West Texas dairies

DALLAS — Two West Texas dairies are being accused in federal court of rigging milk bids to public school districts from 1975 to 1988. Bell Dairy Products Inc. of Lubbock and Gandy's Dairies of San Angelo, both subsidiaries of Dean Foods Co. of San Angelo, were charged Friday in U.S. District Court in Dallas. The criminal complaints were filed by the antitrust division of the U.S. Justice Department, which has been investigating bid-rigging allegations against major dairy and food companies. In an investigation last year by the state attorney general's office, seven dairies — including Dean Foods — agreed to pay $14.9 million in fines and damages.

Trained ear

BEACON, N.Y. — A drunken man passed out between the rails of a commuter train line and slept soundly — and safely — while a train rumbled over him, authorities said. Police and paramedics responding to a report of a man hit by a train Friday night found John Lester, 31, unhurt and unconscious on the Metro-North Commuter Rail line at the Beacon station 40 miles north of New York City.

Doll turns 75

NORWALK, Conn. — Floppy, red-headed Raggedy Ann turns 75 today, but her popularity is no worse for wear. The city where she was first stitched together is throwing a bash for the huggable doll with the black button eyes and the heart emblazoned with "I Love You." So how come Raggedy Ann has persevered, without benefit of Barbie's wardrobe or Cabbage Patch adoption papers? "We all want to hold onto a piece of our childhood and that's probably where a lot of its popularity comes from," said Kim Gruelle, grandson of Raggedy Ann's creator.

Bush weighs action

U.S. considers military role in Bosnian conflict

EC supports use of force to get aid to Sarajevo

LISBON, Portugal (NYT) — Leaders of the 12-nation European Community agreed Saturday to support the use of force by the United Nations if necessary to get humanitarian aid through to Sarajevo, which is under daily bombardment from Serbian forces.

Shortly after the leaders issued their statement, French President Francois Mitterrand left the meeting here for an unexpected visit to the former Yugoslavia. He arrived Saturday in Croatia in an attempt to reach war-ravaged Sarajevo, where Serb gunners opened fire only hours after U.N. warnings of possible military intervention, the Associated Press reported.

Mitterrand, speaking to reporters in Split, about 100 miles southwest of Sarajevo, said he hoped to meet with Bosnia's president, Alija Izetbegovic, to "see if it is possible to stop this bloody war," according to Associated Press reports.

In Sarajevo, officials viewed Mitterrand's visit as an extraordinary gesture toward the Bosnians' plight.

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Moving to a new stage in its evolving policy on Yugoslavia, the Bush administration appears to be planning a limited military role in the crisis.

At the Pentagon on Saturday, a spokesman said that the United States was waiting for word from the United Nations to begin airlifting humanitarian supplies to the former Yugoslav republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina once the airport in the capital, Sarajevo, is secured.

Whether an American airlift will be linked to broader military action to secure the airport is expected to be clearer Monday, when a 48-hour ultimatum to Serbian forces from Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali expires and members of the Security Council are likely to be forced to consider tougher measures.

Fighter air cover for operations and attacks on Serbian militia positions near Sarajevo have been proposed informally and unofficially,

Market sales ripen with season

Fresh produce lures customers to farmers' mart

■ Root of sales lies in attractiveness of home-grown, hand-picked fruits, vegetables.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

There's something about farm-fresh produce at an outdoor market.

"They (consumers) love the fresh vegetables, and they love the atmosphere," said June Russell, market manager for the Permian Basin Farmers' Market.

"People come out and visit and talk with each other," she said.

And they come for the fresh air and fresh produce.

"We plant things for the flavor. Grocery stores are for production," Ms. Russell said.

"This is hand-planted, most of it, and hand-harvested," she said standing near an array of vegetables.

"We pick ripe whereas your grocers pick your tomatoes green," interjected Bill Tarlton, one of the vendors.

Most of the produce is home grown by the seller.

"They (vendors) are all Permian Basin people, and they have to raise at least 50 percent of their produce," Ms. Russell said.

What's for sale varies throughout the summer and fall, but on a recent day the growers offered tomatoes, green beans, squash, okra, cucumbers, watermelons, peaches, apricots, carrots, new potatoes, beets, onions, garlic and various peppers.

And some of the edibles are more popular than others.

"Leeks, I just bring a few," said Tarlton when asked about the mild-flavored vegetable that resembles a giant green onion. Leeks are usually

Several million Americans who retired with the promise of comprehensive medical coverage are now having those benefits terminated or sharply reduced by their former employers.

Indeed, as many as 95 percent of employers either are cutting back on retirees' health benefits or will do so eventually, says David M. The ruling was considered surprising because it was the product of a generally conservative court that many legal observers had thought was committed to lowering — not raising — the Constitution's barrier between church and state.

We want to know what you think.

A citywide recycling program begins Monday, thanks to a joint effort of city government, Keep Midland Beautiful, Midland Independent School District and Butts Recycling.

"This is the culmination of our pilot program," said Jack Burns, assistant director of utilities for the city. His department has been collecting recyclables from businesses for several months.

Starting Monday, local residents can take their newspapers, white paper and computer paper to the designated container at any MISD school. Coupons and other slick paper should be removed from newspapers.

Clinton offers tough image as leader in foreign affairs

By Gwen Ifill

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — In a wide-ranging discussion of the policies he would pursue if elected president, Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas supported strong action to help the besieged citizens of Sarajevo, criticized White House inaction on aid to the former Soviet republics and said Japan should be treated as "our most important bilateral relationship now."

Throughout a 90-minute interview at the Governor's Mansion here, Clinton sought to project himself as a more forceful leader than President Bush in foreign affairs, which is normally regarded as Bush's strong suit.

EC: Members support use of force for humanitarian aid

(From 1A)

Nations Security Council gave Serbian forces until Monday to stop the siege of Sarajevo, the European leaders said they would support whatever steps the Council deemed necessary to open the Sarajevo airport. But they said that not all of them would be able to take part and that they preferred peaceful means.

Stung by criticism that Europe had been ineffective in dealing with the civil war in what used to be Yugoslavia, European leaders vowed to make transport, food and medicine available and strongly condemned the Serbian leadership and its forces "an appalling loss of life and a desperate humanitarian situation."

"Matters are developing hour by hour," the British prime minister, John Major, said after the European meeting ended. "We will take things step by step."

Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, in a statement backed by the Security Council, told the Serbs on Friday they had until Monday morning to stop bombarding Sarajevo and put their heavy weapons under control of the international peacekeeping force.

U.N. officials in the past have insisted that a durable cease-fire had to be in place before any humanitarian action could proceed, but Friday's ultimatum suggested that the Security Council was now prepared to move more assertively.

The Italian foreign minister, Gian ni di Michaelis, who is not expected to remain in the new Italian government because of the spring elections there, pushed his colleagues for strong action.

Mitterrand said after the meeting, "Italy, backed by France, believes in the use of force, at least sufficient to guarantee the security of deliveries of humanitarian aid."

Britain has been more cautious. "We are aware of the very grave difficulties there are in proceeding without a cease-fire," Major said Saturday. But he added that his country would participate in an international airlift if one went ahead. France and Britain are permanent members of the Security Council, which is to meet Monday to decide the next steps.

The European leaders, who also said they would demand the suspension of the rump Yugoslav state dominated by Serbia from all international organizations, stressed that they thought outsiders should use force in the war there only as a last resort.

Saying they were willing to provide money to help the millions of refugees, they also called for sending military observers to the largely Albanian province of Kosovo in Yugoslavia, before the fighting spreads there.

Both the NATO alliance and the European Community's military arm, the nine-nation Western European Union, have said they would consider using military force if asked to by the U.N. or other international organizations. But some European countries still have strong reservations about such a step.

Despite anxiety fed by rumors of American troop alerts that kept sweeping the two-day conference here, the European leaders' discussions dragged on long past the planned closing time of early Saturday afternoon, revealing differences.

The British are afraid of getting stuck in an endless fighting like the conflicts in Cyprus or Northern Ireland. Germany is inhibited by the history of Nazi aggression in the Balkans in World War II.

Greece, which has close ties to Serbia, agreed to join the others in condemning it only after they granted its demand not to recognize the independence of the former Yugoslav republic of Macedonia unless it picked another name. Greece regards the Macedonia as historically its name.

Mitterrand rejected criticism that Europe had been impotent in the Balkan crisis. Europe could not do more, he said, until the treaty on European union was ratified by all members. Danish voters rejected it in a referendum at the beginning of June.

CLINTON: Democratic presidential hopeful tries to engage public's interest picture of how he would govern, promised a 100-day legislative blitz intended to solve the problems he has accused Bush of ignoring.

Clinton said he would propose an economic package that would increase financing for education and job training and emphasize tax breaks for business investment, research and development.

He also said he would introduce health-care legislation to impose cost controls on hospitals and other providers and require universal insurance coverage.

Seated in a straight-backed chair, pausing to frame his answers and speaking in an introspective manner that captured both the accumulated frustration of a long campaign and the optimism that has at times rescued his presidential bid, Clinton acknowledged the challenge of the general election tasks ahead.

"In order for a Democrat to win, you have to broaden the base of the Democratic party," he said. "You have to be able to do that. You have to prove that you can go beyond the little boxes that have characterized the Democrats for the last 20-plus years."

Clinton conceded the immensity of the task before him as he seeks to recover from the deep wounds of the primary campaign.

But after a two-week stretch in which the spotlight of scrutiny turned to Ross Perot, Clinton suggested he now sensed an opening for the message he has been trying to deliver.

His fate, Clinton said, depended on his ability to overcome the fact that "people just feel there is nothing they can do" about the country's problems.

"So all I can do about it is run, is tell them what they can do about it and tell them what I'm trying to do about it, and trying to engage their ears and their interest," he said. "The result so far has been mixed, but I think there's a real shot that we can do it."

Clinton, who will formally accept his party's nomination at the New York convention that starts July 13, outlined an election campaign designed to present him as a leader who would be more knowledgable than Perot, his likely independent challenger, and more engaged than Bush.

"I have been more detailed on how I think we should proceed in the future even than President Bush and certainly than Perot," he said. "So for all those reasons, I think I can be trusted to be commander in chief."

In providing a critique of Bush's foreign policy, Clinton said he would, if necessary, use military force, in concert with other nations, to bring humanitarian aid to the citizens of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Bush "may have been a little slow on the uptake" in responding to the disintegration of Yugoslavia, Clinton said. But the United Nations should be consulted, he added, before multilateral military action is used to reopen the airport at Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital.

He also said the president had engaged in "foot dragging" on providing aid to the republics of the former Soviet Union and said Bush was wrong to link loan guarantees for Israel to freezing the building of Jewish settlements on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Extending his critique to other areas of foreign policy, Clinton said the White House had been too cozy with China and too harsh in its treatment of Haitian refugees.

"I think there is an inconsistency in a lot of his actions," Clinton said of Bush, "because of the pull between the impulse, the deep American impulse, to support freedom and democracy and his own preference for stability in his relationships with foreign leaders in a given area."

The governor advocated closer ties with Japan and repeated his criticism of the president's foreign trade mission there last year, which he described as "perfectly absurd" because corporate executives whom Bush took with him were seeking only concessions from Japan.

Acknowledging what he described as "serious differences of opinion between us about what constitutes fair and free trade," Clinton said the collapse of the Soviet Union had changed the diplomatic equation between Japan and the United States.

"It would not be in Japan's interest for America to continually struggle economically," he said. "It's not in Japan's interest for America to have 10 more years in which most Americans work harder for lower pay. It is in Japan's interest for this not to be a zero-sum game.

"I think that we ought to begin by saying this is an important bilateral relationship, perhaps our most important one."

WEATHER SUMMARY

U.S.: Officials wait for U.N. deadline to pass

but such action would not necessarily have to involve the United States.

In recent days, the mobilization of some Croatian forces and the stated willingness of Croatian leaders to come to the aid of neighboring Bosnia and Herzegovina have prompted fears of a widening conflict.

The Bush administration, repeating a pattern established in the Persian Gulf nearly two years ago, wants an international coalition to act in concert on Bosnia, where at least 50,000 people are thought to have died in three months of warfare.

But in a departure from Persian Gulf War strategy, the administration wants Europe or the United Nations to take the lead this time, partly because this is a very European crisis and partly because officials do not want to leave the impression that the United States will lead the charge into every post-Cold War regional conflict.

President Bush met Friday with Secretary of State James A. Baker III and advisers to discuss options for aiding Bosnia and Herzegovina. At the meeting, described as a routine gathering and not an emergency session, were the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Colin L. Powell, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and the national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft.

Senior administration officials have been saying for several months that the United States would not be opposed to an international force for Yugoslavia with a mandate to intervene to open Sarajevo or other besieged towns and cities. What the administration has ruled out repeatedly is unilateral American military action, which would be difficult to sell to the American public despite the pictures of horror that appear daily on television screens and in newspapers.

Senior administration officials, especially in the State Department, are known to be frustrated and angry at the unwillingness of the Europeans to tackle what Baker calls the "humanitarian nightmare on their doorstep."

On Friday, Baker told reporters that he was "pessimistic" about the situation in Sarajevo. Speaking to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Tuesday, he came close to advocating the use of force beyond the existing U.N. peacekeeping troops.

On Monday, Baker will meet with Germany's new foreign minister, Klaus Kinkel, on his first official visit to Washington. Both are urging a more active international, particularly European, response to the slaughter in Bosnia.

At an international conference in Lisbon in May, when Baker raised debate over Bosnia to a suddenly higher level in Europe, Kinkel joined in to berate his fellow Europeans for their unwillingness even to apportion blame openly.

Until President Francois Mitterrand's trip Saturday to the Balkans and his criticism of the Serbs as the aggressors in the conflict, the French had traditionally been viewed as more pro-Serbian. Greece is now considered the European nation closest to Serbia's president.

Winds cause damage in Stanton

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high temperature near 90 and south to southwesterly winds 5-15 mph, according to the National Weather Service of Midland.

Tonight should be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of evening thundershowers and a low temperature in the upper 60s. Monday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-90s.

By Saturday night, some weather warnings remained in the area, but conditions were calm compared with late Friday, when high winds blew the roofs off homes and businesses and downed power lines in Stanton.

"It wasn't a tornado, or at least nobody reported it as one, but winds were as high as 85-90 mph," said Bob Bryan, a dispatcher for the Martin County Sheriff's Office. "A lot of roofs are gone."

No one was reported injured, but Bryan said trees were uprooted and fences blown down all over town. Electricity, phone and cable television services were interrupted, although all were repaired or nearly so by late Saturday, he said.

Cap Rock Electric Co-op reported one major power line fell across FM 829 in Stanton late Friday.

By Saturday evening, most residential customers had power restored, said Peggy Luxton, communications adviser for the company. Cap Rock restored power to homes and was expecting to restore oil-field power Sunday, she said.

The National Weather Service at Midland International Airport recorded gusts up to 47 mph late Friday, but had reports of 70 mph winds in other areas.

Saturday's low temperature was 64, compared with the record low of 52 set on that date in 1985. The high was 90, compared with the record of 106 set in 1980.

STATE

An apparent tornado hit the town of Fritch in the Texas Panhandle on Saturday night, injuring at least four people, ripping down power lines and damaging homes and businesses.

"We've got numerous vehicle damages, businesses, residences (damaged)," said Pat McCrary of the National Parks Service at Lake Meredith.

Fritch and Lake Meredith are about 35 miles northeast of Amarillo.

Jeanie Bennett, manager of the Dairy Queen in Fritch, said the restaurant was "demolished" by the storm. She told the Amarillo Globe-News she evacuated 30 to 35 people about 15 minutes before the storm hit about 8:30 p.m.

NATION

Rain and thunderstorms hit much of the nation on Saturday, although the High Plains and Great Basin regions had generally sunny skies.

Showers and thunderstorms were numerous in the Northeast. From daybreak to midday, Holyoke, in central Massachusetts, received nearly 7 inches of rain, mixed with hail the size of golf balls.

Strong thunderstorms also formed over eastern Colorado and the southern High Plains. Parts of Florida, Texas, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, Kansas, Nebraska, Idaho and Montana also had rain.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

CUTS: Retirees face companies' broken promises about a third of the Americans of that age — receive health benefits from their former employers.

At least 8.5 million retirees have benefits that seem secure because they became effective before the employers added escape clauses reserving the right to change the benefits, she said. That leaves 4.5 million retirees whose benefits are at risk.

The companies say the changes are necessary if they are to remain profitable, protecting their current employees and stockholders.

Advocates for retirees, not surprisingly, are outraged by the changes.

"The decision to break a promise of lifetime health benefits may represent a straightforward business decision for an employer," said Cathy Ventrell-Monsees, a benefits-policy manager with the American Association of Retired Persons. "However, for the retirees who relied on such promises and now face an uncertain financial future, the decision is a betrayal."

Many retirees are not taking the cuts lying down. They are taking their former employers to court, where the results have been mixed.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the 8th Circuit, in St. Louis, ruled in January that the new owners of Pressed Steel Tank Co. in Milwaukee did not have to continue retiree medical benefits because company documents had not specifically promised lifetime coverage.

And most appeals court decisions have upheld employers' rights to deny coverage, especially if health plan documents state that the company reserves the right to change or drop the benefits, said Willis J. Goldsmith, a Washington lawyer who represents employers.

But the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 6th Circuit, in Cincinnati, has taken "a very expansive view of the entitlement of retirees to unchanged medical benefits," he said.

And Kenneth Van Deventer, a Morristown, N.J., lawyer who represents retirees of American Can Co., said, "The issue is still in its infancy as far as the legal side is concerned."

While millions of retirees face reduced or terminated benefits, those hit hardest are the tens of thousands of people who were urged to retire before age 65 by companies that slashed payrolls in hopes of becoming more profitable.

These people are too young to be protected by Medicare, the federal insurance program for the elderly and disabled.

Delores Sandberg of Adell, Wis., for example, who turned 65 last year, is struggling to get by on a widow's pension of $126 a month from Pressed Steel Tank, where her husband, Clarence, retired in 1985 at age 61 after 32 years as a factory inspector and office worker.

The company was sold, and the new owners eliminated retirees' medical coverage in 1988. After her husband died in August 1989, Mrs. Sandberg was saddled with $8,000 in medical charges. "I got stuck with these bills," she said. "A collection agency threatened to take me to court."

To reduce their costs, many companies insist that retirees pay a greater share of the cost of their benefits.

W.H. Goggans, 60, a retired accountant in Sherwood, Ark., said Georgia-Pacific Corp. had recently doubled his family's health insurance premiums to $4,524 a year. He said the company had previously doubled the deductible amount that he must pay before the insurance kicks in.

"It is clear to me that they are getting ready to phase out retiree insurance," he said. "The next step is to price us out of the market or cut the benefits."

A Georgia-Pacific executive, Dick Spitznass, said the company "has no plans whatsoever to discontinue retiree medical coverage." Mr. Spitznass, vice president for compensation and benefits, said medical costs for retirees under age 65 had doubled in 1991, to an average of $6,000 a retiree.

He said Georgia-Pacific had always required retirees to pay half the premiums, which are based on the preceding year's experience.

Elderly pensioners who used to work for American Can Co., which is now Primerica Corp., say their monthly medical premiums were raised to $50 a month, from $5.

William Flowers, 79, a retired clerk in Butler, Ala., who sued the company, said that after the increase, he had only $173.14 left from his monthly pension.

In one of the largest lawsuits, 40,000 former General Motors nonunion employees who took early retirement are challenging the company's right to cut the coverage, which had been virtually 100 percent company-paid. They assert that GM promised the coverage in writing when they left.

GM, which said it would not comment on matters before a court, spent $3.4 billion for health care for employees and retirees in 1991, The company wants the retirees to accept the same deal as active non-union workers: $750 a year maximum for basic coverage, or no charge if they use doctors in a GM medical network, and a reduction of some benefits like prescription eyeglasses and hearing aids at no charge.

"The decision to voluntarily retire has to be based on accurate and forthright information," he said. "If not, hundreds of thousands of people are giving up their jobs on a foundation based on quicksand. A promise is a promise."

In a survey last year of 1,380 large and small employers by the A. Foster Higgins benefits-consulting firm, 65 percent said they were reducing benefits, requiring retirees to pay more of the costs, up from with 58 percent that were making the cuts in 1990 and 43 percent in 1989. Seven percent said they were ending the benefits.

START: Citywide recycling program begins Monday

the paper.

Some fire stations have containers, including Central Fire at Wall and H Streets. Businesses can participate by having a container placed in the alley.

Public-use containers will be open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 4-6 p.m. At other times, they will be locked.

Sanitation trucks will pick up recyclable items every Wednesday. Butts Recycling, 21 W. Industrial Loop, will process the items and send them to be recycled.

Others expressed confidence and high hopes for the program's success.

"This is a good program," said Charles Butts, owner of Butts Recycling. "Anytime you're trying to keep paper out of the city dump, you're doing something good for the city. It takes time to get into a program like this, but so far, everything's working out."

Burns urged local residents to support the program so that it can continue.

"We need to ask people please not to place paper anywhere except inside the containers, and to abide by the guidelines," he said.

"If we are successful with this paper drop-off program, we will expand into other types of recyclables as we can find processors willing to take the product."

Generating a sufficient amount of paper is vital to keep the program going, Burns said.

In the first month of the business recycling program, for example, paper donated totalled 18,720 pounds. That grew to 40,220 pounds in May and 59,640 pounds in June.

Burns said the city probably sends about 55 million pounds of paper to the landfill each year, however.

By cutting down on paper, the city could save landfill space and money.

Nationwide, the paper industry has set a goal to recover 40 percent of all paper consumed by 1995, keeping it out of landfills, according to the American Paper Institute. That agency reports that last year, 31 million tons were recovered in the U.S.

Midland's program is limited in the items accepted now, but leaders said the list may grow as the idea catches on locally.

"If we get a lot of volume going, I envision other processors getting involved, and we may have a chance to recycle plastic as well," Burns said.

Butts said the public-private cooperative effort may be the secret to this program's success.

"If people will work together like they have on this, and with the city helping us, I think it will go," he said.

SELL: Outdoor market adds flavor to shopping boiled and served with butter or used in soups and stews.

"Most people don't recognize them here. They're not a real fast seller like okra," he said.

One day last week, the squash, tomatoes, onions, watermelons and cayenne peppers looked good to Bob and Kathy Gill, accompanied by their two small children, Travis and Hanna.

"This is our first time out, but I'm sure we'll be back," Gill said. "I think what we get out here would be fresher than the grocery store."

"And the vine-ripened tomatoes. There's no way you'll get that at the grocery," Ms. Gill said.

"We just moved here from Colorado and this is a real treat for us to get some fresh produce," she added.

Although the Gills discovered the market, many others haven't or don't know it has opened this year.

"Usually we have more customers than produce. It's been the opposite this year" so far, Ms. Russell said.

The selling season began two weeks ago and will continue through the end of October.

In Midland, the Farmers' Market is open Mondays and Fridays at 1505 E. Front St., and Tuesdays and Saturdays at 5021 Princeton Ave.; in Odessa, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 4703 Golder Ave.; and in Big Spring, Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2300 Gregg St.

Produce can be bought from 7 a.m. "'till we sell out or the customers stop coming," Ms Russell said.

Currently there are about 40 members in the Farmers' Market Association, with between three and 10 vendors showing up at market sites.

The Permian Basin Farmers' Market began in 1985 with the assistance of the county extension agent.

World in brief

■ Belfast bomb injures 2 lawmen, 19 others

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Two policemen and 19 civilians were hurt Saturday when a bomb set on the roof of a police car exploded in a busy shopping area of central Belfast, police said.

Police said none of the 21 treated at Belfast hospitals were seriously injured in the midday blast.

The Royal Ulster Constabulary said a man in a crowd of Saturday shoppers put a bomb on the police car roof as the two officers inside were waiting to pass through a security barrier on Belfast's High Street.

The bomb went off almost immediately, igniting the car and injuring the officers inside and people in the area, said the spokesman.

The spokesman said the bomber fled into the crowd of shoppers on foot.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

■ Chileans go to polls in crucial election

SANTIAGO, Chile — Chileans go to the polls Sunday to elect municipal officials for the first time in 21 years in balloting widely seen as a crucial step in strengthening the country's young democracy.

An estimated 7.8 million voters will pick 2,082 mayors and council members in 334 towns. Under the former military regime of Gen. Augusto Pinochet, municipal authorities were appointed by the central government.

The government and its right-wing opposition, while differing on the political implications of the vote, agree it is a major step in the consolidation of democracy.

■ Kuwait violence raises security questions

KUWAIT — Rising crime is fueling debate over authorities' inability to guarantee safety on the streets — and raising fears that the government will use the lack of security as a pretext to cancel elections set this autumn.

Violent incidents as well as burglaries and property crimes have jumped markedly since Kuwait's liberation in February 1991 following the seven-month Iraqi occupation. Prior to the war, Kuwait was an almost crime-free society.

Guns for civilians are banned in Kuwait, but government efforts to collect weapons acquired by Kuwaitis during the occupation have failed.

Faced with manpower shortages in its police force, the government plans to recruit Kuwaitis as volunteer "police assistants."

Collapse of Soviet Union fans ethnic warfare

MOSCOW (AP) — The contents of war communiques that streamed in last week from the southern rim of the former Soviet Union seemed increasingly ferocious:

■ Hundreds of dead in eastern Moldova because of attacks on Russian-speaking separatists that officials in Moscow described as "genocide."

■ Urgent appeals from the region of South Ossetia in northern Georgia for Russian army protection against shelling by Georgian government forces.

■ A "massive attack" by Azerbaijani armor on Armenian towns in the battle for control of Nagorno-Karabakh, a predominantly Armenian enclave in Azerbaijan.

It is a rare night that the main television channel does not show scenes of armored vehicles creeping along a roadway, buildings blown apart by mortars or women wailing over dead loved ones.

Ethnic warfare in these trouble spots began before the demise of the Soviet Union and is rooted in hatreds that date back decades, even centuries. Since the collapse last year of the central Kremlin authority that enforced a measure of order, the disputes seem to have exploded into a savage free-for-all.

The newly independent nations are shedding the Stalinist legacy of forced assimilation into the Soviet Union, which suppressed native languages and customs, established control from Moscow and drew arbitrary boundaries.

"All the sovereign states that have emerged in the place of the former U.S.S.R. are multiethnic by their composition," Sergei Stankevich, a top aide to Russian President Boris Yeltsin, wrote in a newspaper column this week.

"Each of them is translating into life the natural, hitherto suppressed aspiration to national self-determination and self-affirmation."

Instead of fostering cooperation, he said, extremists in the ruling ethnic group of each nation are turning to "outright rabid national fascism."

"This is why the only prospect lying ahead is shooting and graves, bitter tears and more shooting," Stankevich wrote.

Vice President Alexander Rutskoi, a more conservative voice, said in a provocative speech last Sunday on the violence in South Ossetia and Moldova that "Russia will not tolerate such treatment of Russian-speaking people any longer."

Russia also faces challenges within the scores of nationalities and 16 "autonomous" republics that make up the vast federation.

No talks until ANC demands met, Mandela says

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — Nelson Mandela said Saturday that strikes and protests, not negotiations, have become the ANC's main weapon for ousting the white minority government.

The speech to 15,000 supporters indicated the African National Congress wants major concessions from President F.W. de Klerk's government before it considers returning to political talks.

Mandela, the ANC president, broke off talks with the government last week to protest the June 17 massacre of 42 blacks and a stalemate in black-white negotiations on ending white minority rule.

Since then, both the ANC and government have refused to soften their positions despite mounting international pressure for the violence to end and talks to resume.

Foreign Affairs Minister Pik Botha met Saturday in Nigeria with U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali to discuss the situation, the government said.

The ANC has called for a U.N. Security Council meeting on South Africa. Mandela is to meet with Boutros-Ghali at next week's Organization of African Unity meeting in Senegal.

The European Community also was to discuss ways it could assist South Africa's negotiation process.

Speaking on the 37th anniversary of the signing of the Freedom Charter, a document that outlined goals of the anti-apartheid movement, Mandela said protests and other mass action were an accepted alternative to negotiations.

"The 'mass mobilization' campaign is now priority No. 1 for the ANC," he said to cheers from the crowd dotted with flags of the ANC and its ally, the South African Communist Party.

If the government failed to meet ANC demands, Mandela said he would personally lead a protest campaign "of unprecedented dimensions."

The crowd of mostly young men, some carrying axes and machetes in an unusual display of militancy at an ANC rally, cheered Mandela's tough tone.

Police vehicles remained on the outskirts of the rally area in the Soweto black township, and no trouble was reported during the day.

Mandela said the ANC would immediately rejoin political talks if the government met its demands, which include an international investigation of the recent massacre in the Boipatong black township and other violence.

The ANC has long accused police and soldiers of instigating township violence that has killed 8,000 blacks the past three years.

Yemem admits hundreds more Somali refugees

ADEN, Yemen (AP) — Six hundred exhausted, hungry Somali refugees were allowed ashore Saturday from a wooden boat where they had spent eight days waiting off this Red Sea port.

The arrivals told tales of fear and suffering aboard the cramped vessel, where food and water had run out and temperatures soared above 120 degrees.

"We came here because they are Arabs and Muslims and we have nowhere else to go," said Amal Abdul, a refugee in her 50s who spoke through cracked, thirst-parched lips. Her small son clung to her skirts, crying in hunger.

The refugees were taken to a small beach compound where 3,300 other Somalis have been held since last week when their larger vessel, the cargo ship Gob Wein, ran aground.

Yemen finally allowed the refugees from the small wooden dhow Manseir to land after appeals from relief officials who warned of desperate conditions aboard. The United Nations is helping to care for the refugees.

Relief workers said 149 people died of hunger, thirst or heat exhaustion aboard the Gob Wein, which ran aground off Aden on Monday. An unknown number of others drowned or died of injuries trying to get ashore.

Officials at the port said another six people — four children and two elderly adults — died of hunger and thirst aboard the Manseir.

The Somalis, who crossed the Red Sea to Yemen, are fleeing civil war and drought in their country. The International Committee of the Red Cross has described Somalia as the world's greatest humanitarian disaster.

The refugees said the overcrowded ship, with 600 people aboard, sailed from Somalia with only four days' worth of food and water. Most of them had paid hundreds of dollars to get aboard the vessel.

The refugees said the owner, a Yemeni businessman, had offered to take them to Aden.

The voyage took three days, but another eight days passed before they were allowed ashore. When provisions began to run out, the refugees said, people fought each other for remaining scraps, desperate to feed their children.

The refugees, who were processed by Yemeni immigration officials and trucked to the beach compound, looked dazed, hungry and dehydrated.

At the beach compound, a midwife who was busy attending to the many pregnant women among the refugees said diarrhea and skin rashes were common among those arriving.

Many of the refugees were relatively well-off in their country: the poor cannot afford to pay the cost of the journey and remain trapped in their homeland.

Yemen, one of the region's poorer countries, can ill afford to look after the Somali refugees.

Anger, stones greet home for HIV-infected children

By Drusilla Menaker
Associated Press writer

LASKI, Poland — One by one, the villagers picked up stones and hurled them at the houses meant for sick children. Soon it was a full-scale barrage and the sound of breaking windows mixed with hoots and laughter.

"We won't let them in," snarled one grandmother. "We will never give in."

Poland's new rich, who built their fancy homes in this town on Warsaw's outskirts, willingly share it with peasant shanties, junkyards and staggering drunks.

But not with children infected with the HIV virus.

Plans to bring 40 such youngsters to Laski have unleashed such violent opposition that the two lovely forest-shaded houses bought for that purpose are now scarred by graffiti and fire.

In scenes captured on state television last week, every window was shattered by the angry mob. Above them, a helicopter dropped thousands of Health Ministry information leaflets about AIDS. Townspeople burned them.

Hundreds and sometimes thousands of protesters have gathered outside the houses nightly since early June, when they learned they had been bought by one of Poland's few AIDS crusaders with money from a U.S. government-backed foundation.

Throughout conservative, homogenous Poland, ignorance and intolerance have combined to keep AIDS a largely misunderstood terror.

The convulsion of fear and hatred in Laski, famed for its school for the blind and as a spiritual retreat, echoed the virulent opposition that has met at least five other proposed hostels for AIDS victims over the past two years.

In an April confrontation in another Warsaw suburb, Jozefow, screaming, cursing residents chased away HIV-infected children that had been bused in to a hostel, charging that the disease would spread to townspeople through mosquitoes. Plans for the hostel were ditched.

There are 2,000 registered AIDS sufferers in Poland, but that is thought to vastly understate the problem. Zbigniew Halat, who runs the government's anti-AIDS program, has estimated there could be up to 100,000 HIV carriers.

The Communist regime did not acknowledge that AIDS existed in the country until 1985, and took few steps to counter it. The current Health Ministry program has limited funding and little ability to reach the highest risk group, drug addicts, or homosexuals, who are largely underground.

FBI finds body believed to be Reso's

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A body believed to be that of missing Exxon executive Sidney J. Reso was found Saturday in a rugged, forested section of southern New Jersey called the Pinelands, the FBI reported late Saturday.

Positive identification of the corpse was not expected until sometime today, the agency said in a statement released by spokesman Bill Tonkin.

FBI officials refused to release any other details or answer questions, but said more information would be released at a news conference late this morning.

Reso, 57, president of Exxon Co.'s international division, has been missing since leaving his Morris Township home on April 29 to drive to his office in Florham Park.

His car, its engine still idling, was found at the end of his 200-foot driveway in the New York City suburb of expensive homes.

Arthur D. Seale and his wife, Irene Seale, both 45, were charged Thursday with kidnapping, extortion and conspiracy in Reso's disappearance.

CBS television stations in New Orleans and New York quoted a friend of the Reso family on Saturday as saying the executive's sister told her Reso had died of natural causes shortly after he was abducted.

"She called us to tell us that the lady had confessed that Reso had died in the early part of May and that he had died of natural causes and that they buried him in a park," the friend, Sister Ruth Angelette, told WWL-TV in New Orleans. The report was also carried by WCBS-TV, WWL's sister station in New York.

Reso had a heart condition, but it did not require daily medication, his wife, Patricia, said during a televised plea she made for his release.

The area in which the body was found is known as both Pinelands and the Pine Barrens. It sprawls across about 1 million acres in the southern end of the state.

Sister Ruth, a nun at St. Anthony of Padua convent in New Orleans, could not immediately be reached for comment. A woman who answered the phone at the convent Saturday night refused to take a message for her.

The Seales, of Lebanon Township, were arrested June 19 after investigators received a series of ransom notes and phone calls demanding millions of dollars for Reso's return.

Mount Spurr erupts near Anchorage, spews ash

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The Mount Spurr volcano ended 39 years of dormancy Saturday, spewing ash and steam at least five miles into the sky. Some air traffic was rerouted as gritty ash rained onto isolated communities.

Scientists at the Alaska Volcano Observatory in Anchorage said the first "moderate explosive eruption" occurred at 7:04 a.m. Two more eruptions were reported in hourly intervals and volcanologists forecast more to come.

Fallout of coarse, gritty ash from the volcano was reported in a number of small communities in the state's sparsely populated interior, and some air traffic was rerouted to keep planes from traveling through the plume, which was heading north.

No injuries were reported and no health alerts were ordered.

The nearest settlements to the volcano are the villages of Shirleyville, 35 miles to the southeast, and Skwentna, 60 miles to the northeast.

Kirsten Stanley, a National Weather Service observer at Finger Lake, near Skwentna, said the eruption dumped about an eighth of an inch of coarse, gritty ash.

"It is like beach sand," she said. "When it fell on the tin roofs, it sounded like a light rainfall. It is nothing like the fine, powdery stuff when Redoubt blew."

Scientists were tipped to the eruption when a series of volcanic tremors began about noon Friday on the 11,000-foot peak 80 miles west of Anchorage.

The Federal Aviation Administration limited air traffic to within 20 miles of the mountain, and the National Weather Service issued a flash flood watch for the Chakachatna River and other streams fed by ice and snow melting off Mount Spurr.

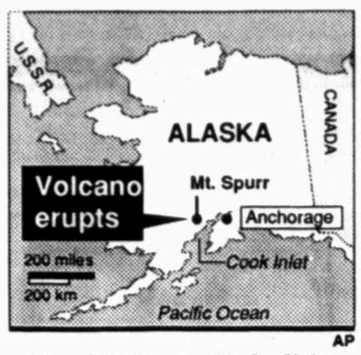

The volcano is the nearest one to Anchorage, Alaska's biggest city with 230,000 people. It last erupted in 1953 with a brief burst that deposited a quarter-inch of ash on Anchorage.

On Saturday, pilots flying in and out of Anchorage International Airport reported an ash plume reaching 30,000 feet, Power said.

FAA spokeswoman Joette Storm said several planes headed to Anchorage from the north and northwest had been rerouted to fly around the ash cloud. She said one pilot reported the smell of sulfur near Bettles, more than 400 miles north of Anchorage.

Planes ranging in size from single-engine craft to airliners were rerouted around the plume but were able to land at Anchorage International Airport by approaching from another direction.

Storm said planes approaching from the south were also diverted slightly, but that no delays have resulted from the eruption.

AP

Steve McNutt, an Alaska Volcano Observatory seismologist, said the front edge of the ash cloud was expected to reach Fairbanks, about 350 miles north of Anchorage sometime Saturday.

McNutt said the impact was expected to be small.

Active volcanoes are common throughout the Alaska Peninsula and the Aleutian Islands.

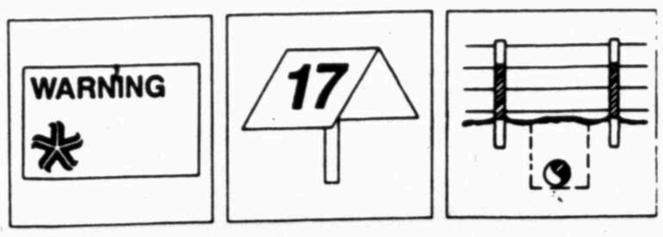

Redoubt Volcano, south of Mount Spurr in Lake Clark National Park, was the last in the Anchorage area to erupt with a series that began in December 1989 and produced its last ash cloud in April 1990.

The ash-filled air required people to don face masks at times, frequently change car air filters, and it stranded holiday travelers and mail when air travel was halted.

Fallout also shut down all four engines of a KLM Royal Dutch Airlines 747, causing the plane to plunge from 25,000 feet to 12,000 feet in 12 minutes before the crew could restart the clogged engines.

Pharmacist's discovery may end obesity

WASHINGTON—After solving the problem of his own obesity, a pharmacist, now director of National Dietary Research, may have discovered the solution for others with the same problem.

Dr. William Morris, pharmacist, inventor and author has discovered a natural food tablet, aptly named Food Source One, that replaces some of the calories normally obtained from food. Food Source One replaces high calorie fats with other natural food ingredients with little or no caloric value so you can lose weight without giving up all your favorite foods, as explained in NDR's Lifestyle Maintenance publication, available where Food Source One is sold. "The secret to meaningful weight loss is not in decreasing the amount of food you eat, but in controlling the fat," says Dr. Morris.

According to Dr. Morris, weight loss results while using Food Source One will depend on how many pounds a person needs to lose. However some overweight people are experiencing extraordinary results with Food Source One. A Metairie, Louisiana nurse lost 71 pounds. She stated "I never had to sacrifice foods I dearly crave!" "Food Source One is very easy and anyone could do it," says a Niagara Falls, New York woman who lost 26 pounds and 15 inches. "The results are great" she added.

Food Source One is available at pharmacies without a prescription.

Serbian forces defy U.N. ultimatum, continue to shell Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (NYT) — Serbian forces continued to hit Sarajevo with sporadic artillery fire on Saturday, the day after the U.N. Security Council issued an ultimatum to the Serbians to halt fighting and put their heavy guns under U.N. control within 48 hours.

But the intensity of the firing seemed to have diminished, and a top U.N. official here said he had received reports that "some progress" had been made toward ending the fighting in the city.

On Friday, the Security Council said that if Serbian nationalists did not stop fighting and put their heavy weapons under U.N. control by Monday, the council would meet "to determine what other means would be required to bring relief flights of food and medicine for the suffering people of Sarajevo." Diplomats said a failure by the Serbs to comply could lead to some form of military action.

Hopes that the city would be rescued by Western intervention soared when Bosnian officials announced that President Francois Mitterrand of France was expected here on Saturday night aboard a special aircraft carrying him from the European Comunity meeting in Lisbon. But as the evening hours passed, Bosnian officials said they understood that Mitterrand had stopped for the night in the Croatian city of Split about 125 miles west of here, and would fly on to Sarajevo, weather and military conditions permitting, this morning.

The French leader's visit, if it materializes, would be an extraordinary gesture, since Sarajevo has been judged so dangerous for the past two months that almost all Western relief agencies and diplomats, as well as many reporters, have left the city. Bosnian officials said they understood that Mitterrand, whose government has been criticized over the Western reluctance to intervene here, would visit the Bosnian president, Alija Izetbegovic, and probably walk through the city's streets.

News of the U.N. ultimatum spread rapidly through Sarajevo overnight, and by mid-morning on Saturday, throngs of people gathered at street corners and in the few open shops discussing what the U.N. deadline might mean. Mostly, people seemed to think that it presaged some sort of military intervention by the United States and other Western powers under U.N. authority, and the prospect brought a widespread boost in morale.

"Thank God! They've finally realized what's been going on here," said Mehmet Sabic, 50-year-old owner of a hairdressing salon in the city center off Vase Miskina Street, a pedestrian mall that has been one of the most heavily devastated districts. In the waiting area at the front of the salon, customers were poring over a single copy of the city's major newspaper, Oslobodenje, with a banner headline that read: "The Sixth Fleet Is Coming!"

The U.N. secretary general, Boutros Boutros-Ghali, announcing the world body's ultimatum, did not specify what action might be taken if the Serbian forces failed to comply with the demands by the deadline. The demands included a stipulation that the Serbians cease their attacks on Sarajevo, in particular a new attempt to seize the airport suburb of Dobrinja. He also insisted that the Serbian forces begin relocating their heavy guns in places where they can be supervised by the U.N. Protection Force.

Boutros-Ghali's statement on relief for Sarajevo's people pointed toward some form of military action to force the re-opening of Sarajevo airport, currently occupied by Serbian forces, in line with a Security Council resolution passed earlier this month authorizing an airlift of food.

You're Welcome, Zada.

Zada Cave was working out in her cotton field when she saw the dark pillar of cloud on the horizon. She jumped in the pickup truck and headed north, to the mobile home where she knew her daughter-in-law was alone with two small children.

"It was bad. Barns were scattered. Tin everywhere. The Flower Grove Gin had been hit pretty bad," she recalled of the tornado that struck near Ackerly in June, 1991.

The family was OK. But when they all went back to Zada's's home, the electricity was out. Power lines were down for miles, and Zada told her family not to expect power to be restored for days.

But only a few hours later, the lights came on.

"I don't know how those guys did it. They must've worked all night long. But they got the power up and running, and it sure made life easier for us," she said.

Permian ranked No. 1, Lee 21st

■ Dave Campbell's "Texas Football' magazine makes Odessa Permian one of three defending state champions picked tops in their classes.

Associated Press

WACO — Three defending state champions — Odessa Permian in Class 5A, A&M Consolidated in Class 4A and six-man Fort Hancock — begin 1992 ranked No. 1 in their respective classes by Dave Campbell's Texas Football magazine.

Other District 4-5A teams listed in Campbell's Top 25 were Midland Lee at 21st, and San Angelo at 24th.

Permian, which beat San Antonio Marshall to win the 5A Division II title in 1991, gets the nod over Dallas Carter, Jersey Village, Dallas Kimball and Spring Westfield in Texas Football's 33rd annual summer preview edition, which goes on sale Tuesday.

The Panthers, led by all-state defenders Sam Brooks and Micheal Comer, are projected to go the Division II or "small school" playoff route under the University Interscholastic League's two-tier playoff plan for Class 5A. Jersey Village, led by Super Team defenders Brian Johnson and Ryan Ware, is the magazine's choice to win the Division I title.

A&M Consolidated, which beat Carthage to win the 4A title last fall, returns junior quarterback Jeff Watson, who had more than 3,000 total yards in 1991, for another playoff drive. Dallas Roosevelt, Austin LBJ, which drops from Class 5A, and Brownwood are other regional favorites.

Fort Hancock, which has won the last four titles in six-man, attempts to make it five in a row in 1992. The Mustangs are led by running back Vicente Ramirez, who ran for more than 2,800 yards last season, and end Sergio Maldonado. Christoval, which lost to Fort Hancock in the 1991 title game, is ranked No. 2.

In Class 3A, the preseason favorite is Southlake Carroll, which has won 51 regular-season games in a row. The Dragons will attempt to tie the record of 53 set by Big Sandy in the 1970s in Week 2 of the regular season against No. 3 Gainesville, which drops from Class 4A.

Carrizo Springs, led by running back Michael Ross, is ranked No. 2 in 3A, and Bellville is No. 4.

Grapeland, which lost in the 1991 semifinals to eventual state champion Schulenburg, is the preseason favorite in Class 2A. The Sandies are led by linemen Tim Warfield and Darrell Hollis and running back Cedric Coleman.

Perennial contender Pilot Point is ranked No. 2 in 2A, followed by Schulenburg and Hamlin.

Dallas-Fort Worth and Greater Houston players dominate Texas Football's annual Super Team, combining for nine of 12 players on the first-team offense and nine of 12 on defense.

Dallas Carter is represented on the Super Team by defensive linemen Brandon Ashley and William Carr, crosstown rival Dallas Kimball by linebacker Allen Wilbon and defensive back Tomell Hurd and Fort Worth Western Hills by defensive lineman Henry Thomas and defensive back Roderick Manuel.

Campbell's Top 25

WACO (AP) — Here are Texas Football Magazine's Class 5A preseason favorites in the 1992 high school football race (with returning lettermen, returning offensive and defensive starters and 1991 record in parenthesis):

1. Odessa Permian (25 lettermen, 3 offensive and 3 defensive starters return from 16-0 Division II state champion).
2. Dallas Carter (12 lettermen, 5-3 starters from 12-2 Division II quarterfinalist).
3. Jersey Village (17 lettermen, 5-7 starters from 11-1 Division I regional finalist).
4. Dallas Kimball (14 lettermen, 6-8 starters from 10-1 district champion).

25. Humble (14 lettermen, 3-4 starters from 8-3 third-place team).

Russian defeats Courier

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Jim Courier waved goodbye to the Grand Slam and left his obscure Russian conqueror to a voracious John McEnroe.

Licking his lips, but careful not to sound too greedy, McEnroe looked forward to a round-of-16 match against No. 193-ranked Andrei Olhovskiy.

"I'm probably more the favorite now than going in as a complete underdog," said McEnroe, thankful to get past David Wheaton on Saturday and avoid playing Courier on Tuesday.

smash and all the shock of the most outrageous upsets in tennis history.

It ended 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4 on the Centre Court grass against a player who grew up playing on plastic and wood to become the first qualifier ever to beat a Wimbledon top seed.

The end came suddenly in the third round after Courier's romps through the Australian and French Opens, the world's No. 1 player falling to a man who

DPC snatches postseason MUGS crown

■ Dutcher Phipps Crane wins both the regular season and postseason championships in the Midland United Girls Softball league.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

Marci Digennaro pitched a three-hitter to lead Dutcher Phipps Crane to a 5-4 win over the Sluggers for the Division I (7-9 year olds) championship at the Midland United Girls Softball city tournament.

Dutcher Phipps Crane was the only team that won both the regular season championship as well as top honors in the city tournament in MUGS' five divisions.

In 1991, three of the four division champs won both regular season and tournament titles. MUGS expanded to five divisions this summer with the addition of T-Ball for 5-6 year old girls.

Dutcher's title was also the third straight by a team led by head coach Alan Digennaro.

Stadium Sports finished in third place in the Division I tourney.

Whiteye came away with the tournament trophy in Division II (10-12 year olds). Led by coach Jesse Carrasco, Whiteye defeated Pride Pipe, 5-3 in the "if" game of the double-elimination event.

In the opener, Pride Pipe's Mindi Sheppard kept Whiteye off-balance offensively in a 6-3 win. But in the "if" game, Patricia Carrasco's three-run triple in the second was the big blow that allowed Whiteye to eventually win the game and the big trophy.

Rainbow Press finished third in Division II.

"If" games were also needed to settle things in Division III (13-15 year olds) and Division IV (16-19).

After being 10-run ruled in the first game by Flint, Kelley Karpets turned the tide, downing Flint 18-8 in the "if" game to win the championship in Division III. It was the second straight title for Ray Kelley's team.

Coastal Pipe was the tournament's third-place team. Harmon Machine won the regular season title.

The extra game was also needed in Division IV before Omega downed Madison Insurance 8-5 for the tourney title. Madison won the first game, 12-8.

Mid-Tex Battery was third in Division IV.

'Dream Team' takes on Cuba

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — For the leader of the "Dream Team," the experience was better than he'd dreamed it would be.

A beaming Magic Johnson, carrying an American flag, led the U.S. team onto the court Saturday for the opening ceremonies of the Tournament of the Americas.

"You dreamed of what would happen but it was better than the dream by far," he said. "It was a great experience. I had goosebumps all over me and then with me holding the flag I had even more of a charge."

The crowd, which had politely applauded for the nine other countries in the Olympic qualifying competition, cheered wildly when what most consider the best basketball team ever assembled walked onto the floor for its first public appearance.

The Americans, minus Patrick Ewing who has a dislocated right thumb, make their debut today against Cuba, a team the U.S. players know little about.

"All I know about Cuba is they've got a scruffy-looking guy running the country who smokes a cigar," Charles Barkley said.

Coach Chuck Daly knows a little more than that about his first opponent.

"Their speed could bother us," he said. "Our size should bother them."

The Cubans will be playing their second game in just 16 hours. They faced Canada at 10 p.m., CDT, Saturday, then must return for their 2 p.m. contest against the United States.

The Americans know they are expected to win every game and win big. But Johnson said the players must avoid putting too much pressure on themselves.

Rangers outlast Tigers

DETROIT — Kevin Reimer and Ivan Rodriguez hit home runs on consecutive pitches, capping a six-run second inning and leading the Texas Rangers past the Detroit Tigers 10-8 Saturday.

Rafael Palmeiro hit a two-run double and Rodriguez, having just been activated from the disabled list, had an RBI single as Texas scored four times in the first inning. After Detroit got two runs in its half, the Rangers opened a 10-2 lead in the second.

Jose Guzman (7-5) won despite allowing four runs on 10 hits in six innings. Kenny Rogers got the last four outs for his fifth save.

Mickey Tettleton, who earlier had an RBI grounder, hit a three-run homer in the eighth off Edwin Nunez that made it 10-8. Cecil Fielder hit a pair of RBI singles for the Tigers.

Kevin Ritz (1-3) had another poor outing, giving up seven runs on seven hits in just 1 2-3 innings. Ritz has a 7.36 ERA in six starts this year.

Yankees 8, White Sox 7

NEW YORK — Charlie Hayes' RBI single off Bobby Thigpen with two out in the ninth inning gave New York a victory over Chicago, snapping the White Sox's six-game winning streak.

The Yankees, who rallied from an early 5-0 deficit, started the game-winning rally when Don Mattingly singled with one out off Scott Radinsky (2-5). Danny Tartabull followed with a walk and one out later, Thigpen relieved. Hayes then won the game with a single up the middle.

Tim Burke (1-1) pitched two innings for his first AL victory, escaping a bases-loaded jam in the top of the ninth. The game took 3 hours, 53 minutes to finish.

Red Sox 8, Brewers 7

BOSTON — Roger Clemens and Boston blew a seven-run lead late in the game, but bounced back to win in the 13th inning on Herm Winningham's bases-loaded single.

The Red Sox made three errors, contributing to six unearned runs. The Brewers scored three times in the eighth inning against Clemens, then tied it at 7 with four in the ninth, capped by Paul Molitor's two-out, two-run single off Jeff Reardon.

In the 13th, Jack Clark singled with one out off Darren Holmes (2-3) and took third on Mo Vaughn's single. Pinch hitter Phil Plantier was intentionally walked to load the bases and Winningham lined the first pitch over drawn-in left fielder B.J. Surhoff.

Danny Darwin (4-4) pitched four shutout innings for the victory. Boston won its second in a row following a seven-game losing skid, and Milwaukee has lost four of its last five.

Twins 12, Athletics 2

OAKLAND, Calif. — Kirby Puckett hit two of Minnesota's team record tying-seven doubles and the Twins rapped 18 hits in routing Oakland.

John Smiley (8-3) won his fourth straight decision, allowing four hits in eight innings. Jose Canseco and Mark McGwire hit consecutive homers in the fourth inning for Oakland's only runs. McGwire leads the majors with 26 homers and Canseco has 16.

The Twins, who have won nine of their last 11, pulled to within one game of the AL West-leading A's. Minnesota has won two of three in the series, which ends today.

Smiley struck out three and walked one. He allowed more than one run for the first time in five starts and is 4-0 with a 1.34 ERA in June. He is 8-1 in his last 11 starts.

Royals 2, Orioles 0

BALTIMORE — Kevin Appier and Jeff Montgomery combined on a four-hitter and as Kansas City held off Baltimore.

Appier (8-3) allowed a double, three singles and two walks in 8 1-3 innings. He left after Brady Anderson led off the ninth with a walk and took third on Cal Ripken's one-out double.

Indians 6, Blue Jays 4

CLEVELAND — Sandy Alomar hit a two-out, two-run single in the eighth inning as Cleveland beat Toronto to end a six-game losing streak.

The RBIs were Alomar's first since June 3.

Albert Belle homered and drove in three runs and Carlos Baerga went 4 for 4 and scored three runs for the Indians.

Angels 2, Mariners 1

SEATTLE — Mark Langston pitched his sixth complete game and Chad Curtis singled in two runs as California defeated Seattle.

It was the Angels' second straight win at Seattle after losing 19 of their previous 22 road games. The Mariners lost for the seventh time in eight games.

Langston (8-5) allowed eight hits and struck out nine.

Reds, Pirates drub opponents

Associated Press

National

CINCINNATI — The hot-hitting Cincinnati Reds, led by Chris Sabo's three-run homer, rocked Charlie Leibrandt for seven runs in the first two innings and went on to drub the Atlanta Braves 12-3 Saturday.

The Reds have won the first two games of the NL West's showdown series to pad their lead over Atlanta to three games. Cincinnati has won four straight by scoring 38 runs, its best offensive streak of the season.

The Braves, who came into Cincinnati on a 21-3 roll, have lost consecutive games for the first time since May 25-26.

Cincinnati has blown out the Braves early in both games. Glenn Braggs' first-inning grand slam put the Reds in control Friday night, and a bases-loaded single by Hal Morris gave them the first-inning lead again Saturday.

Leibrandt (6-3) also gave up Sabo's three-run homer in the second, putting the Reds in control 7-1. The left-hander allowed five hits and three walks in 1 2-3 innings, his shortest appearance of the season, to lose for the first time since May 3.

Jose Rijo (4-6) allowed three runs on six hits over six innings and figured in the early offense with a double and RBI single.

Pirates 12, Expos 4

MONTREAL — Orlando Merced drove in four runs, including a three-run homer in the first inning, as Pittsburgh beat Montreal.

The Pirates had 17 hits, including four by Andy Van Slyke and a solo homer by Steve Buechele.

Jeff Robinson (3-0), signed by Pittsburgh on June 10 after being released by Texas, worked five-plus innings for the victory. He had not allowed a run in 15 2-3 innings since joining the Pirates until Larry Walker hit an RBI single in the third.

Robinson allowed three runs on four hits in beating the Expos for the second time in less than a week. Stan Belinda, who got his first major league hit in the ninth, got the final four outs for his 11th save.

Phillies 5, Cubs 4

CHICAGO — Wes Chamberlain broke an eighth-inning tie with a long home run, Wally Backman had an RBI single in the ninth and Philadelphia held on to beat Chicago.

Chamberlain, who earlier drove in a run with a sacrifice fly, homered off Chuck McElroy (3-4). His fourth homer of the year cleared the left field fence and landed on Waveland Avenue.

Backman's pinch single in the ninth made it 5-3, and reliever Mitch Williams allowed an RBI hit by Joe Girardi in the ninth before retiring the Cubs to earn his 16th save.

Giants 5, Padres 3

SAN DIEGO — Kevin Bass hi a two-run homer in the 10th inning as San Francisco ended a four-game losing streak.

Bass connected with one out off Padres reliever Randy Myers (2-2) for his fourth hit of the game and third homer of the season. Mike Felder opened the 10th with a single on an 0-2 pitch from Myers, working his first inning.

Jeff Brantley (3-4) pitched two scoreless innings for the Giants, who had lost 11 of their previous 13 games.

The Giants tied it at 3 in the seventh when Chris James hit a solo homer off Padres starter Andy Benes, who allowed three runs and nine hits in seven innings.

Astros 5, Dodgers 1

LOS ANGELES — Rookie Brian Williams pitched no-hit ball for 5 2-3 innings and Jeff Bagwell had three hits and three RBIs as Houston beat Los Angeles.

Williams (3-0) allowed only two hits in eight innings, a pair of two-out doubles in the sixth by Stan Javier and Brett Butler.

Mets 2, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — Bill Pecota's double with two outs in the 11th inning scored Dave Gallagher and gave New York victory over St. Louis.

Gallagher drew a walk from Lee Smith (2-3) with one out, stole second and scored when Pecota lined a 3-2 pitch to center.

Angels five-hit Wranglers and grab lead in the West

Staff report

WICHITA, Kan. — Paul Swingle limited the Wranglers to five hits in five innings, and a pair of Midland relievers did the rest as the Angels sailed to a 7-2 Texas League victory here Saturday night and took over sole possession of first place in the Western Division.

Swingle evened his record at 6-6 and Midland downed Wichita for the second straight night behind three perfect innings of relief from Don Vidmar and a hitless ninth by closer Steve Peck.

Midland sent 10 batters to the plate in the first inning and grabbed a 5-0 lead off Wichita starter Royal Thomas. Centerfielder John Jackson, who was 2-for-5 with three RBI, keyed the first inning with a two-run single.

Swingle carried a 7-2 lead into the sixth inning, but got into a bases-loaded jam with nobody out and Vidmar came on in relief.

The big righthander struck out the first Wrangler he faced, and he got the next hitter to bounce back to the mound. Vidmar fired the ball home and catcher Fausto Tejero relayed it to first base for an inning ending double play.

The two teams will go at it again tonight, with Dave Adams (3-8) going against Wichita lefthander Lance Painter (7-3).

The game is scheduled to start at 6:15 p.m. and can be heard on KCRS Radio (550 AM).

Field narrows in Mid-Summer Invite

Lamesa defeated Lubbock 6-4 Saturday in the semifinal round to remain undefeated, and the boys from Tornado Town await the winner of today's game between San Angelo and Lubbock to determine a championship match-up in the first Mid-Summer Invitational baseball tournament.

San Angelo staked winning pitcher Shawn Brown to eight first-inning runs and pounded Abilene 13-3 in Saturday's late game at Angels Stadium, giving San Angelo a crack at Lubbock for the other berth in the title tilt. That game is scheduled for 10 a.m. at Angels Stadium, and the winner will meet Lamesa at the same site in a winner-take-all game at 3 p.m.

In between those games, Midland Red and Midland Blue will clash in the tourney's consolation game, at 12:30 p.m.

The Red team, Friday night victors over Abilene, 3-2, fell to Lamesa 3-0 Saturday morning and dropped a 10-5 decision later Saturday to San Angelo.

The Blue bunch, beaten 14-1 in Friday's opener by San Angelo, also lost an 11-7 game to Abilene on Saturday.

Cubs trade for Daniels

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs, in an attempt to add left-handed punch to their lineup, acquired outfielder Kal Daniels from the Los Angeles Dodgers on Saturday for a player to be named later.

"We needed a left-handed hitter and he has hit well in Wrigley Field," Cubs general manager Larry Himes said. "Basically, we need a hitter. Our pitching and defense have held up well."

Daniels, who has a history of knee problems, will play about five days a week, Himes said.

TENNIS: Mac licking chops

lost in the first round of his last four tournaments.

It came, appropriately, on "People's Saturday," a day of festivity devoted to commoners in T-shirts instead of the elite ticket-holders in blazers and ties, ordinary tennis fans doing the wave and dancing by the Centre Court seats.

"Life is life," Olhovskiy said, betraying not a trace of surprise at his feat.

McEnroe, who sometimes seems larger than life, dispatched Wheaton, a semifinalist last year, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

McEnroe, unseeded, blunted No. 16 Wheaton's serve and baffled him with his assortment of touch volleys. If McEnroe can do the same and continue to control his temper against Olhovskiy, the former three-time champion will reach the quarterfinals for the first time since going out in the semis in 1989.

"If he's capable of beating Jim Courier, he's capable of beating me," said McEnroe, who became the only qualifier ever to reach a Grand Slam semifinal at Wimbledon in 1977.

Everything else on this lovely summer's day seemed perfunctory, even three-time champion Boris Becker's struggle to beat No. 73 Bryan Shelton, 6-4, 3-6, 7-6 (7-5), 7-6 (7-5), and Andre Agassi's 6-3, 7-6 (7-5), 7-5 win against Derrick Rostagno.

Defending women's champion and No. 2 seed Steffi Graf had an unexpectedly tough time beating Mariaan de Swardt, 5-7, 6-0, 7-5, but No. 3 Gabriela Sabatini and No. 6 Jennifer Capriati won easily in straight sets.

Courier's loss was not because of any letdown in effort, nor by any flurry of errors on his part. He had no need to feel embarrassment, and he expressed none. On this day, he simply came up against a good player who transformed himself for one glorious match into a combination of Michael Stich and Stefan Edberg.

Wielding an oversized racket, Olhovskiy hit the sweet spot on nearly every shot, serving deep and hard, putting away volleys with authority, fluidly covering the court and anticipating almost every return.

This from a player had to win three matches in qualifying rounds for one of the 16 open spots. He barely won the last of those three, with a 9-7, fifth-set defeat of No. 250 Mario Tabares.

It's a new feeling for the 26-year-old, who had been virtually abandoned by Soviet tennis authorities in favor of countrymen Andrei Cherkasov, Andrei Chesnokov and Alexander Volkov. The demise of the Soviet Union last year meant a renewal of Olhovskiy's tennis life.

Frost leading Kite by 5 in Buick Classic

Associated Press

PGA

HARRISON, N.Y. — Tom Kite, riding a high after his victory at the U.S. Open, has five shots to make up against leader David Frost at the Buick Classic.

Kite, still glowing from his triumph last week, put himself in position Saturday to join Hale Irwin and Billy Andrade as Buick winners scoring a rare, second consecutive victory.

Irwin won the 1990 Buick immediately after the U.S. Open, while Andrade won the Kemper Open and the Buick title on consecutive weeks last year.

While Kite's 4-under-par 67 at the Westchester Country Club gave him a place in the title chase going into today's final round, he faces an uphill battle. Two other players now separate him from Frost.

Frost, a South African who has led or shared the top spot all the way in this $1 million event, pulled away with a 67 that produced a 202 total, 11 under par on the hilly old course in the northern suburbs of New York City.

Duffy Waldorf was next at 205 after a 69, and was followed by Jeff Maggert at 206 after a 66 that was completed in a shower.

Bill Britton and Fred Funk were tied with Kite at 207, six under par. Britton shot 69 and Funk, who scored his first career victory in Houston earlier this season, matched par at 71.

More Sports, 8B

Lee Janzen and Australian Steve Elkington were at 208. Janzen shot 67 and Elkington 70.

Greg Norman, the star-crossed Australian whose last victory came more than two years ago, scored eight birdies in a round of 65 that he said gave him an opportunity to break his long slump.

"It was the Norman of old," he said after completing three rounds at 209. "I've got a chance to win a golf tournament tomorrow for the first time since April."

Masters champion Fred Couples lost ground in his quest for a fourth victory of the season. Couples shot 72 and was at 210.

Frost, like Norman attempting to break a two-year non-winning string, stretched his lead to three strokes with a two-putt birdie on the 18th, then took a quick look ahead to the final round.

"If you think about it, there's pressure, but you have to go out there and think about it as little as you can and try to keep on doing what you've been doing," he said.

Kite was well aware — and hardly concerned — that he faced a major challenge in attempting to overtake Frost.

Gilbert takes 6-shot lead

Seniors

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gibby Gilbert followed a course-record 62 with a 5-under-par 65 Saturday, seizing a six-shot lead over defending champion Jim Colbert in the $450,000 Southwestern Bell Classic.

Gilbert, who has recorded 14 birdies and one bogey on the 6,496-yard Loch Lloyd Course, tied the Senior PGA Tour record with a 36-hole total of 127.

Colbert, a Kansas City native and crowd favorite, fired a 66 Saturday and was in second place at 133, one shot better than Kermit Zarley, who had a 66 Saturday, and Dick Hendrickson, who had a 68.

At 135 were Larry Laoretti and Dale Douglass.

Gilbert, 51, has not won a tournament since he and former touring pro Grier Jones, an old friend caddying for him this week, took the World Team Championship in 1977.

"It's my tournament to win or lose now," Gilbert said. "If I don't win, shame on me."

Gilbert recorded his only bogey in the the first 36 holes when he took a 4 on the par-3 3rd hole.

"I hit a 3-iron in the bunker and then missed an 8-foot putt," he said. "I thought, 'Oh, no, let's not start this.'"

But he recovered with a 15-foot birdie putt on the par-4 4th hole and made the turn at 11-under. After missing the green on the tough par-4 18th, he chipped to within 18 inches of the pin.

Sheehan dominates Rochester

LPGA

PITTSFORD, N.Y. (AP) — Patty Sheehan's tournament-record 63 gave her an almost insurmountable nine-stroke lead through three rounds of the LPGA Rochester International on Saturday.

Sheehan birdied half of her holes and had no bogeys to finish a stroke better than the single-round record she shared with Alice Ritzman and Dale Eggeling. The 9-under 63 also tied Sheehan's career best round.

Sheehan's 54-hole score of 18-under 198 — nine strokes ahead of second-place Michelle McGann — also beat the previous tournament record after three rounds by four strokes.

McGann, three strokes ahead of Jane Crafter, Dawn Coe and Nancy Lopez, all but conceded the $60,000 first prize to Sheehan, who was quick to caution there was one more round to play.

"You look at a nine-stroke lead and everybody says, 'You've got it in the bag,' but it's not like that," said Sheehan, who needs four more wins to reach 30 career victories and automatic induction into the LPGA's Hall of Fame.

"You still have to go out and play a good solid round of golf," she said. "Any little slipup and someone else can shoot 63. So, the way I look at it, it's not in the bag and I have to go out and work hard tomorrow."

After shooting a 65 Friday to lead after two rounds, Sheehan took up where she left off Saturday. A par on No. 1 was followed by three straight birdies.

A 35-foot birdie putt dropped on No. 6 and a fifth birdie came just before the turn, tying the tournament's front-nine record of 30.

Birdies on Nos. 11, 15, 16 and 17 closed out a round that Sheehan said left her exhausted.

Plan offers hope for education

President Bush's proposal for establishment of a $500 million fund to help pay for the education of youngsters in either public or private school has reopened the debate on school choice in a way and at a time that's certain to be labeled as "political." Charges to that effect were being made last week soon after Bush announced his plan, but nevertheless this is an issue that should be debated.

Bush, who originally campaigned as the "education president," has pushed for school choice as a way to force substantial improvements on schools. The funds, which Bush compared to GI Bill for veterans, could be used in public, private or religious schools which would put public and private schools in the position of competing for federal money.

"Parents must be free to use this money at the school they believe will best teach their child, whether the school is public, private or religious," the president said. That is a critical element of the plan.

Opponents to the president's plan quickly lined up. U.S. Rep. William D. Ford, D-Mich., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, called the Bush plan a "phony promise to gullible people that they're going to be able to take public money and use it to go to a church-related school."

Bob Chase, vice-president of the National Education Association, the largest teachers' union, which is certain to oppose any move toward parental choice in education, said, "It's a political repackaging of old ideas. . . . It's not going to improve educational opportunities for young people."

Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, retorted, "There's not very much you can buy in education for $1,000 a year."

Shanker is correct. A thousand dollars a year won't make much of a dent in a private school's tuition bill, but his comment really doesn't strike at the heart of the matter: improving education.

In Texas, for example, public schools have been losing students to private schools for years although parents who send their children to private or religious schools must pay double for such an education. They pay taxes to support the public schools on the one hand and on the other, send their own children to private schools in the belief that the educational environment is better. For years, in fact, Texas public schools have been stalemated as the result of a court ruling throwing out the old school financing method and the inability of the legislature to devise a new one.

No doubt the president's proposal can be improved upon. One way would be to allow a tax credit to parents who send their children to private school, making up for all or part of the double payment effect that they incur. Another would be to do away with federal regulations choking the public school system. If we truly want to improve education, we need to talk about major reform not just "window dressing."

There are only three requirements for an effective school: Teachers who want to teach, students who want to learn and parents who care. Everything else is extra. That's what the Congress should strive for in enacting legislation along the line of President Bush's plan. Parents should be given the widest possible latitude in educating their children.

Parental choice looks like the best option for improving schools and the president's plan looks like a good starting place.

Advisers say '88 Bush campaign will win

WASHINGTON — "It is 1988 all over again," George Bush told a confidant recently.

Anderson

Recapturing the White House in 1992, some advisers are imploring the president, will require cribbing from the conservative message of the 1988 campaign — down to Old Glory, the pledge of allegiance and prayer in school. If voters liked Bush-Quayle '88, they'll love '92.

Some Bush advisers want to dust off the stump speeches and slogans from the last campaign. Bush is likely to repeat his calls for constitutional amendments dealing with desecration of the flag and school prayer, two wedge issues exploited against Michael Dukakis in 1988.

Bush is being reminded how much political mileage can be gained in pushing the conservative agenda, and needling "the liberals."

"The strongest attacks on Ronald Reagan (by Democrats) were for speeches where he made religious references," one Bush adviser told us. "That drove them crazy."

More to the point, this source says, "It's the one issue Clinton can't fudge. If he says I'm for the prayer amendment, he really alienates liberals. They really care about prayer in the public schools." The strategy is to force Clinton into an uncomfortable box. Perot will be more problematic.

Once again, this year is likely to underscore the widening gap between campaigning and governing, the disparity between the sport and substance of politics. Bush's trumpeting of the flag issue in 1988 did little to prepare him or the country, for example, for the crises that have tested the administration's resolve. Did Bush's frequent visits to flag factories in 1988 help solve foreign policy dilemmas?

Campaigns have become costume parties, and Bush likes to come as a movement conservative. If he wins re-election after campaigning on constitutional amendments, he will orphan these proposals as quickly in a second term as he did in the first. Bush has never shown the stomach to fight for them, and certainly does not have enough votes on Capitol Hill to pass these amendments (as the flop of the balanced budget amendment demonstrates).

"Everything Bush does is for symbolism and posturing. It's pretty incredible when you think that the best thing a president can do won't even happen while he's president," one Democratic strategist said, referring to the many years it takes to win state ratification of a constitutional amendment.

Like 1988, it will be a war fought with loaded metaphors. Proposed constitutional amendments will be tossed around like campaign confetti. Only by firing up the conservative congregation against the "liberal elitists," a la Dan Quayle, will Bush be able to squeak out a narrow victory.

What worries most Republican leaders is not Bill Clinton and Ross Perot but George Bush, a reluctant warrior so far in this race. Two questions are being asked by GOP loyalists: Will George Bush find himself as he did in 1988? Will there be ignition?

Decision trashes community rite, right

WASHINGTON — Forests are still being felled to produce the paper consumed in unending litigation to fend off "establishment of religion" in America. Now the Supreme Court has ruled 5-4 that even nonsectarian invocations and benedictions at public school graduations are unconstitutional. This trashing of a traditional community rite — and right — is a result of judicial obtuseness and arrogance.

Will

Two decades ago the court, inebriated by its ingenuity, concocted a three-part test of "establishment." That test prohibits government action that has a religious purpose, or has the primary effect of advancing or inhibiting religion, or fosters excessive entanglement of government with religion.

This test was an incitement to litigation, and soon the court, wielding its theological micrometer, was ruling that a Hanukkah menorah in Pittsburgh was constitutional because it was near a Christmas tree but a creche down the street was unconstitutional because, unlike a court-approved Rhode Island creche, it did not have enough secular stuff (reindeer, snowmen, Santa's houses) to dilute sufficiently the religious "purpose." Thus were courts forced to make judgments that, a disgusted judge said, are "more commonly associated with interior decorators than with the judiciary."

Hairs were split, then split again. The court ruled that government could help finance maps for parochial schools but not books. A critic wondered: What about atlases — books of maps?

We all wondered: Could Establishment Clause law become sillier? It now has.

Now five justices (Kennedy writing, joined by Blackmun, Stevens, O'Connor and Souter) have added a fourth test of "establishment." They have ruled that a rabbi's prayers at a Rhode Island public junior high school's graduation constituted "psychological coercion." The prayers placed "subtle and indirect public and peer pressure" on unbelievers who, when asked to stand or "maintain a respectful silence," face "the dilemma" of protesting or appearing to participate. The justices say that the possibility that peer pressure would "coerce" someone into doing something for appearances, and someone would falsely appear to be making a religious affirmation, makes the prayers an "establishment" of religion.

Cut more trees, make more paper, summon the lawyers, prepare to litigate such questions as:

Was there unconstitutional coercion in the Pledge of Allegiance that preceded the rabbi's invocation? The Pledge mentions God. Besides, coercion to political orthodoxy — "peer pressure" to recite the pledge — is just as unconstitutional as coercion to religious orthodoxy.

Justice Scalia raises that question in his scathing dissent, joined by Rehnquist, White and Thomas. Scalia notes that three years ago, Justice Kennedy wrote that the meaning of the Establishment Clause "is to be determined by reference to historical practices and understandings." Now Kennedy, who evidently lacks any intellectual compass, finds unconstitutional a tradition as old as public-school graduation ceremonies. The court, Scalia says, has invented "a boundless, and boundlessly manipulable, test of psychological coercion." The court's new "psycho-coercion test" of "establishment" is "as infinitely expandable as the reasons for psychotherapy itself."

Consider this: Is there not suddenly unconstitutional "psychological coercion" toward political orthodoxy in the playing of the national anthem at sporting events?

See you in court.

The court majority, inciting litigation, says it has not addressed the question of whether praying in civic ceremonies involves unconstitutional "psychological coercion" when "mature adults" are involved. The decision surely applies to high schools as well as junior highs. And as Scalia says, high school graduation is so significant precisely because it is regarded as entry into adulthood. He wonders: "Will we soon have a jurisprudence to distinguish between mature and immature adults?" The Washington Post, approving the court's ruling, says it protects "schoolchildren." "Children" who can vote?

Let's litigate!

Liberals can take heart. The court still has a majority of their kind of justices, people incapable of drawing reasonable distinctions, people arguing, with Orwellian logic, that they are reducing "coercion" by stamping out cherished traditions.

George Will's column is distributed by Washington Post Writers Group.

ANOTHER VIEW

Collider falls as scapegoat

Days after failing to pass a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution, the U.S. House carved the $8.25 billion superconducting super collider out of the federal budget.

The already-begun North Texas project has long been controversial, with proponents arguing that it is necessary to keep the United States on the cutting edge of scientific research and opponents who portray it either as an uneconomic boondoggle or an unaffordable frill at a time of $350 billion to $400 billion budget deficits.

What is disheartening about the vote is its timing. As Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and Gov. Ann Richards noted, the rejection of the project follows the failure of the constitutional amendment in the House.

This scientific endeavor should not be an election-year scapegoat for those who worry about having killed the balanced-budget amendment, which polls show is popular with voters.

However, we also must emphasize that if Congress and President Bush seek a comprehensive, serious agreement to cut federal spending, then the super collider belongs on the table with everything else.

As Bush and Congress work to reduce the deficit, spending must be evaluated on its relative merit, not blindly hacked for partisan or regional motives.

— San Antonio Light

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, June 28, the 180th day of 1992. There are 186 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 28, 1914, Austrian Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife, Sofia, were assassinated in present-day Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, by a Serbian revolutionary — the event which triggered World War I.

On this date:

In 1491, England's King Henry VIII was born at Greenwich.

In 1836, the fourth president of the United States, James Madison, died in Montpelier, Va.

In 1939, Pan American Airways began regular trans-Atlantic air service as the "Dixie Clipper" left Port Washington, N.Y., for Portugal.

Clinton brings campaign to life with dumping

Now that Gov. Clinton has dumped Jesse Jackson, President Bush may have to dump Dan Quayle. This has nothing to do with the vice president's inability to spell "potato." George Washington was a terrible speller too, but a pretty good president nevertheless.

Baker

On the other hand, Bush needs a gesture that will make millions see him as decisive and politically courageous. Clinton showed the way by dumping Jackson in the now famous dust-up about Sister Souljah.

By deliberately embarrassing the Rev. Jackson, Clinton was declaring independence from an important branch of his party that has made insistent claims upon recent Democratic nominees.

With this stroke, we are told, Clinton has either (1) thrown away the black vote, which is part of his party's "core" strength, or (2) won the hearts of both working-class whites and family-oriented blacks who don't hold with Sister Souljah's apocalyptic vision of interracial relations.

What's remarkable is that, whereas Clinton's campaign last week was as silent as the grave where it seemed at rest, there is now almost as much talk about Clinton as about Ross Perot.

This raises the question whether Perot may now have to dump somebody, especially if Bush seizes the courage-and-independence initiative by dumping Dan Quayle. It's hard to think of somebody Perot could dump with any chance of making a splash as loud as you get by dumping a Jackson or a Quayle.

He reaped a two-day media uproar recently by hiring Democrat Hamilton Jordan and Republican Ed Rollins as deputy masterminds for his campaign, but these are not the kind of people whose dumping amazes all humanity. I'd guess that Ross Perot will have to dump himself if he wants to keep up with competitors who have the likes of Jesse Jackson and Dan Quayle ripe for the dumping.

Still, one never knows how these things will cut. Dumping himself might set off such a demand for Perot for president that the election would be a mere formality. On the other hand, a lot of people might think that dumping himself showed Perot lacked the famous "fire in the belly" without which, political columnists insist, nobody is fit to be president. Which would be the end of him.

In the meantime, back at the White House where Clinton's Jackson dumping is being watched with, we can assume, the usual total confusion, what might a less than totally confused White House be thinking?

First, it might be struck by the strong parallels between Jackson and Quayle. Each represents a faction within his party that is highly suspect among middle-of-the-road folk.

Jackson represents Democratic liberalism, now denounced by conservatives as "ultra-leftists," "left-liberals," "archliberals" and, by whatever name, the source of all troubles since the Fall. Quayle is the hero of the conservative right with a passion for ideological purity that makes the faithful despise Bush's pragmatism.

Neither crowd has much appeal for the bulk vote, the big middle-of-the-road crowd, which seems to be turned off by both parties but enchanted with Perot, part of whose charm seems to be that he has no ideology whatever.

Logic might argue the case for a Quayle dumping by Bush. As with Clinton's Jackson dumping, it might suggest he is a fellow with the courage to assert his independence of contentious and insistent ideological factions and might revive public credibility in him as a candidate genuinely determined on change.

Dumping also has its dangers, of course. It can justly be said, for example, that Clinton has now played the race card in a calculated effort to win white working-class Democrats back from the Republicans. Sister Souljah made it easy for him, however, with her overwrought rap chants and off-the-cuff oratory extolling bloodshed.

Her art exploits a black rage about American racism which is surely justified. Whether commercial exploitation of it is justified depends on how you feel about throwing around kerosene when your house is on fire. After Jackson accepted her in his Rainbow Coalition, it was easy for Clinton to make him seem like a kerosene salesman.

Jurors did thier job, but did Mark Dettman?

Regarding the June 12th article concerning the lawsuit against Midland County and Thomas Funeral Home, "hoodwinked," Mark Dettman? Yes, the jurors did their jobs. Did Dettman?

As our county attorney, the people have appointed him to look out for our interests. Yet the only testimony presented as defense was from one person who was not in attendance at the actual burial and another who could not see because he was operating heavy equipment and his visibility was limited.

The jury took into consideration the only consistent testimony (that there was water in the grave) and the video of the disinterment. Ms. Jasso's body was discovered two and one-half to three feet beneath the surface, face down. Everyone agreed the particleboard casket was never found (compost because of water saturation?).

There were witnesses to the disinterment, including Dettman and Judge Robert Pine. If there were inconsistencies between the video, as suggested by the defense, and what actually occurred, where were the witnesses?

In order for a jury to properly do its job, the attorneys must properly do their jobs.

We were not "bleeding hearts." Either the jury properly did its job because the attorneys did their jobs or the jury could not do its job because the attorneys did not do their jobs.

Or could it be the county did not have a defense because there was not a defense? Maybe we should have saved the taxpayers' time and money by settling out of court.

I haven't heard word 'fascist' since 1930 s

I have been attacked. "You're a Fascist" (Letters, June 7th). Gee whiz! I haven't heard that expression since undergraduate school in the 1930's during the days of Il Duce Mussolini. At that time there were always a few psuedo-intellectual sophomores who would hurl that epithet when they ran out of thoughts and words. Most of them grew out of it by the time they became seniors. But some did not. They and their generation afterward became activists with imaginary slights, taking them to the courts to secure special privileges and rights for their particular ethnic group which are not now sustained by the common folk founding father citizen.

I don't know how the NRA got into the matter. It was a non-sequitur which is the most I can say.

My detractor was correct. It is ridiculous to blame the poor for crime, had I done so, which I did not. I will give that no further dignity of denial. It was just a shotgun allegation. But that is always the way of the activist.

Family thanks people, organization for support

It would be impossible for me to contact each person and organization who offered us their love, support, gifts of food, time, babysitting or just a sympathetic ear in the loss of our mother — Melle May. We are eternally grateful to each and every one.

To us, she was just "our Mom," a regular person who we looked to for unconditional love and support. To "her vets," she was obviously so much more. It's sometimes very difficult to understand what special people our parents are until we lose them and see the emotion and hear the wonderful words expressed by those they dealt with and associated with on a daily basis. Mom was one of those special people. She fought relentlessly for what she believed in and never backed down from a fight. The loss is not only ours but that of all those she fought for. We share our loss with you. She wasn't just "our Mom" anymore, but your crusader as well.

Mom would have had a fit with all the ceremony associated with her death and the honor bestowed upon her by the Midland County Commissioners. She'd have told us, "Use the money more wisely but put forth more of an effort to gain more veterans benefits. Give it to the vets; they deserve it much more than I do."

Here is a short article I sent Mom a few years back. She told me that it reflected her deepest feelings. Please share it with your readers.

"Thoughts on America" by William Arthur Ward:

"I believe in America.

"I believe it became great because of its faith in God, its hope for independence, and its love of freedom.

"I am grateful for America's glorious past; I am awed by its unbelievable present; I am confident of its limitless future.

Project Graduation was tremendous success

Project Graduation, Midland's alcohol and drug free party for city-wide high school graduates, was a tremendous success. The all night affair would have been impossible to accomplish without the support of involvement of hundreds of local caring people. Midland should be especially appreciative to the hard-working parent committee.

The unselfish giving and participation in Project Graduation by Midland's businesses, parents, teachers and other residents was overwhelming. Thank you also Reporter-Telegram for your generous repeat coverage of this important annual event. Reporter-Telegram support is a key ingredient to Project Graduation's continual success.

We would like to give special recognition to Mario Pena, Reporter-Telegram Advertising Director, and Becky Montgomery, National Advertising Coordinator, for their help, time, and expertise; and thanks to everyone else at the Reporter-Telegram who contributed to the publicity of Project Graduation.

Kathy Armstrong, chairman of Project Graduation from Lee High School, and Carole Betton, chairman from Midland High School, join me in saying thanks.

City is trying to edge out Premier Parking

In regard to the June 17th article in which the City of Midland expressed its intention of beginning an advertising campaign on its parking facility, I am compelled to voice my view. It has been obvious since inception of our company, that the city's wish is for Premier Parking to meet its demise.

It has illustrated this desire by fighting our initial opening and then imposing a special 10 percent tax on our revenues, plus assessing a fee on each shuttle we use to transport our customers. The tax, which was levied in other municipalities, has been ruled improper by several courts across the country.

On the surface these plans may seem like healthy competition, but the underlying motive should be viewed as another action by city officials to perpetuate their own careers at the expense of taxpayers and ultimately, my 25 employees.

We will be the first to admit that the city could drive us out of the market with use of taxpayer funds, but before taking advantage of these incentives, remember, we offer services that they should have had available years ago, plus we were the first to say "Thank You" by establishing better prices.

Limbaugh is going too far being conservative

There's something on the radio station at 1510 AM that bothers me. Yet, it stays on for three dreadful hours.

I know I could turn it off or go to another station to not listen to Rush Limbaugh. He is such a arrogant, asinine and conceited person. He says he is on loan from God. Well, I don't think so. But maybe God does have a $1 life insurance policy on him and will redeem it tomorrow. I can't believe people listen to him and believe and enjoy what he has to say. There's nothing wrong with being conservative, but I think Limbaugh goes way overboard.

I guess I'll just stick to listening to Paul Harvey for the radio news.

Money spent on lottery could go to better cause

Thanks John Nichols for your letter to the editor in the June 23rd Reporter-Telegram. The amount of money raised during the first week of the lottery sales in the Midland-Odessa area was almost obscene — and in a depressed economy!

Likewise, the amount raised over last weekend nationally for the showing of the latest Batman movie. It's true people find time and money to spend on what they want. Too bad it's all so self centered while the world suffers.

If we can raise that much cash for pleasure, just think what great things we could accomplish if we could get together and focus on some of the needs in our society instead of waiting for the government to set up a program.

Upcoming ballot will offer presidential alternatives

If a president sells arms, plus technical equipment which can be used for chemical and/or nuclear weapons, then only a few months later claims that the head of the state to which he sold such equipment is a "modern day Hitler," can you possibly believe him when he preaches morality and honesty?

This is the case with our present presidency, and I find no way at all that you can all him honest.

Fortunately there are alternatives to this war monger on the presidential ballot come November.

Government is using ruthless, unfair force

I presume the law you refer to "as no man being above" in the editorial of June 17th is the unalienable laws of nature and God that are mentioned in the Declaration of Independence and supposedly guaranteed in that (to quote Ross Perot) "darn (US) Constitution."

You say "For as long as we are vigilant to ensure that truth, our society will exist. Once that protection is lost, we will all be doomed to the merciless whims of those who rule by ruthless force."

What protection do you refer to? The one "guaranteed" in the 2nd Amendment? The one the second, third and fourth estates so want removed from that "darn Constitution?" Our government has done this to us while we are armed. Can you even imagine what it would be like if there were no armed public?

Has it occurred to you that we are already ruled by a government using "ruthless force?" Just try to start a business and hire one person without getting licenses, permits, tax papers, permission to operate where you want or without the "proper" or "official" notices; try to not pay taxes to support clinics, boondoggles, education programs you disapprove of, art you dislike, the military/industrial complex, the S&L or Chrysler bailouts, etc.; try to educate your children at home or where you want; try to offer your services or goods above or below the government's set limits.

Hopefully by now you are coming to realize why the people are tired and angry. Government already consumes 47 percent of our gross national product. Add in the time spent complying with the laws they have shackled us with to guarantee their cut of our property and it's over 50 percent. Now they want more for health care. The solution is less government.

Government has no business in schools (remember when "independent" school districts were?), licensing, wage requirements, farm subsidies (we subsidize both tobacco and the campaign against it), loans, banking, victimless crime, etc. We must return to depending on ourselves.

The Libertarian Party has the answers and they are the most compassionate and fair of any offered. The Midland County LP's address is Box 824, Midland, Tx. 79702. It is your life and property that is threatened by deficit spending and the regulations of the bureaucrats. This year is your chance to stop it.

Morality means doing everything to stop slaughter everywhere

World leaders drown in crises and killing — from Cambodia to South Africa to Eastern Europe. Institutions now in place lack the cohesiveness and strength to support effective intervention. Western leaders themselves do not have the will or the political backing or the money to act decisively and are overwhelmed by their own domestic troubles. Not least, the international crises — rooted in centuries of ethnic, racial and religious bloodletting — seemingly defy solution.

Gelb

Morality requires doing everything possible to stop slaughter everywhere. Practicality dictates an awful kind of international triage, choosing whom to save and whom to let die.

Leaders today do their best to evade both the moral imperatives and the practical choices. They muddle along, forgiving themselves with the thought that little can be done and hoping voters ignore bodies piling up.

Muddling is often sound. But where civil wars will sweep continents, produce tidal waves of refugees, disrupt trade and topple stable governments, it is the worst course. At the U.N. or through NATO, world leaders have to begin making moral and practical choices, as best they can, to head off and stop the killing that will otherwise engulf them all.

There is no doubt that if the United States tomorrow called for Western air and naval intervention in the Yugoslav civil wars, many European governments would join in immediately. That shows Europe's problem with intervening is not so much one of philosophy as of responsibility and leadership. The Japanese suffer from a similar attitude.

This deficiency in Euro-Japanese leadership puts far too great a burden on Washington to do the right thing. The United States no longer has the money, the will or the threatened vital interests to assume such a worldwide leadership role.

Most world leaders failed to see this because of the American-led Persian Gulf war. They assumed that this would be the model for future collective action. But on the contrary, the war effort demonstrated just how difficult it was for the United States to take the lead, let alone draw guns — even where dangers were clear and present.

Waiting for Washington won't work. Nor should Washington expect West Europeans and Japanese to step forward and take the leadership heat.

All parties need the cover of collective decisions, and the U.N. is the best place for that. In a little remarked upon initiative last week, Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali called upon members to make armed forces available on permanent and temporary terms to the U.N.

The big powers, including Russia and China, should address urgently the Boutros-Ghali blueprint for peacekeeping and peacemaking forces and for preventive diplomacy.

Above all, the big powers have to begin thinking together about crisis diplomacy and military intervention. It would be utterly irresponsible — and dangerous — for them simply to wring their hands and watch the blood flow and spread.

Justices are proving independent of conservative thinking

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — In historic decisions, some U.S. Supreme Court justices are proving far more independent of strictly conservative philosophy than was anticipated when they were appointed by President Bush and former President Reagan.

One of the latest examples this past week was the Supreme Court's startling decision to open wide the door to lawsuits against the tobacco industry by smokers or relatives claiming health damage from cigarettes. In another case the court reaffirmed its ban on prayer in public schools.

These actions convinced me the majority of Supreme Court justices were voting on the basis of wisdom rather than ideology. That, I found, very gratifying. Following is the report to me on these developments from Joe Kingsbury-Smith, our Washington-based national editor:

Supreme Court Chief Justice William R. Rehnquist and Justice Anthony M. Kennedy joined such Republican moderates as Justices Sandra Day O'Connor, a Reagan appointee, and David H. Souter, a Bush appointee, in supporting the health-damage suit against cigarette producers. In a separate opinion, Justice Kennedy even joined Souter and liberal Justice Harry A. Blackmun in declaring that smokers should have greater latitude in filing suits against tobacco companies.

The decisions overturned rulings by a federal appeals court denying a health-damage claim by the family of a New Jersey woman, Rose Cipollone, who died from lung cancer in 1984 after smoking for 42 years. The Wall Street Journal said that in addition to a major financial impact on the tobacco industry, the Supreme Court's decision could lead to the new danger that other industries — including car makers, pharmaceuticals, chemicals and pesticides — might face huge jury awards for damages.

Indicating that he can be a nonideological conservative on some extremely controversial issues, Justice Kennedy assumed leadership in writing the Court's majority opinion to reaffirm its opposition to prayer in public schools. It was a much closer decision, 5-to-4, than the 7-to-2 vote in the cigarette case.

Although he is a Reagan appointee, Justice Kennedy took a very liberal stand in rejecting the Bush administration's appeal to the court to adopt a standard permitting a greater role for religion in public life.

He did so, basically, to maintain the wall of separation between church and state. Since most Americans favor a belief in God and do not object to nonsectarian, particularly silent, prayer in schools, it was a courageous step for a conservative Supreme Court justice to take.

O'Brien gaffes pole vault

Associated Press

Track

NEW ORLEANS — What was "to be settled at Barcelona" was settled at New Orleans.

It's Dave, not Dan.

The battle for the title as "The World's Greatest Athlete," between Dave Johnson and Dan O'Brien, expected to be decided in the demanding decathlon next month at Barcelona, became academic Saturday.

O'Brien's chance for a spot on the U.S. Olympic team and a world record in the decathlon ended when he failed to clear a height in the pole vault.

O'Brien, 25, the American record-holder and the 1991 world champion, was rolling along on pace to break the world record of 8,847 points, set by Daley Thompson of Britain at the 1984 Olympics, before encountering unexpected difficulties in the vault at the U.S. Olympic trials.

That opened the way for the more experienced Johnson, 29, who was trailing badly in second place, to go on and win the decathlon with a meet-record 8,649 points, and lead the three-man U.S. decathlon team onto Barcelona.

The heartbroken O'Brien finished 11th with 7,856 points, his worst performance since 1988.

O'Brien's shocking failure put a serious crimp in Reebok's $20-$25 million "Dan and Dave" television ad campaign featuring the two premier decathletes.

When it was determined that O'Brien had no chance to make the team after his disaster in the vault, NBC, which was televising the trials, pulled the TV commercials, said John Gillis, director of marketing and communications for Reebok.

"The campaign is definitely not dead," Gillis said. "The campaign continues. It just needs a slight adjustment.

"We're devastated, devastated for Dan in particular. We always knew there was a risk in this."

"Dan is an extraordinarily gifted young athlete who no doubt will rebound from this experience," said Ford Ennals, president of Reebok. "Our commitment to him will continue and we look forward to his continued success and his participation in next year's World Championships.

"Our current marketing plans are to focus on Dave Johnson and his quest for Olympic gold in Barcelona and the continued support of Dan O'Brien and the decathlon."

Ennals also said O'Brien had an incentive clause in his contract that would have given him more money for winning a medal at Barcelona.

The decathlon was one of three finals Saturday. In the others, Mike Stulce, who returned from a drug suspension this year, won the shot put at 70-5¼, the second-best in the world this year, and NCAA champion Tonya Hughes took the women's high jump at 6-3½.

World shot put leader Gregg Tafralis failed to make the team, finishing fourth at 67-7½.

Reebok cancels campaign

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Ten minutes after Dan O'Brien lost the Battle of New Orleans, Reebok dumped the war in Barcelona.

O'Brien, who along with Dave Johnson was featured in the company's television commercials asking who the greatest athlete in the world is, failed to make the decathalon team when he failed to clear any height in the pole vault on Saturday.

"We got to the NBC people immediately after the pole vault," said John Gillis, director of marketing and communications for Reebok. "As soon as (decathalon expert) Frank Zarnowski said he felt it would be impossible for Dan to make the team we pulled the commercial — about 10 minutes."

Reebok had spent between $20 million and $25 million on the advertising campaign consisting of 15 commercials as well as distribution of T-shirts, fans, hats and buttons touting the battle between the athletes, which was "To Be Settled In Barcelona."

"We haven't spent more on an athlete-centered campaign," Gillis said.

Nor has one paid off any better.

On Saturday, as O'Brien watched his Olympic dream shatter, the stands were jammed with people wearing Dan and Dave shirts, hats and buttons and waving cardboard fans emblazoned with the athletes' names and Reebok's.

The commercials will be replaced with one featuring Boston Red Sox pitcher Roger Clemens and Canadian Football League star Raghib "Rocket" Ismail, Ennals said.

Two more Dan and Dave commercials had been planned between the trials and the Olympics. They have been canceled.

Tiny Griffin shows gold mettle

Boxing

PHOENIX (AP) — The smallest man on the U.S. Olympic boxing team showed again Saturday why he may be America's biggest gold medal threat in Barcelona.

Diminutive Eric Griffin ignored sweltering desert heat to walk through yet another opponent and capture the 106-pound spot on the Olympic boxing squad.

The two-time world champion, who lost a chance to make the 1988 team when he tested positive for marijuana, dominated Bradley Martinez to take a 70-14 decision in the Olympic Box-offs and earn an Olympic bid.

"I've always wanted a gold medal around my neck," Griffin said. "I don't think anyone in the world can beat me at 106 pounds."

He may be right.

Griffin, ranked No. 1 in the world, has lost only once since 1988 and won both the 1989 and 1991 World Championships. He is the only boxer on the U.S. team who is a reigning world champion.

Five other boxers also earned spots on the team during the second day of the box-offs, including Oscar De La Hoya, considered one of the other top U.S. prospects at 132 pounds.

"I'm bringing home the gold," De La Hoya said after beating Patrice Brooks 50-16.

Eleven of the 12 Olympic Trials boxers won their matches, leaving only the light heavyweight team spot in question. That will be settled today when Montell Griffin meets Jeremy Williams in a rematch of their fight Friday that Griffin narrowly won.

If Griffin wins again, it will cap an improbable scenario that began when he threatened to sue after not being named Williams "most notable opponent" for the box-offs. U.S. boxing officials relented and had Griffin fight his own little box-off earlier in the week to

The most controversial fight came at 147 pounds, where Pepe Reilly, a college student from Glendale, Calif., eked out a 39-35 decision over Jesse Briseno of Kalamazoo, Mich.

U.S. women rout Brazil in exhibition play, 103-75

Basketball

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Katrina McClain scored 19 points to lead six double-figure scorers as the United States beat Brazil 103-75 Saturday in an exhibition matchup of women's teams which have already qualified for the Barcelona Games.

The win came in what had been described as a grudge match for the United States.

Brazil beat the U.S. in the qualifying round of last summer's Pan Am Games to end a 43-game winning streak in international competition and then went on to take the gold medal to end America's nine-year hold on international championships.

The United States seemed comfortably in control throughout the first half until Brazil closed it with a 9-4 run that cut the U.S. lead to 55-50 at intermission.

The U.S. team took control again in the second half by taking advantage of its speed with pressure defense that forced turnover after turnover. McClain made all eight of her shots from the field as the United States dominated inside on the way to 56 percent shooting (44 for 78).

Seven-period day flunks out at MHS

■ Statistics in a MISD grade report lead administrators to believe that a required seven-period for MHS students is too rigorous.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Almost 40 percent of the sophomores at Midland High School finished the second semester with at least one failing grade. Nearly 27 percent of their peers at Lee High School also received at least one "F" on their report cards.

However, 26 percent of MHS sophomores also received at least one "A," compared to almost 28 percent at LHS, according to a grade distribution report released by Midland Independent School District.

In 1991-92, almost 35 percent of the LHS sophomore enrollment failed at least one class, compared to 36 percent of the MHS sophomore enrollment that year.

While it appears dramatic that 13 percent more of the MHS sophomore enrollment failed at least one class than their LHS counterparts the second semester this year, administrators point out that MHS students were required to take an additional class during the mandatory seven-period day pilot program.

"Lee High School students had a voluntary seventh period. At Midland High School, if a student was not involved in government or athletic activities, that student was required to take an extra class," said Ricardo Torres, MISD executive director of secondary education.

Torres said the extra course load was too much for some students, which contributed to MHS Principal Jane Carrens requesting Midland school board trustees approve making the seventh period an option rather than a requirement.

"The failure rate this year is higher than it has ever, ever been," Ms. Carrens said. "I just cringed when I saw it. All year long the failure rate showed a significant increase. The mandatory seven-period day really created a problem this year. We thought some of the students would take fun courses, but they some took courses where the curriculum proved to be too rigorous for them."

The seven-period day was a pilot program which was in place when Ms. Carrens took the helm as principal last year.

Next year it will be optional for MHS students.

Ms. Carrens said she used the grade report as an indicator that a change should be made. Torres said the semester grade report is given to school principals to be used as "a monitoring tool."

"Principals use the report as a means of looking at and making a quick check of the overall instruction program. They examine any types of trends evolving," he said.

"It gives them a picture of how the different departments and classes are faring in terms of student success. We can also see, for example, if a lot of students in a low-level math course (which won't be offered next year) are making "As," it can tell me that — perhaps — we have some students that might benefit if they were moved to a higher-tier class."

Torres said students failing the same course taught by several different teachers indicates that the curriculum is demanding. If students fail a course taught by one teacher, but pass it when it is taught by another, then principals question the methodology of teaching.

For the second semester, 23 percent of Lee freshman students failed one class, compared to 27 percent at MHS.

About 28 percent of Alamo Junior High School students failed at least one course, compared to almost 18 percent at Goddard and almost 26 percent at San Jacinto.

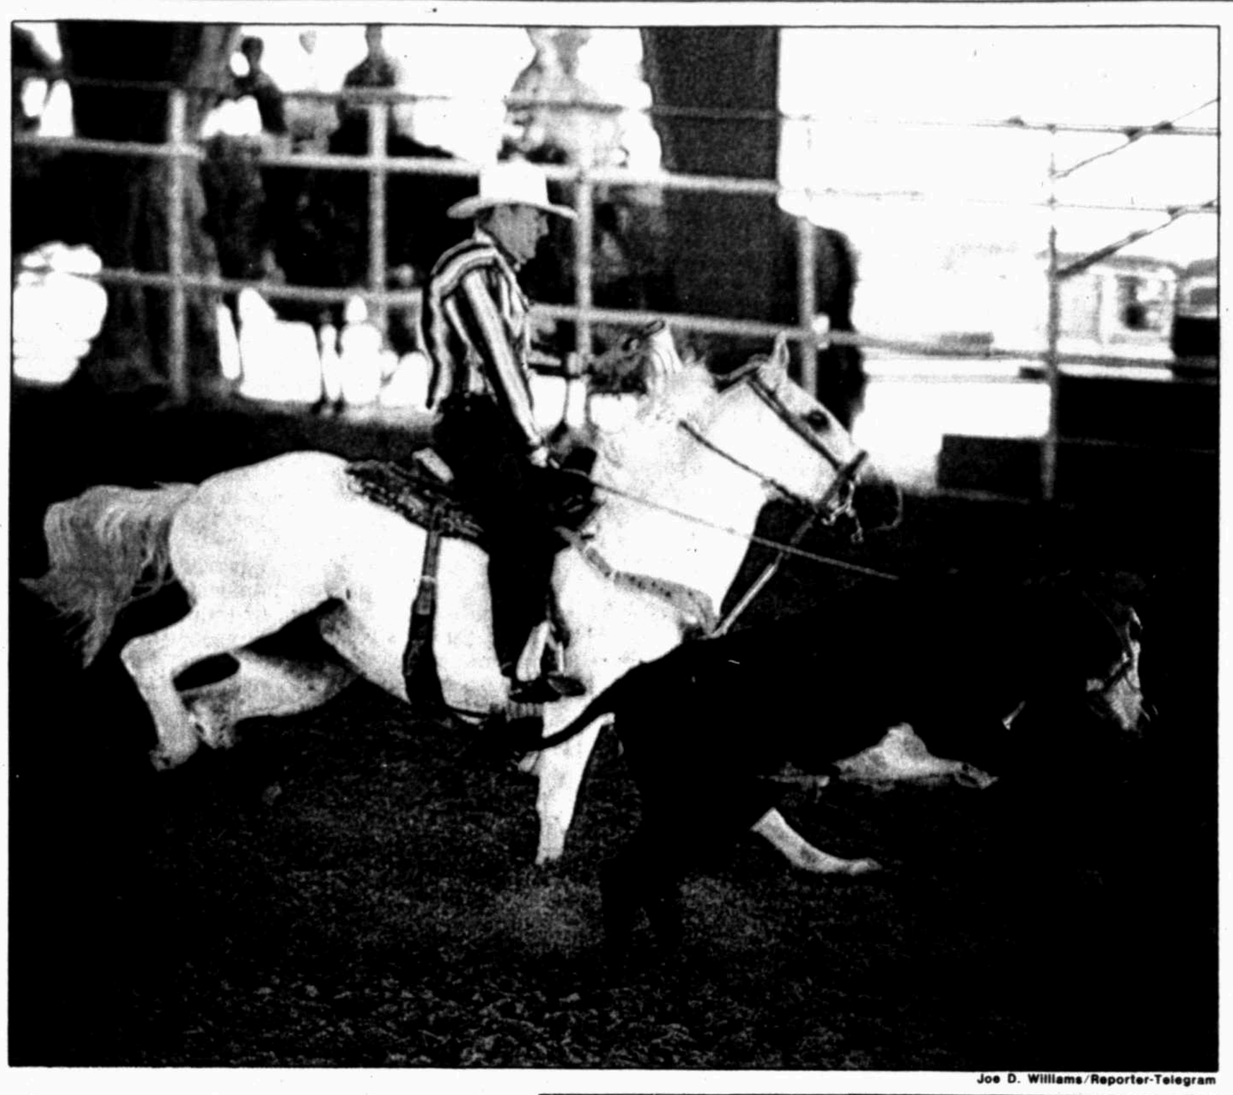

At the elementary school level, significant differences in the percentages of students failing were reported in second grade for the last six-week period of the second semester. Less than three percent of second graders failed at least one class at Fannin, compared to 32 percent at DeZavala.

However, by the third grade, DeZavala students passed classes at the same rate of their peers district-wide.

Dorsey Rushing, executive director of elementary operations, said second graders at DeZavala could have had language problems since so many of them are bilingual.

"Or that specific group of kids may have had trouble. When you are looking at a

Bailiffs make call for defendant, law

■ Law requires that bailiffs must call the name of person who fails to appear for court at the courthouse door.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

There was a time when a court bailiff would call out a criminal defendant's name three times on the courthouse steps as a requirement for a bond forfeiture.

That time still exists.

"The law says a person who fails to appear, that their name shall be called at the courthouse door," said Judge John Hyde, 238th District Court.

The law books define the courthouse door as "the principal entrances to the house provided by the proper authority for the holding of the district court."

Bailiffs for the three state district courts in Midland use the main entrance at the top of the south-side steps of the Midland County Courthouse.

"When you're out there yelling to an empty yard, you feel a little bit silly but it's a requirement and you do it," said W. Kelley, bailiff for Judge Dean Rucker's 318th District Court.

On Friday morning following four no-shows for an arraignment and pre-trial hearings, Kelley took to the courthouse steps.

"I thought he wasn't all there," said a man standing on the steps during a break from jury duty. "I was wondering who he was talking to."

Like that bystander, most keep their wonderment to themselves.

"They'll turn around, but most are usually polite and don't say anything," Kelley said.

After the name calling, bailiffs sign a certificate that states "... I did on the steps of the courthouse of said County proceed to call dis-

Everyone is pulling for that 'cute little princess'

Ott

It embarrasses me to no end to admit this publicly, but I find myself becoming increasingly intrigued by the latest controversy surrounding Princess Di and the Royal Family.

In short, I am abuzz with curiosity.

It all started two weeks ago when the British tabloids, whose flair for the dramatic apparently makes our National Enquirer seem like the Wall Street Journal, began printing excerpts from a new book depicting the 30-year-old princess as being horribly depressed and even suicidal over her marriage to Prince Charles, that rather homely looking gent who, despite his physical limitations, will someday become King of England.

The thing that caught everyone's attention, of course, was the word "suicidal." It is one thing to be depressed about your marriage, it is quite another to contemplate killing yourself because of that unhappiness.

I'm not making light of the situation. If we are to believe the news accounts, and they have not been denied by anyone of significance, what is happening to the princess is indeed tragic. She reportedly has attempted to take her life on five different occasions, once by hurling herself down the stairs at Sandringham Palace.

The revelations sent shock waves throughout the world.

But now comes the ugly part.

Prince Charles, at least according to published reports, apparently has taken a rather indifferent approach to his wife's inner turmoil. He has accused her of "crying wolf" and of "faking" her emotional problems.

Indeed, he has all but said, "I can't be bothered. I'm off to the polo matches."

This, quite naturally, has not cast the would-be king in the best of light. In the eyes of many he has become something of a villain in this ongoing soap opera. People who normally would have no interest in the Royal Family are suddenly sitting up and taking notice.

And almost unanimously, they are siding with — and I quote — "that cute little princess."

I know I am.

Maybe it is because she is the shy commoner who suddenly finds herself thrust into the limelight. Or perhaps it is the simple elegance with which she moves about in public.

But for whatever the reason, more and more people are finding it difficult not to be attracted to the Divine Miss Di. If a worldwide poll were to be taken, in fact, I suspect she would be leading the "royal field" by landslide proportions. Her popularity is at an all-time high. In newspaper lingo, she is what we call "hot copy." She is on a roll, "the only game in town."

What surprises me more than anything, though, is that I am even following this silly mess. I mean, we're talking about a group of people here with whom I have nothing in common. Best I can tell, all they do is ride around in carriages and wave to their "subjects." They do wear hats, which I find charming, but other than that I fail to see much redeeming value in their existence.

Still, I'm sitting here pulling for Princess Di.

And "pulling for" is exactly the right phrase.

It has become a game to me. Prince Charles vs. Princess Di. Men against Women. Husband vs. Wife. Him against Her.

And, yes, I'm siding with the female. No doubt about it. She's right. He's wrong. So take that all of you wild-eyed feminists who in the past have so cavalierly accused me of being an insensitive, uncaring male chauvinist.

Let it be duly noted here and now, that I, Gary Ott, dashing man about town, staunch opponent of lasting and meaningful relationships of all kinds, is officially going on record as fervently — yes fervently — supporting the woman's point-of-view in this landmark battle of the sexes.

Prince Charles is dead wrong. The idea that a husband would be so selfish as to place the importance of a mindless polo match over the needs of his wife is unconscionable, unfathomable and, most of all, unforgivable.

The man should be ashamed of himself. A polo match. I mean, really.

Now, of course, if we were talking golf it would be a different matter altogether.

Gary Ott is managing editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

DEATHS

Fred Woodruff

MONAHANS — Services for Fred Patterson "Arkie" Woodruff, 66, longtime Monahans resident, are set for 11 a.m. Monday at Immanuel Baptist Church with the Rev. Morris Johnson officiating. Burial will follow in Monahans Cemetery under the direction of Harkey-Wilson Funeral Home.

Woodruff died Thursday at a Monahans hospital after a sudden illness.

He was born Aug. 24, 1925, in Missouri. He married Vera Mae Montgomery May 3, 1952 in Odessa. She preceded him in death Nov. 11, 1986.

Woodruff retired from Mobil after 35 years. He was a 26-year member of the Monahans Volunteer Fire Department, where he had served as Fire Marshall. He was a member of the Wagon Masters and the Immanuel Baptist Church.

Survivors include: two sons, Fred M. Woodruff of San Angelo and Eldon Woodruff of Monahans; two daughters, Theressa Pinter of Morenci, Ariz. and Roena Thurman of Monahans; one brother, Eugene Woodruff of Holly Grove, Ark.; his companion, Janette Burke of Monahans and six grandchildren.

Dudley Anderson

Services for Dudley Anderson, 88, of Midland are set for 3 p.m. Monday in Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Tom Craiker of Bellview Church of Christ in Stanton officiating. Burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery in Stanton under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Anderson died Friday in a local hospital.

He was born Oct. 4, 1903, in Stanton, where he attended school and married Maggie Mae Gibson on Nov. 26, 1925. They farmed until 1934, when he started his own trucking business. In 1956 he moved to Irving and worked for Merchants Fast Motor Lines. He returned to Stanton in 1961 and worked for the Co-op Gin until 1976, when he retired. He moved to Midland in 1986.

Anderson was preceded in death by his wife in 1989 and a daughter, Mary Frances Anderson Boyce, in 1991.

Survivors include: one daughter, Eulene Holder of Midland; one sister, Viola Parker of Stanton; four grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Pallbearers will be David Holder, Ricky Roderick, Oliver Boyce, Pete Morrison, Damon Boyce and Sid Sanders. Honorary Pallbearers are Douglas Church, Dan Saunders, Roy Keel and Lee Graves.

Memorials should be directed to the Martin County Museum.

Martha Czech

TUCSON, Ariz. — Services for Martha Pauline Czech, 91, mother of Midland Police Chief Richard Czech, are planned at St. Odelia's Catholic Church, with local arrangements by Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Czech died Saturday at a local hospital.

She was born June 18, 1901, in Danzig, Germany and came to the United States in 1928 with her husband, Steven Czech, and two sons, John and Curt. They settled in Port Huron, Mich. and had another son, Richard.

Mrs. Czech started a sewing guild at St. Odelia's Catholic Church in Tucson that still bears her name — Martha's Circle.

She was preceded in death by her husband and son Curt.

Survivors include: two sons, Richard Czech of Midland and John Czech of Tucson; 12 grandchildren, 25 great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Memorials should be sent to Hospice of Midland.

Lisa Smith

Services for Lisa Loveless Smith, 27, formerly of Midland, are set for 9 a.m. Monday at St. Ann's Catholic Church with the Rev. Fred Nawarskas officiating. Visitation will be until 9 p.m. today at Ellis Funeral Home. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Smith

Mrs. Smith died Tuesday.

She was born March 23, 1965, in Odessa, where she grew up and graduated from Permian High School in 1984.

She married Lance A. Smith Oct. 3, 1984, in Taos, N.M. They lived in Midland until September 1991 when he was transferred to Aberdeen, Scotland.

Mrs. Smith was preceded in death by a daughter, Stephanie Smith.

Survivors include: her husband, Lance Smith of Aberdeen, Scotland; one son, Lige Smith, Aberdeen, Scotland; her parents, Jesse and Nelda Loveless of Odessa; one brother, Steve Loveless of Watango; one sister, Jan Molder of Midland and her grandmother, Jewel McEnroe of Stephenville.

Mary Jaggers

Services for Mary Evelyn Jaggers, 70, of Midland are set for 1 p.m. Monday in Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Jarrell Sharp of St. Luke's United Methodist Church officiating. Burial will be at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Jaggers died Saturday in a local hospital after several years of poor health.

She was born Jan. 22, 1922, in Green City, Mo. After graduating high school, she attended beauty college there and became an instructor.

She married Billie B. Jaggers on Jan. 22, 1944 in Kirksville, Mo. They moved to Odessa in 1946 and to Midland seven years later.

She was a member of the Eastern Star in Midland and the White Shrine in Missouri. She was a charter member of the Lady's Oriental Shrine in Midland and attended the First Baptist Church. She worked in her husband's office as a nurse, secretary and lab technician.

Survivors include: her husband, Billie B. Jaggers of Midland; a daughter, Lou Dena Ryon of Midland; three grandchildren, one niece and one nephew.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Shrine Crippled Children's Hospital in Houston, the Shrine Burn Institute in Galveston or the Scottish Rite Hospital in Dallas.

PILOTS: Solos, carrier landings highlight careers of Kingsville Naval Air Station, where Coombes trained before piloting a Grumman F6F Hellcat and going on carrier duty. Meanwhile, Edwards was flying SNJs at nearby Waldron Field before he was flying the Grumman FM-2 Wildcat, Hellcat and Chance Vought F4U Corsair off aircraft carriers in the Pacific Theater.

Their first carrier landings were on the Great Lakes.

"It's like going home," Edwards, a geologist, said of the reunion flight. "It's a terrific treat."

Coombes, a retired petroleum engineer, said that naval reunions "are a pleasure to go to. You renew old times. You tell the same lies," he quipped, "but you tell them in a different way so that they sound new. They have a grain of truth to them."

Edwards said that when they went through aviation-cadet training, "we didn't know one day to the other if we were going to get through the program or not. The washout rate was high."

In 1944, Coombes and Edwards were "just a little after (President) George Bush" in his flight training, Edwards recalled. "He was a skinny naval-aviation cadet down there the same time we were, but he went into politics and never heard from him."

Edwards' wartime personal pinnacle was earning his aviator's wings.

"It felt like a miracle had just been granted," he said, "because I never felt like I was going to make it until the last minute. I remember looking over my shoulders, and I saw these ensign shoulderboards on there, and I snapped around. 'Ain't that wonderful,' he reflected. " 'That's me.' "

Coombes said that "the biggest thrill of my life was the first solo, which happened to be in a little ol' 85-horsepower Luscombe" high-wing airplane in the Navy's Civilian Pilot Training (CPT) program in California in 1943.

"The second biggest thrill was making that first carrier landing in 1944" on the Great Lakes in the SNJ. "It didn't matter what (type of airplane) it was. It was the only game in town. From there, getting your wings was certainly a high point," Coombes said. "Everything else has been downhill."

The SNJ was the Navy's designation of North American Aviation's advanced trainer, which the U.S. Army Air Corps called the AT-6 Texan and which the Canadians called the Harvard.

During the war, George Bush flew the single-engine torpedo bomber, the Grumman Avenger, off of aircraft carriers, and he, like Edwards, was shot down by enemy fire.

Edwards, who scored aerial victories, was knocked out of the sky and into the drink twice by enemy fighters while flying the Wildcat and the more powerful Corsair. He went down another time due to engine failure in a Wildcat. Edwards served aboard the aircraft carriers Corregidor, Lexington, Kitkun Bay, and Ticonderoga.

Coombes served on aircraft carriers Ranger and Takanis Bay. At war's end in August 1945, Coombes was serving with Air Group VF-15 offshore of Hawaii while preparing to join the Pacific Fleet for the invasion of Japan. He never got into World War II combat.

"I was at the time (disappointed)," Coombes said. "I made peace with myself, and it's not too bad now."

Though their lives paralleled in many respects, Coombes and Edwards did not meet each other until the mid-1980s at a New Mexico air show even though both had been in Midland since the 1950s.

"We both flunked out of college at the same time and got into the Navy," Edwards recalled.

They each went through the Navy's CPT program in California in 1943. Edwards soloed in the Piper Cub and Coombes, in the Luscombe.

"We were at the same bases a lot of times" in various stages of earning their aviation wings, Edwards said. "There were thousands of others, so we didn't get to know each other until" the mid-1980s after both had returned to college at war's end, earned degrees, ended up in Midland in the 1950s, and still pursued their love of flying.

Edwards' wartime duty was to "fly and stay alive" in combat. And time in a friendly port, he said in a moment of levity, was "to find out where the best bars and pretty girls were."

Once the war was over, Edwards said, there was "just a letdown of the high-speed emotional life of the wartime. It was just hyper all of the time," he said of wartime duty in combat zones at sea.

"You lived at a high level — just at the limit all of the time. In flying, your adrenaline is pumping," Edwards said.

"There's a tremendous amount of excitement, being caught up in a major crusade ... in the war," Edwards said, "and then, all of a sudden, it's over with. There is tremendous letdown. Getting back to normal is quite an adjustment."

For Coombes, the end of the war was neither total letdown nor complete euphoria.

"The job was over for people like myself who hadn't got into the combat area," Coombes said. "It was a little bit of a letdown after two years of training. However, I certainly was happy to get home. It was the euphoria of coming back. We had won war, and it was time to get on with our lives."

Though most of the combatants in World War II were men in their late teens and early 20s, "kids nowadays could rise to the occasion just like they did then," Edwards said.

"And some, I'm sure, are. We just don't see much of it. They did in Vietnam. They took 18-year-old kids and made helicopter pilots out of them. You put the pressure on, and these youngsters, most of them, can deliver. It's just a question of asking them, they'll do it."

Officials accuse killer of four more slayings

By Jack Douglas Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

On Oct. 8, 1968, Kenneth Allen McDuff stood in a Fort Worth, Texas, courtroom, seemingly stripped of any power to kill again — a man caught, tried and handed the ultimate punishment.

Death for McDuff was to come before sunrise on Dec. 3, 1968.

It was the price he was to pay for Robert Brand, 17, who along with his cousin, Marcus Dunnam, and a friend, Edna Louise Sullivan, were slain on a horrific Fort Worth night on Aug. 6, 1966.

McDuff, now 46, was convicted of killing Brand. Although he never went to trial in their deaths, testimony in the case showed that he also took the lives of Dunnam and Sullivan, both 16, police and court records said.

In the courtroom, Judge Byron Matthews told a stoic McDuff that an executioner "shall apply and continue the passage of electricity through the body of you ... until you are dead."

"And may God have mercy on your soul."

But that was not the end.

First, McDuff received repeated stays. Then, in 1972, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that capital punishment, as then administered, was cruel and unconstitutional. McDuff's sentence was commuted to life in prison.

Seventeen years later, the parole board freed McDuff. It was a short-lived reprieve. A year later, McDuff was back in custody, accused — but never convicted — of threatening to kill a black youth in his hometown of Rosebud, Texas, in what police said was a racially motivated incident.

But then a parole staff lawyer, following parole department policy, reviewed the case and reinstated McDuff's parole — without presenting it to the parole board. McDuff walked out of prison again on Dec. 6, 1990.

McDuff enrolled in Texas State Technical College in March 1991. He graduated in February with a certificate in machine shop operations.

Then, on March 9, an emergency warrant to revoke McDuff's parole was issued.

It came after the abduction and slaying of Melissa Northrup, a clerk at the CITGO service station and Quick Pak convenience store off Interstate 35, near New Road, south of Waco in Central Texas.

The pregnant 22-year-old disappeared from the store March 1. Police found McDuff's car abandoned near the store the same day. They found Northrup's body April 26, floating in a gravel pit in south Dallas County.

And in March, police found the body of Valencia Kay Joshua, 22, a Fort Worth native who was described as a prostitute. Her nude body was found March 25 in a shallow grave behind Texas State Technical College.

A complaint charging McDuff with murder said Joshua was seen knocking on the door of McDuff's dormitory room about 3:30 a.m. Feb. 24.

Several local prostitutes, the complaint said, told police that McDuff would often solicit them.

Forensic tests revealed that hair found on Joshua's body was McDuff's, the complaint said.

Eventually, as he rose to become the most wanted fugitive in Texas, McDuff sought refuge in Kansas City, Mo., moving into Clyde Manor, a seedy, 9-story tenement not far from where I-35 snakes through that city.

McDuff was arrested in Kansas City on May 4 after the crime-solving television show "America's Most Wanted" aired a portrayal of him. The arrest did not come, however, until after the deaths or disappearances of at least five women.

McDuff was indicted by a grand jury Friday in Waco, accused of the deaths of Northrup and Joshua.

A man who worked with McDuff at a Kansas City garbage collection company said McDuff had "line after line" of sweet talk when he approached women. But away from them, he talked "like a guy who didn't like women ... like they were trash," the former co-worker said.

So ended the manhunt for McDuff, whom a U.S. Marshals spokesman called "basically an animal out there committing heinous crimes."

McDuff is the prime suspect in four other cases, including an Austin businesswoman grabbed from a carwash.

Man arrested after attempted robbery

Staff report

A man was arrested early today after attempting to steal a woman's purse near Midland Memorial Hospital, police said.

Darrell Clemons, 22, 1612 E. Magnolia, was arrested on preliminary charges of robbery after he was identified by an officer several hours after the incident was reported. Clemons was being held at the Midland County Jail Saturday on $5,000 bond.

According to reports, Sara Newell of Gladewater and a companion were walking to their car about midnight in the 300 block of North N Street when attacked by a man trying to grab her purse. The man carried no weapon, and when she resisted, he fled without the purse, reports said.

Clemons was arrested about 3 a.m. at a residence in the 1900 block of Magnolia, police said.

small group of kids (such as an enrollment of 87 at the second grade level at DeZavala) when four or five kids fail, it significantly changes the percentage."

Rushing said there is often great variation in comparing the first six-week grading period to the last six-week period, after students have learned what teachers expect of them.

Torres noted that large numbers of students failing may call for intervention strategies. He also said that a problem with comparing grade reports from year to year is that it doesn't track the same students.

tinctly the name of the defendant in the above styled and numbered cause, and a reasonable time was given him after such call was made in which to appear, yet the said defendant came not, but wholly made default."

That is, unless, the defendant shows up on the courthouse steps.

"I've never seen one yet be there," Kelley said.

"I would really be surprised (if someone responded.) Usually if they find their way to the courthouse, they'll find their way to the courtroom," he said.

In the four and a half years as bailiff for the 318th District Court, Kelley has taken the elevator from the fourth floor down to the front steps more than 50 times, he said.

Judge Hyde speculated on the origins of the practice.

"It probably goes back to the days when the courthouse was such a central meeting place for the county," he said.

"Courthouses were once a gathering place like our malls today," Hyde added.

"It's an interesting thing. Sometimes we lose track of our historical roots," Hyde said.

Air Force grounds 97 B-1 bombers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force has grounded all 97 of its B-1B bombers pending investigation of an engine malfunction in one of the aircraft at Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene, the service said.

The malfunction occurred shortly after one of the bombers took off from Dyess on June 19, said Air Force spokeswoman Maj. Susan Hankey. The craft returned safely to the base, she said.

The bombers were ordered grounded effective Friday evening, Hankey said.

The Air Force and the engine's manufacturer, General Electric, are investigating the malfunction.

The bombers, which cost $280 million each, have been beset by problems including fuel leaks and engine mishaps since they went into service in 1986.

Weight Loss Discovery
Nutritional researchers discovered that one of the ingredients in the product VITA•TEC actually caused people to lose weight even through specifically asked not to alter their normal eating habits. According to the International Journal of Obesity a majority of dieters abandon any planned diet within a few weeks. VITA•TEC aids in appetite control by stimulating the body to send "I'm Full" signals to the brain, and thereby, helps increase the will power to break long established habits of overeating. Researchers speculate that the weight loss is also due to its effect on carbohydrate metabolism.
Overweight people are benefiting from the discovery. A computer operator at a Houston medical clinic lost 17 pounds in two weeks while using the product. A grandmother, who had previously tried many diets, lost 21 pounds in two months using VITA•TEC and was never hungry. An additional benefit discovered in the study is that cholesterol levels were significantly reduced in obese patients.
VITA•TEC contains only natural ingredients and is available through physicians and pharmacists.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Summer students will observe holiday Thursday

By H.A. Tuck

Students currently taking Summer I classes get a holiday on Thursday. That's when the college is observing the Independence Day holiday. All offices and facilities will be closed that day. Summer I students then have one more day of classes, July 6, followed by final exams on July 7.

Time permits for Summer II registration are available this week in the Student Services area of the Student Center. They may be obtained through July 6 from 7 a.m.-5 p.m.

Advantage of the time permits is that they assign a specific time period to report for registration. This cuts down the time spent standing in line for processing.

Those who don't obtain time permits must wait until the last hour or so of registration to be processed. By that time, many of the classes are closed.

Summer II registration takes place July 8 in the Student Center. Classes begin on July 9 and continue through Aug. 13. Summer classes meet Monday through Thursday, so every week has a three-day weekend!.

The 1992 crop of fledgling cliff swallows have been taking their basic flight training during the last week, a large number of them practicing around the Learning Resource Center. At times they appeared to be auditioning for a remake of "The Birds" as they swooped, dived, and whirled. Then, for brief periods, the tops of nearby trees were filled with tiny birds, resting from their exertions before rejoining the formations of other beginning aviators.

After more delays because of bad weather, there is visible progress on the new campus entrance. Curbing has been poured and grade work is near completion. A new sidewalk between the Fine Arts Building and the Occupational-Technical Building is nearing completion, which will eliminate wading or paddling between the two buildings during high-water seasons.

New collection bins have been placed in all campus buildings, so students and staff have places for paper to be recycled. Only certain types of paper may be accepted, so the lids of the containers have a list of what may, and may not, be placed inside. A few bins for aluminum cans have been available around the campus for several years.

If you missed the first session of the Chaparral Basketball camp, there's another chance. MC head coach Steve Green and his staff are conducting their second week-long camp July 6-10. Youngsters from first grade through high school spend from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. learning the fundamentals of proper basketball skills. If you are interested, call Coach Green at 685-4581 or 685-4575 not later than Wednesday, July 1.

For those who would rather cheer the players, the annual Midland College Cheerleader Camp is slated July 27-30. The award-winning Chaparral Cheerleaders will direct students, both individuals and squads, in cheers, chants, tumbling and dancing. Sessions are held from 9 a.m. to noon daily. The fee is $40. For more information, call 685-4502.

The only Continuing Education class starting this week is a specialized topic for law enforcement officers, Child Abuse, which will be presented Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. at a cost of $55.

The Continuing Education Department makes up for it the following week, as 19 classes begin in a variety of subjects. You could choose from Country-Western Dance, Swing-Push Dance, a number of computer and software classes, some in multiple sections.

Register in the Continuing Education Office, Administration Building, or call 685-4518 for more information.

Commissioner pulls for higher teacher salaries

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 10 percent of those teaching in Texas classrooms last school year were uncertified and unqualified to be there, state Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno said Saturday.

He said the figure is an argument for higher teacher salaries.

"Can you imagine going into a hospital where 10 percent of the doctors weren't qualified to be providing medical care? That certainly wouldn't be the kind of place that you would go," Meno told the Texas Press Association's summer convention.

"We have not been able to attract or maintain people in the education profession, and compensation is clearly one of the issues that has to be addressed in that," he said.

Meno said he was referring to those who have not met state requirements and qualifications for certification, including some who may be teaching outside of their subject area.

"There always is the exceptional person that doesn't meet certification who would be a wonderful teacher," he said. But he said certification requirements are established for a reason.

People are teaching on special permits because "there's nobody else," he said. They might be teaching special education or bilingual education, for example, Meno said.

"Unlike medicine, where you don't put somebody in, if we have 'x' number of kids, we put somebody in whether they're qualified or not," he said.

That's one reason Meno said there needs to be more funding put into public education, even though top elected leaders have told superintendents there won't be any new state money for public education in the next legislative session.

"I think they (state leaders) provided a candid assessment of their view of where things are," Meno said. "From my perspective ... I think that there are going to have to be additional resources if we're going to be able to move the enterprise forward.

"What we'll be doing is working with them in terms of finding out what are the possible ways to accomplish that," he said.

After 2 attempts, governor fills appeals court vacancy

HOUSTON (AP) — After two failed attempts to fill a vacancy on a state appeals court, Gov. Ann Richards has tapped a black federal prosecutor for the position.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Gaynelle Jones, 43, will be appointed next week by Richards to the Ist Court of Appeals vacancy, appointments secretary Fred Ellis said Friday.

She will be the first black to serve on either of the two Houston-based appeals courts, each of which has nine judges. Her appointment also will make the 1st Court of Appeals the only appellate panel in the state to have more women than men.

"Certainly I feel honored to have been chosen," she said. "I believe I could do an outstanding job as the first black woman on that court."

'Certainly I feel honored to have been chosen. I believe I could do an outstanding job as the first black woman on that court.'

— Gaynelle Jones

Ms. Jones was the third candidate submitted by Richards for the vacancy created in January by the retirement of Republican Jon Hughes.

The governor's first two nominees were nixed because of protocol gaffes involving their state senators — Rodney Ellis and John Whitmire. Senators have veto power over nominees from their districts.

Ms. 'ones' appointment was approved by her state senator, Republican Don Henderson.

Democratic Party chairmen in the 14 counties served by the appeals court are expected to nominate Ms. Jones to oppose Republican nominee Adele Hedges, a Houston lawyer, on the November ballot.

Mounting a campaign less than five months before the election "is certainly going to be a challenge, which is something I've never shied away from," Ms. Jones said.

The appeals court reviews criminal and civil appeals in Harris, Austin, Brazoria, Brazos, Burleson, Chambers, Colorado, Fort Bend, Galveston, Grimes, Trinity, Walker, Waller and Washington counties.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

Grady Independent School District will hold a school board election Aug. 29. The election will be implemented pursuant to a single-member district plan ordered by the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Texas, Midland-Odessa Division.

Under the newly created plan, trustees will be elected from seven single-member districts rather than at-large.

Places 1 and 2 will be up for election.

There is also a vacancy in District 7. A special election will be held in conjunction with the Aug. 29 election.

In the regularly scheduled 1993 election, Places 3 and 4 will be up for election, and Places 5 and 6 will be up for election in 1994.

Trustees serve three-year terms.

Agency promises to pull billboards

FORT WORTH (AP) — Dozens of billboards in Fort Worth and Dallas are coming down after El Paso residents told the advertiser to find another target.

The cause of trans-state sour feelings? An ad slogan for an electronic device that allows stolen cars to be tracked.

"Car thieves: Fort Worth has Teletrack. Try El Paso," the billboards boast.

No one in El Paso thought the Los Angeles-oriented campaign was funny.

"I thought it was very offensive," said Barbara Perez, president of the El Paso Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

Angry calls and letters have poured in from officials including City Councilman Joe Pickett.

"I do not encourage El Pasoans to bad-mouth fellow Texans, and expect the same from our neighbors, close and distant, within our great state," Pickett wrote to Fort Worth Mayor Kay Granger.

Ron May, ad manager for Pac Tel Teletrack, said his company knew El Paso had an average auto-theft rate. But May's agency didn't take note of El Paso's low rate of recovering stolen vehicles, which often quickly disappear across the Mexican border.

May has apologized.

"It was simply meant as a marketing promotion," May said. "It just as easily could have been Kalamazoo."

"They didn't know that the people here are sensitive about it," Ms. Perez said Friday. "I don't think they did it intentionally."

THE BELLS ARE TALKING OUT BOTH SIDES OF THEIR RECEIVER.

The Bell telephone monopolies are telling Congress they will create thousands and thousands of jobs. All Congress has to do is to let them enter the electronic information services, telecommunications manufacturing and long-distance services industries.

But the truth is, millions of jobs have already been created in these thriving and competitive industries without any help from the Bells.

Now these jobs could be in jeopardy.

In 1984, when the seven regional Bell companies were created from the breakup of AT&T, the courts wisely banned the Bells from entering these three industries. But in the past year, a U.S. District judge reluctantly reversed the ban on information services, the Senate has approved legislation allowing the manufacturing of equipment and the Bells are trying to enter long-distance services.

If they bully their way into these industries, the Bells could abuse their position as monopolies and drive many currently prosperous companies out of business.

And that means lost jobs and higher prices—something today's consumers cannot afford.

Millions of Americans are depending on Congress to protect a competitive marketplace and support—along with the Consumer Federation of America and more than 1,500 other consumer and business groups—the Antitrust Reform Act of 1992 (HR 5096) introduced by House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jack Brooks of Texas.

The Bells may claim they want to create more jobs, but the simple truth is that these monopolies have eliminated jobs. It takes a free and competitive marketplace to increase employment, fuel the economy and benefit the American consumer.

Help protect American jobs. Help protect the American consumer. Call or write today and urge your U.S. Representative to support HR 5096—the Brooks bill.

Then call 1-800-547-7482 to learn more.

The Consumer Federation of America and more than 1,500 other consumer groups, small businesses and large businesses.

Please send your letter to Rep. Lamar Smith, who is a member of the House Judiciary Committee. His address is: 422 CHOB, Washington DC, 20515.

JOG AT HOME

The great outdoors is the best place to jog. But it takes real will power to trot around the block when the temperature is too hot or too cold. This full-size pattern contains step-by-step instructions and photographs showing each stage of construction. Just trace the pattern parts onto wood, saw out and assemble. A complete materials list is included and the cost is just a fraction of a ready-made jogger.

Send check to: KCS Pattern Dept. P. O. Box 2383 Van Nuys, CA 91409

CRIB 'N BED

Build the crib for use while the child is an infant. When the child is ready for a bed, remove the railings on both sides, unbolt the small block of drawers from the end of the crib which will become a nightstand, and you will have a youth bed with two drawers for storage. Our plan has complete step-by-step instructions, photos, diagrams, materials lists, and conforms to safety suggestions set forth in consumer reports.

HOMES & CLASSIFIED

The Level Best

By Sonja Merrick

Welcome to an Old Midland home that's perfect on every imaginable level. Dramatic, spacious, warm, well-executed and lovingly cared for, it exemplifies the total living experience.

Open the double wood doors to a charming foyer — parquet floors, lovely Oriental-motif wallpaper. To the right lies a formal living area. Carpeted in plush peach, the wall paint carries the hue up the high wall to the ceiling. Two walls of windows present a view of the richly landscaped exterior. One set looks out to a perfectly manicured front yard — the other to the large covered patio and fenced rear yard.

The formal living area is also graced with a brick wall, within which a huge fireplace is nestled.

The central hub and focal point of the home lies to the right of the entryway — just beyond the formal living area.

A multi-level, multi-purpose informal "living complex" is dramatic, attractive and highly functional. It includes a curved, sunken family room with fireplace and built-ins. Above the family area, the left side of the curved floor provides a platform for the breakfast room. To the right lies a large, windowed open space now used as an exercise area. It could easily become a music, hobby, computer area — or whatever imagination and need dictate.

Slightly sunken, also part of the "complex," is a complete wet bar area — including bar, stools and game-table space. The kitchen, a gourmet's delight, is situated behind the breakfast area. Two sub-zero refrigerators, two cooktops and two ovens (one with triple Jenn-Air grill, one with smooth-top) are among the modern amenities. There are also three pantries and lots and lots of storage.

A staircase lies near the kitchen. Climb the steps and find a children's wing with four bedrooms, two full baths, a large entryway and more than ample closet and storage space.

A master suite is located in its own wing of the house. In it is a large fireplace flanked by built-ins. A mirrored sitting room lies at one end of the room. Huge walk-in closets and two separate dressing rooms offer plenty of storage and convenience. "Hers" has a lighted dressing table, drawer space and clothes rods. "His" has a wall full of built-ins and a refrigerator. The master bath is large with separate shower.

Still, there's more.

There's a sizeable, separate guest house with its own full bath. It could be used as a living area for parents, teen-agers, married children. Or as a workshop, hobby area or home office.

Other amenities in this five-bedroom, 5½ bath home are a huge laundry area, insulated windows, humidifier, sprinkler system and a beautifully landscaped low-maintenance yard. Mature trees abound.

This home is being offered by The Prudential Ruth Young Realtors for $259,900. Shown by appointment only. Call Ruth Young at 682-7884 or 697-1217 for information.

Benefits await Texas veterans

By Pat Paxton

Calling all veterans! The Texas Veterans Land Board (VLB) has three great programs for you to take advantage of.

■ Housing assistance

The Texas Veterans Housing Assistance Program (VHAP) was initiated to help Texas veterans who had been frozen out of the home buying market by high interest rates.

Since making its first loan in 1984, the Texas VHAP has helped more than 23,000 Texas veterans purchase homes. The VHAP provides low-interest loans of up to $45,000 to use in conjuncture with a VA, FHA or conventional loan from a private lending institution or a direct loan through the Veterans Land Board.

Down payment requirements and financial qualifications will be determined by the primary lender.

All VHAP loans must be originated by an approved lender or the VLB. Loans are available in 15,10, 25 and 30 year terms.

There is no maximum sale price on a home purchased with a Texas VHAP loan.

Because all Texas VHAP loans are funded by the sale of bonds and there are no discount points charged on a loan, a Texas VHAP loan is usually below the existing market rate for home mortgages. This results in lower payments.

Applications for certification are available through approved lenders or the VLB. There is a $25 non-refundable fee for this certification application.

■ Land program

Since its beginning in 1949, more than 100,000 Texas veterans have received long-term, low-interest loans through the Texas Veterans Land program.

Currently, the program offers eligible Texas veterans a maximum $20,000 30-year loan to buy a minimum of five net acres of land. A 5 percent down payment is required, resulting in a maximum net loan of $19,000.

There is also an additional $320 in loan processing fees associated with each transaction.

The VLB purchases land directly from the seller and then resells the land to the veteran by a contract of sale.

There are minimal closing costs associated with the loan and a contract maintenance fee will be added to each installment during the 30-year term of the contract.

A veteran can receive an application for a loan by submitting a non-refundable application fee of $25 to the Texas Veterans Land Board, Stephen F. Austin Bldg, 1700 N. Congress, Room 700, Austin, TX 78701-1496.

■ Home improvement

The Texas Veterans Home Improvement Program is a program that will loan Texas veterans up to $17,500 for up to 15 years on a fixed-rate note to make substantial repairs to an existing home. No down payment is required, but there is a $25 certification fee.

For loans of less than $7,500, the maximum term of the loan will be 10 years. The minimum loan amount is $4,000. All loans are FHA insured.

Veterans can receive loans for a variety of home improvements including room additions, roofing, attached garages, sidewalks, driveways, screened porches, patios, decks, fences and thermal windows.

A complete list of eligible improvements is available through the VLB.

■ Eligibility requirements

While many of the eligibility requirements for the three loan programs are the same, some requirements differ from program to program. Veterans may qualify for a loan if they:

1. Were bona-fide residents of Texas (that is, living in Texas with the intent to remain in Texas) at the time of entry into the military service, or have been bona fide residents of Texas for at least five consecutive years immediately before filing an application with the VHB.

2. Are bona fide residents of Texas at the time an application is made for the loan.

3. Served at least 90 consecutive days of active duty after September 16, 1940 with the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines or Coast Guard, and were eligible to receive a discharge under conditions other than dishonorable or were discharged earlier due to a service-connected disability.

4. Have not previously participated in the loan program they are currently applying to use.

■ Exceptions

Land Program: An individual who has completed 20 years of reserve military service creditable for retirement under applicable Federal laws or completed all initial active duty training required as condition of enlistment or appointment in the Texas National Guard is eligible to participate in the land program.

Paxton

In addition, the unmarried surviving spouse of a Texas veteran who died in the line of duty may apply to purchase land through the land program.

Housing and Home Improvement Program: Individuals who have served in the United States Public Health Service, and meet all the other requirements, are eligible to participate in the housing assistance and home improvement programs. Veterans who are on active duty status must have completed their initial service obligation and been eligible for an honorable discharge.

Langston Realtors Talk About . . .

Current real estate activity in upper executive market

The upper executive market (properties listed at $200,00 or more) seems to us to have as much to offer right now as has been offered in quite some time. This bodes well for families moving up as well as for the groups of transferees we expect to be relocated to Midland within the next several months. And activity in this market — showings, contracts, closings — already seems to be busy.

We are especially encouraged by recent new listings in subdivisions that usually have a very limited number of homes for sale. For instance, three properties have recently come on the market in the Warwick-/Avalon/Berkshire area (bounded by Golf Course, Garfield, Neely and "I"). A beautiful two-story, five-bedroom traditional on Winfield, right in the heart of Warwick, has created a lot of interest among in-town buyers who are waiting for the "perfect" home in this area. Two new listings in the 1600 block of Stanolind have also brought some families into the market; in fact, one of the Stanolind homes sold the first morning it was offered!

The Saddle Clubs are always of equal interest to in-town and out-of-town buyers; the security, the serenity and variety of homes appeal to many ages and lifestyles. Offerings are as varied as large executive homes on one acre-sized lots to exquisitely designed townhomes on the water in the beautiful lakes addition. Recent participation in sales in the area reinforces our belief that this is truly one of Midland's most coveted locations.

Greentree continues to appeal to everyone from young families to retirees, avid golfers to those of us less active, "old" to "new" Midlanders. Newly listed properties on Rustic Trail and Hackberry are among the best on the market! They are super shining and fresh, have absolutely stunning decor and feature gorgeous views of the course. We predict they'll not be long on the market!

The Trinities have always been of special interest to families because of the convenient, close-to-everything location, the schools, the neighborliness and many children in the area! There are many fine properties newer to the market in the Trinities; most feature three-car garages, two to three living areas, four to five bedrooms, beautifully established landscaping. Transferees have always found this area to be especially welcoming.

Finally, there's "Old" Midland (the areas south of Golf Course) Huntington and Ma-Mar. These quiet, established neighborhoods have drawn many young families back to the areas in which they grew up! The many trees, wide, clean streets, spacious homes and prestige of the location appeal to professionals and executives in the oil, medical, law, finance, etc. fields. There are listings to $1,800,000 in these very desirable subdivisions.

Whether moving up, or moving into, or desiring to sell in this upper executive price range, we hope you will call one of our fine professional Realtors.

Check out area before selecting home

A client once joked that she hates getting the last set of draperies hung correctly because it always means it will be time to move again shortly.

The average homeowner stays in one home less than five years before moving again. Whether for job, family or financial considerations, odds are you could be checking out a new area soon.

It's best to start doing your homework as soon as you find out. You need to familiarize yourself with the area before you can start asking the questions you need answered to make a livable neighborhood choice.

Contact the Chamber of Commerce and a local Realtor for general information to map your battle plan.

Some people prefer to have their Realtor meet them at the airport and handle all touring details. Most Realtors are glad to provide whatever services they possibly can.

An agent offers an insider's view of the community. You may prefer to take a tour yourself before meeting with your Realtor to formulate questions. Drive around and watch for positive and negative characteristics in potential neighborhoods.

Your Realtor will provide a running commentary on the area. It's your responsibility to interrupt and ask questions. Expect your Realtor to have plenty of questions for you in order that he or she will be able to see the area through your eyes.

Some questions you'll want to ask could include:

■ Is this neighborhood appreciating. What is the high and low range? What have recent sales prices been?

■ Have property taxes gone up dramatically in the past year or two? Why? Is the school district growing?

■ Is it difficult to get home financing for this neighborhood? Are there any lenders that specialize in the area?

■ What zoning or deed restrictions could affect my plans or home value?

■ How stable, quiet, friendly, mature is the area?

You are selecting a geographic match to your lifestyle as much as you are looking for an individual home. Match the neighborhood before you start the home search.

Putting the time and effort in at the beginning can save a great deal of time and aggravation in the end.

Serving 54 counties in West Texas and New Mexico

BRIEFING

Rigs gain

A JSM rig makes hole in Lea County. The rig count this week was 106, up 17 in the Permian Basin, while the national rig count for the week of June 19 was 632 up 36. Improved weather is listed as the reason for the sudden jump in the rig count.

Debt deal

TMBR/Sharp Drilling Inc. says it has signed an agreement with its institutional lender to transfer ownership of 39 of the company's 51 drilling rigs in exchange for cancellation of all TMBR/Sharp indebtedness. The debt to be cancelled is approximately $11.3 million. The transaction is subject to the approval of stockholders.

Germ warfare

Bacteria are being used more and more in the oilpatch to digest hydrocarbon and clean-up leases, tanks and other oilfield facilities.

Flood debut

Chevron has officially dedicated its waterflood in the Arrowhead field near Hobbs. The $29 project is expected to recover an additional 15 million bbl of oil from the field which was discovered in 1938. The 5,500 acre unit was formed in June 1991, following reservoir studies initiaed in 1987.

The field is operated by Chevron which has a 46 percent interest in the unit.

Oil higher

A Dowell-Schlumberger crew cementing pipe. Oil prices ended slightly higher this week amid supply concerns and a United Nations plan to let Irag resume oil exports. The highest price for the week was $22.89.

Oil companies work on their 'green' image

■ Oil companies intensify efforts to improve environmental image.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

In this day of environmental concerns, most U.S. industries are trying to "paint themselves green." But no industry is trying harder to take on an environmental hue than the oil industry.

Stung by unfortunate incidents like the Exxon Valdez, hounded by hostile environmental groups and dogged by unfavorable news coverage, major oil companies are working overtime these days to build a positive environmental image.

Pick up any oil company publication and you will find stories telling readers what wonderful environmentalists Exxon, Conoco, Shell, Texaco, Mobil, Chevron and the other major oil companies are.

In the latest issue of the BP Shield, one well-written article with gallery-quality photos tells how certain BP employees are protecting the environment by monitoring water and equipment, testing gasoline tanks and studying fish. The second article is about "green gasoline," or the move toward reformulated gasoline.

The Exxon Lamp tells how the American Bald Eagle is making a comeback thanks to Exxon grants, and how safe Exxon chemicals are keeping the environment for farmers.

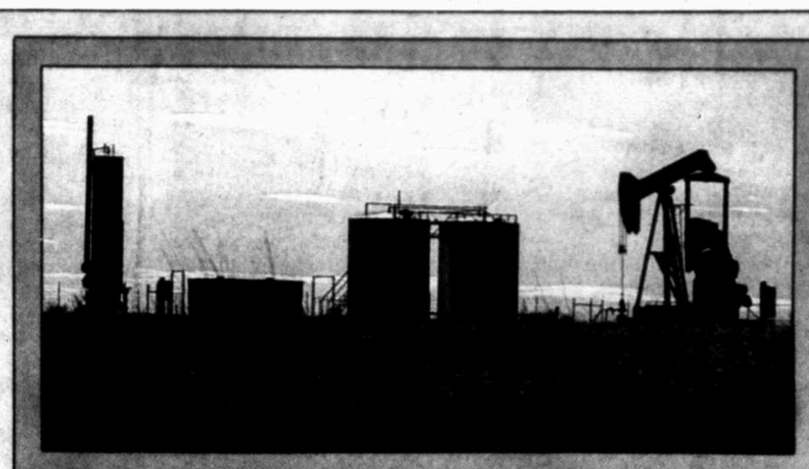

Focus on the ENVIRONMENT

And, in the Shell News, a story under this headline: "How a small group of environmental supervisors have played a large role in Woods River's outstanding performance."

Oil company magazines, almost without exception, carry the same formula stories about "how much we care about Earth," and "what a wonderful job we are doing for the environment."

The environmental message also appears in oil-company annual reports, where one inevitably finds several paragraphs and perhaps a picture or two with the same "we care" message.

Site assessment rules in environmental rules

■ Environmental concerns demand close look at leases.

By Ellen Hopkins

The majors in town have their sights set on environmental site assessments, so much that they are dedicating company personnel — and in some cases entire departments — to the issue.

An environmental site assessment involves any number of criteria from simple record checking to determine how the property has been used, to sampling of soil or water, to the clean-up necessary for remediation — returning a property to an uncontaminated status.

Companies in the Permian Basin and elsewhere have developed out of the need for site assessments, not all of which is oil and gas related. Some assessment work is being contracted by banks looking to finance commercial property.

One local major, Arco, refers to these site assessments as "acquisition and divestiture environmental reviews" because they can be called for regardless of whether Arco is buying or selling a particular property.

Arco's Bill Priebe said their site assessments are typically handled internally with specific company engineers assigned to different geographic areas.

"Arco's initial review involves looking at all file data, ground water, and other records," Priebe said. "If our initial review makes us suspicious, then we'll assess the extent and depth of the problem. We rarely take samples to test.

"For those properties we intend to sell," Priebe said, "we're more familiar with the property history so these tend to be routine assessments. On properties we consider for purchase from another major, we're confident they've done a professional job of managing facilities. If it's a purchase from someone we don't know well, we'll take a closer look."

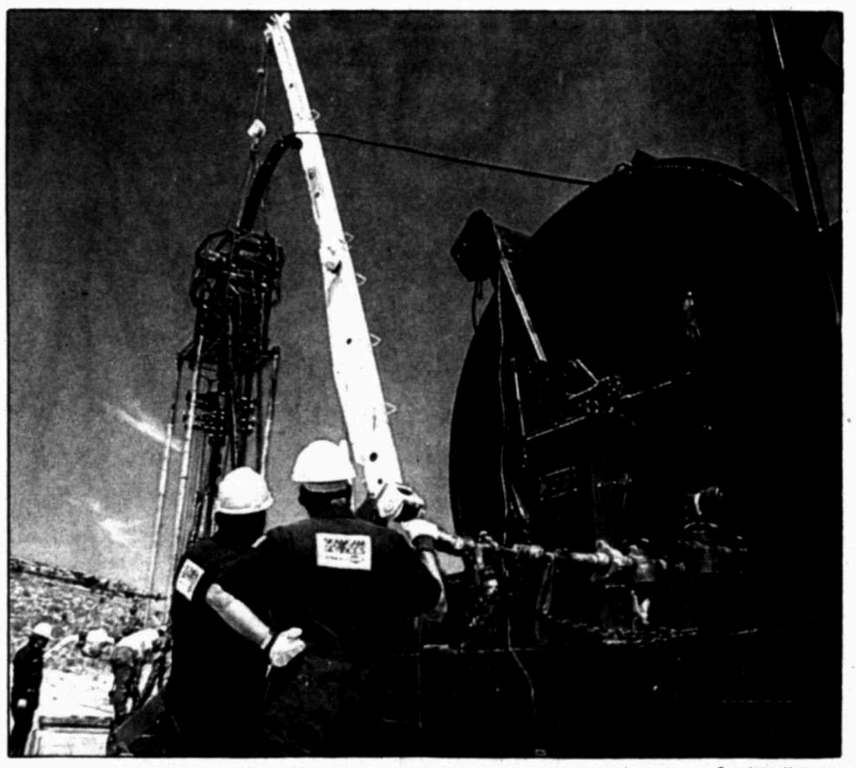

Priebe said Arco's evaluations may also include NORM (Naturally Occuring Radioactive Material) surveys, which are also handled without the need for contract help.

"We have the equipment to check any radioactivity to be sure it isn't exceeding permissible levels," Priebe said.

Other majors, like Mobil and Texaco, will occasionally hire a contract environmental firm to assist with site assessment work.

Guy Miller, supervisor of Mobil's environmental, health and safety department, said that be-

Coiled tubing giving hope to deep wells

■ Some see coiled tubing as a cure for low reservoir pressure in deep gas wells.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

A coiled tubing procedure now being tried by several operators could become a popular and cost-effective means of rejuvenating many deep and old gas wells in the Permian Basin.

The first deep application came in July 1991, when Nowcam Services announced that it had executed the world's deepest coiled tubing installation by hanging 20,500 feet of 1¼-inch tubing in a Chevron well in the Gomez Field of Pecos County.

The project, which was reported in Oil & Gas Journal, converted a 100 Mcfd well that was loaded up with fluid and producing only two hours a day into a 390 Mcfd well capable of unloading 3-4 bw/d.

Nowcam has recently completed another project in the Gomez Field that not only sets another world record but promises to be equally successful. The Exxon well had a 1½-inch string of coiled tubing hung off at 22,058, still waiting for testing the well is expected to be ever bit as successful as the Chevron G.M. Shelton No. 2 and provide a cost-effective means of revitalizing deep gas wells.

"So far we have hung coiled tubing in six wells in West Texas with success, and we have identified approximately 150 to 250 deep well candidates that would lend themselves to this application," said Stephen Baugh, district sales manager for Nowcam.

Drilled during the late-'60s and early '70s wells in the Gomez had virgin pressures of 12,000 psi, but over the years that pressure has dropped to the 2,500-3,000 psi range making it difficult to unload fluid up the large diameter casing and tubing. Most of these deep wells

Workers' comp still bleeding oil business

Pitts

With all the new and proposed environmental rules on the books these days and with a new worker's compensation reform bill just approved, one might think that rigid environmental rules or taxes might head the list of concerns for oilfield service contractors. Not so.

The chief concern among businesses in Texas, including oilfield service contractors is the cost of insurance, especially Workers' Compensation, according to a survey conducted by the National Federation of Independent Businesses (NFIB). In the survey conducted last spring 53.9 percent of the members said Workers' Compensation was still the most important issue affecting their business. Another 36.5 said liability insurance was the biggest issue affecting business.

The survey, which also listed environmental regulation, federal deficit, mandated benefits, minimum wage, income taxes, capital gains and unemployment tax, did not list medical insurance as a concern choice. But, had it been listed, one can easily see that the price of insurance has reached crisis proportions and is pushing many businesses to the edge.

In the case of workers' compensation, many are wondering why. The NFIB survey of 1,750 Texas business was conducted months before most major workers' comp carriers announced that they would raise rates another 15-30 percent.

The proposed rate increases came in the face of recent reforms and a report by the Texas Department of Insurance that the overall cost of worker's compensation insurance dropped 23.5 percent last year.

Worker's compensation carriers have said they need the increase even though the system is working, because there is not ample evidence upon which to build a lower rate case. However, members of the state legislature have claimed that 18 months is plenty of time to build a rate case.

"We are surprised and appalled at this latest rate increase announcement," said Robert Howden, a spokesman for NFIB Texas. "What's worse, we don't see much hope for improvement. It's looks like the workers' compensation problem is just going to get worse instead of better. It is ironic to think that worker's compensation insurance is still the No. 1 problem with Texas business, even above taxes and regulations."

But things could get worse. Texas is still one of only two states that do no mandate worker's comp, and many oilfield service contractors that do not work for major oil companies, who require the insurance, have elected to "go bare" — without workers' compensation. Howden noted that next year could

More than half of upstream jobs lost says API report

More than half of the jobs in the exploration and production sector of the petroleum industry - the "upstream" - have been lost in the last 10 years, the American Petroleum Institute (API) reports.

Citing data complied by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, API said that the number of jobs in the petroleum industry upstream has fallen from an all-time high of 754,500 in February 1982 to 356,700 jobs last month.

During that same 10-year stretch, API said, employment in the refining sector of the industry fell from 165,800 in February 1982 to its present level of 116,800 - a decline of 30 percent.

The wholesale marketing and "other" categories (pipelines, natural gas marketing and distribution and paving and roofing materials) also recorded drops in the number of jobs. Wholesale marketing experienced a 25.9 percent fall off in employment while the "other" sector registered a 6.23 percent decline, according to API.

The only sector of the industry to experience a growth in jobs over the past decade, the Institute noted, was marketing, which recorded a 12.6 percent rise in employment.

Commenting on these data, Charles J. DiBona, president of API, siad: "The massive jobs losses in the petroleum industry are a result, in part, of current economic conditions, but a major cause is the adverse political climate for the petroleum industry operating in this country. This climate seriously impedes our ability to provide the nation.

PITTS: Workers comp squeezes oil companies

see a move to make the injury insurance mandatory and that it could literally force many oilfield service companies out of business.

"When this new round of rate hikes takes effect, small firms in the oilpatch and elsewhere will see their razor thin profit margins squeezed even more," said Howden. Workers' comp premiums are still bleeding Texas business dry."

Under new worker's comp laws that went into effect last year, a four-step administrative review process was substituted for a direct route to the court house. It was designed to cut down attorney involvement on worker's comp claims and hopefully reduce costs.

"The system is working in that regard," said David Moody, executive director of the Industrial Foundation in Odessa, "attorney involvement is now only 50 percent of what it once was, but somehow rates are still going up."

Some have suggested that the next area of needed reform is the medical side of the issue. The Industrial Foundation, which reports on on-the-job injuries, has kept documentation of worker's comp. claims for the past 32 years. "It is a documented fact that it takes more doctor referrals and more medical attention and longer time for a workers' comp patient to heal than the general public."

Some feel the system is still very very ripe for abuse, and fraud and that is a major reason behind the insurance companies request for higher rates. In essence the insurance companies have asked for higher rates to get back into the market and make sure it is really going to work.

Moody said he was not surprised that workers' compensation was still the top problem nagging service companies, but he was surprised that the rates were going up.

"The assigned risk pools that many oilfield service contractors were forced into are finally in the black, but no rate decrease has filtered back to the employer. The number of lawsuits have been cut in half. Rates should be going down, but they are going up. It doesn't make sense," said Moody.

"It is a big disappointment to NFIB," said Howden. "When we were fighting for reform, we thought the insurance companies were on our side, but now they are back at the trough."

However, there is indication that some of the major insurance companies are now backing off of a rate filing increase. When House Speaker Gib Lewis and Lt. Governor Bob Bullock schuduled hearings of the Workers' Compensation Oversight Committee to explore the rationale behind the rate hikes and insurance companies were presented information and data for a lower rate some of the companies showed a reluctance to ask for the higher rates. "I think you will see companies backing off of their filings for a rate increase as a result of Liberty Mutual's action on rates," said Rick Gentry, regional vice president for the Insurance Information Institute.

Liberty Mutual, the largest worker's comp carrier in the state, says it will now lower some of its rates. One company rate will decrease 15 percent, another will seek a 5 percent increase and yet another will not be changed.

"I think you will see other companies taking the lead from this largest carrier," said Gentry.

NationsBank named top energy lender

■ NationsBank with offices in Midland has been named the top energy lender in the world according to one energy publication.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

For the second year in a row, NationsBank has made more loans to the energy industry than any other bank in the world, according to rankings released in the June issue of Petroleum Economist, an international energy journal.

Midland accounts for a sizable portion of those loans say local officials. "NationsBank in Midland accounts for about 10 percent of that volume," says Murphy Markham, senior vice president in charge of energy lending at NationsBank in Midland. "We are one of the more substantial makers of energy loans."

He said the Midland Bank had already loaned over $125 million in 1992, and overall had quadrupled its energy loan portfolio in the past three years.

Larry Holden, president of NationsBank Midland, said the bank had shown growth by catering to the whole market — by making energy loans from $200,000 to $100 million. "Actually our largest loan here is $80 million, but we have the capability of lending much more."

According to Petroleum Economist, NationsBank ranked first in both number of loans provided (84) and total dollar amount loaned to the industry ($2,658 billion) in 1991, according to a list of the top 20 providers of energy loans in the world. The bank was also first in 1990, when it made 63 loans for $3.375 billion.

NationsBank also "arranged" the greatest number of energy loans in 1991 (54, according to the Petroleum Economist league tables, which were released in March.

"What these numbers show is that the industry has confidence on our ability and capacity to arrange large transactions," said Sam Atkins, group executive vice president of the NationsBank Energy Group.

Markham added that there are about seven energy lenders in the Midland bank, but that the bank has engineering resources in Dallas, Denver, Houston and London that it can call upon to assist in arranging loans. "About 90 percent of our engineering is done here," said Markham.

He noted that all types of energy loans are made at NationsBank, but that most in recent months have been acquisition loans.

NationsBank is the country's fourth-largest bank holding company with $112 billion in assets and full-service banks in nine states and the District of Columbia.

Mitchell explains net loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. has blamed restructuring and extraordinary charges for a net loss of $15.7 million, or 33 cents a share, for the quarter ending April 30.

In the same period a year ago, the diversified energy company reported earnings of $9.2 million, or 20 cents a share.

Revenues for the current quarter amounted to $186.3 million, compared to revenues of $198.1 million for the first quarter of 1991.

Chairman and President George P. Mitchell said excluding restructuring charges, the earnings for the current period declined primarily because of lower returns on natural gas and natural gas liquids.

A year ago, natural gas liquid prices benefited somewhat from the Persian Gulf War, while in the current period, depressed prices led the company to curtail its spot-market sales early this year.

Conoco in Russian venture

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conoco Inc. and a Russian partner will develop a new oil field in northeastern Russia just south of the Arctic Circle, the company says.

The joint venture, in which Conoco could invest as much as $3 billion, is the first announced plans for new oil field development in Russia involving a U.S. company. Other U.S. companies are involved in developing existing fields.

Conoco, a Houston-based subsidiary of Du Pont, said Thursday that its own subsidiary, Conoco Timan-Pechora Ltd., will be joined in the 50-50 venture by its Russian partner, Arkhangelskgeologia.

The partners plan to drill 24 wells in the northern Timan-Pechora basin west of the Ural Mountains and near the Arctic Circle. A central processing facility and 37 miles of pipeline with an initial capacity of 40,000 barrels a day also will be constructed.

Conoco, which has operations in Ponca City, Okla., said that the area has estimated reserves of 110 million barrels.

Drillers rig up to protect environment

■ Drillers are adjusting to new rules and regulations regarding drilling and the environment, but several drillers say the changes are mostly good sense.

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

Concern for the environment has permeated the oil patch, and the drilling rig is no exception.

A growing concern for the environment has prompted a number of new laws and regulations on both the state and federal level, rules and regulations that have an impact on the oil industry from drilling through refining.

However, several local drillers say they haven't seen many drastic changes in drilling operations.

"There have been certain changes," said Ray Peterson, president of Peterson Drilling. "They haven't impacted us that seriously. New things we're doing for the environment are things that are good common sense."

Among the things his drilling crews are doing, he said, are not disposing of pipe dope buckets or paint buckets in reserve pits, catching and recycling reserve motor oil, and not draining oil into the ditches around the rig. "These are old habits that might have been sloppy a few years ago; we're being more environmentally conscious, paying attention to oils, pipe dope and paint."

Peterson added that his crews are using trash trailers for the most part now rather than throwing things into the pits.

"There's not a lot of serious changes because, basically, there are few environmental problems in drilling a well. There's not very many things around a rig that are hazardous materials."

Drillers do have to cope with quite a bit of paperwork, such as displaying Material Safety Data Sheets and government filings such as for SARA Title III.

Gene Grimes, president of the southwest division of Grace Drilling, said his company's stated goal "is to compy with reasonable environmental objectives." Grace Drilling has an environmental manager, who oversees a safety and environmental field expert.

Among the operational changes Grace has made are changing to no-lead thread dope on connections, drill pipe and drill collars, using closed loop systems in the Permian Basin, and using non-asbestos brake pads. "Our goal," said Grimes, "is that nothing hits the ground."

His company disposes of its used engine oil in approved sites and uses people licensed to haul and dispose of the oil.

However, Grimes said, "one bad thing about this law is that engine oil and drilling muds that have any chemicals in them need to be disposed of, but if these haulers don't dispose of them properly or mishandle them, it's still our liability. I'm for preserving our environment, but some of these penalties are extreme." He added that different transportation has to be arranged to haul off oils or drilling muds containing chemicals, though the transporters traditionally used are also licensed.

According to Sherman Norton Jr., president of Norton Drilling in Lubbock, "about the only thing I see is companies drilling wells without reserve pits and burying the cuttings right on location. That's happening more often. It's something we usually did when we drilled inside city limits where there wasn't much room, but now they're doing it in the field even though there's a lot of room."

One requirement he finds ridiculous is placing netting over open pits to protect migrating birds and other wildlife. "That's the single most asinine requirement I've come across in 35 years in the business...I've never seen a bird in a reserve pit, dead or alive, yet this rule was made to protect the wildlife. If that's the government's concern, it needs to put a net over the highway because I've killed more birds with my car. It just runs up the cost of doing business."

He said drillers aren't bearing the cost or the lion's share of the burden of these new regulations, the operating companies are. "And it's stuff like this that makes the majors say 'Forget it, I'm closing my office, laying people off and going overseas.' The netting requirement is the kind of environmental law that's costing Americans their jobs."

He said environmentalists are using the Exxon Valdez accident of 1989 to flog the major producers.

Not dumping trash in reserve pits and recycling used motor oil are just some of the things drillers are doing to help improve the environment.

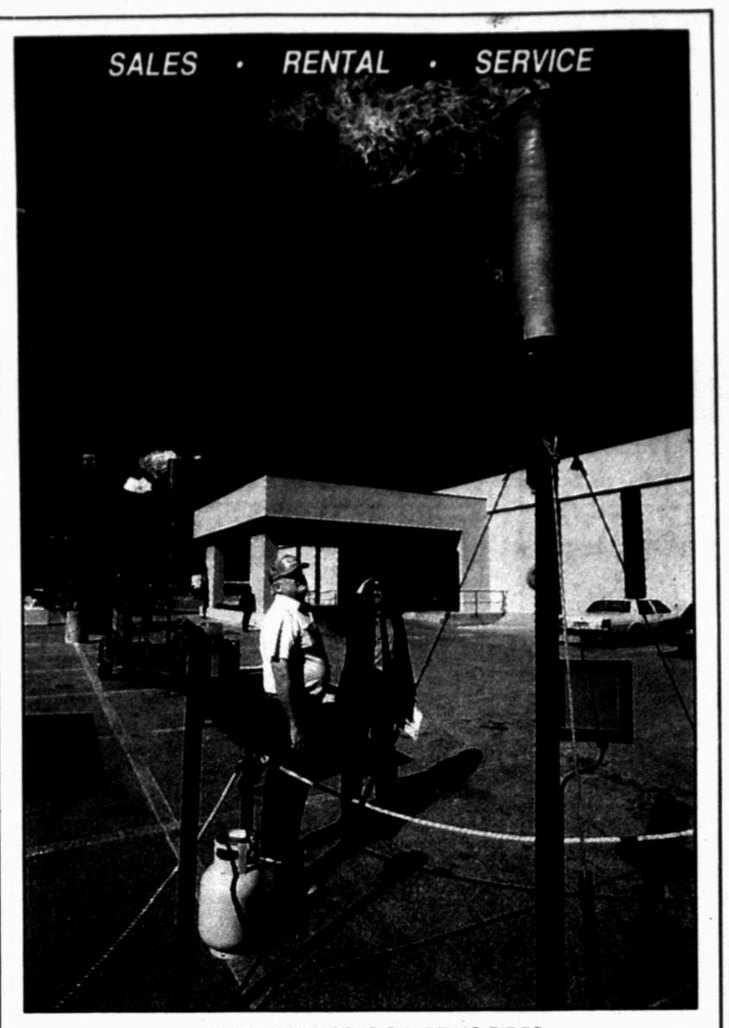

"What environmentalists are doing is forcing oil companies not to drill for oil here. We have to have oil here, so we have to get it somewhere else. So we haul it here in supertankers. There are 17 supertankers unloading oil in the U.S. today. Tomorrow, there'll be 17 more unloading. At the rate we're going, it won't be long before that 17 is 34 tankers. Think what an environmental catastrophe we're heading into. We're putting ourselves into the position where we'll have environmental catastrophe after catastrophe. The environmental answer is not to haul oil in a ship, it's to drill for it here."

One major concern all three men share is the possibility that drilling fluids will be declared hazardous under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA).

"The main thing that's given us cause for concern, that we have to cautious of still fighting, is making sure drilling fluids are not declared hazardous waste. If that happens, it would dramatically affect our business. Many wells would not be drilled. We need to let Congress and the Environmental Protection Agency know that drilling fluids are not hazardous, they come from basic earth materials. We've long since quit using chemicals in drilling muds that were hazardous. It's a very serious concern. The last word is that the change was not being considered, but you never know when it will rear its ugly head."

All three also emphasize that they are as concerned about the environment as the next person.

The next step in ramp blending.

We offer total blending control with the most complete microprocessor-based ramp blending system in the industry.

Smith Energy Services developed the APAC/ALAC (Automated Proppant/Liquid Additive Control) Blender in conjunction with Stewart & Stevenson Services, Inc., to not only deliver the most precise proppant addition, but also complete liquid additive control and monitoring.

Precisely. As scheduled. Even during rapid proppant stage or rate changes. So our fluid is fully crosslinked and buffered and the correct amount of breaker is added.

Which ensures that you will receive the cleanest fluid and highest conductivity fracture. And optimum well performance.

Otherwise, we wouldn't be the choice of some of the country's finest oil and gas operators.

So if you're concerned about how your well performs and the next step for unearthing your profits, take the first step.

Smith Energy Services. We work best under pressure.

Transco sells stake in field

HOUSTON (AP) — Transco Exploration Partners Ltd. has sold its interest in Louisiana's Chalkley Field to Torch Energy Advisors for $82 million, company officials said.

Transco Energy Co., which owns 73 percent of Transco Exploration, expects to receive between $55 million and $60 million in cash from the deal, the company said. Transco also expects an after-tax gain of between $7 million and $10 million from its share of the income from the sale.

The sale completes the three-and-a-half-year liquidation of Transco Exploration. The exploration company plans to distribute from 90 cents to $1 per Transco Exploration unit by year-end. The exact amount will depend upon the net proceeds from the sale of the Chalkley Field and other miscellaneous assets, minus certain costs, expenses and liabilities.

The deal involving Transco Exploration's last significant asset gives Transco Energy money to pay down debt. The company will be able to reduce its overall debt by about $150 million and its interest payments by about $10 million annually, according to John P. DesBarres, Transco chairman, president and chief executive.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Upton reentry nets 462-barrel find

Staff report

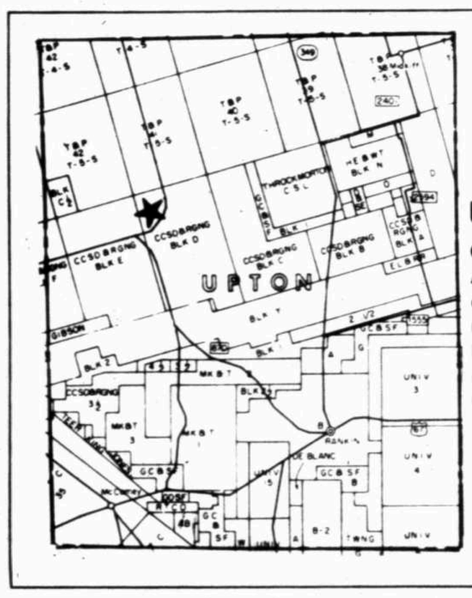

A former Pennsylvanian producer in the Wilshire field of Upton County has been recompleted as an unidentified discovery, 11 miles northeast of Crane.

CHEVRON U.S.A. INC. recompleted the No. 5 R.L. Ross et al NCT-B to flow 462 barrels of 44.3 gravity crude on a 20/64 inch choke. The well flowed from perforations 9,504 to 9,520 ft., which had been acidized with 2,000 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,875:1.

Originally drilled to 11,870 ft., the well was plugged back to 9,780 ft. with 2-3/8 inch casing set at 9,370 ft.

The well topped the Wichita Albany at 7,680 ft., Wolfcamp at 9,206 and Strawn at 9,800 ft.

Location is 1,320 ft. from south and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 116, Block D, CCSD&RGNG survey.

On potential test, the No. 1 Kometa Faye pumped 5.3 barrels of 41 gravity crude and 19 barrels of water from perforations 2,603 to 2.626 ft. The well produced from perforations 2,603 to 2,626 ft., which had been acidized with 1,000 gallons of acid.

Drilled to 4,236 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged bck to 2,826 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 1,876 ft., include the King LIme at 1,655 ft., Canyon Sand at 2,598, Ellenburger at 2,985, Cambrian at 3,535 and Granite Wash at 3,875 ft.

Location is 1,787 ft. from north and 467 ft. from west lines of Section 77, Block 71, H&GN survey, Abst. 489.

Millwee Oil reenters abandoned Crane well

An abandoned Crane County well has been reentered and completed in the Tucker field, three miles north of Imperial.

MILLWEE OIL INC. reentered the No. 3 Nellie M. Tucker, testing it to flow two barrels of crude, 61 Mcfd and 10 barrels of water on a 1.5 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 50 psi. The well flowed from perforations 5,712 to 5,732 ft., which had been acidized with 5,00 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 30,000:1.

Originally drilled to 5,856 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was cleaned out to that depth and plugged back to 5,826 ft. Pay was topped at 5,712 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from northwest and southeast lines of Section 21, Block 3, H&TC survey.

The well was drilled by Standard Oil of Texas in November 1948, flowing 272 barrels of crude from Clearfork perforations 5,787 to 5,806 ft. The well was plugged in 1977.

Fourth well added to Eddy County field

A fourth producer has been added to the La Huerta field of Eddy County, extending it southeast.

RAY WESTALL finaled the No. 5 Myrtle Myra to pump 50 barrels of 41.3 gravity crude, 135 Mcfd and 420 barrels of water from perforations 3,370 to 5,037 ft. The interval was acidized with 2,500 gallons of 15 percent HCL and fractured with 40,000 gallons of gel and 46,000 lbs. sand. Gas-oil ratio is 2,700:1.

Drilled to 5,125 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 5,037 ft.

The well topped the Yates at 482 ft., Delaware at 2,577 and Bone Spring at 5,060 ft. on ground elevation of 3,235 ft. Pay was topped at 3,370 ft.

Location is 990 ft. from south and 1,650 ft. from east lines of Section 9, T21s, R27e.

Eddy County field gets 15.9 Mmcf well

The North Illinois Camp field of Eddy County, N.M. has gained a 3/8-mile northeast extension, 14 miles southwest of Loco Hills.

MEWBOURNE OIL CO. completed the No. 1 Chalk Bluff "6" State for a calculated absolute open flow of 15.9 Mmcfd on various chokes with flowing tubing pressure of 2,575 psi. Condensate gravity was 51.6 degrees API and gas-liquid ratio was 52,833:1.

The well flowed from perforations 10,084 to 10,092 ft., which had been acidized with 2,600 gallonsof 7.5 percent HCL.

Drilled to 10,200 ft., the well was plugged back to 10,151 ft. with seven inch casing set at 9,445 ft.

On ground elevation of 3,635 ft., formation tops include the Yates at 478 ft., Seven Rivers at 596, Queen at 1,209, Grayburg at 1,560, San Andres at 2,062, Glorieta at 3,626, Tubb at 4,736, Drinkard at 5,531, Abo at 5,878, Wolfcamp at 6,606, Cisco at 7,742, Canyon at 8,432, Strawn at 8,944, Atoka at 9,562, and Morrow at 10,006 ft. Pay was topped at 10,084 ft.

Location is 990 ft. from south and 730 ft. from west lines of Section 6, T18s, R28e.

Texas firm to build Russian oil refinery

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — A local company says it has reached an agreement with Russian officials to build a small oil refinery that will be shipped to Siberia.

The crude topping unit to be built by Ventech Engineers Inc. could be the first American-made oil refinery used in the new Commonwealth of Independent States, company officials said.

Ventech officials said the unit will be capable of refining crude oil into such substances as kerosene, diesel and a petrochemical building-block called naptha. It will have a capacity of 6,000 barrels a day.

"The concept is in very hot demand over there," Kevin Stanley, a Ventech sales official, told the Pasadena Citizen in an article published last week. "We're getting a lot of interest."

The refinery will be assembled in this Houston suburb near a former drive-in theater. One advantage of the smaller size is that the refinery is practically portable, company officials said.

"We have seen an incredible demand for these units in the former USSR. Their cities lack the ability to produce fuels for transportation and heating," said Bill Stanley, Ventech's president. "Some airports have jets stranded on the tarmac because of lack of jet fuel."

The plant will be assembled in several large pieces and then shipped to Russia, where it will need little preparation other than pouring a concrete slab for stabilization. Ventech said the unit would be ready for shipping by December and in operation by April.

ASSESS: Majors hire environmental staffs cause of the large number of majors trying to divest multiple properties, Mobil relies heavily on environmental contractors.

"Our groups can't always effectively handle every site assessment and NORM Survey, and handle their other functions, so we'll hire contract help based on our workload."

Miller said most of Mobil's assessments involve basically looking at a property's surface and historical record data, otherwise known as a Phase I site assessment. Actual sampling of soil or ground water, and the subsequent clean up or site remediation of a property, are referred to as Phase II and Phase III respectively.

"Most of what we've done in the last year is primarily Phase I," Miller said. "We just haven't found the need for further analysis."

Larry Hall with Texaco said the majority of their assessments are also Phase I and are conducted regardless of whether they are looking to buy or sell a property. Texaco has environmental professionals on staff but sometimes needs to hire outside assistance.

"It depends on our workload," Hall said. "Most of our assessments are handled internally. Like everyone else, we're hit with an ever increasing number of regulatory requirements, so it's more work for our staff."

Hall said Texaco monitors compliance on all its properties on a regularly scheduled basis. At the local level these are referred to as "compliance assurance reviews" and at the corporate level they are known as "environmental audits."

"We come into each area and review about one-third of the properties each year," Hall said. "We have what I consider an environmental awareness by all people at Texaco and we're trained to instill this in our employees. We feel the best clean up is prevention."

Chevron is also keenly aware of environmental issues and has a staff of 15 safety professionals whose specialties vary from safety regulations to health specialists.

According to Dudley McDaniel, Chevron's environmental, safety, fire and health manager, "We are constantly assessing and reviewing operations to be sure our employees are not exposed to NORM or any environmental hazard."

McDaniel said their policy is to ensure that buyers of Chevron's properties know what they are getting.

"We make sure we fully disclose everything we know about a property," he said. "If there is asbestos insulation, even though it may be encapsulated and not a problem, the buyer still needs to know about it."

McDaniel said employees fill out rather extensive forms on each property listing the known ground water, depth, any previous damage claims we know about, and what the water's uses are — farming, cattle or irrigation, for example.

"We feel it's important for the buyer to know about potential liability," McDaniel said. "Our reports also include information on any pits on the property and their historical usage, whether they are netted, and their compliance status."

He said underground storage tanks are also detailed, even those that were dug up ten years ago.

"We want buyers to be aware of waste disposal streams from this field, any landfill, injection wells, spill history, field facilities and contamination," McDaniel explained. "We protect our employees and want buyers to know if they'll need to protect their employees."

McDaniel said Chevron has hired consultants for special investigation work, but all routine assessments on property transfers are handled by his department.

Marathon Oil Co.'s Mid-Continent Region office, headquartered in Midland, also has a full time environmental and safety department to handle site assessments on as as-needed basis. The company has a corporate environmental survey program which reviews selected sites on a random basis for compliance.

Any additional environmental investigation over and above a Phase I inspection may involve Marathon's Petroleum Technology Center in Littleton, Colo., according to a recent corporate news release. Internal environmental and safety professionals conduct NORM Surveys for Marathon.

The release also stated that environmental site assessments are an extension of Marathon's corporate policy to include environmental concerns as an integral part of corporate decision-making.

John Gargani, team leader of acquisitions and divestitures for Conoco, said they consider a site assessment an integral part of the evaluation on potential acquistion candidates.

"Our evaluation team consists of employees from different areas including production engineers, field people and an environmental coordinator," said Gargani. "We want to be certain the property is environmentally sound. On divestitures, we selectively perform site assessments, but on acquistions we always do."

Judy McLemore, environmental coordinator, said Conoco basically handles all site assessments and NORM Surveys in-house.

"If the Midland Division requires any additional expertise, we rely fairly heavily on consulting with other Conoco departments," said McLemore. "For example, Conoco's Houston office has ground water expertise we might call on occasionally."

She said "Conoco performs environmental audits from year to year so we know if there are problems before we sell any properties. Every two years we audit every property to ensure we are day-to-day taking care of environmental issues and staying in compliance."

Conoco regulatory coordinator Jimmy Carlile said his companyalso monitors all disposal wells.

"The Texas Railroad Commission has jurisdictional authority from the EPA to monitor all injection sites," said Carlile. "The state has just issued interim guidelines dealing with any oil contained in soil and how to clean it up."

These employees said Conoco has created a culture in which employees are responsible for doing their jobs safely and minimizing environmental impacts.

"Conoco has an environmental recognition program to credit employees who make improvements in environmental performance," said McLemore. "Employees look critically at their jobs in the areas of safety and the environment. For example, an employee's suggestion led to Conoco changing pipe dope to eliminate waste problems. Another employee determined a better, cost effective emission recovery for tanks."

GAS: Tubing revives wells

were completed with 5-inch casing and 4-inch tubing, says Baugh.

"Back in the early days, with that kind of reservoir pressure, it was easy for a deep gas well to unload fluids, but now with pressures one-quarter what they used to be there is not enough velocity to unload fluids up a 5-inch casing into a 4-inch tubing."

Not only does the coiled tubing provide a means of jetting fluid out of the hole, but once it is permanently installed it reduces the volume in the tubing and increases the velocity, allowing the well to keep itself unloaded. "Wells can produce up the annulus between the coiled tubing and production string, through the coiled tubing or both," said Baugh.

While a string of smaller tubing may achieve the same effect, Baugh notes that 2⅞-inch tubing may cost more than twice as much as coiled tubing.

Besides Chevron and Exxon at least two other operators are using coiled tubing to revive deep gas wells and Baugh feels the application could become widespread. "Not only is the coiled tubing process increasing production, it is also extending the life of old wells."

IMAGE: Oil producers try to turn their image green

(From 1E)

And there are full-length environmental position papers and speech texts written by the chairman of the boards, often printed on recycled paper.

These thoughtful pieces generally bear such titles as: "Protecting the Environment: The Oil Industry Imperative" by Ron Michaud, Conoco manager of environmental affairs, or "Environmental Management: Burden of Opportunity" by Constantine Nicandros, president and CEO of Conoco.

Add to this hundreds of press releases about the environmental concern of major oil companies and it becomes obvious the industry is serious about changing its image.

There are stories about Amoco working around owls nesting in pipe at one of its facilities — "so as not to disturb them." There is a story about Fina working diligently to rescue eagles in Louisiana.

On the surface it may appear to be a well-coordinated, industry-wide public relations program, cranking out reams of propaganda in an effort to score green points and get in the environmental bed.

While this may be part of the motivation, there is also a sincere desire to help build a better environment. And oil companies have demonstrated they are willing to back their words with money.

When Constantine Nicandros in his Burden or Opportunity speech says: "Environmental protection transcends classification as a burden," he couldn't be more sincere. This is a view he has expressed many times. Nicandros said, "Environmenal protection is a responsibility . . . but better environmental management is, indeed, an opportunity, as it can enhance productivity, upgrade the quality of operations and add a new dimension of commercial opportunities inside our industry. Environmental stewardship makes good business sense."

One could compile a catalog of worthy environmental projects major oil companies have spent money on — they are diverse and expensive. For instance, Louisiana marshlands are disappearing at the rate of 70 acres per year as a result of saltwater intrusion caused primarily by ship channels through the wetlands. To halt this erosion, Fina has spent $20 million on a system of more than 100 series of weirs and dams.

The question is: Will environmentalists believe the oil-company actions are sincere or will the lingering hostility continue. Oil companies are hoping their messages can help alter their image.

DOE approves coal gassification project

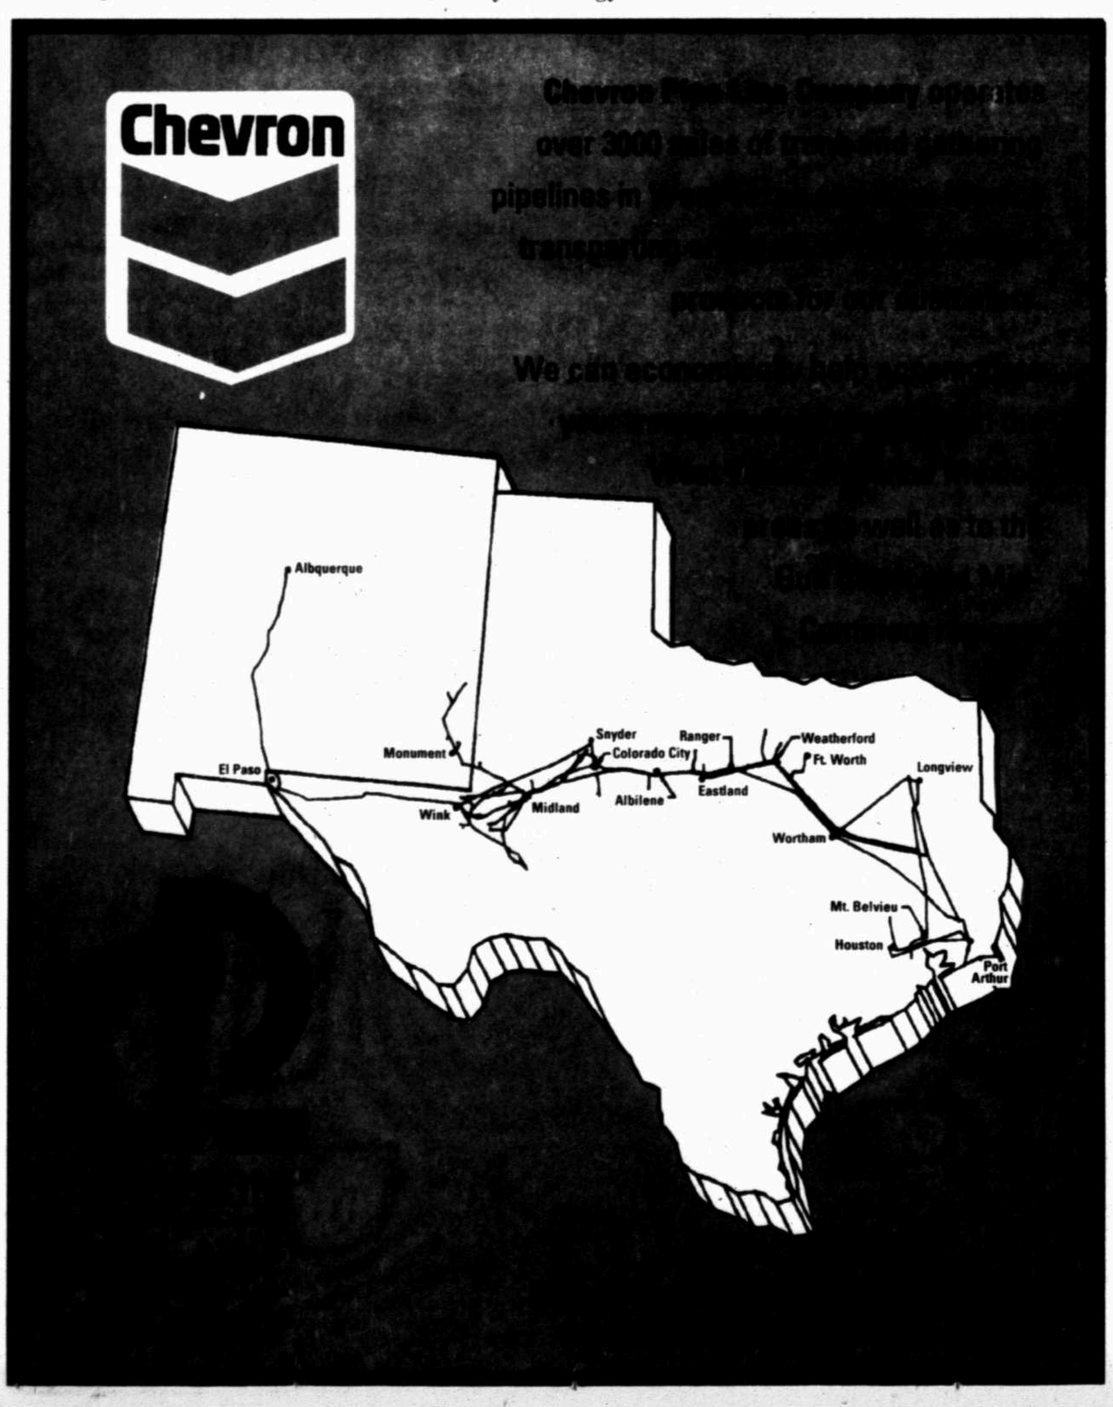

PLAINFIELD, Ind. (AP) — Congress has 30 days to review an agreement that would provide PSI Energy partial federal funding for a power generator that would burn high-sulfur Midwest coal while helping the utility comply with tougher clean air rules.

The state's largest utility and Houston-based Destec Energy Inc., a subsidiary of Dow Chemical Co., want to build a coal gasification plant at PSI's Wabash River Generating Station at West Terre Haute.

Secretary of Energy Hames D. Watkins announced that his department had given approval to the project.

Work on the project is scheduled to begin in August and continue through June 1998.

The project is expected to cost $396 million.

AMT provisions may increase exploration

DALLAS — If they remain intact, provisions of the pending Energy Bill that reduce alternative minimum tax (AMT) liabilities for American independent oil and gas companies would likely increase domestic exploration and development activity, according to John Swords, national director of taxation for the energy industry group of Coopers & Lybrand, the international accounting firm.

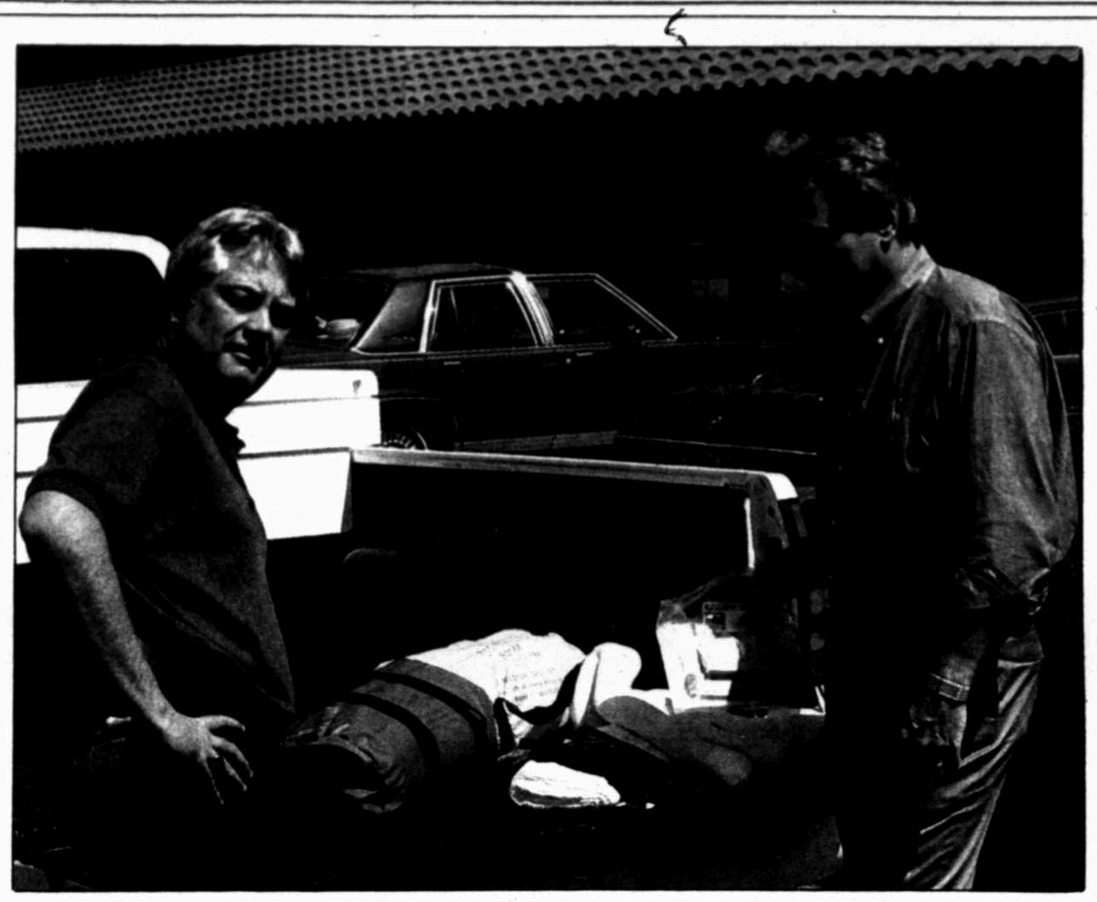

"As contained in H.R. 776, the "Comprehensive National Energy Policy Act," the temporary elimination of intangible drilling costs (IDC) and percentage depletion preferences in calculating alternative minimum tax would represent a substantial improvement over current law," said Swords. "There is no question that the new AMT provision, as written by Rep. Bill Archer (R-Tex), would provide a needed incentive to increase the amount of domestic drilling over current levels."

"In its current form, IDC and depletion would only be eliminated as AMT preferences through 1997, but this would still be a big improvement," Swords said.

The bill would effectively treat investors differently than producers, Swords noted, providing for a 40 percent (30 percent in 1993 only) limitation on the amount that an investor could reduce alternative minimum taxable income (AMTI) by not including IDC preferences as computed under prior rules.

"Because investors are limited to reducing their IDC preference items by 40 percent of AMTI, I believe the bill will only provide a modest incentive for new investors to put capital into domestic oil and gas exploration and development projects," Swords said.

"However, if the current language remains intact, producers should benefit substantially, since they will be allowed to drill more without additional tax," he added. "For independents, would include not only the repeal of IDC and percentage depletion as preference items, but the repeal of the corporate ACE (adjusted current earnings) adjustments for IDC."

Spill killer

Response time means everything in the event of a spill. Rather than wait on a spill response team to arrive at the scene of a spill, Eco-Logical Environmental Services Inc. has developed a small easy-to-use spill packet (left).

Marketed as "Eco-Strike-Pak," the emergency packets assist companies and employees in taking a pro-active stance toward fighting spills of all types, since the majority of spills that occur on a daily basis are of the five and 10-gallon variety.

The "Eco-Strike-Pak" contains various amojnts of sorbents from pads and socks to disposal bags, gloves, emergency response guidebooks, instructions for use and an 800 number that the company or employee can call for assistance or disposal options.

Operators can charge off habitat land

A measure passed by the Texas Legislature intended to protect wildlife habitats may prove to be a vehicle for some oil and gas operators to shave a few dollars off their tax bills.

Effective this past January 1, land used for native wildlife management can be appraised as agricultural land. This permits property providing habitat for wildlife to receive the same tax break as owners of a agricultural land used for livestock.

According to the bill, land used for hunting animals, as well as land used for bird watching, could qualify for the agricultural land exemptions. Encouraging employees and customers to visit an oil field to observe the wildlife there could save a company tax dollars.

For a free coy of the bill, send a self-addressed stamped envelope, marked "Wildlife Exemptions," to the National Audubon Society Southwest Regional Office, 2525 Wallingwood, Suite 1505, Austin, Texas 78746.

BIOREMEDIATION

The high tech, low cost solution in . . .

- Dealing with hydrocarbon-based soil or water contamination
- Reducing paraffin build-up in oil wells
- Enhancing oil recovery

DE-CONTAMINATION

Bioremediation is the natural demanufacturing of waste into non-harmful elements. Alpha West supplies naturally-occurring yet non-genetically engineered biological products in a proprietary Bio-Catalyst which enhances decomposition, even in oxygen-depleted environments.

Hydrocarbon-based contaminants are transformed by reduction/oxidation, ultimately into carbon dioxide and water.

Bioremediation allows you to " speed up nature," resulting in a natural, cost-effective way to remove problem materials.

Since 1985 we have been actively involved in bioremediation as a de-contamination solution throught our parent organization, Alpha Environmental, Inc. Alpha West utilizes Alpha Environmental's AE-Petrologic Microx® -T Process for land treatment of wastes.

PARAFFIN FIGHTER

Conventional hot oiling may cause formation damage, is expensive, and in time, paraffin will build up again. Chemicals are usually costly and toxic, even sometimes threatening the health of your field employees.

Alpha West utilizes Alpha Environmental's AE-PetroLogic®-1, a safe, yet very effective biological product which controls deposition of paraffins from wellbore to tank battery, and is cost-effective and non-toxic.

Parrafin control is accomplished through the aerobic microbial metabolization of oil and the formation of biosurfactant. The aerobic microbial treatment for paraffin control is a new, yet very successful approach.

BRIEFS

Mitchell Energy buys Basin properties

Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. has purchased interest in 274 wells and 10,400 gross acres of leases in West Texas from Oryx Energy Co. for $4.1 million. The purchase adds a 10.73 percent working interest in the TXL South Unit to its previous holdings, making Mitchell the third largest interest owner in the waterflood project with 17.15 percent. Texaco is the largest interest owner.

Expansion of the waterflood has increased the unit's average daily oil production from 500 barrels to the current rate of 1,200 barrels daily.

Report blames overfill in LPG explosion

AUSTIN — According to an investigation summary released by the Railroad Commission, a Seminole Pipeline, Co. underground storage cavern eight miles south of Brenham was overfilled with liquefied petroleum gas product the morning of April 7. As the liquids reached the surface, they turned into a dense vapor which later ignited and exploded.

Maxus finals delineation well in Bolivia

Maxus Energy Corp. has completed drilling a delineation well on its Mamore Block in Blovia and plans extensive testing. The Surubi #2 was drilled directionally from the discovery well and had 94 feet of net pay from multiple zones in the Cajones formation. The bottom hole of Surubi #2 is approximately 8,850 feet away from the discovery well, Surubi #1, which tested from two zones at a combined rate of approximately 9 million cubic feet of gas per day and 800 barrels of condensate per day.

New energy software set for release

Energy Software, Inc. has announced version 3 of Paragon, its geodata management and mapping software, at the AAPG/CSPG Annual Convention in Calgary, June 21-24. The new version is now in beta test, preparing for release in August.

Paragon was first introduced in 1988 as a full-featured well data management program. Since then, the system has grown to include contouring, seismic data management, and interactive log-curve cross-sections. It is used by petroleum geologists at large and small companies worldwide. The new version offers dozens of enhancements, many suggested by users, according to Richard Bowdon, Vice-President of Marketing. For example, a new macro feature can automate repetitive operations such as merging well data, production, and map surveys into a Paragon project.

Arch Petroleum lists net quarterly loss

Arch Petroleum Inc. reports a net loss of $37,000 on revenues of $1.2 million for its second quarter ended April 30, 1002. Net income for the six months ended April 30, 1992 was $22,00 on revenues of $2.5 million.

Arch to participate in pipeline purchase

Arch Petroleum says it has signed a letter of intent to participate in the acquisition of a 6" pipeline running approximately 100 miles from Wichita Falls, Texas to Saginaw, Texas, terminating about 10 miles north of Fort Worth.

Arch said it would participate with Central States Energy Corporation, Albuquerque, New Mexico, in the formation of Saginaw Pipeline Company. Central States' principal, William M. Decker, will serve as the president of the newly formed company. Mr. Decker has over 30 years of business experience, including oil and gas investments, banking and natural gas transportation and processing.

NORM creates new challenge

■ Radioactive residue has become a new problem for oil leases.

By Ellen Hopkins

Some say it began in a Mississippi schoolyard; others believe the Exxon Valdez incident started the ball rolling.

In any case, environmental consciousness is increasing among oil and gas companies of all sizes, and as a result, environmental services companies are finding plenty of work.

Majors and independents alike have found the need to determine whether any properties they own, operate or are considering for purchase might be subject to contamination.

Because old drill pipe used in playground equipment at a Mississippi school was found to contain radioactive contamination, questions have continually been raised about the danger of radioactive materials on or from wellsites everywhere.

Focus on the ENVIRONMENT

Proposed regulations in Texas are pending according to Robert Free, an administrator for emergency response and investigations at the Texas Department of Health in Austin.

"At this moment there is no specific rule that addresses a set limit on what is considered contaminated, but we have proposals that will spell out restrictions on NORM levels," he said.

"Our basic area of concern deals with equipment and paraphernalia, like drill pipe, that has been taken from wells and drilling sites and may be contaminated with radiation," Free said. "If a company bores the pipe and resells it, radiation may be left at the site, accumulate on equipment and be transported to a steel mill. Almost all steel mills have sensitive radiation detectors to screen for this, but our concern in Texas is with the scrap industry and service companies that handled the pipe."

Environmental companies are hired to conduct NORM Surveys, as well as inspections for other types of contamination, on a variety of properties. Majors and independents are hiring these companies to conduct "site assessments," or investigations to determine potential environmental risk, on properties they are divesting or considering for purchase.

A generally accepted description of a site assessment includes three phases. Phase I comprises a visual on-site inspection to observe physical indications of contamination from equipment, pits, and asbestos containing materials.

Then record checking begins to determine the historical use of the property and answer such questions as were there any open pits, underground storage facilities or streams on this property in the past? Discovering previous ownership can be a records nightmare and require travel to numerous state offices, usually in more than one city. Aerial photography and geologic maps are used as well as land records.

Phase II assessments are conducted if the Phase I investigation raises any suspicions of contamination. Phase II may include sampling and analysis of ground water, soil, asbestos, on-site equipment, and other fluids. Coring is also done if the extent of damage is questionable.

Some environmental assessment firms offer Phase III services which include site remediation, monitoring, hazardous material removal and revegetation of the affected area.

To avoid future liability and eliminate potential harmful exposure to their employees, most majors have set up their own environmental departments. Depending on work load, however, some majors still need to contract site assessments or NORM surveys from local environmental assessment firms.

The independents who are considering purchase of the majors' divestitures are also hiring these firms so they know what they are buying.

The general concern is two-fold: no one wants to intentionally spread contaminated materials, but if charges are filed then who is to blame? The present or previous property owner?

John Tate, land manager for Southwest Royalties, Inc., said liability is his company's primary reason for hiring an environmental service company to perform site assessments.

"We buy as many properties as anybody in the Permian Basin and we always have the properties assessed," said Tate. "We do it 99 percent of the time to know what we're getting into. We see a big savings in requiring the seller to fix a problem prior to closing."

Tate explained that liabilities are not always transferrable. He said sometimes the contract is written to indemnify the purchaser for what happened prior to the sale, and to indemnify the seller for subsequent happenings.

"You can't be too careful," he said. "A lot of times the seller will fix a problem if it is disclosed prior to the sale."

Sal Pagano, vice-president with Midland Resources, said purchase and sale agreements can be written differently.

"An astute buyer will accept responsibility for a property only when he takes over the operation," said Pagano. "We won't want to inherit anybody's problems."

Pagano explained four reasons Midland Resources hires a company to perform a site assessment.

"From our perspective hiring an environmental site assessment company depends on the size of the prospect. Are we talking about one well or 100 wells? The more operations there are the more responsibility there is to be sure all regulations are considered.

"Along with this is determining what kind of operations are involved," said Pagano.

"Exposure to increased well maintenance determines whether we hire an assessment company," said Pagano. "Also, is this an area where drainage patterns are a consideration?"

Pagano said, "An environmental assessment company knows to look for specifics that we didn't catch on the first pass. They're familiar with all regulations and are sensitive to uncovering potential problems. It's just good business to have a third unbiased opinion."

And business has been fairly good for the assessment companies. According to Gary Miller, president of Highlander Environmental, his company has performed oil and gas site assessments on approximately 2,000 well sites and production facilities in the last 18 months and he expects the trend to continue.

"A typical site assessment for us is 30 to 40 wells and two to five production facilities," Miller said. "Potential property buyers hire us to review a major's site assessment and/or conduct one of our own."

He said sometimes a site assessment involves an abandoned location that today appears only as a plowed field. It may once have supported a gas plant which an investigation of historical aerial photos will disclose.

"A lot of the potential success of a site assessment is knowing the previous owners," Miller said. "The first thing we do is find the chain of operators because this can raise some flags."

Jim Yahr, environmental scientist with Eco-Logical Environmental Services, said the records checking can take anywhere from four hours to days.

"Many of the records can be found at the Midland Railroad Comission office, but sometimes we have to go to Lubbock or Austin and check with both the RRC and the Water Commission," Yahr said. "For New Mexico properties we may need to go to Hobbs, Artesia and Carlsbad to look at state records and check BLM records."

Yahr said the cost of a site assessment depends on the property and its location. "Assessments can range from $2,000 to $5,000 or more for a lot of wells. Sometimes our work is turnkey and other times we bill out time and mileage."

Yahr said the majority of their site assessment work comes from independents looking to purchase majors' divestiture properties. He said the independents have also requested a lot of NORM Surveys.

Tate said Southwest Royalties' assessments always include NORM surveys and checks for PCB contamination.

"We also look at water samples for casing integrity and any spills in the area," he said. "It's not an insurance policy, but it helps."

Miller said, "Suspicions of contamination are especially high on older properties since open pit drilling was legal prior to the 1980s."

He said it can be difficult to determine the plume, i.e. migration of contamination, and ground water problems have been discovered.

Germ 'warfare' makes for cleaner oilpatch

■ Hydrocarbon-eating bacteria are being used increasingly to bring a better environment to the oilpatch.

By Joe Dominey

Oil producers now face pressures from two divergent directions: the economic crunch that has forced them to cut overhead and operate lean and mean, and the increasingly complicated environmental protection laws which appear to be driving costs upward.

Helping in this war on cost is a new application, using bacteria. Bio-degradation products have been available for decades, but until recent years there was no incentive to switch from conventional chemical treatments.

Three companies surveyed offer different approaches to three major oil field technologies — remediation of contaminants in the soil caused by hydrocarbons, paraffin control, and enhanced oil recovery.

Fred G. Brown is chief executive and principal owner of National Parakleen Co. Inc., based in Midland. A petroleum engineer, Brown started experimenting with biological products in 1988, "when it was definitely snake oil," and now operates offices in five states, and plans to open soon in Calgary.

Focus on the ENVIRONMENT

Brown described the bacteria as naturally occurring, non-pathogenic and non-genetically engineered. They are mixtures of live faculative anaerobes containing several different strains which produce desirable changes in crude oil properties and formation water.

"The two requirements are paraffin base oil and water wet formation rock. The bacteria increases the quality in the oil. In industry terms, it increases the gravity of the oil and decreases viscosity. When you decrease viscosity you increase the flowability or producing rate, and you change the oil mobility so oil can flow more readily to the well bore," he explained.

The Altamont/Bluebell Field produces one of the highest wax content crude oils in the United States. The wax content can be as great as 60 percent.

National Parakleen's products consist of four groups or mixtures of different strains, each selectively bio-degrading alkanes according to their molecular carbon order.

The company initiated a pilot treating program in March 1988 to test control wells to determine optimum treatment volumes, effectiveness at various temperatures, and frequency of treatment.

After the pilot tests, chemical treatments were discontinued on all the wells, and they were inoculated with bacteria.

Estimated increases in oil and gas reserves resulting from the MEOR is 30,000 bbls. and 106,000 MCF per well.

"In the Altamont/Bluebell Project we're cleaning up some surface spills and reserve pits. We're still working on them, but will finish up this month."

He observed that one of the problems with bio-degradation is that it is a slow process. "Now the industry has a chemical mind-set. They want to see you go out there and pour two things together, and they want to see (an immediate) change. Of course, that's the reason people like chemicals and the chemical industry is so popular.

"Our business is like you know the grass grows, you just can't sit there and watch it. It's a process that Mother Nature is going to make happen, and with the right cultures and the right application, they'll totally take care of the problem."

Brown, who is engaged in a fierce lawsuit against a chemical company doesn't have much regard for the opposition he has faced from the chemical industry.

"There's a lot of resistance and pressure put on our industry by the chemical industry," he said.

In cleaning hydro-carbon spills, National Parakleen takes a soil sample, sends it to the lab, and isolates the bacteria using the toxic substance as a food source. Sometimes off-the-shelf products are blended with the native bacteria to aid in the acceleration process.

"We have the technology to find bacteria in the natural state, isolate them in our oils, then basically get rid of what I call the 'cripples' and the not-so-healthy ones and end up with what I call '18-year-old flat-bellies.' What we do is keep purifying and growing from the naturally occurring bacteria so that we have healthy colonies in a nutrient base that we put back into the system in a much higher concentrated number," he said

"We stimulate the colony that's there but we also add our cultures back. With the '18-year-old flat-bellies' they're more aggressive. That's the advantage over the guys who just put nutrients in," he added.

Time is a factor in bio-remediation. In New Mexico, National Parakleen has a customer who has a settling pond with over 20 years accumulation of sediments, including chemical residue, iron sulfide, oils, and waxes. The customer has been instructed to clean up the pond.

"To clean it up like they've been asked to do would take several million dollars. We're working with the EPA on this and have gotten some encouragement. We're trying to get them to agree that it took 20 years to cause the problem, give us 10 years to clean it up in a natural, bio-remediation process.

He said the key was to clean-up without bankrupting companies, ruining the economy and shutting down the industry.

"We spend much less money," he noted, "by putting in a sampling program and checking it every six months. The landowner can do his own sampling, too."

Brown said the clean-up system works so well that it has become widespread in the industry. National Parakleen's clientele is comprised of "practically every major" and many large independents. Twelve employees serve clients from offices in Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, and headquarters in Midland. In the near future the company plans to expand into Mexico, Latin America, and Indonesia.

Alpha West, Inc. is a sales and service company principally owned by Midlander Wm. B. Blakemore II and family, and operates under contract with Alpha Environmental of Austin. Its primary business is degrading paraffins down hole and bio-remediation of hydrocarbon contaminants.

Alpha Environmental was formed in 1985 by a group of experts who collected bacteria around the world that occurred in natural oil seeps and used hydrocarbons as a food source. These bacteria were then selectively bred to weed out any human pathogens, and to be tolerant to salt water.

The resulting cultures then produce a harvest in the form of dry powder consisting of highly concentrated cells which has little loss in viability and a shelf life of one year or longer. A biocatalyst serves as an activator and also aids the bacteria to survive in an anaerobic (oxygen deprived) environment. In addition, a small quantity of nutrient, basically a common fertilizer, stimulates growth down-hole.

"Our initial thrust was down-hole, not necessarily surface remediation. We started in 1988, first of all looking at using bacteria strictly for enhanced recovery. At that time there really wasn't an awareness by the oil companies that there was a product available (even though) people had been working on it for 40 or 50 years," said Bill Blakemore Jr., who manages day-to-day operations of the company.

The company has made somewhat of a technological breakthrough in the down-hole area by getting aerobic bacteria to live in a down-hole environment without oxygen."

In its EOR program Alpha West inoculates bacteria into the reservoir through a water injection method, spreading the bacteria throughout the reservoir. A portion of the oil is degraded in place, producing surfactants and fatty acids.

"It changes the character of the reservoir, increases sweep, and the result would be an increase in production," he explained.

The company has even obtained grants from the Department of Energy to develop EOR projects on a test basis, and nationwide is treating between 500 and 700 wells.

But as the environmental concern has grown so has its attention to bio-remediation. "There're two schools of thought on bio-remediation," said Blakemore. "One is stimulation and one is augmentation. Stimulation is where a company tills the soil, and adds moisture and a nutrient to increase bacterial activity.

"We augment the natural bacteria with a bacterial culture that's been collected from around the world. They are all hydrocarbon degraders."

Blakemore says the Texas Railroad Commission's interim guidelines are rather vague, but expects a tightening in environmental regulations will stimulate the bio-remediation business.

Alpha West also cleans up contamination from leaking underground petroleum storage tanks, neutralizing contaminants without having to excavate the soil.

"We're currently working at a site in Crest, Texas, and two big sites. One's in Troy, Ohio, about 60 miles northwest of Cincinnati. The other site is at Granite City, Illinois, which is a suburb of St. Louis. Those look promising, and we're getting good reductions in the hydrocarbon numbers."

Blakemore also described a waste minimization program in treating production tanks with "high bottoms" in which accumulated paraffin and silt has settled to the bottom, preventing the sale of oil. He said that in two or three days bacterial action can reduce the problem without having to drain the tank.

"Outside the oil field we're looking at waste water treatment, either in agriculture - dairy farms, feed lots, and grease traps in restaurants which contribute to clogging sewer lines."

In another aspect of bio-remediation, Midlanders Richard S. Gaddy and Bill McAnelly are regional distributors for a Houston-based bio-remediation enterprise, Environmental Reclamation Co. As sales representatives, Gaddy and McAnelly are doing business as The Encino Environmental Company, with offices in Midland and Amarillo.

The principals of Environmental Reclamation are Tom Mayfield and Rod Kuehler of Houston. Mayfield developed a concentrated liquid product to stimulate the growth of house plants, then realized the agricultural opportunities, and formed a company with Kuehler.

Kuehler is an accountant who worked in New York City until he was transferred to Houston in 1971. Eight years ago he got out of the accounting profession to pursue his entrepreneurial bent.

Essentially their bio-remediation process is the introduction of nutrient products which stimulate a very rapid growth of naturally occurring microorganisms. These, in turn, consume hydrocarbons until either the food supply is exhausted, there is a depletion of oxygen, or the temperature of the soil falls below 2 degrees Centigrade.

The primary difference between Environmental Reclamation and other companies is that no new microorganisms are introduced into the reservoir. "We use indigenous microbes on site. We don't believe in introducing new microbes because they mutate constantly. Ten years from now you don't know what they'll become. We don't want to create an 'Andromeda Strain' situation," Mayfield said.

His observations were amusingly graphic: "Bio-remediation these days is getting as exotic as putting on chicken manure."

The company's petroleum product (ERC 3/25:24 Petro) is described as an adjuvant, or carrier, which energizes and accelerates the resident microbial population in the hydrocarbons.

Mayfield and Kuehler spent two and a half years of research and development of their bio-remediation product.

Mayfield states that their nutrient works well in tight soil structures, clays, and heavy soils. "The product will break down colloid, tilth, aerability, and permeability of the soils. It promotes movement of oil through the substrate and adjusts pH to a neutral."

He described their products as "one-stop shopping" with the ability to chelate micro-nutrients, zinc, iron, etc., making them available to bacteria.

They apply about one gallon of concentrate to 4 to 10 cubic yards of contaminated soil, depending on the volume of the contamination and type of soil. Resident bacteria are stimulated to consume the contaminants, leaving water, carbon dioxide, and long chain fatty acids.

"It's a natural process. All we do is put it into fast forward."

The remediation takes place over 30 to 70 days. They can also remediate contamination under buildings or other structures.

Mayfield stated that their clients are experiencing a cost reduction of 20 percent to 40 percent when compared with alternative methods.

Environmental review more important than title search

By Joe Dominey

Midland oil and gas attorney Mark K. Leaverton, partner in the firm of Leaverton & Atnipp, is telling his clients that when they're buying producing properties, an environmental review is now more important than a title review.

He warns that the legal liabilities under the alphabet soup collection of laws such as CERCLA, RCRA, and a bundle of federal and state regulations can turn a relatively low cost property into financial disaster.

"The laws are now so complicated. There are so many diverse laws that overlap," he said.

The key issue is the application of due diligence in auditing any potential environmental pitfalls on properties under consideration.

"The majors are transferring all environmental liability in their sales contracts, requiring the purchaser to indemnify the seller of any past, present or future liabilities. What that does is it forces you to do a very complete environmental assessment of the property," Leaverton observed.

Even if a buyer were able to get a seller to agree to responsibility for environmental liabilities incurred during his ownership, Leaverton said, "Very rarely do you see the big guys accepting liability. The EPA doesn't necessarily recognize these private agreements or private contracts. You can spell out what happens if you find environmental problems, but it's going to be the guy with the deep pockets who pays."

Leaverton said that another problem is when an operator buys a lease he buys all the problems on the leasehold. The courts have held that the lessor will be liable for any pollution even though the lessor has no connection at all with the ultimate operator of the premises.

"The size of the property is irrelevant. You've got to look at every single part of the property, especially the producing areas."

For purchasers, "The real trouble is going to be for these smaller guys, who are paying $250,000 or less. They're buying older properties, which are more likely to have problems. They may be buying a $10-million environmental problem on a $10,000 well site."

One thing a purchaser can do is get an option agreement with the mineral owner permitting an environmental review.

The pertinent laws affecting oil and gas operators include the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act of 1980 (CERCLA), and the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA). CERCLA was amended in 1986 by the Superfund Amendment and Reauthorization Act of 1986 (SARA).

CERCLA lists over 700 substances which are considered to be hazardous. There is a petroleum exclusion that exempts by-products of oil and gas production. This exclusion under CERCLA, however, does not provide the industry a blanket protection should the oil and gas substance be defined under the Clean Water Act, Clean Air Act or the Toxic Substance Control Act as a hazardous substance.

In tandem with state and federal water and air quality regulations, these laws have big teeth.

An operator is required to report any disposal of hazardous materials under RCRA. Failure can lead to civil penalties of $25,000 to $50,000 per day of each violation and criminal penalties of up to five years in prison. Knowing violations of RCRA regulations in a manner that endangers others could lead to a fine of $250,000 and 15 years in prison.

The petroleum exemption of the RCRA provides that a hazardous waste does not include crude oil, natural gas, natural gas liquids, synthetic gas used for fuels, refined petroleum products, and fluids injected for secondary, tertiary or enhanced recovery of oil or gas.

However, such exemptions do not shield oil and gas owners from other laws which protect water supplies and air quality. The courts will take into account that owner's specialized knowledge in the area of oil and gas and will hold him to a higher standard of conduct.

Individuals within companies might be held personally liable, both civilly and criminally, thus "piercing the corporate veil."

Potentially Responsible Parties (PRPs) will be required to pay not only for the cleanup of the site but also costs involved in environmental investigations and studies and the creation of a remedial action plan.

In a presentation to the New Mexico Landmen's Association recently, Leaverton outlined a common scenario in which a major company sells to a small independent.

Big Oil decides that its Big Field, discovered in 1963, has become a relatively noncommercial project. Little Oil offered its bid, and as the successful bidder, enters into negotiations for the preparation of a purchase and sale agreement.

A major issue at the purchase and sale agreement stage regards the inclusion of environmental liability and indemnity provisions. Big Oil wants to include provisions which transfer all environmental liability to Little Oil upon closing. This liability will pass to Little Oil even though such liability may have resulted from acts which occurred during Big Oil's ownership of Big Field.

Throughout the years, the primary focus of such a transaction would be to verify the title. The environmental status of these properties has now become an even greater concern to purchasers of productive oil and gas properties.

Little Oil is unsuccessful in persuading Big Oil to include a provision which would attach liability for environmental contamination on the basis of ownership.

Since Little Oil failed to obtain a satisfactory indemnification provision, there should be added to the purchase and sale agreement a provision which allows Little Oil to evaluate the properties for environmental contamination prior to closing.

This would include an on-site inspection, an examination of both public and private records (including those held by Big Oil), a review of various filings made with the Texas Railroad Commission, county records, CERCLA Super Fund sites, and the information files of Petroleum Information, Inc., Dwight's Energy Services, Inc. and Hendon Map Service, Inc.

Leaverton strongly urged that purchasers hire qualified outside consultants or utilize qualified in-house personnel to conduct environmental audits.

"If there is any boom in the oil industry, it is in the area of environmental auditing," he observed.

Leaverton said that a Phase I assessment of a 150 well package might take three to four weeks and cost $25,000.

"You can hire a guy for $5,000 to work five days and conduct a physical inspection. He should look for salt water pollution, which is going to be a big problem. You can spend $1,500 for a two day audit. No matter what you spend, there's no getting off the hook."

Leaverton said that Congress is moving very quickly removing exceptions for the oil & gas industry.

His advice is to become educated by attending seminars and reading everything available.

Geologists' salaries hold

Staff report

Salaries for petroleum geologists remained steady in 1991 in the face of continued shedding of the domestic exploration staffs and a virtual standstill in hiring, according to the annual salary survey of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists

"Most large companies continue to trim their exploration staffs in anticipation of moving most of their efforts overseas to discover hydrocarbons," said Mike Ayling of MLA Resources, of Tulsa, OK, who has conducted the survey since 1980 for AAPG, the world's largest geoscience organization with over 33,000 members in 103 counties.

Ayling noted little change in the salaries from the previous year "with the exception of the geologists with three-to-five years of experience where higher starting salaries over the past couple of years are now reflected.

The past years' surveys have noted that entry-level geologists were scarce due to the declining number of earth science majors in college. Consequently, with limited numbers available, competition among companies to hire the top students drove the salaries higher.

Ayling, who collected his date from over 200 individuals and companies, said "Uncertainty surrounding gas prices, and lower oil prices from the highs during the Gulf war have caused most managements to virtually suspend all decision-making."

The salary survey is undertaken to provide a yardstick for those interested in assessing compensation. The survey is based on employed, salaried geologists and does not account for those primarily paid in the form of consulting fees, retainers or overrides, and the large number of unemployed or under-employed geologists. Additionally, no attempt has been made to include any additional sums to account for employee benefits, bonuses, automobiles or other perquisites.

Ayling also said he feels strongly "that compensation is often a secondary when evaluating overall job satisfaction."

The February issue of Money magazine ranked geologists as the second of 100 "most desirable" professions as judged by editors using a number of criteria - with the job satisfaction factor receiving a heavy weighting.

Johnson Matthey's unique Hatchback is a design breakthrough in catalyst access.

To reach the catalyst inside a typical catalytic converter, you must contend with hundreds of bolts. In some cases, you have to bring out a crane to disassemble the exhaust of your engine just to service the catalyst. On Johnson Matthey's Hatchback, there are only eight bolts to remove. That means inspection is easier and maintenance can be done in place.
Exceedingly Fast. With less manpower and no special equipment. And, with little or no downtime of equipment. That means significant savings to you.
You know the durable, high quality, high performance of Johnson Matthey catalysts. They will keep you in compliance with NO_x, CO and HC conversion efficiencies of up to 98% and typical life spans of over five years.

PETROLEUM PERSPECTIVES

Bush made good showing at Rio

By Harry Spannaus

President Bush is now in trouble with those who believe we homosapiens are the real cancers of Mother Earth, that we are second in priority to the environment and that we humans are but an evil plague on nature.

Spannaus

Yes, for many in the environmental overkill business Bush blew it in Rio at the World's first Earth Summit.

He blew it because he didn't give up good judgement and common sense to knee-jerking reactionists who cast away sensibility for a balance between engaging in the fields of environmental disinformation and fictitious claims and findings.

While I believe it was a mistake for President Bush to have made a showing at Rio, what he did do, he did well. He did not sell U.S. industry down the river, but he did pledge a considerable sum of money to help quench the thirst of many who believe the U.S. as the World's worst polluter, is not pulling its full load to protect nature.

Bush was most likely pressured into the Rio trip by the strength of the environmental movement regardless of the many indicators which suggest some element of danger was brewing upon his arrival in Panama. Sadly, the Panama disruption was another indicator that a super power leader is not necessarily universally loved.

There is no doubt that the Earth Summit has gotten the attention of the majority of the world's governments. One hundred and fifty-three nations signed treaties on global warming and plant and animal protection measures.

President Bush did not, and rightly so, agree to such provisions which would in effect play "Taps" to the economic growth of the nation and likely further damage our domestic petroleum industry and our industrial base as well.

It is amazing that this huge worldwide commitment has been agreed to by intelligent men and women who accepted global warming myth and disinformation instead of scientific fact in their decision process for treaty acceptance.

Recently, the Wall Street Journal published an article, "Beware of False Gods in Rio," which was basically an appeal by 46 prominent scientist in the U.S. including 27 Nobel Prize winners along with 218 scientists in other countries, to stop irrational idealogy that opposes scientific and industrial progress and impedes economic and social development; namely the global warming myth!

Scientists readily subscribe to the objectives of a scientific ecology for a universe whose resources must be taken stock of, monitored and preserved. However such stock taking, monitoring and preservation must be founded on scientific criteria and not on irrational preconceptions and knee-jerking reactions.

What the scientists are relating to of course is the high note of hysteria about the greenhouse effect and global warming.

While most agree that the level of atmostpheric CO2 emmisions worldwide, there is no factual evidence that an increase in CO2 is a cause of global warming – the observed and recorded temperature pattern since 1880 does not fit with the CO2 greenhouse warming calculations. In fact, there is no sound evidence that a global warming trend exists.

Back in the 70's prior to the global warming scare, I recall reading about some glory seeking scientist predicting that an Ice Age was returning to freeze the world. Several internationally acclaimed "high brows" suggested there were signed that the earth was getting colder and that a glacier advance was likely.

This ridiculous "Ice Age" scare of 15 years ago is now replaced with headlines insisting that mankind's misdeeds are forcing the Earth's temperature upward with potentially cataclysmic consequence; global warming for short.

What does all of this have to do with oil and gas? It's all related.

Greenhouse Earth, acid rain, alar and apples, asbestos and classrooms, Perrier and benzene, cranberries and cancer, PCB's, CFC's, dioxin, naturally occurred radiation, ozone layer, nuclear waste, pesticides, oil spills, spotted owls, kangaroo rats, Concho Black River snakes, American Burrowing Beetles, etc., the list goes on and on, but one thing is clear, most concerns have been blown out of proportion by selective environmental groups who pull in funds in excess of $500 million per year to promote their plights.

Sadly, considerable sums supporting these groups come from our own industry - those who perhaps mean well, but are actually paying for their own destruction.

Further, our environmental spending is on a steep upward curve. But the year 2000, we will be shelling out $171 to $185 billion on environmental protection -- that's about equal to 60 percent of our current defense budget and 2.8 percent of our gross national product; it's a $1500 annual shopping list for every man, woman, and child of the nation and regretfully, most of it will be spent unwisely and with questionable benefit to environmental improvement.

And perhaps more directly related to oil and gas the adversaries to scientific fact claim that the burning of fossil fuels produces CO2 and that CO2 emissions cause global warming which leads to the destruction of the Earth.

Therefore, fossil fuels must be sacrificed to save the world! This attitude backed by millions of dollars migrates to our government, to the bureaucrats and to the legislators who pass such laws as declaring drilling muds, produced waters and associated fluids as hazardous wastes.

Had President Bush agreed to such provisions of the Earth Summit, he would have in effect, put all of out of the domestic petroleum business.

Many suggest that the Earth has been around 4-5 billion years and human society perhaps more than 6,000 years and that every succeeding generation is faced with total creature elimination unless we solve out ecological problems now.

Yet somehow, we always make it. We have survived in every environmental climate and condition known anywhere on Earth, even in space and on the Moon and that ain't all bad.

As one scientific writer put it, learning and teaching, the build up of knowledge, the questioning of truth, the applications of ideas are the things that distinguish humans from all other living things.

Without doubt, we have done damage to the environment and we can correct our ways to maintain the Earth habitat. But we humans cannot live on Earth without change and without using our natural resources.

Our responsibilities in the petroleum industry are to be good environmental stewards and to self-promote us as such.

We are not just another species of animal — we are human, we are imperfect, but we are well-meaning and fully capable of improvement.

We have made great achievements towards the triad balance of production, protection and preservation and we need to "blow our own horns" about it whenever we can.

Shell sells mining operations

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — An Illinois company has agreed to buy Shell Oil Co.'s coal mining subsidiary, the nation's eighth largest coal producer.

Terms of the sale of Shell Mining Co. to Zeigler Coal Holding Co. of Fairview Heights, Ill., were not disclosed. The transaction is targeted for completion in October.

Shell Mining, headquartered in Houston, operates seven coal-producing complexes in Illinois, Kentucky, Ohio, West Virginia and Wyoming. It also operates export-import terminals in Virginia and South Carolina.

When the purchase is complete, Zeigler said it will have annual sales in excess of $1 billion, annual production of about 40 million tons and recoverable coal reserves of about four billion tons.

Shell began producing coal in 1977 at its R&F Coal Co. mine in Ohio.

Oilpatch switching to clean fuels

■ Joining the environmental push for clean air, many oil companies are switching to clean-burning fuels.

By Johnnye Montgomery

Responding to environmental concerns, more and more oil companies are converting to clean-burning fuels such as compressed natural gas and liquid petroleum gas.

"If half the cars in Los Angeles were to be converted to alternative fuels today, smog in the area would be virtually eliminated overnight."

J. Cleo Thompson said it, and he practices what he preaches. Thompson has been using compressed natural gas in his field vehicles since 1989. Conoco has been using LPG in its vehicles since 1990.

Meanwhile, other oil and gas operators, both major and independent, service companies and oilfield supply companies are either studying the prospect of changing over or running pilot vehicles on LPG or CNG.

For about the cost of a mid-line laptop computer, oil companies can get into the environmental movement while saving money and wear on vehicles.

Both CNG and LPG are on a steady increase in the oilpatch. Texas State Senate Bill 740 requires that any state agency operating a fleet of more than 15 motor vehicles, excluding law enforcement and emergency vehicles, and any school district operating more than 50 motor vehicles will be required to operate at least 30 percent of their vehicles on alternative fuels by 1994. By 1998 this requirement will be 90 percent.

Conoco is one major operator running on LPG as the choice in alternative fuel.

According to environmental coordinator Judy McLemore, Conoco's Midland division began in 1990 to convert its 176 field vehicles to LPG and finished the conversion in early 1991. Now there are 202 LPG-run vehicles in the Midland division.

"It was an environmental decision, but it was an economic decision as well," McLemore said. A roaring understatement, as it turns out. Two years into the program, fuel, mileage and maintenance records show substantial savings in operation cost per mile, including reductions in engine wear and maintenance cost, resulting in a substantial saving.

"At a 5.5 cent per mile cost reduction, there was a 12 month payout per vehicle for conversion cost," she said.

The vehicles are all half-ton and three-quarter ton pickups, and are driven a total of about 300,000 miles per month.

McLemore said the operators of the pickups like using LPG.

"They're seeing reduced wear on the engine as a result of the cleaner burning," she said.

More importantly, Conoco employees see themselves as making proactive improvements to the environment through cleaner exhaust emissions while performing their routine job functions without loss of efficiency, and with reduced operating cost.

Bill Webb, area production manager, spearheaded the program. He said Conoco goes through a local distributor to buy LPG. He said Conoco opted for LPG for a variety of reasons.

One factor considered was fuel efficiency. "On the average, you can get 80 percent of the miles per gallon you'd get on gasoline," Webb said. "Of course, propane costs less than gasoline. Conoco initiatives in Midland have been expanded department-wide to onshore U.S. domestic Conoco E&P operations."

Independent operator J. Cleo Thompson began converting to CNG three and a half years ago, and has had two factory-equipped vehicles on order for one year. His vehicles use CNG from a private compressor supplied from a company-owned gas well in Ozona, and fill up from a public station in Odessa.

Thompson said he converted his first vehicle to CNG in Ozona and ran it off a 900-pound compressor.

"Since then, we've converted 18 vehicles to CNG," he said. "We converted 12 last year in the late spring, and we've been adding steadily to that as we trade in old vehicles and add new ones. We like to have 1.5 years left on the vehicle."

Sixty to 65 percent of the cost in converting is in the tanks, which are expected to last about 25 years, Thompson said. "Most of the equipment can be transferred to a third or fourth vehicle." By using company-produced gas, the conversions paid out in about 20,000 miles.

Thompson said he wants to help speed the switch to alternative fuels in any way possible. "There is really not a true comparison between gasoline, or diesel, when you're thinking about the environment."

Thompson said even with the high initial cost of conversions, today's low gas prices make it economical to switch.

"When the public becomes aware of the true benefits, I think there will be a substantial demand that automobile manufacturers, both foreign and domestic, provide them with factory-equipped CNG tanks. We have an abundant supply of gas within the U.S. We can have a great influence on solving our many import problems..."

Eddins Walcher is a local LPG supplier operating as far north as Lubbock and south to Del Rio. President Jack Walcher said the LPG conversion business in the Permian Basin is good.

"We have converted hundreds and hundreds of gasoline engines," he said. "Conversions have been done for major oil company vehicles, large independents, all types of well servicing equipment, farm equipment, and many individually-owned pickups and small trucks."

Eddins-Walcher has facilities equipped to convert gasoline-powered engines to propane in Odessa, Lubbock and Hobbs.

"The propane product is available at all 20 of our branch operations, and automated fueling facilities are available in Hobbs, Lovington and Odessa," Walcher sid. "These are card-operated devices, available for fueling 24 hours a day."

Energas marketing manager Fred Phillips says conversions to CNG have increased in the last year. While Energas does not sell the equipment to convert to CNG, they keep a list of people who do, and will make referrals to anyone needing that information. He noted that two CNG conversions had been completed in the prior week.

Phillips said Energas has had its fleet running on CNG for a number of years, and that most conversions are for fleet vehicles.

"Cost is a big advantage," he said. "Fleet vehicles operating on CNG can travel greater distances for less money than with other comparable fuels."

Phillips, when asked about safety, pointed out that CNG is safer than just about any other form of fuel. "CNG has an ignition point of 1200 degrees Fahrenheit, where gasoline ignites at 850 degrees. There has never been a recorded death due to CNG. The tanks have been tested tremendously — shot with bullets and dropped from high places without tank failures."

Environmentalists oppose gas drilling

DURANGO, Colo. (AP) — A coalition of environmental groups has appealed the Forest Service's approval of 33 new natural gas wells in the HD Mountains in southwestern Colorado.

The coalition, which filed the appeal late last week, also asked for an immediate halt to plans for drilling 15 wells while the appeal is decided.

Acting Rocky Mountain Region Forester Tom Thompson has until the end of next week to decide whether to halt the well plans.

"Proposed coalbed-methane development may cause irreversible harm to ground water resources and air quality in the San Juan Basin," attorney Kate Zimmerman wrote in requesting the stay.

Rep. Ben Nighthorse Campbell, D-Colo., also has written the Forest Service, supporting the stay until the appeal is resolved.

Zimmerman, a lawyer for the Land and Water Fund of the Rockies, filed the appeal Friday on behalf of seven local and state conservation groups. The coalition includes the San Juan Citizens Alliance, Four Corners Action Coalition and Weminuche Group of the Sierra Club.

Amoco Production Co. plans to drill the 33 wells in the HD Mountains east of Durango, several miles north of the New Mexico border.

The new appeal said an environmental study of impacts of the proposed new wells does not comply with the National Environmental Policy Act, National Forest Management Act, Endangered Species Act and National Historic Preservation Act.

Specifically, the appeal said the study did not include:

—Analysis of potential impacts on ground water and air quality in the entire San Juan River Basin.

—Protections for the endangered black-footed ferret.

—Adequate inventory of archaeological sites.

—A reasonable range of alternatives, including the delay of drilling until more information on groundwater could be gathered.

—An amendment to the forest's management plan.

Text by Elizabeth Edwin

The Fourth of July is Saturday, and people all across America will be celebrating. There will be parades, family cookouts and fireworks in honor of the day in 1776 when the Continental Congress of the United States declared independence from the mother country — the day is often considered the birthday of America.

Midlanders can celebrate the day with the 30th annual Children's Sidewalk Parade, sponsored by Col. Theunis Dey Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. (For information, call 682-3376).

It will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday around Midland County Courthouse Square and Centennial Plaza. This parade is fun for the children as well as the spectators. Although it doesn't feature floats and balloons like those seen at the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade or the New Year's Rose Parade, the parade does feature children and their red, white and blue-decorated vehicles — such as wagons, tricycles, bicycles, strollers and Hot Wheels — rolling along the sidewalk.

Red, white and blue also will be among the colors seen during the fireworks display at Angels Stadium after the games Friday and Saturday nights in celebration of the Fourth of July.

Another Independence Day celebration will be the "Permian Basin People, Places, and Things" parade 10 a.m. Saturday in Odessa beginning at Odessa College on Andrews Hwy.

After the parade, the celebration will continue at Sherwood Park with an "Old Fashioned Fourth of July Picnic.

The aerobatics airshow will begin at 5 p.m. at Schleymeyer Field followed by a fireworks display around 10 p.m.

While each of the celebrations will be filled with a variety of activities, each will have one thing in common — the United States flag, a symbol of our freedom and those who fought for it.

In fact, since the Persian Gulf War, there has been a more open sense of pride about being an American, and the American flag has been at the heart of displaying our patriotism. So it may be that Old Glory will be seen in more locations than normal Saturday as citizens honor the holiday.

However, before you put out the Stars and Stripes, there are a few things you should know about the flag.

"Respect for the flag," is the first thing young boys learn in the scouting program, according to Jody Sneed, Chaparral district executive for the Boy Scouts of Midland.

"When they're in the second grade, we start by teaching them how to fold the flag; that's one of the first things they learn. We teach them proper flag etiquette," Sneed said. "Then through scouts and school, they begin to learn the history of the flag, what went into the flag and how it has changed over the years to become what it is today. They learn what it used to look like and what it symbolizes. But we start by teaching them the proper etiquette so they learn respect.

"If a flag touches the floor at a Cub Scout meeting, they go nuts," Sneed said.

Whether seeing the flag at the baseball game, watching it pass in a parade or hanging it outside your home, it is important to know how to honor our nation's flag and to remember what it stands for.

Unfortunately, the Continental Congress left no record as to why it chose red, white and blue as the colors for the U.S. flag. However, in 1782 the Congress of the Confederation also chose red, white and blue for the newly designed Great Seal of the United States. The resolution on the seal listed the meanings of the colors as follows: red is for hardiness and courage, white for purity and innocence, and blue for vigilance, perseverance and justice.

The stripes on the flag stand for the 13 original colonies, while each star in the field of blue represents a state.

Because of this design, Stars and Stripes is one of the most popular names for the red, white and blue banner of the United States. But other names include the Star Spangled Banner from Francis Scott Key's poem which became the national anthem; and Old Glory from William Driver, a sea captain from Salem, Mass.

Because of the important symbolism of the flag, citizens should know how to display the flag and how to salute it, especially on a holiday such as the Fourth of July. Therefore, the following includes some of the rules for displaying the Stars and Stripes:

The U.S. flag can be displayed every day, except when weather conditions are severe enough to damage it. It is customarily flown from sunrise to sunset. However, according to The World Book Encyclopedia, it is not illegal to fly the flag 24 hours a day. When flown at night, it should be spotlighted. It is to be flown at polling places on election days and all legal public holidays and other special occasions.

When the U.S. flag is flown with other flags, all staff heights can be equal, but the U.S. flag should be on its own right and should be hoisted first and lowered last.

In a parade, the U.S. flag should be on the marching right of any other flags carried with it. If there is a line of other flags, the color bearer with the national flag marches alone in front of the center of the line.

On a car, a national flag should hang free and not drape over the car. It may

MHS classes of '47, '48 gather for reunion

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Members of the Midland High School Classes of 1947 and 1948 converged on Midland last weekend for a joint reunion at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

McKnight-Harrison

The excitement began and mounted as members started arriving on Friday evening for registration and "Happy Hour." Class members and their spouses were asked to remain for hors d'oeuvres and visiting "until you give up or give out."

Festivities continued on Saturday morning with a continental breakfast. The high point of the reunion was a dinner-dance Saturday evening. Music was provided by a DJ, "mostly oldies but goodies, some western and a little shake and break." A "Happy Hour" and Texas buffet preceded the stampede to the dance floor.

Classmates came from coast to coast for the event, with a U.S. map pinpointing their current locations.

Countless hours were spent by Johnnie and May Sheen Spruell and Maydelle Midkiff (Mrs. Son) Jackson in planning the event. Patsy Charlton (Mrs. Frank) Brown of Odessa was in charge of decorations, which included purple and gold balloons, flowers and MHS banners.

Each class member received a purple mug with gold lettering to commemorate the reunion. Those returning to Midland for the first time in many years were grateful to the Chamber of Commerce for providing maps of the city, which, according to one class member, did not even vaguely resemble the town where they grew up.

In visiting with May after the reunion, we learned of the reunion booklet she and Johnnie prepared and laughingly referred to as the "Senior Citizens Catoico." It featured pictures of the class members then and now and a brief update on their lives. She said the weekend brought back so many wonderful memories of their carefree high school years, and a feeling of love prevailed throughout the weekend. "It touched the heartstrings," she said.

Family members and friends enjoyed a barbecue dinner, topped off with two scrumptious birthday cakes.

Diane was still reading the countless number of birthday cards she received when the first raindrops began to fall late in the evening and sent guests scattering for cover from the backyard party setting.

Among those sharing in the fun evening were Diane's other daughter, Jill (Mrs. Rodney) Mack of Littleton, Colo.; her parents, Eva and Dan Bailey; Anelle and Jim Mack, Ivan Ard, Bill Pennebaker, Mary and Jim Truitt, Judy Powell, Leslie and Carl Harman, Linda Bond, her husband, Bruce Partian and their son, Danny.

BILLIE HUNT recently returned from a delightful trip to California with her son, John Hunt of Houston. They flew out for the graduation of John's daughter, Erin Hunt from California State University at San Bernardino. A native Midlander now living in San Bernardino, Erin received a bachelor of arts degree in political science.

The Texans were entertained by Erin and her brother, Monty Hunt, throughout their visit and by friends of Erin at an evening barbecue at their hilltop home. Billie says the view of the bright lights of the city spread out below them was breathtaking.

JEFF WILLIAMS, a spring graduate of Texas Military Institute at San Antonio, was honored with a party recently.

The event began at the home of Susie and Gary Burnett, where the guests received clues for a scavenger hunt, which led them to such diverse places as the replica of the Statue of Liberty on the courthouse lawn, the Bell Tower at Midland College and Midland International Airport, to name just a few.

The teams returned to the home of Jeff's aunt and uncle, Janet and Bob Pollard, for an old-fashioned picnic. Seated on the lawn on quilts, they enjoyed the barbecued chicken and sausage prepared by one of the hosts, Dick Oldham, and all the other good home cooking.

In addition to those already mentioned, Dick's wife, Shannon, and Sherry and Jerry Hewett hosted the fun affair.

Jeff, son of Modesta and Clayton Williams, plans to attend Texas A&M University.

DEAR ABBY

Opening mouth can prevent paying through nose

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a reasonably attractive man who, after many years of marriage, is back in the singles scene. After dating for two years, I have some questions to ask. I've heard so much about the women's movement, I get mixed messages.

Van Buren

When a woman calls to invite me out, I am complimented, but I'm confused when I end up paying for the evening — or even half, as a few ladies have suggested at the end of the evening. Some of these women own their own businesses, or have a profession and can well afford to pick up the tab.

One woman invited me to dinner at a very nice restaurant, and when the check came, she said she didn't have any money. Another time, a woman invited me out for dinner, and when the check came, I excused myself and went to the men's room. When I returned, the bill was still on the table.

On another occasion, the woman said that since she had invited me out, we should split the bill. (This was said after the bill had been presented.)

Abby, when I telephone a lady and invite her out, I pay, and when a lady calls a gentleman and invites him out, she should pay. What do you think? — CONFUSED IN KANSAS

DEAR CONFUSED: First, you should both have a very clear understanding at the time the date is made. If the lady calls you, ask her if she is inviting you to escort her at her expense, or is she suggesting that you should treat her to an evening out.

When a lady calls a gentleman and says, "Let's go to a movie (or out to dinner, or whatever)," she should say, "It's my treat," or, "Let's go dutch."

When a gentleman calls a lady, it is assumed that she will be his guest, even though in today's social climate, some women are better able to pick up the tab than men — in which case, they should.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married 14 months ago. We had an enormous wedding and received many fine wedding gifts. Most are still in their original boxes.

Would it be in poor taste to use some of these gifts as "gifts" to send to others? We have several duplicates. — ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Poor taste? Not at all; it's been done for years by some of our most respected socialites.

Adlai Stevenson tells this story: "When I served in the Agricultural Administration, every Christmas I'd receive an enormous gunnysack filled with individually gift-wrapped packages of walnuts. It solved our Christmas shopping problem because we sent them to all our friends for Christmas. Then, I discovered to my chagrin, that in each package was a little card saying, 'Merry Christmas from the Walnut Industry to Adlai Stevenson.'"

DEAR ABBY: After reading your article about the uninformed woman who couldn't locate the Pacific Ocean and didn't know the difference between history and geography, I was reminded of the dear little boy in my first-grade class who had just moved to California.

He was telling the class about the wonders he had seen here in California, and one of the wonders was the ocean.

"What is the name of that ocean?" I asked.

"I don't know," he said, "it didn't have a sign." — HELEN MUNHALL, LA JOLLA, CALIF.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order send a long (business-size), self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Experts prescribe contents of family medicine chest

By Thonnia Lee

N.Y. Times News Service

Most households have Band-Aids, rubbing alcohol and pain relievers. But to handle most emergencies, experts say a well-stocked medicine cabinet should include more. Every home should also have thermometers, ibuprofen, acetaminophen, a chemical ice pack, Q-tips, cotton balls, scissors, nonstick gauze pads, cloth tape and bandages, hydrogen peroxide and alcohol, said Diane Nykamp, associate professor at the Mercer University School of Pharmacy in Atlanta.

Local anesthetics, which contain benzocaine, are needed for minor burns and insect bites. "We recommend people keep an oral antihistamine ... to relieve itching, hives and insomnia," she said. Hydrocortisone cream is also good for rashes.

Also on hand should be an antibacterial soap like Dial for cleaning wounds, she said. Tweezers, sun screen, petroleum jelly, gauze, a vaporizer, heating pad and an antacid such as Maalox or Mylanta also should be available.

All medication should be kept out of children's reach, Dr. Nykamp said.

For children over 9 months, syrup of ipecac to induce vomiting is a must, said pediatrician Truddie Edwards Darden.

Dr. Darden cautions against keeping aspirin on hand, especially in households where there are children. "We find that if (aspirin) is in the home, it tends to be given in the wrong situation — like to a child who has chicken pox," she said. "We recommend, instead, acetaminophen."

Children with influenza or chicken pox who take aspirin have a heightened risk of Reye's Syndrome. which can be fatal.

And as summer entices more families to pack up the car and hit the highway, Dr. James Cooper, head of pharmacy practice at the University of Georgia College of Pharmacy, recommends a first-aid travel kit to handle most emergencies.

For aches, pain and fever, acetaminophen. For diarrhea, Pepto Bismol. Include a decongestant with pseudoephedrine, an antihistamine for allergic reactions and an antacid tablet for upset stomachs.

Dr. Nykamp also suggests neosporin cream, tape and scissors.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Iron deficiency may cause yellow leaves

By Deborah A. Benge

Some leaves are meant to be yellow, but most are not. If you are seeing yellow leaves on willows, roses, peaches, pears and even some grasses, you may be seeing an iron deficiency.

Benge

Iron chlorosis causes leaves to yellow between the leaf veins, while the veins stay green. In severe cases the foliage will appear almost white with leaf margin burned. Iron doesn't move around in the plant like some nutrients, so when a plant becomes iron deficient the new growth is what suffers while the older leaves remain green.

The term "iron deficient soils" is somewhat misleading. Our soils contain iron, but in an unavailable form. Iron is held primarily in an unavailable form because of high pH soils.

If you are a home gardener and you are seeing some of these problems in your garden, here are some steps that will help:

- Add organic matter to soils to lower the soil pH.
- Add iron chelates or iron sulfates to the soil.
- Spray yellow foliage with a liquid chelated iron plus a surfactant (watch your masonry because iron products stain).

An iron deficiency showing up in spring and early summer can usually be corrected with foliar sprays of liquid chelated iron plus a surfactant. Spray early or late in the day and try your best to get good coverage on both sides of the leaves.

Soil applied, dry chelated irons are the best way to correct a stubborn iron chlorosis in plants. An Fe 138 is a very good chelated iron for your high pH soils. This is the best way to go, but also the most expensive. It may be expensive but it is also longer lasting than other treatments.

Another treatment for highly alkaline soils is a one-to-one ratio of an agricultural grade sulfur and iron sulfate. This has been reported to be successful in Nevada where there are some very alkaline soils.

Grasses can also become iron chlorotic. Because grasses have a different leaf vein structure the iron deficiency will appear as alternating yellow-green stripes down the length of the leaf blade.

There are other situations that can cause an iron deficiency, some of which are caused by man. They are:

- Overwatering;
- Excessive use of phosphorus fertilizers;
- Trunk or root injury;
- Planting unadapted plants.

To correct an iron deficiency, first find out the reason for the leaf yellowing and then take steps to correct the problem.

Permian Basin Garden Tour will be July 7. Dr. Sammy Helmers, extension horticulturist, and area extension agents and outstanding gardeners will help participants learn better ways to raise vegetables in this area.

More information will be included in next week's column.

Deborah Benge is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector counties.

Flood of 'junk mail' can be stopped

By Jon Carroll
N.Y. Times News Service

It has become an almost daily ritual. I get the mail and stand at the kitchen table going through it. Already I know that most of it, occasionally all of it, is of no interest at all, fit only to be thrown away.

You too, of course; all of us; it's a dilemma so constant we don't even think about it anymore.

Pitch letters for sundry causes, all containing dire warnings on the envelope; advertising coupons for products I would never buy; unreadable "newsletters" from real estate agents; glossy product promotions; schedules for events I have never attended and for colleges I have never visited; catalogs filled with stuff for the canny fisherman or the mature seamstress; pleas by politicians.

Often there are duplicates; no one seems to clean their mailing lists anymore, so my wife and I get each get our own personalized worthless brochure.

I think about how much of this stuff I get a year, and I multiply me by 150 million or so. Grotesque waste of paper, plus printing and mailing and labor and everything.

A daily metaphor for what's wrong with American society.

Can anything be done? Yes, something can.

Thanks to an article in Garbage magazine, a wonderful publication I urge upon you anyway, I have lots of facts and lots of addresses.

Bottom line: You can tell people to stop sending you stuff, and they will. Doesn't get everybody, but it sure does help.

First: Did you know that you don't have to fill out a warranty card with a new product? You are covered by the manufacturer's warranty regardless; the card is just a way of collecting names for direct mail lists.

Many warranty cards go directly to the maw of a company called National Demographics and Lifestyles. To get off NDL's hit list, write Chris Courtemanche, National Demographics and Lifestyles, List Order Services, 1621 18th Street 300, Denver, Colo. 80202.

There are other mailing list brokers, companies that buy and sell names. You can write and get your name put on the "suppress" file. The three biggest brokers are:

- Donnelly Marketing, 1235 N Avenue, Nevada, Iowa 50201-1419.
- R.L. Polk & Company, List Services Division, 6400 Monroe Boulevard, Taylor, Mich. 48180.
- MetroMail Corporation, 901 West Bond, Lincoln, Neb. 68521.

Credit bureaus are also in the business of selling names to banks and credit card companies. If you have bad credit, you get short shrift; if you have good credit, you get junk. Such a business.

Three of the largest are:

- Equifax Options, Equifax Marketing Decision Systems Inc., P.O. Box 740123, Atlanta, Ga. 30374-0123.
- Trans Union, Transmark Inc., 555 West Adams Street, Chicago, Ill. 60661.
- TRW-NCAC, Target Marketing Services Division, 12606 Greenville Avenue, Dallas, Texas 75243, ATTN: Mail Preference Service.

There are also purveyors of reverse telephone directories, which provide addresses for known telephone numbers. One of these is R.L. Polk mentioned above; another is Haines and Co. Inc., Criss-Cross Directory, 2382 Walnut Avenue East, Fullerton, Calif. 92631.

But the single best way to get off lists remains a letter to the Direct Marketing Association, which will put your name on the "delete list" that it mails out quarterly. To request a Name Removal Card, write:

Mail Preference Service, Direct Marketing Association, 11 West 42nd Street, P.O. Box 3861, New York, N.Y. 10163.

You have nothing to lose but your junk mail.

Tips help beat summer heat

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Planting more trees and using lighter colors on buildings would help make people more comfortable, reduce smog and decrease the costly use of air conditioners in urban "heat islands."

That's the advice of Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory scientists who put together a U.S. Environmental Protection Agency publication titled "Cooling Our Communities: A Guidebook on Tree Planting and Light-Colored Surfaces."

Cities around the world are "heat islands" — 2 to 9 degrees Fahrenheit warmer than surrounding areas during summer — because they have less vegetation and more dark, heat-absorbing surfaces on buildings and streets, said Hashem Akbari, a co-author of the guide.

"There are two quick fixes for summer heat islands," he said. "The least expensive is to move toward lighter colored surfaces, the way Mediterranean cities do. The other is to plant shade trees — another ancient tradition."

Akbari also urged increased use of "reflective roofs, parking lots and streets. We should shade our houses with trees and vines."

The guidebook, written in nontechnical language, is available from the EPA for $13 by writing, Superintendent of Documents, P.O. Box 371954, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15250-7954.

AT WIT'S END

Little light inspires heated domestic battle

By Erma Bombeck

I've had it up to here with my husband's sarcastic notes on wasting energy. They're about as subtle as a tax audit.

Bombeck

I find them pasted on refrigerator doors that he found ajar and bathroom heaters that I have left on in the winter. I got a rather lengthy one on the oven I neglected to turn off for two days.

I told you about the epistle on the thermostat I pass by each afternoon when I awaken from my nap. It read, "Sleep-induced body temperature declines are not uncommon. Usually the body temperature returns to normal within minutes of resumption of normal activity. Normal activity does not include hiking the thermostat up and down." It was signed, "Mr. Science."

You don't even want to hear the arguments we've had over burning lights. I was 35 before I realized he wasn't the author of the quote, "It is better to light one candle than to curse the darkness."

I personally believe there is something seriously wrong with a person who outlines the toilet in fluorescent tape so you can find it at night without turning on a light.

For years I begged him to put a sensor light in the driveway and the garage. "What if someone pulls in the driveway by mistake?" he asked. "I suppose the light would still burn for 15 minutes."

"Maybe you could run out with the newspaper and read under it until it goes off."

"Don't be smart," he said. "It's not the money. It's just that it's a big deal changing the bulbs. They don't last forever, you know."

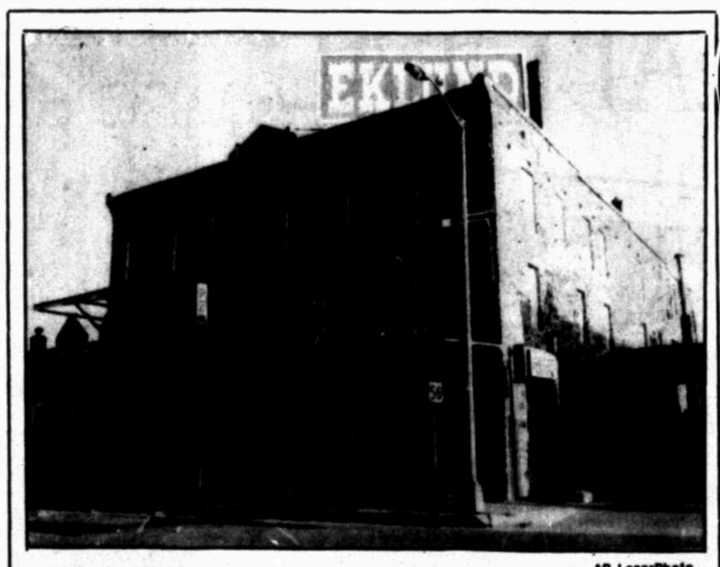

Hold that thought.

I just read where not only has a new light bulb been produced that will burn for 10 years, but the Guinness Book of World Records has an entry for one that has been burning since 1901.

With the exception of power failures and three instances of moving it to another station, the bulb at the Livermore Fire Station in California has been giving out light for 90 years. It's a little dim. OK, so it gives out the light of the coils inside of a toaster, but then so does the makeup light above my bathroom sink.

I put a note this week above the reading light by my husband's bed. It is addressed to the Prince of Darkness. "A spokesman for Intersource Technologies, who knows a thing or two about light bulbs, was quoted as saying, 'Turning a bulb off and on is what wears it down.'" Signed, "Alma Edison."

Hosts were the couple's children, Shiela Anderson of Odessa, Carlann McBroom and Alton Ashley of Midland, and Robert Ashley of Newnan, Ga. They also have 17 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

The couple were married June 6, 1942, in Newnan. Ashley was inducted into the Army/Air Force. Later they moved to Opelika, Ala., where he was employed in a textile mill and did some mechanic work. In 1953 they moved to Hobbs, N.M., where they owned and operated C and C Motors for more than 20 years. In 1983 they moved back to Newnan and owned Ashley's Radiator Shop. They retired in Midland last December. The couple are Baptists.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle section of the Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographs will be published only for winners, not runners-up. These announcements are published Thursdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Monday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted. The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Healing hindered?

ATLANTA (AP) — Doctors at Emory University report what they believe is the first documented evidence that bones of smokers don't heal as quickly as bones of non-smokers, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

The physicians compared the rate of bone regeneration in a group of 29 patients undergoing a special procedure to lengthen their tibias (shin bones) to correct physical deformity. In the group were 11 smokers, nine ex-smokers and nine non-smokers.

The doctors found the smokers had significantly slower wound healing and bone regeneration than non-smokers. If the patients stopped smoking prior to surgery, "bone regeneration improved rather dramatically," says Dr. George Cierny III, who headed the study.

Although there are thousands of different elements in cigarette smoke, the researchers believe carbon monoxide and nicotine play the primary roles in the adverse effect on healing.

FLAG: Red, white, blue deserves respect, honor be tied to the antenna or to a staff that is fixed firmly to the chassis or clamped to the right fender.

On a float, a national flag should be hung from a staff with its folds falling free, or it should be hung flat.

When the flag is hung flat on a wall, it should not gather or drape. If a gathered or draped decoration is desired, bunting should be used.

If the flag is to hang vertically in a window or at the end of the corridor, it should be with its canton to the left of those who view it.

Saluting the flag is an important aspect of honoring the flag. If an American flag is passing in review, being raised or lowered, or displayed while the national anthem is playing, the proper thing to do is stand at attention facing the flag and salute. A person in a military uniform should give a hand salute, while those not in uniform should salute by holding their right hands, palm inward, over their hearts — and men should remove their hats.

When not in use, the American flag should be folded — being careful to keep it from touching the ground — and carefully stored. The military fold is traditional. It should first be folded twice length-wise to form a long strip. Then, starting at the striped end, it should be given a series of triangular folds. The resulting compact triangle looks like a cocked hat. If the flag is permanently attached to its staff, it should be furled (wrapped around the staff) and then cased (wrapped with a cover).

Contrary to many people's belief, the national flag can be mended, dry-cleaned or washed, as long as it remains in respectable condition. When it is no longer fit for display, it should be destroyed in some dignified way, preferably by burning.

Traitor's birthplace deemed Nationalist

Associated Press

NORWICH, Conn. — This community, first settled in 1659, was the birthplace in 1741 of Benedict Arnold, who ran away from home when he was 15.

Before and during the Revolution, the people of Norwich were ardent Nationalists. They boycotted English goods in 1767, ostracized a schoolmaster who continued to drink tea and disregarded the Stamp Act in 1776.

The town was chartered as a city in 1784.

Human Perspectives of Art

By Georgia Todd Temple Photos by Joe D. Williams

Art is "a way of seeing, a way of living. It's not music and sculpture and painting.

"It's a way of seeing, and all the products of that life then become the works of art," said John Bailey of Richmond, Va. "My gardens are as much my art as my painting. The way I clean house and cook meals are a part of art."

Bailey, an artist and former professional dancer, was in Midland recently for the opening of an exhibition of figurative art at Gallery 1114. The show, "Invited Artists '92: Human Perspectives," will remain through Aug. 1 at 1114 N. Big Spring St. Among the four artists whose work is featured in the exhibit is Midlander Mark Gaines.

"I work in three or four different styles, and this conveys one of them," Gaines said of his work in this show. "It's a little bit surrealistic to abstract" and "deals with the human perspective. It has human figures and a couple of my pieces are a combination of heads."

Gallery 1114 member artist Cristi Branum described Gaines' work as "an introspective look into the human psyche."

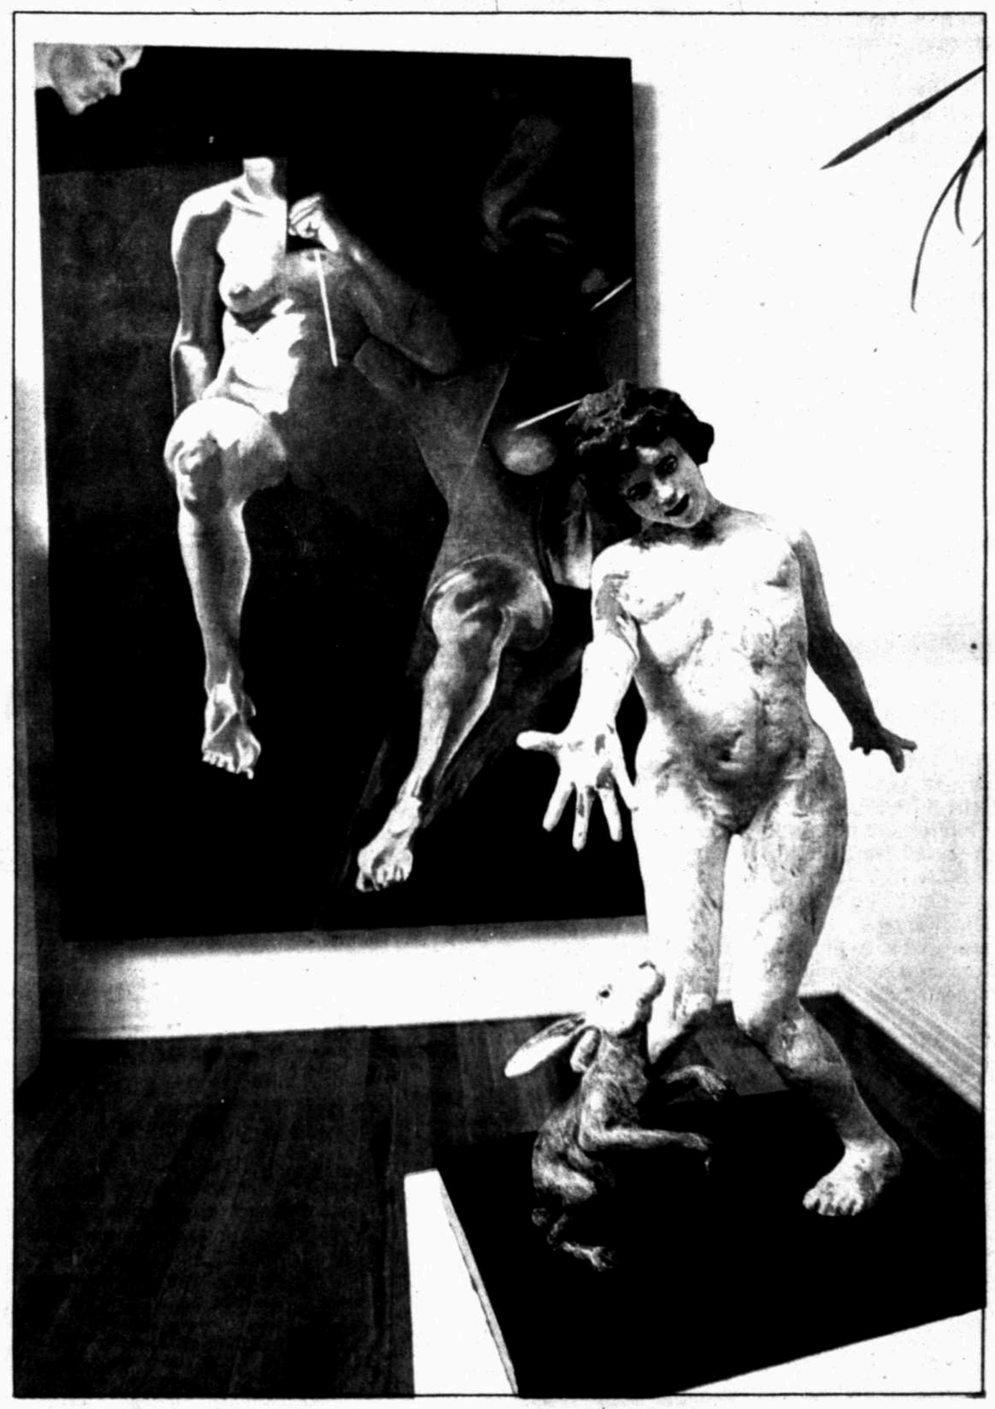

This show marks a first for Gaines.

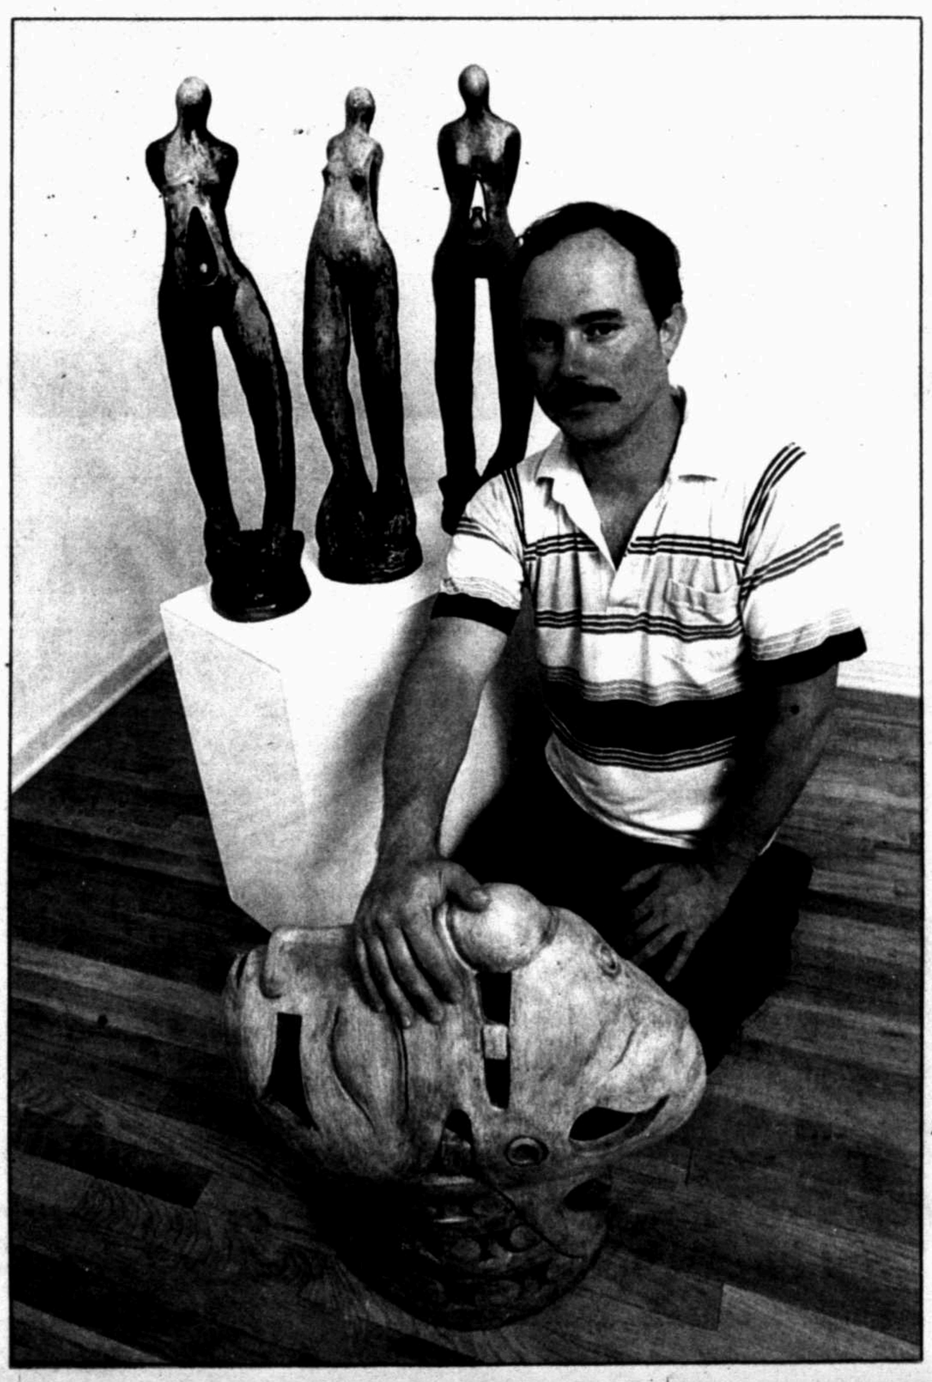

"This is my first showing, and I've been doing it almost 25 years," he said. "I'm excited. It's good they have that gallery. It gives a lot of artists like me a chance to show their work."

Gaines works in clay. His work, not all of which is represented in this show, ranges from abstracted fantastic animals to realistic portrait heads and often has an element of satire or humor. The comments he makes about his life and work vibrate with humor as well.

He pictures himself as a "quiet man who just wants his art to speak for itself." However, his concern is "I

Museum of Television & Radio honors Henson

NEW YORK (AP) — A tip to those traveling to New York City: Don't miss the fifth-floor "video wall" in the Jim Henson retrospective series at the Museum of Television & Radio. It will vividly remind you how much you miss the master of Muppetry.

The wall is a floor-to-ceiling grid of TV monitors showing highlights from the career of the man who knew Kermit as a tadpole and Big Bird when the tall yellow fellow was an egg.

"We did it that way," confided a museum staffer, "so that anybody — no matter how tall — could see a TV screen."

That attention to detail is typical of this thoughtful, joyous and charming tribute to Henson, whose 35-year career ended with his untimely death in May 1990.

"Jim Henson's World of Television" runs through Oct. 4. The museum quite cleverly has put it in two sections, for kids big and little.

At 1 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays, "Family Screenings" show specific TV programs in the Henson canon. Then, at 3:30 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays only, the "For Bigger Kids" screens more mature fare for ages 10 and up.

Grownups will enjoy the current family screening. Its three delightful segments include a five-minute sampler of "Sam and Friends," Henson's puppet show on Washington, D.C.'s WRC-TV, which aired from 1955 to 1961.

Sam — he's the vaguely psychotic-looking, hard-headed puppet on the left — lip-syncs the Louis Prima vocal in "That Old Black Magic," while Kermit, dragged up in a brunette wig, mouths the Keely Smith part. Hilarious.

The second segment is a complete 1979 episode of "The Muppet Show," with guest star Harry Belafonte. He sings "The Banana Boat Song" and plays talking drum in a Guinean folk song with magical, tribal-masked Muppets.

The final segment is the 1981 documentary "Of Muppets and Men: The Making of 'The Muppet Show.'" It's a behind-the-scenes look at the Emmy and Peabody award-winning hit that ran in syndication from 1976 to 1981.

The film shows the underpinnings of Henson's Muppets without detracting from their magic. You see at once "how the heck they did that," how difficult the work was, and yet how much fun Henson and his Muppeteers were having.

The documentary also highlights Henson's debt to his collaborator Frank Oz (the voice of Miss Piggy and countless others). It's Henson who credits Oz for making the Muppets so funny.

It's Oz, however, who explains the wacky dynamics of the Muppets, where Piggy loves Kermit and hates Gonzo, who loves chickens. Statler and Waldorf, the two old geezers in the balcony, hate everything, especially Fozzy Bear.

"It's like a funny Eugene O'Neill story," Oz tells an interviewer. "Everybody's 'at' each other, but in a funny, funny way."

The June 23-July 12 family screening covers "Fraggle Rock," the HBO children's show, and the July 14-Aug. 2 show is three Henson adaptations of classic tales — Little Bo Peep, the Frog Prince and the Bunny Picnic.

Aug. 4-23 celebrates 30 years of the Muppets and 20 years of PBS' "Sesame Street" with Bill Cosby, Aug. 25-Sept. 13 chronicles that "Magnificent Obsession: The Love Story of Kermit and Miss Piggy," and the final show is devoted to Henson adaptations of three traditional folk tales.

The first set of 3:30 p.m. weekend-only screenings features two tales from Henson's 1989 NBC shows "The Storyteller" and "The Jim Henson Hour." Then "Monsters and Myths," from Aug. 8-9 through Oct. 4, features an episode from Henson's "Greek Myths" series, which was produced and aired only in Britain.

The first-floor gallery includes an exhibit of Miss Piggy's favorite photos (Don't miss "Green Boy," with Kermit dressed in the manner of Gainsborough's "Blue Boy," and check Miss Piggy's "Birth of Moi," after Botticelli.)

could give my art a bad reputation."

It has been Gaines' experience that in the world of art, "It takes more politics than art. You've got to be interviewed and say the right things, and I always say the wrong things at the wrong time."

Gaines describes himself as a "surviving artist," who spends at least a third of each week on his art. Through the years, he has supported himself through construction and remodeling work.

He's not married. When asked about marriage, Gaines said, "Starving artists don't get married. Something about women and money."

He would advise young people to think before pursuing a career as an artist.

"I really think you're born to do it, because I don't know why I did it," Gaines replied when asked why he is an artist. "I've got a BFA (bachelor of fine arts) in ceramics from Southwest Texas State. I think I was the first one. I think they made that just for me. I'd taken so many ceramics courses, they just gave it to me. It was probably the last."

"I don't think it was a decision that I ever remember making," Bailey said when asked why he pursued art as a career. "I just always knew it was something I was. I always made art, as long as I can remember. I felt like there was lots of things I wanted to do and explore, but always I would be doing it out of the context of making art."

Bailey, whose drawings and paintings on two- and three-dimensional surfaces are a mix of abstract, allegorical and surreal imagery, began by "doodling with a ball-point pen" during classes when he was in school. "Drawing really is my strongest media. I think I am at my most expressive and most articulate."

Gaines recalls being about 12 when he began to draw and paint. "I still do a pretty good amount of drawing and painting. I guess my forte is sculpting, mainly clay. I was about 14 when I first started sculpting, and I'm 36 now. I've taken grief for it ever since."

Bailey, who is 51, has had several professional careers. After receiving a degree in art education at the University of New Mexico, he taught for eight years in the public schools in Albuquerque. In 1970, he moved to Washington, D.C., to pursue dance. His interest began when he watched a dance workshop class on the UNM campus. What he saw, made him sign up for dance classes the next semester.

"I got bitten. It caught me. It was like I found something really vital, so I became completely absorbed and committed to dance for 15 years."

He was 29 years old when he moved to Washington. While there, he received a degree in dance education, taught dance and danced with The Dance Construction Co. He also met and married Frances Wessells, a sculptor, dancer and teacher.

Then, in 1985, Bailey quit dance.

"I started to resent the time it was taking awy from my easel. I got tired of hearing my own voice because I was teaching dance all that time. I went back to the studio and started making drawings."

Bailey said he finds his personal "history is a vague issue. I tend to forget the day as soon as it's past." Yet, he remembers as an child not buying the question, "What do you want to be when you grow up?"

"I didn't buy that I had to be anything. I decided that I could be any time I wanted to anything I wanted to be and that I could be many things. So, if it interested me, I pursued it."

Asked if he considers himself successful and what the word "success" means to him, Bailey replied, "I do think of myself as successful. I think what we are all doing is turning potential reality into actual reality, and when you do that, you're successful.

"I know about being without money and having no resources, and I know about having lots of money and not being concerned about it. Money is not on my list of priorities.

'If you only do one thing all your life, you don't know what it's like to do something else. There are many questions there. If you try many things, you find that they all come together.'

— John Bailey

"This business of trying lots of different things, what has happened for me is that I have discovered it all pays off; it all begins to come together. Everything I learned in dance is showing up in my painting now so I didn't lose time in my drawing by using 15 years in dance. I just added that quality of experience to my work."

He compares life to learning a language. The larger the vocabulary acquired, the more options the individual has for expression.

"If you only do one thing all your life, you don't know what it's like to do something else. There are many questions there. If you try many things, you find that they all come together."

The Gallery 1114 exhibit also features work by sculptor Steve Hatch of Austin and painter Jiri George Bauer, who left his homeland of Czechoslovakia in 1976, and now resides in Alaska.

Bauer's pieces in the show "symbolize his struggle in getting out of Czechoslovakia when it was an Iron Curtain country," said Travis Beckham, president of Gallery 1114, a co-operative for modern and contemporary art.

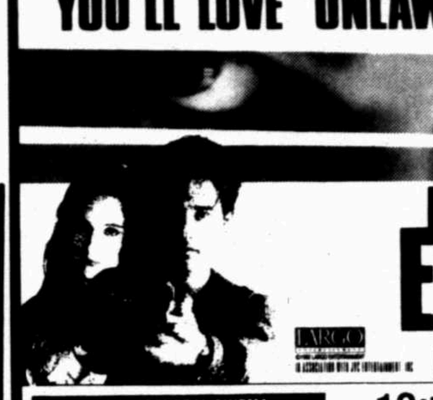

Of his own work, Bauer has said, "I believe the human body is the ultimate criterion of beauty as well as the symbol of truth, purity and virtue. My concern lies in redefining idealistic values using multi-cultural symbolism."

Hatch, Beckham said, "does the work for his personal edification and enjoyment. He hopes every person who comes to see it takes something away for theirs. He's a little skeptical of artist's statements."

Gaines also is somewhat skeptical about making statements about art in general and his work in particular.

"I don't think I should have anything to do with my art," Gaines said. "I don't think I should be representative of it. I think it should represent itself."

New movie honors women's professional baseball league

NEW YORK (AP) — It was supposed to be a gimmick, another way for women to keep the country going while the men were off fighting the war.

Late in 1942, a baseball executive feared next year's season would be canceled and announced he was forming a women's softball league instead. While stars of local teams got out their bats and gloves, press coverage recalled Ricky Ricardo's bemused expression whenever Lucy vowed she was going to get a job.

Davis

"Ladies of Little Diamond" was how Time magazine headlined its article on the All-American Girls Professional Baseball League, the brainchild of Chicago Cubs owner and chewing gum king Phil Wrigley and now the basis for the film "A League of Their Own."

"On softball's miniature diamond ... and aided by softball's underhanded pitching," Time said, "girls can pitcth, bat, field grounders and otherwise perform like reasonable facsimiles of the male."

THEY WERE BETTER than reasonable. Those "girls," some married with children, kept the league going for 12 seasons and entertained millions of fans. A few players were considered good enough to hold their own against the men. The league itself was good enough to earn a special exhibit at The Baseball Hall of Fame.

"Some of the press may have looked down on us when they first heard about the league, but they changed their minds in a big hurry," said Dottie Collins, a pitcher for six seasons. "We weren't on a lark.

THE MANAGERS WERE men, many of them former major league stars. There were Hall of Famers Carey, Jimmie Foxx and Dave Bancroft, as well as Guy Bush, Woody English and Bill Wambsganss, who as a second baseman for the Cleveland Indians pulled off the World Series' only unassisted triple play.

Madonna

Wrigley made his fortune through baseball and candy, but he built the new league like a Hollywood mogul. Image counted: He wanted good, clean, family entertainment. Not for him were the suggestive team names used in local softball leagues — Slapsie Maxie's Curvaceous Cuties or the Num Num Pretzel Girls. Instead, there were the Kenosha Comets, the South Bend Blue Sox and the Racine Belles.

Slacks and tight skirts were forbidden. Players considered too uncouth or too masculine were kept out. Before the first season began, Wrigley sent recruits to Helena Rubenstein's Gold Coast beauty salon, where, Time reported, they would learn "make-up, posture, and other whatnots usually neglected by lady athletes."

"I don't think they selected us on the basis of our looks, but they were strict on our being feminine," said Gloria Elliott, a pitcher for Kalamazoo. "They wanted you to wear feminine attire and to act like a lady."

"YOU KNOW WHAT rules were, don't you?" Dottie Schroeder, a shortstop who played in every season of the league, said with a laugh. "Rules were made to be broken. You were supposed to be in two hours after the evening game, but sometimes it extended later. It was never malicious, but we enjoyed bending the rules a little."

And whatever "whatnots" in which the players were supposedly groomed, their manners on the field could be as bad as the guys'. Smoking and drinking were forbidden, but you couldn't stop anyone from indulging in baseball's most incurable vice: arguing with the umpires.

"Some can swear as well," Time noted. "Henpecked Harry Wilson, the dean of girl-softball umpires, maintains that the female Lippy Durochers, with their special brand of umpire-baiting, draw larger crowds than softball's DiMaggios."

"A LEAGUE OF Their Own" sticks fairly close to the real story. It takes place during the league's first season, with Geena Davis and Madonna among the stars of the Rockford Peaches. Tom Hanks is featured as an alcoholic, ex-major league star who becomes the team's manager. (His character was inspired by Foxx). Penny Marshall, whose previous films include "Big" and "Awakenings," directed.

"I really enjoyed the movie, and I was kind of skeptical," Elliott said. "The movie was funny and very entertaining and they showed how the women could play ball. The manager played by Tom Hanks was kind of far out, nothing like we had, but it was funny."

Collins also praised the film, but didn't care for some of the players' showboating. She referred to a game in which Madonna, the center fielder, catches a ball with her hat, and Davis, the catcher, does a split as she nabs a pop fly.

"Nobody would think of catching a fly ball with their hat, that is a little bit stupid and nobody would do a split as they catch a ball," Collins said. "We were very serious in what we did. We think of ourselves as a third major league."

WHILE HISTORIANS BELIEVE the AAGPBL was the only women's professional baseball league, professional softball leagues have been around at one time or another throughout the century. Baseball great George Sisler helped put one together in the 1930s. Another was tried in the 1970s, with Billie Jean King among the organizers.

Softball becomes an Olympic medal sport in 1996 and "A League of Their Own" comes out at a time when more women than ever are playing. Amateur Softball Association spokesman Bill Plummer says there are more than 50,000 Junior Olympic teams in the United States right now and estimates some 16 million women are playing overall.

Hanks

Television and the postwar boom helped put an end to the league, but the establishment eventually paid its respects. In 1988, The Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., opened a "Women in Baseball" exhibit, featuring uniforms, bats, baseballs, gloves, shoes, trophies, posters, scorecards and tickets.

Collins was among many former players attending.

"That was the biggest thrill for all of us," she said. "The movie is second place as far we are concerned. Being accepted by Cooperstown was the greatest thing that happened to any of us."

Giant bugs star in hit museum exhibit

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — In this eerie world, kids are smaller than blades of grass, beetles are as big as ponies and ants can lift a car.

Welcome to "Backyard Monsters: The World of Insects," the hit museum exhibit premiering in Texas and making its way around the country and the world beginning this summer.

Bugs are the stars of this show. Just ask the boys mesmerized by a black widow spider's huge web. Or the adults watching the creepy, crawly movements of a 13-foot robotic scorpion.

"They are monsters, in a way," says Dennis Bartz, a museum exhibit director who helped design the insect show. "Then again, they're not."

The exhibit made its national debut in March at the Witte Museum of natural history. It begins with a mammoth collection of real insect specimens, including large colorful butterflies and metallic-looking jewel beetles — worn as jewelry in ancient Egypt.

To the surprise and delight of museum officials, visitors are spending as much time studying the real insect collection as they are in the next section, a dimly-lit room full of giant robotic insects.

In this cavernous hall are a unicorn beetle, a Chinese praying mantis, black carpenter ants, an emperor scorpion and a black widow spider — all between six and 14 feet long, thousands of times their real-life size.

"You can really look at them. They become significant — more significant," said Bartz. "The show concentrates on what is real."

A combination of analog and digital robotics is used to make the bugs move like actual insects, said Stacy Bishkin, vice president of Creative Exhibits, the company that produced the museum show.

Ms. Bishkin said detail and accuracy were of utmost importance in creating the big bugs. An entomologist was hired as a consultant to ensure the insects looked and acted real.

The scorpion has flappy skin that expands for laying eggs. The beetle has a hairy belly and noticeable mouth muscles, just like the real insect. And the praying mantis has huge compound eyes and ridges in its legs.

To add to the backyard feeling, the bugs crawl beneath huge pieces of grass, flower pots and sprinkler heads.

The size of the robotic insects helps museumgoers understand what the real bugs can do, Ms. Bishkin said.

For instance, the carpenter ants in the exhibit are carrying an insect leg into their hole. If the ants were really that large, she said, they would be able to pick up a car.

Ms. Bishkin and her partner, San Antonio attorney Al Holcomb, teamed up to create the exhibit about two years ago. With a background in retailing, Ms. Bishkin ran the Witte Museum's gift shop during the famous robotic dinosaur tour. Then she set out to create her own exhibit.

After extensive market research on children's interests and museum exhibits — and noting the success of the movie "Honey, I Shrunk the Kids" — she and Holcomb decided bugs were their answer.

They contacted Creative Presentations Inc. of California, known for creating the E.T. character at Universal Studios theme parks, and ended up forming affiliate company Creative Exhibits to design "Backyard Monsters."

RCA releases Elvis five-CD set

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Elvis lives ... on remastered CDs.

"Elvis: The King of Rock 'N' Roll — The Complete 50's Masters" hit the record stores Tuesday after a two-year search of record vaults in New York, Indianapolis, Nashville and Hollywood, movie studio archives and audiophile collections.

It weighs 2.3 pounds, has 140 tracks and is vintage Elvis.

According to RCA Records, the five-CD set contains every master studio take recorded by Presley in the 1950s, several alternate takes, live tracks and previously unreleased material.

The original RCA and Sun Records master tracks were digitally remastered. The set begins with "My Happiness," a 1953 acetate recording made at the Memphis Recording Studio. The box set's acetate cuts were painstakingly restored before they were transferred to digital to ensure good audio reproduction.

The release commemorates the 15th anniversary of Presley's August 1977 death. In testimony to Presley's continuing popularity, more than 500,000 units were shipped to record stores.

"This artist has been dead 15 years and this record left the house gold," said project coordinator Don Wardell.

"Something that struck me forcibly during this process was the enormous body of work this man left behind."

In just over two decades, Wardell said, "he made 33 motion pictures, he did over 60 recording projects — he left behind 680 recording masters — and he made several important television specials ... and then toured constantly."

Life at late-night palace has not been a fairy tale

LOS ANGELES (AP)) — To hear Jay Leno and Helen Gorman Kushnick tell it, the maiden month of NBC's "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno" has gone extremely well.

"Everything's going good," Leno said in a phone interview last week. "We seem to be getting good response."

Kushnick, Leno's manager for the last 17 years and now the executive producer of America's favorite late-night talk show, is even more positive. "It's going wonderfully well," she said.

Neither assessment is completely accurate.

Since Leno donned Johnny Carson's crown on May 25, life at the network's late-night palace has not been a fairy tale.

Reviews have been mixed. The dismantling of Carson's staff and the assembling of Leno's has produced tension at NBC's Burbank studios.

Replacing the 30-year king of late-night television is no easy feat, but the first month has been more difficult than Kushnick and Leno let on.

Some of the difficulties have surround Kushnick and her arbitrary method of granting Leno interviews. Grumblings about her heavy-handed management style recently surfaced in an Entertainment Weekly article.

Both Kushnick and Leno brush such criticism aside.

"That's OK," Leno said, "Welcome to show business. That's fine. Everyone has their likes and dislikes. No one reviews the janitor making $5.50 an hour."

Both also say they believe the show's foundation is basically fine and that a little fine-tuning, primarily in paring down the number of nightly guests, is all that's lacking.

Leno's interviewing style is decidedly different than his predecessor's. Gone are the requisite plugs for each guest's newest effort. In a recent appearance by "Lethal Weapon 3" star Danny Glover, the film was not discussed.

Instead, Leno and Glover spent most of the segment talking about the black actor's recent toe surgery and an experience in Manhattan where cab drivers refused to stop for him.

"The idea of a famous black person not being able to get a cab was more important" than pitching the actor's projects, Leno said.

As for television critics, Leno said, "I thought the reviews were pretty positive. They only compare me to me, or to Johnny Carson. I don't read about them comparing me to other talk show hosts."

Perhaps Leno missed Diane Werts' review in Newsday of his permanent host debut. Calling the broadcast "something of a letdown," Werts wrote, "Yep, we've seen this all before, on 'Late Night with David Letterman,' on 'Saturday Night Live' ... Even on — bite my tongue — 'The Arsenio Hall Show.'"

The Washington Post's Tom Shales chastised Leno for never mentioning Carson his first night out. "Leno never once stopped the show to pay a moment's serious tribute to Carson, the much-adored icon whose chair he aspires to fill and who first hired him to be guest host five years ago."

The Toronto Star minced fewer words. "Leno, once an astute and prickly observer of the American psychological landscape, emerged in his new role as another mumbling, self-ingratiating toad."

Receiving almost as much attention as Leno in the past month has been "The Tonight Show's" new set, aka "The Color Purple." The curtain, chairs and guest loveseat all are lavender. The lighting is moody, and Branford Marsalis and his funkified band are the musical antithesis of Doc Severinsen.

So far, Leno's ratings have been good, and have reflected a younger audience. In his third week on the job, Leno's numbers were 6 percent higher than Carson's for the same period last year.

But from week No. 1 to week No. 3, Leno's numbers dropped from a 6.6 average rating to a 5.3 — a decline of about 30 percent. Each ratings point represents 921,000 households.

Meanwhile, competition for the 11:30 p.m. time slot is shaping up to be fierce. ABC's "Nightline" — seen on fewer stations across the country than "The Tonight Show" — still managed to earn a 4.1 average rating during Leno's third week. For that same period, "The Arsenio Hall Show," helped by Bill Clinton's saxophone debut, scored a 3.4. Dennis Miller's syndicated talk show drew a 1.4.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, JUNE 28, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Reach out to those at a distance. The business climate will improve in September. Check references when hiring. Romance will make the Christmas holidays especially merry. Choose an imaginative gift for someone you hope to impress. Long-distance travel is favored in early 1993. Seek experts' advice about a real estate purchase or investment next April. Fortune smiles on your career when you break away from the crowd.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: painter Peter Paul Rubens, quarterback John Elway, actor Mel Brooks, comedian Gilda Radner.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A romantic interlude turns you into a different person. Avoid rushing into a hasty decision. Homemakers and retirees can find a way to make a hobby profitable.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are riding a crest of popularity now. Romance will be like a rollercoaster full of fun and excitement. Newfound cash helps you implement your private plans.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep your emotions under better control or you could end up shortchanging yourself and hurting someone you love. Gain peace of mind by telling creditors how things really stand.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Share your good fortune with a family member who is having a difficult time. Handling new responsibilities does not take the toll you thought it would. A telephone call proves lucky.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A reunion is successful. Now go slow and let a relationship restore itself. A coincidence may not be as accidental as a loved one contends. Consolidate debts after consulting experts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Recreation and family fun are more important than any work you might have brought home this weekend. Set time aside to be with your children and focus on physical fitness activities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A good day for comparison shopping. Protect the identity of someone who tells you a confidence. Patience and diplomacy are your strongest allies in working your way back into another's life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Some old ideas should be reviewed now. Something may have been missed by the decision-makers the first time around. You will enjoy a long-awaited visit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get an early start today and you will be amazed at all you accomplish. Patch up a domestic quarrel before it grows into something serious. New friends come to your defense.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): To clear away those mental cobwebs, head for the nearest park. Family pressures will ease soon. A social invitation requires a quick acceptance. New business contacts could follow.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You delight in the company of your loved ones today. It is time to act. Appearing undecided or complacent could make you miss a wonderful opportunity.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Let tired habits and spent attachments die a natural death. You are about to discover a new game to play. Refuse to be pressured into hasty decisions.

BRUSHED ASIDE

For the most part, your opponents will play honest cards. Once in a while, however, a defender will come up with a clever falsecard and fool you completely. In that case, all you can do is doff your hat to a worthy adversary.

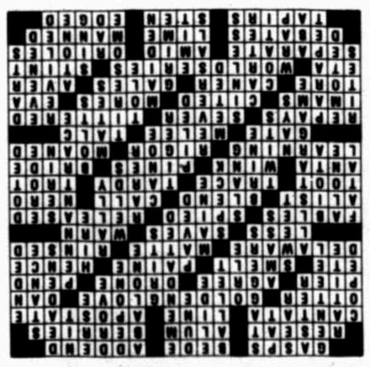

Opposite a passed partner, North's raise to three clubs was a tactical ploy to stifle competition. This was a relatively safe maneuver—as a passed hand South had to have a long club suit for the two-over-one response, since North was under no obligation to bid again. South could see no game and passed.

West led the five of hearts, ducked to East's queen. Declarer followed low on the club return, West won the king and reverted to a heart. Declarer rose with the ace and led a spade to the king, which held! A spade back was again ducked smoothly by West and the nine lost to the jack. East cashed the king of hearts and continued the suit.

Declarer ruffed high and drew two rounds of trumps, ending in dummy. Convinced by the picture West drew by withholding the ace of spades twice, declarer placed East with that card. So the queen of spades was led for a ruffing finesse, and run when East followed low. Down one.

City offers offbeat museums

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bet you never thought you'd be able to see the entire Pac-Man family under one roof.

How about the definitive collection of poodles on pillows, otherwise known as "Canines in Stitchery?" These largely undiscovered gems, and more, are available in an assortment of offbeat museums in St. Louis.

All nine members of the family Pac are lined up near the door and ready to gobble quarters at the National Video Game and Coin-Op Museum near the St. Louis riverfront.

Walking into this place is like stepping into the past. Arcade games come and go, but they live on here.

Man's best friend gets the royal treatment at the Dog Museum, a 5-year-old museum which drew about 15,000 visitors last year.

There's also the Laumeier Sculpture Park, one of two outdoor contemporary sculpture parks in the country and one of only five in the world. In December, the park has its annual fire and ice sculpture, in which a work of art is created and then melted with a bonfire.

The Eugene Field House and Toy Museum is filled with antique toys and dolls, and the Mercantile Money Museum features currency from around the world.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

COLORADO CITY — The Colorado City Playhouse, 337 Walnut, is presenting "An Evening with Biscuits O'Bryan: Tales from the Chuckwagon" featuring Monte Jones at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Jones is a fifth generation Texan whose family has lived in San Angelo for three generations. He began telling stories when he was 2 and created the character of Biscuits O'Bryan on the stage of the Covered Wagon Dinner Theater in the summer of 1986.

Since then, Biscuits O'Bryan has become a regular performer at The National Cowboy Symposium and Celebration in Lubbock, the Texas Folklife Festival in San Antonio and Storyfest in George West.

In addition to being the author of two books, Biscuits O'Bryan writes a column, "Biscuits' Crumbs," which appears in the Devil's River News, The Fritch Eagle Press, The Southwest Stockman and The Record Stockman.

Tickets are priced at $5. The box office will be open from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 1 to 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday. For reservations call 1-728-3491.

■ Dance program slated

The Children's Department of the Midland Public Library is hosting a special program, "Dance Around the World," at 10 a.m. July 7.

The event will be a show-and-tell of history, costume, music and rhythm of dance from diverse parts of the world.

The volunteers participating and the countries they are presenting include Diane Faulkner, South Pacific; Yolanda Belazi, Mexico; Cliff Sherrod, Scottish bagpipes; Mrs. Mamta Kumar and Suma Sarva, 9, India; Arsenia "Cindy" Hernandez, Philippines; and Ritzie Williford, Ireland, Holland, Spain and Russia.

For more information call the library.

■ Ballet classes set

LUBBOCK — Galina Mezentseva, prima ballerina of the Kirov Ballet, will be teaching master classes in ballet from July 6 through 17 in Lubbock.

Classes include all levels beginning to advanced as well as children to adults. Enrollment deadline is July 5.

The two-week ballet school also will offer Spanish dance taught by Ingrid Lozano and advanced ballet taught by Peggy Willis Aarnio, Texas Tech University professor and coordinator of the dance division. Those interested in enrolling are to contact Ms. Aarnio, 1-806-797-9899.

The Galina Mezentseva Summer School is sponsored by the Willis Ballet of Texas Tech University and will be held at the facilities of the Conservatory of Classical Ballet, 4902 34th St., in the Terrace Shopping Center.

A reception for Galina Mezentseva will be held at Rodman Art Gallery July 17.

■ Art exhibit to close

Closing Tuesday at the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library, 1805 W. Indiana Ave., is an exhibit featuring local artists Mary Griffith, Max Perry and James Purvis.

The exhibit may be viewed during Library hours 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 5 p.m. Monday and Tuesday.

■ Celebration planned

SAN ANGELO — Symphony music, cannons and fireworks highlight the sixth annual celebration of Independence Day Friday at the RiverStage here.

The City of San Angelo and the San Angelo Symphony will join forces to present a 4th of July Pops Concert featuring the San Angelo Symphony and Chorale, directed by Gene Chartier Smith.

The gates at the RiverStage open at 6 p.m. For more information call the San Angelo Symphony, 1-658-5877.

■ Museum hosts reunion

PECOS — The West of the Pecos Museum, Orient Hotel building, downtown, will honor the Old Timers of the Pecos Valley, West Texas and Southern New Mexico at a reunion from 8:30 a.m. to noon Wednesday.

Registration will be in the old No. 11 Saloon and in the museum courtyard. For more information call the museum, 1-445-5076. Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

■ Sunday concerts set

Summer Sunday Lawn Concerts continue at 7:45 p.m. today with Midland-Odessa Symphony Pops at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

The free family entertainment hosted by the Museum is provided on the grounds of the museum complex. Audience members are invited to bring lawn chairs or blankets for seating. Those attending also may bring a picnic dinner or other refreshments.

United Way Shining Stars

NAME: Dr. John McAfee
OCCUPATION: Principal, Pease Elementary School
VOLUNTEER POSITION: Allocations Panel Five

Dr. John McAfee of Midland is no stranger to volunteer work. After donating his time and energy to the United Way for the past 29 years, he's still moving full steam ahead.

McAfee has served as administrator coordinator at school and he's also served on several United Way boards, such as the Northeast YMCA and Community Services Day Care.

But, it's only recently McAfee took a postition on the Allocations Panel Five. This panel reviews and funds the YMCA, Camp Fire and Salvation Army.

"I like the fact that I'm there to ensure the funds are spread out in the best possible way," says McAfee. After being a panel volunteer for two years now, McAfee says he's "completely satisfied" with the way the money is being spent. "The majority of the money is going to those programs in the community that need it the most," he says.

As for his future with the United Way, McAfee says he'll keep doing what he's been doing. It seems that education and volunteering have become a way of life for Dr. John McAfee.

"The United Way Of Midland serves 36,000 Midlanders through the following agencies and programs: American Red Cross, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Boy Scouts of America, Boys' and Girls" Club of Midland, Camp Fire, Casa de Amigos, Citywide Community services, Community and Senior Services of Midland, Family Services, Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Program, Freewill Foster Home, Midland/Lee Youth Centers, Midland Rape Crises Center, Midland Need To Read, Palmer Drug Abuse Program, Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and their Children, Permian Basin Girl Scouts, Salvation Army Corps and Day Care Center, YMCA's
