Four Fort Sill soldiers were seriously injured Wednesday morning about three o'clock about three miles east of Burk Burnett in Oklahoma when the car in which they were riding collided with a truck driven by Gussie Woods, also of Oklahoma. Those injured were Privates Chas. Berry who received a fracture of the collarbone, internal injuries and a concussion of the brain; Clifton Hiltabedel received severe lacerations on the forehead and face, nose and upper lip and internal injuries; Leslie Baggett, laceration of the forehead, face and concussion of the brain; Franklin Keller, slight shock and minor abrasions. Two other occupants of the car were uninjured.

The injured men were rushed to the Burk Burnett Clinic where they were given first-aid treatment and later transferred to the hospital at Fort Sill. Berry and Hiltabedel remain in a serious condition.

According to the reports of the accident the soldiers were returning to Fort Sill when the driver of the car evidently went to sleep or lost control of the car, colliding with the car driven by Mr. Woods. Mr. Woods was enroute to Burk Burnett with a load of chat. He has the contract for hauling the chat for the new grade school building here. He credits his escape from injury to the fact that his truck was loaded with the rock.

Four of Burk Burnett's ranking golfers have signified their intention of entering the seventh annual Junior Chamber of Commerce golf tournament which will be held in Wichita Falls June 11 and 12.

Neal Hall, Harrison Goble, Lewis Sims and Carl Morrison were among the 400 shotmakers in Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma who received bids to enter the tournament.

Three of the stars, King, Norton and Ferrell will seek to qualify for the National Open in rounds at Dallas, but are expected to compete at Wichita Falls in the event they fail to get under the wire for the big tournament that will be played at Denver.

A prize list of $350 in merchandise and other awards was expected to be completed and posted this week. Qualifying rounds for visiting players will start at the 18-hole municipal layout in Wichita Falls June 5 and will continue until June 11. Entry fee is $2.00.

F. R. (Fred) Knauth, commissioner of Precinct No. 2, Wichita County, Texas, authorizes us to announce his candidacy for re-election in the coming Democratic primary which will be held July 23rd.

In placing his candidacy before the voters of his own precinct and the entire county as well, Mr. Knauth stated that he was asking consideration of the voters solely upon his record that he has made while commissioner. Briefly, he pledged the same strict attention to the affairs and best interests affecting his precinct in every matter coming under consideration of the county commissioners as their official duties.

Mr. Knauth, since assuming his duties as commissioner, has established an enviable record for his fair and impartial handling of all matters pertaining to this important office and has been prompt and efficient in the dispatch of all business concerning his precinct. He is fully acquainted with the problems confronting his precinct as well as the entire county, and past experience in the office he now holds has better qualified him to serve in the same capacity during the next two years.

Mr. Knauth's formal statement of a few of the things he has accomplished follows:

"I want to serve you again as your road and county commissioner of Precinct No. 2. It has been a pleasure to work for you in the past years, and with your wholehearted co-operation it has been possible for me to accomplish numerous worthwhile improvements which are and will be in the future worth a great deal to Burk Burnett, this precinct and Wichita county as a whole. First of all is the free bridge across Red river. The widening of the concrete pavement west of town from 16 feet to 24 feet. The replacing of about 80 per cent of our wooden culverts and bridges with permanent concrete structures and practically all our lateral roads are gravelled and in good shape the year around. The latest accomplishment for Burk Burnett is the designation by the state of the road from Burk Burnett to Harrold as a state highway, No. 240. The procuring of this highway was not a one-man proposition by any means, but I am proud of the small part I had in helping to secure this highway as it has been my dream for several years, as

Gov. Allred Calls Special Elections

A formal proclamation calling special elections in six legislative districts to fill vacancies in the Legislature was issued by Governor James V. Allred this week. All the elections will be held on July 23, date of the first primary.

Announcements of the elections aroused speculation as to the possibility of a special session after the second primary this fall. The governor denied that he intended to call the Legislature but indicated that it might be necessary.

While the elections will be held coincident with the primary, the candidates' names will be printed on a separate ballot. The names of some candidates who will also run for the regular term beginning January will appear on both ballots.

Vacancies include one senatorial district, resulting in the recent death of Senator W. R. Norton of Cameron.

Facts Pertaining to Fish Conservation And a Few Suggested Improvements

(Editor's Note—This is the first article in a series of five by Will J. Tucker, Executive Secretary of the Texas Game, Fish and Oyster Commission, who discusses fishing conditions in Texas and how they may be improved.)

When the first arc light was put in operation at the corner of the block in the small town where I grew to a realization of the world, it was a signal of great progress and aroused much civic pride. It presaged the passing of the kerosene lamp. The light tender who scaled the high pole each morning to replace the carbon was a hero to all the boys of the community. He knew something about a mysterious new element. His morning round of pole climbing brought forth the neighborhood boys, eager to get the small pieces of carbon. He made a friend for life when he brought down the sometime slightly used carbon sticks, not trusting to breaking them by a throw to the ground, and with fine impartiality gave the smaller boys that which they could not have won in a wild scramble.

The lighted space provided by the arc light of forty years ago was the early evening rendezvous of the boys of the community. There were no automobiles and the street intersection was a fine place to play. It was the drill ground of our juvenile military company, initiating our elders who were getting ready for the Spanish-American War.

But I came to the arc light area many mornings for a purpose other than getting carbon sticks. I discovered that just about the time the dogwoods began to bloom the lights attracted a myriad of precious insects, many of which fell on the ground and were there to be taken with little effort. It was there that I first began a serious study of practical entomology. I soon learned to gather only those bugs which fish liked best. The rarer ones I traded with those peculiar boys who were content with mere bug collecting.

By this time you understand that the arc light was an important source of fish bait, and that in my estimation it was justified from that fact alone. It taught me early to know those bugs which the fish liked best. I developed into a "fly fisherman" without benefit of bamboo rod, or dressed line.

When the earlier electric development was in progress we did not see any other possible connection with fishing. But electricity is now so important in every day life that we are making every effort to provide it more cheaply. That is urging the erection of hydro-electric dams, and in many places these dams are capable of producing better fishing, if fish are given proper consideration as one of their important by-products. But I shall deal with that a little later.

Looking back over a life that had brought me to boyhood at the time the Maine was sunk, I find that I am inclined to view all progress in its bearing on wild-life. Perhaps that is as it should be. Too many are prone to forget that which makes life possible, pleasant or even endurable.

When I had to work in a printing office during vacations, the introduction of the Linotype was important in that it made it possible to get the paper out earlier, and thereby provide more time for fishing, swimming and hunting.

The first automobile appealed to me as a wonderful device for reaching the haunts of wildlife. All places in walking or horse distance had been explored long before there was any possibility of automobile ownership, so far as I was concerned. As a matter of fact, however, the first automobile in which I had a direct interest was purchased jointly by Harry Green and me. We pooled our financial resources and went into debt rather deeply so that we might explore some new hunting and fishing places—and get there while they were still good. We alarmingly foresaw that all good places soon would be completely exploited. Why, over some very bad pioneer roads (if you took along enough cold-patches, spare parts, and extra inner tubes) one had reasonable assurance of getting as far away as a hundred miles in a couple of days. It was getting so you could purchase gasoline, if you had the money, in even some of the smaller towns.

We liked hunting and fishing, and we believed in the most up-to-date methods. Many years before I had seen the late Congressman Buchanan out with a casting rod and reel. Much to my surprise he was catching large-mouth black bass, which I then called trout, like most everybody else in the South. My silver-sides on a Sproat hook were doing fairly effective work. But immediately I liked the idea of going after the fish. It wasn't long before I had saved enough to buy a casting outfit and two lures. They were sure killers, maybe because fish didn't know much about lures in those days.

Finally we got out in the country of white waters, where you didn't see anybody in a day's fishing. We found that where the fish had been fished for least they struck or bit most. Most of the waters were good, unspoiled, but there were some places that were just naturally bad. Around the campfire of evenings we would speculate on the possibility of reaching other fishing places on our next excursion—to beat the crowds there that were sure to come when more and more people bought automobiles. We did not even dream of the time when other pioneer anglers would try to find new fishing places from their aeroplanes. But that epoch in progress has long since been achieved.

Harry was down last week. He likes quiet lakes and streams. He thought I ought to know where to find such a place. We were willing to provide an automobile better than anyone dreamed of owning when we started fishing together. It didn't cost but about $800. You couldn't have bought one as good twenty years ago for $80,000, and it wouldn't have gone over the ruts of many roads of that time, even if one had owned such a grand automobile.

But I couldn't tell Harry about where to find any quiet lakes or streams, except a few private ones that after all have about them the atmosphere of artificiality. It was because almost everyone owns an automobile as good or better, and the State has spent millions of dollars building country roads better than our city sidewalks used to be.

Exploitation of fishing places no longer requires the endurance of pioneer hardships. You can buy your groceries on the banks of some of the favored fishing places, and if you have the habit of some fishermen, there you can get a few bottles of cold beer or the makings of a highball. You can sleep in screened-in enclosures, with all of the comforts of home, where we used to be content to sleep where the rattlesnakes and cottonmouths were not too numerous. If you are an early riser you can go a hundred miles before breakfast, put in a day fishing and return after supper and by normal bedtime. But you won't catch as many fish as we used to catch in the same number of hours of fishing, even though you are aided and abetted by fishing tackle manufacturers who are thoroughly versed in fish psychology and by State and Federal fish culturists, who are trying to supplement the work of nature in keeping up with your demands.

But this is no apology for why it is so long between bites or strikes for the average fisherman. It is an effort to show what can be done to keep up with the reasonable demands of an increasing army of fishermen, if we use ordinary intelligence and pursue a course of good public policy.

If we are to provide better fishing we must consider all factors, and bring about such adjustments as are economically possible and that will be socially popular. It is a job that requires technical competency and the bulwark of public support that should come as a result of adequate information. We must approach this subject with an understanding that we are dealing with an important publicly controlled natural resource.

Perhaps we never will be able to bring back all of these conditions which my friend Harry has enjoyed, but if you will follow through with me, we can provide him with a better fishing place before he joins Ike Walton and the other fishermen, where the wind is always from the South; where the fish are forever hungry; where the dogwood blooms at all seasons, and the waters are clear, cool and inviting during the perpetual twilight that casts its soft glow, in those regions of Heaven that are reserved for the most favored anglers—the Anglers, who have never done worse than toll a fishing life.

Big Rabbit Creek

Archie Blair, the Big Rabbit Creek vicinity school bus driver for the rural Randlett High school pupils, left last Tuesday with 25 high school students for Galveston, Texas, of the Gulf country, on a pleasure trip. They arrived back home Friday afternoon. They all report having the time of their lives and enjoyed the trip fine.

Everyone and his uncle was planting corn and feed stuff over in the Big Rabbit Creek and Red River bottoms. Everything had to be planted over due to so much hard beating rain for the past ten days. Lots more will be planted over next week.

Harvest in full blast will start up next week. The old wheat binders and combines are being oiled up and a few repairs put on them so there won't be any stopping when they start. Some oats and barley were cut last week.

As Saturday was nice, warm and pleasant, especially in the afternoon, everyone tried his best to beat the other fellow in to Our Friendly Little City of Burk Burnett. Believe me, they didn't miss it, for thousands upon thousands were on the streets and in the stores. All business houses were just jammed full of customers all day.

Well, sir, while Hawkeye was on the street, on the north side, Saturday, he started up the street through the thousands, trying his best to make it up to the big ice cream store to get one of those big malted milk drinks that little Jimmie Henderson and the hired hand (a clerk) were serving to the public. Finally, Hawkeye got to the big store and squeezed himself through the big crowd till he got inside, and called for one of those big malted milk drinks, which was made in a jiffy by little Jimmie. Say boy, Hawkeye hadn't consumed half of it when he felt like a fighting cock, as one of those big malted milk drinks is equal to one of the best meals you can sit down to and they are nourishing. Folks they are served every day at the big ice cream store.

Mrs. D. L. Alexander and children called on Mrs. Ed Owens Wednesday morning.

Mrs. John Ashton was shopping over in Our Friendly Little City, Burk Burnett, Saturday. She also attended the big $60.00 cash drawing.

Clarence LeBarre, a very prosperous wheat raiser in the Big Rabbit Creek community, was transacting business in Burk Burnett last Wednesday afternoon.

More Than 600 Farmers' Co-Ops. Operating Texas

There are more than 600 farmers' co-operative organizations in Texas, according to C. E. Bowles, Texas A. and M. College Extension Service specialist in co-operative marketing. The organizations are designed to add to the farmers' income through the handling of their products.

"The pattern of Texas farmers' co-operatives has changed from the spectacular interstate organizations which attempted to control farm commodities for price advantage to a steady growth of small co-operative associations owned and controlled by local groups, which depend upon efficiency in their operations for profit," Bowles said.

"It is interesting to note that there is a small percentage of failure among these farmer owned businesses than there is among private enterprises."

The 300 co-operative gins in the state handled the cotton of some 50,000 members, ginned 800,000 bales in 1937, and saved farmers an average of more than $2.50 a bale, or an aggregate of 2 million dollars.

The principles of co-operative marketing are being applied to every important Texas crop. Mr. Bowles pointed out. Wheat farmers own a number of local grain elevators and operate a terminal elevator; rice farmers along the Gulf Coast have their own warehouses.

Citrus growers in the Lower Rio Grande Valley have provided their own handling, processing, and sales service through co-operatives, which have become so efficient that they have cut the cost of packing in half. A number of purchasing associations are in operation, especially in Northwest Texas, where they supply members with materials needed in production.

Cotton, turkeys, poultry, dairy products, livestock, wool, and truck crops are among the farm products listed by Bowles as being marketed co-operatively.

One of the items in the new farm act deals with co-operative marketing, and Bowles believes that AAA legislation will enable farmers to make additional gains in co-operative dealings.

New Jersey, Nebraska and Massachusetts are among states which have recently set up official industrial commissions to merchandise their advantages of resources, markets, tax policies and labor supply to industry, reports the All-South Development Council.

A suggested new-use for cotton by W. G. Hayden, Big Spring, Texas, editor: Cotton fabric such as used in road construction should prove ideal for roofs on flat top homes and business buildings. Combined with asphalt, it should make a weather-tight, durable and economical roofing material, and create a new volume market for cotton, he says.

Deduction Rates Excess Plantings Crops Lowered

Farmers who have planted in excess of their general crop acreage allotments will be benefited by a recent amendment to the new farm act which lowered the deduction rate for overplanting the general crops allotment. Geo. Slaughter, Wharton, chairman of the Texas Agricultural Conservation Committee, said after a meeting of the group at Texas A. and M. College.

The amendment, which will allow many Texas farmers who planted general crops before receiving their allotment to qualify under the 1938 Agricultural Conservation Program, reduced the deduction for overplanting from 8 to 5 times the payment rate.

This means, Slaughter said, that where the rate of payment for a farm was $1 an acre, and a farmer overplanted 10 acres, his payment would be reduced by 8 times $1 or $8 an acre, or $80 for the 10 acres. Under the amendment, the deduction on the same farm would be 5 times $1, or $5 an acre, a total of $50 for the 10 acres. Thus the total payment for the farm would be increased by $30.

Slaughter emphasized that the amendment applied to general soil depleting crops, such as corn, and not to cotton, which is under the quota plan. In the case of wheat, the deduction for exceeding the combined wheat and general crop acreage allotment would be made at a rate per acre equal to 5 times the wheat payment rate.

"The carry-over of the principal feed crops is such that if two-thirds of the farms take part in the conservation program and do not plant in excess of their acreage allotments, and the rest plant 10 per cent more than usual, the total supply of feed next fall will be about 10 per cent above normal, assuming that average yields are obtained." Mr. Slaughter pointed out. "In view of this situation, the committee urges farmers who have not already completed plantings of grain feed crops to keep their plantings within the acreage allotments whenever this is practicable."

Birthday Party

Mrs. J. L. Caffee entertained a group of youngsters on the occasion of her son, Charles' fifth birthday May 20th.

Games were played and Sidney Gamblin was winner of a contest.

Refreshments were served to the following: Melvin Gragg, Scranton Peevey, Sidney Gamblin, James Kelley, John Duncan, Billie George McClarty, Jon Hi Bear, Judy Willingham, Martha Jo Parker, Virginia Dee Browning, Elaine Browning, F. T. Felty, Norman Dodson, James Hicks, Kenneth Riley, Buddy Lorang, Orville Brooks Jordan, Lynn Austin Jordan.

Those sending gifts but not present were: Marian Sander, Donna Browning, Wiley Browning, Jr.

Key-Small

Dennis Key and Miss Mayda Small, both of Burkburnett, were united in marriage in a quiet ceremony which took place at the Nazarene Church Wednesday evening at 7:30.

Wellington Small and Miss Bernice Kinnett were the young couple's attendants. Rev. Otto C. Perry officiated.

Both young people are well known in this community and have many friends who wish them well. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Key, pioneer residents of the town, and is an employee of the Hardin Municipal light plant.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Small. She was graduated from Burkburnett in 1936 and then took a course at the Nazarene Bethany-Penial College at Bethany, Oklahoma.

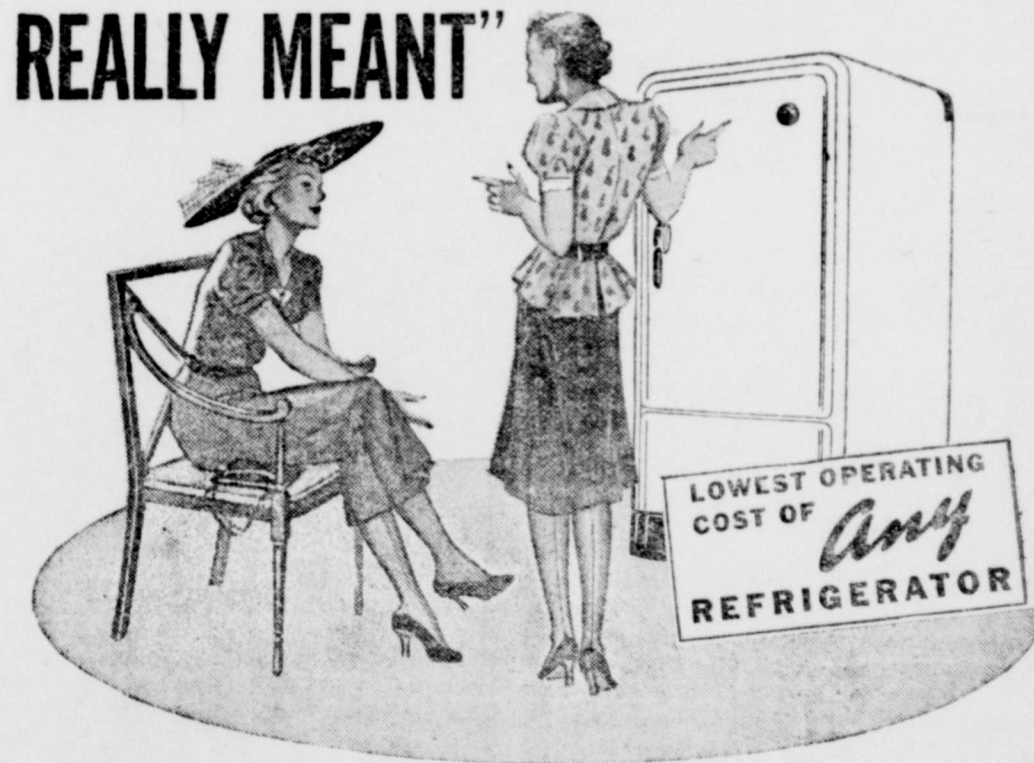

Manufacture of citrus meal as a livestock feed, from formerly waste fruit peels by dehydration process is a growing by-product industry of Texas' lower Rio Grande Valley's citrus industry.

The rhythm of life is portrayed in a giant 60-foot mural titled "The Dance of Life," which will grace one of the East Towers of the 1939 World's Fair of the West on San Francisco Bay.

This is "National Cotton Week"

And consumption of cotton will pick up some. Representative George Moffett's idea of building a research laboratory to find new uses for cotton should have been adopted when he first proposed it in 1931. New uses would have kept more acreage in cotton and less in wheat, and the price of both would be better now.

Wage-Hour Bill

Tuesday, the House passed the Wage and Hour Bill by a vote of 314 to 97 and sent the bill back to the Senate for their consideration. The Senate had previously approved this legislation on July 31, 1932 by a vote of 80 to 28. It will be remembered that passage of this legislation by the Senate and their consideration of the Court Bill along with the Governmental Reorganization Bill precipitated the hottest battle of the many raised against the New Deal. After the Senate passed the Wage and Hour Bill the lobbies of Big Business organized, as never before, to battle to the last ditch this and all other major legislation of this Administration. Frank Gannett's Constitutional League, the United States Chamber of Commerce, the National Manufacturers' Association and other organizations sponsored and financed by them, sprang into action to smear and block the President and this Administration's program upon which we were elected by more than 11,000,000 majority in 1932. The House Wage-Hour Bill, providing a 25 cent per hour graduated floor for wages and a 40 to 44 hour maximum ceiling for hours, is very different from the bill passed by the Senate. Quite a number of amendments were placed on the House Bill, which eliminates most of the labor from our District from its provisions. The average hourly wage for Texas is 28 cents per hour.

Recent bank statements show tremendous increases in bank deposits, of those having incomes in the higher brackets, while the farmer and wage earner or the low income groups who would be affected by this legislation are greatly in need of buying power.

The best answer to Communism and other "isms" is to better the general living conditions and be more humane and considerate of the working people. Sweat shops and child labor with piece work and pitiful low wages paid them cannot be justified. This measure seeks to remedy these conditions. The measure is now in conference and it is believed that a satisfactory compromise will be reached and that a bill will be brought forth this week and approved by the Congress that will write into the statutes history making legislation on this important subject.

The President in his Madison Square Garden speech in answer to those who were silent about their own plans and empty promises, made this memorable statement, in stating the objectives of the Democratic party:

"Of course, we will continue to seek to improve working conditions for the workers of America—to reduce hours overlong, to increase wages that spell starvation, to end the labor of children, to wipe out sweatshops."

The Democratic Platform of 1932, upon which the President's speech was based on this subject, says:

"We have increased the worker's pay and shortened his hours; we have undertaken to put an end to the sweated labor of his wife and children; we have written into the law of the land his right to collective bargaining and self-organization from the interference of employers; we have provided Federal machinery for the peaceful settlement of labor disputes."

"We will continue to protect the worker and we will guard his rights, both as wage earner and consumer, in the production and consumption of all commodities, including coal and water power and other natural-resource products."

Secretary Wallace in testifying before our Agricultural Subcommittee made this statement:

"In the case of the higher paid workers, a $100 increase in wage will result in a $20 to $25 increase in expenditures for food. In the case of the poorest paid workers, those who would be affected, presumably, by the wage and hour bill which was recommended, a $100 increase in wages will bring about a $30 to $40 increase in expenditures for agricultural products."

Thus, it will be seen that by increasing the buying power of the wage earner in the lower bracket, will automatically increase the consumption of all agricultural products and thus greatly improve the buying power and living conditions of this great group of our people.

Calendar

Last Wednesday, the House considered legislation for the District of Columbia; on Thursday we debated and approved a resolution to investigate Nazi activities and on Friday considered minor bills on the private and consent calendar. The Senate last week continued their debate on the Relief and Recovery bill, with early action expected on this measure this week.

This week the House and Senate will observe Memorial Day on Monday and on Tuesday the House will consider the Food and Drug bill, which will be pending business until disposed of. It is believed that the Congress may easily dispose of its work this week and adjourn on June 4th. However, should trouble arise on the recovery or wage-hour bill, adjournment will be postponed until the differences are disposed of.

The University of Texas chapter was established 123 years later.

In 1905, the Texas chapter had 81 active members, including those elected from classes in the years previous to Phi Beta Kappa's establishment on the campus. Today, 1,133 names appear on the membership ledger at the University.

Knox and Haskell Wheat Harvested

Benjamin, June 1—First carload of 1933 Knox county wheat was loaded out Wednesday thru the new elevator of the Self Grain Company. This black hull wheat tested 62 pounds to the bushel and was extra dry. It came from the Kennedy and Cloud farms in the southwest part of the county. Knox county wheat is recognized as of extra high protein content, and usually gets a premium in the markets of the United States.

Haskell, June 1—First 1933 wheat from a Haskell county farm was delivered here Wednesday by J. B. Pittman, living between Haskell and Rule. The grain tested 63 pounds to the bushel and sold at 54 cents a bushel. Pittman said his crop will average 25 bushels to the acre. Oats here are running 40 to 60 bushels to the acre.

Leo Dudley Is Honored By The J. I. Case Co.

Leo Dudley, owner of the Dudley Feed & Produce, and local J. I. Case Implement dealer, received word this week that he was the first dealer in the Dallas zone that has sold one of each model of the new J. I. Case combines.

This is quite an honor for Mr. Dudley as the Dallas district includes all of East Texas, South Texas and a part of North Texas. Mr. Dudley also received word that he sold more combines than any other dealer in this district.

The company, in recognition of the work of Mr. Dudley, stated that a factory engineer from Racine, Wis., will visit Burkburnett soon and check all J. I. Case machines operating in this territory.

Firemen's Pension Law Held Valid

District Judge J. D. Moore ruled this week that the new State firemen's pension law which requires payment by insurance companies of a two per cent tax on premiums of fire insurance policies, is constitutional.

The American Alliance Insurance Company in conjunction with other fire insurance concerns attacked the tax on the grounds that it was a gratuity and grant of public funds without consideration. They also contended that it amounted to confiscation of their property without due process of law.

Judge Moore said the companies would make bond in lieu of collection of the tax, prevented by injunction, until the case was determined in the higher courts.

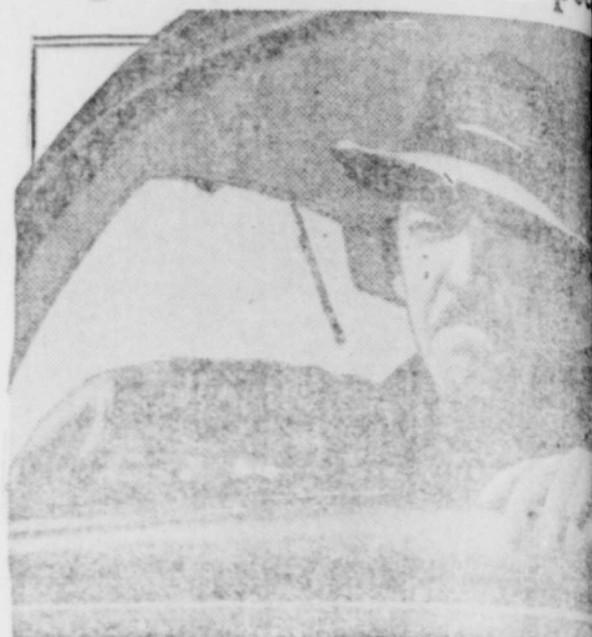

The Attorney General's Department reported the tax for 1933 approximated $500,000 which would be contributed to disability benefits and retirement pensions to firemen in all incorporated cities.

The State's attorneys argued that the benefits were an inducement to better business profits of the cities.

Open Letter to a Speeder

I SAW YGU barely miss a little boy on a tricycle afternoon and heard you yell, "Get the H— out of my way! Don't you know any better than to ride the street?" He didn't answer because he hasn't learned to talk very well yet. So I'm going to answer for him.

No, the little boy doesn't know any better than his tricycle in the street. He has been warned by little boys don't always heed warnings. Some adults either, especially traffic warnings; for example, limiting the speed of automobiles.

I'm going to tell you something about that little boy. He has a mother who endured considerable patience, anxiety and suffering to bring him into the world. He has a father who has worked hard and made sacrifices to make him healthy and happy. The purpose of their lives is to have their little boy grow to be a useful man.

Now stop a minute and think. If you should child, how would you feel facing its parents? Because could you possibly offer Him whose Karma made up of little children?

Children, my hasty friend, were here long before you or your automobile were thought of. All the automobiles on earth are not worth the life of one little boy. We don't know what that little boy may become. But we know what you are, and it's unimportant could get along without you, but we can't spare a little boy on the street.

consideration of the resolution to investigate the radio monopoly. Before completing this statement, it was necessary for the Committee to adjourn because of the early meeting of the House.

"In concluding my statement to you, I would like to point out that since my statement was given to your Committee, I have received a telegram from one of the elected representatives of the people, admitting he was perhaps the one referred to by stating that he had conferred with Counsel for the Radio Corporation of America, to have the Anti-Trust suit of the Government continued until after the General Election. He makes further statements concerning his law firm, which are entirely out of line with the statements I have in affidavit form. This admission on his part places on your Committee the additional responsibility of the necessity of an investigation to go thoroughly into the corruption and debauchery practiced by the radio monopoly.

"According to inquiry made by some Members of the Committee, it seems to be overlooked that corruption not only included elected representatives of the people, but also those filling judicial offices.

"Let me further call to your attention that the Consent Decree entered into between the United States Government and the Radio monopoly in 1932 in effect perpetuated this monopoly, as is well recognized by the Vice-President of the American Telephone Company, as shown from pages 193 and 194 of 'Television: A Struggle for Power.' Speaking of the proposed consent decree, Mr. Jewett said:

"Thus, while a casual reading of the agreement by one not thoroughly conversant with all the factors may appear to establish the basis for an enlarged free development in most of the fields, this is not actually the case."

"Mr. G. E. Folk, General Patent Attorney of the A. T. & T. Company, assured his Committee that the consent decree in no way imperiled their monopolistic rights with this statement:

"Would we wish to grant to others the right, for example, to compete with us under our patents in our present field of long distance communication, both wire and wireless telephone and telegraphy?"

"Last week, I called your attention and wish to again stress the importance of the debauchery practiced upon the investors in radio stock. The financial audit made of RCA showed that 6,580,375 shares of stock with a market value of $290,000,000 were issued to General Electric and Westinghouse, electrical manufacturers, which two companies, at that time controlled, both by stock and representation on the Board of Directors the Radio Corporation of America. That 6,580,375 shares of stock with a value at date of issue of $290,000,000 were issued to General Electric and Westinghouse for assets stated to have been worth $39,900,000. This $39,900,000 was subsequently written down to some $24,000,000; that preferred stock with redemption value of $80,000,000 and an annual dividend rate of more than $4,000,000 was issued by RCA in consideration of some $17,000,000.

"Incidentally, Mr. Chairman, some 2,000,000 shares of stock of Radio Corporation of America, which was turned over to General Electric as part of the original deal and which was cancelled at the time of this consent decree, was never returned to RCA. In passing, I might say that the common stock holders had been fleeced in dividend earnings of $28,000,000 while the Corporation earned less than $12,000,000.

"Further, as a result of this infamous consent decree, the General Electric and Westinghouse Companies received a total rental each year of approximately one and one-half million dollars simply because they happened to have owned licenses issued for periods of six months and it had been leased over a ten year period to their then owned 100 per cent subsidiary.

"Not only have the stockholders of RCA been fleeced, but competitors of RCA have been bankrupted. At the time this Consent Decree was entered into there were some 125 licenses of RCA while today I understand the number has been reduced to five and of these five, it is a question as to how many of them are controlled by RCA.

"In other words, Gentlemen, the monopoly is more than air tight in the Communications field today than ever before and while we are talking about doing something about monopoly here are facts before us not only of monopoly, but debauchery and corruption for profit.

"The recent Telephone Investigation clearly shows how the monopoly has thrived under the consent decree. It says in part:

"The Chief criticism has been that these agreements have fostered monopolies in a number of fields foreign to the primary field of the telephone company by effectuating the pooling of the thousands of patents owned by the parties by dividing between the parties the many fields in which the patents have application and by throwing into the patents of others desiring to engage in these fields the obstacle presented by the combined patent and financial resources of the Telephone Companies, the Western Company, the General Electric company, the Radio Corporation of America and the Westinghouse."

"Speaking of the 1932 agreement which was accepted by the Court in the Consent Decree, the Eilan Miller Staff Engineer of the Telephone Company characterizes the new agreement as follows:

"We are in a position to enter any field we choose so far as our own patents are concerned, however the extent to which we can enter any field from which we were formerly excluded depends upon our ability to effectively carry out such a program under our own patents or patent rights and it is, of course, evident that the patents of the Radio group play an important part in those fields which they formerly exclusively controlled."

"In closing, Gentlemen, let me remind you that this great monopoly existing in the Communications field which controls the molding of public opinion in this country cannot and will not be broken up unless your Committee approves investigating resolutions which will permit the exposure of these known existing evils so that the people of this country may know the truth. Free press, free speech, freedom of thought and action are imperiled, unless your committee acts favorably on these resolutions at this session."

The above is the statement of Hon. W. D. McFarlane of Texas before the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives May 26, 1938.

Oil News From State Capitol

Drastic Order

This week will see the application of the most drastic proration order in the history of oil production in Texas—a five-day production week, coupled with a partial top allowable plan.

Determined to prevent a break in price, Commissioners C. V. Terrell, Ernest O. Thompson, signed this drastic order.

Easy to understand was this Saturday-Sunday cessation of production. Somewhat more confusing was the "top allowable" plan. Simplest explanation was that allowables for the various Texas fields would be adjusted at mid-June, to bring down the total field allowables to June 1 figure.

Engineers explained that because of the mechanical difficulties of issuing new schedules every time a well was brought in, it had been decided to make the readjustment only once a month, that is, at mid-month.

Wells Added

Under this procedure, wells drilled between the first day of June and June 15 will be added to the field allowable at the regular per well allowable. On June 16, new schedules will be issued and the top as fixed in the statewide order of June 1 will be divided by the number of wells to get the per well average.

Presumably, another readjustment would be made July 1 only if conditions then require continuation of the drastic curtailment program.

Example

Suppose a field has ten wells, allowed 100 barrels each on June 1. The field top would be 1,000 barrels. Between June 1 and June 15, five wells are completed. They are added to the schedule at the rate of 100 barrels each, bringing the field to 1,500 barrels. Then, on June 16, the original allowable of 1,000 barrels will be divided by 15 wells to get a per well of 67 barrels.

Engineers stated that the plan would be applied to fields in which there is "excessive drilling," and presumably the discretion as to when drilling is excessive will be left with the commission.

It was explained that where the per well output is marginal, there would be no point in issuing new schedules, no matter how many wells are drilled; hence the method will not be applicable to such fields.

It will not, under this rule, apply to East Texas.

Allowable Cuts

On top of the shutdown, the field tops, the Commission also slashed allowables in some individual fields. Some of the figures:

The June 1 allowable of 1,578,726 barrels exceeds the May 1 allowable by 35,458 barrels. The cut becomes apparent however if May 17 allowables are compared with June 1, and shows that 16,767 barrels was cut from the May 17 total.

8 Days

The Commission pointed out that the eight-day shut-down cut 11,914,608 barrels from the June total. In addition, it was assumed that underproduction would cut 21,859 barrels from the total. It follows that the total allowable will be 1,159,713 barrels daily, 169,567 barrels under the consumer demand figure of 1,329,300 barrels daily.

In Southwest Texas the Commission cut 806 barrels in Luling-Branyon and 416 barrels in Salt Flat field because wells were unable to make previous allowables. Placedo was cut 1290 barrels by

PICTURE SETTINGS

In your springtime pictures, use blossoms and flowers to help get the "feel" of the season.

IN TAKING outdoor pictures of people, are you careful to get the "feel of the season" into each picture, by proper selection of background and surroundings?

An outdoor picture without such "feel" is like a stage without scenery—or, worse, with the wrong scenery. For instance, some of us will take a springtime shot of a child in the yard, with the garage or back steps as a background—when the child could just as easily have been pictured kneeling beside a row of jonquils, bending over and sniffing one. In the latter case, how much more pleasing, and meaningful, the picture would be!

In your Maytime pictures, why not associate people with blossoms and the early flowers? In summer pictures, emphasize the deep blue of the sky and white masses of cloud by using a color filter on the lens. In autumn, let your pictures show the withering leaves and brown fields, with gray skies or billowy clouds hovering over, as backgrounds for your pictures. And in winter, make full use of the snow, and bare branches against the sky.

Try to work into each of your outdoor pictures some feature, even if a mere detail, that gives definite indication of the season. Make it an essential part of the picture, so that folks who look at your snapshots can "feel" the time of year. It seems like a small point, but you will be surprised when you see how much it adds to the pictures that come out of your camera.

John van Guilder

reducing top per well allowables from 80 to 70 barrels. Corpus Christi was cut 738 barrels and New Saxet Frio 880 to conform to EB reports.

Plymouth lost 2810 barrels when the top was cut from 110 to 90 barrels per well, and Turkey Creek dropped 734 barrels on a per-well cut from 152 to 100. Hardin lost 1572 barrels when per-well allowables were reduced from 125 to 100 barrels. New West Columbia wells were reduced from 120 to 100 barrels, a field cut of 560 barrels.

Refusal

Rodessa was cut 25 per cent or 10,177 barrels, because pipe line companies had refused to take oil. The Lone Star field's one well had gone to water.

In West Texas Gulf-McElroy was cut 537 barrels to equalize it with Church-Fields. A cut in the per well allowable for Bennett reduced maximum well allowables from 151 to 90 barrels, took 1413 barrels from the field. Goldsmith gained 5000 barrels when the average allowance was increased from 33 to 43 barrels.

Harper lost 1950 barrels when the top per-well allowance was cut from 106 to 90 barrels. The Hendricks pool lost 631 barrels because wells were unable to make assigned allowables. Wasson was cut 525 barrels, reducing the top per-well allowables from 100 to 90 barrels.

Native Igorrote miners will be imported from the Philippines to work model ore crushing plants and dredges that will be exhibited by well-known mining firms of the Island commonwealth.

Governor, and at the end of his present term, which expires on January 1, 1939, he will have served in that position 18 years, and will have received from the State of Texas more than $40,000, and if he is re-elected at the coming election for another four years' term, he will have held the office for a period of 14 years.

"I have never asked for, nor held, a public office before, and I have no intention of becoming a chronic seeker, nor do I desire to perpetuate myself in this or any other public office. I am a firm believer in the democratic principle of two terms and no more, and when I have served two terms, if I am elected, I promise to not ask for another.

"The importance of this office has not been sufficiently emphasized. It is the highest trial court that we have. All of the more important litigation, as well as all felony cases, are tried in the District Court. The expense of maintaining a district court is of the greatest concern to the taxpayers, and that expense is largely controlled by the District Judge.

"It cost the taxpayers (not the litigants) on an average of more than $100.00 in jury fees alone to try a civil case in the District Court. The average time consumed in the trial of a civil suit is three days. Some, of course, require less than that, but many require more, and twelve jurors at $3.00 per day for three days amounts to $108.00. The District Court often tries cases that do not actually involve as much as the jury fees alone amount to. I believe that the District Judge, can, by tactfully approaching the matter, get the contending parties together and settle such small litigation without incurring the expense of a trial. This practice is followed very successfully in Dallas and other counties, and if I am elected, I shall apply that same principle of economy in this District.

"It often happens that, after empaneling a large number of jurors for the week, the court finds that there are none or few cases to try, and the jury, or a considerable number of them, are excused. This, of course, results in great inconvenience to the jurors as well as needless expense to the county. By carefully organizing the business of the court the Judge can eliminate a large part of this expense.

"The law provides for twelve jurors in a civil suit in the District Court. Most lawyers prefer a jury of only six men rather than twelve because, it not only saves time, but eliminates in a large measure the possibility of a 'hung jury.' In many counties in Texas the District Judge, by appealing to the patriotism of the lawyers in their districts, have induced the lawyers to agree to try their cases with six instead of twelve jurors. This practice has been followed in some of our neighboring counties, and has resulted in a great saving to the taxpayers. If I am elected, I shall likewise appeal to the patriotism and civic interest of the lawyers of this district, and I know that everyone of them will respond as generously as those in other counties.

"It has always been my firm conviction that a Judge should be able to hear both sides of every case patiently, courteously and with careful and thoughtful consideration, and after a full and fair hearing decide the question honestly and without regard to personalities, and if I am elected to this office, I promise every litigant and every lawyer a full, fair, and courteous hearing and as intelligent decision as I am capable of giving.

"Owing to the fact that I have only a short time within which to make this campaign, it will be impossible for me to see each voter although I shall do my very best to do so. It will also be impossible for me to do any considerable amount of advertising on account of limited means, so in view of these circumstances, I urge my friends and those who believe in the principles that I have announced to do as much in my behalf as possible.

"Upon this pledge of economy, efficiency and fairness I earnestly solicit your vote and influence in the democratic primaries."

it will mean a great deal to Burkburnett in the future.

Finances
"Taxation, and the spending of your tax money has always been given deep thought by me and I can look back with pride to a fair degree of success in that this precinct has never issued a time warrant for any of its obligations in spite of the tremendous large number of unemployed men and women in Burkburnett, all of which have been taken care of, second to none in Wichita county.

"I like to work for you, it has been a real pleasure, so if my work has been satisfactory to you I will appreciate your vote and influence in the July primary and if I am returned to the office my experience and service will be at your command."

Thank you,
