Economists in Texas don't expect boom

■ Effects of spiraling oil prices may not be felt in Texas before six months, experts say.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Texas boomed during the early 1980s when much of the United States suffered through a recession, but economists warn the state will not be as fortunate during the next economic tailspin.

Unlike a decade ago, the oil and gas industry in Texas and the other Energy Belt states is short of manpower and equipment, while lenders and investors remain skittish after getting burned when oil prices collapsed in the mid-80s.

"Some of the stimulus we're getting (from higher oil prices) will keep our economy comparatively healthy," said Bernard L. Weinstein, an economist at the University of North Texas. "But it's not going to be like the early '80s when we were booming while the rest of the country was contracting."

Employment in the state's oil and gas industry has fallen drastically since 1981, and the industry's share of state tax revenues has fallen by two-thirds.

As a result, Texas could suffer with the rest of the nation for as long as six months before it benefits from spiraling energy prices, said Thomas R. Plaut, a senior economist in the state comptroller's office.

Plaut said the initial shock of higher energy costs will slow the state's economy as manufacturers and transportation companies are hit hard. It will take several months for the energy industry to rebound sufficiently, he said.

Texas, however, should eventually benefit, Plaut said.

"In the short term, there will be a negative effect on Texas," Plaut said. "But in the long term, the same factor that is driving the rest of the economy into recession — high oil prices — will help Texas."

A study by the comptroller's office estimates a national recession will cost Texas about 40,000 new jobs in 1990. By 1991, however, continued high oil prices could produce a gain of 90,000 jobs in the state.

There appears to be little doubt that the national economy is either in a recession or rapidly approaching one. Economists across the nation have been racing to issue recession predictions, with the only disagreement seemingly over how severe the contraction will be.

The national economy has been leaning toward recession for some time, but the current concern stems from the aftermath of Iraqi's invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2.

PLO's Arafat says Saddam shows flexibility

■ PLO chairman says Iraq's president has softenend his stance on withdrawal from Kuwait.

Associated Press

PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat said Sunday that Saddam Hussein was showing a "certain flexibility" regarding his claims to Kuwait and urged all countries involved in the gulf crisis to follow suit.

The Palestine Liberation Organization leader held a news conference in Tunis, Tunisia, with French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas, after discussing the gulf and the deaths of 19 Palestinians last week in Jerusalem.

Experts say cooler state temperatures not trend

■ Researchers summarize Texas' climate in the 1980s and chart temperature and precipitation.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — State weather experts say the cooler temperatures that have swept through Texas recently are not necessarily a sign of things to come.

"The numbers indicate to us that Texas temperatures have been showing a decrease, but that doesn't mean the decade of the '90s won't turn that around completely," said John Griffiths, state climatologist and a meteorology professor at Texas A&M University.

"It certainly doesn't mean the temperature of North America as a whole and the globe as a whole is going down."

Griffiths warns against drawing any conclusions about the "greenhouse effect" from recent weather patterns.

The "greenhouse effect" theory holds that carbon dioxide and other pollutants known as "greenhouse gases" are accumulating in the atmosphere, where they will trap solar radiation and warm the Earth.

Computer projections indicate that the warming trend would be regionally spotty, with some areas actually getting cooler as average global temperatures climb.

Some climate researchers have said they see evidence of global warming in temperature records, but Griffiths and several colleagues expressed skepticism in their recent study, "A Decade of Texas Weather: 1980-1989."

In the publication, they say it is unlikely the network of worldwide climate-observation stations is either reliable or representative enough to detect such a trend, if

TAAS will be administered to MISD students

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland students will get their first taste of the new TAAS test beginning Tuesday.

The TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) test was recently adopted by the State Board of Education (SBE) to replace the TEAMS (Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills) which had been administered since 1985.

The TAAS test will have longer reading selections and will emphasize "higher-order thinking skills and problem-solving abilities" according to the state board.

The SBE said the test will be administered to about 1.5 million students in grades three, five, seven, nine and 11.

Midland students will take the test in three parts — writing, reading and math — over a three-day period, according to Joe Cummins, testing ad-

Eisenhower remembered on 100th birthday

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Dwight D. Eisenhower, born 100 years ago Sunday, was remembered in a birthday celebration as the consummate American who set the standard in patriotism.

About 1,500 people, including former President Ford, paid tribute to the World War II commander and 34th president of the United States in ceremonies at Gettysburg College, near where he retired after his second term ended in 1961.

In Abilene, Kan., an estimated 30,000 people swelled the prairie town of 6,600 for a centennial tribute. Hundreds of World War II veterans arrived on the same type of trains that carried them off to war a half-century ago.

Though he was born in Denison, Texas, Eisenhower spent most of his childhood in Abilene, and called it home. He died in March 1969 at Walter Reed Army Hospital in Bethesda, Md.

Eisenhower's grandson, David, took part in an hour-long program in Gettysburg with his wife, Julie Nixon Eisenhower, who brought greetings from her father, former President Nixon.

"He came from the heart of America and he touched the hearts of the world," wrote Nixon, Eisenhower's vice president.

"As America and the world face a future bright with hope, the example of Ike's lifetime of leadership will continue to exercise a beneficent influence on future generations," Ford said on a campus lawn near a statue of Eisenhower. "We are

SSC opponents find satisfaction in budget cut

WAXAHACHIE (AP) — A measure that sliced $75 million in federal funding from the superconducting super collider is being viewed as a victory for those who oppose the giant atom smasher.

A congressional panel cut almost one-fourth of the $318 million it had approved for the project, which is to be built south of Dallas in Ellis County. The cut is part of a deficit-reduction pact negotiated by Congress and the Bush administration.

The collider, which will cost an estimated $8 billion to $12 billion, would wipe out the tiny town of Boz, which has a population of 200, just south of Waxahachie, and force residents to relocate.

"I see this as a positive step," said Roger Williams Jr., a Boz resident. "This is what happens when you mix politics and science. Maybe some of (the legislators) see this as a chance to save money rather than throwing it away on this project."

George Caddel of Waxahachie, one of the project's most vocal opponents, stands to lose about 60 acres because of the project and says Friday's action by the panel could be a blessing to landowners opposing the project.

"It could be that some (legislators) aren't as much in favor of the project as they once were," he said.

Caddel, however, added that it "could just be a delay which

PIQUA, Ohio (AP) — Wearing underwear — and nothing else — in public is becoming a proud tradition in this western Ohio town's annual "Made in Piqua" parade.

Patricia Cunningham Flesh, 83, grand marshal of Sunday's Great Outdoor Underwear Festival, said underwear has been good to her family and the community. She is the widow of Alfred Flesh, whose father, Leo, founded the Atlas Underwear Co.

Organizers said that the parade, with at least one of its entries touting the virtues of underwear, is a family affair. Risque lingerie is not welcome.

Composer, conductor Leonard Bernstein dies

By Beth Harpaz

NEW YORK (AP) — Leonard Bernstein, the impassioned American maestro who thrilled an international multitude with his spirited shows, "On the Town" and "West Side Story," his podium pirouettes and his hundreds of recordings, died Sunday. He was 72.

Bernstein

Bernstein died in his Manhattan apartment, his spokeswoman, Margaret Carson said.

Bernstein died in the presence of his physician, Kevin M. Cahill, who said the cause of death was sudden cardiac arrest caused by progressive lung failure.

On Cahill's advice, Bernstein had announced Tuesday that he would retire from conducting. Cahill said progressive emphysema complicated by a pleural tumor and a series of lung infections had left Bernstein too weak to continue working.

In recent months he canceled performances with increasing frequency. His last conducting appearance was at Tanglewood, Mass., on Aug. 19.

"It's really shocking to discover he was this ill. We thought we lost him as a conductor but we thought we would count on his teaching and composing for years," Kenneth Haas, managing director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, said Sunday night.

The son of Russian-Jewish immigrants, he was a conductor, pianist, educator, author and composer. His compositions included the theatrical, chamber music, symphonies, ballet and even a Mass.

He led an orchestra performance at a liberated concentration camp, raised money for the Black Panthers and on Christmas 1989 celebrated the demise of the Berlin Wall by conducting Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony," substituting the word "freedom" for "joy" in its last movement, the "Ode to Joy."

He won Grammys, Emmys and Tony, but in November 1989 refused to accept the National Medal of Arts to protest cancellation of a $10,000 National Endowment for the Arts grant for a New York art exhibit about AIDS.

Bernstein was 25 when he got his first major break. On Nov. 14, 1943, he filled in at the last minute for an ailing Bruno Walter to conduct the New York Philharmonic in a concert broadcast on national radio. The triumph of the orchestra's newly appointed assistant conductor was was big enough to join the World War II headlines on The New York Times' front page.

His surprise appearance seemed to fulfill the prophecy of one of his friends, who said: "Lenny is doomed to success."

"I walked on with an awful hangover and don't remember another thing until I heard a thunderous ovation," Bernstein recalled years later.

On the podium, his jabs, contortions and leaps occasionally caused him to fall. "He shagged, shimmied and, believe it or not, bumped," the late music critic Virgil Thomson once said.

"Bernstein rose vertically, a la Nijinsky, and hovered there a good 15 seconds," New York Times critic Harold Schonberg wrote.

But later, on the occasion of Bernstein's 1,000th performance with the Philharmonic, on Dec. 15, 1971, Schonberg wrote: "At this time it is only right to put reservations aside and salute Bernstein for what he did and even for what he tried to do. Bernstein was a figure that no conductor in history has matched."

Bernstein maintained that conductors should be actors.

"I don't mean that when the music is tragic you've got to act like Barrymore in 'Hamlet,'" he once said. "But you have to indicate to the orchestra by your body and your face, which is all you've got, what the shape of the phrase is."

Born in Lawrence, Mass., Bernstein got a relatively late start in music. The boy genius was 10 when his Aunt Clara gave the family an upright piano. But he always had an ear for music, recalled his mother, Jennie.

"When he was 4 or 5, he would play an imaginary piano on his windowsill," Mrs. Bernstein said in Joan Peyser's 1987 biography "Bernstein: A Biography." "When we finally got a piano, he did what he now says he did: made love to it all the time."

His father, Sam, however, hoped Lenny would join his beauty supply business. Lenny persisted with piano. He went on to study under Walter Piston at Harvard, Fritz Reiner at Curtis Institute, and Serge Koussevitzky at the Boston Symphony's summer Tanglewood retreat.

During his Harvard days, he met conductor Dimitri Mitropoulis, who recognized his genius and encouraged him to pursue conducting. He also met Aaron Copland at a 1937 concert. Later that night, at a party for Copland's 37th birthday, Bernstein impressed the composer with an impromptu performance without the sheet music of his difficult "Piano Variations."

With Copland's help, Bernstein pursued classical composition. He had written "Jeremiah," the first of his three symphonies, before Artur Rodzinski appointed him his assistant at the New York Philharmonic in 1943.

That year, he also wrote the ballet "Fancy Free," about three sailors' 24-hour shore leave in New York. It became Broadway's "On The Town," was a smash and later made into a movie.

Soon to come were his chamber opera "Trouble In Tahiti"; the movie score for "On the Waterfront," for which he was nominated for an Academy Award; and Broadway's "Wonderful Town," for which Bernstein won his only Tony Award. Later came Broadway's "Candide," and the immortal "West Side Story," the Romeo-and-Juliet tale set amidst the fire escapes and street gang warfare of Manhattan.

In 1957, the year he completed "West Side Story," Bernstein joined Mitropoulis as co-director of the New York Philharmonic, and the following year became its first American-born director.

During his 11-year tenure, Bernstein led the orchestra on tours of South America, Europe and Asia, and on numerous national television appearances. His televised "Young People's Concerts" helped introduce the baby-boom generation to classical music and won 11 Emmy Awards.

In 1969, Bernstein gave up his post as Philharmonic music director to devote more time to composition.

While Bernstein's musical fame grew, his celebrity blossomed. In 1970, he threw what became known as "that party at Lenny's" — his star-studded fund-raiser for the Black Panthers that writer Tom Wolfe mocked as "radical chic."

After the 1978 death of his wife, Chilean actress Felicia Montealegre, he slipped into months of depression. Later, he divided much of his time between his homes in Manhattan, Fairfield, Conn., and Austria, where he often appeared with the Vienna Philharmonic.

At age 69, he published two compositions "My Twelve Tone Melody," for the late Irving Berlin's 100th birthday, and "Jubilee Games," to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, with which he had long been associated.

"I haven't slept very much in months," Bernstein told reporters before a gala 70th birthday celebration at Tanglewood. "I have no further request of the fates except time to write my music. ... I've got a lot of music to write."

Survivors include son Alexander, a teacher; and two daughters — Jaime Thomas, a rock musician, and Nina Bernstein, an actress.

GULF: Iran, Iraq exchange diplomats

(From 1A)

Arafat, who recently returned from meetings in Baghdad with Saddam, said the Iraqi president had softened his stance on withdrawing from Kuwait, which Iraqi forces invaded on Aug. 2. Arafat did not elaborate. Later Sunday, Arafat flew to Baghdad for further talks with Saddam, the Iraqi News Agency said.

Saddam has previously linked a gulf settlement to Israeli withdrawal from territories claimed by the Palestinians.

Moscow's government-run Novosti Press Agency said in a published report Sunday that Saddam gave similar indications of flexibility on Kuwait to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's envoy in Baghdad last week.

In other developments, Iran and Iraq reopened embassies in each other's capitals, resuming full diplomatic ties after a decade of hostility, Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency reported Sunday.

The exchange of diplomats came two years after a U.N.-brokered cease-fire halted hostilities in the eight-year Iran-Iraq war.

Saddam is believed to be seeking Iranian help in circumventing the U.N. embargo imposed to force him out of Kuwait. Reports have said food shipments reached Iraq from Iran across their 730-mile border.

Also Sunday, Kuwaiti opposition figures continued meetings in Jiddah, Saudia Arabia, with their government-in-exile and said they wanted guarantees of democratic reform in a future liberated Kuwait.

The Iraqi invasion caught a group of Kuwaiti activists in the midst of a pro-democracy struggle over demands for a Western-style parliament.

Kuwait's parliament was suspended in 1986 because of pressure from opposition deputies at a time when the country was the target of a terrorist campaign meant to break Kuwait's support for Iraq in the Iran-Iraq war.

An estimated 750 Kuwaiti politicians, businessmen and economists met behind closed doors at the conference palace to discuss ways of achieving national unity under the leadership of the emir, Sheik Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah.

Many said they were doubtful the trade embargo would work and that they hoped the U.S.-led multinational force in the Gulf would launch military action against Iraq.

Lebanon, France quarrel over Aoun

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon and France quarreled Sunday over the fate of Gen. Michel Aoun, whose 11-month mutiny in the Christian heartland was crushed by a Syrian-led military blitz.

Aoun remained inside the French Embassy, where he fled during Saturday's attack and was granted asylum.

Lebanese officials were insisting the 55-year-old general remain in the country for possible trial on charges including the alleged theft of $75 million from the state treasury.

"We shall not violate international law and go get Aoun out of the French Embassy," Justice Minister Edmond Rizk said in a statement. "But we shall exercise our judicial rights if the embassy decides to take him out of Lebanon because he is wanted for trial."

Staccato bursts of machine-gun fire echoed across the pine woods surrounding the shell-shattered presidential palace in the Christian suburb of Baabda. Helmeted Syrian troops searched the hills for supporters of the defeated general.

Aoun was forced into surrender Saturday after 11 months of resisting the Syrian-backed government. His defeat moved Lebanon closer to an end of its 15-year-old civil war.

The Christian general had opposed the government's peace plan, which gives the Moslem majority an equal share of power but gives no timetable for withdrawing the 40,000 Syrian troops in the country.

After fighting battles with the Syrians, Moslems and a rival Christian militia, Aoun's territory had been reduced to an 80-square-mile enclave north and east of Beirut.

He escaped an assassination attempt Friday night and had pledged to "die fighting." But he fled his headquarters during the onslaught by Syrian troops.

The casualty toll from the eight-hour crackdown on Aoun's enclave stood at 160 dead and 800 wounded, by police count.

The casualties included 32 Syrian soldiers killed and 85 wounded. Their bodies were flown to Damascus by two Syrian army helicopters, police said.

Syrian and Lebanese troops set up checkpoints on roads leading to the French Embassy in Beirut's Christian suburb of Hazmiyeh. Embassy guards mined the walls.

Syrian soldiers and troops of Hrawi's army besieged the embassy Saturday night, hours after Aoun and three senior aides took refuge there. The embassy compound also houses Ambassador Rene Ala's residence.

There were no soldiers in the embassy's immediate vicinity later Sunday.

The embassy's swimming pool was hit by shells, as was the main lobby. A carpet of glass shards and debris blanketed the main entrance.

France, the traditional protector of Lebanon's Christians, promptly granted Aoun asylum Saturday.

ECONOMY: Boom not expected

(From 1A)

Oil prices since then have doubled to the $40-a-barrel range, bringing back memories of the 1981-82 recession, the nation's worst economic downturn since the Great Depression of the 1930s.

A decade ago, it was Mideast turmoil and the 1979 Iranian revolution that sent crude prices on an upward spiral. The price fueled double-digit inflation, which, in turn, convinced the Federal Reserve Board to put on the brakes by tightening the money supply.

Interest rates skyrocketed past 20 percent and the U.S. economy went into a tailspin.

Texas, however, was experiencing an oil-fired expansion and the number of drilling rigs in operation surpassed 1,300 — up from 500 in 1974 — and non-farm employment in Texas grew by 5.6 percent in 1981, compared to less than 1 percent growth for the entire United States.

But then oil prices collapsed in the mid-1980s, pulling the state's banking and real estate industries down. The rig count plummeted to 312, while banks and savings and loans went belly up by the dozen. The office vacancy rates across Texas were the highest in the nation.

Lenders and investors still remember when the bottom fell out of the oil patch.

"You'd be crazy to make loans now based on $35-a-barrel oil," said Robert Lane, president of NCNB Texas National Bank. "Texas lenders were burned twice in the 1980s on energy and real estate, and they ought to be pretty skeptical about artificially induced price movement."

COOLER: Texas' weather studied

it is happening, amid natural year-to-year temperature variations.

Among the variations that the report noted in the 1980s in Texas was one that bracketed the decade: July 1980 was the state's hottest month on record, and a cold front last December shattered cold-weather records.

In addition to summarizing Texas climate developments in the 1980s, the study also charts temperature and precipitation trends in the state from 1888 through last year.

Among the conclusions of its statistical analysis:

■ From 1888 to 1989, annual average temperatures for the entire state showed a decrease of 0.8 degrees Fahrenheit.

■ There was an increase of 0.6 degrees from 1888 to 1939, followed by a decrease of 1.1 degrees from 1940 to 1989.

■ No precipitation trend, upward or downward, could be discerned during the period starting in 1888.

There were some non-climate factors — such as the movement of Houston's official temperature station from Hobby Airport to the generally cooler location of Intercontinental Airport about 20 years ago — that could have affected the statistics, Griffiths said.

Generally, however, he said he thinks the downward temperature trend is real, especially for the period after 1940.

"In Texas, we use figures based on 400 stations and that number hasn't altered much since 1940," he said. "I have reasonable faith in that period."

blessed with the heritage of Dwight D. Eisenhower."

The birthday celebration ended a five-day symposium on his presidency at Gettysburg College, where he served as a trustee. Scholars and administrators met to discuss Eisenhower's impact on leaders that followed him.

In a letter read at the ceremony, former President Carter said Eisenhower was brilliant in war but should be celebrated for his accomplishments for peace. "For him, national defense was more than the manufacturing of weapons," Carter wrote.

On Sunday, Ford, David Eisenhower and Bob Hope posed in front of a red-white-and-blue birthday cake whose center was shaped like an old "I Like Ike" button from Eisenhower's campaigns.

Eisenhower and his wife, Mamie, bought a farm in Gettysburg in 1951, using it as a retreat during his presidency and retiring there after he left office. It was their first place to call their own. Eisenhower lived there until shortly before his death. Mrs. Eisenhower died in 1979.

"It is most fitting," remarked Ford, "that the centennial of Ike's birth falls during this particular year, for 1990 has seen the realization of Ike's most cherished dreams and the fruition of his finest work.

"How much we all wish that Ike could have witnessed the events of the past year: human achievement of peace, justice and freedom in Europe, for which he laid the foundation in World War II and during his presidency," Ford said.

Hope, after a series of jokes poking fun at Eisenhower's military demeanor in all walks of life, such as his ordering golf putts to "fall in," summed up the mood of the crowd.

"Americans not only liked Ike. They loved him," Hope said.

Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, represented President Bush at the ceremony in Abilene. Powell said Eisenhower advocated a strong military and would have approved the huge military buildup in the Middle East aimed at rolling back Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

TAAS: Students to take new test

ministrator for Midland Independent School District.

"The test will be taken during the first period of the student's class on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday," Cummins said. He said the test will not be timed and is an indicator of knowledge rather than speed. "The majority of students will probably finish each section within two hours," he said.

Cummins said the final results of the test most likely won't be reported by the state until Dec. 1. "It's being done differently this year," Cummins said. "We will probably receive the scores of the objective parts of the test in November, but the scoring for the written part of the reading and writing sections will take a little longer."

According to Commissioner of Education W.N. Kirby, the new test will "challenge Texas school districts to ensure that their students are receiving instruction in all the essential elements of the curriculum in order for them to master the TAAS tests."

Cummins said that although no one in the state knows how well students will score on the test, he expects Midland students to do well.

"Students need to be sure to come to school Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday," Cummins said. "They should eat a good breakfast and just do the best they can."

The TAAS exit-level test will also require students to compose a writing sample which has not been required on the TEAMS exit-level test in the past.

SSC: Budget cut viewed as victory will only raise the cost."

Taxpayers could be spared further expenses if legislators opted to modify existing, smaller atom smashers rather than build new ones, Caddel said.

Some, however, view the cut as a mere delay in the physics research project, which would have a 54-mile underground ring for accelerating atomic particles.

Residents generally said they favored cutting collider funds to help balance the federal budget.

"I'd just as soon see it not come here at all," said J.W. Lee, a plant inspector. "Maybe this means they'll (eventually) scrap the whole project."

Regimes elected in states of former East Germany

BERLIN (AP) — Voters in what used to be East Germany chose governments Sunday for the five states their nation has become and again backed the conservative party of Chancellor Helmut Kohl, projections said.

The projected results will add even more momentum to Kohl's already dominant position going into national elections on Dec. 2.

Sunday's elections also finally gave former East Germany state governments a chance to match the federalist system of the western region, a major step to dismantling the old Communist structure.

In the western state of Bavaria, the radical right-wing Republican Party won seats for the first time.

The prevailing theme in eastern Germany was again the dominance of the Christian Democrats, although their support was lower than in East Germany's first free elections in March.

The former Communists who ruled East Germany for 40 years also apparently won seats in state legislatures, indicating they still have enough support to win a place in the united German Parliament in December.

Kohl's party easily won the most votes in four of five East German states, Thuringia, Saxony, Saxony-Anhalt and Mecklenburg-Lower Pomerania, according to projections by the German television networks, ARD and ZDF.

However, the Christian Democrats were losing the state of Brandenburg to the left-leaning Social Democrats, the main opposition. In the March national elections, the Christian Democrats won that state.

The early projections solidified the Christian Democrats as the dominant party in East German territory, thus giving something of a preview of the united German elections on Dec. 2.

Those elections will be the first united German elections in 60 years. Kohl, the politician most responsible for uniting the German states on Oct. 3, is widely favored to win.

Wolfgang Thierse, a top Social Democrat in eastern Germany, said the Christian Democrats dominated because they promised quick prosperity to the downtrodden eastern Germans.

"We can't present ourselves, and don't want to present ourselves, as the party of big money," he said. "We also can't present ourselves as miracle workers."

Across the region, the television projections had the Christian Democrats with 44 percent of the vote, the Social Democrats with 25, and the former Communists with 11 percent.

If they clear 5 percent of the vote, the former Communists are guaranteed seats in the state legislatures.

The reformed Communists, now called the Party of Democratic Socialism, have been the third-strongest party in the nation since they were ousted from power.

Party leader Gregor Gysi predicted the party would retain enough support to win Parliament seats in the national elections.

In wealthy Bavaria, the largest of the states on West German territory, the arch-conservative Christian Social Union was again dominant, according to the television projections.

The projections showed the ultra-right Republican Party close to clearing the 5 percent hurdle to get into the Bavarian legislature.

The extremist Republicans favor tougher restrictions on allowing foreigners to live in Germany. They garnered miniscule support in what was East Germany, according to the projections.

After 40 years without free elections, voters in the former East Germany have now held three in six months and face a fourth in December.

In March, they chose their first democratic government to replace the ousted Communist regime toppled by the peaceful revolt last year.

The Christian Democrat-led government quickly led the nation to German unification. In May, voters elected local governments.

The Christian Democrats have dominated all the elections by promising an unhindered free market economy and fast unification with West Germany.

However, the projections showed them winning by a margin that was substantially lower than the margin in the March balloting, East Germany's first free elections.

Israel refuses to receive U.N. team

JERUSALEM (AP) — The government decided Sunday against cooperating with a U.N. team investigating the shooting deaths of 19 Palestinians by Israeli police, and said the delegation should stay away from Israel.

"We have read the Security Council's decision ...and it is completely unacceptable," a Cabinet communique said. "As a result Israel will not receive the delegation of the U.N. Secretary-General."

Radio stations said right-wing Housing Minister Ariel Sharon proposed that the investigators be barred from Israel, but Sharon's spokesman, Nimrod Granit, denied that.

Israeli officials, however, made it clear that they expect the three-man mission to stay away.

"This is not an invitation to come; it's an invitation not to come," said Deputy Foreign Minister Benyamin Netanyahu.

"There is a limit to absurdity.... It isn't customary to break down the door," Netanyahu said on Israel television. "It is not acceptable between countries and not between international organizations."

Police opened fire last Monday on Palestinians during a riot on the Temple Mount, sacred to both Moslems and Jews. The Moslems call it Haram-es-Sharif.

The riot began when Palestinians threw rocks onto worshipers praying below at the Western Wall, Judaism's holiest site. Police first used tear gas and rubber bullets, then live ammunition.

The U.N. Security Council voted Friday to condemn Israel, and to send a delegation to investigate. In a rare gesture, the United States joined in the censure of its ally.

Israel's Cabinet, at its regular weekly session Sunday, said it saw no reason for the United Nations to intervene when it had ignored worse incidents in other countries.

Netanyahu said: "When hundreds of worshipers were massacred in Mecca they did nothing. When hundreds of worshipers were massacred at the Golden Temple in India they did nothing."

But opposition politicians questioned the Cabinet decision.

Haim Ramon, head of the opposition Labor Party's parliament faction, said the U.N. mission could not be prevented from coming and should be allowed into Israel at a non-diplomatic level.

"I wouldn't play angry with the whole world. I would accept the delegation at a low level, to meet with police officers," Ramon said.

Foreign Minister David Levy said the U.N. investigation would violate Israel's sovereignty over Jerusalem and pave the way for stationing U.N. forces in the city.

The Temple Mount is in Arab east Jerusalem, which Israel captured in the 1967 Middle East War and later annexed.

Israel maintains its police were provoked by the barrage of stones onto Jews at the Western Wall, also known as the Wailing Wall.

An Israeli human rights group on Sunday accused police of indiscriminate shooting and "criminal negligence" in the bloodshed. The group, Betselem, said the government has attempted to "hide the facts, mislead the public... and evade responsibility" in the shootings.

The Arab League has called a meeting in Tunis to discuss the killings, and Egypt announced Sunday it would attend, the Middle East News Agency said. That could be significant because the Arab League has been split between countries that support Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and those who oppose him.

Egypt has led Arab opposition to Iraq, while the PLO has supported Baghdad.

Israeli officials first said Palestinians planned the stoning of Jewish worshipers in advance, hoping to provoke an incident that would divert world attention from the Persian Gulf crisis.

But Police Commissioner Yaacov Terner later said he believed the riot was spontaneous.

Levy said he hoped to avoid a collision with the United States.

"Our relations with the United States are very important, but we should not accept, and we should not ignore, the sorry fact that the U.S. administration has made a mistake," Levy said.

He added that the United States had "followed this coalition it formed against (Iraqi President) Saddam Hussein" — a reference to pressure on Washington from moderate Arab states to condemn Israel. The Arabs have formed a coalition with the United States against Iraq following its Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Even before the Temple Mount killings, Jerusalem was a sensitive issue between Israel and the United States. Washington has insisted that Israel not spend U.S. aid on settling Soviet immigrants in Arab Jerusalem.

The government has appointed its own comittee to investigate the killings. The three-man panel consists of former Mossad secret service chief Zvi Zamir, lawyer Yaacov Neeman and retired civil servant Haim Kubersky.

It held its first session behind closed doors Sunday and appealed to witnesses to come forward by noon Wednesday.

In the occupied territories Sunday, one Arab was shot and killed in clashes with Israeli soldiers and 10 others were injured, one seriously.

Abdel Abu El-Nimer, 60, from Khan Yunis refugee camp in the Gaza Strip, was shot in the chest and arrived dead at Nasser Hospital, Arab reports said.

The army said it was checking the reports.

El-Nimer's death brought to 761 the number of Palestinians killed by Israeli soldiers or civilians since the revolt against Israeli occupation began in December 1987.

Mandela, old friend in power struggle

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Nelson Mandela and Mangosuthu Buthelezi are old friends who find themselves in a power struggle, propelled by violence, that could delay the opportunity for blacks to govern South Africa.

The nation's two most powerful black leaders have known each other since the 1940s. Both want black majority rule, but they have different visions of the future. And neither appears ready for concessions that might stop the bloodshed.

"If the violence becomes endemic, this country could be worse off after liberation than before," said City Press, the largest black-oriented weekly.

Mandela, who leads the African National Congress, and Buthelezi, conservative head of the Zulu-based Inkatha Freedom Party, repeatedly call for peace, but each blames the other for the fighting.

"People are actually dying because the ANC will not talk with Inkatha and Mandela will not talk with me," Buthelezi said.

But Buthelezi, who also leads the KwaZulu homeland, rejected an invitation to join other homeland leaders in talking with Mandela.

Buthelezi insists on a face-to-face meeting with Mandela and Mandela has refused.

ANC leaders say Buthelezi has orchestrated the factional fighting as a way to obtain such a meeting and enhance his stature. Buthelezi bristles at the suggestion and accuses the ANC of trying to crush its black rivals.

Violence between followers of the ANC and Inkatha in black townships around Johannesburg has claimed about 800 lives since early August, but has eased somewhat in recent weeks. In the eastern province of Natal, the ANC-Inkatha conflict has left about 5,000 dead since 1986.

President F.W. de Klerk says he wants to negotiate the end of the apartheid, but that no progress is possible until the factional fighting is under control.

Mandela also wants to negotiate. But his militant young supporters demand arms and want results.

Buthelezi, at 62 a decade younger than Mandela, insists Inkatha be represented at black-white peace talks and claims the ANC wants to exclude him.

His Zulu supporters often are blamed for initiating attacks. There are strong suspicions that some Inkatha supporters have acted with at least tacit approval from some sectors of the police.

The ANC, the largest black opposition group, is socialist-oriented and has fought the government with boycotts, protests, calls for sanctions and a guerrilla campaign. Inkatha rejects those tactics and favors capitalism.

Power, more than ideology, is the focus of their conflict.

Zulus, although divided politically, are the country's largest tribe, numbering about 7 million.

Inkatha claims 1.8 million members, virtually all Zulus. While Inkatha is strong among the rural poor, the ANC gets much of its support from urban, educated, middle-class blacks.

The ANC plays down ethnic differences and has national support that cuts across tribal lines. Most observers believe it would get the most votes if the country's 30 million blacks were allowed to cast ballots.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will enjoy plenty of new challenges! Your partners and business associates will play a large role in the decisions you make. Do not discount their influence. New faces will add glamor to your social life after the New Year. Exciting developments are seen in the areas of romance and finance.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Penny Marshall, executive Lee Iacocca, the Duchess of York (Sarah Ferguson), pitcher Jim Palmer.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Impatience can land you in hot water. Better keep a steady hand on the controls. A financial decision requires further research. Be willing to pay for expert advice. Let partner know how things stand.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may be able to do volume business in terms of buying and selling today. Confidential correspondence puts you in the know and in the chips. Good timing is the secret to success.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get an early start today to beat out the competition. Finance and friendship will not mix. Postpone asking for favors. The storm has passed on the domestic front. Distant events have golden potential.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A vivid memory may haunt you. Do not read too much into a dream; it could be misleading. Member of opposite sex may try to spring a surprise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your gift for gab is superb. Excellent conditions exist for you to share in the wealth of others. The secret is to get out and circulate. An elegant appearance will attract new admirers!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Exercise greater care when handling money. Devote more attention to personal matters. Clandestine dealings are best avoided. Protect yourself by keeping detailed records.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take a firm stand with someone who is disrupting your domestic tranquility. Allocate your income with greater care.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be on the lookout for a new financial opportunity connected with real estate. Property improvements must be made to bring top dollar.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A business trip may have to be postponed due to lack of funds. Economize by performing more services for yourself. Do not disguise your true feelings about a romantic encounter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Charity work brings you a feeling of fulfillment. Tackle a do-it-yourself project designed to beautify your home. Seek mate's help. Those who paint and putter together often stay together!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Even routine tasks can be stimulating if you approach them from a fresh angle. Someone influential is impressed by your original thinking. Emphasize your ability to adapt.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Guard against emotional tizzies in romance. Think positive! You will make great progress all week long. Selfish motives may prevent you from receiving a business associate's cooperation.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are capable of great sacrifices for those they love. Kinfolk will always come first with these generous Librans. A family business, especially one related to the arts, will be much more attractive to them than becoming a cog in a large corporation. They would rather lead than follow!

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠75 ♡92 ◇KJ8542 ♣874
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What action do you take?
A.—Had your suit been a major, we could have sympathized and supported your desire to show it. But to bid one diamond over one club with that piece of cheese accomplishes nothing. Pass.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK84 ♡AK76 ◇3 ♣A952
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—You have a powerful hand, but you do not as yet have any idea where you want to place the contract. Also, the misfit in diamonds should make you wary. If you jump shift, you might not be able to control the auction. Bid one heart and see what partner does next.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ1076 ♡7 ◇A84 ♣AK95
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—In light of partner's response, you have enough for a "high reverse" of three clubs. Switch your red-suit holdings around, however, and we would settle for the slightly conservative bid of two spades—be wary of possible misfits.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ1076 ♡2 ◇A84 ♣AK95
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 ◇	Pass

What action do you take?
A.— Partner should have six good diamonds on this auction so, with your wealth of controls, you should be interested in slam. By bidding four diamonds now, you not only set the trump suit but also highlight heart shortness. A raise after this reverse is, of course, forcing, unless game has been reached.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKQ10952 ♡K6 ◇J5 ♣Q7
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—Your hand is enormously strong in playing tricks, and your king in partner's suit is surely the equivalent of an ace. We like a jump shift to two spades to show the trick-taking potential of your hand. Naturally, you intend rebidding spades at your next turn to confirm a self-sufficient one-suiter.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ8 ♡K105 ◇KQ1064 ♣83
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—There's no perfect bid. You have a balanced hand with a five-card minor and only three-card support for partner's suit. To rebid two diamonds would promise a six-card suit, and you don't want to bid no trump with a weak doubleton in an unbid suit. That leaves only a raise to two hearts, which is our clear choice.

Ginsberg visits with group protesting troops in Mideast

SEATTLE (AP) — Allen Ginsberg, the Beat Generation poet-activist, visited with about a dozen people camping at a city park to protest U.S. military involvement in the Middle East.

Ginsberg led the group in a minute-long meditative chant Friday evening. He said meditation or "centering" helps one deal with the anxiety of crisis and conflict.

The protesters have camped since Aug. 26 at Gas Works Park, renaming it Peace Works Park. Ginsberg, who teaches in Boulder, Colo., heard about the vigil at a Seattle poetry reading.

"Such a vigil as this depends, for its long-range success, on being user-friendly and friendly to the outside world," he said. "But how do you cultivate that friendliness and maintain a lonely vigil?"

Vigil organizers have said they will stay at the park until the departure from the Middle East of U.S. troops deployed in the Iraqi crisis.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A sequel to "The Terminator" will see the return of Arnold Schwarzenegger in his role as a murderous cyborg and of "Beauty and the Beast" TV star Linda Hamilton as a woman out to save the future.

Schwarzenegger

"Terminator 2: Judgment Day" began production last week and is scheduled for release in summer 1991. It depicts a nuclear holocaust on Aug. 29, 1997, in which 3 billion humans perish.

Miss Hamilton, repeating her role as Sarah Connor from the 1984 "Terminator," and other humans will have to face a nightmare war against machines.

Schwarzenegger returns as an unstoppable cyborg from the future sent to kill Connor's son, John, destined to lead the human resistance against the machines.

Director James Cameron, who directed and co-wrote "The Terminator," will film "Terminator 2" for Carolco Pictures.

LONDON (AP) — Ludwig van Beethoven, the composer who gradually went deaf, lost his hearing and died from a rare rheumatic disorder that is easily treated by modern medicine, a doctor was quoted Sunday as saying.

The theory challenges previous claims that the German composer's deafness was caused by syphilis and that he died from liver failure brought on by alcoholism, the Sunday Times said in reporting the findings.

The newspaper said Dr. Tom Palferman, a rheumatologist and amateur cellist, has spent 10 years sifting through Beethoven's private letters and autopsy reports to arrive at his diagnosis. It said his findings will be published in the Royal Journal of Medicine this month.

His theory is that Beethoven died of sarcoidosis, which affects hearing and eventually destroys the liver, the newspaper said. The doctor believes Beethoven could have been treated with modern steroids and his life saved by a liver transplant.

BUTTE, Mont. (AP) — A judge says he'll write to Sports Illustrated to clarify what he meant when he barred Evel Knievel from testifying as an expert witness in a lawsuit over a motorcycle crash.

Knievel

The former motorcycle stuntman, battered survivor of innumerable motorcycle crashes, is less than happy about newspaper headlines around the country with some variation of "Evel No Expert."

Sports Illustrated noted the ruling briefly under the headline, "We're Not Making This Up." Knievel was not amused.

Attorneys wanted Knievel, 52, to testify on behalf of a friend, J. Robert Riley, who was paralyzed after a 1980 motorcycle accident. Riley sued the American Honda Motor Co., claiming defective design of a motorcycle caused his accident.

In court, Riley's lawyer asked Knievel his opinion about the cause of Riley's accident, rather than asking him to testify about motorcycle design.

Honda's attorney objected and State District Judge Ted Mizner sustained the objection, saying Riley's attorneys had not shown that Knievel's knowledge of motorcycles qualified him as an "accident reconstruction" expert.

The plaintiffs withdrew Knievel as a witness.

The jury eventually ruled for Honda, and Mizner said Thursday he plans to write a humorous letter to Sports Illustrated to clarify his ruling.

LONDON (AP) — The British Museum says 24 drawings from its celebrated Rembrandt collection may not have been done by the master, a newspaper reported Sunday.

The conclusion by the museum, which has the world's largest colleection of Rembrandt drawings, is expected to touch off a major dispute among art scholars, The Observer said in its report.

The suspect drawings, nearly a quarter of the museum's collection, are now being attributed to Rembrandt's pupils or followers.

Gramm's needed in U.S. Senate

Phil Gramm, seeking his second term as junior senator from Texas in the U.S. Senate, has already shown he is the type of public servant the Lone Star State needs and wants.

Voters particularly concerned about the amount of federal spending, taxation, and the mounting deficit — and as we've seen in recent weeks, we must be — should cast their ballots to return him to the senate for another six-year term. Gramm has been a diligent spokesman for responsible fiscal policy and is one of the few in Congress who have actually strived the reduce government spending.

After several rocky years in the U.S. House in the early 1980's, during which he often teamed with then U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock to lead the House on tax and spending measures during the early years of the Reagan administration, Gramm fell out of favor with the House's Democratic leadership, resigned his seat there and in 1984 won election to the U.S. Senate, replacing John Tower.

Since that time, Gramm has continued to represent the views of Texans on such important matters as the federal budget and deficit, with the intention of changing the course of the government away from that of a welfare state.

In 1981, while still a Democrat, Gramm devised the Gramm-Latta package that gave President Reagan his defense buildup while making cuts in social spending and reducing taxes. Since that time, having switched to the Republican Party, gained re-election to the House and then to the U.S. Senate, he has been the driving force behind the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law which, although unpalatable to both Congress and the nation at times, overhauled the budgeting process to mandate a timetable for balancing the books.

Without the budget-balancing law, the federal deficit no doubt would be much greater than it is.

Gramm also has worked to achieve a record for performance on economic matters and has gained a prominent role on the Appropriations Committee, the Budget Committee, and the Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee.

The senator realizes that changing the tax-and-spend philosophy so prevalent in Washington will be difficult, but he's adamant on the need to do exactly that. Congressional Quarterly's 1990 "Politics in America" quoted Gramm as saying, "I want to make sure we've changed government forever. If I don't do it, it may not get done."

Vote to return Phil Gramm to the U.S. Senate for another term.

Voters should return Smith to Congress

Lamar Smith has served the people of the sprawling 21st Congressional District for four years, and he has made a much-needed difference in how the government conducts its business. Smith wants to do more, and we believe voters should give him the opportunity to do just that.

Over his first two terms, the congressman has worked to upgrade the code of ethics for the legislative branch, rewrite immigration regulations, expand the size of Big Bend National Park through a donation of 67,000 acres and, most recently, to trim the federal deficit by getting federal agency managers to cut 10 percent from overhead costs — such items as trips, communications, printing and reproduction of documents, and so forth.

In his latest proposal, Smith has been attempting to convince negotiators working on the budget compromise to consider his plan, which he says could say the government $27 billion a year. So far those negotiating the compromise haven't taken Smith's proposal to heart, but that may result from their desire to "convince" the nation's taxpayers how much a budget increase is needed rather than to actually cut their own expenses.

Regardless, Smith has shown tenacity on other issues, such as in his work on the ethics code, and it's clear that he is more a behind-the-scenes convincer than a headline-grabbing showboater.

Smith now serves on the important Judiciary Committee, the Science, Space and Technology Committee, and the Select Children, Youth and Families Committee.

His votes have reflected the desires of his continuents, examples being "yes" votes on raising the speed limit to 65 miles per hour, aid to the Nicaraguan Contras, approving the death penalty for drug-related murders and a bill opposing the seven-day waiting period for the purchase of handguns. Smith voted "no" on a bill to approve a tax-raising deficit-reduction bill, on enacting the civil rights restoration bill over the Ronald Reagan veto and on a ban on testing larger nuclear weapons.

Lamar Smith has been doing what a congressman is supposed to do — representing the interests of his constituents in the U.S. Congress. We urge voters to return him to Washington to continue that vital job.

School athletes' actions praised

I am a former student of San Jacinto Junior High School. In fact, I was a seventh grader the year the school opened. At that time, we had the privilege of voting for a mascot and school colors for the new school. I am a 1958 graduate of Midland High School, but I moved from Midland at that time and have been away for 32 years. A few months ago, I moved back and purchased a home here.

One afternoon last week, I was driving on Garfield Street and I saw that the school practice field was full of young men in football uniforms. I slowed for the school zone, but soon noticed that the traffic going south was pulling to the curb to stop. It was then that I observed a funeral procession coming toward us. I was filled with pride as I saw the young football players immediately drop to their knees and remove their helmets. They stayed motionless and watched as the bereaved family and friends passed.

In the last few weeks, the news media has spent a great deal of time covering some negative things about football and coaches. I just could not let this opportunity pass without expressing my appreciation to you and your staff for instilling a sense of respect and compassion in the young men whose lives you touch. It renews my faith in the future and makes me glad to be a Midlander.

Experts fear first strike by Saddam

WASHINGTON — Saddam Hussein's military soothsayers have been warning him for weeks to beware the ides of October. And because Saddam is spooked this week, it will be a nerve-wracking week at the White House too.

Anderson

Saddam's advisers have been telling him that on or about Oct. 15, the United States will attack Iraqi forces in occupied Kuwait.

Mid-October was the initial secret target date for full deployment of U.S. troops and equipment in Saudi Arabia. Top secret Pentagon documents initially reckoned that the United States would be as ready as ever by then to take on Saddam's massive military forces.

But our intelligence sources now say that full deployment of tanks and troops has gone slower than expected and will not be finished until late October or early November. The United States will not launch any attack until all the equipment has been received.

"We can't begin a battle with tanks still on ships at sea," one top Pentagon official said.

Still, the analysts at the Pentagon and the Central Intelligence Agency are worried that Saddam, with a bad case of the jitters, could make the first strike on his own this week to pre-empt any U.S. attack. Those analysts consider a cornered Saddam to be a dangerous Saddam.

Currently, Iraq has more than 175,000 troops in Kuwait and another 175,000 or so near the Iraq-Kuwait border. The United States has more than 175,000 troops in or near Saudi Arabia, but is moving toward a full deployment as high as 250,000 people. The number of Saudi and other allied troops in place or en route could bring the total to more than 300,000.

Our intelligence sources estimate that the Iraqis have more than 1,500 tanks in Kuwait and another 1,500 or so just over the border in Iraq. The United States hopes to have 1,000 tanks in Saudi Arabia by Nov. 1.

The final decision to attack would be up to the president, the Pentagon and the State Department, and sources tell us Bush will feel pressure to use the troops within a month of full deployment.

The Pentagon sources speak about the "fighting edge" of the Americans in the desert. Heat, boredom and alienation in a strange land will sap the soldiers of their spirit.

State Department sources say the politics of the conflict also conspire to favor an early attack by U.S. forces. For one thing, Saudi Arabians are uncomfortable with a foreign army encamped in their very private country. And as the months go by, that discomfort will turn to antagonism. Other Arab allies are also likely to leave the hastily stitched alliance if the crisis drags out.

They would change sides not out of love for Saddam, but out of fear that a prolonged crisis would push them toward a repugnant alliance with Israel.

Already, Saddam, Jordan's King Hussein and Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasir Arafat are linking the resolution of the Iraqi occupation to a resolution of the Israeli occupation of Palestinian territories.

One scenario that U.S. intelligence analysts say Saddam is considering is to attack Israel if the United States attacks Iraqi troops. Israel would return fire, and all bets would be off. The Arab nations, including perhaps even Saudi Arabia, could switch allegiance overnight to side with Saddam in a holy war against Israel.

Our sources say it is that scenario that prompted Arafat to line up with Saddam in the first place. Arafat is afraid of finding himself on the wrong side of an Arab-Israeli war.

ANOTHER FRONT — The country that hosted the last invading U.S. troops, Panama, has very little to show for its new liberation from tyranny. Panamanians are showing their increasing unrest by taking to the streets in protest of their living circumstances. Few Panamanians have benefited from the massive U.S. aid package sent there since the invasion last year. The Panamanians are learning that the more things change, the more they stay the same. When students from Panama's largest high school rioted, the Ministry of Education shut down the school. The same school was closed 10 times under the dictatorial rule of Manuel Noriega.

CHARLEY REESE

Budget cuts and tax hikes not equitable

President Bush needs a new speech writer. He doesn't even lie eloquently.

I refer to his new campaign theme that if Congress doesn't pass the grossly unfair deficit reduction package, then Congress will plunge the country into a recession.

Reese

First off, the recession has already begun and adding the second largest tax increase in history to the economy will, if anything, make it sicker, not better. Secondly, passing the package would not avert a recession.

I forced myself to watch the president's 10-minute speech boosting the package which, by the time you read this, may have already been defeated or altered in Congress. I wish I could be more respectful, but since Bush doesn't respect us — you don't respect people if you try consistently to deceive them — I won't worry about it.

You may have noticed the one common characteristic of political speeches these days. That is that they never explain to you what they have done — in this case, the details of the deficit reduction package — but they instead characterize what they've done.

That way, they deny you the information necessary to make your own informed judgment and force you, they hope, to accept their assessment. What alarms me is that the politicians' assessments in recent years have strayed farther and farther from reality.

How could anyone say that the taxes and cuts in the program are fair. The increases in Medicare premiums, deductibles, and share of laboratory tests as well as the taxes on beer, cigarettes and gasoline are immediate and affect everyone. The added luxury tax, on the other hand, only takes effect if you buy a yacht worth more than $100,000 or furs or jewelry that cost more than $5,000. If that's balance, then Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is eligible for the Nobel Peace Prize.

The gasoline and beer and cigarette taxes, as well as the Medicare cuts which amount to new taxes on the elderly, are regressive. Naturally, Bush and the Democratic honchos who put this package together don't associate very often with common people, but there is one big difference between the income of the rich and the income of the ordinary American.

I don't mean the obvious difference, which of course is amount. I mean that for the rich, they have lots of what you can call surplus income or money far in excess of what they need to live, take care of their families, and provide the necessities for themselves. Ordinary Americans today too often have zero surplus income, their daily living expenses requiring virtually 100 percent of their income.

Thus, an extra $90 or $100 out of their income means they have to sacrifice something to pay it whereas an extra 10 or 15 grand out of the surplus income of a person buying a yacht or Rolls Royce doesn't affect their lifestyle at all. They don't give up anything except perhaps the opportunity to buy another toy or make another investment to make even more money than they can reasonably spend.

What Bush and the congressional leadership did with this deficit reduction package was a cruel reversal of the biblical story of the widow's mite. If you recall, a widow gave a mite (a small coin), and a wealthy donor complained that she received more praise than he did. Jesus explained that she had given everything she had whereas he, the wealthy donor, had given only a tiny percentage of his wealth.

Bush and his cronies would take a lot from the widows and only a mite from their rich friends.

One of many reasons we should never have allowed our elected officials to elevate their salaries and perks to such a lavish scale is that they lose touch with reality.

Let's vote them all out in November — limousine liberals, country club conservatives, millionaire socialists, millionaire capitalists — the whole bloody lot.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

PBS series had Civil War history all wrong

A number of my fellow Southerners have voiced their disapproval with the recent public television series, "The Civil War," because it gave only the Northern viewpoint of the war, which they believe to be wrong.

Grizzard

I, too, must join these dissenters, but for good reason. What really took place in the war, and why it was fought, has been passed down in my family as utter truth for nearly 130 years.

It came from my great, great grandfather, Gen. Beauregard Grizzard of the Confederate Army who invented the Rebel yell one day when his hand got caught in the sausage grinder.

The war, according to my ancestors, was not fought because of slavery or states rights.

It was fought to stop Northern men from wearing over-the-calf black socks and sandals with their Bermuda shorts when they visited Southern beach resorts, where most of the fighting actually took place.

The South had very strict ideas on wearing black socks and sandals with Bermuda shorts.

"Tackiest thing I've ever seen," said Jefferson Davis, who rose from a humble lifeguard's chair on Gulf of Mexico beaches to become president of the Confederacy.

Southerners objected to the long black socks because they made what leg you could see on Yankee men look even more sickly white than they already were.

And sandals were a religious thing to Southerners. Jesus could wear sandals, but nobody else could. So, in that way, the Civil War was a holy war.

The first shot fired was from a Fort Sumter, S.C., cannon, aimed at a cruise ship taking Yankee tourists to Hilton Head Island.

No one was hurt in the initial skirmish, but the ship was turned back north and Hilton Head hotels refused to return advance payment for rooms and green fees, and so hostilities on a much larger scale soon broke out.

The South won many early battles, such as the Battle of Tourist Trap, Fla., near Daytona Beach, where Union troops were lured into Bob's Reptile Farm to pay 20 cents a head to see a live alligator and a dead snake.

"Confederates surrounded the farm and took over 5,000 prisoners and burned their sandals, socks and Bermuda shorts.

The war began to turn toward the North, however, at the Battle of Panama City, Fla., where Union troops stormed a beachware store and took hundreds of beach balls, beach towels, suntan lotion, and lots of tee shirts with pelicans on them, dealing a deadly blow to the Southern economy.

The PBS series did acknowledge Gen. Robert E. Lee attempted to invade the North, but was stopped at the Battle of Gettysburg.

Not true.

Lee did turn back at Gettysburg, but it was because his troops were complaining there was no place to get good barbecue.

The end of the war finally came in 1865 when Gen. Lee surrendered to Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, a three-handicapper, in the pro shop of Harbour Town Links on Hilton Head, which had been captured by a large force of Union troops disguised as members of the PGA tour.

The North continues to hold Hilton Head today and many other Southern coastal resorts, and despite the blood that was shed by valiant Rebs, Northern men are stilling wearing long black socks with their sandals and Bermuda shorts on Southern beaches.

But we're still overcharging them for film, Indian moccasins, and tank tops.

Through Quayle, Bush pans plan

NATION

AP Laserphoto

White House Chief of Staff John Sununu speaks to reporters after an appearance Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle said Sunday the Bush administration is "violently opposed" to a Democratic plan for a large increase in the top tax rates paid by the wealthiest Americans.

But a principal supporter of the increase, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of House Ways and Means Committee, said he would seek its approval this week as part of a deficit reduction plan in an election campaign test of strength.

"I'm not going to deny that we're trying to make a political statement, and there certainly is evidence that there's now a division between Democrats and Republicans," said Rostenkowski, D-Ill.

Quayle and Rostenkowski made their comments on Sunday television news programs, setting the stage for this week's attempt in Congress to fashion a $500 billion five-year package of spending cuts and tax increases to rein in the federal deficit.

If Congress fails to approve an acceptable deficit reduction plan before midnight Friday, White House Chief of Staff John Sununu said chances were "relatively high" the federal government would shut down for a second time this month.

When Congress refused to pass the first deficit plan that administration officials and congressional leaders had labored over for months, Bush closed the government for the three-day Columbus Day weekend. The impact was tempered by the holiday and Bush later agreed to a temporary spending measure.

Aside from the deficit reduction plan, Congress hopes to complete work on comprehensive clean air legislation, a civil rights bill, a new farm bill and several other major pieces of legislation before it adjourns for the year sometime in the next two weeks.

There are several hundred billion dollars in spending cuts in the package, including more than $13 billion in agriculture spending.

Any deficit reduction plan also is expected to curb the defense buildup, cut Medicare, and restrain spending in hundreds of federal programs. But most of the debate in recent days has centered around whose taxes should be raised and by how much.

Rostenkowski's House Ways and Means Committee approved a proposal that would raise the top tax bracket from 28 percent to 33 percent.

"We want to protect middle income and poor America, and we want everybody to share in the pain of governing," Rostenkowski said on CNN's "Newsmaker Sunday."

He said he would be willing to compromise if need be, but that he believes the 33 percent tax rate is necessary.

But Sununu said on NBC's "Meet the Press" that the administration was "opposed to playing around with the income tax rate for Americans across the board."

An alternative plan was approved by the Senate Finance Committee early Saturday without the increase in the upper tax bracket. That plan relies on limiting deductions taken by the wealthy to increase tax collections.

In addition, both plans would raise the taxes on gasoline, alcohol, tobacco and such luxury items as furs, jewelry and expensive cars.

"I had tried to get a 33 percent rate, and the president could not accept it at all," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

So, he said, his committee "came through the back door" by limiting deductions on wealthy Americans.

"And that means that we have a progressive table, that those making the highest income will pay the highest increase in the taxes," he said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

Bentsen said he would defend his plan on the Senate floor, but noted that some compromise is likely before a final bill emerges from Congress.

Quayle, on CBS' "Face the Nation," said Bush was prepared to reject any deficit-reduction plan he dislikes, regardless of how long the process takes.

"They are going to have to stay in town and pass a budget," Quayle said, referring to members of Congress. "The president is simply not going to let the Congress go home until they pass a good deficit-reduction plan that is going to avoid a recession."

The original package, which included the budget for the 1991 fiscal year that began Oct. 1, was killed by the House.

'The president is simply not going to let the Congress go home until they pass a good deficit-reduction plan that is going to avoid a recession.'

— Vice President Dan Quayle

Journalists group honors Barrie

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Directors of the Society of Professional Journalists on Sunday voted to give a First Amendment Award to Cincinnati art gallery director Dennis Barrie for his stand on artistic freedom.

Barrie was acquitted Oct. 5 of pandering obscenity for exhibiting photos by the late Robert Mapplethorpe at the Contemporary Arts Center in Cincinnati.

"When other museums were bowing to community pressure in canceling the exhibit, Dennis Barrie chose to stand firm for the artist's right to express himself, and the public's right to see that expression," said SPJ President Frank Gibson, metro editor for The Tennessean in Nashville.

"His battle to uphold the principles of the First Amendment came at considerable expense and the threat of jail."

The nation's largest organization for journalists presented two First Amendment awards Friday at its convention. The recipients were:

— Texas Supreme Court Justice Lloyd Doggett, for longstanding efforts on behalf of governments having open meetings and records.

— Peter Sussman, editor of the San Francisco Chronicle's Sunday "Punch" section, for publishing the bylined essays of Dannie Martin, a convicted bank robber. The inmate and the newspaper have sued in federal court to keep prison officials from restricting Martin's reporting.

Lili-Marco duo lashes much of southern New England

Associated Press

The remnants of tropical storms Lili and Marco combined to dump a month's worth of rain in less than a day in parts of southern New England, flooding roads and washing out football games.

Before moving northward, Marco and the remnants of tropical storm Klaus caused extensive flooding last week in Georgia and the Carolinas. At least 12 people were killed.

Max Mayfield of the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla., said Lili, downgraded from a hurricane on Saturday, had lost its tropical character because its highest winds are no longer concentrated at its center and because of its northerly location.

Flooding hampered travel in many parts of New England on Saturday night and power outages were reported as the storms brushed past.

Power outages affecting about 1,400 electricity customers were reported in the Acton-Maynard and Waltham areas of Massachusetts, said Boston Edison spokesman Mike Monahan.

On New York's Long Island, floodwaters washed beneath commuter train tracks.

"You can now walk underneath the tracks," said Suffolk County police spokesman Sgt. Donald Yourie.

The storms dumped 3 to 6 inches of rain on southern New England from Saturday afternoon to early Sunday, said Tom DeGregorio of the National Weather Service.

Many areas received more than 3 inches of rain in an hour, including Woonsocket, R.I., he said.

"That's the normal monthly average for this time of year," DeGregorio said.

In New Haven, Conn., 2 inches of rain fell in just six hours, flooding roads, snarling traffic, and wiping out most high school football games. Some people were even marooned at their homes.

"We can't get out unless we walk out and tread through knee-deep water," said Lucia Smith of East Haven, Conn.

A Connecticut man was reported struck by lightning but was not seriously injured, said a spokeswoman at Day Kimball Hospital in Putnam, Conn.

The downpours also washed some bright red and yellow leaves off trees before the fall foliage reached its peak colors.

"It'll make for a less brilliant season," said Mel Goldstein, director of the Weather Center at Western Connecticut State University in Danbury.

In Georgia, state and federal emergency management teams worked Sunday to complete reports on an estimated $34 million in damage caused by Marco.

If a request for federal aid is approved, 75 percent of the damage to public property could be paid with federal money.

Helms uses fax to keep press at bay

The conservative Helms criticizes 'liberal media' in virtually every stump speech he makes.'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Democrat Harvey Gantt found a bright spot in President Bush's recent campaign appearance on behalf of his GOP rival, Sen. Jesse Helms. It brought Helms out in public.

"I was delighted to be in the same town with Sen. Helms today," Gantt said. "That's about as close as we've ever gotten to being with him."

Helms refuses to debate Gantt and the conservative GOP senator has been limiting his public appearances this year.

His distrust of the news media runs so deep that his campaign takes reporters' questions only by fax machine. The answers are sent back the same way.

"The major papers in this state are biased and they misquote and take out of context what our campaign says," said Beth Burrus, the spokeswoman for Helms' re-election effort. "This is a way to keep them accountable."

The conservative Helms criticizes "liberal media" in virtually every stump speech he makes.

As in previous campaigns, Helms has flooded the airwaves with television advertising, telling supporters in a recent fund-raising letter that he needed another $1 million to buy television ads.

"I guess his campaign has learned time and time again that you can't trust the 'unpaid' media," said Thad Beyle, a political science professor at the University of North Carolina. "Reporters may not tell it exactly like you want it told.

"With paid media (advertising), you can tell it the way you want to tell it and nobody's there to question it."

During the August congressional recess, the Helms campaign announced only a few public appearances, although Helms insisted he had been campaigning around the state without telling reporters.

Since then, the fax machine has been almost the only way for the news media to communicate with the Helms camp.

Helms himself has held only a few brief sessions with reporters and no campaign officials will talk with the press on the telephone.

In one fax exchange, The Charlotte Observer inquired about a Helms ad. In it, an unidentified woman accuses Democrat Gantt of supporting sex-selection abortions and abortions in the last few weeks of pregnancy. Gantt says the ad is untrue.

"Who is the woman in the Helms for Senate abortion ad?" The Observer asked in a question sent to the Helms campaign.

The reply: "Why do you want it?"

The Helms campaign only began releasing a schedule of public appearances in September after Helms had returned to Washington. His campaigning since then has been limited to weekend rallies before select crowds of supporters and quick fly-ins, such as the fund-raising breakfast with Bush last week.

Gantt has tried to make an issue of Helms' reclusive campaign style.

It represents a "double standard" in coverage of the Senate campaign, said Gantt press secretary Susan Jetton.

"We go out of our way to have Harvey out there every day, answering questions, talking to reporters. We make sure reporters have a schedule days in advance of where Harvey will be," she said.

The widespread use of fax machines has given Helms just one more way to hold reporters at arm's length, Beyle said.

"I've always found his relationship with the media curious, given his background," Beyle said, referring to Helms' stints as a newspaper city editor and broadcaster. "You would think with his background he would be able to play the media like a violin."

After Bush's visit last week, Gantt said "it was interesting to note that Mr. Helms still needs to bring the president in to speak on behalf and to defend his record."

"Why doesn't he simply come on out now and speak for himself?" Gantt asked. "He's got 18 years in the Senate. He seems to lack the courage to want to come out and speak to the people of North Carolina and let them talk back to him."

In his three terms in the Senate, Helms has fostered an image in North Carolina as a down-home boy fighting the "city slickers" in Washington.

But his political organization, the Congressional Club, has always been on the cutting edge of technology. It raises funds 365 days a year.

In 1980, Beyle said, the Congressional Club "showed you could win an election with a candidate that wasn't seen by anybody — John East."

East, a political science professor and political unknown, unseated U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan with a hard-hitting television campaign. East, a polio victim who used a wheelchair, made few public appearances and his television commercials showed East from the shoulders up talking into the camera.

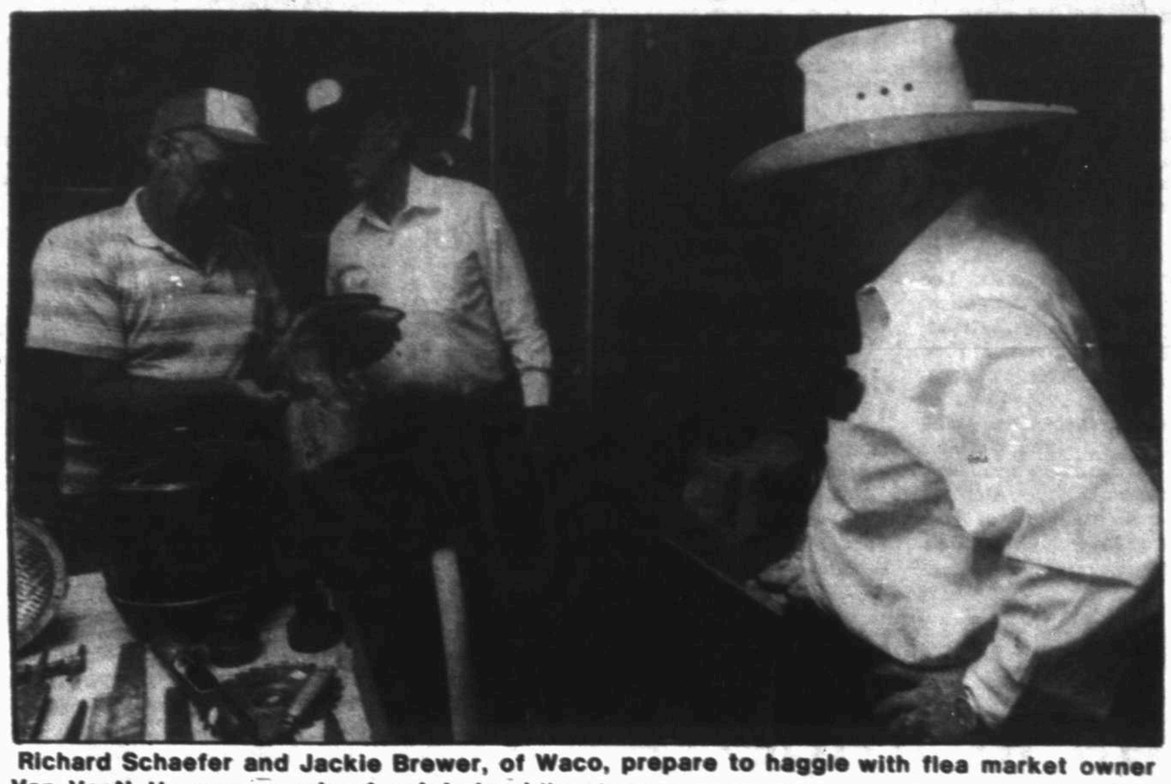
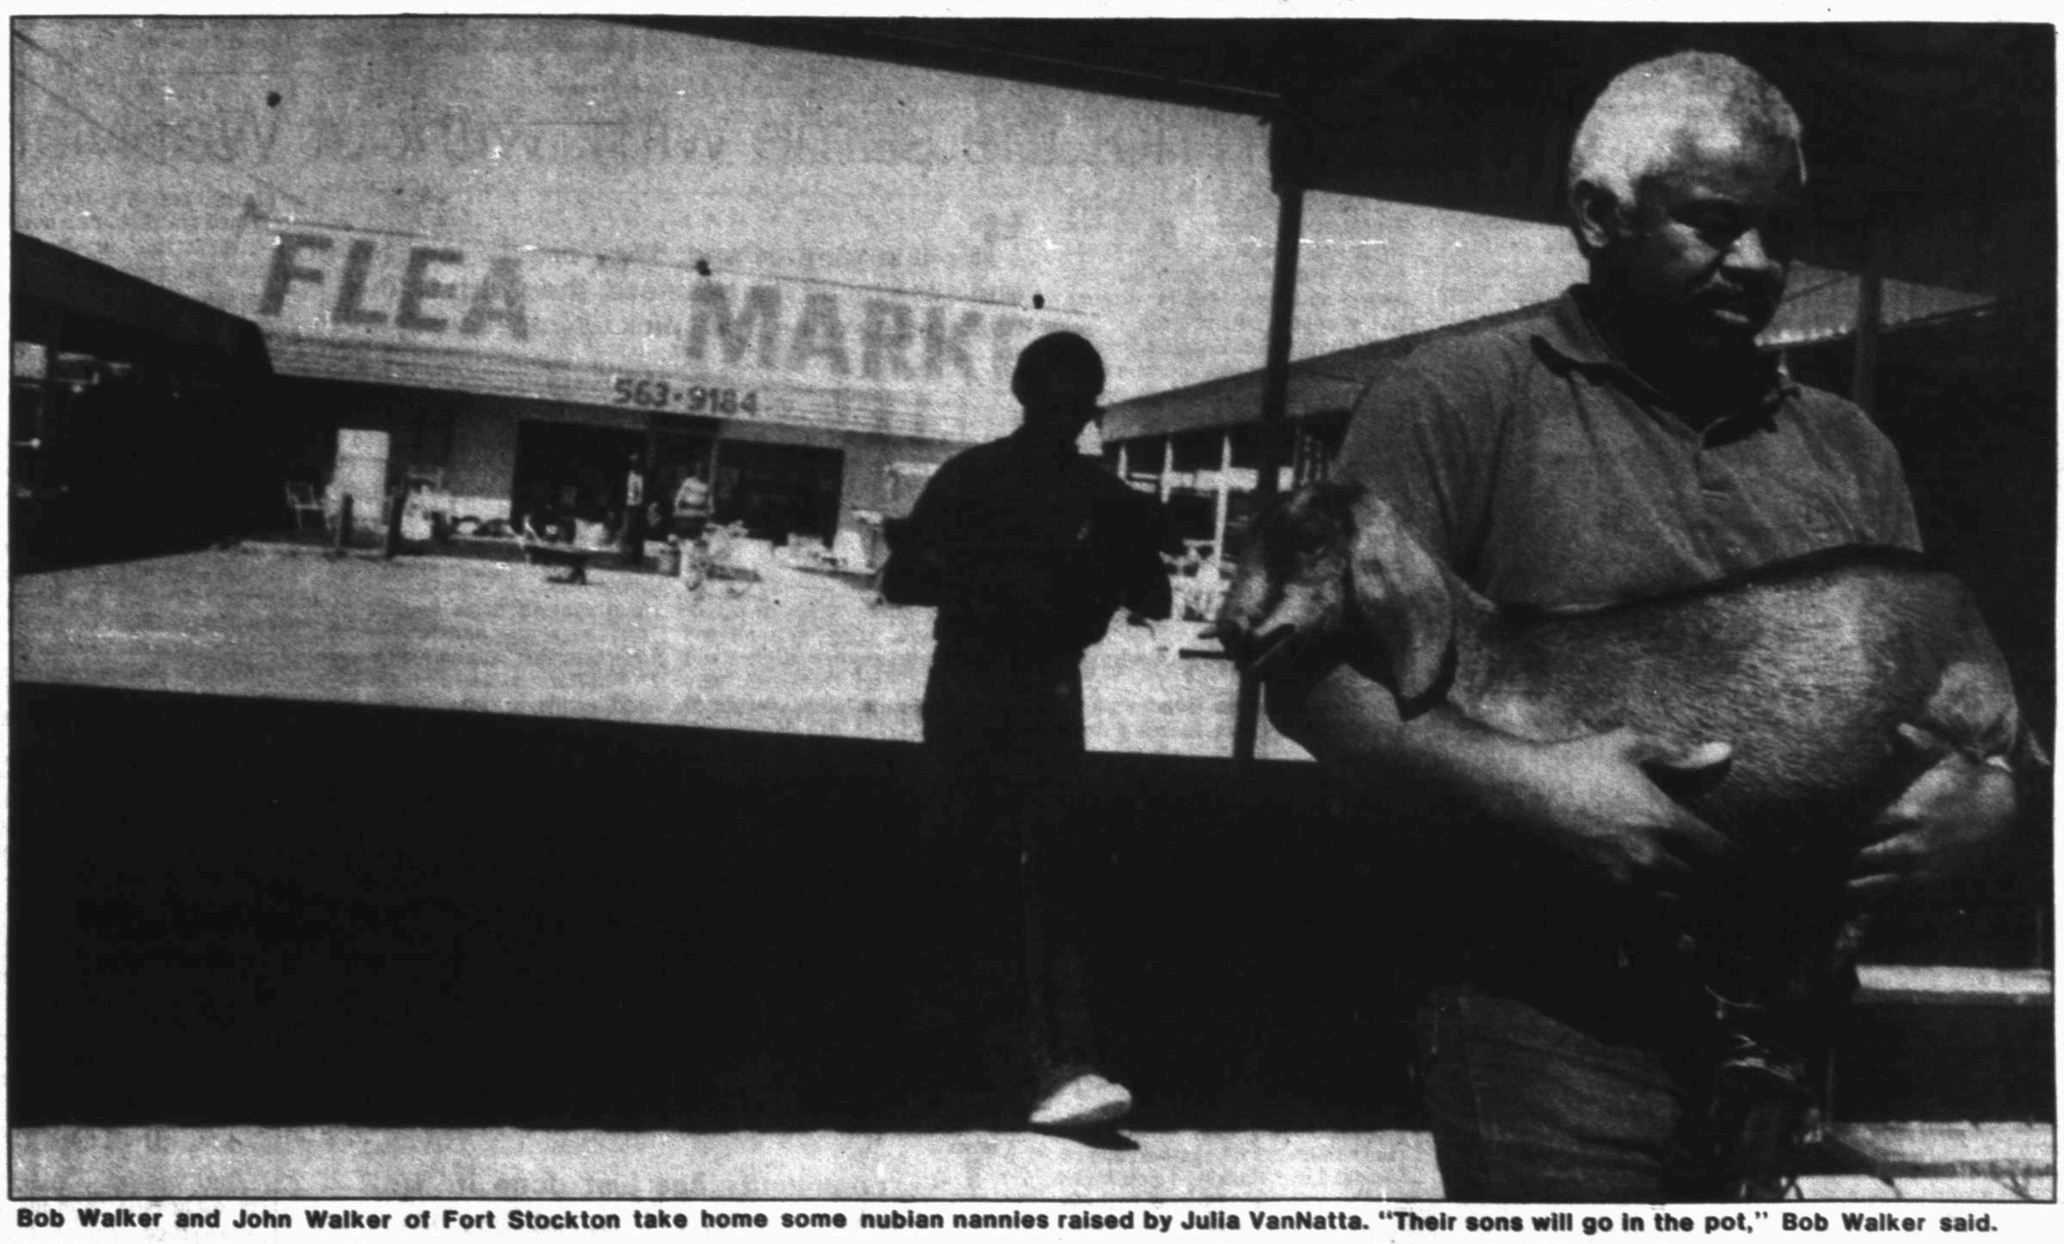
Let's MAKE a DEAL



Richard Schaefer and Jackie Brewer, of Waco, prepare to haggle with flea market owner Van VanNatta over a pair of pointy-toed "cockroach boots."



Bob Walker and John Walker of Fort Stockton take home some nubian nannies raised by Julia VanNatta. "Their sons will go in the pot," Bob Walker said.

Lester, the silent type, neither troubles nor consoles in his ashen state.

But he does evoke some degree of compassion, just as the goats, chickens, sheep, dogs and the horses out back stir excitement in the visiting city kids, the children who find wonderment in the farm animals.

Inside, apart from Lester, is a motley lot of just about everything — novelty junk to treasured antiques — in the VanNatta A-1 Flea Market, midway between Midland and Odessa.

"You've got to have all kinds of stuff to make a living nowadays," said Julia VanNatta who, with the help of her rancher-father, Van, and her mother, Edna, runs the shop. "That's why I raise chickens and goats and sheep and German shepherd dogs."

It's sort of a sign of hard times, which seem to invite a proliferation of flea markets and other second-hand shops.

Flea markets "come and go," said Ms. VanNatta, 28. "A lot of people are looking for an easy buck and don't want to work."

But operating a flea market is work.

"You've got to find it, buy it, fix it, market it and sell it," she said.

One of her finds, left over from an estate sale in Odessa, is a sealed brown urn containing the cremated remains of a person Ms. VanNatta calls "Lester."

"I kind of felt sorry for him," Ms. VanNatta recalled, "and bought him at a garage sale — somebody selling a relative."

Lester's not for sale anymore.

But just about everything else is — tools, jewelry, war relics, old boots, fans, knives, firearms, chairs, pottery, chamber pots, boots, spurs, saddles, bridles, bits and other tack.

Though she is in the collecting-selling business, Ms. VanNatta only collects "one thing, and that's $100 bills.

"I'm trying to make a living."

And that, other than trying to get rid of "junk" that once filled eight buildings, is why the VanNatta family started up the flea market about three years ago.

VanNatta, a 77-year-old former Odessa pawnbroker who now ranches near McCamey and, when he's not cowboying, hangs around the flea market, said that today it's "hard to make a living" ranching and running a flea market.

"We have worlds of lookers — (practically) no buyers," he said. "We used to have a good business here, but it's kind of dried up on the vine. Too many garage

DEATHS

Zona Doris Graves

STANTON — Zona Doris Graves, 77, died Sunday in her Stanton home following a lengthy illness.

Services will be held today at 3 p.m. at the Stanton Church of Christ with Ellmore Johnson of Lubbock and James Johnson of Stanton officiating. Burial will follow at Trinity Memorial Park in Big Spring under the direction of Gilbreath Funeral Home.

Mrs. Graves was born Dec. 9, 1912 in Stanton and married Melvin Lee Graves Dec. 9, 1929 in Big Spring. She was a homemaker and a member of the Stanton Church of Christ. Her husband proceeded her in death on Jan. 6, 1982.

She is survived by her son, Lee Graves of Stanton; her daughters, Zona Clarene Graves of Carlsbad, Olga Modine Lundgren of El Paso and Lora Lucy Miller of Monahans; her sister, Ruby Davis of Odessa; her brothers, Dail Atchison of Tempe, Ariz., Weiland Atchison of Stanton, and John Tella Atchison, Clelan Atchison and Junot Atchison, all of Midland; four grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Sam W. Conner

Services for Sam W. Conner will be held today at 2 p.m. in the First Presbyterian Church sanctuary with the Rev. Dick Braun officiating. Interment will follow in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers will be Pete Eastup, Sid Curle, Dr. T.N. Hughston, H.W. Davidson, Frank Cowden, Joe Henderson, Dr. John Pickett and Harvey Herd.

Honorary pallbearers will be Dr. John Whinery, Ron Smith, G.W. Brock, Will Childress, Conner Morrow, James M. Davis and Robert Whitt.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland and the Permian Basin Area Foundation.

John F. McKnight

Services for John F. McKnight, 52, of New Orleans, La., are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Sunday in New Orleans.

He was the husband of Joan Tom McKnight, formerly of Midland.

sales, I guess."

And there's more competition: other flea markets cropping up.

"I think it's a trend," the rancher said. "People are leaving (town), and are getting rid of stuff, so they won't be burdened with things, large and small, to move.

His wife, who is "39 and holding," said that she and her husband "crawl in that motor home out there and go all over, coast to coast," in seeking out salable collectibles and junk.

The flea-market work got her out of the house.

"I had done nothing in my life but stay at home and raise (five) babies," Mrs. VanNatta said. "And this has just added something to my life: gives me something to get up and get out for. And I really enjoy it."

VanNatta seems to enjoy the hunt for a buyer.

"I always make a man an offer," he said. "You never can tell what a man will take until you make him an offer."

A couple of Waco fellows, Richard Schaefer, 56, and Jackie Brewer, 54, were browsing in the market looking for bargains and for "anything that I can resell to make a dollar," said Schaefer.

Schaefer buys and sells in and around Waco, which is pretty big in flea markets these days. At the VanNatta place, he was looking over some well-worn cowboy boots.

'I always make a man an offer. You never can tell what a man will take until you make him an offer.'

— Van VanNatta, flea market operator

"What will you give me for them?" asked VanNatta.

"You tell me," replied Schaefer. "They're not mine; they're yours."

They settled on $7.50 for the so-called "cockroach boots." Their pointed toes become offensive weapons in tracking down and killing cockroaches caught in a corner.

Eventually, about everything, including genuine junk, in the shop will sell.

"You'd think it's junk, and nobody would have it," Mrs. VanNatta said. "If you don't think it's valuable, you just stick it in one of these boxes, and somebody will come and buy it."

Rhinestone jewelry sells. There are collectors of the glitter.

And rock 'n' roll fans are still buying Elvis Presley memorabilia even if it's gaudy imitations.

Goats sell.

Two brothers out of Fort Stockton, John Walker, 33, and Robert Walker, 40, dropped by the flea market to buy a couple of Nubian nanny goats. Kids for turning into cabrito are getting pretty high, about $40 to $50 a head "when you can find them," said Robert Walker. "It seems every year, they get more expensive. They don't give them away anymore."

So, the brothers figured they would raise their own eating goats and drove their pickup truck northward to Midland-Odessa to find a couple of nannies.

"We are just going to take them and raise them for breeding" and, said John Walker, for selling, slaughtering and barbecuing, stewing or roasting.

The brothers will breed the nannies with their billy goats.

"All of their male sons will go to the chicken pot," smiled Robert Walker.

At the dinner table, Julia VanNatta prefers Barbados sheep over goat.

"Barbado sheep are better to eat than goats, in my opinion," she said.

But she likes her goats — their innate peculiarities.

"They are smarter than what a lot of people give them credit for."

Goats, she noted, "eat weeds first; I guess they're sweeter. Then, they'll go after the leaves on your trees, and then they'll eat the grass and paper."

But she is even more fond of her German shepherds and her horses, particularly Sassy Girl, the 24-year-old Morgan.

Back when she was a filly, Sassy Girl would kick, recalled Van VanNatta. "She frets around a little," he said, "but she is a wonderful saddle horse." Riding her is "just like sitting in a rocking chair."

"She ain't for sale," quickly asserted Julia VanNatta, who was riding horses "way before I could walk."

The livestock out behind the flea market is a reflection of Ms. VanNatta's childhood days.

"I was raised in this atmosphere," which, Ms. VanNatta reckoned, is wholesome and invigorating.

City-reared children visit the livestock, pet the goats, touch old Sassy Girl, and learn where eggs come from.

While she knows the benefits of city living, Ms. VanNatta also realizes the drawbacks of living in town and the blessings of living out in the country.

Hanging around the farm animals, she reasoned, "also keeps the kids out of trouble. They've been around dogs, but they go wild over these goats and chickens."

Working and playing with gentle farm animals can be soothing, peaceful, consoling, and certainly more fun than talking to silent Lester in the urn.

"People go searching for stuff," she said. "They get into drugs, dope and alcohol and running around on the streets. And I chase goats."

Student field trip ends in tragedy

HOUSTON (AP) — Students are mourning the death of a popular elementary school teacher and one of her pupils, who were killed in a car accident on the way to the students' first rural field trip.

The accident occurred Friday, the day after Rebecca Ann Steiner's fourth graders pooled their money and threw a surprise party for her 25th birthday.

A team of counselors and psychologists was scheduled to visit the school Monday "to help the students and the staff to work through this tragedy," said Felix Tijerina Elementary spokeswoman Ria Griffin.

Friday night, Ms. Steiner loaded a group of the children in her car for a camping trip — a first for many of the low-income youngsters from the school near the Houston Ship Channel.

About 7:30 p.m., outside Splendora, a southbound car crossed the grass median on U.S. 59 and struck Ms. Steiner's northbound Chevrolet head-on — killing the teacher and student Nancy Guiterrez, 9. Three other children were injured.

Ahead of Ms. Steiner, 24 more children and 10 parents made it to the camp between Woodville and Jasper, unaware of the tragedy. When the children awoke Saturday, Principal Jacel Morgan sat them down around the camp fire and broke the news.

"I told them life and death is a cycle," she said. "We had lost Ms. Steiner and Nancy in a car wreck.

"I told them it's OK to cry. It's OK to hug. It's OK to just go in the woods and just think about it."

Ms. Steiner's relationship with the children mirrored the close-knit relationship between community and school, Ms. Morgan said. That relationship was evident when they arrived back at the school around noon Saturday.

Waiting were parents, counselors, nurses from nearby schools, and ministers, Ms. Morgan said.

"We went into the library and just talked and cried and prayed," she said.

They prayed for the dead and for the injured, including Crystal Ortega, 9, listed Sunday in serious but stable condition with head and torso injuries at Texas Children's Hospital; Jessica Ramos, 9, listed in good condition with head and internal injuries at the same hospital; and Jo Ann Zamora, 9, released after treatment at Northeast Medical Center Hospital.

Also injured was the driver of the other car, Michelle Ann Tamyo, who was listed Sunday in good condition at Hermann Hospital with a broken leg, chest injuries and lacerations.

Authorities said they don't know why Ms. Tamyo, a 20-year-old saleswoman from Cleveland, had slammed on the brakes of her pickup truck and skidded across the median into Ms. Steiner's car.

Authorities said everyone in Ms. Steiner's car was wearing a seat belt. Ms. Tamyo was not.

Town not the same with, without Wal-Mart

DALLAS (AP) — The bustling Wal-Mart in Hearne shows few signs it is doomed. Notices taped to the front doors warn that layaways no longer will be offered, but shoppers still pour in.

William and Bonnie Briggs, pushing a microwave oven in their cart, say they'll have to drive an hour from their home north of Hearne to the nearest affordable shopping, 20 miles south in Bryan, after the store closes Dec. 31.

"If you go to a small retailer, you'll pay three times as much," especially for children's clothes, said Briggs, a carpenter who recently moved his family from Houston.

"Sometimes I wonder why we left," Mrs. Briggs told The Dallas Morning News in Sunday's editions. "Down there, there's a store on every corner."

The discount chain's recent decision to pull out of this Central Texas town came as a shock — even to employees. Although rumors of the closing had circulated for weeks, Wal-Mart had begun some overdue renovations.

Besides, no one in town had heard of a Wal-Mart closing before, although a handful have shut down.

'It's just kind of sad. They breeze into town and suck up all the business, then with all the businesses gone, they pick up and leave.'

— Bart Lockhardt, Hearne businessman

The 1,485-store chain has 231 stores in Texas, more than in any other state. But Wal-Mart officials say the Hearne store has not turned a profit since it opened 10 years ago.

"It's just kind of sad. They breeze into town and suck up all the business, then with all the businesses gone, they pick up and leave," said Bart Lockhardt, who runs a store his father started 30 years ago.

"I hope we weren't singled out as being the sorriest economic decision Wal-Mart ever made," he said.

At Wal-Mart headquarters in Bentonville, Ark., spokesman Don Shinkle said the company tried several strategies at the 46,000-square-foot store.

"We have made super-conscientious efforts to make the Hearne store profitable," he said. "Any other chain would have closed the store long before its 10th anniversary ... We have an obligation to our stockholders."

The announcement was a severe blow to morale in the town of about 5,600 residents. A small hospital shut its doors in 1988, and residents are hard-pressed to choose which closing hurts more.

Wal-Mart is Hearne's third-biggest employer, after a company that repairs railroad tank cars and one that makes bath fixtures. Its 90 employees represent a payroll of as much as $1 million.

The store accounts directly for $250,000 of the city's current $5.4 million budget, mainly in utility fees and sales taxes. Its loss, city officials say, will be significant.

Residents are as irked to see the mega-retailer depart as some were afraid of its arrival. They complain that Wal-Mart, having pushed out perhaps a dozen other stores, is the only place left in town that sells socks.

Unlike the strip of highway that runs by the discount shopping mecca and the Dairy Queen on the south side, Hearne's anemic downtown is dotted with empty and boarded storefronts.

Next to Lockhardt's Appliance and Furniture is a liquidator's auction house, former home to one of nearly a dozen retailers that closed after the Wal-Mart opened.

Since the birth of Sam Walton's empire 28 years ago, thousands of small businesses in hundreds of mostly rural towns have quaked at news that the discount chain was moving in. Hearne is one of only a handful of such towns to face the prospect of losing its Wal-Mart.

"It puts something of a stigma on the community," said Dave Cunningham, president of the Hearne Area Chamber of Commerce.

"If they had made this decision the first year they were in operation, we'd still have a vital downtown ... It just leaves a bad taste in your mouth."

Volunteer spirit alive, well in Plainview

PLAINVIEW (AP) — Many of the volunteers who gathered to remodel Leah Rushing's house had never met the 10-year-old cancer patient. But they knew she needed help. And that's all that mattered.

"I can't do much, but I can swing a hammer for an hour," an elderly man said.

He was among a group who gathered at Leah's home Saturday to begin remodeling the house, which had gaps in the roof, holes in the walls and broken windows.

Last month, doctors discovered a large tumor in Leah's abdominal area. Her prognosis is not considered good.

Adding to the tragedy of the situation was the fact that burglars made off with toys and other gifts given to Leah by the Make-A-Wish organization.

On Friday, doctors released Leah from University Medical Center in Lubbock. Unless her fever increases significantly, she will be allowed to stay at home until Oct. 22, when she will have to return for a second round of chemotherapy treatments.

Family, friends, and other well-wishers greeted Leah as she returned to Plainview late Friday afternoon. But the celebration was tempered by the realization she had to stay at a relative's home until her house is adequately repaired.

If workers meet their goals, that won't be long.

Former neighbor Evelyn Carroll said the first priority of the construction group is to turn the house's garage into a private room where Leah can rest comfortably.

Mrs. Carroll said she never dreamed the response would be so great when she put out a plea for time, materials and dollars to restore Leah's home.

'This community has just done it. We haven't asked for any of this, but they have done it for Leah.'

— Martha Rushing, Leah's mother

"The response has been overwhelming," she told the Plainview Daily Herald. "This has just been a blessing."

Since making the plea last week, Mrs. Carroll said, her telephone hasn't stopped ringing. Lumber companies from Plainview and as far away as San Marcos called to donate materials such as wood, nails and sheetrock. A roofing contractor agreed to put a new roof on the house. Other companies gave much-needed paint, building tools and materials.

Many businesses unable to provide needed supplies donated cash for additional items needed in the repair effort.

Some of the volunteers pitched in for an hour, while some stayed for most of the day. Construction contractors who normally are competitors worked side by side Saturday to repair the house.

Among the workers were student groups from Wayland Baptist University and Plainview High School. Local food and beverage vendors, along with friends of the family, provided food and soft drinks.

"This has been such a community effort," Mrs. Carroll said.

Leah's mother, Martha Rushing, said the family has "received letters from everywhere" after news spread about the theft of Leah's gifts.

Nintendo Products said it will replace all of the Nintendo products that were stolen from Leah. The Ronald McDonald House in Lubbock also has replaced some of the stolen items.

Presents from others include canned food, cards, letters and stuffed animals. Prison inmates have taken up a collection for Leah. And her three brothers got some new clothes with gift certificates that were sent to the family.

"It's just incredible," Mrs. Rushing said. "This community has just done it. We haven't asked for any of this, but they have done it for Leah.

"How do we say thank you?"

Man killed in 1-car rollover

BIG SPRING — David Guerrero Alvarado, 38, of Big Spring was killed Sunday morning when his car rolled after failing to negotiate a right turn, the Department of Public Safety reported.

The one-vehicle accident occurred at about 5 a.m. on Driver Road, one mile southeast of Big Spring, when Alvarado's 1981 Oldsmobile two-door left the southbound lane of the road, went through a ditch and struck an electric pole, the DPS reported.

The car overturned twice, coming to rest on its wheels. Alvarado, who was not wearing a seatbelt, was ejected from the car and pronounced dead at the scene at 8 a.m., the DPS spokesman said.

Passenger Anna Rosa Alvarado, 26, of Juarez, Mexico, was listed in stable condition at Scenic Mountain Medical Center, suffering from cuts, abraisions and possible internal injuries, the spokesman said.

Officers' association heads DWI-awareness campaign

Staff Report

The Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commissioned Officers' Association (TABCOA) has launched a statewide fund-raising campaign, with Texas Rangers' starting pitcher Nolan Ryan as its spokesperson, to "Strike Out Drunk Driving" in Texas.

The association was incorporated in 1990, and consists of law enforcement officers whose responsibility it is to enforce state alcoholic beverage laws. More than 40,000 wholesale and retail businesses sell alcoholic beverages throughout Texas.

Steven M. Cagle, president of the association, and a professional enforcement officer for several years, said that one of the group's most important missions "is to make the public aware of the shocking number of accidents caused by intoxicated drivers."

There were 39,130 DWI arrests made by Texas Highway Patrol officers in 1989. A total of 1,881 drivers were fatally injured and 140 children, age 10-years-old and younger, were killed in accidents involving DWIs between 1986 and 1989.

"TABCOA officers are dedicated to raising money to educate the public about drunk driving, and to create legislation which supports stricter penalties for drunk drivers," Cagle said.

TABCOA officers work with bar and restaurant operators to prevent intoxicated persons from even getting in their vehicles. "We call ourselves the first line defense against drunk driving," Cagle said. "As we spot potential drunk drivers, we send them home in a taxi."

The association was formed to support education programs for its members to insure professionalism in law enforcement.

Odessa man arrested in shooting death

Staff Report

ODESSA — A 19-year-old Odessa man was arrested Sunday in the shooting death of Raoul Herrara, 22, the Odessa Police Department reported.

Police have also recovered a weapon they believe was used in the incident, which occurred at 1:40 a.m. Saturday in the parking lot of the Lambada Club at 5th and Hancock streets, an OPD spokesman said.

Herrara was found bleeding from gunshot wounds and was transported to Medical Center Hospital, where a justice of the peace pronounced him dead at 5:20 a.m. Saturday.

No bond had been set for the suspect as of Sunday night, the spokesman said.

Wesleyan fire may have been case of arson

FORT WORTH (AP) — Arson appears to be the cause of a four-alarm blaze that damaged Texas Wesleyan University's historic Ann Waggoner Hall, fire officials said.

Fire Lt. J.D. Paskey said that while the arson ruling is preliminary, he had discovered four locations on the second floor of the 99-year-old structure where fires were believed to have been set.

"It's definitely a suspicious fire."

Houston tries to cool racial heat

HOUSTON (AP) — Recent signs suggest that anti-Asian sentiment, sparked by the proliferation of Asian-owned businesses, is emerging in Houston's black communities.

"Boycott — Stop The Asian Invasions," reads a crudely assembled flier circulating through Acres Home, a predominantly black community 10 miles northwest of downtown Houston.

The anonymous flier ends with the question, "Will the Asians become our new slave masters?"

Other concerns are voiced by a black community newspaper editorial, which states: "'We as minorities, both black and Hispanic, know how it feels to see our business go under while Asian businesses thrive ... How can you fight the so-called enemy when you bring him home with you and put him in business?"

The ill will has been sparked by the increase of Asian-owned businesses in black neighborhoods, often the only areas in which the new immigrants can afford to buy, the Houston Chronicle reported in Sunday's editions.

Similar outrage against Asian-owned businesses has appeared in black communities in California and New York, leading there to boycotts and violent attacks by blacks against Asians.

Recently, in an effort to mend deteriorating relations, a meeting was organized between Acres Home residents and representatives from the Asian community.

The meeting was held at a Harris County courthouse annex renamed after the late U.S. Congressman Mickey Leland, who led many battles to end discrimination against blacks and other minorities.

It was supposed to be a meeting where residents could address Asian shop owners face to face and express their allegations of rude and disrespectful treatment and racism.

But the Asian shop owners invited to the meeting were no shows. They told Roy Douglas Malonson, president of the Acres Home Citizens Chamber of Commerce and an organizer of the meeting, that they worked late and couldn't make the night appointment.

In their places appeared Glenda Jo of the Council of Asian-American Organizations and Executive Director Dan Nip and President Michael Chou of the Asian-American Chamber of Commerce, Houston Chapter.

As a Department of Justice official, a Houston assistant police chief and a state representative stood by, the Asian representatives spoke of cultural differences that may have led to the charges of mistreatment by black residents.

"A lot of the problems stem from pure ignorance on both sides," said Chou, who along with KCOH radio talk show host Michael Harris attended a Justice Department sit-down on Asian-Black relations in Maryland three weeks ago.

He said Asians who are new immigrants may fear blacks, while blacks may see Asians "as people who are taking over the jobs."

Malonson, owner of a contracting and design company, has lived in Acres Home since 1952.

Instead of lashing out at Asian businesses, Malonson says they should be made partners in the community.

To that end, he launched an effort to educate the nearly two dozen Asian businesses, primarily Vietnamese, in how to survive in a black community.

Since the flier began circulating in late July, about 10 Asian businesses have joined the chamber — an important first step, Malonson says.

"It's the obligation of any business that sets up shop in a community and benefits to be responsible to that community, in terms of putting something back into youth and civic organizations or creating jobs," said Malonson.

Candidates woo minority vote

DALLAS (AP) — As cymbals clashed and costumed Asian-Americans performed traditional dragon and lion dances in a Houston park pavilion recently, GOP gubernatorial hopeful Clayton Williams was the center of attention.

The candidate's appearance at the Asian-American political picnic is his latest bid to appeal to minority voters, who could make up 20 percent of the Election Day turnout.

Democrat Ann Richards and her supporters have dismissed the Republican's tactics as a smoke screen. But her campaign also is making appeals to minority voters, citing her endorsements by black and Hispanic leaders and touting her accomplishments as state treasurer.

Both candidates say minority turnout is crucial in the Nov. 6 election.

For the first time, Texas will elect a black to a statewide office. The two candidates for a seat on the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals are black. They are Democrat Morris Overstreet of Amarillo and Republican Louis Sturns of Fort Worth.

In the attorney general's contest, Democrat Dan Morales, a Hispanic, faces Republican J.E. "Buster" Brown.

The minority vote in Texas traditionally has gone to the Democrats. The most a Republican candidate has ever received in the Hispanic community was 39 percent of the vote by Roy Barrera Jr. in his unsuccessful 1986 bid against Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Shoe give-away doctor's idea

FORT WORTH (AP) — Thousands of homeless Texans are sinking their feet into free shoes — everything from high heels to house slippers — thanks to a program started by a Dallas podiatrist.

Dr. Thomas Buehler, who organized Shoes for the Homeless, became acquainted with the foot problems of the homeless about five years ago when he started a twice-monthly clinic at a Dallas shelter.

As many as 30,000 pairs of used shoes donated from across North Texas were sized, disinfected, sorted and bagged Saturday by volunteers in an Irving warehouse.

The shoes were then delivered to shelters.One of the recipients of the shoes was L.T. Banks, who peeled off his ripped pair of desert boots, sank his feet into a pair of soft brown leather loafers with cushioned insoles.

"Real nice. All leather," Banks grinned. "The real deal."

Successful novelist loves to roam

Wife convinced Richard Ford that writing is a worthwhile profession

By George Christy
Copley News Service

Tall and rangy as Clint Eastwood, he might pass for a kin of Clint's, swears he wouldn't have become a writer if he hadn't married Kirstina Hensley, who convinced him that "writing was a worthwhile thing to dedicate your life to ... otherwise I'd have ended up as a cop or a CIA agent."

Novelist and short story master Richard Ford, whose screenplay, "Bright Angel," stars Sam Shepard, has published his fifth book, "Wildlife," which one reviewer describes as "the finest novel of coming of age since 'The Catcher in the Rye.'"

Richard and Kristina, an urban planner, shuttle between Dutton, Mont., and New Orleans, which he had "visited all my life, my father being a starch salesman ... New Orleans is a randy place, my father lived life to the fullest, boozed and smoked cigars, died when I was 8 years old. Kristina and I spend half the year in New Orleans, there's nothing better than the grilled pompano with red wine vinegar at Galatoire's.

"The other spots New Orleanians know and like: the Mystery Street Cafe at the bottom of the French Quarter, and Upperline, which is uptown — blowsy, open, small. Order any of the soups and the soft-shell crabs.

"Still, I'm not one to go overboard with eating in New Orleans — oh, like having crayfish estouffee on top of a fish, and finishing off with creme brulee. Two rich and cholesterol killers."

After stopping by Los Angeles, he was off to Chicago to catch a White Sox baseball game — Richard, in years past, published articles for Inside Sports, also wrote an acclaimed previous novel titled "The Sportswriter," which he shrugs is "when I grew up as a writer."

Born in Jackson, Miss., he finally met his hometown's renowned author Eudora Welty after his mother pointed her out — "I was 41 then, am 46 now, and she was at a book signing in Jackson — that meeting cemented our friendship. Eudora's a human being of great magnitude, genuinely good-natured, never says harsh things and is a good model for someone like me.

"She lives to like things, unlike others who are critical and deprecating. Eudora's 83, but without age, still writing, fully participating in life, but then that's not the way you're expected to be at 83; frankly, I should be that way at 46.

"In Montana, we live surrounded by wheat prairies. Kristina bought a house that's huge, with dramatic views of our 100 acres, but I've never felt comfortable being in it, it's too grand.

"In New Orleans, where we live from December to June, we have a house that was built in 1850 at the lower end of the Quarter that we found through the Mississippi Old Boy network — I knew a guy, who knew a guy, who knew a guy, etc. I love the landscape of Mississippi — the delta with all that verdancy and the heat that makes the cotton grow. Poor people get along better in the delta, and the races are getting along pretty well.

"Chicago's one of the cities I like most. I lived there awhile in an apartment on the Near North Side, there's an innocent attitude, a city where you can walk alone at night, the best of Middle America — it's where I began to write my short stories.

"Living between New Orleans and Dutton offers a nice contrast. In Montana, there's land, plenty of it, and relatively few people own a lot of land, and if the truth be told, it's a good place to visit, harder to live in.

"Montana shines with an unbelievably beautiful light, the big sky's suffused with it. No, we're not near Paradise Valley where Jeff Bridges, Peter Fonda, Thom McGuane are — they're about 200 miles south.

"Usually I'm up at 6:30 and write from 7:30 until noon, take time off for lunch, have a nap, also try to live normally, don't want to live a life that unduly sets me apart. Although I don't do what insurance agents do. I want to bring sympathy to what they do.

"I write with a pencil, then transfer the pages to a word processor, don't do much rewriting — not much of what I call 'furniture moving-around,' I may go back to writing in the afternoon, or forget about it and play squash, lift weights, turn on the TV set and watch the Mets, read a book — I reread Ford Maddox Ford, Joseph Conrad, Eudora Welty, early John Barth.

"Kristina and I have few friends, we're mostly alone together, and that's the way we like it. When my work stops, I want to hear what's on her mind. She's in a line of work that changes things and people for the better, which keeps me curious.

"Sometimes we hunt together, consider myself a conservative, wouldn't kill anything I wouldn't eat. There's an exquisite feeling being out in the woods or fields, a feeling of pure euphoria, or take-me-now-God I'm-happy.

"In Montana, there's nothing to do, so we better like each other — remember, I did chase after Kristina at Michigan State. Occasionally we go out for a meal, but nobody invites you over, there's none of that why-don't-you-come-over-for-dinner chitchat ... it's not in the Montana vocabulary. I don't watch much TV, unless it's news or sports.

"When I'm on the road, I jot observations in my notebooks ... you hear a line like 'everybody was crying all around me' and I'll mark it down, wondering what the next line is going to be. The closest I've come to understanding what imagination is ... is writing things you can't predict."

And the flag is up

Associated Press

If your mailbox is by the roadside, you probably run out several times a day — in rain or snow — to see if the mail has arrived.

Mail Time is a bright yellow metal flag that attaches to your mailbox. It has a spring hinge that automatically raises the flag when the letter carrier opens the box. Now all you have to do is look from your window to see if the yellow flag is up.

A screwdriver is the only tool needed to install it. The product fits standard U.S. Nos. 1, 1⅛ and 2 mailboxes.

Mail Time is $9, postpaid, from J H Wonderworks, 1157 Pugh Rd., Wayne, Pa., 19087.

DEAR ABBY

Faulty chlamydia test not worth a second try

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the woman whose doctor diagnosed her with chlamydia. She said she had been faithful to her husband for 9½ years, and he claimed to have been faithful to her. She asked if she could have been carrying the disease that long. You told her yes, it was possible.

Van Buren

This situation sounded all too familiar to me. That's why I'm writing. I recently went for a checkup at my local state health department, and was told upon initial examination that I, too, had chlamydia. I had been married for 10 years and had been faithful to my husband, and never did I doubt his faithfulness. I told the nurse this, and she said that the doctor felt no need to run another test to confirm the diagnosis as I had complained of the symptoms and he was 99 percent sure. But if I wanted to be sure which sexually transmitted disease I had, they would take a sample for the test.

Then I went home and confronted my husband. He said there was no possibility that this was true. He went to the health department the following day so they could take a sample from him. We were both treated for a week while waiting for our tests to come back. Guess what? They had made a mistake! Both of our tests were negative! Quite a mistake, I might add, as I'm due to deliver our first child in February.

I have since contacted the health department and asked the people there to counsel their staff, as this could have ruined a marriage that was not as strong as ours. Please publish this letter. And sign me ... RETESTED AND PASSED

DEAR RETESTED: Thank you for writing. Please read on:

DEAR ABBY: This is in reference to the letter from "Suspicious in Arizona," the housewife who, after many years as a faithful wife, was diagnosed as having chlamydia. Her husband also claimed to be totally faithful, but now she was suspicious.

As a researcher in chlamydia, I am deeply concerned that too many rapid tests are being done for diagnosis of chlamydia infection instead of a culture, which is the "gold standard." "Suspicious" may have been tested by one of the tests that are inaccurate an average of 20 percent of the time! These inaccurate tests have victimized many people by creating havoc in their marriages.

Furthermore, I have testified as an expert witness where a father was accused of child abuse because of an inappropriate test. He was subsequently found innocent and released from a penitentiary, after exhausting his savings on lawyers' fees. — DR. RUTH B. KUNDSIN, ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR OF MICROBIOLOGY AND MOLECULAR GENETICS, HARVARD MEDICAL SCHOOL

DEAR DR. KUNDSIN: Thank you for a valuable contribution to this column. The margin for error in testing is shocking. Obviously, tests that are incorrect 20 percent of the time should not be taken. Instead, those to be tested should insist on a culture to assure accuracy. If one is seeking to prove paternity, venereal disease or child abuse, the test must be 100 percent accurate.

Doctors, lawyers, readers — take note.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the question of who should go to the airport to meet the serviceman who had been overseas for over a year. His wife, alone? Or his parents and his wife? I vote with you, Abby. (His wife and his parents.)

My husband was in the military as a career, and I have shared many a homecoming with parents and children at various times. We are still happily married.

I had a friend whose husband was also in the military. She saved pennies all the time her husband was gone. When he came back, she took the kids with her to meet their dad at the airport. Earlier, she had scattered all the pennies she had saved on the front lawn; when they all got home from the airport, she told the kids they could keep all the money they found. Then she and her husband went inside for some quiet time alone! — AN EX-SEABEE'S WIFE IN BEDFORD, IND.

To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It's winning and not individual records that motivates Eric Dickerson, who is expected to resume his climb up the NFL's career-rushing list Sunday.

Dickerson signed a four-year contract extension with the Indianapolis Colts on Saturday and will be activated for Sunday's game with Denver.

Dickerson

Dickerson needs 11 yards to move past O.J. Simpson into sixth place on the NFL list. He has 11,226 yards rushing and set the league record of 2,105 with the Los Angeles Rams in 1984.

But, the six-time Pro Bowl pick hasn't been to the Super Bow and that's where he wants to be before his extension ends in 1994.

"I just want to win," he said Saturday. "When it's all said and done, the records are fine. The 2,000 yards, Walter Payton's record (16,726 in a career), the ultimate question is was he a winner? Did he ever win the big one?"

General manager Jim Irsay would not reveal terms of the deal but said that it contains "no creative mechanism to cover the fines" and salary lost by Dickerson in 1990.

Dickerson, suspended and fined for conduct detrimental to the team on Aug. 29, is eligible to come off the club's non-football injury list on Wednesday.

Houston tastes revenge

■ Warren Moon throws for five touchdowns as the Oilers erase the memory of last December's 61-7 loss to the Cincinnati Bengals.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Houston Oilers enjoyed the present too much to think about the past Sunday.

Warren Moon threw a career high five touchdown passes to five different receivers as the Oilers scored 31 unanswered points en route to a 48-17 victory over Cincinnati that atoned for a 61-7 loss to the Bengals last December.

Houston could have gloated about getting revenge for Cincinnati's tactics in the last meeting when the Bengals onsides kicked after taking a 45-0 lead and kicked a field goal in the final seconds, leading 58-7.

Instead, the Oilers took the victory graciously.

"We don't worry about history," Coach Jack Pardee said. "We'll just enjoy this one and start getting ready to play the next one."

Pardee shook hands after the game with Bengals coach Sam Wyche, who sought out Pardee unlike last December when Wyche waved derisively at former Oilers coach Jerry Glanville at the end of the game and later called him a phony.

There were no such hostilities Sunday between the intense divisional rivals. Only one scuffle broke out near the end of the game. There was no talk of running up the score.

"We have more class than that," linebacker John Grimsley said. "We were just controlling the ball and keeping it far enough out of reach. Our play spoke for itself. We didn't have to rub it in."

Oiler guard Mike Munchak called it a typical Oiler-Bengal matchup.

"There have been a lot of lopsided scores in the series," guard Mike Munchak said. "The difference is, last year, they purposely ran up the score. Today, we just soundly defeated them."

Moon was near perfect, completing 21 of 33 passes for 369 yards and the Oiler defense harrassed Boomer Esiason into throwing three interceptions and holding him to 130 passing yards.

Moon became the first quarterback to pass for 20,000 yards in both the NFL and the Canadian Football League.

"We have to get off the passes quickly on the blitzes, so we have to have a lot of guys running, quick crisp routes," Moon said. "Today I singled out the one that was the most open."

Did the Oilers play a perfect game?

"I'll take it until we have one," Pardee said. "We needed this one so badly. A loss would have buried us so deep. We couldn't afford a loss."

Houston (3-3) moved within one game of Cincinnati's (4-2) AFC Central Division lead.

Esiason passed for 471 yards last week, a club record, in a 34-31 overtime victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

Montana, Rice go on spree

Associated Press

Joe Montana's career highs of 476 yards and six touchdowns passes — five to Jerry Rice to tie an NFL receiving record — enabled unbeaten San Francisco to whip Atlanta 45-35 on Sunday, extending the 49ers' league record to 13 straight road victories.

Rice had a club-record 13 catches for 225 yards, with TD receptions covering 24, 25, 19, 13 and 15 yards. He tied the touchdown record shared by Bob Shaw of the Chicago Cardinals and Kellen Winslow of the San Diego Chargers.

Neither Montana nor Rice seemed overly impressed.

Montana rated his performance "on and off. At times I played pretty well, but I didn't feel like I played up to the standard of the Super Bowl. I was up and down."

Rice "had a decent game today ... but I don't compare games. I don't think I made two mistakes in the Super Bowl. Today I made four or five."

Montana and Rice picked on cornerback Charles Dimry throughout the game.

"He's a great defensive back, but it is one-on-one coverage and the defensive back doesn't know where I'm going," Rice said.

"My confidence level is not shaken," Dimry said. "I'm just down because I had a bad day. Rice is a total package and great all-around receiver."

Montana, who completed 32 of 49 passes, also threw a 43-yard scoring pass to Mike Sherrard. Montana was one of several San Francisco quarterbacks who had previously thrown five TD passes in a game.

Mike Cofer joined the record-setting binge with a 56-yard field goal on the final play of the first half, breaking by two yards the team mark shared by Steve Mike-Mayer and Bruce Gossett.

The victory was the 10th straight for the 49ers (5-0), who have won 13 in a row counting playoff victories last season en route to their second consecutive Super Bowl championship.

The Falcons (2-3) got an outstanding performance from Chris Miller, who completed 18 of 31 passes for 291 yards and three touchdowns before injuring his right knee in the final period.

Miller's touchdowns covered 75 yards to Andre Rison, five to James Milling and three to Gary Wilkins. Scott Camp-

Phoenix snuffs Cowboys

Dallas running back Emmitt Smith heads toward open field against the Phoenix Cardinals, but the Cowboys lost again.

■ Playoff talk for the Dallas Cowboys ended quickly Sunday in a 20-3 loss to lowly Phoenix.

Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — For the first time in three weeks, the Phoenix Cardinals kept the opposition from getting its second wind in the second half and they have their second win to show for it while the Dallas Cowboys may have quit talking about its playoff chances.

Johnny Johnson rushed for 120 yards and one touchdown, while fellow rookie Anthony Thompson scored on a 1-yard run as Phoenix limited Dallas to 100 yards total offense and beat the Cowboys 20-3 Sunday.

The Cardinals (2-3) had been outscored 52-7 in the second halves of losses to New Orleans (28-7) and Washington (38-10).

Coach Joe Bugel spent last week's open date retooling Phoenix's pass rush by switching from the 4-3 to the 3-4 defense.

The work payed off as Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman completed only nine of 25 passes for 61 yards with two interceptions. He also was sacked four times.

■ A missed putt by Luis Del Gadillo allows Midland College to tie Odessa College in WJCAC golf tournament play.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — A missed putt on the ninth hole by Odessa College's Luis Del Gadillo led to a two-way first-place tie after the second stop of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference golf tournament.

Midland College and OC finished with identical 27-hole rounds of 452 at The Club at Mission-Dorado in Odessa.

The second-stop on the WJCAC tour was played Saturday and Sunday over the first 27 holes in the three-day National Intercollegiate Invitational golf tournament. A total of 17 junior and community colleges are competing in the 54 hole event, including the five schools competing for the WJCAC crown.

"Boy, that hurt," OC head coach Kyle Howard said after Del Gadillo missed the putt. "He makes it we win, he misses it we tie. It's disappointing when you have had a several shot lead on your home course.

"We aren't playing as well as I'd hoped for this season. This is the slowest start of any of the teams I've coached in the four years I've been here."

Delnor Poss, head coach of the MC golf team, said his team's poise and discipline proved the difference in the Chap comeback.

"I'm extremely proud of Dean Robertson's leadership, and the freshmen's courage and self-discpline," Poss said. "They really came back and played sensational on the final nine."

MC trailed OC by seven strokes after the first 18 Saturday. In the final nine Sunday, MC picked up those seven strokes against OC, out-stroking the Wranglers 144-151.

The Chaps shot a 439 to win their home stop at Midland Country Club 12 days ago, and combined with this weekend's 452, now stand alone in first place in the conference point standings.

MC's Dean Robertson, who shot a 36 on the first nine Sunday to go with Saturday's 71, leads the WJCAC medalist race after two weeks with a 216 total. Robertson took the lead from OC's Jerry Hounchell, who fell to second with a 217 total.

National Intercollegiate Invitational

Robertson also wrested the lead in the overall National Intercollegiate medalist race with his second consecutive 71. The Scot's two-round 142 total is a shot better than David Bathgate and Andrew Anderson, both who had compiled 143s for Central Alabama.

Despite Robertson's individual expertise on the links, Central Alabama continued to run away with the overall invitational team title. Central had a team

Gerring takes World crown

CELY, France (AP) — Cathy Gerring shot a one-under-par 71 in the final round and held on to edge Beth Daniel by a single stroke in the LPGA World Championship Sunday with a 278 total.

Daniel, who turned 34 Sunday, needed a victory to clinch Player of the Year. She fired a 68 in the closing round.

Daniel picked up four points in the Player of the Year competition, and moved closer to the title with a total of 82, but Patty Sheehan, who tied for fourth and picked up two points, remained in the running with one tournament left.

Sheehan can catch Daniel by winning the last official LPGA Tour event, the Mazda-Japan Classic in Tokyo, Nov. 1-4.

If Sheehan wins and Daniel finishes outside the top five, they would end in a tie.

"If it was a tie it would be a precedent and the LPGA are looking into what to do," said Daniel, who has won seven titles to Sheehan's five.

"I've had a lot of pressure to clinch the Player of the Year and can't quite seem to do it."

Gerring, who led through every round, won her third title this year, and the $100,000 winner's check boosted her season's prize-money [illegible]3,483. She remains in fifth pos[illegible]n on the LPGA money list.

"I'm real proud of leading a field of the best players in the world right down to the wire," Gerring said.

Gerring led from the 18th hole on the first day. She started Sunday with a three-stroke advantage and increased it to seven shots after four birdies in the first five holes.

But she then saw her lead shrink over the back nine, where she bogeyed three times.

Gerring went through the 14th green to drop a shot then missed the 15th green to bogey again.

"I tried to play safe. That's not in my repertoire," she said. "Playing the 16th, I saw Beth was only two shots back. I went way left but made a fantastic chip to a foot for par. That won it."

Daniel's $52,000 second-money check swelled her record-breaking season winnings to $863,578 on the LPGA Money List, $138,161 more than runner-up Sheehan.

Defending tournament champion Betsy King had a 72 Sunday to finish third at 282.

Cindy Rarick and Dottie Mochrie both carded 70 and tied at 284 with Sheehan, who shot 68.

Ireland beats England for rich Dunhill Cup title

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Disaster turned to sudden-death glory at the Road Hole for David Feherty Sunday and gave Ireland the title over England in the $1 million Dunhill Cup.

The notorious 17th hole of the Old Course appeared to have added another victim when Feherty blew a 3-foot par putt there on the next-to-last hole of the final series to drop into a tie with England's Howard Clark. They finished the 18 holes with 3-over pars 75s.

But, back at the 17th as the third hole in the tournament's first championship playoff, Feherty sent his second shot to within 25 feet of the flag, while Clark hit his well to the left of the green.

Clark, a member of England's 1987 Dunhill champs, left a desparation 40-foot par putt short, and Feherty two-putted for a par 4, a 3⅛-2⅛ victory and a first prize of $100,000 apiece for him and teammates Ronan Rafferty and Philip Walton.

"The 17th is my favorite hole in all the world," Feherty said. "I never want to do that again. It is the enigma of golf — to do well it's going to hurt. But I did want to accept the responsibility."

He said his approach shot, a 3-iron through a crosswind, "was about the best shot I've ever made, given the context."

Clark said he was "gutted deparately for the team"

"I had the best chance to win the cup," he said. As it was, Clark came from three shots down at the turn in both his morning and afternoon matches against Feherty to win the first and force a playoff in the second.

Feherty and Clark had matched par 4s at the first and second holes to open the playoff.

Runner-up checks of $50,000 each went to Clark, Mark James and Richard Boxall.

Ireland, the 1988 champion, became the first two-time winner of the cup since Australia won the first two tournaments in 1985-86.

New Zealand beat Japan 2-1 for third place.

Rafferty led by two strokes at the turn.

Crampton nails Trevino by four

ABILENE (AP) — Bruce Crampton shot a 3-under-par 69 on Sunday to win the Gatlin Brothers Southwest Senior Classic by four shots over Lee Trevino.

Crampton had three straight sub-70 rounds for a 12-under-par 204 on the par-72, 6,843-yard Fairway Oaks Country Club course.

The win was Crampton's 17th in a five-year career on the Senior PGA Tour. He won $45,000 from the $300,000 purse.

Chi Chi Rodriguez and Terry Dill were at 6-under 210, two shots behind Trevino.

"It wasn't a precise shotmaking round like the other two rounds," said Crampton, who had rounds of 67 and 68 to enter the final day with a three-shot lead over Robert Gaona. The final two days were played in winds that gusted more than 20 mph.

Crampton never led by less than three shots after starting the round with a pair of birdies. Gaona pulled to within three on the fifth hole with a 25-foot birdie putt, and Crampton sank a 20-foot par putt on the same hole. Crampton pulled away from Gaona on the seventh when Crampton birdied and Gaona bogeyed.

Ball won't stay in hole for Cook

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Bob Tway accepted the gift of a ball that wouldn't stay in the hole Sunday in his playoff triumph over John Cook in the Las Vegas Invitational.

"Unlucky for John, lucky for me," Tway understated.

Cook hit a 95-yard sand wedge shot into the bottom of the cup on the first playoff hole and, for a second, appeared to have won the tournament.

But the ball somehow bounced out of the hole and spun back to the front of the green, some 15 feet away.

Tway went on to a routine two-putt par to score his first victory of the year.

"How can you be happy and disappointed at the same time?" Cook asked after duplicating his playoff loss to Tom Kite at Memphis earlier this year.

"I'm disappointed that I played so well and didn't win. But I'm happy that I've come so far in such a short time," said Cook, who missed almost all of the 1989 season because of career-threatening hand surgery.

Was he disappointed, upset or angry about the ball that disappeared in the cup for the winner, then came out?

"Not in the least. Not in this game. These things happen," he said.

Tway, the leader by three shots at the start of Sunday's final round of the five-day, 90-hole tournament, said he "struggled all day. I was fighting it."

And, by the eighth hole his lead was gone. By the 11th, when Cook birdied from 10 feet, Tway was behind.

It stayed that way until Cook made his first mistake of the day, three-putting for bogey on the 16th.

San Diego running back Marion Butts (35) is on his way to 121 yards rushing and two touchdowns in a 39-3 win over the New York Jets Sunday.

NFL: Giants nip Redskins, 24-20

bell came off the bench to lead a 66-yard drive which he capped with a 13-yard scoring pass to Rison.

Atlanta's George Thomas, blocked two punts by Barry Helton, the first leading to a San Francisco touchdown after it crossed the line of scrimmage, struck a Falcon and was recovered by the 49ers.

On the second blocked punt, Bobby Butler was credited with a 62-yard touchdown. He scooped up the ball after it rolled back to the San Francisco 35.

Giants 24, Redskins 20

New York kept pace with San Francisco as the league's only unbeaten teams, beating Washington for the fifth straight time — by a combined total of 18 points. The difference came on three big plays by Giants quarterback Phil Simms, one the longest passing play of his career, 80 yards to Stephen Baker.

The Giants are 5-0 for the first time since 1941, the year coach Bill Parcells was born.

Simms, who completed 13 of 22 passes for 283 yards and two scores, set up third-period touchdowns by Ottis Anderson and Mark Bavaro by hitting Bavaro with a 61-yard pass and Maurice Carthon with a 63-yarder.

Washington (3-2) lost to New York for the eighth time in the last nine non-strike games.

Stan Humphries, making his second start for the Redskins, hit 14 of 27 passes for 135 yards. But he threw three interceptions, the last one Greg Jackson's second of the game, which ended Washington's final threat.

Chiefs 43, Lions 24

Free agent Barry Word rushed for a team-record 200 of Kansas City's 563 total yards and Bill Maas led the defense with two sacks, one for a safety on Bob Galgiano.

Word, outperforming All-Pros Barry Sanders and Christian Okoye, broke the record of 193 yards by the late Joe Delaney. Word carried 18 times as the Chiefs (4-2) ran up their highest point total in more than five years.

Sanders scored on a tackle-breaking, 47-yard pass play and a 13-yard run to give Detroit (2-4) a quick 14-3 lead.

But Okoye, whose 1,480 yards edged Sanders by 10 for the 1989 NFL rushing title, had touchdown runs of four and one yards as the Chiefs took command in the second half.

Saints 25, Browns 20

Steve Walsh, acquired in a trade with Dallas 20 days earlier, threw three touchdown passes in his New Orleans debut after replacing Jon Fourcade in the second period.

Walsh completed 15 of 26 passes for 243 yards. He entered the game after Cleveland (2-4) tied the score at 3-3.

Walsh marched the Saints (2-3) 79 yards in 14 plays in his first series, capping it with a 4-yard touchdown pass to Dalton Hilliard. Walsh also threw scoring passes of 45 yards to Floyd Turner and 13 to Eric Martin, who had eight receptions for 153 yards.

Raiders 24, Seahawks 17

Short touchdown passes by Jay Schroeder capped the first three drives as Los Angeles (5-1) retained a one-game lead in the AFC West. Schroeder, hitting 19 of 26 passes for 235 yards, hit Steven Smith for a 1-yard TD in the first period before connecting with Mervyn Fernandez and Ethan Horton from three yards out in the second.

Bucs 26, Packers 14

Vinny Testaverde passed for a season-high 292 yards and Wayne Haddix scored from 45 yards out with one of five interceptions by Tampa Bay.

Testaverde completed 17 of 29 passes, including a 14-yard scoring shot to Ron Hall, giving him eight TDs passes against only two interceptions.

Don Majkowski, who has struggled since ending a long contract holdout, threw for 355 yards and one touchdown for Green Bay (4-2). But the interceptions, among six turnovers by the Packers, helped Tampa Bay (4-2) build a 26-7 lead.

Steelers 34, Broncos 17

Bubby Brister threw four touchdown passes, three to rookie tight end Eric Green, as revitalized Pittsburgh (3-3) handed Denver its third straight loss. Brister also threw a 6-yard TD pass to Louis Lipps and Merril Hoge ran six yards.

Chargers 39, Jets 3

Marion Butts ran for 121 yards and two touchdowns, and San Diego's strong pass rush combined with New York errors for the worst performance in the term of first-year Jets coach Bruce Coslet.

Poor play by special teams, including a dropped snap by punter Joe Prokop, put the Chargers (2-4) in good position early. The Jets (2-4) made it easy for the Chargers, once incurring three major penalties on a San Diego drive that made it 19-3 in the second period.

Bears 38, Rams 9

Jim Harbaugh, playing with a cracked rib, passed for two touchdowns and ran for another. Harbaugh, who was injured last week against Green Bay, completed 18 of 25 passes for a career-high 248 yards and the Bears (5-1) scored on their first four possessions for a 28-0 halftime lead.

The Rams (1-4) came into the game leading the NFL in offense but were held to 91 yards in the first half.

SWC bidding farewell to Hogs

Associated Press

The defending champion Arkansas Razorbacks eliminated from the Southwest Conference football race in October? They don't give odds on such insanity in Las Vegas.

The Razorbacks, who said they are leaving the SWC because the Southeastern Conference has stiffer competition, suffered their second consecutive league defeat on Saturday.

This time it was Texas Tech doing the damage 49-44 in Fayetteville.

Arkansas has lost its first two SWC games for the first time since 1958.

Meanwhile, look who is a half-game out of first place. The Texas Christian Horned Frogs, with their first 3-0 SWC record in 32 years, are trailing the 4-0 Houston Cougars atop the league ladder.

Houston, a 36-31 come-from-behind conqueror of Texas A&M, can't go to the Cotton Bowl because of NCAA probation.

TCU knocked off Rice 38-28 on Saturday for its fifth consecutive victory.

Baylor beat Southern Methodist 52-17 and Texas edged Oklahoma 14-13 in the other conference games.

In games this week, Arkansas is at Texas in a 1 p.m. clash, Baylor is at Texas A&M at 1 p.m., Houston is at SMU at 2 p.m., and Texas Tech is at Rice at 2 p.m.

CHAPS: Central Alabama holds lead

(From 1C)

total of 581 after Sunday's play, 20 strokes in front of second-place Navarro.

Midland College's No. 1 gold team is in third place with an overall 604. The Chaps are 23 strokes out of first, but far more reachable is the runner-up honors they could grab should they be able to make up four holes in Monday's final round of 18.

The MC gold and green teams tee off at 8 a.m. Monday. OC's No. 1 squad tees off at 8:40 a.m.

Today's final 18 holes will be played for the National Intercollegiate title and will have no bearing on the WJCAC race — individual or team.

NOTES: OC head coach Kyle Howard said the condition of the greens, the large number of players and the time the players are taking with each shot due to the importance of the event accounted for why play has been so slow. Rounds have been taking from 5-to-6 hours to complete the first two days. "I've probably seen more three putting this weekend than I will all year," Howard said ... New Mexico Military's Yoshie Tsukada fired a hole in one Sunday on the eighth hole at Mission.

Western Junior College Athletic Conference results at the National Intercollegiate Invitational at The Club at Mission Dorado in Odessa (18 holes Saturday, 9 holes Sunday; first 27 hole results count toward the second round of the WJCAC golf race):

Prices retreat

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices slipped Friday to close below $40 a barrel after declining even more sharply during the day on a rumor that Iraq was considering retreating from Kuwait.

That rumor, which spread through the market about midday, caused oil futures prices to plunge by about $2 a barrel, said Simom Trimble, an oil analyst with Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc.

But U.S. government officials later said there was no indication Iraq was considering such a move, causing oil prices to return to near their morning level, analysts said.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the November-delivery price of light sweet crude, the benchmark grade of oil, closed at $39.69 a barrel, down 73 cents. On Thursday, the same contract rose $1.73 to close at a record $40.42 a barrel.

Later contract months were all down.

Natural gas fell 1 cent per 1,000 cubic feet on the Nymex to close at $1.95.

Oil prices opened higher Friday morning after climbing in Europe on word that the speaker of the Egyptian parliament had been shot to death by terrorists, Trimble said. That development heightened fears of increased terrorism in the Mideast.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. dollar finished mixed Friday in a world market traders said was influenced by a myriad of factors, from uncertainty in federal budget negotiations to falling oil prices.

Silver prices recovered slightly after sinking to levels not seen in 14 years, but gold prices slid.

In New York, one British pound fetched $1.9675, less expensive than $1.9775 late Thursday. But in London, the pound rose to $1.9740 from $1.9640 late Thursday.

"This is just a very volatile market," said Lloyd G. Atkinson, chief economist with the Bank of Montreal. "There's not much to make out of trends. It's just a very, very nervous market."

The dollar settled at 129.05 Japanese yen, down from 129.47 on Thursday.

Dollar rates in New York: 1.5243 German marks, 1.2860 Swiss francs, 5.1055 French francs, 1,142.25 Italian lire, 1.1471 Canadian dollar.

On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery fell $2.20 to settle at $387.50 a troy ounce.

Silver bullion for current delivery rebounded to settle at $4.306 a troy ounce, up from $4.235 Thursday.

Leaders can't agree on recession

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Business leaders can't agree on whether the U.S. economy is headed for a recession.

"I guess I would align myself with those who believe we are in or are entering a recession," said Willard C. Butcher, chairman of Chase Manhattan Bank.

But while John S. Reed, chairman of Citicorp, describes it as a "difficult period," he says he's "not ready to throw in the sponge."

And David T. Kerns, chairman of the Xerox Corp., says he doesn't "have the slightest idea" whether the United States is in a recession.

There were other topics discussed at the Business Council's weekend meeting at this mountain resort — the Persian Gulf crisis, the federal budget deficit and the baseball playoffs — but recession took center stage.

The council's semiannual economic outlook report, prepared by 19 corporate economists, set the tone.

"There is, first of all, a very big difference in what our consultants are projecting now, compared to what they were projecting last spring," Lewis T. Preston, chairman of J.P. Morgan & Co. and council vice chairman, told reporters before presenting the report to leaders of the nation's top 100 corporations.

While three-fourths of the economists believe the economy still can skirt a recession this year, projected growth in the second half was down to 0.3 percent at an annual rate, compared with a 2 percent rate projected in May.

Five of the 19 panelists said an economic downturn would occur before year's end.

In a session with reporters, 12 of the council's corporate chiefs assessed their particular industries. While most agreed on the overall economic sluggishness, many noted that weakness varied from industry to industry and from region to region.

"It feels like (a recession) in some segments," said General Electric Co. Chairman John F. Welch Jr., who becomes council chairman in January. "In other segments, things are quite good."

Citicorp's Reed said consumers were reflecting the economy.

"We look at our credit card business ... and we see different patterns depending on the state of the economy in a given area," he said.

"In areas where the economy is very weak, consumers tend to prepay their outstanding and put the card in a drawer," Reed said. "And in areas where they're feeling good, they tend to use it normally."

But most agreed that even those industries that had not been greatly affected by the economic sluggishness earlier in the year, slowed dramatically after the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

"There is still growth but at a lesser rate than in the past," said James D. Robinson III, chairman of the American Express Co.

Robinson, Welch and others agreed that housing and consumer spending on durable goods — big-ticket items such as appliances and automobiles — have been most adversely affected.

Selling troubled S&L option, new CEO says

■ Selling troubled San Jacinto Savings Association could maximize its value, the thrift's new president and chief executive says.

HOUSTON (AP) — San Jacinto Savings Association's new president and chief executive says selling the thrift may be the best way to solve its perpetual capital problems.

"Our goal here is to maximize the value of the association," said banker Roger Clark. "Ultimately, that means finding additional capital, a merger or some other resolution."

Clark, who has been working with federal regulators in recent years to manage insolvent thrifts, officially joined San Jacinto on Thursday.

His major task is to bring the thrift's capital up to minimums required by regulators to eliminate the threat of a takeover — and selling it is one possibility, he said.

Regulators require thrifts to keep a certain amount of capital, dependent on the amount of assets, that acts as a cushion against bad loans.

For months, San Jacinto has not had enough capital. As an undercapitalized institution, it could be taken over by thrift regulators at any time.

On Thursday, San Jacinto said preliminary results of second-quarter earnings show that the thrift is insolvent, even with the $100 million capital infusion it recently received from its parent company.

In the past, San Jacinto officials have tried to bring their capital ratios in line with requirements solely by selling off assets. The thrift recently sold its mortgage servicing operation to NCNB Mortgage Co. and about $280 million in real estate.

The sales helped in two ways. By reducing the overall amount of assets, it automatically lowered the minimum amount of capital required. And by selling risky investments, such as real estate, the thrift got rid of some of the assets for which regulators require exceptionally large amounts of capital.

Clark said the thrift will continue with those sales as it still has some major real estate on its books.

"San Jacinto has accomplished a great deal in the last two years, but the institution still faces some enormous challenges in preserving the value of the retail business in the face of continuing operating losses," Clark said.

As one of the few large thrifts in Texas to avoid a regulatory takeover, San Jacinto officials often tout the thrift's franchise value.

San Jacinto has about $3 billion in assets and 20 branches in the Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth areas.

Clark said regulators have not given San Jacinto any kind of deadline for raising capital.

Argentina reportedly wants to join OPEC

■ Argentina is reportedly eliminating oil price controls and raising foreign sales so it can join OPEC.

Associated Press

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Economically pressed Argentina wants to enter OPEC, according to a news report last week.

Argentine President Carlos Menem was quoted by Venezuela's government news agency Venpres as saying Argentina plans to free its domestically controlled energy prices in January and to increase foreign oil sales so it can join the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"Although our oil exports are still small, we are slowly increasing them to reach our goals," Menem was quoted as saying. Menem has been president of Argentina, which has rich natural resources but has been debilitated by years of chronic economic and labor problems, since July 8.

He said Argentine oil now earns nearly $400 million per year. "Argentina is a country with oil, and it has the option of gradually increasing exports," Menem said.

Venezuela and Ecuador are the only Latin American members of the 13-nation OPEC cartel. Mexico and Colombia also export oil.

The city of Downey, Calif. fears that the Pep Boys auto chain will tear down this original-style McDonald's, one of the first franchised by the McDonald brothers, once the lease expires.

City works to save historic McDonald's

■ Downey, Calif. fears the Pep Boys auto chain will tear down its historic McDonald's restaurant, but Pep Boys officials say they are willing to help save the landmark.

By Michael Fleeman

DOWNEY, Calif. (AP) — The Pep Boys are in high-level talks with Ronald McDonald over saving a landmark: one of the original McDonald's restaurants, franchised in 1953 by the McDonald brothers themselves.

City officials fear the Pep Boys auto parts chain, the restaurant's landlord, will decline to renew the lease and tear down the fast-food relic that many say brings back memories sweeter than a strawberry shake.

"This is our most renowned landmark," said Mayor Roy Paul. "I believe that it has historical significance and don't want to see it destroyed."

The restaurant, one of about a dozen franchised in the early 1950s by Dick and Mac (yes, Mac) McDonald, has two giant arches and a 40-foot sign featuring Speedy the cook, Ronald's predecessor, winking in neon.

This city 10 miles southeast of Los Angeles has long had a soft spot for the McDonald's. The restaurant was even exempted from a sign ordinance.

The City Council also is considering a new historic buildings ordinance that would require Pep Boys to state their case at a hearing if they want to evict Ronald and company. Action on the ordinance was tabled during this week's council meeting. A new debate date was not set.

The save-the-McDonald's campaign is among the latest efforts in Southern California to preserve its fabulous '50s architecture.

Studio City residents last year fought to keep a car wash and diner from becoming a mini-mall. But the effort came up short, and the car wash with its distinct 55-foot tower shaped like three boomerangs and the nearby diner are history.

In Downey, the McDonald's has the support of not only the city, but the giant

Exchange specialist no 'paragon of virtue'

By Bill Doyle

Q. My order to sell 200 shares of a well-known stock at "50" — $50 per share — was never executed, even though 25,000 shares of the same stock did trade at 50 on the New York Stock Exchange later that day, before its price fell.

Doyle

My brokerage firm says my order was handled incorrectly by the specialist on the exchange. According to my broker, the specialist chose to sell 25,000 shares for a large institutional investor, although my sell order for 200 shares was received first. This supposedly is confirmed by documentation.

It has taken more than a month to get this much information. Meanwhile, because of the stock's price decline, I have lost money. My brokerage says it is not responsible and tells me the specialist "doesn't want to hear about it."

Don't I have any recourse?

A. Based on your story, you most certainly do. By specifying a price, you placed a "limit order." Under the rules, limit orders at a particular price must be executed in chronological order.

Assuming your order to sell 200 shares of that stock at 50 reached the exchange's trading floor before the order to sell 25,000 shares of the same stock at 50, your order had priority. It should have been filled before the 25,000-share sell order.

This is basic. The fact that the much larger sell order was placed by a big institutional investor, such as a pension fund, bank trust department, insurance company or mutual fund, doesn't change things.

Frankly, I find it difficult to believe that a specialist would fracture the rules so blatantly. I'm not holding specialists up as paragons of virtue. But any specialist doing what your broker says that one did would risk losing his very lucrative position.

Orders to sell and buy stocks are time-stamped when they reach the stock exchange trading floor. That, no doubt, is the "documentation" your broker mentioned. If you are getting a straight story from your brokerage, that firm should have gone to bat for you. Since it disclaims responsibility, spell out your problem in a letter to the New York Stock Exchange's Inquiries and Complaints Department, 55 Water Street, New York, NY 10041.

Q. Why does a specialist on the stock exchange get involved when I place a limit order to buy or sell stock?

A. This is best explained by an example.

Let's say you give your broker a limit order to sell 100 shares of XYZ Corp. at 50. Your broker sends the order to his firm's representative on the stock exchange trading floor.

And let's say XYZ is trading at 47 when your order reaches the trading floor. Your brokerage firm's representative can't very well hang around the "trading post" where XYZ is traded waiting for that stock's price to rise. He has many other orders to worry about.

So, he turns your order over to the specialist who makes the market in XYZ. The specialist enters your order in his "book" and executes it when and if XYZ rises to 50.

Q. I ordered my broker to sell 215 shares of stock I owned. The 15 shares were sold in a transaction separate from the 200 shares. Why?

A. Most stocks are bought and sold in "round lots" of 100 shares and multiples thereof. The exceptions to this general rule are a small number of "inactive stocks" in which there is very little trading. Those inactive stocks are traded in 10-share round lots.

Odd-lot transactions are handled somewhat differently than round-lot transactions. The two types are never combined in one trade. As a result, your sell order of 215 shares was divided into two orders — one a round-lot order of 200 shares, the other an odd-lot order of 15 shares.

The per share price on the two orders might be a bit different. There are variations in the way odd-lot trades are handled. Depending on the exact method your brokerage firm used, you might or might not be charged an odd-lot differential of 12.5 per share.

Saturn to attract GM buyers

By Frederick Standish

SPRING HILL, Tenn. (AP) — When General Motors Corp. rolled out its new Saturn cars Thursday, company officials predicted they will lure more buyers from the competition than from other GM divisions.

GM created the Saturn to compete with Japanese imports that have taken a large part of the market from the Big Three automakers. The cars have price tags and fuel efficiency ratings competitive with Japanese models.

Don Hudler, Saturn Corp.'s vice president for sales and marketing, said he expected 65 percent of the GM subsidiary's first-year sales will be new business to GM. The rest would come from current GM owners, probably owners of Chevrolets.

But by the third year Saturn is on the market, he said 80 percent of its sales will come from would-be buyers of imports or cars made by domestic rivals Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp.

"We'll do better as our perception gets out there," Hudler said after the official unveiling of Saturn's two- and four-door cars in Spring Hill, where the new cars are made.

Auto analysts long have questioned Saturn's lofty expectations that a large number of its sales would come from import buyers. Saturn's price range of $7,995 to $11,775 puts it in the same ball park as a host of imports, as well as the Geo Prizm and the Chevrolet Cavalier, both sold and serviced by Chevrolet dealers.

Snatching a sale from Chevrolet may help Saturn, but does nothing for GM's profits overall.

Saturn was set up as a separate corporation within GM in January 1985. Since then, the new company's officials have been trying to distance themselves, the Saturn plant and the cars from the parent corporation.

Workers at General Motor's Saturn plant cheer as Saturn cars are rolled out of the facility.

No GM corporate officials were at Thursday's unveiling at the end of the assembly line at Saturn's plant 35 miles south of Nashville. It appeared like a pep rally for the company's 3,350 employees, or "team members" as workers refer to themselves.

As three new cars were driven off the line and into a shipping area, hundreds of workers cheered.

About 1,000 cars will be in dealerships or on their way when Saturn officially goes on sale Oct. 25 at 30 retailers, mostly in the South and West. The company expects nationwide availability through about 130 dealerships a year from now.

Saturn has set an ambitious goal for itself. When production is fully operational, in about a year, the company expects sales to reach about 250,000 a year. That's slightly less than the 255,159 Honda Civics that Americans bought in the 1990 model year that ended last month.

In price, the Saturn also is positioned against the Ford Escort, Mazda Protege, Nissan Sentra, Toyota Corolla, Dodge Shadow and Plymouth Sundance.

Saturn is including a roadside assistance plan and a buy-back program for owners.

But Hudler said the cars will carry no incentives.

The company already is working on new Saturns, perhaps including a station wagon and a convertible.

Exxon sells spill gear

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A four-day auction of Exxon's surplus oil-spill cleanup gear grossed well over the expected $10 million, auction company officials said.

The Vancouver, British Columbia-based Ritchie Bros. Auctioneers International wouldn't say Saturday exactly how much it took in.

The sale, which drew thousands of bidders to several lots around Anchorage, concluded Friday. Everything sold, from a float plane to mobile homes to Zodiac boats to fishing nets to household appliances, officials said.

Ritchie Bros. bought the merchandise last month from Exxon Corp. for an undisclosed price.

McDONALDS: Talks on new lease are ongoing

(From 5C)

Oak Brook, Ill.,-based McDonald's Corp., with 11,000 affiliate and franchise restaurants and $17.3 billion in 1989 sales.

The McDonald's Corp., which recently bought the Downey store from its independent operators, would like to spend $500,000 on a renovation project that will improve the store's facilities but keep its nostalgic look.

But McDonald's doesn't want to lay out that kind of cash unless Pep Boys agrees to a long-term lease, said William Marble, regional vice president.

"We want to restart and bring it up to proud standards," said Marble. "But if I can't get a longer lease, I have to walk away."

Pep Boys, with 300 stores and $900 million in sales, won't say what it will do with the lease for the restaurant, which sits near a Pep Boys store. Company officials dismissed suggestions they only want McDonald's out of their lives.

"We have no intention to knock that thing down, and in fact right now are trying to negotiate a new lease," said Fred Stampone, senior vice president of administration.

City officials say they suspect Pep Boys just wants to keep its options open.

"They don't want to have a situation where the city requires that they keep a hamburger stand there," said assistant City Manager Ken Farfsing. "It's on a fairly busy corner, and they may want the ability of getting someone who will pay a higher rent."

Terrain hampers night exercises

By Neil MacFarquhar

IN NORTHERN SAUDI DESERT (AP) — Deep in the night, "Iraqi forces" rapidly approach a U.S. artillery position. The mock battle peaks with a cry of "Breakaway!"

Specialist Joe Pierce slaps on night-vision goggles and races a self-propelled howitzer cannon across the sand. He doesn't always find his next position.

Pilots and drivers of the army's 101st Airborne Division, hoping to hone their night-fighting skills, are finding that the desert terrain creates problems for the high-tech goggles.

The difficulties include a reduction in depth perception and bright lights ruining the sensors in some older model goggles.

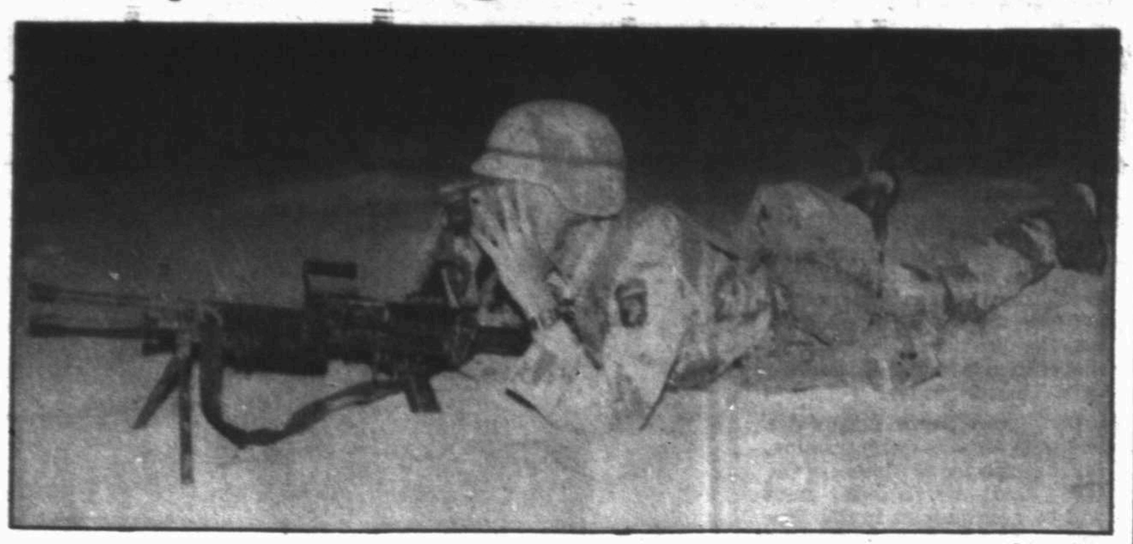
The 101st, 70 miles south of the Kuwaiti border, is the closest full American division to the frontier and could be the first to engage in combat with Iraqi forces.

The U.S. military has stressed its night-fighting ability as a big advantage over Iraqi forces, who avoided night battles during the 1980-88 war with Iran.

"We expect to fight at night," said Maj. Lee Flake, 36, of Swansea, S.C.

Looking through the battery-powered goggles, everything in a 200-yard radius appears bathed in bright green light. The goggles look like binoculars, with a special head brace.

"Because everything in the desert is the same color, it's hard to pick up whether it's a hill or it's flat," said Pierce, 20, of Dodridge, W.Va. during maneuvers Saturday.



AP Laserphoto

A soldier from the 101st Airborne Division uses night vision glasses to scout out his position in the Saudi desert during air assault exercises Saturday. The glasses intensify small amounts of light and make it possible for soldiers to defend themselves.

Hitting a small sand ridge at 15 mph can bounce the driver out of the all-terrain vehicles that are the backbone of forces in Saudi Arabia.

"I thought Mike Tyson had knocked me one," said Sgt. Ernest West, 39, of Trenton, Ga., comparing a jolt from a ridge to a punch from the former heavyweight boxing champion.

Several fatal airplane and helicopter crashes in the past week have been blamed on difficulty in seeing upcoming hills and recognizing the difference between the sky and desert.

Even when pilots get close to the ground, the landing spot can be obscured by blowing sand that the night-vision goggles cannot penetrate.

The U.S. military is now avoiding ground-hugging flight maneuvers that simulate night combat conditions and requiring two pilots at the controls.

The problem is especially acute when there's a full moon, or no moon.

The glasses intensify small amounts of light and a full moon often washes out any contrast in the landscape. Without any moon, there's little light available for the goggles to gather.

"When there's no moon, you just drive straight and pray," said one driver from the 502nd Field Infantry Regiment.

Another problem, especially with the older models, is that any bright light hurts the wearer's eyes and can also destroy the goggles.

The tubes in about 100 goggles were blown out when oncoming cars flashed high-beam headlights at military convoys.

Officers said the flashes from exploding shells might temporarily render the goggles ineffective, but not destroy them.

They point out that the technology has improved vastly in recent years and constant training is improving performance.

Cheney unable to evaluate embargo

By Stewart M. Powell
Hearst News Service

LONDON — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Sunday that more time is needed to determine whether the global economic embargo against Iraq will achieve its goal of forcing Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to evacuate Kuwait.

"My own view is we don't have enough information yet, over a long enough period of time, to be able to come up with a good solid estimate" of the embargo's impact, Cheney said.

More time will allow the coalition to come up with a better estimate while, at the same time, test Hussein's ability to logistically support his troops in Kuwait, Cheney said, adding: "It's difficult now for anybody to lay out in precise terms exactly what's going to happen when."

British officials in recent days have laid out a timetable of taking stock "in a matter of weeks" on the effect of worldwide economic sanctions against Iraq to see whether military action should now be considered.

Cheney's made his comments to reporters while traveling here for nine days of consultations on the Persian Gulf crisis and other issues with officials in Britain, France and the Soviet Union.

Cheney, who spent Sunday touring British warships in Portsmouth on the south coast after an overnight flight from Washington, had meetings scheduled Monday with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Defense Minister Tom King.

It was unclear whether Cheney's caution stemmed from the Bush administration's growing awareness of the hardships of mounting combined military action or whether Cheney was attempting to soft-peddle talk of war in the days before his long-scheduled visit to Moscow. Soviet officials have publicly urged the United States to rely upon economic and military pressure against Iraq and to avoid military action against a one-time Kremlin ally that has bought $30 billion of Soviet weapons since 1970.

Cheney said the unprecedented flow of U.S. forces into Saudi Arabia and adjacent waters since Aug. 7 has given President Bush "a broad range of capabilities-...should he make a decision that he wants to use that capability in response to a provocation, for example."

But the Pentagon chief conceded a variety of impediments to coordinated military action against the estimated 430,000 Iraqi forces in southern Iraq and Kuwait:

■ Iraq continues to strengthen its forces and fortifications, improving a highway network that enables Hussein to resupply forces and rapidly move units toward the front lines.

■ Despite promises by Britain, France and Arab allies to funnel some 200,000 ground forces to Saudi Arabia to bolster the U.S. commitment, many of those troops have yet to arrive. Creating the logistics support for those forces could take weeks, slowing the multinational forces' readiness for action.

■ Members of the anti-Iraq alliance do not agree on whether their forces can be used for offensive operations to retake Kuwait. Arab forces in particular have offered only to defend Saudi Arabia; commanders of Syrian and Egyptian troops have said publicly their forces are not authorized to join attacks on Iraqi forces to retake Kuwait.

■ Coordination between U.S. and Arab forces remains in a rudimentary stage, far from the cooperation needed for joint military action. Asked about the arrangements, Cheney said only that he was "comfortable" with the command and control of U.S. forces and "with the relationship" between the United States and Britain, and between the United States and Saudi Arabia.

"There's a developing interest in looking at how the command structure is set up with respect to those other allied (Arab) forces," Cheney said. The command structure is "not integrated with, if you will, the structure we have with respect to U.S. forces. It's an area that needs to be worked on as the size of the other forces deployed grows."

Saddam reportedly indicates he might pull out troops

MOSCOW (AP) — Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein indicated to a visiting Soviet official last week he might remove his troops from Kuwait in return for some Kuwaiti territory along the Persian Gulf, a Soviet news agency reported.

The government-run Novosti Press Agency said the shift in Iraq's position raised the Kremlin's hopes for a diplomatic solution to the standoff. But an editor at the official Iraqi News Agency denied Iraq had made any offer of a partial withdrawal.

Novosti, in a dispatch published Sunday by the labor newspaper Rabochaya Tribuna, said Saddam made the comments in talks with Yevgeny Primakov, a top Kremlin aide whom President Mikhail Gorbachev sent to Baghdad last week to discuss the gulf crisis.

"In talks with Saddam Hussein, not once did (Saddam) mention the 'historical rights' of Iraq to the territory of Kuwait, amounting to a definite softening of the Iraqi president's position," Novosti reported.

"From these remarks, it follows that Iraq might withdraw its army from Kuwait, retaining for itself southern Rumaillah and the islands Warba and Bubiyan, opening up exits to the sea," the news agency said.

Soviet presidential spokesman Vitaly Ignatenko had said last week that Soviet officials were optimistic after the Saddam-Primakov meetings, but gave no details.

But the Iraqi News Agency, in a dispatch Sunday, quoted an unidentified editor as denying any concessions. The editor said the reports were "sheer lies and baseless, and those propagating them were known and their objectives known too."

Historical claims to Kuwaiti territory have been among Saddam's official justifications for Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of the oil-rich kingdom. He also claimed the Kuwait government was taking oil that belonged to Baghdad, and that the rule of Kuwaiti's monarchy was illegitimate.

The islands of Bubiyan and Warba are off the Kuwaiti coast near the border with Iraq. Rumaillah is one of Kuwait's major oil fields along the Kuwaiti-Iraqi border near the coast.

The Soviet Union has backed U.N. sanctions against Iraq and has two ships in the gulf.

SOOTHING SAUNA
The popularity of the sauna has spread world-wide from its native Finland. The basic idea is a room with a controlled atmosphere created by insulated walls and a self-contained heater. It operates on the dry heat principle. This project involves only basic carpentry — no special tools required. And our step-by-step plan has pictures, drawings, and a complete materials list to guide you.

CARRIERS NEEDED

THE MIDLAND REPORTER-TELEGRAM needs carriers in the following apartment complexes:

Chaparral
Midland Village
Windscape
Windtree
Oakridge

This is early morning work! Dependable transportation is A MUST!!!

CALL CHRIS BRADFORD
682-5311

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be re-filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 65% adult and 35% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
•ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
•MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
•COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
•YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
•SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $200 to $600 monthly! Some motor routes make even more. Although no motor routes are expected to be available, depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 AM Monday - Friday and 7 AM on Saturday and Sunday

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR ROUTE NOW!
