Former Governor and Host Of Officials Arrive For Opening

MANGUM, Okla., Sept. 16. (UP)—Notables of the state were gathering here today preparatory to the beginning of the trial tomorrow of Dr. J. F. Campbell and his wife, Mrs. M. H. Campbell on charges of grand larceny and embezzlement.

The case will be called before Judge E. L. Richardson, Lawton, assigned by the supreme court to take the bench of Judge T. P. Clay who disqualified himself in the case.

Contracted for Pardon

The charge resulted from a purported agreement made by Doctor Campbell to procure from Henry S. Johnston, then governor, a pardon for W. J. Radney, now serving a 20-year sentence at McAlester for manslaughter. Radney claims to have given a note and mortgage for $10,000 to Mrs. M. H. Campbell as consideration of Doctor Campbell's delivering a pardon to Radney, which was never delivered.

The prosecution will be conducted by John Stanley, Wewoka; W. C. Lewis, assistant attorney general; Senator W. M. Williams, Mangum and the county attorney's office of Greer county. The defendants will be represented by W. B. Garrett, Mangum and Adrian Melton, Chickasha.

Johnston to Testify

Radney has been granted a leave of absence from the penitentiary to appear as a witness against the Campbells. Other witnesses who will appear are: Henry S. Johnston, Helen Carswell, of the pardon and parole office; W. O. Gordon, assistant attorney general; Rev. B. M. Nelson, pastor of Capital Hill Methodist church; Ed. COUNCIL VOTES AIRPORT FUNDS

$10,011 Authorized For New Buildings

An ordinance providing for an appropriation of $10,011 for improvements and needed additions to the Municipal airport was passed on its first reading at the meeting of the city council Monday night. The absence of Alderman J. H. Patton and Mayor J. W. Akin from the meeting prevented passage of the ordinance on an emergency.

The appropriation will be used in building new storage and warehouse space, a waiting room and ticket office for use of passengers of the air transport lines and other improvements and additions.

J. T. Harrell, J. H. Allison and Judge R. O. Kenley, as representatives of the Wichita Falls Zoological society, presented to the aldermen a request that the city assume debts amounting to $2,600 which are outstanding with the Horn Zoological society of Kansas City for the purchase of animals for the Municipal zoo.

It was pointed out that the animals now at the zoo were valued at about $12,000 and they should belong to the city. The representatives of the society stated that they would endeavor to reimburse the city if the council would pay the debts and prevent foreclosure and removal of the animals, which are said to be rare specimens, or possibly the bringing of suit against the society.

At the advice of City Attorney Thelbert Martin, who was instructed to report on the claim brought against the city by H. L. Robertson for alleged blindness caused by work which he did while in the employ of the sanitary department, the council authorized Alderman R. O. Harvey, mayor pro tempore, to appoint a committee of three unbiased citizens to investigate the case and report at the next meeting, in accordance with a provision of the charter.

STATE BEGINS ITS REPLY TO BECKY'S CLAIM

ALIENISTS ARE HEARD

Three Experts Say Co-ed Was Insane; Sheriff Takes Stand

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas, Sept. 16. (UP)—Representing the State of Texas, District Attorney Fred Blundell tonight played his trump card in the prosecution of Mrs. Rebecca Bradley Rogers for the robbery of the Farmers National bank of Buda in 1926.

Dr. J. S. Wooten, Austin alienist, who testified that he was the first mental expert to examine the defendant after she robbed the bank and did so at the request of her attorneys, declared under examination tonight that after a complete mental test, involving eight or 10 specific examinations, he had come to the conclusion that the defendant was sane and had told her husband, Otis Rogers, her attorney in the present case, that he "could be of no help to him in defending Mrs. Rogers on a plea of insanity."

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas, Sept. 16. (AP)—Technical testimony regarding insanity was completed today in the trial here of Mrs. Rebecca Bradley Rogers and the defense rested.

Introduction of rebuttal testimony was started.

Expert's Testimony Read

Counsel for the former University of Texas co-ed, charged with robbing the Farmers' National bank of Buda, Texas, of $1,000 in 1926, closed by reading into the records testimony of Dr. Livingston Anderson, Corpus Christi, Texas, mental expert, given in one of the defendant's three other trials in connection with the holdup. The manuscript held Mrs. Rogers was mentally unbalanced.

The physician was to have testified in person, but when he failed to arrive in court, Otis Rogers, leader of the defense and husband of the defendant, agreed to allow the expert's testimony of the former trial be placed into the records. Dr. Anderson was in court Saturday, and it was believed he had become marooned by flood waters at Fredericksburg where he was reported to have gone.

Alienists Heard

Two alienists testified they believed Mrs. Rogers was of unsound mind. Dr. W. A. Smith, member of the staff of the San Antonio hospital for the insane, asserted he examined the defendant last April and found she was a victim of dementia praecox.

Dr. Frederick Fink, connected with a San Antonio clinic, testified he examined Mrs. Rogers Sept. 7, and that he was certain she was insane.

Sheriff George Allen of San Marcos was the state's first rebuttal witness. He brought Mrs. Rogers to the Hays county jail a few hours after she was arrested in Austin the day of the robbery.

Fourth Holdup Trial

The trial here marks the fourth time the woman has been tried in connection with the holdup. In the fall of 1927 a Fayette county jury sentenced her to 14 years, but the conviction was reversed. In her second trial in that county, it was found impossible to select a jury and the case was brought here on a change of venue. In an arson trial the jury was unable to agree. This case grew out of the firing of a house near the Buda bank, which the state contended was perpetrated by Mrs. Rogers in an effort to attract the attention of citizens while she held up the bank.

First Effective Medical Therapy For Mental Ills Believed Found

Steinach, of Rejuvenation Fame, Finds Stimulating Glandular Secretion in Frog's Brain

VIENNA, Sept. 16. (UP)—A boon to humanity of inestimable importance seems indicated by the latest discovery of Dr. Eugen Steinach, professor of experimental physiology at the University of Vienna.

If his discovery can be applied to human beings, weak, unstable mentalities can be made strong, and strong minds lifted to the borderland of genius.

Rejuvenation Expert

Dr. Steinach, who became worldfamous with his rejuvenation cure, has succeeded in isolating a glandular secretion from the internal secretion glands of the brains of frogs. He calls this substance "centronervin."

He leaves his disciples to conjecture what tremendous benefits mankind may derive from his discovery. Dr. Steinach contents himself at this time with merely reporting the amazing stimulation given to the nervous ystems of frogs by injection of this secretion.

But "centron rvin" is hailed, nevertheless, as likely to be the first effective medical therapy for mental diseases.

Conducts Test

In one of his experiments, Dr. Steinach divided 20 frogs into two groups. One group he treated with injections of "centronervin" into the lymphatic system.

Swarms of flies were then placed before each group. Each frog in the group that did not receive injections, averaged 79 flies in an hour. Those treated with "centronervin" averaged 150 each in the same length of time.

Dr. Steinach describes his discovery thus:

"A stimulating substance which is found in the brain and has the effect, if injected into the nervous system, of enlarging the spinal cord, accomplishing an average increase from 400 to 600 per cent in the speed of the nervous reflexes, which, however, are not spasmodically carried out, but which remain within the limits of a general strengthening of the functions.

Need Stimulant

"One can imagine that weak mindedness in its various grades and forms is a consequence of lack of this stimulating substance and that a weakening of the central nervous system and a consequent psychological abnormality are caused by an under supply or under development of this stimulant."

STREAM HOLDS YOUTH'S BODY

Scores Hunt for Drowned Charlie Boy

Special to The Record News

CHARLIE, Texas, Sept. 16.—More than a score of men who for the past 36 hours have been dragging the waters of the Wichita river south of here searching for the body of Homer Ferguson, 14, who drowned Sunday afternoon, reluctantly laid down their grappling hooks and nets and returned to their homes when darkness found their efforts still unsuccessful Monday night.

The sands of the river retained their secret in spite of ceaseless diving, dragging, and use of grappling hooks on the part of the searchers all day Monday. The work began early Monday morning as soon as it had become light enough to see, and did not end until dark.

A party from Wichita Falls, including fire and police officials, assisted from early Monday morning until near darkness. Bill Long, Thurston Harvick, Earl Roberts, Howard Tate and O. H. Scott, firemen and experienced swimmers, G. W. Hebern, assistant fire chief, and Frank Burns, chief of police, were in the Wichita Falls party.

The spot where the tragedy occurred is about 400 yards east of the Charlie-Petrolia bridge, the water being about 10 feet deep. Young Ferguson was one of a party including Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Barberee, their two children, Cleo and Leo, and Martha Currington, 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Currington, all of whom had gone to the river for an outing. Shouting "I can swim," young Ferguson waded out into deep water and sank before help could reach him.

BORGER CLUE PROVES FALSE; HOLMES BURIED

Lead Furnished by Car Does Not Aid Investigation, Apparently

SCORES AT RITES

Throng Attends Funeral of Slain Prosecutor at Panhandle

BORGER, Texas, Sept. 16. (AP)—State rangers conducting an intensive manhunt for the assassin who Friday night shot and killed John A. Holmes, district attorney here, were noncommital tonight as one of their most promising clues turned out to be a false lead.

They investigated the ownership of a car which they thought might have been connected with the slaying, but apparently learned nothing that brought them nearer solution of the crime. The car in question was one which Whitey Walker is alleged to have used two years ago in the battle in which the state charges he and his companions killed two deputies.

BORGER, Texas, Sept. 16. (UP)—While hundreds of Borger citizens followed the body of District Attorney John A. Holmes to his grave at Panhandle, near here, Texas rangers today questioned Eddie Bailey, a Borger underworld character, in an effort to learn if possible the identity of Holmes' assassin.

Bailey, former pal of the notorious William J. (Whitey) Walker, is charged with the murder of two Borger deputy sheriffs here two years ago. Walker is held on a similar charge in the county jail at Stinnett.

Bailey gave himself into the custody of rangers voluntarily when he learned he was wanted by officers for questioning as it was thought he might throw some light on Holmes' assassins. Officers are working on the theory that gangsters killed Holmes because of his fight to run disreputable characters out of town.

The district attorney's efforts were not directed at gunmen and gangsters alone, but at bootleggers.

Holmes was in the midst of his fight to cleanse Borger of its scarlet name when he was shot in the back of his home Friday night. At the time of his murder Holmes is said to have had in his pockets a confession made by Bailey which implicated Whitey Walker in the deaths of the two deputy sheriffs.

Since being released from jail on $7,500 bond, Bailey said he had been in Oklahoma City awaiting Walker's trial in which he was to appear as a state's witness. Besides being charged with the slaying of the two deputy sheriffs, Walker is also wanted for an attempted bank holdup at Fort Worth.

The indictment alleges Waggoner and "others, to the grand jury unknown" hatched the scheme "on or about May 1."

HENRIETTAN'S TRIAL DELAYED

Strickland Murder Trial Reset for Oct. 14

Special to The Record News.

HENRIETTA, Texas, Sept. 16.—Judge Vincent Stine today granted a defense motion for continuance of the trial of R. B. Strickland until Oct. 14. The defense made the motion owing to the absence of one of their chief witnesses, Carl Suttle, Shannon farmer, whom, they said, officers have not been able to locate. Strickland was remanded to jail. He is awaiting trial on a charge of murdering Lee Williams at the Strickland home on the night of March 18. Strickland pleaded not guilty when arraigned this morning.

The state will maintain at the trial that Williams, Bowie resident, was slain at the Strickland home, and that his body later was dragged to a nearby field. There it was discovered by officers, who came to the spot after Strickland had come to town, returned to his home with Rube Reynolds, a friend, and later returned to Henrietta, where the friends separated. Reynolds notified officers what had occurred, and Strickland was arrested and charged with murder. The men had quarreled over a girl they both had loved in their youth, it was said.

Alvin Owsley and his father, of Denton and Frank Holaday, Henrietta, are defense attorneys. The prosecution will be handled by W. J. Glasgow, district attorney, Paul Donald, Montague, and T. H. Yarbrough, Clay county attorney. Both sides announced Monday they would be ready when the trial comes up Oct. 14.

Patman to Seek Assistance At Capital as Texas Quiz Continues

TEXARKANA, Texas, Sept. 16. (AP)—Federal aid will be asked by Congressman Wright Patman to uncover what he believes are "southwide ramifications of a cottonseed trust" designed to hold seed prices to farmers approximately $10 below the market price.

Patman said he probably would not stay in Texas for the investigation promised by John Blalock, assistant attorney general.

"I can probably do more good in Washington getting the cooperation of the department of justice," Patman said. He said he would turn over all specific data on the subject in his possession to Blalock. Congressman Patman said he had been investigating the situation for a year.

Blalock said he had gathered sufficient information already to justify a thorough investigation of the charges and that a hearing would be held some place in the first congressional district within the next 10 days. Blalock said that the attorney general's office had been investigating cottonseed practices in other parts of Texas before Patman's charges were made. Patman announced he had received a telegram from the United States department of commerce denying a statement made here by W. T. Terry, president of the Farmers' Cotton Oil company, that the government had been urging cotton oil men to reduce prices for the last two years.

Solons Will Work Free, So It's Up To Moody Whether Vets Get Pensions

AUSTIN, Sept. 16. (AP)—It is up to Governor Moody whether there is a special session called for the purpose of correcting the Confederate pension law, changed by the third called session of the legislature to deprive 3,000 widows of veterans their quarterly pension.

Senator W. A. Williamson of San Antonio, who sent inquiries to members of the legislature to determine if they would come to Austin at their own expense and serve without pay while the statute was being restored to its former status, announced today that he was sending to the governor pledges from 77 members of the house and 26 senators, that they would attend the session without cost to the state.

Senator Williamson said 54 legislators had not replied to his inquiry and 17 were either out of the state, ill or refused to agree to the free session.

When the legislature lowered the age limit for widows of veterans to become eligible for pensions and placed all those 75 years old and over in a preferred class, it created the existing condition.

It was found there would not be enough money in the fund created by a seven cent constitutional levy for that purpose to go around. The attorney general, asked for a ruling by Comptroller S. H. Terrell, who held that those in the preferred class must be paid the full amount of their allotments first and the balance prorated among those not on the favored list, or among those under 75 years old.

There was not sufficient money on hand to pay those on the preferred list $25 per month, the checks for each for the quarter amounting to $67.

Prior to amending the pension law the veterans and widows received about $56 per quarter.

Rodeo and Polo

The Alamo exposition shows will be on the midway with five big rides and 10 shows. There will be five rodeo performances during the fair. There will be two polo contests between the teams of Wichita Falls and Woodson, managed by Alex Dickie of Woodson. The games will be staged Thursday and Saturday afternoons at 3 o'clock.

Friday night will be "Joy Night." A prize will be given the best made up clown, parading before the grandstand to be judged.

A "Negro battle royal" will be the featured free act before the grandstand each day to which any city, town or community may enter negroes. Either six or eight negroes will be in the ring for each bout. Prizes will be given each night to the successful fighter.

Good Exhibits

Miss Norfleet Grimes, county home demonstration agent, expects to have the largest and best girls club exhibit ever had at the fair, and much enthusiasm is displayed by both club girls and club women of the county.

Probably the most significant feature of the Young county fair this year will be the quality of the livestock exhibits. The Fair association is making every effort to have a creditable representation of the county's advance in livestock production, and all animals on exhibit will be registered, the standards having been raised above that of last year. P. K. Deats is superintendent of this department.

The poultry department is also expected to be the best in the history of the fair, and C. B. Hockaday, superintendent of the poultry department, has stated that this department will offer sharp competition.

County Agent W. C. Hale states that in spite of the adverse weather conditions the past season, the agricultural show is expected to be excellent.

Fair Officials

Mesdames A. A. Morrison and M. K. Graham are superintendents of the women's department and are assisted in the different divisions by Mesdames S. S. Bates, R. S. LeSage, W. C. Hale, M. R. Hemphill, H. Hubbard, M. S. Snoddy, Archie Corbett and others.

Officers of the fair association are A. A. Morrison, president; G. B. Johnson, vice president; Earl Hutchings, treasurer; Ed C. Burris, secretary.

will be extended by the federal farm board.

Governor Moody explained he had called upon the bankers to take the lead in the movement "because the banker is the closest man to the farmer in the agricultural sections."

The purpose of the formation of the co-operative associations would be to help the Texas cotton farmers produce part of the $550,000,000 now available for loans at 4 per cent through the federal farm board, it was said.

Plan Is Opposed

Representative Lawrence Westbrook of Waco, chairman of the special committee, said the farmers felt they "have something coming," and that they would try to get it.

The plan was assailed by several of those attending the meeting.

"This whole thing violates sound economic principles," W. W. Woodson, Waco banker, charged. "The federal act is wrong in its credit policy. It is wrong in its price fixing, and yet we (the bankers of Texas) are asked to tell the farmers of Texas to organize co-operatives. If you want to ruin the farmers give him plenty of 4 per cent money."

"ALL QUIET on the WESTERN FRONT" BY Erich Maria Remarque

(The four soldier comrades—Kropp, Muller, Leer and Paul Baumer—the last the author of the story—are at rest five miles behind the front. All enlisted at 19. Their spirits are made low by a visit to the dressing station where their friend, Kemmerich, lies dying, with his leg amputated. Mueller eyes the soft leather boots under Kemmerich's cot.)

One Sunday as Kropp and I were lugging a slop-bucket on a pole across the barrack yard, Himmelstoss came by, all polished up and spry for going out. He planted himself in front of us and asked us how we liked the job. In spite of ourselves we tripped and emptied the bucket over his legs. He raved, but the limit had been reached.

"That means clink," he yelled.

But Kropp had had enough. "There will be an inquiry first," he said, "and then we'll unload."

"Mind you how you speak to a non-commissioned officer!" bawled Himmelstoss. "Have you lost your senses. You wait till you're spoken to. What will you do, anyway?"

"Show you up, corporal," said Kropp, his thumbs in line with the seams of his trousers.

Himmelstoss saw what we meant and went off without saying a word. But before he disappeared he growled: "You'll drink this!"—but it was the end of his authority. He tried it on us once more in the ploughed field with his "prepare to advance, advance" and "lie down." We obeyed each order, since an order's an order and has to be obeyed. But we did it so slowly that Himmelstoss became desperate. Carefully we went down on our knees, then on our hands, and so on; in the meantime, quite infuriated, he had given another command. But before we had even begun to sweat he was hoarse. After that he left us in peace. He did indeed always refer to us as swine, but there was, nevertheless, a certain respect in his tone.

There were many other staff corporals, the majority of whom were there at home as long as possible, and more decent. But above all each of them wanted to keep his good job that he could do only by being strict with the recruits.

Practically every conceivable polishing job in the entire camp fell to us and we often howled with rage. Many of us became ill through it; Wolf actually died of inflammation of the lung. But we would have felt ridiculous had we hauled down our colors. We became hard, suspicious, pitiless, vicious, tough—and that was good; for these attributes had been entirely lacking in us. Had we gone into the trenches without this period of training most of us would certainly have gone mad. Only thus were we prepared for what awaited us. We did not break down, but endured; our 20 years, which made many another thing so grievous, helped us in this. But by far the most important was that it awakened in us a strong, practical sense of esprit de corps which in the field developed into the finest thing that arose out of the war—comradeship.

CHAPTER III

I sit by Kemmerich's bed. He is sinking steadily. Around us is a great commotion. A hospital train has arrived and the wounded fit to be moved are being selected. The doctor passes by Kemmerich's bed without once looking at him.

"Next time, Franz," I say.

He raises himself on the pillow with his elbows. "They have amputated my leg."

He knows it too then. I nod and answer: "You must be thankful you've come off with that."

He is silent.

I resume: "It might have been both legs, Franz. Wegeler has lost his right arm. That's much worse. Besides, you will be going home." He looks at me. "Do you think so?"

"Of course."

"Do you think so?" he repeats.

"Sure. Once you've got over the operation."

He beckons me to bend down. I stoop over him and he whispers: "I don't think so."

"Don't talk rubbish, Franz, in a couple of days you'll see for yourself. What is it anyway—an amputated leg? Here they patch up far worse things than that."

"That's the result of the operation. Just eat decently and you'll soon be well again. Do they look after you properly?"

He points to a dish that is still half full. I get excited. "Franz, you must eat. Eating is the main thing. That looks good, too."

He turns away. After a pause he says slowly: "I wanted to become a head-forester once."

"So you may still," I assure him. "There are splendid artificial limbs now, you'd hardly know there was anything missing. They are fixed on to the muscles. You can move the fingers and work and even write with an artificial hand. And besides, they will always be making new improvements."

For awhile he lies still. Then he says: "You can take my lace-up boots with you for Muller."

For a while he lies still. Then he says: "You can take my lace-top boots with you for Muller."

I nod and wonder what to say to encourage him. His lips have fallen away, his mouth has become larger, his teeth stick out and look as though they were made of chalk. The flesh melts, the forehead bulges more prominently, the cheek-bones protrude. The skeleton is working itself through. The eyes are already sunken in. In a couple of hours it will be over.

He is not the first one I have seen thus; but we grew up together and that always makes it a bit different. I have copied his essays. At school he used to wear a brown coat with a belt and shiny sleeves. He was the only one of us, too, who could do the giant's turn on the parallel bars. His hair flew in his face like silk when he did it. Kantorek was proud of him for it. But he couldn't endure cigarets. His skin was very white; he had something of the girl about him.

I glance at my boots. They are big and clumsy, the breeches are tucked into them, and standing up one looks well-built and powerful in these great drain-pipes. But when we go bathing and strip, suddenly we have slender legs again and slight shoulders. We are no longer soldiers but little more than boys; no one would believe that we could carry packs. It is a strange moment when we stand naked; then we become civilians, and almost feel ourselves to be so. When bathing Franz Kemmerich looked as slight and frail as a child. Here he lies now—but why? The whole world ought to pass by this bed and say: "That is Franz Kemmerich, 19½ years old, he doesn't want to die. Let him not die!"

My thoughts become confused. This atmosphere of carbolic acid and gangrene clogs the lungs, it is a thick gruel, it suffocates.

It grows dark. Kemmerich's face changes color, it lifts from the pillow and is so poor that it beams. The mouth moves slightly. I draw near to him. He whispers: "If you find my watch, send it home—"

I do not reply. It is no use any more. No one can console him. I am wretched with helplessness. This forehead with its hollow temples, this mouth that is now merely a slit, this sharp nose! And the fat, weeping woman at home to whom I must write. If only the letter were sent off already!

Hospital-orderlies go to and fro with bottles and pails. One of them comes up, casts a glance at Kemmerich and goes away again. You can see he is waiting, apparently he wants the bed.

I bend over Franz and talk to him as though that could save him: "Perhaps you will go to the convalescent home at Klosterberg, among the villas. Franz. Then you can look out from the window across the fields to the two trees on the horizon. It is the loveliest time of the year now, when the corn ripens; at evening the fields in the sunlight look like mother-of-pearl. And the lane of poplars by the Klosterback, where we used to catch sticklebacks! You can build an aquarium again and keep fish in it, and you can go out without asking anyone, you can even play the piano if you want to."

I lean down over his face which lies in the shadow. He still breathes, lightly. His face is wet, he is crying. What a fine mess I have made of it with my foolish talk!

"But Franz"—I put my arm round his shoulders and put my face against his: "Will you sleep now?"

He does not answer. The tears run down his cheeks. I would like to wipe them away but my handkerchief is too dirty.

An hour passes. I sit tensely and watch his every movement in case he may perhaps say something. What if he were to open his mouth and cry out! But he only weeps, his head turned aside. He does not speak of his mother or his brothers and sisters. He says nothing; all that lies behind him; he is entirely alone now with his little life of 19 years, and cries because it leaves him. This is the most disturbing and hardest parting that ever I have seen, although it was pretty bad too with Tjaden who called for his mother—a big bear of a fellow who, with wild eyes full of terror, held off the doctor from his bed with a dagger until he collapsed.

Suddenly Kemmerich groans and begins to gurgle.

I jump up, stumble outside and demand: "Where is the doctor? Where is the doctor?"

As I catch sight of the white apron I seize hold of it: "Come quick. Franz Kemmerich is dying."

He frees himself and asks an orderly standing by: "Which will that be."

He says: "Bed 26. Amputated thigh."

He sniffs: "How should I know anything about it. I've amputated five legs today;" he shoves me away, says to the hospital-orderly "You see to it," and runs off to the operating room.

I tremble with rage as I go along with the orderly. The man looks at me and says: "One operation after another since 5 o'clock this morning. You know today alone there have been 16 deaths—yours is the 17th. There will probably be 20 altogether—"

I become faint, all at once. I cannot do any more. I won't revile any more, it is senseless. I could drop down and never rise up again.

We are by Kemmerich's bed. He is dead. The face is still wet from the tears. The eyes are half open and yellow like old horn buttons.

The orderly pokes me in the ribs. "Are you taking his things with you?" I nod.

He goes on: "We must take him away at once, we want the bed. Outside they are lying on the floor."

I collect the things, untie Kemmerich's identification disc and take it away. The orderly asks about the pay-book. I say that it is probably in the orderly room, and go. Behind me they are already hauling Franz onto a waterproof sheet.

Outside the door I am aware of the darkness and the wind as a deliverance. I breathe as deeply as I can, and feel the breeze in my face, warm and soft as never before. Thoughts of girls, of flowery meadows, of white clouds suddenly come to my head. My feet begin to move forward in my boots. I go quicker. I run. Soldiers pass by me. I hear their voices without understanding. The earth is streaming with forces which pour into me through the soles of my feet. The night crackles electrically, the front thunders like a concert of drums. My limbs move supplely. I feel my joints strong, I breathe the air deeply. The night lives, I live. I feel a hunger greater than comes from the belly alone.

Muller stands in front of the hut and waits for me. I give him the boots. We go in and he tries them on. They fit well.

He roots among his supplies and offers me a fine piece of sausage. With it goes hot tea and rum.

A New Novel of Modern Business Life that will start a Controversy in Many Homes and be the Talk of Many Business Offices

The Office Wife

by FAITH BALDWIN

BECAUSE the private secretary comes so close to her employer she has set herself a new standard of men. The young business woman who may not be at all emotionally involved with the man to whom she gives her working hours, finds nevertheless that her personal life is colored and complicated by her association with this man. And if she has standards of comparison, so, by the same token, has the business man. How many business men wish futilely that their homes could be run as well as their offices, and their wives comprehend their needs as swiftly as their secretaries!

Faith Baldwin, who wrote "Alimony," presents this problem, which many young women in business are facing, in her searching novel . . . "THE OFFICE WIFE" . . . which will start a controversy in many homes and many business offices.

AFTER COAL TAR'S LAURELS

Daily Editorial

CHEMISTRY is writing fairy tales much more thrilling than the old nursery legends.

And if it continues to disclose unsuspected values, silage will soon be snatching the laurels from coal tar as the most Protean substance in nature.

Professors Buswell and Boroff of the University of Illinois hit several birds with one stone, with a process which combines stalks and household wastes and ferments them into carbon dioxide and methane gases.

Baccilli in the refuse are the fermentation agents that set up a rapid metabolism in the vegetable matter, and this provides generating energy to charge batteries and furnish power and light for all farm needs.

The fibrous mass that remains is reputed to be a stronger and better paper base than wood pulp.

Another group of laboratory magicians notifies us to anticipate an improved grade of artificial silk from the combination of cellulose and vinegar.

The man who first suggested "corn silk" as a name for the lustrous tassels on ears of maize, was not far from the mark after all.

Incredibly Wasteful

THE ENTIRE scientific outline of chemistry may have to be rewritten as the result of experiments performed recently by Dr. K. F. Bohnhoeffer, youthful German scientist.

Dr. Bohnhoeffer succeeded in splitting a supposedly indivisible element—hydrogen gas—into two new elements. His achievement forces revision of some of the oldest and most firmly established theories in chemistry, and may eventually prove one of those momentous discoveries that have untold consequences for all the world.

Now the interesting part of all this, to the lay reader, is this:

Dr. Bohnhoeffer, still youthful, is alive today only through a chance of fate. In the closing phase of the world war he was a young infantryman in the German army, performing his duties in the front line trenches. If any one of several thousand shells that came his way had dropped a little bit nearer to him—if any of the myriad chances of war had been arranged just a little bit differently—he would have joined the long list of soldiers who were laconically reported "killed in action," and the scientific world today would be much the poorer.

Dr. Bohnhoeffer was lucky. He survived, became a scientist, and ultimately produced a discovery that may have incalculable results.

But, when you think about his case, it makes you wonder—how many other young men, potentially as brilliant and as serviceable to the world as he, were killed during the war?

Several millions of lives were erased by the war. Most of them were lives that had barely begun. There was no way for anyone to tell which of them were too valuable to be thrown away; no way to determine which of them could serve the world better by being put in a place of safety than by being flicked out in the muddy trenches.

Even if there had been, it wouldn't have mattered. War, as you may have heard, is war.

But how fearfully, unbelievably wasteful it is!

The world was lucky that young Private Bohnhoeffer didn't get killed. But there is not the shadow of a doubt that many, many young men who might have done work quite as valuable as his were killed; men who might have widened the powers of science, added a little beauty to a beauty-starved world, righted a few ancient wrongs, won a little more happiness for the mass of mankind.

When war time comes such men are no more valuable than so many ditch diggers. They are herded off to die—and if, by chance, a few of them survive, we pat ourselves on the back and tell ourselves that we are lucky.

Perhaps it was some such thought as that that made Benjamin Franklin remark that "there never was a good war or a bad peace."

Numbers for the Pilots

THE AERONAUTICS BRANCH of the department of commerce, seeking to aid aerial navigation by having all air routes plainly marked, suggests that automobile highways be parked for the benefit of aviators.

It proposes that the regular automobile route numbers be painted on main highways in letters 20 or 30 feet long, so that they would be visible from a considerable height. This, it says, would be easy to accomplish and would prove an invaluable aid to pilots.

It sounds like a good idea. The numbering of automobile routes has proven an inestimable boon to the motorist. Touring in a state which pays decent attention to the job of setting up the numbered route markers is a delight. It is almost impossible for even a careless motorist to lose his way, provided he is willing to spend 35 cents for a map. If painting the numbers on the roads would do as much for the fliers, we're in favor of it.

We Insist on Speed

TRAGIC as the loss of the City of San Francisco was, it is not likely that it will in any way check the development of commercial aviation.

Mankind's love for speed—its eternal desire to travel across the earth faster than before—has survived a tremendous number of tragedies. The advance of aviation is nothing but an extension of this desire for speed, and the latest accident will not check that desire.

The early railroads—the first improvement on the horse—cost many, many lives before they were made safe. The first steamboats killed so many people that one wonders why people didn't give them up in disgust. And the automobile continues to kill thousands every year.

When people find a new way of traveling fast, they are apt to stick to it in spite of all accidents.

Rochester's Distinction

THE NATIONAL SAFETY COUNCIL points out that Rochester, N. Y., has a claim to distinction such as few other American cities, large or small, can claim.

Rochester, which is a city of 328,000 citizens, passed through three entire months this year without a single motor traffic death.

Less distinguished, but topping all other cities, is Baltimore, whose 830,000 inhabitants managed to go three weeks without one fatality.

Those are marks for other cities to copy. It would be a fine thing if cities could work up as much rivalry over their traffic safety record as they now do over more exciting but less important things.

CHATTY—GODDESS OF CAB

By BEATRICE BURTON, Author of: "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDERS," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," etc.

READ THIS FIRST

Charlotte Chatterton, nicknamed Chatty, is a born gossip. Her mother, a widowed dressmaker, through Mrs. Van Nuys, a wealthy customer and old friend of the family, gets Chatty a position as switchboard operator at the Van Nuys offices. Chatty meets Hilde Langeneu, a file clerk, and Agnes Herford, private secretary to Mr. Van Nuys. Chatty falls in love with a young bond salesman, David Jordan, but when she gossips and causes Agnes to resign her position David drops Chatty. Chatty has dates with Bryant Dunning, a new salesman, who is married but says he has left his wife. Chatty has many parties at Winnie Talcott's house. Winnie is Mr. Van's new secretary.

One day Chatty overhears David talking on the phone about taking a new position at the Midas bank. Later she reads him copyrite names. Wishing to get even with him, and believing him stealing the bond buyers' lists, Chatty tattles to Mr. Van. Mr. Van is very angry, as he has given David permission to copy the lists. Chatty has to apologize to David or leave the leaves, and is unsuccessful in getting another position. She continues to have dates with Bryant Dunning, although her mother urges her not to do so.

Now Go on With the Story

He looked straight into Chatty's eyes, and said: "Confess your wrong doing."

Then he smiled the little smile that Chatty loved. In her dream she knew that only confession of her wrong doing stood between her and happiness.

She woke up; the dream disappeared. But its impression remained.

"I'll never win David back," she told herself sorrowfully. "But I'll try to be worthy of him, anyway. Hard or not, I am going to do the right thing!"

CHAPTER LIV

The next morning, looking over the "Female Help Wanted" column in the paper, Chatty came across a little item headed "The importance of the comma." In the story was the famous quotation: "There is a destiny that shapes our ends, rough hew them as we may," and the misprinting of it, showing how the changing of a comma alters the sense: "There is a destiny that shapes our ends rough, hew them as we may."

Chatty smiled: queer, what a difference one little comma could make!

But she remembered it with a gasp as she walked down town and almost fell over Agnes.

"Surely my destiny is shaping my ends rough!" thought Chatty, swiftly. Then before she could lose her courage, she spoke.

"Agnes! Oh, Agnes, I want to talk to you."

"Why Chatty! It's ages since I saw you—are you all over the effects of your accident?"

Chatty was hardened to people knowing about her accident. Everyone in the city, apparently, had read the newspapers!

"Yes, thank you—if you mean the automobile accident. I am not over the effects of the other damage I have—done to myself! But never mind me. Tell me—what have you been doing for yourself? You look wonderful!"

It was true. Agnes did look like another girl. She had put on some flesh, her eyes were bright and clear, the sad droop to the mouth was all gone, replaced by a smile almost merry. Her walk was erect, quick, alert. Her carriage betokened confidence in the world, in herself, her — her—"her destiny!" thought Chatty. "It's not shaping her ends rough — now." Chatty blushed a little at the thought.

When she had played destiny for Agnes, it was rough, indeed.

"May I—can I—is there any place we can go—and talk?" asked Chatty. "I do need to talk to you—"

"Not now," answered Agnes. "I'm sorry—but my position is very exacting. And they are very particular at the bank. I am private secretary to Mr. Ellerby; he's president of the Midas bank, you know."

The Midas bank! Agnes must see David every day. Did he take her to lunch, she wondered? What matter? He doubtless took many girls to lunch!

Chatty longed to ask Agnes about him. But it was not her business. David was no longer in her life. She bit her lip to keep the question back.

"No—I—didn't know," she answered weakly.

"But — would you come to my house," went on Agnes. "I'd love to have a nice talk with you! I always liked you—you are so gay and happy!"

Gay and happy! She, Chatty, gay and happy! Could she ever have been so?

"I'll be glad to come. When?" asked Chatty, feeling that she was burning her bridges behind her. It would be hard—hard—

"Tonight," answered Agnes. "Will you have tea with me, say at seven?"

"Thank you, I'll be there—Oh, where is it?"

Agnes told her, a quiet neighborhood. Chatty knew. The kind of a neighborhood a girl like Agnes would choose. Somehow, all that feeling of superiority she once had for Agnes, as a girl who would "fall for a married man" had disappeared.

Chatty had difficulty in keeping her nerve up to keep her engagement. A dozen times she decided to phone Agnes and put it off.

A queer incident decided her. At half past six that evening, moving towards the phone to break the engagement, Chatty had a sudden thought! "Oh, I wish I had a drink!"

Then a revulsion of feeling! No! Never again! That very revulsion against the instinctive throw-back to days she hoped were forever dead, turned her from the phone, out of the house, and into the street ear, which took her to Agnes' modest apartment house.

Agnes' apartment was like her; cool and quiet, refined, dainty, almost somber. But an occasional note of color relieved its severity.

The two girls chatted on impersonal topics for a few minutes. Then Chatty sat up in her chair and gasped.

"Agnes—I—help me to be brave! I—I have something to confess to you."

"Confess? To me? Why, Chatty, what do you mean?"

Chatty gulped.

"I stole your diary," she began, in a flat voice. "I stole your keys and got it from your desk. I—I was jealous of you, Mr. Jordan, you know. He had written you a note. I was crazy to know what it contained. It was nothing—just business. Then I went through your desk. I read your diary. I tore out some pages. I sent them to Mrs. Van Nuys."

Chatty looked Agnes straight in the face, her own white and drawn with the effort, her voice shaking. She did not know of the evident suffering in her eyes.

"Why did you, Chatty?" Agnes' voice was impersonal, not angry not filled with passion.

"Jealousy—and my horrible desire to know things, tell things, to be a busy-body!"

Once started, Chatty did not spare herself.

"I know, now, what a terrible thing I did. I know, now, that I am unworthy of the respect, the liking, the love of anyone. Then I just thought I was smart, cute. I didn't care what harm I did; I used to say to myself, 'The truth never hurt anyone,' and that it was 'my duty' to tell things."

Chatty stopped, to gulp down a sob in her throat. Agnes sat quiet, waiting.

"That's all, Agnes. It took me a long time to make up my mind to confess. But I had to do it. It's the only reparation I know how to make. I don't expect you to forgive me. I am not worthy to be forgiven. But—but I had to tell you!"

Chatty put her face down in her hands, and the sob came out. Then, as Agnes crossed the room to her swiftly and put a very tender hand on her shoulder, Chatty sprang erect.

"Oh, don't be good to me!" she cried. "You know you hate me in your heart! I must take my punishment! But—but please believe I am sorry—almost as sorry as you are—"

Agnes laughed—actually, a soft, gentle laugh.

"But, my dear, I am not sorry!"

The amazing words dropped Chatty's mouth open in wonder. Not sorry?

"Listen, my dear, and I'll tell you. Like many another lonely woman, I fell in love with my employer. He never looked at me; the occasional lunch, the being in the office with him all those things that looked so guilty were nothing but business. I never expected anything from him. I just wanted to serve him, to be near him, protect him—I hadn't anyone else to love!

"What happened was a terrible shock to me—and a terrible injustice to him; it must have been torture for his wife. Nothing I could say could alter the apparent facts I had so foolishly put in my diary.

"But I left. I got another job. For months I was like a lost soul! Then—I met another man. Look—I don't wear it to work—"

Agnes held out her left hand. On her engagement finger blazed a beautiful ring.

"We are to be married in a couple of months!" went on Agnes. "Had I not left—I might not have met him."

Chatty was utterly bewildered. Could good, then, come out of evil?

Agnes read her thoughts. "What you did was very, very wrong, of course," she went on. "But like so many tragedies, it had its bright side for me. It brought me to myself. I abominate the sneak, the thief, the spy, the tattle-tale, the busybody, Chatty. I suspect you do too, now. But I not only can, but do forgive you."

"Why?" demanded Chatty. "Why do you forgive me?"

"Because you have been honest and courageous, and confessed!" answered Agnes. "I know it was hard. No one can do more—that's the pity of wrong doing; we seldom can right it, no matter how hard we try. Your confession doesn't take away the misery I suffered, Mrs. Van Nuy's agony, the anxiety Mr. Van Nuy underwent. But it's the best you can do. Angels can do no more than their best!"

Agnes stretched forth her long arms and pulled little Chatty to her. "Let's not talk about it any more!" she suggested. "I am happy now—and I know you will be happier—"

"Oh, I am. Now, if I can just get a job—"

"Are you out of a job?" demanded Agnes. "I didn't know—why—why, Chatty, I can get you a job. Oh, no, not in the bank!" Agnes smiled in understanding. "But I can get you a job. I am sure of it!"

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY
Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Dr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper

(Copyright, 1929, by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

THE ALKALINE VALUE OF DRIED VEGETABLE

One of the difficulties every doctor encounters in his practice is to teach his patients to eat enough of the nonstarchy vegetables. Many people, especially children, have difficulty in learning to like some of the most valuable of the health-building vegetables and prefer to live principally on an acid-forming diet of bread, cereals and sugar. As the little girl once said to her mother, "Mother, why didn't God make spinach and tarrots taste like ice cream?"

Almost any food may come on the disliked list of some people, including such wholesome vegetables as carrots, parsnips, spinach, tomatoes, or some other perfectly wholesome food. One can usually overcome a dislike for vegetables by mixing a small quantity of the disliked food with a large amount of the liked food. This can sometimes be done unknown to the person affected, and in this way the dislike will gradually be overcome.

Many people do not acquire the strong robust health to which they are entitled simply because they do not eat enough of the alkaline-forming vegetables. This leads to acidosis, indigestion, poor teeth, dull complexion and a lowered vitality. Often an immediate improvement in health and personal appearance results when a large quantity of these vegetables are included in the diet.

For years scientists have sought to perfect dehydration, that is, the extraction of water from the fresh vegetables and fruits so that the food value may remain unimpaired. The war gave a tremendous impetus to the science of dehydrating foods. Because there was a shortage of containers and trasportation room, it became necessary to find some way of reducing the bulk and weight of food by drying out the water. This led to the modern perfected system of drying without the exposure to heat.

Chemical tests made by the University of California, at Berkeley, found that the water extracted from dehydrated vegetables is colorless, odorless and tasteless, showing that nothing is extracted from the veegtables except water. With the new method it was also possible to retain the elusive vitamin C which had hitherto been destroyed by drying because of oxidation. With the new process, the full mineral salt content is unaltered, and vitamin content undestroyed.

The clever idea then occurred to certain manufacturers of mixing a powder or flour of the dried most alkaline-forming vegetables to be added to various other foods. The flour usually produced by these companies consists of spinach, carrots, lettuce, tomatoes, celery and similar vegetables with spinach and carrots usually predominating. Reducing these vegetables to a fine flour makes it possible for their complete distribution throughout the food in which they are incorporated so that they can be mixed with many different products, such as biscuits, breads, macaroni and ice cream. It seems that this new process will actually assist in accomplishing what the little girl desired, by making it possible for vegetables to taste like ice cream.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Picks at Nose

Question—Mother asks: "What do you suppose is the cause of a boy of 13 always picking at his nose? I have given him the worm remedy, but still he picks at each side."

Answer—Your boy may be troubled with adenoids or chronic catarrh. In some cases, the nose picking is simply a habit which you correct by having him wear mittens or gloves as much of the time as possible.

Buttermilk

Question—Reader asks: "Does buttermilk tend to produce acidosis on account of the lactic acid it contains?"

Answer—Buttermilk diet, or the use of buttermilk in place of a meal has a tendency to cure acidosis rather than to cause it. The lactic acid of the buttermilk has a beneficial effect upon the intestinal flora, or vegetable growths in the intestines.

Yellow Jaundice

Question—D. L. P. asks: "Will you kindly give me some information about yellow jaundice, its cause and cure, and how long it lasts if taken care of immediately?"

Answer—Jaundice may be caused by a serious disease of the liver, such as cancer or cirrhosis, but when it first appears it usually is caused by catarrhal inflammation of the bile ducts or by the bile being stopped through the obstruction caused by gall stones. The treatment which I would suggest would of course depend upon the cause found through an examination; but on general principles, a fruit fast would be effective in stimulating the flow of bile and removing the jaundice, at least, temporarily.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE CIRCUS TRUST

John Ringling, the big elephant and behemoth man, has bought and taken over all the other big circuses in the United States. This gives him a monopoly of all the three-syllable adjectives and double-barreled superlatives in the land.

The big attraction on the circus lot next season may be Mr. Ringling himself in flesh-colored tights, and with a curly wig, billed as "positively the one and only genuine wild and ferocious circus-swallower in captivity, ladies and gennulmen! He eats 'em alive, folks, bites their heads off and eat's 'em alive!"

This is the era of big business, even in the menagerie, the sideshow and the "big top." Tough as it may be on romance, a "trust" now controls the tinseled bareback riders, the cavorting clowns, the prancing steeds, the aerial acrobats and the wild animals of the land.

The "fat ladies" are under one management. The sword swallowers are eating under one boss. The living skeletons are starving cooperatively for a common cause. There is hardly an elephant in the country that isn't working for Ringling. Every tiger's howl is positively a Ringling operated howl.

Time was when several independent circuses came to town each season, and the owner of each, a colorful old fellow with an enormous mustache, rode ahead of the big parade in his gold and silver chariot drawn by four white horses. There was intense rivalry. Each circus owner fought the other for the title of "the greatest show on earth." If one show announced it had two blood-sweating behemoths, the next one declared it had four. If one circus advertised a herd of 20 pachyderms, the next one advertises 40. It was great bunk and the people like it.

Now the merger craze has caught the circus people. The circus trust has arrived, and how! Instead of colorful talk of "man-eating terrors of the African jungles," "the world's greatest herd of full grown and monster pachyderms," "Bosco the Bushman," and the "freaks of all nations," we may hear drab chatter about operating efficiency, lowered production costs, maximum results and gross receipts.

More and more efficiency is to be expected. The lions will roar on signal only, the Bengal tigers will snarl in strict accordance with a schedule, the elephant-washing will be done by electricity and the big flea-hunt in the money case will be run on a system.

Possible signs on circus exhibits:

NEW SHOES

I like to wear my newest shoes,
So they're the ones I always choose.
Then Mother says, "Why don't you wear
Your brown ones or another pair?"

And so my new ones, as a rule,
I only wear to Sunday school.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

Coleridge said that he felt as if God, by giving the Sabbath, had given 52 springs in every year.

To us the Sabbath is not so rejuvenating, but it has always seemed that somethin- of a holy quiet hung over the day. It has never been to us a "sponge to wipe out the sins of a week," but a simple day of peace.

One likes to associate the Sabbath with simple pleasures, with family life, and with men and women who spread such a sweet influence as would Coleridge's "spring."

We have heard much of one man who had such an influence. That we never knew him, we consider our deep loss. He came here before the days of the boom and grew with the city and helped the city to grow.

He was a friend to everyone. His profession, we will not name, but it might have been "the good shepherd."

He was an educated man, who, out of his love for mankind, wished to give the best of his brain and heart and soul.

He loved books and often in his later years, gave book reviews—taking the very heart out of a piece of literature and interpreting it so that the simplest mind could understand.

He loved people. Men and women went to him with their troubles and he knew how to comfort them.

He was an executive in his line of work, not just a humanist. He left many memories in the hearts of his friends and we constantly hear of him.

When a man is gone a year or two, it is rarely you hear them often spoken of except in his own family. This man built himself an everlasting monument. He built it with sympathy and love and work.

We asked a man who knew him to tell us all the good things he knew about him. His instant reaction was, "I haven't time."

There is his epitaph. A man so full of good deeds that one who loved him had not time to tell of the blessings he wrought.

Yet every week we hear of him. Just the other day, speaking of people who did "so-called" reviews, a man remarked to us that this good man was a real reviewer. "The last time I heard one of his reviews," he said, "was when he reviewed, 'A Christmas Carol,' and my, how he did make those chimes ring!"

The chimes still ring to the good man's memory. We wonder if you know his name.

Was told I would have to go to the hospital, but I couldn't do that so I tried many different remedies and prescribed treatments, but fount no relief. I was very discouraged until I tried Resinol Ointment. I think it is the most wonderful preparation for varicose ulcers, and I wish everyone knew about it. A day that might have meant so much—and she has to be excused. What a pity there's a woman left who does not know of Midol! One or two tablets in time, and not a twinge of pain throughout the menstrual process. Or an end to such suffering at any time, five to seven minutes after Midol is taken. Yet this merciful medicine is non-narcotic. Its wonderful results are due to the fact it acts directly on the organs affected; so it's utterly harmless, and it is only common sense to use it. Midol comes in a clever little case of aluminum you can slip in the smallest purse. And the cost of this comfort is fifty cents.*

IT'S folly to suffer long from neuritis, neuralgia, or headaches when relief is swift and sure, with Bayer Aspirin. For 28 years the medical profession has recommended it. It does not affect the heart. Take it for colds, rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago. Gargle it for a sore throat or tonsilitis. Proven directions for its many uses, in every package. SPUDDERVILLE AGOG AS OPENING OF LEAGUE PLAY-OFF NEARS

FANS PONDER ON HILL CHOICE

Mr. Galloway Himself Does Some Speculating

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

Wichita Falls, having seen a Dixie series and league playoff in successive seasons, apparently would be somewhat blase over the impending loop titular series, in which the Spudders again are contenders. But Wichita Falls takes its baseball seriously and the playoff with the Dallas Steers which opens here tomorrow is the talk of the town.

"Who'll win and who'll pitch," are the queries of fandom. And then fandom, locally at least, answers the first question by naming the Spudders. Wichita Falls enthusiasts, which includes those of the surrounding territory, are intensely loyal to their athletes and they accord the Mavericks nothing better than an even break, if that much, even though the sentiment elsewhere is pro-Dallas.

The matter of the starting pitchers won't be definitely determined until the hurlers start warming up Wednesday. And perhaps Jim Galloway really has not decided on his opening chucker. At least, he so indicates. On the other glove, Foreman Milt Stock of the Herd has told the world that he will start Vic Frasier, his 20-year-old phenom, in the first contest.

Lots of Pitchers

Galloway has five pitchers who have been hurling in great form recently, from whom to make his selection. He might open with Payne, Messenger or Steengrafe, his veteran right-handers. And again, it wouldn't be surprising if Jim should nominate Hal Wiltse, his brilliant southpaw reliance, as his opening pitcher. Wiltse, however, probably will not pitch the first game but I look for him to hurl in the second or third contest.

Lester White, who has won six and lost no games since coming back to the Spudders a couple of months ago, probably won't be used early in the series. That is, unless the veteran chuckers fail to work satisfactorily. However, it isn't a remote probability that Lester will be sent to the hill at any time, so splendid has been his pitching since his amazing comeback from Abilene.

Milt Stock having named Frasier, you may look for Glasner or Connally to pitch the opener. Maybe Milt really intends to pin his chances of capturing the opener with the youthful Victor, and then again, perhaps the Bovine boss is merely running a sandy.

Vet Steer May Start

Glasner or Connally, veteran right-handers, doubtless will start in the event Stock changes his plans. Charlie Barnabe, the Steer left-hander, pitched the Spudders into submission in his last start against our nine, but the Wichita Falls club was in a woeful slump at that time. Too, the Spudders enter the playoff with only two left-handed hitters, exclusive of pitcher, in the lineup, and will not be bothered whether the opposing chucker is throwing with his right or left arm.

First disappointment and a tinge of pessimism that permeated Spudderville when it became known that Bud Stapleton, stellar first baseman, would not return has been dissipated. Larry Bettencourt, versatile utilityman, plays a capable game at first base and Duke Hermann has been working well at third base. Bettencourt is no Stapleton in fielding, but the combination of Bettencourt-Hermann should hit as well or better than if Stapleton were at first base and Larry or Duke at third.

Stapleton, called to his home in Connecticut several days ago by the death of his father, is very ill, a long distance telephone communication with a relative of Bud disclosed last night, and there is no possibility that he will return.

Stock May Play

Save for first base, the Spudders will lineup as they played the last two months of the season. There may be a change in the Dallas front, with the probability that Stock will play second base in place of Hap Morse. The batting orders of the rival clubs for the opening game, except for pitcher:

Wichita Falls—Benton, ss; Fitzgerald, cf; Gullic, rf; Bennett, lf; Turgeon, 2b; Bettencourt, 1b; Hermann, 3b; Lapan, c.

Dallas—Flaskamper, ss; Rosenthal, rf; R. Moore, cf; J. Moore, lf; Davis, 1b; Bischoff, c; Jeffries, 3b; Stock or Morse, 2b.

George Barr, Harry Kane and Charlie Donnelly have been named by William B. Ruggles, acting president of the league, as umpires for the series.

The Spudders went through a spirited workout yesterday and are to have another drill this afternoon, at 1 o'clock. The Steers will arrive today and also will engage in a drill at Athletic park following the Spudders.

Ticket Sale Brisk

Sale of Tickets opened yesterday at Athletic park, with the demand for pasteboards heavy. Lines of fans gathered throughout the day at the ball park, where tickets were distributed.

The sale of tickets will be transferred today to the Renfro No. 1 and the Miller Drug stores. Although the sale was brisk yesterday there still are plenty of tickets of the 2,800 box and reserved seats available.

Tickets for both games here tomorrow and Thursday and for single games may be obtained today.

Secretary Guy Airey, in charge of the distribution of the ducats, said last night that tickets for the negro grandstand also will be placed on sale today. The price is $1.

Fort Reno, San Angelo Polo Teams Score Wins

FORT RENO, Okla., Sept. 16. (AP)—The Fort Reno and San Angelo, Texas, polo teams were winners here today in the opening of Fort Reno's annual tournament.

Fort Reno defeated the University of Oklahoma team, 12 to 10.

San Angelo bested Crowell, Texas, 13 to 8. The losers scored only one goal, the handicaps giving them a 7 goal start.

MICHIGAN NINE WINS

OSAKA, Japan, Sept. 16. (AP)—The touring University of Michigan baseball team defeated Meiji here today, 5 to 2.

Consider Mr. White

Lester White, "the man who came back," is the juvenile member of the Spudder pitching staff. That is, of the regulars. And while Wichita Falls pins much of its hopes on Steengrafe, Payne, Wiltse and Messenger, this young man White, with his record of six victories and no defeats, is quite ready to chuck championship ball in the event he is needed.

S. M. U. Mustangs Invade Nebraska For First Big Intersectional Game

By JOHN W. HEISMAN
Famous Football Coach
(Copyright, 1929, Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Intersectional football games are scheduled much more frequently now than formerly. This has become possible because of the greatly increased attendance at games, which enables the home team to guarantee the expenses of the visiting team coming from a distance. I daresay, however, that the cost of bringing the University of Oregon over a stretch of 4,000 miles, to play Florida in Miami, on Dec. 7, was figured forwards, backwards, upside down and inside out a few dozen times before names went down on the dotted line.

On Oct. 5 occurs the first intersectional game of the season, when Southern Methodist university travels to Lincoln, Neb., to tackle the Cornhuskers. After the great showing made by S. M. U. at West Point early last season folks will be willing to believe that the Texans are right in a class with the champions of the Big Six conference.

The Nebraskans will be playing at home, but this advantage will be neutralized by the fact that they have, in Dana Bible, a new coach this year. Bible is a quite-all-right coach, but by that early date he will not have had much time to get his system going smoothly with all his men unfamiliar with its details. Piquancy will be added to the game by reason of the fact that for the past eight years Bible, as coach at Texas Aggies, and Morrison at S. M. U. have been fighting each other annually for the Southwestern championship. Evidently neither of them has enough as yet.

Colgate Plays Wisconsin

On the same day Colgate will be playing Wisconsin at Madison for the first time in history.

One week later, on Oct. 12 to be exact, Minnesota entertains visitors from the far South—the Commondores of Vanderbilt. This will not be the first time these two have met; nor will the Southerners come creeping into Minneapolis like shrinking violets, for the last time they met—some years ago—after Minnesota had defeated all comers in her own section—the Commondores came to town and ran rings around the Swedes to the tune of 16-0. However, Minnesota will not have forgotten that licking and no matter which team wins I have no hesitation in predicting the score will be considerably closer than that of the last mill between them.

Another intersectional slated for Oct. 12 is the game in Detroit between the University of Detroit and Tulsa university, from Tulsa, Okla. It won't be as important as some others and in all probability Detroit will win; but the Oklahoma colleges are all improving their technique at a steady pace and the Tulsa team will give a good account of itself.

Yale Tourneys to Georgia

That same day will witness a fine game booked for Athen, Ga., where the University of Georgia will open their fine new stadium with Yale. This will be the first time that any Yale football team ever journeyed and played beyond the Mason and Dixon line and the Crackers have a right to consider that the Bulldogs showed them a signal honor when they agreed to visit the Georgians.

It's a bit early to risk predictions on the outcome of this game, but Georgia's play went back so fast and far last season from her 1927 standard that it is hard to see how she can retrieve all the lost ground by so early a date as Oct. 12 this season. She will need to recover it all if she is to put it over old Eli.

The final important intersectional contest for this date of Oct. 12 will be that between the Navy and Notre Dame, in Baltimore. Last year the Sailors lost to the Irish, 7-0, in another early season match; but last year the Navy was off to an extremely slow start. This year Coach Ingram will move mountains or meadows to get his squad going with the rest. He seems to have a good squad back and the outcome of the game is problematical.

These fine intersectional contests will aid greatly in getting the 1929 season off at high pitch and will have everybody football minded long before mid-season.

BAYLOR TACKLE BARRED

WACO, Texas, Sept. 16. (AP)—All was gloomy on the Baylor football field this morning. School authorities announced that Marion (Barney) Hale, tackle, would be ineligible due to scholastic difficulties the remainder of the year. S. L. PIRATES TRIM PHILLIES TWICE

Cubs' Clinching of Pennant Is Thus Deferred

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 16. (AP)—Pittsburgh wreaked vengeance on Philadelphia for some past defeats today by winning a double-header, 3 to 2 and 5 to 2, the opener going 10 innings.

The result put the idle Chicago Cubs on the waiting list in the matter of clinching the National league pennant, which would have happened had the locals lost one game today. Score:

Football Fever

Football fever hits every section of the country with far greater force than any other sport can show, once the season opens, but if there is any one section that leads the nation in this respect it is the Pacific coast. Interest in this section reaches almost unbelievable heights. This is especially so where Southern California, Stanford and California university are involved. The far western air was rife with football while the amateur golf championship was under way, and when Stanford and Southern California meet in the first of the big game tests there will be more spectators after admission slips than two stadiums could handle. When Stanford and California meet later on they may have to turn back close to a half-million dollars sent along in the hope that tickets can be bought. Southern California, Stanford and California will all be strong this fall, especially the first two, where the material is plentiful and high-graded—big, fast and keen.

Each one of these teams has an eastern opponent—the Army, Pennsylvania and Carnegie tech—and just at present they are not bothering a lot about the outcome, at least not where Stanford and Southern California are concerned.

Eastern visitors at Delmonte got some idea of what western football material was when they saw Herb Fleishacker, one of Stanford's star backs, acting as one of the marshalls through the tournament. He was only 6 feet 3 and weighing only 215 pounds, and when the rush came to help head off the multitude he was clearing 10 and 12-foot ditches and ravines like a bounding deer.

Middle West and East

The Middle West also expects to have one of its best years in the way of intersection tugging against the East. No one figures Chicago with much of a chance to beat Princeton, but they believe Michigan will take Harvard and that Illinois will stop the Army. They also figure Notre Dame good enough to stop both Navy and Army, unless Rockne's team is too bodly battered up by the date of the Army game.

Michigan, Illinois and Notre Dame will carry as much strength as any three teams one can name from any section. They are strong in every department, equipped with speed, power and experience. Rockne will have something like 35 men in his squad, and he will need most of them to use as reserve forces before the season ends.

The Southern Challenge

The South is looking forward to three of its hardest intersectional tests when Georgia meets Yale, Georgia Tech tackles Notre Dame and Florida comes up to Harvard. Vanderbilt also moves against Minnesota, where Doc Spears now looks to have too much physical pressure to throw against the Tennesseans. But Georgia, Georgia Tech and Florida all have even chances, or at least healthy chances to break through the northern barrier. Georgia Tech and Florida will have two of the best backfield sets in football, with plenty of reserve material at hand.

ALVIN CROWDER CHECKS MACKS

Brown Hurler Pitches Two-Hit, 3-2 Victory

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16. (AP)—Alvin Crowder, star right-hander of the St. Louis Browns, ruined the first appearance of the Athletics since they clinched the American league pennant by holding the Mackmen to two hits today for a 3 to 2 triumph.

Crowder pitched hitless ball in eight innings. The only Philadelphia runs came in the fourth when Simmons beat out a single and Foxx followed with his 33rd home run of the season. After the homer Crowder did not allow a man to reach first.

Jack Quinn started for the Athletics and pitched a good game for five innings. He surrendered the 2-1 lead gained by Foxx's homer in the fifth by handing out a pair of passes and two hits. Shores and Earnshaw were called upon to finish the game and ended the scoring. Score:

STEERS HAVE 'SKULL' DRILL

Mavs Map Battle Campaign In Day's Only Work

DALLAS, Sept. 16. (AP)—For the first time in many days, Manager Milt Stock's first half champions did not take their uniforms out of the lockers today. With the exception of a two-hour "skull" practice in the morning, the Steers enjoyed a day of rest, calculated to put them in the "pink" for the first game of the Texas league playoff Wednesday at Wichita Falls.

Outsiders were excluded from the morning conference, but it was understood that Stock and his players drew up a careful plan of battle, designed to make the most of any weaknesses the Spudders might have. The Herd's midget boss and his entire squad radiated confidence at the close of the confab.

The Steers will leave for Wichita Falls early tomorrow, arriving there in time for a practice session at Athletic park in the afternoon. Stock declared he expected to bring his club back here Thursday night needing only one more game to clinch the pennant.

Victor Frasier, 20-year-old product of Mount Enterprise, Texas, definitely has been assigned to hurl the first game for Dallas.

Broadway Novelettes.

Some fellows get the toughest breaks. There's the ironical tale of the Broadway physician who went limp for a lass he hardly knew, and married her. The honeymoon was in Canada, and it blazed beautifully for a month, until the bride was halted at the border by immigration officials who detained her because she had once been deported from the Dominion for being "undesirable."

"This is an outrage!" fumed the American, who warned the officers that he had influence at Washington, and even if it did take three weeks to free her, he, certainly would!

While the husband was promoting the necessary papers at the capitol to bring her home, she got the fidgets, or whatever it is that brides get when they are not on the up-and-up.

During the three weeks "holiday" away from the doctor she "went" for a Canuck who had a way with him, and a gleam in his orbs, and who could make whoopee better than he could make a living. In fewer words, she was a nice girl, but people were beginning to talk.

Three weeks later, when her husband finally forwarded the necessary clearance papers which freed her from the clutches of Canada, the woman returned to the States, but to a lad in Detroit, who was more interesting than the husband in Manhattan. Six months afterward, however, when remorse got her, she came to New York, and urged the husband to forgive her for being such a terrible girl.

Loving her the way he did, he dismissed it from his mind and started anew with her, but she was like the gal in that Balzac story, and she couldn't resist that great big thing called love.

But she had her gall, and wrote to the husbad begging him to forgive her again, and that if he was planning to divorce her not to shame her with the charges that go with abrogations in New York state, but to charge her with fraud (the Canadian deportation incident) and thus get an annulment.

"You're a good sport, Joe," she wrote him, "you always were, and I'm just a no-good, and I know it. It is better you were rid of me. I shall only make you miserable. So please, Joe, please, do not disgrace me before the world. Get an annulment instead. I'll get enough hell after I leave this earth, pity me."

So the doctor laughed at himself for being such a chump, and turned a deaf ear to those intimates who told him never to forgive a double-crosser, "for once a person two-times you, they'll only do it again!" But Joe decided to give her another "break," and started annulment proceedings, which she preferred.

The case was tried in Part 7 of the New York supreme court last year, and the jury brought in a directed verdict against the husband, arguing that he had condoned "fraud" by using his influence at Washington to get the papers that got her out of Canada.

"But your honor!" almost screamed the hysterical husband, "I have been tricked. I don't want to live with a woman like that!"

"You don't have to," said the indifferent judge, "but you will have to support her for the rest of your life!"

Thus the "good sport" doctor, who got a shady deal if ever there was one from a woman he tried to give a decent "break," is now paying her $25 every week.

Joseph Freeman's restaurant, near Broadway and 47th street (just where the red trolleys kiss the green ones goodbye), was the rendezvous for the actors, managers and professionals nearly a decade ago. It was known as "Freeman's" and the rolls, java, pot roasts and steaks were delicious and reasonable. Freeman saved his coin, hoping to retire some day, and refrained from taking the tips from the touts that frequented his place.

Freeman was good-natured, and staked this chorus girl or that actor to meals (until they could settle) and many a time Freeman loaned them railroad fare or paid their hotel rent an dnever was tricked or forgotten by those to whom he was kind.

The show girls and the merry magdalens repaid him in several ways for when a John invited them to dine the grateful girls said: "Okay, let's go to Freeman!" Business was so brisk Freeman had to buy extra space to make room for them all. It was a fascinating spot, too, for you could meet this celebrity or that one, hear the newest gossip, the latest gag and enjoy grand food.

Then one week-end while he was ankling along the Atlantic City boardwalk, Freeman ran into Pat Rooney, who was producing his first show called "Rings of Smoke," which brought Vincent Lopez to New York. "I have a few thousand to pay salaries," urged Rooney, "please help me." Freeman wrote a check for the amount and enjoyed doing it, too. Before the holiday had ended, however, Freeman was sold on the idea that he would make an ideal backer of a musical show, and he contributed several hundred thousand dollars for the privilege, his life savings.

And, as you probably anticipated, Freeman's coin went up in "Rings of Smoke" shortly after, and now when a vaudeville dancer announces that he will imitate Pat Rooney doing a soft shoe routine to "She's the Daughter of Rosie O'Grady," Mr. Freeman gets ill and has to go outside for air.

Desperate for money, Freeman listened to the proposition of a competitor who offered him the currency he lost backing the show; to get out of the business—and stay out—for at least ten years! They feared "Freeman's," it was too stiff a rival, and Freeman sold his place and occupied his time supervising club kitchens in New York in the last nine years. He now owns an attractive ice cream palace and lunch room in a hotel near 51st street, but the name "Freeman's" is not on the glass windows nor on the menus. His old mod, however, is passing the word along that Freeman is back, is prospering once more, and the chorus girls he staked are bringing their current admirers to his new place, which doesn't name a sandwich after you nor does it sell you a dollar steak for $1.50.

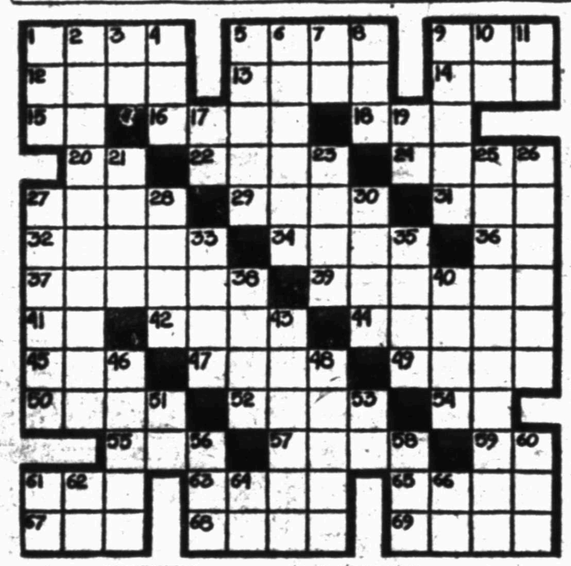

Then there's the annoying story that concerns a lass in a Ziegfeld hit. A chorus boy in the show was stricken with appendicitis the other day. One of the principals arranged with Mr. Ziegfeld to keep the boy on the payroll during his session in a hospital. The same principal will foot the costs, including the services of one of the better surgeons, and when he is convalescing the lad will be sent to a health farm for a fortnight or so.

Yesterday a collection was made back stage and the higher salaried players contributed twenties, tens and five spots. The chorus men and women gave a dollar, that is except one show girl, who said she worked hard for her coin and could not see why she had to worry about other people's troubles.

The same girl wears jewels, furs and other costly goodies that were gifts from a "John" she met a year ago.

She was introduced to him by the chorus boy she now falls.

RIFLE BULLET WOUNDS BOY

Leonard Aldridge Hurt in Hunting Accident

Leonard Aldridge, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Aldridge, 1611 Burnett street, was shot in the leg just above the ankle late Sunday afternoon while he and two companions were hunting frogs about two miles south of Wichita Falls near the Lake Wichita road.

The injured boy was brought to the Hargrave-Walker hospital where the bullet was removed. Physicians stated his condition was not serious and he later was taken home. He was reported resting well Monday night.

According to Mr. Aldridge, father of the boy, the accident occurred when Jack Nott, 16, son of Mrs. Florence Nott, 1318 Seventeenth street, loaded his small rifle and closed the breech, the trigger accidentally snapping and the bullet striking young Aldridge in the leg. Donald Nott, 13, brother of Jack, was also with the two boys at the time. In loading the rifle, Nott said, he turned away from the other two boys to avoid an accident and did not know that Leonard had moved around in front of him.

Life Worth Living Now, He Declares

Wichita Falls Man Gains Seven Pounds on Orgatone and Strength and Energy Return

"I've gained seven pounds on Orgatone already and feel better than I have in two years," said J. W. Beasley, a well-known painter and paperhanger residing at 506 Adams street, Wichita Falls, Texas, in a conversation with the Orgatone representative, in Allison's Drug Store.

"I was bothered almost constantly with my stomach for about two years," Mr. Beasley continued, "and I would have severe sick headaches almost all the time. Sometimes I could hardly bear to stand up. I suffered so even when I would lie down, it didn't seem like I could get any relief. I felt dull and listless and without any strength or energy and I was so racked by the pain that I kept on falling off in weight and my nerves started going to pieces so that I couldn't sleep hardly any. Then on top of all these troubles I suffered from gas formation, which just made life miserable for me and no matter what I did or what treatments I took, nothing seemed to do me any good, but I just kept going down hill and getting worse from day to day.

"I read a lot of statements in the papers about Orgatone from Wichita Falls people that I knew or had heard of and some of them described their troubles just like mine, so I decided to try the medicine, too. Well, sir, it did me a lot more good than I ever hoped it would. After the first few doses my stomach eased so I could sleep in peace once more. I have just finished my first bottle and I can truthfully say I am feeling one hundred per cent better and I have gained seven pounds in weight and my strength and energy is coming back and I feel fine like life is worth living again. All those pains in my head which I have been trying to get rid of for two long years are gone and my stomach seems all right now.

"It didn't take me long to see that Orgatone was the right medicine and was just the thing I had been looking for all the time and I am always ready to pass the good word on and let others know what Orgatone will do."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific bile treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Wichita Falls exclusively by the Allison Drug Store who are direct laboratory agents.—Adv.

Nichols Raps Federal Domination In Address Here on Constitution

The "oft-eulogized and near-enshrined" constitution of the United States was placed on the carpet and frankly told of some of its short-comings by O. E. Nichols and J. N. Sherrill before the weekly meeting of the Kiwanis club at the Kemp hotel Monday noon.

Speaking on the "Constitution week" program, Mr. Nichols entered a plea for a sane and unoratorical attitude toward the document on which the government of this nation is based. Written in a period when the economic condition of the states was the worst in their history, by men who were up against as serious a proposition as men ever faced, the constitution brought order out of chaos, but still was not without mistakes, the speaker said.

"It is impossible for this nation to continue to exist with its present centralized government," said Mr. Nichols. "An awakening of state consciousness is our great need, and it will become a burning question, sooner or later."

Federal bureaucracy, which more and more seeks to regulate the personal life of 100,000,000 individuals, has become irksome to the point of creating a national danger, Mr. Nichols declared.

In his introductory speech, presenting Mr. Nichols, Mr. Sherrill stated that the constitution was written behind closed doors in sessions the minutes of which were not made public until long after the constitution had been ratified. The principle of centralized federal control dominated that gathering, he said, as it dominates the present government.

Young County Grand Jury Recalled Sept. 23 for Probe of Liquor Cases

The 30th district grand jury for Young county adjourned in Graham early this month, has been recalled for Monday of next week for the consideration of new cases, Sam Spence, district attorney, announced Monday night. The investigating body will be presented with evidence in a number of whisky and burglary cases, the attorney said.

The present criminal docket was temporarily disposed of Monday in four cases called before Judge Allan D. Montgomery. A two-year suspended sentence was given A. B. Harley, 18-year-old youth, who pleaded guilty Monday afternoon to burglary charges.

Earlier in the day Judge Montgomery instructed a verdict of not guilty in the trial of T. C. Smith, charged with the possession and manufacture of beer, after the defense had attacked the validity of the search warrant.

Two defense motions for continuance until the December term of court were granted by Judge Montgomery in the other criminal cases.

Merchants Veto Closing During Games Here With Dallas

Wichita Falls retail stores will remain open during the Dallas-Wichita Falls playoff series here Wednesday and Thursday, but will grant all employes who desire it freedom to attend both local games, according to an announcement from the Retail Merchants' association Monday.

For the convenience of visitors to the city during the two days of the playoff games here, it was said, merchants felt that the stores should remain open for those who will prefer to shop rather than attend the ball games.

Should Wichita Falls survive the series with Dallas, all stores will close for the first Dixie series game played here, it was announced.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Sept. 16. (AP)—Early advances on buying reported by prospects for more or less general showers in the South where dry, warm weather would be considered favorable, were followed by reactions under Southern and local selling in the cotton market today. December contracts, after selling up to 18.97 of 17 points net lower, reacted to 18.77 but recovered a few points of the lows closing at 18.83 compared with 18.80 at the close of Saturday. The general market closed steady at net advances of 1 to 5 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 3 to 11 points and the market sold about 12 to 19 points higher during the early trading on covering or rebuying by sellers of late last week. The demand tapered off after the advance of 18.64 for October and 19.25 for March contracts.

Southern selling was not particularly in evidence, but there was some local selling and realizing, and the market eased off later in the day under comparatively small orders. October worked off to 18.45 and March to 19.06 or about 18 to 20 points of the high levels of Saturday. Last prices were within 4 or 5 points of the lowest.

Business was very quiet during the greater part of the day as if the trade were inclined to await further crop developments and the effect of the gradually increasing new crop movement.

Exports today 72,584 bales, making 593,290 so far this season, against 641,694 last year. Port receipts today 64,400. U. S. port stocks 863,422.

Demand for Utilities Offsets Profit Taking and Stocks Close Higher

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Sept. 16. (US)—Steady demand for utilities and specialties offset profit-taking in other parts and closed the stock market higher today. American and Foreign Power gained 8¾, American Telephone 6, General Electric 8¼, Westinghouse 10, Montgomery Ward 4⅛, National Cash Register 5 and American Can 5 points.

Steel climbed 4¼ and its strength helped other standard industrials. May Department Stores dropped over 13 points under heavy profit taking. Standard of New Jersey added a point to its gain in a generally firm but quiet oil group. Copper shares remained soft while the rails ruled strong but held to narrow price range.

The call rate was held at 7½ per cent throughout while the turnover dropped to the 4,500,000-share level.

The renewal rate of 7½ per cent was somewhat of a surprise as the banking powers have kept changes to a full point at a time in recent months. The rate might just as well have been 7 or 8 as money rates in themselves have little influence on sentiment. Some tightening in the money market is likely to develop tomorrow as a result of checks going through for the mid-month payments. It is usually two or three days after the payment date before the government puts through the checks it receives for income tax payments and this will tend to keep the call rate up for the balance of the week. If it were not for the manipulation of the money powers it could be expected that easy money would be enjoyed for the next month and a half following completion of the current operations.

There was further talk of the deal between Radio and General Motors. Those usually most correct regarding General Motors affairs denied that there was any plan to use General Motors dealers for distributing Radio products. They stated that the corporation is planning to install radios as part of the equipment of the higher priced models. It was thought probable, also, that the corporation might branch out into the radio field through a new subsidiary. If this is done it would be mainly for the purpose of making the equipment of its cars. Such activity would be carried on in cooperation with the Radio Corporation. Enthusiastic forecasts that this would mean a substantial increase in Radio Corporation earnings, however, are not warranted, it is stated.

Most of the buying of Johns Manville is influenced by expectation of increasing earnings for the balance of the year. Merger with Radiator now seems doubtful as some of the Manville stockholders are none too pleased with reports as to the current income of the Radiator company.

Timken Roller management was reported to be preparing an announcement of an offer of exchange of stock to stockholders of another leading equipment company.

Reports from the floor indicated that Standard of New Jersey was receiving more attention from those interested in a leading investment trust. There is a mistaken idea, however, that its new refining process will hurt other companies. The Standard interests will make the new method of refining available to the entire industry.

Brokers who advised clients to sell the utilities just because they had experienced a big advance were proved wrong again. Announcement of the latest Niagara Hudson acquisition revived all the old rumors of mergers in other districts. When the utility interests of the East complete their plans Niagara Hudson, Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey and other companies will be tied together in a network of investment trusts and holding companies that will be almost impossible to untangle. Columbia Gas benefited from expectation that it would play an important role. Italian Superpower was influenced by further reports of increasing earnings.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW

CHICAGO, Sept. 16. (AP)—In a general selling rush during which big holdings were said to have been dropped, wheat prices underwent a severe smash today at the last. Enlarged domestic supplies, nearly double those of a year ago, together with more rain in Argentina further relieving dread of increased damage by drought, were largely responsible. Besides, export business in wheat from North America today was reduced almost to zero.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous, 2⅝@3⅜c under yesterday's finish. Corn closed ⅛@1⅛c down, oats 1⅛@1⅜c off, and provisions varying from 10c decline to a rise of 15c.

Sharpest breaks in wheat values came after announcement that despite diminishing arrivals at primary centers, the United States visible supply and become more unwieldy, piling up 1,146,000 bushels increase of the week. The total domestic stock in sight was posted as amounting to the huge aggregate of 185,554,000 bushels, compared with 95,882,000 bushels a year ago.

Corn and oats prices broke owing to sympathy with the action of wheat. Setbacks in corn values were in the face of reports from Illinois, Indiana and Ohio suggesting that estimates of corn yield may have to be curtailed.

Provisions averaged higher, responsive to upturns in the value of hogs.

Postal Credit Union Formed by Wichitans

By authority of an act of the last legislature, the first postal credit union in the state of Texas was organized in Wichita Falls and granted a charter Monday morning by the state banking board.

Loans may be obtained only by members of the mutual corporation, who must be employes of the Wichita Falls postoffice and who must own stock in the organization. B. J. McHam, of the money order department of the postoffice here, was selected president, and J. W. Vandigriff, of the mailing division, was made secretary.

CITY BUYS BONDS

Retirement of $28,000 in waterworks bonds, purchased by the city management Monday, will effect a saving of $1,400 annually in interest from now until 1960, the date of maturity of the bonds, according to figures from the office of W. E. McBroom, city clerk. The condition of the bond market made purchase of the bonds possible at a discount of 1½ per cent, effecting a saving of $420 on that transaction. The bonds were issued in 1920 for the purchase of the city waterworks.

MAJESTIC: "Fast Company." Jack Oakie, Evelyn Brent and Skeets Gallagher. Jack may be less popular than George Payne, but he's a good second. Talking comedy, Vitaphone vaudeville, Paramount news.

STRAND: Dolores Costello and Grant Withers in New York, entitled "The Madonna of Avenue A." Gus Edwards' song revue in technicolor. Lupino Lane comedy. Movietone news.

OLYMPIC: George Sidney in "The Cohens and Kellys in Atlantic City," comedy, and Pathe news on screen. Lillian Murry and Elmer Wright tabloid company.

Performers in talking pictures seldom render the audience sufficiently self-forgetful to applaud, despite the conventional bow and repeated curtain calls which are retained from legitimate stage business. When sound pictures first appeared, the conclusion of a musical number or a spoken passage was met beyond the footlights (which have gone out) with furtive and instinctive dabbing of hands. None of those smacks were of the free-swinging variety, however, but rather after the fashion of the batter who chokes his swing as the ball breaks teasingly into a roundhouse out. There followed at once the business of pretending that the motion was only a loosening of too-tight shoulders, or an easeful change of position.

With the passing of two years the talkie audiences have become entirely hardened and for the most part sit in silent acquiescence—or revolt. Even when the virtuous little hoofer from out West finally gets a lucky break and lands in big-time on Broadway itself, the only noticeable reactions from the house are more rapid crunching of popcorn and sparring for wider peepholes between restive heads. Opera stars, concert artists and pedigreed actors, on the rare occasions when these three classes of talent break "into film," are greeted usually with the same silence—people applaud only for a performer's ears and eyes.

Not all is silence among the patrons of sound-equipment motion picture houses. Amplified voices of the actors, and sometimes garbled pronunciation, have, indeed, provided an effective smothering of sub-title reading by those who seemed always obsessed with the idea that they were surrounded by blind people. But silent observation now appears unendurable to others, who intensify their inhalation of dramatized romance with the resounding symphony of crackling peanut shells. There is something strangely alluring in the metronomic regularity of that sound; first the shell crushes between the molars, then rattles on the floor. (Count five to be ready for the next molar process.) An alluring, restful sound, like that of a rusty garage-door hinge on a windy night.

While dedicated to policies of reform, we should enter a plea for the unfortunates who find themselves spotted behind the fond mama whose kiddies entertain themselves with calisthenics in the seats which they gratuitously occupy, intermittently bobbing about in erect position while the rear-seat customer develops a severe headache between eclipses. These independent and playful traits in the children are in most cases accompanied by a remarkable degree of absorption in the play on the part of the parent.

But there was something to be said about applause. When the audience does drop its shackles to whack out approval, the attraction must have had an appeal. Gus Edwards, perennial songbird, accomplishes that coup d'art at the Strand this week in a Movietone revue featuring old song hits with techni-color dramatic settings. Opening with very mannish "Stein Song," sung by a group of vibrant voices, Gus moves on up through the ages to include "School Days," "By the Light of the Silvery Moon," "If I Was a Millionaire," and others. The applause was spontaneous and immediate.

If memory serves correctly, Grant Withers' and Dolores Costello's voices were not lost in applause for the frequent deliveries of what must have been intended as a theme song—dolorous, indeed. Grant and Dolores are mixed up in a story called "The Madonna of Avenue A." We don't know just why they should pick on Avenue A. Avenue Q would seem to have qualified better for that title, with its rather confused, questioning countenance.

Without wishing to lack respect for Dolores, for she really is a beautiful girl, and the daughter of Maurice, still we suggest that the scene when first she stole down to the dock to meet her bootleg lover should have been shot again, after she had become accustomed to the motion of the water beneath his craft. There she stood, transfixed by the tones of "Madonna" and weaving dangerously from increasing water-dizziness as she waited nervously for him to discover her presence. If that song had been one phrase longer, she must certainly have toppled ignominiously into the chilling depths, and then look where she would have been.

$2,000,000 in the Bank!
(December 31, 1928)

LIFE Insurance Companies make their dollars work. As quickly as possible, funds are exchanged for mortgages and securities. These securities do guard duty in the safety of policyholders' interests, while the dollars themselves are loaned to home owners, farmers, municipal, national and state government, and worthy industrial institutions.

Economic and state laws demand these dollars to earn their due. No loafing in banks for them! But, even so, during the brief period of interchange from policyholder to investment, safe keeping demands a bank. And so, on almost any day, the cash bank balance alone, of the 24 Texas Companies will total nearly $2,000,000. On December 31, 1928, it was exactly $1,885,718.

The Texas Life Insurance Companies add to the wealth and stability of Texas Banks

The agents of Texas Companies wear this Texas emblem; symbol of mercy, protection and progress and the mark of an honorable calling entitled to your attention and respect.

This helps the banks, swells deposits, increases strength and stability; helps carry on the business of communities. This is just another example of how the Texas Life Insurance Companies help the prosperity of the state. These companies deserve your support as a Texan.
