Tom Waller, 19, both of Enumclaw, were rescued Sunday.

Thirteen people equipped with specially trained avalanche dogs searched five hours Monday morning through up to 30 feet of wet snow, ice blocks and a crevasse.

"No further evidence was found to indicate anyone was alive in the area," said Jan Leonardo, Whatcom County Emergency Services coordinator.

Continued searching could trigger further snow and ice slides, officials said.

"We appreciate what they've done," said Kraabel.

On Sunday, rescuers found the rope that had joined the victims, and Kraabel's nylon harness. The sturdy harness "was just torn to pieces," said mountain rescue veteran Karl Winter.

Also found Sunday were a pack belonging to one of the rescued men and Kraable's ice ax.

Announced sanctions cause South African rand to fall

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The rand currency fell today following the announcement of harsh sanctions against South Africa by six Commonwealth nations and limited measures by Britain.

The Association of Chambers of Commerce of South Africa said in a statement that the Commonwealth sanctions are "counterproductive and potentially harmful."

South Africa's main financial newspaper, Business Day, said sanctions would only increase the government's resistance to changing its system of racial segregation known as apartheid.

The rand opened at 39 cents, then fell quickly to 38⅛ cents as financial experts tried to assess the potential impact of the sanctions announced at a seven-nation Commonwealth conference in London that ended early today.

Business Day, which generally reflects the views of South Africa's business community, said sanctions "will make matters worse."

"A government which yields to external coercion loses control of its future, and whites in South Africa fear nothing so much as a loss of control," said a Business Day editorial.

"Sanctions, therefore, will ensure that tentative changes of recent years will be replaced by a terrified, and therefore tenacious, resistance to change."

South Africa's ambassador in London, Denis Worrall, said Monday night in a televised interview with the South African Broadcasting Corp. that the international demands for change in South Africa "broke all the rules of democracy."

The Bureau for Economic Research at Stellenbosch University said in a report released today that confidence in the South African economy has fallen to its lowest level since World War II, and that stiffer sanctions were likely to place increasing strain on the nation's resources.

The research unit said South Africa's inflation rate was unlikely to drop below an average 17 percent for the current year.

The limited sanctions announced by Britain include an immediate voluntary ban on new investment in South Africa and on the promotion of tourism there. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher also promised to accept a ban on iron, steel and coal imports if it is agreed on next month by the Common Market. Britain is South Africa's largest trading partner.

The measures approved by Australia, the Bahamas, Canada, India, Zambia and Zimbabwe but opposed by Britain were the harshest yet taken against South Africa.

In addition to cutting air links, the six agreed to withdraw all consular facilities in South Africa except those dealing with their own nationals. Other measures included banning agricultural imports, ending government assistance for trade and banning imports of uranium, coal, iron and steel.

Meanwhile, six people were reported killed in fighting Monday between two Zulu tribal factions in northern Natal province.

The fighting, which claimed the lives of four men and two women, was sparked by disagreements over the proper dress to wear to a traditional ceremony, according to a journalist from Natal.

About 5,000 students and community residents staged a rally at the University of Durban on Monday to protest the detention of 11 students under South Africa's June 12 nationwide emergency decree, which allows police to arrest and hold people without charge for an unlimited period.

The emergency rules also prohibit journalists from reporting actions of security forces without permission, publishing "subversive statements" and revealing the names of people detained.

Private monitoring groups have estimated that up to 10,000 people have been held for various periods under the nationwide emergency regulations, which the government said it imposed to end racial unrest.

In London, the Church of England announced that the Rev. Robert Runcie, the archbishop of Canterbury, will visit South Africa Sept. 5-9 for the enthronement of Bishop Desmond Tutu as the Anglican archbishop of Cape Town.

Tutu will become the leader of the Anglican church in South Africa in the the Sept. 7 ceremony.

Tutu, who is now the bishop of Johannesburg, is the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize winner and an outspoken black critic of apartheid.

Bush tells Mubarak further aid unlikely

By GERALD M. BOYD
New York Times News Service

CAIRO, Egypt — Vice President George Bush met here Monday with President Hosni Mubarak and told him that domestic budget considerations would not allow the United States to provide additional aid to help Egypt meet pressing financial needs.

Bush held a two-hour private meeting with the Egyptian leader as he neared the end of a 12-day trip to the Middle East. He is to return to Washington late today.

Administration officials spent the day trying to work out language that would help clear the way for Egypt and Israel to resolve a dispute over the Taba beachfront area, a symbol of the chill in relations between the two countries since the signing of the Camp David peace accords. Late Monday, aides traveling with Bush were still holding out hope that some progress could be made, but were guarded in their predictions.

The vice president said after meeting with Mubarak that he would discuss the Taba dispute at a scheduled news conference today. But he cautioned that his remarks did not indicate that he expected to announce that a settlement would be reached.

U.S. officials had hoped that the Taba dispute could be resolved as a tangible example that Bush's trip had enhanced the prospects of peace in the region.

For their part, Egyptian officials had hoped to convince the United States that a strong American effort was needed to prevent a worsening of their country's financial problems.

Those problems have increased as falling world prices for crude oil and a decline in tourism has brought a decline in Egypt's revenue.

Bush said the United States did not want to impose additional "burdens" on the Egyptian people. But he said he had informed the Egyptian leader that U.S. budget restraints made further foreign aid unlikely.

The vice president, who described himself as "sympathetic," added, "I wasn't in a position to make any commitments on these different problems at this point."

"He was very convincing," Bush said. "I told him that I would go back and talk to the secretary of Treasury and of course the preident on these matters.

"There are certain things that we can do that we hope to jar loose. Regrettably, I have to inform these leaders that the United States is facing inordinately complicated budget times of our own."

"I didn't come here to cry poor mouth," Bush said, "but I think it's my responsibility to have foreign leaders understand that the U.S. is facing very difficulty budgetary times."

Blockade may affect plant operations

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Blockades of the international bridges linking this border city with El Paso, Texas, may slow down operations at twin plants if they continue, a U.S. businessman says.

Two of the four international bridges remained closed Monday in a protest by opposition party members against alleged election fraud. Organizers say the blockade will extend until at least 9 p.m. today.

Francisco Barrio, former Juarez mayor and opposition party gubernatorial candidate, led the Sunday takeover of the Bridge of the Americas, an important commercial crossing where the U.S. Customs Service and its Mexican counterpart keep import lots for inspecting cargo.

More than 1,000 trucks use the bridge daily carrying parts to assembly plants in Juarez and returning to U.S. factories with goods.

Bill Huskins, general manager for Taylor Instruments twin-plant operation, said the blockade has not had a severe impact on the maquiladora (machinery) industry so far.

"To my knowledge every plant has kept working," Huskins said. "We will survive if this is just temporary."

In the long run, however, such protests may have a severe impact on the twin plants, he said.

"A lot of national companies are keeping a close eye on this situation," Huskins said. "This is going to have an impact on the maquiladora industry in the future. It may affect future growth."

Huskins said automobile companies rely on day-to-day production and may move out of the area if the blockades continue.

"El Paso-Juarez used to have the best reputation in the country for twin-plant operations. Not anymore," Huskins said. "If it (political unrest) continues, who knows what will happen?"

Manuel Rivera, secretary of Mexico's National Action Party, PAN, in Juarez, said Monday the original plan to have the Bridge of the Americas and the Stanton Street bridge closed for 48 hours is still in effect.

However, Rivera says the 9 p.m. MDT deadline may be extended. "It all depends on what the electoral college does."

PAN staged the blockade Sunday night. On Monday, there were no reports of violence as the bridges remained closed. The two other bridges over the Rio Grande were handling heavy traffic.

PAN, as the party is known by its Spanish initials, claims there was fraud in July 6 elections in the state of Chihuahua.

In those elections, 14 state legislative seats and 67 mayoralties were up for vote. The ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, was declared winner in all races except two mayors' seats.

Party leaders hope the blockade will force the Mexican government to grant new elections, said Gustavo Elizondo, PAN mayoral candidate for Juarez. Federal officials in Mexico City have said there was not enough proof of fraud to call new elections.

"So far, both sides have shown considerable restraint," Henry V. McGehee, deputy district director for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in El Paso, said of the protesters and Mexican authorities.

"What people don't understand is that the PANistas, the people who are doing this, are a middle-class crowd. This is not a rabble-rousing sort of people," he added.

Philippine minister meets with rebel negotiators

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A government minister said he met today with two rebel negotiators to begin talks aimed at ending a 17-year communist insurgency in the Philippines.

Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra said he met with guerrilla representatives Satur Ocampo and Antonio Zumel "somewhere in Metro Manila," and the two rebels were accompanied by four unarmed bodyguards.

Mitra was the only representative of the government at the talks. Human Rights Commission Chairman Jose W. Diokno could not attend because he was in the United States for a medical examination.

Mitra said the two sides agreed that their meetings will be "peace talks" and not just negotiations on a cease-fire. He said that the two sides also agreed that the negotiations "will be informal and relaxed," and that a second round will be held shortly. "Throughout our conversation, I heard none of that communist rhetoric you usually hear. You know, statements about running dogs of the Americans," Mitra said, referring to frequent communist charges that Philippine political leaders are U.S. stooges.

Wings of peace

It might be said that the wings of peace take flight with bold actions.

That thought comes to mind in light of the unexpected meeting between Morocco's King Hassan II and Israel's Prime Minister Shimon Peres, a dramatic step toward reopening the doors of peace negotiations in the Middle East.

The meeting between the two leaders in Morocco is not expected to produce instant results, of course, but ironically it was reminiscent of the peace process initiated nearly nine years ago by Egypt's President Anwar el-Sadat. Hassan's welcoming of Peres is the most direct Arab overture to Israel since Sadat made his historic 1977 flight to Jerusalem to meet Prime Minister Menachem Begin and address the Knesset.

Significantly, the meeting was applauded by Egypt's moderate Arab leader, President Hosni Mubarak, who called it a "good initiative." He added another positive note by saying, "I did not speak with King Hassan, but I am confident that he is going to do his best for peace as a whole." He made an interesting comment to reporters about Syria's breaking diplomatic relations with Morocco because of the talks, saying that Syria's reaction was predictable, "so don't worry about it."

Israeli leaders naturally were elated. President Chaim Herzog called the talks a "breakthrough," and said: "we have passed the watershed of acceptance. This is tremendous progress in the subconsciousness of this area."

The State Department in Washington hailed "this courageous initiative by these two leaders — one which the United States strongly supports."

If the Middle East peace process seems to move slowly in the coming months, let's not forget that it took quite a while for Sadat and Begin to reach agreement. The important thing is that the process has been renewed.

Another View:
Garcia: Peril in Peru

One Year Later in Peru

Abruptly, the presidency of Alan Garcia in Peru has turned from promise to peril and he has mainly his own demagogy to blame. The bold young leader who last year proclaimed a limit on debt repayment and promised renewal for a fragmented society is himself falling victim to the economic and social pressures he hoped to reverse.

Although outsiders can help only at the margins, the United States and other hemisphere nations have a stake in the success of Peru's democracy. Its failure could send shock waves through Argentina, Brazil, Ecuador and Bolivia, where democrats struggle with similar problems.

Garcia, like most Latin democratic leaders, inherited a heavy debt. The conservative civilian government that preceded him fell more deeply into arrears by paying only when it could afford to. Garcia raised this practice into an "anti-imperialist" principle, alienating not only his creditors but als other debtors, who prefer responsibly negotiated relief.

Garcia also inherited a habitual abuse of human rights by the military and an insurgency by guerrillas who practice terrorism in the name of long-oppressed highland Indians. He promised social gains for Indians, negotiation with the guerrillas and punishment of the culpable commanders. But the social gains have not materialized, the guerrillas rejected negotiation and the commanders have mostly gone unpunished. Now Garcia has greatly extended the area of direct military control over security, covering 40 percent of the population.

The Garcia government has taken a tough stand against cocaine corruption of police officials. And its debt deferrals have somewhat reduced inflation. But on balance, the president has failed to satisfy the expectations he aroused and in the process has antagonized friends through the Americas.

Friends of democracy need to keep supporting him. They can also emphasize that democratic governments are ultimately judged not by their rousing speeches but by their concrete achievements.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1861, the federal government levied an income tax for the first time.

In 1884, the cornerstone was laid for the Statue of Liberty on Bedloe's Island in New York Harbor.

In 1914, the first electric traffic lights were installed, in Cleveland, Ohio.

In 1953, Operation Big Switch was under way as prisoners taken during the Korean Conflict were exchanged at Panmunjom.

In 1962, actress Marilyn Monroe was found dead of an overdose of sleeping pills in her Hollywood home. She was 36.

In 1963, the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union signed a treaty banning nuclear tests in the atmosphere, in space and underwater.

In 1974, President Richard M. Nixon stunned his supporters by admitting that six days after the Watergate burglary, he acted to obstruct the FBI's investigation for political as well as national security reasons.

In 1984, actor Richard Burton died of a cerebral hemmorhage at a hospital in Geneva, Switzerland, at age 58.

LETTERS
Looking back, looking in

Though it hardly seems possible, come Thursday, an entire generation has passed since Explorer VI transmitted the first picture of Earth back from space. That history-making event 25 years ago provided man with a likeness of his planet based on more than mere Earth measurements, projections and conjectures.

Even that picture, however, failed to show the kind of insights the Creator of the universe has had from the "beginning." While Explorer showed only the shape of the planet, God sees the shapes of men's hearts — their intents and desires. He sees certainly how far we've fallen from His ideal, how thoughtless we've become of each other, how prejudiced and without unity we are even in our own homes.

But he also sees what we can become, the potential which He has entrusted to each one, and the privilege He has allowed for our developing it. Before Him we are equal — male and female, American-born or adopted, educated or "dropped-out." We are equal because we are all His children even when we don't act like it.

It seems to me, thus, that this anniversary of man's seeing what the Earth is might also provide time for seeing what we are personally, a time for rebuilding our self-esteem, knowing that there's Someone who can see us — not only our world — for what we are. He calls us to "let your minds be remade and your whole nature thus transformed." (Romans 12:2 NEB).

The Old Testament has already told us that heart transplants are nothing new: "I will give you a new heart and put a new spirit within you," He promised and Ezekiel recorded. (Ezekiel 36:26 NEB)

I thank Him that it's possible, and I think that our world can stand to have some of us remade so we're better citizens at home, in the Church, and thoughout our community.

'Grambo' on Medigap flimflam trail

WASHINGTON — You've thrilled to Rambo. Gasped at Dirty Harry. Now we're pleased to introduce: GRAMBO, a Claude Pepper production.

Jack Anderson

Lillian Simmons is 86, a deceptively mild-mannered widow and grandmother. Instead of baking chocolate chip cookies and rocking quietly on the front porch, she recently moved from Nevada to Washington, D.C., and took up undercover work for a congressional subcommittee investigating the high-pressure tactics of some health-insurance salesmen.

Simmons is one of several elderly volunteers recruited by Rep. Pepper, D-Fla., the 85-year-old chairman of the Select Committee on Aging's Subcommittee on Health and Long-Term Care. The targets of the gray-haired gumshoes are unscrupulous insurance hucksters who try to frighten or flimflam elderly Americans into buying more "Medigap" coverage than they need.

Medigap policies perform an important function, paying the sometimes significant difference between the government's Medicare coverage and the actual cost of hospital and other health care. About 75 percent of all Americans over 65 have these supplementary policies.

Simmons set up interviews with 12 health-insurance salesmen, asking their advice on Medigap coverage. Except for using a variety of domestic settings, her technique was to disarm, not dissemble. She simply showed them her authentic Medigap insurance policy and let them take it from there. Two subcommittee staffers, posing as friends or relatives, took notes and surreptitious films of the salesmen's spiels.

The results are in a report to be issued later this week by the subcommittee. Our associate Stewart Harris got a preview of the report; here's what "Grambo" Simmons and her sidekicks reported:

— One salesman tried to sell Simmons a policy that would cost more than $1,000 a year. But he failed to tell her that the policy could expire in 10 years whether she had used it or not. "So essentially," the report noted, "she could pay up to $11,000 in 10 years and have the policy canceled before she used it."

— Scare tactics were used by one salesman, who told Simmons about a friend in Florida who was hit with $30,000 in uninsured medical bills — a calamity that would have been prevented by the Medigap policy he was pushing. But the salesman told Simmons a potentially ruinous lie: He said coverage began six weeks after she paid the first premium. The fine print revealed that coverage wouldn't start for six months.

— One salesman ducked all questions about his policy's coverage — or non-coverage — of nursing home care and treatment for Alzheimer's disease. He also neglected to tell Simmons that his policy, though costing $400 a year more, would not cover prescription drugs, pre-existing conditions or overseas health care, as her current policy did.

— Another poorly prepared salesman resorted to fast talk, explaining that he couldn't answer her questions because he rarely sold the particular policy she was interested in. Then he explained that he had run out of brochures on the policy because it was such a hot item.

— Only one of the 12 salesmen told Simmons her present Medigap coverage was adequate. He told her his company couldn't do any better. "You're OK with what you've got," were his parting words.

SOMETHING ROTTEN: The Reagan administration stopped federally funded hospital testing of disinfectants in 1982, and only four states have had testing programs since. The rest rely on manufacturers' claims. Random sampling in 1982 showed that 20 percent of the supposed germ-killers didn't work — and since then 3,300 untested disinfectants have come on the market. Florida, which still tests, found "large numbers of bacteria growing in the disinfectant that was supposed to kill them." The American Society for Microbiology estimated last year that 2 million people are infected in hospitals every year, and 20,000 of them die.

SCANDAL OF THE WEEK: Without any explanation, the Justice Department has reversed itself on a matter that could affect many Americans who have been fleeced by con artists or racketeers. In proposed legislation sent to Congress late last month, the department recommended barring civil suits for fraud and racketeering until the perpetrators had been convicted in criminal proceedings. In June the Justice Department assured us that it supported victims' rights to sue under a 16-year-old law. An attorney for Public Citizen called the turnaround "particularly outrageous" at a time when white-collar crime costs U.S. citizens $200 billion a year.

EVANS & NOVAK

Grain sale to USSR: an eye on November

WASHINGTON — Just before the announcement of subsidized grain sales to the Soviet Union, a senior Western diplomat warned a White House policy-maker it would open the credit and high-tech floodgates between Europe and the Soviet Union that President Reagan has struggled to keep shut the past six years.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The warning underlined stunned allied reaction that the president would even consider commerical credits for Moscow, violating the spirit of the Jackson-Vanik human rights amendment on Jewish emigration. They see Reagan presiding over the dissolution of American influence as leader of the Western alliance. His moral and political power to stop allies from transferring other kinds of wealth to Moscow has ended.

Even if the step retains Republican control of the Senate in this fall's campaign, Reagan's retreat from long-preached principles about how to handle the Soviets has a high price tag. When Western European nations follow suit by pressing for technological trade with Moscow, predictable U.S. protests will be met by European anger and allied disunity.

If his ear was deaf to these prospects, the president had no trouble understanding the warnings of his domestic political operatives. He heard that 12 to 14 of the closest Senate races would be favorably affected by massive grain sales to the Russians, invisibly paid for by American taxpayers. He was told it would have "substantial" impact in electing Republican incumbents or candidates in at least six states (from North Dakota down to Louisiana).

Senate Majority Leader Robert J. Dole, point man for the grain deal, clashed with Secretary of State George Shultz over the issue and advised him to set up "an American desk" at the State Department. Reagan's private note to Dole showed where the president's heart really is. There is an American desk and it's me, Reagan wrote the majority leader after deciding to give the Russians hundreds of millions of dollars worth of grain subsidies.

Shultz battled vainly against the political tide swamping the Oval Office but suffered one of his few defeats in his four years as steward of Reagan's diplomacy. Indeed, it was one of the few he has sustained on any major issue.

Fresh from persuading Reasgan to put the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) on the arms control bargaining table, Shultz had opposed the grain deal on fairly narrow, mercantile grounds. He warned that it would turn major grain producers, particularly Australia and Canada, as well as rice-raising Thailand and the sugar-growing Philippines, against the U.S.

He also warned that it would hand high cards to Western Europe, especially West Germany, dreaming of markets in the Soviet Union lubricated with Western credits. Aggressive commercial interests on the continent, backed by their governments, long have tried to elude American restraints on high-tech and strategic trade with the technologically lagging Soviets.

But it was not Shultz or the State Department leading the fight against the Europeans in 1981 to stop shipments of oil-drilling machinery for the Soviet gas pipeline. The vanguard was composed of Reaganauts in the Pentagon plus a few in the White House. They know now that the weapon to fight similar battles in the future has been taken out of their hands. "This is a turning point, no doubt about it," one U.S. official with long Soviet experience told us.

Reagan last week was specifically reminded of the 1975 Jackson-Vanik amendment, which by tieing credit for Moscow to free emigration of Soviet Jews is one of the most important human rights acts ever passed by Congress. He ignored it, giving Gorbachev access to American taxpayer credits.

Reagan's mind was not on a breach with the spirit of Jackson-Vanik but on the November election. That is the mindset of Reaganaut hard-liners in Congress, who rationalize grain subsidies for the "evil empire" on grounds that Reagan's hard-nosed Soviet policies would be cut out from under him if the Democrats took control of the Senate.

This argument also sold the president. But to America's grain-exporting allies and to the Western Europeans, who can taste new and lucrative trade deals with Moscow, the U.S. has ceded its preeminence as conscience of the West's relations with the Soviet Union. Meanwhile, Mikhail Gorbachev gets his grain and the promise of Western discord as well.

CHARLEY REESE

Lost confidence in superiority kills empires

I was musing the other night over why the British Empire rose and fell. A thought occurred to me that, if true, has relevance for our own situation in this waning century.

Charley Reese

Bear in mind that human beings exist only as individuals, so the rise and fall of empires have very much to do with the psychology of the individuals who run the institutions of empire.

The thought I had was that the necessary quality to build an empire is a belief in one's superiority and that as soon as you no longer believe you are superior, you no longer can maintain an empire.

It seems to me the only thing that can justify in our own minds forcibly taking someone else's land and controlling its lives is a deeply held conviction that we are superior people or propagators of a superior creed or philosophy.

The Roman certainly believed he was superior and he had no hesitation about extending the benefits of Roman civilization to other people at the point of a sword. Both Christians and Muslims have in times past been so convinced of the superiority of their respective religions that they felt compelled to spread the word, even with the sword. The British in the ascendancy stage of their empire certainly believed they were doing little brown and black people a favor by bringing the superior British rule to their countries.

We have felt the same way during the period of our expansion. We could justify ousting Spaniards, Indians and Frenchmen because we deeply believed that we as a people were superior.

Now for the relevance. In the Western democracies today, people as a whole who run our institutions no longer feel superior. We are, in fact, philosophically opposed to the concept of superiority. We condemn racism, chauvinism, jingoism, nationalism and religious fundamentalism. We have embraced totally the concept of egalitarianism. Consequently we have no empires. We are retreating rather than expanding.

Even though the industrial nations still have the economic and military power to re-colonize much of the Third World, they have no inclination to do so. This thorough acceptance of egalitarianism is, I think, the principal motivation for the extraordinary hostility toward South Africa which, aside from its racism, is a far more humane government than most of those in Africa and certainly more so than the Soviet Union and China.

In the world today, only two forces continue to generate a firm belief in superiority — communism and Islam. Naturally both are expansionist — Islam in Africa and communism everywhere. Committed believers in either have that same deeply held conviction that their system is so superior that it justifies self-sacrifice on their part and sacrifice of non-believers who resist.

The question is, can people with no belief in their own superiority withstand people convinced of their superiority? If history is any indication of the future, the answer is no. In a contest, tolerance is no match for intolerance: moderates usually get killed by extremists. People with a live-and-let-live attitude have a difficult time generating the motivation to make sacrifices or to attack enemies until the situation forces them to and by then it's too late.

So another question arises: How can we, without reverting to attitudes of superiority we no longer sanction or believe in, motivate ourselves to resist people who are compelled by their belief in their superiority to impose their will on us?

I don't know, but I suggest we had better think about this problem. It ought to be possible to devise a set of values in which people could believe to the point of being motivated to preserve those values without being compelled to jam them down other people's throats. It ought to be possible but I'm not sure it is. Otherwise we'd better pray communism loses its own faith in its superiority sooner rather than later.

Late lawmaker's friends remember

By PAUL STEVENS

CHILLICOTHE, Mo. (AP) — Friends and followers of Jerry Litton, a U.S. congressman killed 10 years ago in a plane crash, say fate may have robbed Missouri of its second U.S. president.

A skilled communicator with boyish good looks and a ready smile, Litton was a natural before the television cameras and had organizational abilities and a work ethic acquired as a rancher that made him popular with his constituents.

On the night of his death, Aug. 3, 1976, Litton had just won the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate seat vacated by Stuart Symington.

Had he lived, some who knew him speculate, he would be in the U.S. Senate today and carefully mapping the next step in his political career: a campaign for the White House.

"He certainly had the ability and talent to accomplish that goal," said Ed Turner, a Chillicothe businessman who was Litton's administrative assistant in Congress from 1972 to 1975.

"While he never told me that this was his goal, I think all of us assumed that it was the end of the rainbow," he said.

Litton and his family had left Chillicothe Airport for a short flight to Kansas City to celebrate his primary victory when an engine failed on takeoff and the aircraft crashed into a soybean field.

All aboard were killed, including Litton, 39; his wife, Sharon, 38; their daughter, Linda, 13; and son, Scott, 12; as well as the pilot, Paul Rupp Jr., who was a family friend, and his son, Paul III.

U.S. Congressman Jerry Litton was killed 10 years ago in a small plane crash. Friends and supporters say his goal was to one day run for the presidency.

Former Gov. Warren Hearnes, one of those defeated by Litton in the primary, ran and lost in the general election against Republican John Danforth, who narrowly won re-election in 1982.

Danforth said he agreed with a Republican pollster who told him after the election that it would have been a close race if Litton had opposed him.

"I mean, he was quite a remarkable politician, very able, very articulate, charismatic even," Danforth said.

Two months after the tragedy, at a memorial dinner in Litton's honor in Kansas City, Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter outlined what he thought was key to Litton's success.

"Jerry Litton had, with a great sensitivity, figured out a unique way, unprecedented in the history of this country, to stay close to folks back home," Carter said.

Carter said he told his wife, Rosalynn, "I have just met a young man who shocked me and who startled me and who inspired me. And I believe that someday he has a good chance to be president of the United States, because there is something about him that is unique."

Litton was born in Lock Springs, Mo., into a farm family.

As a national Future Farmers of America officer, he met with the only Missourian to gain the U.S. presidency, Harry Truman, at Truman's Independence home and told the former president of his ambitions for a career in government. Truman advised him to work his way up through either politics or business.

Litton chose the latter. He and his father parlayed a $20,000 loan, acquired in 1957 by mortgaging everything they had, into a top cattle breeding operation.

They sold the ranch for $3.4 million shortly after Litton was elected to Congress in 1972, and Litton put his share into a trust to avoid any conflict of interest.

Litton served two terms in Congress, winning re-election in 1974 with the highest vote total in the district's history.

Today, the Jerry L. Litton Visitors Center at Smithville Lake, just north of Kansas City, features memorabilia from his childhood through his congressional years. It attracted about 100,000 visitors last year.

The University of Missouri, where Litton majored in agricultural journalism, is home to his congressional papers, and a wing of the Animal Sciences Research Center is named in his honor.

A film produced by Litton in 1975, "Food Prices Too High — Compared To What?," which addressed the need for farmers to educate congressmen and consumers about farm problems, still is shown occasionally to farm groups.

"He could communicate about agriculture and put it in terms anyone could understand," said Wayne Cryts, a Puxico farmer who is seeking the Democratic nomination for the 8th District congressional seat.

The film is 11 years old, Cryts said, "but what he said in it rings true today."

Animal keeper next best thing to mother

CINCINNATI (AP) — Armed with baby bottles and a world of patience, Carol Schottelkotte works to persuade an array of zoo animals that she is the next best thing to mother.

But she isn't aiming to replace the animals' real mothers.

Ms. Schottelkotte, one of two animal keepers in the children's zoo section of the Cincinnati Zoo, assumes care and feeding of any animal in the children's zoo which has been abandoned by its mother. Her task begins by trying to get the disoriented, young animal to accept her and to become willing to suck from the nipple of an infant bottle she offers.

"A lot of times, it's just persistence," Ms. Schottelkotte said of her mission. "Normally, once you get the first nipple response out of them, they figure out what's going on."

The keepers take over care and feeding only when they are unable to persuade the real mother to assume its maternal and feeding responsibilities. It is preferable to have the mother do the job, Ms. Schottelkotte said.

"We go through all kinds of incredible things to keep the animals with the mother," she said. "They grow up to know their species."

She and fellow nursery keeper Frank Hoffman have cared for everything from unwanted sea lions, gorillas and white tigers to tree shrews and rhinoceroses.

Taking over the mother's duties isn't easy unless the young animal has been removed from its mother within the first few days of life. After that, young animals begin to realize they are wild and that humans are foreign beings with a strange smell, Ms. Schottelkotte said.

She is currently caring for three young, white Bengal tigers which bare their teeth and shrink from humans when approached. The mother refused to let her young nurse, but they were not old enough to be weaned.

The keepers, who also clean the animals' cages and help maintain the zoo grounds, have raised the young tigers by encouraging them to eat from bowls of milk and plates of meat placed in their cage.

"You can't just reach out and pet them," Ms. Schottelkotte said.

To clean the tigers' cage, the keepers open a door at one end and chase the tigers into another cage, offering the animals a way out so they won't opt to attack keepers.

While reporters watched, Ms. Schottelkotte bottle-fed a 3-week-old sea lion named Splash. The animal occasionally sucked at the bottle, then flopped off on its flippers to playfully nip at the shoes of visitors.

Ms. Schottelkotte said the sea lion's mother refused to continue feeding Splash, but did not take kindly to humans who tried to assume responsibility.

"Female sea lions can be very, very aggressive, especially when they're with child," Ms. Schottelkotte said. "She was real defensive toward us, so it was real hard for us to even take him out and check on him."

The Atomic Industrial Forum suggests tourists visit nuclear power plants on their vacation. "Many Americans are concerned about the accident at the Soviet nuclear power plant. A visit to one of ours will provide an opportunity to learn first-hand about U.S. safety features," says Carl Walske, president of AIF.

Power trade group recommends visit to nuclear power plant

By GUY DARST

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Atomic Industrial Forum wants you to visit a nuclear power plant on your vacation trip this summer.

Are you sure?

Honest.

How long has this been going on?

Well, last year. And the year before that. At least they mailed out press releases about it both times, and again this year.

And what happened?

"Before, it disappeared without a trace," said spokesman Scott Peters. "But this year the three of us have probably done a dozen radio and television interviews."

And what do people say?

"The reaction is, 'Are you crazy? I don't want to go near a nuke plant.' "

And what do you say to that?

"Absolutely, go visit one. Demystify it. There's a lot you can learn."

What can you learn?

Well, according to the press release Peters and his colleague put out, "Many Americans are concerned about the accident at the Soviet nuclear power plant. A visit to one of ours will provide an opportunity to learn first-hand about U.S. safety features," to quote Carl Walske, president of AIF.

Surely there's more to it than that?

To quote Walske again: "One of the reasons Americans are taking to the highways this summer is the abundance, and low cost, of gasoline. OPEC officials themselves acknowledge that nuclear energy is responsible for the permanent loss of market for about 6 million barrels a day of OPEC oil. What better time than this to learn how it happened?"

The forum, a major trade group of utilities, supplier companies and others involved in nuclear power, has published a pamphlet listing 89 "energy information centers" in the United States and Canada, most of them at utility plants, 54 of them nuclear.

The pamphlet advises calling or writing ahead for information about fees, hours and facilities — some places have picnic tables and things like that available.

Of the nuclear plants, the Three Mile Island visitors' center was the most popular in 1984, the most recent year for which figures have been compiled, with 85,000 visitors. Overall, a million people visited nuclear plants that year and half a million visited other utility installations.

Don't want to visit a nuke?

Then you can pick from the other visitor centers: 10 general, eight research, six hydroelectric dams, six coal plants, three pumped storage plants, two museums, one general fossil, two nuclear breeder centers, one of them a historic site, one solar and one distribution center (this doesn't add up to 89 because of duplications).

"Distribution center?"

Yes. The New York Power Control Center at 3890 Carman Road in Schenectady. It got 2,000 visitors in 1984.

And what will I see if I go there?

"It's a big control room with dozens of computer screens, and guys sitting there watching the flow of electricity," said Les Ramsey of AIF.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The pamphlet is available through the Atomic Industrial Forum, Inc., Public Affairs and Information Program, 7101 Wisconsin Ave., Bethesda, Md. 20814-4891; 301-654-9260.

Not many people took manure

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Circus elephant keeper Joseph Curran says his charges produce the most impressive fertilizer in the world, but his "Mammoth Manure Giveaway" had few takers.

The elephant manure has produced tomatoes "so big I was afraid to eat 'em," said Curran, 34, who travels with Ringling Bros. Barnum & Bailey Circus, feeding and cleaning up after 20 Asian elephants.

But his fertilizer giveaway attracted only a herd of flies last weekend at the Anaheim Convention Center.

"We don't get many people around here who want this stuff," said Curran. "But I've actually seen people fight over it in other places we've been."

The organic matter, which should be left outside to compost for a few months, is a good fertilizer because it has high concentrations of calcium and nitrates, circus officials say.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — There was a frog feasting in front of a platter holding two human legs, and a dragon eating a warrior — but they were just entries in a casino-hotel's sixth annual sand sculpture contest.

The 107 contestants in last Sunday's event, sponsored by the Golden Nugget, had three hours to perfect their creations, some of which were as tall as 6 feet.

The best-of-show prize went to defending champion David Drotleff, 26, of Mays Landing for his sand sculpture "Home by the Sea," an octopus whose tentacles were shaped like marine life, including a whale.

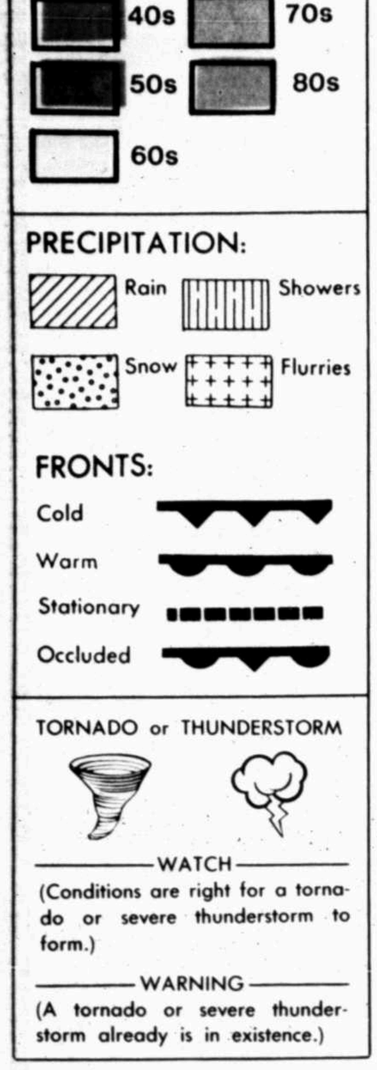
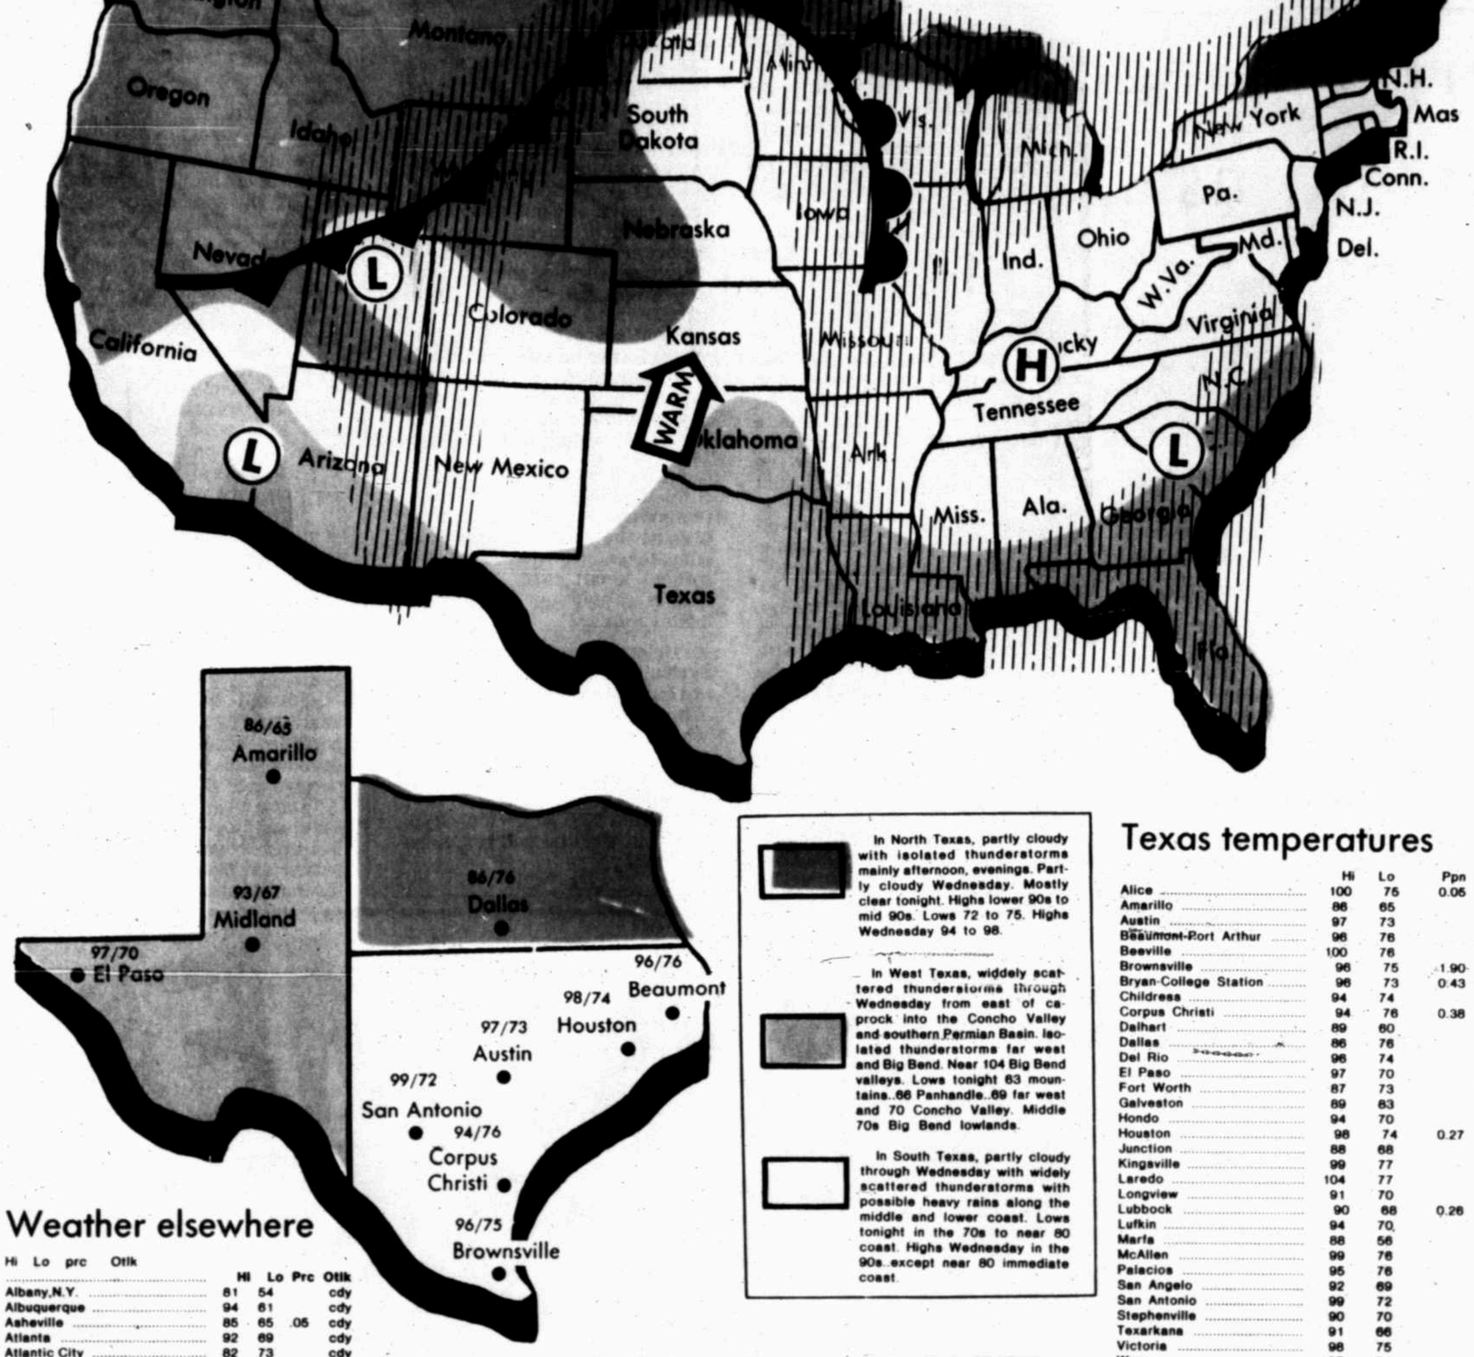
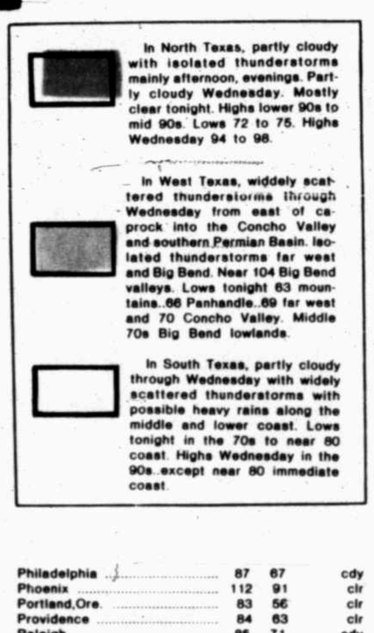
WEATHER SUMMARY







Fair skies in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair skies and warm temperatures are in the National Weather Service forecast for Wednesday. The NWS at Midland Regional Airport is calling for a high in the middle 90s.

The NWS forecasters are predicting a low in the upper 60s tonight with fair skies. Light winds will be out of the south tonight, becoming stronger at 10-20 mph on Wednesday.

The 93-degree high felt in Midland Monday was 11 degrees below the record high set for the date in 1944. This morning's low of 67 was six degrees above the record low set for this date in 1978.

STATE

A weak weather disturbance drifting over the western Gulf of Mexico brought scattered showers and thunderstorms early today along the lower Texas coast, and more precipitation was expected later.

The disturbance southeast of Brownsville triggered thunderstorms, some producing heavy rain, just offshore along the coastal plains in the Gulf. A high-pressure ridge centered over the east coast built westward across the state. Skies were fair over most of Texas, with some scattered high level clouds. Skies were partly cloudy to mostly cloudy along the coast.

Winds were light and variable over much of South Texas and southerly to southwesterly elsewhere at 5 to 10 mph.

It should be fair to partly cloudy through Wednesday with a chance of isolated to widely scattered showers and thunderstorms over most sections of the state.

NATION

Rain dotted sections of the West, Midwest and South today but much of the nation was under clear skies.

Weather disturbances moving across the northern and central Plains sent showers and thunderstorms across the Dakotas, central Plains and lower Missouri Valley.

Showers and thundershowers were scattered across the southern High Plains, the central and southern Rockies, and Arizona; from the Carolinas to Florida, and from the upper Mississippi Valley to the upper Great Lakes.

Clear skies prevailed from the southern Great Lakes and Ohio Valley to the middle Atlantic Coast and New England; from the Tennessee Valley to the lower Mississippi Valley and Alabama; and across Washington, Oregon and California.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms scattered across the Rockies.

'Headstart' Oilers ready for Rams

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

SAN ANGELO — Thanks to "Operation Headstart," the Houston Oilers are more than ready for their first preseason game at 9 p.m. today with the Los Angeles Rams at the Big A in Anaheim, Calif., says first-year head coach Jerry Glanville.

And because the Oilers, who are spending their ninth straight summer in this West Texas city, began their work in June and July, Glanville expects his offense to be at nearly full stride against the National Football Conference champion Rams.

"Because we did so much early in the summer, thanks to 'Operation Headstart,' we don't have a lot left to put in our offense. We were ready to go last Friday," Glanville said.

This is Glanville's first summer in charge of the Oiler operation, though he has spent the past two seasons as Houston's defensive coordinator. Glanville became the fourth Oiler head coach since 1980 when Bum Phillips was dismissed by replacing Hugh Campbell with two games remaining in the 1985 season.

GLANVILLE is hoping 1986 will be Houston's first winning season since Phillips' glory days.

Just the fact that Glanville survived owner Bud Adams' and General Manager Ladd Herzeg's nationwide offseason search for a replacement gives him a fighting chance. And turning this perennial cellar-dweller into a contender in the AFC Central, by far the weakest division in the AFC, would take little more than a .500 record.

Glanville may have the toughness and resiliency to do it. More importantly, the Oilers may finally have the talent to reach the playoffs for the first time since 1980.

After sorely depleting their draft acquisitions through trades in the late 1970s and early 1980s (Houston did not have a No. 1 pick in 1979-81), the Oilers have restocked some bare cupboards in recent drafts.

Many of those players are now reaching the experience level necessary to compete Sunday after Sunday, especially on the line of scrimmage where rookies are seldom effective.

"We are at the point where we have no real glaring holes, but we know we need players that will continue to upgrade us," Glanville says.

The return of massive offensive guard Dean Steinkuhler (6-3, 273) after sitting out 1985 with a knee injury should help the offensive line, an area badly in need of shoring up. Now with Steinkuhler (No. 1 1984), Mike Munchak (No. 1 1982) and Bruce Matthews (No. 1 1983) quarterback Warren Moon may get a reprieve from last year's 58-sack season.

For Moon, the Canadian Football League's all-time leading passer, this is a pivotal season. A disappointing 8-24 mark since taking charge has left a somber cloud hanging over Houston's Moon.

The organization showed its concern with the 29-year-old signal-caller by drafting Purdue's Jim Everett with the third pick overall in the April draft. But with Everett, who had been expected to push Moon for the starting job, still a hold-out, Moon will open his third season with the Oilers.

There is also likely to be more of a running slant to the 1986 version of the Oilers as Glanville brings a more conservative approach to offense than the multiple formation offense of Campbell, a protege of the air-it-out Canadian Football League.

THE OILERS were more than just deficient running the ball in 1985, they were inadequate. Only one time did an Oiler top the 100-yard mark (101 by Butch Woolfolk against the Chiefs). The team average was just over 98 yards per game.

But with USFL star Mike Rozier able to enjoy a typical off season of rest, the ex-Heisman Trophy winner could explode for a banner season. Last year Rozier gained a disappointing 462 yards after playing 18 games with the Orlando Renegades in the spring, then jumping into the 16-game NFL schedule in the fall.

Glanville also needs fullback Larry Moriarty to bounce back from a sub-par season (381 yards) while Butch Woolfolk and Notre Dame rookie Allen Pinkett fill in as third backs and extra receivers.

Against the Rams, Glanville's new look offense should get a stiff test. It may indicate just what kinds of changes we can expect for the Oilers in 1986.

Prescribed '9' right dose for Angels

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Midland manager Joe Maddon didn't want to admit it, but in pregame conversation he said it might take nine runs to beat the Dodgers Monday night.

Admit it or not, the Angels did score nine runs and it turned out to be just enough to chalk up a 9-8 Texas League victory at Angels Stadium. It was Midland's second win in a row over the first-place Dodgers and left the two teams with a series tie-breaker tonight at 7:30.

Righthanded relievers Terry Clark, 8-2, and DeWayne Buice combined to stop the Dodgers and helped ease the tension surrounding the club in recent days. It was only the third win in the last 12 games for the Angels and the slide was beginning to take its toll on the club.

Sunday night a scuffle broke out in the Midland dugout, then in the sixth, tempers flared on the field and an all-out brawl ensued. But Midland came back to win that game and the comebacks continued Monday as the Angels rallied from deficits of 5-0 and 6-1 for the win.

STILL, MADDON had an inclination that the going might be rough early.

"This is a tough ballpark for a control-type left-hander to pitch in," Maddon said, referring to starter Mike Romanovsky who was roughed up for six runs in 4⅓ innings of work. "My feeling is that you have to have power as a lefty to pitch in this park. A command pitcher relies on control and defense. And here, if it's hit on the ground it's going to get through the infield. If it's in the air, then you're in for even more trouble."

UT's Fred Akers has engines running at full throttle

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

If Fred Akers is the beleaguered head football coach of the University of Texas, he isn't showing it as time nears for preseason drills.

In fact, he comes at you with chin up and engines full steam ahead as he stumps around the state facing alumni groups.

Akers was in Midland Monday to meet with Texas exes at the Plaza Club in ClayDesta Plaza. If he is facing keen pressure with his job on the line, it's not the impression you come away with.

Akers faces a lot of problems heading into the 1986 season. His program is being investigated by the NCAA. He fired several members of his coaching staff last spring following a brutal loss to Air Force in the Bluebonnet Bowl and one assistant coach, David McWilliams, left the UT campus to become head coach at Texas Tech. Akers is also facing a lot of pressure to produce a championship this time around from UT fans across the state.

But Akers would rather keep his comments to football and he is carrying his new coaching staff with him around the state to insure that UT fans have exposure to the new staff he has created.

Is he facing pressure?

"No," is Akers' simple reply. "No more than usual."

He adds nothing more to his problems at hand, giving the impression that his talking will come from his players on the football field.

Akers has hired Paul Jette from Miami as the new Longhorn defensive coordinator and raided Georgia Tech for Dwayne Painter as his new offensive coordinator.

"Our fans probably won't see much difference on defense since we will still be using the 4-3 defense. There will be some changes defensively, but they may not be as noticeable to the average fan," said Akers.

However, offensively, Akers says that most fans will see a difference with Painter's influence.

"We'll have a lot more movement on offense. We'll throw more and use more formations," said Akers. "I think you will see a difference."

Akers' has also added Bill Hicks of Howard Payne to coach the defensive tackles, Vanderbilt's Bob Stanley for the offensive line, North Texas State's Bobby Jack Wright for the running backs and South Carolina's Bill Michaels to coach the linebackers.

Hicks spent time at Baylor under Grant Teaff while Stanley is a former West Texan and Michaels was a former head coach at UTEP. It's a staff Akers feels can turn the Longhorns into a major contender.

Holdovers are Dean Campbell, who has moved to coaching wide receivers instead of the secondary; Tommy Reaux, defensive ends; and Scott Walker, who will take the tight ends. Walker was a graduate assistant last year, but will be full time this year.

Writers across the state are picking Texas A&M and Baylor as the two league teams to beat in the Southwest Conference this year, but Akers thinks his Longhorns will be in the fight.

"I don't necessarily agree with the writers. A&M and Baylor are certainly class teams, but I think Arkansas and us are in the same boat with them. TCU may have as much talent as anyone. It's going to be a competitive conference," says Akers.

Texas' preseason drills begin later this month and Akers is ready to go to work.

"We had good enthusiasm from the team this spring and we expect that to carryover when they report. There is no reason that shouldn't be the case," said Akers.

Akers will be counting heavily on two players from Odessa this fall.

"Britt Hager is the cornerstone of our defense at linebacker and Charles Hunter is a proven veteran," noted Akers.

"We won't know until we see them some more, but we do have a concern at the linebacker positions. Hager is the only experience we have there. We won't know if that is going to be a weakness or not until we get drills started."

It would seem that victories are what Akers needs at this point and that's the challenge he seems willing to accept.

Bleak SWC picture brightens

Considering reports of impending doom, one had to wonder if the season would be worth the effort.

Drugs, Proposition 48 and, most of all, the ravages of scandal, the booster payoffs and the ominous threat of what was to come once the NCAA finished poking into the closets were enough to paint a bleak picture for the SWC, no matter how many gifted lettermen Texas A&M might return.

Forecasters were preposterous, of course, when they predicted Rice might be the only SWC member eligibile for the Cotton Bowl come New Year's Day, but they weren't completely sure that there might not be more than a grain of truth in what has become the most popular offseason running gag. 'Tis feared it might indeed be trite but true.

So why even bother with a Kickoff luncheon? That was the feeling going into last week's gathering of coaches and media in Dallas.

IF THE coaches have given up, it didn't show. As a matter of fact, one writer who arrived in Dallas a cynic left wondering when the SWC had it so good.

"Last year we had 26 seniors and a heck of a good team," pointed out Arkansas' Ken Hatfield. "because the seniors played like seniors." The 1986 team may not have the same experience, "but it's a team that has potential. Our problem is we have to gain seasoning quickly for our young players....." leaving the impression that there are no limits if the Razorbacks mature quickly.

As for the overall SWC outlook and its ability to hold its own nationally, Hatfield notes, "A&M, Baylor and Texas have more previous starters back than anybody."

BILL YEOMAN has been at Houston so long that linebacker star Bobby Brezina is the son of the captain of Yeoman's first UH team 25 years ago. While the turmoil surrounding the Cougar program has been such that the future of the program seems to be in question, Yeoman reflects none of the uncertainty.

"We will have more players who can run this year. We are anxious to see how our defense reacts," says Yeoman, who obviously thinks his defense will be damned good. "The team that plays defense is in good position to win."

One of the Cougars' problems last year was that 11 times it took possession inside its own 10, "and you are not going to drive that kind of distance on people these days."

With what it has back, Yeoman rates the Aggies the obvious favorites but notes, "SMU's Two Techniques are the fastest around. Don't figure SMU out of anything.

"Really, I think there is a chance for more good teams in the conference than there has been in quite some time."

BAYLOR'S GRANT Teaff, who doesn't have to make a case for his Bears, already conceded one of the nation's top 20, sees "four or five teams in the thick of the race and after three or four weeks, you will see three, four, maybe five, teams ranked in the top 20."

Teaff's big problem this year is that he has just one quarterback, senior Cody Carlson, who shared the spot with Tom Muecke in recent seasons when it was a "question of finding out who's hot and who's cold. Fortunately, neither was very cold very often."

ANGELS

Romanovsky, who escaped a decision thanks to eight Angel runs in the fifth, sixth and seventh innings, found out just how precarious Angels Stadium can be for a lefty in the third inning.

Already leading 1-0, San Antonio staged a four-run, two-out rally to take a commanding 5-0 lead. Mike Ramsey started it with a single, his second of three hits. Shortstop Lenny Faedo hit a single into the right-center field gap and the fleet Ramsey came all the way from first to score.

But the Dodgers were just getting started. Michael Devereaux continued the inning with a single, then dangerous Tracy Woodson stepped to the plate and hit a 2-0 delivery from Romanovsky over the fence in left-center, his 14th of the year, giving the Dodgers a big lead.

IT WASN'T big enough, however, as the Angels began chipping away off San Antonio starter Bill Brennan in their half of the third. Catcher Steve Liddle tapped the first of two run-scoring singles to plate Pat Keedy.

But Midland didn't begin the real damage until the fifth. Trailing by five again, 6-1, the Angels rallied for two runs. Pete Coachman, Keedy and James Randall all singled, leading to one run, then Liddle banged one up the middle to cut it to 6-3.

In the sixth, the Angels chased Brennan with two more runs. Brian Brady doubled to lead it off, then after a sacrifice by Jeff Schaefer, Coachman brought Brady in with a sacrifice fly. Keedy continued a fine day at the plate with a solo homer.

In the seventh, with Clark on in relief of Romanovsky and Sherman Corbett and the score 7-5, the Angels went ahead to stay with four runs, three of Hector Heredia, 2-5. The big blow was a two-run double by newly-acquired Dave Montanari scoring Liddle and Kevin King. Schafer plated the game-winner with his first hit of the night.

MONTANARI HAS bounced around A leagues for nearly four years as property of the Chicago Cubs organization. The Angels picked him up in 1985, mainly on Maddon's word.

"He's here basically because of what he did with the bat against me in the Midwest League a few years ago," Maddon said. "He personally kept us out of the playoffs while he was playing with Quad City and I was in Peoria.

"He's got one of the best strokes in the organization. He's got a flat stroke and is a pure hitter," Maddon said of the lefthanded swinger.

Once Montanari and Schaefer put the Angels on top, it was Buice's turn to pick up his 14th save. Clark opened the eighth by walking Ken Harvey and hitting Joe Szekely with a pitch and Maddon made the call for his ace. Buice retired the next three hitters but Harvey came around to score on a fielder's choice to close the Angels gap to the final margin.

ANGEL NOTES: Pat Keedy's 3-for-4 upped his mark to .220 though Maddon says his goal is a .300 average for the big infielder. "We're going to do it, too," said Maddon, despite an elbow problem that won't allow him to play third base right now... Montanari's two hits Monday kept his average at an even .400 after 20 at-bats for Midland. Born in Windsor, Ont., Montanari attended UCLA...

Steve Liddle continued to swing a potent bat and now has seven RBI in four games... James Randall upped his team-leading rbi total to 78...

Astros hearing Dodger footsteps

Associated Press

Even the Houston Astros are finding it difficult to slow down the Los Angeles Dodgers, who are steadily cutting into Houston's lead in the National League West.

"They're on a good roll," Astros' Manager Hal Lanier said Monday night after the Dodgers extended their longest winning streak of the season to eight games with a 7-3 victory. "We have to go out there and try to cool them off."

Los Angeles overcame an early 3-1 deficit behind Fernando Valenzuela's 11-strikeout, eight-hit complete-game performance.

The Dodgers also came up with some timely hitting and took advantage of some sloppy Houston fielding in a five-run seventh inning.

The key plays in the inning were a throwing error by catcher Alan Ashby that allowed one run to score, a booted ground ball by first baseman Glenn Davis that let the tying run in. Add to that with a two-run, bases-loaded single by Bill Madlock and a suicide squeeze bunt by Bill Russell and the Dodgers were rolling.

"We were good for six innings and they had a good seventh," Lanier lamented. "We were one base hit away from taking Valenzuela out of the game."

Lanier was referring to the fifth inning, when the Astros had the Dodger left-hander on the ropes with a run in and the bases loaded. But Kevin Bass grounded into a force play and Valenzuela, 15-6, yielded just two more hits over the final four innings to record his fifth straight victory and his major league-leading 13th complete game.

"It's not too hard to figure out they're back in it," Ashby said.

The victory pulled third-place Los Angeles within 1½ games of the second-place San Francisco Giants and within 5½ games of Houston. But the Astros are putting this come-from-ahead loss behind them.

The victory also put the Dodgers over the .500 mark for the first time since the third game of the season.

"It's only August," Lanier said. "I don't think it's a crucial series for us. Tomorrow night (Bob) Knepper will win and we'll be back to 6½.'

Braves 4, Padres 1

Dale Murphy hit a pair of home runs and converted reliever Jim Acker pitched eight scoreless innings before giving up a ninth-inning run as the Atlanta Braves defeated San Diego 4-1.

Murphy had four hits in the game for the first time this season, driving in three runs.

Acker, 2-1, obtained July 6 from Toronto, allowed six hits, including Dane Iorg's leadoff double in the ninth, before needing help to finish his third start. Gene Garber gave up a run-scoring groundout but earned his 15th save.

Reds 2, Giants 1

Giants rookie pitcher Terry Mulholland lost his no-hit bid in the seventh inning and the game in the eighth when Cincinnati scored two runs to break a six-game losing streak.

Tony Perez doubled with two out in the seventh off Mulholland, 0-5, and Buddy Bell and Bo Diaz drove in eighth-inning runs — Bell with a double and Diaz with a sacrifice fly.

The victor was John Denny, who allowed five hits over seven innings.

Cubs 4, Mets 2

Ron Cey homered and drove in a pair of runs as the Cubs ended New York's three-game winning streak. Dennis Eckersley won for the fourth time in his last five decisions, yielding five hits in seven innings, and Lee Smith pitched two scoreless innings in relief.

Cey drove in a second-inning run with a single that tied the score 1-1, and his sixth-inning homer, No. 9 on the season, made the score 4-1.

Chicago Manager Gene Michael and right fielder Keith Moreland were ejected for arguing on separate calls.

Cardinals 3, Phillies 2

Terry Pendleton's suicide squeeze bunt with one out in the ninth inning scored Ozzie Smith with the winning run as St. Louis downed Philadelphia. Vince Coleman opened the inning against Dan Schatzeder with a double and stole his fourth base of the game, giving him a major league-leading 75.

Schatzeder then intentionally walked Smith and Tommy Herr before Curt Ford forced Coleman at the plate with a ground ball. Pendleton then hit a squeeze bunt to first, easily scoring Smith.

Todd Worrell, with eight saves in his previous eight appearances, was the winner with one scoreless inning of relief.

Expos 5, Pirates 4

Montreal scored four unearned runs in the seventh inning to erase a 2-1 Pittsburgh lead and break a three-game losing streak. Wallace Johnson and Tom Foley each drove in two runs in the inning after shortstop U.L. Washington committed a two-out error.

Jim Morrison his a two-run homer, No. 14, in the eighth inning off reliever Jeff Reardon to cut the Expos' final margin of victory to one run. Still, Reardon earned his 24th save.

USFL goes into limbo for another dry year

NEW YORK (AP) — The USFL is counting on time and the courts to heal its financial wounds. Its players can't wait.

"We've already been out for a year and if we stay out another one, some us will be dead," center Kent Hull of the New Jersey Generals said after the league voted Monday to scrap the 1986 season and resume play in 1987 — the courts and the television networks permitting.

"I'm being paid to play football. That's what I want to do," said record-breaking quarterback Jim Kelly, who finally may bolt to the NFL Buffalo Bills, the team he spurned when he was drafted in 1983.

THE IMMEDIATE cause of the USFL's limbo was the finding last Tuesday by a jury that held the NFL liable for one antitrust violation but awarded the USFL $1,689,999,997 less than it wanted — $1 trebled to $3 under antitrust law. With $150 million in losses during its three seasons in the spring, the eight remaining owners felt it prudent to avoid another $40 million or $50 million in losses.

But the return of the league that has refused to die remained less than certain. It played its last game on July 15, 1985 and it's unsure if it will ever play another.

Commissioner Harry Usher said the 1987 season depends primarily on the courts — a successful appeal for more than the token damages and a court injunction ordering the NFL off at least one of the three commercial networks. But even if that injunction is granted, there is no guarantee the USFL could get a contract.

"It's not going to be easy, but this league has never had an easy time," Usher said.

The immediate question was what would happen to the USFL's players. About a dozen, including Kelly, Herschel Walker, Kelvin Bryant and Irv Eatman, would be accepted immediately into the NFL, but the rest would have little chance, particularly since they would be arriving in training camp a month late.

Usher appointed a committee composed of Jacksonville Bulls owner Fred Bullard, Arizona owner Bill Tatham Jr. and Larry Csonka, the former NFL star who is now the Bulls' general manager, to negotiate the fate of the players with the league's union.

"We're not worried about the top echelon players. What we do will affect all players. This league has been good for players but ultimately we have 400-500 guys," said Buddy Aydelette, a Birmingham Stallions guard and the union president.

Moreover, whatever signings take place will be limited by the reluctance of the NFL to interfere with USFL contracts.

NFL spokesman Joe Browne said the league had instructed its teams that no negotiations with USFL players could take place without written permission of their USFL teams. "That remains in effect subject to the further clarification of the status of the USFL," Browne said.

Nonetheless, there were almost certain to be some defections, with the stars jumping quickly and the lesser players filtering into the pool of free agents used to fill vacancies caused by injury. The USFL seemed resigned to losing them.

"The one thing with football players is that if you signed them once, you can sign them again," said Stephen Ross, owner of the Baltimore Stars. "There's a new crop of players every year."

WALKER, who has a personal services contract with Generals owner Donald Trump, had no immediate comment. And Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys, holders of Walker's NFL rights, said his team would abide by the league ruling and refrain from talking to him until he was free of his Generals' contract.

Kelly, who repeatedly has expressed displeasure at the idea of playing in Buffalo, said his contract contains a clause releasing him if the league fails to play in two straight calendar years. He said he now might have no choice but to begin talking with the Bills.

"It depends on a lot of things," he said. "It certainly depends on the bucks. I just want to get out there and throw the ball around."

Flutie, the 1984 Heisman Trophy winner, may turn out to be one of those in limbo.

Taken by the Los Angeles Rams in the 11th round after signing his multimillion-dollar contract with the Generals, the 5-foot-9 Flutie is not considered to be in great demand by the NFL.

"It's like their decision was to make no decision and to just put everything on hold when we've been on hold for over a year and a half," Flutie said. "It upsets me a little bit that my future is still uncertain and that I'm still on permanent vacation."

Most of the owners said they were prepared to begin the season, which was scheduled to start Sept. 13. But those present at the meeting said there were some who were less enthusiastic, including the league's most influential owner, Trump, who left before the meeting ended.

In the end, financial considerations prevailed. They were made graphically clear in Tampa, where sheriff's deputies confiscated thousands of dollars worth of equipment and souvenirs from the Tampa Bay Bandits on a lien filed by former free safety Bret Clark, who said the team owed him $150,000.

Chisox deal Clemens fourth loss

Associated Press

Boston's Roger Clemens, pitching on his 24th birthday, gave away the biggest present Monday night — a throwing error in the eighth inning that enabled the Chicago White Sox to beat the Red Sox 1-0.

Clemens, 17-4, finished with a four-hitter, but Jose DeLeon combined with two Chicago relievers on a three-hitter for the victory.

Boston had its American League East lead trimmed to 3½ games over Baltimore, which routed Toronto 12-2.

"It was my birthday and I guess I'm supposed to get the presents, but it didn't work out that way," Clemens said.

The White Sox scored without benefit of a hit in the eighth. Carlton Fisk led off with a grounder that third baseman Wade Boggs bobbled for an error.

Ozzie Guillen followed with a sacrifice bunt that Clemens fielded cleanly but lobbed over the head of second baseman Marty Barrett, who was covering first, putting runners at second and third.

Julio Cruz then lifted an 0-2 pitch to center field for a sacrifice fly that easily scored Fisk.

"I just threw the ball away," Clemens said. "I came up with the ball and it sailed on me when I threw it. It was one of those things that happen. DeLeon did pitch a great game, though."

"I think they beat themselves," DeLeon said in halting English. "If it weren't for the errors, we'd still be playing."

The Red Sox are tied with Cleveland for the most errors in the American League this season, 101.

DeLeon, acquired last month from Pittsburgh in a trade, won his first AL game last Wednesday against Clemens and the Red Sox. Bob James relieved to start the eighth and retired four straight batters, but left after apparently hurting his arm while pitching to Don Baylor.

Dave Schmidt took over and yielded a two-out single to Dwight Evans before getting his seventh save.

DeLeon struck out six and walked two. Clemens, pitching his eighth complete game, struck out six and walked none.

Orioles 12, Blue Jays 2

Jim Dwyer hit a three-run homer and Larry Sheets hit a two-run shot as the Baltimore Orioles connected for five home runs and routed the Toronto Blue Jays 12-2.

AL Roundup

Jim Traber added a two-run homer and John Shelby and Fred Lynn hit solo home runs, highlighting Baltimore's 16-hit attack.

Mike Boddicker, 14-5, gave up five hits in eight innings. Joe Johnson, 1-1, took the loss.

Brewers 5, Yankees 4

Jim Gantner's leadoff home run broke an eighth-inning tie and Teddy Higuera scattered 10 hits over 8⅓ innings, leading the Milwaukee Brewers past the New York Yankees 5-4.

Higuera, 14-7, won his fourth straight decision and raised his career record against the Yankees to 4-1. Mark Clear got the final out for his ninth save.

Gantner snapped a 2-2 tie by opening the eighth with his sixth home run of the season, chasing starter Doug Drabek, 2-5. The Brewers added two runs later in the inning on an error by shortstop Wayne Tolleson and Rick Manning's RBI single.

Twins 6, Angels 5

Gary Gaetti's one-out single in the ninth inning drove home Greg Gagne from second base and lifted the Minnesota Twins to a 6-5 victory over the California Angels.

Gagne led off the ninth by drawing a walk from Donnie Moore, 1-4, and took second on a wild pitch. One out later, Gaetti grounded a 2-1 pitch up the middle that sent California to its third straight loss. Frank Pastore, 3-1, pitched two innings for the victory.

Rick Burleson led off the game with a home run and Dick Schofield and Doug DeCinces also homered for the Angels. Tim Laudner and Mickey Hatcher hit home runs for the Twins.

Mariners 9, A's 8

Danny Tartabull, who had homered twice in the game, hit an RBI single that capped a three-run rally in the eighth inning and gave the Seattle Mariners a 9-8 victory over the Oakland A's.

Tartabull went 4-for-5 with four runs batted in. He hit a solo home run in the first inning and a two-run shot in the fourth prior to his bases-loaded single with one out in the eighth off reliever Joaquin Andujar.

A two-run double by Jose Canseco and Dave Kingman's three-run homer highlighted a five-run rally in the seventh that lifted Oakland into an 8-4 lead.

Karl Best, 2-2, got the victory and Mike Moore earned his first save in his first relief appearance of the season. Bill Mooneyham, 3-4, took the loss.

Southern League attendance swells for Mr. Heisman

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Whether Southern League fans are rooting for or against Bo Jackson, they're paying money to see him play and making the turnstiles hum.

Attendance has jumped well above the average in every league city where Jackson has played since the Heisman Trophy winner from Auburn University chose baseball over football, signed with Kansas City, and joined the Memphis Chicks on June 30.

General Manger Bruce Baldwin of the Greenville, S.C., Braves said Jackson was "treated more as a novelty than anything else."

"The fans rooted for him when he came to bat but rooted for our kids to strike him out, which they did on a number of occasions."

Jackson isn't striking out as often now, and had raised his once-puny batting average to into the .260s.

Baldwin said he figured Jackson attracted about 1,000 extra fans in each of his four games in Greenville.

The story is the same elsewhere, with league President Jimmy Bragan saying he knows of no other player who has affected attendance as Jackson has.

President John Johnson of the National Association of Professional Leagues said he could not recall anyone else "who has had the same kind of impact" in the minor leagues. "I can't come up with anybody."

"He fits in the category of some of the best I've ever seen," Bragan said. "He's sure stimulated some interest."

Memphis begins a four-game stand at Orlando, Fla., tonight, and Orlando General Manager Bob Willis said, "We've been selling the fire out of tickets for the 'Bo Show.'"

Memphis' next stop will be Jacksonville, Fla., where General Manager Peter Bragan Jr. said, "We anticipate drawing 15,000 for the series, which is way up."

During Jackson's four games at Charlotte, N.C., the attendance was 10,744, compared to 4,703 for the previous four games. The figures at Greenville, S.C., were 16,979 and 7,697, and those at Chattanooga, Tenn., were 13,506 and 3,836.

Jackson, said Chattanooga General Manager Bill Lee, "makes all of us in the front offices look like geniuses when we have great crowds.

"However, it's ego-deflating to know he can come in and draw greater crowds than we can through promotions."

General Manager Frances Crockett of the Charlotte team said Jackson accounted for sell-outs of 2,900 in Memphis' games there compared to an average crowd of about 1,500.

"When it came out in the paper that he had signed, they were calling for tickets," she said.

At home, said Memphis General Manager George Lapides, Jackson probably has meant an extra 200 customers for each game.

Jackson, who grew up in Bessemer, Ala., will make his first pro baseball appearance in nearby Birmingham Aug. 21-23.

Utah Jazz fail to lure Erving

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The only moves Julius Erving plans for this season will be in a Philadelphia 76ers uniform, according to a Utah Jazz official who said his club failed to convince the NBA star to finish his career in the West.

Jazz president Dave Checketts said he learned Erving would stay in Philadelphia in a message left Monday by Jazz owner Larry Miller at the office of Erving's agent, Irwin Weiner.

"The message that Larry left for me at Weiner's office was that the Doc was staying at Philadelphia," Checketts said.

Erving — known to his fans as "Dr. J" — spent five hours Monday at the suburban mansion of Sixers owner Harold Katz, but neither made an announcement about their talks.

BATTLES—

The keys to Baylor's success hinge on Carlson's durability, the punting game, secondary depth and linebacker depth. "We have good people up front, but depth is a real problem."

As for the high estimation in which BU is held this year, Teaff cautions, "You are never as good or as bad as someone says you are. Last year we were picked eighth in the SWC, yet had a chance to play in the Cotton Bowl right up to the end."

DESPITE the unrest over Texas' 1985 season, Fred Akers reminds, "We took it down to the last 30 minutes of the season before we lost the championship." And then, possibly a warning. "We've got most of those guys back. One thing we won't have for the first time in years is a quarterback controversy."

The key is the offensive line. "If it can hang in there, we can develop into a good football team."

As for the pressure of coaching at Texas. "A coach is supposed to win. And I expect to win as the coach."

David McWilliams is untried and untested at Texas Tech, but in trying to adapt his offense to his personnel, he had the Red Raiders throwing the ball more last spring. "As proof, I point out we threw 72 passes last spring. Some alumnus always has the poor taste to ask how many we completed. They don't seem to realize we work on throwing passes in the spring and on catching them in the fall."

AS THE foreman of Texas' defense for so many years, McWilliams designed his offense from that standpoint. "I coached against offense for so long, I started out at Tech by asking myself 'what gave you the most problems?' The teams that were pretty balanced and threw a variety of sets and motions at us were the toughest to defense. They restrict the defense because you have to work on so many adjustments. They cut down on what you can do and the blitz."

McWilliams' major concern is the offensive line (average 6-2, 245 pretty small by today's standards) and lack of depth.

"Going into spring training lack of size was a big worry. Coming out of spring training, the offensive line was one of our most pleasant surprises," said McWilliams, a one time Abilene High coach. "We felt we could do what we worked on in the spring. We will throw because we are not going to knock anybody out of there play after play with our size."

AND WHILE the Aggies seem to be everybody's choice to repeat, Coach Jackie Sherrill wisely cautions, "It doesn't make any difference what you did last year. What the championship does for us is make us feel better about ourselves. And it's the players themselves that I want to know about. That's what I looked for in spring training, how much Kevin Murray improved."

If anything could get the TCU's Jim Wacker down, it was last season's disaster. It didn't. He's still UNBELEEVABLE. "They said we couldn't go to a bowl this year. We are already in one, the Cotton Bowl against SMU in our first conference game."

1985 Disaster? "All it meant was we had to play this year's seniors a year before they were ready. We didn't graduate one defensive player. They should be good. We've got the two best offensive lines I've ever coached."

Last year TCU went into the season thinking national, SWC championship. "This year 7-4 or 8-4 is a real challenge," says Wacker making it sound like it's well within the realm of possibility. "It would make me as proud of this bunch as any team I've ever coached, especially since everybody is picking us way down. If we do, then watch out for us in '87."

"Last year we started 21 freshmen, which, of course, is 20 too many, but they could wind up being four-year starters and you get good by starting early" no matter how much it may hurt.

Wacker realistically admits this year is one in which he expects his team to gain experience and character, but you can't keep this guy down for long. "But we've got a chance to win."

After Dallas, one comes back to West Texas almost wondering how the pollsters are going to shoehorn Oklahoma, Miami, UCLA, Michigan, Nebraska, Florida, Alabama and that ilk into the Top 10 come November.

Chase, Cooke win title

From Staff Reports

Jim Chase and Kelly Cooke combined for a best-ball 59 to win the fourth annual Jimmy Allison Memorial benefit golf tournament at Mission Country Club Monday.

Second place in Division I went to James Currie-Joe Gifford while David Jones-Steve Harper took third and Bill Hickey-Pom Smith were fourth. All shot 62s and places were decided by a card playoff.

In Division II, Joe Thomas-Bob Hover fired a 57 for first. C. Wallace and Derek Edmonds had a 60.

Edmonds won cloest to the pin on 17 while Al Hochman won the long drive on 10.

The tournament, annually held in memory of the former publisher-owner of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, is played for the benefit of the American Cancer Society and tournament chairman presented the ACS a check for $8,000 from this year's fund-raising effort.

Harrah's slam wins Fame game

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Toby Harrah hit a grand slam and Gary Ward added a solo homer as the Texas Rangers defeated the Kansas City Royals 11-4 Monday in loosely played Hall of Fame baseball game.

Two Texas coaches, Art Howe and Joe Ferguson, played in the game. Ricky Wright, the eventual winning pitcher, started the game in right field.

Wright doubled his first time up, then Ferguson replaced Wright in right in the top of the fifth inning. Wright nonetheless batted in the bottom of the fifth and started the sixth as a pitcher.

He gave up a two-run homer to Greg Pryor that put Kansas City in front 3-1 in the sixth.

But Harrah's grand slam in the bottom of the sixth and a six-run seventh inning made Wright the winning pitcher.

After Wright left the game as a pitcher, his batting spot came up one more time. The Rangers simply skipped it. No out was charged.

IT'S A DIRTY JOB, BUT SOMEBODY'S GOT TO KNOW HOW TO DO IT.

It takes a strong National Guard and Reserve to help defend our country. Keeping that strength at its peak takes training—one weekend a month and at least two weeks a year. Fully trained and ready, the Guard and Reserve make up one-third of our nation's defense.

So when your employees ask you for time off to train to keep our defenses at their strongest, give them that time. They'll be getting a tough job done, and you'll be getting back a better employee.

By Jeane Dixon
Wednesday, August 6, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You will receive good news about a job or money or both. Fascinating people enter your life. You will find them everywhere -- at work, on airplanes, in museums and at ball parks. You develop a Midas touch that could insure your loved ones' financial future. Romance deepens.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: English poet Alfred Lord Tennyson, penicillin discoverer Sir Alexander Fleming, Stepfanie Kramer of "Hunter," Soleil Moon Frye of "Punky Brewster," comedy queen Lucille Ball, Atlanta Braves slugger Bob Horner, Toronto's slick-fielding shortstop Tony Fernandez, actor Robert Mitchum and artist Andy Warhol.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Settle any disputes with siblings. A compromise could have a negative effect on romance. A business deal should work in your favor. Those in sales get a chance to advance their careers. Postpone travel.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Obstacles to financial success begin to melt away when you use your creative talents. Happy romantic adventures lie just ahead. You find yourself having greater independence. You enjoy being on your own.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A mature, responsible approach enables you to move up the ladder of success. Pay more attention to mate's concerns. Taking someone for granted could be dangerous now.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good personal relationship is far more valuable than any amount of money. Doing some summer cleaning and repainting makes your home more attractive. Slow down and you will avoid a costly mistake.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A partnership gets a helping hand from a family member. Consolidate your assets and pay bills on time. Space-age technology could put extra cash in your pocket.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Business success could depend on how well you manage your personal finances. A "seller's market" exists for new ideas. Be realistic when setting career goals.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You deserve better than what you have been receiving lately. Approach your work in a positive frame of mind. You attract the attention of a fascinating member of the opposite sex.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): There is good news for overworked you! A cash infusion and a change in hiring practices mean you can let up a bit and still earn plenty. Your romantic appeal grows.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Restore domestic peace by giving in this one time. Examine your secret fears more closely and you will be better able to cope. Your good judgment attracts the attention of those in charge.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You impress even your best friends with your ability to work closely with others. You are able to produce a team victory at work. Look for a financial breakthrough.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Reduce entertainment expenses. You can no longer afford to let others push you around. It is time to stand up and be counted. Take a restful trip and you will return with new stamina.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Morning hours are best for reaching people who can help you with business and financial projects. You will have to be more assertive to win the hand of member of the opposite sex.

As we start the third week of the dictionary of bridge plays, we have reached "I for Inference." Sometimes the location of a particular card might not be directly revealed by either the bidding or the play. However, you might be able to draw an inference that permits you to place the card precisely. Here's an example of what we mean.

With his defenseless hand and the master suit, South's decision to preempt after East's overcall has this department's endorsement. North's raise to game is fully justified.

After winning the first trick with the queen of hearts, West continued the suit to his partner's king. East cashed the ace of diamonds and exited with a low diamond. The fate of the contract hinged on bringing in the trump suit without losing a trick, and from the bidding either defender could hold the king. Considering the spade suit alone, the percentage play is to finesse. However, declarer cashed the ace of spades to fell East's king and claimed his contract. What made declarer go against the odds?

Unless the defenders had made an egregious error, West could not hold the king of spades. If West did indeed have that card, East could have ensured the contract's defeat by leading a third heart after cashing the ace of diamonds. West would score the setting trick by overruffing with the king.

Actually, East defended very well. Had he played another heart, declarer would have ruffed high and, when West could not overruff, the play of the ace of trumps would have been obvious (unless West was pulling off a "Grosvenor Gambit"). Unfortunately, his failure to lead another heart was as revealing to a declarer who could draw the correct inference.

Playgirl names Garrison Keillor one of 10 sexiest men in U.S.

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Garrison Keillor, the foremost shy person and good-looking man of mythical Lake Wobegon, has been named by Playgirl magazine as one of the 10 sexiest men in America for 1986.

The announcement Monday baffled some friends of Keillor, who originated the public radio program "A Prairie Home Companion" and whose book on Lake Wobegon is a best-seller.

"It's amazing," said Howard Mohr, a "Prairie Home Companion" writer who often appears on the show with Keillor. "I haven't noticed he has an amazing effect on women, but I haven't paid any attention to that. His voice is probably what's attractive to women. But there's no explaining public taste."

"I'm...surprised," said Bill Kling, president of Minnesota Public Radio. "Good thing it's a radio show and not on television so we can keep his attractiveness a Twin Cities secret."

"I know one thing for sure," Mohr added. "He'll probably ignore it."

Keillor was vacationing in the Rocky Mountains and could not be reached for comment.

Others in the top 10 were actors Don Ameche and Michael J. Fox; musician Ruben Blades; comedian Billy Crystal; Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan.; pro football player William (The Refrigerator) Perry; New York Yankees manager Lou Piniella; developer and pro football team owner Donald Trump; and "Moonlighting" star Bruce Willis.

Playgirl officials said their choices this year were based on "a sexuality beyond looks."

"Self-confidence is highly visible among the choices," said editor Tommi Lewis in a statement.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Clint Eastwood is considering changing the film "Heartbreak Ridge" after veterans complained it portrayed a Marine as hero of an Army battle, says the author of a book about the battle.

Eastwood

Hal Barker of Dallas, who is writing a book about the Korean War battle of Heartbreak Ridge, said Eastwood has called him twice since Friday and discussed a solution to the dispute.

However, Marco Barla, a Warner Bros. spokesman, said he had no word of changes from Eastwood, the producer, director and star of the movie.

Heartbreak Ridge was one in a series of battles for control of hilltops during the Korean War. The movie is not about the battle, but the main character is a Marine Corps sergeant who, as a young man, won a medal at Heartbreak Ridge.

Some Army veterans protested that the battle was fought by the Army, with no Marines taking part.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge will announce by Friday whether to grant Lily Tomlin's request to block release of a documentary about her.

Tomlin

Ms. Tomlin objects that the 90-minute documentary shows too much of her performance in her one-woman Broadway show, "The Search for Signs of Intelligent Life in the Universe," her lawyers argued Monday in Superior Court.

They said the contract allowed only 15 minutes of the play to be shown, and that a 30-minute segment jeopardizes her negotiations with pay-TV networks for the sale of her rights to the play.

Dennis Perluss, attorney for the producers, disputed Ms. Tomlin's version of the contract and said the actress was allowed to view the film but not override his clients' creative control.

A temporary order granted July 16 prevents producers Joan Churchill and Nicholas Broomfield from releasing the film "Lily," which is to be shown on public television. Ms. Tomlin is seeking a permanent order.

• • •

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Former Gov. Ray Blanton, released last month after serving two years for conspiracy and extortion, has begun a career as a radio commentator.

In the first of daily five-minute commentaries, "The Other Side," on Nashville's WLAC-AM, Blanton suggested Monday that farm products be substituted for arms or money as aid to foreign nations.

Blanton was released July 18 from a Nashville halfway house after completing two years of a three-year sentence imposed in 1981 for liquor license conspiracy, mail fraud and extortion.

• • •

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Profits from a book by Jean Harris must be given to the state even though she hoped to give the money to an organization she set up to help children of fellow inmates.

Harris

Mrs. Harris, who is serving a 15-year-to-life sentence for killing Scarsdale Diet author Dr. Herman Tarnower, was ordered Monday to turn over $55,000 she already has received for the book.

The money and future profits from "Stranger in Two Worlds" must be turned over to the state Crime Victims Compensation Board, its chairman, Ronald Zweibel, ruled.

Zweibel said an agreement between Mrs. Harris and her publisher, Macmillan, fell under a clause prohibiting criminals from profiting from their crimes.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dan Lundberg, the oil industry analyst who forecast the 1979 gasoline shortage and whose biweekly national gas price survey was widely quoted, died Sunday. He was 73.

Lundberg

From March 1979, when Lundberg was among the first to predict a fuel shortage after Middle East nations cut back production, until his death, Lundberg and the Lundberg Letter were at the forefront of petroleum prophecy.

The newsletter, a family business, had been in circulation in various forms for at least 25 years.

Born in New Britain, Conn., Lundberg moved to Los Angeles when he was 21. A few years later he moved to Mexico, where he was a CBS radio correspondent during World War II. Lundberg moved to television after the war as a talk-show host. He also wrote a novel, "River Rat."

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Florence Reece, a writer and social activist whose song "Which Side Are You On?" became an anthem for the labor movement, died of heart failure Sunday. She was 86.

Borrowing from the melody of the old hymn "Lay the Lily Low," Mrs. Reece wrote the union song in the 1930s to describe the plight of mine workers in Harlan County, Ky. Her husband, Sam, who died in 1978, was a miner.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Wednesday, August 6, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You will receive good news about a job or money or both. Fascinating people enter your life. You will find them everywhere -- at work, on airplanes, in museums and at ball parks. You develop a Midas touch that could insure your loved ones' financial future. Romance deepens.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: English poet Alfred Lord Tennyson, penicillin discoverer Sir Alexander Fleming, Stepfanie Kramer of "Hunter," Soleil Moon Frye of "Punky Brewster," comedy queen Lucille Ball, Atlanta Braves slugger Bob Horner, Toronto's slick-fielding shortstop Tony Fernandez, actor Robert Mitchum and artist Andy Warhol.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Settle any disputes with siblings. A compromise could have a negative effect on romance. A business deal should work in your favor. Those in sales get a chance to advance their careers. Postpone travel.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Obstacles to financial success begin to melt away when you use your creative talents. Happy romantic adventures lie just ahead. You find yourself having greater independence. You enjoy being on your own.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A mature, responsible approach enables you to move up the ladder of success. Pay more attention to mate's concerns. Taking someone for granted could be dangerous now.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good personal relationship is far more valuable than any amount of money. Doing some summer cleaning and repainting makes your home more attractive. Slow down and you will avoid a costly mistake.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A partnership gets a helping hand from a family member. Consolidate your assets and pay bills on time. Space-age technology could put extra cash in your pocket.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Business success could depend on how well you manage your personal finances. A "seller's market" exists for new ideas. Be realistic when setting career goals.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You deserve better than what you have been receiving lately. Approach your work in a positive frame of mind. You attract the attention of a fascinating member of the opposite sex.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): There is good news for overworked you! A cash infusion and a change in hiring practices mean you can let up a bit and still earn plenty. Your romantic appeal grows.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Restore domestic peace by giving in this one time. Examine your secret fears more closely and you will be better able to cope. Your good judgment attracts the attention of those in charge.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You impress even your best friends with your ability to work closely with others. You are able to produce a team victory at work. Look for a financial breakthrough.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Reduce entertainment expenses. You can no longer afford to let others push you around. It is time to stand up and be counted. Take a restful trip and you will return with new stamina.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Morning hours are best for reaching people who can help you with business and financial projects. You will have to be more assertive to win the hand of member of the opposite sex.

Officials: UT budget cuts would close center

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — UTPB's Center for Energy and Economic Diversification would close under a proposed 34-percent general revenue budget cut to the University of Texas System, university officials say.

"At the Permian Basin, we would probably have to give up all hope of establishing the Center for (Energy and) Economic Diversification that we just started there a few months ago," said Hans Mark, university system chancellor.

Mark and other university officials Monday spoke to about 300 supporters who gathered at the UT-Austin campus to discuss the impact of proposed budget cuts to solve a $3.5 billion state deficit.

The center is a joint venture between the university, private business and the state and federal governments aimed at generating growth and development in the region through partnerships.

The 34 percent, or $270 million reduction, would plunge the university system into "chaos and mediocrity" and would require a staff reduction of 7,000 people, said Jess Hay, chairman of the university's board of regents.

"Such cuts would signal to the nation Texas' retreat to third-rate status among the 50 states," Hay said.

Hay urged the assembly of university supporters and alumni to campaign for a combination of spending cuts and tax increases to solve the budget crisis.

"Specifically, the Legislature must decide whether to achieve fiscal balance through radical budget cuts which will severely and negatively impair the long-term interest of this state.

"Or whether, alternatively, to accomplish that balance through a combination of rational and carefully targeted expense reductions and an increase in the state's revenue base," Hay said.

Hay said the proposed budget cuts would hurt the quality of education for the system's 118,000 students and would compromise the care provided by the system's health institutions.

The reductions also would hinder the university's ability to attract both funding for research and a qualified faculty, he said.

Peter O'Donnell, former state Republican Party chairman and a major university contributor, told the crowd that the current level of education must be maintained to boost economic development and new jobs in the state.

High education standards "enables us to attract federal funds for research, permits us to leverage state funds, enables us to attract private funds and develop the skills and talents of our people," he said.

Bobby Ray Inman, president of Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp., told supporters to urge legislators to solve the state's budget problems during the special session that begins Wednesday.

"You recruit faculty November to March, not in May, and the damage simply will be too great if this problem is put off to (next year's regular session)," Inman said.

An official with Lockheed Austin later said his company would not have relocated to Austin five years ago had the university not been here.

Midlander pedals with group in effort to promote world peace

By ANNTOINETTE MOORE

Alan Harbert's first encounter with nuclear weapons came while he was a naval officer on a Poseidon submarine.

"I used to do my situps right beside a missile that had the potential to destroy 10 Soviet cities," said Harbert, a Midland resident. "That got me thinking" about nuclear weapons and the arms race.

Harbert, 34, is one of five Midlanders who left this morning on a five-day bicycle trip to Amarillo. Friday they will join other anti-nuclear activists in a "Peace Camp" outside the U.S. Department of Energy's Pantex Nuclear Weapons Assembly Plant in Amarillo.

The camp, in its third year, is sponsored by the Red River Peace Network, a coalition of groups from Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico who are "committed to nonviolence and a vision of peace as the presence of justice," according to a press release put out by the group. Each year the coalition also organizes bicycle pilgrimages from several cities to the plant.

Last year's trip "was a wonderful experience," Harbert said. "The bicycle riding was a way to meet people along the way...and an opportunity to establish camaraderie with other bicyclists, which helps make the whole movement more real. It's fun to get involved with people who have a diversity of opinions."

The Midlanders — Harbert, Kathryn Bowers, Peter Clark, David Clark and Mike Gray — won't be traveling alone; Monday afternoon seven cyclists from Houston road into town. This group, which includes five support people traveling by car, left Houston July 27 and will have covered more than 750 miles by the time they reach Amarillo.

"I'm concerned about the future of the planet and its inhabitants. The present policies are destructive. If we don't act we might not have a future. ...Most people tend to respect what we're doing, since we're willing to take on such an immense task (cycling 750 miles)."
— Jimi Clark

Monday evening Basin Peace and Justice, the Midland cyclists' sponsor, hosted a press conference at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church, 1204 Cherry Lane, to welcome the Houston cyclists to Midland.

They put on a skit, "The Wheel of Misfortune," where players could "try your luck against various nuclear disasters." Then members of the diverse group, ranging in age from 16 to 50, shared their concerns about the dangers of nuclear weapons.

Jimi Clark, 18, spoke about his reasons for pedaling hundreds of miles across Texas in the blazing August heat.

"I'm concerned about the future of the planet and its inhabitants," he said. "The present policies are destructive. If we don't act we might not have a future."

This is Clark's third year to participate in the bicycle pilgrimage. He was 14 when he first became active in peace issues.

Although he hasn't seen any "drastic change" in people's attitudes during the last three years, "we have talked to a lot of people where the message is not usually heard, in the smaller communities of Texas — places like Caldwell, Temple, Lampasas, Brady and Sterling City."

"There's been very little, if any, hostility" toward the group's anti-nuclear stance in these small towns, Clark said.

"Most people tend to respect what we're doing, since we're willing to take on such an immense task (cycling 750 miles)."

This year's camp will feature workshops by University of Texas at Dallas professor Lloyd J. Dumas on "economic conversion," Clark said. This concerns "ways of converting the economy — especially in Amarillo — based on military production to a more peaceful means of production." One workshop will be for campers; the other will be for Amarillo residents.

Last year, camp members staged a "symbolic civil disobedience action," by blocking the railroad tracks on which the trains carrying nuclear weapons to and from the plant run, he said.

On Sunday, the camp's last day, "people will block workers coming into the plant (which operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week)," Clark continued.

"We don't want to be seen as hostile to the workers. This is the third year we've been there. Our message has been that we've been coming with openness in our hearts and a non-violent attitude."

(According to the Associated Press, Dwayne Hubbard, chief of Pantex's administrative branch, has said that anyone jumping the plant's fence, blocking the gate or trying to pass through it will be arrested.)

"Disarmament has to come from the people of this country, not the government," Clark said. "The government has shown us how much it cares. It's the people's turn to show how much we care."

Another Houston cyclist, Bob Henschen, helped found the Red River Peace Network in 1983 with "25 very interested people."

"We all knew that Pantex was in Texas — the final assembly point" for nuclear weapons, he said. "Since it was in our region it was our responsibility" to protest it, to stress "the dangers of nuclear war and that we were all involved in it."

The bicycle pilgrimages "demonstrate the depth of people's convictions," Henschen continued. People in the towns along the way ask questions.

"Primarily 'Why?' Which is great, because we like to answer that question.

"Our feeling is if people talk about (nuclear war), share feelings about it...get some hope and energy, then we have a chance" to stop it, he said.

"We have to do whatever we can do. We can't just stay home and go swimming."

Police: 24 bottles of whiskey stolen from liquor store

From Staff Reports

The Midland Police Department is investigating five burglaries which occurred Monday, including the burglary of two dozen bottles of whiskey from a local liquor store.

Kenneth Cook, an employee at Discount Liquor, 315 A N. Midland Drive, told police 18 liters of whiskey valued at $200, six fifth bottles of whiskey valued at $50, and 40 cartons of cigarettes valued at $70 were reportedly stolen.

The burglary apparently occurred sometime between Saturday and Monday. Reports said the building was entered through a roof air conditioner vent, after the air conditioner was apparently cut from the vent shaft.

Police also are investigating the burglary of a Midland residence. The victim, Herbert Marshall, 3601 Andrews Hwy., told police a videocassette recorder valued at $400 was reported stolen from his apartment. The burglary apparently occurred sometime Monday between 8 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. Reports said the apartment was locked and no signs of forced entry were found.

In other reports, an AM-FM cassette stereo valued at $300 was reported stolen from a vehicle. The victim, W.A. Skees, told police his 1984 Jeep was parked in the 900 block of Pine Court when the item was taken.

Two other vehicle burglaries were also reported. David Capps, 3505 Roosevelt, told police two 100-watt speakers valued at $125 were stolen from a 1985 Nissan automobile parked at his residence. The burglary apparently occurred Monday between midnight and 5 p.m.

Police Roundup

Lerma Angel reported an AM-FM cassette stereo valued at $300 was stolen from a 1961 Ford Galaxie parked in front of a residence in the 3400 block of Park Lane. The burglary apparently occurred sometime between 10 p.m Sunday and 7 a.m. Monday.

Juvenile traffic offenders may be tried by jury of peers

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

Juveniles facing traffic offenses or Class C misdemeanor charges in the future may be tried and sentenced by a group of their peers as a result of the creation of the "Midland Teen Court."

Formed by the Junior League of Midland, the teen court was created to divert the first-time juvenile offender from the regular court systems, said Margaret Wade, Junior League member.

Teens found guilty face a sentence of serving a certain number of community service hours and mandatory teen court jury duty, Ms. Wade said.

"We are patterning our teen court after the one in Odessa.

"Nationwide, 55 percent of first-time juvenile offenders repeat their traffic or Class C misdemeanor offenses.

"In the 2½ years Odessa's teen court has been in operation, they've seen over 2,000 kids and had no repeat offenders," Ms. Wade said.

Midland Teen Court will have its first training session on Aug. 11 at 7 p.m. on the east lawn of the Midland County Courthouse.

After a brief orientation by coordianator Ann Scott, the training session will move to the third floor of the courthouse to Judge Pat Baskin's courtroom.

Volunteer teens will be trained in running the court by observing mock trials and the positions of lawyer, clerk, bailiff and juror, Ms. Wade said.

She said the list of interested teens has already grown to over 200, but said that anyone else wishing to volunteer between the ages of 13 and 18 is welcome to attend.

Those interested may contact Ms. Scott at 688-1252 or 684-6983.

Farmers, combines gather in field, wait for work

By JENNY BUTLER

TAYLOR, Texas (AP) — A weather-beaten man walked over from his trailer home next to a combine, and asked if the reporter had come to take pictures of poverty. He wasn't joking.

The field next to the Texas Inn on Highway 79 in this Central Texas town was full of harvesting combines and the trailer homes of those who work them. The harvesters come here every year to try and get jobs getting in crops for farmers who do not own a combine.

The number of combines showing up in this field is increasing, even as the number of farms and farmers is decreasing, the man said.

Kenneth Hughes, 49, is a former mechanic, now full-time combine operator, who lives most of the year in Stamford, north of Abilene. He said that "way over half" of the combines he sees here this year have never been here before. They are here because their owners need work, he said.

"I think you'll see a lot more combines in here...," he said.

Hughes said the field outside Taylor became a sort of parking lot for combine owners who travel here looking for work. Area farmers come to the field to hire combines for harvesting. He himself has been making the trip since 1981.

He said he used to have to employ men to help him on the trips, but now he takes only his wife, Lois, who drives the harvesters just as he does. But Hughes added, "If she gets another job, I guess I'll have to hire some help.

"The runs have been so short this year" that it's hard to break even, he said.

"It's gotten to where almost everybody (in the area) has a combine," he added. "I don't think there'll be many years of custom harvesting."

Hughes said he has seen combines from as far away as Canada working in recent years in Stamford, because unlike other states, Texas does not require permits for out-of-state workers.

After working as a mechanic for 27 years, Hughes sold his shop and took up "cutting."

He said he cuts wheat in Stamford until mid-July, then heads to Elgin to work the early milo crops, stationing himself in Taylor. In the fall and winter, he is back in Stamford cutting, and finishes "usually by Christmas." He then begins repairs and maintenance on his two combines and other machinery.

Along with the glut of combines, traveling expenses and license fees conspire against the combine owners.

Hughes had to make two expensive trips to get his pickup, harvester, trailer and bobtail truck into Taylor. "That's the bad thing about this work," he said. "At least half the time you spend on the road is just wasted time."

If there is no work, he said, the cost of fees and licenses can eat up a man's entire earnings. He said tags for his pickup and bobtail trucks cost over $800 last time he renewed them.

Hughes plans to sell one of his combines, even though the market is poor for used machines. He estimated his harvester cost $80,000-$90,000 new. Prices have gone down since then, but "nobody can afford to buy them," he said.

He pointed to a huge machine across the road. "That one probably cost $100,000 or $110,000 when he bought it, and he'd be lucky to get $40,000 if he tried to sell it now."

Hughes says he is fortunate, for unlike many of the new workers in the area, he has contacts — people for whom he has worked before. But even contacts will not guarantee success in the depressed agricultural job market.

"It's just a hit-or-miss proposition, all the way," he said. "I'll drive around to people I've cut, and maybe something will come up."

Plumbers salvage apparent blanket bits in effort to solve courthouse sewer problems

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The cause of the flooding and sewage back-up in the Midland County Courthouse seems not entirely uncertain.

Plumbers did root out apparent strips of blankets, possibly from the fifth-floor jail, from the courthouse sewer system, according to Vern Dawkins, chief of maintenance for the Midland County Courthouse.

Meanwhile, courthouse officials and workers are crossing the street to use restroom facilities of the Midland Center.

"Every time they turn the fresh water on, the sewage backs up," said a Midland County Sheriff's Department spokesman. "The commodes and everything else overflow."

"This is a sad thing," Commissioner Win Brown said today. "We knew the problems existed. We tried to get the prisoners out of there (the courthouse jail), so we wouldn't have the problems. They (plumbers) are cleaning out the line. It's made a mess. It backs up everywhere."

Brown was referring to the Commissioners' Court's efforts to build a new jail apart from the courthouse. But that proposal was defeated last year in a bond election.

"By now, we would be in a new facility," he said. "We would not have the inmates upstairs. We would be expanding our courtroom space, which is badly needed."

"We will continually have these problems when you have inmates upstairs," Brown said. "What do you do?"

The commissioner said that the sewer system was "not designed to take blankets and other debris."

"They (prisoners) don't act like our normal run of society," he said. "They just want to harass the county. And why not? What can we do to them?"

Odessa attorney becomes subject of celebrity 'roast'

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Well-known attorney Warren Burnett, who maintains offices in Odessa and Galveston, will be the subject of a "roast" Saturday sponsored by Mexican-American Democrats of Odessa.

Master of ceremonies for the affair at the Mansion Dinner Theater will be Larry L. King, longtime friend of Burnett and author of "Best Little Whorehouse in Texas."

"Roasters" will include several attorneys who have been associated with Burnett. Among them will be Odessa attorneys Warren Heagy and Cliff Hardwick, Andrews attorney Bert Smith and Timothy Sloan, now practicing in Bay City.

Other roasters include, El Paso attorney-politician Malcolm MacGregor; Shel Hershorn, photojournalist with Life magazine, who now lives in New Mexico and makes hand-crafted furniture; Molly Ivins, a Dallas Times Herald reporter; Joe Jamail, Houston attorney who represented Pennzoil against Texaco in a lawsuit that resulted in an $11 billion verdict; and Kirk Purcell, a Houston attorney formerly with Burnett' office, who established the "Buford Pusser Walk Tall and Carry a Big Stick Award" that is made to individuals not afraid to speak their minds.

Award recipients include Burnett, Ms. Ivins and U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

The 59-year-old Burnett, who served as district attorney for Midland and Odessa when the two cities were in one judicial district, earned his law degree from Baylor University, completing four years of law school in just three.

Burnett served for five months as an assistant district attorney in San Antonio following admission to the bar. He then came to Odessa to work for the late John Watts. In 1952, at age 25, he decided to run for district attorney, was elected to the then-$5,100 a year post and served two terms. He has been involved in the practice of criminal and civil law since that time.

Burnett, who was born May 4, 1927, in Austinville, Va., studied engineering for a year after graduating from high school, but decided that wasn't for him.

While serving in the U.S. Marines in China and Burma during World War II, Burnett became friends with a Texan from Beaumont and moved there after the war. He attended Lamar Tech with the idea of eventually teaching English literature or entering the field of journalism, but later decided to study law and entered Baylor because the school would take him immediately.

Well-known for his eloquence and legal expertise, Burnett has appeared as a speaker on programs at Princeton, Harvard and Sam Houston State universities, the Fifth Circuit Judical Conference, and has testified at Senate and House committee hearings in Austin and Washington D.C.

He has authored numerous articles for law reviews and other publications on jury selection and closing arguments. He is a contributing editor to the Texas Observer, was a past president of the Civil Liberties Union and was a director of the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund and a member of the Criminal Code Revision Committee for Texas.

In 1962, Burnett was selected as one of the top 100 "movers and shakers" in the United States in a special edition of Life magazine dedicated to the "Take-over Generation."

Tickets for the Burnett roast are $15 each, or $100 for a block of 10. The affair is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. and last until 10 p.m. Proceeds will go to a fund for the Odessa chapter of Mexican-American Democrats.

C.A. Stubbs, organizer of the 4,000 member, Homeowner Taxpayers Association, stands in front of some of the groups' pro spending cap signs recently. Stubbs and his group are opposing Mayor Henry Cisneros in an August 9th spending cap vote.

San Antonio mayor gambles to defeat city spending bill

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Mayor Henry Cisneros has put his political reputation to the test in an all-out bid to defeat a city spending cap referendum.

The mayor is going head-to-head against political foe C.A. Stubbs, a self-appointed tax watchdog who says he wants to put the clamps on the city's budget.

The issue goes to a vote Aug. 9 in a referendum forced when Stubbs convinced 20,000 registered voters to sign petitions calling for an election on the issue.

Cisneros is as popular as ever, but he is still smarting from a defeat in another referendum last fall. Voters turned down a Cisneros-backed, Stubbs-opposed proposal to fluoridate the city's water.

"I'm on the defensive," Cisneros said in a recent speech to the Metropolitan Congregational Alliance. "He (Stubbs) says the city's wasting your money. I have to prove we're not."

Cisneros did not return telephone calls from The Associated Press. But he has said he is putting in 14-hour days in a personal campaign to stop the spending cap, which he contends would hamstring San Antonio's growth.

He has voiced fears that such spending limits would thwart industry from locating in San Antonio and would damage the city's high bond rating, a key element in San Antonio's ability to build new streets and other permanent improvements.

Stubbs denies the spending cap referendum is a political confrontation with Cisneros.

"He's the one that considers it a showdown," Stubbs said. "He's the mayor. I'm just the lowly taxpayer. It just so happens I'm the microphone for the people who feel the same way I do."

The proposal, which Stubbs prefers to call an "indexing method," would allow city spending to grow in step with population and inflation.

In other words, if the city's population grew 3 percent and inflation were 3 percent, the budget at City Hall could expand by 6 percent.

Stubbs said his 4,000-member Homeowner-Taxpayer Association, which he claimed has doubled in size since the fluoride referendum, has been studying the taxing habits of 45 taxing entities in Bexar County. The organization studied 21 cities, 12 school districts and several hospital and college districts, Stubbs said.

"We found a phenomenal gap between growth and spending," he said. City spending, he said, has grown more than three times faster than population and inflation.

"We admit there has to be growth and there has to be progress. But the politicians and the big money interests have the notion that we've got to pull out all the stops — we've got to have everything yesterday. And the taxpayers have to pay for it," he said.

"We don't want to subsidize the developers and the big money interests," he said.

City Manager Lou Fox, who is campaigning against the cap, said "it isn't as if the city's asleep and these nasty city officials are conniving to spend all this money."

The city manager said he disagrees with the concept of limiting city spending.

"These tax caps are like Gramm-Rudman — government by formula I don't like government by formula," he said.

Robert Marbut Jr., a political consultant who is heading up a coalition of six organizations opposing the cap, described the spending limit as "very, very flawed."

"It does not restrict, roll back or freeze taxes," he said.

The proposal also makes no provisions for the city accepting matching federal funds, insurance settlements or gifts from private contributors.

Flight line refueling safety seminar set for September

From Staff Reports

MARFA — The Texas Aeronautics Commission (TAC) and High Sky Derby USA will conduct a six-hour seminar on "Flight Line Refueling Safety" in September in Marfa.

The course will be taught by John C. Eslinger, TAC education coordinator. Time, date and place of the seminar will be announced later.

"Although the seminar is geared toward those involved in flight-line service and fueling operations at airport fixed-base operations (FBOs), it is also important for all pilots to update their knowledge and awareness of the subject for their own protection and safety-survival," according to Velma Lee Barnett Copeland, former governor of the eight-state South Central Section of The Ninety-Niners Inc., an international organization of women pilots. "Flying is serious business," she said.

The six-hour seminar, which TAC says is "rated extremely informative," offers a detailed view of flight-line service procedures and techniques through the film "Professional Service Training" and the study guide "Refueling and Quality Control Procedures for Airport Service and Support Operations."

Those interested in attending the flight-line refueling seminar may contact Mrs. Copeland by writing High Sky Derby USA, P.O. Box 1493, Marfa, Tx., or by telephoning her at 915/729-3409.

Bookstore continues luncheon series

From Staff Reports

Rev. Edwards

There is a growing segment of the population now sandwiched between the responsibilities of raising their own children and caring for their aging parents. It has been labeled the "Sandwich Generation."

The Rev. Steve Edwards will address the unique problems of the "Sandwich Generation" as the luncheon series continues at Pages and Prints Bookstore, 40 Plaza Center at 12:10 p.m. Thursday. Seating is limited and prepaid reservations for the box luncheon, catered by Foods Fantastic, are requested.

Edwards, executive director of Community and Senior Services, is the former senior minister of First Christian Church. His leadership there led to the founding of the agency in 1974 and the CSS has now grown from a small counseling-referral service into an agency with many major programs which benefit all ages of West Texas residents.

A Texas Christian University graduate, Edwards received his Master of Divinity from Christian Theological Seminary and has done extensive post-graduate work at Butler University and TCU.

Guilt and expectations are two very common feelings shared by the "Sandwich Generation" and Edwards will address both in his talk.

"We all have very common feelings toward our aging parents," he said. "However, these feelings change, based on the changes in the aging parent and the individual's reaction to the changes."

"Expectations include not only those of the aging parent, but children's expectations and perhaps the most difficult, the expectations we have of ourselves in these relationships," he said.

Edwards' remarks are exerpted from a program, "As Parents Grow Older," which will be conducted at Pages and Prints Bookstore one night a week for six weeks, beginning in September. Registration for the seminar may be made at the luncheon or by calling Connie Glover at 682-7577.

City pools close for season

From Staff Reports

The City of Midland's swimming pools will close for the 1986 summer season on the following days:

Ulmer — Friday at 7 p.m.
Halff — Saturday at 7 p.m.
Washington — Saturday at 6 p.m.

Doug Russell Pool, located at 900 Midland Drive, will remain open seven days a week through August 31. Hours are 2 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Fire Department responds to two apparent residential grease fires

From Staff Reports

The Midland Fire Department responded to three fires Monday, two of which were apparently started in kitchen areas by overheated grease. There were no injuries.

Four units responded to a house fire 5:24 p.m. Monday at 426 W. Dormard Ave. The owner, Walter Wingo, turned in the alarm, and part of the house was in flames when firefighters arrived. Heavy damage to the kitchen, moderate damage to the ceiling above the kitchen, and moderate damage throughout the house occurred.

Officials said the fire was probably caused by overheated grease on the stove in the kitchen.

At 3:40 p.m., four units responded to a reported apartment fire at 3212 W. Wadley Ave. Reports said the fire was also caused by overheated grease on a stove. Heavy damage to the stove vent and kitchen cabinets, and moderate smoke damage throughout the apartment was reported.

Children playing with matches was the apparent cause of fire that heavily damaged a storage building Monday. Four units responded to the fire about 4:50 p.m. near the intersection of Cottonflat Road and County Road 115W. The fire, which was reportedly blazing when units arrived, was extinguished quickly.

Crime Stoppers seeks leads on body found in pasture

Midland Crime Stoppers is seeking information about the death of 29-year-old Perry Raymond Guthrie, whose nude body was found about 10 a.m. early July 11 by two girls riding horseback in a pasture just east of Fairgrounds Road, behind the Rebel Lee Stables.

Police searched the area where the body was found, and found a bloody shirt, car keys belonging to Guthrie, and a pocket knife. Signs of an apparent struggle were also found in at least two areas that were searched by authorities.

Guthrie lived at the Elm Grove Trailer Park on North Fairgrounds Road, south of where the body was discovered.

Several days after the body was found, a subsequent search revealed Guthrie's walking cane, pants, and several torn and bloodied $100 bills.

One detective indicated that Guthrie may have been chased into the pasture from his residence at Elm Grove by one or more suspects.

An autopsy showed Guthrie died at least two days before his body was found, but police said the body was so badly decomposed a cause of death could not be positively determined.

Guthrie was a former bus driver for the Midland Independent School District.

Crime Stoppers is offering a $1,000 cash reward for information that contributes to the solution of the Guthrie case. Crime Stoppers in Midland can be reached at 694-TIPS, and in Odessa at 333-TIPS. Callers do not have to reveal their identities.

DEATHS

Lorine L. Jones

Lorine L. Jones, 76, of Midland died at a local hospital Sunday afternoon following a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday at the First Baptist Church with the Rev. Daniel Vestal, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Miss Jones was born April 27, 1910, in Stanton, where she was reared. In 1940 she moved to Midland. She and her sister became owners of rental properties.

She was a member of First Baptist Church and several church groups.

Survivors include her twin sister Florine L. Jones of Midland; one nephew, Ernest Eugene Caple of Austin; and several cousins.

Mary Caraway

Services are pending with Bailey Funeral Home in El Dorado, Ark.

Mrs. Caraway was born Aug. 5, 1919, in Pittsboro, Miss., where she was reared. She married George E. Caraway. He preceded her in death in 1979. She moved to Midland three years ago from Junction City, La.

She was a member of the Methodist church.

Survivors include her son, George E. Caraway Jr., of Midland; one brother, Frank Patterson of Calhoun City, Miss.; and two grandchildren.

J.W. Heidelberg

MONAHANS — J.W. Heidelberg Sr., of Monahans and formerly of Midland died Sunday in Monahans.

Services are pending with Wilson-Miller Funeral Home of Monahans.

He is survived by six sons, three daughters, two brothers, three sisters, 19 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Men's fashions presented in preview

By DELORES CARSON
Hearst News Service

Bold silhouettes, bright crayon colors, brawny textures and patterns — and beautiful — as in "America the..." — were the fitting themes of the Men's Fashion Association fall/winter '86 press preview, with 37 fashion presentations and approximately 100 designers and manufacturers.

Many silhouettes apparently were developed for the needs of the physically fit male. Among these was the ventless jacket. The double-breasted design features wide, square shoulders and wide, peaked lapels. The style includes an easy fullness under the arms to accommodate muscles.

The wide-shouldered jacket was a prevailing runway style for sportswear, as well as suits and dinner jackets. Jhane Barnes offers the same style with a softer shoulder and more fit at the waist.

Slacks were pleated, and often tapered, or pegged, to the ankle. Other slacks were also pleated and full, draped to a deep break on the shoe.

Christian Kenth combined his pants with a futuristic coat that resembled a tunic-length Nehru jacket. The Nehru influence was evident throughout the collections. From Japan, Sousuke Oguri presented a collarless version, worn with zipped turtleneck sweaters all in black.

The business suit was shown with a mid-size (about 3-inch) notched lapel. It, too, was shown with pleated trousers.

The profile for casual clothing and sportswear included wide-shouldered large coats and sweaters. The tops were combined with knit ski-style pants or tight, mostly faded, jeans. The pants were often tucked into boots, both Western and hunting style. Another option was to wear the casual styles with bright-colored deck shoes.

Casual wear was the area in which the peacock of the male species came forward. Tommy Hilfiger combined a red turtleneck and a bright yellow shirt with a blue plaid jacket. Gray corduroys added a nice contrast. Hilfiger was just one of many to use the clear primary hues.

Mohair sweaters from Marienbad caught the eye with bright flecks of tweed in colors of red, cobalt, yellow and forest green. Cesarani presented a yellow ski jacket with red pants.

Brights were not limited to active and casual wear. Roger Baugh used bright colors with black in houndstooth patterns for sports jackets.

Tuxedos and dinner jackets did not confine themselves to black. After Six showed a blue, green and black regimental-stripe flannel jacket. Daniel Hechter's purple jacket was combined with an iridescent shirt. And for maximum glitter, Fabrice presented a black, Persian-beaded, double-breasted jacket.

From lilac smoking jackets to indigo shirts and plum sweaters, the predominant color for fall is purple. Allyn St. George used granite, violet and turquoise in a windowpane-check suit. He combined it with a purple wool knit pullover shirt.

Jeff Rose for Castile used shades of purple in every style, from a poodle cloth, double-breasted jacket to a Nordic jacquard sweater.

Many of the casual and sportswear brights were shown with corduroy pants. Most had a very wide, raised wale. Texture is very important to the look of fall '86, and varied from silk, trampunto-stitched appliques and raised intarsia designs to spiky tweeds called "haywire."

There was interest throughout the shows on the American West. The clothing was not necessarily Western in cut, but was often combined with accessories to create the mood.

Myths surround male models

Associated Press

Male models are a macho group these days — ever since the industry began wholesale recruiting of college athletes about a decade ago — but these handsome men have a public image problem.

The myths about men models are contradictory, according to an article in the August issue of Cosmopolitan, and depict them as beautiful but conceited, sexy but possibly gay, desirable but unapproachable, at the top of their field but basically untalented, and wealthy but not too astute.

It is no myth handsome men have built-in advantages. Researchers in social psychology say they are perceived by others as more intelligent than their homely brothers, more masculine, more reliable and more socially skilled. Other studies have shown them to be more successful professionally, as well as healthier and wealthier than other men.

They have more interaction with women and are less lonely, according to Harry Reis, associate professor of psychology at the University of Rochester.

"I always had the feeling I had things a little easier than other people," said John Sommi, 28, a star model for Zoli. "I knew that if I was ever in trouble, I could talk my way out of it, even with the cops. Part of it was looking like the all-American kid — clean-shaven, good haircut, nice clothes. People would just say, 'Aw, give the kid a break.' "

Not all male models agree on the advantages.

"I still look at a lot of women as out of my league," said Richard Wiese, a former decathlon competitor and Brown graduate who appears on billboards, television and magazine covers. He says he spends more Friday nights without a date than with one.

Bruce Hulse, 33, seen in Calvin Klein commercials, denied he was inordinately vain but admitted being a mirror freak.

"In the morning, I go in the bathroom and do some muscle poses and check myself out," he said. "If I get in front of the mirror, I like hamming it up."

Karl Hakmiller, professor of psychology at the University of Connecticut, said of conceit among male models:

"It's hard for me to imagine that many of these male models don't have an ego problem. With the worship of male attractiveness everywhere in our society, it must be hard for models not to believe their own press clippings."

Men who model have a heavy investment in their looks, and some, in fear of aging, resort to moisturizers, cosmetic surgery and hair implants.

"You get to travel all over the world, stay in the best hotels, meet new faces all the time. Many people would pay to do what we get paid for. Where else would I get $2,000 a day for playing with beautiful girls on a beach?" said one.

Schneider to represent Midland

Laura Fitz-Maurice Schneider

Laura Fitz-Maurice Schneider will be a duchess representing Midland at the Austin Aqua Festival Admirals Club Coronation Ball Saturday in the Frank Erwin Special Events Center in Austin.

Miss Schneider is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Schneider of Midland.

She attended Pepperdine University and will be attending the University of Texas. At Pepperdine, she was a member of Delta Tau Omega sorority and the Society for Advancement fo Management.

The Austin Aqua Festival began in 1962 as an annual celebration to promote tourism and focus attention on the water resoures of Austin and Central Texas.

The Admirals Club of Austin is a social and charitable organization of private members and is celebrating its 25th year.

Menswear lacks innovative silhouettes

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

While designers serve up a savory selection of fresh hues in menswear, there is a noticeable lack of innovative silhouettes.

"Menswear silhouettes appear less crazy for fall than they have been," says Colby McWilliams, men's fashion director of Neiman-Marcus. "There is less humor in dressing. The designers seem to be going back to the basics while the consumer continues to invest in investment pieces they can wear in more ways."

This season, the designers gently slim silhouettes for a more body-conscious shape. Jackets narrow at the hip and nip in at the waist. Broad, square shoulders soften into more rounded shapes.

"In menswear, you have to toy with things and not try to scare your customer all at once," says Jhane Barnes of the season's lack of novel silhouettes. "You ease him into fashion. Last season, I began subtly rounding the shoulders and nipping the waist of my jackets. This fall, I fitted the garment a little more. The jacket is still comfortable, though. But my customer is ready for the shape."

Even though trousers taper as they slide toward the ankle for a leaner look, they continue to boast roomy pleats at the waist for comfort. Most sport neatly cuffed hems.

In an attempt to rev up the season's simple silhouettes, designers turn to innovative textures. "I concentrated less on silhouette this season and more on pattern and texture," says Andrew Fezza whose sophisticated sportswear has a slimmer edge. "I create free-form abstracts and geometrics with jacquards and translate them into both my knitwear and woven groups."

DEAR ABBY

Husband cooled by wife's passion for law

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Before my wife became an attorney, I enjoyed all the rights and obligations of a partner including, but not limited to herein under, free bed and board, specific performance and redress.

However, for the past 18 months there has been no performance required, no common consent, a termination of interest and, of course, no merger.

She rebuts my pleading for relief with restrictive provisions of diminished capacity, duress and denial of entry.

On several occasions I have attempted adverse possession but was accused of petty theft. I feel being denied the right of entry for this period is cause for action. Her demurrer is that my case is one for small claims, that any loss of will could be settled intestate. Legally, am I justified in pursuing third party interest, or a contract for services, or have I no right to either kind of peace? Sign me, 0 FOR 18 IN OXNARD

DEAR 0 FOR 18: If I have correctly interpreted your problem, your attorney wife has failed to fulfill her marital promises, i.e. sex. I recommend some candid communication (plain talk), between the party of the first part and the party of the second part.

I am not authorized to grant you permission to seek sexual fulfillment outside your marriage. (Nobody is.) Neither can I approve your contracting for services elsewhere. If your complaints are legitimate, you need the services (professional, that is) of a competent attorney — ideally, not your wife. Case dismissed.

DEAR ABBY: I am fed up with the use of the phrase "army brat," which you used in your response to the woman who complained about having to relocate her family every time her husband's job required it.

I was one of seven children raised by a career military serviceman. Not only were my siblings and I not "brats," neither are 95 percent of the children in servicemen's families. I think it is also a safe percentage to use in referring to civilian families.

Why should we be singled out? I think you owe military families an apology. — JAMES R. HARRIS, JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

DEAR MR. HARRIS: Having been raised in the military, you surely must know that the term "army brat" has long been an accepted part of the language and is not used to put down the children of career military servicemen. In fact, most children raised in the military refer to themselves as "army brats." However, if you were personally offended, I apologize.

DEAR ABBY: Please help! My birthday is arriving shortly and I foresee the usual plethora of "bird" gifts in the offing.

After my husband and I separated, in an effort to earn some extra money, I started raising canaries. For the past several years, on each gift-giving occasion, I have received everything from soup to nuts with pictures of birds — figurines, bookends, calendars, pot holders, Christmas ornaments, you name it.

Abby, please let people know that even though a friend may be a bird fancier, it does not necessarily follow that every item in his or her household must reflect it. — BYE BYE BIRDIE

DEAR BIRDIE: I'll wing it. Mention that your nest is already feathered to the max with birds, and you are going cuckoo trying to find places in the aviary. And that's no yolk. (Sorry.)

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about sex, drugs and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Graham's Pharmacy has complete supply of health care products

Still offering free prescription delivery

Graham's Rexall Pharmacy and Gifts, located at 319 Dodson Street, keeps an extensive supply of health care product in stocks. Whether you need a blood pressure kit, a dosing spoon, finger splints, Band-Aids, support hose or some other product, you'll be sure to find it and some of the friendliest pharmacists in town at Graham's.

Pharmacist Wes Graham says that they have a wide variety of blood pressure and pulse monitoring kits, ranging in price from $39.95 to $149.95. You'll even find digital units and digital talking units.

This is only the beginning of the health care products. There are humidifiers, vaporizers and clean air machines. Take your pick of clean air machines - the portable Hepanaire HP50 which features an advanced particulate-arrest type filter first used for the Atomic Energy Commission. On the other hand, the Air Care system utilizes a negative ion generator and a positive collector to remove smoke, pollution, pollen and fewer unpleasant odors from the air. Graham's also has other popular filter systems such as the Norelco Clean Air machine. And, for the time you spend in the yard, you may want to try a mask.

For your comfort, this home town store also offers Spenco Comfort Products. There are insoles of all sizes and shapes, heel cushions, "2nd Skin" for burns, abrasions, etc., stick-on padding, adhesive knit, cold packs, analgesic compresses, foot creams and cold air masks.

On one rack you'll find a wide selection of elastic bandages for your knee, wrist, elbow, ribs, etc. In addition, there are support hose and socks. The Parke-Davis knee-high elastic support socks are designed with the active, fashion-conscious woman in mind.

Nearby you will find finger splints, nose clips, finger guards and slings. Graham's overlooks none of your needs.

Graham says their pill cases are one of the most popular items. Of course, there is a wide variety to meet every need. Pill splitters, dosing spoons and droppers, which assure that you are getting the correct dosage, are also available.

Graham's also offers Depend shields and the Tranquility System, a revolutionary safe system for urinary control problems. So now there's no reason to miss out on the good things is life.

All sorts of first aid supplies line the shelves. Bandages, Band-Aids, cold wraps, thermometers of many types and ice bags are just the beginning.

Foam rubber rings can make sitting just a little more comfortable.

A diet scale kit from Graham's will help you watch your weight, while vitamins help keep you healthy.

About your Medicines, written by professionals, is also available at Graham's.

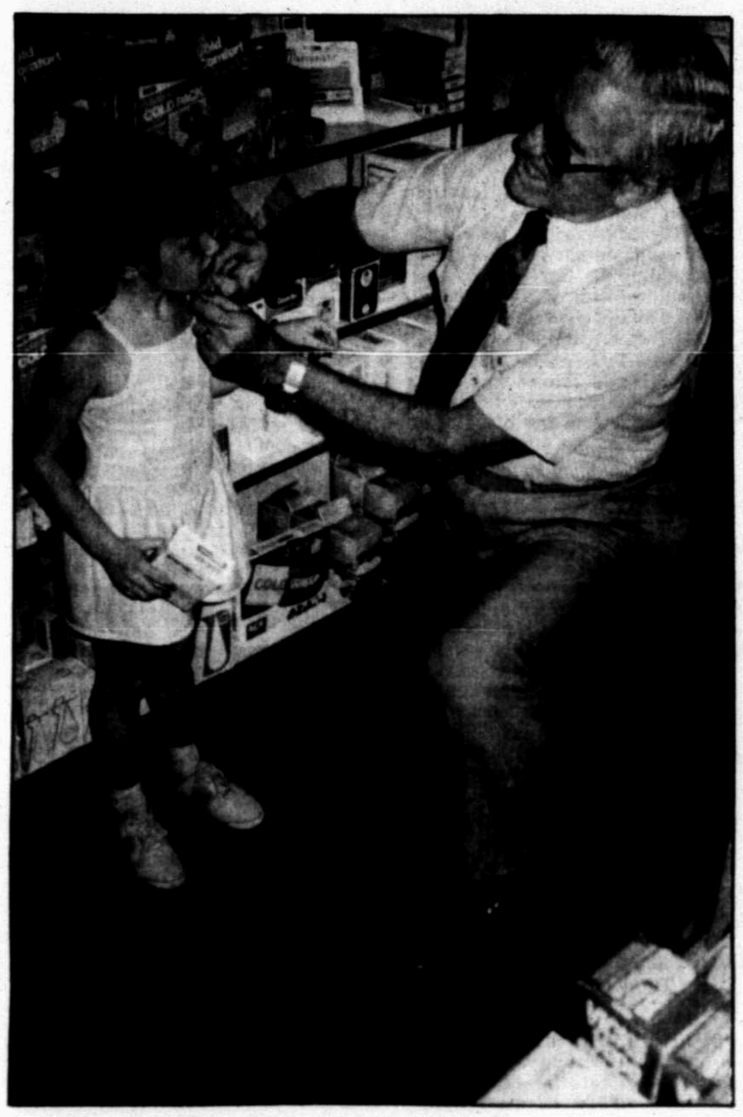
The list of health care products goes on and on. Even a wide variety of walking sticks are is stock.

Perhaps most importantly, Graham's pharmacists - Wes Graham, Paul Keele and Teresa Hartman - offer friendly, old fashioned service with free delivery of your prescriptions.

Though their dependable service and personal attention will remind you of days gone by, they have certainly kept up with the times in other ways. Fore each customer they keep computerized insurance and tax records. when it comes time for that information you won't have to mess with a number of little scraps of paper. Just give them a call at 684-0569 and they will get a complete print out of your prescriptions.

Graham says, 'We care about you and your continued good health."

Their service and wide selection are evidence of their concern for you.



Pharmacist Wes Graham of Graham's Pharmacy gives his customers the personal attention they want, whether they need a Band-Aid or a prescription.

Scooter's Plumbing has extensive showroom of fine GE appliances

At Scooter's Plumbing, 1101 W. Florida, you'll find an extensive GE appliance showroom for contractors and do-it-yourselfers, who know the value of a dollar and of quality.

Refrigerators, dishwashers, stoves, built-ins, trash compactors, microwaves, washers and dryers are all neatly displayed at Scooter's showroom. Even many of GE's newest kitchen appliance models, which are quickly proving their popularity, are displayed. A cooktop, equipped with two burners, along with a grill and griddle makes indoor barbecueing easy and fun. The new appliance color of the year is grey and Scooter's has it! For space saver kitchens, Scooter's has the GE microwave/hood combination. He also offers double ovens which include a conventional oven and a microwave oven. There's even a special space-maker microwave that mounts under cabinets. These are just a few of the newest items you'll find in this fine showroom.

Many built-ins are kept in stock and when ordering is necessary a week is usually all it takes.

One of the nicest things about Scooter's Plumbing is their quality GE appliances are displayed in vignettes so that it is easy to imagine how they will fit and look in a home. It sure beats trying to look at a catalog and picture what those appliances are really like.

Owner Roy Rotan is confident that if you compare prices you will return to Scooter's Plumbing to make your purchase.

Of course, Scooter's also offers quality fixtures and the fine Carrier line of air conditioners. Carrier is one of the largest air conditioning manufacturers in the nation. Best of all, Carrier has done extensive research to develop some of the most efficient units available. They know efficiency pays off.

An you'll find that it pays off to purchase your GE appliances and Carrier air conditioning from Scooter's Plumbing, 1101 W. Florida. Call 682-5984 or browse through the showroom, Monday through Friday, 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Dorothy Hall of Scooter's Plumbing, 1101 W. Florida, points out that their extensive showroom features quality General Electric appliances in kitchen-like vignettes.

The time is right to make your home's exterior maintenance-free

Dollar rebounds

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rebounded against most currencies early today in moderately active trading, boosted by intervention by Japan's central bank and OPEC's agreement to cut oil production.

At midmorning in Europe, the dollar was quoted at higher levels against all major currencies except the British pound, a petrocurrency, and the Canadian dollar.

London's five main bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $358.50 a troy ounce, down from Monday's late bid of $359.

In Zurich, gold was quoted at a bid of $358.60, down from $360.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell to $356.80 from $359.26.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $5.15 an ounce, down 3 cents from late Monday.

T-BILLS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell in Monday's auction to the lowest levels since 1977.

The Treasury Department sold $7.7 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.70 percent, down from 5.86 percent last week. Another $7.6 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.73 percent, down from 5.89 percent last week.

The rates for three-month bills were the lowest since Sept. 2, 1977, when they averaged 5.55 percent. Rates for six-month bills were the lowest since they sold for 5.68 percent on Aug. 8, 1977.

In a separate report, the Federal Reserve said Monday that the average yield for one-year Treasury bills, one of the most popular indexes for setting adjustable rate mortgages, was 6.27 percent last week, up slightly from 6.25 percent the previous week.

Oil analysts, traders split on OPEC accord

By LEE A. DANIELS
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Reports that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was on the verge of an agreement that would substantially curtail the group's oil output sent prices of crude oil and petroleum products surging, but also created a diversity of opinion among oil traders and analysts.

The agreement would set OPEC's total production quota at 16 million barrels a day — down from its current estimated output of 20.5 million barrels a day — in a bid to reverse the slide of crude oil prices that has caused severe financial distress for the OPEC countries.

That prospect "brought an immediate positive reaction" among traders on the New York Mercantile Exchange, said Richard Marose, senior oil analyst of Geldermann Inc. of Chicago. "This situation looks very good to traders," he added.

Andrew Lebow of Shearson Lehman Bros. Inc. said that the news, "at the very least, prompted a change in sentiment among traders; at most, it's provoked a lot of optimism."

However, oil analysts in the United States were divided on the news. There were those who said they remained skeptical about OPEC's ability to fashion a production accord but still considered the day's activities in Geneva a significant advance, and those who said that the prospects for an effective agreement remained slim.

"No one knows whether the agreement they're putting together now will stick or fall apart," said Lawrence J. Goldstein, executive vice president of the Petroleum Industry Research Council. "But the fact that a proposal to reinstitute a formal quota has gotten this far is clearly a surprise. They are making a serious attempt to get their hands around the production problem."

However, Philip K. Verleger Jr., a visiting fellow at the Institute for International Economics, said that several key questions about the agreement were as yet unanswered.

He said those questions include what the individual quotas for the OPEC countries would be, and how the new policy would be policed when OPEC only recently — in a market that was already glutted with crude oil — pushed its total production from 18 million barrels to above 20 million barrels a day.

Moreover, Verleger maintained that such factors as the desperate need of OPEC countries for revenues and the intractable emnity between Iran and Iraq would inevitably undermine any agreement.

Steve H. Hanke, chief economist for Friedberg Commodity Management Inc., said the agreement's effectiveness was suspect. He said one reason for that view was that the incentive of the OPEC members to cheat on a production accord at the current level of prices remained too large to ignore.

Another was that a cut of four million barrels a day in OPEC's output would seem to mean that the Saudis would have to substantially reduce their production. But Hanke said that for Saudi Arabia even to cut back to 4.5 million barrels a day from its present estimated output of six million barrels "would threaten to put it back in the role of the world's 'swing producer,' which it has said it won't do."

"So, who is going to cut?" Hanke asked. "I can't see where they're going to come up with the oil that they're not going to produce."

Nonetheless, the news of a pending agreement provided a shot in the arm to the spot and futures market where prices of crude oil and petroleum products had been battered through most of July. Analysts said many traders took advantage of the surge to eliminate their short positions, while others bought contracts because they believed prices would be even higher in the next few days.

West Texas Intermediate, the American benchmark crude oil, finished the day above $13 a barrel for the first time in two weeks. The West Texas grade finished at $13.29 a barrel, up $1.74 on the futures market, and surged by $1.77 on the London-based spot market, to $13.30 a barrel.

Brent North Sea crude oil, the British blend that is a key international marker, closed above $11 a barrel for the first time since June 30, rising by $1.20, to $11.05 a barrel.

Prices for heating oil rose to 38 cents a gallon, up nearly 5 cents, and leaded and unleaded gasoline both advanced 4 cents to each close at 37 cents a gallon.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

NIOSH set to close Dallas, six other offices

NEW YORK — The federal agency that researches occupational health and safety says it is closing seven of its 10 regional offices, prompting protests from labor unions and some politicians.

The National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health confirmed Monday that it would close regional offices in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Kansas City, Mo., Dallas, San Francisco and Seattle, effective Oct. 1.

NIOSH, an arm of the federal Centers for Disease Control, conducts research into hazards in the workplace, acting on requests from unions, individual workers and management.

Steelworkers: No negotiations with USX soon

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The United Steelworkers Union says it expects no negotiations soon in the dispute that idled 22,000 members at USX Corp., while the company says a long work stoppage would threaten workers' jobs.

"There's nothing happening, and we don't expect anything for some time...weeks," union spokesman Dick Fontana said Monday. The company warned in a statement that the union has misled workers over the poor condition of the industry

Work stopped Friday when the Steelworkers and the nation's largest steel maker, formerly U.S. Steel Corp., failed to reach agreement on a new contract.

West Coast 'Baby Bell' reaches labor accord

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pacific Telesis and the union representing 44,000 communications workers have announced a new three-year contract that union officials hope is a model for the six other regional Bell operating companies.

The union said Monday the agreement included a pledge of no layoffs, a 2 percent wage increase each of the next three years, a profit-sharing plan and a jointly-administered career development program.

Pacific Telesis is the first of the seven "Baby Bell" phone companies to reach an accord with the Communications Workers of America, which represents 310,000 workers whose contracts at the seven companies expire at midnight Saturday.

No relief in sight for pasta, citrus squabbles

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The European Common Market has called for a compromise in its trade dispute with the United States after talks over a pasta and citrus-fruit squabble made no progress.

Ambassadors from the 12 Common Market member states, acting for their governments, agreed Monday they did not want to break off the negotiations, a spokeswoman for the ambassadors said.

U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter failed Sunday to reach an agreement with European Commissioner for external relations Will De Clercq on ending the dispute.

Dole pushing for more ag export programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, not content with President Reagan's move to subsidize wheat sales to the Soviet Union, is keeping up pressure for more steps to revive slumping farm exports.

In a letter Monday to Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, Dole pressed for an extension of the export subsidy program to other crops and to other nations.

While he said he welcomed the sale of 4 million tons of U.S. wheat to the Soviets under the subsidy, Dole said the move could penalize exports of corn and other farm products.

Loews continuing to up stake in CBS stock

HOLLYWOOD — Loews Corp. disclosed Monday that it has raised its stake in CBS Inc. to 22.46 percent, in a move that seems certain to heighten tensions in the CBS boardroom.

A group of CBS directors last month sought unsuccessfully to wrest a "standstill" agreement from Loews at a private meeting with Loews Chairman Laurence A. Tisch, sources said Monday.

CBS directors reportedly suggested in vain that Loews sign an agreement not to acquire more than 25 percent. They expressed concern, the Wall Street Journal reported, that Loews' stock accumulation might be tantamount to a creeping tender offer.

At the time, Loews held 20.9 percent of CBS's stock.

Tisch could not be reached for comment Monday. However, in past interviews, the Loews chairman has said that his company intends to buy up to 25 percent of CBS's shares, which it began accumulating in July 1985.

LTV, creditors meet in restructuring bid

NEW YORK (AP) — The committee representing unsecured creditors of LTV Corp., which is reorganizing under federal bankruptcy laws, is scheduled to hold its first meeting with LTV's lawyers Wednesday, the committee's chairman says.

Lawrence P. Galie, assistant treasurer of Duquesne Light Co. in Pittsburgh and committee chairman, said Monday that during the private meeting in New York the committee would attempt "to get acquainted with where LTV intends to go with this filing, to get some kind of indication as to how they plan to treat creditors."

The committee's 21 members also plan to meet by themselves after seeing LTV's counsel, he said.

LTV, the Dallas-based parent of the nation's second-largest steelmaker that also has interests in energy and aerospace-defense, filed under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code on July 17.

Under Chapter 11, a company continues operating but is protected from creditors' lawsuits while it devises a plan to reorganize and pay its debts.

In its filing, made in New York, LTV listed total liabilities of $4.22 billion and assets of $6 billion, making it one of the largest bankruptcy filings in history by an industrial concern.

The creditors' committee, appointed last week by a bankruptcy court official, is intended to represent most of LTV's unsecured creditors in negotiations with LTV on the company's plan of reorganization.

Unsecured debts are those not backed by collateral.

The committee held its first organizational meeting Thursday, during which it hired a law firm and an accounting firm. Galie said the committee's primary task at the moment is to quickly become familiar with the Chapter 11 filings made by LTV and its 64 units, which total several thousand pages.

Meanwhile, another creditor, Chicago-based Commonwealth Edison Co., is negotiating with LTV about what amount of money LTV should provide as a security deposit to keep receiving Commonwealth's electric power, said James G. Poskozim, a Commonwealth lawyer.

USX workers hear warning

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The chief negotiator for USX Corp. appealed to 22,000 United Steelworkers to accept contract concessions or "your job prospects will be bleak."

A work stoppage, which is being called a strike by USX and a lockout by the USW, entered its fifth day today at 16 plants, and union officials said negotiations are not likely to resume for weeks.

In his first communication to the union's rank-and-file, USX executive vice president J. Bruce Johnston said the company is "facing an economic showdown with non-union competitors, bankrupt competitors and foreign competitors."

"Only a few basic steel companies may survive. There are not enough seats in the steel-lifeboat for everybody," he said in a three-page letter released Monday.

"Until Steelworker leaders begin to deal with the world the way it is, instead of the way they wish it were, your job prospects will be bleak ... When the union puts you out on a long strike, I hope you understand the risk that puts your job under," he said.

Phillips sells select properties to Shell

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co. said Monday it has sold several onshore and offshore exploration and production properties to Shell Oil Co. as part of a plan to reduce the energy company's heavy debt.

The purchase prices were not revealed, but Phillips said in a news release that the sales completed Friday added to the $1.7 billion worth of assets previously sold and pushed the total over the $1.95 billion mark.

"The sale of these properties essentially accomplishes our goal of $2 billion in asset sales," said C.J. Silas, chairman and chief executive officer. He said negotiations continue on other minor sales.

Shell purchased Phillips' interests in Huntington Beach Field south of Los Angeles, in Beta Field south of Huntington Beach, in Lion Rock Unit north of Point Arguello, in two tracts in the Midway-Sunset Field and the Mount Poso Field in the San Joaquin Valley and a portion of Phillips' interest in an offshore undeveloped tract in the Purisma Point Unit in the Santa Maria Basin.

The Huntington Beach Field, acquired in the 1984 purchase of Aminoil Inc., includes five offshore state leases totaling 3,540 acres and onshore leases totaling 2,100 acres. The field produces about 12,600 barrels of oil daily.

The Beta Field, in federal waters nine miles south of Huntington Beach, produces about 1,650 barrels of oil daily. The Lime Rock Unit includes five undeveloped offshore blocks.

Other interests Phillips said were sold earlier included a plant near Orange, Texas, to J.M. Huber Corp.; a company in Hannover, West Germany, to Columbian International Chemicals Corp.; and a minority interest in Negromex, a company that manufactures rubber and chemicals.

Phillips assumed debt totaling $8.6 billion as part of a restructuring program partly aimed at thwarting hostile takeover attempts over the past two years. The company's total debt has since been reduced to $6.4 billion.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Mississippian yields 115 barrel confirmer

From Staff Reports

GRUSS PETROLEUM MANAGEMENT INC., Midland, completed the second producer in the Youngblood (Mississippian) oil field, plugging back the No. 1 Youngblood "17".

The well, originally a Fusselman pay discovery in the same field, is a 3/8-mile northeast extension of Mississippian pay in the field. It flowed 115 barrels of 43.2 API gravity oil, with a GOR of 520:1.

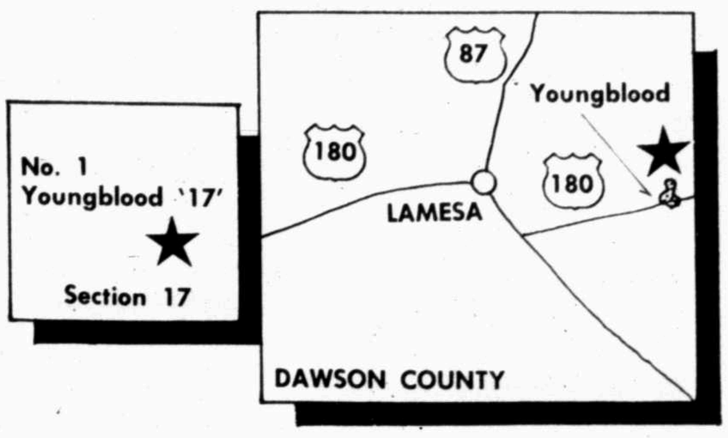
Production is from perforations at 10,206 and 10,214 through a 16/64-inch choke.

The Fusselman discovery was completed last December pumping 54 barrels of 42 gravity oil plus 18 barrels of water. The well tested for a GOR of 648:1 producing from perforations at 10,502 to 10,506 ft.

Old total depth on the well was 10,560 ft.

Gruss plugged the well back to 10,430 ft. and treated the producing formation with 500 gallons of acid.

Location is in Section 17-33-T5N, T&P Survey, Abstract 463, 14 miles east of Lamesa.



Roswell firm adds to Eddy/Lea field

SIETE OIL & GAS CORP., Roswell, extended the Shugart, East (Delaware) oil field 3/8-mile northeast into Lea County with completion of its No. 1 Conoco Federal, eight miles southwest of Maljamar.

The extender flowed 141 barrels of oil and 21 barrels of water plus 150 Mcf natural gas per day on test through an 18/64-inch choke.

Perforations in the well are between 5,190 and 5,221.

Five and one-half inch casing was set to the total depth of 5,500 ft., and the well was plugged back to 5,547 ft.

The well is located 660 feet from the south and west lines of Section 18-T18s-R32e.

Spraberry well pumps 82 bopd

MOBIL PRODUCING TEXAS & NEW MEXICO INC., Midland, completed its No. 2 Parks Field Unit "1823" as a producer in the Parks (Spraberry) field.

The well, in Section 15, C.F. O'Neal Survey 13 miles south of Midland, pumped 82 barrels of 36.6 API gravity oil, 167 barrels of water, and 90 Mcf natural gas per day from Spraberry perforations between 7,774 and 8,687 ft.

The pay zone was treated with 4,500 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid and 129,000 gallons of gel carrying 372,000 lbs of 20/40 sand.

Formations tops on ground elevation of 2,820 ft were picked at: Upper Spraberry, 7,770 and Lower Spraberry, 8,351.

Top of pay in the well was 7,774 ft.

The well site is 4,050 ft. from north and 3,236 ft. from east line of the section.

Panhandle plans rate reduction

HOUSTON (UPI) — Panhandle Eastern Corp.'s two interstate pipeline systems have requested authority to reduce their rates for the fall and winter, beginning Sept. 1, the company said recently.

In filings with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC), Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co. said it planned to reduce its commodity sales rate for natural gas sold to utility customers by 15 percent — from $3.43 per million British thermal units to $2.90 per million BTU.

Its affiliate, Trunkline Gas Co., requested authority to reduce its commodity sales rate from $3.47 to $3.26, a 6 percent decrease.

The reduction results from removal from the commodity rate of a special surcharge used by each pipeline to recover the amortized portion of deferred gas purchased costs from prior operating periods, a company spokesman said. The amortization covered the last three years.

Each pipeline system also asked the FERC to approve a flexible price change mechanism for the future that would allow changes to be made in the commodity rate level at more frequent intervals than the current schedule of twice yearly for Panhandle Eastern and annually for Trunkline.

Mesa attributes losses to decline in gas production

AMARILLO (SWN) Mesa Limited Partnership reported net income of $13.7 million, or $.20 per common unit, for the second quarter of 1986, according to general partner T. Boone Pickens, Jr. The second quarter earnings compare with pro forma net income of $17.5 million, or $.26 per common unit, for the same period in 1985.

The partnership reported revenues of $62.5 million and operating income of $22.7 million for the second quarter of 1986, compared with Pro Forma revenues and operating income of $87.6 million and $36.1 million a year earlier. The decline in revenues is primarily attributable to a 17 percent reduction in natural gas production and a 15 percent decrease in gas prices.

TGPL working toward Order 436 plan

HOUSTON (SWN) — Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp. (TGPL), a wholly owned subsidiary of Transco Energy Co., announced its intention to conduct business as an interim open access pipeline under the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission's (FERC) Order No. 436, and that it is accepting and undertaking new Natural Gas Policy Act Section 311 transporation arrangements in a nondiscriminatory manner as prescribed by FERC regulations.

According to W. J. Bowen, chairman and chief executive officer of Transco, "This decision was considered necessary by TPGL in order to carry out commitments relating to the resolution of certain pricing and take-or-pay issues in many of its contracts with its natural gas producer-suppliers pursuant to TGPL's proposed settlement plan to become an open access pipeline, which is currently pending before the FERC.

"The company has demonstrated good faith efforts along with its customers, the FERC staff and other interested parties to create a comprehensive Order 436 settlement plan," he explained. "TGPL chose to begin to conduct business on an interim open access basis while awaiting action by the commission on its settelement proposal."

Japan, South Korea end joint drilling project

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan and South Korea have suspended joint exploration for oil in the East China Sea after test drillings failed to trace promising deposits, a Japanese oil company said.

Nippon Oil Co. said work was suspended last week after no promising oil deposits were discovered in the sixth well.

"We have decided to stop work temporarily to analyze data obtained in the drilling of six wells," said a spokesman for the company. Under the current contract due to expire in May next year, Nippon Oil was obliged to sink the six wells.

Write-down wipes out profit at Howell Corp.

HOUSTON (SWN) — Howell Corp. announced earnings from operations of $115,000 or $0.02 per share and a non-cash loss of $9,278,000 or $1.93 per share from the write-down of oil and gas property values resulting in a net loss of $9,163,000 or $1.91 per share on revenues of $19,455,000 for the quarter ended June 30. For the second quarter of 1985, the company reported earnings of $1,171,000 or $0.25 per share on revenues of $27,909,000.

No exploratory wells have been drilled this year and none are planned at prevailing price levels. A number of non-economic wells have been shut-in; 6.3 percent of the company's wells have been either shut-in or plugged since the end of 1985.

Hughes Tool president named board chairman

HOUSTON — (SWN) W.A. Kistler, Jr., president and chief executive officer of Hughes Tool Co., has been elected chairman of the board by the board of directors. He retains the titles of president and chief executive officer.

Kistler, who joined Hughes Tool in 1947, was named president in 1982 and chief executive officer in 1985. He holds a BS degree from the University of Houston and an MS degree from Rice University. Kistler succeeds James R. Lesch, who retired July 31.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Swiss accounts pay lower interest

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am in the U.S. Air Force, stationed in Europe, and wonder what is so great about a Swiss bank account. Should I open one while in Europe? If so, what kind?

Doyle

A. The traditional allure of Swiss bank accounts has been secrecy. People who want to hide money from tax collectors and such have been tucking it away in Swiss accounts for generations.

However, in a number of cases, that veil of secrecy has been pieced by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission and other authorities.

More important, you're required to disclose if you have a foreign account when you fill out your U.S. income tax return. That disclosure is made at the bottom of Schedule B on which you report interest and dividend income.

And Swiss bank accounts now pay lower interest than is available at U.S. banks. Assuming you are an honest taxpayer, there's no good reason to open a Swiss account.

Q. Please solve the riddle of newspaper foreign exchange quotations. For example, take Canadian money. On a recent day, in the column headed "Foreign Currency in (U.S.) Dollars," the Canadian dollar was listed as ".72," meaning it was worth 72 U.S. cents. In the column headed "Dollar in Foreign Currency," the number was "1.37," meaning each U.S. dollar was worth $1.37 in Canadian money.

Shouldn't the "1.37" have been "1.28," so that the U.S. currency would be just as many cents above one dollar as the Canadian currency is below one dollar?

A. Nope. That would throw the quotations way out of whack.

On the day you mention, the U.S. dollar was at a 37 percent premium over the Canadian dollar. In very large foreign exchange transactions, each U.S. dollar bought $1.37 of Canadian money.

Now, look to the other side of such a transaction. In order to purchase U.S. currency, a buyer using Canadian currency had to pay a 37 percent premium. With the Canadian dollar worth 72 U.S. cents, that buyer had to pay $1.37 Canadian for each U.S. dollar. Do the arithmetic as follows: 1.37 times 72 equals one.

Q. When I return from trips abroad, I invariably have some foreign currency left. When I exchange it at my bank, I never receive what I think I should.

For instance, after my most recent visit to Ireland, I had exactly 100 punt. The newspaper foreign exchange table listed the punt as being worth $1.38 in U.S. currency. I expected to get $138 for the 100 punt, but I got only $132.

When I asked why, three people at the bank gave the same reply: "Pay no attention to the newspapers." Can you explain this?

A. Newspaper foreign exchange quotations are for transactions involving $1 million and more. Smaller transactions provide fewer units of foreign currency per dollar. You'll find that explanation at the top of most newspaper foreign exchange tables.

Naturally, when you're dealing in small amounts, you don't get as many punt, francs, marks, lire or any other currency as you would by dealing in $1 million amounts.

The newspaper foreign exchange rates are for the previous day. Those rates can change from one day to the next — sometimes, from one minute to the next — and might have been different by the time you got to your bank.

Also, be aware that foreign exchange rates often vary from one bank to another. You might get a better rate by going to a different bank. This is another situation in which it's always wise to shop around.

Q. We own "Ginnie Maes" — Government National Mortgage Association pass-through securities — from which we receive monthly checks for both interest and principal. The man who prepared our 1985 income tax return listed the full amount of those payments as taxable income. I feel that only the interest was taxable and that the principal should not have been reported as taxable income.

I'm having a problem convincing the tax-preparer to file an amended return. Am I correct?

A. Indeed, you are. A Ginnie Mae security is backed by a pool of mortgages. Each month, as homeowners make payments on those mortgages, you receive a check — part of which represents interest and part of which represents payments of principal on the mortgages.

Only the interest portion is taxable income to you. The principal payments result from your own money being returned to you and are not taxable.

An amended income tax return — Form 1040X — should be filed for 1985. If you can't convince the preparer who handled your 1985 return to file the amended return, go elsewhere or do it yourself. I suspect you'll be using a different taxpreparer in the future.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Gadhafi says he would spit on Reagan if they ever met

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi told Brazilian television that he would spit on President Reagan if he ever met him.

"Reagan is insignificant, a fool. He should be locked up," Gadhafi was quoted as saying in the network's Portuguese translation of his remarks in Arabic.

The report, broadcast Sunday, did not say when Gadhafi was interviewed, but local newspapers said it was July 28.

The Libyan leader was interviewed by TV Bandeirantes in what the report said were the remains of his house in Tripoli which U.S. warplanes bombed April 15. President Reagan called the raid a retaliatory strike for Libyan support for terrorists.

"If I were to meet Reagan, I would spit in his face," Gadhafi was quoted as saying.

When asked about Libya's alleged assistance to terrorists, he asserted, "I only help those who are victims of the great terrorism of the Western powers. We are helping just causes. In the Pnilippines, there are Moslems who are permanently bullied and threatened and attacked at times in the mosques while saying their prayers. To these people we extend our hand."

Soviet emigration drops

GENEVA (AP) — The number of Jews allowed to leave the Soviet Union dropped to 31 in July, the lowest total in 11 months, according to the agency that helps the emigres resettle.

Twelve of the Soviet Jews went to Israel and the rest went to Italy to obtain visas for other destinations, a spokesman for the Intergovernmental Committee for Migration said Monday.

A total of 447 Jews have been allowed to leave the Soviet Union this year, the group said. Fifty-five left in June.

Last year, Soviet authorities let 1,140 Jews emigrate, far below the program's peak in 1979, when 51,330 left the country.

Last August, 29 Soviet Jews were allowed to leave the country.

Fuji has summer snow

TOKYO (AP) — Mount Fuji, Japan's highest mountain, was covered with snow because of an unusual summer cold snap, a weatherman said today.

It was the first time in 14 years that the 12,388-foot dormant volcano registered a snowfall in August, said Jinji Koike, an official of the Central Meteorological Agency's Mount Fuji weather station.

Koike said the snow fell late Sunday through early Monday, covering the upper reaches of the mountain.

The flakes changed to raindrops after about six hours.

"It was quite rare to have Mount Fuji covered with snow at this time of the season," Koike said.

A cold front with temperatures as low as 27½ degrees caused the snow, he said.

Crash victim hospitalized

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A 42-year-old man remains hospitalized with serious injuries suffered in last week's crash of a small plane in downtown Mexico City, the government newspaper reported.

El Nacional said Ramon Gonzalez Robles was still receiving treatment for head injuries in the intensive care unit of Balbuena Hospital.

The newspaper quoted the Public Ministry as saying two other men remained hospitalized but their injuries were less serious.

In all, 16 people were injured Thursday afternoon when the twin-engine Cessna 310 struck two buildings before breaking up on Lazaro Cardenas Avenue, one of the capital's busiest thoroughfares.

Federal investigators are searching the wreckage of the plane for the cause of the crash. The government news agency Notimex reported initially that the accident was apparently caused by mechanical failure.

Nobel laureates will address peace forum

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — Bishop Desmond Tutu and two other Nobel laureates today viewed artifacts and photos of history's first nuclear attack and laid flowers on a monument marking Ground Zero.

"This whole thing is quite devastating," said Tutu, the black Anglican prelate from South Africa who won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1984. He said his visit to Hiroshima made him "ever more...committed to work so that an event such as this one will never occur again."

An estimated 50,000 people are expected to attend a memorial service in the city on Wednesday, the 41st anniversary of the attack.

An atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima by a U.S. B-29 on Aug. 6, 1945, killed up to 140,000 people. Three days later, another bomb was dropped on Nagasaki that killed about 70,000 people.

Japan surrendered to the United States on Aug. 14, ending World War II.

Tutu, Linus Pauling of the United States and Briton Dorothy Hodgkin toured Hiroshima's Peace Memorial Museum, listening to explanations and the personal recollections of museum director Yoshitaka Kawamoto, a survivor of the bombing.

The three came to Hiroshima to participate in a peace forum, organized on the occasion of the United Nations International Year of Peace. Pauling won the 1954 Nobel in chemistry and the Nobel Peace Prize in 1962. Ms. Hodgkin received the Nobel for chemistry in 1964.

Pauling, who is visiting the city for the second time, said, "My impression was much like the first — horror."

On the progress of science which produced such weapons, he said, "Well, it's the politicans that misuse it."

After viewing photographs from the Hiroshima bombing as well as the remains of a building devastated by the blast, Tutu said, "In the past one thought you knew. Now you've seen it — you don't even have words to describe it."

Later the three laureates, accompanied by Hiroshima Mayor Takeshi Araki, laid bouquets of chrysanthemums and lilies at a cenotaph in Hiroshima's Peace Memorial Park, and stood under the hot summer sun for a moment of silence.

"Rest in Peace. The Mistake shall not be Repeated," reads an inscription on the cenotaph, which lists the identified victims of the bombing.

On Monday, buses from around Japan lined the parking lot, and dozens of people wearing banners of regional anti-nuclear groups strolled the grounds, which are dotted with memorial statues.

Nobel Prize winning American chemist Linus Pauling visited Peace Memorial Park in Hiroshima today. Pauling is scheduled to address the "Hiroshima Peace Summit" on Wednesday, the 41th anniversary of the atomic bombing.

Mexico, Venezuela will continue providing oil

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico and Venezuela have agreed to extend for another year an agreement under which they provide oil to nine developing countries in Central America and the Caribbean at preferable rates.

President Miguel de la Madrid of Mexico on Sunday signed the agreement in Mexico City and President Jaime Lusinchi signed it simultaneously for Venezuela in Caracas.

A statement from the Mexican Foreign Ministry said the agreement would continue for a seventh year the San Jose accord which the two nations reached on Aug. 3, 1980, in San Jose, Costa Rica.

As a result, Mexico and Venezuela will guarantee the countries as much as a total of 130,000 barrels of oil a day, the statement said. Each country will supply an equal amount of crude.

The agreement also said Mexico and Venezuela will earmark the equivalent of 20 percent of the beneficiary countries' oil bills to finance commercial trade or economic development projects.

Short-term loans to those countries, it said, will be provided at a concessionary interest rate of 8 percent a year for five years. Long-term credits will be offered at an annual interest rate of 6 percent for 12 years.

Mexico and Venezuela are Latin America's two biggest oil suppliers. Both have been hurt by the sharp drop in oil prices on the world market.

In their declaration, the presidents said they took into account that "instability and uncertainty still characterize the world oil market and that the fall in the prices of oil unfavorably affect the economic and financial situation of both countries."

They said, however, that both countries wanted "to support actions of cooperation that contribute to the economic and social development of the region as do guaranteeing the oil supply and the allocation of credit resources to finance regional commerce."

When the two countries first agreed to the pact, both were reaping an economic bonanza from their oil wealth.
