Midland makes CAF's 'short list'

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

HARLINGEN — The Confederate Air Force's general staff unanimously targeted Midland and San Antonio as finalists for a home base for the international aviation group that is dedicated to maintaining the rare World War II "warbirds" in flying condition.

In doing so, the CAF board on Saturday eliminated four competing sites for the CAF museum, headquarters and home of the CAF's Ghost Squadron of more than 140 pursuit aircraft (fighters), bombers, trainers, transports, and liaison airplanes.

"I'm pretty encouraged by the news," said Ed Jones, a Midland banker and CAF colonel who is coordinating the Midland-Odessa campaign to bring the CAF to West Texas.

The CAF sites-survey committee, which has visited the six sites in Midland, San Antonio, Brownsville, San Marcos, Longview and Nashville-Smyrna, Tenn., Saturday at CAF headquarters in Harlingen recommended that the board only consider the sites at Midland International Airport and at Kelly Air Force Base near San Antonio.

Midland's lure includes a debt-free $19-million "deal" that incorporates 52 acres of land at Midland International Airport, the 70,000-square-foot Windecker Hangar facilities, a museum, headquarters and other facilities.

San Antonio has proposed a $23-million debt-laden package in trying to entice the CAF to the Alamo City. San Antonio's is offering $3 million in cash to be raised by pledges and $20 million in revenue bonds needed to finance the building CAF facilities, including a replica of a World War II United States Army Air Corps air field at Kelly AFB.

The San Antonio proposal calls for the indebtedness to be paid off through money raised by admission fees to the CAF Museum. In that regard, San Antonio leaders are proposing a $75,000 study to determine if admission fees would be sufficient to retire the indebtedness.

Offers by Midland and San Antonio "best fit the long-range objectives" of the CAF, said Ralph Royce, the CAF executive director.

Royce said that the 11-member general staff, which is headed up by Midland's Joe Mabee, will tour the Midland and San Antonio sites "as soon as we can" to "understand the details of each proposal, and then we will take whatever next step is prudent."

Making up the governing general staff are Mabee, chief of staff; and Dr. Hal Fenner of Hobbs, N.M., Lloyd Nolen of Harlingen, Marvin "Lefty" Gardner of Austin, James Kaster of Austin, Sam Poss of Houston, Bob Austin of Harlingen, Dennis Devine of Little Rock, Ark., David Dawkins of Fountain Hills, Ariz., C. L. "Casey" Kay of Abilene, and Walter Braun of California. Nolen and Gardner are co-founders of the CAF.

"The CAF governing general staff is "not going to be stampeded by any outside pressures" into making a decision on the new home base of the international aviation group, Mabee said in an earlier interview.

"They (general-staff members) are going to look at everything very, very analytically," said Mabee, who is a Midland rancher, oil-

Big Spring voters keep mayor in office

By Allen E. Howland
Assistant City Editor

BIG SPRING — Mayor Max Green retained his post Saturday with a resounding 73 percent of the votes in the recall election against him.

Green, who had been reticent throughout the campaign, was elated by the results.

"The voters of Big Spring have spoken," Green said in a telephone interview from his home during a post-election celebration. "This is really a thrilling moment for me. I am proud of the accomplishments of my friends, supporters and business people who have worked so hard to make this come true."

The final tally was 2,893 against the recall and 1,062 in favor of removing the first-term mayor.

Green said he was "gratified by the fine turnout for the election" in which more than a third of the city's 11,800 registered voters cast ballots.

By comparison, 21.5 percent of those eligible voted in the last mayoral election.

More than half of those casting ballots in the recall voted absentee, with 2,107 votes already in the ballot box when the polls opened Saturday morning.

About a dozen citizens, including council members Gail Earls and Pat DeAnda, began circulating petitions for Green's recall in January, saying he had not followed the chain of command in city government affairs.

Green was conciliatory toward the petitioners. "I have no hard feelings against the opposition.

Most high schoolers in search of spending money are content to earn it behind the cash register of a clothing store or the smokey grill of a burger joint.

But for students in Lee High School's Health Occupations class, surgical gloves and X-ray machines have taken the place of hamburger spatulas in the quest for pocket change.

The program's 35 juniors and seniors, two of whom commute from Midland High School, spend a portion of their school day working part-time in Midland medical offices — not only for money, but for experience.

"We file, we type, we answer phones for the doctors, run errands for the doctors and assist with the patients whenever necessary," said 17-year-old Edward Marroquin, a senior who works in the Midland Memorial Hospital radiology department. "I really want to thank Midland Memorial because they have really prepared me to enter the health field."

Health Occupations teacher Linda Leps, a registered nurse, said the work-study class gives students an opportunity to explore health careers without committing to them permanently.

Reporter-Telegram staff captures 9 AP awards

EL PASO — Midland Reporter-Telegram staff members captured nine awards Saturday, including three firsts, at the annual Texas Associated Press Managing Editors convention in El Paso.

The Reporter-Telegram competes with newspapers with a circulation of up to 100,000 in a division that includes virtually all of the larger Texas daily newspapers, with the exception of those located in the state's four metropolitan centers.

First place awards, and the category in which they were presented, went to Patrick Crimmins, spot news writing, for his reporting on a major storm, that included 90 mile per hour winds, that hit the Midland area in 1989; Curt Wilcott, photojournalism, for the photography that accompanied a Reporter-Telegram Special Report on "Single Working Mothers: Making it Work;" and George Wolf, sports photography, for his photograph of a basketball player cutting down the net following a victory.

Wolf also was awarded second place in the photojournalism category for photography that accompanied another Reporter-Telegram Special Report, "Midland Hispanics: Power on the Rise," which caused the judges to comment, "Photojournalism is alive and well in West Texas. The entries from Midland and Odessa in the photojournalism category are great examples of detailed, comprehensive, realistic, subtle and worthwhile photojournalism. These photojournalistic efforts are major benefits for their communities." Mark Rogers of the Odessa American received an honorable mention award in foreign soil if they were assaulted or arrested, and polls opened for multiparty elections to local governing councils.

Baltic state's fears boosted by tank convoy

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Lithuania's president likened his Baltic republic to an occupied land on Saturday and said a convoy of Soviet tanks that rumbled through the capital had heightened fears of a clash with Moscow.

Young Lithuanians who deserted the Soviet army when their republic declared independence took refuge at a hospital Saturday night, hoping a pair of policemen and a few Red Cross signs would protect them from arrest by Soviet authorities. Lithuanian officials recommended they seek refuge in churches.

Williams apologizes for remark on rape

ALPINE (AP) — Republican gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams, preparing for a cattle round-up at his West Texas ranch Saturday, said the rainy, cold weather spoiling the event was like "rape."

"If it's inevitable, just relax and enjoy it," Williams said to ranchhands and reporters invited to the event.

After the day's ranching activities, Williams said the remark was a joke and apologized.

"This is a cow camp ... barnyard language and you came to the barn," Williams said. "That's just a joke."

Asked whether some people might find the comment offensive, Williams said: "I'm not going to give you a serious answer. It wasn't a serious deal. It wasn't a serious statement."

William's wife, Modesta, defended him.

"If the word rape was in a joke, if sex was in a joke, it was just a joke," she said. "He's as much a gentleman and as caring as there is."

Asked whether she thought the reporters' questions were unfair, Mrs. Williams said, "I sure do ... Sitting out here around a campfire, and somebody says a joke, I just don't think that's right behavior.

Williams, who invited reporters to the two-day round-up, said the Freezing drizzle blows through

Staff Report

Freezing drizzle from a slow-moving cold front should abate today and temperatures will climb into the upper 40s, a National Weather Service spokesman at Midland International Airport said Saturday. Winds will be from the east at 5-10 mph.

Cold temperatures, rain and an occasional snow flurry marked the passage of the front through Midland, which had a high of 83 on Thursday.

Tonight will be cloudy and cold with a low in the mid 30s and a 20 percent chance of light rain or drizzle.

Monday will be mostly cloudy with a high in the mid 50s.

Springlike temperatures in the 70s and 80s should return to the Permian Basin by Tuesday, according to Weather Service forecasts.

Saturday's high was 42 degrees at midnight, and the afternoon high was 35. The low Saturday was 32. The record high for the date is 89, set in 1938. Sunday's record low is 23, set in 1955.

STATE

Cold Canadian air with winter-like weather continued to dominate Texas Saturday afternoon.

The slow-moving cold front was pushing south during the afternoon and was situated from over the Pine Belt near Sam Rayburn reservoir, extending southwest to south central Texas just north of San Antonio.

Meanwhile a weak upper-level disturbance was over the state, producing a variety of precipitation north of the cold front. Light snow was falling over parts of the Panhandle and low rolling plains. And freezing drizzle was over the western Red River Valley, southeast Panhandle and parts of the south plains.

A few showers and thunderstorms were over the southern plains. Widely scattered rainshowers fell in far south Texas and the Edwards Plateau.

The Associated Press contributed to the report.

CAF: San Antonio courting group

(From 1A)

man, aviator, airplane restorer, and philanthropist. "And it's strictly an economic decision."

The Midland proposal includes a $1 million grant from the Mabee Foundation and a $1 million grant from the Abell-Hanger Foundation.

Midland's offer is at "no cost or no risk" to the CAF, Jones said. "Midland is a great place for the CAF."

In October of 1988, a coalition of Midland-Odessa business-civic leaders launched studies into needs and objectives of the CAF in an effort gain support to relocate the CAF to West Texas.

Currently, the CAF is boxed in at its headquarters at Valley International Airport in Harlingen in South Texas and has no expansion room.

The antique aircraft, which include "warbirds" from the Allies and Axis Powers, are exposed to the corrosive salts associated with coastal areas.

In August 1989, the Midland-Odessa coalition presented its proposal to the CAF general staff, which favorably viewed the offer.

"We were the only entity to make an offer," Jones.

But the Midland offer excited other communities to seek the CAF headquarters.

In 1985, Jones said, the CAF general staff had "considered moving to San Antonio.

"And San Antonio didn't come up with any money," he said. "San Antonio was glad to have them but wasn't going to spend any money until a bona-fide offer came out of the blue from Midland."

Now, five years later, San Antonio is offering the CAF "a debt offer," Jones said. And unless San Antonio leaders "change their offer, we are going to see whether the CAF is going to incur debt (in a move to San Antonio) or whether they are going to move to Midland."

In an earlier vote by the CAF membership on the choice for a new home base for the CAF, the members — colonels all — expressed preference for the Midland site. Almost 50 percent of the colonels favored Midland as site of the CAF headquarters, museum, and "Rebel Field" — popular name of the CAF home field.

San Antonio received 27 percent of the vote. Of the four other cities that had sought to be the CAF's home base, Brownsville's garnered 8.5 percent of the vote; San Marcos, 6 percent; Nashville-Smyrna, Tenn., 5.5 percent, and Longview, 3 percent.

If the CAF board decides on Midland, the CAF facilities at Midland International Airport would be readied for the CAF "grand opening" on Dec. 7, 1941, on the 50th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and the United States' direct involvement in World War II.

"We won't have all of the exhibits inside the museum built," Jones surmised, "but we'll have enough of them done where we'll be ready. It's too important of a date to let it slide," said Jones, who cited the role of aircraft in the 1939-41 war.

"World War II is the event that structured the entire geopolitical and economic climate of the world since 1945," Jones said. "It's really being brought to home with the fall" of the Berlin Wall and other historic events in Eastern Europe in 1989 and 1990.

"And World War II is the only war that was ever started by aircraft," Jones said.

"You have the war that sort of determined what the last 50 years have been."

The CAF has members in 25 nations and has wings and squadrons in the United States, England, Australia and New Zealand.

WILLIAMS: Reporters watch round-up episode may change the way he deals with reporters.

"You're out here to see what kind of person I am. If you try to take something like that and make it into a big deal, it's ridiculous," said Williams, who is making his first run for public office.

"You can write it serious if you want to; I don't consider it serious. It's not reflective of any opinion."

Williams won the March 13 primary over three major challengers, spending more than $6 million of his oil, ranching and business fortune on the campaign. He has said he owns no shoes, only cowboy boots, and his campaign TV commercials often featured him wearing a cowboy hat.

"I've been a cowboy most of my life. I didn't change myself. That's who I am, for better or for worse," Williams said at the ranch Saturday.

Williams, with help of his family and about a dozen ranchhands, rounded up about 900 head of cattle. About 300 calves were separated from the herd and then branded, vaccinated and some were castrated.

Williams himself castrated some of the calves.

Ranch controller Mike McCrary said Williams was the 11th-largest cattle breeder in the United States in 1989. He runs about 11,700 head of cattle on 347,181 acres in Texas and Wyoming.

The weather in Alpine, about 150 miles southwest of William's home in Midland, was drizzly and chilly. The high temperature Saturday was in the low 40s and nighttime lows were forecast to dip below freezing.

The low temperatures forced Williams and his ranchhands to cancel plans to sleep outside Saturday night.

Williams will face either state Treasurer Ann Richards or Attorney General Jim Mattox in the November general election. Ms. Richards and Mattox are in the April 10 run-off for the Democratic nomination.

Last week, Williams said he would be a bit less comfortable campaigning against Ms. Richards.

"I wouldn't be as comfortable in battling with a woman. I don't have that comfort factor because I've never done that before," Williams said.

The comment made by Williams on Saturday was similar to one made by Indiana University basketball coach Bobby Knight in 1988.

Knight, interviewed by Connie Chung for a TV documentary, answered a question about stress by saying, "I think that if rape is inevitable, relax and enjoy it."

Knight said he wasn't talking about the act of rape. He continued: "That's just an old term that you're going to use. The plane's down, so you have no control over it. I'm not talking about the act of rape. Don't misinterpret me. But what I'm talking about is something happens to you, so you have to handle it — now."

Knight was criticized by university officials and a number of women's organizations, but was allowed to keep his coaching post.

HEALTH: Class has practical side

(From 1A)

"The purpose is to inform the student of the number of professions that are available to them in the medical field and educate them to see if this is really what they want, so they won't go to college and waste time and money only to find out, 'Hey, this isn't what I want,'" Ms. Leps said last week.

Students, who work for up to $5 an hour, are employed in doctors' and dentists' offices, medical labs and radiology labs, nursing homes and veterinary hospitals, Ms. Leps said.

In addition to their on-the-job training, students learn about the health field in their daily class with Ms. Leps.

Medical terminology, disease prevention, anatomy and physiology, cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) and first aid are included in the curriculum. Students also learn how to take patients' blood pressure and how to run an electrocardiogram (EKG).

"This also gives them an edge on other students when they are going into their field," Ms. Leps said.

The doctors and health care professionals for whom the students work agree that the eight-year-old Health Occupations program gives students insight into the field that they might not otherwise get.

Dr. David Orr, a dentist who employs two students, said that classroom work can't compare to hands-on experience.

"The classroom experience they get is very general, and it gets very specific down here at the office," Orr said. He added that students at his office do clerical work, answer phones and assist with dental operations.

Dr. Millard Kimery, another dentist employing two Health Occupations students, said the program represents a valuable opportunity for them.

"I really feel strongly about this business of kiddos needing a chance," said Kimery, who added that it would be more economical for him to hire a permanent assistant than to train a new batch of student interns every year.

"I don't look too closely at the cost-effectiveness of this," he said.

Kimery said the program, in which participants are graded by both their employers and Ms. Leps, gives students a taste of the real world of medicine.

"They need to realize that Florence Nightingale also had to empty bedpans," Kimery said. "It's a confrontation with reality, and this is something that can be very helpful in their learning process."

Peter Fain, 18, a senior who works at the Mesa Verde Animal Clinic, said his exposure to the profession has strengthened his desire to become a vet himself.

"Now that I'm working there, I get to help with every single thing there is to do...and it all interests me," Fain said. "Some people are discouraged when they work, but now that I'm doing it I still want to do it and I still like it."

Kimery said many of the students who have worked in his office have emerged from the experience feeling, like Fain, that they have found their calling.

"Some were just absolutely jewels," Kimery said. "And there were others who were better suited to seek their fortunes elsewhere."

AWARDS: 3 'firsts' noted

this category.

Other second place awards winners were Elizabeth Edwin, feature layout, for her page design entitled, "Seams Like Yesterday," and Myra Lee Salcedo, comment and criticism, for a trio of movie reviews.

Receiving honorable mention, the equivalent of third place, was Crimmins in the spot news and feature series categories (for, respectively, a story about a man slain while sleeping in a local cafe and a comprehensive look at the work of the Permian Basin Drug Task Force).

A third honorable mention went to Chris Van Wagenen for his five-part feature series entitled, "Midland Hispanics: Power on the Rise."

BALTIC: Lithuania likened to 'occupied country'

(From 1A)

In Moscow, the Soviet Foreign Ministry ordered foreign diplomats, including two Americans, out of Lithuania and said foreign journalists would be barred from traveling to the republic. There was no mention of foreign journalists already in Lithuania, meaning no news blackout was imposed.

In Washington, President Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, warned that any Soviet use of force or intimidation in Lithuania "would be counterproductive" to U.S.-Soviet relations.

About 100 Soviet military vehicles containing at least 1,000 paratroopers armed with automatic weapons rumbled along the main highway through the heart of Vilnius without stopping early Saturday, official Lithuanian sources said.

There were at least 22 tanks and armored personnel carriers and dozens of green military trucks. The parliament's information department quoted witnesses as saying there were 59 tanks and 50 other vehicles. No incidents were reported.

The convoy passed within about 100 yards of Lithuania's parliament building.

VOTE: Big Spring retains mayor

(From 1A)

They too were sincere in their beliefs.

"I sincerely hope we can put all these differences aside and move forward together ... to concentrate on making Big Spring a greater city than what it is," said the mayor who was elected in May 1989.

Ms. Earls echoed that sentiment.

"The mayor has said he wants to work with the whole council, we'll just have to wait and see."

She said she "felt good" about the type of campaign that recall backers ran, calling it "clean and above board."

"One of our goals was to get people interested and involved. We accomplished that," said the council woman.

Concluded the mayor: "I know that working together we can move forward and upward.

"My slogan has always been, 'I can't do it, but we can.'"

Tractor-trailer rig overturns

Staff Report

A tractor-trailer rig overturned on Interstate 20 early Saturday morning, blocking eastbound lanes about 4 miles east of Midland for 5½ hours, a Department of Public Safety spokesperson said.

No one was injured in the crash, which occurred about 12:30 a.m.

DPS reports did not say whether the truck, a 1987 Peterbilt, spilled any of its 35,000 pound load of kiwi fruit and flour onto the highway.

Traffic was diverted around the accident while emergency crews, including Midland County sheriff's officers, worked to remove the truck.

The DPS spokesperson said the driver of the truck swerved after veering onto the right shoulder and the truck rolled onto its side.

Hungarian election expected to be fair

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Former Vice President Walter Mondale said Saturday he expects no cheating in Hungary's national elections and had heard of no irregularities beyond what could be expected in a U.S. campaign.

Mondale

"I got up this morning and somebody said, 'They've been tearing down campaign signs,' " said the Minnesota Democrat. "I said, 'What are you talking about? That could be Minneapolis.' "

Mondale was vice president under Jimmy Carter from 1980 to 1984 and the unsuccessful Democratic candidate in the 1984 presidential election.

He and Jan Carnogursky, the deputy premier of Czechoslovakia, are among the 65-member international delegation in Hungary to observe voting today in Hungary's first free national election in 43 years.

Carnogursky said his country, which in June holds its first free election in more than four decades, could learn from the Hungarian process.

"We expect nothing unusual to disturb the democratic process Sunday," Carnogursky said.

Mondale said a "dark streak" in pre-Communist Hungarian politics — anti-Semitism and ethnic intolerance — showed up in some campaigning.

"There has been some language used by some politicians that some consider signals" of religious and racial intolerance, Mondale said.

He refused to go into details, saying only that politicians of leading parties "admit it's around, but they do not think it's going to be a basic determinant."

"All the party leaders we talked to are clearly trying to avoid that historic mistake that cursed not only Hungarian politics but Eastern European politics for so long," said Mondale.

Sponsors of the delegation's visit are the National Democratic Institute and the National Republican Institute, organizations of the U.S. political parties.

Delegation members plan to tour polling stations and talk to voters today as part of the monitoring process. The two institutes have sponsored similar delegations to observe elections in Haiti, Nicaragua, Panama, the Philippines and elsewhere, and plan to send missions to other Soviet bloc countries planning elections.

Both U.S. parties sent delegations to Hungary during the campaign to instruct the country's fledgling political parties in the art of electioneering.

Colombian opposition suspends campaign

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Thousands of people lined the streets Saturday to mourn a presidential candidate allegedly slain by drug traffickers. Opposition parties suspended their campaigns and demanded postponement of the May election.

Bernardo Jaramillo was shot point-blank Thursday at Bogota's airport. Police blamed drug traffickers.

Drug traffickers killed the governing party's presidential hopeful, Luis Carlos Galan, in August, sparking a bloody war between the government and drug lords.

"The right to life has disappeared completely," the Conservative Party candidate, Rodrigo Lloreda, told reporters late Friday at a news conference. "The government is not even providing that minimum guarantee."

The Conservative Party, the country's main opposition, joined Jaramillo's Patriotic Union and other leftist parties late Friday in suspending their campaigns.

They demanded that President Virgilio Barco postpone the May 27 presidential election and provide additional security for candidates. The communique from the opposition parties did not suggest a new date for elections.

Officials of the opposition leftist Union Patriotica party carry the coffin with the remains of their presidential candidate Bernardo Jaramillo Ossa, killed last Thursday, during a symbolic funeral ceremony Saturday in Bogota, Colombia.

Barco, of the governing Liberal Party, did not respond to the demands. The party's leader in the House of Representatives, Norberto Morales, said the election should take place on the date prescribed by law.

Jaramillo's body was carried from the Capitol building to Bogota's main cemetery Saturday in a symbolic funeral. He will be buried Sunday in his hometown of Manizales, 120 miles northwest of Bogota.

Radio reports said some 20,000 people, many of them crying and waving white handkerchiefs, lined the streets.

Several small explosions intended to cause panic occurred during the ceremony, but authorities controlled the situation using riot police and armored cars, said police spokesman Luis Enrique Avila. No injuries were reported.

The Liberal Party put off its Saturday convention until after Jaramillo's burial.

The governing party is expected to ratify as its candidate Cesar Gaviria, who won a March 11 primary. By law, Barco cannot run for re-election.

Colombia's intelligence police said their investigations had shown that the leader of the Medellin cocaine cartel, Pablo Escobar, ordered Jaramillo killed. Escobar denied the charge in a letter Friday to the Patriotic Union.

Diego Montana, president of the Patriotic Union, repeated his suggestion that the government was indirectly responsible for Jaramillo's death.

"I don't know how a government that permits the elimination of the opposition can call itself Liberal," he said during a joint news conference with Lloreda.

Romania pleads with Hungary in ethnic crisis

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Romania appealed to Hungary Saturday to avoid exacerbating ethnic tension in Transylvania, where clashes between ethnic Hungarians and Romanians have killed at least seven people.

Premier Petre Roman of Romania made the plea during a 90-minute meeting with Hungary's ambassador, Pal Szuts.

"We hope the Hungarian government will help us and not make the situation there more difficult by pronouncements which give the Romanians in Transylvania the feeling they are in danger," a government statement obtained by The Associated Press quoted Roman as saying.

The Hungarian envoy had asked for the meeting because of mounting tension between the two Warsaw Pact allies over the rights of the 2 million-strong minority of ethnic Hungarians in Transylvania. In addition to the seven deaths, about 300 people have been wounded in the clashes over the past week in the town of Tirgu Mures.

Interim President Ion Iliescu of Romania also appealed for calm. He rejected complaints that his government had not acted firmly enough to prevent violence. He said democratic methods are needed to solve ethnic conflicts.

Romanians in Transylvania fear that a campaign by ethnic Hungarians for education in their own language is a veiled push for autonomy or even union with Hungary. Hungarians deny those assertions.

Hungary ruled Transylvania for hundreds of years before 1920, when the victorious allied powers of World War I transferred it to Romania in return for help during the war.

Romania and Hungary traded recriminations this week after the clashes in Tirgu Mures.

The picturesque town about 160 miles north of Bucharest was reported calm Saturday. The daily Adevarul said members of both ethnic groups planned to demonstrate together today to show they could cooperate.

Agreement to disband Contras threatened by renewed fighting

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — An agreement to disband the Contra rebels was in doubt Saturday because the outgoing Sandinista government had not signed the pact and because of renewed fighting.

The accord, signed Friday in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, by representatives of the U.S.-backed rebels and the new government, calls for a truce and immediate disbanding of the Contras. The process would be completed before President-elect Violeta Barrios de Chamorro takes office April 25 for a six-year term.

However, no delegates from the Sandinista government took part in talks that led to the pact or signed the accord.

Also, there has been renewed fighting in the past week between Sandinista and Contra forces, and one rebel commander said his fighters will not lay down their arms until the Sandinista Army does.

The latest clash occurred Friday, when about 100 rebels ambushed two army vehicles in the area around Jinotega, a town about 100 miles northeast of Managua. The Defense Ministry said 12 soldiers died and eight were wounded. Four Contras were killed, the ministry said.

Medical sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said in a telephone interview that the attack occurred about the time the accord was being announced in Tegucigalpa.

President Daniel Ortega has repeatedly said the Contras must disband before Mrs. Chamorro's inauguration if there is to be a peaceful transfer of power.

After learning of the accord, Ortega told a rally of youth supporters in Managua late Friday that "the weapons are now in the hands of the people."

Ortega, quoted Saturday by the Sandinista newspaper Barricada, did not elaborate. But his remark seemed to be a reference to recent reports that the Sandinista army had distributed hundreds of weapons among supporters in the provinces. There have also been reports that the Sandinista army will not yield control to the new government.

The party newspaper voiced concern in an editorial, saying: "There is still worry over the plans that the Contras have been preparing to launch a great offensive." It said "infiltrations from Honduras continue, and that weapons are being hidden."

The editorial also pointed out that Contra military chief Israel Galeano Cornejo, known as Commander Franklyn, had not signed the pact for disbanding the rebels.

He took part in the seven hours of talks, but his deputy, Oscar Sovalbarro, signed the accord. Antonio Lacayo, Mrs. Chamorro's representative, signed for the incoming leadership of the United National Opposition. The document was witnessed by Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Managua.

Sovalbarro later told reporters about 12,000 rebel fighters and their families living in Honduran jungle camps planned to start demobilizing over the weekend.

The accord also calls for observers from the United Nations and the Organization of American States to supervise the disbanding and resettlement of the rebels and their families.

Mrs. Chamorro's landslide victory in elections Feb. 25 ended a decade of leftist Sandinista rule that was marked by close military cooperation with Cuba and the Soviet Union.

Shortly before the accord was reached, rebel commander Osvaldo Galeano Cornejo accused the Sandinista army of "repressing the peasants" in his area in southern Nicaragua. He said his forces will not demobilize until the Sandinista army does the same.

Amarillo bishop among those honoring dead archbishop

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The poor, the humble and the devout flocked by the thousands Saturday to honor the memory of Roman Catholic Archbishop Oscar A. Romero on the 10th anniversary of his assassination.

More than 1,000 people jammed the unfinished downtown cathedral in San Salvador, and several thousand more listened to the Mass piped through loudspeakers to the plaza and streets outside.

A 20-block march commemorating Romero preceded the religious service. It was led by 16 bishops, including Roger Mahoney of Los Angeles; Leo Mattieson, of Amarillo, Texas; and Nicolas D'Antonio of New Orleans, La.

Romero was slain March 24, 1980, as he said Mass at a hospital chapel. Although the Christian Democratic government of 1984-89 compiled evidence implicating extreme rightists, no one has been arrested or charged in the murder.

No high-ranking official from President Alfredo Cristiani's conservative administration or his Republican Nationalist Alliance were present. The late former President Jose Napoleon Duarte, a Christian Democrat, accused Arena founder Roberto d'Aubuisson of having ordered Romero's assassination.

Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, the Vatican secretary of state, sent a message that said Pope John Paul II "joins the service in spirit and raises a prayer that the sacrifice of that pastor become a new call to reconciliation and forgiveness." The message was read at the Mass.

El Salvador's decade-old civil war, which began engulfing this nation about the time Romero was killed, continues unabated. The death toll surpassed 72,000 late last year when leftist rebels launched a monthlong offensive.

The Metropolitan Cathedral, which has been under construction for 30 years and has been closed for worship since October, was reopened.

The facade was festooned with huge banners quoting scripture. One, citing John 10.15, read: "I give my life for my flock."

The service is to be the last public religious homage to Romero in decades, because he will be formally proposed for beatification, the first step toward sainthood, in coming weeks. Church doctrine prohibits its public homage to candidates for sainthood.

Local church officials and many in the Vatican say prospects are good for Romero's eventual sainthood, but they say the process will take up to 30 years. Archbishop Thomas Becket of Canterbury was murdered at the altar in 1170 and later canonized.

A nun carries a portrait of murdered Archbishop Oscar Romero during a march in San Salvador Saturday commemorating the 10th anniversary of his assassination. Although evidence implicating radical right-wing groups has been compiled, no one has been charged or arrested in connection with the crime.

Mandela calls for exploitation of black farm workers to cease

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Nelson Mandela said Saturday the country's black farm laborers are being exploited and called on rural towns to end segregated public facilities.

"No white farmer has yet gone to prison for the murder of one of their workers, nor will that happen for as long as farmers continue to enjoy the protection of local police and magistrates," the anti-apartheid leader said at an African National Congress rally in Nelspruit.

He cited the case of a white farmer who was recently fined only $34 after his black worker died as a result of a beating.

Mandela said the white towns in eastern Transvaal province, where he spoke, were deeply racist and should immediately end segregation of recreational areas and other public facilities.

The government announced Friday it intends to allow state-funded schools to become multi-racial by January if 90 percent of the parents at a particular school favor the move.

President F.W. de Klerk has been pushing a series of racial reforms. He has called for ending the apartheid system of racial segregation and for holding talks on allowing the black majority an equal political role with whites.

De Klerk has also said the law allowing municipalities to segregate public facilities would be repealed this year.

In February, the president released Mandela, who had been in prison since 1962 on a life sentence for sabotage and plotting to overthrow the white government.

Mandela, vice president of the ANC, has been campaigning virtually non-stop since then for an end to apartheid.

At Saturday's rally, he called for an end to the land tenancy system that allows farmers to require the entire families of black laborers to work. He condemned the lack of legal protection for farm workers and said they should be allowed full trade union rights.

Mandela also demanded an inquiry into reports that Mozambican guerrillas have bases inside South Africa.

President Joaquim Chissano of Mozambique has said he accepts de Klerk's assurances that the South African government no longer supports the Mozambique National Resistance guerrillas.

But Mozambican government officials believe the guerrillas still receive support from across the border, and South African newspaper reports have recently cited new evidence of such backing.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Australian Labor maintains slim lead

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Prime Minister Bob Hawke's Labor Party appeared to hold a narrow lead in elections Saturday despite gains by a conservative coalition, according to preliminary results.

However, it seemed that Labor might be forced to seek help from outside the party in order to govern.

Vote counting, routinely suspended for today, was to resume Monday. Political leaders said the results won't be known for sure until Thursday, when mail-in ballots are counted.

A confident Hawke, who is seeking an unprecedented fourth term for a Labor government, told a television interviewer Sunday he could govern even with a majority of one in the House of Representatives.

Latvia may be next to go

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The head of the Latvian People's Front said Saturday the first act of the republic's new parliament will be a vote on independence.

Dainis Ivans, President of the Latvian People's Front, said the vote could come within six weeks, provided the pro-independence group has enough support in parliament.

The Front and other independence supporters won more than a 50 percent majority in the first round of elections for Latvia's new parliament earlier this month. Ivans said they need to win only six more of the 35 remaining races to have the two-thirds majority needed for an independence vote.

Ivans was in Vilnius to meet with leaders of the popular fronts of Lithuania and Estonia to coordinate the Baltic republics' campaigns for independence.

Wall's fall lured tourists

WEST BERLIN (AP) — The opening of the Berlin Wall in November helped make 1989 a record year for tourism in West Berlin, according to a report published Saturday.

The West Berlin Statistics Office said 2.4 million visitors came to West Berlin in 1989, a 12 percent increase over 1988.

The figures do not include visitors from East Germany or tourists who did not stay in hotels, the report said.

The Berlin Wall was opened Nov. 9 at the height of the pro-democracy revolution.

The number of tourists skyrocketed in December, when 183,000 registered visitors came to West Berlin. It was an increase of 48 percent over December 1988.

Americans led the number of foreign visitors, with 8,200, followed by 6,000 Dutch, 5,700 British and 4,700 French tourists.

Palestinian child shot

JERUSALEM (AP) — A 6-year-old Palestinian was shot in the head Saturday and critically wounded as his family was tilling land near a Jewish settlement in the occupied West Bank, an army spokesman said.

Tarek Mustapha el-Halabi was rushed to Mokassed hospital in Arab east Jerusalem. He underwent surgery to remove a bullet that entered his skull above the left eye, hospital officials said.

El-Halabi's parents told Arab reporters and army investigators they were working their land near the village of Rujeib, a mile south of the West Bank city of Nablus, when two settlers shot their son.

Indian soldiers withdrawing from Sri Lanka

TRINCOMALEE, Sri Lanka (AP) — Serenaded by "Auld Lang Syne," the last Indian soldiers withdrew from this northeastern port city Saturday after a deadlocked 2½-year-old jungle war against Tamil guerrillas.

Sri Lanka's navy band played and its honor guard unsheathed swords as the 2,000 Indian soldiers — the last of an estimated 125,000 — marched aboard the troop carrier Magar, which left for Madras in southern India.

The departure was a week ahead of the pullout deadline.

"You have made a great sacrifice, there is no doubt about that," Sri Lankan Defense Minister Ranjan Wijeratne told the troops.

At least 1,115 Indian troops died fighting the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, the largest Tamil militant group fighting Sri Lanka's Sinhalese-dominated government for an independent homeland.

About 10,000 Sri Lankans have died in the insurgency, which started in 1983.

As the troop carrier chugged out into the bay, Tamil Tigers patrolled Trincomalee's streets, along with Sri Lankan soldiers and police.

India, which also has a large Tamil minority, sent soldiers into Sri Lanka in July 1987 to help enforce a treaty that granted the Tamil minority limited autonomy in the northeast if they put down their weapons.

The Tigers refused to do so, and began battling the Indian soldiers.

President Ranasinghe Premadasa of Sri Lanka reached an agreement with the Tamil Tigers last summer and asked India to withdraw its troops by July 27, 1989, the second anniversary of the peace accord.

India stalled on the request, saying a rapid withdrawal could lead to a bloodbath. But in his election campaign last fall, India's new prime minister, V.P. Singh, promised to withdraw the troops. A deadline of March 31 was set.

The Sun, a leading Sri Lankan newspaper, said the withdrawal signals the end of a "chapter that is historic as much as traumatic to this nation and its people. For most people in this country, the ultimate withdrawal of the Indian troops is a joyous scent."

Many Indian newspapers criticized the military operation, accusing their government of fighting "somebody else's dirty war." Others called it a military disaster because India did not succeed in disarming the Tamil separatists.

The Tigers now control the area Indian soldiers once occupied. A senior leader of the guerrilla organization, contacted by telephone, said the Tigers had no immediate comment on the pullout. The leader, who spoke on condition of anonymity, was reached in the Tiger-held town of Jaffna.

"The soldiers' morale is high. We don't think we have lost a war. We're just obeying orders," said an Indian commando on the Trincomalee dock, pushing back his red beret to wipe sweat from his forehead.

Bush monitors Baltic pulse; U.S. military action not likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, on Saturday warned that any Soviet use of force or intimidation in Lithuania "would be counterproductive" to U.S.-Soviet relations.

Scowcroft said the Bush administration would take appropriate measures in response to what it considered excessive Soviet pressure or an increase in tensions in the Baltic republic.

He did not elaborate but said military action was not a likely option.

"We would not ignore it," however, he warned. "They're under no doubt about how we feel."

Bush, spending the weekend at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., was receiving periodic telephone reports from White House aides as Soviet military vehicles rolled through the streets of Vilnius a day after expelling two U.S. diplomats.

"We're watching it carefully," White House spokesman Bill Harlow said.

Scowcroft made his comments in a telephone interview when asked to explain Bush's remark Friday that any Soviet "attempt to coerce or intimidate or forcibly intervene against the Lithuanian people is bound to backfire. That is inevitable."

Scowcroft said such actions "would be counterproductive for the Soviets ... because it could affect the relationship — our relationship."

Scowcroft said Bush's comment could be read as "a slight escalation of the rhetoric as the Soviets have escalated their action."

While the Soviets have indicated they "consider it their internal matter, none of our business," Scowcroft said, "it has to be our business because it could affect the relationship." between Washington and Moscow.

In an interview Saturday on CNN's "Newsmaker Saturday" Lithuanian Consul General Anicetas Simutis said Lithuanians were seeking moral support from the United States.

"We don't expect that the United States will go to war on behalf of Lithuania," Simutis said. "And we are against any violence in or by Lithuanians or Russians or anybody. We believe in democratic procedures."

Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., said the United States must make clear to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev the consequences of its actions in Lithuania.

"What the Bush administration owes Gorbachev and the American people is candor," Lantos said on the CNN program. "We must lay out for Gorbachev now what the consequences would be of military action. ... We have to tell Mr. Gorbachev that kicking out American diplomats, kicking out the press of the Western world is not the way to move towards peaceful negotiations."

Bush did not have any national security advisers with him for the weekend, but top National Security Council officials were at work at the White House.

The State Department on Friday protested the expulsion of two U.S. diplomats, Douglas Wake and Jon Purnell, from Lithuania.

In Washington, members of the Lithuanian-American community pressed ahead, despite snowy weather, for an evening vigil to show solidarity with the Lithuanians.

They called on Bush to recognize Lithuania's independence, which the president has declined to do even though the United States never officially recognized the Soviet Union's forced annexation of Lithuania in 1940.

"His statements on Friday were a little bit better," said Jonas Alsenas of the Lithuanian-American group.

Alsenas applauded Bush's statement that the United States supports Lithuania's right to self-determination, but criticized the U.S. stance on the new Lithuanian government.

Panama enlisted in drug war

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Guillermo Ford of Panama said Saturday his new government is moving quickly to stifle the laundering of drug profits through Panama's banks.

At a joint news conference with Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, Ford declared "We're partners in a joint venture. We are committed to this battle."

Ford, who earlier this week lobbied Congress for a $500 million aid package, declared that "The United States is not imposing anything on us. We are cooperating" on the bank issue.

Already, he noted, the new government has enacted a law which imposes stiffer fines for failure to report major cash transactions than those faced by U.S. banks. The penalties range from $100,000 to $1 million.

Ford and Thornburgh met for about 30 minutes in the attorney general's office. "Good friends can discuss everything in 30 minutes," Ford said.

Thornburgh said "The most important thing we did was exchange phone numbers. We're going to be working together on drug trafficking and money laundering. And we pledged to make available a number of key people to one another."

Ford said "We're not telling the world that we are no longer going to be a financial center. But we are going to be a decent, honest financial center."

On Thursday, the House Banking Committee, moving with unusual speed, approved 48-0 a bill that would authorize the Treasury Department to revoke the charters of U.S. banks caught laundering drug money.

The bill also reaches out to savings and loans, credit unions and even state-chartered banks, whose federal insurance could be revoked.

NATION IN BRIEF

Police arrest 83 at protest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 2,000 demonstrators protesting U.S. policies in Central America marched in front of the White House on Saturday and several were arrested.

A Park Police spokesman said 83 protesters were arrested and charged with demonstrating without a permit.

The group marched peacefully, waved banners and called for a halt to U.S. military aid to El Salvador as a light, steady snow fell.

The march commemorated the 1980 assassination of Archbishop Oscar Romero, who was gunned down in the pulpit of the Salvadoran church where he frequently criticized right-wing death squads linked with the country's military.

"Arrest George Bush. Arrest Dan Quayle," the protesters chanted. Bush, who was spending the weekend at the presidential retreat in Camp David, Md., was not in the White House.

Canoes enter base

ST. MARYS, Ga. (AP) — Scores of canoes carrying anti-nuclear demonstrators entered a restricted area at the Kings Bay Naval Submarine Base on Saturday to protest deployment of the first submarine to carry Trident II missiles.

The protesters agreed to leave the area peacefully and police and Coast Guard officials reported no arrests.

The demonstration was organized by the Greenpeace environmental group and two other organizations. A Greenpeace ship, the 60-foot ketch Mondcivitano, took part.

About 75 people gathered for the protest in anticipation of the upcoming departure of the USS Tennessee, which will carry 24 Trident II missiles, said Greenpeace spokeswoman Shannon Fagan. Each Trident II missile carries eight warheads.

Quayle speaks out

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — The Soviet Union is entitled to pursue deserters from its army but should not act against the independence movement in Lithuania, Vice President Dan Quayle said Saturday.

"What is happening is a very subtle display of force that, in fact, is trying to intimidate the people of Lithuania not to go ahead with their independence," Quayle told reporters in Arizona, en route to a vacation in Hawaii.

Mishap injures 30

CHICAGO (AP) — An Amtrak train arriving from New Orleans hit a bumper at the end of a track at Union Station on Saturday, derailing cars and injuring at least 30 people, authorities said.

"The 'City of New Orleans' train No. 53 struck the bumping block at the end of the track, apparently throwing quite a few people who were standing waiting to get off," said Amtrak spokesman John Jacobsen.

"It wasn't a serious accident from a railroad point of view," he said.

At least 30 people were taken to at least six hospitals, most complaining of muscle, back or neck pains.

Japanese polled

NEW YORK (AP) — A majority of Japanese say their country's trade policies with the United States are unfair, and they also say they're losing respect for this country, a poll has found.

The poll, reported in the April 2 issue of Newsweek magazine, found that 48 percent of Japanese surveyed think Tokyo should make it easier for Americans to sell their products in Japan.

The new poll also found the Japanese are losing respect for the United States, that relations between the two nations are worsening, and that 82 percent believe abuse of illegal drugs and alcohol hurt the U.S. economy.

The poll did find some positive views of the United States among Japanese. A large majority, 73 percent, saw the United States as a superpower with few problems, while only 16 percent saw this country in an irreversible decline.

Tribes sign pact

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Indian tribes from the United States and Canada gathered Saturday to sign a first-ever intertribal treaty rallying them to protect tribal rights and preserve their treaties with the government.

The document was drafted in response to fears that federal, state and local governments intend to disregard their rights as sovereign nations and undermine treaties which grant the tribes land, hunting rights and sovereign jurisdiction.

Representatives of 20 Indian nations or tribes signed the Indigenous Nations Treaty during a two-hour outdoor ceremony.

The document promises tribes will set aside differences and come to the defense of more than 400 treaties signed between the U.S. government and Indian tribes or nations over the past 200 years.

Condor total up

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The hatchings of two healthy California condors late last week and the possibility of eight to 10 chicks in all this breeding season could accelerate the program to return the endangered species to the wild, a zoo official said.

A 5.8-ounce bird named Kareya, from the Karok Indian word meaning "creator of all things," emerged Friday, the first of the vulturelike chicks to hatch at the Los Angeles Zoo, said spokeswoman Cindy Richardson.

Kareya's hatching came only a little more than 24 hours after the second chick of the 1990 breeding season, Honsi, was hatched early Thursday at the San Diego Wild Animal Park.

The latest hatchings nudged the total population of the species to 35, all in the two zoos. There were only 27 known California condors when all were taken into captivity for breeding in 1987.

Scientists are trying to breed enough of the birds, which can have a wingspan of nearly 10 feet, to begin returning some to their natural habitat.

Wildlife officials had planned on releasing the first of the condors sometime between 1993 and 1995. But Michael Wallace, curator for birds at the Los Angeles Zoo, said the captive breeding program has achieved such success that the first birds could be released in the Los Padres National Forest next year.

New York Mayor David Dinkins, left, and former California Gov. Jerry Brown meet Saturday morning at the Democratic National Committee meeting in Indianapolis. Despite controversy over supposedly anti-Semitic campaign tactics by Illinois' U.S. Representative Gus Savage, the party agreed to a proposal to cut Social Security payroll taxes.

Democrats ready for '92

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Democratic Party on Saturday endorsed a proposal by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan to cut Social Security payroll taxes as party leaders grope for ways to steal popularity from President Bush.

In a session marred by a controversy over supposedly racist and anti-Semitic campaign tactics by Rep. Gus Savage, D-Ill., Democrats also agreed on rules and schedules for the 1992 presidential campaign season.

A resolution at the spring meeting of the Democratic National Committee urged Congress to support the proposal forwarded several weeks ago by Moynihan, D-N.Y. The resolution is nonbinding, and Democratic leaders in Congress have opposed such a cut as irresponsible when Congress is trying to cut the deficit.

Adopting a more aggressive pose toward the Republican administration, Democratic Party chairman Ronald H. Brown dubbed the GOP the party of "debt and taxes."

Brown expressed relief over "getting the rules process behind us" with what he called "the most peaceful accord" in the past 20 years.

But the chairman's pleasure at getting the rules debate out of the way and getting the party on record in support of the Moynihan proposal, was tempered by the controversy involving Savage. Savage was accused of verbally attacking whites and Jews during his recent primary campaign.

"We abhor and oppose racism and anti-Semitism in any form," Brown told a news conference.

Lawsuits draw attention to risks of quick weight-loss

MIAMI (AP) — As word of lawsuits against Nutri-System Inc. spreads, the telephones at a law firm here handling the case are getting a workout.

Hundreds of calls have been logged from dieters complaining of gallbladder problems or seeking information after shedding pounds under the Nutri-System regime of specialty pre-packaged foods.

"This phone stays on my ear constantly," said attorney Robert Fiore, who is representing some of the 19 women who filed separate suits last week. "We've received calls from all over the United States and Canada. We're just trying to deal with the influx now."

The company defends its program as safe and says the gallbladder problems are coincidental.

Although Fiore said he was unprepared for the response, some experts in diet and nutrition say they've spent years studying the perils of obesity and rapid weight loss, both of which can affect the gallbladder and blood pressure.

But they say the popular Nutri-System program should not be singled out. It can provide several hundred more calories a day above some liquid diets, the focus of several studies on gallbladder problems.

"As a nation we are grossly overweight and that is a problem in itself," said Miami dietitian Joyce Julien. "But often these extremely low-calorie diets can lead to an increase in gallstones and hypertension. I think these suits are just the tip of the iceberg."

Presently, there are no direct federal regulations on the $5 billion a year commercial diet industry. On Monday, however, a congressional committee will hold the first of a series of hearings on those promising a quick path to slim bodies.

Among those scheduled to testify before the Committee on Small Business are Federal Trade Commission Chairman Janet Steiger, several physicians and former followers of extremely low-calorie diets — some under 1,000 calories a day.

"It's a wide-open field right now," said D. Ann Murphy, a staff member of the U.S. House Subcommittee on Regulation, Business Opportunities and Energy. "The public is so interested in quick loss that there's tremendous opportunity for abuse."

Nutri-System has nearly 1,600 weight-loss centers in all 50 states, Canada, the United Kingdom and Australia. It offers a 1,000- to 1,500-calorie-a-day meal program and can cost several hundred dollars to enroll, depending on weight-loss goals and special promotions offered.

The Dade Circuit Court suits against Nutri-System claim the company's weight-loss program caused gallstones and led to surgical removal of the organ, which produces and stores bile used in digestion.

The company, one of the nation's most heavily marketed diet programs, said the suits are without merit. It claimed the risk of gallbladder disease among the obese can be reduced by prudent dieting.

"There's been many studies to show that overweight people have a higher incidence of gallbladder problems," said Nutri-System spokesman James Kemper Millard at the company's Willow Grove, Pa., headquarters. "We just want the facts out. We don't want this to be another 'Martians have landed' story."

The company is privately held and does not release financial reports.

Millard said Nutri-Systems encourages about a two-pound-a-week weight loss.

The American Medical Association does not set a standard or limit for weight reduction. The 60,000-member American Dietetic Association recommends rapid weight-loss programs only for those more than 30 percent overweight.

"The consensus is that there appears to be a link between rapid weight loss and gallbladder problems, but it dosen't necessarily have to be a diet by a company. It could be something the person goes on themselves," said Dr. Georgia Andrianopoulos, an assistant professor at the University of Illinois' Obesity Treatment Center.

Nancy Wellman, president of the American Dietetic Association, said some of the reported gallbladder problems could be from people who cut back on established diets, such as Nutri-System.

"We are a country where most problems can be solved in a half-hour TV show," said Wellman. "Too many people opt for the quick solution to lose weight without worrying about the consequences."

Capping cost of health care isn't imminent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Problems plaguing the nation's health care system are bringing Democrats and Republicans, physicians and consumer advocates together on at least one point: Change is needed.

But what those changes should be could keep them arguing for a long time to come.

Meanwhile, America's health care bill keeps mounting. This year, medical expenditures are expected to exceed $600 billion — nearly 12 percent of the nation's gross national product — while as many as 37 million people go without any sort of medical insurance coverage.

"We're on an unsustainable path," said Jack Meyer, a Washington health policy consultant.

But he and other analysts say that with many in Congress averse to new spending and lawmakers still stinging from last year's repeal of the Medicare insurance program for catastrophic illness, major changes in the health system are not imminent.

Businesses, hit by rising health-care premiums, are passing along more of the costs to their workers and pulling back some of the benefits. Health care benefits have been the central issue in a growing number of labor strikes.

"The average American worker ... is unaware of the magnitude of the cost" of health-care benefits, said William Ferguson, chairman of the board of Nynex Corp., where workers last year staged a four-month strike in which health coverage was a main issue.

"But they are starting to wake up. Workers are beginning to understand that rising health costs are putting a dent in their pay raises," he said at a recent gathering of health care providers.

Earlier this month, the bipartisan Pepper Commission, which included leaders of tax and health-care committees in Congress, completed a year-long study with a proposal to provide health-care coverage and long-term care for all Americans.

However, the heath-care part of the plan was approved by only a one-vote margin and the package was immediately criticized because it did not recommend a way to pay the estimated $66 billion federal pricetag.

Many of the various players in the existing health care system — including insurance companies, physicians, unions and corporations — have come up with their own proposals.

And new groups and coalitions are still forming around the issue. Just this month, 35 major corporations, unions, consumer groups and other private organizations formed the National Leadership Coalition for Health Care Reform. It's the first attempt by big business and labor to join in drafting a plan.

Of the proposals that have been put forth so far, only a few advocate a government-run health system or go to the other extreme with a purely private approach. Most fall into a middle ground that, like the Pepper Commission, calls for a public-private sharing of the burden.

Most of the plans would build on the existing system of employer-provided health insurance — 85 percent of Americans are covered in this way now — with various incentives or mandates for business to include more workers in these programs. Some would create risk pools to make affordable policies available to those who because of chronic disease couldn't otherwise afford insurance. And the government would have responsibility for taking care of the rest.

Gephardt critics come from both sides of aisle

By Finlay Lewis
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Two years after his presidential campaign foundered, Rep. Richard Gephardt has developed a new political message that has set political teeth on edge, both among Republican adversaries and at least some fellow Democrats.

But by stepping boldly back into the national spotlight, the 49-year-old House majority leader may have succeeded in filling a niche as one of his party's principal partisan point men.

Gephardt

At a time when President Bush's high popularity ratings appear to have discouraged many Democrats, Gephardt's willingness to aim high has produced partisan results.

Despite his choir-boy looks and Eagle Scout background, the Missouri Democrat appears to grate on President Bush's nerves and the White House's Republican allies have cried foul.

Two weeks ago ,Gephardt, in a well publicized speech, accused Bush of forfeiting leadership by trimming his sails to the breezes of public opinion as measured by White House pollsters.

Claiming that the administration should seek to shape events in Eastern Europe, Gephardt also stirred considerable controversy with a proposal to help subsidize the success of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev though food aid and other means.

The proposal spawned bipartisan criticism, as Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., described the idea as ill-conceived, or at least premature.

Sen. Alan Simpson of Wyoming, the GOP whip, sneered at Gephardt as a sore loser from the 1988 presidential campaign, describing him as a "frustrated font of trivia."

Other, more neutral observers were puzzled by Gephardt's attempt to use the issue of foreign aid as a weapon for attacking Bush.

"Foreign aid is not popular with the American public," said Claibourne Darden, a pollster who specializes in sampling public opinion in the South. "And he wants to give it to East Germany and Romania? Voters down here have been taught to hate those folks.

"Gephardt may be a leader, but when you get out that far in front of the crowd, chances are, you're out of step," Darden said.

However, House Democrats — a key part of Gephardt's support base — were gleeful over the vehement Republican counterattack.

"He really hit a raw nerve," declared Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M. "It showed their sensitivity to the caricature of Bush as being timid and lacking in leadership. They are really afraid that the public is going to catch on that this is a presidency by, of and for the polls."

With critics faulting the Democratic Party for having lost its voice as the loyal opposition, Gephardt's willingness to call Bush to account has clearly raised his stature among many Democrats here and elsewhere. His boldness seems to stand out even more dramatically in contrast with the cautious and instinctively conciliatory approach of other Democratic congressional leaders, particularly House Speaker Thomas Foley and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine.

At the same time, however, several Democrats said they found it ironic that Gephardt would criticize Bush for a lack of leadership when Gephardt has so far failed to produce results as chairman of a high-level Democratic task force charged with finding an alternative to Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan's plan to cut Social Security payroll taxes.

William Galston, a political scientist at the University of Maryland and a senior Democratic Party strategist, described Gephardt's speech as "beside the point politically.

"The American people don't think Bush is going too slow in Eastern Europe," Galston said. "They do think he has some distance to go in areas like education, the environment, crime ... It would have been more appropriate politically to lead with a critique of the Bush domestic agenda which is his weak point rather than a critique of his foreign policy agenda which is his strong point."

Moreover, Gephardt remains tainted in the eyes of some political observers for a career that embraces several notable flip-flops such as abandoning, during his presidential campaign, a long-held opposition to abortion. The shifts generally coincided with his progress up the House leadership ladder and the evolution of his presidential ambitions.

About a decade ago, for example, Gephardt supported a plan to reduce capital gains taxes; last fall he spearheaded the congressional opposition to an administration measure that would have lowered the levy on the sale of assets. Even before Communism's collapse in much of Eastern Europe last fall, Gephardt had become increasingly critical of the Pentagon budget, as he moved to embrace positions closer to the Democratic mainstream.

"There is a shamelessness to his changing positions that is truly breathtaking," asserted John Buckley, a Republican strategist.

Gephardt's proposal for providing food aid and other assistance to the Soviet Union was immediately targeted by Democrats as well as Republicans.

Bradley, who, like Gephardt, is regarded as a potential Democratic presidential candidate, asserted that any economic aid would disappear "down a rat hole" unless preceded by a sweeping transformation of the Soviet economy.

Al LaPierre, executive director of the Alabama Democratic Party, described the Soviet-aid plan as "not something I would hang my hat on politically.

"The feeling among (Alabama) voters is that the Soviets made their own bed and maybe we should let them try to sleep in it," LaPierre said. "I don't think that dog (Gephardt's plan) is going to hunt."

Bush, himself, responded at a press conference on March 13 to Gephardt's criticisms of his leadership style with sarcasm, saying in a patronizing tone that he found the gibes "discouraging."

As for the proposal to send food to the Soviet Union, Bush said, "I don't think that's a particularly brilliant idea. But I don't want to knock the man. Maybe he'll come upon a good idea one of these days."

Gephardt's supporters see the Missourian's willingness to confront Bush and to take chances on issues as a sign of his political maturation.

"The one thing it takes to be a leader is you have to be willing to take risks, and Dick is," said Gene Godley, a Washington lawyer and longtime Gephardt friend and adviser. "A lot of other Democratic leaders right now are not willing to take that risk."

"Gephardt's criticisms of Bush have obviously stung Bush. I don't think his portrait of Bush's style of leadership is regarded as terrifically off the mark by a lot of people," said Kevin Phillips, a Republican strategist. Suggesting that Bush's counterattack reflected an awareness of a possible vulnerability, Phillips added, "He's attacking Gephardt too much. It draws attention to Gephardt, and it reinforces him with Democrats."

"He has certainly taken the initiative, and a lot of Democrats are pleased," said John White, a former national chairman of the Democratic Party.

"Gephardt really got under Bush's skin, didn't he?" chortled Rep. Steny Hoyer of Maryland, chairman of the House Democratic Caucus. "That can only help Gephardt within the party. He's a leader."

Rep. Tim Penny, a Democrat who represents a conservative rural Minnesota district, said that hostility to foreign aid among his constituents is so intense that "it's off the charts."

But, Penny added, "What they do respond to is leadership."

Placing economic assistance in the context of a strategy to stabilize the emerging democracies of Eastern Europe, Penny argued, will have appeal to many voters anxious to reduce military spending and to reap the benefits of a "peace dividend."

Gephardt's outspokenness also will pay him political dividend, Penny contended.

"By standing up to Bush, Gephardt stands out," Penny said.

A career record?

Keith Ward, the veteran voice of Midland's traditional country-music radio station, KJBC-AM, is rounding out 40 years at the old station.

Ward still spinning country songs on local radio station

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Country music is no longer backwoods.
It's uptown but still rural.
Folksy. Earthy. Common as man and woman.
Country music takes in a lot of life.

It's "them old tear-jerking, beer-drinking songs," said Keith Ward, a veteran radio disc jockey who plays "traditional country music" over Midland's steadfast country-music radio station, KJBC-AM.

"And of lot of them are about hard times, broken love affairs, drinking and slipping around," said Ward, who has been the mainstay voice of the country-music station for almost 40 years. "There's a lot of happy things in there, too."

Ward spins records from the way-back-when days of the legendary Hank Williams and his honky-tonk music to the contemporary days of George Strait, who has been a renewal force in country music's aging audiences.

With his style, which combines Western swing with honky-tonk, Strait is attracting younger audiences to country music.

"He's a clean-cut, cowboy type — starched shirt, Western hat. True blue," said Ward, who is KJBC's program director. The "young folks" dance to Strait.

Ward, who sort of "stumbled" into radio broadcasting and got the "radio bug" by emceeing gospel singing and preaching programs in Sweetwater in 1946 when he was a college student at Abilene, is a clean-cut sort himself.

Ward, 62, mingles his music-history expertise with down-home wit and humor and generous touches of the country life.

Ward, who did most of his growing up in Midland, got his start in the Midland-Odessa market by broadcasting as Bill Ward over Odessa's KRIG in 1947 and Midland's KCRS in 1948, 1949 and 1950 before he moved on over to KJBC.

In those days, KRIG offered block programming in playing a variety of programming: country 'n' Western music and big-band sounds.

"If you were the only station in town, you had to please everybody," Ward recalled.

In Midland, KCRS, which then was "the only station in town," tried to please everybody with a little of this and a little of that — soap operas, a little pop, big-band music, a little classical music, a little country around noon-time.

"So, you played a little bit of everything."

Ward switched to KJBC in 1950 after radio engineer Jack Cecil built the station out on pasture land south of Midland. The station's first "voice" was that of Bill "Uncle Bill" Joyce, who launched a "local gossip program called 'Hi, Neighbor.'"

Though KJBC adopted a country-music format and at first played some big-band music, Cecil's personal preference was for classical music.

"Jack Cecil was not a big fan of country music," Ward reflected. "He sort of played it because it did well. And he rather liked classical music, to tell you the truth, but country music is what paid for KJBC in those early years."

In those days, country music, which already had been anchored through Jimmie Rodgers' "hillbilly" music, gained more impetus through the likes of Lefty Frizzell with his "If You've Got the Money, I've Got the Time," and Hank Williams with his "Lovesick Blues," "Hey Good Lookin'" and "Your Cheatin' Heart."

By 1954, a newcomer, Elvis Presley, "was beginning to make a few noises around the area" with his rhythm-and-blues-influenced rock 'n' roll music.

"When Elvis Presley came along, country music, so-called, almost took a nose dive," Ward said. "Everybody went this rock route."

In the 1950s, when the Spraberry Field oil boom was prospering the Midland-Odessa area economy, Ward was recording shows at Hadacol Corner, now, Midkiff, southeast of Midland. In the mid-1950s, when "television came to our area" by way of KMID-TV, Ward presented the 10 o'clock nightly news and announced country 'n' Western bands.

Razing theater stirs dispute

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

A public outcry concerning an old building being torn down is not unusual in Midland. However, area residents are voicing concern over the way demolition of the former Westwood Cinema, 4310 Andrews Hwy. — which contained asbestos — and resulting debris have been handled.

The Texas Air Control Board (TACB) has cited Dave Leonard Construction of Midland and Williams Paving & Excavation Inc. of Odessa with failure to notify the TACB 20 days prior to the event that the Westwood was going to be demolished.

Dave Leonard Construction — who was awarded the contract to build a 9,000-sq. ft. orthopedic office for Dr. Donald W. Floyd — subcontracted Williams Paving & Excavation to demolish the theater. Demolition began March 12 and was stopped March 13 briefly to allow an investigator from the TACB to take samples of building materials suspected of containing asbestos.

Asbestos, a type of insulation which does not burn easily or conduct heat or electricity, was commonly used in buildings built prior to 1975 when the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) banned the use of asbestos in any newly erected public buildings. (The Westwood was built in 1969.)

The EPA regulations resulted from studies which linked asbestos exposure with cancer and asbestosis, a disease that blocks the lungs with thick fibrous tissue. It was primarily detected in persons with long-term exposure, who lived near or worked in asbestos mines or manufacturing facilities.

The TACB, acting on a tip from a Midland citizen, took samples from various building materials in the Westwood and sent them to the TACB Laboratory in Austin, according to Charley Sims, regional director for the TACB. Sims said he should be notified of the results next week since examining the material usually takes 10-14 days.

Sims said the TACB also was notified that Veltmann Environmental, consultants hired to detect asbestos, were called in by Dave Leonard Construction. "They found 20 linear feet of asbestos insulation in pipe and 100 sq. ft. of asbestos in mastic under floor tile," Sims said. Dave Leonard Construction then called in Associated Asbestos Abatement and Insulation — an organization licensed to handle asbestos by the Texas State Department of health.

According to Sims, the organization expertly handled the asbestos, contained it and deposited it properly in a landfill in Monahans, in accordance with regulations.

"There was a small amount of asbestos handled by them and they handled it as if it were a significant amount," Sims said.

Although a minor amount of asbestos was found and disposed of properly — according to experts — before demolition proceeded, the resulting debris which was hauled to the property of Dale K. Rittenhouse Jr., 3710 S.C.R. 1195, has caused his neighbors concern.

Rittenhouse, who declined to be quoted, obtained the building materials to build a church, according to Robert Williams of Williams Paving & Excavation. Williams said Rittenhouse and a pastor approached him about having the Westwood debris delivered to Rittenhouse's property, which is outside the city limits.

"I could just as easily have taken the material to a dump," Williams said, "but I know how difficult it is for a church to obtain funds and building materials. I didn't want to take the

Officials won't open files on Williams hunting case

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal authorities have moved to keep secret investigative records of the successful battle Texas Republican gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams waged with a government agency that claimed he killed an endangered species of sheep in 1988.

Adam O'Hara, an agent for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, said last week the agency would deny the Houston Chronicle's request for documents under the Freedom of Information Act because an investigation is pending.

The denial came days after the agency agreed to release the files as soon as they were "sanitized" of names and sensitive information.

It was unclear whether the decision to grant access to the documents was reversed because the investigation was reopened or whether the probe had never been closed.

Fish and Wildlife Service sources told the Chronicle's Washington bureau they believed it was coincidental that assistants to William T. McGivern Jr., who was sworn in as U.S. attorney in San Francisco on March 16, moved to keep the documents from public view just days after Williams won his nomination.

Williams' campaign press secretary, Bill Kenyon, refused a request to interview the candidate about the controversy.

Williams contended the sheep were not an endangered species and waged a 19-month battle to get the Fish and Wildlife Service to return the pelts and horns that were confiscated when he passed through customs at San Francisco.

The chain of events began when Williams,

Judicial reform may await new session

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Judicial reform will have to wait for the next session, say lawmakers who have focused their attentions on bills to overhaul state aid for public schools.

The monthlong special session ends at midnight Wednesday, but the House Judicial Affairs Committee heard proposals on judicial reform for the first time this past Wednesday and the Senate State Affairs Committee, which had reviewed judicial selection bills, put off action until Monday at the earliest.

Leaders of the governor's task force on judicial selection do not expect to report their recommendations until the first week of the next special session.

The three groups are examining four basic approaches to increasing the number of minority judges, with few signs of compromise.

They hope to avoid a federal court threat to set aside the recent judicial primary election results in nine urban counties, including Midland and Ector counties, and order non-partisan special elections of district judges by single-member districts in November to bring the state in line with the Voting Rights Act.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton of Midland in November 1989 ruled countywide election of district judges in Bexar, Dallas, Ector, Harris, Jefferson, Lubbock, Midland, Tarrant and Travis counties dilutes minority voting strength and violates the Voting Rights Act.

The 5th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals in New Orleans set aside Bunton's January order requiring single-member districts this year, although the appeals panel threatened to reinstate the order if the Legislature fails to act. The court will hear arguments in the state's appeal April 30 in New Orleans.

Black and Hispanic lawmakers and the Democratic Party support partisan election of judges from single-member subdistricts in the nine counties. They point out that 81.3 percent of Democratic primary voters supported continued election of judges in a referendum on the March 13 ballot, and they say the state should change the system regardless of what the federal court orders.

Single-member districts not only would make possible election of black and Hispanic judges. They also would allow election of Democratic judges in urban counties where Republicans have come to dominate at-large votes, including Dallas, Harris, Lubbock, Midland and Tarrant counties.

A Republican-sponsored constitutional amendment would have the governor appoint judges from single-member districts, with later countywide retention elections.

A similar proposition would select judges for the Texas Supreme Court and the Court of Criminal Appeals from nine districts.

Rep. Patricia Hill, D-Dallas, sees some chance for change in the appellate courts, but the fight will be whether those judges would be elected or appointed.

Like many incumbent judges and Republican lawmakers, she would prefer to wait until the federal appeals court decides what must be done before proceeding.

Publicity surrounding 1990 Census cranking up

Top posters will count for prizes, colorful census reminder at mall

Staff Report

Seventy-one Midland fourth, fifth and sixth graders participated in a city-sponsored poster contest to draw attention to the upcoming national census.

NCNB Texas, Mobil Oil Co. and Jumburrito contributed $100 U.S. Savings Bonds to each of the grade winners.

The top colorers were: fourth graders Annie Parchman of Lamar, first; Luke Hardaway of Burnet, second; Marisa Beck of Parker, third and Brian Lasley of Henderson and Tamika Thurman, Rebecca Anderson, Ashley Greenwood and Andrea Vasquez, all of Jones, honorable mention.

Fifth grade winners were: Andy Hancock, Santa Rita, first; Laura Lucas, Fannin, second; Jesus Brito, Rusk, third; and Amanda Mason, Fannin, honorable mention.

Sixth grade winners were: Cynthia Reyes, DeZavala, first; Josiah Fontenot, Travis, second; Kasey Wolters, Crockett, third and Chance Flowers of Crockett and John David Garcia of DeZavala, honorable mention.

The winners' works will be on display at Midland Park Mall through Census Day, April 1.

Rick Menchaca, public relations/economic development coordinator for the City of Midland, is hopeful that recent publicity will help boost the local "Census 90" count.

Next six days may prove critical in efforts to get forms returned

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Word of the 1990 census, which officially starts next Sunday, has been lofted into the sky on balloons, plastered on billboards and fliers, and advertised extensively through the media.

With the U.S. Census Bureau questionnaires mailed out Friday, the homeless counted and a bulk of the enumerators hired, the work is just beginning, said Randell Warren, district manager for the bureau's Lubbock offices.

The next six days are critical for the count, with city, school and civic organization authorities pushing hard to make sure people understand the census' importance, Warren said.

Although the official Census Day is Sunday, bureau officials will have a head start by then, he said.

A count of military personnel will begin this week, he said. Leaders from each branch of the armed services will report the numbers within their ranks.

Census counters, 15 in Midland County, hit the streets last Tuesday to count the number of homeless dwelling in shelters, parks and abandoned houses.

"I think overall it was very effective," Warren said of the homeless count. "As far as we can tell, it was a complete success.

Please see CENSUS/2B

CENSUS: Strong local participation encouraged

(From 1B)

"There are people, of course, who will not want to talk to us and hide."

The questionnaires — which primarily ask how many live in the dwelling and the family's ethnic background — should start hitting mailboxes this week, Warren said. He urged people to try to return them on or before Sunday.

About 305,000 questionnaires were mailed out to a 14-county area, including Midland and Ector counties, covered by the bureau's Lubbock offices, Warren said.

"We expect to get a 70 to 80 percent return rate on those in the next two weeks," he said.

Enumerators will be sent to the homes of those who fail to return their forms by mid- to late April. Warren estimated it would cost the federal government $25 for each enumerator visit.

"If we have to go back and count 20 to 30 percent, it's going to cost an extra $2 million to $3 million of taxpayer money that could be saved if people mail the questionnaires back," he said.

High participation also is important because census statistics help determine state and federal legislative districts as well as federal funding of local programs, he said.

However, not all residents are being asked to mail back their questionnaires, Warren stressed.

The forms sent to most city and some rural residents will be accompanied by an addressed, postage-paid envelope to enclose the questionnaire.

A number of rural residents, though, will not get a postage-paid envelope, he said. Instead, an enumerator will be sent to their homes in late April to pick up the questionnaires.

Those residents will not receive the postage-paid envelops because a number of them do not have home mailing addresses, Warren said.

All residents in Midland, Ector and Lubbock counties will receive the postage-paid envelopes, as will citizens in the cities of Levelland, Brownfield, Seminole, Lamesa and Andrews, he said. Everyone else in the region will have to wait for an enumerator to pick up the questionnaire.

"Call us if we haven't picked it up by late April or if you never received your questionnaire," he said. The number is 1-800-999-1990.

He emphasized that census information is confidential. Not even the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, Internal Revenue Service, welfare agencies, the military or FBI can touch census records for 72 years, he said.

Warren expressed concern that some may use a pen instead of a pencil to fill out the questionnaire. Only a form filled out with a pencil will register in census computers, he said.

"All of these in ink will have to be redone," he added.

The bureau still needs people to work as enumerators, he said. Midland, Ector and Lubbock counties will need about 400 enumerators, with about 100 for each of those counties.

"We always need more," Warren said. "We will be recruiting and hiring until the census is almost over with."

Bureau officials in the coming weeks will be taking applications and administrating a written test which evaluates math, reading and organizational skills, Warren said.

"We're a little short (on enumerators) in Martin County and real short in Andrews," he said. "We've got most of the people we need in Midland and Ector counties if they stay with us."

To qualify to be an enumerator, a person must be at least 18 years old or 16 with a high school diploma. The job candidate must show a driver's license or Social Security card.

Rick Menchaca, city of Midland coordinator of economic development and community relations, said the city is working hard to gear up for the census locally.

"We're doing more than other cities," Menchaca said. "We're doing more because we realize it's critical for federal funds. In addition, West Texas might receive another representative in Congress."

For example, census figures help determine how much the city receives in Community Development Block Grant funds, used to upgrade declining neighborhoods, from federal authorities, he said.

"We have to stay with these census figures for 10 years," Menchaca said. "An undercount can cost you."

On Thursday, Casa De Amigos, in conjunction with the city, held a training workshop for 17 volunteers who will help promote the census.

This week will see a number of activities to help the elderly, non-English speaking people and other citizens understand how to complete the census forms.

Census officials will be at Dellwood Senior Citizens Center, Casa De Amigos and the Southeast Senior Citizens Center Monday through Friday to instruct people on how to fill out the questionnaires.

A similar help session will be held from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday at Casa De Amigos, 1101 E. Garden Lane. A free lunch will be held there from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

In addition to other forms of advertisements, census awareness fliers have been included in water and cable bills as well as Midland city, county and school district paychecks, Menchaca said.

Even Midland Independent School District students have hopped on the census bandwagon.

MISD spokesman Ted Miller said the district's elementary and junior high schools have been holding balloon launches, poster coloring contests and other activities in conjunction with the census.

The census also has been taught in all grades at the elementary level and in social studies classes at the secondary level, Miller said.

"The school district has been cooperating closely with the city to get the word to people of the importance of participation," he said.

Children will carry the word of the census home to their parents, some of whom do not speak English, he said.

"In some of our schools, students are actually households themselves," Miller said. "It's important to catch that population."

THEATER: Asbestos handling queried

bricks to a dump when they are usable to somebody."

Williams who has been in the demolition business for 11 years, said it is not uncommon for members of nonprofit organizations to request demolition materials. He said persons from other churches have come to the Westwood site to request bricks.

Williams said Rittenhouse planned to salvage what brick he could, then sell the metal and remaining debris for scrap to raise funds for the church.

Rittenhouse's expanse of property has caused concern among his neighbors who suspected the materials might contain asbestos. One of those neighbors, Bud Wakefield, 1515 WCR 121, whose house faces Rittenhouse's property, said "I have just as much right to oppose it (the material being dumped) as Rittenhouse has to have it there."

Wakefield, who is preparing to put his house on the market, said he was also concerned about his property being devalued because of the nearby debris.

County commissioner Luisa Valenica said she had received several calls from concerned county residents about the possible presence of asbestos in the debris. She said there are "no restrictions whatsoever" regarding what can be put on one's property in the county "unless it poses a health hazard."

Although there may not be county ordinances regarding private property, Michael Edmiston, engineer in solid waste management for the Texas State Department of Health, Region III, said there are state regulations regarding dumping.

According to Edmiston, inert materials may be used for land recovery and the remainder must be disposed of properly.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Neighbors have expressed concerned about the debris that has resulted from the demolition of the old Westwood Theater. Some suspect problems associated with asbestos.

Although several county residents had voiced concern over the possible contamination of water wells, Sims, the TACB regional director, said asbestos — if it existed — was particulate matter and it would take highly unusual circumstances for it to contaminate a well.

"Asbestos is not water soluble," Edmiston said. "Even if it were injected into a well, the asbestos would be filtered out by the strata itself."

The presence of asbestos in the Westwood debris is unlikely, according to the experts. According to Sims, "adequate precautions were taken to remove the asbestos" from the Westwood before demolition was completed.

Williams, who was subcontracted to do the demolition, said he was surprised by the TACB's arrival on the Westwood cite March 13. "The city had already issued a permit for demolition," he said. "I thought the building had been inspected."

Williams, who said he had not been aware of the TACB's policy of being notified 20 days prior to a demolition, said the city needed better guidelines before issuing permits to demolish.

"This could have been disastrous if demolition had continued with asbestos in the building," Williams said. "Someone would have been hung up to dry."

WARD: Long-time announcer found his niche including Roy Orbison and the Wink Westerners and the Armstrong twins, on the station's Saturday afternoon show.

Ward was announcer for the Big Spring Jamboree on Saturday nights in the mid-1950s. Entertainers there included Jeannie C. Riley, George Jones, Red Hayes, Bozo Darnell, and "local talent."

In 1955, Ward made his bid into booking shows. He brought in Hank Snow, the "Singing Ranger," and the stand-up comic, the Duke of Paducah. The extra-added attraction was Elvis Presley with Scotty Moore and Bill Black. The Presley trio made $350.

"And I made $600 and thought I was rich," Ward said. In another booking, he lost $600 and bailed out of promotions.

After Cecil's death in 1962, KJBC-AM was operated by Cecil's godson, Ronald Pope, who in 1964 sold the station to Hugh and LaVerne McBeath. McBeath died in 1987, and his widow today operates the station, which continues with its successful country-music format.

"Everybody (in competitive radio) is seeking a format," Ward said. "You've got to get your little niche in your little group of listeners and try to please them — if possible. You can't anymore try to please them all."

The popularity country music is tied to story-telling, Ward suggested.

"I think mostly it tells a story. You've got to listen to the lyrics."

On some other non-country popular music, "You hear a big drum beat, and you can't understand the lyrics to a lot of this rock stuff," Ward said. "I can't. Maybe the kids can."

KJBC disc jockey Charley Meek, too, is a country-music fan who said that "A good song is a good song forever.

"Just because it's little bit old doesn't mean it's going to be out of date," Meek said.

Enduring, for example, are "San Antonio Rose" and "Faded Love" performed by Bob Wills, the "King of Western Swing," and his Texas Playboys.

"Hank Williams, of course, was a high-water mark" in country music, Meek said.

"Popular at the same time was Lefty Frizzell. Frizzell was similar to Hank Williams in that he was primarily a honky-tonk-type singer," Meek said.

"And the years have shown him to be extremely influential on this generation of singers — everybody from Merle Haggard on up to (country-music traditionalist) Randy Travis." Honky-tonk is "straight beer drinking, two-stepping country music," Meek said.

Good country music has an "earthiness and an authenticity" to it.

And "even the highly-polished" Eddy Arnold-type singers, who work with string orchestras, have those country qualities, Meek said. "It's not really dirty-fingernail country music. Still, the country flavor is there. You can tell they've been there. They've lived it."

FILES: China hunt investigated

his wife, and two friends paid $25,000 each to become the first big-game hunters to participate in an argali sheep hunt in China in April 1988.

The non-hunters in the party were two trip organizers and researcher Richard Mitchell, a Fish and Wildlife zoologist then on loan to the Smithsonian Institution.

A month after the case against Williams was settled, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service announced that it considered the argali sheep to be protected by the endangered species treaty.

According to various court records and participants, the case was complicated by a division in scientific opinion.

Mitchell's on-site finding that the dead sheep were of a subspecies different from the endangered argali was supported by the Chinese government and Robert Hoffman, the Smithsonian's assistant secretary of science and Mitchell's acting supervisor, according to court records.

But Fish and Wildlife agents apparently doubted Mitchell's findings and took the hides to four internationally known experts. The experts confirmed they were the endangered species but differed on whether a subspecies even existed.

Texas Press Women will convene in Midland

Staff Report

News media from across the state will converge on Midland this weekend for the Texas Press Women's state convention.

Highlights for the weekend include recognizing one of the organization's members as Communicator of Achievement; announcing communication award recipients, including the Sweepstakes Winner; and workshops featuring speakers recognized for their work.

Headquarters for the convention will be the Midland Hilton. Hosting the event will be members of District 2, Texas Press Women.

It opens Friday with Finance and Executive Committee meetings. TPW members not involved with the meetings have a choice of two tours: one will visit the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, the other will travel to Theatre Midland and the Haley Library.

Communicator of Achievement will be announced that evening during a reception and banquet that starts at 7 p.m. The speaker will be Donna Hunt of Denison, recipient of the 1989 National Communicator of Achievement Award.

The organization's business meeting will start at 8:30 a.m. Saturday. The noon luncheon will honor high school and college writing and scholarship winners. Guest speaker will be Marj Carpenter, vice president of the National Federation of Press Women and formerly associated with the Big Spring Herald. She is the national news director with the Presbyterian Church-USA.

The Merlin Memorial Workshop begins at 1:30 p.m. and is open to the public. Featured speaker will be Paula LaRocque, assistant managing editor and writing coach of the Dallas Morning News. She is a nationally recognized authority on effective writing and communications techniques.

Beginning at 3 p.m., two concurrent workshops will be held, with topics ranging from writing romance novels to covering international news events.

Parris Afton Bonds, an award-winning romance. The Southwestern Writers Workshop of Albuquerque recently established the Parris Award in her honor.

Covering the rescue of Jessica McClure will be the topic of a panel discussion by area reporters who were involved in that international news event. Giving their viewpoints will be Midland Police Department Public Relations Director Jim White, former KCRS-Radio reporter Lisa Barker, KMID-TV reporter Gayle Hill, Reporter-Telegram special projects writer Chris Van Wagenen and Reporter-Telegram chief photographer Curtis Wilcott.

Winners of the annual Communications Contest and the Sweepstakes Winner will be announced Saturday at a 6:30 p.m. banquet.

The convention will conclude Sunday with a Memorial Breakfast at 8:30 a.m. that includes installation of new officers. Guest speaker will be Johnnie Lou Avery, president of Avery and Associates of Big Spring.

District 2 of Texas Press Women includes Midland, Odessa, Big Spring and San Angelo. Members involved in the convention include President Mary Frances Beverley, Carolyn Thompson, Ellen Hopkins, June Hunt, Enid Davis, Coco Nall and Lana Cunningham.

Suspected leader of restaurant robbers mistakenly freed from jail

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The leader of a group of alleged restaurant robbers was mistakenly freed from the Bexar County Jail last year.

Darrell Leon Williams, 23, was freed nine days after receiving a 15-year prison sentence for armed robbery last September. The judge who sentenced Williams attributes his release to confusion over a parole order for a previous crime.

Authorities investigating a string of 25 holdups that occurred in San Antonio, Houston and Waco since mid-January were dismayed to learn that Williams has been on the streets for the past six months.

Seven San Antonio men have been arrested in connection with the robberies, which have been dubbed the "Cooler Gang" heists. At least three of the men were classmates at Roosevelt High School.

San Antonio Detective Richard Rigsby said the robbery ring operates in teams of three, striking mainly at closing time at eateries near expressways to allow for quick getaways. Employees and patrons are forced into coolers after being robbed.

"I think it's pretty safe to assume that somebody at the courthouse dropped the ball," said San Antonio police robbery Sgt. George Ramirez.

Robbery Lt. Jesse Porter, who heads the San Antonio investigation, said he asked the FBI to join the case Friday after learning Williams may have fled the state, possibly to New Orleans.

Bexar County Sheriff Harlon Copeland acknowledged a prisoner was mistakenly released from the jail, but declined to say whether it was Williams.

Copeland told the San Antonio Light he would look into the matter Monday but declined to say whether he will call for an investigation.

"There's probably nothing to investigate," Copeland said. "I'll check with (Tom) Barry who is the head of the detention center and find out why (the inmate was released). All I have to do is look at the paper work."

The judge who sentenced Williams to prison last September said he is upset over the mistaken release.

"It's just one of those things where everyone needed to look at everything, and it didn't happen," said state District Judge Pat Priest. "You could say I'm not pleased."

Arrested Thursday in Houston and San Antonio in connection with the restaurant robberies were: Marcel Johnson, 18; Eugene Chambers III, 19; Joel Williams, 19; Jared Knighton, 19; Elijah Davis, 20; and Bobby Martin, 19. A seventh suspect, who was not named, was arrested March 8 in San Antonio.

ARMED FORCES NEWS

A group of over 40 U.S. Navy Seabees from Midland attached to Reserve Naval Construction Battalion 22 headquartered in Dallas is preparing to perform their two week annual active duty training at Camp Mataguay near San Diego, Calif. They will mobilize with their parent battalion on April 29 simulating a recall to active duty.

The local group will be one of five battalions rotating in to Camp Mataguay from January through June as part of an exercise to test the readiness of Reserve Seabees to deploy and construct needed facilities by renovating a 34 year-old Boy Scout camp. The exercise is called TACON 90.

The Boy Scouts of America will supply about $60,000 worth of material and the Seabees an equivalent of $2,500,000 in labor to construct facilities such as water wells, water supply systems, roadways, dams, staff housing and an entrance gateway. While performing their construction work they will be protecting environmental assets and historical and archaeological sites.

The unit has been preparing for this deployment at their Midland training site by conducting training in military maneuvering and land navigation, and have undergone physical conditioning testing and readiness inspections.

Drug war victims stress real need

The war against drug dealers has always had unholy parallels with the war waged against terrorists. Both involve the forces of civilization battling the forces of anarchy — renegade outlaws motivated by uncontrolled greed or blind ideology. Both prey on the innocent in society.

Both also are deadly. Never has that been easier for the American public to understand than in the past three weeks.

On March 7th, 12-year-old David Aupont of New York was viciously attacked, beaten bloody with a baseball bat, bound, and set afire in an abandoned building after he refused a neighborhood bully's order to take drugs.

Young Aupont is expected to be hospitalized for up to four months recovering from the burns over 55 percent of his body.

Now comes the story of 42-year-old Felipe Martinez who was shot to death at the Houston apartment complex his wife manages when he confronted drug dealers in the parking lot.

According to Houston homicide investigator Rico Garcia, Martinez was tired of the dealers selling drugs at the apartment complex and "told a friend he was going to chase them off."

Martinez confronted the drug dealers and ordered them to leave, but they got out of their vehicles and began beating him. Finally one of the dealers shot Martinez while his sons, ages 13 and 6, were watching.

For all those who believe they are "safe" from the ravages of the drug culture, the message is clear. Neither of these two individuals was looking for trouble when they became victims. Martinez was at his apartment complex when he was killed and Aupont was walking to school with two friends when he was confronted by the bully.

The unavoidable tragedy is that they didn't go looking for trouble with the drug peddlers; the trouble came to them and they became unwilling victims in the "war" because of their courage and determination to fight the drug dealers.

But it takes that courage and commitment to win this war. In fact, it is the only reasonable course through this perilous clash. Every individual must choose to do what he can to counter the advances of the drug barons, just as David Aupont and Felipe Martinez did. Every person must make illegal drugs unacceptable socially and do what is required to see that those responsible are brought to justice.

Until that decision is reached, there will only be more tragedies like those suffered by David Aupont and Felipe Martinez, and the drug dealers will be ruling our streets and cities.

JACK ANDERSON
Islamic revolution short on tolerance

WASHINGTON — An Islamic revolution has no room for religious tolerance. Novelist Salman Rushdie discovered that. He offended Islam, and the Ayatollah Khomeini sentenced him to death. Khomeini knew that if he allowed people like Rushdie to speak their minds, then everybody would follow suit and pretty soon there would be no Islamic revolution.

Anderson

The government of Iran has cut a wide swath of religious oppression to eliminate any threat to Islam. And the group that has taken the brunt of that oppression is the Baha'i faith.

Iran's 300,000 Baha'is are the country's largest religious minority. Their ideology obliges them to obey the law, avoid partisan politics and shun violence. They believe in global harmony and acceptance of all religions. In that tolerance lies the threat.

The government of Iran is convinced the Baha'is are part of an Israeli scheme to undermine Islam. For the last decade, Iran has done its best, or worst, to wipe out the Baha'is.

The situation has improved somewhat since Khomeini's death last year, but the Baha'is are still treated like lepers in Iran. Iran's current president, Hashemi Rafsanjani, wants the Western world to think he's a nice guy, so he quit executing Baha'is. They now have some new "freedoms." Baha'is are allowed to have funerals and bury their dead in cemeteries.

But they still are not allowed places of worship, and they are regarded as common criminals. In February, the Rafsanjani government reduced sentences for many prisoners as a birthday gift on the 11th anniversary of the Islamic revolution. But excluded from the pardon were rapists, drug dealers, spies, armed opposition groups and Baha'is.

We reported earlier on Rafsanjani's effort to clean up Iran's image. Last year, just as the United Nations was about to publish yet another scathing report on human rights abuses in Iran, Rafsanjani invited U.N. representatives to visit his country. It was a first. All the U.N. human rights reports since the revolution had been done in the absence of a close-up look.

The U.N. team was led around by Rafsanjani functionaries, who choreographed the visit to show Iran's best face. The result was a report that downplayed human rights abuses and largely ignored the torture and murder of political dissidents.

But one thing that Iran couldn't whitewash was its treatment of the Baha'i community. Special note was made in the U.N. report that the Baha'is still suffer at the hands of Iran.

The new freedoms magnanimously granted by Rafsanjani focus on basic needs — money and food. In the early 1980s, the Iranian government dismissed more than 10,000 Baha'is from jobs in education and government and denied them retirement pensions. Rafsanjani has now decided to pay the pensions.

Baha'is can now get food rationing cards, which had been denied them. And as of last Nov. 1, shops that had been confiscated from Baha'is were returned to them and their business licenses renewed.

Iran hasn't executed any Baha'is since December 1988, but many Baha'is remain in Iranian jails, sources have told our associate Scott Sleek. Between 1979 and 1988, 197 Baha'is were executed on religious charges.

Baha'i students are not allowed in Iranian universities. They can't get passports or exit permits to travel.

The plight of the Baha'is has aroused the interest of Congress and several human rights groups. Those groups prodded the U.N. to pay special attention to the Baha'is during the visit of the human rights observers.

Things could be worse. Rafsanjani could treat Baha'is the way he treats political dissidents — with torture, dismemberment and execution.

'Cadillac' education necessary for state

The paramount issue in Texas today is education. The polls confirm that, the politicians like to talk about it, and the state Supreme Court has ordered Texas to provide its students with equal access to a well-funded education.

The education issue has been on the lips of every gubernatorial candidate for months, but all of their talk has not been matched by ideas on how Texas will raise the additional revenues needed to improve public education. None of the three remaining gubernatorial candidates has offered anything substantive on this issue.

Southern states have been in the forefront of education reform. These states have largely used various methods of tax increases to generate new revenues to fund better schools.

(Gov. Ray) Mabus' critics in Mississippi accuse him of wanting a "Cadillac program with a Chevrolet funding mechanism." The same could be said for many Texas politicians who speak of the urgent need to improve education, but then offer no ideas on how to pay for it.

Reforms in the classroom are needed and essential. But first there is the matter of education equity, and the Supreme Court's order that Texas devise a level of funding fairness by May 1.

A "Cadillac program" in this state will not come cheap, but for the sake of school children, including those in many property-poor South Texas districts, establishing such a quality program is crucial.

Poland needed in talks

The best news from the first stages of "two plus four" talks about German reunification — two Germanys plus the four postwar occupying powers — is that Poland will be included when the eastern borders of a unified Germany are discussed.

The Poles need to be there, not only to speak up for their national interest in secure borders with Germany but also to allay international, and especially European, fears about a reunified, muscular Germany's role in European affairs.

In these talks among the chief world and European powers, there should not be any hint of a Munich or an under-the-table deal. To be sure, most details of German reunification should be ironed out among the Germans themselves — but within a framework that is satisfactory to those who suffered at German hands in two world wars and those victors who still have a moral responsibility to see that there is never a third "German" war.

Europe can accommodate a unified Germany if it is satisfied that there will be no future expansionism, no "territorial adjustments" and no future claims to "German lands" long ago lost. Agreement on existing borders, accepted by both Germans and Poles and guaranteed by Germany's postwar occupiers, must be part of the price of German reunification.

Today in history

Today is Sunday, March 25, the 84th day of 1990. There are 281 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Twenty-five years ago, on March 25, 1965, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. led 25,000 marchers to the state capitol in Montgomery, Ala., to protest the denial of voting rights to blacks.

On this date:

In 1865, during the Civil War, Confederate forces captured Fort Stedman in Virginia.

In 1911, more than 140 immigrant workers were killed when fire broke out at the Triangle Shirtwaist Company in New York.

WILLIAM SAFIRE
Use of 'tickety-boo' propelled by NASA

'Enclosed is an article from The Houston Post of Feb. 12," writes Andrew Hero, the kind of specific citator that lexicographers like, "which uses the expression tickety-boo."

Safire

The Associated Press story dealt with a difficulty aboard the Jupiter-bound Galileo spacecraft: a camera on board was taking too many pictures and wasting film.

Engineers at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., were able to gain control of the camera, which was acting like a solar-system tourist, and a spokesman was quoted: "There's no repeat of the incident ... no problems. Everything has gone tickety-boo."

"I thought I had found a new expression," my Texas citator added, "but my wife informs me that the actress Maggie Smith used this word in the 1982 movie 'Evil Under the Sun,' based on a Hercule Poirot mystery novel by Agatha Christie. Can you shed any light on this strange expression?"

Its first use in my world was by the columnist George Will in 1977, projecting ahead: "The morning after the 1978 elections Republicans were feeling tickety-boo."

A few years later, an AP correspondent, Hugh A. Mulligan, recalling the early days of space flight, wrote of "the supercool British correspondent whose mastery of the Queen's English enabled him instantly to translate 'Shorty' Powers' historic 'A-OK' to 'Tickety-boo.'" (Mulligan noted that the reporters covering the pioneer right-stuffers called themselves fruit flies.)

I called the source of the recent usage at the Jet Propulsion Lab. "Tickety-boo just sort of slipped out when I was being interviewed," says Bob MacMillin, the spokesman.

"I picked it up from an old colleague of yours at The New York Times. Richard Witkin used it in a story in the 1960s, back before John Noble Wilford was covering space, when Witkin was writing about the Mariner mission. We were tired of hearing 'A-OK' from Houston, so we decided to try something new, and tickety-boo seemed to fit."

Was it, then, a NASA coinage of about three decades ago? No; further digging turns up this 1947 comment in the journal American Notes and Queries: "Lord Mountbatten, now governor general of India, is credited in The New York Times Magazine with 'giving currency' to the phrase tickety-boo (or tiggerty-boo). This Royal Navy term for 'OK' is derived from the Hindustani."

Hmm. The supplement to the Oxford English Dictionary, where the earliest citation is a 1939 use by the author Noel Streatfeild, labels the etymology "obscure," but speculates, "Perhaps from Hindi thik hai, 'all right.'"

GEORGE WILL
Leftists borrow page from trashy novels

WASHINGTON — The American left, having lost its last great cause — et tu, Nicaragua? — has fallen upon fallow times. But a few leftist intellectuals, believing it better to be shrilly silly than silent, are in full cry about an "assault" on "cultural freedom."

Will

Their "outrage" concerns a "disaster" and "scandal" of "censorship" that "chills the intellectual environment." They call it an attempt by a "complacent, often jingoistic" society to "muffle" critics, a "barbaric' act by "bean counters" of a "bloated conglomerate" guilty of "corporate vandalism" in a "slash-and-burn style." It is the "cultural crime" of "bibliocide," committed, says leftist Studs Terkel, because of "the bottom line, which has become the most obscene expression in the American vocabulary."

What is this sound and fury about? The head of a small publishing firm lost his job.

Pantheon, a subsidiary of Random House (which is owned by Newhouse), specializes in publishing left-wing books and losing money. Last year it lost between $2 million and $3 million. Random House recently told the head of Pantheon to plan to do better. He got huffy and quit, and five associates did, too.

That event is unimportant. But the reaction to it among some hyperventilating intellectuals — this exercise in nostalgia for the playpen of the 1960s, this new fling at faculty-club radicalism and sandbox revolution — is a hilarious specimen of people intoxicated by self-importance. It also is a case study of the descent of intellectuals' leftism into burlesque.

If you doubt that the protests on behalf of the Pantheon Six is just political special pleading, consider: Would Studs Terkel, Kurt Vonnegut, William Styron, Jonathan Schell, Noam Chomsky and the like be protesting a corporation's refusal to run a right-wing-leaning publishing house as a "prestige loss leader"?

Many publishers bring forth books expected to be loss leaders, and do so because they believe publishing involves social responsibility. But Pantheon's apologists, who suggest it has cornered the market on civic virtue, demand a preposterous entitlement: Pantheon itself should be run, in perpetuity, as a loss leader.

When Pantheon's defenders complain about publishing being tainted by "supermarket accounting," it is the noun they find most objectionable: It is "censorship" for Pantheon to be held accountable for its use of other people's money. It is "unlettered greed" ("unlettered" — the worst kind) for Newhouse to limit the number of years Pantheon can lose Newhouse money by grinding ideological axes. It is presumably idealism for Pantheon politicians to have televised tantrums because they do not have unlimited access to others' money.

Pantheon's radicals believe that capitalism is tolerable when, by the industriousness and responsibility (including attention to the bottom line) of others, it produces sufficient surplus to subsidize its ideological enemies at Pantheon. But capitalism is merely irresponsible greed when it requires Pantheon to live by the rules the rest of the world must respect.

These intellectuals, obscenely comparing themselves to dissidents "silenced" by tyranny, advertise themselves as defenders of intellectual integrity, but they distinguish themselves by their disrespect for language. It goes beyond imprecision, beyond the sloppy expression that betokens a muddled mind. It is the arrogance of ideologues who have lost not only the ability to persuade but also the desire to persuade. Their arrogance increases proportionately to the decline of their plausibility and decrease of their numbers.

"When I use a word," said Humpty Dumpty to Alice in Wonderland, "it means just what I choose it to mean." The question, he said, is "who is to be master." The left, having lost hope for political power, is determined to impose a dictatorship over discourse.

The rhetoric of "censorship" and "oppression" reeks of contempt for America and bourgeois societies in general. There is nothing novel about leftist intellectuals expressing disdain for society in the silliest terms because it thinks the intellectuals are silly. Pantheon's books, says Pantheon's ex-editors, contain "some of the least popular but most important ideas." This is an encore of the left's oldest alibi: We are failures (at politics, publishing, whatever) because we are virtuous. Indeed, our failures prove our virtues: Only the disgusting prosper in a disgusting society.

Around the world, scores of millions of victims of leftism are embracing the discipline and rationality of free markets because they understand the connection between consumer sovereignty and the responsibilities of political democracy. Some American leftists are demanding exemption from the market's severities for the same reason.

Outpouring of love an immeasurable gift

I cannot begin to adequately express my family's gratitude for all the kindness and compassion we received following the tragic and unexpected death of my husband, Ken Mardis, in a plane crash on Feb. 14. In the midst of this overwhelming experience, prayer and the unbelievable love and support of the people of Midland have remained our constant source of strength to complete daily tasks and begin looking towards the future.

The generous gifts of flowers, food, telephone calls, personal visits, memorials, cards, comforting words, and hugs will always be remembered. The considerable benevolence of Mr. and Mrs. John Cox, Mr. and Mrs. John McGuigan, and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Kleine has been of ineffable value throughout this time of sorrow.

Clayton and Modesta Williams and their family of employees have been genuinely caring and protective since Ken joined the aviation department six months ago. They have done everything possible to lessen the pain and burden of this terrible loss. Family, friendships, flying, and fishing were Ken's constant passions. Combine a sense of humor, unwavering optimism, happiness, patience, and sincerity and the result would be the essence of his personality. Everyone whose life was touched by Ken felt the warmth of these qualities.

I sincerely hope that I will not overlook anyone in writing personal notes of thanks for all the gifts of love, but in the blur of events that followed the accident, records were difficult to maintain with total accuracy. My family would like to extend our special appreciation to the following individuals and groups: Dorothy Warren, Dr. Gregory Bartha, Norma Halton, JoAnn Parker, Linda and Ron Jose, Penny and Danny Deuwall, Don Wilkins, Dave Hoffmeister, Sug and Thelda Courtney, the Midland County Sheriff's Department, Beau Estes, Keith Jobe, Alice Bradshaw, David Robbins, Henry Shaw, Dr. Ray Bristol, Kris Stump, Belle and Toby Routh, Debra Mayes, and the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Coverage of Haley captured his spirit

On behalf of the staff at Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library, please accept our appreciation for the coverage you provided J. Evetts Haley on his induction into the Hall of Great Westerners, National Cowboy Hall of Fame, during the organization's 25th anniversary celebration March 17 in Oklahoma City.

Bill Modisett did an excellent job documenting Haley's colorful, occasionally irascible and always fascinating life for Reporter-Telegram readers while the editorial properly placed Haley's work in the greater context of Texas history.

That work plus other equally intriguing accounts from buffalo hunters, trail drivers, cowboys and, of course, western historians and writers, is available for public use at the Haley Library.

Law lets government cover up misdeeds

On Oct. 15, 1980, the 96th Congress passed Public Law 94-456 which may be cited as the "Classified Information Procedures Act" or more simply "CIPA." This law was passed primarily to prevent top secret information about our nuclear arsenal from being disclosed at the trials of "leakers" being prosecuted for violation of our national security laws.

Prosecuting and defense attorneys alike had recognized a problem called "Graymail" of a defendant's threat to disclose classified information as part of his defense to charges that he had engaged in criminal activity.

Classified Information Procedures Act Section 6(e) permits the attorney general of the United States, at any time, to file an affidavit asserting that classified material relative to any trial may not be revealed under any circumstances. The judge is forced to proceed without it, even if it means dismissing the indictment.

This section destroys the concept of dispensed power essential to accountable government as a politically appointed counsel to the president has absolute power to obstruct the prosecution of intelligence officers serving the same president.

The droll idea that we do not have a national security state in the United States of America was blasted to smithereens when Attorney General Richard Thornburg caused the outright dismissal of charges against CIA Costa Rican Station Chief Joe Fernandez for filing a 6(e) affidavit preventing "disclosure" of widely publicized CIA operations in Central America.

In short, when an administration can avoid accountability by invoking "national security" to cover up its misdeeds, democracy is a thing of the past.

Citizens helped save small, precious dog

I would like to publicly thank everyone involved in saving a very special little dog's life.

On Saturday, March 3rd, my dog seized the opportunity to elude her handlers and made a run for Midland Drive between Arby's and Neely. She ran for two blocks south on Midland Drive and then crossed that busy street at least twice before going east by some nearby apartments.

Traffic was backed up to Arby's in one direction and to Neely in the other direction. If you were caught in the traffic snare that Saturday, thank you for stopping for a small, scared dog. The moments taken from your busy day will never be forgotten.

Special thanks are extended to the staff of Mesa Verde Animal Clinic for keeping Phransie within sight and to a gentleman in a small, red car. Without your help in the pursuit, Phransie might still be lost and afraid.

I appreciate your kindness and concern for the safety of one small dog. Words can never express my gratitude and feelings of relief when Phransie was safely back in my arms.

SPEAKING OUT

U.S. funding repression, murder in El Salvador

By Mike Gray

Mike Gray, a resident of Midland since 1982, is a landscape gardener who also describes himself as "a student of history and conflict reconciliation." He also attends the Midland Friends Meeting, a Quaker organization.

Article 10 "Whosoever promotes, constitutes, organizes, or directs any association which has as its objectives the teaching, spreading, or propagandizing of doctrines which might subvert the public order, will be punished with prison from three to five years."

Ortega's Nicaragua? Nope, Bush's El Salvador. This is part of the new penal code passed by the Legislative Assembly in San Salvador on Nov. 24, 1989. Debated for months in the assembly, this law was not so much of a reaction to the November FMLN offensive as it was a cause of it.

Commonly known as the "anti-terrorist law," there is also a provision which allows for persons picked up on "suspicion" to be held incommunicado for 15 days without formal charges being filed. This is not a new idea in El Salvador.

La Prensa Grafica, a conservative Salvadoran daily, reported (Oct. 8, 1989) the country has the third highest number of prisoners serving time without trial in Latin America. Dr. Oscar Rodriguez Diaz, president of the Criminal Court, stated that of the 2,508 prisoners currently held in Mariona prison, only 200 have been sentenced; 85 percent are being held without benefit of trial.

These vague laws have only legalized the existing repression against the churches, unions, the press and organized political opposition in El Salvador. Since the March electoral victory of the ARENA party, the crackdown has intensified. Shortly before the Nov. 11th FMLN offensive, bombings had occurred at the homes of opposition leaders, a Lutheran church office, and headquarters of a major trade union confederation. Two members of the Social Christian Movement party were found assassinated on Nov. 6. The initial press reports in both The New York Times and the Washington Post (Nov. 9, 1989) suggest Salvadoran troops from the Sixth Military Detachment were involved. Military involvement is undeniable in the murder of the Jesuit priests on Nov. 16th.

There are many stories that never make the papers in the United States. The stories about those insignificant souls who have died, disappeared, or emigrated. Seventy-one thousand have died in El Salvador in the last 10 years. There are no accurate accounts of the number who have fled their homes. Estimates place 500,000 in the United States, 500,000 displaced within the country, and 250,000 in neighboring countries, more than one-fifth of the country's population. Yet, relief groups find it very difficult to work in El Salvador.

Last March, various private voluntary organizations, including Catholic Relief Services, Church World Service, Lutheran World Relief, the Mennonite Central Committee, Ox-Fam America and the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee, testified before Congress on the serious difficulties their personnel and their Salvadoran counterparts were having in carrying out projects in El Salvador. The new "anti-terrorist law" has been used to deport some church workers and to deny visas to others.

This suppression of the church would not be possible without the complicity of the U.S. government. In all the world, only Israel and Egypt receive more U.S. aid than El Salvador. Only Israel receives more military aid. The U.S. provides nearly 50 percent of the entire annual budget of El Salvador. This has been so for the last 10 years.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler called it "money well spent" in response to calls to cut off military aid after the November battle in San Salvador.

Congress may have meant otherwise. According to a Congressional Research Service Issue Brief, aid in the past has been tied to "making progress in achieving a political settlement, civilian control of the military and security forces, protecting civilians during combat operations, ending death squad activities, establishing an effective judicial system, and implementing land reform." The Salvadoran government has clearly not made progress in any of these areas. How can it be money well spent?

This week, look at your own answer to that question. Ask your church. Ask your congressman and senators.

It is your money. You can decide how it could best be spent.

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 700 words or less.

Massacre must never be forgotten

I would like to commend this paper for printing its editorial on the need for the U.S. to officially commemorate the 75th anniversary of the genocide of Armenians by Ottoman Turks (March 13).

My parents were directly affected by the massacre that the Turks refuse to admit. Turks did murder my grandfather, his parents and dozens of other relatives. They did physically torture and shoot my aunts, who were young girls at the time — I have seen their scars. They did rob and burn my family's houses, leaving them with nothing, not even a country.

My father came to this country not to make his fortune or because he heard "the streets were paved with gold," but because America represented then and still represents freedom. His first view of the Statue of Liberty as an immigrant from a ship in New York harbor is a memory he recalled time and again for his children. We did not grow up hating Turks, nor did we call ourselves hyphenated Americans. However, the misery and suffering of Armenians at the hands of Turks was never forgotten — nor should it be.

As the U.S. grows more and more complacent with the freedom it enjoys, it becomes so necessary to remember the price paid in blood for this freedom by our forefathers, and I mean the ones buried in Arlington National Cemetery and in cemeteries all over this country. Remembering the Armenian genocide of 1915-1923 means not only that we share their sorrow, but that we keep an ever-vigilant eye over the precious freedom and human rights that we enjoy.

Editorial was biased against Turkish view

Your editorial entitled "U.S. should note Armenian massacre" on March 13 was regrettably one-sided. As a naturalized Armenian citizen, born and raised in Turkey, I felt compelled to write.

In 1914, the Ottoman Turks were fighting a Russian invasion. Armenians sided with the Russians and rebelled against the Ottoman Empire. A very bloody five-year war started but starvation and epidemic disease killed many times more people than bullets or knives did. Almost 600,000 of the Anatolian Armenians died. Almost 3 million Anatolian Moslems died, more than one-third of them in eastern Anatolia. Mortality in the Caucasus was similarly proportioned.

Why has the West formed such a one-sided view of the Armenian question? It is a matter of sources and prejudice.

The events of World War I in Turkey were seen in the West only through the eyes of American missionaries and Armenian propagandists who were instrumental in creating Armenian nationalism. The missionaries reported the murders of Armenians by Turks but not the murders of Turks by Armenians that were occurring at the same time. Their reports were collected by the U.S. ambassador to the Ottoman Empire, Henry Morgenthau, who disseminated them. Morgenthau believed that the Turks had "inferior blood." Yet his reports and the reports of others like him have formed our histories.

Only in recent years have scholars begun to examine other evidence. There are Ottoman military records that tell of massacres of Turks and Kurds by Armenians, eyewitness accounts by Russian military men of Armenian atrocities against Turks, evidence of Americans who saw the destruction of the Ottoman East by Armenians and even demographic evidence. Such evidence belies claims of a one-sided massacre. It does very accurately describe an awful war, one in which both sides were heroes and both sides were villains.

On April 24 of every year, Armenians gather to remember their dead. They grieve for lost family and the lost homes of their grandfathers, as is proper. It should be remembered that Turks too grieve for their dead.

Soviet crackdown on Lithuania could imperil relations

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and the new independent government of Lithuania are on the brink of an explosive situation that could endanger improved Soviet-American relations, including all arms-reduction prospects and the freedom movement in Eastern Europe.

Hearst

Our European allies should join President Bush in an urgent mediation effort to bring about negotiations between the Soviet and Lithuanian governments to conclude a settlement that will recognize the independence of Lithuania and also guarantee the security interests of the Soviet Union.

Strong pressure must be brought to bear on President Gorbachev to maintain his pledge not to use military force to crush the independence movement in Lithuania. The Lithuanian government must also be strongly pressured to stop violence against Soviet troops and citizens in Lithuania. It must be persuaded to stop trying to take governmental control pending the outcome of a reasonable period of negotiations between Moscow and Vilnius, capital of the Baltic state that lost its independence half a century ago when Joseph Stalin annexed the country under a secret pact with Nazi Germany.

Lithuanian President Vytautus Landsbergis' defiant rejection of President Gorbachev's March 16 ultimatum to renounce its declaration of independence led the Soviet leader to impose virtual martial law on Lithuania.

In a move that could lead to violence, Gorbachev, using his new power as executive president, ordered every Lithuanian to surrender all weapons to Soviet-controlled police within seven days or face confiscation of the weapons, presumably by house-to-house search. Sale of hunting weapons was banned. Purchase of other weapons requires a Soviet license.

Gorbachev also ordered Soviet KGB police to prevent Lithuania from attempting to take control of the government buildings or implementing any kind of control of the government. The police were ordered to protect the "rights and interests" of Soviet citizens living in Lithuania.

Soviet security guards were ordered to increase protection of power plants, sensitive installations and all transportation and communication lines. The Soviets cut international phone calls to anywhere in the country except Moscow. KGB troops were ordered to tighten security along Lithuania's borders and to stop ethnic Lithuanians from entering the country. Many have been flocking into Lithuania from the West to help set up an independent government and free enterprise economy.

Soon after President Landsbergis' rejection of Gorbachev's ultimatum, the Soviets began unscheduled military maneuvers in Lithuania, with Soviet fighter planes and helicopter gunships flying back and forth over the capital. A large number of Soviet paratroopers were believed transported to Lithuania last weekend in what was described by the independence government's prime minister, Kazimiera Prunskiene, as a "massive number of military flights."

She sent a telegram to Gorbachev Wednesday demanding to know the number of Soviet troops and amount of military equipment sent to Lithuania since the crisis developed. No reply was received as the weekend approached. Prunskiene estimated 30,000 Soviet troops were already stationed in Lithuania. Western intelligence analysts believe about one million Soviet troops are stationed in the three Baltic states of the "Soviet Socialist Republic."

A column of 15 Soviet armored personnel carriers and army trucks drove through the center of the Lithuanian capital Thursday in a show of force obviously intended to let the people know what could happen if the independence government continues to defy Moscow.

There were numerous incidents of Soviet troops beating up Lithuanian soldiers, hundreds of whom deserted the Soviet-controlled Lithuanian army to join the newly formed volunteer independent Lithuanian civil defense corps.

The independence government is willing to negotiate with Moscow about Soviet interests in Lithuania but only as a sovereign state.

The Soviet parliament has approved a draft law that would make secession from the Soviet Union illegal without a republic-wide referendum and a five-year transition period.

President Landsbergis intends to ignore the law. He described Gorbachev's crackdown as "the ghost of Stalin walking in the Kremlin," and declared that the orders to stop implementing the independence declaration "could be enforced only by brutal military force."

The crisis has caused a grave dilemma for President Bush. He has supported Lithuania's independence but hoped it could be achieved gradually through peaceful negotiations with Gorbachev. He has been counting on the Soviet leader to keep his promise not to use military force to crush the Lithuanian independence movement.

As recently as last Wednesday Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze assured Secretary of State James Baker that Moscow would not intervene with force to block the independence movement, but that is what the Soviet leader has, in effect, done in response to Lithuanian recklessness.

Presidential Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater expressed White House "concern" over the weapons confiscation order and said the deteriorating situation is being watched "seriously."

However, the president is aware that Gorbachev's political fate is at stake in the Lithuanian problem. He knows that if Gorbachev lets Lithuania get away with complete independence without any agreement with Moscow, the other two Baltic states, Latvia and Estonia, will quickly follow suit.

That could bring about Gorbachev's downfall and his replacement by what the Soviet leader told a West German leader last summer would be "a fierce military dictator."

Let us hope President Bush, with the support of our European allies, can persuade both the Soviet and Lithuanian leaders to show common sense.

The fuse on a time bomb that could wreck the greatest peace movement since the end of World War II is swiftly burning.

Driver's ed, computer use topics of short courses beginning at MC

Staff Report

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer three short courses beginning the week of Apr. 2. Courses are as follows:

Morris Shaw will teach Driver Education on Mondays through Fridays from 5-7 p.m., Apr. 2 through Apr. 30. Classroom and behind-the-wheel instruction in preparation for Texas driver's licensing procedures. Students must be at least 15 years old on or before the first class meeting. Class limited to 35 students. Course fee is $175.

Introduction to Computer Usage in Business will be taught in two different sections as follows: on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9-11 a.m., Apr. 3 through May 10 or on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 3-5 p.m., Apr. 3 through May 10. A course designed to remove the mystique from the world of computers. Appropriate for individuals who have purchased a small computer or those who are interested in learning about the world of computers. Upon completion of the course, students will have a knowledge of the vocabulary associated with computers and some experience with the language BASIC which is the language of small computers. In addition, students will acquire an understanding of the planning and development processes required for computer applications. Class is limited to 14 students. Course fee is $45.

Beginning Lotus 1-2-3 will be taught on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 1-3 p.m., Apr. 3 through May 10. This beginning course in Spreadsheet applications will introduce the student to using Lotus 1-2-3 in solving consumer and business-oriented problems. Hands-on experience with IBM-compatible personal computers is emphasized. Topics include an introduction to computer hardware and software; date input; spreadsheet development; and creating and printing graphs. Prerequisite is completion of Computer and You or previous experience with personal computers. Text available at Midland College Bookstore. Recommended texbook is Student Edition of Lotus 1-2-3. Class limited to 14 students. Course fee is $45.

For more information on these and other Continuing Education short courses, come by the Office of Continuing Education in the Administration Building or call 685-4518.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

The PTA organizations of Fannin, Sam Houston and Santa Rita elementary schools invite the public to view Jim Trelease's film, "Reading Aloud," which deals with motivating children to think of books as friends instead of enemies, Tuesday, March 27 at the First Baptist Church Activities Building at any of the following times: 9:30 a.m. (coffee served at 9:15 a.m.), 12 noon (dessert and coffee served at 11:45), 7 p.m. (dessert and coffee served at 6:45).

Trelease is one of the nation's most-sought-after educational speakers.

No admission will be charged and handouts and door prizes will be given at each session.

High school students with an aptitude for science have an opportunity to gain experience in a professional research setting through the 1990 Summer Research Program for High School Students at The University of Texas Medical Branch (UTMB) at Galveston.

The program aims to provide stimulating "hands on" experience in scientific research for gifted students in order to increase their motivation to pursue careers in research or scientific teaching. The program addresses the critical need in the United States for more scientists and science teachers.

Application forms are available at local high schools or from Dr. Bowman at School Health & Community Pediatrics, UTMB, Galveston 77550-2776, 1-409-761-2683. Application deadline is April 6.

Selected students will be placed on an ongoing research team for eight weeks, June 11 through August 3, where they will work under the guidance of a faculty preceptor.

Students will take part in weekly research seminars.

Applicants should be 16 years of age by June 11. Primary consideration will be given to juniors and sophomores who have exhibited an aptitude for science. Special consideration will be given to qualifying students who are considered economically educationally or culturally disadvantaged or physically handicapped.

Students will receive the federal minimum wage of $3.80 an hour. Funds for the salaries are provided through grants from the Howard University-Rockefeller Foundation Program in Life Sciences, the National Institutes of Health Minority High School Student Research Apprentice Program, the American Chemical Society's Project SEED, and the Cameron County Private Industry Council.

Clements may oust education leaders

AUSTIN (AP) — Two top officials of the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board who have been at odds with Gov. Bill Clements over funding and other issues were reportedly notified that he intends to replace them.

The governor's office claims no decision has been made. But newspaper accounts say Board Chairman Hal Daugherty of El Paso and Vice Chairman Cipriano Guerra of San Antonio were told this week Clements would replace them.

The governor's choices reportedly are Larry Jenkins of Austin as chairman and Charles Sprague of Dallas, vice chairman.

Daugherty and Guerra were appointed to the board by Clements in August 1987. They have opposed Clements on higher education funding and other issues and recently waged a vocal opposition to the merger of West Texas State University and the Texas A&M University System.

The coordinating board approved that merger, which was supported by Clements and several influential Republican allies including oilman T. Boone Pickens, on a 10-7 vote. The merger was opposed by the agency's commissioner, Kenneth Ashworth.

Appointed to the board in November 1989, Jenkins supported the merger. Sprague, appointed in November 1989, opposed it. Guerra said Friday that he spoke with Clements on Thursday about being replaced as vice chairman.

"He felt that we were having big differences about different things, especially the West Texas merger," said Guerra. "We've had some very vigorous discussions about different matters including a lot of pressure and criticism of Ken Ashworth, who I consider one of the best qualified people in the business. He's done a good job, but if you do it right, you're going to upset a lot of people."

Rossanna Salazar, Clements' press secretary, said changes only in the top positions are under consideration.

"Both Hal Daugherty and Cip Guerra are outstanding individuals, and the governor has full confidence in their commitment," Salazar said. "As a matter of routine, the governor rotates positions of leadership among various members of state boards and commissions. This is one of those instances."

The 18-member Coordinating Board oversees all state colleges and universities. Its members are appointed to six-year terms by the governor. The current board includes 11 Clements appointees and seven appointees by former Gov. Mark White.

Spill control school investigated

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The Texas Rangers are investigating whether the director of the National Spill Control School at Corpus Christi State University diverted university funds into a personal account, according to a published report.

George R. Oberholtzer, the director and founder of the school, denies misappropriating any funds.

Texas Rangers criminal investigator Sgt. Charlie Brune said the Oberholtzer investigation is one of three separate probes into improprieties at the university.

The investigations, being conducted by the Texas Rangers and the U.S. Treasury Department, have not resulted in charges.

Oberholtzer, 57, said Friday that a full investigation would clear him.

Ensembles to present concerts

By H.A. Tuck

One of the traditional spring concerts is being staged Tuesday evening in Chaparral Center. The Commercial Music Ensembles will present their concerts at 7:30 p.m.

Tuck

While admission is free, you can see a show that's being professionally staged, with lights, sound and performers reaching high standards of achievement. Instructor Jerry Tubb will serve as supervisor and master of ceremonies for the evening.

You will be able to hear contemporary and vintage rock and pop music, along with contemporary Christian music.

David Watkins and Robert Lee Hoover are ensemble instructors, with Milt Hathaway's sound and lighting class taking care of those technical details.

Fitzco Sound is furnishing the sound and lighting equipment for the concert.

Those daring Chaparral cheerleaders are among the nation's best. But many of them are sophomores who won't be back next fall. That's why sponsor-coach Betty Murrah is looking for lots of replacements. There's a mandatory meeting on Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Physical Education Building for all those thinking about trying for the squad or for the mascot position. Try-outs are scheduled for April 25.

Petra, a top contemporary Christian music group, is coming to Chaparral Center for a performance at 7 p.m. Monday. Tickets are available at Chaparral Center box office. They also may be purchased at The Lighthouse in Midland, Scripture Shop in Odessa, or Sonshine in Big Spring.

Speaking of tickets, if you want to take your children or grandchildren to see this year's Sesame Street Live production ... you'd best get your tickets soon. Ernie, Big Bird, Cookie Monster and all the other Sesame Street characters are coming to Chaparral Center for three shows: at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, April 3, and at 4 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, April 4. Tickets are on sale at the Chap Center and at Sears in Midland and Odessa.

An Wang

Wang dies at age 70

BOSTON (AP) — An Wang, a shy inventor whose one-man shop set above a hardware store grew under his leadership into a billion-dollar competitor in the world computer market, died Saturday of cancer. He was 70.

Wang died at Massachusetts General Hospital, where he was admitted March 6 after a setback in a long fight against cancer of the esophagus, said hospital spokesman Martin Bander. He was first operated on July 14 for the cancer, which recurred this month, Bander said.

He held more than 40 patents and was inducted into the National Inventors Hall of Fame in March 1988. He received the Medal of Liberty from President Reagan.

Wang, a slight, Chinese-born engineer, began Wang Laboratories Inc. in 1951 above an electrical fixtures store in Boston. The company grew to become a leader in office word-processing equipment in the 1970s.

He developed the magnetic core, a product central to the fledgling computer industry. The small ring of iron was the basic element of computer memory until the microchip was introduced in the late 1960s.

"An Wang was the personification of the American dream. His genius and his generosity made it possible for others to reach their dreams," Gov. Michael S. Dukakis said in a statement Saturday.

"Dr. Wang's genius helped spark the high-tech revolution, and his vision helped guide it," Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said in a statement. "In addition, his commitment to social justice made him a pioneer in employee relations as well."

He was "quiet, humble, brilliant, decisive, caring, a great man, a one-of-a-kind person," said Paul Guzzi, a Wang spokesman sometimes called his right-hand man. "I think all of us who have been associated with him know he was a great man."

Wang felt strongly enough about his company to fire his own eldest son, Frederick, as chief operating officer and president after huge losses were posted in the late 1980s.

The growth of Wang Laboratories accelerated in 1964 after Wang introduced a desktop calculator.

Newman seeks site for sick childrens' camp

Newman

Newman has already established the Hole In The Wall Gang Camp in Ashford. It entertains boys and girls ages 7 to 17 with cancer or other life-threatening illnesses.

Newman's lawyer, Leo Nevas, said Newman went to Florida on Friday to scout locations for the second camp, which will also aid children with serious diseases.

"All the seed money will come from him," Nevas said, while others will provide donations to keep the camp going.

Nevas said plans are also under way to site a third camp in England, which would be supported with donations made overseas.

Newman founded the Ashford camp in June 1988 on 300 acres around a lake. His gourmet food company, Newman's Own Inc., donated $7 million in startup costs, while other funds were raised for construction and an endowment.

The camp offers horseback riding, boating, baseball, tennis and other summer activities for youngsters, who are supervised by medical professionals from Yale-New Haven Hospital.

The camp was named after a gang of outlaws in the movie, "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," which starred Newman and Robert Redford.

Nevas was unsure when the second or third camps would be built.

Newman and Newman's Own are being sued in Bridgeport Superior Court by a Connecticut delicatessen owner who claims he was promised stock for helping to launch the company. Newman denies any deal.

The Academy Award-winning actor took Friday off, but has been in court since the trial began Tuesday. He's expected to testify this week.

BOSTON (AP) — "The Marriage of Figaro" set in the Trump Tower? "Don Giovanni" in Spanish Harlem? Avant garde director-playwright Peter Sellars says "Bravo!"

Sellars, conductor Craig Smith and administrator Robert Canon announced Friday the creation of a new company to stage the productions at the Colonial Theater in January 1991.

The group will stage five performances of Sellars' updated "The Marriage of Figaro," set in the Trump Tower and conducted by Smith. The first full season will be in 1991 to 1992, according to a news release.

It will also include Sellars' "Don Giovanni," set in Spanish Harlem, and "Cosi fan tutte," set in a diner on Cape Cod.

Plans for Boston Opera Theater were released after months of speculation that the trio would form a company after Canon resigned as general manager of Sarah Caldwell's Opera Company of Boston in April 1989.

Canon said the company would feature modern productions of standard repertory and development of new works by living American composers.

Sellars, the former director of the Boston Shakespeare Company, is known for his unusual and often controversial stagings of plays and operas.

Child

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Master chef Julia Child thinks she knows how to make broccoli pleasing to the presidential palate.

Mrs. Child's "Broccoli a la Bush" involves blanching cut broccoli, then sauteing it in olive oil and garlic. The garlic, while not completely overpowering the vegetable, creates an altogether different taste, she said.

Mrs. Child whipped up a quick recipe using the vegetable banned from the chief executive's plate on a WWDB-FM radio show on Friday morning.

"President Bush would love to eat broccoli if it was prepared in this way," Mrs. Child said.

She called "Broccoli a la Bush" the first recipe created as a solution to 10 tons of the vegetable the White House has received from growers objecting to the president's decision to ban broccoli from his plane, Air Force One.

Mrs. Child, author of seven cookbooks, is on a 12-city tour for the American Institute of Wine & Food, discussing her philosophy on cooking.

Bush told reporters he hasn't liked broccoli "since I was a little kid and my mother made me eat it, and I'm president of the United States and I'm not going to eat any more broccoli!"

Walesa

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Polish Solidarity leader Lech Walesa will visit Norway next month, six years after he failed to personally receive his Nobel Peace Prize.

Walesa arrives April 25, at the start of a Scandinavian trip which will include Denmark, Sweden and Finland, said Kaare Sandegren, of the Norwegian Confederation of Labor Unions, which invited Walesa.

The Nobel laureate will meet the Norwegian committee which selects peace prize winners, as well as government, union and business leaders, Sandegren said Friday.

Danuta Walesa accepted the 1983 peace prize in Oslo on her husband's behalf, because Walesa feared that he would be barred from returning to Poland if he left.

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — U.S. Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos says Mexico and the United States could learn a lot from each other about educating their youth.

Cavazos was awarded an honorary doctorate from the University of Guadalajara on Friday and stressed the importance of relations between the two countries in his address.

"Knowledge of other countries was, in the past, a subject of study for academic reasons," he said. "But in the future it will be a crucial element of economic competitiveness in a peaceful, multipolar world."

He urged greater educational cooperation between the United States and Mexico, which share a 2,000-mile border.

CHICAGO (AP) — Blues musicians such as Koko Taylor and the Kinsey Report with Big Daddy Kinsey are planning to say so long to one of their own this weekend.

The musicians will gather Sunday at B.L.U.E.S. Etcetra for a fund-raiser to help cover the medical and funeral costs for Larry "Big Twist" Nolan, who died March 14. He was 53.

"His songs also made me miss him," wife, Yvonne Nolan. "Some of his songs gave me the blues."

Ken Morton of Alligator Records, which recorded the album "Big Twist and the Mellow Fellows" in Chicago, said the show would both celebrate Nolan's memory and help raise money for his family.

"There undoubtedly will be a big turnout of musicians," he said. "There will be some kind of jam session at the end."

Sunday's lineup includes the Mellow Fellows, as well as Taylor, Lonnie Brooks and the Kinsey group.

Nolan, who once tipped the scales at 385 pounds, spent the latter part of his life in excruciating pain, said guitarist and bandleader Pete Special. For the past two years, he underwent dialysis treatment, and more recently he underwent back surgery.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lee Atwater planned to spend a second night in the hospital so doctors could adjust medication the Republican Party chairman is taking as part of his treatment for a brain tumor, an aide said Saturday.

Atwater was "upbeat" and watching movies at George Washington University Hospital in Washington, where he was admitted Friday after complaining of queasiness, said Leslie Goodman, spokeswoman for the Republican National Committee.

Goodman said Atwater planned to undergo a radiation treatment Saturday, one of the five he must take weekly to shrink the non-malignant tumor on the right side of his brain.

The tumor was discovered earlier this month. Atwater, 39, was rushed to the same hospital March 5 after collapsing during a speech.

Atwater was hospitalized for several days but returned to work a week after the seizure.

Atwater was named to head the RNC after managing George Bush's successful presidential campaign. He managed South Carolina Sen. Strom Thurmond's 1978 campaign and played major roles in both Reagan-Bush campaigns.

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — Doctors took Richard Pryor out of intensive care Saturday, four days after the actor-comedian suffered a mild heart attack, hospital officials said.

Pryor's agent said Pryor may resume his fishing vacation after he is released from the hospital.

Pryor, 49, was admitted to Wesley Hospital after suffering a heart attack Tuesday. He was listed in stable condition Saturday. The hospital administrator, Douglas Killer, said Pryor probably would be discharged by Tuesday.

"He's fine and progressing well," the hospital official said. "We're very pleased with him. It's given him quite a fright but he's in good spirits."

Killer said the comedian was watching video cassettes in his room.

Pryor, star of "Harlem Nights," "Stir Crazy," and many other films, collapsed while vacationing on the Gold Coast strip in northeastern Australia. He was admitted to hospital with chest pain, later diagnosed as a minor heart attack.

His agent, Guy McElwaine, said Pryor was in Australia to fish on the Great Barrier Reef for marlin "and then planned to go to New Zealand to fish for trout. He may still do that, depending on how he's feeling."

Don't Drink The Water!

Long-term drinking of chlorinated water appears to increase a person's risk of developing bladder cancer as much as 80 percent, according to a major new study.

"Your water supply could be loaded with contaminant, including bacteria, pesticides, industrial runoff and lead. It is expensive to test for all the possible contaminant, so installing a basic Charcoal-Activated filter acts upon the most common ones.

Ralph Nader states that the approach has got to be Prevention at the Source. (Tap water in the home.)
This is why we urge you to try SWEETWATER'S BACTERIOSTATIC SYSTEM. A patented mineral media that is effective in filtering municipally treated & private well water. For a cost of less than 1¢ a gal.

Bush ignorant of program's status

OMB opposes law providing loans to colonias' residents for water systems

EL PASO (AP) — President Bush didn't know his administration opposed a $30 million loan program for border "colonias," where thousands of people live without running water and flush toilets.

"I know the problem," Bush said. "I must say with some embarrassment that I don't know exactly where that provision stands in terms of support, or not support from the administration.

"But it's a serious health problem, and it concerns both sides of our border. And I will try to get back to you in El Paso with an answer," Bush said at a briefing in Washington Friday. "We must view that this position is not supported for budgetary reasons."

But Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan, who is the featured speaker this week at a symposium dedicated to discussing health and related environmental problems on the border, said he's never heard the term.

"No, I'm not even familiar with colonias," Sullivan said during a separate news conference. "But I certainly will be looking into this to learn more about it."

Health officials say the lack of running water or sewerage produce a high rate of infectious diseases, such as hepatitis and tuberculosis in the colonias.

The Office of Management and Budget opposes a section of the Rural Economic Development Act — passed by the House Thursday — that would offer loans for poor colonia residents to finance water systems.

In El Paso County, more than 60,000 people live in the slums known as colonias outside the city limits.

Sullivan said he will check into the specific objections voiced by Bush's budget office.

U.S. Rep. Ron Coleman, D-Texas, of El Paso and state Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, said Sullivan's unfamiliarity with colonias underscores the importance of his visit to the border March 30.

Coleman said he has sent letters to Sullivan, explaining the health problems of the colonias.

"He probably gets a lot of letters from a lot of members of Congress. I would hope that somebody on his staff would be paying attention to issues raised by members of Congress," Coleman said.

Sullivan is to make a helicopter tour along the border.

"That's not where he needs to be," Coleman said. "I think he needs to be right there with both feet on the ground, actually seeing the plight."

"He certainly should understand the health care concerns along the border," Coleman said.

The five-term congressman also said he is "dismayed that (Bush) is unaware of what his (Office of Management and Budget) is sending the Congress: It says quite plainly 'the president is opposed' (to the colonia aid)."

Family awarded $265,000 in store shooting

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Tarrant County jury has recommended that a former convenience store owner pay $265,000 to the family of the man he fatally wounded after the man ran out of the store with $62 snatched from a cash register.

The jury decided that Hanfi Asad pay the award to the family of Eddie Mosley. Police found the 19-year-old, who had no weapon or criminal record, dying near the Stop Six convenience store on June 6, 1987. Mosley, who was shot in the back of the head, was still clutching the $62.

District Court Judge Michael Schattman, who presided over the civil trial last month, is expected to rule on the case sometime next week.

Mosley's family, still disappointed that a Tarrant County grand jury declined to indict Asad in the shooting, said the civil award is gratifying.

"We knew he had been killed wrong," said Jeffrey Wilson, Mosley's wife. "We felt some action had to be taken so this man would know he just couldn't go around and kill people."

Ms. Wilson, who was 18 at the time of her husband's death, filed the lawsuit with Mosley's mother, Linda Mosley.

State law provides that in certain cases a person may use force, including deadly force, to retrieve stolen property.

But Mosley family attorney Don Peavy argued that Asad had more reasonable means of recovering his money than firing a .38-caliber special at Mosley. Peavy said Mosley didn't threaten Asad and was running out the door when he was killed.

After the shooting, Asad sold his interest in the store and moved to El Paso, where he is now a student. His attorney, Edwin Lee, said Asad remains sorry for the death.

"He's very sorry for it," Lee told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "He would never shoot anybody for that amount of money. ... He doesn't like to talk about it at all."

The newspaper was unable to reach Asad for comment.

For Mosley's father, Eddie Douglas, Mosley's death marked the second time Douglas had lost a teen-age son to gunfire. It was also the second time a grand jury declined to indict those who fired the fatal shots.

In 1984, Mosley's half brother, David Jefferson, was shot six times by two Fort Worth police officers while being handcuffed during a misdemeanor drug arrest. Like Mosley, the 15-year-old Jefferson was unarmed when he died.

Center's refugees honor memory of slain archbishop

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Immigrants living at the Casa Oscar Romero sanctuary for Central Americans tied black ribbons on the fence and prayed for peace Saturday, commemorating the slaying 10 years ago of the Salvadoran archbishop for whom the shelter was named.

Salvadorans, Nicaraguans, Guatemalans and Hondurans took turns reading from a list of names of religious workers killed in Latin America in recent years.

"Presente," the congregation of about 100 repeated in Spanish after the reading of each martyr's name during the memorial service, meaning the dead remained with them in spirit.

A single bullet struck Monsignor Oscar Romero in the heart as he was saying Mass in a Salvadoran hospital chapel on March 24, 1980. No one has been charged in the assassination, although the 1984-89 Christian Democratic government compiled evidence implicating right-wing extremists.

Saturday's memorial service at Casa Romero near the Mexican border in extreme southern Texas was a call for peace throughout Central America, organizers said. The Brownsville area is a popular crossing point for Central Americans seeking refuge in the United States, because it is the nearest point by land to the war- and poverty-torn region.

About 180 Central Americans were staying Saturday at Casa Romero, which is operated by the Catholic Diocese of Brownsville, said Sister Juliana Garcia, shelter director.

She said 1,000 black ribbons the shelter residents tied on the fence Saturday represented the "people of good will that died because they were fighting for justice."

Children from the Central American countries offered prayers for peace and showed pictures they drew of their homelands, mostly showing scenes of war.

'I want for El Salvador that one day we have peace and harmony for everyone.'

— Manuel de Jesus Nunez
Salvadoran teen

■ Related story/10B

"These are the airplanes, the bombs, the dead people and the parachutes," a boy explained to the audience.

"How sad that they know so much about bombs and soldiers; instead of dolls and candies and all of those things normal for children," Sister Juliana commented.

Manuel de Jesus Nunez, 15, from El Salvador's battle-scarred Chalatenango province, said he and his father left their country last week because the leftist FMLN guerrillas had forcibly taken Manuel and tried to press him into service until he escaped.

"I want for El Salvador that one day we have peace and harmony for everyone," Manuel prayed.

The Rev. Mike Seifert of Harlingen read a slightly modified version of a prayer from the Catholic Mass of the Martyrs, saying: "The blood of your glorious Central American martyrs spilled in the same way that the blood of Christ was spilled, and spilled this way in order to proclaim their fidelity to you ..."

Casa Oscar Romero was founded in 1982 at San Benito, 20 miles north of Brownsville, and moved to its present location on the outskirts of Brownsville three years ago.

Writer says 'Glory' close to true story of black soldiers

By Susan Fahlgren

HOUSTON (AP) — A Texas scholar who recently published a book about black soldiers in the Civil War says the popular movie "Glory" almost got it right.

Almost. But he liked the movie anyway.

Joseph Glatthaar, an associate professor at the University of Houston, spent four years researching his newly released book, "Forged in Battle: The Civil War Alliance of Black Soldiers and White Officers."

Glatthaar says it was exciting to see the lives of soldiers he has studied come to life on the screen, but he notes some inaccuracies in the film, which coincidentally came out about the same time as his book.

"The movie's very good — I strongly recommend it," Glatthaar says. "What the movie is good at is conveying a sense to the observer of what it was like to be in these black units and what were some of the obstacles that they faced."

But from a strictly historical standpoint, there are some problems, he says.

One example is the scene in which Robert Gould Shaw, the white commander of the 54th Massachusetts Regiment, orders a soldier flogged.

"Flogging was illegal in the United States Army," Glatthaar says. "Shaw would have been discharged from the service if he did that."

Glatthaar says the Hollywood version also included a fictitious sergeant-major as Shaw's right-hand man.

"In reality, the sergeant major of the 54th Massachusetts was the son of the abolitionist and former slave Frederick Douglass, which in itself is very interesting," he says.

Glatthaar has read hundreds of letters exchanged between the soldiers and their families, as well as thousands of military documents from library archives.

"There was no censorship of mails and people were very prolific with their own family or their own spouse and that's very revealing, as far as racial attitudes go," he says.

It was a letter from a white officer in charge of black soldiers that initially got Glatthaar's attention.

"I do not think that I would exchange my position in this regiment for one of equal rank in any white regiment," the officer wrote his brother.

Glatthaar says he was intrigued by the strange alliance between the white officers and black soldiers, many of them former slaves who were apprehended as "contraband" from the South.

"Of course, you have the old situation with whites in power," he says. "Most of the blacks are from slavery, so it's a position to which they're accustomed, but not happy with. And, of course, these blacks are experiencing freedom for the first time in the military, and that's a strange situation, too."

Some 178,000 blacks served under 7,000 white officers in the U.S. Colored Troops during the Civil War. Only 110 blacks were able to become officers in their own regiments.

Even before President Abraham Lincoln officially freed slaves in January 1863, black soldiers were recruited to fill the gaps left by casualties in the Union Army.

Glatthaar notes that black soldiers suffered the indignities of lower wages, undesirable assignments and dwindling supplies. But for many, it was a unique opportunity to serve as "an equal" to whites and to establish their rights for themselves by fighting their former owners.

But the white officers directing black troops were not popular back home.

"They were heroes in the black community, but they were despised by whites," Glatthaar says. "A lot of them were attacked and brutalized and their families abused."

But Glatthaar says the most shocking indignities were those inflicted on black troops after the war.

"What really surprised me most was the way the white population took away the accomplishments of the United States Colored Troops after the war," Glatthaar says. "They denied their achievements."

Black soldiers who remained as peace-keeping forces in the South during Reconstruction often suffered reprisals from former Confederate soldiers.

"Blacks, I think, wisely felt that their white officers should have fought to help them gain full, equal rights," he says. "The white officers never overcame their prejudice."

"In World War I," Glatthaar says, "they went through the exact same issues, the exact same accusations that blacks didn't have the character to stand up in combat, that they would all drop their weapons and run, or that they would act like savages and fight uncontrollably and we couldn't trust them.

"They just denied the fact that 178,000 soldiers had performed superbly in the Civil War. They were reinventing the wheel in World War I and, in fact, again in World War II."

The glory that was England

The Duke and Duchess of Kent stop and chat with the ladies of the shop as they tour Houston City Hall Plaza that was turned into a British theme marketplace for the Houston International Festival Saturday.

Market event almost 'bigger than Dallas'

DALLAS (AP) — The saying, "bigger than Dallas," could almost apply to the marketing and retailing industries that thrive in the North Texas city, analysts say.

Stemmons Freeway on the city's west side sports a trade complex for everything from apparel merchandising to wholesale goods. This weekend, it is also getting its first combined wholesale mart, dubbed Mega Market.

The city already has 12 separate national and international apparel and accessory market shows representing 18,000 different product lines. About 30,000 retail buyers work here, and shoppers can choose from 18,000 to 20,000 stores.

Almost 3,000 permanent and temporary showrooms are in the city, industry officials say. So why would Dallas need another trade event?

Dallas Market Center's first combined wholesale market is "unparalleled because retailers will be able to buy every apparel and accessory classification in one location, during one trip," said Donna Knox, president of the Dallas Apparel Mart-Menswear Mart.

"The breadth and depth of merchandise available will increase productivity and reduce costs for retail buyers."

Mega Market began Thursday and runs through Tuesday. Two of the first-time shows, the National Imprinted Sportswear Expo and Active Lifestyle Expo, bring together more than 500 exhibits for buyers, she said.

"Every retailer and manufacturer in the United States knows about this event," according to Don Walton, chairman of the Mega Market task force.

Salvadoran activists win Rothko Chapel awards

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Salvadoran human rights activists have been given $10,000 awards by Houston philanthropist Dominique de Menil.

The winners of the Rothko Chapel Oscar Romero Awards are Lutheran Bishop Medardo Gomez, an outspoken advocate for the poor, and Maria Julia Hernandez, the head of Tutela Legal, the Catholic Church's human rights and legal aid office.

De Menil announced the awards Friday in the San Salvador hospital chapel where human rights advocate Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero was assassinated while saying Mass 10 years ago Saturday.

"These are people of conviction, people who carry weight," said de Menil. "These are people who are willing to put their heads on the line."

Both Gomez and Ms. Hernandez have faced intimidation and death threats.

Following a rebel offensive launched last November, the government has cracked down on church workers, who are perceived as a threat in the 10-year civil war against leftist rebels. Scores of church workers have been arrested and others expelled.

After receiving anonymous death threats last year, 43-year-old Gomez fled the country. He has since returned.

Under Gomez's leadership, the Lutheran Salvadoran Synod has provided food and shelter for hundreds of refugees from the fighting between the rebels and the U.S.-backed military.

Ms. Hernandez has headed the archbishopric's human rights office since it was founded in 1982.

Cisneros to host new syndicated TV talk show

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Former San Antonio mayor Henry Cisneros has agreed to be the host of a new syndicated television series of specials featuring interviews with Texas celebrities.

The series, which will debut in April, will be shown in cities throughout Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma. Titled "Texans," it will feature well-known Texans from the worlds of show business, politics, business and sports. The hour-long shows will be shown in prime-time slots.

The first show will be shown in the San Antonio area on KENS-TV, featuring former Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry, country-western singer Janie Fricke and Dr. Red Duke, a trauma surgeon in Houston.

On the first show, Cisneros will serve only as the host, with other people conducting the interviews. Beginning with the second show, Cisneros will also be an interviewer.

The other three 1990 specials will air in early July, late August and in December, executive producer Bob Phillips said.

So far, the series has been purchased by stations in 22 television markets, including Dallas, Houston, Austin and San Antonio, and Ada, Okla., and Clovis, N.M.

Cisneros' other media projects include syndicated radio commentary in both Spanish and English, carried last year by 40 radio stations across the country.

Power politics, not Bible, runs Southern Baptists, pastor says

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An organizer for conservative Southern Baptists says the denomination's interests have shifted from upholding biblical principles to power politics.

The Rev. David Montoya of Arkansas said the Southern Baptist Convention appoints members to trustee boards using an unfair system of "rewards and punishments."

Montoya spoke Friday after the two-day meeting of the SBC Committee on Nominations, which suggests appointments of more than 200 trustees annually for the denomination's 20 agencies and seminaries.

The list will be voted on by messengers in June at the SBC's national meeting in New Orleans.

"Problems begin when you start pushing for raw power, when you threaten people and reward people ... use people who don't get all the facts, whip them up emotionally to get things done," Montoya said during a news conference after the committee meeting.

Montoya said he was awarded a membership on the committee this year for his work boosting the conservative cause in previous years. He said his conservative beliefs in the inerrancy of the Bible haven't changed, but he is tired of helping the group stomp on moderate Southern Baptists.

The Best Tires In The World Have Goodyear Written All Over Them

AKRON, Ohio – Quality is a word that is too often overused. Quality, at The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company however, is more than a word; quality is a rallying cry, a necessity, a requirement that every tire produced by this world giant has to meet.

Quality is the cornerstone of Goodyear – the largest tire company that is American-owned. Quality at Goodyear begins at the Technical Center in Akron, Ohio, home of Goodyear's impressive World Headquarters. The "Tech" Center is the tire industry's largest research and development operation in the world. It is also where the all-season tire was introduced to the world, and where the first radial was developed for America. Goodyear Technical Center engineers are proud of their involvement of the Goodyear full line of high performance tires. These tires have created a string of victories in national and international racing, untouched in recent years by any other competitor in the world. The knowledge learned from these wins has been translated into the development of a complete family of Goodyear Eagle passenger tires, part of the full line of Goodyear passenger and light truck tires, largest in the world.

Goodyear Quality. You'll find it in the tires produced by Goodyear, and in everyone who works for Goodyear, including your neighbors at your nearby Goodyear Auto Service Center or independent Goodyear dealer.

Shrimpers' kin win $43 million

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — An attorney for a chemical company says he will appeal a record $43 million jury award to the families of two shrimpers killed when they were overcome by sulfur dioxide gas on a boat two years ago.

John Black, attorney for General Chemical Corp., said the jury's verdict is out of proportion to the facts of the case.

The award included $30 million in punitive damages the chemical company must pay to Gonzalo and Amada de la Lastra, parents of Gustavo and Jose Eduardo de Lastra, who died aboard the M/V Wilderness on July 7, 1988.

General Chemical manufactured the sodium minobisulfite that had been sprinkled on the iced shrimp in the boat's hold to preserve the shrimp's color. The men died from inhaling the fumes.

"After the verdict came in, Mr. De la Lastra gathered all of the jury and told them that the money was not what was important. ... What was important is that no other family have to suffer the loss that he and his wife suffered," said Ray Marchan, the family's lawyer.

A similar case in 1973 also involved the death of two other sailors who were killed from fumes given off by the chemical in the hold of a shrimp boat, Black said.

Black said the labels were changed after the 1973 suit and that the men did not heed warnings on the package, and he said the $43 million award was not rational.

Execution stay granted

ABILENE (AP) — A man convicted in the robbery, torture and slaying of an artist here received a stay of execution Friday from a federal judge who said he needed more time to consider a motion by defense attorneys.

Wayne East was only five days away from execution for the 1981 murder of Abilene artist Mary Eula Sears. He was scheduled to die by lethal injection before dawn on Wednesday.

U.S. District Judge Sam R. Cummings also ruled that East's attorneys can file additional legal briefs to seek reversal of East's death sentence based on a decision issued by the U.S. Supreme Court last year.

East's execution has been put off indefinitely, Assistant District Attorney William Zapalac said.

"I'm not really surprised," Zapalac said of the stay. "After all, the federal court had appointed the Texas Resource Center to represent East and that appointment is not necessarily valid in state court. Obviously, the judge was going to allow them to do something."

Class-action suit OK'd

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A judge in a long-running higher education discrimination suit has ruled that the lawsuit can be filed as a class action suit on behalf of Hispanics in South Texas.

Judge Gilberto Hinojosa issued the ruling in state district court Friday.

The lawsuit was filed in 1987 for the League of United Latin American Citizens against Gov. Bill Clements by the Mexican-American Legal Defense Fund. It claims discrimination against Mexican-Americans in allocating higher education resources in South Texas.

The plaintiffs include LULAC, nine other organizations and 21 individuals who brought suit against the governor of Texas and the Texas commissioner of higher education as well as each of 13 systems of higher education.

Hispanics say accurate census crucial

By Kelley Shannon

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Some Hispanic leaders claim the government isn't sticking to a legal agreement to make up for an anticipated "undercount" of Hispanics and other minority groups in this year's census.

"Professional technocrats within the Census Bureau are being overridden by professional politicians," says Ruben Castillo of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, MALDEF. "There's a lot to be lost from our point of view."

At stake are federal funds and political power. Three or four U.S. House seats could be gained in Texas, where the Hispanic population jumped from 2.9 million to about 4.6 million over the last decade.

The federal government distributes about $38 billion a year according to the census findings, and communities stand to lose $200 annually for every resident who isn't counted.

Hispanics are fighting to make sure they get their share and say the continued growth of their political power could hinge on the count.

The legal fight is just part of their battle.

MALDEF OFFICIALS say they and other plaintiffs — including the League of United Latin American Citizens, black citizens' groups and the cities of New York and Chicago — are reviving a federal lawsuit against the government to force statistical adjustment of any undercount.

The Census Bureau acknowledges Hispanics were undercounted by 5 to 6 percent in 1980.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. district court in New York, was settled last year when the Census Bureau agreed to devise a plan for mathematically adjusting the 1990 census numbers if Hispanics and other groups can't be fully counted.

The plaintiffs reserved the right to revive the suit and now plan to do so, said Castillo, a Chicago lawyer for MALDEF. The census adjustment plans aren't objective, but based on partisan politics, he said Wednesday — a Republican administration vs. traditionally Democratic ethnic groups and urban residents.

Census officials say they recognize the importance of the Hispanic count and point to their own campaign for a full count.

"The 1990 census is the most important event to impact the national Hispanic community into the next decade — bar none," said Jose Bermea of the Census Bureau's promotions office in Washington.

The national Hispanic population has grown from 14.5 million to an estimated 22 million since the 1980 census. Some Hispanic leaders say the 1990 count could show a population as large as 32 million.

THE CENSUS Bureau has launched direct mailings, broadcast Hispanic media announcements, entered floats in parades at traditional Hispanic celebrations and set up the information hotline 1-800-CUENTAN, meaning "Count Yourselves." A census worker in South Texas even wrote Spanish songs encouraging people to respond.

In San Antonio, district census manager Emanuel O. Herrera hired people to collect forms door to door in their own neighborhoods. He believes familiar faces will get a better response.

But some say the Census Bureau made a big mistake by failing to make census forms readily available in Spanish. The Spanish forms are available only by special request.

"I think that was a major, major gaffe," Liz Flores, who chairs the Hispanic task force of the Dallas Complete Count Committee, one of the volunteer groups formed in a number of cities to coordinate census campaigns. "I think they just complicated the whole process by not doing it right from the start."

Those who doubt the Census Bureau's efforts are enough are launching their own campaigns.

Volunteers hand out fliers at groceries and churches in Hispanic neighborhoods, blitz broadcasters with public service announcements and write letters to editors.

HISPANIC GROUPS are setting up storefront offices where the curious and cautious can get information about the census and going to Hispanic churches after Sunday Mass or services to help people decipher census forms.

The biggest obstacle to census participation, Hispanic leaders say, is fear — of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, of law enforcement authorities and of losing privacy.

"Our community is a very private community when it comes to their family arrangement," Ms. Flores said. "There are some questions (on the census form) that even I felt rather uneasy answering, and I'm a professional trained with statistics.'

Bermea said the Census Bureau is trying to get out the word that census responses are kept private.

"Not the FBI, CIA — no one — can see the information on the census form. Not the president himself," he said.

But so far, the government has not convinced Hispanics they will be fully counted.

"It's not going to be an accurate count. That I can tell you for certain," said national LULAC President Jose Garcia de Lara. "All we can do is the best we can."

Voting laws

The law protects our right to equal representation:

- 14th amendment says apportionment of the House of Representatives will be based on the whole number of persons in each state
- One-person, one vote principle says election districts of equal population so each person's vote has equal weight
- Voters Rights Act prevents any voting practice including redistricting that discriminates by race

Arkansas, Duke first of Final Four

Razorbacks drive last stake through 'Horns

Associated Press

DALLAS — Arkansas finally — finally — shook Texas on Saturday.

Now, next to going to the Final Four in Denver, the best thing for Arkansas is not having to see the Longhorns there.

"The University of Texas, without any question, is the best team we've played all year," Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson said after the seventh-ranked and fourth-seeded Razorbacks beat Texas 88-85 for the Midwest Regional championship Saturday.

"There's no question about it," Richardson said, "if Texas had been in the other division, we'd probably be meeting them in Denver."

It is Arkansas' first trip to the Final Four since 1978, when the Razorbacks lost 64-59 to eventual champion Kentucky in the semifinals. In Denver next Saturday, the Razorbacks (30-4) play No. 15 Duke, a 79-78 winner over No. 3 Connecticut in the East Regional.

At least it's not Texas.

The Longhorns gave Arkansas all it could handle in their two meetings during the Southwest Conference season, losing 109-100 in Fayetteville and 103-96 in overtime in Austin.

This one was no different.

Even after Lee Mayberry keyed a second-half run that put Arkansas in control with a 16-point lead, the Longhorns rallied and had a chance to tie when Travis Mays missed a 3-pointer with 18 seconds left.

Only when Ron Huery, shooting in place of Arlyn Bowers, sank two free throws with 16 seconds left could the Razorbacks really start hollering "pig sooey." Those free throws made the score 88-83 and made Winn Shepard's shot with two seconds left academic.

"This team has so much heart and character, we know we're gonna make another run," said Texas coach Tom Penders, who nearly put the Longhorns (24-9) in the Final Four for the first time since 1947.

Comebacks are nothing new to Texas. The 10th-seeded Longhorns had rallied to win their three previous NCAA games, against Georgia, Purdue and Xavier. They had overcome a 16-point lead to beat Xavier by 13 in the regional semifinals.

"At no time during the game did I panic, or the team or the coach," Texas guard Lance Blanks said. "Until the final buzzer, we thought we had a chance to win the game."

Arkansas held Texas to 34 percent shooting in the first half and led 43-36 at halftime. Lenzie Howell carried the Razorbacks, scoring 14 first-half points.

Howell made Arkansas' first basket of the second half, but was poked in the eye and had to leave the game at the 18:17 mark with the Razorbacks leading 45-41.

Duke's Christian Laettner brandishes a pair of victory scissors following the Devils' one-point win over Connecticut Saturday at the Meadowlands in New Jersey.

UConn's hopes dashed at the buzzer

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Duke stole Connecticut's magic at the buzzer with its own magic at the Meadowlands and made the Huskies disappear from the NCAA tournament.

Christian Laettner hit a double-pumping, 15-foot jumper as time ran out in overtime Saturday to give the Blue Devils a 79-78 victory in the East Regional championship game and send them to the Final Four for the fourth time in five years.

It was yet another incredible ending in a most incredible tournament, in which a third of the games have been decided by three points or less and five have gone into overtime.

"There were an incredible number of big plays made and we made the last one," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "If the horn hadn't sounded, they probably would have made another one and won the game."

Duke's last three trips to the Final Four also routed through the Meadowlands, where the Blue Devils are now 11-1 overall, 8-0 in the NCAA tournament. The Blue Devils are the first team to make the Final Four three straight years since Houston in 1982-84.

No. 15 Duke (28-8), which finished second in the Atlantic Coast Conference and lost in the second round of the postseason tournament, will play the Texas-Arkansas winner in the national semifinals at Denver next Saturday.

Connecticut, which lived by the buzzer, died by the buzzer.

The third-ranked Huskies (31-6), who tied for the Big East regular-season championship and won the conference tournament, beat Clemson in the regional semifinals on Tate George's basket at the buzzer. George was almost the hero again Saturday, just missing a game-saving interception before Laettner's winning shot.

Duke beat Connecticut at its own game. The Blue Devils had three more steals (9-6) and seven fewer turnovers (12-19) than the Huskies, who forced 75 turnovers in their three tournament victories and fell two short of the single-season NCAA record for steals — 486 by Oklahoma in 1987-88.

Still, it appeared that Connecticut was going to pull off another improbable victory when Duke's Alaa Abdelnaby was called for goaltending on a missed free throw by Nadav Henefeld with 1:28 left. The free throw was ruled good and Henefeld then hit the bonus for a 78-77 lead.

George had a chance to extend the lead when he missed a 3-pointer with 11 seconds left. Duke rebounded and called timeout with 2.3 seconds remaining after George almost intercepted a pass but slapped the ball out of bounds instead.

"Is there a lot of resentment out there? Baseball has an instantaneous therapeutic effect. But I am here to visit the camps, and healing is part of it. I'd like to visit all the camps, but can't do it. I'll speak to players, but I have no plans to speak to 'the' players as a group. I don't detect any problem with them. Aquadawgs bring home the bronze

Seay, Houston establish school records en route to medals

Staff Report

AUSTIN — Midland High's Matt Seay and Matt Houston swam into state medal history here Saturday with each bringing home a third place from the state swim meet.

Senior Seay posted a school record 56.83 to finish third in the 100 breaststroke while sophomore Houston had a school record 50.49 for a third in the 100 butterfly.

This was Seay's first state medal after three trips to the state meet in his career while Houston was making his first journey through state waters.

Seay was in a particularly tough event since Ryan McKinney of San Antonio Lee (56.59) and second place finisher Richard Ou of Richardson Berkner (56.45) both beat the old state record of 56.82. Seay was just one-hundreth of a second off the old state mark.

Houston, who had hoped to break the 50-second barrier in the 100 fly, came up a little short in that quest as he was beaten by San Antonio Churchill's Murray Easton (49.12) and Conroe McCullough's Jay Martin (46.69).

UIL Swimming

But medals are hard to come by at this level and MHS swim coach Larry Ridge was really pleased.

Both Seay and Houston improved over times posted in Friday's qualification for the finals. Seay had a 57.27 Friday and went into the finals seeded fourth. Houston, too, was seeded fourth after his Friday time of 50.83. Both improved to grab the medal.

"Only California ranks ahead of Texas in high school swimming and the times turned in down here are incredible. Everything is just about a school record and state records were falling like crazy," said Ridge.

Seay, Houston, Moss Fennell and Rob Neatherlin also turned in a school record 1:38.40 in the 200 medley relay for a sixth place finish in the finals.

Midland High sophomore Carrie Henry, in her first state test, finished first in the consolation heat of the 50 freestyle with a school mark of 24.80 and was sixth in the 100 free consolation with a 54.87.

Fennell had a school record time of 4:43.38 in the 500 free consolation for fifth place. Houston was also sixth in the 100 backstroke consolation with a 54.73.

Midland Lee's 400 free relay team of Stephanie Reed, Kerri Stiles, Mimi Morrison and Adinda Kelder placed 14th overall with a 3:56.99.

Midland High scored 44 points in the meet to finish eighth in the state.

Conroe McCullough dominated the girls division while their male counterparts shared the boys team title with San Antonio Churchill.

Conroe McCullough crushed the girls field by scoring 175 points. Plano was a distant second with 75 points and San Antonio Madison third at 68.

In the boys division, San Antonio Churchill won the day's final event, the 400-yard free-

Parental meddling ruins youth sports leagues

In Selden, N.Y., the local Little League baseball organization has been put on hold.

Price

It seems a dispute between the parents of the youth sports organization are in a feud over who has the right to run the organization. The children are not allowed to play any games until the matter has been settled in a court of law.

In Irving last week, a coach of a team consisting of 11-year-olds was so upset with the officiating he began making obscene gestures and yelling profanities.

After the game, the opposing coach refused to shake hands with this pillar of the community, which resulted in a pushing match between the coaches. A brawl between the parents of team members ensued, and the Irving police were hailed to break up the melee.

Isolated incidents?

Last fall in Midland — Texas, not Michigan mind you — right here in your back yard, a youth soallish nine-year-old. The young boy was overrun twice in the game by a child at least 20 pounds heavier. After the second time, the smallish boy stayed on the ground for a few minutes trying to collect his wits.

A mother from the opposing sideline yelled that the smallish boy was faking an injury and that he had no business being on the field in the first place. Truly an exhibit of sportsmanship at its finest.

Time was when a kid wanted to partake of some kind of sport, all he had to do was go the neighborhood vacant lot — every neighborhood had one — where he could find all his buddies playing some variation of baseball or other sport.

The only time a parent's voice was heard was when it was supper time or bed time.

Oh, kids would say that they wanted to win, but the true pleasure was derived from the playing of the game itself, from learning how to cleanly field a baseball after it had taken a bad hop off one of the many rocks in the ungroomed lot.

They policed themselves, fessing up to their own fouls in a schoolyard basketball game, and had not yet learned to yell profanities at game officials.

Parental involvement (some may call it interference) has left youth sports in, at the most optimistic of terms, a state of confusion. What do our children gleen from the supposed acts of love? How to be hateful, disrespectful and downright obnoxious?

It is time we examine how we act and react to officiating, coaching and the opposition as our offspring head into this, the busiest of all youth sports seasons.

I was always under the impression that youth sports programs were to help build self esteem and awareness of team effort, building character if you will. But if it causes a nine-year-old boy, my son, to almost be reduced to tears because an adult called him a faker, maybe the kids ought to forget organizations and return to the vacant lots (if they all haven't been paved over).

NCAA TOURNAMENT

HOGS: Illness doesn't slow Mayberry

(From 1C)

"I think we all recognized that Lenzie was out and maybe we could make a run," Penders said.

Instead, Arkansas made the run. Mayberry, who had only seven points in the first half, scored seven straight and 11 of his team's 14 during one stretch as the Razorbacks widened their lead to 70-54 during the next seven minutes.

It was disclosed after the game that Mayberry, the team's second-leading scorer, played with strep throat.

"It goes to show you the character of this basketball team," Richardson said. "He played, and he played his heart out."

After falling behind by 16, Texas began its comeback. A 7-0 run brought the Longhorns to 70-61, and they continued to chip away from there.

A 6-2 run made it 77-71 with 4:41 to play, and two free throws by Joey Wright brought Texas to 82-78 with 1:37 left.

Then Howell, who had scored only on a free throw since his return, came through big. The senior from Dallas made two free throws then followed a missed shot with a dunk to give the Razorbacks an 86-78 lead with 1:05 left.

Texas wasn't finished, though. After Howell missed the front of a one-and-one situation, Blanks made a 3-pointer to make it 86-83 with 34 seconds left.

Then Todd Day missed a one-and-one for Arkansas and Texas got the ball with a chance to tie. But Mays missed his 3-pointer and Arlyn Bowers was fouled on the rebound. Bowers hurt his wrist, so Richardson inserted Huery to take the free throws. Huery, a 79 percent free throw shooter, made both.

As a result, Arkansas can make its reservations for Denver and the Final Four.

"They had a little bit more than our kids and were left standing at the end," Penders said.

Connors State takes JUCO title

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) — Sabastian Neal scored 32 points as Connors State set a championship game record for most points scored in beating the College of Southern Idaho 103-87 Saturday for the national junior college championship.

It was the most points scored since Tyler, Texas scored 93 in 1951 and Midland, Texas matched the total in 1982. It was the most points scored by two teams in the title game since Midland and Miami Dade North combined for 181 in 1982.

Champlain, Vt. beat Three Rivers, Mo. 76-68 for third place in the National Junior College Athletic Association tournament. Pensacola, Fla. took fifth place by beating Kankakee, Ill. 73-71 and San Jacinto, Texas edged Odessa, Texas 113-112 for seventh place.

Freshman phenom Kenny Anderson, right, Georgia Tech's guard already hailed as the best player out of New York City since Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. Anderson was involved in the most controversial play of the 1990 NCAA Tournament Friday night.

Spartans burned again by buzzer

Heathcote relives horror of four years ago at Kansas City

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS, La. — Never mind what replays showed, Kenny Anderson said Saturday that the only controversy about his controversial game-tying shot in Georgia Tech's overtime win over Michigan State was whether it was a 3-pointer or a 2-pointer.

The replays said otherwise, indicating the shot came after the final buzzer and should have given Michigan State a 75-73 win in the Southeast Regional semi-final. Coach Jud Heathcoate of the Spartans, who ended up on the losing end of a timing controversy for the second time in five years, said the same thing.

Anderson's 18-footer, ruled a 2-pointer, gave Tech a 75-75 tie with the Spartans and sent the game into overtime. The Yellow Jackets then won 81-80 in overtime to reach the final eight against Minnesota, which upset No. 6 Syracuse 82-75, assuring a first-time Final Four appearance for whichever teams win on Sunday.

Television frame-by-frame replays showed that Anderson's shot clearly came after the buzzer. But he said he had no doubt.

"The controversy to me was was it a 3 or a 2." the masterful point guard from New York City said. "I heard the buzzer. When the buzzer sounded, it was out of my hands."

The replay also showed Anderson's foot was on the 3-point line. Referee John Clougherty first ruled it a 3, but umpire Charles Range, who had two fingers pointing down when Anderson went up, changed the call.

It was the second time a timing controversy had hurt Michigan State in a regional semifinal.

In 1986 at Kansas City, the Spartans were leading Kansas with about two minutes remaining when the clock failed to run for 15 seconds.

Kansas scored a tying basket with nine seconds remaining, then easily won 96-86 in the extra period.

"I still think we won the game in regulation, but we lost it in overtime," Heathcote said of the loss to Tech.

Heathcote said after the game that he thought the television instant replay should be used to settle such controversies.

He got support Saturday from Minnesota coach Clem Haskins, but none at all from Tech's Bobby Cremins.

"We need to go back and look at a replay because there's too much at stake," Haskins said, citing the big money that goes to schools each game — about $280,000 per game.

"Absolutely not," Cremins said of the replay idea.

"We got three officials out there," Cremins said. "They get paid well. How can you describe a tenth of a second?"

Cremins said he thought his remark after the game that Tech had been fortunate to win was interpreted as referring to Anderson's controversial basket.

"That had nothing to do with the clock situation," he said. "We're not playing well and we've shot horribly. I don't understand how we continue to win.

"Kenny's shot was right on the borderline," Cremins said. "When it's that close, it's got to count."

Anderson also removed any doubt that he was considering an early exit from Tech to play in the NBA.

"I'm staying around for three years. I'm not even thinking about the pros," he said.

That will be godd news to Cremins.

For Anderson has been one of the key reasons Tech has forged a 27-6 record.

Cremins said was he deeply concerned about the expectations others had for Anderson's freshman season, even though he was high school player of the year last season and considered the best prospect from New York since Lew Alcindor, now Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, two decades ago.

"I really thought Kenny Anderson was going to have a lot of problems," he said. "I really though he'd have some horrible games."

Instead, he has been a model of consistencey.

He's averaging 20.5 points per game in Tech's Lethal Weapon 3 that also includes Dennis Scott's 27.3 average and Brian Oliver's 21.3 — an integral part of what has become the top perimeter game in the nation.

"He has met all the expectations," Cremins said. "He's had a great year."

Cremins doesn't want his young star to forget one thing.

"I keep telling him he's only as good as his last game," Cremins said.

DUKE: Second win over UConn in quarters

(From 1C)

Laettner inbounded the ball, took a return pass from Brian Davis, dribbled once and swished the game-winner.

"There wasn't much time to think," said Laettner, a 6-foot-11 sophomore who scored 23 points on 7-for-8 shooting. "I was ready to lob it to Alaa Abdelnaby. Give Davis credit, he got the ball back to me. I shot and it went in."

UConn coach Jim Calhoun said he was concerned with Laettner, Abdelnaby and Phil Henderson on the final play.

"We were floating a man trying to cut off Henderson from the baseline and also looking for a back-pick to Abdelnaby or a return pass to Christian," Calhoun said. "As far as Laettner hitting the shot, there was nothing we could do. It was a double- or triple-clutch, and he hit it."

Duke, which led by as many as 11 points in the first half, had a chance to win it in regulation when Abdelnaby took a lob pass and missed an open tap-in at the buzzer.

Abdelnaby, from nearby Bloomfield, N.J., led the Blue Devils with 27 points and 14 rebounds.

"I don't know if this was my best game, but it certainly was the most special," Abdelnaby said. N.J.

Abdelnaby said the Blue Devils don't win because of the Meadowlands, but rather because of when they play there.

"We're prepared to play well at the end of the season," he said. "We know how to play in big games. We have a lot of experience.

"I think the guys do have a familiarity with this court. There is a sense of being comfortable here."

Henefeld and John Gwynn scored 15 each for Connecticut, the third top seed to fall in a tournament marked by upsets.

Connecticut, whose only other trip to the quarterfinals of the NCAA tournament ended in a 101-54 loss to Duke in 1964, led 69-64, with 3:55 left before the Devils scored seven straight points. Henderson, who finished with 21 points, hit a 3-pointer with 54 seconds remaining to put Duke up 71-69.

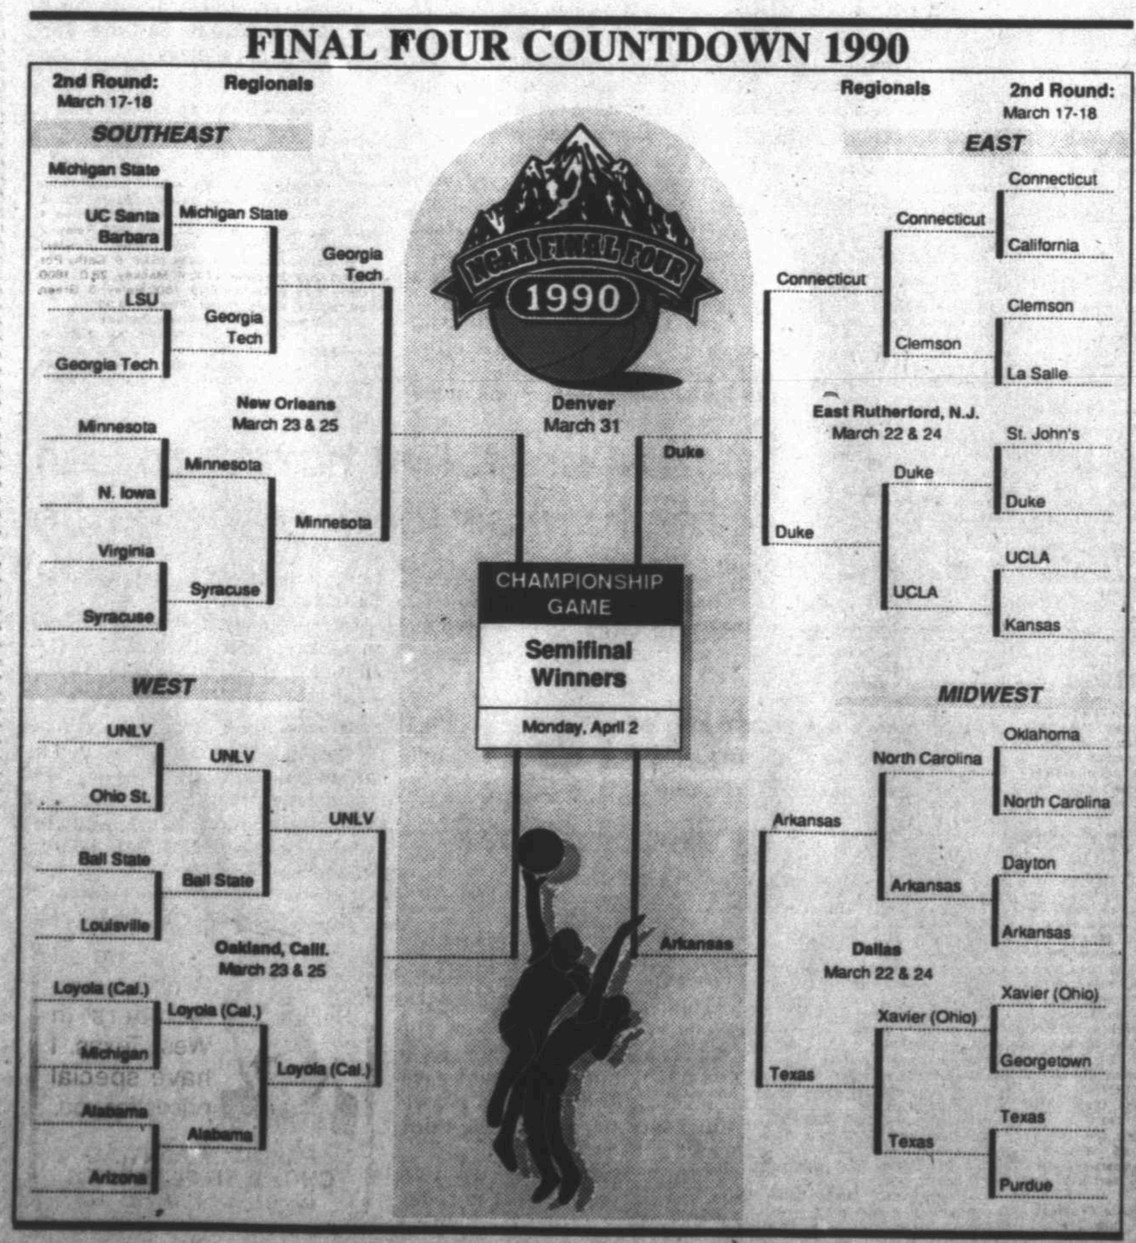
Bobby Hurley, the freshman point guard who won the New Jersey high school championship on this same floor a year ago, made one of two free throws with 16.8 seconds left for a three-point lead, but Chris Smith's 3-pointer with 9.4 seconds to go tied it.

Rod Sellers then blocked a shot by Hurley and the clock ran down to three-tenths of a second, setting up Abdelnaby's desperation shot high off the backboard.

Hurley was 0-for-9 from the field andscored only three points, but his steady ball-handling against the UConn press was crucial.

"Anyone who doesn't think Bobby didn't have a good game doesn't know basketball," Krzyzewski said.

FINAL FOUR COUNTDOWN 1990



LMU can't stay in slow gear

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Loyola Marymount managed to beat Alabama by scoring in a full game what it usually gets in a half. It figures to take more than those 62 points for the sentimental favorites to overcome Nevada-Las Vegas, who didn't get the nickname "Runnin' Rebels" by holding the ball.

Despite the success Alabama had in slowing down the usually relentless Loyola Marymount offense, UNLV may be psychologically and physiologically incapable of playing at a snail's pace.

As Rebels coach Jerry Tarkanian is so fond of noting, "We're the Runnin' Rebels, and we'll always run."

Nevertheless, Tarkanian insists Sunday's NCAA West Regional final between Loyola, which is assured of setting an NCAA record for scoring this season, and second-ranked UNLV won't be a track meet.

"It's not going to be the racehorse game you guys are projecting," Tarkanian told the media Saturday. "Oklahoma and Loyola would be a game like that. We're not going to try to outrun them. But we're not going to slow the game up, either, the way Alabama did."

Alabama, employing a deliberate style that at times resembled a four corners stall, held Loyola Marymount to half its season scoring average in Friday night's regional semifinal. But Loyola prevailed 62-60.

Alabama repeatedly passed up open shots and 2-on-1 opportunities, opting to use up the clock, depriving Loyola of possessions and disrupting the frenetic pace the Lions prefer.

"We'll take the open shot when we get it," Tarkanian promised. "My biggest concern is getting through their press and getting 3-on-2 and 2-on-1 opportunities and hitting those shots. If we miss, they're going to come down and pop a 3-pointer on us real quick. We've got to hit the majority of those easy shots. I think we will, but there are no guarantees."

"We're a running team, also," Rebels guard Greg Anthony said.

UNLV played Loyola Marymount in the preseason NIT in mid-November, and Vegas won 102-91. UNLV starting center David Butler and reserve forward Moses Scurry didn't play because they were academically ineligible, and Loyola had Hank Gathers, who died of heart failure in a game on March 4.

"That game has no significance to this one," Tarkanian maintained. "The teams are different. Because of Hank, Loyola is playing with a lot of emotion which they didn't have before. They're shooting much better than they were at the start of the year."

Baseball '90: So many questions, so little time

Managers find the clock ticking faster and faster as opening day approaches

By Murray Chass
N.Y. Times News Service

Will Dave Winfield, Kirk Gibson and Dwight Gooden be ready for the start of the season?

Are Carlos Baerga, Eric Anthony and Ben McDonald ready to take their places as major league starters?

Do Gary Carter, Dan Quisenberry and Bill Buckner have enough left to warrant being given jobs?

Can Rick Aguilera adjust to a pivotal new role?

Can Lou Piniella learn enough about his new team and new league to jolt the Cincinnati Reds out of their underachieving existence?

In an ordinary baseball year, general managers, managers and players have six weeks of spring training, including a month of exhibition games, to find answers to critical questions about injured players, new players, aging players and repositioned players.

This, however, is no ordinary year, a 32-day lockout having elevated (or plunged) it to extraordinary status.

This year, there are only two weeks of exhibition games to find answers to these and other critical questions facing teams for the 1990 season.

Beginning Monday, teams are scheduled to play a total of 186 games, 45 percent of the originally scheduled 412 exhibitions.

Does that mean that clubs' brain trusts have only a 45 percent chance of getting it right?

Some may use that ratio as an excuse at the end of the season, or even as the season progresses. But in all likelihood, the good general managers and managers will get it as right in less than half the time as they would have if they had all of the time, and the others will get it as wrong.

The brain trusts have one advantage in their decision-making process that they ordinarily don't have.

Because teams can carry 27 players for the first three weeks instead of the limit of 25 or their self-imposed limit of 24, general managers and managers will have five weeks to make the difficult choices between players close in talent or between an older player and a younger player.

Not surprisingly, general managers do not agree on the prospect of an active trading period in the weeks ahead.

"The last month and a half, everything has been suspended," Joe McIlvaine, a New York Mets vice president, said. "In the next couple of weeks and the first three weeks of the season, I think the activity could be heavy."

But Lou Gorman, the Boston general manager, said: "I don't think there will be much trading. Maybe some, but not much. There's not much talking going on."

What follows is a look at some of the most important questions to be answered in each division.

NATIONAL LEAGUE EAST

The Mets have to find out if one of their six starting pitchers, Gooden, will be ready in two weeks.

The Montreal Expos have to find nearly an entire starting rotation.

The St. Louis Cardinals, too, must find out about the status of some of their pitchers. They don't have five established healthy starters, either.

Gooden, returning from a shoulder problem, does not have to rush because the Mets' starting corps is so deep, but the Expos and the Cardinals don't have that luxury.

The Expos lost Mark Langston, Bryn Smith, Pascual Perez and John Candelaria to free agency. They will look for replacements in such people as Dennis (Oil Can) Boyd and Joaquin Andujar, a pair of reclamation projects, and a flock of youngsters named Mark Gardner, Howard Farmer, Mel Rojas and Brett Gideon. They will also watch as Larry Walker moves into Hubie Brooks' spot in right field.

The Expos had hoped to see what another rookie, Delino DeShields, could do in the middle of their infield, but time may be against him.

Time, too, will reduce the chances that Danny Cox and Greg Mathews will be ready to open the season in the Cardinals' starting rotation. Neither pitched last season. Manager Whitey Herzog's task won't be as difficult as the one Buck Rodgers faces in Montreal, but he'll have to do some scrambling. One of the jobs will belong to Bob Tewksbury if he has a few good outings between now and April 9.

The Chicago Cubs will look at the physical status of Andre Dawson, their leader, and Damon Berryhill, their catcher. They will also study Luis Salazar and Curtis Wilkerson at third base.

That position in Pittsburgh will belong to Jeff King if he shows he can handle it. Bobby Bonilla, who committed 67 errors at third the past two seasons, has moved to right field.

The Mets hope they have a "new" right fielder, at least a rejuvenated version of Darryl Strawberry, who had a poor season and a worse off season.

He will play alongside a new center fielder, Keith Miller, unless Miller disappoints the Mets and prompts them to look elsewhere for a more established player.

The Mets must also decide how to use Mike Marshall: at first base in place of or in platoon with Dave Magadan, or somewhere in the outfield.

NATIONAL LEAGUE WEST

The division's senior manager and its newest manager have significant questions for which they will seek answers in the next two weeks, but the questions are of different natures.

Tom Lasorda of Los Angeles has to find out about his returning wounded and decide where they and others will play.

Lou Piniella has to determine what he can do to revitalize the Reds after their fall under their fallen legend, Pete Rose.

Kirk Gibson and Kal Daniels are Dodger outfielders coming back from knee surgery. If they are healthy, Lasorda may move Hubie Brooks from right field to third base, displacing Jeff Hamilton.

Juan Samuel would like to displace Willie Randolph at second base, but Lasorda would prefer to have Samuel in center field. The manager would like to see Jim Gott in his bullpen, but Gott has to show his right elbow is sound after surgery last year.

Piniella has his own pitching rehabilitation to watch because neither Danny Jackson nor Jose Rijo pitched in the last two months of last season.

Piniella also has to work out a plan for his relief tandem of Rob Dibble and Randy Myers, who replace John Franco as the Reds' closers.

In Scottsdale, Ariz., Roger Craig of San Francisco, the pennant-winning manager, will play with his pitching staff, hoping to bolster the unit that let the Giants down in the World Series.

Perhaps part of that project will be the appearance of Gary Carter behind the plate. If Carter, jettisoned by the Mets, can catch half of the time, he could help improve the staff.

Carter once was the league's best catcher, just as Dan Quisenberry was once baseball's best relief pitcher. He has two weeks to prove to Craig that his submarine delivery can still undermine opposing batters.

The San Diego Padres, strengthened by the addition of Joe Carter, have one major question, but it can't really be answered until the season begins. The Padres want to know if Craig Lefferts will be able to replace Mark Davis as their game-saving relief pitcher.

The Houston Astros will have to make a quick decision on the status of Eric Anthony, their promising rookie outfielder, who batted only .180 in 25 games with them last season but hit .300 in Class AA of the minor leagues.

AMERICAN LEAGUE EAST

Let the division contender who is without question throw out the first exclamation point.

The New York Yankees present so many questions for Bucky Dent, their soon-to-be-beleaguered manager, that the answer man could be their most valuable player.

Familiar names atop PGA Nestle

Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — Greg Norman, Curtis Strange and Scott Hoch took different routes to the same place — a share of the lead after three rounds of the Nestle Invitational.

Hoch, the second-round leader by one stroke, shot a 2-under 70 but dropped back into a tie with a double-bogey on the 17th hole. Norman, who had a 68 on Friday, matched the day's best round with a 65, while Strange improved by four shots to a 68.

Hoch was coasting along at 11-under going into the par-3, 219-yard 17th. Even his tender left hand, recovering from tendinitis, was feeling OK. Then disaster struck.

On a hole where getting over the water generally isn't difficult, Hoch plunked his 2-iron shot 30 yards short of the green into the water.

"I could feel it (his hand) then," he said.

He double-bogeyed, allowing Strange and Norman to start talking about how they could win on Sunday.

"It was a good day ... I knew I had to shoot in the 60s," said Norman, who recovered from an opening-round 74. "And it will have to be in the 60s to win tomorrow."

"I didn't play as well as the last couple of days, but a 68 at Bay Hill is not bad," Strange said. "If I hole a few putts, I'll be satisfied. It could be tough out there tomorrow."

Hoch salvaged a share of the lead by parring the par-4 18th at the 7,114-yard Bay Hill course, considered one of the toughest finishing holes on the PGA Tour.

Norman tied South Africa's Fulton Allem for the day's best round with a seven-birdie, no-bogey effort.

Allem used a hole-in-one on the 192-yard second hole as a springboard for his round, which also included six birdies and a bogey, and was in a four-way tie at 208.

Greenwood seventh-graders place second

Staff Report

KERMIT — Pecos beat Greenwood, 143-107, for the seventh grade title here over the weekend in a junior high track meet while Crane won the eighth grade division with 160 points as Greenwood finished fifth.

In the seventh grade, Greenwood posted three victories with Indavong Phonosa winning the 100 in 13.98, Jesse Saunders winning the 600 with 1:42.60 and Blake McPherson taking the triple jump with a 33-11.

Shawn Sayles posted a 40.52 in the 300 to take a Greenwood win in the eighth grade.

BASEBALL: Time is of the essence for teams

(From 4C)

In the next two weeks, Dent has to determine if Dave Winfield is ready to play, and if so, if he is ready to play left field; if Mike Blowers, a rookie, is ready to take over third base, and if the collection of pitchers can result in a legitimate starting rotation.

Cito Gaston, like Dent, laden with an abbreviated schedule in his first spring training as manager, will scrutinize several elements of the Toronto lineup, many of them involving younger players.

He has to decide if John Olerud is ready to be the designated hitter, if Junior Felix and Glenallen Hill can handle a right-field platoon and if Pat Borders and Greg Myers can do the same as platooned catchers. Then there are Jimmy Key and Al Leiter, left-handed pitchers, who are coming back from shoulder surgery.

This exhibition schedule may not provide the Milwaukee Brewers with enough time to get their returning injured ready. The biggest question could involve second base. If Jim Gantner isn't ready to return there, Manager Tom Trebelhorn will have to choose between Dale Sveum and Gary Sheffield, both of whom have played shortstop for him.

The Brewers also have to find out if Greg Vaughn, a rookie, is ready to play left field and if he is, what to do with Rob Deer or Glenn Braggs.

In the Boston camp, they'll be watching Carlos Quintana and Bill Buckner at first base and various pitchers, including Eric Hetzel.

Baltimore's brain trust has to decide if the hard-throwing Ben McDonald, the No. 1 selection in the draft, is ready for full-time work in the majors as a starting pitcher.

Cleveland has two rookies to watch, but no one doubts that one of them, Sandy Alomar Jr., a catcher, is ready. The other is not so certain. He is Carlos Baerga, the third baseman acquired in the Joe Carter deal.

Managers can judge pitchers' arms and hitters' bats, to a great extent, in the spring, even if they have only two weeks. Leadership is another matter; that takes time to develop and produce results. Nevertheless, the Brewers will look for it from Dave Parker and the Cleveland Indians from Keith Hernandez. The Indians, though, don't figure to give Hernandez as much help as Parker will have in Milwaukee.

AMERICAN LEAGUE WEST

No one need feel sorry for the champion Oakland Athletics, who have limited time in which to find replacements for the lost free agents Parker, Tony Phillips and Storm Davis. Nevertheless, it is a project that will keep the Athletics from becoming complacent.

Manager Tony La Russa, for example, has to decide if he wants Todd Burns in the starting rotation as Davis's replacement or in the bullpen, where he has flourished.

Scott Sanderson is linked to that decision because he will probably take the spot Burns doesn't have.

Pitching is a subject of scrutiny for the California Angels, not because they seek it but because they think they have enough to trade a starter for a hitter. They will use this time to search for that hitter, then decide if they would rather trade Mike Witt or Kirk McCaskill.

It's also time for the Angels to decide if they want to trade one of their second basemen, Johnny Ray or Mark McLemore.

The Kansas City Royals don't have many questions, but one is whether they want to try to preserve George Brett's health by making Brett more of a designated hitter than a first baseman. That's why they acquired Gerald Perry during the winter.

They are also ready to make Bo Jackson the center fielder, so they'll have to test Willie Wilson's reaction to a demotion.

Minnesota's main questions involve pitching, though the Twins would like to figure out how to return the fire to Gary Gaetti's play.

The biggest move the Twins are making with their pitching is in the bullpen, where Rick Aguilera has been designated as Jeff Reardon's replacement in game-saving situations.

But what about the starting rotation? Manager Tom Kelly will be the most interested observer when David West, Kevin Tapani, Mike Dyer and Park Pittman pitch in the Twins' 15 exhibition games.

In the Texas camp, the Rangers will try to determine if Chad Kreuter is ready to be the full-time catcher, if Jeff Kunkel or Fred Manrique can claim the everyday shortstop job and if Scott Coolbaugh can nudge Steve Buechele out of his job at third base, thus making him available for a trade.

NBA ROUNDUP

Chambers' 60 leads Phoenix

San Antonio downs Detroit for fifth straight

Associated Press

Tom Chambers scored a team-record 60 points, including an arena-record 35 in the first half, as the Phoenix Suns routed the Seattle SuperSonics, 121-95.

Chambers is only the 14th player in NBA history to reach the 60-point mark. Utah's Karl Malone did it earlier this season, scoring 61 against Milwaukee on Jan. 27.

Chambers, an All-Star forward who previously had a career-high and club-record 56 points on Feb. 18 at Golden State, broke both marks on two free throws with 6:58 to play for a 100-78 lead.

He reached 60 points on a 17-foot baseline jumper with 3:08 to play for a 108-86 bulge and was then taken out of the game by coach Cotton Fitzsimmons tto a standing ovation.

Chambers, a ninth-year pro, finished with a career-high and club-record 22 field goals in 32 tries along with 16 of 18 free throws. His previous best was 20 field goals in the Warrior game, in which he also had a club-record 40 first-half points.

Spurs 105, Pistons 98

Terry Cummings scored 40 points Saturday night, leading the San Antonio Spurs to their fifth consecutive victory, 105-98 over the Detroit Pistons.

David Robinson had 24 points and nine rebounds while Rod Strickland had 19 and had nine assists as the Spurs handed Detroit's its second straight setback. Detroit was led by Mark Aguirre's 17 points, Isiah Thomas' 16 points and Joe Dumars' 15.

The Spurs saw their lead trimmed to 100-98 with 42 seconds left but Willie Anderson, who scored only seven points, converted a three-point play with 25 seconds remaining. Robinson added two free throws, then blocked Bill Laimbeer's 3-point try with 10 seconds to go. Cummings finished the scoring with a free throw.

Celtics 115, Knicks 110

Patrick Ewing scored a career-high 51 points but the Boston Celtics outscored New York 22-4 during the six minutes he was out of the game and defeated the Knicks for their fifth consecutive victory.

Reggie Lewis scored 31 points for the Celtics, who posted their first five-game winning streak since the 1987-88 season. They had four previous four-game winning streaks since then.

The Knicks have lost six consecutive games, including seven of nine at home after winning 22 of their first 24 at Madison Square Garden.

Lewis scored 14 points and Kevin McHale nine of his 27 in the fourth quarter for the Celtics, who outscored the Knicks 30-11 after trailing 89-78 in the first minute of the period.

Cavaliers 115, Nets 108

Steve Kerr, the NBA leader in 3-point shooting percentage, sparked a 39-point Cavalier second quarter by making all four of his 3-point attempts, as Cleveland beat New Jersey to send the Nets to their 10th straight defeat.

The Nets have lost 29 of 32 overall and 23 consecutive games on the road.

Bucks 109, Magic 101

Ricky Pierce scored 34 points and the Milwaukee Bucks held Orlando to 19 points in the final 14 minutes to rally over the Heat.

Pierce, the top scoring sixth man in the NBA at 23 points per game, had 11 in the fourth quarter when the Bucks fell behind 88-77 before going on a 32-13 surge. Orlando led 95-93 on Otis Smith's layup with 4:45 to go but was outscored 16-6 the rest of the game.

The victory ended a two-game losing streak for Milwaukee, which trailed 56-47 after shooting 36.4 percent from the field in the first half.

76ers 114, Bullets 112

Ron Anderson's basket with 56.1 seconds left in a low-scoring overtime period held up as the Philadelphia 76ers defeated the Washington Bullets.

Anderson got the winning basket on a jumper from the right side and the Bullets were unable to score on two chances in the final seconds. Before Anderson's shot, each team had scored only two points in the extra period.

The 76ers used an 20-9 run over the final 8:12 of regulation to tie the game 110-110. Philadelphia's Johnny Dawkins missed a 20-foot jumper at the buzzer.

The victory was the fourth straight for the Atlantic Division-leading 76ers, who remained 1½ games ahead of Boston. The Bullets have lost nine of their last 13.

Hawks 122, Hornets 109

Dominique Wilkins scored seven of his 38 points in a 14-2 run at the start of the fourth quarter, leading the Atlanta Hawks over the Charlotte Hornets.

The Hawks took the lead for good 86-84 on Cliff Levingston's layup with three seconds left in the third quarter. Then, they went on their 14-2 run to take a 100-86 lead with 8:41 left and end a three-game losing streak. Atlanta led by as many as 19 points.

Kings 116, Bulls 113

Wayman Tisdale's 10-foot jumper with seven seconds left gave the Sacramento Kings an upset of the Chicago Bulls.

The victory was only the sixth for the Kings in 34 road games while the Bulls lost for the fifth time in 32 home games.

Warriors 102, Rockets 97

Mitch Richmond scored 13 of his 28 points in the fourth quarter, including five points in the last 31 seconds, as the Golden State Warriors beat the Houston Rockets.

With the score 95-95, Richmond put the Warriors ahead for good with a 3-point basket with 38 seconds left. Tim Hardaway and Richmond each made a pair of three throws to secure the victory.

The Rockets took an 88-84 lead with 3:30 left after three consecutive 3-pointers by Sleepy Floyd. But the Warriors rallied to lead 91-90 with 1:50 left on five straight points by Terry Teagle.

Another 3-pointer by Floyd gave the Rockets their last lead 93-91 with 1:27 remaining.

Houston led 40-36 at the half and 73-63 going into the fourth quarter.

Teagle had 26 points and Hardaway added 17 for the Warriors.

Floyd led Houston with 25 points, including four 3-point baskets in the fourth quarter. Akeem Olajuwon had 22 points and 12 rebounds and Mitchell Wiggins and Vernon Maxwell each had 13 points for the Rockets.

Trail Blazers 140, Nuggets 126

Clyde Drexler's 28 points led four Portland players with more than 20 and the Trail Blazers rallied from a 13-point first-period deficit to beat the Denver Nuggets.

Leading 117-115, Portland put the game away with a 15-2 spurt for a 132-117 lead with 2:45 left. Kevin Duckworth re-entered the game following a rest and contributed six of his 24 points in that stretch.

Jerome Kersey had 26 points and 12 rebounds while Terry Porter had 22 points and nine assists as the Trail Blazers pulled within two games of the Los Angeles Lakers in the Pacific Division.

The Nuggets, paced by Michael Adams' three 3-pointers and Dan Schayes' 10 points, built a 37-24 lead with 2:41 left in the first period. The Blazers used a 16-6 burst and cut it to 43-40 after one period.

Ryan trains harder as years go by

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. — Nolan Ryan has made it official — he doesn't expect to be pitching in the major leagues in the year 2000.

Ryan's feats have been so herculean, many fans likely believe he could pitch another 10 years.

But Ryan thinks by the time he's 53, the flame finally will have gone out of his history-making fast ball.

Ryan admits he has to start his preseason program earlier now and work longer to get in shape and the fast ball has cooled off to about 95 miles per hour.

"My off-season is more intense now and I put more into it because of my age and the fact that I want to maintain a certain level," Ryan said.

"No, I don't expect to be pitching in 10 years. I'll stay in the cattle business and I'll be involved with baseball in some way. You don't spend as much time in it has I have and just walk away."

What is important for American Leauge hitters to understand is that Ryan will pitch this season and he has another milestone within reach.

In 1989, Ryan became the first pitcher to record 5,000 career strikeouts and he's now within 11 victories of 300 career victories.

"If I'm fortunate enough to accomplished that, I'll get the kind of satisfication that I did winning 20," Ryan said. "That kind of puts you in an elite group."

Ryan had back-to-back 20-victory seasons in 1973 and 1974 but hasn't won 20 games in a season since then.

"Winning 300 is a longevity accomplishment so I'd get a lot of satisfaction out of that," Ryan said.

The shortened spring training won't affect Ryan's conditioning. He did his rigorous off-season program as always.

"The only thing the delay meant was I couldn't throw to hitters," Ryan said. "I did all the other work that I usually do. When I'm ready to compete, I'll tell them and they'll work me in there."

Ryan compiled a 16-10 record and 3.20 earned run average in his first season with the Rangers.

He went into the eighth or ninth inning five times with no hitters and he completed six games, his highest total since finishing 10 with Houston in 1982.

Ryan became the all-time strikeout king April 27, 1983 when he struck out Montreal's Brad Mills for his 3,509th strikeout, eclipsing Waltger Johnson's record.

Ryan reached 4,000 strikeouts July 11, 1985, fanning the Mets' Danny Heep. He reached 5,000 Aug. 22, 1989, by striking out Oakland's Rickey Henderson.

Last year was a dream-like season, even for Ryan, and it came after he left the Houston Astros in a contract impasse.

Showing the Astros he could still pitch was not a part of his motivational makeup last season, Ryan said.

"I certainly didn't have anything to prove to them, I never gave that a thought," Ryan said. "I guess if there's one thing you wanted yo do, it was to perform well for the people that had the confidence to bring you over here."

Ryan's work ethic has left little for pitching coach Tom House to do.

"He's a pitching coach's dream," House said. "As a pitching coach, there's not much coaching involved. He tells you what he likes to be reminded of and you become a reminder more than a teacher."

Royals shore up already tough pitching staff

Associated Press

HAINES CITY, Fla. — When Kansas City, already equipped with Bret Saberhagen, won the Mark Davis free agent sweepstakes, it gave the Royals a unique combination — the previous season's two Cy Young winners on the same pitching staff at the same time.

That's never happened before, so all winter Manager John Wathan heard the same old refrain.

"People kept saying," he said "'I guess you'd better win this year, or you're gone.'"

That's the spirit, folks. When in doubt, fire the manager.

So tell us, skip, feeling any ... uhh ... pressure?

"If I were in New York, I might," Wathan said.

"Pressure is making $10,000 a year and trying to feed seven or eight kids. This isn't pressure. This is a great way to make a living. This is fun."

Still, Wathan knows the Royals — who also added Storm Davis and Richard Dotson to their pitching staff — have a formidible arsenal of arms, one that management anticipates can win now. The expectations are great.

"I'll tell you what," Wathan said. "It beats coming down here hoping your club can figure out a way to finish fifth. A lot more managers get fired finishing fifth or sixth than get fired finishing first or second.

"If it works, great. If it doesn't, it doesn't."

The Royals were second a year ago, seven games back of World Series champion Oakland. And for Saberhagen, that took some of the luster off his second Cy Young Award, earned on 23-6 season with a 2.16 earned run average.

"The first time I won it, we were world champions," he said, "and that made it more satisfying. Winning it again was a nice achievement, but you don't start a season thinking about that as the major objective."

Mark Davis won his Cy Young by producing 44 saves in 48 opportunities with San Diego last year. Storm Davis won 19 games for Oakland. Wathan says Dotson, once a 22-game winner for Chicago, could be a sleeper for the Royals.

It adds up to plenty of pitching — baseball's most important commodity. But pressure? Hey don't say the P word around here.

"Pressure," General Manager John Schuerholz said, "is when you don't have good players and can't compete. That's pressure. Having talented players is no pressure at all."

Pitching coach Frank Funk considered the staff that starts with last season's two best two pitchers and decided that it is more comforting than challenging.

"It's like Eddie Arcaro on Man O' War," Funk said. "I'll take my chances. I'd rather be riding him than some old mule."

Attitudinal changes in bass signal start of spring

Spring has definitely sprung. If the results of the Permian Bass Club's March tournament are any indication, the bass have obviously moved up into shallow water and taken on their spring aggressiveness that we all know and love. The 85 Permian members who fished the March 10-11 tournament at Lake Amistad weighed in an impressive 532.86 pounds of bass. That's over a six-pound per angler average, far different than the one fish, or less average than many West Texas tournaments produce.

Black

Twenty pounds is almost a sure bet to win a two-day club tournament in West Texas, and many are won with much less, but in this tournament one angler brought in over 23 pounds of bass and failed to place in the Top 3 overall.

The winning stringer of 27.46 pounds was weighed in by Galen Weirhausen. No single bait accounted for most of the hefty stringers, with many varieties of spinnerbaits, plastic worms and lizards taking the fish.

Permian is West Texas' biggest bass club by far and it is not unusual to find 100 members fishing in one of their club's tournaments. While most club-level tournaments have small prize money (if any), Permian's size and 100 percent entry fee payback at club tournaments allows members to compete for good cash prizes. A $20 entry fee entitles a member to compete in all categories of a tournament, and Permian pays several places for total weight each day, the biggest bass each day, and the top three places in two-day overall weight.

In the club's February tournament at Lake Spence, last year's club champion, Frank Whitley, accomplished the unheard-of feat of having the heaviest stringer each day, the biggest bass each day, and the best two-day overall weight. Two-day winnings for his 22.23 pound stringer totaled $825. Not bad for small-time club fishing.

Permian's size also allows them to bring in some well known guest speakers for club meetings. At it's April meeting, the featured speaker will be John Hope. Hope is an East Texas fishing guide and outdoor writer who has gained national attention for his tracking of trophy-size bass. Using surgically implanted homing devices in the bass, Hope's tracking has provided some interesting results, many of which contradict what has been generally believed about how really big bass live. Permian has extended an invitation to all interested anglers to attend the meeting, to be held April 12, 7:30 p.m., at Odessa' American Legion building.

There is no door charge. For more information, contact club president Steve Theesfield at 366-1570.

George Foreman turns philosopher

Former champ tries to get present champ to take notice

"There is a tide in the affairs of men, which taken at the flood leads on to fortune; omitted, all the voyage of their life is bounded in shallows and in misery." — Julius Caesar, Act IV, Scene III, as recited by George Foreman.

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — George Foreman is concerned that Buster Douglas isn't aware of the ebb and flow tendencies of the heavyweight division.

He's taken to spouting poetry and mounting a campaign to help Douglas survive the nuances of being heavyweight champion.

The conclusion according to Foreman's logic, of course, is that Douglas' best move would be to fight Foreman for the heavyweight title and the sooner the better.

But he can't get any response from Douglas or dethroned champion Mike Tyson.

"Who was the hottest thing in the world awhile ago and who is it now?" Foreman asked, wiping perspiration from his brow after a morning workout at his northside gym.

"Before you know it, the tide is going to roll out on them. What they are doing is allowing me to steal their thunder."

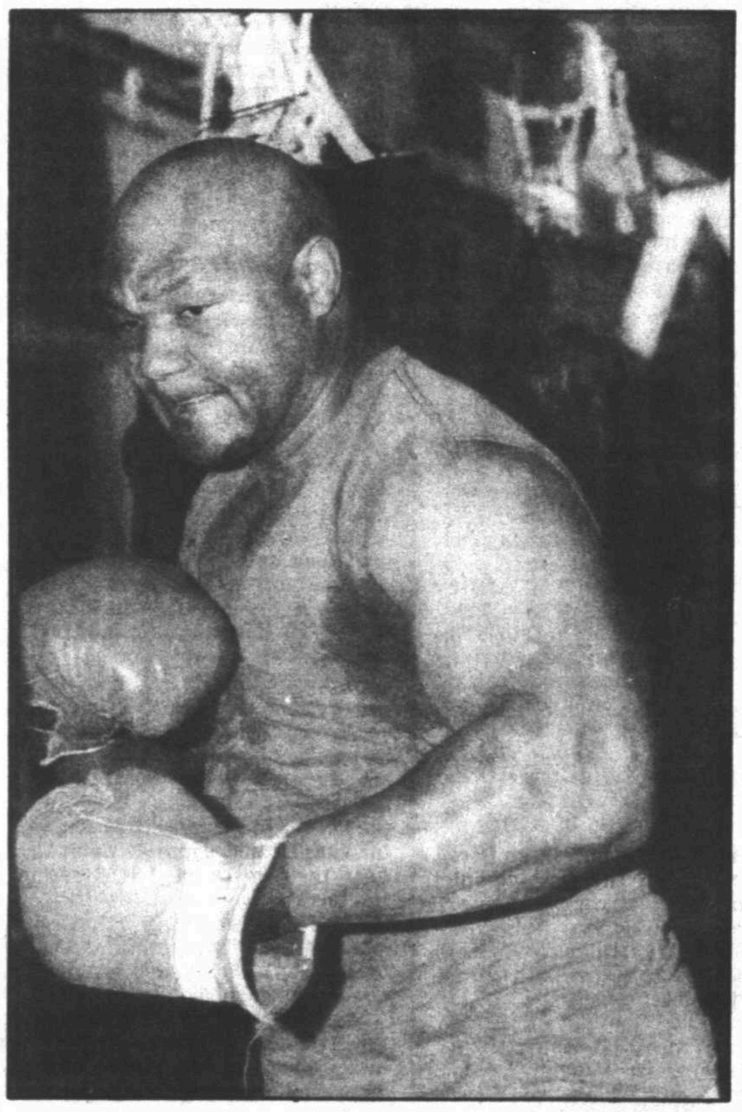
While Douglas and Tyson haggle over millions, Foreman plans to continue fighting for whatever he can get in hopes of creating a groundswell of support that will lead to a title shot.

"While they're deciding over all these million-dollar dealings, I'm going to be out there fighting and stealing their fans," Foreman said.

Foreman, 41, says the younger contenders shouldn't expect time to catch up with him.

"I'm going nowhere," Foreman said. "I'm getting better. I'm better than I was a year ago."

Douglas sees no need to defend his title before September and he has announced no plans to consider Foreman as an opponent when he does.



AP Laserphoto

Former heavyweight boxing champion turned Shakespeare buff George Foreman.

The champion has said Tyson and Evander Holyfield are the only contenders.

"I won't be pushed aside because Buster Douglas has the title belt now and as beautiful as it is and as important as it is, he can't eat it," Foreman said.

"He can make more money fighting me than Holyfield," Foreman said. "He could sign tomorrow to fight George Foreman and make more money."

Foreman spent months building up a grudge match between himself and Tyson only to have Douglas win the title in a shocking 10th-round knockout on Feb. 10.

Now Foreman has to start over and build up Douglas and he's taking his message to the media.

"I would be eating beans, rice and hard cornbread today if it hadn't been for the media," Foreman believes. "I'm a product of the media. They made me."

Foreman caught the public fancy in the 1968 Olympics when he paraded around the ring waving an American flag a time when anti-American sentiment was high.

Now he hopes his flag-waving for Douglas will bring him another chance to fight for the title.

It's going to be tough, Foreman says.

"The fella is a bore," Foreman said. "He could be at a party and no one would know he's there. He's a nice guy but nice guys are only good at home. His poster could put people to sleep.

"I've got to make a personality out of him so everyone will want me to go get him. Everybody is still wanting me to get Tyson because they don't know who Douglas is. He's not even an issue right now."

Foreman said he had a natural campaign for Tyson because of the former champion has a dynamic persona.

"I was attacking the reign of terror that Tyson had going," Foreman said. "But Tyson is dynamic. He doesn't talk but he's like some human beings who can be still and they are still dynamic.

"You can see them and feel the motion. That's what Tyson has."

Horns represented in NCAA swimming championships

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Michigan's Brent Lang, Kirk Stackle of Texas and Stanford's Jeff Rouse, each seeking his second victory at the NCAA men's swimming and diving championships, were the fastest qualifiers Saturday in preliminary heats.

Lang, who successfully defended his championship in the 50-yard freestyle Thursday, was the fastest qualifier in the 100 freestyle at 42.87 seconds. Defending champion Shaun Jordan, in the same heat, was second at 42.89.

Rouse, who won the 100 backstroke Friday, began defense of his 200 title in 1 minute, 45.62 seconds. The sophomore, regarded as the top backstroker in the world and swimming in the same heat as Olympian Martin Zubero of Spain, representing Florida, went out in 24.42.

Rouse completed the first half of his heat in 51.10. Gary Anderson of Southern Cal, swimming in another heat, was second at 1:45.98, followed by Zubero at 1:46.22.

Stackle, who successfully retained the 100 breaststroke championship Friday night, was the top qualifier in the 200 breast at 1:55.12. Defending champion Michael Barrowman of Michigan, who was in an earlier preliminary heat, was next at 1:55.55.

Tennessee's Melvin Stewart, the defending butterfly champion at 200 yards, had the best time of 1:44.19 in qualifying for the finals in that event.

Texas appeared ready to claim its third consecutive championship. The Longhorns, with 360 points in the first two days of competition, had led second-place Southern Cal by 69 points heading into Saturday night's final events.

Texas qualified five swimmers for the finals. Southern Cal, trying to give Coach Peter Daland his first team title since 1977 and his 10th overall, also had five swimmers in the finals and one in the consolation.

Both schools qualified for the 400 freestyle relay finals. Southern Cal posted the fast time of 2:55.73 and Texas was third best at 2:56.49 behind Florida's 2:56.29.

Southern Cal also had freshman Brian Earley move into the final of the platform diving in fifth place with 483.20 points. Scott Donie of Southern Methodist, who won the 3-meter event Friday, was leading with 605.65, followed by William Hayes of Michigan at 515.60.

UNM Lobos guard against repeat of history

Associated Press

St. Louis has been using New Mexico for motivation in its second straight trip to the final four of the National Invitation Tournament. Monday night, it becomes a full-fledged challenge.

A year ago, the Billikens eliminated New Mexico in the NIT's quarterfinal round by rallying from a 20-point halftime deficit. This year, they face the Lobos in the semifinals at Madison Square Garden.

Vanderbilt, (19-14) meets Penn State (24-8) in the opener Monday, followed by the rematch between New Mexico (20-12) and St. Louis (20-11). The winners meet Wednesday night for the NIT title.

St. Louis reached the NIT championship game last year, losing to St. John's, 73-65. And the significance of the Billikens' win over New Mexico, accomplished on the Lobos' home-court, carried over to this season.

"We use it in the locker room if we're behind," St. Louis coach Rich Grawer said of last year's 66-65 win in Albuquerque. "We always say, 'Hey, we came back against New Mexico. We can do it.'"

It took New Mexico the better part of this season to get over the loss to the Billikens. The Lobos were 10-11 in late January, the product of their inability to hit free throws in tight situations and a series of lost leads reminiscent of last season's NIT collapse.

But New Mexico salvaged the season by winning seven of its final eight regular season games for a record seventh straight NIT bid. The Lobos now have won 10 of the last 11, including an impressive 80-58 quarterfinal win Friday over a Hawaii team that won 25 games this year. In the aftermath of that win, the Lobos' first thoughts turned toward St. Louis.

"They spoiled our trip to New York last year," said point guard Darrell McGee. "I don't want to say its a revenge game, but it's one we want very badly."

New Mexico, with four starters back from last year, is led by 7-foot-2 junior center Luc Longley. A member of the Australian Olympic team, Longley can dominate inside, evidenced by his seven blocks and 19 points against Hawaii.

St. Louis' offense revolves around forward Anthony Bonner (27.9 points and 13.7 rebounds). The Billikens will also try to offset Longley's presence with 7-foot freshman Melvin Robinson.

Vanderbilt and Penn State have made it this far more on hard work than athletic talent. Vanderbilt defeated Louisiana Tech (98-90), Tennessee (89-85) and New Orleans (88-65) en route to New York, while Penn State beat Marquette (57-54), Maryland (80-78) and Rutgers (58-55).

Penn State, like New Mexico and St. Louis, is toughest in the middle, where center Ed Fogell (6-9, 200) averages 15.5 points a game.

"Ed has been like a rock for us all year," says Penn State coach Bruce Parkhill. How well he plays against Vanderbilt will go a long way in determining our chances of winning."

Vanderbilt has won seven of its last nine games, and according to Parkhill, mirror the Nittany Lions.

"Their approach to the game is very similar to ours," Parkhill said. "They play multiple defenses but do a lot more trapping than we do. But offensively, they're very similar."

Vanderbilt coach Eddie Fogler agrees the two teams match up well.

"They are not great running and jumping athletes and neither are we," he said.

Hoosier hoop fans set record

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — A national record crowd of 41,046 jammed the Hoosier Dome Saturday for a double dose of "Hoosier Hysteria" — the 80th Indiana boys high school basketball championship.

Damon Bailey of Bedford North Lawrence was the big attraction for many fans who wanted to watch the Naismith high school player of the year.

The old record for a high school boys basketball championship was 24,764, set at the University of Kentucky's Rupp Arena in 1987.

"When we decided to move it here, we were thinking mid-30s. We're extremely pleased," Gene Cato, commissioner of the Indiana High School Athletic Association, said of the huge crowd.

Indiana's Final Four, a sellout for the 62nd straight year, had been played at Market Square Arena (17,490 capacity) from 1975-89, Indiana University's Assembly Hall (17,500) from 1972-74 and Butler University's Hinkle Fieldhouse (15,000) from 1928-71.

Cato said the move to the Hoosier Dome was prompted by the ever-growing demand for tickets. Also, last week's NCAA Midwest Regional was held at the Dome using the same configuration as the boys' tournament, which allowed the NCAA and IHSAA to share the cost.

"Our attendance has certainly outdrawn the NCAA last week," Cato said.

NCAA Women

AUSTIN — Barbara Bolden and speedy guards Shantel Hardison and Sheila Ethridge filled in as scoring star Venus Lacy was held to 16 points, and Louisiana Tech charged into the Final Four of women's basketball Saturday with a 71-57 victory over Texas in the NCAA Midwest regional championship.

No. 1-ranked Tech, 32-0, trailed 38-36 with 11:32 left in the game and led only 42-40 with just under nine minutes to go, but wore down No. 8 Texas on the Lady Longhorns' home court.

It is the fifth time in eight years that Tech has eliminated Texas, 27-5, from the playoffs. Tech Coach Leon Barmore is 7-0 against Texas Coach Jody Conradt, the winningest coach in women's basketball.

A Bolden follow shot stretched Tech's lead to 44-40 and, after a Texas basket by Vicki Hall, Annie Lockett hit a 3-pointer for a 47-42 Tech lead.

Hardison scored 19 points and was voted the outstanding player in the tournament.

Aggies complete sweep of Raiders

SWC Baseball

Rich Robertson and Pat Sweet threw complete games for Texas A&M as the Aggies swept Southwest Conference foe Texas Tech, 9-0 and 3-1.

The Aggies improved to 28-7 overall and 3-0 in the league. Tech fell to 21-14 and 2-4.

Texas A&M scored seven runs in the third inning of the opener. Six of them were unearned because of errors. Bubba Johnson, 4-3, was credited with the loss.

Tech outhit Texas A&M 8-7 in the second game. Mike Adams had his third home run of the year for the Red Raiders.

Texas 2-8, Baylor 1-5

Texas rallied for six runs in the bottom of the eighth in the second game of a doubleheader with Baylor for an 8-5 victory that completed a sweep of the Southwest Conference foe.

Texas, which won the first game 2-1, improved to 27-10 and 3-0 in conference, while the Bears fell to 22-12 and 0-6.

In the second game, Baylor struck for four runs in the top of the third on the strength of four consecutive singles.

However, the Longhorns chased Bear starter Glenn Neville in the eighth and scored the three go ahead runs off of losing reliever Frank Folyton, 4-1.

Chris Gaskill, 5-2, was the winner in the second game, allowing Baylor only one hit in the final four innings.

In the first game, Brian Dare, 3-1, recorded the first complete game of his career in limiting the Bears to five hits.

Scott Ruffcorn, 5-3, went the distance for Baylor, striking out four and walking seven.

Arkansas 6-0, Houston 4-6

Left-hander Vaughn Eshelman held seventh-ranked Arkansas to three hits and Chris Tremie and Ricky Torres hit home runs to lead Houston to a 6-0 Southwest Conference victory in the nightcap of Saturday's doubleheader.

Arkansas won the first game 6-4 on a two-run, two-out double by Bubb Carpenter.

style relay, to force a tie with Conroe McCullough at 104 points. Plano was third with 101.5 points.

Four new state records were set Saturday at the University of Texas Swim Center.

San Antonio Madison's Indira Allick erased a four-year record in the girl's 50-yard freestyle by covering the distance in 23.24 seconds. The previous record was 23.35 by Jeanne Doolan of Duncanville.

Plano broke its day-old record in the 200-yard medley relay. Jamie Mott, Mark Howard, Mike Kelly and Jamie Gyde swam 1:34.10 to beat their mark of 1:34.56 set in Friday's prelims.

Jason Fink of Freeport Brazoswood swam the 200-yard freestyle in 1:36.83, beating the mark of 1:37.24 that Josh Davis of San Antonio Churchill set in Friday's prelims.

Fink also set a new standard for the 100-yard freestyle. His 44.18 time broke the previous record of 44.42 set by Doug Dickinson of Amarillo in 1989..

Three other records fell in Friday's prelims.

'Horn sophomore sets new world javelin record

Associated Press

Texas sophomore Patrik Boden set a world record in the javelin throw Saturday with a toss of 292 feet, 4 inches on his first attempt in a quadrangular track meet.

"I felt it was going to be the best throw in my life when the javelin went up," said the 22-year-old Boden, who is the defending NCAA champion in the event.

Boden's throw surpassed the world record for the shorter-distance javelin of 287-7 on May 31, 1989 by Jan Zelezny of Czechoslovakia. The International Amateur Athletic Federation will wait 24 hours and require that Boden pass a drug test before Saturday's throw can be certified as a record.

The new-model javelin, redesigned to travel a shorter distance, has been used in competition since 1986. The record for the old model javelin used until 1985 was 343-10 by Uwe Hohn of East Germany in 1984.

Boden, a native of Karlstadt, Sweden, last Saturday set an NCAA javelin record with a throw of 271-7 in Los Angeles in a triangular meet with Fresno State and UCLA. It was his first meet of the season.

The meet Saturday was between Texas, Southwest Texas State, Indiana and Baylor.

Boden, 6-2 and 226 pounds, said the throw seemed "unrealistic."

"It is so far that I really can't believe that it's happened," he said. "I had no idea I was going to throw this far — this is crazy."

Boden said he has been pointing his javelin lower as he throws, resulting in more consistent tosses. He said the tailwind during Saturday's meet was "perfect," although he was a little cold under overcast skies.

"When there's a performance like this, everything is perfect — conditions, the attitude, the training, the technique," said Texas throwing coach Mike Sanders. "When you add all four of those things together, you're going to get a monster throw."

Sanders said now that the 290-foot barrier has been broken, Boden and other competitors in the javelin will aim for 300 feet.

Boden, who is aiming for the 1992 Olympics, will be the first Swede to hold the javelin record since 1928.

Jager blasts world record

NASHVILLE, Tenn (AP) — Tom Jager earned $12,000 in 21.81 seconds Saturday by setting a world record while beating Matt Biondi in a 50-meter match race at the U.S. Swimming Sprint Championships.

Jager won $10,000 for beating Biondi, the 1988 Olympic gold medalist, and picked up another $2,000 for the world record.

Biondi finished second in 21.85 in the inaugural Sprint Championship. Both bettered Jager's world record of 21.98 seconds, set in the semifinals.

"I'm still learning about the 50 free," Jager said, "I was surprised I felt so relaxed out there and went 21.9 in the second race."

Biondi and Jager will meet again Wednesday night in Iowa City, Iowa in a "Dash For Cash."

PART-TIME $$$$$ AVAILABLE APRIL 1

Effective April 2, the Midland Reporter-Telegram will become a morning newspaper instead of an afternoon newspaper. As a result we have several routes which will need to be re-filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Due to this one-time large number of routes becoming available, now is the best time ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 50% adult and 50% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a part time job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $150 to $500 monthly! Some motor routes make even more, although currently none are expected to be available. Depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Some collecting in person will be necessary though.

When do the papers have to be delivered by?

6:00 am Monday - Friday, and 7:00 am Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

Country Charmer

By JILL HANCOCK

Trying to develop the potential of a home or a specific piece of property can be an endless task. Its similar to keeping a house tidy — after organizing one kitchen drawer, often times it is hard not to end up cleaning out all of the cabinets too. The same is true of updating and remodeling a house.

Originally, this week's featured home included two bedrooms, one living area, a dining room and kitchen. Today, it has been enlarged to contain over 3,200 square feet and has an upstairs sequestered master bedroom with a marvelous bath and a spacious game room. And just last year, the kitchen was totally remodeled.

Located south of Midland on two acres of land, this home also affords its residents the tranquility of country living.

Shades of blue color the game room which will delight all family members. A walk-in wet bar, hot tub and a sitting area by a fireplace are the amenities of this spacious area.

The sequestered master bedroom is located above the game room and affords lots of privacy for parents.

A tub is angled in the corner of the master bath. Skylights brighten this area and mirrors reflect many elegant appointments.

The exterior of the home, which has lots of space in front of the house for horses to roam, is surrounded by a fenced yard. The foyer of the home steps down into the living area. A corner brick fireplace serves as the focal point in the room. An entertainment cabinet is inset along the adjacent right wall. This room also has paneled walls and a vaulted ceiling.

Situated around the corner to the left of the front entrance, the dining room displays a contemporary style of decor. The wallcovering in this room has a white background with red, black and gray accents. A red moulding is place at mid-wall and two windows frame the front yard.

Please see CHARM/2D

CHARM: New addition adds to home's appeal

(From 1D)

A breakfast bar divides the kitchen and the dining room. This colorful kitchen, which was remodeled one year ago, features red counter tops and white laminated cabinets. The Kenmore appliances include a ceramic cooktop, microwave, a double self-cleaning oven and dishwasher. A window which is center along one wall views the side yard and an area above the kitchen sink overlooks the living area.

The utility room adjoins the kitchen and is spacious enough for an additional refrigerator or freezer. Many cabinets also allows extra space for kitchen items.

To the right of the living area, a corridor leads to the children's bedrooms. The first bedroom has three windows, two walk-in closets and a private bath. Three of the walls in this room are painted blue and the fourth wall is highlighted by a galaxy wallpaper.

A soft shade of yellow warms the walls in the second bedroom. A striped wallpaper in primary colors accents the yellow walls and a walk-in closet is spacious enough for storing children's toys and clothing.

A guest bath with a shower is situated in the hall between these two bedrooms.

The living room opens onto the game room which is decorated in shades of blue. This room is ideal for entertaining friends of all ages — children will enjoy playing video games with friends, fathers will like to challenge each other with a game of pool and mothers will enjoy relaxing in the enclosed hot tub. This addition to the home was made in 1986 and was designed to accommodate all family member's needs.

A fireplace is inset along the back wall and is perfect for a cozy sitting area. Cabinets with bookshelves are inset on either side. A small office is concealed in one corner of the room and a door leads to a sequestered side yard. With the safety of small children in mind, the hot tub was designed with a glass door which can be locked when not in use. This area has two cedar walls which have windows that frame the backyard. Plants will also thrive in this room. A walk-in wet bar is very convenient for serving guests and features a mirrored wall, glass shelves, a Corian marble top and brass fixtures. An atrium door that is situated by the sitting area and wet-bar leads to the back yard patio.

A staircase in the game room winds its way upstairs to the sequestered master suite. This area is decorated in a light hue of gray and mauve with two walls featuring a textured paper in complimentary shades. This room has space for a sitting area, in order for parents to have a place that they can relax in at the end of the day.

The master bath has an oversized tub angled in the center of the bath. Mirrored walls and skylights highlight this entire area. To the left, a make-up area and a built-in shower are situated. A tile vanity with two sinks are located to the right of the bathtub. Customized walk-in closets were designed as dressing areas, one by the shower and the other by the vanity. A gray wallcovering with mauve accents adorns the walls in the bath.

First Realty of Midland/Better Homes and Gardens is offering this country home for $105,000.

The wallpaper in the dining room, above, displays the contemporary feel of the kitchen and dining room. Two windows overlook the front yard.

This home has two spacious bedrooms that are ideal for children. At left, blue walls and lots of windows highlight this bedroom which has a private bath.

Langston Realtors Talk About..

Real estate market

What's happening in the market? Last week I wrote about a stronger, more active market. Perhaps one of the most significant indications of this is the increasing number of multiple, simultaneous contracts on a single property.

Langston

Within the past two weeks our office has experienced this on five different homes. As the price ranges varied all the way from $77,500 to above $350,000, this is obviously a market phenomena created by lower inventory, rising demand and competitively priced properties. The $77,500 home was a well-planned, four bedroom near the college needing some carpet replacement, but otherwise in nice condition. It had been for sale for a year with another firm at a higher price that allowed for redecorating costs. When our associate Marilyn Wier took the listing, she recommended competitive "as is" pricing, placed it on our office caravan, talked up the enormous possibilities and, voila, in less than a week, she had four contracts written by other Langston associates!

Other homes receiving multiple contracts include a corporate listing neat Quanah Parker that Nonnie Buller and Billie Sherman both had customers for, another corporate property on Neely with five contracts and an executive, other office listing in Trinity Estates that three Langston associates were writing offers on. While receipt of multiple offers on a property is every seller's dream, it is always a more difficult situation for Realtors and a disappointment for the non-successful potential buyers.

Some suggestions to buyers finding themselves in this competitive situation:

- If the listing is in our office, we will always let all parties know that more than one offer has been presented. This is not to put any purchaser in a "bidding" situation but it is an attempt to put each on the same basis enabling them to make informed decisions on amending their offer or answering to counters. Do let me emphasize that the terms of each offer and counter offer are totally confidential and cannot, nor will not, be disclosed to anyone except the individual principal parties and Realtors involved in each separate contract.
- Sellers may accept any one contract, may counter to any, or may counter to all. It is totally a seller's option and decision. He may choose to negotiate on the first contract, the highest or the one that seems to him to be the strongest, i.e. all cash, an 80 percent rather than 90 percent loan, buyer paying all closing costs, etc.
- Realtors cannot advise prospective buyers on the amount of an offer or counter offer to make; however, selling agents if requested can and will provide a prospective purchaser with information on competitive properties that are sold or are on the market, enabling a prospective buyer to make his own informed decision.
- Realtors are obligated to present all offers to a seller, even in the midst of negotiation on another contract.

What's New — Gloria Lott has just listed a charming property in the historical "Heritage Area" now being developed. Sure to please buyers desiring our more established neighborhoods, this lovely three bedroom home is located on three city lots on south "M" street. The owners are Steve and Ruth Ann Forsdick who purchased the home from Gloria in 1987 and have done a beautiful job of refurbishing, including the addition of a new roof, air conditioning and refinishing the lovely hardwood floors. Other amenities include beautiful trees, a water well, two living areas, an apartment or guest house and lots of lovely space!

New in the Corporate Department is a pretty four-bedroom, three-bath home in the Fairfax cul-de-sac. Lots of space, new vinyl being installed, a great family plan and a wonderful price of $99,900. The beautiful traditional exterior is most appealing. Not new to the market, but situated in the next cul-de-sac is Evalyn Hall's (now Mrs. Bob Halverson) custom built three-bedroom. Marketed at $106,000, this extremely spacious home is in exquisite condition, has a new roof, beautiful large yard divided into play and entertainment areas, and a huge master with plenty of space for a separate sitting library or desk area. When Bob and Evelyn married, we helped them find a lovely new home in Saddle Club North Estates, sold Bob's previous home and now we have Evalyn's on the market.

Sold: More about our busy agent Gloria Lott, she just sold Ron and Dianne Hoff their first home purchase — a pretty corporate property on Princeton. The Hoffs moved our way from Odessa. Ron is with Computech and Dianne is with Midland American Bank. Also sold were more homes by our office in February than any other office in the city! And soon-to-be-sold, the fourteen additional properties that our agents have put under contract just this week! We are enormously proud of our firm and our associates; we are not only the largest real estate company in the city, but also each month usually the top seller! If you are buying or selling, we'd appreciate your giving us a call.

Melton discusses advantages of RE/MAX

Jan Melton

There are several interrelated statistics which point to the major problem in the real estate business, according to Jan Melton of RE/MAX of Midland. "One statistic shows that eight out of 10 people who enter the real estate business leave real estate within two years. A second, from the National Association of Realtors, is that only about 10-15 percent of the people who call a real estate company as a repeat customer or as a referral. And a third, again from NAR, is that the average annual income of full-time real estate salespeople is around $10,000."

"What these statistics imply," Melton said," is that real estate is a high turnover business dominated by inexperienced and part-time sales associates who are not in the industry long enough to develop a solid base of client referrals and repeat business. Without such a base for continious business, the average sales agent is therefore unable to make a substantial income."

RE/MAX has changed the way brokers have handled their agents in Midland and all over the country. "The question we repeatly heard and still do, is: 'What's a RE/MAX?' Then once they hear the story, they say the so-called 100 percent commission concept is the way of the future for professional real estate agents."

The RE/MAX 100 percent commission concept does, of course, affect all areas of the company's operation, from fee structure to advertising and all other programs and services. An exclusive and entreprenurial concept. RE/MAX stresses the independence and initiative of each individual agent, allowing each virtually unlimited freedom to succeed, the degree of success limited only by an individual agent's abilities, determination and hard work.

"RE/MAX" stands for real estate maximus, a fitting name for what it offers its sales associates. The RE/MAX 100 percent plan is simple: in exchange for sharing in the monthly office overhead, RE/MAX sales associates retain 100 percent of commissioned earned.

The RE/MAX concept itself, continued Melton, with its specific fee structure determines the kind of agent who would join and remain with RE/MAX in the first place. The part-time or inexperienced agent who is comfortable within a conventional commission split company is predictably intimidated by the monthly shared office expenses and by paying his or her own personal expenses. The top producer, on the other hand, who is an experienced, full-time agent who professionalism leads to repeat and referral business, can regard RE/MAX as an opportunity of at least doubling their income, as well as having the benefit of being in business for themselves, not by themselves. An office filled with high producers is a vital and synergetic environment for high production.

"All in all, I think we've proven our original thesis: if you build a program centered around top-notch professionals, success is virtually assured. While Carolyn Boyd who started our company ain 1986, feels as I do, RE/MAX could not have become the company it is today with the momentum it now has if all it had to offer top producers was increased profit. Professionals want the support of professional real estate services, such as corporate relocation and referral programs, group advertising and a unique international image," explained Melton.

To understand how this real estate concept will affect the homeowner or buyer of real estate in Midland, Melton concluded, "if your real estate agent is a top producer, he or she will sell your house in a shorter period of time, if the property is priced at market value. The seller will receive a professional agent who knows the market and will work to the seller's best interest. If you are buying a home, a top producer will know the market much better than a part-timer and will be ready to meet your every need in this growing and very difficult profession. See you at the closing table!"

Carriage Company ready for spring transactions

Louise Culver

With the coming of spring, the Midland real estate market is picking up. If you are considering placing your home on the market — now is the time to get it spruced up as quickly as possible before the spring rush dissipates.

Louise Culver, the broker and owner of the Carriage Company, Realtors, recently returned from a Prudential Relocation Company/Network 50 — a full-service international referral network — convention in New Orleans. Culver has a great number of corporate homes that are currently under contract and a few that are still available. She has a new listing on Norwood, a lovely townhome that is perfect for a young couple. Also available in the corporate department is a beautiful home in Trinity on Northfield and a wonderful family home located at 2809 Sandhill in Vista West Addition.

Dana Chandler has resided in Midland since 1976 and has a broad knowledge of the Midland real estate market. Chandler has had a very busy spring with the sale of one listing in Greentree on Greentree Blvd., as well as a townhome that is currently under contract in that same subdivision. One of her Greentree listings on Shady Oak has a terrific view of the golf course and is picture perfect on the inside. Chandler has been a top producer for Carriage and is active in several local associations.

Betty Ford has been with the Carriage Company Realtors for the past 16 years. This spring has been especially busy for her. Currently she has a new corporate listing at 1704 Castleford along with several homes under contract including a new construction on Arrowhead in the Vista West addition. Ford knows the Midland real estate market very well and has the enthusiasm it takes to succeed. Because Midland is a transfer city, the buyers are very astute and Ford can cater to their needs.

Sue Laengrich, a long time Midland resident, began her career in real estate after all of her children had left home. She now has the time it takes to spend with the home buyer or seller. Recently, she has successfully sold a client's home on Auburn and put them into a new house in Greentree that was a Carriage corporate listing.

She also has a listing located at 3302 Whitney in Kimberlea that is a great qualifying assumable loan with low equity. Laengrich feels that every person has the right to be a homeowner and can help overcome even the largest obstacles to obtain that goal of homeownership.

Renata Hasek Leonard has been with Carriage for several years and has several homes by Mortgage and Trust that have sold in the past month. She currently has only three M & T's left that have not been placed under contract. Leonard also has several additional listings including a new one in Trinity Meadows on Northfield which she would love to show you.

Clemmie Sorge has been in real estate for the past seven years and has been a Midland resident for many years. She has been a consistent million dollar producer and is headed for another terrific year. In addition to two homes on Cimmaron which are under contract, Sorge also has other homes which are currently under contract. She recently sold and closed a home at 4711 Elma in under 10 days. Sorge enjoys meeting people and real estate gives her the opportunity to make new acquaintances and assist owners in their real estate needs.

If you would like to sell or buy this spring, why not call Carriage Company for a quick, enjoyable transaction. Call anytime at 684-5881.

'Tis Your

when you're movin' into a lovely 2 BR 1 BA apartment at The Courtyard. Your friends will be green with envy when they see the big walk-in closets, a spacious living room with separate dining area, and a kitchen where you can stir up a good mulligan stew. No stairs to climb, either.

Your Irish eyes will be smilin' at your own fenced backyard for good old Rover. And you can store your treasure in the outside closet.

It's no blarney, we've got a fine club house, beautiful swimmin' pool, and terrific tennis courts. On-site management and maintenance.

This room is a little girl's dream come true, with an off-white and blue color scheme, floral motif and ruffles.

The master bedroom features glass doors that open onto the porch, providing access to the pool area.

The living area, with the warmth of the original hardwood floors and the soft blue color scheme, brings a welcoming atmosphere to the downstairs area at Hill House.

FROM PAST TO PRESENT

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Midland Junior Woman's Club will present its 21st annual Parade of Homes 1-5:30 p.m. April 22. Tickets are $7.50 and can be purchased from any club member or by calling 697-4506 or 684-0993. No tickets will be sold at the door and children under 12 will not be admitted. The proceeds will benefit the Palmer Drug Abuse Program, Special Care Infants, The Problem Pregnancy Center and Attention Deficit Disorder Association of Parents and Teachers.

The home of Shelton and Jo Ann Viney, 3401 W. County Road 180, is proof that "everything old is new again."

The Vineys' home, which is often called Hill House, is one of the oldest structures still standing in Midland County. Originally built sometime near the turn of the century, the house was the family residence of the George Franklin Cowden Jr. family.

According to an article by Judy Powell, "The builder was Fred Barber who was hired by Cowden to construct the two-story, 3,686 square feet of liveable space house and out-buildings on a 10⅛ acre plot" at what is now 1208 Illinois St.

The Cowden family lived in the house for many years, but sometime after Cowden's death in 1921 it was sold to Roy Parks Sr., Powell wrote. In 1925, the Parks sold the house to J.E. "Bob" Hill.

Hill and his wife, the former Irene Florey, lived in the house that subsequently bore their name until his death in 1963. His wife remained at Hill House until she died in 1977.

After Mrs. Hill's death, the house was purchased by Ralph and Jane Viney, and moved from its Illinois Street location to its present site on West County Road 180. It now looks much like it must have when it was newly constructed — a traditional ranching house surrounded by wind-swept West Texas plains.

But these are the 1990s, not the 1890s, and a whole century of change has occurred since the home was built. While honoring and preserving some of Hill House's historical past, the Viney's have updated the structure

Playwright attends MCT performance

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Former Midlander and playwright Ed Graczyk of Columbus, Ohio, returned to Midland last weekend, for his show, "Come Back to the 5 and Dime Jimmy Dean, Jimmy Dean," on stage at Theatre Midland.

McKnight-Harrison

Ed's arrival here inspired a series of parties. He was the honoree at a reception in the theatre lobby prior to the March 16 performance. On hand to greet him were former members of The Pickwick Players, the Midland Community Theatre's youth performing troupe which he founded; a number of their parents and many other longtime friends and fans.

Anna Marie (Mrs. Ed) Vogler and Linda Bond were in charge of the reception. Billie Hunt presided at the serving table.

A houseguest of Fern and Mac McGuigan, Ed also was feted with parties at the homes of Ruth Cole and Marty and Jim Conine.

Among former Midlanders who returned for Ed's "homecoming" were Roger Thomas of Victoria, Phyllis and Dick Jacques of Phoenix, Ariz., Linden Heck of New York City, Carol Sappington (Mrs. Lindsay) Borden of Dallas, Coila Morrow of Lubbock, Debbie Waddell of Odessa, and Flo Hughes and Mike Coffield, both of Houston.

Although Ed considers Midland his "adopted" home, he is a native of Erie, Pa. He was director of MCT's Theatre School from 1968 through 1973. Currently, he is the producing and artistic director of the Players Theatre Columbus.

His play, which is being held over March 30 and 31 at Theatre Midland, was produced on Broadway during 1982-83 and also was made into a movie.

THE LAWYERS' WIVES CLUB and the Medical Auxiliary entertained with their annual Guest Day luncheon recently at Midland Country CLub.

"Fashion Concepts for the 90s," a style show by Julian Gold, featured the creations of such well-known designers as Scassi, Oscar de la Renta and Bill Blass. The models included Phyllis (Mrs. John) Gunter, Janet (Mrs. David) Copeland and Sandra (Mrs. Smith) Ray from Lawyers' Wives, Edna (Mrs. Mack) Hibbits and Terry (Mrs. John) Staub from the Medical Auxiliary, along with Julian Gold models.

Over 150 members and guests lunched on Almond Crested Chicken Breast with peach sauce served over rice, sugar snap peas, broiled tomatoes, assorted mini rolls and fresh strawberry shortcake.

A St. Patrick's Day theme was carried out in decorations.

Among the guests were Shauna (Mrs. Gary) Madden's mother, Janell (Mrs. Kenneth) McWhorter of Sweetwater; Robbie (Mrs. Roy) Davidson, Sarah (Mrs. Ron) Holcomb, Ann (Mrs. James) Walton, Gladys (Mrs. Robert) Penn, Elma Jean (Mrs. Richard) Henderson and Betty (Mrs. Don) Ewan.

Chairmen for the event were Paula (Mrs. Gary) Douglas and Juanita (Mrs. Durward) Goolsby from Lawyers' Wives and Melissa (Mrs. Scott) Sheward and Shauna Madden from Doctors' Wives. Presidents of the Lawyers' and Doctors' Wives groups are Linda (Mrs. Rodney Satterwhite and Jann (Mrs. Stephan) Wiesenfeld, respectively.

SOME 75 LONGTIME friends helped Helen and Bill Ahders celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary on St. Patrick's Day at the home of their son and daughter-in-law, Ruff and Paula Ahders, in Odessa.

Among the well-wishers was Helen's brother, Earle Parsons of San Jose, Calif.

The Ahders were married in Butte, Montana, on March 17, 1940, while Bill was attending Law School at the University of Montana.

Bill was with the FBI for 25 years until he retired in 1968. Since his retirement from the Bureau, he has been city judge for 11 years and county judge for 12 years.

The Ahders have two grandchildren, London and Chase Ahders of Odessa.

ALYSON BUNNELL, a graduating senior at Midland High School, was honored with a bowling party at Dellwood Lanes recently. Sixty guests enjoyed the fun affair.

Host couples were Ann and Dick Dunbar, Donna and Ted Fergeson, Sherry and Jerry Hewett, Sue and Dan Secker and Cookie and Fred Wetendorf.

The daughter of Charlene and Doug Bunnell, Alyson plans to attend either Southern Methodist University or Agnes Scott College in Atlanta, Ga.

PRE-NUPTIAL FESTIVITIES for Kara Alther and Stephen Shipley, who were married March 17 in St. Luke's United Methodist Church, began here on New Year's Day with a "Honey-Do" brunch to introduce Stephen to Kara's neighbors and friends. It was hosted by Gene and Sam Hawley and Alma and Steve Boone in the Hawley home.

In addition, a couples' kitchen and bar shower was held in Duncanville by friends of teh groom's paents, Pat and Jim Shipley.

In Midland, a miscellaneous display shower was held in the home of Janet (Mrs. Patrick) Adams. Co-hostesses with Janet were Alma Boone, Ann (Mrs. Clay, Jr.) Atchison, Jody (Mrs. Jerry) Green, Gladys (Mrs. Scott) Hickman, Betty (Mrs. Bill) Murrah and Darlynna (Mrs. Buddy) Rush. Also, a lingerie shower was given by Ann (Mrs. Herman) Wright and her daughter, Dani Fritschen.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents in the Garden Room of Midland Country Club. Sarah (Mrs. Russell) Neisig and her daughter, Andrea, gave a bridesmaids luncheon, also in the Garden Room.

The reception, hosted by the bride's parents, Sadie and George Alther, was held in the ClayDesta Atrium. Music was provided by Dow Jones Average.

On the day following the wedding, a brunch was served in the Alther home to the out-of-town guests by family friends Mary Jane (Mrs. Bob) Young, Judy (Mrs. Marion) Daily and Linda (Mrs. Glaze) Sacra.

'Country' decorating gives home warm feeling

Associated Press

America's love affair with country decorating derives from a nostalgia for the good old days that were warm, cozy and safe.

That's how psychologist Arlene Kagle, in a recent issue of House Beautiful, explains the current craze for farmhouse quilts and rockers, painted cupboard and pretty chintzes.

In the past decade or so, country decorating has spawned a dozen new magazines, changed the character of the home furnishings industry, led to countless new businesses making and selling reproduction country-style ironware, wicker, textiles, brasses and ceramics.

A major influence on the rediscovery of country was decorator Mrs. Henry Parish II, known by her childhood nickname of Sister Parish.

She recalled her favorite childhood rooms when decorating her Maine farmhouse and brought in rag rugs, afghans, quilts, dog paintings, painted wood furniture, chintzes, wicker and fat comfortable sofas.

When pictures of her house were published, people began to imitate the homey, easy look — both decorators and do-it-yourselfers.

Country got another big impetus when the 1976 bicentennial approached and museums showed American folk art. Folk art began appearing not only in country rooms but in spare modern spaces, sometimes with modern furniture.

Kagle, a psychologist who is so attuned to the effect of decorating on people that she sometimes makes house calls to view the scene of the conflict, explained the appeal of country, saying:

"A lot of people obviously feel a farmhouse is warm and cozy and morally good. We think of a farmhouse as full of good smells. Even if a couple are both working 18 hours a day on Wall Street, they want an old-fashioned looking house or apartment where they would bake cookies if they had the time.

"I think of today's big Victorian trend as part of country, and that is very appealing now because we see that long period as a time of order. It reminds us of families being together, and we think about when it was safe for kids to get on their bicycles and ride down the street without an armed escort."

Americans have only a vague idea of periods, which allows them a great deal of freedom when dealing with old pieces.

"We love the idea, 'It's from the past,' though we don't understand exactly what the past was," Kagle said. "So because we are free from that, we get to pick and choose. We get to put the pine hutch with the Queen Anne chairs."

People need time and space alone, and time and space together, and Victorian houses offer both, Kagle said, adding:

"Wrap-around porches, for instance, allow you to be outdoors and indoors simultaneously, and you can be off in a corner and yet feel a part of the family.

Software designed to reduce study time

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — New "test yourself" computer software lets students use their own course materials to reduce their study time before exams. With the Studymate software program computer users can create personalized tests on any subject and in formats such as multiple choice, question-response, true-false or fill-in-the-blanks.

The program, developed by Compu-Teach Educational Software, allows students to score their tests automatically, retest incorrect responses, keep records and review materials easily.

VINEYS: Hill House has been updated for '90s lifestyle for life in the present.

Shelton Viney, son of Ralph and Jane Viney, and his wife, Jo Ann, and their three young children have been living in Hill House "since Oct. 20," Mrs. Viney said. "We changed the structure of the house quite a bit. We actually started drawing architectural plans in September 1988 — we started thinking of things before we got the architect involved.

"Construction started last Feb. 20. The workmen were actually out of here by Nov. 15," she said.

Much of the changes made in Hill House involved things that casual visitors probably won't notice — added insulation, strengthening walls, etc. — but a lot of the changes they will notice.

Instead of the original structure's out-buildings, such as a storage shed, meat house, water storage tank and windmill, Hill House now has a swimming pool-entertainment area complete with a gas grill and cabana, as well as a playground area to delight children.

In the front of the house is a pond that the Vineys made into a scenic walk area. "We put the walk completely around the other side (of the pond)," Mrs. Viney said. "We did the waterfall and we put fish in it (the pond)."

The house still has wide, inviting porches, just as it did when it was built, but some of the porch area has been enclosed to increase the size of the living area inside the house. "The dining room and one bedroom were added, possibly by the Hills," Mrs. Viney said.

The Vineys enclosed part of the kitchen porch to make a sunny breakfast area. The kitchen itself has been redone to suit the needs of life in the 1990s, complete with up-to-date appliances and plenty of cabinet space.

The formal dining room, located just off the kitchen, is graced with hardwood floors designed to match the original floors found in the home's living areas. Tall windows provide an open view of the surrounding countryside.

The home's historic past is still evident in the high, pressed tin ceilings and patterned hardwood floors in the living areas, as well as the original oak staircase and two chandeliers that have been converted from gas to electricity. And "the original front door faces north," said Mrs. Viney.

Plush carpet in the living room and the soft blue of the decor give the room a welcoming look. Much of the furniture is replicas of antique pieces, Mrs. Viney said. "We're very contemporary."

In the master bedroom, double doors open onto the porch, where steps lead down to the pool area. The master bathroom has his-and-hers closets, a shower area, an enormous sunked tub and lots of sunny windows.

Upstairs has been converted into the children's area. "We took the second floor and cleared it all out and started over," Mrs. Viney said. "The upstairs we didn't keep."

At the head of the stairs is an inviting play area with couches, chairs and shelves for toys and books.

The boy's room is decorated in a baseball motif. A large walk-in closet has plenty of room for clothing and toys. A private bathroom with a shower is included.

The two girls' rooms look like a little girl's dream — both have day-beds, floral motifs and ruffles. A bathroom adjoins the girls' rooms.

Because children need to play in the sun, "We cut dormer windows into the ceiling and use them as skylights," said Mrs. Viney. "It made that whole area a lot brighter."

The Vineys converted the basement area into a family room and utility room. "It was all just cinderblock and concrete," Mrs. Viney said. The family room is cool and spacious. The adjoining utility room has a large refrigerator and cabinet space, plus an office area with a computer. Large double doors lead out to the pool area, and a shower was installed in the utility area for "kids coming in from the pool area," Mrs. Viney said.

Some unexpected problems surfaced as the Vineys set about updating the house. "A big problem in the house was back when the house was built there were no closets," said Mrs. Viney. "We had to find space for closets and make space to put them."

But the work is complete, and the extensive remodeling of this fine old traditional home has brought one of Midland's landmark structures into the 1990s.

Hill House is shown being readied for its move from Illinois Street to its present location south of Midland.

Lumber produced

ATLANTA (AP) — U.S. manufacturers produced 49.5 billion board feet of lumber in 1988.

This, says Georgia-Pacific Corp., was enough to cover the distance between the earth and the moon nearly 40 times.

The building products firm says the lumber was used to meet various domestic and foreign wood needs, including construction, repairs and remodeling.

Lifestyle policies

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle sections of the Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographes will be published only for winners, not runnerups. These announcements are published Tuesdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Friday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted. The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Bonding for life

Copley News Service

Most people wander into marriage and years later can't remember why they did it, according to New York psychologist Aaron Weiss who says people don't properly think about bonding for life.

He says one of the most common reasons women give for getting married is because their biological clock is ticking away.

Weiss says when people are thinking about tying the knot they should take into consideration the three levels of attraction.

The intellectual level is where each partner finds interest in the other's ability to think.

Then there are the initial feelings of liking the other person and whether or not you find him or her downright boring. And if the liking matures into passion, the chances are good for a long marriage.

He recommends couples talk about the three levels and if one is lacking — like sex — married life might be in trouble. Weiss says no matter how good the communication is, without sex in a marriage it probably will go down the drain.

Weddings

BOONE-FELDT

Mrs. John Blake Feldt

AUSTIN — Hyde Park Baptist Church in Austin was the setting for the wedding of Katherine Martin Boone of Austin and John Blake Feldt of Midland. The Rev. Dr. Ralph Smith officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ben Boone of Austin, and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Denman Moody of Houston and the late Mr. and Mrs. Jack L. Boone. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. John Harrell Feldt of Houston, formerly of Midland. His grandparents are Nell Harrell Feldt of Houston, and Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Alfred Peel of Denton.

Susanna Heard Kane was matron of honor. Teddy Lewis Heard was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Margaret Sprugg, Susan Jones, Gail Schaubhut, Trisha Searcy, Becky Brooks Feldt, Deidre Dodds, Katy Feldt Rhamey and Rhonda Schiraldi.

Michael Wesley Feldt served his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Marshall Denman Boone, brother of the bride, Pat Hrncir, Randy Darnell, Barry Levin, Jim Hart, Craig Caudle, Bobby Floyd, Link Grimes and Robert Montgomery. Ushers were David Joeckel, Kip Agar and Pryor Blackwell.

The bride graduated from Westlake High School and attended the University of Texas at Austin. She pledged Pi Beta Phi sorority and is employed with Ralph Lauren Polo Shop in Blowing Rock, N.C. Her husband graduated from Midland High School and Texas Tech University. He is a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, American Football Coaches Association and Texas High School Football Coaches Association. He is assistant football coach at Appalachian State Univeristy in Boone, N.C.

After a wedding trip to St. John in the U.S. Virgin Islands, the couple lives in Boone.

COFFMAN-HOWARD

Mrs. Joel Brent Howard

Nicole Bradford Coffman of Midland became the bride of Joel Brent Howard, also of Midland, 8 p.m. March 16 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Bradford of Midland, parents of the bride. Justice of the Peace Robert Pine officiated.

The bridegroom is the son of Dorathy Howard and Dewey Howard, both of Big Spring.

DeeDee Castleberry of Midland served as maid of honor. Kesley Coffman, daughter of the bride, was flower girl.

Greg Hendershot of Midland was best man. Todd Bradford of Midland, brother of the bride, was usher.

The bride is a 1987 graduate of Lee High School. She is employed with Flower Boutique in Midland. Her husband attended Big Spring High School. He is employed with Perfection Well Service.

The couple lives in Midland.

Former Midlanders renew wedding vows

Mr. and Mrs. E.C. Hollingshead

Mr. and Mrs. E.C. Hollingshead of Colorado City, and formerly of Midland, renewed their wedding vows and then were honored guests at a 50th wedding anniversary celebration Saturday at St. Marks United Methodist Church Fellowship Hall.

Hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Martin, Sharon Hollingshead and Mr. and Mrs. E.D. Hollingshead.

Hollingshead and the former Naomia Boiles were married March 23, 1940, in Potosi.

They have four children, Darlene Hoopes of Las Vegas, Nev., and Dwayne Hollingshead, Laurabeth Martin and Sharon Hollingshead, all of Midland.

They also have seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Hollingshead retired from Midland Independent School District in 1987.

Her husband worked for Superior Oil Co. until his retirement in 1977.

Couples happy

Associated Press

Most married people would remarry their spouses if they had it to do over, according to a survey commissioned by Korbel Champagne Cellars.

Among those surveyed, 91 percent said they'd pick the same mate. The happiest of the sample are those who have been married for less than seven years.

"Both men and women appear to be equally happy with their choice of a spouse," says Marie Rama, Korbel's director of weddings and entertaining. "Regionally, Northeasterners say they have the highest number of happy marriages, with 94 percent of those surveyed maintaining that they would re-marry their spouses. Respondents living in the North Central region of the country, with 89 percent, are the least likely to say 'I Do' again."

A bridal gown of champagne organza and matte satin has a high illusion neckline, short lantern sleeves and hand-beaded Alencon lace on a dropped basque bodice with elongated peplum. The tuxedo is the elegant Vanguard by After Six Formals. Gray-tone-on-tone fabric is handsomely accented with a dark grey cummerbund and bow tie. A cotton wing collar shirt completes the look.

This "mirror taffeta" gown with sweetheart neckline has Marie Antoinette sleeves that are heavily beaded, a draped dropped torso and full circular skirt. The tuxedo is Eternity by After Six. Based on the tradiditonal cutaway, this wedding tuxedo is beautifully detailed with a lapel that matches the tonal striping of the pleated trousers. Black vest, white wing collar shirt and gray ascot add the finishing touch.

Wedding costs can be lessened

Associated Press

If you're planning a wedding, you probably know prices are astronomical. Even though the reception, food and caterers will be your biggest wedding expenses, photography, flowers, music and dresses can really run up the bills, too. But there are way to cut costs.

After food, photography is the one other wedding component that the experts always say you should never skimp on. Perhaps you've seen an ad in a bridal magazine or elsewhere offering a photo studio's "entire package" for $149. You'll get what you pay for.

Arthur Stern, editorial director for the trade group Wedding Photographers International, says the average bride budgets about $700 for photography, and consultants say you should prepare to spend $800 or more for professional work.

As with caterers, shop the ads, talk to friends, check references and look at work samples. Keep in mind that part-time wedding photographers can do as good a job as full-timers can.

If you want pictures that express the unconventional side of your personality, use a photographer who specializes in still lifes, candids or corporate photography. "These are the people you can hire on a time rate, $200 a day and up, and they give you either contact sheets and the negatives or just the film," says New York City wedding consultant Marcy Blum. "Then you take care of the printing. There's an enormous amount of money to be saved there." Proceed cautiously with this option: If you change your mind about the unconventional look once the proofs comeback, you can't rerun your wedding.

NEARLY A third of first-time brides order video coverage of their weddings in addition to still photos. "I've heard prices for videos that range from $250 all the way up to $2,000," says Bob LeBar in Hartsdale, N.Y., who sells taped wedding graphics — such as hearts coming together and stars exploding — to videographers. "There is a wide range of quality. The less you pay, the less you get."

LeBar's advice: Look at a videographer's demo reel and ask to see something more. "A lot of times," LeBar explains, "the demo will be a knockout, but the wedding video it was taken from has two hours of boring shooting and just a few minutes of exciting stuff that was used for the demo reel."

Ask if there's editing involved and if it is included in the price. "In-camera editing," by the way, merely consists of turning the camera on and off while filming. Do you get the master tape? And how many copies? How many cameramen will shoot the event? Will the person you talked to be at the wedding? "There are companies that, on a Saturday in June, have booked 20 weddings," LeBar says. "And so they send out beginners to shoot your wedding."

Exotic and imported flowers will bust the modest wedding budget. Aside from the type you buy, the biggest factor in determining the floral bill is the number of attendants. The bride and bridesmaids carry bouquets; the groom and his groomsmen wear boutonnieres. Parents on both sides receive flowers, too. There's an altarpiece for the ceremony and a centerpiece for the head table at the reception.

AN UNPRETENTIOUS wedding party of eight plus four parents could require $400 for flowers — more than that in big cities. You may pay less in summertime, especially in such places as Michigan and California, where flowers are big business, says Changing Times magazine.

You could buy or even rent silk flowers to conserve money. Some wedding experts say silk flowers are pretty and make nice keepsakes, while others say fresh flowers are more appealing and perhaps even less expensive than the best silk ones.

YOU COULD spend $500 or more on a wedding dress, or you could make your own. A dress pattern costs as little as $10. "Most fabric stores nowadays stock all the materials you need — silk, taffeta, organza," says Paige Hurlock, a San Diego consultant.

Buying a dress shouldn't inflate the budget if you shop shrewdly. Many bridal boutiques sell dresses that have been used as samples at a discount of 50 percent or more. Check outlet stores, which sell flawed gowns that can be repaired easily.

Finally, consider wearing Mom's old dress. Sure, this season's hot color is pink, and Mom wore the classic white. But who's going to notice? Radiant is radiant, in any hue.

Garage Sales

Trash or Trea$ure?

Spring is finally here, and one of the all-time dreaded, but needed activities for this time of year is spring cleaning. Throughout the past year, things have been piling up in the closets, drawers, attic, basement, spare bedroom, garage ... any space that has been unoccupied at the time.

One option is to throw away everything unwanted, but there is a more profitable way clean out all those nooks and crannies. Have a garage sale; it's the perfect low-cost money-maker.

Many churches, organizations and individuals have been hawking their unwanted wares for years in order to raise funds. In fact, the family and friends of a Big Spring couple had a garage sale at Hall-Bennett Hospital parking lot to help the couple pay their hospital bill after having a premature baby. For that sale, area merchants donated items and community members brought things such as used clothing, tools and paintings. The sale raised about $1,900 for the couple.

No matter where they are located or what they are called — including garage sales, rummage sales, yard sales or tag sales — the objective of these sales is the same — to get rid of unwanted items and make money at the same time.

Before having one of these sales, there are two things you must to know: 1) It is impossible to categorize potential customers, and 2) They are all motivated by the same goal, to find a bargain.

ALLOW YOURSELF plenty of time to prepare for a garage sale. Experienced garage sale holders can't emphasize this enough. You will need to have all items ready for sale, priced with a tag and ready for display at the time the sale starts. Two to three weeks is an average planning time for most sales. You may want time to do some extensive site cleaning and to collect, clean and repair items you plan to sell.

As you designate items for sale, you may find yourself wandering down memory lane. You even may find some items you think you can't part with. It may be difficult, but try to remember the last time you had a use for the item — or even the last time you saw it. Then try to get rid of everything at one time with this sale.

Market research is an important part of having a garage sale. Although some cities require citizens to obtain a permit, and uphold strict restrictions regarding private sales, Midland does not require any permits. However, the Property Codes Department of the City of Midland does request that Midlanders have no more than two garage sales a year, preferably six months a part.

"Garage sales are not really specifically addressed in the city codes," said Roberta Allison, code enforcement officer. But having a regularly scheduled garage sale — say once a month — is considered operating a business, "which is addressed under the business code." Having a garage sale more often than twice a year is "considered opperating a business," Ms. Allison said.

"They should not put their signs on utility poles and their things can not be out in the right of way," Ms. Allison added, including signs placed in the ground on street corners. "We advise people to advertise their sale in the newspaper and then to put a sign in their yard (only). ... The idea of a garage sale is for the individuals to clean up their property."

MS. ALLISON SAID her department responds to complaints of people having too many garage sales.

You may want to scout out local sales to see how others do things. You can then access what you think they did right or wrong, and learn from their mistakes. You also can check prices to see what the market will allow. If you see that a seller's sale is going well, strike up a conversation with them and ask them for suggestions. You might want to come back to talk with them at the end of their sale so as not to interfere with their customers.

As for the timing of your sale, mid-spring and mid-fall are the best seasons, as the weather is milder.

Saturdays are usually the best days for garage sales. Veteran bargain hunters often plan their Saturday mornings on Friday evenings, so Thursday's and Friday's newspapers are the best days to place an ad. Also remember that most people get paid first and 15th of the month or on Friday of each week. Therefore, time your sale appropriately within the month, before customers have are out of spending cash.

Time of day also is important. Most avid bargain hunters strike early. No matter what time you advertise your sale to start, be prepared for customers to arrive earlier, some asking for a preview. Some of these early birds may even show up the day before your sale. In the book, "How to Have a Garage Sale," James Michael Ullman recommends asking those who come the day before to come back at the designated times. He believes most of these people are trying to take advantage of you being unprepared.

HOWEVER, ON THE DAY of your sale, some garage sale veterans say the best policy probably is to not keep the customer waiting because they might find another sale. Arrange your merchandise on moveable tables the night before so all items can be moved easily into place in a moment's notice.

The first few hours of the first day will be the most crucial. Regular garage sale shoppers want to get there as early as possible to see what you have for sale before anyone else does. They believe that if a sale has already been running for a while, the biggest bargains already have been snatched up.

Be sure your "sale" area is clearly set apart from other areas. If there are items in close proximity that are not for sale, you may want to put a sign on them stating, "This item not for sale."

The more merchandise and the greater the variety, the more successful your sale will be. When selecting your merchandise, remember, no matter how useless an item may seem to you, someone may want it.

Experts advise having many low-priced items for sale because buying is infectious.

In order to handle the actual sales transactions, you will need to make change. Many sales can be lost if you can't change someone's $5, $10 or $20 bill. A good breakdown of change is generally $25 in $1 bills, a couple of $10 bills, $20 in $5 bills, $10 in quarters, $5 in dimes, and $2 in nickels.

WHETHER YOU ACCEPT checks or not is up to you, but the general consensus of garage sale operators seems to be to accept checks only for high-dollar items. Many buyers may not have $40 cash to buy the

AT WIT'S END

Money in masses for children in glasses

By Erma Bombeck

When I think of my children, the word that comes to mind is "fixer-uppers." They've always been like a structure that has a solid foundation, good lines and a lot to preserve — but needs some work.

Bombeck

We've had their teeth restrained and maintained. We've provided mousse, gel, permanents, bleach, spray and conditioner for their hair. If their toes pointed inward, we corrected them. If their toes pointed outward, we sent them in the other direction. We've lifted their arches and cleared up their skins.

But what has really kept us from owning a home in Beverly Hills is glasses. From the early days of their childhood, when the school nurse sent notes home saying they squinted and had headaches, we've gone the glasses route. (Unlike my mother, whose remedy for squinting and headaches was, "Go to the bathroom. You'll feel better.")

In all the time our children owned glasses, there was never a day when all three had them in their possession. One pair was always lost, broken or being repaired. They did everything to glasses except wear them. They sat on them, dropped them in open grates, used them for bookmarks, left them on buses, threw them away with their lunches, lost them in the ocean and put them on the dog.

When contact lenses came upon the scene, all three succumbed to vanity. I was thrilled because I thought, What better storage spot for glasses than on your eyeballs? How was I to know they'd whip those lenses in and out faster than a deposit at the bank? When they weren't rolling their eyes toward the ceiling removing them, they were uttering the dreaded phrase, "DON'T ANYONE MOVE!" That meant their lenses had fallen out. You figure it. If a kid could find a contact lens in a shag carpet, he wouldn't need them in the first place.

After insurance, replacement for lost lenses, new ones for color, comfort and re-evaluation, the maintenance goes on.

The other day, I heard my son needed a new lens. It seems he was having breakfast and poured Tabasco sauce on his eggs and it splattered on his shirt and he rubbed it off and then rubbed his eyes and they burned and he removed a lens to wash out his eye and put the lens in his mouth for safekeeping and swallowed it.

Patch! Patch! Patch!

Census questions should be updated

By David Grimes
N.Y. Times News Service

Every 10 years, like a weird number-crunching species of locust, the Census Bureau awakens, rubs its eyes, scratches itself and issues an exceedingly dull questionnaire.

The 1990 Census won't be arriving in our mailboxes until May, but I can tell you right now that the questions are as boring as ever.

The Census Bureau starts off by asking you how many people live in your "household" and it's all downhill from there.

For example, you will be asked if your household has "complete kitchen facilities," if you have a telephone, how many vehicles you own and what kind of fuel you use to heat your home.

If you're lucky, you'll get the short version of the questionnaire, which takes about 14 minutes to complete.

The less fortunate 17 percent of us will get the long version, which takes an average of 43 minutes to complete, assuming you can stay awake.

I think the public would have a lot more enthusiasm for the census if the questions had more relevancy.

I, for one, have no interest in how many Americans have "complete kitchen facilities," but I would be interested in knowing how many Americans keep a plunger within easy reach of the sink.

Here are some other questions the Census Bureau might consider asking:

1) How many of your houseplants are currently dead?
a) Fewer than 5.
b) Between 5 and 10.
c) All of them.
d) What houseplants?

2) How would you describe the interior of your personal vehicle?
a) Fairly clean.
b) Not as clean as it might be.
c) Potential health hazard.
d) Gag a maggot.

3) How many times a day do you floss?
a) In a day?
Yes, in a day.
b) Uh...
We're waiting.
c) Can we come back to this question later?
Certainly.

4) What do you do while you're sitting in your car waiting for the light to change?
a) Pick a classical music radio station.
b) Pick up your cellular telephone and tell your broker to "sell."
c) Pick six numbers to play in this week's lottery.
c) Pick your nose.

5) We know that you're far too stupid to program your VCR or set the timer on your coffee maker. What, if any, electronic household gizmos can you operate?
a) The light in my refrigerator.
b) The light in my oven.
c) That's about it.

6) When's the last time you cleaned your bathroom?
a) Yesterday.
C'mon. Tell the truth now.
b) OK. Last week.
c) Would you believe last June?
d) There is no point in cleaning it because it will just get dirty again.

7) Name your favorite educational TV show.
a) "Roseanne"
b) "Married ... With Children."
c) "Geraldo"
d) "Teen-Age Mutant Ninja Turtles"

GARAGE: Spring cleaning can make a profit

stereo unit. It is advised that you use good judgment in deciding for what and from whom you will accept checks.

Advertising is the key to a successful garage sale, and according to Woman's Enterprise magazine, the local newspaper is your best source. And according to "How to Hold a Garage Sale," "Newspaper advertising is essential because this is how most hard-core garage- and house-sale buffs learn about sales. They follow the classified columns in their daily, weekly and community papers very closely. Many even use the advertisements to map out their garage- and house-sale 'routes' for the day."

"We encourage people not to advertise too soon or for too long," said Jan Alstrin, classified telephone sales supervisor for the Midland Reporter-Telegram. "For a Saturday sale, we usually advise them to advertise at least the Friday before the sale and the day of the sale."

Classified deadlines for word ads — advertising space bought by the word — is 6 p.m. the day prior to publication, except for Sunday which is 6 p.m. Friday.

Unless a line of credit has been established with the Reporter-Telegram, payment is due in advance of publication. Word advertising rates vary by the number of words in each ad and how many days the ads are published. For example, a 20 word ad for two days will cost $9. However, a 40 word ad for two days costs $18.

AS AN ALTERNATIVE to the word ads, the Classified department offers non-contract space ad rates. A 1-inch by one column space for two days is only $16.48. These ads offer a little more variety and are set apart in a box.

Because the Reporter-Telegram does have a Garage/Yard Sale category in the classified section, there is no need to waste words stating you are having a garage sale. Just be sure to include the address of the sale, date(s) and time, and perhaps your best sale item, which may draw the readers' interests.

Another form of advertising is bulletin boards in public locations, such as small grocery stores and laundry mats. Check with individual places for their specific requirements. Usually this form of advertising is free. Typed or printed neatly, these will be read by garage sale regulars.

Word-of-mouth is another important aspect of advertising. Tell everyone you know about the sale. Ask friends to spread the word, too.

A must for a successful garage sale is signs to direct your customers. Only two signs are really necessary to guide buyers to your sale. Place the first on the corner of the busiest intersection near your home — if it doesn't violate property codes — and one in front of your house, showing people the exact location of the sale. Some sellers add a little pizazz to the sale tying bunches of balloons to the garage sale signs or trees in front of your house — if it's not a windy West Texas day. Visibility is an important tool of marketing.

The most important thing to remember when putting a garage sale together is: there is nothing too old or too new, too small or too large, too cheap or too expensive to sell at a garage sale. If you really want a profitable sale, consider every item fair game. Plants, books, ceramic pots, tools, kitchen ware, sporting goods and small appliances sell like hot cakes. Clothing is one of the most difficult items to sell, especially if they are thrown in a pile. If space permits, hang clothing and individually price each piece.

IN FACT, EVERY item should be individually priced. If people don't know how much an item costs and you are busy with another customer, you may lose a sale.

Which brings up another important point of a garage sale, pricing. Your most important preparation will be to put price tags on the things you hope to sell. However, listing how much items should sell for is virtually impossible. Each item is unique and is affected by what kind of condition it is in, if it is seasonal and if collectors have deemed it worth accumulating.

This is one reason why it is good to attend others sales to see what the market will allow.

Although some first-time sellers do underprice their merchandise, it is more common for the novice to overprice. The best thing to remember is that you are not competing with retail stores and antique shops, but rather with others sponsoring garage sales.

According to Ullman, here are two general pricing rules:

"1. Try to set prices at less than people would pay for an item at a store, but more than you'd get for it if you sold it to a dealer.

"2. Try to set the highest price at which people can't resist buying the item even if they don't need it."

Masking tape is an inexpensive form of "tags" many people use to mark the price of their items, but if you have a large quantity of items to tag, it may also be the slowest method. Also, not all writing instruments will write on masking tape, and some inks are easily smudge or wiped off. Paper attached with transparent tape works well, but if you are willing to spend a couple of dollars, invest in a box of self-applicating, adhesive tags. When tagging merchandise, be careful not to place tags or marks where they can't be easily removed without risking damage to the item.

BE SURE TO HAVE plenty of paper or plastic bags and leftover newspapers to wrap up items for your buyers. Cardboard boxes also can be helpful.

If you are selling small appliances or lamps, be sure to have a plug available for buyers to test the merchandise.

For items that are dirty or need minor repairs, you may be able to get a higher price for some items if you clean them and fix them yourself. But only if it's really worth your time. It would be better to sell an old toaster for $2 than to spend hours and a bottle of cleaner to make it shine. Let the buyer do the dirty work.

If any part of your sale will be outside, you will have to contend with the weather. Early spring is well-known for its wind, so have a contingency plan in case the gales decide to blow. Sun also can be a problem, particularly for the seller who is not accustomed to being out in the weather for long periods of time. If you sunburn easily, wear a wide-brimmed hat and long sleeves. Sunscreen applied frequently to your face, hands and back of your neck also may be necessary.

It is a good idea to have at least one other person help you with the sale. During the first few hours, you may have several people coming at the same time and you will need help manning the cash box as well as helping with customers. Having someone else there is a good security precaution, as well.

Remember, the object of your garage sale is to get rid of merchandise, not move it back into your garage at the end of the day. If you don't mind haggling a bit, toward the end of the day begin lowering your prices or bargain with shoppers who come by.

Don't plan on your garage sale lasting past 4 p.m. The avid shoppers shop early. After lunch, business tends to dwindle.

After your sale, you have the pleasant task of counting your profits and the unpleasant task of putting away, giving away or throwing away everything that didn't sell. Then, it is a good idea to sit down and write a critique. List what worked well and what didn't, how people said they heard about your sale and any overheard suggestions that might make your next sale easier and better. Then put the critique away until it's time to do spring cleaning again.

Easter eggs a symbol of spring

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — For centuries eggs have been a symbol of Easter (April 15 this year). Historians say colored eggs were given as gifts to celebrate the coming of spring in ancient Egypt, Persia, Greece and Rome.

This year, it's estimated 1 billion hard-boiled Easter eggs will be found on grassy lawns and in Easter baskets across America.

Originals, copies restore old-fashioned look

By Barbara Mayer
Associated Press

When Allison Kyle Leopold, a Victorian decorating authority, and her husband decided to turn their New York City duplex into a Victorian showcase, the apartment lacked even minimal 19th-century flourishes, though the building dates from 1882.

Their renovation, which involved covering exposed brick walls and replacing decorative trim removed by earlier tenants, has earned them an award for interior rehabilitation from the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

"It was a respectable middle class building when new, but we decided to redo it in a grander fashion," says Leopold, author of a book on Victorian decoration and a doctoral candidate in 19th-century decorative arts. Her husband, Thomas F. Cohen, a lawyer, collects late 19th-century decanters and brandy snifters.

So far, they have completed the parlor and a small den they call the smoking room, the dining room, kitchen, a bathroom and a child's room. Still to be done are the master bedroom and a second bathroom.

In choosing to do the parlor first, she says they emulated the Victorians, who put more effort into their public rooms than into private rooms such as the kitchen and bedrooms, which were off-limits to visitors.

IT'S GETTING harder to find Victorian architectural elements such as lighting fixtures, now that the style has become so popular. But, says Leopold, there are many good reproductions available and information in films, books and magazines.

In the smoking room off the parlor, ornamental borders known as Lincrusta were used. Their kitchen features a reproduction painted tin ceiling, green glass lighting fixtures and a reproduction tile floor. Throughout the interior they used copies of old wallpapers and carpeting in old Axminster patterns.

For the parlor, they found two silverplated and pewter chandeliers in an antique shop on Atlantic Avenue in Brooklyn. They date from the 1860s and 1870s. Old tiles collected over the years surround the fireplace.

Leopold says she got ideas for her book, "Victorian Splendor" (Stewart Tabori & Chang, 1986, $35), and for her home by watching movies and television programs set in the period. Among her sources were the films "The Bostonians" and "Gone With The Wind" and the public television series "Upstairs Downstairs."

Vintage photos are another favorite source she recommends to others. She finds them in flea markets and antiques shops and says they are the best research source.

"You see real life in them, tidbits of home," she says. "Furthermore, you know they are accurate. Victorian is popular and that's the problem. Soft, pretty, pink, ruffles and lace are not necessarily authentic."

HISTORIC RESTORATIONS and house museums are also good places to get ideas.

"We have an invaluable resource in our historic houses which are open to public," she says. "In a house museum, you can see the placement of windows, height of ceiling, configuration of rooms. You may not find all the furniture there would have been because many of the houses are in need of funds."

Leopold, now at work on a book on Victorian collecting, says ceramics, sterling silver, quilts, and paneled screens made of scrap paper are among the favorites both now and then.

The Victorian era introduced to the middle classes the idea of collecting. Before the Industrial Revolution, they couldn't afford to collect, she says, and the pastime was limited to the wealthier.

"Though they would understand our interest in some things," Leopold says, "they would be surprised to see how highly we value their everyday, functional wares — silverplate and kitchen collectibles."

A number of recent books illustrate and describe the Victorian look. One of the most lavish and attractive is "The Victorian House Book" by Robin Guild (Rizzoli, 1989, $45). With 2,000 illustrations, 500 in color, the book shows the many varied styles of Victorian houses and interiors.

Illustrations of actual rooms and details offer many examples of appropriate fixtures, fittings, colors, and finishes. That's important, according to Guild, because much of the character of a Victorian house lies not in the furnishings but in the architectural details.

Old buildings listed in National Register

Historical significance important factor in decision to list restored old homes

Associated Press

The pride you have as an owner and restorer of an old house can sometimes be taken one step further — to a listing on the National Register of Historic Places.

This same sense of pride is probably the main reason most homeowners pursue a listing. Unfortunately, federal tax credits that are available for a listing only apply to income-producing properties. But depending on where you live, pursuing a listing may yield some financial incentives on the state level.

In any case, the honorific recognition that comes with having your home listed on the National Register may help increase its value on the market. The register is the federal government's official list of properties that are significant in our history. It is maintained by the Department of the Interior and administered by the National Park Service.

There are several guidelines or criteria used to evaluate a potential registry entry. One is that the site or building be associated with a significant event in American history.

In the case of an old house, for example, perhaps an important document was signed there or the house functioned as a commercial building that was important to the development of local history.

Another guideline used is whether the potential entry is associated with the life of a person considered significant to our nation's past. This could apply to an old house if a famous historical figure lived there.

The third criterion deals with the question of architectural significance. If a house exhibits distinct characteristics of a certain period or method of construction or is a prime example of an architect's work, it may also be eligible for this listing.

A property can qualify if it has the potential to impart information important to American history or prehistory. But, this is usually reserved for archaeological sites.

Coupled with the above criteria, to be eligible for the National Register, a property must conform with another separate standard. The property must retain the integrity of its historical significance. That is, it must reflect what it looked like at the time it was claimed to be an important part of history. This is referred to as its period significance. Interiors, as well as building exteriors, may be a significant part of the picture. For example, if an important treaty was signed in your house — an event that obviously occurred inside — then to retain its integrity the interior should reflect that time.

It's important to note that a museum-quality restoration is generally the exception rather than the rule. The government recognizes that buildings are organic and change over time, reflecting different tastes. Most have had alterations. Therefore, a building's integrity is really a matter of degree.

It's the sum of the workmanship that's gone into the building, along with the retention of its original features and spaces. You cannot recreate integrity.

If you think your old house may qualify for this national recognition, you'll need the backing of your State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO). The folks there should be able to give you the guidance you need to get the registration process started.

No matter what basis you're using to qualify for inclusion on the National Register, your home's historical significance will have to be well documented.

Unique wrapping techniques create added flair for gifts

Associated Press

Gone are the days when the standard wrapping for gifts was a primly covered box topped with a cascade of curlicues and bows.

Forget the traditional wrapping ideas found at department store courtesy counters. For truly special packages, Country Home magazine suggests adding handcrafted flair.

Homemade wrapping techniques needn't conjure up images of gifts suffocating in tinfoil, the Sunday comics or a grocery bag.

For inspiration on mixing color and pattern, analyze everything from the garden to the attic. Look at the flowers in the garden, the clothes in the closet, the dishes in the sink.

Ignite a creative spirit with some of the following gift wrap suggestions:

■ Using plain paper as a canvas, stencil a folk design or experiment with a dreamy faux finish. The same sponge-and-rag finishing techniques used on walls and furniture adapt easily to paper.

■ Wrap a colorful wallpaper border around a plainly wrapped gift. For prints and patterns on a smaller scale, check the selection of wallpaper and borders at local miniatures stores.

■ Create eye-catching gift tags by gluing contrasting paper to the face of a piece of wood or sturdy cardboard. Cut the pieces into simple shapes. Circles, hearts and stars are easy to try.

■ Swathe a bouquet of flowers in patterned tissue paper — try red ticking stripes around a bunch of daisies. Pair a sheet of floral wrap with fall flowers plucked fresh from the yard. Place the bouquet atop a simple gift box or in a clear vase.

DEAR ABBY

Bride-to-be sounds off over usher's newly pierced ears

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: About six months ago, my husband's niece, "Heather," became engaged and asked our younger son, "Don," to be an usher at her wedding, which will take place next month. Don accepted.

Van Buren

We felt that Heather asked Don instead of his older brother, "Doug," because Doug had long hair. (Doug's hair is a beautiful shade of auburn and is always kept clean.)

Well, Don let his hair grow and now it's as long as Doug's. Don also had his ears pierced, and he wears small stud-type earrings.

When Heather saw Don with his "new look," she blew a gasket and asked me, "What's the deal with Don's earrings? And does he intend to wear them at the wedding?" (She said this behind Don's back when he was in the next room.)

I told her I didn't know. Then she criticized me for allowing my son to pierce his ears, saying if she were his mother, she'd never allow it. I told her if she wanted to have a decent relationship with her children, there would be times when she would have to let them do their own thing or she would lose them. Then she tried to make it sound like the priest wouldn't allow a man who wore earrings to be in the wedding.

Abby, should Don put his feelings aside and take the earrings out to be in the wedding? Or should he tell Heather he plans to wear them and leave the decision up to her? — DON'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I would hope that if Don is adamant about wearing the earrings in the wedding, he would tell Heather at once. Then she can decide to accept it or ask someone else to be an usher.

DEAR ABBY: On Valentine's Day, I sent my husband a small bouquet of flowers to show him how much I love and appreciate him.

When the flowers arrived, his co-workers must have made him the laughingstock of the office, because when he came home he said, "Honey, please don't send me any more flowers at work." Then he told me that the guys at work teased him all day, calling him "Loverboy" because of the flowers.

Abby, I don't see why a man should be made fun of just because his wife wants his co-workers to know how much she loves him. I can't see where sending flowers is something to be made fun of, can you? — VALENTINE

DEAR VALENTINE: No. Your husband's co-workers may have been jealous. That kind of behavior might be expected of grade-school kids, but not grown-ups.

However, since your husband has asked you not to send any more flowers to his workplace, respect his wishes. Next year, send a box of candy he can share with his co-workers. They could use some sweetening up.

DEAR ABBY: Because you have been a good friend and booster of Overeaters Anonymous for years, I want to share this with you.

I had been going to O.A. for only a few weeks. On Tuesday night, I was running late and knew I couldn't make it on time, but I decided to go anyway. I rushed from my home to the downtown library where the meetings were held. When I got there, I darted up to the third-floor meeting room as fast as I could. A glance at my watch told me that I was 10 minutes late.

The meeting was already in progress and the members were gathered around the table as usual. I quietly took an empty seat, and everyone stopped what they were doing to look at me.

As was the custom, I spoke up in a loud and friendly tone, "Hi, my name is Nancy, and I'm a compulsive overeater!"

Everyone looked at me and smiled. Then a gentleman said, "That's nice, Nancy; I'm a compulsive overeater, too, but Overeaters Anonymous is meeting on the second floor tonight. This is a meeting of the Coin Club." — NANCY

DEAR NANCY: Don't be embarrassed about the Coin Club incident. You put your 2 cents in.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? Get it off your chest by writing to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclosed a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Vacations at Easter end winter doldrums

By Loreen Arbus and Norm Chandler Fox
Copley News Service

Easter always has been one of our favorite times because this harbinger of spring takes us out of our winter doldrums. This time of year also happens to be a superb season for traveling since there are fewer crowds — unless you hapiessly pick spots such as Fort Lauderdale, Fla., or Palm Springs, Calif., which are inundated by hormone-happy college vacationers.

The weeks before and after Easter are perfect for couples to take romantic getaways, as well as entire families taking advantage of spring vacations. It's a delightful time to start practicing your backswing, breaststroke or hook shot. And like spring itself, it's a time for renewal — to give ourselves some needed revitalization before we coast into the hectic and seemingly endless activities of summer.

The following resorts should keep you happy while the Easter bunny is making his rounds:

HALEKULANI
Honolulu, Hawaii

While everyone seems to be heading to the outer islands, the smart folks are on Waikiki — relaxing on one of Hawaii's finest beaches. American Airlines offers excellent non-stop and one-stop service to Honolulu from major mainland cities, and being in the capital, you don't have to juggle with interisland connections.

Kalakaua Avenue and the surrounding streets have been spruced up so well as to resemble the tony shopping areas of Palm Beach, Fla. And Honolulu just happens to have the islands' most varied and delightful restaurants.

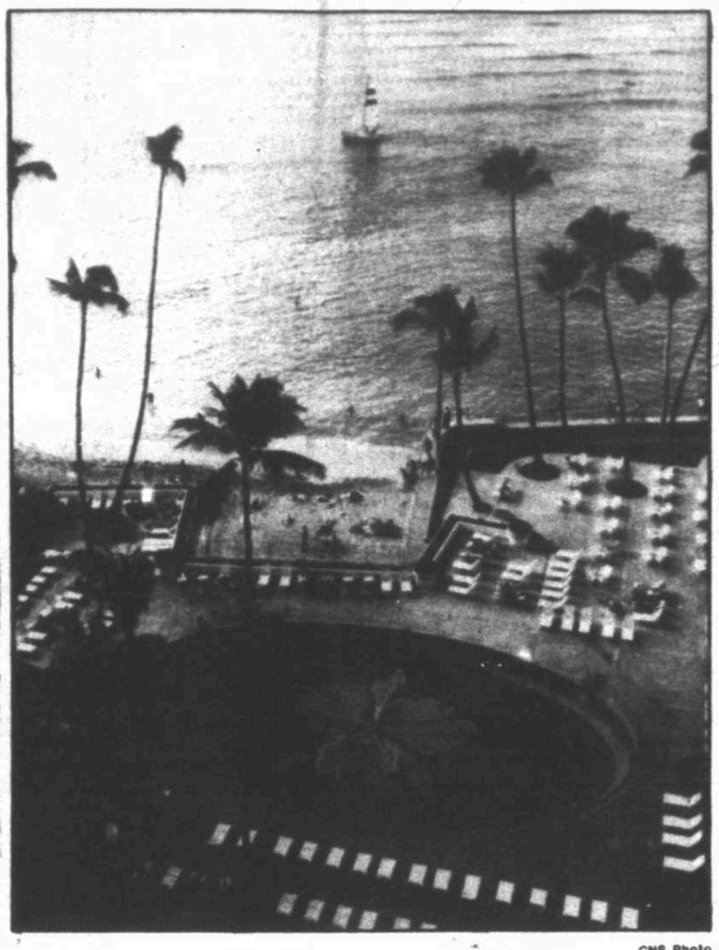
But the best news of all is The Halekulani, which is a bastion of the ultimate in luxurious comfort in an already extraordinary setting. Checking in consists of an assistant manager's accompanying you to your room, where you can sign the form in private, and the bellman will gladly unpack your belongings and put them away.

Each guest room has a large private balcony where you can have your room-service breakfast overlooking Diamond Head. If you open the closet shutter doors, you can gaze at brightly colored sailboats while soaking in a deep Japanese-style tub.

The commodious guest rooms have every modern convenience, such as remote-control televison, built-in hair dryer and refrigerator-bar. They also have the tranquillity of the Far East with exquisite flower arrangements, indirect lighting and orchid plants.

Dining in the hotel's gourmet room, La Mer, is to be treated to a refined elegance not found anywhere else in Hawaii. French-born chef George Mavrothalassitis performs culinary miracles with the varied island fish and such temptations as ravioli of escargots or Kiawe-smoked salmon.

Other island specialties can be enjoyed in Orchid's — the other dining room that also has a spectacular Sunday buffet brunch that's considered tops in Waikiki. And The House Without a Key offers breakfast and lunch along with live music and dance entertainment for cocktails at sunset.



CNS Photo

Guests at Hawaii's Halekulani resort have a choice of swimming in the waters of Waikiki Beach or in the oceanside swimming pool with distinctive orchid design.

The high ratio of employees to guests, providing unparalleled service, will remind you of the hotels in Hong Kong. Everyone from the phone operator to the doorman will address you by name after you arrive, making you feel like you've really arrived. And if your family has joined you for Easter vacation, they will love the giant pool decorated with a huge mosaic-tile orchid or simply the beach itself.

Honolulu is a great place for kids. They will enjoy side trips to Pearl Harbor and the touching U.S.S. Arizona Memorial or hiking up inside the volcano shell of Diamond Head or trying their hand in an outrigger canoe. But you'll treasure most your memories of peerless luxury in a hotel that merges the best traditions of East and West.

THE GREENBRIER
White Sulphur Springs, W.Va.

Spring comes early to this beautiful upland valley in the Allegheny Mountains, and Easter is heralded by a carpet of yellow and blue wildflowers. USAir offers direct service to the Greenbrier Airport outside of White Sulphur Springs from such hubs as Washington, Atlanta and Chicago.

Designated as a National Historic Landmark, The Greenbrier was founded in the mid-18th century, and its popularity as a society watering hole grew before and after the Civil War. Situated on 6,500 acres, the imposing Georgian-style main building with its additional wings and rows of town-house "cottages" all seem to reverberate the word "grand."

The rooms are spacious and decorated with lots of dark green and white, but the public rooms and parlors are knockouts ornamented with oil paintings, Oriental vases, Japanese screens, real English antique furniture and crystal chandeliers.

Operating on a modified American plan, which includes bountiful breakfasts and dinners, the hotel's elegant main dining room makes you feel like dressing up and expecting Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire to waltz in for a meal. We particularly like the breakfasts where you can indulge on Smithfield ham, hot biscuits and other Southern delights.

Dinners provide a wide array of fish, meats and fowl along with rich, gooey desserts such as chess torte and peanut pie. There is dancing to the music of Gershwin and Porter in the Old White Club after dinner.

During the day, it's difficult not to wear yourself out using the indoor and outdoor pools, Jack Nicklaus-designed golf course, five indoor and 15 outdoor tennis courts, biking, jogging and hiking trails, and horseback riding facilities. After the athletic endeavors, you can relax in the adjoining spa's mineral baths.

For the junior members of your family, there are daylong separate activities for all ages, which allow them to have their own vacation-within-a-family-vacation.

If you enjoy shooting skeet, the hotel maintains a separate lodge up on Kate's Mountain. Here, there's a gun club offering four separate trap and skeet fields on which to practice your marksmanship.

For the rod-and-reel fancier, the resort provides fishing gear, boats and guides to nearby lakes and streams that should be running high after the spring thaw.

Our favorite activity at The Greenbrier is hiring a horse and carriage and taking a picnic to a favorite secluded spot overlooking the entire Greenbrier complex. Now we know the origin of the term "Grand Hotel."

Private clubs helpful to business travelers

By Chris Barnett
Copley News Service

The late quipster Groucho Marx once said he would never join a club that would have him as a member, but Groucho didn't have to travel and entertain clients for a living. Just audiences who paid to see him.

But for businesspeople who visit a variety of cities, a club membership can make sense. One bill for food and drink once a month. Pampering and comfort in a strange town.

But can you sample the world of these often luxurious inner sanctums without shelling out the full price of a membership?

Normally, no. But if you're willing to be a tad tenacious, you can savor the sometimes considerable splendor and enjoy some graciousness found today in only the most expensive hotels.

The St. James's Club is a prime example. Headquartered in a regal building in one of London's choicest districts — St. James's off Picadilly — the club has branches in Paris, Antigua and, now, in Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles version, in a lovely art deco tower on Sunset Boulevard that was once a private apartment building, has a friendly members-only bar, a dining room, complete with a Paris chef, that is said to be one of the best in a city of fine restaurants, and a patronage ranging from Adam Ant to Jack Nicholson.

THE PRICE of admittance is not inexpensive: $750 as a one-time "initiation" fee and $750 as an annual membership fee; monthly dues are not levied.

But Allan Blest, the club's courtly general manager who just transferred in from Edinburgh, Scotland, where he oversaw the five-star Caledonian Hotel, will grant you a "one-day membership." It's built into the price of a room — a junior suite furnished in authentic antique art deco — that starts at $200 a night. Members pay the same price for an overnight stay.

Blest insists the Los Angeles St. James's Club is "like a quiet and beautiful town house, a home away from home, where we give (travelers) personal service, not lip service."

Indeed, for anyone entertaining clients in Southern California, the club, with its spectacular view of Los Angeles on smog-free days, beats most hostelries and restaurants where the tariff often is steeper. Plus, it has a health club, business center and a concierge to assist with arrangements at your next destination.

Not all clubs have such an open-door policy. And fewer have overnight accommodations. Club Corporation of America, which manages 190 private clubs in the United States, has a total non-discrimination policy in all of its clubs.

"But you have to be a member of one of our clubs to enjoy the privileges of our associated clubs," says Denise Bodman, regional marketing manager at CCA's western headquarters in San Ramon, Calif.

The cost of membership can range up to $2,000.

Bodman, whose husband, Bob, manages the 2-year-old and very popular City Club of San Francisco, says about the only way non-members can get into a CCA club for a look-see is to be the guest of a regular member. Or call ahead and the membership director, she says, will host a tour.

THAT'S NOT exactly true. At the Club LeConte on the 27th floor of the Plaza Tower in Knoxville, Tenn., club manager Marge Sowell says visiting travelers "who call ahead can utilize the club for a day and we'll just bill them direct."

The club has six small private dining rooms where members — or a visiting non-member — can hold a business lunch. Prices are competitive with restaurants — grilled swordfish with pineapple salsa is $16.25 — and employees have been trained to cater to traveling businessmen and women who often have special requests (typing a letter) or tight schedules. Staffers at Club LeConte currently are learning Japanese.

But Sowell shares a money-saving tip that makes club membership truly affordable. People who live and work outside the county where a CCA club is located, get memberships and monthly dues at half price and still get access to all 190 clubs.

"The smart thing is join the club where membership isn't the highest (i.e., the lowest) regardless of where you live."

For instance, Knox County members pay $600 one time and $59 a month dues; outside the county members pay $300 and $30 respectively. A little sleuthing could find the CCA club with a rock-bottom membership fee.

In a real sense, $30 a month gives you nearly 200 "offices" around the United States for doing business.

IN ATLANTA, if you "take the initiative" to approach the Atlanta City Club, manager Sean Laney will find you a "sponsor" who will invite you to enjoy the facilities. That includes a health club with Nautilus equipment, free weights, sauna and showers. Normally a full membership costs $800 as an initiation fee and $60 a month.

However, you must do a little homework first. Karen Noreen, membership director of the Metropolitan Club on the 67th floor of the Sears Tower in Chicago, is part of the CCA network, but unlike the clubs in Atlanta and Knoxville, she will not allow walk-ins and other non-members to enjoy the food, view and conveniences even if they call ahead.

Unfortunately, some clubs have eliminated their "walk-in" programs but not because they endangered the cachet. Joanne Olson, assistant general manager of The Lexington Club in Boston, said the policy was scrapped last October when a ring of thieves, claiming to be "visiting businessmen from out of town" rifled lockers and stole money and personal possessions.

"Still, we want to help business travelers," says Olson, whose fully equipped club is affiliated with International Racquet Sports Association, and has member privileges with over 1,000 clubs worldwide. "Just go through member services and explain who you are and how long you'd like to use the club — a day, a week or a month."

Businesswomen, particularly, prefer private clubs when they're on the road, especially for meals.

"NORMALLY, FOR a first-time business meeting, you meet halfway in some restaurant," says Bonnie Sparrow, a partner in the Atlanta architectural firm of Rosser Fabrap International. "But when I suggest a private club, like the Center Club in Tampa, the clients always come to me."

Says Sparrow: "These clubs relieve a lot of stress for me and I've never had a bad experience."

Western Union pioneered global business

But now the 139-year-old company may be forced to seek bankruptcy protection

N.Y. Times News Service

Western Union Corp., plagued by huge debt payments said this week in a filing that it may be forced to seek bankruptcy protection.

The 139-year-old company that pioneered global business communications with its telegraph and telex services mentioned the possibility in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

In its annual filing of its operating results, Western Union said that if it was unable to reach an agreement with bondholders on a refinancing, it might seek protection under the Federal Bankruptcy Code.

But the president and chief executive, Robert J. Amman, said Wednesday night that the company's management had no plans to file for bankruptcy.

He said that by the end of April the company would present its bondholders with a proposal to exchange existing notes and bonds for new debt securities that might include a lower interest rate or longer maturity.

Amman said the company, based in Upper Saddle River, N.J., had held discussions with major bondholders and was optimistic that they would accept the exchange.

"Our thinking is certainly not in terms of filing for bankruptcy at this time," he said.

Wednesday's disclosure still marked the first time since broad changes at the company in December 1987 that Western Union had said it was in danger of seeking bankruptcy protection.

Amman attributed Western Union's difficulties to high debt payments and the decline of the telex business as the fax machine has become popular.

All but $135 million of Western Union's debt was consolidated at the end of 1987 into a $500 million issue of high-yield "junk bonds" when the investor Bennett S. LeBow took control of the tottering company with a $25 million investment.

That junk bond issue initially paid an interest rate of 16.5 percent, and the rate was raised to 19.25 percent last summer when the bond's provisions required that Western Union seek to make it trade at 101 percent of par value.

The result was that Western Union is now paying $96 million a year in interest on the issue, plus $19 million for the older debt.

Western Union is uncertain whether it can meet a $51 million interest payment due on June 15, so management was forced by the company's auditors and lawyers to disclose the possibility of bankruptcy, Amman said.

Local auto dealers enjoy healthy market

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

After an oil crash that nearly killed the automobile market in Midland, the local market appears to have turned around but is no less aggressive, says the president of the Midland Auto Dealers Association.

Advertisements offering rebates and special interest rates to prospective car buyers have been prevalant for several months now as manufacturers seek to spark lackluster sales.

However, analysts say incentives are losing their effectiveness, a finding Steve Mansell of Midland agrees with. Mansell, president and general manager of Performance Honda, is also president this year of the six-member Midland New Car Dealers Association.

Still, he cautions, Midlanders can expect agressive sales pitches soon as dealers hit a peak selling season and try to move out inventory to make room for 1990-1/2 and 1991 models. "We've got a lot of cars here, and a lot on the way, so we have to sell," he says.

He characterizes Midland's new car market as healthy, saying business is good, and that it "is definitely a buyer's market. There are plenty of opportunities for someone wanting a good deal."

He proudly points out that buyers from larger markets such as San Antonio, Dallas and Houston are coming to the Permian Basin to purchase cars.

Interest rates are at a good level, there's a number of lines to choose from, and lenders such as GMAC, Ford Credit, Chrysler Credit and banks are anxious to lend money.

"We're coming out of a period where, (after the oil price collapse hit), banks and other lenders clamped down on lending," Mansell notes.

The impact of the economic downturn Midland suffered has had an impact on local auto dealers, as have changes in the way Americans buy cars.

There have been consolidations among local dealers, with some dealers going out of business and their auto lines being acquired by others.

As the economy turned downward, more people turned to used cars or less-expensive, entry-level new cars; giving local dealers the opportunity to expand these lines, or add to them. Mansell said dealers have also learned to streamline operations and to look for other new markets by adding or expanding service centers.

Nationwide, auto manufacturers are seeking to serve the first-time buyer, and to satisfy the growing demand for multi-purpose vehicles such as Cherokees, mini-vans, four-wheel drive vehicles and Suburbans. "I think you'll see a blitz and barrage of these products," Mansell predicts. "Every manufacturer is planning new products in these lines."

Gone are the days, he observes, when a customer would come in and want to buy "the red car with white stripes." Today's customer, in Midland and across the nation, is a lot more sophisticated and demands value.

"The manufacturers are realizing consumers are very intelligent about their choices — they look for value," Mansell says. "And they will find it. Value can't be changed."

He acknowledges that his group is aware they have an image problem, and members are working hard to improve it. "We're doing this through our people. We're trying to train them to communicate with the customers more. Dealers take any complaint seriously, as do the manufacturers."

The Green family is looking to bat their restaurant concept all the way to Dallas.

Home plate diner hits home run

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Baseball negotiations may delay the national pastime periodically, but the Home Plate Diner's business seems to go right on without a single time out.

The 5-year-old firm is projecting sales of $2 million this year from its three Lubbock restaurants and is making plans to expand to the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Ricky Green, who founded the company with his father, veteran fireman Don Green, became aware of an area on west 34th Street that lacked a convenient restaurant, and picked that site for the first store.

"It looked like an area that was not being utilized. I had lived out in that part of town two times, and when I wanted a hamburger I had to drive three or four miles. We thought there was enough going out there to do it."

The restaurant's instant customer acceptance confirmed the choice.

Texas Business

"We were pretty fortunate," Green added.

Don Green, the senior member of the family-owned business, had been looking for something to do after 30 years with the Lubbock Fire Department and is now manager of the second store, a location on 82nd Street in Southwest Lubbock.

The Home Plate Diner gets its baseball imagery from the athletic interests of Green's three sons, plus his own baseball experiences while in military service and as a coach of the summer leagues.

Almost everything about the restaurant operation reflects baseball — from the posters of major league players to the menu, which lists items ranging from "bat boy sandwiches" to "grand slam meals."

One of the sons, Royce, now manages the 34th Street location, while Ricky manages the newest store on 50th Street.

A third brother, Randy, who appreciates a more predictable lifestyle and work hours, is a buyer at Watson Foods, Inc.

"We couldn't wrangle him in," his father said.

Marlene Green, wife of Don, and mother of the three boys, helps out in the business as well.

Ricky Green, who has provided much of the impetus for the company, designed the food service business around personal tastes.

"The thing was set up basically to give what we would want if we were eating out — a good price and plenty of food.

"I didn't like going anywhere and getting short on my food, and I wanted a real chicken fried steak. I didn't want the frozen patties that a lot of people are using," he said.

SEG exposition gets underway

By John Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Dawson

Fisher

Nearly 1,000 geophysicistsfrom around the nation are expected to attend the Annual Midwest Meeting and Exposition of the Society of Exploration Geophysicists which gets underway today and continues through Tuesday, according to John F. Faught, general chairman for the meeting and president of the Permian Basin Section of SEG.

Faught says the meeting and exposition are important to geologists and geophysicists because they provide valuable update information to members of an industry undergoing rapid technological advances.

"The exhibits are very important to the event, because it provides manufacturers and service companies to present the latest in technology and techniques," said Faught, who has spent 30 years in the industry as a geophysical contractor.

Keynote speakers for the event will be Decker Dawson, current president of SEG and president of the Midland-based Dawson Geophysical Co., and noted University of Texas Geologist William Fisher.

Decker Dawson will open the exposition at 8:45 a.m. Monday with a keynote address entitled: Yet Another Dimension. A member of SEG since 1948, Dawson has been active on numerous committees including: professional affairs, public relations, finance and foundation.

The Tulsa native is also a past president and life member of the Permian Basin Geophysical Society, and currently serves on the board of the International Association of Geophysical Contractors.

He began his geophysical career in 1941 with Magnolia Oil Co. (now Mobil) and founded Dawson Geophysical in 1952.

William L. Fisher with the Bureau of Economic Geology will keynote the Tuesday session with a speech entitled: Oil Reserve Growth: Understanding the Complex Reservoir.

Fisher has long been a spokesman for the historic oil and gas producing regions such as the Permian Basin, proclaiming that 90 percent of the reserve growth in the U.S. will come from those regions.

Fisher says the remaining resource volume to be found is about 600 billion barrels and recovery will depend on price and advanced, optimally deployed technology.

Who's got the beef

WASHINGTON (AP) — South Korea has agreed to phase out all quotas and tariffs on American beef entering the country, according to Sen. Phil Gramm, who says Texas producers could find a lucrative new market for their cattle.

Gramm said full terms of the agreement "sets out procedures to eliminate all quotas and tariffs on American beef going into Korea."

Avon to Japan

TOKYO — For nearly two decades Avon Products Inc. was one of America's biggest success stories here, a company that spent years tailoring its products for Japanese women and learning how to outsmart a distribution system that has defeated many foreign companies.

It paid off: Last year Avon reaped a quarter of its corporate profits in Japan, even though the country accounts for less than a tenth of its sales.

But last year was also Avon's last in Japan. A few weeks ago, worried about takeover rumors and a $1.1 billion debt at home, the company sold its Japanese subsidiary to a little known Japanese company for $408 million, in the midst of a Japanese consumer spending binge.

Phillips pushes propane power

DALLAS — In another sign of the effort by large energy companies to promote alternative fuels more aggressively, Phillips Petroleum Co. will market propane gas for taxis, buses and fleets of vehicles owned by private companies and government agencies in the Denver area.

The Energy Department estimates that 330,000 vehicles in the nation are powered by propane.

The Bush administration considers propane one of several fuels preferable to gasoline because propane-powered cars emit far less pollution.

Propane costs about the same as gasoline by volume.

Army takes on Domino's Pizza

FORT BLISS, Texas (AP) — Domino's Pizza, taking advantage of the youthful military market, has opened a pizza store on Fort Bliss Army post.

The opening comes after yearlong negotiations and bidding for the lucrative contract and is the pizza-maker's first venture onto a military installation.

Fort Bliss spokeswoman Jean Offut said competition by private companies for on-post contracts is heated, as U.S. military services allow more private businesses on their property.

Fort Bliss already has contracts for dry cleaning, watch repair, a hotel, a florist and other fast food restaurants.

The youthful military market has been profitable for Domino's. In the past decade the pizza-maker has targeted military bases and college campuses with the payoff being 1,600 percent growth, said Moira McDermott, a spokeswoman at Domino's headquarters.

U.S. Seismic count down, international up

The Society of Exploration Geophysicists reports that the number of seismic land crews and marine vessels searching for oil and gas in the U.S. and U.S. waters decreased for the second consecutive month during February. The land crew total decreased by three to 100 and the marine crew remained the same for a total of 120. This represents a 3 percent decrease from January and a 15 percent decrease from February 1989.

Worldwide seismic exploration for oil and gas increased by six marine crews during September 1989 quarter with a total of 483. The number of land crews remained at 402 for a net increase of six crews over the June 1989 total of 477 crews and vessels active around the world.

Basin rig count gains 4

Staff Report

The Permian Basin rig count regained some of the previous week's losses, while the U.S. rig count slipped.

Baker Hughes Inc. reports that the Basin tally rose four to 112, while the U.S. rig count fell 15 to 908.

The U.S. rig count continued its normal first quarter pace to total 908, the company said.

The decrease in rig activity conforms to previous first quarters when the count generally is in a decline, according to Ike Kerridge Jr., an economist for Baker Hughes.

The year-to-date count, however, remains well ahead of the 1989 tally when 740 rigs were working, Baker Hughes said Monday.

In an unusual move last week, the count rose by 29 to total 923 with Texas heading other oil producing states with a gain of 30.

Marathon to sell cleaner burning gas

DETROIT — Marathon Oil Co., in an effort to popularize a cleaner-burning gasoline, says it will begin selling in limited quantities the first reformulated unleaded gasolines that can be burned by virtually all car engines.

Two previously announced efforts to sell reformulated fuel have been more limited in scope.

In California ARCO offers a reformulated leaded gasoline that can be used by cars made before catalytic converters were required equipment.

Conoco and Phillips Petroleum have been selling a reformulated unleaded gasoline in Denver, but only in the regular or lowest octane grade.

Marathon, a subsidiary of USX Corp., said Wednesday it would begin selling what it calls "Amaraclean" gasoline in regular (87 octane), midgrade (89 octane) and premium (92 octane) at 161 service stations in the Detroit area starting Monday.

Marathon said it would absorb the additional cost of producing the new gasoline for the time being, but later consumers would inevitably pay extra for the fuel if it was widely accepted.

"People might think that because this is reformulated they will have less performance — that isn't true," said Richard White, Marathon vice president of marketing.

"We want to make sure people want clean air and will try our gasoline."

While Congress debates a clean-air bill, some legislators favor a provision that would force the auto industry to produce vehicles that could burn methanol or some other cleaner-burning fuel to reduce pollution.

The petroleum and auto industries oppose such a measure, contending cleaning up gasoline can accomplish the same thing at far less cost and trouble.

SEG: Geophysicists meet for technical sessions

(From 1G)

He notes that a challenge will be to find subtle extensions of present oil fields, by-passed and trapped oil.

Meeting Chairman John Faught said seismic technology was being increasing used in the area of exploitation. "Two years ago nearly all the seismic activity in the Permian Basin was for exploration, but now a big percent is used for exploitation — to assist operators in better spotting infill wells and extending present fields."

Registration for the event opened today with regular sessions getting underway Monday at Midland Center and the Midland Hilton. Thirty exhibitors will also participate in the two day exposition.

In all 33 technical presentations and case histories will be presented in five sessions.

Topics will include a wide range of technical subjects from application of recording systems to analyzing reservoir heterogeneity to cluster analysis and painless 2-D and 3-D geometry.

Case histories will cover such topics as structural geology of the Marathon Thrust Belt, cost-effective methods to acquire seismic data and advances in seismic imaging and geological studies of the Permian Basin.

The Midwest Meeting is comprised of SEG sections from Tulsa, Denver, Oklahoma City, Dallas and Midland and is held in Midland every five years. SEG was founded in 1930 in Houston with 30 original members. Today, the society has over 15,000 members in 100 countries.

DINER: New diner concept may spread to Dallas area

(From 1G)

The company goes head-to-head with the fast food operations in competing for customers, but its founders decry the fast-food method.

"People think we are a fast food restaurant, and we actually are very speedy," Don Green said. "But we cook everything from order. If people come in and it is real busy, and they have to wait 15 minutes, they sometimes get a little upset."

Ricky Green added, "We can compete with them (fast food chains) because our food is better quality."

Royce Green said, "Everything is fresh every day; everything is as fresh as we can possibly get it."

The restaurant's "small" hamburger contains a quarter pound of meat, and its Home Run Burger about one-half pound.

A surprising variety of entrees is offered on the menu, which, in addition to burgers and "curly" fries, also includes fish and shrimp dinners, chicken breast strips, soft and regular tacos, baked potatoes with three choices of toppings, medium and large chicken fried steaks, and ham and cheese sandwiches.

Baseball's special glory, the hot dog, is available in the "Extra Base Hits" section of the menu, and a "Final Windup" of ice cream or fruit cobbler completes the lineup.

The company was launched without formal business school training on the part of any of the partners. It currently has 70 employees.

"The personnel we have have been really good for us," Royce Green said.

Referring to the company's inception, Ricky Green said, "I just started from scratch. I took a look at everybody else's and started getting an idea of what money was involved.

"We just went out there and took our lumps, worked hard and were lucky enough to get through it."

He said, "The main thing I have learned in the restaurant business, and from watching other restaurant businesses, is the management. I have seen a lot of them go in and out. But if they will just take care of business they will stay in business.

"A lot of them do good in the beginning, but then they get out and begin to spend all that money, and turn it (business operation) over to the employees, and that is when they go down."

According to Green, the family partners are at the stores during virtually all business hours, from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m., seven days a week.

Spill response not better since Valdez

WASHINGTON (AP) — Response to an oil spill as big as the one that polluted Prince William Sound, Alaska, a year ago wouldn't be much better today than it was then, officials say.

"We don't believe recovery capability is where it should be," Larry Dietrick of the Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation told a congressional hearing Thursday.

C.M. Harrison, executive vice president of Exxon Corp., said his company is concentrating on spill prevention, but also has upgraded response procedures.

However, he said he couldn't guarantee that an 11-million-gallon spill, like that from the tanker Exxon Valdez on March 24, 1990, would be fully recovered or kept off the shore.

Walter Parker, chairman of the Alaska Oil Spill Commission, said protection against spill damage was better in 1977 than it is now.

The three men and Coast Guard Rear Adm. Joel Sipes appeared before the House Interior subcommittee on water, power and offshore energy resources, which is investigating whether any improvements have been made since the spill.

Dietrick said Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., the company responsible for managing spills in Prince William Sound, says it can do a complete clean-up on a 2,000 barrel spill within 48 hours.

"The Department of Conservation is asking for a 48-hour clean-up capability for a much larger minimum spill of at least 250,000 barrels," the size of the Exxon Valdez disaster, said Dietrick.

Coastal backs out of deal to sell ANR Freight Systems

HOUSTON (SWN) — Coastal Corp. has decided not to proceed with its previously announced proposed sale of ANR Freight Systems, Inc. to Transcon Incorporated. Coastal has determined that the sale to Transcon would not be in the best interest of Coastal, ANR Freight Systems, its customers or employees, and intends to pursue other alternatives.

Coastal believes that its subsidiary trucking operations can be more successful through a re-focusing on ANR Freight's traditional market areas.

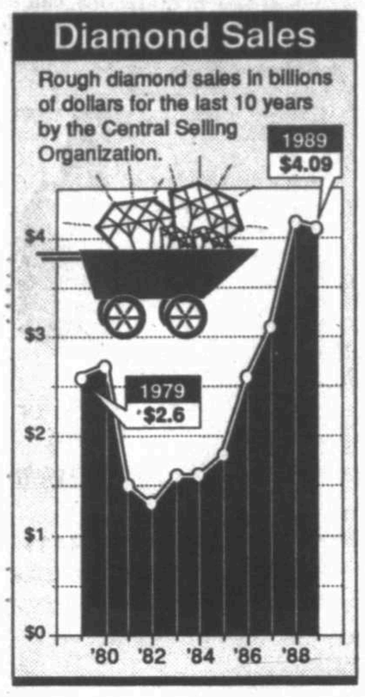
Business losing its sparkle for De Beers diamond cartel



Source: Central Selling Organization AP

By Cotten Timberlake

LONDON (AP) — A stone's throw from the smelly Smithfield meat market is an office building complex with no sign or anything to attract the attention of Londoners hurrying by.

Mounted cameras, jumpy guards and heavy doors keep out the uninvited. The gold-colored interior is hushed and luxuriously decorated.

This is the Central Selling Organization, London-based marketing arm of the De Beers diamond empire, controlled by the wealthy Oppenheimer family of South Africa. Its experts sort mounds of rough diamonds constituting 80 percent of the world's annual production.

But scratch the surface of this secretive world, and the diamond business loses some sparkle.

Sales have declined sharply, and the 56-year-old cartel is facing pressure to give producers better terms and allow them to sell more of their own gems.

Although its prosperity and control of the world diamond industry looks unchallengeable, the pressures could loosen its grip and crimp its profits.

"This year is going to be a critical one for De Beers," says Diamond Intelligence Briefs, a trade publication.

De Beers' South African interests face an uncertain future, largely because of a newly energized political will by the black majority in that country, an important diamond producer. The African National Congress has pledged to nationalize South Africa's major sources of wealth if it takes power.

Apparently attempting to limit risk, De Beers recently announced it would split South African and foreign interests into two publicly held companies, one based in Switzerland.

After growth spurts of 19 percent in 1987 and 35 percent in 1988, rough diamond sales fell 2 percent to $4.09 billion last year because of slowing economies, high interest rates and the organization's two double-digit price increases in 1988 and 1989.

The decline was sharpest in the second half of the year, when sales fell 24 percent from the first six months.

"There was a very definite, noticeable slack in demand," said analyst Peter Miller of Yorkton Securities Inc. in London.

The decline has limited De Beers' scope for raising prices. This past week, De Beers announced it was increasing prices 5.5 percent, compared to a 15.5 percent increase a year earlier.

The organization must this year renegotiate five-year contracts with Botswana, the second biggest diamond producer in terms of value, and Argyle Diamonds of Western Australia, the biggest producer in terms of quantity.

Japanese invade U.S. with credit card

By Rick Gladstone

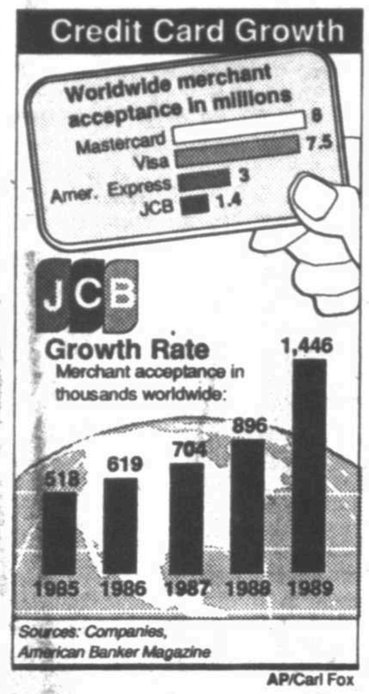
NEW YORK (AP) — Japan spent many years establishing itself in the U.S. marketplace with reputable products ranging from cameras to cars to copy machines. Now the Japanese are about to peddle us some powerful plastic.

JCB International Credit Card Co. Ltd., the largest credit card company in Japan, is aggressively expanding in the United States and plans to market the card to American consumers beginning this summer.

The most widely accepted plastic in the Far East already is issuing corporate cards to U.S. businesses. In addition, it is accepted by a growing number of American merchants, from hotels and airlines to swank retailers like Bergdorf Goodman, eager to encourage spending by wealthy Japanese visitors.

At least 300,000 American outlets are expected to welcome JCB cardholders soon, double the present number, JCB officials say. Worldwide, JCB is accepted by 1.4 million merchants, triple the number of five years ago.

The Japanese card company has negotiated deals with at least three card-processing services in the United States and is known to be talking with several U.S. banks about issuing the card, for which they would receive fees. The Bank of Hawaii issues the JCB card in that state.



AP/Carl Fox

JCB's effort has startled and alarmed the leading U.S. credit card companies, already embroiled in intense competition with each other. It also comes at a time of rising U.S. resentment over what is seen as Japan's arrogant and seemingly inexhaustible financial might.

"We think JCB is going to be one of the major competitive threats of the '90s," said Richard Woods, a spokesman for Mastercard International, which is accepted by about 8 million merchants worldwide.

"They have deep pockets. They're long-term players. There's no question they have an interest in providing global payment services," Woods said. "We're watching them very closely."

Visa International, accepted by 7.5 million merchants worldwide, also is monitoring JCB's forays into the United States, said spokesman David Brancoli. But he suggested that JCB should be watching out for its own backyard, where Visa is doing quite well.

"There are 25 million Japanese who have Visa cards," Brancoli said. "We expect it to increase to 40 million in Japan."

Founded in 1960 by Sanwa Bank, JCB stands for Japan Credit Bureau. It is the oldest and predominant credit card in Japan, with about 70 million cards issued, almost entirely to Japanese.

JCB's biggest threat may be to the American Express card, because they technically function in the same way, as charge cards targeted mainly to the same market of affluent consumers.

On the other hand, Visa, Mastercard and the upstart Discover card, issued by retailing giant Sears Roebuck & Co., function as credit cards, targeted to a much wider income range of consumers. Users are charged interest on the amount they don't repay.

Odessan Dolores Petersen stands in front of her oil, "Through the Valley...," which was awarded Best of Show in the Midland Arts Association's Spring Juried Show, hanging at the Museum of the Southwest through May 5. Mrs. Petersen, who uses "surrealistic symbols" in her paintings, says of this work, "Although it's a portrait of me, the artist, it could be anyone who stares out at the observer totally unaware of the conflict that's going on behind them. Obviously, it's a conflict between the good on one side and evil on the other. The black drape represents death. The flowers represent life and the person wears black, but over her shoulders is a red shawl, representing death and life. All of us are walking through the valley unaware of the struggle that's going on around us."

Petersen: Surrealistic artist

By Georgia Temple
Staff Writer

Dolores L. Petersen believes it's never to late to follow one's dreams.

"Even if women don't follow their stars or don't do the kind of work that they want to do through most of their lives, it's still not too late if they work hard enough, have a goal in mind, and then pursue that goal," said Mrs. Petersen, Best of Show recipient in Midland Arts Association's Spring Juried Show.

It is on display at the Museum of the Southwest through May 5.

"They might have to run pretty hard and fast to catch up like I'm doing, but it's not impossible. It's all possible."

Mrs. Petersen has spent the past 10 years building a career she began pursuing in the early 1950s. A native of Colorado, Mrs. Petersen received her degree in art and education in El Paso in 1954, then pursued graduate work at the University of Utah, before marrying and having two children.

"In order to give the kind of attention to children that they deserve, I quit painting for almost 20 years," Mrs. Petersen said.

"And then, 10 years ago, I married Tom Petersen in Odessa. He encouraged me to begin painting again."

The two first met in El Paso in 1947, where remained friends until 1953. Since last seeing one another, they had both been married and divorced for a second time. Today, they are into their third marriage, yet Mrs. Petersen has only one ex-husband. Petersen is in the same position. He has only one ex-wife because he is Dolores Petersen's first ex-husband and her third husband.

"We married when we were young," Mrs. Petersen said, recalling her first marriage to Tom Petersen in 1950. "He was in college, and then I went to college, and I got my degree, both of them. Then I was going to go off and be an artist. I think in those days, we wanted to be free, wanted to be free spirits, and I was too young to be married so we divorced.

> "Through realism, the artist can convey a message or give a mood to the viewer. Art then becomes meaningful to the public."
> — Dolores Petersen

"He married someone else, and I married someone else, and we both had two children. And 28 years later we ran into each other, and we were both divorced, and we married again."

After her last divorce, Mrs. Peterson moved back to El Paso where her parents still lived. She had difficulty landing a job.

"I wasn't bilingual, and I was too old. I was qualified to be a teacher, but they've got a lot of young teachers; they don't need old ones."

Petersen had worked at El Paso Products for almost 30 years by 1980. His job sent him to El Paso frequently. On those trips, he had never called his former mother-in-law. In 1979, he did.

"She invited him to dinner," Mrs. Petersen said. "She didn't tell me he had called. She just asked me over to dinner."

Mrs. Petersen remembers that night.

"The doorbell rang. She answered it and I heard this familiar voice, and I knew immediately who it was. And it was like 28 years just melted away — the whole center of a person's life. Twenty-eight years is a long time, and it was like it never happened. Immediately, we were young again — the same as we had been back in 1950. We felt the same."

The two were married for the second time in March 1980. Now Mrs. Petersen is pursuing the career she dreamed of 40 years ago. She credits her husband with helping her succeed.

"He asked me what would I like to do more than anything in the world," she said referring to the beginning of their second marriage.

"I said, 'I would like to be a painter. I would like to be the very best that I'm able to be.' He said, 'Do it.' He has helped me in every way he can possibly help."

When Mrs. Petersen first began painting again, she was shocked.

"It was like I had never painted before. I was a compete amateur. I couldn't seem to remember much of what I had learned in graduate school."

She bought books on art, studied hard, and learned to experiment with new techniques and ideas. The results pleased her.

"I started winning awards in about 1983," Mrs. Petersen said. "Since then, I have won the top awards all around this region and also in national competition."

Her latest award was at Midland Arts Association's (MAA) Spring Juried Show.

Other winners in the MAA show are:

- Oil/acrylic division — Francis Fitzgerald, Midland, first; Jim Flippo, Seagraves, second; J. Armstrong Johnson, Odessa, third; and Doris Spires and charles Pruitt, both of Midland, honorable mentions;
- Watercolor division — Cynthia Wolfe, Midland, first; Mary Rasmussen, Midland, second; Herb Cooper, Midland, third; and Paula Faskin, Cooper and Marvin Stephenson, honorable mentions;
- Graphics division — Candace Faber, Lubbock, first; Kathy P. Ward, Odessa, second; Leslie D'Allesandro Hill, Midland, third; and Midlander Patricia Netherland, honorable mention;
- Photography division — Gretchen Van Cleave, Midland, first; Jack Stanley, Midland, second; Cia Hager, Midland, third; and Ms. Van Cleave and JoAnna King, honorable mentions;
- Three dimensional division — Kathy P. Ward, Odessa, first; Dan Haller, Midland, second; and K. Rochelle Wimmaims, McCamey, third.

The museum and the MAA are hosting two noon Brown Bag Lectures in conjunction with the exhibit. The first will be presented April 4 by MAA members Sharon Miller, new ceramics; Irma Gros, painting on silk; and Joyce Low, stained glass. The second lecture, scheduled for April 18, will be presented exhibition winners

ART: Painter says she is realist

(From 1H)

Mrs. Petersen, Gretchen Van Cleave and Dan Haller.

Mrs. Petersen, who describes herself as a "realist," has had one-man shows in Texas, New Mexico and Arkansas. She works in oil, watercolor, pen and ink and silk and teaches classes in developing the right brain hemisphere for greater accuracy in drawing.

Within much of her work she uses what she calls, "surrealistic symbolism. Everything in my paintings — every object, every color, every value, every intensity, I choose in order to give a mood to the work."

She sums up her general philosophy by saying, "Through realism, the artist can convey a message or give a mood to the viewer. Art then becomes meaningful to the public."

Gospel music finds new home

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Up the street a barker holds open the door for a peek at the nude dancer grinding away on a table top. Another show is advertised as the French Orgy, and the sign at the female impersonators' club says, "boys will be girls."

Music blasts from the bars and the T-shirt shops. Tourists dance in the street, drinks in hand.

Bourbon Street is in full swing, and so is the Gospel and Blues Tent where Sherman Washington and the Zion Harmonizers are raising their voices in tight harmony while the crowd raises theirs in approval.

"It's wonderful. The people really get into it. They shout and carry on. It's a real joy," said Washington.

After years in churches and concert halls, gospel has found a new home in a cabaret setting on Bourbon Street. The same people who pay to hear Dixieland and Cajun pay to hear the traditional black religious music.

"It's sure not church, but I think everyone has a good time listening to us," Washington said.

Accompanied by a guitar and drums — and sometimes keyboards, tambourine and base — the Zion Harmonizers sing the same songs you can hear in black churches and tents across the United States.

The hand-clapping music, an integral part of New Orleans' musical heritage, includes many of the standards such as "Closer Walk," but other numbers are less well known.

"We have our own way of singing; our own style of harmonizing. You can't listen to it long without clapping your hands. It's what you would call an upbeat sound," Washington said.

The introduction of gospel to rowdy Bourbon Street was made this winter by Ian Hardcastle, a white Canadian who doesn't sing it and didn't even know about it a decade ago.

"I'd never seen a gospel group. Then in 1972 I visited the Jazz Fest and heard it for the first time. That alone made me want to move to New Orleans," Hardcastle said.

A real estate developer who restored historic buildings in Canada, Hardcastle moved south to live part-time in 1987. He now divides his time between the French Quarter and Toronto.

"It might seem a little funny to some people to have us singing gospel in a place like Bourbon Street, but, who knows, maybe it gets a different kind of spirit into folks. The Lord works in mysterious ways and I don't think he minds us making music wherever we are," said Washington.

Although Washington, 63, developed his music in church and the Zion Harmonizers were started by a Baptist minister, their performances and those of the other groups that play at the tent are strictly that — performances.

Singer believes God brought him to Petra

By Georgia Temple
Staff Writer

A decade ago, singer John Schlitt's life was "taking one of those gigantic nose dives." He seriously contemplated suicide.

What had brought Schlitt, lead singer with Head East, to such desperation?

Alcohol and cocaine.

A 12-year-old Schlitt discovered his love for music when he bought his first stereo. He could sing, so he learned to play the guitar. At 13, he formed his first band. He sang with a rock group in college until he almost flunked out. He quit the band until the day of his last final exam.

Then he rejoined what was to become the successful rock and roll band Head East. His voice is on the first six albums recorded by the group. The first went gold. Between 1973 and 1980, Head East toured the country in "pretty much all the major tours happening at that time" plus the group was getting "air play all over the world. To a lot of people it was a success story."

To Schlitt it became a sure path to destruction, beginning when the band worked bars.

"I'D HAVE a beer then later another beer," Schlitt said in a telephone interview. "As time went on, I graduated into six packs. Then when we got into the touring circuit, the big time so to speak, the six packs turned into cases. When that didn't seem to quite fill the bill, I started going into the harder stuff — vodka and wine and that sort of stuff."

In 1977, about the time the group's first album went gold, Schlitt was introduced to cocaine.

"The way it started was the backstage parties, and it was real easy to come by. Depending on how big the party was, would be the amount of coke that was there.

"I tried a line. Then next time I tried a couple. Then the next time, I thought I'd buy a half a gram. As time went on, all of a sudden, I was buying full grams."

At first, a gram would last Schlitt a week. Then, a gram lasted three days. Then, he found himself needing a gram a day to survive.

"It broke me. When the beginning of 1980 came around, a drastic change took part. I got out of the band. All the time I was doing these things, I was lying to myself.

"IT'S FREE. The coke was free to a point. The booze was always free. 'If I ever leave the band, I can quit at the drop of a hat,' I told myself.

"It didn't take me long to find out I was lying to myself. I couldn't quit. I had to beg, borrow and steal to make sure I had enough money to keep my habits going — both the booze and the drugs."

Schlitt was scared. For years he had kept his drug habits away from home. Then from the beginning of March 1980 to August of that year, he went on "one of the biggest binges of alcohol and drugs" he had ever experienced.

"By the time August came, the guy that had been on stage and had been the addict finally made it home.

"I can almost remember the morning when I woke up on the couch the night after our wedding anniversary, and my boy, who was at that time about 2 years old, was looking at me with a real strange look on his face wondering why I was sleeping on the couch, and why I looked so weird.

"That's when I decided maybe the life of my family might be better off if I were gone. It was the first and last time that I seriously though about suicide. I was sitting on the couch trying to determine whether it would be better if I just shot myself or took pills. I decided that pills would be better. I wouldn't leave a mess."

THE DAY he contemplated suicide, he had no way of knowing that a decade later he would find himself rocking and rolling for Christ. Since 1986, Schlitt has been lead singer for the Christian rock group Petra, which will perform at Midland's Chaparral Center at 7 p.m. Monday.

"I think that music is the most universal and powerful tool for communication there is," Schlitt said. "Look at commercials. These people are experts at selling products, and they use music.

"Music is powerful. It can bring a message across. It also can be used in praise and worship.

"The style of music that we are playing right now, we tried very hard to make sure it's the kind of music these kids are used to — we use their language. And we want to use their language to bring across the message we know is truth."

The road from active alcoholic and addict to Christian rock singer with one of the most established Christian rock groups was not paved in gold.

Schlitt's wife had become a Christian six months before he hit his bottom.

"SHE KEPT trying to tell me about this new relationship she had with Jesus Christ, and it meant nothing to me because I was still busy trying to be cool and build a new band and be a big rock star to prove to everybody how important I was. I wouldn't listen. I was too busy doing it my way."

At one point, Schlitt even told his wife, "Fine. I'll be a Christian when I've done everything I want to and have had as must fun as I want to. I knew Christians had no fun, right?"

The day he hit bottom, his wife approached him about talking with her pastor.

"My thoughts were — 'It's not going to help, but I'll do it to let her know I tried.'

"I went to the pastor that night, and I went on hating the world. I owed everyone. My life to me was completely ruined. There was no way I was going to climb out of it."

The pastor said to Schlitt, "John do you know about Jesus Christ?"

SCHLITT TOLD the pastor, "Yeah, I know who Jesus Christ is. Son of God. Died on the cross. He's in the Bible."

The pastor told him he was overlooking the most important aspects of Christ. Schlitt well remembers what the pastor said next.

"He died on the cross for you. He went and did battle and arose and is alive today, he's here right now tonight. He knows what you're planning. He has a plan for your life. He wants to take over, and he wants to change your life for you."

Schlitt was amazed. He says, "Nobody knew what I was thinking about."

The pastor asked Schlitt if he would let Jesus take over, if he would let Jesus do what Schlitt hadn't been able to do and that was bring peace into his life?

"By that time, I truly believe that the Holy Spirit had hit me between the eyes. I just wanted to know how quick I could become a Christian. I accepted the Lord that night. I've never been the same since, and I don't regret one second of it."

SCHLITT REMEMBERS how changed he was when he left the pastor's house that night.

"I walked out of that house going into the same world I hated before as I was walking in, and for the first time I looked up and the sky was full of stars. I'd never looked at the sky before in my whole life. I could care less about the sky. All of a sudden it looks nice. I finally had enough peace in my heart to care."

Schlitt had always told himself, "Work hard. Work hard. Make the band your total life. Then, when you get rich, you can pay back your family. You can make it up to them."

He knew that night that he had been lying to himself.

His family was "the treasure that I had been looking for for so long."

He quit the music business. His engineering degree didn't land him a job. Instead he found himself sweeping floors in a tool and dye factory for $4.90 an hour.

"AND PRAISED God for it," Schlitt says.

He attended church and began to learn how mistaken his conceptions of Christians were. Perhaps his biggest awakening, he says, was discovering "Christians out there who are cool."

"From the end of '81 through the end of '85, I went from sweeping the floor in a tool and dye factory, through four or five stages of engineering. As each new promotion came along, it was in perfect timing. I needed it badly to pay debts."

Schlitt bought his first home. His children were in Christian schools. He liked his job. He was involved in a "great church."

"I thought I had the American dream, but for some reason I knew something was going to change real quick," Schlitt says. He told his wife, "Don't get used to this. I've got a feeling this is not it."

Two weeks later, Bob Hartman, lead guitarist, songwriter and founder of Petra, called.

"I couldn't believe it. It had been five years. I thought I would never sing again, and especially for a world-renown band such as this.

"What was strange after he finally asked me, I realized this was exactly what God wanted. I knew for a fact right then that this was going to be it."

The Christian rock group Petra will perform at Midland's Chaparral Center Monday at 7 p.m. On stage with Petra will be Josh McDowell, a well-known youth speaker. Tickets, priced at $13 the day of the show, are available to groups for $10 each and individuals for $12 each if purchased in advance. Ticket outlets are Chaparral Center, The Lighthouse, Midland, and The Scripture Shop in Odessa. McDowell will hold a parent seminar entitled "Why Wait," at Kelview Heights Baptist Church, 402 W. Scharbauer Drive, from 2 to 5 p.m. today. For more information call 682-3842.

Deli clerk has surprise delivery

BRANDON, Fla. (AP) — A supermarket deli clerk who didn't want to miss work was busy taking orders when she got a surprise delivery: a 6-pound, 15-ounce girl.

Lillie Mae Guillory, 30, went into labor with her third child and gave birth last weekend in a tiny room behind the supermarket's video rental counter.

"I'm an idiot," she said with a laugh later from a hospital bed. "I knew I was close, but I didn't want to miss a day of work."

Mother and daughter were doing fine Monday, said assistant store director Bobby Jackson.

"I said, 'Lillie, you are not having that kid on my shift,'" Jackson recalled. He told her to go home, but it was too late.

Jackson ran next door, and summoned paramedics.

Meanwhile, assistant manager Judy Foronda and cashier Diane Williams helped with the delivery.

"I ran to the bakery to get some towels, and by the time I got back the baby's head" was just becoming visible, Foronda said. "Diane held the baby, and I held Lillie's hand, and it just popped out."

Williams also works as a medical assistant for a Tampa doctor, and helped with a delivery years ago.

Guillory was fine, "a little scared," Williams said. "She was more concerned about people walking in on us than anything else."

When paramedics arrived they cut the baby's umbilical cord and took mother and daughter to the hospital.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Pianist will play at UTPB

ODESSA — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin presents pianist Julien Musafia at the Performing Arts center at 3 p.m. April 1.

Musafia

The free performance is sponsored by the Odessa Cultural Council and will include works by Bach, Mozart, Chopin, Liszt and Bartok.

Born in Bucharest, Musafia studied with Floorrica Muzicescu, teavher of the legendary Dinu Lipatti.

His career as one of the superstar pianists of Eastern Europe was interrupted by his decision to emigrate to the United States where for 30 years he has been a professor of piano at Cafifornia State University, Long Beach. He has performed in Carnegie Hall with cellist Mtislav Rostropovich and has concertized in major cities throughout the United states, Europe and Asia.

The world famous Budapest Quartet awarded him first prize in the Coleman Chamber Music Competition. Musafia is also a conductro and ethnomusicologist. The Santa Barbara News-Press wrote of him, "One inevitably thinks of Rubinstein when hearing Musafia."

The Los Angeles Daily News praised his "ardent lyricism and inspired simplicity...artistry in every note."

For more information call UTPB.

Crafts fair upcoming

GLEN ROSE — Oakdale Park in Glen Rose will host its 15th annual Bluegrass Picnic and Arts and Crafts Fair Friday through April 1.

The three-day program features traditional bluegrass music in an informal atmosphere. Numerous jam sessions will be scattered throughout the tree-shaded park. Guest will go from group to group listening to such bluegrass favorites as "Rocky Top" and "Foggy Mountain Breakdown."

The arts and crafts fair will feature handmade items and crafts, including woodwork, ceramics, crochet, needlework, quilts and paintings. Artisans and craftsmen from every area of the state are participating in the show and sale which will be open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. friday and Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. April 1.

Oakdale will be serving its homemade country stew for 25 cents a bowl and coffee for only 10 cents a cup. a full service snack bar serving hamburgers and barbecue sandwiches also will be open.

Oakdale Park is a campground/resort specializing in family recreation and entertainment. Cabins, trailer hookups, a playgorund and restrooms with easy access for handicapped persons are amony the amenities.

Admission to the park is $2 per car. For more information call 1-817-897-2321.

Soprano to join chorale

Soprano Paulina Stark joins the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale in the final Classical Series Concert of the season.

Ms. Stark has performed in concert, opera and recitals throughout the United States and in numerous countries abroad. She has been the featured soloist with major orchestras including the Halle in England, the Jerusaleum in Israel, the Monte-Carlo in Monaco, the CBS in New York, the Houston, Dallas and many others, under the direction of such notable conductors as Sergiu Comissiona, Lawrence Foster, Lukas Foss, Margaret Hillis, Eduardo Mata and the late Sir John Barbirolli.

Concert times are 8 p.m. April 3 at Lee High School in Midland and at 8 p.m. April 5 at Odessa's Bonham Junior High.

The Midland concert is sponsored by Mrs. Mary frances "Chan" Driscoll, and the Odessa performance is sponsored by NCNB Texas, Odessa and Midland banking centers.

Tickets are $14 for preferred seating, $10 for general admission and $6 for students and senior citizens. They may be purchased in Midland at Team Bank and in Odessa at Bank One or at the door. For more information call the Symphony Concert Line, 563-5269.

Manzini

Manzini to stage magic circus

The Manzini Magic Thrill Circus performs at Midland Center March 30 at 6:30 p.m.

The show features the "watertank escape" from a galvanized can filled with water and secured by padlocks.

Advance tickets, priced at $5 for adults and children, may be purchased by calling 683-8808. Tickets are priced at $6 at the door.

The event is sponsored by the Midland County Sheriffs Deputy Reserve.

Poem contest announced

Creative Endeavors of Independence, Kan., is accepting entries for its second annual Spring Poetry Competition.

Entrants will be eligible for more than $200 in prizes including the $50 first prize.

An individual may enter up to three original poems on any topic. Poems will be judged on originality, sincerity and artistic appeal.

No entry fees are charged; however, a self-addressed, stamped envelope must be included with entries. The entrant's name and address must be placed at the top of each page of poetry.

A separate category is offered for children age 12 and under. First prize is $10. Children's entries need to include their age and the signature of a parent or teacher verifying the poem as an original work.

Entry deadline is April 30. Entries are to be mailed to Poetry Contest, Creative Endeavors, Route 2, Box 73A, Independence, Kan., 67301.

Piano concert set

ODESSA — Pianist Clive Swansbourne will give a free performance at the Univeristy of Texas of the Permian Basin's University Founders Building at 8 p.m. April 7.

Swansbourne

The program includes Beethoven's "Hammerklavier" Sonata and works by Chopin, Debussy and Tippett.

Swansbourne, now in his second year as a faculty member at UTPB, has performed recitals this year in Great Britain, Germany, Switzerland, Boston, New York City, Houston, Los Angeles, Dallas, Atlanta and Pittsburgh.

The Boston Globe wrote of his recital there, which was broadcast on National Public Radio, "This was quite an event...will we hear this fine young pianist again soon please?" The New York times wrote of his recent concert in carnegie Hall, "His playing is interesting and individualistic...his readings often had the quality of passionate improvisations."

Paintings at OC gallery

ODESSA — Paintings by George Moseley, Larry Rose and Josephine Jones are on exhibit in Odessa College's Instructional Building Gallery through March 30.

Moseley, who is a graduate of OC and received his master's of fine arts degree from North Texas State University, said the significance of his work "lies in capturing the essence of man's concerns — space, the conquest of space and technology."

Rose, who received a bachelor's in painting and drawing from North texas state University, is exhibiting his "Parrot and Fish Series."

Ms. Jones said her work aims "to bring attention to those events which are often unpleasnat but are real to eveyr man." Ms. Jones has a master's of arts degree in art history, sculpting and painting from Texas Women's University.

Hours are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday.

Symphony plans concert

Tickets are now available for the Midland-Odessa Symphony family concert April 28 at Lee High School.

"Entitled 'We Are All Ears,' this concert literally and figuratively will 'stretch the listener's ears' as we are challenged to 'hear through our mind's eyes and ears' while listening and watching numerous 'mini-capades' as brought to us by Maestro Don Th. Jaeger and the orchestra," says a release from the organization.

Tickets, priced at $5 for adults and $3 for students or senior citizens, may be purchased at Team Bank in Midland or at the symphony office, 3100 LaForce Blvd, terminal. For more information on this concert, which is sponsored by the Midland Reporter-Telegram, call the Symphony Concert Line, 563-5269.

Festival artists sought

Los Manos is currently seeking artists for Septemberfest 1990.

Deadline for applications is April 15.

The festival will be held September 7, 8, and 9, and is open to individual artists and craftspersons representing their own original work.

Categories for the juried show include ceramics, fiber, leather, jewelry, oil, photography and pottery. Also included are sculpture, stained glass, watercolor and woodwork; however artists are not limited to these categories.

Artists interested in receiving an application or more information should write to: Los Manos Septemberfest, P.O. Box 50668, Midland 79710; or call the Artist Chairman at 694-5531.

Las Manos is the auxiliary organization for the museum.

Jazz concert scheduled

The West Texas Jazz Society presents Jim Galloway All Star Quartet in concert at 8 p.m. April 6 at the Midland Hilton.

The quartet features Galloway on saxophone, Johnny Varro on piano, Bob Haggart on bass and Gene Estes on drums.

Cost is for non-members general admission $15 and reserved seating $25. For members, the performance is free for general admission. Reserved seating for members is $10.

For phone reservations call 682-2988 or 563-1701.

In addition, Galloway, the 1983 winner of the Procanada jazz award for his contributions in the field of jazz, will perform for students at Lee High School at 8:30 a.m. April 6.

'La Boheme' to air

Puccini's "La Boheme" will be broadcast live from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera house at 12:30 p.m., Central Time, Saturday over the Texaco-Metropolitan Opera Radio Network. It will be heard locally over radion station KWMJ, 103 F.M.

The cast will include Kallen Esperian as Mimi and Nancy Gustafson as Musetta, both in the Met broadcast debuts, Francisco Araiza as Rodolfo, Brian Schexnayder as Marchello, Timothy Noble as Schaunard, Kevin Langan in his broadcast debut as Colline and Renato Capecchi in the two roles of Benoit and Alcindoro.

Conductor will be Ralf Weikert. The announcer will be Peter Allen.

Museum showing photos

ODESSA — The Presidential Museum, 622 N. Lee St., again is hosting a Photography Competition and Exhibition.

In its sixth year, the competition, titled "A Kinder and Gentler Nation," is open to amateur and professional photographers.

The exhibition opens May 3 and will hang through June 2. Entries will be accepted April 24 through 28 and are to be delivered to the museum during regular operating hours from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Deadline is 5 p.m. April 28.

For more information call 1-332-7123.

Dibert photos exhibited

ODESSA — An exhibition of hand-colored black and white photographs by New York photographer and artist Rita Dibert is on display through March 30 in Odessa College's Options Gallery in the Learning Resource Center.

The Options Gallery is open 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

A visiting associate professor of photography at Harwick College in Oneonta, N.Y., Ms. Dibert has taught in California and Michigan. She received her bachelor and master's of fine arts degrees from the University of Michigan.

Music festival held

The Midland Junior Music Festival was held at First Baptist Church this month.

The festival is connected with the Texas Federation of Music Clubs. Around 70 students participated.

Judges were Ruth Ardis and Nancy Hicks of Odessa.

Clubs and teachers involved included Harmony, Marian Ailes; Alla Capriccio, LouNelle George; Chopin, Elizabeth Roweck; and Kinder Keyboard, Mary Frances Griffiths.

"In Focus: A Photographic Society" is exhibiting at the McCormick Gallery in the Allison Fine Arts Building, Midland College.

The show hangs through April 6 and includes about 100 works by 15 photographers. The opening reception is set for 2 to 4 p.m. today at the McCormick Gallery. The public is invited to attend.

The group's most recent show was at the Photographic Center, Dallas.

Big Bird, friends coming to MC

"Sesame Street Live" celebrates its 10th season with "Silly Dancing," which comes to the Chaparral Center the first week in April.

Tickets are on sale for "Silly Dancing" at the Chaparral Center box office. Tickets are $9 with a $1.50 discount for children 12 and under. Groups of 20 or more receive a $2 discount.

Performances are scheduled for Tuesday, April 3, at 7:30 p.m., and Wednesday, April 4, at 4 and 7:30 p.m.

Written by Norman Stiles, head writer for Children's Television Workshop's "Sesame Street," "Silly Dancing" takes the educational elements of the series and combines them on stage with high energy singing, dancing and audience participation numbers for a unique family experience.

In this year's production, Big Bird asks his friends to be in his "Silly Dancing" show. His show leads the audience through 90 minutes of famous dance styles as Bert, Ernie, Prarie Dawn, Cookie Monster, The Count, Grover and Oscar the Grouch show Big Bird everything from jazz, tap and swing to polkas, sambas and the twist. These Sesame Street Live regulars are joined by guest starts Barkley the Dog, Elmo, Telly Monster and Oscar's favorite grouch, Grundgetta.

As Big Bird's show progresses, a story unfolds that teaches a special lesson about the importance of practice and the value of taking pride in individuality.

"Silly Dancing," a VEE Corporation production is produced by Bob Shipstad and presented in cooperation with Children's Television Workshop.

Sweet Adelines changing name

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Sweet Adelines Inc., founded in 1945 for women who wanted to experience the bliss of barbershop harmony, is not changing its tune — just its name.

"Some people don't think Sweet Adelines indicates what our organization i. about," said Jorja Jacobs, communications director for Sweet Adelines, which will become Harmony International Corp. on May 1.

The organization is about singing, but it has come a long way since a group of women adopted the name from Harry Armstrong's 1903 song, "You're the Flower of My Heart, Sweet Adeline."

Now there are 30,000 members in a dozen countries, from New Zealand to Japan to Canada. The board of directors voted unanimously last summer that an international group deserves an international name.

Pair to give voice recital at OC, St. Andrew's church

Staff Report

ODESSA — Odessa College's music department will present baritone David Corman and soprano Kim Corman in a voice recital at 8 p.m. April 2 in the Jack Rodgers Fine Arts Center, OC campus.

Also, the Cormans and the Community Choir will be joined by the St. Andrew Cumberland Presbyterian Church Choir for a free performance of Faure's Requiem and other short choral works at 3 p.m. April 1 at the church, 1415 N. Grandview Ave.

Corman, a native of Minneapolis, Kan., graduated from Friends University in 1984 and completed his master of music degree at Yale University in 1988. He was the 1989 Kansas Cultural Trust Grant first prize winner which included a $25,000 grant to study at the Metropolitan Opera in New York City.

He also has appeared as a young artist with the Santa Fe Opera, Pittsburg Opera, Sarasota Opera and the Tulsa Opera. In addition to a recent performance of "Messiah" in Oklahoma, he has appeared as a guest soloist with several New England symphonies singing the Faure, Durufle and Mozart requiems.

In the coming year, he is set to have leading roles in "La Traviata" and Philip Glass' "The Juniper Tree" with the Tulsa Opera and a role in the American premiere of Siegfried Matthus' "Judith" with the Santa Fe Opera. He appeared as Curly in the Globe Theatre production of "Oklahoma."

Kimberly Wilson Corman, a 1986 graduate of Permian High School, attended OC and Texas Tech University as a voice major. She has appeared as a frequent soloist at both colleges as well as at many churches in Midland, Odessa, Lubbock and Tulsa and in conferences and crusades throughout Texas. She also will sing in Tulsa Opera's "La Traviata."

The Odessa vocal rectial will include operatic arias and duets, five songs by Aaron Copland and two by Johannes Brahms. For the last section of the program, the Community Choir will sing the last movement of Francis Poulenc's "Gloria" and Gabriel faure's Requiem, with the Cormans appearing asthe soprano and baritone soloists.

The Cormans recently performed a concert of arias from operas ba d upon Shakespeare's masterpieces at the Globe of the Great Southwest as a featured event of the 22nd annual Odessa Shakespeare Festival.

Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for students.

Dr. Charlotte Whitaker, a member of the OC music department faculty, will play the piano. Ms. Whitaker teaches piano, music appreciation, performance stress and accompanies the Odessa College Choir, Community Choir and Vocal Ensemble. She attended OC and has a doctorate of fine arts from Texas Tech University.

The OC Choir forms the nucleus of the Community Choir which rehearses Monday nights in the recital Hall. The Community Choir includes former students, area choir directors, music teachers and others from the community. The choirs are directed by Dr. Maurice Alfred.

This vocal recital is being presented in lieu of the spring recital.

Auditions planned for 'Cabaret'

Midland Community Theatre will hold auditions for the musical "Cabaret" at 7:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

"Cabaret" will be on stage May 11 through June 2. Male and female dancers, singers and actors are needed. Don Bachmann, MCT's executive director, will direct the production.

"Cabaret" is a look at Berlin just before Germany turned to Nazism in 1930.

"The 'divine decadence' of the entertainment clubs is sharply contrasted with the foreshadowing of war," says a release from MCT.

Songs such as "Two Ladies," "Don't Tell Mama," "Tomorrow Belongs to Me" and the title song "Cabaret" make this Broadway hith memorable.

Scripts and scores are available at Theatre Midland's business office, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. For more information call 682-2544.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, MARCH 26, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Take one step at a time and you will handle your professional and personal life much better. Business will have its ups and downs. Hang in there! A legacy or inheritance in July will let you expand an enterprise.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, poet Robert Frost, actor James Caan, football's Marcus Allen.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your goals will be easier to obtain when you get better organized. An element of good luck is likely in financial matters. Land ownership is important. Ties with loved ones present few problems.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Short business trips are invaluable for contacting influential people. You have an ace in the hole, but may not know it. Get ready for big changes! An old flame re-enters the romantic picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Creative projects will lead to higher profits. Mixing with aggressive people can be very profitable. Get rid of outdated notions. Friends can help best from the background. Your popularity rises.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Adequate nourishment and rest are important to your well-being. Your business makes a recovery. Take advantage of an opportunity to make new sales. The time is ripe for expanding your contacts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Old friends provide the right antidote to yesterday's woes. A member of the opposite sex, whom you overlooked in the past, attracts your attention. Reliving old times could lead to new excitement.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your sense of humor will get a colossal workout today. A promotion or raise is possible in the near future. Your values will be tested. Family members are sympathetic to your needs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Support for your personal ambitions comes from an unexpected source. A member of the opposite sex tries to slow you down. Trust your intuition. Romance could be ahead. Let things develop naturally.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You get an opportunity to move into a higher income bracket. Your knowledge of a special subject wins the attention of someone influential. The future looks bright. A pet project is a real moneymaker.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Unusual events could add to your bank account. A financial burden will be removed. A new social undertaking should be beneficial. Changes at home may free you of heavy responsibilities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The best way to ensure harmony among your associates is to stay in the background and let the others have their say. Curb the inclination to assert yourself. Romance is chancy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Business associates will be cooperative, but family members could be antagonistic. Plan for your financial future; consult experts. Relatives may be critical of the way you handle money matters.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A domestic argument could develop. Diplomacy is your strongest ally. If your vitality is low, a change of diet could be indicated. Be more receptive to a loved one's ideas.

Opening lead: Six of ♠

Unlike humankind, all finesses are not created equal. Some are safe to take; others are not, as declarer learned to his cost.

North-South's range for a two-no-trump opening was 21-22, so South deemed the hand a whisker short for that action. But when North was able to scrape up a raise South wasted no time in bidding game—and going down.

Declarer won the spade lead and, without giving the hand much thought, ran the queen of clubs. East took the king and reverted to a spade. Declarer held up one round, won the spade continuation, cashed out the clubs and then tried the diamond finesse. West scored the king and two more spade tricks for down one.

With more prudent planning declarer should make the contract even with both finesses offside. The key to the hand is keeping West off lead once the spades are established. Since declarer can afford to lose a trick to East at the key moment declarer should start by holding up on the first spade then winning the continuation.

Next, declarer should play the ace and another diamond from hand. West wins and can force out the last spade stopper, but declarer is in control. South takes the club finesse and doesn't much care whether it wins or loses. If it loses, either East won't have a spade to return or, if he does, the suit will break 4-4. In all, declarer wins three tricks in each minor, two spades and the ace of hearts.

Biographer becomes disillusioned about LBJ

By Hillel Italie

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert Caro can understand why some Lyndon Johnson supporters are unhappy with the second of a four-volume series on the former president's life.

Johnson

Caro also felt disappointed. "I really thought I was going to love him," said Caro, author of "The Years of Lyndon Johnson: Means of Ascent."

"When I started on the series, I thought he was like (former New York Gov.) Al Smith. There were great similarities. They were both very uneducated, physically unattractive," said Caro, who wrote of Smith in the Pulitzer Prize-winning "The Power Broker: Robert Moses and the Fall of New York."

"But Al Smith, while he was a ruthless politician, I thought Smith's motivating drive underneath was his desire to help his people, like the Irish immigrants," said Caro. "I had the same image of Lyndon Johnson when I started and it was an image that died hard."

What Caro claims to have discovered during his 14 years of studying Johnson's life was that the former president was a self-centered politician obsessed with power, willing to do anything — steal a U.S. Senate election, wildly exaggerate his war record, even risk his life — to advance himself.

Caro's first volume, "The Years of Lyndon Johnson: The Path to Power," was published in 1982 and also riled some Johnson supporters.

Former Johnson aide Jack Valenti has accused Caro of being "passionately bent on destroying" the late president's reputation. Bob Hardesty, a Johnson speechwriter who helped him write his memoirs, called Caro's biography dishonest.

"I don't think it pretends to be fair. I think it is the work of a man with a burning, unnatural hatred for his subject," Hardesty said.

Caro denied bias. He said his assertions are supported by books, newspapers, court documents, files obtained from the Johnson Library and by interviews with Johnson's widow, Lady Bird, and others.

"Means of Ascent," published by Alfred A. Knopf, begins with Johnson's narrow defeat for the U.S. Senate in 1941 and ends in 1948 when Johnson beat former Texas Gov. Coke Stevenson by 87 votes in a Senate race long suspected of having been stolen.

Caro said that ballot boxes were stuffed and votes altered.

"I really believe that no fair-minded person can ever doubt again that the election was stolen," Caro insisted, "and not with 87 votes or 200 votes, but with thousands of votes. It was not simply something that everybody did, this went further.

"The amazing thing to me is that there was doubt for so many years. When you start reading the court transcripts, witness after witness testifies the same way."

Caro also said that Johnson portrayed himself as "a war-scarred veteran of many battles on many fronts," but actually saw combat in the South Pacific only as an observer and "for a total of 13 minutes."

He wrote of a man who frequently humiliated Lady Bird, had a lengthy affair with a publisher's wife and campaigned despite potentially life-threatening kidney stones that caused fever and excruciating pain.

Caro agreed with his critics that his subject comes across unfavorably, but said he felt compassion for him, referring to Johnson's painful experiences growing up when his family was in poverty.

"I tell you there are times when you really do feel like crying," Caro said.

Caro said more positive qualities that Johnson displayed as a senator and then as president will be depicted in upcoming volumes.

"A Johnson person might say, 'What is this? Where is the rest of Lyndon Johnson?' The third volume, when he's passing civil rights legislation, takes hundreds of pages and you really see him doing something noble.

"He had those elements in him, great gifts. An empathy for really the disadvantaged in society and a matchless gift for mobilizing the powers of government."

Ludlum's latest book has bad plot, characters

By Curt Schleier
Hearst News Service

A Review

("The Bourne Ultimatum")... is poorly plotted, offers some ridiculous characters (including a gay Mafia don) and has irritatingly stupid dialogue.

NEW YORK — Early on in this book, one of the characters exclaims, "We can't let it happen. Oh my God, we can't let it happen."

Unfortunately, Robert Ludlum goes on to finish "The Bourne Ultimatum" anyway. This is the third volume (Random House, 611 pages, $21.95) in the Bourne saga.

For those who missed the first two books ("The Bourne Identity" in 1980 and "The Bourne Supremacy," 1986), David Webb is a young foreign service officer stationed in Phnom Penh during the Vietnam War. A North Vietnamese jet kills his Thai wife and their two children, driving Webb slightly bonkers.

He joins a semi-legal "collection of killers, misfits, smugglers and thieves" known as Medusa, funded by the United States and operating behind enemy lines. Eventually Webb assumes the identity of a dead (and traitorous) mate, Jason Bourne, leaving his scholarly David Webb identity behind. If that sounds confusing to you, at one point during a particularly lengthy and hazardous mission for the CIA, Webb/Bourne forgets both of his identities.

In this outing, Webb/Bourne is called out of retirement when arch rival Carlos the Jackal reappears. Carlos, a man so evil even the pre-democracy Russians won't have anything to do with him, wants to prove that he is truly the world's greatest assassin, and the only way to do that is kill Webb/Bourne.

Webb/Bourne is now 50, and quite frankly the old gray Bourne just ain't what he used to be. But, then, the old gray Ludlum isn't what he used to be, either. Ludlum made his reputation writing tautly plotted thrillers like "The Scarlatti Inheritance" and "The Osterman Weekend." He set the standard, and there was a time when one of the nicest things you could say to a young writer of thrillers was that he or she reminded you of, was as good as or had the potential to be as good as Robert Ludlum.

That hasn't been the case for several books, most notably this one, which is poorly plotted, offers some ridiculous characters (including a gay Mafia don) and has irritatingly stupid dialogue. For example, one of the Jackal's agents tell Bourne:

"I admire your perspicacity as well as your caution."

Perspicacity? I hate it when I have to interrupt a thriller to go to the dictionary.

Here's what a potential CIA agent tell his recruiter: "I'm sure it's in your government report somewhere and will hardly satisfy your iniquitous Sen. McCarthy."

Anyway, to make a very long story short, not only is the Jackal after Webb/Bourne, so are members of a latter-day Medusa, including highly placed politicians who now secretly control a large international financial empire.

Somehow it all ends happily, with one character, a psychiatrist who has counseled Webb/Bourne, uttering the last and best dialogue in the book: "But it's over now. It's really over."

Let me issue the Schleier Ultimatum: If you read this book, I will lose all respect for you.
