Center to honor retiring director

The public is welcome to attend a gathering at the Spring City Senior Center to honor retiring director Jaynet Smith and welcome new director Ron Robey.

It is scheduled for Friday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Spring City Senior Center, in the McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark.

Cotton producers training offered

Cotton producers from Howard and Martin counties will have the opportunity to attend training programs near Stanton and Big Spring Thursday beginning at 9 a.m. on the Teddy Stewart Farm northwest of Stanton.

Cotton fertility and management will be discussed by Charles Stickler, extension agronomist, followed by a session on water management by extension irrigation specialist Joe Hengeler and a cotton insect identification and scout training program by Extension entomologist Charles Allen.

A courtesy lunch meal will be served by Stanton Chemical and Seed, Hughes Fertilizer and Midland Farmers Co-op. After lunch, a special cotton insect management training program will be offered to cotton producers at 2:30 p.m. at Big Spring Farm Supply just north of Big Spring on U.S. 87.

Denise Williams, Extension training specialist-agricultural chemicals from Texas A&M University, will offer training in pesticide use and safety. Producers may earn up to two hours credit at each program that counts toward their continuing educational credits applicable to their restricted chemical use certification.

Such producers are reminded to bring their certificates to record their numbers for such credits.

Higher ed board meets in Austin

The Texas Higher Education Board will have its quarterly meeting beginning Thursday in Austin.

Bob Riley, president of Howard College, said he plans to attend the meeting.

Riley said the college has asked for approval for two additional programs, radiology and physical therapy assistant. The board has decided to decline the request for the radiology program, and will defer the physical therapy assisting program to await further study.

"The radiology program is currently sponsored by Scenic Mountain Medical Center. We have so few students — only five per year, so the state's not going to approve the transfer," Riley said.

The physical therapy assisting program will be located on the San Angelo campus, if approved, he said.

Council votes to ban alcohol at city parks

By DEBBIE LINCEUM Staff Writer

The Big Spring City Council on Tuesday voted to approve an ordinance banning alcoholic beverages from all city parks.

The ban, which will remove alcohol sales at the Comanche Trail Golf Course and end the right to drink alcohol at Moss Creek Lake, would take effect Aug. 1 if the ordinance receives final approval July 23.

Council member Ladd Smith voted against the measure, which passed in a 6-1 vote. An ordinance that would have excluded the golf course and Moss Creek Lake from the ban failed in a 3-4 vote with Smith, Mark Sheedy and John Coffee voting for it.

Council members Corky Harris and Mayor Max Green expressed opposition to the total ban, but both said they supported it as the only fair option.

"This is one of the most harmful ordinances we could have," Harris said. "I want to ask one last time, 'Is there any compromise?'"

Member Pat DeAnda said the situation had become a racial issue.

"We've been whispering, 'No, don't say it's a racial issue. Don't say that," she said. "Well, I'm saying it."

About 50 citizens attended the meeting, about 10 of whom spoke on issues relating to the alcohol question.

Karen McCarthy, managing editor of the Big Spring Herald, said the council should not vote on the issue at Tuesday's meeting. A work session that had been planned Monday to discuss the alcohol issue was cancelled and a memo circulated last week instead, polling the council to develop proposed ordinances.

McCarthy said the memo was a violation of the Texas Open Meetings Act, which requires governmental bodies to meet in person and prohibits them from arriving at a decision involving public business or public policy without public notice. She said all citizens should be allowed to express their opinions about possible ordinances before they are developed.

City Attorney Mike Thomas said the memo was not a violation of the Open Records Act because council members had not "conspired to

Bush lifts sanctions against South Africa

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush says he will "very cheerfully" lift economic sanctions against South Africa. He scheduled a news conference today to formally announce his decision.

The president announced the news conference himself, declining to answer a question on South Africa at a photo-taking session with congressional leaders.

"I'll tell you what I'm going to do is have a press conference. I'll be glad to take questions there," Bush said. He spoke as South Africa was moving to end its role as an international outcast by promising not to acquire nuclear weapons.

South Africa's promise regarding nuclear weapons was being formalized today in a State Department ceremony at which South African Ambassador Harry Schwarz planned to sign the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

South Africa was readmitted to the Olympic movement Tuesday, ending decades of sports isolation because of its apartheid policies.

Bush told reporters in Toronto that he was ready to lift U.S. economic sanctions against South Africa because the white minority government has made the required reforms of its racial segregation system.

Bush said "we're getting very close to making a final decision" on lifting the sanctions.

"And our law is clear," Bush said. "And I plan to not seek some way out of it, but I plan to enforce it. And I'll do it very cheerfully because that is my view."

The South African decision on nuclear weapons was disclosed in late June. On the eve of today's signing ceremony, nuclear specialists expressed enthusiastic praise for the decision.

"It's extremely significant that South Africa is going to join the (non-proliferation treaty) because

Pilots high on their sport

By DEBBIE LINCEUM Staff Writer

A Lear jet pilot, a maintenance worker and a painter are among those gathered this week in Big Spring to pursue a sport they agree is more than a hobby.

The hang glider pilots, from varied backgrounds and experience levels, say they share a love for adventure and excitement.

Pilot and instructor Jeff Hunt of Austin organized the second annual flying event, based in the hangar at the McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark. Hunt was the driving force behind the first event last year, a competition that drew pilots from all over the Southwest.

Last year's event ended in tragedy, however, when three pilots were injured and one killed in a car hit by a drunk driver. They were near Andrews, returning from a day of cross-country flying.

This year's event is all for fun, but also in memory of Paul Basil, the pilot killed while driving the returning van.

Strapped to his hang glider, Geoff Loyns, color photo, comes in for a landing at the Big Spring Airpark Tuesday morning. After an aborted first attempt, Loyns was again airborne a few minutes later in his effort to break the distance record by flying 319 miles. Below, Big Spring native Walter Robertson lifts his hang glider off the ground as he prepares to place it on the back of a truck during the second annual Big Spring Hang Gliding Fly-Out Tuesday afternoon. Robertson, now a resident of Austin, is here for the week with several other hang gliding enthusiasts from around the state.

TODOS SANTOS, Mexico — June and Robert Hoover from Vista, Calif., adjust their Celestron C-90 telescope Tuesday in preparation for the solar eclipse that will pass over the Baja Peninsula on Thursday. The couple traveled more than 1,000 miles to view the total eclipse that will darken a 160-mile-wide strip from Hawaii to Central America.

Eye safety important when viewing eclipse

By GARY SHANKS Staff Writer

Although the upcoming eclipse has Central American Indians preparing to burn incense and praying to free the sun from the jaws of a huge bat, Texans just need to believe that viewing the sun in eclipse can damage one's eyesight.

At no time can Thursday's solar eclipse be viewed with the naked eye without risking blindness or irreversible eye damage, experts say.

A solar eclipse, which occurs when the moon passes between the sun and the earth, is the most spectacular astronomical event visible to the naked eye. For this reason, many organizations nationwide are engaged in education programs to make people aware of the danger of viewing an eclipse.

"Never look directly at the sun, not even for a second," warns American Academy of Ophthalmology spokesperson Wayne Fung. "Staring at the eclipse can burn the retina, the membrane at the back of the eye that senses light. Though you won't feel any pain, you may be permanently damaging your sight."

Jeannette Bryant, executive director of The Texas Society to Prevent Blindness, echoed Fung's warning saying, "The sun can painlessly burn the retinas of eyes. These burns, known as solar retinopathy or retinal scarring, can result in permanent vision loss and even blindness."

The eye works by focusing and concentrating light on the light-sensitive nerve cells in the retina. Because the light reaching the retina is focused, it takes very little time for the sun's ultraviolet rays to destroy nerves and other tissues.

For this same reason, instruments that gather and focus more light on the retina, such as binoculars and telescopes, can instantly cause severe eye damage if used without filters designed specifically for viewing the sun.

"There is no treatment for the vision-impairing scarring and permanent blind spots that result from staring at the sun," said Fung.

The sun over Big Spring will be 74 percent eclipsed on Thursday. It should begin at 11:33 a.m. and should reach the maximum eclipsed area (74 percent) at 12:53 p.m., said Leif Robinson of Sky and Telescope magazine.

Bullock: Deal with budget or nothing

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock says the Senate will deal with the state budget or nothing at all during the special session that starts Monday.

"For the next month, the entire focus of the Senate will be on the budget. The longer we delay, the less chance of success we have," Bullock said Tuesday.

Lawmakers face a projected $4.7 billion deficit to maintain the level of current services for the next two budget years.

State Comptroller John Sharp has proposed a plan of cuts, agency mergers, layoffs and tuition and fee increases that could produce $5.2 billion. But displeasure with many of those proposals has surfaced. A steady stream of agency representatives and higher education officials testified before lawmakers.

Smokers up in arms about smoking ban

EL PASO (AP) — Elderly smokers in El Paso are up in arms over a new local measure that prohibits the right to light up in city-run facilities.

Dozens of senior citizens, armed with petitions, poured into City Hall Tuesday, saying the ban forces them to do without their cigarettes during evening bingo games. Bingo draws hundreds of players and helps pay for other activities at the senior citizens centers.

The ban applies to all city buildings except those used by police, fire and other employees who work under collective bargaining agreements.

Plano OKs naming highway after Bush

PLANO, Texas (AP) — The City Council has voted to name State Highway 190 the George Bush Freeway, but the new name now faces the approval of all the other cities the road will pass through.

Plano Mayor Florence Shapiro hopes to win their approval at the July 12 meeting of the Dallas Regional Mobility Coalition.

When completed, the new highway will connect Interstate 30 and 35 and will pass through Mesquite, Sunnyvale, Garland, Plano, Dallas and Carrollton.

Gambling opponents ready to fight lottery

AUSTIN (AP) — Anti-lottery forces are ready for battle against the state-run gambling game if lawmakers consider it during the special session that opens Monday, a gambling opponent says.

"We knew there would be another attempt," said Phil Strickland, director of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission.

"I do not know of any attrition in our votes. I don't know of any votes that we've lost since the regular session. We may even have gained a few," he said.

House Speaker Gib Lewis this week said that a lottery, combined with sweeping spending cuts recommended by Comptroller John Sharp's audit of all agencies, would help close a $4.7 billion gap projected between the 1992-93 income and estimated government spending.

And while past lottery proposals repeatedly died in the House, Lewis said he would "push for it very hard" in the special session that begins Monday.

A spokesman for Gov. Ann Richards said Tuesday that should the Legislature need to raise more money to pay for the next state budget, she again will back a lottery.

"Once (spending) cuts and (agency) consolidations are done, if we still are looking for revenue, the lottery is an awfully good way to do that," said Chuck McDonald, the governor's deputy press secretary. "And that will be included as one of the revenue measures to look at."

"We'd like very much to see a constitutional amendment passed by the Legislature to put the issue before a vote of the people," he said.

According to the comptroller's latest estimates, a lottery approved by voters in November could begin operations in July 1992. It would bring in $475.1 million during the two-year budget cycle ending Aug. 31, 1993.

When fully operational, a lottery is estimated to earn the state more than $1 billion annually, said Andy Welch, the comptroller's director of tax information.

Lottery opponents argue, however, that a lottery is a bad way to raise money. It encourages people to gamble, and it takes money out of the economy that otherwise would buy goods and services, they say.

Strickland said he doesn't believe that the Legislature's budget problems will be enough of a lever to win passage.

"They're certainly attempting to use the budget crisis as a lottery lever. But it doesn't make a good lever because there are not enough dollars in it to even begin to solve the budget needs," he said.

Texas is the nation's largest state without a lottery.

Despite an unprecedented gubernatorial push, which included Richards' testimony to legislative committees, lottery backers failed during the regular legislative session to find enough support for a constitutional amendment on lottery.

Nets seized

GALVESTON — Crew members of the shrimp boat Jason Lee surrender their nets to U.S. Coast Guardsmen in Galveston, Monday. The boat was cited for having altered Turtle Excluder Devices (TEDs) in its nets and the boat was escorted to the Army Corps of Engineers pier in Galveston. TEDs allow sea turtles to escape through an opening in the net, but shrimpers complain that a large portion of their catch escapes through the devices.

Hazing cases result in convictions

AUSTIN (AP) — Travis County officials said they hope hazing sentences given four former University of Texas fraternity members, along with three fraternities, will help reform what's been called "the most troublesome fraternal system in the state or the nation."

Travis County Attorney Ken Oden said Tuesday that an investigation into more serious charges continues. The probe was sparked by arrests and allegations involving UT fraternities, including hazing, property destruction, assault and harassment, he said.

"What you see today is escalating punishment for the organizations and the individuals, and if the problems persist, the punishments will continue to escalate. At the same time, I continue to have a hope that we can reform these organizations," Oden said.

Matthew Dennis, Christopher Temple, Richard Asel and Todd

Bowden all pleaded no contest in Travis County court-at-law to Class B misdemeanor charges of hazing. The four were members of the now-disbanded Sigma Nu chapter at UT.

All four received probation and were fined $500, plus court costs.

Dennis and Temple also were given 30 days in jail, and Asel was sentenced to 15 days. However, attorneys said the sentences could be served under a community service or work-release program.

Oden said their convictions followed an incident last November in which Sigma Nu pledge Mark Allen Sanders was beaten, lifted by his underwear, had his jeans set afire and was subjected to other physical abuse.

In addition to those convictions, arrest warrants were issued for four more former Sigma Nu members, Oden said.

Convicted of organizational hazing — in separate incidents — were the Phi Gamma Delta, Pi Kappa Alpha and Beta Theta Pi fraternities.

Each fraternity pleaded no contest Tuesday and was fined $10,000, although community service may be substituted for some of the payment, lawyers said. Phi Gamma Delta also was ordered to pay $5,800 in restitution.

Chris Gunter of Austin, lawyer for three of the fraternity members convicted of hazing, said his clients agreed to a no contest plea to avoid the costs of going to trial. All believe they were being used as examples, he said.

"Of course the questions have come up amongst ourselves, why weren't these hazing cases made over the last couple of years when deaths occurred?" Gunter asked.

"What Mr. Oden prosecuted ranges from serious misbehavior to instances where you could classify it as 'boys being boys,'" said David Botsford, Bowden's attorney.

Sanders, reached by telephone at his Fort Worth home, declined to comment on the convictions.

Endorsement likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is likely to approve an independent panel's recommendations to close 35 military installations as a cost-cutting measure in the 1990s.

The report will be sent to Congress, which has 45 days to approve it or reject it without change.

The president's decision to endorse the recommendations came as Defense Secretary Dick Cheney pronounced the report a "pretty good piece of work," Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said. Cheney transmitted that view to Bush.

Cary Brick, a spokesman for Rep. David O.B. Martin, R-N.Y., said officials at the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission told the congressman's office that Bush would approve the report today.

Among the Texas facilities on the list are Carswell Air Force Base in Fort Worth, Bergstrom AFB in Austin and Chase Field Naval Air Station in Beeville.

Learn about 'killer' bees

AUSTIN (AP) — As the Africanized honey bee population spreads in Texas, it's important for people to learn about the aggressive insect.

The so-called "killer" bees may make their way to Corpus Christi this fall and San Antonio next year, said entomologist John Thomas, who is based at Texas A&M University in College Station.

"If we understand this problem and this animal, then we'll be able to live with it much easier than with the myth," he said Tuesday.

"Basically, it's a honey bee. Perhaps a honey bee with a personality problem, but anyway, it's a honey bee," he said.

The Africanized bee's sting is no more venomous than that of the domestic bee, but the insects more vigorously defend their hives.

"Get away from them. Don't stand there and swat. They'll win that war," he said.

Director's confirmation threatened

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former CIA official's guilty plea in the Iran-Contra scandal could pose new dangers to the confirmation of Robert Gates, President Bush's nominee to head the spy agency.

With hearings on Gates' nomination tentatively scheduled to begin Monday, the Senate Intelligence Committee was scouring court documents connected with the guilty plea by Alan Fiers for information that could link Gates more closely to the operation than he has admitted.

"Gates can get confirmed, but it's going to be rough," said one administration strategist familiar with the congressional mood. "Right now, there is some slippage" in support for the nominee, said the source.

Government prosecutors said Fiers has told them that he and at least three other top agency officials besides then-Director William Casey knew by mid-1986 about the diversion of funds to aid Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

Fiers pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court to two misdemeanor counts of unlawfully withholding information from Congress.

Gates, who was then Casey's top deputy, has denied knowing of the operation run by Oliver North until much later. But Fiers' testimony is an indication that institutional knowledge of the affair was much more widespread.

Effect of ash on aircraft discussed

SEATTLE (AP) — More commercial airplanes are flying over active volcanoes, making it vital to learn more about the ash plumes that can snuff out engines, experts say.

"There's a driving need to prevent a major aviation accident which has not yet happened," Donald Engen, former administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, said Tuesday.

Engen was the keynote speaker at the first International Symposium on Volcanic Ash and Aviation Safety. About 200 experts on flight, volcanoes and weather attended the gathering.

Trans-Pacific air traffic is growing and commercial flights to Asia from the United States and Europe fly over the geologically turbulent Pacific rim known as the "Ring of Fire," which includes parts of North and South America, Japan and New Zealand.

Pilots sometimes fly into ash plumes without realizing it because the ash often can't be distinguished from other clouds by radar.

Participants in the conference, which continues through Thursday, will present new ways of tracking ash clouds, including improved radar and satellite surveillance.

The symposium was organized after the 1989 eruption of Mount Redoubt in Alaska.

Japan smooths way for summit

TOKYO (AP) — Eager to rekindle its "global partnership" with the United States, Japan has erased a few more irritants to the relationship on the eve of Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu's summit with President Bush.

Kaifu departed today for the Maine summit.

In the two previous days, the government cracked down on shady dealings by huge Japanese brokerages, which have worldwide influence, and anted up $500 million in U.S.-sought Persian Gulf assistance.

Earlier, agreements were reached on increasing access for U.S. companies to Japan's construction and semiconductor markets.

Relations have improved since Kaifu and Bush held their last summit three months ago in southern California.

At that time, Japan's confused, hesitant response to the Persian Gulf War was fresh in the minds of resentful Americans.

A Foreign Ministry official who spoke on condition of anonymity gave an upbeat evaluation of U.S.-Japanese relations.

Gates says he will not resign as police chief

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police Chief Daryl Gates rejected a commission's recommendation that he resign soon as part of an overhaul aimed at curbing brutality and racism in the department.

The independent Christopher Commission, formed after the videotaped police beating of black motorist Rodney King, released its report Tuesday after a three-month investigation.

The commission found graphic examples of police racism, a confrontational attitude by officers toward the public and a deficient citizen complaint system.

It warned of a "siege mentality" in the department and indicated that Gates should resign. It broadly criticized the department's leadership but did not single out Gates.

"We believe that commencement of a transition in that office is now appropriate," the report said. "We hope that Chief Gates will remain in office while his successor is being chosen."

Gates had said he would resign his $168,000-a-year job if the commission agreed with critics that he created a climate of racism and brutality.

On Tuesday he said, "I'm not going to run away," and he hinted that it would take a voter referendum to persuade him to quit.

"The people will speak and that will say volumes to me," Gates said.

The report also recommended certain, unidentified members of the five-member Police Commission resign "in the interest of harmony and healing." Acting President Melanie Lomax and Sam Williams, outspoken critics of Gates, did so immediately.

Mayor Tom Bradley and community groups renewed calls for Gates to quit. The chief has civil-service protection and can be removed only by the mayor-appointed Police Commission for misconduct. Thus, he has virtual lifetime tenure.

Gates' defenders were "outraged at the thinly veiled attempt to force Chief Gates out the back door," said Peggy Rowe Estrada, president of Citizens in Support of the Chief of Police.

The panel was formed after the March 3 beating in which white police officers repeatedly beat, stomped and shocked King with a stun gun.

"The leadership of the LAPD must send a much clearer and more effective message that excessive force will not be tolerated," the report said. It added: "The problem of excessive force is aggravated by racism and bias within the LAPD."

On Tuesday, before the report was released, The Associated Press quoted a city official who had been briefed by a member of the panel's staff. The source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the report neither blamed nor cleared Gates and did not call for his resignation.

President urges approval of truce

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Slovenia's president today urged the breakaway republic's Parliament to approve a truce accord with the federal government and avert renewed fighting.

"War or peace... that is what you must decide upon today," President Milan Kucan told deputies as they opened a debate on the plan worked out early Monday with mediation by the European Community.

An uneasy peace was holding, even though the plan has not been fully implemented. Slovenia, the northernmost republic that declared independence on June 25 along with Croatia, accused the federal army of flying in hundreds of soldiers to reinforce its units inside the republic.

Scattered ethnic clashes were reported again in neighboring Croatia.

Kucan told Parliament the peace agreement was "one of the steps on the long road to Slovenian independence."

"It is up to us to accept these decisions and with the help of Europe and its institutions move toward a free country," he said. The alternative would be "to start on an uncertain path that up to now has been characterized by war."

Kucan said the accord was less than ideal, "but it does represent a fragile balance of interests for peace."

Last PLO outpost to be dismantled

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — Army troops and tanks rolled to the entrance of this southern port today to disarm about 1,000 guerrillas manning PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat's last outpost near Israel.

It was the final phase of the government's plan to end the Palestine Liberation Organization's ability to attack Israel from southern Lebanon.

Also today, the government announced that it will take 5,091 Lebanese militiamen into the army and police as part of a program to rehabilitate Christian and Muslim irregulars who fought Lebanon's 16-year civil war.

Interior Minister Brig. Gen.

Sami Khatib said in Beirut that eventually 20,000 militiamen who have surrendered their weapons and disbanded their factions will be given government security jobs. Palestinians are not eligible.

A mechanized army brigade assembled today at the northern entrance to Tyre, which is 12 miles north of Israel.

Brig. Saeed Jammoul, commander of the army's Tyre sector, said it would take four days to surround three camps containing 67,000 Palestinians, assemble guerrilla weapons and establish control of hills overlooking the city.

First elected president sworn in

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris Yeltsin swore himself in today as the first elected president of the Russian republic, declaring "Great Russia is rising from its knees" on the path toward democracy and economic reform.

Standing beneath an enormous red and blue Russian flag in the Kremlin's Great Palace of Congresses, Yeltsin received congratulations and a handshake from Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

"For the first time in Russian history, the citizens of Russia have made their own choice."

"They chose not only an individual, not only a president, but above all they chose the path along which our motherland is to travel. It is the path of democracy. The path of reform. The path of the restoration of human dignity."

"Great Russia is rising from its knees!" Yeltsin said. After his 10-minute inaugural speech, he received a standing ovation.

YELTSIN TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

Gorbachev, speaking after the ceremony, promised to support Yeltsin's efforts to bring radical reform to the country's largest and richest republic.

Panel recommends demolishing bug-infested embassy in Moscow

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate panel wants to ignore a State Department proposal to add several safe floors to the bug-infested U.S. Embassy in Moscow and tear it down instead.

The Commerce, Justice and State appropriations subcommittee approved spending $130 million for the project on Tuesday.

The decision marked the latest turn in a battle that began in August 1985, when electronic monitoring equipment installed by Soviet construction workers was found in the walls of the still-unfinished building.

The money was included in a $22.1 billion measure financing the State, Commerce and Justice departments and several other agencies in fiscal 1992, which starts Oct. 1. The subcommittee approved the legislation on a voice vote and sent it to the full Senate Appropriations Committee.

The overall bill provides $148.1 million for a new generation of weather satellites and enough money to increase the inmate population of federal prisons by 13 percent. It also requires the State Department to issue separate passports for Americans traveling to Arab countries boycotting Israel.

A March 28 fire that destroyed parts of the current embassy in Moscow has given the question of replacing it added urgency, but Congress has remained divided over how the issue should be resolved.

Moscow has given the question of replacing it added urgency, but Congress has remained divided over how the issue should be resolved.

Some lawmakers prefer demolishing the entire structure and constructing a new building.

Others have argued it would be less expensive to add four new top floors that would be made secure, an approach the State Department has suggested.

The House voted on June 13 to provide $130 million for the embassy, but it required the State Department to report back to Congress with a plan for dealing with the problem before the money could be spent.

The $148.1 million the Senate subcommittee provided for new weather satellites is the same amount President Bush requested and $41.1 million more than the House approved.

The lone remaining U.S. weather satellite could fail as early as 1993, and the government's efforts to install replacements in space have been plagued by delays and cost overruns. Current plans call for the first of five new satellites to be launched as soon as late 1992.

The bill also contains:

- $2.1 billion for the federal prison system, a $333 million increase over this year. It would be enough money to provide for 71,590 federal prisoners, an increase of 9,140 inmates.

- A provision ending the State Department practice of providing separate passports for Americans traveling to Israel. Instead, separate passports would be required for trips to Arab countries boycotting the Jewish state.

'Sky is falling' may come true

Thanks to astronomers, it is now possible to put to paper the words every editorial writer has longed to write: "The sky is falling."

The sky, in this case, is shorthand for asteroids. Most of those large chunks of space rock orbit in the asteroid belts between Mars and Jupiter. But others follow orbits that bring them across Earth's path, and sometimes into direct collision with us.

Astronomers, who are taking a new interest in such matters, say it has always been so. An asteroid is thought to have wiped out the dinosaurs. Another collision is a statistical inevitability, they say. And when it comes, if it's a big one, which one of them inevitably will be, it will really ruin your day. A mighty explosion with millions of times the energy of an atomic bomb, tidal waves wiping out coastal areas, dust clouds that blanket the Earth, creating endless winter and destroying agriculture: It could ruin the whole concept of day.

Now, a big asteroid a mile or more in diameter hits the Earth only every 300,000 to 1 million years or so, by the astronomers' calculations. So it's not very likely that one will show up next week or next year. But there is, they say, between a 1 in 6,000 and a 1 in 20,000 chance that a devastating asteroid collision will happen sometime in the next 50 years. Which isn't nothing. A falling sky is far more likely than, say, getting cancer from pesticide residues in the fruit salad. Chicken Little, the patron saint of editorial writers, was right.

And thanks to a near-miss by an asteroid in 1989, the authorities are not brushing off this warning with just a cheap umbrella. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration sponsored an international conference on near-Earth asteroids at San Juan Capistrano, Calif.

On the theory that it would be nice to know the end is coming, scientists want funding for equipment and a program to map asteroid orbits. And NASA is already beginning to consider how to deflect or destroy any asteroid that scientists think is headed for Earth.

Laugh all you want. But then ask yourself this: Do you see any dinosaurs laughing?

Someone has to be his brother's keeper

To the editor:

Most of the writers about MTV say they never watch MTV. They say much of TV is as bad or worse than MTV and that it takes away the right of those who want to view it. (Mostly youth). It is rationalized that it is an asset to the community to have MTV.

Most people will agree that it is media sewage and garbage. In Big Spring we put our garbage in dumpsters to be taken to the landfill and buried. Our sewage goes into septic tanks which are buried. We would not tolerate raw sewage running down our streets; however, some say we could just walk or drive around it by switching channels. But it's still there for vulnerable children and young people.

"We have a right!" they say. That's true, but what is right and having a right are two different things. I would speak for what is right and prudent. As a citizen of Big Spring, to speak out for what is right is more than just a right, but also a responsibility.

We have tolerated trash here and there. Once in a while I can detect the odor of a cess-pool as I flip the TV control button. The question for us in Big Spring is: "How much are we willing to tolerate?"

I switch to another channel, as others say. But my young neighbor may accept MTV as all right because it's there. So he practices what it shows.

Some would say, "Well, I am not my brother's keeper." Someone needs to be. And many are.

Exact change now required at window

To the editor:

Mark another one up for Big Spring, Texas! Today I paid my utility bills with cash as I do every month. TU Electric took my money and gave me change back. Energas took my money and gave me change back. And the Cable took my money and gave me change back at all the drive up windows. I went to the water department and they would not take my money at the drive up window, made for the convenience of the customers. They have a sign that says exact change or checks only. Now, who goes to a drive up window with $28.32 for their bill? It's not bad enough that I go every week and buy water to drink and can't even have a green lawn because the rates are so high. I always thought the customer was the priority. After having to go inside to pay my bill, I asked the manager the reason for this and he said that they have ladies who sit and comb their hair at the window and people who do not bring their statements. So for this all customers have to pay the price.

Big thank you to all who participated

To the editor:

As chairman of the Coahoma Thanks For Freedom Day 4th of July Parade, I wanted to write a few lines and thank everyone who made this day possible. First I would like to recognize Mrs. Clara Justice who first thought of having the parade and other activities here in Coahoma and who worked so hard to make everything fall in place.

I would also like to thank all of the people who took of their own time and expense to participate in the parade itself and I regret that space does not allow room to list each and every individual and group.

A special thank you to our local National Guard Unit which provided trucks, manpower, a color guard, and Sergeant Richard Kitchen who played taps.

Also I would like to thank all of the people and merchants in Coahoma who gave money to help buy the flags which will be flown on the holidays from the light poles in Coahoma, and the Coahoma Lions Club which sponsored the parade.

We also owe Connie Edwards and Tex Edwards for their flyover, which was a real highlight of the parade and a great crowd pleaser.

Others who made the day possible were the muzzleloaders who fired the 21 gun salute, all of the groups that took part in the picnic, the Melody Maids who played at the City Park, the Coahoma city crews, all of the people who took part in the softball tournament, which lasted past midnight, and a very big thank you to the band "Gamblers," which donated their time to play the street dance that was held at the Dairy Queen parking lot.

Our intention was to have a good old-fashioned 4th of July celebration in Coahoma and due to the large success of the day we are planning to have an even larger celebration next year and we would like to invite all of the citizens of Howard County to join us next year.

Allow me to close with a extra thank you to the support group and to Errol and Kay Porter.

A tents situation — Scout's honor

A little girl in Miami, 8-year-old Margo Mankes, decided she wanted to be a member of the Cub Scouts, an all little-boy organization.

She didn't want to be a member of the Girl Scouts. Said she wanted to be in the Cub Scouts because they got to play with knives.

But the Cub Scouts wouldn't let her in because she was not a little boy.

So Margo Mankes' parents, Barry and Cecile, did what every good parent should do in a situation like this.

They sued the Boy Scouts of America, which runs the Cub Scouts. The Mankes lawyer sought a temporary order in federal court to allow little Margo to go to Boy Scout Camp, citing, of course, sex discrimination. The judge said no.

I think this is all pretty silly. Just what our crowded courts need, a suit to get an 8-year-old girl into the Cub Scouts. What Margo's parents really need to be concerned about is having an 8-year-old daughter into knives.

More importantly, I went to Boy Scout camp myself back in my scouting days, and I don't think I'd want my 8-year-old daughter, no matter how well she could handle a knife, off in the woods with the likes of my crowd.

All this does, however, bring back to memory what happened back home in Moreland, Ga., when my boyhood friend and idol, Weyman C. Wannamaker, Jr., a great American, tried to get in the Girl Scouts.

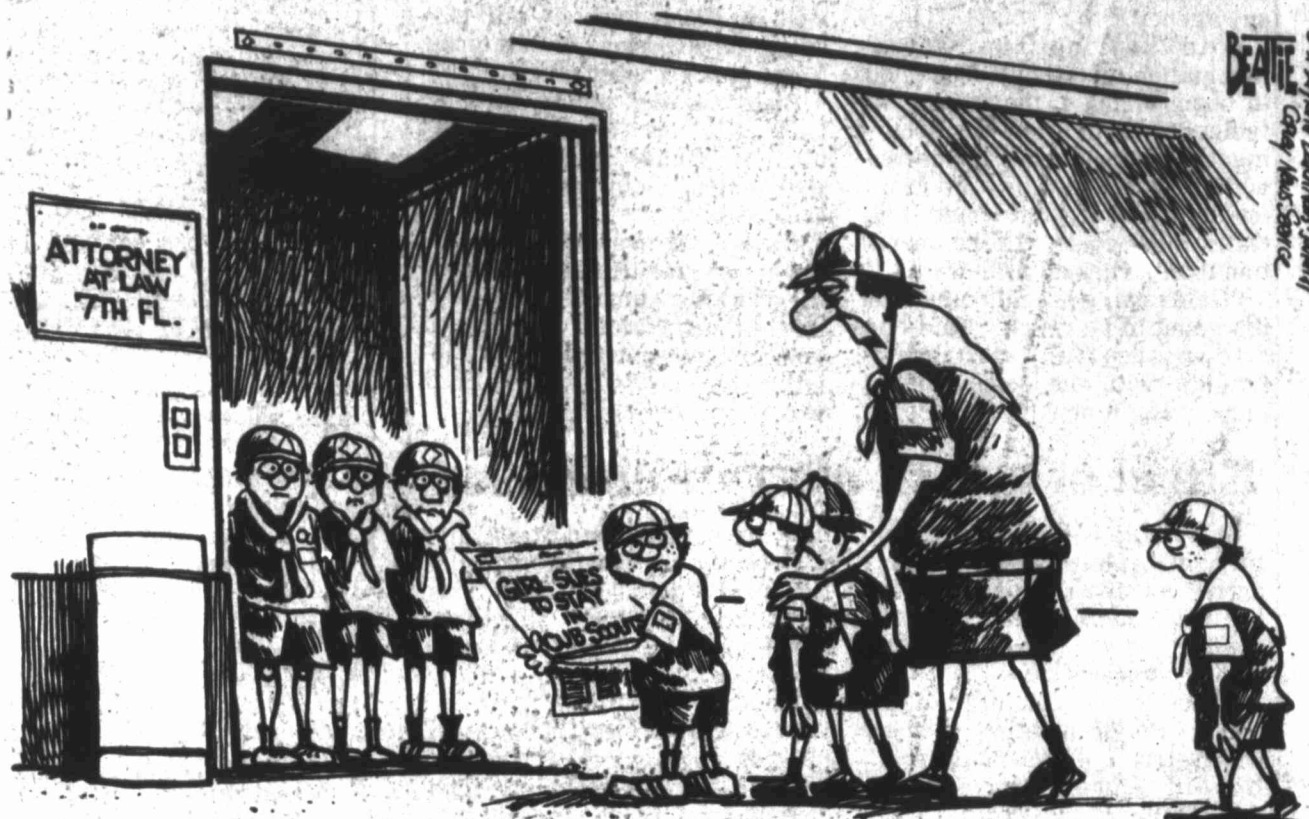

Weyman was in the Boy Scouts but he got kicked out for helping an old lady across the street.

The problem was the old lady didn't want to cross the street.

But Weyman really didn't care all that much about getting the boot from the Boy Scouts.

"Why the hell should I learn

"I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." — Voltaire

"Listen, kids . . . this early exposure to lawsuits, making depositions, etc. will prepare you better for life in America than all the other stuff we do."

how to tie a bunch of stupid knots. I ain't goin' to be in no rodeo no time soon," is, I seem to recall, the way he put it.

So Weyman decided he'd join the Girl Scouts. Mainly because Kathy Sue Loudermilk was a member.

"The Girl Scouts, don't do as much," said little Margo Mankes in Miami.

"You reckon they get nekkid in them tents when the Girl Scouts go camping?" Weyman asked.

The reason Weyman had such a thing on his mind was Kathy Sue Loudermilk was a very mature child for her age. She did things to a Girl Scout uniform that would have made Juliette Low (the founder of the Girl Scouts) have a stroke.

Miss Inez Puckett, who also played piano at the Baptist Church and always brought deviled eggs to church dinners-on-the-ground, was the Girl Scout master in Moreland.

Weyman showed up at the weekly meeting and told Miss Inez he wanted to join up.

It was Miss Inez's second cousin, Miss Hattiebell Simkins, Weyman had dragged across the street against her will.

"Get away from me," Miss Inez said to Weyman.

Weyman promised he'd put up all the tents every time the Girl Scouts went camping and would entertain them around the campfire by showing them how he could make a funny sound by cupping his hand under one of his armpits if she would allow him to join.

"You get away from here, you juvenile delinquent, or I'm calling the law," said Miss Inez.

So Weyman never did get to join the Girl Scouts and find out if they, and particularly Kathy Sue, got nekkid in the tents.

Weyman's mother, incidentally, found out what he had tried to do but nobody had heard of sex discrimination suits back then, so she did what good parents did in those days.

She whipped his butt.

Payne v. Tennessee was last straw

WASHINGTON — Payne v. Tennessee was the straw that broke the old man's back. Thurgood Marshall had taken all he could take. On June 27, when the opinion came down, he left.

The occasion marked a sad ending to a career that could have happened only in America. The grandson of slaves, Marshall grew up in a totally segregated society. He used to tell stories, sometimes poignantly, always instructively, about the humiliations he endured in his younger years.

Marshall was an advocate, a brilliant trial lawyer, a persuasive solicitor general. He was born to serve before the bench and not behind it. His 24 years on the high court, for the most part, must be accounted a failure. He left few opinions for the court that approached the status of landmarks.

During the term that ended with his resignation, Marshall wrote no majority opinions of wide interest. Bereft of the supportive vote and the close counsel of Justice William Brennan, Marshall visibly declined. His lumpy body sagged; his questions in oral argument lost the knife-like edge of wit.

The custom on the high court is for dissenting justices to write that they dissent "respectfully." Marshall had little patience with politesse. When he was on the losing side, he expressed his opinion bluntly: "I dissent."

In his last dissent, in Payne v. Tennessee, Marshall erupted with the brimstone fury of a smoldering volcano. In the process he gave vent to certain truths about the rule of law that rarely come from one so highly placed.

The case involved Pervis Tyrone Payne. He was charged with murdering a 28-year-old woman and her 2-year-old daughter. He was also charged with the attempted murder of her 3-year-old son. A trial jury convicted him on all counts.

During a presentencing hearing, four witnesses testified on Payne's behalf: Payne was mentally handicapped, but he was a "very caring person." He had no history of alcohol or drug abuse; he had never before been arrested; during several months of pretrial custody he had been exceptionally polite.

But this was the point of the case: The presentencing jury heard testimony not only for Payne but also against him. The woman's mother spoke pathetically of the little grandson's loss: "He cries for his mom. He doesn't seem to understand why she doesn't come home. And he cries for his sister Lacie." The jury imposed a sentence of death.

In Booth v. Maryland in 1987, and again in South Carolina v. Gathers in 1989, the court had ruled such emotional testimony inadmissible. Marshall was on the winning side in both cases. Now, in Payne v. Tennessee, he was on the losing side. He exploded: "Power, not reason, is the new currency of this court's decision making. Four terms ago a five-justice majority of this court held that 'victim impact' evidence of the type at issue in this case could not constitutionally be introduced during the penalty phase of a capital trial. By another 5-4 vote, a majority of this court rebuffed an attack upon this ruling just two terms ago."

"Neither the law nor the facts supporting Booth and Gathers underwent any change in the last four years. Only the personnel of this court did."

In those two sentences Marshall effectively disrobed his colleagues and stripped away some of the mystique in which the justices historically have wrapped themselves. Marshall was honest. He was always honest. Here he was saying what Charles Evans Hughes said in an unguarded moment 80 years ago: "We live under a written Constitution, but the Constitution is what the justices say it is."

Precisely so. On the admissibility of victim impact statements, the Constitution meant one thing in 1987. It meant the same thing in 1989. But Justices Lewis Powell and William Brennan retired, and Anthony Kennedy and David Souter came on to succeed them. The Constitution hadn't changed, but the judges had changed.

Is ours a government of laws? Nonsense! In this regard ours is a government of men. This is the way the system was meant to work. Presidents come and go. The justices they nominate stay on for years. John Marshall served 34 years after John Adams went out of office. William O. Douglas served for 30 years after the death of Franklin Roosevelt. Now Ronald Reagan and George Bush cast their conservative shadows into the next century.

Let us thank Thurgood Marshall for his last cannonade. Nothing in his judicial life became him like the leaving it.

Obituary full of details adds to grief

DEAR ABBY: How lucky we are to be living in West Virginia. The newspapers here, as a matter of policy, do not publish the cause of death in their obituaries. I understand that in some states the cause of death is required. A friend who works at the local mortuary told me that a newspaper editor in another state refused to print an obituary unless "cause of death" was disclosed.

Abby, why would this information be important to the general public? The friends and relatives of the deceased know the cause of death without having it in print for all the world to see. — N.J.G. IN WHEELING

DEAR N.J.G.: The cause of death is not the business of the public, but some newspaper editors feel that no obituary is complete unless it is included.

Dear Abby

When the cause of death is a suicide, some obituaries disclose the details: "suicide by hanging," "suffocation," "overdose," "shotgun to the head," "slashed wrists," etc.

Bless those sensitive editors who show compassion and report deaths without disclosing facts that may be painful to the survivors. The good Lord knows they have already suffered enough.

DEAR ABBY: We recently learned an important lesson in child safety that should be common knowledge. During a stay at the beach, my 11-year-old son and his 10-year-old cousin dug a small cave in the sand where there is a small incline. While my son was inside the small cave, it collapsed on him. His cousin immediately started digging and called others nearby for help. Someone called 911, and when we dug my son out of the sand, thank God he was still breathing — but unconscious. He spent the night in the hospital and is fine now.

The ambulance crew said it was the third "cave-in" incident this summer — the other two children did not survive!

Abby, just as children are taught never to play in the ocean without an adult, they should be taught never to tunnel or dig straight-sided holes in dirt or sand. Also, children should be taught not to climb steep sand or sandstone banks. Be aware that sand is very unstable and can cause suffocation within minutes!

We feel extremely lucky and thankful that we can put this lesson to use to warn others. — WISER IN OREGON

DEAR WISER: Because you took the time and made the effort to warn others about this possible death trap, you may prevent a potential tragedy. Bless you for writing.

Want your phone to ring? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Kennel club has show in San Angelo

Big Spring Kennel Club's summer dog show was at San Angelo's Coliseum Sunday. This event is the second time for two all-breed dog shows per year for the Big Spring club, which forms the Cotton Cluster with the Concho Kennel Club of San Angelo.

Dogs from 25 states, other than Texas, competed at the Cotton Cluster of dog shows last Saturday and Sunday. Some of the winning dogs in the nation were in San Angelo for this weekend of dog shows. The 1,178 entries for the Big Spring Kennel Club show included 115 breeds and breed varieties. Most of the same dogs competed at the Concho Kennel Club show on Saturday.

Judges were from Oklahoma, Missouri, Florida, Louisiana, Pennsylvania, New Mexico and California, as well as from Texas.

"Both clubs are extremely pleased with our entries and the success of these cluster shows," said Carole Owen, Big Spring Kennel Club show chairperson. "We invited local residents to attend our winter Cotton Cluster, when Concho Kennel Club joins us at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum on Jan. 18 and 19, 1992."

Best in Show winner at both the Big Spring and Concho Kennel Club's shows was Wire Hair Fox Terrier Ch. Registry's Lonesome Dove owned by Marion and Samuel Lawrence of Orlando, Fla. Best in Breed winners were Rhodesian Ridgebacks Ch. Wyndhurst High Veldt Vader and Ch. Raintree's Tonto of Sno-Vue, both owned by Shirley S. Carriger of Tomball, Texas.

Group winners at the Big Spring Kennel Club show were:

Sporting Group 1: ASCOB cocker spaniel Ch. Dynamite's Master Charge owned by Mara Biggs and Dr. Sharon Nash of Newbury Park, Calif.

Hound Group 1: Basset hound Ch. Feenreich's Laid Back Jack CD owned by Harriet and Allen Richman of Argyle, Texas.

Working Group 1: Bull mastiff Ch. MR U's Music Man owned by Bill Underwood and Janet Morris of Evanston, Ill.

Terrier Group 1: Wire fox terrier Ch. Registry's Lonesome Dove owned by Marion and Samuel Lawrence of Orlando, Fla.

Toy Group 1: Affenpinscher Ch. Su-Dawn's Pee Wee Herman owned by Donald and Sue Ann Spahr of Scottsdale, Ariz.

Non-Sporting Group 1: Bulldog Ch. Leslie's Fast Harry owned by Leslie Thacker of Houston.

Herding Group 1: German shepherd dog Ch. Windswept's Matinee owned by D. E. Jordan of San Antonio.

Best Junior Handler winner was Adam Willkerson of Manor, Texas. He handled Boxer Shepherd's Grande Illusion.

Highest scoring dog in regular classes was Poodle Sunset's O J Cedar Chip UD owned by Christine Wright of Houston, with a score of 198 out of 200.

Highest combined score in Open B and Utility Classes was Border Collie Mickie UD owned by Mary A. Bengel of San Antonio.

Chairperson for the Big Spring Kennel Club show was Carole Owen, Big Spring. Show committee members were Margaret Taylor, Susan Scribner, Anne Reese, and Karen Burnett, all of Midland.

Next Cotton Cluster will be at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum in Big Spring. The Big Spring Kennel Club show will be on Jan. 18 and the Concho Kennel Club show on Jan. 19, 1992.

RSVP plans Hawaii trip in September

The Big Spring Retired Senior Volunteer Program members plan to go to Hawaii Sept. 17 for 15 days and 14 nights. The tour will cover all the major islands, and the price of $1,575 includes round-trip airfare, flights between the islands, hotel accommodations, sightseeing tours with an escort and baggage handling.

A brochure is available by contacting the Big Spring RSVP at 267-2589 or P.O. Box 3190. Space is limited and reservations will be received on a first-come basis.

Baby doing well

Trey Hall, 9-month-old grandson of Edward and Fae Hall, is doing well after he received a bone-marrow transplant in surgery at the Texas Children's Hospital in Houston three weeks ago. Trey suffers from severe combined immuno-deficiency and required the transplant to form his own immune system.

Choosing vegetables in their prime

PHOENIX (AP) — Horticulturist Boyce Foerman believes the best qualities of home-grown vegetables are lost unless they are harvested at the best time. So how do you determine when to pick them?

"It's not easy, of course, but to me being able to determine prime quality of vegetables is just as important as developing the skill to grow them," Foerman says. "And even if you don't grow your own, being able to determine prime quality still is a worthwhile skill for everyone who buys vegetables at a market."

A Purdue University graduate who retired in 1984 after 30 years with the University of Arizona, Foerman offers these general guidelines:

• Leafy vegetables: look for bright color, firmness, tenderness and crispness.

"You want harvesting at the peak of vigor, before there is any maturing or slowing of growth," he says. "That can be difficult to determine, because every leaf is going to have its individual time. But the toughness and bitter taste isn't present until maturity starts. I think the main clue is color. Good, vigorously growing leaf tissue is not exactly a pale green, but it is a lighter green, and it darkens as it becomes mature."

In the garden, Foerman suggests studying the growth pattern "and when leaves stop enlarging, or start staying about the same, that's the time to harvest."

• Leafy head vegetables: "It's pretty much the same. When enlargement of the head ceases, then it's probably at its peak. Ideal cabbage heads should be firm yet yield to gentle pressure."

• Flower-bud vegetables: Broccoli, cauliflower, artichokes and others should be compact and the buds tight. "Again, it's a matter of color. As you get discoloration, edible quality deteriorates. On broccoli, the buds should have a blue appearance, which means younger, more tender tissue. When they start turning green, or a pale green, or a yellowish green, then you're just about to get maturity."

• Asparagus: Look for closed, compact tips. "Again there's some involvement of color involved, but the big thing is not to let them get too big. If they get more than six to eight inches above the ground, they start getting fibrous."

• Root vegetables, such as radish, turnip, carrot, beet and parsnip: "These edible roots won't start to toughen until, again, the growth starts to slow down. With maturity, they become bitter, strong-flavored and fibrous. Once seed stalks begin forming, some might still be usable but I'd just pull them out. When the reproductive phase starts, quality drops almost immediately."

• Fruiting vegetables, such as snap beans and peas: Try to select them before the pods reach maximum size and before most of the peas or beans inside reach full size.

• Sweet corn: at its best when slight thumb or fingernail pressure ruptures kernels to reveal a thick, milky substance. "I would avoid any sign of denting, even a few kernels can make it pretty chewy. Of course, I'm sure the produce market people won't appreciate you pushing on a lot of kernels without buying."

• Tomatoes: should be fully formed, plump, fairly firm and of uniform, ripe color. "I certainly wouldn't pick them green... Unfortunately, these days, many people don't even have an idea of how great a vine-ripened tomato tastes."

• Green peppers: Harvest them immature but fully developed and firm. "It used to be that when they turn red it was a sign of spoiling, but that's no longer true with all varieties. Personally, I like red ones better. I think they're sweeter. The thing you want to watch for is any sign of soft spots or wilting in the tissue. You want rigid flesh. Otherwise, they're going out of condition."

• Eggplant: should be full size, be firm and have a uniform color. "The fruit should have kind of a shine to it. If it becomes dull, that's a sign of maturity. Again, watch also for soft spots. It should feel firm all over when you pick it up in your hand."

• Squash: shins of summer varieties should be tender while rinds of winter types are hard.

• Cucumbers: Try to buy or harvest them green. "If there is any sign of yellowing, they start getting soft and the seeds are tougher."

• Melons: There is an obvious change in appearance and texture as they ripen. The overall sheen is brighter. Softening of the flesh starts at the blossom end. Ripeness is easiest to determine in muskmelon and cantaloupe. They become noticeably yellow and finally separate from their stem. Browning of the vine tendrils and thumping for sound are not reliable indicators of watermelon ripeness. Look for a cream-to-yellow color in non-green parts of the rinds and a change elsewhere from dull green to a brighter green.

Rice - a tasty way to stretch the food budget

Chutney rice — a touch of India

Rice, at approximately 4 cents per serving, is an easy way to stretch the family budget. These rice recipes will dress up your menus and add variety to your meals.

Combine rice and sugar. Toss with a fork to mix well. Add apple and peanuts. Season to taste. Good enough to be a dessert, too.

SOUTHERN RICE

6 servings
3 cups hot cooked rice
2 tablespoons firmly packed brown sugar
1 tart cooking apple, cored and chopped
1/2 cup dry roasted peanuts, coarsely chopped
Salt and ground white pepper

CARAWAY BACON RICE

Makes 6 servings
6 slices bacon
1/2 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup green pepper, coarsely chopped
1 small clove garlic, minced
3 cups cooked rice
1 can (8 oz.) or 1 cup sauerkraut, rinsed and drained
1/2 teaspoon caraway seed
Salt and pepper

Cook bacon in large skillet over low heat until crisp. Drain on absorbent paper. Pour off fat; return 2 tablespoons to skillet. Add onion to skillet and cook until soft. Add green pepper and garlic. Cook until pepper is tender crisp. Stir in rice, sauerkraut, and caraway seed. Heat thoroughly. Add bacon, crumbled, and season to taste.

mushrooms, lemon juice and seasonings. Cook over medium heat until onions are soft but not brown. Remove from heat; stir in sour cream. Spread mixture over rice. Cover with spinach. Top with remaining rice; sprinkle with cheese. Dust with paprika. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes, or until thoroughly heated.

RICH RICE

6 servings
4 cups cooked rice, divided
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 onion, chopped
8 oz. fresh mushrooms, sliced
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/2 teaspoon ground white pepper
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 cup sour cream
1 cup finely chopped spinach (packed)
1 cup grated Swiss cheese
Paprika
Spoon half the rice into buttered shallow 2-quart baking dish. Melt butter in large skillet. Add onion,

CHUTNEY RICE

6 servings
3 cups cooked rice, cooled
1 cup cooked green peas
1 cup sliced celery
18 seedless green grapes, halved
1 tablespoon minced onion
1/2 cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons chutney, chopped
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ground white pepper
1/2 teaspoon powdered mustard
Combine rice, peas, celery, grapes and onion in large mixing bowl. Blend remaining ingredients. Pour over rice mixture. Toss lightly. Chill. Serve on salad greens and garnish with whole grapes, if desired.

Tiny country, wedged between giants, lives in two ages

By NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC
For AP Newsfeatures

Three decades after opening to the outside world, Bhutan, the tiny Himalayan kingdom in the clouds, has one foot in the Middle Ages and the other in the 21st century.

Long shielded from the rest of the world by the Himalayas, landlocked Bhutan is wrapped in mountains and wedged between two giants, China and India. About the size of Switzerland, it is a sparsely settled country of about 700,000 people that is scarcely touched by the modern age.

Blue sheep, wild poppies and the elusive snow leopard thrive in this isolation, and some Bhutanese say several varieties of yeti, the Abominable Snowman, live here too.

Bruce W. Bunting, a vice president of the World Wildlife Fund, walked through a lush oak and rhododendron forest more than 10,000 feet high along a path that a large tiger had trod the night before.

Dogs far outnumber cars on the sleepy streets of Thimphu, the capital city of 30,000 people, Bunting writes in National Geographic. Bhutan had little use for gasoline until 1962 when its first highway was finished.

Since opening to the world, this nation, which Bhutanese know as Druk Yul (Land of the Thunder Dragon), has moved toward modernization while holding to traditional Buddhist cultural values.

To reach one of the kingdom's revered Buddhist sites, Taktshang (Tiger's Den) Monastery, Bunting climbed to 10,000 feet, accompanied by a monk.

Bhutan's King Jigme Singye Wangchuck, 35, used to play basketball in his spare time. Today, his task of building a modern nation has been complicated by the politics of southern Bhutan, where activists are demanding reform and violent clashes have erupted between government security forces and demonstrators.

The struggle is between two cultures, the Drukpas of the north and the ethnic Nepalese of the south. In recent years, thousands of Nepalese have resettled as illegal immigrants in southern Bhutan — Once forbidden to outsiders, a glimpse of the Himalayas in Bhutan reveals the Kingdom's second highest peak, Jhomolhari, which rises to 23,996 feet. In the foreground an old fortress, built to repel invaders, crumbles to the ground.

Bhutan, one reason the royal government recently imposed restrictions on all residents.

The king worries that the nation's cultural traditions might someday be swamped by the Nepalese living in neighboring Nepal, who outnumber Bhutanese almost 25 to one.

"We want to unify the country as a single entity," the king said recently. "It is too small to maintain diversity. We want the people living in the south to stop regarding Nepal as their motherland. We are all Bhutanese."

Bhutan has been slow to take advantage of its natural resources, leaving its extensive forests virtually untouched and most of its rivers running free. To preserve the best of its wild landscape, Bhutan has set aside more than 20 percent of its land in a system of 10 reserves.

But the kingdom lags behind its neighbors in many ways. It is one of the least-developed nations. Its infant-mortality rate, 128 deaths per thousand, is one of the worst. Its life expectancy, 48 years, is Asia's second-lowest.

Location of center of U.S. under discussion

SIoux FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Somewhere on a patch of open land in western South Dakota is a small concrete and steel block marking what the U.S. Geological Survey says is the official center of the United States.

But beside a highway about 10 miles from there is the official Center of the Nation Monument, where tourists can stop to take pictures of a pile of rocks.

So which one is right?

Some residents of the town of Belle Fourche want to clear up the confusion, and help the economy, by closing the often-vandalized roadside tourist stop and building a visitors center in town.

Kathy Wainman, president of the area Chamber of Commerce, says the real center is the one with the USGS marker.

Kevin Kuchenbecker, program coordinator of Belle Fourche Main Street Inc., says the pile of rocks along U.S. 85 is just that. He said the roadside site, with public restrooms, was set up when the state built the highway and rerouted traffic away from the real center of the nation.

Wainman said there's no reason to maintain the state structure.

"I think if we're not going to have a monument in the exact spot, we should bring it into town where it can do some good for the economy... and cut down on all those problems," she said.

Nothing sophisticated about finding nation's exact center

SIoux FALLS, S.D. (AP) — There's nothing sophisticated about finding the exact middle of the United States, according to a U.S. Geological Survey official. In fact, it's just a balancing act.

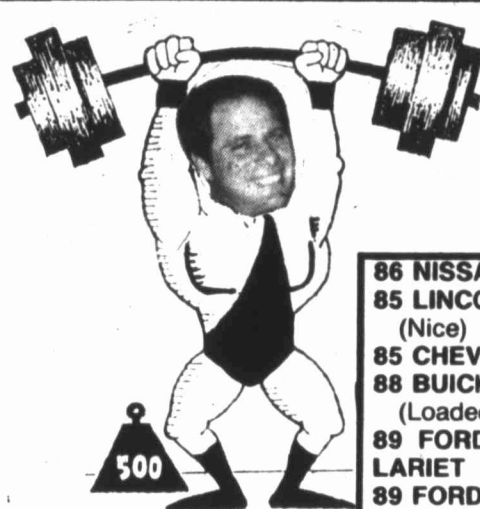

"If you were to cut out the shape of the United States from a map and then balance it, the center of the country represents the center of mass. It's the point that would balance," said Mike Pace, chief of the computation unit of the USGS' Midcontinent Mapping Center in Rolla, Mo.

The nation's geographic center is in Butte County, S.D., about 20 miles northeast of Belle Fourche. Officially, it's 44 degrees, 50 minutes north latitude and 103 degrees, 46 minutes west longitude.

Before Alaska became the 49th state in 1959, the nation's center was in Kansas. With Alaska, the center moved north — to a point also in Butte County.

When Hawaii became a state later that year, the USGS calculated the center at about nine miles away, at its current location. Oceans are disregarded in the USGS method.

African countries reject Army's 'Meals Ready to Eat'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is trying to give away food rations left over from Operation Desert Storm to millions of starving Africans. But it hasn't found many takers for the much-maligned Meals Ready to Eat.

The MREs were never very popular. Three lies in one, complained U.S. troops sent to fight Iraq. Meals Rejected by Ethiopians, was another oft-heard refrain.

But the Ethiopians, it turns out, are among the few who have agreed to take the food. The provisional coalition of rebel groups running the country has accepted 1 million MREs and given them mostly to former soldiers left stranded and hungry by the fall of the government in May, U.S. officials said.

The tiny country of Djibouti has also taken in about 500,000 MREs for Somali and Ethiopian refugees stranded there, although it's unclear whether the food has been distributed, said the officials. All spoke on condition of anonymity.

Attempts to give away another few million MREs stored in Saudi Arabia haven't met with much success — due to a combination of political, religious and bureaucratic hassles.

"We're really disappointed that the relief agencies won't take the food," said Roger Winter, director of the private U.S. Committee for Refugees. "When you're hungry, you'll eat anything."

Sudan, a largely Muslim country where as many as 9.5 million people risk starvation, opposes taking the meals — partly because some contain pork, which is strictly forbidden by Islamic dietary laws.

The United Nations, which is directing relief efforts despite government harassment, held off accepting a shipment of MREs destined for southern Sudan because it worried that distributing the food would create the appearance of American military help for the rebels who control that area, U.S. officials say.

The rebels are mostly Christians and animists who aren't bothered by pork. But U.N. officials say the Sudanese may prefer sorghum — the staple of international relief efforts in the region — to the prepared military meals.

Meanwhile, about 96,000 of the meals destined for southern Sudan are piled up at the airport in Nairobi, Kenya, where they were brought last month by a giant U.S. transport plane, the officials said.

Another two flights of giant C-5 cargo planes scheduled to leave for Kenya Tuesday with MREs, blankets and tents have been suspended until the United Nations decides whether to accept the food, officials said.

Two shiploads of surplus food en route to the Kenyan port of Mombasa were also stopped at sea this week, said the officials.

Winter's refugee organization had strongly encouraged the Bush administration to offer the surplus food to the countries in the Horn of Africa, where an estimated 15 to 17 million people face starvation.

The Defense Department, for its part, figured that sending the millions of meals from stores in Saudi Arabia to nearby Africa was far cheaper than shipping them home.

Council

defeat" the act. He said the poll was an information-gathering tool only.

Area resident Garner Thixton submitted an alternate resolution to the council that would allow citizens to bring their own alcoholic beverages into areas of the park. He said the ban would be devastating to the local economy.

"If you kill beer in the park, it's going to kill us," he said.

Rudy Serna, a comedian who performed at the Comanche Trail Amphitheatre before a Tejano music concert Sunday, said racial equality, not alcohol use, was the issue.

"I say what's good for the goose is good for the gander and it looks like the goose is white and the gander's brown," Serna said. "I'm not here because I want beer stopped at the amphitheatre or the golf course or the boat races. If you're going to have beer, you should have it for everybody."

Robert Sanders, organizer of the planned Aug. 3-4 Lakefest boat race at Moss Creek Lake, said removal of alcohol would jeopardize the future of the event. He said he has already advertised that racegoers can bring ice chests to the event, and keeping beer out will be very difficult.

In other business, the council:

• Approved on first reading an ordinance lowering water rates for residents who live outside the city limits. After final approval, expected July 23, those residents who tap into city water will pay $22 per connection and $1.75 per thousand gallons. The charges, along with those affecting city residents, extend through Sept. 30, at which time a new ordinance must be set.

• Finalized a new set of user fees for the Comanche Trail Amphitheatre. Users with for-profit ventures will pay $250 per 24-hour period and a $500 cleanup deposit.

Non-profit organizations will be charged the current fee of $25 per day.

• Tabled action to revise the city charter. At the request of the mayor, the item was included on the agenda, but after several hours debating the alcohol issue, council members voted that charter revision plans be postponed until a later meeting to allow for more discussion.

• Approved closure of Main Street at First and Second streets for a street dance during the evening of Aug. 3 to coordinate with Lake Fest. Sponsored by Big Spring Main Street Inc., the dance will include alcohol sales. Pat DeAnda and Tim Blackshear voted against the closure.

• Confirmed the nomination of Tommy Tune to the traffic commission. Tune is employed by Howard College.

• Finalized financial arrangements for purchase of a new computer system for the police department. The system will be purchased with the capital revolving fund and the department will make monthly payments of $689.17 for five years to pay back the total cost plus 6 percent interest.

• Extended the contract of Lee, Reynolds and Welch accounting firm to act as auditors for the city.

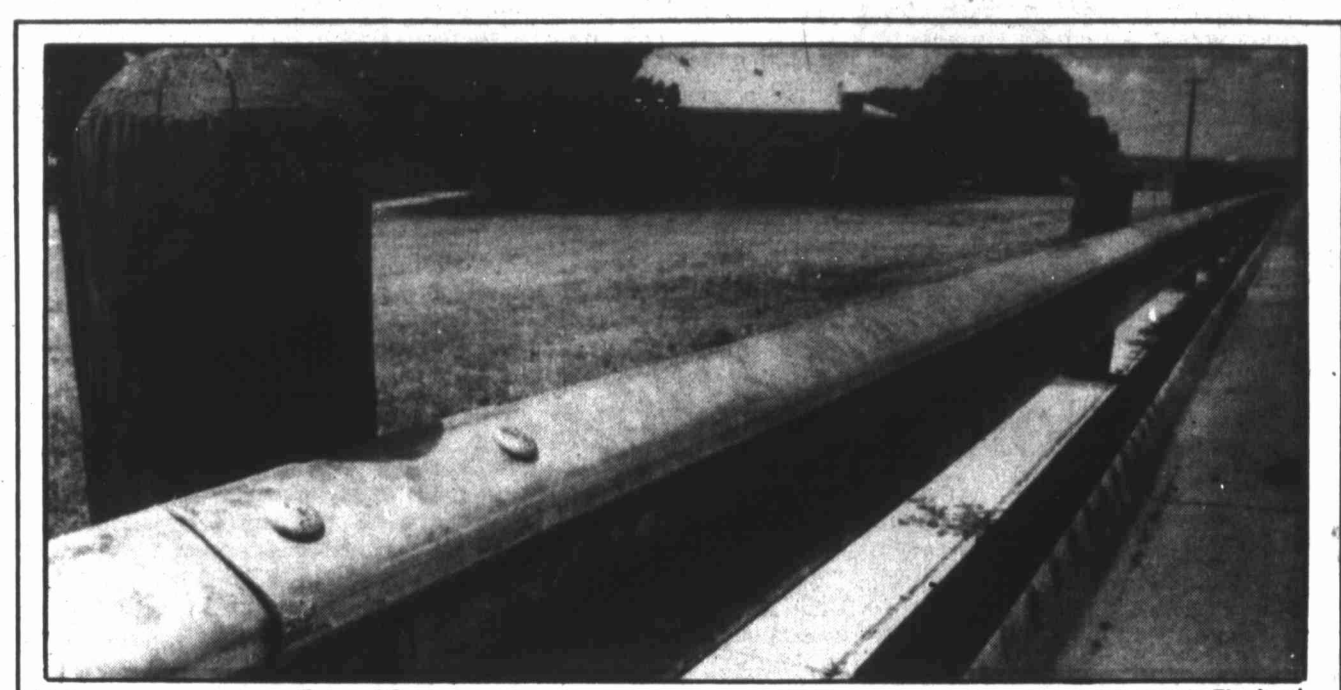

• Tentatively planned budget workshops to begin July 15 and extend Monday through Thursday nights.

• Approved designation of the John H. Myers Subdivision Plat, a half-acre area near Scenic Mountain Medical Center where the owner plans to build a dentist office.

In bid action, the council:

• Approved advertisement for bids to purchase winter jackets for inmates at the Big Spring Correction Center.

• Approved advertisement for bids to install fencing around both city correction centers.

New guardrail

A guardrail has recently been installed in front of the Westside Community Day Care Center near the SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf after a motorized pulling unit for oil field equipment nearly hit the building last month. According to director Melinda Hernandez, several wrecks have occurred at the spot, especially in the wintertime.

Gliders

"I just wanted everybody to come out and do some flying, have fun and be safe," Hunt said. "I wanted to remember last year and kind of deal with it by coming back."

Steve Stackable, also of Austin, one of the injured pilots, was able to get back in the air eight months after the accident. Now, back in Big Spring, he said there's nothing like the feeling of defying gravity.

"I think that's what gets people into a lot of sports," said Stackable, who owns a sail and marine equipment shop. "Once you start feeling the pressures, it gets you high. It gives you the desire to do it again, to be there again."

Carter Johns, owner of a Lear jet charter company, said hang glider pilots have a kind of intense dedication.

"That bond we share is the beauty of soaring in flight," Johns said. "It's not like you buy a set of golf clubs and you go out and play once in a while. Once you've been soaring at cloud base, you want to go back. You just can't experience those things on the ground."

Marco Zaldivar, a maintenance worker at a Houston chemical plant, is relatively new to hang gliding, having less than two years of experience. He said pilots are a diverse group.

"I have a friend I fly with in Houston, he's a psychiatrist," Zaldivar said. "It's not just one kind of person that enjoys it, it's all kinds of people from all backgrounds, different walks of life."

The pilots estimate there are about 20,000 active hang glider pilots in the country.

"It's probably one of the most rewarding things you can do," Hunt said. "It takes patience and intelligence and you're rewarded by your efforts. You develop the skills. It's breaking new ground all the time."

One Big Spring native is part of the group. Walter Robertson, now a painter living in Austin, said he came back for the good flying.

Hunt, who owns his own flight instruction and equipment sales business, said he would welcome visits from locals to the airport hangar. He is also offering flights at $49 each in a tandem glider (designed to hold two people).

The hang gliding event is based in the DPS hangar at the northwest corner of the airport.

Colorado City board suing roofing firm

By MARSHA STURDIVANT

The Colorado Independent School District has agreed to sue New Shield Roofing Co. of Lubbock for failure to maintain its service contract with the district, according to Superintendent Don Nimmo.

"The roof's in terrible shape, and they've not maintained it like they agreed. We're in the process and gave the attorney permission to continue," Nimmo said.

Tom Rees is the attorney hired by the district.

During Monday night's meeting, the board members also agreed to allow middle school students to attend an overnight conference concerning drug education in Austin, Nimmo said. The students are part of the refusal skill activity group, sponsored by Nancy Carroll and Mark Merrell.

Nimmo said the students also received recognition for their original scripts by being invited to two meetings in Abilene to present their program. The drug education curriculum will expand into the middle school this year, he said.

"The drug education committee has worked diligently; we now have appropriate subject areas in appropriate grade levels," Nimmo said.

Colorado ISD trustees voted to combine with Mitchell County for the Aug. 10 election. The county will fund 50 percent of the election and Loraine, Westbrook and Colorado school districts will share the remaining cost on a three-way division, Nimmo said.

"The personal property question will be a nightmare. I hope the voters have a thorough knowledge of the ballot and what's on the ballot. This would not be good logistically, and if it passes it could be December before we ever get a school budget," Nimmo said.

The election will ask voters to approve or reject personal property taxes and homestead exemptions for the disabled and other taxpayers over age 65.

The City National Bank is the bank depository for the district, through bid process and board approval.

Board members hired four new teachers for the 1991-92 school year, and accepted the resignation of bus driver Byron Swank.

Lang Martin was hired as a high school math teacher, Gary Finley as a high school physical science teacher, Beverly Adams as a middle school reading teacher and Cathleen Tutt as a middle school math teacher.

Salinas bops Americans, 19-6

By STEVE BELVIN

MIDLAND — The Odessa Salinas All-Stars unleashed a torrid hitting attack and aggressive base stealing to drum the Big Spring American Junior League All-Stars (age 13) 19-6 Tuesday night in district tournament play.

It was the tournament opener for both teams. The Americans will play the winner of tonight's Big Spring National-Big Spring International League contest on Thursday. Odessa Salinas will play West Odessa Friday.

Salinas busted 15 hits against Big Spring pitchers Mark Carillo and Jeremy Talbott. The Odessa squad also was daredevils on the base paths, swiping 15 bases without getting thrown out.

Carillo was the starter; he lasted three and two-thirds innings, allowing 13 hits and 15 runs.

Conrad Cortez started for Salinas and got the win. He went three innings and allowed two hits. He left with his team leading 11-4.

Richie Lujan came in a did a good job for Salinas. He entered the game with the bad luck of having the bases loaded with none out. Lujan fanned the first two batters, Clint Faulkner and Clint Caudill, then walked Gene Rodriguez, scoring Matt Adams, who had singled. With Colby Wegman at the plate Lujan balked, scoring Nick Hull, who had walked.

Lujan got out of the inning by fanning Wegman, but the Americans had made it a game, cutting the deficit to 11-6.

The only other hit in the inning for Big Spring was a double by Carillo. Those were the only two hits the visitors managed. Unfortunately, it was as close as Big Spring would get to the Odessa squad as the left-handed Lujan handcuffed them the rest of the game. Odessa added four runs in the fourth and two runs each in the fifth and sixth to ice the game.

Villas paced Salinas with three base hits and three RBI. Cortez, Lujan and Luis Navarrete all got two hits apiece.

Salinas led 6-0 after two innings of play. In the first inning Villa's single scored Efrain Ramirez. Jesse Cardea scored on an error by the first baseman.

In the second inning Navarrete and Villa singled, while Cortez blasted a doubled over the center fielder's head.

The Americans answered with a run in the third. Hull walked, and eventually scored on a ground out by Clint Caudill.

In the bottom of the third Odessa increased its lead with four runs via five hits. Zepeda tripled, and Efrain Ramirez, Villa, Lujan and Cortez singled.

In the fourth Salinas got four runs via hits by Gardena, Zepeda, Lujan and Navarrete. Salinas led 15-6.

Salinas added two more runs in the fifth. The only hit was a single by Steve Quintella.

Salinas scored its final two runs in the sixth. The lone hit was a triple by Tony Rayos.

ODESSA — In Babe Ruth (ages 14-15) tournament action Tuesday Big Spring moved into the semifinals by taking a 7-3 win over Andrews. Andrews is the defending Babe Ruth state champions, according to Big Spring coach Ricky Hughes.

Wes Hughes was the winning pitcher for Big Spring. He went the first four innings and allowed one hit. Todd Parrish pitched the last three innings.

Hughes, who was hit in the head by a pitch in his first at-bat, went four-for-four at the plate. Parrish at second base played outstanding defense as did catcher Brandon Hamblin, who threw two runners out at second. Parrish made two diving catches that took away Andrews hits.

Offensively, Jason Henderson and Mike Sizenback drove in two runs each.

Odessa Jim Parker pitcher one-hits Coahoma All-Stars

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

MIDLAND — The Coahoma Little League All-Stars discovered that there's not much one can do against great pitching.

Rory Couch limited the Coahoma stars to one hit, while his Odessa Jim Parker teammates took advantage of six Coahoma errors en route to a 9-1 victory at the District III Little League tournament here Tuesday.

Couch simply overpowered Coahoma, pitching no-hit ball until the final inning, when he surrendered that lone run. For the evening, he struck out 14 while walking three.

Meanwhile, Coahoma pitcher Marshall Wright also threw a fine game, striking out nine and walking none while scattering 10 Odessa hits. Defensive miscues, however, doomed Coahoma; of Jim Parker's nine runs, only four were earned.

"(Couch) is just a good pitcher," Coahoma coach Marty Brooks said. "I can't take anything away from him. Our pitcher played good, too. We just had too many errors; too many little mistakes."

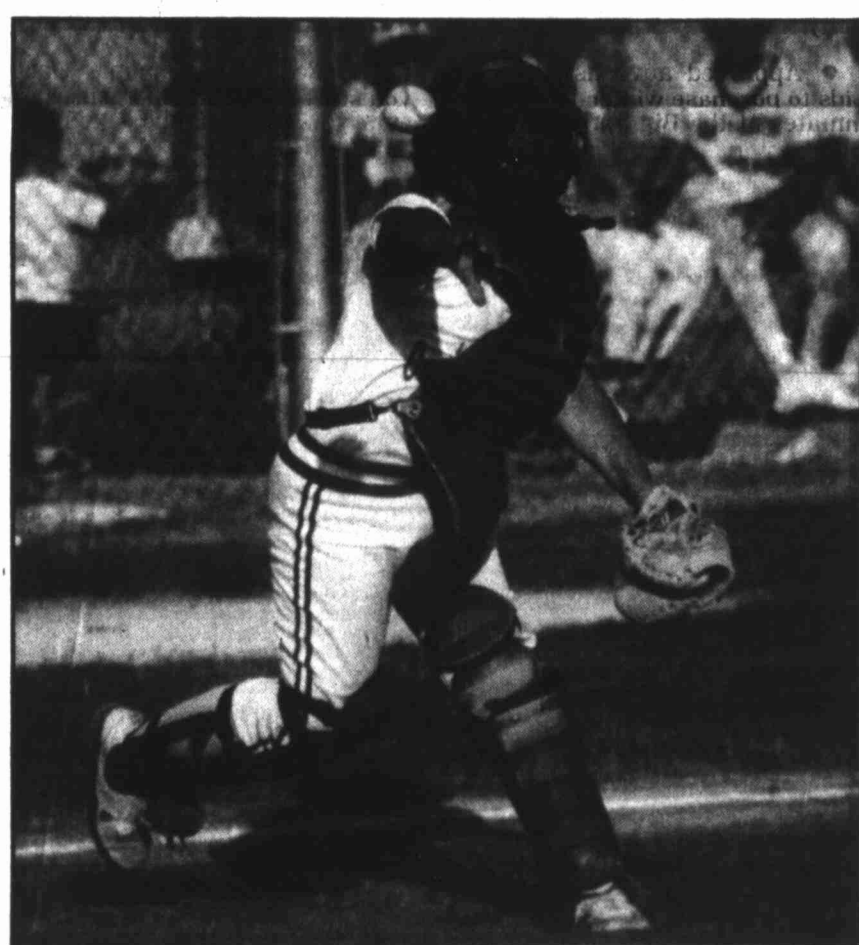

Couch also helped his own cause offensively, going two-for-four at the plate with a double and three runs scored. He started the scoring in the bottom of the first when, with two outs, he doubled, went to third on a passed ball and scored on a wild pitch.

Jim Parker struck for two more runs in the top of the third. Jim Ragsdale led off with a single, stole second and went to third when catcher Michael Brooks' throw to second was wide.

Josh Jarvis also reached on an error, then stole second, but Ragsdale was caught between third and home on a rundown for the first out.

Couch again came to Odessa's rescue, hitting a sharp grounder that shortstop Vincent Garcia couldn't handle, scoring Jarvis. Couch later stole second and came home on another Coahoma error.

Odessa added another run in the fourth on Kody Groves' RBI triple before breaking the game open in the fifth. Jim Parker sent 10 batters to the plate and scored five runs on three hits and two Coahoma errors.

Couch, meanwhile, was on cruise control until the sixth, when Rodney Gressett slapped a sharp grounder that was too hot for the third baseman to handle. Wright followed with a high fly that right fielder Jim Bob McGibbon misplayed, allowing Gressett to score from first.

Winning coach Curtis Couch said that Jim Parker, which won the District 3 tournament three years ago, could be primed for another run at the top.

"I think it could be our year," Couch said. "We've been there the last two years, maybe the third time is the charm. I know we've got some pretty good kids here."

Coahoma drops to the losers bracket and will play Big Spring Nationals in an elimination game today at 6 p.m. Jim Parker advances to face El Paso Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Consistency leads Americans to 4-2 victory

TORONTO (AP) — In the year of the streak, the American League kept its going because of the man chasing baseball's ultimate streak.

Cal Ripken, baseball's Mr. Consistency, played home run derby for the second straight day, and it was enough for the Americans to win 4-2 Tuesday night for their fourth straight All-Star game victory.

It was the latest feat for the Baltimore shortstop, who hasn't missed a game in almost 10 years and is closing in on Lou Gehrig's iron-man record. But it also was just another day at the office.

"That's the good thing about having a good first half and a good All-Star game. Everyone lets the 'take-a-day off line' die right now," Ripken said. "It seems like about the same time last year, I was thinking my career was on the downhill side. It seems like a lot of things have happened since then."

Ripken, just four years away from Gehrig's mark of 2,130 consecutive games, put the Americans ahead with a three-run homer in the third inning. Then, for the third consecutive year, manager Tony La Russa relied on his short relievers.

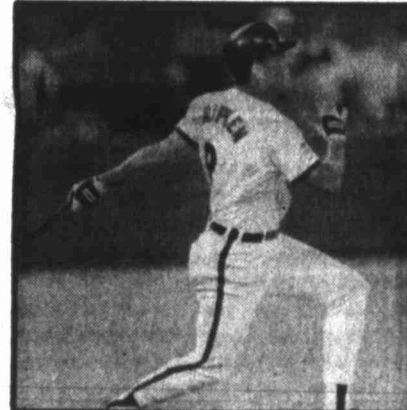

Not since Joe DiMaggio and Ted Williams starred from 1946-49 have the Americans done so well.

Those two Hall of Famers were honored at the SkyDome before the game by President Bush and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, but Ripken was the hit of the night, and the MVP.

"It was a perfect match," La Russa said. "A great player having a great first half. So what does he do? He does great things."

The Nationals, held to two hits in a 2-0 loss last year, at least did better. Andre Dawson hit their first All-Star homer since Dale Murphy in 1984. Ryne Sandberg doubled for their first extra-base hit in four years.

They also got 10 hits, their most since 1979.

Still, they couldn't stop the Americans from closing their gap to 37-24-1. Especially when La Russa, who became the only manager to win three straight All-Star games, went to Jeff Reardon, Rick Aguilera and then Dennis Eckersley in the ninth. Eckersley worked a 1-2-3 inning for his third career All-Star save.

The SkyDome's retractable roof was rolled back an hour before the game, and once it started, it was an open-and-shut case on the event's best player.

Ripken, who has played 1,489 straight games, homered off former teammate Dennis Martinez in the third inning. Even though this game did not officially count, it was one of the more memorable for Ripken.

Partly because of what Ripken did during Monday's workouts. In an amazing display of the consistency that has marked Ripken's career, he stepped up in the home run-hitting contest and connected on six of his first seven swings, and 12 of 22 overall.

"It was unbelievable," said Martinez, who watched Ripken's

Tales from the All-Star game notebook

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE BAINES OF THEIR EXISTENCE: Making the All-Star team doesn't make you a widely recognized athlete. Just ask Harold Baines.

The Oakland Athletics' outfielder shares the problem of fans seeking autographs, but with an added twist — they don't know who he is.

"Ozzie Ozzie," the fans chanted at one pre-All-Star game autograph session, mistaking Baines for St. Louis shortstop Ozzie Smith. Baines also has been misidentified as Willie McGee, a former teammate who is not even here.

"They still don't know me," said Baines, making his second All-Star appearance. "Not even getting to the All-Star game has made me recognizable."

OH, BROTHER ... YOU TOO, DAD: The American League sported a brother combination and three second-generation All-Stars in its starting lineup.

Roberto and Sandy Alomar were the fifth brothers to start the same All-Star game on the same team and the first since 1949. They are the seventh set to ever be selected for the contest. The DiMaggio brothers — Joe, Vince and Dom — were the only All-Star sibling trio with Joe and Dom starting in 1949.

The Alomars were in last year's game but on opposite sides — Roberto for the National League from San Diego, Sandy for the American League from Cleveland.

Also starting for the AL in the SkyDome was Ken Griffey Jr., whose father, Ken Sr., was an All-Star selection in 1976, '77 and '80. The Alomars' father, Sandy Sr., also played in the All-Star game in 1970.

THERE'S TROUBLE UNDER THE DOME: Toronto rolled out the red carpet for the second All-Star game held in Canada (the first was in Montreal in 1982), with the SkyDome scrubbed and polished to glittering brightness.

But even the swinging roof can't keep out all the criticism. The $600 million stadium is viewed by a vocal minority in the city as an unnecessary extravagance in a poor economy.

"I remember walking into Wrigley Field and bursting into tears, it was so lovely," Christie Blatchford, a columnist for the Toronto Sun, wrote Tuesday. "I walk into SkyDome and what I burst into is laughter."

The stadium with the built-in hotel, starched-linen restaurant in center field and its own Hard Rock Cafe was the anchor of Toronto's bid for the 1996 Olympics.

When Atlanta won that contest last September, Toronto's dreams died and much of the old railroad yards around the Dome remains rubble-strewn and vacant.

"It's a great facility, but it can't carry the current debt load," said Bob White, president of the Canadian auto workers union and head of a committee to try to bring the stadium's cost overruns under control.

Judge reviewing case against coach

AUSTIN (AP) — A Texas judge has under review motions in a newspaper reporter's lawsuit against former Oklahoma football coach Barry Switzer.

Motions by plaintiffs and defendants were presented Monday to State District Judge Jerry Dellana, who took them under advisement, attorneys said Tuesday.

Former Dallas Times Herald reporter Jack Taylor Jr. and his wife, Myrna Lee Taylor, sued Switzer, Austin writer Edwin Allen "Bud" Shrike Jr., and book publisher William Morrow & Co. Inc. over Switzer's book, "Bootlegger's Boy."

The lawsuit, filed Sept. 18, 1990, alleged that Switzer, Shrike and the publisher — "acting in a greedy, vengeful and vindictive manner" — invaded Taylor's privacy, and defamed, libeled and slandered the reporter, who was portrayed as the winner of 10 national and 30 state awards.

The book had been published earlier that month. The suit alleged that the defendants "intended to inflict emotional distress" upon the Taylors. Unspecified actual and punitive damages were sought.

Switzer and the other defendants are seeking a summary judgment that would give the Taylors nothing and keep the case from going to trial.

The defendants also said Taylor's wife had no cause of action because Switzer's book did not mention her.

The Taylors responded that Switzer and the other defendants were not entitled to a judgment, because they had "knowingly published falsehoods" about Taylor, "and that those falsehoods accused him of participating in and orchestrating a conspiracy designed to plant drugs on an Oklahoma football player."

B.S. INTERNATIONAL 9, MIDLAND WESTERN 2

The defense never rested for the Big Spring Internationals, as they played error-free ball en route to downing Western.

Brad Cox went the distance for Big Spring, scattering three hits while striking out seven and walking two in picking up the win.

But it was the International's defensive play that most impressed winning coach Randy Gee.

"We played errorless; the defense looked real strong," Gee said. "And finally in the second inning, that's when our bats came alive."

The Big Springers pounded Midland for 15 hits. Edward Aguilar led the way with three hits (a triple and two doubles), while Rudy Hilario, Gilbert Morales, Gabriel Rubio, Joe Montez and John Morelino added two hits each.

International scored three runs in the third and one in the fourth before nailing the door shut with a five-run fifth.

"They were hitting Brad pretty good," Gee said. "But our guys just played exceptional defense — and that put a spark in our offense."

Vince Palmer pitched a five-hitter as El Paso gave the Nationals a rude welcome to the tournament.

Big Spring drops to the losers bracket and will face Coahoma at 6 p.m. today. El Paso advanced in the winners bracket to face Odessa Jim Parker Thursday.

"We just didn't hit the ball well," National coach Drew Mouton said today. "We're usually a good-hitting club, but the bats were quiet last night. . . . If we had been able to hit the ball, we might have given them a good game."

Palmer scattered his hits well, not allowing more than one National hit per inning. His teammates, meanwhile, managed eight hits off Josh Palmer, who took the loss for Big Spring.

El Paso scored three runs in the second, third and fourth innings and added a couple of insurance runs in the fifth.

"They just ate away at us," Mouton said. "We just never came around . . . and when we got down by nine, we were in big trouble."

WLAFL DP gets chance in NFL

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Midway through the 1987 season at Arizona State, cornerback Anthony Parker was cut down by a knee injury which required reconstructive surgery.

Out a year, Parker came back but his luck just seemed to get worse.

He signed as a free agent with the Indianapolis Colts in 1989 but spent most of the season on injured reserve. Last season, his chances at sticking with an NFL team seemed dead after the New York Jets made him a victim of the final cut.

"That was a tough situation," Parker said Tuesday after signing with the Phoenix Cardinals. "It was the first time I'd been cut by anything. I tried to handle it as best I could, and I just said, 'Well, I hope somebody else gives me a shot.' Then I heard about the World League, and that kind of perked me back up."

A running back at Tempe McClintock High School, Parker had only three interceptions in his career with Arizona State. But he found the foothold he needed with the New York-New Jersey Knights of the new World League of American Football.

He intercepted 11 passes in the 10-game spring season, made 43 tackles, blocked a field goal and wound up as one of three WLAFL defensive players of the year. His performance got the attention of the Cardinals, whose entire secondary intercepted 16 passes in 1990, Dallas and others.

As late as the weekend, Parker was confused about what he wanted to do. Kansas City Coach Marty Schottenheimer visited Parker here Thursday to plead the Chiefs' cause.

Nevertheless, Coach Joe Bugel of the Cardinals prevailed with a blend of sweet talk and the assurance that a good performance in training camp would earn Parker a starting job.

"He made me feel wanted, and that was the main factor in my decision," Parker said.

Bugel called Parker "a high-class individual" and said he admired the player for overcoming adversity.

If he makes the team, Parker could become the first Arizona State player to catch on with the Cardinals since they moved here three years ago. Kick returner Vai Sikahema, who played from 1986 through last season, came out of Mesa High School but attended Brigham Young.

The Cardinals have another candidate in Sun Devil free safety Nathan LaDuke, a Phoenix Alhambra product chosen in the 11th round.

Ted Urdike, a Tempe attorney who represents both, said LaDuke was close to signing.

He declined to discuss Parker's contract but said it was slightly better than one offered by the Cowboys and about $35,000 less than the offer of another team, which he declined to identify. Urdike said he bargained for a one-year contract in hopes of winning a much larger one after Parker establishes his value.

Bugel differed with Phoenix General Manager Larry Wilson on the value of hometown players.

"We're trying to build a winning team. It doesn't matter where the player comes from," Wilson said.

Minutes later, Bugel said, "It's kind of nice going into a super-market when somebody says, 'How are you coming with Anthony Parker?' . . . When people who never talked to you before come up and ask about Anthony Parker, yeah, it's a plus."

The Cardinals came to terms with free agent Steve Lofton on Tuesday, leaving the team with eight listed cornerbacks.

power show. "Everybody was talking about his swing, how good it was. I've never seen so many shots in a row."

Neither had Ripken.

"I was concerned by just being in the home run derby," he said. "When you try for home runs in batting practice, it can get you into bad habits, and I didn't want to do that because I'd had a good first half. In hindsight, it might've helped me relax for the game."

Ripken, batting .348 with 18 home runs and 54 RBIs at the break, made a winner of hometown favorite Jimmy Key, while Martinez won the game.

Ripken also helped the Americans match their longest winning streak ever in the event. They have now won six of nine, after losing 19 of 20.

Appropriate, too. This season already has seen Minnesota win 15 in a row and Texas take 14 straight, along with 11 consecutive losses by Seattle.

The Nationals got more hits and runs in the first inning than they did all of last year. Tony Gwynn, the leading hitter in the majors at .358, led off by slapping a single to left field and took third with one out on Will Clark's hit-and-run single to right.

This was the first time since the 1989 game that the Nationals put a runner on third base, and they took advantage when designated hitter Bobby Bonilla bounced a hard, one-hopper off starting pitcher Jack Morris' right foot. The ball dropped to the ground for an RBI single, and Morris also fell.

Morris stayed in the game, got Dawson on a double play to end the first, and stranded a runner on third the next inning by retiring Ozzie Smith on a line drive. He then left the ballpark for Mt. Sinai Hospital for X-rays which were negative.

Tom Glavine worked around a walk and Ripken's single in the first by striking out Cecil Fielder and Danny Tartabull.

Martinez was not so lucky. Rickey Henderson singled with one out in the third and Wade Boggs followed with a hit-and-run single.

Ripken, just 3-for-20 with zero RBIs in eight previous All-Star games, sent a no-doubt drive to center field, and the 416-foot shot made it 3-1.

The Nationals, with a runner in every inning, immediately struck back in the fourth after Roger Clemens relieved Dawson opened with a 434-foot home run, his first RBI in eight All-Star games and 20 at-bats.

The Americans added an insurance run in the seventh when Joe Carter singled off John Smiley and pinch-hitter Paul Molitor reached on the first catcher's interference in All-Star game history, against Craig Biggio.

Isn't it about time we gave Big Spring the business?

Names

Carson puts off return

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Carson is postponing his return to "The Tonight Show," apparently because of the deaths of his son Richard and friend Michael Landon.

Carson was supposed to return to the screen tonight. But NBC issued a statement Tuesday saying he was continuing his vacation until July 17 "because of events in his personal life."

Richard Carson, 39, died June 21 when his vehicle plunged over an embankment. Landon, 54, died last week of pancreatic and liver

Carson's designated successor, Jay Leno, will continue to fill in for him.

Good TV roles for black women lacking

HOUSTON (AP) — Anna Maria Horsford, who played Thelma on the just-canceled NBC sitcom

"Amen," says the series provided good role models. And she decried the lack of good roles for black women.

"You see a grown black man relating to a grown daughter — not only relating to her, but protecting her, loving her," the actress said of the series, in which Sherman Hemsley played her father.

"You always hear, 'Black women are strong,'" she said. "So how come we're not worthy of a television show or a television movie? How come all these young black men putting out movies have no women in them? Why is there no salute to your mother, your aunt, the woman who raised you and 11 others with no man around?"

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

THURSDAY, JULY 11, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A financial turnaround is possible now. Your intuition will be right on target in the fall. Do not let pride prevent you from getting the job done in November. Ask for help if you need it. Ending a romantic triangle puts you on the road to true happiness in December. A favorite child passes a test with flying colors in early 1992. Take an overdue vacation next spring.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your attitude is an important ingredient in your success formula. Learn to delegate routine chores, freeing you to spend more time on creative projects. Socialize this evening.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel and communication are featured. Study all written communications very carefully. Consult an attorney if legal questions arise. Romance is rocky but will smooth out.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A personal relationship intensifies. What you thought was merely a fling becomes something special. Curb a tendency to flit from project to project. A steady manner will impress higher-ups.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Today's emphasis is on joint finances and big spending plans. A pioneering venture promises to pay off handsomely if you leave old prejudices behind. Your views about life and love are slowly changing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An excellent day to reorganize your household or place of business. Focus on mutual financial interests. Buying a big-ticket item could be a shrewd move. Comparison-shopping will help you save money.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You see brighter days just ahead. A romantic dream could come true. Distant locales may play a role in your business success. Someone older and wiser teaches you an important lesson.

SUMMER DELIGHTS

From Cupboard to Freezer: Cool Fun in the Summer Sun

Years ago, kids knew summer had arrived for sure when they heard a musical jingle coming from the street. Those tinkling bells meant the ice cream man was back, dispensing ice cream bars and other frosty treats on a stick from the freezer on the back of his modified cycle.

In most communities, the ice cream man is a thing of the past; we stock up on ice cream at the supermarket. Some people—the ones with more imagination—make their own. They know making ice cream isn't that difficult. In fact, to begin all you need to do is reach in the cupboard and remove a can of Pet Evaporated Milk.

Amazing as it sounds, evaporated milk makes a rich, creamy ice cream without using any cream! When whipped prior to freezing, evaporated milk ice creams are also very light, with an almost fluffy texture. The delicate flavor of evaporated milk ice creams are perfectly suited to the addition of all kinds of flavorings and fruit, including those all-time kid-pleasers, red maraschino cherries.

After a hard afternoon on the baseball diamond or splashing around in the backyard wading pool, a bowl of homemade ice cream topped with maraschino cherries is like manna from heaven to a kid. Add a dollop of smooth caramel sauce, also made with evaporated milk, and all the day's strike-outs are forgotten.

For kids-at-heart who need reviving after a hammock nap, sophisticated Cherry Cordial Ice Cream is the perfect pick-me-up. The secret to its success is cream de cacao flavoring, bits of juicy maraschino cherries and chunks of milk chocolate in an airy, yet frozen, evaporated milk base.

"Chaise lounge travelers" can take a trip to an island retreat with the first spoonful of Tropical Frozen Yogurt. Light and frosty, it brings home a taste of the tropics with a subtle blend of pineapple, coconut and kiwifruit.

Ice cream is a must for a summer barbecue, too. After all the corn on the cob, potato salad, hot dogs and hamburgers are consumed, bring on the piece de resistance, Caramel Brownie Treats. Chocolate brownies are spread with vanilla ice cream, then topped with hot caramel sauce for this all-American dessert. And, it all started with a can of evaporated milk from the cupboard.

Tips for Ice Cream Lovers

- Keep a jar of maraschino cherries on hand to add pizzazz to sundaes, floats and banana splits.
- Always use evaporated milk or yogurt when preparing ice "creams" using kiwifruit; kiwifruit curdles regular milk and cream.
- For best quality and flavor, homemade ice cream should be kept no longer than two weeks.
- Calcium-rich evaporated milk keeps for five to seven days after opening, if refrigerated. Pet home economists recommend transferring the unused milk from the can to a covered plastic container.

Pineapple-Cherry Topping

- 1 cup (10 ounces) maraschino cherries
- 1/4 cup packed brown sugar
- 2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 1 can (8 ounces) unsweetened pineapple chunks
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 1/2 cup broken walnuts

Drain maraschino cherries; reserve 2 tablespoons juice. In a small saucepan, combine sugar and cornstarch. Stir in maraschino cherries, pineapple (including juice), reserved maraschino juice, lemon juice and butter. Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture comes to boil. Reduce heat and simmer 2 minutes. Stir in walnuts. Serve warm or cold.
Makes about 2 cups.

It-Starts-with-Vanilla Ice Cream

- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2 cans (12 fl. ounces each) PET Evaporated Milk
- 1-1/2 cups milk
- 1 tablespoon vanilla extract

In a large bowl, combine sugar and salt. Add evaporated milk, stir until sugar dissolves. Stir in remaining ingredients. Cover and refrigerate 2 hours. Freeze in a 2- or 4-quart ice cream freezer according to manufacturer's directions.
Makes 2 quarts.

VARIATIONS

Chocolate Cocoa Ice Cream: Follow vanilla recipe, except increase sugar to 1 cup and stir 1/2 cup unsweetened cocoa powder into the sugar and salt mixture before adding evaporated milk.

Cinnamon Walnut Ice Cream: Follow vanilla recipe, except stir 2 teaspoons ground cinnamon into sugar and salt mixture before adding evaporated milk. Stir in 1 cup chopped walnuts into chilled mixture before freezing in ice cream freezer.

Peppermint Candy Ice Cream: Follow vanilla recipe, except omit sugar and stir 2 cups broken peppermint candies into chilled mixture before freezing in ice cream freezer.

Cherry Cordial Ice Cream

- 1 can (12 fl. ounces) PET Evaporated Milk
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons cream de cacao
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup drained maraschino cherries, coarsely chopped
- 2 bars (1.55 ounces each) milk chocolate candy, coarsely chopped

Pour evaporated milk into a large bowl and place in freezer until ice crystals form around edges, about 25 minutes. Remove milk from freezer and beat on high speed until stiff peaks form. Add sugar, cream de cacao, vanilla and salt; beat until sugar is dissolved. Beat in cherries and chocolate.

Cover and place in freezer 2 hours. Remove from freezer and beat on medium speed 1 minute. Cover and refreeze 2 hours. Remove from freezer and beat on medium speed 1 minute. Cover and freeze until firm, 2 to 4 hours.
Makes 1 quart.

Tropical Frozen Yogurt

- 1 cup PET Evaporated Milk
- 2-1/2 cups vanilla yogurt
- 1 can (8 ounces) crushed pineapple, drained
- 1 cup flaked coconut
- 1 kiwifruit, peeled and diced
- 1/2 cup sugar

Pour evaporated milk into a large bowl and place in freezer until ice crystals form around edges, about 20 minutes. Meanwhile, in a medium bowl, combine remaining ingredients; mix well. Remove milk from freezer and beat on high speed until stiff peaks form. Stir in yogurt mixture. Pour into a 9x9-inch baking pan. Freeze until firm, about 4 to 5 hours. If frozen yogurt is too hard to scoop, allow to stand at room temperature for 30 minutes.
Makes 2 quarts.

Caramel Brownie Treats

- 1 package (19.8 ounces) brownie mix
- 1 egg
- 1/3 cup PET Evaporated Milk
- 1/3 cup vegetable oil
- 2 quarts It-Starts-with-Vanilla Ice Cream
- Golden Caramel Sauce, warm

Preheat oven to 350°F. In a medium bowl, combine brownie mix, egg, evaporated milk and oil. Stir with spoon until well blended (about 50 strokes). Pour batter into a greased 13x9x2-inch baking pan. Bake 25 minutes; cool completely.

Spread vanilla ice cream over cooled brownies. Cover and freeze until firm, 2 to 3 hours. Cut into 12 pieces. Serve with warm Golden Caramel Sauce.
Makes 12 servings.

Golden Caramel Sauce

- 1-1/2 cups packed brown sugar
- 3/4 cup PET Evaporated Milk
- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine

In a medium saucepan, combine all ingredients. Bring to boil over medium heat; stir constantly. Boil 5 minutes; remove from heat. Serve warm over Caramel Brownie Treats or your favorite ice cream.
Makes about 1-1/4 cups.

Controlling Auto Insurance Rates
Motorcycle Helmet Use Helps

By Esther Peterson

(NU) - Most everyone these days is looking for ways to control their auto insurance premiums in the hope of reducing them. We all know that driving accident free is one way to help control your rates.

The insurance industry also can help control rates by being as efficient as possible, but today let's look at accident costs.

Did you know that expensive accidents by others in your area can influence your rate? Before you shout, "that's not fair," consider these facts:

Insurance rates are based on both tangible and intangible facts.

The tangible factors are the type of vehicle you drive and the number of vehicles insured; the value of vehicle; the sex, age and driving record of the drivers; and the driver's place of residence.

The intangible factors that enter into the cost of an accident include the cost of medical treatment, the degree of traffic enforcement, the design of streets and highways, and the lawmakers who determine auto safety standards.

Motorcycle Helmets

One dangerous and costly example is that half of the states don't require motorcycle drivers to wear helmets.

Motorcycle riders are 19 times more likely than car drivers to die in an accident, and half of these victims don't even hold valid licenses or insurance.

Due to the lack of protection of an enclosed vehicle, motorcycle injuries are usually very severe and very expensive. According to the San Diego Emergency Medical Service, an injured non-helmeted motorcyclist's average hospital costs were $42,291 versus $15,851 for a helmeted rider.

Although it seems no intelligent biker would ride without a helmet, some cry laws violate their individual rights.

Whose rights are being violated though when we all have to pick up the costs?

When an unhelmeted, uninsured rider has an expensive accident, part of the costs are passed on to insured drivers. When a motorcycle accident results in permanent disability, society also pays when it must pick up the costs for unemployment compensation and subsistence.

What can we do? First, Never ride a motorcycle without a helmet. Second, we can contact our state lawmakers and tell them we demand a law requiring all motorcycle riders to wear helmets.

Some states that passed helmet laws in the past have repealed the laws under pressure from motorcycle riders. It's important for everyone's safety and to help control insurance rates to keep these laws in place.

If you have an insurance question, send it to Esther Peterson, 400 N. Washington St., Alexandria, VA 22314.

VOLUNTEERING

Recent College Grads Reap
Rich Experience as VISTA VolunteersBy Patricia A.E. Rodgers
Director of VISTA

(NU) - In Sedalia, Mo., members of Volunteers In Service To America (VISTA), are helping disabled men and women live independently. On the Tule River Indian Reservation in Porterville, Calif., they are working to establish a group home for troubled and homeless young people. And in Tennessee, VISTA volunteers are visiting prisons, factories and housing projects, enrolling people of all ages in literacy programs.

More than 3,300 VISTA volunteers are serving in low-income communities across America, and, increasingly, recent college graduates are joining their ranks. By serving in VISTA, they know the deep satisfaction of making a difference where needs are great and problems may seem overwhelming.

For recent graduates, VISTA service offers special challenges and rare experience — experience which, in terms of career development, is hard to match. As they mobilize communities to build resources and solve problems, VISTA volunteers assume a degree of responsibility that few entry-level positions offer. They manage organizations, oversee substantial budgets, develop new programs, work with local officials and community leaders and conduct volunteer recruitment drives.

VISTA service also benefits some graduates by allowing them to defer student loans or have Perkins Loans partially cancelled.

In this year's State of the Union message, President Bush said, "We have within our reach the promise of a renewed America... we can find meaning by serving some purpose higher than ourselves." VISTA volunteers serve that higher purpose. Their willingness to give, to shoulder great responsibilities, can help make a new America. Their volunteer service exemplifies a spirit that can give former VISTA volunteers an edge in employers' eyes. I urge all students to consider VISTA service after graduation and experience what it means to really make life better for others.

Any citizen 18 years of age or older may serve full-time, for at least one year, with VISTA, which is part of ACTION, the federal domestic volunteer agency. For more information about how to apply, contact an ACTION program in your state, or call 1-800-424-8867.

An environmentally safer construction adhesive

It's becoming second nature now to consider the environment when undertaking even the simplest household task. People examine the products they use on their bodies, their food, to clean and repair their homes, and in their hobbies and crafts. Today's consumer wants not only good value, but a safe, environmentally friendly product.

For earth-conscious hobbyists and do-it-yourselfers, Contech Brands has introduced a revolutionary construction adhesive that is not only safer to use, but provides superior results.

PLPremium is waterproof, can be used in all climatic conditions and will last as long as the surfaces it bonds together. Because there is no shrinkage, it will bridge all gaps in construction materials. The bonding strength is so great that it offers twice the coverage of conventional adhesives and much less adhesive is needed to complete a project. PLPremium cures up to three times faster than any other construction adhesive currently available, offering time and dollar savings.

Because toxic solvents have been removed from this unique adhesive, making it nontoxic, nonflammable and noncombustible, PLPremium is environmentally safer. PLPremium passes all volatile organic compound laws that many states have enacted.

Contech Brands is helping Americans who want to contribute to a cleaner, healthier and more beautiful environment by donating five trees to the U.S. Forest Service for every three tubes of PLPremium purchased.

SELF-ESTEEM

Family Spotlight

Help Kids Feel Good
About ThemselvesBy Father Val Peter
Boys Town

(NU) - Children, like all of us, need self-esteem. But it's not easily manufactured. It takes time and the attention of loving adults to plant the seed of self-esteem in a child, to nurture it and watch it grow.

Here at Boys Town, there is a 13-year-old boy named John. Since he was a toddler, his mom would get drunk every night, get three inches from his face and say, "You are no good. Why don't you kill yourself?"

How can a boy like that have any self-esteem? Self-esteem comes from performance. It comes from success. If your child isn't a success, how can he or she have any self-esteem?

Catch a Child Being Good

The first thing you have to do to increase a child's self-esteem is to catch your child being good. You have to catch him or her cleaning their room, doing homework, getting 92 on a test at school. There is a direct correlation between parents who praise their children and self-esteem.

Why is self-esteem important? Because if children "esteem" themselves, they love themselves and will be less apt to do things that could be harmful. A boy or girl with a healthy sense of self-esteem will be more confident, more likely to be successful and stay away from drugs, bad companions and dangerous situations.

Many of the hundreds of kids who come to us at Boys Town each year have low self-esteem. We work very hard to help them feel good about themselves. If we didn't, they wouldn't have a chance in the world.

We have isolated three important components to feeling good about oneself: feeling successful; feeling loved and important; and feeling confident.

The staff at Boys Town has prepared a videotape "It's Great to Be Me!" For information about it and other videos on parenting that we've produced, write for the free brochure, "Videos for Parents." Our address is Boys Town, Public Service Division, Boys Town, NE 68010.

(Father Peter is executive director of Boys Town, the famous home for troubled boys and girls in Boys Town, Neb., and in Florida, New York, Louisiana, Texas, Nevada, Rhode Island and California.)

THE SALVATION ARMY

Group Targets Needs of Youth
From Infancy Through Adulthood

News USA

(NU) - The horrors of the Victorian orphanage, spelled out so vividly by 19th century author Charles Dickens, also gave Salvation Army founder William Booth pause as he first considered opening permanent homes for children.

Need prevailed, as it still does, and Booth's fledgling organization courageously opened its first strictly regulated nurseries, children's homes and maternity homes in England in the 1880s.

As the Army grew, carrying out its international mission of bringing people to God through a total ministry, so did its programs to benefit children and young adults.

Today, The Salvation Army maintains scores of youth-oriented programs, focusing on child development as well as social services.

According to an Army publication on Community Services in the United States, "It starts before birth and continues to adulthood — The Salvation Army's care for children and youth."

Day Care for Toddlers

How can that be? Before birth, babies receive care through teen pregnancy centers. Toddlers' development is then enhanced through programs at day care centers while their mothers are at work or school.

There is more developmental help through camps — more than 50 of them across the country — and youth clubs, community centers with well-defined programs and services, and scouting organizations. Salvation Army sponsors 200 scout groups chartered by the Boy Scouts of America, for instance, and Guide and Sunbeam programs offer school-age girls guidance in citizenship, personal and spiritual values.

The Salvation Army also maintains residential care programs designed to treat social, emotional, mental, or behavioral problems, and foster normal development and social functioning in children for whom it is impossible to remain with family.

Adults to Trust

At other Salvation Army centers, young people can find emergency or short term help. "A runaway who survives by working the streets finds safe haven, a shower, a meal and an adult he can trust at a Salvation Army Center..." Army officials say. "He may be another one who decides on a life with more future."

On any given day in the United States, The Salvation Army has reported more than 5,000 children and youth are under its care and supervision. In 1989, the last year for which comprehensive figures are available, days of care at Salvation Army child and residential-care facilities totaled more than 1.8 million. And attendance at Army camps and clubs totaled more than 21 million.

Desert Storm, Relief Efforts
Help Erase Service 'Mystique'

News USA

(NU) — No longer is the National Guard Armory down off Main Street the mysterious bailiwick of a few community members.

Operation Desert Storm and related U.S. humanitarian efforts in Southwest Asia have helped expand interest in the Guard — and opened wide the Armory doors.

"At one time, there may have been a mystique about the local Guard Armory and what went on there," says Dorothy Ogilvy-Lee, chief of the Guard's Family Support Program.

But with the Gulf war over, and the return of the citizen-soldiers who served, countless Americans — both those connected with the military and those who are not — are learning about the Army and Air National Guard.

"A lot of people know that the Guard's out there now," says Capt. Cameron Roberts, 32, of the 133rd Public Affairs Detachment, Kentucky Army National Guard.

"Before Desert Storm, people didn't realize how many of their neighbors were involved in the Guard," he says. "But then the Guardmembers left their communities to serve in Operation Desert Shield. Now people know a lot of time and training go into keeping the Guard ready to expand the armed services when they're needed."

Bunkers, Planes and Fires

Roberts' experiences and those of the thousands of other Guardmembers who served in the Saudi desert bolster the growing community awareness about the Guard while bringing the real-life experience of war back to hometown USA. For instance, Roberts can tell friends what it's like to dig a bunker in anticipation of hostile fire in the desert; to hear a plane screech over that bunker at 3 a.m., not knowing whether it's friend or foe; to bed down in a tent where nearby Kuwaiti oil fires so brightened the night "we didn't even need a flashlight to see."

Roberts can talk too of the joy of Kuwaitis after the fighting stopped, the anguish suffered by an Iraqi freedom fighter who'd stepped on a mine and the plight of an Iranian refugee whose Iraqi wife had given birth to their child in the midst of fierce shelling.

When we got off the plane at Fort Campbell, it almost seemed like we'd been gone a year," said Roberts, who was away from his Louisville home for about five months.

Officials are convinced that the kind of public awareness Roberts describes will help the Guard realize a major goal for the '90s: full and active participation in the community.

"Whether responding to natural disasters, fighting the nation's drug war or cleaning up the environment, community service is a vital part of the National Guard's institutional identity. As partners in the community, Guardmembers are looking to make a difference in the hometowns where they live and work," says Lt. Gen. John B. Conaway, chief of the National Guard Bureau.

Tomorrow's human: Hairy, with a big head

Forget all those horrifying stories of mad scientists creating monster-men in test tubes. They might not have to bother — nature may beat them to it.

According to some scientists, we are going to lose quite a few spare parts and enlarge others, so that our descendants far in the future will be a very odd-looking bunch indeed.

According to anthropologist Abel Voigt of Boston, toes are on the way out. He says, "Apart from our big toes, the rest are already useless. We need the big ones to push off whenever we take a step. The others don't count. They were fine when we swung from trees, but evolution has shriveled them up and soon they will tend to merge with the big toe."

But if tomorrow's humans are going to be without toes, they will make up for it with oversized heads. That's the opinion of one scientist, Dr. Peter Balfour of San Francisco, who says that 1,000,000 years from now, "A massive head will be easily the biggest part of the body. The average person will have hardly any chest or stomach, and will have legs no bigger than present-day fingers."

He used a computer to help make this grotesque forecast, based on trends already in existence.

And a group of dentists in South Africa believes that future humans will not have any teeth. The dentists are building a museum of teeth from people of all countries.

They recently reported: "Teeth have been getting smaller through the ages, and there are indications that they are disappearing. Future people will have jawlines that are more streamlined, less muscular and less bony. Because of all the soft foods we eat these days, the jaw no longer has to do the hard chewing job of earlier times," the dentists said.

The human race will also revert to its former hairiness, says Dr. Benjamin Griseels of the Netherlands. He believes that another Ice Age is coming and that as the earth gets colder, people will need to grow more and more body hair. Eventually, the whole body will be covered with hair.

However, many other scientists believe that the Greenhouse Effect is making the earth gradually warmer. If so, will humans end up with less hair?

An even stranger prediction comes from Dr. MacDonald Critchley of England. He believes that "In the long run, humans may evolve so that communication will be carried on by a new and much better method, thought transfer, a kind of telepathy."

"Present-day language permits a speaker to get across only about 60 percent of what he or she is thinking, and listeners understand only about 60 percent of that."

So maybe we'll need big heads so we can read each other's minds!

Who are the "healthiest people in America"?

In study after study, scientists have reached the same conclusion: Seventh-Day Adventists live significantly longer than the rest of the population (an average of seven to nine years longer) and have dramatically lower rates of cancer, heart disease and obesity. The reason for their remarkable good health is simple: a set of naturally slenderizing and health-preserving dietary guidelines that have been a part of Adventist living for more than a century.

In The Seventh-Day Diet (Random House), authors Chris Rucker and Jan Hoffman show how we can make use of those precepts — many of which have anticipated recent scientific findings — in our own lives, inviting us to share in the good health Adventists enjoy with an easy-to-follow program that can help anyone live better, longer, and slimmer without counting calories.

The secret to healthy living, say the authors, is not how much you eat, but what you eat, and when. In a clear, seven-step plan, Rucker and Hoffman explain the principles of the Seventh-Day diet while offering strategies for putting them into practice.

"A large meal early in the day provides energy for the body when it is needed," the authors remind us, "and there is evidence that calories ingested in the early part of the day will not put on as much weight as the very same calories ingested in the latter part of the day. The beauty of this principle is that we may indulge in a filling, delicious meal without feeling guilty. It is not that we will lose weight in spite of eating a big breakfast — we will lose weight, at least in part, because of our big breakfast."

Calories

Studies have shown that almost 60 percent of the American diet is made up of refined and empty calories, providing virtually no nutrition, and ending up as body fat on the consumer. The Seventh-Day diet eschews refined foods and offers a plenitude of healthful, delicious alternatives that are easy to prepare.

"If you want to win the battle against fat, fruits and vegetables will be your closest allies," the authors reveal. Not only are they low in calories, but researchers feel that fiber serves as a vehicle to remove excess bile acids and cholesterol. So a high-fiber diet can aid weight loss while it reduces the risk of heart attack.

Fats and fasting

Coronary heart disease is the most common cause of death in the United States. The most powerful — and economical — way to treat heart disease is through prevention, through a drastic reduction of cholesterol and saturated fat in the diet. Rucker and Hoffman show how to begin slowly, by eating more fruits, vegetables, grains, and legumes, and gradually de-emphasizing the role of meat in the diet.

Seventh-Day Adventists see fasting as a time of rest and recovery for the body, as well as a powerful instrument for weight loss and weight control. But unlike other diet programs, the Seventh-Day way of fasting insists on no extremes. It makes allowances for the fact that what may be safe and beneficial for one person may be too severe for another, and provides enough nourishing food at nonfasting times so that when you do fast, you don't feel weak and desperate.

Exercise

The most difficult problem in following an exercise program tends to be motivation. In The Seventh-Day Diet, Hoffman and Rucker show how choosing an activity that you enjoy, starting out slowly and pushing a little more each time, and exercising with friends and family can help make exercise a regular and enjoyable part of your life.

Finally, there are techniques for achieving the psychological health that helps resist temptation and reduce stress.

Any successful attempt at maintaining health involves the mind and spirit as well as the body. In the final step of the program, the authors explain the power of positive thinking and the importance of meditation and reflection.

Chris Rucker and Jan Hoffman offer clear, practical advice for healthy living in an easy-to-follow format. With dozens of tasty recipes, hints for shopping, menu planning, and eating out, The Seventh-Day Diet is truly the health and diet program for the '90s.

SPINACH LASAGNA Makes 12 servings

- 1 package (8 ounces) whole-grain lasagna noodles
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 2 cups chopped onion
- 2 cups sliced mushrooms
- 1 cup chopped green bell pepper
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 cups chopped tomatoes
- 1 bunch fresh spinach, washed, drained, and chopped
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 1 jar (32 ounces) natural spaghetti sauce
- 2 teaspoons dried sweet basil
- 1 teaspoon dried sage
- 1 teaspoon Baco seasoning
- 1/4 teaspoon dried thyme
- 1/4 teaspoon dried oregano
- 1/4 teaspoon dried marjoram
- Salt to taste
- 3 cups shredded soy mozzarella
- 2 teaspoons Italian seasoning

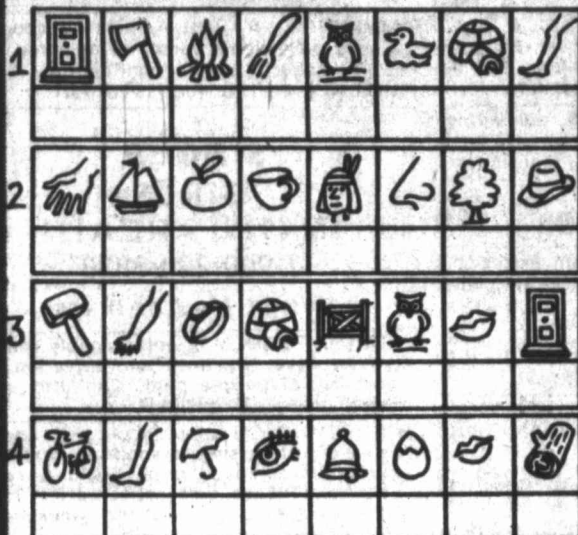

Prepare lasagna noodles according to package directions. Preheat oven to 350°F.

Heat olive oil in large saucepan over medium heat; add onions, mushrooms, bell pepper, and garlic. Sauté for 3 to 4 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add rest of ingredients, except soy mozzarella and Italian seasoning, and simmer over low heat for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Lightly oil 13 x 9-inch baking dish. Layer half the cooked lasagna noodles in bottom of dish, then add layers of half the spinach-tomato sauce and 1 1/4 cups soy mozzarella, and sprinkle with 1 teaspoon Italian seasoning. Make a second layer of cooked noodles, then layer on rest of spinach-tomato sauce with remaining 1 1/4 cups soy mozzarella, and sprinkle with remaining 1 teaspoon Italian seasoning. Bake for 25 minutes or until bubbly. P8910982

Keep out-of-sight in mind planning storage

What goes on behind closed doors may be best left to conjecture, but at least two specialists make it their business to orchestrate the hidden details.

"An invasion of privacy? Not when the 'doors' open on kitchen cabinets, and the specialists are the National Kitchen & Bath Association (NKBA) and the Society of Certified Kitchen Designers (SCKD).

"I look at the beautiful kitchens that are featured in magazines, and try to imagine what they would look like without cabinet doors," said Morton M. Block, CKD, ISID, a Philadelphia kitchen designer and NKBA member. "Aesthetics are important, but function is, too. The interior fittings of a cabinet are just as important as a sleek exterior," Block said.

"Professional kitchen designers are well-versed in all the cabinet features available, and know how to customize a kitchen to a client's individual needs."

For example, roll-out drawers and helving minimize stress for people with ad backs. Fold-out stepstools can be kept out of sight but easily accessible when they are built into the toe-kick area.

Because a cabinet's interior fittings contribute greatly to a kitchen's efficiency, the NKBA recommends consumers research the options available and elect those that meet their needs.

Suggestions include:

- Utilize all the space in corner cabinets by fitting them with lazy susan spin shelves and tambour (similar to the material used for roll-top desks) appliance addies.

- Most standard-sized wall cabinets can be accessorized with spice racks. However, when a spice rack is mounted on a door, it decreases the depth of cabinet shelves.

- Wall cabinets can house most microwave ovens. Make certain that you follow the microwave manufacturer's recommendations for clearance and ventilation requirements.

- Wine racks can be incorporated into wall cabinets, but not near "hot spots" that can turn a prized collection into wine vinegar.

- Cutlery dividers, the most-requested cabinet accessory, are available in molded plastic or wood.

- The pantry has made a comeback, but with a twist: Instead of shelves stacked several cans deep, the modern version features slide-out storage racks that allow every can to be seen.

- Molded plastic holders end the scramble for spices by displaying each bottle in a step-like fashion that makes identification and access easy.

- Fresh fruit and vegetable bins, a near-necessity in Europe, are gaining popularity in the U.S.

- Some ventilators can be installed in wall cabinets and the hoods tilted out when cooking.

- Pull-up appliance accessories keep small electrics neatly tucked away, but always accessible. Because they fold down into a base cabinet, some storage space is sacrificed.

- Serving tray partitions keep oversized cookware neatly stored and dent-free.

- Some custom manufacturers provide a trash cabinet with selectable basket size. There are even models that will open the trash lid simultaneously with the opening of the door.

INFORMATION BROKERS

From Economics to Guppies, Association Experts Offer Info

(NU) - A goldmine of information on everything from cars and cholesterol to museums and mushrooms is available from the bookshelves and desks of U.S. associations.

Information is the driving force behind nearly every association, according to the American Society of Association Executives (ASAE), the umbrella organization for these groups. ASAE says the thousands of associations across the country are eager to share their specialized data with colleagues, consumers, legislators, businesses, students and journalists.

That information, much of which might otherwise be unavailable, takes many forms:

— Pamphlets, courses and other educational programs, offered by nearly 71 percent of associations.

— Mountains of books, magazines and newsletters to keep members up-to-date on developments in their trade.

— Codes of ethics, which may help families choose doctors who practice professional behavior.

— Consumer-oriented safety standards for everything from aircraft flight procedures to tamperproof packaging for medication.

— Statistical information, often not available elsewhere, for business and government officials.

Journalists also call on associations for information.

In the decade ahead, associations will continue to provide workers with much-needed technical expertise, news on trends and management training.

SAFE DRIVING

Stopping Drunk Drivers: Get Involved

(NU) - Individuals can make a difference in combatting drunken driving, experts agree. A key, says one, is getting involved.

A recently revised brochure, "Drinking and Driving — You Make the Difference," outlines just how individuals can help. The 14-page publication is published by Allstate Insurance Co.

For a free copy, see an Allstate agent.

THE SALVATION ARMY

From Doughnut Girls to Desert, Service Record Stands Out

(NU) - In a tradition harking back to the Doughnut Girls of World War I, The Salvation Army activated "Operation We Care," a multifaceted program to help military personnel and families of allied forces who served in the Persian Gulf war.

Army efforts focus on the social, financial and spiritual needs of those associated with Operation Desert Storm.

Operation We Care offers family counseling and spiritual support as well as a variety of emergency material assistance programs, including mortgage or rent payments, payment of utility bills, purchase of food or medical prescriptions, child-care support and travel assistance to hometowns.

HELPING OTHERS

Lutheran Group Offers Income Protection Plan for Disabled

(NU) - Between the ages of 25 and 45, a person has a 50 percent chance of becoming disabled. In fact, in a given year, odds are much greater that a person will become disabled rather than die. Yet many people are not protected against this tragedy.

According to Aid Association for Lutherans (AAL), the need for income protection is greater than ever. And that is why AAL, the nation's leading fraternal benefit society, recently established its disability income product as a separate product line and department, apart from the health products department.

MUTUAL FUNDS

Mutual Funds Listed in 1991 Directory

(NU) - The 1991 Directory of Mutual Funds, which provides concise information on more than 3,000 mutual funds, is available from the Investment Company Institute, the mutual fund industry's national association.

The 207-page 1991 edition is the largest ever and features consumer information on mutual fund investing, fees and shareholder services.

To order the directory, send a $5 check to: Guide, Investment Company Institute, P.O. Box 66140, Washington, DC 20035-6140.

What's your lighting I.Q.? Take this test and find out

When it comes to understanding lighting, do you feel like you still live in the Dark Ages? Do you know the difference between a lamp and a lumen? How about halogen and halide? Does all this confusing terminology give you a dim view of the subject? Don't worry. The American Lighting Association has designed the following quiz to enlighten you.

- 1) What is the most energy-efficient form of lighting you can use in your home?
  - a. Incandescent
  - b. Fluorescent
  - c. Tungsten-halogen
- 2) A light source is...
  - a. An electrical outlet.
  - b. A ceiling fixture.
  - c. An electric bulb, tube or lamp.
- 3) A watt is...
  - a. The amount of electricity consumed by a light source.
  - b. The amount of light generated by a light source.
  - c. The amount of light reaching a subject.

- 4) What is a lumen?
  - a. A table lamp.
  - b. The amount of light generated by a light source.
  - c. A floor lamp.

- 5) A tungsten-halogen lamp is...
  - a. An incandescent bulb that produces a warm, yellow light.
  - b. An incandescent bulb that produces a soft, blue light.
  - c. An incandescent bulb containing a gas that burns bright white when ignited by a metal filament.

- 6) Accent lighting is...
  - a. Light coming from a hanging lamp or pendant.
  - b. A decorative form of lighting that spotlights treasured objects such as paintings, sculptures and house plants.
  - c. Light that enables you to see and walk about safely.

- 7) Low-voltage lighting is...
  - a. Lighting positioned close to the ground to illuminate plants and pathways.
  - b. A light management system that digitally dims groups of lights to preset levels.
  - c. A lighting system that utilizes 12-volt current instead of regular 110-volt household current.

- 8) What is a reflector lamp?

- a. A mirror surrounded with softly-glowing bare bulbs such as those used in theater dressing rooms.
- b. A lamp with a shiny metal interior that either floods or concentrates light on a subject.
- c. A crystal chandelier.

- 9) Grazing is...
  - a. Positioning a light close to an interesting surface to bring out its texture.
  - b. Mounting lights high up in trees or on the house to cast broad illumination over wide areas.
  - c. Lighting an object from two or more sides to reveal its three-dimensional form.

- 10) High-intensity discharge lighting is...
  - a. Lighting that focuses a controlled, intense beam on an object.
  - b. Light that focuses on a specific task such as reading, cooking or sewing.
  - c. Light emitted by an electric lamp containing either mercury vapor, low-pressure or high-pressure sodium, or metal halide.

ANSWER KEY

Give yourself three points for each correct answer.

- 1) b. Fluorescent lighting saves energy by using one-fifth to one-third as much electricity as regular incandescent lighting while providing the same amount of illumination. Fluorescent lighting is also more efficient than tungsten-halogen, which is another form of incandescent lighting.

- 2) c. The light source is the bulb, tube or lamp that is either screwed or mounted into a lighting fixture.

- 3) a. The wattage of an electric bulb, tube or lamp determines how much energy it uses.

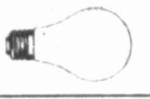

- 4) b. The number of lumens generated by an electric bulb, tube or lamp determines how bright the light source is. This information is usually listed on the outside of the package.

- 5) c. The bright white light emitted by a tungsten-halogen lamp makes it ideal for use in accent lighting.

- 6) b. Accent lighting can be achieved with track, recessed or wall-mounted fixtures that cast directional light on a particular object.

- 7) c. Low-voltage lighting produces superior accent lighting when used with a tungsten-halogen lamp with a built-in reflector.

- 8) b. Reflector lamps direct light

| INCANDESCENT                                                                       | TYPE                    | DESCRIPTION AND USE                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
|   | A-Bulb                  | Familiar pear-shaped bulb for everyday household use; available in regular, three-way, and long-life versions.                                                                                                                        |
|   | Globe (G)               | Ball-shaped bulb; used in pendant fixtures and theatrical lighting strips.                                                                                                                                                            |
|   | Decorative (D)          | Flame, tear-drop and other shapes; used in chandeliers and sconces.                                                                                                                                                                   |
|   | Reflector (R)           | Funnel-shaped bulb with built-in reflector; directs light forward through frosted face; available in flood (FL) and spot (SP) versions; used in recessed downlights.                                                                  |
|   | PAR-Parabolic Reflector | Similar to "R" bulb, but with clear face that provides better beam control; weatherproof casing; used in outdoor spot and flood fixtures, recessed downlights and track fixtures; available in both standard and low-voltage current. |
| FLUORESCENT                                                                        |                         |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|   | Tube                    | Straight tube available in variety of lengths; excellent for general lighting over wide areas; more energy-efficient than incandescents.                                                                                              |
|   | PL-Compact Tube         | Twin tube allows fluorescent light to be used in smaller, trimmer fixtures such as recessed downlights; special adapter allows use in standard lamp sockets.                                                                          |
|   | Circle                  | Circular tube used for general lighting in circular fixtures; special adapter allows use in standard lamp sockets.                                                                                                                    |
| TUNGSTEN-HALOGEN                                                                   |                         |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|   | Low-voltage MR-16       | Tiny bulb with built-in reflector that delivers a controlled beam of bright white light; available in numerous beam spreads; used in track fixtures and recessed downlights for accent lighting; requires transformer.                |
|  | Low-voltage PAR-36      | Parabolic-shaped bulb with built-in reflector; delivers a larger beam of white light than MR-16; comes in three different beam spreads; used in track fixtures and recessed downlights for accent lighting; requires transformer.     |

BUSINESS REVIEW

Twenty years of customer satisfaction, C & M Garage

It's a family affair at C & M Garage. John, Marian and Charles Buzbee work together to see that your automobile repairs are handled right.

Experience is by far the best teacher. After 20 years in the automotive repair business, the Buzbee family of C & M Garage have seen changes in the vehicles that come through their shop.

In order to survive that long in any business you must be able to truly satisfy your customers. Charles, Marian and John Buzbee have operated C & M Garage on a simple philosophy. "Fix the problem, don't just replace the parts." Many garages make a great deal of money replacing parts that could have been fixed," explains Marian. "Maintenance instead of replacement can save the customers serious money, especially when it comes to computerized parts."

The reason C & M has remained successful through 20 years in the business is simply because they earn their customers' trust. "Repeat business is our mainstay," says Marian. "On occasion there is a problem that can't be determined even after extensive testing, if that happens the customers isn't charged if we can't locate the source of the problem. That may not be the best thing for our business in dollars and cents but that customers will return because you have been honest and fair with them."

If you are buying a used car, C & M Garage will do a thorough visual inspection on the engine, tires, check for oil leaks and see if the vehicle has been wrecked. This service is no charge to the customer.

C & M has all the equipment for electronic and computer systems. They do tune-ups, brake work and engine overhauls. If it's between bumpers, they can handle it.

If you are looking for a garage you can really trust to fix the problem without gouging your wallet, C & M should be your choice. Twenty years of satisfied customers can't be wrong!

C & M Garage is located at 3301 W. Hwy. 80, 263-0021.

Charles, Marian and John will be glad to help you.
